Anne Knight (1786–1862) spoke up the loudest for the abolitionist women as she promoted an international feminist discourse by sending appeals to “spread the cause” of women's rights to feminist sympathizers in Great Britain, France, Germany, and the United States. She pasted to her envelopes brightly colored labels with feminist messages, calling on “revolutionary feminists” in all four countries to band together to enact “the complete, radical abolition of all the privileges of sex, of race, of birth, of rank, and of fortune.” The publication in 1850 in Godey's Lady Book of an article titled “The Sphere of Woman: Translated from the German of Goethe,” in which the author appealed to German women to embrace rather than rebel against their proper place in the home, indicates an awareness within the United States of feminist rumblings in Europe. This international discourse, along with visits, shared proclamations, and conventions, provided support for and confirmation of the efforts of the women who would gather at Seneca Falls, New York, in July of 1848.

Seneca Falls

The year 1848 was momentous for American women, as it was for women around the world. It was the year of revolution. Germany, Italy, France, and the Austro-Hungarian Empire experienced revolts against tyrannical governments. War, poverty, disease, and the dream of limitless opportunities brought millions of European immigrants to the United States. Between 1847 and 1857 more than 3 million immigrants arrived.

Amid all of these events, few Americans noticed a gathering of men and women meeting in Seneca Falls, New York in July 1848. The gathering had been planned four years earlier when Stanton and Mott had been refused the podium at the London International Anti-Slavery Convention. Since that first meeting, Mott had instructed Stanton in the principles of women's rights. The mother of four boys living in the small industrial town of Seneca Falls, New York, Stanton was eager for changes in her own life. “The general discontent I felt with woman's portion as wife, mother, housekeeper, physician, and spiritual guide,” she wrote, “the wearied, anxious look of the majority of women impressed me with a strong feeling that some active measures should be taken to right the wrongs of society in general, and of women in particular.” That day in July, Stanton, Mott, Mott's sister Martha Coffin Wright (1806–75), and two other local abolitionist women convened a public meeting in a local church to discuss “the social, civil and religious condition of Woman.”

A group of women gathering to discuss women's rights was not a revolutionary act. The result of that gathering was. Of the 300 women and men who attended, two-thirds endorsed a manifesto that rewrote America's most powerful symbol of liberty, the Declaration of Independence, to declare that “all men and women are equal.” If the Declaration of Independence had worked to free the nation from tyranny, Stanton figured, it would work to free a nation of women from the tyranny of men. Stanton's version read, "The history of mankind is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations on the part of man toward woman, having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over her. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world." The manifesto listed 18 specific instances of tyranny, among them that women were denied access to professions, trades, and education; their rights in marriage and motherhood were denied to them; and their self-confidence and moral equality before God were kept from them. Implicit in the Seneca Falls Declaration of Sentiments and Resolutions was the final demand: women's suffrage. The Declaration of Sentiments ended with a call to activism and a promise to "employ agents, circulate tracts, petition the State and national Legislatures, and endeavor to enlist the pulpit and the press in our behalf."

News of the Seneca Falls Convention was carried by newspapers across the nation. Much of the coverage was highly critical. One editorial called it "The most shocking and unnatural incident ever recorded in the history of womanity." The women who had signed the Declaration of Sentiments were accused of "unwomanly behavior" and of neglecting "their more appropriate duties." Editorials raised the fear that equal rights for women would "demoralize and degrade" women and "prove a monstrous injury to all mankind." True ladies, a Philadelphia newspaper wrote after the convention, would be foolish to sacrifice their status as "Wives, Belles, Virgins and Mothers" for equal rights. A few of the female signers of the Declaration of Sentiments withdrew their support in light of the bad press. The support of other women who signed may have remained, but they were powerless to resist their husbands' opposition. For the women who remained actively committed, the negative press served only to galvanize their efforts to fight for women's rights.

It would take 72 years before women were granted the right to vote, but the revolutionary act of writing and signing the Declaration of Sentiments gave birth to an organized women's rights movement. Susan B. Anthony (1820–1906), a Quaker and renowned lecturer on temperance, joined the movement in 1851, adding the message of the drunkard husband who batters his wife to the list of abuses suffered by women. Anthony and Stanton formed a decades-long friendship and collaboration for the cause of women's rights. Stone also joined, bringing with her a following of women who shared her passion for what was now being called "the emancipation of women." True to the optimism of the women gathered at Seneca Falls, women's rights conventions were held regularly from 1850 until the beginning of the Civil War.

Divergent Currents

In the years following the Seneca Falls Convention, women's rights advocates debated the next steps to achieving equality for women. Paulina Wright Davis (1813–76), who had started her career as a women's health advocate, was the chief organizer for the first National Women's Rights Convention in Worcester, Massachusetts in 1850. Wright decided that the women's rights movement needed its own journal and in 1853 published Una, the first feminist periodical owned, written, and edited entirely by women. Sharply critical of the reverence expressed by moral reformers for "femininity," she recognized that such a sentimental and conservative view actually denied women their basic liberties. Unable to find a co-publisher for the journal, Davis stopped publishing Una in 1855.

While the journal was short-lived, historians consider it an influential publication of the time for its illuminating view of the radicalism of the early women's rights movement. Davis' writings reveal the utopian nature of her beliefs. She focused on three issues that she saw as critical to the emancipation of women: labