Project Note – V2

This Work is Licensed Under 4.0 International (CC BY-NC-SA 4.0)

The initial content of this document was downloaded from the Early English Books Online (EEBO-TCP) website. The books were transcribed in a character for character manner and since there was no standard spelling during that time, it can be a bit cumbersome to read, with variations such as "unlesse", "vnlesse", and "vnles" appearing regularly.

With that in mind, this project is intended to clean up those books as much as possible and make them more accessible to the interested reader. A list of variant spellings and their corrections was utilized to clean up the text, but this is only as comprehensive as the list itself. Because of the nature of the original transcription, some words have missing characters or places where the original language (e.g., Greek) was not transcribed. The original text also contained linked footnotes and these have not been incorporated. Included in these works are some, but very limited text taken from other public domain sources.

Although this is admittedly no substitute for a properly proofread and scholarly edition, we believe that the result is a body of work which is far more accessible, particularly for searching and reading, than its predecessor (though our thankfulness for EEBO-TCP cannot be expressed.) The documents have been cleaned and presented to the best of our present ability, in what we hope is a pleasing and useful format for the vast majority of Christian brothers and sisters who desire to access and read these spiritually nourishing works.

For the sake of this collection, it has attempted to take a traditional theological as well as historical approach to Puritan research, meaning that, while there were some Arminian Puritans, those have been omitted if observed, and also, while there were other Non-Conformists that were Catholic, Quaker, Brownist, Pilgrims, etc., this collection has tried to observe only works from theologically reformed Puritans; Baptist, Presbyterian, and Congregational Non-Conformists; as well as CoE or Anglican clergy that were sympathetic or assistive to the Puritan cause. Furthermore, this collection only contains works from the period between 1500-1700, not just because that is the standard historical period of Puritanism, but because this is also the limit of the works found on EEBO-TCP. This is not an exhaustive collection of Puritan/Non-Conformist works, but a collection of those pertinent works which were located on EEBO-TCP which enables the searching thereof by their conversion from facsimile to text. The reason the alphabetical flow of the authors in these titles are not perfectly in order, is because many names were added well into the compiling of these texts, and we had to choose between prolonging publication to start over, or continue and publish with the names somewhat out of order.

Finally, please forgive our eagerness in the midst of imperfection in offering such an errant publication. Given the sheer number of texts, time constraints, and other duties; this is the best we can offer for now; yet, knowing the spiritual treasures within these pages, we pray that this effort, though feeble, will still result in the edification of His Church, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, to the glorification of our Gracious God. All of the text and titles included in these works are in the public domain, and can be used in any way; for profit or otherwise, by anybody or entity. Only this specific derivative and creative work is bound by the creative common license listed above. -- Soli Deo Gloria

To the Reader.

Good Reader,

Vpon the receipt of the Answer returned unto the Nine Positions, Master Ball moved by the request of Brethren, drew up this reply, which upon perusal and joint approbation, was directed unto the reverend Elders of the several Churches in New England. The Reply sent miscarrying in the hand, to which it was committed, though both Letters and printed Books trusted in the same hand were delivered: Hereupon another Copy was from New England desired, and accordingly prepared in the year following. In the mean time, the Answer being tendered to the Press, it was judged more meet to keep the Reply in readiness to attend the publishing of the Answer, then to part with it in the other way. This intelligence was the last year conveyed into New England, since which time, there hath been an expectation to see that in Print, which now is sent abroad to open view. By this Relation it is manifest who are volunteers, and who are pressed to come forth as defendants in these Controversies. These differences betwixt the loving Brethren of old England and New, had not been made thus notorious, if some who cry up the Church way in New England, as the only way of God, had not been forward, to blow them abroad in the world. But surely the providence of God is remarkable in bringing these questions into debate at this time. When the Ministers of the Gospel from all the Counties in the Kingdom are called together by both houses of Parliament, to consult about the healing of our breaches, which are very many and dangerous: The Copy of this Reply being committed to our custody we are necessitated to appear in the publication of it: yet we shall preface nothing concerning the Treatise it self, because our known respects to the reverend and judicious Author will tender us partial, and our testimony can add no credit to his works which withal indifferent Readers will plead sufficiently for their own acceptance. If this discourse shall add any discovery of light unto them, who desire a sound judgment in the controversies here agitated, our end is obtained, and our prayers answered, who are.

Thy Servants in and for the truth,

- Simeon Ash,
- William Rathband.

The Letter of those Ministers in England, who requested to know the judgment of their Brethren in New England, in Nine positions, wherein the reasons of this their request, are truly reported.

(Reverend and beloved Brethren)

WHiles we lived together in the same Kingdom, we professed the same faith, joined in the same Ordinances, labored in the work of God to gain souls unto his kingdom, and maintained the purity of worship against corruptions, both on the right hand and on the left. But since your departure into New England, we hear (and partly believe it) that divers have embraced certain vain opinions, such as you disliked formerly, and we judge to be groundless and unwarrantable. As that a stinted form of prayer, and set Liturgy is unlawful; That it is not lawful to join in prayer, or to receive the Sacrament, where a stinted Liturgy is used. 3. That the children of godly and approved Christians, are not to be Raptized, until their parents be set members of some particular congregation. 4. that the Parents themselves, though of approved piety are not to be received to the Lord's Supper, until they be admitted as set members. 5. That the power of Excommunication, &c. is so in the body of the Church, that what the major part shall allow, that must be done, though the Pastors and Governors, and part of the assembly be of another mind, and peradventure, upon more substantial reasons. 6. That none are to be admitted as set members, but they must promise, not to depart, or remove unless the Congregation will give leave. 7. That a Minister is so a Minister to a particular Congregation, that if they dislike him unjustly, or leave him he ceaseth to be a Minister. 8. That a Minister cannot perform any ministerial act in another Congregation. 9. That members of one Congregation may not communicate in another.

These and other such like (which we omit to reckon up) are written and reported to be the common Tenants in New England, which are received with great applause, maintained with great confidence, and applauded, as the only Church way, wherein the Lord is to be worshipped. And letters from New England have so taken with divers in many parts of this Kingdom, that they have left our Assemblies because of a stinted Liturgy, and excommunicated themselves from the Lord's Supper, because such as are not debarred from it. And being turned aside themselves, they labor to ensnare others, to the grief of the godly, the scandal of Religion, the wounding of their own souls (if they did advisedly consider the matter) and great advantage of them, that are wily to espy, and ready to make use of all advantages to prejudice the truth. (Beloved brethren) if you stood in our places, we are well assured it would be no small grief unto you, to hear and see the people led afide to the disgrace of the Gospel, upon weak and groundless imaginations, and in rash and inconsiderate zeal to deal with that which is of God▪ as if it were of man. And if it be to us grief of heart to hear that you have changed from that truth which you did profess, and embrace that for truth which in former times upon sound grounds you did condemn as erroneous, we hope you will not be offended. You know how oft it hath been objected, that Non-conformists in practice are Separatists in heart but that they go cross to their own positions, or smother the truth for sinister ends. They of the Separation boast that they stand upon the Non-conformist's grounds. A vainglorious flourish and sleight pretence. But both these are much countenanced by your sudden change if you be changed, as it is reported. How shall your brethren be able to stand up in the defense of their innocence and the uprightness of their cause, when your example and opinion shall be cast in their dish? Must they leave you now, with whom they have held society? Or will you plead for Separation, which you have condemned as rash and inconsiderate? You know that thy who have run this way have fallen into manifold divisions, and may not you justly fear, lest the same befall you? Some warnings you have had already, and have you not cause to fear every day more and more? Error is very fruitful and will spread apace. A crack in the foundation may occasion a wide breach in the building, where there will not be means, or mind to amend it. Experience every day may tutour us herein. But to let pass all inconveniences, our request in all meekness and love is, that if these, or any of the forementioned opinions be indeed your Tenants you would be pleased to take a second review of your grounds, and send us your strongest reasons that have swayed you in these matters: and if we shall find them upon due examination to be such as will carry weight, we shall be ready to give you the right hand of fellowship; if otherwise you shall receive our just and modest animadversions in what we conceive you have erred from the truth. You will not judge, if we cannot apprehend the strength of your grounds, it is because we love not the truth, or be carried with by-respects (though these conceits prevail too much:) Such rigid and harsh censures, cannot lodge in meek and humble breasts. Weighty reasons promote the truth not unadvised judging. You yourselves have judged that to be error, which now you take to be truth when yet you were not blinded with by-respects, nor hudwinked your eyes, that you might not see the light. And if you have just warrant from God to pull down what you have built, and to build what you have pulled down, we desire you would lovingly and maturely impart it▪ for as yet we have scene none, which we are not ready to prove, and show by the rule of truth to be too weak to carry any burden.

We adore with you the fullness of the Scripture, and we know the Counsel of the Lord shall stand: if you can show that you walk in the ways of God, we shall heartily rejoice to walk with you: but if you have turned aside, we shall earnestly desire that you would be pleased seriously to consider the matter, and speedily reform, what is out of order. Thus not doubting of your favorable interpretation of this our motion, for the preventing of distraction, maintenance of peace, and searching out of the truth, whereby we may be directed to live to the praise of God the good of his people, and comfort of our souls, beseeching God to lead and guide us into all truth and holiness, and keep us blameless until his glorious appearance, we rest

Your loving Brethren.

An Epistle written by the Elders of the Churches in NEW-ENGLAND, to those godly Ministers fore-mentioned that sent over the Positions.

Reverend and beloved Brethren:

IN these remote Coasts of the earth, whereunto the good hand of God hath brought us, as we do with much comfort of heart call to mind the many gracious blessings, which both with you, and from you, we enjoyed in our Christian and holy communion, (the memory and fruit whereof we hope shall never be blotted out) so we have also seen cause to look back to our former administrations there, and to search and try our ways; that wherein soever we have formerly gone astray, we might judge ourselves for it before the Lord: And that seeing now God hath set before us an open door of liberty, we might neither abuse our liberty in the Gospel, to run out into any groundless unwarrantable courses, nor neglect the present opportunity to administer (by the help of Christ) all the holy ordinances of God, according to the pattern set before us in the Scripture; In our native Country, when we were first called to the Ministry, many of us took some things to be indifferent and lawful, which in after-times we saw to be sinful, and durst not continue in the practice of them there; Afterwards some things that we bare as burdens, that is, as things inexpedient, though not utterly unlawful; we have no cause to retain and practice the same things here, which would not have been not only inexpedient, but unlawful: such things as a man may tolerate when he cannot remove them, he cannot tolerate without sin, when he may remove them; Besides some things we practiced there (which we speak to our shame and grief) which we never took into serious consideration whether they were lawful, and expedient or no, but took them for granted, and generally received; not only by the most Reformed Churches, but by the most godly and judicious servants of God amongst them; which nevertheless when we came to weigh them in the balance of the Sanctuary, we could not find sufficient warrant in the Word to receive them, and establish them here: of one of these three kinds will these our present practices appear to be, which you call our new opinions, or, Innovations here; except it be some few of them, which though they have been reported to you to be our Judgments and practices, yet are indeed far from us: The partieulars are too many, and too weighty to give you account of them, and the ground of our proceedings about them in a Letter. But to give you (if it be the will of God) the better satisfaction, we have sent you a short Treatise touching each particular, that according to your desire you might understand from us how far we do acknowledge any of these tenets, and upon what ground, hoping that according to your promise, if upon due examination you shall find any weight in them, you will give us the right hand of fellowship. But if otherwise, you will send us your just and faithful animadversions, and we do not suspect your loves to the truth, or your sincere speaking according to your conscience in the sight of God. Neither tax we you as siding from the truth with by-respects, whereof you complain, verily we abhor such rash, harsh, and presumptuous notoriousness, we see as much cause to suspect the integrity of our own hearts, as yours; and so much the more, as being more privy to the deceitfulness of our own hearts than to yours. And we cannot but with much thankfulness of heart acknowledge the many rich precious treasures of his grace, wherewith the Lord hath furnished sandrie of you above your Brethren, which causeth us with great reverence to accept, and receive what further light God may be pleased to impart unto us by you. But as we have believed, so have we hitherto practiced, and so have most of us spoken this our Answer to your particulars, most of us we may say, because there wants not some Brethren amongst us who proceed further, even to look at all set forms of Prayer invented by men of another age or congregation, and prescribed to their Brethren to be read out of a book for the prayers of the Church, as Images, or Imaginations of men, forbidden in the second Commandment; But as we leave them to their liberty of their own judgments without prejudice, so do we also concur with the rest of them, so far as we all go in bearing witness against any set forms, or the corruptions in them; In dispatching whereof, we have been the more slow because it behooved us first to inquire into, and to settle some controversies amongst ourselves, before we could well attend to entertain discourse about foreign questions which do not so nearly concern our present estate and practice. Besides your Letters being sent to the Ministers of the Churches, and some of us dwelling far asunder, it was not an easy thing for all of us often to meet together to consider of these Questions, much less to resolve upon one just answer. But having at length (by the assistance of God) brought our Answers to this issue, we commend it to the blessing of the Lord, and in him to your Christian, and judicious consideration; where if all things be found safe, and duly warranted from Scripture grounds; do you also as seemeth vigilant Watchmen of the Lord's flock, and faithful witnesses to God; If anything seem doubtful to you, consider and weigh it very well before you reject it: If anything appear to be unsound, and dissonant from the Word (which we for our parts cannot discern) we shall willingly attend to what further light God may send unto us by you: In the mean while we entreat you in the Lord, not to suffer such apprehensions to lodge in your minds, which you intimate in your Letters; As if we here justified the ways of rigid separation, which sometimes amongst you we have formerly borne witness against: and so build again the things we have destroyed; you know they separate from your Congregations, as no Churches; from the Ordinances dispensed by you as mere. Antichristian, and from yourselves as no visible Christians. But we profess unfeignedly, we separate from the corruptions which we conceive to be left in your Churches, and from such Ordinances administered therein as we fear are not of God, but of men; And for yourselves, we are so far from separating as from no visible Christians, as that you are under God in our hearts (if the Lord would suffer it) to live and die together; and we look at sundry of you as men of that eminent growth in Christianity, that if there be any visible Christians under heaven, amongst you are the men, which for these many years have been written in your foreheads (Holiness to the Lord) which we speak not to prejudice any truth which ourselves are here taught and called to profess, but we still believe though personal Christians may be eminent in their growth of Christianity: yet Churches had still need to grow from apparent defects to purity; and from reformation to Reformation, age after age, till the Lord have utterly abolished Antichrist with the breath of his mouth, and the brightness of his coming to the full and clear revelation of all his holy Truth; especially touching the ordering of his house and public worship; as a pledge of this our estimation of you, and sincere affection to you, we have sent you these Answers to your demand, and shall be ready, by the help of Christ, to receive back again from you, wise, and just, and holy Advertisements in the Lord.

Now the Lord God, and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, your Lord and ours; lead us all unto all Truths, purge out all Leaven out of his Churches, and keep us blameless and harmless in his holy Faith and fear, to his heavenly kingdom, through him that hath loved us; In whom we rest,

Your very loving Brethren, the Elders of the Churches in New-England.

Reverend and dearly beloved Brethren,

IT is not to be doubted but while we live here, we shall have just cause to search and try our ways, look back upon former courses, and call things done to more strict examination. For being over-clouded with ignorance, compassed about with infirmities, and beset with many temptations to sin, knowing what we know best, but darkly and in part, no marvel, if in many things we offend ignorantly, of frailty for want of due consideration, rashly mistaking Error for Truth, condemning Truth for Error, suspecting evil without cause, and not suspecting where is just reason, drawing erroneous conclusions from sound principles, and maintaining truths upon weak grounds; so that in examination of our ways, and endeavors of their Reformation we had need to look warily, that we turn not to the right hand or to the left, for in the one we add to the Word of God, as well as in the oother, and of ourselves are apt to strike aside to both. A loose conscience will be profane, a tender, scrupulous. It stands us therefore upon to have ourselves in suspicion, in as much as experience teacheth that many have swerved from the path of sound peace and comfort on each hand.

Wherefore (Beloved Brethren) if since your coming into New England, upon serious Review of former actions you have discovered any truths heretofore not taken notice of, we shall be so far from rejecting them because of your former judgment and practice, that we shall heartily desire to know and embrace the same with you, and bless God for you as the happy instruments of his glory, our Instruction & the advancement of the truth. But if the discoveries be of the like nature with the positions mentioned in the Letter; as before, so still, we conceive them to be new opinions, and not warranted by Scripture, which is the true Antiquity.

Opinions we say, not practices, for not changing your opinion, you might lawfully alter your practice; nay, what you did tolerate formerly as a burden, in case not free, you might well forgo being at your liberty. Your judgment being the same, you might use your liberty in forbearance of a set Liturgy, and yet retain the same judgment of a stinted Liturgy, that you had before; you might forbear for a time upon special Reason (such as present state and occasion might suggest) to receive to the Sacrament approved Christians, not set members of a particular Congregation; as some Brethren do) who yet dare not think it unlawful to communicate with such in the act of worship, or deem it just and right altogether to debar them, as having no right nor title to those privileges of the Church. It is your opinions whereto we had respect, not simply your practice. It never entered into us to persuade you to a set Liturgy, much less to complain that you had not accepted ours. But that all stinted Liturgies should be condemned as devised worship, and so condemned as that none may lawfully be present at, or partake of the Sacraments administered in a stinted or devised form, this we called a new opinion.

Neither do we mention it because we knew it to be the private opinion of some Brethren among you, whom we had left to the liberty of their own judgment, so far as the maintenance of the Truth, and a just call did not engage us: but because it was cried up, and advanced with all diligence, and endeavor of some among us standing affected New England-ward, as if a chief point of holiness consisted in separation. You know how great a fire a little sparkle kindles. And seeing this Distraction and Rent had its original, growth and continuance from some Brethren in those parts, or affected to that way, when in loving and friendly manner we could neither receive grounds at home for our conviction, nor procure just satisfaction to the contrary; what could we do less then call upon you jointly to know your judgment, and either by sound proof to be by you convinced (if happily you should approve their separation (which we esteem groundless, rash, unlawful, and prejudicial to outward peace) or being backed by a testimony of its dislike from you, we might the better be both encouraged, and furnished to endeavor the quenching of that fire which was kindled but in too many places,

In other particulars also, we conceive, you go beyond Commission given of God: granting them authority to whom God hath not committed it, debarring others from the privilege of the Sacraments, who have title thereto by the Covenant of grace.

Your love in that you were pleased to signify first your kind and respective acceptance of our Letter, and now also to send us an answer thereto, we acknowledge it with all thankfulness, and shall endeavor (through the grace of God) to return like affection in truth of heart, if in measure we fall short. Of your respect to us in particular, we make no question, your expressions are beyond that we could expect, as also what we dare own. But we humbly beseech the Lord to direct, uphold, and guide us, that in some measure we may walk worthy of our vocation, and approv ourselves faithful to your consciences.

It was one end of our writing to be satisfied in this point, whether you approve the ways of Separation (whereof we complain) and their courses who labored with all their might, (when they conceived hope to be heard) to persuade thereunto. Against which (if we knew your judgment) you testified among us.

You know they that separate are not all of one strain and temper. Some deny all communion with us public and private, some admit of private, but deny all public, and some join in Prayer before, and after Sermon, as also preaching of the Word (because in their esteem, this may be done without communion in a Church-way) but refuse to partake of the Sacraments. All which Separations we judge uncharitable, contrary to the Commandment of Christ, and have ever thought that you (whilst with us) and we were of one mind herein.

If of late we have conceived fears of some of you (dear Brethren) as leaning too much to what formerly you disliked, we beseech you weigh what urgent and pressing Reasons forced us thereunto, and we shall most gladly (we heartily desire you to rest assured) lay hold of every line and syllable, that may tend to dislodge such apprehensions.

For as we conceive, the dispute to be unreasonably moved, the Rent offensive, the opinions themselves prejudicial to the cause of God, and the advancers thereof to have passed the limits prescribed by God; so we shall esteem it an inestimable blessing, if (now what hinders being removed) we might join with one heart and soul, in one way of God to promote his glory, and seek the good of his Church and people.

We trust in the Lord, we should not draw back in any course wherein we may see the Lord going before us, nor be an offense to any to keep the Lord's way; we seek the truth, and are persuaded it is the cause of God which we defend: we plead for Communion with the Churches of Christ, no further then they hold communion with Christ, still desiring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace, with yourselves and all others, who walk in the right way of truth, peace and comfort.

How the Lord may be pleased to deal with us, or dispose of us we know not (his blessed will be done.) But of this we are resolved, through his grace, not willingly to raise trouble or dissent among you, if through ignorance or infirmity we shall not so fall in, as to be of one mind with you in these matters. And here we desire you to consider that in these particulars you dissent as much one from another as we dissent from you, and that wherein we dissent from you (and perhaps from the lesser part of you) you dissent from the judgment and practice of all Reformed Churches.

This we speak not to prejudice your cause, but to entreat your serious re-examination of what you have sent us, and this trial thereof, by the Touchstone of the Word. For if we mistake not, in many things it will not abide the Test.

You have written in great love and tenderness, that your Positions might be so scanned, and we shall endeavor with such affection to try all things, and hold fast that which is good. And now (beseeching the guidance of the Spirit) with your leave, we shall endeavor to deal fully and plainly, as the nature of the cause requireth, entreating you impartially to consider the grounds whereupon we, go and weigh what we shall say in the balance of the Sanctuary. The Lord of his rich mercy in Jesus Christ, direct us in discerning what is right and pleasing in his sight, Cast offenses out of the Church, close up Rents and Divisions, reveal his Truth more and more, set up and maintain the purity of his own Ordinances, unite the hearts of his people to the love and fear of his holy Name, teach us self-denial, and keep us blameless to the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Amen.

I POSITION. That a stinted form of Prayer and set Liturgy is unlawful.

Answ.

BEfore we proceed to declare ourselves concerning this position: It will be needful that something be premised, for the explication of the terms thereof. We suppose,

1 By a Liturgy and form of Prayer, you mean not a form of private Prayers composed for the help and direction of weaker Christians: but the System or body of public Prayers generally used in the English Parishes, compiled for the Churches use by other men not infallibly guided by God, to be said or read out of a Book by their Ministers as the Churches Prayers. And that this is your meaning, may appear from your Letter itself, wherein you complain that divers in many parts of that Kingdom have left their Assemblies, because of a stinted Liturgy. Now we know not of any other stinted Liturgy from which the people do absent themselves, but only that which is in use in the English Churches.

For as for a form of Prayer in general, we conceive your meaning cannot be of that. For it is evident that many Preachers constantly use one set form of Prayer of their own making before their Sermons, with whom the people refuse not to join.

2 By stinted and set, you mean such Prayers, as are so imposed upon the Churches and Ministers, as that they are limited to that very form of words expressed in the Book without addition, diminution, or alteration; for that Liturgy and form among you, is in this sense set and stinted.

3 By unlawful, you mean that we looking at that form, as swerving from the Rule; neither dare first practice it ourselves, nor secondly approve the use of it by others.

This being the true state of the question, so far as it appears to us, from the letter. We answer, 1 For our own practice, the Churches here do not use any stinted form of Prayer and set Liturgy, for these and other such Reasons. 1 Because we find no necessity of any stinted Liturgy to be used among us, by virtue of any divine precept. And seeing the Commission of the Apostles limited them, to each men to observe and do only what Christ did command them in matters of this nature, Math. 28. 20. Who are we and what are our Churches, that we should presume above this Commission? And, we hope, it will not be offensively taken by any godly Brethren, That we stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free in this, as well as in all other things.

Secondly, because the lawfulness of set forms and stinted Liturgies is questioned and doubted of by many faithful servants of God: whereas for Church-officers to edify the Churches by their own gifts, as well in praying as in preaching, all sorts without controversy grant it to be lawful. Now spiritual prudence guideth believers, when two ways are set before them, one doubtful though ventured on by some, the other certainly safe and good, though neglected by many, to choose that which is safe, declining the other.

Thirdly, Because Primitive patterns of all the Churches of God in their best times (when as touching this point they kept the rule in their eye) whether Jewish before Christ, or Christian above a 100 years after Christ, yield not the least footstep to show us another safe way to walk in, then this w^{ch} we have chosen. As for after times towards the end of the second, and beginning of the third Century, we know how far the Churches were then degenerated and declined from the first purity; neither do we marvel at it, seeing in the Apostles time the mystery of iniquity began to work, and it was then foretold, that the power of godliness would be in aftertimes exchanged for empty forms. In which respect, we look not at them as our guides neither in this, nor other particulars not warranted by the Rule, herein following the advise of Cyprian, who himself saw the corruption of those times, Non est attendendum quid aliquis ante nos faciendum putaverit, sed quid qui ante omnes est Christus fecerit & faciendum praeceperit.

To conclude, seeing our Christian liberty freeth us from binding ourselves to any religious observances, whereunto the written word doth not bind us. And seeing spiritual prudence directs us to choose those ways, which on all hands are confessed to be safe, avoiding those that be doubtful and hazardous. And seeing it will not be safe for us, needlessly to swerve from the constant practice of all Churches that are recorded in Scripture, and there held forth as a cloud of Witnesses for us to follow in matters of this nature, we therefore may not, do not, dare not use set forms of Prayers and stinted Liturgies in these Churches.

More particularly, in that we do not use that form of Prayer and stinted Liturgy, which is in use among yourselves: these and such other like Reasons have induced us thereunto. 1 The many and just exceptions whereunto that Liturgy is liable both for matter and manner; for the proof whereof we refer you to those faithful servants of God, who have gone before us in witnessing against the same: Amongst others to Master Cartwright, and the Abridgment.

2 In as much as that Liturgy was never commanded of God, and hath been greatly abused to Idolatry and Superstition, and is not of any necessary use, and therefore we are afraid to bring it into the Worship of God, as knowing the jealousy of the Lord, in matters of this nature; Exod. 20, and how strictly he commandeth his people, that all monuments and remnants of Idolatry and Superstition should be abolished from among them, Deut. 5. 25, 26. Exod. 23. 13. Isaiah 30. 2. 2 Cor. 6. 17. In which respect the holy Ghost hath greatly commended Jacob, David, Jehu Hezechia and Josiah for taking away the remembrance of such things, Gen. 35. 2, 4. Psal. 16. 4. 2 King 10. 26, 27. & 18. 4. & 2. all the Chapter. And where other Kings of Judah came short of the like zeal, the Scripture notes it as a blemish in them that the high places were not taken away, albeit the people did not sacrifice in them to false gods, but only to the Lord, 2 Chron. 15. 17. & 20. 33. & 33. 17. Yea, moreover, it appeareth by the Scripture, that some things that had a good Original and use (if they be not still necessary and commanded of God) are unlawful when once they are known to be defiled by Idolatry, and abused to it, 2 King. 18. 4. Hos. 2. 16, 17. As the brazen Serpent was at the first an Institution though but temporary: but when the children of Israel burned Incense to it, Hezekiah, is commended for breaking it in pieces, and the Lord witnesseth of him that he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, and according to his Commandment, which he commanded Moses, 2 King. 18. 3, 6. how much more in the like case ought other things to be removed, which never were commanded of God, but only were devised by men? And that that Liturgy hath been superstitiously abused, may be clear to any that shall consider that it is the same for substance that was used in the days of Popery. And therefore when the Papists in Devonshire and Cornwall, had made a Commotion and Rebellion upon the change of Religion, in the days of King Edward the Sixth. It was told them by the King, for the pacifying of them: That it was the self-same Service in English, which had been before in Latin: and if the Service of the Church was good in Latin, it remaineth good in English, for nothing is altered: Fox Acts and Monuments, Edward 6. And Pope Pius the fifth did see so little variation in it from the Latin Service, that had been formerly used in that Kingdom, that he would have ratified it by his authority, if Q. Elizabeth would have so received it. And many of the people put such holiness in it, that they think God is not rightly worshipped, nor his Sabbath well observed, nor the Sacraments sufficiently administered, if there be no reading of that Service. And others put such holiness and necessity in it, that they prefer it before God's holy Ordinance of preaching the Word. In so much as the Ministers are in the danger of being called in question, and of being censured, if they do not read that Liturgy every Lord's day without omitting any part thereof, either in respect of preaching or otherwise.

3 In regard of the many woeful scandals, and dangerous consequences of using that Liturgy, of which we suppose you are not ignorant.

To mention but two, Viz. The hardening of Papists who are emboldened to think better of their own Breviaries, Mass-Books, Portuisses, seeing that Liturgy hath been extracted out of those books, and rather fetched from them then from the forms used in any of the reformed Churches.

2 The countenancing and establishing of an unlearned Idol Ministry, of not-Preaching curates, Non-residents, Pluralities, &c. in whose skirts is to be found the blood of so many men's souls living and dying in their sins, while they ignorantly content themselves with, and harden themselves in some empty forms of Religion and blind devotion, which are begotten and cherished chiefly by such prayers and ministers. Neither is there less scandal hereby (we mean not only taken but given) then by the eating of an Idolathite, in the Idols Temple condemned by the Apostle 1 Cor. 8. 7 10. For if the eating of an Idolathite by him that had knowledge, and knew that an Idol was nothing, and that all meats were lawful, did embolden others to honor the Idol, and therefore was a scandal given, so also it is in this case.

4 Seeing that book is so imposed as that the minister in reading of it, is limited to the very words set down without any diminution, addition, or alteration; therefore we dare not use it.

For 1 The Lord himself hath not limited his people to his own forms and therefore we see not, how it can be lawful to be limited to other men's forms; For in thus doing we should subject ourselves to the exercise of such an authority and power of the Prelates, as in this case puts forth a stronger act of limiting power then Christ himself, who doth not limit us to those forms, which himself hath set down in Scripture: For though we acknowledge the Lord's prayer and other forms set down in Scripture, may be lawfully used as prayers (due cautions being observed) yet there is not a limitation lying upon the Churches in the use of those prayers. And therefore we do not find that the Apostles ever used that form taught by Christ in those very words, much less limited themselves to it, when they prayed, nor did they teach the Churches so to do.

2 If the Lord would not have us limit ourselves in our own forms, whiles we are exercising our own gifts (which he hath specially sanctified to edify his Church Act. 6. 4. Eph. 4. 8. 1 Cor. 12. 7.) least we should quench or at least straiten his spirit in prayer, 1 Thes. 5. 19. would he then have us limited to other men's forms, which have not been in like sort sanctified of God, but will rather quench or straiten the spirit of God, whiles we are so limited to them?

3 The entertainment of this form hath been a manifest snare unto the Churches who upon the same ground on which they have received this form into the desks have been limited to others in the pulpit, by means whereof the poor Church of Christ hath been wholly deprived of the public use of the Ministers gifts in prayer, and the spirit of prayer in the Ministers in public, hath been greatly restrained.

As for our Judgment concerning the practice of others, who use this Liturgy in our native Countrie, we have always been unwilling to express our minds there against unless we have been necessarily called thereunto, and at this time we think it not expedient to express ourselves any further concerning this matter, as loath to intermeddle with the affairs of other Churches, but contenting ourselves with, and blessing the Lord for those liberties which we, by the mercy of God, do here enjoy, reserving also due reverence to the judgments of our beloved brethren and deer Countrymen, who may concerning this matter be otherwise minded.

Reply.

THis position cannot bear that meaning which you give it, if you take it according, o our minds, and the plain construction of the words. We never questioned why you made not use of a stinted Liturgy, much less why you did not wholly and in every part tie yourselves unto, and approve of that form in use amongst us. You might well think we had little to do to put forth such a demand, viz. whether you think it lawful to approve in others and practice yourselves, what swerveth from the rule, and we think it strange you should give our words such a meaning.

The thing we craved resolution in was, whether in your judgments all stinted and set forms of prayer and Liturgies be unlawful. The reason hereof was because in writings from New-England, we had seen all set liturgies, and set forms of prayer condemned as devised worship which God would not accept, and partaking in the Sacraments of the Supper in our assemblies, therefore disallowed, because administered in a stinted Liturgy, which things were received with such likeing among some brethren with us, and by them imparted and recommended to others, that they occasioned that rent and distraction whereof we complain.

It is true, the people among us separate from our form of prayer or liturgy, but the reason hereof is because it is stinted, not because this or that or ours in particular.

You confess you want not some brethren among you who look at all set forms of Prayer invented by one of another age or congregation, and prescribed to their brethren, to be read out of a book for the prayers of the Church, as Images and Imaginations of man forbidden in the second Commandment, and that the lawfulness of Liturgies, and set forms is questioned and doubted of by many faithful servants of God, such also as come over occasionally, who withdraw themselves from the Sacraments in the congregation, do it on this pretence, that a stinted Liturgy is a human invention. And if we examine the reasons brought against stinted forms and Liturgies, we shall find them to strike at all forms and Liturgies though devised by men of the same age and congregation, and to be used but now and then, or but once on set purpose, and that either in public or in private, as elsewhere we may have occasion to show.

You say it is evident, many Preachers constantly use a set form of Prayer of their own making before their Sermons with whom the people refuse not to join; And you know (we doubt not) that such set forms are disliked also. And if the grounds be examined (in our understanding) they make as much against the one as the other. View but the reasons why you admit not a stinted Liturgy and form of prayer, and see whether the two last will not in the same terms directly conclude against both. But what ever is to be thought herein, or whether men's practices agree with their opinions we now dispute not. This is plain and manifest, that men's opinions are to be judged by their express words and reasons, not by their practices. The Brownists (as they are commonly called) can separate from no stinted Liturgy amongst us, but that which is in use, and for ought we know they may join with their own Pastors, though they oft use the same form of prayer in whole or in part, in thanksgiving before meat, or in prayer before Sermon, or the like. And yet their opinion is that all stinted Liturgies and set Forms of prayer be unlawful, human inventions forbidden by the second Commandment.

But if anything had been left doubtful in the Letter, that it might be strained to another sense, either because we were short in expression, or many of you not informed in the passages which gave occasion to the question, it is well known what the words mean in ordinary construction. And we doubt not but many brethren among you, might and could fully inform you of our meaning that there need no such straining to find it out.

That which followeth in your answer to the position (as you interpret it) we pass over, because it is not to the matter intended. And we are as unwilling to trouble you with the affairs of other Churches taking you from your own weighty occasions, as you are unwilling to be interrupted. Only in regard of promise, and because plain dealing serves to maintain love, we think good to advertise you these few things.

1 That your reasons why you accept not of a stinted Liturgy be ambiguously propounded, for sometimes you plead only for your liberty herein, and that a stinted form is not necessary, and sometime you speak so, as they that look at Stinted Liturgies, as Images forbidden in the second Commandment will easily draw your words to their meaning.

2 The reasons you bring against a set form of prayer or Liturgy do hold as strong against a set form of Catechism confession and profession of faith, blessing, baptizing and singing of Psalms.

3 We have not called upon you at this time to witness for, or against the corruptions in the Communion-Book. This you fall upon by straining the sense of our demands contrary to the true meaning thereof.

The reasons which you bring against it, we cannot approve them all; The exceptions which have been taken both from the matter and manner thereof we know: But to esteem the whole for some corruptions found therein, a monument of Idolatry, that we have not learned.

The Argument in the abridgement which is used against conformity to the Ceremonies did not in their judgment who were authors of the Book hold against the Liturgy, of which opinion we are also.

4 If these reasons be intended only to show why you receive not our form of administration, it is that which (we are persuaded you know) we never required of you. If to disallow the use of the Book amongst us altogether in things lawful, good and pertinent, they will not hold weight.

5 You are generally (as you say) loath to meddle with the affairs of other Churches, unless you have been necessarily called thereunto. But when some upon the request (as we suppose) of private friends, and others out of their zeal and forwardness have labored to draw many to separation from the Sacrament, because ministered in a stinted Liturgy: we cannot apprehend any just ground of this apology. The Rent is wide, and some brethren had their hands deep therein, which made us at this present to crave your judgments, and the reasons thereof to make up the breach.

6 I. D. objecteth to Master P. that his manner of preaching was disorderly in carrying that matter, he speaks of, to the Classes, before he had declared to the Church the equity of his refusing the Ministers desired by the Scriptures. And may not we with like reason object, that this manner of proceeding is disorderly in seeking to draw men to Separation, because of stinted Liturgy, before you had shown to us or other brethren (whom it may concern) by Scripture, or reasons drawn from thence, that a stinted Liturgy was unlawful? but of this we may entreat more fully elsewhere.

II. POSITION. That it is not lawful to join in prayer, or receive the Sacraments where a stinted Liturgy is used, or as we conceive your meaning to be in this, as in the former question viz. where, and when that stinted Liturgy is used.

Answer.

IT seemeth by this your letter, the ground of this Position hath been the separation of divers from your assemblies, because of a stinted Liturgy: and we are not ignorant of the rigid separation of divers people, who withdraw themselves from an able faithful ministry, as no ministry of Christ, and from their godly congregations as no Churches of Christ; because of some corruptions from which (through want of light, not love of the truth) they are not thoroughly cleansed. Against which practice we have ever witnessed.

As for our Judgment concerning the Position it self, we would promise two things; First concerning the persons reading this Liturgy, which may be either an ungodly or unable Minister, or an able and a godly.

Secondly, concerning the Liturgy it self, which may be either of the whole or some select prayers, which may be conceived to be the least offensive.

Now if the question be of joining in prayer with, and when that whole Liturgy is used, or where that which is used, is read by an unable and ungodly Minister, we then see not how it can be lawful to join in prayer in such cases; For

1 The prayers of the Minister are not his private prayers, but the public prayers of the whole assembly, whose mouth he is to God. And when the prayers offered up by the Minister, as a living holy, and acceptable service to God, are not through human frailty, but otherwise for matter and manner corrupt, we see not what warrant any one hath to join with such prayers, Mal. 1. 13. 14.

2 When men join therein with an insufficient Ministry, they do not only countenance them in their place and office, whom the Lord hath rejected from being his Priests. Hos. 4. 6. but also set up those Idols and means of worship to edify themselves by, which God never appointed in his holy word Ezeck. 11. 17.

But if the question be of joining in some few select prayers read by an able and painful Minister out of that book as on the one side we are very tender of imputing sin to the men that so join: so on the other side, we are not without fear, least that such joining may be found to be unlawful: unless it may appear that the Ministers with whom the people have communion in reading those prayers do neither give any scandal by reading of them nor give unlawful honor to a thing abused to Idolatry, and superstition, nor do suffer themselves to be sinfully limited in the reading of them.

Reply.

Sufficient hath been spoken of the meaning of the position and the grounds thereof and if we have not mistaken your judgment & practice both, you have born witness against both that you call the rigid separation, and this more moderate also; And we humbly wish, the moderate do not degenerate into the rigid ere long. It is very strange, if they take not great encouragement upon your grounds. The truth of our ministry, Churches, Ordinances, and calling is questioned, and where men will stay the Lord knoweth, and what more common then that our Liturgy is unlawful, because it is the devise of man; The Author (or publisher at least) of a letter against our Service book beginneth with such like distinction.

Against this Prayer-book (saith he) divers have pleaded in a different manner. First some arguments are proper to the Separatists qua tales, viz. that it is offered in a false Church; 2. By a false minister; 3. In the behalf of the subjects of the Kingdom of Antichrist. These are properly theirs, being the grounds whereupon they make a total separation from all the Churches in this Land, as no Churches of Christ. These I approve not, yet note them that ye may see upon what different grounds, the same Position is maintained by several persons, and that ye may be delivered from the prejudice, which hinders many from receiving those truths, because they fear the reproach of Brownism.

Secondly, there are other grounds which are common to all that plead for the the purity of Christ's ordinances, and which do not necessarily infer such separation, but only serve to show the unlawfulness of that practice, and our communicating therein.

Thus the Epistle wherein the same distinction of separation is noted: but how truly, let the indifferent judge. If none must be counted Separatists, but such as have pleaded against the book of Common prayer as unlawful, because offered up in a false Church, &c. then are there none such in the world, that we have known or heard of: for it is apparent they cast us off as no Churches of Christ, because our Service is a human devise, will-worship, Idolatry; And not on the contrary, that our Service is will-worship, or Idolatry, because our Churches are false Churches. Against all Communion with us they plead, because we are a false Church, but against our stinted Liturgy they argue not in that manner.

The grounds on which that Author builds (which he saith are common to all, that plead for the purity of God's ordinances) are one and the same with the grounds of the Separatists, shafts taken out of the same quiver and peculiar to them, some few brethren only excepted, who of late have looked towards that opinion. See how affection will transport. Those reasons shall be common to all that plead for the purity of Christ's Ordinances, which were never taken to be sound and true, either by the reformed Churches abroad, or by the godly Brethren at home, whether now at rest with the Lord, or for the present living, or yet by the most of the brethren among whom they live, and with whom they hold society, or by any minister or Society which did hold the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace for the space of this 1400 years and upwards, by your own confession, unless within these few days, and that by a few only. If this be not to strengthen the hands of the Separatists, or at least, to lay blocks of offense in their way, what is? As yet we think most of them that have separated, are not so far gone, as to condemn all our Assemblies as no Churches of Christ, but we judge they have proceeded further then Christ the Lord and Savior of his Church hath given them commission or allowance, that the grounds whereon they build are unsound, and such as make way for further danger, if the Lord prevent not. And that the reasons mentioned in the letters are the proper grounds of Separatists, and not common to all them that seek the purity of religion, for they are not approved by yourselves: and if all this tend not to turn them who halt, out of the right way, we heartily entreat you to consider.

Your judgment concerning the Position, you deliver in three propositions (for so many they be for substance) In respect of the persons reading the Liturgy, or the thing it self that is read. As if any part of the Liturgy be read, (put case some few selected prayers only, by an unable and ungodly minister: it is unlawful (say you) for the people to join in that case. But if it be unlawful for the people to join, when an ungodly minister readeth some few select prayers, it is either in respect of the Minister, or the prayers themselves. Not of the prayers themselves, for they be select and choice, faultless both in respect of matter and manner, as it is taken for granted, unless this distribution be to no purpose; if in respect of the Minister, then it is not lawful to join with such a one in any ordinance of God whatsoever. For if the Minister make it unlawful, then all communion in any part of God's worship, with such Ministers is unlawful, and so the Church in all ages of the world, the Prophets, our Savior Christ, the Apostles, and the faithful in the primitive Churches sinned, in holding Communion with such, when the Priests were dumb dogs that could not bark, and greedy dogs that could never have enough; when the Prophets prophesied lies, and the Priests bare rule by their means; when the Priests bought and sold Doves in the Temple, and took upon them to provide such things for them that were to offer; when the Pharisees corrupted the Law by false glosses, taught for doctrines men's precepts, made the commandments of God of none effect through their traditions, under pretence of long prayer devoured widows houses, taught the Law, but practiced it not; when they were such, and did such things, they were ungodly Ministers; But we never find that the Prophets, our Savior, the Apostles, did either forbear themselves, or warn the faithful not to communicate with such in the ordinance of worship. We read our Savior charged his Disciples, to beware of the leaven of the Scribes and Pharisees, to let them alone, because they were the blind leaders of the blind, but he never forbade to communicate with them in the ordinances of God. It is not then for private Christians to withdraw themselves from the ordinance of worship, and communion of the Church, because such are permitted to deal in the holy things of God, whom they judge or know unfit: when men join in the worship of God with unworthy Ministers, they do not countenance them in their place and office, but obey the commandment of God, who requires their attendance upon his highness in that way and means.

To go no further then the text you quote, Because thou hast despised knowledge, I will also reject thee, &c. Properly the text is spoken of the ten tribes called Israel, and the Priests among them who worshipped the Calves which Jeroboam had set up, whom the Lord threateneth to reject, because they had rejected knowledge being either willfully ignorant, or withholding the truth in unrighteousness. Whether they were for the present absolutely rejected, or the Lord threatens only to reject them we will not dispute.

This may suffice that it is not to be found either in this or any other Text of Scripture, that the people joining in the true Worship of God, with unworthy Ministers, do countenance them in their place thereby. On the contrary, if you will extend this Text to all unworthy Ministers of what sort soever, whom the word of truth doth condemn as not approved Ministers of God, the Scripture teacheth evidently not only that the people by joining do not countenance them in their place and office, but that they must and ought to join with them in the worship of God, and in separating from the Ordinance they shall sin against God, much less then do they in such joining set those Idols and means of worship, which God never appointed in his Word. For the worship is of God, and the Ministry is of God, the person unworthily executing his place, is neither set up by some few private Christians, nor can by them be removed. And warrant to withdraw themselves from the worship of God, because such as ought not, are suffered to entermeddle in the holy things of God, they have none from God. Dumbe Dogs, greedy Dogs, Idol-sheepheards, false Prophets, Strangers, are unworthy Ministers, but they that communicate with such in the ordinance of worship, are never said to set up Idols or means of worship which God never appointed. The sheep of Christ will not hear strangers in the Lord's sense, but outwardly they heard those strangers preach (if the Scribes and Pharisees were such) and by hearing them discovered them to be strangers, i. e. false Prophets; Some strangers at least, of whom our Savior speaks, were of the true Church, and of Israel, but brought false doctrine tending to kill the soul, such strangers none should hear, that is, believe and follow: but as they be tolerated in the Church, so they may hear them, so long as they bring the truth. Unworthy Ministers are no Ministers for themselves, but they are Ministers for the people of God, that is, so long as they be in the place of Ministers, the acts of their administrations are of force to the faithful, if they observe the form of administration prescribed by Christ; for Christ's Ordinances have their efficacy from him, not from them that serve about them, and evil Ministers minister not in their own name, but in Christ's and by his Commission.

It hath evermore been held for a truth in the Church of God, that although sometimes the evil have chief authority in the ministration of the Word and Sacraments, yet for as much as they do not the same in their own name but in Christ's, and minister by his Commission and Authority, we may use their Ministry both in hearing the Word, and receiving the Sacraments; neither is the effect of Christ's Ordinance taken away, by their wickedness, nor the grace of God's gifts diminished from such as by faith, and rightly do receive the Sacraments administered to them which are effectual; because of Christ's institution and promise, although they be ministered by evil men.

Beza de Presbyt. et excōmunicat. p. 25 26. Ista vero, quia nonnulli à sacris caetib. & sacrament. usu propter aliorum vitia ultro abstinent i. e. seipsos excommunicant magnam reprehensionem merentur.

The reasons whereby the ancient Churches condemned the Donatists and Catharists for their voluntary and seditious separation and the moderne Churches condemn the Anabaptists for their unwarrantable departure from, and so renting of the body of Christ, will hold against separation from the prayers of the congregation, because they are read by an ungodly minister.

The second proposition. Where the whole Liturgy is used, though by an able and godly Minister, it is not lawful to join in prayer in that case. Herein we cannot be of your judgment; for in the times of the Prophets, and our Savior Christ, as great abuses, no question, were found in the Church of the Jews in the administration of holy things of God as can be imagined in our Liturgy or form of prayer: but the Prophets and our Savior who taught the people to keep themselves pure and undefiled, never taught them to separate from the administration of the holy things of God. And if the presence at our forms of prayer be not lawful by reason of the corruptions alleged, there can be no visible society named throughout the world since 200. years after Christ or thereabouts, wherein a Christian might lawfully join in Prayer, reading the Scripture, hearing the word or participation of the Sacraments. For compare the doctrines, prayers, rites at those times in use in the Churches with ours, and in all these, (blessed be the name of the Lord) we are more pure then they. But no man will be so bold (we hope) as to affirm the state of the Churches within 200. years after Christ, to be so miserably decayed that the faithful could not without sin hold communion with them in the aforesaid ordinances. The prayers of the Minister, whether conceived or stinted in a set form, be not his private prayers, but the public prayers of the whole assembly, whose mouth he is to God both in the one and the other. But you will not say, the people ought not to join with their Pastor in the public assembly, if ought be amiss in his prayer for matter, or manner, or both. It is all one to the people in this case, whether the fault be personal (as some distinguish) or otherwise known beforehand or not known: For if simple presence defile, whether it was known beforehand or not, all presence is faulty. And if simple presence defile not, our presence is not condemned, by reason of the corruptions known, whereof we stand not guilty, whether the corruption be through human frailty or not, it is not in us to enquire, but rather whether we be called to come, and the faults such as one Christian cannot or must not tolerate in another without breach of charity. For if the error be such as may be tolerated, and I am called to be present; by such fault I am not defiled though known before. If the error be such as in conscience may not be tolerated, though not known before hand, I am bound, if present some way to profess against it. This distinction of personal and ministerial faults in this case until it be cleared by some Text of Scripture or sound reason from the word, must go for the devise of man.

A Church, a Minister, or a Christian may be stiff in an error (being misperswaded it is a truth) after many means long used to convince them, with whom yet we must hold communion in the ordinances of Religion: and the error may be such as we cannot without hypocrisy or denial of the truth hold communion, though such means of conviction have not gone before. But the corruptions alleged against our form of prayer for matter or manner, are such as one Christian may and must tolerate in another where he hath no power to redress them.

Hath not Christian wisdom and experience of human frailties lessoned you (deer brethren) to bear one with another in matters of greater consequence then any have or can be objected truly against the form of prayer in use among us? And why such corruptions should not be ascribed to human frailty; we see not: For if a godly Minister make use of a book in things which he judgeth lawful for matter and manner, the corruption in him that useth it according to his judgment, from what cause can it spring but human ignorance and frailty? We rest assured you question not the integrity of many, who make much more use of the book then only in a few select prayers. From the bottom of our hearts we desire and pray that God would remove out of his Church and worship whatsoever offendeth for matter or manner, and that all things may be so done, not only that they may be tolerated but that they might be approved in the conscience of all men. But we are persuaded that not only some few select prayers but many prayers & other exhortations may lawfully be used, with fruit and edification to God's people.

To aggravate faults especially when it tends to draw away people from the Ordinances of God, is no less fault then to excuse them, it may be greater, and therefore we dare not esteem the prayers read by a godly and faithful Minister according to the book in use among us, a corrupt sacrifice whether in such as read them, or them that be present. In them that join according to Christ's command (and liberty of absence from Christ hath not been shown) notwithstanding the corruptions, we hold the prayers to be an holy and acceptable sacrifice to God, and pleasing to Jesus Christ. The corrupt sacrifice is that, which the deceiver bringeth voluntarily, and out of neglect, having a male in his flock: but the faithful bringeth himself and his godly desires according to the will of God, and as for corruptions, whether respecting matter or form, they are none of his, they cleave not to his Sacrifice to stain or pollute it. As for the Text of the Prophet Mal. 1. 13, 14. it is cited by many in this business, and to many purposes applied, but we cannot find that in the Prophet for which it is here brought, The deceiver is accursed that offereth a corrupt thing to the Lord. This we read and believe, but that a godly man, being present at this form of prayer among us, read by a godly and faithful Minister, is the deceiver, who offereth a corrupt thing unto the Lord, that is not proved. No argument can be brought from this place to the purpose, but by analogy, which is a kind of arguing of all other most ready at hand, but liable to most exceptions, and apt to draw aside, if great care be not had, (which in this place we find not) to take the proportion in every material point just and right. And we desire such as allege this passage of Scripture against simple presence at the prayers of our Liturgy, advisedly to consider whether God allow them to make such application of his truth which we much doubt of, to say no more.

Your third proposition. That as you are very tender of imputing sin to those men that join in some select prayers read by an able and godly Minister: so on the other side you are not without fear, least such joining may be found unlawful, unless it may appear that the Ministers with whom the people have communion in reading those Prayers, neither give any scandal by reading them, nor give unlawful honor to a thing abused to Idolatry and Superstition, nor do suffer themselves to be sinfully limited in the reading of them.

1 We cannot conceive how you should imagine the practice of a godly Minister in reading some few select prayers to be scandalous or offensive in their congregations when the people generally, not in their assemblies only, but throughout the whole land, were persuaded of the lawfulness of that course till now of late some have been drawn away to separate, who yet by warrant of Scripture produce nothing of weight to countenance that practice.

2 If the book should be as you take it an idolatrite, latent offense doth not oblige. If any man say unto thee, this is sacrificed to Idols, eat it not, so that if it do not manifestly appear that this practice is scandalous; it is not lawful for the people to withdraw themselves.

3 The book (we speak of the Liturgy so far as it is sound and good) by your confession is no Idolathite, neither was it taken out of the Mass-book in such sense as you object, but rather the mass & other Idolatrous prayers were added to it, for popery is as a scab or leprosy cleaving to the Church, and many truths belonging to the Church as her proper legacy were stolen and heaped together in that den. And why the true man may not challenge his goods where ever he finds thē, or the thief plead title to the true man's goods by prescription, we know not? It is no hard task to show that our Service-book was reformed in most things according to the purest Liturgies which were in use in the Church long before the mass was heard of in the world. And if that could not be shown, yet forms of speech generally taken (we speak not of this or that special word or phrase) is no more defiled by Idolatry then the light air, or place where Idolatry is committed. It is not unlawful to pray, Lord help, or Lord have mercy, or to give thanks, praised be God, because the Papists say, Lady help, or, praised be God and the Virgin Mary.

Fourthly, Put case the Minister in reading such prayers gives offense, or attributes unlawful honor to a thing abused to Idolatry and Superstition, or suffer himself to be sinfully limited in the reading of them, what is that to the faithful? This can be no just ground of the people's not joining with them in the worship of God, for that offense is personal only, and not the sin of them that be present, they join in prayer only, and not in his reading or limiting himself. Not to say that every particular person must be herein both accuser and Judge. If he give offense must they stumble at the stone, and separate from the ordinance of grace? we should rather think it is their duty to look unto their feet, that they go not awry. Let it be shown out of the Word of God, that either the Minister is guilty of giving unlawful honor, or that the people may lawfully withdraw themselves in case he should do so, and we will then say as you do, but until that be proved, (being pressed and called to proffer our judgments) we believe that separation is scandalous and sinful, never taught of God, nor confirmed by the approved example of the godly in any age or time of the Church: yea, against the positive Law of God, injurious to the Churches distracting Christians, bringing contempt upon the Ordinances of God, and defrauding believers of the spiritual food of their souls, which is indeed to infringe their Christian liberty, and what ever may be thought of it now, in former times it hath been accounted no small offense.

Fifthly, if this and such like scruples make it unlawful to join in the ordinance of worship, we must hold communion with no society under heaven. For may not the brethren which hold all stinted Liturgies, and set forms unlawful say with like strength of reason, It is unlawful to join in conceived prayer with others, if either they give too little honor to it, as deeming the other lawful, or sinfully limiting, or suffering themselves to be limited to one stinted form, though conceived at first by them selves? And may not the brethren who hold a stinted form lawful in like manner object? It is unlawful to join in prayer with them because they attribute too much honor to conceived prayer, as making their device and method the worship of God? And may not the Brethren which hold it lawful to use some selected prayers according to the forms among us, upon the same grounds condemn communion with both sorts? and all of them one with another, because they either limit themselves too much, or too little? You say in the exposition of the first position, many Preachers constantly use a set form of prayer of their own making before their Sermons, must you not say upon this ground, that it is unlawful to join with them, because they sinfully stint themselves? In probability a Christian may presume, that in the public worship of God, there will be through human ignorance & infirmity somewhat amiss for matter, or manner, or both, & that upon this ground, he must join with no society in any part of God's worship at all.

The advancing of every small difference to this height, is that which will bring all to confusion, if men walk uniform to their own principles. It is well observed by Master I. Da. that unless men will yield so much favor each to other in some difference of opinions, a dissolving not only of Churches, but of human societies also must necessarily follow, & not only not two Ministers, but not two men should live together, which were to put off even humanity it self.

Sixthly, we have credibly heard that you hold fellowship with professed, rigid Separatists without any acknowledgment of their error, and receive them as members, or communicate with them in the privileges of the Church, though you profess you approve not their opinion or practice. And if in godly wisdom, you can see grounds to join with them, we marvel you should be so timorous in this particular.

Seventhly, if you judge the practice of such godly Ministers, scandalous to them that separate from the ordinance, because it is not administered in this, or that but in a stinted form. It is a scandal taken, and not given; and by forbearing, if to confirm men in error, be to scandalize them, they should offend them the more: yea, they should prejudice the truth, and it might be an occasion to beget needless scruples in others, and draw them ignorantly from the fellowship of the Saints in the holy ordinances of God, and strengthen them who by your own confession, are run too far into Schism already.

III POSITION. That the children of godly and approved Christians, are not to be baptized until their parents be set members of some particular Congregation

IV POSITION. That the Parents themselves, though of approved piety, are not to be received to the Lord's Supper, until they be admitted as set Members.

Answ.

These two Positions may be maintained with one and the same defense, being somewhat coincident, and therefore we join them as if they were but one. Therefore to prevent all mistakes, it may please you to take notice that we are not of their judgment who refuse all religious communion with such as are not Church Members, nor do we appropriate communion in this privilege of the seals only to the Members of our own Churches, excluding all other Churches of Christ from the same, though they may be through error or human frailty defective in some matters of order, provided that the liberty of our Churches be preserved, of receiving such satisfaction as is meet (as well by Letters of recommendation, or otherwise if it be requisite) concerning those whom we admit unto fellowship in the seals. For as we account it our duty to keep the unity of spirit inviolate with any, in whom we discern any fruits of the spirit, so we hold ourselves bound to discharge this duty, according to order. Spiritual communion in prayers, holy conferences & other religious actions of like nature we maintain with all godly persons, though they be not in Church order: But Church communion we hold only with Church members admitting to fellowship of the seals the known and approved, & orderly recommended members of any true Church. But into fellowship of the censures, admittance of members and choice of Officers, only the members of that particular Church whereof they and we (any of us) stand members. These things being premised, the considerations whereupon our judgment and practice is swayed for administration of the Seals only to such as are in order of a true visible Church are these that follow.

Reply.

WHAT is here premised to prevent all mistakes, doth seem more to raise then to abate scruples if we mistake not your meaning. You refuse not all religious communion with all that are not Church members, and so much they profess, who formerly have gone for, and professed themselves Separatists from our Assemblies. You do not appropriate this privilege of the Seals only to the members of your own Churches, excluding all other Churches of Christ from the same; If your meaning be only this, that you deny not the Sacraments administered in other Churches to be the true Sacraments of Christ for substance, then you ascribe little more to the Churches of Christ in this, then to the Synagogue of Satan, the Church of Rome. For you will not deny Baptism administered among them to be true for substance: If you deny not to have fellowship with them in the Seals, and to admit them to the Sacrament, and to communicate with them: then either your judgment is contrary to your practice, or you exclude the Churches of England from the number of true visible Churches of Christ, which is to destroy what you formerly built, and here profess. All possible care to keep the Ordinances of God from contempt, we allow and commend, provided you go not beyond the Lord's warrant, and deny not the privileges of the Church to them, to whom they are due by divine appointment, nor the name and title of Church to those societies, which God hath plentifully blessed with means of grace, have received the Tables and Seals, and have entered into Covenant with his Highness. Your liberty to receive such satisfaction as is meet, is not called into question, nor whether you are to keep the bond of the Spirit inviolate according to order. But whether this be to keep the bond of the Spirit inviolate (viz) to exclude from the Sacrament true visible believers or known recommended Christians, formerly members of visible Churches among us; and their children; because they are not members (as you speak) in Church Order. And whether God alloweth to put this difference between Church members of your societies & other visible believers walking in holiness, though not admitted members of any society according to your Church order, as to receive the one, though members of another society, unto the Seals, and to debar the other and their children. These are the things to be considered in these present positions. And first we will examine your Reasons for your judgment and practice by themselves, and then so far as we judge meet, try your answers to the objections you make against it.

1 Consideration.

THE Seals Baptism & the Lord's Supper are given to the Church, as a privilege peculiar thereto in ordinary dispensation. Indeed the preaching of the word is not so, being an ordinance given not only for the edifying of the Church already gathered but also for the gathering of men to the Churches that yet are without: whereas the dispensing of the Seals is God's Ordinance, given only for the edifying of the Church being gathered, and not for the gathering of it: And because there is now, no universal visible Church on earth wherein the Seals are dispensed, there being no place, nor time, nor Officers, nor Ordinances appointed in the New Testament by Christ our Lord, for any such Assemblies as the Jews had under Moses.

It remains that the Christian Churches, whereunto these privileges were given, are congregational, consisting only of so many as may and do meet together ordinarily in one place for the public worshipping of God, and their own edifying.

Hence it is that we read so much in the New Testament of the Churches in the plural number, the Churches of Christ, the Churches of God, the Churches of the Saints: and not only when they were of divers Nations, the Churches of the Gentiles, but also of the same Nation, The Churches of Judea, and not only when that Country was of large extent and circuit, the Churches of Asia, but also of a small part of the Country, The Churches of Galatia: yea, when congregations in several Cities are spoken of, They are called Churches, as the Churches of Jerusalem, the Churches at Antioch. To wind up all, seeing the Churches in the Gospel are congregational, and that Baptism and the Lord's Supper (being Church privileges) belong only to the Churches, it will follow, that as City privileges belong only to Citizens and their children: so baptism and the Lord's Supper being Church privileges, belong only to the members of particular Churches, and their seed. And that seeing sigillum sequitur donum, to apply them to others what is it but to abuse them? As a seal of a corporation is abused if added to confirm the grant of privileges which are peculiar to any Town corporate to one that being no free-man of that corporation is uncapable thereof.

Reply.

IF by the Church be understood the Society of men, professing the entire faith of Christ, the seals are given unto it as a peculiar privilege; but if by the Church you understand only a congregational assembly in Church order, the seals were never appropriated to it. But to examine everything in order as it is propounded.

1 The Seals, Baptism, and the Lord's Supper, are given to the Church as privileges peculiar thereunto, not only in ordinary (as you say) but also in extraordinary dispensation. True baptism is not without the Church, but within it; an ordinance given to it, and they that are baptized, must needs be of a Church. The Sacraments are the seals of the Covenant to the faithful, which is the form of the Church, and when for substance rightly used, tokens and pledges of our spiritual admittance and entertainment into the Lord's family, and Symbols or testimonies whereby the people of God are distinguished from all other Nations. This is most certain, as in the ordinary; so in the extraordinary dispensation of the Seals, as is confirmed by the Texts of Scripture alleged in the Margine. For the Apostles (as you say) dispensed the seals in an extraordinary way, but the seals dispensed by the Apostles were Seals of the covenant, privileges peculiar to the Church, privileges of spiritual admittance and entertainment into the Lord's family.

And when you say the dispensing of the Seals is an Ordinance given only for the edifying of the Church being gathered, and not for the gathering of it, must it not be understood in extraordinary, dispensation as well as ordinary: To what pupose then are those words (in ordinary dispensation) added to the proposition? if thereby you would intimate that the Sacraments be not the peculiar privileges of the Church, and Seals of the Covenant in extraordinary dispensation, it is evidently cross to the Text you cite, and to yourselves afterward. If your meaning be, that in ordinary dispensation the Sacraments do of right belong to them only, who be set members of a visible congregation, it is all one with the conclusion, that which is in question and should be proved, and that which this very Scripture doth plentifully disprove'; for they that were baptized were not set members of a particular congregational Church whereunto they were baptized, nor in a Church way before baptism (as is evident and granted by the most of yourselves) but by baptism solemnly admitted into the Church, and then it is not for your purpose; or they were set members (as some of the brethren seem to contend in answer to the objection framed against this consideration) and then the words are more then superfluous. Added, they were to prevent the objection which you foresaw might be made from the Apostles practice and example but so as they cut asunder the sinews of the consideration it self, and make it of no force. For as those believers were of the Church: so are approved Christians and their seed among us: therefore the privileges of the seals belong unto them.

2 And as the seals: so is the word of salvation preached and received a privilege of the Church. If by the preaching of the word you understand nothing but the tender of salvation or the publishing of the will of God, concerning the salvation of man, whether by private or public persons; it is not proper to the Church but an ordinance given for the gathering of men to the Church, and not only for the edifying of the Church. For the Apostles first preached to the Gentiles when Infidels, that they might be converted; And we doubt not but a Minister or private Christian coming into a country of Infidels, may as occasion is offered, and as they shall be enabled, instruct and persuade them to receive the faith of Christ: but if by the preaching of the word be meant the giving of the word to a people, to abide and continue with them, and consequently their receiving of it at least in profession then it is proper to the Church of God.

The word makes disciples to Christ, and the word given to a people is God's covenanting with them, and the people's receiving this word and professing their faith in God through Jesus Christ is the taking of God to be their God. The laws and statutes which God gave to Israel, was the honor and ornament to that Nation, and a testimony that God had separated them from all other people, even the Gentiles themselves being Judges. The word of reconciliation is sent and given to the world reconciled in Jesus Christ, and they that receive the doctrine, law, or word of God are the Disciples, servants and people of God.

In your second consideration you intimate that there is a twofold preaching, the one by office and authority, the other in Common charity, or how ever else it may be called. For thus you write. God hath joined to preach (viz by office) and to baptize together, therefore we may not separate them. Now to preach unto, that is to instruct or counsel in charity is a duty which may be performed to an infidel, but to preach by office is proper to them that are called to that office: and so to be taught and instructed by Officers in the Church is proper to the Church.

To have pastors who shall feed with knowledge and understanding is a gift of matrimonial love which God vouchsafeth unto his Church. The Apostles first gathered Churches and then ordained elders in every City or Church; so that it is proper to the Church to be fed and guided by true spiritual pastors who teach and bless in the name of the Lord. And if the word preached and received be a certain note of the true Church, they that have intyrelly received the word of salvation and have Pastors godly and faithful to feed and guide them, they and their seed have right and interest unto the seals in order.

Moreover the true worship of God is an inseparable and infallible mark of the true Church of God, for where Christ is, there is his Church. This is the prerogative of the church. The Prince shall be in the midst of them, and he shall go in when they go in, &c. And Christ saith, where 2. or 3. are met together in my name there am I in the midst among them. And for certain they are gathered in the name of Christ that being lawfully called do assemble to worship God and call upon his name in the mediation of Jesus Christ. In times past, the Church was acknowledged by the fear of God, and entyre Service of his Majesty, by the professing of the true faith and faithful calling upon God's name. The signs of Apostolic Churches are these. The continuance in the Apostles doctrine and fellowship, and breaking of bread and prayer. And if faith, true and lively (though mixed with many doubtings and errors) make a man a living member of Jesus Christ, the entyre profession of true faith joined with holiness of life in some measure answerable thereunto, makes a man a true member of the visible Church. And if the feales belong to the Church in right and orderly dispensation, they that join together in the true worship of God, according to his will, with godly and faithful pastors, they have right and title to the Sacraments according to divine institution.

Thirdly, that there is now no visible Catholic Church in your sense will easily be granted. i. e. there is no universal society consisting of all such as are accounted or to be esteemed Christians, subjected to one or many universal Pastors or guides, wherewithall subordinates must communicate in some sacred things which may make them one Church and which may and can be performed by that universal and head Church only. Such an universal Christian Church Christ never ordained, no not in the days of the Apostles, to whom all the care of all the Churches, was committed. The Churches planted by the Apostles had all the same substantial laws and customs, the same guides and officers for kind, the same ordinances of worship and means of Salvation: But one flock or Society in the fore mentioned acceptation they were not, because they were but subordinate to one visible head, Christ, with which they were to hold union and communion in some worship to be performed by them all jointly assembled at some special solemnity, nor subjected to the government of any supreme tribunal constantly to be erected and continued among them.

Nevertheless, in some respects of reason, the visible Church, may be called the Church, sheepfold or flock of Christ; for if the whole society or body mystical of Christ be one, this Church militant in like sort is one: the unity of which society consists in that uniformity, which all several persons thereunto belonging, have by reason of that one Lord whose servants they all are, and profess themselves, that one Spirit whereby they are animated as the body by one soul; whereby they believe in Christ, and which they acknowledge and profess, that one Baptism inward and outward, whereby they put on Christ, and are initiated.

This society is one in the inward fruition and enjoying of the benefits of Christ's Death and Resurrection, and in outward profession of those things which supernaturally appertain to the very essence of the Church, and are necessarily required in every Christian, this acceptance of the word is not unusual in Scripture. As God hath set some in the Church. His bodies sake which is the Church. The Church viz. whereof Paul was made a Minister, and whereunto the rest of the Apostles were ordained, which was the Catholic visible Church, the society of men professing the faith of Christ throughout the world, divided into many particular Churches whereof some are pure, others impure, some more, others less sound. Hereunto it may be added, that every multitude and society of believers are indefinitely called the Church, I persecuted the Church of God. The house of God which is the Church of the living God. In which sense all the Churches in the world may truly be called one. And thus the Apostle Peter writing to many dispersed Churches, who could not assemble in one place nor be fed by one Shepherd, speaketh of them singularly as one flock. Feed the flock of God which is among you. But that flock are the strangers dispersed through Pontus, Galatia, Asia, Cappadocia, and Bythinia, which could not possibly join together in the Ordinances of Worship, or make one distinct congregated assembly. And if the Catholic Militant Church be one Society, the Seals that are given as a prerogative to the Church are given unto it, and the true Members of the Catholic Church have right and title to them in due order, though they be not admitted into the Church fellowship you speak of.

For as the flock or society is one: so is the Ministry, Faith, Covenant, and Sacraments, which are given as a communion prerogative unto the whole Church, and not appropriated to this or that part or member, as separated from the whole; which is further evidenced hereby, that sometime it hath, and too often it may fall out, that a Christian may be a true member of the universal visible Church (i. e. he may hold, profess, and maintain that holy Catholic Faith, pure, and undefiled, without which no man can be saved) who for the present is no actual member of any particular or visible society in Church order. As for example, a man may be cut off by Excommunication, from all commerce with the present visible Church wherein he was bred and born, when he is not cut off from the Catholic, Orthodoxall Church. He may be deprived of participation of the Ordinance in every particular society, when his right and title to them is much better then these who have most injuriously cast him out, or debarred him of the means of salvation.

The communion of Saints, whether visible or invisible is the effect and property of the Church Catholic, and agreeth to the several parts and members thereof, as they be members of that body under the head, and if particular Churches have communion together it must of necessity be, that they be parts and members of the whole body which is one.

4. Though there be no universal congregation or assembly nor can be imagined, yet there are and have been many visible assemblies or societies, true Churches of Christ, to whom the Prerogative of the Seals is given, which have not been united and knit together, in Church-order into one congregational body or society, For every society in covenant with God is the true Church of God: for what is it to be the flock, people or sheep of God, but to be the Church of God? And where there is a Covenant, there is the people of God. They that are of the faith of Abraham, are the children and seed of Abraham, and within the Covenant of Abraham (though but two or three) and so of the same Church with him by that covenant. The communication and accepting of the tables of the covenant is an undoubted token of a people in covenant or confederate, but every society professing the true and entire faith, joining in prayer and thanksgiving, receiving the truth of God to dwell among them, and in some measure conforming themselves to the obedience of God's Commandments, is in covenant with God. It is simply necessary to the being of a Church that it be laid upon Christ the foundation, which being done, the remaining of what is forbidden, or the want of what is commanded, cannot put the society from the title or right of a Church. For Christ is the foundation and head corner stone of the Church, and a people coming unto Christ, united unto him, built upon him, having communion with him and growing up in him, are the true Church of God: and if the seals be annexed to the covenant by God himself, as we cannot deny a people in covenant to be the Church, so we must not deny their right and title to the Sacraments. If therefore the meaning of the proposition be, that the seals be given to the Church, that is, to true and sound Christians, and people in covenant with God, as a privilege whether in ordinary or extraordinary dispensation we accept it as good and sound, but it makes against your judgment and practice in keeping away such as have right and title to the ordinances. If you mean the seals are given to the Church, that is, only to set members of some particular society combined by covenant (as it is among you) we cannot receive it, because it implieth a distinction not taught in Scripture, and cross to yourselves. And for the thing it self the Scripture hath nothing but many things against it as hath been shown.

5 If it be granted that the seals are the prerogative of a particular visible Church, known and approved Christians among us, and their seed are members of true and visible Churches, and so to be esteemed among you before they be entered into Church membership as you call it. For every society professing the entire and true faith, and joining together in the right use of the Sacraments in matters substantial is the true Church of God, and every visible believer receiving the word and professing the true entire faith, admitted to the right and lawful participation of the Sacraments is a visible member of the true Church, if he have neither renounced that society, nor deserved justly to be cast out by excommunication or Church censure. For the entire profession of the truth, the dwelling of the truth among men, the right use of the Sacraments (which is ever joined with truth of Doctrine, and to be esteemed by it) is proper to them that be in covenant with God, And they that truly partake of the Seals must needs be of a Church, for the seals are not without but within the Church an ordinance given unto it, and if they be true members of the true Churches of Jesus Christ, other Churches, are bound to hold communion with them in the ordinance of worship as divine providence shall minister occasion.

In answer to the ninth position you say the members of other Churches, well known and approved by virtue of communion with Churches, do mutually and with good acceptance communicate each of them at others Churches, even so often as God's providence leads them thereunto, and themselves desire it. In your preface to this consideration, you say you admit to fellowship of the seals, the known, approved, and orderly recommended members of any true Church, and if known and approved Christians, members of our Churches coming over into New England, shall desire either to have their children baptized, or to be admitted themselves to the Lord's Supper before they be set members of any society these, we desire to know upon what grounds from God you can deny them, if you acknowledge our Churches, Ministry, and Sacraments, to be true and of God (as you profess) and the members of the Church be known and approved, orderly recommended unto you.

It is the privilege of Christians baptized themselves, and walking in the faith, that their children should have right to baptism in all true Churches in the world. It is the privilege of Christians lawfully and justly admitted to the Lord's Supper in one visible Church, and walking in covenant with God, that they have right to this privilege in all Churches professing their entire faith, and you must show just and sound reasons from God of your judgment and practice in debarring their seed from baptism, and parents themselves from the Supper, or else (to use the words of a reverend Elder among you, in a case of less importance, and not concerning so many) you will be found guilty of adding to the words, and making eleven Commandments, and setting up human customs, and selfwill against God's appointment. For the Sacraments are given to the Church as a privilege peculiar thereunto, but you deny this privilege to the true visible members of the Church, (as yourselves confess.) For if the Ministers be the Ministers of Christ, and their congregations the Churches of Christ, then known and approved Christians are members of the Church. In your opinion the members of the Jewish Church might be received unto baptism, upon confession of the Christian faith, before they were entered into Church fellowship, and it is more then strange to us that you should not think the true visible members of the Churches of Christ to have as much title and interest to the Seals, as the members of the Jewish Church to the Sacrament of Baptism.

6 The distinct Churches mentioned in the New Testament, it is not certain that they were congregational societies consisting only of so many as might and did meet together ordinarily in one place at one time for the public worship of God, and their own edification, and if this were granted it would not carry the weight that was laid upon it, But because it may make way for the clearing of some other points pertaining to discipline and Church orders, we entreat leave to set down, and desire you to examine what may be objected against it. We will not insist upon this that the least circuit wherein there is mention of Churches is ample enough to contain some diocesses and the least City, populous enough to make many numbersome congregations. Nor upon this, that to meet at one time and one place, as one assembly is a thing merely accidental to the unity of the Church and society Ecclesiastical which is still one, when they are dispersed asunder, and no particular man of that society at first remaining now alive. The number of believers was so great in some Cities as they could not conveniently meet in one place as one assembly to worship the Lord according to his will and for their edifying. That there was a Church gathered in the City of Samaria by the ministry of Phillip will not be denied, for they received the word and were baptized, but that the Church in that City was only a congregational assembly is more then can probably be concluded out of Scripture. For the whole City or the greatest part could not ordinarily assemble in one place to their edification: But the whole City of Samaria, in a manner, (as it is probable) embraced the faith. As the whole City from the least to the greatest had given heed to Simon Magus before, so to Phillip now when he preached Christ, And the Text saith expressly that Samaria received the Gospel.

The Christian Church at Jerusalem was one and distinct, but it grew and increased first to 3000. then to 5000. afterwards multitudes of men and women were added, and the multitude of Disciples increased; it is also noted that a company of the Priests received the faith. The Syriac hath it of the Jews, (scil.) inhabiting Judea, but the Greek, Arabian, vulgar, Chrisostoms & Ethiopians approve the former, and the number of the Priests was not small: there is mention also of millions of believers. And when all the Apostles, or the greatest part of them remained at Jerusalem for a time continuing in the ministry of the word and prayer, and that they might do it the more earnestly and diligently, left the care of the poor to others: how can we think but that Church did grow exceedingly, and the number of believers there to be more then could fitly meet ordinarily in one congregation. Without question the number of believers in Antioch was not small, of which it is said expressly, that a great number believed, turned to the Lord and that a great multitude was added to the Lord by the preaching of Barnabas, and that Paul and Barnabas continued there one whole year preaching the word of God, and teaching the multitude, so that the Disciples were first called Christians at Antioch. After that this Church was visited by Paul and Barnabas, who continued there teaching and preaching the Word of God with many others also, and may we not think that this Church did quickly rise to such bigness that they could not well assemble in one congregation as now we call them?

It will easily be credited that the number of believers was not small at Ephesus, if we call to mind that when Paul had been there but two years, all they that dwelt in Asia had heard the word of the Lord both Jews and Grecians, that a great door and effectual was opened to him at Ephesus, That the art for making Shrines, and Dianaes Temple was in danger to be set at naught, and that those that had used curious arts, came and burnt their books in the sight of all men, which could not be done without great danger unto the Church, unless a great part of the City had believed. Where a Church did comprehend a City with its Suburbs and the Country circumjacent, i. e. the believers who professed the faith within that circuit. It might well be that the number did so increase through the extraordinary blessing of God, which accompanied the preaching of the word in those primitive times, and first planting of the heavenly Kingdom, that they could not well meet ordinarily in one place, and yet continued one Society. For when a number is gathered in small Villages, or some added to the number already gathered, it is not meet they should be neglected because small, nor divided from the body, because the number not competent to make an entire and perfect body of it self. The increase of the Churches doth require an increase of Elders, and (if they grow to bigness more then ordinary) an increase of places for their assembling, when the essence of the visible Church is not changed, nor one multiplied or divided into many. And it is more available for the good of the Church, and further removed from all ambition, if the Society shall assemble occasionally in divers places as parts and members of the body, then to constitute a distinct free Society consisting of a few Believers, not fit to make up an entire body contrary to the precedent examples of the Apostles. In times of grievous and hot persecution the Churches of God could not assemble in any great number in public places, but have been compelled to meet in Woods, Caves, Dens, and dark corners, as the Lord hath offered opportunity, one and the same Society in sundry places: So that either it is not essential to the Church to meet together in one place ordinarily, or their Society is broken off by persecution, when their meeting together in one place is interrupted. It is said by some where the Church grew greater, sometimes by the sudden and extraordinary conversion of more then could well so assemble, then was there presently a dispersion of the former, and a multiplication of more particular Assemblies. But in the Scriptures quoted no such thing doth appear, but rather the contrary as hath been proved. In aftertimes when the Church was within the Cities as of Rome, Ephesus, Alexandria, Carthage, Jerusalem, &c. the number of Believers did greatly exceed the bigness of a convenient and fitting assembly which might ordinarily congregate in one place to worship God according to his appointment when the Church was but one.

Seventhly Seeing then both the Seals in ordinary and in extraordinary dispensation belong to the Church, id est, to the faithful, and repentant, taught made Disciples, who have received the word, believe, and profess the faith, have received the holy Ghost, and walk in obedience, who are members of other visible Churches, or to be made members of a visible Church for the time being, by admittance unto the Sacraments, and not unto set members of congregational assemblies only. And seeing the godly and faithful Ministers among us are the true Ministers of Christ, and their godly congregations, true Churches, and known, and approved Christians, true members of visible Churches formerly baptized, and admitted to the Lord's Supper. This consideration is of no weight to justify your opinion and practice in debarring known and approved Christians, professing the faith, members of the true visible Churches amongst us from the Lord's Supper, or their seed from Baptism, because they be not yet received as set members of some particular cōgregation amongst you: And if such Believers are not to be received to the Seals, we desire you to consider if ever the Sacraments of the New Testament, were rightly dispensed in the Church of the New Testament from the first Plantation thereof unto this day.

The Seal doth follow the grant, and as the Seal is profaned, if it be put to a false grant or Charter, so are the faithful wronged if the Seal in a lawful way desired, be denied to them that have received the grant, i. e. have right unto Jesus Christ, and communion with him. But the faithful who have received the word with gladness, believe, and profess, be members known and approved by other visible Churches, or such as desire to be admitted members of that visible Society for the time by communicating in the ordinance, are already partakers of the grant or charter, have right and interest in Christ, may lawfully desire the Seals, and may be admitted as members for the time being of that particular Society. Therefore to debar such, from the Lord's Supper, and their seed from Baptism, is against the Law of nature, and the positive Law of God, an injury to the faithful and their seed, a wrong to the Catholic visible Church, that particular society, and the Pastors themselves that so debar them. They sinned grievously who deferred Baptism to the end of their life, and the negligence of Pastors and Teachers who did not instruct the ignorant and reprove the superstitious, was great. And is not the severity in debarring such as crave and desire to be admitted to the Seals an injury to be reprehended?

Answ. 2 Consider the ordinary administration of the Seals is limited to the ministry and the ministry to a particular Church; therefore the seals also must necessarily be proper to the Church and to the members thereof.

1. That the administration of the seals is limited to their Ministry is evident from the first institution Math. 28. 19. where God hath joined (to preach) viz. by office, and (to baptize) together, therefore we may not separate them. For howsoever: any man may by the appointment of the Lord and Master of the family, signify his mind and deliver his message from him to the family, yet the dispensing of a fit portion of food to everyone of the household is a branch of the stewards office. Indeed the keys are given to the whole Church yet the exercise and dispensation of them in this as well as in other particulars is concredited to the Ministers who are called to be 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, 1 Cor. 4. 1. And no Church office can be orderly performed by any, but one that is called thereunto nor will God vouchsafe his presence, and blessing (whereupon all spiritual efficacy depends) in an ordinance dispensed, but when it is dispensed by those whom he hath ordained and appointed thereunto.

2. That the ministry is limited to the Church appears as from evident texts of Scripture: so also upon this ground. 1 The office is founded in the relation between the Church and the officer, wherefor take away the relation, and the office and the work ceaseth.

For where he hath not power, he may not do an act of power, and he hath no power where he hath not a relation by office. Herein the proportion holdeth between an officer of a town corporate, and of a Church that as the power of the former is only within his own corporation: so the power of the latter is confined to his own congregation.

Reply.

The proposition is granted that the dispensation of the Sacraments in the New Testament both ordinary and extraordinary is limited to the Ministry. But in that you allege for confirmation, some things may be noted.

1 The first institution of Baptism is not contained in that passage Math. 28. 19. but confirmed; For the seals of the New Testament were instituted by Christ before his death, and his disciples had baptized many which they could not do before the institution of the Sacrament. Secondly we see not how you can apply that text to Preaching by office, which according to our exposition must be a dispensing of a fit portion of food to everyone of the household. For it is plain the Apostles were sent forth to preach to every Creature or unto the world, to convert men unto God, to make them disciples and not to preach unto disciples only, or members of the household. The Apostles certainly had authority, and preached by authority, but they preached not to Infidels and Heathens, as to disciples or members of the Church, much less did they give a portion to them as to the household which is the preaching by office, which you acknowledge. Thirdly if under the power of the keys you comprehend preaching by office, dispensing the seals, casting out, and receiving again into the bosom of the Church we deny the power of the keys to belong to the Church or community of the faithful: we cannot find in Scripture that Christ ever granted such power to the faithful, as faithful joined together in Covenant in those passages which speak of this power, the execution of this authority is given to them to whom the authority is committed.

If the power of the keys be given to the whole Church the Apostles themselves must derive their authority immediately from the Church, and not from Christ, for the power must be derived from them, unto whom it was given; but their power, and authority was not from the Church, but from Christ immediately. And if the dispensation, and exercise of the keys, be concredited to the Ministers; Doth it hold in all things or only in the dispensation of the Sacraments, and preaching by office? Do they dispense the seals as the Stewards of Christ, from whom they receive their authority immediately or as the servants of the Church, from which they derive their authority? If in the first sense; the power of the keys is not in the community of the faithful. If in the second, the office of a Minister is not the immediate gift of Christ, nor the Minister, so much the servant of Christ, as of the Church, from whom he must receive laws, in whose name he must do his office, and to whom he must give an account. We could wish you had explained in what sense, you hold the dispensation, and execution of the power of the keys is concredited to the Ministers, and by whom. For if the community of the faithful have to do in all matters concerning the body, to admit members, and cast them out, to make and depose Ministers, to bind and loose by authority derived from Christ, we cannot see how in your judgment the dispensation, and execution of the power of the keys is concredited to the Ministers.

Fourthly That which you add, that God will not vouchsafe his presence and blessing to an ordinance but when it is dispensed by those, whom he hath ordained and appointed thereunto, must be warily understood, or it may occasion errors and distractions not a few, You know what corruptions soon entered into the Church of God, both in respect of Doctrine, Worship, Offices, and entrance thereunto, and how ready and apt is the conclusion from your words, That Christ hath not vouchsafed his presence, and blessing in his Ordinances to his Church? But of this before.

And on the contrary, seeing God hath vouchsafed his blessing in his Ordinances dispensed by yourselves, when you stood as visible Ministers in the congregation, and Churches of old England, you must confess, did approve both your standings and his Ordinances dispensed by you.

Secondly, as for the Assumption, that Pastors and Teachers are limited to a particular charge or society; but that flock is not ever one congregational assembly meeting in one place, neither the band so straight, whereby they are tied to that one society, that they may not upon occasion perform some Ministerial Act or Office in another congregation, or to them that be not set members of their proper assembly. For first to dispence the Seals of the covenant is a ministerial act, an act of Office, and not an exercise of gifts only: But the Pastors of one Assembly may dispence the Sacrament to the set members of another society upon occasion, as you confess in this and in your answer to the ninth position.

And if the members of one Church may lawfully upon occasion receive the Sacrament of the Supper in another society from the Pastor thereof, then may the Pastor of one congregation perform a Ministerial act to the members of another, and if to the members of another then in another congregation with consent, and upon occasion.

Secondly, As the Ministers are exhorted to feed their fleek: so is every Christian and Minister to try and examine himself whether he be in the faith, but you will not allow this conclusion. I must examine myself. Ergo no man is debarred from the Sacrament for his unworthiness, or to be tried or examined by others, to be observed, admonished, and brought to repentance for notorious sin. No more can it be rightly gathered from the former passages of Scripture, that the Minister is not upon occasion to perform any Ministerial act to any other people or society, because ordinarily he is to attend his own flock.

Thirdly, As the Ministers have peculiar relation to their particular flocks, so the people unto their particular Ministers, unto whom they are ried in special manner, as to their Overseers, who must give account for theirsculs. And if this peculiar relation betwixt the people & the Minister doth not hinder the people from receiving the Lord's Supper at the hands of another Minister; nor the minister from performing the Ministerial act to the members of another congregation. Neither doth his peculiar Relation to his own flock hinder him, from administering unto others upon just occasion being entreated thereunto. As the combining of the people to their peculiar Minister, doth not quite cut off their communion with other Ministers: so neither doth the restraining of a Minister to a peculiar flock quite cut him off from administering upon occasion: unto another people. Paul appointeth the Ephesian Elders unto the care & charge only of their own particular flock, but so to attend them ordinarily according to the rules of the Scripture; that as occasion was offered, might perform some Ministerial acts in another congregation. The taking heed unto their flocks which Paul requires in this place doth comprehend under it the administration of the Word, Prayer, and Sacrament, and if it must be restrained to their own particular Churches only, it is unlawful for a Pastor to preach or call upon the name of God in any public Assembly save his own, upon any occasion, as these be duties prtaining to common confession or profession of faith. Ordinary Pastors and Teachers it is true, are not Apostles, who are to go from place to place, from Country to Country, to plant and erect Churches, but they are tied ordinarily to one flock, as the Text proveth, and to which purpose it is commonly cited. But that a Pastor is so tyed to his flock, that he can perform no ministerial act to any other upon any occasion that it proveth not, nor can we find that it was ever so understood by Divines ancient or modern. W. B. telleth us, the learned bring these allegations to this purpose. But the author in alleging the consent of the learned was very careless or much abused, for there is not one that speaketh to the purpose. I. D. disclaimeth that position; and for the rest it is a matter notorious, they were never thought to be of that opinion; and we doubt not if any could be named to free this allegation from suspicion of Novelty, you would have cited one or more as you have done in that which followeth.

Feed the flock of God (saith Peter.) But he speaks of all those dispersed Churches to whom he writes, which he calls a chosen Generation, a Royal Priesthood, a peculiar people: And in some respect of reason, under which we may apprehend them, are one flock, but not really as combined under the same Pastor, or meeting in one place. And as these dispersed believers, or societies make one Flock: so the Ministers attending their flocks or societies, and the Ministry exercised by them is, or maketh one.

4 A Minister chosen and set over one society, is to look unto his people committed to his charge, and feed the flock over which the Lord hath made him overseer, but he is a Minister in the Church Universal, for as the Church is one, so is the Ministry one, of which every Minister (sound or Orthodox) doth hold his part, and though he be Minister over that flock only which he is to attend, yet he is a Minister in the universal Church. The functiō or power of exercising that Function in the abstract, must be distinguished from the power of exercising it, concretely, according to the divers circumstances of places. The first belongeth to a Minister everywhere in the Church, the latter is proper to the place and people where hedoth minister. The lawful use of his power is limited to that congregation ordinarily. The power itself is not so limited and bounded. In Ordination, Presbyters are not restrained to one or other certain place, as if they were to be deemed Ministers there only, though they be set over a certain people. And as the faithful in respect of a community betwixt them, must and ought to perform the Offices of love one to another, though of different societies, so the Ministers in respect of their communion, must and ought upon occasion to perform ministerial Offices towards the faithful of distinct societies.

5 If this be not so, what shall become of the poor flock when the Pastor is driven away by personal persecution, so that he cannot, if others may not afford them help and succor: what when the congregation it self is dispersed, must no shepherd receive them into fold, when they are driven from their own, or neglected by him?

6 If the Pastor may be absent from his flock upon necessary, just, and weighty occasion, respecting his own good, the good of that society, or the common good of Churches consociate, then may the Pastor, the society, the Churches procure some man to supply the defect, and do the office of a Pastor, preach the Word, pray, and as occasion is offered, administer the Sacrament in that Congregation unto that Assembly until their Shepherd shall return. Shall the people be left as sheep without a shepherd; because for the good of the Churches their own shepherd is called from them for a time, that he might return with greater joy and comfort?

The Pastor is appointed to feed his own flock, and yet for the good of the whole Church he may be called to leave, if not the care, yet the over-sight of his flock fought a while; and by the same reason a pastor of another flock or congregation may perform the office, and do the acts of a Minister in his congregation during absence: Yea if for the good of the Churches he be called away, do not the Churches stand obliged in conscience to provide that the flock sustain no hurt by his absence which possibly ye cannot do if one Minister may not perform a Ministerial act in another Congregation.

7 If the Prophets of one Church may prophesy in another, and apply their doctrines, exhortations and prayers to any of the occasions of the Churches where they speak, whereof they are not set members, what hinders why the Pastor of one congregation, may not preach and pray, administer the Sacraments in another? The pastor of one congregation is appointed to his peculiar charge but he is a Minister in the universal Church, as well as the Prophets of one Church may be called Prophets of the universal Church by virtue of that Communion which all true Churches have one with another. Without consent the Prophet may not prophesy by exhortation, and with consent the Pastor may administer the Sacraments.

8 In the Primitive Churches when Elders were ordained in every City, they were not only to look to their flock but endeavor the conversion of poor Infidels among whom they lived, and the enlargement of Christ's Kingdom, for the work of the Lord must be done in its season, and then was the time of the calling of the Gentiles:

It was not their office proper and essential to travail from Country to Country as did the Apostles, nor were they pastors of the Infidels, but by private instruction and public teaching (if any of them would be penitent) they were to labor the coming of them to God. And these Infidels converted to the saith were to be baptized of the Elders ordinarily in those Cities, though the number might be so great as they could not well meet in one Congregation, nor be subject to the same Pastor; for either they must be baptized by the pastors among whom they lived, (being converted to the faith) or continue unbaptized until they were a number convenient to make a distinct society, or grow together into one body, and to elect and choose their own Minister by whom they may be baptized: But that either they must stay so long without baptism, or that a society of unbaptised men had power in those times to elect and choose their Minister, by whom they should be baptized is contrary to all presidents in Scripture.

9 And so if a Pastor may not perform a ministerial act to any other person or people but his own flock only, then a company newly converted from infidelity, which cannot join themselves as set members to another assembly, must remain unbaptised till they have chosen their Minister to do that office. Then must the people thus converted wait officers till there be among themselves able men to pray, preach, exhort in the congregation at the ordination of their Minister, or (if that may be omitted) till there be fit men among them to examine the fitness of him that is chosen.

10 If subtle Heretics arise, and seduce, and draw away many from the faith, and the body of the society be not able to convince them, either they must be let alone or cast out without conviction, for neighbouring Ministers stand in peculiar relation to their flocks only, and must not meddle beyond their calling according to your tenent.

11 There is no precept or example in Scripture more to warrant the admitting of a set member of one congregation unto the Supper in another, or the baptising of his child, occasionally in another assembly then there is for receiving of known and approved Christians and their seed that are not set members. The Pastor is no more the pastor of the one then of the other, nor the one more of his flock then the other, neither of them set members, and both sorts may be members for the time being, and they most properly who are of longest abode among them. But as we hear it is frequent among you (as at Dorchester, &c.) to baptize the children of another Assembly, and usually you admit to the Supper of the Lord, members of other Churches, and therefore the Minister is not so limited to his particular Church or flock but he may dispence the seals to others, which in this consideration is denied.

12 If the want of one Officer in a Congregation for a time may be supplied by another, as the want of the Doctor, Ruling Elder, or Deacon, by the Pastor; why may not the defects of some Congregation or Christians be supplied by Pastors or Ministers of another Congregation, when they are requested and desired? the mind herein is godly, and the means lawful, and well pleasing unto God.

13 And if a Synod consisting of sundry members of particular Churches, met together in the name of Christ about the common and public affairs of the Churches shall join together in prayer and communion of the Supper, we can see no ground to question it as unlawful, although that Assembly be no particular Congregation or Church, hath no Pastor over them, make not one Ecclesiastical body as a particular Congregational Church, unless it be for the time only. The Minister therefore may do an act of office to them that be not set members of his flock as he may stand in Relation to them for the time.

14 Your comparison betwixt an Officer of a Town Corporate, and of a particular Congregation is not alike, unless you will say that a member of another Corporation occasionally coming into the Town, is thereby a member of that Society, and subject to the authority of the Officer. For so you profess that the members of one Society may occasionally communicate with another, and so be subject to the Pastor for the time being, which if you grant, it overthrows the whole strength of this consideration. Howsoever the comparison it self is very perilous if it be pressed. For if the Officer of a Town Corporate, presume to do an act of power out of his own Corporation, it is a mere nullity, but if a Minister of the Gospel dispence the Sacrament of Baptism, or the Lord's Supper to believers of another Society (though done without consent) it was never deemed or judged a nullity in the Church of God. Let the comparison hold good, and most Christians have cause to question whether they be truly baptized, or ever lawfully received the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. If it may not be doubted, whether ever the Sacraments of the New Testament were truly or by authority dispensed, especially if we consider what follows in the other considerations. This Argument from comparison is very usual in the Writings of Brethren against communion with our Churches, but for the most part greatly mistaken, to say no more.

Answer 3 Consideration.

Circumcision and the Passover were to be administered only to the members of the Church. Ergo, Baptism and the Lord's Supper is so to be administered also. The consequence is made good by the parity of these Ordinances. For if the Argument hold strong for the proof of Paedo-Baptism which is taken from the circumcision of Infants, why may we not as well infer a necessity of Church membership to Baptism, from the necessity of it to circumcision. And that Circumcision was peculiar to the Church members of the Church, may appear in that persons circumcised, & only they, might eat the Passover, and they only might enter into the Temple, which were the privileges of Church members. In our answer to the second Objection against the first consideration we have shown that Circumcision was not administered to all that were under the Covenant of Grace (which all believers were) but only such of them as joined themselves to the Church, at first in Abraham's family, whereunto Baptism doth so far answer that the Apostle counteth these express equivalent to be circumcised in Christ with circumcision made without hands, and to be buried with Christ in Baptism. Indeed, in some things they differ as only the Males were circumcised, whereas with us Females are also baptized. The Reason is because God hath limited Circumcision to the Males, but under the Gospel that difference is taken away. Again, Circumcision was administered in the private family; but Baptism, only in the public Assemblies of the Church. The Reason of this difference is, because they were bound to circumcise the Males on the eighth day, but that could not stand with going to the Temple which was too far off, for the purpose, to bring every child thither from all parts of Judea to be Circumcised the eighth day. Nor had they always opportunity of a solemn convention in the Synagogue on every eighth day; when some child or other might be to be circumcised. But there is no precise day set down so Baptism, nor are opportunities of public Assemblies so remote where Churches are kept in a congregational frame, but that every first day of the week Baptism may be administered if it be required. Again, for the Aforesaid Reason, Circumcision required not a peculiar Minister (for ought we find in Scripture) but it is not $\langle \diamond \rangle$ in Baptism, as was showed in the second Consideration. But no good Reason can be given, why, in this they should not both agree, viz. that they are both to be dispensed only to members of the visible Church, as it hath been proved in the first Consideration.

Reply.

THis whole Reason as it is propounded makes only against it self; who ever thought that the Seals of the Covenant were not proper to confederates or the Church of God? But of old all visible Believers under the Covenant of Grace walking in holiness, were of the visible Church, and in Church Order according to the dispensation of those times, though not joined in external society with the Family of Abraham. And to exclude Melchizedek or Job, because they were not members of the visible Church, when yet they were visible Believers under the Covenant of Grace, and in Church Order as those times required, is well-nigh a contradiction, And so it is to debar known and approved Christians members of our Congregation, and their seed from the Seals, because they be not of the visible Church, for they are members of the Church, and so to be held and esteemed all true Churches and members of the Church, The true & proper meaning of this Consideration, is that as Circumcision and the Passover were not to be dispensed to all visible Believers under the Covenant of Grace, but only to such as were joined to Abraham's Family, or to the people of the God of Abraham, no more may Baptism and the Lord's Supper be administered to any Believers now, unless they be joined to some particular Congregation in Church Membership, or unless by solemn Covenant, they be set members of some particular Assemblies.

The strength of this Consideration stands in the parity which is betwixt the Sacraments of the Old and New Testament, Circumcision and Baptism, for parum par est ratio, but this parity is not found in everything (as is manifest by the particulars alleged in the Consideration itself.) And we must justly require some reason to prove them like in that particular, but to unfold it more fully, we will consider three things. First, how far an argument may be drawn soundly from one Sacrament to another, or wherein the Sacraments agree, and wherein they differ. Secondly, What we are to think of the proposition itself. Thirdly, whether the Reason of Circumcision and Baptism be one in that particular.

First the Sacraments of the Old Testament and the new agree in their Common author, nature and end, and therefore what is spoken of one in respect of the common author, nature and end that doth hold true of everyone. If Circumcision be of divine institution a seal of the Righteousness of faith, and of the Covenant of grace, a Sacrament in general is an ordinance divine, a seal of the Covenant proper and peculiar to them that be confederates. But what is peculiar to one Sacrament that agreeth not to another. What is proper to the sacraments of the old Testament, in respect of the manner of dispensation that agreeth not to the new, as if the Sacraments of the Old Testament be with blood, obscure in signification, painful or use, peculiar to one Nation, and to be abolished, the Sacraments of the New Testament must be without blood, clear for signification, easy for use, universal to all Nations, and perpetual to continue in the Church forever.

Circumcision and Baptism are both Sacraments of divine institution, and so they agree in the substance of the things signified, the persons to whom they are to be administered, and the order of administration, if the right proportion be observed. As circumcision sealed the entrance into the covenant the righteousness of faith, and circumcision of the heart: so doth Baptism much more clearly: As Abraham and his household, and the infants of believing Jews were to be circumcised, so the faithful, their families, and their seed are to be baptized. None must eat the passover who was not circumcised, women excepted, who were circumcised in the males. Nor may a man unbaptized be admitted to the Lord's supper. Circumcision was but once applied by God's appointment and the same holds in baptism according to the will and good pleasure of God: But circumcision and baptism agree not in their special form, and manner of dispensation appointed of God. And in these things a reason cannot be drawn from the one to the other affirmatively. The males only were to be circumcised as only capable of that sign: but males and females both ought to be baptized. The infants males were to be circumcised the eighth day because seven days they were legally unclean. But the seed of the faithful are not to be reputed unclean. Ergo, no set time is appointed for baptism. Circumcision as other Ceremonies did distinguish the Jews from the Gentiles; but Christ now of two hath made one. Circumcision signified Christ to come, Baptism is the seal of the New covenant made in Christ already come. And so in the degree of grace given, some difference may be put: The other differences alleged in the considerations with the reasons thereof are not so clear and undoubted: for Baptism is not tied to the first day of the week: and the Jews might gather an Assembly on the eighth day as occasion required, and it might be appropriated to the Priests and Levites though done in private: But in whatsoever they agree or differ we must looke to the institution and neither stretch it wider, nor draw it narrower then the Lord hath made it. For he is the Institutor of the Sacraments according to his own good pleasure. And it is our part to learn of him, both to whom, how, and for what end the Sacraments are to be administered, how they agree, and wherein they differ. In all which we must affirm nothing but what God hath taught us, and as he hath taught us.

Secondly, as for the Proposition it self; certain it is, Circumcision and the Passover were to be administered only to the visible members of the Church, i. e. to men in Covenant, professing the true faith; But that in Abraham's time none were visible members of the Church, which joined not themselves in Church orders to the family of Abraham, we have not learned. In the first Institution of Circumcision, we find that God gave it to Abraham, as the Seal of the Covenant formerly made with him: But of any Church covenant or order whereunto Abraham's family should enter before Circumcision we read not. Melchizedek, Lot, Job, &c. were not only visible Believers under the Covenant of grace, but visible members of the Church, according to the order and dispensation of those times. We read not (you say) that Melchizedek, Lot or Job were circumcised, but that is no good reason to infer negatively that they were not Circumcised. We read not that John the Baptist, or the Apostles, or the 500. brethren were Baptized, we must not forthwith conclude, that they were not initiated by that seal. Moreover, if they were not Circumcised, it may be the Institution of that Sacrament was not known unto them, or the Author of Circumcision (upon whose will and pleasure they must depend) did not command it unto them, or require that they should join themselves in Covenant with Abraham's family: and in that case if they had Circumcised themselves they had transgressed. But then the reason why they were not circumcised was not this, that they were not (as you speak) in Church order: but because Circumcision was appropriated to Abraham's family by divine Institution in some special and peculiar respects belonging to the manner of Administration. After the Church of the Jews was constituted (when we can no more imagine that there was a Church among the Gentiles, then that there are Christians among the Barbarians at this day) we find none must be admitted to the Passover that was not first Circumcised, but nothing was required of a stranger to circumcision, but that he profess the true faith, and a vouch the God of Abraham to be his God, which of necessity must be done before he could be reputed a visible Believer, or under the Covenant of promise.

Thus a learned and reverend divine, Circumcision was a seal of the covenant, that God made with Abraham concerning Christ that should come as concerning the flesh of Isaac and so of Jacob of whom were the 12 tribes who were the Israelites, &c. Rom. 9. 4. 5. So that as in Abraham's time none were bound to be Circumcised but those that were of his family as being borne there or bought, and so brought thither which were not of his seed: So afterwards none were bound to be Circumcised which were not borne in the family of Jacob and Patriarchs, or joined to them. And after their coming out of Egypt none were bound to be Circumcised but the children of the Jews (then the only Church of God,) and those that desired to join unto them. The sum is thus much, God gave circumcision to Abraham as a seal of the Covenant but whether it was given to other believers in his time it is (at least) a thing uncertain. And if they were not Circumcised it was by reason of the special Institution of God, and peculiar manner of administration of the Covenant of promise which in some respect was proper, to the family of Abraham, and not common to all the visible members of the Church at that time in Church fellowship and order. Afterwards when there were none in covenant but the seed of Jacob or strangers professing the faith of Abraham, circumcision was not to be administered to any man who was not in Covenant nor any man to be admitted to the Passover who was not circumcised. This is the most that can be said with any probability: But hence it will not follow by just analogy or proportion, that the seed of the faithful must not be admitted to Baptism, or visible believers be received to the Lord's Supper unless they be set members of some particular congregation united in Church order. Thirdly, presupposing therefore that Melchizedek, Lot and Job, were not Circumcised, we say there is not the like reason of Circumcision and Baptism in this particular. For, first if Circumcision was ever appropriated to the family of Abraham, and might be communicated to other visible Believers, it was in the first Institution and administration; but in the first Institution and administration of Baptism, it was not observed that believers should be first gathered into a political body or Christian church membership, and then baptized. John the Baptist baptized such as came to him confessing their sins. The Apostles baptized Disciples, such as gladly received their doctrine, believed in Jesus Christ, and received the gifts of the holy Ghost, before they were gathered into Christian Church order, or made fit members of a Christian congregational Assembly.

2 If Circumcision was by special Institution given as a privilege to the Males of Abraham's Family, Melchizedek, Job, Lot, and other visible Believers were not bound to join themselves as members to Abraham's family, or desire and seek to be circumcised: But they that have received the doctrine of salvation, believe Christ, and profess the faith, are bound to seek, and desire the privilege of the seals in an holy manner.

3. Melchizedek, Job, and Lot were not only visible believers, but visible members of the Church, according to the manner of dispensing in those times: but the Seals (as you confess) belong to all believers knit together in Church-Covenant.

4. If circumcision be appropriated to the family of Abraham, it is because the Covenant sealed by circumcision is peculiar to Abraham's posterity, (sc.) that Christ should come as concerning the flesh, of Isaac. But Baptism is the seal of the Covenant of grace without any peculiar or special tie or respect.

5. You contend, that Baptism did belong to such believers as were members of the then Jewish Church, which cannot stand, if Abraham's family did answer to a Christian society or congregational Assembly; Just reason therefore may be given why circumcision was dispensed only to the males of Abraham's family, when baptism is not to be limited only to the set members of a particular society; and if this consideration be applied to the purpose, instead of saying, Circumcision and the Passover were to be administered only to the members of the Church, you must say Circumcision was to be desired of or administered unto all the true approved visible members of the Church. And if there be the same reason of both, then all visible approved members of the Church must not desire nor be admitted to the seals, but this conclusion you will not acknowledge.

Answ. 4. Consideration.

They that are not capable of the Church censures, are not capable of the Church privileges. but they that are not within Church-Covenant are not capable of Church censures. Ergo. The proposition is evident, The Assumption may be proved, 1 Corinth. 5. 12. What have I to do to judge them that are without. Now to be without is not only the case of Heathens and Excommunicates, but of some believers also, who though by external union with Christ they are within the Covenant of grace, yet being not joined externally to the visible body of Christ (a particular Church) are in regard of visible Church communion said to be without. To this purpose is this text alleged by other Divines also, as Dr. Ames Cas. of consci. l. 4. c. 24. q. 1. resp. 5.

Reply.

First, men are capable of Church censures in two respects, either in having the power of the keys, and authority to dispense them according to God, or as subject to the censures of the Church. In the first sense, many are capable of Church privileges that are not capable of Church censures, as the seed of Christian parents, children and women. You say you admit to the seals the known and approved, and orderly recommended members of any true Church: but to fellowship in the censures, admittance of members, and choice of Officers only, the members of that particular Church whereof they and we (any of us) stand members. In the second sense also many are capable of Church privileges who are not subject to Church censures: as the children of Christian parents are capable of baptism, the known and approved members of any true Church are capable of the Seals in other Congregations among you who are not subject to the censures of that other Society. Spiritual communion in public prayer is a Church privilege, which is not denied to visible believers and godly persons, though not in Church order, and so not in subjection in your sense to Church censures.

Secondly, a person baptized is not baptized in that particular congregation only, but into all Churches, and every particular Church where he cometh he hath all the privileges of a baptized person in respect of his baptism, and is so to be esteemed by them. Now the privilege of a baptized person who is able to examine himself, and walketh in the truth, is to be admitted to the Lord's Supper. All circumcised persons had right thereby to eat the Passover in any society, in the place which God should choose to put his Name there. Exod. 12. 4. 47. Deut. 16. 1, 2. So all baptized persons have true and entire right to the Lord's Supper in every true Church where God hath set his Name.

Thirdly, there is not the same reason of every Church privilege, for one may have right to some, who is not to meddle with others. The members of one society may hear the Word, join in Prayer, and receive the Sacraments in another, when they are not to meddle in the election and ordination of their teachers. The Ministers of the Gospel may preach the Word, and administer the Sacraments in another congregation, and hereto he needs no other calling but that God offers an opportunity; there is much need of his help, and he is entreated, or hath leave from them in place or office; but he is not to admit members into the society, or cast them out that be admitted. And if the Pastor of one Church shall preach or administer the Sacraments in another, contrary to the liking and approbation of the Society and Governors, though the act be irregular, it was never esteemed a nullity; but if he shall presume to excommunicate the members of another society, without the consent of the Church, and approbation of Pastors and Teachers, under whose charge and jurisdiction they live, it hath been judged a mere nullity. Therefore the proposition is not so evident as to be taken without proof, that they have no power to admit a believer into communion in any Church privilege who have no power to excommunicate.

Fourthly, that visible believers baptized into a true Church professing the true faith, and walking in holy obedience, and godly conversation, that they and their seed should be judged such as are without in the Apostles sense, because they be not externally joined as set members to some particular congregation in Church-Covenant is affirmed, not proved.

1. It hath, and may fall out many times through the ignorance, rashness, or pride of a prevailing faction in the Church, that the true members of the Catholic Church, and the best members of the orthodox visible flock, or congregation of Christ may be no members of any distinct visible society. And shall their posterity be esteemed Aliens and Strangers from the Covenant, and debarred from the Sacraments, because their parents are unjustly separated from the inheritance of the Lord? Surely as parents unjustly excommunicated do continue still not only true members of the invisible body; but visible members of the flock of Christ: so the right of Baptism doth belong to the Infants of such parents, though not actual and constant members of this or that present assembly in Church order.

2. If they be without, because no members of a politic body or spiritual fellowship: then all members which are of one society are without to another: For they that be not of the body are not capable of Church censures, or subject to the authority one of another. And so not being under the judgment of that particular Church to it they are without; whereas in ancient and moderne times distinct Societies did communicate together, admit and receive each other as brethren, to testify their fellowship in the faith. If the reason whereupon the Apostle saith the Church of Corinth was not to judge them that were without, was because they were not within the Church of Corinth, and so not under their censure or judgment: this holds true of them that be of another society admitted to the Sacrament, as well as of such as be no set members desiring to be received to the Lord's Supper.

3. (The fornicators of this world) do they not explain whom the Apostle pointeth unto by the title of being without, ver. 10. 11. such as had not received the covenant of grace.

4. Church order is necessary we deny not; but this order that a man should be a constant and set member of a particular society by covenant, to make him a true member of the visible Church, or to give him title or interest to the public order, this is not taught of God.

5. Paul divides all men into two ranks, the first and greater without; the last and lesser within: but that believers who have received the holy Ghost, and have been baptized into Jesus Christ, that they and their children should be reckoned among them that are without, that we read not in this nor any other Scripture, but in phrase of Scripture heretics themselves are within the Church.

6. The believers not yet gathered (as the godly learned think) into a certain distinct body are called believers, brethren, disciples; but that they should be comprehended under them that are without, it hath not been believed in the Church.

7. Without (saith the Apostle whether alluding to this place or not, let others judge) are dogs, enchanters, whoremongers, not such as are called faithful and holy, walking in integrity, believing in and professing Jesus Christ to be their Savior.

8. They that are without in the Apostles sense are Aliens from the Commonwealth of Israel, strangers from the covenant of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: but we hope you will not pass such rash and unadvised censure upon your brethren, who be not gathered into your society as set members.

9. Let the interpretation stand, and he is without, not only who is no set member of some congregational Assembly, but he that is not subject to the censure of the community of that particular combination few or many, with, or without Officers. And so all the reformed Churches in the world who ascribe the power of the keys to the Presbitry or Classes, and not to the community, and some amongst yourselves (if not the most) shall be without also.

And therefore we cannot think approved Christians desiring to be received unto the Sacrament, either to be without, or incapable of Church censures for the time being if they should offend, though not set members of any particular congregation: for desiring baptism for their children or themselves to be admitted to the Lord's Supper for the time they put themselves under the ordinance of Jesus Christ there. And as they are members for the time, so they might be proceeded against according to the rule prescribed by our Savior, as they would proceed with an offending member.

10. If upon just and good reason a passage of Scripture can be cleared to prove that for which it was never alleged by any writer, we are not to except against any truth of God, because it wanteth man's testimony. Only if we desire credit in such cases, our reasons must be weighty and convincing. But for your exposition of this text of Scripture, as yet we have not observed one substantial ground, or approved author to be alleged. Doctor Ames showing the necessity of Christians joining themselves to some particular Church, giveth this reason, Quoniam alias fieri non potest quod conturbentur signa illa quibus fideles ab infidelibus discerni possunt. 1. Cor. 5. 12. But herein Dr. Ames manifestly showeth that by them that are [without] heathens, and unbelievers must be understood, and not believers and godly men though of no particular settled society for the time, for thus we conceive he argueth. The signs and evidences whereby the faithful are to be discerned from unbelievers, must not be confounded: but unless Christians make themselves actual members of a Society or Church, the signs whereby the faithful are discerned from unbelievers, will be obscured and darkened. And if this be his reason how can that text of Scripture be alleged for confirmation, unless by [men without] Infidels be understood. Again Doctor Ames in the same book, lib. 4. ca. 27. speaking of Infants to be received, it is required (he saith) that they be in the covenant of grace in respect of outward profession, and estimation in respect of their parents, and that there is hope they shall be instructed and brought up in the same covenant. 2. That Baptism doth most properly belong to those infants whose parents, at least one of them is in the Church, and not without, because baptism is a sign and seal of the covenant of grace. 3. That children that are cast forth are in charity to be esteemed the children of Christian parents, when there is no just cause of presuming the contrary, that in admitting unto baptism a difference must be put between the Infants of those who in some sort belong to the Church, but openly break the covenant of God, and the children of others.

1. Because a distinction must be observed in holy things between the clean and unclean; seeing else the ordinance of God cannot be preserved from all pollution. To say nothing of that which he addeth touching the baptism of Infants borne in fornication, excommunication, and Papists, which is more then sufficient to clear his meaning in the former passage. To this may be added that he holdeth it not necessary that Christians should gather themselves into a particular society, but as opportunity and occasion should offer itself. So that it was never his mind to censure them who be not gathered into Church-Covenant, because they want means or opportunity as men without in the Apostles sense.

His judgment is further manifested in his second Manuduction, pa. 33. So many parish Assemblies of England (saith he) as have any competent number of good Christians in them, united to worship God ordinarily in one Society, so many have the essence and integral form of a visible Church, and all they have entire right to Christ, and to all the means of enjoying him, how ever they are defective in the purity of their combination, and in the complete free exercising of their power, whereupon a reverend Elder now among you draws this conclusion, Ergo to dischurch them wholly, and to separate from them as no Churches of Christ, or to deny baptism to the Infants of their known members is not warrantable by any rule of Scripture that I know, nor justified by any assertion or practice.

Answ. 5. Consideration.

WE may add hereunto for a fifth Consideration, the evil and pernicious consequences of extending communion in Church privileges beyond the bounds of Church fellowship: for thus, 1. The extraordinary office of the Apostles, and the ordinary office of Pastors and Teachers will be much confounded, if the latter be as illimited as the former in the execution of their office beyond the bounds of their own particular Churches. 2. The distinction of Church assemblies from the confused multitude is abrogated, if without membership in a particular Church the parents may communicate with the Churches in the Lord's Supper, and their seed in baptism. 3. The Church shall endanger the profaning of the seals, and want one special means whereby the grace and piety of men may be discerned and made known; for if without respect to their Church estate men of approved piety (as you say) are to be admitted to fellowship in the seals, how shall their piety be approved to the Church not by their own report of themselves alone without attestation of such as are approved by the Church; and how can such bear witness to their approved piety, who against light refuse to profess subjection to the Gospel of Christ by orderly joining themselves in fellowship with some approved Church of Christ as members thereof when they have opportunity thereunto, seeing such fellow-ship is an action of piety required of all believers in the second Commandment; and true piety frameth men's spirits to have respect to all God's Commandments. And we have had much experience of it, that men of approved piety in the judgment of some have been found too light, not only in the judgment of others, but even of their own consciences, when they have come to trial in offering themselves to be members of Churches, with such a blessing hath God followed this order of taking hold of Church-Covenant by public profession of faith and repentance before men be admitted to the seals; but this means of discovery of men's piety and sincerity would be utterly lost, if men should be admitted unto the Lord's table without entering in Church-fellowship.

Reply.

IF it be repugnant to Divine Institution to admit of approved Christians lawfully baptized, walking in the faith, members of the visible Churches, and partakers of Church privileges among us to the Lord's Supper, or their children to baptism, because they be not entered into Church fellowship according to your order, then it is unlawful though no such evil consequences are to be feared.

But if by accident some abuse should fall out, the evil is to be prevented by all lawful means: but the faithful are not utterly to be debarred of the order of God, whereto they have right and title by his free grant and gracious invitation. And no question but the seals of the Covenant may be profaned many times when it is not in the power of the dispensers to put back or expel such as profane them. If the Congregation shall admit of, or tolerate an unworthy member, the Churches privileges are profaned; and yet we conceive you will say the Pastor is not faulty in receiving him, when the Church doth tolerate unworthily, if he do what pertaineth to his office to keep the holy things of God from contempt. But in the case propounded there is no fear or danger of such consequences necessary to follow: for the question is not of all sorts at randame, but of Christians professing the faith entirely, lawfully baptized, known, and approved to the consciences of the wise and judicious visible members of the Churches of Christ among us often admitted to the Lord's Table, whether these either sufficiently known unto you, or orderly recommended may upon desire and suite themselves be admitted to communicate in the Lord's Supper, and their children to be baptized, what fear is there now that the extraordinary office of the Apostles, and the ordinary office of Pastors and Teachers shall be much or little confounded? Is this to take as illimited power as the Apostles did in the execution of their office? How shall this tend to abrogate the distinction of Church Assemblies from the confused multitude? or how is the profanation of the seals thereby endangered?

You ask if without respect to their Church estate men of approved piety (as we say) are to be admitted into fellowship in the seals, how shall their piety be approved to the Church, not by their own report of themselves alone, &c. Do not you say the same, That there be many godly persons, and of approved piety among us, who are not approved by their own report of themselves (unless ye will take their wisdom, faith, patience, courage, constancy, and holiness of life for their report) approved, we say by as ample and sufficient testimony as the Apostles exacted of them whom they received into Church fellowship, or can be required of members admitted unto the privileges of the Church, if men will follow the Lord's direction, or as you can give to ordinances members of your societies. You profess high respect of your brethren in old England, but it seems you judge them insufficient to give orderly testimony of the sincerity and uprightness of approved Christians, well known unto them, and living among them, which two cannot well agree. We speak not of such who against light refuse to profess subjection to the Gospel of Christ to join themselves orderly in fellowship with some approved Church: But of such as do with all readiness profess subjection, and walk accordingly, and heartily desire to join themselves to the most pure and complete Churches so far as they are taught of God, or have opportunity thereunto. And if exception be taken against them only, who refuse against light to submit themselves to the Gospel; by what rule do you proceed when you judge men to refuse against light, or debar them who do not refuse against conscience, but for lack of opportunity. No doubt (as you say) but now and then a man of approved piety in the judgment of some may be found too light, yea and in the judgment of his own conscience when he hath come to trial. And no question but many have been admitted by the Church, who indeed and truth are much too light; and some refused who deserved better then they that cast them off, we will not dispute what errors have been committed, nor what blessing ye have found upon your proceedings; we heartily beseech the Lord to keep your congregation pure, make his ordinances more and more effectual, go before you in the way wherein you should walk, and multiply his mercies upon you in the same. But this we are persuaded, and therefore we speak, that in debarring godly Christians from the Lord's Supper, and much more the children of those parents who are in covenant with God, from holy baptism you exceed your commission you have received from God, and go beyond your due bounds. And notwithstanding your circumspection more worthy and faithful Christians have been denied when of less worth, and meaner sufficiencies have passed, and been by you received.

Answ. 6. Consid.

NOne have power to dispence the Seals but they that are called to the office of Ministry; and no man can be so called till first there be a Church to call him, seeing the power of calling Ministers is given by Christ unto the Church; and thence it follows, that all those that desire to partake of the Seals, are bound to join themselves in Church state, that so they may call a Minister to dispense the Seals unto them. And this duty by the appointment of God lieth not only upon some Christians, but equally upon all: ergo no Christian can expect by the appointment of God to partake in the Seals till he have joined himself in Church fellowship, and in the call of the Minister. And indeed seeing a Church, and a Minister called by the Church, is of such necessity for the dispensing of the seals, it may seem unreasonable that some Christians should be bound to become a Church, and to call a Minister that so the seals may be dispensed, and other men (when this is done) have equal liberty to the seals who refuse to join unto the Church.

Reply.

THIS conclusion is not to the question propounded, for we speak of such as cannot, not of such as refuse to join themselves unto the Church; or if they do not join, it is not out of contempt or willful neglect of God's ordinance, or desire of carnal liberty, and not to be in subjection to Christ, but for lack of opportunity, or through their fault that should admit them but do not. For if in any of your Churches you shall require more of members to be admitted than Christ the chief Shepherd of the flock doth, or press that upon their consciences which they cannot consent unto, if they shall sit down quietly for the time and serve God in private, when they cannot enjoy Church privileges, it is your fault and not theirs. And they may more justly challenge the Assemblie as injurious and tyrannical, then you them as willful despisers of God's ordinance. We accuse not the wisdom and discretion of your Churches, but we know the zealous multitude may sometimes be rash; And when a reason is craved of your judgment, why you do debar the most known and approved Christians which come over, and their children from the seals of the covenant, we dislike you should put this note upon them, as if against light they refused orderly to subject themselves to the Gospel of Jesus Christ: What warrant you have thus to censure, what use of this manner of dispute we leave it to your godly wisdom to judge. In the Consideration itself there are many Propositions couched together, which we must examine severally as they have reference to the conclusion intended, and then try whether it can be raised from them.

The first Proposition, That none have power to dispence the Seals, but they that are called to the office of Ministry, is freely granted.

The second, That no man can be so called till first there be a Church to call him, needeth explication. For by the Church you must understand the community of the faithful, as they are one body, without officers or guides. And such a Church there cannot be without a Ministry to call and admit them into Church-fellowship. The Apostles baptized not themselves, but by the help of others, & those not called of the people to be baptized, 1 Cor. 1. 17. The Apostles appointed by electiō, Elders in every city or Church. And so there was a Church before Elders were set over it, but this Church was a society of believers by baptism admitted into Church-fellowship. There can be no Church to call a Minister to feed the flock, and dispence the seals, till they have received the doctrine of salvation entirely, and by the seal of initiation be solemnly received into the society of men professing Christ. A company of men converted to the faith being unbaptized, may and ought to desire baptism, but they have not power to elect and choose one among themselves to dispence the seals unto the rest for ought is to be found in Scripture: The Churches constitution into which Christians are to gather themselves must be Apostolical, and not one day or hour younger in nature and form of it, thus the first Church of the New Testament. But it can never be shown in Scripture that any society of unbaptized persons did first choose from among them a Pastor or Teacher by whom they might be baptized: you cannot produce one example or other proof in the Scripture, of one man teaching the Gospel ministerially but he was baptized, and a member of a true Church, or of a society who made choice of a Pastor and teacher, but they were baptized persons.

The third Proposition, That the power of calling Ministers is given by Christ unto the Church, must also be rightly understood: For by the Church must be meant the society of the faithful, not only engrafted into Christ, set into the state of salvation, and made heirs apparent of everlasting blessedness, but solemnly entered and enrolled into the society of Christ's flock, and acknowledged members by free admission into the Seals of the Covenant. Again, by the Church if we speak of ordinary calling, must not be understood of the faithful alone, but their guides and officers together with them, who are to go before the rest, and to direct and govern them in their choice. Neither can we say, that any two or three believers linked together in society do make such a Church, as to whom the calling of the Minister doth belong: but that right was given by Christ to such Churches as were gathered and established by the Apostles. The Church hath a Ministry of calling one whom Christ hath described, that from Christ he may have power of Office given him in the vacant place. But the office, gift, and power of the Ministry, is immediately from Christ and not from the Church. The Church doth neither virtually nor formally give power to her Officers but ministerially only, as ministering to him who hath power and virtue to confer it. And this right of election is so given to the community and body of the people, that if they have consented to give away their right, or if it be taken injuriously from them, the calling of the Minister notwithstanding may be true, and ministerial acts done by him that is thrust upon the people without their consent may be effectual to their salvation. A wrong it is altogether to debar the godly of their consent in the calling of such as must watch for their souls; but it makes not the calling it self a mere nullity; for then many Churches in the world within a few hundred years after Christ should have wanted both ministry and Sacraments, and they would have been altogether destitute of both ministry and Sacraments for many hundred years.

The fourth, That all those who desire to partake in the Seals, are bound to join themselves together in Church-state, that so they may call a Minister to dispence the Seals unto them, will not follow from the former rightly understood. We deny not but Christians are bound to join themselves together in holy fellowship, if God give them opportunity: but they must partake in the Seals before they can join themselves together in Church-state. And such as for lack of means and opportunity cannot join themselves into such an estate, or be dispersed by persecution, or be destitute of Pastors and Teachers, may for a time desire and seek to have the seals dispensed unto them by the Pastors and Teachers of other Societies, with whom they hold communion in the faith. The people also who are deprived of right and liberty to choose their Pastor, may desire and seek to have the Seals dispensed unto them by him who is set over them. If a company of Infidels should be converted to the faith, they must desire to partake in the ordinances of grace before they could join together in a Church-way to call a Minister of their own, who might administer the Sacraments unto them. To make Disciples and baptize are joined together. And if these Propositions be allowed for current, a nation or people plunged into Idolatry or Infidelity, or otherwise dischurched, cannot by ordinary means recover into a Church-estate, wherein they may lawfully and according to God's appointment desire or expect that the Seals of the Covenant should be dispensed to them.

The fifth Proposition riseth beyond measure, that no Christian can expect by the appointment of God to partake in the Seals till he have joined himself in Church-fellowship and the calling of the Minister. We conceive you will not say that children and women have to do in the call of the Minister (for women they are debarred by their sex as from ordinary Prophesying, so from any other dealing wherein they take authority over the man) If some part of the Congregation do not consent in the election of Pastors or Teachers, have they not right to expect to have the Seals of the Covenant dispensed to themselves or their seed? If the people be deprived of that liberty to choose or call their Minister, must they separate from the ordinances of worship there dispensed, and from the Congregations as no true Churches? If some persons by the providence of God live in such places where they cannot join in Church-fellowship and call of the Minister (as suppose the Christian wife, child, or servant) nor lawfully remove to any such Society must they and their children live as strangers and aliens from the Covenant of grace, wherein they may not expect to partake of the Seals▪ If Infidels be converted to the faith, must they not partake in the Seals, because they cannot join in Church-fellowship and call of the Minister, before they be admitted to Baptism?

Here you say the people must join together in the call of the Minister, before they can lawfully desire to be admitted to the Seals. And another hath zealously affirmed (It is a presumptuous sin in any to choose an Officer not trained up and tried (scil.) in the debating, discussing, carrying, and contriving of Church-affairs, as also in admonition, exhortation, and comfort, publicly occasioned and so manifested) Lay these two together, and let it be considered how long many a poor soul converted to the faith must be compelled to want the comfort of God's ordinances. Besides, if a people be joined together in Church-fellowship, and have called a Pastor to feed and watch over them, we desire (not words but) proof why the poor dispersed Christians wanting means or opportunity to join themselves together into society, ought not to desire, and that others be not bound in conscience to afford them the comfort of God's ordinances.

If the Propositions may stand for good, I fear we shall scarce find that ever in ordinary way, the Sacraments were lawfully dispensed or received in the Christian Churches of God since the first foundation of them. Now the premises being liable to so many exceptions, the conclusion to be laid upon them, will fall of it self. And thereunto we oppose the direct contrary. That Infidels converted to the faith, or godly Christians, formerly visible believers, known and approved members of Congregations professing the entire faith, and joining together in the lawful use of the Sacraments for substance according to the Institution, may and ought to desire and expect the Seals of the Covenant to be dispensed to them, and to their seed, though for the present they be not joined into such Church-state and call of Ministers as you require.

Answer 7. Consideration.

THat our practice may not be censured as novel and singular, give us leave to produce a President of the like care observed and approved by public countenance of State in the days of Edward 6. of blessed and famous memory, who in the year 1550. granted Johannes Alasco a learned Noble man of Poland under the great Seal of England, liberty to gather a Church of strangers in London, and to order themselves according as they should find to be most agreeable to the Scriptures. Among other godly orders established in that Church, that which concerned the Administration of Baptism to prevent the profanation of it we will repeat in Alascoes own words. Baptism in our Church (saith he) is administered in the public Assembly of the Church after the public Sermon: for seeing Baptism doth so belong to the whole Church that none ought to be driven thence, which is a member of the Church, nor to be admitted to it who is not a member of it, truly it is equal that that should be performed publicly in the Assembly of the whole Church, which belongs to the whole Church in common. Again, he addeth; Now seeing our Churches are by God's blessing so established by the Kings Majesty, that they may be as it were one parish of strangers dispersed throughout the whole City, or one body corporate (as it is called in the Kings grant) and yet all strangers do not join themselves to our Church, yea there are those who while they avoid all Churches, will pretend to the English Churches that they are joined with us, and to us that they are joined to the English Churches, and so do abuse both them and us, lest the English Churches and the Ministers thereof should be deceived by the impostures of such men (and that under color of our Churches) we do baptize their Infants alone who have adjoined themselves to our Churches by public confession of their faith, and observation of Ecclesiastical discipline. And that our Churches may be certain that the Infants that are to be baptized are their seed, who have joined themselves thereto in manner aforesaid, the father of the Infant to be baptized (it possible he can) or other men and women of notable credit in the Church, do offer the Infant to Baptism, and do publicly profess that it is the seed of the Church, yet we suffer no stranger to offer Infants to Baptism in our Churches, who hath not made public profession of his faith, and willingly submitted himself to the Discipline of the Church, lest otherwise they who present their children to Baptism, might in time plead that they belong to our Churches, and so should deceive the English Churches and their Ministers. To those which presented Infants to Baptism, they propounded three questions, the first was; Are these Infants which ye offer the seed of this Church, that they may lawfully be here baptized by our Ministry? &c. Answer, Yea. This Instance is the more to be regarded, because Alasco affirmeth in the preface of that Book, that this liberty was by the King granted to them out of his desire to settle alike reformation in the English Churches, which in effect you see the same with our practice in this particular.

Reply.

The practice of the Church of strangers in London, recorded by John Alasco, is far different from your judgment and practice, not in some by-circumstances, but in the main point in question; for your judgment is that true visible believers, baptized and partakers of the Lord's Supper in other Churches not yet gathered into Church-estate or fellowship, have no right or interest in the Seals, (they nor their seed) But this Church of strangers held no such opinion as their own words (which you have omitted) do plainly speak. And Paul testifieth (say they) that by Christ's Ordinance the Church it self without exception of any member of it, is to be accounted clean or holy by the ministry of Baptism. Whence we may easily see, that Baptism doth neither belong to those who are altogether without the Church, nor to be denied to any member of the Church. Secondly, They held communion with the Church of England as one and the same with theirs. For so they profess: Yet nevertheless, that we may openly show that the English Churches and ours are one and the same Church (though we differ somewhat from them both in language and Ceremonies) We do not refuse that the English may as public witnesses of the Church offer the Infants of our members to Baptism in our Churches, if they have both the use of our language and a certain testimony of their piety. As in like manner our members are accustomed to offer the Infants of the English to Baptism in the English Churches. If your judgment be this of the English Churches, your judgment in acknowledging us members of true Churches, and practice in debarring visible believers and their seed from the Seals, are opposite the one to the other. Thirdly, This order was observed by them to prevent the impostures of some, who whilst they avoided all Churches, pretended to the English, that they were joined to the strangers, and to the strangers that they were joined to the English. But you debar known Christians who desire to join themselves with you, not to prevent impostures of them who avoid all Churches: yea, you debar them as men having no right to the Sacraments, because they be not in Church-fellowship: and herein you can show no president ancient or moderne, either from Scripture or Monuments of the Church: And as your practice is without example, so without warrant from the word of God. And this is the main reason why we cannot consent unto you in this particular which we thus propound.

1 Reason.

THat sacred order which God hath set in his visible Church for all his Saints to keep and walk by, that is religiously to be observed. But for men to set up that as a necessary order which God never allowed, approved, or commanded, is great presumption. Now the Lord hath not ordained that a man should be a set member of a particular Society, or body politique of faithful people joined together in spiritual Church-fellowship by Covenant, before he be admitted unto the Lord's Supper, or that the parents should be actual visible set members of some particular distinct body before their children be baptized. They that believe in Jesus Christ have received the word of promise and walk therein, they and their children are within the Covenant, and have right and title to the Seals of the Covenant, but in their order, the infants to baptism, parents baptized, to the Lord's Supper. And if in that state by divine grant they have interest to the Sacraments, the Church in debarring them because they be not yet grown into one distinct separate society of mutual covenant, doth exceed the bounds of her commission. For a ministerial power only is committed to the Church to admit or refuse them who are to be admitted or refused by authority from God: But the Church if she thrust believing parents from the Supper of the Lord, and their seed from baptism; she denieth these benefits to them who by the grace and gift of God have lawful right and title thereto.

1. For first, the baptism of John was true baptism, and truly administered by him: And they that were baptized by him received the seals of the Covenant, and were esteemed members of the visible Church: But John never demanded of them who came to his baptism whether they were entered into spiritual fellowship by mutual covenant one with another. This was not then known to be a necessary and essential point in the lawful, due, and orderly administration of the Sacrament. The disciples of our Savior made and baptized disciples professing the faith, but not combined into Church-state or fellowship. The Apostles commission was first to teach the Gentiles, and then to baptize them having received their doctrine. And this they carefully observed in the execution of their ministry upon grounds and reasons common to them and us: for as soon as any man or number of men gladly received the doctrine of salvation, and gave their names to Jesus Christ, if they desired to be baptized forthwith they accepted them, never excepting, that they were no set members of a distinct visible congregation. When the first 3000. converts, being pricked in their consciences, came to Peter, and the rest of the Apostles, saying. Men and brethren, what shall we do? Peter returns this answer, Repent and be baptized everyone of you in the Name of Jesus, &c. For to you is the promise made, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, &c. As soon as the Samaritans believed, Philip who preached the things that concerned the kingdom of God, they were baptized both men and women. When the Eunuch asked of Philip, See here is water, what doth let me to be baptized? he answereth not if thou beest first received as a set member into a visible congregation thou mayest: but if thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest. Can any man forbid water (saith Peter, speaking of the Gentiles upon whom was poured the gift of the holy Ghost) that these should not be baptized who have received the gift of the holy Ghost as well as we? At that time it was not held a bar sufficient to keep them from the Sacrament of baptism, because they were not set members of a distinct society, which had it been essential to the lawful and orderly administration of the Sacraments, questionless it had been observed in the first Institution and administration of them. Ananias baptized Paul before he was any set member of a congregational Assembly. Lydia and her household, the Jailor and his house were baptized without regard to their Church-estate. For in the same night which he was converted, he was baptized with all his household. And this was done not by the Apostles only upon special dispensation, but by others upon grounds and reasons common to them, and all ages, viz. because they were disciples, believed, gladly received the Word, had received the holy Ghost, were called, and the promise was made to them, and to their seed, even to all them that were afar off.

Now if the Apostles dispensed the seals to them that were not in Church-fellowship upon common grounds, it is not essential to the lawful dispensation of the seals, that all partakers should be under such a covenant. If the baptized disciples, believers, such as gladly received the Word, and had received the gift of the holy Ghost, then the seals of the Covenant belong unto such, and by the grace of God they have right and title unto those privileges.

2. As we received the Sacraments from God by divine Institution; so must we learn from him, how and to whom the same are to be administered, observing what he hath commanded without addition or diminution. But we have learned from Christ the Author of Baptism, and the constant practice of the Apostles (the first dispensers of these holy seals who best understood the mind and pleasure of the Lord herein) that such as be called of God to whom the promise is made, who have received the gifts of the holy Ghost, believed in the Lord Jesus, professed their faith in him, and repentance for sins past with purpose of amendment for the time to come, that such have right unto, and desiring it ought to be received unto Baptisme, and are greatly wronged if they be deprived of that unspeakable benefit.

3. By a lively faith a man is made a living member of Jesus Christ, and hath internal communion with him by the entire profession of Christian faith joined with conformity of life in righteousness, and holiness, and fellowship of love, he is a member of the visible congregation or flock of Christ, though no set member of a free distinct independent Society. And Baptism is the seal of our admission into the congregation or flock of Christ; but not evermore of our receiving into this or that particular society as set members thereof. This latter is accidental to baptism, not essential. It may fall out to be so, but it is not ever necessary; nor is the Sacrament to be denied, nor can we say it is imperfectly administered where it cannot be attained. For the Catholic Church is one entire body, made up by the collection and agregation of all the faithful unto the unity thereof; from which union there ariseth unto everyone of them such a relation to, dependence upon that Church Catholic as parts use to have in respect of the whole. And this holds true, not only of sound believers in respect of internal fellowship with Christ their head, and so one with another; but of all men professing the true and entire doctrine of faith and salvation in respect of them that hold and profess the same faith of Christ, and worship God according to his will; whereupon it followeth that neither particular persons, nor particular guides, nor particular Churches are to work as several divided bodies by themselves, but are to teach, and be taught; and to do all other duties as parts conjoined to the whole, and members of the same flock or society in general: And so believers professing the faith, and walking in holiness, may and ought to be admitted to the Seals as actual members of the Church of Christ, and sheep of his pasture, though not set members of one congregational Church.

4. Not to insist upon this here, that it hath and may fall out many times through ignorance, rathnesse, or pride, of a prevailing faction in the Church, that the true members of the Catholic Church, and the best members of the Orthodox visible flock, or Church of Christ, may be no actual members of any distinct Society, and shall they for this be accounted men out of Covenant, and their posterity be esteemed aliens and strangers: but if they be in Covenant, then are they holy in respect of the Covenant, and their children holy as pertaining to the Covenant, and have right to the Sacrament of initiation. Thus Mr. Rob. frameth the argument. The Sacrament of Baptism is to be administered by Christ's appointment, and the Apostles example only to such as are (externally, and so far as men can judge) taught and made disciples, do receive the Word gladly, do believe, and so profess, have received the holy Ghost, and to their seed. And thus the Church of God ever since the Apostles days understood the covenant and promise, and their practice in receiving believers and their seed to the Seals of the Covenant was answerable, as might be shown at large, if it was not a thing confessed. Hereunto you answer.

Answer.

Where the holy Ghost is given and received (which was the case of the Centurion) and where faith is professed according to God's ordinance (which was the case of the rest) there none may hinder them from being baptized, viz. by such as have power to baptize them. In the Instances given baptism was administered either by Apostles or Evangelists, not ordinary Pastors: the persons baptized, if they were members of Churches, had a right to baptism in their state, and the Apostles being Officers of all Churches might dispense the seals to them where ever they came, which yet will not warrant ordinary Officers to do the same. Nor is it improbable but that all these were in Church-order, Aret, on Act. 18. 1. is of opinion, that the Centurion had a constituted Church in his house; the Eunuchs coming to Jerusalem to worship, argueth him to be a Proselyte, and member of the Jewish Church not yet dissolved: and therefore upon the profession of the Christian faith capable of Church privileges at that time. As for Lydia and the Gaylor it appeareth that in the beginning of the Gospel there was a Church at Philipp which communicated with Paul as concerning giving and receiving: As he expressly saith, before his departure was from Macedonia, which departure was immediately upon the Gaylor's conversion. In which respect what should hinder that Lydia and the Gaylor should first be joined to the Church, and then to be baptized though it be not mentioned in that story? As neither there is mention of a Christian Church, which Paul mentioneth in his Epistle to the Philippians. At least it is probable that Lydia was a member of the Jewish Church, because she is said to be one that worshipped God. But if any man think they were not members of any Church yet baptized, though we see not how it will be proved, yet if it were so, the object doth no whit weaken the argument, which speaketh of the ordinary dispensation of the seals, and not of what was done in an extraordinary way. So that suppose that in the cases alleged, baptism dispensed to some that were not in Church-fellowship, yet the examples of the Apostles and Evangelists in so doing will not warrant ordinary Pastors to do the like. The reason of the difference why Apostles and Evangelists might administer Baptism out of Church-order, whereas Pastors and Teachers may not, is double. 1. Because their calling gave them illimited power over all men, especially Christians wheresoever they came. But we do not find that ordinary Pastors and Teachers can do an act of power, but only over their own Church, which hath called them to watch over them in the Lord. 2. Because they were assisted with an immediate direction and guidance of the holy Ghost, in the places of their administration in the cases alleged. But ordinary Church-Officers are to walk according to ordinary rules of the Scripture in the dispensation of the Seals, and not to expect immediate inspirations and extraordinary revelations for their help in such cases. This difference between Apostles and ordinary Church Officers must needs be acknowledged, or otherwise a man might from their example justify Baptism in private houses.

THis Answer stands of many parts, wherein things doubtful are affirmed, and that which more weakeneth the force of the consideration before alleged, and the Answer it self, then of the reason whereunto it is applied. For

First, If where the holy Ghost is given and received, and where faith is professed according to God's ordinance, there none may hinder them from being baptized, viz. by such as have power to baptize them: Then either men that have received the holy Ghost, and profess the faith, be members of the Church, or Baptism is not a privilege of the Church, then it is not essential to the first Institution of Baptism, that it should be dispensed to none but such as were entered into Church-fellowship, or were set members of a congregational Assembly. Then the Apostles in dispensing the Seals unto such, or commanding them to be dispensed, did walk according to the rules of Scripture, and upon grounds common to them and us, viz. they admitted them unto the Sacraments who had right and interest to them, according to the mind and pleasure of the Institutor, not extraordinarily revealed, besides the common rules, or by special dispensation and prerogative excepted from the common rule, but made known in the Institution it self. And then the difficulty remaining is only this, whether a Pastor or Teacher hath authority from Christ to dispence the Seals of the Covenant to one who hath right and title to them, and doth orderly desire that benefit because he is not as yet received as a set member of that particular society which your practice in admitting of set members of other Congregations unto the Seals doth manifestly convince. For if both have equal interest unto the Seals, the Pastor upon lawful suite and request hath equal authority to receive the one as well as the other.

Secondly, In the particular Instances given, it is not probable that Baptism was evermore administered by Apostles or Evangelists; For before the death of Christ, the Disciples baptized when they were properly neither Apostles nor Evangelists: After the death of Christ (not to insist upon conjectures whether any assisted the Apostles in the baptizing of the first three thousand converted) it is not certain, whether Peter baptized Cornelius and his family, or commanded others then present with him to baptize them: the words may be read: Et jussit eos baptizari in nomine Domini. Syr. & Arab. Praecepit eis ut baptizarentur. The Interlineary gloss leaveth it doubtful, Associis suis vel a scipso. Others are of opinion that Peter did baptize them himself. It cannot be proved that Philip and Ananias were both Evangelists, when the one baptized the Samaritans and the Eunuch, the other Paul. Paul himself baptized but a few as he testifieth of himself, and reason to convince that others converted by his preaching were baptized by Evangelists, we know not any. And if Philip, Ananias, and others might baptize such as had right and title to the Seals, being as yet no set members of any particular Congregation: and a Congregation destitute of their proper Pastor, may desire another to baptize their Infants, and dispence the Sacrament of the Supper to them in that their necessity. And if the members of one Congregation may lawfully communicate in another, then may the Pastors of particular Congregations upon occasion admit to the Seals of the Covenant such known and approved Christians, as have right and title thereunto, and duly and orderly require the same; for of all these the reason is like and perpetual.

Thirdly, It is very improbable that the persons baptized, were in Church-state or order. If they were members of the Jewish Church not yet dissolved, this is not to the purpose; for men have not right to Baptism, because they were members of the Jewish Church, but because Disciples and (as you say) joined together in Covenant, and have fellowship and calling of their Minister, who is to dispence the Seals unto them. And Baptism is the Sacrament of initiation, not into the Jewish but the Christian Churches. Secondly, when you say, the Seals in ordinary dispensation are the privileges of the Churches. There are no Ministers but of particular Churches. Baptism and the Lord's Supper are to be administered only to the members of the Church. No society may lawfully desire the Seals, unless they have joined in the choice and calling of their Minister. Believers not yet joined in Church-order are without. Do ye not in all these understand a Christian society, united in a Church-way, &c. which cannot agree to the members of the Jewish Church, not yet dissolved. Thirdly, The constitution of the Church (saith M^r. Robin.) is the orderly collection and conjunction of the Saints into and in the Covenant of the New Testament; but the members of Jewish Churches not yet dissolved, were not in such constitution. If the Eunuch and Centurion were proselytes and members of the Church of the Jews; The Samaritans whom Philip baptized were not so. And that any Gentiles, or the Gailor whom Paul baptized in the Apostles times, were set members of a Christian Assembly before baptized, is very strange If there was a Church at Philippi, yet the Gailor who was baptized and converted the same night, could not be a set member by solemn admission before Baptism. It is said the Apostles baptized these persons in an extraordinary way. But in this practice of the Apostles two things are to be considered. 1. The circumstance of the action. 2. The quality or substance of the act. In some circumstances the baptizing of some of these persons might be extraordinary, but the substance and quality of the action was grounded upon rules perpetual and common to us with them.

1. That is done in an extraordinary way, which by peculiar privilege of dispensation is made lawful to someone or few men, which is unlawful to all others, not having the same dispensation, but where the ground and reason of the action is common: we must not conceive the thing to be done in an extraordinary way by special dispensation. What was done by the Apostles upon special revelation and immediate direction, besides the ordinary and common rule, in that we are not to imitate or follow them, because we have not their warrant. But what they did upon reasons and grounds reaching unto us no less then unto them, in that we have the same liberty, allowance, or commandment that they did walk by. In one and the same action there may be and oft is something ordinary, something extraordinary or peculiar to special times or persons. So it was in the Apostles administration of the Seals: but in every place where they came by illimited power (as you speak) they did baptize Disciples, if they did baptize; this was proper to them, and could not be communicated to any others by them; For there is no passage of Scripture which teacheth this, that one Officer may communicate his power to another, or do that which particularly belongeth to his office by a Deputy: But that they baptized believers professing their faith in the Lord Jesus, and repentance towards God, such as had gladly embraced the Word, and received the gifts of the holy Ghost: this was common to them with all Pastors and Teachers, because they did it, not by power illimited or special dispensation, but upon this standing perpetual reason, that the promise was made to them and to their seed, and to as many as the Lord shall call, that they had received the holy Ghost, and the kingdom of heaven belonged to them. And if the grounds and reasons of their practice be common reaching to us, no less then unto them, the practice it self was not extraordinary. To say nothing that this Answer will not stand with the former; for if the parties baptized were set members of particular Societies, the Apostles did not baptize them in an extraordinary way, they did it by the guidance and direction of the Spirit, that is true, but not by guidance of dispensation, or prerogative, whereby that was made lawful without such inspiration had been unlawful. But they were infallibly guided to do that which was according to the word of God, and might stand for our direction: that in case it be orderly desired a Pastor hath authority in his own Congregation, to receive known and approved Christians to the seals of the Covenant, hath been proved before. If the Apostles dispensed the seals only to the Church, Disciples, faithful, who received the doctrine of salvation with gladness of heart, and were partakers of the holy Ghost, then they dispensed the seals in an ordinary way, for such have title and interest to the seals by the Institution and appointment of God. And every Pastor by his Office may and ought to dispence the seals unto such, within the bounds and limits of his calling: But the Apostles dispensed the seals only to the Church, Disciples, faithful, &c.

2. An Argument followeth necessarily from particular example to a general; when one particular is proved by another particular, by force of the similitude common to the whole kind, under which those particulars are contained: But the practice of the Apostles in baptizing Disciples and faithful, by force of similitude common to the whole kind, agreeth with the practice of Ministers receiving to Baptism the seed of the faithful, though as yet not set members of any particular society, In some circumstances there may be difference when yet the reason is strong, if the difference be not in the very likeness it self whereupon the reason is grounded. One circumstance that is material to the point may overthrow the likeness pretended, and twenty different circumstances, if they be not to the point in hand make no dissimilitude. Now in this matter we speak of, no circumstance is or can be named why we should think it lawful for the Apostles to baptize Disciples as yet being no set members of particular societies, and the same should be unlawful in all cases for ordinary Pastors in their particular Congregations, though it be desired.

3. What is done by extraordinary dispensation, that is lawful for them only who have received such dispensation, and by them cannot be communicated to others. But the Apostles baptized by others seldom by themselves, as hath been shown.

4. We might urge the rule which a reverend Elder among you, giveth in another matter, (scil.) Those examples which are backed with some divine precept, or which are held forth in the first Institution of an ordinance, being part of the institution, or which were the constant lawful actions of holy men in Scripture, not civil but sacred so bind us to imitation, as that not to conform thereunto is sin. For the Assumption to this Proposition, it is plain and natural: But the practice of the Apostles in receiving the faithful, Disciples, &c. is backed with divine precept, held forth in the first Institution, and was their constant lawful practice, agreeable to the practice of all others who were employed in that service; Ergo, &c.

5. In the first consideration, you prove the Seals to be the privilege of the Church in ordinary dispensation, by this passage of Scripture, Then they that gladly received the Word were baptized: but if Apostles baptize by extraordinary dispensation in your sense this testimony is insufficient for that purpose.

2 Reason.

Our second reason. In due order, the Seals belong to them to whom the grant is given, viz. Baptism to the seed of the faithful, and the Lord's Supper to believers, able to try and examine themselves: But the grant is vouchsafed to the faithful and their seed, forgiveness of sins, sanctification, adoption, and what other good things are promised in the covenant of grace are the grant or good things sealed in the Sacrament. But those are granted to believers according to the covenant; and they are so linked together, that under one promised all are understood; and if one be vouchsafed, none is denied. When God promiseth to circumcise the heart, the forgiveness of sins is implied. And when Circumcision is said to be the Seal of the righteousness of faith, the circumcision of the heart by spiritual regeneration is included. To whomsoever then the spiritual gift, or inward grace of the covenant is given and granted, to them the Seals of that gift and grant doth belong in their due order. But the spiritual gift or grace which is the thing signified in the Sacrament, is freely granted to true believers, who have received the doctrine of salvation, and walk in the ways of truth and righteousness, therefore the privileges of the Seals belong unto them. To this you answer.

The scope of the Apostle in the place, Rom. 4. 11. is not to define a Sacrament, nor to show what is the proper and adequate subject of the Sacrament; but to prove by the example of Abraham that a sinner is justified before God, not by works but by faith. Thus as Abraham the Father of the faithful was justified before God, so must his seed be (that is, all believers whether Jews or Gentiles, circumcised or uncircumcised) for therefore Abraham received circumcision which belonged to the Jews to confirm the righteousness which he had before, while he was uncircumcised, that he might be the Father of both: but lest any one should think his circumcision was needless if he was justified by faith before circumcision; he addeth that his circumcision was of no use as a seal to confirm to him his faith, and the righteousness which is by faith: yet as Justification is not the only thing that Circumcision sealed, but the whole Covenant also made with Abraham and his seed was sealed thereby; so Abraham is to be considered in using circumcision not simply, or only as a believer without Church relation, but as a confederate believer, and so in the state and order of a visible Church. Though the Apostle maketh mention of the righteousness of faith as sealed thereby, which was not that which served for his purpose.

Now that Circumcision also sealed the Church-Covenant, may appear from Gen. 17. 9. 10, 11. where you may find that Abraham and his seed, though believers, were not circumcised till God called them into Church-Covenant; and there is the same reason & use of Baptism to us which serveth to seal our justification as circumcision did, yet not that alone, but also the whole covenant with all the privileges of it, as Adoption, Sanctification, and fellowship with Christ in affections, and the salvation of our souls, and the resurrection of our bodies. And not only the covenant of grace which is common to all believers: but Church-Covenant 1 Cor. 15. 19. Covenant also which is peculiar to confederates. According to that of the Apostle, By one Spirit we are baptized into one body, 1 Cor. 12. 13. And by one body he meaneth that particular Church of Corinth whereunto he writeth and saith, Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular, ver. 27. And ergo Church-membership is required as well to the orderly partaking of Baptism as it was of Circumcision. Nor do we find that circumcision was administered to all that were in the Covenant of grace (as all believers were) but only to such of them as were joined to the people of the God of Abraham. Melchizedek was under the covenant of grace, so was Lot, so was Job and his four friends; yet we nowhere read that they were circumcised, nor do believe they were. So that if Circumcision was administered to none but those that were joined together in Abraham's family, and to the Church of God in his seed, then may not baptism in ordinary course be administered to any believers now, unless they be joined to the Church of Christ, for parum par est ratio. But the first is true, Ergo, the second also.

Reply.

The particulars in this Answer hath been examined already, and might have well been passed over, because it is tedious to repeat the same things again and again. Two things are affirmed by you.

1. That the scope of the Apostle, Rom. 4. 11. was not to define a Sacrament, nor to show what was the proper and adequate subject of a Sacrament. But this weakeneth no part of the argument, for if the Apostle do not fully define a Sacrament, nor mention every particular benefit or prerogative sealed in the Sacrament; yet he showeth sufficiently to whom the Sacraments in due order do appertain, even to the heirs of salvation, to them that are justified by faith, and walk in the steps of our Father Abraham. And thus we argue from the text of the Apostle. They that are partakers of the good things sealed in the Sacrament, to them belong the Seals of the Covenant, according to God's Institution. But they that are justified by faith are partakers of the good things sealed in the Sacrament, to them belong the Seals of the Covenant according to God's institution. If Justification be not the only thing that Circumcision sealed, this is nothing to the point in hand. For the gifts of the holy Ghost is not the only thing that is sealed in Baptism: But you confess in your Answer immediately going before, that they have right to baptism who have received the holy Ghost; and the reason is the same of Justification. Besides if Justification be not the only thing that is sealed in the Sacrament, it is one principal thing which doth infer the rest. For the blessings of the covenant of grace in Christ are inseparable; where one is named, others are implied: and where one is given, no one is absolutely wanting. Christ is made of God wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption: whom God doth justify, them he doth sanctify, and them he will glorify.

2. The second thing you affirm is, that not only the covenant of grace which is common to all believers; but Church-Covenant also which is peculiar to confederates is necessary to the participation of the Seals. This sense your words must bear, or else they reach not the point in hand: but this is that which should be proved substantially, and not barely affirmed; and which (as we conceive) is contrary to the first institution of the Sacrament, and the lawful practice of John the Baptist, our Savior Christ, his Apostles, and all others who are recorded lawfully to administer the Seals. In Gen. 17. we find the first Institution of circumcision recorded, and that it was the seal of the Covenant to Abraham and his seed, to them that were borne in his house, or bought with his money: but we find no mention of any Church Covenant besides the covenant of promise which God made with Abraham. There is no mention of any Church-order into which Abraham's family was now gathered more then formerly. God gave circumcision to Abraham and his seed as a seal of the righteousness of faith; but that this family was first gathered into Church-order as you speak we cannot believe, because the Scripture saith it not whether Lot, Job, Melchizedek were circumcised or not, we will not dispute; but if they received not the seal, we cannot think the reason to be because they were not in Church-order as those times required, if any such thing had been required, we cannot think that either they were ignorant of it, or that they walked against their light: But accordiug to the dispensing of those times we judge as they were visible believers, so they walked in that Church fellowship which God prescribed; and therefore if circumcision had been the seal of such Church-Covenant as you conceive, it should have been given to them no less then to Abraham's family. But of this sufficient is said before. As for Baptism it is the seal of the whole Covenant, which the passages quoted prove it to be. Whether it be the seal of our fellowship which Christ in affliction, and the resurrection of our bodies, we leave it to your consideration: but that it should be a Seal of a Church-Covenant which is peculiar to confederates, that to us is very strange. That it is a solemn admission into the Church of Christ, and that of necessity it must be administered in a particular society (though in the passage to the Corinthians the mystical body of Christ be understood) will easily be granted. But that it is the seal of any other covenant but the covenant of grace we cannot digest.

The Sacraments are of God, and we must learn of God for what end and use they were ordained. But by the Institution of Baptism recorded in Scripture we have learned it belongeth to the faithful, to disciples, to them that are called of God: and as for any other covenant necessary to the right participation of the Seals, there is deep silence of it in the Institution, in the lawful and approved practice of the first dispensers of these sacred mysteries. Enough hath been said to this matter already, but we will conclude it with the words of that reverend Author whom we have cited many times before upon occasion. Afterwards (saith he) John the Baptist walked in the same steps, and by the same rule administered baptism in the Church whereof he was a member, required of all that came to his baptism a profession of repentance, and amendment of life for remission of sins whereof baptism was a seal, and preached Christ to them. This order our Lord Jesus Christ after his resurrection established to continue in the Christian Churches, giving a commission to his Disciples to preach the Gospel to the Gentiles, and to gather all such as should believe through the world, as a testimony to them, that the righteousness of faith did belong to them also, and not to the Church of the Jews only. Accordingly the Apostles and servants of Christ were careful to observe this rule in their administering baptism. Thus Peter when he saw those three thousand souls pricked in their hearts, preached unto them concerning repentance, remission of sin, Christ, the promise, baptism, faith, amendment of life, baptized those that gladly received his word, and testified the same by joining together in the possession thereof. The same course Philip took with the Church that was gathered in Samaria, where many were baptized, but none till they professed their belief of the Gospel, and their receiving of the Word of God. And therefore it is said expressly, When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women. When Ananias was commanded to go and baptize Paul, he objected against it at first, till the Lord assured him that he was one to whom the Seal of the Covenant belonged, and then he went and did it.

When Peter and those that came with him saw that the holy Ghost fell on Cornelius, and those that were assembled at that time in his house, whilst he spake these words, To him give all the Prophets witness, that through the Name of Jesus whosoever believeth on him shall receive remission of sins. Peter demanded, Can any man forbid water that these should not be baptized, which have received the holy Ghost as well as we? In this catalogue we see profession of faith and repentance required in them that were admitted to partake in the seals; but there is not a word of Church-Covenant, either in the Institution or administration of the Seals before they were admitted to them. That Christians are solemnly engrafted into the body of Christ, and into particular Societies by the Seals, is a truth acknowledged on all sides: but that ever it was deemed necessary, that a Christian should be a set member of a particular Congregational Church before he were admitted to the Seals, or that by divine institution any such thing is ordained as necessary thereunto, that upon the grounds before mentioned we deny, and cannot account it less then an addition to the institution. For if the Sacraments be seals of the Covenant of grace, and baptism by divine Institution belong to Disciples, faithful, Saints, who have gladly received the Word of grace, are justified by faith, sanctified by the Spirit, adopted to be the children of God by grace, and heirs apparent to the kingdom of heaven; then to debar such from the Seals, and their seed from Baptism, because they be not in Church-Covenant (as you speak) is an addition to the ordinance of grace, and many ways injurious to the people of God.

V. POSITION. That the power of Excommunication is so in the body of the Church, that what the Major part shall allow must be done, though the Pastors and Governors and the rest of the Assembly be of another mind, and that peradventure upon more substantial reasons.

Answer.

IF the Question had been, Whether the power of Excommunication lies in the body of the Congregation, consisting of officers and members; our Answer should be Affirmative, and according hereunto is also our practice, and we hope your judgment and ours are not different herein: But seeing the Question is, Whether it is so in the body of the Congregation, that what the Major part doth allow that must be done, though the Pastors and Governors, and the rest of the Assembly, do dissent upon more substantial reasons. Our Answer is Negative, viz. that the power of Excommunication is not sealed in the Congregation, neither ought it to be so in any of the Churches of the Lord Jesus, who ought not to carry matters by number of votes against God, as this Position implieth, but by strength of rule and reason according to God.

The power of the Apostles was not to do things against the truth but for the truth, 2 Cor. 13. 8 and not for destruction, but for edification, 2 Cor. 10. 8. And the same may be said concerning the power which God hath given to the Church, and if any Church among us have swerved from the rule (which is more then we know) we do not allow them in such a practice, but should be ready as the Lord should help to convince them of their sin therein.

Reply.

THIS Question is much mistaken, for the demand is not whether in the Congregation matters should be carried by number of votes against God, as you interpret the Position, but whether the power of Excommunication so lie in the body of the Congregation as that sentence must proceed in externo foro, according to the vote and determination of the Major part, and so whether power of admission of members do so reside in the community, as that they must be refused whom the Major part refuse, though the Pastors and Governors and part of the Congregation be of another judgment, and he admitted whom the Major part doth approve. And though the Church hath received no power against God, but for God, yet in the execution of the power no doubt the members of that Church may be of different judgments and affections, wherein the one side or other doth err, and is deceived. Now the Question hereupon moved is, whether the power of the keys be so given and committed to the society of the faithful, as that in external Court that act or sentence must stand and be in force which the greater part shall determine amongst them which hold the power of the keys to be given to the Church. Some distinguish betwixt the power itself w^{ch} they give to the Church, and the execution and exercise of it, which they confine to the Presbytery: Others give the power of the keys with the exercise thereof to the whole body of the Church, or if in the dispensation they attribute anything to the Officers, it is but as servants of the Church, from whom they derive their authority. By Church also some understand the community of the faithful, together with their officers and guides. And here lieth the stone at which they of the Separation stumble, and which we conceive to be your judgment and practice, wherein we required your plain answer, with your reasons, but have received no satisfaction. You refer us to M^r. Parkers reasons to prove the power of the keys to belong to the whole Church, who are of far different judgment from M^r. Parker in the point it self. And if your judgment and practice be according to that of the Separation (which we fear) you dissent from him, and we cannot but dissent from you upon these considerations.

1. No power agreeth to the multitude or community of the faithful, but that which is given them of the Lord by his positive Law; For the whole spiritual power for the gathering and government of his Church is given to Christ as Mediator. And if the power of the keys be derived from, and communicated by Christ unto his Church, of necessity it must draw its original from divine positive Law, and can agree to none but as it is communicated. But the communicated power of the keys with the execution thereof, Christ hath not given immediately to the whole multitude, but to some persons and Officers designed and appointed thereunto. Peruse the several passages of Scripture, wherein power and authority of preaching the Gospel, administering the Sacraments, binding and loosing is given to the Church: and it is apparent that distinct several persons are spoken of, and not the whole community; Go teach all Nations, and baptize them, &c. Whose sins ye remit, they are remitted, &c. Feed my Lambes, feed my sheep, &c. Were these things spoken to the whole community, or to special persons?

2. If Christ gave this power to the community, was it from the beginning of the Church, or took it effect after the Churches were planted and established by the Apostles. Not the first, for then the Apostles themselves should derive their power from the community and society of the faithful, which they did not, but from Christ immediately, both in respect of gifts and graces, their calling it self, and the designation of their persons.

It is said the power of the keys given to the Apostles was given to the Church, In tuitu ejusdem tanquam finis & totius. And it is true the Apostles were given to the Church, and the power they received was for the good of the whole; but this is not enough. That power may be said to be received immediately by the Church, as the first receptacle of it, and from it derived to others. But this power must be in the community as the first subject, from whom it cometh to the Officers. As the power of seeing is not only given in tuitu hominis, as the end of it, and the totum to whom it agreeth, but is in homine as the first subject from which it cometh to the eyes. The Apostles and other Governors were given of Christ for the Church as for their end, and all their authority was given unto them for the Church as for the whole: but the authority it self was immediately derived from Christ, and is not in the Church as the immediate subject, nor derived from the Church, but from Christ the King of the Church. The authority of Governors is given of Christ for a gift to the Church, but not for a gift absolute, that it may reside in the power of the whole Church, to whom it is given, but for a conditional gift communicated to the Governors themselves for the good of the whole. It is one thing then to ask for what end or use the keys are given, another to whom. To everyone is given the declaration of the Spirit for profit, i. e. for the good of the Church. But was this gift given to the community of the faithful first and immediately? No; By gift and possession it was given to some, but for use and profit it was public.

After the Churches were established it took not effect; for then it must be shown where Christ committed the power of God, first to the Apostles, and after to the community of the faithful. But that is nowhere to be found in holy scripture. The Ministers and guides of the Church were immediately of Jesus Christ, from whom immediately they derive their power and authority, by whom they are set over their charge, in whose Name they must execute their office, whose Stewards, Legates and Ambassadors they are, and unto whom they must give an account. Yea, Pastorship is the gift of Christ no less then Apostleship, and that the more because it is perpetual in the Church; every Pastor is not immediately called, but the Office and order of Pastors, the calling, authority and jurisdiction is immediately from Christ, and not from the Church: The Steward is appointed of the Master of the family alone, and hath all his authority and jurisdiction from him: Every Ambassador in the cause of his ambassage doth immediately depend upon him from whom he is sent. But if the function, order and authority of Pastors and Teachers, be immediately from Christ, then it is not received from the Church as the immediate receptacle. Thus Protestant Divines dispute against Papists. If Bishops receive their power and authority of exercising immediately from Christ, by mandate, mission, and commission from him, then they derive it not from the Pope. And if Presbyters receive their order jurisdiction and power of execution from Christ by his mandate and Commission, then they receive it not from the Bishop. And by the same reason, if the power of the keys be the immediate gift of Christ to his Ministers, then they derive not their power and authority from the people. It is usually objected that the Church cannot convey what she never had, but the people may Elect their Pastor. Whereunto the answer is direct and plain. Nothing can give that which it had not formally or virtually, unless it give it as an instrument ministering to one who hath it, but so it may give what it never had, nor is capable of. A Steward may give all the offices in his Masters house, as ministerially executing his Masters pleasure. Electors have not evermore authority over him whom they elect: but power and authority only to apply that power to him whom they choose. The power and authority whereunto a Minister is elected, is not in the people that elect him, but from Christ the King and head of his Church, who out of power doth confer that office upon him. If we consider what men give, or give not universally, it must be deemed that any men can make Ministers, because they give not the office, gifts, or authority, which are from Christ alone.

3. If Ecclesiastical and spiritual power be in the multitude and community of the faithful, the Church doth not only call, but make Officers out of power and virtue received into her self, and then should the Church have a true lordlike power in regard of her Ministers.

For as he that will derive authority to the Church maketh himself Lord of the Church: so if the Church derive authority to the Ministers of Christ, she maketh herself Lady and Mistress over them in the exercise of that authority over them. For all men know it is the property of the Lord and Master to impart authority. Did the Church give power and authority to the Pastors and Teachers, she might make the Sacraments and preaching which one doth in order no Sacraments, no preaching. For it is the order instituted of God that gives being and efficacy to these ordinances. And if the power of ruling, feeding, and dispensing the holy things of God, do reside in the faithful, the Word and Sacraments in respect of dispensation and efficacy shall depend upon the order and institution of the Society. If the power of the keys be derived from the community of the faithful, then are Officers immediately and formally servants to the Church, and must do everything in the name of the Church, Rule, feed, bind, loose, remit and retain sins, preach and administer the Sacraments, then they must perform their Office according to the direction of the Church more or less, seldom or frequent, remiss or diligent. For from whom are they to receive direction how to carry themselves in their Office but from him or them from whom they receive their Office, whose works they do, and from whom they expect their reward? If their power and office be of God immediately, they must do the duties of their place according to his designment, and to be accountable unto God: But if their power and function be from the Church, the Church must give account unto God, and the Officers unto the Church whom she doth take to be her helpers.

If it be said that God will have the Church to choose Officers to execute the power committed unto her. The answer is, either God will have her elect officers of his designment to do his work according to that power which he shall give them, and by his direction, and then they are God servants, and not the Churches, and receive their charge and function immediately from God, and not from the people: or he leaveth it to the arbitrament of the Church, to choose according to their pleasure such as must receive charge and authority from her. And then they must execute their office in her name so as shall seem good unto the Church, and neither longer nor otherwise. For if the Ministers of the Church be subject to God and Christ by the intervention of the people only, they have it from them, and not from God: but they preach or administer the Sacraments, rule, or feed, and if they depend immediately upon the faithful, viz. two or three gathered together in covenant, they must draw what in order they are to preach unto them in the name of the Lord; For from him must the Ambassador learn his errand from whom he receiveth his Commission. We forbear to press the confessions and reasons of such as maintain this opinion, that the officers of Christ be both of and for the people, and that in relation as the officers are called servants, the Church may be called Lord.

4. Moreover if the power of the keys be given first and immediately to the community of the faithful, what reason can be alleged why in defect of Officers the Church might not rule, govern, feed, bind, loose, preach and administer the Sacraments, or if any fail in any office, why she might not supply that want by her power. For the power of the keys doth contain, both authority and exercise, power being given to this end, that it might be exercised as it is vouchsafed. But the Church when she is destitute of Officers, cannot exercise those acts of rule, nor by her power supply the want of any Officer. Only she hath a ministry of calling one whom Christ hath described, that from Christ he may have power of office given him in the vacant place. For these reasons (not to insist on anymore) we judge the multitude or community of the faithful not to be the immediate receptacle of Ecclesiastical authority, and so the power of excommunication not to belong to them. If consent of the Churches of God be asked in this point (to omit others) the Churches of Scotland speak fully and expressly for us, in the second book of Disci. cap. 1. The Church as it is taken for them that exercise spiritual functions in the congregation of them that profess the truth, hath a certain power granted by God according to which, it useth a proper Jurisdiction and government exercised to the comfort of the whole flock. Power is an Ecclesiastical authority granted by God the Father through the Mediator Jesus Christ unto his Church, gathered, and having its ground in the word of God, and to be put in execution by them unto whom the spiritual government of the Church by lawful calling is committed. The policy of the Church flowing from this power is an order or spiritual form of government which is exercised by the members appointed thereto by the Word of God, and therefore is given immediately to the office-bearers by whom it is exercised to the weal of the whole body.

VI. POSITION. That none are to be admitted as members but they must promise not to depart or remove unless the Congregation will give leave.

Answer.

Our Answer hereto is briefly this. We judge it expedient and most according to rule, that such brethren as are in covenant with the Church, and ours as fellow-members, and have committed their souls to our charge as Ministers, should not forsake our fellowship, nor abruptly break away from us when and whither they please; but first approve themselves therein to their brethren's consciences, and take their counsel in so weighty a matter. For which we propound to confider these two reasons following. The former is drawn from the nature of the Church-Covenant, which consists in these four particulars.

1. Every member at his admission doth openly profess, and solemnly promise, that by Christ's help assisting, he will not only in general give up himself (as to the Lord to be guided by him, so) to the Church according to God to be directed by it, which is no more then the members of the Church of Macedonia, did in a parallel case, 2 Cor. 8. 5. but also in particular, that he will perform all duties of brotherly love and faithfulness to all the members of the body, as of diligent watchfulness over all his brethren, thereby to prevent sin, so of faithful admonition after their falls to regain them to the Lord, from their sin, the former being enjoined, Hebr. 3. 13. And the want thereof deeply condemned in Cain, that would not acknowledge that duty of being his brothers keeper, Gen. 4. 9. the latter given in charge to the Church-members of Israel by the hand of Moses, Levite. 19. 17. and so by Christ himself, Matth. 18. 15. And by Paul also to the Galat. c. 6. 1, 2.

Secondly, the engagements are not made only by the members admitted into the Church, but by the Church back again to the member. So that thereby the whole Church in general, and every member thereof in particular, stand as well in conscience bound to perform all duties of love and watchfulness to him, as he doth to them; And this we do according to the golden rule of love and equity enjoined by our Savior, Matth. 7. 12. fearing that contrary practice of Scribes and Pharisees so much condemned by Christ, of laying greater burdens upon others, then we ourselves are willing to undergo. Matth. 23. 4.

3. These promises thus lawfully and mutually made, that member, as also the whole Church, are bound not only everyone for himself, actively to perform them, but passively also to suffer his brethren to do those offices upon and towards himself: If he neglect the former, he shall falsify his covenant so solemnly before God, Angels, and men made, and so not only break promise to his brother, contrary to Psal. 15. 4. but also in some sort commit the sin of Ananias and Sapphira in lying against the holy Ghost, condemned and punished severely by God's own hand, Act. 5. 3. 5. 10. If he fail in the latter, he shall not only be guilty of the same sin of breach of Covenant with God and man as in the former; but shall also be guilty of this folly of despising counsel so much condemned, Prov. 12. 15. and 1. 7. and shall also proclaim this his folly and pride by showing to all the Church that he is wise in his own eyes, and leans to his own wisdom both reprov'd, Prov. 3. 7. and 23. 4. Seeing need of no further light to be held forth by his brethren, then what he apprehends himself, which is one of the greatest properties of folly.

4. From all these things premised, it appears that we can do no less (and yet we do no more) then require a member before he depart according to our covenant thus lawfully, deliberately, and mutually made, to express to his brethren his desire of departing, and the place and society to which he tends, whether to a godly Church where he may be edified; or to some corrupt Assembly where he may be destroyed. And 2. his grounds and reasons which move him so to do, which if they hold good being scanned by the Word, he may be not only confirmed in his way by the consent and advise of many, but counseled also how to manage his departure for his best comfort. And so after all, solemnly with the whole Churches prayers, and blessings in the name of Christ dismissed: But if his grounds either be none at all, or weak and sinful, and that his desire of departing savors of self-will, inordinate love of gain, rash precipitancie, or a spirit of schism, more strongly then of sound reason, then what can we do less without breach of Covenant, then in love and tenderness show him his weakness, dissuade him from his purpose, and refuse to consent. Yet if after all this we see his spirit steadfastly and stiffly bent for a departure, then though we dare not act against our light by consenting or counseling, yet if his sin be not apparent, and danger eminent, we use rather (through indulgence in cases of like nature) to suspend our vote against him, as not willing against his will to detain him, abhorring to make our Churches places of restraint and imprisonment. But if any should object that this argument holds firm where this Church-Covenant is allowed to be lawful, but with some it is questioned, and with them it avails not. Ans. Some indeed have questioned the necessity of our Church-Covenant, but none (we hope) of these our reverend brethren that we write unto do question the lawfulness of such a Covenant being nothing else for the matter of it, but a promise of doing such Christian duties as the Gospel of Christ requires of all Saints in Church-estate; for we do not herein promise to perform any new duty to our brethren which was not before commanded us of the Lord, but only revive and renew our purposes afresh of performing such duties unto that particular body into which we are then incorporated as were before enjoined in the Word, as to love each other, and to watch over each other out of love for their good, to be ready to give counsel to, and to take counsel from each other, to prevent sin in them, or to gain them from sin. All which are plentifully and frequently held forth in the Scriptures; for the defect of which care and watchfulness, all the body shall be wrapped in the same guilt & punishment with the member that commits the sin, as the whole Church of Israel was in Achan's sin and punishment.

Secondly, Its a thing very reasonable, and a known fundamental rule in all societies, that he that is incorporate thereto, and so participates of the privileges thereof, should engage himself to conform to all such lawful rites and orders as are expedient for the well being of that society, the contrary whereto will be a thing injurious in him to offer, and confusion to themselves to accept.

The second ground is drawn from the necessity that may fall upon the body if every particular member should depart at his own pleasure. For as every society, so much more a Church of Saints, both from principles of nature and Christianity also, not only lawfully may, but in duty are bound to endeavor the preservation of it self, and Ergo timely to foresee and wisely to prevent all such things as would bring destruction to it self. Now if any member might, when, whither, and wherefore he please without consent of the Church depart away from it, this may by unavoidable consequence dissipate the whole; for if one man may so depart, why may not another also, though never so useful in that body, and whose absence might much shake the well-being of it: and if one why not two, six, ten, twenty as well? For where will ye stop seeing any may plead the same liberty, and if members may so do why not the Pastor and Teacher also? Seeing they are tied to him by the same relation that he is to them, and so the principalls falling, the whole building must down: and if this may be so in one Church, why not in all, and so Christ should have no settled Church on earth.

Reply.

IT is one thing abruptly to break away when and whither they please, and forsake fellowship, another thing not to depart or remove habitation, unless the Congregation will give leave. Also it is one thing mutually to compound and agree not to depart from each other without consent and approbation, another to require a promise of all that be admitted into society, that they shall not depart without the Churches allowance. If such a promise be required of all members to be admitted, we cannot discern upon what grounds your practice is warranted. First, you exclude all such as be not set members from the Sacrament of the Supper, and their children from Baptism, and yet hinder them from entrance into Church society, because they cannot promise continuance in the place where they are resident for the present. Here we desire to be satisfied from the word of God by what you require it. Did the Apostles ever stipulate with such as desired to be baptized, that they must abide in particular society, and not remove thence without approbation from the Church? or did they deny the seals unto them, because they could not make any such promise? Was it ever heard of in the Church of God from the beginning thereof unto this day, that any such thing was propounded unto, or required of, members to be admitted into Church-fellowship? That Church Covenant which is necessary was not in use in the Apostles times, but the Covenant they entered into bound no man to this condition for ought we read. They did not prescribe it, no Church ever yet covenanted it as necessary to the preservation of the body.

Secondly, It pertains not to the whole Congregation to take notice of, be acquainted with, or judge of the cause of every particular members removal. May not a servant remove from his Master to another Congregation? or the father bestow his son or daughter in marriage to one of another Congregation, but the whole Church must be called to council in this matter? If the Assembly once grow to be populous, of necessity they must be negligent in, or weary of such an heavy task; and for the present, for everyone to challenge so much authority over other is usurpation. Let it be shown that ever by divine right this power was committed to the Church, and then we will confess it to be expedient and necessary. But till then we think the Church is over ridged in exacting such a condition of the members, and the members themselves go beyond their measure as busi-bodies in other men's matters, and things whereof they are not well able to judge many times, if they arrogate such power unto themselves we allow not rashness, or precipitancy, pride or self-conceitedness, we know it is meet that weighty matters should be managed by Council, but it is not necessary to bring every particular thing to the whole Church. In the multitude of Counselors there is peace, but over many Counselors oft causeth distraction, and different apprehensions breed delays. The nature of your Church-Covenant, as you describe it, inferreth not a necessitie of bringing every such business unto the Church; for you bind yourselves mutually to watch over one another, and in love to admonish one another in the Lord, to prevent sin and to encourage in well-doing, as it concerneth every man within the limits of his place and calling. But this essentially tieth not any man to a perpetual residence in one place, for then even occasional absence should be a breach of Covenant, unless it be by consent and approbation of the Church.

You say in your Covenant you promise to perform no new duty to your brethren which was not before commanded of the Lord, but only revive and renew your purposes afresh of performing such duties to that particular body into which you are then to be incorporated, as were before enjoined in the Word. But in the word of truth, it is not commanded either expressly or by consequent, that no member of a Congregation should remove, or occasionally be absent from the place of his habitation, before he have acquainted the Church whither he goeth, and upon what occasions, and whether the place be dangerous, where he is likely to be infected; or safe, where he may be edified. These things are matters of weight and to be undertaken with advice, but the knowledge thereof belongeth not to every particular member of the society. And the Church shall burden her self above measure if she take upon her to intermeddle in all such occasions. Neither is it safe to commit the determination of such matters ever to the vote of the multitude, or weight of reasons, as they shall apprehend the matter. And if such business must be determined on the Lord's day, and to go before the administration of the Word, Sacraments, and alms, least the holy things be polluted by notorious obstinate offenders, we fear the time appointed for the exercise of Religion shall be profaned with unseasonable disputes. Instances might be alleged, if it were a matter to be insisted upon.

As for the Covenant it self which you mutually enter into, if therein you exact nothing but what God requires both for trial and stipulation, far be it that we should disallow it, but if ye contstrain men to meddle with things that belong not to them, and wind them up higher then God would, and strain everything to the pitch that you seem here to do in this branch a godly and sober mind may well pause before he make such promise. All members of the Church are not equally necessary to the preservatiō of the whole body; & if to the removal of some, it were expedient to have the consent, not only of the whole society, but of neighbouring societies, Ministers especially, it is very much to draw this to the removal or abode of every particular member. And if any man shall not intermeddle with every business of this kind, as questioning whether it doth belong to him or no, or not ask the advice of the whole society, as knowing the most to be unfit to counsel in such a case, doth he break his Covenant therein, and so commit a sin in a sort like the sin of Ananias and Sapphira? Judge yourselves if in other cases you would not censure this to be an high incroachment upon Christian liberty, and a strict binding of men's consciences by human constitutions. May you not expect to hear from your own grounds that herein you have devised an expedient, or necessary rite or custom to preserve the unity, and prevent the dissolution of the body, which never came into the mind of the Lord Jesus, the Savior of the Church, and that in so doing (if your exposition will hold good) you break the second Commandment. Rites and customs expedient to prevent confusion for the time, let them be observed as customs expedient, and what God requires in the examination or admission of members, let that take place according to the presidents given in the Scriptures, and the constant practice of the universal Church in the purest times. But to press customs only expedient for the time, as standing rules necessary at all times, and for all persons, to put that authority into the hands of men which God never put upon them, to oblige men to intermeddle further in the affairs of men, then the Word doth warrant, to bind the conscience, and that under so heavy a penalty as the sin of Ananias and Sapphira, where God hath not bound it, and to debar known and approved Christians from the Seals of the Covenant, because they cannot promise as settled members to abide and stay in the society, unless they shall obtain leave of the Congregation to depart, and to charge them in the mean season to be men, who against light refuse subjection to the Gospel; this is that which we cannot approve, which yet we suspect will follow from your judgment, and desire to be resolved of in your practice. And here we entreat leave to put you in mind of that which you have considered already, schil. That the Church and every member thereof hath entered into Covenant, either expressly or implicitly to take God for their God, and to keep the words of the Covenant and do them, to seek the Lord with all their hearts, and to walk before him in truth and uprightness: but we never find that they were called to give account of the work of grace wrought in their souls, or that the whole Congregation were appointed to be Judge thereof. You standall of you this day (saith Moses) before the Lord your God, &c. that thou shouldst enter into Covenant with the Lord thy God. All the people that were borne in the Wilderness Joshua circumcised, but it is incredible to think that among that great multitude, there was not one who did not give good testimony of the work of grace in his soul: We read often times that Israel after some grievous fall and revolt, renewed their Covenant, to walk with God, to serve him only, and to obey his voice, as in the days of Joshua, the Judges, David, Samuel: Also Joash, Josiah, and Nehemiah, &c. But no particular enquiry was made, what work of grace God had wrought in the hearts of every singular person. But the confession and profession of obedience was taken. When John the Baptist began to preach the Gospel, and gather a new people for Christ, he admitted none to Baptism but upon confession of their sins; but we read of no question that he put forth unto them to discover the work of grace in their souls, or repelled any that voluntarily submitted themselves upon that pretence. It appeareth many ways that when the Apostles planted Churches, they made a Covenant between God and the people whom they received. But they received men upon the profession of faith, and promise of amendment of life, without strict inquirie what sound work of grace was wrought in the soul. In after ages, strangers from the covenant were first instructed in the faith, and then baptized upon the profession of faith, and promise to walk according to the covenant of grace. Now the profession at first required of all that were received to baptism was that they believed in the Father, Son, and holy Ghost. This was the confession of the Eunuch when he was baptized, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. The Creed is honored of the ancients with glorious titles, as the rule of faith, the sum of faith, the body of faith, the persuasions of faith: but by the Creed they understand that rule of faith, and law of faith, and institution of Christ which was then given when he was about to ascend into heaven, and commanded his disciples, saying, Go teach all Nations, &c. It is true, that in after times as occasion required some other Articles were added as explanations of the former, to meet with the heresies of the times which began to trouble the Church. But for substance of matter in things to be believed, the Church never required other acknowledgement of them that were to be received into the congregation of Christ's flock, and admitted into her communion. And for things to be done, or the practical part, she requireth of them that were to be received to baptism an abrenuntiation of the devil, the world, and the flesh, with all their sinful works and lusts.

The first principles then of the doctrine of Christ being received, and the foresaid profession being made, the Apostles, and the Church following the example of the Apostles, never denied baptism unto such as sought or desired it. If this be the Covenant that members admitted into Church-fellowship do enter into, and this be all you require of them whom you receive, you have the practice of the Apostles, and the whole Church in after ages for your president. But if you proceed further then thus, and put men to declare what work of grace God hath wrought in their soul, in this or that way, which perhaps is not determined by the word of grace, at least not agreed upon among yourselves, we beseech you consider by what authority you do it, and upon what grounds you stand. But we will enter no further upon this matter, because it comes not within the compass of these Positions, and to attribute so much to private letters, as to make them the ground of another dispute we may not.

VII. POSITION. That a Minister is so a Minister of a particular Congregation, that if they dislike him unjustly, or leave him, he ceaseth to be a Minister.

Answer.

Our Answer to this consists in two branches. 1. In case a Minister be set aside by the Church merely through his own default. 2. By the Churches default without any desert of his. In the former case it is evident he ceaseth to be a Minister to them any longer, as appears in four conclusions.

1. It is clear from the Word, that a Pastor or Teacher in these days hath no Apostolical power over all Churches, but only limited to that one Church where God hath set him. Paul gives not the Elders at Ephesus a general Commission to go teach all Churches, but to go feed that one flock over which the holy Ghost hath made them over-seers. Act. 20. 28. So Peter gives direction to Elders to feed that flock of God only which was among them, and take the oversight thereof. 1 Pet. 5. 2.

2. It is as clear that all this power of feeding which the Minister hath in that Church is nextly derived to him from Christ by the Church, who hath solemnly called him to the work, and promised to obey him therein: for if he have it elsewhere, it must be either from Christ immediately, or from some other men deputed by Christ to confer it on him, or he must take it up of himself. Not the first, for that was proper to the Apostles or Apostolical men, therefore Paul proving his Apostleship, saith he was called not of men, nor by men, but by Jesus Christ himself. Gal. 1. 1. Not the second, for we never read in God's Word that any ordinary Officers, or other besides the Church, that had any Commission given them from Christ to call Ministers unto Churches. Not the third, for no man taketh this honor, viz. of a Priest under the Law, or of a Minister under the Gospel, but he that is called of God, Hebr. 5. 4. Therefore it must needs be from Christ by the Church.

3. As the Church in the name of Christ gave this power to a Minister to be what he is, and do what he doth amongst them: when such a Minister shall make and manifest himself apparently, unworthy, and unfit to discharge the place, which they thus called him unto, so that they may discern that Christ the head of the Church hath refused him, from being a Minister unto him, they may then upon as good grounds depose him from it, as they called him to it.

4. When a Church hath thus in Christ's name put forth this power of shutting, as before it did of opening to a Minister, then he must cease to be a Minister unto them anymore, for we know no such indelible character imprinted upon a Minister, that the Ministry ceasing, the Minister ceaseth also.

2. In case the Church shall without cause, or sufficient weighty cause, rashly or willfully set him aside whom Christ hath set over them, and whom they so solemnly called, and promised before the Lord to submit unto, and so abuse their power given them by Christ; it is doubtless a very great wrong unto the Minister, and sin against Christ himself before whom it was done; and not only Christ himself will take it ill at their hands, for such contempt done to him in his Ministers according to Christ's speech, Luke 10. 16. He that rejecteth you, rejecteth me. And God's speech, 1 Sam. 8. 7. They have not cast off thee but me. But even other Churches also may admonish them. And if they prove obstinate therein, withdraw the right hand of fellowship from them; and concerning the Minister himself thus deposed, seeing it is done not by Christ, but by the Church without Christ, yea against the mind of Christ, we conceive though he be by them deprived of the execution of his ministry among them, yet until he accepts of a call to another people, he doth yet still remain a Minister of Christ, in whose account (notwithstanding such deposition) he hath true right of administration among that people.

Reply.

The question is of Ministers unjustly forsaken, or driven from the Church or congregation: and your answer is for the most part of Ministers set aside or deprived through their own default. We never purposed to speak one word for any unworthy Minister whom Christ hath put out of office, and therefore your labor to prove that such justly rejected by the Church are no longer Ministers might well have been saved. But sitting them aside, we will in few words examine your conclusions upon which you bind the certainty of that sentence you pass against them.

First, it is certain and clear from the Word, that a Pastor or Teacher neither in these days hath, nor in any other age of the Church, ought to have Apostolical power over all Churches. The Apostles had only power to serve the Church with the personal service of their Apostleship. But pastoral power of ordinary Ministers or Teachers they never had: and if the Apostles had not the power of ordinary Ministers, much less can Pastors receive the power of Apostles, for Christ gave both the one and the other order. But as the Apostles were not Pastors of that Church to which they preached, and among whom they continued for some space; no more do Pastors become Apostles if they preach the Word, or dispense the Sacraments to another flock or people beside their own, whereof they have the special oversight. But of this matter we have spoken before, and of the texts of Scripture here alleged, therefore we will not repeat what hath been said already: only it seemeth somewhat strange, that you should cite those texts of Scripture, as if the Apostle had said, feed one flock, or feed that flock of God only. For we find the word (one) or (only) neither in the text expressly, nor in the sense for which it is here alleged, viz. as if he might not perform any ministerial act in another Congregation upon any occasion whatsoever.

Secondly, the power of feeding which the Minister hath is neither confined to one society only, nor nextly derived to him from Christ by the Church. The office and authority of a Pastor is immediately from Christ. The deputation of the person which Christ hath designed is from the Church ministerially, but neither virtually nor formally. The consent of the people is requisite in the election of Pastors and Teachers we grant, the direction of the Elders going before or along with them; but the authority, office, and gift of a Pastor is not from the people or Elders, but from Christ alone. When an Apostle was to be chosen in the place of Judas, Act. 1. 22, 23. no one had the handling of that business, but Peter declared unto the brethren present, what an one ought to be taken, and they present two, whereof one was elected by lot. In this example some things are extraordinary, for one only was to be chosen, and that immediately by God himself: and some things ordinary for our imitation. For if Peter would do nothing without consent of the disciples, then may not ordinary elections be passed without consent and approbation of the Church, but it is not a popular election, not governed by the fore-direction of Elders, which is concluded from this passage of Scripture: but a Church election by the free consent, and judgment of the faithful with the fore-leading of the Presbyterie. When Deacons were to be chosen, Act. 6. 1. 6. in the Church of Jerusalem, it was done by the consent of the Church. The mutiny of the Hellenists against the Hebrews occasioned that election, but was no cause why it was made by free consent. The Apostles show what persons must be chosen, and whoever thought the Church was left at liberty to choose as she please without direction. But in this election the people did first choose, the Apostles only directing whom the people ought to make choice of: when most commonly the Apostles instructed the people, and went before them in the election, and they consented. Act. 14. 23. The Apostles by consent chose Elders, and so in every matter of great importance belonging directly to the whole body of the Church, whether severally in one congregation, or jointly in many, the consent of the faithful by observation of the Apostles was required. Act. 11. 22. and 15. 22. and 16. 4. 1 Cor. 8. 19. But in the primitive times after the Apostles, one Church might elect and choose a Pastor for another. As Ignatius exhorts the Phyladelphians, that they would elect a Pastor for the Church of Antioch. And so when the East Church was infected with Arianism, Basil. epist. 69. 70. 74. thought it a fit means to remove the heresy, if the Bishops of Italy being sent thither did condemn the heresy, and he imploreth the aid of the Bishops of Italy, France, and all the East. Cyprian saith, all Bishops sunt mutuae concordiae glutine copulati: that if any hold heresy the rest should help. It would be too long to reckon up examples which in this case might be produced. If here it be questioned whether your election of the people be essential to the calling of a Minister: We answer. 1. A thing is essential two ways. First, as absolutely necessary, so that the thing can have no existence without it. Secondly, as necessary to the integrity of the thing, so that it is maimed without it.

Again, either the people be few in number, and simple apt to be led aside, unable to judge of the sufficiency of their Minister, or they be more in number, increased in wisdom, sound in faith, and able to discern betwixt things that differ. In the first sense the election of the people is not necessary or essential; But in the second we cannot say he is no Minister that is not chosen by the people, but his calling in that respect is maimed. If the people be few and simple, apt to be deceived, they stand in more need of guidance and direction, both from their own Elders, and other Churches. If the people be many in number, full of wisdom and understanding, their liberty to choose is the greater; and it is the greater wrong to be deprived of it. The practice of the Apostles and the primitive Churches for many ages will confirm this; for sometimes men were propounded to the Church to be chosen: Sometimes the choice was wholly left to them: and was not that for our direction, that more liberty is given where the danger is less, and more restraint and caution used where the danger is more apparent, that if they be left to themselves, either an ill or unfit choice will be made? In reason this is evident, for the child's consent is required in marriage, but the more able he is to choose for himself, the more liberty may parents grant, the less able, the more watchful must they be; and so in this business. Brotherly society requires that we mutually exhort, admonish, reprove and comfort each other as occasion requires, and as need requires. It is a duty of Neighbor-Churches to lend their help to their brethren in the choice and election of their Minister. When the Scripture willeth that one should admonish another, it is not only a command to every singular man towards his fellow, but also to any whole company too: another society Bellarmino asketh, quo jure unus populus Episcopum alterius populi elegere potest? Junius answereth; Certe charitatis jure & communionsanctorum. And Paul when he teacheth that all the faithful are members of one mystical body of Christ, who ought to have a mutual care one of another, laid the foundation of this policy.

It is a blemish in the calling of a Minister, if either the people be not fit to choose, or being fit they be shut forth from the choice, but this maim doth not make a nullity in his calling; for in every true Church where the word is preached and received, and the Sacraments for substance rightly administered, there is a true and lawful Ministry, and a true and lawful calling of that Ministry, though in some things defective. In the Church of God all sound and saving truth is to be found, for it is the pillar and ground of truth, and where the true profession of all saving truth, with the right use of the Sacraments for substance is to be found, there is the Church, which ordinarily cannot be had, maintained and continued without a lawful Ministry, nor that without a calling. The saving truth of God & a lawful Ministry, are both essential to a true Church. Something of this remains in every complete society that hath anything of the Church; and for essence and substance they are true in every true, lawful, complete society. The profession of the truth may be true and sound in all necessary and fundamental points, though mixed with diverse errors, and the Ministry for truth and substance lawful, though many ways deficient. In the true Church there is a true Ministry, but the true Church hath continued there by the blessing of God, where the election of Ministers hath been given away by the people, or taken from them. In the primitive Church, when the people had a voice in the choice of their Pastor, oftentimes there were factions in the Church, the people stood against their guides and challenged the whole power of election to themselves. Sometimes they were divided among themselves. Sometimes they gave away their power, at least in part, and sometimes Ministers were set over them without their council and advice, whose Ministry notwithstanding was not reputed void and of none effect. If it be objected that many things were amiss in those primitive elections, what will follow thence, but that the Ministry may be lawful and good, where there be many wants in the manner of calling? If this be not granted, what shall be done when the people and their Elders be divided in the choice of a fit Officer. If the people prevail against their Elders, he whom they choose is no Minister to them, because not chosen by their suffrages: if the Elders against the people, he whom they approve is no Minister unto theirs, because not chosen by their suffrage; And so if there be dissention they must separate from, or excommunicate one another, because he is no Minister to the one whom the others approve. The Orthodox Pastors did profess, so that the Donatists would return to the true and Apostolical doctrine, they would not disallow their Bishops, that they might understand that Catholics did not detest Christian consecration (as Augustine speaks) by human error. The high Priesthood was bought and sold for money, and sometimes made annual, and every year new high Priests created, Sicut isti praefecti quos singulis annis promutant reges, as Sol: Jarchi saith. That as every man would lay out more or less money, he should get or lose the Priesthood, which may be seen in the examples of Jason or Menelaus.

Nevertheless, so long as the Jews continued the true Church of God, the Priesthood was true also. The reformed Churches who have separated from the abominations of Rome, profess the first reformers among them received some ordinary calling in the Roman Synagogue. They that think the basest of Rome, will acknowledge Baptism unduly administered by Priests or Jesuits, to be for substance the holy Sacrament of Christ. And if the Baptism of God may be derived from the Ministry, it is no absurdity to think that the first seekers of reformation derived authority from Christ to preach the Word and administer the Sacraments by them, as Stewards used of God to set them in that office: for the seekers of reformation derived their authority from God, and that which is instituted by Christ, is not made void by the corruptions of men.

The third and fourth consideration we will pass over, because from what hath been spoken, it is easy to understand in what sense they may be admitted, and in what denied, and we have no desire to trouble you with the examination of that which falleth not into question.

As for the second branch of your Answer, that in case the Church shall without cause, or without sufficient weighty cause, rashly or willfully set him aside whom Christ hath set over them, yet he still remains a Minister of Christ (until he accepts of a call from another people) in whose account, notwithstanding such Depositions, he hath true right of administering among that people: We know not well your meaning; if this be your mind that a Minister lawfully called and set over one Congregation, is to be esteemed a Minister in the usual Church, as the particular Church hath unity with, and is part of the universal or Catholic: and as a party baptized is not baptized into that particular Congregation only, but into all Churches; and that the Ministry is one, Cujus à singulis in solidum pars tenetur, as Cyprian speaks; and therefore though the Minister be unjustly cast off by one Congregation, yet he is not to be esteemed as no Minister, we freely consent. But if your meaning be that he is only by right a Minister of that particular Congregation, because unjustly deposed, as formerly in the execution of his office he was a Minister to them only, and to none other society whatsoever, or in what respect soever; your opinion is contrary to the judgment and practice of the universal Church, and tendeth to destroy the unity of the Church, and that communion which the Churches of God may and ought to have one with another; for if he be not a Minister in other Churches, then are not the Churches of God one, nor the Ministers one, nor the flock which they feed one, nor the Communion one which they have each with other. And if the Pastor derive all his authority to feed from the Church, when the Church hath set him aside, what right hath he to administer among that people. If they err in their deposition, it is true they sin against Christ. But as they give right to an unworthy man to administer among them, if they call him unjustly, so they take right from the worthy if wrongsully they depose him. The Minister is for his Ministry the office for the execution, and so the Pastor and the flock are relatives: And therefore if their Election gave him authority among them to seed, their casting him off hath stripped him of the same power which formerly they gave him. And his ministry ceasing, he should cease to be their Minister, if he stood as Minister only to that Congregation in every respect.

Whit. depont. q. 4. Sec. 10. pa. 559. Certe lex naturae & ratio clamitat cujus est instituere ejus est destruere, sive destituere, ad quem institutio pertinet ad eundem destitutionem, seu destructionem pertinere. Rob. aga. B. p. 214. If the Congregation may choose and elect their Governors, then they may refuse and reprobate them.

VIII. POSITION. That one Minister cannot perform any ministerial act in another Congregation.

Answer.

IF you take ministerial act improperly as sometimes it is taken by some, only when the Minister of one Church doth exercise his gifts of praying and preaching in another Church, being by themselves so desired. Then we answer, in this sense a Minister of one Church may do a ministerial act in another, which he doth not perform by virtue of any calling, but only by his gifts; and thus upon any occasion we mutually perform those acts one in another's Churches: But if you mean by ministerial act, such an act of authority and power in dispensing of God's ordinance as a Minister doth perform to the Church, whereunto he is called to be a Minister; then we deny that he can so perform any ministerial act to any other Church but his own, because his office extends no further then his call. For that solemn charge, Act. 20. 28. is not to feed all flocks, but that one flock only, over which the holy Ghost hath made them over-seers. If the question were propounded to any Minister so exercising in an others Church, which was once to our Savior by the chief Priests and Elders: By what power doest thou these things, and who gave thee this authority? let that Minister whosoever he be, study how to make an answer.

Reply.

THE preaching of the Word, public prayer in the congregation met together solemnly to worship God, and the administration of the Sacraments, are acts properly ministerial (if any other) to be performed by power and authority from Christ, as you acknowledge, for the preaching of the Word, and dispensation of the Seals in your second Consideration. But these acts one Minister may perform in another Congregation, or towards the members of another Church. You know by whom your question hath been propounded touching one Ministers exercising in another Ministers Church, and how it hath been answered; and if you see more light and truth then formerly, we would desire you substantially to confute what answers some of you have returned to that demand. To admit (saith Mr. J. D.) those that are known members of another Church to Communion in the Sacraments upon fitting occasions I hold lawful, and do professemy readiness to practice accordingly. Again, I conceive that (besides my membership else where, and theright which those Churches give to known passants of being admitted to the Communion for a short time) both himself and the whole Church acknowledge me for a member with them for the time of my abode in that service, which they testified by desiring the help of my public labors, and their cheerful admittance of me to that ordinance during that time without the least scruple. And if a Minister may pray, preach, bless the congregation in the name of the Lord, and receive the Sacrament with them, being thereunto requested; we doubt not but by consent of the Pastor and the Congregation he may lawfully dispense the Seals amongst them also as need and occasion requires.

That distinction of preaching by office, and exercising his gifts only, when it is done by a Minister, and desired of none but Ministers, and that in solemn, set, constant Church-assemblies, we cannot find warranted in the Word of truth, and therefore we dare not receive it.

To the Christian Reader.

THE seasonableness of this Sermon occasioning warm workings in the hearts of many who heard it preached, the Author of it was persuaded to print it: but he judging it unworthy such public view, returned a denial unto those desires of his friends. Afterwards understanding that a Copy taken by short hand from his mouth, would be made common, he rather chose to peruse and correct it, then to expose himself and the reader unto greater wrong. Hereupon sundry phrases are filed, and some Scriptures lay'd more open, other additions or amplifications are not very many, but thou now hast the body of the Sermon, both for matter and method, as it was first delivered. When thou meetest with wants and weaknesses, remember that not the confidence of the preacher, but the importunity of some of his heareres, hath made this discourse thus public. If by means hereof, thy soul shall receive any spiritual edification, and grow more able with hope and comfort, to thrust through straits in Heaven way; give God the glory of all his gracious workings upon thy spirit by Jesus Christ.

GEN. XXII. XIV.

In the Mount of the Lord it shall be seen.

INterpreters call this Text a Proverb, the interpretation whereof is to be fetched from the occasion of it.

God by way of trial did put his servant Abraham upon a sad task, a dead service, commanding him to make a burnt offering of his son, his son Isaac, the son of his age, and the son of God's promise.

Take now thy son, thy only son Isaac whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah, and offer him there for a burnt offering.

How heavy this work was likely to be upon Abraham's heart, I leave it to the judgment of any affectionate father, when he hath seriously perused the law of the Lord concerning burnt offerings.

The offering being slain it was to be cut in pieces, the wood being laid upon the Altar fire was to be put under, the parts, the head, the fat were to be laid in order upon the wood, the inwards and the legs being washed in water, all were to be burnt on the Altar.

When the good old man had chewed this bitter pill for the space of three days, towards the end of the third day, he lifting up his eyes saw the place afar off where his dearest son must be sacrificed.

Being come to his journeys end he builds the Altar, binds his son, and lays him thereon. What pathetic conference passed between them two, the Holy Ghost reveals not. But what it was each affectionate heart will make conjecture. When the father (no doubt with a heavy heart) had taken the knife, and lifted up his hand, and was ready to give the death's blow to his beloved Isaac, now imagine you what were Abraham's straightens.

Is it not probable he might have such reasonings as these? If I kill not my son God will be incensed because he is disobeyed; if I do, how will the world clamour and censure, being ignorant of my warrant, and therefore apt to judge my act both impious and unnatural.

Now in the Mount is the Lord seen, divine providence sweetly and gloriously appeareth two ways.

1. In that Abraham's son is spared.
2. In that a sitting sacrifice is prepared, and both unexpected. Abraham, Abraham hold thy hand.

How welcome were these words to the working warm heart of Abraham, being ready to let forth the life of his well-beloved son? The execution is checked, Isaac is not killed, and yet the intention of his obedience herein is graciously accepted: yea and as an addition of mercy, he is assured by Christ the Angel of the covenant, that God accounted him one that truly feared his name. Now I know thou fearest me.

This unexpected providence might work in the good man's heart willingness to tender unto the Lord an offering in way of thankfulness, that his Majesty might have some homage in the same place where he had shown so much favor. And though speedy provision of that kind was as far from Abraham's thoughts, as the preservation of his son, yet when he lifted up his eyes and looked, behold behind him a ramme caught in a thicket by the horns. And Abraham went and took the ram and offered him up for a burnt offering in the stead of his son, and Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah Jireh. In the Mount of the Lord it shall be seen.

I will not trouble you in reporting the various readings of these words from the original. In short, the english of my Text is this, Mans extremity is God's opportunity. Or if you would have my Doctrine in other words, take it thus:

In the Mount, in the midst of straights it hath been the manner of the Almighty,mercifully to manifest himself for his servants comfort.

There are two things that I shall desire to speak too in the prosecution of this point, purposeley pitched upon because of this days perplexity.

- 1. Confirmation, that it may be strongly believed.
- 2. Application, that it may be seasonably improved.

The Confirmation of the Doctrine I will give in.

- 1. By Scripture.
- 2. By Reason.

The Scripture proof you shall have under two heads.

- 1. The Promises of God.
- 2. The experiences of the godly.

I will mention only two precious Promises, because they are sufficient, being both pregnant and pertinent, speaking both fully and punctually to the point in hand.

The former is in Psal. 72.12. where the sweet dispensations of Christ's regal authority being typically foretold by King Solomon's government, we have this recorded. He shall deliver the needy when he crieth, the poor also and him that hath no helper. You may do well to mark the fitness and fullness of the Promise.

- 1. When Christ finds his people in themselves poor and needy, destitute of abilities to shelter themselves from wrong and violence.
- 2. When in regard of others it is thus with them, viz. not only that they have weak helps, or few helpers, but when they have no helpers, none at all.
- 3. When in this distress they cry out as persons in an undone condition, then, though not till then will he deliver.

The other Promise is registered in Deut. 32.36. For the Lord shall judge his people,and repent himself for his servants when he seeth that their power is gone, and there is none shut, up, or left.

The language is large, and hath much in it, but because the proof in it is apparent to every eye, I will leave it.

The experiences of the godly which I shall produce you may please thus to consider:

- 1. Of single Persons plunged into deep dangers.
- 2. Of companies, whether few or many, compassed about with devouring perils on every side.

For single Persons, I will instance in four Examples.

The first is of Daniel, wherein four circumstances are remarkable.

- 1. He was cast to Lions, not only one but many, the number we know not.
- 2. He was put into the Lions den, and the door was shut, a stone was brought and laid upon the mouth of the den that he might not get forth from those beasts of prey.
- 3. The King sealeth it with his own signet, and with the signet of his Lord's, that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel.
- 4. In this dark den of deadly danger he continued a whole night, and in this great straight the Lord by his Angel, shut the Lions mouths that they did his servant no hurt at all.

The second Example is that of David, 1 Sam. 23. from the 25. to the 28. Saul pursued after David in the wilderness of Maon, and Saul went on this side the Mountain and David and his men on that side of the Mountain, and David made haste to get away for fear of Saul, for Saul and his men compassed David and his men round about to take them. But there came a messenger unto Saul saying, hast thee and come, for the Philistines have invaded the Land, wherefore Saul returned from pursuing after David.

In this Example these things are considerable.

- 1. It was no less then David's life that now was endangered.
- 2. The Ziphites who were acquainted with David's holds, combined themselves also against him.
- 3. All this strength did not only in a war-like way take up arms to meet him, for then by flying back he might have made an escape, but they compassed him round about.
- 4. His strength was not sufficient safely to break through these blood-thirsting forces: Now in this straight, an unexpected providence procures his preservation: In this Mount was God seen gloriously.

The third Example is that of Paul, which you have in the 21. Acts 30.31, 32. All the City was moved, and the people ran together, they bound Paul, drew him out of the Temple, and forthwith the doors were shut, and as they went about to kill him, tidings came to the chief Captain of the band, that all Jerusalem was in an uproar, who immediately took soldiers, and Centurions, and ran down unto them, and when they saw the chief Captain and the soldiers, they left beating Paul.

Herein you may note:

- 1. The general Insurrection, All the City.
- 2. Their violent Opposition, They drew him out.
- 3. Their bloody Intention, It was to kill Paul.
- 4. Their entrance upon execution, They were beating him to beat out his life: Now in this straight cometh tidings, leave him there is something else to do: Thus was God in the Mount seen, and Paul's life preserved.

The fourth Example is of Peter, Acts 12.4, 6, 7. wherein note:

- 1. That Herod intending to kill him (having done execution upon James, ver. 3.) had apprehended him, and imprisoned him.
- 2. In prison he was committed to the custody of four quaternions of soldiers, that for every watch both day and night there might be 4. looking to him to prevent escape.
- 3. The night before he was to be brought forth, he was bound with two chains, and two soldiers had him between them. And now, that night, and in that straight, he was delivered by the Angel of God.

The experiences of God's people in combined companies, come in the next place to be considered, and for brevities sake I will only suggest three.

The first is of Shadrack, Meshech and Abednego, wherein their Persons are not so many as the particulars notable in their deliverance, Dan. 3.19, 20, 21, 22, 23. &c. Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrack, Mesech and Abednego, therefore he spake and commanded that they should heat the furnace seven times more then it was wont to be heated, &c.

From these words their extreme peril with which they were besieged, appears in five circumstances.

- 1. Their death is determined by the King, who had authority to command both their tortures and executioners.
- 2. The most mighty soldiers were appointed to bind them, and do execution upon them.
- 3. The furnace being heated seven times more hot then ordinarily, did burn to death them who undertook their burning.
- 4. These 3. men, were cast not only into the mouth, but into the midst of the furnace.

- 5. They fell down bound in the midst of the burning fiery furnace. Now in this condition, conceive how little hope could be expected of life to be continued, and yet it is affirmed by the Holy Ghost, that they had no hurt, upon their bodies the fire had no power, nor was the hair of their head singed.

The next is of Israel when they came out of Egypt, recorded, Exodus 14. wherein these things set forth Israel's extremity.

- 1. The forces prepared against them, The heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and he made ready his Chariot and tooked his people with him, and he took six hundred chosen Chariots, and all the Chariots of Egypt, and Captains over everyone of them.
- 2. The pursuit made after them, They pursued after the children of Israel, and the Egyptians pursued after them, all the horses and Chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen and his army.
- 3. The dreadful apprehensions raised in the hearts of the Israelites, (viz.) that no less than their death was intended. Why hast thou taken us away to die? Had it not been better for us to serve the Egyptians then that we should die.
- 4. The particulars whereby they were further straightened. 1. The Egyptians overtook them encamping by the Sea. 2. The Seas of they went forward threatened to devour them. In this distress God discovers himself, and delivers them. For observe the words, Moses said unto the people, fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will show to you today.

To day, even just now and not before, help comes from Heaven Herein this farther circumstances hath it's weight, that Israel at this instant was provoking God, by murmuring and distrustful fears.

The last is of Israel in the reign of Jeroboam son of Joash. The Lord saw the affliction of Israel that it was very bitter, for there was not any shut up, nor any left, nor any helper for Israel, and the Lord said not that he would blot out the name of Israel under Heaven, but he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam the son of Joash.

All these passages propounded from sacred records, may abundantly satisfy us in the truth of the doctrine now under hand: (viz.) That in the Mount of the Lord it shall appear, Mans extremity is God's opportunity.

In case you inquire the Reasons of this divine dispensation, I return answer.

That God thus worketh in reference to

- Himself.
- His people.

- Their enemies

1. In reference to himself. The praise and glory of his own blessed Name designed in all his works, is the supreme end aimed at in this Providence. This God bringeth in as the cause why his hand carried Israel to the very side of the Sea, into the mouth of death before deliverance should appear. I will be honored upon Pharaoh and upon all his host; that the Egyptians may know that I am the Lord.

Upon such occasions the Attributes of the Lord break forth in glory, His Wisdom is most manifested when it worketh beyond means, above means, that human reason cannot find out divine foot-steps. His Power triumphs when all opposition shrinketh before his wondrous workings. The like might be shown concerning his other excellencies. The event of God's dealings with Daniel, and the three young governors in the times of their straits, discover that this was God's intent in those providences. For mark how Nebuchadnezzar and the King Darius did trumpet forth the praises of the God of Shadrach, Mesech, Abednego and Daniel, when they were eye witnesses of those two glorious deliverances which were wrought on by omnipotency. Then Nebuchadnezzar spake and said, blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, who hath sent his Angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, and have changed the Kings word, and yielded their bodies that they might not serve, nor worship any god, except their own God. Therefore I make a decree, that every people, nation and language, which speak anything amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dung-hill, Then King Darius wrote unto all people, nations and languages, that dwell in all the earth. I make a decree, that in every dominion of my Kingdom, men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel, for he is the living God, and steadfast forever, and his Kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end. He delivereth and resoueth, and he worketh signs and wonders in Heaven and in earth who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the Lions. By both these instances it is evident, that the Lord doth appear in the Mount for his own sake, to get and raise himself a name in the world.

2. God doth thus work in respect to his own people. And here I will note only four particulars.

1. Sometimes that he might discover to his servants for their encouragement, both the truth and strength of his own graces in them. This was the reason why God thus tried Abraham, that he might manifest that holy fear which was planted in his breast. Hereupon God putteth him to it, and carrieth him into the Mount, leadeth him into distress by degrees, acting him on to build the Altar, to lay the wood in order, to bind his Isaac, to lay him upon the Altar, upon the wood, yea to take the knife, and to stretch forth his hand to slay his son, before he did appear for his comfort, in giving order for the lengthening of Isaac's life. And now when there seemed to be but one minute of time unto the effusion of Isaac's blood, hear the good news from Heaven, Abraham I know thou fearest me.

2. Sometimes to manifest the feebleness of some grace in their hearts for their humbling, Peter thought himself full enough of courage to come to Christ upon the sinking seas it he might have a call. Well! mark the issue, Christ calleth him, come out Peter, but when he saw the winds boisterous, and when his sooting failed, he began to sink, then he was afraid and cried out, hereupon observe Christ's answer, O thou of little faith, why didst thou doubt.

3. That he may set the graces of his Spirit in exercise, both for their increase, and for the enfeebling of contrary lusts. We know that habits are strengthened by exercise, and grace is augmented in its measure, by being put forth vigorously in it's operations. And by how much any grace gathereth strength, by so much the opposing corruption becometh feeble in a Christian breast. And that the Lord hath this end in this kind of working, it might be evidenced by manifold instances, but for brevities sake, I will only point at one, in one single experiment.

As holy affiance in God is confirmed, so by such like dispensations creature confidence is abated in holy hearts, 2 Cor. 1.9, 10. But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead, who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver, in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us. Men in straights see the strength of creature helps shunke up, and withered, whereupon they dare lean to them no longer; but God's irresistible power profound wisdom, abundant goodness, and other glorious attributes in such difficult cases being clearly discovered, the soul is encouraged confidently to cast it self into his arms for future times.

4. That their deliverance might be more sweet to their spirits, and consequently that their joys might the more readily run out before his Majesty in holy thankfulness. When we expect that now our houses shall be fired, the City sack it our estates wasted, our wives abused, our children cruelly murdered, our Sabbath and week day meetings interrupted, our Parliament dissolved, and our Kingdom desolated. Now to see these clouds to blow over, and our Sun to break forth again, oh how sweet will this glorious change be to our now-dropping hearts! David's experince speaks to this purpose, Psal 34.1, 2, 3. A Psalm of David when he changed his behavior before Abimelech, who drove him away, and he departed. I will bless the Lord at all times, his praise shall continually be in my mouth: My soul shall make her boust in the Lord, the hamble shall hear thereof and be glad, oh magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together. Psal. 86.12, 1, 3. I will praise thee O Lord my God with all my heart, and I will glorify thy name for evermore. For great is thy mercy toward me, and thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell. But more fully and fitly may our Kingdom concernments be expressed by: Psal. 124. if our God be pleased now to appear in the Mount for London, for England, in this day of our deep danger, and exceeding, exceeding great fear, And our desired deliverance from present perplexities, may with joy of soul be expressed by the words of that Psalm. If it had not been the Lord who was on our side, now may England say, if it had not been the Lord who was on our side, when men rose up against us, then they had swallowed us up quick, when their wrath was kindled against us, then the waters had overwhelmed us, the stream had gone over our soul, then the proud waters had gone over our soul. But blessed be the Lord who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth, &c.

3. God thus worketh in regard of his people's enemies, both the Devil and devilish men. 1. In regard of the Devil, that he might stop his black and slanderous mouth, which is upon all occasions wide open in ways of calumny, casting slanderous accusations upon God's good servants. When all Jobs estate was removed in a day, all his children knocked dead at one blow, God commending Job saith thus to Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil? and still he holdeth fast his integrity, although thou movedst me against him to destroy him without cause. And Satan answered and said, skin for skin, yea all that a man hath will he give for his life, put forth thy hand now and touch his bone, and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face. Hereupon God bringeth Job into further straights, for this very purpose to silence Satan. And whereas those malignant spirits continue to be the accusers of the Brethren, and are still apt to provoke his Majesty against them, suggesting, that if his providence put them to pinches, they will then sly out, and manifest their carnal fleshliness in the profession and practice of Religion: Hereupon God puts them (as it were) into the stocks, and sets them upon the rack, and causeth them to be besieged with difficulties to prove Satan a notorious liar.

2. In regard of devilish men. Partly to fill their hearts with the more vexation: Partly to chain down their violent spirits, that they may not break forth with further fury against his cause and people, and through the power of strong conviction, to work some change in their lives and courses.

1. To fill their hearts with the more vexation. The Lord doth indeed rejoice in the misery of the wicked. I will laugh at your calamity, and mock when your fear cometh: yea it is a comfort to his highness to pour forth fury upon them: I will cause my fury to rest upon them, and I will be comforted. And the Psalmist seems to give in this, as a reason why God causeth it to be midnight with his servants before light peep forth, why they are in deep danger before daylight appear, Psal. 112.9, 10. Unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness, his heart is established, he shall not be afraid: until he see his desire upon his enemies, his horn shall be exalted with honor, the wicked shall see it and be grieved, he shall gnash with his teeth and melt away. It cutteth a wicked man to the heart, when he thinketh he shall have the day in the downfall of the righteous, and yet the godly they rise and get ground, and gather strength. We have a pregnant proof of this in the example of Haman; who expecting that Mordecai should be hanged, when Mordecai was advanced to great honor, then Haman mourned and hanged down the head: And thus it will be with the popish and profane, who this day rejoice in our doleful straights, when God shall appear in the Mount for our deliverance.

2. That chains of restraint might be laid upon their hearts and hands, by God's strange and amazing providences. When they see that God from Heaven doth give testimonialls of approbation to his poor persecuted servants and service, being plunged over head and ears in the floods of deepest calamity.

This is made good upon Nebuchadnezzar. Therefore I make a decree, that every people, nation and language which speak anything amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dung-hill, because there is no other God that can deliver after this sort. Then the King promoted Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego in the province of Babylon.

In like manner the defeat of Haman, and the deliverance of the poor Jews devoted to destruction, produced the same effect upon many of their enemies. And truly notwithstanding this days fears and straights, we will hope to see some such effects upon the hearts and lives of some who deride and oppose our desired reformation. Thus much for Confirmation of the doctrine. Application followeth. There are four uses to be made which are both natural and seasonable.

Hence it followeth, that people have no ground at all to suspect their own gracious standing in reference to God because of their straights. Deep and devouring dangers may be ready to swallow up the righteous, God may bring an Abraham into the Mount, unto great difficulties, God's people may travel through the red sea in the way to Canaan, seas of trouble, bloody times may overtake them who are most dear to God. This I rather note because God's people are apt to dash upon this rock, and to do themselves much wrong by thus reasoning. If God did love me, or had been graciously respectful to my humiliations and prayers, I should not have seen so black, so dark a day. My self and mine, our peace and Parliament, our persons and possessions had never been in such danger, if the Lord had been favorable to me in seeking better times. Herein David failed: Psal. 73.13, 14. Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocence, for all the day long have I been plagued, and chastened every morning. Now to keep us from adding guilt to our grief, that we may not provoke God to be angry, while our enemies are filled brim full of blood-thirsting fury. I will briefly suggest four considerations, to preserve us from this mistake.

1. By this error acted, we deny the perfection of the word of God, because therein there is no such rule to judge by. Yea the Scriptures openly and evidently speak the contrary, Eccles. 9.1, 2. No man knoweth either love or hatred by all that is before them. All things come alike to all, there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked. And certainly if we shall dare to add our devises to God's word, he will be angry. Add thou not unto his words lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.

2. Thus people bear false witness against themselves, by passing unjustifiable sentences against their own souls. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor. To detract from our neighbors credit and comfort, is a breach of God's law. And truly it admits many aggravations, when we deal thus injuriously with ourselves.

3. We express much ingratitude to God, the God of all our mercies, calling his love into question, and overlooking or undervaluing all former favors, because of present pressures and approaching dangers. Let Israel's miscarriage in this kind be your looking-glass to show the foul face of this fault, that you may take heed of this deformity. When Pharaoh pursued them, and the roaring seas threatened to devour them, their deliverance out of Egypt (though wrought on by many miraculous providences) was accounted a misery rather than a mercy, for observe their language, Exod. 14.11. wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us?

4. By this mistake we reach a wrong to others, Psal. 73.15. If I say I will speak thus, behold I should offend against the generation of thy children. Our carriage in this particular may cast sad discouragements upon the hearts of many dear to God, causing them to question their spiritual state, because of outward straights. Hereby also we seem to suspect their wisdom who uphold their hopes, and maintain their comforts, notwithstanding their manifold heavy afflictions.

Censure not others to be rejected or abhorred by the Lord, because you meet with them in the Mount, you see them in straights, in extremities. Beloved, the words of the Psalmist are considerable. Blessed is he that considereth the poor, the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble, the Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing, thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness. As you desire favorable dealing from God in the time of your personal calamity, learn to judge wisely and charitably of them who are in extremity. The Barbarians did censure Paul to be a man under some black note of infamy, fastened upon him by the Lord, because of his sudden and unexpected danger. Acts 28.4. And when the Barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said among themselves, no doubt this man is a murderer. Mark their confidence as well as their uncharitableness, no doubt he is a murderer: And why no doubt? because though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth him not to live, for a venomous viper, a death threatening creature now did hang upon his hand. Beloved when we look upon men arrested by credit-killing accusations, and pursued with death-threatening charges, and constrained to hide themselves from the bloody hands of violence, let us take heed of adding to their sorrow by our censures. That practice which was well beseeming Barbarians, will be very uncomely for us Christians. Two things consider to keep you from this fault, which I will propound without much enlargement.

- 1. The sinfulness of this censoriousnesse.
- 2. The dangerousnesse of this censoriousnesse.

The sinfulness of it:

1. Being forbidden by Christ, judge not, that you be not judged; judge not, that is, not rashly, groundlessly, uncharitably.
2. Arguing want of love, for truth and strength of love maketh fair and canded constructions of all occurances which concern them whom we love. Charity doth not behave it self unseemly, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things.
3. Weakning love, for affection is enfeebled by our looking upon our brethren through the glass which presents them as unlovely, while we think them persons disregarded by God, our respect to them is diminished.
4. Hindering prayer, the Apostle knew this, and therefore I pray you consider by what an argument he presseth the Hebrews to pray for him, pray for us, for we trust we have a good conscience in all things, willing to live honestly. If you be well persuaded of the afflicted in regard of their pious frame, you will be the more willing to let out your hearts for them in a way of prayer. But when men thus think, the Heavens frown, and God is angry with such an one, and therefore it is a vain thing to bestow time and breath in prayer for him, this office of Christian love is interrupted. By these particulars you may perceive that this censoriousnesse is very sinful; sinful in the root, and sinful in the fruits, sinful in the heart, and sinful in the life, checking grace, and hindering duty.

2. Consider the dangerousnesse of it.

1. God is much incensed, You remember how Eliphaz and the other of Jobs friends, loaded him with their heavy censures, concluding his hypocrisy from his extremity. Now when God had done with Job, having schooled him out of the whirlwind, and had wrought him to his own bent, observe what followeth, The Lord said to Eliphaz the Tewanite, my wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends, for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right as my servant Job hath. Therefore my beloved if you would not suffer under God's frowns, nor smart under the expressions of his displeasure, if you would not have the sparks of God's wrath to kindle upon you, take heed of censuring any of God's worthies that have been instrumental for good either in Church or commonwealth, because for the present under a black cloud, because exposed unto any disgrace or danger, by reason of some sad providence.

2. Our censoriousnesse may in our suffering times add much weight to our own heavy pressures. If I censure others, and thereby add affliction to their bonds, I may expect that God will add gall to my wormwood, when the bitter cup cometh to my hand, and I must perforce take down a displeasing and distasteful draught. Judge not, that you be not judged, for with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged, and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again. These meditations made use of, may, I hope through God's mercy, prevent our sinning against God, others and ourselves, by uncharitable censures cast upon our distressed brethren.

It concerneth all of us to prepare for a journey into the Mount, to make ready for trials by extremities. Beloved, this day the Heavens are black over our heads, and our fears are not few, for ought we know God will have us into the Mount, my meaning is, it may be the Lord will thrust us into such extremities, as we never yet met with in all our lives.

There are two things that I will plainly speak to in the enlarging of this use.

- 1. What may quicken us to prepare for straights.
- 2. What course must be taken that we may be prepared for such a condition.

To persuade our preparation, consider two motive.

- 1. That we are all exposed unto perplexities.
- 2. That we are all subject to manifold miscarriages in such a state.

1. We are all subject to a distressed condition, let him that denieth it bring forth his supersedias, and say here, I have that from Heaven signed and fealed, which doth secure me I shall never come into adversity. Beloved, believe it, whatsoever afflictions have seized upon any of God's worthies formerly, may overtake you and me before we die, and we cannot tell how speedily. You have heard what befell Israel, and why may not the same betide England, you have heard what befell Abraham, David, Daniel, Paul, and why may not we look for the like.

Secondly, Subject we are to many miscarriages when God in his providence bringeth us to extremities: I will only hint this in a word or two.

1. Extremities do expose us unto unbelief, A grievous sin it is to suffer our souls at any time to be taken from an holy adherence, and firm dependence upon our God, and yet thus we are in danger to dishonor his highness, and wrong our own souls in times of distress. David's example doth evidence this fully. What more fair promise can any man embrace, then that which God made to him particularly, that he should be the King of Israel, and yet when David was in a straight, you hear of his distrust from his own confession, I was greatly afflicted, I said in my hast all men are liars, Nathan a liar, and all others who told him of succeeding Saul in the Kingdom of Israel, they were all liars. And why? because he saw not a fair and easy passage to the crown. The like also is recorded concerning him, when wearied out with the bloody pursuit of envious Saul. And David said in his heart, I shall perish now one day by the hand of Saul.

2. In distress we are disposed to strange impatency and discontent of spirit, which distemper doth woefully disguise our hearts, and disgrace our profession. It is a wonderful thing that ever a heart furnished with grace, should fly out as Jonah did. First, he thought he had lost his reputation, because Nineveh by him threatened was by the Lord spared. Well, he goeth out, and then the Sun annoyed him in regard of his body, but God provided a shelter, and the man was calm, afterward the gourd being worm-eaten and withered, Jonah he chafes and frets. The Lord checks him by this interrogation, doest thou well to be angry? Mark and be warned by his answer, I do well to be angry even unto death. The history of patient Job also proves this plentifully.

3. I might add, that we are subject to sinful fears, which dismay and torment the heart, check duty, weaken joy, and interrupt our sweet communion with God. Take notice of this distemper in God's own people, for which his majesty chideth them, And who art thou that fearest a man that shall die, and the son of man that is but as grass, and for gettest the Lord thy maker, that hath stretched forth the Heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth, and hast feared continually every day, &c.

4. Apt we are to use sinful shifts betaking ourselves to unworthy practices to safeguard ourselves in times of extremity. Observe this in Peters practice, his Master is apprehended, violently carried away, likely to suffer death as a grievous malefactor. Now he seeth himself surrounded with them that oppose Christ, and this distress drove him upon a dangerous rock, a three-fold denial of his dearest Master: Let this move you and me, to prepare that we may not in like manner miss it, if God shall be pleased thus to prove us.

These things I believe do affect your hearts, whereupon in probability you will desire direction. Attend therefore and I will give you some counsel briefly: There are six things which I shall commend to your consideration and practice.

First, You must labor to make sure your propriety in God: When David upon service had been abroad, Ziglack the place where he left his wife and children was burnt, when he cometh home, there was no house to entertain him, no wife to welcome him, no children to be a comfort unto him, they all were carried captive, hereupon he with the rest, wept till they could weep no longer, &c. But David encouraged himself in the Lord his God. Heede here the ground of his support and consolation, not the Lord God, but the Lord his God, deity and propriety hold up his heavy heart, for the good man enjoying God, might thus refresh his drooping spirit. What though I have not an house to dwell in? thou art my dwelling place, my habitation, a place of sweetest rest and safest refuge. What though I have not a Wife? I have more in God then a yoke-fellow could have afforded. What though I have not a Child? there is more then the comfort of a numerous posterity in the blessed Deity. The soldiers cannot batter down this castle, the pilfering people pillaging, cannot possibly steal away this treasure, the troops of robbers, the desperate Cavilliers cannot deprive of this possession: This might be much enlarged both seasonably and profitably, but I must not insist upon anything. But this is my request, that you would without delay endeavor to clear up your interest in the almighty, that your dejected hearts may not abide disconsolate in the days of your distress.

Secondly, Acquaint yourselves with God, and labor to be familiar with his Majesty by constant and frequent communion through Jesus Christ. Men desire to know the utmost worth of what they have in possession, and what improvement may be made thereof if need should so require. We read in the Parable, that he that had bought a piece of ground, must needs go to see it, and therefore he must be excused if other things be neglected. If we were thus wise for our souls, we would seek to know, and to improve our God who is our inheritance, yea our all, unto our various advantages in the times of our greatest need. Seriously therefore ask thyself this question, What have I in having a God? What have I? I have infinite wisdom to advise me in all difficulties, infinite power to carry me through all straights, abundant goodness to supply all my wants, the tenderest bowels to commiserate me in my most doleful condition, yea I have all sufficiency to fill me brim full, and running over unto satisfaction. I added converse with thy God. He that would have comfort from Physicians in time of sickness, gaineth and maintaineth acquaintance with them in time of health. If you and I shall dare to keep at a distance from God in a way of estrangement from his Majesty in summer days, and in sun-shine seasons, when the Heavens are clear, and the City is peaceable, and the Parliament promising, and our hopes flourishing, we shall want comfort through communion with God, when the sun setteth, winter approacheth, Parliament breaketh, and misery threateneth on every side. Being in hast I shall here lay heads confusedly on heaps, whereas I should distinctly have discovered three things.

- 1. How God is revealed in holy writ for our comfort in the worst of times.
- 2. By what courses Christians should gain, and maintain communion with their God.

- 3. What fruitful improvements may be made of God by such employments. But I shall leave these things to your private care, having suggested this course by way of friendly counsel to make way for your comfort in the day of distress.

Thirdly, Walk exactly. Take heed of making breaches upon your consciences, by willing and willful sinning against the God of your comforts. Beloved, beloved you know that those who have had bruises and broken bones, they will feel aches in hard weather, and certainly if you will in time of prosperity dare to sin against conscience, it will add sorrow to your Sops, and gall to your wormwood, when God cometh upon you in a way of bitter calamity. Sinful sensual surfeits upon sweet morsels, will breed wringing pains, and painful vomits. The sons of Jacob were in a great straight when they were taken for spies as the story reports. What did now wring them? The remembrance of sin, though many years since committed, ah our brothers blood, our brothers blood; we would not pity him when he made his moan, and now God will be avenged of us. Alas, alas, we were hard-hearted towards a brother, and therefore no wonder that we meet with harshness amongst strangers. Whereas the maintaining of a clear conscience, ô what a comfort will it be when all shall be blackness, and blood about us. See it in Paul and his companions. When they made no other account but to die, what saith Paul, This was our rejoicing, (that was strange, rejoice when the next day they might expect to go to the stake?) well saith Paul our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, we have had our conversation in the world. Beloved, believe it that you cannot lay in a better cordial, to comfort and to stay your hearts in fearful, fainting, distressing, dying times, then by exact walking with God before the storm fall. The Apostles experience puts a probatum est unto this prescription. For ought we know, the day is at hand wherein we shall hear the war-Horses neighing, the murdering Cannons roaring, the little Children skreaking, and the fearful Women skritchng: You know not, beloved, how soon you may see your City flaming, your own houses burning, your goods wasting. It will be a sad sight to behold your Wives barbarously abused, your Husbands bloodily butchered, and your Children cruelly tormented. I beseech you, I beseech you, consider now what will yield you comfort then. When Hezekiah did daily expect to die, take notice, unto what he betook himself for solace and support: Remember now ô Lord I beseech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. In like manner may we raise up our sinking hearts in such heavy times, if we can truly thus speak unto the soul-searching Majesty. Lord while times were peaceable and prosperous, when I was surrounded with comforts on every side, thou knowest I had a heart to walk with thee humbly, to observe thy Sabbath holily, to use thy worships purely, and to aim at the honor of thy name sincerely. This, this will cheare you both living and dying. You know that neither the loud winds, nor the black clouds, nor the great showers, nor the flashings of lightning, nor the hideous claps of thunder, do so much affright us, as an earthquake. But when some vapors are got into the hollow places, the bowels of the earth, and the foundation of the world shakes, this is terrible, this is terrible indeed, though the Sun shine, and no cloud appear in the sky. In like manner it is not so much an outward affliction as guilt within, guilt within which causeth the heart of man to rock and quake through fear within him. Therefore take heed, stop all the passages into your souls, keep the heart with all diligence, that no known guilt be admitted into it, as you desire a stable, firm frame of spirit, prepared for the strongest storms, the greatest straits wherewith divine providence may possibly prove you.

Fourthly, If you have made wounds and bruises in your consciences, seek an healing plaster by sound repentance suddenly. A bone broken being well set (they say) becomes the stronger. David had gashed his conscience grievously, both by uncleanness and murder, in the matter of Bathsheba and Uriah. Notwithstanding by means of Nathan's plain dealing being wrought to deep sorrow, the wound was healed, and the same mouth which cured him by a corrosive, gave him this comfort, God hath forgiven thy sin, thou shalt not die. Now after this, according to the threatening of Nathan, God raised up evil against him out of his own house, and he was in a wonderful straight, Absalom was up in arms against him. This distress occasioned the third Psalm, as the title tells, wherein he expresseth his perplexed condition. Many are they that rise up against me, many there be that say of my soul there is no help for him in God. Now here is a straight indeed, many imagining, that Heaven could not help him: yet if you will by his phrase of speech, judge the frame of his heart, you shall find as much confidence in him now, as ever in all his life: Take notice of it. But thou ô Lord art a shield for me, my glory, and the lifter up of my head. I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people, that have set themselves against me round about. Yea this is added, I laid me down and slept. Consider in his supposition, 1. The number of enemies, viz. ten thousand. 2. The manner of their opposition, though they should rise up in a warlike manner against me. 3. Their advantage against him, and his danger to be apprehended by them. It is not though they come to meet me, or though they make after me, for then by flight he might hope for safety, But though they should beset me round about, &c. David having made his peace with God, though now in a very great distress, yea although (remembering God's threathing) he might read his scandalous sins, in this heavy affliction, yet his confidence, courage and comfort is very remarkable. If any of your consciences now wring you upon the remembrance of such a sin, or such a sin, (I name none, but leave it between God and your own hearts to consider of it) go home repeat, repent and make your peace with God today, without any further delay, that you may be sit for a straight if it should come tomorrow.

Fifthly, Mind and trade your experience. God hath done already as much for England as is yet to be done, to set all things right and in order again amongst us. Not many Moneths since, our days were as dark, our fears as great, and our enemies as many as now. Let us therefore remember ourselves, the Lord lives, the Almighty is in Heaven, he still is mindful of his covenant, and changeth not. The holy Scriptures yield us plentiful proof of improving former experiences, to arm against future fears. That of David is notable, Thy servant slew both the Lyon and the Bear, and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them. David said moreover, The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the Lyon, and out of the paw of the Bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. When my heart is overwhelmed, lead me to the rock that is higher then I, for thou hast been a shelter for me, and a strong tower from the enemy. In like manner the Apostle improves his deliverance from Nero, that persecutor. No man stood by me, but all forsook me, notwithstanding the Lord stood with me and strengthened me, and I was delivered out of the mouth of the Lyon. Consider the words, Paul was not only in the Lions den, not only within the reach of the Lions chain, nor only under the Lions paw, but in the Lions mouth. Now his inference is observable, And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly Kingdom. Again note, We had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead. Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver, in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us. Here for your help, I will hint one experience still fresh in our minds, God settled peace between us and Scotland, when after great preparations for war, the armies were set in battle array, the onset given, the skirmish begun, blood drawn, many slain, the two Kingdoms ready to be broken in pieces, the one against the other. Consider what great things God hath done, and trade your experiences for your future profit.

Sixty, Cleere up your evidences for Heaven, and keep them so fair, that in the darkest day they may be legible, easy to be read without hacking and hesitancy. The usefulness hereof in evil times appears in the Apostles experience, For which cause we faint not, but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our light affliction that is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weigh of glory. Mind the ground, For we know that if our earthly house of this Tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens. The heir apparent of Heaven, may hold up head and heart, and in this manner express himself: come the worst that can come, though my state shall decay, my soul and body part, myself and dearest natural friends be plucked asunder, yet I have in Heaven, a better and more enduring substance: more and better friends, sweeter and more satisfying communion. If they take away my trash, the true treasure, that is out of their reach. What if they take down my tottering tabernacle of clay? I shall have a glorified, a beautified body to all eternity, in spite of hell and earth combining against me. What if they drive me out of house, and City, and Kingdom, the best is, they cannot expel me from my God, nor deprive me of a mansion, an abiding place in the City of God, the Kingdom of Heaven.

It is a ground of sweet joy, and strong encouragement unto us, notwithstanding our present state which is dark and dreadful. Here we may seasonably with comfort call to mind that strange apparition unto Moses: A bush burning with fire, and yet the bush was not consumed. Beloved, what slames of fury are now kindled in the bosoms of many, threatening to burn down all our hopes? Yet let us pluck up courage, for though our sins have made us combustible matter, yet may we hope that our God will not consume us. Let us cheare ourselves against the jeares and insolencies of the Malignant party with the words of the Church, Rejoyce not against me ô my enemy, when I fall I shall rise again, when I sit in darkness the Lord shall be a light unto me. Some interpreters conceive, Abraham had this deliverance hinted before hand, and therefore first told his servants, I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you: and afterward going to the place where Isaac was to be sacrificed; when the child said, father, father here is the wood, but where is the burnt offering, he answered, my son God will prepare one, and this held up the good man's heart, encouraging him thus to resolve, I will go on, I will see what God will do, I will put him to it. We are in straights at this day, I need not tell you, and who knows but that today in the Mount God will appear for our comfort. Much I cannot speak through want of time to this use, yet dare I not altogether be silent, considering the season. Under two heads I will briefly assist your sinking spirits by way of advice.

1. Learn aright to make way for desired comforts in times of distress, that you may have this Texts, and this Sermons encouragement at hand, not only now, but hereafter when you may stand in need.

2. Improve the particulars comprised in this title Jehovah, held forth for our use in the Text now handling, I may not now speak under these heads, both unto our National and Personal concernments distinctly. For the former, way is made for our refreshing in the worst of times that can possibly overtake us.

1. By studying the qualifications to which favor is promised.

2. By using the means of our good which by the Lord are prescribed.

First, Everyone may not challenge propriety in the privilege of the Text. Every loose-liver may not come out and say, well I in the Mount God will be seen, and therefore I will fear no colors. No, no, for there is a peculiar gracious disposition to be found upon the hearts of them who may expect that God will appear in the Mount for them, for their consolation.

1. Your souls must be so seasoned with God's fear, that having his command, you will not draw back from any service put upon your hands, how hard, how heavy soever. Mark it in Abraham, Abraham now I know thou fearest me, and how doth his fear discover it self, Upon divine commission he sets upon a service, the doing whereof, was against heart and hair, repugnant to reason, without all president, against the stream of natural affections, crossing the conceit and opinion of the world. Can you imagine if Isaac had been slain, and the fact known, what a hubbub would have been in the Country? how many mouths would have been opened, in reporting Abraham's strange and unheard of cruelty? Isaac is killed, and his own father, father Abraham, that religious man, he himself hath killed him, how would this have rung in every corner? Do but think what Mother Sarah would have said upon her Husbands return home, Husband where is Isaac? and conjecture with what a sad heart he might have made this answer, Wife I have killed him, and I have burnt him before God as a sacrifice. Beloved, neither these things, nor any other which might be cast in as discouragements, did take him off from duty. The fear of God carried him above all discouragements, both from his natural affections, his wives frowns, and the worlds clamours. And to this man, thus fearing God, God appears in the Mount: Mind this I pray you, and labor herein to be like this gracious man, thus devoted to God's fear.

2. You must, not dare to adventure upon any known sin, though it be to safeguard your persons, your estates, your places of favor and honor, your anything, your all things under the Sun. A man of this make, is one who may expect to meet with the Almighty in the Mount. The proof of this is fair in the experience of Daniel. The decree was signed, he must not for thirty days pray unto his God, if he did, he must be thrown into the Lions den, well saith Daniel, let the Lions make a meal upon my body, I am resolved I will not forbear this worship due to my God, I will not thus interrupt my communion with my heavenly Father. The like you have in the three young Governors, the King he would have them fall down and worship the image he had set up. If you will not, you must into the furnace. Mark their answer, Our God whom we serve is able to deliver, but if not, be is known unto thee, we will not serve thy gods. And the proof of the point reported how God appeared in the days of their distress for their deliverance, unto these experiments I might add Promises. If thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke, the putting forth of the singer, and speaking vanity, and if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul. The meaning is, if you will betake yourselves to courses of piety and mercy, contrary to your former ways of wickedness and violence, then shall your light break forth in obscurity, and your darkness be as the noon-day. And the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones, and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not. If iniquity be in thy hand put it far away, and let not wickedness dwell in thy Tabernacle, for then shalt thou lift up thy face without spot, yea thou shalt be steadfast, and thou shalt not fear. What encouragements should these be to persuade us to reform ourselves, and to endeavor the amendment of one another. Therefore go home now, and thus say to God, and to yourselves seriously and sincerely, I am resolved I will leave my cheating, and cozening, my oaths, lying, my hypocrisy and pride, and all my other known sins. Away with these and all other discovered abominations, promise God for future times to betake yourselves unto a better course of living, as you desire the sweet and seasonable discoveries of God, in the time of your greatest need.

Secondly, The means of your good must be used, and they are,

- 1. Civil.
- 2. Sacred.

For Civil means, You must not say we care not whether we have anymore watch in the City, night or day, we will trouble and charge ourselves no further in this kind. But you must hold on in being serviceable to divine providence, otherwise you will tempt God. There is a notable example of Joab in this case both commendable and imitable. When Joab saw the front of the battle was against him, before and behind, he chose all the choice men of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians, and the rest of the people he delivered into the hand of his brother. And he said, if the Assyrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me, but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee then I will come and help thee. Now be of good courage, and let us play the men and fight for God and our country, and the Lord do that which seemeth him good. Remember we have by solemn protestation bound ourselves before God to do our utmost in ways lawful for the honor of our King, the liberty of the Protestant Religion, for the peace and welfare of the three Kingdoms, and for the privileges of our Parliament, and keeping within the limits of our callings, to oppose Popery, and popish innovations. Therefore every man according to the laws of God and of the land, must unweariedly be industrious, night and day, for the Kingdoms good, in the use of means, both defensive and offensive, as necessity may require.

2. There are means sacred, Tears and Prayers are the Christians best weapons, this munition let us make use of. Jeh shaphat surrounded with danger, when Moab, Ammon, and the children of Mount Seir came out against him, what course doth he betake himself to? he feared, and set himself to seek the Lord, and proclaimed a fast. And David being in danger to loose both his Kingdom and his life, by the insurrection of Absalom, betook himself to prayer, to break the neck of Ahithophel's crafty counsel, and also to secure himself from the hand of violence, now stretched forth against him. Beloved, as God's command, and the practice of his people, do guide us unto this employment, so God's precious promises, and our own glorious experiences, touching the prevalency of this ordinance, should persuade our perseverance herein in these times of fear and danger.

Secondly, What is the improvement of the original word here used, In the Mount Jehovah shall be seen. This title hath much in it, a great deal more then I may mention. Thus much I have observed from holy Scripture, that it both,

1. Advanceth God.
2. And advantageth a Christian in times of straights.

Let the righteous be glad, let them rejoice before God, yea let thē exceedingly rejoice. Sing unto God, sing praises to his name, extol him that rideth on the Heavens by his Name Jah, and rejoice before him. Four things there be hinted in this title Jehovha, and they are all useful for our present purpose.

This title holdeth forth the Lord's,

- 1. Sovereignty.
- 2. Independancy.
- 3. Immutability.
- 4. Fidelity.

1. It suggesteth the Lord's unlimited Sovereignty, his absolute and undoubted authority over all things. Jehovah he is the most high, not only high, or higher then many, or more high then the most, but the most high over all the earth. It is Jehovah that ruleth Kings, and ordereth Crowns, joy in him, he can rule both the Kings heart and counsel, he governeth in the Country and in the City, at Westminster, and here within the walls: Therefore still rejoice in him, for he is Jehovah, the all-governing Majesty.

2. It noteth his independency. All creatures for their continuance, have a kind of dependence upon one another. As the grass and plants upon the earth, the brutes upon the fruits of the earth, and our nutriment is from inferior creatures. But our Jehovah dependeth upon none, he is of, and from himself, he needeth no servant, no service. In him we all live, move and have our being, but his Majesty is beholding to none, either men or Angels, either for being or well-being. Thus much God intended to teach by his speech to Moses, and God said unto Moses, I am that I am. We think verily that we shall be utterly undone if the Parliament break up, or if our King divide himself from this his body representative. Beloved, my soul maketh out to God for the prevention of this sad fraction. Yet I beseech you remember this, whatsoever falls out, that whereas all men, and all ordinances, Kings and Parliaments depend on God, yet our God Jehovah is an independent Majesty.

3. It intimateth God's Immutability, All other things change, As a snow ball melteth by our handling it, and the flower withereth by our smelling it, so these sublunary contentments wast and ware away by our using them. But in the Lord Jehovah there is everlasting strength, or as the original language expresseth it, The Lord Jehovah is a rock of ages, he abideth the self same, strong, unalterable, immovable God throughout all generations.

Mind this (my beloved) that though England Ireland-like should be wasted, although there should be sad changes in Church and Common-wealth, in City and Country, in Towns and Families: Yet still our Jehovah continues in himself, and unto his people the self-same All-sufficient, All-satisfying God. Surely we who pitch our hearts and hopes upon this unchangeable foundation, the Lord Jehovah, may abide steady in our spirits and comforts in the midst of the worst alterations that can overtakes us.

4. It expresseth God's fidelity. And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the Name of God almighty, but by my Name Jehovah was I not known unto them. The true meaning is, that whereas God had manifested abundantly his power by many glorious providences in former times, now he intended to prove himself mindful and careful of his promises made unto his people. Now let us make improvement hereof for our comfort. Search divine records, consider the various precious promises annexed by the Almighty unto the covenant of free grace and mercy. Choose out of those Gospel treasures, such pearls as you put the highest prizes upon, Collect those particular promises, which you conceive most pertinent for your condition, and most full your satisfaction. And from this sweet title Jehovah, you may comfortably and confidently infer this conclusions.

Whatsoever Promise is registered in the book of God, either in the old or New Testament, that this Jehovah will set all his attributes on work, for the full and seasonable accomplishment thereof unto his own people by special covenant. Therefore having evidenced your propriety in Gospel Promises through Jesus Christ, from this bottom build your comforts, in the darkest and most doleful times. Is is Jehovah the all-governing, the independing, the immutable and faithful God that will be seen in the Mount for his servants deliverance.

LONDON, Printed by G. M. for Edward Brewster at the Sign of the Bible at Fleet-Bridge, M.DC.XLIV.

A true Relation of the most chief Occurrences, at, and since the late Battle at Newbery, until the disjunction of the three Armies of the Lord General, the Earl of Manchester, and Sir William Waller, &c.

NOT only importunity from friends, but necessity in regard of others of various ways and spirits, doth compel me to give in a true Narrative according to my knowledge and best intelligence, concerning the proceedings of the three Armies conjoined (vid. the Lord Generals, my Lord of Manchesters, and Sir William Wallers) both when the Battle was fought at Newbery, and since the Enemies retreat from thence. For not only the reports of many, but also a Letter sent unto me, do suggest; that my silence, now, when my testimony may do good service, doth give occasion both to my Noble Lord's foes and friends, to suspect his faultiness (if not unfaithfullnesse) in a great measure; because heretofore I openly appeared in relating his actions in the North, when there was no need to vindicate his reputation; but now I am mute, when his fidelity to Church and Common-wealth is questioned, and when he is censured, yea clamoured against, as the only blame-worthy cause of the disappointments lately in the West. For my silence hitherto, I can make this just apology. 1. In regard of the daily intelligence, which went from the Army to London, either by Post or otherwise, I conceived it not necessary, or much useful for me to be a weekly Intelligencer to my friends in the City, as when the Army lay before York. 2. Neither was I altogether silent, when I espied occasion and a call to speak: For within few days after the relieving of Dennington Castle, when I understood what clamours and censures were in London, through the misreport and mistake of our actions, I gave a short and true Relation of our Occurrences, for the satisfaction of private friends, which Relation, was the sum of that which I shall now report: and at that time I was very far from imagining, that my Lord, the Earl of Manchester, would by any Officer of the Army, be accused, as less faithful, or less careful then others, in promoting the Kingdoms good. 3. Since the Accusation charged upon my Lord, in the Honorable House of Commons, I have held my tongue, lest I should incur displeasure, by seeming pragmatistical, in intermeddling in a business, committed by them to examination, with expectation of a report. But now hearing, that the business there is suspended (some say silenced) and knowing that the loud cries of people, either ignorant, or disaffected to my Lord's credit, do sound far and near, to his dishonor, I have resorved to take the boldness, to represent what I know, both to vindicate my Noble Lord's honor, and to undeceive them (if my testimony may be of any credit) who are too apt and easy to believe calumnies cast upon well-deserving men, wanting patience to wait for truths discovery, by a full and impartial trial; which in this business, cannot be more earnestly desired by any: then it is by my Lord himself, and by his best friends.

I wish that these things may be premised, which I suppose cannot with any color of truth be contradicted. 1. That no motion, no march, no service of the three Armies after their first conjunction, was made or undertaken, but according to the relust of the Council of War. 2. That the Earl of Manchester, never assumed to himself, to be accounted or observed, as Commander in Chief, but always voted, as one that had but equal authority with the rest, and acted accordingly in observation of the orders, concluded by common Council. 3. That he often professed unto the chief Commanders; that because himself was no experienced Soldier, therefore he would rather be guided, then guide; rather be acted by their counsels, then act on either himself or them, according to his own private thoughts.

Upon Friday Octob. 25. we hoped (from the news brought in by our Scouts) the day following, to fight with the Enemy; but the next morning drawing up our whole body, we found that the Enemies had in such sort blockt up the way to Newbery by many works, that our hopes of engaging with them were disappointed. Hereupon it was resolved at a Council of War, that to force the Enemy to fight, our Forces should in this manner be divided, (vid.) All my Lord Generals Horse and Foot, the greatest part of my Lord of Manchesters Horse, and almost all the Forces under the Command of Sir William Waller and Sir Arthur Heislerig, together with the London Brigade, did march to Speene hill: But the Earl of Manchester; Foot, with a small body of Horse, was left in the field on this side Shaw (a little village) near to M^r Dolmans house, which was possessed and fortified by the Enemy. When the Army was thus divided, this order was left with my Lord of Manchester; that so soon as he heard of the engagement of our Friends on Spcene hill (by the discharging of the Canon) he should fall on the Enemy on this side the River, that he might divert the strength of the battle, from them there.

I will forbear here, to relate the hardship which both parts of our Army met with, that night; because that would be a digression not to my purpose.

On Sabbath day morning early, my Lord of Manchester, with the Forces remaining under his command, were in readiness to assault the Enemy, expecting from hour to hour, to hear of the engagement at Speene hill: And here to witness the Earl of Manchesters willingness to fight with the Enemy, let this be noted, which is a known truth (vid.) that in the morning, he commanded a party of about 400 Musketeeres to fall on, over the little River, on the left hand of Shaw, that he might soon enough divert the enemies strength from Speene hill: This party of ours, took two of the Enemies works, one Captain, and several prisoners; but marching too far, contrary to order, they were beaten back with some loss; by this service, the greatest part of the Kings Foot was drawn towards us, and so the work to which we were designed, was accomplished long before our friends on Speene hill did engage. In this place, I might take occasion truly to report, the great pains which my Lord Manchester took from morning till evening, often exposing himself to very much danger (the Enemies Drakes playing frequently upon us) in riding from Regiment to Regiment, to encourage the Soldiers, and to keep them in due order, fit for that service which every moment almost was expected: but there are many hundreds, I might say, divers thousands, who can tell the truth hereof, which proves, that my Lord was not so backward to fight, and so regardless of the Kingdoms service that day, as many would have the world to believe. About 4 a clock (as was guessed) we heard the Canon begin to play on Speene hill, at which time, my Lord commanded 2 Drakes to be drawn forth (though our Canon hitherto had not been altogether idle) and to be planted in a convenient place to do service against the Enemy at Dolmans house, and to make way for the falling on of our Foot there, according to the order given, when our Army divided. Those Drakes did good execution upon the Enemy divers times, forcing their retreat to their works about the house. Now we saw the fighting of the Muskitieres on Speene hill, which discovered the service there to be very hot; and not long after, with joy and thankfulness, we beheld the hasty, disorderly retreat of the Enemy towards Newbery, wondering that our party did not pursue the victory. It is besides my intention in this Relation, to report the posture of our Army on Speene hill, or to give by a full report, the due praise to my Lord Generals Foot and others, who then and there, did excellent and praiseworthy service: Neither indeed, need I, to bestow words hereon, because the world hath been acquainted with these things heretofore. But my Lord of Manchesters Horse, commanded by Liev. Col. Cromwell (from whom very much was expected) did little service, gained no honor in this work this day. For my part, I know not whom to blame, I will asperse no man, but leave it to their judgment, who were on the ground, to judge who were blame-worthy, in being backward to pursue that happy opportunity, upon the flying, fainting Enemy. Notwithstanding, let me here tell you, what many speak; That it my Lord of Manchester had now been in his own person, at the Head of his body of Horse, this neglect would have been charged home upon him, and conclusions would hence, confidently and clamorously have been inferred, that my Lord of Manchester was unwilling to bring the Kings Army too low, otherwise, now the woeful wasting wars, might in all probability have been fully well ended.

But to return unto my work. You must not imagine that my Lord of Manchesters Foot were all this while idle spectators on this side the River (although as I told you before, the Enemies best Foot were diverted from Speen hill, which might have extenuated the seeming fault of some delays) for while our Drakes (before mentiond) were at work, a commanded party of 500 Muskiteers was drawn forth as a Forelorn-hope, to assault the Enemy, who being seconded with the several Brigades of Foot, continued in hot service, until for want of day light to direct, our Soldiers wounded & killed one another. The undaunted valor of our Foot was admirable, they were indeed too forward too adventurous, overrunning their commands, unwilling to be called off. And here this is notable, that when one company of our Foot had taken one of the Works of the Enemy, another Company (through overmuch forwardness and mistake) did beat them out again. So that our greatest loss, both in regard of men wounded and slain, was from ourselves. All this while, my Lord of Manchester was with his Soldiers, (as mine eyes, and thousands more can witness) to countenance and encourage the service: and those who know what dangers he then adventured upon, and how long he continued in the field that night, yea, what care he took to prevent the mischiefs of the night from a Neighbor Enemy, and to prepare for the continuance of the battle, which was verily expected by us the next morning; those many (I say) who understood and remember these things, will not easily believe that his Lordship was averse to fighting, and unwilling speedily to end these wars, though multitudes, through ignorance, rashness, and misbeliefe, do in this manner asperse and caluminate him.

That night, the daunted Enemy did in the dark steal away from Newbery; what no tice our friends at Speen, had of the marching away of the Enemy, I cannot affirm, for reports are various; though all acknowledge, that they had some noise thereof: but this I am sure of, that my Lord of Manchester had not the least hint of the Enemies retreat, till near daybreak in the morning; and his intelligence then, was single and uncertain, from a stranger. Yet upon this intimation, his Lordship hastened into the field, to improve opportunity, there the news was confirmed, that the Enemy was gone indeed. Hereupon our whole body was called together; and so soon as we had in the field (near the dead bodies both of friends and foes, which lay on the ground) made our addresses to God, both by praise and prayer, according to the present affecting providences, we marched over the River to Newbery: all this while we neither met with, nor heard from our friends at Speen, whereupon we hoped that they were in pursuit of the scattered flying Enemy. My Lord of Manchester rested not, till he met with some of the Commanders, who had been upon the service at Speen, and with them returned to Newbery, to consult about the improvement of the present Victory. These particulars, which I knowingly do report, may evidence my Lord's forwardness, to husband advantages and opportunities, for the promoting of the public service. But though my Lord Generals Horse, and Sir William Wallers Horse were gone some hours before after the Enemy, yet my Lord Manchesters Horse, (commanded by Lieu. Gen. Cromwell) we found in the field near Newbery, together in a body.

It would be impertinent, for me here to speak of by-businesses of small importance, which common fame hath trumpeted abroad. The taking of the Coaches, with the Men and Horses attending the persons in them, was effected by my Lord of Manchesters forwardness, to furnish Col. Birch with a party of Horse for his assistance, whereof I am a witness, being used as a messenger unto my Lord to expedite that work.

And whether his Lordship during our stay at Newbery, was not as desirous as any others, in every kind to serve the public, I refer it to the judgment of them who were daily conversant with him. We having after some days, full intelligence, that the King was at Oxford, there recruiting his Army, and hearing also, that he intended to fight, so soon as the additional forces sent for, came to him, our Army marched from Newbery on Saturday towards Oxford, and that night the Head quarter was at Compton. Upon Sabbath day the Army marched towards Blewbery, and the Head quarter that night was at Harwell, and the Army quartered in adjacent Villages, until this time the Lord Warriston and Mr. Erem (who came to us at Basing, being sent from the Committee of both Kingdoms, to assist the service of the Army by their counsel) can testify what was my Lord of Manchesters care and carriage in his place, and unto their testimony thus far I might refer them, who are unsatisfied. This day at a Council of War (before these our friends left us) it was found impossible for us to march with our Carriages beyond Abbingdon, because the ways, were judged deep and unpassable.

On Monday my Lord with some few who attended him, went to Abbingdon to express his respects to Major General Brown; and that acquainting himself with the state of that place, he might the better know, how to be serviceable to it, and to the Kingdom in it, as occasion might require. On Tewsday, all our Horse were called to a Rendevouz upon Chilton-plain (if I forget not the name of the place) where all the chief Commanders of the Army, at a Council of War, concluded our return unto Newbery, the next day. Now because this act (as I hear) is much censured (though it was the result of the Council of War, and we had also the express approbation of the Committee of both Kingdoms, I will therefore make bold to suggest the grounds thereof as they were related unto me. 1. That corner of the Country (being bare before we came thither) could not afford means of subsistence for our Army, and we had small hope of receiving seasonably sufficient supplies elsewhere. 2. By continuing there, we should wholly devour those provisions whereby our friends at Abbingdon (being Neighbors) might expect some relief. 3. Because there was no hope of getting over Wallingford-bridge, to fight with the Enemy on the other side the River; and the Enemy might, by making overtures of engaging, and yet deceiving our hopes, have wasted our Army through unavoidable wants, without striking one blow. 4. And our forces did daily weaken very sensibly, through the great scarcity of provisions of all kinds, our Soldiers being under much discontent and discouragement.

These reasons (as I believe) moved our return to Newbery, upon Wednesday, and the same night some of the Enemies came from Wallingford, into the same Quarters, from whence we were removed. Upon Thursday, our Scouts brought news to Newbery, that the Kings whole Army was come over the River, with a parpose to relieve Dennington Castle. And although many amongst us, gave little or no credit to these reports; yet (of my knowledge) my Lord Manchesters cautiousnesse was such, that hereupon he moved the drawing up of all our Horse to a Rendevouz the next day, that we might be ready to prevent the relieving of the Castle.

How this his Lordships motion took with others I cannot say; but that it was disliked and gainsai'd by Lieu. Gen. Cromwell, myself, and many others can testify, who heard him earnestly dissuading it, by words to this effect; My Lord, you Horse are so spent, so harrassed out, by hard duty, that they will fall down under the Riders, if you thus command them, you may have their skin, but you can have no service.

Although I dare not say, that Lieu. Gen. Cromwell did from unfaithfulness to the public, thus dissuade the drawing up of our Horse on Friday. Yet this myself, and many thousands are most confident of, that through this neglect followed the advantage of the Enemy, in relieving the Castle, and our disappointments. For our Horse being (through the scarcity of provisions) quartered at a great distance from one another, and some of our Troops being 10 miles, some 12, and some 14 miles from Newbery, they could not possibly (after the Alarm on Friday in afternoon) come in soon enough to prevent the Enemies coming to the Castle, much less to fight with the Enemy in a convenient ground, before he came thither: whereas, if our Horse had been brought together upon Friday (according to my Lord Manchesters motion on Thursday, before mentioned) we might have met the Enemy with a timely and successful resistance (through God's mercy) at least for the preventing of the Castles relief.

But I will look backward, and take up my Relation where I left it. The former intelligence received from the Scouts, and the motion from my Lord made on Thursday, not being improved, we waited, to understand, what another day would bring forth: and when certain unquestioned tidings came on Friday in the afternoon, that the whole Body of the Enemies Army was on their march towards the Castle; then Posts were dispatched to the several Quarters of our Horse, to command them to come in early the next morning: but the Enemy having gained the opportunity which we lost, the Castle was relieved, before we were ready to make resistance: yea, the Enemy had placed themselves in Battalia, in the field betwixt Dennington-Castle and Newbery, before our main Body of Horse were in any posture for service. It would not be to my purpose in this Relation, to specify how bravely a party of the Enemies Horse did assault a party of ours, routed them, and did beat them to our Foot, who received the Enemy with much courage, and repulsed them bravely, who took away with them (as we heard after) the dead and wounded bodies of many, who were much esteemed. Neither do I intend here to tell, how the several Commanders, had now disposed of themselves and their forces. My Lord Manchester was with Major Skippon in the field, where all the skirmidge was that day betwixt us and the Enemy, and they both often and earnestly called and sent for Lieu. Gen. Cromwels Horse, (as I am credibly informed) but they came too late; for before they marched through Newbery towards the Army, the Sun was set, the Enemy was making his retreat out of the field, which mine own eyes and others beheld with much grief of heart. Major Gen. Crafford (who is known to be sufficiently forward to engage) though his command was over the Foot, yet upon my Lord of Manchesters cummand, himself also being moved in the approach of the daring Enemy, did with 9 or 10 Troops (some or most whereof he rallied amongst them formerly routed) charge a body of the Enemies Horse, and caused them to give ground. By this it may be guessed what good service might have been done, if more Horse had been at hand. That night, I hearing many accusations charged upon the Horse which came not in, I made bold for mine own satisfaction, to enquire (of a valiant Commander my worthy friend) the reasons wherefore those Horse kept at such a distance from service that day, from whom I received these. 1. Because there was not field room for our whole Body to serve in. 2. Because (if they had come in) in that ground, they should have been exposed to the Cannon, playing from the Castle, which would in probability, either have broken, or disordered their several Bodies before they could engage. You see, that I am desirous in my Narration, to give all men their right, and to keep off groundless censures. And here I wish, that it may still be impartially considered, whether yet it appear by this true relation, that the Earl of Manchester was more averse to the Kingdoms service, then other men, when either necessity or opportunity did require it.

The Castle being relieved, and the Enemy retreated, our Commanders in chief, upon consultation resolved that night to send forth about 4000 Horse with some Foot, to fall upon the Enemies Rear, so soon as the Moon did arise, hoping by this means to regain what we had lost the day before: but the Enemy continuing all night in a full body, that design was disappointed.

In the morning our whole Army was drawn forth, with intention and expectation to fight with the Enemy, before his removal out of our reach. This being noised, myself, with other Ministers who attended the Campe, did our duty by prayer and exhortation, to prepare them for the expected battle. But when our Commanders had viewed the strength and posture of the Kings Army, and the advantage of ground which they had gained, together with the dangerousnesse of the passages to the Enemy (being both near Dennington Castle, and through Lanes) they with one mind at a Council of War, judged it unsafe to engage. What passed in conference at the Council of War, I know not, neither did I judge it meet for me to enquire after those matters: But this I profess, that I heard not any, either Officer, or other, to blame my Lord of Manchester, as more backward at that Council of War then others, to engage with the withdrawing Enemy. Afterwards, while the Army continued at Newbery, and the parts adjacent, I remember nothing of moment to be reported, but this one thing, (which if not rightly understood, may occasion mistakes, no prejudice) that whereas 3 Regiments of my Lord's Foot, were ordered to march unto Basing, to assist the Horse in the service there, they were commanded (when on their march) to return back, according to the counsel of Sir W. Waller and Lieutenant General Cromwell (as they were going with my Lord in his Coach to Aldermarston) upon these grounds, as I was informed. 1. Because there would not in likelihood be any need of that strength there at that time. 2. Because their coming thither would straighten the Quarters of those who were already there, and consequently, make their continuance more uncomfortable. When upon an Alarm, that the Kings whole Army, was on their march to relieve Basing-house; it was ordered, that our Forces should remove from Newbery to join with our Horse sent to Basing before. Now I was necessitated through bodily distempers, to withdraw from the Campe, and therefore cannot from observation speak of the passages afterwards. But I have been told again and again, that the calling off of our Horse and Foot, from Basing, was from the order of a Council of War, no man deserting; and also, that no man was more forward in giving his vote, for that Order, then Lieutenant General Cromwell.

This is the sum of what I have to say, concerning the chief Occurrences in our Western expedition; wherein, though we had not such happy success, as was desired and expected, yet therein, those acknowledged much of God's goodness, who did most exactly observe his providences in our motions and adventures. Herein I have faithfully, according to my observation and best intelligence, represented things, with special references to my much Honoured Lord, because through misreports, and misbeliefs, his Lordship is rendered to the world, under the black cloud, of sad reproaches. His Honor I confess, is very dear unto me, and the heavy censures with which many do load and wound his estimation amongst men, do much afflict me: yet (I bless God) the cause, wherewith his Lordship hath been trusted, and wherein he hath successfully appeared, is much more deare and precious, yea (if I know mine own heart) I would desert his Lordship, and myself also, deserting that glorious cause of Jesus Christ. I well remember, those words, Job. 13.7. Will ye speak wickedly for God, and talk deceitfully for him? And therefore I am awed with the fear of God, while I am pleading for man. Yet this I do most seriously profess, as in the presence of the heart-searching Majesty, that I know no cause, wherefore I should once question his Lordships fidelity to the cause of Reformation, and that service of the Kingdom, wherein he hath been prosperously employed. But as the matter of his Accusation is to me most strange and unexpected; so the manner of managing it, by many, who are accounted not only ingenious but eminently pious, is to me and many, a matter of much wonder: For should not those who have received favors from my Lord of Manchester, and have solemnly professed truth and strength of respects to his Lordship, rather have signified in private their suspicion of his faithfulness (if they apprehended cause) then proclaim to the world, offenses, whereof he never heard? Might not his known meekness and sweetness of disposition, have encouraged them, to perform this office of faithfulness, who often had the opportunity of secrecy to have performed it? Would not such a course rather have answered that rule of our Savior: If thy brother offend, go and tell him his fault, between thee and him alone, &c. then to divulge (I will say no more) in a public way, those things whereof his own heart never suspected himself to be suspected? What Christians, yea what men do not look for such friendship, such ingenuity, from them who converse with them daily, and ordinarily come to eat meat at their tables? And had the prejudice of the public long been feared, through the apprehension of any ill principles possessing the Earl of Manchesters breast, why was not this sooner suggested, for the prevention of public prejudice?

I will not dare to guess either at the grounds, or ends of that which now is broken forth, but shall leave secrets unto the Lord, who in his own time will make the counsels of all hearts manifest, and bring to light the deeds, the designs of darkness.

Neither do I thus expostulate, as yielding to the truth of the matters, which are commonly charged upon him: for I have many reasons to believe the contrary, some whereof, I shall briefly mention.

His Lordships former actions and adventures for the public, rendered him in the opinion of the godly party in the Kingdom, as a true, trusty Patriot, both to Church and Commonwealth; and truly, I am ignorant, what should cause people to alter that opinion, though I have of late, had more opportunities to discover him, then other men.

His Lordship hath often, in the hearing of many witnesses, thus expressed himself solemnly, I could contentedly part with halft my estate, upon condition the discipline of Christ was established, and a good Ministry settled in every Congregation of the Kingdom, yea with those couditions, how gladly could I betake myself unto a Country life, and leave all other contentments in the world. Oh how frequent, how constant have his breathings been after peace, with the perfecting of that Reformation which is hopefully begun. And therefore it is a thing incredible to them who know him, that he should take any course, to continue the Civil (or rather uncivil) wars of the Kingdom, which do continue and increase confusions. I know no man, who attends the Campe, less self-seeking, and more desirous to issue the Wars, in a comfortable Peace, then my Lord of Manchester.

And this is to myself, an evidence of my Lord's innocence, in regard of what is laid to his charge; that when friends had suggested to him by Letters, Lieutenant General Cromwels purpose to accuse him (as was gathered from intimations looking that way) he solemnly protested, that his integrity was such, that he could not believe any such matter: Yea though he did cast about in his own thoughts, what matter of just exception might be laid in against him (for he was far from expecting false accusations) he professed seriously, he could not imagine what it might be; except it were some old complaints, in reference to Major General Crafford, and some late estrangements from Liev. Gen. Cromwell, since his heats expressed at Lincoln, which gave occasion of just offense.

And when upon his coming to London, his Lordship understood in generals, that unfaithfulness, and unwillingness to improve opportunities and counsels for the public good, against the common Enemy, was laid to his charge, by Liev. Gen. Cromwell; this was his Lordships answer: I pray God forgive him, for he knows in his conscience, that he hath wronged me, in speaking untruly. And these words falling from a friend, How much will your Lordship suffer in your honor, by means of this aspersion? His Lordship returned this reply, My defense is from God, who saveth the upright in heart. These things, which of my credit are truths (unto which many more might truly be added) I leave to the consideration of the ingenious, calm, unbiased Christian, how far they may at least persuade the suspension of censures and clamours, till my Lord hath vindicated himself from his accusations.

But it will be said. There is no smoke, but it argues some fire. And the reports of people, yea of good people, against my Lord of Manchester are so common, that doubtless all is not right.

I doubt not but God's hand is in my Lord's sufferings of this kind, who hath learned to justify God when injured by men. He hath expressed his desire to know God's meaning in the Rod, and hath professed his willingness to see, that he might reform, whatsoever others espy blame-worthy in his course. But the opinion and language of the multitude, is no good argument to prove him guilty in that kind and measure, as charged. It is an evil to be lamented, that people are so apt, with credulity to take up evil reports against their Brethren. Besides, the world understands, that divers persons acted by principles opposite to one another, are yet both violently contrary to the ways of my Lord of Manchester: from hence the dust may be raised and continued, which for the present doth darken his reputation, which was wont to shine forth more brightly, and which God (I hope) in his good time will clear again.

I might here take occasion, to mention many strange palpable untruths, standerously raised and spread, yea, conveyed by Letters beyond the Seas, to blast the credit of them, who desire to walk with God: and no reason here can be imagined, but their difference in indgement and practice from them, in some matters of Church-government. But that Scripture doth check me. Tell it not in Gath, and publish it not in Askalon, lest the uncircumcised triumph. The Lord heal our breaches, reconcile our differences, and knit our hearts together in more strong brotherly love through Christ.

My self expects severe censure from many people for this service, which (in the judgment of many worthy godly friends) I had a call to discharge: but I hope the sincerity of my heart through God's grace will support me under such burdens, if they shall be cast upon me.

If my faultiness shall be discovered, the Lord I trust will so far preserve me, that I shall not add stubbornness to weakness. And if any shall passionately and unchristianly throw stones at me, and cast dirt in my face, I hope, that my God will make me able to pity them, and to pray for them, and to learn more humility and circumspection in my conversation.

CHRIST THE Riches of the GOSPEL, AND THE Hope of CHRISTIANS A SERMON Preached at the Funeral of M^r William Spurstow the only Child of D^r Spurstow at Hackney near London, Mar. 10.

PHIL. 3. 23, 21.

I have a desire to depart to be with Christ which is far better.

For me to live is Christ, and to die is Gain.

LONDON, Printed by A. M. for G. Sawbridge at the Sign of the Bible on Ludgate-hill, 1654.

To My much Esteemed Good Friends, Dr Spurstow, Pastor of the Church at Hackney, and to M^{rs} Sarah Spurstow his Virtuous Wife.

WHEN I prepared this Sermon for the Pulpit, and preached it at the Funeral of your much endeared Son and only child, there was not one thought in my mind that it should be brought to the Press; but as it served your desires with reference to the Congregations profit there, so upon the same account (through the importunity of many others also) it now cometh abroad enlarged with respect unto more public service: The reading of it may probably renew your sorrow by occasioning the remembrance of your loss (for the wound not thoroughly healed will smart and bleed again upon every gentle touch) but I hope that influences from Christ (the subject of the Sermon) will drop like healing oil, with sweetness upon your spirits. Summer-fruit doth soonest fall from the tree out of which it grew: The early buddings both of ingenuity and piety, in your hopeful child, caused some of your friends to suspect that God would gather him unto himself before he became a man. Would not you both (if God had lengthened his life on earth) have been content to have wanted his society for a time, upon well-grounded confidence of a comfortable meeting, and that your parting would be for his preferment and your mutual profit? I shall not need to make the application: He was the heir of a full estate, with which God's bounty hath blessed you, but the hand of Providence hath put him into the possession of a far more rich Inheritance; You had hopes that he might have been the staff of your age, but though that support is sunk and shrunk from you, yet you are not left comfortless, for the precious promises of Gospel-grace are continued 〈...〉 to uphold both your hopes and hearts forever. Cheer up 〈◇〉 hearts (my dear Friends) both in hope of his happy change and your spiritual advantage by the sanctification of this your loss. Bless God who bestowed so good a child upon you, suffered you to enjoy him so long, and gave you (with hearts to educate him religiously) to see the success of your endeavors in those timely blossoms which appeared upon upon him; And as for yourselves, do ye not find (through the operation of God's peculiar grace) that upon your souls which may encourage the application of David's support and consolation? He hath made with me an everlasting Covenant, ordered in all things and sure; for this is all my salvation and all my desire, although he make not my house to grow. In this Covenant there is nothing defective, which any Christian, in any condition, can either desire or want. And amongst other rich promises which are thereto annexed, this is one; (which may be seasonably relieving unto you) to give a better name then of Sons and Daughters: Upon all these considerations (unto which your knowledge in the mysteries of the Gospel can add many more) you should rather express the joys of faith then feed upon your sorrows, to your own prejudice and the trouble of your Christian friends: And seeing the Lord hath to your sense written vanity upon the choicest of your creaturecontents, how should your souls be now elevated above all things sublunary and changeable! His hand of providence hath eased you of all further cares for him, whom you intended to leave well furnished with all accommodations for comfort and service in this world; therefore now what have you so much to mind here as to improve time, talents, estate, interests, yea, your All, for your own mutual advantage in Christ, and the glory of God, who hath done so much for yourselves and yours? This improvement of your affliction (wherein my experience hath wrought sympathies) I can and shall heartily request in your behalf through Jesus Christ, in whom I am,

Your assured Friend, if his own, SIMEON ASHE.

LEt hopeless Heathens grieve, and let them shed
From drowned eyes vain offerings to the dead;
Let their remorseless hands their bosoms rend,
'Cause Death their comforts and their hopes do end:
Let weeping Niobe congeal to stone,
And kill herself with grief and fruitless mone.
But you (Dear Friends) do mourn in hope, and weep,
Believing your blest child in Christ doth sleep.
Harbour we mutinous thoughts against his will,
Whose works are just, whose ways are holy still?
Oh let his mercy and his goodness charm

All discontent; He'll never do you harm,
Nor can he do you wrong, because he's just,
Willingly then submit, or else you must.
Banish sad thoughts which do without relief
Torment you with reiterated grief;
Suppose you saw your Son equalling those Bright morning Stars the Sons of God; Suppose
You saw his soul inthron'd in bliss with them,
Who Cit'zens are of New Jerusalem:
Suppose you heard his own delightful voice
Thus speak (Dear Parents) weep not but rejoice
For me, for now I am perfectly free
From sorrow, sin, Death, and mortality;
Surely you do not doubt my happiness
(For you oft say I am gone to heaven) much less
Can loving Parents envy it, then cease
To interrupt my joy and your own peace.
Happy those Parents who their Children teach
God's fear, whilst young, and whilst within the reach Of Prayers and counsels; so shall not death prevent Their diligence, and they too late repent.
How early saving light did dawn and break
In him who learnt to pray as soon as speak,
And minding Sermons then knew good from ill,
When those of's age have not learnt to sit still;
Nay more, so young, and yet complained, that he Could not rule's thoughts when most think thoughts are free.
Then 'twas the devil who did first invent

That cursed profane Proverb, A young Saint
An old Devil; no no, many through God's grace
Set out betimes, and hold out all the race,
And many Timothy's have Mnasons proved,
Who have God's Word in childhood learnt and loved.
Such was his pregnant parts and piety,
His youth it was a full maturity.

A Child that did per saltum commence man,
His years spake morning, his parts Meridian:
Harvest i'th Spring, a blossom fairly blown,
Knit, and at once fruit to perfection grown.

True, an Apprentiship th'hast served on earth
Of nine years, but the tenth thou paist to Death
As her due Tithe; She will not be denied,
Young, old, rich, poor, are carried down this Tide.

Christ was his Hope, his Glory, Crown, and Head:
Whilst here on earth Christ dwelt in him by grace,

*YE Muses Helicon what can you lie
Thus mantled in a stupid Lethargy?
Breathe out your souls with sighs, melt into tears,
And let your griefs be equal to your fears,
For him poor soul whose Fate it was we see,
To bid adieu in its minority:
Mourn that gloomy day on which it took its rise,
To seek a mansion in heavens Paradise.
What was his worth, what Friends loss, in verse
Were but lost pains in both for to rehearse;
His purer metal'd Soul needeth no Praise*

Or Art to'dulterate, all this canit raise
The price of such a Pearl, that had alone
What bounteous Art or Nature made her own:
And boldly this I will speak unto his praise,
His holy Life doth much exceed his days:
O pray that such blessed hopes may longer live
Examples to such youth as cannot give.

The Text.

COL. 1. 27.

Which is Christ in you the hope of Glory.

THE Subject matter of this Text is Jesus Christ, and therefore seasonably suitable to the expectation of this Assembly, which is to hear a Funeral Sermon; For whereas wine is to be given unto those that be of heavy hearts, what Cordial is comparable with Jesus Christ who is called and deserveth to be accounted, The Consolation of Israel?

In the Text Christ is tendered or rather commended to the consideration of these Christian Colossians under a threefold notion.

1. As containing the riches of all Evangelical mysteries; The Relative (which) must necessarily be referred unto the word Riches, in the fore-going part of this verse, as is manifest from the Original in our Greek Copies. Although the vulgar applieth the Relative (which) unto mystery, and I acknowledge Christ to be a mystery as the holy Ghost doth often suggest in the holy Scriptures; And indeed his conception and his hypostatical Union, &c. give us just occasion to call him wonderful, Isa. 9. 6. yet in this place I humbly conceive that he is held forth to our view, as the Riches of the glorious mystery of the Gospel.

2. As being the groundwork and the foundation of every good Christians good hope of happiness; Christ the hope of glory. I have heard of Ships laden with rich commodities, from which their owners expect great advantage, called The Hope, or The good Hope: Under this Name may believers, real Saints, well own the Lord Jesus, The Hope of glory.

3. As inhabiting, dwelling in believing Christians, for this end, that by his abiding and operating in them he might be unto them the hope of glory; Christ in you the hope of glory: Some Translators render the words, Christ among you; but I rather cleave unto our English Translators, both old and new, which do answer our Greek Copies, and accord with the most learned, judicious Interpreters, Christ in you the hope of glory.

Having thus briefly given in the division of the Text, with the Interpretation of the words both together, I proceed to the handling of the Points of Doctrine hence considerable for our Instruction.

The first Truth observable is this,

That Jesus Christ is the riches of all Gospel-glorious Mysteries. [Doct. 1]

The Apostle Paul acknowledging much glory in the Administrations of Moses (wherein there was much Gospel, though veiled and shadowed under Types and Ceremonies) yet telleth us, That Evangelical ministrations do exceed in glory, and that the former had no glory in respect of this latter, which excelleth, and is much more glorious. Now the riches of all this glory are in Christ; Concerning which the expression of the same Apostle is observable, The unsearchable riches of Christ. The riches of this Gospel-glory in Christ may be discovered with reference 1. both to God, 2. and to godly Christians.

First, In regard of God; All the revenues of glory which come unto his Majesty from the Gospel, are most eminently in Jesus Christ; And therefore at his birth the Angels sing, Glory to God on high. 1. In him are all the treasures of wisdom; Here is wisdom in a mystery. 2. And Christ is (as the wisdom so) the Power of God; Divine Omnipotency is no way so fully discovered as in Christ. 3. In him is divine love which passeth knowledge, which is beyond all dimensions. 4. And as for mercy, how full is the language of the Apostle; The exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness through Christ Jesus; And speaking elsewhere of Gospel-incoms he addeth, To the praise of the glory of his grace; Here might be added the unspotted holiness and untainted justice of God, more glorified in the inexpressible humiliation of Jesus Christ then in any other way whatsoever. And who knoweth not how the honor of God's Truth is triumphantly glorious in Christ, because all things foretold of him both substantial and circumstantial were exactly fulfilled in him: The Law was given by Moses but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ; These things I only touch upon without enlargement.

Secondly, In relation to his people, Christ is the riches of the Gospels glory. The blessed Apostle is very open in his expression to this purpose, We speak the hidden wisdom of God which God ordained unto our glory; Many rich and glorious are the true Christians advantages from Jesus Christ: I shall briefly point at four which S^t Paul hath recorded together in Eph. 1.

And before I mention the particulars, the general which he premiseth (being very comprehensive) is worthy consideration; Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenlies in Christ. The Original neither restraineth the word Heavenly to places or things; but the holy Ghost hinteth thus much; That whatsoever spiritual blessings (which are incomparably the best) any Saints receive from the Lord, either here upon earth or hereafter in heaven, all are derived through Christ. The particulars follow.

1. Electing love is in Christ; He hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world.
2. Adoption into the right and privileges of God's children is by Christ; Having predestinated us unto the Adoption of Children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will.

3. Fatherly acceptance with God, pardoning all sins, is upon the account of Jesus Christ. He hath made us accepted in the beloved, in whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace.

4. And the possession of our rich Inheritance is by reason of our co-heirship with Christ Jesus; In whom also we have obtained an Inheritance, &c. that we should be unto the praise of his glory who first trusted in Christ.

These short touches may be sufficient to clear the truth of the doctrine, I proceed to the Application.

Ministers therefore should in this regard the more abundantly preach Christ: Our Apostle having in the Text told the Colossians that Christ is the riches of the glorious Gospel, he addeth immediately in the verse following, whom we preach; yea, this is considerable, that when Paul was a prisoner for such preaching, he maketh this the greatest boon to be beg'd of God in his behalf, that he might have liberty with ability to declare such things unto them in his Ministry. Continue in prayer, withal praying for us, that God would open unto us a door of utterance to speak the Mystery of Christ, for which I am also in bonds that I may make it manifest. The like request he maketh unto the Ephesians; Prayalwaies in the Spirit, &c. And for me that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the Gospel, for which I am an Ambassador in bonds; And he greatly glorieth in this as a transcendent honor, That he was made a Minister of the Gospel to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, and to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, &c. And this practice may prevalently be persuaded by the consideration of

- 1. The Ministers Office.
- 2. The Peoples need.

First, By Office, We are Stewards of the Mysteries of God, and it is required in Stewards that a man be found faithful. In this respect we must produce for the honor of our Master and the use of his Family such Treasures with which he hath been pleased to entrust us. As Abraham's servant brought forth Jewels of silver and Jewels of gold to win the heart of Rebecca to Isaac, so should we spread before our people the invaluable riches of Christ, that we might work out their hearts unto him.

Secondly, As our Office, so the Peoples necessities do call for our help herein, for there are hidden things herein (as the word mystery intimateth, 1 Cor. 2. 7.) which very few understand, in comparison of the multitudes who are palpably ignorant hereof; This our Savior suggests, who having by the Parable of the Sower, taught, that not above one part of four receive saving profit by the Gospel preached among them, he said unto his Disciples; Unto you it is given to know the Mysteries of the Kingdom of God, but unto others in Parables, that seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.

And nothing that can possibly be taught is more useful and advantageous. Hereby the proud heart is most kindly humbled, and the humbled heart most sweetly comforted: This knowledge will enrich the poor in Spirit and keep them lowly who are rich in grace: It will increase the hatred of sin, the contempt of the world, faith in the promises, love to God, Christian courage, zeal, patience, together with humble boldness in addresses unto God, upon all occasions: It is the one thing necessary. By means hereof (as the Apostle hints in the verse following the Text) Ministers may hope to present their people perfect in Jesus Christ; But these things I do only name without enlargement, yet before I dismiss this Use, I desire leave to entreat my Brethren in the Ministry to mind the counsel and practice of this our Apostle, viz. to study familiar plainness in unfolding these rich mysteries of glorious Gospel grace which are treasured up in Jesus Christ.

My second Use must be directed both unto Ministers and [Use 2] people, To move them to seek more and more the knowledge of Christ. Let the word of Christ dwell richly in you in all wisdom; How unweariedly laborious are men in digging into the bowels of the earth to find and to fetch out the riches there; Now of how little worth is all the worlds wealth being compared with Christ! The Gospel is the treasure in the Field (of which the Parable speaketh) and Christ is that one Pearl of great price, which is of more worth then any man's All. Therefore the Scriptures should be searched (as men search for treasures) to make further and fuller discoveries of Christ, because in him eternal life and all things conducible thereunto are to be enjoyed. Saint Paul who by experience knew the worth of human learning, even amongst the rich-gifted Corinthians, determined not to know any thing but Jesus Christ, and him crucified; And himself elsewhere giveth a rational, a satisfying account of this his resolution, viz. because of the superlative both excellency and utility of this knowledge. Doubtless I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord; That I may know him and the power of his resurrection, &c. Who can tell how many rarities lie hid in Christ, or how great gain may be got by the knowledge of him? 1. This is the way to procure justification by him, By his knowledge shall my righteous Servant justify many. 2. Hereby the growth of all graces both in kinds and degrees, is much promoted; We all with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. 3. And hence issueth glory: The Text tells you, that in him is the hope of glory; This is life eternal that they may know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. If all this be not sufficient to quicken diligence in seeking out after the knowledge of Christ, let me add a double consideration from the practice of the holy Angels (though they be not so much concerned in and advantaged by Christ as ourselves) 1. They did desire to pry and peep into those Typical and Prophetical discoveries of him which were obscure before his Incarnation. 2. And now they are content to come (as it were to our Schools where we are taught) unto our Congregations for clearer instruction in this mystery according to God's mind; Unto the Principalities and Powers in heavenly places might be known by the Church the manifold wisdom of God. These things speak cogent arguments to them who are Christianly ingenuous, to move more and more industrious endeavors, to dive further and further into these rich divine mysteries, whereof God's Worthies have given many high commendations, calling it an holy, glorious, fruitful, quickening, happy-making mystery; What commendation can be higher then that of our Apostle, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness, God manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of Angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory; Herein is contained the marrow of Christianity: And doubtless every Christian who mindeth the power of godliness, either in reference unto God's honor or self-welfare, will by these Meditations be prevailed with to seek acquaintance with this rich mystery. I shall speak no more unto this first Point, viz. That Christ is the riches of Gospel-glorious Mysteries; but I proceed unto the second.

That real Saints, believing Christians have (even while [Doct. 2] here on earth) hope of glory.

Such were these Colossians to whom these words were spoken, The Saints and faithful brethren in Christ; Not only Saints titularly but in reality, whose Saintship and faith was witnessed by their brotherly disposition towards one another, and their faithful walking in the world: these, these were they who had hope of future glory. The like expression hath the same Apostle in his Epistle to the Romans; Being justified by faith we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, and we rejoice in hope of the glory of God. This Doctrine I shall not much dilate upon but only give one touch or two by way of application.

Hence we are informed that the gain of godliness, and [Use 1] the profitableness of a religious life is not to be judged of alone by the outward visible fruit reaped here; for the rich Revenues of holiness are rather in hope then in hand: The world knoweth us not, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: No man knoweth love or hatred by all that is before them; And therefore in the estimation of those who judge according to the sight of the eye, If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. Though in very truth Christians who live by faith, and walk holily with the Lord, have cordials in secret which the world knoweth not of, viz. peace which passeth all understanding, and joys most unspeakable and full of glory (which do wonderfully exceed and admirably sweeten all their sufferings) yet the best is behind, these are only the tastes of that full glory reserved for them in heaven. Thus the Prophet Malachi confuteth the carnal crew in his days, who said it was a vain thing to serve God; He first telleth them of a book of Remembrance written before the Lord, recording all the serviceableness of Saints in evil times, and then referreth them to the last day, when God shall make up his jewels, adding these words, Thenshall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not. Would you give a right estimate of the precious incoms by godliness, do not so much view their present outward wants and pressures, but rather hearken to the language of their hopes. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then we also shall appear with him in glory; And we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.

[Use 2] Therefore let us all try whether we can from good holding grounds, make out our hopes of glory; As Ministers must beware of flattering people with vain hopes, so the Apostle Paul persuadeth everyone of us to show diligence for the attaining the full assurance of hope, yea, the same diligence which we use in reference to any act of obedience: And Saint Peter would have all Christians ready to give a reason of the hope which is in them. The necessity of this trial may be manifested by these following considerations.

1. The worth of the thing hoped for, viz. glory, which is in value transcendently better then all things under the Sun; Herein consists everlasting heavenly happiness. The phrase whereby the holy Scripture doth express it is very full; a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; The value of any commodity causeth cautiousnesse to prevent cheating: Wisdom therefore will make wary, that hopes hereof may not be built upon sandy bottoms.

2. The usefulness of hope, being as an Helmet to secure from capital dangers in warlike encounters, and as an Anchor to prevent shipwreck upon a stormy Sea: in which cases men are careful to make such provision, that the Head-piece and Anchor may not be brittle and easily broken.

3. The hopes of multitudes will be lamentably frustrated; Our Savior brings in many pleading with confidence at the last day for life, who shall be rejected with miserable disappointment, Many shall say to me at that day Lord, Lord, &c. and I will profess unto them, I never knew you (q. d. I never approved you) depart from me.

4. We know not how soon our hopes may be assaulted by others, and shaken by the recoylings of our own consciences. As good Job had his hopes questioned by his Friends, Is this thy confidence and thy hope? So the Church in an afflicted condition doth this dolefully bewail herself; I said, My hope is perished from the Lord.

Now if upon these meditations helps for hopes-discovery shall be inquired after, I shall briefly hint 1. whose hopes will fail. 2. Whose hopes will hold in the time of trial; As for the former the holy Ghost tells us plainly, that their hopes are perishing, who are 1. either wicked, 2. or hypocrites. When the wicked man dieth his expectation shall perish, and the hypocrites hope shall perish. Here though I may not be large in characterizing the wicked man or in uncasing the Hypocrite; yet take these short touches and enlarge them with application in your own thoughts:

First, A wicked man is 1. A sin-lover; The wicked and him who loveth iniquity doth God's soul hate, saith the Psalmist▪ And men's love of sin is manifested by their unwillingness to have it spoken against; As David would have Absalom gently dealt with. 2. And a man who liveth in sin upon choice and deliberation; Like as the fish liveth in water, He is as a Tradesman, a Practitioner in sin, a Sin-maker, a worker of iniquity, as the Scripture expresseth it; Therefore lay your hands upon your hearts, and observe whether they breathe loving allowance of sin, and deliberate resolutions to drive a trade in ways of known transgressions, though both God and your own consciences condemn them.

Secondly, An hypocrite may be described; An outside, self-seeking, man-pleasing man. Thus our Lord doth stigmatize them; Ye hypocrites, well did Isaiah prophesy of you, saying, This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me; Ye make clean the outside, and all their works they do to be seen of men: When they either fast, or feast religiously, it is to themselves; Hereby a plain-dealing self-reflecting Christian may give a good guess at his own estate, viz. whether upright or an hypocrite, and consequently whether his hope will be holding or perishing: And I wish people to consider these hints for trial the rather because the hopes of these persons will fall and fail them at death, if not sooner; What is the hope of the Hypocrite though he hath gained when God taketh away his soul?

As for the latter viz whose hopes will hold, attend the expressions of the Apostle Peter, Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you. Hence two things are notable for our purpose to discover good hope. 1. The Regeneration of the person hoping. 2. The activity of the hope itself. 1. The persons are begotten again, 2. Their hope is lively. That both these particulars may be practically applied for trial, I will for brevity sake suggest that the spiritual birth, and hopes vivacity, may be evidenced by effectual vocation; Hence it is that God in the Scripture speaketh once and again of the hope of his calling. Now our effectual calling doth discover itself, 1. Partly by our coming off from sin with detestation, and this is the effect of good hope, Every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself as he is pure. 2. And partly by our coming up unto God in an obediential submission unto his government, in a studious conformity to his laws. These are conjoined in the experience and practice of God's people, viz. hope and holiness: As of David, Lord I have hoped for thy salvation and done thy Commandments; And of Paul, After the way which they call Heresy, so worship I the God of my Fathers, believing all things which are written in the Law and the Prophets, and have hope towards God; And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offense towards God and towards men: Therefore conscientious endeavors against all sinful pollutions both of heart and life, together with care fully to answer the mind of the Lord in a religious conversation, notwithstanding hardships and reproaches in the world, will give good testimony unto the truth of our hopes of eternal glory; whereas looseness of life and heart, in ways of carnal self-seeking and man-pleasing, following the multitude, and swimming down the stream of declining times, may administer just occasion of doubting, that man's expectations of eternal glory will be disappointed.

To persuade all them who have hitherto flattered themselves [Use 3] with false hopes of heaven, to lay in better grounds for the future: It is the earnest desire of Gospel-Ministers that you would use diligence to attain the full assurance of hope.

And 1. Because you have heard, that it is attainable, therefore you should take encouragement to seek it.

2. Add to the possibility of getting assured hope, the necessity thereof, that you may be prevailed with to look after it. You heard before that hope is that unto a Christian in his passage unto heaven which an Helmet is to a Soldier, and an Anchor is to the Mariner. Therefore let this consideration move us to make out for the Helmet and Anchor of good hope. And I would entreat you the rather to mind this my earnest exhortation, because of the rocks of dissoluteness and destruction upon which you will be in danger to be driven, when Satan and your own consciences shall discover the sandiness of all your former hopes. Noteable for the proof hereof is that passage in the prophecy of Jeremiah, where the people being persuaded to repentance, return this answer: There is no hope, we will walk after our own devices, and we will everyone do the imagination of his evil heart; Or if the razing of hopes foundations doth not produce such wretched wicked resolutions, with what sinkings and doleful despondency will the awakened Soul be overwhelmed? Our Proverb saith, Was it not for hope the heart would break; Therefore sleight not mine advice, neither delay the use of God's means to gain a well-grounded hope of your eternal salvation: your life is both short and uncertain; And they who go down into the pit cannot hope for God's truth. Now for your help herein, I shall in my next doctrine lead you to Christ who is the true Christians hope of glory.

That Christ is unto faithful Christians the hope of glory. [Doct. 3]

As my Text speaks this truth in open words, so elsewhere our Apostle thus expresseth himself; The Lord Jesus Christ which is our hope: And here Simeon anchored his hope of heaven, for he taking Christ in his arms, said, Now lettest thou thy Servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation.

For the clearing of this Point there are two things enquirable.

1. What is meant by Hope of glory.
2. How Christ is to be accounted the Christians Hope of glory.

First, The hope of glory.

1. Either signifieth the glory hoped for, as it's taken in many other Scriptures; The hope laid up for you in heaven; Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.

2. Or the glorious hope; the grace of hope whereby the Soul desirously expecteth future everlasting glory; according to the words of this our Apostle; I know that this shall tend to my salvation, according to my earnest expectation and hope.

Secondly, Christ may truly be called the hope of glory in both these senses.

1. Being the glory of his people Israel, viz. the matter, the object of their chiefest glory both here and hereafter. He is the Christians All both upon earth and in heaven, Christ is the glory of heaven, the very heaven of heaven.

2. And being the root from whence holy hope and all other graces do spring: From his fullness we all receive grace for grace; And whom we beholding as in a glass, we all are changed from glory to glory; Grace is glory begun, and glory is grace perfected, and both these we have from Jesus Christ.

For the further opening and evidencing of this Doctrine, viz. That Christ is the hope of glory, Consider, that a Christians hope is attributed: 1. Efficiently, to God the Father working it by the holy Ghost; The God of hope cause you to abound in hope, through the power of the holy Ghost. 2. Instrumentally to the word of God, which is the word of his grace. Whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope. 3. Evidentially to the work of saving grace in the soul, manifesting itself by its operations there; God gives good hope through grace, whether faith, Rom. 15. 13. or love, 1 Joh. 3. 14. or any other sanctifying frame of heart. 4. And yet in a way of peculiarity Christ is the Christians hope, which our Apostle intends in this Text, wherein there is some Emphasis; The hope, that hope, He is singularly, eminently the hope of glory; Fundamentally our hope of heaven is built upon him: Hope in the Lord Jesus Christ, saith the Apostle.

Now the true Christians hope of glory is raised out of Christ.

1. Upon that federal transaction which passed betwixt God the Father and Christ his Son; The Apostle speaking of the Covenant, thus expresseth himself, To Abraham and his Seed were the Promises made, He saith not, And to his Seeds, as of many, but as of one And to thy Seed, which is Christ: And hither (as I humbly conceive) we may refer that passage in our Savior's Prayer unto his Father, relating to himself, Thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. Upon this account the Apostle seemeth to encourage hope; In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie promised before the world began: For unto whom besides Christ could the Almighty then, viz. before the world began, be engaged by any promise? Solomon doth suggest transactions betwixt God and Christ his essential wisdom, before the Creation, concerning the welfare of man, amongst which transactions, doubtless this was one, that through him believers should have hope of glory.

2. Because of his satisfactory Passion; For whereas sin committed against God, and God's wrath kindled against man, are the only hindrances of entrance into glory. Against them who sinned God sware in his wrath that they should not enter into his rest. The Lord Jesus by his sufferings did break into pieces those bars, and made way for Christians admission into glory; For he took away sin by the Sacrifice of himself; and Jesus delivered us from the wrath to come; As he removeth guilt by satisfying divine justice, so he quenched the flames of God's anger, by the shedding of his blood; And hereupon followeth hope of glory.

3. By virtue of his meritorious purchase; The Apostle calleth a glorified estate in heaven, The purchased possession, received by Redemption: whereas man had made forfeiture of his happiness (which consisted in communion with God) and was altogether unable to ransom it, the Lord Jesus bought it back again by his perfect obedience, which was esteemed of valuable consideration for so great a purchase, because of the infinite excellency of his person, being both God and man; Though man through the worthlessness of his person and weaknesses of his best performances cannot deserve the least accommodation from the Lord, yet man's hope of glory is upheld by the deserts of Emmanuell, of Christ, God with us.

4. Through the effectual prevalency of his prayer; Christ said with confidence unto his Father, I know that thou hearest me always; And this was one great Request which he made, Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me, for thou hast loved me before the Foundation of the world; This Petition is a good prop to support hope of glory in a gracious heart.

5. From the end of his Ascension; We all do believe, that Christ is received up into glory. And himself before his departure from earth, said, I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also. Here is good Anchorhold for hope, which entereth into that within the veil, whither the forerunner is for us entered. Christ is gone into Heaven as our Harbinger to provide glorious mansions for us, and to take possession in our behalf. And the Apostle Peter writeth thus unto the scattered Christian Jews, God raised Christ from the dead, and gave him glory, that your faith and hope might be in God. From all these considerations jointly considered this conclusion is confirmed by Scripture-strength and evidence; That Christ is unto believing Christians the hope of glory. The application followeth.

[Use 1] Therefore without Christ there cannot be any well-grounded expectation of future glory: As this smart inference followeth undeniably from the Text under hand, so the same Apostle is open and express for this truth elsewhere; Suggesting to the Ephesians their sad condition in an unchristian estate, he connecteth these two particulars, viz. ye were without Christ, having no hope. Although profane godless and Christlesse men may have their expectations of outward comforts accomplished, and possess more then heart could wish, yet in regard of spirituals and eternals we may be confident, that they spend their days without hope. In which respect they should rather be looked upon as objects of pity then of envy, when they are in their greatest jollity and prosperity, because being Christlesse they are poor, hopeless creatures. Take man in his best estate imaginable out of Christ, and upon the serious Survey of himself he shall have cause to say, What is my strength that I should hope? And as Paul said in reference to himself and them who sailed with him in a sad Sea-voyage, that when neither Sun, nor Stars in many days appeared, and no small tempest lay onus, all hope that we should be saved was then taken away. So let the chiefest Sons of men with their highest parts be laid under the storms of divine displeasure, without Gospellight discovering Christ, and all hope of salvation will be quite removed.

Hence fair occasion is offered to discover their dangerous [Use 2] delusion, who build their hopes of heaven upon creaturefoundations. As the Papists who in their Ave-Mary's call the Virgin the mother of Christ's humanity Our Hope, who also trust unto their works as meritorious causes of Salvation: So others also who imagine happiness attainable from the right improvement of Natures abilities, without the meritorious satisfaction of Jesus Christ: whereas the Scripture doth not only assert, that there is not salvation in any other besides Christ, but doth also affirm that Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the Law; Oh that this short, sharp expression from an Apostolical pen might warn the wanton wits of these unwary times to take heed of crying up Nature and moral abilities, with the neglect of Jesus Christ, who alone is the foundation hope of future glory.

[Use 3] Therefore the communication of glory is from mere mercy, Eternal life is the gift of God's grace through Jesus Christ; Although I touched upon this before, yet I take it up again upon a double account; partly because the Apostle in this Text intends a check unto them who mixed their own righteousness with Christ, and partly because many in these days, not only Papists, but other proud Opinionists, do derogate from Gospel-mercy by ascribing too much unto man's natural strength, morally improved, whereby God's design in making man happy by Christ, is directly crossed and disappointed. Let the words of the Apostle Paul be seriously considered, Ye are in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption, that no flesh should glory in his presence, that according as it is written, He that glorieth let him glory in the Lord: Our All in tendency unto peace, comfort and glory, is therefore from Christ, according to divine project and purpose, that man when at the highest might be abased in himself, being necessitated to acknowledge that all his advantageous incomes, both in regard of glory begun on earth, and completed in heaven, are from Christ.

Now that I may more clearly advance God's rich grace and free mercy in bringing believers to glory by Christ; I heartily desire that these three things may be observed, viz.

1. That Christ himself was the gift of God; Unto us a Sonne is given, saith the Gospel-Prophet; And our Savior himself in his conference with the woman of Samaria, calleth himself That gift of God, by way of superlative eminency being the richest and freest gift that ever God bestowed upon the children of men.

2. That the grace of faith whereby the Soul receiveth Christ and happiness by him, is the free gift of God likewise. To you (saith Saint Paul to the Philippians) it is given to believe; The Original suggests, that it was given of grace, which our Translation doth elsewhere express: Apollo is said to help them much who had believed through grace; And this our Apostle in his Epistle to the Romans, affirming that our Justification is from mercy, not merit, addeth these words, Therefore it is of faith, that it might be of grace.

4. That all our spiritual privileges received from Christ himself, are from him upon terms of mercy and grace. Forgiveness of sin is according to the riches of his grace; We are justified by his grace; We are accepted in the beloved, to the praise of the glory of his grace. And himself in his prayer to the Father saith, The glory which thou gavest me I have given them: Answerable hereunto is the advice of Saint Jude, Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. It's mere mercy, not merit, that holdeth up the heart in expectation of Heaven. All these particulars being put together will undenably evidence the strength of this my Inference, viz. That Because the Christians hope of glory is rooted in Christ, therefore Heavens glory with all the requisites belonging thereto are from grace and mercy. And this will make way for the Use following.

To persuade Christians, the heirs of glory, to praise God [Use 4] for Jesus Christ, because all their hopes do spring from him, As Simeon expecting salvation by Christ, blessed God; All our hearts should breathe forth Saint Peters doxology; Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an Inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you: Hence I might note to quicken gratitude, 1. The admirable worth of the inheritance in glory which hope expecteth, viz. an Inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, that fadeth not away. 2. The means whereby this hope is begotten in us, viz. the death and resurrection of Christ. 3. And the motive moving the Lord in this way to give us ground of hope, viz. His abundant mercy. In all which regards it may well become us to join with our souls in Zacharies Song, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people, and hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David. This thankfulness may be persuaded by a double consideration, the one more general and the other more particular. In general, because this ground of hope is revealed to us Gentiles, and that upon no other account but God's good pleasure; •his is M. Baines his Observation from the words before the Text: God maketh known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; This was an high privilege peculiar to the Jews, that to them were committed the Oracles of God; but how much greater is our preferment in these times, God having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he purposed in himself! And the Apostle elsewhere discoursing of some differences betwixt Old-Testament and New-Testament dispensations, telleth us, that the Gospel bringeth in a better hope by which we draw nigh to God. More particularly in reference to our own persons take notice of these things.

1. That the revelation of this should reach our understandings, when multitudes of more pregnant capacities continue ignorant hereof; I thank thee O Father (said Christ) Lord of Heaven and Earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto Babes, Evenso Father, for it seemeth good in thy sight.

2. That we do not only perceive, but also participate personally in this hope through Jesus Christ; whereas there are millions whose heads are full of this light, and yet their hearts are empty of this lively hope of glory by Christ. And if I by grace be a partaker (saith Saint Paul) I give Godthanks.

3. That the riches of the glory of this Inheritance hoped for by the Saints is inexpressible. And that we may be abundantly thankful for this hope in Christ, as we should pray for a more clear apprehension thereof, so should we endeavor to know assuredly our peculiar interest therein, by finding the Lord Jesus dwelling in our hearts by his Spirit: Because my Text tells us, That Christ in us is the hope of glory, which is the next and last Doctrine here considerable.

That Christ by being in believers, is unto them the hope of [Doct. 4] glory. The existency of Christ in believing Christians giveth existency to their hopes of glory. This connection of Christ in them and of their glory through him, is considerable in his most heavenly Prayer, in which having spoken of the glory given unto them, with the same breath (as it were) he suggests his being in them, The glory which thou gavest me I have given them, that they may be one even as we are one, I in them, &c. Before I proceed in the further handling of this doctrine; These words which speak the in-being of Christ in Christians, do call for some explication: Therefore let us enquire 1. Both what the phrase doth not, 2. And what it doth hold forth to our consideration.

First, It doth not intimate such a being of Christ in any Christian, as of the Godhead in Christ, by reason whereof Godhead and Manhood in Christ made one person; in regard whereof he was from his conception absolutely free from the least tincture of sin, and was made able to complete the work of Mediatorship, both by bearing up under the infinite weight of God's displeasure without sinking, and also to give sufficient virtue and value unto his obedience active and passive, that it might be satisfactory and meritorious. But it doth suggest Christ's peculiar abode in believers by his Spirit being received by faith, whereby he dwelleth and operateth spiritually in their hearts, which union betwixt him and them doth in some measure by way of similitude, though not fully in way of parity, represent the union betwixt his father and himself. And whereas the Apostle Peter speaketh of our being made partakers of the divine nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. which words are much abused. There are two things notable from that Scripture to manifest the difference betwixt Christ and Christians in that participation. 1. The words are not, we are made partakers of the God-head, but of the divine nature, viz. of the qualities of God, according to our capacity, whereby we escape that corruption which is in the world through lust, and do in holy dispositions resemble God so far as such creatures can: As David speaketh of showing the kindness of God unto Jonathan's posterity, 2 Sam. 20. 15. whereas God-head itself was in such sort in Christ, 1 Tim. 3. 16. that he was God blessed forever, Rom. 9. 5. coequal with God the Father, Phil. 2. 6. 2. The Apostle Peter is open and express that Christians are partakers of the divine nature (in the sense aforesaid) by means of the exceeding great and precious promises of God's grace; whereas Christ was God by an eternal, natural, inexpressible generation.

Having thus briefly explicated the expression in the Text, and the like used by our Savior, I proceed to the handling of the point of doctrine here propounded: And because the doctrine hath two branches, the one necessarily implied, the other openly expressed, I shall distinctly speak unto them both.

The truth implied in the first branch of the doctrine is this, viz. that Christ is in Believers; As believers do receive him, so he dwelleth in their hearts by faith. And therefore it is notable, that the Apostle having moved the Corinthians to prove themselves whether in the faith, he addeth, Knowye not that Jesus Christ is in you? This in-being of Christ in believers is to be understood, not of an abode in them (or anywhere else on earth) corporally, for in that sense the Heavens must receive him until the time of the restitution of all things; but of an habitation spiritual, according to the testimony of the Apostle; Because ye are Sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts; Thereby intending to teach us, that Christ is in believing Christians spiritually.

And this truth is by various metaphors suggested in the holy Scriptures. 1. By being compared unto showers which descending from heaven, do sink and soak into the bowels of the earth, He shall come down like rain. 2. And his Name is like unto ointment poured forth, which worketh itself into the bones, not staying upon the outside of the person receiving it. 3. He is meat and drink indeed unto the soul, from whence he himself concludeth my doctrine, He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me and I in him: 4. Hereto might be added that he is the soul of our souls, whereby we live spiritually; Christ is our Life. And man's life is said to be in him, 2 Sam. 1. 9. The body is called the sheath of the Soul, which expression hinteth, that the soul is in the body, as the sword in the scabbard: In like manner Christ who is the Christians life is in all them whom he enliveneth.

Having thus cleared the truth, that Christ is in believing [Use 1] Christians, I proceed to the application of it under three heads of Uses.

First, For Instruction in four particulars, 1. Hence the Godhead of Jesus Christ may be concluded undeniably; for this spiritual ubiquity of Christ in the souls of all real Saints in all the places of the world, cannot belong unto any mere creature whatsoever. This argument Saint Paul produced to distinguish the true God from all Idol-gods, He is not far from everyone of us. Omnipresence proveth Deity. And the conclusion followeth with like strength, when believers assert this truth, He is in everyone of us.

2. This discovereth the unparellel'd condescensions of Jesus Christ, being willing to abase himself thus low as to be within poor sinful creatures. This was a matter of admiration unto Solomon, But will God indeed dwell on earth? The good Centurion said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof; And the Psalmist with much affection calleth upon all the servants of the Lord to praise him and praise him again upon this account; Who is like unto the Lord God? who dwelleth on high, who humbleth himself to behold the things that are in heaven and in the earth! Did God humble himself in looking out of himself, off from his own infinite beauties and perfections, to view either men on earth or Angels and Saints in heaven? How much greater is this condescension in Christ to make his abode in the souls of sinners? Let me here dart only two thoughts into your minds. 1. That Christ came out of his Fathers bosom where he was daily his delight rejoicing always before him. 2. That the hearts of the best, upon earth wherein he inhabits, are like dark dungeons, in regard of the clouds of ignorance not dispersed, and like unsavory dunghills in respect of many noisome lusts not fully subdued; Therefore guess with gratitude how low our blessed Lord doth stoop in being content to dwell in us, even in us every way so vile and so unworthy.

3. This giveth us to understand the dignity of all true believers; As they are precious, excellent, more excellent than others in many other respects (which I now have not occasion to mention) so upon this account that the Lord Jesus Christ is in them. Moses the man of God judgeth Israel in this regard, in a condition far better than any other people; For what Nation hath God so nigh unto them? And how much was Zacchaeus affected with the apprehension of this favor, this honor, when Christ promised to abide at his house? When he had climed into a tree to take a view of Christ, and Christ telleth him that he should not only have a transient sight of him, but also enjoy him as his guest, oh how was Zacchaeus (think you) elevated by this entertainment! Now such (and greater) honor have all his Saints: It was no doubt a very great honor put upon the blessed Virgin Mary, both in her own account, and in the judgement of all Christians, that she did bear the holy body of Christ in her womb for a time, He that is mighty hath magnified me, and certainly the inhabitation of Christ by his Spirit in the souls of his servants, is not a privilege inferior.

4. This whispereth the madness and misery of all such who do dare to make opposition against believers, for seeing Christ is in them, therefore in so doing they seek (as it were) to pluck down Christ his house upon his head. I shall not enlarge this Use 1. Either by showing the various ways whereby wrong is done unto the servants of the Most High, viz. by secret plots and open persecutions, either by abating their comforts, or increasing their sufferings, either by corrupting their judgments, or drawing them to sin. 2. Or by manifesting Christ's knowledge and sensibleness of these their injuries, together with his severity against their enemies, witnessed both by judgments threatened in his Word, and executed in the world from generation to generation: But I only wish those who are herein guilty, to mind the Item given by the Apostle Paul in his Epistle to the Corinthians, If any man defile the Temple of God, him will God destroy, for the Temple of God is holy, which Temple ye are.

The second Use is for the comfort of all true believers, [Use 2] seeing Christ is in them; I remember what is recorded concerning Paul, that the sight of some Christian brethren cheered him after a sad shipwreck whom when Paul saw he took courage; And Caesar cheered the drooping Mariners in a storm by minding them of his presence, How much more should the in-being of Christ solace the believing soul? 1. Because of his authority and power to order all casualties and concernments according to his pleasure, whereas many times the best of creature-friends can do no more then pity and pray: Thus our Lord cheered his Apostles, All power is given unto me, and lo I am with you always even unto the end of the world. And it was a cordial to the Disciples in a storm that Christ was with them, whom the winds and waves must obey. 2. Because this a bode of Christ speaketh his complacency; This is M^r Bayns his Note upon the Text. A man cannot properly be said to dwell in a prison in which he taketh no delight: And this answereth a Scripture-expression elsewhere, Here I will dwell for I have desired it, (saith God of Zion) Though many times drooping Christians, viewing their own beggarlinesse and vileness, judge themselves worthy to be detested and deserted, and would relinquish themselves if they could, yet Christ looketh to the poor and contrite soul as a meet habitation for himself. 3. Because he doth graciously communicate himself unto the soul where he resideth, according to the necessities thereof; I dwell with him that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the contrite ones. When you read this promise, remember his ability and fidelity in these and all other kinds, to accommodate those whom he inhabits to their completing in the accomplishment of his Mediatorship; Therefore doubtless there cannot possibly be either any creature-want or danger, wherein the improvement of this in-dwelling of Christ may not refresh the believing Christian. 4. Because this will be constantly and abundantly relieving in times of the greatest solitariness, though in banishment, or the closest imprisonment, and at the greatest distance from the dearest friends: Joseph in Egypt, David in the wilderness, and Paul prisoner in the Castle, were admirably cheered by this company; And Christ is now and will be evermore the self-same in his servants for their consolation.

The third Use is for Exhortation, to persuade Believers [Use 3] unto a double duty.

1. To purge all discovered pollution out of themselves, because of Christ's special residence in them. This Use the Apostle Paul maketh of this doctrine, for having said to the Corinthians, Ye are the Temple of the living God, as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them, he addeth, Having therefore these Promises, Dearly Beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit; This was one charge which God gave unto old Israel, in a military condition, that all bodily filth should be buried under ground, and this is rendered as the reason, For the Lord thy God walketh in the midst of thee, therefore shall thy Camp be holy, that he see no unclean thing in thee; Oh that Christians would in this respect oppose inward defilements, and not outward pollutions only. How careful are we to sweep and wash away whatsoever might be offensive unto our Friends in the rooms where we lodge them? And what guest can so well deserve welcome as Jesus Christ, unto whom all sin is abominable, he being the holy One of God? Be not satisfied therefore with fair faces and white hands, but labor to make and to keep the in-side clean also.

2. To prepare for Christ's contentful entertainment in their bosoms; Who is not willing to be at cost in providing both food and furniture fitting for the welcoming of worthy friends? It's said, Levi made Christ a great Feast in his own house; yea, Solomon brings in the whorish woman, reporting her provisions made for the young man whom she solicited to lewdness, I have deck'd my bed with coverings of Tapestry, with carved works, and fine linen of Egypt; I have perfumed my bed with Myrrh, Aloes and Cinamon. And should not a principle of pure love to Christ prevail with Christians to do more then sordid lusts do with the brutish children of men? If you demand what is the provision to be laid in for Christ his welcome; The Apostle telleth you, it is perfecting holiness in the fear of God, which practice also, he moveth by the argument under-hand (as was hinted in the former branch of the Exhortation.) By the increasing and acting of all the graces of the holy Ghost, Christ will be abundantly contented. This is intended by these metaphorical expressions of the Spouse unto Christ, At our gates are all manner of pleasant fruits, new and old, which I have laid up for thee O my Beloved; I would cause thee to drink of spiced wine, of the juice of my Pomegranate. And take this encouragement all you drooping souls, who are low and little in your own eyes, judging nothing of your graces worthy Christ's acceptance, or meet for his entertainment, that his Loves will take in good part, that which with sincere good-will you shall provide and make tender of with respect unto his content. I will sup with you (saith he to the Church.) And upon the invitation of the Spouse, thus expressed, Let my Beloved come into his garden and eat his pleafantfruit, This answer speaking good acceptance is returned, I am come into my garden, my Sister, my Spouse, I have gathered my Myrrh with my Spice, I have eaten my honey-comb with my honey, I have drunk my wine with my milk: Oh how ready with cheerfulness is the Lord Jesus to own and accept all graces, notwithstanding their defects and mixtures in the bosoms of them whom he doth inhabit! This therefore should both quicken and embolden poor believing souls to lay in and lay out for his satisfaction who is pleased to abide in them.

I proceed to the second branch of the Doctrine, which is the truth openly expressed, viz. That the existency of Christ in Believers, giveth existence unto their hopes of glory.

If the reasons hereof be demanded, I answer,

Because Christ his spiritual presence in us, is God's earnest of glory. The Apostle is express for this: Having mentioned the longings of Saints to be swallowed up of life, he addeth, Now he that hath wrought us for the self same thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit. Therefore if God's own earnest may give good hope, then Christ in believing Christians giveth good hope of glory, especially because the earnest itself is of so great value, the receiving whereof is happiness begun upon earth.

2. Because of that near relation and close union which is betwixt Christ and them, whom he inhabiteth, They are not only related unto him, as servants unto their Master, though that would give ground of good hope. Seeing he himself who is taken up into glory, hath said, Where I am, there shall my servant be. Neither are they only one with him, He in them, and they in him, as the branches in the Vine. But he is united unto believers as the head unto the body, which is called his fullness. Therefore if there be hope that Christ will have a complete body without the defect of any member in heaven, or that every individual member of Christ his mystical body shall be glorified, then Christ in believers is the infallible hope of glory.

3. Because Christ by abiding in Believers doth prepare them for participation in glory. The Apostle Paul is clear in his expressions to this purpose. Ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you, and if Christ be in you the body is dead because of sin, but the Spirit is life because of righteousness; But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead, dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. Wheresoever Christ dwells spiritually, his Spirit operateth effectually for the subduing of sinful principles, and for the advancing of the power of sanctification; And thus he preparing the vessels of mercy for glory, and making them meet to be made partakers of the inheritance of Saints in light, he giveth them sure hope of glory.

This by way of application may serve as a good touchstone [Use 1] to try the truth of heavens hopes. Not Christ in the Sermons which we hear, nor Christ in the Chapters which we read, nor Christ in the Sacrament which we receive will administer ground of hope of future glory. Though Christ be in our heads by high notions, and in our mouths by frequent, glorious expressions, yet if he be not in our bosoms by spiritual inhabitation, he is not unto us the hope of glory: It is said of hypocrites, that God is near in their mouths but far from their reins. And that with their lips they honor him, but their heart is far from him. At the last day many shall plead their profession of Christ, calling him Lord, Lord, and talking of great works done in his Name, who yet shall be rejected with doleful disappointments, I will profess unto them (saith Christ) I never knew you, depart from me; Here then the question will be, how may Christ his being in us be discovered? I answer briefly. 1. By the grace of faith whereby he is received. 2. By the room into which he is welcomed. 3. And by the effects of his entertainment. First, Whereas true Believers are the only receivers of Jesus Christ. This faith will evidence itself, partly by the incomparable value which it puts upon Christ. To you who believe (saith the Apostle Peter) he is precious, and partly by opposing and purging out sinful pollution, that Christ may not be annoyed by it: The heart is purified by faith, Therefore ask your selves, as in God's presence, whether there be anything in the world which you prize more then Christ, or so much as Christ, and whether you do indulge any wickedness within your bosoms, without bitter complaints and vigorous opposition.

Secondly, Christ dwelleth in the heart by faith. The Spouse saith, He shall lie as a bundle of Myrrh betwixt my breasts. Therefore consider, into what place Christ is welcomed. Do you admit him into some out-house only? As at his birth, he was laid in a manger, because there was no room for him in the Inn; Or do you put him into a cock-loft only? I mean, Do you only fill your fancies with notions, and tip your tongues with talk of Christ, or is he indeed received with warm welcome into your hearts, by longings, loves and rejoicings?

Thirdly, Whereas Christ is influentially operative in the soul where he resideth, as the soul in the body where it is. Christ is our life (saith Paul) and I am crucified with Christ, Nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me. Enquire therefore exactly whether by such spiritual breathings, sense and motions, as were in Jesus Christ, whilst upon earth, you can make out your union and communion with him. Hethat saith, he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked; what gaspings are in you after conformity to God's will and the glory of his Name! what sighs under sin with the expressions of divine displeasure! what complacency in God's service, and the smiles of his face, in the use of holy Ordinances! what motions, what progress do you endeavor to make, from sin, towards God, in the mortifying of inward lusts, and the advancing of the power of godliness in your conversations? Sincere answers returned unto such like demands, will suggest whether Christ be efficaciously present in you.

This truth administereth matter of much comfort unto all [Use 2] them who find upon due examination the Lord Jesus dwelling in them. When Zacchaeus heard that Christ would abide in his house, he received him joyfully. Greater cause of joy have they who have already lodged him in their hearts. Now to quicken the believers joy upon that account, viz. that Christ in them is the hope of glory, these comfortable consequences may be considered.

1. Hence they may assuredly expect the supply of all outward wants, whether they look upon themselves, as possessed of Christ, or entitled by him unto glory. The holy Scripture holds forth this inference as deducible from both these grounds. Christ is the owner, the heir of all things, and therefore if God hath given us his Son, how shall he not with him freely give us all things? And if the Lord by the right of Christ hath been pleased to give interest in heavens glory, he will certainly vouchsafe all earthly needful accommodations; This conclusion Christ himself gathers from the premises. Fear not little Flock, for it is your Fathers good pleasure to give you the Kingdom. And the Apostle doth from the same Argument assert the ministration of Angels for their advantage. Are they not all ministering Spirits sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation? Therefore assurance of provision and protection is hence clearly deducible.

2. Upon the same account they may be confident of their final perseverance. The Apostle Peter having asserted the hope which the Regenerate have of this glorious Inheritance reserved in heaven for them, he addeth God's care to preserve them unto the possession thereof; who are kept (saith he) by the power of God through faith unto salvation: and from hence encourageth this confidence; Wherefore gird up the loins of your minds, and hope to the end, for the grace that is to be brought unto you, at the revelation of Jesus Christ. There are but two things (as I conceive) which can possibly endanger their falling short of hoped-for glory, viz. either their own corruptions within, or their oppositions from without. Now Christ being in them, and taking the care of them, doth secure their souls from both, as is manifest from his own words, I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. The gloss which reverend holy M^r Dod gave of this Scripture, was this; Whereas Sheep are endangered either from somewhat within them, viz. by the rot, or some disease to which subject, or from somewhat without them, viz. by dogs and beasts of prey: Our Savior promiseth, that the Sheep of his fold shall not miscarry finally from either of these dangers. And Christ annexeth an argument which holds invincible against all adverse power whatsoever, whether within or without, whether on earth or in hell; My Father which gave them me, is greater than All; Upon this bottom Saint Paul builds his triumph; Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us.

3. Therefore nothing which is consistible with Christ's residence in a Christians bosom should shake his hope of glory. Neither weakness of graces, nor strength of lusts, neither the assaults of Satan, how horrid, violent, frequent soever, nor imperfections in holy performances, how many, or constant soever, which militate against the believers assurance, should sink either hope or heart, except Christ's utter absence from the soul could from thence be undeniably concluded. The Apostle Paul having mentioned his constant conflict and his frequent foysls in the 7. of the Romans, yet adds in the end of the Chapter, his joy in Christ, I thank God through Jesus Christ; and asserts in the beginning of the Chapter following; There is no condemnation unto them who are in Christ Jesus. Augustine while Christ was in his eye, said, I dare not despond. And Christians should both with respect unto Christ's honor and their own comfort, make conscience, not to yield to dejecting doubts, or perplexing fears, in reference to their glory in heaven, while the matter of their complaints is no more then may possibly be found in the soul where Christ dwelleth. Certainly if doubting Christians would carefully hold unto this direction, maintaining and bottoming their hopes in Christ, multitudes of scruples might easily be answered, and their evidences for heaven would be better preserved, and their constant comfort well secured. This anchor of hope thus cast out and fastening upon Christ, would be admirably useful, when billows of temptations (as in a tempest) beat upon the believing soul; And the Helmet of this hope thus used would keep off many blows, whereby the comforts of distrustful spirits are sadly battered.

4. This may be a precious cordial to the believer upon his death-bed; It was reviving unto old Simeon, being ready to leave the word, Then he took Christ in his Arms, and blessed God, and said, Now lettest thou thy Servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation. How many and how sweet soever our contentments are upon earth, of which death will deprive us, yet Christ being in us the hope of glory, to die will be gain, and to be with Christ will be far better. And who is not cheerfully willing in a way of self-love, to part with that which is worse for what is much better?

The doctrine may be improved by exhortation. 1. To [Use 3] them in whom Christ is the hope of glory. 2. To others, who as yet have not received him.

First, Those who possess Christ and hope of glory through him, are to be persuaded

1. To contentment with their present condition upon earth, though it be mean and low. The heirs of vaste estates in the world can the better bear hardship, during their nonage, though their diet be scanty, their lodging hard, and their clothing coarse, because they hope that ere long all will be better. Who knoweth not the poverty of Jesus Christ? The Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have their nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. And yet he is comfortably contented, as in respect of his present enjoyment of God as his portion, so in reference to his expectation of future glory; The Lord is the Pertion of mine Inheritance: The lines are allen unto me in pleasant places; In thy presence is fullness of joy, and at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore. The Apostle Paul seeks by this argument to raise the Christian Colossians above sublunaries. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. Oh how admirably would such meditations elevate the discontented Christian with calmness and complacency, if they were set on by faith's activity!

2. To patience in bearing reproaches, with all other crosses for Christ, in a Christian course, keeping in their mind this hoped-for glory. This Doctrine Christ himself both preached and practiced; Blessed are you when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake, Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven; This was one passage in his Sermon, and truly by this he was supported under his sufferings, For the joy that was set before him he endured the Cross, despising the shame. Having propounded Christ's practice, it may be judged needless to mention the example of Moses, who chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt, for he had respect unto the recompense of reward: But $\langle \diamond \rangle$ you eye in Christ what is equitable and imitable, then consider in Moses what is attainable by the industrious actings of faith and meditation. And yet to prevail further upon your spirits in promoting your magnanimity and patience, by minding your hope of glory in Christ, I wish you to compare your present sufferings on earth with your future glory hoped for in heaven, both in regard of their quality and continuance, for the one are both light and short, whereas the other is both weighty and eternal. The experience of God's servants hath often put a Probatum est unto this direction. For this cause we faint not, for our light affliction which is but for a moment worketh for us, a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen, for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.

Secondly, Those who have not as yet received Christ to dwell in them, are to be moved as they desire heavens glory hereafter, and the comfortable hopes of it here upon earth, to give entertainment unto Jesus Christ. Zacchaeus upon an hint given of Christ's willingness to come into his house, comes down out of the Sycamore-Tree quickly, and receiveth him joyfully. Now do you with seriousness consider with what 1. importunity, 2. patience, 3. and promises, the Lord Jesus calleth upon you for entertainment. Behold, I stand at the door and knock, if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

1. There is the use both of a voice and knocking, therefore importunity. He speaketh by his word, and knocketh by his Spirit, with some recoylings of an awakened conscience.

2. This importunity is not only once, it is not a knock, or a word and away, but he standeth, he stayeth, and waiteth for admission; This speaketh much patience.

3. This patient importunity is backed with promises of communion upon willingness to take him in, I will sup with him and he with me, (as if he had said) I will feast his soul, and I will accept of his provisions for my welcome.

Now if by these motives (to which many more might be added) you be disposed to enquire what you should do that may come into you, and be in you, the hope of glory; I would refer you to the counsel given by the Psalmist (which is doubled, because weighty and necessary) Lift up your heads O ye gates, and be lift up ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in. Hence two directions may be gathered. 1. That our souls (which in regard of their immortality are called everlasting doors) must willingly receive him. He is a great King, and will not take up with an out-house for his lodging, for the place of his gracious abode; He dwelleth in the heart; Either there or not at all. Therefore by meditating upon the fore-mentioned particulars, suggesting Christ his deservings, and the incomparable benefits to be received by him, seek to prevail with yourselves that your warmest loves, strongest longings, and highest joys may be laid forth upon him. 2. That he must be received as Lord and King, with free contentment to submit unto his Scepter and Regal Authority. In houses where Kings were wont to be entertained, Rex was usually written upon the door, all the rooms were to be disposed of for his use. In like manner must they commit the Keys of government into the hands of Christ, with willingness to be ruled by him in all things, who would receive him, and through him the hope of glory. 3. Hereto may be added heart-humiliation; For whereas high stately Palaces are esteemed the fittest houses for the entertainment of earthly Princes, Jesus Christ the King of glory maketh choice of lowly hearts for his habitation: For thus saith the high and lofty one that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is holy, I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit: Therefore level your mountains of selfconceit, lay yourselves in the dust upon the serious review of the evil both of your lives and natures, together with the deserved misery, which you be neither able to resist nor undergo, and make an unfeigned self-resignation unto the Lord, to be always, in all things governed by him, so may you expect the coming of Christ into your souls, and the comfort of good hope of glory through him.

This one thing I earnestly move as a matter necessary to salvation by Jesus Christ, viz. self-denial, with submission to Christ, as tendered in the Gospel, upon terms of free grace. The Apostle Paul looketh upon the Jews as not in the state of salvation, Because they going about to establish their own righteousness submitted not themselves unto the righteousness of God. Their privileges were high, and their costly Sacrifices many, and therefore they hoping without Christ then preached to work out their own welfare, fell short of blessedness. The same Spirit of pride and self-dependence is in all our natures, which is extremely mischievous, obstructing the way unto Christ's welcome into the soul: therefore I entreat and beseech Christians again and again herein to be exceeding careful. Neither let those who are most rich in parts, duties, enjoyments, rely thereupon, with disrespect of Christ; Nor yet let Poor souls, burdened with guilt, beggarly in abilities, most vile and unworthy in their own account, keep off from Christ through distrustful discouragements; For as all good hope of glory is raised from Christ heartily entertained, so no one who humbly, obedientially stoopeth under his government shall be rejected.

In the last place, The Doctrine administereth much comfort [Use 4] unto mourners bewailing the death of such who (as they have just cause to believe) had received Christ into their souls before they left this world, because from this ground ariseth good hope that they are admitted into heavens glory. Upon this account the Apostle dissuadeth drooping, and persuadeth cheerfulness in Christians upon such occasions. I would not have you ignorant Brethren concerning them who are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope; For we believe that those who sleep in Jesus, God will bring with him, and so shall we ever be with the Lord; Wherefore comfort one another with these words. In this regard regular love to our deceased Christian Friends, would turn our water into wine, our tears into joys. If ye loved me (said Christ to his dejected Apostles) ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father. And this was the reason (as some Divines do conjecture) wherefore David who mourned excessively upon Absalom's death, was more comfortable when he heard that his young child was dead, Now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? I shall go to him: God gave into his heart assurance of his child's happiness in heaven; whereas the wickedness wherein Absalom lived and died did suggest rather doubts concerning his future condition.

This Use puts a fair opportunity into my hand to reach forth a Cordial unto the Father, Mother, Grand-mother, and other Relations of the ingenuous, gracious Child, whose Funeral hath occasioned this Assembly, and whose affectionate minding of this Text (upon which I have discoursed) was the Argument which induced me to undertake it, at this time. He was but nine years old and a half when God translated him, and above five years since this Text, Christ in you the hope of glory, took such hold upon his heart, that he frequently spake of it, and often entreated his Father to preach of it. And doubtless it is not a thing usual for a child so young to be thus affected with thoughts of Christ, and glory to be hoped for through him.

Some few things more I will add,

1. To relieve the sad hearts of his nearest friends.
2. To move them, with others, unto thankfulness to the Lord for that which his Spirit had wrought in this hopeful child.
3. As also to quicken young ones unto the imitation of his virtues.

First, His loving honorable respect to his dear Parents, and dutiful observance of them, was very great, which was evidenced by these particulars.

1. Having quick parts and an aptness to learning, he was willing to apply himself unto anything wherein they judged it meet to have him instructed.
2. As he himself was afraid to offend his Parents, so he was careful to prevent amongst Servants that which might trouble them, and to keep from their knowledge whatsoever he thought would be grievous unto their spirits.
3. When under griping pains by reason of the wind-Colick, he would labor to forbear groans and outcries, lest they should be over-much afflicted with his Lamentations.
4. Being asked, whether he desired prayers for the lengthening of his life, his answer was, I would live, that I might glorify God, and be a comfort to my Father and mother.

And all these expressions of his tender love towards his Parents, are the more considerable, because there was reason to hope that they were increased in him by their care of his Religious Education; In all these particulars he was a rare example (especially if his childhood be remembered) of Children's obedience to their Parents.

Secondly, He was like young Timothy, knowing the holy Scriptures in his Childehood. Though his bodily distempers did often take him off from Reading in the Bible, yet he had read it twice throughout, and was the third time gotten into the New Testament, before his last Sickness. He was able also to give a good account both of the Chapters which he read, and of the Sermons which he heard.

And I will here mention three Passages which manifest that he minded and was affected with the Word of God.

1. Having been taught a short Prayer by his Parents, his manner was, to add thereto Scripture-sentences from time to time; Two I shall report. The one from Psal. 119. 68. Thou art good, and dost good, Teach me thy Statutes: The other from Psa. 120. 2. Deliver my Soul, O Lord, from lying lips, and from a deceitful tongue. Were not these his desires of knowledge and of preservation from lying (a sin to which Children are subject) very commendable.

2. Hearing of the misery of wicked ones, and Hypocrites, laid open in a Sermon on the Sabbath-morning, he durst not go to his dinner till he had gone aside to prayer; whereas thousands of riper age have no obediential bents wrought by divine threatenings.

3. And being once reproached (some years since) because the hair of his head was short, he readily returned this Answer, That God's Word speaketh against long hair, remembering those words of the Apostle, Doth not even Nature itself teach you, that if a man have long hair it is a shame unto him? 1 Cor. 11. 14. May not this give a check unto many, both Ministers and others, whose Ruffian-like locks are very offensive unto multitudes who fear the Lord?

Thirdly, As he was a Child of many Prayers, not only being much prayed for by his Parents and their Godly Friends, but also because he himself did pray daily, seeming also to make conscience of this duty. And here I shall relate some things which I account considerable.

1. Sundry years since he made this as a matter of complaint, that he could not order his thoughts while he was at prayer; How may this shame multitudes of people much elder, to whom roving thoughts in prayer were never troublesome?

2. Not long before his death, staying at home on the Sabbath-morning with a maid-Servant, he desired (as he had done formerly) that they might sing a Psalm and go to prayer; And in his prayer he made this Petition, Lord, grant that we may leave our sins, not as people do their old clothes with purpose to put them on again, but that we may forsake our sins as rags, with resolution to wear them no more.

Many times when sick and in pain, he would use these words, Lord help me; He was thankful to myself as to others for our prayers; and that night before his death, having been once prayed for by them who watched with him (who discerned the approach of his change) he himself of his own accord entreated them to pray with him and for him again: Do not these things speak his sensible apprehensions of dependence upon God, with expectations of favor from him by means of prayer?

Fourthly, This must not be forgotten, That for divers years before his death he would express much estimation of those Texts of Scripture which speak of heavens glory, the glory provided for God's Servants forever. He would often commend the grace of contentment, saying, that it was better then riches, and that man's life consisted not in abundance. If unto all these things we add (that with which I did begin) viz. the words of my Text, which did run much in his mind, Christ in you the hope of glory; we may thence charitably and probably conjecture, that notwithstanding his religious education, and the many things praise-worthy in his life, yet he grounded his hope of glory alone upon the Lord Jesus.

These particulars I have judged meet to mention (as I before hinted) with respect to God's honor, the comfort of his mourning friends, and the edification both of children and their Parents, who may be herewith acquainted.

Now the practical improvement both of my Sermon and this Narration, I humbly commend unto the blessing of God through Jesus Christ.

FINIS.

P-SA-5. Good courage discovered, and encouraged: in a sermon preached before the commanders of the military forces, of the renowned city of London. In the parish church of Great St. Helens. May the 17. 1642. By Simeon Ash, preacher in London. - Ashe, Simeon, d. 1662., England and Wales. Parliament.

GOOD COVRAGE DISCOVERED, AND ENCOVRAGED: IN A SERMON preached before the Commanders of the Military Forces, of the Renowned City of London.

In the Parish Church of Great S^t. Helens. May the 17. 1642.

By SIMEON ASH, Preacher in London.

DEVT. 20. 2, 3, 4.

And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the Battle that the Priest shall approach, and speak unto the people.

And shall say unto them, Hear O Israel, you approach this day unto Battle against your Enemies: Let not your hearts faint, fear not, and do not tremble, neither be ye terrified because of them.

For the Lord your God is he that goeth with you, to fight for you against your enemies to save you.

LONDON, Printed by John Dawson for John Barroughes, and are to be sold at his shop at the golden Dragon near the Inner Temple-gate in Fleet-street. 1642.

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPFUL, the Aldermen, and Commoners, unto whom the Militia of the City of London is committed, the Serjeant Major General, the Colonels, the Lieutenant Colonels, Serjeant Majors, Captains, and other officers of the trained Bands of the said City.

Right Worshipful,

Cornelius, Centurion of the Italian Band is thus commended by the Holy Ghost, that he was a devout man, and one that feared God. And I may report thus much to your honour and to move others to make imitation; that you have begun, and hitherto carried on your Martial affairs religiously. For having put the City into a posture of defense; before the execution of the Militia; you jointly sought God by Prayer for good success. The Lord heard your Prayers, for you went forth, and returned home, without the least touch of danger to yourselves, or your Companies. This remarkable Providence called you again together, to praise the God of salvations, the God of your mercies.

Hereupon you were pleased to appoint me (very unworthy) to assist you in the service of Thanksgiving: A service not unseemly for the Hoast of Heaven.

This Sermon, which upon that occasion I preached, through the Constructions of your Love found such acceptance, that you commanded it to come abroad to do you further service.

And seeing you gave it good entertainment, as it was first presented, it makes bold to waite upon you without change of habit, expecting your Protection.

Although I somewhat suspect that sundry amplifications in the Sermon which affected the Auditors, may not be so pleasing to the Judicious Reader, yet your desires to have it printed, as it was preached, makes me to run that adventure.

The Lord of Hosts guide, guard, and encourage you in all your good undertakings for peace and truth, and make you careful to put Christian references upon all your services, for the honor and safety of our King, the welfare of his Kingdoms, and the continued Prosperity of this famous City. This your prudent and pious perseverance in the work so well begun, will draw forth many praises to God, many prayers for you, and much rejoicing in the hearts of all them, who sincerely affect you; of which number, I beseech you account him one who is Your Servant, in, and for Christ, SIMEON ASH.

GOOD COURAGE DISCOVERED, AND INCOVERAGED.

PSAL. 31. 24.

Be of good Courage.

Right worshipful, and worthy Gentlemen, (whose desires, and whose service of thanksgiving, I am now attending,) I hope you are come hither with an intention;

First, to honor God for preservation enjoyed, through his providence, to whom you prayed. My Text looks back unto such a business; The Lord preserveth the faithful; therefore let the faithful upon such experiences in way of praise, in way of requital learn to be of good courage.

Secondly, I believe you are come together in expectation for the future, to receive further favors from the God of your present praises; and my Text looks forward to that, Bee of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart, and wait I say on the Lord.

My Text is short, the words in our translation are not many, in the original, there is but one word, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, The Septuagint renders the Hebrew word, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Quit yourselves like men; Viriliter agite, play the men, Rob•ramini, be ye strong.

The Counsel here given is for all Christians, at all times needful, but for you, and at this time, most seasonable.

Bee ye courageous. First, The Counselor was, a Worthy, a Soldier, a Warriour, a Commander, a King: David, as the title tells you, He calls for courage.

Secondly, The Persons counseled, they are Saints, faithful ones: O ye Saints love him, his manner is by his special providence to preserve you; Therefore be ye of good courage. The point lies fair, which I conceive pertinent, and now purpose to prosecute.

God's people must be of good courage.

I shall briefly suggest the Scriptures proof, in a threefold gradation, wherein good courage is called for:

First, Saint Paul an Apostle with Apostolical authority, persuades to it; 2 Cor. 16. 13. Quit ye like men.

Secondly, Jehoshaphat a King, with regal authority commands it, 2 Chron. 19. ult. Deale courageously.

Thirdly, The great God of Heaven and Earth, putting himself under a warlike notion, as the Lord General of all the forces in the World, the Lord of Hosts. He peremptorily presseth it; Haggie. 2. 4. Now be strong ô Zerubbabel saith the Lord and be strong ô Joshua, the Son of Iozedek the High Priest, and be strong the people of the Land saith the Lord, and work, for I am with you saith the Lord of Hosts.

Three things there be, that I shall speak to, in the prosecution of this point.

First, The explication of the virtue, the grace called for, wherein I will endeavor to discover what this courage is.

Secondly, The confirmation of this truth by reasons, from which this Doctrine may undeniably be concluded, and by which you may all be fully convinced, that there is abundant cause, why all God's people should be courageous.

Thirdly, The application of all, by way of use, that my Sermon may be the more serviceable.

Christian courage may thus be described, It is the undaunted audacity of a sanctified heart in adventuring upon difficulties, and undergoing hardships for a good cause upon the call of God.

There are six things considerable in the description that I have given, which I will particularly point at, and prove.

First, the Genus, the common nature of it: it is an undaunted audacity. This Animosity (as some phrase it,) it is common both unto men, and to some bruits. The Lion, Prov. 30. 30. is said, to be the strongest among beasts, that turneth not away from any.

And there is an elegant description of the war horse, in regard of boldness, Job 39. 19. &c. Hast thou given the horse strength? hast thou clothed his neck with thunder▪ Canst thou make him afraid as a gras-hopper? the glory of his nostrils is terrible, he paweth in the valley, and rejoyeth in his strength, he goeth out to meet the armed men. He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted, neither turneth he back from the sword. The Quiver rattleth against him, the glittering spear and the shield, he swallows the ground with fierceness and rage, neither believeth he, that it is the sound of the Trumpet.

And this boldness that is in bruits, it is spoken of, as a piece of this same courage that God is pleased to give to men; Ezek. 3. 9. this is the Lord's promise. As an Adamant, harder then the flint, have I made thy forehead.

The word Harder, is the same in the Hebrew, that is here in my Text, Fortiorem petra; The Rock, that is not afraid of any weather, Summer, or Winter, Sun, and Showres, Heat, and Cold, Frost, and Snow, it blusheth not, shrinketh not, it changeth not it's complexion, it is still the same; Such alike thing is courage, in the common nature of it.

Secondly, Consider the subject, it is the Heart, the Castle where Courage commands, and exerciseth Military Discipline; (shall I so say) its within the bosom, it is the Soul of a valiant Soldier.

Some conceive, our English word Courage, to be derived from Cordis actio, the very acting of the heart.

A valiant man is described, 2 Sam 17. 10. for to be a man; whose heart, is as the heart of a Lyon. And sometime, the original translated, Couragious, as Amos 2. 16. may most properly be rendered, a Man of heart.

Beloved, valor doth not consist in a piercing eye, in a terrible look, in big words, but it consists in the metal, the vigor that is within the bosom. Sometimes, a Coward may dwell at the sign of a roaring voice, and of a stern countenance: whereas true fortitude may be found within his breast, whose outward deportment promiseth little, or nothing in that kind.

Thirdly, Note the qualification of this same subject; I said a sanctified heart: for I am not now speaking of fortitude, as a moral virtue, whereof Heathens, that have not God, are capable; and for which many among them, that are not Christians, have been worthily commended.

But I am now discoursing of Courage, as a virtue Theological, as a gracious qualification, put upon the people of God by special covenant. And there are three things that do characterize it, and which do distinguish it from the moral virtue of fortitude.

- The Roote, whence it ariseth;
- The Rule, whereby it is directed;
- The End, to which it is referred,

The Roote, whence it riseth, is love to God; All the Saints of God that love the Lord, be of good Courage. The love of Christ constraineth me to make these bold, and brave adventures, saith the Apostle, 2 Cor. 5. 14.

The Rule whereby it is directed, is the word of God: what the Lord hath pleased to leave on record for a Christians guidance in holy pages, 1 Chron. 22. 12. 13. The Lord give thee wisdom and understanding, that thou mayest keep the law. If thou take heed to the statutes, and judgments, which the Lord charged Moses with concerning Israel: be strong and of good courage, dread not, nor be dismai'd. Bee a man of metal, but let thy metal be according to my mind, according to this rule.

And the End, to which it refers, is God. For every sanctified man, being a self-denying, and a God-advancing man; his God is his Center, wherein his actings, his undertakings rest, and his Soul is not, yea it cannot be satisfied but in God.

The fourth thing considerable in the Description is, the natural, the formal, the immediate operations, that do flow from this gracious, audacious frame of heart, they are two:

- There is an adventuring upon difficulties,
- And there is an undergoing of hardships.

First, There is an adventuring upon hard services, It is said, 1 Sam. 31. 12. The valiant men rose and went all night, and took the body of Saul, and the bodies of his Sons from the wale of Bethshan, and came to Gabesh, and burnt them there. When the Philistines had taken their bodies and were gone away Conquerors, and fastened them there, as Ensigns of victory, brave blades, well mettalled men, went by night, and fetched them back again: an hard, and a brave service.

And by reason hereof there is an enduring of hardships: Those Worthies of whom the world was not worthy, who are said to be men valiant in fight, Heb. 11. 34. This, testimony is given of them, that They endured torturings, the trial of mockings or cruel mockings, of scourgings, of bonds, and imprisonment, of stoning, of being sawne asunder, of being slain with the sword, of wandering up and down in sheep's skins, and goats skins, being men destitute, afflicted, and tormented.*

Fifthly, in my description, I cast in the cause, which true courage undertakes to do, and suffer for, the object it works upon, the prize it adventures for, it is a good cause, Matters of faith, stand ye fast in the faith, quit ye like men. It is a Gospel piece for which I am to jeopard a joint, to hazard alimbe, to adventure life, 1 Cor. 6. 13. or matters of fact: I must be of good courage for my conscience, that I may maintain an evenness of spirit in reference to my rule, in relation to my God, 1 Pet. 3. 14. If ye suffer for righteousness sake happy are ye, be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled. It is a noble, a Christian resolution in any man, if he thus determine, rather then I will make a wound upon my conscience, a breach between God and my soul; rather then I will violate asacred vow, and transgress the command of my God, I will run the greatest hazards in outward regards that can be imagined.

The goodness of the cause (Divines say) for which a man suffers, makes the Martyr: In like manner, it is the warrantableness of the work, wherein the soldier, the man of metal appears, that gives him the credit, the honor of this title, to be accounted a valiant man.

Sixthly and lastly, I added that good courage makes the foresaid adventures upon the call of God. Have not I commanded thee, be strong and of a good courage: If the Lord please to beat up the Drum; If the Lord please to bid them arm, and come abroad, his call is sufficient, Now God calls either by his precept, or by his providence. Either God calls his Champions for to undertake dangers, or he commands dangers to over-take them; and hereupon being led forth by the Lord of hosts, they express their valor: For this they know, that whether it be estate, or peace, or life, or liberty, or Religion, or whatsoever else they hope to defend, they are all tallants that God hath entrusted them with, and that therefore only upon his Commission signed, and sealed by his own hand they may come forth, and must come forth bravely, and show themselves courageous in reference thereto.

Now for a man in an impetuous, giddy, neady way, to break himself unwisely in his reputation, liberty, estate, and himself knows no other reason: but because his spirit moves him, and his humors stir in him, or some passionate inconsiderate persons provoke him, this (my beloved) is not to be courageous. We read in the Gospel, of a man possessed with an evil spirit, that did often cast himself into the water, and into the fire to destroy himself. And truly it nearly concerns many men of daring spirits, to consider seriously what spirit it is that acts in them: These things we must mark, that the true nature of courage may be understood.

This description of good courage I judged meet to premise and to explain briefly, that we may understand the duty in the text, the duty, the seasonable duty, which God calls for, and I plead for.

Bee of good Courage.

The second thing I propounded in the prosecution of this point, is the reasons wherefore a Christian should be courageous: And my doctrine is built upon a fourfold ground.

First, God's people should be of good courage, in reference unto the condition, unto which God hath called them. God hath appointed all Christians to be soldiers. A Sacrament is a soldiers oath, when we were baptized we took press money, and vowed to serve under the colors of Christ, and as manfull soldiers to fight against the world, the flesh, and the Devil: and as oft as we have been at the Sacrament of the body and blood of our Lord, we have renewed our solemn, and sacred obligation in that kind, in reference to Christ, who is called The Captain of the Lord's host, Jos. 5. 16. and the Captain of our salvation Heb. 2. 10. In àure hardness (saith the Apostle) as a good culd•er of Christ, 2 Tim. 2. 4, Epaphroditus my fellow soldier, Phil. 2. 25. Beloved, wisdom is not more necessary for a Counselor, nor eloquence for an Orator, then courage for a soldier. Soldiers we are, we must therefore, Be of good courage.

Secondly, the weighty services wherein the Lord of Hosts is pleased to employ us. Men employed in peculiar services are commanded to put on fortitude: As Joshua who was a Commander to guide, and govern the host, the armies of the Israelites in their passage to Canaan, Bee thou strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe todoe according to all the Law, which Moses my servant commanded thee, turn not from it, to the right hand or to the left. And Ezra, in regard of his office, is thus spoken unto: Arise, for the matter belongeth unto thee, be of good courage, and do it: and common Christians, in respect of services required of them, are to be courageous in their places, Ios. 23. 6. Be ye therefore very courageous to keep, and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses, that you turn not aside therefrom, to the right hand or to the left.

Shall I hint some services that are charged upon all our consciences

The work of mortification, to pick out our eyes, to chop off our hands, to cut off our feet; do you think that a milk sop, a man that is not a man of a stout spirit will do this. Now to massacre fleshly lusts, is (as it were) for a man to mangle, and dismember his own body, it is a work painful and grievous, as for a man to cut off his own feet, to chop off his own hands, and to pick out his own eyes, as Christ and the Apostle Paul do express it.

Besides this, there are in Christians bosoms, strong holds to be battered, fortifications to be demolished: there are high hills and mountains, that must be levelled with the ground there are trenches to be made, valleys to be filled. O beloved, I may not mention the hills that lie before us in heaven way, which we must climb up; and craggy rocks that we must get over: and without courage certainly the service put upon our hands will not be discharged.

There are also the walls of Jerusalem to be repaired, and the Temple to be reedified: If Nehemiah had not been a man of a brave spirit, he would never have gone through with that Church work, those weighty services which he did undertake. How this is applicable to us for the present time, the time of our begun reformation, I speak not; but rather do refer it to your considerations; I beseech you to read Neh. 4 17, 18. They which built on the wall, and they that did bear burdens, with those that laded: Everyone with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon. For the Builders everyone had a sword girded by his side, and so built, and he that sounded the Trumpet was by us. While they were at work they were all ready for war.

Thirdly, Christians must be courageous, in reference to the 3. huge Armies, with which they are assaulted.

There are armies

- Of Devils.
- Of Lusts.
- Of men and women in the world, that do wage war with every Christian, that in good earnest makes out after his God in heaven way.

For the Devils, it is the argument of the Apostle, and from thence I took it, Ephes. 6. 10. Brethren, be strong (saith he,) for we wrestle not against flesh, and blood, but against principalities, and powers, against the Rulers of the darkness of this World, against Spiritual wickednesses in the heights. Mark for the number they are many, Our name is legion, for we are many: How many thousands, neither you nor I know. There is strength in them, they are Powers, Principalities, and they are Rulers, they have very great authority in the Darkness of the World; in Midnight men, Darke men, Men who love not Sun-shine light, but rather delight to lie in holes and caves.

I mean, in regard of the Darkness of their minds, and their willful ignorance of the things of God. And they are in the height; they fight with much advantage (as some observe,) being over our heads. And they are Spirits, they work invisibly, and they fight against our Souls, they labor to keep our hearts in thralldom, they seek to beggar and to undo us in regard of our grace, and Spiritual joys.

The Holy Apostle Peter saith, The Devil your adversary, goeth about like a roaring Lyon, seeking whom he may devour. An Adversary, and a Devil, and a strong one, as a Lyon roaring, and then he is active, he walks about, and he is full of malice, ready to devour: These things touched upon, do tell us, that we, who are always surrounded, besieged by such enemies, have need of courage.

There are armies of lusts, I know not how many. The Apostle saith, Fleshly lusts that fight against the Soul. These soes lie within us, and they strike at the head, and the heart, endeavoring to let out the precious life of our immortal souls.

As the Captains of the King of Syria, had a command to fight against, neither small nor great, but the King of Israel. And the Apostle saith, that lusts in his bosom were such enemies, as still carried him captive, and hailed him as a prisoner. (You know the expression, Rom. 7. 2.) Beloved, doth not experience oftentimes prove thus much, that pride, passions, unbelief, hypocrisy, earthly mindedness, creature confidence, sensuality, do take up arms against our precious Souls. Alas! alas! lusts, deceitful lusts, many deceitful lusts, are still, still tyrannizing in our bosoms, which of us hath not cause to complain with the Apostle, when I would do good, they are at hand present with me: strong in me, ever stabbing, and striking, and poisoning, and wounding; if I would but pray, or weep, or amend. These Rebels raise their strengths, and combine their forces to hinder me: and no sooner can Satan hold up finger, and temptation show it self; But they are ready furiously to march out against Christ, his government, graces, glory. Beloved, I appeal to your consciences, whether in regard of this black guard, maintained within us, we have not need to be of good courage.

Thirdly, the armies of people: The Apostle Paul saith, he fought with men who were as beasts, Beasts after the manner of men, 1 Cor. 15. 32. David tells you they were Dogs, and they were Tigers, and Wolves, and Bears, and Bulls, and Lions, so in the Psalms he phraseth them. I promise you, a man that is so beset, thus assaulted, if he be not a man of courage what will become of him? There are Sanballets and Tobiah's, men of malignant, mischievous Spirits, to do us mischief in Heaven way. had we not need in that regard to be courageous? And truly, women if they cannot use weapons, they will cast, and fling stones, shoot their arrows even bitter words. David met with opposition in that kind, from one that was near, and should have been better. Michal she jeared him in his righteous, and holy zeal, in reference to God; you know the story, and therefore I report it not. And doubtless, had not he been a man of an Heroic Spirit, he might have been dashed out of countenance and baffled and cooled in his zeal, because of her reproachful language.

There are those that are ready to perform ill offices, Sheba like, to blow a Trumpet of sedition, of contention, to cast coals, and kindle strife between the head and the members, the King, and his Subjects; to set all on a •i•me in the Kingdom. In this regard, we had need to be steel to the back, that we be not disheartened. From all these three particuiars, I might apply that passage, 2 Sam. 10. 9. 12. When Ioah saw the front of the battle against him before and behind; he said he of good courage, and let us play the men: His speeches did sparkle Spirits, he herein proved himself a man meet to be a warlike Commander, for danger and difficulties did add heart and heat.

My Masters, you see our case, let us play the men for our people, and for the Cities of our God. Beloved, you perceive by that which I have pointed at, that our enemies are more and worse, we are beset before, and behind, above, and below, without and within; not only our Cities, but our Souls are opposed, endangered. Hell and Earth, Men and Devils, yea and ourselves are Adversaries to ourselves. Therefore there is good reason, why we should put on Courage.

Fourthly and lastly, We have need of Courage, because of the various afflictions to be expected. For ought we know, heavy things may befall us, and must be borne by head, and shoulders by us, before we get to our Castle, our place of refuge, our rest in Heaven; how stony, how thorny, how deep, and how dangerous our ways may prove, before we get to our journeys end, we cannot tell. It may be, we must travail through blood, through our own blood, and therefore we need Courage.

After our Savior had suggested to his Disciples, Mat. 10. 21. Brother shall deliver brother to death; the Father the Child, and the Child shall raise against the Parents, and cause them to be pat to death, and you shall be hated of all men for my names sake; Hereupon he adds, verse 26. Fear not, 32. Fear not. Beloved, we know not what may be our portion here on earth, before we come perfectly to enjoy God our portion, and be happy in enjoying of him forever. We may live to see the City fired, our estates wasted, our wives abused, our children torn in pieces lin be-meal, piece-meal before our eyes: believe me without courage, these sights will be hard and heavy to be beheld, such like sights will cause us to fownd away, to sink into the dust, if we provide not courage. Thus have I run over my reasons, and now I request you all, seriously to consider, whether in all the fore-mentioned regards, we have not abundant cause to endeavor, to get the grace the text commends, and to do the duty that in the text God calls for, Be of good courage.

I come now to the application of all that hath been delivered by way of use. The uses of this point that I shall speak to, they are but two.

- The first Reproof,
- The second Exhortation.

For Reproof, hence I have occasion for to blame both unworthy cowardliness in some, and wicked audaciousnesse in others: both vices contrary to this virtue, both extremes, opposed by this practice of Christian fortitude, which my text persuades.

First I must check an unworthy dastardliness, which discovers it self three ways in the bosoms of men.

First, when men by reason of pusi•animity, & lowness of spirit, dare not appear in the cause that they are convinced, to be the cause of God. There were some, John. 12. 43. who, though they believed on Christ, yet they durst not profess him for fear of the Pharisees, lest they should be excommunicated. The consciences of many tell them, that such a way is the way of God, doubtless this is heaven road; surely these are the courses to be taken to enjoy God, and communion with him, and yet for fear of I know not what, scorns, mocks, loss of friends, or the like; they dare not be seen. It may be they will go to Christ with Nichodemus in the night, for fear too many eyes observe them, and take notice of them in such unwounded paths, exercises which seem to proclaim strictness and preciseness. You see I am in haste, and therefore cannot instance in particulars.

Secondly, others by reason of cowardliness soon grow discouraged in sad and weighty undertakings, because they find the way to heaven craggy, the duties difficult, the services something hard; and because they have not expected success on a sudden; here upon their spirits shrink up; I have reference in this expression to the original word used to this very purpose, in Num. 21. 4. And the soul of the people was much discouraged, because of the way. Their spirits were shortened (as it is in the Hebrew) they run up by reason of distress, and all vigor gave in. As a Cravant begins to look pale through fear; his spirits fly to the heart, you shall see no blood in his face: O did he think to be mocked, and to be pursevanted? and did he expect to be imprisoned? and did he conceive to be put on such a dead task, and to work himself down in his strength, respects amongst men, and other outward comforts, and reap nothing but the wind. Much hath been done, and much hath been endured, many weeks, months, years, are run up, since he expected a good crop, of increase and comfort: but hopes being frustrated, and expectations disappointed; he sits down dejected: Because Reformation is driven on heavily, things stick in the birth, therefore many are disheartened.

Thirdly, those that under dark clouds and showers of sufferings lie grovelling on the ground, through disconsolateness: He that faints in the evil day, his strength is small, Prov. 24. 10. There is mention of some, Ios. 2. 11. when the wind and tide went against them; when the victory was carried on the other side, it is said, their hearts melted, there was no more courage in them: The melting of the wax is the severing of part from part: The confirming of the parts together, is the strength of it, the loosening of the parts weakens it: a man's soul runs out through fainting fears, as water; whereas it should be confirmed, as a piece of steel. Christians should be magnanimous, and Fortitude will fortify, and corroborate the soul. As the original word suggests thus much, so the conjunction of strength, and valor in the holy Scriptures doth import it: Be strong and of good courage. Think of this, and take heed I pray you of dastardly dejectedness, and dismaying fears, in sad, suffering times, because thereby both soul and body are much feebled, and much prejudiced.

The second thing reprov'd, is wicked audaciousnesse: This branch of the reprehension is needful, for certainly, there is in some men a kind of fire, that riseth out of hell, or rather some metal, which is digged out of the bottomless pit, which is called Courage, and so accounted in the world. My meaning is, that there is a devilish, wretched resoluteness in the bosoms of some to hold on in sin; notwithstanding divine reprehensions, convictions, threatenings, and executions; which is as much opposite to true courage, as the greatest cowardliness in the world. I told you before, that true courage is for good, upon a Command from God. The Apostle checks the Corinthians, because they had so much boldness, as that they did dare to do that which was offensive, viz. to go to law one with another, and that before Infidels, you dare do it saith he, you have so much boldness, 1 Cor. 6. & the Apostle Peter checks men, They are not afraid to speak evil of Dignities. The Psalmist brings in bad men thus resolving, Our tongues are our own, and we will speak, and who is Lord over us.

Some there be, who though the Minister flash the very fire of hell in their faces, discovering the danger of their evil courses; yet like unto the war-horse, they will adventure further, let the consequence prove what it may: yea, although God be on them in ways of heavy affliction, with one rod after another, and one blow bigger then another, though his providence pinch them in their persons, impoverish them in their estates, crush them in their credit; and it may be they suffer much in their yoke-fellows, Children and near allies; yea, though the often recoiling of their consciences, cause earth-quakes in their own bosoms, yet on they will still to do wickedly. These are the men of whom the Prophet complains, Who make their faces harder then the Rock, and refuse to return. Men of this make are common in every place, and their way of living is much to be bewailed: and now I am necessitated to speak unto them▪ because their sturdinesse in refusing to stoop unto God in reformation, is reputed courage.

To crush these wretched conceits, I heartily wish that the Scriptures may be perused; where you shall find, that those who are commended for the most valiant Champions, and the stoutest soldiers in the Campe of Christ, that they were the most timorous in matter of sin, and most cautious in references to God, that they might not in any kind offend His Majesty. David, that durst take a Lyon by the beard, and durst adventure upon a Duel, a single combat with Goliath, yet thus he expresseth himself to God, My flesh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgements. And Nehemiah, who had many ways worthily expressed his magnanimity for God and his cause, yet no man was ever more awed with the fear of God. He persuaded himself, and others thereunto. Ought not we to walk in the fear of God? And again complaining of the governors, who were his Predecessors, that they were usurious, and very injurious in their places; he addeth but so, Did not I (I durst not) because of the fear of the Lord my God. I am confident, that this position is full of truth, you may trust to it, as sound and orthodox: That there is no more Christian courage, then there is Christian fear in our hearts. There is no more true valor in God's account, in conflicting with difficulties, and stout standing under heavy pressures, then there is a cautious, and timorous circumspection, lest sin of any kind should be committed to the dishonor, and provocation of God. Shall I think that a man that will swear, and roar, and curse, and pox, and plague (I should not have defiled my mouth with these words) shall I think that this man of Belial hath Christian courage? He may have moral magnanimity, as an heathen, as a Roman, but he wants the courage of a Saint, that courage which my Text calls for. Beloved, I pray you believe it, (I speak as a Scripture man; and I speak to men that must labor to be men valiant, as becometh Saints) he that rules his own spirit, doth more then he that overcomes a City. That man who takes down his untamed lusts; and that man who bridles the unruly member the tongue He who conquers the rebellious mutinies in his own bosom, and who notwithstanding all avocations, is careful still to keep close to God, this is the valiant man indeed, God himself, by Solomon's pen, gives such a one his Letters testimonial to be magnanimous. And for my part I will adventure that which is dearest unto myself in this world, in the hands of this man, if in the hand of any, in regard of valor, and holy, hearty, heroic resolution. But I put off from this reproof, wherein my zeal hath made me bold, to speak my mind: For I had rather counsel then reprehend: and before I go forward, I wish that my checks lighting on ungracious hearts may make kindly and deep impressions on them, for their amendment. And God grant that you that come to praise God, as becometh Saints this day, may learn also hereafter to be valiant as it becometh Saints, according to the directions of sacred Scripture.

The last use, is an use of exhortation; (I fear, I have more to say then my time, and your occasions will suffer me to deliver.) It is onlie this, to persuade you all (my beloved,) I say all, without exception, Colonels, Captains, other Officers, Soldiers, yea all the Servants of the Lord, to yield to the word of exhortation, and in your places to endeavor Christian courage; This use most useful my heart desires to enlarge, wherein I fain would,

- 1. By Arguments persuade it,
- 2. By Directions help you in it.

I have Arguments of two kinds, God grant they may come with some strength upon your hearts, to move you to endeavor to be truly valorous.

First, From the consideration of the rich commodities, that are the undoubted consequences of Religious fortitude. O the booties, ô the boones, ô the benefits, that Christians may enjoy in the way of Christian valor. I will point at 6. and I shall do little more then point at them.

First, It will wind, and work you into the bosom, and favor of God; Be of good Courage, and he shall strengthen thy heart. Put thou thyself forth in a way of bold adventure for him, and his providence shall be sweetly exercised for thy good. A worthy Commander how careful is he of a brave blade, a man that will fight at a Cannons mouth. Doth he hear from him, that a bone is broken? Send for the Bone-setter. Is he like to bleed to death? call for the Surgeon, let him post away to prevent that peril; Doth he grow weaker and weaker? Is there anything in the Campe, that may restore his Spirits, withhold nothing; nothing is too good, too costly, would he eat gold, he should have it.

Thus it is with God, O what letters of commendation doth he give in manifestation of his own love to them in Pergamos, upon this very ground: Thou, saith the Lord, thou hast held forth my name, and not denied it even in those days, when Antipas my faithful Martyr was slain, even where Satan dwelleth. Thou didst fight for CHRIST in the Cave, where the Devil commanded, thou didst stand and appear for him, when other men did lose life, and blood. Here is a man that God will own, such a one, shall have God's heart and hand to do him honor, to yield him comfort. And therefore I appeal to your consciences, is not this Courage worth the having? worth the seeking?

Secondly, Your Courage will hearten you in the weightiest and difficultest adventures, which the cause and glory of God, the welfare of his Church, the honor of the King, the peace and prosperity of the Kingdom may put you upon. Hester was a woman, yet valiant. Must I to the King for my people; If I perish, I perish. I will take my life in my hand and adventure: Nehemiah had a hard task to undertake, truly a dead piece of service to set upon, yet notwithstanding being a courageous man, he will hazard his All, to obey the command of his God, and to serve the necessities of his brethren. This is recorded for the everlasting credit of some of the Servants of God, the Priests, 2 •hron. 26. 17. 18. And Azariah the Priest went in after him and with him 4. score Priests of the Lord that were valiant men; and they withstood Uzziah the King, and said unto him, it pertaineth not unto thee Uzziah to burn incense to the Lord.

Men of brave Noble Spirits will speak, whatsoever it cost them, upon a call from God, men of valor will appear according to God's command in services sad, and heavy. We say, that a well metled horse, will take forward, and draw at a standing tree, but that I shall speak of in the next.

Thirdly, It will make us unwearied in our works, though desired, and expected success be denied. You see it some time; (My similitude is a plain one, but beloved, it fully evidenceth the thing I speak to,) A Carre-horse of good metal, will pluck, and fall on his knees, and up, and take forty pluckes at a sticking load, whereas a Jade, if it come not at the first twitch, goes back, back, and you cannot get him forward. Just thus is it with a Coward, if he have not victory at the first skirmish, he will hardly make a second assault; if he be knocked down, once, twice, or thrice, he gives up all as lost, and is ready to run away; but a man of a stout Spirit in such a case, will plucked up heart, fight again, so long as he can either stand or stir. Thus Moses he goes, the first, and second, and third, and tenth time to Pharaoh, notwithstanding brow-beatings, repulses, threatenings. Thus saith the Lord, let my people go. That was his message, either it must be granted, or he will not cease his importunity. Israel he comes for, and Israel he will have with him, or else, he will not leave Egypt.

My beloved, let us bring this down to ourselves: Many prayers we have made, and many fasts we have kept for Zion: and before our deliverance be complete, we know not, how many plucks we must yet have, and how many shall we take to repair the walls, and to reedifie the House of God, in case, God give us this metal, which I am commending.

Fourthly, Courage will be a means to keep us from conscience-wasting, and scandalous miscarriages. What had become (think you) of Shidrack Meshech, and Ab•dnego? or what had become of Daniel, if they had not been men of undaunted hearts? The one had given off doing his duty, presenting his indebted homage to his God, he must not pray for the space of thirty days to his God. The other three must bow down in way of Idolatry to an Idol. But mark the Sparkling of their Spirits; Bee it known unto thee ô King, we know God can deliver us, but if he will not, we will not fall down, nor worship that Image which thou hast set up. They were by Courage kept out of the briers, and off the Rock, which might otherwise have torn and broken them woefully. And Daniel was preserved from the neglect of his devotion to his God, by the same means.

Fifthly, Believe it, that our Courage will daunt our Adversaries, and drive them away; The Captain of that black guard, (the Devil I mean) will give back, if stoutly withstood: Resist him, and he will flee▪ stand to it and he will runneaway. In like manner, will those, who march under his colors against God's people. It is said expressly 1 Sam. 4. 5. 7. when the Philistines heard the Israelites shout, O say they their God is among them, woe unto us. Without doubt, the very valor of Protestants will be the daunting of the Papists. Let those who appear for Reformation, maintain their ground, and the enemies thereof, will be discouraged, vanquished.

Lastly, I might add, that our Courage will encourage, I know not how many, One bold leader, will hearten hundreds. O saith Paul, my bonds, and sufferings are famous, they are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places; and many of the Brethren by reason of my bonds Wax bold, and speak the word without fear, Phil. 1. 12. 13. 14. If you would know what word? It was the word of CHRIST, who was denied, derided. Now to speak for a Christ when Paul is in prison, and in bolts, and fetters for the word of CHRIST, was an act of Manhood. And Paul's valor made them thus bold. The Cities Courage will make the Country courageous.

This true valor that I speak for, may have influence I know not how far, through the Kingdom in way of benefit, and advantage. Therefore look you to it, Quit yourselves like men, Be of good Courage.

The second motive, is taken from the consideration of the sad consequences of cowardliness.

First, A man's personal discredit, call a Soldier a cravant, and how do you disgrace him? They would fain, (saith Nehemiah,) Put me in fear, that they might have had somewhat to reproach me; Nehem. 6. 13. A Captain, and a Coward, what a shame is it? If you desire to maintain your honor and reputation, in City and Country, hold up your hearts, Be men of valor.

Secondly, This is another a sad consequence of cowardliness, it may tend to make us unprofitable, and unserviceable in our places; I was afraid, and hid my talant, for Ithought, thou wast a hard master. You know whose speech it was. When a man hath both opportunities and abilities to do, God and the King, the Parliament and Kingdom, good service. God hath bestowed a good head-piece, much wisdom, an able body and healthful, a strong arm, a vast estate, a great command; and yet notwithstanding, when the welfare of Church and Common-wealth, call him to make appearance, he draws back, dares not be seen, all his talents are tied in a napkin, there is nothing traded for God, because he is a Coward, and dares not look out of doors. There will be a heavy reckoning for that man, Take him, bind him hand and foot. Cowardlinesse makes men, though able, yet unprofitable, therefore take heed of it.

Thirdly, The good causes, which men own and favor, may receive a great deal of damage, and prejudice by the pusillanimity, the poorenesse of the Spirits of them, that appear therein. There was a notable piece of policy, in the endeavor of the railing wretch Rabshecah, to affright the •ouldiers of Hezeki•h, 2 Chr. 32. 18. This they did, that they might make us afraid and take our City. Cowardlinesse ties a man's hands behind him, that he can do nothing in the World, he cannot keep his rank, and place, he neither knows when to charge, or discharge; his hands quake, his eyes cannot see, he cries where am I? and what must I do? Thus all is lost, because of cowardliness, it is a mighty disadvantage to be a dastard. Certainly, a man under the power of dismay, in fears is worse a man in the use of his intellects.

Fourthly, What sad breaches cowardliness, may make upon us, both in regard of sin, and judgments. I know not. The sad example of Saint Peter is here considerable, O what a wound did he receive, by reason of his unworthy fearfulness; It cost him dear before the cut was cured. You know his threefold denial of his Master, with the black aggravations thereof; O I know him not, I am not any of them, you are mistaken in me, &c. But before that breach was, made up, it cost him hot water, He wept bitterly.

Beloved, beloved, consider what I say, many a man doth that under the command of cowardliness, which is pain and anguish in his heart to his dying day. God is wonderfully incensed, when men shrink from him, because of difficulties and dangers, Fear not lest I slay thee. Be not dismayed at their faces (saith God to Jeremiah,) lest I confound thee before them, Ier. 1. 17. When God calls often, and calls loud upon men to take part with him, and yet they shrink and draw back, believe it, the danger is not little. You know whose speech it is; If you will deny mee before men, I will deny you before my Father, which is in heaven.

A valiant Captain, when the field is fought, and the victory is got, bids, bring in that cravant, that milk-sop, who did run away: Hisse him, turn him out of doors, as the shame of his Country; when Christ shall come and call, and say to some White-livered men, you were ashamed to appear for the strict observation of the Lordsday, and you would not be seen to favor the Reformation, which by England's Parliament, at such a time was endeavored, and you would not labor to have the sanctuary swept from all pollutions, and you would be at no cost, to have Christ's-coin, bear his stamp alone, to have his ordinances pure without mixtures, but you would rather Issachar-like, lie under burdens, then struggle for deliverance. You were afraid what might be the issue of your boldness in such businesses, if the times should turn, and the tide run another way, and matters change in such and such a manner. And hereupon you sneakingly left me, and my cause and glory in the open fields. Beloved, this will be an heavy hearing to the cowardly Apostate at the last day, when the fearful, and the unbelieving must be sent into the lake which burneth with fire & brimstone. Therefore I entreat you again, and again, to consider well of this matter.

Lastly, how far cowardliness may tend to discourage others: I wish you to consider: I here remember, that when Israel of old, was to go forth unto battle, God commanded the officers to speak thus unto the people, What man is there, that is fearful, and faint hearted, let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's hearts faint (or melt) as well as his heart.

Gentlemen, God forbid that you who are come hither today, to acknowledge yourselves bound to God for your estates, lives, and liberties, & to have the word of truth, preached and pressed upon you for your souls good. God forbid (I say) that you who give good examples in many other kinds, should do anything which may tend to weaken the spirits, and to damp the courage of any, who shall enquire, what do they in London?

Having thus far persuaded you, to pluck up your hearts, as it becometh Saints: I now entreat you, to give me leave to counsel you, what course to take, that you may be courageous, and I promise to do it, as with sincere reference to God, whose servant I am, so with unfeigned faithfulness to you whom I now serve.

What shall we do, that we may be courageous?

My directions are in number ten, I will not be long in any one of them, because I would not be tedious, I humbly beg your best attention, desiring to speak to your souls, and I beseech the Lord to speak to my heart, and yours.

The first help to Christian courage (which makes way for all the rest) is this: Labor clearly from Scripture grounds to evidence your propriety in God.

When David was utterly undone in outward appearance at Ziklag, being stripped of all outward comforts, and expected that his brains should be beaten out with stones, (They talked of stoning him) David encouraged himself (he confirmed and strengthened his heart) as the original expresseth it, in the Lord his God: Is there not more in God, My beloved, I pray you put this question upon serious debate in your own bosoms, my God to hearten me, then in mine enemies my greatest, my worst enemies to dismay me? Take the improvement of this point in two particulars.

- 1 God's omnipotency?
- 2 God's Omnipresence.

Is there not more ability in God, then power in all the world, if combined together. Be strong, and courageous, (saith Hezekiah) Be not afraid, nor dismayed, for the King of Assyria, nor for all the multitude, that is with him, for there be more with us, then with him: with him is an arm of flesh, but with us is the Lord our God to help us, and to fight our battles, And the people rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah, King of Judah. At this time Sennacherib had raised a very great Army, as holy History reports: And railing Rabshakeh was confident, that Israel's God could not deliver; yet you see, that this thought. The Lord our God to help us, did steel and strengthen their hearts.

The knowledge of Dietie, and Proprietie, will increase magnanimity in a fearful heart, what are huge armies, strong fortifications weapons of war, the strength, stoutness, skill, or experience of common soldiers, or warlike Commanders against the Lord Almighty? look back to the history last mentioned, where we read, that one angel in one night killed five thousand men in the host of the King of Assyri. By this example, guess at the ability of your God, having made sure your interest in him; and from thence gather courage.

2 As the ability, so the presence of God by the efficacy of his all-ordering providence, may hearten all them, whose God he is by special Covenant; Have not I commanded thee, be strong, and of a good courage, be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest. The Lord is with us, by the presence of his special favor, in all our good undertakings whithersoever we go. The Christian carries his commander, his refuge, his Castle, his God along with him, whether he keep in the City, or go forth into the country; whether he serve by land, or by sea, his God is still at hand. Assurance therefore, that the all-sufficient, all-present God is ours, will lay a good foundation for good courage: Those who adventure upon any service without God going along with them, may expect defeats; notwithstanding all means of defense: and therefore no marvel, if they tremble: But God taking part with his people, they may confidently from his presence expect deliverance. If it had not been the Lord who was on our side, they had swallowed us up quick &c. but blessed be the Lord, who hath not given us, as a prey to their teeth. God and his people make one side; and because their help standeth in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth; therefore they have abundant cause to be of good courage.

Secondly, make sure, that the cause you appear in, is the cause of God. If a man marching to look his enemies in the face, and being about to begin the battle, should feel the earth to shake under him, and the ground to sink, every foot he set forward: O how would this daunt him, and how would his heart recoyle, and give in within him? O beloved, I beseech you, be you well confirmed in your own hearts, that you do serve for God. It is that which was added to give Courage to them in Jehoshaphat's time, when they were surrounded, with Ammon, and Moab, and Mount Seir, as if we should say, with Denmark and France, and Papists at home. Well, saith the man of God, Hearken ye all Judah, and ye Inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou King Jehoshaphat; Thus saith the Lord unto you: Bee not afraid nor dismayed, by reason of the great multitude for the battle is not yours but God's.

Beloved, he that hath a bad conscience, and a bad cause, ever fights as a Coward, and is ready at every stroke to lay down his weapons and run away. A true man will stand to it, come who may come, for his cause is justifiable, and he may with boldness own it; but thieves, if they hear any noise, any whispering, they cry one to another, let us hast and be gone, for they know, their adventure's unwarrantable. When a man thus thinks with himself, being beset with dangers and difficulties, what if I should die in this business? could I with confidence own it, at the Barre of JESUS CHRIST? The encouragement of his own conscience, will much embolden him. But if a man's own heart tell him; that adventuring and dying in a such cause, shall sink into Hell, because he opposeth the Commands and Government of JESUS CHRIST; the liberties, the comforts, the prayers of God's people, how is it possible, that he should play the man, and be truly courageous?

Thirdly, Consider seriously, the many weighty consequences of the good cause, which from good grounds, you undertake to maintain. Sit down and sadly think what will the issue be, if you desert your Protestation, whereby you bound yourselves, to stand for the true Protestant Religion, the honor of our King, the Privileges of Parliament, the Laws of the Land, and welfare of the Kingdom. Here it is notable, how the Philistines heartened one another, in the day of their deep danger, 1 Sam. 4. 9. Be strong, quit yourselves like men ô Philistines that you be not Servants to the Hebrews; Quit yourselves like men and fight; Either pluck up your hearts, and fight now, or be slaves forever; that is the argument.

And I pray you, observe how Joab pleads, When he saw the battle before and behind. 2 Sam. 10. 12. Be of good Courage, and let us play the men for our people, and for the Cities of our God. And that passage, Nehem. 4. 14. It is considerable, as either of the former; Bee not afraid remember the Lord which is great and terrible, and fight for your Breth••n, for your Sons, for your Daughters, for your Wives, and for your Houses.

Mark it, my beloved, and make application, what if the Papists should get the upper hand? What if the Parliament should be dissolved? What if the malignant party should effect their mischievous desires? Oh how dark and doleful, how black and bloody, would our times prove, we are all, many ways obliged to stand for the government and worship of the Lord Christ: for the safety, and honor of our King, for the welfare of his three Kingdoms, for the Privileges of our Parliament, and for our rights by Law; All these are to be prized at an exceeding high rate: our happiness will be great in the enjoying of them, and our misery not small, in the want of them. Every man according to his Relations and engagements, should reason the case with himself. What adventures should I make, and what hazard should I run, that myself may not be enslaved, that my Wife may not be abused, my Children massacred, and (which is above all,) that Christ's holy Religion may not be corrupted, and that Popery may not be introduced and established in England. Thus meditation upon the worth of the things to be maintained, will be a special means to quicken and to augment Courage.

Fourthly, Keep Christ your Captain in your eye. For true valor, there never was, nor ever shall be any like unto him. Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, ô most mighty, with thy glory and Majesty; and in thy Majesty ride prosperously, and thy right hand shall teach thee terrible things; Psalm 45. 3 4 How valiant a Champion was the Lord JESUS! He endured the Cross, and despised the shame; He went on, though dogs did bark, and Lions did roar, though men reproachfully reviled him, and the Devils endeavored to devour him; though the earth (as it were) did shake under his feet, and the Heavens were black and thundering over his head. Although when his professed enemies had conspired his death, Judas did betray him, and his other Disciples did forsake him, yea although his God and Father did hide his face from him, when he answered Divine Justice for our sins, yet he shrunk not, he drew not back, from the glorious work undertaken. When outward dangers encompassed him, and the sorrows of Hell took hold upon his Soul, though he was apprehensive, and sensible of all, unto the utmost, and therefore both complained and prayed to his Father, yet was he not discouraged. He did not sound, when he saw his own blood, yea although his body was wet all over with a bloody sweat, but he worthily did wade through the flood of his appointed passions.

Consider him, consider him, (beloved,) that you may not faint in your minds; when a soldier sees his Captain content to take up with poor provisions and undaunted, though he meet with hard services, harsh usages, sore affronts, he thereupon grows the more resolute. For thus be reasons within himself. My worthy Commander, for his diet, takes up with a crust of course bread and a little water, he hath not been in bed these many nights, but still, either watcheth, or else, he lies upon the ground, the cold ground no ways, no weather discourages him, Winter, Summer, wet, or dry, scorching heat, the pinching frost, are alike unto him: Bullets, blows wounds, bruises, broken bones, do not cause him to sound a retreat, to give back, and shall I shrink? Beloved, if Christ had shrunk when Heaven frowned, and men deserted, and Devils opposed him, what had become of you, and me? Is this Christ my

Captain? and hath he Captain-like, Champion-like for me both done and suffered thus worthily, thus incomparably, and shall not I put on Courage, and show myself a man, a valiant man for him? I beseech you, consider this frequently and affectionately.

Fifthly, I commend unto you, mutual Christian communion, as a special means of Christian Courage. In the Prophet Malachi his times, when wickedness was grown to a great head, and the power of godliness was discountenanced in them, then those that feared God, spake often one to another.

When Paul after shiprack, saw the brethren, who cameto meet him, he took Courage. And also, upon a strong dispute with some who opposed Christ, when Silas and Timothy were come, Paul was pressed in Spirit. God be thanked for that unity and love which is amongst you, amongst you, the Aldermen and Commons of this City, unto whom the Militia is committed; God continue it, God knit your hearts together more fast, and firm from day today: God give you when you meet to consider seriously what may heat, and hearten your Spirits in the way of Christian valor, according to that which this day I have preached, and according to that, which this day we all need.

We read in Isaiah 41. 6. of a Company of Idolaters, animating each other, in promoting Idol worship. They helped everyone his Neighbor, and everyone said to his brother, Bee of good Courage. So the Carpenter encouraged the Gold smith, and he that smootheth with the hammer, him that smiteth with the anvil, &c.

Doubtless, at this day, those who envy our hopes, and oppose our peace, do meet and hearten one another, both by words and actions. God forbid therefore, that we should be more regardless of one another, having a better cause, and more encouragements.

Sixthly, set faith on work in the promises of the Gospel. The worthies in the primitive times, waxed valiant by means of faith; Hebr. 11. 34. You may do well to inform yourselves, what the Lord is pleased to speak in the word of truth for your comfort. By the bond of his own rich unchangeable grace, he is become your debtor to do more then I can possibly express. Three things I thought to have spoken unto, under this direction.

First, The promise of God's assistance, Bee of good Courage, and he will strengthen thine heart. The sweet Psalmist saw much sweetness in this, and therefore doth mention it, once and again when the Soul saith, I am ready to fall down, yet taking courage, to march forward, it shall renew strength, it shall receive an addition of new strength, Esa 40. 31. And that speech of Solomon, Prov. 10. 29. is very remarkable. The way of the Lord is strength to the upright. They go on and gather strength in going, they walk from strength to strength, Psalm. 84. 7. Truly this is an heartening consideration.

Secondly, The promise of good success. Beloved, Christians maintaining the cause and minding the glory of God, are as sure of victory as if now they were singing the triumph, and going away as Conquerors. This is most certain, for truth it self hath spoken it; In the Worldyee shall have affliction, be of good cheer, or be bold, I have overcome the World. The Devil hath his deaths wound, Corruption hath (as it were) the knife at the heart of it and the power of wicked men is broken, they are but sprunting and striving for life.

By this argument, the Lord heartened his servant Joshua; Bee strong and of a good Courage, for unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance, the land which I sware unto their Fathers to give them; Josh. 1. 6 As though the Lord had thus spoken; although thou mayest fight many battles, receive many foils, loose many of thy soldiers, yet be not dismayed, for certainly as a Conqueror, thou shalt bring the people to Canaan.

Thirdly, Then the recompense assured upon all them, who stoutly stand to the cause of God, is more rich and large, then I can relate. To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me in my Throne. And from this assurance, the Apostle Paul encourageth the Corinthians. Therefore my beloved Brethren, Bee ye steadfast, and immovable always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much, as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord. God will requite all pains taken, all sorrows suffered, and you that have lost houses, or land, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, for Christ, and his cause, besides that inward peace, and tranquility and joy, which an hundred fold exceed all sublunary contents, to be enjoyed here, you shall inherit hereafter everlasting life. And again, fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer. Behold the Devil shall cast some of you into prison, &c. Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a Crown of life. Feed on these promises, for Cordials flow from them to cheer your drooping hearts, and to strengthen courage.

Sevently in large your love. If those hearts which now do but drop love, might flow forth streams of love upon God's cause, our Kings honor, and the Kingdoms welfare how wonderfully would our courage be increased. Both reason and religion, will give in manifold strong arguments to augment our love to our Prince, our Parliament, our peace, our privileges, our posterity: and doubtless our love and valor, will grow together.

Love will adventure far: Women are the more feeble, the more fearful Sexe, and yet love in a tender mother will produce bold adventures to save the babe of her womb. The timorous mother, who is wont to tremble at the report of a Musket, will almost come to a Cannons mouth to save her Child from being broken in pieces: Love doth it.

Have you not in the country sometimes seen an Ewe, in defense of her lamb, to turn head upon a mastive dog, and to stamp, although at other times, the barking of a little whelp, will make a whole flock of them to run away. O, love doth it. And the poor Hen, she will fly at the Kite to save her brood; Love doth it. O that you and I had this Love; Love to Zion, to the Gospel of peace, Love to Christ, and the pure ordinances of grace: Love will make brave and bold adventures.

And as it will adventure far, so it will endure much, and long. The Apostle saith, Charity beareth all things, endureth all things, Jacob though he had tedious days, and weary nights, a fore service under a sour Uncle, a churlish Master, yet he served seven years for Rachel, and they seemed unto him, but a few days, for the love he had to her Love is strong as death, many waters cannot quen•h love, neither can the floods drown it; if a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be contemned. What •f one should come to a woman, and make this motion, be content that your child be torn in pieces, and here is a thousand pounds for you. Her answer would be ready. Not for a thousand worlds: yea, she would almost spit in his face, who should press such a proposition, what rend my child in pieces? There is nothing can conquer love: so it would be with us, in reference to God's commandments, the liberty of Gospel ordinances: No promises, no threats, no means, fair, or fowl would take us off from appearing in the defense of them, if our hearts were more enflamed with love.

Eighthly, Walk exactly, keep your consciences clear.

Notable is that direction of the Lord, Deut. 13. 8. Ye shall keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that you may be strong: Suppose a man, who hath a wound, or an impostu mated swelling on his body, should go into the Campe, if any touch him, he skritcheth, and he cries, come not near me, you know the reason, and the application is familiar and easy to the point in hand, wounds in our consciences, will make us timorous and cowardly; but The Righteous is as bold as a lyon: He that walks uprightly, walks boldly: Take a man who hath no brokenness, no boils, no •lanes, no bruises, handle him, shake him, crush him, crowde him, thrust him, cast him: notwithstanding he can better bear all this rugged usage, then another can a fillip with the finger. I beseech you mind the application of this, for the Lord's sake take heed, make not inroads, and breaches upon your consciences, go not against your light, for guilt will make you cowardly. Adam as soon as he had sinned he runs and puts his head in a bush, what was the matter? he heard a whistling wind, and he runs away: What hast thou sinned, faith God? I, that is the matter. For if Adam had kept his heart sound, if he had not sinned, he would with boldness have encountered with any approaches, either of the creatures, or his Creator.

Ninthly, Improve your experiences. It would be of singular use to us, to bestow many hours, both together, and asunder, in recounting the many great things which the Lord hath done for us, both in former times, & of later; we have national deliverances City deliverances, Family mercies & personal mercies to improve providence: Give me leave to cal to mind two most seasonable now to be remembered, considering the end of our assembling at this time: I am credibly informed that yourselves who are here to honor God for your health continued, peace maintained, lives lengthened, had that day when you were abroad, two notable experiences of God's providence for your preservation; 1. There were muskets broken in the field; and yet neither the Muskettiers, nor any near them received the least harm, although the throng of people was very great. Might not some men's eyes, limbs, or lives have been lost, by such accidents; if the all-ordering hand of the Almighty had not prevented such like dangers. The other passage of divine providence is more remarkable.

2 God's hand turned aside graciously, and strangely, a kindled match which was cast towards a basket full of Gunpowder, which stood in the field for that days service. From what malicious heart, and by what mischievous hand this match was cast, the Lord he knoweth, whom we this day magnify, as the God of our salvations.

Beloved, the remembrance of such like providences, should encourage our adventures for the Lord, whose hand hath diverted many unseen, & unexpected dangers. But I had almost forgot to give in my proof, that the improvement of experiences, increaseth courage. I pray you observe it in Ios. 10. 25. And I shua said unto them fear not, nor be dismayed, be strong and of good courage; for thus shall the Lord do to all your enemies, against whom ye sight.

Our God hath many times disappointed the designs of our enemies: many of them who hated us, and endeavored our undoing, and desolation, have been discovered and brought to shame, the Lord hath trampled upon them gloriously. These meditations enlarged by particular pregnant instances, I commend unto you, as means to increase your courage.

Lastly, when ever you have occasion to show your courage, go out self denyingly in the strength of your God, Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Ephes 6. 10. Through God we shall do valiant y. Psal. 60 12. David was a man, as in other kinds, so in this imitable; when he came against Goliath (who threatened to pluck him in pieces, as a Faulkoner doth a bird) his words are very observable. Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of host•, the God of the Armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied. Let these be the breathing of your seules. Some trust in Chariots, and some in horses, but we will remember the name of the Lord our God. They are brought down and fallen, but near risen an stand upright. Save Lord, let the King hear us when we c•ll.

Thus be careful to make addition of prayer, unto all the other means of Christian courage. Pray heartily, selfdenyingly, and believingly. Advance God, and plead his promise; and expect assistance according to his promise. B• of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord.

FINIS.

It is ordered by the Committee, of the House of Commons in Parliament concerning printing, that this Book entitled, Good Courage discovered, and incourared, be printed.

Gray Hayres CROWNED WITH GRACE. A SERMON Preached at Redriff, Aug. 1. 1654. At the Funeral of that Reverend, eminently Learned and faithful Minister of JESUS CHRIST M^r THOMAS GATAKER

PROV. 20. 29. The beauty of old men, is their gray head.

PROV. 12. 26. The righteous is more excellent then his neighbor.

ISA. 43. 4. Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honorable.

LONDON, Printed by A. M. for George Sawbridge at the Sign of the Bible on Ludgate-hill. M. DC. LV.

To the Reverend, and my much HONOURED BRETHREN, the Presbyterian MINISTERS of the Gospel within the Province of LONDON.

Brethren,

THE sad occasion of this Sermon, and not any opinion of its worth, hath moved me to presume upon this Dedication. I know that you are sensible of the smart of that providence, which having, not long since, removed worthy D^r Gouge and M. Whitaker, hath also taken from us famous M^r Gataker; and the rather, because they all were not only members of, but also cordial friends unto our Provincial Assembly. And these our late losses, may well mind us of the death of many more of our brethren, whose hearts, heads and hands, went along with us in the setting up and exercising of the Presbyterian Government in our respective Congregations, with mutual assistance, Classical and Provincial, both for the Ordination of Ministers, and the more pure administration of the Sacraments.

Hereby doubtless the Lord's voice crieth to the City, more particularly unto us the Ministers thereof: Oh, that his Majesty would make us men of wisdom, exemplarily to see his Name! This is the advice of the Holy Ghost, Hear the rod and who hath appointed it.

Brethren, I will not undertake to teach you who are able to instruct others, what use should be made of these doleful dispensations. Have we not cause to complain, that we did neither thankfully prize, nor fruitfully improve their Ministerial gifts, graces and experiences, as we should and might have done?

And seeing they (though dead) do still speak, by their useful Books printed, or their holy Lives remembered, or by both; should not we be conscientious imitators of their constancy and fidelity, in those ways of holy truth, discipline and worship, which were heartily approved by them, even unto their death?

Moreover, Because so many active members of our Province are translated, ought not we who survive, to strengthen one another's hands the rather, unto double industry, with undaunted courage, in our whole Ministerial employment, and to be the more affectionately frequent in prayer, that our good God would make up our loss, by the more abundant communications of his peculiar grace?

And although this saying may be sighed out with sorrow, we heretofore had the society and assistance of the forementioned fellow-helpers, because now we have them not: yet may it also be a matter of encouragement, because our Presbyterian path, hath been trodden without fainting (yea with joy,) by the foot of them, whose remembrance will be as a sweet perfume unto posterity. Having spoken thus much, give me leave (upon the same account,) to mind you of some few good old Nonconformists (unto whom many more might be added) who many years since (when under Prelatical power and oppression) endeavored, by preaching, printing, praying and suffering, to introduce this Presbyterian government which we do now exercise. Though those men disliked the use of superstitious Ceremonies, yet they opposed their tenets and practice, who separated from the Church of England, condemning it, and the Ministry of it as Antichristian: But they studiously sought to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, whose labors God blessed to the conversion of thousands of souls and to the maintaining of the power of godliness all their days, and whose profitable Works do still praise them in the gate? But what need I look so far backward, seeing we can easily remember a great company who formerly joined with us here in London, in setting up and exercising the Presbyterian government (besides the many others in the several parts of the Land) who now are of chief note for Learning and Piety, in both Universities and other places; whose hearts and prayers (I am confident) still go along with us, for our encouragement.

As this bright cloud of so many witnesses (some in Heaven and some on earth) may be relieving unto our mourning hearts under our great loss; so (blessed be God) we have not yet cause to complain with the Prophet, that there is no cluster: for though much contempt is cast upon us (by many, who rather seek great things for themselves in the world, then the things of Jesus Christ) as an inconsiderable number, yet we have (I will speak it to the praise of the Lord) threescore Presbyterian Ministers within the precincts of our Province, who preach profitably, and live godly, who are not tainted with the erroneous tenets either of the Arminians, Antinomians or Anabaptists. And the most high will (I humbly hope) encouragingly appear farther for us in these paths, which (as our consciences be persuaded) are chalked out in the Scriptures of truth, for the welfare of his Churches, and the honor of his own Name by Jesus Christ. Upon all the glory shall be a defense.

I will conclude this my address unto you (my much honored brethren) with this hearty prayer, that you may hold on in this good old way, till you be gray-headed; nothing doubting, but that your heary heads will be a Crown of glory, being found in these ways of righteousness.

Your loving brother, and fellow laborer in the work of the Gospel, SIMEON ASHE.

PROV. 16. 31. The hoary head is a Crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.

WHosoever knew this Reverend man (either by his own acquaintance or the true Report of others) whose Funeral doth occasion this great Assembly, will acknowledge that my Text is suitable unto the occasion of our meeting. The Lord make my Sermon as serviceable as I know my Text to be seasonable.

These Proverbs are grave Sentences full of worth and weight, which are the rather to be pondered seriously because of the Authors wisdom and authority; The Proverbs of Solomon, the Son of David, King of Israel; They are entire Propositions (especially from the beginning of the 10th Chapter) and therefore (for the most part) to be considered without any context or coherence at all. Every Proverb is like a precious Pearl tending to enrich all them with spiritual wisdom, who shall make faithful improvement thereof through God's special grace.

In the handling of this Proverb (which I have chosen to be the matter of my present discourse) I desire you to attend

1. The division of the Text.
2. The interpretation of the words.
3. And the divine truth from hence tendered unto our consideration.

The parts of the Text (being an entire Proposition) are two.

1. The Subject.
2. The Predicate.

The Subject or the matter spoken unto is, The hoary head. And the Predicate or that which is asserted lieth in the words following, It is a Crown of glory if it be found in a way of righteousness. Wherein two things are notable.

1. The high commendation given of old age, The hoary head is a Crown of glory.
3. The limitation which is warily added, If it be found in the way of righteousness.

Thus from the Text divided I put forward to the explication of the words herein used; And because the proposition is conditional, I will first open the words in the assertion, and secondly, those which are in the condition.

First, In the assertion two things are inquirable.

1. What is meant by the hoary head?
2. What is to be understood by the Crown of glory?

In this phrase the hoary head there is a double Metonymy.

1. A Metonymy of the effect for the cause, viz. hoary head put for old age the cause thereof.
2. And a Metonymy of the adjunct for the subject, the hoary hairs for the person upon whom they are to be found.

There is also a Synecdoche in the expression, viz. one part put for the whole; The head for the whole person aged.

And the language is likewise Metaphoricall, for man in his declining age seemeth to be compared unto the Winter, the latter part of the year, wherein the superficies of the earth is white, being covered with hoary frost. This Interpretation is according to sundry parallel passages in the holy Scriptures. I am (said Samuel) old and gray-headed; And withus (said Eliphaz) are the gray-headed and very aged men much elder then thy Father. Therefore the Rhetoric being taken off the words, it appeareth, that by the hoary head is signified the aged person.

If enquiry be made, what is meant by the Crown of glory? I answer, that there is an Hebraism in the words, viz. a Crown of glory put for a glorious Crown: The word glory noteth credit or excellency, as when the strength of the young man is called his glory. Some do render the phrase, A Diadem of glory, The Diadem properly signifying a wreathed hatband, with which the ancient Kings did content themselves, as thinking that a Crown only belonged to their gods. Let it be noted that it is more then a garland which may belong to some Conqueror in one exploit, though in all other regards a person mean and considerable. The Crown is appropriated rather unto Kings and Queens amongst the children of men, and here it is set upon the head of the aged person to betoken peculiar honor appertaining to old age; Although the phrase is variously rendered by Interpreters a Crown of glory, a Crown of comeliness, a Crown of ornament, yet the sense is the same in the judgment of all, viz. that old-age is honorable. And to this purpose is the Crown applied unto others in the holy Scriptures, viz. by Solomon unto Parents and their children mutually. Children's children are the Crown of old men, and the glory of children are their Parents; and upon the same account the Apostle Paul calleth the Philippians his Crown, esteeming it his high honor that they were brought to Christ by his Ministry.

Secondly, In the condition annexed, If found in the way of righteousness, there are three things enquirable, viz.

1. What is signified by righteousness.
2. What the word way doth suggest.
3. What is hinted in this expression, viz. of being found in this way.

For the first, I will not spend time in reporting either the various acceptions or uses of the word Righteousness in the holy Scriptures. In this place it noteth a careful conformity unto the revealed will of God, all whose Commandments are righteousness; In which respect Moses saith, This shall be our righteousness if we observe to do all these Commandments. For in so doing we do suum cuique trihuere, give everyone their right, viz. God, ourselves, and our neighbors, receive due respect by obedience rendered unto laws divine.

Now before I apply Righteousness in this sense unto the truth in the Text, I must necessarily distinguish betwixt righteousness Legal and Evangelical.

1. Legal righteousness consists in a complete conformity unto Laws divine in their utmost latitude; And thus our first Parents were habitually righteous at their first creation, and our blessed Savior was actually Christ the Righteous, But all Adams posterity fall short hereof both in their nature and practice. As in the estate of unregeneracy the Apostle concludeth all under sin, and saith both of Jews and Gentiles, There is none righteous, no not one; So in the estate of Regeneration, so many are the imperfections of them who are most complete on earth, that in the sense aforesaid they cannot be accounted righteous. Though David is called a man after God's own heart, yet his prayer and testimony do attest this truth, Enter not into judgment with thy Servant, O Lord, for in thy sight shall no man living be justified.

2. But in a Gospel sense, according to the indulgence and construction of free rich grace, God's gracious servants are said to be righteous. Thus God himself speaketh of Noah, Thee have I seen righteous before me. And this character the holy Ghost giveth of Zechary and Elizabeth, They were both righteous before God. And this Evangelical righteousness doth consist 1. partly in their sincere endeavor to reach perfection, in which respect they are described to be such who follow after righteousness, whereupon God accepting the will for the deed doth call them righteous. 2. And principally, in the imputation of Christ's righteousness unto them upon their humble fiducial closures with him by faith unfeigned, who is the Lord our righteousness; Now of this righteousness is the Text to be understood.

The se second Query was, What doth the word way suggest?

I answer, That God's Servants being as strangers and sojourners in this world, and their life being a travelling toward heaven their long home, where they look for their everlasting abode; their holy conversation on earth is ealled their way, which suggesteth both the activity and progress of God's grace in the fruits thereof. This Solomon seemeth to speak unto, very clearly and fully, The path of the righteous is as the shining light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

And to the third demand, I answer, That a person may be said to be found in the way of righteousness, when there is conspicuity and permanency in a godly conversation; when the candle of grace lighted in the heart doth discover itself by its shining, and is kept burning (according to the advice of Christ) that men may see his good works, as it is said, that Paul saw the grace of God, in the Christians at Antioch; so here when the seed of righteousness rooted in the hearts of aged persons doth so bud and fructify in their lives that such who converse with them do or may find apparent effects of God's grace in them, then they are found in the way of righteousness. I shall not bestow anymore words, or time, in the Exposition of the Text, but proceed according to promise, unto the handling of that seasonable Point of Doctrine which is held forth from this Text. The hoary head is a Crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness.

That Old age attended with the power of grace and the practice of Religion, is a matter of much honor and commendation.

Let it be considered from the language in the Text how far this Truth doth extend, viz. indefinitely to all aged persons who be truly pious;

1. Of both Sexes, both men and women.
2. Of all ranks and conditions in the world, whether high or low, rich or poor, whether more nobly descended or more mean and contemptible in regard of descent, whether on the Throne or at the footstool.
3. Of all qualities, in regard of natural or acquired accomplishments, whether corporally beautified, or deformed, whether more or less enriched with the ornaments of the mind, viz. learning and other abilities for employment either in Church or in Common-wealth.
4. Of all callings and negotiations amongst men, whether sacred or civil, whether by land or sea, whether in times of war or peace.
5. And this truth, in this latitude, hath been, is, and will be applicable unto all aged persons, found in the way of righteousness, in all the ages of the world. This is notable from the Original, for as the proposition is universal in reference to all hoary heads found in the way of righteousness, so there is no verb to limit it unto any term of time, either past, present, or to come, but the holy Ghost asserts this truth, in relation to all ages and times of the world: That heretofore, and for the present, and for the future, the hoary head in the way of holiness, hath been, and now is, and hereafter to the end of the world will be a Crown of glory.

I shall proceed gradually in the proof of the Point, in reference to the two branches of it.

First, Old age in itself, is a matter of commendation: The beauty of old men is the gray head: In which respect (as some Expositors judge) the hoary head is compared by Solomon, to the Almond tree flourishing, when the white blossoms do render it very beautiful. And hence also it is, that according to the Heraldry observed in the holy Scripture, the Ancient and the Honorable are both placed together, and many of God's Worthies there recorded, have this character of honor put upon them, that they died in a good old age and full of days (viz.) Abraham, Gideon, David.

Secondly, The addition of holiness unto the hoary head, addeth much unto the glory of the aged person: and this the holy Ghost doth chiefly intend in the Text. For the righteous eatenus, because righteous, is more excellent then his neighbor. And therefore under this Notion, many are registered in holy writ to their everlasting credit in the Church of Christ, (viz.) Mnason of Cyprus that old Disciple; and Anna, a Prophetess of a great age, a widow of about fourscore and four years, who departed not from the Temple, but served God, with fastings and prayers night and day.

Now that righteousness giveth weight unto the Crown which aged persons do wear, may be abundantly manifested.

1. Because it is one part of God's image in man, with which he was adorned at his first creation, which was his glory, lost by his fall, and which is restored by his Regeneration. The new man, after God, is created in righteousness.

2. Because aged persons, thus qualified, are the Emblems of God himself, who is called the ancient of days; and of Jesus Christ, in whose metaphorical description, this is one expression; His head and his hairs were white like wool.

3. Because the righteous are admitted into near relation and affection with God who is their Father, and loveth them dearly. The Lord loveth the righteous. The righteous shall shine in the Kingdom of their Father. Now it was David's honor (as he valued it) to be Son in law to King Saul: And who doth not judge, that it was much to the repute of Daniel, to be called A man beloved by the Lord. Since thou becamest mine (saith God himself to his people) and wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honorable.

From these three heads of Arguments jointly considered, the truth under hand, may be undeniably concluded. That the hoary head is a Crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.

The Application followeth, which I will give, in manifold Uses, under four heads.

The first sort of Uses are for Information in three particulars well worthy our consideration.

1. Hence it followeth, that no qualification whatsoever, wherewith the children of men can possibly be adorned, is of so great worth as godliness; because this is said to set a glorious Crown upon the heads of them who are blessed with it. I grant that there are many natural ornaments and acquired accomplishments, which may gain respect, but it is righteousness which wins the Crown. Therefore Solomon saith not, The hoary head is a Crown of glory, if found in the way of raised parts, of great learning, of martial courage, of large commands in the world, or of successful trading to become wealthy, but if it be found in the way of righteousness. Though people who are under no higher principles than sense and human reason are of another opinion: They blesseth the covetous whom God abhorreth, and they do call the proud happy, because set up, when others are abased; because delivered when others are in distress: yea though many boasting themselves in the multitude of their riches, do bless their own souls; yet both God and all those whose judgments are guided by his word, are of another mind. My text telleth you the thoughts of wise Solomon, and if you will hearken unto his father David, you shall understand, that his apprehensions were not different. The Saints (saith he) and the excellent in whom is all my delight. Whence it is notable, that the Psalmist there doth not only express his judgment personally, but he typically reports the sense of Christ, to give to understand, that himself a man according to God's heart, yea and Christ Jesus infinitely above himself, give this estimate of holy persons, that they are incomparably excellent. And if this be not sufficient to clear the truth of my inference, consider his confident assertion to Saul his Courtiers, who prided themselves in their Courtship, and despised him as a man rejected. Know that the Lord hath set apart him that is godly for himself: whereas all other persons whatsoever are looked upon by the Lord as lumber, these are his peculiar treasure.

2. The second corollary is this: If righteousness be a Crown, though it be attained in old age only, then how much more honorable are they, who have been found in the way of righteousness all their life long; from their youth, till their heads are gray. This great commendation, did appertain unto David. O God (saith he) thou hast taught me from my youth, and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works. Now when I am gray headed, O God forsake me not. And this honor S^t Paul putteth upon Andronicus and Junia, They are of note among the Apostles, who also were in Christ before me. It maketh very much to the credit of Christians, when grace which blossomed upon them in the spring of their youth, doth abide green and flourishing in the winter of their age; This might be many ways illustrated, 1. They have served the Lord sundry Apprentiships; It is an honor to stand (to have a settled abode as servants) before Kings: Thus the Queen of Sheba expresseth herself in reference unto them who always waited upon King Solomon, Happy are thy men, and happy are these thy Servants who stand continually before thee. Now this, and greater then this, is the renown of them who have been for many years not only retainers but dwelling-servants with the Almighty. 2. They have often been in the field with Christ their Captain, they have fought many battles, and have received many wounds under his Colours and command: The holy Ghost hath seen cause to record in holy Pages some of David's Worthies who had made many brave adventures, and done famous exploits in years past and gone. And what more ordinary then for Soldiers to set forth their own commendations, by relating how many years attending on the Army, with hazards run and wounds received; Now the old Soldiers of Jesus Christ are much more worthy high respect, having been found all along in the ways of righteousness; Such a standard-bearer was Samuel who received press-money from God while he was a child, and could when grayheaded so plead his righteousness that it will be always remembered to his credit and reputation. I am old and grayheaded, Behold, here I am, witness against me before the Lord, and before his Anointed; whose Ox have I taken, or whose Ass have I taken, or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed, or of whose hand have I received any bribe to blind mine eyes therewith? and I will restore it you: But alas how few amongst them who have had power in their hands can we find, that in their age are thus found in ways of righteousness? 3. They have endured manifold oppositions, losses, and hardships from cruel persecutors; Many hot Summers have scorched them, and many cold winters have pinched them, they have suffered much from open enemies and feigned friends, because of their courageous faithfulness to Jesus Christ, not daring to depart from the way of righteousness. The Apostle Paul reckoneth up his sufferings as so many Ensigns of honor, I will glory also; (saith he,) And in what doth he glory? why, he tells you, In stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft: Of the Jews five times I received forty stripes save one: Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; In journeying often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own Countrymen, in perils by the Heathen, in perils in the City, in perils in the Wilderness, in perils in the Sea, in perils amongst false brethren; In weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness: And

Paul the aged and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ. Thus this ancient Champion of Christ seems to look upon his several many years hardships as so many Pearls with which his Crown was beautified and enriched. And doubtless they are so in the account of all them whose judgments are rectified by the word of truth.

The Third Consequence or Use of Information is this, That it is a very advantageous service to be instrumental in promoting the work of Gospel-righteousness in the hearts and ways of men, because by means hereof they receive no less then a Crown of glory. Hence it was that Saint Paul writeth thus to Philemon, Thou owest unto me thine own self; How infinitely beyond all sublunary accommodations are the revenues which come in by grace! The Crown is the highest honor that can be bestowed upon the children of men, and no gain is comparable to that which is received by godliness; Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come; yea, the greatest profit which we are capable to receive from God himself, is to be made partakers of his holiness, and the fruit of righteousness is from peculiar paternal love, proper to them whom God doth discipline as his Adopted children: This I note, both to discover unto the people of the world who are their best Friends, and to work in their hearts more high estimations of the Ministers of the Gospel whom God hath ordained to bring sinners to Christ, that they might be the righteousness of God in him. And howsoever the carnal and unthankful world disregard us, yet the Lord doth so highly value this our work, that he will certainly abundantly recompense it, They who turn many to righteousness shall shine as the Stars forever and ever: Whereas men do most esteem and most liberally reward such who are instruments to restore their health, to raise their outward estates, and to prefer them unto places of greatness in the world; The most high God who setteth a higher price upon holiness, will make it manifest at the last day, that those who study to bring men into the ways of righteousness shall be most advanced. It hath been looked upon as an honorable employment to set the Crown on a Kings head, and doubtless it is no less but far greater to be an instrument according to divine institution to crown sinners with righteousness. Consider that this was foretold by an Angel as an exceeding great honor to be put upon John the Baptist Christ's harbinger, Many of the Children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God, and he shall go before them in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the disobedient to the wisdom of the Just.

The fourth and last inference by way of Information is this, viz. That therefore the death of aged godly persons should be much lamented. David and all Israel wept over dead Abner upon this consideration, A great man is fallen; Now who are to be esteemed great if not those who are rightfully crowned? And such are the aged being found in the way of righteousness. The Prophet Isaiah bringeth in the ancient amongst those persons of highest place and power, whose removal doth weaken both Church and State. And this is one strain in Jeremiah his Lamentations, The Crown is fallen; Now in a safe sense, though not the same, we may apply it unto the death of the meanest, whose hoary heads were found in the way of righteousness; but it is singularly applicable, when an ancient, prudent, pious Minister is translated by death: Such a providence upon the death of Elijah caused Elisha to cry out, My Father, My Father, the Charet of Israel and the horsemen thereof. And truly such occasion of mourning is administered this day upon our loss of the Reverend, Learned, and godly man, whose Funeral we now celebrate. Neither doth his death alone but the dissolution of sundry other grave and gracious Ministers of the Gospel, not long since, in the Neighbourhood, call for our tears and lamentations before the Lord. The Lord rightly affect us with these strokes, and give us the sanctified improvement of them through his grace.

The second Use followeth, which is for reproof of three sorts of people.

1. Of those aged persons who seem to be ashamed of their old age, by taking courses to hide it, that they might be accounted young, whereas my Text tells us, that the hoary head is a Crown, and the same wise Solomon saith elsewhere, The beauty of old men is the gray-head: And the Apostle Paul speaketh of his old age as his credit, and that which should render him the more respectfull, Being such a one as Paul the aged. Some of the Ancients took occasion in their days to blame very sharply such persons who either picked out their gray hairs, or else did color them artificially, that they might not be reputed old; And this advice was added to the reproof, that they should rather pluck up their lusts then pick out their gray hairs, as rendering them many thousand times more unlovely and dishonorable: Believe it you gray-headed persons, that your covetousness, frowardness, hypocrisy, and unrighteousness do make you reproachful, whereas your age with holiness would be your honor.

2. Of those whose wicked conversation doth cast dis-reputation upon the Crown which God by their many years hath set upon their heads. That Proverb is applicable unto them, As a Jewell of Gold in a Swines snout, so is a fair woman which is without discretion. Complexion doth not so much beautify as folly doth blemish such a person: In like manner it is very unseemly to see silver hairs soyled with a sinful, debauched conversation; How do oaths, lies, scurrilous cursed speeches and other wickednesses cast mire and fasten rust upon the Crown of old-age. In dealing with these grayheaded sinners I may apply those words of Moses, Do ye thus reward the Lord ye foolish people and unwise? Is this the requital which you return unto God for his many years patience exercised towards you, and the manifold experiences with long-continued goodness showered down upon you? Do not you yourselves look for better fruit from the trees which you have carefully preserved many winters, and painfully watered many Summers? But if these convincing expostulations will not awaken and reform these people who are weather-beaten in wickedness, and by long soaking in sin are habituated to do evil, I must mind them of that heavy message delivered from the Lord by the Prophet Isaiah, The sinner being an hundred years old is accursed. The old impenitent sinner, whatsoever his place, his parts, or his respect in the world be, is accursed. God's curse is not only threatened, but already in a great measure executed upon him, He is cursed, cursed in his soul, and cursed in all his enjoyments and concernments, during the time of his impenitency and unreformednesse. Here I might be large in discovering the expressions of divine displeasure against people, old in evils as in years, whose decayed, decrepid, withered, weakened bodies might expect pity. The Prophet Jeremiah saith, I am full of the fury of the Lord, I will pour it forth upon the aged and him that is full of days. And God's threatening runneth thus, that neither he himself nor those whom he will incense against them, shall have any compassion upon the old man, or him that stoopeth for age or the man of gray hairs.

3. Of them who make the aged the objects of their derision. M^r Cartwright hath this note upon the Text, that God hath by this Crown of gray hairs vindicated the aged from all the discredit which their stooping or other infirmities might seem to expose them unto: And it is observed by some that though decrepid old age be suggested in the language of the Text, yet Solomon doth assign it the Crown. This I suggest the rather to give a check unto the young wanton wits which are apt to break jests upon the aged, because of some seeming uncomelinesses which accompany that condition of life. Guilty in this kind was he who scoffingly asked the old man whose body was crooked by reason of old age, Whether he would sell him a bow? These green heads do not consider the greatness of this sin in God's account, who puts this fault into the catalogue of such miscarriages which usher in desolating judgments, viz. The child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient; And this sin is the more heinous and provoking, when those aged persons are abused, whose near Relations, Offices of honor, accompanied with the power of godliness, do call for all expressions of respect and esteem. Solomon is smart in his reproof of children, who in this kind offend towards their natural parents, The eye that mocketh at his Father and despiseth to obey his mother, the Ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the young Eagles shall eat it. How many times are those brought unto the Gallows (as the confessions of some in such cases have manifested) through God's just judgment who have been chargeable with guilt of this kind? And how heavy was the hand of God upon many little children for mocking Elisha the Prophet, There came forth little children out of the City, and mocked him, and said unto him, Go up thy bald-head, Go up thou baldhead; And he turned back, and looked upon them, and cursed them in the Name of the Lord, and there came forth two she-bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two children of them. How far this derision of the man of God did reach, I now enquire not, whether to his Function, with relation to his Master Elijah lately taken up into heaven, or only unto his baldness, But this is notable, that childishness and ignorance will not secure such from divine revenge who do dare to deride the aged: What therefore may they expect who have more years on their backs, and should have more grace in their hearts, then to adventure upon this sinful provocation. But yet there is a higher step of aggravation to be added, viz. when righteousness itself which is the chiefest Crown of the aged, is the object of men's derision; when merely the tenderness of men's consciences and their exact walking according to the Word of God doth lay them open unto the jeers of men. The Apostle telleth us that such despise not man only but God also, and he rendereth a double reason thereof, viz. because God hath called us to holiness, and hath likewise given us his Spirit to work it: I remember the words of Solomon, which are applicable to my purpose, whoso mocketh the poor reproacheth his maker; And the speech (as M^r Cartwright noteth upon the place) extends unto jearing at any bodily defect or deformity whatsoever, whereof God is willing to be accounted the Author. How much more will the Lord interpret those derisions to reach himself, which people shall dare to cast upon his own image in his servants, which is their Crown and beauty? For if God take himself to be concerned in the creatures affliction, how much more then in that which tends to his perfection? This way of wickedness argueth a graceless frame of heart, and to them who walk in it may be applied the sharp words of the Prophet, Against whom do you sport yourselves? Against whom make you a widemouth, and draw out the tongue? Are ye not children of transgression, a false seed? Ishmael by mocking Isaac made way for his own rejection, and doubtless they are not far from ruin who have travelled so long in sin that they are got into the Chair of Scorners; When I remember the heavy curse given out against Cham for mocking his old Father Noah (for it's conceived that he was thus far guilty) when in an uncomely posture by reason of his drunkenness; I tremble to think what will become of them who break brinish jests with profane Satyricall spirits upon God's servants for their sanctity. We read in holy Story that Michal David's wife despised him in her heart, and spake tauntingly to him upon his zealous dancing before the Lord, and the holy Ghost hath concluded the History with this report, Therefore Michol the daughter of Saul had no child unto the day of her death. And ordinarily this cursed course is attended with the heavy curse of everlasting spiritual barrenness. The Lord grant that these hints may through his blessing, give some check unto that profane boldness, which too frequently breaketh forth amongst the children of men.

I proceed to the third Use which shall be for trial; For it much concerneth all sorts to know how this righteousness may be discerned, which is a Crown of glory to the hoary head. The necessity of this enquiry may be manifested by these two considerations.

1. Because there are several mistakes in this matter of righteousness amongst men. For there are many who only appear outwardly to be righteous, when the inside discovereth the contrary, being full of hypocrisy. And there is something like unto justice, which is highly esteemed amongst men, though it be abomination in the sight of God.

2. That we may neither arrogate nor deny this Crown to ourselves groundlessly, and also that we may be the better able to judge unto whom we are bound to give this honor which God hath put upon them. For as it is the duty of all, so it is the care of God's people in this particular (as in other cases) to guide themselves by discretion and judgment.

Now those whom God accounteth truly righteous may be known,

1. By their unlimited respect unto God's whole will revealed in his word, as the rule of their obedience for the matter of it. This is the character given of Zacharias and Elizabeth, They were both righteous before God, walking in all the Commandments and Ordinances of the Lord: Therefore here the Query must be, both What is the rule of our conversation? and Whether our endeavors be extended according to the rules of the Scripture universally? For multitudes steer their course rather according to the compass of human Ordinances than divine Institutions; And amongst them who seem to have recourse unto Scripture guidance, many are merely partial, picking and choosing according to their pleasure, as Herod who heard John the Baptist, and did many things, but there was one defect which undid him. And the like might be observed concerning the young man, who fell short in regard of his worldly-mindedness.

2. By minding the manner, together with the matter of their obedience. To this purpose are the words of Moses, This shall be our righteousness if we observe to do all these Commandments before the Lord our God as he hath commanded us. As this Scripture speaketh to the former note, viz. there is an observing to do all, q. d. there is a respect unto all God's commands, as David expresseth it, So it suggesteth reference to the modality with the materiality of our performances. A principle of righteousness will move a man to do God's Commandments as before him, and as he hath commanded: Whereas his Majesty requireth that good duties should be well done, they esteem it just and equal to endeavor this, not daring to satisfy themselves with outwardnesse and formality, opus operatum will not down with the person who is regularly righteous; Therefore people in the proof of their righteousness must consider what care they take to be reverent, humble, affectionate, spiritual and upright in their services before the Lord.

3. By laboring after growth in grace and a more full conformity unto the Laws of the Lord and his deservings; The path of the righteous (saith Solomon) is as the shining light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day. The Sun doth not more naturally in its progress move towards high noon, then a gracious heart worketh towards perfection. The Apostle Paul having reported his own practice in pressing forward towards the mark, addeth, that those who are sincere are thus minded, and he calleth them perfect because thus they are in their own aims and endeavors, as in divine acceptance. Because (as M^r Bayns expresseth it) they take up their arrows always on this side the white, therefore they strive to shoot better that they might hit the white, that they might in all regards exactly answer the mind and expectation of the Lord in their conversation; Therefore those are far from righteousness who stroke their own heads as though they had fully accomplished the mind of God, and speak the language of the Laodicean, I am rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; Setting aside their staves, as though they were got to their journeys end, not looking after increase of grace, as though they had gained enough already to serve their turn. And it will be no violation of the Law of charity to affirm, that he was never truly good who doth not strive to be better.

4. By an humble self denying dependence upon Jesus Christ, looking for divine acceptance through him alone. The holy Apostle notwithstanding his unreprouable course before his conversion (as to men, and according to his light) and his unwearied industry upon his spiritual change, to hit the mark, at which he sincerely levelled, attended with a holy life, free from outward scandal, yet this, this was in his eye and endeavor, to be found in Christ (saith he) not having mine own righteousness which is of the Law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith. And thus it is also with all other Christians who are Evangelically righteous, because they do daily experience their own defects both in the matter, manner, measure, and end of their obedience, both to the Commandments of the first and second table, therefore in their addresses unto God either for recompense or acceptance, they take up the words of the holy Martyr, None but Christ, None but Christ. This our Apostle himself asserteth, speaking of others as of himself, We rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh, &c. And he is bold to conclude those to be void of true righteousness who do trust unto their own parts, privileges, or performances whatsoever: Israel which followed after the Law of righteousness hath not attained to the Law of Righteousnesse; wherefore? Because they sought it not by faith but as it were by the works of the Law. By these four characters of the person who is Evangelically righteous, being faithfully applied, we may be able to know in regard of ourselves, and to guess in reference unto others (upon conversings with them) unto whom the Crown of glory (set upon the hoary head found in the way of righteousness) doth appertain.

The last Use followeth which is for Exhortation, and it is to be directed,

1. To them who are old.
2. To them who are young.

I shall begin with the aged, both such who are unrighteous and such who are in the way of righteousness.

First, The aged persons who abide irreligious are to be persuaded to endeavor a change both of heart and life; Hearken unto me you who are far from righteousness; Remember the fore-mentioned particulars, wherein true righteousness doth consist, and strive with all your strength to attain them, as you do desire a Crown of glory. The Apostle Paul propounds the practice of such who run a race to obtain a corruptible Crown, as an argument to press the like duty. And Scripture-Histories together with the Stories of all ages do record the strange adventures, yea, attempts both ungodly and unnatural to advance unto a Crown: Should not we therefore in the way of God seek this Crown of glory? Now that my advice may be the more prevalent, let these considerations be well weighed.

1. That the greatest age attainable on earth without righteousness will not procure this Crown; Antiquity without piety doth yield no more credit then the devil is capable of, who is often called the Old Serpent, having had many thousand years continuance in the world: But when holiness is annexed to the hoary hairs, they honor the head with a Crown. How ambitious are proud men (like Saul) to be honored amongst the people. Therefore as the laborious Bee sucketh honey out of weeds, let us graciously improve such like examples, to provoke ourselves to seek the honor which cometh in by righteousness.
2. This righteousness which is attended with a Crown of glory upon earth will undoubtedly bring that which is very much better in heaven. Hearken what our Savior promiseth, The righteous shall shine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father. And observe the expectation of David upon this account, As for me I will behold thy face in righteousness, I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness. Though I may not spend words in illustrating these passages, yet I wish that the aged would seriously consider how much is comprehended in this glorification and this satisfaction assured upon the righteous at the general resurrection.
3. Who doth not (upon such grounds as have been hinted) desire to die the death of the righteous, as that wretch Balaam did? therefore wisdom would work endeavors to attain righteousness in the time of life. I remember a passage in the promise made by the Angel concerning the success of John the Baptist his Ministry, He shall turn the disobedient to the wisdom of the Just; There is singular wisdom amongst the righteous; as in other regards, so herein, because as they intend the best good as their end, so they seek to accomplish it, not only by wishings and wouldings, but by the real use of the means sanctified for the obtaining thereof. Let us therefore herein make, imitation.

4. The unrighteous shall not find any favor with God, because of their gray heads when he cometh to judgment. Somewhat was before suggested to this purpose, therefore now I will only mention two Scriptures, which may be awakening to aged persons sleeping in security. Though a sinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet it shall not be well with the wicked: Forbearance is no acquittance, but God will be sooner or later upon their bones with blows of vengeance; And their shutting out of heaven is so certain, that the Apostle taketh it for granted that none will question it, Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God? How can you old people give credit to these expressions of divine severity without resolutions to look out after righteousness?

5. You aged ones are the greatest monuments of divine patience, which should lead you unto repentance; and the Apostle giveth in two considerations, to add strength unto this argument, viz.

1. Because otherwise your hearts will be more and more obdurate, and yourselves become less and less able to reform.

2. Because through your abuse of God's forbearance his wrath will be kindled and increased against you. Weigh I pray you his words, Despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance, and longsuffering? not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance; But after thy hardness and impenitent heart, treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God: I have been the more earnest in pressing the reformation of the aged sinners, because it is attained with difficulty through their accustomed continuance in wickedness.

Secondly, I shall bend my advice to the aged who are through God's grace really righteous. These persons are to be persuaded unto real gratitude to the Lord, who hath set a Crown of glory upon their gray-heads. The Psalmist calls upon old men to praise the Name of the Lord; This is one of M^r Cartwright inferences from the Text. And doubtless such aged people have abundant cause to be thankful unto the Almighty. 1. For drawing forth the thread of their lives to so great a length. 2. And especially for converting them unto the way of righteousness.

First, You may be moved to praise God for your old age by these Meditations.

1. Because his Highness is the maintainer of our lives, and the lengthener of our days. Notwithstanding the means used whether ordinary or extraordinary, food, Physic, &c. to continue our days upon earth, yet it must be acknowledged that the Lord holdeth our soul in life. And here let it be remembered, that God's blessing giveth strength to bread, and efficacy unto all other means of health. Consider also how much of God's wisdom, power, goodness, patience, &c. hath been daily, yea hourly exercised for your preservation. Mind likewise from how many thousands of dangers his hand of providence hath secured you, both in the time of fool-hardy youth and unwieldy old age. Upon such like thoughts the holy Psalmist thus expresseth himself to the Lord, Let my mouth be filled with thy praise and with thy honour all the day.

2. Because by strokes of death ten thousand have fallen on your sides, on your right hands, and yet it doth not comenigh to you. What multitudes of men and women, and children more likely to have lived long then yourselves, are dead and gone, but yourselves still abide in the Land of the living? The good young King Josiah is deadly wounded by an Arrow; And old Eli the Priest of the Lord fell from his seat backward, and his neck brake; What great numbers have lost their lives, some in war, and others in times of peace; yea, very many, much more fitted for the service of Church and Common-wealth then yourselves. In this regard you should look upon yourselves as reserved to magnify the God of your lives and mercies.

3. It is threatened as a judgment upon a Family when there is not left one aged person belonging to it; There shall not be an old man in thy House; These words speak much displeasure against Eli; Whereas it is an honor to have old stakes standing to support a Family which issued out of an ancient stock; Like as old Oaks are accounted an ornament to a Park, though they bear neither fruit nor leaves. This is one promise made to the man who feareth God, Thou shalt live to see thy children's children. And Solomon tells us, The glory of children are their Fathers.

4. Because your many years have enriched you with manifold experiences, and this is judged by some Expositors to add much unto the Crown of old age. This I might enlarge, by manifesting the advantages of old men's experiences, both in reference unto their own comfort, and the service of others: The holy Psalmist relieveth his drooping spirit, in an estate of desertion, by improving of God's ancient administrations. I have considered the days of old, the years of ancient times. I will remember the years of the right hand of the most High, I will remember thy wonders of old. Yea the Heathen could knowingly speak of the sweet fruits of old age if men had wisdom to reap them. And all ages do demonstrate, that ancient men, are most meet by their grave counsels to be serviceable unto the public. This Reverend man (whose Funeral we now celebrate, was wont to say, That a few gray hairs would do more work then many young locks. Besides other proofs hereof, the History concerning the different advice given to Rehoboam, by his young and old Counsellors, will sufficiently witness this truth.

These considerations may quicken the godly aged to gratitude for their hory heads: but I must add, that they have much more cause to magnify God, for making them godly, because old age may be the gift of common bounty, whereas righteousness is the product of peculiar grace. The wicked may become old, but the righteous are the adopted children of God and the heirs of heavens glory; Therefore their souls should praise the Lord, because when their lives are redeemed from destruction, they are also crowned with loving-kindness and tender mercies. Now that I may prevail with you to honor God whose hoary heads are crowned with righteousness, I will briefly propound to your most serious thoughts these following meditations.

1. That yourselves in the estate of depraved nature were of that number of whom it is most truly said, There is nonerighteous, no not one, and that this righteousness which is your Crown was the fruit of God's Spirit; Therefore the glory thereof is due unto the Lord and not unto yourselves, because he and not yourselves hath made the difference betwixt you and others.

2. That the greatest part of mankind doth abide in the ways of unrighteousness; The whole world (saith the Apostle) lieth in wickedness; The small number of ten righteous persons could not be found in Sodom and Gomorrhah with their Suburbs; And before the Flood God himself could not espy any other besides Noah, Thee only have I seen righteous beforeme in this age; Now by how much the more rare righteousness is amongst men, by so much the more thankful should we be if God hath wrought it in us.

3. Can you remember either your own many, strong, and long-continued resistances made against divine assaults, or the manifold Providences and Ordinances, by means whereof you have been brought into the way of righteousness; May not Christ speak unto you as once to Jerusalem, Howoften would I and ye would not? yea, for a long time might not this be charged upon you, You always resisted the holy Ghost? And by how many hammerings and humblings, by what showers and Sunshine, by what shakings with meltings in the Ministry of the Gospel have you been won to the Lord; Now should not all this patience and goodness of God lead you unto thankfulness?

4. Lastly, Take notice of the various and precious privileges whereof you are made partakers by means of righteousness; These I will only mention without amplification: Hereupon you may be confident.

1. That your lives are lengthened, not only by common providence, but in the pursuance of special promises made unto them who have received peculiar grace.

2. That you shall be supplied with all necessary accommodations in your passage to heaven; These are Christ's own words unto them who seek righteousness, All these things shall be added unto you.

3. That you shall undoubtedly persevere to glory, The righteous shall hold on his way.

4. That all occurrences shall be sanctified to your spiritual advantage, Say ye to the righteous that it shall be wellwith him.

5. That God's vigilant eye of providence shall never be withdrawn from you, in which respect you may be the rather assured of the seasonable and full accomplishment of all his promises.

6. That upon Natures dissolution your souls shall be perfect, and that at the general Resurrection your bodies and souls shall inherit life eternal. Now who can believingly look upon himself interested in these glorious obligations of God's grace without a thankful heart?

If by these many Arguments the hearts of any aged ones, being resolved upon gratitude, shall enquire how they may in realities express their thankfulness unto the Lord, both for his long-sufferance and loving-kindness towards them. My answer is this, That you shall be regularly and acceptably thankful unto God both for your gray-hairs and your graces, by studying and endeavoring such a frame of heart and course of life as may answer that counsel which himself hath left on record for your guidance in the holy Scriptures which I shall plainly and faithfully impart unto you. But before I mention particulars to direct your behavior, I shall premise these two things to move attention with resolutions to practice them.

1. That howsoever, too often, men themselves do not observe when gray hairs are here and there upon them, and many times the aged may seem youthful unto others; yet God doth take exact and particular notice of every aged person in the world. The holy Ghost recordeth when Joshua waxed old, and was stricken in age, and about what time Jesse (the Father of David) went for an old man in Israel. The like I might discover in regard of Abraham, Sarah, Anna, But I forbear.

2. That the Lord doth punctually observe all the good, and all the evils of them who are stricken in years, whether they be his own people or others. This I enlarge not by specifying instances, because the naked quotations may be sufficient.

Having thus briefly premised these things, I proceed to the directions which I find registered in the Word of God, that the aged may know how to order their conversation in some measure of answerableness unto that Crown of glory which the Lord by his grace and their gray hairs hath put upon them.

In general, They must be of such behavior as becometh holinesse, whether they be aged men or women, therefore they ought to advance and express the power of God's grace by a diligent improvement of all such means as God hath sanctified. The Apostle John writeth to the Fathers who were knowing men, that they might become more holy. And old Anna, though truly good, yet waited daily at the Temple, that she might grow better. This I might persuade by many Arguments.

1. There is no one who hath lived the longest and hath made the best proficiency in Christ's School, that is come to that pillar on which he may write, Ne plus ultra; But when he hath summed up all his rich endowments, shall find cause to conclude with the words of the Apostle, Not asthough I were already perfect.

2. The grievances of old age are such, and so many, as will call for the exercise of the strongest graces attainable in this life. Solomon reckoneth up some of them, and telleth the aged person, that they will take away the pleasures of his life; Then all the faith, patience, and other graces which have been gained will be found weak enough, to wield, the burdens of that estate: This, this was the only support of the Psalmist, when strength and heart did fail, that God was the strength of his heart, and his portion (to live upon) forever. In this respect pains should be taken, that as the outward man decayeth, the inward man may be renewed daily.

3. The aged will lie open unto derision and disrespect in regard of the imperfections and weaknesses which attend that condition of life, therefore they should labor by eminency of holiness to secure their credit amongst all sorts of people whatsoever; For nothing doth more awe the hearts of the children of men then the power of godliness appearing in the conversations of God's Servants; As Paul advised young Timothy hereby to prevent contempt, Let no man despise thee, but be an example of the believers in word and conversation, &c. So by means hereof Job had won great estimation amongst all sorts; The young men saw me and hid themselves, and the aged arose and stood up.

4. The miscarriages of old people are in God's account the more heinous, because they have had most frequent and most ancient experiences of his goodness. By this circumstance the evils of Israel are once and again aggravated. God carried them all the days of old, but they rebelled and vexed his holy Spirit: Know that it is an evil thing (more then ordinarily evil) that my fear is not in thee, for of old time I have broken thy yoke, &c.

5. And I might add that their wickedness will do much more mischief tending more to the dishonor of God and the infection of others. In all these regards it nearly concerneth them whom God hath crowned with age and the profession of his Name, to heed their conversation, that it may be suitable unto that dignity which the Lord hath put upon them. It may well become everyone of them upon this account, frequently and affectionately to make David's prayer, Now I am old and gray-headed, O Lord forsake me not, until I have shown thy strength unto this generation, and thy power to everyone that is to come. This in general, the particulars follow.

First, The aged should be full of knowledge as they are full of years; This is taken for granted in many Scripture passages, With the ancient is wisdom, and in length of days is understanding; And thence it is that the ancient and the prudent are conjoined. Ignorance is much more excusable in the young, who may thus plead, We are but of yesterday, and know nothing, because our days upon earth are a shadow; but an old Ignoramus is a thing intolerable: Better is a poor and wise child, then an old and foolish King. When God hath set a Crown upon a man's head, and he knoweth not how to wear it; Honor (saith Solomon) is unseemly for a fool: And this disgrace is the greater when means of knowledge are enjoyed, yea, enjoyed for many years. You (saith the Apostle to some who were members of the Church at Corinth) have not the knowledge of God. I speak this to your shame. And in like manner he greatens this defect in others; When for the time ye ought to be teachers of others, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the Oracles of God: Remember how sharply Christ reproveth Nicodemus, Art thou a Master in Israel and knowest not these things? It would be accounted a great disparagement unto a young man having served out an Apprentiship, to be unacquainted with the mysteries of his Trade; Now fifty years is above seven years in Sabbath-days, and yet how many of that age (who have had an addition of many weekly Lecture-days) are yet palpably ignorant in the mysteries of salvation? These things I suggest to shame the aged unto endeavors to become rich in understanding.

Secondly, They should not only be knowing but fruitful, The righteous shall flourish like the palm-tree, they shall bring forth fruit in old age, they shall be fat and flourishing. This may upon good ground be looked for, from them who are truly good, for though the natural radical heat doth abate in old persons, yet the spiritual vigor which they receive from Christ decaieith not. His branches shall spread and his beauty shall be as the Olive-tree, for from me is thy fruit found. Although age taketh them off from sundry employments, yet they should be doing something according to their abilities. The holy Ghost telleth us of an old man who came from his work out of the field at even; In the evening of our age, towards Sun-setting, we should be found acting in one kind or other for God; and happy is that Servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Here I will instance in three particulars.

1. The aged must be Teachers of good things, Daies should speak, and the multitude of years should teach wisdom; This was the practice of old Jacob, Moses, Joshua, &c. And Job reporteth this as a ground of his comfort, I was eyes to the blind, unto me men gave ear, and waited, and kept silence at my counsel. You must bring forth of your treasure good things, both new and old, and not trifle out the latter part of your days in telling old wives Fables.

2. They must communicate their experiences, Hear this, ye old men, Hath this been in your days? Tell ye your children of it, and let your children tell their children, and their children another generation. This hath been the custom of God's Worthies in all ages, according to his command, whereby themselves have received comfort, others benefit, and God glory. And this I seriously persuade, though I have not leisure to enlarge it. Let future ages understand the most remarkable passages of God's Providence which you have experienced, whereby sin may be rendered odious, and Christ with the ways of faith and holiness may be represented precious to the souls of succeeding ages.

3. They should endeavor to clear both their own credit and consciences, in reference unto all their conversings in the world. This I propound from the example of Samuel, when he was old and gray-headed, pointing only at the Story, which is well worth consideration and imitation. And in this practice let the honor of Religion be rather vindicated than your own. Give God the glory of your own unreprouable conversation, and for your known miscarriages express your repentance, which will produce both present inward peace and future reputation.

Thirdly, The aged should possess their souls with patience, This is one of the particulars which S^t Paul adviseth Titus to press upon old men, viz. that they be sound in patience. This grace of patience considered under a threefold notion, is needful, and would be commendable in them.

1. Patience in waiting for the full accomplishment of all God's Promises. You have need of Patience (saith the Apostle) that after ye have done the will of God, you might receive the promise. And S^t James propounds the practice of the Husbandman to persuade this; Behold, the Husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it. I may tell you whose heads are gray, whose lives have been a long seed-time in ways of well-doing, Behold, the fields are white already to harvest; Your time of reaping is at hand, therefore hold up your heads and hopes in a patient expectation of your recompense of reward.

2. Patience in forbearing those who load you with provocations. In this case let David be your Example, who silently without yielding unto motions made for revenge, submitted unto that affliction with which God did exercise him, through the cursings of Shimei. With how much contempt doth the Lion (the King of Beasts) pass on his way, notwithstanding the barkings of angry dogs? Therefore you aged ones who are crowned both with gray-hairs and graces, Look upon yourselves as ready to set foot into your palace, and to take possession of the Kingdom prepared for you; and hereupon with a holy scorn slieght all the clamors and snarlings of them, who speakevill of you because you refuse to run with them into the same excess of riot.

3. Especially Patience in a calm and cheerful bearing of all those infirmities and afflictions which are wont to accompany old age. Remember that your age is your Crown, and therefore carry it with contentment, though it cause your heads to ache. M. Cartwright upon my Text hath this note, That the holy Ghost doth purposely tell the aged, that the hoary head is a Crown, that by this consideration he might relieve them under all the grievances which attend that condition of life. M. Muffet upon my Text speaketh thus, Old age is born up by these two staves, 1. Life well-spent, 2. Hope of future glory. And Bishop Hall hath this expression in his Meditations and Vows: I account old age the best age, 1. Because the inconveniences of it are only bodily, with a better estate of mind. 2. Because nearer to dissolution. Hereunto he addeth this Story, When a man told a Philosopher, that he was sorry to see him so old: he returned this answer, Be sorry rather that ever I was young to be a fool: Many such like Meditations might be added to check frowardness, to maintain patience under all the pressures of old age, but I shall refer to the fore-mentioned privileges which appertain unto them whose hoary heads are found in the way of righteousness.

Fourthly, They should be sound in faith; 1. Both in the doctrine of faith, in the truth of the Scripture, having had long time for trial, to discern betwixt things which differ, and therefore in reference to Fundamentals at least they should be able to say with David to God, Concerning these thy Testimonies, I have known of old that thou hast founded them forever. 2. And in the grace of faith, being strong in confidence, whereby they shall with old Abraham glorify God, and with old Simeon go singing to heaven; It was an easy thing with Moses to die when God had shown him the promised Land: And it's a good sight to behold ancient Christians carried out of this world with full sail of assurance, hearing them to speak, as Job did, I know that my Redeemer liveth, and though after my skin worms destroy my flesh, yet in my flesh I shall see God, whom I shall see for myself, &c. It well becometh them likewise in times of trouble to plead their old experiences with bold confidence, Why withdrawest thou thine hand, even thy right hand, pluck it out of thy hosome, for God is my King of old. Whereas their infidelity is the more inexcusable in itself, and the more provoking unto God, because manifold providences both in former and later years, have evidenced unto them God's power and truth; They forgot God their Savior which had done great things in Egypt, wondrous things in the Land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red Sea, therefore he said that he would destroy them, &c. they believed not his Word. And hence it was that both Moses and old Zechary were so severely dealt with for their incredulity.

Fifthly, They should be sound in charity, This the Apnstle addeth to the former. And it is very reasonable in many regards; for as they have long lived upon God's love, so they have received most kindnesses from men in manifold exigencies, and the necessities of their old age do call for continued and renewed compassion from time to time. Here I shall only touch upon three Rules to guide this grace in its exercise.

1. For purity, their love should be most enlarged upon the account of piety. As it was the praise of Titus, that his inward affection was more abundant whilst he remembered the obedience of the Corinthians; When special kindness is shown towards them who are of the household of faith.

2. For perpetuity, they must not be weary of works of charity: And doubtless if love be true it will be constant, for a friend loveth at all times.

3. For quantity, it should be increased, and it will be to their high commendation if their works of mercy (as of other kinds) be more at the last then at the first. And therefore covetousness should be cashiered, as the cut-throat of charity.

Moreover, I might persuade from the authority of Saint Paul, sobriety, temperance, and gravity. For temperance let old Barzillai be an example unto the aged, whose moderation in reference to the dainties of a Court tendered unto him, was very great. And let the sad consequences of Noah his intemperance give caution for sobriety unto all ancient persons whatsoever. As for gravity, it's a virtue opposed to lightness and apishnesse; It should be expressed in countenance, speech, and apparel, &c. But these things I must not enlarge. And I will only name what the Apostle addeth in relation to old women. They must not be false accusers; His word suggests that false accusers are devil-like, having tongues set on fire by hell. This may be a sufficient watchword to warn them to keep at a distance from such exorbitances; The last thing which I will advise all ancient persons unto, is constancy and perseverance in ways of righteousness, according to all the former directions; I would propound the resolution of David when old and gray-headed for your imitation, I will hope continually, and will yet praise thee more and more, &c. You should be immovable like unto old Oaks, deeply rooted, which are not turned hither and thither, this way and that way, by every contrary wind. Remember the speech of old Polycarpus when tempted to Apostasy, God hath been my good Master for 85 years, therefore I will not forsake him: As Arguments to move endeavors after steddinesse both in the profession and practice of the truth, take these short particulars into your serious consideration.

1. In the winter of your age, you may probably be assaulted with violent storms. When thou shalt be old (saith Christ to Peter) another shall gird thee and carry thee whither thou wouldest not: This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God.

2. You are in danger of declining. Good old Eli towards the end of his life was woefully cooled in his zeal for God, as his indulgence towards his Sons, did manifest. And when Solomon was old, his wives turned away his heart after other gods, and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David his father. These examples may give you an Alarum; for neither high parts, nor saving grace, will secure you from porttall apostasy, therefore you should be watchful.

3. God doth not change or abate in his goodness toward you, but he speaketh unto you as to old Israel. You are borne by me from the belly which are carried from the womb. And even to your old age I am he, and even to hoar hairs will I carry you. Now should not God's immutability in his favors notwithstanding your great unworthiness, engage you strongly to hold close unto his Majesty without any backslidings!

4. Your fruitfulness in age, will add to your comfort when you die, and to your honor afterwards. The promise of God speaketh thus much: Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of Corn cometh in in his season. Unto which might be added S^t Paul's experience; I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth is laid up for me a Crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day.

Having finished my Exhortation to the aged, I shall direct my counsel unto them who are young; wherein I will be the shorter, because I have been so large in the former, and I will cast mine advice under three heads.

First, To seek the lengthening of their lives, that they may attain the Crown of glory, which belongeth to the hoary head.

And for this end,

1. Let them warily decline all life-endangering practices. I will instance in some. Quarrellings, fightings, whereby many in the flower of their age lose their lives, whereof there are sad experiences everywhere. Whoredom is another life-shortening sin: Solomon telleth us, that the Harlots house inclineth to death, & her paths unto the dead. And he foretelleth the young man, what will be the consequence of that course; Thou shalt mourn at the last, when thy flesh and thy body are consumed. And unto both the former, I may add drunkenness and gluttony, for as the strength of nature is wasted, and the body is filled with diseases through intemperancy; and by reason hereof the forementioned evils of quarreling and whoring are much fomented. The words of Solomon are here considerable: Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions, who hath wounds, who hath redness of eyes! They that tarry long at the wine, they that go to seek mixed wine, &c. At the last it biteth like a Serpent, and stingeth like an Adder. Thine eyes shall behold strange women, yea thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the midst of the sea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast. Finally, Take heed of all such ways of wickedness, which may justly bring you under the Magistrates sword, or expose you to the deadly blows of divine displeasure: Bloody and deceitful men shall not live out half their days.

2. Let them betake themselves unto such courses, whereunto God hath promised length of days. The Lord in the fifth Commandment, persuadeth every child to honor and obey his parents, upon this consideration, that thy days may be prolonged. Yea the whole course of obediential conformity unto all God's Commandments, is pressed by this argument; What man is he that desireth life, and loveth many days that he may see good? keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile. Depart from evil and do good. And some Expositors do suggest from my Text, that walking in the way of righteousness, is a means to obtain the honor of an hoary head. God ordinarily granteth long life unto good men. This is most certain, that God will either lengthen the lives of such upon earth, or else crown them with life eternal in Heaven. This lets in the second head of advice to be bestowed upon young persons.

Secondly, To seek righteousness. This was S^t Paul's counsel unto young Timothy, Follow righteousness. And the doctrine under hand is a strong argument to back it, which David pressed upon his son Solomon, when young and tender; who speaking of sanctifying grace under the name of wisdom, useth these words; Exalt her and she shall promote thee, she shall bring thee to honor when thou doest embrace her. She shall give to thine head an ornament, a Crown shall she deliver to thee. Righteousness therefore will be a Crown of glory, unto the green-headed, as well as unto the gray-headed, which should move the young to look out after it.

Now that my persuasion may be the more prevalent with young ones, I shall commend these following particulars unto their serious consideration.

1. God's express command: Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth. If you acknowledge his Sovereignty over you, as your Maker, is it not rational that you should suddenly submit unto his government?

2. The examples of such young ones, who came in unto God graciously in the morning of their age: Josiah, Daniel, Shadrack, Meshach and Abednego, as also Timothy; but especially set Christ before your eyes, who when he wastwelve years old, did famously express the power of grace. Do you judge godliness commendable in them, wherefore then do you not endeavor imitation?

3. The advantages of seeking grace betimes, early in the morning of youth. I shall name some of them without enlargement (viz.) The work will be to yourselves the more easy (as the bowing of the twig while tender,) and to God the more acceptable, when the first fruits are consecrated unto his Majesty. Christ is said to love the moral young man; and it is conjectured, that John had the more tender respect, because he came unto Christ so soon. The gracious seasonings in youth, will also make the conversation more savoury afterwards: And the sooner you undertake God's service, the more glory you shall bring unto his Name, the larger recompense likewise yourselves shall receive. Finally, this will be an encouragement, unto your hopeful addresses unto the Lord, as need may require. Mark David's manner of pleading in prayer; O God thou hast taught me from my youth, and hitherto I have declared thy wondrous works. Now also when I am old and gray headed O God forsake me not.

4. The necessity of endeavoring to be godly in the time of youth. This might be sundry ways manifested: Because then most subject to satisfy many sinful corruptions. As the boiling pots cast up the most scum, so in the heat of youth, there are strongest inclinations to passions, revenge, lasciviousness, intemperance. &c. In which respect the Apostle saw cause to give Timothy this counsel; Fly youthful lusts, but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, &c. And the breaking forth of wickedness in youth, will breed bitter complaints in old age. As the aged are wont to feel pain in those bones which were bruised or broken, when they were young. Thou writest bitter things against me (saith Job) and makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth. Ephraim also maketh pitiful moan, bearing the reproach of youth. Yea, suppose you should be secured from all gross evils, while young; yet if ever the Lord bring you home unto himself, by the power of an effectual calling, this will be a cut upon your hearts (as it was to Augustine,) that you came in to God no sooner. How will you bewail your folly and great ingratitude unto God, that the devil hath been gratified by your first-fruits, and that only the refuse, dregs, and withered stuff of old age, is reserved for God. And if the Lord should punish your obstinacy in youth, with final impenitence, how sad would your reckoning be at the last day? for this is most certain, that when you have sowed your wild oats, and satisfied the sinful desires of youth, for all these things God will bring you to judgment. The Lord give young ones to dwell upon these meditations, and to lay them seriously unto their hearts. Here I might justly take up a great lamentation, considering that averseness unto the power of piety, which is everywhere to be found amongst young people, notwithstanding instructions, convictions, ministerial persuasions, together with some motions of God's Spirit upon their hearts, with which their souls are assaulted for good from time to time. They will acknowledge the reasonableness of our advice; they will shed tears being reproved for their regardlesse of God and of their own souls; yea they will make fair promises of amendment for time to come. But, alas, alas, poor foolish creatures, how careless in seeking to keep these spiritual sparks alive in their own bosoms. How soon do these good motions die within them. They would have the Crown tendered, but will not resolutely hold on in the use of God's means to obtain it. Fain they would save their souls, and yet satisfy their sinful lusts also. And thus they fluctuate as a wave upon the sea, carried hither and thither by contrary winds. Whereas they should upon a serious consideration (whether it be better to serve God or the devil, to save the soul, or to hazard the loss of it unto eternity) work themselves unto an immovable determination, to seek the Crown of glory in the way of righteousness.

Thirdly, To yield due, reverent respect unto aged persons, especially to such in whom the power of grace doth most eminently appear. M^r Cartwright upon my Text presseth this duty, arguing from our honoring them whom men Crown, unto such to whom God assigneth the Crown of glory. As there should be testifications of high respect unto all such, so especially 1. To our natural parents Honor thy Father and thy Mother. 2. And to those whose Office and faithfulness in discharging it, doth call for double honor.

Now this honorable respect of the aged (especially if godly) must be expressed,

1. By reverent gestures: Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honor the face of the old man.
2. By giving them the precedency, in speaking in all cases to be debated. Elihu said, I am young and ye are very old, wherefore I was afraid and durst not show mine opinion. I said, Days should speak and multitude of years should teach wisdom.
3. By testimonies of due estimation to their persons, even at those times when there may be occasion to blame some of their practices. Rebuke not an Elder, but entreat him as a Father.
4. By submitting unto their grave and gracious counsels. Likewise ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. The Apostle styleth himself Paul the aged, to prevail with Philemon to yield unto his advice.
5. By preferring them (if in all other regards comparison be equal) in discoveries of love and estimation. As it was agreed upon betwixt Paul and the Disciples, that he should rather lodge at the house of Mnason an old Disciple, then any where else. By thus doing, we shall witness to the world that our judgments are rectified, and our conversations are ordered by the word of truth, and that therefore we account the hoary-head to be a Crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.

Now having concluded my discourse upon the Text, I know it is expected, that I should speak unto the occasion of our meeting concerning this Reverend Father (whose Funeral we now celebrate) I will premise this, that a full Narrative of his long well-spent Life, cannot be expected from my report at this time, but I hope that it will in due time be drawn up and handed unto you for his honorable remembrance, and for imitation unto posterity, by One who was fully acquainted both with his Life and Death.

In general this I dare assert with confidence (wherein I doubt not your consent) that his hoary head was a Crown of glory, for it was found in the way of righteousness. Through God's good providence, he had a long time worn this his Crown, for he was well nigh Fourscore years old. Notwithstanding this his great age, yet (through unusual divine indulgence) his strength was not labor and sorrow, for he was neither afflicted with the Stone, or Gout, or Cramp, or any Cough; but he labored only (as I have often heard him say) under the disease of weak old age. That which is recorded of Abraham, may be applied to him, That he died in a good old age, an old man and full of years. Neither were the abilities of his mind abated, but his understanding and memory continued strong, even unto his end. As all his Works published, do proclaim his incomparable learning in all kinds: so those which were lately printed do witness that Academical studies (when he was young) were fresh and ready for improvement in his old age. And the promise made to the righteous man, was verified in him, He shall bring forth fruit in old age, he shall be fat and flourishing. In all which regards, whether we consider the continued healthful frame of his body, or the uninterrupted fruitfulness of the gifts and graces of his spirit, it may be truly said of him, in reference to his death. That he is come to his grave in a full age, like as a shock of Corn cometh in in his season. But that I may not anticipate the intended Narrative of his whole Life, I shall only declare two or three passages towards the end of his days. When he looked upon the weakening distempers (which had caused him to keep his bed) as the Arrest of death, he was pleased (through his love to my worthless self) to give order that I should be certified of his weakness, that he might be remembered before the Lord in my prayers; and also that I might be requested, as from himself, to perform the like office of respect for him, which I had lately done for his Reverend neighbor M^r Whitaker, by preaching his Funeral Sermon. Upon this intelligence the next morning I hastened unto him, to witness mine unfeigned love and honorable respect of him, as also to put this work (which I have now performed) with his approbation, upon an abler hand: but finding him altogether unwilling to excuse me, I thought it more meet to undertake it, then to distemper his spirit by my refusal. By reason of his very great weakness he could not speak much, but that which he said was weighty and savoury, which I will faithfully relate: His words were these; I am now conflicting with my last Adversary, though I believe the sting is taken out. Nature will struggle, but I humbly submit unto the good pleasure of God. I heartily beg the pardon of my many sins, especially of my want of sedulity and fidelity in my public and private charge, hoping to be washed with Christ's blood, and desiring to be translated out of this restless condition. I expect daily, yea hourly to be translated into that everlasting rest, which God hath prepared for them who are interested in his Christ: And I pray God to bless you, and his whole Ministry everywhere.

These were his last words unto me, upon which I might much enlarge myself; but I leave the improvement hereof, and of his laborious exemplary Life, unto your conscientious endeavors. Although he be now dead, yet he still liveth by his worthy Works already printed, unto which I hope many more (which be left ready for the Press) will be added for future profit in the Church of Christ. I conclude, with hearty desires, that this sad providence, in his death, may be sanctified unto us all, and especially unto his nearest Relations, through God's rich grace in Jesus Christ.

FINIS.

The Narrative of the Life and Death of M^r GATAKER.

M^r THOMAS GATAKER or GATACRE (for so he wrote himself, till of later years to prevent miscalling occasioned frequently by the view of the letters he changed it into GATAKER) was a branch of an ancient Family, so firmly by God's providence planted in Shropshire, that the stock hath continued in the same House, carrying the Name of its owner, and known by the title of Gatacre-Hall, by an uninterrupted succession from the time of K. Edward the Confessor. His Father M^r Thomas Gatacre (being not the eldest son of William Gatacre) was designed by his Parents to the study of the Law, in order to which he was a student at the Temple. During the course of that institution, he occasionally coming to visit some Kinred (then high in place and power,) was often present at the examination of some Christian confessors of the Gospel, in those severe times wherein Satan armed all his forces to suppress that dawning light which threatened ruin to his kingdom of darkness. The harshness of those proceedings, together with the constancy of the good, though simple Christians, that with evidence of truth and resolution of mind maintained Faith and a good conscience, were of great moment with him to facilitate the entertainment of that purer doctrine of the Gospel which began to shine into his soul. This being apprehended by his Parents, they jealous of his change, sent him over to Lorain in Flanders, and to win him to a compliance in religion, settled upon him an estate in Lease of 100^{lb} per annum old rent. but like S^t Paul, Phil. 3. he counted all outward advantages as nothing in comparison of the knowledge of Christ Jesus. Therefore his Father perceiving his unchangeable steadfastness in that choice (which had nothing to prejudice it but the seeming novelty,) recalled him, and with great displeasure revoked his own Grant, which yet could not take effect without the Sons consent. But the young disciple had already learned the hard lesson of self-denial and forsaking all to follow Christ. Therefore to preserve his conscience, he gave up that which had been the bait of Apostasy. Now the Lord (that hath promised to his faithful followers satisfaction for all their losses) raised him up Friends, by whose means and advice he pursued his studies at Oxford, and in process of time, (when not only the clouds of ignorance and superstition were dispelled, but also the showers of blood were blown over) he took upon him the public Ministry of the Gospel. He was household Chaplain to Robert Earl of Leicester, and Pastor of S^t Edmunds in Lumbertstreet London. In that Parsonage-house by his Wife Margaret, being of an honest Family of the Pigots in Hertfordshire, (among other Children) he had this Son Thomas, born Sept 4. A. D 1574.

In his Childhood he was so addicted to those means which his Parents applied him unto, for the implanting in him the seeds of good literature, that he needed a bridle rather than a spur; for his love of Learning (equal to that admirable capacity wherewith the Father of Lights had furnished him) was so active in the acquiring of it, that his Father hath often gently chidden him from his book. Neither were his nimble wit, sharp reason, and vast memory perverted to be the instruments of that debauchery wherewith the corruption of our nature doth too often stain and deflower our first days: for he had a lovely gravity in his young conversation; so that, what Greg. Nazianzen said of the great Basil, might be averred of him, that he held forth Learning beyond his age, and a fixedness of Manners more considerable than his Learning.

Having happily dispatched his tyrocinnia of first exercises in the Grammar-Schools (wherein he overcame by strange industry the difficulties which that age, destitute of many helps our present days enjoy, conflicted withal; and outstripped many that ran in the same course,) before he had completed sixteen years. A. D. 1590. He was by his Father placed in S^t Johns College in Cambridge. Not long after his settlement there, his Father (being called by God to receive the reward of his labors) left him not wholly destitute, yet not sufficiently provided for any long continuance of his studies there. But God that hath engaged his truth and mercy to the upright, even for their seed also (Psal. 112. 1, 2.) (especially when the Son doth not degenerate or thwart the providence of God, by a forfeiture of his title to the Promises,) provided friends and means for him, who was by an hidden counsel then designed to be an instrument of doing service to the Church of Christ. Thus the fruit was not nipped in a promising bud, by the frost of want.

Now, not from mere favor, but from merit (upon the proof of his Learning) he was chosen Scholar of that worthy Society, wherein he continued his Studies with unwearied diligence and happy success, till he with Abilities answerable to his Degree, commenced Master of Arts. Take for an instance of his Industry this (viz. that he was a constant Auditor of that eminent Light of Learning M^r Jo. Boys, who read a Greek Lecture in his bed to certain young Students that preferred antelucana studia before their rest and ease. The Notes of those praelections he kept as a treasure, and being visited by M^r Boys many years after, he produced them, to the no small joy of the good old man, who professed himself made some years younger by that entertainment.

Then was contracted that straight friendship betwixt M^r Gataker and that faithful servant of Christ M^r Rich. Stock, which continued until the death of this Reverend Minister, as appears by the testimony given unto him at his Funeral.

An evidence of the good esteem which M^r Gataker had now acquired for his Learning and Piety was this, that a College being then to be erected by the munificence of the Countess of Sussex, the Trustees of that Foundress (Persons eminent for Zeal and Prudence,) did choose him to be one of that Society. They transplanted him into that new Nursery of Arts and Religion, being confident that he would (as he did by Christ's assistance) prove fruitful for the ornament and benefit of that Seminary. Indeed they laid hold of him before the house was fit for inhabitants, fearing lest so fair and promising a flower should be taken up by some other hand. But while the College was in building (that he might not lose any opportunity of doing good,) he retired to M^r William Aylofes house in Essex, who had gained him that he might instruct both himself in the Hebrew Tongue, and his eldest Son in Literature proper to his age. In this Family, partly by his own inclination, and partly by the encouragement of the Governors thereof, he performed holy Duties for the instruction of the whole household, expounding a portion of Scripture every morning, that the Sun of Righteousness might as constantly arise, as the day brake in upon them. In this Exercise, whereby he labored & proficere & prodesse (both to edify others and himself) he dispatched the Epistles of the Apostles, the Prophecies of Isaiah, and a good part of the book of Job, rendering the Text out of the Original Languages, and thence delivering clear explications,, and also deducing useful observations. D^r Stern then Suffragan of Colchester (visiting the Mistress of the Family, to whom he was nearly related,) happened to be present at this Exercise, when M^r Gataker explicated the first Chapter of S^t Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians, which is known to be most pregnant of deep divine mysteries. This portion of holy Writ he treated upon with so happy elucidations, that the judicious Doctor much satisfied with the performance, and admiring the endowments of M^r Gataker, exhorted him instantly to take holy Orders, whereby those Gifts might be authorized for public use, and improved for the building up of the Church, and withal offered him his assistance in that business. But he well weighing the burden of that Calling, and modestly judging of his own ability, which he conceived disproportionable to that Office (to the full discharge whereof the Apostle hath set, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; who is sufficient?) thanked the Doctor for his kind offer, but deferred the matter to further confideration. Afterward by the advice of the Reverend M^r Hen. Alvey, formerly his Tutor, and in this business taken for a Counselor, upon his remonstrance of divers reasons, and the instances of D^r Stern afresh reiterated, he assented to be Ordained by the said Suffragan.

The Fabric of Sidney-Sussex-College being now consummated, he betook himself to the station designed him, and to the work depending thereon, wherein his pains for seasoning young Students with principles of piety and learning were both great and prosperous; for some of them that watered their gardens at his Spring, or lighted their Lamps at his Light, grew up to eminency, as M. Jo. Hoyl and M. Tho. Pell afterwards worthy Fellows of the same Society.

About that time certain persons zealous of promoting the glory of God and gaining souls to Christ, that lay in a sad condition through the defect of Pastors able to teach and lead the people in the ways of truth, life, and peace, especially M. Abdias Ashton of S^t Johns, and M. William Bedel of Emmanuel, set on foot a design of preaching in places adjacent to the University even to a considerable distance; These invited M. Gataker to be a partner in this labor; Being drawn in and encouraged by them, he preached every Lord's day at Everton (a village in the meeting-confines of Cambridge, Bedford, and Huntingtongshire) where a decrepid man (reported to be 30. years above an 100.) sustained the Name of Vicar, Vix magni nominis umbra. Here a Family of Burgoins resident in that place deserveth this Honorable remembrance, that M. Roger Burgoin during that time used M. Gataker with great humanity, which by him was construed to be the effect of his piety.

After half a year thus religiously employed with manifestation of a public spirit, finding some causes to retire from the University, at the motion of M. Ashton above-mentioned (that had been Tutor) he removed to Sir William Cooks Family then resident in London. This place and employment occasioned the more public discovery of his Ministerial gifts, with the singular approbation of many persons of note, not only for outward estate, but also for affection unto, and judgment in Religion: Hereupon the Lecturers place at Lincolns Inn falling void, some principal persons of that Honorable Society (which had been his Auditors occasionally) made addresses unto him, inviting him to that place, offering their assistances, and alleging the facility of his Introduction by the Lord Chief Justice Pophams interesting himself in the business, whom they knew both to have loved the Father Thomas Gataker (being his intimate once, and contemporary in the studies of Law) and to favor the Son very highly for his own worth and work in the Ministry. But he according to his usual modesty declined the undertaking, and resisted the importunities even of his Friend M. Stock, till D. Montague Master of Sydney-College, repairing to London, and being acquainted with the design in hand (though he had it in his thoughts to invite M. Gatacre back to the College, that he might read an Hebrew Lecture that had a Salary annexed by the Lord Harrington, yet (laying that aside) pressed M. Gataker with Arguments and Authority, encouraged him against his own diffidence, and wrought him at last to an assent that without any suit made by him the Lord Popham should recommend him to that society. Thus was he chosen Preacher at Lincolns Inn, where he spent ten years to the advancement of piety, and with a happy Reformation of some abuses of the Lord's day, as he himself testifies in his Apologetical discourse against Lily, pag. 16, 17.

But notwithstanding that Engagement M. Gataker did not totally abandon the Family of Sir William Cook, to whose Lady he was near by blood, and dear to both, upon the account of his pious labors amongst them. Therefore in the vacations being disengaged from attendance at the Inn of Court, he resided in that Family, exercising his Ministry either in their Chapel or in the Parish-Church, as occasion required; and this with an Apostolical mind, not for filthy lucre, but freely making the Gospel a burden only to the dispenser: Yet such was the devotion of that religious pair, that they also would not serve God without cost, for they afterwards in consideration of those pains freely taken settled upon M. Gataker an Annuity of 20^{lb} per annum, which he indeed received for some few years, but after (for certain Reasons) remitted unto the Heir of that Family, forbearing to use the Right he had, and forbidding his Executor to claim any Arrears of that Annuity. This is mentioed the rather that the generous temper of his Christian Soul aiming at the highest good of others more then his own temporal advantage, and infinitely removed from sordid acquisition of gain, or the prostitution of his sacred Function unto secular designs, may be opposed to stop the impudent clamour of some whose consciences being both galled and cauterized, prompted them to calumniate him as guilty of covetousness. But his own pen writ the best Apology, as indeed (according to that of Nazianzen) they that give him a just character and due commendation, had need to have also his Eloquence.

While he attended on that Flock at Lincolns-Inn, Sir William Sidley a Learned Mecenas and pious Patron of the Church offered him a fair Benefice, and because M. Gataker declined the burden of a Pastoral Cure, and pleaded an unwillingness to be taken off from those worthy Gentlemen (of whose favor he had good experience) he endeavored to persuade him that the taking of an assistant would salve all inconveniences, so that he needed not to desert the Society which in Term-time only, required his labors. But he that poised that burden in the Scale of the Sanctuary, always thought that one Cure of souls was enough for one man, and adventured the unkind resentment of the Noble Gentleman upon the refusal, rather than the accumulation of preferments.

After ten years labors profitably employed at Lincolns Inn, not only for the benefit of the then living Servants of God, but also for the behoof of posterity, especially by that Learned Discourse of Lots there and then conceived, and formed (wherein what satisfaction is given to conscience in many cases, let the judicious acknowledge) M. Gataker thence removed to undertake the Rectory of Rotherhith in Surry, of the grounds, motive, and manner whereof he himself hath largely given an account to the world in his Apologetick against Lily, p. 44. 48. of which this is the Sum.

The Rectory of Redrith in Surry (as it is commonly called) being void, and one of an infamous life laboring hard to succeed in it (in order to which he before the Incumbents death had set on foot a transaction with the mother of certain Orphans in whose hands the Patronage was supposed to rest,) some of the Religious Inhabitants valuing the means of grace above all other enjoyments, cast their eyes and thoughts upon M. Gataker, to gain whom they added to their own entreaties the mediation of his good Friend M. Richard Stock. And when he had by many reasons remonstrated unto him, that God did call him to the work, whose honor and Ordinances might suffer prejudice by the intrusion of an unworthy man, he at last suffered himself to be persuaded to engage himself in that charge, which being represented to Sir Henry Hobart then Attorney-General by M. Randolph Crew (afterward Lord Chief Justice.) Sir Henry that before favored other pretensions to gratify some Tenants of his in the Parish, did yet readily embrace the motion concerning settling of M. Gataker there, according to his contentment, and wrote a Letter to the Bishop for the removal of all obstructions that lay in the way or might hinder the acceptance of the Presentation of M. Gataker, which signed with the hands of all the three Brethren who had Right in that Advocation, was tendered on his behalf.

The report of his remove was no welcome news to many of that society, who fain would retain him, some whereof offered an enlargement of his maintenance for an argument to keep him, and others represented the consistence of both employments by the help of an Assistant. But he that made not his Ministry 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 a mere Trade of living here (as Gregory Naz. complained some did in his time, and too many in our times do,) nor would multiply burdens when he deemed himself unfit for the least, would not be wrought to a new resolution. Therefore Ann. Dom. 1611. commending his former charge to the grace of God, he betook himself to the sole attendance on that Flock of which God had now made him overseer. His industry in discharge thereof was constant and great, notwithstanding an almost perpetual headach, wherewith God had exercised him from his very youth, and for which he had this only poor comfort from his Physicians, D^r Goulston his singular good friend (with whom he communicated his studies on Galen, and to whom he contributed his assistance for the edition of some parts of Galen,) often telling him, that the incurable disease of age would be the remedy of his distemper, because together with the abatement of natural heat, his indisposition would grow less vigorous or violent. To the work of his Ministry in public upon the Sabbath, he added a weekly Catecheticall Lecture on Friday in the evening, designed by him to lay the foundation of saving knowledge in the hearts of Children, a certain number whereof every Lecture day did give an account of their knowledge by set Answers to Questions delivered out unto them beforehand for their instruction. (This course of holding a sound form of words, agreeable to the doctrine of the Gospel consigned in holy writ, of what importance it is, we may conclude from that ignorance and error that have invaded the Church of later times, these mischiefs being imputable scarce to anything so much as to the omission of that useful duty of Catechising.) But that exercise was performed by him, with such an accurate and methodical explication of the whole body of Divinity, that Christians of riper years and long standing in Christ's School, did resort to be partakers of those discourses, wherein their well exercised senses found not only milk fit for Children, but also solid meat suitable to grown men in Christ. This he continued till he had absolved a perfect summary of Theology, and gave it over when he observed the least part of his Auditory to be those for whom he mainly intended the work, his Parishioners being grown to a neglect at least of his free labors in that kind.

M^r Gatakers constant retirement in his study, made the choice of a help meet for him, that might oversee his Family, a necessary act of prudence. Therefore not long before he left Lincolns-Inn, he married the Widow of M. William Cupper, to whose two Daughters he was so providently kind in their education and disposing in marriage to two Divines of note, and continued such a fatherly love to them and theirs, that the world mistook them for his own children. That Wife died in childbed of a Son, that bore the Fathers Name, who after that he had seen the most remote parts of the world wherewith we keep commerce, returned home to his Father and died in peace.

The same motive still being in force, he after a decent interval of widdowhood, chose to himself the Daughter of a Reverend Divine M. Charles Pinner, who was then brought up in the worthy and religious Family of M. Ellis Crisp, Brother to M^{rs} Pinner. It pleased God to give him a Son by her (who in process of time was dedicated to God's work in the Ministry) but immediately to take away the Mother, so that the Mothers Funerals and Childs Baptism were celebrated together: Thus our wise and gracious Father tempers the cup for his Children, lest they should surfeit upon earthly enjoyments, as they might easily do if they were mere and unmixed with occasions of sorrow.

He remained then for many years in a disconsolate solitude, till he again adventured and married a Gentlewoman of a very considerable Family, being Sister to S^r George, and S^r John Farwel, and of a good esteem for understanding and piety. By her he had three Children, whereof a Son and a Daughter were carried to the ground before their Mother, but the third yet lives to walk by the light of her Fathers life and doctrine. This Gentlewoman being of a contemplative mind fell into a Consumption, which wasted the body so that the soul took flight from thence to Heaven.

Last of all he took to Wife a Citizens Widow, whose comfortable conversation he enjoyed twenty four years, but without Issue by her. The love to her was one motive, why he retreated out of his Parsonage-house to another habitation of his own revenue; for supposing that she might be the survivor, he would make a convenient provision for her that she might not be subject to another's courtesy for removal. And that affection extended itself in great liberality to divers of her kindred that were capable of support from him, both in her life time and since her decease. Her he survived two years within a few days, and because he numbered his days with wisdom, presuming that the time was approaching of his soul being married to the Lamb, he could not endure to listen unto the motion of some that advised him to a new entanglement in the world.

Having thus related his several Marriages, in a continued Narrative; I must step back to the report of some passages, in time antecedent unto the last of them.

In the year 1620, having a justifiable curiosity to see our neighbor Church in the united Provinces, and something of the other Provinces in Belgium, he took the advantage of the Truce then between the Spaniard and the Hollander, for a free passage between both countries: Therefore with his entire friend Capt. Josua Downing, and an old acquaintance M. RogerHughs (his Mnason, whose house he used frequently in London) he took his voyage, taking withal a Nephew of his being a young Student to be a partaker of that travel. His Mother then alive had some fears, lest he being a known adversary to the Popish cause (which he had mortally wounded with various weapons) should suffer inconvenience from that generation of vipers, whose virulent malice often prompts them to base courses of secret revenge. But God was his guide and his shield, and prospered his journey so, that within a month (for they took boat July 13. and returned safe Aug. 14.) he had viewed the most considerable places in the Low Countries. In this travel he gave better satisfaction to the English Church at Middleburgh, where he gave way to the importunity of friends, desiring to hear him as well as glad to see him, then he did to the English Papists in Flanders, with whom he had divers debates, wherein he drove some to a confusion whom he could not gain to conversion.

Anno 1642. a violent fit of the Colick assaulted him, and brought him to the very brink of the grave: but God brought him back again that he might do him further service. For the year ensuing, before he had well recovered his strength, he was called by the Parliament to sit as one of that Assembly, which was summoned to be consulted about Religion; where his endeavors for promoting Truth and suppressing Error were sincere and serious: And his study of Peace with modesty was in this remarkable, that when his Reafons delivered concerning Christ's obedience in order to our Justification (wherein he differed from his brethren) could not obtain assent from the major part which determined the Question contrary to his sense, his own love of unity imposed upon him silence; and wrought him likewise unto resolutions, not to publish his discourses of that subject from Rom. 3. 28. that he might not publicly discover his dissent from the Votes of that Reverend Assembly.

During his attendance upon the work of that Convention, the Earl of Manchester (being acquainted with his great worth and fitness in regard of his Learning in all kinds, for Academical transactions) offered him the Mastership of Trinity College in Cambridge, which is the greatest preferment of that University: for that Noble Lord being entrusted by the Parliament, with the care of that Academy, was not passionately transported with a blind partiality of men's persons, upon any sinister respects, but desired to prefer them, whom he judged most worthy and most hopeful to do Christ service there: and therefore being persuaded that M. Gataker might (both in regard of his gravity and vast Scholastical abilities) be a choice ornament of that University, and a fair Copy for others to write by, he was very desirous to place him there. But this good man (though often importuned by many friends, to accept of the motion) according to his accustomed modesty, with many thanks unto the Earl, refused to undertake that place of much honor, service, and outward advantage, pleading together with his unworthiness, the weakness of his body by reason of age, and thereupon his inability to take journeys. And because he looked upon himself as having one foot in the grave, he humbly desired, that a younger man might be thought upon, more likely to be long serviceable than himself, in that place of great eminency and trust. And indeed the sense of his own weakness was not a vain presage of his decays, for not long after he was again surprised with the Colick, which before had shaken him and made his crazy body less able to endure new conflicts: and these were so sharp, that his restauration appeared desperate, not only to his other friends, but also to his Physicians. Yet it pleased God chastening him sore, not to give him over unto death. His studies which seemed to have been as his meat and drink in his health, were his physic too, when he was sick; for while he was confined to his chamber, he fitted for the world the Dissertation de Tetragrammato, and a Grammatical discourse de Bivocalibus. And though this for the subject be not comparable with the other, yet it may be averred that what he did by the bye, and for the refreshment of his languishing body and mind, was more worth than the main work of many students.

But after a long time of being prisoner to his own home, he by God's assistance recovered so much strength as to go to God's house. And now he believed himself bound to employ his Ministerial gifts in God's service: Therefore he again adventured into the Pulpit, where he spent himself so far, that he strained a vein in his lungs, for which being then about Seventy three years old, he suffered an emission of blood, by which and other means God enabled him to overpass that danger. But when he had recruited his veins and sinews with fresh ability, he unwilling to fall under the woe for not preaching, acted more according to the willingness of the spirit than proportionably to the weakness of his flesh, till a relapse into that spitting of blood (for which he again permitted a vein to be opened for revulsion,) laid on him the necessity of forbearing the Pulpit. But he never gave over the administration of Sacraments, nor his usual short discourses at Funerals suitable to the occasion (whenever he was solicited unto them,) though those shorter exercises of his Lungs were painful and wasteful of that oil, which like a burning light he spent for enlightening others. The main of his time now was spent in study, and that designed not to a mere entertainment of himself in a quiet privacy, but to the public benefit of the present Church and posterity, as, among other Works, those exquisite Annotations on the Prophecies of Isaiah, and of Jeremy with his Lamentations, do abundantly testify. And we should have gained more by his latest industry, if the malicious slanders of the enemies to the truth had not diverted his studies to some necessary Apologies. Neither did he, being disenabled to preach, desert his flock, or betray it into the power of Wolves, that would make a prey of precious souls: For troubled at the apprehension of the possibility that the foundation which he had laid (after the example of the wise master-builder S^t Paul) might either not be built upon, or ripped up, he retained the Title of Rector with a charge beyond the Revenue (as it was sometime paid,) till provision was made of a faithful and orthodox Minister to whom he might devolve both burden and benefit.

To his care of feeding his flock in public, very agreeable was his diligence to instruct his family in private: for on Friday night weekly he did expound after supper that short Catechism which he had published for the use of his Parishioners; in which course he so laid forth the Nature and Attributes of God, the conditions of man entire and corrupt, the means of his fall and recovery, the nature of Faith and Repentance, with the doctrine of the Sacraments, that his Parlour was one of the best schools for a young student to learn Divinity. And indeed his house was a private seminary for divers young Gentlemen of this Nation, and more foreigners did resort to him and sojourn with him, to receive from him advice and advancement in their studies: And many that afterwards were eminent in the Churches both here and abroad, were brought up under his eye at least, as Paul was at Gamaliels feet.

Persons of note that had been his Assistants;

M. Young. M. Goodal Minister at Horton by Colebrook. M. Symonds, (of whom yet in these later times of division M. Gataker hath been observed to say, It was pity that our Church had lost him, intimating his turning aside to ways of separation.) Mr. Grayle, and others yet living laborers in God's vineyard.

Of foreigners that sojourned with him, and were as ambitious of being entertained by him, as of being admitted to an Academy, these were some:

M. Thyloin, after a reverend Pastor of the Dutch Church in London, (whose Son was brought by his Mother but a fortnight afore M. Gatakers decease, entreating the same good office in the behalf of him, which the Father had with much comfort enjoyed.) M. Peters, M. And. Demetrius, M. Hornbeck, M. Rich, M. Swerd, M. Wittefrungel, M. Severinus Benzon, M. George De Mey, D. Treschovius.

The strength of his Memory was extraordinary, as may appear by this demonstration (viz.) That though he used no Common-place book; yet he had in readiness whatsoever he had read, as his manifold quotations do manifest.

His gifts for Edification may be conjectured by his Works extant, in which he hath shown himself most like the ingenuous and industrious Bee, for the rare extraction of all manner of knowledge from almost all Authors, and the solid digestion of it first, and then storing it up for the public good. His polite literature was admired by the great lights of Learning abroad, as the excellent Salmasius and others, with whom he held correspondence. And the exercise of it with condescension to children hath been enjoyed with wonder and pleasure at his visitation at Tunbridg School with the Right Worshipful Company of Skinners the worthy Patrons thereof. That, which made all his knowledge both useful and grateful, was, that he was neither vain in ostentation, nor morose, nor illiberal in reservation. But beyond all he sacrificed his Talents to God, while he made Hagar serve Sarah, and contributed the Egyptian spoils (all his foreign Learning) to the building of the Tabernacle: for with a strange felicity, he made his human literature, (both his moral and critical studies,) become subservient to Religion, and instrumental to the explication of heavenly Truths.

His graces of Sanctification were very eminent in all conditions, to all purposes, and toward all relations. In his life, as to his private course, most remarkable were his Piety, Humility and Charity.

His Piety appeared, not only by his diligence in preaching, but also by his own frequenting God's Ordinances dispensed by others; in order to which he did once at least weekly repair to some Lecture in London, so long as he had liberty to look beyond the bounds of his own Parish. A sign of that Piety, was his great devotion in observing the Lord's day, which he consecrated totally (excepting the seasons of repast) unto holy employments. And a fruit of it was his free contribution upon divers occasions to the maintaining of the Lord's house of Prayer. And because there is a connection of sacred persons and things, his love to religious and faithful Ministers may be looked upon as an act of Piety as well as of Charity.

An evident instance of his zeal for God's glory, was a constant consideration of God's Churches abroad, with a diligent inquiry after their estate, and a tender sense of their affliction, which begat that meditation on Amos 6. 6. entitled Sorrow for Zion His eager desire of a Reformation of things amiss amongst us, was doubtless acceptable to God, though this sinful nation is yet unworthy to have it satisfied. One special and proper effect of his Piety, I take to be that Holiness of life expressed in a constant tenor of good duties, with the abridgment of his liberty in things indifferent, especially of recreations (for he understood no recreation besides study, and made the amaener part of studies, the sauce to the more austere) that he might give no scandal to the good, nor encouragement to the bad, citing often those two golden Rules of S^t Paul, All things are lawful, but all things are not convenient or expedient; and, All things are lawful, but all things edify not.

1. In that low esteem he had of his own gifts, which all that knew him admired. He was a true Moses, that took not any notice of the shining luster of his own countenance: like a fair ear of Corn loaden with grain, he bended his head downward: for he had nothing of the Pharisical temper, either to advance himself, or to vilify his meaner-gifted brethren.

2. In his freedom from ambition of outward advantages; for he declined not only large means in the Country, but also both Ecclesiastical dignities, and Courtly preferments. For he studiously waved the counsel of some that had given notice of him to that hopeful Prince Henry (whom God only shown to this Land, and snatched away to himself,) and had it in design to make way for his being admitted Chaplain to his Highness. For the same reason he constantly declined public appearances, so that he could not without much reluctance, be drawn by those who had interest in him unto more solemn Assemblies.

3. In his meek conversation with the meanest Christians, for he refused not to treat with the poorest Christian that repaired unto him for counsel or satisfaction.

His Charity was large, though for the most part secret, both in giving and forgiving to poor persons; for he would not permit it to blaze, only allowed it to shine, when his example was requisite to lighten and lead others to glorify God and gratify men. In redemption of Captives, relief of poor Protestants, especially those of the Ministry; to the repairs of public or common losses and general calamities, and to the setting forward of any good work, he was strangely liberal, the fruit whereof the Lord returned into his own bosom, according to his own word, that the liberal shall be made fat. For he did not so exhaust himself in his life, but that in his last Will, he did also bequeath unto the poor of the Parish of Redrith 50^{lb}, to Ten of his Brethren in the Ministry, whose wants and distresses, especially if occasioned by the iniquity of the times, he did consider with compassion, 50^{lb}; i. e. to each of them 5^{lb}; and to eight Widows of Ministers 5^{lb} apeece, in all 40^{lb} to them. Thus his good works both went before him, and followed him also to Heaven, whereby likewise he hath left behind him the luster of a good Name, for the imitation of them who survive.

Justice is presupposed to Charity, for God hates robbery forsacrifice. And M^r Gataker was exactly just in giving every man his due, though he remitted of his own right very frequently, so that he was according to the Hebrew phrase, imitated by the writers of the N. T. a just man, that is, a kind, equitable person, of a mild disposition; no severe exacter of his own, and a free dispenser of God's gifts, so that his Righteousness endures forever, both to his honor upon earth, and to his happiness in Heaven.

In and about his death, to which the course of his declining days leads us, eminent were his Patience and Faith, the latter attended with a deep sense of his own sins, which he acknowledged unto God, and to him only was that confession needful: for as to men his conversation was, as a Bishops ought to be, irreprovable.

The first stage to his decease (for morhus est via ad mortem) was a fainting fit that surprised him on Friday night July 7th, or rather on Saturday morning July 8th. This he made no great account of (for he disturbed not the rest of a servant by calling for assistance) because he had at sundry times such deliquia or faintings, wherein he gave Nature leave to work out her victory over those vapors or viscus humors that oppressed her. Yet thus far he made use of it, that he compared his infirmity to that of Seneca, which according to his relation, the Physicians of that age called meditationem mortis, and wished it might prove to him a preparation for his dissolution. The indisposition not ceasing with that fit, discovered itself within a short time to be a Tertian, which how gentle soever, yet falling upon a person of his age and crazy temper (that had long supported a weak frame with a very regular course of diet) made his condition doubtful to his Physician, one of learning and worth, that employed his best care and skill about that Patient, that he looked on as a considerable Person to the whole Church.

July 17. Having published his Will, and taken such order as he thought fit for the settlement of his outward estate, he composed himself to God. His Tertian, growing too strong for Nature and Art both, resolved itself into an almost continued Fever, the extreme heat whereof was very painful: Yet during those conflicts he shown a sweet calmness of mind, a heart weaned from the world, to which he had no affection, though he had a remembrance exactly serving for ordering his Charity even to the last; and in one word, he represented a soul wholly submitting to God's good pleasure. He professed more then once, that no outward thing troubled him so much, as the condition of that Reverend Minister M^r Sainthill, who had but lately undertaken M^r Gatakers Charge, upon the uncertain title of Life, which now failing so early, besides the expectation of his friends, that Minister he foresaw was likely to be unsettled and to suffer some inconvenience.

Though friends and Physicians give him encouraging words at visits, yet he sensible of his inward decays, could not be flattered into vain hopes of long continuance, earnestly contending that he was not to expect miracles. His expectation of God's dismissal was so fixed, that being consulted whether he would appoint any one Person to perform the last office for him; he not startled at the question, appointed M^r Ashe to be entreated to undertake that work, because he had done the same at his last Wives funerals. And one opportunity casually offered itself to set forward that design: for July 18. M^r Ashe out of a kind respect to M^r Gataker, sent him two Funeral Sermons preached by him, one at M^r Whitaker's, the other at D^r Spurstows Childes interment. This gave occasion to M^r Gataker (in the return for that favor) to request the last that he could be capable of. Upon the receipt of a Letter to that purpose, Mr. Ashe on the Saturday following, visited his dear and dying friend; who then told him, That he found him conflicting with his last adversary. He knew the sting was pulled out, but nature would struggle. These and other expressions M^r Ashe writ down and related at the end of his Sermon.

That day being 22th of July in the afternoon, he called for some Papers of M^r Baxter's, sent to him by the Author, with a desire of his judgment concerning them: He wished some short Notes (for the perusal of them had been his last work) to be read over to him, in which something he altered; and having dictated a Letter to that his Learned and much Reverend Friend, appointed that with the Animadversions enclosed to be sent unto him: So vigorous was his mind in a body drooping and dropping into the dust.

He had now given over the use of Physic, as to any prolongation of life, for he said he would struggle no more, because he found, that what was prescribed for the refreshing of nature, oppressed it rather, therefore he would wait the Lord's leisure. An ancient servant that attended on him, desiring leave to rectify the bedcloathes, and saying withal, S^r, Your head doth not lie right; he answered, It will lie right in my Coffin.

July 25. at One in the morning, death began to seize on his left foot, from which the spirits retiring, he felt the deadness of that part, and a very sharp pain in the part of the leg adjoining to it. He called for his Son, and told him he feared he should have a difficult death. He then commanded two Surgeons to be sent for to look upon his leg, whom he required to tell him, whether or no his foot were any whit discoloured. It seems he had conceived some fear of a Gangrene, but being satisfied that there could not be any ground for such an apprehension, he rested with patience. In the evening of that day, being visited by M^r Sainthil, and lying in great anguish with violence of heat, he prayed for pity and patience, support here, and a comfortable issue.

July 26. Early in the morning, full of pain, gasping and panting, he cried out, How long Lord, how long? come speedily. But though death had made an incroachment upon his outward perishing part, yet his inward man felt no decay: for with a full use of reason, he that morning ordered the continuation of a weekly relief to certain poor, and also of some small monthly Pensions to some Widows for a season, caused his Physician to be consulted about taking something that might procure rest, was erected to a more cheerful disposition; inquired after News, and discoursed freely, yet confessed himself to be in pain. About three of the Clock that afternoon, feeling some great change after that putting forth of nature, he called for his Sister, Son and Daughter, to receive his last charge: Thus he spake unto them; My heart fails, and my strength fails, but God is my fortress and the strong rock of my salvation: Into thy hands therefore I commend my soul; for thou hast redeemed me oh God of Truth. To his Son he turned his discourse thus; Son you have a great charge, look to it, instruct your Wife and family in the fear of God, and discharge your Ministry conscientiously. To his Sister (a Gentlewoman two years elder then himself) he said; Sister, I thought you might have gone before me, but God calls for me first, I hope we shall meet in Heaven, I pray God bless you. His Daughter he admonished to mind the world less and God more, for that all things without piety and the true fear of God are worth nothing. He advised that his Son Draper (being a man of means) would entertain some godly Minister into his house, to teach his children and instruct his family. He exhorted them all to concord: which he hoped the rather, because he had clearly settled his Estate, so as to prevent differences. He enlarged himself in each a little, wishing all to lay to heart the words of a dying man. After this he desired that all should withdraw, and leave him to his rest, which he hoped was at hand: but all his conflicts were not yet accomplished.

July 27. His voice began to be less intelligible, the putrid preternatural heat having furred up his mouth, as is usual in Fevers: yet his understanding and senses also were very quick and active. About six of the Clock in the evening, he called for his Son to recommend his soul unto God by prayer, and endeavored to express what he desired, but not so clearly as to be well understood: yet by his gestures he gave assurance, that he understood perfectly, and concurred fervently with the devotions used on his behalf. Within an hour after, nature being quite spent, he gave up the Ghost, and was translated into that Rest which he so often and earnestly had desired to find in another world, because he could obtain none in this.

Thus after the 43 years inspection of this pious and diligent Pastor of Redrith, he left his flock, returning to the great and chief Shepherd of our souls, from his gracious hands to receive an incorruptible Crown of glory: And of his flock I may take up the words of Greg. Naz. to Basil, concerning the condition of that Church whereof Gregory's Father had been Bishop; You see how full of sadness and trouble this destitute flock appears—making question whether ever it shall enjoy another discreet shepherd, but very confident it shall not receive an equal to their deceased Paster, and resolved to acquiesce satisfied in their lot, if they can obtain one that shall be not much worse.

For his Person, the express whereof (though often importuned by deer friends) he would never allow to be taken either by pencil or sculpture: He was of a middle stature, of a thin body, and of a lively countenance, fresh complexion, that looked young when he came to teach at Lincolns Inn, and yet was grey betimes, that made him be thought elder then he was, because he had long appeared ancient in the eye of the world; of a choicely temperate diet; of a free and cheerful conversation, addicted to study, but not secluding himself from fit company; of a quick apprehension, sharp reason, solid judgment, vast memory, which by God's mercy continued fresh to the last of his days: He was helluo librorum, one that did not vainly increase his Library for show, but chose Books for use, which he made of them so happily, that he had conquered a strange portion of Learning, and made it serve him upon all occasions. He was not so great a Treasurer, as a free dispenser of those riches of the mind, which he did communicate readily, expeditely, clearly. He was an ornament of the University, and of that Society designed for the study of Law; a light of the Church, the Salt of the place where he abode: a loving Husband, a discreet Parent, a faithful Friend, a kind Neighbor, a courteous entertainer of strangers, a candid encourager of Students, a stout Champion for the Truth, yet a lover of Peace, preserving the unity of Charity where there was a difference of judgment; an adversary to novel fancies as well as to antiquated superstitions in Religion: of a Christian magnanimity to despise the world, and therefore resolute through bad report as well as good to maintain a clear conscience. Briefly, he was a faithful Shepherd, and a fit myrror for Pastors, as well as an exact pattern for people; who having almost completed 80 years, departed full of life, but being dead yet speaks in his living monuments of sound Learning.

A PIOUS EPIGRAM OF M^r GATAKER:

Presumed to be His, both because it is a just expression of the intimate frame of his soul, and because it is found written with some alterations of the words by his own hand, and that not long before his end, as appears by the spelling.

I Thirst for thirstiness; I weep for tears;

Well pleasd I am to be displeasd thus:

The only thing I fear is want of fears;

Suspecting I am not suspicious.

I cannot choos but live, because I die;

And, when I am not ded, how glad am I!

Yet, when I am thus glad for sense of pain,

And careful am, lest I should careless be,
Then do I griev for being glad again,
And fear lest carelessness take care from me.
Amids these wrestles thoughts this rest I find,
For those that rest not here, there's rest behind.

In Funere THOME GATAKERI S. T. B. Viri Doctissimi Octogenarii Vegeti & venerandi Senis.

Qualiter ales Arabs longae pertaesa senectae,
Et cupiens vitam morte parare novam,
Undi{que} congesto pretiosa in funera thure,
Ardet in optato victima grata rogo:
Sic inter Sacros famae & virtutes odores

ON THE Death of the most Reverend, Learned, Holy M^r THOMAS GATAKER.

NExt to my dear, and dearer Uncle than
I could express though I were more then Man;
Whose Life by all so preciously esteemed
I with mine own would gladly have redeemed:
And were not Death well undergone to save
So great a Treasure from the hungry Grave?
Next unto Him, my Soul doth mourning wear
For his dear Friend the Famous Gataker.
Till now the Adage I did scarce believe,
Which says, To fronts we must no credence give.
To my great grief too true I find it now,
So much deceived by his smoother brow;
Which with the Rose and Lily that did deck
His, and would have become'd a Ladies cheek,
Did promise fair, and made me hope that He Might raise eight Decads to a Century.
Doubtless most perfect was the Harmony
Of's Elements, as was his Symmetry:
Thus Body and Soul in him were bravely met
And matched, but that the one though very neat,
No large dimensions had, the other was
More like an Angel clos'd in such a case.
A neat small mansion this doth entertain
Sometimes a stately Lady with her Train.
He was (ah killing word, He was! alas,
That now I cannot say, He is, but was.)

A Living Star, and that as eminent
As any shined i'th British Firmament.
But that's too modest and angust; 'Tis thought
That even Europe, though so fully fraught
With rarely Learned Children, yet hath none
That could in all things parallel This Son.
Believe I do, more truly none then He Could ere be called a Living Library.
His industry long since had treasured
All Learning in his comprehensive Head;
The crucified three Languages spake aloud
His matchless skill, and seemed of Him proud.
The Arts a better Master have not known;
The Fathers, Councils, Schoolmen, were his own.
All Neoterick Worthies he did know
As perfectly as they themselves could do.
Now though he were (none ever more then He)
A perfect Body of Divinity,
And such a Phoenix, yet his Lowlinesse
Was such as if he had been nothing less.
Great Parts and Acquisitions commonly Attended are with a proud Tympany,
So were not his, but such that God he knew,
And knew himself, and his mean Brother too.
Nor did his worth lie buried in his Breast,
As Misers Gold's confined to their Chest:
His light did shine as freely as the Suns,
Or as the water from the fountain runs;

Witness his Pulpit-pains, which never did cease
Till Sickness served him with a Writ of Ease,
And pains in's house, which a Gymnasium
Or Schola Illustris was, whither did come
Many from far, whose joy it was to sit,
And reap rare notions at Gamaliels feet,
And Pains at his Pen; his most transcendent Pen,
Which doth demonstrate Him a Man of Men.
As God did once the Cherubims employ,
Arm'd with a flaming Sword to guard the way
O'th Tree of Life, So did he this man raise
With his choice Pen to vindicate his ways,
And sacred Truth; which none could ever do
More faithfully, for he refused to know
His dearest friends, (as Levi once,) though none
Were more exact in that Relation.
He knew that Truth most Lovely is, and that
What ere we weigh, It must preponderate.
And as his Pen was often militant
(Nor less triumphant,) so edificant
It also was; like those blest Builders, who Stood on their Guard, and stoutly built too.
What Pious, Pretious Peeces have there come
(All trimmd with richest Fringe) out of his Loom!
But above all his Notes on the first pair
Of Major Prophets justly valued are,
As the most golden Key that ere was made
To open God's deep Treasure therein laid.

How doth the Church in Them rejoice! how grieve
That he did not a greater measure give
Of such like Quintessential Annotations!
Too soon he left us in the Lamentations.
But now he leaves us worse leaving us quite,
And bidding us for evermore Good Night.
It must be night when such a Sun doth set,
A Night of Woe and Lamentation Great.
Which is the more, because we greatly fear
We nere shall see another GATAKER.
Whose Grave may proudly say, Lo, here doth lie
Great Gataker, that University.

Artibus excultus, scripta relictâ docent.
Praecipue ornabat divina scientia mentem,
At{que} huic juncta soror religionis amor.
Fidus praeco Dei, humani figmenta cerebri
Rejecit, pendens semper ab ore Dei.
Sincere populo divina oracula tradens
Ad Christum docuit quae via recta ferat.
Exemplum pietatis erat, virtutis imago,
Doctrinae culmen, religionis apex.

Cum virtute at{que} art alios superaverit omnes,
Haec, dubium, laus an latior illa si•t.
Sed quid ego conor Whitakeri exponere laudes,

*Quem laudare satis nemo poeta queat?
Quid laudo, cujus cunctas celebratur ad oras
Nomen, quae Christi numina sancta colunt:
Cujus scripta diserta, opus aere perennius omni,
Jam passim volitant docta per ora virûm?
Scripserat haec quondam Gatakerus de Whitakero,
Heros quum superas scanderet ill domos.
Scriberet haec pariter Whitakerus de Gatakeri,
Si nunc in vivis esset ut ante fuit.
Convenisse tibi constat Whitakere, vicissim
Quám been convenient & Gatakere tibi!*

ON THE Death of the Excellently Learned and Pious M^r GATAKER.

IF Man created Upright so had stood,
Should This, though less Ill, yet have had more Good?
For what, while militant on earth, he knew,
Angels themselves desire to look into.
And above Natures best his Grace so high,
Hath of her worst obtained the Victory.
Whereto while Death itself Perfection gives,
By's Doctrine and Example still he lives,
With us too: though departed, that is, gone,
(Having learned all here) where more is to be known.

Expirantis GATAKERI Apostrophe ad Fratres superstites, Pastores Anglicanos.

THOMAS GATAKERUS, Anagr. Urge, mak hast to us.

Farewell; bright-shining-stars! yet ere I part,
Ile leave the sense of my last gasping heart,
With you dear souls: For strayt my spirit must Be thron'd in bliss, my body turned to dust.
Behold the wildbore-heretics, whose pour
Deeply's engaged God's vineyard to devour.
Urge, and be valiant: Noah's now had need
Prove mighty Nimrods to run down this breed.
Behold ye Fox-like-Schismatics, who trade
God's vine to ruin; Ah our Church is made
A den of theeving Foxes: These conspire
Like Samson's Foxes to set all on fire.
Urge here, pursue them by all means you may,
Dumb-dogs prove useless to devour this prey.
Since Sheep-skin-Wolves do ramble; Sheepheards look
Now to your Lambs, use well your Sheepheards crook.
The Tiger-Ranters rage: This Hectors face
Is much disguis'd to th'Churches sad disgrace.
Pluck off his vizard, and unrip his state,
That all God's flock may see this Tigers fate.
Rome's ravenous blood-hounds, from their hellish den
Are rays'd by th'sound of th'Devils horn: oh then
You Israel's Watchmen! their hid traces find;
Wound them, and make them leave their prey behind.
The Pope hath got Arithmetic in's Crown,
Who multiplies his Popedom up and down.
Each Church erects a chair: 'tis sad to see

So many plead infallibilitye.
Divide and multiply, this Artist cries,
From such division, do my sums arise.
United force is strong, let your band be
A threefold cord of love and unity.
See and condole our shaken Churches state,
Which walking-earth-quake totter'd have of late:
These sure would counted be an heavenly nation,
'Cause all their motion is mere trepidation.
Who trembles at God's word shall favor find Whilist word-less Quakers shall go down the wind.
Urge here, fear not, i'th strength of God be strong,
A quaking host can never stand out long.
The Church a Lily is 'mongst thorns: oh strive
To lop these thorns and make the Lily thrive.
Ye Pilots are i'th'Churches Ship; sail on Though through a sea of blood to mount Zion.
And now methinks grim death 'gins to appear,
Which once was dismal, now my soul doth cheer.
Its sting is gone, and now 'twill me advance,
To just men's souls made perfect, in one glance.
My last sand's run, my life i'le breathe out thus,
Urge Souls in preaching and mak hast to us.
Urge God in praying and mak hast to us.
Urge Christ in all things and mak hast to us.
J. STILLINGFLEETE D. Joh. Coll. Cant. Socius.

On the Death of that Reverend and eminently Learned Divine M^r THOMAS GATAKER.

Who's this that lies thus breathless? doleful sight!

The worthy Gataker; That beauteous light
Hath left our Hemisphere. Ah! he is gone,
Who was the glory deemed of Helicon.
The Muses joy is fled; a magazine
Of Learning's here blown up. The Sisters nine,
Could they but rate their loss, (such hath it been)
With tears they'd make another Hippocrene.
Poor house of clay! oh, how it empty lies!
The furniture's removed to Paradise.
Angels have hence convigh'd the jewel-mind;
Nought but the cabinet is left behind.
Adieu young Nestor; seldom have we seen
An head so gray, and parts so fresh and green.
His speech to deck such flowers he could bring,
In ages winter one would swear 'twere spring:
But now, for florid language, we may find,
Dumbe Rhetoric; with silence cries her: mind,
Oh! mind your latter ends; death's sometimes late,
But who could ere his life perpetuate?
We thought his preaching done, but here we have

LIVING LOVES BETWIXT CHRIST AND DYING CHRISTIANS. A SERMON Preached At M. Magdalene Bermondsey in Southwark, near London, June 6. 1654. At the Funeral of that faithful Servant of Christ Mr. Jeremiah Whitaker, Minister of the Gospel, and Pastor of the Church there.

With a Narative of his Exemplarily holy Life and Death.

By SIMEON ASHE, his much endeared Friend and Brother.

Together with POEMS and ELEGIES on his Death, by divers Ministers in the City of LONDON.

The Righteous perish and no man layeth it to heart, and merciful men are taken away, none considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come. He shall enter into Peace, they shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness.

The Licencer's Epistle to the READER.

IT is reported in the life of Ambrose, that when he heard of the death of any holy Ministers, he would weep very bitterly. The like I read of Philo, that when he came into any Town or Village, and heard of the death of any good man there dwelling, he would mourn exceedingly, because of the great loss that place and the whole Church of Christ had received thereby. How much more cause have we of this age to lament our condition, who have in few years lost so many precious Saints, and so many Reverend, Learned, and godly Ministers; Surely this sad providence of God speaks with a loud voice, that miseries and calamities are hasting upon this Nation. For the righteous perish (saith the Prophet) and no man layeth it to heart, and merciful men are taken away, none considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come. Thus Austin died a little before Hippo (wherein he dwelt) was taken. And Pareus, before Heilderbergh was sacked. And Luther immediately before Germany was overrun with war and bloodshed. And now of late years many eminent Lights have been extinguished in this Nation, to fore signify the great darkness that is coming upon us. Amongst which, I cannot but reckon my reverend brother Mr. Jeremiah Whitaker, at whose Funeral this ensuing Sermon was preached. If I should enter upon his commendation, I might truly say what Nazianzen doth of his sister Gorgonia, That I have more cause to fear least I should speak below, then above the Truth; for he was a burning and a shining light in this our Israel; a Messenger and an Interpreter, one among a thousand; a Bezaleel in God's Tabernacle, a true Nathanael, that by his integrity, humility, constancy, charity, publicness, and peaceableness of spirit, and by his diligence and faithfulness in preaching the Gospel, made his life both amiable and desirable. He was (yet not he, but the grace of God with him) 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .And though I will not say what Nazianzen saith of Athanasius, that to commend him, were to commend Virtue, because all Virtues were contracted in him; yet this I will say (which is also said of Athanasius, That he was) 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , An Adamant and a Load-stone. To all that conversed with him he was as a Load-stone to draw their hearts to love him: but in the cause of God, & in reference to the truths of Christ he is as an unconquerable Adamant. He was a Jeremiah both in mourning for and witnessing against the sins of the times. He was a second Whitaker, though not so eminent in learning as to be (what is said of him) Mundi miraculum, Academiae oraculum; yet he was (which is also said of him) sound in the faith, one that had no private opinion, that did not in veteri viâ novam semitam quaerere, seek out new paths of his own, but kept the old way and the old path, That had a great wit without any mixture of madness.

It is very disputable to me, whether he preached more by the heavenlynesse of his Doctrine, or by the holiness of his life. Sure I am, he had this peculiar dispensation, That he preached as effectually by his death, as by his life or Doctrine. For the manner of his sickness and death speaketh to all that saw it, or shall now know it by reading this Sermon.

1. That the best of men are subject to the worst of Diseases: That all things come alike to all, that no man knoweth love or hatred by all that is before him.

2. That though the Lord cause his children to pass through the waters and through the fire, yet he will be with them, so as the waters shall not overflow them, nor the fire burn them. Though they are troubled on every side, yet they are not distressed; though perplexed, yet not in despair, though persecuted, yet not forsaken; though cast down, yet not destroyed. For so great was the patience that God measured out to this our dear Brother, that though he groaned, yet he never grumbled; though he often mourned, yet he never murmured; nay, though he often roared by reason of the greatness of his pain, yet he always justified and magnified God; and this he did so constantly, and in such a degree and proportion, that as it is said of Job, so it will be said by the Saints that succeed us, for their mutual consolation and encouragement; Ye have heard of the patience of Whitaker: He had an ulcerated flesh, but a sound and whole spirit, and that made him bear his infirmity; he had a stone in the bladder, but a very tender and soft heart; he had a body gangren'd, but a soul unbeleppred with sin. I heard him often say with thankfulness, That under all his bodily sufferings, he had a blessed calmness, and quietness in his spirit; that God spake peace; that though he roared for pain, yet the devil was chained up from roaring upon him.

It was no small delight to me to behold the tears that were shed at his Funeral. Not that I was glad that there was such cause of sorrow, but to see (in these days, especially wherein the godly Ministry is so much undervalued) a Minister that neither lived undesired, nor died unlamented: of whom it may be said, as is of Stephen, That devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him. But I will not detain the Reader from beholding these things more largely related in the following Sermon, by one that was his fidus Achates, and as dear to him as Jonathan to David. The Lord sanctify this example to all that shall hear of it, and fit us his Ministers that supervieve, to preach and live as he did, To fight a good fight, to finish our course, and to keep the faith, that so we may at last obtain a crown of righteousness which the righteous Judge will give at the last day to all that love his appearing.

So prayeth Your servant in the work of the Ministry EDM. CALAMY.

To the Right Honorable ELIZABETH, Countess Dowager of Exeter.

MADAM,

How irresistible is the power of love and importunity? The holy Scriptures do plentifully manifest, that divine love doth set God's All (whether within or without himself) on work for his children's good, and that his children's importunity hath in all Ages prevailed with his Omnipotency, to appear for their comfort: And multitudes of daily experience do evidence the prevalency of these two Arguments among the sons of men. My self makes one instance for the verifying hereof, by preaching at Reverend, worthy Mr. Whitaker's Funeral, and by printing my Sermon with the Narrative of his memorable life; both which come abroad with enlargements; because straits of time, and the discomposednesse of my spirit through grief, would not suffer me thus fully to dilate upon in the Pulpit. Madam, I am confident that your Ladyship can of your own knowledge, not only attest the truth of most passages in my Narrative, but add also much more from your own observation, which will render his memory precious unto posterity.

And will your Honor give me leave to give some further account unto the world, wherefore I have presumed to dedicate unto your Ladyship these expressions of my great respect to my precious much endeared brother Mr. Jeremiah Whitaker; Gratitude is at the bottom of this Dedication. Madam, As I shall always really acknowledge your Honors favor towards my worthless self; so I judge it meet to make known upon this occasion that more then many thanks are most due unto your Ladyship from all Mr. Whitaker's Relations, for your many and great testimonies of your constant respects unto him all his life long since your first acquaintance with him. I have often heard him mention before the Lord with praises and prayers, your Honors abundant kindnesses, both unto himself and his family, which I believe are on record in heaven to be fully recompensed in due time, because they were the products of your sincere love unto him, as the faithful Minister of Jesus Christ. Madam, there are not many who be so deeply sensible as your selfe of the great loss sustained by the death of this holy man of God: What mine own loss is, I had rather express it before the Lord, then publish it unto the world. He was (Madam) a faithful servant to your immortal soul, the well are whereof God in mercy hath given you to mind much more then all matters sublunary whatsoever. In reference hereunto, he was your wise counselor, in all your doubts and difficulties, your compassionate comforter; in all straits and sorrows, your vigilant Physician to prevent spiritual sickness and infection; your zealous Incourager in all ways of holy service, and a daily Remembrancer of you and yours before the Throne of Grace. Though these things speak your loss, which may warrantably afflict your heart, yet I beseech you (good Madam) consider with comfort, that notwithstanding this bucket be broken (as Dr. Preston was wont to express it) nevertheless the fountain of light, life, grace, strength, comfort and satisfaction is still at hand, ever full, and always flowing. He who is now removed out of the Land of the living (to be serviceable by preaching, praying, conference no more) was only one of those golden pipes through which the God of your mercies conveyed relief sweetly and seasonably unto your soul: the well-head is not removed, and many other choice conveyances of grace and consolation from Christ be still continued to you. Let this therefore be the language of your faith. The Lord liveth, and blessed be the ◊ o my salvations, who will never forsake nor fail the soul which in humility and faithfulness doth depend upon his Majesty. And (Madam) Mr. Whitaker his rich receipts of much sanctifying grace, strong confidence, invincible patience, undaunted courage, un-interrupted peace, with pure elevating joys from the Lord may encourage the hopes of the poorest Christians to expect great things from heaven, according to their necessities and desires, because God is no respecter of persons, but free and liberal in the communications of his peculiar goodness. These are the words of his grace, Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it, Psal. 81. 10. If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me (as the Scripture hath said) out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water, Joh. 7. 37, 38. The Almighty hath given you some tastes of that incomparable fruit which comes from the Land of promise, that you may be encouraged to hold on in the way thither with cheerfulness and perseverance. Madam, It is no small addition unto your honor here, and it will undoubtedly make to your happiness hereafter, that you do own God in unwearied attendance upon his sacred Ordinances, laying forth yourself for his name faithfully with that prudence, self-denial, and plainness of heart wherewith he hath adorned you, through his rich mercy in Jesus Christ. Madam, I humbly beg pardon for this my boldness, and crave leave to subscribe myself

(Madam)

Your Honors humble Servant, SIMEON ASHE.

JOHN 11. 11.

Our friend Lazarus sleepeth.

THESE are the words of Christ concerning Lazarus: and they speak 1. His relation. 2. His dissolution.

First, the relation was friendship, wherein we are to observe,

1. How far this friendship was extended, viz. both unto Christ, and to his Disciples, our friend. It is not my friend, or your friend, but our friend, both yours and mine.

2. That this friendship was acknowledged by Christ himself, not only while Lazarus was yet alive, but even now when he was dead, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth.

In the second part of the Text (viz. Lazarus's dissolution) we may note

1. The truth asserted (viz.) that Lazarus though a friend both to Christ and to his Disciples, yet he was dead.

2. The Metaphor whereby it is expressed, which is taken from natural sleep. He sleepeth.

3. The notice which our Savior took of Lazarus his decease. This he reporteth unto his Disciples, he saith unto them▪ Our friend Lazarus sleepeth.

Thus from this plain division of the Text, I proceed unto the observations which do from hence offer themselves naturally unto our consideration. And the doctrines will be six in number, viz. three from each part, into which the Text hath been divided.

[Doctr. 1] The first is this, viz. That there is a mutual friendship betwixt Christ and true Christians. Our Lord himself here calleth Lazarus friend. And that this friendship was mutual, it is evident from this history.

First, the love of Lazarus towards the Lord Jesus was witnessed by the many entertainments and hearty welcomes which he received at his house. And the friendship of Christ unto Lazarus is attested by his sisters, formerly, He whom thou lovest is sick, ver. 3. and by this our Evangelist; Jesus loved Martha, and her sister and Lazarus, ver. 5. And the Jews said, Behold how he loved him. ver. 36. yea our Savior himself in the Text calleth him friend.

Now as it was betwixt Christ and Lazarus, so is it likewise betwixt Christ and all real Christians; their friendship is mutual. The word friend expresseth love, and this love hath its vicissitude amongst friends. As tennis balls with rackets are banded and returned to and fro, so love amongst cordial friends hath its intercourse, it is received with acceptance, and returned with requitals. Greater love has no man then this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. This expresseth Christ his love to his Christian friends. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. This speaketh the love and friendship of Christians to Christ. And you must know that this affection of love was not only betwixt Christ and some peculiar Christians, to Christ, as his Disciples and Lazarus; but betwixt him and all other sound-hearted Christians also. When he preached to a very great multitude of people, having warned them to take heed of hypocrisy, he useth this compellation, I say unto you my friends. And long before his incarnation, this was the language of Christ (the essential Wisdom of the Father,) I love them that love me. Whereas it is sometimes said of our friends, that they have only one soul in several bodies▪ it is most true, being applied unto Christ and singlehearted Christians. The Spirit of God dwelleth in them; and if any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.

As friends, being, in point of friendship, acted by the same principles, they will and nill the same things: So it is with Jesus Christ and those who are unfeigned friends unto him. As the Apostle Paul thus advised the Philippians, Let the same mind be in you that was in Christ; so he affirmeth of the Saints at Corinth, that they had the mind of Christ.

The obligations of love are so strong upon friends, that they can heartily say one to another, I am as thou art. The Lord accounted Abraham his friend, and it is considerable how God and Abraham being friends did communicate themselves, with their All unto each other.

As God by way of Covenant promiseth to be an all-sufficient portion unto him, to bless those who bless him, and to curse such who curse him, and to bestow Canaan (the land flowing with milk and honey) upon him: so Abraham gave up himself wholly to be at God's disposing, in regard of his habitation, to dwell where his Majesty would settle him; and in respect of his relations, to command his children and his household after him to keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment. In this manner Christ and believers, they are for each others, with their All, even as for themselves. I am my beloveds (saith the loving, beloved Spouse) and my beloved is mine. They are the same 1. In their wills. As they in things most difficult and cross to themselves (in appearance) do say, The will of the Lord be done; So Christ is ready to speak unto them in reference to the regular motions of their wills, as once to the woman of Canaan, Be it unto thee even as thou wilt.

2. In their desires. As these are their breathings; there is none upon earth that I desire besides thee; So his desires are towards them. Not long before his departure from his Apostles, to evidence his desires of spiritual fellowship with them, He said unto them, with desire I have desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer▪

3 And in their designs. As this is in their eyes and aims, that whether by life or death Christ may be magnified in them: So he will never turn from them to do them good, but will rejoice over them to do them good.

These are brief hints in reference to the doctrine, more generally considered. In the more distinct handling of it, both the branches are to be taken apart, and particularly to be discoursed upon.

And here give me leave to premise the reasons wherefore I shall discourse of this mutual friendship under the notion of love, in a latitude: viz. because, 1. The word Friend (as we already hinted) speaketh love. 2. In this History these phrases signify the same thing; viz. friend Lazarus, and Lazarus loved. 3. And the holy Ghost elsewhere useth these words indifferently, viz. friend, beloved.

The first branch of the doctrine is this, That real rightbred Christians are friends unto Christ His endeared Spouse speaketh this openly; This is my beloved, and this is my friend, O Daughters of Jerusalem. Answerable whereunto is the language of the Gospel-Prophet, a song of my beloved to his vineyard. Let it be noted that Christ is not looked upon and loved as an ordinary friend, but as a friend extraordinary, either a friend already married, or one affected singularly with expectations of marriage. The virgins loveth thee. And indeed, none do love Christ sincerely, who do not love him singularly, superlatively. Let his own words be well weighed; He that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me.

This assertion is bottomed upon good reason, because Christ both in his own personal excellencies, and communicated advantages, is infinitely better than any creature with its fairest amiabilities whatsoever.

Now this their love is not blind, but it aboundeth in all judgment and knowledge, as will be manifest by these four reasons following.

[Reason 1] Because of his incomparable, unparalleled beauties. This account his dear Spouse giveth of her strong inflamed affections; My beloved is white and ruddy, the chiefest amongst a thousand. His head is as the most fine gold. And having metaphorically commended him from the head to the foot, she thus concludeth, This is my beloved, and this is my friend.

His graces which are like to a most fragrant perfume, do in our hearts of all them who are truly spiritual. Because of the savor of thy good ointments, thy Name is as anointment poured forth, therefore do the Virgins love thee. And in the song of conjugal loves, this is rendered as the reason of those sparklings, Thou art fairer than the children of men. As there was not among the children of Israel a goodlier person than Saul (from the shoulders upwards he was higher than any of the people) So Jesus Christ doth wonderfully over-top and exceed in all rich endowments, the most amiable creatures in the world. And as in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty (from the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him) and this might be some reason of David's great love towards him:) So in the Lord Jesus, there are perfect beauties without the least blemishes: He is altogether lovely. No wonder therefore that wise, knowing Christians do choose and value, and embrace him with vigorous loves.

[Reason 2] Because of his famous, magnanimous undertakings and adventures as Mediator, that he might at once advance his Fathers glory, and the happiness of his Elect.

We read that Jonathan's soul was knit to the soul of David, and that he loved him as his own soul, because upon a Duel he had encountered and conquered the Monster Goliath, who had blasphemed God and vilified his people. Now this service was low and inconsiderable, being compared with Christ's renowned exploits, who hand to hand combated with the devil in the wilderness for the space of forty days, who spoiled principalities and Powers, made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in his cross; Who did bear up bravely against the power of darkness to be quell'd under the weight of divine justice to be satisfied, and under the flames of his Fathers displeasure to be quenched. These and the like rare actings of Christ being pondered by Christians do draw forth their hearts in friendship towards him. He himself saith, Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life. And how can new-born Christians, partakers of the divine Nature, be otherwise affected upon the same account towards their blessed Master?

[Reason 3] Because of their manifold rich receipts from Christ. David's heart giveth out loves to the Lord, because upon his prayers he had delivered his eyes from tears, and his feet from falling. Now Christ hath rescued his people from wrath to come, and that without respect to their requests, yea before they sought him.

Our Savior himself giveth this as the reason wherefore the sinful woman loved him, Many sins are forgiven her, therefore she loved much. And Jonathan by this Argument laboreth to win Saul's heart towards David, Because the Lord by him wrought a great salvation to all Israel.

In this respect the Apostle Paul was rationally under the constraint of commanding Loves to Christ, because of quickening grace received by his death.

Now if I should here discover our large enjoyments from Christ, it would abundantly appear to every ingenuous soul, that there is sufficient cause wherefore he should be accounted and affected as an incomparable friend.

By him we are delivered from sin and hell (as is hinted even now) from the curse of the Law, the hater of God, the deadly snares of the world, and the poison-sting of death. We are blessed with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places. We are accepted in the Beloved. He is made unto us Wisdom, Righteousness, Sanctification and Redemption. And all the Promises of God are in him Yea, and in him Amen. How rationally therefore doth living love to Christ spring out of this root?

[Reason 4] Because of their full expectations from him for the future, even unto soul-satisfaction, and that to eternity. Many cheering cordials are handed to Christians from Christ here upon earth; in which regard he doth lie as a bundle of myrrh between their breasts; but he reserveth the best wine for the last. Whatsoever for kind, or for measure the believing Christians comforts are here, yet to be with Christ in heaven will be far better; and this, this in glory is looked for through Christ. This consideration causeth their love unto Christ to break forth in a great flame. Let the words of the Apostle be weighed for the evidence hereof, who having spoken both of the Inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven, as also of the assured Perseverance through God's Power, and all this by Christ, he adds, Whom having not seen, yet ye love. Ingenuous Christians duly weighing the worth of their future happiness, dearly purchased by Christ, and undoubtedly to be possessed by them through Christ, do hereupon practically conclude, that nothing can be imagined more reasonable then this, that they should love him as their special friend.

Thus from confirmation, I proceed to the Application of this Truth by way of Use; which I will propound under three heads; viz. 1. Information. 2. Examination 3. Exhortation.

[Use 1] Sad therefore is their condition who are not loving friends unto Jesus Christ. For doubtless though they be by profession, & in the estimation of others, true Christians; yet they are but only Slips in Christianity. As Judas, &c.

Our Savior speaketh roundly unto such: If God were your Father, you would love me. And if God be not their Father, they are questionless the devils children, children of the curse. How open and express are the words of the Apostle to this purpose? If any man love not the Lord Jesus, lethem be Anathema Maran-atha. The heavy and lasting maledictions of God hang over the heads of all them who love not Christ. This is the great severity of God against such who are not friends unto Christ: and that the righteousness of his Majesty herein may be manifested, I wish that this may be minded, viz. that unfriendliness to the Lord Jesus in Gospel-times (wherein his excellencies & deservings are so fully laid open) doth proceed either from 1. Infidelity. Or 2. Contumacy. Either people hearing from Scripture of Christ's loveliness, do give God the lie to his face by not believing him, or else their disregard of Christ ariseth from malignity and stubbornness of will, though they yield to the report of his incomparable worth. And both these are daring, and God-incensing provocations.

Now if any shall be awakened by these flashes of God's anger, to enquire, Who are to be judged persons void of love to Jesus Christ? I shall refer them for satisfaction to Christ's own words, both the parable, and his exposition of it. The Parable is this, The Citizens hated him, and sent a message after him saying, We will not have this man to reigneover us. And the Application made is thus expressed, Those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring them hither and slay them before me. Therefore all such are proclaimed Christ's enemies, Christ-haters, (even by Christ himself,) who refuse to submit unto him as their Lord and King.

Its no uncharitableness, but judgment according to the Word of truth, to determine those to be no friends unto Christ, whose resolutions are rather to order their lives according to customs, human traditions, their own humors, and the practices of the multitude, then according to the commands and counsels of Christ.

[Use 2] It much concerns us all to examine our friendship unto Christ. To quicken this search, these things are considerable,

1. Because many profess much love outwardly, whose hearts affect him not unfeignedly. As David describeth some counterfeit Courtiers, whose words were soft like oil, when there were drawn swords in their bosoms: Never was Christ more in men's mouths with smooth language then now, when their lives speak treachery against him. Thus Judas calleth him Master, and giveth him a kiss, yet was no friend. Have I not chosen twelve (saith Christ) and yetone is a devil? What Sugered words did the devil use, when he designed the ruin of Adam, and of all his posterity!

2. Because the comforts of the Gospel do appertain to them alone whose love is without dissimulation. The Apostles benediction was this, Grace be with all them wholove our Lord Jesus in sincerity▪ The rich privileges of grace are appropriated unto Christ's cordial friend.

3. Because Christ (whose eyes are like unto flames offire) doth discern clearly, all them that are false friends, though they pretend fair. We read of many who beleevewhen they saw his miracles, but Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men, and needed not that any should testify of man; for he knew what was in man.

4▪ Because we cannot tell how soon we shall be called to the scrutiny. The Lord may be awakening our consciences, and setting them as upon a rack; propound that question unto us, which he asked Peter once, and again, and the third time, Lovest thou me? But though he should not deal thus with us in our life time, yet be sure we shall be examined upon our departure hence, for after deathcomes judgment infallibly. Therefore it will be our wisdom in the ways of self-renewing, to say as Job did, When God visiteth,what shall I answer him?

5. Because by serious self-reflections we may attain such full assurance of our love unto Christ, that we may with confidence speak with Peter, Lord, thou knowest allthings, thou knowest that I love thee.

Having thus moved the examination of your love to Christ, I proceed to give in some discoveries of Christ's loving friends; and the rather because according to God's institution, we Ministers are set up amongst people to trytheir ways.

And the characters of love being many, I shall be the shorter in them all. True it is, that men's love burning in their bosoms, they many times better express themselves by sense than Arguments; yet God having in his word held forth manifold Signs of sincere love, it is our duty to make our use of them.

1. Love to Christ is always accompanied with hatred of sin. Ye that love the Lord, hate evil. And the Apostle his connection is observable, Let love be without dissimulation, abhorring that which is evil: The ground hereof is manifold. First, because Christ hateth all sin, he suffered death for sin, and is dishonored by it. Therefore it is not possible, that love unto Christ, and love unto sin should peaceably lodge together in the same bosom.

2 Love to Christ is attended with care to prevent whatsoever might be injurious or displeasing unto him. Thus the loving Spouse layeth this command upon all under her Authority. I charge you that you awake not my Beloved till he please. In like manner Jonathan's love pleadeth with Saul for David's life. Let not the King sin against his servant, against David: wherefore wilt thou sin against innocent blood, to slay David without a cause? And Jacob's affections did project the preservation of his near relation from ruin. Hence it appeareth therefore, that people of Gallio his temper, do not love Christ, who care not what wrongs are done to Christ, in the liberty or purity of his Ordinances and comfort of his servants, if themselves can sleep warm in their own well-feathered nests.

3. Love to Christ discovered itself by solicitous enquiries after the mind of Christ, fearing least through mistakes he might be provoked. How inquisitive were his Apostles to know his pleasure in all particulars, relating to the Passover? The Disciples came unto Jesus, saying, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the Passover? And how timorous was Abraham (God's friend) lest he might by overmuch boldness incense him, when he was mediating for Sodom! Shall they therefore be accounted friends to Christ who walk at all adventures, without any fears of his frown, or enquiries after his will?

4. Love causeth flowings forth of thoughts upon its object. The beatings of the pulse are according to the heat in the heart. In the Song of Loves this is the first clause, My heart is inditing of a good matter. I speak of the things which I have made concerning the King. Sparks do not more naturally arise out of a flaming furnace, then musings upon Christ from the soul which is fired with loves towards him. With how much intention, frequency and steddenesse do people think upon the persons and things which are greatly loved! This consideration therefore casts them off as no friends to Christ, of whom it may be truly said, in respect of diligent meditation, The Lord is not in all their thoughts.

5. Longings after Christ, together with satisfactions while he is absent, are evidences of love unto him. The loving Spouse shakes off sloth, gets out of bed in the night, and goeth abroad to seek him whom her soul loved Neither ease in a warm bed, nor chamber comforts, nor City-contentments could satisfy her. Her Beloved she must have, and her Beloved she will have, for she is sick of love. Love like the Load-stone is attractive, and the needle touched with it, will incessantly move till it stand directly Northward. In like manner will the heart which is well warmed with love to Christ: this is its language, Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none that I desire on earth besides thee. Give me Christ, or I die.

6. Contentation in the enjoyment of Christ doth demonstrate love: Some note this from the Greek word, which signifieth Love, viz. that wherein the heart taketh rest. When anything cometh to its center▪ there it is quiet and still: So it is with the heart which loveth God. This was David's meaning, as some Expositors judge, when he having expressed his love to God, speaketh thus in an holy Soliloquy, Return to thy rest O my soul. This rest the loving Christian attaineth in Christ by complacency and dependency. The Spouse leaneth (resteth her self) upon her Beloved, and he for delight is a bundle of myrrh between her breasts: whereunto the words of the Apostle suit very well, We have no confidence in the flesh, but rejoice in Christ Jesus. For the soul which possesseth Christ, and knoweth what it hath, in having him, will say, I have enough, I have all, I need no more; for in him all wants are either supplied or sanctified. In him justifying grace will make up all defects in service. And what is wanting in the streams of creature enjoyments, is given in with more sweetness in the full fountain of his All-sufficiency.

7. Communication of secrets speaketh friendship. Haman doth unbosom himself to his friends, by laying open unto them all his concernments, both cross and comfortable. And Christ bids him who was dispossessed of a devil, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things God hath done for thee.

We can put that into a friends bosom which we would not have blazed abroad in the world. Thus Christ's friends do tell him of all their troubles, fears, wants, temptations, lusts, as also of their comforts, receipts, experiences; upon all occasions they step unto him, and he knoweth from them by prayer how things go with them, whether by encouragement or discouragement in their course.

I here remember the speech of Samson's wife, when he concealed what she desired to know, How canst thou say, I love thee, when thy heart is not with me? And doubtless our estrangement from Christ, in not laying open ourselves upon all occasions before him, doth more then intimate our unfriendliness.

8. Readinesse to comply with Christ's command will undeniably prove that we are his friends. Our Lord is often upon this Argument: You are my friends if you do whatsoever I command you, He that hath my Commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me. If any man love me, he will keep my words. Thus Abraham made it manifest that he was God's friend, by being ready to offer up Isaac upon his call. And the Apostle speaketh of the labor of love, because love will not withdraw from any work, wherein God seeth cause to employ his friends. The woman who loved Christ much, will wash his feet, and wipe them with the hair of her head. This is the language of Love, I account no work too mean, wherein I▪ may serve Christ.

9. Love is content to be at any cost for Christ. Harken unto the expressions of the loving Spouse, At our gates are all manner of pleasant fruits, new and old, which I have laid up for thee, O my beloved. And I would cause thee to drink of spiced wine, and of the juice of Pomgranates. The best of all kinds, and the best of the best is provided for Christ, if he be Beloved. She who loved much, brought a Box of ointment very costly. In like manner, whatever duties Christ's friends discharge, or whatever Ordinances they frequent, they are wont to say with David, I will not offer to the Lord that which costs me nothing. They scorn to give him the chaff and bran, when others eat the Kidneys of wheat. To be warm and vigorous in creature communion, and all a-mort, chil and cold conversing with Christ, is an abomination to Christ's friends.

10. Love is liberal and free, not grudging any kindness laid forth for a friend. This is the love of God, (saith the beloved Disciple) that we keep his Commandments, and his Commandments are not grievous.

When the most is done and endured for Christ, the soul saith, How little have I either acted or suffered for Christ? Oh that it had been more, Oh that it had been more! How little is all my service, how small are all my disbursements for Christ? When Jacob had passed two Apprentiships for Rachel, under a sour Uncle and churlish Master, wherein he had been pinched with cold, and parched with heat, They seemed to him but a few days, for the love he bare unto her. And when Jonathan had stripped himself of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle, we read not of any repinings afterward; and the reason was, because he loved him, as his own soul▪ Christ's friends look upon him as deserving over and over again, infinitely more then they shall ever be able to requite, and therefore are troubled that Christ hath had so little service, never repenting that he hath received so much. They know that God giveth liberally and upbraideth not. Worthy Doctor Sibs was wont to say, Supposing a possibility of sorrow in heaven, this would be the grief of the Saints there, that they have done so little for Christ upon earth, from whom they have received so much.

11. Love maketh courageous for Christ. Everyone knoweth that St. Paul was Christ's cordial friend, which he expressed by his magnanimity. I am ready not to be boundonly, but to die at Jerusalem for the Name of the Lord Jesus, for whom I have suffered the loss of all. Much was lost already, and life itself was now at stake, Let all go (saith Love) for Christ.

Love looketh upon nothing as impossible, or as too difficult to be undertaken. The fearful Hen will fly fiercely at the devouring Creatures which would devour her chickens; and the timorous sheep will turn head upon a mastiff dog, to secure her beloved Lamb. Love is strong as death, many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it. Mary, whose bosom was full of burning love to Christ, is a rare example of that metal and fortitude which love breedeth in Christ's friends. She seeking Christ's dead body, and meeting with the Gardener (as she imagined) she speaketh thus: Sir, if thou hast borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away. Neither the ghastly looks of a dead body could affright, nor the weight of it discourage her resolutions to bear it away. Though she was not able (good soul) by her own strength to carry such a burden, yet her love made her confident that she could do it, and therefore was resolved to undertake it.

12. All these forementioned actings and adventures of love in Christ's friends, do arise, neither only nor principally from self-advantages received from him, but from his excellencies, and respect to his honor. Because of the savor of thy good ointments, thy Name is an ointment poured forth, therefore do the Virgins love thee. And in this, Saint Paul centered as the last end of his love, that Jesus Christ might be magnified in him, whether by life or death; Whereas when Christ is looked after rather for loaves than for his divine loveliness, it's rather to be judged a trucking with him, than a loving of him. When men seek only to serve their turn of Christ, as it were by merchandizing, they may be called friends to themselves, but will never be reputed faithful friends unto him. This discovery lies inward and close in our bosoms: in which regard, the more cautiousnesse is needful, that we may not be deceived.

Lastly, and for our help in the former, I add this (as the conclusion of this search▪ upon which I have held you so long) That sincere friendship unto Christ, will raise rejoicings in our hearts upon his advancement, though this may seem to tend to our personal detriment. Here the words of Christ to his drooping Disciples, fearing that themselves should be damnified by his departure from them, are very considerable; If you loved me, you wouldrejoyce because I said, I go unto the Father. John the Baptist is a rare instance to evidence this character of true friendship: for he being told that Christ was likely to carry away credit from him, returned this answer. He that hath the Bride is the bridegroom; but the friend of the Bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the Bridegrooms voice: This my joy therefore is fulfilled. He must increase, but I must decrease. And the Apostle Paul was another example of this ingenuous love. Some (saith he) preach Christ of envy and strife, supposing to add affliction unto my bonds: Notwithstanding Christ is preached: and I therein do rejoyce, and will rejoyce. Make application hereof, and ask yourselves this question, whether you can be content that Christ should be set upon your shoulders, and that your credit should be cropped, rather then it should hinder his shine and prospect? can you lay yourselves down in the dust, that the crown may be set upon Christ's head? can you willingly be little or nothing in the account of the world, that Christ may be all in all among the children of men? By sincere answers returned upon serious considerations of all these foregoing particulars, you may be able to give a right judgment of your own estate, whether you be in deed and in truth friends to Jesus Christ.

[Use 3] The Use of Exhortation followeth: wherein I am to bespeak your love unto Jesus Christ. And O that I knew what Arguments to use, that I might prevail with you to become friends unto Christ. Might not the remembrance of the forementioned Reasons wherefore believers love him, being faithfully pressed upon your spirits, be hopefully operative for this end? Take into your consideration 1. His incomparable beauties. 2. His famous exploits. 3. Your former rich receipts. 4. Your future expectations from him: and hereupon command your souls to give in their answer, whether it be not reasonable that you should love Christ. But forbearing the enlargement of those heads, I will deal with you upon principles of self-love, to love the Lord Jesus. So many and so precious are the privileges belonging unto them who are thus affected, that David knew not how to desire more at the hand of God. Look thou upon me and be merciful unto me, as thou usest to do unto those that love thy name.

Shall I mention (and do little more then mention) some particulars?

1. Thus you shall work yourselves into Christ's bosom, (which will be no small advantage) I love them that love me, said our Lord long since. It is reported that Vespasian commanded a large recompense to be given unto a woman that fell in love with him, and ordered that it should be recorded, that such a sum of money was given upon that account. More beautiful will Christ be unto his friends. That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance, and I will fill their Treasures: Riches, substantial riches, substantial riches making treasures: and all this by the right of inheritance, shall be the reward of them who love Christ.

2. Hereupon you may confidently expect familiar fellowship with Christ and his Father, which is the Christians Heaven upon Earth, If any man love me, my Father will love him, and I will love him, and manifest myself to him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

3. Hence issueth assurance, that all events and exercises shall prove, spiritually advantageous. Also we know that all things work together for good unto them who love God. Every wind will undoubtedly bring in their profit, and their gain shall come in at every door.

4. And the Crown of glory is promised to them who love the Lord.

Now if you shall demand, How may we kindle the fire of love in our breasts towards Christ? I answer,

1. By informing yourselves from the Scripture concerning Christ his worthiness, both in his person, relations, and several Administrations as Mediator betwixt God and man. As this is his own advice, Search the Scriptures, for they testify of me: So by the manifestations of him, friendly affections are kindled towards him. Witness the experience of such who during their ignorance of Christ were so far from loving him, that they accounted the love of others groundless, yet understanding his unparalleled beauties, fell in love with him. This is open and apparent by comparing Cant. 5. 9. with ver. 10. to the end, and with Chap. 6. 1. The words being many, I refer you to the reading of them. The rich hath many friends (saith Solomon) And are not all the riches of earth and heaven in Christ's possession and at his disposing?

2. By presenting often unto your view by meditation all things amiable in Christ. While I mused (saith the Psalmist) the fire burned. Looking causeth loving, The eye affect the heart: By blowing a spark becomes a flame. As Abraham's servant brought forth Jewels of silver, and Jewels of gold to win Rebecca her heart towards Isaac; So should we spread before our souls frequently those things which are enjoyed in Christ, that our hearts may be enamored with him. Ponder upon his own expressions, I love them that love me, and those that seek me early shall find me. Riches and honor are with me: yea, durable riches and Righteousness. My fruit is better than Gold, yea than fine Gold, and my revenues than choice Silver. Dwell upon these and the like considerations, and the Lord bless them to the end for which propounded, that your souls may flame forth loves upon the Lord Jesus.

The second Branch of the Doctrine followeth; viz. That Christ is a loving friend unto all true Christians.

Howsoever he here calleth Lazarus his special friend, and the Apostles were so accounted in some way of peculiarity, Henceforth I call you not servants, but I have called you friends. Yet this compellation, and this amiable relation belongeth unto all faithful Christians likewise. He loved all his own in the world; which is plain also, by that gracious invitation, Eat O friends, and drink O Beloved, wherein he intendeth to take in all living Christians.

Now if the reason be demanded, Wherefore Christ is so good a friend unto believing Christians? I answer, [Reason 1] 1. Because they are peculiarly his own upon Covenantcompact betwixt the Father and himself. The Covenant was primarily betwixt God and Christ, whereupon they were committed to his trust for the praise of glorious grace. And He therefore loved them because his own. This our Lord himself doth more then intimate in his most heavenly prayer, wherein expressing his respect to his Fathers honor, together with abundant love towards the Elect, he doth very often touch upon them as given unto him by the Father. And upon this account it was that he thus speaketh of the communion which he had with his Father before the foundations of the world were laid. I was by him as one brought up with him, and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him Rejoicing in the habitable parts of his earth, and my delights were with the sons of men.

[Reason 2] Because of the dear deliberate purchase which he made of them, that they might be brought in to friendly fellowship with him. It is commonly said, that the mother loveth those children most which cost her the most pain when she brought them into the world. The Prophet calleth the fruit of the womb, Beloved. And that is very considerable to this purpose which the Evangelical Prophet foretold of Christ, He shall see of the travel of his soul, and shall be satisfied. We are Christ's by redemption, and in this regard also we are his beloved friends, and highly esteemed by him above others, as the Prophet witnesseth, Since thou wast precious in my sight, I loved thee,&c.

[Reason 3] 3. Because of their spiritual troth-pledge unto Christ. The Apostle speaketh of espousing the believing Corinthians unto him as their husband. And as this is done in loving kindness and mercy, so because of this relation, Christ is propounded as an example of great love. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ loved his Church, and gave himself for it.

[Reason 4] 4. Because they are incorporated into Christ as members of his body mystical. As the body is one, and hath many members, so also is Christ. And upon this ground likewise is Christ's love to his people inferred, No man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord his Church: For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bone.

[Reason 5] 5. Because all the revenues (as it were) of Christ's honor and reputation on earth, are raised from among believing Christians: for praise waiteth for him in Zion: and this is the seed which shall serve him. As before his incarnation they are called God's peculiar treasure, and his Jewels; so since his Ascension the Apostle Paul styleth them the Glory of Christ. And in this regard a principle of divine self-love doth incline the Lord Christ to be a friend unto believers.

For the illustration of this truth, know, that this love of Christ is fourfold; viz. 1. Of his eternal purpose. 2. Of Benevolence. 3. Of Complacency, 4. Of Compassion.

1. There is a love of divine good pleasure appertaining unto God's people: In this sense God saith, Jacob have I loved: and in the pursuit hereof the Lord in due time converteth them unto himself; I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee.

2. The Lord loveth them with the love of benevolence, communicating to them, together with himself and his loves, his All, for their comfort: Who loved me (saith Saint Paul) and gave himself for me. All are yours; and all things are for your sakes, saith the same Apostle. Christ himself being the heir of all things, both in heaven and earth, the fountain both of grace and comfort, brings along with himself all needful accommodations, terrestrial, celestial, whether they concern this life, or that which is to come. How liberal was God's love to Abraham his friend, giving all Canaan to him and his seed after him!

3. The Lord embraceth them with a love of delight and complacency, he himself having made them lovely by putting upon them his own robes and ornaments, both by justifying and sanctifying grace. This is taught by sundry expressions in that Song of Loves. The Kings Daughter is all glorious within, her clothing is of wrought Gold. Upon thy right hand did stand the Queen in Gold of Ophir: so shall the King greatly desire thy beauty. And to the same purpose doth the Prophet Ezekiel metaphorically hold for this truth, I washed thee with water, yea, I thoroughly washed away thy blood from thee, and I anointed thee with oil: I clothed thee also with brodered work, I girded thee about with fine linen, and covered thee with silk, I decked thee also with Ornaments, and I put bracelets upon thy hand, and a chain on thy neck: And I put a Jewel on thy fore head, and ear-rings in thy ears, and a beautiful crown on thy head. Thus wast thou decked with Gold and Silver, and thy raiment was of fine linen and silk, and brodered work, and thou wast exceeding beautiful; and thy renown went forth among the Heathen for thy beauty, for it was perfect through my comeliness put upon thee, saith the Lord God. Therefore though the Elect themselves are rather loathsome then delightful in their unregenerate estate, yet being covered with Christ his righteousness, and adorned with the graces of his holy Spirit, they are friends in whom he taketh much delight. Hereupon the Church is called Hephzibah, for the Lord delighteth in her.

4. Christ expresseth towards them the love of compassion, sympathizing with them in all their sorrows and sufferings: in all their affliction he was afflicted. As in reference to his friend Lazarus, being brought to the place where he was buried, Jesus wept. And hence the Jews inferred this conclusion, behold how he loved him!

[Use 1] This makes much for the comfort of all truly gracious Christians, seeing the Lord Jesus is their friend. God intending to give David a cordial upon the death of his child, bestoweth upon him Solomon, with this assurance that he loved him, whereupon he was called Jedihiah; And for the cheering of Daniel's heart, he was told once and again, that he was greatly beloved by the Lord. Now this refreshing reacheth all Gospel-Christians universally.

In the serving out of this cordial, I will briefly endeavor to lay before you

- 1. The Characters of Christ's beloved friends.

- 2. The comforts hence deducible for their relief.

First, for these signs of Christ's beloved friends, I refer you to the review and application of the particulars in the former branch of the Doctrine, for the discovery of such who are his loving friends. For this is most certain, that Christ loveth all those who love him. And I add these two further evidences of them who are beloved of Christ.

1. Those who are beloved of the Lord are called to be Saints. Two things are considerable in the quotation, viz.

That these Saints are not so titularly only (because so reputed and nominated among men;) but Saints in reality and practice, being persons whose hearts are separated from common pollutions, raised above creature contents, to mind the matters of God in good earnest: in which respect they are called his Saints devoted unto him peculiarly.

And this calling is not alone external (for thousands who continue haters of God, are called upon, to lay down their arms of rebellion, and to submit unto the government of Christ) but it is a calling internal and efficacious, conquering the soul to come in unto Christ, leaving all in resolution, affection, and endeavor for him. Therefore in the application of this, note, the Quere should be, which way the strongest stream of mind and will do run? whether sin—ward, world-ward, or Godward? and what is the greatest design, driven on by project and practice, whether to satisfy lusts, and to grow great in the world, or to conform unto laws divine, and to advance Christ's glory.

2. The Apostle Paul conjoineth faithful and beloved. Persons beloved by the Lord, are faithful to the Lord. And this fidelity doth evidence it self by two things especially.

1. By cleaving inseparably unto the guidance of God, when others are swayed by the multitude, swimming down the tide of times. In this regard in times of general Apostasy, Judah is said to continue faithful with the Saints, holding close to his will in holy worship, when Ephraim followed men's traditions and commandments.

2. By intending God's glory more then personal advantage in course of life and conversation.

And in this respect the Apostle speaking of the servants duty, doth place purloining, in opposition to good fidelity; that servant who purseth his Masters gain, he is not faithful. If these things were brought home by an impartial application, how many would be found in these times not befriended by Christ, though they would be cried up as his chiefest favorites among men?

Secondly, the comforts which belong unto such whom Christ affecteth as his friends, may be considered under two heads, viz.

1. The quality	of his love towards them.
----------------	---------------------------

2. The efficiency

First, his love them ward, for quality is,

1. Most cordial. They are the dearly beloved of his soul. It is not lip-love, love from the teeth outward, but love from the heart-root.
2. Most large: it passeth knowledge, it exceedeth all dimensions. Whereas never greater love was expressed, thenthat a man should die for his friend. Christ commendeth his love as much more, because he died for sinners, and for enemies.
3. Most refreshing. This love is not only sweeter than wine, but also better than life, yea better than lives, as the Original imports. All the comforts of life natural and civil, all the comforts of the several ages and conditions of life are not comparable to this love.
4. Most constant; whom he loveth once, he loveth to the end. This Christ did cast in to cheer his Disciples, being to depart from them. No opposition, loss, or change whatsoever, can possibly separate beloved Christians from this love, which the Apostle mentioneth as a matter of high joy and holy triumph. Whereas Solomon telleth us, that a friend loveth at all times, and that there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother; this may most truly be applied unto our loving friend Christ Jesus. This the Text suggesteth; for Christ did not only love Lazarus while he lived, but called him friend, even now when he was dead, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth.

Secondly, the efficiency of his love is admirably comfortable, to all such who enjoy it. For first, it worketh their deliverance from whatsoever may be grievous and dangerous. He loved us, and washed us from our sins in his blood. And hence follows deliverance from the curse of the Law, and from the wrath to come.

Secondly, it procureth whatsoever may be joyous unto a spiritual heart.

1. He hath made us (upon this account) Kings and Priests unto God and his Father.
2. He feedeth the soul plentifully by the dainties of sacred Ordinances; Eat O my friends, and drink, yea drink abundantly, O my beloved.
3. This his love running through all providences, maketh blessings the more sweet, and supporteth the sinking soul under crosses. As Hezekiah's recovery was the more pleasant, because God in love to his soul wrought it: so the Apostle puts this as a prop under a fainting afflicted Christian, that the Lord correcteth with paternal love.
4. And his love will prepare his beloved for glory. Christ loved the Church that he might sanctify it, with the washing of water by the word▪ that he might present it to himselfe a glorious Church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it might be holy and without blemish. If unto all these (which I mentioned without enlargement) we add the complacency which he taketh in all communications of his love, it will be a great addition to their joy. The Lord will rejoice over thee, he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing. God seemeth to take such content in his loving transactions them-ward, as though he desired nothing more.

Let the friends of Jesus Christ feed and feast themselves with these expressions and provisions of his love.

[Use 2] How should the remembrance of such rare refreshings belonging to them, who are the beloved friends of Christ, quicken endeavors in all sorts to gain a share in his friendship. To enforce this exhortation, I will cast these few thoughts into your minds.

1. Whereas Solomon telleth us (What every days experience also speaketh) that many seek the Rulers favor; Jesus Christ is the King of kings, and the Lord of lords, the only potentate unto whom all authority in heaven and earth is committed, by whom Kings reign, Princes rule, and all the Judges of the earth.

2. That it will be an high honor to be called God's friend. In holy story Hushai and Zabud have this title of respect put upon them, that they were the kings friends. And it will be for the everlasting credit of father Abraham, that he is recorded in sacred pages, to be the friend of God.

3. That Christ is and ever will be in favor with God, to make and to maintain our peace with his Majesty, though we frequently, and fearfully do provoke him every day. The inhabitants of Tyre and Sidon made Blastus the Kings chamberlaine their friend, when Herod was highly displeased with them, because their country was nourished by the Kings country. And is not our dependence more upon God? And do not we hourly give the Almighty great occasion to reject us, yea to take up arms against us? And is there any one, either on earth or in heaven, that can asswage God's anger, and procure his favor, besides Jesus Christ? Therefore should means be used to make him our friend.

4. The people of God conceiving hope that Christ regardeth us, they will be encouraged with the more affectionate confidence to pray for us in the times of our need. As the sisters of Lazarus making address unto him in the behalf of their dear brother, pleaded this, Lord, he whom thoulovest, is sick.

5. Hereby we shall be heartened with the more hope to apply ourselves unto God by prayer for ourselves. Our Savior suggesteth this in the parable of the man, who goeth at mid-night to his friend to borrow bread; he applieth it to encourage prayer.

6. Because all our creature-friends may either fall off by unfaithfulness, or forsake us by death or be forced from us other ways. This the doleful complaints of sundry dear unto the Lord recorded in Scripture, do declare: My lovers and my friends stand aloof from my sore, and my kinsmen stand aloof off, Lover and friend thou hast put far from me, and my acquaintance into darkness. Upon this consideration, the human prudence of the unjust Steward is commended, in projecting to provide friends against the time of need. How far our experience at this day speaketh our loss of creature-friends, viz. of some by death, and of others by an unfaithful deserting, I forbear to speak: But I do upon this consideration move your care to gain the friendship of Christ, who will love and live forever: Now if these arguments shall force resolutions in your bosoms to seek Christ's love, and thereupon means to attain it, shall be inquired after; I give these short directions.

1. Accept of God, and of Gospel-righteousness with him, by a self-outing, and a Christ-prizing faith. The Scripture saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness, and he was called the friend of God.

2. Upon the serious consideration of his worthiness, and hopeful expectations of happiness by him; labor to endear Christ unto your hearts. Although our love to him doth not merit his love, yet it will clearly make manifestation thereof unto our souls. I love them (saith he) who love me.

3. And (as an expression of your love) submit obediently unto his government, studiously conforming unto all his commands. This is his own promise which he will perform infallibly. He that hath my Commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, and I will love him.

[Use 3] The third Use is to be directed unto them whom Christ embraceth as friends with love, and they are to be persuaded unto real gratitude for his love. The Disciple whom Christ loved, having touched upon his incomparable love, addeth this doxology: To him be glory and dominion forever, and ever, Amen. From whence might be noted,

1. That the glory to be returned unto Christ for his love should not be verbal only, but real also, expressed by subjection unto his dominion.

2. That this obediential gratitude should not be confined to term of time, but extended unto eternity, forever and ever.

3. And all Christians should heartily give in their assent and attestation hereto by annexing their Amen.

In the amplification of this persuasion, I might call you back to the review both of the proof of this doctrine, and of the qualities and efficiency of his love, spoken unto, in the first Use: But that I may not tautologize by telling the same things again, I wish you to meditate upon these particulars which will yet further commend Christ's love, and may call you forth in thankfulness for it.

1. His love was primary to us, and ours secondary, succeeding it, as the effect and consequence thereof, we loved him, because he loved us first. If he had not fired our hearts with the flames of his love, we should never have bestowed one spark of spiritual affection upon him.

2. His love was free, when there was much loathsomeness, and no loveliness at all in us. When thou wast cast out in the open field, to the loathing of thy person in the day that thou wast born. And when I passed by thee, and saw thee polluted in thy blood, when thou wast naked and bare. Now when I passed by thee, and looked upon thee, behold thy time was the time of love.

3. His love worketh him unto a familiar conversing with them, which himself expresseth by feasting with them, He brought me into the banqueting house, and his banner over me was love; I will sup with them, and they shall sup with me: and by acquainting them with himself, I will manifest myself unto them: as also by revealing his secrets, I have called you friends: for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. As also by conjugal embracings: His left hand is under my head, and his right hand doth imbrace me.

Now if Christ's beloved friends, thankfully disposed towards him for his love, shall demand how their gratitude should be really discovered? I answer in the words of Solomon; A man that hath friends, must show himself friendly: which is done,

1. By a cautious declining of whatsoever may be offensive unto him; as the returning of evil for good is very sinful, and a practice prejudicial to ourselves, so is it taken very unkindly by the Lord. Thus David complaineth of Achitophel, (and as some conceive, Christ of Judas) My friend that did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me. As Caesar was most afflicted with the wound received from his own sons hands. And thou my son too!

Therefore upon remembrance of Christ's kindness learn to beat back temptations as Joseph did. How then shall I do this wickedness, and sin against the Lord

2. By an inseparable adherence unto Christ in days of deepest difficulty and danger. The servant engaged to his Master by his favors, is willing to have his ear bored, that he may dwell with him forever. Ruth upon the receipt of less love a great deal from Naomi her mother in law, taketh up this resolution, Nothing shall part thee and me but death. God forbid that ever we by our Apostasy should give Christ occasion to speak by way of reproach to us as Absalom did to Hushai (deserting David, as he apprehended) Is this thy kindness to thy friend? Why wentest not thou with thy friend? So be you sure that this one circumstance will gripe your hearts with great grief for your backslidings. As Peter in this regard wept bitterly, because he had denied, and deserted Christ, so good a Master, so well deserving a friend.

3. By unfeigned love unto all them, who are the beloved friends of Christ▪ This is the inference of Saint John, from this consideration under discourse, that therefore we ought to love one another, and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. But of this more in the doctrine following.

[Doct. 2] That all Christ's friends are mutually loving friends unto one another. As Christ here saith not, my friend, but our friend Lazarus, thereby intending to declare the friendship which was betwixt Lazarus and his Disciples, as betwixt himself and Lazarus.

In the proof of this doctrine, I will point at two particulars (which I conceive this instance under hand may hint.)

1. That there is friendliness and love amongst all good Christians. In this respect the Apostle Paul in his Epistle to the Ephesians, joineth their faith in Christ, and their love to all Saints. And in his Epistle to Philemon, he connexeth his love to Christ, and his love to all Saints. Yea, our Savior maketh this the livery whereby his servants may be distinguished from others. By this shall all men know that ye are my Disciples, if ye have love one to another.

2. That there is a peculiarity of friendly respect in Christians unto Christ's Ministers, as here in Lazarus towards Christ his Apostles. This is observable in the Letter sent from Jerusalem to Antioch, wherein their expression of special love is recorded; viz. Our beloved Barnabas and Paul.

But I will not deal with the Doctrine in both these branches distinctly. The handling of it more generally (for brevity sake) shall be alone undertaken.

And the Reasons of the point are four.

[Reason 1] 1. Because of their relation both unto Christ and amongst themselves. They stand related unto Christ as his subjects, servants, children, Spouse, Members, (which, all will acknowledge, and therefore needeth no proof.) And hence issueth love. As David was ready to show kindness to the house of Saul for Jonathan's sake.

And among themselves they are related many ways most nearly. They are brethren, and the brotherhood is to be loved. And they are fellowmembers, and therefore to have mutual respect one to another.

[Reason 2] 2. Because of Christ his express command, which is repeated, and strengthened with his own example. This command we have from him, that he who loveth God, loveth his brother also. A new Commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another, as I have loved you, that ye love one another. And again, This is my Commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

[Reason 3] 3. Because of the image of God engraven upon them, expressed by their holy conversation.

The Apostle John asserts this, That everyone who loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him. Because the child is the picture (as it were) of his father, therefore beloved for his fathers sake.

I here forbear to discover how Believers begotten again by Christ (as the everlasting Father) do bear his image; but this I propound as the reason of Christians mutual love.

As the inward affection of Titus was more abundant towards the Corinthians whilst he remembered their obedience; And as it's reported of Beucer and Calvin, that they loved all them in whom they could espy aliquid Christi, anything of Christ: So doubtless it is with all others who are friends unto Christ.

[Reas. 4] Because of the habitation and operation of God's Spirit in their hearts. The Apostle Paul calleth this love, love in the Spirit. And the Apostle Saint John discoursing of this Christian affection, and consequently of God's dwelling in us (being thereby evidenced) giveth in this as the confirmation of both, Because he hath given us of his Spirit.

This I place as the last Argument, because it is the true reason which maketh all the former concluding: For neither spiritual relation, nor divine injunction, nor Christ's image upon the Christians soul, could have any commanding influence to draw forth this holy love amongst Believers, if God did not co-operate by the power of the holy Ghost.

Thus from the confirmation I proceed to the Application of the Doctrine; which I shall make in four Uses; viz. 1. Conviction. 2. Examination. 3. Comfort. 4. Exhortation.

[Use 3] Hence two sorts of persons are cashier'd, as people who are strangers to friendly fellowship with Jesus Christ.

First, Such who are rather enemies, then friends unto the people of God, as their own consciences witness to themselves, and their practices proclaim to the world, this being their design and endeavor (if they could effect it) to rinate them in their comforts and lives altogether; They have said (in their desires, though not with their lips) Come let us cut them off from being a Nation, that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance. Whatsoever show of love unto Christ these persons make among men, doubtless they are adversaries to him, as sundry passages, surrounding the last quotation do clearly express. Keep not thou silence O God, hold not thy peace, and be not still O God. Lo thine enemies make a tumult, and they that hate thee, have lift up the head, they are confederate against thee. As Joab took Abner aside to speak peaceably, but smote him under the fifth rib that he died; So these, though they smile upon Christ's face with a salute, yet they stab his body; or (as one wittily expresseth it) they kiss the mouth and tread upon the toes. Such unfriendliness to godly Christians,

1. Argueth an unregenerate estate. The upright in his way is an abomination to the wicked. And he that loveth not those who are like God, is one of the children of the Devil.

2. And is not consistent with meetness to be made partakers of the inheritance of Saints in light. For it is not a heaven, but a hell rather to be confined to the company of such as are hated. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death, &c.

As this doctrine falls thus heavy upon all those who are enemies, rather than friends unto ordinary Christians: so upon such especially who are professed adversaries to the Ministers of Christ. You know how the holy Ghost doth stigmatize Ahab, who hated Michaiah, that he was a man who sold himself to do wickedness; whereas unto true Gospel. Believers the very feet of them are beautiful who bring the glad tidings of peace.

Secondly, those much more are by this doctrine set aside as no friends to Christ, who are Boutefeuz and Incendiaries, seeking to kindle coals of contentions, and to increase the flames of discontent and animosities among the people of God. This practice proveth them to be Factors for the Devil, and exposeth them to the wrath of God. It was an evil spirit that made division betwixt Abimelech and the men of Shechem. The Devil is pictured with a cloven foot, to signify that it's his work to cause and continue divisions in the world; And those who sow those seeds of discord are reckoned by Solomon among them whom the Lord hateth, and who are an abomination unto him.

[Use 2] From this open Conviction I proceed unto Examination, because there are many who upon trial will not be found real friends unto God's people, though they be not such notorious opposites as were described in the former Use.

Therefore take those discoveries of them who are right in their loves to real Christians.

First, from the object of love, viz. Sanctifying grace. There are many lovely qualifications in God's faithful servants, which an ingenuous moral man may value; as Herod revered John the Baptist; but it's holiness which is the loadstone to draw the love of the regenerate Christian. Because Saints, therefore excellent in a gracious eye. And hence followeth universality of Love to all such, and the abounding of respect according to the increase of Grace.

Secondly, from the qualities of his friendship: It is accompanied,

1. With an honorable estimation of them. The heirs of heaven do honor such who sear the Lord.
2. And with complacency, All my delight (saith David) is in them.

Thirdly, from the Effects of this love; viz.

1. Readiness to perform real offices for their comfort. Thus S. Paul proved the sincerity of the Corinthians love, by their contribution, for the relief of poor Saints.
2. And compassionate sympathies when they are in trouble. To him that is afflicted pity should be shown from his friend. By this David did demonstrate his real respects unto some who ill deserved them, When they were sick, my cloathing was sackcloth, I behaved myself as though he had been my friend.

These short hints I leave to your amplification and faithful application, that yourselves may understand whether your love unto godly Christians be such as will evidence your regenerate estate.

[Use 3] The third Use is for the comfort of all them, who can in this grace of Christian love and friendship, approve their sincerity unto God, not doubting but that Christ himself will give the like testimony unto them herein, as he did unto Lazarus in the Text. Our friend.

For 1. It is no small privilege to partake in the love of all heavens favorites, and this love is mutual: Those who are cordial friends to Christians, are cordially beloved by Christians, which is a matter of much joy to them who will consider it, as in other regards, so because their love draweth our prayers unto God, as need requireth.

2. From hence they may infallibly conclude their regeneration by special grace. Let us love one another, (saith Saint John) for love is of God, and everyone that loveth is born of God. Whereas persons under the power of depraved nature, are despisers of them who are good.

3. And, as they may upon this evidence lay claim to the comforts of grace upon earth, so may they raise confidence of future glory in heaven. We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren.

[Use 4] The last Use is exhortation, wherein two duties might be persuaded.

First, to love Christians, because they are like unto Christ, and belonging unto him in the nearest relations. The holy Ghost is often and earnest in this persuasion, Love the brotherhood, love as brethren: and above all things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness.

As helps herein, let these meditations be molded believably upon your hearts. 1. That they are in regard of spiritual beauties, the loveliest people under the Sun, Exceeding beautiful. The Church is called the fairest among women. And this is not the judgment of persons subject to mistakes, but even of Christ himself, which he gives in, again and again, both as a ground of his own love, and requiring attention unto his testimony. Behold thou art faire my beloved, behold thou art fair; behold thou art fair, yea pleasant. Thou art all fair my love, there is no spot in thee.

Therefore that you may beget love in your bosoms towards Saints, do not so much pore upon their blemishes as their beauties, look rather upon their virtue then their vices; as Titus by remembering the obedience, rather than the disobedience of the Corinthians, found his affections enlarged towards them.

2. That the obligations of love which the Gospel hath laid upon you, are many, and commanding. Here I will only name (without enlargement) the particulars, whereby Saint Paul persuadeth the Christian Ephesians, to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body, and one spirit, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.

3. That no persons whatsoever, have been, or are likely to be, so useful to yourselves and to the public, as these Saints and servants of the most high God. This argument Paul presseth upon Philemon, to move his affections towards converted Onesimus, because now (saith he) profitable to thee and me.

These are repairers of breaches, and restorers of paths todwell in. And these are the remnant, which if God had not left, we should have been like unto Sodom and Gomorrah.

I forbear to report how they bestead the public,

1. By their prayers. As if Moses had not stood up in the breach to turn away God's wrath, Israel had been destroyed.

2 And by their presence, As God told Lot, he could do nothing till he removed from Sodom. By this reason Jonathan speaketh to move Saul's bowels towards David, For he did put his life in his hand, and slew the Philistine, and the Lord wrought a great salvation for all Israel.

Secondly, I might from this doctrine deal with all sorts by persuasion to endeavor to become godly, that they may be admitted as friends into the bosoms of God's people. Although I know that there are higher ends to be intended in undertaking the practice of piety, viz. God's glory, and our own salvation; yet this consideration under hand would not be slighted, if these particulars (which I shall only name) were well weighed.

1. That the love of God's people towards us will produce their frequent and fervent addresses unto heaven for us according to our serviceable necessities.

1. That their applications unto the Lord, are very prevalent in regard of their great favor with his Highness.

2. Their love will work them unto readiness in any other kind to serve us with their interests and abilities, counsels and communication of their experiences, as opportunity may be offered.

3. And their expressions of loving respect may administer some relief unto the faint hopes of self-suspecting souls, because they are to be looked upon as best able (in regard of their principles and experiments) to judge of the spiritual conditions of other Christians.

I proceed to the third circumstance, considerable in the first part of the Text, viz. That Christ himself doth testify the forementioned relation of friendship betwixt Lazarus and himself with his Disciples: Our friend.

[Doct. 3] That Jesus Christ knoweth and acknowledgeth them particularly, who are friends unto himself and his peculiar people. The Lord knoweth them that are his. This knowledge comprehends observation, approbation, and commemoration As he owned Lazarus here, his friend; So likewise he did his Disciples under the relation of brotherhood after his Resurrection, Go tell my brethren. And since his Ascension into glory, such is his respect unto all sanctified ones, That he is not ashamed to call them brethren.

If more clear Scripture-proof be demanded, let these two passages be observed.

1. That Christ knoweth who love him, while they are alive. This is manifest by Peters attestation, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee.

2. That the Lord remembereth after the death of his friends, that they were so during life. As dead Lazarus is thus spoken of, Our friend. And long after Abraham's decease, God speaking of Israel, thus expresseth himself, Theseed of Abraham my friend.

[Reasons.] I shall only point at the Reasons whence this truth may be concluded.

1. God knoweth his friends, because himself maketh them so. And therefore because he understands his own actions, he cannot be ignorant in whose bosoms there are these friendly dispositions.

2. And God will acknowledge them, because he hath undertaken to recompence them. He is not unrighteous to forget labors of love.

The Application followeth.

This consideration may be a cooling card unto two sorts of people.

[Use 1] 1. To all them whose consciences bear witness, that they have no friendly frame of heart unto such godly ones, whose holy conversations discover them to be chosen and called out of the world. If men's hearts condemn them, God's is greater and knoweth all. There will be many rejected at the last day, who have pretended much respect to Christ.

2. To all those who are ashamed to own Christ in his cause, and his friends in their holy conversation: for all these our Lord observeth, and of them he will be ashamed when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy Angels. And I leave it to your consideration, how miserable their case will be at the last day, when Christ who knoweth all his friends and foes, shall separate the sheep and the goats, And shall come to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly amongst them of all their ungodly deeds, which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him; And of the individual unfriendly neglects of his necessitous servants: these must depart with a curse from Christ, and go away into everlasting punishment.

[Use 2] This truth administereth sweet comfort unto all them who are faithful friends unto the Lord Jesus Christ, and his real Relations. The testimony of their own consciences will in this case reflect refreshing; and this will be a great addition unto their comfort, that expressions of friendly respect both to God and his servants, are thus observed, and will be acknowledged. The Lord himself to encourage Israel in captivity, giveth them to understand that he will own them in that estate. No doubt it was good news to Cornelius, when he heard from heaven, Thy Prayers and thine Alms are come for a memorial before God. So the Psalmist cheereth himself by this consideration, I have preached Righteousness in the great Congregation. Lo I have not refrained my lips, O Lord thou knowest it.

This consolation will be admirably sweet at two seasons.

First, When we may be injuriously suspected and censured for falseness and unfaithfulness, either to God, or to his people. How well was it for Mordecai (when himself with his Countrymen, were decried and condemned as enemies to the State) that his fidelity in a particular instance was recorded? And to bring this home to the knowledge that God taketh of his servants sincerity: J•b being reproached as an hypocrite, hath recourse to this, He knoweth the way that I take. And Jeremiah being suspected to be one ill-affected towards the place where he lived, maketh this appeal to the Lord, I have not desired the woeful day, thou knowest.

Secondly, At the day of Judgment, when God will measure out unto people according to their ways.

The Prophet Malachi having mentioned both God's hearing the good conferences of such who fear his Name in evil times, and the book of Remembrance recording all; he addeth, And these shall be minesaith the Lord of Hosts, in the day when I make up my jewels, &c. And this cordial is contained in Paul's Prayer for Onesiphorus, The Lord give mercy to the house of Onesiphorus, for he refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain; But when he was at Rome, he sought me diligently, and found me. The Lord grant unto him, that he may find mercy of the Lord in that day.

But most comfortable is that full promise of Christ himself unto all such who are friendly unto him in his relations, recorded in Matthew 25. from ver. 34. to ver. 40. from whence these particulars are worthy consideration.

1. That he will at the last day remember all the individual offices of friendship to his members, and will mention much that themselves never minded. And they shall say, when saw we thee an hungered, &c.

2. That all acts of love and pity towards his relations (even the least and lowest) shall be interpreted as a special kindness shown unto himself, Inasmuch as you have done it to one of the least of these my brethren, you have done it unto me.

3. And the recompense shall be exceeding great. Then shall the King say, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you. And the Righteous shall go into eternal life.

[Use 3] I will conclude this Doctrine (and this first part of my Text) with a double short Exhortation.

First, to real friendliness both unto Christ, and to all those who peculiarly belong unto him. Suppose ye saw Christ sitting in a chair of Majesty, and heard him speaking thus in the audience of all the inhabitants on earth, Who is on my side! Let all my faithful friends gather themselves before me: In this case would not multitudes come in with professions and protestations of love? Now it is thus in truth: for our Lord looketh from heaven, and considereth exactly who are his friends, and who are not. Therefore bethink yourselves what you will do. And if you be content to come in to Christ as faithful friends, then befriend (for his sake,) those especially who are of his household, for this will be observed and rewarded. Therefore my beloved, be ye steadfast and unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as you know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.

Secondly, to beware of all kinds of doubling and hypocrisy both in the profession and practice of love, whether towards Christ or faithful Christians.

It is the admonition of the Apostle, Let love be without dissimulation. And the Doctrine is a strong Argument to back it, because of the notice which our Savior taketh thereof. Christ himself by this consideration moveth sincerity in all services, whether of piety towards God, or charity towards men, because an eye from heaven doth espy whatsoever is done on earth with greatest secrecy.

This motive will be the more prevalent, if we mind Christ, who as the Judge of all men, will manifest and recompense their services according to their nature and manner of performance.

The second part of my Text followeth; in the handling whereof I shall be the shorter, because I have been so large in the former.

Lazarus sleepeth. In the division of the Text there were three things noted thence; which I shall speak unto very briefly, in three points of Doctrine.

[Doct. 1] 1. That such who are Christ's, and his people's friends, are subject to death.

This word [Sleepeth] is by our Evangelist himself thus expounded, Jesus spake of his death: and it is added, Jesus saith to them plainly, Lazarus is dead.

There is no need of Scripture quotations here, because experiences from age to age everywhere give in sufficient proof of this Truth. When the Apostle had particularized many Worthies as examples of faith and holiness, he addeth these words, All these died.

[Reasons.] The reasons are not only,

1. Because of Adams sin transmitted, Sin entereth into the world, and death by sin;

2. And by reason of God's determination, with reference to his own glory, many ways to be manifested in the consequence of death, It is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment, (For upon these accounts the wicked who are Christ's enemies do die also)

But there are peculiar Reasons wherefore Christ's and the Churches friends do die.

I will not here speak unto that which was extraordinary in this death of Lazarus; viz. for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby, and for the sakes of them who should believe, upon the observation of Christ's power in a miraculous raising him from the dead)

I will only instance in those ends which God intends in a way more ordinary, with respect unto his people themselves.

1. Sometimes that they may be secured from common calamities coming upon the world. As men do house their cattle before the storm falleth; Thus God takes away the righteous from the evil to come, whereof the case of Josiah is a famous instance.

2. That they may rest from their labors, both of service and suffering, when their task and exercises are over; when their work is done, and the Lord hath sufficiently proved and purged them by variety of providences, both cross and comfortable, in this world, then he calleth them off this stage, and causeth their departure hence.

3. That they might enjoy immediate communion with Christ in heaven, which is far better than the best condition attainable in this life; and that their spirits might be made perfect in glory, before the day of the general Resurrection, when their souls and bodies shall be reunited.

There are many profitable Uses to be made of this Doctrine, which I shall only point at.

Use 1. Therefore natural death is not the greatest evil, neither are those comforts whereof death doth deprive the best good; because it is absurd to imagine that the most godly should undergo the heaviest evils, and be stripped of the chiefest comforts. This inference is obvious, and might be usefully enlarged. But I must forbear.

Use 2. Therefore death is not always to be looked upon, as a demonstration of God's anger against them who die: neither is any sickness bringing death, to be judged a sign of divine wrath and severity. Lazarus Christ's friend died, and it was said before, He whom thou lovest, is sick. This is alleged as the reason of the death of Jeroboams child, because there was some goodness in him. Hezekiah was sick unto death; and it's conjectured, that his disease was the Plague, both because of the swelling mentioned, and the medicine advised. Let them take a lump of figs, and lay it for a plaster upon the boil; And how sad Jobs condition was, I need not to relate, who yet (according to God's own testimony) was a man of incomparable piety: Satan smote Job with sore boils, from the sole of the foot unto his crown. And he took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal, and he lay down among the ashes. This I do rather note, 1. Because people are subject to censure severely those who undergo unusual afflictions. When the Barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on Paul's hand, they said among themselves, No doubt this man is a murderer, vengeance suffereth not him to live. 2. Because by this uncharitable censoriousnesse, men do expose themselves unto God's displeasure. Hence it was, that the Lord thus spake unto Eliphaz the Temanite, My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends, for you have not spoken of me the thing that is right.

Use 3. Therefore God's people should the rather hold up with hope, comfort, and patience under all sorts of their sufferings here, because their death (which is certain) will put a period, an end unto all. Though the Sea be stormy, yet the voyage is short, we shall ere long come safe to shore. For this cause we faint not, though the outward man perish (suppose rotting and unsavory, &c.) for this light affliction is but for a moment.

Do you not remember how the holy Martyr comforted his fellow-sufferer, (viz.) that death would cure the one of his blindness, and the other of his lameness? And doubtless in this sense, it may be said safely, that death unto the godly is the best Physician, curing them perfectly of all diseases whatsoever. Therefore cheer up, ye Saints of God, under all your grievances, upon the thought of death. Say to yourselves, as the good Martyr did, But one style or two more, and then I am at my journey's end.

Use 4. Therefore God's servants should be the more industrious in doing all the good which possibly they can, with speed, because they must die, and death will take them off their work. This is Solomon's inference, Whatsoever thine hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest. How did our Savior bestir himself, when he knew that his hour was come? What a great deal of good work did he then dispatch in a short time? And it seemeth to be the reason, why Paul at Troas preached till midnight, because he was ready to depart on the morrow. The nearer unto the center, the swifter is the motion. Famous Doctor Sibbs would say, Could we suppose sorrow in heaven, this would be our sorrow there, that we did no more work for God, before we came thither to receive so great wages.

Use 5. Therefore we all should be persuaded, to improve our Christian friends, both Ministers and others▪ in all their gifts, graces and experiences, so much as may be, and that with speed, because they must die: Upon this ground the Prophet Zacharias quickeneth obedience, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Turn ye now from your evil ways,—Your fathers where are they? And the Prophets, do they live forever? Our Savior is often in this exhortation, having foretold his own departure, Yet a little while is the light with you, walk while you have the light. As all godly ones are called light: So Ministers are the lights of the world; John was a burning, and a shining light: Beloved, death will blow out these your candles, and your Torches; therefore while they live, while they give out their shine and their light, make a profitable use of them, to God's honor and your own souls welfare.

Use 6. Therefore I hence exhort all the friends of Christ, to prepare themselves for death, and to maintain upon their Spirits a prepared posture for nature's dissolution. Although I know, that they being united unto Christ, and reconciled to God through him, they shall undoubtedly (whensoever they die) be translated from earth to heaven: yet there is something more to be minded by Christians, that they may be ready to die. How much might be comprised in Job's expression, All the days of mine appointed time will I wait until my change shall come? I shall not undertake to discover; but I desire to leave these four words of advice, in the bosoms of Christians, in tendency unto their preparation for death. 1. Seek well grounded assurance of your interest in Christ, and of undoubted title unto heaven, through him. This foundation being laid, Paul could triumph over death,—Oh death, where is thy sting? thanks be to God, who hath given us victory through Jesus Christ. And Simeon could sing when ready to die, Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace; For mine eyes have seen thy salvation. Whereas there are sad shiverings upon some gracious hearts, when death looketh in at the windows, because they question their admission into heaven, upon nature's dissolution.

2. Take heed of all scandalous sins, sins against conscience, the commission whereof may blemish Religion, and lie as blocks of offense in the ways of others. It is conceived by some Divines, that in this regard Saint Paul died with the more confidence, because after his conversion he was no way scandalous: I have fought the good fight, and I have kept the faith, and henceforth is laid up for me a Crown of righteousness. Whereas Peter having dishonored Christ, disgraced his profession, wounded his own conscience, and prejudiced others (how far we know not) by his fearful, threefold denial; was so full of perplexity, that Christ saw cause (before the foretelling of his death) to confirm his heart in helping on the discovery of his sincere love, notwithstanding that sad offensive Apostasy. Broken bones, though knit, will ache towards change of weather. And the remembrance of scandalous miscarriages, may occasion anguish in the bosoms of dying Saints.

3. Settle your outward estate and concernments, according to divine prudence and holy principles, remembering that you must be accountable unto the Lord, (whose stewards you are) how you dispose of the things of this life with which he hath entrusted you. This was God's own advice unto Hezekiah. Thus saith the Lord, set thine house in order, for thou shalt die.

Many good people dear unto God, upon this neglect are less comfortable to themselves, and less serviceable unto others upon their death-beds, because they suspect the many sad consequences of their not endeavoring to prevent sin and trouble by an orderly settling of all the earthly enjoyments.

4. Leave with gracious gravity and seriousness, charges and convictions upon the consciences of your nearest relations, that Christ, heaven and their immortal souls may be principally cared for. Warn your friends to beware of the sins of the times, and of their own inclinations. Communicate your experiences for future profit, prudently. Here I might expatiate upon the examples of Jacob blessing his sons, when on his death-bed; of Moses and of Joshua their plain dealing with Israel, when ready to die; yea, and of Christ himself: But I am necessitated to abbreviate these things with this hearty request, that my friendly, faithful counsel in these things may not be forgotten.

And do not (I pray you,) do not defer these things, for death may steal upon you suddenly, unexpectedly, as a man falls asleep sometimes, when he thought not of it.

This lets in the next point.

Doct. 2. That Christ's friends by death, do fall asleep. The Protomartyr Stephen his death is thus expressed: Hefell asleep. And the Apostle Paul doth often in the fifteenth Chapter of his first Epistle to the Corinthians, attest this truth.

This sleep is not to be applied unto the soul after its departure from the body (as some fondly dream;) for it goeth to God immediately, forth-with enjoyeth fellowship with Christ, and becometh perfect; But it belongs to the dead body, laid in the grave, which in this regard is called a sleeping place. I shall not dilate upon the resemblance betwixt death and sleep, which is fully done by others: But I will only touch upon two things which are here intended. 1. Death is a sleep unto the godly, because thereby they are laid to rest. There is ataking of rest by sleep. They shall rest in their beds, saith the Prophet, speaking of the death of righteous ones. And they rest from their labors, (so saith the Spirit) who die in the Lord. 2. Because their bodies shall be raised, as men are awakened out of sleep: This is expressed in the words which immediately follow the Text: Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of sleep. And the Apostle Paul is much upon this Metaphor, in that place where he undertaketh to prove the Resurrection.

Use 1. Therefore true believers, real Saints should not be afraid to die.

I grant that death unto nature is the King of fears, and it hath its poisonous sting with which it will wound the wicked, whom it doth usher into hell. This (with many other useful truths relating unto death) is admirably laid open of late by a worthy servant of Christ; and it would be a digression, if I should undertake that discovery: But I only move God's people, to arm themselves against the sinking fear of death, because unto them it is no worse then falling asleep. And indeed there is great need of this counsel among God's own servants everywhere, who like foolish children are afraid to put off their clothes, and go to bed in a dark chamber. Herein the forementioned Author, and others, have administered much good help, in which regard I may be silent.

Use 2. Neither let us mourn immoderately because of the death of our Christian friends; seeing they are only fallen asleep. When our Savior had spoken the words of the Text, Then said his Disciples, If he sleep, he shall do well. And by the argument the Apostle seeks to prevail with the Thessalonians, that they might not mourn excessively upon such occasion. For those who sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him. Then he addeth, We shall be ever with the Lord; wherefore comfort one another with these words. Love moveth joy, when our weak, weary, pained, diseased friends are fallen into a sound sweet sleep. This consideration therefore should cheer our drooping spirits, in reference unto godly friends, who died in the Lord. Let us mind this the rather, because God who propoundeth this ground of comfort, observeth both when we have need of this cordial, and also what improvement we make thereof, as it followeth in the next and last Doctrine, which remains to be handled.

Doct. 3. The Lord knoweth when his own and his Churches friends do fall asleep by death. As Christ, though now at a bodily distance from Bethany, the place of Lazarus his abode, yet told his Disciples of his death, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth. As God spake this to Joshua, My servant Moses is dead.

This truth may be concluded strongly by these arguments.

Reas. 1. Because Christ hath the keys of death in keeping; the soul cannot be let out of the body, without his leave. And he knoweth all his own grants.

Reas. 2. Because he also hath power in heaven, keeping (as it were) the gate hereof, into which none can enter without his allowance. This is manifest by his promise to the penitent thief: This day thou shalt be with me in Paradise. Therefore he exactly observeth, when any persons or person hath admission thither.

Use 1. Hence the deity of Christ may be proved undeniably; for though there be thousands dying hourly in the several places of the world, yet Christ knows particularly, 1. Both their qualification, whether his friends and his Churches friends, or no. 2. And the time, when everyone of them giveth up the ghost. As the instance under discourse doth evince. 1. He understood infallibly that Lazarus was a faithful friend, both unto himself and his servants: Our friend Lazarus. 2. And though he was not corporeally present with Lazarus in the place where he died, yet he knew without any creature-intelligence, that now he was fallen asleep by death.

Use 2. This truth speaketh manifold comforts unto God's children: For, 1. This hints his respect to them; Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his Saints. He will not suffer any of them to lose life without his special observation thereof, together with causes and concomitants therein considerable.

2. It suggests his care of every soul; when it removeth out of the body the place of its habitation, it shall not miscary or be lost through Christ's regardlessnesse. Though thousands of devils may watch to intercept the soul, yet Christ who observeth when it leaveth the body, will undoubtedly, according to his charge and promise, secure its Passages to glory. This is a Cordial to the poorest Christian, for there is no respect of persons with the Lord. It came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by the Angels into Abraham's bosom. And,

3. It may relieve the sad hearts of godly ones, mourning for their loss in the death of their dear Christian friends; for their God and Savior is quickly and fully acquainted with this their affliction: he saw when our beloved relations breathed out their last gasp. Questionlesse it cheered Hagar, when she understood that God took notice, when the bottle was empty; and heard the cry of Ishmael, because he wanted water. And you may be confident, that Christ who understands when your Parents, your Pastors, your yoakfellows, your friends die; he doth also consider what counsel, what comfort, what supports, what supplies, what encouragements you be deprived of by means of their death. Is not this a choice Cordial to God's children, that their heavenly Father knoweth they need such things?

Use 3. Lastly, this Doctrine yields matter of seasonable and needful admonition. Therefore upon the death of God's servants, we should seek after such dispositions, as may be pleasing unto his Majesty, who observeth together with such providences, how we are affected therewith.

Here then I would advise two particulars, wherein I entreat the Lord to make us serious.

1. To be rightly affected with such like dispensations, laying to heart the public loss sustained, when the friends of Christ and his servants are taken away by death. The Lord observeth and complaineth, when people do not herein answer his expectation, The righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart. And our love unto the public, together with the consideration of the great use of such persons, would help forward our humiliation in such cases. You heard before that they are friends to Christ, and much befriended by Christ, yea, that they are lovers of the cause and people of God. Now is not the death of such to be bewailed? When Elijah went up by a whirlwind to heaven, Elisha saw it, and he cried, My father, my father, the Charet of Israel, and the horsemen thereof. And when Elisha was sick, Joash (though not a good man) wept over him, and said, Oh my father, my father, the Charet of Israel, and the horsemen thereof. Because they believed that the public safety depended much upon the interest of godly men in God, therefore their death was thus lamented. And truly such friends of God are the chief stakes in the hedge, and main pillars in the building, both of Church and Common-wealth. Therefore in such cases, it may well become us to imitate the devout men, who carried Stephen to his grave, and made great lamentation for him.

2. To imitate the deceased Saints in their graces and holy conversation; we should lay their lives, as so many fair copies before our eyes, and labor to write after them, by conscientious imitation. The Apostle having given in a catalogue of Old-Testament-believers, who in their several places and ages did worthily, he earnestly persuadeth Christians to be followers of them. And seeing God hath given us to behold the beauty of holiness, and the power of godliness in their courses, it will much aggravate our sin, if we labor not to be like them.

This leadeth me to that which you all look for, (viz) to spread before you the exemplary life of Master Jeremiah Whitaker the late Pastor of this place, whose Funeral hath occasioned this great Assembly and my Sermon; in reference unto whom, that I may speak unto your edification, I will (with the change of one word only) undertake my Text again, Our friend Whitaker sleepeth. And truly I am very confident, that if Jesus Christ was here in his bodily presence among us, he would not be unwilling to speak these words, Our friend Whitaker sleepeth. Before I begin my Narrative, I crave leave to premise this, (viz.) that though (in some respects) I know a more meet man might have been chosen for this work; who could have done it more exactly and gracefully: yet I acknowledge that myself am not the unmeetest, considering my long and familiar acquaintance with him, especially if this be added, (viz.) that in Summer was twelve-month—I riding with him unto Tunbridge Wells, he was pleased to give me the History of his life, from his youth till that time; and since that time, it is well known to many, that no one hath had more frequent and familiar converse with him, than myself. Oh how often, and with what meltings hath he poured forth his heart into my bosom, in reference to all concernments, personal, relative, private, public, comfortable and uncomfortable, which have deeply affected him! My forgetfulness will necessitate the omission of many things, and my faithfulness with prudence command me to conceal much of that, which to my heart spake aloud his great goodness and high commendations. I will suggest the sum of what I judge most convenient to discover, in the report whereof my soul desireth (I hope) to honor God, and to profit his people.

He was borne at Wakefield in Yorkshire in the year 1599. When he was sixteen years old, he was sent to Cambridge, and placed a Sizar in Sydney College, where he was much valued for his pregnant parts, and Scholarship. At twenty years of age, having commenced Bachelor of Arts, he was sent unto Okeham (the chief Town in Rutlandshire) to teach the free-School there. About four years after he married Chephtzibah the daughter of Master William Peachy Minister of Okeham, an eminent linguist, a godly man, and (as I am informed) a painful Preacher of the Gospel, who dearly loved, and highly valued Master Whitaker, from his first acquaintance to his end; whose affections to him, wrought on the marriage betwixt him and his daughter. By whom God gave him four sons and three daughters; one son died at Cambridge, two are ordained Ministers, and the other is to be educated for the Ministry. Having stayed about seven years at Okeham, he was removed unto a Pastoral charge at Stretton in the same County, where he continued thirteen years, from whence he was called to Mary Magdalene Bermondsey, (with the approbation of many godly Ministers, whom he consulted in the case) where he after twelve years spent in his Ministerial charge finished his course upon the first day of June, 1654. and fell asleep in Jesus. He was betwixt fifty five and fifty six years old when the Lord was pleased to take him unto himself. He was buried in Bermondsey Church June the sixth, with expressions of much love from a very great multitude of godly persons, both Ministers and others of several ranks and conditions, who attended his corps to the grave. By reason of much study, and manifold employments in his calling, he was filled with various bodily distempers from his youth. In the latter part of his time, he was for sundry years exercised frequently with the painful diseases of the gout and of the stone. Notwithstanding the reiteration of these tormenting pains, he attended upon his Ministry both at home and abroad, while he was able to creep into the Pulpit, or to crawl unto the Congregation.

But about the beginning of November last past, the violent pain of the stone did in such measure and manner arrest him, that from that time, he continued God's prisoner in his bed, or chamber, till he was set free by a long expected death. Most Physicians in the City were consulted, and were from time to time very ready to serve him with their advice: who did unanimously conclude, his sharp pains to proceed originally from an ulcer in the kidneys, but immediately from an ulcer in the neck of the bladder, caused by a continual flux of ulcerous matter dropping down upon that part. And by reason of the acutenesse and quickness of the sense there, his pains were almost altogether in that place, though the fountain of them was from the kidneys. Towards his end, (about two months) the pain grew more extreme, yet divine indulgence vouchsafed some abatements and intermissions, both in the night & day. As his death drew nigh, his fits of pain were more frequent, either every half hour, or many times every quarter, yea, two or three times in a quarter of an hour, whereby nature being quite spent he died in the Lord. After his death, Master Holiard opened his body in the presence of D^r. Cox, D^r. Micklethwaite, and D^r. Bevoyr, (some other more ancient Doctors would have been there, if either their being out of Town, or present urgent occasions had not hindered) who found both his kidneys full of ulcers, and one was swelled to an extreme bigness, by the abundance of purulent matter in it. Upon the neck of his bladder, they found a stone, (which was about an inch and an half long, and one inch broad, weighing above two ounces, when first taken out, and withal, an ulcer which was gangrened, and this was judged the cause of his death. All other parts of his body were found firm and sound. Now that which I shall relate concerning him in all those places and changes of life wherein God disposed of him, I will cast under the several heads upon which I did discourse in my Sermon. And this method I do the rather resolve upon, both because it best suits with mine own thoughts, and may prove the most profitable unto them who shall be pleased to read the Sermon, when they perceive the main parts thereof, applied and verified in this providential Text, Our friend Whitaker sleepeth.

The first Head, He loved Christ. He loved Christ, 1. Quickly. 2. Strongly. 3. Constantly. The Lord did win his heart unto himself, while he was a Scholar at Wakerfield, where he had his education. For then and there his affections did flow out towards those who were most religiously disposed, with whom he went frequently eight or ten Miles to hear a waking-soul-warming Sermon, and he was wont to join with them in prayers and other holy exercises. And being able to take Sermon-notes, both understandingly and largely, he was very helpful to Christians in the repeating of what they had publicly heard, being from his childhood full of affections in whatsoever business he undertook. Thus this plant did both blossom and put forth fruit quickly, which providence did afterwards make a very fruitful tree. For the more clear discovery of his abundant love to Jesus Christ, I will give these demonstrations.

First, from his early, and constant vigorous workings of heart towards the calling and work of the Ministry; because he always conceived, that therein a Christian might enjoy most fellowship with Christ, and do him the best service. And he considered Christ's speech to Peter, If thou love me, feed my sheep, feed my lambs.

Here I judge these particulars very worthy of consideration. 1. That while he was a Grammar-Scholar, this calling he chose; and though his father endeavored often and earnestly to divert his thoughts from the Ministry, yet he was unmovable in his desires to be a Minister. 2. That he never repented of this his choice, but would all his life long, upon all occasions, magnify this his office. I have many times heard him speak these words, I had much rather be a Preacher of the Gospel, than an Emperor. And when a motion was once made to him for a Mastership in the University, he readily returned this answer, My heart doth more desire to be a constant Preacher, than to be the Master of any College in the world. 3. That when he was motioned to marry her whom God afterwards made his wife; he was the rather inclined to accept the motion, because she was daughter to a pious, painful, learned Minister of the Gospel, and would occasionally tell his friends, that he was the better pleased with his choice, because of that relation. 4. That he was never so well pleased with any employment, as that of his Ministry. In the Pulpit he still was like a fish in the water. Though many times he went halting and full of pain thither; yet he would not manifest any sense of distemper, while he was there. How often hath he gone upon crutches unto the Congregation of his own people, to fulfil his Ministry! yea, once (at least of my knowledge) he adventured to Preach at Michaels Cornhill, when he was scarce able to get into the Pulpit, and his friends with much difficulty helped him out of the Church homeward. 5. That when he was by extreme pains taken off from his Ministry, he would sometimes profess unto some special friends, that the pain felt was not so grievous to his Spirit, as his inability (by reason thereof) to manage his wonted work. Many times these were his words, If I could but Preach, I should be much better. And he would rejoice with cheerfulness, and thankfulness, when in the times of his weakness, he found not himself more distempered by his preaching, and would mention such experiences as arguments to move his friends to yield unto his preaching, when they did dissuade it as prejudicial 6. He did zealously, upon all occasions, both in public and private defend the office of a Gospel Ministry, and especially amongst those persons, and in such places, where (as he conceived) there was most need. This passage fell from him with affection, in one of his morning Lectures at Westminster: Though I have read and heard of some good men, who unadvisedly in their passion have persecuted the persons of some godly Ministers, (as Asa was angry with the Seer, and cast him into prison) yet I never knew, I never read, nor heard of any godly person, who did dare to oppose the calling of the Ministry. And whereas at the end of his Sermon, a soldier (expressing himself dissatisfied with the Sermon) came to him in private and asked him, whether he meant this Ministry of England, as now constituted? he returned this answer, Although I will not justify the calling of every individual Minister in the Church of England (as you dare not justify the Saintship of every member in your independent Congregations) yet I will be ready when and where you please to maintain the office and calling of England's Ministry at this day. 7. And that he continued unchanged in this his estimation of the calling Ministerial, may be manifested by one passage in his last Will and Testament, (though it was not long) which I will put down in his own words, writ with his own hand: For my son Jeremiah, my desire is, that he be bred a Scholar, and that the Lord would spiritually incline his heart, freely to give up himself to the Lord, to serve him in the work of the Ministry, which calling and employment (though now despised) I do esteem above all other in the world, and do commend it to all mine, that if the Lord bless them with sons, they would commend this calling to their posterity. Before I pass from this my first demonstration of his love to Christ, I heartily desire, that this may be seriously considered, whether there be not herein much to credit and encourage the Ministry of the Gospel; That a learned man, and so eminent for piety, who also had thoroughly studied the Controversies of the times against the Ministry, should upon his death-bed, give such a testimony unto it, when he daily expected to make up his account before God, and also give so great encouragement unto his posterity, to undertake this calling now, even now when such disgrace is cast upon it, and when the Ministers settled maintenance is threatened to be taken from them? And may not those men who know Mr. Whitaker's worth be hereby awed, and moved to take heed how they oppose or slight that calling of men, whom he (living and dying) judged to be so highly honored by God himself? To all this add, that it was an ordained Ministry, which he thus valued, as is evident by these two things (as by many living testimonies,) viz. 1. That he joined with the Classis whereof he was a member in ordaining Ministers. 2. That he had an hand in the book lately published by the Province of London in the defense of such a Ministry, not only by assent, but also by assistance.

Secondly, his love to Christ was proclaimed, by his unwearied laboriousnesse in his Ministerial services. 1. While he continued Schoolmaster at Okeham, he undertook a Lecture there weekly, besides many Sermons preached occasionally in neighbor Congregations. 2. During his abode at Stretton, besides his Pastoral employment twice every Sabbath, his constant weekly Preaching at Okeham, he was a principal prop to hold up the Lectures in the neighbourhood. His manner was to set apart every holy day (if but one in the week) as a day of seeking God, in reference to the necessities of the times, and no man was more frequent in assisting in days of humiliation in private, both in Rutland shire, and the adjacent Counties, when ever invited thereto. 3. And since God's good providence brought him to the neighbourhood of London, he was in labors more abundant (2 Cor. 11. 23.) For the most part, his set task was four Sermons weekly, (viz.) two at home, and two elsewhere, (viz.) at Westminster and Christ's Church London, or Westminster and Stepney, (since he laid down Christ's Church Lecture) together with two Sermons every quarter at Michael Cornhill. Add hereto his Preaching monthly at the morning-exercise, or assistance on the fast day at the conclusion thereof, besides occasional Sermons for preparation to the Sacrament at his own place, and at Funerals, both at home and abroad: Yea, I will close up the evidencing of the labors of his love, with this true report, (viz.) that he would never deny any motion for preaching, and praying, if God gave bodily ability, and other unavoidable occasions did not necessarily hinder. Many week-days he preached twice, yea, then when he attended the work of the Assembly of Divines, (viz.) the morning-exercise, either at Westminster or elsewhere, & afterwards in the afternoon. I here remember the commendation which St. Paul gave of Epaphroditus, in his Epistle to the Philippians; For the work of the Lord he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life. How far this is appliable to painful Mr. Whitaker, multitudes do well know, yea, many conceive that his painful distempers (which hastened his removal from us) were caused and increased by his many constant labors in this kind. Neither were his Sermons jejune and dry, because thus frequent; but always full of Scripture strength, savoury & affectionate, as his Auditors will testify.

Thirdly, Such was his love to Christ, that his public Employments did not take him off from family-duties, nor from more private exercises of communion with God. His ordinary course was, together with prayers, to expound some parts of the holy Scriptures in his own family twice every day: and beside other parts of Scripture which he daily read in secret, he usually read over all the Epistles in the Greek Testament twice every fournight: yea when by reason of pain and weakness he himself could not read, he herein employed others for his help. Hence it was that he was a man mighty in the Scriptures (like unto Apollo, Acts 18. 24.) as was observed by all who conversed with him. And this course he earnestly commended to the practice of his dearly beloved eldest son, as an excellent means to make him both a ready and a profitable Preacher.

Fourthly, His courage in Christ's Cause did much commend his love, whereof I will suggest these evidences.

1. While he lived in Rutland-shire, he refused to read the book allowing of sports upon the Sabbath, though it was with commands and threatenings pressed upon him. And when he was called to give in his answer, about the collection amongst Ministers to maintain the War against Scotland, he openly told the Bishop or Chancellor that his conscience could not yield thereto. This his answer exposing him to great danger both to lose living and liberty in those times, a neighbor through misguided love (compassionating him and his family) paid the money, and subscribed Mr. Whitaker's name without his knowledge. This he was long ignorant of; and when he heard it, he expressed, with many complaints, much grief of heart.

2. Since our times of woeful desertion and Apostasy both from Gospel-truths and practices, he would undauntedly in private conferences and in his public Ministry express his dislike, yea, detestation thereof to the faces of them who too much favored Error, Heresies and ranting courses, though he knew that thereby he did run hazards and procure many frowns. He refused to subscribe the late Engagement, though thereby he was in danger to be taken off from his Westminster Lecture. And if his Sermons preached there, upon Ephes. 2. 2, 3. (concerning men's walking according to the course of this world, &c. fulfilling the lusts of the flesh &c.) could be collected and published, thereby it would be manifest that M^r. Whitaker in love unto his Lord Christ, was a man of good metal and magnanimity.

3. One more private proof of the good man's valiant love to Christ I will make bold to insert; because myself can knowingly attest its truth▪ Since these stormy days, wherein the liberty and livelihood of Ministers have been maligned and struck at, he riding with an intimate friend by Tiburn, (which he had not known or not observed before) demanded what that was? and answer being made this is Tiburn, where many Malefactors have lost their lives, he stopped his horse, and uttered these words with great affection, O what a shame is it that so many thousands should die for the satisfaction of their lusts, and so few be found willing to lay down their lives for Christ▪ Why should not we in a good Cause, and upon a good call, be ready to be hanged for Jesus Christ? It would be everlasting honor; and it is a thousand times better to die for Christ, to be hanged, to be burnt for Christ, then to die in our beds. And how much he condemned life, in respect unto Christ Jesus, there are many who from his own mouth can witness.

Fifthly, So great was his love unto his God and Savior, that he maintained and expressed high estimations, and honorable thoughts of his Majesty, when under tormenting providences, nothing being more feared then this, lest he should do or speak any dishonors unto his Name. These were some breathings of his large love, when through pain he was, as in the fire, and upon the Rack, Good Lord, keep me from dishonoring thy Name by impatency. O, who would not even in burnings have honorable thoughts of God! Who that knoweth thee would not fear thee, O Lord, love thee, and honor thee! Lord, thou givest me no cause to have any hard thought of thee! Blessed be God, there is nothing of hell in all this. Blessed be his Name for Jesu• Christ, and the revelation of the everlasting Gospel. Who knoweth the power of thy wrath? If it be so heavy upon thy servant here, how heavy shall it be to all those who shall endure it without mixture? Blessed be God for the peace of mine inward man, when my outward man is so full of trouble. This is a bitter cup, but it is of my Fathers mixture, and shall I not drink it? yea, Lord, through thy strength I will: this is my burden; and I will bear it. Upon any abatement of his pains, he was constantly much in blessing God, using these and such like expressions▪ O! what a mercy is it that there is any mitigation, any intermission! Lord, make me thankful. And turning himself towards those who stood by, he would speak thus. O help me to be thankful! O lift up a prayer for me that I may be thankful! O what a mercy is this! How much worse might this affliction have been! I might have been distracted or laid roaring under disquietness of spirit. By these workings of his spirit (which myself and others do well remember, and I could heartily wish that all the rest had been recorded) who perceiveth not the sparklings of his love to God? I will annex one more, which hath much affected my heart, viz. these words he hath often spoken to me; Brother, through mercy I have not one repining thought against God.

Now upon all these considerations, I appeal unto the consciences of all ingenuous ones, whether there be not ground▪ to believe, that Christ (if here with us) would give him the honor of this compellation, My loving friend Whitaker.

The second head of my Narrative followeth, That Christ loved Mr. Whitaker. (For as I discovered in my Sermon, this love is always mutual.) The discovery hereof will be clear upon a double account, viz.

1. Because of the graces with which he was enriched.
2. Because of the Comforts with which he was refreshed.

As for the first. Love-tokens are real messengers of his love who sendeth them: and what surer signs of divine love then the graces of the holy Ghost? Now of these the Lord had given him, in measure, more then ordinary. That which was hinted before in his love to the Lord Jesus, (expressed by laborious, courageous endeavors to advance his praise, and to continue communion with him) doth manifest that he was very rich in Grace; but thereunto I will add five more graces which were very shining in his crown.

1. Tenderness of heart. Who ever knew man of a more melting frame before God, whether in confessions, petitions, or thanksgivings? Is there any one living that can say, I have sometimes joined with him in Prayer, and he shed no tears? How did his own sinfulness, (though no more then the ordinary imperfections of the fairest Saints on earth) the evils of the times, and the testimonies of God's displeasure breaking out, break his heart into pieces? Truly I believe that for the space of many years, he did never come off from the serious consideration of these things with dry eyes. And how many thousands would account it a sign of much love from Christ, if they could find such thawings in their frozen breasts?

2. Meekness of spirit. With this precious Jewel he was adorned richly. Who ever saw him transported by passion, on a fire through foolish anger, or disguised by discontent? Though he would be warm for God; yet he was a man of a cool spirit, meek, like Moses, in all his own concernments. Among many other manifestations hereof, this one was remarkable, that when upon warm disputes with men of dissenting principles and opinions, his spirit was so even, that unhandsome provocations would not discompose him. Hereof I could give instances; but I must forbear.

3. For Patience he may well be called a second Job. Many who saw him under his racking pains, so frequently reiterated, and so long continued, are confident that God did put him, and keep him in his furnace to be a pattern of patience unto posterity. It's true, he did roar many times till his throat was dry, but whoever heard him speak one word of murmuring or discontent because of God's afflicting providence? He himself indeed would sometimes through tenderness charge himself of impatience, because he made a noise, whereas that expressed only Nature's sensibleness, not sinful forwardness. And when (accusing himself in that kind causelessly) he was minded of Christ's roarings, though free from all sin, he would be silent. I confess that in desires to be dissolved, he would take up Jobs complaint: Wherefore is light given to him that is in misery, and life unto the bitter in soul? Which long for death, but it cometh not, and dig for it more then for hid treasures, &c. for my sighing cometh before I eat, and my roarings are poured out like waters, Job 3. 20, 24. But he always concluded with submission unto the good pleasure of God. When he had been asked how he did? this was frequently his answer, The bush always burning, but not consumed; and though my pains be above the strength of nature, yet they are not above the supports of grace.

4. The Lord gave him so much of the Spirit of grace and supplications, that his soul was never out of tune for that service. Most of his words when under torment, were holy complaints and prayers to God: some of them I will record, that they may not be forgotten. O my God help! Father of mercies pity! Do not contend forever, consider my frame, that I am but dust! My God that hath made heaven and earth help me! O give me patience, and inflict what thou wilt! If my patience was more, my pain would be less. Dear Savior, where are thy bowels! Why doest thou make me an astonishment to myself and others? Why doest thou cover thyself with a thick cloud, that our prayers cannot pass? Blessed is the man that endureth temptation. Lord, this is a sad temptation; stand by me and say, It is enough! Am I not thy servant? Consider, Lord, that I am thy servant. O these bitter waters of Marah! Lord, drop sweet comfort into these bitter waters of Marah. O the blood of sprinkling, Lord: Lord, the blood of sprinkling! That blood which extinguisheth the fire of thine anger, O that it might allay my burning pains! I am in a fiery furnace; Lord, be with me, as thou wast with the three children, bring me out refined from sin. When I have sailed through the Ocean of these pains, and look back, I see none of these can be wanting. I fly unto thee, O God, hide me under the shadow of thy wings till these terrible storms be over-past.

5. God added Humility as a crown to all his other Graces, which did shine very bright in the eyes of all who were acquainted with him. Hence it was, that he would converse familiarly with the poorest Christians, and with them who were of low parts for knowledge. This his ordinary expression of himself before God, spake loud: Poor worm, sinful wretch! O pardon my transgressions, for they are very great. Hereupon he would weep much when he was told how much he was prayed for, wondering at God's goodness, that so worthless a wretch should have so much interest in the hearts and prayers of the people of the Lord. And his language in his Will reports how little he was in his own eyes: The words are there, I desire that at my Funeral there may be no pomp, but that so poor a worthless wretch may be privately laid in the ground.

Thus from the rare Graces received, I proceed to the rich Comforts vouchsafed, as manifestations of Christ's singular love towards this Saint of the most High God. O what kisses of Christ's mouth, and what embraces from the arms of his love were bestowed upon this man of God! He enjoyed all along his afflicted condition, an uninterrupted assurance of God's fatherly love in Christ. In his addresses to God he constantly claimed propriety, My God, and my Father. His inward peace and joy, were the support of his heart under all his g•inding pains. He was confident of mercies mixtures with all his grievous distempers, not at all doubting of the Sanctification of them through grace. Thus he spake many times in his Applications to God: Consider and save me, for I am thine. How long, Lord, how long shall I not be remembered? yea, I am remembered, blessed be thy Name. This is a fiery chariot, but it will carry me to heaven. Blessed be God that hath supported me hitherto, and he that hath delivered, will deliver. Thou, Lord, never forgettest them that put their trust in thee. Always when the extremity of pain was over, he would, with smiles speak of God's mercies. Though trembling took hold upon him when his violent pains began, yet he would with confidence say, Now in the strength of the mighty God I will undergo these pains. O my God put under thine everlasting arms, and strengthen me. Many times he hath told me, that notwithstanding all his rentings and roarings (from which he expected no deliverance but by death) he would not for a thousand worlds change estates with the greatest man on earth, whom he looked upon as in a way of sin. And let me tell you one providence of fatherly indulgence towards him▪ That Satan never shook his confidence, nor assaulted his hopes, all the time of his tiresome, irksome exercise. There is but one passage more which I shall point at under this second head of my Narrative, viz. That he accounted all these inward chearings the fruits of Prayers made for him, though God saw cause to deny that ease and recovery to his body which was much begged; withal valuing those spiritual cordials much beyond deliverance from the Gout and Stone, and death itself.

All these things I have the rather mentioned, to prevent that discouragement or offense, which some may be too apt to take at the continuance of his wasting, tormenting pains, notwithstanding his own godliness, and the uncessant Prayers, both ordinary and extraordinary, which were made unto God in his behalf: for he found the sweet fruits of them in his own bosom, when he felt the continuance and increase of his bodily griefs.

I proceed to the third head of my promised Narrative, which will speak Mr. Whitaker's love to his fellow-Christians. He was a man made up (as it were) of love: His delight was in the Saints upon earth, whom he esteemed most excellent, and their society was a constant cordial unto his spirit. His frequent visits of them who were in trouble, and his stirring up others to the like practice, were testimonies of his friendship. His love was not only verbal, but real. Truly I know no man of his estate more liberal. He would often say. It's a brave thing when a man with a full estate hath a charitable heart. Sometimes upon special occasions he himself hath given away all the money he had in his house. It was not unusual with him to give twenty shillings unto a poor Saint, and he had many experiences of God's gracious returns in such cases. By his Will he gave 20. l. to the godly poor of his own Parish.

There were two cases wherein his loves were most enlarged to the people of God, whereof I shall give in two instances. The one when their sufferings were public. He hath often told me that England's late breach with Scotland, and the blood shed, with other sad consequences thereof, had taken such impression upon his heart, that the sorrow would never be removed till his death. And the sufferings both in Holland and England, upon our late Sea-fights, were great burdens upon his spirit. The other case was in reference to the inward perplexity of such as were afflicted in mind. Having moved me the week before his death to bestow a visit upon one in that condition, the morning before his death, (when speech was grievous in respect of his weaknesses) he asked me whether I had remembered the party troubled in spirit? which is a remarkable evidence of strong loves. Besides all that hath been mentioned, I could relate his many wrestlings with God to prevent the flood of troubles which he apprehended the Protestant Churches are now in danger to be overflowed withal; as also his compassionate respect to Congregations in the Country, who were like sheep wandering upon the barren mountains without a shepherd.

The fourth head of my Narrative should hold forth the love which he received from the Saints of God. What godly heart that either knew him, or heard of his fame, did not love him? I will not speak of the frequent friendly visits of the Religious ones in the neighborhood round about. I never heard of any man so much prayed for, both in public and private. There was no particular case so frequently, so affectionately spread before God in most of the Congregations about London as his. Three days were set apart by Ministers, and many other praying friends to seek God in his behalf; one in private, and two in public, which also were observed much better then such days usually are; yea, in remote Countries, besides the ordinary prayers made for him, there were some Fasts kept, with special reference to his affliction. The multitude of people attending his Funeral, with the many weeping eyes, did witness how much he was beloved. Here I might remember the readiness of London-Ministers to supply his place at home, and Lectures elsewhere, as also the willingness of fellow-Lecturers at Westminster to preach for him there, when he himself by reason of weakness could not possibly do his own work: But I may be silent, for still everywhere upon the naming of him, love is some way discovered by such who had knowledge of him.

Though I have related much concerning the worth of this good man; yet my conscience tells me, that I have rather been defective then excessive in my relation. I have not told you of his humility, expressed by fears, lest God's people praying for him should speak too well of him before the Lord. Neither have I mentioned his self-denial, never daring to look after great matters in the world, whereby he condemneth many whose self-seeking in earthly advantages, rendereth them very offensive and unsavory in the Church of Christ. Towards his end neither faith nor patience did abate, though his grievous pains were more frequent and violent; in which regards his longings for death were much increased, yet attended with holy submission unto the good pleasure of God: These were some of his expressions, O my God, break open the prison-door, and set my poor captive soul free; but enable me willingly to wait thy time! I desire to be dissolved; never did any man more desire life then I do death! When will that time come, when I shall neither sin more, nor sorrow more? When shall mortality put on immortality? When shall this earthly be dissolved, that I may be clothed upon with that house which is from heaven? Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors, and follow the Lamb wheresoever he goeth.

The Sabbath seven-night before God released him, though his pains were very sharp, yet he bestowed most part of the time of public Ordinances in prayer with those that were with him, and his petitions were most for Ministers, that God would clothe his Ordinances with his own power, and enable Ministers to speak unto the souls of people. Then also he did with many tears bewail his detainment from the Sanctuary and Sabbath-opportunities, which had been his delight; professing also, that his being taken off from service was a greater affliction to him then all his pains. And because this apprehension, (viz. his unserviceableness) did much afflict him; therefore this was often suggested to him, (which also was relieving to his spirit,) viz. that now by the practice of Faith, Patience, Contentment, and Spiritualnesse (which he had formerly preached) he was very profitable unto them who did visit him, and might also prove very advantageous unto others who might be acquainted therewith, through God's grace by Christ. So great was his tender respect unto his friends, that when his pains were coming with violence, he would entreat them to with-draw from him, that they might not be grieved with his roarings. He would often bless God, that his compassionate friends were not necessitated to abide within the reach of his doleful lamentations.

I hearing, the night before God translated him, that he was not likely to live another day, I went early in the morning to take my leave of him (whom my soul loved) and found his bodily strength almost spent. And because he could not speak without difficulty, I spake the more unto him, in relation to the approach of his happy hoped for change: my discourse through God's mercy was refreshing unto his spirit. Minding him that many of his friends intended to set apart that day in seeking the Lord for him, I asked him in what things especially he desired to be remembered before the Throne of Grace? His answer was, Do not complain, but bless God for me, and entreat him to open the prison-door. Hereupon laying my hand upon his cold hand, covered with a clammy sweat, I took my last farewell with an aking heart: and upon my departure from him, these were his last words unto me, Brother, I thank you, I pray God bless you, and I bless God for you.

That day was spent in addresses to God for him at Peters Cornhill, where M^r. Newcomen quickened and guided our prayers in his Sermon from John 11. wherein he insisted especially upon these words, Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick, ver. 4. And M^r. Jenkyn endeavored to moderate and regulate our sorrows from Luke 23. 28. Weep not for me.

Thus his friends having by prayers, with praises (on his behalf) given him up to God, and having prepared their hearts for their loss of him, the Lord was pleased that evening to take him unto himself.

And now our friend Whitaker sleepeth. 1. He is dead, that speaketh sorrow. 2. His death is a sleep, this yieldeth relief.

First, His death is ground of lamentation, because Christ and his Church have now one friend less on earth to be serviceable unto both. I would awaken your hearts unto sensibleness under this great loss, and therefore wish that his great parts, many interests, frequent opportunities of service, together with the unmovable faithfulness of his heart to improve all for good, may be duly remembered, viz.

1. As for his Abilities, he was an universal Scholar, both in the Arts and Original Languages; by much study he had digested the whole Body of Divinity, he was well acquainted both with the Schoolmen and the Fathers, a good Disputant, judicious in Cases of Conscience, and second unto none in acquaintance with the holy Scripture.

2. He had much interest in the hearts of persons of chiefest places and power in the Nation: for the plainness of his spirit, together with the power of godliness (which did shine in his conversation) gained him much Authority in the consciences of all sorts with whom he conversed, whether in the City or Country.

3. And his opportunities of service were many, not only in Southwark, but also in London, Westminster, Stepney, where he had much employment.

We read when Dorcas was dead, that the widows stood weeping, and showing the coats which she had made, Acts 9. 39. and that upon Paul's departure the people wept, because they should see his face no more, Acts 20. 38. And is there not reason that we should be in like manner affected, remembering how truth hath been defended, error confuted, holiness cherished, wickedness checked, the cause of the poor pleaded, and the violence of some passionate spirits allayed by M^r. Whitaker? But now this able, public-spirited man must be serviceable on earth no more; now we shall not be edified by his Ministry anymore, nor warmed by his prayers anymore, nor cheered by his company and conference anymore. But let us moderate our sorrow by this following consideration, That our friend Whitaker is not dead, but sleepeth: For this assureth us both of his present ease, and future Resurrection. Now being asleep he is well, he resteth, (as in a bed) and we shall not see his pale face, his weeping eyes, his trembling hands anymore, we shall no more hear his deep groans, and doleful lamentations. He is fallen asleep in the Lord, and he and we shall have a better meeting at the general Resurrection then ever heretofore, and then shall we ever be with the Lord. Therefore let us comfort one another with these words, 1 Thes. 4. 15, 18.

I have but one thing more to hint; viz. That Christ now knoweth that this our precious friend sleepeth From whence I infer, 1. Comfort. 2. Counsel. This may be cheering unto all his mourning Relations, Domestic, Pastoral, Classical. For Christ understandeth that his wife hath lost a dear husband, his children an indulgent father, his people a faithful Pastor, the Classis a chief Pillar, and all good Christians a real friend.

And seeing Christ (considering that M^r. Whitaker is dead) doth also observe how we all are affected with this providence; therefore I beseech you, and beseech you again, to study in good earnest the gracious improvement of this sad dispensation. Let us hear the voice of this rod, repentingly remember the forfeitures made of this blessing, and make conscionable imitation of the good example he hath left us.

Though M^r. Whitaker is dead, yet his holy life speaketh. My Narrative hath told much of that which it speaketh, and my prayers are, that it may speak (through the concurrence of God's grace) that unto all our hearts, which may be for spiritual and eternal benefit by Christ.

FINIS.

POEMS, And ELEGIES On the Death of Mr. JEREMIAH WHITAKER.

On the Death of my dear Friend Mr. Jeremiah Whitaker.

IF death be but a servant sent to call
The souls of Saints to their original:
Dear St thine was a noble soul, to whom
Three Messengers were sent to call thee home;
A stone, an ulcer, and a gangrene too,
Three deaths to hastē that which one should do.
'Twas not because thy soul was deeper set
Then ours within its house of clay; nor yet
Because thou wert unwilling to depart
Thither; where long before had been thine hear••
They were not sent to hale by violence
A soul that lingered when 'twas called hence.
God showed how welcome one death was to thee
Who did, so meekly entertain all three.
Thus many deaths God's Israel did inclose,
The sea before, behind a sea of foes,
On either side the jaws of mountains high.
No way from death but unto death to fly.
Not to destroy them, but to let them see
The power of love, which then would se• them free.
Thus Jobs four Messengers which did relate
The doleful story of his ruined state
And his three friends, which acted Satan's part

(He on his flesh, and these upon his heart)
Who by disputing him unto a curse
Would make his spirits tormēt̄s the far worse,
Were by God's wise disposal sent to show
The strength he on his Champion would bestow.
Thus Painters put dark grounds, where they intend
To overlay with finest gold, & lend
By deeper shadows luster to that face,
On which they mean their choicest skill to place.
Thus workmen season much with sun & wind
Those greatest beams which must the building bind Whilst smaler pieces haply are put in
When they come bleeding from the wood & green.
Oft where is greatest grace, God's pleased to send Great conflicts those great graces to commend
As the six finger'd Giants sword did bring
The more renown to little David's sling.
The vanquished Lion, and the conquered Bear
Prepar'd that holy head a Crown to wear.
The Angel wrestled first, and then did bless
And made the greater servant to the less.
Pain was to great for thee, God's grace for pain,
And made the greater serve the less again.
Thy pains served thee to glory, and did sit
The head on which a Crown of life must sit.
This is God's method to fetch joy from grief,
To turn our sorrows unto our relief,
To save by killing and to bring to shore

By the ships planks which was quite broke before.
And thus a barren womb first took the seed
Which did six hundred thousand people breed.
That seed too must from knife and alter rise,
And be before a fire a sacrifice.
Great Preacher of thine heavenly Fathers will Thy tongue did many years with Manna fill.
Thy life out-preached thy tongue, O blessed strife!
Thy sickness the best Sermon of thy life.
Before each Doctrine must be proved anew,
Thine end was one great proof that all was true.
Before thou preached by weeks, but now by hours,
Each minute taught thy mourning Auditors,
Each patient groan, and each believing eye
Was a new Sermon in Brachygraphy.
When nature roars without repining words,
Grace in the mouth whē in the bowels swords,
In midst of torments to triumph over hell,
To feel God's Arrows, yet his praises tell.
Through thickest clouds to see the brightest light,
In blackest darkness to have clearest sight,
And with our Lord to cry, my God, my God
Upon a Cross under the sharpest rod.
This is indeed to preach; this is to show
Faiths triumph over natures greatest woe.
Then welcome fiery Serpēts scortching sting,
Which did thee thus to th' brazen Serpent bring.
Then welcome Whale, which though it first devour,

Renders at last the Prophet to the shore.
Well mightest thou bear the stone which death did throw,
Who hadst the white stone the new name to show:
Well mightest thou be with such an ulcer calm
Whose soul was healed before with heavens balm.
When spirits wounds are cured though nature groan,
An heart of flesh can heal a back of stone:
Let conscience have her feast, and let flesh roar,
This pain shall make the others joy the more,
As many times those flowers most fragrant smell
Which nearest to sōe noisome weeds do dwell.
Thus have you seen the forge most clearly glow,
On which the Smith doth drops of water throw.
Keen frosts make fire the hotter, & deep night
Causeth coelestial lamps to shine more bright.
And by a dear Antiperistasis,
The child's distress sweetens the father kiss.
A wounded body yields to a sound soul
The joys of this do th' others pains control.
As in the day that the Sun beams appear
All other lesser stars do disappear.
When heaven shines and divine love doth▪ reign,
The soul is not at leisure to complain.
Internal joys his heart so well composes,
That they have judged their flames a bed of Roses.
Mr. Gataker. Mr. Whitaker.
But what shall England do from whence are lopt,
Two of her richest acres to heaven dropt.

By loss of these two acres she's more poor,
Then if she'had lost a hundred Lordships more.
'Twere a good purchase to gain these agen,
By giving to the sea all Lincoln-fen.
Two little mines of gold do far surpass
Huge Mannors where th' whole vesture is but grass.
Learn we by them what all men will once say,
One Pearch of heaven, 's worth the whole globe of clay.

Ed. Reynolds. D. D.

To the memory of Mr. Jeremy Whitaker powerful in Prayer and Preaching, pious in life, patient in sickness, &c.

NAY, now forbear; for pity sake give over,
You that would make the Clergy none, or poor:
We are made miserable enough this year,
That we have lost our Reverend Whitaker;
Los•e above Deans and Chapters! had but he Liv'd still & preached—Ziba take all (for me.)
Nay I believe, had Sacrilegious hands
Finger'd our poor Remains of Tithes, & Lands
Whilst he surviv'd they had but sinned in vain,
Whitaker would have prayed them back again,
As Luther did a young man's soul repeal
Giv'n to the Devil under hand and Seal.
A Chariot and an Horsman we have lost
In whose each single pray'r incamptan Host.
How have I heard him (on some solemn day
When doubtful War could make all London pray)
Mount up to heaven with armed cries & tears,

And rout as far as York the Cavileers,
Have you not seen an early-rising Lark
Spring from her turf, making the Sun her mark;
Shooting herself aloft, yet high•, higher,
Till she had sung herself into heav'ns Choir?
Thus would he rise in pray'r, and in a trice
His soul become a Bird of Paradise,
And if our faint devotions prayers be;
What can we call his less then Extasie?
On his Preaching.
If with th' Almighty he prevailed so,
Wonder not that he wonders wrought below;
The son of consolation, and of thunder
Met both in him, in •thers are asunder.
He was (like Luke) Physician of both kinds,
Wrought cures upon men's bodies and their minds.
The falling sickness of Apostasy,
Dropsy of drunkenness, prides trimpany,
The Megrim of opinions new, or old,
Palsy of unbelief, Charities Cold,
Lusts burning Feaver, Angers Calenture,
The Collick in the conscience he could cure:
Set the souls broken bone•; by holy Art
He hath dissolved the stone in many a heart
Harder then that he died of.—O come in,
Ye multitudes whom he hath healed of sin,
And thereby made his debtors—pay him now
Some of those tears which he laid out for you;

Interest-tears I mean, for should you all Weep over him both use, and principal
'Twould wash away the stone, which covers him
And make his Coffin (like an Ark) to swim.
Now wipe thine eyes (my Muse) and stop thy verse,
(Thy ink can only serve to black his herse)
Yet (stay) I will drop one tear, sigh one sigh more,
'Tis this: Although my Poetry be poor,
O what a mighty Prophet should • be,
Had this Elija's mantle fallen to me!
Oh might I live his life! I'de be content
His sore diseases too should me torment,
And if his Patience could mine become,
I would not be afraid of Martyrdom.

Robert Wilde.

Upon the Pious, and painful Preacher Mr. Jeremy Whitaker.

An Epitaph.

I Eremy's not here into the dungeon thrown,
'Tis heav'ns Whit-acre (only) newly Mown;
Now Angel-reapers gathered have to Barn
The seedsman of God's Word like full ripe Corn.
In tears he sow'd, & now the heavenly Q•ire
To give him joy of Harvest all conspire.
In his sick bed this Paradox we found,
The thorny, and the stony are good ground.
The gout and stone (as millstones) ground the man
To finest flower for Mancher; here no Bran
These sisting times could find: nere did man say,

The Preacher spake as mealy-mouthed today.
Gallants (you mealy heads & capes that have)
Go take perfumed powder from his grave,
The dust off's feet was beautiful, and he
Your powder; and your looking-glass may be.
His life a Sermon was, his dust doth cry
All flesh is grass, go home, and learn to die.
England may ever glory, Rome despair
In Whit ac'e i'th Pulpit, and i'th Chair.
Thomas Hodges, B. D.

An Elegy upon the Death of Mr Whitaker.

IF passion can make Poets, or grief raise Expressions great enough to speak thy praise,
Then might •, Whitaker, thy worth rehearse;
And with my stowings deck thy sacred Herse.
A Synod's only fit to speak thy fall,
And bear a part in this their Funeral.
Divines must grieve that with thee tomb'd doth lie.
What now we vainly seek, Divinity.
If we would hear such pray'rs as could heaven move
And tune the spheres into a Choir of love Sweeter than Angels Anthems, then we must Ransack thy grave, and reinspire thy dust.
There scattered lies that voice, which could inspire
All hearts, and fill them with an holy fire
As flames get flames: Who thunder did defy Six words of thine could melt, and purify
Such Callous souls, which at their sins never vext.

Did find thy Sermons keener then the Text.
Thy Doctrine still was edge'd against men's crimes
And served to lance the ulcers of the times:
Who now shall teach the wicked their sad doomes?
Or else convince that faith by hearing comes?
For whosoe're heard thee, were caught by th' ear
And went out converts, that came curious there.
But those who n•re were wearied with thy voice
Do now complain of too much length and noise.
For since, blest O•ator, thou parted'st hence,
The Pulpit only suffers violence.
Edw. Bagshaw.

On the much lamented death of that Reverend man of God, Mr. Jeremiah Whitaker, his dear friend and old neighbor, both in City and Country.

If Reason, Virtue, Wisdom make a man,
If Faith, Hope, Charity the Christian;
If faithful, useful, cheerful grace a friend,
Arts, Tongues, choice Wit, rare Memory commend
The Scholar; if Humanity, Divinity,
Candor, Humility, bowels, integrity;
If parts, pains, zeal, sound Doctrine, utterance, tears,
Faith, courage, prudence, patience, fasting, prayers,
Success crown Preacher; Lo, of thousands ten
That Man, Friend, Christian, Scholar, Preacher then.
Never in times unfixt a man more fixed;
Never in heart so pure, graces more mixed;
Mildnes with boldness, courage with courtesy;
High parts, low thoughts, yielding with constancy:

Well to conceive and speak, to speak and do,
And do so much, so much to suffer too.
For Love a Jonathan, for Truth Nathanael;
For Meekness Moses▪ and for courage Daniel;
Call'd when a child a second Jeremiah;
For spirit, prayer, power the third Elijah,
For firmness C•phas, for sympathy a Paul,
For pains, success exceeding most or all.
One thing was lacking yet to make him higher,
As gold, or Job, he must into the fire.
As gold, or Job he was unto the last,
For patience proved, Integrity held fast.
Who ere saw such sharp pains? heard such sweet prayers?
Strong cries, but stronger faith, praises with tears?
Ou• Lord by suffering did to perfection grow:
In suffering obedience he did learn and show,
This man of God came to that altitude
By suffering, of sore pains, that multitude.
The racking Gout & the tormenting Stone,
In Kidneys Ulcers two, in bladder one,
Made pains sharp, sore, long, thick, but respite small;
Yet faith and patience overcame them all.
Now after well spent life, and restless pains,
And heavē assured, we reckon death for gains:
Death when by self desired, by friends bewayl'd,
And a sweet memory left have still prevailed
To call dead happy. Then our loss to thee
Was greatest gains complete felicity.

Weep Berm'sey, London wail, mourn England all,
He•e did thy Crown, Chariots & Horsmen fall.
John Sheffield, Pastor of Swithins London-stone.

Of the same Author.

OLd Jeremy a Prophet was and child,
Yet was a brazen wall and Pillar stilled.
He lived in troublous times, sad changes saw,
He suffered much, yet kept he fast God's Law.
By all good honor'd by enemies approved:
By many censured, by none faulty proved.
He dealt with persons highest, and with low;
He warned all, but wished no man's woe.
Son of Contenti•n called when of peace,
The greatest friend and of his Lands increase.
He preached much of Christ & Gospel-days,
The Covenant new he taught, and its rich grace.
Yet was his last a doleful lamentation,
Sad to himself, sadder to the Nation.
Thou art or wast the same. His Baruch he Companion had to him, let me to thee.

An Elegy upon the much lamented death of my late dear and reverend Friend
Mr. Jeremiah Whitaker.

ENgland will soon grow poor, if in one year
Kent lose a Wilson, we a Whitaker.
A Thames, and Medway from our heads arise,
Their streams our tears, their channels are our eyes.
Our many losses call for tears, not fewer;
The breast a Bason makes the eye an Ewer.

No longer (now) shall Isis part the Burrough
From London, since that both sides meet in sorrow.
Not (as of old) by striving whether side
Should for their own obtain the Silver tide;
No, not to gain the water we'll contend;
But we'll by weeping strive who most can spend.
Conduits give wine (indeed) when th' Crown's put on,
Now run they tears, because our Crown is gone.
Our Friends Decease and Death our troubles were,
We nor his Sickness, nor his Med'cines bear.
His Pulpit he esteemed his rest, his bed;
We thought his bed a Pulpit, where he read
Lectures of patience; these he loudly uttered,
By silence oft he groan'd, but never mutter'd.
Of mournful Magdalene, Bermonsey bears
The name, and with her Title hath her tears,
And our dear Whitaker was Jeremy
In name, in weeping, and in Prophecy;
But he (no Prophet now) no sackcloth wears,
His work is done, and so are all his tears.
May Bermonsey of him the late possessor
Mourn for her sins, but joy in his successor.
GUIL. JENKYN, Pastor of Black-fryers, London.

Upon the Death of the Reverend, his never to be forgotten friend, Mr Jeremiah Whitaker.

O That affection could but make a Poet!
If grief could rhyme with Art, sure I should do it, (Though so disus'd to versify.) We'l try:

The Subject's sad, and so's the Poetry.
The tender son that never spake before,
To save his fathers life turned Orator.
Shall I forbear in silence? Write I must,
When such a friend lies sleeping in the dust.
The blessed Saint, dear Jeremy is gone,
And who shall write his lamentation?
Had we his eyes (which always showry were)
Such is our loss, each word should have a tear!
Another Whitaker in a Coffin placed,
The first the Chair, & this the Pulpit grac'd.
Reader, wouldest know his worth, then cast thy eye
Upon the Narrative; there's his excellency.
Rings hold not Histories; who can rehearse
His vast perfection in a narrow Verse!
Take Virtues, Graces, Gifts, and all you can,
All are concentred in this holy man.
A brighter star in all our orb there's none,
None do exceed, few equal him that's gone.
Ah pious soul! What mortal man can speak out
Thy rare humility! Who ere meanly thought
Of thee besides thyself? What moved thy passions,
But Eulogies and Commendations?
'Tis well th' art gone from us, shouldst thou but look Into and read thy praises in this book,
I am sure by this thou wouldest be somewhat moved,
And Simeon himself should be reprov'd.
He speaks thy worth so much, & yet but little

'Tis scarce enough (but true to every tittle.)
Thy personal endowments who would commend,
Should neither know where to begin nor end.
Thy Minister'all accomplishments were rare,
Thy constant pains, thy diligence, thy care
For souls in holy things. who can express?
Thou mightest have longer lived, hadst thou lived less.
O melting Suppliant! who e're did know
Thy prayers to heaven without some tears to go?
The secret ravishings which poor souls have found
When from thy mouth the Word of life did sound!
Our very Pulpits wonder where thou art,
In w^{ch} thou didst such spiritual gifts impart:
But 'tis enough! we'll weep the rest; we can Launch out no farther in this Ocean.
Could prayers and tears have kept thee here, thy stay
It had been longer in this house of clay.
Pray'r bar'd thee in some time, till death would throw
Open the door by force to let thee go;
At last thy soul did find the way to bliss,
And now is steep'd in heavens happiness.
O blessed change for thee! the painful bed
Is now a Throne, where not a tear is shed.
No dismal groāings now from thee do come,
But everlasting Triumphs in their room.
Farewell (blest Saint) farewell, and since 'tis thus;
We'l hast to thee, thou wilt not come to us.

THO. JACOMB. of M. Ludg.

Upon the death of the reverend, Learned, and Faithful Servant of Jesus Christ, Mr. Jeremiah Whitaker, late Minister of Magdalene Bermonsey in Southwark.

What speaks this sudden storm of brinish tears?

What means this doleful volley in mine ears?

Is the Sun darkened? Do the Lamps above,

Resolve their fiery station to remove,

And shine no more on earth? Doth the Creation

Intend to melt itself with Lamentation?

The holy Whitaker is stepped away,

Late Angel of the Church of Bermonsey.

A Pillar in God's house, a sweet Musician

That gladdened drooping hearts; A soul-Physician,

A Sun whose beams did consolation shine,

A faithful, skilful guide, a rare Divine.

He was a Watchman could not well be blamed;

A workman needed not to be ashamed.

No Proteus, that could change to every shape,

No servile spirited Preacher, that could scrape

And cringe to please the lusts of wanton men:

He could not say, and then unsay agen.

Learned, yet very humble, prudent, dear

To God, to men; meek, holy, wise, sincere.

He loved the Truth, he hated Heresy,

A strong opposer of all Blasphemy.

His heart was toward a holy Reformation,

But set against a godless toleration

Of lewd Opinions. Great was his care

To keep the holy Covenant which he sware.

The marrow of God's Oracles was in him,
No Scripture Mystery was hidden from him.
Cases of Conscience he could well untie,
Scruples and Doubts from Scripture satisfy.
His holy Function was his consolation,
His Pulpit work to him was recreation.
His pray'rs were zealous, heavenly steep'd in tear:
His Doctrine Orthodox, convincing clear.
Full of the spirit of life and Power, his words
Did pierce like nails, did cut like sharpened swords:
He durst tell Ahab of his great oppression;
What! dost thou kill and after take possession?
He durst tell Herod though it cost his life,
'Tis wickedness to take thy brothers wife.
Had strangers heard him Preach, they would have said,
Sure John the Baptist's risen from the dead.
His carriage holy, harmless, free from strife,
His Sermons were imprinted in his life.
His body was infirm, diseased, weary,
His soul still vigorous, active, strong and cheary.
The more the Cabinet did waste and wear,
The brighter did the Jewel still appear.
Goodness of nature made the world admire him,
The brightness of his grace made Saints desire him.
The Church on earth hath lost a precious plant,
The Church in heaven hath gained a glorious Saint.

ANAGRAM, I have hit everi Mark.

THou didst not shoot at rovers in the dark,
Thy polisht shaft could hit the smallest mark,
God's glory was thy scope, his Word thy guide,
His stable Spirit did teach thee to divide
The word of truth aright: A signal Teacher,
An useful, pious, fruitful, powerful Preacher
God made thee to his Chu•th. None better knew
Then Whitaker to carve to each his due:
The mark of saving grace was first obtained,
And now the mark of glory thou hast gained:
Enjoy it; and let other Archers see
Thy happy pattern, and take aim by thee.

Upon the death of his most dear friend, that eminent servant and Minister of Jesus Christ,
Mr. Jeremiah Whitaker, Pastor of Mary Magdalene Bermonsey in Southwark.

THus Cedars fall, thus Stars do disappear,
Prophets though Angels, yet but mortals are.
Our Prophet Jeremy's dead, and now there's none
That's fit to make his Lamentation.
Plato once wisht that virtue could appear
To mortal eyes, his wish was granted here.
If any Breviator would comprize
All virtues in a word, then let his eyes
Be fixed here, keep Whitaker in mind.
And there you have the virtues all defin'd.
Or would you know what all the graces are?
In short hand writing, they make Whitaker.

Would any have the Bible in a word,
And what the vastest comments can afford?
Read Whitaker's Works, peruse his conversation,
And there's the Bible and th' Interpretation;
That Book was in his breast so well ingrostr,
He could restore it, if it had been lost.
He that by thee (blest Saint) shall calculate.
Will find that Miracles are not out of dare.
Who e're was so far blest to hear him teaching
Was prone to think a Seraphim was preaching.
'Twas Austin's wish i'th' Pulpit Paul to hear;
He had been satisfied, hadst thou been there.
Me thought when thy sweet soul was poured out
In fervent prayer, I began to doubt
Whether Elias was come down again,
And mounting heavenward with his fiery train.
In this thou didst excel; he scal'd the sort
Alone, but thou thy hearers didst transport.
But whither goes my doleful Muse? to span
I'th' hollow of thy f'st the Ocean.
Or to describe his boundless hidden worth?
Nor tongue nor pen can set his praises forth.
This only I will add, he that would draw
His Portraiture, must use Apelles Law,
When to paint Lady Venus with a grace,
This beauty gave a hand, that gave a face;
The third a color gave, the next a feature,
Al join'd together made that lovely creature.

In the same manner, whosoe're would paint
The beauty of this thrice illustrious Saint,
Must rifle all the world, and look apart
For that which shines most in each noble heart.
One must Humility give, another Zeal,
Another Prudence brethren's rents to heal.
Learning a fourth in its high'st elevation.
A fifth must give a spotless conversation.
His preaching one man cannot imitate;
Here we must have Beza's triumvirate.
And when we've travel'd all the world to find
Or make a copy of this matchless mind,
When other men's perfections all do fail,
We must with that old Limner draw a veil
Upon his peerless parts, or for the rest,
Say, here lies that which cannot be expressed.
Sic flevit Mat. Poole Minister of Michaels at the Quern in London.

An Epitaph.

*HEre lies Saint Whitaker, the rest
Cannot, need not be expressed.
Great sorrows noise not, Give some years
For the world to speak in tears.
First this age must vent its grief
In sighs, the next may find relief,
And join their sorrows to compute
Till grief returning strikes them mute,
And makes them silently confess
Their loss; his worth was fathom'esse.*

Another Epitaph.

*UNder this stone intombed lies
An heap of contrarities,
One that's dead, yet doth remain
For person, place, and work the same.
His precious person was combined
Of soul and body firmly join'd.
So still these parts though distant, yet
In Christ are to each other knit.
To earth his body was confined,
Always heaven had and hath his mind,
His work was preaching, so 'tis still,
And preach his name forever will.*

A sigh was breathed out, God breathed in a pray'r.

Whose worth the world though 'twere as big again

Were much too short and narrow to contain.

Sweet were his life and death, his well spent days

Began with goodness, and expired with praise:

His lamp was ever burning, never hid;

And when his tongue preached not, his actions did;

And to his death he still fought faiths good fight,

A Funeral Elegy upon the reverend his dear deceased friend, Master Jeremiah Whitaker.

O Let me weep, and even like a spring
Unto the sea of grief some tribute bring.
These cheeks of mine with tears bedew'd shall swell
For this Seraphique St. who lately fell.
To lose a Friend is sad, but for our Nation
To lose a Jeremy is Lamentation.
Could he from death some way released be
His virtues surely might have set him free;
But 'twas a debt; and what inflam'd desire
Had he to leave his mantle and fly higher!
How shall I praise his worth, and not dispraise?
Say more, and not say less? darkening his rays.
Meekness, humility in this Orbe shined,
In him the chain of Graces was combined:
How was he fir'd with zeal, even frō his youth,
And though he lost all, would hold fast the truth.
With Jeremy he was a man of strife,
Yet not for Tithes but Souls: this was his life;
A downright, upright man he was, a Star
Whose sacred influence diffused far:
And that of these an end I may inclose,
His faith in Christ he solely did repose.

*This made him when he felt the sharpest pain
Upon the flinty rack, not to complain;
Nay when he at the point of death did lie,
Did as the milky Swan most gently die.
What did he die? his soul as in a Cell,
In heav'ns bright Paradise is gone to dwell
Among the Cherubims, where he doth ring
With them that jointly Hallelujahs sing:
Where he for tears in joy doth much increase,
Pleasure doth him of former pain release;
He never shall of Stone, or Ulcer hear,
He never need anymore sickness fear.

LONDON, Printed by G. Miller for Edward Brewster at the Sign of the Bible on Ludgate-hill near Fleet-bridge, M. DC. XLV.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE THOMAS ADAMS Lord Major of the famous City of LONDON, together with the right worshipful the Aldermen and Sheriffs thereof.

Right Honorable,

WHen I prepared this Sermon to attend your commands, it was very far from my purpose or thoughts, to make it more public then in the Pulpit. And although I find in myself an utter averseness (in many regards) to appear in print; yet your Lordships earnest desire (which I account a command) set on by the solicitations of some others, hath conquered my unwillingness, to transcribe this Sermon for the Press.

I presume upon this Dedication, not only because the Sermon was preached, and is printed at your command, but also that I might hereby make an open, grateful acknowledgement of your love divers ways expressed towards me.

My Sermon is for substance the self same, which you heard, I know not any one particular head, which I have either added or diminished, only some phrases are changed (for my memory could not reach the same expressions) and the words of Scripture-quotations are given in more largely, then when I preached. My subject is seasonable for these times, wherein the Lord hath been pleased to give us in this City occasion to celebrate many days of Thanksgiving. The practice of our praises, is that which God expects, and I persuade.

Unto how many in our Assemblies (when we meet to sing praises) may our God say, Quid verba audio, cum facta video? This people draweth nigh to me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. Loquere, ut te videam. Let your lives answer your language. When shall your works witness your thankfulness? My Lord, I have often heard you use these words, Quid retribuam Domino? Give me leave to be your Lordships remembrancer; your obligations to the Lord are now much increased, and with them God hath added opportunities of more puhlike service to himself. Divine providence hath set you in a place of Honor, Authority and Trust, wherein much is expected from you: Magistratus virum indicat. A man is that in truth, which he is when tried. The world will judge of you for the future according to this years service. You be likely to meet with many temptations, to draw you aside both to the right hand and to the left: but I beseech you remember, whose you are, and unto whom you must give a strict account of all your ways. Advance God in your hearts, design the welfare of Zion, consult most with them, who counsel from God and for God according to his Word, and I beseech you all, often, and seriously mind yourselves, and remember others of the solemn National Covenant, that the Almighty may not be further provoked by the neglect and violation of it. For the Sword under which we smart and bleed, doth avenge the quarrel of God's Covenant, Lev. 26. 25. Therefore let everyone thus speak unto the Lord, Praise waiteth for thee ô God in Zion, and unto thee shall the vow be performed, Psal. 65. 1. I will sing praise unto thy Name forever, that I may daily perform my vows, Ps. 61. 8. Right honorable and right worshipful, the Lord hath conjoined you as brethren, in the great work of the Government of this renowned City, I pray God you may be of one mind, soul and way, for the true welfare thereof, and for the encouragement of all such in it, who sincerely seek to set up the holy government of Jesus Christ, in whom I am

Your humble Servant, SIMEON ASH,

Thanksgiving realiz'd.

PSAL. 105. 45. That they might observe his statutes, and keep his laws.

THis Psalm is Eucharisticall, and this day is a day of Thanksgiving, therefore the subject of the Psalm, and the service of the day, do well suit. In the Psalm the high exercise of praising God is, First, commanded and partly directed, in the four first verses, O give thanks unto the Lord, &c.

Secondly, Perswaded, in the remaining part of the Psalm.

The arguments used to press God's people unto this Angelical employment, are considerable under two heads.

1. The quality and variety of divine administrations for their comfort, Remember his marvelous works, that he hath done, his wonders, v. 5. &c. And that this might be the more prevailing upon their hearts, a large Catalogue of kindnesses conferred, is given in, wherein we have an enumeration of glorious, remarkable providences, in almost forty verses together.

2. The end which the Lord propounded and aimed at, in all these many and memorable dispensations. And this is held forth in my Text, That they might observe his statutes, and keep his laws. Whereas the life of thanksgiving, lies in thankesliving, in a well-ordered obedience to the God of our Salvations, the God of our mercies. This is the subject matter of my Text. Wherein are considerable.

1. The titles, whereby the rule of man's obedience is expressed, Statutes, Laws.
2. The terms whereby the regularity of deserved obedience, is suggested, Observe, Keep.
3. The way or means whereby this regular obedience, is promoted, viz. All the wonderful works of the most High, for his servants, and against their enemies. For the Psalmist having particularized a great number of them, he concludes in the Text. That, or (as the old Translation renders it) to the intent, they might observe his statutes, and keep his laws. If any should enquire (upon the perusal of these famous providences) the reason, wherefore the Lord wrought wonders so many, so great for Israel: the Text gives an account, That they might observe his statutes and keep his laws.

From the division of my Text, I proceed to the explication of the several words used in it: wherein I will be but brief, though something must necessarily be spoken, to make the fairer way, unto that which afterwards must from thence be observed and improved.

You heard before of the two titles given in this Text unto the rule of man's obedience. The first is, Statutes. I find the original word translated, 1. A decree, Psal 148. 6. He hath made a decree which shall not pass. As all the motions of creatures inferior to man are bounded by the decrees of God's dominion (which are often called the ordinances of Heaven) So all man's operations should be ordered and limited by his Commandments.

2. A Portion, Prov. 31. 15. She giveth a portion to her Maidens. And truly God's commands are a good portion to his people, I have esteemed the words of his mouth (saith Job) more than my necessary food, Job 23. 12. And, Thy testimonies (saith David) are my heritage forever, Psal. 119. 111. Unto a gracious heart, God's work is wages, and employment is preferment.

The second word, is, Laws. The original word is most ordinarily used to signify the moral law, the Decalogue, that constant standard, or standing law, by which all Nations, in all ages of the world, have been, and shall be bound to order their conversations before God.

Thus much of the words used, to express God's revealed will to guide man's course: It follows, that I explain those words, which suggest man's regular respect thereunto.

The first is, Observe, which imports, 1. either to mind or reserve in memory. As old Jacob is said to observe the sayings (the dreams) of Joseph, Gen. 37. 11.

2. Or to preserve in safety. In this sense, the same Jacob used the word, in his prayer or vow, Gen. 28. 20. If God will be with me, and keep me in this way that I go, &c.

And this sense answers the true meaning of the next word, Keep, which properly signifies to keep with care and vigilancy, as ammunition is preserved from fire, and false hands, when an enemy is expected, Nahum 2. 1. He that dasheth in pieces is come up before thy face, keep the munition, watch the way.

Now these notions from the original, are not vain, they are both profitable, and such as answer the more open language of the holy Ghost elsewhere. The laws of the Lord should be treasured up in the cabinet of man's heart and memory, Prov. 3. 1. My son, forget not my Law, but let thine heart keep my Commandments.

And all the precepts of God, should be secured from violence, that no breach be made upon them, Keep my Commandments and live, and my Law, as the apple of thine eye, Prov. 7. 2.

These things I only touch, as I pass forward to that point, on which I purpose to pitch, both because it is the main intended in the Text, and also being most seasonable for the service of the day.

[Doct.] That man's regular observation of all God's Commandments, is the end of all his glorious administrations for man's comfort.

More short. The end of God's bounty, is man's duty.

Or thus, in reference to the instances of the Psalm, and the experiences of our times. Therefore the Lord taketh vengeance upon his adversaries, and therefore the Lord worketh the deliverance of his servants, that they might observe his statutes and keep his laws.

My beloved! Who can number up in order, the great things, which our God hath done for us, now of late, as heretofore? Our friends have been relieved, our foes have been routed, our prayers have been heard, our hopes revived, our forces prospered, our enemies discomfited. I pray you, fill your thoughts with the particulars, which this day have been mentioned, and upon other occasions specified: And then add unto the remembrance of all, this Doctrine which now I am to deal in. That God's end and aim in all, is this, That we might observe his statutes, and keep his Laws.

In the handling of this weighty point, well worth our serious considerations, I shall according to my accustomed plainness endeavor two things.

1. The explanation of the truth, that it may be rightly understood.
- 2, The application of it, that it may be fruitfully improved.

I begin with the former, wherein I will be but short, lest I should want time to speak unto the later, which I chiefly intend, it being of greatest and most seasonable concernment.

And here by way of caution, to prevent mistake in this matter under hand, I wish that these four things may be observed.

1. Mans obedience is the end of God's gracious providences in regard of his precept, though not always in regard of his secret, eternal purpose. I well remember the words of the Psalmist, Psal. 92. 7. When the wicked do spring as the grass, and the workers of iniquity do prosper, it is that they shall be destroyed forever. But here I speak not of God's end in regard of his everlasting, righteous decree, which he is pleased to keep close within his own bosom.

As for the end of his command, revealing his pleasure to the children of men: the words of Moses that man of God are plain and pregnant to our purpose, Deut. 10. 12, 13. where after an enumeration of various, marvelous favors vouchsafed unto Israel, he speaks thus, And now, O Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all his ways, and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, To keep the commandments of the Lord, and his statutes.

2. It is the end of God, in (the fore-mentioned) intention, though too too seldom in execution, God having engaged man to obedience by his bounties, he expecteth an obediential improvement, though his Majesty's expectations are commonly disappointed. The Lord's sad complaint of his vineyard, Isa. 5. expresseth this fully, What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? Wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes? ver. 4. He looked for judgment, but, behold oppression, for righteousness, but behold a cry, ver. 7. And our God hath very much occasion of the like lamentation, in this Land, yea in this City at this day, notwithstanding the admirable deliverances, and victories wrought for us. Alas, alas, how few, how very few do anywhere answer the expectations of his highness, in reformation of their ways, and in obedience unto his holy Laws.

3. Although man's observation of God's statutes, be one end, yet is it not the only end of his manifold favors. For amongst many other aims, which are always in his majesties eye, such is his fatherly indulgence unto his people, that he doth give out cordials on purpose to cheer their drooping spirits, and to facilitate their passage thorough the wilderness of this world, Let the Lord be magnified, who hath pleasure in the prosperity of his servants, Psal, 35. 27. As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people: for the rod of the wicked shall not rest upon the lot of the righteous, lest the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity, Psal. 125. 2, 3.

4. Mans serviceable subjection unto divine injunctions, is not God's last and chiefest end, in all his glorious dispensations. The ultimate, the supreme end of all God's purposes and providences, is his own honor, He doth all things for himself, Prov. 16 4. In them who are not obedientially conquered by his kindnesses, he will be glorified. Proud, hard-hearted Pharaoh stubbornly withstood all the assaults of God, made upon himself and his people, both by plagues and deliverances, yet God saith, Exod. 14. 4. I will be honored upon Pharaoh and upon his host. And those who are made obedientially fruitful, by the showers and Sunshine of divine indulgence: they being filled with the fruits of righteousness, are by Jesus Christ to the glory and praise of God, Phil. 1. 11. So that all administrations do at last determine and center in the honor of the most high God, who is the author and orderer of them.

Yea beyond the duties of obedience, the welfare and happiness of them who are sincerely obedient, both here and hereafter is ordained and intended by God himself, as an end subordinate unto his own eternal praise, Oh that there was such an heart in them (saith the Lord) that they would keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, Deut. 5. 29. And the Apostle, having provoked the believing Romans unto the work of sanctification, addeth these words, Ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life, Rom. 6. 22.

Having premised these cautions, these propositions to prevent misapprehensions, and that the meaning of my Text and Doctrine might be truly understood, I proceed unto the Application thereof, which is the second thing promised in the prosecution of the point.

The improvement of this seasonable instruction (thus far unfolded) [Use.] is that which I had principally in mine eye, in the choice of this Text, and I pray God, so to assist me in this last, and the greatest part of my Sermon, that I may reach your hearts, unto your edification and spiritual advantage. All that I shall say by way of Use, I will give in, under these three heads.

- 1. Information.
- 2. Reprehension.
- 3. Exhortation.

The two former sorts of Uses I shall dispatch quickly, but I shall crave leave to enlarge the last, because most profitable, and most pertinent unto this Congregation, and most conducing to promote the realizing of those praises, which this day we present unto our God.

Hence it naturally and necessarily follows, That the disobedience of those persons is most abominable and inexcusable, who have been under the most, and best administrations of the Almighty.

Such offenders do not only violate the Laws of Sovereignty, but of Amity. Their neglects, their miscarriages, are not only undutifulnesses, but unthankfulnesses and unkindnesses.

It is here considerable how the holy Ghost doth ordinarily cast this circumstance, as a loading aggravation upon the sins both of Nations and persons, to break their hearts in the deepest humiliation, and to justify God in his sharpest corrections. Thus Samuel sets upon unsubdued Israel, 1 Sam. 12. 6. And Samuel said unto the people, It is the Lord that advanced Moses and Aaron, and that brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt. Now therefore stand still that I may reason with you before the Lord of all the righteous acts of the Lord, which he did to you and to your fathers. When Jacob was come into Egypt, and your fathers cried unto the Lord, then the Lord sent Moses and Aaron, which brought forth your fathers out of Egypt, and made them dwell in this place, &c. And the Lord sent Jerubbaal, and Bedan, and Jephthah, and Samuel, and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies, on every side, and ye dwelled safe. Here is the commemoration of mercies. Now follows the sin thereby aggravated. And when ye saw that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon came against you, ye said unto me, Nay, but a king shall reign over us, when the Lord your God was your king. Beloved, I may not spend time in paralleling these passages, with God's providences towards this poor Kingdom, and this Kingdom's miscarriages towards the Lord. Do it yourselves, I pray you, and I doubt not, but the serious doing of it, will be advantageous both in the advancing of our God, and in the abasing of ourselves before him. England's deliverances and mercies. London's deliverances and mercies have been more and greater than of other Kingdoms and Cities; therefore England's sins, and London's sins are more heinous, horrid, high provocations of the most high God.

And as the evils of a people are thus aggravated by the Lord; so are the offenses of particular persons also. In this manner Samuel greatens the disobedience of King Saul, 1 Sam. 15. 16. Then Samuel said unto Saul, Stay, and I will tell thee, what the Lord said unto me this night. When thou wast little in thine own sight, wast not thou made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the Lord anointed thee King over Israel? And the Lord sent thee on a journey, and said, Go, and utterly destroy the sinners, the Amalekites, and fight against them, till they be consumed. Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the Lord, but didst fly upon the spoil, and didst evil in the sight of the Lord?

I will not gloss upon this Scripture, which might truly be applied unto many of the richest and chiefest rank in this City: but I humbly beseech you to remember from what low and little beginnings, the Lord hath advanced many of you; and then reflecting upon your lives; consider what account you can give unto his Majesty, for your obedience (or for your disobedience rather) to his holy Commandments. Yea, this course God hath been wont to take with his own dearest servants, to work them unto true repentance. David's scandalous falls are well known (I might say they are ill known by too many, who thence take encouragement to offend) and I believe you are not ignorant of that course, which his God took by Nathan's ministry, to present his sins as very sinful in his own sight, 2 Sam. 12. 7, 8. Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul, And I gave thee thy Masters house, and I gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee, such and such things. Wherefore hast thou despised the commandment of the Lord, to do evil in his sight? &c. Herein, herein, lies the aggravation. Wherefore hast thou? Thou so preserved, thou so preferred. How canst thou answer this?

Give me leave to touch one instance more, which I do the rather add, because it concerneth men of mine own cloth and calling, that you may be convinced: We Ministers desire to aggravate our own faults, by the self-same circumstances, whereby we greaten yours. Eli his sinful indulgence to his wicked sons is notorious; now mark how a Messenger from the Lord paints out this his provocation, in black colors, 1 Sam. 2. 27. Thussaith the Lord, Did I plainly appear unto the house of thy father, when they were in Egypt in Pharaohs house? And did I choose him out of all the Tribes of Israel to be my Priest, to offer upon mine Altar, to burn incense before me? And did I give unto the house of thy father, all the offerings made by fire of the children of Israel? Wherefore kick ye at my sacrifice, &c. And honourest thy sons above me? We, who are the Ministers of the Lord should look upon our aberrations, as the more loathsome, because God hath honored us with an high and holy employment in special attendance upon himself.

I might much enlarge this meditation, by acquainting you, that guilt under this notion, is most grievous unto a truly gracious repenting heart. It was this that cut good David to the quick, when he cried out, Against thee, thee only have I sinned, Ps. 51. 4.

But I must leave this Use, because not so fully suitable unto the peculiar service of this day.

The next Use follows, which is for the just reproof of two sorts of persons, whose practices do point blank oppose this purpose of God, in conferring favors, which my Text makes report of.

First, who in handling this doctrine, can hold his hand off them, who are the less obedient and the more dissolute in their lives, because of God's long-sufferance and loving kindness. This sticks, as a black brand upon King Rehoboam, 2 Chro. 12. 1. It came to pass that when Rehoboam had established the kingdom, and had strengthened himself, he forsook the Law of the Lord.

It may be truly said of many, that they had not been so bad and base in their lives, if God had not been so bountiful to them in his bestowings. Herein men discover their egregious folly, which can no way be excused, Do ye thus requite the Lord, ye foolish people & ūwise? is not he thy father that hath bought thee? hath he not made thee, & established thee? Remember the days of old, &c. De. 32. 6, 7

Yea, herein appears the vile malignity of our natures, the inbred poisonous disposition of our unhallowed hearts, which Spider-like suck venom out of those sweet flowers, from whence the little laborious Bee draweth wax and honey.

I have three things to say unto such persons, which I heartily wish may tend unto their humiliation and amendment.

1. That this heinous abuse of God's bounties, is a sad sign of an unregenerate estate. Let favor be shown to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness, in the land of uprightness will he deal unjustly, Isa. 26 10. I have heard the Hypocrite sometimes compared to a Top, which goes no longer then it is lashed. The expressions of the Psalmist concerning such unfound hearts, are here notable, Psal. 73. 34. When he slew them, then they sought him, and they returned, and they inquired early after God, &c. Nevertheless they did flatter him with their mouth, and they lied unto him with their tongues, for their heart was not right with him, neither were they steadfast in his Covenant.

2. That in this particular, idolaters express more respects unto their vain, dumb, idle Idols, then these people do unto the only, true, living, world-governing God, God blessed forever. For observe how the Prophet Hosea, bringeth in the idolatrous, reasoning for their Idol-worship, Hos. 2. 5. I will go after my lovers, that give me my bread and my water, my wool, and my flax, mine oil, and my drink. In which respect, we may take up against these malefactors, the pathetic complaint of the Lord, Jer. 2. 9. I will yet plead with you (saith the Lord.) For pass over the Isles of Chittim and see, send unto Kedar and considerdiligently, and see if there be any such thing. Hath a Nation changed their gods which are yet no gods? but my people hath changed their glory for that which doth not profit. Be astonished, ô ye heavens, at this, and be horribly afraid, be ye very desolate, saith the Lord, &c.

3. That this carriage is no better then brutish, Jesurun (saith Moses) waxed fat and kicked, thou art waxed fat, thou art grown thick, thou art covered with fatness. Then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the rock of his salvation, Deut. 32. 15. The Metaphor is taken from the foolish Ass, which being kept low, will come to the Masters hand, but being put into a full pasture, waxeth wanton, and either runs away from his feeder, or else turns heels, and strikes him.

And the zealous Prophet Jeremiah doth with much sharpness speak in like manner unto these beastly kind of men, When I fed them to the full, then they committed adultery, and assembled themselves by troops in the Harlots houses. They were, as fed horses in the morning, everyone neighing after his neighbors wife. Shall I not visit for these things (saith the Lord) and shall not my soul be avenged on such a Nation, as this?

The Lord awaken the sleeping consciences of such, whom this quick reproof doth reach, that they may be the better for it through his rich grace in Jesus Christ.

The second sort to be blamed I shall touch with a more gentle [Use 2] hand (viz.) all those whose ends and aims, in seeking, and in bestowing favors, are directly contrary unto the command and practice of our blessed God. I here point at offenders, in the same kind, under a double head.

1. Such who in the pursuit of outward advantages and accommodations for themselves, do only intend the gratifying of the flesh, the satisfying of their own hellish lusts. The Apostle James checketh these men, Jam. 4. 3. Ye ask amiss, that ye may consume upon your lusts. And there is a smart rebuke of Baruch, wrapped up in that Question, which the Prophet Jeremiah propoundeth to him, Jer. 45. 5. Seekest thou great things for thyself? Those must take this home to themselves, who mind nothing so much, as sloth, sensuality, pride, luxury, revenge, and the like, in coveting and hunting after vast estates, places of honor and command in the world.

2. Those who in conferring places of profit, authority, employment and trust upon others, do principally (if not only) aim at the making of a party, the strengthening of a faction, against the government and ways of Jesus Christ. I will make no instances, but leave it to your wisdom and consciences to make application and improvement of this general Item.

If there be any, whose purses, power, votes, vigor, are to fill offices with men, whose minds, hearts, hands are against the power of godliness, the purity of Gospel-ordinances, the progress of our Church-Reformation, I wish they would consider, that they are not herein acted by the Spirit of God. I will not make any application of Balaaks promise to promote Balaam, if he would endeavor to discomfit Israel, lest I should seem over-tart. Neither would I be thus interpreted in that I have spoken, as though I purposed to strike secretly, any who labor in the sincerity and simplicity of their spirits, to make Jesus Christ glorious in the world. Let my tongue rather cleave to the roof of my mouth forever, then that I dare to utter one word wittingly and willfully against the honor of our Lord Christ Jesus.

Now I come to the last Use, which is to persuade us all [Use 3] unto a double duty, and accordingly is to be divided into two branches.

First, We are hence to be moved to praise God for this his [Branch. 1] indulging providence, in that he is pleased by means of kindnesses to seek the winning and working of our hearts unto his holy obedience.

This inference is made to my hand, in the words immediately following the Text, Praise ye the Lord. Now to quicken our hearts unto the admiration and adoration of God, in this regard, let these following short meditations, be seriously considered.

1. That man's obedience makes no whit at all unto God's advantage, Can a man be profitable to God? Is it any gain to him, that thou makedst thy ways perfect? Job 22. 2, 3. If thou be righteous, what givest thou him, or what receiveth he at thine hand? Job 35. 7. These interrogations carry along with them vehement negations. That it is not possible to profit God in the least measure, by our best obediential endeavors.

Men hire servants, because their work tends to enrich them. But in references to the Almighty, All-sufficient God, all must say, When we have done all those things, that are commanded, we are unprofitable servants, Luk. 17. 10. My well-doing (saith David, though a man according to God's own heart) doth not extend unto thee, Psal. 16. 2. For unto that, which is infinite and perfect, no possible addition can be made.

2. That man's disobedience doth not in any degree prejudice God, If thou sinnest, what dost thou against him? or if thy transgressions be multiplied, what dost thou unto him? Job 35. 6. The Sun is not obscured by man's refusing to behold it, or to commend the light of it.

The self-same beauties, perfections, happiness, which the Lord enjoyed in himself from eternity, he shall possess forever, though no creature should serviceably attend upon him.

Amongst men it is otherwise, for a stock cannot be traded, a trade cannot be managed, many necessary works would be undone, if we had not the assistance of servants. The Crown needs the Plow, the chiefest could not subsist, but by the support of the meanest. The feet uphold the head, and the whole body.

3. That God's rich, mere mercy did move him, to make manifest his mind unto man, that man might understand what carriage would content his blessed Majesty, and in this regard (if God had not added any further motive to obedience) we are obliged to honor his highness, He showeth his Word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any Nation, and as for his judgments they have not known them. Praise ye the Lord, Psal. 147. 19, 20.

What if the Lord had left us all in our natural darkness, as Heathens unacquainted with his Commandments, yet should we not have had any occasion to except against his Majesty.

But how great is our engagement to our God, who having given some light of knowledge, doth liberally give in favors, to move the obediential improvement thereof?

4. Suppose that the Lord suspending all ways of love and liberality towards us, should only by threats and blows, have endeavored our obedience, yet in that respect there would have been cause of thankfulness, for it is much better to be beaten to God's work, then to neglect it. David was of this mind, Psalm 119. 67, 68. Before I was afflicted, I went astray, but now have I kept thy Word. Thou art good, and dost good. And verse. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy statutes.

Therefore the ways of fairness and fatherly indulgence, whereby God seeks to conform our hearts and lives unto his Commandments, should endear him to our hearts, and draw forth our souls in thanksgiving.

5. The work and worship of the Almighty, which we take in hand, is always more or less defiled; God's excellencies are much obscured, his name sundry ways dishonored, by our imperfections which ever attend our best performances. There is iniquity in our holy offerings, All our righteousnesses are like unsightly rags. when good Nehemiah reviewed his famous services for God and his house, upon the discovery of his sinfulnesses, he cries out, Neh. 13. 22. Lord, pardon me according to thy great mercies.

Now all this God knows, yea he fore-knew all our future aberrations, when he showered down favors, to move our obedience, Thou hast set our iniquities before thee, our secret sins in the light of thy countenance, Psal. 90. 8. And David testifieth, Psal. 139. 2. That God knows his thoughts afar off. Is it not therefore to be very much admired, that the Lord should by renewed and multiplied favors labor to prevail with our hearts, To observe his statutes, and to keep his laws?

6. Lastly, (as though all that I have spoken were too little) the Lord hath herein further manifested and magnified his unsearchable grace, that he hath undertaken abundantly to recompense all our obedience, In keeping of his Commandments there is great reward, Psal. 19. 11.

Every self-knowing Christian, who is wont with any seriousness, to compare his returns to God, with his receipts from God, will freely acknowledge that he is always infinitely behind hand with his Majesty: therefore considering his former favorable providences, to persuade obedience, together with future precious promises, to crown obedience, we have all reason to call upon ourselves, Praise we the Lord: and to say unto one another, Praise ye the Lord.

The second branch of my Exhortation follows, which I have [Branch. 2] had principally in my mind and aim, all this while.

To persuade your conscientious care to improve all God's favorable providences unto the promoting and bettering of obedience, according to his purpose and appointment, I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies, a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

If my Exhortation upon this ground be not reasonable, lay it aside, I speak as unto wise men, judge ye what I say. Beloved, I am very serious in this my message, being not only seasonable, but of exceeding great concernment, and shall be very unwilling to go off with a denial unto this my reasonable request, which I make in the Name of God for your good.

Manifold examples might be produced to press this Exhortation. That double, that treble resolution of Israel, raised from this consideration, is notable, God forbid, that we should forsake the Lord, for the Lord our God he it is that brought us up, and our Fathers out of Egypt, from the land of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, &c. Therefore we will also serve the Lord.

And again, when Joshua seemed by his words to suspect their sincerity, The people said unto Joshua. Nay, but we will serve the Lord.

And yet once more, Joshua putting them to it unto purpose, The people said unto Joshua, The Lord our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.

But I will come lower, then Israel professing dependence upon God. The very Heathens, wicked ones, moved only by moral principles, will requite kindnesses in respect to the law of retaliation, If you do good to them, which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do the same. And yet in reference unto God, I now request no more. Do but Christianly endeavor to answer God's kindnesses with an obediential carriage, and I call for no more.

I remember, when cruel Saul, plotting and practicing David's death, was yet by David's forbearance to slay him (having power and opportunity) so overcome, that he brake forth into these words, My son David, I will no more do thee harm, because my soul was precious in thine eyes this day, 1 Sam. 26. 21. God's long-sufferance and loving kindness to us-ward, doth wonderfully exceed all that David either did or could express towards Saul: He hath not only with-drawn his own revenging hand, though we have infinite times provoked him to his face, but he hath also held the bloody hands of cruel men, who have desired our death: yea, we do not only enjoy safety, but rich supplies of comforts from our God. How much rather therefore should we resolve no more to dishonor God by our disobedience, but to observe his statutes, and to keep his laws.

2. This grateful obedience, the Lord will graciously accept, as a full contenting recompense for all his bounties. When Moses had numbered up multitudes of blessings bestowed upon Israel, he adds, Deut. 10. 12, 13. And now, ô Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to walk in all his ways, to keep his Commandments? As if he had said, this is all, he will be satisfied with this, he looks for no more. O beloved, how deeply are we indebted unto the most high God, and yet such is his indulgence, that upon sincere observation of his laws (which by virtue of our being reasonable creatures, we are bound to yield) he will cast a quietus est, a full acquittance into our bosoms.

But if this consideration cannot prevail with you, yet I pray you consider on the other hand, how unkindly the Lord taketh their disobedience, towards whom he abounds in benefits. How pathetic is that complaint of God himself against his Israel, breathed forth by the Evangelical Prophet, Hear ô heavens, and give ear ô earth, for the Lord hath spoken, I have nourished and brought up children, but they have rebelled against me. The Ox knows his owner, and the Ass his masters crib, but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider. Ah sinful Nation. In reference unto this lamentation, which the Lord maketh over stubborn, unthankful ones, I will only say thus much; Have you not yet offended your God enough, but will you proceed to grieve him still.

3. This practicing of God's praises will be many ways beneficial to ourselves.

1. It will render us wise, in the account of all such, who with any seriousness consider our great obligations unto God. Keep therefore and do them, for this is your wisdom and understanding, in the sight of the Nations which shall hear of these statutes, and say, Surely this great Nation is a wise and understanding people. For what Nation is so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things, that we call upon him for? Deut. 4. 6, 7. Is it not wisdom to observe him, who secures our persons and comforts, whose ever-waking and all working providence is for our good in every kind? And how can man more manifest his wisdom, then by making God's ends, his aim in everything? Now God's end in the administrations of his love is, That we may observe his statutes, and keep his laws.

2. This obediential improvement of God's goodness, will evidence the uprightness of our hearts. Mark David's argument which he pleads before the all-knowing God, Psal. 26. O Lord, I have walked in mine integrity, ver. 1. For thy loving kindness is before mine eyes, and I have walked in thy truth, verse. 3. Threats and blows drive hypocrites to duty, but cords of love draw the gracious heart unto exact walking with his God.

3. When former favors produce better obedience, then may we boldly expect the multiplication of future mercies. Moses having, Deut. 29. specified some of Israel's rich receipts from God's good hand, from verse. 2. to the 9th, he thus concludes, Keep therefore the words of this Commandment, and do them, that ye may prosper in all that ye do. The self-seeking husband-man will cast precious seed with a liberal hand into a fruitful soil, which is wont to return an answerable crop. God hath the end of his bounties, in our obedience. And his promises to follow and to fill them who are obedient, with blessings of all sorts, are manifold in the holy Scriptures.

4. Many and heavy are the judgments threatened against them who continue stubbornly disobedient, notwithstanding the sweet assaults made upon them, by God's gracious administrations. That commination in Deut. 28. 47, 48. hath often affected and affrighted my heart, in reference to this trembling Kingdom, Because thou servedst not the Lord thy God with joyfulness, and with gladness of heart, for the abundance of all things (mark that, for the abundance of all things) therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies, which the Lord shall send upon thee, in hunger and in thirst, and in nakedness, and in the want of all things, and he shall put a yoke of iron upon thy neck, until he hath destroyed thee. When Samuel had pressed the bettering of obedience, by God's remarkable works (which is the very exhortation, which I have now under hand) he sets it on by the self-same Argument, 1 Sam. 12. 24, 25. Fear the Lord, and serve him intruth, with all your heart; for consider how great things he hath done for you. But if ye shall still do wickedly, ye shall be consumed, both ye and your King. Beloved, we know to our sorrow, that both our King and his Kingdoms are in a wasting condition. God forbid, O God forbid, that our continued disobedience should work our utter consumption and desolation.

This which I have said is sad, and I have made mine own heart say by saying it; yet that is much more lamentable, which the Apostle Paul reports concerning God's judgment upon poor, purblind Heathens, for their ingratitude, in not living up to their light, to their receipts, Rom. 1. 21. Because when they knew God (it is meant of knowledge attained by God's works) they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, &c. Wherefore God gave them up unto uncleanness, through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonor their own bodies between themselves, verse. 24. The penalty inflicted upon the immortal soul is the more heavy, because of the souls excellency. And mere torment upon the well-awakened soul is not comparably so grievous, as it's servitude to sinful lusts. Now this, this judgment of judgments is incurred, by not answering obedientially our receipts from God. And let none think to put this off, by saying, This concerned Heathens, but we are Christians: for consider, I beseech you, whether the danger be not hereby increased? Is our light greater? Have God's works amongst us held forth more grace and glory? Then questionless our disobedience will expose us to as great, or greater judgments.

I have done with the Arguments prepared to enforce my Exhortation: and I hope they have so far prevailed with you, (at least with some of you) as to move resolutions, to make an obediencial improvement of your experiences. I now proceed to acquaint you with some few rules to direct this your obedience, your real thankfulness unto God, with which I shall conclude. And for brevity sake, I will only mention such, as issue naturally and necessarily from my Text and Doctrine.

1. Therefore God should rather be obeyed, then any man whatsoever. I am far from dissuading dutiful observance unto lawful Superiors of any quality or degree: but I propound the Question of the Apostles, Whether it be better to obey God or men, judge ye, Act 4. 19. & 5. 29.

Let him, who doth most and greatest favors for us, receive the largest and frequentest respects from us. Give the chiefest attendance unto the best benefactor. Now who, or what is he, that shall dare to stand in competition with God? No doubt but Joseph, Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, had so much ingenuity, as to acknowledge with gratitude their obligations unto their Superiors, yet being acted by their stronger, higher engagements unto God, they refused to gratify them in things displeasing unto his Majesty. And I shall not need to tell you how far the bestowings of God in quantity, quality and variety, do transcend all that kindness, which either hath been received, or can be expected from any human hand.

2. Therefore we should obey God with our All. Both riches and honors come of thee, and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. All things come of thee, 1 Chro. 29. 12, 14. Is it not reasonable that all which is received from the Lord, should be employed for the Lord? You Merchants expect thus much in justice and equity from your factours beyond seas, that whatsoever commodities you convey unto them, should be disposed of to your advantage. Now I pray you turn the Tables, and deal you with God, as you require men should deal with you. Who doth not acknowledge strength in the Apostles argument? 1 Cor. 6. 20. Glorify God both in your body and in your spirit, which are God's. Therefore if we grant the premisses, it will be our weakness to deny the Conclusion.

Consider what I say. If any of you enjoy any wisdom, strength, authority, estates, parts, interests, opportunities, which you received not from the Lord, then refuse to lay them forth for the Lord. But let me appeal unto every individual soul here present, in the Apostles words, What hast thou which thou didst not receive? 1 Cor. 4. 7. The inference therefore comes with force upon you, Thou shalt love (and consequently thou shalt obey) the Lord thy God with all thy soul, with all thy thought, with all thy might, Cum omni valde tuo. O it is an unequal and unreasonable thing, to make any deeds of reservation in our dealings with our God, the God of all grace and of all consolations whatsoever.

3. Therefore our obedience unto God, should be tendered speedily. For is not the Lord so far beforehand with us in his favors, that 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, at this very instant, we are engaged obsequiously to submit unto his government? Joshua having particularized to Israel ancient providences, whereby God had expressed his care and kindness towards them and their forefathers, he calls for service without delay, Josh. 24. 14. Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve him. Do not any of you dare to put off God one day longer with procrastinations. A father said, that cras, cras, was corvina vox. Delays will breed guilt, and bring danger. Let us call to mind how much we were in God's debt, how far in arrears, before we began to pay one penny (as it were) in any humble, holy, hearty performance. Therefore let us now, now obedientially remember our Creator, our Protectour, our Benefactour, our God blessed forever, To day, while it is called today, do not harden your hearts.

4. Therefore in all ways of holy obedience, we should walk humbly with our God. Well may this alone abase our hearts, that the excellencies of the Lord, and the worth of his service, should not be sufficient to work us unto dutifulness, without a daily addition of fresh favors from his Majesty. But when we compare our unanswerableness to God's purposes, expectations, deservings, it is strange that there should be the least conceitedness in us, in regard of any work at any time discharged. If ever man had occasion to glory in his labors, and adventures for Christ, the Apostle Paul (I think) might be the man. But he professeth, Act. 20. 19. That he served the Lord in all humility of mind. Now it is most apparent, that besides other means whereby he attained and maintained this sweet, humble frame of spirit, this was one, viz. That he had much in his eye, his rich receipts from Christ, which he was no way able to requite. And I am confident, that by a serious, wise paralleling that which God doth for us, with that which we do for him, in regard of quantity, quality, variety and constancy, the swelling of our hearts will be much abated.

5. Therefore all our services for God should be the warm breathings of flaming love. All the undertakings of S^t Paul for Christ, seemed to be sparks arising out of this fire. He speaking of labors, losses, hazards, gives in this as the reason of all, 2 Cor. 5. 14. For the love of Christ constraineth. And when David had endeared his God to his heart, by meditating upon his mercies, Psal. 116. 1. I love the Lord, because he hath heard my supplication, &c. From thence did issue obediential resolutions, I will call upon the Lord. I will walk before the Lord in the land of the living. Although God alloweth the use of other arguments to quicken obedience, yet this of love should have the preeminence.

6. Therefore we should serve the Lord in truth, because he hath done great things for us, 1 Sa. 13. 24. This truth is opposed to seemingness and falsehood. God doth not feed us with fair words. We do not only hear of his bounties, but we see, touch, taste, enjoy the comforts of his good providences. Let us answer our God with realities, If any man only seem to be religious, his religion is vain, Jam. 1. As for those who content themselves with shows of godliness, denying the power thereof, they are abhorred by the Lord. Be not deceived, for God will not be mocked, According as every man sows, so shall he reap. If you sow the wind, you shall reap the east-wind. Be you well assured, that Court complements, frothy flatteries, empty shows will not take with God. Those who pay in good coin, will not be repaid with that which is counterfeit. Let us, not therefore dream of requiting God's real favors with mere formalities, Let us not only love in word and tongue, but in deed and in truth.

7. Therefore fear the Lord and serve him in sincerity. This sincerity is opposed unto selfishnesse. Whereas the hypocrite centers proudly in himself, makes himself his last end, his God. Did ye not eat for yourselves? Did ye not drink for yourselves? Did yeat all fast unto me, even unto me? saith the Lord. The practice of God, intending and effecting our good, as truly, as his own glory, may well prevail with us, to mind his praise in that which we undertake. His gracious providences are for our comfort, his holy Commandments are for our good, therefore let not us sit down satisfied in serving our own turn by our services, but let us move forward, not resting till we come to this center, God's honor. Whatsoever we do, whether in our general or particular callings, in commanding, obeying, in private or public, Let all be done unto the glory of God, 1 Cor. 10. 31.

8. Therefore we should observe God's statutes, and keep his laws continually. This the Lord desires, Deut. 5. 29. O that there were such an heart in them, that they would keep my Commandments always. And this his Majesty well deserves, For he daily loadeth us with his benefits, Psal. 68. 19. His unweariednesse in following us with favors, should move us to follow him unweariedly in the ways of well doing. If in the whole course of your lives, you can find one day, or one hour, wherein God doth not, in one kind or other, do you good, then on that day, in that hour suspend the serving of his highness. We (such is the sinfulness of our sinning hearts) do every moment of our lives, give the most high God most just occasion to resolve to favor us no more: but the Lord (so admirable is his goodness) doth every minute of time, afresh engage us unto his obedience. Therefore be not weary of well-doing, but rather, be always abounding in the work of the Lord. God forbid, that it should be truly said of any of us, That we began in the Spirit, and did end in the flesh.

All these eight rules, necessary truths, and naturally deduced from my doctrine, do concern everyone in this great Congregation without any exception. I cannot imagine, from what seeming pretence any should dare to plead exemption from these directions; and I pray God, that no one of you may depart this Assembly, without some obediential bents and resolutions upon your spirits. But all my Sermon, all my counsel doth most concern them; for whom the Lord hath done most, in ways most remarkable and glorious. No City in the world hath been more magnified by divine providences, then this wherein we are. No people on earth hath been more enriched with temporal and spiritual provisions together, then ourselves. Our God grant that our improvements obediential, may prove in some good measure answerable.

Notwithstanding, by virtue of the equity of my doctrine, the Lord expecteth to be best served, to be most advanced, by them whom he hath most enriched, whom he hath most advanced. And therefore give me leave to tell you, Right Honorable, the Lord Major, and Right worshipful, the Aldermen of this famous City, that God deserveth and expecteth more from you, then from your brethren. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required, and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more, Luk. 12. 48. As you are bound to be exemplary in exact endeavors, To observe God's statutes, and to keep his laws: So is it your duty

(in a special manner) to take care that all others under your command be conformed to the Commandments of your God, Magistratus est custos utrius{que} tabulae.

Right Honorable, your Lordship hath for divers years been acquainted with my plain Ministry, and I cannot say that I have lost any place in your affections by my plainness, therefore I will take the boldness to direct myself in faithfulness unto you.

1. Do not you dare through indulgence to spare the punishing of them, who do dare to cast God's Commandments behind their backs. Could you hold your hands, and connive at such, who should go about to sleight the works, which are raised and maintained for the safety of this City? You heard in the opening of my Text, That God would have his laws preserved from violence, as the means of our preservation. I once heard a plain dealing Preacher, compare a remiss Magistrate unto the sign George on Horse-back, who standeth all the year with his hand on the Sword, but never strikes. My Lord, You have not received the Sword in vain, Rom. 13. 4. Although I would not sharpen the edge of authority unto undue severity; yet would I whet mine own knife to launce and let out the impostumated matter in my friends flesh. I grant your Lordship must be cautious, as courageous, and therefore you have good reason to make Solomon's prayer, 1 King. 3. 9. Give thy servant an understanding heart, to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad. But I beseech you remember withal, That foolish pity spoils the City. Let not common drunkards, profane cursers and swearers, brutish wantons, and such like wicked ones, escape that penalty, which the Law hath appointed for them. Phineas executed judgment, and it was counted unto him for righteousness, Psal. 106. 30, 31.

2. I call for your zeal against Popery, that abomination, which brings desolation. Let your zeal move often inquisitions, whether in some corners of this City, there be not Idolatry in the use of the Mass, lest through neglect of search, that abomination be suffered. But I move that in a special manner, search may be made after Jesuits, those unsufferable incendiaries, who blow the coal of contention amongst brethren, who have caused, and do continue the unhappy breach betwixt our King and Parliament, our Sovereign and his Subjects. I have heard a Story of a man, who passing by a tree, which Nature was cleaving, did thrust in his hand to increase the breach; whereupon providence suddenly closing the breach, did there hold the man by the hand, as an act of revenge. Though I dare not assert the truth of this Story, yet I make this moral. Doubtless there are Jesuitical spirits, who haunt these coasts, who walk in this City, and it is suspected by many, that they have a special hand in some of the pamphlets published, to increase the flames of unbrotherly divisions: I heartily wish that they might be apprehended by some good hand to be made exemplary. It's reported that the Pythagoreans did set a note of infamy upon the number of two, because it was the first, which dared to depart from Unity. Solomon saith, He that soweth discord among brethren, is an abomination to the Lord, Prov. 6. 16. 19. And this reacheth more then Jesuits in this Kingdom, yea in this City: For how many make it their business to make breaches, not only among private brethren, but also between the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, notwithstanding the solemn brotherly Covenant. Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses, contrary to the doctrine which you have learned, and avoid them. For they that are such, serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, Ro. 16. 17, 18. I humbly move cautiousnesse in regard of Malignants, that those mischief-workers, who now (as report speaks) are moving homeward, may not inconsiderately, upon too easy terms be entertained and trusted. It is my daily prayer, that God would convert and pardon those who express the most malignity against the work of Reformation so happily begun amongst us: and my soul saith, God forbid, that any who are sincerely changed, should by our sournesse, be sent back again into our enemies quarters. Notwithstanding I must tell you, Abundance cautela non nocet. When Saul was come to Jerusalem, he assayed to join himself to the Disciples, but they were all afraid of him, Act. 9. 26. Fals-hearted ones amongst ourselves, may do us much more wrong, then known adversaries at a distance. And is it not a just ground of complaint made by our friends, when foes who have forsaken City and Parliament, shall make their peace at such easy rates, that they suffer less in their outward estates upon their return, then approved friends have done, if their Assesments and voluntary contributions be considered? I undertake not to direct in this case, but I entreat God, to make the Parliament and City wise and circumspect in this particular.

4 I most earnestly importune your care, for the better and stricter observation of the Sabbath, and I heartily commend worthy Nehemiah, as your pattern of imitation in this practice. The ways and courses whereby he witnessed his holy zeal in this kind, lie open in the History, I shall not need to specify them. I beseech your Lordship to see to the suppression of buying, selling and sporting upon the Lord's day. I have often thought upon a speech of that famous servant of Christ, and Minister in this City, learned, humble, holy, public hearted D^r Staughton, which I had from him in private conference in those times, when the Sabbath, and the observation thereof, was decried by the Prelates and profane sort of men. His speech was this, Should any man give up a Castle of such concernment to this Kingdom, as the fourth Commandment is to the safety of Christian Religion, he would deserve to die many deaths. As you love the Lord, and the life of Religion, regard the Sabbath, and let your heart and hand be against those doctrines and practices, which tend to the profanation of it.

5. I entirely Petition your utmost towards the compounding of our miserable divisions about Church affairs. There are not only Congregations of Anabaptists, Antinomians and Brownists in this City connived at; but (as it is commonly and credibly reported) also companies of men, who deny the Deity of Christ, and divine authority of the Scriptures. I remember that when Gallio was Deputy of Achaia, there was insurrection made in Corinth against Paul, and there were woeful confusions in the City, but it is added, Act. 18. 17. And Gallio cared for none of those things. God forbid, that either your Lordship, or any other Magistrate in this City should be thus regardless of our present distractions. When there was a great breach made in the ground by an earth-quake at Rome, and notice was given, that the gods would not be pacified, except something of special worth was cast into the breach, Marcus Curtius did cast himself in, in love to his Country. And I believe that there are very many amongst ourselves in this City, both Ministers and others, who could be content to sacrifice their lives in this service, to reconcile dissenting brethren. For alas, alas, Do not divisions threaten dissolution? A Kingdom divided cannot stand. My soul desires that London may, in ways of truth and holiness, be like Jerusalem, A City compact together; or (as others render the phrase) A City that is joined to itself together, Psal. 1 22. 3.

For the effecting whereof, I make it my last request, that with all your might (as God may be pleased to give opportunity) you would promote the speedy settling and exercise of Church-government. Were the Church blessed with the use of that Discipline, which is according to the mind of Christ, in this posture, it would be terrible as an Army with banners, Cant. 6. 10. By this means profaneness would be crushed, superstition suppressed, errors checked, Malignancy discountenanced, the Sabbath better observed, holy Ordinances more purely administered, and our breaches well healed. Here are motives enough to move every right bred son of Zion, to set head, heart and hand unto this work. Conscientious, zealous care in this kind, will contribute very much to your honor here, and your comfort hereafter. Good Nehemiah thus pleads for himself before the Lord, having been industrious in this service, Remember me, ô my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my good deeds (my kindnesses) that I have done for the house of my God, and for the offices thereof, Nehem. 13. 14. Now in this case, the counsel of God's faithful Ministers, is to be considered. The words of Artaxerxes are notable, Ezr. 7. 21. Whatsoever Ezra the Priest, the Scribe of the Law of the God of heaven shall require of you, let it be done speedily. Some (it may be) will catch at this sentence, and say, This discovers the drift of Presbyterian spirits; you desire to exercise dominion over your brethren's consciences, and therefore would have all things managed according to your mind? But I must take the boldness to answer, That this is a notorious slander. For we petition nothing, but that which in our consciences is according to the mind of Jesus Christ, and profess ourselves willing with the least and lowest of Saints, to submit unto the Scepter of our Lord and Savior, not requesting favor in anything, repugnant unto the holy Scripture.

This is that advice, which in faithfulness, and with humility I present unto your Lordships consideration; and I do it with the more confidence, because in all particulars it speaks the language of our solemn National League and Covenant, which should never be forgotten. And now to conclude all. I beseech you all (both right Worshipful Aldermen, and right worthy Citizens) to consider seriously how far my counsel directed to the Lord Major concerneth you everyone. O that God would give you all with one heart to say unto his Lordship (as it was once spoken to Ezra, to quicken a work of Reformation) Arise, for this matter belongeth unto thee, we also will be with thee. Be of good courage, and do it, Ezr. 10. 4 For my part, I shall use no more words, but those of David to Solomon (relating to Templework) 1 Chron. 22. 16. Arise therefore and be doing, and the Lord be with thee.

RELIGIOVS COVENANTING DIRECTED, AND Covenant-keeping persuaded: PRESENTED, In a SERMON preached before the Right Honorable Thomas Adams Lord Major, and the Right Worshipful the Sheriffs, and Aldermen his brethren, and the rest of the Common-Council of the famous City of LONDON, January, 14. 1645.

Lev. 26. 25.

LONDON, Printed by G. M. for Tho. Underhill at the sign of the Bible in Wood-street. M. DC. XLVI.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE THOMAS ADAMS Lord Major, AND THE RIGHT WORSHIPFULL The Sheriffs and Aldermen his Brethren, and to the rest of the Honorable Court of Common Council of the City of LONDON.

THis plain Sermon which attended your service of Covenant-renewing from the Pulpit, comes now from the Press, in obedience to your command, to do you and the public some further service. If upon the perusal of that which you heard preached, it may please the Lord to quicken your zeal in Covenantkeeping, I shall have occasion to bless his Name with a joyful heart.

The zeal of the Common-Council of London, in renewing their solemn League and Covenant, rings thorough the several Counties of the Kingdom of England: and I am confident, that the sound thereof hath been heard in many other Kingdoms: And doubtless there are often enquiries, and earnest expectations to hear what London now doth in the pursuance of their Covenant heretofore taken, and now again solemnly renewed with holy fasting and prayer. A City set upon an hill cannot be hid; your practices have had, and will have strong influences into the several parts of this Land, and into other Nations: You have formerly and lately done well and worthily in respect to your Covenant: I pray God, that your continued holy zeal may affect and fire many in other Countries in faithful Covenant-keeping. God forbid, that you should ever deserve thus to be stigmatized, either by God or men; Their heart was not right with God, neither were they steadfast in their Covenant, Psal. 78. 37.

I shall not need to tell you, that our solemn League and Covenant is despised, divided, aspersed and opposed by too many: for that which you may read in Pamphlets, and hear from some Pulpits and other places, doth make you both eye-witnesses and ear-witnesses of this evil, which should be greatly bewailed. This contradiction, this opposition should increase your gracious heat for your God. Fire gives out the most scorching heat in the coldest weather. It is time for thee, Lord, to work (saith David) for they have made void thy Law. Therefore I love thy Commandments above gold, yea above fine gold. Therefore I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right, and I hate every false way, Psal. 119. 126, 127, 128.

My soul desires, that according to the guidance of that wisdom which is from above, you all may make the like gracious improvement of the checks and affronts which you meet with, in your Covenant-keeping. By how much the more, any others do plot and practice to hinder the glorious work of Church-reformation, by so much the more do you consult and act, to expedite and perfect it. By how much the more any others strive and study to maintain Popery, Prelacie, Schism, Heresy. by so much the more, do you set yourselves against such matters, as being destructive to the welfare both of Church and state. By how much the more others design and endeavor to break the brotherly union between England and Scotland, by so much the more do you lay forth yourselves to maintain it. And that your zeal in these kinds may appear to yourselves and others to be pure and sincere, let it be your chief and constant care, to reform yourselves and all yours, in everything, according to the will of God: That you all may in these particulars and in all things else, approve yaur selves faithful both to God and man, in holy Covenant-keeping, shall be the prayer of him, who is

Your servant, in, and for Jesus Christ, SIM: ASH.

RELIGIOVS COVENANTING DIRECTED.

PSAL. 76. II. Vow and pay unto the Lord your God.

THis Text persuades a double duty. 1. To make vows. 2. To pay vows unto the Lord our God. From whence two truths, seasonable for the service of the day, fall naturally, and easily, without forcing, into our consideration.

[Doct. 1] That God's people must make religious vows, as his hand of providence doth lead them forth thereunto.

[Doct. 2] That such vows being made, must be paid unto the Lord our God.

In the handling of the former of these propositions, I shall briefly give you, 1. The explication; 2. The application thereof.

The explication of the point I shall dispatch under these three heads. 1. The Act required, vow. 2. The Agents, or persons upon whom this duty is pressed: This the following words express. All those that be round about him. 3. The providences, whereby God calleth forth to this practice of making vows.

First, Holy vows are the solemn engagements of the soul unto the Lord, according to his will: If a man vow a vow unto the Lord, or swear an oath, to bind his soul with a bond, Numb. 30. 2. To vow, to swear, and to covenant, are in Scripture phrase equivalent, importing the same thing, Jonathan made a Covenant with David, And Jonathan caused David to swear again, 1 Sam. 29. 16, 17. Here I may not spend time, in discoursing concerning the several sorts of vows, which might be spoken to, under these, or such like heads. 1. They are either made to God, or man. 2. Of things necessary, or arbitrary. 3. Explicite, or implicit, mental, or vocal. 4. Assertory, or promissory. But let it be sufficient, that I now suggest thus much: That the Text is to be understood of such vows, as are promissory obligations unto the Lord. And from hence I shall persuade and direct the managing of such vows unto God, as are necessary and openly unfolded to every ordinary understanding, in the solemn League and Covenant this day to be renewed.

Secondly, the Actors in this duty are described to be such, as are round about the Lord. The Psalmist hath reference to Numb. 2. 2. where Israel was commanded to pitch their Tents round about the Tabernacle, which was a sign of God's special presence. And this phrase (as I conceive) describeth God's people by a double character. 1. Their special attendance upon God, their readiness to receive and obey his commands: As the four and twenty Elders, are said, Rev. 4. 4. to be round about the Throne, as pres'd to praise the Lord. 2. God's special presence in the midst of them, to hear prayers, and to perform promises, for their preservation and welfare in every kind; who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God, in all things, that we call upon him for? Deu. 4. 7.

Thirdly, the call unto this employment I shall note under a five fold providence from the Lord.

1. Sinful defections from God, that by means of religious vowing, his backsliding people might be recovered: Our fathers have trespassed and done that which is evil in the eyes of the Lord our God, and have forsaken him, and have turned away their face from the habitation of the Lord, and turned their backs. Also they have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incense, nor offered burnt offerings, in the holy place unto the God of Israel. Now it is in my heart (saith Hezekiah) to make a Covenant with the Lord God of Israel, 2 Chron. 29. 6, 7, 10. Thus likewise the people of God resolved in the days of Ezra: We have trespassed against our God, &c. Now therefore, let us make a Covenant with our God, Ezra 10. 2, 3.

2. Sad discoveries of divine displeasure, that by holy covenanting present judgments might be removed, and future evils prevented: The wrath of the Lord was upon Judah and Jerusalem; and he hath delivered them to trouble, to astonishment and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes. For lo our fathers have fallen by the sword, and our sons, and our daughters, and our wives are in captivity for this. Now it is in mine heart (saith Hezekiah) to make a covenant with the Lord God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us, 2 Chron. 29. 8, 9, 10.

3. Famous experiences of God's goodness, that by the right use of religious vows his Majesty may be praised, and his providences improved. The exhortation in the Text was grounded upon some such occasion, as many verses in the Psalm declare: The stout-hearted are spoiled, they have slept their sleep, and none of the men of might have found their hands, ver. 5. At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horse are cast into a deadsleep, ver. 6. When God arose in judgment to save all the meek of the earth, ver. 8. Hence follows, vow and pay, &c. Interpreters judge, that this Psalm was penned, upon Ashurs overthrow, whereupon many brought gifts unto the Lord unto Jerusalem, 2 Chron. 32. 23. according to the advice given in the words immediately following the Text, Bring presents unto him that ought to be feared.

4. Defective improvements (if any improvements at all) of God's favorable administrations, that by foederall engagements his people might be bettered: These are the words of the covenant which the Lord commanded Moses &c. Ye have seen all that the Lord did before your eyes, even in the land of Egypt, &c. The great temptations, and those great miracles: yet the Lord hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear unto this day, Deut. 29. 1, 2, 3, 4. This is propounded as one ground of the Covenant renewed, whereof we read in the following verses.

5. Apparent danger of seduction and departure from God. In this regard God's servants have afresh obliged themselves to his Majesty, for their own establishment and preservation: Ye stand this day before the Lord, to enter into covenant with the Lord thy God, lest there should be amongst you any, whose heart turneth away from the Lord, Deut. 29. 10, 12, 18.

[V;se 1] The application of this point followeth; which serves in the first place to inform you of your call to covenant-renewing, the intended service of this day. For give me leave to appeal unto your consciences, Right Honorable, right Worshipful, and much respected Citizens, whether all the five fore-mentioned particulars, do not fully reach you and take hold upon you, both in respect of God's dealings with you, and your miscarriages towards him, since you at first took the solemn League and Covenant. And here I shall make bold to propound unto you some short interrogatories, under the five fore-mentioned heads, to which I wish your hearts may return answers, as in the presence of the Allknowing God.

First, Are you not guilty of sinful declinings in a great degree from your former engagements unto the Lord? Have you not lost your first love? Have not the matters of God's house been much slighted and neglected? Hath not your care to preserve the truth of Religion from corruption been much abated? Have you not connived at the spreading of pernicious errors in this City? Hath not your zeal against schism and sinful separations from our Church Assemblies been very much cooled? Is not your love towards our Brethren of Scotland in a great measure lessened? Have not your vigorous endeavors to promote the settling of Christ's government in our Congregations been woefully diminished? And have you not been lamentably wanting in laboring the thorough reformation of yourselves and families? Which of you, hath striven to exceed, to excel others, in advancing the power of godliness in your conversation? Doubtless these and such like backslidings from former engagements, may well warrant your Covenant-renewing with your God.

Secondly, None of you can be ignorant of the manifold, manifest discoveries of God's heavy displeasure against this poor trembling Kingdom. Hath not the Lord delivered us up unto trouble and astonishment, by his severe administrations? How many thousands have fallen by the sword of cruel war? What woeful desolations are made in many Towns, yea Counties in this Kingdom, by the prevailing pitiless enemies? And should not we read God's wrath against ourselves, in the abundance of blood which hath been shed, and the unhappy spoils which have been made in Scotland and Ireland? Besides all this, I pray you consider whether these things do not proclaim and speak allowed God's anger? Our long looked for reformation in matters of Religion, is still deferred: our hopes of the much-needed and much-desired Discipline of Jesus Christ, are still disappointed: the miserable rents and divisions in families, Congregations, Cities and Counties, by reason of different, yea contrary opinions and practices, in ways of Religion, are wonderfully increased. And have we not in these regards reason to renew our Covenant, that the wrath of the Lord may be turned from us?

Thirdly, God hath often remembered us in our low estate, because his mercy endureth forever. Who can recount God's many marvelous works for our safety and comfort? Have not our deliverances been wonderful, and many of our victories little less than miraculous? How often hath the subtil enemy been infatuated, the strong enemy weakened, and great Armies broken by a little strength? I shall not need here to mind you of the many wonders which God's Almighty hand hath wrought for us, both in the Northern and Western parts. And as for this City, how admirably and unexpectedly hath it been preserved and provided for, in every kind by the Lord? How many oppressions are we freed from, by Parliamentary authority, through the goodness of our God? Therefore besides other presents of praise which God deserves at our hands, we have just occasion to present ourselves unto his Hignesse by Covenant-renewing.

Fourthly, Notwithstanding our various and glorious experiences of God's patience and goodness; Have we not too much cause thus to complain, that to this day we want hearts to husband God's remarkable providences, to his honor and our own advantage? Who loves God more, or who serves him better, because of the great things he hath done for us? Is our faith in God's promises stronger? Is our fear of God's displeasure greater? Are we more zealous for the Lord of Hosts, or more courageous for his truth, against error? Dare we say that we do our utmost for the speeding of Church-reformation, that we may not be over-run and undone by Sects, Schisms and confusions? Therefore certainly, we have a call to renew our Covenant, to quicken our improvement of God's gracious providences, both to his praise, others profit, and our own further comfort in Christ.

Fifthly and lastly, That we may not fall from our steadfastness, we have need to bind ourselves yet further unto our God by solemn Covenant. Men are wont (as I have heard) to hoop their vessels with iron bonds, in which they carry their stronger liquors beyond seas, that by the tossings in the ship and the liquors working, the vessels may not be broken into pieces, and the liquor lost. And have not we more need to add the bond of a solemn Covenant to the bond of God's sacred commands, that we may not be broken from one another, nor divided from God in his truths and holy worships, in these broken, erroneons, stormy, tempestuous times?

For 1. Emulation, variance, strife, seditions, heresies, are reckoned up, by the Apostle, amongst the works of the flesh, unto which our corrupt natures do strongly dispose us.

2. There are more then a good many of subtle, busy factours in this City, to promote errors, schisms and factions of several sorts, to draw disciples after them, and to spread their infection amongst people of all ranks and qualities.

3. It is apparent, by too many instances, that divers persons both wise and godly, have been deceived and drawn aside from the ways of truth, into the by-paths of error and schism, and into practices of bitterness (I will not say of how many kinds) against their brethren.

Therefore in this respect, as in those before mentioned, you have just cause to say one to another; Come, let us join ourselves unto the Lord in a Covenant, never to be forgotten.

[Use 2] Having thus far endeavored to clear up your call unto Covenant-renewing, I now proceed by way of exhortation, to persuade your regular and reverential cautiousnesse in this weighty business. Consider the glorious Majesty of God, unto whom vows are to be made; He ought to be feared, as our translation renders the words following the Text: or, He is fear, as the Original hath it. In which phrase we have Nomen affectus, pro objecto. God is a dreadful and terrible Majesty. And this doubtless is added, to awe men's hearts, in the undertaking of such like services. The advice of Solomon upon this ground is more open, Eccles. 5. 2. Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thy heart be hasty to utter anything before God, for God is in Heaven, and thou upon earth. In which counsel, the wise man hath special reference unto vowing, as the following words declare.

Now for your guidance in this great service, I will give you briefly some plain and necessary rules.

1. You must Covenant knowingly. It is thus openly expressed, of them who covenanted in the days of Nehemiah, Everyone having knowledge, and having understanding, they clave to their brethren, they entered into an oath to walk in God's Law, Neh. 10. 29. Ignorance doth nothing well: the light of knowledge must guide our whole course. And in this business of a sacred vow, it is necessary that men know, both the nature of the duty, and the matter of the federal engagement. No man should be moved by an implicit faith, but everyone should be fully persuaded in his own mind. For as in other cases, so in this, whatsoever is not of faith, is sin.

2. Repentance for former offenses must precede, and prepare for Covenant-renewing. Thus it was with those, who sealed and subscribed the solemn Covenant in the time of Nehemiah, for they assembled themselves to keep a religious Fast (as we do this day) before they entered into the Covenant, Neh. 9. 1. In which exercise deep sorrow for sin was expressed, their particular evils were aggravated and largely confessed, themselves were judged, and God was justified in his severe administrations: All these expressions of repentance, are manifest in that 9th Chapter of Nehemiah, which then was the introduction to the Covenant. And doubtless if we do not penitently bewail our former violations of God's commands and our own vows, we cannot with acceptation to God, or with comfort in our own hearts renew our Covenant with him this day.

3. Your hearts must go along with your vows. It is said, ▪ Chron▪ 15▪ 15▪ That all Judah did swear with all their hearts▪ And God will not take up with less at our hands this day. It is no better then hypocrisy, to lift up hands before God, when the heart is far from him. We must in our judgments approve and resolve upon the payment of our vows, and all our affections, both concupiscible and irascible, must be upon the wing, according to the various particularities expressed in the Covenant. The soul should with love, joy and longings, work towards the speedy settling of Church-government according to the word of God, and towards the maintaining of brotherly union between the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, together with the more full reformation of ourselves and families. And O how should your souls now rise, in holy dislike, in the hatred of, and in indignation against Popery, and all profaneness, against Heresies, Schism, detestable Neutrality, and whatsoever else it is, which is against God and the welfare of these Kingdoms!

4. Our Covenanting must be accompanied with humility. 1. From the sense of our own weaknesses to keep touch with God, in coming up fully to the Covenant; we should lean to his promise, and take hold on his strength: Say, as the Church, Through God we shall do valiantly, Psal. 60. 11. And as the blessed Apostle did; Phil. 4. 13. I can do all things through Jesus Christ strengthening me.

2. And being apprehensive of our own unworthiness, to receive any ability from the Lord, seeing by our sins, we have enfeebled our own spirits, therefore we should humbly petition for divine assistance. Herein imitate David, who having thus in resolution and promise expressed himself before God, I will keep thy statutes, he immediately adds, O forsake me not utterly, Psal. 119. 8. The more of the spirit of self-denial and prayer is in your hearts, when you take the Covenant, the more hope there will be of your keeping it afterwards.

5. Come to the Covenant conscientiously. Be not acted only by the appointments, expectations or practices of men in this particular: Let not this be the alone motive upon your spirits; Covenant-renewing is ordered by the Court of Common-Council: But rather reason thus; The manifold providences of God before specified, do call unto this service, and therefore we will undertake it. If you respect not God in the work, you shall lose both accept <1 line>

6. Covenant fiducially: If your spirits act sincerely, according to the fore-named directions, then be you confident that the consequence of this days service will be comfortable. Although your weaknesses are many and great, yet if your hearts be herein found upright with God, you may hopefully persuade yourselves that the Lord will so far regard his own ordinance, and have respect unto the mediation of Christ (the Messenger, the Mediator of the new-Covenant) that your work shall be crowned with good success. You heard before, that Enemy-conquering providences made way unto the exhortation in the Text, Vow and pay unto the Lord your God. And I conceive that the verse following is considerable, being the language of faith; He shall cut off the spirit of Princes, he is terrible to the Kings of the earth: The most potent adversaries of the Church shall be brought down, by holy Covenant-making and Covenant-keeping with God.

Now this lets me into the consideration of my next Doctrine;

[Doctr.] That vows made, must be paid unto the Lord our God.

Although a vow must not be made a bond of iniquity, and therefore unlawful vows rather call for repentance than performance, (as David's rash revengeful resolution against churlish Nabal.)

Yet such Covenants as we make according to God's will, we must make good, in conscience to his commandment: Pay that which thou hast vowed (saith Solomon,) Better it is that thou shouldst not vow, then that thou shouldst vow and not pay it. Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin, Eccles. 5. 4, 5. The Scribes and Pharisees were but sleighty superficial Expositors of God's Law, yet they were wont thus to publish God's command: Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths, Mat. 5. 33.

In the prosecution of this plain, profitable, seasonable and necessary point, I shall faithfully endeavor three things. 1. To persuade this duty by arguments. 2. To guide this practice by rules. 3. To promote your obedience herein, by some short directions.

The motives whereby we may be induced to make good our honest and holy vows, shall be cast under several heads, that my progress in them, may be the more easy and edifying.

1. From the nature of a vow in general, and from sundry circumstances considerable in our Covenant particularly.

In general; 1. All vows are sacred obligations upon our consciences: If any (saith Moses) vow a vow unto the Lord, or swear an oath, to bind his soul with a bond, Numb. 30. 2. &c. In this respect the holy Psalmist resolved upon this duty, Psal. 56. 12. Thy vows are upon me, O Lord, I will render praises: And doubtless every gracious heart will be sensible of this great spiritual engagement. 2. By means of vows we become God's debtors: Hence it is, that the Text calls for payment, Vow and pay. I here remember the speech of the Prophet unto the poor widow, 2 King. 4. 7. Go sell thine oil, and pay the debt. And the Holy Ghost gives in this, as a note of a wicked man, Psal. 37. 21. He borroweth, and payeth not again. You Merchants, who have great dealings in the world, would you not be ashamed to appear upon the Exchange, if you were not careful to pay your debts unto men? Therefore, vow and pay unto the Lord your God.

More particularly, there are sundry weighty circumstances considerable, in regard of our solemn League and Covenant, which may work our hearts unto serious resolutions to keep it.

1. The materials of our Covenant are lawful and justifiable; we vow to endeavor the extirpation of Popery, Prelacy, Superstition, Heresy, schism, profaneness, and whatsoever shall be found to be contrary to sound doctrine and the power of godliness. And have we not good reason thus to do? For have not these things much endangered the welfare both of this Church and Commonwealth already? and will not the indulging of such matters, prove destructive both to our public hopes and comforts? We vow sincerely, really, constantly, through the grace of God, to endeavor the reformation of Religion, in Doctrine, worship, Discipline and Government, according to the word of God, and the example of the best Reformed Churches. I shall not need to specify our engagements, to defend the Kings person and authority in the preservation of the true Religion, to preserve the privileges of Parliament, as also to continue a firm peace and union between the Kingdoms of England and Scotland. These and other things expressed in the Covenant, are by you Covenanters accounted just and equal. I remember David's resolution, Psal. 119. 106. I have sworn and I will perform it, that I will keep thy righteous judgments. And if we judge the materials of our Covenant righteous, we should in that regard lay the greater charge upon our consciences to keep it.

2. Our vows are deliberate. The nature of this ordinance hath been unfolded, the several Articles in the Covenant have been considered of, and therefore the rather to be observed. Rash vows bind conscience, if the keeping of them prove only in inexpediencies prejudicial to ourselves, and contradict not any of God's everbinding laws. Therefore Solomon calling for the payment of vows, tells people, that they must not think to put off that obligation, by saying, It was an error, Eccl. 5. an inconsiderate oversight. And we all know, that when Israel was bound to the Gibeonites by an oath, through a mistake, being over-reached by a cheat, All the Princes said to all the Congregation, We have sworn unto them by the Lord God of Israel, now therefore we may not touch them, Josh. 9. 19. How then shall we be excused, if our premeditated vows be not performed?

3. We have vowed before many witnesses. Men who stand much upon their credit and reputation in the world, will be taken with this argument. When King Herod was caught in a snare, by his heady vow, and being troubled, because the dancing Damsel demanded the head of John the Baptist, it is said, Nevertheless for the oath sake, and them which sate with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her, Mat. 14. 9. Consider how many have seen you lift up your hands unto the most High possessor of Heaven and earth, in holy Covenanting: Remember how many thousands know that the vows of God are upon you, and be you hereby prevailed with to keep touch with him.

4. Hereto I might add the consideration, both of the multitude of all ranks, qualities, callings in this Kingdom, in Scotland, Parliament-men, Soldiers, Citizens, Divines, &c. who are herein mutually engaged with us. I might also mind you of the often reiterations and renewings of your vows and Covenants: Doubtless these things will not be slighted by them who are ingenuous; but I may not insist upon them, having divers other heads of arguments to speak unto.

The second sort of arguments to persuade Covenant-keeping, shall be taken from our God, the only true and blessed God, unto whom our vows oblige us. And under this head these particulars are considerable: 1. His Majesty takes exact notice of all such engagements, together with all the circumstances of time, place, companies, occasions, &c. which belong thereto: O God thou hast heard my vows, saith David, Psal 61. 5.

2. His Highness well remembers these obligations: The Lord rounds Jacob in the ear with this Memento, I am the God of Bethel, where thou anointest the pillar, and where thou vowest a vow unto me, Gen. 31. 13.

3. He calls for payment, he will not be taken off from demanding his debt in this kind: When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord thy God, thou shalt not be slack to pay it, for the Lord thy God will surely require it of thee, Deut. 23. 21.

4. He is the most High possessor and commander of Heaven and earth. The Psalmist lays strength upon this consideration, Psal. 50. 14. Pay thy vows unto the most High. And this thought was prevailing upon the hearts of Jephthah and his daughter, in a case very difficult in a course very cross to the stream and strength of natural affection: you all know his vow, therefore I shall not need to name it, but mark I pray you the expressions, both of the father and of his child, Judge. 11. 35, 36. I have opened my mouth (saith Jephthah) unto Jehovah, and I cannot go back. And she said to him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto Jehovah, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth.

5. He is a most faithful Covenant-keeping God: He is God, the faithful God, which keepeth Covenant and mercy, Deut. 7. 9. Although mere mercy move his Majesty to make Covenant, yet will he make it good: How much more should we keep our holy Covenants, which both duty and necessity call us to renew.

6. Although our well-doing, doth not, cannot reach the Lord with advantage, yet his Highness will account himself honored by our faithfulness in Covenant: Hence it is, that these two duties are conjoined in the Scripture; Offer to God thanksgiving, and pay thy vows unto the most High, Psal. 50. 14. And Psal. 65. 1. Praise waiteth for thee O God in Zion, and unto thee shall the vow be performed. Consider I pray you, Do we not owe God praise? Do we not pray, Hallowed be thy Name? Will it not be our Honors to set the Crown on his head? Therefore let us all resolve to perform our vows unto the Lord our God.

The third head of arguments follows to be considered, and it is drawn from the various precious benefits to be received, by conscientious Covenant-keeping with the Lord our God. 1. Care in this kind will evidence our effectual conversion to God. The Prophet Isaiah foretelling the calling of the Gentiles, speaketh thus, The Lord shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day, and shall do sacrifice and oblation, yea they shall vow a vow unto the Lord, and perform it, Isa. 19. 21.

2. Good Covenant-keepers lie very near unto the Lord's warm heart, he loves them dearly: If ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my Covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people, Exod. 19. 5. Covenant-keepers are God's jewels, and all other persons are accounted as the lumber of the world, in comparison of them. Men will adventure much to ingratiate themselves with great ones; and shall not we pay our vows, that we may enjoy the favor, the estimation of God, whose loving kindness is better then life?

3. Hence issueth hope to prevail with the Lord by our prayers: The Psalmist having said, Psal. 65. 1. Unto thee O God shall the vow be performed; he adds immediately, O thou that hearest prayers. And so soon as this counsel was given, Psal 50. 14. Pay thy vows unto the most High, in the next verse, this follows by way of connection, And call upon me in the day of trouble, I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me. As you desire the audience of your prayers, make you conscience to pay your vows.

4. The sanctification of all our concernments, is a rich privilege appertaining unto honest Covenant-keepers: All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth, unto them who keep his Covenant, Psal. 25. 10. God's sweet mercy, in the performance of his promises, runs throug the veins of all his providences for the good of them, who in reference to Covenant, keep touch with him: And who knows fully the worth of this one prerogative; therefore as you desire a share herein, make conscience to pay your vows unto the Lord your God.

5. What need I descend unto anymore particulars, seeing all the precious promises of the Covenant of Gospel-grace, are assured upon them, who are faithful in Covenant with God. The Psalmist having moved this question, Psal. 24. 3. Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, and who shall stand in his holy place? part of his answer is this; He that hath not sworn deceitfully, he shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of his salvation: Therefore be prevailed with through holy selflove and desires of blessedness, to pay your vows unto the Lord your God.

6. And yet once more give me leave to press this argument ab utili, upon the hearts of you who are affectionate parents: I know your bowels earn towards your children, and you desire their good, as your own comfort; now be you well assured, that you can take no course, which will be more probable to entaile God's blessing upon your posterity, then this of conscientious Covenantkeeping with God. How admirable and desirable is that promise in Psal. 103. 17, 18. The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting, upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children, to such as keep his covenant?

These benefits of Covenant-keeping I leave in your bosoms, desiring that through the blessing of God, they may do you good.

I might here mention a further motive, to persuade the payment of vows, from the sad consequences of falseness and unfaithfulness in this kind. 1. The Psalmist gives in this as a character of a wicked man, Psal. 55. 20. He hath broken (or profaned) his Covenant. 2. All the sins of men are greatly aggravated by this circumstance, that they are not only transgressions of God's Law, but violations of their own vows. Thus Solomon brands the adulterous woman, Prov. 2. 17, She forgetteth the Covenant of her God. 3. Breach of Covenant brings God's burning displeasure upon people: This thought did awe Israel, in reference to their rash League made with the Gibeonites, Josh. 9. 20. We will let them live, lest wrath be upon us, because of the oath which we sware unto them.

4. God's anger in this kind kindled, may bring a consumption upon our hopes and comforts. That Item which the Wise man gives in this case should be seriously minded, Eccl. 5. 5, 6. Better it is that thou shouldest not vow, then that thou shouldest vow and not pay; wherefore should God be angry at thy voice, and destroy the work of thine hands? Never were greater works under hand for Church and Common-wealth, in our days, or the days of our forefathers, then are in agitation amongst us at this day; therefore let us take heed, lest our unfaithfulness in our Covenant provoke the Lord to dash all our endeavors into pieces, with the disappointment of all our golden hopes. God's curse is annexed unto his Covenant, to enforce the keeping of it. It is said, Neh. 10. 29. They entered into a curse, and into an oath to walk in the Law of God. And the sword of cruel war is drawn by the hand of Divine justice, to avenge the quarrel of the Covenant, Lev. 26. 25. This sword of Civil war is eating man's flesh, and drinking man's blood in this Kingdom at this day; and how can we expect that the Almighty should command it to return into its scabbard, and to be quiet, if we continue careless in keeping Covenant? I profess (beloved) that I have often trembled to think upon that discovery of God's severity, in punishing Israel with three years famine in David's time, because Saul had broken the rash vow, which the Elders of Israel had made long before with the Gibeonites. For thus I reason, If the violation of an unadvised oath with subtle sinful men, by the posterity of them who made it, did bring a sore national judgment; what then may we expect from the hand of God, for contradicting both by words and deeds, both by opinions and practices, the solemn sacred League and Covenant which ourselves have upon deliberation, both made and renewed with man and God? These are weighty considerations, and worthy your often and serious thoughts, unto which many more might be added; but I forbear the enlarging of this subject, because you have so fully been acquainted with this matter, by my Reverend brother, who hath largely to satisfaction set forth the exceeding great danger of truce-breaking, from 2 Tim. 3. 1. Covenant-breaking makes the times perilous: unfaithfullnesse in Covenant is a Landdestroying, a Kingdom-devouring sin.

Now (my beloved) to sum up all my arguments: If there be in your hearts, 1. Either respect unto the sacred obligation of a solemn vow, 2. Or unto the most High possessor of Heaven and earth. 3. If you either prize the promises of his grace, and desire to be partakers thereof through Christ; 4. Or dread the discoveries of the wrath of the Almighty, and would preserve yourselves and your posterity, yourselves and the Kingdom from breaking blows of vengeance, pay your vows unto the Lord your God.

These arguments I hope will not be slighted by you: God forbid, that matters of so great, so public concernment, should be disregarded by them, who profess so much zeal and respect to God and to his cause, unto the prosperity of this famous City, and the welfare both of Church and Common-wealth, as you worthy Citizens have done, and persevere to do: Therefore I proceed in this service, to set down some Scripture-rules to guide you in the Faithful payment of your vows unto the Lord your God.

Pay your good vows universally: Pay thy vows, saith the Psalmist, Psal. 50. 14. All thy vows, none excepted; whatsoever you have vowed according to his word, you must make good according to his command: Thus much is open in the text, vow and pay unto the Lord your God. Take good King Josiah for a president for your pattern in this particular, of whom it is thus said, upon his covenanting with God, 2 Chron. 34. 33. And Josiah took away all the abominations, out of all the countries which pertained to the children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to swear, even to serve the Lord their God. You see that he spares nothing, nowhere within the reach of his authority, which might be displeasing unto his God, or destructive to his people. I pray you peruse the particulars to be opposed by virtue of your Covenant, Popery, Prelacy, Profaneness, Schism, Heresy; and do not dare to indulge any abomination, which you have vowed to oppose: Take heed that no sinful biasse of near relations, or any self-advantages, take you off from your faithfulness in this kind. The Holy Ghost makes this a character of an heir of Heaven, Psal. 15. 4. He swears and keeps it, though to his own hindrance: Therefore let not fear of losing a customer, a friend, an office, a good bargain, or any other outward advantage, hinder you in keeping your Covenant. I will not further enlarge this head, which I leave to your thoughts, but will conclude the rule, with reading the practice of King Asa in the pursuance of his Covenant, 2 Chron. 15. 16. And also concerning Maachah the mother of Asa the King, he removed her from being Queen, because she had made an Idol in a grove; And Asa cut down her Idol, and stamped it, and burnt it at the brook Kidron. There are Idols of men's heads; and of men's hands, there are Idol-opinions and Idol-practices to be opposed by virtue of our Covenant, and you must beware lest through respect of persons, you prove partial and unfaithful.

When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord thy God, thou shalt not be slack to pay it, Deut. 23. 21. And, thou shalt not defer to pay it, Eccles. 5. 4. I might here speak much to persuade the speedy payment of our vows; hereby your comfort will be increased, and the public work of reformation quickened and expedited, your acts will be exemplary and of common influence both thorough the City and the whole Kingdom. How many thousands enquire, what is done in London against Popery, Profaneness, Schism and Heresy, in the pursuance of their solemn League and Covenant? The seasonableness of an action betters it, doubles it: Bis dat qui cito dat: and I may truly say in the case under hand, Bis facit qui cito facit: ply the work of reformation now it is upon the wheels, and you may do much work in a little time: principium est dimidium totius; gain-say growing evils, tread upon the Cockatrice in the shell, oppose those opinions and practices in the bud, in the birth, which if suffered to grow, to live longer, will threaten the peace both of Church and state; by delays your own guilt will be multiplied and greated, your hopes of reformation will be enfeebled, and the whole Kingdom endangered: Businesses of necessity call for quick dispatch? and is there any work of greater concernment, then the work of your God, in endeavoring your own reformation, and the reformation of his Church according to his word, which is the matter of your Covenant? I remember the words of Moses to Aaron, Go quickly to the Congregation, for there is wrath gone out from the Lord, the plague is begun, Num. 16. 46. And it is said that Aaron did run. Blame me not, but bear with me, I beseech you, if I appear warm, in persuading your speed in acting according to your Covenant, for I speak for the safety of a sinking Kingdom. Are we not all on a flame? which way can you cast your eyes, but you shall see the sparks of unbrotherly contentions, rising as out of a furnace? Alas, alas, we shall burn into ashes, and from confusions fall into a ruinous heap, if through God's blessing upon Covenant-keeping-endeavors, our misery be not prevented.

Pay your vows boldly, with so much openness, that the witness of your bonds may be witnesses likewise of your faithfulness in discharging them: The resolution of David is herein imitable, which he expresseth once and again in the same Psalm, I will pay my vows unto the Lord in the presence of all his people, in the presence of all his people, yea in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem, Psal. 116. 14, 18, 19. Is it any shame for a man to be honest, and to pay his debts? Wherefore then should men be loath to appear in the pursuance of their Covenants? Act so publicly, so courageously for a full reformation according to the word of God, and against Malignancy, Sedition, Heresy, together with all other things destructive to the welfare of the three Kingdoms, that both City and Country may understand your undaunted resolutions to keep Covenant with your God: And if in this way of zeal and faithfulness, you should meet with checks and affronts, make ye that answer unto your opposers, which brave-spirited David made unto mocking Michal, If this be to be vile, I will yet be more vile, 2 Sam. 6.

Keep Covenant with the Lord conscientiously: Have respect unto God in paying as in making vows: My text holds forth this openly, as many other parallel Scriptures, which I have formerly made use of. Whatsoever we do, which is materially comprehended in our Covenant, we should do it, because of the oath of God, Eccles. 8. 2. Do not only intend man-pleasing, or self-seeking in the pursuance of your Covenant; be not popular and vain-glorious, but sincere and single-hearted in this service. As in other acts of obedience, so in this of Covenant-keeping, have an eye unto your heavenly father who sees in secret, and he will reward you openly. God forbid, God forbid that any one of you should act against your brethren with an envious or malicious spirit, under pretence of making good your Covenant. O take heed unto yourselves, that you disgrace not this holy ordinance, nor open the mouths of them, who malign our Covenant, and would upon such like observations, reproachfully asperse both you and it. I will conclude this rule, with the caution given by worthy Nehemiah: Ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God, because of the reproach of our enemies? Neh. 5. 9.

Be vigorous in the payment of your vows: The command of God given unto Moses for the guiding of this business, is here very considerable, Le. 22. 21. Whosoever offereth a sacrifice to accomplish his vow, it shall be perfect to be accepted, there shall be no blemish in it. When you pay your debts to God, bring your best coin; put not off your light gold to God; employ and improve your very best for your God; give him the flower of your wisdom, strength, authority and interests; sit down and consider where your chiefest ability lies, and resolve with that to pay your vows. Say thus unto your own souls seriously in secret; I will beat mine own brains by study, I will stir up my best friends by importunity, and I will industriously take all courses within the compass of my general and particular calling, that myself and my family, that this Church and Common-wealth may be reformed, and that unity betwixt England and Scotland, may be preserved according to the solemn League and Covenant: to quicken your care in this kind, remember those smart words, Mal. 1. 14. Cursed be the deceiver, who hath a male in his flock, and voweth and sacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing: for I am a great King, saith the Lord of hosts, and my Name is dreadful among the heathen. Look to it therefore, I beseech you, think not to put God off, with supine, superficial sleightnesse in Covenant-keeping: If you have male-consolations, male-affections, male-endeavors, male-adventures for other things, God will not accept your female, your cold, faint, feeble actings for him, in the payment of your vows: Therefore if you have any talent better then ordinary, trade that for your God, in the pursuance of your Covenant.

Keep Covenant with the Lord constantly: I will sing praiseto thy Name forever (saith David,) that I may daily perform my vows, Psal 61. 8. you must not be like those Tenants, who bring in their rents readily, and miss not a day for the first year, but grow careless afterward, in making payment according to their compacts and agreements. The same heat which is in your hearts today (this day of your Covenant-renewing,) for reformation according to God's word, and against the hindrances and hinderers thereof, must be kept burning in your bosoms so long as you shall live. It is to be bewailed with tears of blood, that the tract of time takes off the fervency of men's spirits for God in the work of vowed-reformation. How have we lost our first love? How is our zeal for good, and against evil of late abated? The time was, when our Covenant was much in our thoughts, much in our mouths, when we moved others, and provoked ourselves to make conscience to keep it: but now (I am ashamed to speak it,) our Covenant is forgotten, our Covenant is laid aside; yea (O that I had not occasion to add) many repent their taking of the Covenant, and some are not afraid to plead against it: I heartily wish, that the true causes of this great change were well inquired after. My beloved, Is Church-reformation according to Scripture grown less desireable? Are pure ordinances less lovely in our eyes? Is there now less danger of our undoing by malignancy, popery, divisions and heresy, then heretofore? Remember, I pray you, from whence you are fallen, and do your first works, in reference to your Covenant, the obligation whereof continues upon your consciences. Our God keeps Covenant to a thousand generations, Deut. 7. 9. Let his example in this particular persuade your constancy. Be not weary of well doing; be not discouraged by disappointments▪ be not beaten off by difficulties, delays, oppositions; but proceed according to your callings and conditions, to promote that blessed reformation which is under hand: In due time you shall reap, if you faint not; Finis coronat opus; Be you faithful in your Covenant unto death, and you shall receive the crown of life.

I have done with my Rules; now give me leave to give in some few helps that you may act accordingly, and I will conclude all.

That you may be able to keep touch with God in point of Covenant, take these very short directions.

1. Work well into your hearts the knowledge of all the forementioned particulars produced to persuade Covenant-keeping: A wise man (saith Solomon) is strong, yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength (or strengtheneth might,) Prov. 24. 5. Scripture-truths clearly understood, convey according to God's Ordinance, spiritual abilities into the souls of men to act accordingly; As the warm beams of the summer sun administer vivacity to the creatures, both vegetative and sensitive: Therefore I humbly advise you, to put yourselves often under the power of those truths, which may convince you of the necessity and equity of paying your vows unto the Lord your God; and I doubt not, but by means of serious meditation, you shall find more activity herein to do your duty: While I was musing (saith David) the fire burned, Psal. 39. 3. The bellows of meditation will produce the flame of zeal, out of the small heat of holy desires to keep Covenant with God.

2. Act conscientiously, according to that measure of strength which you have received. We all know by experience, that exercise increaseth bodily strength, and questionless Christians find the truth hereof in their souls. Solomon assures us, Prov. 10. 29. The way of the Lord is strength to the upright: The further we walk on in the ways of faithfulness with God, and for God, the more able we shall be to make good our foederall engagements unto his Majesty. Do you not all remember that famous story of the well-minded widow, lamenting her inability to pay her debts, whose little stock of oil was multiplied by pouring forth, 2 King. 4. I beseech you make a spiritual improvement of this experiment; give out those gifts, graces, which you have received in the payment of your vows, and be you confident of increase: In this sense habenti dabitur; trade your two talents, or your five for your Masters use, and they shall be doubled, arise and be doing, and the Lord will be with you. Many of you know to your comfort, that a small stock traded, is grown up to a great estate; I pray you make practical application.

3. Mind yourselves, and mind one another often of your solemn Covenant: This was God's own direction in this case, 2 King. 17. 39, The Covenant which I have made with you, ye shall not forget. Among men, many promises are not performed, because they are not remembered: And so it is likewise in many of our obligations unto God, forgetfulness is sometimes one cause of some unfaithfulness. The Psalmists connection, Psal. 103. 18. is considerable; Those that keep his Covenant, and those who remember his Commandments to do them. There is an Order of Parliament, requiring Ministers to read the solemn League and Covenant in the Congregation, upon our Monethly Fast days; And I humbly move, that there may be an Order of the Common-Council of this famous City, that the Covenant which you this day renew, may once at least in every quarter of the year be read amongst you; by means hereof, you would be quickened to appear both jointly and severally, in courses to promote both private and public reformation according to your Covenant.

4. Seek strength from Heaven, by faith and prayer: The holy Apostle, holding up to Jesus Christ by humble confidence, could say, I can do all through Christ strengthening me, Phil. 4. 13. And the Psalmist makes this report of the success of his prayer; In the day when I cried, thou answeredst me, and strengthenedst me with strength in my soul, Psal. 138. 3. Your selves best know, wherein Covenant-keeping sticks most with yourselves, you are acquainted with your own remoraes, your own difficulties in this service. Consider that your help lies in the Lord your God, therefore fetch it thence by fervent believing prayers; plead the promises of God's Covenant with you through Christ, that you through him may be able to deal faithfully, to do worthily; and be you confident that the Lord will never be wanting unto the soul which seeks him in truth, He hath not said to the house of Jacob, Seek ye me in vain.

FINIS.

THE BEST TREASURE, Or, THE WAY to be Truly Rich.

BEING A Discourse on EPHES. 3. 8.

Wherein is opened and commended to Saints and Sinners the Personal and Purchased Riches of Christ, as the best Treasure, to be pursu'd, and ensur'd by all that would be happy here and hereafter.

By Bartholomew Ashwood, Late Minister of the Gospel; Author of The Heavenly Trade.

Riches and Honor are with me, yea, durable Riches and Righteousness.

Prov. 8. 18.

For ye know the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was Rich, yet for your sakes he became Poor; that ye through his Poverty might be Rich.

2 Cor. 8. 9.

In Christo igitur sitae sunt omnes nostrae Divitiae.

In Christo sita spes nostrae gloriae.

TO THE READER.

THE Wisdom and Grace of God in Christ Jesus, are frequently in the Scripture expressed by the name of Riches and Treasures. These it is the duty of Believers in all Ages, diligently to search after, to enquire into and possess for themselves. And it may be, more Diligence or with more Success, as unto the doctrinal Revelation of them, hath not been used in this Enquiry in any Age, than in that wherein we live. But still they continue Unsearchable, though not absolutely as unto their Truth, Reality and Substance, or such a possession of them as may enrich us unto a Meetness for the Inheritance of the Saints in Light; but as unto their unmeasurable Dimensions, their Breadth, and Length, and Depth, and Height in Degrees of Fullness. Wherefore, after the utmost and most diligent search made into these things by the best and wisest of the Sons of men, there is still and ever will be, new work for the Church whilst it is in this world, to enquire farther after and into these Treasures. Nothing but the sight of Christ himself in Glory, can give us a full comprehension of them. Whilst we are here below, no man can exercise his spiritual Wisdom and Faith, about a more noble, a more useful, and beneficial object. They do best for themselves who are most conversant herein, and will be sound to be the most spiritual and thriving Christians. And therefore those who are not only wise for themselves herein, but do moreover communicate unto others the knowledge that they have obtained of these unsearchable Treasures, and their insight into them, that they also may be made Partakers of them, do deserve well in an eminent manner of all that do believe. Among these, the reverend Author of the ensuing Discourse (if I mistake not) doth deserve our Praise and our Thanks to God for him and his Labors. For as he hath given Evidence, that he was himself in a good measure, admitted into the enjoyment of these unsearchable Riches; so he hath with great skill and spiritual wisdom, unfolded and laid them open unto the view of others. And this he hath done so briefly, plainly, and practically, that the most learned will find nothing in his Discourse to be despised, and the generality of Believers, whose Edification he designed, will meet with that which will be to their Use and Advantage. The times also wherein we live, do render this and discourses of the like Nature exceeding seasonable. For the Uncertainty of the continuance of all other Riches, should stir us up to look with diligence after an indefeasible Interest in the certain and unsearchable Riches of Christ. For as these alone are sufficient for us in every Condition, so we know not but that e're long, they alone will be left unto us; blessed are all they who are possessed of them. Besides, the Opposition that hath been made of late by some unto these and the like Mysteries of the Gospel, doth give a value unto a sober Testimony given unto them. Of this Nature is the ensuing Discourse, which that it may be useful to the Reader, unto all the ends whereunto it was designed by it's worthy Author, shall be the Prayer of his Servant in the work of the Gospel.

John Owen.

THE BEST TREASURE;

From EPHESIANS 3. 8. Unto me who am less than the least of all Saints is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ.

CHAP. I.

The Occasion of this Discourse, with an Introduction to the Words, and Explication of them, and the main truth contained in them.

RICHES are desired by most, but true Treasures obtained by few, (through the mistaken Notion thereof.) 'Tis sad to see how solicitous many are after Vanities: and (like the Jews in Egypt) are scattered abroad, through all the Land, to gather Stubble, whilst tried Gold lies neglected; and the Pearl of Price little valued. O the Projects and vast expense of Time and strength to reach things that are not; when the infinite Concerns of Eternity, and welfare of an immortal Soul, cannot get a room in one serious thought; or a few minutes of shortening time to attend them. 'Tis lamentable to behold, not only the blind World, but those that profess themselves Wise, (like the Spider) working out their Bowels to weave Cobwebs, and (with the Dog in the Fable) letting go the Substance to catch at Shadows; and running themselves out of breath to sit down in sorrow. The affecting sense of this Folly hath made me scatter some Balls of true Gold to prevent (if possible) the dangerous haste of such deceived Souls, and to allure them to better and more unsearchable Treasures, that are to be found in, and fetched from the Lord Jesus. This is the Design of the ensuing Discourse on this portion of Scripture, which I shall briefly open, and then draw forth the main Conclusion I intend to prosecute.

The Apostle lays down these words as an Argument by which he endeavors to strengthen the Faith of those believing Ephesians in, and to quicken their Affections to the Gospel of Christ, taken from the blessed Advantages it brings to all that do receive it. It makes a Discovery and overture of unsearchable Riches to them: let them be never so poor, destitute of the affluences and good things of this World; yet, by believing through this Gospel, they shall come to attain to inestimable Treasures; even the unsearchable Riches of Christ.

In the Words you have four parts.

First, A Discovery of the admirable Love of God to fallen man, particularly to the blind, perishing Gentiles, in not only giving Christ to save them, but in opening Christ to them, even his secret and boundless Treasures: The unsearchable Riches of Christ.

Secondly, Here's the way by which these are opened and brought to light, which is, by the Gospel, in the Administration thereof by his Messengers: That I should preach [〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉] strictly taken, 'tis to preach the Gospel, or good news, but generally it takes in the whole work of the Ministry.

Thirdly, Here's the great expense of Grace the Lord Jesus is at to bring forth his unsearchable Riches, 'tis by the laying out of Grace to those that publish it (To me who am less than the least of all Saints, is this Grace given;) Grace, great Grace, to the least of Saints, (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) lesser, least, or more little than the least; an unusual Degradation of a man's self, and the Character of an empty and unworthy Instrument in his own eye, and so a Subject that needed much Grace, to be meetned for such high Service: and yet such a one did Christ use in this great Work, laying out large Grace to prepare him for it.

Fourthly, Another considerable part of the words, are the Persons for whom this Grace is given, and to whom these unsearchable Treasures are discovered, and they were Subjects most unworthy of it, (to the Gentiles) the chiefest of Sinners, blind idolatrous Souls, (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) the Heathen, Persons extremely wicked, 1 Cor. 15. 32. called Beasts, wild Beasts, Strangers to God, beyond the Line of Communication, Eph. 2. 12. Aliens from the Commonwealth of Israel, Strangers from the Covenants of Promise, yea, Enemies to God in their minds; to those did the Lord lay out these unsearchable Treasures.

To clear up my way to the main truth I intend to prosecute hence, and to leave no difficulty in the words, 'tis necessary I speak to three things, by way of Explication.

First, In what sense Paul calls himself less than the least of all Saints, seeing he was a Person so dignified by Grace to be a chosen Vessel to God, an Apostle of Christ, filled with the Graces of the Spirit, and eminent Endowments for the Ministry, beyond many, taken into such high Communion with Christ, let into the third Heavens to see things unutterable; How then can Paul truly call himself less than the least of all Saints? Does not Paul speak dissemblingly, as the Pope does, when he calls himself Servus Servorum, the Servant of Servants, and yet makes himself Lord over the Faith and Consciences of others?

I answer, Paul doth not hyperbolically debase himself here, but really, and in the deep sense of his former Vileness, before Conversion, when he persecuted the Church, and blasphemed Christ; in the consideration of which, he thought none like him: never such a Wretch as he did God advance to so high Dignity to be an Apostle of Christ: nor doth he think that any particular Saint was so guilty in that kind and degree of wickedness as he was: one that kick'd against the pricks, persecuted Christ in his Members, haling Him to Prison, seeking to draw out his very heart blood, and to root out the profession of him: Now for such a one as he to obtain this Grace, to be put in trust with the Gospel, and to have such Treasures of Grace imparted to him, he thinks that Christ never did the like Favor to any so vile a Creature as he was: so base will a Child of God be in his own eyes, when once the Lord sets his Sins in order before him. Paul, in another place, calls himself the chiefest of Sinners, greater than the greatest of Sinners, but never less than the least of Sinners. Indeed compared with the Pharisees, his Sin seemed less than their Persecution and Blasphemy, in the degree and nature of it; his was ignorantly, theirs was maliciously perpetrated, (and so the Sin against the Holy Ghost) and in that respect his Sin was less than theirs, but compared with any that were saved, he thought himself really less than any of them in regard of his sinful Life before Conversion.

Secondly, What is this Grace which Paul so admires, and by which his Condition is so changed, and he enabled to preach those Unsearchable Riches of Christ?

Answ. First, By Grace here is understood that infinite Favor and free Grace of God to him through Christ, by which he was called out of the state of Sin and Death into the Knowledge and Kingdom of God; that ever the Lord should pitch on such a vile Wretch as he, and choose him to be a Vessel of Mercy, revealing his Son, with his Unsearchable Riches, to so poor and unworthy a Creature, pardoning his great Transgressions, and pouring out his infinite Treasures on him.

Secondly, By Grace in this place, some understand his Apostleship which he obtained at the hand of Christ, and the Ministry he received to preach to the Gentiles these Unsearchable Riches of Christ: so is it rendered Rom. 1. 5. By whom we have received Grace and Apostleship.

Thirdly, Hereby is meant also those excellent Gifts he had received for this end; those choice annointings of the Spirit, and Revelation of the Mystery, to so poor and scandalous a Creature as Paul had been, and one that was so ignorant of Christ and Salvation; that God should make him such an able Minister of the New Testament, and give him any door of utterance, and Endowments fit for so glorious a Service. This is that Grace by which these Treasures were opened to the Gentiles.

The third thing to be opened here is, What are those Unsearchable Riches of Christ which Paul preached to the Gentiles, and which are held out in the Gospel unto Saints and Sinners?

Answ. First, Those Riches which are in Christ, as Mediator, with which he is enriched in himself; those unspeakable Excellencies of his Person, which, though they reside and inhere in himself, yet they contribute abundantly to the Riches of Believers, Col. 2. 3. In whom are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge, (subjective) as his Treasures, found in him. All Treasures, created and uncreated, are not simply placed in him, but hid so, that they can be known by none but those to whom they are revealed.

Secondly, Here are intended those Riches that came by Christ, the Riches of his Purchase, the vast Estate which he hath bought for all Believers, for all that come unto him by Faith, the Estate which he gives, makes over, and prepares for such, and this is called Unsearchable Riches: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , Riches that cannot be found, or traced out. A Metaphor taken from quick scented Hounds, that are yet at a loss, and can go no farther: so the most illuminated Creature cannot follow home these Riches of Christ, they are so mysterious that they cannot be discovered; they leave no Footsteps for any to go after them: the best are at a stand and can go no farther, when they come to wade into this Deep, so deep and hidden are these Riches of Christ.

Object. If the Riches of Christ be so unsearchable and past finding out, How then could Paul discover and preach them out to the Gentiles? If they are not to be traced out, then Ministers cannot open them, nor Hearers understand them.

Answ. First, They are undiscoverable by any Humane Eye; the most refined Light of Nature cannot discern them; they are Treasures that no natural Abilities can reach: the most profound Learning, and deepest Studies of the wisest men on Earth, can make nothing of them; they are no way known but by Revelation and unveilings of the Spirit; and in this sense are called Unsearchable.

Secondly, As to the fullness of their Worth and Excellency, they cannot be understood by any in this Life; no mortal man, no unglorified Soul can know them as they are: to cast up the total value of these Treasures, is beyond the Arithmetic of Saints themselves; nay, Men and Angels cannot understand the things that God hath prepared, that Christ hath purchased for them that love him: Here (says the Apostle) we know in part, and we prophesy in part, 1 Cor. 13. 9. We, both you and I, the most elevated Light, by this side Glory, know nothing of these lockit-up Mysteries as we ought: and on this account also they are Unsearchable.

The Words being opened, and the Cabinet unlockit, I come to the main Subject, and Treasure laid up in them; which you may take in this general Doctrine and Proposition.

Doct. There are exceeding great, glorious, and unsearchable Riches in Christ, opened and tendered to Sinners in the Gospel.

In this Doctrine lie three grand Assertions to be proved.

Assertion 1. That there are exceeding great, glorious, and unsearchable Riches in Christ.

Assert. 2. These vast and hidden Treasures of Christ are opened in and by the Gospel.

Assert. 3. 'Tis the Will of God that all these great and glorious Treasures, which are in, and come by Jesus Christ, should be opened and offered to Sinners, yea, the chiefest of Sinners.

I shall speak to each Assertion, but more largely to the first: That there are exceeding great, glorious and unsearchable Riches in Christ.

And here I shall first prove by Scripture, That there are great, glorious and unsearchable Riches in Christ.

Secondly, Shew you (according to the Grace given me) what are those Unsearchable Riches of Christ.

First, That there are such Riches in, and come by Jesus Christ, the whole Gospel attests, which is a Revelation of the Excellency of Christ, and those glorious things which come by him. I shall give you three or four Scriptures to prove it; Col. 1. 27. To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you the hope of glory. In the former verse the Apostle calls the Gospel a Mystery hid from former Ages; the Excellency of which he opens in this verse, and sets out in these two Epithetes,

- 1. Rich.
- 2. Glorious.

First, 'Tis a rich Mystery, in that it opens the glorious Riches of Christ, which are better than the Gold of Ophir and all precious Substance; the Riches of his Wisdom, Grace, Righteousness and Redemption, which he calls tried Gold, and counsels poor Sinners to come to him for it, Rev. 3. 17.

Secondly, 'Tis a glorious Mystery; called the Riches of his Glory, Rom. 9. 23. That he might make known the Riches of his Glory on the Vessels of Mercy. Eph. 1. 18. The Riches of his Glory, &c. The Gospel is a glorious Mystery, because it brings to light great and glorious things, even the Treasures of unknown Glory: and what these Treasures of Glory are, he tells you in the close of the verse, they are Christ in you the hope of Glory: Christ Jesus applied by Faith, and received into the Soul by the Spirit, is this glorious Treasure, in that he gives them (in his Union with them) an evident Right to Glory. See Prov. 8. 18, 19. Riches and Honor are ascribed to him: Riches and Honor are with me, yea, durable Riches and Righteousness: My Fruit is better than Gold, yea, than fine Gold, and my Revenue than choice Silver. This is spoken of Christ, the true Wisdom of God, (1 Cor. 1. 24. Christ the Wisdom of God, and Power of God) who is the Subject of this Chapter. And 'tis said of him, that Riches, durable Riches, are with him, better Treasures than Gold, than choice Silver; Durable Treasures, which Time cannot waste or alter; Riches that last to all Eternity, which Rust and Moth cannot consume. And Righteousness (i. e.) Treasure justly gotten, Riches of Wisdom and Grace given him by the Father, and Riches of Righteousness bought by his Blood. All this Treasure is in him, and offered by him unto Sinners. In Christ must needs be Unsearchable Riches, for in him dwells the fullness of the Godhead bodily, Col. 2. 9. that is, the Divine Nature united to the Humane Nature: perfect God, as well as perfect Man; the infinite Treasures of the Divine Nature are his. He is the Heir of all things, and therefore must needs be rich. Heaven and Earth are his, Jews and Gentiles, all Persons and Things put under him; in which Glory and Majesty, set over all the Works of God's hands, he mounts his Throne (having confirmed his Title by his Blood) and gives Gifts to men, and makes a tender of Grace and Glory, of Thrones and Crowns, to all that come unto him, promising to his Servants, that they also shall inherit all things, Rev. 21. 7. and therefore he himself must needs be rich. In him are Treasures of Mercy and Goodness, of Wisdom and Knowledge, Riches, exceeding Riches of Grace, Eph. 2. 7. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , Riches of Strength, Honor, Glory and Blessing. So that the Scriptures give in full testimony to this Truth, That there are exceeding great, glorious, and unsearchable Riches in Christ. And now I shall endeavor to show,

Secondly, What are those exceeding great and unsearchable Riches of Christ. But alas! this Well is deep, and wherewith shall we draw? these Treasures are out of sight, who can find them out? they are boundless, bottomless, numberless, endless; where shall we begin? where can we make an end? who can search them out to Perfection? The best of men are but Learners, the Angels are Inquirers, the wisest men but Fools in these Searches; we can know but in part, nor prophesy but in part; when the utmost is spoken, you have not heard of one half of his Glory. But according to the Revelation of Christ, I shall open some of these Treasures of Christ to you, under these two Heads, His

- Riches:
 - Personal
 - Purchased

with some Applications and Improvements of them as we go through these Deeps.

CHAP. II.

The Personal Riches of Christ opened, in his Divine Nature; manifested in his Attributes; with the wonderful Advantages thereof to Believers.

PART of these glorious Treasures of Christ lies in his Personal Riches, that vast Worth and unknown Excellency that reside in himself, which become the Believers Treasure also, by their Relation to, their Union with, Contemplation of it, with the communicated Fruits and Effects thereof, Col. 1. 27. which is Christ in you the hope of glory. (i. e.) which Treasure is Christ in you, or Christ united to you by Faith, and dwelling in you by his Spirit. Christ his Personal, as well as purchased Treasures are yours, through your Union with, your Relation to, your Enjoyment of him, and his glorious Communications to you.

Now these Personal Treasures of Christ are demonstrable, in his Natures, in his Offices, in his sweet and gracious Dispositions.

In his Natures severally considered, and united in his Hypostatical and Personal Union. The Person of Christ consists of two Natures,

- God, the true Immanuel or (God with us) God manifested in the Flesh.
- Man, the true Immanuel or (God with us) God manifested in the Flesh.

So Joh. 1. 14. The Word was made Flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his Glory, the Glory of the only begotten Son of God, full of Grace and Truth: That is, the Word, which was God in the Second Person; The brightness of his Glory, and express Image of his Person, Heb. 1. 3. took our Nature to himself in one Person, and became Mediator, perfect God, and perfect Man

First, Perfect God, equal with the Father in Essence, *Joh. 10. 30. I and my Father are one; that is, one God, not one Person; 'tis not 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, one Person, but 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, one thing or Being. I am in the Father, and the Father in me, and therefore my Sheep are safe, they are in my hand, and in my Father's hand, (here are two distinct Subsistences) and we are the same: I and my Father are one God; as God, I am equal with him, the same in Substance, equal in Power and Glory, Rom. 9. 5. Of whom concerning the Flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed forever: over all men, and over all things; or in all, (as Vatab.) This Scripture is generally used by all Interpreters to prove the Divine Nature of Christ. He is God over all, and blessed forever, in himself, and of himself: and the Author of all those Blessings his Creatures enjoy. *By him are all things created that are in Heaven, and that are in Earth, Visible and Invisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers, all things were created by him and for him, Coloss. 1. 16. And therefore he is perfect God, this being his peculiar Operation to create the World: By him all things consist; he upholds all things by the word of his Power, Heb. 1. 3. Supporting and ruling them, which is another property of the Divine Nature, the ruling and bearing up of all things in the World, which none but everlasting Arms can do. So he hath Power to forgive Sins, which only God can do: to raise the Dead, to judge the World, Mark 2. 5, 7. Joh. 11. 43, 44. Acts 17. 31. To know the Secrets of all Hearts, Luke 5. 22. To be the Object of Religious Worship, Heb. 1. 16. All which abundantly prove the Lord Jesus to be perfect God: and so of infinite Perfection and Blessedness, to enrich all that come unto him; which will evidently appear, if we do but a little consider those Perfections of the Divine Nature, as opened in the Scriptures, all which are in Jesus Christ.

First, His Simplicity, being a most pure Essence without the least Composition or Diversity of Parts or Accidents. There is no mixture of Qualities or Excellencies in God, but every Attribute is his entire Essence, and therefore he is a most pure and simple Being, as the Names he gives himself import, especially these two, Ehejeh, Exod. 3. 14. I am hath sent me unto you. The Word is in the future Tense, I will be, hath sent me; but in the Hebrew, the future Tense expresseth often both the Present and preterperfect; and so this Word holds forth God's most simple, absolute, and immutable Being and self Existence. So Jehovah, a Name which God seems to take most Delight in, and which doth as it were sum up all his glorious Excellencies in one word, importing his most pure, glorious, and incomprehensible Essence, which he hath in and from himself, before all time, and unto all Eternity, subsisting in, and of himself, and giving Being to all his Creatures, and therefore must needs be the most perfect and simple Being. The Unity of his Essence proves his Simplicity, he is one God (though three Persons) Deut. 6. 4. Hear O Israel, the Lord our God is one God; he is the first Being, and one undivided Essence, and therefore most pure and simple. He is altogether a most perfect Being, in and of himself, who wants nothing that is excellent, nor can have anything in himself that is evil, and therefore is a most simple, pure Nature.

And if Jesus Christ, as God, be such a simple and excellent Being, then he is a most perfect Treasure to his People; there is nothing wanting in him to make them happy, nor can there be anything in him or come from him to make them miserable; then he is true and faithful to Believers; there can be no Contrarieties in him, or Contradictions proceed from him; his Love is sincere, his Purposes are true, there is a reality in his Expressions; for he is one, and of one mind to his redeemed ones. O Believers! think on the Purity of Christ's Nature, the Perfection of his Blessedness, the Integrity of his Affections, and the Infiniteness of all his Perfections, to make his beloved ones happy. There's no Moth, or Rust, no Worm or Death, can ware out his pure Affections to his People. There is no mixture in his Nature: Composition is the Corruption, or Imperfection of created Beings, but in Christ's Divine Nature there is Unity and Simplicity, there is nothing can alter his Thoughts and Resolutions to his sincere ones: he is most true, and most full in all his Perfections and this his Simplicity: assures Believers of eternal and infinite Blessedness in their Union with, and Relation unto him, for he is in himself the most absolute and perfect Being, the first and most simple Being: he is most perfect in and of himself, for he hath all his Perfections in and of himself (as God) and all that is sufficient for his infinite Blessedness, in and from himself, and hath all that in him, which is sufficient for the Good of his Creatures, and highest Happiness of his People. Again, he is most perfect, because he wants nothing from another to make him blessed. He needs no Creatures to contribute anything to him, nor doth he lose anything by Creatures falling from him: or can have any Addition to his Glory or Blessedness, by the access of men, or Angels to him. So also, he doth what pleaseth himself, nothing can resist his Will, or frustrate his Purposes, and therefore is most perfect in himself.

And if the Lord Jesus be so perfect in himself, then he is the Author of Perfection to his People, for he hath made over himself, his whole Person, God-Man, to Believers, to be their Shield and exceeding great Reward. Then Believer, thy case is happy, thy Treasure is full and perfect, thy Choice is a blessed Choice, and thy Lot a perfect Lot, fallen in a good Ground. Then the Person of thy Beloved is altogether lovely, his Accomplishments being altogether perfect, not a Spot or Blemish in him. Then all his Gifts to his Spouse are perfect, his Righteousness is a perfect Righteousness that makes Believers in God's Account as perfect as Christ himself, were not the robe of his Righteousness every way as large as thy Guilt and Nakedness, were it not long enough and broad enough to cover all thy Deformities, and hide all thy Imperfections from the pure and judging Eye of the Father, it were not perfect. But all his Procurements by his Blood are perfect. His Holiness is a perfect Holiness, and he will make his Peoples Graces perfect too, e're he hath done. He is the Rock, his Work is perfect, i. e. He doth perfectly fulfill his Promises, his Works are true to his Word, and he will perfect that which concerns his People. Psal. 138. 8. i. e. He will accomplish that which he hath begun in me.

Let the doubting Believer know, that the Perfection of Christ is Security for Perfection in his Graces also, in due time; he that hath begun a good work in thy Soul, will perfect it until the day of Jesus Christ; he will, ere he hath done, bring thy weak Graces to Perfection, that when he shall appear to Judgment, thy Holiness shall be presented to the Father without Spot or wrinkle.

Secondly, As the Godhead of Christ, is a most pure and simple Being, so is he an infinite Essence, both internally, without all Limitation or Dimension of his Being; and externally, without all Comprehension of Places or Capacities; every Attribute of his is infinite, His Understanding is infinite. Psal. 147. 5. His Wisdom, Power, Love, Mercy, Faithfulness, and all his Perfections, are one entire, infinite Being, that cannot be known or comprised, no Bounds or Measures can be set to his divine Excellencies, The Heaven of Heavens cannot contain him, 1 Kings 8. 27. or compass his Greatness; how much less can a narrow Heart receive his Fulness, his Love: and all his Attributes are beyond Knowledge. Isa. 40. 25. To whom then will ye liken me, or shall I be equal, saith the holy one. This Infiniteness of Christ's divine Nature, is a mystery too deep for human Capacity to fathom, not curiously to be searched out, but humbly to be adored, and no way discoverable, but by his own Light, and according to the model of a created understanding. Some dark Reflections of this visible Glory, are discoverable in the Glass of sacred Scripture, which declare the Greatness of God, both as to his incomprehensibleness and Eternity; he is everywhere, and yet circumscribed nowhere, he fills all places in the World, or without the World, but confined nowhere; nowhere included, nowhere excluded: containing all things, contained by none, his essential Presence is in all places, not by any Extension or Division of parts, which are not in God, but (as the Soul in the Body, so is God in the Universe) the whole in the whole, and the whole in every part; He is essentially present in all Places; not by imparting his Essence to any created Being, but by giving and preserving the Being of those things which fill up those Places: so his Power is everywhere, in that all things are subject to his Power; his Wisdom fills Heaven and Earth, in that all Things and Places are manifest in his sight. And this yields,

- 1. Comfort to Believers.
- 2. Terror to Sinners.
- 3. Caution to all.

First, Wonderful Comfort to Believers, in the Assurance of Christ's Omnipresence with them, to counsel and comfort them. The Believer can say, what none else can, Where I am, there is my Treasure with me: In all Estates and Places is the Lord Jesus with his People (while they keep with him.) In the Water, he wades with them; in the Flames, he stands between them, to keep off Destruction from them; when under Wants, Temptations, Dangers, he is by them at their right hand to relieve them: he knows their Soul in Adversity, for he is near them: He is by, when Corruptions insurrect in them, when Satan with his fiery Darts assaults them, or Enemies oppress them; he sees when their Fears rise and their Tears fall: He stands behind Ephraim's back when he is mourning, and puts his Tears into his Bottle, and lays his Complaints upon his Heart. No sooner is Mary mourning for her departed Lord, but he is by her side to comfort her. When his Daniel's are thrown into the Lions Den, he goes with them to shut the mouths of devouring Lions, or to give Life in the midst of Death: When the Knife is at the Throats of his Isaac's, his Power is by to hold back the murderous hand from destroying; We will break their bands, and cast their cords from us, Psal. 2. 3. say the Saints Enemies: Hold there, saith Christ, I am with them to defend them. No cruel Edicts can exile them from his Presence: He was in Patmos with John, and turned it into a Pavilion; with Jeremiah in the Dungeon, and gave him Goal delivery. Earthly men may be abroad, and their Treasures at home; but faithful Believers carry their Treasure with them, or their Portion, their Inheritance follows them.

Secondly, The Immensity and Omnipresence of Christ speaks Terror to the Wicked, in that he is near them to behold and requite their Transgressions; He knows their Works and their Thoughts, all their secret Designs are naked in his sight; There's no covering from his Eye, The Darkness and Light are both alike to him, Psal. 139. 12. He sees their Rage and Fury against him; their hidden works of Darkness: All their Plots and Purposes against his Interest are open to his Eye: their inward Thoughts, filthy Lusts, close Practises, are before him; he is behind thy back, Sinner, to hear thy blasphemous Oaths, thy reproachful Slanders of his ways and People: thy malicious resolves, thy bloody Decrees against his poor and faithful ones: He is before thee to obviate thy Designs, to frustrate thy Attempts, and requite thy Spight and Mischiefs. O you who are yet in your blood and gore of Sin, in your confederacy with Death and Hell, in your fixed Wrath against the Lord and his Anointed, be persuaded to believe the greatness of your Danger before you feel it; think how visible all your works of darkness are, when God, who is all Eye, is in every place; and how desperate your sinful Adventures are, on the drawn Sword of Divine Justice at your Breasts; how unsafe your securest state is, who are compass'd within the Circle of Omnipresence, and have Vengeance continually at your heels, yea, are taken in the Arms of devouring Judgment.

Thirdly, The belief of Christ's being everywhere, gives a Caution to all to carry themselves in all Places and Undertakings, as such who are ever in his sight: His Eyes run to and fro, to behold the Evil and the Good: He stands by thy Bed side, to inspect thy waking Thoughts, to observe thy unchaste Motions, thy Earthy, vain Cogitations; no sooner is a forbidden wish in thy Heart, but his Eye is there also: thy tow'ring Pride, thy pale Envy, thy flaming Anger, thy frothy Pleasure, thy lustful Desires, thy revengeful Projects thy Earthy Thoughts, are legible Characters to his discerning look. And should not the sense of this advise thy rational Soul to more watchfulness over thy treacherous Heart: And surely, were Christ's All-seeing Eye more observed, Persons Thoughts would be more weighed, and their Insides more regarded. O, Reader, whoever thou art, Lodge this Truth in thy Heart, and carry this Belief up and down with thee, wherever thou goest; The Eye of God is on thee: He that must shortly be thy Judge, is now thy Recorder; and puts a Remark on all thy Thoughts, Words and Ways, for which he will bring thee into Judgment. Set a watch on all the rising motions of thy Heart; stop thy hasty words at the door, and examine what they are, whence they come, whither they go, before thou let them pass; and measure thy designed Actions by the Standard of the Sanctuary, e're thou let them go under thy hand; seeing he that is thy Judge comes with his measuring Line to take an Account of them, and to render according to their nature and merit.

Thirdly, Again, As Christ's Infiniteness exceeds all confines of Place, so he passes beyond all terminations of Time; being from Everlasting to Everlasting, without Beginning, without End: Psal. 90. 2. His Duration admits of no distinction of Time, and therefore must needs be Eternal. Time is the measure of Finite Beings, which are capable of Priority and Succession, but the Divine Essence hath no Beginning, and so can have no End: He is the Author of all other Beings, and therefore cannot have a Beginning; there being nothing before him to give him a Being: God hath his Essence in and of himself, and so must needs be Eternal. Neither is he only Eternal, (saith Aquinas) but he is his own Eternity, because he is his own Essence, subsisting in and of himself; which Essence, or Eternity of his, is the very reason of Eternity, and of all things contained therein: for the Divine Essence, subsisting of himself, must needs be before all things that are made, as the Cause is before the Effect, and Eternity before Time; seeing the things that are made are made by him, Joh. 1. 3.

His Unity also proves his Eternity, being one uncompounded and undivided Being, and so before all, as Unity is before Multitude: and whatever Beings are, they are derived from Unity; and without End, for take off Unity and nothing remains. The Scriptures bear full witness to the Eternity of Christ: Before the Mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the Earth, and the World, from Everlasting to Everlasting thou art God, Psal. 90. 2. I am the first, and I am the last, and besides me there is no God, Isa. 44. 6. He is the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the Ending, which is, which was, and which is to come, Rev. 1. 8. He is before all, and by him all things consist, Col. 1. 17. And though Christ be called the only begotten Son of God, Joh. 1. 14. and so implies the Father to be before the Son; yet this priority is of Order, not of Time; Christ, as God, is Eternal with the Father, and so before all Time, Joh. 1. 1. and to Everlasting.

And this greatens the Believers Happiness beyond all conception, that his Treasure is Eternal: Time limits all the Comforts and Interests of Christless Souls, let them seem never so amiable and great (through the multiplying-glass of mistaken Sense) yet the shortness of their Duration narrows up their Felicity; whereas the portion of Heaven-born Souls exceeds all Dimensions and Terminations: The Moth of Time cannot consume their Treasure: their Lease can never expire: thousands of years, that comprise the extent of Earthly Estates, substracts nothing from that Eternity, which gives duration to the Saints Treasure. Rejoice, O Believer, in the assured perpetuity of thy best Interests; here thy most desired Mercies are but of short continuance: Thy Privileges are but Tabernacle-privileges; thy Enjoyments determinable, thy Frames are transient, thy Pleasures fading, Hope, Peace, Love, Grace, endures but for a Season, but thy Possessions beyond the Grave, are eternal: and as long as Christ lives, shall thy Treasure last, thy Holiness, Happiness, Pleasures, and Perfections in the other World, shall be coexistent with thy Soul; and as far from expiring as the Love that gave them was from beginning.

And as thy Comforts here are short lived, so are thy Troubles too, Sorrow enduring for a Night, light Afflictions, and but for a moment, 2 Cor. 4. 17. Tears contained within a Bottle, Fears, Wants, Losses, Dangers, confined within this Span of time, and expired▪ with this short Vapor of Life, but thy Consolations, Gain, Enjoyments, Peace, Safety, shall be eternal, no more liable to the Injury of time; thy wet and weary Sowings, are but for a Season; thy weak and wasting Duties, will be over; but thy reaping, thy resting shall know no end, but endure while the Eternity and Omnipotency of Christ can make them good.

Fourthly, The Divine Nature of Christ is immutable also, above all Alteration and Change, He is the same Yesterday, to Day, and forever. Heb. 13. 8. Immutable is his Nature, being a most simple Essence, free from parts or any Mixture, that might render him capable of Corruption; he is also the first Being, and so free from the Influence and Dispose of a higher Power. Change in anything comes, either from a Corruptibleness in its Nature, or from the Will of a Superior Power: but God being the first and supreme Cause, is above all, and so unalterable in his Nature. Isa. 44. 6. I am the first and the last. He is infinite too, and so comprehends all Fullness of Perfection in himself, and cannot meet with Alteration; they are imperfect things, that are subject to change, old things that pass away, but God is infinitely perfect, and therefore cannot change or be moved from what he is, by any external or internal Cause; he cannot cease to be what he was, or begin to be what he was not: (as to his Divine being) indeed the Word, the second Person, in time assumes the human Nature, into a Union with himself, but then he doth not cease to be what he was, that is perfect God, and so doth not change: and though he alters his Laws and Administrations of Worship, in the times of the Gospel, yet he alters not his mind, this Change was decreed from all Eternity: God determined them to be mutable, and therefore they must change, or God would not be immutable. And whereas it may be urged, that God doth threaten to do what he doth not, and promise to perform, what he hath never fulfilled, and therefore is mutable. I answer, that God never threatens and promises in his word absolutely, but conditionally, and the Condition failing, the Act on which it depends fails: but God doth not change his Mind, neither was this Mutability in man, accidental to God, but foreseen and sure, and so God's Purposes thereabout, are not alterable, but eternal. And whereas God is said, now to be angry, and then to Love, which argues a Mutation: yet that Change is not in God's Will and Affection, which is one Essence with himself, but in his outward Dispensation. So that the Divine Nature in Christ is unchangeable, both in his Nature and Will, he cannot, he will not vary; in him is no Variableness, or Shadow of turning; he is a Rock, and his Work perfect; Time or Change in Creatures, work no Change in God; 'tis the Mistake of Unbelief, to think that the Heart of God changes, as the poor Believer doth; like those that row by the Shore, fancy the Land and Houses on it to move, when 'tis but the Vessel changes his place.

Comfort thy Heart poor Soul (who hast sincerely chosen the Lord to be thy Portion) on this Assurance, that the Thoughts of God are the same towards thee as ev••: all thy changeable Frames, and unfaithful Dealings with him, works no more Alteration in his Heart to thee, than the interposing Clouds, do on the essential Light of the Sun; or the Provocations of the Child, on the Fathers Relation, who is still a Father, how unlike soever he carries himself to the Child: but these Instances are too short to adumbrate and set out the Immutability of God, who cannot but be Truth, though every man be a Lye: he is faithful and cannot deny himself to his, though they believe not: 'Tis his Faithfulness secures thy Faith, and not thy Faith makes good his Faithfulness. Rom. 3. 3. 4. Shall their Unbelief make the Faith (or Faithfulness) of God, of none Effect? God forbid. Mat. 3. 6. I the Lord, change not, therefore ye Sons of Jacob are not consumed.

Is Christ immutable? Then there is Ground enough for Believers to cast Anchor on him, and to bottom their strong Hopes upon his Promises: for faithful is he that hath promised. Heb. 10. 23. He is not as man that he should lie, or as the Son of man, that he should repent. Numb. 23. 19. Hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good. He cannot alter the Word that is gone out of his Mouth, Heaven and Earth shall pass away, but not one Tittle of his Word, till all be fulfilled: For this end hath God shown to the Heirs of Promise, the Immutability of his Council (confirmed by an Oath) that by two immutable things (his Purpose and Promise) in which 'tis impossible for God to lie, they might have strong Consolation who have fled for Refuge, to lay hold on the Hope set before them. Heb. 6. 18. 19. O Believer, suffer not thy Soul to be tossed to and fro, with every change of Providence without, or of thy heart within, but roll thy Hopes on this Rock of Ages, on whom the Pillars of the Earth hang for their Stedfastness, the whole Creation for its Sustentation, by whom Winter and Summer, Day and Night are kept within their Seasons, and all the changes of his People, reduced into a Consistency with his Covenant Fidelity.

This also yields encouragement to Believers, for perseverance in the way of Duty, whatever Alterations are in their Conditions and the Times they live in: because he that leads them is the same, in the worst, as well as the best of Times; and as able to secure them, and as firm in his Affections to them, seeing he changes not, and therefore cannot, will not leave them.

Again, To this Immutability of God in Christ, may gracious Souls go to get their unsteddy Hearts fixed, and derive by Faith more constancy to their Spirits towards God: He who is faithful hath engaged it, to establish their Hearts with Grace, and keep them from Evil. 2 Thes. 3. 3. But the Lord is faithful, who shall establish you and keep you from evil. 2 Chro. 20. 20. Believe God, so shall you be established. As Christ's Life is Security for the Believer's Life, Joh. 14. 19. His Power for their Preservation, 2 Tim. 1. 12. so is his Immutability for their Stedfastness, Psal. 102. 12. The Author of this Psalm, under the sense of his weakness, and the languishing state of Zion, comforts himself in the consideration of God's Immutability: But thou, O Lord, shalt endure forever: And upon this mountain of Spices raises his hopes of Zion (this he takes for granted, from his unalterableness) He shall appear in his Glory. Go, Believer, and lay (by Faith) thy changeable Heart on Christ's Constancy; as the Shunamite did her dead Child on Elisha's Bed, till she received him to Life again, 2 Kings 4. 21. And she said (when her Child was dead) It shall be well, verse. 23. So in the same Spirit of Faith with her, Leave thy Soul with a Faithful Jesus to be made faithful also. 1 Thes. 5. 24. Faithful is he that calleth you, who will also do it.

Fifthly, The Omniscience of Christ is another of his Divine Attributes, by which he doth perfectly, and in one Eternal and immutable Act, know himself, and all things that were, are, or shall be: and things that are not, that never were or never shall be; things natural and voluntary, necessary and contingent; things in their Causes and Effects, acted or intended, good or evil, finite or infinite; all are most clearly and fully naked and open in his sight. He alone fully knows himself and his Divine Perfections, 2 Cor. 2. 10. The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God, ver. 11. For what man knoweth the things of man, save the Spirit of a man, which is in man, even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God So Matth. 11. 27. No man knoweth the Son, but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son: That is, No man can know the Divine Nature but God himself, immediately and perfectly; That knowledge which the Saints have of God, is but a secondary and communicated knowledge, of God's back parts, as revealed in his Works, Word, and in a Mediator, according to the measure of the Gift of Christ: But God knows himself immediately and fully as he is: for his Knowledge is his Essence, and so as Infinite as his Being is. He is a pure Act without any potentiality: therefore his Understanding and himself are the same. He knows also all things else that are in Being and not in Being; things past, present, or to come, in one eternal Act, without any search into Principles or Causes; as Humane Understandings do, in a discursive way, and by succession: but hath the Idea's of all things in himself, his Essence being the Exemplar of those things, seeing he gives them their Being: As the Artificer knows the Forms of the Pieces he makes, and the Writer the proportion of his own Letters; so doth God, the first Cause, know all things that receive their Nature from him; they being first in him, and so eternally present to him. Hence the knowledge of God is most certain and infallible, and things are as he knows them, seeing his Knowledge gives them their Being: which must be understood of the things that God approves of, as his Creatures, his Providences, and Evils of Punishment, which are just and righteous: But sinful Evils have no dependence on his Fore-knowledge, or Influence from his Essence. Indeed Actions, as they are natural, have their Being from God; but the pravity and sinfulness of those Acts (Sin being but the privation of that good which was, and should be in them) is derived from the Subject whose Acts they are: As the Motion of the Clock is from the Art of the Artificer; but the obliquity of the Motion is from some defect in the Clock itself: God's fore-knowledge of Sin confers no Physical Virtue and necessity to the Being and succession of Sin, and yet his knowledge of it is certain; all things being naked and manifest in his sight, who is Truth itself, and cannot deceive or be deceived: He determining to permit the Being of Sin, must needs fore-know it; else his Knowledge would not be perfect: and if his Knowledge should be imperfect, his Essence would be so too, they being both the same; but this cannot consist with the Fountain of all Perfection: He is the Holy One, and can do no Iniquity, Zeph. 3. 5. His Fore-knowledge of Sin, doth not offer Violence to the Nature of man, or destroy the natural Freedom of his Will, but foreseeing what man would be, determined to leave him to the natural Motion of his own Will. Judas betraying Christ, as it was sinful, was the Consequent of God's Foreknowledge, but the effect of his own Covetousness. Acts 2. 23.

All Contingencies are perfectly foreseen of God also, both in himself as the first Cause, and so they are necessary to succeed in due time; he sees them also in the second Causes, in respect of which they are said to be contingent, for to God nothing is accidental, although it seems so to men, through an Unacquaintedness with their Dependance on the first Cause: Rebekah's meeting Abraham's Servant at the Well, and her Discourse with him. Gen. 24. 15. seem to Standers by, to be things contingent: but look back to the former Verse, and you will see them to be the answer of Prayer, and so before appointed: The like was the Midianites drawing Joseph out of the Pit, Gen. 37. and the Wind blowing down the House on Job's Children, Job 1. though they look like Accidents, yet were the Effects of God's Permission and fore-appointment.

Again, God fore-knows all Contingencies, not only as they are in their first and second Causes, but as they are in themselves; for all things being present to him, he perfectly knows what every Cause will produce in time, and so must necessarily come to pass; according to that Axiom; Every thing that is, when once it is, it appears necessary that it should be: Acts 15. 18. Known unto God are all his Works, from the beginning of the World. Heb. 4. 13. Neither is there any Creature which is not manifest in his sight, but all things are naked and open to the Eyes of him with whom we have to do. Psal. 56. 8. Thou tellest my wanderings, put thou my tears into thy Bottle, are not they in thy Book? Psal. 139. 2. Thou understandest my Thoughts afar off: that is, before they are in Being. Prov. 15. 3. The Eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good. This Wisdom of Christ, as God, is part of his Unsearchable Treasure, and so great a Deep, that 'tis past finding out, by his most intelligent Creatures in Heaven and Earth. Rom. 11. 33. O the depths of the Riches, both of the Wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his Judgments, and his ways past finding out.

Again, as God is infinitely wise in himself, so is he the Author of all Wisdom to his Creatures; He enlighteneth everyone that cometh into the World. Jo. 1. 9. This is laid down to prove the Divine Nature of Christ, he is the Word, which is God; this appears both in his making all things verse 3. and in his incomprehensible Essence, He is the Light shining in Darkness, and the Darkness comprehends it not: Also, he is the Fountain of all that Light and Life his Creatures enjoy, and therefore must needs be God. The Evangelist doth not speak here of Christ as Mediator, and so of that saving Light, which he gives to his Elect, by his Spirit; but of his divine Essence, which the Jews would not own, and as a proof of it; doth instance in his creatorly Power: he is the Fountain of that natural Light, which all men have: all Wisdom comes from him, who is the Father of Lights; he is the Fountain of Light, able to fill the Children of men with all that Knowledge that is necessary, to their highest Happiness, to guide them with his Eye, and lead them into all Truth.

First, This yields wonderful Comfort to Believers, that they have chosen such a Savior, as is able to make them wise to Salvation; who not only knows what is best for them, but can also reveal and make out the Knowledge thereof to them, that they might know and choose, what makes for their best Good here and forever: He is the Son of Righteousness, Mal. 4. 2. The bright Morning Star. Rev. 22. 16. The Light of Israel, Isa. 10. 7. The Pillar of Fire by Night. Neh. 9. 12. To show them their way, in their greatest Difficulties and Obscurity.

Secondly, This assures gracious Souls, that he who hath undertaken their Conduct, Supply, and Preservation to Glory, knows how to make it good and finish the work he is entrusted with: he can keep that good thing committed to him; he can help them in the worst of Straits, and lead them through the greatest Improbabilities, Weaknesses, Dangers, yea Impossibilities to their desired Rest.

Thirdly, This also relieves them, that they have a Friend in Heaven, who knows their Soul in Adversity, and is acquainted with all their Troubles, Wants, Weaknesses, Wrongs, Fears, Dangers, yea with all their Labors, Duties, Desires and Designs for him, and knows how to succor, comfort, support and deliver them, when all Refuge fails them, and there is none to help; and how to requite, and crown all their Duties and Sufferings for his Name: He knows their Corruptions, the Strength, and Prevalency of them, and how to subdue and destroy them; he sees their Ways and Infirmities, and how to heal them, he knows the Power and Malice of their Enemies, to restrain them, and discovers the most secret Plots against his innocent ones, to disappoint them, that in vain is the Snare laid in his Sight against them. He observes thy Tears Believer, thy corner Duties, thy Bed-side Breathings after him, though hid from others; he takes notice of thy Innocency, when men revile thee, and knows how to plead thy Cause, and bring thee to the Light.

Fourthly, This will serve to humble the proud Heart of men, that God is acquainted with all their Vileness; he sees their high, their fretful, their vain, their unclean, their unsound, their rebellious Hearts. Souls; men see the best of you, your fair and specious Duties, but he sees your inside and all your secret Rottenness, when you sit before him, as his People sit, and seem devout in your Services; he at the same time knows where your Thoughts are wandering, and espies every vain Motion and sinful glance of your deceitful Eye: when thou prayest with greatest Zeal, his Eye is upon thy close Hypocrisy, thy spiritual Pride, thy base ends, and those conceived Lusts, which will break out, when thy Duties are over. O how should this abase thy proud Heart, and prevent thy swelling Thoughts upon conceited Excellencies in thyself, or supposed Worth in thy Duties, seeing he knows what is in thee, and how vain man would be wise.

This also should advise thy Soul to Sincerity, in thy Profession, Purposes, Promises, Duties, because he beholds thee, and weighs thy Paths, searcheth thy Heart, tries thy Reins, and will shortly bring thy secret things to Judgment.

Lastly. This counsels such as want Wisdom, to be looking to Jesus, and waiting at the Fountain, and Spring-head, for their Instruction.

Sixthly, the Omnipotency of Christ, is another of those glorious Properties of the divine nature, which renders him so vast, and unconceivable a Treasure, to all that receive him, He is the mighty God the everlasting Father. Isa. 9. 6. who hath infinite Strength to order and establish his Kingdom, and to exert his Government in Zion, and over Nations: his Strength must needs be infinite, because his Kingdom is eternal; no created human arm, can sway the Scepter of the World, and maintain an everlasting Rule over the Hearts and Conversations of all his People, in all Ages; and therefore, he must be God, and the mighty God, to transact the whole Work, that concerns him, as Mediator, and to answer the Appellations given him in Scripture. Things are ascribed to Christ, which cannot be performed by less than an infinite Power.

First, His creating all things in Heaven and Earth, Col. 1. 16. By him were all things created, that are in Heaven and that are in Earth, visible and invisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers, all things were created by him, and for him: He is the eternal Word, the Exemplar, and efficient Cause of all created Beings; The Heavens and Earth, Angels and men, the Inhabitants of the upper and nether World, were all formed by Jehovah, Christ, who gave Being to all his Creatures, as pleased him; and therefore his Power must needs be Almighty, who is the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the Earth, that fainteth not, be that giveth Breath unto the People upon it, and Spirit to them that walk therein. Isa. 40. 28. chap. 42. 5.

What a potent Lord have Believers chosen, who can supersede all their Difficulties, by his Creation-help? if his whole Store-house of Heaven and Earth be not full enough to supply their Wants, he can soon set forth a new Edition of Mercies by his own immediate arm; if their way to Glory, lie through a waste howling Wilderness where no Foot-steps can be seen to guide them, he can create a Cloud by day, and Pillar of Fire by Night to conduct them: If their Provisions fail to relieve them in their Journey, he can rain a Shower of Manna from his secret Granary, and open the Caverns of the Flinty Rock, and put new Springs into the barren Wilderness to refresh them; when they are environed with Troops of Death, he can, in a Moment, interpose his fiery Chariots and Horse-men, and when all their Deliverers fail, send from Heaven, and save them: when the Visibility of Religion ceases, and the Heavens pass away as a Scrole, when the Glory of the Lord's House is dissolved into a Chaos, when the Gold of the Sanctuary is become Dross, and the Gospel-Church metamorphoz'd into the old World, he can even then create a new Heaven, and a new Earth, wherein dwelleth Righteousness. Is thy Heart, Believer, full of filthiness? Thy Redeemer can create a clean Heart: and if thy Tempest-tossed Soul can find no rest, thy Lord can create the Fruit of the Lips, Peace for thee: What is too hard for a creating Arm to do? Or what can undo that People, who have a faithful Creator to commit themselves, and all their Concerns unto?

Secondly, Another Proof of the Omnipotency of Christ, is the upholding all things by the Word of his Power, Heb. 1. 4. Who being the Brightness of his Fathers Glory, and the express Image of his Person, and upholding all things by the Word of his Power. Here's another Royalty of the divine Nature of Christ, a new beaming out of his Glory as God, even in the bearing up, maintaining, and Dispose of the whole Creation, in the former ver. the forming of the Universe, and whole World, was ascribed to Christ: and here the Preservation of it also, is laid upon him, as a further Evidence of his oneness with the Father: having begun his Work in the Creation, he carries it on in his providential Sustentation thereof, He is before all things, and by him all things consist. Col. 1. 17. He is the Foundation that underprops the whole Fabric of Heaven and Earth, which would soon sink down into its first nothing, if everlasting Arms were withdrawn from beneath it, he that first gives Being to his Creatures, must continue it; Conservation is but a Continuation of the first act of Creation, to preserve the World from Destruction, to continue the Creatures in their peculiar Nature and Properties, and to govern those Diversities in an united Subserviency to his Will and Glory; and the Well-being of the whole, is a work of infinite Power, and needs the same Strength, that first produced them. And this is the work (Christians) of your Messiah, that person who is God-Man; who by his divine power and efficacious Providence, animates, actuates, cherishes, quickens, and sweetly disposes of all Creatures, Actions and Affairs in the World. He is the great Monarch of Heaven and Earth, that changes Times and Seasons, whose hands are under his Wings, and hath a wheel within the Wheels, that turns about things as pleaseth him; brings Light out of Darkness, Order out of Confusion, Good out of Evil: who hath the Government on his Shoulders, and absolute Power in his hand, to dispose of all persons and things, as may most further the Pleasure of his own Will, the Advance of his Glory, and the Good of them that fear him.

And is not this Security enough to those, who have entrusted themselves and all their Concerns, with this glorious Potentate, and King of Kings, who hath the Management of all things in Heaven and Earth, that it shall be well at last with the righteous? the momentous Affairs of the world, and of Zion, shall issue in the best Good of those that love his Name. How should this calm the tumultuous Fears of the godly into a sweet Serenity of Spirit, and still their tempestuous Thoughts in a quiet Relyance on the Arm, Care, and Faithfulness of their Lord, who knows how to govern the World, and can, and will bring about his Work to gracious ends by all seeming Contrarieties, and interfering Providences in the World. Why art thou afraid, saith Caesar, to the Master of the Ship, that began to be disturbed in his Spirits, by reason of the Storm and the Darkness of the Night? Thou carryest Caesar. How much more should Believers be sedate and quiet in their Minds, who have embarked Christ. Caesar had only some Command at Land, none over the Sea; he governed the Bodies of a few men, but Christ rules at Land and Sea; he sits upon the Floods, and at the Helm of this great Vessel of the World; how should this lift the Saints Heads above all their Waters?

Thirdly, Christ's working Miracles by his own Power, proves his Omnipotency, that nothing is too hard for him; a Miracle is somewhat done, which is above and besides the Power and Course of Nature; not only as the thing done, but as the manner of doing, when the Cause is secret, and unknown to us, and the thing utterly beyond all natural Causes, that's a Miracle which none but God can do, either mediately by secondary Agents, or immediately of himself. Miracles are only done by a divine hand, because none but God can change the Order of Nature: and this Christ did, not by another's, but by his own power: The Humane Nature in Christ was but the Instrument of the divine Action, and the human Action received it's Virtue from the divine Nature, saith Aquinas. It was by his own Power, that Christ did such mighty works as no man ever did. 'Tis said, Virtue went out of him, and healed all their Diseases who touched him. Luke 6. 19. It was by his word he cast out Devils, and healed them that were sick. Mat. 8. 6. The Wind, and the Seas obeyed him. ver. 27. With Authority he commanded the unclean Spirits and they obeyed him. Mark. 1. 27. He opened the Eyes of them that were born blind, made the dumb to speak, the dead to walk; by which mighty Works, he proves himself to be one with the Father: What he seeth the Father do, these also doth the Son likewise; for as the Father raiseth up the dead and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom he will. Jo. 6. 19. 24.

Neither did he show such Wonders himself only, but by his Power he enables his Servants also, to do such mighty Works, as were above the Power of lapsed Nature to do. Mark. 16. 17. 18. And these Signs shall follow them that believe in my Name (i. e. by my Power and Authority from me) shall they cast out Devils, they shall speak with new Tongues, they shall take up Serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them, they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover. And surely, if the exerted Power of Christ by weak Instruments, could do such mighty things, above the Capacity of natural Agents, then the essential Power of Christ can do much more than what he hath done.

Fourthly, That must needs be an Almighty Power in Christ, that can bestow on the Saints, all things that they shall ask of the Father in his name: but such is the Power of Christ, Joh. 14. 13. Whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my Name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. He doth not say, my Father shall do it, or that will I procure for you by my Mediation and Interest in the Father; though that be true also: but that will I do by my own Power, as God equal with the Father. (I will do it) this he repeats again in the next ver. If ye shall ask anything in my Name, I will do it, being willing to fix this glorious Truth in their Minds, that as he was resolved to fulfill all their just Desires, made in his name, so he was able to do it, the Father and he being one. And this must needs be an Almighty power, to hear and answer all the Requests of all the Saints on Earth, at once: what multitudes are there of Believers in every Age, more than can be numbered, who are always compassing the Throne, and sending up a Cloud of Incense, to the Mercy Seat daily; putting up Variety of Requests to the Father, through Christ, and that not for mean things neither? They beg for the holy Spirit, for the Sheddings abroad of his Love, and Shinings out of his Glory; for treading down of Satan, for subduing of Corruption, for Conquest over his Enemies, Enlargement of his Kingdom; for an Almightyness to do, and invincible Patience to suffer the whole Will of God, for the Forgiveness of great Sins, and Multitudes of Sins, for Perseverance in Grace, and for an eternal Crown of Glory; these are many things and great things, things that none but a God can give, and yet no more than what Christ is engaged to bestow on all that sincerely seek him; and therefore must needs be God Almighty, and worthy of Sinners Choice, and of the Saints Trust.

Fifthly, This also sets forth the Omnipotency of Christ, that he is able not only to do all things for, but in his People, working all their Works in them; the Apostle tells us, 2 Cor. 3. 5. We are not sufficient of ourselves, to think a Thought that is good; Neither know we what to pray for as we ought. Rom. 8. 26. In them dwells no good thing, as they are in themselves; Neither can they do anything without him: their Eyes are unto him for all their Help, their Springs are in him: in the Lord shall one say have I Righteousness and Strength; they are dead as to any self-sufficiency for the least thing that is good; but he is their Life, the Soul that animates all their Faculties, the hand that leads them, the Wisdom that directs them, the Power that actuates them in every good thing. Their Works must be wrought in God or can never be good; 'tis he that works in them, to will, and to do, of his good Pleasure, he teacheth them to profit, he held Israel by the hand teaching him to go: he carries his Lambs in his Arms, and gently drives them that are with young; drawing those that are indisposed, quickening them that are dead: he is the Fountain that fills all their Pits, the Head that gives out animal Influences to every Member, for every Duty: and must not he then be an all-sufficient God, and have an infinite Treasury to give to all richly to enjoy, and an Almighty Arm to do all the work of Saints on Earth? O admire Believers, and rely on this Jesus.

Sixthly, raising the dead is an act of Omnipotency, a peculiar Property of the divine Nature, which hath been, is, and shall be the Work of Christ; I am the Resurrection and the Life. Jo. 11.

25. i. e. He for whose sake and by whose Power the dead shall be raised at the last day. Martha suspects Christ's Ability to revive her dead Brother, she believed indeed, he should rise at the last day, and not before; why saith Christ, they that shall then rise from the dead, shall rise by my Power; and if I will raise up the dead then, I can as easily do it now. The hour is coming in which all that are in their Graves, shall hear his Voice, and shall come forth, they that have done Good, unto the Resurrection of Life, and they that have done evil, unto the Resurrection of Damnation. Joh. 5. 28. 29. And I will raise him up at the last day. Joh. 6. 54. That there shall be a general Resurrection of the dead, at the last day; when every Body (though now consumed) shall be raised up and reunited to the Soul, and be brought to the final Judgment, is not questioned by those that believe, and know the Scriptures. The Author of this Resurrection is God, as God, but the second Person, the Lord Jesus, is delegated to accomplish this Work, which he shall do by his own Voice, (saith Christ himself) by a Shout, by the Voice of the Arch-Angel, and with the Trump of God, saith the Apostle, 1 Thes. 4. 16. with a great Sound of a Trumpet, saith the Evangelist, Mat. 24. 31. That is, the Lord Jesus shall, at that last day, by his mighty Voice, pronounced by the Arch-Angel, cause all the dead, both small and great, to arise in their same Bodies, though changed into an immortal State, and suitable Capacity, to that Condition, to which they are intended, to receive their Soul, and to come to Judgment. And is not this a mighty Work, to quicken the dead, a work peculiarly ascribed to God. 2. Cor. 1. 9. For we had the Sentence of Death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the Dead: 'Tis the work of God, and of none but God, to raise the dead: 'Tis a work full of Wonder and Amazement, beyond all Principles of created reason, to conceive how those Bodies dissolved to dust, mingled with other Bodies in the Grave, digested into other Natures, by Beasts, Fishes, Fowls, that have devoured them, should yet return and be separated from other Dust and Natures, into the same Individuals, is such a Miracle as is only fit matter for Faith, not Sense, and a firm Foundation for the Believers Hope and Comfort.

It may be thou seest nothing but Deaths on thy Graces, Frames and Capacities; thou findest Decays in thy Soul, the Spirit of Life seems to be departed from thee, thou canst not pray, hear, converse, with that sweetness and delight as heretofore; Comfort thyself Believer; He that is the Life, is the Resurrection also: He that quickened thy Heart, when Dead, will revive it, when decay'd: 'Tis as easy with him to restore thy Spiritual Frames, as to bestow them: He that can raise the whole World from their Bodily, total Death; can easily, and will, in due time, cure thy Soul-dyings also.

Again, This will cheer drooping Zion, who faints at her Desolations, and fears what will become of the destruction on her Interests: 'Tis lamentable to observing Souls, to see how Religion goes down daily: Holiness is departed from the Earth: The Rod of the wicked lies on the back of the Righteous: the wicked are exalted, and the Righteous oppressed: The House of David waxes weaker and weaker, and the House of Saul waxes stronger: This is a sad Spectacle; yet in this case Relief is to be fetched from an Omnipotent Jesus: who hath said, His dead men shall live: who can open his Peoples graves, and revive his decay'd Interest, and cause a Nation to bring forth in a day: and Overturn, Overturn, Overturn, till his Kingdom be established in the Earth.

CHAP. III.

The Humane Nature of Christ, distinctly considered; it's Reality proved: His Personality, or the Divine and Humane Nature in one Person; showing what kind of Union it is, and the glorious Consequents and Advantages thereof.

WE have a little inquired into the Divine Nature of Christ: the Beams of whose Glory, but darkly seen, yield a wonderful splendor, and reviving to a believing Eye. In the next place, let us consider his Humanity: The Nature of Man, which the second Person, assumes into a Personal Union with himself: He is perfect Man as well as God: The Woman's Seed; Made of a Woman, made under the Law, Gal. 4. 4. Made of the Seed of David according to the Flesh, Rom. 1. 3. For he took not on him the Nature of Angels, but the Seed of Abraham, Heb. 2. 16. The Children being partakers of flesh and blood, he likewise took part of the same, ver. 14. And was in all things made like to his Brethren, ver. 17. Called the Son of Man: the Man Christ Jesus: having the Substante of the Humane Nature; though not the Personal Subsistence thereof: He did not take the Person of Man into Union with himself: for then he would have had two Persons: and so have been no true Mediator: The Mediator being one: 1 Tim. 2. 5. For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and Man, the Man Christ Jesus: But if the Lord Jesus had taken the Person of Man, then he would have consisted of two Persons: the Divine Subsistence and the Humane; and so there would have been two Mediators, or Persons mediating, which is contrary to Scripture.

Neither did he take on him the vicious Qualities or Accidents of the Humane Nature: being holy, harmless, separate from Sinners: the Holy Spirit overshadowing the Virgin Mary, and purging the Humane Nature of all its sinful dregs: forming it of the Substance of the Virgin: not of his own Essence: whence the Holy thing begotten by the Spirit was not God, but Man; called the HolyChild Jesus: purely conceived in the Womb of a Sinner, without the least participation of her Sin, or vicious Defects of her Nature, receiving only the perfect Substance of Man.

- Having the Essential parts of the
 - Body.
 - Soul.
- Humane Nature,

A true and real Body, and not a Phantasm, and Airy Vehicle, as the Marcionites and Heretics of old held: He had Flesh and Bones, which a Spirit hath not, Luke 24. 39. Handle me and see me, for a Spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have: This was after his Resurrection, when the Disciples doubted that it was an Apparition and not him, and even then Christ had a real Body, palpable and visible, the object of External Senses.

A Natural, and not an Heavenly Body, as the Manichees affirmed from 1 Cor. 15. 47. The first man is of the Earth, Earthy; the second man is the Lord from Heaven. But to this I answer with Zanchi, The Apostle doth not speak here of the Essential Body of Christ; but of his Heavenly Spiritual Power, which he lets out in raising the Dead; as in the former verse. The first man Adam was made a living Soul, the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit: He speaks not here of the Nature, but of the person of the second Adam, as Mediator; the Difference between whom was great: the first Adam but a Creature, this a Creator or Quickenning Spirit: the first Adam had his Rise from the Earth, this second Adam, as to his person, from Heaven: whence (saith Pareus) 'tis evident, the Apostle doth not speak here of the matter of Christ's Body, but of the Original and Dignity of his Person: for he grants in this whole Discourse, that Christ's Body is one and the same with ours; else how can his Resurrection be a proof of ours: and 'tis said, As by man came death, so by man came also the Resurrection of the Dead: 1 Cor. 15. 20, 21, 22. And if Christ had not a real, natural Body, then he could not be the Seed of the Woman; neither had his Death been a real Death, or a satisfactory Propitiation; if the same Nature that sinned had not also suffered: And therefore it must needs be that Christ had a Natural Body: He Eat, Drank, Spake, Walked, was weary, smitten, bound, crucified: which are also demonstrations of a Natural Body.

And as he had a perfect Body, so had he a Soul also; contrary to the Doctrine of Apollinaris; or else he could not be a perfect Man, and in all things made like unto his Brethren: for 'tis said, when God made Man, He breathed into his Nostrils the Breath of Life, and man became a living Soul, Gen. 2. 7. Hence, saith Lactantius, A Soul-less Body is no Humane Body: 'Tis said, His Soul was exceeding sorrowful, even unto Death, Mat. 26. 38. Had not Christ a real Soul, he had not been a living man, nor could be said to have died, when he cried out, Father, into thy hands I commit my Spirit, Luke 23. 46. And having said so, he gave up the Ghost. This Spirit the Lord Jesus gave up into his Father's hands, was not his Divine Nature, for that was one with, and ever with the Father: and therefore must needs be his Soul; which was his Life; and that departing, he is said to die, and give up the Ghost.

Besides, That Knowledge in which he is said to increase, with those Humane Affections that manifestly appeared in him, and those Acts of his Natural Will, plainly proves his Soul: these being the Essential Faculties of a Rational Spirit. Neither could he have perfectly transacted the Office of a Mediator, and undergone all the Sufferings that were to be borne for the Sin of Man, had he not consisted of a Humane Soul, as well as Body; part of these Penalties, yea the greatest part being Spiritual, and such as none but the Soul could be fully sensible of: And in point of Justice, the Soul of man having sinned, there must be a Soul also in the Redeemer to undergo Sufferings; wherefore he must needs be perfect man in the Essential Parts of the Humane Nature,

- Body.
- Soul.

He had also the Properties of the Humane Nature, both Essential and Accidental: The Essential Properties of man, as well of the Soul, as Body, were in him: The Essential Properties, and Faculties of the Soul, which are the Understanding, Will, Affections, were seated in his Nature; he had a created Understanding, that eminently shined out in his youthful years, being able, at Twelve years old, to dispute with the Learned Doctors, of his Day, even to the astonishment of his Hearers. Luke 2. 46, 47. And they found him in the Temple, sitting in the midst of the Doctors, both hearing them, and asking them Questions; and all that heard him were astonished at his Understanding and Answers. And ver. 52. Jesus increased in Wisdom and Stature.

He had likewise Natural Affections, so as without sin: He loved the young man in the Gospel, for those Excellencies that were in him, Mark 10. 21. And had a peculiar degree of Affection to John above the rest of the Disciples, Joh. 19. 26. He had compassion on the multitude, Mat. 9. 36. And was grieved for the Heart hardness of his Disciples, Mark 3. 5. And had indignation against Peter's tempting him to decline his Redemption-work. Mark. 8. 33.

He had also the Essential Properties of a Humane Body, such as do flow from the Essence thereof, and are so absolutely necessary to it, as that without these the Body would cease to be a Body: as Quantity, Figure, Members, Dimensions: He had a Material Body, consisting of Flesh and Bone, with its Lineaments and Members; Face, Hands, Feet; he had a Stature, in which he grew, as other men do, Luke 2. 52. A Body circumscribed in a place, that must needs have a Circumference, and be in one place at once circumscriptively, not definitively, as Spirits are: Neither does its Union with the Divine Nature, or its glorified state in Heaven, alter this Essential Property of a Body: Nor is the Omnipotency of God a sufficient Argument to warrant the Body of Christ to be in Heaven, and Earth, and in divers places at once; seeing God's Absolute Power never crosseth his Actual Power, or infer a contrariety to his Truth, and to the natural Being of things. Neither did he assume the Parts and Essential Properties of Man only, but the Infirmities also, and accidental Properties of the Humane Nature: though not those which were Personal and Vicious, and procured by Personal Sins, or defection in their particular Natures, as Diseases, Blindness, Lameness, Deformity, which were not the absolute and universal Products of Original Sin, incident to everyone, but arising from some particular Causes, and peculiar to some Persons only; these our Lord Jesus did not take upon him, but such Infirmities as were accidental to the whole Nature, for that he himself also is compassed with Infirmities, Heb. 5. 2. not sinful; as culpable Ignorance and Error, but Natural Infirmities, such as were incident to our Natures, (Sin excepted) and such as were the Effects and Punishment of Sin: these Christ took on him, as inculpable Ignorance, Humane Passions of Sorrow, Fear, Anger in the Soul, Hunger, Thirst, Weariness, Pain, bloody Sweat, and Death in the Body. Mark 13. 32. Mark 11. 13. Math. 26. 38. Math. 9. 36. Mat. 16. 23. Joh. 19. 28. Joh. 4. 6. Heb. 5. 8. Luke 22. 44. Mat. 27. 50.

And O what enriching Privileges, and full Consolation, do flow to Believers, from the Words assuming the Humane Nature into Personality with himself! And what glorious Excellencies are in Jesus Christ, as he is God-Man, in one Person! infinite Treasures, which can never be traced out, nor fully understood by the Children of men, as will appear, if we consider the kind of this Union, and the Consequents of it.

First, Consider the kind of this Union, between the Divine and Humane Nature of Christ; and O what a glorious Mystery is it!

First, It is a real Union: 'tis not Nominal, in Name only, or Metaphorical, in Shew or Similitude; but in Reality and Truth. The Divine and Humane Nature do constitute one Person, which is Jesus Christ. We have already proved that Jesus Christ is perfect God, and perfect Man: he is really so in one person, Joh. 1. 14. The Word was made Flesh, and dwelt amongst us, and we beheld his Glory. The Word, that is, the divine Nature, the God-head of Christ, was made Flesh; that is, united to the human Nature, and this in a visible way: and dwelt amongst us, it was not a Fiction, but really Christ, God-man, dwelt amongst us, and we beheld his Glory, it was obvious to our view, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Great is the Mystery of Godliness, God was manifest in the Flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of Angels. If this be not real, what can be so? He was manifest in the Flesh, How? By way of real Union, Justified in the Spirit, by the divine Nature; here's Flesh, and here's the divine Nature, in one person, Jesus Christ, God-Man, seen of Angels, Rom. 1. 3. 4. Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the Flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with Power, according to the Spirit of Holiness, by the Resurrection from the Dead: Here's a Person consisting of both these Natures, real man, born of the Seed of David, then real God; thus the Divine Nature was manifested to be in Christ, by the Resurrection of the dead, Rom. 9. 5. And of whom as concerning the Flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed forever. Here both Natures are attributed to one Person; Jesus Christ, as concerning the Flesh, descended from Abraham, he came from David, that is, he received the human Nature from the Virgin Mary, and he is God over all, blessed forever. The God-head is said to dwell in him bodily, Col. 2. 9.

Secondly, It is a very near Union, the nearest Union that possibly can be. As the Soul and the Body make up one man, so the divine and human Nature of Christ, make up one Person. It is set forth by way of Inhabitation, Col. 2. 9. In him dwells all the Fullness of the God-head bodily. God manifest in the Flesh, and justified in the Spirit makes up one entire Person. As the Matter and the Form makes up one Being, so this divine and human Nature makes up one person.

Thirdly, It is a mystical and unconceivable Union. There's a relative Union between Man and Wife, making one Flesh; a real Union between the Head and Members, constituting one Body; but this cannot reach this Union; it is unconceivable, above all Conception, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Great is the Mystery of Godliness, God manifest in the Flesh. We may admire it, and adore it, but we cannot fathom the depth of this Union between the divine and human Nature of Christ.

Fourthly, It is a pure and unmixed Union as to each Nature. In regard of Essence the divine Nature cannot be converted into the human, nor the human into the divine, but each Nature remains distinct, and it's Properties are distinct, Rom. 1. 3. 4. So that there are in Jesus Christ, two Natures, two Wills, a divine Will, and a human Will: he hath the Will and Affections of a man, though fully sanctified and glorified: he wills whatever the God-head wills, but still, as to his human Nature, it is with a human Will; so that something of the workings of Christ, are by the divine Power, and something by the human Nature. This Union consists in the Communication of the divine Nature with the human, the God-head, and the human Nature agree; so that the divine Nature of Christ communicates all its fullness as far as may further Redemption-ends; for the Sanctification and Salvation of the whole body of Christ, and for the fulfilling of all Redemption-Work, 1 Pet. 3. 18. This is a glorious Union, but it is worthy to be known. Ah how little of Christ is known as to these two Natures! how little a portion do we know of him!

Fifthly, It is an inseparable Union, it can never be parted more. Therein lies the Happiness of Believers, that Jesus Christ is God-man, to all Eternity, never can there be an end of this Relation; Jesus Christ God-Man, is the same Yesterday, today, and forever, Heb. 13. 8. He was the same while in his obediencial Work, on Earth; he is the same in Glory, and will be the same to all Eternity. This Union of Christ's two Natures must be eternal, or else he cannot be said ever to live to make Intercession; But he ever lives to make Intercession, Heb. 7. 25. That which made Christ's Redemption infinite, was that he was God as well as Man: Christ the Interceder, God-Man, is now in Heaven, and this must be forever. O what a glorious Truth is this, that there can be no Cessation of this Union! could this Union be separated as Nestorius holds, then Redemption-work would cease: He is over all, God-Man, blessed for evermore, Rom. 9. 5. If the Saints Union with Christ be inseparable, and their Interest in the Love of Christ inseparable, then Christ is unalterable; but because the Saints must have an eternal Union with him, and he is an eternal Jesus, he must be eternally God-Man, Romans 8. 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39. Joh. 17. 21. 23. 24.

Secondly, What are the Effects and Consequents, that flow from, and issue out of this Union between the divine and human Nature •• Christ?

First, from this Union of these two Natures in Christ, there follows a Communication of Properties; so that which is said to be done by each Nature, is applied to the whole Person of Christ; O this is a very glorious Mystery. as this, Christ's Sufferings in the human Nature, is applied to the whole Person of Christ; therefore the Blood of Christ, which was but the Blood of the human Nature, is called the Blood of God, Acts 20. 28. Feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own Blood; being of infinite Value and Worth. So the Sufferings of the human Nature are ascribed sometimes to the divine Nature, and to the whole person of Christ; so, 1 Tim. 3. 16. God manifest in the Flesh, and justified in the Spirit; yet both these applied to the person of Christ: whatever the divine nature can do is applied to the Person of Christ, by a Communication of Properties, ••owing from this Union.

Secondly, From this Union, flows this Consequence, That there is Fullness of Grace placed in Jesus Christ to be given out to all his Seed. The God-head fills the human Nature of Christ, Jo. 3. 34, God hath not given the Spirit by measure to him. When we read of Christ's receiving anything, understand it of his human Nature; for the divine Nature cannot be capable of receiving anything; it is as full of Grace as ever it can hold: And, as the Breast is full of Milk for the Poor Babe, so is Jesus Christ full of Grace in his Humane Nature, to distribute to his Children: His pity moves him to give out this, and the other Grace to his People, and it is in him to bestow it. He wills the best good to all his People, and what he wills, he is able to perform; hence 'tis said, Joh. 1. 16. Of his Fulness we have all received, and Grace for Grace. Of that Fulness which the Divine Nature is always issuing out to the Humane Nature of Christ, do Believers receive Grace for Grace; Grace suitable to Grace in Christ; so that the Humane Nature of Christ must needs be always full of Grace, by reason of its Union with the Divine:

As the Sun that gives out Light is always full of Light, and the Sea that sends forth Waters to the Rivers, is never vacant. This is a glorious Mystery, of wonderful Encouragement to Believers, to consider what a full Jesus they are related to.

Thirdly, By virtue of this Union, the Lord Jesus Christ hath right to all Glory, and Adoration of Men and Angels, as Mediator. He is the most Illustrious Person; all Honor, Blessing, Praise, Glory, Adoration is due to him. Heb. 1. 6. When he bringeth in the first-begotten into the world, he saith, And let all the Angels of God worship him. Surely he must be a glorious Person, when all the Angels must bow at his Feet; Seraphims, Cherubims, and all the Host of Heaven, stoop and give Homage to him, this the Lord Jesus Christ hath a proper Right to, as he is God-Man: Phil. 2. 9. Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a Name above every name; Every Tongue shall confess at last, that he is Lord, ver. 11. Rev. 1. 17. And when I saw him, I fell at his Feet as dead. O the very Vision of Christ is enough to strike a poor Creature to the Earth, Rev. 4. 9, 10, 11. The four and twenty Elders fell down and worshipped this glorious Person that sate upon the Throne, which is Jesus Christ, Joh. 5. 23. That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father: So that God the Son, the Second Person, the Mediator of his People, deserves all that Divine and Religious Worship which is due to God, as God: Thrones and Principalities are made by him, and put under him. Col. 1. 16. 17.

Fourthly, By virtue of this Union, the Lord Jesus Christ hath absolute Authority, Kingship, and Headship in his Church, and over all things to the Church, Matt. 28. 18. All Power is given to me in Heaven and Earth. O what vast Power is this! All Power on Earth, to do what he will there; All Power in Heaven, to do what he will there, Eph. 1. 22. And hath put all things under his Feet, and gave him to be the Head over all things to the Church. Jesus Christ, as God-Man, is invested with all Power and Authority, to transact the Work of a Mediator, to perform the Offices of Prophet, Priest, and King: The Godhead of Christ, working, as God, and the Manhood of Christ, working, as Man, yet both these Natures concur towards the management of Redemption-work.

As a Prophet, he is able to reveal the Will of God, for he knoweth the mind of the Spirit, being God, he is infinite in Wisdom, Job. 36. 4. Rom. 11. 33. All Knowledge comes from him, as Mediator: In him are hid the Treasures of Wisdom, Col. 2. 3. He maketh Wise to Salvation; He giveth Wisdom, Prov. 2. 6. He openeth the Eyes of the blind, and giveth Light to them that sit in Darkness, and in the Region and shadow of Death, Matth. 4. 16. Luke 2. 32. Ministers can but preach to the Ear, but Christ can preach to the Heart: Ministers can but open the Scriptures, Christ can open the Heart: He is a full and effectual Head to his Body, the Church, to guide, influence and adorn it, Col. 1. 18.

As a Priest: And so there's an infinite Sufficiency in his Satisfaction and Intercession, seeing he is God-Man; In his Satisfaction enough to silence all Pleas against his People; He can arrest all the Sentences and Executions of the Law against them. As an High-priest; he is a sufficient Sacrifice for the Sins of the People: He was made Sin for us, that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him, 2 Cor. 5. 21. By the Obedience of Christ all Believers are made Righteous, Rom. 5. 19. The Obedience of the Saints is represented complete in Christ, though imperfect in themselves. Hence Believers that are wounded with the shortness of their Services in themselves, may lift up their Heads, when they look upon the perfect Righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ. Hence, 1 Joh. 2. 1, 2. If any man Sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous: And he is the propitiation for our Sins. Though the Saints do sin, Christ becomes a Sacrifice for them. This one Offering of Christ ever appears before God; when new Provocations appear in his People: By one Offering he perfected forever them that are sanctified, Heb. 10. 14. By virtue of this Union, his Blood becomes infinite Blood, equally as large as the Offence: Nay, it is more able to save, than the Sins of Believers to damn: It is the Blood of Christ that cleanseth from all Sin, 1 Joh. 1. 7. Therefore his Obedience is a perfect Obedience, and his Sufferings perfect Sufferings: of more satisfaction to Divine Justice, than if all the Sinners in the World had lain in Hell to all Eternity. This Blood is so wonderfully precious, that it is accounted by the Father as the Blood of God, Acts 20. 28. If Infinite can satisfy Infinite, then the Father is satisfied by the Blood of Christ; because whatever the Justice of God can expect, the Obedience of Christ can fully satisfy. This Righteousness to Justification, the perfect Obedience and Sufferings of Christ, receives no Addition or Diminution by the Obedience, or Disobedience of his People, Eph. 1. 6. He hath made us accepted in the Beloved. Ah! little do Souls know the Bottom they stand upon: It is not (poor Believer) the shortness of thy Obedience, the multitude and greatness of thy Sins, can outmatch this matchless Righteousness of Christ. All the Injuries and Wrongs thou hast done is but the Injury of a Creature, but the Satisfaction of Jesus Christ is the Satisfaction of God; it is the Satisfaction of God the Son, presented to God the Father: O what a blessed state are Believers in, where there is such a price paid for their Sins.

Again, By virtue of this Union, There's Sufficiency in the Intercession of Jesus Christ: He must needs be able to save to the uttermost all that come to God by him, seeing he ever lives to make Intercession, Heb. 7. 24, 25. How much more shall the Blood of Christ, who, through the Eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot to God, purge your Consciences from dead works, Heb. 9. 14. The Blood of Christ meritoriously purges the Soul from all filthiness, being offered through the Eternal Spirit. God will not deny himself: whatever God the Son intercedes for, God the Father will grant; so that Christ's Intercession must needs be effectual. O what potency hath Christ in Heaven! what Prevalency in all his Addresses to the Father! Eph. 5. 25, 26, 27. Christ gave himself for his Church; that he might sanctify and cleanse it; and that he might present it to himself a glorious Church, without spot or wrinkle. Here's a double Effect of Christ's Mediatorship: One is, By virtue of this Blood, the Spirit comes, and cleanses away the Corruption, and subdues the Iniquities of his People: this is that cleansing by Sanctification: Then there's a presenting the Saints to the Father, complete in him, without spot or wrinkle: thus the virtue of Christ's Intercession, and Righteousness applied by him to the Believer. doth prove such a covering for all Believers, that it hides every spot from God's Judicial Eye, that the Lord is said to behold no Iniquity in them, i. e. so as to be angry with them; they are presented lovely, and comely in Christ, though black and deformed in themselves.

As a King: And so he hath Authority to erect a Kingdom of Grace in the World, to make Laws for the well-being of his Church, and to require Obedience of all Persons. Hence the Magistrates of the World are called upon to stoop to Christ. Psal. 2. 12. Kiss the Son lest he be angry. All Authority in the World is placed under Jesus Christ, in order to the carrying on his Mediatorly Kingdom: Hence 'tis said, Prov. 8. 15. By me Kings Reign, and Princes decree Justice: they have their Power and Authority, by the Government, and disposing of Jesus Christ, who is said to be King of Kings, and Lord of Lord's, Rev. 19. 16. He hath absolute Power over every Creature; Every Knee must bow, and every Tongue confess to him; all must subject to him, Psal. 22. 28. For the Kingdom is the Lord's, and he is the Governor among the Nations: He shall have Dominion also from Sea to Sea, and from the River unto the ends of the Earth: They that dwell in the Wilderness shall bow before him, and his Enemies shall lick the dust, Psal. 72. 8, 9.

As a King, he is invested with Right and Power, to give out the Spirit of Grace for the effectual fulfilling of, and completing Obedience to all his Laws, by his Church and People. Obedience to the Laws of Christ cannot be yielded but by the Spirit; the best of his People are no further subject to him, than they are Spiritual; for the Carnal mind is Enmity against God: Hence he saith, When I go away, I will send the Comforter, John 16. 7. It is an Expression that notes Authority: When I go away, when I mount my Throne, I will send the Spirit; and he shall promote Obedience: He shall lead his People into all Truth, ver. 13. 14. Whenever he intends the flourishing of his Kingdom in the World, he hath residues of the Spirit to give out; the more Holiness there is in Saints and Churches, the more there are of the pourings out of the Spirit: I will pour out my Spirit upon thy Seed, and they shall spring up as among the grass, as Willows by the Water-courses, Isa. 44. 3, 4. So Joel 2. 28, 29. I will pour out my Spirit upon all Flesh, &c. In those days, that is, in the time of the Gospel, and especially when the Jews are called.

Again, as King, the Lord Jesus Christ hath sufficient Power to protect and rule his People, to govern and subdue his Enemies. He is altogether complete to enact his own Purposes, and to fulfill his own Will; for as God, nothing is too hard for him; He takes up the Isles as a very little thing, Isa. 40. 15. It is an easy thing with him to blow off the Nations, and subdue all the Powers that oppose him: He that sitteth in the Heavens shall laugh, the Lord shall have them in Derision, Psal. 2. 4. He makes nothing of all the Powers of his Enemies; it is but to look through the Clouds, and trouble their Hosts, Exod. 14. 24. One Angel can suddenly destroy thousands of them: he hath absolute Power over all Creatures to bring down all his Enemies, where and when he will; and he must reign till he hath brought them all down, Heb. 2. 8. Thou shalt break them with a Rod of Iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a Potters Vessel, Psal. 2. 9. The Saints are ready to tremble when they consider the Potency of their Enemies; but it is far easier for Christ to dash all the Powers of the World in pieces, than for a man to break an earthen Pitcher: He will order and establish his Kingdom with Judgment and Justice, Isa. 9. 7. It is not for want of Ability in Christ to order and perfect the Obedience of his Church and People, that there are such Disorders found amongst them; only he is pleased to leave Irregularities for a while, that he may come at last with his Fan, and purge them: So neither men nor Devils can pluck his Sheep out of his hand, Jo. 10. 28. Enemies may touch them; Temptations may wound and buffet them, and sometimes Captivate his People; but they cannot remove them out of his hand; he will still support and preserve, all that the Father hath given him.

Fifthly, In this personal Union of the Lord Jesus Christ, lies his Mediatorship: In these two Natures he takes upon him, and undergoes the Office of Mediator. And this is so great a deep, that time is too short to give a full Display of the Glory of Christ's Mediatorship. Heb. 8. 6. But now he hath obtained a more excellent Ministry by how much also he is the Mediator of a better Covenant.

But now &c. That is by virtue of this Union of both Natures in the Person of Christ, he is become a Mediator of a better Covenant; this we may see, if we look back in verse. 1. The Apostle speaks of Christ's divine Nature, who is set on the right hand of the Throne of the Majesty in Heaven; and verse. 2. his human Nature is shewn, called the Minister of the Sanctuary, and verse. 3. ordained to offer Gifts: and having spoken of Christ in both his Natures, he tells us that he is now become a Mediator, betwixt God and Man; a middle Person, a days-Man, he hath a Mediety or Middleness of Nature, as God-Man, and is a Mediator in regard of his Office, in which Office, the Lord Jesus stands in a double Relation, first, to God, secondly, to Man; having both Natures, he is interested in both parties, the Son of God, and the Son of Man, one with God, Joh. 10. 30. I and my Father are one: of one Nature, one Will, one Delight, having one Design and one Glory. As man he is of the same Nature, Flesh and Blood with fallen man, Heb. 2. 11. 14. 17. He hath the same Temptations, the same Weaknesses and Infirmities with them (Sin excepted) that he might have a fellow feeling of the Infirmities of his people, and put on Bowels of Compassions, that he might be capable of fulfilling all Righteousness, suffering for them, and holding Communion with them, Heb. 5. 1. 2.

This Term Mediator, is taken sometimes in a more large sense, sometimes in a more strict sense.

First, This Term, as it is taken in a large Sense, so the Lord Jesus Christ is a Mediator, as he is the Head, the middle between God and his Creatures, so he is the Mediator of Angels as well as men: It is by him the Angels were made, and in him the Elect Angels are chosen, and by him they are preserved: for Angels cannot be thought to come to such a State of Felicity, and such near Union with God, but upon the account of a second person, Col. 1. 20. in the sixteenth verse, Christ is said to be the Creator of Angels, and in this 20. ver. there's his Mediatorship for Angels: By him to reconcile all things to himself, whether they be things in Earth or things in Heaven. This is a place of very great Difficulty, and hath puzzled many Interpreters: some conceive it is to reconcile man and Angels together, supposing the Angels were enemies to fallen man, but by Jesus Christ, brought into a State of Amity: but it cannot be so understood here; for the Parties reconciled, are not said to be men and Angels, but God, and these things: how then is this understood? Some therefore conceive, that this Reconciliation is to be understood by way of Proportion and Similitude, not as if the Angels needed Pardon, for they never sinned; but they stand in need of a Mediator, that they may not sin; for as Creatures, they are mutable, and as subject, in their Nature to sin, as the Devils were; and it is by Jesus Christ they are preserved, and kept in the Favor of God. It is said, all things in Heaven: The Heavens themselves are, or shall be brought into a capacity of meetness, for the presence of God, Saints and Angels, by Jesus Christ, as Mediator: The Angels are called Elect Angels, 1 Tim. 5. 21. And how? but as they are chosen in Christ; for all Election is founded in the Lord Jesus Christ, as a middle Person, as the Head of Election, Eph.

1. 4. According as he hath chosen us in him; all those Creatures that shall be made, or kept holy, are placed in the Lord Jesus Christ. Likewise the Angels are called the Sons of God, Job 38. 7. When the Morning Stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for Joy: Now all Adoption is in the Lord Jesus Christ: If they are reputed as the Sons of God, this Relation must needs be in Christ, who is the only begotten Son of God: therefore all the Angels must needs have dependence upon Christ, as Mediator, Eph. 1. 10. That in the dispensation of the fullness of time, he might gather together in one, all things in Christ, both which are in Heaven, and which are on Earth, even in him. Some conceive it is meant of those Saints that were in Heaven, before Christ came to suffer; but that cannot be, it being put in the Neuter Gender, All things in Heaven: so that the Lord Jesus Christ is the Mediator of Angels, in that he procures for them Preservation with God: and were it not for a Mediator, they would never be secured from Falling.

Secondly, More strictly. Christ is called Mediator in respect to God, and fallen Man, coming betwixt them, as a middle Person, to make up the Breach, effect a Peace, and reconcile them together, Heb. 9. 15. He is the Mediator of the New Testament, Heb. 12. 24. And to Jesus the Mediator of the new Covenant, John 14. 6. He is the Way, the Truth, and the Life: It is through his Name alone Salvation is to be had, Acts 4. 12. He is appointed of God the Father to this end, Joh. 3. 16. Rom. 3. 25. Whom God hath set forth to be a Propitiation for our Sins: to be one that may reconcile God to Man, and render him propitious and favorable to him, Acts 2. 23. 1 Pet. 1. 20. Heb. 5. 4. Joh. 6. 24. For him hath God the Father sealed: He was anointed and furnished with all Abilities for this end, Isa. 61. 1, 2. And he is the only Mediator, 1 Tim. 2. 5, 6. The only Surety, Heb. 8. 6. The only Advocate, 1 Joh. 2. 1, 2. 'Tis God the Son, the Second Person, is the only Mediator; 'twas he that made man, and therefore fittest for him to re-make him; It would be a great derogation from Christ's Honor (saith Austin) should another mend and reform that spoiled work which he made. He is fittest to restore man to the lost Image of God, who himself is the express Image of the Father: 'Tis best meet for him to commend the Love of God to man, who himself is the Son of the Father's Love: He is the only begotten Son of the Father, and so fit to Adopt others into a state of Sonship. As Man also, Christ hath Right to Redemption-work, Lev. 25. 23. As God, he hath Ability to redeem; As Man he was capable to suffer: As God, he was able to bear up the Humane Nature under Sufferings; As Man, he could bear the Punishment of Sin; As God, he could remove our Sins, and purify our Natures: As Man, he could compassionate his People; As God, he could help them: As Man, he is capable to tender a Satisfaction; As God, to render it infinite: As Man, he was able to become a Sponsor, a Surety, to make a promise in the behalf of his Seed; And, as God, he could make good his Promise: He can reveal the mind, and disclose the deep things of God, and pour out the Spirit of Grace; He hath all Power in Heaven and Earth, and is able to save to the uttermost: He can exalt his Interest, and subjugate his Enemies under his Feet; He sits at the Right hand of God, and is God with the Father, and Man with Man.

CHAP. IV.

Showing, what is the Work of Jesus Christ, as he is Mediator.

WE come in the next place, to show wherein the Office and Work of this Mediator lies: And it will much conduce to the Glory of Christ, to display his Mediatorship.

Now we must consider him in a double Relation. The Lord Jesus Christ hath to deal with two different Parties, where there is a Breach.

- 1. His Work lies with respect to God the Father.
- 2. His Work lies with respect to fallen Man.

First, His Work lies with respect to God the Father: And here his Office lies in several particulars.

First, One great part of the Work of Christ, as Mediator, is, to mediate in the behalf of fallen Man, with the Father, so as to procure terms of Reconciliation: Thus a Mediator is to agitate with the offended Person, to bring to terms of Peace: This was the Work of Jesus Christ, from before all time; He did act with God the Father, that there might be a way found out for agreement between him and poor Sinners. This was drawn up in the Covenant between the Father and the Son, as in Isa. 42. 6, 7. I the Lord have called thee in Righteousness, and will hold thy hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a Covenant of the People, for a Light of the Gentiles: To open the blind eyes, to bring out the Prisoners from the Prison. Here's the result of Christ's Mediation in the behalf of fallen Sinners: He doth treat with the Father, that he would be pleased to show pity to fallen man; and the Father returns this Answer, That he will consent to the terms of Jesus Christ, for the saving of Sinners; that he shall be a Covenant for the People, and give out Salvation to perishing Sinners: So Isa. 49. 5. to the 10 verse. The Persons for whom the Lord Jesus Christ mediates, are Jews and Gentiles, and under these are comprised all the Elect of God: And the Father treats, and concludes with Christ, about the saving of these two Parties: In an acceptable time (saith he) have I heard thee, and I will give thee for a Covenant of the People. All the Elect of God, both among the Jews and Gentiles, shall be called and saved by this Mediation of Jesus Christ.

But what are the terms upon which the Father consents to the Mediation of Christ, that there shall be Peace for all that come to him?

First, One thing concluded upon between the Father and the Son, is, That the Lord Jesus Christ shall make up the Breach of the first Covenant: There's a Righteous Covenant of God broken, by the Sin of Adam, and upon the breach of this Covenant, God is bound, in Justice, to lay Death upon Adam, Condemnation upon all fallen Mankind. Now, that this Blessing may be procured, which Christ mediates for, the Sentence of Death is to be reversed; and this cannot be till the Punishment of the broken Covenant be borne. Now the Lord Jesus Christ voluntarily undertakes to do this, Heb. 10. 7. Then said I, Lo, I come. All other ways were ineffectual to make satisfaction to the Justice of God for Adam's Sin. Now, when no way could make up this Breach, then Christ comes, and consents to pay the price himself, to be a Sacrifice for Sinners; Lo, I come to do thy Will. What is the Will of God? Why, that Mercy and Justice be reconciled. Justice was all for Punishment; Justice would not be satisfied till the Penalty was executed: Now Christ must come in the Sinners room, and undergo the Penalty of this broken Covenant. Says God, In the day thou breakest this Covenant thou shalt die; therefore Christ must come and die. This is one of the terms; If the Lord Jesus Christ will be a Substitute in the room of the Offender, and undergo the Punishment, then he will take off the Condemnation, Rom. 8. 3. For Sin condemned Sin in the Flesh, that is, in the Flesh of Christ, Justice must be satisfied. The Law could not do this: God sends his Son, and he must undergo the curse, Gal. 3. 13. And this the Lord Jesus Christ did consent unto.

Secondly, Another thing required is, That the Lord Jesus Christ should obey the Precepts of this Covenant perfectly, in his own Person, in the behalf of all his Seed: That God might have no Quarrel with the Children of the Covenant, Christ must die to make up the former Breach of this Covenant: He must obey, to fulfill the End of the Covenant; he was not only to undergo Sufferings, but he was to complete all active Righteousness: and this the Lord Jesus Christ consented to▪ Hence he saith, It behooveth us to fulfil all Righteousness, Mat: 3. 15. God sent forth his Son, made of a Woman, made under the Law, Gal. 4. 4. The Lord Jesus Christ, as Mediator, becomes obliged to the preceptive Law of God, and must in his own Person fulfil all the parts of this Law, and must work out a perfect Holiness and Obedience, that the first Covenant might be fulfilled, if Salvation be obtained.

Thirdly, Another thing which the Father and Jesus Christ agree upon, about this Work of Reconciliation, is, That the first Covenant, to all its demands, being fulfilled, and there being nothing now to lay in against the Believer from this Covenant; that Salvation may be sure, he concludes to make a new Covenant; which, that it may be faultless, Jesus Christ should now become the Surety of another, and better Covenant. The first Covenant God found fault with, and therefore he thinks upon a second, that may be effectual to all the ends of Salvation-grace, Heb. 8. 7, 8. For if that first Covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second: for, finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, when I will make a new Covenant with the House of Israel and Judah. As if the Lord should say to his Son, The first Covenant will never answer thy Proposals, to save fallen Man, and that thy Seed may be blessed, therefore there shall be a new Covenant drawn, that shall be effectual to the ends of Salvation; and thou shalt be the Head and Mediator of this Covenant; this was the agreement between the Father and the Son. Now Jesus Christ becomes the Angel of this Covenant: God agrees with Jesus Christ for fallen man: Jesus Christ covenants with the Father, in the behalf of all his Seed, that he will bring them to Life: He promises to work in them and for them all that is required to Salvation, and that they shall be saved to the uttermost, Heb. 7. 22, 25. By so much was Jesus made a Surety of a better Testament: wherefore he is able to save to the uttermost. Thus he becomes an Engager to the Father in the behalf of all Believers. O Friends! this is a glorious Mystery; I fear too few are insighted in the glorious Work of the Mediatorship of Christ. The Lord Jesus Christ becomes a Surety, not only to pay the Debt, but to perform the Condition. A Surety, or a Sponsor, is one that promises and undertakes in the behalf of another, to fulfill what he was bound to do. Thus the Lord Jesus Christ hath performed this first Office of a Mediator, by drawing up an Agreement between God and fallen Man, by bringing the Father to terms of Reconciliation.

Secondly, The terms being thus concluded upon, the second part of this mediatory work of Christ is, that he actually set about this Obedience and Suffering, and make good the Agreement between the Father and himself; and this he did in the fullness of time; he comes and actually accomplishes all his Promises to the Father, in point of Merit and Satisfaction. There are two great things Jesus Christ is to do, in order to the fulfilling of this Promise to the Father, in behalf of his Seed: First, meritoriously procuring the things for them; and Secondly, efficaciously applying what he procures, Heb. 9. 15. And for this cause he is the Mediator of the New Testament, that by means of Death, for the Redemption of the Transgressions that were under the first Covenant, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal Inheritance. There could be no Redemption of them that were bound and cast by the Statute of the first Covenant, but by Christ's Sufferings; therefore Christ did actually lay down his Life a Ransom for all his Seed. 1 Pet. 3. 18. For Christ also hath once suffered for Sins the just for the unjust, that he might bring us unto God. 2 Cor. 5. 21. He hath made him to be Sin for us: By way of Stipulation and Agreement, he was made a Sin-offering, he did actually undergo all those Sufferings while he was on Earth, which was a full sufficient, equal, just, valuable, and proportionable Satisfaction to divine Justice, all that it could demand, in foro judicii; Justice hath nothing more to charge; the Extremity and Rigour of the Law was fulfilled; and whatever the Believer should have suffered in his own person, was all born by Christ. 1 Tim. 2. 6. Who gave himself a Ransom. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , as Gomarus observes, signifies an equal-price of Redemption, an Eye for an Eye, a Tooth for a Tooth, caput capite redimo, saith Arist. So full is this Satisfaction made by Christ, that God declares himself well pleased. Math. 3 17. So great was the delight and Pleasure that God took in his Sons Satisfaction, as that by an audible Voice from Heaven, in the Presence of men and Angels, he discharges him, and gives him an Acquittance.

Again, This Satisfaction must needs be full, because upon the very Promise of this Ransom, when the Conclusion was made between the Father and the Son, did the Lord let his Prisoner free, and give the purchased Possession to the Seed of Christ, before ever Christ did fully pay the Debt: as much as to say, as soon as ever the Lord Jesus Christ gave Bond for the payment of this Debt, the Father gives out the Fruit of it, and so all the Saints that were saved before Christ came, were saved by Virtue of this Promise of Christ to the Father, fully to pay the Debt; and the Spirits of just men, were made perfect with God before Christ came into the World, upon the account of this complete Satisfaction afterwards to be made.

Again, A Proclamation is sent out from Heaven, upon the Death and Resurrection of Christ, that now Peace is made for fallen man, upon the terms of Sinners coming to and receiving of the Lord Jesus Christ: now God would never have sent forth this Proclamation from Heaven, had not the Satisfaction Christ made, been complete and full. Matt. 11. 28. Come unto me, whoever you be, let your Burdens be never so great, your Wearyness never so much, your Dangers never so many, come unto me, and I will give you rest: thus he proclaims in the great Feast. Joh. 7. 27. If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink, be he what he will, here's enough to satiate his Soul, if he comes; here's Redemption procured: And upon this, by the joint Agreement of the Father and Son, a Commission is given to a certain number of men, to preach the Gospel and tender Reconciliation to lost Sinners, Luke 24. 47. And that Repentance and Remission of Sins should be preached in his Name among all Nations, Mark. 16. 15. And he said unto them, go ye into all the World and preach the Gospel to every Creature. O Friends! These are glorious things, if they be but believed. Tenders of Life must be made to all the perishing World, that all may know, that this was a full and sufficient Ransom which Christ gave, and that the Father was completely satisfied with it.

Again, Upon the Fathers actual Acceptance of Christ's Redemption and Mediation, he doth give out begun Salvation to Believers, they are admitted to the actual Enjoyment of this purchase; so all Believers upon their Reception of Christ, have the Spirit of Christ given them, which to them is begun Salvation, a Seal of Glory, the first fruits of Heaven, 2 Cor. 1. 22. Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our Hearts. Now seeing the Father, upon the receiving of this Payment made by Christ, delivers out Grace, and therein the Beginnings of Glory, to all that savingly close with Christ, therefore this price paid by Jesus Christ, must needs be complete and full

That's the second thing that this Mediator doth, he doth actually pay down the price the Father demands, and this becomes a full Satisfaction to divine Justice, for every Soul that doth savingly close with Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, Another thing the Lord Jesus Christ doth as Mediator, is this. By his shed blood, he seals to, and engages with the Father in the Behalf of Believers, that they shall abide with God in his Covenant, and shall no more wickedly depart from him: we have shewn before, that this was one of those Terms agreed upon, between the Father and the Son; that Jesus Christ should be the Surety of another and better Covenant: and here the Lord Jesus Christ stands actually bound for the Preservation of all the Saints to Glory. O if Souls had this Truth let into their Hearts, it would wonderfully prevent many stumbling Blocks by reason of their Unbelief: he stands bound to the Father, as a Sponsor or Surety, in the Behalf of Believers, that he will work all in them, and for them, that tends to the Salvation of their Souls: for in this new Covenant, God doth not deal with man, but by a Surety; man's single Bond will never pass more in the Court of Heaven; no, it was broken in Adam's Fall, and God made no more Covenant with man upon these Terms: there must be a Surety; hence he is said to be the Surety of a better Testament, Heb. 7. 22. So that that which is to be wrought in and by Believers, the Lord Jesus Christ undertakes to do, Rom. 8. 4. That the Righteousness of the Law might be fulfilled in us: That is, that Righteousness which the Law requires, even a perfect Conformity to the will of God, might be fully found in Christ our Head, for us and in us, by way of Imputation and Application through Faith; by virtue of the Union between Christ and his Members, all the Righteousness and Obedience, which was wrought in Christ's own person, as their Head, Redeemer, and Mediator of this new Covenant, is imputed to them as their Obedience and Righteousness, and accepted of God the Father, as if it were done by them; and so it is fulfilled in Believers: so that the Lord Jesus Christ stands engaged to the Father, for the Obedience of all his Seed, that it shall be wrought in them, and for them, in Truth, and Sincerity. And he begins to place this inward Conformity to God, in the Soul, when he doth new create it in the Image of God; there is something in every part and Faculty of the believing Soul, that corresponds and answers to the Holiness of God, though but in Part and Degrees, in their Understandings, something of the true Light of God: in their Wills something of real Conformity to the Will of God: a gracious Soul would be holy as God is holy. O says the poor Believer, I cannot evidence that Holiness I should, but God knows, I would be holy, I would cast off every Sin, I would perform every Duty in a right manner: so in the Affections, there is the Seed of divine Love to God, his Will, and Holiness; there is sincere Love, though but in part, and imperfect: but seeing this Holiness begun in the Saints in Truth, is but in part, and full of Spots; Christ comes, in the next place, and presents his spotless Obedience in the Behalf of Believers, and by Virtue of this mystical Union between Believers and Christ, this Holiness of Christ is the Holiness of Believers, and God accepts of it as their Holiness: O if Souls did but see more into this, they would not take up all their standing upon their own Legs, and see their Happiness or Misery lie in their complete or incomplete Obedience, but they would see all Holiness lie in Christ: hence you see the meaning of that Scripture, Rom. 5. 19. By the Obedience of one, many are made righteous. God looks upon sincere Souls as presented in Christ, that so far as Christ is holy, they are holy in him; for all the Obedience and Holiness of Christ as Mediator, is the Obedience and Holiness of his People; for what he did was not for himself, but for his people. And thus much of the first, how this Mediator deals with God the Father for fallen man.

Secondly, The Lord Jesus Christ as Mediator, deals with men the other party too. Now this he doth.

First, As an Interceder to Sinners in the Behalf of God the Father, he comes and treats with men, by virtue of his Mediatorship, to draw and persuade them to Terms of Reconciliation, 2 Cor. 5. 18. All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given us the Ministry of Reconciliation. The Lord Jesus Christ comes as the Messenger of the Lord, and delivers over Counsel, and tenders God the Father to Sinners: this he doth in his person: verse. 19. God in Christ reconciling the World to himself; By his Ministry, in opening the Gospel to Sinners, discovering those great Transactions between the Father and himself, and the great willingness of God to be reconciled, and inviting lost Souls to himself. verse. 20. We pray you in Christ's stead be you reconciled to God. You see the Errand of the Gospel to you, (Souls) and the Business of Christ in every Sermon, it is to bring you to a willingness to accept of the Terms of Reconciliation, to come over to God by Jesus Christ, that you may be saved.

Secondly, By giving out the holy Ghost, by which Sinners are effectually called, and adopted into the Sonship of God; this is necessary in order to the Application of what the Lord Jesus Christ hath done in his own person, whilst on Earth: he promised when he left the World, to send the Spirit in his Room, seeing it is of necessity, he must go away and take possession of the Kingdom of Glory for his people, and must go within the Veil, as the great High-priest; therefore that this Work might go on in his Absence, the comforter must come. Jo. 16. 7. If I depart I will send him unto you. And what shall he do? He will reprove the World of Sin, of Righteousness, and Judgment, verse. 8. He will guide you into all Truth, verse. 13. So that the Lord Jesus Christ sends the Spirit in the Gospel, to make all the Administrations of it effectual, to such as shall be saved. All that Ministers can do, cannot remove the thick Veil, that is, upon the Minds of Sinners, we cannot give eyes to see, nor Ears to hear, it is the work of the Spirit, it must be an Almighty power, must open this two leafed gate, and let in Jesus Christ into the Heart; it must be by the Almighty Power, and Energy of the Spirit, that the work becomes successful to any Soul, we find it so. How many precious Sermons are cast away upon flinty Hearts, they will not bow nor turn till the Spirit comes; therefore the Lord Jesus Christ in the exercise of his Mediatorship pours out the Spirit, Gal. 4. 6. That we might receive the Promise of the Spirit through Faith. Gal. 3. 14. Or the promised Spirit through the Word of Faith; for Faith cannot be had till the Spirit be had: Faith comes by hearing; How received ye the Spirit, by the Works of the Law, or by the hearing of Faith? Gal. 3. 2. There's no such Commission given at all to the Law, to give out the Spirit; it is by the hearing of Faith, by the opening this Box of precious Ointment, this blessed savor comes to Sinners: till that be done, no Conversion-work can be done; till the Spirit enters the Soul, Jesus Christ cannot enter the Soul: the Spirit of Christ is the harbinger, and goes before, and makes way for this blessed Mediator, to come into the Sinners heart: the Spirit is tendered to all, but the Lord gives it to whom he pleases; for it is as the Wind that blows, Jo. 3. 8. So is the way of the Spirit: thus the Lord Jesus Christ gives the Spirit to all that come to him, and by this he carries on his Mediatory work.

Thirdly, Another thing Jesus Christ doth with respect to men, in the exercise of his Mediatorship; He applies his Redemption-work to all those that do believe in him, he makes over himself, and all that is his, by a free Donation, to all that receive him, Rev. 3. 20. If any man open the door, I will come into him, and will sup with him: The great work is to get open this bolted door of the Heart to Jesus Christ, and when the door stands open, and the Sinner consents to take Christ, and esteeming it a good Bargain to have him, upon the most costly Terms; then he makes over himself to the Soul, I will sup with him, I will impart my Spiritual refreshings to him, I will give myself to him, he shall feed upon my Flesh and Blood: we have an Overture made, Rev. 21. 6. I will give to him that is a thirst of the Fountain of the Water of Life freely, So Rev. 22. 17. When once God hath brought the Sinner to a thirst for Christ, to a sense of his Misery without Christ, that he cannot live without him; when the Sinner is persuaded to believe in him, and give up himself to him; then the Lord Jesus gives out himself, his Spirit, these Waters of Life, the Waters of Regeneration; then he puts the Believing Soul into the possession of Life and Righteousness, of Grace, and an earnest of Glory. He gives to such, a Right and Title to all that is his, Joh. 1. 12. He gives out to them the fruit of his Sweat and Bleeding, the fruit of his Groans and Dying, as they are capable to receive. He died that they might have Life, and have it more abundantly: He was made Sin for them, that they might be made the Righteousness of God in him, 2 Cor. 5. 21. And now he is performing this, and strips the poor Soul of his filthy Garments, and takes away the filth of Original and Actual Sin, and comes and clothes the Soul with Righteousness, and puts his fair Ornaments upon it, and makes it as a fair Jewel in the sight of God; and when the Soul hath bespotted his own Garments, Christ comes and clothes him with pure Rayment: So that here's always Work for Christ to do for his People, whilst on Earth, to apply the fruits of his Purchase.

Fourthly, The Lord Jesus Christ, in pursuing his Mediatory Work, doth take upon him the Work of an Intercessor in Heaven, and Advocates in the behalf of all his People; He hath done all that was needful for him to do on Earth, and now he is entered into the Heavens, and sate down at the Right hand of God, and ever lives to make Intercession for the Saints,

Heb. 7. 25, 27. That is his Work now in Heaven, to perform that part of his Priestly Office, as is needful for him to do, as a Mediator there.

CHAP. V.

Wherein is opened the glorious Advocateship of Christ, with the unspeakable Comforts and Advantages thereof.

There are two parts of Christ's Priesthood; (1.) His Satisfaction. (2.) His Intercession. The first I have spoken to already, and proved, That the Lord Jesus, by his Active and Passive Obedience, hath satisfied the Law of God, and made a full Atonement for the Sins of all Believers; that he underwent all that they were bound to undergo, and that in their Name, Room, and Stead, for their Sakes, Heb. 7. 22. Gal. 4. 4, 5. Rom. 5. 19. This he did by his Active Obedience, and also by his Passive, Isa. 53. 4. to verse. 7. Gal. 3. 13, 14. Joh. 1. 28, 29. And by this one Offering of his, hath he perfected them that are sanctified forever, Heb. 10. 14. by way of Merit; that God hath no more now to charge on Believers, by way of Punishment for their Sins, seeing Christ hath borne it in his own Body for them on the Tree. By this he hath obtained Salvation for them: that's the first part of his Priestly Work.

But, Secondly, Having dispatched his Expiation, 'tis needful that he carry on his Application of this Obedience and Suffering to them; and this is done by his interceding in Heaven for them. Now, because so much of the Riches of Christ lies in this part of his Mediatorly Work, and it is of such infinite Concernment, as to the Faith, Comfort, and Advantage of Believers, therefore, I shall speak the more fully to this Subject, and shall prove,

1. That the Lord Jesus Christ, God-Man, doth now sit down at the Right Hand of God, Interceding there in Heaven.
2. How the Lord Christ carries on this Work of Intercession in Heaven.
3. For whom he doth intercede in Heaven.
4. What he doth intercede for.
5. Why the Lord Jtsus Christ, as a Mediator, carries on this Work of Intercession.
6. What are the unspeakable Comforts and Advanvantages that flow from this Intercession of Christ.

First, Jesus Christ doth now sit down at the Right Hand of God, and is entered upon the Work of Intercession.

There are two Arguments to prove this.

First, The nature of the Office the Lord Jesus Christ hath undertaken now in Heaven: He hath taken on him the Office of an Advocate, on the behalf of his People. 1 Joh. 2. 1. If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 : This word is ordinarily rendered a Comforter, when applied to the Holy Ghost; but when spoken of Christ (as Gomarus, and other Learned men affirm) it is taken for an Advocate, or one that undertakes the Cause of another; an Attorney, or Officer at Law, that appears in Court for one that is there concerned and accused, to look after, and plead his Cause: He is one that is, by Law, deputed and set apart to that Office, and so is bound to do his utmost for his Client, as for himself: Thus is Jesus Christ set apart, and deputed, by the Father, to this Office of Advocate and Intercessor, Joh. 6. 27. For him hath God the Father sealed. That is, appointed, set apart, and confirmed to be Mediator and High Priest, Psal. 110. 4. That he might satisfy for the Sins of his People, and sue out the Benefits of it for them.

Secondly, Christ's Fidelity in the Performance of this Work, proves he is now in Heaven, interceding. He cannot be content to have a Name and no more; he is faithful in things pertaining to Men. The Lord Jesus Christ did actually carry on this Work of interceding for his People, before he took their Nature upon him, and came into the World, Isa. 53. 12. He bore the Sins of many, and made Intercession for the Transgressors. Upon his Deputation to this Office, and by virtue of the Sacrifice to be offered, he did, ever since the Fall, mediate for his People, and put on Bowels for them. He carried them all the days of Old, Isa. 63. 9. whilst he was in Heaven, ever since Adam's Fall, as soon as he had any Seed on Earth. Again, Christ was faithful in this Work of Mediation and Intercession, whilst on Earth, Heb. 5. 7. Who in the days of his Flesh, when he had offered up Prayers and Supplications; with strong cries and tears. Those cries and tears he put up were for his People, not for himself, he needed it not: He was willing to be subject to his Fathers Will, to drink of the Cup the Father gave him to drink; But he prayed for the conversion of those the Father had given him, and prays for the Salvation of his People, Joh. 17. 19, 20. Luke 22. 32. And this he doth now he is in Heaven; he carries on this Work there in his Humane Nature: He is entered into Heaven itself, there to appear in the presence of God for us, Heb. 9. 24. It is a Metaphor taken from an Attorney, that appears in the behalf of his Clients: So Jesus Christ is at the Right hand of God making intercession, by way of Office. When Satan or the Law doth accuse Believers, there's Christ at the Bar, ready to make answer for them, to plead the Cause of his Clients, and procure their Justification: the Apostle makes use of Christ's Intercession to this purpose, Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's Elect? It is God that justifieth: Who is he that condemneth? it is Christ that died; yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh Intercession for us, Rom. 8. 33, 34. So Heb. 6. 19, 20. Which Hope we have, as an Anchor of the Soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil; whither the Fore-runner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an High Priest forever. By an entrance within the veil, was typified out Heaven, Glory. As the High Priest entered within the veil, so Christ, as an High Priest, is now in Heaven, to carry on Redemption-work: He is there to oppose all Designs against his People, and secure them against all the Impleadings of their Enemies; He ever lives to make Intercession, Heb. 7. 25. The word signifies, to attain the Mark, as an Archer doth; or he that throws Darts hits the Mark, so the Lord Jesus Christ intercedes so as to prevail.

Secondly, How doth Christ intercede in Heaven?

Ans. 1. Negatively, Jesus Christ doth not intercede in Heaven, Figuratively, As if his Intercession were no more but the virtue of his Merit, as Abel's Blood is said to speak, Heb. 12. 24. But formally as one that takes upon him the Cause of his sinning, suffering people.

Secondly, he doth not intercede Charitatively, by way of Courtesie and Kindness, which he might do or leave undone, as he pleaseth; but officially by way of Office and Trust committed to him, for so he is our Advocate, 1 Joh. 2. 1.

Thirdly, Neither doth he intercede Precario, in such an humble manner and Mode of Supplication of bowing the Knee, and submissive Entreaties with Cries and Tears, as the Saints do, and as once he did whilst on Earth; for this is inconsistent with that State of Majesty and Glory, he is in at the right hand of God, Heb. 1. 3. But Authoritatively, by way of Right and Power, as one that hath deposited a sufficient Price, and now demands his Captives, as one that hath made a Purchase, and now requires the thing purchased, as one that hath deserved what he moves for, and hath Power, as God, to bestow:

Secondly, Affirmatively, and so.

First, Christ's Intercession in Heaven is, by his appearing there for us, as our Mediator and Surety, presenting his person, God-man, as our Agent and High-priest, Heb. 9. 24. As the High-priest of old did appear in the holiest of all, with the Names of the twelve Tribes on his Breast and Shoulders, for a Memorial before the Lord, Exod. 28. 9. to 22. to which, says one, the Church alludes, Cant. 8. 6. Set me as a Seal on thy Heart, as a Seal upon thy Arm, as a Manifestation of his Love; so Christ's interceding, is his appearing in the behalf of his People, as their Advocate; and Christ's sitting in Heaven, in this Relation to his people may be called his interceding.

Secondly, By presenting his Obedience and Sufferings before the Father on their behalf, that they might have the Benefit of it, and that God would in Justice, communicate the Fruits of it to all his Seed, 1 Joh. 2. 1, 2. A type of this we might see in the High-priest's bringing the blood of the Sacrifice within the Veil, and sprinkling it on the Mercy Seat, Lev. 16. 11. to 17. First he killed the Sin-offering, and then brought in the Blood before the Lord within the Veil; without which his Act was not complete. Thus Christ first sheds his Blood on Earth, for his People, then enters into Heaven, there to present his Blood for us, Heb. 8. 4.

Thirdly, By declaring his Willingness, that his People should have all that Mercy and Salvation which they need, and that he purchases for them. Joh. 17. 24. Father, I will that those whom thou hast given me, be where I am; Father, I will that my Children have their due: 'tis true, they have sinned but I have suffered, they have fallen short but I have fulfilled all Righteousness: thou knowest I obeyed for them, and died for them, that all which thou hast promised might be made good to them: and Father, I will that Justice be done for them in Heaven; and I will, that this and the other Mercy be given out to them here, according as their Necessities and Capacities require: whilst Christ was on Earth, he came to do his Fathers Will, and now he is in Heaven, he must in all things have his own, Joh. 11. 42.

Thus much may be understood by the manner of Christ's Intercession in Heaven.

Thirdly, For whom doth Jesus Christ intercede in Heaven?

Answ. For all that come to God by him, Heb. 9. 27. For all that do believe in him. Joh. 17. 20. Some desponding Sinners may be ready to say, alas! this is not for me, I am unworthy of so choice a Mercy: will Christ plead for such a grace-abusing wretch as I? Why Sinner, if thou art one that comest over to Jesus Christ, and believest on the Son, thou mayest lay claim to this Advocate in Heaven, and confidently expect the Benefit of his Intercession.

Again, The Lord Christ intercedes for all his People on Earth, Joh. 17. 11. And now I am no more in the World, but these are in the World, holy Father keep, through thy own Name, those whom thou hast given me. The Saints on Earth are the Subjects for whom he intercedes: particularly, for his sinning people: he made Intercession for the Transgressors. Isa. 53. 12. Some trembling Soul may say, Christ's Intercession is for them that are holy, but I am vile; but know, O Soul, Christ intercedes in Heaven for his people that sin against him, 1 Joh. 2. 2. Again, Christ intercedes in Heaven for his weak and impotent people, that are compassed about with Clouds of Infirmities, he hath a special Respect to these, as a tender Father hath to a weak Child; Christ's grace was sufficient for Paul, when his own failed under the horrible Buffetings of Satan, 2 Cor. 12. 9. Such as are weak in themselves, that know not how to pray or wait upon God in any holy Duty as they should; these are the Persons Christ pleads for to help them, such as are ready to be overcome by Temptations; Simon, Simon, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as Wheat, but I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith fail not, Luke 22. 31. 32. Poor tempted Souls, hurried up and down, sometimes assaulted with blasphemous Thoughts, then poisoned by ugly Temptations, put upon this Sin, and then the other Sin, every day the Devil following them with new Temptations, laying in new Batteries against them: Now the Lord Jesus Christ sits at the right hand of God, interceding for these.

Again, Christ intercedes in Heaven for his suffering People, such as are in danger of being overcome by their Enemies, and have no Might, and none to intercede for them, Isaiah 59. 16. Sore Judgments there were upon the People of God, and that justly; for their Transgressions, no Righteousness of their own to plead for them, nothing at all that could justly intervene between Wrath and them: Now in this case Christ steps in, and he intercedes, and brings Salvation. These are the persons Christ intercedes for in Heaven.

Fourthly, What doth the Lord Jesus intercede for in the behalf of his People?

First, One thing he pleads for is, for their Preservation in the World, and from the Evil of the World, Joh. 17. 15. I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the World, but that thou shouldest keep them from the Evil. This implies, Christ's mind is, his People should continue in the World till their Work be done; that neither Sin nor Danger may cut them off till their full time be come; but that they may be kept from Evil; from the Evil of Temptation, and the Evil of Persecution.

Secondly, He intercedes for the Sanctification of his People; and this is a glorious Privilege indeed, Jo. 17. 17. Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth: By the word of thy Truth, make them partakers of thy Holiness: For their sakes. I sanctify myself, ver. 19. I set apart myself, now on Earth, as an High Priest and Mediator: And why so? That they may be sanctified through the Truth. It may be a poor tempted Soul hath begged for Grace, but finds no answer; as Paul prayed twice, thrice, many times without return; but Jesus Christ intercedes, who will prevail; and because he prays, they shall obtain, according to the measure of Christ, and in his time.

Thirdly, The Lord Jesus Christ pleads in Heaven, for Believers Union with himself, and with one another, Jo. 17. 11, 21, 22, 23. Holy Father, keep, through thy own Name, those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are: That they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one. This he died for, to gather his People into one, and this he will procure in due time. Their Union with himself shall be inseparable; their Communion may be interrupted, but their Union can never be broken. And it is a matter of Comfort to Believers, that grieve for the sad Breaches amongst Saints, how that Christ intercedes in Heaven for their Union, who cannot be denied.

Fourthly, The Lord Jesus Christ intercedes for his Peoples Succor, and support, under, and deliverance from Temptation, Luke 22. 32. I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith fail not. Ah Soul! Art thou followed with new Temptations every day? Doth the Devil vex thee, casting in wicked, vile thoughts, that do make thee tremble, pulling and haling thee? Fear not, says Christ, the Devil shall not prevail. O, says a Soul, What shall I do for Faith? I cannot take hold of this, and the other Promise. Why, Christ in Heaven pleads for Believers, that their Faith shall not fail, shall not sink away, nor faint in the day of Temptation, He will not suffer you to be tempted above measure, 1 Cor. 10. 13. He will make a way to escape. As sure as Christ himself hath escaped from Satan, and Dangers unto Glory, so sure shall Believers pass thither also. O Soul! thou canst not tell how to pray; this and the other wicked thought hurries thee; Faith and Hope, all seem to be gone: but, O, what a blessed thing is this, that there is a Mediator in Heaven to pray for thee!

Fifthly, Jesus Christ intercedes in Heaven for the Pardon of all the Sins of his People, and for the enjoyment of his Fathers favor, If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, 1 Joh. 2. 1. That's part of Christ's Work in Heaven, to Advocate in regard of their Sins: So Joh. 17. 26. That the Love with which thou lovest me may be in them. I have purchased thy Favor for them, and Peace with thee, by my own Blood; therefore, Father, O take not away thy loving kindness from them: O, do not be angry with them forever. O, what a wonderful Privilege is this! Christ is not contented that his Father love them with an ordinary and a common Love; but his Will is, that the same Love with which the Father loved Christ, as Mediator, be bestowed upon them.

Sixthly, The Lord Jesus Christ Advocates in Heaven for the supply of all the wants of his People, Phil. 4. 19. My God shall supply all your need, according to the Riches of his Glory, by Jesus Christ. Observe the ground, and meritorious cause of all the Supplies of the Saints Needs, is the Riches of Christ in Heaven; the Riches of Christ's Intercession. O! when the poor Believer goes mourning under a sense of this, and the other Want, Christ in Heaven is interceding for them. O, says one, I want a soft Heart; a Heart to love God: I want more power over Corruptions and Temptations: More Humility, says another: O, my proud heart! I want more Patience; I am filled with the Fire of Hell: I want more Purity, unclean Thoughts lodge in my Soul: but Christ in Heaven is interceding for them, thus. Father, There's a Child of mine wants a soft Heart; I will that thou give it to him: there's another goes complaining for want of more power over Corruptions; I will that thou grant it to him: Another wants Bodily supplies; he is in straits in the World, and knows not what to do; Father, thou hast made me Heir of all things, and I will that thou give him some of mine Inheritance. O that Believers did know this! when they are pining away in their straits, that they would look to Jesus, and by Faith see him interceding for them.

Seventhly, Another thing Christ pleads in Heaven for, is, the subduing of all the Enemies of his People: Whatever is like to endanger their wellbeing, in their work of glorifying God, and in their way to Glory with God, Christ pleads that it may be removed. Are the Snares of the World like to carry away one? the Snare of Prosperity, or vain Company, like to ruin another? Doth the Flesh lust against the Spirit, and ready to reduce it into Bondage? Christ pleads in Heaven for the destruction of these Leviathans; and will, in his own time, bring down all the Enemies of his People: Yea, Gog and Magog, and all the implacable Adversaries of Zion must be subdued, because Christ intercedes for it, and Reigns till he hath put down all Enemies under his Feet, 1 Cor. 15. 25.

Eighthly, He intercedes for his Peoples Consolation; He seems to be much concerned in this, that his People be of good cheer in the World, Joh. 16. 33. Be of good cheer, Pluck up your Spirits, walk comfortably, I have overcome the World for you, I will not leave you comfortless; I will not leave you in danger of overwhelming: Christ takes care that his People be not overladen with trouble, but that they have comfort in due time.

Ninthly, The Lord Jesus Christ pleads for their thorough and complete Salvation, for their preservation in Grace, and their sure and certain enjoyment of Glory. Wherefore he is able to save to the utmost, because he ever lives to make Intercession, Heb. 7. 25. Whatever their dangers, straits, and hazards be, Christ intercedes in Heaven, for their utmost saving, thorough all, and from all. The gracious Soul miscarries sadly, this, and the other time; in this, and the other matter: he falls dangerously, and bruises his Bones; but Christ pleads in Heaven, that this might not prove a mortal wound: Father, I will that those whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, to behold my Glory, Joh. 17. 24. All his Glory, that he hath purchased with his Blood, is for his People. As a Father, if he gets a large Estate, his Children shall fare the better for it, he will leave it all to them; so Christ in Heaven intercedes, Father, I will that my Children may share with me in my Glory; may Reign, and sit on Thrones, and be crowned with Immortality with me. Where I am, there shall my Servant be.

Thus you see what Christ intercedes for in Heaven.

Fifthly, Why doth the Lord Jesus Christ intercede in Heaven?

First, Because he hath undertaken this Work for his People: He is their Advocate, 1 Joh. 2. 1. He is an Officer in Heaven for them, and hath undertaken their Cases; and being bound, he will be faithful: He is there, as their Fore-runner, and his Fidelity lies at stake, to make their way plain to Glory. If they come not after, how can he be their Fore-runner?

Secondly, Because of his Interest in them, they are very near to him, they are his own. Having loved his own, that were in the World, Joh. 13. 1. Persons use to love their own. The World loves its own; therefore is Christ so concerned in the welfare of his People, because they are his Propriety; They are his Friends, Joh. 15. 14, 15. Ye are my Friends, I have called you Friends. And will not a man concern himself about his Friends? There's never a man on Earth, that hath a Friend so near his heart, as the Saints are to the heart of Christ; They are his Brethren; He is not ashamed to call them Brethren, Heb. 2. 11. He is their Elder Brother, and they are younger Brethren, and he cannot but have a tender heart towards them. How full of Bowels was Joseph to his Brethren, though they had sold him, and injured him; yet how affectionately did he discover himself to them, he wept, that the Egyptians heard him? Gen. 45. It is a most affecting Story, to show what the heart of a Brother is, or should be. O, how much is Jesus Christ concerned in the welfare of his People!

Again, He is their Father; He hath the Bowels of a Father: He pleads in Heaven, at the Right hand of God, as a Father doth speak for his Children. O! if a man had a Child, or some Children, condemned to die, how would a tender Father speak for them, and weep for them, that they might not die! with such Bowels doth Jesus Christ plead for his People in Heaven.

Again, They are his Spouse, his Love, his Dove, married to him, Cant. 5. And can a tender affectionate Husband shut up his Bowels towards his own Flesh? So Christ, in Heaven, accounts nothing too dear that might be for the welfare of his People, because of their conjugal relation to him.

Thirdly, Because of the great Love he bears to them, therefore will he make Intercession for them, Isa. 63. 9. In his Love and pity he redeemed them. Nor men, nor Angels can tell the Height, Depth, Length and Breadth of the Love of Christ; it is Love, passing Knowledge, Eph. 3. 18. Christ's Love to his people, is unconceivable, unchangeable: many waters cannot quench it, all their Unkindness cannot diminish it, therefore he remembers their Concernments, and pleads their Cause.

Fourthly, Because of the Sympathy the Lord Jesus Christ hath with them, he hath a fellow-feeling of all their Infirmities and Afflictions: as he is their head, he cannot but sympathize, with all the Maladies and Distempers of every Member; he is the high-priest, and must have Compassion, Heb. 4. 15. For we have not an High-priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our Infirmities: He cannot be capable of Insensibility, of the Cases, Concerns and Conditions of his people; Weaknesses, Sins and Wants, whatever becomes the Burden of his People, it is near his Heart: It is not his own Glory in Heaven, can take off his Thoughts and Care of them: He that abuseth the Saints offers Violence to Christ's Eye, Zach. 2. 8. He that toucheth you, toucheth the Apple of his Eye. While he was in Heaven, in the Possession of the Fathers Glory, no sooner did their Cry come up from Egypt, but presently it reached his Heart; God tells Moses he could not stand still to hear the Complaint of his poor afflicted people: God in Christ, the second person, the Angel of the Covenant resents the Miseries and Afflictions of his people, Exod. 2. 23, 24. I have surely seen the Afflictions of my People which are in Egypt, and have heard their Cry, and I am come down to deliver them, Exod. 3. 7, 8. And if he was so pityful, as to be soon afflicted with the Afflictions of his people before he assumed the human Nature upon him, is he not as much now since he hath taken our Nature upon him, and stands in Heaven clothed with our Body and Soul? Heb. 5. 2. Christ carries no Weaknesses to Heaven with him, he hath no kind of Wants, Pains, nor Sorrows, but he is compassed with Infirmities, that is, a Sense of the Weaknesses, and Remembrance of the Afflictions and Infirmities, whilst he was here: He knows the Heart of a Stranger, he knows what it is to be under the Wrath of God, therefore cannot but have a fellow-feeling of the Infirmities of his People. No tender Mother can be more affected with the pain of a little sucking Child, with the Fear of losing it, than Christ is with the case of his people, therefore he pleads for them.

Fifthly, Jesus Christ cannot choose but speak for his People in Heaven, because he hath purchased them, he hath bought them, and paid for them: he thought it fit to lay down a very great price for every believing Soul, 1 Cor. 6. 19. You are bought with a price. He was willing to have his Heart opened, and his Side opened, that he might let out his Blood for them; and surely he cannot but be willing to intercede for them, when he was willing to die, and bear divine Wrath for them: he hath bought Grace and Glory for them, and he must needs speak, that they might have what he hath paid for. It is true, if God should deal upon the account of Creature-deservings, they would soon be totally destitute: but though unworthy in themselves, Christ pleads his Worthyness: Father, I will, that thou give out this and the other Mercy to them, I have purchased it for them: it is true, they have abused the Gospel, and sin'd away the Light of thy Countenance; but I will that thou speak comfortably to them for my sake; for I have always obeyed thee, and done thy Will.

Sixthly, Because of his Promise to them, he hath promised he will not leave them, Jo. 14. 18. I go away, says Christ, but I will not leave you; I go to Heaven but it is for you; I carry your Names on my Heart, that I might think upon you, when I am in Glory: when I see how Satan buffets and assaults you from day today, then I look upon the Palms of my hands and see your names engraven there, and will not leave you comfortless, I will come again to you. He sends his Spirit to keep them Company here on Earth, and he will come and fetch them home at last; he will be faithful to them in all things, that pertain to God, and for the Salvation of their Souls, Heb. 2. 17. and Believers may urge him with his Promise and Faithfulness, and this obliges Christ to do all he can for them.

Seventhly, Because of the great Necessity they have of his pleading for them; He sees they would be undone if he did not stand up for them. Satan would lay in his Accusations, he is the Accuser, and what ways he hath to accuse the Saints before God, we know not: he accused Job, and doubtless he is ever and anon laying in fresh Charges against the people of God; therefore Christ pleads for them: he sees they want Grace and want Strength, therefore he cannot be silent: he saw Peter had need of Support, Luke 22. 31, 32. therefore he prayed for him: Christ sees they stand in need of Promises, Experiences, Consolations and Privileges, therefore he pleads in Heaven for them.

Sixthly, What are the Comforts and Advantages that flow from the Intercession of Jesus Christ to believing Souls?

There's Cause of wonderful Joy and Consolation to Believers, when they cast their believing Looks towards Heaven, to see their Advocate there.

First, In regard of the Excellency of this Intercessor: O! what a glorious, mighty, and potent Friend, have Believers to plead for them; he is no mean person, he is the Son of God, the express Image of his Fathers Person, Heb. 1. 3. He is one that made the World, and upholdeth the World, and after he had suffered for Sin, he is gone to Glory, and takes his Seat at the right hand of the Majesty, on high; he doth not stand by as a Begger, but sits down on the Throne, by the Fathers side, and speak as a Friend for them: O what a glorious and transcendent person is he! it is not an Angel, it is not a Saint, but it is the Lord Jehovah, Jehovah Christ. O when the Believer, by Meditation, comes to reflect on his Glorious Agent in Heaven, how he is honored by Angels, Saints, and every Creature, it will wonderfully console his Languishing Spirit.

Secondly, Consider the Successfulness of this Intercession, and it cannot but yield much Comfort, the Father heareth him always, Joh. 11. 42. The Father and he are one, of one Nature, one Glory, one Will: what the Son wills the Father wills; and Jesus Christ is the Executor of his own Will, and hath all Power in his hands to give out, and perform what he pleads for: What wouldest thou have, Soul? Lord, says the Soul, I would have more Grace, be more holy, have strength against this, and the other Temptation: I am afraid I shall perish under these Blasphemous Thoughts. Oh, the horrible injections of Satan! Lord, support me. Why, (says Christ) Fear not, Soul, In me is Everlasting strength, thou shalt have it in my time, and according to my measure.

Thirdly, Consider the extent of Christ's Intercession, and that will contribute wonderful Joy to Believers: His Favor is not narrowed up to one or two Favorites, but for all his Saints: All that come to God by him, Heb. 7. 25. All that believe in him, Joh. 17. 20. Christ excepts none: In this he out-goes the Affections of all Creatures. It is rare for the largest Affections of Men, not to run within some narrow limits; but Jesus Christ hath an equal respect for all his Seed. And then he intercedes for them in all their Matters, Isa. 63. 9. In all their Afflictions he is afflicted: There is no part of their Trouble but he is concerned in it: As Christ is an Advocate in Heaven, he is engaged to attend the Concerns of his People, though they should neglect him, Isa. 57. 18. He is privy to all their Matters: How should this revive the Believing Soul? It is the usual complaint of Souls, O, I fear Christ will not intercede for me; I am so Carnal, so full of Deceit, Hypocrisy and Backslidings. It is true, He takes pleasure in the Prosperity of his People; but, I fear, I am none of his. They that pray and plead Spiritually may hope, but I cannot pray, nor look up. But let me tell every poor trembling Believer, There's never a Soul that hath the Lord for his God, that Jesus Christ can be unmindful of: He intercedes for all his People, and in all their Concernments.

Fourthly, This may yield wonderful Comfort to Believers, to consider, That Jesus Christ doth not only intercede in Heaven, in their Names, but in their very Natures: He presents the Humane Nature in his own Person, glorified; and in this Nature he pleads to God for them. He is set forth as the Man Christ Jesus, 1 Tim. 2. 5. He cannot but be full of Pity and Compassion, because he is of the same Nature with them: They are Members of his Body, of his Flesh, and of his Bones, Eph. 5. 30. O, if that Scripture were but put into the Believing Meditation of Believers, what Comfort will flow from it? O trembling Saint! thou mayest object thy Unworthiness and defiled Nature; but Jesus Christ hath thy Nature glorified now in Heaven, at the Father's right hand.

Fifthly, The restlessness and unweariedness of Christ's pursuing the Blessedness and Salvation of all his Seed, is that which may yield wonderful comfort to the Believing Soul. Consider his Temper and Disposition, while he was on Earth: His Spirit shall not fail, till he hath set Judgment in the Earth, Isa. 42. 4. And if Christ was so earnest to undergo such work then, and was so restless and active till it was done; surely he must needs be restless to carry on this Work now in Heaven: He lives ever to make Intercession, Heb. 7. 25. There are sometimes when men on Earth cannot agitate the Cause of their Friends; but Christ is always taken up about this Work of Mediation: Christ's Authority is capable to manage all the Affairs of his People, were they millions of men, therefore it must needs be matter of wonderful Comfort to Believers, that they have such a Mediator in Heaven.

Sixthly, Consider the Advantages that flow from this Intercession of Christ to Believers, and it will yield matter of wonderful comfort.

Their Sins shall be surely pardoned. O what wonderful comfort is this! Blessed is the man whose Transgression is forgiven, and whose Sins are pardoned, Psal. 32. 1. He is an Advocate for them, to take away their Sins, 1 Joh. 2. 1, 2. 1 Joh. 1. 7, 9. No Bill shall be laid in against them at the Bar of God: Who dares accuse that Soul that is covered over with the Blood of the Redeemer? Rom. 8. 33, 34.

Their Persons and Performances shall surely find acceptance with God, through this Intercession of Christ, Eph. 1. 6. Who hath made us accepted in the Beloved. All that glorious Chain of Mercy that is made over to, and fastened upon the Believer, hath its tie to Jesus Christ: Predestination, Adoption, Justification, Sanctification and Salvation, are all laid upon Christ. It is a piece of usual weakness in poor Believers, or rather Doubting-souls, to judge of their Acceptance with God, or Non-acceptance, according to their Deservings, or ill-deservings, and the nature and frame of their Spirits and Duties: when they have been drawn out in Frames, and wonderfully raised in Duties, they think now they shall find Favor; But it is not that which gives your Suits Entertainment in Heaven; it is as God accepts the Soul in Christ, notwithstanding all the Failings and Infirmities of Believers; they are entertained with a well done good and faithful Servant, upon the account of Christ.

Again, They are sure to be secured against the prevailing Power of all their Enemies; let Beelzebub with all his Train and Forces be united against them, he must be broken to pieces; for Christ is at the right hand of the Father, interceding for them: Sin shall have no Dominion over them, Rom. 6. 14. God will bruise Satan under their Feet shortly, Rom. 16. 20. Hence it is, they may be sure none of their Enemies shall prevail, Luke 1. 74.

Again, They may be sure to receive more Grace, and Life more abundantly, God giveth more Grace, James 5. 6. whilst Christ's Interest holds in Heaven, whilst he hath a Fullness of Grace to bestow, Believers may expect more.

Access to the Throne of Grace at all times in his Name, is another procured Advantage of his Intercession; it is by the Blood of Christ Believers come to God with Boldness, Heb. 4. 14. 16. Heb. 10. 21. 22.

Hence the Blood of Christ makes Peace, and an open door for Believers to approach to God, Eph. 3. 12. Because he is there at the Throne of Grace, he will open his Door to his Children, and let them in, within the Veil: what tender Mother would shut the door against her weeping Child?

Again, They have not only Access to the Throne of Grace, but Success; they shall speed when they cry with all their Hearts, Joh. 14. 13. 14. Whatsoever you shall ask in my Name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son: if you shall ask anything in my Name, I will do it. Christ was leaving his Disciples, and they might tremblingly dispond, how shall we live when thou art gone? the World will persecute us, and Satan will devour us? Why says Christ, I will protect you then, as well as now, and hear your Requests: you think it is only your Concernment, to have your Prayers answered; no, it is the Concernment of my Father too, his Glory lies at stake for it. O! what bold Encouragement is this Rev. 8. 3, 4, 5. Prayers ascended up, and presently comes down Thunders, Noises, Lightnings, and Earthquakes: as a Symbol of God's Reception: believe it, Saints have still as great Potency with God, on the Account of Christ, as ever, and their right Prayers shall surely find an answer at the Throne of Grace.

Again, They shall certainly have Perseverance in Grace: for the Certainty of a Believers Graces depend not upon his own Strength, that it should die if he cease to exercise it; but is secured by the Intercession of Christ, Luke 22. 32. Jer. 32. 40.

Another Effect of Christ's Intercession is this, The Saints have Oneness with and an Interest in the Love of God, Jo. 17. 21. 22. And they shall be sure of Grace and of Glory: they shall have a Mansion in Heaven, Jo. 14. 3. Jo. 17. 24. Father, I will that those whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, to behold my Glory.

CHAP. VI.

Showing the Willingness of Christ, that Sinners should be saved, the Sin and Misery of such as refuse Christ, with Reproof to several sorts of Persons

WE have a little opened the Transcendent Glory of Christ as Mediator, wherein so much of his vast Treasury lies: we come now to make some Application of this glorious point.

First, By way of Information. First, How wonderfully are poor Sinners indebted to the Lord for giving such a Mediator as Jesus Christ, God-Man; none else in Heaven or Earth could have procured the Salvation of lost Sinners: had he been God only, he had had neither Right or Capacity to suffer: had he been only Man, he could never have born up under the dreadful weight of these Sufferings; Death would have had Dominion over him, his Sufferings unsatisfactory, his Intercession rejected, and all the hopes of Sinners perished; but now he is able to save all that come to God by him: O admire at, and rejoice in this Love of God, in giving Christ, Jo. 3. 16. God so loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son. Life and Liberty Health and Strength, Peace and Plenty, are excellent Mercies; but the giving of Christ is transcendently super-eminent: Can you bless the Lord for lower Springs? O adore these upper ones, this Grace that brings Salvation.

Secondly, See the Willingness of Christ, that Sinners should be saved, he would never else have assumed the work of a Mediator, nor have given himself for this very end that Sinners might be brought to God, 1 Pet. 3. 18. He would never have undertaken the bloody way of Death, nor drunk off such a bitter tremendous Cup, that Sin had brewed for him; he would not have interceded with God for Terms of Reconciliation, nor undergone such direful, unconceivable Torments, had he not been willing Sinners should live: hath Christ so carefully prepared the Ministration of Reconciliation, and absolutely commanded the Promulgation of the Gospel to every Creature? Mark. 16. 15. Hath he laid such a Necessity on his Messengers and Ambassadors, and obliged them, by the Penalty of fearful Woes, to preach the Gospel, and he is not willing that Sinners should be saved? 1 Cor. 9. 16. See how he charges his Servants to be instant in Season and out of Season, to reprove, rebuke, and exhort with all Long-suffering and Kindness, 2 Tim. 4. 1. To persuade and beseech men to be reconciled, 2 Cor. 5. 11. 20. And will he reject them when they come? He would not have grieved and mourn'd so much at Sinners Unbelief, and out-standing the day of Grace, had he been unwilling they should have lived, Joh. 5. 40. Luke 19. 41. 42. Behold how he waits till the last hour of the Day, and treats his Enemies with an affectionate Kindness, why will you die, O House of Israel? He heaps up Coals of Fire on their Heads, and draws them with Cords of Love, and with the bands of a man, Mat. 5. 45. Hos. 11. 4. he offers Violence by his Spirit, to unwilling Souls, and attempts the most charming Persuasions to allure them to him; he thunders and lightens, as on Mount Sinai, and threatens them terribly if they will not come, Joh. 3. 18. Ah troubled Souls, you that tremble, least he will no more have Mercy on you; but reject your Selves and Duties, shut up his Bowels, and harden his Heart against your Cries. Ah! do but consider and seriously reflect on what Christ hath already done and suffered for you, think on his Carriage whilst on Earth, and his tender Reception of all that came to him; he debarred none, surely, then his Advancement in Heaven, produces no Alteration in him: it may enlarge his Capacity but cannot straiten his Bowels to perishing Sinners. Honor doth not puff him up, or make him unmindful of their Concernments; think upon his Promises, he will cast out none that come to him, Joh. 6. 37. Let their Sins be as red as Scarlet, he will make them as white as Wool, Isa. 1. 18. He knows the Heart of a Stranger, Exod. 23. 29. He remembers what 'tis to lie under the Pangs of a troubled Soul, when he trode the Wine-press of his Fathers Wrath alone; and therefore cannot but compassionate the Miserable, and those that are consumed with the Terrors of the Almighty. Cease Soul, to lay thy Charge on Christ, 'tis thy own Unwillingness and Unbelief that impedes thy way to Life, not his.

Thirdly, How fearful then is the Sin, and how dreadful will be the misery of all those that refuse this Mediator, will not hearken to this Prophet, nor consent to his Proposals for Salvation: The Tongues of Men and Angels are not capable here to commit an Hyperbole, nor can such themselves sufficiently conceive it, till they feel it. Ah, Sinners! Weigh a little these ensuing particulars, and you will find it true.

First, It is a most aggravated Sin, and hath all the circumstances of Evil in it: There's no sin of so deep a Dye, and foul a Guilt.

It is a sin against the highest Mercy, and greatest Deeps of Divine Favor. There were some Discoveries of Mercy that God expended on the Gentile World: In the times of their Ignorance God did wink at them, feed them, and clothe them; But the Treasures of Grace were reserved for the Fulness of Time, the Gospel days. O wretched Caitiff! By refusing Christ, thou kickest against the most sounding Bowels, against rich Mercy, Eph. 2. 4. Against tender Mercy, Luke 1. 18. Against Free Mercy, Eph. 2. 8.

It is a Sin against, and a forsaking of thy own Mercy: Thou stabbest thy own Soul with the same Dagger thou flingest at Christ. O wretched Sinner! thou takest pains to shut thyself out of the door of Mercy, and to argue thyself into the depth of Misery: O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself. Oh Sinner, thou sheddest the blood of thy own Soul, Hos. 13. 9.

It is a sin against the choicest and costliest Remedy that ever God prepared: The Garment God made to clothe thy Soul, is dip'd in Blood, and this thou throwest from thee. How justly will thy Soul rot in chains of Darkness to all Eternity, that refuseth such a chargeable Remedy laid out upon thee? The Law was but leading to it, Gal. 3. 24. Had you lived to see the Priests killing the Sheep and Lambs, and cutting the throats of these poor Creatures, to make an Atonement for Sin, you would have said, surely the Antitype must needs be bloody: All those charges men were at in their daily Sacrifices, could not take away one Sin; the Blood of Christ must do it. O expensive Mercy! And this thy Soul despiseth: O cursed Sin! All other Dispensations could not make those that use them perfect, Heb. 9. 9. Nor all the World, if sold, can pay the Debt of one Soul, or the price of one sin.

It is a sin against the most glorious Majesty that ever was, Phil. 2. 9. Thou spittest in that Face that is infinitely above all Spots and Stains; that the Angels admire and adore; one Smile of which maintains all the Life and Consolation of the Saints in Glory; this Jesus thou despisest. O unbelieving Sinner! where wilt thou go to hide thyself from the wrath of the Lamb at the last day?

Lastly, 'Tis a rejection of thy own Duty, a throwing Christ out of his own Vineyard, and how will God deal with such? He will miserably destroy these miserable men, Matth. 21. 41. The Lord Jesus Christ hath Right to rule thee, and thou rejectest the Homage thou owest to him, and despisest his lawful Right and Authority which is a most grievous Sin indeed.

Secondly, 'Tis a most unreasonable Sin, there's no Plea at all will bear in the Court of Reason for such a Sin; thy own Reason will judge and condemn thy Soul. O! that ever thou shouldst choose Death rather than Life, and take the Iron Rod of Satan over thee, and despise the golden Scepter of Jesus Christ; Ah! Sinner, there's cause why thou shouldst leave thy Lusts and wicked Companions, and depart from the Chambers of Death, in which thy Soul hath dwelt so long, but none at all why thou shouldst not come over to Christ: what doth Christ propose to thee that thou canst cavil at? Is it to leave thy Lusts? If not, these will ruin thy Soul; if thou hadst Fire in thy Bosom, thou wouldest think it reason to cast it out; if Fetters upon thy Feet, and Clogs about thy Body, to shake them off; if a Serpent in thy Bosom, to cast him out: O Sinner, sit down, and consult with the Principles of Reason, never was a better Bargain offered thee. Think on it, What if the Gate seem straight, it is not so to thy Soul, but to thy Lusts, thou canst not shun Trouble, but must meet with it either here or to all Eternity.

Thirdly, 'Tis a most condemning Sin, Joh. 3. 19. This will justify the severest Doom of God, that they might have Life, but would not: Salvation came home to them, but they turned it off. O Sinner, take heed how thou refusest him that speaks from Heaven, despise not Christ.

Secondly, As 'tis the greatest Sin so 'tis attended with the greatest Misery. For first, it opens the Windows of Vengeance, and lets down divine Wrath on thy Soul; it takes off all Possibility of Salvation; he that shuts up this door leaves none open to Life, Acts 4. 12. Christ is the only Way, the Truth, and the Life, no possibility of escaping Wrath to come, if thou refuse the Lord Christ, Heh. 2. 3. Don't flatter thyself with Hopes of after Mercy; if thou give Christ a final Denial, all hopes of Mercy is gone, when once Christ who is the Blessing, is gone from thy Soul.

Secondly, There's no Acceptance of any of thy duties, 'tis his Righteousness and Intercession makes way for thy Acceptance, Eph. 1. 6. All Acceptableness of the best Services of any, is through him, 1 Pet. 2. 5. None of thy Complaints or doleful Cries, can ever enter into God's Ears, if they be not mixed with the Odours of his Incense: Ah Sinner, thou flatterest thyself with this, that thou wilt pray, cry, and weep upon a Death-Bed; Ah! what are all thy Cries, when God hears not?

Thirdly, there's sure Damnation waits for thy Soul, the Devil stands by, and expects the time when Christ will take his final leave of thee. O Sinner, if once thy time be gone, and precious Overtures of Grace do cease, then certain Ruin follows: as sure as the Work-man's wages is due to him, so will Damnation be to thy Soul, that dost live and die in thy Refusal of Christ; every Soul that will not hear this Prophet shall be destroyed, Acts 3. 23. Psal. 2. 12.

Fourthly, all the precious Intercessions of Jesus Christ will be turned against thee; and this is a most doleful Consideration, enough to make the hardest heart to break: now while there's hope, the blood of Christ pleads, Father, wait a little longer for this Sinner; when divine Justice says, cease interceding. that I may take Vengeance on this wretch; no says the blood of Christ, spare this Drunkard, a little longer, O wait one day longer, one year longer, for this Swearer: but upon thy final Refusal of Christ, the blood of Christ pleads another way, Father, I will the Damnation of this Sinner, I will that Mercy be no more tendered to him, Luke 2. 34. This Child is set for the Fall and Rising again of many in Israel. Christ is for the Fall as well as the rising of many; and believe it, his blood hath as great a Virtue to heighen the Damnation of willful Unbelievers, as ever it hath to further the Salvation of Believers; and O what a dreadful thing is this, when the blood of Christ shall plead against thee. It may be upon thy Death-bed, thou wilt cry, Lord pardon me, Lord let me never go to the place of Torment: but the Blood of Christ will say, Father, damn him, he made me wait many Days and Years, and would not let me into his Heart, Father let him perish; and whom do you think the Father will hear? This is one of the most trembling Considerations that I know, to heighten the Wrath of Sinners: that Soul must needs go deep into Hell, that the Blood of Christ sends thither; the blood of Christ cries for Vengeance: Ah! Sinners think of it, what a fearful thing it is to refuse this Mediator: the Lord open your Ears, and the Lord work upon your Hearts that you may turn and live while there is Hope.

Fourthly, Hence see whence 'tis that the Prayers of any are so prevailing with God: what is it that makes Faith and Prayer so omnipotent? 'Tis the Intercession of Christ in Heaven that wings our Prayers, and makes them so speedily arrive at the Mercy-seat, and come off with an answer of Peace. 'Tis a Friend in the Court of Heaven that makes the Saints Sutes so prevailing with God, Rev. 8. 3, 4, 5. 'Tis his Incense makes way for the Prayers of the Saints, and then Fire comes out of the Censer, and burns up the Enemies of Christ: O there's wonderful Mightiness in the prayers of the Saints whom Christ favors with his Mediation.

Use 2. Of Confutation. If the Lord Jesus Christ be the Great and only Mediator between God and Man; then this will strike down that dangerous, damnable Error of the Papists, Of Praying to Saints, and setting up other Interceders besides Christ, making Addresses to the Virgin Mary, placing her in the Throne with Christ. If there be but one Mediator, 1 Tim. 2. 5. and one that liveth to make Intercession, and that the Assurance of Salvation depends on this Intercession of Christ, Heb. 7. 25. Then 'tis a damnable Error of the Papists to pray to the Virgin Mary, as they do in their Missal: one of which is thus; O Virgin, the only chaste Mother, loosing our Sins, give us the Kingdom, for thou art Queen of the World, art able to do all things, and, with thy Son, disposest all things. Another is, That God, by the Prayers and Merits of the ever blessed Virgin, and of all Saints, would bring us to the Kingdom of Heaven, Amen. Nay, they say, That Prayers made to, and delivered by the Saints, are better than those by Christ; So Sal. Now, if Christ be the only way to the Father, and Acceptance is through him alone, then this is a false Way, and never of God's appointing, but blasphemous Sacrilege, and horrible Robbery of the very Flower of Christ's Crown: Nothing plucks the Scepter out of Christ's Hand, his Crown from his Head, as these irreligious Opinions of the Papists. If Prayer be an act of Worship, Matth. 4. 10. then 'tis only due to God: Indeed there's a civil Worship due to Superiors, but Religious Adoration is God's Prerogative. If we must trust on him to whom we pray, Rom. 10. 13, 14. then we must pray to none but God, in Christ; for, cursed is the man that trusteth in man, Jer. 17. 5. He to whom we pray must be able to know our wants, and our Hearts; to see our Miseries, and hear our Prayers. Now this the Saints in Heaven cannot do: Abraham is ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledgeth us not, Isa. 63. 16. 'Tis Omniscieny alone can hear our Prayers, and Omnipotency that can Answer them, Psal. 65. 2. Matth. 6. 6. 8. 32. Eccles. 9. 5. Thus we may see the Heterodox Assertions of the Papists, in making many Mediators.

Use 3. For Reprehension to the professing People of God.

First, To such as are no more affected with this great and glorious Privilege of having an Advocate with the Father. Ah! Did Souls but know what an Ocean of Privileges, and Fountain of Mercies is comprised in this one Mediator, Jesus Christ, it would fill their Hearts with Joy, tip their Tongues with Praises, and make them more glad in the Salvation of God. But, it may be, you are more affected with your Frames, fine Expressions, and your own Duties, than with the Pleadings of Jesus Christ. This deserves a sharp Reproof.

2dly, Such as make little Use of the Intercession of Jesus Christ. Alas! how few employ Christ about their Matters in Heaven, and engage him in the momentous and weighty Matters of their Souls? May not Christ complain still, as once, on Earth, Joh. 5. 40. You will not come to me that you may have Life. 'Tis sad indeed, that the Lord Jesus Christ should enter upon so costly an Office, and pay so dear for a Right to do thy Soul good, and thou neglect to use him after all: This is the condemnation to Unbelieving Sinners, That they turn their Backs upon the Intercession of Jesus Christ. Alas, Soul! Are not thy wants great, and thy Sins many? thy Provocations and abuses of Mercy daily, and yet wilt thou not engage Christ for thy help, to procure thy Pardon, and Passage from Death to Life? O, how justly miserable will thy case be, who mightest be happy, but wouldest not! He is worthily miserable (saith one) that will not be happy for the asking. Who knows but that thy hard heart might have been softened; thy filthy heart cleansed; thy covetous heart spiritualized, and thy captivated Soul set free from the damning Power of Sin and Satan, hadst thou but improved a Mediator in Heaven? Know, Soul, if ever Life and Salvation be obtained, it must be by a Mediator.

Thirdly, Here's a Reproof to such as make Mediators of their Duties; that trust their Prayers more than Christ, and lay all their hopes of obtaining on the act of seeking. Indeed the Promise of having is made to asking, Matth. 7. 7. but not for asking. Thy Matters (saith Luther) do not depend on the worth of thy Self, or Prayer, but solely on the account of Christ, Joh. 14. 13. It is Prayer in his Name: And therefore (saith Luther) Nulla Oratio extra Christum. There is no Prayer at all out of Christ. 'Tis the Altar that sanctifies the Gift, Matt. 23. 19. Our very Righteousnesses are as filthy Rags, Isa. 64. 6. When you have done all, you are unprofitable Servants, Luke 17. 10. Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but to thy Name give Glory, Psal. 115. 1. All acceptance with God is through Christ. To trust to thy Prayers, is to trample on the Blood of Christ, accounting it an unholy thing, and the most effectual course to provoke the Lord to a real abhorreny of thy Duties, and to throw them back as Dung on thy Face.

CHAP. VII.

Showing, what Consolation flows to Believers from the Intercession of Christ.

IF the Lord Jesus Christ be the only Mediator between God and Man, then here's Comfort for Believers in several Cases.

First, To weak Believers; such as need Mercy, and are unable to beg it as they should. Poor Soul! Art thou sensible of thy urgent Necessities? that thy Wants are more than can be numbered? Knowest thou the Hardness, Pride, Filthiness, and Ungratefulness of thy Heart? understandest thou thy need of the Spirit of Grace, and the Gifts of Grace, but canst not pray for supplies so understandingly, sensibly, affectionately, and believably as thou oughtest, and therefore fearest, shalt never find an Answer, or obtain any reviving comfort to thy Soul, in the believing view of Christ's Intercession in Heaven. Let me tell thee, desponding Christian, thou canst not be really poor, and pray in Faith; thou canst not perish for want, and have a Jesus in Heaven interceding for thee, Heb. 7. 25. Him the Father heareth always, Joh. 11. 42. If the matter depended upon thy own Oratory and Eloquence, thy Case were sad; but there is one in Heaven that is wise, mighty, merciful, omniscient, who minds thy case, considers thy needs, hears thy groans, knows thy distresses, and ever liveth to make Intercession for thee.

Object. But, says a Soul, How shall I know that Christ intercedes for me, who am not worthy to lie under his Table, nor crawl at his Feet; I fear he hath greater concernments upon his Heart than to remember me.

For Resolution in this, look back to Chap. 4. where is shewn for whom Christ intercedes. He prays for all that believe in him, Joh. 17. 15. Art thou one that believest in Christ? Hast thou chosen him as thy Lord and Righteousness? And is he precious to thy Soul? Could'st thou be content to part with all for him? Pleasures, Profits, and Worldly Grandeur, are they nothing, when they come in competition with him. Canst thou not say, O! None but Christ, none but Christ; Christ with Poverty, with Disgrace, with Bondage and misery, is far more preferable than Riches, Repute, Liberty, and Mercies without him? Dost thou consent to all his terms? and art thou willing to take up his yoke, and to learn of him? to bear his Cross, and follow him? to leave all, and come to him, and that considerately, and from thy whole Heart? Dost thou cast and adventure thy Soul, and thy All, upon his Ability to save thee? Believest thou all that the Scripture reporteth concerning him? his Personal Excellencies, and purchased Sufficiencies? That he is able and willing to save all that come to God by him, and will not cast out any that really come? And in this hope art thou resolved to trust thy All upon him, and if thou perish, to perish at his Feet? Then art thou that Soul for whom Christ intercedes in Heaven, Luke 10. 42. Lam. 3. 24. Isa. 44. 5. Esth. 4. 16. Mark, 9. 24.

Object. But I cannot pray as I ought, according to the Will of God. Alas! how cold, dead, spiritless are my Prayers? and will God hear me?

Sol. 'Tis not for thy name thou art heard, but for the Name of Christ; as you have already heard, Joh. 14. 13. Rom. 8. 26, 27. We know not what to pray for as we ought. Neither I Paul, nor you believing Romans, know how to pray as we ought. If thou wantest words, yet if thou hast sighs and groans, thy Prayers are heard through Christ.

Again, Thou sayest thou canst not pray according to the Will of God.

I Answ. 1. If thy Prayers are for such things as God requires, for things that concern his Glory, and the good and Salvation of thy Soul; and for these outward things, as God sees needful for thee: If thou prayest for these, as God promiseth them, for Spiritual blessings absolutely, and for others, with submission to his Wisdom and Will; if thou seekest these only in the Name of Christ, and ultimately for the Glory of God; with all thy Heart, and with all thy Strength, thou askest aright, and God will grant thee.

Secondly, God in his infinite Grace, through Christ, accounts those things in his People that are not, as if they were, Rom. 4. 17. He judges his People to be what they would be, Rev. 2. 9. I knowthy Works, and Tribulation, and Poverty, but thou art rich. The Lord judgeth of his People, not so much by their Frames, inherent Qualifications, and external Performances, but by their real Sincerity, and unfeigned desires, Psal. 38. 9. Thou complainest thy Prayers be cold, and dead, heartless and lifeless, but doth this please thee, or trouble thee? Is not this the burden of thy Soul? that which thou mournest over, prayest and strivest against? Doth no Prayer content thee, but what is spiritual and fervent, affectionate and upright? Why, poor Soul, cheer up thyself, God esteems thy Prayers such, through Christ, as if they were so.

Thirdly, The Procurement of thy needed Mercies, doth not depend upon thy Prayer-frames, or the Modes and Measures of thy Holiness, but on the Mediation of Jesus Christ. Pray, weigh that Scripture, Joh. 14. 14, 16. If you shall ask anything in my Name, I will do it. And I will pray the Father. (Any thing) that is, anything you absolutely need; Any thing that is fit for you to ask and me to give, I will do it. He doth not say The Modes of your Prayers, the measures of your Frames and Holiness shall do it; but if ye ask, though with broken Language, and troubled Expressions, Sighs and Groans, I will do it. You have but one Advocate with the Father, I will word your Requests, and perfume them with my Incense; not the Excellency of your Duties, but the Worthiness of my Intercession, shall procure your needed Mercies.

Secondly, Here's Comfort to troubled Believers, such as are in the depth of Soul-misery, and cast down with the sight of their Sins, guilt of their Consciences, and Fears of their Condition, that go mourning all the day long, forget to eat their Bread, feed on Worm-wood and Gall, refuse (with Rachel) to be comforted, because their first born, their Comforts, first Love and Holiness are not, Jer. 31. 15. This is the case of some poor Souls from day today; they meet with no Consolation, eat Ashes instead of Bread, and mingle their Tears with their Drink; they go from Ordinance to Ordinance, and their Fear come and go with them; they feel little Change by all they do, or enjoy, their Hearts are har•, proud, vain, carnal, unbelieving, hence they fear they are Hypocrites, and shall be cast away to all Eternity.

Now here's Comfort to such from Christ's Intercession in Heaven, he is there pleading thy cause, and pressing after thy cure; thou hast provoked God, but he is appeasing his Wrath, 1 John. 2. 1. 2. Thou art angering God every day, but he is always pleasing him for thee; thou art making Breaches upon the Law of God, and he is there closing up those Breaches by his Blood and Intercession; thou art busy making wounds upon the Glory of the Father, and Christ is there presenting the deep Gashes, and bloody Stroaks his Justice laid upon him for those very Sins: when God is resolved to be aveng'd for thy Backslidings, Christ is then discovering his constant Obedience, and upright Faithfulness for thee, he pleads with the Father thus, Father, shall thy Anger burn forever, and thy Vengeance always wax hot against this Soul, My Child? Remember what I have borne for him, I have already suffered for his Sin, and given a plenary Satisfaction to the Demands of Justice, and wilt thou charge it on him? Father, let his Sins be on me, as David, 2 Sam. 24. 17. Let thy hand I pray thee, be against me, these Sheep what have they done? 'Tis I am their Surety, and in thy Account the Offender; I have answered for their Offences, and discharged their Debts, why wilt thou pursue them in thy Anger? Holy Father, in Justice spare these Offenders; behold them in my Blood, and clothed with my Righteousness, Obedience, and Suffering; 'tis true, their Natures are vile, but mine is holy, and they are Members of my Flesh and of my Bones, they are diseased but I have undertaken their Cure, and will present them to thee without Spot and Wrinkle. And this Intercession of Christ shall certainly prevail with God for thee, that thy Iniquities may be pardoned and thy Sins remembered no more, Heb. 8. 12. All that is promise'd in the new Covenant, Christ intercedes for in Heaven; for he is the Angel of the Covenant Mal. 3. 1. The Mediator of the new Covenant, Heb. 9. 15. But the Forgiveness of Believers Sins, is part of the new Covenant, Jer. 31. 34. Mich. 7. 18. where God forgives one Sin he forgives them all, Jer. 33. 8. I will cleanse them from all their Iniquities, &c. He will pardon not only Sins before, but after Grace; not only small but great Sins, Psal. 25. 11. Not only Sins that have been once, but often committed, Jer. 3. 22. Return ye backsliding Children, and I will heal your Back-slidings. He doth not say once or twiee, but let their Back-slidings be never so great and many upon their Return God will pardon them; nay though they be as Scarlet, and as red as Crimson, Isa. 1. 18.

Object. I did once hope that God had pardoned all my Sins, but now I fear it, because I have back-sliden after Mercy, and wallowed in Sin after washing, and God threatens he will not forgive such, Jer. 14. 10. chap. 5. 7.

Sol. 1. The Reason why God would not pardon their Sin, was not because they were too great for Pardon, but because they would not return, Jer. 15. 7. I will destroy my People, because they return not from their Ways, Jer. 23. 14. The Lord promiseth to such as have gone aside from his Ordinances, even from their Youth, that if they will return to him, he will return to them, Mal. 3. 7. Jer. 4. 1.

Secondly, If God will pardon all their Sins, then he will pardon their Relapses after Mercy, be they never so great, upon their returning to him; God speaks indefinitely, I will cleanse them from all Iniquity, Jer. 33. 8.

Thirdly, If God will pardon their Sins before Grace, much more those after Grace; if he will forgive them when Enemies, then much more being reconciled; the Apostle useth the same Argument, Rom. 5. 8. 9.

Fourthly, If there be no Condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, then God will surely pardon all their Sins, that ever they commit: for there is never a Sin, but will condemn the Soul if it be not pardoned; but the Soul that is in Christ, is never, no not one Minute of time in a condemned State, Rom. 8. 1.

Fifthly, If the Lord Jesus hath satisfi'd for all the Sins of Believers, then they shall furely be forgiven; otherwise, God would be argu'd of Injustice, and Christ would shed his blood in vain: but the Lord Jesus hath satisfied divine Justice to the full, for the Sins of all his People, Isa. 53. 5. 6. The 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 or Ransom, 1 Tim. 2. 6. paid by Christ, was a full and sufficient price, and therefore his Satisfaction is complete for all their Sins: if this were not so, he could not have cleans'd them from all Sin, but he cleanseth them from all Sin, 1 Joh. 1. 7. Christ could not have saved them to the uttermost that come to God by him, were his Satisfaction imperfect, but this he doth, Heb. 7. 25.

Lastly, If the Lord should not pardon all the Sins of his People, he would be unjust and unfaithful, 1 Joh. 1. 9. but that he cannot be, Zeph. 3. 5, He will not do Iniquity, he is the faithful one that cannot deceive or be deceived, Isa. 45. 21. Let God be true, and every man a Lyar.

Thirdly, Here's Comfort to Believers, that are dejected in the sense of their strong Corruptions, and unsubdued Lusts; The Body of Death in some doth make them doubt the truth of Grace, and fills their Lives with Bitterness and Terrors: The badness of their Hearts, and vileness of their Natures, makes some conclude their final Ruin; But here's Comfort to such.

Firstly, In that it hath been and is the case of the dearest Children of God, their Corruptions, like the Sons of Zerviah, have been too hard for them. Abraham accounts himself Dust and Ashes, Gen. 18. 27. Job cries out I am vile, Job. 40. 4. David says, Mine Iniquities are gone over my head, as a Burden too heavy to bear, Psal. 38. 4. Isaiah, from a reflex View of God's Glory, concludes he was undone because a man of unclean Lips, Isa. 6. 4, 5. And the Church, Isaiah 64. 6. profess they were as an unclean thing. Paul an elect Vessel, a man of singular Revelations, yet laments that in him dwelt no good thing, Rom. 7. 18. That he was carnal and sold under Sin, ver. 14. and when he would do good evil was present with him, ver. 21.

Secondly, Here's Comfort, that their Corruptions in them shall not break their Covenant Relation to God, Psal. 89. 30. to 35. There can be no Forfeiture of this Promise, I will be their God, and they shall be my People. Thy Lye cannot make God untrue, Rom. 3. 3. 4. Thy evil Eye cannot make his Eye evil too, Matth. 20. 15. Thy wicked Thoughts cannot alter his gracious Thoughts, Isa. 55. 8. 9. Thy invincible Corruptions cannot overcome his Mercies, nor the Enmity of thy Nature make God thy Enemy.

Thirdly, Christ is employed in Heaven about this very Work of subduing thine Iniquities, he intercedes ever, and why? That this People might be sanctified by the Truth, Joh. 17. 17. That they might have more Grace, and the Spirit given out to mortify their Corruptions; he reigns in Heaven on purpose to bring down his and their Enemies, 1 Cor. 15. 25. He carries on the work of Redemption in Heaven, and what is that but to set his People free indeed: he hath an assured care now in Glory to fulfil his Promises, one of which is that Iniquity shall be subdued, Mic. 7. 18. Romans 6. 14.

Fourthly, Christ's promise to the Father, is security for the Destruction of thy Sin, he is engaged to present his people complete to the Father, Eph. 5. 27. and to keep them unblameable to his heavenly Kingdom, 1 Thes. 5. 23.

Fifthly, His Glory and Pleasure is concerned in the Death of thy Corruptions, Isa. 53. 10. The Pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. What is this Pleasure of the Lord? It is the Redemption of his People from the Tyranny of Sin, and the Slavery of Satan, into the glorious Liberty of the first born of Glory, 2 Thes. 1. 11, 12.

Lastly, Grace is of a prevailing Nature, and must destroy thy Lusts at last, and the Spirit of Grace is in his people, Mat. 12. 20. the Interest of Sin and Sinners cannot always stand before the Interest of God and his people, Esther 6. 13.

Fourthly, Here's Comfort to tempted Believers, such as are always dogged with filthy and frigh•ing Temptations, restlessly haunted with vile and blasphemous Thoughts, and miserably buffeted with dreadful and dangerous Suggestions: if Christ be interceding in Heaven, then surely he will one day or other, put an end to all the Temptations, and in the mean time over-rule them, that they shall not prevail over thee, 1 Cor. 10. 13. Heb. 2. 19. For in that he himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor those that are tempted. Christ is a merciful High-priest, and wants neither Knowledge, Bowels or Ability, which might render him capable to relieve the tempted; he hath the tempting Serpent, the roaring Lion in Chains, and will mercifully say to that proud one, come so far, and no farther.

Fifthly, Here's Comfort to God's people under their Afflictions and Sufferings in the World, or by the World; if Christ be interceding in Heaven for them, then surely he will not leave them comfortless in their Sufferings for him, Joh. 14. 8. chap. 16. 32. 33. Then Tribulation, nor Persecution, nor anything else can separate them from the Love of God in Christ, Rom. 8. 35. He that is for them is stronger than all that are against them, Jer. 31. He will be with them in the Fire and in the Water, Isa. 43. 2. Christ is never sweeter than when the World is most bitter to a Child of God; Afflictions can but file away the Rust and scour away the Filth, it cannot diminish the, Grace, nor injure the State of those that are interested in Christ's Mediation; Christ's Cordials are never better, than when his people are most faint and languishing: Christ in Heaven, laughs at the vain hopes of his Enemies, and will dash all their Attempts against himself and Interest in pieces, Psal. 2. 4, 9. He will strengthen his tired, distressed Servants under Sufferings, Isa. 42. 10. 2 Cor. 12. 9. His Arm is made bare, his Power displayed and his Strength made perfect in their Weaknesses, Psal. 27. 14. This may be the Trouble and dejecting Fears of some, how they shall hold out-in times of Trial. I am afraid (says one) I shall never bare Reproaches, Hatred, Bonds, Loss of Goods, and death for Christ, with a magnanimous and Gospel Spirit: Why Soul? It shall be given thee in that hour not only to believe, but to suffer for Christ, Phil. 1. 29. The Fury of the Adversary shall not terrify you, nor their rampent Rage deject your Courage. Isa. 35. 4.

Sixthly, Here's Comfort to such as are Mourners for Zion, and grieve at the Afflictions of God's People: That lament to see Christ's Interest on foot, and the Wicked on horse-back, Transgressors to prosper, and the Godly afflicted, that weep to behold Divine Providences thwarting his Promises. The Lord hath promised, that to Christ shall every Knee bow, and every Tongue confess. Men read of glorious things spoken of Zion; but when they look to the Interest of God, they see nothing but matter of trouble and grief. They look to the Earth, and behold Darkness and Confusions; they look to the Church of Christ, and lo, Decays and Dyings: Now this breeds trouble to the Friends of Christ, to see things run counter, and cross to expectation and promise: yet here is Comfort from the Intercession of Christ on this account. For,

First, The Lord Jesus sits at Helm, he is upon the Throne, and reigns as King forever; and this hath been the Faithful's Refuge and Support in the worst of Times, Psal. 10. 2. 4. 16. Psal. 29. 10. The Lord Jesus hath the Government of Nations, as well as of Zion, on his shoulders, Isa. 9. 6. Eph. 1. 22. He rules over all, Psal. 103. 19. His Kingdom ruleth over all. Men and Devils cannot wrest the Scepter out of his hands: In spite of all he is King of Zion, Psal. 2. 6. and his Government is maintained in all the Confusions that are on the Earth; and if so, there is no cause for the People of Christ to be dejected. Fear not, (said Caesar to his Mariners in a Storm)

Caesar is here. Why are ye so fearful, (said Christ to his Disciples, when trembling at their Dangers in a boisterous Storm) O ye of little Faith, Matth. 8. 26. That Vessel cannot miscarry that hath Christ at Helm, and if it could (said Luther) mallem ruere cum Christo quam regnare cum Caesare. I had rather perish with Christ than reign with Caesar.

Secondly, His Paths are in the deep waters, Psal. 77. 19. Thy way is in the Sea, thy paths are in the deep waters, and thy foot-steps are not known. The Psalmist alludes to that Providence of God in leading Israel through the red Sea; when Deaths were on every hand, God walked on those Waters, and made a way through them for his People. So Nah. 1. 3. The Lord hath his way in the Whirlwind, and in the Storm and the Clouds are the dust of his Feet. Those ways that men cannot stand up in, are God's usual walks, in which he leads on his Work and Interest. His ways are above our ways, and, In the Mount will the Lord be seen, Gen. 22. 14. His Providences, Ezek. 1. 16. are like a Wheel in the middle of a wheel, and a skain of Silk strangely entangled. When Israel was come near the Borders of the promised Land, they must be turned back again into the Wilderness, and wander up and down forty years in the Desarts: When Zion's Mercies were come to the Birth, they proved Abortive; Strange indeed is the Womb of Divine Providence, and seemingly contradictory to Humane Reason.

Thirdly, No cross Providences can hinder Christ's Work in the World: He hath purposed, and will perform it. Combinations of men, Psal. 2. 1, 2. the Gates of Hell, Matth. 16. 18. and the Powers of this World can no more impede the Success of Christ's Work, than the Barking of Dogs can hinder the Moon's passage to its Journey end, Isa. 43. 13. I will work, and who shall let it? Who art thou, O great Mountain, before Zerubbabel? thou shalt become a plain, Zach. 4. 7. He taketh up the Isles as a very slender thing; Isa. 40. 15. The Lord brings in his mightiness here, to comfort Israel under Discouragements, by reason of Difficulties in the way of their Mercy. *Comfort ye my People, saith the Lord, ver. 1. Tell her her warfare is accomplished, ver. 2. The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, ver. 5. O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength: Be not afraid of Dangers, preach my Word, be undaunted in my Service: Behold your God, ver. 9. He will come, and his Reward with him, ver. 10. He will feed his Flock like a Shepherd, v. 11. He will keep up his Word and Ordinances in spite of all opposition. Obj. But our Enemies are many. Ans. Why, he hath measured all the waters of opposition in the hollow of his hand, verse. 12. Obj. But all our wisdom cannot see how these great things should be brought about. Ans. Why, who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord? ver. 13. He wants not wisdom to accomplish his Work. Obj. But Nations and Islands combine against God's Israel. Answ. What if they do? they are no more to God than the drop of a bucket, and the dust of the Balance, ver. 15. Therefore, fear not, he will perform his Promises, and fulfil his Designs. Quest. Why, what hath he promised? Answ. He hath promised, that the stone cut out of the Mountain without hands, shall become a great Mountain, and break in pieces the Image of the Beast, Dan. 2. 35, 45. and that he will set up the Kingdom of his Son in the World, ver. 44. *Isa. 2. 2.

He hath promised Peaceful times to the Church of God, when the Sword shall be turned into Plowshares, Isa. 2. 4. Isa. 55. 13. Great shall be the peace of thy Children: None shall hurt or destroy in all God's holy Mountain, Isa. 65. 25. Ezek. 28. 24, Isa. 16. 18. Psal. 72. 9.

He hath promised times of Light and Knowledge, Isa. 11. 9. chap. 52. 8. ch. 54. 13. ch. 60. 19, 20.

He hath promised times of Holiness, Isa. 60. 21. ch. 4. 3. ch. 35. 8. Zech. 14. 20, 21.

He hath promised times of Union, Zech. 14. 9. Zeph. 3. 9. Ezek. 37. 19.

He hath promised times of Joy and Comfort to his Interest, Isa. 65. 13, 14. ch. 35. 10. ch. 25. 8.

He hath promised Enlargement to the Church, Isa. 2. 2. ch. 60. 8, 9, 13.

He hath promised Stability and Settlement, Isa. 54. 14. ch. 60. 20.

He hath promised Activity and Liveliness, Isa. 26. 19.

Fourthly, As those great and glorious things are spoken of Zion, so they shall certainly be accomplished in due time, Isa. 60. 22. Deut. 32. 35. The Vision is but for an appointed time, Hab. 2. 3. As the Things are appointed, so is the Time, beyond which God will not go one moment, Exod. 12. 41, 42. The self-same day; the Jewish Doctors say it was mid-day, as soon as one hundred and thirty years was out, to an hour, God fulfilled his Promise.

Lastly, God takes usually the most unlikely time to fulfill his Promises: As in Abraham, when his Body was dead, Gen. 18. 10, 11. Abraham and Sarah were sensible of an utter inability and unfitness in themselves for such a Mercy, yet then was the Promise fulfilled, Gen. 22. 14. So Israel were brought out of Egypt, when all things made against it; their Oppressions increased, Exod. 2. 23. chap. 5. 7, 8, 19. Pharaoh resolved not to let them go, Exod. 10. 27. and Moses charged to see his face no more, on pain of Death, chap. 10. 28. When God's time was come to bring Israel out of Babylon, they were as dry Bones, and said, Our hope is lost, we are cut off for our parts, Ezek. 37. 11, 12. Psal. 126. 1. Deut. 32. 36. Mic. 4. 10. Thou shalt go into Babylon, and there shalt thou be delivered. Before that glorious Salvation of the Jews in Shushan, under Ahasuerus, they were brought under a Sentence of Death, the Decree was sealed, and posted away, the time appointed for their destruction, and no possible hopes left of reversing it, Esth. 3. 12. to the end, compared with Chap. 8. So much for the Use of Consolation.

CHAP. VIII.

Containing an Use of Exhortation to Sinners and Saints.

IF the Lord Jesus Christ be such a Glorious Mediator, then,

First, Let perishing Sinners be persuaded to get an Interest in him: And for Motive herein, consider these four or five things.

First, The Lord Jesus will Mediate for, and save none but those that are his. Many common Mercies, Favors, and Boons he bestows on his Enemies, but Salvation-blessings are the privileges only of his People, Matth. 1. 21. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Luke 1. 68.

Secondly, Many will lay claim to Christ, who have no Interest in him, Luke 13. 25. High Pretenders may be shaken off, Math. 7. 22. chap. 25. 12. Some that shall think themselves something, may be found nothing; some that shall be thought Saints by others, may yet be cast away, 1 Joh. 2. 19. As Hymenaeus and Alexander, 1. Tim. 1. 20. The Galatians and scattered Saints, Gal. 1. 6. chap. 3. 3. 2 Pet. 1. 20. Rev. 8. 12. Nay the very Elect shall find it hard to stand, Matth. 24. 24.

Thirdly, There is but a time in which Christ may be found, Isa. 55. 6. Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; intimating, there is a time in which he will not, when the door will be shut, and Christ will speak, knock, and call no more; There is but a day of Grace, an hour of Salvation, O Sinner be not wise too late.

Fourthly, It is a most dreadful, tremendous thing, to leave the World without an Interest in Christ; to be summoned to Judgment and have nothing to help them, no Mediator to plead for them, no Righteousness to cover them, no Duties to accompany them, no Eye to pity them, Isa. 57. 12. chap. 30. 13. Jer. 5. 5. This is sad indeed, when all Bowels are gone, and boundless Miseries to be undergone.

Fifthly, Of all perishing Sinners, such as perish under the Gospel, have the most dreadful Miseries, Matth. 11. 21. 22. The Heathens and Pagans, Publicans and Harlots, shall have a more tolerable place in Hell, than such as refuse a tendered Jesus: How shall we escape, if we neglect so great Salvation? Heb. 2. 3. O miserable Sinners! sleight not, Salvation tenders, despise not, Gospel calls, but hasten away to this Redeemer.

Secondly, Let the People of God be exhorted, first to bless God for this Mediator, Eph. 1. 3. Christ is the Fountain of Blessings, the Author of Salvation, the Gift of God, and have you no Hosanna's for the Enjoyment of so rich a person? 1 Joh. 4. 9, 10.

Secondly, Ply hard the Throne of Grace, find Work for Christ, Heb. 4. 15, 16. Let us come boldly to the Throne of Grace, make known your Requests unto God, Phil. 4. 6. Consider Soul,

You have always need of Mercy; not a Moment but you want Supplies from God for Soul and Body: your Corruptions are always resisting the Spirit, Gal. 5. 17. never at peace with Grace, but as a Bow that is bent, are still pressing after their former Liberty, and as Waters pen'd back, are striving to force their way; therefore Christians, you always need the Spirit's help, and fresh Supplies of Grace: your Guilt is always increasing, James 3. 2. The Righteous falleth seven times a day, hence daily Sacrifices were appointed, because of daily Sins, Heb. 7. 27. Your Temptations are continually renewed, 1 Pet. 5. 8. New Trials are daily falling on you, new Difficulties are frequently occurring your Life, new Troubles and Afflictions are constantly betiding you.

This is God's appointed way, in which he will give out Mercy, Ezek. 36. 37. Matth. 7. 7. 'Tis true, sometimes God hears before we ask, but yet preventing Mercy doth not excuse from Duty, and we have no ground to expect Mercy out of the way of Duty.

You are invested with a holy Priest-hood, on purpose that you may be much employed in this Work, 1 Pet. 2. 5. Your Work and Offices lies in this, to offer up daily Sacrifices to God by Christ.

The Lord Jesus waits in Heaven to receive your Prayers, 'tis his Business and work in Glory, to pursue your Advantages, and therefore he expects to hear from you, 9. Heb. 24. As an Agent that expects to hear from his Client, and receive Intimation about his Condition; as a Friend in a foreign Country, that is hearkening for Letters from his Friend, Christ in Heaven desires to hear from his People on Earth; not that he is ignorant of them, or needs to be put in Remembrance, but this way are his Graces in them exercised, their Love and Duty maintained, and himself glorified, Isa. 30. 18. Therefore will the Lord wait that he may be gracious. In the Original it is, he longs and as it were, greedily and enlargedly desires an Occasion to be gracious; he waits in Heaven to be pu* in Remembrance to do his People good.

This way is their blessed Intercourse maintained betwixt Christ in Heaven, and Believers on Earth, by this Christ hears from them on Earth, and they from him in Heaven, Cant. 2. 14. chap. 8. 13, 14. Thou that dwellest in the Gardens, the Companions hearken to thy Voice, cause me to hear it: 'Tis, in the Original, Cause to hear me, which occasions a twofold reading. First, Cause me to be heard, they are Christ's Words to his Spouse, Let me be the Subject of thy Discourse to others. Secondly, Cause me to hear it, that is, let me be spoken to, let me hear thy Voice in Prayer, as a man desires to hear from his Wife, when absent; and in the next verse. She echo's back the same Request to Christ, that he would hasten his Return to her, that she might have his Company also: by Prayer Christ and Believers have sweet Intercourse with each other, Cant. 1. 7, 8. chap. 2. 5. 8.

The Lord Jesus is wonderfully delighted to hear from his People, Cant. 2. 14. chap. 4. 11. chap. 6. 13. Return, Return, O Shulamite, &c. This word Shulamite comes either from Solomon, and so her Husbands name is named on her, or from Salem, Peace, which is Jerusalem, showing her Descent to be from Jerusalem above; hence Christ desires her Company because it was pleasure to him to look upon her, her Countenance was as two Armies; it is in the Original, Mahanaim, the same word that Jacob puts on the place where God met him, Gen. 32. 1. 2. As if Christ should say, thy Sight is Angelical to me, though thou art impure in thyself, yet thou art fair in mine Eye.

'Tis a mighty thriving way: there's no such course can be taken to grow rich apace in divine Treasures; Prayer is the Key that opens Christ Treasury, and fetches out the Riches of Heaven, because such may have of God what they will, Joh. 15. 7. God is always giving where gracious Souls are rightly asking; God's readiness to give should be an Argument always to crave: as Sir Walter Raleigh when Q. Eliz. asked him when he would leave off begging, answered, when your Majesty leaves off giving.

Thirdly, Trust to an interceding Jesus, expect all your Mercies from him, Psal. 5. 3. In the Morning I will direct my Prayer to thee, and look up: the Arabic, and some other Versions have it, I will prepare or stand before him, and he will see me. But this agrees not with the Original, where 'tis, I will order or dispose my Prayer, as a General doth his Army, and will look out as a man that watches on a Tower, to see what I can espy and what Answer he will give. By a Metonymy, it signifies to expect or look for something, Matth. 22. 21. In his Name shall the Gentiles trust. The Lord Jesus is the sure and certain Object of a Believers Trust; O Christians! is Christ entered into Heaven, there to appear for his People? O then depend upon his Intercession, expect all your needed Mercies by him, take up your Acquiescence in his Mediation for you, rest satisfied (Believers) that your case is good, and it shall be well with you in every Condition, because Christ intercedeth for you. Now to strengthen your Dependance on Christ. Consider,

His Engagement to the Father to become your Advocate, Heb. 10. 9. Joh. 6. 39. His Promise to Believers to pursue their Cause in Heaven, Joh. 14. 16. And his full Accomplishments with whatever is needful to complete this Work. He is infinitely wise, and knows how to manage your Concerns and prosper, Col. 2. 3. He hath Skill and Counsel to finish his Affairs with Discretion; he knows your Cases better than yourselves, and what Arguments to plead so as to prevail, Psal. 103. 14. Joh. 2. 24. 25. Psal. 31. 7. Heb. 4. 13. Isa. 40. 27. 28. He is active and laborious; and quick at Work, as well as in Wisdom. Isa. 11. 3. He is still unwearied in his Business, and his Spirit never fails, Isa. 42. 4. His Eyes are always open, he never slumbers or sleeps, Psal. 121. 4. 1 Kin. 8. 29. Isa. 27, 3. He loseth no time, but takes the fittest Occasion to perfect his Designs, 1 Pet. 5. 6. He is faithful in his Undertakings, and one whom you may confide, Heb. 2. 17. His name is faithful, Rev. 19. 11. He is omnipotent and powerful to fulfil his Pleasure, Heb. 7. 25. The Almighty one who can prevail with the Father, and is one with him, Joh. 11. 42. chap. 10. 30. Consider Christ's Interest in his people, they are his own, John 13. 1. They are his Seed, Treasure, Jewels, Members, and Sheep, Joh. 10. 3. They are his Spouse, and therefore he cannot forget, or neglect their Concerns, Ephesians 5. 29. Isa. 58. 7.

Think on his Concernments in all the Affairs of his Interest; by virtue of that Union betwixt Christ and his People, he becomes a sharer with them in all their Conditions, their Mercies are his Delight, Psal. 35. 27. and their Afflictions are his Trouble, Isa. 63. 9. He sympathizeth with them as the head with the Members, and the Husband with the Spouse; their loss is his Loss, and their Gain he reckons as his Interest. Should Saints and their Concernments miscarry at last, Christ himself would be a certain and eternal Looser: he would loose his Blood, and purchase, his Obedience and Sufferings.

Lastly, Consider, Christ's Glory consists in the Good and Salvation of Believers, 2 Thes. 1. 12. His Glory is wrapped up in their Glory, and his Life in their Life, Joh. 14. 19. 2 Cor. 8. 23. Joh. 17. 10.

Fourthly, acknowledge the Intercession of Christ to be the procuring Cause of all your Mercies; in every Reception of Mercy see an Interceding Jesus, and say Lord, 'tis thy Mediation I owe these Enjoyments, Privileges, and Prayer-returns unto, Luke 22. 32. Psal. 115. 1. Pro. 3. 6. In all thy ways acknowledge him. This is to pay Tribute to Christ in Heaven, and advance the Glory of the blessed Mediator; this is giving Christ his Due, Rom. 13. 7. and a sacrificing to God and not to your Dreg; as it is Christ in Believers is the Hope of Glory, so it is Christ in Heaven is the Hope and Procurer of Mercy.

Fifthly, If Christ be your Advocate in Heaven, then follow his Instructions on Earth, Matth. 17. 5. He that commits his Cause to another, commits himself to his Counsel also to be guided by him in everything, that might conduce to his Success in it; Christ's work in Heaven is to order and regulate his People on Earth, and therefore he is the Law-giver, and King as well as Savior, Isa. 33. 22. Jam. 4. 12. and the Duty of all Christ's Clients on Earth, is to live by his Prescription and Order given them; and therefore 'tis said, Numb. 21. 18. The Princes digged the Well, even the Nobles of the People, digged it by the Direction of the Law-giver. This is spoken of that famous Well Beer-Elim: that is, the Well of the mighty ones, that God gave Israel in the Wilderness: it was alone the Gift of God, verse 16. I will give them Waters, yet they must dig for it, as here; and that according to Prescription, as Moses gave them from the Lord: This well was a Figure of Christ, as the Hebrews themselves, in their Midrash Koheleth do acknowledge, as (say they) The first Redeemer caused a Well to spring up, so the last Redeemer shall cause Waters to spring up; as 'tis said, Joel 3. 18. A Fountain shall come forth from the House of the Lord, and shall water the Valley of Shittim; which signified the Graces of the Spirit, that Well of Water springing up to Life eternal, Joh. 4. 14.

Sixthly, Become Advocates for Christ on Earth, confess his name. Rom. 14. 11. chap. 15. 9. Phil. 2. 11. Plead his cause before men, Hos. 2. 2. Plead with your Mother. This is spoken to the pious in Israel (as Jonathas Caldaeus, Jerome, and others conceive) who are the men, and the whole House of Israel their Mother, and their pious Children must plead, that is, expostulate, reason, and contend with her for God to bring her to the Sense of her Sin and Danger; the Lord Jesus underwent all dangers in owning your Cause, so should you in his: he always intercedes for you, so should you for him in Word and Deed; your Lives and Lips should plead for him: He pleads effectually for you, so should you labor to be as successful as you may for him, Joh. 3. 29. and in order to the Discharge of this important Duty, consider,

That the suitable Qualifications of an Advocate must be acquired, you must get Wisdom to know Christ and the things of his Will, Kingdom, and Glory, you are not likely to do much Service to Christ's Interest, if you are ignorant and unacquainted with his Laws and Concernments, Mic. 6. 8. Col. 1. 9, 10. 2 Pet. 3. 18. Matth. 10. 16. Phil. 1. 9. Eph. 1. 17. You must be active and vigorous for God, Rom. 12. 11. Slothful Spirits are not like to be much serviceable, Prov. 27. 15. Eccles. 10. 18. chap. 9. 10. Heb. 6. 11, 12. You must be faithful, and have Truth in the inner parts, Rev. 2. 10. 1 Cor. 4. 2. Luke 12. 42. You must labor after Potency and Mightiness through Christ, that you may prevail for him, Phil. 4. 13. 1 Chro. 22. 13. 1 Cor. 16. 13. Now the way to get this Strength for Christ, is by Faith to live on him, Eph. 6. 10. 2 Tim. 2. 1.

You must make a thorough and open Profession of him, and of all his Truth, 1 Tim. 6. 12, 13, 14. Heb. 4. 14. 2 Cor. 9. 13. profess him at all times, Matth. 10. 32. profess him openly, plainly, sincerely, and boldly, so did the Apostles.

You must patiently, persevere under all Sufferings for him, Acts 21. 13. 2 Tim. 2. 10. Heb. 10. 32.

You must speak well for Christ at all times, Mat. 11. 19. Cant. 5. 10. 1 Pet. 2. 9.

You must live out his Glory, Math. 5. 16. Phil. 2. 15. 2 Cor. 9. 13.

Thus have we done with the Applicatory part of this Point, and dispatched the wonderful Riches of Christ, as to his personal Union.

CHAP. IX.

Opening somewhat of the sweet Dispositions of Christ, viz. His Goodness, Love, and the Riches thereof, as to the kind, Fruits, and Effects of it.

I Am now come to the third particular, wherein we shall make a Discovery of the Riches of Christ, as they consist in his excellent and sweet Dispositions as Mediator, with those precious Graces and Endowments in him, which will much illustrate the personal Riches of Christ, and be of wonderful Encouragement both to Saints and Sinners, to think better of him, and to hasten after a Dependance on him.

Now the first thing we shall treat of, is the goodness of his Nature: He is Goodness itself, Psal. 34. 8. O taste and see that the Lord is good: This Psalm was pen'd by David, when he was driven from Achish, and was in sore danger of his Life; in this Condition, he seeks the Lord, and found help, by reason of the Goodness of God, that is, God in Christ; indeed there is Creation-Goodness, and providential-Goodness, but the choicest is his Redemption-goodness, that Goodness which he lets out to poor Sinners in a Mediator. Thus is Jesus Christ the Gift of his best Love, and is qualified, and disposed to commend the infinite Goodness of God to perishing Sinners: his Goodness is great, Zac. 9. 17. called the Riches of his Goodness, Rom. 2. 4. Now this goodness of Christ appears.

First, In it's Extensiveness, he is good to all, Mans goodness is contracted and narrow, its greatest Proportion reacheth but a few, none but Friends, Relations, and such as may oblige or requite them, are usually Sharers in it; but the goodness of Christ is immense, it reacheth to all the work of his hands, Psal. 145. 9. The Lord is good to all, by him all things consist, Col. 1. 17. He upholdeth all things by the word of his Power, Heb. 1. 3. The very vilest, and most unworthy Grace-abusing Soul have some kind of share in Christ's Goodness; he upholds his very Enemies, and maintains the Being and Enjoyment of such as oppose him.

Secondly, In it's Invincibleness; all the Provocations of his Enemies cannot impede it's designed current, he is resolved they shall have a share in his Mercy, though they oppose their own Mercies; nay all the Unkindness of his people cannot conquer it, nor many Waters quench it: He maketh his Sun to shine upon the good and bad, Math. 5. 45. It's strange to think how rare a portion of Mercy the wicked have in their day; he that cried Father forgive them they know not what they do, cries Father spare them to see what they will be.

Thirdly, It's Freeness; 'tis not extracted, but flows out of it's own Accord, Isa. 65. 24. Before they call, I will answer, &c. It hath no Creature-merit to provoke it, Exek. 16. 6. I said unto thee, when thou wast in thy Blood, live, when there was no Beauty to attract it, no desires to draw it forth: man's Worthyness is no ground for the Communication of Christ's Goodness, what Loveliness had the Ephesians to deserve it's liberal Effusions? Eph. 2. 1.

Fourthly, 'tis unwearied, enduring Goodness, it hath not the Shallowness of a slender Vessel, which is easily emptied, but the Unfathomableness of the Ocean that can never be exhausted: the vast Expences and Communications of it, from the Creation of the World to it's final Destruction, will not diminish it one Iota; his Anger indeed hath but a momentary Continuance, Psal. 30. 5. But his Goodness endureth forever, Psal. 52. 1.

Fifthly, 'Tis Communicative goodness, running over, flowing down, and liberally diffusing itself for the good of others; so 'tis defined to be a Virtue by which a person of his own accord is abundantly prone to acts of Benignity: Christ's Goodness is manifestative, distributive, and it's Dispensations are as natural as the irradiating Beams of the Sun.

Secondly, Another excellent Disposition in Christ, is his Love, not only his Phylanthropy, or good Will he bears to all men, and the Desire he hath of their Salvation, Ezek. 33. 11. But his 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 his special Love, from 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 valde & 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 acquiesco, such an ardent Affection hath the heart of Christ, for a person adhering to him, that it greatly acquiesces in, and is fully contented with him, Eph. 2. 4. Such is the Sweetness of Christ's Nature, that it is full of Love, God is Love, 1 John 4. 16. And as the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you, Joh. 15. 9. Now this Love of Christ to his people, is,

First, A supreme Love, the chiefest Love, he hath a love of Benevolence to all, Mark 10. 21. He beheld the young man and loved him; but the Love he bears his own, is transcendent, and exceeds the Love of men and Angels, Joh. 15. 13.

Secondly, An infinite Love, Love that passeth all Knowledge, exceedeth all Dimensions, Eph. 3. 18. Christ's Love (saith one) hath Length in it, because he loved his Elect from Eternity to Eternity; O unmeasurable Length that hath no end! his Love hath Breadth in it, because not the Jews only, but the Gentiles also, are sharers in it; 'tis extended to the whole World, Math. 28. 19. It hath depth in it, because it brought him down into the Deeps, not only of the Earth, but of unconceivable Sufferings: It brought him as low as the Grave, yea to the very Borders of Hell, Isa. 53. 3. It hath height in it, because it ascended far above all Heavens, that he might fill all in all, become our Advocate there, prepare us for it, and it for us, and at last takes us up to himself, that we may behold his Glory.

Thirdly, An eternal Love, Jer. 31. 3. I have loved thee with an everlasting Love. All Creature-affections have their Beginning and End, their Risings and Settings, but the Love of Christ is as himself, everlasting, Rev. 1. 13. The transiency of his people's Love, cannot injure its permanency, for where he loves, he loves to the end, Joh. 13. 1.

Fourthly, An unchangeable Love, it hath no Ebbings and Flowings, Waxings and Waneings, Risings and Fallings, but is th• same Yesterday, to Day, and forever, Heb. 13. 8. It knows no Alteration, Addition, or Diminution: the Heavens shall wax old as a Garment, and be changed, Heb. 1. 11. 12. But Christ and his Love is invariable, Mal. 3. 6. 'Tis true, the Manifestations of his Love is mutable, (he may smile today, and frown tomorrow) but not the nature of it; the Cisterns may be dry but not the Fountain.

Fifthly, A free Love, it hath no Consideration of Creature-merit, foreseen Faith, or persevering Holiness, Hos. 14. 4. I will heal their Back-slidings, and love them freely. What reason can be given, that of the same Lump should be made one Vessel of Honor, and another of Dishonor; nay that persons of the most exquisite Abilities, natural Endowments, unspotted Moralities, and uncontrollable Sovereignty, should be rejected, and left to the hardness of their Heart, and the righteous Judgment of God, and that others of the meanest parts, inconsiderable Qualifications, prodigiously vicious Lives and miserable Penury, should be elected to the highest Privileges, received into the most intimate Communion, and made partaker of the highest Glory?

Sixthly, The Spring and Fountain of all that Love that is in Believers to God and one another, Creature-affections are but streams derived from this Ocean, Candles lighted at this Sun: We love him because he first loved us, 1 John 4. 19. The ascending Love of Saints is a faint Reflection of the descending Love of Christ; the same Waters that empty themselves into the Sea, have their Birth from it.

Seventhly, An active love, Creature-affections are dull and sluggish, and savor rankly of the Vessel they are in, but Christ's are vigorous and laborious; a parental Love, that sets his Wisdom on designing, his Faithfulness on securing, and his Power on accomplishing the chiefest Concernments, and highest good of his Children.

Lastly, a fruitful Love, full of good Works, 'tis commended love, Rom. 5. 8. manifested love, 1 John 4. 9. Not love in the Womb, or abortive, but love in the Birth: I shall name some of it's Fruits to his People.

First, the giving of himself for them, Eph. 5. 25. Who loved me, and gave himself for me, Gal. 2. 20. This is the highest Testimony of his Love imaginable, he could not have bestowed a better thing; he that gives himself, gives all. He gave himself to procure a purchased Treasure to enrich them, to destroy the partition Wall, and fill up that bottomless Gulf, that lay in their way to glory: he gave himself to discharge their Debts, remove their Guilt, justify their Persons fulfil all Righteousness, and make good the new Covenant.

Secondly, The opening of his heart to them, John 15. 14, 15. I have called you Friends, for all that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you: O! the wonderful Love and Kindness of Christ to his People, that he communicates his Secrets, and opens to them the Thoughts of his Heart from all Eternity; he leads them into his retired Chambers and secret Recesses, and feasts them liberally with hidden Manna, and excellent Discoveries of the things freely given them of God: Saints cannot ascend up into Heaven, and see the Length Depth, Breadth and Height of those glorious things God hath prepared for them, but they have the Privilege to wade deep into sanctuary Waters, and the Spirit of Grace is freely given them to reveal the Depths of divine Love.

Thirdly, The Communication of all good things to them, He will give Grace and Glory, and no good thing will he withhold, Psa. 84. 11. Psal. 34. 10. O boundless Love indeed! he may bestow some sublunar Portions on his Enemies, but his Children only shall have the Inheritance, they shall have his Wisdom to direct them, his Goodness to supply them, his Power to protect them, and his Spirit to instruct them, Joh. 16. 13. 14. And O what a wonderful Gift is the Spirit; he will show them their Duty, reprove them for their Sin, answer their Doubts, clear up their Way, and enlighten them in their Darkness: he will open their Hearts, enlarge their Souls, regulate their Wills, illuminate their Minds, and sanctify their Persons; he will communicate Counsel, reveal Christ, discover their Inheritance, and seal them up to the day of Redemption.

Fourthly, His minding and pursuing all their Concerns in Heaven, the Business Believers have in another Country where they cannot come is very weighty; they need Receptions of more Grace every day, Strength against Corruption, Wisdom in their Difficulties, Patience in their Sufferings, and Faith in their Temptations; now Christ doth agitate their Cause, becomes their Factor, and dispatches their Work, Exod. 28. 29. Heb. 7. 25. Isa. 49. 15. 16.

Fifthly, His gracious Presence with them, Joh. 14. 18. I will not leave you comfortless, Heb. 13. 5. Jer. 32. 40. 2 Cor. 6. 16, He may hide his face for sometime, and suspend the gracious light of his Countenance: he may stand behind the Wall, and step behind the Curtain, yet these are but momentary, not continual, and imaginary, not real.

Sixthly, His bearing with them, and forbearing of them, 1 Cor. 13. 7. Charity beareth all things, it cannot easily be overloaded: what gross Indignities and abusive Injuries doth Christ patiently receive from the hands of his People? Amos 2. 13. Psal. 95. 10.

Seventhly, His thinking often and well of them, and his being a Friend to their Friends, and an Enemy to their Enemies: where a man's Affections are there will his Thoughts be also; the Adulterers Thoughts are on his Uncleaness, the worldly man's on his Treasures, and the Ambitious on his Honors, but Christ's are on his People, Isa. 43. 4. They are his Hephzibah's, the delight of his Soul, his Jewels and Treasures, Isa. 62. 4. Mal. 3. 17. He esteems their Enemies as his, Exod. 23. 29. and favors their Friends with peculiar Blessings, Exod. 1. 20. Gen. 39. 5.

Eighthly, His being troubled with their Troubles, and delighted with their Welfare, Joh. 11. 33. 35, 36. when the Lord Jesus came to raise Lazarus from the dead, and saw Mary weeping, and the Jews that were with her, 'tis said, He groaned in Spirit, and was troubled: nay when he came to the place where Lazarus lay, he wept; whereupon the Jews said, Behold how he loved him, and his Heart is the same now in Heaven, Isa. 63. 9. True love will suffer in the Trials of it's Friend, Acts 9. 4. hence the Afflictions of Saints are called the Afflictions of Christ, Col. 1. 24. what Hester said concerning her people, may be more truly spoken by Christ, Hester. 8. 6. How can I endure to see the Evil that shall come upon my people. He is grieved at the Evil of their Sins or Sufferings, Mark. 3. 5. Eph. 4. 13. and takes wonderful Pleasure in their Welfare, Poov. 8. 31. no tender parent can more earnestly desire the Happiness, and rejoice in the Advantages of his Children, than Jesus Christ in his, Psal. 147. 11. If the Joy of his Ambassadors doth much depend upon the Prosperity of the Souls of their Auditors, 3 Epist. Joh. ver. 4. Then surely himself is not altogether unconcerned.

Lastly, His preparing a Heaven for them, John 14. 2, 3. In my Fathers House are many Mansions, I go to prepare a place for you, &c. The Lord Jesus knows that his departure from the World with the sad Consequences thereof, would breed great Trouble in the Hearts of his Disciples; therefore labors to prevent it, by telling them of the occasion of his Departure, that it was for their sakes, and in their business; and though the World would abuse them when he was gone, and cast them out of their House and Country, yet he tells them, he had a Father in Heaven that would receive them, and he was going thither to prepare a place for them, and there was store of room for them in Heaven. The word, translated Mansion here, signifies, an abiding, fixed place. Here you dwell in Tabernacles, but in Heaven are places for you, out of which you shall never be turned more. Don't expect much Happiness in the World, but look to Heaven for all your satisfying Comforts: There's a Rest for you, after all your wearying Duties and Troubles; there are pleasant Habitations, after all your Wilderness Journeyings: There's a large dwelling-place; here you are thrust into corners, and may be have little conveniencies in your Houses: Here you dwell in Strangers, and perhaps, Enemies Houses, but there your dwelling shall be in your Father's House. 'Tis really so, I do not flatter you with vain hopes, or feed you with false reports: if it were not so, I would have told you. Some might object here, That there may be Houses in Heaven, and yet they in Hell. No (says Christ) I go to prepare a place for you; when I come to Heaven, I will bespeak a House for you, it shall be your own, your own proper Right, everyone of you, and of all my People, shall have a House of their own, and it shall be free simple, theirs to all Eternity. But some may say, How shall we be sure of this, that when we die we shall have a place in Glory? Why, saith Christ, As sure as I go to Heaven, shall you have a Mansion there; for, 'tis one end of my going thither; 'tis part of my business there, I go to prepare a place for you. (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) This word, saith Grotius, notes a Divine Appointment, a place that God allots and appoints for you: that you might not think it is procured by your own Merit and labors. As if he should say, you may be sure, my People, you shall not miss of a place in my Father's House, because he hath given you a house in Heaven, and I go to possess it for you, and to make it sure: My Father hath given it, and I have purchased it, and now I go to take it into my own hand for you: yea, to fit and suit your Lot in Heaven, as may be most meet for you, and as may bear a full proportion to all your Labors, and Sufferings for me. And thus the word likewise imports (saith Dr. Preston) to fit and fashion one, as a Vessel is fashion'd and shap'd to its proper Use. But Believers may urge, Lord, how shall we get thither? the Journey is far, the Way we know not; many Dangers lie betwixt this and Heaven; the Prince of the Air, and all the Devils of Hell lie betwixt this and Glory; and how shall we get safely through all these Dangers? Why, saith Christ, I will come again and receive you, when I have done your Work in Heaven, when I have dispatched my gathering, and completing work on Earth, when all my Saints are called and perfected, then will I come again, and receive you to myself; I will come and unite your Souls and Bodies together, and then will show you the way to Heaven, and lead you into your own habitations there, and as surely put you into possession of Glory, as I am going to possess it for myself; and in the mean time, I will take care of you in the way, and send my Spirit to guide you, and bear you thorough it, and my Angels, when you are at your Journeys end, shall receive your Souls, and bring them unto me, that where I am you may be also, Joh. 17. 24. Joh. 12. 26. What greater Love can there be than the Engagements of Christ's Heart, to get all his Children brought home to Heaven, that they may be ever with him, and partake of his Glory, 1 Cor. 15. 22, 23.

CHAP. X.

Several Deductions drawn from the Love of Christ.

IF the Lord Jesus be so full of Love and tender Affection: then,

First, What reason have Sinners never to be quiet, till the Lord Jesus become their Friend, till they have an Interest in his special Love. Alas, poor Souls▪ the common Love of Christ, though now you fare the better for it, will shortly be at an end: His Philanthropy, though precious, yet is but like a Box of Ointment, which may be wasted and consumed, Mark, 14. 4. But his special Love is like the two Olive Trees, Zach. 4. 12. always emptying out itself through the golden Pipes of his Ordinances to his People: Christ's common Love to Sinners, is like a Land-flood, that will be drained: But his special Love is compared to a Fountain, a Wood of Water that springeth up to Life Eternal. O then labor after an Interest in this Love of Christ, that brings Salvation: Put away the Evil of thy doings, hearken to Christ's counsel, receive him into thy Heart by Faith; obey his Voice, take him to be thy Lord and God, and thou shalt possess his love too, Psal. 45. 10.

Secondly, Then what an abominable thing is it to hate Christ? how inexcusable will Sinners Enmity against him be when he comes to Judgment, Jer. 2. 5. Prov. 8. 36. All they that hate me love Death, Psal. 21. 8, 9. Psal. 132. 18. Nah. 1. 2.

3dly, Then why should Believers take up such hard thoughts of Christ? Isa. 40. 27. Why sayest thou, O Jacob, my way is hid from the Lord, and my Judgment is passed over from my God? that is, my Condition, my trouble, my Soul is out of God's thoughts: He takes no notice of, nor cares what becomes of me: And my Judgment; that is, God's judging my Cause, his righting and helping my oppressed Soul, is gone from me, or he hath laid it aside, he will not help me in my Affliction. This was Zion's complaint, and hard thoughts of God, and this displeased him; Why sayest thou, O Jacob, &c? As if he should say, what cause hast thou, O Israel, my People, to entertain such harsh conceptions of my Love? what Iniquity hast thou found in me? what wrong have I done thee? Have I not born thee from the Womb, and carried thee all the days of old? Look back to the Red Sea, and to the Wilderness, who cared for thee there? Call to mind the Manna, and the Rock, the Bread and Water on the Way; I suffered none to do thee harm, I delivered thee out of the hands of all thy Enemies, and plagued them that injured thee: Thus have I been thy help from thy Youth up, and why sayest thou then, my way is hid from the Lord? O Jacob, thou dost ill to censure me so severely; Is this the requital of all my love and kindness to thee hitherto? Repent of these injurious apprehensions, and put more favorable constructions on my ways; Gracious Souls have no reason to prejudge the Heart of Christ, and censure him of unkindness and negligence: for 'tis impossible he should forget his People, Isa. 49. 15. He hath paid too dear for them to do so: They have cost his Blood, Eternal Counsels, many Troubles, many Wonders, and will he reject them after all? O no. He hath engraven them on the Palms of his hands, where he cannot but see, and must secure their names, Isa. 49. 16. I cannot look upon my hands, but I must remember thee: I should forget myself, should I forget thee: thou art set as a Seal upon my Heart, and thy Walls are continually before me: that is, though thy Protection be gone for a time, and I have left thee to the Will of thine Enemies, yet I will redeem and secure thee, I will raise up thy Walls, and re-establish thy State, for thy Walls are before me, though thou seest them not, I can and will preserve them; thou art Weak, but I am strong, I faint not though thou faintest, I am never weary though thou art tired, and as sure as I have Strength, I will give it thee; they that wait on the Lord shall renew their Strength, Isa. 40. 28. Again, you cannot see the way to get out of your Troubles, your Wisdom is non-plust, but mine is not so; There is no searching of my Understanding: O then do not give up thy Hopes O Jacob, or conclude I have forgotten thee: He hath promised he will not cast off his People, nor leave them comfortless, 1 Sam. 12. 22. Joh. 14. 18. And he is not as a man that he should lie, &c. Numb. 23. 19. He hath given them his Seal to it, 2 Cor. 1. 22. Eph. 4. 30. Nothing can separate his love from them, Rom. 8. 35. 38, 39.

Object. But I am afraid I am none of Christ's, nor have the Spirit, because of the Filthiness, Obdurateness, and Irregularity of my Heart.

Answer, If ever thou hadst the Spirit, thou hast it still, John 4. 14. Isa. 59. 21. Gracious Souls may sometimes seem to themselves to be carnal, and sold under Sin, Rom. 7. 14. They may not see any good thing dwell in them, ver. 18. but be like to the slain that lie in the Grave, Psal. 88. 5. So Heman thought himself one free among the dead, whom the Lord would remember no more: in the Winter there's little visible difference between the living and the dead Tree; neither is there betwixt a Saint and a Sinner in time of Desertion and Temptation: God's Children may be led captive by Sin, and brought into Bondage by their Lusts, Rom. 7. 23. and then 'tis hard to say, how unlike they are to them that never knew God; and therefore Christian judge not thyself by thy changeable Frames, if thou dost not repent of thy Change, thy leaving thy old Courses and choosing God and Grace, a Corinth. 7. 10. If thou dost not approve of any Sin, or secretly love thy filthy ways, Romans 7. 15. 20. If thy Heart be discontented with thy state of backsliding, and longeth after a return to thy resting place, then thou art gracious, Jer. 31. 18. Psal. 14. 7. If thou dost find a War betwixt thy Members and thy Mind, the Law of the Spirit of Life warring against the Law of Sin and Death, thy state is good, Rom. 7. 21, 22 23. Gal. 5. 17. The Plesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the Flesh, and these are contrary one to the other. (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) The word notes a vehement and continued Desire, a Desire which is still in Action, and working till we have it accomplisht, not a sudden Motion or momentary Passion. Look how Corruption and Lust works against Grace, so doth Grace against Corruption, for these two are contrary, (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) the one lays Seige against the other, as a Soldier in a Trench against a Fort. Now if it be so with thy Soul, that thou findest in it two parties, as Twins in the Womb opposing each other, and dost experience something in thy Will against Sin, as well as for it, and something in thy Affections, an Enemy to thy Corruptions as well as a Friend; if thou longest as much for Freedom from Sin as from Hell, and thy Heart cannot be at peace whilst the Body of Sin remains in thee, then lift up thy head, O Soul, Judgment shall be brought forth to Victory, and the top stone shall in due time be laid with shouting, Grace, Grace! to it.

Fourthly, Then you that are Christ's, take heed you abuse not his Love, Rom. 6. 15. What then? Shall we sin because we are not under the Law but under Grace? God forbid. That is, shall we yield our Souls to the Service of Sin, as verse. 16. or give a willing Consent to the Commission of it? God forbid; That is, far be it from us, noting it to be a vile and abominable thing, to Sin under Grace, and against Grace; this is a most disingenuous thing to abuse love, and requite Evil for Good: it is most unjust to injure him that loveth you, 'tis a costly Sin, and will have a bitter reckoning at last, 'tis a Spot notoriously like the Spot of Reprobation, Jude, v. 4. But if it may consist with Grace, yet it will break your Bones, and scourge you soundly e're God hath done; what did David, Solomon, and Peter, get by abusing divine Love?

Fifthly, Admire Christ's love, his love is admirable passing Knowledge, you use to admire things that are strange, and beyond your reach, but what more miraculous and unparellel'd than this, That the Lord of Glory who hath Angels at his Service, should set his Affections on poor polluted Dust and Ashes, on Fleas and Worms, as Abraham and David acknowledged themselves to be, that so illustrious a person as the Lord Jesus should fall in love with so deformed a piece as man, in whom was neither Beauty nor Riches, Virtue nor Honor, and be enamored of him so greatly, as to take him into his Bosom, and a conjugal Relation with himself; 'tis so stupendous a Miracle, that 'tis said, he shall be admired of all that believe when he comes, 2 Thes. 1. 10. O Christians gather in all your Valuations from Creatures, for your Creator and Redeemer, Isa. 63. 1.

Sixthly, Adventure on the Love of Christ, swim on these deep Waters, roll yourselves on these divine Depths, and confide in his new Covenant love, for 'tis unchangeable love to the end; many waters cannot quench it, Cant. 8. 7. Trust his Love (I say) in the way of Obedience, Joh. 14. 21. 23. If his love be free, then 'tis not for your sake, Deut. 7. 17. Not for your Beauty or Holiness, but for his own good Pleasure, Of his own Will begat he us, Jam. 1. 18. He loves you Believers, because you are his own, Joh. 13. 1. And because it hath pleased him to make you his people, 1 Sam. 12. 22. If he loves those that love him, then surely he will kindly resent the Ardency of thy Affections to him; O adventure on this Love.

Seventhly, love him who hath so loved you, 1 Joh. 4. 19. Psal. 31. 23. O love the Lord all ye his Saints. The Reason is laid down from the 19. verse to this, O how great is thy Goodness which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee, &c. The greatness and Excellency of Christ's Love deserves yours; O love him at all times, and in all things, with a free, supreme, steady, rational, and expressed love.

Lastly, Be full of love to others for Christ's sake, Eph. 5. 2. Walk in Love as Christ also hath loved you, 1 Joh. 4. 11. Love all men, such a love is in God, he loved the World, Joh. 3. 16. and every Creature in it; such a Philanthropy is in Christ, he would have all men come to the Knowledge of the Truth, that they might be saved, 1 Tim. 2, 4. Love your Enemies, Mat. 5. 44. so did Christ: he prayed, Father forgive them, Luke 23. 34. love his Friends, 1 Joh. 5. 1. Eph. 6. 24.

CHAP. XI.

The glorious Excellency of Christ's tender Pity opened and displayed in the several Acts of it, both to Saints and Sinners.

ANother Discovery of the Sweetness of Christ's Disposition is,

Thirdly, His Pity, this is looked upon as an excellent Qualification, and that which renders a person lovely among men, Rom. 5. 7. For scarcely for a righteous man will one die, yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die: for a just man, one that is strict and rigid in his Life and matters of Justice, none will die; but for a good man, that is, for a bountiful, liberal man, for a Benefactor (saith Beza) for a Friend (saith another) some would even dare to die; Kindness and Compassion renders men lovely and amiable in the Sight of Heathens: hence one calls a merciful man a precious thing, and another makes him equal to God, God himself prefers Mercy above Sacrifice, Mat. 9. 13. This the Lord opened to Moses as part of his Glory, Exod. 34. 6. The Lord God merciful and gracious, &c. And this mercifulness is placed in the Nature of Christ, as Mediator, and therefore must needs render him glorious, and be part of his unsearchable Riches: now that the Lord Jesus is so full of Pity and Mercy in his very Nature, the Scripture is clear. This was one Qualification necessary to his Priesthood, Heb. 2. 17. This was a special Requisite to the Priest under the Law, that he should be one who might have Compassion on the Ignorant, and them that are out of the way, Heb. 5. 2. Therefore the high-priest must be a Man, not an Angel, that so he being subject to Infirmities, to Sins, and Weaknesses himself, he might the better have Compassion upon others in the like ease. The same Argument the Lord useth to Israel, Deut. 10. 19. Love ye therefore the Stranger, for ye were Strangers in the Land of Egypt. Experience of Affliction fits a person for pity to others, and therefore, our Lord took our Nature upon him, that being compassed with the same Infirmities (Sin only excepted) he might be able to have Compassion on others: this is necessary in that Office, for a person will never be active in such laborious work for Sinners, as offering of Gifts and Sacrifices for Sin, if he have not tender Bowels towards persons in Misery: and therefore Jesus Christ must needs be such a one, who can have Compassion, &c. The word is significant, 'tis in the Original (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) to have Compassion on others according to the Measure and Proportion of their Misery: Pareus renders it, to have Compassion as much as is needful; Beza, to be affected according to the greatness of another's Misery, and such is the Compassion of Christ, 'tis suited to the Condition of his People: were Christ's Pity but one Grain short of the Misery and Condition of Sinners, he could never save them to the utmost; for if he will save to the uttermost, he must ever live to make Intercession; there's no one moment of time, in which they do not want help, and must have Gifts offered for them: But this Christ will not do, if he wants Compassion, Jam. 5. 11. The Lord is said to be pitiful, and of tender mercies (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) of many Bowels; or, as Piscator, multum visceralis; much bowelful, all pitiful, from inward deep Bowels (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) The word is to pity with the Bowels of a Mother, to be prone to compassion: So Aestius; He is rich in mercy, Eph. 2. 4. Great in Quantity, and Choice in Quality, great Mercy, and choice Mercy, Psal. 5. 1. According to the multitude of thy tender mercies. The word Rab, multitude, signifies Quality as well as Quantity: many Mercies, or weighty Mercies: Mercies; Rachamim: 'Tis such love and pity as Mothers bear to the fruit of their Womb, which is fervent and flaming. The word hath no singular number, because there are many works of Mercy, saith Piscator.

Now this Compassion of Christ lies in these two things.

- 1. In his sympathizing with his Creatures.
- 2. In supplying and supporting them.

First, Pity hath sympathy in it: an inward Heart-affecting sense of another's Evils, Psal. 103. 13. Like as a Father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him, Judge. 10. 16. His Soul was grieved for the Children of Israel. The word signifieth, His Soul was short'ned, or contracted in him, by reason of grief. 'Tis spoken by an Anthropopathy, according to the apprehensions of men: As a man is filled with grief, his Breast is straitened, that he can scarcely breathe; It denotes how much the Lord Jesus is affected with the miseries of his People, Heb. 4. 15. He is said to be touched with the Fellow-feeling of our Infirmities, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , suffering with us. Christ, in Heaven, hath such a fellow-feeling of the Evils of his People, as that he resents their troubles as his own. He is tender-hearted, and every misery of theirs reacheth his Soul. But this hath been somewhat treated of before.

Secondly, Readiness to supply, and support others in their Misery; and this is eminently manifested in the Lord Jesus, Isa. 38. 20. The Lord was ready to save me. Men sometimes have a hand, but no heart; they may help, but will not; they only say, Go and be fed, and be clothed, &c. Others have a heart, but no hand; they have not to supply the needs of others; their Cruse of Oil, and Barrel of Meal will reach but a little way: besides, there may be some Cases in which Men or Angels cannot help, Psal. 142. 4. I looked on my right hand, and behold, there was no man would know me, &c. But there can be no Condition in which Omnipotency fails to help, Heb. 7. 25. Jer. 32. 27. And Christ is as really willing as able to save: He is an inexhausted Fountain of all good. Sufficit omnibus (saith Pareus) nec sufficit tantum, sed dat liberalissime. Dives est (saith the same Author) sufficiencia & affectu: He is good, and doth good: He feeds, gathers, carries, leads, his poor infirm Flocks, when they most stand in need of him, Isa. 40. 11. When they are ready to faint for want, he opens a Well, and fills their Bottles: when they wander from their resting-place, he sends his Dogs, and gathers them to his Fold; when they are weary, and can go no further, he takes them into his Arms and carries them: when they are hungry, he feeds them, when they are naked, he clothes them: when they are sick, he visits them, when they are in Prison, he comes to them: He giveth to his People richly all things to enjoy, 1 Tim. 6. 17. He exhibits, or yields out, all things, (not some things only) and that richly too: plentifully, not in Title only, but in Fruition also, Heb. 4. 16. He giveth Grace to help in time of need: He sends them seasonable help, help in fit time: (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) This word signifies, to run at ones call, to help him as soon as he cries for help; to run in to his Succor; so doth Christ. He is a present help in time of need, Psal. 46. 1. When they can hold out no longer, he will relieve their Siege; when they are ready to perish, he will step in betwixt them and destruction, 1 Cor. 10. 13. And this he doth too from a tender heart, that feels, and shares in their Dangers. Poor Believer! let thy Condition be never so bad, the Lord Jesus hath an open heart and hand for thy help. It may be, men may harden their hearts against thee, good men may take little notice of thee, Priest and Levite pass thee by, and will not know thy Soul in adversity; but yet comfort thy heart, thou hast a Friend in Heaven, that grieves with, and for thee, and will open Treasures to supply thee.

Now this pitiful Nature of Christ appears in divers particulars, both to Saints and Sinners. To Saints.

First, In looking after their Concerns, Exod. 2. 22. 'Tis said, that God looked upon the Children of Israel; and had respect unto them. This is an act of pity to look after the welfare of another. Merciful Jesse, when his Sons were in danger, sent David to look after them, 1 Sam. 17. 18. So is the heart of Christ concerned in the welfare of his People, 1 Pet. 3. 12. The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his Ears are open to their Prayer: He knows their Souls in Adversity, considers their Troubles, and looks after their Matters, Psal. 31. 7. 1 Pet. 5. 7. The want of this looking after a Persons welfare, is an evidence of the want of pity, Jer. 15. 5. Who shall have pity upon thee, O Jerusalem, &c? O, what comfort is this to poor afflicted Souls, that though men look not after them, Friends matter not what become of them, yet the Lord careth for them.

Secondly, In laboring to prevent their Evils. This is another act of pity, as we may see in Mordecai and Esther. A dreadful Danger was near to Israel; a Decree passed by the King to cut them all off in one day▪ When Mordecai heard of this, how industriously doth he labor with Esther, to improve all her Interest in the King to prevent it, Esth. 4. 8, 13, 14. Christ cannot foresee any Dangers impending on his People, but his Bowels stir him up to employ his Omnipotency to remove them. And this he doth,

First, By warning them of their Danger. He sends them alarms, and gives them notice, as a Watchman, when their Enemies are near, Ezek. 3. 18. Heb. 11. 7. Noah being warned of God, &c. So Joseph, Matth. 2. 13. was warned of God in a dream to flee into Egypt, wh•• Christ was in danger of Herod's bloody butcheries. Ezek. 33. 11. Turn you, turn you from your wicked ways, for why will you die, O house of Israel?

Secondly, By keeping their hearts from closing with Temptations, when they are like to prove dangerous: So he dealt with Joseph, Gen. 39. 9. Perhaps he may permit their falling into some lesser Evils, to try, and humble them; but when the Sin will probably occasion a great dishonor to God, and endanger the final estate of their Souls, then usually he will give forth preventing Grace to direct their hearts from closing with it.

Thirdly, By plucking them back, when on the borders of destruction. Thus David's feet had well nigh slipped, and he was almost gone; and then He opens a passage for him into the Sanctuary, and graciously reconciles to him his seemingly contradictory Providences, 1 Sam. 24. 4, 5, 6. Psal. 73. 2, 3, 17. And L••, when by lingering in Sodom, he had almost exposed himself a prey to devouring Flames, the Angels suddenly plucked him out, and kept him from that impending ruin, Gen. 19. 10, 16.

Fourthly, By sore Afflictions, smarting rods, and cross Providences, he sometimes prevents their sins, and so their destruction, Psal. 119. 67. Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I have kept thy word. Thus the Waters of Marah have sometimes led to the Waters of the Sanctuary; and grievous Distempers on the Body have proved the health of the Soul. I have read of one, that by breaking •is Leg saved his Life.

Fifthly, By breaking the Snare when they are in it, and so making a way for their escape, Psal. 124. 7. The snare is broken, and we are escaped. When David was compass'd round by Saul, and no possible way was left him to avoid the Jaws of ruin, then the Lord sent in the Philistines to call off Saul, 1 Sam. 23. 24, 25, 26, 27. So, when the Protestants in France were almost starv'd with Famine, and reduced to that extremity that all hopes of Safety, in man's judgment failed them, then was God's time to come in to their rescue, by sending in Ambassadors to call off the Duke of Anjou to be King of Poland, by which means the Siege was removed, and upon the mediation of these Ambassadors, the Protestants obtained Liberty. Thus he saved Isaac also, when Abraham's Knife was at his Throat, Gen. 22. 10, 11, 12, 13.

Lastly, By giving them a Vomit, when the Poison is taken in, that so it may be timely ejected, before the danger be unremovable. This way God prevented David's ruin, in the matter of Bathsheba, after he had fallen into the sin, by giving him Repentance to Salvation, Psal. 51.

Thirdly, Another act of his pity is, His being soon affected with the Evils of his People, Zach. 2. 8, 9. He that toucheth you, toucheth the Apple of mine eye. His Soul was grieved for the misery of Israel, Judge. 10. 6. He pitied the poor Leper in distress, Mark, 1. 41. and was moved with compassion because the Jews were as sheep without a shepherd, Mark 6. 34.

Fourthly, His visiting them in their distresses: this is an act of love and pity, Matth. 25. 36. I have been sick, and ye visited me, Joh. 14. 18. Joh. 20. 19. Exod. 3. 8. A merciful nature will show itself in visiting such as are afflicted; If others be sick they will go see them, and condole with them: they will go rather to the house of mourning, than to the house of feasting, Eccles. 7. 2. They are companions of the distressed: and such is the tenderness of Christ's heart, that he chooseth the company of the miserable: If his People be in the Water, and in the Fire, he will be with them, Isa. 43. 2. If they be cast out of the Synagogues, persecuted, and deserted for his sake, he will find them out, and keep them company, Joh. 9. 35. If they be cast on sick beds, he will sit by them; if they cannot sleep through trouble, he will sit up with them; when they are solitary and dejected, he will come and see them.

Fifthly, His comforting them in their Troubles: He is the Father of Mercies, and God of all Comfort, who comforteth us in all our Tribulations. Consolating is an act of pity to those that are in trouble, 1 Thes. 3. 2. So Job's Friends, when they had heard of all the Evil that was come upon him, they came everyone from his place to mourn with him, and to comfort him. Herein lies much of Christ's pity to his People, he would not have them swallowed up of overmuch grief, 2 Cor. 2. 7. When they are cast down, he charges his Messengers to speak comfortably to them, Isa. 40. 2. When he brings his People into the Wilderness, he will speak comfortably to them, Hos. 2. 14. Isa. 66. 13. chap. 57. 18. This is part of Christ's Intercession in Heaven, that the Father would send the Comforter to them, Joh. 14. 16. And part of his last counsel that he left with them, was, That they would be of good cheer, Joh. 16. 33. Joh. 14. 1. He began his Sermon with a Use of Comfort, Let not your hearts be troubled, &c. and here he closeth the same with a word of Comfort. And indeed, the whole of Christ's Fare-well Sermon, was Consolation to his People: He would not have them be in Heaviness longer than need did require, 1 Pet. 1. 6. but commands them to rejoice evermore, 1 Thes. 5. 16.

Sixthly, His counseling them in all cases, wherein they stand in need of his Advice: Hence they have Line upon line, and Precept upon Precept, that they might be wise to Salvation; and therefore he is called the wonderful Counselor, Isa. 9. 6. Psal. 16. 7. I bless the Lord, who hath given me counsel. Counsel (saith Ainsworth) about my Sufferings, and the Glory that shall follow, Job 36. 8, 9, 10. Adversity sometimes is God's University; and, Schola Crucis (saith Luther) is Schola Lucis: Mysterious Truths many times spring out of Affliction-depths.

Seventhly, His giving to them, and forgiving of them. Pity hath open hands, and stretched out arms. Christ hath left a large witness of his liberality, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Who giveth richly all things to enjoy. Men give sparingly, but Christ bountifully; they with straitened hearts, but he with open bowels; they sometimes in Reversion, but he in possession. And he doth not only give, but forgive, Mic. 7. 18. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardons iniquities, &c? Exod. 34. 6. Psal. 86. 5. Thou Lord art good, and ready to forgive, Numb. 14. 20. 1 Joh. 2. 1. They run into debt, and he dischargeth them: They do, as it were, write down their Iniquities, and he blots them out. Now, Are not these admirable demonstrations of his Pity, and affectionate compassions of his tender Bowels towards his People?

Secondly, He hath infinite Pity for his Enemies; Mercy and good will for Sinners, Luke 6. 35. This appears,

First, In his bearing with them, and forbearing of them, Rom. 9. 22. Endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath fitted for destruction: How doth the Lord suffer the vilest of men to live, and that very long? Lo, I have come these three years looking for fruit, Luke 13. 17. These forty years have I been grieved with this People, Psal. 95. 10. An hundred and twenty years did he bear with that high and incurable wickedness of the first World, and that after it was come to the full, Gen. 6. 3. Four hundred years did God bear with the sins of the Amorites, even after he had given Abraham their Land, Gen. 15. 13, 16. How long did the Lord bear with the Ten Tribes after their Apostasy from his pure Service? even the space of two hundred and fifty years; in which time there were Nineteen Kings, and all wicked men, walking in the steps of Jeroboam. O! the slowness of God to Anger, even against his Enemies, that dare him to his very Face, yea, that trample his Glory underfoot, and that every day, yea hour; and yet God spares them to old Age many times. Alas! how soon are we angry at our Enemies, and if but slighted a little, ready with the Disciples to call for Fire from Heaven, to consume those that receive us not, Luke, 9. 54. But the Lord Jesus is not so, he waiteth that he may be gracious, and his longsuffering leadeth to Salvation.

Secondly, His maintaining of them, and that sometimes at the highest rate, giving them Honor and Riches, Prosperity and Favor. Pharaoh must have a Kingdom, and yet an Enemy to his People: Nebuchadnezzar, an Empire; Ahasuerus an hundred twenty and seven Provinces; Croesus vast riches, and Sardanapalus delicate Pleasures. All the Creatures are pressed at their Service; the Air, Earth, and Sea are ransackit to satiate their Lusts, Hos. 11. 2, 3, 4. He feeds and clothes, helps and prospers his greatest Enemies, and all to heap up Coals of Fire upon their heads.

Thirdly, His affectionate seeking their Salvation. This was his Errand into the World, he came to save Sinners, 1 Tim. 1. 15. Lost Sinners, Matth. 18. 11. Bloody Sinners, Ezek. 16. 6. Blind Idolaters, Acts 17. 23. Cruel Persecutors, Acts, 9. 4. Wicked Sorcerers, Acts, 8. 9. These the Lord Jesus seeks to save; he sends his Gospel, to invite them to come unto him, Matth. 11.

28. Yea, beseeches them, 2 Cor. 5. 20. Makes large promises to them, if they will return, Isa. 55. 7. Act. 3. 19. Yea, how doth the Spirit strive with Sinners, that they may be saved; Reasons with them, Why will you die? Come, let us reason together, Isa. 1. 18. Why wilt thou not suffer me to save thy Soul, and to make thee happy to all Eternity? Poor Sinner! I have a real mind to do thee good, an affectionate kindness for thee; I came from Heaven to save such as thee. Behold my hands and my feet, see how my heart bleeds for thee: Behold, how ready my purchase is; yonder is thy fair Estate, if thou wilt be mine. Lift up thine eyes to those Mansions, Crowns and Thrones; all these shall then be thine: See those beautiful Garments, consent to me, and thou shalt wear thy filthy Rags, or lie in those pinching straits no longer; thou shalt lodge no more in those stinking Kennels of thy Lusts: O poor Sinner! why wilt thou stand in thy own light, and slight this offer, which thou mayest never have made thee more? Lo, how my Bowels move towards thee, see how my Arms are opened to thee; Be mine, and I will be thine; My Kingdom shall be thine, my Friends will be thine, my Servants shall be thine: My Angels shall protect thee, yea, attend thee; my Creatures shall maintain thee, my Wisdom shall guide thee, my Faithfulness shall keep thee, my Power shall be laid out for thee, my Love shall delight thee, my Honor shall adorn thee, and my Treasure shall enrich thee: I will be a loving Husband to thee, I will provide all good things for thee; I will rejoice over thee, I will forget the wrongs thou hast done me; I will requite thy Unkindness with Kindness, and draw thee with cords of Love: with cords (saith one) woven and spun out of my very Heart and Bowels. O miserable Caitiff! embrace my Counsels, listen thine Ears to Heaven gate, and hear the melodious Music that is there made by refined Spirits; why, wilt thou rather lie with damned howling Devils, than sing Hallelujah's, and the Song of the Lamb with saved Souls? Accept of me, and unchangeable Glory, unspeakable Privileges, and Rivers of Pleasures shall be thine. Thus doth the Lord Jesus woo poor perishing Souls to be happy: and is not this Pity indeed?

Fourthly, His readiness to receive them when they come to him: No sooner do they open the door but he comes in, Rev. 3. 20. If any man open the door, I will come in unto him. No sooner doth the Prodigal return, but his Father meets him; yea, runs to meet him, as if he could never come soon enough at him, Luke 15, 20. Mercy is upon the wing, when it comes to receive returning Sinners. No sooner did Ephraim repent, but God repented too; As soon as he said, Turn thou me, God said, He shall be turned; when he cries, Thou art the Lord my God, presently God Answers, Is he not a pleasant Child? So willing is Christ to receive returning Sinners, as that he promiseth he will in no wise cast them out, Joh. 6. 37. Yea, if they cannot come unto him, he will go and fetch them, and if they cannot go, he will draw them, Joh. 6. 44.

Fifthly, His great Joy when he hath obtained them; The Father of the Prodigal keeps a Feast, and makes merry when his lost Child is found, Luke 15. 23, 24. Psal. 104. 31. The Lord shall rejoice in his Works, and this he doth when he hath finished them, Heb. 4. 4. But there is nothing the Lord Jesus Christ takes more pleasure in, than in the Redemption of Souls, Prov. 8. 31. He delighted in the habitable parts of the Earth. This you will find further amplified in the Parables of the lost sheep, and lost piece of Silver, Luke 15. from verse. 4. to 11.

CHAP. XII.

The Improvement of the Pity of Christ, by way of Terror, Encouragement, and Advice.

ARE there such deep, and large Bowels of Pity in Jesus Christ, not only towards his Friends, but his very Enemies? Then here is,

First, Terror to Impenitent Sinners. Ah, Souls! how fearfully great is your Sin, being a plain defiance to the Mercy and pity of Christ: Every Transgression of yours is a kicking the very Bowels of Mercy, and a stab at the Heart of Divine Pity: O! how vile are your Iniquities, whilst without Christ! They are no less than a despising of the Riches of the Mercy and Goodness of God, which would have led you to Repentance, and a treasuring up of Wrath against the day of Wrath, Rom. 2. 4, 5. O Sinners! you run on score in abusing of the highest Mercy that ever was, you provoke your best Friend against you: Alas! Who can help you if Mercy itself becomes your Enemy? The Bowels of Christ are your last Asylum, if this door be shut against you, Farewell Souls; and can you hope that Mercy will plead for you, when rejected by you, or will not God hear the Complaint of despised Mercy think you? Sinners, the Compassion of Christ shall come forth at the last day, and say, I would have saved that Soul, but it would not, how often would I have gathered it, but it resisted? Mat. 23. 37. I offered to pay it's Debts, and to get him an Acquittance in the Court of Heaven, but he refused it; I would have ransom'd him from Death to Life, and adopted him to an Inheritance in Glory, but he would not; I would have stamp'd the divine Nature on him, and brought him into the Likeness of the Lord of Glory, but he would not; I would have put down his Name in the book of Life, and secured his Title to Heaven, but he would not; I called, he would not answer; I persuaded, he refused; I beseeched, he despised, I strived, he resisted; and now Justice, into thy hands do I deliver these rebellious Souls, to be dealt with according to the Threatenings of the Gospel and Severity of the Law, that my Wrongs may be avenged. O! what a terrible Complaint will this be? Sinners, tremble then at the Thoughts of your abusing divine M•rcy.

Use 2. Of Encouragement to dejected Souls. If there be such tender pity in the Lord Jesus, O then take Courage hence to hope for Mercy; these Mercies of Christ are infinite, boundless and bottomless; O what a stock of Mercy is in him, for troubled Souls to trade upon, what unfathomed Deeps are there in divine Compassions, enough to serve all thy Turns and Necessities; have thy Sins been many? The free Gift is of many Offences to Justification, Rom. 5. 6. Of the Offences of many persons, be they never so many, or the many Offences of one person, there is virtue enough in this free Gift of the Blood of Christ for the pardoning them all, if such return: he (saith one) that had love enough to give us Christ, hath Bowels enough to give us pardon: believing Souls shall never die for Debt, if the Bowels of Christ hath wherewithal to pay it; O! what Shifts will tender Parents make to keep their indebted Children out of Prison? They will beg and borrow of others, pinch themselves, and spare what they can, rather than their Children shall be undone: and surely the Mercy of Christ must needs make the most of his Blood and Obedience, of his Intercession and Satisfaction, for the Pardon of his People. And therefore Daniel joins Mercies and Forgiveness together, Dan. 9. 9. Is thy Unworthiness great, and deservest thou nothing but Wrath from God, O bear up thy Sinking Spirit on the Arm of Mercy, Mercy is in vain, and signifies nothing, if Justice only must take place: hast thou abused Mercy and sin'd away the Favor of thy God? Thou hast lost his Gift, but he hath not lost his giving, the Child spils his Water and goes to the Well to fill his Pitcher again: there is more Mercy (O troubled Soul) in the deep Wells of Salvation, for those that seek it. Obj. But I have provoked God to withhold Mercy. Ans. Let me tell thee, O distressed Believer, there are Forgivings as well as Givings in the Bowels of Christ, and I know not which are greater: Are thy Wants many? Be of good cheer, Mercy hath enough to supply them all, and is as free to give as able, and take this for thy Encouragement: Mercy never gives where there are Deservings. Are thy Grievs, Labors, Fears, Troubles, and Burdens great? Yet comfort thyself, Misery and Mercy are a Kin, Mercy lives in the •lymate of Misery, and never thrives better than in Misery's Ground; to do good to miserable Creatures, is Meat and Drink to Mercy, John 4. 32. I have Meat to eat that you know not of.

Use 3. Of Exhortation. First, to perishing Sinners; make use of the Mercy of Christ whilst you have it; now is the acceptable time, the day of Grace, the Season of Visitation; now the Sun shines not only in Zion but on Sodom; nay it hath stood still on your Gibeon for a Season, Josh. 10. 12. 13. O let not Mercy go, and leave you in your blood, and let you lie in your Graves; let not the Sun of the Gospel set on you, and leave you in inner Darkness, lest outer Darkness shortly seize upon you: believe it, Mercy seems to be near a Departure, it looks as it were, about to change Houses, to go from Gentiles to Jews, from West to East, it seems near setting in England, in these Western parts of the World. Who knows how soon it may arise in the East? O Sinners, do not you lie a bed in your Security, and let Mercy give you the slip. O then you that are yet in your blood, under Wrath, in Danger of Judgment; be advised to strike in with Mercy, while 'tis to be had, Isa. 55. 6. while divine Bowels yearn towards you, weep over you, and wait for you, O turn in, and close with Mercy, while its face is unveil'd to you, its Arms opened to you, and before it hath breathed its last Breath to you; believe the Warnings and Treatnings of Mercy, bow and stoop to the Convictions of Mercy, receive the Tenders thereof, obey its Counsel, and persevere in its way; be persuaded Sinners this day, it may be the last time, I may beseech you for Mercies sake, to turn and live: and Oh! how doleful will it be to out-live the day of Mercy, and possibility of obtaining Salvation, when the Angel of the Lord shall proclaim, Time shall be no more, Time was, but now is past.

Secondly, to all Souls, both changed and unchanged, if the Lord Jesus be so pityful to you, O then be not cruel to your own Souls, do not rob, cheat, and cozen your own Souls, deprive them not of your own Mercies, Jonah. 2. 8. Don't consent to those ways that will rob you of all the Possibilities and Hopes of Salvation; O! the sweet Comforts and Pleasures that now you loose for a few dirty Delights, Prov. 3. 17. Think on the Substance, the tried Gold, the rich Attire that you deprive your Souls of by refusing to hearken to the Counsel of Christ, Rev. 3. 18. Don't starve your Souls by feeding on Husks, while the bread of Life lies before you, this is Cruelty to them indeed, Luke 15. 16. 17. Do not wound, rend, and tare your Souls by cruel Lusts: he that sins hateth his own Soul, Prov. 15. 32. chap. 29. 24. Math. 16. 26. O the sad Bruises that Sin gives, and the desperate Gashes it makes in the Sinners own Soul; Isa. 1. 6. Prov. 8. 36. Every Sin of thine (O carnal wretch) is a deadly blow on thy own Soul: all thy carnal Pleasures, thy merry jesting Words, thy Swearing, Lying, Cheating, Oppressing, and Covetousness gives new Stabs to thy Heart; it would be a barbarous sight to behold one unmercifully wounding another, much more to see a person torturing his own Soul; do not sell thy immortal Soul for a Lie, for that which is not, which will not profit in the day of Wrath, Rom. 6. 21. Jer. 16. 19. Thus Elijah told Ahab, 1 Kings 21. 20. That he sold himself to work Wickedness, that is, he gave himself wholly to the Service of Sin, as a Servant that binds himself over to another's Business, Rom. 6. 16.

Thirdly, To the Children of Mercy, whom the Lord Jesus hath loved and washed in his own Blood: you that are chosen, called, justified, sanctified and adopted unto Glory, be exhorted.

First, be not hard-hearted to Christ, requite not his Pity with Cruelty, grieve not his Spirit, sadden not his Heart with your sinful and unsuitable Walkings before him: no Sins make greater Wounds on the Heart of Christ, than the Sins of his own Children, Eph. 4. 30. O be not cruel to him who is so tender of you, do not feed him with Wormwood and Gall who hath feasted you with Joy and Gladness, yea with his own Heart blood.

Secondly, Put on Bowels of Pity towards others, Col. 3. 12. They that are cruel to others, shall find God cruel to them, Jam. 2. 13.

Thirdly, Adventure for God in the way of Duty, Psal. 5. 7. Psal. 23. 6. Psal. 25. 10.

Fourthly, Then let the Consideration of Christ's Mercy comfort you under the World's Cruelty, and your greatest Sufferings for Christ, Psal. 57. 3. Psal. 32. 7. 10. Psal. 59. 17.

CHAP. XIII.

Wherein is opened the transcendent Humility of Christ.

ANother part of this total Sum of Christ's personal Treasure, consisting in the Sweetness of his Disposition, is,

Fourthly, His Humility and Lowliness of mind, This is an excellent Virtue, and that which the very Heathens have esteemed at a high Rate: 'tis a rare thing (saith Aretius) and rare things are excellent: Chrysostom calls it the chiefest Virtue, the Salt that seasons all other Excellencies, and the Beginning of all Good. If any (saith Austin) should ask me what is the chiefest Virtue? I should say, Humility; what is the next? Humility, what is the next? Humility. The humble Soul (saith Manton) is God's second Heaven, Isa. 57. 15▪ Of so great a worth is all true Humility in any, especially in Persons of Height and Grandeur: for these to come down, and humble themselves is exceeding high and noble. O then what is Humility in the high and lofty one, in the Lord of Glory and King of Kings, and Lord of Lord's; yet this is part of Christ's Treasure, Mat. 11. 29. Learn of me, for I am meak and lowly: He who best knew himself, who is Truth itself and cannot lie, hath declared that he is lowly, and that not in Carriage, and external Shew only, but in Heart also: O what stupendous wonder is this, that so glorious a person as the only begotten Son of God should be lowly in Heart? I speak not here of his divine Nature as God, though in that respect he is lowly too, Isa. 57. 15. Though he inhabiteth the highest Heaven, yet he dwelleth also in the lowest Heart; yea 'tis wonderful Condescension in God to behold the things that are in Heaven and Earth, Psal. 113. 5, 6. But I treat here of Christ as Mediator, God-man, and so he is humble and lowly in Heart, which will appear, if we consider these particulars,

First, His Humility whilst he was on Earth.

Secondly, His Humility now he is in Heaven.

His Humility on Earth consists, first, in his Willingness (being God over all and Maker of all) to become man his Creature; this is strange, that the Son of God should be willing to be accounted, yea to become the Son of man, Heb. 2. 16. He did not take the Nature of Angels upon him, but he took on him the Seed of Abraham; so verse. 14. Forasmuch then as the Children were Partakers of Flesh and Blood, he likewise also himself, took part of the same. (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) He did freely receive their Communion-nature, or did freely communicate with them in the same Nature: He took on him the Seed of Abraham, (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) he consented to take their Nature, and therein to be their Avenger and Redeemer, as the word imports: O Humility! That this glorious Jehovah should condescend to so near a Union with man, a Creature so low and of so small Account, Isa. 2. 22. Psal. 8. 4. A Creature so poor, destitute of all Good, and deprived of its Beauty, Strength, Riches, and Glory, Psal. 140. 12. Rev. 3. 17. A Creature so filthy and vile, that it drinketh up Iniquity as water, Job. 15. 16. And a Creature so guilty before God, of Rebellion and high Treason, one that hath forfeited all his Mercies, and stands bound over to the just Sentence of Death and Condemnation.

Secondly, in his Birth, He was born of mean and obscure Parents; Joseph his Father was a Carpenter, he descended not from persons of the highest Dignity, but of low Estate, as Mary herself acknowledgeth, Luke 1. 48. He was born in a Stable, and laid in a Manger, Luke 2. 7. A contemptible place where brute Beasts use to lodge and feed; he was worshipped by the wise men of the East, acknowledged to be King of the Jews, and proclaimed to be Savior of the World by an Heraldry of Angels, and yet hath no better Cradle than a Manger. O unparallel'd Condescension!

Thirdly, In his voluntary making himself of no Reputation, and taking on him the Form of a Servant, Phil. 2. 7. He did, as it were, evacuate himself, and spoil himself of all his Glory as the word signifies; not that he ceased to be God, or to be equal with the Father, but he concealed all this Glory, and as it were, deprived himself of all the Manifestations of it, by uniting to himself the form of a Servant, that is, the human nature in a servile State: he took upon him the Form of a Servant, Non dimittendo quod erat, sed assumendo quod non erat (says Zanchi) As God he was omnipotent, but this Omnipotency was hid under the weakness of his human Nature, his Omniscience veiled under a limited Knowledge, his Glory clouded under Shame, his Riches concealed under Poverty, his Majesty obscured under Contempt, and his Immortality clothed with Mortality. Quest. What Servant did Christ take on him the Form of? Ans. Why: 1. Of the Servant of God, Isa. 42. 1. Behold my Servant whom I uphold. Some take it passively, on whom I will lean, and in whom I will trust, and commit my whole Work unto: others actively, whom I will raise up and strengthen, and carry through my Work. Again, 2. He became the Servant of man also, Matth. 20. 28. The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister.

Fourthly, In his being made under the Law, Gal. 4. 4. When the Fulness of time was come God sent forth his Son made under the Law, and therefore 'tis said, he was a Minister of the Circumcision:

O! What Humility was this? That the Son of God should stoop to the Paedagoge of the Law, and enter on this low and legal Obedience.

Fifthly, In his Obedience to his Parents, and Submission to their low and mean Condition, both for Food and Apparel, Luke 2. 51. And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject to them.

Sixthly, In his Employment, and Calling he was pleased to use, till he entered upon his Ministry: He continued with his Father, and (as one of the Fathers hath it) wrought at his Father's Trade, and therefore was called the Carpenter, Mark, 6. 3. Joseph (says Mr. Lightfoot) taught Christ his own Trade: And Justin Martyr (an ancient Writer) says, That Jesus Christ, before he entered upon his Ministry, made Plows and Yokes.

Seventhly, In his Company: He did not choose the Society of Great and Noble, but of mean and obscure Persons: He set apart Fishermen and Publicans to be his Disciples, and accompanied Publicans and Sinners, which caused the Senate of Rome to vote him down from being a God, because all his Disciples and followers were inconsiderable and beggarly, Joh. 7. 48.

Eighthly, In his contentment with mean things: He had not a house where to lay his head, Matth. 8. 20. And 'tis said, he was willing to be poor, For being rich he made himself poor, that we, through his poverty, might become rich, 2 Cor. 8, 9. He was content with any fare, Barly Bread and Fishes; a broyled Fish, and an honey-comb, Luke 24. 42. He was not as proud Persons are, nice, and choice of his Diet, but was pleased with any food, Joh. 21. 5. Children, have you any meat?

Ninthly, In his submissive carriages towards God and men; when the Lord bruis'd him, and made his Soul an Offering for Sin, we find not one hasty or undue Expression: But, 'tis said, He was led as a Sheep dumb before her Shearer, Isa. 53. 4, 6, 7. All that he said, was this humble complaint, O God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? He was rejected and despised of men, and yet maintained an humble deportment, ver. 3. He was lowly to all Persons, not only to the high and noble, but to the poor and despicable; not only to Friends but to Enemies; not only abroad but at home; not only among the meek and humble, but among the proud and peevish; not when it was admired, but when despised.

Tenthly, In his doing the meanest Services: He condescended to the lowest, and most contemptible actions, if he might administer good, Matth. 20. 28. He girded himself with a Towel, as a Servant, and washed his Disciples feet, Joh. 13. 4, 5.

Lastly, In his patient bearing others Sins, and Sufferings. Proud men cannot endure to bear another's Fault, but Christ was willing to be numbered amongst Transgressors, to be reckoned an Offender, and to bear the Sins of many, even of all that come unto him, 1 Pet. 2. 24. He humbled himself to the Death, Phil. 2. 8. To a shameful Death; the Death of the greatest Malefactors; and to the cursed Death of the Cross.

Secondly, The Lord Jesus was not only humble whilst on Earth, when he passed through his state of Humiliation; but even now, when he is in Heaven, and hath entered into his Glory, he detains this lowliness of heart. This will be perspicuous, if you consider,

First, His Condescention to behold the things on Earth, Psal. 113. 5, 6. One would have thought it beneath the Dignity of Christ, now advanced above all Glory, to take any notice of Sublunar Affairs: but if he delighted in the habital Parts of the Earth, before he came down to redeem them, then much more now he hath the possession of the fruit of his Blood among them.

Secondly, His Converses with the meanest, and most despicable Persons on Earth, by his Spirit, Isa. 57. 17. Joh. 14. 19, 21, 23. Be they never so low and poor, yet, if holy, he takes up his abode with them, and keeps his Court amongst them.

Thirdly, His bowing down of his Ear to hear the cries of his poor, and despised People, Psal. 10. 17. Lord, thou hast heard the desire of the humble, Psal. 31. 2. Bow down thine Ear to hear me.

Fourthly, His gentle and kind reception of their poor, pitiful Offerings and Services, Psal. 51. 17. The Sacrifices of God are a broken Spirit, a broken and a contrite Heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

Fifthly, His owning them in the face of the World, before Kings and Rulers, 1 Chro. 16. 21, 22. He is not ashamed to call them Brethren, Heb. 2. 11.

Sixthly, His appearing for them in Heaven, and confessing them before his Father's Face in Glory, Matth. 10. 32. Heb. 9. 24.

Seventhly, His looking after their meanest Concerns, and numbering the very hairs of their head, Matth. 10. 30.

Lastly, His slowness to Anger. But this properly pertains to another excellent Disposition of the Lord Jesus Christ, namely his Meekness, where you may find it fully handled.

Is Jesus Christ of such an humble, submissive Disposition? then,

First, Admire the greatness of Divine Love, in giving such a Savior, of so humble and lowly a Spirit: Had not the Son of God been of a condescending Nature, he would never have become man; and what then would have been the state of Sinners? Had he not been of a lowly mind, he would never have consented to have come into the World in the form of a Servant; and then enthralled Sinners could never have been made free: Had he not been humble, he would never have been willing to be made under the Law; and then the righteousness of the Law had never been fulfilled: Had he not been lowly, he would never have borne our Fault and Punishment; and then our Sins must have been charged upon our own heads.

Secondly, This will serve to shame the proud hearts of men, especially those that profess Christ: O, see the vileness of your Pride in the glass of Christ's Humility!

Thirdly, Labor to be like to Christ, and to be enriched with this excellent adorning Grace of Humility.

Fourthly, Here's Encouragement to humbled Sinners, from the Lowliness of Christ: You that see your Iniquities to be heavier than you can bear, and are afraid because of the Terrors of the Almighty; yet be encouraged to come to Christ, because he is humble, Isa. 57. 15. You that see no Worthiness in yourselves to come before him, but are fearful to approach into his Presence, because of your Poverty and low Estate; be encouraged to draw nigh to him, because he is humble, Isa. 41. 17. You that see an Infinite distance betwixt God and you, and so dare not approach him; let his Humility encourage you, he will not despise the Prayer of the destitute, Psal. 102. 17. You that think your Souls beneath the thoughts and care of such a God, and that he will take no notice of you; O, consider his Humility for your Hope, Psal. 113. 6. Cherish expectations from Christ's Humility, for the mortification of your Pride; because 'tis God's Ordinance and appointment unto this end, Matth. 11. 29.

CHAP. XIV.

Wherein is shewn, the transcendent Meekness and Gentleness of Christ; To his Enemies, and to his People.

ANother Branch of the sweetness of Christ's Disposition and Nature, is, Fifthly, His Meekness: He is meek and lowly, Matth. 11. 29. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, that is, facil and easy, (as Critics derive it) because they that have this Meekness, are of a gentle, pleasing, and affable Spirit to others: The Latins express it by Mansuetus, one used to the hand, alluding to those wild Beasts that are thus tamed; They are gentle, and brought to the hand; they are sociable and familiar, not strange and harsh: And such is the Lord Jesus; he is meek, of a sweet and gentle Spirit and carriage towards all, when he opens himself as a Savior to them, but especially he is so towards his People. Meekness especially relates to Anger, as allaying, and moderating of it; So Arist. defines it to be the sweetening of ones Spirit, removing its roughness, harshness, and Passion, and rendering it gentle, pleasing, and affable, even to them that provoke it. Now this is an excellent Spirit, 1 Pet. 3. 4. 'Tis spoken of Moses, as one of his chiefest Excellencies, Numb. 12. 3. Now the man Moses was very meek. And the Lord Jesus sets forth this to be the greatest Excellency that he presents in himself for the Imitation of his People, Matth. 11. 29. When the Prophet Zacharias would delineate the stately Majesty of Christ, in his Kingly progress to his People, he displays him in the Glory of his meekness, Zach. 9. 9. Thy King cometh to thee meek, &c. So Psal. 45. 4. The Glory of Christ in his triumphant March in the World, is held forth in his Meekness and Truth; this is part of Christ's excellent Glory, as Mediator, 2 Cor. 10. 1. I beseech you by the Meekness of Christ, Now the Lord Jesus is replenished with Meekness.

First, To his Enemies, This he manifested whilst on Earth, to such as hated him, abused him, and sought to take away his Life; 'tis of such the Prophet speaks, Zach. 9. 9. compared with Math. 21. 5. Now this Meekness of Christ to his Enemies appears.

First, In his Slowness to Anger, Psal. 103. 8. The Lord is slow to Anger. He was not easily provoked whilst on Earth, under all the Provocations and Abuses cast upon him, Matth. 12. 19. He shall not strive nor cry, neither shall any man hear his Voice in the Streets. Passionate persons will strive to have their Will when crossed, to defend their Names, to oppose their Adversaries, and to revile them that reproach them; but Christ was not so, he strove not in a contentious, quarrelling way, but being reviled, reviled not again, 1 Pet. 2. 23. Under all his Sufferings, such as were able to make the meekest man on Earth to cry out, and to stir up his Spirit against them, yet Christ was silent, Isa. 53. 7. He was oppressed, he was afflicted, and yet opened not his Mouth, he is brought as a Lamb to the Slaughter, and as a Sheep before his Shearer is dumb, so he opened not his Mouth. You shall not find one froward Word from Christ in all his Sufferings, by Jews or Gentiles; look over the Jeers and Reproaches that were cast upon him in his Life, and at his Death; Is not this the Carpenter's Son, Matth. 13. 55. Is not this the Carpenter, the Son of Mary, Mark 6. 3. They called him a Wine bibber, a Friend of Publican's and Sinners, and yet we find him as a Sheep, dumb before the Shearers: The Pharisees charged him to be on that had Correspondence with Devils, Matth. 9. 34. but he was silent: another time they call him a blasphemer, Matth. 9. 3. but see how mildly Christ answers them, verse. 4. Why think ye Evil in your Hearts? Another time we find him slighted by the Samaritans; he was coming to a Village in Samaria, and sent Messengers to provide for him, but they refused to entertain him, and take him in, because his Face was as though he would go to Jerusalem, Luke 9. 51. &c. because he seemed to be of another way of Religion: they could not endure him, because he was for instituted Worship, and seemed to profess a stricter way than the Samaritans: He looked like a Puritan (saith Mr. Burroughs) and therefore they shut him out of their Houses: now this was no small abuse, an ordinary Spirit would not bear to have a door shut against him; and hereupon, some of the Disciples, James and John, pleaded for Revenge, and would have had Fire from Heaven to destroy them, ver. 54. Yet see the Meekness of Christ's Spirit under this Affront, ver. 55. He turned and rebuked them, and said, ye know not what manner of Spirit ye are of, for the Son of man is not come to destroy men's Lives, but to save them.

Secondly, In his mild Answers to them; how mildly did he answer the Jews, who said, he was a Samaritan, and had a Devil, John 8. 48. 49. All his Answer was, I have not a Devil, but I honor my Father, and ye dishonor me; see in that Chapter, how contradictorily and crossly they behav'd themselves to him, yet with what wonderful Gentleness he answers them: when Judas came to betray him, Matt: 26. 49. with what Calmness doth he treat him, verse 50, Friend wherefore art thou come? Who could have given so gentle words to so vile a Traitor, but the Mirror of Meekness? Luke hath it thus, Judas betrayestthou the Son of man with a kiss? Luke. 22. 48. what thou Judas my Disciple, who hast been so long with me, known my Kindness, and eat and drunk at my table? what thou betray the Son of man, and combine to take away thy Master's life? canst thou find in thy heart to deal so treacherously with thy Lord? How did he reprove Peter for smiting the High-priest's Servant that came to take him, Matth. 26. 51. to 55. How scornfully did they treat him? Matth. 26. 61. This Fellow saith I am able to destroy the Temple of God, and to build it in three days; but he held his Peace, v. 63. The Jews mocked him, blind-folded, and smote him, Luke 26. 63. Herod with his men of War set him at naught, chap. 23. 11. The Rulers derided him, saying, others he saved, let him save himself if he be the Christ the chosen of God, ver. 35. But lo how gently this patient Lamb revenges these high Indignities, ver. 34. Father forgive them, for they know not what they do.

Thirdly, In the Offices of Love, he shows them; he went about doing Good to his very Enemies, heaping Coals of Fire on their Heads, healing their sick, feeding their hungry, and preaching the Gospel to their poor, Matth. 14. 14. chap. 11. 5. His pitying them shows his Meekness, Luke 19. 41. He beheld the City, and wept over it: now this Meekness of Christ as it is excellent in itself, so 'tis eminent in degree; 'tis large, and abundant Meekness; weigh but these following Considerations, and you will say the same.

First, The Greatness of those Provocations he hath received from them; Sinners under the Gospel make light of Christ, Matth. 22. 5. They despise him, Acts 13. 4. They reject him, Joh. 12. 48. They rebel against him, Isa. 1. 20. They crucify him. Joh. 19. 15. They blaspheme his Name, they bely his Truth, abuse his Love, undervalue his Blood, trampling it under Foot, deny his Right, defraud, and injure his Interest, rob him of his Glory, hate his People, and seek to hinder his Kingdom, and yet he mildly puts up these high Indignities; Oppression will •ache a wise man mad, but cannot render Christ ungentle.

Secondly, The Continuance of these Provocations; All the day long have I stretched out my hand to a gain-saying people, Isa. 65. 2. every day, Isa. 52. 5. Three years, Luke 13. 7. Forty years, Heb. 3. 9. Continually, Gen. 6. 5. And it is no small Provocation to have a Trial lie on a persons back, yet see the Lothness of Christ to destroy his very Enemies; he waits that he may be gracious, and beseeches them to turn and live, Joh. 5. 40.

Thirdly, The greatness of his Person, he is the Majesty on high, King of Kings, and Lord of Lord's, Rev. 19. 16. He hath Right to Service and Worship from all his Creatures, To him every Knee must bow, and Tongue confess, Phil. 2. 9. and yet that he should bear so meekly, the Abuses, Scorns, and Contempts of the vilest men, is wonderful: great men are soon incensed when their Honor and Interest are invaded; but the Lord Jesus is great, and yet meek, a King, and yet lowly, Psal. 45. 3, 4. Zach. 9. 9.

Fourthly, The Despicableness of the Persons that abuse him; they are his Creatures, made, and mainrain'd by him, inferior Worms whom he can crush every Moment, and strike dead with his Look, Isaiah 1. 2. chap. 45. 9.

Fifthly, The great Kindness he hath for them, he comes in their Errand to save their Souls, he sheds his blood, that they might live, underwent the Law, and bore his Fathers Wrath, that they might enjoy his Favor, and be saved to the uttermost if they believe: and is not this a wonderful Discovery of his Meekness?

Secondly, His Meekness to his People is exceeding great, as I shall illustrate in a few particulars.

First, In his bearing with them, he did not only bear their Sins for them when on the Tree, but many Provocations and Abuses from them now in Heaven; so he bore with the Israelites, Isa. 3. 8. Though their Tongue and their Doings was against the Lord to provoke the Eyes of his Glory; this was not the Carriage of Heathens, but of his own People; their Provocations was not a single Act from one part of them, but the whole Body combine against him in Word and Deed: these were not supposed Injuries, but real; not intermitted, but continued; not seldom but frequent. How oft did they provoke him in the Wilderness, and grieved him in the Desert, they tempted him, limited him, and murmured against him for Water, for Bread and for Flesh: they rebel'd against him, against his Institutions, in Moses and Aaron, against his Command about gathering Manna, sanctifying the Sabbath, and going against their Enemies. They continually provoked him to Anger, even to his very Face, Isaiah 65. 3. vexed and grieved his holy Spirit, and yet he bears it in the Wilderness for forty years, in the Land of Canaan, eight hundred and sixty years before the Captivity; after this, five hundred, ninety, and six years before he cast them off. O the admirable length of the Patience and Meekness of Christ towards that People, in bearing with them, considering the Kind and Length of their Provocations: so under the Gospel, he hath a people redeemed by his Blood, such as avouch him for their Lord, and tread in his Courts; now to these also he exerciseth much Long-suffering and Patience if you weigh,

First, the Multitude of their Sins, they are more than can be numbered, more than the hairs of their head, Psal. 40. 12. Sins of Thoughts, Words, and Deeds; Sins against Law and Gospel, the first and second Table; Sins in Duty and out of Duty; Sins every day, every moment, Gen. 6. 5. Sins to the last hour of their Lives, till their Tabernacle be pulled down, and the body of Death destroyed; and this is not only the Condition of one, or of a few Souls, but of all the Elect, every man that liveth, 1 Kings 8. 46. There is none that sinneth not.

Secondly, The Aggravation of their Sins taken,

First, From the persons sinning, The redeemed of God, such as have been bought with a great price, 1 Cor. 6. 20. 1 Pet. 1. 18. The pardon of whose former Sins cost so dear, the Sons and Daughters of God, Deut. 32. 19. Souls loved and chosen out of all the World, to be his; yea they only elected, and all others left, Amos 3. 2. Adopted to a glorious state, to be Kings and Priests unto God, to be Heirs and Co-heirs with Christ, to be a name and a Glory to him; and yet for these to be always grieving, always provoking, always reproaching of him, is hard indeed, but not too hard for Christ to bear.

Secondly, From the person against whom they sin, they sin against their Father who loved them with an everlasting Love, drew them with the Cords of Love, and led them in the paths of Love, who hath given his Son for them, and to them, and fixed his unchangeable Love upon them, imparted the royal Privileges of Sons to them, and yet to Sin against him who is the Father of Christ, and their Father, whose Glory was dearer to him than his own Blood, is an aggravated Sin indeed.

They sin against God the Son, who gave himself for them, and bought them with a great price.

They sin against the holy Ghost, who visited them in their low Estate, and brought them the good News of Salvation; who broke open their Prisondoors, and let them forth into a glorious State of Liberty; who quickened, enlightened, comforted, and helped them in all their Soul-straits; now to sin against this God the Father, Son, and Spirit, cannot but exceedingly provoke the Soul of Christ.

Thirdly, the State in which they sin; O! how inconsistent is this with such an high and glorious Condition, Rom. 6. 14.. Sin shall have no more Dominion over you, because you are not under the Law, but under Grace. The Sins of such are the works of Darkness in the day time, Acts of Enmity in a state of Reconciliation, and grievous Bondage in times of Liberty.

Fourthly, The dangerous Effects of their Sinning; 'Tis a corrupt Tree that brings forth sad Fruit, even the Grapes of Sodom, and the Wine of Gomorrhah; their Sins rob God of his Glory, and bring a greater Dishonor to him than all the Sins of the World besides, Rom. 2. 23. They grieve the Spirit of Christ whereby they are sealed up to the day of Redemption, Eph. 4. 30. They depress and load, yea break the Heart of God, Amos 2. 13. They endeavor to frustrate divine grace, and render the Death of Christ in vain, Gal. 5. 4. They do (as it were) reduce the Lord to a great strait, what to do to save their Souls, H's. 6. 4. they Shipwreck all their Duties, and put a Vanity upon all their Profession, Labors, and Sufferings; such run in vain, Gal. 2. 2. They sadden the Hearts, and weaken the hands of the Godly, and become stumbling blocks in their way, Psal. 119. 158. And they do a great deal of mischief to the wicked in prejudicing them against the Lord Jesus, and his holy ways, in hindering their Reception of the Gospel, and depriving them of the Fruits and Labors of Christ towards their Conversion, in justifying them in their ways, encouraging them in their Sins, and in causing them to blaspheme the holy Name of God.

Fifthly, The blessed Advantages they have enjoyed against their Sins; they have many Obligations against it, and many Experiences of the Evil of it, and yet still continue in it: O, this doth make the burden of the Sins of the Godly exceeding heavy to Christ, and yet that he should bear them so patiently, and not consume them: That, though provoked daily by the Brambles, and scratching Abominations of his People, yet his Fury should not be kindled into a terrible Flame to burn them up, doth manifestly demonstrate his meekness to be exceeding great.

Secondly, Christ's forbearing of his People, is another Evidence of his Slowness to Anger: He is not easily provoked, Neh. 9. 17. How long doth he forbear before he strikes? he first threatens, and then waits, calls and exhorts, shakes the rod, and then strikes gently, Isa. 30. 18. Therefore will the Lord wait that he may be gracious.

Thirdly, His readiness to be reconciled to them, when angry, Psal. 86. 5. Thou, Lord, art good, and ready to forgive. O, consider his persuading them to Repentance; how doth he labor to convince them of their Sin, and invite them to return; he entreats, reasons, and beseecheth them to be reconciled, 2 Cor. 5. 19, 20. Lo, how affectionately doth he receive them when they return! how willingly doth he listen his Ear to their confession of Sin, and bemoaning of their condition? Jer. 31. 18.

Fourthly, The moderation of his Anger, when raised, shows his meekness, Isa. 27. 7, 8. In measure when it shooteth forth, thou wilt debate with it. He stayeth his rough wind in the day of his East-wind, Job. 11. 6.

Lastly, His actual forgiving all their Iniquities, Psal. 103. 3. Who forgiveth all thine Iniquities, Luke 7. 47. Isa. 44. 22.

Use. Now, if the Lord Jesus Christ be so full of meekness to his very Enemies, so rich in gentleness, sweetness of Nature, and Patience to his People, then learn this needful Lesson of him; to be of a meek and patient Spirit. Behold, how quietly he took up his Cross, and bore reproaches and Indignities from the worst of men: yea, how still he was under the infinite weight of his Father's wrath. Learn meekness from his Gentleness, as the Elephant doth from the Lamb; when the Elephant is in his greatest Fury, set but a Lamb before him, and his wrath will presently be allay'd: Learn of Christ to bear Injuries, to restrain your Anger, not to be angry, but when Duty, and the Cause of God calls you to it: 'Tis only Sin should be the Object of a Christian's Anger. Moses was calm at his own Reproaches, but could not be still when God was dishonored. Learn from Christ to moderate the measure of your Anger; he corrects in measure: Let not your Anger exceed the desert of the Provocation; Learn from him to time your Anger. As a word fitly spoken, so Anger seasonably exerted is beautiful: and learn from him to remove it when the Cause is gone. Anger should be as Physic, laid aside when there is no need of it: True meekness may easily be discerned by its ends and grounds, it must not proceed from a willingness to be aveng'd on others, but to amend and reform them.

CHAP. XV.

Wherein is demonstrated the infinite Bounty of Christ to all his Creatures, with the manner of his giving.

THE next thing which discovers the sweetness of Christ's Disposition, and greatness of his Personal Treasure, is,

Sixthly, His Liberality: He is of a bountiful Disposition; and this, you know, is of an endearing Nature, Rom. 5. 7. Scarcely for a righteous man will one die, yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. Psal. 13. 6. I will sing unto the Lord, because he hath dealt bountifully with me. Now this Liberality of Christ appears,

First, To all his Creatures, Psal. 145. 9. The Lord is good to all, and his tender mercies are over all his works, Psal. 136. 25. Psal. 145. 15. Whose heart is so large, whose hand so wide as Christ's? ver. 16. He upholdeth all things by the word of his Power, Heb. 1. 3. And by him all things consist, Col. 1. 17. There is never a moment but he is laying out upon his Creatures, and that must needs be a large Treasure that maintains the whole World.

Secondly, To his Enemies: He doth good to those that hate him: He gives large portions of this World's goods to Esau's: And uncharitable Dives's do many times fare deliciously, and are clothed gorgeously, by his Bounty, The wicked prosper, Jer. 5. 28. Nay, he doth not only give them the fat things of this Life, but the great things of his Kingdom. O, the Privileges and Favors that Hypocrites enjoy as well as Saints! He sends his Gospel to every Creature, and causeth the very Dews of Zion to fall upon his Adversaris.

Thirdly, Especially to his Children; for to these he gives,

First, Good things: Whatever they have of him shall be good, Jer. 32. 40. I will not turn away from them to do them good. Their very Afflictions are for good: their Wormwood and Gall is good: Rebukes of God upon them, stripping and humbling Providences; nay, their very Corruptions, by this Bounty, prove to their advantage.

Secondly, All good things. He gives Grace and Glory, and no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly, Psal. 84. 11. Psal. 34. 10. All the good God sees fit for them, and they are capable to receive, shall be distributed to them.

Thirdly, Great things: Not Common, but choice Mercies, passing Knowledge, Mysteries, not only to the World, but to themselves: Things unsearchable, and things unutterable; Things that cannot be known as they are, nor valued as they deserve. What one Nation (saith David to God) is like thy People, whom God went to redeem for a People to himself, to make him a Name, and to do for them great things and terrible, 2 Sam. 7. 23. Redemption-work brings forth great and terrible things, for redeemed Souls. O, the great things that God doth, and Christ gives to every ransom'd Soul, Job, 37. 5. Things which we cannot comprehend, as you will see, if you give but a general Survey on the Inventory of Christ's Gifts. I shall instance in some of the most remarkable.

First, That invaluable Gift of Light. He is the Light of the World, Joh. 8. 12. How deformed is Darkness, how beautiful is Light, Eccles. 11. 7. He is a Light to lighten the Gentiles, and the Glory, &c. Luke 2. 32. He is the bright Morning Star: the Sun of Righteousness from whom the light of Life and all true Wisdom comes; now this is a great and excellent thing, Eccles. 2. 13. Wisdom excelleth Folly, as far as Light excelleth Darkness, and this you know is very far: Wisdom is preferred before Rubies, and the most excellent things, Prov. 8. from ver. 10. to 20. That must needs be great which all the World cannot purchase, but this is Wisdom: now all true Wisdom comes by Jesus Christ, he is the Wisdom of God, 1 Cor. 1. 30. So, who hath brought to light the 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the hidden things of God, and that could by no ways be known but by Revelation: No man hath known the Father, but the Son, and he to whom the Son shall reveal him, Matth. 11. 27. He giveth Knowledge and Wisdom to whom he pleaseth, that special Wisdom which none of the Princes of this World can attain unto, 1 Cor. 2. 7. 8.

Secondly, Life; He hath brought Life to Light by the Gospel, 2 Tim. 1. 10. and is not this a great gift? All that a man hath will he give for his Life, Job. 2. 4. O! then what is Life from the dead to his people, Eph. 2. 1. He is our Life, Col. 3. 3. I am come that they may have Life, and have it more abundantly, Joh. 10. 10.

Thirdly, His Love; all the World and Houses full of Treasures cannot be compared to Love, Cant. 8. 7. Should Christ give all the World and withhold his Heart, it were but a mean gift: Favors are valuable by the love whence they come, Isa. 63. 9. In his Love and in his Pity he redeemed them, Psal. 63. 3. Deut. 33. 3. All Believers are set as a Seal upon his Heart, Cant. 8. 6. He hath loved them with an everlasting Love; they have his Heart, and none else.

Fourthly, Himself; There being nothing greater than himself, to demonstrate the Largeness of his Heart to his people; he gave himself, Eph. 5. 25. Who loved the Church, and gave himself for it; that is, sold himself to purchase them, gave himself to divine Justice to satisfy the Law, and to taste of Death for them, all that he had as Mediator he parted with for them: and hath given himself to them also, Heb. 8. 10. And I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a People. They have his person, Hos. 3. 3. Thou shalt not be for another, so will I also be for thee. All his Beauties and personal Perfections, as described, Cant. 5. ver. 9. to the end: all Believers have a Marriage right unto him by way of Gift; again, he hath given them his Purchase, all that he hath bought with his Blood, Math. 26. 28. This is my Blood of the New Testament, shed for you.

Fifthly, His Laws and Scepter to guide them through the World, and to steer out their Course of Duty and Safety, and this is a great thing, Hos. 8. 12. I have written to him the great things of my Law (Rabab) the excellent or honorable things of my Law: for this word notes Quality as well as Quantity; and if the things of God's Law are so great, what are the Truths of the Gospel, called so great Salvation? Deut. 4. 8. And what Nation is so great that hath Statutes and Judgments so righteous? Psal. 147. 19.

Sixthly, His Spirit; This he gives to all his People, Rom. 8. 9. If any man hath not the spirit of Christ he is none of his, 1 Cor. 12. 13, We are all by one Spirit baptized into one body: This is promised by the Lord Jesus, Joh. 16. 7.

Seventhly, His Promises; For in him are all the Promises of God, yea, and Amen, 2 Cor. 1. 20. That is, they are sure and certain in Christ, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Whereby are given unto us, exceeding great and precious Promises, Gal. 3. 22.

Lastly, His Kingdom; Col. 1. 13. And hath translated us into the Kingdom of his dear Son. A blessed Change indeed, from Sin to Grace, from Darkness to Light, from the Kingdom of Satan, to the Kingdom of Christ, 2 Pet. 1. 11. So an Entrance shall be administered to you abundantly into the Kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. All Believers are invested with the glorious Privileges of this Kingdom, they all become Kings and Priests unto God, Rev. 1. 6. Nay a Kingdom of Priests, Exod. 19. 6. They are entitled to all the royal Endowments, Investments, and Favors that belong to the Children of a King; they all wear his royal Robes of Glory, they have noble Entertainment, most delicious Food, the highest Honors and Thrones to sit on; Christ gives them the Inheritance, purchased Possessions and Mansions of Glory.

Fourthly, The Liberality of Christ appears in the manner of his giving, now this may come under a six-fold Consideration.

First, He gives readily and propensly: many give, but by Constraint, as the unjust Judge, Luke 18. or from fear of Shame or Reproach; men usually give with Reluctancy, but Christ readily, as Paul speaks of the Church of Macedonia, 2 Cor. 8. 3. that they were prone to Charity beyond their power; and of Titus, ver. 17. that being more forward of his own accord he went unto them; so it may be more truly said of Christ, that he wants no external Motives or Perswasions to exert his Bounty. For,

First, Christ's Gifts are his people's due, they have Right to all his Fullness; Christ is the Believers and all that is his, John 3. 16. Cant. 6. 3. I am my beloved's and my beloved is mine, 1 Cor. 3. 21. For all things are yours, they are purchased for them, and given to them.

Secondly, Christ's Office and public Designation to this Work shows it, he is set apart for this end, that he might be the Author of eternal Life, the Giver of all that good that his people need, Joh. 17. 2. As thou hast given him Power over all Flesh, that he should give eternal Life, &c. Joh. 6. 27. Him hath God the Father sealed; that is, deputed to this Office and Trust, to be the Lord keeper of his House, and Dispenser of his Fathers Goods. All that Christ hath as Mediator, is to be distributed to his: he hath nothing but must be employed for the Salvation of the Elect, for such is the Agreement betwixt the Father and him, Joh. 17. 10. All mine are thine, and thine are mine, and I am glorified in them.

Thirdly, He hath never the less for giving, and therefore never weary of giving; what's that makes men soon tired with Acts of Bounty, why because the more they give the less they have, and so fail at last in their Ability; but 'tis not so with Christ, he is Fullness still, notwithstanding all the vast Distributions that go out of his Treasury every day, to fill up Heaven and Earth, Men and Angels. (I remember a notable saying of a worthy Divine, Should all the World (says he) set themselves to drink free Grace, Mercy, and Pardon, dry, drawing Water continually from the Wells of Salvation, nay if they should set themselves to draw from one single Promise, an Angel standing by and crying, drink O my Friends, drink abundantly, take so much Grace and Pardon as shall be abundantly sufficient for the world of Sins which is in everyone of you, they would not be able to sink the Grace of the Promise, one Hairs breath.) When Beggars come to our doors, they many times promise us, upon the Reception of an Alms, they will trouble us no more, but this would be an improper Expression to Christ, whose Heart is so propense to give, and whose Treasures are inexhaustible, Col. 2. 9. For in him dwells all the Fullness of the God-head bodily, Col. 1. 19.

Forthly, He gets by giving; Advantage is a sure Agreement, all men seek their own, every man his gain from his Quarter: now if giving appears to be Christ's Advantage, you may be sure he will be willing to give; men lavish out their Gold for Idolatry, carnal persons pour out their whole Wealth upon their Lusts, the Merchant adventures all he hath for Gain, and can you think that Christ only will be close handed? Psal. 68. 18. Here 'tis said, he receives Gifts, Eph. 4. 8. 'Tis said, he gave gifts: what Christ received was not for himself, but to give unto Sinners, and that in order to his Dwelling amongst them; Christ's Gifts are to further his Service, 1 Pet. 4. 10. and his Peoples Profit, 1 Cor. 12. 7.

Fifthly, He is never more pleased, than when he gives; This appears in his earnest inviting Souls to ask of him, Joh. 16. 24. Hitherto you have asked nothing in my Name, ask that your Joy may be full. Had not the Lord Jesus a great Delight to dispense freely to his People, he would not have used such Arguments to persuade them to beg; 'tis said of Titus Vespasian, that he never denied anything to those that asked him, but would call upon them, to ask something of him.

Lastly, This doth wonderfully greaten his Glory, Joh. 14. 13. Whatever ye ask in my Name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. This verse shows the Reason why the Saints shall do greater works than those that Christ did, because they shall have the Power of Christ to help them; he will do for them what they ask, and give them what they seek; and the reason is, because hereby the divine Glory is more manifested, the Fathers Glory in the Sons Glory; for the Father and he are one, and the Fathers Glory is his Glory, the more he gives, the more the Father is glorified, and the more the Father is glorified, the more is the Son also.

Secondly, He gives freely without any respect to Merit or Compensation, Rev. 21. 6. To him that is a thirst, will I give to drink of the Water of Life freely. (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) That is, without any antecedent Cause, Worth or Merit, Rom. 3. 24. Being justified freely by his Grace. As Justification comes freely without any Worth or Righteousness in man, so do all the gifts of God, Rom. 8. 32. How can he but with him freely give us all things? 1 Cor. 2. 12. Christ doth not sell but give his Favors freely, according to the pleasure of his own Will, Isa. 55. 1. This is a Truth hard to be received, because 'tis beyond the reason of men, how Grace should move without any Motives and Attractives besides itself, but yet this bounty of Christ hath no respect of Persons, 2 Chron. 19. 7.

Thirdly, He gives presently Mercies in hand, he doth not say as the unjust and covetous man, go, and come again tomorrow, and I will give it thee, when 'tis by him; he doth not delay to bestow Mercies on his poor Creatures, one Jot beyond the due time, Psal. 145. 15. Gal. 6. 9. Christ is never at a loss to give, he only stays for a fit time; he had many things to say to his Disciples, but he wanted a convenient opportunity; they were not able to bear them, Joh. 16. 12.

Fourthly, He gives heartily; Jer. 32. 41. I will rejoice over them to do them good, with my whole Heart, and with my whole Soul. He doth not pretend Kindness, and yet begrudge it in his Heart, all his Promises are the Intents of his Heart, Jer. 30. 24. Psal. 51. 18. Do Good in thy good Pleasure to Zion.

Fifthly, He gives liberally, Jam. 1. 5. If any man lack Wisdom, let him ask it of God who giveth liberally. (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) Simply, purely, with a candid Mind and full Intent to do good: 'tis rendered bountifully, as Liberality comes from a simple and pure Heart, he gives many times more than we ask, as the sick man of the Palsy came for Health, and Christ gave him Pardon to boot; Solomon asked Wisdom, and God gave him more than he begged, Riches and Honor too, 1 Kin. 3. 12. 13. He gives richly to his People of all good things to enjoy, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Suitable to his Treasures, Phil. 4. 10. According to his Riches in Glory by Christ, above what we can ask or think, Eph. 3. 20. He gives a Kingdom, Luke 12. 22. and therefore bids us open our Mouths wide, and he will fill them, Psal. 81. 10.

Lastly, He gives constantly every day and every moment, he is never weary of well-doing, Isa. 40. 28. The Lord fainteth not, neither is weary; men are soon tired with Acts of Bounty, to which the Apostle alludes, Gal. 6. 9. But the Lord Jesus is a Fountain that never ceaseth running, he is always doing, there is never a moment but he is opening his Treasures and filling the hungry Soul, Psal. 73. 26. God is my Portion forever. The Saints are always living on God, and are ever receiving from him, His Mercies are new every Morning, Lam. 3. 23. Yea though through Carelessness they have lost their Mercies, as the Spouse lost the presence of Christ, Cant. 5. and the Tastes of his Love, verse. 2. 6. And though by Sin they have forfeited their Mercies, and have given the Lord cause to withhold them, yet he is never weary of doing them good, but always communicating something or other to them.

Use 1. Is Christ so bountiful? Then this may serve to convince all Christless Souls under the Gospel of the greatness of their Sin in slighting and contemning Christ, because it is utterly opposite to the Streams of his Bounty towards them; this, Sinner, will gall thy Conscience another day, when Christ shall say, what Iniquity hast thou found in me, that thy Heart is set against me? have not I born thee all thy days, maintained thee ever since thou wast born, and fed thee with Food convenient? and yet thou wilt have none of me, but liftest up thy heel against me, and crucifyest me with thy Sins every day; so did the Lord plead with Israel, Hos. 11. 23. 4.

Use 2. This will serve to humble the people of Christ.

First, For their great Unthankfulness to Christ; O how great are the Obligations of Believers to Christ, both for upper and nether Springs, thy daily Bread comes out of his Cupboard, all thy Comforts and Preservations are received from him, but especially thy Souls Mercies are the Products of his Bounty, thy Enlightnings, Awakenings, Drawings and Begettings to God, thy Pardon, Peace, and hope of glory are all from him, and yet who renders to Christ for all the Benefits done to him, who returns to give Glory to God; this is a grievous Sin, 2 Tim. 3. 2.

Secondly, For their hard Thoughts of Christ; hath the Lord Jesus laid out so much upon thee, and hath yet such Riches in Store for thee, and art thou always distrusting of him, and on every occasion jealous and suspicious of his bounty? Ps. 77. 7, 8, 9. Ps. 78. 22. 32.

Thirdly, For their little Improvement of Christ's bounty; see this in Joash, 2 Kin. 13. from ver. 17. to 20.

Fourthly, For looking to Creatures for their Supplies more than to Christ, Jer. 2. 13. This is a heathenish Sin, Rom. 1. 25. They loved and served the Creature more than the Creator Isa. 55. 2.

CHAP. XVI.

Wherein the Faithfulness of Christ is opened, in accomplishing all his Prophecies, fulfilling his Promises to all the Trust committed to him, and in all the Relations he stands to his People.

THE Sweetness and Excellency of Christ's Disposition consists also.

Lastly, In his Justice and Fidelity; he is righteous, true, and faithful in all he doth and undertakes, and this argues an excellent Spirit; this was part of that Glory, the Spirit of God puts on Moses, Numb. 12. 7. But my Servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all my House, with him will I speak Mouth to Mouth: even apparently, God puts a singular Value on Moses, hath a peculiar kindness for him, and affords him more intimacy with himself than others have, because of his Faithfulness: So Daniel, It was his great Honor that his very Enemies could not spot him, or find any Error in him, on the account of his Unfaithfulness, Dan. 6. 4. 'Twas this brought Judah into so high an Estimation with God, as 'tis said, Hos. 11. 12. Judah ruled with God, and was faithful with the Saints. Nay a faithful person is a Jewel so rare, that he can scarcely be found, Prov. 20. 6. Every man will proclaim his own Goodness, but a faithful man, who can find? That is, as some render it, 'Tis a common thing for men to talk of their Goodness, Bounty and Mercy, but 'tis a rare thing for them to be so indeed, to be so good as they seem to be. Others comment on it thus, 'Tis an easy thing for men to promise fair, and to speak of great things they will do, but few are found that perform their word, and are what they promise to be. Take it in either Sense, a faithful man is a rare thing, who can find it, as seldom seen almost, as a black Swan, or a rich Jewel. Now the Lord Jesus is thus excellent, he is true, though every man be a Liar, called the faithful Witness, Rev. 1. 5. His Name as well as Nature is faithful, Rev. 19. 11. The Lord Jesus gives a faithful Testimony of the love that God bears to Sinners, he lay in the Fathers bosom, and hath given a true Revelation of him, Rev. 1. 5. Isa. 11. 5. Faithfulness is the Girdle of his Reins. The Prophet alludes to those Ornaments, Kings did use to wear; they wore a Girdle as an Ensign of Honor and Power, Job 12. 18. He looseth the bonds of Kings, that is, their Girdle, by which he means their Power and Authority, which he removes: now instead of this Ensign of Honor which Kings did wear, Christ shall be clothed with Faithfulness and Righteousness, this shall be his Ornament and Glory, Heb. 2. 17. He is the faithful high-priest.

First, He is faithful and just to all men, even to his very Enemies, he will not wrong them in the least; he renders to everyone his due, Rom. 2. 6. The very Hypocrites shall have their Reward, Matth. 6. 2. The Lord Jesus will not give cause to any to say at the last day, that he is their Debtor, or doth them Wrong▪ Matth. 20. 13. The wicked shall have their Portion in this Life, all that is coming to them, as much as they can in Justice demand. If Ahab repent he shall have Reprieve from his Punishment; eternal Repentance shall obtain eternal Deliverance. If Esau pray for the Blessings of this life with Tears, God will give them to him, he cannot be a Debtor to any; his very Enemies shall have their due, as much as their outward Duties or servile Labors amount to; for the holy one of Israel cannot lie, what Promise soever God makes to any outward Action or Virtue, it shall certainly be fulfilled, he cannot defraud any; the Pharisees shall have their Honor, Judas his bag; Demas the World, and Dives his Pleasures: he that commands his People to render everyone their due, cannot possibly wrong any.

Secondly, He is faithful to his People, 1 Pet. 4. 19. Let them that suffer according to the Will of God commit the keeping of their Souls to him in well-doing as unto a faithful Creator: That is, Christ is able to keep you in Sufferings because he made you of nothing, and he that gave you a being when you were nothing, he can keep you now, though all the World be set against you: He can do it because he created you of nothing, and he will do it, because he is faithful, and hath promised; now this Faithfulness of Christ to his people lies.

First, In his exact Accomplishment of all his Prophecies, All things written concerning him, are fulfilled in him, Luke 18. 31. A tittle of God's word shall not fall to the ground, all the Types and legal Figures as they shadowed out Christ to come, namely, the High-priest, the Altar, the scape Goat, &c. were perfectly accomplisht in him, they were the Shadows, he the Substance; all Scripture Prophecies concerning divine Providence, the Resurrection of Zion, and the Destruction of Babylon, shall be fulfilled to one Iota, Luke 21. 22.

Secondly in performing his Promises, never an Engagement made by the Father to the Son, or by him to his people, but he will see it assuredly made good, Rom. 15. 8. 1 Kings 8. 28. 2 Pet.

3. 9. The Lord is not slack concerning his Promises, Tit. 1. 2. 2 Cor. 1. 20. All the Promises are in him, yea, and Amen.

Object. Christ's Faithfulness in fulfilling his Promises pertains only to the Heirs of the Promises: but I cannot call the Promises mine, because of my unfaithfulness to God.

Answ. The Promises of God are not made to the Doers of the Law or Gospel, but to Believers: nor are they made for doing, but upon believing: 'Tis true, by Faithfulness and Obedience comes the thing promised, but a Title to the Promises is procured by believing; pray put a distinction between the Promises, and the thing promised, Gal. 3. 22. That the promise by Faith of Jesus Christ, might be given to them that believe, Heb. 6. 17, 18. The promise of Grace, Healing, and Salvation, depends not upon the fidelity of the saved Soul, but upon the faithfulness of God, in Christ.

Obj. But I do not find the Promises made good to me; God hath said, He will never leave nor forsake his People, but, I doubt, he hath forsaken me; for I cannot see his outgoings in the Sanctuary: He hath promised to hear the Prayers made in his Name; to dispence Grace, to give out his Spirit, and to create a new heart; but I find not the performance of these things in me.

Answ. First, If the Lord Jesus doth not fulfill his Promises, 'tis because thou art not fit for them: God would have brought Israel into Canaan, near forty years before he did, but they were not fit for that mercy: They were carnal, lusting, murmuring, rebelling, so that God sent them back again into the Wilderness. Christ would have taught his People many glorious Truths, but they were not able to bear them, Joh. 16. 12. Food, yea, the choicest Dainties, upon a distempered Stomach, are cast away, they feed nothing but the Disease: If God accomplish not his Word to thee, 'tis because thou art incapable for it: Thy Iniquities, it may be, withhold good things from thee, Isa. 59. 1.

Secondly, Christ may be performing his Promises though thou dost not see it: For,

First, Christ doth fulfill his Promise, though he doth not give the same thing he seems to promise: If he give thee that which is equivalent in the room of it: So, if the Lord doth not give his People the Comforts of this Life, yet if he gives them Contentment without them, he fulfills his Promise; So he dealt with Paul, Phil. 4. 11. I have learned in every state to be contented; and with David, Psal. 16. 6. The Disciples had nothing, yet in the want of all, they had all things, 2 Cor. 6. 10. If in the want of Bread, God gives Strength and Satisfaction, he fulfills his Word. The wicked in their Fulness are in Straits, Joh, 20. 22. But the Godly in their Straits have a Fulness.

Secondly, Christ doth fulfill his Promise, though he gives not the same thing, if he gives a better thing: If Christ withholds Earthly things, and gives Spiritual; As Saul found not his Asses, but in the room of them met with a Kingdom: The Disciples lost their Nets and Boats, and found a Treasure in Christ: They lost their taking of Fish, and became Fishers of men: Paul suffered a Shipwreck of all his own Excellencies, and found the Excellencies of Christ.

Thirdly, Christ fulfills his Promises, though he do not give the same things his People would have, yet, if he gives them suitable things, such as he sees best suits and fits their present state: So the Disciples expected a Temporal Kingdom, but Christ gave them a Spiritual Kingdom. It may be a little Mercy is more suitable for thee than a great deal; Children must have their meat suited to their Health, not their Stomach: Paul could not bear much Vision of God, and therefore must have a Thorn in the Flesh, 2 Cor. 12. 7.

Fourthly, Christ doth fulfill his Promise, though he doth not give thee what thou thinkest thou dost want, if he give thee what he knows thou wantest, Rom. 8. 26. Thou supposest thou wantest Comforts, he withholds them, and gives thee humblings.

Fifthly, Christ fulfills his Promise, though he doth not deliver thee out of thy present Evils, if he thereby preserves thee from a greater Evil: As Paul had a thorn in the Flesh, the Messenger of Satan to buffet him; lest, through the abundance of Revelations, he should be puffed up, and his Soul in danger of Ruin.

Lastly, Christ doth fulfill his Promise, if he doth it in his own time, though he doth it not in our time. So in Abraham; God promised him a Son, he expected it many years sooner, but God kept it till the most convenient season. Every thing is beautiful in its season, Eccles. 3. 11. 1 Pet. 5. 6. Mercies are Afflictions, when out of due time: Now, 'tis he that gives the Mercy, can best tell when to give it, Jer. 49. 19. Who will appoint me the time, Lev. 26. 4. The Faithfulness of Christ is firm and unalterable, whatever Objections Unbelief makes against it. He will perform all his Promises, Gen. 28. 15. And behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this Land, for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. O what a blessed word is this! 'Tis a promise made to Jacob, when he was to undertake a difficult Journey; and what things are written, are written for our Instruction; Promises made to particular Saints, are applicable to all the Saints in the same condition; as we find that of Joshua, 1. 5. I will not leave thee nor forsake thee. The Apostle makes Use of it, Heb. 13. 5. Now I shall give a few Reasons to prove that Christ cannot fail of fulfilling his Promise. For,

First, He is Truth itself, and cannot lie, Rev. 3. 14. He is called, The Amen, the faithful and true Witness: The Holy one of Israel, who cannot lie: For, God is not as man that he should lie, or as the Son of man, that he should repent; hath he said, and shall he not do it, hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good? Numb. 23. 19.

Secondly, He came to fulfill all Righteousness, Matth. 3. 15. It becometh us to fulfil all Righteousness: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , It behooveth us, I ought to do it, by the Appointment and Will of my Father, as Chemnitz renders it: Christ came into the World to fulfill all Righteousness; Now, to perform and make good the Promises of God, is part of this Righteousness: 'tis a debt God is engaged in, and Christ came not only to pay Sinners debts to the Father, but to make good the Father's Engagements unto them.

Thirdly, Did not Christ fulfill all the Promises of God to Believers, then the New Covenant would be an imperfect and faulty Covenant; were the Promises of the new Covenant unfulfilled, then it would be a Covenant of Works▪ and so imperfect: But the New Covenant is established on better Promises, Heb. 8. 6, 7, &c. Now new Covenant-promises are better than the old, not only as to the Matter of them, but as to the certainty of their performance. The first Covenant-promises were liable to be broken, Jer. 31. 31, 32. But these New Covenant-promises are sure to all the Seed. This was the principal thing undertaken in the New Covenant, for Believers, that the Promises should be certainly fulfilled, and therefore 'tis called a better Covenant than the Old.

Fourthly, Christ must needs fulfill the Promises, or he would die in vain, and shed his Blood to no purpose: for the Blood of Christ is the Blood of the Covenant, Matth. 26. 28. and it was shed on purpose to confirm the truth of the Promise to all that believe, Heb. 9. 15. For this end he came into the World, and became a Mediator, Rom. 15. 8, 9.

Fifthly, That he might finish the Work the Father gave him to do, and so give up his Account with joy. This is the Work God sent Christ into the World for, that he might be the Mediator of the New Covenant, and make good the Will of God to all the Federates thereof, Joh. 6. 38. to 41. and this Christ cannot fail to perform, Joh. 17. 4. His Spirit shall not fail, till he hath set Judgment on the Earth, Isa. 42. 4.

Sixthly, That he may stop the mouth of Devils, and prove Satan a Lyar. The great work of Satan is to bely God, and represent him to Sinners Unfaithful and untrue. Now Christ is to fight against the Devil, and destroy his Works, 1 Joh. 3. 8. and prove the Truth of God against all opposers, Rom. 3. 4.

Seventhly, He is fully able to do it; He hath all Power in his hand, both in Heaven and in Earth, Matth. 28. 18. He is a merciful God, and so nothing is too hard for him: He will work, and none shall let it; besides, he hath all that Grace and Goodness that poor Souls need, in his own hand; He hath received the Spirit without measure, Joh. 3. 34. All Fulness dwells in him; Name anything which thou standest in need of, which is not in Christ to give thee. Dost thou want Pardon, Peace of Conscience, Grace, Holiness, Power over thy Corruptions, Victory over thy Temptations, Comfort under thy Troubles, satisfaction of thy Doubts, quieting of thy Fears, and remove of thy Burdens. Dost thou want quickenings, softnings for the hardness of thy Heart: strengthnings under thy weakness, fitness for thy Mercies and Duties, Patience under thy Sufferings, and Humility under thy Privileges? Dost thou want thankfulness for thy Mercies, clearing up of thy Evidences, Tasts of God's Love, and readiness for Death, Judgment, and Eternity? Why, all this Christ hath in his own hand already; He is not to seek for these things when thou criest after them.

Again, As he hath Power to help thee, and fulfill all the Promises of God to thee, so he hath Right and Authority too: He is the Angel of the Covenant, Mal. 3. 1. He is sent, deputed, and sealed of God, to this very Work, Joh. 6. 27. All the Promises upon that Redemption-agreement betwixt the Father and the Son, are made over to him, and put into his hand, 2 Cor. 1. 30. Now all that Christ can do for the making good of his Father's Word, and benefitting his People, he will certainly perform, for he ever liveth to make Intercession, Heb. 7. 25. and is entered into Heaven, to appear as their Advocate and Agent, Heb. 9. 24.

Lastly, Christ must needs fulfill his Promises, or else he would weaken the Encouragement of Souls to believe in him, and so overthrow all his own Design in, and by the Gospel, which is, to bring Souls to believe in him, Joh. 20. 31. These are written that you may believe, Joh, 17. 21. That the World may believe that thou hast sent me, Joh. 10. 38. Now, if Christ fails of his Promise, how would this discourage Souls from believing in him? who would trust Christ, should he not be faithful? and the Devil would be sure to make the most of this Advantage, to prevent believing. Christ will make good his Word in his own time, way, and measure, Matth. 5. 18. Heaven and Earth shall pass away, but not one jot or tittle of the Law, till all be fulfilled. All shall be fulfilled for Believers, and in them: and if Christ cannot permit one Jot of the Law to fall to the ground, surely, he will not suffer so choice a part of the Gospel as the Promises are, to be unaccomplished. Again, as Christ will perform all the Promises, so especially those great ones, that concern the Grace and Glory of all that believe, Psal. 84. 11. He will give grace and glory, &c. If the Lord Jesus upbraided the Pharisees for tything Mint and Cumin, and omitting the weightier matters of the Law, surely he cannot neglect the greatest of his Gospel-promises to his people.

Thirdly, the Lord Jesus is faithful to the Trust committed to him; thus was Moses, He was faithful in all God's House, Numb. 12. 7. that is, as a Steward, he was just and honest in the discharge of that Trust committed to him, concerning the Work and Interest of God; so 'tis taken, Math. 25. 21. Well done, thou good and faithful Servant; Thou hast been faithful in thy Stewardship in the use of those things committed to thee; in this Sense is Christ faithful also; in a perfect Discharge of that Trust reposed in him, and that both with respect to God his Father, and with respect to his People.

First, In respect of that Trust committed to him by the Father, God the Father hath entrusted him with the great Concerns of Redemption, Grace, and Glory, with that glorious Contrivance of saving fallen man, and bringing about the Recovery of lost Sinners: and therefore he calls him his Servant, Isa. 49. 5. And now saith the Lord that formed me from the Womb to be his Servant, to bring Jacob again to him. It sets forth Christ's Designation by the Father, to his mediatory Office, wherein God the Father calls him to great work, commits vast Concerns to him, about the gathering in of lost Souls, and undertaking their Atonement, Sanctification, and Salvation; for the accomplishment of which, the Father commits all to the Fidelity of Christ, both as to Suffering and interceding work, and in all this the Lord Jesus is faithful: so the Spirit of God calls him a faithful High-priest in things pertaining unto God, in making Reconciliation for the Sins of the People. This the Lord Jesus undertook to the Father, that he would satisfy his Wrath, and remove his Displeasure from his People, by bearing their Sins for and from them, that God might again take them into his Favor, as if they had never sinned; and in this he was and is faithful, nay in all things that God hath charged him with, about the saving of Souls, Heb. 3. 2. Who was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house. So that whatever the Father laid on Christ in the behalf of his people to make Reconciliation for them, and present them spotless in his Presence, this he hath fully and faithfully discharged, as I have already shewn on this Subject.

Secondly, The Lord Jesus hath a Trust committed to him from his People: They commit the keeping of their Souls to him as to a faithful Redeemer, 1 Pet. 4. 19. Every believing Soul when he comes over to Christ first, doth depute, accept of, choose and entrust the Lord Jesus to be his Redeemer, and he undertakes the preserving of him unto Glory; he that comes to Christ aright, takes him for his Wisdom, Righteousness, Sanctification and Redemption, 1 Cor. 1. 30. For so is Christ given and tendered by the Father, and so do Believers receive him, and entrust him with their Souls, that they may be made righteous before God, have their Sins removed, and be presented before the Father, without Spot or Wrinkle, Eph. 5. 25, 26. They trust Christ for Sanctification, to be made truly, and in his time perfectly holy, as holy as God is holy, and as holy as God requires. They trust Christ for Wisdom, to be made Partakers of divine Light, to be made wise unto Salvation, to know all that God would have them, and that their Natures are capable to understand, and to have the Image of God perfected in them, which consists in Knowledge as well as Righteousness. They commit themselves to Christ to be redeemed from every Evil, Sin, or Danger, or whatever hinders their complete Salvation: thus do Believers, take Christ, and surrender themselves up to him on these great and glorious ends, and thus did he undertake, when he gave himself by his Spirit to them, and therefore is called the Surety of the Covenant, as hath been already shewn, Heb. 7. 22. therefore 'tis said, Eph. 5. 25. to 28. That Christ gave himself for the Church, that he might wash it and cleanse it, sanctify it and present it to the Father without Spot or Wrinkle or any such thing. This he undertook when he became a Mediator between God and them, 1 Tim. 2. 5. Now he is faithful in this also to all his Seed, Heb. 10. 23. He is faithful who hath promised, 1 Joh. 1. 9. He is faithful and just to forgive them, 2 Tim. 1. 12. I know whom I have believed, and that he is able to keep that good thing I have committed to him against that day, 1 Thes. 5. 24. 1 Cor. 10. 13. O Souls, you that have committed yourselves to Christ in Truth, know that he is faithful, and will not fail you, but will certainly accomplish and make good all your regular Hopes and Expectations, he can loose nothing of all that the Father hath given him, Joh. 17. 12. Be sure, what Bargain soever he hath made with you, what Mercies soever he hath promised you, he will assuredly fulfil and keep touch to a tittle; he is the faithful Steward, and Advocate for his People.

Fourthly, The Lord Jesus is faithful to all the Relations he stands in to his people; Herein Fidelity appears in holding forth, and living up to those Duties of Relation in which a person stands to others; so Sylvanus is called a faithful Brother, 1 Pet. 5. 12. and Tychicus a faithful Minister, Eph. 6. 21. In this that they were true and just, in holding forth all the Duties of their Relation, Defectiveness, in which discovers Falseness and Treachery: but the Lord Jesus is faithful in all Relations to Believers; he fills them up, and answers the end of them, now the Scripture sets forth the Union of Christ to Believers, by several Relations.

First, He is their Friend, Isa. 41. 8. The seed of Abraham my Friend, Joh. 15. 14. 15. Ye are my Friends, I have called you Friends, Joh. 11. 11. Our Friend Lazarus sleepeth. Now Christ is a faithful Friend to his people in holding forth all the Offices of true Friendship to them. As,

First, Love, Prov. 17. 17. A friend loveth at all times, such a Friend is Christ to all his, many Waters cannot quench it, he loves his People when he hides his Face from them, when he speaks sharply to them, and severely rebukes them.

Secondly, To own his Friend in all places, times, and conditions, so Jonathan owned David in his greatest Dangers, when his Father sought his Life, when it was dangerous to appear for him, 1 Sam. 20. 28. 32. so Christ is not ashamed to own his People before God; men, Matth. 10. 32. Whosoever shall confess me before men him will I confess before my Father's Face, 1 Cor. 16. 21. He reprov'd Kings for their sake, saying, touch not mine anointed, &c.

Thirdly, Pity; Job. 6. 14. Pity should be shewn from a Friend. And in this is Christ faithful, he hath compassion on the ignorant, and those that are out of the way, Heb. 5. 2. He cannot hide his Eyes from his own Flesh; he is that good Samaritan, Luke 10. 33.

Fourthly, Counsel; Prov. 27. 9. Ointment and Perfume rejoice the Heart, so doth the Sweetness of a man's Friend by hearty Counsel: Christ is called the Counselor, Isaiah 9. 6. He will guide his People with his Eye, and instruct them in the way they should go, Psal. 32. 8. Thou gavest thy good Spirit to instruct them, Neh. 9. 20.

Fifthly, Adherence; Prov. 18. 24. There is a Friend, that sticketh closer than a Brother, 2 Sam. 16. 17. So the Lord Jesus he stands by his People in time of need, Ps. 50. 15. Ps. 91. 15. Ps. 44. 3.

Sixthly, Comfort; So Joh's Friends, Job. 2. 11. Came to mourn with him, and to comfort him, the Lord Jesus is faithful in this also, Joh. 14, 18. I will not leave you comfortless, Isa. 61. 2. To comfort all that mou••.

Seventhly, Communication of Secrets; Judge. 16. 15. How canst thou say thou lovest me, when thy Heart is not with me? Now the Lord Jesus Christ is such a Friend, he will open the very Secrets of his heart to his People, Joh. 15. 15. I have called you Friends for all that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you, Psal. 25. 14. O the secret Mysteries of the Gospel, he discloseth to his faithful People, that walk much with him, Joh. 14. 2, 3.

Lastly, Supply of wants, Prov. 17. 17. A Friend is born for Adversity, So Paul tells the Thessalonians of his friendly respects to them, 1 Thes. 2. 8. A true friend is ready to impart anything for his Friend; so Jonathan stripped himself to his Girdle, and Bow, and Sword, for David, 1 Sam. 18. 4. Christ is such a Friend as will supply, all the Necessities of his people, Phil. 4. 19. My God shall supply all your need: Such a Friend he was to Jacob, Gen. 48. 15. The God which fed me all my Life long.

Secondly, He is faithful as a Brother, for in this Relation also doth he stand to his people, Joh. 20. 17. Go to my Brethren, and say to them, that I ascend to my Father, and your Father, to my God and your God. Christ and Believers have all one Father, though in a different way, Christ the natural, Believers the adopted Children of God. Now as he stands to them in the Capacity and State of a Brother, an elder Brother, so his Fidelity consists in a faithful Discharge of the Duties of such a relation. As,

First, One Duty is Love; All the Saints stand in the relation of Brethren one to another, and so are obliged to mutual Love, 1 Joh. 3. 10. Christ fulfills this duty to his people, he loves them as himself, Eph. 5. 25. perfectly with the same love with which the Father loves him, Joh. 15. 9.

Secondly; Another brotherly duty is Pity; 1 P^t. 3. 8. Having Compassion one of another, love as Brethren, be pityful: So Christ can truly say as Esther did of her Kindred, Esther 8. 6. Now can I endure to see the Evil that shall come unto my People, or how can I endure to see the Destruction of my Kindred?

Thirdly, Unity is the duty of Brethren, Psal. 133. 1. Behold how good and pleasant is it for Brethren to dwell together in Unity, so is the Lord Jesus one with his people; This he died for, Joh. 11. 52. This he prays for, Joh. 17. 21.

Fourthly, Another brotherly duty is Peace, Gen. 13. 18. Let there be no strife betwixt me and thee, and betwixt my Herdsmen and thy Herdsmen, for we be Brethren. So Christ labors after peace for his people, and with them, Jo. 16. 33.

Fifthly, Acknowledgment is another duty of Brethren, So Christ, Heb. 2. 11. He is not ashamed to call them brethren.

Lastly, visiting one another, and taking hold of Opportunities to enquire the welfare of each other, and communicate Refreshments. Thus did Moses, Acts 7. 23. He visited his Brethren, and so doth Christ his People, he gives them special Accesses by his Spirit, he leaves them not comfortless, but will come unto them, Joh. 14. 18.

Thirdly, As a husband to his Spouse, is Christ faithful to his People, Isa. 54. 5. Thy Maker is thy Husband, 2 Cor. 11. 2. I have espoused you to one Husband, Hos. 2. 19. 20. I will betroth thee unto me in Righteousness, loving Kindness, and Faithfulness. Now Christ performs all the Offices of a tender Husband to them.

First, In loving them as himself, Eph. 5. 25. Husbands love your Wives, as Christ also loved the Church, and gave himself for it. Now I shall give you eight Proofs of Christ's great love, as a husband to his People.

First, His high Valuation of them, he esteems them beyond all the World besides, nay above Heaven itself; he could leave the Heaven of Heavens to seek after, and to save them, and Mansions of Glory to come down, and betroath them: he despised all the offered Pleasures and Grandeur of the world, when proposed to divert his Love from them, Matth. 4. He sets forth their excellencies by terms of greatest worth, he calls them his Treasure, Exod. 19. 15. A Kingdom of Priests, verse. 6. His Jewels, Mal. 3. 17. Cant. 1. 10. Thy Cheeks are comely with Rows of Jewels, thy Neck with Chains of Gold. Cant. 2. 2. As the Lily among Thorns, so is my Love among the Daughters: He terms them, a Fountain of Gardens, an Orchard of Pomegranates, Cant. 4. The only one of her Mother, the choice one of her that bare her. These high Characters the Lord Jesus gives his Spouse, shows the wonderful account he makes of her.

Secondly, His costly purchase of them, he sold himself to redeem them, Eph. 5. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. He parted with all his Glory, Treasures, Peace, Pleasures, Strength and Life to procure a people to himself; had not his love been infinitely great to all his Seed, he would never have bought them at so dear a rate, 1 Cor. 6. 20.

Thirdly, His great Endurings for them; Jacob tells us of some Hardships he underwent to gain Rachel, Gen. 31. 40. 41. But these are nothing to Christ's Endurings for his Spouse: he bore infinite Torments for her, all the Wrath and Vengeance of a consuming Fire, which all the Sins of Believers did merit; he bore temporal Troubles, Wants, Weariness, Pains, Shame, Death itself, with whatever the damned in Hell bear to all Eternity, that did he endure, to get a Spouse among the condemned Sons and Daughters of men.

Fourthly, His amorous Treatments of them, and endearing Converses with them; see the Exuberancy of his Affection, breathing out at his Lips to them, Cant. 4. 1. to verse. 6. Behold thou art fair my Love, behold thou art fair, thou hast Doves Eyes, &c. ver. 7. Thou art all fair my Love, there is no spot in thee. Cant. 2. 10. Rise up my Love my fair one, and come away. chap. 4. 8. Come with me from Lebanon, My Spouse, from Lebanon. verse. 10. How fair is thy Love, my Sister, my Spouse, how much better is thy love than Wine, chap. 6. 4. 5. Thou art beautiful my Love as Tirzah; turn away thine Eyes from me, for they have overcome me.

Fifthly, His large Gifts and dowry to them; he gives himself, his Spirit, his Purchase, his Laws, his Promises, his Love, Life, Light, and his Kingdom, as I have already shown, and this doth discover his large Affection to them.

Sixthly, His impatient longing after them, shows the Greatness of his conjugal love to them; Cant. 2. 14. O my Dove that art in the Clifts of the Rock, in secret places of the Stairs, let me see thy Countenance and hear thy Voice, Jer. 3. 14, Turn O backsliding Children, for I am married to you: He stands at the door, knocking with the dew of the night on his locks, saying, Open to me my Sister, my Spouse, my Love, my Dove, my undefiled, Cant. 5. 2. He is troubled when he cannot see them, and they will not come unto him, that he might give them life.

Seventhly, His wonderful Complacency in, and rejoicing over them, he is well pleased with; he rests in his love over them, Zeph. 3. 17. He takes them for his only Portion, Seed, and Travel of his Soul, wherein he is satisfied: And as a Bridegroom rejoiceth over his Bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee, Isa. 62. 5. For the Lord delighteth in thee, and thy Land shall be married, ver. 4.

Lastly, His utter Inability to part with them, proves his great love to them, Hos. 11. 8. How shall I give thee up O Ephraim? Isa. 49. 16. Behold I have graven thee upon the Palms of my hands, and verse. 15. A Woman may forget her sucking Child, but I cannot forget thee. Nay he sets them as a Seal upon his Heart, Cant. 8. 6. You must pluck out his Heart before you can make him consent to let his Spouse go, Joh. 10. 28. None shall pluck them out of my Hands. That's the first Testimony of his conjugal Faithfulness, his Love to all his people; 'tis a constant Love, Joh. 13. 1. Having loved his own that were in the World, he loved them to the end.

Secondly, His Cohabitation with them; this is another part of the Husbands duty to his Spouse, 1 Pet. 3. 7. Ye Husbands dwell with them according to Knowledge, such is the Fidelity of Christ to his, that he takes up his abode with them▪ Joh. 14. 23. and walks with, and dwells among them, 2 Cor. 6. 16. He doth not give them a transient Visit, and look upon them now and then; however he may sometimes appear a stranger, and draw a Curtain over the light of his Countenance; yet he doth not change his Habitation, but takes up his rest in Zion, and dwells there, Psal. 132. 13, 14. Heb. 13. 5. He will never leave them nor forsake them.

Thirdly, his affectionate and intimate Converses with them, proves his conjugal Fidelity; he keeps up Intercourse with them; Christ in Heaven maintains correspondence with his people on Earth, Exod. 25. 22. There will I meet with thee, and commune with thee, above the Mercy Seat: that is, In my Ordinances and Appointments, I will open my heart to thee, tell thee my Love, and impart to thee my Secrets, 1 Joh. 1. 3. Our Fellowship is with the Father, and his Son Christ Jesus, and this Communion is maintained by the Spirit, Joh. 16. 13. 14. When the Spirit of Truth is come, he will guide you into all Truth, &c. For he will receive of mine, and show it unto you. 'Tis a notable Scripture, and as much as if Christ had said, I go to Heaven, my personal Presence shall be in Mansions of Glory, but I will send my Spirit and he shall reveal the deep things of God, communicate my mind unto you, and concerning you.

Fourthly, His tender Sympathy with them; In all their Afflictions he is afflicted, Isaiah 63. 9. He soon feels their Troubles, he that toucheth them, toucheth the Apple of his eye; Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me, Act. 9. 4. and therefore the Sufferings of the Saints are called the (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) the after Sufferings of Christ, Col. 1. 24. What is done to them he reckons as done to himself. And he doth not only feel their Afflictions, but bear their Burdens for them, Psal. 55. 22. Cast thy burden on the Lord, he will sustain thee; yea he helps and relieves them under all their Afflictions, Psal. 50. 15.

Fifthly, His patience towards them, shows his Fidelity as a husband; 'tis riches of patience and longsuffering that the Lord doth exercise towards his every day, Rom. 2. 4.

Sixthly, His gracious Indulgence towards them, covering their Imperfections, and pardoning their Offences is another thing his conjugal Relation to his People, obliges him to, and this he is faithful in; he puts Honor upon the uncomely parts and carriages of his People, by clothing them with the covering of his Righteousness, Rev. 3. 18. He calls upon his people to put on their white Rayment, that the shame of their Nakedness do not appear: He puts up many a wrong for them, and passeth by many a weakness in them, concealing their Imperfections from the view of others, and all because he loves them, and they are his Hephzibah's.

Seventhly, His Care of them demonstrates his conjugal Fidelity to them, 1 Pet. 5. 7. His Eyes are always upon them, from one end of the year to the other, Deut. 11. 12. Commit thy way to the Lord, trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass, Psal. 37. 5. Upon him is the care of all the Churches, and of every Saint, yea of all their Concerns, even their very hairs. He cares for their Bodies, their Souls, their Families, their names, their Comfort, and their Profit: he will not leave them comfortless, nor suffer them to be tempted above what they are able, he will provide all things they stand in need of, Isa. 46. 3. 4. Psal. 65. 9. and if he withholds these lower things from them here, he prepares some better thing for them, both here and hereafter.

Eighthly, Protection of them from their Evils and Dangers; this is a Husbands duty to be a covering for his Spouse, and a Screen to her from Injury, Gen. 20. 16. So Christ he carries his as on Eagles Wings out of the reach of their destroying Adversaries, Deut. 32. 11. Exod. 19. 4. Deu• 33. 27. The eternal God is thy Refuge, and underneath are everlasting Arms. He will keep the Feet of his Saints, 1 Sam. 2. 9. And be a little Sanctuary to them in all places.

Lastly, His cleaving to them forever, and being one Felsh with them, 1 Sam. 12. 22. For the Lord will not forsake his people; he is a present help to them; in time of Trouble always with them, never unmindful of them and their guide unto death, Psal. 48. 14. Yea in Death and to all Eternity, he will be their Life and Salvation; here death determines the Capacity of the most faithful husband, but Christ will accompany his Spouse, and be a Salvation in and beyond the Grave.

Fourthly, As a head is the Lord Jesus Christ faithful to his people; That is, another Relation in which Christ stands to believers, Col. 1. 18. He is the head of the Body, the Church, &c. He is completely furnished with all Excellencies and Fullness for that end, to be the head of his Body the Church, both as to natural and purchased grace; As God he is eternal, and so hath all sufficiency in him; Before all things, and is their Maker and Preserver, and as man, he is the first-born from the dead, and by his death hath purchased a Mediatorly Sufficiency to be the head of, and to preside his Body, and perform all the Offices of Headship to it, as to Honor, Government, and Influence: And he hath not only a Fitness to be a head to his Church, but a Right too; for the Father hath given him to be the Head over all things to his Church, Eph. 1. 22. Gave, (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) constituit, saith Zanchi, he appointed him and parted actually with him, and made him over to the Church, to the whole body of Believers, and to every single person, to their use, intent, and purpose, that he should be a Head to them, a true head, a perfect head, an only head, and an eternal head: Now in this Relation is Christ faithful also, answering the ends, filling up the pl•ce, and discharging the Offices of it. Now in this headship of Christ are six things wrapped up.

First, Counsel and Wisdom; In him are all the Treasures of Wisdom, Col. 2. 3. All that Light and Knowledge which is needful to make his people wise to Salvation; all that Wisdom which is requisite to repair the lost Image of man, and all that Wisdom which may render him exceeding excellent, and glorious; for in him is the excellency of Knowledge, Phil. 3. 8. And all this Counsel he stands engaged to impart to his people, as they are able to bear it, Eph. 1. 8, 9. Wherein he hath abounded towards us in all Wisdom and Prudence. Wherein, that is, Qua gratia; By which Grace, saith Zanchi, He hath abounded towards us; that is, hath made us to abound in. So the Scholiast and Erasmus, He hath plentifully imparted to us; hence 'tis ensured to all that truly seek it of God, Jam. 1. 5. He will tell them what to do in all cases, as Christ did to Cornelius by Peter, Acts 10. 6. He hath all Wisdom in him, the stone on which is seven Eyes, Zach. 3. 9. and will be in every Difficulty and Danger with them. As Moses said to Hobab, we are to encamp in the Wilderness, but thou mayest be unto us instead of Eyes, Numb. 10. 23. So he hath engaged to guide them continually, Isa. 58. 11. Deut. 1. 33. He is as Eyes to them, where they are in a Land of Pits and Desarts, to guide them in the Wilderness Journeys, while they are searching out the Land of Glory.

Secondly, Care; His Eyes and his Heart are on them continually, 2 Chro. 7. 16. He is measuring Jerusalem, to see what is the Length thereof, and what is the breadth thereof, that she may be built, Zach. 2. 2.

Thirdly, Conduct is the Office of a Head; It ought to lead and dispose of the body and all it's Members to their several Offices. So the Lord Jesus is given to his Church, for their Leader as well as Commander, Isa. 55. 4. chap. 48. 17. I am the Lord thy God, which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way thou shouldest go. 'Tis in the Original, making or causing thee to walk; he doth not only show them the way, but leads them by the hand, and helps them to go, as, Hos. 11. 3. Deut. 32. 12. So the Lord alone did lead them. Christ undertakes to conduct his people thorough the World unto Glory.

Fourthly, Government is another act of Headship, Mic. 2. 13. Their King shall pass before them, and the Lord on the head of them: that is, The Lord shall be their Governor and General, Isa. 9. 6, 7. The Government is upon his Shoulders, Heb. 3. 16. He is the Son over his house, to rule and govern it, and this he doth, by making righteous and perfect Laws, and Rules, thereby to govern his Church, Matth. 28. 20. Acts. 1. 2. Heb. 3. 1, 2, 3. And by governing and subduing the Hearts and Wills of his people unto them, Psal. 110. 3. 2 Cor. 10. 5.

Fifthly, Influence; This comes from the Head; all animal Influence for Subsistence, Motion, guiding and action come from thence; in the Head are all the Senses and Intellectuals exerted for the use and Service of the Body, so is the Lord Jesus the head of all vital Influences, to the whole Church and every part of it, Psal. 87. 7. All my Springs are in thee, Joh. 15. 4. As the Branch cannot bear Fruit, except it abide in the Vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me, Col. 3. 3, 4. chap. 2. 19. Believers can no longer live, than Christ becomes a quickening Spirit to them; he alone animates their Souls to every good work, anoints their Eyes, and causeth them to see, regulates their Palate, and maketh them to taste the Sweetness of spiritual things, open their Ears to discipline, causeth them to feel the Weightiness of Sin, and to smell a sweet savor in his precious Oyntments.

Lastly, Ornament; The head is the beauty of the Body, if that be removed, the Body is but a deformed lump; Christ is the Believers Excellency and Glory, he hath the preeminence in all things, Col. 1. 18. And his glory is the Glory of the body, 1 Cor. 12. 24. All the Saints Excellencies are in and from him, Psal. 68. 34. Psal. 89. 17. For thou art the Glory of their Strength, 'tis through his Comeliness they are perfect, Ezek. 16. ver. 10. to 14.

Fifthly, Christ is faithful in the acts of distributive Justice, and renders to everyone their Due, Psalm 62. 1. Thou renderest to every man according to his Work. There is a legal and evangelical Debt; legally, There is nothing due to the Children of men, but Wrath and Tribulation, Rom. 2. 9. But Evangelically all the Believers Rights are due on the account of Christ. So that all what Christ hath purchased, or the Father promised to Christ, is due to his Seed; so that Mercy, Grace, and Glory is as much the Believers due, as Death and Vengeance is the Sinners, on the score of his Sin, 2 Thes. 1. 6. 7. Therefore the Justice of Christ is laid to pawn for the pardon of Believers Sins, upon their penitential Confession, 1 John 1. 9. This is the great Error of troubled Souls, that they make their Worthyness or Unworthyness the Standard and Measure of all their Expectations; this is the Impotency the violated Law of God hath left on fallen man, that they cannot get over Mount Sinai, nor see the Righteousness of Christ, and the Equity of Salvation upon his account; for their Sins and Unrighteousnesses do so hang in their Eye, that they cannot see themselves righteous in the Righteousness of another; This Tang of a legal Spirit is a malady-Grace, is long a curing in Saints themselves; the want of which robs Christ of the Glory of his Grace and Righteousness: But know O Believers, the Lord Jesus would be unfaithful if he render not to those that live on him for Sanctification and Salvation all that he hath promised in the Gospel, and hath died to purchase for them; but this cannot be as you have heard abundantly, that the Lord Jesus is faithful in acts of Remuneration; he cannot keep back another's due, who would have all men to render to others their due: But all that God hath made over in the new Covenant to Believers, is their due, and therefore will Christ render it in it's season. And thus have I opened and proved this glorious Excellency of the Lord Jesus, even his Faithfulness; it remains now, that we make some Improvement of it.

Use 1. How great then is the Sin of all those that will not credit the Faithfulness of Christ; there are none that perish under the Ministry of the Gospel, but stumble at this stumbling block; they do not judge God faithful, nor believe the report given of Christ, Isaiah 53. 1. Though Christ be manifestly held forth to be a perfect Savior, yet few will believe in him; not one of a hundred (says Calvin) that hear Christ daily will yet believe in him: you know it Sinners, you may safely adventure your Souls on Christ, he cannot lie or fail you: you have the whole word of God for your Assurance, all the Scriptures testify of him, John 5. 39. Acts 18. 28. You have the Evidences of Christ's Faithfulness in his state of Humiliation, he did and suffered all things written of him, Luke 18. 31. He fulfilled all Righteousness, Matth. 3. 15. His Death, Resurrection, and Ascension, prove him faithful in all things tending to purchase Salvation. You have the Testimony of others, who have found Christ faithful, 1 John 1. 1, 2. All the Saints on record are witnesses of Christ's Fidelity. Nay, you yourselves have found him faithful hitherto; how often hath he made good his Promises to you, when you have called upon him, and trusted in him for outward Mercies. You trust other things that are unfaithful, and yet will not believe in Christ: You trust your own Hearts, and they are deceitful, Jer. 17. 9. You trust in men, and yet they are a lie, Rom. 3. 4. You trust in Creatures, and yet they are vanity, Eccles. 1. 2. You know, without Faith you must perish to all Eternity, and yet will not believe in him.

Use 2. Then this reproveth the People of Christ for their injurious Thoughts of him, Joh. 1. 11. He came unto his own, and his own received him not. This is an aggravation indeed, that Christ's own People, such as have professed him, chosen him, commended him, and born witness of him, and yet will not adventure their All upon him. O, this secret Jealousy of Christ is a fearful Sin. This was that our Lord reproveth in Thomas, Joh. 20. 5. So John. 14. 11. Believe me, that I am in the Father, and the Father in me, or else believe me for the Works sake. O the Questions and Doubts that Souls have about the fulfilling of Promises! how loath they are to trust Christ further than they see him.

Use 3. This should humble Christians, for their great unfaithfulness. Alas! how few are found faithful amongst the Saints this day! How may we complain with the Psalmist, Psal. 12. 1. The godly man ceaseth, and the faithful fail from among the children of men: and Christ seems to Quere, where he may find a faithful Steward, Luk. 12. 42. And Paul says, I know no man like minded to Timothy, who so faithfully and naturally careth for your state. O the falseness of Professors, to the Lord Jesus, and one another! How rare is it to find one that makes Conscience of Promises and Profession? one that is faithful to his Trust, to his Word, to his Relation-duties, and in distributive Justice. O, Christians, Mourn over your great unfaithfulness to God, and men; to those Souls you are concerned in: Your unfaithfulness to your Children, Servants, and Neighbors; how little have you done for these to this day? Some of you are Parents; and Masters, but where hath been your Industry in your Families, in teaching, reprovng, and laboring to save the Souls of those committed to you? The Lord lay not the neglect of this to your Charge, nor being in the Blood of your ignorant, profane, perishing Families, Children or Servants, on your head. I must tell you, Friends, it will be dreadfully heavy to bear the blood of Souls, at the Judgment-seat of Christ: and yet, I fear, without Repentance, is like to be the case of some that now hear me, who have been unfaithful to the Souls of their Relations, Husband, Wife, Children, and Servants; who have been too furious in reprovng their Faults towards them, but scarce ever reprovng their Sin against God. Who can hear their Children and Servants swear, take God's Reverend Name in vain, and see them profane Sabbaths, and spend Sacred time in Debauchery and Idleness, and scarce ever check them; that can suffer them to lie in Ignorance, and ready to perish for want of Knowledge, and never labor to catechize and instruct them in the knowledge of Salvation: This is a lamentable case, and will appear so, when these Parents and Masters shall appear before God, with their garments all gor'd and stained with the blood of their Families. O cruel Masters, and Parents, that will be tender of a Horse or a Dog, to feed them, and secure them from want, but can endure to see your children and Servants perish for want of knowledge.

Use 4. Here's Comfort to Believers: Is the Lord Jesus Faithful, then be of good cheer. For, First, All the Promises of God shall be made good to you in due season: He will not suffer a word to fall to the ground of all that good he hath spoken concerning you, 1 Sam. 3. 19. Isa. 55. 11. 2 Cor. 1. 20. Numb. 23. 19. Then you cannot do too much for God, you canit be undone for him; your Souls are safe, your best Interests are secured, and all that God sees fit for you, is beyond the reach of Men and Devils.

Secondly, All the trust committed to Christ for you, shall be made good: He will perform it to a tittle: The Father hath entrusted your Souls, your Graces, your Comforts, your Names, your Supplies, your Strength, your Interest, your Peace, your Welfare, and your Glory, with him, who is faithful, and cannot wrong you. O Believers, if he will not suffer men or Devils to do you harm, surely he himself will not wrong you, Psal. 105. 14.

Thirdly, All your Relation-Rights shall be made good to you: Look what is due to you from the Lord Jesus, as your Friend, as your Brother, as your Husband, and as your Head, shall be made good to you.

Fourthly, All that is due to you upon the strictest terms of the Gospel, shall be communicated to you; All that Christ hath purchased, or God hath promise'd, you shall have in due time; Christ can defraud no man, Luk. 12. 42.

Fifthly, Here's Comfort to you under all the wrongs you meet with on Earth, that you have a faithful Friend in Heaven: Here the best of men are a Lye, they are not what you conceive them to be, they do not answer the expectation you have from them: But Christ will never fail you of that Trust you have reposed in him; he will be infinitely better but cannot be worse than your expectations.

Use 5. Let this exhort, first, Sinners: If Christ be so faithful, O then choose him for your Friend: The fidelity of your present Friends cannot be compared with Christ.

Secondly, Believers, Trust in Christ; Commit your Souls, and all your Concerns to him; Learn faithfulness from him; and labor to be like him in your fidelity to God and Men. So much of the first Branch, concerning Christ's Personal Riches.

CHAP. XVII.

Showing that Christ is become a Purchaser in the behalf of Believers; How he hath made this Purchase, and what he hath purchased.

I Now come to the Second Branch of Christ's Unsearchable Treasure, which is his purchased Riches: Those Treasures which he hath as Mediator procured for all that come unto him. And in the prosecution of this, I shall show,

1. That the Lord Jesus became a Purchaser in the behalf of his People.
2. How and by what means he made this Purchase.
3. What he hath procured by this Purchase. And in this I shall use what brevity I may, having spent a greater time already on this Subject than I intended.

First, The Scriptures do hold forth the Lord Jesus to be a Purchaser: One that hath bought and procured great and glorious things by a Price. Acts. 20. 28. Feed the Flock of God which he hath Purchased with his own blood: (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) that is, which he hath acquired or gotten to himself to be a peculiar People, by the blood or cruel bloody death of his Son. So Grotius. So Heaven is called the purchased Possession, Eph. 1. 14. Until the Redemption of the purchased possession: (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) 'Tis exceeding significant in the Original, both words being near of a signification, until or to the purchasing of the purchased, so 'tis in the words; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 signifies a Buying or ransoming by a price, yea a full sum, so much as the worth of the thing requires: As prisoners are redeemed by a full price: So Erasmus and Aretius. It signifies also a full and complete Redemption, as the Preposition 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 implies, being added to the Primitive 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 : & (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) as I have shewn is an obtaining by purchase, or an asserting or vindicating a thing to be ones Propriety by right and purchase, which fully proves Christ to be a Purchaser, so 1. Thes. 5. 9. To obtain Salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) to the getting or purchasing of Salvation by Christ. So 1. Cor. 6. 20. Ye are bought with a Price. (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .) The word is a buying in the Market or public place, by paying the price demanded. So that these expressions fully Prove Christ to be a Purchaser, one that hath procured great things by buying them at a Price.

Secondly; How and by what means hath Christ procured and purchased these great things.

First; By giving himself in the room and stead of fallen Man, to procure their Atonement and Salvation. Eph. 5. 25. As Christ loved the Church, and gave himself for it: (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) He delivered over himself freely, and knowingly. To what? See Ver. 2. For an Offering and Sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savor, (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .) The first word signifies any Sacrifice, the second a bloody Sacrifice, says Zanchi: So Christ made over and delivered up himself to this end to become a bloody Sacrifice for his People, and to fulfil the Fathers Terms for the saving of all that come to him. This he did considerably and willingly: Heb. 10. 7. This was according to the agreement betwixt the Father and the Son. Isa. 49. ver. 2. to 10.

Secondly; By a perfect and perpetual Obedience of all those Laws that were or are required of us in order to our holiness and Salvation, and by a subjection to, and Obedience of the special Law of a Mediator: This hath two parts.

First; His Obedience of what was required of Man by any Law: By the Law of Nature, or by any Instituted Law, either Moral, Ceremonial, or Judicial: All this did Christ submit to and perfectly obey as in the stead of all Believers; Mat. 3. 15. It became him to fulfill all Righteousness. Whatever holiness or Obedience was required of Man in the state of Innocency, or since his fall. And therefore 'tis said, Gal. 4. 4. He was made under the Law, as a Man or Minister, bound by his own consent to the full Obedience of it.

Secondly; His obeying all those things that were required of him as Mediator, Phil. 2. 7. That he should make himself poor, and of no reputation, and take upon him the form of a Servant (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) He emptied himself of his Glory: He stripped himself of all his royal robes, and made himself of no account. This was not required by any Law natural or positive, but by the Law of a Mediator. Again he humbled himself to the death, Phil. 2. 8. He had power or liberty, absolutely considered, to lay down his life or not to do it; but with respect to his Mediatorship he had a Commandment to lay it down, Joh. 10. 18. Further, 'Twas by this Law Christ was bound to do all that he did for his People. Joh. 17. 19. Only for their sakes sanctify I myself. So ver. 9. I pray for them, I pray not for the World. So he was not to strive or open his mouth, but patiently to bear whatever was laid upon him. Isa. 42. 2. Isa. 53. 7. Mat. 12. 19. And by this Obedience of Christ are believers made righteous, Rom. 5. 18, 19. For this is necessary to Salvation, that the Commandments be kept, Math. 19. 17. And the Law fulfilled, Math. 5. 17.

Thirdly; By his suffering all things we were liable to by the first transgression, or any actual Sins flowing from it, Phil. 2. 8. This he did in all the sufferings of his Life; and at his death, he bore the sins of believers for them, 1. Pet 2. 24. He was wounded for our Transgressions. Isa. 53. 5.

2 Cor. 5. 21. And became a Sacrifice to God for Sin. Isa 53. 10. Heb. 9. 26. The end of which was atonement, Heb. 2. 17. He also paid the price that God demanded for their deliverance. 1 Cor. 7. 23. Ye are bought with a price. 1 Pet. 1. 17, 18. Math. 20. 28. He gave himself a ransom for us.

Lastly, By his Intercession Christ completes his Purchase, and carries on the salvation of his people. Rom. 8. 34. Who is he that condemneth? it is Christ that died, yea rather is risen again, who is also at the right hand of God and maketh Intercession for us. Though by this he doth not purchase for his people, yet he doth procure and apply mercy to them: As I have largely shewn already, therefore shall wave it now.

Thirdly, What are those great and glorious things which J^hsus Christ hath procured by his blood?

First, He hath purchased Believers themselves unto God. Acts 20. 28. Feed the Flock of God which he hath purchased with his blood. Rev. 5. 9. For thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us unto God by thy blood. Every saved soul is part of Christ's purchase: They are set apart for God. Psa. 4. 3. A peculiar People to God. 1 Pet. 2. 9. Though the Father hath ordained them to life, yet they are not actually his till purchased by Christ. Hence it is that Believers Conversion, is not casual or dependent upon Men or means, but is the effect and fruit of Christ's blood purely designed, and unavoidably perfected by Redemption-grace: And hence also their Salvation is sure, being founded on the purchase of Christ. As sure as Christ's blood cannot be spilled in vain, so sure shall every Believer have his Salvation perfected, because it depends upon the Obedience, Merit, and Suffering of Christ. Hence also all the Means of Salvation and the Efficacy of them are certain to believers, Eph. 4. 8.

Secondly; He hath Purchased pardon of Sin, and peace with God. Col. 1. 20. Having made peace by the blood of his Cross: Chap. 2. 13. Heb. 8. 12. Rom. 5. 1. There is a full Pardon of Sin, of all the sins of believers, and of every believers, purchased by the blood of Christ. Here are four things I shall speak to.

First; That there is a full Pardon of sin procured; The Scripture sets this forth by clear and pregnant arguments, and by several terms that leave no room for the least Suspicion to the believing Soul. 'Tis called sometimes Remission of Sin, Luke 24. 47. And that Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his Name: (< in non-Latin alphabet >) it signifies Dismission or Releasing. All unchanged Souls are in Debt to God, bound over to wrath, and laid up in Prison, but by Jesus Christ there is a discharge of this Debt procured, the bond Cancell'd, the Prison opened, and the Sinners set free, Isa. 61. 1.

Sometimes 'tis called not imputing sin, not laying it to the sinners charge, Psa. 32. 1, 2. imputeth not iniquity; that is, doth not charge, and reckon it, and lay it on his account: As a Merchant that sends his Bill to his Debtor, and charges several sums upon him: 'Tis true every Believer is a Debtor in himself, but God chargeth the Debt on another, and not on them.

Sometimes 'tis termed a covering or hiding of sin, not from the sinners, but from God's judicial Eye; Psa. 85. 2. Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people, thou hast covered all their sin. Psa. 78. 38. He being full of compassion forgave their iniquity. [Caphar] to cover or conceal; from this Root is derived Caphoreth, the covering of the Ark or Mercy-seat, in which was the Law or knowledge of sin, but by the blood of Christ was covered or purged away.

Sometimes 'tis expressed by not remembering sin anymore; Jer. 31. 34. I will remember their sin no more: I will be propitiously merciful, or pacifiedly favorable to their sins, and their sinful errors and unrighteousness will I remember no more; or I will not remember them again: Here are two Negatives which make the denial the more vehement. 'Tis an allusion to men that forgive and forget, and it signifies that God will not upbraid or reproach them with them anymore: hence Paul challengeth all the world to lay anything to the charge of God's Elect, Rom. 8. 33.

Further, 'tis set forth by a taking away of sin; Exod. 34. 7. Forgiving iniquity, transgression and sin. The word in the Original is, lifting up or taking away all sorts of sins and iniquities.

Again, 'tis signified by blotting out of sin, so that it shall never be seen more; Isa. 43. 25. I even I am he that blotteth out thy transgressions: Like the Merchant when the debt is paid crosseth the Book, throws Ink on it, blots it out, that it may not be read anymore; so God the Father casts the blood of Christ on a Believer's sin, and blots it out, so that Justice can lay no more to their charge.

Again, 'tis called a casting of sin behind his back, Isa. 38. 17. He doth remove them out of his sight as far as the East is from the West, Ps. 103. 12. He will cast all their sins into the depth of the Sea, Mic. 7. 18, 19. O the latitude of Believers pardon, and the full discharge of all their sin! Sometimes God seems to be throwing off his people, and giving them a final farewell; but, oh! he returns again, and casteth their sins, (not them,) into the depth of the Sea, where they shall be certainly drowned as the Egyptian were, never to be seen more.

Thus you see there's a full pardon procured for God's people, not the least ground for a Question left to them.

Secondly, There is not only a full pardon procured, but a pardon of every sin. All the sins of God's people are forgiven: Col. 2. 13. 14. Having forgiven you all trespasses, blotting out the handwriting: that not one debt may be seen; as a Book or Bill that is blotted out can be never more sued against one: 1 Joh. 1. 7. The blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sin. Jer. 50. 20. The iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found, for I will pardon them whom I reserve: The most cruel Enemy upon the strictest search shall not find one; they shall be all forgiven: And indeed if Grace be free, there is the same reason why all shall be pardoned as well as one: And if the grace of God bring salvation then all must be forgiven or none: And the same blood of Christ can as well pardon all as one. For if the blood of Christ be the blood of God, then 'tis of an infinite value, and can as easily blot out every sin as one sin; and as well discharge Talents as Pence. Ezek. 18. 22. Larga Dei pietas veniam non dimidiabit. Aut nihil aut totum dabit.

Thirdly, This pardon of sin is procured for repenting Believers, and for all of them: Acts 10. 43. To him give all the Prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receiveremission of sins: Acts 13. 38. chap. 26. 18. Faith is necessary to pardon, because it takes off all self-righteousness, and all pretences of merit. Faith carries the soul off to a dependence on another for righteousness and salvation. Faith is a self-denying Grace, and expects all upon the account of the Promise. Believers, and every Believer, have their sins pardoned, and shall not perish, Joh. 3. 16. Now lest some should pretend to believe, who indeed do not, the Scripture qualifies this Faith by certain Characters. 'Tis also to repenting souls that pardon is assured, and therefore remission of sin is joined with repentance, Acts 5. 31. Luke 24. 46, 47. Ezek. 18. 30. But what is this repentance? Doth it consist only in an external sorrow for sin, and an audible begging of mercy? No, no, Judas and Cain were thus troubled for sin, and yet never arrived to sound repentance: 'Tis the mourning and returning believer to whom this Promise is made: and to such, and to everyone of these is a full pardon procured.

Fourthly, This pardon is procured by the blood of Christ, and that satisfaction made to the Father by his suffering. It is an Opinion sprung up of men of corrupt minds, that pardon of Sin is the procurement of Inherent grace, and external Righteousness, but not the product of Christ's blood, suffering and satisfaction, which I shall now endeavor to disprove, Math. 20. 28. To give his Life a Ransom for many. Heb. 9. 26. But now once in the end of the World hath he appeared to put away sin by the Sacrifice of himself, chap. 9. 12. Col. 1. 14. Thus you see 'tis the blood of Christ offered up to God, that procureth peace, and removeth the guilt of sin: and indeed pardon of sin with respect to God's Justice could be no otherway obtained. For,

First, God had past an irrevocable sentence, that the Soul that sinneth should die, Gen. 2. 17. Now if this penalty was not inflicted upon Transgressing Adam; how would there be a fulfilling of this threatening. But some may enquire, How comes Adams sin to be charged on his Posterity? Answ. Adams Transgression, by the strict union there was betwixt him and all mankind, (he being their Head, Root, and Representee) was most justly devolv'd on his Offspring, Rom. 5. 14, 19. And therefore God would not have been true to his word, had not this penalty been inflicted on the Debtor, or his Surety: But let God be true, and every Man a liar.

Secondly, Fallen Man could not pay this debt, and make this satisfaction for sin: For the sin being of an infinite Guilt, and the punishment being Death Eternal, Rom. 6. 23. Man could never pay his ransom, and set himself at liberty, and therefore some other way must be found out, which was only by the Lord Jesus, God-Man, whose God-head was able to support his human Nature under suffering, and render his endurings of an Infinite value, Heb. 9. 14. Acts 20. 28. This is the second Fruit of Christ's Purchase; the forgiveness of all the sins of penitent believers, even past, present, and to come, that nothing shall be laid to their charge, Rom. 8. 1.

Thirdly, Acceptation of their Persons is another Fruit of Christ's purchase, Eph. 1. 6. Wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved: 'Tis not enough to the completing of Christ's design in saving Souls, that their sins be forgiven, and the guilt and penalty removed, and a discharge of all the Obligations to wrath by reason of sin procured. All this a person may have, and yet no interest in the full favor of God, nor right to any saving blessing from him; for 'tis not sufficient to give a Man a Title to Glory, that he be innocent, or free from offending, but he must come up to the terms of the first Covenant, and do all things required of him; and have a Positive as well as a Negative Righteousness: There must be in order to an acceptance with God, not only a not imputing of sin, but a reckoning of Righteousness (saith Dr. Owen); he must be reputed fully Obedient also. The Law requires a perfect and perpetual Obedience, Gal. 3. 10. Should thy Soul be set free from all the charge of past sins, yet thy defect of Righteousness would undo thee forever. They must be righteous that enter into Life Eternal, Math. 25. 47. Even as Righteous as God is Righteous: But this is impossible to be attained by lapsed man, In many things we offend all, Jam. 3. 2. There is none Righteous, no not one, Rom. 3. 10. And therefore there must be a Righteousness procured for, and imputed to Believers, and that is the Righteousness of Christ: The Commutation of his Obedience for our Disobedience, Rom. 5. 19. By the Obedience of one shall many be made Righteous. This Righteousness is called a white Robe, and fine Linnen, Rev. 7. 9. Chap. 19. 8. The sweet smelling Garment of our Elder Brother wherein God takes infinite delight and pleasure, Math. 3. 17. Isa. 42. 1. The ground of all that pleasure that God taketh in his people, is the Righteousness of his Son: not any of their Services and duties: And look what pleasure the Father takes in his Son as Mediator, the same he takes in every Soul that truly comes unto him, John 17. 26. That the same love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them.

USE.

If Believers are pardoned and accepted with God, then hence it follows,

First, That God never punishes them in wrath and displeasure. All the strokes of God on Believers are but fatherly chastisements: Not Judicial acts, Heb. 12. 6. He takes vengeance on their inventions, but never on their persons▪ Punishment always bears some proportion to the offense, but the sufferings of God's people are infinitely less then their deserts, and therefore are the Fruit of Divine Faithfulness, and Covenant Love, Psal. 119. 75. Psal. 78. 30, to 34.

Secondly, God will accept of all their sincere desires and services, though never so mean, through Christ. Isa. 38. 14. Isa. 63. 8. Exek. 20. 40, 41. Psal. 51. 17.

Thirdly, They have access to God with boldness at all times, Eph. 3. 12. chap. 2. 8.

Fourthly, They are entered into rest, and have peace with God, and with their own Consciences. Math. 11. 28. Heb. 4. 9. Rom. 5. 1. 2 Thes. 1. 6, 7. Psal. 116. 7. H•b. 4. 3.

Fifthly, Sin shall never more have dominion over them. Rom. 6. 14.

Sixthly, God will withhold no good thing from them, Rom. 8. 32. No temporal blessing, Math. 6. 33. No spiritual blessing, 1 Tim. 4. 8. No instruction, Jer. 31. 33. Isa. 54. 13. Joh. 14. 26. No sanctified correction, Heb. 10. 10, 11. Rom. 5. 3, to 5. No consolation, Isa. 51. 3. 2 Cor. 1. 4. No edification and increase in Grace, Eph. 4. 12, 16. Nay all things shall work together for good to them that love God, Rom. 8. 28.

Lastly, They can never forfeit their state of Grace, and interest in the Favor of God, Joh. 13. 1. 2 Cor. 7. 10. They shall be sure to be kept by the mighty power of God unto Salvation, 1 Pet. 1. 5. There is not the least room left for a falling off from Grace: Because,

First, Salvation is purchased for them; and if the end be purchased, then all the means to the end; and God in Justice is bound to make good Christ's purchase, and to deliver what he bought and paid for, 2 Tim. 4. 8.

Secondly, Preservation in grace is engaged to them. Jer. 32. 40. 1 Thes. 5. 23, 24. The very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole Spirit, Soul, and Body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ: Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it Here we may see both Sanctification and Salvation is secured to all that are savingly called of God. Salvation is the End, and sanctification is the Means, and both are sounded not on the will of Man, or on his care and fidelity, but as depending on the act and faithfulness of God; not only the first Act of Sanctification, but Preservation; continuance, and growth in Grace is the work of God, and it's perseverance is laid upon divine preservation; to which God hath bound himself by promise to every Soul that is truly sanctified, and his Faithfulness is engaged to make it good.

Thirdly, They are put into the Hands of Christ on purpose to be secured in Grace to Glory, Joh. 10. 28, 29. They shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand: They are engraven on the palms of his hands; their walls are continually before him, Isa. 49. 16. Their Walls, that is their safety: This was spoken in a time when the Walls of Jerusalem were broken down: Yet at that time God had Walls about them to secure them, which they saw not. Both Believers themselves, their Graces, and all the Promises are put into the hands of Christ, hence they cannot fall away.

Fourthly, True Grace is of an abiding nature, 1 Joh. 3. 9. Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin, for his seed abideth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is born of God. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 not at constantiam & penitissimam inhaesionem, (saith one) 'Tis an abiding, and constant inhesion of Grace. Some to evade the evidence of this Truth, would pervert the sense of it, taking it for the new Creature which is born of God; whereas the Original is clear against it 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, in the Masculine Gender, which notes a person, not a thing. Again, it would be a Tautologie to add a reason why such a one cannot sin, because he is born of God, and his seed remaineth in him, whereas the new Creature, and the seed of God are all one, but here they note two things; First, A Person; Secondly, The Regenerate part of the Person; which is fully explained in the following ver. where he that is born of God, or the Child of God, is opposed to the Child of the Devil, which is meant of a distinct Person, not a different Nature in the same Person; and this seed of God is of an abiding nature wherever it comes, it comes never wholly to depart more, Isa. 59. 21.

Fifthly, Because their Life is hid in Christ, and therefore cannot be lost and perish at their pleasure, Col. 3. 3, 4. The Believers Grace is sure in the Root, however it be in the Branch, and therefore Christ engages to his people, that they shall live because he lives, Joh. 14. 19.

Lastly, They have an Inseparable union with the Spirit of Grace that dwells in them, Rom. 8. 11. He that raised up Jesus from the dead shall also quicken your mortal Bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. Where the Article 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 as one observes, ever notes the Person of the Holy Ghost, not his Graces; so that the Saints have an abiding union with the Spirit of God the third Person, and so cannot perish for want of Grace, but are kept by the power of God through Faith unto Salvation. He can never want Water that may have access to the Fountain or Ocean; nor can any Soul be destitute of Grace that is united to the Spirit of Grace. The Graces of Saints are sure; their Faith, their Preservation is sure: O what a glorious privilege is this that flows to Believers, from this purchase of Christ, that their Salvation is sure, and they may know it to be so.

CHAP. XVIII.

Sanctification and Holiness is purchased for Believers, by the Death and Sufferings of Jesus Christ.

ANother part of Christ's purchased Treasure for Believers, is,

Fourthly, The Sanctification of their Natures and Persons. Here I shall show,

- 1. That the Lord Jesus hath Purchased Grace and Holiness.
- 2. For whom this Holiness is purchased.
- 3. What this Holiness is he hath purchased.
- 4. That this is part of Christ's Treasure.

First, That the Lord Jesus hath purchased the sanctification of the Natures and Persons of his people. This I shall prove by several Arguments.

First, All the Types under the Law do imply so much, and darkly open this great truth to Believers. We find that Christ in the non-age and Infant state of his Church and People dealt with them in Figures and Shadows: So the Laver, and Sacrifices, the Priests pure and white Robes and Vestments, and the washing of their Garments, when they were to approach the Divine Majesty, were Typical of this Holiness, which he was to procure for his people in the fullness of time, so much the Apostle imports, Col. 2. 17. Which are a shadow of things to come, but the Body is of Christ. The shadow goes before, and the body follows: These Types are precedaneous to the coming of Christ, and his full accomplishment of the things intended, and signified by them, thus Christ is the Altar that sanctifies the gift; In him we have those true and solid good things which were shadowed out in those Ceremonies under the Law, (says Daven. on the place)

Secondly; The Names and Titles given to Christ import so much: He is called Jesus, because he shall save his People from their sins: Mat. 1. 21. He is called a Redeemer to deliver them from their Bondages and hard Service: He is termed the Sanctifier: For he that Sanctifieth, and they that are Sanctified are all of one. Heb. 2. 11.

Thirdly; For this end, he was actually designed of God, and made over to his People in the Everlasting Covenant, decrees, purposes, and determinations of God. 1. Cor. 1. 30. He is made of God unto us Wisdom, Righteousness, Sanctification, and Redemption. He is made of God: Non in creatione, sed in ordinatione (saith Pareus). Not created so according to his Divine Essence, as some Heretics assert, but ordained and given of God to this end to be Sanctification, that is the Author of Sanctification, and therefore he is said to save to the uttermost, Heb. 7. 25. which can never be accomplished without Holiness; For without holiness no man can see the Lord, Heb. 12. 14.

Fourthly, For this work was the Lord Jesus promised by the Father to come unto Zion, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob. Rom. 11. 26. This Scripture is quoted out of Isa. 50. 10. from which the Apostle varies, following the Septuagint Translation (then in great use) rather than the Hebr. seeing it retains the sense, though different in words: In Isa. 'tis The Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from Transgression: The Apostle says, He shall come out of Zion, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob: To reconcile which, Peter Martyr thinks the Septuagint might mistake (Lashub) To turn, for (Leshabe) To them that turn: But this is not likely that those Learned Doctors could be so mistaken in the Original, and therefore 'tis a far better answer that Beza and Grynaeus do give, That the Prophet speaketh of the Effect of Christ's coming; which is a turning away from Sin: And that the Apostle speaks of the Cause of their turning from Sin; which is Christ's taking away of Sin, for none can turn from sin, till Christ do remove Sin: And this is the end of his coming into the World: To this end he is promised: Mal. 3. 2, 3. He shall sit as refiners fire, and purify the Sons of Levi. The Sons of Levi are, Firstly meant of the Apostles: Secondly, I suppose, of all the Saints: But so much is clear, that the Lord Jesus is promised to be a refiner to his People in Gospel times and to purge away their filth and dross, and to make them Holy.

Fifthly; For this end it was the Lord Jesus Christ gave himself up to Redemption-work. Eph. 5. 25, 26, 27. As Christ also loved the Church, and gave himself for it; that he might Sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of Water by the word: Here we have; 1. One great end of Christ's Obedience and Suffering; 'tis to make his People Holy. 2. Here's the efficient Cause of this Holiness, that is, By the Spirit of Christ; The blood of Christ purges away the guilt of sin Meritoriously, and the Spirit of Christ purifies the filth of sin Efficiently; signified by Water, as 'tis often used in Scripture. Joh. 4. 10. 14. Chap. 7. 38, 39. 3. Here's the instrumental cause of this Holiness, the means by which it is wrought and carried on, and that is by the word, the immortal seed of the Soul: This he undertook, and was intended to do in the Covenant of Redemption betwixt the Father and him. Isa. 42. 1, 2, 3, 4. He shall not fail till he hath set Judgment in the Earth, that is Holiness; for so 'tis taken, Joh. 16. 8. And this work is the Lord Jesus here engaged to do. Some take the word (Ethmoch) I uphold, passively for the Fathers dependence, and Christ's Faithfulness: He leans or stays upon his undertaking this work, and trusts to his performance of what he undertook to do: Others take it actively for the Fathers upholding and carrying Christ through this great work of Redemption, and Sanctification. In both senses 'tis true, The Lord Jesus stands engaged to carry on Redemption-work, and is thoroughly furnished with grace to accomplish it, Heb. 10. 7. Christ readily consents to the fulfilling of the Fathers will; and what that was you have Isa. 42. 7. To open the blind eyes, and to bring out the Prisoners out of the Prison, which is meant of the work of Redemption, and Regeneration; and it was the will of God the Father that Christ should do this, 1. Thes. 4. 3. This is the will of God even your Sanctification: And this he stood bound to do, to promote and perfect the power of Holiness in all his Children. Now what Christ did undertake he finished Meritoriously, while on Earth. Joh. 17. 4. I have finished the work thou hast given me to do: And for the application of it, he is in Heaven to see it performed; and this is the work of his Intercession, Joh. 17. 17. Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth. This Christ Intercedes for in Heaven, and therefore 'tis the fruit of his Purchase; for he Intercedes for no more in Heaven than what he died for on Earth.

Sixthly; His Authoritative sending the Spirit of Holiness to his people, shows his right to it by his Purchase. Joh. 16. 7. I will send him to you. That is after the finishing of his work, and re-instalment in Glory, Joh. 7. 39. For the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because Christ was not yet glorified.

Lastly; Were not holiness purchased for saved Souls, Christ's Redemption-work would be imperfect, neither could Souls ever answer the ends for which he died. Without Holiness were procured and completed by Christ, there could be no Salvation. For,

First; Man cannot Sanctify himself; We are all as an unclean thing and our Righteousness as filthy rags, Isa. 64. 6. And who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? no not one, Job 14. 4. Indeed the Scripture sometimes speaks after this manner, Make you a clean heart, Ezek. 18. 31. Make you a new heart. So Isa. 1. 16. Wash ye, make ye clean: But there is Mans Duty not his power: It shows the subject, not the Author or this holiness; and where you find such Exhortations, they are to lead men to Christ for the getting of this Holiness wrought in them; as, 1 Pet. 2. 4. To whom come, as as to a living stone, &c.

Secondly, Without this holiness be wrought in Believers they can never be capable of answering the ends of Redemption; which are,

First, To enjoy Union and Fellowship with God, Joh. 11. 52. 1 Joh. 1. 3. Heb. 8. 10. Now without Holiness no Fellowship with God, 2 Cor. 6. 14, 15. 1 Pet. 1. 15, 16. For his Person is Holy; and his offerings and services are Holy.

Secondly, To reconcile together in one all things in Heaven and Earth, Col. 1. 20. But no Fellowship with Angels or Saints in Heaven without holiness for they are holy Creatures.

Thirdly, To be brought into the nearest Union, and Conformity to himself, Rom. 6. 4, 5. But without Holiness this cannot be.

Fourthly, To be a Name and a praise unto God, Eph. 1. 12. But without Holiness no glorifying of God.

Fifthly, To bring Souls to the possession of the purchased Inheritance in Glory, Eph. 1. 14. But nothing that defileth shall enter within the Gate of the new Jerusalem, Rev. 21. 27. So much for the first Head, That Jesus Christ hath Purchased Holiness. We shall now enquire, Secondly, For whom hath the Lord Jesus Purchased Holiness?

Answ. For all his feed; for every Soul the Father hath given him, Joh. 17. 9. Christ's Purchase, death, and Intercession is only for those the Father hath given him, and everyone of them, for all his seed that belong to him as the second Adam. And in this sense is that Scripture to be taken: Rom. 5. 18. As by the offense of one Judgment came upon all Men to Condemnation, even so by the Righteousness of one the free gift came upon all Men to Justification of life. That is; As death came by Adams fall to all his seed, so life comes by Christ to all his seed; neither can it be stretched further, as the Apostle affirms, 1 Joh. 5. 12. He that hath the Son hath life, but he that hath not the Son hath not life. Neither will any affirm, that all Men are justified unto life, nor any but those that believe in Christ, which are his seed: The Lord Jesus tells us, Joh. 17. 20; 'Tis for all them that believe on him through his word. Gal. 3. 22. That the Promise by Faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe: The Apostle speaks here of a double Promise made to Abraham, and through him to Believing Gentiles. 1. The Promise of Righteousness in Justification, ver. 18, 19. 2. The Promise of the Spirit in Sanctification, ver. 14. That we might receive the Promise of the Spirit through Faith, and both these are made over to Believers. You that come to Christ in truth, and receive him into your hearts by faith, and take his Yoke on your shoulders, obey his Laws, sincerely give up your all to him, and are no more your own, but though you see your want of Holiness, yet are really willing to be Holy as God is Holy, submitting to all the appointments of Christ, in order to it; you are the seed of Christ, the people to whom the Promise of Holiness doth belong.

Thirdly, What is the Holiness Christ hath Purchas'd for his People?

Answ, First; The truth of Grace, in opposition to Hypocrisy: The Lord Jesus never shed his blood for counterfeit grace. His purchased Treasure consists not of Counters, but tried Gold, Rev. 3. 17. What he offers to Sinners, that he purchased and died for; but Christ offers tried gold to invited Souls. Any thing short of saving grace is not worth the shedding of the blood of the Son of God. That which Christ Promiseth to his people is the same with that he hath purchased; but he promiseth true grace, Ezek. 36. 26, 27. He Promiseth a new heart, and a new heart is a truly sanctified heart: 'Tis his Spirit he will put within them; and his Spirit is a Spirit of truth, Joh. 14. 17. There is never a Soul whose heart is made willing to be the Lord's; but Jesus Christ hath purchased sincerity for him; Christ never died for Lies and Untruths, but seeming grace is a lie and not of the truth. This is wonderful comfort to poor troubled Souls that are always doubting of the truth of their graces, and would give a thousand Worlds to be sure that their gold is tried gold, and their graces true graces. Now if ever thy Soul were brought to desire Christ in truth, and to receive him with a lively Faith, thou mayest be sure thy graces are true, because the Lord Jesus hath purchased this for all Believers. Now this truth of Grace consists in a through change of the Soul, even of the whole Man; which may be distinguished into these two parts. 1. The taking away of Sin. 2. The giving of Grace, the delivering the Soul from the power of Satan, and the reducing it under the power of God, and into his Kingdom: The purging the Soul from Lust, and possessing it with Grace: the destroying the works of the Devil, and creating it the workmanship of God: In freeing the Soul from the Ruling Power of sin in every part, and implanting the Nature and Image of God on every Power and Faculty of it. Acts 26. 18. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Tit. 2. 14 Rom. 6. 14.

Secondly; Perseverance in Grace; Their continuance in a state of grace: And the abiding of the seed of God in them: 1 Joh. 3. 9. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 'tis the same word that signifies the Spirits abiding with Believers, which Christ saith shall be forever, Joh. 14. 16. 1 Joh. 2. 27. This he hath Promised in the new Covenant, and therefore this he hath purchased, Jer. 32. 40. And therefore the sanctified are called the preserved in Jesus Christ, Jude ver. 1. And the Saints are said to be kept by the Power of God through faith unto Salvation, 1 Pet. 1. 5. This Christ stands engaged to the Father to do, Joh. 17. 12. If Jesus Christ hath not purchased perseverance in Grace to the end for all his people, but leaves their continuance in the truth to their free-will, then he leaves them in the same state in which they were under the first Covenant: For the standing of Adam in the first Covenant was upon his own choice and will; but this cannot be, because Christ hath taken away the first Covenant from Believers, and Established the second which makes the Comers thereunto perfect, Heb. 8. 6. to 11. Chap. 10. 9, 10.

Thirdly; Growth in Grace: What he calls them to that he hath purchased for them; for Christ cannot invite his people to uncertainties or disappointments; what he exhorts them to, he promiseth to work them to, Phil. 2. 12, 13. Work out your Salvation with fear and trembling; For 'tis God that worketh in you both to will and to do. Now he bids them to grow in Grace, 2 Pet. 3. 18. And this he Promiseth also, Hos. 14. 5. 7. I will be as a dew unto Israel, and he shall grow as the Lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon, they that dwell under his shadow shall revive as the Corn, and grow as the Vine. Psa. 92. 12. The Righteous shall flourish as the Palm-Tree and grow as the Cedars in Lebanon. What God Promised under the new Covenant Christ hath died for; for this Covenant is wholly Confirmed by blood, by the death of the Testator, Heb. 9. 14, 17.

Quest: Then what is the reason God's People grow no more in Grace this day?

Answ. First; All are not Israel that are of Israel; Many pass for Saints in the Judgment of Men which were never sanctified in Christ Jesus, nor will appear to be so in the approbation of God; and therefore some in whom you see no growth, are no contradiction to this truth at all, they being none of the seed of Christ.

Secondly; The Lord's Trees as well as the Trees of the Wood have their growing times: The Winter is no time to grow; no nor the Winter of Temptation or divine desertion. Bodies have their growing times, so have Souls. Believer thy growing time may be yet to come if thou art Christ's.

Thirdly; Souls may grow, though slowly, and invisibly to themselves and others; Believers have sometimes a veil on their Eyes, and cannot discern their flourishing, and sometimes the smallness of Grace renders it indiscernible to others. There may be a growing downward in Faith, and Humility, those radical Graces that strengthen the Souls adherence to Christ, though there be no growing upwards in fruitfulness for Christ. There is a growing in internal longings and secret desires after more of God, and in higher valuations of Jesus Christ, though not in such sensible enjoyments of him. As the truth of Grace lies beyond the view of Men, so doth many times the growth of grace to a Mans self, and to others.

Fourthly; The People of God shall at last have their growth in grace further'd by their present decays in Grace. As the sickness of Children, though it makes them languish for a time, yet it helps on their growth when 'tis over; so the Winter season promotes the growth of Trees and herbs when the Summer comes.

Fourthly; The Lord Jesus hath Purchased for his people Perfection in Grace also: This is intended by his death, that they may be made perfect in one, Joh. 17. 23. This he presseth them to Mat. 5. 48. Be ye perfect as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect. And what he exhorts them to he prepares and hath redeemed them to. For this end he gives them Ordinances, that they may come to a perfect Man, to the fullness of the measure of the stature of Jesus Christ, Eph. 4. 12, 13. Heb. 10. 14. This perfection of grace is nothing else but glory. 1 Cor. 13. 10. When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away: And this Christ hath purchased for Believers, Joh. 10. 28.

Quest: If Christ hath Purchased perfection in Holiness; Then what's the reason the professing people of Christ are so imperfectly Holy, never a day since the Gospel, of more light, and less life; of more profession, and less Power of Holiness; Whence comes this so?

Answ. First; These are the last days, yea the latter part of the last days, and the last days are days of great unholiness, and little grace. O the Catalogue of sins the Scripture gives us that will abound at that time, 2 Tim. 3. 1. In the last days Perillous times shall come, for Men shall be lovers of themselves—Having a form of Godliness but denying the Power thereof. Christ himself shows us the complexion of the last times: Mat. 24. 12. Then Iniquity shall abound, and the love of many wax cold. The days before the Coming of Christ to avenge his Elect are days of little Grace: When the Son of Man comes shall he find Faith on the Earth? Luke 18. 8.

Secondly; Because of the abundance of Hypocrites that get under a profession, and crowd in amongst Saints: In the last times the greatest number of Men are formalists, as you have heard, 2. Tim. 3. 5. Half at least of Virgin Professors will at the coming of Christ be found foolish, and abundance of tares among the Wheat, and Goats among the Sheep, will be discovered when Christ comes to Judgment; and this hinders the holiness of professors, when a great number among them are rotten, and Carnal; unsound Persons amongst the sincere hinder their thriving in Grace, by their Examples and ensnaring Company; these, as Gangreens, do eat away all holiness; and as dead bodies become contagious; if the living touch the dead, they are unclean, Hag. 2. 13. Can a man touch Pitch, and not be defiled?

Thirdly, Because 'tis the hour, and power of darkness, Luke 22. 53. 'tis a time of great temptation to God's people: Satan is come down with great wrath, Rev. 12. 12. This Chap. is contemporary with the Seals and Trumpets, and gives us a repetition of the Churches State under the first and second Persecution; this ver. holds forth the second persecution under Antichrist, when Satan is cast out of the true Church, and Believers, and comes down among rotten professors, to stir them up to persecution, and then the Devil hath great wrath, especially in the latter part of his Reign, when he hath but a little time; then by temptation as well as persecution, he labors to destroy the Saints holiness.

Fourthly, God's leaving his people as a punishment of former sins under present Corruptions; for their humbling, and driving them nearer to himself. These may be some Reasons why there is so little holiness; but however, the time will come when Christ will make up his Jewels, and set holiness in the Earth.

Fourthly, This sanctification of Believers is part, yea, the choicest part of Christ's purchased Treasure. I have shewn before that Riches import two things. 1. Some things that were of worth and value, men never seek great heaps of dust or straw, as part of their Riches; but Silver, Gold, and Jewels, are things of account. 2. Abundance and large measures of these excellent things. Now sanctification is a thing of wonderful value, and an unknown excellency in its nature; holiness must needs be excellent because it is a sparkle of Divine Glory; 'tis part of the Nature and Image of God himself, 2 Pet. 1. 4. 'Tis the Glory of God, Hab. 3. 3. When the Prophet would set forth God in his Glory, he gives him the name of the holy one, God came from Teman, and the holy one from Mount Paran, his Glory covered the Heavens. The Prophet here speaks and Prophecies of the calling of the Jews by the Gospel, after the Ascension of Christ, in an allusion to his former giving the Law on Mount Sinai, and making them his people by that Covenant: So Teman is a place in Idumea, Paran in Arabia, between Sinai and Seir, from whence God gives out his Law, and shows out his Glory, as you may see, Deut. 33. 3. Some take Teman for Jerusalem, and then the meaning is thus; As God did formerly manifest his Glory, by giving out his Law from Mount Sinai; and his Holiness in keeping and leading his people through the Wilderness to Canaan and Jerusalem: So will he in Gospeltimes, manifest his Glory, in giving the Gospel, and calling a People to himself; and this Glory of his will most eminently appear in the manifestation of his Holiness. So that Holiness is the Glory of God, and therefore must needs be most excellent. Nay, Sanctification is the honor of the Creature, Rev. 21. 10, 11. The Glory of the latter Church is set forth by its Holiness: So Sanctification and Honor are joined together, 1 Thess. 4. 4. Holiness is the greatest Treasure; for 'tis laid up in the choicest Treasury; in Heaven, the place of God's Holiness, and the Habitation of the Holy Saints and Angels, Isa. 63. 15. Treasures are not the Possession of everyone, they are given usually but to a few: So is Holiness the privilege of the fewest and least number of men; few there be that find it, Mat. 7. 13. Riches can procure the greatest things procurable, as one saith; Money answereth all things; that is all things that are saleable among men; so Holiness, though it cannot purchase Mercy, yet it fits persons for the greatest Mercies, and highest Services. None more advanced than holy Souls; they dwell in the presence of God, Psal. 140. 13. They are through Christ very potent with God; they are fit for the highest work. When Persons come to die, they see the excellency of holiness, and would purchase it with a world: This proves that Sanctification is a rare Treasure.

Again, The purchased Holiness of Christ hath not only excellent worth, but large quantity; he hath purchased fullness of Grace; Grace for Grace. O Believer, though thy heart be empty of grace, yet Christ's Treasure is full, he hath as much as ever thou canst need or crave, to make thee as Holy as thou wouldest be, and that to all Eternity.

USE.

If Holiness be the Purchase of Christ, then 'tis not the Creatures procurement, or by any ways or means obtained short of the merit of Christ. what the Apostle says of Righteousness is true of Sanctification, Gal. 2. 21. If Righteousness come by the Law, then Christ is dead in vain. So if holiness be the Fruit of Men's Purposes, Labors and Duties, then Christ died in vain. 'Tis too common an error in many, to charge Christ with too much in some things, and too little in other things. In justification some lay too much on Christ; I mean by charging their sins on him for pardon, which they were never thoroughly convinced or repented of; and in sanctification charge him with too little, expecting their holiness and meetness from their purposes, duties, and improvements: As if holiness were to grow out of the Sepulchers of their Services, and not out of the grave of Christ: 'Tis true indeed the Lord Jesus hath appointed means for the promoting of Holiness, and given promises and Ordinances for the conveying and perfecting of it, but the virtue of all depends upon his blessing, 1 Cor. 3. 6, 7. Rom. 9. 16.

Secondly; Then how inexcusable are perishing Sinners under the Gospel, that will not come to Christ to be made holy. You that lie in your blood, and from the Crown of your head to the sole of your feet are full of filthy Ulcers, and putrifying sores; whose Consciences cannot but condemn you sometimes for uncleanness; and never being cleansed by the blood of Christ; how will you appear before the Holy God, a Consuming fire, in your unpurged sins? How unjustifiable is your filthynesse who might have been cleansed, but would not! What will you answer in the day of Indignation, when all this tendered, but refused Grace shall come against you? when you would willingly part with the whole World if you had it to get a clean heart and a purged Conscience? How dreadful will that word be in the day of Inquisition; Ezek. 22. 24. Thou art a Land, Thou art a Soul that art not cleansed? How cutting will the memory be of rejected Grace, when God shall say, I would have healed you, but you are not healed? Jer. 51. 9. You might have had your natures changed, your Consciences cleansed, and your hearts sanctified, but you would not: Now away thou profane hard-hearted wretch: Be gone thou secret Drunkard, Swearer, Thief, Liar, take him Devil, go and be filthy still, wallow in thy blood; there lie cursing in torment to all Eternity; as long as I am God, thy blood shall lie upon thee.

Thirdly; Then the Holiness of Believers is and shall be sure, being grounded on the Purchase of Christ. 'Tis bought, and paid for (O Believer) for thee: purchased Sanctification is assuredly thine as thou art not thine own; The truth, continuance, growth, and perfection of Grace is procured for thee by a price: A price agreed on betwixt the Father and the Son.

First, God will not deny it, Justice itself cannot with-hold thy purchased due. As sure as Christ with-holds not one drop of his blood, or penny of the price, so sure will not God with-hold any part of this Purchase. Rom. 3. 26. That he may be just, and the justifier of them that believe in Jesus: And if the justifier, then sure the sanctifier. Poor doubting Believer, when thou seest nothing but unworthiness in thyself of the least Grace, and peace from God, then think, 'twas Christ, not I, that made this purchase; he who did not, cannot make a forfeit of his right; and whose blood must perish, whose Honor and Interest must suffer, if one of those for whom Christ died should die and perish for want of Holiness: O no! this cannot be; The Judge of all the Earth must do right. Gen. 18. 23.

Secondly, Jesus Christ the believers Advocate cannot suffer to see his poor and needy deprived of their right: He is the Mediator betwixt God and his people; The days-Man and Umpire to see truth Established in the Earth, and everyone to receive his due: He will give wicked Men their due, much more his Children; And all Power in Heaven and Earth are in his hands, Math. 28. 20. He is the Faithful Witness, Holy, and Just one, and therefore will cause that believers shall have the distributions of the due Measures of his Purchas'd Grace.

Thirdly, there is nothing in thee or without thee that can hinder the accomplishment of it, Isa. 43. 13. I will work, and who shall let: Let Earth and Hell, Sin and self, combine together, they shall not keep back the Communications of grace one day beyond God's time, Math. 12. 20. 'Tis not the strength of thy lusts can prevail against the arm of God, and forces of his eternal Spirit, who is commissioned to bring down all thy Enemies, and set thee free indeed. Christ will Reign till he brings down all his Enemies under his feet, 1 Cor. 15. 25. The greatest part of which is the Corruptions of his people.

CHAP. XIX.

Adoption-Grace proved to be the Fruit of Christ's Purchase: The excellency of this state opened in several particulars.

I Come now to a fifth Fruit of Christ's Purchase, and discovery of that glorious Redemption-Treasure procured by his death; that is a state of Adoption, those whom he sanctifies he adopts, and brings into a new Relation to himself; to God the Father, Son, and Spirit: The work of Sanctification doth change their Nature, Adoption changeth their state; they are really altered by Sanctifying Grace, and relatively by Adoption-love. God now becomes their Father, and they are his Sons and Daughters, 2 Cor. 6. 17, 18. Come out from amongst them, and touch not the unclean thing: Here's a change in their Nature and Life: And I will be your God, and you shall be my Sons and Daughters: there's a change in their state: Adoption is the taking of persons that are strangers, and undeserving in themselves, into a state and Relation of Sons and Heirs; bringing them into a new Family and Condition: And such is the Adoption of the Sons of God, 'tis a Translation of called and sanctified Souls out of the Family of Satan into the Family of God, Col. 1. 13. Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and translated us into the Kingdom of his dear Son, Joh. 1. 12. To as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God, 1 Joh. 3. 2. Now are we the Sons of God: And this Adoption-Privilege is the Fruit of the Death of Christ, Gal. 4. 4, 5. When the fullness of time was come God sent forth his Son made of a Woman, made under the Law; to redeem them that were under the Law, that we might receive the Adoption of Sons: For though this Adoption be an act of Grace in God, to take Souls into Sonship with him; yet 'tis by Jesus Christ, Eph. 1. 5. Having predestinated us unto the Adoption of Children, by Jesus Christ: That is, To be redeemed, and made fit for it by Jesus Christ. Now in the Adoption of Sanctified Souls into the Family of God there are these five things.

A change, 1. of Relation. 2. Of Obligation. 3. Of Disposition. 4. Of Condition. 5. Of Duty.

First, There's a change of Relation; they were the Children of the Devil, Joh. 8. 44. Heirs of Hell, and under the Power of the God of this World, Eph. 2. 2. Who rules in the Children of Disobedience. They were of the kindred of Hell, of that Family whose Head and Ruler is Satan. This was their state, when Redemption-grace found them. Now Adoption alters this relation, and being taken out of this Family by effectual calling, they are by Adoption entered into a new Relation, and made the Sons and Daughters of God, Gal. 4. 4. Now they can call God their Father, Christ their Husband; the Saints their Brethren, verse. 5. Eph. 2. 19. Ye are no more Strangers, and Foreigners, but Fellow Citizens with the Saints, and of the Household of God.

Secondly, A change of Obligation; they were bound to the Law of Satan, under the Law of Sin, and Slavery of the World, led Captive by Satan at his Will, Col. 1. 13. But when Adoption-grace comes, it delivers them from this Obligation, and they are brought under the power of God, and Scepter of his Kingdom, Acts 26. 18. Rom. 6. 14, 17, 18. Heb. 1. 8.

Thirdly, a change of Disposition; they have the Nature and Spirit of Children, Gal. 4. 6. Because ye are Sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, &c. They were by Nature Enemies, but now are Children; they have a disposition to love God, to honor and obey him, 'tis their Meat and Drink to do his will, Joh. 4. 34. Mal. 1. 6. To serve Christ before was burdensome, but now delightful: The Love of Christ constrains them: 'Tis as natural for them now to obey Christ, as ever it was to rebel against him; they are never satisfi'd but when God is well pleased.

Fourthly, A change in their State and Condition; they are brought into a state of Glorious Privileges, in respect of, 1. Liberty, 2. Rights and Interests. 3. Boldness. 4. Instruction. 5. Correction. 6. Provision. 7. Protection. 8. Inheritance: And by these the state of an Adopted Soul appears to be a glorious state.

First, They are brought into a state of Freedom, Joh. 8. 36. If the Son shall make you free then are you free indeed (< in non-Latin alphabet >) The word Imports that Freedom that is opposed to Servitude, as it appears also by the word, ver. 33. Christ tells them, ver. 32. The truth shall makethem free; And they answered him; We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any Man: So that by freedom here, Christ intends a delivering of them from that bondage they were in by reason of sin and Satan: and he tells them that this is that freedom that comes by him; all that are the Children of God are free Men and Women. 1 Cor. 7. 22. 2 Cor. 3. 17. Where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty: The Apostle tells them, ver. 8. That the Ministration of the Spirit is much more glorious than that of the Law, or letter; that is, the Ministry of the Gospel is far more Excellent than that of the Law, which he proves by several arguments: And here he tells us that the Lord is that Spirit, that is, the Lord Jesus is the Author of that Spirit, or Spritual Ministration, under the Gospel, and where that Spirit or Administration is, or where the Soul is brought into this Gospel-state, there is liberty, Rom. 8. 21. Now this liberty that all the Children of God are brought into is a twofold liberty. 1. A liberty from Servitude. 2. A liberty to service. Or as a Reverend writer expresseth it: A liberty from the Family of Satan, and liberty in the Family of God. There are some things which all Adopted Souls have a liberty from, and some things they have a liberty in or to.

First, All that are Adopted in Christ are set free from that slavery they were in under the Law Sin, Satan, and the World. They are freed from Bondage under the Law, from Bondagework, and Bondage-wrath: All that are under the Law of Moses, as all are who are out of Christ, are obliged to Bondage-work, to the work of slaves, not of free Men.

First, they are bound to do work that is above their strength, which they can never perform, Rom. 8. 3. The Law was weak through the flesh, that is, there was an impotency in fallen Man ever to fulfil the Law, or attain life by it: The Law required perfect, and perpetual Obedience; but this could never be performed by sinful Man, and therefore legal-work, was hard work, work never to be done by fallen Man, and this is bondage-work.

Secondly; Legal-work is mercenary work; Do this and live. Gal. 3. 12. The Man that doth them shall live in them: Like a Servant, if he doth his work he shall have his wages, if not he must expect nothing; and this is hard indeed, that the poor weak Creature that is utterly destitute of all strength, worth, and ability, must have no more than can deserve.

Thirdly; 'Tis rigorous work, pressed by arguments of severity, threatenings of death and Hell to all the Transgressours of it. Gal. 3. 10. Cursed is everyone that continueth not in all things written in the book of the Law to do them.

Fourthly; 'Tis fruitless work, works that cannot make the comers thereunto perfect. Heb. 9. 9. 'Tis Labor in vain. Heb. 10. 1.

Fifthly; 'Tis work without Wages, no reward at all could ever be received from it. Gal. 3. 21, 22. For had there been a Law which could have given Life, verily Righteousness had been by the Law. But the Scripture hath concluded all under sin. &c. There is no Life, no Crown, no Kingdom at all is the reward of all such labors.

Sixthly, 'Tis work that will surely end in death: Let men work never so hard yet they must die, and be damned at last for falling short, and this is bondage-work indeed; but the Children of God are freed from this work, Rom. 7. 6. But now we are delivered from the Law, that being dead wherein we are held, that we should serve in newness of Spirit, and not in oldness of the letter.

Again, As they are freed from bondage-work, so are they freed from bondage-wrath: The wrath of God is upon all the Children of disobedience; all Christless Souls are Children of wrath, bound over to an Inheritance of wrath, Eph. 5. 6. Chap. 2. 3. Because the Law worketh wrath, Rom. 4. 15. It brings all its Servants under wrath, under the curse, and under death. Rom. 6. 23. But from this also are all the Sons of God freed, Heb. 2. 14. And destroyed him that had the power of death, that is the Devil. And not only from the Devil, but from the works of the Devil. 1 Joh. 3. 8. Rom. 6. 14. Chap. 8. 2. Gal. 3. 13.

Again they are free from all yokes of bondage laid on their Consciences by Men. Gal. 5. 1. 1 Cor. 7. 23. Ye are bought with a price, be not ye the Servants of Men: Do not give up your Faith and Conscience to their Commands, obey not them contrary to the Command of Christ. Gal. 1. 10, 11. if I yet pleased men I should not be the Servant of Christ. This is the first part of liberty the Children of God are brought into, even a liberty from Servitude.

Secondly, They have a liberty to service in the Worship of God: Their service of God is free and ingenuous Service; their offerings are free-will Offerings. Psa. 119. 108. Accept the free-will offerings of my mouth. That is, those offerings or vows which my mouth hath freely offered. The Children of God are a willing people, Psa. 110. 3. They serve the Lord freely from the heart, Rom. 6. 17. They obey from the heart that form of Doctrine delivered to them; They delight in the Law of God after the inner Man, Rom. 7. 22. The strictest Service of God is to them the most desired liberty, the Commands of God are no ways grievous to them; that is, to their inner Man, indeed so far as flesh and Corruption get head, they drag heavily to duty, when the spring of their motions, even their childlike love to God is abated, and all the Indispositions of a child of God flow from decays of love to God, and some abatement of the Adoption-Spirit in him: The Children of God are never in their Element, or as they would be, but when their hearts slow out after God, and they can run the paths of his Commandments, this they pray and labor for, Psa. 119. 32. I will run the way of thy Commandments when thou shalt enlarge my heart. So ver. 69. I will keep thy precepts with my whole heart. Their hearts move naturally after God when in their right temper: As the Waters run towards the Sea, and the Sun runs his race: Their service of God comes from a new Principle, even from Faith that works by love, and is directed to new and higher ends, than all the services of Hypocrites: The sense of divine love constrains them to duty, that they cannot but choose the things that please God, further than they are bound back by Corruption, and Temptation; their works are wrought in God from a Principle of life, raised and revived by grace; They have no mercenary aims in their Duties to attain any carnal selfish end below God, but their Motives are high and heavenly, pure and spiritual, as the Love of God, and care they have to please him: They see a beauty in Holiness, and a pleasantness in the ways of God, and find a suitability in their hearts, to love these though under never so great discouragements, and disadvantages as to flesh and blood; hence 'tis a Child of God cannot cast off God and his Worship, though he see nothing of good or comfort coming in by them, nor be persuaded to consent to anything that is sinful, though to save his purse, person, yea life itself: All the threatenings of Men, or visible dangers in his way, can't bring his heart to comply with ungodliness, or speak or do anything against God, his people, or ways, 2 Cor. 13. 8. We can do nothing against the truth. None but a Judas can come with a Band of men and Officers against Christ to apprehend him, or his people for owning him: Micaiah would speak nothing against the truth, though to please a King. 1 Kings 22. 17. Nor Jacob's Soul enter into the secret of the wicked in their sinful enterprise: A fearful Peter may forsake the professing of Christ for a time, but he will not be seen on the side of those that do oppose him; no, this is far from the true Spirit of God's Children: We read of the Christians in the primitive times, that left their preferments, rather than they would be seen against Christ people; and the whole Legion chose rather to lay down their lives, than to oppose their fellow Christians: Such shufflings and Compliances are opposed to the Spirit of the true Children of God; they can run after God in a Wilderness, but cannot be drawn against God by all the World.

Secondly, They have new Rights and Interests: Believers being once entered into the Family of God by Christ, are presently invested with new and Glorious Rights which they never had before, nor any besides the Children of God have or can ever have; which will appear in these five things.

First, They have a right to the special and blessed presence of God the Father, Son, and Spirit. Psa. 140. 13. The upright shall dwell in thy presence. The upright, that is, the faithful, the Children of God, these shall dwell in thy presence, in thy special presence, for all Men and Devils are in the general presence of God, but the Saints shall be in God's special presence; and not step into it only as strangers may, but continue forever as Sons. Joh. 8. 35. The servant abideth not in the house forever, but the Son abideth ever, Psa. 26. 6.

Secondly. They have a right to the purchase of Christ, to all the fruit of his Obedience, and sufferings: His blood is theirs, with all the procurements of it. Isa. 53. 5. He was wounded for our Transgressions, he was bruised for our Iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and by his stripes we are healed: whatever Christ died for according to the agreement betwixt the Father and him, is the Right of his Children, Joh. 17. 9.

Thirdly, They have right to the Promises, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Whereby are given to us exceeding great and precious promises. Whereby, that is, by the knowledge of him, as ver. 3. Or through Faith in him, that is, by Jesus Christ we come to have right to the promises, for all the promises are in him Yea and Amen, 2 Cor. 1. 20. The promises of this Life and of that which is to come, all are theirs, 1 Tim. 4. 8.

Fourthly, They have Right to Communion with, and to the blessing of the whole Family of Christ: Being entered into God's Family, they have a Right to fellowship with all his people, 1 Cor. 12. 13. For by one Spirit are we baptized into one Body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, Bond or Free, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. The great design of the Apostle in this chap. is to show that all Believers are brought into nearest Union with Christ, and each other, even into one body; this he proves in this ver. by the end of the Ordinances of Baptism, and the Supper, both which do signify and seal up Believers into the nearest Union and Communion, by reason of which they have equal right to one another, and the whole body, they have right to Communion with Angels and Saints: All the Sons and Daughters of God, have right to his House; to his Church, and all the privileges of it, Isa. 56. 5. Ordinances and Ministers are theirs, 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. Yea, they have right to the blessings of God on all: Psalm. 3. 8. Thy blessing is upon thy People, Eph. 1. 3.

Fifthly, They have a right to all the good things of this Life, Rev. 21. 7. He that overcometh shall inherit all things: Even the good things of this Life, Ps. 37. 9. They that wait on the Lord shall inherit the Earth. They are Heirs with Christ, who is Heir of all things, Heb. 1. 2. They have through Christ a Right to all the good things of this world, so far as God sees it best for them; they have their right in the Second Adam, who is Lord of all; this is a New-Covenant-Right; not over other men's rights to invade or break the civil properties of any, but to those Creatures God gives them, and to the good of all things, even wants and enjoyments, and have a sanctified use of them, which none but the Children of God have, Tit. 1. 15.

Sixthly, They have Right to the inheritance of Glory, Tit. 3. 7. 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4. Heaven is the Country, Home, and Inheritance of all Saints: Their Title is founded on the Purchase of Christ, and Adoption of Grace: not upon their Merit or Holiness; and therefore 'tis called on the account of Christ, the purchased possession, Eph. 1. 14. Which is the earnest of our inheritance, until the Redemption of the purchased Possession. That is until we are actually redeemed from Corruption, and put into the possession of purchased Glory; yea their Reversion in Heaven is so freely procured for them, without any of their money or price, duties or obedience, further than 'tis the way to walk in to Glory; that Eternal Life is said to be the gift of God, Rom. 6. 23. Death comes by Man's merit, but not Life and Salvation: and is not this a glorious state, and blessed condition, to be made Heirs, and Coheirs with Christ? Rom. 8. 17. And if Children, then heirs, and Joynt-heirs with Christ: partakers of the same Rights with him, Heirs of the Righteousness of Faith, Heb. 11. 7. So was Abraham, and so are all Believers; they have a right to Justification, by believing; and a right to the Kingdom of Glory, Jam. 2. 5. Heirs of the Kingdom: They have as good a Title to this by Grace, and through the purchase of Christ, as any man to an Inheritance here on Earth, yea, and far more sure of it; for men may be turned out of their Rights and Properties here; but Believers cannot be deprived of their Title, and Inheritance through Christ.

Seventhly, They have an interest in God's love, they are upon his Heart at all times, Joh. 16. 27. For the Father himself loveth you: He loves with an infinite Love, a Love passing knowledge, and transcending the love of all Creatures, Isa. 49. 15. A Mother may forget her Child, but God cannot forget his: He loves at all times; Eternally, and unchangeably: He loves his Children ardently, when they have but little love to him: He loves them notwithstanding their unkindnesses and provocations, Psal. 89. 31, 32, 33. He loves them when he seems to be angry with them, and is forced to correct them, Heb. 12. 6. He always thinketh on them for good, Jer. 29. 11. I know the thoughts I think towards you, saith the Lord, thoughts of Peace, and not of Evil. He is very tender of them, and hath the bowels of a Compassionate Father towards them, Psal. 103. 8, 13. Mal. 3. 17. And I will spare them as a man spareth his Son that serveth him.

Eighthly, They have a right to the Spirit of Grace, the Spirit is put into their Hearts, Gal. 4. 6. Not the spirit of Bondage, but of Adoption, Rom. 8. 15, 16. They have union with the Spirit never to be separated more, v. 11. they have the Spirit of Grace and Supplication, Zach. 12. 10. To quicken, teach, influence, assist in Duty, and make intercession for them, Rom. 8. 26. O what a blessed privilege is this to have the Spirit of the Son, whereby they can go to God as a Father, and to have the Spirit working in them the disposition, and working for them the actions of Sons.

Thirdly, They have holy and reverential boldness to come into the presence of God through his Son, Ps. 26. 6. I will wash my hands in innocence, and so will I compass thine Alter, Eph. 2. 18. For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father. They can come to God at all times, and behold his Face in Righteousness, unless their sins do cause him to hide himself for a time, Eph. 3. 12. And plead their cause through Christ with boldness, Heb. 10. 19, 20. And they are not only free to come, but sure to speed, Joh. 16. 23, 24. 1 Joh. 5. 14, 15.

Fourthly, Instruction is another Privilege of Sons, They shall be taught of God, Isa. 54. 1. He will teach, instruct, and show them things they know not: He will lead them into all truth, Joh. 16. 16. The Spirit searcheth the deep things of God, and revealeth them to the Saints, 1 Cor. 2. 20. He will teach them all things which they are able to bear: They shall have the openings of Christ's mind, to steer their course whiles in this Wilderness of the World, and shall receive the revelation of all truths necessary to Salvation.

Fifthly, They have choice and delicate provisions, and rich maintenance; this is the duty of Parents to provide for their Obedient and indigent Children, 1 Tim. 5. 8. But if any man provide not for his own House he hath denied the Faith: He cares for his Children, Mat. 6. 31, 32. 1 Pet. 5. 7. He that gives his Son, how can he but with him freely give us all things, Rom. 8. 32. Phil. 4. 19. My God shall supply all your wants: He that gives a Kingdom at the Journeys end, will not deny Bread and Water in the way: He will provide for their Bodies and Souls, for their Persons and Families.

Sixthly, Correction is theirs, Psal. 89. 32. Heb. 12. 8. Correction is the Saints Privilege, and great advantage; they have need of it, 1 Pet. 1. 6. Though for a season, if need be, you are in heaviness, &c. And they have advantage by it, Psa. 119. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted, Heb. 12. 10. But he for our profit.

Seventhly, Protection is another privilege of Children: He will keep them as the Apple of his Eye, Psa. 17. 8. He will hide them in the secret of his Tabernacle, Ps. 31. 20. He will keep them Day and Night, Isa. 27. 3. He gives his Angels charge concerning them, Psa. 91. 11, 12. Heb. 1. 14.

Lastly, The Kingdom is theirs: O think what rest, what joy, what holiness, what perfection, what immutability, and Eternity of Glory is in Heaven! and say, all this is my Estate by Adoption; I shall one day be possessed of it; here I am poor, but there I shall be rich, here I am empty and hungry, there I shall be full: here I am despised, there I shall be honored; here I have not a house▪ lay my head in, there I shall have a Mansion to all Eternity; here one and another says, come sit at my Foot, there shall I sit on a Throne, and be a Crowned King forever: Here my Comforts go, and my troubles stay; worms breed in all my enjoyments, but there is no Rust, nor Moth; no Decay, nor Death. O blessed state indeed that Believers are Adopted to in Christ!

Fifthly, The last considerable thing in Adoption is, the Duties that flow from such a state, and this is part of their privilege also, as being the Fruit of an Adoption-state, and that which they are purchased as well as obliged unto by the blood of Christ; all the filial duties of Believers are the fruits of Adoption-Grace, Gal. 4. 6. Because ye are Sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts. The Spirit of his Son to make you really such, and to form in you the Nature, and work you to the duty of Sons. So that Adopted Souls are not only chosen of God to be heirs with Christ, but are also begotten of God into the Nature and Image of Christ, Rom. 8: 29. Whom he did foreknow, them he did predestinate to be conformed to the Image of his Son; that as Christ carried himself as a Son, so should the Children of God in their measure, and time and that by the same Spirit. Now these duties which God's Children are spirited and engaged to, are,

First, To love God as their Father, even from a sense of his Fatherly love, 1 Joh. 4. 19. We love him because he first loved us. Deut. 6. 5. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy Soul, and with all thy might: The Lord thy God, because he hath pleased to make thee his Son, and to place thee in so near and high relation to himself, Psa. 31. 23. O love the Lord all ye his Saints: You that are set apart for him, and Sanctified by him; O you of all Persons from the sense of this relation should love him. This is a filial duty, and so essential to Sons, as that 'tis put for the ground of all their Obedience. Joh. 14. 13. If a man love me, he will keep my word, and my Father will love him; that is, manifest his love to him as a Father. This is not a forced but a natural love to God arising from that new Nature and Spirit of Adoption in them; so that a Child of God may as well cease to be a Child, as cease to have a disposition to love him: Indeed a gracious Soul may not always actually love God, but he hath a disposition to love him, and can appeal to God that he knows he would love him, and there is nothing in all the World he can value like him.

Secondly, To obey him, 1 Pet. 1. 14. As obedient Children, not fashioning yourselves according to former Lusts. 'Tis a great duty of Children to obey their Parents in all things lawful, and so they that are God's Children are much more obliged to obey God, whose relation much more binds them, being so far above all other relations, whose love constrains them, 2 Cor. 5. 14. whose Laws invite them, they being holy, just, and good, Rom. 7. 12. Whose rewards also encourageth them, there is a reward in keeping them, Psa. 19. 11. and a reward upon those that keep them, Rev. 2. 10. Now this Child-like obedience differs from all other obedience; in that, 1. 'Tis the fruit of faith, Joh. 8. 47. He that is of God heareth God's word, that is obeyeth God's word; but what an Obedience is this, see the former ver. It is an Obedience from faith, ver. 46. If I say the truth why do ye not believe me? 2. 'Tis the labor of love, 1 Thes. 1. 3. Remembering without ceasing your work of Faith and labor of love. 3. 'Tis delightful Obedience, Rom. 7. 22. I delight in the Law of God after the inner Man.

Thirdly, A fear of offending him, Hos. 3. 5. And shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days. This is a filial fear arising from their relation to God as their Father, 1 Pet. 1. 17. And if you call on the Father, &c. pass the time of your sojourning here in fear. This is a fear springing from and consisting with love; there is a fear that love casteth out, 1 Joh. 4. 18. perfect love casteth out fear, that is slavish fear: 'Tis such a fear as keeps the Soul close to God, and not drive him from him, Jer. 34. 40. O how fearful is such a Soul of offending God, Job 34. 31. He will do all he can to prevent sin, Psa. 119. 11. Thy word have I hid in my heart that I may not sin against thee.

Fourthly, A zeal for God's glory, Psa. 69. 9. The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up: That is, the zeal which I have for thy house or for thy pure Worship, against them that would corrupt it, hath like fire consumed me. Zeal is the burning fire of love which will not bear anything that dishonors God: So Phinehas could not endure to see God dishonored by the whoredoms of his People, but in his zeal executes the Law upon one of the highest offenders, Numb. 25. 11. The want of the zeal made Laodicea in danger of being spewed out of God's mouth, Rev. 3. 16. and therefore God calls her to Repentance, and to this zealous Spirit in his Worship, ver. 19. Be zealous and Repent. This zeal was that Child-like temper that God commended in Ephesus, Rev. 2. 2. Thou canst not bear them that are evil: A zealous Soul cannot suffer any reproach on God's Name, Psa. 69. 20. Reproach hath broken my heart. This Child-like zeal in Croesus dumb Son opened his mouth when his Father was in danger to be slain.

Fifthly, A fiducial dependence on his care and faithfulness, Psa. 23. 1. The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want: Rom. 8. 32. 1 Pet. 5. 7. Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you: This was the Child-like confidence of Job in his God, Job 13. 15. Though he slay me yet will I trust in him: This dependence on the Fathers care quieted Musculus, when he was forced to labor in the Town Ditch for his Maintenance.

Est deus in Coelis qui providus omnia curat,

Credentes nunquam deseruisse potest.

Mat. 6. 32. Your Heavenly Father knows you have need of all these things.

Sixthly, Humble Submission to him; Heb. 12. 9. Shall we not much rather be in subjection to the Father of Spirits and live, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , The word notes an orderly subjection, according to that order and place in which God hath set a Man, that subjection that is in an Inferior to a Superior: The same word is used of Christ, Luke 2. 51. And he went down with them to Nazareth, and was subject to them, that is, submitted himself to that place duty he owed to them as his Parents.

Seventhly, A carefulness to please him, Isa. 56. 4. That choose the things that please me, to them will I give within my house, a place and a Name better than of Sons and Daughters. That is, such will I own for my Family, my Sons and Daughters, that choose the things that please me. So did the Lord Jesus evidence his filial duty to his Father, Joh. 8. 29. I do always the things that please him, 1 Joh. 3. 22.

Eighthly, An endeavor in all things imitable to resemble him, 1 Pet. 1. 15. As he that called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of Conversation. Luke 6. 36. Be ye merciful as your Father in Heaven is merciful. Mat. 5. 48. Be ye perfect as your Father in Heaven is perfect; that is, In the grace of love to Enemies. Eph. 5. 1. Be ye followers of of God as dear Children.

Ninthly, A laboring to walk worthy of so high relation, and nearness unto God. 1 Thes. 2. 12. That you walk would worthy of God who hath called you to his Kingdom and Glory: Worthy of so high a Calling, like the Children of a King; like Gideon's Brethren, who all resembled the Children of a King; Judges 8. 18. Your duty is to live above the Children of this World, who only are wise in their generation, Luke 16. 8. But be ye wise in the things of God, evidence your highest wisdom to be in keeping the Law of the Lord, Deut. 4. 6. Live like them that are Adopted Heirs of a Kingdom, even the Heavenly Kingdom, that fadeth not away: O live above the snares and fears of this world.

Lastly, A maintaining a real Love to your Brethren, and an endeavor to live peaceably with them, 1 Pet. 3. 8. Love as Brethren, be pitiful, be courteous, &c. 1 Joh. 5. 1. Everyone also that loves him that begetteth, loveth him also that is begotten, 1 Joh. 3. 11. Gen. 13. 8. Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, between my Herdsmen, and thy Herdsmen, for we be Brethren, Chap. 45. 24. See that you fall not out by the way, 2 Cor. 13. 11.

USE.

Thus you see what a glorious Treasure Adoption-grace is; view over this Inventory (Believer) and tell me what thou thinkest of it: Is it not a Treasure indeed, which all the Gold of Ophi cannot equalize? Nor all the glory of the World worthy to be compared with? And see all this procured by the Sweat and Blood, the Obedience and Death of the Son of God; and then say, whether Christ be not precious indeed: Look upon the Children of this World in all their Glory; view their privileges in their utmost latitude and extent; and answer me whether a Believer in rags doth not far surpass them. Christ speaks of Solomon, that he in all his Glory, was not to be compared to one Lilly in the Field. So one Saint, and Child of God infinitely excels the Great men of this World, in all their Grandeur, and Advancements. O then admire the Lord Jesus on this account also, for procuring Adoption-grace.

1. Quest. But how may I know whether I have obtained this Adoption-grace?

Answ. This is a point worth the enquiring into, and satisfaction in so fundamental a point is very necessary: But 'tis the Office of God's Spirit to seal us up to the day of Redemption, and bear witness with our Spirits that we are the Children of God, Rom. 8. 16. Men may lay down marks, but 'tis God must determine the Quest. yet notwithstanding for thy resolution, (Believer) consider,

First, Such are partakers of the Divine Nature, and are really Sons, as well as Relatively, 2 Pet. 1. 4. They have the Image of God instampt upon their Souls: They have the seed of Holiness, Faith, Love, Hope, Patience, and Humility in them, 1 Joh. 3. 9. Rom. 8. 29. And they have received of his fullness, Grace for Grace, Joh. 1. 16.

Secondly, Such prize nothing in all the world like to Relation to God, Ps. 73. 25. 1 Joh. 3. 1. Behold what manner of Love the Father hath bestowed on us, that we should be called the Sons of God.

Thirdly, Christ is exceeding precious to such in whom they are chosen, and by whom this Grace comes, 1 Pet. 2. 7. To you that believe he is precious. None in Heaven or Earth that they value like to Christ, they account all things but dross and dung, in comparison of Christ's excellency, Phil. 3. 8.

Fourthly, Such will employ their greatest care to imitate God, Eph. 5. 1. 1 Joh. 3. 22.

Fifthly, such have a Spirit of prayer and supplication, Rom. 8. 15, 16. Gal. 4. 6. Because ye are Sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying Abba Father: Not Parts, not Light, not the gifts of Prayer only, but such a Soul hath the Spirit of Prayer, very strong strains of Faith and Love run through all his Duties: He hath a Spirit of boldness whereby he comes to God as to a Father. O how earnest and unwearied are his breathings after God; what wrestlings with God in secret hath he, what pourings out of strong cries to him as Christ did in the days of his Flesh, Heb. 5. 7. O the strugglings! O the wrestlings! O the ardent breathings of such for the pardon of their sins, for the mortifying of their lusts, and for the reviving of their graces: Now where the Spirit of Adoption is, there is the state.

Sixthly, Such are enabled to bear, and profit by affliction, Heb. 12. 7. If you endure chastening God dealeth with you as with Sons.

Lastly, Such have endeared affections to the people of God, 1 Joh. 3. 14. We know we have passed from Death to Life, because we love the Brethren.

2. Quest. What must we do to obtain this Adoption-grace.

Answ. This is an act of Sovereign pleasure, and Free-grace, Rom. 9. 15, 16, 18. It cannot be purchased by anything in, or done by the Creature. You cannot with Simon Magus buy this Relation, Act. 8. 18, 19. yet there are some ways in which Adoption grace may be obtained; as,

- First, Get your Souls separated from sin, 2 Cor. 6. 17.
- Secondly, Get justifying Faith, Eph. 2. 13, 19.
- Thirdly, Beg the Spirit of Adoption, Gal. 4. 6.
- Lastly, Open the door of thy heart to the Spirit, Psa. 24. 7. Rev. 3. 20.

CHAP. XX.

The Confirmation of the new Covenant is the Fruit of Christ's purchase, proved by several Arguments.

ANother glorious Fruit of Christ's blood, and purchased Treasure for saved Souls, is, the establishment of the new Covenant, to Believers, and Believers in the Covenant. This is the certain effect of Christ's death, the making sure the Covenant to all his seed: That there is no more possibility of making it void to the Heirs of promise. This is the great thing undertaken in the new Covenant, that it shall be sure to all the seed, Rom. 4. 16.

There are Eight things which secure this to Believers.

First, This new Covenant must needs be firm and unalterable, because the reason why God ••und fault with the old Covenant; was, because it was weak, and could not secure those that were within it, Heb. 8. 8, 9. Which Covenant they brake; though I was an Husband to them, saith the Lord, Jer. 31. 32. Now if this were the reason why God did alter the first Covenant; then the new Covenant he makes in the room of it, must n•eds be free from this Imperfection and mutability, or else it would abundantly reflect on the infinite wisdom of God to make a new Covenant guilty of the same error.

Secondly, This was God's design in making a new Covenant, that it might be ordered in all things, and sure, 2 Sam. 23. 5. That it might be firm, and established upon better promises, Heb. 8. 6. Why are they called better promises? Are there better promises than the promises of Heaven and Glory? They are called better, because more pure and absolute promises, and because it was God's design to make them sure, Rom. 4. 16.

Thirdly, It is confirmed by the blood of Christ, and therefore the blood of Christ is called the blood of the Covenant, Mat. 26. 28. This is my blood of the New Testament: 'Tis the blood of the New Testament, in that it seals to the fulfilling of this Covenant. The death of the Testatour makes the Testament to be in full force, Heb. 9. 17. That now all the Promises and Legacies are certain, and cannot be disappointed to the Legatees and Heirs of Salvation. Again, this blood of Christ is the blood of the Covenant, and confirms it, in that it makes good all the conditions of it, that whatever is required to make this Covenant good, is undertaken by Christ, in the behalf of all his feed, and therefore he is called the surety of the new Covenant, Heb. 7. 22. By death he hath fulfilled the Condition of the first, and undertaken for the fulfilling of this new Covenant, in and by Believers: Yea, his obedience is for them, to present them complete to the Father, notwithstanding all their failings.

Fourthly, This new Covenant is sure to Believers, because the Administration of it is in the hands of Christ, Heb. 8. 6. But now he hath obtained a more excellent Ministry, by how much he is the Mediator of a better Covenant. The whole trust about the Administration of new-Covenant-blessings, is devolved on Jesus Christ; and therefore he is called the Mediator, and Minister of the Covenant: So that the Covenant must needs be sure, seeing the dispose thereof is by compact betwixt the Father and Christ, delivered into his hand upon the account of his death: Now he that is the Believers Friend, Head, and Husband, hath all power in Heaven and Earth, to make good the Covenant to them, Mat. 28. 18. So that the promises of the Covenant cannot be forfeited by Believers, being made over to Christ as to a Trustee for them, and their Covenant state also being so surely confirmed, that they cannot fall from it.

Fifthly, Christ's sufficiency to see new-Covenant-promises made good, and new-Covenant-tends accomplished to them, is security enough for their safety. He is an all-sufficient Savior, able to save to the utmost, all that come to God by him, Heb. 7. 25. He is able to see God's part fulfilled, having all the promises in his hand, and all the things promised at his dispose; and he is able to see the Believers part fulfilled also, for he hath all that in him which is needful for the making of the Condition good on their part: For,

First, He hath all Wisdom in him, to make them wise to Salvation, Col. 2. 3. He is made of God to his people Wisdom, 1 Cor. 1. 30. Appointed of God to receive Wisdom for them, whatever they need to guide them in the way, and fit them for Salvation: Knowledge is necessary to Eternal Life, Joh. 17. 3. The Image of God consists partly in it, Col. 3. 11. Without it the heart is not good, Prov. 19. 2. No Faith without Knowledge, 2 Cor. 4. 4. No Obedience without Knowledge, Psa. 18. 44. This is needful to discern the wiles of Satan, 2 Cor. 2. 11. The sinfulness of sin, Rom. 7. 13. The preciousness of Christ, 1 Pet. 2. 7. The beauty of holiness, Ps. 110. 3. The love of Christ, that passeth knowledge, Eph. 3. 19. The hope of your calling, and the things freely given of God, 1 Cor. 2. 12. And for this end all Wisdom is laid up in Christ to be given out to his people by his Spirit through his word; hence 'tis said, that Believers have an Unction from the holy one, to teach them all things, 1 Joh. 2. 20, 27. And the promise of the Spirit is made to them, to lead them into all truth, Joh. 16. 13. So that whatever is needful for Saints to fit them for Covenant-Duties and Mercies, all this is in Christ for them, and so he is able to make the Covenant good to them.

Secondly, He hath all Grace in him that tends to the fulfilling of this Covenant in Believers and for them: He hath received the Spirit without measure; Joh. 3. 34. And why is this? But that from his fullness Believers may receive Grace for Grace, Joh. 1. 16. He is the fullness that filleth all in all, Eph. 1. 23. And therefore hath promised Grace sufficient to his people in all their temptations, 2 Cor. 12. 9. 1 Cor. 10. 13. under all their burdens, Psa. 55. 22. For all duties and undertakings, Phil. 2. 12, 13. Chap. 4. 13. I can do all things through Christ that strengtheneth me.

Thirdly, He hath all power in Heaven, and Earth put into his hand, Math. 28. 18. Power to bruise Satan under his people's feet, Rom. 16. 20. To subdue Corruptions in them, Mic. 7. 19. To vanquish all their Enemies for them, Joh. 16. 33. Rev. 12. 11. To heal all their backslidings, Hos. 14. 4. To work all their works in them, and for them, Isa. 26. 12. To give them Faith, and to finish it, Heb. 12. 2. To keep them faithful to the death, 2 Thes. 2. 3. And to secure the promised Fruit of all for them, Rev. 22. 12. and therefore sufficiently able to make good Covenant-Promises to them, and to fulfill Covenant-duties in them.

Sixthly, Christ's engagement to, and for his people, and his interest in them, is another ground for the fulfilling of the Covenant; Christ hath promised the Father that he will bring them all to Glory, and hath undertaken all their work for them, Heb. 10. 7. And he hath promised to them to make good his Covenant when he persuaded their hearts to him. Heb. 8. 9, to 13. Isa. 55. 11. Again his own interest in them is security enough: All the fruit of his death and purchase lies in the fulfilling of the Covenant; if that be broken, he loseth all his hopes, and Obedience, he hath died in vain, his blood and Intercession are to no purpose, for herein lies all the travel of his Soul, Isa. 53. 10, 11. In this is the enjoyment of all his delights, if this Covenant be not sure then no Soul can be saved, and Christ should lose those delights he had in the habitable parts of the Earth before the World was made. Pro. 8. 31. Saved Souls are Christ's Crown and Glory, and how mangled and defective would Christ's Crown be, should any one Perish who are interested in this Covenant? Upon this depends all Christ's Mediatory Glory, Joh. 17. 4, 5. And should there be a failure here, he would lose his expected Glory as Mediator. So that you see the fruit of his Purchase, the delight of his Soul, and his Eternal Glory with the Father, are all wrapped up in the accomplishment of this Covenant.

Seventhly, The Immutability of God's Counsel, and the certainty of his engagement, confirmed by an Oath, renders the new Covenant sure, Heb. 6. 17, 18. Wherein God willing more abundantly to show to the heirs of promise the immutability of his Counsel confirmed it by an Oath: These are two immutable things, God's purpose, and his engagement, and because these could admit of no variation, therefore the things Promised must be fulfilled indue time. Heaven and Earth shall pass away, but the Counsel of God that must stand: 'Tis laid upon Infinite Wisdom, and all things in order to the fullfiling of it, are made so sure, that it cannot possibly be frustrated: He wants not sufficient Power and faithfulness to reach his own designs, and therefore what he hath determined must come to pass, and upon this purpose of God is laid his promise: He having first resolved upon it, is engaged to it.

Lastly, Another reason to prove the certainty of the new Covenant is taken from the nature of the promises; they are absolute; 'tis true there are some conditional promises as the effects of the other, but the fundamental promises, and those which complete the Covenant of grace are altogether absolute; 'tis true also, faith is a necessary qualification to interest a Person in these promises, but when the Soul comes to have a propriety in them, the tenure of them then is absolute, Jer. 31. 33, 34. Heb. 8. 9. He will put his Spirit within them, and will cause them to walk in his Statutes, Ezek. 36. 25, to 28. I will be a God to them, and they shall be my People, Jer. 32. 40. And I will make an Everlasting Covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good: But I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me:

In which you see the condition is undertaken and secured, as well as the promise and things promised; had it indeed depended upon conditional promises alone, which doubting Souls have most in their eye, then the failure of the condition would have forfeited the promises, and then they had been null'd: But you see the promises of the new Covenant are absolute, and therefore sure to all the seed, even to everyone that believeth in Jesus Christ: These are the grounds of hopes the believers have, that the Covenant, and every tittle of it, shall be made good to them; but that which doth meritoriously confirm it, is the blood of Christ: His death and suffering, on which account it may be looked on as the sealing and confirming of it, and so believers may see to whom they are beholding and obliged for all their new-Covenant stability.

USE.

From this grand and glorious truth: The fulfilling and assurance of the new Covenant, flows,
1. Wonderful Comfort to all true Believers. 2. Great Obligations on them to thankfulness and Obedience.

First, This yields abundant Consolation to Believers, on a double account.

- 1. From the certainty.
- 2. From the Excellency of this Covenant.

First, From the certainty of this Covenant flows these streams of comfort. First, In that all occasions of Jealousy about the love of God are cut off; for if the Covenant be sure, then Gods love is sure, and secured from all mutability, and cessation, this being one great thing contained in it. Jer. 31. 3. I have loved thee with an Everlasting love. God's love to his People is Eternal, therefore sure: He doth rest in his love to them, Zeph. 3. 17. The word is (Jacharish) he will be silent in his love. Bucer renders it Silebit cum dilecta sua: He shall be silent in his Beloved; that is (saith he) He shall cease from contending with her, being wholly delighted in her. But Montanus renders it in the abstract, he shall be silent by reason of his love. Propter dilectionem suam. But Cocceius and other Interpreters, render the letter (Beth) In: He shall be silent in his love, or rest in his love, alluding to the wonderful excess of affection in a Person, that through exceeding amorousness cannot speak or express it for a time: Cocceius takes it for the pardoning of their sin, and ceasing from those former strokes of his displeasure: And this I suppose may be chiefly intended here; to wit, The greatness of his love noed by silence, and exuberant Joy, with a remove of all tokens of his anger, and this to be fixed and perpetual; so the Apostle assures Believers, that the love of God in Christ is irremoveable, Rom. 8. 35. All the World cannot withdraw Christ's heart from his People, where he once loves he loves to the end, Joh. 13. 1. This a believer may be assured of in the New Covenant, that God's love changeth not, his heart is still towards his people, however his dealings may be with them.

Secondly, Then all the grounds of tormenting fear are now removed. If the Covenant of grace be confirmed to believers, then there's no Just ground for them to entertain slavish fear, Rom. 8. 15. For ye have not received the Spirit of Bondage again to fear. There's no cause for such to fear, 1. That God is their Enemy; being once reconciled to them in his Son, he can hate them no more. 2. Their sins shall never Condemn them, Rom. 8. 1. 3. God will never totally leave them, Heb. 13. 5. 4. They shall not wholly fall from God. Jer. 32. 40. 5. They have no cause to fear the wrath to come, Rom. 5. 9. Much more being justified by his blood we shall be saved from wrath through him. Thus you see all the grounds of tormenting fears are gone: 'Tis true a Cautelous fear and circumspection may be maintained, but the workings of a Bondage-Spirit are removed.

Thirdly, Then dejecting Conclusions from self-impotency to fulfil this Covenant, and all seeming difficulties in the way are wholly Insignificant; if this Covenant be confirmed by Christ to and for Believers, then no insufficiency in them to make good these Covenant-Duties can render it void. Because,

First; the Certainty of this Covenant depends not on the Creatures ability, but on God's Faithfulness; 'tis true, if this new Covenant (as the first) did wholly depend upon the Integrity and Faithfulness of the Soul in Covenant; then indeed the enjoyment of those mercies and promises comprehended in it would be very dubious; but 'tis not so, for God himself hath undertaken the accomplishment of it, 1 Cor. 1. 8, 9. Who shall also confirm you to the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ; God is faithful by whom ye are called to the fellowship of his Son Christ Jesus our Lord. So 1 Thes. 5. 23, 24. So that the Saints Confirmation in holiness, and preservation to glory depends on the faithfulness of God in Christ, who having persuaded their hearts to embrace his call, will finish Salvation-work in, and for them.

Secondly, Strength sufficient to finish their work, and to obtain Salvation is ensured to them. 2 Cor. 12. 9. My grace is sufficient for thee, my strength is made perfect in weakness. Grace in thee may fail, but grace in God cannot: Christ hath a stock sufficient for thee, to carry thee through Temptations, and to lift thee above thy Corruptions. So Ezek. 36. 27. I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes. The Spirit is a Fountain that will fill up your empty vessels, supply all your wants, and engage your hearts to keep the way of his Commandments.

Fourthly, Then none of the well-grounded hopes of believers shall be lost, Psal. 119. 49. Remember thy word unto thy Servant upon which thou hast caused me to hope. God will never forget to fulfil those promises which he causeth us to confide in, for he is faithful who hath promised, Heb. 10. 23. Rom. 5. 6. And hope maketh not ashamed. That is, by reason of a disappointment; shame usually ariseth from some frustrations of expectation, but this cannot befall well-grounded hopes, because they have their dependence upon the firm word of God which cannot be disappointed.

Fifthly, Then your labor shall not be in vain in the Lord, if the Covenant be confirmed, then you cannot run in vain, or lose any part of that work you do for God, 1 Cor. 15. 58. Gal. 6. 7, 8. What a man soweth that shall he reap. He that soweth to the Spirit shall reap life Everlasting: O Souls, all your sincere duties will appear again, and bring their reward with them. All your pains in serving God, hardships in following him, dangers in owning him, and industrious labors to please him, shall be fully and certainly recompenc'd with a far more and exceeding Massy Crown of Glory.

Sixthly, Then all your warrantable desires shall be satisfied in due time: For this is part of the Covenant-promise, Psa. 37. 4. Delight thyself also in the Lord, and he shall give thee the desires of thy heart, Psalm. 145. 16, 19. All the breathings of your Souls after God, and unfeigned longings for more spotless holiness, more perfect victory over sin, for humble submission to divine pleasure, more sincerity of heart, and raised capacities for service, shall certainly be satisfied first or last.

Seventhly, If the Covenant of grace be sure, then nothing can make the believers state miserable, indeed he may seem to be in a bad condition, when under the power of temptation and corruption, and pressed grievously with severe and bitter Providences, and strokes of seeming vengeance, but yet his state is good; who could have past a favorable interpretation on the afflictions of Job, when on a dunghill, and on the trials of David when pursued by Absalom? yet we find there was honey in these Rods, and David could notwithstanding lie down and sleep in peace, Psa. 3. 5. So Josiah in an evil day, when wars and frowning providences did surround him all about, yet died in peace, 2 Kings 22. 20.

Lastly, Then a gracious Soul is a blessed Soul, both here and to all Eternity, because this Covenant takes care for the good things of this life, and that which is to come: 1 Tim. 4. 8. Godliness hath the promise of this life and that which is to come: Hence the Scripture doth so often pronounce the Godly Man to be a blessed Man, Psa. 119. 1. Blessed are the undefiled in the way, Psa. 112. 2. Psa. 141. 2. Thus we have now briefly touched on some grounds of Comfort that Believers may derive from the certainty of this new Covenant; we now come to consider,

Secondly, The excellency of this Covenant which the blood of Christ so confirms to Believers; this new Covenant is a choice and precious Covenant; what David said of Goliath's Sword may be affirmed of this; That there is none like it, 1 Sam. 21. 9. This would abundantly appear, could I with consistency to my design here, run out at large in the demonstration of this great truth; but to touch a little on some evidences of its excellency under these two general considerations.

- 1. The things that are promised in this Covenant.
- 2. The way appointed of God to attain them.

First, The things stipulated in this Covenant, are,

First, Great and glorious things, the products of infinite Grace, and discoveries of unconceivable greatness, such Promises as were never offered in any other Covenant: In this Covenant God makes over himself to Believers to be their God, their Sun and Shield, their exceeding great reward, all that he is, and all that he hath to be theirs, so far as they are capable to receive: I will be to them a God; that's in the Covenant: He whom the Heaven of Heavens cannot contain; whom the Angels cannot define, far above the searches of the most refined Spirits, far beyond the knowledge of those that always dwell in his sight; this invisible unknown God in this Covenant makes himself over to Believers: He will be theirs forever, Heb. 8. 10. A God in the nearest Relations that Creatures are capable to approach to him in: He will be a Father, Husband, Head to them, and to everyone of them in the Lord Jesus Christ: To love and delight in them; to feed and cherish them; to care and provide for them; to dwell and abide with them; to impart, and Communicate of all his fullness and sweetness to them, so far as it suits with the measure of Christ, and their best good: Is not this a great thing indeed, that God should make over himself to the Believer? O glorious Covenant!

Again, Another great and glorious thing engaged in this Covenant is, That Believers shall be to him a people, a peculiar people; his own people, his Jewel, his Treasure, Mal. 3. 17. They shall be the Apple of his Eye; the delight of his Soul, a Seal upon his Heart: A people near to God, Psa. 148. 14. Nearer to him than all the world besides; nearer than the Angels, that never sinned: What a wonderful thing is this! They shall be dandled on his knee: Lye in his Bosom; sit at his Table here; and sit down on Thrones in his Kingdom to all Eternity: O what a wonderful Covenant is this! This should fill the Believers heart brim full of Joy and Consolation.

Again, He hath promised in this Covenant, that he will write his Law in their Hearts, and put his truth in their inward parts, Jer. 31. 33. They shall be his Epistle known and read of all men, 2 Cor. 3. 2, 3. He will lead them into all truth, Joh. 16. 13. He will show them his Covenant▪ Psa. 25. 14. He will be merciful to their unrighteousnesses, and remember their sins no more, Heb. 8. 12. He will put his Spirit within them, and cause them to walk in his ways, Ezek. 36. 27. He will give them Grace and Glory, and no good thing will he withhold from them, Psa. 84. 11. He will admit them into his special presence at all times, through the blood of his Son, Heb. 10. 19, 20. He will give them the Spirit of Adoption to cry Abba Father, Rom. 8. 15. They shall be Kings and Priests to God, clothed with beautiful Garments, a right noble seed all glorious within; and advanced into intimate familiarity with God in Christ by the Spirit, Rev. 1. 6. They shall be kept by his mighty power through Faith to Salvation, 1 Pet. 4. 5. O, are not these great things indeed for poor sinful Dust and Ashes, mercy-abusing Creatures! O we want Hearts to contain them, and Tongues to express them.

Again, As this Covenant is made up of great things, so it contains in it all good things, Jer. 32. 40. All God's Thoughts and Resolves, are to do them good; all his dispensations are bringing them in good, Rom. 8. 28. O what a Glorious thing is this! Yea they are suitable things that are wrapped up in this Covenant: Such as are suitable to their Natures; suitable to their Spiritual desires; suitable to their wants, and suitable to their advantages: The new Covenant carries nothing Hetrogeneous to the well-being of the Saints: O what a wonderful thing is this! Great things indeed are contained in this new-Covenant, that tends to the infinite contentment, pleasure and profit of saved Souls: Surely this must needs fill Believers Joys, and yield them merry days here, and prepare for them Rivers of pleasure to all Eternity.

Secondly, Consider the way which God hath appointed for the attaining those glorious things, and this will advance the Believers comfort: Persons may come at good things in a bad way, and that would abate much of their consolation: But these great and glorious things contained in the Covenant of Grace for Believers, are given out in a most excellent way: For,

First, It is in a way of Grace; If God had given them to be bought and sold, to be purchased by man's merit, it would not have been so sweet: But they are held out freely, without money, without price, Isa. 55. 1. It is by Grace you are saved, not of yourselves, Eph. 2. 8. There's nothing for man to glory in, about his Salvation, that is of his own: Saved Souls are created to their mercies: They are prepared for their mercies, Rom. 9. 23. And their mercies are prepared for them, 1 Cor. 2. 9. They are also prepared for their Duties, in order to their mercies: They are Vessels of mercy fitted and prepared for mercy and glory, 2 Tim. 2. 21.

Secondly, It is in a self-humbling, and abasing way: The more the Creature is abased, the more Divine Glory is exalted; and the more God is all in all, the more is the saved Souls Glory, Comfort, and Joy; the more the loftiness of man is brought down, the more God alone is exalted, Isa. 2. 17. And the more God is exalted, the more Believers are pleased: Now God gives out these new-Covenant mercies in such a way, as may most abase self; for he gives them out in a way of Believing, and no Grace more cuts off self than Believing: All boasting and Self-glorying is cut off by Believing, Rom. 3. 27. Therefore God hath ordered such a way for Souls to come at new-Covenant Mercies, as may cut off all Self glorying, that so their comforts may rise to the greatest measure, to be full Joy and Consolation, to see the Creature abased, and God exalted: There's nothing but Man's cursed self can indeed prove a real Enemy to his comforts: A Child of God is never more filled with the pure Wine of Consolation, than when he is emptied of all the Lees and Dregs of his own vain-glory.

Thirdly, It is in a pure and clean way, that God brings saved Souls to these new-Covenant mercies: It is in a way of Holiness: No uncircumcised shall pass therein: It is in that way of Grace, and Purity, without which none shall see the Lord: It is the upright, pure in Heart, the sincere Soul shall attain to these great and glorious things: The clean Hands, and the clean Heart, Mat. 5. 8. Psa. 140. 13. Psa. 24. 4. Isa. 35. 8.

Fourthly, It is in a sweet and pleasant way: A delightful way, for such are all the ways of Holiness to gracious Souls, sweeter than Honey and the Honey-comb: They take wonderful pleasure in Holiness, Psa. 119. 17. Prov. 3. 17. Legal ways were hard and troublesome ways. The Yoke of the Law is a heavy Yoke, Act. 15. 10. But the Yoke of Christ is an easy Yoke, Mat. 11. 30. O that God should confirm such a Covenant as this, that contains such glorious things, and all these ensured to Believers, and they led to them in such a choice way; surely this must needs yield wonderful comfort, and advance the Believers Joy.

Another improvement of this grand truth is by way of Duty.

There's nothing more strengthens the Believers Bond to Obedience, than the consideration of the certainty of the new-Covenant: Not to mention all those arguments that might be urged to engage Redeemed Souls to all manner of Holiness from the certainty of the Covenant: I shall insist only on these two.

First, The consideration of that Infinite Love of Christ, that led him through such a costly way to make good this Covenant: O what manner of Love is this, if duly weighed? That the Son of God should come down, and be made man, take upon him the form of a Servant; engage to the Service of the first Covenant, to make good all the violated conditions thereof by his sufferings, and all the precepts thereof by his Obedience: That he should be made a Curse, and taste of death, and all to make this Covenant sure: That he should shed his blood, to make firm this Covenant in all the parts of it: That he should come and melt himself to death, that the seal might be put upon this new Covenant. O what wonderful Love is this, for nothing could make it sure, but the Testatours blood, and that he would shed his Blood to make it sure. Now then there's no greater constraints to duty, than the sense of the Love of Christ, 2 Cor. 5. 14. The Love of Christ constrains us. Arguments of Love are irresistible; it silences the Believing Soul in all his resistances: When Arguments fetched from the Law, do only drive the Soul to Duty; nay sometimes bind back from duty: That at such a time the sense of the Love of Christ doth draw, yea post the Soul away to Obedience, Draw me, and we will run after thee, Cant. 1. 4. that is, Let out the potent influences of thy sweet Love upon me, and then I will hasten after thee, or further my Obedience of thee.

Secondly, Another reason for Obedience is taken from the certain blessed Ends, and Fruit of new-Covenant Obedience, which is no less than Eternal Life, Rom. 6. 22. All the blessings of the everlasting Covenant are ensured to such, Ps. 103. 17, 18. The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him; to such as keep his Covenant, to them that remember his Commandments to do them: Mercies in the way, mercy in the end, are all ensured to them that fear him, to them that Evangelically keep his Covenant, Psa. 25. 10. All the paths of the Lord are Mercy and Truth, unto such as keep his Covenant and his Testimonies. There's great reward in the very keeping his Commandments, and reward in the latter end: O what promises are entailed to Gospel-Obedience: Nay, you will not only have the Fruit of your own Graces, but you will have the Fruit of Christ's Grace, the Fruit of his Obedience, and his Righteousness too: Therefore, O what reason have such to obey! seeing the Covenant is made sure, they cannot miscarry, their labor shall not be lost; considering the Love of God, that should engage them to Obedience, and the blessed Issue of it.

Thus much of the sixth Branch, and Item of Christ's Inventory, and the Riches of his Purchase.

CHAP. XXI.

The Heavenly Inheritance is the Fruit of Christ's purchase.

WE shall briefly add one particular more of the Purchase of Christ, that is, The Consummation, and completing of all the Believers happiness, and comprehension of his chiefest treasure, which is the purchased possession of Glory, Eph. 1. 14. Until the Redemption of the purchased Possession, unto the praise of his Glory: that is, until we come to inherit this glory purchased by Christ: O what a blessing is this! All that have been treated of already, are but little parcels of this total sum of a Believers happiness: O when the whole treasury of Christ shall be opened, and set forth to the view and enjoyment of saved Souls: When all Christ's personal Glory, as Mediator, shall be discovered to them, and become their Glory; when all his purchased Glory for them also, shall then be entered on by them; all that he hath received for himself, and all he hath procured for them, shall all be made over to them; This will be a blessed Eternity indeed; when their Crowns of Massy Glory shall be set upon their heads, and when they also shall be set down upon Thrones of dignity, honored with the reflections of Christ's Majesty, and unconceivable grandeur. This is a mystery indeed, but a real truth to all Believers: O blessed purchase indeed! who can tell over this sum, when the Saints shall be so enriched with the Riches of Christ, clothed with the beautiful Garments of his praise? O wonderful Glory indeed! Deckt with the Jewels of the Graces of his Spirit; and filled with his holiness brim full: When they shall be satiated with his pleasures, but never tired; sit down at the Well head, and drink full draughts of pleasure; Take in their fill of the highest consolations; and unknown Sweetness, Love, and delight from Christ. O this must needs be wonderful enriching! when they be, ever, ever, ever with the Lord; where no clouds can darken their sights, of their blessed mansion, and their blessed God; where no veil can intervene between them and their Beloved: Where Rust, Moth, Worms, Time, and Death can never come to wear out their enjoyments: O blessed Treasure indeed! Where Eternity shall be the Date, Immensity the Bounds, and Immutability the fixation of their happiness. But so it shall be with saved Souls in Heaven, when they are got through the Sea of Christ's blood to Glory. O Believers, Do not your hearts leap within you? What no kind of affection at all to these things? Is all this as a dream to you? Where are your Hearts? O be affected at this wonderful blessedness Christ hath procured in Heaven for you. O blessed, blessed Eternity! where saved Souls shall wear a Crown, that fadeth not away; where their Garlands shall be ever fresh and green; their joys ever new; and their enjoyments never wearing; where all their sown seed of Spiritual-Duties and Gospel-sufferings, shall spring up to Glory, to a full crop of blessedness, to an harvest of pleasure, proportionable to all the Love of God to them; to the utmost measures of their Graces, and acts of their Faithfulness; the large extent of divine promises, yea suited to the infinite deservings of Christ for his saved ones, Glory, as much as can be claimed: This will set forth the Treasures of Christ to be boundless, bottomless, endless, without all circumference; higher then all Altitude, broader than all Latitude, deeper then all profunditude: O treasures indeed! Saints and Angels may look into them, but can never see the bottom: In comparison of which Riches in Heaven, all the warmest Apprehensions, all the sweetest tastes, all the highest enjoyments of Saints here, are no more than a drop to the Ocean; like one ear of Corn compared with all the fields in the world, clothed with fruitfulness; No more then a single Dust, to all the Beds of Sand in the whole Sea. O what is glory! Christians are these Jewels so valuable, that you can bear about with you here? O what a Cabinet then is Heaven? O what are the Treasures laid up there! O wonderful large indeed! Weigh the utmost pleasures, and delighting, ravishing consolations that all the Believers in the World can get by this side Heaven, all the graces, all the Joys of all the Saints in the World put together, compared with glory, is no more than a single grain to a Massy weight of Glory: O 'tis that which Men and Angels cannot express: All that Believers have here of Heaven, it is but as Bread and Water in the way, the choicest and richest feasting is reserved for the other World, for the Kings Table, where are all Varieties, all Rich Dishes, all the choice Procurements, that may feed and satiate the most curious desires of saved Souls: Dost thou meet with high Comforts at a Sacrament? wonderful refreshings in Ordinances? yet they are but a Morsel or two thy Father gives thee to cheer thy Spirits, compared with the varieties he hath reserved for thee in Heaven: Or as the short allowance of some Rich Heir whiles in his Nonage, compared with the great Inheritance he is to possess when at full age; or as the first-fruits which are inconsiderable compared with the lump. This is glory, this is Heaven, there's the place where all Christ's Treasures are laid up: O Christians! could you but get a look into glory, you would say; O unsearchable riches indeed: Treasures past finding out.

Thus have I dispatched the first assertion, and shewn somewhat of those vast riches that are in Christ; and though sometime hath been spent in opening them, yet it is but little of all those Treasures, which are prepared for them that are Heirs of the Promise.

CHAP. XXII.

The second and third assertions proved: Showing that those vast treasures of Christ are opened in and by the Gospel, that 'tis the will of God they should be tenderd to the chiefest of Sinners.

I Come now to demonstrate the truth of the second assertion, which is this, That those vast and hidden Treasures which are found in Jesus Christ, are opened in and by the Gospel.

For the proof of which I shall demonstrate these three things.

First, That those treasures of Grace and Glory, which are in and come by Christ, can no otherwise be known, than by the Gospel, they are deeps that cannot be fathomed by all the greatest lengths of man's wisdom, 1 Cor. 2. 10. The Spirit searcheth all things, even the deep things of God: Things that lay deep in his breast, which none could know but himself, and his own Spirit. By these deep things the Apostle understands the hidden grace of God in Christ, with the fruits of it, called ver. 12. The things freely given us of God. These are the Riches of Christ, or that come by Christ, called, Rom. 11. 33. The depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God: These riches of grace that come by Christ are so deep, that none can know them except they be revealed: Therefore the wisdom that makes wise to Salvation is called hidden wisdom, 1 Cor. 2. 7. And Treasures of wisdom are said to be hid in Christ, called the mystery of Godliness, 1 Tim. 3. 16. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, from the Heb. word, Mistar, or hidden, or secret things: Some derive it, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, from shutting the mouth up, because such things must be concealed, or as others think it 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Shutting up the senses as well as the mouth, it being a thing hard to be known, such a secret is the great Power of Salvation by Christ: A religious secret (saith one) that cannot be known without some extraordinary flatus, and such are the riches of Christ, hidden things, hid in God, Eph. 3. 9. The fellowship of the Mystery which from the beginning of the World have been hid in God, and therefore cannot be known by all the wisdom of men without the revelation of the Spirit, Eph. 3. 3. 5. And therefore it was an unsound assertion of Mr. John Goodwin: That the Sun and Moon do Preach the Gospel, seeing it cannot be known but by the revelation of the Spirit.

Secondly, These Treasures of Christ are Doctrinally contained in the word of the Gospel, there's the only discovery of them Doctrinally, there's no other word can discover them, and thus they are set forth, and brought to light, 2 Tim. 1. 10. But now is made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light by the Gospel. There are actually exhibited to the view of Believers, all the mysteries of godliness, so the Gospel is called the revelation of the mystery which is kept secret since the World began, Rom. 16. 25. The Gospel is the wisdom of God that maketh wise to Salvation, 2 Tim. 3. 15. There are all things opened necessary to Salvation: There are words whereby we may be saved, Acts 11. 4. In the word of truth are all the Prophecies of Christ, and of those great and glorious things that God would accomplish upon and by him, Acts 3. 18. In the word are all the promises of grace and Glory, all things needful to life and godliness, and these promises are revealed in the word of God: All the promises ever God made to the Sons of Men are in the word, and therefore the promises are joined with the Law, and the service of God, the glory and the Covenant, and all those royalties that in Scripture are made over to Believers, Rom. 9. 4. There's all that God hath spoken by the Prophets, Luke 24. 25. There's all discovered that ever God Doctrinally revealed of his love to Sinners, and the things that are freely given to them, there's the whole Doctrine of Christ concerning his Person, Nature, Offices, Works, Excellencies, Promises, what he hath done for them, and procured for them; what is laid up in him, and shall be laid out by him to all that come to him; there are the openings of his heart, and the secrets of his love to them, Eph. 3. 18, 19. Therein the Righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith, Rom. 1. 17. The deep things of God 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10, 12, 16. Things that eye hath, not seen, nor ear heard.

Thirdly, Those great and glorious things contained in the Gospel, are opened by the Spirits Ministration in the Gospel: This is God's appointed way to discover and bring to light those glorious things. Tit. 1. 3. But hath in due time, manifested his word through Preaching, which is committed to me according to the Commandment of God our Savior: This is God's way to manifest the deep things of the Word by Preaching: This he hath appointed as a standing Ordinance in his Church through all ages, that some should be set apart for this work, to open and to discover the glorious secrets of the Gospel, 1 Cor. 2. 12, 13. 2 Cor. 4. 2, 6, 7. To these the Lord Jesus Christ reveals his truth, even the mysteries of it by his Spirit, Eph. 3. 5. That they might Preach, and open them to others: This way God is pleased to work▪ thus he taught the Eunuch by Philip, Acts 8. 26. and Paul by Ananias, Acts 9. 11. and Cornelius by Peter, Acts 10. 5.

3. Assertion. It is the will of God that those great and glorious Treasures of Christ in the Gospel should be opened and tendered to Sinners, yea to the chiefest of Sinners.

This is as certain, as choice a truth, and precious news to sinners. For the demonstration of which, I shall, 1. Prove 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 by four arguments. 2. The 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 by four reasons.

First, That it is really true, that the Lord Jesus Christ is willing that all those unsearchable Treasures of his should be tendered to Sinners, yea the chiefest of Sinners.

First, Christ's willingness to shed his blood for Sinners, shows he is willing his Treasures should be opened and tendered to them: He that gives the cause, gives the effect, Causa Causae, est Causa Causati; Christ's blood is the procuring cause of all those Treasures that are purchased for Believers; and that which gives a right to his personal riches too, Eph. 1. 7, 11. Now if Christ be willing to give his blood for believers to procure those Treasures, then surely he is willing to have them opened and tendered to them, he that wills the means to the end, wills the end too: Should not Christ be willing that his riches should be opened and tendered to Sinners, it would lay a great reflection on his intentions in dying for Sinners, and leave the charge of unfaithfulness on truth itself; which how unjust it is let all that are rational judge; but it is for sinners Christ hath shed his blood, yea for the chiefest of sinners, 1 Tim. 1. 15. Rom. 5. 6. In due time Christ died for the ungodly: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, 'Tis the same word the Apostle useth to express the people before the flood by, 2 Pet. 2. 5. Now what these were Moses tells us, Gen. 6. 5. Ignorance, Profaneness, Contempt of God, and the vilest abominations were committed by those whom Christ came to redeem, yet to these would he have the Gospel sent, and his Treasures opened and tendered.

Secondly, His appointing and sending a Ministry on purpose to Preach the Gospel to sinners proves it: This was the first thing the Lord Jesus Christ did when he ascended on high, he gave gifts to Men, that of Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Pastors, Teachers; and why was this? it was for the work of the Ministry, Eph. 4. 10, 11, 12. And what is the work of the Ministry? Why to open and Preach Christ Crucified to the World, to discover reconciliation-mercy, and all the Treasures of Christ concerned therein, 1 Cor. 5. 18, 19. Joh. 20. 21. As my Father hath sent me so send I you: Now if the Lord Jesus sets apart a Ministry on purpose to attend this work, as Acts 6. 4. Then surely he is willing Sinners should have those riches opened and tendered to them.

Thirdly, The choice annointings he gives them to this end, evidenceth his willingness the Gospel should be Preached, and his Treasures opened to the World; as the Father hath anointed him, and given the Spirit without measure to him, so hath he anointed his Messengers with measures of the Spirit for this work, 1 Cor. 12. 7, 11. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to everyone to profit withal: That is the gifts of the Spirit by a Metonymy of the effect; and given to everyone to whom it is given, for this end to profit withal (so Piscator)▪ The Apostle speaks here of gifted Persons in the Church of Corinth, whether they were ordinary or extraordinary Teachers, they had all choice gifts imparted to them by the Spirit to that end: All whom Christ sends to Preach the Gospel have the annointings of his Spirit to fit them for that work, Isa. 50. 4. The Lord hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary: The Prophet here (saith Calvin) doth personate all the Ministers of Christ in all ages. And tells us that all those Christ sends to Preach the Gospel, he doth give suitable endowments to them for that end; he doth impart his truth to them by his Spirit that they might teach others: This is the Reason Christ gives the Spirit of his Father, Mat. 10. 20. He makes them teachable, that they might teach others: Hence Cyprian saith, Non bonus est Doctor qui non est docilis: Christ reveals those treasures of his to his Servants that they might open them to others, Mat. 10. 8. Freely ye have received freely give.

Fourthly, The charge he lays upon his Messengers, demonstrates this truth, he doth command them to go and preach the Gospel to every Creature, Mark. 16. 15. 'Tis an Hyberbolical Synecdoche of the genus, Every Creature put for all Nations, saith Piscator. The word of reconciliation is committed to them as to Ambassadors, faithfully to impart it to those they are sent to: There's a necessity laid upon them to preach the Gospel, and a woe if they do not, 1 Cor. 9. 16. A necessity, not of Coaction, but Obligation, and divine command, saith Pareus.

Secondly, The 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, why Christ is so willing those Treasures should be tendered to Sinners.

First, That so he might give the world a proof of the greatness of his Love to perishing Sinners, and of the largeness of his bowels to poor mankind, Eph. 3. 9. To make all men see what is the Fellowship of the mystery, &c. Now what was the fellowship of this mystery? The Apostle tells us, ver. 6. That the Gentiles should be Fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the Gospel. This sets forth the wonderful love of God in Christ to fallen man; that God is willing the mystery of Salvation should be opened to such vile Creatures as the Gentiles were; worshippers of Idols and Devils, such unclean and filthy Creatures, the chiefest of sinners, Tit. 3. 3. Eph. 2. 2, 3. Such were all before Conversion, they had fellowship with Devils, 1 Cor. 10. 20. And this commends the love of God indeed, that he should reveal Jesus Christ to the vilest sinners, and tells the world it is by Grace any are saved, Eph. 2. 8. and of the riches of mercy, Tit. 3. 5, 6. It lets sinners know that God is no respecter of persons, he saves none for any worth in them, but for his great love in Christ, Eph. 3. 19.

Secondly, That the worst of sinners might be encouraged to come to Christ, and none be exempted from Salvation but those that exclude themselves, Joh. 7. 37. This is Christ's design thereby to draw sinners to himself by the savor of his Oyntments, Joh. 12. 32. O the precious discoveries of his excellencies are attractive; the riches of Christ, and the Glory of his Kingdom have a wonderful influence to persuade sinners to him, Gal. 4. 15. A seen and believed blessedness in the ways of Christ, will make the Soul part with all for him, and come on any terms to the enjoyment of it: Terrors contract the Souls affections to God, but mercy and the excellency of Christ doth constrain them; now Christ is willing that every lost sinner that sees and believes in him should be saved.

Thirdly, That so all his Elect that lie among the perishing world might thereby be gathered in, Joh. 10. 16. The Election must obtain, though the rest be blinded, Rom. 11. 7. The Lord Jesus Christ cannot lose one Soul the Father hath given him, they must come in first or last; and for their sakes, as the evil-days are shortened, Math. 24. 22. so shall the Gospel-days be continued till Christ hath gathered all his Elect into union with himself from the four winds, even as many as are ordained to Life: Now there's no such way to fetch in Souls to Christ, as by opening those Treasures.

Lastly, That they who perish under the Gospel might be left without excuse, Joh. 15. 22. They have nothing to plead against damnation, who despise so great Salvation, Heb. 2. 3. And turn their backs on such tendered blessedness: To leave tried Gold for Counters, and Treasures for Trifles, the portion of Saints for the pleasures of sin, is utterly inexcusable; and this is one reason of Christ's opening his Treasures to the world, 'tis to justify his severity against unbelievers, that will not come to him that they may have life; he will have every mouth stopped, and the whole world of unbelieving sinners become guilty before him, Rom. 3. 19. Thus have I dispatched the third Assertion.

I now come to make Application of the whole.

CHAP. XXIII.

Containing two Branches of Information: What a great blessing the Gospel is: The greatness of their sin that oppose the Gospel.

IF there are great, Glorious, and unsearchable Riches in Christ; If it be by the Gospel these Riches are brought forth, opened, and tendered to sinners; O then what a mercy is it for Souls to enjoy the Gospel! The Gospel is the field in which this treasure is hid: The Ministry of the Gospel is the digging out, and laying open this treasure: The Gospel is the Cabinet in which these Jewels lie locked up: And the Ministry of the Gospel, by the Spirit, is the opening and unlocking this Treasury and Cabinet: Jesus Christ is this treasure: The Ministers of the Gospel are Messengers and Ambassadors of Christ, sent into the world with news of this Treasure, and empowered to treat with perishing Souls about making them Rich: The Ministers of Christ are Stewards of this great Lord of Glory, entrusted with the tendering and Ministerial disposings of these vast treasures, according to his instructions: This way God brings to light the hidden things of the Gospel, 2 Cor. 4. 7. We have this Treasure in Earthen Vessels: As if the Apostle should say: O Corinthians, there is a treasure, there are Riches in the Gospel, and we have these Riches in Earthen Vessels: The Lord commits them to us, that we may open them, and make a tender of them to perishing sinners, according to his order. Our business is to preach Christ, and open the treasures of Christ, with all his vast Inheritance to every Soul that receives him: O then the singular happiness they have, that have the word of this Grace sent to them: Oh what a mercy is it to live within the day-spring from on high, and under the joyful found: To hear the good news of a Savior's being born, and offered to perishing Souls: To have the tidings of those Soul-enriching overtures; O think upon the blind perishing world, that live without the Line of Communication, with whom Free-Grace holds no correspondence about Salvation, those Indians and Pagans that live without the Gospel, and then reflect upon the privileges you enjoy, and see what a mercy this is; and then say, who hath made you to differ; O why should the Sun shine on your borders, and the day spring from on high visit your coasts; leaving others to perish without regarding? O is it not Grace that God should visit you with the Gospel, and suffer others to persecute it? O these are the motions of Sovereign pleasure, and the paths of distinguishing mercy: O sinners! how much are you indebted to this free unsearchable Grace, that should pass by so many parts of the World, and pitch on this little spot of ground? O wonderful Mercy indeed! That these swarms of Mellefluous dews and privileges should light on your branches: That the Cloud by day and a Pillar of Fire by night should come, and stand over you. O little do you know what it is to lie in darkness, and in the Region and shadow of Death: O! this should cause you to value the Gospel: who can tell but they that feel it, what it is to be shut up in the Region of death, and be bound in chains of darkness; to lie in a vast howling Wilderness, where there is none to guide their feet in the way of peace: O what a sad judgment is this! O Souls! If ever you live to see, the light put out, and the Ministry of the Gospel gone from England, then you will know what doleful miseries are; and will you not prize the Gospel then, that is such a wonderful mercy, beyond all your Estates, and all the enjoyments of the whole world? How will some men value those Sciences that feed their natural minds with knowledge, and feast their Rational desires with discoveries of some unknown Notions: And will not you love the Gospel, that brings to light the glorious truths of Christ? How will Tradesmen prize the Rules of their Arts, that make them skilful! How will the Worldlings hug those Counsels that help to make them rich! And should not you prize the Gospel, that comes to make you wise to Salvation? Shall men prize instructions about the obtaining of perishing things? And shall the Counsel God gives you about the Food that endureth, be slighted? O Souls! what shall I say? O labor to know the worth of the Gospel, before you feel the want of the Gospel: O prize it, prize it indeed. The Gospel is the best Treasure, the best Comforter, the best Friend that is in the World: 'Tis the best Counselor in all sinners difficulties; it shows you the safest, and best way out of all your Clouds and darkness, Pro. 8. 14. Counsel is mine, and sound Wisdom. It is meant of Christ; In his word is the best Counsel to make men wise to Salvation, 1 Tim. 3. 15. There's the best Counsel to make you happy, Rev. 3. 18. 'Tis the best Interpreter in all the World to resolve your dark cases, and there's no such way to get solution in all your doubts, and greatest troubles: The Psalmist found it so, when he went into the Sanctuary, Ps. 73. 17. Christians, the Gospel and Word of God tells you, what you should do in all your difficulties, Acts 9. 6. The Gospel is the chiefest comforter: O what happy Messenger the ministry of the Gospel is, it brings the best Balm to heal your wounds: Balm of Gilead to heal your soul wounds, it affords the sweetest Consolations, Rom. 15. 4. That we through Patience and Comfort of the Scriptures might have hope. Ah! There's no such pure Elixir drops to any, as the Gospel drops: 'Tis the most reviving Spirits imaginable: the water of Life that come through the Gospel: O how reviving how cheering are these to drooping Souls! The Gospel is the power of God to Salvation, Rom. 1. 16. 'Tis the arm of God to stay up the poor sinking Soul: 'Tis the Weapons of our Warfare which are mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds, 2 Cor. 10. 4. O Souls! what cause have you then to be much affected with the Love of God in giving the Gospel? get your hearts warmed with the sense of this mercy; and more appreciative thoughts of these privileges: O, I know not how to commend it to you: O Souls prize the Gospel, rate it in your esteem above the whole World, Psa. 119. 167. My Soul hath kept thy Testimonies, and I love them exceedingly. O rest not till you can say so, I love the Gospel exceedingly; I prize it above gold, above tried gold: 'Tis better than all treasures, ver. 72. Sweeter, (says David) than Honey, and the Honey Comb, Psa. 19. 10. If the Gospel be stuff'd with such Riches, who would not prize the Gospel? 'Tis a rich Cabinet, bespangled with beauty in every letter: 'Tis a discovery of the manifold Wisdom of God, and should not you be affected with the Gospel? O testify your valuation of the Gospel by all possible demonstrations.

First, Shew your valuation of the Gospel, by blessing God for it: O send Clouds of Incense to Heaven, full of praises and Hosannahs to God for the Gospel: Paul blesseth God that the Phillippians had the Gospel, Phil. 1. 3, 5. I thank my God upon every remembrance of you, for your fellowship in the Gospel, from the first day until now. As much as to say, that you have enjoyed the Gospel a great while. O from your whole hearts bless God for the Gospel, 1 Thes. 1. 2, 5. O I am afraid Christians are not enough in this duty of praising God for the Gospel: It deserves solemn days of Thanksgiving.

Secondly, Testifie your valuation of the Gospel; by doing all you can to keep it with you: A person that prizeth a Jewel or piece of Gold in his hand will hold it fast: O Christians! if you prize the Gospel, you will do all you can to keep the Gospel, Pro. 23. 23. Buy the Truth, and sell it not: Lay out anything to enjoy the Gospel; part with your Lusts, part with your Treasures; let all go, so you may keep the Gospel: But then do not sell it: O the Gospel is Treasure enough, count nothing too dear for it.

Thirdly, Testifie your valuation of the Gospel: By your willingness to part with all, or anything, if God call you to it for the Gospel: Doth God bid you pluck out a right eye, cut off a right hand, let it go if God call for it: Doth he call for your liberty, your lives for the Gospels sake, let them go, Acts 21. 13. O Souls! be not like the Gadarenes to value your Swine above the Gospel, and rather let the Gospel go, than part with a little of your Estates, Luke, 8. 37.

Fourthly, Christians, show your high esteem of the Gospel, by your readiness to attend it at all times: To run at every call of the Gospel, with Mary to sit at Christ's feet, though other things be out of order, Luke 10. 39, 40. Will not you part with a little of your business, and let your Plow stand still awhile, to attend upon the Ministry of the Gospel? O Christians! show your prizings of the Gospel, by your willingness to sit down under it at all times.

Fifthly, Shew your high esteem of the Gospel, by the greatest improvements of it while you have it; Sirs, you cannot tell how soon it may be taken from you, or you from it; you see what attempts are made against the Gospel, you have reason then to make the most of it while you have it: Christ gives this argument to his hearers to prize it, Joh. 12. 35. Yet a little while is the light with you, walk while you have the light, lest darkness come upon you: Be sure at the best, 'tis but a little time you shall have it, if you live out all your time under the Gospel, till your glass be run every dust, 'tis but a little while you shall sit under the dews of this Hermon hill; the time of your life is but a little while; the time of your digging in this Mine is but a little while, Death will draw the Curtain, and set you beyond the droppings of these dews and golden Oyls: O then improve the Gospel while you have it; make the most of it, get all the good you can from it, by way of illumination, instruction, Correction, Faith and Consolation: Christians, get your heads and hearts filled with this precious substance what you can; this will be your wisdom, you will find it so when you come to reckoning: O fill these Chambers of your Souls with precious treasures; lay up those choice fruits that may last you in your Winter Days: Get the knowledge of Christ, and the unsearchable Riches of Christ more and more, while you may come under the news of it: O draw hard at these breasts, that you may get much food and nourishment for your Souls, that may serve you many a day.

Sixthly, Shew your high valuation of the Gospel, by your believing in it, by your loving and obeying of it: Joh. 12. 36. While you have the light believe in the light: Those friends we value much, we trust much. Souls if you value the Gospel, you will believe it: The Gospel tells you; He that hath the Son hath life; he that hath not the Son hath not life: It tells you, he that lives after the flesh shall die: O believe it! the Gospel says, If you forsake your evil ways, you shall have mercy; if you hold fast your sins you shall die: It tells you, you cannot come at Salvation, but in Salvations ways: O believe the Gospel; they that know thy Name will put their trust in thee, Psa. 9. 10. If you did but know the worth and truth of it, you would believe it, you may hang all the weight of your Souls upon the Line of the Gospel, you may adventure your immortal Souls upon the promises of the Gospel: It will bear all your weights, then love the Gospel: Love the truth and peace, Zach. 8. 19. Is the Gospel such a good Messenger that brings you such good news, and will you not love it? O Souls! love the Ministrations of the Gospel. And then obey the Gospel: If you love Christ indeed you will keep his Commandments, Joh. 14. 23. you will obey his voice. This argues your esteem of the Gospel, when you follow the instructions it gives you. Doth God bid you forsake your evil ways? Come and close with Christ? O! obey those Counsels he gives you in his Gospel.

Lastly, Shew your high valuation of the Gospel, by holding forth a Conversation suitable to it, Only let your Conversation be as becometh the Gospel of Christ, Phil. 1. 27. As if he should say, chiefly, this is the main and sum of all O! live worthy of the Gospel.

First, Then is your Conversation as becometh the Gospel, when you live as becomes the grace of God discovered in the Gospel: 'Tis infinite grace is revealed in it; you should walk so as to honor grace; you should press after more grace in your Conversations, there should be grace in every step of your lives, Tit. 2. 1, 12.

Secondly, Then you live suitable to the Gospel, when you live up to those great and Glorious things held out in it: When the Gospel is opened there are choice Jewels brought forth to sale: O most excellent things produced by it, and you should live up suitable to these.

There's the manifold Wisdom of God held forth in the Gospel, Eph. 3. 10. Treasures of wonderful wisdom are opened in the Gospel: O live up to these mysteries: O Christians, let your lives be exact, for you have curious eyes to look upon you, labor to hold forth much wisdom and much light in your Conversations.

In the Gospel is held forth the mystery of Godliness, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Great is the mystery of godliness. O what mysteries are here! God Manifested in the flesh; God, and yet clothed in flesh: Condemn'd for sin, and yet justified in the Spirit; seen of Angels: Preached to the Geutiles, the worst of Sinners in the World: Now live suitable to the mysteries of Godliness.

Again, the Gospel opens the glorious privileges of Saints, of every saved Soul: O wonderful privileges! That Enemies should be reconciled, and strangers made nigh, that Rebels should be adopted Sons and Daughters, made the Children of God by Christ, Rom. 8. 16, 17. O what a glorious privilege is this Believing Souls are brought into by the Gospel! to a state of Adoption, Gal. 4. 6. A state of glorious liberty, Eph. 5. 1. Gal. 5. 1. O live up to these glorious privileges: You are Children of the light, walk as Children of the light, Eph. 5. 8. The Gospel shows you the the things freely given of God, the infinite love of God, the wonderful Salvation-Grace of God: O then you live suitable to the Gospel, when you live up to those great and glorious things held forth in it.

Thirdly, Then are your lives according to the Gospel, when they are suited to the Rules of the Gospel, look what the Gospel commands; and requires that you do, Gal. 6. 16. Math. 28. 20. Now the Gospel requires not only Bodily, but Spiritual worship; to worship God in the Spirit: It requires not only external duties, but internal holiness: It calls for Obedience flowing from love, and labors springing from faith; well principled duties, when you endeavor the greatest strickness in your lives; That's suitable to the Gospel.

Fourthly, Then is your Conversation as becomes the Gospel; when it is Subordinate to the ends of it.

One end of the Gospel is to exalt the praise of the glory of grace, Eph. 1. 12. To make you vessels of Mercy, for the glory of Mercy: O Christians live so as you may most advance the glory of grace, live self-denyingly and humbly, exclude boasting, then you live as becomes the Gospel.

Another great end of the Gospel is the sanctification of saved Souls, to make Souls holy, 2. Cor. 7. 1. Then you live as becometh the Gospel, when you carry on Gospel holiness, inward Holiness, outward Holiness, 1 Thes. 4. 3.

The Salvation of Souls, that's another great end of the Gospel, that the Promise may be sure to all the seed, 2 Thes. 2. 10. That he that believes in Christ may have Everlasting Life: O then live as you may be saved; you must tread upon the World you have so much doted upon; you must account all things loss and dung for Christ, if ever you be saved: O Christians, labor then to hold forth a Conversation suitable to the Gospel. So much for the first Inference.

Secondly, If such great and unsearchable treasures are opened and tendered to Sinners in the Gospel: O then how great is their sin that oppose and persecute the Preaching of it: O this is a black sin indeed; this activity comes from the Spirit of darkness. O 'tis a dreadful thing to oppose, resist, and persecute the Ministry of the Gospel: For such do all they can to hinder the tenders of unsearchable Riches to the World; they labor to keep the World poor, to hinder the Salvation of Souls: And is not this sad work?

Again, such as oppose and persecute the Gospel, are of the cursed brood and offspring of the Pharisees, who do shut up the Kingdom of God, and neither enter in themselves, nor suffer them that are entering to go in: So do those that do oppose and persecute the Gospel, and would put out the light of the Gospel; they are the Children of the Devil; the firstborn of Hell; they do their Fathers work, Joh. 8. 41, 44. They that hate the light are the Children of the Devil; their deeds are evil, Joh. 3. 20. They carry the Devils mark upon their forehead; wherever they go up and down, to say there goes the Devils Children, there goes an Heir of Hell.

Again, They are Soul murderers; they do hunt Souls, and shed the blood of Souls, Ezek. 13. 30. As well as they that hinder the Gospel of Life, as they that bring in false Doctrines, and feed persons with Lies, and occasion death: They that starve men's Souls as well as they that poison them, both are Soul murderers. They sight against Christ in Heaven: They go up and down with drawn Swords pointed against Christ in Heaven. O bloody wretches! that have murdered Christ on Earth, and now would kill him in Heaven too, Acts. 9. 4. Saul, Saul, Why persecutest thou me? O Souls! 'tis a fearful thing to oppose and persecute the Ministry of the Gospel; for all the blood of all the Saints, from the beginning of the world to this day, shall be upon their heads, Math. 23. 35. O 'tis a sad thing to lie under the blood of one person; but to have all the blood of all the Saints in the world to lie upon the head of a poor Creature: O what will that Soul do? That Soul will go to Hell with a vengeance, and lie tumbling under the wrath of God to all Eternity. Thus much of the Second Inference.

CHAP. XXIV.

Showing the poor and lamentable State of all Christless Souls.

IF there are such vast and unsearchable treasures in Christ, tendered to sinners in the Gospel: Hence see then the poor and lamentable state of all those Souls that are without Christ. O they are very beggarly Souls that are Christless Souls: As they that are far from the Sun, must needs be far from Light and Heat; so they that are far from Christ, must needs be far from true Riches: He that hath not a Title to the Field, hath none to the Treasure that lies in it: He that hath the Son hath Life, he that hath not the Son hath not Life. The Character of Laodicea is the complexion of all Christless Souls: They are Wretched, Miserable, Poor, Blind, and Naked, Rev. 3. 17. They are aliens from the Common Wealth of Israel, strangers to the Covenant of promise, without God, and without hope, Eph. 2. 12. They have none of Christ's personal, or purchased treasures to enrich them: They have no right to his Person, and so none to his Excellency: His glorious Attributes signifies no good at all to them. His most precious and sweet dispositions, bespeaks little comfort to them: What Christ hath done and suffered, imports no advantage to them: Christless sinners are like beggars, or like poor persons shut out of the Rich man's door, that have Charity locked up from them; till they come to Christ, neither himself nor his is theirs; they have not any part of his fullness: No Treasures of Justification, Pardon, and Peace, are imparted to them: No Riches of Sanctification are made over to them: No Treasures of Grace, or Glory, are the Unbelievers interest; therefore he must needs be a pitiful poor Soul: Yea, all the Symptoms of Poverty are upon Christless sinners. To name a few of them.

First, A poor Person is a very needy person: He is full of wants; ever and anon in distress, and extremities; always destitute: Poor and needy are Synonymous terms, Isa. 41. 17. When the poor and needy seek Water. So it is with Christless Souls, their necessities are many; their wants are more than can be numbered: They want Wisdom, Light, Grace, Glory, every good thing: Nothing truly good is imparted to them: Their unbelief mars all the mercies given to them: To the unbelieving Soul everything is unclean, defiled, Tit. 1. 15. Their unregeneracy overturns all their mercies. Ah! They want eyes to see what is lacking in them, and hence 'tis they go up and down so secure: They want Eyes to see, Ears to hear, a mouth to speak, Legs to go, and Hands to Labor: they want Life, and every good thing: And being Aliens from the Common-wealth of Israel, strangers to the Covenant of promise, and alienated from the Life of God; must needs be miserably poor.

Secondly, Poor Persons as they are needy, and their wants great, so they have nothing of their own to supply them: A poor man may want Bread; but his Cupboard doth not afford it: He may see his wants, but hath no money in his purse, no treasure to repair them; they are poor that have no Estates; no Barns-floor to go to; no Lands, no Livings, no money to help them in time of straits: Christless Souls are in this sense poor also: They have nothing to supply their wants, to relieve them in their necessities: Their own Treasures are totally exhausted by sin: Where the fountain is sealed, the Cisterns are dry: When the Creator will not help, the Creature cannot, Angels cannot, will not help: Scriptures can impart no comfort to them, whiles out of Christ: Where Christ shuts his door, no good thing gets out to such Souls: They are naked of all those advantages that might enrich them, stripped of those Consolations that might cheer and refresh them: Where shall we go? says the Disciples to Christ, Joh. 6. 68. So may poor sinners say: Where shall we go? they are like the Lepers that sate without the Gate of Samaria, ready to Famish, and knew not what to do, 2 Kings 7. 3. This is the case of Christless Souls: They may have of the fat things of this Life; but not a jot of the Everlasting hills reacheth them.

Thirdly, Poor men usually fare hard; they are much straitened in their refreshments; they feed on mean things, very low diet; Bread and Water is great cheer with them: When the Prophet was reduced to a state of poverty, he was fed with Bread and Water, 1 Kings 18. 4. Yea sometimes worse fare; as the Prodigal fed on Husks; nay, glad to have it, he looked for some that would give it. Luk. 15. 16. Nay, sometimes feed upon Doves dung; yea their own flesh, 2 Kings 6. 25. O the mean, hard fare poor persons are brought to in a state of Poverty; they go many times with hungry Bellies: Poor people sometimes with Lazarus would be glad of the Crumbs that fall from rich men's Tables, Luke 16. 21. Such is the state of Christless Souls; their fare is bad, and very course: They live upon the Carrion, the stinking Excrements of sin; They feed upon their Lusts; their sweetest draughts are (with Darius) dirty Waters: As the Children of God feed on holiness, 'tis meat and drink to do their Fathers will; so the pleasures of sin are the dainties, and sweet-meats of Christless Souls: The forbidden Fruit is the best cheer such have: No Tree in the garden pleaseth them so well as the Tree of Knowledge of good and evil. O such is the meat and drink of sinners, they feed upon their own dung; yea, they are fed with Judgment, whiles Saints eat the dainties, the marrow and fat things of Christ's Table: They eat the Bone, when the Children feed on the Flesh: Sinners come to Ordinances, and eat up Bran, whiles the Children feed upon the finest of the Wheat; they have but the shell and outside of Ordinances, when gracious Souls eat the kernel and inside sweetness: The Friends of Christ feed upon hidden Manna, when sinners fill their stomachs with husks, yea, gravel: The appointments of Christ yield no sweetness to them: Their Ear doth not try words, their Palate hath lost its taste; it cannot difference sweet Waters from bitter; the Language of Canaan from the language of Ashdod: Institutions from Superstition: 'Tis all one to them what is preached: The pure strains of Gospel truths is no other to them; than the dull methods of dead preaching, juicy meat and dry Bones is all alike to them; O they are poor indeed that fare so hard; If Hypocrites feed on anything 'tis but a dream; if they have comforts, 'tis but stolen Waters, when they awake they are empty still: Let the fare be never so nourishing, the choicest privileges they prove not by; they are ill favored Souls, and look gastly.

Fourthly, Poor Men have usually mean clothing, so John the Baptists low estate in the World was set forth by his habit, Mark 1. 6. And John was clothed with Camels Hair, and with the girdle of a skin about his Loynes: A plain and sordid habit, as Calvin calls it: Ab omni urbano nitore & lautitiis remotis: A man far from a Court-like neatness, either in habit or apparel, but in a poor and rustick attire; not but that John might have been better clothed; he was the Son of Zacharias the Priest, but taking on him the state of Poverty, he clothed himself accordingly: Poor Men are badly clad, Job 31. 19. Sometimes they go in rags, as Soloman says, Pro. 23. 21. Drowsiness will clothe a man in rags: It notes the Poverty that slothful Persons are brought into; when James would describe a poor man, he sets him forth as clothed in vile raiment, Jam. 2. 2. And there come in a poor man in vile raiment, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, dirty base clothes: The same word that is rendered filthly garments, Zach. 3. 3. Is the dress of poor men: So Christless Souls are very poor, they go in mean raiment, they are naked; the Spirit of God tells the Church of Laodicea so, Rev. 3. 17, 18. Till Souls be clothed with the white raiment of Christ's Righteousness, they be naked, and their shame appears; they have nothing to cover their nakedness from the sight of God, Angels, and Saints: They go in poor raiment; their garments are webs of their own weaving, and their works are their covering. They are clothed with shame, and covered with Confusion as with a Mantle, Psa. 109. 29. O what sad raiment do Sinners go in! Saints are clothed with white Rayment, and beautiful through Christ's comeliness; adorn'd with his Graces, bespangled in his Jewels; they go up and down in rich Attire: But sinners lie in sordid attire, clothed with vile Rayment.

Fifthly, Poor men usually have but bad Lodging; They commonly live in mean Houses; little Cottages: They sometimes dwell in the dust, Psa. 113. 7. He raiseth the poor out of the dust, and lifteth the needy out of the dunghill; So the Prophet Isaiah describes a poor man, as one that is cast out, Isa. 58. 7. The poor that be cast out: O their Lodging is hard; they do not spread themselves on Beds of Ivory; nor lie on Cloth of Tapestry: The rich have their ceiled Houses, fair dwellings. The poor many times their Cottages are in a Wilderness, and Houses that drop through. So 'tis with Christless Souls; they have poor Lodgings; when Saints Lodge in the bosom of Christ, they lie in the Arms of Devils: They lie upon Thorns; yea, Spears, that will pierce them thorough: They lie upon Stones; the Earth is their Bed, they are Earthy Souls, and lodge in the very bosom of the world: They dwell in habitations of cruelty; they lie in Graves: So the Prophet, when he speaks of the Jews dead in sin before Conversion, he describes them to be in their Graves, Ezek. 37. 12. Dead sinners lie like Lazarus, bound with a Napkin in their Graves, Joh. 11. 44. O there's your Bed Souls, if out of Christ; there you lie kept till the day of Judgment; held Prisoners till a call comes to bring you to the Bar of Christ. O your lodging is mean indeed! Saints dwell in God, Psa. 91. 1, 9. their habitation is in the City of God, Eph. 2. 19. But all Christless sinners lie without amongst Devils; they dwell on pinacles, and live upon the borders of death every moment, amongst Dogs, amongst the unclean O see their habitation, and the place where their honor dwelleth, Rev. 22. 15. Without are dogs, and Sorcerers, and Whoremongers, and Murderers, and Idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh alye.

These are the company Christless Souls lodge with: they are turned out of doors: O sad, doleful state indeed!

Sixthly, Another Character of a poor man is this: Poor men are Friendless, Pro. 19. 4 Wealth maketh many friends, but the poor is separated from his Neighbor. Every man seeketh the Rulers Favor; every man's Cap, and Hand, and Knee, and all is for them; But the poor man, his very Neighbor comes now to leave him, who was his Friend whiles in prosperity: When Rich men sit down in places of Honor, poor men must stand at the Feet, Jam. 2. 3. They are sure to find few Friends to own them, to pity, and help them! So Christless Souls are friendless; they have no true Friends in Heaven or Earth: Those that seem to flatter them, are not Friends but Foes; they rather wound them, and draw them into mischief; whiles they lie in their blood there's no eye to pity them, to do any of these things for them, Ezek. 16. 5 No hand to help them, to wash, salt, and swaddle them, ver. 4. 5. If the Father of Bowels shut up his pity, Creatures can extend but little; whiles they reject the good Samaritan, none that passeth by regards them. If God will not withdraw his anger, the proud helpers do stoop under him, Job 9. 13. If God be angry, who can befriend us? O sinner, If God frown, what is the love of Creatures? O thy case is doleful, thou thou art a poor Soul indeed, that art out of Christ; if he wound, none can heal, Job 11. 10. If he cut off, or shut up, or gather together, none can hinder him. Christless Souls are like a Gangreen member, in danger of being cut off if a sudden cure be not found: and who then can befriend them? where the Lord of hosts is a Friend, Creatures are Friends: And where he is an Enemy, Creatures are Enemies too: If God be in Covenant with a Soul, the Creatures are in Covenant too. And if God be against a Soul, all his armies fight against that Soul too: O sinners, who can be friend you? suppose you have Rich kindred, great acquaintance, what can they do at the Bar of God for you? They will not go to the Judgment seat of Christ, and speak for you there.

Seventhly, A poor man is one that is lightly esteemed: This David gives as a Testimony of a mean state; when some were sent to treat with him about a match with Saul's daughter; he modestly puts it off. Who I, says he, I am a poor man, and lightly esteemed, 1 Sam. 18. 23. The word is contemptible, of little, little worth. Rich men are sure of honor; but the poor are little regarded: Great persons are Courted, when the poor are slighted, passed by, little esteemed. So 'tis with Christless Souls: They are lightly esteemed: God hath a very low account of them: The ungodly in God's account are like the Chaff the Wind drives away, Psa. 1. 4. So are the wicked, let them be what they will, in greatest dignity here below; they are glittering stars in the worlds Eye, but falling Comets in God's account: The mighty King of Babylon being a wicked man, God accounts him but an abominable Branch, Isa. 14. 19. So Christ calls proud Herod, a Fox, Luk. 13. 32. God reckons them as broken Pitchers: Wicked Coniah is as a broken Vessel in whom is no pleasure, Jer. 22. 28. No more doth God reckon of wicked men, though under all the grandeur of the World: Angels do not regard them: They do not account them worth their company, and attendance: The Saints are guarded by Angels; but wicked men are let alone: Angels are Ministring Spirits to the Heirs of Salvation; not to the Heirs of Hell; they have no charge at all, to watch over them; but to fight against them: They are set in battle array against them; good men cannot regard wicked men; let them be never so high and honorable: Though they give every man his due; yet they cannot weigh them in the balance of the Sanctuary as anything: They had rather converse with a poor Saint, than with the greatest persons in the world, if wicked, 2. Kings 3. 14. And Elisha said, As the Lord of hosts liveth, before whom I stand; Surely were it not that I regarded the presence of Jehoshaphat King of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee. So lightly esteemed are wicked men in the Eyes of God, Saints and Angels.

Lastly, A poor man is liable to dangers and sufferings; he hath no might against the mighty, but lies open to the injuries and oppressions of those that are above him, Amos 4. 1. Hear ye this word ye kine of Bashan, which oppress the poor, which crush the needy: Poor men lie under the feet of the potent, and are subject to their Tyranny: On the oppressors side is power, and on the oppresseds side are tears, Eccl. 4. 1. So Christless Souls are under the ruling power of Satan, and taken Captive by him at his will, 2 Tim. 2. 26. They have no defense against the strokes of Judgment; 'tis easy with God to crush them every moment; they no have power to secure themselves from ruining vengeance, wicked men are no more match for God than Briars and Thorns, Isa. 27 4. Yea they can no more resist him than the stubble can the fire, Mal. 4. 1. O sinner, thou art a miserable Caitiff indeed! O see thy poverty, let this stain thy glory; O sinner, look about thee, whiles thou hast a little time: Art thou willing to die so poor? O 'tis not Houses, nor Lands, nor Money, nor Friends, can minister comfort to thee then; O how wilt thou do to live forever, if thou hast none of Christ's tried Gold.

So much of the Third Inference.

CHAP. XXV.

Wherein Christ is set forth to sinners, as a Match wortby of their choice, in regard of the excellency of his Estate: The amiableness of his Person: His lovely Dispositions and other Considerations to win the hearts of sinners to be looking after this lovely Jesus.

IF there are such vast treasures in the Lord Jesus Christ; then this will follow hence: That the Lord Jesus Christ is worth the looking after by perishing sinners. O what a match is Jesus Christ for undone sinners; could they but obtain him, how happy would they be forever; this is a principal thing in a woers eye, to get a rich match; O Souls you cannot get a better match than Jesus Christ, there's none like him.

First, In point of Riches: O let me commend the Lord Jesus Christ to you upon the account of his wealth: Sinners, if you would have a rich Husband; there's none so rich as Christ: He is wonderfully rich; if you but consider the Nature and number of his riches: If you observe the verity and variety of his treasures: If you weigh the kind or degree of his substance, you will say he is exceeding rich: Take him positively, or comparatively, he is vastly rich: he is really so, and superlatively so: The worlds treasures are but shadows: But he hath substance; true solid subsisting treasures, Pro. 8. 21. That I may cause them that love me to inherit substance, and I will fill their treasures. Christ's Gold is tried Gold, that which can bear the hardest touch, and abide the fire: And he is superlatively rich, none like him: Job was a rich man, but his riches were limited within the Confines of a Country: He was the richest, not in all the world, but of all the men of the East, Job 1. 3. But Christ is richest of all: All the Men and Angels in Heaven and Earth put together cannot vye treasures with Christ: What was said of the virtuous woman is true of Christ, he excels them all, Pro. 31. 29. O sinners, would you have a rich match, cast your eyes on Jesus Christ: He hath a very taking Estate, that will be wonderful attractive upon your hearts if rightly set. I shall show in a few particulars what an Estate Christ hath.

First, It is a fair Estate, exceeding large and full; 'tis incomprehensible, and past finding out, both as to his personal, and purchased Treasure: It is in heighth, depth, length, breadth, passing knowledge, as hath been shewn at large, Eph. 3. 18, 19. Christ's Estate is as large as himself is, and he is past finding out: Who can search out the Almighty to perfection? Job 11. 7. All men's Estates lie here in the lower world, within the measure of a spot of ground: But Christ's treasure fills Heaven and Earth: The Heavens, yea the Heaven of Heavens are his, Neh. 9. 6. The Lord Jesus Christ is rich every way considered: He is rich in inheritance: Heir of all things, Heb. 1. 2. He is rich in Jewels, he hath abundance of choice Jewels; he hath a day on purpose to make up his Jewels, Mal. 3. 17. He is rich in mansions too, Joh. 14. 2. In my Fathers House are many mansions. A mansion for every Heir of Glory: O how many Houses hath this Heir of all things? How many dwelling places in Glory? He is rich in Crowns and Thrones: We account that man rich that hath two or three Kingdoms: But Jesus Christ hath a multitude of Crowns: A Crown for every Subject, Mat. 9. 28. Every saved Soul is a Crowned King, or shall be so to all Eternity, Rev. 1. 6. Every overcoming Soul shall sit on Thrones; and everyone wearing a Crown of Glory, 1 Pet. 5. 4. O what a vast Potentate is Jesus Christ: All the Angels in Heaven cannot draw an inventory of Christ's Estate, so numberless are his Treasures: He that hath so many millions of Saints, and can give everyone of them a Kingdom: O how rich must this Lord be? O sinners think what a rich Jointure Christ can make you; he can settle an Estate upon you indeed. O will you Espouse Christ, he hath a fair Estate indeed.

Secondly, Christ hath a free Estate: Some men may have large Estates, but many Mortgages and debts upon them; but Christ's Estate is all free; no debts lies on Christ to lessen his Estate; whatever he gives to the whole Creation, doth no way lessen his Riches; like the Sun, whatever light it imparts to the World, or Inferior Luminaries, doth not exhaust or diminish it's Original splendor; all that the Rivers empty from the Sea, do not lessen it, but repay its bounty by a retribution of all those receptions; so whatever contributions come from Christ to men, it doth not lessen his ability to give to his people: The more Abraham gave to his Sons by Keturah, the less he had for Isaac: But Christ's liberality and Obligations do not diminish his treasure; Christ's whole Estate comes to every Believer, every saved Soul hath a whole Christ full of Grace and Glory.

Thirdly, Christ hath a sure Estate, exceeding safe; there's no defrauding of his Spouse, no pre-mortgage to take it away: If Christ's Life could not be taken from him without his consent, when he was Mediator, Joh. 10. 18. Then all the Estate he hath purchased with his blood is unremovable; the Father hath given it, who is greater than all, and in whose hands Believers are put, and their Estates secured for them: All new-Covenant promises are sure, as you have heard, part of which is the inheritance of the Saints. This Estate is sure both by donation and purchase: The Father hath given Christ and all that is his to Believers, Isa. 55. 4. I have given him to be a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people: This shows the certainty and truth of this Covenant which is confirmed in Christ, whom the Father hath given and made over to Believers to be the confirmation of his promises. 'Tis confirmed by purchase; he hath bought and paid for it; he went and sold all to get this pearl; he parted with his Life, Blood, Glory, his All, to get this Estate for Believers: The Father hath received every Farthing of the money, and gives him an acquittance under his hand, declares before men and Angels, that Christ owes him nothing for all the whole Estate he hath purchased for Believers, Mat 3. 17. This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased: O 'tis a sure Estate. A conveyance is made of it to Christ in the behalf of Believers, Isa. 49. 8. Math. 28. 18. All power is put into the hands of Christ: The Deeds are drawn, and interchangeably sealed between the Father and the Son, that the Estate is firm and sure to all Believers: Nay the seisure and delivery is given, and Christ hath taken possession of it, and he is entered into the Heavens in the behalf of Believers, and all to make this sure. O sinners will you espouse Hell, and let go Jesus Christ, who is Heir of Life, and Glory, that hath such a sure Estate for you?

Fourthly, He hath a suitable Estate: Let a man have a fair, free, and sure Estate, yet if it be not suitable to his quality, necessities, and desires, 'tis unsatisfying: But Christ's Estate is every way suitable both to himself, and to his Bride: He hath a large inheritance suitable for his dignity, and to his Spouses quality: Christ having finished his work on Earth, being about to drink the last draught of the Cup; he comes and treats with the Father about his receiving, and 'tis Glory suitable to his quality: O Father glorify thou me with thyself, with the glory which I had with thee before the World was, Joh. 17. 1. to ver. 5. O unreasonable Souls, that despise Christ; O sinners! had you ever such a Lover stood at your doors? No, nor never will have the like, if you refuse this Jesus: Yea, 'tis a suitable Estate to his Spouse too: 'Tis a fit joynture for the Kings Daughter, sufficient to maintain her Immortality, and Glory, Luk. 22. 29. I appoint unto you a Kingdom: Now a Kingdom is a suitable state to a Kings Daughter: O Souls! will you fall in Love with Christ? he hath Crowns, Thrones, a Kingdom of Glory for you.

Then 'tis an Estate suitable to your necessities too: There's enough in Christ to spend upon, and maintain you bravely, richly, here and forever: O sinners, will you match with Christ? whatever you need is in him. My God shall supply all you wants, Phil. 4. 19. If a Kingdom will do it, you shall not want it: If a Crown of Glory will make you happy and blessed you shall not want it; his Estate is fullness that filleth all in all, Eph. 1. 23. O Believer, it may be thou wantest Bread, Cloaths, Money, and thou goest up and down dejected, sad, full of fears: But hast thou espoused Christ? O consider thou hast a fullness, O what a vast Estate hath Jesus Christ for thee. Sinners, your wants are many, more then you know, God only knows your wants, Sinners, yet there's enough in Christ's Estate and Patrimony to supply them all.

Then 'tis suitable also to their desires. Sinners desires are large; O what wandering things are the desires; persons may desire things to the utmost ends of the Earth, which they cannot get: But all that the Believer rationally desires, Christ's Estate can satisfy: He will fulfill the desires of them that fear him, Psa. 145. 19. Yea, 'tis above their desires: Desire as much as thou canst, Christ's Estate is above thy desires, Pro. 3. 15. O what a treasure then is Christ! it fills every chink of the Believers desires, with an overplus: 'Tis more than can be desired.

Fifthly, 'Tis a pleasant Estate, Psa. 16. 6. The lines are fallen to me in a pleasant place, yea, I have a goodly heritage. The Chaldee renders it in sweetness, others delightful place: A great Estate if it be not well situated, and lie not in a pleasant place, is not half so contentful; but Christ's Estate is well situated; it hath all considerations and circumstances that may make it desirable. Canaan, that was a type of it, is called the pleasant Land, Jer. 3. 19. 'Tis in the Original, the land of desires: So the Believers portion that is prepared for him by Christ; 'tis a Land of desires; an Inheritance of beauty and Glory: Christ's Riches are very precious and pleasant Riches, Pro. 24. 4. And by knowledge shall the Chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant Riches. Rare, as the word imports; delighting Riches: The whole possessions of Christ are pleasant, the way to it is pleasant, Pro. 3. 17. The borders of Christ's interest are made with pleasant stones, Isa. 54. 12. And all thy borders of pleasant stones. The first fruits of Christ's harvest is all pleasure and delight, much more the lump; the maintenance he allows his Children here in the way is delighting, much more the Estate reserved at the Journeys end. The Fruits that fall from this Tree of Life is sweet to those that sit under its shadow, Cant. 2. 3. how much more to them that climb, and crop the pleasant fruits thereof. Their drink is pleasant, Psal. 36. 8. Thou shalt make them drink of the Rivers of thy pleasures. And at last he brings them to his Right Hand, where are pleasures for evermore, Psal. 16. 11.

Sixthly, It is a peaceful state, not liable to contests and controversies, as men's Estates oftentimes are here: A man may have a great Estate, but it may be a litigious Estate: It may occasion many Law Suits about it: But it is not so in Christ's Estate: 'Tis a peaceful Estate; no wars grow out of this Estate: Christ's Country is called Salem: The Land of peace, Psa. 76. 2. And he is The King of Salem; The King of peace, Heb. 7. 1. His Kingdom is Righteousness, and Peace, and Joy in the holy Ghost, Rom. 14. 17. He is their peace, Eph. 2. 14. In him they shall have peace, Joh. 16. 33. His very Doctrine are words of peace, Eph. 2. 17. He came to guide our feet into the way of peace, Luke 1. 79. He came and Preached Peace: O what a blessed Estate hath Christ; what a lovely Lord is Christ: He bequeaths peace to his people: Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you, Joh. 14. 27. They have peace with God who Espouse this Christ, Rom. 5. 1. Peace with Saints and Angels, Col. 1. 20. Peace with Conscience too, Phil. 4. 7. Heb. 10. 22 The Fruits of the Spirit is Peace, Gal. 5. 22. His Riches have no sorrow annexed with them.

7thly, It is a perpetual Estate: An inheritance that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven, 1 Pet. 1. 4. Christ's Riches are durable Riches, aged Riches, strong, solid, Riches: Opes densae, that is •ultae & firmae, says Mercer, they are great, stable Riches, Pro. 8. 18. Riches and Honor are with me, yea durable Riches and Righteousness. His Gold is not liable to rust. 'Tis said of the Cedar, worms will not breed in it; sure there's no worm in Christ's Treasure: O Souls, 'tis a lasting Estate: That neither time nor changes can wast nor weaken: All the Saints spending upon it to all Eternity, never detracts from it: Christ's Treasures are like the deep waters, or like the bottomless Ocean, that cannot be exhausted; his treasure will last as long as God, the Soul, and Eternity lasts, which is forever, forever, forever. Some men have outliv'd their Leases and their Estates and have seen an end of their Houses and Riches; but the Spouse of Christ can never out-live her jointure, it lasts to all Eternity.

Lastly, 'Tis a possessed estate: Some may have great estates, but it is in reversion, they may look long for it, as some Heirs do all their days: But Christ's Estate is all in his own hand, 'tis actually made over to him by the Father, and possession given him when he sate down at the Right hand of God, Heb. 1. 3. He hath actually obtained this Inheritance with the Fruits of it, Heb. 1. 4. And is actually invested with this glory, Heb. 2. 7. This sinners is the Estate of that Beloved that is tendered to you in the Gospel for your choice; he is very wealthy, he hath a fair, free, sure, suitable, pleasant, peaceful, perpetual possession; an Estate you cannot spend or comprehend; an Inheritance you cannot lose or out-•ive: riches that will not cloy, nor clog y•u; a portion that cannot be out-vy'd or matched: Come view the Rentals of his Lands, the Inventory of his Goods, and see what a rich match Christ is, there's none like him; where can you mend your penny-worths? all the world, no nor the Heaven of Heavens can yield you such another bargain. Job 28. ver. 13. &c. Man knoweth not the price thereof—the gold and the Chrystal cannot equal it, and the exchange of it shall not be for Jewels of fine gold, &c. Then Jesus Christ is worth a looking after if he be so rich as the Scripture reports him to be, and I presume you question not the truth of this testimony. O slight not this bargain which will make you happy to all Eternity; if wealth will please you, here's enough, what say you? Have you any objection against his estate? If not; what stick you at?

Secondly, Dost thou dislike his person? Then it argues thou knowest him not; for he is altogether Lovely, the chiefest of ten thousands: The fairest of the Children of Men: O come, behold the Lamb of God: Look upon this glorious Jehovah Christ: O see his Personal Excellency, and it will allure you, and invite you to come to him: he is the brightness of his Fathers Glory, and the express image of his Fathers Person, Heb. 1. 3. Sinners look well upon him, view him from top to toe; there is no blemish in him: O he is the most exquisite one, his perfections are enough to please you, his beauty sufficient to allure you: See his excellent lineaments, the sweet proportion of every part: O how lovely is Christ to the believing eye, in regard of his Person. Consider his Natures, God Man sweetly concentrating in an intimate and Eternal Union, perfect God, perfect Man in one person: O where can you espy such an object! sure he is a Non-such; none like him in Heaven, none like him on Earth, in regard of his Personal Glory as Mediator, God Man: look over his Characters that his friends have given him; See in that Book of Cant. Chap. 5. How the Spouse displays him, and you will find him a beautiful Person, ver. 11. to the end, His head is as the most fine gold: His Wisdom and Government is most pure, solid and excellent: His locks are bushy and black as a Raven: Which notes not only his love liness, but his strength and vigor he hath his radical moisture, his vital heat: He is strong, his vigor abides with him; he hath strength sufficient for all his undertakings, and he is able to go through what he sets his hand unto; he is strong, vigorous, and spritely. His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the Rivers of Waters, washed with Milk, and fitly set. His sight is quick, and perfect, his understanding is infinite: His Counsels are holy, and consistent, all well set, his decrees, his purposes, all methodically ordered and fixed: His looks are gracious, his aspects lovely, enamouring the eyes of them that behold him. O such a lovely Christ is tendered to Sinners; O I know not how to set him forth to your capacities, he is a most taking object indeed. His face is white and ruddy: Emblems of Rich Beauty, captivating the eyes, and ravishing the hearts of beholders: The purity of the divine nature, with the passions of the human, and procurements of his Redemption, sets him forth as infinitely amiable in the eyes of Believers. His cheeks are as a bed of spices, as sweet flowers: His graces and choice discoveries of his Excellencies, doth wonderfully feed and delight the Souls of those that have acquaintance and fellowship with him; his sweet and lovely perfections discovered to Believers are like a rich feast that stay with them: His lips like Lilies dropping sweet smelling Myrrh: The impartings of his wisdom, the droppings of his Doctrine, his gracious words, his Holy Communications, are savoury and sound, pure and incorruptible, they strengthen the heart, and heal the Soul of those that embrace him: His Doctrine carries wonderful strength to those that are in weakness; how do the words of grace revive the fainting hearts of Believers; his ways are strength to the upright, like Myrrh, they make the heart sound. His hands are as gold rings set with the Beryl: His works and administrations in the World, are full of order, beauty, and excellency: All that he doth in Zion and out of Zion, is all holy; every providence that seems to us sometimes to be unseasonable, is in infinite wisdom displayed by Jesus Christ for the good of his people. His belly is as bright Ivory overlaid with Sapphires: His tender Bowels, and boundless affections to his people, are wonderfully lovely and delighting; they are pure, firm, and fixed in their nature, and they are cheering, and enriching in their effects; O Christ's love is not fleeting, 'tis firm as Ivory, set with gold, overlaid with Sapphires. O how rich are his affections, what a Treasure to those that have him. His legs are as Pillars of Marble, set upon sockets of fine gold. The gracious motions and efficacious workings of his Spirit, are exceeding mighty and glorious; full of strength: He hath power to bear up all those that follow him: His legs are strong, he can carry his Lambs that are committed to his arms; there's no burden too heavy for Christ, his loins are strong, he can bear what is laid upon him; the weight of all the Saints on Earth is nothing to him: He can carry on all his intendments and interest in the World; his legs are as Marble, able to bear his Body; quick in motion: O what a lovely Christ is this displayed in the Gospel! His countenance is as Labanon, excellent as the Cedars: Those discoveries the Lord Jesus Christ makes of himself in his word, and works, are wonderful taking; exceeding enriching: Christ's word is fruit fullizing: O when he speaks to the hearts of his Children, what a deal of virtue goes through his lips; Grace is poured out of his lips, Milk and honey is under his tongue: His appearances carries excellency, riches and glory with them, His mouth is most sweet, yea he is altogether lovely: His discourses, the openings of his mind is wonderful pleasing: The word of Christ never cloy the spiritual part. Thus you see what a Person Jesus Christ is: O Sinners consider his beauty; O how lovely an object is he! what can you object against his Person, why you will not espouse him?

Thirdly, Consider his lovely dispositions, O Sinners will you accept of him? He is of an excellent Spirit, of a very sweet nature; full of grace and goodness: His sweet dispositions have been largely opened already, he is full of mercy and compassions, meekness, gentleness, patience, longsuffering, slow to anger, ready to forgive, great in kindness, free and bountiful, of a generous Spirit; true and faithful: Sinners, you may trust him with your secrets; you may venture your Souls upon him: He is harmless, and inoffensive; he doth wrong to no man; his company is lovely and desirable: His converses are pleasant and profitable: O what a person is Christ! O Sinners, never was such a one offered you as Christ is; why will you not come unto him?

Fourthly, Consider his quality and high dignity, he is no mean Person, but a mighty Potentate, 1 Tim. 6. 15. The sole and only superintendent of the whole World, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lord's, Rev. 19. 16. He hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings and Lord of Lord's: He is not only a King, but the King, the only true Potentate from whom all others derive their glory, a King not only of Men, but of Saints; not only of Saints, but of Angels, of Thrones, Principalities and Powers: Math. 26. 53. And can command them down now he is in Heaven for the service of his elect, Heb. 1. 14. Are they not all Ministering Spirits sent forth to Minister for them who shall be heirs of Salvation. O Sinners! shall this prevail with you to accept of him?

Fifthly, Take notice of his potency: He hath power as well as honor, Math. 28. 18. All things are put under his feet, Heb. 2. 8. All the Armies of Heaven and Earth are delivered over to him: He is Lord of Hosts: He hath the Keys of Heaven, Death and Hell: Rev. 1. 18. Who then can lock out Christ, or exclude him from doing what he pleaseth, seeing all things are at his beck? He doth whatsoever pleaseth him in Heaven and in Earth, in the Seas and in all deep places, Psa. 135. 6. He sitteth in the Heavens, and laughs the Counsels of the Potentates to scorn; he makes no reckoning of their combinations, but derides their ambitious attempts against him, Psa. 2. 4. He shall pass thorough and over-flow, and break all their considerations in pieces, Isa. 8. 8, 9, 10. Let all the subtleties of Hell be woven together, to make a web to catch the interest of Christ in; it shall all be as a spiders web, that can soon be swept away. O admire the Kingdom of Christ; the glorious power of Christ; nothing is too hard for him: He hath an absolute, unlimited and uncontrollable power: He is the supreme over all persons, and all things, in all places, Lands, and Countries: O what power hath he! not only Authority, but likewise Might, 2 Chro. 20. 6. In his hand there is power and might, and none is able to withstand him: O Sinners come away to Christ, he can protect you and defend you from dangers.

Sixthly, Observe his wisdom too: this is taking with some to have a head that hath intellectuals in him, and marry one that hath exquisite parts and eminency of knowledge. Now all Treasures of wisdom are in him, Col. 3. 3. His judgments are unsearchable and past finding out, Rom. 11. 33. His judgments, his acts in the World, his Righteous deeds, and the way he takes to accomplish his designs; O how wonderful deep are they! The spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him; the Spirit of wisdom, and understanding, the Spirit of Counsel and might; the Spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord, Isa. 11. 2. He is of quick understanding, full of judgment; called The wonderful Counselor, Isa. 9. 6. The only wise God, from whom all wisdom is fetched, that fills Men and Angels; all the World do light their Candles at his Torch: He is the Sun that fills the whole Creation with beams: There's no searching of his understanding; he can bring to light the hidden things of darkness: 1 Cor. 4. 5. He hath eyes can reach where men cannot; he can reveal the deep things of God: 1 Cor. 2. 10. O Sinners, what an excellent one is Christ! O how worthy of your choice!

Seventhly, Weigh the glorious and blessed effects of your closing with the Lord Jesus Christ: Sinners, the very day you marry Christ he will pay all your debts, and they are many; he will pardon all your sins, blot out all your iniquities, remember them no more: He will free you from all your Bondages, deliver you from all your fears, secure you from all your dangers; if you will but espouse him. O the very day you marry Christ he will wipe off all your shame, and remove your reproach: He will heal all your wounds and sicknesses, he will begin to heal them immediately; and never leave till he hath perfectly cured your Souls: He will strip off all your filthy garments, and clothe you with broidered raiment; he will advance you to highest dignity; he will lift up your heads above your fellows: He will make you Kings and Priests to God; he will set you in Heavenly places; he will seal your title to a Rich Joynture, he will make sure your interest to all the Treasures of Heaven: He will possess you with grace, and assure you of glory: O sinners, is not this argument enough to win your Souls, and make you willing to accept of such a Majesty as Jesus Christ?

Eighthly, Sinners think upon the greatness of that love t^e Lord Jesus Christ bears you: He hath good-will towards Men, towards sinners, as sinners, whiles in their blood, he hath a love of pity for you: 'Tis true till you close with Christ he can have no love of acquiescense in you; but he hath a love of good-will to your Souls, he hath so much love for you, as hath made him willing to shed his blood for you; his love brought him down from the Fathers Glory, made him willing to drink the dregs of a cup of wrath for you; the love of Christ to Sinners, hath set up a standing Ministry in the World, sent forth multitudes to publish glad tidings: O Sinners, did you but believe this, how attractive would it be upon your hearts, to draw you to Christ. But if none of these arguments will prevail, let me add one consideration more.

Lastly, The effects of your refusing Jesus Christ will be dreadful: if you will not accept of this proposal; O think what a terrible answer Christ will send you: Such shall not taste of his Supper, Luke 14. 24. Not a crumb that fall from this Rich Table of Salvation-cheer shall fall to the share of that wretched sinner. If you will not have his Person you shall not have his purchase: He hath sworn in his wrath these shall never enter into his Rest, Heb. 3. 11. O sinner! were there no other Hell but the loss of Heaven, it were enough to break thy heart in pieces: O think upon the sad Issue of thy final unbelief: When thy sins get over thy head, and thy guilt follows thee at thy heels; When Death and Hell shall be at thy back, and then to call and cry, and knock at the door of mercy and not be heard; O what a doleful thing will this be! When armies of devils are round about thee, ready to snatch thy Soul into everlasting burnings, and none to relieve thee; O fearful will the case of thy Soul be! When thou shalt cry; O for mercles sake, Help Lord; I am going to Hell, for mercies sake help; and then for the Ear of God to be deaf, and thou not have one good word, and the door be shut against thee; O what a doleful case will this be! for tender mercy to cease; is miserable: But for mercy to become cruel to you; O fearful case indeed! when tender Bowels shall become Brass and Iron, and there shall be no sounding at all in it towards thy Soul: O sinner if thou wilt not accept of this Christ, he will laugh at thy Calamity, and mock when thy Fear cometh, Pro. 1. 26. That's terrible; when God shall not only cease to pity, but deride thy misery: Be assured, Soul, as quiet as now thou art, a day of Calamity will come; there will come a time of Fears for thy poor Soul, and then will mercy itself be turned into wrath, and laugh at thy Calamity; yet further (sinner) if thou wilt not accept of Christ; then will incensed fury send forth its army of destroyers, and ruin, and cut off thy Soul forever, Mat.22. 7. Then shalt thou be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of God, and from the glory of his Power, 2 Thes. 1. 8, 9. Then shall vengeance glut itself upon thy Soul, and seize upon thee in flaming Fire: O 'tis a dreadful thing to lie at the mercy of vengeance: O what will not enraged fury do to its adversaries, when it hath them at its power? But what will divine vengeance do? O sinner, when God shall arraign thee at the Bar of Judgment for kicking at the Bowels of mercy; for Crowning the head of Christ with thorns, and trampling his blood under feet; what wilt thou do then? (O canst thou read this and not shake) when thou shalt see Devils round about thee, and flaming vengeance take hold of thee: But thus it will be. Then they that would not let Christ reign over them; shall feel Devils rending of them: Then they that fled from the Arms of mercy, shall fall into the Jaws of fury: Then they that shut their ears against the fervent woosings of Christ shall open their hearts to the fiery wrath of Christ: Then they that would not get into the bosom of Christ; shall lodge in the burnings of Hell: Then the Furnace of Hell shall be heated seven times hotter for those whose hearts freezed under the warm beams of Christ's Love: Oh dreadful will thy state be, Sinner, if thou refuse Christ.

Well sinner, take the Counsel given thee: kiss the Son lest he be angry; turn in, turn in hither; reach out thy arms, come away to Christ; say Lord Jesus, I am willingly thine. Sinners are you persuaded? what answer shall we return to this Lord of Glory? Will you be his? Will you accept of this grace tendered to you, before it breathe its last to you.

CHAP. XXVI.

Objections answered. Counsels how to come to Christ.

I shall now endeavor to answer those Objections which are made by doubting Souls, against their coming to Christ.

1. Objection. Says a Soul: But will this blessed Potentate, this glorious King of Kings, stoop so low as to look upon such an obscure Creature, such a worthless worm as I am? Alas! I am too mean to unloose the latchet of his shoes: I am too unworthy to be the meanest Servant in his House: To be a dog to his Flock: And will he cast his skirt over me? O do not flatter me into such vain hopes, and fond dreams, that such a King of Glory will look upon me: I am too low for one aspect of his Eye.

Answ. Abundant Testimony hath this Lord given of his condescending heart to sinners: Dost thou think thou art too low for such a Majesty? When he left his Fathers Kingdom, and came down from his Eternal Glory with the Father, he gave abundant proof of the humility of his heart: when he did espouse thy nature, (sinner) to himself; and took upon him the form of a Servant; he shown his humble heart, that he was far from contemning sinners: He was the true Jacob, who served a far harder bondage for thy Soul, than ever Jacob did for his Rachel; this shows his humility: His choosing such mean persons, such notorious sinners for his companions, in nearest Union and Communiwith himself; Matthew the Publican, Paul the Blasphemer: Poor Fishermen of no regard upon Earth: These did Christ personally choose for his nearest Converses; this shows his condescension: And 'tis not thy low state (sinner) can discourage Christ, if thy heart be really willing: His preaching the Gospel to the poor, and calling the base things of this world, and things that are not, shows his lowly mind. And his humility hath been abundantly proved already: He will dwell with the Lowly, Isa. 57. 15.

2. Object. But I have no portion for Christ: I am exceeding poor and beggarly; I have no Righteousness, no Grace, no good things dwell in me: I can bring nothing to glorify him; I have no ability at all to serve him; I cannot pray or do anything that is good, and will Christ accept of me?

Ans. Christ's design in these Gospel tenders of himself to sinners, is not to get, but to give Riches: He wants no treasures for himself, but he rather wants objects to give them to: He wants no goods, but (like the Rich man in the Gospel) he wants room to bestow his goods: He is willing to impart his treasure to sinners, 2 Cor. 8. 9. Of all persons in the world he is sure to hear the desires of the poor. The rich shall be sent empty away: but the poor that wait on him shall be heard, Psa. 69. 33. Art thou a poor Soul in thy own eyes? The Lord hath special regard for such: These are the persons he invites to him that have no money, no price, Isa. 55. 1. The poor have the Gospel preached to them, Math. 11. 5. Therefore sinners 'tis not thy poverty can break the match, nor hinder thy reception of Jesus Christ, if thy heart be willing.

3. Object. But I am a deformed loveless Creature, I have no beauty at all in me; I am black with sin, full of all uncleanness, and abominations, polluted in my blood, wallowing in my Mire and Vomit, scarce such a nauseous Object as I in all the world. O what a filthy heart, O what an unclean Soul, O what vile affections have I! and will this holy one cast a glance of Love on such a Creature as I? I dare not think he will endure the sight of me; therefore I am afraid to look to him.

Answ. Believing sinners, though black in their own eye, yet are comely in Christ's Eye, Cant. 1. 5. Faith puts an amiableness on the believing sinner in Christ's account: This is one of those eyes that ravishes his heart, Cant. 4. 9. He looks upon them as lovely that come to him, though unlovely in themselves: Affections spy no deformity in the beloved object. Christ's love is so great to fallen man, as that nothing appears unlovely in him, but an unwillingness to be hid: He sees no iniquity in Jacob, though there is a great deal. The halt, blind, lame, impotent are no amorous Objects; yet these Christ invites to his feast, Luk. 14. 21. Others are not worthy, says Christ, but bring these, they are company for me, if they will but come. Let not thy deformity, and the sense of thy unworthiness keep thee from Christ, because he hath beauty enough for himself, and thee. He hath comeliness enough to cover thy nakedness: 'tis but for some of his beams to reflect on thy Soul, and thou wilt be altogether glorious; thy perfection lies in his, and not thy own comeliness: Christ can soon fill thee with amiableness: see, in Ezek. 16. what a change Grace makes upon deformed sinners: The beauty of sinners is Christ's beauty put upon them, and Christ's Holiness imparted to them, and there's enough of it for thee. 3. Know, that Christ's blood is cleansing blood, it doth not only cover spots and deformities, but it takes away filthiness; if thou come to him, the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin, 1 Joh. 1. 7.

4. Object. But I am a great sinner, none like me, therefore. I cannot think the Lord Jesus will pass them by; or have thoughts of favor for me.

Ans. So was David's, and yet found pardon, Psa. 25. 11. for thy name sake, O Lord, pardon mine iniquities for they are great. Manassch's sins were notorious, and yet upon his Repentance found favor with God, 2 Chro. 33. 3, 4, 5, 6. He reared up Altars for Baalim, worshipped all the host of Heaven, and served them; he built Altars in the House of the Lord, and caused his Children to pass through the fire in the Valley of the Son of Hinnom. He also observed times, and used I-chantments, and Witchcrafts, and dealt with familiar Spirits, and with izards, and when God spake to him he would not hearken, ver. 10. O abominable sins! One would think here was a man ripe for Hell; yet upon his supplication, when he was in affliction, God heard him, and pardoned him, ver. 12, 13. Paul was a flagitious sinner, in his own eyes the greatest that ever was, 1 Tim. 1. 15. A Blasphemer, a persecutor, injurious, but obtained mercy, ver. 13. Therefore 'tis not the greatness of thy sin can stand in the way of thy mercy, if thou come over to Christ with all thy heart.

5. Object. But I have been an old sinner; I have been rooted in sin, and lived in sin all my days; I have been a continual provocation to the Lord, for many years; through my whole Life sin hath touched sin, and I cannot think Christ hath thoughts of Love for me.

Answ. So did the Thief upon the Cross, he sin'd to the last hour of his Life, and yet obtained mercy, Luke 23. 40, 41, 42, 43. So did some of those that were called in at the Eleventh hour, yet embracing the call, obtained mercy, Math. 20. 9, 12. it was not the length of their sinning time excluded the Efficacie of Salvation-mercy, when they did come in at the call of it. I mention not this for a Pillow to secure sinners, but for a Cordial for desponding Souls: Now the Gospel calls thee, sinner; if thou come in this hour, and embrace the calls of mercy; 'tis not the length of thy sinning time, will make void the Grace of God.

6. Object. But says the Soul: I have slighted many calls already: I have quenched many motions of the Spirit: I have despised the first call: and may I have hopes to go to Christ? Will he receive me?

Answ. So did Manasseh, he did reject many calls; God did speak to him, but he would not hearken; and after his rejection of the first call, yet mercy found him: The Jews in the wilderness rejected many calls of God; yet the Lord said, while 'tis called today, harden not your hearts, H•b. 3. 7, 8. Though thou hast been guilty of despising many calls, this is matter for thy humbling, but not for thy despair.

7. Object. But I am never the better for all the means and mercy I have enjoyed: though I had despised the first calls of mercy, yet if I had been the better for after tenders of grace, there were some hope: But I am still the same notwithstanding all the Sermons I hear, and precious overtures of Salvation; my heart is hard, and dead under all.

Answ. So it was with the Impotent man a great while, he was diseased thirty and eight years. Joh. 5. 5. He lay at the Pool's side near the means of cure, but never the better, ver. 6. 7. And so continued till Christ's time came to cure him. So Israel were barren and unfruitful, till the Lord became a dew to them. Hos. 14. 5. Therefore this is no discouragement; if thou believe and come to Christ, God will be a dew to thee, and thou shalt quickly find a change.

8. Object. But saith one: I am not only never the better for all the means of grace, but I am worse than I was before; when I was under first awakenings, my heart was more tender; but now my heart seems to be more brawny and hard; I find more unbelief than ever, more indisposition to go to Christ: I am worse than I was.

Answ. So was Sarah too, as to the receiving the promised mercy, more and more indisposed, she complains of the deadness of her womb; she was past age to be the Mother of Children, till the time of life came, then Sarah's growing indisposition becomes no impediment at all to the fulfilling of the promise. So was Israel, they began to say for their part, their hope was cut off, and God had forsaken them, when mercy was nearest to them: So the woman that had a bloody issue twelve years, and had spent all that she had on Physicians, yet was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse, till Christ came and healed her, Mark 5. 25, 26. Persons are usually worst in their own eyes when mercy is nearest their doors.

Again, Thy not coming to Christ is the cause of thy decays and hardnings; 'tis thy unbelief that deadens thy heart, and withers thy Soul, Christ doth withdraw his influence from such, and refuseth to do any mighty works in them because of unbelief. O then Soul, come away to Christ, and this is the way to cure thee.

9. Object. But says the Soul: Christ seems to take no notice of me, I call but he heareth me not, I come to Ordinances, but I cannot see him, nay he seems to be angry with me; everything goes against me, his word speaks bitter things to me; methinks there's never a threatening but belongs to me; I am the Hypocrite and unclean person, that God strikes at in every Sermon, and his rod lies heavy on me too, and in the way of his providence he writes bitter things against me.

Answ. Soul, is this thy case, doth Christ take no notice of thee? It is because thou takest so little of him, when he unveils his beauty; thou dost not believe in him, when he makes a promise to thy Soul: When he sends words of Counsel, thou dost not obey him. He hath called, and thou hast not answered, and therefore when thou callest he doth not answer, Zach. 7. 13. Yet at such a time what follows; doth God make an end of such sinners? No, see Chap. 8. 2, 3. O Soul, if the Lord Jesus Christ seems to take no notice of thee, but to frown upon thee, it is to frown thee from thy unbelief; it is but to make thee sensible of thy slighting him: If thou wilt this day accept of the Lord Jesus Christ; his frowns will soon pass away, as a dark Cloud doth when the Sun shines; he will remember thy Iniquities no more.

10. Object. But may some Soul say: I would fain come to Christ, but I cannot; I like the terms well, but O my unbelieving heart! O my impenitent hard heart! I cannot sense Salvation-kindness.

Answ. O Soul! The afflicting sense of thy unbelief, is a hopeful sign of thy faith: If thou dost see thy unbelieving heart; so as to be burdened under it, and be weary of it, the Lord reckons it for the beginnings of faith, Mark 9. 24. This is the method of Salvation-Grace in begetting faith, to convince thee of its impotency to believe, Joh. 16. 9. Soul, is this thy weariness; that thou canst not come to Christ? Wouldst thou have a wider heart for him? Thou art the Soul he waits for that mournest over thy unbelief, Mark 9. 24.

But there's one thing more may be as a discouragement to some Souls.

11. Object. O says the Soul, I fear the time is past, and that God will be gracious no more; I have had a day of grace, but that is gone: The Angel came troubling the Waters, but I would not step in: I have had the dawnings of mercy, but I resisted: I fear I have outstood my Market: That I have outstrived the Spirit so long, that he will strive no more: And this bows me down, that I am afraid to look up.

Answ. Sinner, if this be thy case, know that thy fears of losing the day of grace, is a sign it is not lost: The greatest symptom of departing grace is security, and false peace, 1 Thes. 5. 3. So it was with the people before the flood: Noah threatened judgments, but they dreamt of peace, Math. 24. 37. &c. Security usher'd in the departure of grace from them: But while the Spirit of grace strives with thy Soul, the day of grace is not past from thee. Doth God call upon thee now, and plead with thy heart? And dost thou find some movings, and turnings of thy Bowels in thee, crying out, O that there might be mercy for me; that this day of grace may not be past? If so, then sure the Spirit strives yet with thy Soul: Therefore, Soul, if now thou wilt close with Christ, none of these pleas can debar thy closing with him.

Well Sinners, consider the Lord Jesus Christ invites you to come to him, once more he demands your answer: what say you, will you be his or no? Do your hearts accept of him? Do you like his proposals? will you heartily consent to be his, upon all his terms? If so, I shall lay down some Counsels to direct you in your right coming to Christ.

First, Sinner, if thou will come to Christ, thou must come as a poor needy, empty, undone, Sinner, stripped of all beauty, as having nothing at all that may deserve his favor: 'Tis the poor have the Gospel Preached to them. Math. 11. 5. It signifies such as are brought to great necessities, and extremities; So Beza renders it: Such as are brought very low: Therefore some derive it from a word that signifies, falling down at the rich Men's feet: As some beggars will. Ferus interprets it, the poor in Spirit, that acknowledge themselves mean, and are low in their own eyes. So Calvin takes it, for them that are oppressed with the sense of their own wants, such as feel their pinching necessities; that lie down overwhelmed with the apprehension of their emptiness: The Treasures of the Gospel are designed to such Persons that are poor and afflicted in their own Spirits. There's no greater obstacle in this Match between Christ and sinners, than a sense of self worthiness: This keeps many from seeing the beauty of Christ; their own Righteousness hangs in their eye; they are too heavy laden with their own thick clay, I mean the sense of their own worthiness, to be looking up to Jesus, and lifted up to him: Sinners may be too rich for Christ in their own opinion, but never too poor; hence the Lord Jesus Christ tells us, he came not to call the Righteous, but sinners to Repentance, Math. 9. 13. Not them that Judge themselves Righteous, but them that feel themselves sinners: The Rich he sends empty away, those that are Rich in their own thoughts, when the poor and hungry are filled with good things: Men choose empty vessels to put their liquors in; and low rooms to cellar their wines, so doth Jesus Christ choose empty Souls for his good things: He chooseth the Low plains for his walks, when the high towering Mountains are rejected: The high, and lofty One comes to dwell in the low and contrite Spirit, Isa. 57. 15. Sinner, thou must strip thyself of thy own Ornaments, if thou intend to put on Jesus Christ: Thou must throw down thy Crown at his feet; if thou thinkest to wear his Crown on thy head: O Soul! thou must come as a poor wretch to Christ; with thy empty sack, as Jacob's Sons did to Egypt to buy corn, and then thou shalt have Treasure too: Thou must see thyself an undone sinner; thou must come (with Lazarus) and throw thyself down at this Rich Kings Door; if ever thou wilt be fed with his Crumbs; nay rather feasted with his Dainties.

Secondly, Thou must come to Christ as to a full and sufficient treasure, able to save and satisfy thee; to pay off thy debts, and enrich thy Soul forever, Heb. 7. 25. Able to supply all thy wants and fill all thy emptiness, Phil. 4. 19. We have shewn already that his treasures are bottomless, boundless, unfathomable, unexhaustible, never to be wasted or spent: O Soul come to Christ as such a one: Measure not Christ's gold by thy bushel; nor his plenty by thy poverty: think not thy debts too great for Christ to pay, because thou knowest not where to get money of thy own: Think not thy straits too many for him to relieve: He hath enough for thy Soul to live upon both here and to all Eternity; O Sinner believe this, and come to him as such a one; suppose not the Fountain is empty, because thy Cisterns are dry: His Righteousness is like the great Mountains, Psa. 36. 6. It is in the Hebrew, The Mountains of God: And his grace is without measure, Joh. 3. 34. Therefore thou must look to him as having a sufficient fullness for thy Soul.

Thirdly, Thou must look to Christ with expectation, as the poor Cripple did to Peter and John, Acts. 3. 5. Now shall a poor Creature expect to receive some needful suitable good from a fellow Creature; and will not thou expect some mercy from the Lord Jesus Christ, thy Creator, and Redeemer? O sinner come with expectations to Christ; believe that he is as willing as able to enrich all that come to him: He hath past his word for it. He that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out. Joh. 6. 37. He that believeth on him shall not perish, Joh. 3. 16. The weary Soul that comes yea creeps to him, shall have rest, Math. 11. 28. The thirsty Soul shall be satisfied, Joh. 7. 37. He goes up and down in the Ministry of the Gospel, seeking to save that which is lost, Luke 19. 10. And he is angry with them that will not come to him, Joh. 5. 40. O sinner, do not take up hard thoughts of Christ: Such suspicious thoughts of Christ is some of the Devils seed that he doth sow in broken ground. When Christ comes to break sinners hearts and make them sensible of their undoneness, then the Devil casts in these tares, and raises up ill thoughts of Christ; It was this did so enervate the diligence of the unprofitable Servant; some undue thoughts he took up of his Lord's bounty: I knew (says he) thou wert an hard, and austere Man: Hence he puts up his Talent in a Napkin, and his hand in his bosom, Math. 25. 24, 25. Jealousies of Christ's good-will to sinners are very destructive to Salvation-work: The Devil hath hindered many a Soul from coming to Christ, by casting this block in his way. O then come with expectations; at least come to Christ, with as great hopes as the Lepers came to the Tents of the Assyrians who were Enemies; come to Christ the friend of Sinners. 2 Kings 7. 4. They adventured with some hopes; we may live, and we can but die; they may kill us, and they may save us alive: But thy case is not so, if thou come and adventure on Christ, thou mayest be sure, he will not kill thee: O look to Jesus then with some hopes; say, who can tell but my Soul may live.

Fourthly, Close first with Jesus Christ himself, and afterwards with his Treasure: I confess usually something from Christ draws the Sinner's first respects to him: The savor of his ointments, some love-tokens, kindnesses, apprehension of necessity; sense of undoneness may conduce to get the first glances of Sinners towards Christ; But though these allure to Christ, yet the first thing the Espoused Soul must eye in his Match with Christ, is Christ himself; though these things draw the Soul, yet they do not center the Affections: Christ's kindnesses are designed as motives to beget an esteem of himself in sinners hearts: The knowledge of what Jesus Christ hath for sinners, an intimation of pardon, peace and Salvation for all that come to him, may be the Prodromus or fore-runner of Christ's Person to sinners view; but when they come to see him, they must first pitch upon himself; and till they come to this they cannot have a due and orderly close with Christ: In all right and regular Matches, the Person must be first regarded, then the Portion: A Soul is not fit to match with Christ, till he comes to see infinitely more worth in him, then in all his gifts, and favors: It was the excellency of Christ himself that drew Paul's highest regards to him, with respect to relation; *Phil. 3. 8. The excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: Paul sets that fore-most; And then to be made conformable to his Death, and Resurrection. The Spouse was more taken with Christ's Person then with his Gifts: Cant. 1. 2, 3. First himself was lovely, then his fruits. Cant. 2. 3. David counts nothing in Heaven, or Earth like to God in Christ. Psa. 73. 25. 'Tis sordid love, and too unworthy of a conjugal State, that values the Portion more then the Person; that Soul is too unworthy of Christ, who values anything more then him: Math. 10. 37 It must be Christ himself, must sit in the upermost seat in thy Soul. 'Tis a saying of Calvin, Tis an unworthy thing not to prefer one Christ above all: Those Matches never prove comfortable where the Estate is eyed more then the Person, hence conjugal love is broken, when the estate is gone; but where true conjugal love is, it is settled upon the Person: Love that is set upon some Gifts of Christ, more then Christ himself, when these are suspended, the others will decay; but love placed upon his Person will last: Hence 'tis many do so easily leave Christ, when it comes to parting with other things, because their love was set more upon these things then Christ himself: O Soul be sure 'tis Christ himself thou dost choose, and not another; O be not guilty of that mistake as Jacob was, to take Leah instead of Rachel: Be sure it be not a false Idea of Christ in thy thoughts, but that it be a real Christ thou takest; and then thou wilt never look for another: Be sure give Christ the preeminence: The Father hath given him the preeminence, and wilt not thou? *Phil. 2. 9. Col. 1. 18. Col. 2. 9. If Christ must take the best place in Heaven, he hath reason to take the first place in thy heart.

Fifthly, If thou wouldst come to Christ aright, then bring thy all with thee to him; and make a free and full surrender of thyself, and thy all to him: When God would have Israel out of Egypt, they must not leave a hoof behind, Exod. 10. 26. 2 Cor. 8. 5. They first gave their own selves to the Lord: Be sure make over thyself first to Christ, and then all thy interests, and Capacities: Come and subscribe to Christ, Isa. 44. 5. One shall say I am the Lord's, and another shall call himself by the name of Jacob, and another shall subscribe with his hand unto the Lord. Calvin hath a saying upon this: A Person (says he) can never have true faith in Christ, till he comes to make this testification and confession of him: In the espousing betwixt Christ and the Soul, there is a mutual resignation of each to other with all they have. Christ gives his Person and Purchase to Believers, and the sincere Soul gives back himself and all to Christ: To detain the least part from Christ is abominable fraud, and lying against the Holy Ghost, Acts 5. 3. If thou accountest any one thing too good for Christ; He accounts all his too good for thee.

Lastly, Be sure your acceptance of Christ be considerate and sincere, sit down first and count the cost, Luk. 14. 28. Thou must be no more thy own; thou must take up thy Yoke and his Yoke: Thy cross and his Cross: Thou must deny thyself and follow him: Weighty things are not to be undertaken rashly, Diu deliberandum was an ancient Motto. Hasty matches seldom prove well: O Soul, be not rash in thy taking Christ. The Lord Jesus Christ Espouseth his in Judgment as well as in Faithfulness, Hos. 2. 19, 20. in considerate bargains are oftentimes broken or repented of, You will never espouse Christ in Faithfulness, till you espouse him in Judgment: Weigh all things, consider Marriage Articles, what they are, and whether you are willing to perform them, Math. 16. 24. O Soul try, can thy heart consent to this? O the falseness of Souls pretended match to Christ hath undone many! You must take whole Christ with the whole heart, or else you will never match aright with Christ, You must choose him never to choose again. You must make him your only choice, and let all your other choosings be by him: Thou shalt choose our inheritance for us, Psa. 47. 4. Say then, I will only choose him; I will choose his Person, his Laws, his Honor and Glory; but Christ shall choose all for me; Let Christ choose my place, and condition, high or low: Let Christ dispose of me, where, and how he will in the World, I will dispose of Christ in my heart.

So much of this Fourth Inference. That Jesus Christ is worth a looking after.

CHAP. XXVII.

Showing the folly of such as pursue earthly things, with neglect of Christ, considering the Nature of those things; the Terms on which they are to be enjoyed; The casualty that attends them: The guilt such contract.

IF there be such great and glorious treasures of Christ tendered to sinners in the Gospel: Then see the folly of those that pursue earthly treasures with a neglect of Christ: For Souls to turn their backs on Christ, and court the World, and perishing things: O folly indeed! I shall give four Reasons to convince such persons of folly.

- The 1. Taken from the things themselves they pursue with neglect of Christ.
- 2. The different terms on which Christ and these are to be enjoyed.
- 3. The casualty that attends Souls attempts after Earthly things.
- 4. The guilt that such contract, who pursue Earthly treasures more than Christ.

First, 'Tis folly, yea madness to pursue Earthly things and neglect Christ because the things themselves they choose cannot be compared with Christ; which will appear in several particulars.

First, They are uncertain Riches; There's no dependence upon them, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Nor trust in uncertain Riches, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . Riches that are not declared, and manifested, to be sure and certain, for a dependence; They are not a sure bottom for Souls to build so much hope and delight upon; when it comes to a pinch indeed; then it appears they are vain, and will not profit in the day of wrath. Like a broken Staff, when you lean upon it, then it breaks:

So the Riches of this world, when Souls put some stress upon them, then they fail: They are uncertain; sometimes you enjoy them, and anon they are removed, Pro. 23. 5. Wilt thou set thine Eyes upon that which is not, for riches certainly make themselves wings, they fly away as an Eagle towards Heaven. They come slowlie, but get off swiftlie; when they come to men, they have leaden feet, and when they leave them, Eagles Wings: To day they flourish like the grass, and tomorrow burn like an Oven: A man hath a beautiful house today, and tomorrow an heap of Ashes▪ O most uncertain Riches! All the world runs in changes; To day (says one) they ar• for the Bosom, and tomorrow for the Beesom: To day men take them into their bosoms, tomorrow vengeance sweeps them away.

Secondly, They are empty things, they cannot satisfy the Soul that feeds upon them: The world is not filling meat to an immortal Soul; let a person feed never so heartily, yet he is hungry: The whole world •nnot fill one heart; Alexander wept, that there were no more worlds to conquer: Nature puts bounds to the Sea; and all Earthly beings have their end, Psa. 119. 96. but sin hath made carnal desires boundless: It is with earthly minded men, as Solomon says it is with the Grave, and barren womb, and the fire that say it is not enough, Pro. 30. 15, 16. Wherefore (says the Prophet) do you spend your money for that which is not Bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not, Isa. 55. 2. One calls the whole Turkish Empire but a bone that is thrown to dogs: very dry meat; so are all the things of this world: Riches are like meat in a dream: An hungry man thinks he feeds, when he dreams but when he awakes he is empty. Riches feed nothing but the Eye; hence Covetousness is called the lusts of the Eye, 1 Joh. 2. 16. O'tis a vanity indeed to look after that which you can put in to your Eye! it will not feed your affections, it will not satiate the Soul, it will not quiet the Conscienc: O that men should adventure their all for that which will not satisfy!

Thirdly, They are fading things in their Nature: not only uncertain, and liable to remove in the event, but they are dying in their Nature; Corruptible riches: Your Houses, Lands, whatever your greedy Eye covets, are but rotten things: Your Garments are liable to the Moth, and your Gold and Silver Subject to Rust, J am. 5. 2, 3. Ah poor treasure indeed! Which rust and Moth consume, rest that strengthens other Creatures eats out these; Houses, Lands, Gold and Jewels, are subject to wearing away, Tempus teret omnia: Time will wear them out: Hence Christ advises his Disciples to provide bags which wax not old, a treasure in Heaven, which faileth not, Luk 12. 33. Implying that all the treasures of this world are not so: If men lay them up in bags, the bags will wax old, and time will rot them; Thieves can approach to these treasures, and Moth, and Rust can eat them out: ('Tis a pretty simile one hath of it, who compares the Riches of the world to hailstones, that when they fall upon a till'd House, make a rattling noise for the present, but by and by sl•de down, and melt away to nothing.

Fourthly, The treasures of this world are ensiaving treasures; they bring their owners into bondage: as one says; Ducendo vincimur, vincendo ducimur: By their cunning allurements they overcome us, and overcoming us, they lead us Captive: They first allure the heart, and then enthrall the heart: They bring men into the worst bondage of any, for they bring them into a willing bondage Earthly men are not only led Captive by the world at Satan's will, but are enslaved by their own will; they consent to be bound: Earthly men do with Esau, swap a bargain for the things of the world; they consent to let go their birth right for a mess of pottage; they give up their birth right to their Inferiors, and consent to become a slave to their own Servants: That word of the Wiseman is never more true, Eccl. 10. 7. then when men are led Captive by the love of this world: I have seen Servants upon Horses, and Princes walking as Servants upon the Earth. Never did Israel do greater drudgery in Egypt, then Carnal, Earthly men do to the world: It makes them rise early, sit up late, and eat the bread of sorrows, and all for a few shadows, Ps. 127. 2. Earthly men, (says one) are like Beasts that are set to draw in the Devils Teams, who draw sin with Cart-ropes, and Iniquity with Cords of Vanity: Isa. 5. 1. Peccata facile veniunt, sed fortiter ligant.

Fifthly, The riches of this world are ensnaring too. 1 Tim. 6. 9. They that will be rich fall into Temptations and Snares: The word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 signifies such snares as persons use to take Birds and Beasts with, and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 to fasten down to the ground as nets are that take beasts; So Earthlyminded men the Devil stakes them down to the ground: They are held fast in the cords of their own iniquity, Pro. 5. 22. What a snare was Balak's Gold to Balaam's Covetous heart to draw him against his light, convictions and a Divine charge. The Bag proved a fatal charm to covetous Judas, it lead him to the Halter: The things of the world proved a sad snare to Demas, and led him off from all his profession: Earthly things are like twigs that are in Bird-lime, that hold fast those silly Souls that come at them, that they have no mind nor power •o leave them: O they are sad snares indeed.

Sixthly, Earthly riches are defiling too: The Apostle calls riches filthy lucre, 1 Pet. 5. 2. Not for filthy lucre: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Obscure gain as the word implies, filthy, unbecoming, undecent: O 'tis dishonest gain indeed; which ends in the loss of the Soul! Such men are the greatest Couzeners in the world, that cheat themselves, and loose their Souls for sublunary treasures: The Riches of this world defile the Consciences of those that love them; the Apostle calls them the pollutions of the world, 2 Pet. 2. 20. 'Tis considerable that the Psalmist doth use the word, Psa. 52. 7. to fignifie both riches and unrighteousness: Lo this is the man that made not God his strength, but trusted in the abundance of his Riches, and strengthened himself in his wickedness: noting that riches prove occasions of much evil, hurt, and filthiness to them that have them.

Seventhly, They are accountable Riches, Talents that must be reckoned for, Math. 25. 19. After a long time, the Lord of that Servant cometh and reckoneth with him. All Earthly interests are trusts committed to the fidelity of those that have them, and they must give an account for them, Luke 16. 2. Give an account of thy Stewardship for thou must be no longer Steward (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) All thy undue pursuits of the World; thy inordinate love to it, thy unjust ingrossings of it to thyself, thy penurious withholding it, from those distributions God hath required must shortly be reckoned for. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ab 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 an house & 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , those things which Families use.

Eighthly, They are afflicting riches: They carry more trouble then comfort with them, 1 Tim. 6. 10. For the love of money is the root of all evil, which while Some coveted after—pierce themselves through with many sorrows: They run themselves through. So Beza: They stab themselves all over from Head to Foot with darts; So the word imports. O how great are those anxieties, and troubles the riches of this world breed for those that have them! they be troublesome things; They cause a great deal of pains to get them: a great deal of care to keep them; a great deal of fear to loose them; And a great deal of trouble when they are gone: Christ compares the love of the world to Thorns, Mat. 13. 7. Compar'd with ver. 22. Because they prick and scratch the Consciences, as well as choke the word: O the many wounds they will see in them one day that love the world inordinately: Whence Gregory hath this upon it: Let rich men take heed how they handle Thrns, lest they prick them.

Nint•lie, They are damnifying riches, and bring a great deal of loss with them: A man can hardly come by much of the world, without a sensible detriment: They occasion the loss of a great deal of time that should be used about their precious Souls: The loss of precious peace; O what trouble, what carking, fretting, rending cares have men about these Riches! They loose their natural peace many times, and lose their Soul quietness: The cares of this world breed a great deal of guilt: Then there's a loss of purity too; they sully thy Soul, dirt thy Conscience: bespatter thy Affections: Many a hopeful Soul is corrupted by them to fall from their seeming virtue and moral excellencies; as the young man in the Gospel, Judas Annanias, and Demas. Earthlimindedness like the F•ie in a Box of Ointment spoil men's natural and moral Virtues: They occasion the loss of many privileges; the love of the world robs Souls of great advantages, such cannot wait on God many times in secret duties, family duties, public duties; they have a Farm, and Oxen, and Merchandise to look after, and therefore cannot come. Nay, they that will be rich deprive themselves of the profit of those privileges they do enjoy: The Love of the world takes off the good of the word, whiles it is preached to them, Math. 13. 22. The things of the world damp men's affections to Christ, and heavenly things; they stifle men's Consciences: It duls and blunts the edge of the Sword of the Gospel, and makes it rebound back again, when it falls upon the rocky heart, hardened with the love of the World: O they are damnifiing things: And at last they will set you hard, but they will lose your Souls, and then you have made a cursed bargain indeed, when you have lost your Souls.

Lastly, They are dangerous and too often damning things; they are dangerous for they keep the Soul from Christ: As the young man in the Gospel, he came to the very last step, and yet there he stayed, he could not part withal for Christ that broke the bargain Mat. 19. 22. He went away sorrowful for he had great possessions: The love of the World stood in the way of his receiving Christ; Thorns are the shelter for Serpents and riches for many lusts, that drown men in perdition and destruction. 1. Tim. 6. 9. The word in the original signifies a plunging over head and ears in ruin, sunk to the bottom, as one that hath a great weight upon him: One compares rich men to a Pine Tree of which it is said, that if the bark be plucked off it will last long, but while that abides it rots: riches are as a deep pit, into which men easily get, but hardly get out, and therefore Christ says. it is easier for a Camel to go through the eye of a needle then for a rich man to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Math. 19. 24.

The things of the World bar up the way to Heaven, and open the way to Hell, and hasten the Soul with a vengeance to destruction: They are like the Devils sleep-drench, that casts Souls into a deep trance, and 'till they come to the end of their lives they never awake, and then they awake with a vengeance: That's the first. Consider what the things of the world are, and they are fools indeed that pursue them with the neglect of Christ.

Secondly, Consider the different terms on which they are to be had, and it will appear to be folly for men to desert Heavenly things, and choose Earthly: If you would have the World, it will cost you a great deal of sorrow, trouble, and pains, you must tug hard; Adam being turned out of Paradise must work in the sweat of his brows for his bread. Gen. 3. 10. But Heavenly Treasures is to be received by believing; They come by gift. It is but to come and take it and receive it. Isa. 55. 1, 2.

Thirdly Consider the casualty that attends the pursuit of these Earthly things. A great deal of casualty whether you may have them or no; and a great deal of hazard that attends them: The Merchant engages in dangerous voyages, and after all, is not sure to bring home any treasure. Eccles. 5. 14. These Riches perish by evil travel: Suppose they are obtained, they sometimes are wasted as soon as won; and he that thinks he hath enough for many years, many times leaves, nothing behind him: Many toil, and tug, eat out their bowels, and spend their days for that which they cannot obtain; how many labor to be rich, and yet die Poor: Riches make themselves wings and fly away. Pro. 23. 5

Fourthly, Such as pursue Earthly things with the neglect of Christ, contract much guilt upon their own Souls; they violate the whole Law of God; for the whole Law contains supreme love to God: Love (says the Apostle) is the fulfilling of the Law. Rom. 13. 10. And upon this Commandment (says Christ) hangs all the Law, and the Prophets: Math. 22. 40 Upon supreme love to God, and equal love to our neighbor, as to ourselves: Therefore such as pursue Earthly things, and love the World more than God, they break the whole Law of God. 1 Joh. 2. 5. Yea they violate and break the commands of grace also: It makes men false to all their engagements, and promises; and to all their civil trusts: O what horrid wickedness will not the love of this World put men upon! therefore such contract foul guilt upon their Souls: And this shows their folly.

So much for the use of Information.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Containing an use of reprehension to several sorts of Persons, with consolation to all sound Believers.

IF there be such vast and glorious Treasures in the Lord Jesus Christ, opened and tendered in the Gospel. Then this reprooves such as have or profess to have an interest in these vast and boundless Treasures, and yet are so little affected with them, and have a low estimation of them; O sad indeed! That the choicest substance that ever was; boundless treasure, should be esteemed no more than perishing trash. 'Tis a lamentable thing indeed to see how most Professors value perishing treasures so much, and Jesus Christ so little: Did persons prize those Heavenly Treasures, they would have a less esteem of Earthly; they would be more restless till they saw their Interest in them: Pursue more after them; be at more pains and cost to secure them: Be more in the commendation of them, and highly esteem those that have them.

Secondly, It reproves those that have or seem to have a title to this glorious Treasure, and yet are not contented with it: O Souls, will a few handfuls of dust please you, and will not a Kingdom, Crown, and Glory? Will a little Cottage in the world take up your delight, and will not a Mansion and dwelling-place in Heaven satisfy you? O Believer, hath God made over himself, Father, Son, and Spirit to be thine eternal Treasure, and is not he rich enough to fill all thy heart, and all thy desires? sit down and consider how groundless are all thy mournings, how unreasonable are all thy frettings and discontent, who canst say of Heaven, This is mine; and of God, and Christ, He is mine.

Thirdly, It reproves those that have or seem to have a Title to those treasures, and yet look after others treasures, and eagerly pursue a portion in this World. O inexcusable! Like Dinah they wander after the things of this World, as she did after the people of the Land, till they deflower their Souls: O Christians, have you chosen God, and will you back to the World again? Hath God delivered you from this present World, and will you yield up yourselves to it again! Hath grace opened your Prison Doors, and will you enter in again? Have you tasted God to be gracious, and yet long after the worldlings bottle, to drink of these Waters of Marah? O unreasonable Souls: How unsuitable is this to your state and condition! if you are Saints indeed you are not of this World, Joh. 15. 19. Are you the Citizens of Heaven, Eph. 2. 19. And would Saints and Angels so dig after the World if they come down from Heaven? 'Tis contrary to your promises and engagements. You go against your convictions, and experiences, and by your inordinate love to, and pursuit of the World you are Enemies to God your own and others Souls.

Fourthly, This reproves those of the People of God, who have an interest in these vast Treasures of Christ, and yet are miserably poor in their own Souls: Many complain Times be hard, Estates wast, Trades decay, but the greatest Poverty lies in Spirituals: Faith, Love, Humility, self denial, Mortifiedness to the World, persons are destitute of these things chiefly; little grace laid out, little grace laid up: Few workings of Spirit in duty, and few works of grace in Men's lives; this argues wonderful Poverty in men's Souls: 'Tis not Poverty in Spirit, but poverty in Spirituals, Professors are so guilty of this day; few acts of Piety towards God, few works of charity towards Men: How lean, and ilfavoured are most under the Gospel: Many are learning, and never come to the knowledge of the truth; a strange veil lies yet upon the minds of many: Little right-kind of knowledge, few know the meaning of the Spirit, few are led into the mysteries of the Gospel: Others profess themselves wise, and to know God, but by works deny him, and their Poverty lies here, They are full of notions, but empty of holiness, Earthly and vain in their Spirit: Most men's Religion this day lies in the head; little-heart-godliness, little life-holiness: Little love to God, and Saints: Little fruits brought forth for God, this shows the Poverty of the times we live in: Again, the difficultness of maintaining spiritual life; hard to get to a life of faith, and love, hard to keep up hope, this comes from Soul Poverty: Hard for Persons to live from one Ordinance to another: Spiritual life decays, wastes, languishes; 'tis with too many Professors as it is with ancient weak Persons, that are grown so cold, Nature so decay'd, that they can hardly keep themselves warm, longer then by the fire: So tis with many Christians, no longer then under a warming Sermon, but cold presently; nay 'tis not ordinary Sermons will heat them: The richest feedings, the choicest Cordials, scarce keep up faith, love, and delight in God one moment, and are not these poor men? Corruptions grow, a light, vain, Eearthly, frothy Spirit abounds; but meekness, savoriness, humility, gravity, liveliness decays: Little strength for duty, hard to hear, pray, or to manage one duty aright; little Spirit and Truth in most duties, and services: Unable to conflict with temptations, corruptions, oppositions: Hard to live up to light, convictions, resolutions: How do Souls make shipwreck of faith, and conscience! How easily are they overcome by their hearts lust, pride, passion, Earthyness presently carries them aside. Unable to bear the least sufferings: The very shaking of the rod will drive some from duty: Persons cannot yet digest difficulties, and enduring for the Gospels sake: How soon are many worn out by the afflictions, and persecutions of this day: This deserves sharp reproof.

Lastly, It reproves those who partake of those riches of Christ, and yet are reserved to others: O how unlike are these to Christ! He opens his Treasures to you, but you shut yours from others; he hands out his bounty to you, but you shut your eyes from others: His streams make glad the City of God; your narrow heartedness makes sad the Sons of men: His bowels are enlarged, yours sttained; Milk and Honey are under his tongue, emptiness and vanity under yours; his steps drop fatness, your hands cause leanness: O Christians! see your unsuitableness to Christ, and be ashamed of your straitened bowels, and shut hands, towards your poor Brethren, whether as to outward or spiritual supplies! How few are the better for you in soul or body, whose lips bless God for your bounty? Deut. 14. 13. A close-handed Professor is a Paradox in nature, and differs from God and the whole Creation: The Lord is good and doth good: Jesus Christ ascended on high, and gives gifts to men, Eph. 4. 8. He is always doing good. The Sun diffuseth freely of his light, and heat: The clouds drop fatness: The Earth brings forth her increase; the Trees yield their fruit, and when fit for the use of man, lets them fall into their bosoms; the air communicates its refreshing; the fire its heat, the Sea its store, only man is selfish and with the unprofitable Servant hides his talent in a Napkin: Christians be humbled for your non-conformity to Christ, and the little use you have made of your Talents, and graces for the good of those you live with.

Note That this use of Reprehension was more fully and largely composed by the Author. but the substance of it is contained in that excellent Treatise of the Author, called The Heavenly Trade; to which the Reader is referred.

Third Use of Consolation.

If there be such unsearchable riches in C•rist for his people: Then here's wonderful Comfort to those that are in Christ; such have cause to rejoice and be exceeding glad: For,

First, In your interest in Christ lies your right to all those great and glorious treasures of Christ: He that hath Christ, all that is Christ's is his: All things are yours, and you are Christ's, and Christ is God's, 1 Cor. 3. 21. Such are Joynt-Heirs with Christ put down in the same everlasting Covenant: adopted to the same inheritance, Rom. 8. 27. They have a Title to all that Christ hath as Mediator, and that by donation and purchase: A title that cannot be forfeited nor wasted: A Title to the whole inheritance of God. Ah Believer if Christ be thine then 'tis no presumption to lay claim to anything that is his: All that have been treated of him as God-Man Mediator, his glorious endowments, his personal dispositions, and excellent perfections are all thine. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Is not this comfort indeed to believers, that have such a Beloved in Heaven, that is altogether lovely? 'Tis wonderful reviving when a Person can see some excellency he is related to beyond what is in himself: What comfort will a Mother take in a beautiful Child, though herself be deformed? What delight will the faithful Wife take in the excellencies of her Husband, and glory in them as her own: Such pleasure doth the Spouse take in the beauty of Christ. Cant. 5. 10. And reckons them as her comeliness though she was black. Cant. 1. 5. I am black but comely: What consolation is this to a child of God to be intitled to such a glorious Jesus? Though thou art poor yet thy beloved is rich: Though thou art unlovely he is fair, though thou art obscure and vile, yet he is honorable; and his riches, beauty, and honor are thine; and thy reputation with God, Saints, and Angels shall be in him, and as he is. Cant. 6. 10. Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the Moon, clear as the Sun. The Lord Jesus hath a high account of the Spouses beauty; she is bright, fair, clear, but it is as the Morning, or Moon, who borrow their beauty from the Sun: Comfort thy Heart, O drooping Believer, though thou canst see no worth in thyself, yet thou hast enough in Christ for thee. Again, what wonderful Comfort may a Child of God gather from a seen Title to all the purchase of Christ, his Righteousness, Graces, Privileges, sure Covenant, and Salvation, when he can upon warrantable grounds lay claim to all this? but so the Believer may, 1 Cor. 1. 30.

Secondly, The time is drawing near when they shall have a full possession of all those treasures of Christ, Rev. 21. 7. He that overcometh shall inherit all things: All those great and glorious things promised shall be his possession, God shall be all in all to him, 1 Cor. 15. 28. Every tittle of his word shall be fulfilled, though Heaven and Earth pass away, Math. 5. 18. Here Believers are rich Heirs under age, which differ nothing from a Servant, Gal. 4. 1. but the day hastens when their great Estate will fall into their hands, and they shall live upon it to all Eternity; the expectation of which is cause of comfort; when veils shall be taken away, and thy soul ever with the Lord; when thy filthy Garments shall be taken off, and thy beautiful raiment forever worn; when thou shalt live no more at small allowances of Grace, but receive it without measure; thy Table spread, thy Cup overflow; thy feeding shall be no more on sent portions from thy Fathers Table, but shalt sit down in his presence, and feast upon his fullness to all Eternity: Then shall all promises be turned into performances; all hopes shall end in fruition, and all desires center in delights, then shall parts be turned into perfections, darkness into delight, changes into immutabilities, fears into joys; wants into fullness; absence into presence: O blessed Eternity! When the Lord shall bring forth all his Treasures, open his Ward-robe, and pay off every saved Soul with an infinite fullness as much as he can receive, or desire to have, treasures of love in God the Father, Son, and Spirit; rivers of joy in the presence of God; and fullness of grace in conformity to God. Things which eye cannot see, nor ear hear, nor the heart of man conceive. 1 Cor. 2. 9. And is not a certainty of these future treasures ground enough for present comfort.

Thirdly, from an interest in this rich Jesus, here's comfort to Saints under all their present wants whether outward or inward: In that.

First, There's enough in Christ to supply them: In him dwells the fullness of the God-head, Col. 2. 9. Thy wants Believer are but finite, be they never so great; but Christ's fullness is infinite: Thy necessities are the needs of a Creature, his ability is the power of a Creator: The Lord Jesus Christ can more easily supply thy need, then a whole Ocean can fill one pitcher; for betwixt the Creatures there is some proportion, but betwixt God and the Creature none at all.

Secondly, As there is enough in Christ to fill all thy wants; so all the fullness that is in Christ is thy own, Believer, laid up in Christ for thee, made over to thee, 1 Cor. 1. 30. Deus mens & omnia mea. And therefore mayest boldly expect supplies according to the measure of Christ, 1 Cor. 12. 11. Dividing to every man severally as he will. Thou mayest as boldly go to the treasury of Christ, as a man doth to his Purse for money, or to his Cupboard for Bread, and as a Child doth to his Father for necessary supplies, Math. 6. 32.

Lastly, The Lord Jesus Christ stands engaged to see the wants of his people supplied, Ps. 34. 20. They that fear the Lord shall want no goodthing, Phil. 4. 19. So that thou mayst boldly say the Lord is my helper, Heb. 13. 6. Dost thou want Food, Rayment, Health, &c. for thy Body, or dost thou want Grace, Wisdom, Faith, Love, Humility, Patience, Courage, Self-denial, Power over Corruptions, Succor under thy temptations, victory over thy lust; thou mayst go to Christ with expectations of all that God sees best for thee: seeing there are such treasures of all Grace placed and entrusted in Christ for thee.

Fourthly, Comfort under all your losses for Christ; surely if Christ be yours, and such vast treasures are in him, he will not see you losers for his sake; he can and will save you harmless; nay, requite your expensive love for him: all that strength of affection, liberty, time, talents (Christians) you lay out for him, shall be given in again: Jesus Christ is that good Samaritan, who hath past his word to repay again whatever is laid out for him, or upon his, at his bidding, Luke 10. 35. If a tender hearted Paul would take the offenses of an Onesimus on his account, Philemon ver. 18. Much more will Christ take the expenses for him on his account and repay it a hundred fold in this life, with Glory in that which is to come, Math. 19. 29.

Lastly, Comfort under all your reproaches for Christ: 'Tis the lot of gracious Souls many times to be accounted vile, and the offscouring of all things by the men of this world, 1 Cor. 4. 13. so ver. 10. We are Fools for Christ's sake, and despised: 'Tis part of the Cross of Christ to be reproach'd for his sake, 1 Pet. 4. 14. But here's Comfort in such a case in the consideration of those treasures of Christ: Christians, your relation to such a Jesus who is the Heir of glory will wipe off all your disgrace: Think on that account you have with God, and the glory you shall shortly have in your own Country, and that will balance all troubles on the account of disgrace for Christ.

CHAP. XXIX.

Containing an use of Examination; Characters of such as have an interest in Christ, and in all those glorious treasures.

Christians; you that have hopes of an Interest in these treasures of Christ: clear up your title: Be sure your claim be good: Rest not till you can have your evidences of Christ past dispute, to make the matter plain and certain to you; that you are Christ's, and Christ is yours: Adventure not at all your hopes of such great and glorious things upon uncertainties: if you miss and fail in your propriety to this Estate, you are undone forever: There's no repairing the loss of Christ when you come to die: All your after-wit cannot mend this bad bargain when time is past: If you build upon the sand, till the building time be over, you will have an Eternity to repent your folly: there's no room for another adventure when the door of Heaven is shut: If you have too carelessly, and groundlessly laid your hopes of Christ, and Glory, and and so are secure till the time be past, you can no more make trial of a better building: O how great will the fall of mistaken hopes be at last; when the Hypocrite shall say too late, woe is me, I am deceived! all my hopes for Heaven have Proved a Lye; I did suppose my title was good, and others thought so too: I could tell of Experiences, and dreamt of closing with Christ; I have had my Convictions, Desires, Tastes, Affections, Parts, Privileges, and high hopes of Glory: But alas, now I see my building is upon the sand; woe to me, all must down again! I have run in vain, and now I must sit down in sorrow to all eternity. O lamentable! when time is gone to come to such a pass: And surely this will be thy case whoever thou art that hast not sure grounds of thy interest in Christ: Therefore, Christians, take not up upon probable hopes, but put it out of doubt that Christ is yours, and this state is yours.

Quest. But, says the Soul, I confess it will be sad and doleful to hear of these excellent treasures, and miss of all at last: But how might I do to be satisfied in this matter, to know that Christ is mine, and his Riches mine?

For the resolution of this Case I shall speak to four things.

- 1. How and in what manner a title to Christ and those glorious treasures are to be obtained.
- 2. Who they are that do obtain them.
- 3. What is requisite towards the obtaining of them.
- 4. What are the certain and specifical fruits and effects of such an obtaining.

1. How or in what manner may the soul come to have a Right to Christ?

Answ. There are three usual ways by which persons obtain a Title to a thing: 1. By Birth 2. By Purchase, 3. By Gift.

First, By Birth: On this a natural Relation is founded: A Child comes to have a right to his Fathers Inheritance by Birth. This way the Blessing and Birth-right fell to the First-born: So Esau had his Title to the Birth-right and Blessing could he have kept it, Gen. 27. 32. So Manasseh had a right to the Blessing, because he was the First-born, Gen. 48. 18.

Secondly, Another way of obtaining a Title to a thing is by Purchase: So Jeremiah bought a Field, Jer. 32. 25, Thus men get a Title to Estates by Purchase, when they part with a considerable value for them.

Thirdly, Another way of Right to a thing is by Gift and Adoption: So Jacob came to an Estate in the Land of Goshen, and Joseph to the Government of Egypt, and Moses the Son-in-Law to Pharaoh, by gift and Adoption: These are the three usual ways by which an interest is obtained. By the first of these man can lay no claim to an interest in Christ: By Birth we are Children of wrath, Eph. 2. 3. By Purchase man can never get a claim to Christ: There's no buying this Pearl of price. Therefore a Title to Christ must come the last way, by Gift. Falsely man having lost his first Estate, with all right to life, and capacity to regain it, by fulfilling the terms in order to it, it must needs follow, that now if ever he obtain life again it must be on a new account, even of Grace. The breach of the first Covenant forfeited all, and bound over the Offender to death and damnation, till which penalty be removed (which lost man could never do) there cannot possibly be any purchase made of new life and Salvation. Rom. 5. 12. Sin hath passed over all men, and Death by Sin for that all Men have sinned, and by this fall all power of doing good is lost. Rom, 7. 18. So that now of necessity there must be a change of the first term on which life was to be had, there being no possibility in lost man to fulfill them, and if ever Salvation comes it must be by grace Eph. 2. 7. and gift: The new Covenant gives out all his mercies freely, Rev. 21. 7. There's no place for creature worth and merit in order to Salvation under the Gospel; he that will be saved must accept it as a gift: That's the first, the way of obtaining Christ: He is the Fathers gift, and his own gift. Gal. 2. 20. God gives Christ to whom he pleaseth, not for any distinguishing worth in the Creature, but from the good pleasure of his will. Eph. 1. 11.

2. Who are they that obtain Christ, and Salvation by him?

Answ. It is they that come to, and receive Christ by Faith. Joh. 1. 12. To as many as received him to them gave he power to become the Sons of God: Christ is offerd in the Gospel by grace, and is received by faith, the acceptance as offerd of God is that which interests the Soul in him; This is called a coming to Christ, Mat. 11. 28. A letting Christ into the heart, Eph. 3. 17. A believing in him, 1 Joh. 5. 10. He that believes in the Son of God hath the witness in himself: That is the witness of right to Christ and life. ver. 11. And this is the record God hath given us, Life Eternal; and all this in his Son: For where a gift is freely tendered to all that will receive it, there needs nothing to make that Person fit for that gift, but accepting the offer as tenderd to him: Neither doth this acceptance make a Person worthy of the gift, but fulfills the terms in order to an Interest in it: If a sum of money be offerd to a poor man, and he is called to receive it, this receiving doth not merit it, but appropriate it: So that the Persons to whom Christ is tenderd is to sinners, to all sinners, to the chiefest of Sinners. 1 Tim. 1. 15. And to everyone of them, Isa. 55. 1. John. 7. 37. And the terms on which he is held out is freely without money, and without price, and nothing is required to entitle them to this glorious gift, but their receiving it as tendered.

3. What is necessary to the obtaining of Christ, and and so of those glorious Treasures in him? Without which Persons cannot, will not, come to him?

Answ. There are prerequisites to the Souls obtaining of Christ: Though they do not merit Christ, yet are necessary to the receiving of him.

First, That the Sinner be brought to see his absolute need of Christ, and his everlasting undoneness without him: This course the Spirit of God took with Laodicea. Rev. 3. 17. And with those Jews, Acts 2. 23, 36. Opens to them their cursed damning Sin, and wretched state by reason of sin, that their hearts might be pricked and wounded. So the Jailor was this way prepared for Christ. Acts 16. 30. He was made to see his doleful state. Thus the Law is School-Master to bring to Christ. Gal 3. 24. To beat and wound the sinner that he may see his need of a healing Jesus: Thus the Spirit is promised to convince the World of sin, Righteousness, and Judgment. Joh. 16. 8. And so did God deal with the unconverted under the Gospel. 1 Cor. 14. 25.

Secondly, Another requisite to the Souls getting this title to Christ is this, that there be a knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ; his suitableness and sufficiency to save, his grace, and real willingness to heal, and cure all that come to him, Heb. 11. 6. hence, Eternal Life is said to lie in the knowledge of Christ, Joh. 17. 3. that is, in the knowledge of his sufficiency, and willingness to save: therefore when Paul came to obtain Christ in order to it, says he: It pleased God to reveal his Son in me, Gal. 1. 15, 16. True faith carries knowledge with it: Faith is not hoodwinked and blind, but hath his discerning: By faith we come to understand: hence the Gospel is to be preached to every Creature; what is the Gospel but the opening of Jesus Christ, his sufficiency, and willingness to save sinners; while persons lie in a state of ignorance, they cannot come to have a true title to Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, 'Tis necessary that the Soul see the worth and excellency of Christ to satisfy: That were there no Heaven at the end; yet Christ himself were Heaven enough: So Paul saw an excellency in Christ, Phil. 3. 8. And the Apostles also, Joh. 1. 14. The Soul that comes to Christ, must see him to be the chiefest of ten thousand; the only desirable one, none in Heaven but Christ, and none in Earth in comparison of him, Psa. 73. 25, He that only eyes Salvation in coming to Christ, takes him upon necessity, not upon choice.

Fourthly, Another requisite to this coming to Christ is that the Soul be brought to a real and actual willingness to part with all for him; yea, to a throwing all over board to take him in, Phil. 3. 8. For whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them dung to win Christ. It was no small sum these Converts parted with before they could close with Christ, Acts. 19. 19. They brought their Books, and burned them, and counted the price, and found it fifty thousand pieces of Silver; which amounts in our money, to one thousand, five hundred, sixty and two pounds, and ten shillings: hence 'tis said, That he that will be saved must pluck out his right Eye, and cut off his right Hand Math. 5. 29, 30. And the want of which made the Young man go away from Christ sorrowful.

Fifthly, In order to a closing with Christ 'tis necessary that the Soul see an utter poverty, and inability in himself ever to come to Christ without Christ: Draw me, and we will run after thee, Cant. 1. 4. No man cometh to me (says Christ) except the Father, which sent me, draw him, Joh. 6. 44. They must see themselves poor, that come for satisfaction in Christ, Isa. 41. 17. Thou must deny thy own Abilities, and Rigteousness, and see thyself utterly unable, so much as to look to Christ, till he give an Eye, Math. 11. 5.

Lastly, The Soul must be brought to close with all the terms of the Gospel proposed to him, and made heartily willing to take Christ on his own conditions, Math. 16. 14. A person is never fit for Christ till he can give him a blank, and bid him write his own terms, unfeignedly saying, Lord command me anything; I stick at no proposals, so I may be thine, he that would fain beat down the bargain shall never have Christ, Isa. 44. 5. now to such a reception of Christ 'tis needful that things be plainly opened, and all the demands of Christ be known, and considered, Luk. 14. 28. So that there may be a known and hearty consent to Christ, and a full compliance with all his conditions.

4. What are the certain fruits, and effects of the Souls obtaining Christ?

Ans. First, That Soul that hath an interest in Christ is a new Creature, 2 Cor. 5. 17. If any man be in Christ he is a new Creature; old things are past away, all things are become new. As the Lord Christ when he was crucifi'd, was laid in a new Tomb; so when he is received he must be lodged in a new heart: In redemption work all things are new: there's a new Covenant, Heb. 8. 8. A new Mediator; the first Covenant had none, Heb. 9. 15. Souls are now brought into a new state, of new and glorious Privileges: They were dead, but now are made alive, Eph. 2. 1. There's a new Law also, the Law of the Gospel, called the Law of the Spirit of life, Rom. 8. 2. Therefore 'tis necessary that the Soul be renewed also; this is promise'd under the Gospel, Isa. 65. 17. Behold I create new Heavens, and a new Earth wherein dwelleth Righteousness, so 2 Pet. 3. 13. there will be a wonderful change wrought in that Person above what flesh and blood can do, an inward change a new heart, and a new Spirit, Ezek. 36. 26. new desires, Ps. 63. 1. Before the Soul did long after the world, pleasures, vanities; but now, My Soul breaks for the longing it hath to thy Judgments at all times, Ps. 119. 20. Ps. 42. 1, 2. New affections to God, Ps. 116. 1. new love to Christ, 1 Cor. 16. 22. new love to the Law of God, Ps. 119. 97, 127. new love to the people of God, 1 Joh. 3. 14. new love to the name and glory of God, Ps. 26. 12. Psa. 145. 15. new affections for the Cross of Christ, and reproach for his name, Gal. 2. 14. Heb. 11. 26. a new will to loath sin and cleave to God and Holiness, Rom. 7. 19. Act. 11. 23. a new Conscience, Heb. 10. 27. 2 Tim. 1. 3. and they have a new Convesation, Rom: 6. 4. Eph. 2. 10. Phil. 1. 27. They will walk in newness of the Spirit, Rom. 6. 4. They are created to good works to walk in them, Eph. 2. 10. At least, they design it, though they fall short of it. Thus a Soul that is come to Christ is a new Creature. That Soul that hath no renewings in him, that hath the same Spirit, desires, affections, will, conscience, that ever he had, cannot prove his interest in Christ.

Secondly, Tha• Soul that hath received Christ hath received the Spirit of Christ, Rom. 8. 9. If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his, 1 Cor. 12. 13. for by one Spirit we are all baptized into one Body. None can receive the Son, but he must have the Spirit too; for Christ is not divided: He that hath Christ, hath the Father and the spirit, for these three are one. Now a Soul that hath the Spirit of Christ may know it by the effects of it: The Spirit of Christ is a quicken Spirit, it begets a principle of Life: The Soul that was dead to God, and holiness; now hath a new life, a heart to move after God: it works from other motives, even from love to God: Dost thou find thy heart always dead to every act of Grace? No heart to pray, hear, &c. and is this habitual? O then here's no fruit of Christ's Spirit.

The Spirit of Christ is a sin-opposing spirit, always quarrelling with Lust; always convincing, troubling, humbling the Soul for sin, Gal. 5. 17. Tit. 2. 11, 12. It gives no peaceable possession to it, but always opposes it as fire doth water: Where the Spirit of Christ is, 'tis a leading guiding Spirit, Rom. 8. 14. Christians, what is it leads you? Is it your own Spirits? if you have received the Spirit of God, you may know it by those Scripture ways it takes to put you upon duty: such a one is convinced by the word, and persuaded, and helped by the word to this and the other duty.

Again, The Spirit of Christ is a praying Spirit: A Soul that is in Christ cannot live without prayer; though no eye see it, and no good come by it, yet he cannot omit secret prayer, Zach. 12. 10. Rom. 8. 15. 'Tis not enlargement of affections, parts, abilities, and expressions in prayer; but the inditings of the Spirit; inward breathings, sighs and groans of the Spirit: A man may pray like a Saint, or an Angel, and yet not have a jot of the Spirit of prayer: but it is the encouragement of the Spirit to wrestle with God by Christ; the inward suggestions of hope, when a Soul can go to God as to a Father, when the very heart goes out to God in prayer, and when prayer is wing'd with Faith and Love: These are the effects of a Spirit of prayer, and the fruit of a Souls reception of Christ.

Thirdly, They that have obtained an interest in Christ, have crucified the flesh with the lusts there of, Gal. 5. 24. They, and only they that are in Christ have crucified the flesh; that is, the body of death, original sin: The general Nature of sin; the universal extents of sin; come under the workings of this Crucifixion: O try Souls; hath the Axe been ever laid to the root of sin? Have you ever found felling strokes upon the body of your Corruptions, are you baptized into the death of Christ, and as he died for sin, so do you die to sin; and by virtue of his death, and wounds, do you fetch power, and strength from him to crucify it? There's a difference between the curbing; and the crucifying of sin: sin may be chain'd up, imprisoned, and not crucified: Hypocrites that are under a seeming change, do restrain, and confine sin; yea they may punish sin, but do not crucify it: The crucifying of sin is the giving it a deadly mortal wound, fetched from the blood, and death of Christ: Faith fetches virtue from the Grave of Christ, to destroy the power of sin, nothing so mortally stabs this Leviathan as a believing reflection on our propriety in Christ's Crucifixion, and a laying hold on promises by Faith in order to the application of the benefit of a crucified Christ, Rom. 6. 4, 6. Our old man is crucified with him: The putting our lusts into the side, wounds, and grave of Christ; A levelling the Ax to the body of sin, doth strange work to the crucifying of it. Try then are your corruptions, Pride, Passions, Earthliness as strong as ever? deceive not yourselves, this will never assure your interest in Christ till sin be destroyed: 'tis true, when the wound is given, sin doth not immediately die, but the body of sin is dying, and the believing Soul finds his corruptions hath less strength every day; as a man that loseth his blood weakens more and more; so a Soul that crucifies Lust, finds it to weaken day by day.

Fourthly, Another effect of a Souls union with Christ is this: There will be some resemblance of Christ. 1 Joh. 4. 17. As he is so are we in this World. As Christ was Crucified in the flesh, so are his Crucified to the flesh: And as Christ was risen and justified in the Spirit, so are they sanctified by the Spirit, and have the nature, and Image of Christ: Hence we are said to be made conformable to the Image of his Son. Rom. 8. 29. They that are Christ's are in some measure of truth like him. 1 Joh. 3. 3. They have something of Christ's Nature, and Spirit: Let the same mind be in you that was in Christ Jesus. Phil. 2. 5. Christ's mind was off from, and above the World; and herein lies as great an evidence of interest in Christ as in anything, that Soul is dead to, and wonderfully loose from the World. Gal. 6. 14. Christ's mind was heavenly, he favored the things above, his meat, and drink was to do his Fathers will, If you are Christ's you will be of the same mind; nothing in the World will so much delight you as to do something for God: Christ's mind was heavenly, to do his work, and hasten home; and if you are Christ's this will be your mind to dispatch your work, and hasten home. Christ was full of mercy, humility, meekness: If you are interested in Christ, so it will be with you.

Lastly, They that are interested in Christ, do interest Christ in themselves, and in all that is theirs, 2 Cor. 8. 5. They first gave themselves to the Lord: Such do devote, and make over themselves, and all to Christ, and glad they have any interest, parts, capacities, that Christ will accept of; they cannot keep back a part; no, were it a thousand times dearer, Christ shall have all, Can. 6. 3. I am my Beloveds, and my Beloved is mine: The keeping back of part lost Ananias, and Sapphira; they were undone, and damned forever, Act. 5. If Christ be yours; you will entitle him to all you are and have. And thus are we come to a Conclusion in this matter: That Soul that can come to seal to those things, is a happy Soul: O blessed Soul indeed! Then mayst thou boldly say, The Lord is my helper; God, Christ, the Spirit, the Promises the Kingdom, and glory is mine. Thus much for the use of Examination.

CHAP. XXX.

Containing a Use of Exhortion, pressing Believers to several duties.

HAVING already dispatched Motives, Counsels, and Directions to Sinners, about their coming to this Christ, I shall only apply this last use of Exhortation to those who are interested in this rich, and glorious Jesus. Christians, you that are made happy in your Relation to Christ, and invested with a Title to these glorious Treasures, of all persons; you are most obliged to duty; Christians, be you advised and exhorted to these several duties.

1 Duty.

First, Be exhorted to Thankfulness to the rich Grace of God, for giving such a Treasure and Treasury as Christ is; be continually offering up Praises and Thansgivings to God, Flames of holy Affection, be admiring the Grace of God, as the Fountain and Spring of these waters of Life, as the deep Mine of those glorious Treasures: now to scrue up your Affections, and wind up your Hearts to make way for holy Melody, admiring, triumphing, and blessing God for giving Christ, consider these following Particulars, as motives to this choice duty.

First, Consider what you were without Christ, O! Christians, look back, and see what once you were, Eph. 2. 11. Remembering that in times past, you were Gentiles in the Flesh. The worst of men, an idolatrous sort of men, Worshippers of Devils, you were wild Olives, Enemies to God in your minds, Col. 1. 21. hateful, and hateing one another, Tit. 3. 3. Lying in your blood to the loathing of your persons, Ezek. 16. 4, 5, 6. dead in Trespasses and Sins, wretched, miserable, poor, blind, naked, Rev. 3, 17. Children of Wrath, heirs of Hell, born to Wrath, Eph. 2. 1, 2, 3. under the Curse and Condemnation of the whole Law, Gal. 3. 10. O lamentable state! Obnoxious to Death, liable to everlasting Destruction, every moment, no guard about you, open to Devils, liable to the pourings out of divine Fury, and the openings of the deep Treasures of infinite Vengeance, to have no security from the greatest Evils, nor capacity ever to be delivered out of them; obnoxious every minute to a fearful looking of a fiery Wrath and Indignation, which shall devour the Adversary, Heb. 10. 27. This was once your state Believers, you were stubble, ready for everlasting Burnings, Fuel for that Fire that can never be quenched, and Food for the Worm that never dieth, O! sad case indeed, and was not freedom and deliverance from such a state, a Mercy worth your highest Thanks? Had you but looked into the place of Torment, and dipt your Finger into that lake of Fire and Brimstone, you would have wonder'd at Redemption-mercy, and adored that Grace of God that plucked you out of it: and is not your acknowledgment of preventing Grace, as due now as it would have been to an actual deliverance out of these Miseries?

Secondly, Consider what you are by Grace, if you are related to Christ, you are brands plucked out of the Fire, *Zach. 3. 2. Bond-slaves redeemed from the Pit, Zach. 9. 11. Condemned Wretches saved from Wrath to come, 1 Thes. 1. 10. Translated from Darkness to Light, and from the Power of Satan into the Kindgdom of God, Acts 26. 18. Col. 1. 13. Made Sons and Daughters to God, called to his Kingdom and Glory, 1 Thes. 2. 12. Gal. 4. 6. Crown'd and invested with a Right to his Presence and most glorious Privileges, Eph. 2. 18. 19. Under the Eye of God, under divine Care; infinite Grace is an Undertaker for you, 1 Pet. 5. 7. O glorious State! Consider further, how you lie upon the Heart of God, as a Seal and Signet there, *Cant. 8. 6. Reckoned amongst his Jewels accounted his peculiar Treasure, Exod. 19. 5. Mal. 3. 17. Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light, Col. 1. 12. Sitting in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, made Vessels, •itted for Mercy, filled with Mercy, devoted to Mercy, Rom. 9. 23. And Heirs of Glory, Jam. 2. 5. O wonderful, wonderful Grace; this is matter of Praises to God to all Eternity: Time would fail to read over your Inventory, and to look through your Treasury, 'tis Work for an Eternity to do: O believe what you cannot see, and admire what you cannot know, and study out what you yet understand not of your blessed state, both privatively, and positively considered, and when you have found out a little of your Happiness, then look on those beneath you, put your Mercies into the scale with the World's Miseries, rate your Redemption-interest with the lot of Christless Souls, matter of the same Lump with you, think on your Acquaintance, Friends, Relations, Neighbors, that have enjoyed the same Gospel-Privileges with you, and yet these are left to their Blindness, to perish in the Error of their ways, and must down into the deep forever, but you are exalted, and lifted up to Glory. O! What cause is here for Praises blessings, Thansgivings, and Hallejuahs to him that sits upon the Throne, and to the Lamb for evermore.

Thirdly, Consider the greatness of that Grace which hath made you to differ; Ah! Believers, Redemption-grace saw nothing more in you than in Judas, Demas, and those that perish; you were of the same Lump, cut out of the same piece, there was not a Jot of Difference between you and the damned, but only the good pleasure of Grace, only divine Mercy laid it's hand upon you: O that astonishing word, because it pleased him to make you his people, 1 Sam. 12. 22. It was only the free grace of God that chose Jacob, and left Esau, Rom. 9. 13. It was not for your sakes Christians, that the Lot was cast so well for you: No, Be it known to you O house of Israel, be ashamed and confounded forever in your own Eyes, Ezek. 36. 32. The moving Cause, the Wheel within the Wheel, that made you adopted, and others rejected, was only the good Pleasure of his Will, Eph. 1. 5. 7. It was from hence, God so loved the World, out of this Womb sprung all your Mercies, it was Height of Grace, Length, Breadth, Depth, Love passing Knowledge, Eph. 3. 18. 19. O ye heirs of Glory, be affected, astonished, ravished with the sense of this rich grace of God towards you, in giving Christ not only for you, but to you, and revealing him in you, and uniting him to you by the Spirit, from the same Mass of fallen man, to single out some for pardon, and leave others for Punishment: O wonderful! The Sense of this made the Apostle break out in such a holy Extasie, Rom. 11. 33. O the Depth of the Riches both of the Wisdom and Knowledge of God, O the depth! A note of Exclamation, and silencing wonder. O consider this Love of God to your Souls, 'tis free Love without any Influences from the Creature, full Love without Circumference or Bounds, eternal Love without Beginning and without end. Fruitful Love, abounding in the rich Gifts and Procurements of it, O the Gifts and Tokens God sends to you now, and O the large store he lays up forever for you: 'tis sympathyzing Love, full of Bowels, delighting Love, full of pleasure in you, 'tis resting Love: He will rest over them in his Love; 'tis immutable Love without Changes, giving Love, forgiving Love, caring Love, securing Love, returning Love, overcoming Love. O! where shall I make an end? How can you come to the bottom of this Deep, wade a little further, till you have lost yourselves in holy wonder: Can you see your brave houses, fine Cloaths, comfortable Relations, and have such high Regards, for these, and no more for this Grace of God: O wonder more at this Love.

Fourthly, Consider how this is the great Design of God in this grace, that you should be to his praise Eph. 1. 12. That is the end which God aimed at in Predetermining you to Glory, that you might be to the Praise of his grace, that his Grace might procure the Manifestation of his Praise; 'tis not for an Enlargement of his Revenue, or Advancement of his Profit; for man cannot be profitable to God, Job 22. 22. or for any addition to his Honor being above all Praise, but that he might receive the Tribute of his own Glory, and the returns of his outgoing Goodness: Now if this be the very end why God sets his love upon you Christians, then you have reason to glorify his Grace, lest you endeavor to overturn the whole Proj•ct of Salvation-kindness.

Fifthly, Think how delightful Praise is to God, Psal. 69. 31. This also shall please the Lord better than an Ox or a Bullock that hath Horns and Hoofs. That is, an Adult, and full grown Beast, which is more fit for Sacrifice; as Rabbi D. Kimohy notes, a Beast was not fit for Sacrifice under two years old; so that Praise is preferred here above all Sacrifice, as that which God takes most delight in of anything, because this doth most honor him to acknowledge him the Author of all Mercy, and God of all Grace, Psal. 50. 23. Whoso offereth Praise, glorifieth me, That is, He doth in a singular manner show forth mine Honor, and this is pleasing to him.

Sixthly, This brings Profit to your own Souls, Psal. 50. 23. For 'tis the means and way to obtain the Salvation of God; Ponit viam aut praeparat viam, (saith one) it opens the way for Salvation to go out to that Soul; this duty of Praise will bring you Gain, because it engageth God to give out more Mercy, and it leaves Influences of spiritual Good on your own Souls; it puts the heart into a good Frame to love God, and delight in him, and leaves more obligedness on the Soul to fear and serve God: so David after that Psalm of Praise to God, 2 Sam. 7. was wonderfully influenced to duty to God, as you may see, chap. 8. 11. and had his Spirit abundantly sweetened to men, chap. 9. 1.

Lastly, Consider also, how pleasant this duty of Praise is to the Soul itself, it is wonderfully delightful, and abundantly affects, and ravishes the Heart, to have the sense of divine Mercy in it, Psal. 147. 1. Praise ye the Lord, for it is pleasam, and Praise is comely. O Believers! let me effectually persuade you then to the highest Acknowledgments of Redemption-grace, and to the utmost Praises for this rich Jesus, who hath blessed you with all spiritual Blessings, Eph. 1. 3.

2 Duty.

Secondly, You that have an Interest in this glorious Redeemer, labor to keep up a high valuation of him in your Hearts; if he be so rich as the Gospel reports of him, O then prize him according to his excellent worth: Great men are highly esteemed, the Cap, the Knee, the best Room, the chiefest Seat are theirs, Jam. 3. 3. And how much more worthy is Christ of your account, 1 Pet. 2. 7. To you that believe he is precious. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 it signifies an high Estimation of another's Worth and Excellency, ready to be attested by all possible and due Demonstrations: four things should oblige Believers to a high Esteem of Christ.

First, His own transcendent Excellency which singularly resides in him, and eminently shines out from him, ten thousand times brighter than the Beams of the Sun, which in their own nature challenge the highest Adoration of men and Angels, especially of saved Souls, to whom he is most endeared and most nearly related. As the Apple-tree excels the meanest and most useless Shrub, infinitely more doth the Lord Jesus over top all the Glory of the world as Mediator, Cant. 2. 3. He is the chiefest of ten thousands, Cant. 5. 10. He is before all things, Col. 1. 17. Both in dignity and time, he precedes all Creatures, he is the Fountain of all Excellencies; his divine and personal Perfections make him the glory of Heaven, the adoration of Angels, the admiration of Saints, and the object of all Observance and holy Wonder, 2 Thes. 1. 10.

Secondly, The high honor the Father puts upon him; He is his Well-beloved, Matth. 3. 17. The object of his Delight, the Exaltation of his right-hand, who hath put all things under his Feet, Heb. 2. 8. Set over the works of his hands, crowned with Glory and Honor, verse. 7. Worshipped by all the Angels, by the Fathers Appointment, and set down at the right hand of the Majesty on high, Heb. 1. 3. 6. entrusted with all the Concerns and Interests of God, in the World, made his pleni-potentiary, to compose all Differences betwixt himself and fallen man: now, hath the Father such a high Valuation of Christ? then surely 'tis an unworthy thing in you, to detract from his Honor.

3dly, The Lord Jesus Christ deserves your high Estimation, because he is the Fountain of all those Streams that do make glad your Souls, the Sun of all those Beams, that warm your Hearts, the Author of all those Mercies that do supply and delight you; all your Excellencies and the things you mostly value, are Derivations from his glory; things are ratable as they come from Christ, he turns your Water into Wine, sweetens your bitter Cups, and makes them to overflow, all your graces come from his Fullness, he is your Friend, your best Friend, your old Friend, your none-such in Heaven and Earth, Psal. 73. 25. The Procurer of all your Mercies, the sweetness of all your Comforts, the crown of all your Glory, and doth he not deserve your Estimation? If he hide his Face all Light goes with him, if he suspends the Communications of his Favor, nothing is comfortable to you, if he lock up his Treasures, nothing but Poverty and wasting covers your Souls, everything without him is nothing, and with him, any little thing is enough; Bread and Water is rich cheer with Christ, Disgrace and Reproach is Honor with Christ; Poverty is Riches with Christ; O prize Christ then, for he puts a worth upon all things that you can enjoy.

Fourthly, Consider the wonderful value the Lord Jesus Christ puts upon you, and let this persuade you to a due valuation of him, Gal. 2. 20. Who loved me, and gave himself for me, Joh. 15. 16. O amazing, wonderful, sovereign Grace! That the Son of God should set his highest Regards upon loathsome Dung, swept out of door by divine Justice, cast out into the open Field, pityful, loathsome, undone Creatures, that he should account you (Believers) as the Apple of his Eye, who have been as Thorns in his side, that he should account you as a Seal on his Heart, who have been spears to pierce through his Bowels, that he should value you as the travel of his Soul, the Jewels of his Crown, the Inhabitants of his glorious Presence to all Eternity, that he should account such spotty Worms as you worthy of his Love, his Blood, and his Mediation, deserving his Bosom, his Kingdom and his Throne: O what strange astonishing Grace is this! and will you prefer Creatures, and place Relations in your Bosom, and let Christ lie out of door, O unworthy act indeed! Surely he deserves your highest Estimation, O prize Christ! prize Christ! value him.

Secondly, Prize Christ in all; in all Persons and things, make him the Standard to measure the worth of all created Beings by; Reckon things as they carry Christ in them: when Satan or Corruption tempt you to a high esteem of any, Ask them, as Christ did, whose Superscription and Image they bear? Matth. 22. 20. As the Talent of the Temple was of greatest value, so let thy Account be of those things that have the Temple stamp upon them, in a Sacred Reflection of Jesus Christ. Reckon not much of anything that hath not Aliquid Christi, something of Christ in it.

Thirdly, Prize Christ at all times; not only by fits and starts; not when he brings thee Loaves, and loads thee with his Favors only, but also when he hides his Face, and holds his Hand, when he seems to take no notice of thee: Let Christ be thy Sun in the Day-time; let him be thy Diamond in the Night, when all other Lights are gone, and shadows of Darkness are over thee; let him be always uppermost in thy Account; Think meanly of him at no time; let him lie between thy Breasts, to satiate thee at all times, Cant. 1. 13.

3. Duty.

Thirdly, Believers, (Have all your expectations from Christ, Psal. 62. 5. My Soul waiteth only upon God, for my expectation is from him. If the Lord Jesus be so rich, then he is able to maintain you, and supply all your wants: There's Bread enough in his house to feed you; Light enough in him to guide you; Comfort enough to cheer you: Blood enough to pardon you; Righteousness enough to justify you: Grace enough to sanctify you: Strength enough to bear and support you; Treasures enough to satisfy and requite you. Hence 'tis he calls his People to look to him, and be saved, Isa. 45. 22. And on this Belief the Saints resolved to wait and look for him, Isa. 8. 17. O Christians! expect all you need from Christ: His sufficiency to help you, and his willingness to supply you, are Arguments enough for your Expectation: why should you look to Creatures more than to the Creator? to the Clay, more than to the Potter? to broken Pits, more than to the Fountain? to the Physician, more than unto God? Is there not a God in Israel? why then are your eyes, Christians, after empty Cisterns, and things that cannot profit you? Have you chosen Christ to be your Rock, your Fountain, Life, Sufficiency, and Fulness, to fill all in all; and yet run to other things for your Relief, as if he were not able to supply you? O Souls! fasten your eyes on Christ; expect all you want from him, as the impotent man did on John and Peter, Acts 3. 5. Look not so much on Creatures and Relations, Friends, Riches, and Wisdom, &c. lest you be ashamed; but wait for the Vision, for it will speak, Hab. 2. 3. Expect all you need from Christ, for the expectation of the poor shall not perish.

4. Duty.

Fourthly, Be contented with Christ alone, whatever is wanting; and truly, 'tis strange indeed, that an infinite Portion cannot satisfy a finite Being, and a whole Ocean fill a little Vessel; Believer, Thou hast the person of Christ, who is the wonder of Angels, the Satisfaction, and the Heaven of glorified Saints, the desire of all Nations, the longed-for Joy of all that truly know and taste him, and will not this content you? Paul could leave all the World to go after Christ, and art not thou satisfied with Christ, without the World? This (saith Agnes the Roman Martyr) Even this is he, I now confess that I do love, I will make haste to meet him. The naked presence of Christ hath been a Heaven to suffering Saints under the want of all things: I have found a nest of Honey (saith Algerius) in the Entrals of a Lyon, in a deep dark Dungeon, I have found a paradise of Pleasure, &c. And if some glimpses of the presence, some Illapses of the love of Christ, were enough to these Sufferers in the want of all things, O unreasonable Soul, that thou shouldest complain, and be dissatisfied, who hast an Interest in Christ, and so much of other things too. O Christian! If Christ be thine, let it content thee, for all is thine; his Heart is upon thee, and will not that content thee? He loves thee more than all the World, he will not leave thee, and will not this please thee? Heb. 13. 5. He will care for thee, 1 Pet. 5. 7. Thou shalt want no good thing, he will make up the want of creatures with himself, he will sweeten bitter cups; 'tis but a little while, and he will take thee to himself, where Wants, Sufferings, Shame, Reproaches, Grievs, and Sin shall trouble thee no more: O then be satisfied with a single Christ, in Heaven he must be thy alone Happiness; there's no House, Land, Husband, Wife, Parent, Children, to make up thy Fullness and Blessedness, there God will be all in all, and is not this God in Christ enough now?

5 Duty.

Fifthly, Take up your Delights in this rich and glorious Christ, he is the Treasure, and his should be the heart also, Math. 6. 21. There is all that in Christ, which thy Heart can desire, stretch thy Longings to the utmost, and he is infinitely beyond them; and if he deserves to be the object of thy Desires, then of thy Delight, for what is Delight but Desire in Fruition? He is the only adequate object of Delight: other things are unsuitable to a spiritual Heart, and cannot please; empty; and cannot satisfy; fading, and cannot last; cloying, and soon become burdensome; but God in Christ is an eternal Excellency: those things that seem most delectable in Creatures, are but Derivations from his Excellency, Drops of his Fullness, Sips of his Sweetness, the impress of his Fingers: The precious Ordinances of Christ, are but the Galleries in which he walks, the Chariot in which he rides, the Cabinet wherein his Jewels lie, the Cisterns through which Waters of Life pass to saved ones; and if these be so pleasant, O what then is himself, and should not Believers then delight themselves in him.

Quest. But how shall I do to get my Heart to this delight in Christ? I find my Affections cold, and my Spirits dead, that I cannot taste that Sweetness in Christ, nor take that Pleasure in the Almighty as I would.

Answ. First, withdraw your Hearts from all other Delights, this course doth the Lord set Israel to get up to a delight in himself, Isa. 58. 13, 14. There is no greater Enemy to true delight in God, than a persons own carnal Pleasure, and delight in things below God, Whoredom and new Wine take away the Heart, Hos. 4. 11. 'Tis impossible a Soul can take pleasure in Christ and Sin together, Mat. 6. 24. For carnal Pleasures withdraw the Affections from God, Job 21. ver. 12. to 15. 1 Joh. 2. 15.

Secondly, Rest not till you have cleared up your Interest in Christ, and can upon good grounds apprehend him as your peculiar and chief Treasure better than all the World besides, and appropriate it to your own Souls, Cant. 2. 3. 5. This drew the Spouses Heart to so much longing after and solace in the Lord Jesus, even the sight of his transcendent Worth beyond all others, and her title to all those Excellencies; 'tis seen Interest in Christ that draws out the Heart after him, Cant. 7. 10. Doubts of Relation to Christ, and Fears of laying a claim to these precious Treasures, damps the Soul pleasure in Christ.

Thirdly, Be satisfy'd about Christ's special love to you, and delight in you, 1 Joh. 4. 19. Jealousies about an Interest in this love of God, did so cool the Jews Hearts towards him, Isa. 49. 14. But Zion saith, the Lord hath forsaken me, and my God hath forgotten me: From hence they began to slack their pace after God, and cried out, behold what a weariness is it, and snuffed at it, Mal. 1. 13. chap. 3. 14. Suspition of Christ's Heart towards you will straiten yours towards him: think well of Christ's Heart to you, cherish daily a good Opinion of his Nature, Affection, and Faithfulness.

Fourthly, Beg hard for heart-affecting fights of Christ; This so enamored the Spouses Heart, she saw the beauties of her beloved, Cant. 2. 1. She beheld him to be the rose of Sharon, and Lily of the Valleys, the powrings out of his Name drew her affections to him, Cant. 1. 3. The Eye affects the Heart, Lam. 3. 51. As with Sorrow so with Joy; 'Twas David's Sight of God in the outgoings of his Love and Glory, that made his Soul thirst after him, Psal. 63. 1. 2.

Fifthly, Be much in the consideration of what Christ hath done for you, and bestowed upon you; this so engaged Hezekiah's Heart to God, Isa. 38. 17. and filled David's heart with such an Extasy of Joy in God, 2 Sam. 7. 19, 20. Psal. 8.

Sixthly, Get a nature and Spirit suitable to Christ, Similo Simili gaudet, Psal. 17. 15. I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy Likeness. This made the Image of Christ glorious in the Souls eye also, when once it becomes changed into it's Likeness, 2 Cor. 3. 18. Therefore did Paul delight in the Law of God after the inner man, Rom. 7. 22. Because he had his inner parts changed into the Image of it; what pleasure will wicked men take in a wicked Cause, from the similitude it hath to their own Nature? So will the Soul in Christ, when once brought into a suitability to him.

Lastly, Be much in Communion with Christ, and this will beget wonderful Joy in him, Psal. 119. 167. David's being much conversant in God's Laws, begat and strengthened his delight in it. So verse. 14. 'Tis Intimacy breeds Delight, whereas Strangeness lessens all that Familiarity and Pleasure we else might take in Persons, Psal. 14. 10. A Stranger intermeddles not with his Joy. Be not contented to keep to duty, but press after Communion with Christ therein.

6 Duty.

Sixthly, Be not troubled at your Wants, Losses and Sufferings, you undergo in this World; Consider these four things.

First, You can want no good thing, the God of Glory stands bound for your Supplies, Psal. 34. 10. They that seek the Lord shall want no good thing, Psal. 23. 1. The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. It cannot be, that those who are so much interested in the Heart, Care, Person, and Treasure of the Lord Christ, can be destitute; what can you want who are entitled to all good things? 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. Who are Heirs of the Promises, Promises that concern the Life that now is, and that which is to come, 1 Tim. 4. 8. You have a surer Title to your Supplies, than they that have most of the World in their hands; for God hath laid up, in the hands of Jesus Christ, a full Allowance for you, how short soever he may seem to keep you for a while: the Earth is your Lord's, and the Fullness thereof, and the Cattel on a thousand Hills, Psal. 50. 10. 12. Psal. 24. 1. Heaven, and Earth and all things therein, are made over in the everlasting Covenant for your use.

Secondly, You shall want or suffer no more than infinite Wisdom, and fatherly Love sees best for you; 'tis impossible that divine Purposes should be frustrated towards you; he that will work will work, and nothing shall let, 'tis not Men nor Devils, nor the greatest injury of time, can deprive you of your Fathers Allowance, and that is upon infinite Wisdom and good Pleasure. The Wings and Wheels of God's Providence over his people, and for them, are full of Eyes within and without, to show the wise Care and Providence of God over his, in the worst of times, and hardest condition; and these Wheels are moving for your Good, Christians, and God sees in the darkest Providence, what is best for you; all his Dealings with his people, are the Fruits of everlasting Love, Jer. 31. 3. God doth in infinite Wisdom manage all your Concerns; 'tis not by Chance, or through any inadvertency, any Crosses or Losses befall you, but all is done in wise Counsel.

3dly, The less you have of Creatures, the more will God give you of himself, if you be looking to him, and by Faith live upon him. God will admit of no Vacuums towards his people, they can want no good thing; therefore if creature-supplies be removed, Grace comes in the room; as they say, Water will ascend to prevent a Vacuum, and Grace will descend to prevent Emptiness in Believers; God comes in the room of creature-comforts: when Job was stripped of all, he had more of the visions of God, Job 42. 5. John had never more Intimacy with Jesus Christ, than when he was in the barren Island of Patmos, stripped of the Confluence of earthly Comforts; Elijah never made a better Meal, than when he was driven into the Wilderness, and the Angel was his Cook, 1 Kin. 19. 8. Ah Believers! you have never better Allowance of God, than when you are cut short in outward things, if you be faithful; therefore you should be quiet under all Straits and Necessities in the world. The day we live in is full of Trials to many a gracious Soul, the wants of many may be more than many think of, and 'tis now a time to expect more Maintainings from the hand of God, and from the Spirit of Grace, when outward things are removed; when Israel was brought into the Wilderness where was no sowing nor reaping, they had their Bread from Heaven, and 'tis God's usual way, to send Meat from his own Table, when the Tables of his Children are empty, I mean, more spiritual Communications from himself, if they murmur not, but patiently and quietly wait for God's Salvation.

Lastly, Consider, Believers, 'Tis not long you shall be in the way of Wants, or Sufferings: the time is hastening that will set you beyond the reach of offending Providences, nothing shall offend you when you get home to your own Country. O! the time is hastening, when Moth and Rust cannot consume, nor Thieves break thorough and steal, Matth. 6. 20. And when afflictive Providences cannot injure your Treasure, if the Lord be your Treasure, 'tis not long you will be open to the Injury of time, and to those Casualties that pass upon your Comforts;

every day (Christians) brings you farther through the Briars, and Thickets of this World, and through the barren Wilderness, that leads to your Canaan; you are travelling apace towards a period of all your Trials, every new hour brings you a step nearer to the Sight, and Fruition of your blessed Inheritance. Christian, Think every Evening, now I have a day less to wade through the deep Troubles, and Red-sea of this World, and to be kept at such strait Allowances and Supplies in this Life: O a real Faith of this, how should it patient and quiet Believers, under present Straits and short Allowances here? O! Think upon the coming of the Lord, Jam. 5. 7. Be patient therefore Brethren unto the coming of the Lord behold the Husbandman, waiteth for a precious Fruit of the Earth, and hath long patience for it: He waits a long time before Harvest comes, and bears many a wet-day, and shall not a Believer wait with more Quietness, and hope for a far better Treasure? O! Christians, if you feel some Difficulties and Straits through want of Supplies, Comfort, Credit, Strength, Ease, Peace, Rest, for a little time, know, Eternity is coming, that will make amends for all.

7 Duty.

Seventhly, Live upon your Treasure, these unsearchable Riches in Christ; for this end hath the Father provided those rich Treasures, to satisfy you here, and to solace you hereafter, 'tis laid up in Christ for you, not locked up from you. Christians, the Lord Jesus is a Fountain sealed to, not from you, there's no Bolt between you and your Treasures, you may go and fetch supply at all times of need, Heb. 4. 16. It hath pleased the Father that in Christ should all Fullness dwell, Col. 1. 19. For the use of Believers, that he might give eternal Life to all that come to him, and be the head of the Body, the Fullness that filleth all in all, Eph. 1. 23. This is the work he hath undertaken to do, and invited all his people to come to him, that they might have Life, and have it more abundantly, he bids them ask and ask again, that their Joy might be full, Joh. 16. 23, 24, 26. This is the Will of God, that Believers should eat their own Bread with Quietness, 2 Thes. 3. 12. And make use of this Inheritance for all their Supply and Comfort: Christians, you cannot make too bold with your own, Christ and all his Fullness is your Interest: you may wear out your Welcome with men, and beg too often at fellow-Creatures doors, but you cannot ask too often of free Grace, or take too much of Redemption-treasures, if you be sure to refer the Measures and time to divine pleasure. In all your need come to Christ for whatever you want, for the Life that now is, and that which is to come; this answers the end of the everlasting Covenant, and the Fathers placing this store in Christ, and Christ's undertaking the Care, Conduct, and Salvation of all that come to him, and this wonderfully pleaseth Christ, and advanceth his mediatory Glory: this also keeps up the credit and Reputation of the ways of God in the World, when Strangers see Believers rich fare, and what a Sufficiency is laid up in Christ for them, that Christ maintains his own poor, that they need not go a begging; this commends that State and Government, where care is taken to prevent wandering Beggars: Besides, otherwise the Promises are useless if you come not to Christ for all your Supplies. These full Breasts will be injured if you milk them not out, Promises are the Bags in which this Treasure is carried out to believers, which will wax old if you use them not. Christ gets nothing (Christians) by your Savingness this way, the more he lays out upon you, the more he lays up for you.

8 Duty.

Eighthly, Improve your Interest in these vast Treasures, to the enriching of your own Souls; are there such Riches in Christ, and is this Jesus yours? O then labor to be rich also. There are two things which I should press you to be rich in, 1. In Grace, 2. In good Works.

First, You that have Interest in these Treasures of Christ, labor to be rich in Grace, be not content with the Truth of Grace, with little Measures of Grace, but strive to abound in Grace, 1 *The*s. 3. 12. For,

First, Grace is the best Treasure, and most rationally desirable for it's self. All other created Beings are conditionally good, so far as God sees them best for us, and so far as they conduce to the great end of God's Glory, and our Salvation; but Grace is absolutely good, because 'tis part of the divine Nature and Image of God, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Which divine Nature he tells us, ver. 5. 6. Lies in Faith, Virtue, Knowledge, Temperance, Patience, Godliness, and Charity. 'Tis absolutely necessary to the glorifying of God, and being glorified with God, Heb. 11. 6. Without Faith 'tis impossible to please God, and without Holiness no man can see God, Heb. 12. 14. Grace is the best Treasure, because the most enduring Treasure, the most potent Treasure, it can procure more than all the World can, Mark 9. 23. All things are possible to him that believeth. Indeed created grace cannot, by way of Merit or Purchase, procure anything but by way of Appropriation and Meekness, it brings that which all the World cannot: Grace is God's high way to Mercy and Peace, being under a Promise of Peace; Grace and Peace are usually twins in gracious Souls, 2 Pet. 1. 2. Grace can quiet you under Troubles, strengthen you under Weakness, guide you under Darkness, cheer you under Sufferings, enrich you under Losses, and fill you under Wants; again, Grace is the purest Treasure, earthly Treasures are as those Cities Solomon gave to Hiram, a mere Cabal and dirty things, defiling the Souls of those that have them, and use not them aright; Grace is the most pleasant Treasure, it doth not burden those that have it, as earthly things do with wasting Cares and tormenting Fears. Further, Grace is the best Treasure, in that it will go with the Soul into the other World; all the Riches of this World must be left behind, Death puts the Owner and his Interest into a winding Sheet; no man's Propriety to these out-lives himself, the Grave buries all his Relation to these things, but Grace never dies, true Holiness goes with the Soul to glory.

Secondly, Labor to be rich in Grace, because if you have but little grace, you will hardly prove the truth of grace, though the least grace is grace, as a drop of Water is Water, yet a little grace doth not so capacitate a Soul to see it, 2 Pet. 1. 9. He that wants this thriving Grace, forgets that he was purged from his old Sins, he cannot remember or make out his saving Change, or putting off his old state; little Grace is ever skeptical, and subject to Doubtings, Matth. 14. 31, O thou of little Faith, wherefore didst thou doubt.

Thirdly, Because little grace will hardly carry a Soul through the Temptations, Duties, and Sufferings of the day we live in; these are some of the last times we are fallen upon, and the last times are perilous times, 2 Tim. 3. 1. This is the Character of these times, Abounding Iniquity, and Decay of Love, Matth. 24. 12. And therefore a little Grace will not carry a Soul through strong Corruptions; where Sin abounds, Grace must abound much more, or else the Soul will loose ground, Rom. 6. 1. What the Apostle speaks there of grace in God, 'tis as true of grace in Saints that must abound more than their Sin, or else Sin will be too hard for them; Judgment must be brought forth to Victory, or else the bruised Reed will break, Matth. 12. 20. For this end the Apostle adviseth the Ephesians, in his time, which were less liable to such Temptations, they should put on the whole Armor of God, and having done all, to stand, Eph. 6. 13.

Fourthly, Else you cannot answer the ends of grace, and all the Cost of God about you; the design of grace in all the means and helps to his people, is to further their growth in grace, and to make them abound to all well-pleasing before God, Isa. 5. 2. 4. Joh. 15. 2. Psal. 92. 13, 14. To whom much is given of them much is required, Luke 12. 48.

Fifthly, That so you may be more like to God, who is rich to all that call upon him, Rom. 10. 12. He is rich in Mercy, he hath abounded in the Riches of grace towards all his People, Eph. 1. 7, 8. Christians should be Epitomes of Christ, and Resemblers of his Excellency, holding forth his Virtues in the World, 1 Pet. 2, 9. There can be no greater glory to a Child of God in this World, than to be like to Christ, who is the glory of the Father; but by being rich in Grace, you will much manifest the Excellency of Christ in the World.

Sixthly, By being rich in grace, you will become more serviceable to God and others in your Generation, you will be able to do more work for God than others. Grace is a Talent, and the more Talents you have, the more Incomes hath God from you, Matth. 25. 16, 17. Rich men have larger Capacities to honor God in the World than others have, they can do more, and lay out more for God, and be more serviceable for God than others; they can feed the Hungry, and clothe the Naked, and take Out-casts into their houses; they can do more to support the interest of God, than the poor, and have more Substance to honor God with; so Souls rich in grace, have larger Abilities to serve and honor God with: the more Grace the more acceptably can they serve God, Heb. 12. 28. The more spiritual Services are the more acceptable to God by Christ, 1 Pet. 2. 5. For such the Father chooseth to serve him, who serve him in Spirit and Truth, Joh. 4. 23. Psal. 45. 12. And the Daughter of Tyre shall be there with a Gift, even the rich among the People shall entreat thy Favor. Tyre was a rich place as well as vicious, and yet, there would God have a People, which should honor him with their gifts and large expenses for him, and the richer the People, the greater will their gifts be; The rich, or richest, for 'tis the superlative in the Hebrew, Shall bring Gifts, and entreat thy Favor: noting, that those who are more spiritually rich, are more serviceable for, and potent with God through Christ: these can do more with God, as Noah, Daniel, and Job were mentioned above others for their Potency with God, Ezek. 14. 14. And Moses and Samuel, Jer. 15. 1. As men who had larger faith and grace, and so greater Intimacy with God than others, and such as could do more. O Christians, labor after more grace, because hereby you may become more serviceable for God and others, you may more prevail with God through Christ for Mercies for the Nation, and can be more helpful for others to teach, counsel, and comfort them, and have more Gold, Myrrh and Frankincense in your Treasures to offer to, and for Christ.

Seventhly, The more rich you are in grace, the more rich you will be in glory; the more grace you improve for God, the more glory shall you receive from God, Luke 19. 17. 19. This is the rule of the Lord's Procedure in the day of Judgment, he will render to every man according to his work, 2 Cor. 5. 10. Though glorified Souls receive not for their grace, yet they shall have according to the Measure of their graces, for grace widens the Vessels of Mercy for glory. The more Liquor the Vessel hath, the larger it is; so the more grace, the larger is that Soul, and the more capable to take in glory, when grace shall be turned into glory.

Quest. But some may say, How may we get more of this spiritual Treasure?

Answ. First, Get your Hearts more engaged to it, Desires are the Souls Wings, that carry it over all difficulties, to it's beloved Object; this is one Character the Apostle gives of rich men, 1 Tim. 6. 9. They are such as will be rich: They have an earnest mind, an ardent Desire to be rich, 'tis a Will and Purpose grounded on Counsel and Consideration; Christians, this will much further your obtaining these riches of grace, if you once get your Hearts resolved for them.

Secondly, Labor for a holy skill in managing Christianity to the greatest Advantage; this makes men thrive when they have the Mystery of their Art, and are their Crafts Masters, and understand the Rules of their Trade; unskillful persons are not like to thrive whatever their Employment be, Prov. 4. 7, 8. Prov. 3. 13. 14. Prov. 24. 3.

Thirdly, Be diligent in the use of all your helps and advantages to Soul-profit, Prov. 10. 4. chap. 13. 4. 2 Pet. 1. 5. Take all Opportunities of waiting at the Pools side, Isa. 55. 1. They that will be rich in the World, take all Opportunities of getting, and ply Markets and Fairs, and Seasons of Advantage for their Interest, and so do Souls that thrive in Spirituall, they are much in waiting on God, they lose no Seasons that will bring them in some Soul-advantage, Prov. 23. 23.

Fourthly, Be still getting in more and more grace from Christ, 'tis Christ's Treasures that enriches the Soul, he that will be rich must buy tried gold of Christ, Rev. 3. 18. The graces of Christ are true gold, they will bear the Fire, and hold out in greatest Trials: counterfeit grace will be as reprobate Silver when it comes to melting, it will be as Hay and Stubble that perish in the Fire, but true grace will hold in time of Trial, 1 Pet. 1. 7. In this, Gold differs from all other Mettals in that it loseth nothing by the Fire, but comes forth the more pure; so is the grace of Christ, 'tis as tried Gold, that doth not loose, but get in the Fire of Affliction and Temptation. Naturalists say, that Gold is more warm in the night than in the day, so true grace cheers the Heart more in the night of Tribulation, than in the day of Prosperity. O Christians! if you will be rich, get in grace from Christ, every day, for that is the true Cornucopia, or the Souls plenty, Joh. 1. 16. Of his Fullness have we received Grace for Grace. Make some new Additions to your graces every day, 2 Pet. 1. 5. What the Heathen said concerning Learning, Nulla dies sine Linea, Let the Christian say concerning Grace, Nulla dies sine Gratia. This would be a notable way to Soul-prosperity, to be getting from Christ some more grace in every Approach to him: as are your Receivings from Christ, so will your Thrivings be; put often the hand of Faith into Christ's Treasury, and grasp large Portions of Grace for thy Soul: Faith is the only receiving grace, Joh. 1. 12. To as many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, Joh. 7. 39. Therefore 'tis called the Substance of things hoped for, Heb.

11. 1. Faith appropriates to the Believer, the Overtures and Promises of grace, and by a secret magnetick Virtue derives in from the Fullness of grace needed Supplies, Faith dips into the Fountain, and fills the Soul with what it needs.

Fifthly, They that will be rich in grace, must be thrifty saving Souls, choice of their time, and careful that they do not wast their graces, or loose the things that they have wrought, 2 Joh. ve. 8. So persons that are thriving in the World, are saving of everything, that nothing be waste; the same Care is needful to spiritual Enrichings; Prodigality will soon consume great Estates, he that is not saving will never be wealthy: Christians, do not consume your days as a Tale that is told, Psal. 90. 9. make the most of every hour, do your proper work every day; a wise and faithful Improvement of time, would tend much to Soul-flourishings, Eph. 5. 16. Spend no words in vain: put Time and Talents to the greatest Advantage: they got most for God and themselves, who were most in the Improvement of their Talents; hold fast also the Truths you have received, Rev. 2. 25. That is, keep and retain the Doctrine, preserve and maintain the practice of those Truths you have received.

Sixthly, Be much in begging grace, be always asking some spiritual Blessing from God, as Caleb's Daughter Achsah, Judge. 1. 15. her Father had given her one Blessing, and she asks another, and 'tis said, he gave the upper and the nether Springs; so be not content with what you have, but still be craving for more grace: like Princes Favorites who have their Lord's Ear, will be often begging, now this place, then that Preferment; so Believers be suing hard for Grace, ply the Throne of Grace daily, loose no Opportunity wherein you may further your spiritual Interest by Supplication; this is God's appointed way to the obtaining of Mercy, Ezek. 36. 37. Follow your Sutes till you obtain, let your chiefest Requests be for Grace, and be restless till you prevail, like Jacob, who would not let God go till he had blest him, Isa. 62. 7. Give him no rest, till he establish and make Jerusalem the Praise of the Earth. Never leave begging till the Lord Jesus hath left off giving, and that will not be whilst he sits upon the Throne, Eph. 4. 8.

Lastly, Maintain constant, intimate, and universal walks with God: He is the most thriving Soul that keeps nearest to God; as that is the fruitfulest ground that is nearest the warm Sun, Isa. 18. 4. Deut. 33. 14. so is it to keep near to God: This was that which exalted Israel above all Nations, they were a People near to God, Psal. 148. 14. This made Enoch so soon ripe for Heaven, he was one that walked with God, Gen. 5. 24. Christians, 'tis not your sitting under God's shadow, will make you thrive, till there be a dew on your Souls, Hos. 14. 5. 7. Keep much in his presence, with him is the Fountain of Life, Psal. 36. 9. Be also constant in thy walks with God, not by sits and flashes, but drive a steady Trade of godliness: Let thy whole course of Life, both in thy Civil and Religious Duties be as one constant Walk with God, Gen. 17. 1. In your Callings, Relation-Duties, in every state, change, and undertaking, keep close to God; this is a notable way to spiritual prosperity, Deut. 5. 33. 2 Chro. 17. from verse. 3. to 7.

Secondly, Improve your Interest in Christ, towards your enriching in good Works; Labor to be rich towards God, as well as in your own Souls, Luke 12. 21. 1 Timothy, 6. 18. Consider, Christians, the more you lay out for God, the more are you like to God, who giveth us richly all good things, 1 Tim. 6. 17. And in being rich towards God, you will enrich your own Souls also: for he that soweth bountifully, shall reap bountifully, 2 Cor. 9. 6. Acts of Mercy and Piety are as good Seed, that shall not miscarry, but shall bring forth a sure crop in glory, Gal. 6. 8, 9.

9. Duty.

Ninthly, Live up to your Treasure, Walk as becomes so high a Dignity and Relation to so rich a Jesus, 2 Thes. 2. 12. This is but reasonable, if God hath changed your State, that you should change your Lives; If your Relation be new, then your Conversation should be new also, Eph. 5. 8. 'Tis an unsuitable thing, if God hath invested you with new Privileges, to retain your old Practices: You were Slaves to Sin and Satan, but the Son hath made you free; how unbecoming a state of Liberty are Bonds and Fetters? Grace hath given you Beauty, and, is it fit you should lie in Ashes, and wear your Sack-cloth still? Christians, you are arrived to your adult state, and to your manly years, and will you be like Children, and Heirs under age? This is unsuitable. How unbecoming is a carnal Heart to a Spiritual State? Works of Darkness to the Day-time? Rom. 13. 12, 13. You were poor, worth nothing, stripped of all, destitute, afflicted, and naked; Redemption-Mercy hath enrich'd you, and once more entrusted you with a glorious Treasure. O, how unmeet is a low Spirit and sordid Life now! To live on beggaty Elements, to wear filthy Garments, to sit in the dust, and wallow in the mire of your Corruptions, this is most unworthy also of the Grace by which you are advanced. Hath the Lord advanced you to Dignity and Honor, and will you disgrace the Throne of his Glory, and walk unbecoming his Highness and Majesty? O Christians, you bring Dishonor on that King of Glory you are related to, to live like the Subjects of Satan, and Inhabitants of the lower World: you disgrace his Family, into which you are adopted, to be heterogeneous to it in your Spirit and carriages: you disparage the Table you are admitted to, and the Fare you live upon, to look so ill-favored and lean in your Souls, as if the Lord Jesus kept a bad House, and did not allow meat enough to his Children: O Christians! live as becomes your Riches, and glorious state into which Free Grace hath put you. Now, 'tis becoming such a change in your condition;

First, Not to keep your old Company: Persons advanced to high Honor, usually cast off their former and obscure Companions, and converse with Persons suitable to their Dignity: When David was advanced from the Sheepfold to a Crown, he leaves his fellow Shepherds, and converses with Nobles: so should you, Christians, have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of Darkness, but rather reprove them, Eph. 5. 11. Ye are now fellow Citizens with the Saints, and of the Household of God, and your Lives should be like those, and your intimate Converses with them, Psal. 119. 63. What, a Christian, and yet help on the ungodly in their way, and love them that hate the Lord? sit with vain Persons, and maintain Confederacy with Rezin and Remalian's son? Isa. 8. 6. What a Christian, and look strangely on thy Brethren, and become an Alien to thy Father's House? O how unbecoming is this!

Secondly, Not to wear your old clothes: when Elijah was mounting to a new condition of Honor, he left his Mantle behind him, 2 Kin. 2. 13. When Joshua was advanced to higher dignity, his filthy Garments were taken off, and he was clothed with change of Rayment, Zach. 3. 4, 5. O Christians! cast off your filthy garments, your old sins, by Repentance, put off Pride, and be clothed with Humility, put off Guilt by Repentance, and put on Christ by Faith.

Thirdly, Live not on your old fare: When the three Children were brought to Nebuchadnezzar's Family, they were called to leave their old Pulse and Water, and live on the King's Table, Dan. 1. 5. O Christians! Are you taken from your Kindred and Father's House, and brought into the Family of Christ; leave then your old Garlic and Onions, your stolen Waters and forbidden Fruit, and feed on the King's Table, eat and drink abundantly of his Provisions, his finest Wheat, and Honey out of the Rock of Ages; feast on his Marrow and fat things, the Bread of his Table, his Word and Ordinances, his hidden Manna; let it be your meat and drink to do his Will.

Fourthly, Do not your old work, cast off the works of Darkness, Rom. 13. 12. Leave off your old Trade of Sin; and serving your former Lusts in your Ignorance, 1 Pet. 1. 14. ch. 4. 2. but carry on a new Trade of Godliness, and Heavenly Conversation, Phil. 1. 27.

Fifthly, Leave your old Language; speak no more the Language of Ashdod, Neh. 13. 24. Let no filthy Communication drop from your Lips, nor vain Discourses be found among you, but let your Communications be holy, Eph. 4. 29. Col. 4. 6. Persons of Honor usually have their Discourses according to their Greatness; not so light and familiar, but more grave and stately. O Christians! labor you to live so, that more gravity and seriousness appear in your Language and Carriage.

Lastly, Drive on new Thoughts and Designs: when Persons are exalted from Obscurity to Honor, they will not take up such old Thoughts and Projects: So Christians should now have new Imaginations, 2 Cor. 10. 5. Grace should bring into captivity every Thought to the Obedience of Christ. Vain thoughts must now lodge no more in you, Jer. 4. 14.

10 Duty.

Tenthly, If there be such vast Treasures in Christ, then you that are the Friends of Christ commend him unto others; so did the Spouse, Cant. 5. 10, &c. so will the Bridegroom's Friends speak for their Friend, Joh. 3. 29. compared with Pro. 9. 3. Wisdom should be justified of her Children, Matth. 11. 19. O Christians! set forth the Praises of your Beloved, that others may be taken with him: Do all you can to further the Match between the Lord Jesus and Sinners: Be advising your Neighbors to forsake their evil ways, and come to Christ that they may be saved: Be calling upon, and stirring up your Christless Friends, Relations, Children and Servants, to be looking after Christ, that they may be delivered from the wrath to come. You should be publishing his Praises, and commend him to all the World: O, be speaking of his Excellency, and the Glory of his Kingdom, Psal. 145. 11.

11 Duty.

Eleventhly, You that are interested in this Rich Christ, be exhorted, above all Portions, to get Christ to be a Portion to your Children; you know what a Treasure Christ is, you have found him enriching your Souls; when you were as a Syrian, ready to perish, he came in, and took you up; he comforted you with the Wine of his Consolation: O, that you would labor to provide this Treasure for your Children! 'Tis strange to see Christians heap up Dust for their Children, and be so careless to get Christ for them: What if you leave them Houses and Lands when you are gone, and leave them not Christ, what doleful Creatures will they be to all Eternity? Time will consume your Earthly Treasures: your Children may out-live their Money and Lands that you may leave them: O, let your chiefest Provisions be for their Souls, do what you can to get Christ for them: Some may be poor in the World, and have no Portions to leave them; O, how careful should such be to leave them a Treasure in the Promises, a Portion that will not be spent. If you can say, as the Martyr, Mr. Saunders told his Wife, when he came to the Stake, he had no Portion to leave her, but a Portion in the Promises; and surely, if you can leave your Children an Interest in Christ, you leave them the best Portion.

But, you will say, How might we do this?

First, Labor to Interest them in the Everlasting Covenant: Get sound and saving Faith yourselves, and that will appropriate new Covenant-Mercies to your Seed, I will be a God to thee and to thy Seed, Gen. 17. 7. This is God's usual way to the Heirs of Promise. 'Tis true, Gracious Persons may have Carnal Children; but this is God's way; Labor to have sincere Faith yourselves, and then you will leave Covenant-Promises for your children.

Secondly, Get a Treasure for your Children that will not waste, by your strong Cries to God for them: Improve the Spirit of Grace and Supplication for them: Pour out strong cries and Tears. Few are like Austin's Mother, who did daily pour out Tears for the Conversion of her Son: 'Tis impossible (said Ambrose to her) that a Son of so many Prayers can be lost. May be you pray too coldly for them. O follow God Day and Night, for your Children! O, skrew your Supplications higher! It may be you do not pray so fervently, so believingly as you should for your Children.

Thirdly, Do all you can to convince them of their undone condition without Christ. Don't daub and flatter them with false Promises; they must be born again, or else they cannot enter into the Kingdom of God, Joh. 3. 3.

Fourthly, Instruct them in the knowledge of Christ: Be opening, and commending Christ to them: show them the necessity of Faith, and what the Grace of Faith is: Watch over their Lives; be strict and severe in reproving their Sins, that they may be sound in the Faith.

Lastly, Lead a holy Conversation before them, that by your Lives you may win them to Jesus Christ; O your Pride, Passion, Carnality, Vanity, may stumble them. Thus do all you can to get a Portion of upper Springs for your Children.

12 Duty.

Lastly, you that have an Interest in these rich and glorious Treasures of Christ, long to be with Christ, for then you shall partake of all his Riches; Here you have but a little to carry you in the way, you have but in part, but when you come home to him, then you shall have according to the measure he hath purchased for you, you shall see and know, as you are seen and known, 1 Cor. 13. 9, 10, 12. In heaven, there you will have a Treasure without Measure, there you will see all his Riches and Glory, and be glorified with his glory, then you will live at the full, you will live upon himself, and God will be all in all to your Souls; O Christians! long then to be with Christ, there's your Treasure where your Lord is, your Inheritance is above with the Saints in Light; Christ is gone to Heaven, and there are all his Riches: O long then to be fit to go home, to be with Christ, that you may partake of all his glory.

And thus have I now come to the further side of this great deep, I mean to the Conclusion of this Subject; and O that what hath been opened of this glorious Christ, may not be in vain; you have heard much of this Tree of Life, God knows what Fruit hath been gathered: a glorious Treasure hath been presented to your View, and offered to you. O see what Advantage you have gained, how dreadful will it be, for any that have heard so much of this rich Christ, to be found poor at last? O it will be sad for any to die poor in a Loadicean State, Poor, Blind, and naked, and to be cast away. O Sinners consider this, you that have been woo'd and invited to get this choice, tried Gold, Christ hath pleaded with you, to win your Hearts if possible; O take heed you die not without an Interest in Jesus Christ, you will hear all those Truths brought over to you again at the Bar of Christ: and all the Counsels and Helps you have had to draw your Hearts to Christ, will be then as burning Fire in your Bones, and as boiling Lead in your Bowels, if you perish without Christ; Therefore take heed, take heed, that this Christ become not a stumbling Stone, and a Rock of offense to your Souls. And such as are Believers, mind your Duty which hath been opened to you; and O that these Truths might be profitable to all. And the Lord give a Blessing to it. Amen.

THE Heavenly Trade, OR THE Best Merchandizing: The only way to live well IN IMPOVERISHING TIMES. A Discourse occasioned from the decay of earthly Trades, and visible wastes of Practical Piety in the day we live in, offering Arguments and Counsels to all, towards a speedy revival of dying Godliness and timely prevention of the dangerous issues thereof impending on us. To my honored Friend M^r. Jeremy Holwey, Merchant in BRISTOL.

SIR,

BOth Equity and Interest do give you a peculiar claim to this offspring of my weak Labors, it being born in your House, and drawing its first breath in your famous City. 'Twas with you I had the occasion, and from your Self the practical encouragement to treat on this Subject; while under your roof I enjoyed for divers weeks the advantage of your converse, and beheld in your expressions and conversation a fair display of this Heavenly Trade. This cherished my hopes that a discourse of this nature might find or help to make more such Traders in your August and Merchandizing City: A place (among its many Ornaments) made happy with Gospel enjoyments, and the lovers of Truth and Peace. 'Tis Religion is the honor and prosperity of a People, It lays their foundation with Agates, and makes their borders of pleasant stones, Isa. 54. 'Tis like the Crown of Solomon, with which his Mother crowned him in the day of his espousals, and in the day of the gladness of his heart, Cant. 3. 11. This gives them Peace within their walls, and Prosperity within their Palaces, Psal. 122. 7. It brings down a blessing on their Basket and Stores, fills their Chambers with all precious and pleasant riches, Prov. 24. 4. And decay in this Heavenly Trade, is doubtless one reason of those wastes in men's earthly Trades: There is no such way for men to thrive in their own interests, as to be faithful to God's interest; As 'twas said of Caesar, that by setting up Pompey's Image, he established his own, whereas a decay of Godliness brings a Moth on men's earthly Trades also: Hos, 5. 11, 12, Ephraim is oppressed and broken in judgment, because he willingly walked after the Commandment, therefore will I be unto Ephraim a Moth, and to the house of Judah as rottenness. Gregory gives this reason why Dives was tormented in his Tongue, because he talked much of Religion, but practiced little, Verba legis in ore tenuit quae opere servare Contempsit. We live in an age of much talking of God, but of little walking with God; Men's tongues are tipped with Heaven, but their hearts and feet sunk into the World, and are full of Pride, Vanity, and Deceit. What was said of Diogenes Synopensis, That in Opinion he was a Stoic, but in Conversation an Epicure, may be sadly reflected on many Professors in this Age, who espouse strict Principles, but lead loose Lives, and only Treat for Heaven, but Trade for Earth. But Sir, You have not so learned Christ, or received this Spirit which is of the world; but that which is of God, 1 Cor. 2. 12. Your devotedness to the Lord making your earthly Interests subservient to things above, with your Zeal, Courage, and Constancy in the way of God, and natural care for the things of his Glory, do bespeak you to be a Trader of another Country, whose work and wages are above; And certainly whatever men think, a walking with God in his appointments, and a conscientious care in everything to please him, will one day appear to be the greatest interest even in their eyes who now despise it; neither is there at present anything in the ways of God which Souls have cause to be ashamed of, however clothed with Calumny and Scorn by men; nor can they who walk in them in Truth, be deprived of any real interest by the utmost severity of those that would run them down, And were there no other Argument to persuade men to the choice and pursuit of Godliness, this were sufficient, even that relief gracious Souls find from a reflection on their Uprightness, to bear them up under their greatest sufferings; yea, that serenity, peace, and sweet acquiescence of Spirit which sincerity affords them under the most dreadful issues which divine pleasure may allot them here. It must needs set Religion above all other Interests (its Enemies themselves being Judges, if they would be rational) that the worst things of Holiness, even then when Believers are under the saddest Circumstances, are chosen and preferred by them above the best things of the world; yea, they are thought a good bargain when purchased with their greatest Sufferings. Surely humor will not engage such who know the usefulness of earthly Comforts, and have least reason to be prodigal of them, to expose themselves, and their dearest concerns in the world unto ruin, but for what they are persuaded, is far better. Hebr. 10. 34. Nor can it be thought obstinacy or hypocrisy in those who know their own hearts, and the terrors of the Lord, to persist in those ways that would cost them their earthly All, and lay them open to divine wrath too, should they be false and disobedient. Certainly, did not prejudice and passion blind men's eyes, the calm exercise of their own light would restrain them from such an uncharitable censure of those that desire to fear God, though they walk in some ways different from their understanding, while they labor to approve their integrity to God and men, and are found faithful to that measure of light they have received. But possibly this Piece may not fall into such hands, or be permitted long under their eye: My hopes, at least my desires are, that it may prosper with those who profess better things; And if it shall please the Lord (who sometimes uses clay and spittle, and Goats hair, and counts the things that are not as if they were) to make this of any service to your Self and Family, and unto those who profess his Name in your City, for whom I have so high respect in the Lord, it will abundantly compensate the labor, and answer the design of him who is and desires to approve himself

SIR,

Your Servant in Christ Jesus Barthol. Ashwood.

TO THE READERS, ESPECIALLY Those who are the more peculiar Objects of my Care, Love and Labors.

NOTwithstanding the high Pretensions to Light and Wisdom in the Times we live in beyond some former Ages, there is no small measure of Soul darkness fallen upon us in this Evening-part of our Gospelday, Isa. 42. 19, 20. Who is blind but my servant? or deaf as my messenger that I sent? who is blind as he that is perfect, and blind as the Lord's servant? seeing many things but thou observest not: opening the ear, but he heareth not. Were not a Veil on men's minds, could it possibly be that CHRIST should be so little precious in this Day of revelation and Land of visions in which we live? Was there ever a Nation in the World to whom Christ hath been so unveiled and manifestly held forth Crucified before their eyes? and yet not to know the Day of their visitation and the things of their peace, be-speaks shameful Ignorance. Is not this a manifest Evidence of men's Darkness and folly, to be fondly taken with Airy Notions and vain Speculations, and all the while neglect that Wisdom which maketh wise to salvation, to leave the Fire of the Sanctuary, and sit down by Sparks of their own kindling: That having a Kingdom before them which cannot be shaken, and an Inheritance that fadeth not away reserved in the heavens; they should turn again to the beggarly Elements of this world, loathing their Manna and Angels food, and longing again for the Onyons and Garlic they had vomited up; to leave tried Gold for that which perisheth; to let Heaven drop out of their hands, and hug the World in their hearts; to neglect that Merchandise which brings in unsearchable riches, and drive a Trade for such Goods whose fashion passeth away: Do plainly argue Ignorance and folly. Are not the silver streams of Jordan better than the muddy waters of Assyria, and our Rock above the worldlings Sandy bottoms (they themselves being Judges?) and yet to lose those pleasant streams for that filthy puddle, is folly indeed. Will Eagles stoop to Flies? Can Souls who have ascended into the light of the Lord, and seen the things that differ, and had acquaintance with things above upon choice, come down again and prey upon the Carrion Comforts and Interests of a dying World? O no. Can a Maid forget her Ornaments, or a Bride her Attire? Oh foolish people and unwise to be unmindful of the Rock that begat them, to leave the Snow of Lebanon, to let down such a gainful Trade as Holiness is, that they may pursue a Soul-cheating, starving, damning World: demonstrates folly and madness in such as have the knowledge or hopes of better things: are ye so foolish having begun in the spirit; are ye now made perfect by the flesh? Gal. 3. 3. To obviate or retrieve this folly is the design of this ensuing Discourse, which comes not in the gaudy Dress of curious Art, or in the Excellency of man's wisdom, but in the plainness and demonstration of the truth as it is in Jesus. I am not ignorant that Books have their Fashions as well as men, and Discourses that come not forth in the Modish Garb laced with Elegancy and stuffed with Lofty strains, scarce meet with a Look except of Scorn and Contempt from the Wits of this Day: But I love not to follow them who darken counsel by words, and by their sublime Speculations and abstruse Notions, lead men into Clouds of their own creating, and while they show Themselves lose their Readers. There are many tricks and devices (saith Mr. Dod) that some men use in Preaching, (which we may apply also to Writing) but it seldom does good; the pure Gospel and that Preaching which the World counts foolishness, is that which works most kindly. Christ's own Weapons are the fittest for his own service, and when there is least of man in God's work, then usually does there most of God appear. The business of this Book is not to feed thy Curiosity, but to find out thy Conscience, and the likeliest way to That is through the plains of Intelligible truth. I cannot expect that Discourse should lead others towards Heaven, that has not its self drained and refined from Earth: Expect not in this anything that may please thy carnal mind, but what may profit thy teachable and obedient Soul; and before thou ascendest the Throne to judge it, take the Balance of the Sanctuary and weigh it: Be advised to go beyond such Readers who only view the Title, read the Epistle, glance a little on the Book, and if they find not something singular and pleasing their curious Fancy, lay it aside; this shows a full Stomach but an empty Soul, and is a Practice that overturns the Writers pains and the Readers profit; be persuaded to read it thoroughly and impartially, and weigh it seriously, and thou mayest find something that concerns either thy Understanding, Affection, Conscience, or Conversation.

I have chosen to prosecute the Metaphor of (Trading) throughout this Discourse, having a principal respect to that sort of persons in the design of this Book, and the better to insinuate into the mind of ordinary Christians the knowledge of heavenly things, of men's duties, neglects and backsliding. If thou art one who never madest a profession of God farther than blindness, formality or superstition might lead thee; and a stranger to this great pleasant and gainful Trade of Godliness, here thou mayest find Arguments to persuade thee to this rational and necessary Undertaking in order to Life and Salvation, Grace and Glory, with Counsel and Instructions how thou mayest attain to this high and heavenly Calling.

If thou be one who drivest furiously after the World, pursuing thy earthly Interest with greediness, neglecting the things that concern thy peace, and subjecting the Concerns of Heaven and thy immortal Soul to the poor and perishing Trifles of this World; here thou wilt find reasons to convince thee of that folly, and helps to loosen thy heart from that ensaring Soul ruining bondage.

If thou meetest with Rebukes upon thy earthly Interests, and crosses on thy Affairs and undertakings in the World, this Book will help thee to find out the Cause of thy Disappointments, and those consuming Moths on thy Estate, and Instruct thee to get Honey out of these Rods, good from these evils, and how to Comport with Divine ends, and thy own Advantages by such Dispensations.

Hast thou made a Profeossio of Godliness, and formerly driven this Heavenly Trade to Advantage, but art now fallen back and decay'd in thy Spiritual substance, and become poor in thy Inward man and towards God? here mayest thou find the Discoveries and Evidences of a backsliding Soul, with the Causes of it: thou wilt also meet with Awakening Considerations to Affect and Afflict thy heart with the sense of thy evil Case: Here also mayest thou know whether thy Decays are cureable, and what course thou mayest take to get out of thy languishing estate.

Art thou one that doest profess this Heavenly Trade? this Piece will tell thee what thy work is, and wherein this Employment lies; what are the Important duties of Piety to be driven on every Day, with Directions and Rules about it.

If thou art one who keepest up this Trade for Heaven and thriveest therein, here hast thou marks of a Prosperous Trade in Godliness, and several Doubts cleared up about thy Soul-thrivings, with those Important Duties opened which this Peculiar Mercy calls for: Gather out of this Garden what Physic or Food thou needest, and Apply and Improve it, praying for the Assistance of that Spirit that hath been frequently and solemnly begged both for the Forming and Blessing of this Discourse unto all that read it.

You who have been Hearers of this Subject, though in somewhat different Expressions suited to your Capacity and Advantage in the Delivery of it, have reason above others to Receive and Improve this: Message Twice sent unto you.

But you Especially my dear Friends, the Care of whose Souls is upon me, for whose sake chiefly these Truths were at first Delivered, and are now made Public have the most obliging reasons to get them Copied out upon your Hearts and in your Lives. To you Firstly, more Especially, yea, most Affectionately was and is this Word of salvation sent and presented again to your View, that you might have these things abiding with you, and that they might live in your Eye which have founded in your Ear, and be speaking to you when I shall be removed out of your sight, and be beyond all Capacity to serve your precious and immortal Souls, that when I can plead no more for God or with you, I may in this be speaking to you and others in the behalf of Christ, and glorious though despised Holiness. This has been the prevailing Argument with me to discover my weakness to the World, and expose myself to the censure or scorn of some.

I have the greatest reason to expect from you the Entertainment of these Truths, who have chosen and received me in the Lord, to declare the Gospel of his Son to you: You also have known my Labors, Infirmities and Afflictions with you and for your sake; that for Twenty years space I have served you in the Gospel, in reproach, wants, weaknesses; dangers and sufferings, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I may finish my course with joy, and the Ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God: yea. being so affectionately desirous of you, I have been willing to have imparted to you not the Gospel of God only, but also my own Soul. Because you were dear unto me, you know and have acknowledged the suitableness of this Subject unto your own Cases, and how evidently the condition of most of you is opened here and suited, by the convictions, counsels, reprehensions, & consolations of this discourse; there are some among you that I am jealous of with a godly jealousy, lest I should have labored in vain for you, and your minds be corrupted from the simplicity of the Gospel through the temptations of this present world: I have often cried aloud in your ears against the sin, and have warned you of the danger of an earthly spirit and conversation, and do tell you now even weeping, that such are enemies to the Cross of Christ, who mind earthly things, until you are crucified to the world, you have no saving benefit of the cross of Christ, or can ever behold the face of God in heaven, until you are redeemed from the earth; all your Profession, Parts, Duties and Enjoyments will be but so many Witnesses against you, if after all you are lovers of this present World: Coveting to be rich will also make your Souls poor, and deprive you of the refreshments of his presence and consolations of his blessed spirit, and will be a manifest evidence that you have little of those pleasures that are from above. 'Twas said of pious Mr. Bain, That he sought not great matters in the World, being taken up with comforts and griefs to which the World was a stranger. The more a Soul converses in heaven and lives upon the first fruits of the other world, the less will he be taken with things below: when Abraham came to live by faith, and in a view of that City whose Maker and Builder is God, the Plains of Sodom and Spoils of Canaan were to him but mean things; I never cared much for the world (saith one) since I came to know better things. You have tasted that the Lord is gracious; you have fed on the fat things of his house, and have found a day in his Courts better than a thousand elsewhere, and must be self-condemned if you prefer not God above Ten thousand Worlds, and count the enjoyment of himself riches enough; yea, if you esteem not the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. 'Twas a brave speech of that noble Galeatius when he had left his Honor, Interest and Relations for Christ and the Gospel sake: I have saith he, riches honor and joy enough while in this Cottage I may live in the Church of God, enjoy his Word and People, and have time to converse with God by holy meditation, and with my Friends about God's great goodness to me in my Conversion, cursed forever be that Religion which weds men to the World, and divorces them from God.

There are others of you (I fear) fallen back in your spiritual state; former days were better than now, and the shadow gone back some degrees upon the Dial of your hearts, who it may be have left your first love, have lost your spiritual taste, more dead to the things of God, Cold and Formal in Duty; possibly you have hid your face from God, and he hath compassed himself with a cloud before you. You have neglected your walks with God, and he hath withheld converse with you: For the recovery of such from whence they have fallen to their first love and labors, is part of this Discourse framed; hear what the Spirit saith therein, Attend and Obey those Counsels, return to your first love, and do your first works, lest the Lord take the Candlestick out of his place, and leave you in that wilderness into which you wander.

Some of you who are fearers of God yet walk in darkness, and see no light, have your continual Exercises and frequent Complaints, that he who should have comforted your souls, is removed far from you: My Advice to you is, to walk in the light when you sit in darkness, and wait for the light when the even shadows are upon you. 'Tis but a little while and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry; the Son of righteousness is upon his journey towards you, and 'twill not be long ere it be risen upon you.

Are there any of you who have better days, does your Bow abide in strength, are your Affections warm towards your Beloved, and your hearts sometimes burn within you while he is talking to you in his Word? Do you long for his Appearance, and delight in his Presence, and press hard after him in his Appointments? Do you love the Word of his mouth more than your necessary food? Can you be content to let your own things sit, that you may seek the things that are Christ's? and sit at his feet, when others are in the market-place, and abroad in the crowd of their earthly affairs; Are you alone with Christ in a corner? If so, your Mercy is singular, and your Obligations strong to be entirely the Lord's; to be no more your own, but wholly devoted to his fear, to live a life of praise and welpleasingness unto God, to think well of Christ, and bear his pleasure; to be patient in tribulation, continuing instant in prayer, to long for the Well-head of your mercies, and to be beginning a life of glory while you are here in a life of grace. I shall close up this Discourse with a few words of general Advice to you all.

First, lay the foundation sure on which you build all your Temporary labors and your Eternal hopes: You cannot be too certain, in that on which depends your all. Consider how often Satan hath battered down; yea, your own hearts have disputed away those Evidences on which you could sometimes have adventured your Souls, and yet the strongest Assaults are to come, and the greatest Forces of Hell reserved for the last Battle. Bottom not your hopes on anything short of a Crucified Christ, not on your Frames, but on his Favor; not upon your Duties, but his Righteousness; nor upon any kindnesses received from him short of a saving union with him; rest not till your Convictions be clear, deep and distressing, such as discover sin to be the greatest evil in its nature and fruits, and its residence and indwelling in you, a burden intolerable; such Convictions as will not admit of after favor or reconciliation to the least known or most beloved sin; that can make your heart to bleed afresh upon every new touch of it, and never at rest till the whole kind of it be destroyed out of your Souls: Labor to see such a Beauty in Christ, as may render all Created Glory as dross and dung in your Eye; stop not till you come to the Excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ as your Lord; till you can discern such a worth in the Person as well as Purchase of Christ, as will make you content to throw all over board, to take in him, and be sick of love till you enjoy him: be sure your close with Christ be right with his whole Person, Will and Designs, to be one with him upon all his own terms. And that this union be not in Judgment and Consent only, but in Heart and Will from your whole Souls, finding an inward likeness and love to him in your renewed nature.

2ly, Go on towards perfection, press after nearer and more complete Conformity to the Nature and Will of Christ every day: Think how short your highest measures do come of perfect holiness in the sight of God; set the Pattern before you every day, that you may be the more ashamed at your present attainments in Grace, and more provoked to higher Aims and Atchievements; compare yourselves with them that are above you, with the Rule of Righteousness, and with all your Obligations, Time, Means and Mercies, to keep you humble in your own eyes; look upon your Wants as well as Enjoyments, that you may be as poor in spirit as in condition; that which is wanting in you cannot be numbered: Who am I and what is my people that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? 1 Chron. 19. 14. Keep low thoughts in yourselves under the greatest services you do for God, and the highest honor you receive from God. Alas (said the Lord Du-Plessis to one that commended him for the improvemt of his Talent) What is there of mine in that Work? say not that it was I, but God in me. I know more (saith another) by myself to abase me, than any man could know to extol me. So much humility a man hath, so much grace he hath and worth and no more: Dr. Har.

3ly, Keep up a life of faith upon Christ in the promises: As the first quickening of a Christian is by faith, so his whole life is maintained by believing; no longer than you believe can you live: Gal. 2. 20. Your life is hid with Christ in God. Draw fresh Influence thence by faith upon your Hopes, Comforts and Graces under every want, fears and deaths within you; make not your graces or duties the grounds of believing, but encouragements to Faith; study more the nature, freeness, fullness and unchangeableness of redemption grace, and get acquaintance with the promise and persuasions of the truth of them in Christ: To live only by faith (saith Dr. Harris) and a bare Promise without a pawn, and to give all to free grace and to Christ alone, are mighty works; and some of those things he found most difficult.

4ly, Walk in Love as Christ hath loved you: This is the life of Heaven, and beginning of that Excellent glory which shall never be removed; there is nothing does make thee more like to God, more near and dear to him, and more fit for his use than this Grace of Love: Let your Affections be extended as large as the objects of them; unto God, his Word, Ways and People; love God to obey him; his Ways to walk in them, his People to delight in them, to sympathize with them, to mourn over them in their sufferings, to help them in their necessities, to rejoice with them in their consolations, counting their mercies your own, which is no easy part of your duty. It is far harder (saith one) to adopt another's Comforts than his Sorrows, and to hold ones self exalted in another's exaltation.

5ly, In the enjoyment of the World, get above it, and while you live in it, be daily dying to it; so much as you get above the World, so near are you to God and Glory, and no nearer. Covet not another's Goods, the World is none of your Portion, if God be your part. Oh how much beneath the Extraction, Dignity and Duty of Saints is the love to, and life upon this low and dirty World: leave not Children's bread to feed on such Carrion dogs-meat, and filthy excrements, with which Satan feeds his Laborers. But having spoke largely of this matter in the Book, I advise your Eye and Heart thither for Conviction and Counsel herein.

6ly, Make much of the Time and Means of Grace while you have them; your Glass runs, your Sun hastens, and the Wind blows when and where it listeth. O make use of Time while you have it: God who made nothing in vain, hath work for every hour of your short Day; work as hard as you can, you will find something to do when you come to die. Loss of time (saith Dr. Harris on his Death-bed) sits very near upon me; work, work apace, assure yourselves nothing will more trouble you when you come to die, than that you have done no more for that God which hath done so much for you. Wait upon and walk in the light while you have it; if Grace thinks it not much to spread a Table for you, do not you think it much to spare time to sit down at it: You that find so many things to do when God calls for your Company, will shortly find that God hath other things to do than to mind you when you need his Cordials; how glad would you be of enjoying time to hear the voice of peace when you are entering upon Eternity, who are not at leisure now to hear Divine precepts while in the possession of time: neglect not hearing praying seasons, which are your Seed-time for Glory O that every day (saith one) were a Sabbath or a Fast-day, for then I should be well. Buy not your ease or earthly interest at so dear a rate as the loss of salvation, time and helps: Evidence your love to God by your valuation of his Presence in his Ordinances; How can you long for the enjoyment of God in Heaven, who care not for his company on Earth, or his glorious appearances in his Sanctuary. Stick at nothing that may yield him delight or give him glory, how expensive soever it be on your dearest Comforts and Interests: When one told Du Moulin in his sickness that he wronged himself by speaking so much; 'Tis true, said he, but I will die glorifying of God. A Soul that supremely loves God, will count nothing too much to do, part with or suffer that may bring him glory.

7ly. Rest not in your enjoyments of means, without improvement of them: What's a full Table if thy Soul abide empty, and frequent feeding, if thy inner man languish: 'tis a time of dying and secret waste in most Christians; O covet earnestly the best gifts, that you may flourish in the Courts of God, and grow as the Cedars of Lebanon; that you may be thoroughly furnished to every good work, and your profiting appear to all men: Be deeply sensible of your little Fruit under great dressing, and be humbled; take heed of spiritual pride, and puffings up in your apprehended Excellencies or Privileges; 'tis the humble soul is the most thriving soul; keep your Hearts pure, and Lives unspotted: As sound bodies, so sincere souls are most growing: pare off luxuriant branches as they sprout out, and lay the Ax to the root of them every day; keep up Faith in the Promises of Soul-prosperity to them that serve him in sincerity, Psal. 92. 12, 13. and stay on Christ by Faith for help: when you see nothing but Discouragements in yourselves, and when you are afraid to apply the Promises, even then bless God for them. These Promises, said a doubting Soul, are none of mine, yet I am glad that God hath made them, and for their sakes that shall partake of them; Mr. White.

8thly, Neglect not secret transactions between God and your Souls, to which I fear some of you may be too great strangers: no wonder that Intimacy between God and Souls does fall, when they are seldom together in retirements. Oh take heed of passing by thy Closet or secret corners one day, Matth, 6. 6. or posting out of them before God and your Souls have some Converse together; and be not only constant in it, but careful to please God in the spiritual performance of it: Let not Custom or Formality deprive thee of the sweetness of that bread eaten in secret. You are in this Book more fully called upon to these Duties of secret Prayer, meditation, heart-searching, and watching-work, to which I refer you.

9ly; Make conscience of every Duty you owe towards others, in your Relations, Places and Callings; keep up Family duty, or write Heathen upon thy doors, that the World may know thee: If you neglect God's service, he will not be your Sanctuary; Prayerless houses have broken walls and doors, and no defense against the least evil: If you will not give God your breathings, how can you think he will give you his blessings: 'Tis sad that any, especially such whom God hath taken into his house, should shut him out of their doors; or give him such pitiful service as some do, scarce ever reading the Scriptures in their Families from one Lord's-day to another; only send him a little hasty fruit, some short and shuffled prayers once a day: no wonder that salvation come not to their houses, or converting grace into their families, but a flying Roll is over their habitations, and the black marks of Ruin on their Children and Servants: think it not strange that God makes thy pleasant Roses pricking Briars and Thorns to thee, who hast made them Spears and Swords to him. Oh keep with God in every duty of his service, your Relation, Calling and Employments.

Lastly, in every condition walk with God, and wait for God; if he lead you in ways of mercy, follow him in ways of duty. If you have Comforts take heed of doting on or abusing of them: when he sends you Afflictions receive them; be not fainting nor froward under them, but sanctify God in them, and by their hand return to him; do not over-love your mercies, or over-fear your troubles: prepare for Changes, but live upon Immutability, and be settled under all your unsettlements; count nothing strange but sin, and nothing hard to bear, but the absence or anger of a gracious God: lose not your fears in times of peace, neither cast away your confidence in the day of trouble: let your Lamps be always burning, that you may see the way of your duty in the Night of your danger; and how to get in Comfort in your Adversity; and let your loins be girt, that you may be ready both to do your work and to meet your wages; and be always looking and waiting for the coming of your Lord, who will welcome you in the Acceptance of your Duties, uncloath you of your sins and sufferings, and crown your sincerity and faithfulness with a Come ye blessed of my father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you; which is the longed for Fruit of all his Labors with you, and the subject matter of his daily prayers for you, who is in him that was and is, and is to come,

Your Affectionate Labourer, Fellow Servant, and Brother, Barthol. Ashwood.

THE Heavenly Trade, Opened and improved from Proverbs 3. 14. For the Merchandise of it is better than the Merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold.

THAT Religion is under a very great declension in the day and place wherein we live, is too evident to serious observers; but too little laid to heart; or the prodigious effects, which usually follow such expiring godliness, duly trembled at. The character of the last and perilous times hath over taken us; men having a form of godliness, but denying the power of it, 2 Tim. 3, 5. A lamp, a name to live, notions parts, external privileges and duties, make up the Religion of the greatest part of professing Christians this day, while the vitals of Christianity visibly languish; where is that ancient Faith, Love, Zeal, Faithfulness, Courage, Patience, Self-denial, Mortifiedness to the world, Justice, Charity, Heavenly-mindedness, holy Converses, with that universal Piety and Unity, which made the Saints so famous in former generations, and had so great an influence on the enlargement of Christ's Kingdom, notwithstanding Pagan and Antichristian force against it? In the room of which, now pride, contention, formality, selfishness, hypocrisy, with the general gangrene of an earthly spirit, eats out the life and power of true holiness: The affecting sense of this dangerous evil gives occasion to this ensuing discourse, whose errand into the world, is not to plead for notion or faction, but to advocate for despised godliness; to help to awaken this sleepy age, and contribute a weak hand with abler shoulders, to give a lift (if possible) to fallen piety.

Amongst the many Advocates for piety, Solomon the Penman of this book hath done worthily, and laid out much strength of reason to attach the minds of men, and regain them to the knowledge and fear of God. This chapter is a system of those motives which he more largely prosecutes throughout this book, to persuade men unto a thorough pursuit of holiness. Divers are the considerations he proposes to this end: taken

First, From the happiness of those that obtain and improve this pearl of grace, verse. 13. Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding: (though with greatest labor and cost) and having gotten it, doth put it to its due use and improvement for the good of others; they, whoever they be, are blessed men and women, in regard of that profit, pleasure, peace, honor, safety and life (with the durable and eternal possession thereof) ensured to those that thus make Religion their business, from verse. 13, to 27.

Secondly, From the evil estate and end of those that pursue the ways of sin, which is in its nature vile and abominable to God, and as to its products, its shameful, cursed and destructive in the end; verse. 23, 32, 33, 34, 35.

The Penman knew that few would deal in those commodities and trade about divine things (all men seeking their own, and few the things of Christ) and therefore sets forth those wares with greatest commendation to buyers, that they might off the better. He begins with the gain that comes by godliness; a popular argument, and that which in other things puts men on great adventures, and restless labors towards their enjoyment. The hope of advantage (saith Chrysostom) makes all difficult things easy. What will not the Merchant do or suffer to get a little profit? a fit metaphor to set forth the diligence of a Christian in his race, and to insinuate the worth of those eternal things he is in chase of. The merchandise of which is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain therethereof than fine gold.

In the words, for methods sake, you may observe,

First, The subject, wisdoms merchandise, and the gain thereof.

Secondly, The Predicate, Better than silver, than fine gold.

Wisdom] Divine Wisdom, which in this book, (not to mention all its acceptations:)

First Is put sometimes for the Lord Jesus Christ, the 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the word, and increated Wisdom of God, or the wisdom who is God; who is made to us of God, Wisdom, as well as Righteousness; the light of the world; the bright morning Star; the Sun of Righteousness, from whom are derived all those beams which irradiate the dark minds of men; and that Wisdom which makes wise to salvation; in whom are hid all the treasures of Wisdom: This is that shining Diamond, that Pearl of price, which outvies all the beauties of the world; the costly gems, and whole treasures of nature, in whom are unsearchable riches, the enjoyment and use of whom is soul enriching.

Secondly, For the Word of God, which is, sure, making wise the simple; pure, enlightening the eye; and more to be desired than gold, yea than much fine gold; called the Light of the Lord, Isa. 2. 5. Come ye, and let us walk in the Light of the Lord; the discerners of the thoughts and intents of the heart, Heb. 4. 12. which are able through the Spirit's illumination, to make one wise to salvation; and in this sense the Jews usually take Wisdom for the Word and Law of God: In keeping of which there is great reward, Psal. 19. 11.

Thirdly, By it is held forth a true and saving knowledge of God, part of that Original beauty which man lost by his first fall, and is regained by a second edition, and impress of the Spirit, when renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created it: this knowledge is called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , not an idle speculative, but a lively operative knowledge, which consists of an illumination of the mind, and an infusion of faith and spiritual knowledge. Parisiensis calls it, The gate of life through which God first enters into the mind of man. In this Wisdom and Knowledge of God as the souls last end, with the way that leads thereto, and felicity that results from it, enlightened minds see greater luster than in fine gold, and all the bravery of this lower world.

Now this Wisdom is not only speculative, taking in the notion of truth, and pleasing the mind with refreshing views of things excellent; but practical, which disposes the soul to a fruition of God, so revealed to the eye of Wisdom, and to the obedience of all those counsels opened in order to it. Hence Davenant counts it an error in the Schoolmen to restrain Wisdom and Understanding to a contemplative life, when both have their equal reference to an active practical life and conversation: In regard of it's essence, it's an intellectual virtue; but in respect to the matter and use, it's practical and moral; and therefore he defines Wisdom to be an infused knowledge of those things which lead to faith and a holy life, with a pious affection, inclining the soul to the application & practice of the things it knows. This the Scriptures hold out to be that true Wisdom, which God requires of men: And to man he said, Behold the fear of the Lord, that is Wisdom, and to depart from evil, that is understanding, Job 28. 28. Job having spoken of the wonderful Wisdom of God in the works of Creation, beyond all the searches of human understanding, he tells them what is that Wisdom which God requires of man, not to screw into those unfathom'd deeps and mysteries of divine works in the Creation; not to feed on abstruse notions of things that concern them not; but this is true Wisdom, to fear God, to serve and obey him, and to depart from iniquity; So Deut. 4. 5, 6. Behold I have taught you Statutes and Judgments, keep therefore, and do them, for this is your Wisdom and understanding in the sight of the Nations, which shall hear of all these Statutes, and say, Surely this great Nation is a wise and an understanding people. Wisdom from above (says the Apostle) is pure, peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, James 3. 17. that is it makes men holy and fruitful in good works. So the Psalmist describes Wisdom, by holy walking; I will behave myself wisely in a perfect way; Psal. 101. 2. and Ephes. 5. 15. Walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise. Holy walking is both the fruit of Wisdom, and the way to Wisdom. Col. 1. 9, 10. You may be filled with the knowledge of his will, in all knowledge and understanding; that you may walk worthy of the Lord to all well-pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God. And so the Wise man understands it in this book. Prov. 1. 7. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of Wisdom. That saith Aquinas) from whence Wisdom begins to be operative. Chap. 4. 11. I have taught thee in the way of Wisdom, and led thee in right paths. Wisdom hath its way, and feet to walk in it; and this way of Wisdom is a right path; or, right-holy-actions (saith Piscator) so the Ancients take Wisdom. Cicero calls it, The Art of living. That Wisdom which doth nothing, is worth nothing. All Wisdom lies in this one thing (saith Lactantius) That we know and worship God. Religion is wrapped up in Wisdom, and Wisdom in Religion. The work of Wisdom lies in this, that contemning earthly things, by which we were formerly held, serving and desiring these frail perishing things, we may now be directed to seek after the eternal reward of a heavenly Treasure: (So saith Aquinas) Wisdom is not to be considered only as it leads to a knowledge of God; but as it directs and orders the life according to divine Rules: And in this sense I take Wisdom here for true Holiness; that Wisdom which is manifested in a heavenly, gospel conversation, the merchandise of which is so advantageous.

*The Merchandise thereof: Objectively considered: The trading for this Wisdom, or Merchandizing about; so the Septuagint renders it: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , To merchandize, is to buy and sell to get in, and put off goods, to take in, and lay out: this Wisdom is better than to get in gold, or anything that gold can buy, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 from 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , The word is, to go up and down here and there as Merchants do, to buy & vend their goods, to travel abroad now in one place, then in another; to be full of distraction, tumbling up and down to get and put off their wares: So busy a work is merchandizing, which takes up men's thoughts, time and labors to follow it, that they might get some advantage in the world. And such is the work of Religion; it is an active work, that calls for the heart, time and strength, if ever souls think to turn it to any account: And they that do thus, that make Religion their work, that lay out themselves and their all in pursuit of Heaven and spiritual things, whatever cost and pains they are at, if they can but gain these treasures of godliness, and obtain Wisdome's wares, they make a good bargain; for the profit that comes by these is far better than silver yea than fine gold: The Septuagint hath it: *Than to get the treasures of silver and gold; yea the best gold, beaten gold.

There is another sense that one gives the words, taking Wisdom for the price by which those great and eternal things are got: (I rather like the instrument than the price) spiritual things are freely given, not bought, Isa. 55. 1. but those that lay out, and improve their Wisdom to gain grace, to promote godliness, and further salvation, make a better bargain: than they that lay out their treasures of gold and silver to buy the best goods on earth: In either sense it's a truth, Wisdom's merchandise is the best merchandise; to trade about spiritual things, grace and glory is incomparably the best trade: Whence observe this Doctrine or Position, Doct. The Heavenly Trade is the best Trade; no Merchandise like Wisdom's Merchandise, and trafficking about spiritual and eternal things.

This Truth will evidently appear, if you consider,

- 1. The nature of those things about which Wisdome's Merchants trade.
- 2. The Person they deal with.
- 3. The Terms they trade upon.
- 4. The gain that comes by it.

Reas. 1. First, The things about which this Heavenly Trade is taken up, are in their nature things of greatest worth; wares which all the worlds treasures cannot purchase or compare with; they are all great, glorious and excellent things; nothing mean, contemptible and useless, among all the goods that Wisdom proposes to souls choice and reception: The favor of God: Redemption from Hell: Pardon of sin: Peace with God: The graces of the Spirit: Communion with Father, Son and Spirit, with Saints and Angels: Walking with God: Spiritual blessings: Joy in the Holy Ghost: Heavenly Treasures: Assurance of Glory: These are all things of incomparable value, and the things that heavenly Traders deal about: And are not these far better in their nature, than the low, dirty, fading things of this world? No Onyx, Sapphire, Chrystal, Coral, Pearl, Topaz, Rubies, or the most costly pieces of nature, can compare with this pearl of price; this stone cut out of the mountains, or those spiritual treasures which are the subject of this Heavenly Trade: Let those be Judges who know the worth of things; call in Wisdom's Lapidaries, let God, Saints and Angels speak in this matter, their verdict will be, Wisdom's wares weigh down all, as to their innate excellency: I shall only propose three evidences to determine this case, and they are of unquestionable verity, and a sufficient proof of this truth. They are,

- 1 Scripture.
- 2 Experience.
- 3 Reason.

First, The Scriptures will tell you, there are no wares like heavenly wares, Deut. 32. 32. Their Rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being Judges. His loving-kindness is better than life, Psal. 63. 3. And the light of his countenance, than the increases of corn, and wine, and oil, Psal. 4. 6, 6. The Law of thy mouth is better to me than thousands of gold and silver, Psal. 119. 72. Tried faith much better than gold that perisheth, 1 Pet. 1. 7. One day in God's Courts better than a thousand elsewhere, Psa. 84. 10. None in Heaven like to God, nor any on earth in comparison of him, Psal. 73. 25. To make provision for the soul is the one thing needful; to enjoy Christ and spiritual things is the better part that shall never be taken away, Luk. 10. 42. The Kingdom of God is the chiefest thing to be sought for in the first place, Matth. 6. 33. first in affection, and first in time: Multitude of testimonies might be produced from Scripture to attest this truth, the Heavenly Trade is the best Trade; no goods like heavenly goods: what do you trade for here? is it for more than life you plot, you work for? you gain no more here than meat, drink, raiment, money, land, credit, and the like, which only tend to life; but the favor of God is better than life: one gracious look, one whisper of peace from God, weighs down all those: riches, pleasures, honors, do not make a happy man or woman; the Scripture never reports such blessed as have the abundance of these things, but rather miserable and unhappy, obnoxious to more snares and dangers; but godliness makes a blessed man, and pardon of sin a happy man, in God's account, Psal. 1, 1, 2. and 32. 1. whose testimony is truth itself, and to be relied on beyond all the grounds of blinded opinion, and false hopes.

Secondly, Experience assures men of this truth; that heavenly things are the best things: come to a Soul that hath tried both; one who hath had all that the World could afford on the one hand, and hath also experienced the favor of God, and spiritual things, and he will tell you of spiritual things, as David did of Goliath's Sword: There is none like them 1 Sam. 21. 9. And as Solomon of the virtuous Wife: These things above excel them all, Prov. 31. 29. And wisdom is much better than Gold, and to get understanding rather to be chosen than Silver, Prov. 16. 16. This was Solomon's experience, who had the largest trial of any man, he had Houses, Vineyards, Gardens, Servants, Silver, Gold, the peculiar treasures of Kings; Greatness, Pleasure, Music, and whatsoever his eyes desired: and upon all gives this verdict; That wisdom excelleth folly as far as light excels darkness, Eccles. 24, 13.

Piety transcendeth Pravity; Heaven the World: Purity out-passeth Pleasures, as Light doth Darkness: When he speaks of things below, he tells you; These are all vanity and vexation of spirit; he that labors for these, labors for the wind, Eccles. 5. 16. and what he seeks, finds not; but when he speaks of wisdom, and spiritual things, he is as one that wants words to express their worth: Wisdom is better than Rubies, and all the things that may be desired, are not to be compared to it, Prov. 8. 11. David was a man who had tried various conditions in the World, he knew what trouble and comfort was, what youth and age was, what poverty and riches were; he had pleasures, honors, treasures, with the hearts of his people, and command of a Kingdom, and yet he tells you, he had seen an end of all perfection: and that the light of God's countenance was better than all, and to be a door-keeper (a mean place) in the house of God, was more eligible, than to abide in the tents of wickedness: Psal. 119. 96. Ps. 4. 6. and 84. 10. He chooses it as his one thing; To dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of his life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his Temple, Psal. 27. 4.

Moses knew what honor was, and the pleasures of sin, and yet upon choice, prefer'd poverty with godliness, on the side of truth, before all the treasures of Egypt; He refused to be called Pharaoh's Son, rather choosing to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ, greater riches than the treasures in Egypt, Heb. 11. 24, 25, 26. He knew the Nobles of Egypt, and grandeur of Pharaoh's Court, and yet could value a poor persecuted people, that owned God, and cleav'd to him, beyond them all: Happy art thou, O Israel! who is like to thee? Deut. 33. 20. He counts God the none-such; Who is like to thee, O God? Ex. 15. 11. and Religion the best interest; Set your hearts unto all the words, I testify; for it is not a vain thing for you, for it is your life, Deut. 32. 46, 47.

Ask of Paul, and he will tell you what the fruit of sin, and driving furiously against Christ and his interest was, when the Lord Jesus came to reckon with, and to pay him off in the way to Damascus, Act. 9. 3, 4. whose blow he felt many years after, in Conscience twitches now and then, 1 Tim, 1. 13, 15. And upon the sense of that change Grace made on his heart and condition, he tells you, that whatever he counted gain before, he saw now to be loss for Christ, Phil. 3. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. There was a time when he thought his letter-knowledge, blind zeal, birthpriviledges, legal duties, popular applause, Rulers favor, and protection by Power, to be great things; but now he alters his reckoning, and values the knowledge of Christ and interest in him, and grace derived from the power of his death and resurrection, to be an excellency that stained all his former glory.

The Jailor once thought it his greatest interest to swim with the stream, and sail by the compass of the times he lived in, to run down the ways and servants of the Lord Jesus, to obey his warrant, and secure the Saints feet in his stocks, Act. 16. ver. 24, to 34. but when once Grace takes him in hand, and plucks him through the strait-gate of conscience, terrors, and repentance, into a state of regeneration, then he corrects his errors, and sees it his chiefest concern to espouse Christ, and to come over into the way of persecuted godliness; then to believe in the Lord Jesus, to be kind to his servants, and to drive the Trade of despised Christianity; he thought upon most mature consideration to be worthy of his choice and pursuit. What treasures more rich or precious (said Agerius, when a prisoner for Christ at Venice) than everlasting life? where be greater riches or dignities more honorable than in Heaven? here droppeth the delectable dew, here floweth the pleasant Nector, here runneth the sweet milk, here is plenty of all good things; I have found a nest of honey in the entrails of a Lion, in the deep, dark Dungeon; I have found a Paradise of pleasure; where others do weep, I do rejoice; when others do shake and tremble, I do find plenty of strength, and boldness; in strait Bonds, and cold Irons, I have rest: Fox, Vol. 2. pag. 181. Come to sinners also when they lie under Conscience, terrors, and the armed troops of death and hell invade their guilty hearts, and enquire their opinion concerning the goodness of their choice, the advantage of that bargain they have made, in parting with God for the World, in rejecting Christ for the Flesh, in turning their backs on holiness, for the service of sin; and their dejected countenances, their gastly looks, their unquiet jestures, their cries and groans, will soon tell you the sad resentment of their folly, and bad Trade they have driven in the ways of sin and death.

Thirdly, Nay, Reason itself rightly exercised, must needs grant, that heavenly wares are the best wares upon a fourfold consideration.

- 1 Of their Rarity.
- 2 Their Price.
- 3 Their worth.
- 4 Their Duration.

First, Heavenly things are rare, and therefore excellent; scarcity enhaunceth the price of things; Diamonds and precious stones are dear, because scarce, and more rarely had; plenty usually beats down the price of things, when rarity makes them costly; and such are Heavenly wares; they are the greatest rarity in the world; they are less known, more hardly come by, and seldomer enjoyed than anything this earth affords; there are few parts of the world where Wisdom's goods ever come: How many Countries are there where the Gospel is not known? or any sights of God, or things eternal ever had, but such as are discernible by the dini light of nature; and of those coasts which this days spring hath visited, to how few have the brightness of this light appeared? few places have the mysteries of the Gospel opened, or the deep things of God purely, fully and powerfully preached. It hath been the privilege of this Nation above many, to have a peculiar share of Gospel discoveries and truths, more spiritually and practically disclosed; and yet how few here, or in other parts, have any acquaintance with these glorious secrets? or arrive to this excellency of the knowledge of Christ, and Divine Mysteries? what a veil is there on the minds of most, under the purest administrations of the Gospel, that seeing, they see not; understanding, and yet not affected with the things they know; the spiritual beauty, and inward worth of them being hid from their eyes. Most hearers (like Balaam) see heavenly goods with eyes half opened; and hence it is they no more value and pursue them: Could these poor, beggarly, dirty things of the world, be so preferred in men's affections and embraces, and so much time consumed upon them, with neglect of God, and things above, if the worth of Wisdom's Treasures were truly known and believed? no certainly, we may without breach of charity complain, Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? Isa. 53. 1. They are rare, in that they seldom appear in their own worth and excellency to the view of men: few know and believe the worth of heavenly things.

They are also goods that few trade on. It's a rare thing to see men much vers'd about heavenly things, and to drive a trade of godliness: There are divers possibly that barter for some of Wisdom's goods, for knowledge, peace, comfort, parts, external duties, &c. but few that carry on a full trade of godliness: An Enoch, a Noah, a Caleb, a Joshua, a Job, a David, a Paul, a Barnabas; here and there one in their several ages, that are thorough with God, and universal in the duties of godliness, heart purity, godly simplicity, universal holiness, converse with God, meditation on things above, tenderness of conscience, self-denial, mortifiedness to the world, heavenly-mindedness, spiritual converses, are commodities that few deal about this day. A thorough-paced Christian is the Phoenix of the place he lives in, and more seldom seen than a sparkling Diamond in the dark night we live in; few seek these goods in earnest, as they do the world and their own things, and fewer obtain them, Phil. 2. 21. Few I fear do live in the daily exercise of their graces, the warm breathings of their souls after God and spiritual things: few that find the white stone, that live in the view of their pardons, and sensible enjoyment of divine grace; and therefore these heavenly goods are rare things, seldom discovered, seldom known, seldom pursued, seldom enjoyed; and being rare, are excellent and desirable.

Secondly, Heavenly things are the best, because the most costly; this argument will not hold in all things: men may buy their desired comforts too dear, and give more for the world, pleasures, and their particular goods, than they are worth; but none can be deceived in Wisdome's wares; the glory of God, the salvation of souls, the enjoyment of grace and spiritual blessings, cannot be too dearly obtained; their price bespeaks the greatness of their worth, they being realities and things excellent in their nature and use; and if they are valuable according to their price, they must needs be transcendent; for the purchase of them cost God dear; he hath been at the expense of eternal counsels of manifold wisdom, of unknown love, of the gift and blood of his own Son, to procure these great things for Believers; and it hath cost him mighty power and patience to fit Believers for them, and maintain their enjoyment of them: Ye are bought with a price, not with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a Lamb without blemish, and without spot. He gave himself a ransom, an equal price, sufficient to purchase Believers to himself, with grace and glory for them: He so loved the world as to give his only begotten Son, to give him to death, to the death of the Cross, to unspeakable torments, and all to procure these glorious and blessed treasures for Believers, Joh. 3. 16. O costly wares! O dear bought goods! for which the pearl of price was sold, and the treasures of Heaven emptied out.

And as these stand the purchaser dear, so they are costly to the receiver also: The preparation for an interest in these treasures, is many times dear to Believers: O the wounds and launcings, the bleeding and heart-prickings, the pangs & throws that lead the van to this banner of love, which redemption-grace spreads over saved souls; these are the stormy tempests, the bloody skirmishes, that go before the Believers reception of purchased peace: Besides, the terms on which this good bargain is offered, though infinitely beneath its worth, yet as to the souls capacity are high, it's no less than a throwing of all its former treasures over-board, a parting with its nearest interests, and dearest comforts that lie in the way of its enjoyments; a plucking out a right eye, and cutting off a right hand; a denying (O hard saying!) of a man's own beloved self; a not only bearing when laid on, but a taking up not the Cross of Christ alone, but his own Cross too, whatever his own sins, or the hand of men and Devils may make for him; and in this plight not to sit down, or stand still, but to go on and follow Christ up the hill, through thick and thin, through scorns and thorns, day and night, through every change, in every state, home to the grave: No easier terms are given to the enjoyment of these riches, than a hearty consent to these proposals, which may expose the soul to an actual loss of his earthly all, and undergoing unknown trials, troubles and duties in the way: This bargain, though blessed in itself, yet is thought so dear by some, as that they break upon these very terms, and think God, grace and glory, too chargeable for their acceptance: This then sets off the worth of heavenly things, that they cost so much upon choice, and upon the highest reason and deliberation.

Thirdly, As their price is high, so is their worth great; they are good in themselves, and good to those that have them. Hearken diligently unto me, and eat that which is good, and let your souls delight itself in fatness; earthly things are not so, if good in themselves, yet they may not be good to those that have them: Riches are snares and swords to the owners thereof, and oftentimes do pierce them thorough with many sorrows: They are not only good, but absolutely good; other things are not so; earthly things are but conditionally good, when God sees them good, and makes them good, so long as he doth bless them, and let out something of himself through them, manna, food, raiment, nether springs, are so far good as God is pleased to convey out some spiritual good thorough them, or make them some way subservient thereto; these things cannot make men happy, or prove them so.

Nebuchadnezzar's greatness could not secure him from grazing amongst the beasts, and bedding with them in open fields, and under wetting dews, Dan. 4. 33. Belshazzar's pleasures could not guard him from the hand-writing against the wall, Dan. 5. 5. Dives was in the midst of plenty and honor one day and the next in hell. These lower things are but as cisterns and pipes, that signify nothing, except some waters be conveyed through them; no more do these, unless God let out his love, and promise through them. These heavenly things are not only absolutely good, but every way good; good for every man, in every state; good for poor and rich, for young and old, for all persons, all things; Godliness is profitable for everything, 1 Tim. 4. 8. There is no person or condition, but grace and spiritual blessings are good for, and can convey good thorough: There may be such a case in which nothing of this lower world can help: Riches make them wings and profit not in the day of wrath. In times of trouble and divine wrath, instruments of music carry no sweetness in them but spiritual mercies, they help to comfort in the day of trouble: In the multitude of sad thoughts within me thy comforts refresh my soul, Psal. 94. 19.

Fourthly, Their duration proves them excellent, they are lasting wares; time works no change upon these, the Heavens will wax old, and as a vesture they shall be changed; but heavenly things never perish with the using: indeed our measures and sense of these may change, we may not always have the same degrees of grace or comfort; but this alteration is not in these things, but in us; as God; so grace and spiritual things, are in themselves the same, yesterday, today, and forever; good in prosperity, and good in adversity; good in life, and good in death: mutability mars all earthly comforts, they are things of no continuance; we may have them, but cannot hold them; like the fleeting Islands about the Tenariff, which persons see at a distance, but when they come near them, they vanish away: The things that are seen are temporal, 2 Cor. 4. 18. We may have them, (faith Seneca) but cannot possess them; and they no sooner please us, but pass from us: but unseen things are eternal: His love is everlasting; the graces of his Spirit abiding: 1 Joh. 3. 9. Whosoever is born of God sinneth not, for his seed remaineth in him: The joys of the Holy-Ghost are lasting: That my joy might remain in you: Jer. 31. 3. Joh. 15. 11. Isa. 59. 21. Heb. 10. 34. 1 Pet. 1. 4. Indeed acts of grace may fail for a time, but the habit of grace is never lost; frames, and streams of comfort may ebb, but the Fountain of Joy is never drain'd dry; Justification is immutable, Pardon of Sin is irreversible, the Saints treasures in Heaven are enduring, and can never fade away: Men may outlive their Treasures here, and see all their Portions go before them; but heavenly Interests, and immortal Souls, are of like continuance, and this greatens their value: Men estimate a little Land beyond a great Estate of uncertain continuance; and such are Wisdom's wares, there's no rotten goods among them.

Reas. 2. Secondly, The heavenly Trade is the best Trade, in regard of the Trader these Merchants deal with: Much of the comfort, safety and advantage of men's Trades, lieth in in the persons they trade with; if these be able, honest, affectionate, it conduces much to the thriving of those they deal with: What mischief comes to Traders, when Sellers are cheating, cruel, and extortioning? and when Buyers are false, and deceitful, and fail of their word? But none of these hazards can heavenly Traders be exposed to, from those they deal with: Indeed Wisdom's Merchants have to do with many, in the pursuit of their heavenly Trade, both by way of taking in, and letting out; but yet there is one great Merchant, with whom they principally deal, as to the management and issue of their whole Trade, in this Merchandise; they converse with God, Saints and Angels, but all is done through a Mediator; the Goods they receive is upon his interest; they deal with God through him; all their wisdom to trade, and rules to act by, come from him; the good and advantage of all their Trading, is secured by him; and though they may be concerned with many persons and things, (with all that duty and providence calls them too,) and, with the Chymist, are to extract some good from everything they deal with; and, like the Bee, gather Honey from weeds; yet this good they get from persons and things, is not in them, but conveyed through them from the great Purchaser with whom they deal; good from everything, to these heavenly Traders, and Heirs of Salvation is made over in the propromise; (All things shall work together for good to them that love God, and are called according to his purpose,) Rom. 8. 28. and shall in due time, through these Conduits, be emptied out to Believers, by the hand of Jesus: So that it is properly, and strictly, but with one great Merchant those Traders have to do with for the goods they lay out, or take in; all other things and persons are but ways and instruments of his appointment, through which it shall be delivered; and this makes Wisdom's Trade so good, that the advantage of it is not depending on those secondary Agents, they have to do with but upon one, that is more excellent, both great and good, able and faithful to answer both his promises, and the expectations of those that deal with him. As to his Quality, and personal Grandeur, he is above all, and over all, King of Kings, and Lord of Lord's: He hath a vesture on his thigh, whereon is written, King of Kings, and Lord of Lord's, Rev. 19. 16. He is the Majesty on high, the Glory of Heaven and Earth; he hath Angels to worship him, Thrones and Principalities under him, all creatures in Heaven and in Earth to serve him. O! how honorable is it to deal with him, to whom Kings and Potentates pay their tribute, and to whom Men and Angels yield their homage? It's taking with Men, to converse with those that are above them, and to manage concerns with Persons of Honor, and Greatness: but here's one (Souls) that offers to trade with you, from whom all creatures receive their glory.

Yea, his Goodness answers his Greatness, and sweetly tempers his personal converse for the encouragement of the meanest Soul, that hath occasions with him: Greatness without Goodness, rather checks than relieves the hopes of those that are beneath it; but such is the sweetness of Christ's nature, as that his Glory doth but render his Goodness the more amiable; and his Goodness represents his Glory the more desirable; he values no man by his own worth, nor despises any for their low estate; the meanest Soul hath as easy access to him, and as gracious a reception, as persons of highest reputation with men: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones, Isa. 57. 15. He is of a sweet and gracious temper, of a free and generous spirit, good to all, especially to those that seek him: this renders persons desirable, who would choose to deal with men of ugly natures, and churlish dispositions: affability and sweetness do strongly invite men to converse with such; and none like to Jesus for excellent goodness and loving kindness, for pity and bounty; goodness is his nature, mercy his delight; he takes pleasure in doing good; none that trade with him, but he will see them to be the better for it.

He is also able as well as good; Some men have excellent natures, but straitened capacities, they are willing to do good beyond their power; but it is not so with the Saints friend; He hath all power in Heaven and Earth, Mat. 28. 18. and can do whatever pleaseth him; he hath all creatures at his command; all the treasures of Heaven at his dispose; he is infinitely rich, and hath all that good that Souls can need or desire; he hath goods of all kinds of supply his Customers with; it is not so with men, no Merchant can furnish his Traders with everything they need; but one sells this ware, another that; here men sail to one Country for one Commodity, and to another Country for other Wares; they ransack Nature's treasures by Sea and Land, borrow something from every Nation, that hath a peculiar excellency, to make up their supplies, and furnish all their occasions, and pleasures: but the Lord Jesus hath all that in him, and at his dispose, which you need; he can supply all your wants, having all fullness dwelling in him, Phil. 4. 19. He hath that in him which your Souls want, and the command of that you need for your Bodies also: He can give you the desires of your heart, Psal. 37. 4. He is able to make all grace abound towards you, that you always, having all-sufficiency in all things, may abound in every good work, 2 Cor. 9. 8. Here's no less than five Alls, that flow from the ability of Christ to Believers; All grace abounding in them, All sufficiency enjoyed by them, All ways, in All things, for All good works: Did Souls but believe the all-sufficiency of Christ, they would not so perplex their spirits when in wants, with, what shall I eat? and with what shall I be clothed? and how shall I get this? and the other mercy I want, when all is offered to Wisdom's Merchants freely? for godliness hath the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come; and these promises are in the hand of Jesus, for all that come to God by him: All things are delivered to me of the Father, Matt. 11. 27. The Lord Jesus is not only able to give you all that you ask according to his will, having all things delivered to him for that end; but he can keep it for you, and secure it to your use: I am persuaded that he is able to keep that good thing I have committed to him, against that day, 2 Tim. 1. 12. This all-sufficiency of Christ, is argument enough to new-Covenant-federates, for a calm and quiet dependence on him, and holy walking before him, Gen. 17. 1.

And that which is exceeding pleasing to Traders also, he is faithful as well as able; he is one of his word, that makes good all his promises to a tittle, to those that by Faith deal with him: The holy one of Israel cannot lie, or alter the word that is gone out of his mouth; hath he said, and shall he not do it? hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good? Numb. 23. 19. and Rev. 1. 5. He is the faithful witness; faithful is his name. And he that sate upon the Throne was called faithful and true, Rev. 19. 11. And faithfulness is his nature, in comparison of whom every man is a liar: Let God be true, and every man a liar, Rom. 3. 4. If the Lord Jesus were not faithful to his word and undertaking, the Father would not have trusted him with all the concerns of his glory and people in the world; neither had he been a fit person for the Elect to have committed unto him their souls, and all that is dear to them: Men promise one thing and do another; affirm a thing that is not, and this undoes many, the unfaithfulness of those they deal with; but it is not so with Christ, you may trust on his fidelity; Heaven and Earth shall sooner fail, than one tittle of all that he hath spoken: And therefore excellent is that Trade which is carried on with so excellent a Jesus.

Reas. 3. Thirdly, Weigh the terms on which this Trade is offered unto souls, and it will appear to be incomparably the best Trade. For to such as will set upon this Trade,

- 1 Goods to trade upon shall be freely given.
- 2 Wisdom to manage them shall be fully imparted.
- 3 A blessing on the due improvement of them shall be ensured.
- 4 To him shall the glory of all be rendered.

First, Wisdom's wares are freely tendered to all that will receive them, without money, and without price: Come buy wine and milk without money and without price, Isa. 55. 1. To him that is a thirst will I give to drink of the waters of life freely, Rev. 21. 6. Here Merchants cannot get or put off goods at that rate; there's no going to the world's markets without money or credit; they that will have men's goods must pay for them, and many times have dealt bargains; but the Lord Jesus imparts his treasures freely, he paid dear for them, they cost his heart blood, but he spares them freely; no silver or gold will pass in those bargains. Simon Magus had his offered gold, for the Holy Ghost, thrown back with detestation and destruction to boot, Acts 8. 18, 19, 20. The terms on which this trade is driven are free; it cannot stand with the design of redemption grace, which is to advance the praise of the glory of grace, and to cut off all boasting, that every mouth may be stopped; to admit of anything from fallen man that might look like a compensation of salvation mercies; neither is there anything beneath Christ's merits, that can equalize the worth of heavenly things; and alas what have they to part with who have lost themselves? and to give to God, who have nothing but what they receive from him? It must needs therefore be altogether freely given, whatever is received in order to salvation: O blessed news to poor traders, that their poverty is no bar to this employment; the poorest may receive of Wisdom's wares, as well as the rich, seeing it is a free trade; and whatever makes a difference on the creatures part, is laid aside in the dispensation of spiritual mercies: Here are no Monopolies, or hard impositions upon this trade; no restraint from setting up, or selling out of Wisdom's goods, in any parts of the world. Cities have their enclosures, Corporations their bars to keep out strangers from their privileges; but in this trade all persons, be they who they will that will come over to Wisdom's Merchandise, have right to carry on this work of godliness in all places where ever they are. The heavenly trade is a free trade, goods freely given, and liberty to set up in all places, and to all persons.

Secondly, As goods to trade upon are freely given; so wisdom to manage them shall be fully imparted: This is a privilege which sellers on earth will not afford; you may have their goods at their price, but not instructions how to dispose them to your advantage; but this great Merchant in Heaven, with his wares, gives skill to use them: I am the Lord thy God which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way thou shouldst go, Isa. 48. 17. If thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasure, then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God: For the Lord giveth wisdom, out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding: He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous. Then shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea every good path, Prov. 2. 4, 5, 6, 9. The soul that seeketh for Wisdom's wares, shall with it find instruction how to use them: I will instruct thee, and teach thee in the way which thou shouldst go; I will guide thee with my eyes, Psal. 32. 8. He will be eyes to the blind, and feet to the lame, Job 29. 15. The Lord Jesus will find all in this heavenly trade, goods, and tools, and skill, and strength, and all: Surely shall one say, in the Lord have I righteousness and strength.

Thirdly, A blessing on the due improvement of these shall be ensured to all his traders: The wayfaring man shall not err, Isa. 35. 8. His workmen shall not labor in vain, 1 Cor. 15. 58. For his blessing is upon his people, Psal. 3. 8. Thou shalt decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee, and the light shall shine upon thy ways, Job 22. 28. The book of the Law shall not depart out of thy mouth, but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein, (this is the heavenly trade, to fulfill after God, and such shall prosper,) for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success, Josh. 1. 8. No

Merchant will undertake to make their dealers prosperous; they must trade at great uncertainties, and run the adventure as to the issue of all: Blessings come not out of earthly shops, but from a divine hand, let come what will in the way: Blessings will surely come at the end to those that cast out at Christ's bidding, and trade by his instruction in Wisdom's Merchandise, let men curse, let devils vex, let North-winds blow, and blow down too their earthly comforts, yet God will bless them that fear him, everyone, Psal. 115. 13. He will bless them in life, and bless them in death; and is not this good trading, to be sure of blessings in the way, and blessedness at the end? 1 Pet. 1. 9.

Fourthly, Another Condition in this Trade is, That God shall have all the glory, but they that trade with and for him shall have all the good that comes by it: This is the head Rent which the great Lord reserves to himself, and will not part with to another: My glory will I not give to another, Isa. 48. 11. This is his great design in all works of his hands, and gifts of grace, that he may be glorified: The people shall be all righteous, the branch of my planting, the work of my hand, that I may be glorified. This is God's great end in bestowing redemption mercies, to have all the glory to himself, who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will, that we should be to the praise of his glory, Ephes. 1. 12. Christians, the Rent must be the Lord's, the fruit shall be yours: Whose keepeth the fig-tree shall eat the fruit thereof, Prov. 27. 18. All the sweetness of the Vine is for those that possess it, and the herbs of the earth for them by whom it is dressed, Judge. 9. 13. Heb. 6. 7. The righteous shall eat the fruit of his doings, Isa. 3. 10. The present comforts of holiness are not mean; Great peace have they that love thy Law, and nothing shall offend them, Psal. 119. 165. Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace. Religion is the most pleasant trade; no delights like those that are in God, and fetched from him: God gives the world the bones, and keeps the marrow for his laborers; the godly feed on the wheat, the wicked have but the bran; look whatever good, comfort, credit and happiness Religion can afford here, and to all eternity, is their part that trade upon it: Who planteth a Vineyard, and eateth not the fruit thereof, 1 Cor. 7. 9.

Reas. 4. Lastly, The Heavenly Trade must needs be the best trade, because it is the most profitable trade: The advantage that comes by godliness, makes it the best employment in the world. We use to say, three things make traders rich, all which are found in the way of godliness.

- 1 Great Returns.
- 2 Sure Returns.
- 3 Quick Returns.

Now nothing turns to more account than a thorough pursuit of piety; whatever men think, Religion is the most thriving way, in regard of the

- Excellent Fruit of it.
- Abundant Fruit of it.

- Durable Fruit of it.

First, Great returns will soon make traders rich, when the time and labor they expend is abundantly compensated, and the things they part with, bring in far better: so is it with this heavenly trade; there is no proportion in their adventures to their returns: their duties are poor imperfect things; when they have done all, they are unprofitable servants, but their reward is great and glorious; their afflictions light and momentary, but the issue, a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, 1 Cor. 4. 18. It's great profit indeed, when some weak works of faith, and labors of love, a little patience, obedience and duty for a time, shall be rewarded with eternal rest, pleasure and glory: there is no equality between the race and price, this striving and crowning: What's a cup of cold water, to a river of pleasures? a Crown of thorns, to a Crown of Glory? the worlds srowns, to divine smiles? conscience-troubles, to the consolations of God? a few tears, fears, watchings, faintings, duties, afflictions, to the joys of the Lord into which they shall forever enter?

It's a great bargain to part with base things, for excellent; beastly lusts, for the beauties of holiness; an unclean, for a clean heart; vile affections, for virtuous dispositions; filthy rags, for fair garments; a body of death, for a spirit of life. To let go the world for God, fellowship with devils, for communion with Christ, to lose guilt, and to gain righteousness; to escape Hell, to obtain Heaven; this is great gain. To swap away old things, for new; rotten things, for sound; hypocrisy, for sincerity; lies, for truth, is a good bargain. To exchange empty things, for satisfying; things that are not, for things that are; goods that perish with the using, for things that wax not old; fading trifles, for eternal treasures, is a thriving trade indeed; and such are the incomes of this Heavenly Trade, they are incomparably great and excellent; there's nothing mean, no low price goods, that Wisdom's Merchants deal about; all their riches are pleasant and precious: By knowledge shall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant riches; precious faith, precious promises, the precious blood of Christ, precious thoughts of God, are some of this precious substance heavenly Traders meet with in the way of holiness. Besides, this pursuit of godliness enters souls into an acquaintance and converse with God, and helps them to keep an intercourse with Heaven, and to maintain a life above and beyond the reach of all others; and is not this advantage?

Religion also helps men to blessed experiences of the love, power, greatness and faithfulness of God; and this constant employment about heavenly things, makes the way pleasant and delightful, and fills the soul with much contentment with its lot in the world, whatever the trials, losses and sufferings may be that they are exposed to. Also the driving this Heavenly Trade secures the good and comfort of all their other interests, and sweetens their portion, whether more or less that Sovereign pleasure allots them in the world, bringing all their concerns under divine care and promise for their good, comfort and sufficient supply in their passage home: And are not all these great returns? enough to make the Heavenly Trade the greatest interest and advantage beyond all others in the world.

Secondly, Sure returns make Traders rich: Merchants that drive gainful trades, count if one Adventure to two or three come safely home, they get well: but all regular Adventures in this Heavenly Trade are secured; Their labor shall not be in vain in the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. 58. not one of their sincere attempts in the way of God shall miscarry; never a pious duty lost; all their sowings to the spirit shall surely spring up into a blessed harvest, Gal. 6. 6. Though they sow in tears, yet they shall reap in joy Psal. 126. 5, 6. Though they go forth weeping, yet if they bear precious seed, they shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them: God is not unrighteous to forget their work and labor of love shewn towards his Name, Heb. 6. 10. God is engaged in justice to see the Adventures of Believers safely returned into their harbor; he hath promised it, and cannot be unfaithful; neither doth it consist with his honor, to put Believers on an unprofitable service: He never said to the house of Jacob, Seek ye me in vain, Isa. 45. 19. Ingenuous men love to see their servants thrive: Will Christ, think you, let his laborers be losers? their works shall surely follow them into their rest, Rev. 14. 13. how ever they may be out of sight in their passage towards it, seeing God's Word lies at stake for it.

The blood of Christ stands engaged also for the safe returns of the Saints Adventures, that are according to the will of God; their religious labors are part of the travel of his soul, which he must see secured, and they are the pleasure of the Lord, which must prosper in his hand, Isa. 53. 10, 11. He is become a Surety for them unto God, and a Surety for the Father unto them: By so much was Jesus made a Surety of a better testament, Heb. 7. 22. The Covenant is called here a Testament, as relating to the Saints privileges and interests, which by that Covenant becomes due to them, and shall be surely made good to them upon the account of Christ's Suretyship for it; He is the Surety of this Testament or Covenant, and every promise of it; one of which is, That what they sow to the Spirit, they shall reap in glory; their labor shall not be in vain: and to make all the promises good both the condition and blessing to the foederates of this new-Covenant, hath the Lord Jesus laid down his precious Blood, which cannot be lost, Heb. 9. 15. but it would be cast away, could Believers religious duties be in vain.

Another thing that secures the Saints advantages by this heavenly Trade, is this; that their trading is the work and product of his own Spirit; their duties are his work: Thou hast wrought all our works in us, Isa. 26. 22. It is God that worketh in you to will and to do, according to his good pleasure, Phil. 2. 13. Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything of ourselves, but our sufficiency is of God, 2 Col. 3. 5. They are his workmanship, created to good works, Eph. 2. 10. by whose influence they are acted, and let by the Spirit of God, Rom. 8. 14. So that further than the spirit of the living creatures move, their wheels cannot move, nor do anything graciously, further than their works are wrought of God, and by God, Joh. 3. 21. So that Believers labors in this heavenly Trade, are the work of the eternal Spirit; and should their work be lost, the Spirit of God would labor in vain, and his work cast away; which cannot be, Isa. 45. 18.

Lastly The Lord Jesus is an adventurer with them, his Glory and Kingdom is concerned in this heavenly Trade; when his Will is done, his Kingdom is come, Mat. 6. 10. and 1 Thes. 4. 3. Holiness is his will, and a conformity to his Law, and he is engaged to the Father, for the Saints holiness and happiness; for their grace and glory; As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him, Jo. 17. 2, 12. The Father hath put all Believers into the hands of Christ, and entrusted him with their graces and glory, both which are included in eternal life: ver. 3. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, &c. that is, this is the way to life eternal, and the beginning of life eternal, even the grace of Faith, and saving knowledge of God: and this grace, as well as glory, is put into the hand of Christ for Believers, to be kept for them; and they are also put into his hand, to be kept by him through it unto glory: and in pursuance of this trust, the Lord Jesus is engaged, to keep his people, their graces, and the reward of them, for them, that they be not lost; the advantages of this heavenly Trade, are secured to Believers by the Lord Jesus, his adventure with them, his truth, faithfulness, and glory, is concerned in their safety: so that their returns are not only great, but sure.

Thirdly, Quick returns, if great, are greatly enriching: Hence comes that Proverb, that light gain makes a heavy purse, it brings great custom, and that occasions quick returns: Now, no Trade brings quicker returns than the heavenly Trade: Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, Rev. 22. 12. The Lord Jesus not only makes good, but quick payment; as soon as the work is done, he promiseth to make good his word: Call upon me in the day of trouble; and I will deliver thee, Psal. 50. 15. Nay, the Lord Jesus sometimes pays beforehand: And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and whiles they are speaking, I will hear, Is. 65. 24. Men many times are forced to stay for their Mony and sometimes lose it at last; but the Believers gain is not only sure, but speedy.

Obj. What's the reason then, the people of God do complain of God's not hearing, and deferring an answer to their requests? And why are Believers advised to patience, and long-suffering, after they have done the will of God, if the return of their Faith and Duties were so quick? This is the experience, and complaint of the people of God in all ages, that God seems not to regard their Prayers, and to delay his coming to help them.

Sol. 1. First, yet are the Saints returns quick; because they are in due time; God never delays to perform his word, when the Believer hath need of it; in the needful time of trouble, he will surely hear; My God shall supply all your wants, Phil. 4. 19. When once the Soul comes to stand in real want, then God will surely pay him; When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the Lord will hear them, Isa. 40. 17. When once they come to be needy, then God will with-hold no longer, but will help; this he hath promised, they shall not want any good thing, Psal. 34. 10.

Secondly, If the Lord do not pay presently, he will give use for it, they shall lose nothing by forbearance; But when he comes, he will bring his reward with him, Isa. 40. 10. Not only a reward of his work done by them, but a reward of their patient waiting for his promises also, their mercy shall be so much the sweeter, for their want of it, and waiting for it. O! how welcome are long looked for mercies, when they come, then is every mercy double; God tried Job long by with-holding mercy, but see the end of Job; God paid double for what he took, and withheld from him, Job 42. 10. Returns are sure always in the needful and seasonable time; and if God delays, he will pay well for it.

To which I might add this also; Many times Wisdom's Merchants are the cause of these delays, by their unfaithfulness in their trade, or their unfitness for their returns: The diligent hand makes rich, Prov. 10. 4. Souls that are active and faithful in the whole of Religion, shall have no cause to complain of God's slack payment.

So much by way of demonstration of the point, That the Heavenly Trade is the best Trade; no Merchandise like Wisdom's Merchandise.

Now, to come to some improvement of the Point.

USE I.

First, If the heavenly Trade be the best Trade, then it's strange that so few do set upon this Trade; persons that are to enter upon some course of life, and would fain live in the World, are willing to take the best Trade that is attainable by them, if they can but reach it, and have wherewithal to carry it on: who would spend his time and strength in low, sordid and mechanick services, which cannot maintain, or enrich him; if a brave, generous and wealthy Calling did offer itself, and might be compassed? and yet such is the folly of most under the Gospel, who are ready to choose anything but Godliness, and to fall in with every proposal for their employment, rather than to engage about the work of Salvation: Men are wise in their generation, and know in other things how to choose the best bargains, only in the things of their Souls are foolish, and can be content to pursue shadows, and let go the substance; to lay out all their desires, hopes and labors about a life that perisheth, neglecting the vast concerns of another World, and the welfare of their immortals Souls: Is not this folly? Poor Sinners, let me reason a little with you, if possible to recover your lost understanding: come, be your own judges; Is it your interest (think you) to adventure your All, for things that cannot abide with you when obtained, nor satisfy you if they stay? things that can but bring you to your Grave, and accompany your bodies to the House of Mourning, and there leave you; unless they show you the way to Hell also. Is it not madness to adventure your Souls for a trade, pleasures and treasures of so short continuance, and little advantage? things that you will shortly be as weary of, as now desirous; and throw them to the Bats and Moles of the Earth, that you may go into the Rocks to hide you from the fury of a Sin-avenging God? Will you spend all upon time, and lay up nothing for eternity? Or, is it rational to think that you should reap where you never sowed, and possess the benefit of that Trade you never drove? Gal. 6. 7, 8. Can you think to reach Heaven hereafter, and never walk one foot in the way to it here? Certainly, what men sow, that they shall reap: Can you imagine the things of Heaven to be so cheap, as to be had without looking after? Alas, things far inferior cannot be so easily obtained; it may cost some of you many tuggings, much sweat, labor and expense to get but a little of this World; and do you think to find this tried Gold without buying, and digging for it? and is it a wise bargain (think you) to purchase your desirable Comforts with the loss of your Souls? and that you may gain but a little of the World, to part with a possibility of having Heaven? What will it profit you to get the World, (were you sure of every part of it) and to lose your Souls? Mat. 16. 26. And what if you miss of your hopes in this, and fall short of Heaven too? never have what you looked for on Earth, nor a place in Heaven neither; will not your case be then dreadful? O! foolish Souls! that may be happy, but will not; that may get into such a course of life as would enrich you here, and forever; but refuse it, preferring a poor beggarly life before a rich and noble state; choosing rather to trade with Devils than God; to swap away your delightful time, for doleful eternity; your salvationprizes, swinish pleasures. O sad exchange for! to be bewailed, but not remedied: What? to barter away strength for weakness; desires for emptiness; labors for vanity; hope for despair; precious souls for perishing shadows; an open door of grace for a shut door of glory; mercy for misery; earth for hell? O fools in grain! to let go such a bargain, as being had, would forever make you; and being lost, may never be regained; but in the room of it, an eternity to repent your time of folly; when tears and cries will be too late, when mercy shall have no repentings for you, bowels themselves no roulings over you, nor everlasting arms any help for you, Mat. 25. 10. This is your danger, (Sinners,) this may be your case, who refuse wisdom's counsels, choosing death rather than life: you that would have none of Wisdom's wares, nor work; but have rather valued the Devil's Counters, before Christ's Gold; and the pleasures of sin, that are but for a season, before the treasures of grace and glory, that are eternal; walking after the flesh, and serving divers lusts, till your trading time for Heaven be almost over. Alas, Sinners, there may be, for anything you know, but few Merchandising hours left for you in this World; it may be scarce a Sabbath more between some of you, and hell: in what a case then are you like to be, who never set upon this heavenly Trade to this very day? and should you now go out of this World strangers to this employment, in what a doleful state will your Souls be forever? when you come to possess the eternal fruit of your bad bargain, then could any lay their ears to Hell gates, and listen at your cries, they would hear such language as this from your trembling lips, Folly, Folly, Woe, Woe, Eternity, Eternity.

USE II.

Secondly, This calls to mourning over the great decays of this Heavenly Trade, in the times and places wherein we live: Loss of Trade is easily resented as an evil case, a matter of trouble. Men use to be affected with hard times, when a death lies on their interests, and their earthly concerns are at a loss; and this is the case of most men this day; all places are full of complaints about their affairs in the world; there's a moth in men's labors and dealings, and it is easily seen and felt; the heavy looks, and heartless carriages of many, do plainly demonstrate a sense of their temporal wastes, and their mouths vent such-language: The times are hard, and the trade of the Nation gone: But alas! where are the mourners of Zion? and who is afflicted at the decays of godliness, and death on this Heavenly Trade? Though there is nothing more visible and lamentable than the falling back in Religion; yet who lays it to heart? and who is rightly affected with this important evil?

Now towards the cure of this insensibleness, and to awaken our hearts to a due apprehensiveness of our evil case, by reason of the decays of godliness; I shall

- 1 Lay down some symptoms evidencing it to be our case, that there are real and great decays of this Heavenly Trade in the time and places wherein we live.
- 2 Shew why this should be for a lamentation.

First, That this Heavenly Trade goes back and decays, is so evident, that he is a stranger in our Israel, and hath too much of a spirit unconcerned in these matters, who doth not plainly see Religion, and the power of Godliness dying and languishing in most places and persons. Now the better to evince this sad truth, I shall proceed in a plain and familiar method, keeping to the metaphor in the text, and the usual symptoms of decay'd Trading.

Six things usually show the decays of earthly Trading, all which are conclusive of the point in hand, and discover bad times for piety, and great wastes of Religion.

First, When the price of things is much fallen, and the rates very low, and goods are worth little or nothing; then men say, it's bad trading: So is it now in this Heavenly Trade; the rate and value of divine things is much abated; Wisdom's goods seem little worth to many: There was a time when Heavenly Wares were highly prized; the Word of God was precious to souls, far better to Saints than thousands of gold and silver; they could have parted with all the world, to enjoy God in Ordinances: estate, ease, credit, were nothing to a place in God's house; and one view of his countenance was better than life: Oh how sweet were the words of his mouth? much sweeter than the honey and honey-comb: Men could let their own ploughs stand still, to set their hands to God's plough; with Mary, they could neglect any business to sit at Christ's feet, Luke 10. 39. leave their appointed food, and most pleasant delicacies, for one draught of Sanctuary-waters; yea but for one sip of divine sweetness, they could break their rest, leave all for Christ's company; bear frowns, threatenings, losses, sufferings, with wonderful ease, for some fellowship with God and his people; they would not lose a praying or hearing hour, whatever it cost them; they would stick at no hardships; price should never break between Christ and them; subscribe any terms, and count it a cheap bargain too, if at any rate they might obtain grace, and some spiritual good to their souls. But alas! now the case is altered; few will bid much for the precious things of Zion; even they that could have plucked out their eyes, and have given them to the Messengers of Christ, now think it too dear to pluck their hands out of their bosoms to open the door to Christ himself: Now soulpriviledges are worth little or nothing; Sermons, society of Saints are scarce counted worth the parting with a little time, ease, business, or friend, to enjoy them. A shop, a market, is better than the solemn Meeting with most: few can step over a straw, and forbear to gather a little stubble, though it be to get the unsearchable treasure of Christ: This is the sad temper of most Professors this day, they have lost their estimation of Christ and spiritual things; they do not value (let men talk what they will) God, above the world; Christ, above rest; one day in his Courts, above a thousand elsewhere; his precious Word, above their appointed food: most think it more adviseable to take seasons for the world, than for Heaven; rather to baulk many Sermons, than lose a little profit and opportunity, though but of very small advantage in the world: Men are full, and rich, and have goods enough; they think they know enough already; have heard enough, prayed enough; they feel no want of, nor see worth in spiritual things; and therefore offer so little for soul-advantages; and this bespeaks manifestly the decay of this Heavenly Trade.

Secondly, Fewness of buyers argues bad trading: Among men, when Chapmen are scarce, few take off any goods; wares lie on men's hands, and will not off; then men say, Trade is fallen:

Thus it is in this Heavenly Trade; there are few buyers of Wisdom's Wares; choice goods lie on sellers hands, and will not off; may not the Lord Jesus complain as formerly Wisdom did, Prov. 1. 24. I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hands, and no man regarded; you have set at naught all my counsels, and would have none of my reproof. And as the Servants of God in the parable, Mat. 11. 17. We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned, and ye have not lamented. Markets are full in many places; the Lord Jesus hath much goods exposed to sale, and there are many Chapmen, but few buyers; persons come to Religious Assemblies and Sermons, as many do to Fairs, to see, and be seen; to gaze on goods, but not to buy; few will take Christ's wares on his own terms, and come up to the selling-price; God, grace and glory, are too dear for many men's money; they like some goods, but the price is too high; some could be content to have Christ; but to deny themselves, take up their Cross, leave all, and follow Christ; that they think is too dear, and break for price, Mat. 16. 24. Heaven is desirable at last, but the world at present; they could be content to take Heaven in reversion, when the lease of their worldly interests is expired; and to receive their portion there, when all is gone here; but to trade above now, and transport their earthly treasures to Heaven, while they enjoy them on earth, that's too hard for them; such goods, such overtures will not off; persons will not receive the Word of God as the Word of God; they will not take threatenings to fear them, warnings to regard them, promises to believe them, precepts to obey them. May not most Ministers complain, Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? Isa. 53. 1. Most like and commend sermons, but few receive and obey them; it's lamentable to consider how little of a Sermon is carried away, remembered and practiced: This is the sin of Professors, and some that pass for more than ordinary, and yet are guilty of this careless, forgetful and unprofitable hearing; persons entertain truths, as they do their acquaintance; when they meet them on the way, shake hands and embrace them; be exceeding glad to see them, and then bid them farewell; that's the reason the Lord Jesus carries back so much goods from Markets; his wares will not off; men buy not: And hence it is also that Christ turns back their duties; he will not receive the goods of such neither, and this makes bad trading for Heaven.

Thirdly, Want of employment is a sign of bad trading: When Trade is good, every man's hand is full of work; but when men are out of employment, and have nothing to set their hand to, but stand idle in the Market-place, this shows a decay of Trade: And is it not so with Wisdom's Laborers now? Persons professing God were once active in Religion, but are now grown slothful in spiritual business. Where are the works of faith, the labors of love, the fruits of the spirit among Christians this day? who is fervent in spirit? Ephes. 6. 18. who strives in prayer, watching thereunto with all perseverance? Joh. 6. 27. where are they that labor even unto weariness for the bread that endures? Heb. 12. 1. running even unto fainting in the race that is set before them? Rev. 7. 15. Serving God day and night in his Temple, and being diligent that they may be found of him in peace, 2 Pet. 3. 14. What Pharaoh charged on the Hebrews, when attempting liberty to serve God, may be with much more justice reflected on those that profess to serve God; and though they may, yet do not: Ye are Idle, ye are Idle: and hence it is men's hearts go a whoring after the world, and the flesh, with the lusts thereof; it is because they are slothful in spirit; a death is upon their hearts, and this causeth the work of God to cease, Neh. 4. 11. It is but little work most do for God this day; how cold, dead, formal, slighty, are many in duty, doing the work of God deceitfully, their own consciences being Judges? Jer. 48. 10. few labor with their hearts before they come to hear, in hearing, and after hearing, to get some soul-good by it: Men are usually pleased with a Lamp, though there be no oil in it; cannot be contented without some duty, but well pleased with bare duty: To be nothing in Religion troubles them; but to be something, though never so little, satisfieth them: and if this be Popery to rest in the work done, how many Papists have we amongst us this day? Certainly Professors are generally asleep, or slumbering; they do their work so badly and heartlessly, their work falls out of their hand, as things do from men asleep; active for the world, as if they could never do enough; but soon tyr'd in the work of God; dispatch but little of heavenly work from day today, from one Sabbath to another; little heart-searching, soul-watching work is done; little in-door employment is carried on; the exercise of faith, hope, humility, patience, zeal, self-denial, seems a stranger to a great many this day; not for want of occasions or encouragements to work, (the Lord is still calling upon his Laborers to make haste) but for want of hearts to work: And this spiritual sloth proves that the Heavenly Trade is much lost.

Fourthly, The poverty of Traders plainly shows Trading is not good; when a Trade doth not maintain the Trader, but he still goes back, and becomes poorer, then surely trading is not good: The diligent hand makes rich, Prov. 10. 4. When trading is good Traders usually thrive, and live well upon it, but when they waste and become poor, then trading decays: So is it with Heavenly Traders, when they drive a good Trade for Heaven they grow rich apace towards God, and in their own souls: Wisdom's wares are soul-enriching wares: My fruit is better than gold, yea than fine gold, and my revenue than choice silver, Prov. 8. 19. Men account those to be rich who have much of gold and silver; but Wisdom's fruit is better than gold, and therefore must needs be enriching: they that have this gold cannot be poor: Hence it is Christ counsels Laodicea to buy of him gold tried in the fire, that she might be rich, Rev. 3. 1. But alas how poor in spirituals are persons generally this day! Therefore I said, Sur lie these are poor, they are foolish, for they know not the way of the Lord, nor the judgment of their God, Jer. 5. 4. Unacquaintedness with the way of God, when men walk wide from Religion, and lose their strict and close walking with God, they soon become poor and foolish: And this is the case of many everywhere; they give a carnal liberty to themselves, and indulge a freedom to walk after the fight of their own eyes, and not by rule; and where this is, there is soulpoverty, which is too visible in most this day. Christians, do but observe your own hearts and others, and you will find this spiritual poverty abounding everywhere. Little thrivings appear under the best of means, choicest Privileges do little more than keep up a name to live; they convey but little quickenings to the soul: A show of Religion, and a mere skeleton of profession, is the common fruit of Ordinances in most places, whereas all the while decays are on the vitals of Christianity; abatements in grace appear every day, and a visible alteration in the whole frame, and internal vigor of the soul, faith, love, humility, patience, self-denial, and every grace becomes weaker every day; Former days were better than now, Eccles. 7. 10. Speak Christian, are not matters worse with thy soul, than they were? and abatements appear in every part.

There was a time when thy mind was beam'd over with Divine Light; the Candle of the Lord did shine in thy tabernacle: Thy eye was quick to discern good and evil; thou couldest once see an excellency in the knowledge of Christ; O how choice were sermons! privileges were to thee the uncasking of Jewels, and the opening of hidden glory; thou didst dwell in the Land of Visions, and still some new discoveries of light and grace did meet thee in thy affectionate attendance upon God. But now it is not so; thy Candle burns dimly, and thy right eye is darkened; now thou seest but little beauty in grace, or desireableness in truth: things under thy feet the other day, that seemed nothing compared with Christ; now through the multiplying-glass of thy deceived mind, seem great and lovely.

Formerly thy affections were warm and lively after God, his word and ways: O! how precious were his appointed Feasts, and his Tabernacles amiable? thou couldst delight in approaching to God, and talk of a blessedness in his presence. O the pleasure, sweetness and joy thy heart did find in thy Closet, in spiritual Converses, and Duties, and public Ordinances! thou couldst weep over sin, and bedew thy prayers with tears, and find thy heart burn within thee while Christ was speaking, and melted under the warm beams of divine love. But, alas, now it is not so; now thy affections are dead, thy heart as cold as a stone; all the while thou art speaking to God in Prayer, or God speaking to thee in his Word, thou findest no more savor in Ordinances, Duties, and Christian Converses, than in the white of an Egg, Job. 6. 16. Thou findest not that delight in God as formerly, and the night of thy pleasure is turned to fear unto thee, Isa. 21. 4. This is Soul-poverty.

Again, there was a time also, when thy Will, like the great Wheel in the Clock, could move regularly after God; thou couldst choose God for thy chiefest interest, and Christ for thy only treasure; preferring an interest in him above ten thousand Worlds: thou couldst have voted for communion with God, before thy meat and drink; and one hours fellowship with Christ, beyond all the delights on Earth: thou couldst choose the things that please God, and deny thy own pleasure to give content to him: thou couldst once stick to thy first choice, and find the purpose of thy heart cleaving to God, Act. 11. 23. Thou couldst once resolve, and keep thy resolutions; 'twas easier to take thy heart out of thy body, than to gain thy consent to part with Christ, his presence and ways. But now thy will is hardly drawn after pure and constant enjoyments of God in his ways: O! how difficult a thing is it to persuade thy will to let go all for Christ, to leave everything to attend on God, to part with the world and self to wait on God, to throw all over-board to take in Christ! How hard is it now, to consent that Christ shall have all the command of thy Soul, and dispose of thy dearest interests! now thou findest it a work above thee, to keep thy heart in order one hour, or to perform the purposes of thy Soul to God and Godliness; thou resolvest, and changest every day; thou vowest, and breakest thy vows continually; there is no stedfastness in thy spirit: this also bespeaks thy Soul-poverty.

There was a time also when thy Conscience was tender, thy heart could smite thee for the least sin; thy Conscience could hold thee to the greatest duty, and bind thee to thy good behavior: thou couldest not go against the light and checks of thy regulated Conscience, were it to gain the whole World. But now 'tis dead and quiet, it can bear the sharpest strokes of the two edged Sword, and not feel it, or bleed; it makes little or no bones of sin against knowledge, and mercy; sins that were before troublesome, now go down easily; it can digest threatenings and terrors with little trouble, and sleep while the arrows of the Lord's wrath fly about its ears; it can let go mercies without regarding, and truths to pass away without entertainment: this is Soulpoverty.

This thou canst say too, there was formerly an activity in thy Soul for God, and the spring of thy heart was strong, and it set every wheel a going: thou couldst run, and not be weary; walk, and not be faint: no religious duty was tiresome to thee; no commands of God were grievous, 1 Joh. 5. 3. no journeys seemed long that led to God, nor Sermons tedious that spake of God: thy spirit was all life, when in holy company, and work: did any say, Come, let us go up to the mountain of the house of the Lord, Zech. 8. 21. thou wouldst say, I will go also: If God did but say, Seek thou my face, Psal. 27. 8. thy heart would presently answer, thy face, Lord, will I seek. But now a deadness seizeth upon thee, and slothfulness gathers in over thy whole Soul: thou art soon weary of well-doing, and canst not hold out with God in conflicts and difficulties, as heretofore: thou art not so diligent to prepare thy meat in Summer, Prov. 30. 25. nor to lay in provision for a Winter spending-season: thou turnest on thy bed as a door on its hinges, and takest little pains with thy heart and conversation: thou lovest many an opportunity and advantage for thy Soul through thy deadness and indisposition to good works: And doth not this bespeak Soul-languishing, and poverty?

There are decays and poverty in thy life also, as well as spirit: how unprofitable is now thy conversation, to what it was? there was a time when thy bow did abide in strength, thy lips did disperse knowledge, Prov. 15. 7. thy steps did drop fatness: it was good to be in thy company, few came from thee but were bettered. But, alas! now, how dwindling is thy light? how jejune and sapless is thy converse? thy company little lovely, thy communications little profitable; thy words eat as doth a Canker, it sears as a hot Iron, and deadens those that hear it; thy breath freezes all that come hear it, so unprofitable a burden is thy company. We turn all Religion (saith one) into a discourse, censure or dispute: We can eat, and drink, and talk, and sin as freely. This is a sad case indeed, and bespeaks great decays of godliness, when persons become more poor, and impotent in their Souls.

Fifthly, Small adventures in Traders, do usually bespeak bad Trading; when times are hard, and Goods go not off, Sellers buy but little, and drive a less Trade when improvements fail; men are loath to adventure the principal, but presently contract their Trade, and lessen their dealings. So 'tis in this spiritual Trade, when Souls begin to decay in it, and Trading is bad, they narrow up their Trade, and lay out less of their heart and strength about it; little of their Soul goes out after God, and things above; they cannot adventure for God, as formerly; nor spare time for prayer, hearing, reading, holy conference, as once they could; the stream of their affections begins to run another way; now they are all for the world, self, and vanity; business and interest eats up all their time; or at least, they say to Christ, as David did to Mephibosheth, (Thou and Zibah divide the Land;) So, thou and the world, thou and pleasures, thou and reputation divide my heart, time and strength: this is too evident; God hath not so much of men's hearts, desires, love, delight, faith, hope, zeal, as heretofore: 'tis low waters all the year long with many; no heart to duty, as the Prophet complains; Whoredom and Wine take away the heart, Hos. 4. 11. So lust, sloth, the world, and self, take away the heart; few breathings after God, when absent; or delight, when present; indisposed to duty, cold, formal in duty; put off God with anything; keep the best of the flock, the prime of their strength for themselves and the world; and turn off the Lord with a corrupt thing, the residue of their wasted affections and strength, Mal. 1. 14.

Sixthly, Breaking shows bad Trading, when men can hold it no longer, but are forced to give over; they go back, and waste so fast, that at last they shut up shop, and are gone. The times we live in are a manifest instance of this truth; men breaking ever and anon, now one, then another; declares plainly Trading is bad. And thus 'tis with Wisdom's Merchants this day; how many that have driven a brave trade of Profession, made a great show of Religion, were famous in their generation for Parts, and seeming Piety; but are now come to nothing, quite fallen and gone; great apostasies from the truth, sad shipwracks of Faith and Conscience can these late times speak of! Men that seemed like Stars, to give a blaze for a while, and then turned to falling Meteors at last: or, with the Sun, that riseth in a splendor, and sets in a cloud: The visible apostasy, and gross debauchery of men professing God in these latter times, is great; but the secret degeneracy, and backslidings of heart, are much more: many break, but more do warp. 'Tis far easier to observe, than to be affected with men's great declensions in Religion; some in principle, but most in practice; some with the fallen Angels have left their habitation, and fallen from their first state; others fault in their profession, and are fallen in their station: some with stormy winds are shaken down; others fully ripe, and gotten to the height of their profession, loosen by degrees, and drop away: some fall from the tree, others rot where they hang; some trees have lost their fruit, others their very leaves, and are become twice dead: where can you cast your eye, and not see fallings away either from Faith, or faithfulness? Men take up notions, and as easily leave them; most build upon the sand, little rootings in the truth: how easy is it to draw men from their opinions? little stedfastness in love: how soon doth the labors thereof cease? a little trouble makes men let go their profession, others lose their strictness in Religion, and grow more remiss and lame in duty, leaving their first love, and close walks with God's: And are not these such manifest symptoms of decaying godliness, that he who runs may read, and see that the Heavenly Trade is almost come to nothing this day?

2 And this is cause of mourning, and to be greatly laid to heart; who can see these things and not be affected: If there be any quick flesh, how can it but bleed? if any waters are left, surely our eyes should run down tears, and we pour out waters in Mispah before the Lord abundantly, for wasting, gasping piety, that is even giving up the ghost: For where this Heavenly Trade decays,

First, There is a growing strangeness between God and such souls: While Trade is kept up among men, there is much acquaintance, converse and intimacy between them; there are ever and anon occasions of writings, meetings and discourses while trading holds; but when once that is let down, then communion ceaseth; they have little business one to another; no more letters pass, or visits given; seldom see one another, and so at last grow out of acquaintance with each other: And thus 'tis between God and souls; when once this Heavenly Trade is let down, a strangeness begins between God and them, they are seldomer in his company, neither are there such enquiries after God as before: There is none that calleth upon thy Name, that stirreth up himself to take hold of thee; for thou hast hid thy face from us, and hast consumed us because of our iniquities, Isa. 64. 7. They were strange to God, they did not call upon him as they use to do; and if they did, it was in such a general, cold way, that it signified little; they did not take hold of him: The word signifieth, To hold with all their strength, as men do that are drowning that will not let go what they hold: it signifies also (says a Learned Critick) not only to hold a thing, but faster and faster to wax strong in the holding it: But alas! they did not so take hold of God, as such who were like to perish without him: They did not stir up themselves: They did not waken and rouse up themselves: (as the word imports) They were grown more remiss in duty; they did not strive with God for help as they did: And God was strange to them; he hid his face from them; he concealed himself, that he might not be seen, (as the word signifies) he seems not to care for their company: This made the Prophet cry out, Why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the Land, and as a wayfaring man, who turneth aside to tarry but for a night? Jer. 14. 18. Seldom visits, and short stays, shows strangeness in them that have been intimate; and so 'tis between God and such who neglect this Heavenly Trade; the Lord seldom visits them, nor hath such warm converses with them as before: And is not this cause of mourning, when such a friend as God hath been to his people, and one on whom all their hope lies, and in whom all their help is, shall look strange upon them, and take no notice of them? This is enough to break an ingenuous heart, and one that knows what it is to enjoy God: Neither is it only the present want of God is their suffering; but by this means they are in danger of losing him quite: The Lord is with you while you are with him; and if you seek him, he will be found of you; but if you forsake him, he will forsake you, 2 Chron. 15. 2. Hence the Prophet, when he apprehended a change in God's carriage towards Israel, the next thing he fears, is his departure from them; he no sooner complains of God's strangeness, but presently prays, Leave us not, Jer. 14. 9. When once it came to a straitening, and loathing between God and his people, then terrible judgments follow; My soul loathed them, and their soul abhorred, me, Zach. 11. 8, 9, 'Tis in the Original, My soul was straitened in them: God's heart was not towards them as formerly; he could not bear with them as formerly: And then, I will not feed them, that that dies, let it die, and that that is to be cut off, let it be cut off; he matters not what becomes of them: Do but think in what a case are such a people: This should be for a lamentation.

Secondly, Soul-poverty, and wastings of their spiritual interests, do usually attend neglect of this Heavenly Trading. When men come to spend upon the stock, and have no comings in, they must needs waste apace: So it is where trading for Heaven is neglected; such have no recruits of their wasted graces, nor supplies of their impoverished souls, when the fountain is shut up, and all communication of grace withheld; no intercourse between God and them; he will not receive their goods, nor impart his treasure but all ways of relief are blocked up; then they must needs waste apace in spirituals, and become poorer every day. The way to be rich, is to have store of Christ's tried gold: I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich, Rev. 3. 18. Laodicea was poor, because she wanted Christ's tried gold, the real graces of his Spirit; and this she lost by letting down her Spiritual Trade; she did not buy of Christ; she did not come to, and deal with Christ in his own ways, and upon his own terms, and that made her poor: And so 'tis with every soul that neglects this Heavenly Trade; he soon comes to know what soul-wants are: Once let down a life in godliness, and presently poor in graces, poor in experiences, poor in comforts, poor in hopes, want strength, and want peace, fare hard, lodge badly, cast out from among men; as Job describes poor and mean persons: Who cut up mallows by the bushes, and Juniper roots for their meat, Job 30. 4 5. 6. Very mean fare; little pleasing or nourishing food; bitter and salt herbs: some take them for nettles, poor food; and yet the usual feeding in those parts, of those that were low in the world; neither was their lodging better: They dwelt in the clefts of the Valley, in caves of the Earth, and in the Rocks: Suitable also was their reputation; They were driven from among men, they cried after them, as after a thief. Such is the condition of poor persons full of straits, and meanly esteemed; and so 'tis with such as decay in their Heavenly Trade; they have lost their sweet morsels, and marrowy bits; their pleasant fare, and soul-refreshments they once had, and feed on dry bones, and sapless Ordinances: They are not maintained at that rate of comfort and experience they once had: They have hard lodging also; lose that sweet rest and peace they sometimes found in Christ, and in their sincere walkings after him: Fal'n in reputation too; neither God nor good men think so well of them as once they did. This is the case of such as fall back in Religion; they soon fall into such poverty, and spiritual wants come upon them, as armed men: In the fullness of their sufficiency they are in straits, Prov. 24. 34. Job 20. 22. And this is cause of mourning; wants and poverty do fill men with trouble, perplexity and grief: Oh the distractions and distressing thoughts that straits commonly beget! and no straits like to soul-straits; Christians, you yourselves be my Judges.

Thirdly, Neglect of Trading for Heaven will blast all other Trading, and breed a moth to consume even your temporal substance: When Israel began to let down their Heavenly Trade, and to mind their own concerns and houses above God's, presently God blasts their temporal interests; he makes holes in their moneybags, and blows upon their increase: All their tuggings in the world (with neglect of God and his Worship) came to nothing; they sowed much, and it brought in little; looked for much, and it came to little; wrought hard, earned great wages, laid up money, but it fell out again, through some secret hole in their bags, which divine jealousy opened, consuming their substance, to let them know, that men may make more haste than good speed; and they that reckon without God, must reckon twice. And may not this be one thing that cuts this Nation short in their outward interest this day, because they have forsaken God, neglected his service, lost the power of godliness? certainly though outward prosperity be no token of God's favor, nor any Gospel-promise to his people; yet when the Lord does fight against a people by successive rebukes, and send in a secret mildew, wasting and consumption on their interests, and this becomes general and national, it shows displeasure in God, and should be laid to heart; the want of which is set forth as an additional aggravation to such a people's sin: Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? did not he against whom we have sinned? for they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient unto his Laws: Therefore he poured upon him the fury of his anger, and the strength of battle, and hath set him on fire round about, yet he knew not, and it burned him, yet he laid it not to heart, Isa. 42. 24, 25. It was the not walking in the way of God, neglect of obedience and practical holiness, a letting down the Heavenly Trade that brought those ruining judgments on Israel; losses on their interests, verse. 21. They were robbed and spoiled, firing their houses, verse. 25. It hath set him on fire round, it burned him. Now in this miserable case there was yet a greater judgment on them, a strange stupefaction and insensibleness of spirit; they did not see God's anger in it, yet, Yet he knew it not; (viz.) Whence it came, and who did all this; they looked to Chaldeans, and enemies, but 'twas God did it; and yet they laid it not to heart; they were not rightly affected with all these desolations, and their near approach to ruin: And is not this our case? God hath warned us by his Word this many years, threatened us by prodigious signs in Heaven and Earth, begun to execute them already, by Plague, Sword and Fire, dreadful wastes in the great City, and many other places, to the undoing of many families, made a breach upon the Trade of the Nation, to the impoverishing of the whole Land; and yet we are as insensible as Pharaoh and the Egyptians were, as if the Lord had sent the spirit of slumber upon us; impoverished, yet fell it not: This should be for a lamentation.

Fourthly, The decay of this Heavenly Trade, if not cured, is the ready and certain way to ruin: The destruction of the poor is poverty, Prov. 10. 15. Men's poverty fills them with consternation and dejecting fears, and does also expose them to many evils, and take down their external defense from injuries, being made a prey to their oppressors. The rich man's wealth is his strong City, Prov. 18. 11. Rich men protect themselves from injuries; their riches are Advocates for them to men; but poor men lie open to all invasions; when men grow poor every man treads upon them: So is it when the Heavenly Trade decays, and soul-poverty springs out of its ruin; then destruction makes haste to such places and persons: For this the Lord Jesus threatens to take the Kingdom from a people, because they bring not forth the fruit of it, Matth. 21. 43. they did not render to God the fruit of all his dressings and waitings on them: Barrenness and decays in Religion uncured, are a certain forerunner of Desolation, Luke 13. 7, 9.

Before the Lord brought in that cruel Nation, the Vandals on Africa; the Christians in Spain were much degenerated from their former purity (as Salvian complains) and the power of godliness was much decayed; he tells us, they had nothing left but the name of Christianity, to which their conversation was most unlike. What is it (saith he) to please ourselves with the name of Christian, when the very name does greaten our guilt, in that we are so unlike to it? Before the Massacre at Paris (saith Mr. Clark in his Martyrol.) such a general stupidity seized upon the Protestants, that their minds were very wavering, and few there were that shown themselves zealously bent to Religion; but all, both great and small, were intent upon worldly matters, building to themselves goodly Castles in the air. It was observed by some, that before the change of Religion and Martyrdom in Queen Mary's days, there was great unprofitableness under the Means of Grace. What the issues of these great decays in Religion may be amongst us, we know not; but such symptoms have usually foregone great changes, and severe strokes, on such persons and places: And is not this matter of lamentation? Physicians use to cure a Lethargy by a Fever; the one hath been our disease, O that the other, if no means else will do, may be our cure.

Fifthly, At the best decays in this Heavenly Trade will render the Traders account heavy in the day of Christ. Into what straits did the sense of an abused trust put the Prodigal Steward, Luke 16. 13? He had been unfaithful in his place, wasted his Masters goods, and now was in danger of being turned out; a reckoning was called for, and he unable to render it; and in perplexing thoughts how to give in his accounts, and to secure his future welfare: And this will be the case of such as are negligent and unfaithful in their Heavenly Trade; it will expose them to soul-trouble one day, how to answer it before God: First or last God will call for an account how his goods have been improved: He hath given you a stock to trade upon for him: Light, Grace, Parts, Capacities, Gospel-privileges and Opportunities, Liberty, Peace, Experiences, with many mercies and afflictions, which are all your Lord's goods, and must be accounted for; upon the passing of which depends your eternal state, or much of your soul's peace: The Lord Jesus hath a double audit, or accounting with his servants: In this life in the Court of Conscience; and in the Judgment-Day at the bar of God: In the first your present peace and soul comfort is much concerned, and your eternal welfare in the last: Alas! how will you answer conscience now when that book is opened, and the Lord Jesus brings in his bill of so many mercies expended, with skill and capacity to improve them; and such a charge of debt issuing thence: So much due for such goods, and for other wares; for Sermons, Sacraments, Graces, Comforts, Frames, Prayer Returns, Gracious Providences and Protections; so many personal mercies, so many family mercies, so many bodily mercies, so many soul mercies, so many Church mercies, so many National mercies, sick-bed mercies, health mercies, journey mercies, habitation mercies, caring mercies, sparing mercies, giving mercies, forgiving mercies, seen mercies, unseen mercies; and little or no return yet made for all these: How can the conscience stand up under such a charge, or lift up his face without spot, when it sees its guilt in all, and cannot answer one of a thousand? How shall man be just with God, if he contend with him? How shall he answer him one of a thousand? And if you cannot carry it in the Court of Conscience here, where God reckons by a Proxy; and it may be doth give but a general charge, what will you do at the bar of God, where the Lord will judge righteous judgment, and determine your eternal state, as you are approved or disapproved in that day? What think you souls, will not so much neglect of duty? such decays of grace? so frequent breach of Covenants? so great unfaithfulness in your places and relations? so many days and weeks, and not a stroke of work for God? so much bad work, so much waste of goods; will not all this look wistly upon you, and without repentance and a sealed acquittance, render your case dangerous at the judgment seat? And if so, is it not matter of lamentation? O lay this to heart!

USE III.

Thirdly, If the Heavenly Trade be the best Trade; then this reproves men's too greedy and inordinate pursuit of their earthly Trades and Interests, to the great prejudice and hindrance of this Heavenly Trade: And oh that I could here dip my Pen in tears, as well as gall; and not only write against, but weep over this earthly spiritedness, the great, the common, the uncur'd disease of men; almost of all men, of good men, this day! With what earnestness, strength of affection, and indefatigable labors, do men pursue after the things of this world, as if all their pleasure, happiness, yea life and eternal welfare lay wrapped up in these things. Jehu did not more furiously drive after a Crown, then men do this day after crumbs. There was a time to some when godliness was counted gain; but now gain is valued beyond godliness. Trade is the great Diana to which most men sacrifice: Profit the wheel within the wheel, which sets all a going: The salt that seasons all things; nothing savors well that hath not this in it. Advantage in the world, is like the blood in men's veins; the soul in the body; that quickens their desires, puts life into their dead hopes; makes the blind to see, the lame to leap and run, the deaf to hear, the lips of them that are asleep to speak. Gain is the whetstone to men's wits, the loadstone to their affections, the spur to their actions: this is the object of men's quickest senses, the center of their liveliest motions. O! the projects, cares, tuggings, sweats, rowings, ridings, restless labors, that are engaged about this enquiry: Who will show us any good?

Quest. But how may we know when men do inordinately pursue their earthly business and concerns?

Answ. 1. First, When they engross too much of their time: this was Israel's sin, saying, When will the New-Moon be gone, that we may sell Corn? and the Sabbath, that we may set forth Wheat? Amos 8. 5. They were not contented with their own time but they must entrench on God's time als. they thought the time long till they were at their worldly work, and hoped to get advantage from God's institutions, for their earthly interests; and that the Jubilee-Sabbath, when men must cease from tillage, would help to heighten the price of things, and so further their advantage: therefore the Lord reproves them for their undue diligence about the World: It is in vain for you to rise up early, and to sit up late to eat the bread of sorrows; for so he giveth his beloved sleep, Psal. 127. Here (saith Piscator) he doth, by this sudden Apostrophe, inveigh against those covetous Tradesmen and Merchants, telling them; 'Tis in vain for them to rise up so early to their work, and sit up so late in their shops, for such poor and contemptible gain: So Rabbi Solomon renders it for Artificers, who rise early to their labors. Excessive pursuits of the World in point of time are here reprov'd as vain and sinful, while hereby they deprive themselves of time for God and their Souls.

Secondly, when they lay out their Hearts on the World; If riches increase, set not your hearts on them, Psal. 62. 10. The danger of a disease lies in its seisure on the heart: Earthly things, under the hand are a duty; but in the heart, a disease. The heart is Christ's Royal Fort, to which the Devil, the World and Flesh lay siege; and if that be taken, all is gone: Earthly things are briars and thorns, and therefore dangerous to come near the heart: the least prick at the heart is mortal; the heart is Christ's nuptialbed, into which Christ retires; the World is the Saint's servant; now to admit a servant into the Lord's bed, is adulterous: the heart is God's Seat, Pavilion and Throne, into which none must come but himself; like the gates of the Sanctuary, into which none must enter but God himself: This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter into it; because the Lord, the God of Israel hath entered into it; therefore it shall be shut, Ezek. 44. 2. Such is the heart of Believers, to be kept for God only; to take in creatures into God's room, is intolerable boldness; to let out thy heart to the World, Trade, Interest, Creatures, is to invert the order of nature, as well as grace. In creation, God sets man uppermost, and puts all things under his feet: Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thine hands; thou hast put all things under his feet, Psal. 8. 6. Now, to place those things over thy heart, which God hath set under thy feet, is to turn the World upside down, and to overturn the whole course of nature. This is the great sin of this day, men's letting out their hearts on the things of this World: were persons but serious, and willing to be search'd, and to know their own state, many that think well of themselves, might find, that notwithstanding all their shows, and seeming hopes, they are in a woeful and dangerous case, in that their hearts are not right with God, but are set on other things, on earthly things more than on God.

Six things discover this, that the heart is set too much upon this World.

First, When the desires are inordinately let out after it: this is one symptom the Prophet gives of an unsound, covetous heart; such a one hath greedy, unsatisfied desires after the World; Who enlargeth his desire as Hell, and is as Death, and cannot be satisfied, Hab. 2. 5. In the former verse he tells us, a carnal unbelieving heart, is a rotten unsound heart: His soul which is lifted up, is not upright in him: but the just shall live by Faith. A carnal heart is all for himself, and his own carnal interest, and not for God; he lives by sight, and not by Faith; and this was an evidence of it, all his desires were for carnal things. Desires are the breathings and outgoings of the heart, and as the heart is, such are they; where the desires are earthly, the heart is earthly; such a one is never satisfied with any portion of earthly things: as a person in a Fever, always thirsty; so is an earthly heart, always coveting more and more: They join house to house, and lay field to field, till there be no place, Isa. 5. 8. As long as there is any place left, they covet it: A Field, a House, a Living, is but a morsel that stays a hungry stomach for the present, as soon as that is digested they long for more: this is a certain sign that heart is on the World, whose desires have never enough of it: and alas! where's the person that will say with Jacob, I have enough? Where the heart is set on God and things above, a little of the World will content that Soul; food and raiment, with godliness, is enough; but it is never satisfied with its measure of Grace, and enjoyment of God; the more it enjoys of God, the more it longs for further fellowship with him; one duty doth but edge the stomach for another: the more he hath, the more he desires of God and spiritual things: and so 'tis with a heart that is altogether earthly, the desires are earthly also, never satisfied with what he hath, but still longing for more.

Secondly, A worldly heart hath worldly thoughts; there the mind is wholly taken up about earthly things; thoughts are to the heart as the beams are to the Sun, the streams to the Fountain, which are homogeneous, of the same nature with them; our Lord Jesus tells us, that 'tis out of the heart that evil thoughts proceed, Mark. 7. 21. They come immediately from the heart, (says Mr. Fenner,) nothing comes between the heart and them; other sins (says he) come from the heart, but it is at the second, third and fourth hand; but thoughts come immediately from it: And nothing doth more discover the heart, than the usual, habitual, delightful thoughts of a man do: They are the univocal acts of the heart, which show what the heart is, as shining does the light; Mr. Fenner of the misery of earthly thoughts. Where are thy thoughts mostly? thy pleasing and delightful thoughts? there is thy Heart: They that are after the flesh, do mind the things of the flesh, Rom. 8. 5. As soon as they awake, thoughts of their business (as friends) come to visit them; they drive out other thoughts of God and heavenly things, they vanish and disappear at the presence of earthly thoughts, as Clouds do at the rising-Sun; as when a Master comes in to take his seat, Servants rise up, and go their way: no sooner doth thoughts of God come in, but earthly thoughts drive them away, as the Shepherds did Jethro's Daughters, and there is no Moses to stand up and help them, Exod. 2. 16, 17. An earthly man from morning to night his thoughts are upon the World, as the Dog follows his Master all the day long: In company, alone, at home, abroad, in journeys, in duties; his thoughts are usually about his Trade, Interest, House, Field, Work, and the like; it may be sometimes good thoughts may be cast into the mind, and these make amends for all other thoughts, feeding the deceived heart with conceits that all is well, because good thoughts come in now and then; whereas the main bent of their thoughts have been about earthly things: these thoughts grow out of the heart, they are in-dwellers; but good thoughts are only guests and strangers that do not stay long; they give a visit, and then are gone, and must give way to earthly thoughts again, which are home-born, household-servants and inhabitants: thy thoughts of God are but occasional, now and then extraordinary, when some special mercy or affliction is upon thee, but thy earthly thoughts are fixed, stated and continued: thy good thoughts are like rain-water, that fall upon thee, or as pump-water that must be drawn out; but thy carnal thoughts are as wellwater, that runs freely, and springs up from within thee: thy good thoughts are but thy recreation, when thy mind is tired with other things; but thy earthly thoughts are thy work and employment; when men have done their work, they sometimes walk abroad; such are thy seldom thoughts of God and divine things, when thou hast drudg'd away the strength of thy mind on the World, and thy own things, then, to quiet conscience, and recreate thy mind, thou givest thy thoughts leave to walk abroad, and give a visit to better things: thy heavenly thoughts are gentle, easy, weak and sickly, and carry out little of the strength and vigor of thy heart with them; but thy thoughts of the World are strong and lively, the first-born and strength of thy heart; they are spending thoughts, working, plotting, carking, studying thoughts: Ah souls! deceive not yourselves with fancies of your good estate, from some fits and good moods in you (which hypocrites may have) and all the while the strength and bent of your hearts, the constant, lively, prevailing thoughts of your souls are carnal, selfish and earthly.

Thirdly, Persons restless labors after the world, plainly show their hearts are upon it: Where the heart is set upon a thing a person is restless till he hath it; he leaves no stone unturned; sets wit, hands, friends, and all on work to get it. When Shechem's heart was set on Dinah, Jacob's daughter, he sticks at no proposals so he might but obtain her: Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me, I will give; the Land shall be before you, dwell and trade therein, and get you possession therein, Gen. 34. 10, 11. No terms were counted too hard; take up profession, undergo painful duties, punishing circumcision; part with anything so he might but have the desire of his heart, What hardships did Jacob undergo for his beloved Rachel? twice seven years service, consumed with drought in the day, and frost in the night, and his sleep departed from his eyes: Thus have I been twenty years in thy house; I served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle, and thou hast changed my wages ten times, Gen. 31. 40, 41. And yet all this he could bear to enjoy the object of his love.

So 'tis with earthly minded men; all their capacities are engaged about earthly things; their chiefest strength is laid out about their Trades, callings and businesses in the world, seldom minding soul-concerns, little employed in religious duties; now and then hear, read, pray, as may stand with interest; cold, sleighty, formal, sleepy in duty; but all life when about the world; ready to complain prayer is too long, preaching tedious; too much time spent in duty; what need this waste? Matth. 26. 8. All seems lost to flesh and blood which is spent on Christ and his service, [Mr. Trap:] But all too little for the world; weary themselves for very vanity; stick at nothing that will help them to their desired interests; undergo any hardships; turn the back on any duties; adventure health, reputation, the displeasure of God, with all their spiritual mercies; yea and the eternal welfare of their souls also, rather than lose an advantage in the world: This is the spirit of too many this day: Men that seem to be somewhat, bid fair for salvation, with the young man in the Gospel; like the terms well; come up to everything but this; cannot part with the world for Christ; come up to everything, only with Naaman, must be pardoned in this, that they have a Rimmon to bow to, 2 Kings 5. 18. In everything else they will consent to follow Christ, but in this they must be spared: when their farms, their merchandise and profit calls for them, then the concerns of Christ and their souls must stand by; and affections like a flood run over all that lies in their way; take no notice what Scripture or Conscience say; deaf to all arguments that thwart interest: This is the case of a worldly heart; his chiefest strength is laid out about earthly things; these must be followed and sought after, whatever becomes of the soul and spiritual things. What is that so great hope (saith Seneca) what so great necessity, that stoops man who was made upright, to contemplate Heaven, and buries and drowns him in the deeps of the Earth, to get out that gold which is not got with less danger than 'tis kept, Sen? A little strength for duty will serve the turn; but a great deal of time, care and labor must the world have: Surely the world rules that heart that comes and goes at its bidding, and can leave all to follow it at the command of interest. You will judge him another man's servant, who, whatever he is doing, will leave it all when his Master calls him, and follow him. Let men think what they will, God hath no part for the present in that soul that can do more to enjoy the world, than God; and counts anything more necessary than to converse with, obey and serve him.

Fourthly, The delight and pleasure men take in earthly things, declare that their hearts are let out upon them: Where the heart is, there will the delights be. Love is is the very life of the soul, Alsted. Theol. natur. p. 613. When Jonathan's heart was knit with the heart of David, 1 Sam. 18. 1. as an evidence of it: Chap. 19. 2, Jonathan Saul's Son delighted much in David: Delight is the rest of desire, in the fruition of that good the heart is set upon, which satisfies the desire; [Reynolds of the Passions, Cap. 19. Pag. 197.] One calls it, the Sabbath of our thoughts, and that sweet tranquility of mind which we receive from the presence and fruition of that good whereunto our desires have carried us: If then men's delights in the world exceed their pleasure in God, 'tis a sign the world is their chiefest good. Wicked men delight in their abominations, and that proves their ways to be of choice. Isa. 63. 3, They have chosen their own ways, and their soul delighteth in their abominations: Try thy heart by thy pleasure; what is sweetest to thy taste, God or the World? What is most delightful to thee, to wait on God, though with the loss of the world, or to pursue the world, with the want of God? Men cheat their own Souls, when they say the enjoyment of God is better than the world; and yet for every trifle, and smallest advantage, can upon choice, baulk the enjoyment of God in his appointments, and cannot adventure the least loss and prejudice to their interest, though it were for the nearest fellowship with God: certainly that which is the Souls greatest pleasure, that will it make after when left to its liberty: Canst thou leave the snow of Lebanon for the waters of Assyria? Pass by a walk in Christ's gallery, to sit down and solace thyself on the dunghill-comforts of this life? then are not thy chiefest delights in God: Psal. 27. 4, One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his temple: If the beholding of God in Ordinances be thy delight, it will be the one thing in thy desires and endeavors; also all other things are nothing to that: If thy chiefest pleasure be in God, then nothing but a conviction of duty can make thee upon choice decline an opportunity of waiting on God; and even then also, when obedience to God sets thy hand to the world; delight in God will engage thy longings after him, and make thy greatest comforts thou art then pursuing, a weight and a burden to thy soul, because they stand between thy heart and communion with God. Thy affections will be like the Kine that drew the Ark to Bethshemesh, that lowed after their Calves as they went, 1 Sam. 16. 12. When thou art constrained to draw in the Cart of thy duty-employments, even then will thy desires belowing after the comfort of thy relation-interest in God. How is it soul? speak; Is not a good Fair and Bargain sweeter to thee, and doth more affect thy heart, than a sermon and a duty? Dost thou not use to follow the world with thy back on fellowship with God and Saints, and not the least regret in thy spirit, or cloud on thy comforts? if so, thy heart is not yet supremely set on God.

Fifthly, Lothness to part with thy earthly comforts and interests tells thee, thy heart is too much upon them. Jacob's unwillingness to part with Benjamin, was a sign his heart was too much set upon him. Judah tells the Governor of Egypt, That his Father's life was bound up in the Lad's life, Gen. 44. 30. The Spouses affection to her Beloved was seen in this, that when she found him, she held him, and would not let him go, Cant. 3. 4. I found him whom my soul loveth, I held him, and would not let him go. Such is the testimony, that if men's hearts are on the things of this life, they hold them fast, and will not let them go: Most men are too tenacious of their interests, to be dead to them: close hands argue cleaving hearts to the world. Alas! with what reluctancy do men that have the abundance of this worlds goods, lay them out again for God! how hard is it to draw any proportions of charity from them that have this worlds goods? what arguments and reasons will men be pleading for their sparingness in parting with the Mammon of this world? and how much beneath their measure do most men expend their earthly things upon the calls that God gives them? This shows plainly, their heart is bound up in the fruition of these things. Covetous men will sooner part with their flesh, than their gold (saith Augustine) shall I take my bread, and my water, and my flesh that I have killed for my shearers, and give it to men whom I know not whence they be? 1 Sam. 25. 11. (saith covetous Nabal.) Covetous persons cannot endure to part with what they have. The covetous man, while he holds fast his riches, is held fast by them; and in preying on others, he himself becomes a prey, August. They are like a net, which takes in all the fish that comes at it, but lets out none again, except some small ones that are little worth: Earthly minds are seen in nothing more than in their tenacity, and close keeping of what they have; like dying men, whatever they take hold of, they let not go: This is the temper of many, they cannot scatter for God, nor honor him with their substance: There is that withholdeth more than is meet, Prov. 11. 24. That's the character of one whose heart is on the world. He is not only covetous that takes away other men's goods (saith Augustine) but he that covetously withholds his own, and will not let them go when God hath use for them: Certainly, if Believers themselves are not their own, then they will one day know their estates and interests are not their own, but the Lord's, and to be at his dispose. How will the owner of that Colt Christ sent for, rise up in judgment against many! no sooner did the Disciples say, The Lord hath need of him, but straightway they let him go, Luk. 19. 33, 34, 35. Shall one that pretended not so much to Christ (for ought we know) readily part with so much at the first request; and they that profess much love to Christ, refuse to lay out lesser things for him? This doth manifest the world is dearer to such than Jesus Christ.

Lastly, Then are men's hearts upon the world, when their trust and dependence is upon earthly things. We are apt to put confidence in friends, and therefore the Lord cautions Israel against such dependencies, as false deceiving things: Trust not in a friend; put ye not confidence in a guide, &c. Micah 7. 5. The Spouse came leaning upon her Beloved in the wilderness, Cant. 8. 5. No sooner had the rich man store of goods, but he places his confidence in them, Luke 12. 19. I will say to my soul; soul, thou hast goods laid up for many years, take thine ease; eat, drink and be merry. 'Tis natural to men that choose the world for their treasure; to choose it also for their trust: They that dare adventure their supreme affection on things, dare also take up their dependency on them. Men choose not a tree they think will rot, Isa. 40. 20. If riches be thy choice, thou thinkest them worthy of thy reliance; or thou actest irrationally. Men that have wealth, have inward thoughts that their houses shall continue forever, and their dwelling places to all generations; they call their Lands after their own names, Psal. 49. 11. 'Tis hard to have the good things of this life, and not to expect too much from them; so inviting is their appearance to a dependency on them: Earthly things are fair in promise, but false in performance; like quagmires covered with grass; men think them firm ground, but when they tread upon them, they soon become their graves. The Evangelist calls all that glorious pomp with which Agrippa so amus'd spectators, but a mere show, Acts 25. 23. When Agrippa was come, and Bernice, with great pomp, 'tis with much fantasie and external show: All the glory of this world is but a pompous show, that cheats beholders, and allures them to a deceived expectation: They that have much visible comfort in creatures, live little by faith. How rare is it for men that have estates and riches for their posterity, to commit them to divine care, by an act of pure recumbency on the promise, and to believe upon a naked word for all their supplies and needed comforts: Such is our expectation whither we flee for help, Isa. 20. 6. An earthly heart is known by carnal trust and dependency on earthly things. Ah souls! put your hearts into this scale, and see whether they do not press down to this present world: Speak soul, who shalt shortly be weighed for eternity in the balance of the Sanctuary; are not thy desires, thy thoughts, thy restless labors, thy delights, thy close adherence to, and dependency, all engaged about the things of this life, with the neglect of God, and heavenly things, thine own heart being Judge? And if so, then Thy State is dangerous.

And thy Folly great.

First, Thy State is dangerous; thou hast not a dram of true grace in thee: Love not the world, nor the things of the world; if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him, 1 Joh. 2. 15. Do not flatter thy soul into perdition; if thou lovest the world, thou dost not love God: For the friendship of this world is enmity against God: Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God, James 4. 4. He whose heart and mind is set after the world; he that will be rich, the bent and design of the heart is for it; that's the Butt he levels at, whatever he professes; That's his great business and project: Thine eyes and thy heart are not but for thy covetousness, Jer. 22. 17. He maketh haste to be rich, Prov. 28. 20. drives furiously after the world; his heart is reconciled to all the means and ways that lead to it (be they never so clashing with soul-advantages) that man, be he who he will, is a friend to the world, and an enemy to God, let him make the highest profession possible: So did Judas get into the Church of God; so did Demas pray, preach, and so may hypocrites for a time; yea make many prayers, Isa. 1. 15. Doth he profess love to God? so did the Jews; and yet their hearts went after their covetousness, Ezek. 33. 31. Is he of a lovely spirit, and unblameable conversation? so was the young man in the Gospel; his great desire was to inherit eternal life, Mark 10. 17. that was his business to Christ; he desired to know how he might be saved; he seemed to be all for Heaven; his life also was unblameable: All these have I observed from my youth up, verse 20. He was of a sweet, lovely spirit: 'Tis said, Jesus beholding him, loved him, verse 21. and yet could not part with the world for Christ; had his heart knit to earthly things all the while, and went away sorrowful; he could not consent to sell all and give to the poor, ver. 22. no marks will serve that Soul's turn, whose heart is glued to the World, and cannot give up all to Christ's dispose: God and the World cannot dwell in that Soul, godliness and gain cannot keep house together: where the grace of God comes in truth, it teacheth men to deny worldly lusts, Tit. 2. 11, 12. He that hath no power to deny the cravings of a worldly heart, never yet received the grace of God in truth. Grace (saith one) may stand with some transient acts of naughtiness, but never with covetousness: Adams on the 2 Epist. of Pet. p. 9. 16. Noah was once drunk with Wine, but never with the World: Lot twice Incestuous, never Covetous: Peter denied his Master thrice; it was not the love of the World, but the fear of the World brought him to it; for he had denied the World before he denied his Master: Once David was overcome with the Flesh, never with the World. Why did not these purge themselves from Adultery, Anger, Contention, and the like? because into these sins the infirmity of a Saint may fall; but if once into Covetousness, there is nothing of a Saint left, not the very name. Luther acknowledges there was scarce a sin to which he had not been tempted, save to the sin of Covetousness. The Lord Jesus tells us that his Disciples are not of this World: some derive the word, Holy, from Earth, and a privative particle, in that redemption from the earth, is the great work of holiness: All they that partake of the Cross of Christ, are crucified to the World, and the World to them, Gal. 6. 14. Not a jot of the benefits of Christ are treasur'd up in that Soul where the God of this World dwells; and if without Christ, without hope; thy case is desperate if thy heart be earthly, under the ruling power of this World; thou art yet in a graceless state, and no grace, no glory; if thou mindest earthly things, destruction is thy end, Phil. 3. 19. If thou art one of this World, whose heart is after thy covetousness, thy portion is in this World, *Psal. 17. 14. All thy Heaven is on this side the Grave: For this ye know, that no Whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an Idolater, hath any inheritance in the Kingdom of Christ, and of God, Eph. 5. 5. 'Tis joined with the most abominable sins, Thievery, Drunkenness, Adultery, Idolatry, Extortion, for which things sake, the wrath of God cometh upon the children of disobedience, Col. 3. 5. 6. The Scripture calls covetous men, cursed children, 2 Pet. 2. 14. An heart they have exercised with covetous practices, cursed children; really cursed with a detestation, such whom God abhorreth, Psal. 10. 3. And the wicked blesseth the covetous, whom God abhorreth. A woe is pronounced against them, Hab. 2. 9. Woe to him that coveteth an evil covetousness to his house, that he may set his nest on high, that he may be delivered from the power of evil: One would think this a duty, or at least very commendable, to provide for our Family, and get what we can for our children, and to endeavor to secure our houses from any suffering and calamity; but if this be men's end, to set their nest on high, to get great things for themselves, and so to manage their affairs, as to avoid all sufferings for God, there's a dreadful woe hangs over their heads, and disappointment of all their design in the issue; for instead of honor, they are brought to shame in the end: *Thou hast consulted shame to thy own house, and sinned against thy own soul, verse. 10. They are unworthy of any society with men: I have written unto you not to keep company; if any man that is called a Brother, be a Fornicator, or Covetous, or an Idolater, or a Railer, or a Drunkard, or an Extortioner, with such a one, no, not to eat, 1 Cor. 5. 11. and shall be cut off from communion with God to all eternity: Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God: be not deceived, neither Fornicator, nor Idolater, nor Thieves, nor Covetous, nor Drunkards, nor Revilers, nor Extortioners shall inherit the Kingdom of God, 1 Cor. 6. 9. 10.

Secondly, as thy state is dangerous, if thou art one who lovest this present World; so thy folly is great, to set thy heart upon the World.

After thou hast been convinced of the evil of such a spirit and practice, and hast felt the smart of it in thy own soul.

After thou hast been arraigned at the bar of thy Conscience, and condemned in thy own heart for this Sin, (as every truly convinced Soul is,) if ever the spirit of bondage hath been at work in thy heart, (as thou hast confessed) then hast thou found this sin more bitter than death to thee; and now to return again to such courses as will break thy bones again, and put thy soul to greater torture than ever, (as all relapses do,) this is folly indeed.

After thou hast chosen God for thy portion, Christ for thy treasure, Godliness for thy gain, the inheritance with the Saints for thy Land, a mansion in Heaven for thy house, Christ's tried Gold for thy Money, a conversation in Heaven for thy Trade, the Father, Son and Spirit, for thy All here, and forever, (as thou hast done, or fearfully belied thy profession,) that after all this thou shouldest turn again to these beggarly elements, and exchange God for the world, a Crown for crumbs, a Throne for thorns, a Dowry in Heaven for a dunghill on earth; an eternal weight of Glory for a burden of thick clay; fellowship with God for defiling converse with dirt and bespotting trash; a Burgeship in Heaven for a name written in the earth; is not this folly, folly? Not that one who had real interest in God & things above, can ever fully and finally forfeit them, and lose them again; (for, once in Christ, and ever in Christ) but those things thou didst once seem to choose for thy chiefest interest, and hast professed hopes of a certain title to these supreme treasures; and now, to sell thy hopes of God and Glory for that vomit thou hadst spewed up, and mire thou hadst been washed from, this is madness indeed.

After you have seen so often the vanity and uncertainty of these things below, that they are empty, and will not satisfy; they cannot quench thy thirst, or fill thy hungry soul; cannot afford the least rest to thy weary heart; but are still short of thy expectations; thou lookest for peace, and behold they give thee trouble; thou thinkest to gather Roses, and they prick thy fingers; and when thou hopest to find rest in them, and sayest, Soul, take thy ease in thy full bags, and fair estate; thy pleasant house, near relations; then they prove swords to pierce thee, or briars to rend thee; or at the best, but wind that does but swell, not nourish thee. Thou hast also found them fading things, that will not stay, rare ripe, fruit that soon rots; a moth, an Eastwind take off all; they are a pleasing gourd one day, and withered the next, Jonah 4. 7. God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd that it withered. A sickness comes and takes away thy child, and all the hopes of thy house perish with him: Thy Customers break, and thou art impoverished: The fire burns down thy house, and thou art undone: Thy Heir it may be proves a Prodigal, and all thy gatherings are scattered; so uncertain, empty, perishing, are these things, and thou knowest them to be so, and hast found them such, and yet thy heart runs after them; and with the Dog in the Fable, thou leavest substance to catch at shadows; neglecting unseen, sure, sweet, satisfying and eternal things, for things that are not; and is not this madness? [The world perisheth, and yet thou seekest after the things thereof, Petrarch.]

After you have found better things, and tasted the sweetness of them, you have experienced the light of God's countenance to be beyond all corn, and wine, and oil; his loving-kindness to be better than life; a day in his Courts to be more eligible than a thousand elsewhere, Psal. 4. 6, 7. O how sweet hath his Word been to thy taste, sweeter than the honey and the honeycomb! how often hath God cheered, quickened and strengthened thy heart in thy approaches to him, that thou hast said (as David of Goliath's sword) there is none like this: And as the Disciples when with Christ in the Mount, 'tis good being here; Lord evermore give me this bread: and yet after all this, that thou shouldest upon choice, leave these for the world, and prefer thy shop, thy trade, thy field, house, money, before these divine and approved treasures: This is madness.

After so many confessions of this sin before the Lord and his people, and so many prayers and cries to God against it, and for grace to subdue thy earthly heart with many promises, and declared purposes to turn no more to this folly; that thou shouldest so easily, so speedily be reconciled to the world again, and reassume thy affections to these old lovers after all; this is madness, and will exceedingly greaten thy guilt and torment, when the Lord shall make inquisition for these things; when thy convictions, prayers and vows shall return as so many Serjeants upon thy back, to arrest thy guilty conscience, and as so many witnesses to prove God's charge against thee; that at such a time and such a time, in thy closet, in the Congregation of the Lord's people, in days of humiliation and preparation-seasons, on thy sick-bed, under such a word and rod, thy heart did melt over thy sin, and thou didst solemnly renew thy Covenant against it; and now to have thy prayers, and tears, and promises; yea, and God too against thee, for thy Apostasy after such Lovers as thou thyself wilt loath another day, and be ashamed to own in the presence of God, Saints and Angels; this is folly, folly.

Now when God is punishing thee for this very sin, by stripping thee of thy Idols, and pouring out the vials of his wrath upon this Euphrates, thy riches, interest, trade, and earthly comforts, over which thou hast carried away thy heart from him, that now while the Rod is upon thy back, thou shouldest hold fast thine iniquity, and refuse to return; this is desperate and incorrigible folly. And this is the practice of most this day; God blows upon their trades and interests for following them, and letting his house lie waste; and yet they pursue them still: The Lord takes out the bottom of their bags, and yet they put in more money into them. God smites men for the iniquity of their covetousness, and yet they go on frowardly in the way of their heart, Isa. 57. 17. God is hedging up the way of men's Lovers, and yet they break thorough to overtake them: So it was with Israel, God had hedge'd up her way, made a wall that she should not find her paths; and yet she followed after them. Hos. 2. 6. And she shall follow after her Lovers (O incorrigible wickedness!) but (saith God) she shall not overtake them: The Lord is plucking down men's bricks, but they build with hewn stone; the Sycamores are cut down, but they change them into Cedars, Isa. 9. 10. Providence pulls away unduly pursued interests, but men catch at them again: This is daring wickedness, and a telling God to his face, they fear him not, neither will they return. Jer. 5. 3. Thou hast stricken them, but they have not grieved, thou hast consumed, but they have refused to receive correction; they have made their faces harder than a Rock; they have refused to return: This is our case, and should it not be for a lamentation?

Lastly, when nothing but ruin and destruction is before our eyes; manifest danger of losing all, even Interest, Gospel, Life, and all that is dear to us seems to be a going; and yet to pursue these things, with neglect of our souls, is madness beyond parallel, and a dangerous symptom of approaching ruin. If men are not given up to a spirit of blindness, they must needs see that wasting destructions are upon us; gray hairs are here and there, and we see it not, Hos. 7. 9, 10. Strangers have devoured his strength, and he knoweth it not; yea, gray hairs are here and there, yet he layeth it not to heart; and the pride of Israel doth testify to his face, and they do not return to the Lord their God, nor seek him for all this. They felt the pain, but did not acknowledge the cause and fountain of all those evils, (saith Zanchi;) and this showed they were desperate and incurable, in that they were convicted of their evil case, and yet would not return to the Lord. No spot more dangerous than continuance in sin under utmost means of reformation and confessed danger of ruin. If our transgressions and sins be upon us, and we pine away in them; how shall we then live? Ezek. 33. 10.

USE IV.

If the Heavenly Trade be the best Trade, &c. Then this offers counsel and exhortation to five sorts of persons.

1. To such as are strangers to this Heavenly Trade.

Counsel 1. Such as are strangers to this Heavenly Trade; you that never were acquainted with this high Calling, but have spent all your time about things that perish, trafficking about Hell and Damnation. Be you exhorted to set about this choice, rich, and blessed Trade.

There are four Arguments that usually sway with rational persons in their choice of earthly Callings, which are also weighty inducements unto all not yet concerned to speed upon this Heavenly Trade.

Arg. 1. First, Necessity puts men on employments, and none are greater than theirs who are without this Divine Calling. Sinners, you that are yet without God in the World, you are miserably poor, and ready to perish; you are worth nothing but sin and misery; He is a poor man that hath nothing to live upon; and such are you, while without this line of communication, and strangers to these supreme concerns: You are spiritually poor, and have nothing (as yet) for your Souls to live on here, or to all eternity, Rev. 3. 17. And knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked. Poverty is one of the miseries of all unchanged souls; and that which aggravates it, is this; that they think themselves rich, and yet have nothing; no Food to fill them, but empty husks, and swine's meat; no Rayment to cover them, but filthy rags, and confusion, no House to shelter them from the storms of Divine wrath; or any Habitation to receive them, but an infernal Lake of Fire and Brimstone, and a receptacle with damned Devils; not a friend to help them; not an eye to pity them; There are none so poor in the World but they have something or other to help them, something in hand, or something in hope; something of their own, or something of others: if they canit dig, yet they can beg; if they have not interests to maintain them, yet they find pity to relieve them: But a Christless Sinner hath nothing to supply his immortal part; nothing in hand; nothing in hope; nothing of his own; nothing of others, that can contribute the least good to his undone Soul, whatever he lives on, is nothing but wind and emptiness; He feeds on ashes, a deceived heart turns him aside, Isa. 44. 20. He crams his starved Soul with filthy dung and excrements, (so loathsome are all the pleasures of sin he lives on,) Aliens from the Commonwealth of Israel, strangers from the Covenants of Promise; having no hope, and without God in the World, Eph. 2. 12. This is your condition, Souls, while without this Heavenly Trade; you are miserably poor, whatever you have in the World, you have nothing in God; whatever your Bodies and Families have, your Souls have nothing: 'Tis little profit to enjoy all things, and miss that one thing by which only we come to use them; Aug. You labor for vanity, and lie down in sorrow; and have you not reason to look out after some course to help you, and to embrace this overture of a Calling that will maintain and enrich you here, and forever? The Lepers case is thine; if thou sit still in thy condition, thou diest: In the World's fullness is famine; in thy security and false hopes, is death also: If thou adventure an offered grace, it may save thee; however, thou canst but die, 2 Kin. 7. 3, 4.

Again, you are not only poor, but Bankrupts; your poverty is of your own procurement, and the issue of your prodigality; you had once a fair Estate, but lost it; God, Grace and Glory was yours by the first Covenant, Luke 15. 30. but you have trifled it away for forbidden-fruit, and spent all you had on Harlots; you have consumed your Lord's goods also in riotous living, and wasted a large stock committed to your trust, and now must give an account of your Stewardship; were it only your personal wants that your folly hath brought upon you, (though that be heavy,) yet 'tis comparatively tolerable; but restitution must be made, and that is inconceivably distressing. A dreadful word, sinners, lies against you! (how can you bear it? how can you eat, drink, talk, or sleep in peace? much less rejoice when the handwriting is against the wall?) 'tis this, Give an account of thy Stewardship, Luke 16. 2. A review of thy past time must be expected, by what means thou didst reduce thy miserable Soul to this low estate, and an account of thy Stewardship will be required; and then when too late, thou wilt say with the Steward, What shall I do? ver. 3. and is it not more advisable now to take this counsel of Eliphaz, to acquaint thyself with God, and be at peace, thereby good shall come unto thee, Job. 22. 21. to return to that Trade which thou hast left, and recover the Treasure which thou hast lost, that so thy account may be comfortable in the day of Christ?

Nay further, you are not only poor, and bankrupts; but deeply in debt; debtors to God, to whom you owe yourselves and all that you have, by the Law of Creation and Covenant-obligation, but never yet discharged that due to this very day. You are in debt to God for all your mercies in Creation and Providence, patience-mercy, preservation-mercy, preventing-mercy, bounty-mercy; there's never a moment but God is laying out some new mercy upon thee, of which thou hast never made retribution to this day.

Debtors to the Law of God, which hath its full and just claim on you, a Law that is just, righteous and good, and to which you owe obedience by just and unquestionable ties, and yet have never yielded any right subjection to it all your days, but have violated all its righteous commands every day and moment of your life, both in thought, word and deed; For he that keepeth the whole Law, and yet offendeth in one point or iota, is guilty of all, Jam. 2. 10.

Debtors to Conscience, whose Law is in force against you, and by which you shall be judged. Rom. 2. 14, 15. These having not the Law, are a Law to themselves, which show the works of the Law written in their hearts; their Consciences also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing, or else excusing one another; and yet you have broken these Conscience-bonds, casting its cords from you: how many ties hath Conscience laid upon you which you have broken, going against the light and dictates thereof!

Debtors to all the World, to whom, in some respect or other, you are obliged. There are duties you owe to all men, to love them, and pray for them: to all your neighbors and acquaintance, to do them good as you have opportunity, and to seek and endeavor their Salvation to your power, which you have not done to this day. There are duties you owe to your relations, friends and family, which you have neglected, and have been increasing your Original debt, by running on new scores every day, which can never be cancel'd, or a power obtained to discharge your duties acceptably, till you come to Christ, and enter your souls into his new and everlasting Covenant, setting upon those great and Evangelical duties of it.

Your slavery is also great till you come over to this blessed work: You are in bondage unto Satan: Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are whom ye obey, Rom. 6. 16. You serve incomparably the worst Lord; a cruel Lord who hath no mercy, but delights in the misery of fallen man; A roaring Lion that goes about seeking to devour, 1 Pet. 5. 8. A cursed one cast out from God, cursed above all creatures; reserved in everlasting chains under darkness to the judgment of the great day, Gen. 3. 14. Jude, verse 6. Thine implacable enemy that hates thee with a perfect hatred: An Accuser, that never speaks well of any: A Murderer he was from the beginning, Rev. 12. v. 10. and the original cause of all the destruction in Earth and Hell: A false and deceitful creature, that never kept his word with any: A Lyar, and the Father of Lies, Joh. 8. 44. one that will be too hard for you, and cheat your souls into destruction: A miserable poor creature; one that hath lost all his glory and excellency, and hath nothing to give you for all your service, but some of the same flames in which he must fry forever: This, sinners, is your Lord, whom you have chosen and served all your days: And as you serve the worst Lord, so you do the worst work; base, filthy, shameful, cursed work: Such are all thy actions whiles in an unchanged state; you do hard work; no service like it; you work, and have no food to refresh you, which is the cruellest bondage: Israel in Egypt wrought hard, and yet had fleshpots, Onions and Garlic to relieve them; but you have nothing to feed your hopes and affections, but lies and vanity; you work, and have no raiment to cover you, all your employment makes you naked; you labor, and have no rest; weary and heavy laden, and yet feel it not, Gen. 3. 7. Other Laborers have their successive quietudes, but you have none; the hireling hath his shadow; the laborer hath his evening to give over his work; his bed to sleep on; but your work admits of no rest; 'tis never done; you do the Devil's work day and night, waking and sleeping; nay, while you eat and drink your work still goes on; O sad servitude! You work and have no wages: All earthly Laborers have their penny, something or other to compensate their pains, money or maintenance; but you have nothing in hand or hope, here or hereafter, but death and damnation; the fruit of your labors here, is more bitter than death; and the wages at the end of your day, wrath and vengeance, worm and fire, Mark 9. 44. And is not this bad employment? and is it not time sinners, to change your calling, and to accept this offer made you of this excellent Trade?

Arg. 2. Secondly, The danger that attends your present state should put you on a timely relinquishment of it: You are poor, and that exposes you to scorn and contempt, to oppression, treading down, and crushing, to devouring and destruction; you are not safe from ruin one moment; the next knock at thy door may be a call to Judgment Prov. 17. 5. Amos 4. 1. Hab. 3. 14. Prov. 10. 15. When thou liest down, thou mayest make thy bed in Hell; when thou awakest, thou mayest see God on the Throne, thy Soul at the Bar, thy Accusers at thy right hand, the Evidence in thy own breast, the Sentence written in capital letters, Go ye cursed: Under thy feet a bottomless lake of fire and brimstone; round about thee cruel Devils ready to seize upon thee, and lodge thy guilty condemned soul in thine eternal home, Matth. 24. 51. You have been Prodigals wasting what is not your own, and are in danger every day of a charge against you.

You are deeply in debt, and in danger of an arrest every hour; when you go forth, death may be at your heels; when you return, destruction may enter with you: O the uncertainty of thy time sinner! the danger of thy eternity, the absolute ruin of thy immortal soul, if thy reckoning begin before thy work: and hast thou not reason then to hasten about thy great concern, and to burn no more daylight in works of darkness?

Arg. 3. Thirdly, Thy duty should quicken thy undertaking in this great employment: Religion is not your Liberty, but your manifold debt: The Law of Creation binds you unto God; you will confess you were made by him, and God will profess you were made for him, Isa. 43. 21. This people have I formed for myself, that they should show forth my praise. Your fall from the Covenant of Works, is not your liberty from the essential duties of it; neither is your incapacity to perform it, a dispensation of your obedience: 'tis still your duty to return from whence you fell; to take the Lord to be your God, to love him with all your heart, and with all your might; to trust in him; to fear and obey him. A draught of these Covenant-duties did God place in your conscience by which you shall be judged, Rom. 2. 12. 15. though the counterpane you have defaced; yet the Original Deed is with God, and will be brought forth in the day of Christ against such as have not taken the Lord for their God.

You are also maintained by God, and that obliges you to him: 'Twas the argument the Apostle urged to the Masters of Reason in that age, why they should seek the Lord, because 'twas from him they had their subsistence, Acts 17. 28. For in him we live, and move, and have our being. If God maintains you, 'tis rational he should have the use of you: 'Twas the reason Moses used to prove God's right to Israel's all, Deut. 32. 9, to 15. The Lord's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance; why? He found him in the desert Land, in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about; he instructed him; he kept him as the apple of his eye: As an Eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings; so the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange God with him: (And therefore no reason they should leave him for strangers.) He made him ride upon the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the field; and he made him to suck honey out of the Rock, and oil out of the flinty Rock: Butter of Kine, and milk of Sheep, with fat of Lambs and Rams, of the breed of Bashan, and Goats, with the fat of kidnies, of wheat, and thou didst drink the pure blood of the Grape. Mercies are cords and bands by which the Lord obligeth men to himself: I drew them with cords of a man, and with bands of love, Hos. 11. 4. All thy life (sinner) hath been full of these constraints of mercy and love, to take the Lord to be thy God.

The Gospel of Grace which you profess to own and receive, binds you to seek first the Kingdom of God, and the righteousness thereof, Matth. 6. 33. to do the work of God, to labor for that bread which endures to eternal life; to work the works of God, Joh. 6. 27, 28. to be no more your own, but the Lord's, 1 Cor. 6. 19, 20. Cease to call or think yourselves Christians; tell the world you do not believe or hope to be saved by a crucified Christ, or else come over to him, and be disposed by his sacred Will. This is your duty.

Arg. 4. Fourthly, Weigh the unspeakable gain that will surely accrue to you, if you set up this Trade of Godliness. I have already shewn in the demonstration of this point, the great profit that this Heavenly Trade will turn unto, to all that deal thoroughly in it, to which I advise you to cast back your eye, and take three or four considerations more, to convince your understandings that Religion is eligible on grounds of greatest interest: For,

First, Religion will maintain you in the hardest times: So will not other Trades; there may be seasons when earthly employments will turn to no accounts: You have heard that riches profit not in the day of wrath; and some of you have seen the time, when they that work could yet scarcely eat; but God's work is meat and drink, when daily bread fails, Joh. 4. 30. I have meat to eat that you know not of. Godliness hath the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come. 1 Tim. 4. 8. God careth for the righteous; and when the Lions lack, and are hunger-bit, they that fear the Lord shall want no good thing, Psal. 34. 10. They shall be sure to be provided for, whoever wants: God hath past his word for it: All things are theirs by purchase, who are Christ's by choice; that is (saith Piscator) All earthly things are designed of God for your use, and the furtherance of your salvation: Not as if the Saints had a right to other men's interests. The Apostle doth not speak here (saith Pareus) of civil possessions, but of that divine order by which all things ought to serve the good and advantage of the Church of God. The Earth is the Lord's, & the fullness thereof; all which is given into the hands of Christ for the good of his people: And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the Church, Ephes. 1. 22. The whole Earth is but God's Kitchen, for the maintenance of his house; and if he will feed his servants and slaves, much more his children: He gives to all their meat in due season, and satisfies the desires of every living thing: Much more will he care for, and give food convenient to his living in Jerusalem. Indeed Believers are not of the world, and therefore have not their portions in the world; they are the Heirs of Heaven, and have no promise of more on Earth than will comfortably carry them home, and suffice for the discharge of those offices assigned to them here: They are Servants, not Heirs, who carry the cloak-bags in their journey. Persons of grandeur bear no more about them than for present use: Surely, were earthly treasures good for heaven-born souls, he that gives better things would not deny these: But God knows enough is as good as a feast; and so much the Saints shall have in their passage home. No man sends his servants a journey, but he allows them enough to carry them thorough; and so will God to his: If he maintains idlers and enemies; much more will he feed his faithful servants and laborers: He hath promised to supply all their wants, Phil. 4. 19. and is able to make it good: If he thinks it not much to give them a Crown, he will not deny them Crumbs: If God should let his work-men, want, his work would cease; his own interest, as well as his promise, obliges him to look after such; his Love, Truth, Glory, with all his Attributes, are concerned to maintain his people in his work; and therefore nothing more sure than daily bread, and sufficiency in all things to such as serve and obey him.

Secondly, Godliness will secure you in dangerous times, Prov. 3. 23. Thou shalt then walk in thy way safely, and thy foot shall not stumble; when thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid; yea thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet, v. 24. For the Lord shall be thy confidence, and shall keep thy foot from being taken. The way of duty is the way of safety: whatever men think, the greatest security is in the boldest Adventures for God (if regular;) where his Sun does guide you, there his shadow will cover you; who shall harm you if you are followers of that which is good? 1 Pet. 3. 13. Men may threaten you, but cannot injure you; they may spoil your estates, imprison your bodies, but cannot do you any real harm; while men keep with God, God will abide with them; his presence shall fence them, his favor shall shield them, his Angels shall encamp about them; all his Attributes shall guard and secure them: God's people that cleave to him in duty, are as the Hebrews in Goshen, as Israel in the wilderness, as Noah in the Ark; they only are safe from ruining evils, when others are exposed to destroying judgments.

Thirdly, Nay, Holiness will not only maintain and secure you; but it will also enrich you, and fill you with the best Treasures, the true Riches, Luke 16. 11. the tried gold that cannot be corrupted or defrauded, Matth. 6. 20. It will furnish you with the unsearchable riches of Christ: the world hath its treasures; and so hath Christ his precious substance, to bestow on all that trade with and for him; as hath been already shewn.

Fourthly, Piety will cheer and delight you; no comforts like theirs who walk with God in truth: This was Hezekia's cordial when under a sentence of death, Isa. 38. 3. Remember O Lord, I beseech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart: And Paul's rejoicing, that in all simplicity and godly sincerity he had his conversation in this world, 2 Cor. 1. 12. The purest pleasures flow down from the Throne, and steam in thorough Sanctuary-waters into the soul: Alas! what are those drossy comforts that run thorough the worlds channels, which only leave a slime behind, and then empty themselves into the dead Sea of perdition, perishing in their using, Col. 2. 22. Carnal mirth hath a pleasant entrance, but an ill farewell, Prov. 14. 13. Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful, and the end of that mirth is heaviness: But Religion breeds the best contentments, and most satisfying pleasures, Psal. 36. 8. They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house, and thou shalt make them drink of the rivers of thy pleasures.

Fifthly, Wisdom's Trade will make you truly great and honorable, and give you a place to walk among those that stand by, Zach. 3. 7. That is (saith Junius) I will place thee in the same dignity the Angels of God enjoy in Heaven, and thou shalt dwell in the same Church among those Myriads, Prov. 4. 8. Exalt her, and she shall promote thee; she shall bring thee to honor when thou dost embrace her. V. 9. She shall give to thine head an Ornament of grace, a Crown of glory shall she deliver thee. How contemptibly soever the world looks on the ways of Godliness, and those that espouse them; yet all true greatness lies on the side of piety. All the world's glory is but a Pageant, a mere show of honor, compared to that which is on the head of every true Believer: Saints have the noblest extraction, born of God; the highest dignity, made Kings and Priests unto God, Rev. 1. 6. Ye shall be unto me a Kingdom of Priests, Exod. 10. 6. Cloathed with the richest Ornaments, perfect through divine comeliness, Ezek. 16. 10, to 15. appointed to a Kingdom that is everlasting, assured of Thrones and Crowns with Christ for evermore. Rev. 3. 21. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am sit down with my Father in his Throne. A sure Throne shall Believers have above, as certain as Christ is now upon his Fathers Throne; and the same Throne that the Father gives to Christ, specifically, though not gradually: A Crown fitted to their heads; indeed Saints cannot wear the Crown Christ doth; his is the Redeemer's Crown; theirs the Redeemeds, made of the same glory: Joh. 17. 24. Father I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me, that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me, 2 Tim. 2. 12. If we suffer, we shall also reign with him. O blessed glory, and greatly to be longed for! whose measure is incomprehensible, whose duration is undeterminable.

Now, Sinners; If these Arguments convince you that 'tis your necessity, interest and duty to set upon this great employment, and you find your hearts really willing to come up to the proposed terms of this high Calling, and embrace any counsels that lead thereto. Then;

Direct. 1. First; You must get a capacity for so excellent an undertaking: Heavenly work is too high for earthly natures; and special service for common endowments: They that are in the flesh cannot please God, Rom. 8. 8. No creature can act beyond its being, 'tis above the sphere of unchanged nature to carry up the Soul to things above, there must be a spiritual principle before there can be a heavenly operation; you must first be God's workmanship before you can do his work; and be created to good works before you can walk therein, Eph. 2. 10. 'Tis a sad thing (saith Mr. Caryl) to see a badman do that which is bad; yet it is a sadder sight to see a bad man continuing in his state, to go on doing good; this is the acting of the new creature's part in the old creature's state, and what will that avail? To set upon Religion in an unregenerate state, is labor in vain; the dumb may as well speak, the blind see, the dead walk, while they remain such, as they that are evil do good: Can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit? Mat. 7. 18. Or a Fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter? Jam. 3. 11. No more can an unsanctified Soul do holy work. The person must be gracious before the work can be good; God had first respect to Abel, and then to his Offering, Gen. 4. 4. The ungrafted Cherry-tree brings forth but harsh fruit, let the soil and dressing be never so good; so is the Soul under the highest privileges and performances without implantation into Christ: The root must bear the branch before the branch can bear fruit; a breaking off from the wild Olive with a participation of the fatness of the good Olive-tree, is absolutely necessary to true faithfulness, Rom. 11. 17, 18. Four things are needful to make an action Evangelically good; a good Principle, Matter, Form and End: neither of which is consistent with a man in his natural state: 'Tis dangerous also as well as vain, for persons to set upon doing good, and never care to become good; for this deceives their own Souls, making them think their condition safe when they are wretched, miserable, poor, blind and naked, Rev. 3. 16. and not only feeds an error in their state, but strongly hinders the cure, while these unprofitable duties consume Salvation-time, and destroy Salvation-hopes; despair is usually the issue of presumption; and they that conceit too soon that all is well, shall conclude when too late, that it shall never be better: This then is your first work, (Souls) To be sanctified and made meet for your Masters use, and prepared to every good work, 2 Tim. 2. 21. Labor to get your natures changed, and hearts quickened; you must be born again, or cannot see the Kingdom of God: Be looking to Jesus to create in you a new heart, a renewed mind, will and affections, to have a saving principle put into your hearts, and a disposition of Soul towards the whole will of God: Cry mightily for the Spirit, and wait for his movings upon the face of Sanctuary-waters, and for a mighty power of God in the Gospel upon your Souls: Get under the healing-wings of Christ, and rest not looking unto Jesus till virtue go out from him to heal your Souls: If this be thy restless desire, thou canst not let Christ alone, running after him, crying, Jesu, thou Son of David, have mercy upon me; he will turn again, and have compassion, and give the holy Spirit to them that unfeignedly and incessantly ask him, Mark 10. 47, 48, 49. Luke 11. 13.

Direct. 2. Secondly, cease from your own works. Isa. 55. 7. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy: The first step in returning to God, is departing from sin and self; Neither can we (saith Calvin) hold converse with a holy God, till we be estranged from our unholy self. When the Apostle advises the Ephesians to put on the new man, Eph. 4. 24. He first exhorts them to put off the old, with his whole conversation: verse. 22. That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt: Grace builds not on an old foundation, neither does it adorn, but reform the former conversation of called Saints; there is no clothing upon in regeneration-work, the old garments must off before the new will come on: Religion is not a covering for, but a stripping off a sinful life, neither can you be free to set on God's work till you leave your old works. Rom. 6. 20. For when you were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness: You had nothing to do with holiness, you had no freedom to do God's work while you were Sins servants: He speaks of their actual liberty from grace, not their legal freedom, saith Pareus;) you are not at liberty to do the work of holiness, while under the command of sin. No man can serve two Masters: Mat. 6. 24. that is, two contrary Lord's, How can the same man (saith Grotius) follow godliness as his work, and at the same time be distracted with cares about getting and keeping earthly things? 'Tis a vanity for persons to dream of a compliance between sin and holiness, whose work is too inconsistent for one Soul at one time; ruling iniquity and grace, are two contrary states, which cannot meet in one person and time: Never think of setting up on the Heavenly Trade, till you are freed from hellish servitude, and invested with the liberty of the Sons of God, a freedom from the love and service of every sin. Godliness calls for the whole of a man's heart, strength and time, and requires a person void of any inconsistent obligations; resolve to break from every way of death, if ever you think to enter into the way of life.

Direct. 3. Thirdly, Make over yourselves to the Lord in an Everlasting Covenant; they that will be Masters of a Trade, must first be bound to the service of it, and resign up their persons, wills, capacities and time to the instruction and government of another in order to their fitness for such a calling: And so must souls that will learn Wisdom's Merchandise, they must bind themselves to the Trade, and make over themselves and their all to God in Christ, to be taught and enabled to set up this excellent work. Jer. 50. 5. They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual Covenant that cannot be forgotten. Sin had made a separation between their God and them, and brought a death upon their mercies and Templeenjoyments: but now the Spirit of Prophecy breathing on these dry bones, moves them to a vital union with the fountain of life, (the only regular way to their new work and mercies) they must first be joined to the Lord, before they can be rejoined to one another, and reenjoy their lost privileges; and this union lies in a hearty acceptance of offered grace, a taking hold of God in Christ, and a Covenant-surrender of the whole soul and its All to him again: [O for arms to embrace him, saith Mr. Rutherford!] This is called a giving up of ones self to the Lord, 2 Corinth. 8. 5. But this they did not as we hoped, but first gave themselves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God: They exceeded our hope: We only expected some part of what was theirs, but they gave themselves first to God, and to us (to be directed and governed by the will of God, to be placed in the fellowship of his Gospel) as well as their interests to the service of his people: 'Tis also a giving away of ones self to the Lord wholly, unreservedly and perpetually, to be no more his own, 1 Cor. 6. 19. And ye are not your own. This surrender of yourselves to God (souls) must be in judgment, understandingly, and ariseth freely on choice; universally, without the least reservation; absolutely, without any limitation or conditions of our own; eternally, without any expiration and term of this grant, and to be attested by all overt acts within your power, Isa. 44. 5. One shall say I am the Lord's; another shall call himself by the name of Jacob; another shall subscribe with his hand unto the Lord, and surname himself by the name of Jacob. Whatever may most fully ensure and express an absolute devotedness unto God, must be done by those that ever expect to thrive in grace and godliness. Verse 3, 4. I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground; I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy offspring, and they shall spring up as among the grass, as willows by the watercourses. When once this implantation into Christ is dispatched, then will the Lord give prosperity to that soul; then are you in a sure way to success in all your holy undertakings, and like to speed well in this Heavenly Trade when you become entirely the Lord's in order to it: O be not satisfied till God be yours: [The King's Son or no Husband, Rutherford.] The rational soul (saith Augustine) being capable of God, can be satisfied with nothing but God.

Direct. 4. Fourthly, Come over into the family of Christ, if you would drive on this Heavenly Trade to purpose: Apprentices are household servants, up-rising, and down-lying; and so must Wisdom's Traders be; they must be members of Christ's family, and dwellers in the house of God. Psal. 65. 4. Blessed is the man whom thou chooseth, and causeth to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy Courts; we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy Temple. Those whom God chooses for himself, he brings to himself, and makes them dwellers in his Courts: Sucha one is entered into his family, that he being a sound Believer, may spend his life among the holy Citizens of Heaven. Those whom the Lord takes into Covenant, he takes into communion; not only with himself, but with his people. Jer. 3. 14, 15. I am married unto you, and I will take you one of a City, and two of a Family, and I will bring you unto Zion, and I will give you Pastors according to my own heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding: This was intended of Gospeltimes and Churches: When all the Nations shall be gathered to the Name of the Lord to Jerusalem, verse 17. And the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, verse 18. which began to be fulfilled upon the breaking down of the partition wall, and the bringing in of the Gentiles unto Christ, Ephes. 2. 14, 15, 19. When Believers should be no more strangers, and foreiners, but fellow-citizens with the Saints, and of the household of God. The Apostle hath reference to the 12th verse, where souls out of Christ are said to be aliens from the Commonwealth of Israel, strangers to the Covenant of Promise; but now having access to God by one Spirit, verse 18. Ye are no more strangers and foreiners. (a) In respect of the Church of God you are no longer strangers (saith Zanchi) but fellow-citizens with the Saints; and in regard of the Covenant of God, you are no more foreiners, but of the household of God. In whom all the building fitly framed together (that is, every stone in the building) groweth unto an holy Temple in the Lord, verse 21. The Church of God is his Temple where he is rightly served, Rev. 7. 15. Therefore are they before the Throne of God, and serve him day and night in his Temple: which is his Church (saith Mr. Durham) here begun by fellowship in his Ordinances and in Heaven completely. Ezek. 20. 40. For in my holy Mountain; in the Mountain of the Height of Israel (a type of Gospel-Churches) saith the Lord God; there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the Land, serve me; there will I accept them, there will I require your offerings: Plainly intimating that God hath no acceptable service, but in the Churches of his Saints; I mean as to public worship: Persons cannot give God his full instituted worship, till they come into fellowship with his people, seeing Church-fellowship is itself an institution of Christ. Matth. 28. 19, 20. Acts 2. 41, 42. 1 Cor. 12. 28. Mat. 18. 17, 18, 19. The Church of Christ is his body, where he hath set his members, 1 Cor. 12. 18. That being fitly joined together, they might increase with the increase of God, Ephes. 4. 16. Col. 2. 19. His Vineyard where his work lies, and into which he sends his Laborers, Isa. 5. 7. Matth. 20. 1, 2. His Garden where his Lilies and Beds of Spices are. Cant. 6. 2. His Family where he feeds and instructs them; where he guides and governs them. 1 Tim. 3. 15. Ephes. 3. 15. His Sanctuary where he hides and secures them. Psal. 78. 69. His Galleries where he walks, and is held by his Saints. Cant. 7. 5. His Goldencandlesticks where his Lamps are burning: The Firmament and Heaven where his Stars are shining, and the Sun of Righteousness ariseth with healing in his wings. Rev. 2. 1. There's his Granary where he lays up his provisions, his manna, marrow, fat things, and spiced wine: Isa. 25. 6. There's his School where he instructs his Disciples, and makes them wise to salvation. Isa. 54. 13. All thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of thy children: There are his Oracles and Secrets. Rom. 3. 2. The Adoption, the Glory, the Covenants, the giving of the Law, and the Service of God, and the Promises, Rom. 9. 4. There's his Nursery where his tender plants are set to grow, where he brings in those that shall be saved. Acts 2. 47. And the Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved. His converting the Gentiles is called a persuading them into the tents of Shem, that is the Church of God, Gen. 9. 27. Yea the House of God is the gate of Heaven. Gen. 28. 17. This is none other but the House of God; this is the gate of Heaven. By the gate of the Church (saith Augustine) we enter into the gate of Paradise: How goodly then are these Tents of Jacob? How amiable are those Tabernacles of Israel? As the valleys they spread forth, as gardens by the Rivers side, as the trees of Lign-aloes which the Lord hath planted, and as Cedar-trees beside the waters, Numb. 24. 5, 6. To your Tents then O Israel, 2 Sam. 20. 1. Fly to your windows O ye Doves, Isa. 60. 8. Love the habitation of God's house, and the place where his honor dwells, Psal. 26. 8. Where are such pleasures, treasures, light, life? where are your chiefest interests, your privileges, your work, your Lord, the first-fruits of your eternal glory? if you have taken Christ for your Teacher, you must take his Church for your School; you must dwell where he dwells, where you may sit at his feet, and receive his Doctrine.

Direct. 5. Fifthly, Be mortified to this present world; get your hearts loose from things below. No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him that hath chosen him to be a soldier, 2 Tim. 2. 4. He does not lay ties and snares about his feet, which throw him down, and hinder the course he engages to follow. Christianity is a Warfare, and Race; earthly things in the heart are as entanglements about the feet, which hinder this undertaking; you will have no liberty to heavenly things, till redeemed from the Earth; nor can run the race towards glory, till you lay aside the weights that press you down, and the sin that doth so easily beset you, Heb. 12. 1. If you will set your affections on things above, you must first take them off from things beneath, Col. 3. 2. He that sets his face towards Heaven, must turn his back upon the world, Phil. 3. 13. Forgetting those things that are behind, and reaching forth unto those things that are before: The world is one of those things Christians must leave behind them, if ever they think to reach Heaven We should (saith Luther) with a certain greatness of mind contemn this life, and world, and with a large heart breathe after the future glory of an Eternal Life. Till you are brought to a contempt of this world, and can count it as dross and dung, you can never value Heaven, or pursue things above with an even and uninterrupted heart. That soul which designs to make Religion its work, must be ready to attend it at all times, and to have the heart composed and fitted to all the instructions that lead to it, which an earthly heart cannot do: A light and mutable spirit, now for God, and then for the world, is unfit for this great employment. He that puts his hand to the plough, and looks back, is unmeet for the Kingdom of God, Luke 9. 62. And such is a heart under the command of earthly things; 'tis never steadfast with God: the things of this world fill the soul with wind, and make it light and trifling about the things of God: The heart of man is like that Jewel (I have read of) that one gave to Alexander, that while it was kept bright, weighed down the choicest gold, and most precious stones; but if once it fell into the dust, and took rust, it was lighter than a feather: And so is the heart, if it falls into the dusty things of this world. The Church clothed with the Sun, hath the Moon under her feet, Rev. 12. 1. The more a soul is filled with the pure knowledge of God, and shining in its conversation, the more it is lifted up above the world: The nearer Heaven, the farther from Earth. The more separate from the world (says Mr. Greenhill on Ezek. 3. 23.) the more fit for communion with God: Ezekiel must leave his house, and go into the plain, and there the Lord will talk with him. The King's daughter must forget her own people, and her Father's house, ere the King would greatly desire her beauty, Psal. 45. 10, 11. And Abraham must leave his Country, and pleasant habitation, before he could get into a way of frequent communion with God; and so must a soul in heart and affections sit loose from the ensnaring things of this world, if ever he thinks to drive this Heavenly Trade. By so much the more (saith Augustine) doth any one cleave to God, as he ceases from loving his own interests.

Direct. 6. You must resolve on this also, To submit to all the instructions the Lord Jesus gives you; to go thorough all the labors, and bear all the burdens that this Heavenly Trade calls you to; every Art and Calling have their principles and rules, by the knowledge and obedience of which they are attained to; and so hath Religion: And as Piety is the highest and noblest profession; so are its principles more pure and mysterious, and with greatest difficulty attainable. Acquired knowledge furnishes men with light sufficient for all earthly undertakings; but to this Heavenly Trade both infused and acquired understanding is needful; both rules, and an eye to discern them must be given, if ever this Art be obtained: For this end the Lord Jesus is given, for a light of the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, that they may see, Isa. 42. 6, 7. and for a Prophet, to teach and instruct them the way they should go: and to hear and obey him as such, is the absolute duty of all that have given themselves up to his conduct and government; Acts 3. 22. A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren like unto me, him shall you hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. He hath undertaken to inwite them that obey him, and to show them what they must do, Acts 9. 6. And if they go on to know, they shall know the Lord: if they sit at his feet, and hear his Word, Deut. 33. 3. he will shine out to them, and send out a fiery Law for them: In order to which instruction your duty is to hear him, to watch daily at his gates, and to wait at the posts of his house, Prov. 8. 34. when he calls, say with Samuel, Speak Lord, for thy servant heareth, 1 Sam. 3. 10. And whatsoever he saith (said the Mother of our Lord) unto you, do it, John 2. 5. Slight no directions, stick at no difficulties in comporting with his pleasure, 'tis for the life of your souls; obedience is so necessary in the Disciples of Christ, as that without it no true knowledge can be attained here, John 7. 17. (if any man doth his will he shall know the Doctrine) nor salvation hereafter, Heb. 5. 9. (he became the Author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him:) His yoke is easy, and his burden is light, Prov. 8. 5, 6. Prov. 3. 17. He enjoins you nothing but what is needful, profitable, excellent, and pleasant: Hear and your souls shall live, Isa. 53. 3. Shall the servants of men come, go, do this or that, when they are bidden? Matt. 8. 8. Yea, shall the Devil's slaves do the greatest drudgeries, run most desperate adventures; throw themselves from pinacles; yea damn their souls at his bidding? and the servants of Christ so disobedient (when 'tis for their own concerns, their mercies and advantages are wrapped up in it) and that to so rational and easy injunctions? The consideration of this prevailed with a Heathen to obedience, when against his inclination. 2 King. 5. 13. His servants came near and said; My Father, if the Prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it? (seeing it is for thy life and health) how much rather then when he saith to thee, wash and be clean? If his commands seem grievous, let love sweeten them: If his yoke seem heavy, let his rest at the end of it render it easy: when duties seem burdensome to flesh and blood, his burdens heavy, losses for the Gospel's sake great, think thus; better smart once than ever; to undergo troubles in the way, than at the end; to have my bad things here, rather than be tormented hereafter, Luke 16. 25. and what pains and hardships will men undergo for gold that perisheth, 1 Pet. 1. 7. yea for counters that cheat them; and shall not I for an inheritance that fadeth not, reserved in Heaven, 1 Pet. 1. 5? What strivings have some to obtain a Crown that is corruptible; and shall I be weary that am in pursuit of one that is incorruptible? 1 Cor. 9. 25. without labor, no rest; without bearing the heat and burden of the day (when called thereto) no penny at the end, Matt. 20. 12, 13. without striving lawfully, no crowning, 2 Tim. 2. 5. without doing the commandment, no eating of the tree of life, Rev. 22. 14. without enduring to the end, no salvation, Mark 13. 13. comfort yourselves with this, that Heaven will make amends for all; when your wet and weary sowings shall end in a pleasant and eternal harvest. Gal. 16. 9. Let us not be weary in well doing, for you shall reap in due time, if ye faint not: Be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as you know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. 58.

Direct. 7. Lastly, What you do, do quickly: Time waits not your leisure. There are but twelve hours in the day, and how many of them have been slept and sinned away, and how few of them may be before you, who knows? What if your Sun should set at noon day? or a summons meet you in the midst of your work: Give account of thy Stewardship, for thou shalt be no longer Steward Luke 16. 2. What will you then do? Some of you are in your afternoon, & what time is that to set forth such a long journey as the way to Heaven is? and yet will you gain (by your delays) some of this time also, for the Devil, World and Flesh? others of you are in your morning, (the best time to put forth in your travel towards glory:) O! lose not your season for eternity: Make much of time, (saith Aquinas) especially in the weighty matter of Salvation: O! how much would they that now lie frying in Hell, rejoice, if they might have the least minute of time wherein they might get God's favor: the young man hath death at his back, the old man before his eyes, and that's the more dangerous enemy that pursues thee, than that which marches up to thy face: Christ's work admits of no delays, his injunction allows not of too morrow, but while 'tis called today: Heb. 3. 7. To day if you will hear his voice, verse. 13. To day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin: Seek the Lord while he may be found, Isa. 55. 6. [Haste, haste, the tide will not bide, Rutherford.] 'Tis now or never, while the Light shines, the Lord knocks, the Angel moves on the waters, while the Lord delays his coming: Salvation-work is quick work, God's racers must run, his Doves must fly, his Servants be diligent, that they may be found of him in peace, 1 Cor. 9. 26. Isa. 60. 8. 2 Pet. 3. 14. You that have stood idle in the market-place all your day hitherto, hasten into the Lord's Vineyard, Matt. 20. 6. [Love is sick to hear tell of tomorrow: Mr. Rutherford.] What Jonathan said to his Lad when David's life was in danger, let me advise you: And Jonathan cried after the Lad, make speed, haste, stay not, 1 Sam. 20. 38. I rue nothing (said precious Mr. Welch when on his sick-bed) but that I was so long in beginning: O, saith David, that I had wings like a Dove, for then would I fly away, and be at rest: I would hasten my escape from the stormy wind and Tempest, Psal. 55. 6, 8. Sinners, you are in danger of stormy tempests while in your unchanged state; O hasten to your strong holds ye prisoners of hope. When Brenz was like to be given up to the enemy, one writes him this note; Fuge Brenti cito citius citissime: Fly Brenz quickly, more quickly, most speedily. Souls, 'tis for your lives, make all possible haste about the work of your Salvation: And you that are entered on this heavenly work, double your diligence that you may finish your course before God finishes your time: methinks the word of God, and his providences this day; yea, everything seems to thrust you forward, and do to you as Pharaoh's Task-masters did to Israel: Exod. 5. 13. And the Task-masters hasted them, saying, fulfil your work.

To Professors.

Counsel 2. Secondly, if the Heavenly Trade be the best Trade; then you that profess this Calling, be you exhorted to follow it; keep up and improve your Trade for Heaven: what's an employment without improvement? the most profitable Calling not followed, turns to little advantage: The day we live in gives men sensible experience of this truth, that they who intend to live in the World, must attend their employments: The idle person suffers hunger; they must be careful and diligent in their business, that think to make anything of their earthly interests: and so 'tis in this Trade of godliness; they that will be saved, must work out their Salvation. A Trade is a man's business, and course of life, which he pursues and carries on from day today; 'tis the subject of his thoughts, counsels, and considerations; of his time and strength, and daily work; where he ends one day, he begins the next, and contributes his utmost wisdom, parts and labors to the most vigorous prosecution of it: And so must it be in this Heavenly Trade, (Christians,) it must be the impending business, and principal concern of your whole life; that which commands your thoughts, purposes and capacities; which engrosses your time, care and strength, and to which every other business must give way, and every occasion and occurrence must be subservient: it must be followed, and driven on every day, in everything, place and company; whatever is neglected, that must go on, and give no place to intermissions, no, not for a moment: You must not say to godliness, as Felix did to Paul: Go thy way for this time, when I have a more convenient season I will send for thee, Acts 24. 25. Stops in the way of God are not easily recovered; one days neglect brings all out of order: Prosperity in Religion admits of no Parenthesis in its work, or consists with allowed interruptions; Piety must be as the blood that runs through every vein of your life, and affair in the World: In eating, drinking, talking, thinking, buying, selling, you must be still driving on Wisdom's Merchandise. Christians, follow your work, or lay down your Trade; 'tis vanity, yea, the way to beggary, to profess a Calling, and not pursue it.

Quest. But wherein lies this Heavenly Trade, which I must so make my business? what do you drive at by all these Arguments for Heavenly Trading?

What I intend by this metaphor, I shall open to you under these seven general Heads, as the main duty of a Christian, and to be carried on in the whole course of his life.

- 1 To have and keep up a heavenly spirit.
- 2 To secure your interest in heavenly things.
- 3 To get in more and more of heavenly Goods.
- 4 Every day to drive on heavenly work.
- 5 To be heavenly in your thoughts and meditations daily.
- 6 To keep up heavenly converses every day.
- 7 To improve everything you have, meet with, and do, to heavenly ends and advantages.

First, If you will drive on this heavenly Trade, you must have and maintain a heavenly spirit; this is the spring of all heavenly actions; as is a man's spirit, so will his thoughts, words and conversation be; look what way the spirit of a man goes, that way the man goes: They that are after the flesh, do mind the things of the flesh; and they that are after the spirit, the things of the spirit; That is, they that are altogether led by their carnal affections, (saith Willet) following the ducture of the flesh, (saith Pareus,) who are governed by a carnal spirit, they mind and pursue carnal things; and they that are after the spirit, who are under the rule and government of the spirit, who are spiritually minded, these do savor and make after spiritual things. What the Prophet Ezekiel speaks of the motion of second causes according to the direction and influence of the first cause. Ezek. 1. 20. Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went; (that is the wheels,) for the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels: The same may be said of the actions of men, that they are according to the motion of that ruling spirit that is in them: they that live in the spirit, walk in the spirit, Gal. 5. 25. Caleb's fulfilling after God, was the fruit of that other spirit he received, Numb. 14. 24. 'Tis said of those that built the house of God, Ezra 1. 5. that God had raised up their spirits to the work, as birds stir up their young to fly. Then rose up the chief of the Fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the Priests and Levites, with all those whose spirit God had raised up, to go up to build the House of the Lord which is in Jerusalem. They that set about the work of Religion, must be persons of raised spirits, capable of ascending to things above. The reason why no more do set upon this Heavenly Trade, is, because they want this heavenly spirit, their spirit is earthly, and that (as leaven) seasons their whole souls, and makes their conversations earthly: 'Tis contrary to nature, for a carnal mind to savor spiritual things; Such are not subject to the Spirit of God, neither indeed can be, Rom. 8. 7. 'Tis as natural for the stone to ascend, and waters to run back, as for an earthly heart to love and pursue heavenly things. A heavenly spirit suits heavenly things, and does as naturally incline the soul to things above, as the fire moves upward, and the water carries all that is in it to the Ocean. A heavenly spirit savors heavenly things, and stirs up heavenly desires and motions to divine things. A heavenly spirit conveys out heavenly influences and strength to the soul, and is as good blood and spirits that strengthen the body. A heavenly spirit is influenced by heavenly arguments, and prevailed with by heavenly motives taken from the love of God, the excellency of Christ, the suitableness and advantage of spiritual things to the nature of the soul, the pleasing and glorifying of God; all which signifies nothing to an earthly and carnal heart, which only understands, savors, and is acted by carnal reasons and considerations. 'Tis therefore a principal part of a Christian's business in this Heavenly Trade, (and that which is leading to all other duties) to take heed to his spirit, Mai. 2. 15. to get and keep that pure and heavenly. If the fountain be corrupt, the streams cannot be good: Get your minds beam'd over with heavenly light, to discern heavenly things, their nature and worth; this Paul begs for the Saints at Ephesus; Eph. 1. 17, 18. That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of Glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him; the eyes of your understanding being enlighten'd, that you may know what is the hope of his Calling, and what is the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the Saints. There are great hopes and glorious riches made over to Believers in the Gospel, the knowledge of which is necessary to cheer the heart, and engage the soul with all its strength to make out after them. One thought of Christ (saith Mr. Ball) reaching the heart, is more to be valued than all Creature-contentments whatsoever, though they should be enjoyed in their fullness for a thousand years without interruption: 'Twas this kept alive the Apostles hearts, under the dyings of the Lord Jesus in their bodies, and filled them with such courage & joy, that they had an eye to see glorious and eternal things. 2 Cor. 4. 10. 13. 16. 18. While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal. And this was their great work by the Gospel, to make men see what is the fellowship of the mystery which from the beginning of the World was hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ, Eph. 3. 9. And having got this spiritual eye, a Christian's duty is to keep it open, and fixed on things above, to preserve it from the injury of Sin and Satan, to take heed of the vapors of a carnal heart, and the dusty motes of this lower World, that they fall not in and weaken this sight: to get eye-salve from Christ, and pure annointings of the spirit on it every day, that they may see things invisible, and those great things of the other World they are engaged about: The most discerning eye on this side the everlasting Hills sees but darkly through a glass, and knows but in part, 1 Cor. 13. 9. 12. How carnal are the minds of most Christians in this World? the very Disciples (though their eyes were blessed with peculiar sights,) Mat. 13. 16. yet had carnal apprehensions of spiritual things, even after the Lord Jesus had spent all his pains about them. Acts 1. 6. Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the Kingdom unto Israel? knowing souls have sometimes their eyes held that they cannot see Jesus, Luke 24. 16. nor bear discoveries of his glorious truth, Joh. 16. 12. that the Lord Jesus may say to all in this life; O fools, and slow of heart to believe, Luke 24. 28. David, after he had been long a learner, yea, after he was wiser than his teachers, yet cries out for more light. Psal. 143. 8. Cause me to know the way wherein I should walk. Psal. 119. 18. Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy Law. We may sail here (saith Mr. Hooker) in daily search, and when we know, there is something still beyond our knowledg, as men that travel in the main Ocean, they see nothing but water, and yet see neither side nor shore, brim nor bottom, and there is more water to be seen. All the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid in Christ, and he keeps the keys in his own hand and bosom. Be often looking unto Jesus for clearer sights of him, and the things freely given of God, with the way to them. Knock often at the treasury-door, till he answer and open, and send you away enriched with the knowledge of him: this is part of your Trade, to know Goods, and the worth of them, and how to buy and sell to best advantage. Alas, to what purpose is it to deal in Commodities that men know not? and heavenly things are hidden things, beyond the search of Men and Angels. 1 Pet. 1. 12. Which things the Angels desire to look into; They bowed and stooped down to pry into those hidden secrets, and as it were to peep into the mysteries of the Gospel; as the word signifies; to look a-squint with cross eyes, every way, and with quickest observance, as through a Casement at one that passeth by; and this they did with an earnest and restless desire. The Apostle alludes to the Cherubims placed over the Mercy-seat, with their faces looking towards the Mercy-seat, and through it to the Ark (a type of Christ and Gospel-mysteries) Exod. 25. 20. as things worthy, and yet hard to be known, which call for an inward and spiritual eye under fresh annointings every day. Christians, this is your daily work, to follow on to know the Lord; to be much with the Sun of Righteousness for healings and beamings on the eve of your mind, that you may be more capable to understand the whole counsel of God concerning you. This is a Heavenly Spirit or Mind enlightened with Heavenly Wisdom to eye and understand heavenly spiritual things.

Another property of a Heavenly Spirit is this; 'Tis a Spirit that savors as well as sees heavenly things; it tastes a sweetness in divine things; there is nothing in all the world that so pleases a spiritual mind, as spiritual things: so much is included in that word, Rom. 8. 5. Domind the things of the flesh: that is, do savor and relish them; so 'tis rendered, Matth. 16. 23. For thou savorest not the things that be of God; it includes the affections as well as understanding. A heavenly spirit takes delight in heavenly things, and is an active principle that carries out the soul after God and things eternal: And that's your work too, to get and maintain a delight in God, and divine things; to cherish breathings after heavenly things, and preserve your spiritual senses in exercise, that your souls may be ever quick in seeing, hearing, tasting, smelling and feeling, the joys and pleasures that are in things above: By this means Religion will be desirable, Christ's yoke easy, and his ways pleasant, and his commands not grievous, This is one of the most difficult pieces of Christianity, to maintain the inward principle and spring of holy actions pure and lively: 'Tis far easier to set on any external duty, than to keep the heart in a fit active frame for God, which is apt to languish and grow out of order every moment, if not kept and maintained by continued supplies from above. Prov. 4. 23. Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of Life. Now if you would keep up a heavenly spirit:

First, Beware of those things that weaken it: A Heavenly Spirit is a very tender thing, and must be charily kept, or will soon suffer loss; 'tis like the apple of the eye, that is liable to injury from every dust or stroke that comes nigh it; or like a Venice-glass, that is down and broken with every little touch. You cannot be too choice and tender in watching and guarding this Spirit from everything that is contrary to it.

Take heed of carnal lusts, these stand between God and the soul, and these resist the Spirit, Gal. 5. 17. and fight against the soul. 1 Pet. 2. 11. Dearly Beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, that war against the soul. Water is as consistent with fire, sickness with health, death with life, as unmortified lusts with a heavenly spirit; and you may as safely dwell with thieves and bloody murderers, as suffer fleshly lusts to harbor near your hearts: These suffered to hover in the soul, will devour your sacrifice; and like water, quench this sacred fire; and with the Ivy, eat out the nourishment of this heaven-born spirit. When Alexander asked Diogenes what he would desire of him; that you (saith he) would stand aside a little from between me and the warm Sun: so a soul that knows what the views of God are, will desire nothing more than the remove of what stands between him and the warming sight of this heavenly Sun. Carnal lusts are as venomous breath, that soon seize on, and weaken the vitals of godliness: Never expect peace or welfare to the spiritual seed, till the bondwoman and her Son be cast out. How soon have excellent frames been all lost, and the candle of the Lord well-nigh put out by these filthy damps that ascend from the deeps of unclean and unmortified affections. This wrought such changes in Israel; now they sang his praises, and then presently forgot his works, Psal. 106. 12. Those divine raptures could not abide, and what was the cause? why 'twas unmortified lusts that had dominion over them. V. 14. They lusted exceedingly in the wilderness, and tempted God in the Desert, and he gave them their requests, but sent leanness into their souls. This soon brought the Jews from being conquerors, to captives, that they did not pursue their victories, and drive out the Canaanites out of the valleys, as well as the mountains, Judge. 1. 19. ch. 2, 3. This want of mortification in Believers is the cause that their corruptions do so often give check to their graces, and make their choice heavenly frames so short-lived and mutable. [O cursed pleasures! O damnable ease bought with the loss of God! Rutherford.] O Christians! guard your spirit from those filthy and fleshly lusts, as Physicians do fortify the spirits against malignant vapors, if ever you will maintain a gracious and heavenly spirit.

Earthly things also admitted too near the heart, prove the bane of a heavenly spirit: these, like a stone at the bird's leg, pluck it down when it attempts to be upon the wing: Worldly affections, when they exceed their bounds, are like waters that overflow the banks; they carry down all heavenly motions before them. Earthly things are the Devils lure to professing Christians, which draw down their lofty meditations, when they are in chase of things above; as the Fowler allures down the towering Lark when hovering aloft in the gentle air. The Devil deals with earthly men, as Naturalists say men do with Bees; when they swarm and are flying away, they throw up dust, and they scatter again: So doth Satan when their thoughts are up upon heavenly things; he casts in the dusty thoughts of this world, and they scatter them again. Demas hath forsaken us, having loved this present world, 2 Tim. 4. 10. Earthly things draw away the heart from God, his work and interest: How often do those interrupt, if not countermand the most serious thoughts of gracious souls? and where they cannot as a Master command, they will as neighbors be often coming in, and hinder the soul in its most weighty business, if the door be not locked against their unseasonable visits. Worldly lusts must be denied, as well as ungodliness, by those that intend to live righteously, soberly and godly in this present world, Tit. cap. 2. v. 11, 12. Earthly things are good servants, but bad

Masters; useful in their place; as fire in the hearth is profitable, but in the thatch dangerous; and as unruly Servants, and untamed Colts are serviceable when reduced to their place, and kept under government. Worldly thoughts are as some roots that must be often trod down, or they will spill up and seed in our hearts. Christians, have a special strong guard against the encroachments of your earthly affairs, if ever you will secure the thrivings of a heavenly spirit,

Take heed also of grieving the Spirit of Grace, which maintains and relieves this heavenly spirit: As the spring is to the streams; so is the holy Spirit to this heavenly spirit in Believers, that feeds and supplies it from his own nature: Now to grieve this Spirit, is to provoke him to withhold his gracious communications to the soul. Ephes. 4. 30. And grieve not the holy Spirit of God whereby you are sealed to the day of redemption: Which implies, that this Spirit of Grace being grieved, suspends its comforting sealing influences towards the souls of Believers. This Scripture is taken from Isa. 63. 10. But they rebelled and vexed his holy Spirit, therefore he was turned to be their enemy, and he fought against them: They grieved his Spirit, as the word signifies; and this broke that amicable accord between the Spirit and them, that he became their enemy, and cut off all succors from them; yea, comes forth against them: And that which grieved the Spirit of God was, the the abuse of its kindness. V. 9. In all their afflictions he was afflicted, and the Angel of his presence saved them; in his love and in his pity he redeemed them, and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old. Nothing does more grieve the Spirit of God, than the abuse of his kindness and tender mercy to his people; when the Lord hath been opening the bowels of his pity to souls in saving and redeeming-mercy, and hath been shedding abroad his love upon them, bearing with, and carrying of them for a long time; and all this is slighted and contemned, and the soul takes no notice of all this grace, but still perseveres in its evil course; this grieves the Spirit, and causeth him to withhold his tender mercy, and quickening influence from the soul, and it becomes weak as water, and withers in all the leaves of her spring, Ezek. 17. 9. Psa. 104. 29. As the member languishes when it can no longer receive influences from the head; and the branch withers when the root communicates no sap to it: so is it with the soul when the spirit ceases from all its gracious communications, as it does when grieved by those he loves and labors with; not as if the Divine Spirit could be capable of passions and perturbations, as creatures are: But then may the holy Spirit be said to be grieved, when gracious souls do that which is enough to grieve one that tenderly affects us, and by all means seeks our eternal good. Now two things usually grieve such a one: First, Injuries from a friend. Secondly, The sufferings of a friend. Unkindness from those we love, does usually sit nearer our hearts, than any injuries from strangers or enemies: we usually expect more regard from such, and therefore are more troubled at disappointments: And such is the tenderness of the Spirit to Believers, that want of love, or injury from such is more abusive, and carries in it all that which in its nature is grieving. Again, we usually grieve at the evils of those we love; and such are the sins of Believers, they are injurious to themselves, and enemies to their own souls: This the Spirit of God sees that gracious souls, by their carnal affections, and sensual passions, by their corrupt communications, and fleshly lusts, do not only resist him, and frustrate his work in them; but these also injure and endanger their own souls; by these they lose many a mercy, and draw upon them many afflictions and fatherly displeasure from God against them; and this grieves the Spirit to see; and this removes his presence, and hinders his comforting, quickening operations, by reason of which their spirits fail, and become cold and weak to every heavenly action, Your work Christians, is to be tender of the Spirit; to take heed you be not unkind to his person, that you do not undervalue his gracious communications, or resist his internal operations: Take heed of unthankfulness for his kindnesses, of slighting his counsels, of unsuitable walking to his rules and mercies, if you would not grieve him, and so deprive yourselves of his quickening influences on your spirits. That's the first: Beware of those things that weaken this heavenly Spirit.

Secondly, If you would maintain a Heavenly Spirit; get all the nourishment you can for it: As the body is nourished by food, and the animal spirits by contributions of joy and contentment; so is this Heavenly Spirit by all the means and helps God hath appointed to this end, 1 Tim. 4. 6. nourished up in the word offaith, and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained. The Word and Ordinances are to the inner-man, as nourishing food to the outward, which strengthens the spiritual part, and maintains its vigor and activity. Timothy had imbibed the Doctrine of the Gospel together with his milk (saith Calvin) and had made continual progresses in the same to that day, which did so greatly strengthen and nourish him in his faith and graces. The Word of God is suited, sent and commissioned to the service and advantage of your graces; 'tis the way by which the Lord Jesus maintains and increases spiritual life and growth in the new-born soul. 1 Pet. 2. 2. As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby. Attend upon all the Ordinances of God, where they are purely and powerfully administered: Be much in reading the Scriptures, and such help <◇> the Lord gives you for your instruction and quickening. 1 Tim. 4. 13. Give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine; meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them, that thy profiting may appear to all. V. 15. Be thou in them: as the words are; that is, exercise thyself with these continually, constantly, and with all thy might; let not a day pass without reading, meditation, and secret prayer, that the inner-man may have all the recruits that are needful and appointed for its strengthening. Your bodies can better want their appointed food, than your souls their daily bread: The want of constant feeding, and sound digestion of spiritual provisions, is one cause of that soul-leanness, and spiritual languishing that abounds everywhere this day.

Thirdly, If you will keep up a Heavenly Spirit; be much in communion with the Father of Spirits. Fellowship with God puts a stamp of Heaven upon the soul, and leaves an impress of the Divine Nature on it. 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all with open face, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory by the Spirit of the Lord. Views of God, though but through the glass of Ordinances, have an assimilating virtue, and do transform the mind into his own likeness. When Moses was taken up into a nearness to God, he gets some abiding beams of his glory upon him, and comes off with divine shines on his countenance, Exod. 34. 35. When the Lord Jesus was got on to a high Mountain apart, and had more near fellowship with Heaven, 'tis said: He was transfigured, and his face did shine. Nearness to God does wonderfully warm and quicken the heart, as approaches of the Sun do the body. With thee is the fountain of life; in thy light shall we see light, Psal. 36. 9. As the being of spiritual Life lies in union with God in Christ by faith; so is its well being maintained by communion with him in the Spirit, who supplies the soul with quickenings, as the fountain doth the vessel that's put under it, with waters: God is in himself the Essential Life, and to his people the fountain of Life. Thou Lord (saith one) art life by thy Essence, and the fountain of Life by communion; from thee all Life flows out, and runs down incessantly. In fellowship the Lord Jesus lets out Himself, Love and Spirit; and this attracts the heart after God, and strengthens the soul's motions after him. Every act of fellowship with Christ here (saith Mr. Reyner) is a step Heaven-ward: By it the heart is raised after God, sweetly refreshed and strengthened with spiritual strength. To live in fellowship with God (says the same Author) is to live at the highest rate under Heaven, next to Heaven; yea as in a corner of Heaven, to live in the highest Region of Christianity,—'tis the Life of Paradise, an Evangelical, yea Angelical and Coelestial Life, in comparison whereof the most men and women are dead. Communion with God does wonderfully nourish the Heavenly Spirit, and fatten the spiritual part of Believers: Such (saith Reyner) suck a honey-comb, eat fat things full of marrow, and drink wine on the lees well refined, spiced wine. O Christians; press after nearness to God in Ordinances and Duties; rest not in highest privileges without spiritual converse with God in them, and communications of his Love and Life through them.

Fourthly, Cherish heavenly motions in your hearts, and be tender of all the breathings of the Spirit upon you. It may be the Lord comes in upon the heart with some Spiritual Light or Life, in a Sermon, or in a Duty, or when alone, stirring up thy desires, and warming thy affections, making some offers of grace, and help to thy dull and languishing soul; take heed now how thou slightest or stiflest these: this is one step to the quenching of the Spirit, and impeding its gracious assistance, and vital operations on thy soul: 1 Thes. 5. verse. 19. Quench not the Spirit. He that will kindle a fire, gathers up every little coal, and makes the most of the least spark. The shavings of gold are gold, and the smallest breathings of the Spirit are to be highly prized: He that checks the first motions of the Spirit, may never meet with the second; and he that slightes the least gifts of grace, may forever miss of its larger doles. O to what a height might grace come in thy soul, if every stirring of it were improved! God despises not the day of thy small things; how unreasonable is it thou shouldst overlook his! The Lord Jesus (Christians) doth nourish and cherish the least good that is in you, Ephes. 5. 29. O be tender of whatever communications come from him to you! This will abundantly help on the enlivenings and enlargements of this Heavenly Spirit.

Fifthly, Dwell much in the meditation of Heaven; this will heavenlize your spirit: 'Twas this made the Apostles persons of such heavenly spirits; they did often look to things above. 1 Cor. 4 18. While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. No affliction could discourage them from owning and professing Christ; nor earthly comforts allure their desires and delights from Christ; and that which so strongly guarded their hearts from either of these dangers, was a firm persuasion of an interest in future glory, and a diligent observing eye upon this glory: a levelling look at this mark does wonderfully raise the heart towards it, and put in a new spirit and life into the soul, strongly engaging all its attempts towards the enjoyment of it: Frequent contemplations of Heaven do much wean the heart from this Earth. If thou rememberest thou art not of this world, earthly things shall only be admitted into the Court of the Temple, not into the heart, which is the Holy of Holies, Burg. on 17. Joh. How contemptibly did those Worthies of old look on this world, when once they got sights of Heaven! Heb. 11. They counted themselves strangers and pilgrims on the Earth; were not mindful of their own Country; went out from it; would no more return to it; sought an heavenly Country; were persuaded of those great and glorious things above, and embraced them; laid hold of them by faith; and made after them: and that which did so powerfully work over their spirits to these things above, was their believing sights of them. V. 13. These all died in the faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off; that is, the things promised, (viz.) heavenly things, of which Canaan was a type. So Pareus refers the participles here to the things signified of the promise, that heavenly Country which they only desired. Things nearest Heaven (saith one) take least care of the Earth: The Fowls of the Air neither plow nor sow. The glory of the world seems little to one that dwells much on the believing views of Heaven. 'Tis said of Fulgentius, That when he beheld the splendor and joy of Rome, the glory of the Roman Nobility, the triumphant pomp of King Theodorick, he was so far from being taken with it, that it raised up his desires after heavenly joys the more, saying, How beautiful may the Coelestial Jerusalem be, when terrestrial Rome so glittereth! If such honor be given to lovers of vanity, what glory shall be imparted to the Saints, who are lovers and followers of truth! Serious thoughts of Heaven will inflame the desires after it: Our Conversation is in Heaven (saith Paul) whence also we look for the Savior, who shall change our vile bodies into the likeness of his glorious body, Phil. 3. 20. We wait, hope for, and expect Heaven, to be where this blessed Country is; the breadth and length of which we now look into by faith. If your thoughts be much on Heaven, your longings will be much for Heaven. I have read of one being in his journey towards Jerusalem, thought he saw famous Cities in his way, and met with many friendly entertainments; yet would often say, I must not stay here; this is not Jerusalem: So will thy heart say (if thou conversest much in Heaven now) when thou meetest with the most desirable comforts of this life; yet this is not Heaven; my affections must not stay here. Allow time every day to take some turns in the upper world, and to get thy heart held in the galleries above; where are the sweetest delicacies, and most delighting views to take thy heart, and sublimate thy affections to these pure and eternal things?

Sixthly, If you would keep up a Heavenly Spirit; be much exercised in heavenly actions: As is men's employments they are mostly versed about, so usually is their spirit: Actions strengthen habits: Men that are much taken up about earthly things, are earthly-minded; their spirits being tintured with the things they have much to do with: Such are heavenly actions to gracious souls; they draw forth and exercise their graces: use makes men ready, and adapts their spirits to their work. The Apostle makes this an evidence of strength in grace, that such are much in the exercise of it. Heb. 5. 14. Strong meat belongeth to them who are of full age; even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. The more you are conversant about holy things, the stronger will be the bent of your spirit to them; the more facile and pleasant will Religion be, and the indisposition of your spirit to it more abated. Prov. 10. 29. The way of the Lord is strength to the upright. The more you walk in it, the less weary will you be; the more pleasure will you find in it, and the more propense will your spirit be to it. This is the first work in Wisdom's Merchandise; to get and keep up a Heavenly Spirit.

Secondly, Another piece of your Heavenly Trade is, to secure your interest in heavenly things. This is part of men's business in the world, to secure their interest in the things they have: they mark their goods, and brand their cattle, and set their names on the things they have, that their interest in them might be known: And this is the great concern of Wisdom's Merchants also, to make good their claim to, and prove their propriety in the things of Heaven and Glory: These are worth the securing, being things of infinite moment, and eternal duration; other things are not. O what folly is it to strive for shadows, and lose the substance; to get and secure Houses, Lands, and Reputation for your Children, and to lose your souls! As he that complained when he was to die; That he must burn in Hell forever, for getting an estate for his Son, and neglecting his own soul. What will it profit a man to gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Matth. 16. 24. To make all things else sure, and leave God, Grace and Glory to an uncertainty. As Caesar Borgiabewail'd when too late, saying when he was near death; I have endeavored to secure me against every danger but death; and having never thought of death, must now die. Things eternal will then appear the greatest when men come to die; then an interest in God, pardon and salvation will be valued beyond ten thousand worlds: And is it not worth the looking after now?

And what can compensate the loss of that soul, who miscarries in his All, and hath nothing left but the tormenting sense of what he hath lost, and the intolerable burden of what he hath found, as the fruit of his often cautioned folly? 'Tis a dreadful thing to be disappointed of salvation-hopes: What if thou shouldest miss of glory at last, and thy end should be to be cut off, and to have thy portion with Hypocrites in that Lake which burns with fire and brimstone, where the worm never dieth, and the fire is never quenched? Mark 9. 44. How couldest thou bear, if when thou thinkest to enter into the joy of the Lord, then in a moment to be thrust into the place of torment? and when thou dreamest of carrying up into Abraham's bosom, where is eternal pleasures; to fall into the hands of God, who is a consuming fire? this is fearful.

And yet this may be thy case. Think how possible, nay how easy 'tis for men to be deceived in lesser matters, and that they who have had the highest confidences of a future blessedness, have been mistaken at last, and all their hopes have expired as a falling Meteor, and come to nothing, Job 27. 8. For what is the hope of the hypocrite though he hath gained much, when God taketh away his soul? Men may think themselves to be something, and yet be nothing, Gal. 6. 2. Come with confidence to the Bridegroom's doors, and demand an entrance as the foolish Virgins did, and yet rejected. Mat. 25. 11, 12. Afterward came also the other Virgins, (that is when the door was shut) saying, Lord, Lord, open to us; but he answered and said; verily I say unto you, I know you not. They may seem to have some reason for their claim, and produce evidences of their hope, and yet be turned away as workers of iniquity. Mat. 7. 22, 23. Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? have cast out Devils? and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess to them, I never knew you, depart from me ye workers of iniquity: The heart is deep and deceitful, who can know it? none but he who searcheth the deep things of God can reach this bottom, and bring to light the hidden things thereof: The work of grace is a secret full of mysteries, that none can open and fully know, but the eternal Spirit that formed it in the womb of a Believer's heart: Seeming grace hath so near a resemblance to saving grace, that it puzzles the most curious and searching eye (if not enlighten'd with a beam from Heaven) to discern the difference: besides, the slender measures of the Spirit that most have attained to in this life, with the subtle insinuations, the false representations, and treacherous prevarications of that bloody and irreconcilable enemy of mankind, all which conspire to put a cheat upon the professing Christian, and render his Salvation exceeding doubtful. And suppose thy state should be safe, yet how perplexing and full of anxiety is it, to have the least suspicion of thy unsoundness? To have the life of thy precious soul hang in suspense, and to be unresolv'd in that great case, whether thou must live or die to all eternity! O! how tormenting and heart-sinking is this! An awakened Soul that cannot rest in sin, nor yet hope in grace, or upon any Scripture-warrant come to a determination about his real interest in God, and things eternal, is like a troubled Sea that cannot rest; Instruments of Music cannot allay its disquietude, no Creature comforts can charm its heart to a peaceful composure: who does in reality but suspect his eternal welfare, and but think he reads this hand-writing on the wall: Mene, mene, tekel upharsin: Thou art weighed in the balance, and art found wanting, Dan. 5. 25. 27. Nothing in all the World can be a Plaister broad enough for such a wound, no Cordial can cheer that heart, till Grace decides the controversy, and assures the Soul of an unquestionable title to the Heir of all things, and to the inheritance with the Saints in light: And have you not reason then to be restless till your propriety in these glorious treasures be attested; which, though difficult, yet is possible and feasible to all that follow Wisdom's counsel in order to it? The eternal truth hath opened a way to the decision of this question, whether I have eternal life or no, and laid down certain marks of a Soul entitled to things above. 1 Joh. 5. 13. These things have I written to you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that you may know that you have eternal life; Vers. 12. 19. Chap. 3. 14. The Lord hath charged this to be the duty of all that profess their hopes of glory, to make their Calling and Election sure, 2 Pet. 1. 10. To examine themselves whether they be in the Faith, 2 Cor. 13. 5. To prove their own work, that they may have rejoicing in themselves, Gal. 6. 4. which he would never have done were it impossible: He hath also promised the Spirit to help them in this work, and to lead them into all truth, bearing witness with their spirits that they are the Lord's, Joh. 16. 13. Rom. 8. 16. And upon this very account exhorts them to holiness, that they might not impede this sealing work of the Spirit, Eph. 4. 30. And upon the arrival to this certainty, hath ensured great consolation and advantage, 2 Pet. 1. 8. 10, 11. All which words signify nothing, and reflect unrighteousness on the spirit of truth, were not an evidence of right to these heavenly things obtainable.

Quest. But how may I come to the knowledge of this desirable truth; that Heavenly Treasures are surely mine, and that I may make a warrantable claim to God, to Christ, and these things of the other World?

Sol. 1. First, By your conjugal union with the Heir of Heaven: All things in Heaven and Earth are Christ's, he is the Heir of all things. Heb. 1. 2.—Hath in these last days spoken to us by his Son, whom he hath appointed Heir of all things: All things in Heaven and Earth are his by donation, purchase and inheritance juridically conferred over to him in the new covenant, and actually put into his hand, upon the finishing of his meritorious work and victory over death. Matt. 28. 18. All power is given to me in Heaven and Earth: Lawful power, right, privilege and authority, (as the word imports,) and with this is the Lord Jesus invested, and hath all things put into his hands, and all creatures under his feet, Heb. 2. 7, 8. And all right to true riches is derived from him, through union with him. 1 Cor. 3. 21, 23. All things are yours, and you are Christ's, and Christ is God's: If you are Christ's, then all things are yours, not else; your title is founded on your marriage-relation to him. Gal. 3. 29. And if you are Christ's, then are you Abraham's seed, and Heirs according to the promise: A title to these glorious treasures is made over in the new covenant, which covenant is confirmed in Christ, and made in him, and through him to all that are his: He is the way, there's no coming to these treasures but by him; he is the door, no entering into them but through him: He is the treasury itself, in whom all the riches of grace, all the fullness of pleasures and satisfaction lies; you must have the treasury before you can have the treasures; the well itself before the waters are yours: He that hath the Son hath life; hath him by way of possession, as an owner and proprietor: If you have Christ, you have all that is his, his person and purchase go together: Rebekah must consent to go and marry Isaac before she could be invested with that substance and wealth which was his. This new covenant which interests a soul in the Lord Jesus, and his unsearchable riches, is a marriage-covenant. Hos. 2. 19, 20. And I will betroth thee unto me forever, yea I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving-kindness, and in mercies; I will even betroth thee to me in faithfulness, and thou shalt know the Lord. Ezek. 16. 8. I entered into covenant with thee, saith the Lord, and thou becamest mine; this was a marriage-covenant. Jer. 3. 14. Turn O back sliding children, saith the Lord, for I am married to you. If you would see your title to heavenly treasures, try your conjugal union to the Lord Jesus the Heir of Heaven. Every relation to Christ is not a conjugal relation. There is a general relation, as dead branches to the tree: Joh. 15. 2. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away. A person may be in Christ as the luxuriant branch or sucker is in the tree, that sucks the sap of privileges, and gets some nourishment of frames, and comforts, but brings not forth fruit, it sprouts out of the stock, as proud flesh grows on the wound, but hath no right union with the root, or nourishment from the head: Such are obtruders and hang-bies, which take the place of children, but are strangers, who climb up as the thief to steal, but comes not in by the door to dwell with God: they are retainers to Christ's House, that now and then do some service for him, and have some scraps and favors, but are no abiding members of his house; like the Apricot, that leans on the wall, but is rooted in the earth.

There is a temporary Relation also; as of a Servant to a Master, where there is a propriety for a time: The servant comes into the house, enjoys privileges and protection, and doth some service, is very useful for the family, and it may be beloved too: (as a servant.) And such is the relation of some to Christ; but this differs vastly from that union which entitles to the person and purchase of the Lord Jesus; he is mercenary in all he doth, and hath by-ends in his entrance and continuance; he does not anything from pure love to Christ, but for self-respects and advantage: his welfare is not wrapped up in the welfare of the family, to stand or fall with it; to embark his All in the prosperity of that house: he lives in the family, and upon his Lord, but to himself, and is as the Planets which are carried about with the primum mobile; but yet have a distinct motion and course of their own: he is in the family, but not of the family; and as his relation is but titular, so his station is but temporary; he abides not in the house forever, Joh. 8. 35. And when he goes away he carries off nothing but his own; not a jot of the inheritance is his; he hath fared well, and had a great deal of credit and comfort for a time; but goes as he came, and is the same person as he was.

There is also a Concubine-Relation to Christ, which gives the soul some use of his kindness, but no right to his person. A Concubine is one that is contented with ones bed, but hath no conjugal love to his person; neither doth she pass into the husband's family, or are her children counted legitimate: She is one that either by constraint or consent, comes over into an external communion with another for his use and bed; but is never married to his person, or hath chosen him for her husband, to become one flesh with him, to take up her delight in him, and to do all from a principle of love to him: And as she hath not the properties; so she hath not the privileges of a wife, for intimacy and entertainment, in respect of power and maintenance. Such is the relation that many have to Christ; they consent to have some enjoyment of Christ, but have no marriage-union with him; he is not theirs by choice, but either for necessity or advantage, to enjoy their own pleasures by him, and receive some profit from him: they never saw an excellency in him, or were ever unhearted by him, as he is by his Spouse. Cant. 4. 9. Thou hast ravished my heart, my Sister, my Spouse; thou hast ravished my heart with one of thine eyes; with one chain of thy neck: Thou hast unhearted me, or snatched away my heart: These never consented to all his proposals in order to union with him; they never heartily gave up themselves to him, nor entered into covenant with him, and became his. And as they are strangers to an espousal-state; so are they to a Spouse-like disposition; they have not the temper and carriage of a wife, nor the privileges that such use to have; they are not acquainted with his secrets, nor the openings of his heart, and those amorous embracements peculiar to such a relation; they are not invested with any Authority or Rule; they have no power over their corruptions, nor command of their spirits and affections, that should be in subjection to them: Grace bears no sway in them; sin and self does all in their souls; neither were they ever enrolled in his family, or owned by the Lord Jesus as his Hephzibah's, nor have the allowance and special provisions of the King's Bride, and Lamb's Wife; and as to their conceptions, and those births they seem to have by Jesus Christ, they are spurious and illegitimate, and never owned by the Lord Jesus as the genuine products of his own Spirit. This is the case of those that have not marriage-union with Christ; they have no right to him or his Treasures. Try then your Espousal-relation to Christ.

Quest. How may I know whether I am married to Christ or no?

Answ. 1. First, If you are married to Christ, you are such as have special acquaintance with Christ; you know him as none else do. The wife hath the most peculiar and distinct knowledge of her husband of any: Others may know something, yea much of him; but none knows him so much as the wife; she hath acquaintance with all his excellencies, and all his infirmities; she has the largest tastes of his love, and experience of his sweetness, and intimate converses with him of any in the world. So 'tis with the Spouse of Christ; she dwells in his presence, and lodges in his arms; she sees him within the veil uncloth'd of those coverings that stand between him and the eyes of strangers, and conceals his amiableness from common beholders: He puts aside his glorious Robe, and shows her his naked breast, and lays her hand upon his tender heart: she is much alone with him in his chambers, where he expresses intimacy with her, as Isaac did with Rebekah, and discloses the secrets of his heart, and the greatest unveilings of his love: He tells her what thoughts he had upon her from all eternity; when he was in his Father's Kingdom, his heart was working after her, and he thought the time long till he came down to see her; and no sooner did he cast his eye upon her (though then she lay polluted in her blood, and cast out into the field, to the loathing of her person) but his heart did burn within him towards her; and it was the time of love: He tells her all the time of his hard labor in the world for her, seemed but a few days; and the unsupportable burden of her sins, and the Father's wrath upon him for her sake, seemed but as nothing for the love he bore unto her. In these converses he assures her of his Love, Person and Kingdom; and however he may seem in his carriages, yet his heart is fixed upon, and faithful to her, and swears he will never, never leave her, but after a little absence come and receive her to himself, and she shall be forever with him. Thus he manifests himself to her, as he doth not to the world; by reason of which she becomes so well acquainted with him, and knows his voice, and by faith sees his sheep; she can tell by experience who, and what her Beloved is, and how far better than other Beloveds. There's never a soul that's married to Christ, but hath his time, when he makes out some special discoveries of his love and self to it; and it can tell some stories of what Christ did once say and do unto her: what slights she hath had of him, and gifts from him: such a soul can tell, how when he was dead, Christ quickened him; when he was lost, Christ found him; when he was in prison, Christ set him free; he washed him when in his blood, and poured in Oil into his wounds; healed his backslidings, and loved him freely: He can say with Rebekah to her Brother Laban; Thus the man spake to me, and shown the ear-rings and the bracelets, Gen. 24. 30. And with Judah brings forth the signet, bracelets and staff, Gen. 38. 25. and tells with the blind man how Christ opened his eyes, and what he said to him, Joh. cap. 9. ver. 15, 35, 37. And though by his sin and unbelief he may lose the sight of him for a time, and be under a suspense of his discovered kindness; yet if the Believer would be true to his experience, he can discover such an acquaintance with Christ as no Hypocrite ever had.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Another thing that will prove your marriage to Christ, is your conjugal-love to him. Jer. 2. 2. I remember thee, the kindness of thy youth, the love of thy espousals, when thou wentest after me in the wilderness in a Land not sown. The Lord convinceth Israel of the great decay and change of their Love to what it once was; there was a time when their affections were high towards God, when he called them out of Egypt, took them from the Ironfurnace, and married them to himself; then nothing was too hard for them; they could follow God in a wilderness, where there was nothing but God alone to satisfy them; creatures were wanting to allure them, and yet they could stick at nothing; no difficulties should part God and them: Whence came this warmth of their affection? why it was their nearness to God that created them: The Lord had taken them into a marriage covenant, and carried them in his bosom; and this inflamed their hearts after him. When the Lord brings a soul into an espousal-state, he gives them espousal-love; and that is the greatest love: O sweet! saith Rutherford, were that sickness to be soul-sick for him; and a living death it were to die in the fire of the love of that Soul-lover Jesus. The Apostle makes this an essential duty of a married state, to have conjugal affections: The Husband to love his Wife as his own flesh, and the Wife to love her own Husband as herself, Eph. 5. 28. Tit. 2. 4. And the Prophet reckons this love to God as the certain fruit of their Covenant-relation to him. Isa. 56. 6. That join themselves to the Lord, to serve him, and to love the Name of the Lord. As soon as Paul had espoused the Lord Jesus, it appeared in his supreme love to him; he valued none like Christ: He counted all things dross and dung for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ his Lord, Phil. 3. 8. To be found in him, not having his own righteousness, v. 9. To know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable to his death, v. 10. Conjugal love is a personal love; pure love to Christ is set on Christ himself for himself, not for his gifts that come from him; but for those excellencies that reside in him; 'tis love to his person, not to his patrimony only; 'tis love springing from his love. 1 Joh. 4. 19. We love him because he first loved us. True affections to the Lord Jesus are the births of his own love to us, a coal kindled from his fire.

Conjugal love is also peculiar as well as personal love; so far as 'tis conjugal, 'tis to him, and none but him; or if to others, 'tis for his sake: Espousal love to Christ affects none like him: If there be any person or thing thou lovest more than Christ, or equal with him, thy affections to him are whorish, not conjugal: He that loveth Father or Mother more than me, is not worthy of me: He that loveth Son or Daughter more than me, is not worthy of me, Mat. 10. 37. Yea, he that doth not hate Father or Mother, or anything, so far as it is inconsistent with love to Christ, cannot be his Disciple, Luke 14. 26. True love to Christ will let none in all the world share in that love which Christ hath; 'twill take none into his bed but himself; 'tis chaste love.

Again, Conjugal-love is not only to Christ, but 'tis such a love as longs to be found in Christ, not in himself; it would have all his glory and excellency in Christ; it reckons Christ for all that's truly honorable as to him; it would get as near to Christ as possible; yea it never rests till in him: To be found in him. 'Tis also such a love as conforms to Christ: Love is of an assimilating spirit; it would be like to its peculiar object. The affectionate wife conforms as much as may be to her Husband: so 'tis with the Spouse of Christ, she would in everything that is imitable resemble him, and 'tis her great trouble she is not more like him: what would such a soul give if his heart was like Christ's heart; if he had such a spirit and life as the Lord Jesus had on Earth? it would be holy as Christ is holy, and cannot set up a stand short of that: 'Tis true, the soul hath not such a spirit as Christ had; 'tis too proud, vain, carnal passionate, earthly, selfish, and that troubles him; but it can never be quiet, till he comes nearer to the pattern in Heaven, and to a full resemblance of his well-beloved Jesus.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, A soul espoused to Christ will leave all for Christ; that's the condition of marriage between Christ and his Bride. Psal. 45. v. 10, 11. Hearken O Daughter and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people, and thy Father's house, so shall the King greatly desire thy beauty: for he is thy Lord, and worship thou him: As if he should say, weigh and consider the terms on which this match is to be concluded between Christ and you. If you will be his, you must leave all for him; you must forsake all your other lovers, friends, interests, comforts for Christ, so far as these hinder your love to Christ, your communion with, and serviceableness unto him. When the woman comes to be married, she leaves her friends, Father's house,

Country, and all to come and live with him that shall be her Husband. Rebekah left her Father, Brother, Friends and Country to go to Isaac, Gen. 24. 58. And they called Rebekah, and said unto her, wilt thou go with this man? and she said I will go. That soul that cannot consent really and considerately to part with all for Christ, never yet came up to marriage-terms: The treaty between Christ and that soul never went far enough for a conclusion; and if it go no farther; if thy soul cannot seal to this, to part with all thy interests, thy dearest comforts; yea thyself for Christ, the match must after all be broken, and Christ and thee part at last, yea part forever. O soul! try thy heart in this; here lies the knot, the vertical point; this is the most difficult of all Christ's proposals, and that the soul is longest consenting to, even the letting go all for Christ: His person may please well enough; his estate is desirable for a reversion; but now to take leave of, and to go with Christ, this is the hard saying: Persons would have Christ and the world too, Christ and friends too, Christ and reputation, peace, liberty, pleasure, and self too; and if this will not be granted, break the bargain: but if ever Christ and you have closed, and you are his, and he yours, you cannot count anything too dear to part with for him, or to let go at his bidding: If Christ calls for Estate, Husband; Wife, Children, an Isaac, a Benjamin, a right Eye, a right Hand, all must go; and you must part with them freely and cheerfully, as Abraham did with Isaac. Gen. 22. 3. Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his Asses, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his Son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and went unto the place of which God had told him: Not as Jacob did part with Benjamin; by constraint, and grudgingly, Gen. 43. 11. If it must be so now, do this, &c. He was almost starv'd before he would consent to part with Benjamin; and when he did, he lets him go last of all: he parts with the best fruits of the Land, Balm, Honey, Spices, Myrrh, Nuts, Almonds, double money, anything first; at last Benjamin was screwed out too: Many must have their comforts wrench'd out of their hands before they will let them go; but this is not love to Christ. A soul married to Christ will say with Mephibosheth concerning his Land; Let Zibah take all; for as much as my Lord the King is come again in peace to his own house, 2 Sam. 19. 30. So, let God take all my estate, strength, liberty, comforts, seeing the Lord Jesus is come home to my soul in peace: Houses, Lands, Friends, Credit, Peace, Life, may be dear, but Christ will be dearer if he and you are one flesh. All Bavaria (said George Carpenter) is not so dear to me as my Wife and Children; yet for Christ's sake I will forsake them cheerfully. Do you think me such a fool (said Ogvier to one that tempted him with life and preferment) that I should change eternal things for temporal. Loss of goods is great; (saith Hooper) but loss of God's grace and favor is greater? Love is never thoroughly seen till it comes to parting: O the tuggings, holdings, shifts and reasonings that men will have before they will part with that they dearly love: Now it will appear (saith Philpot) what we love best, for to that we love we will stick: If Christ have most of your hearts, you will let fall everything out of your hands to hold fast Christ: I have (said Mr. Bale) exil'd myself forever from mine own native Country, Kindred, Friends, Acquaintance, which are the great delights of this life, and am well contented for the sake of Christ..

Answ. 4. Fourthly, A Soul married to Christ, stays, and lives on Christ. The Wife casts herself upon her Husband's love and care for her supplies, and lives on his allowance for all her provisions: 'tis suspicious for a married Woman to be maintained by strangers, and to live on other men for what she needs; 'tis the Husband's duty to provide for his own, and to nourish
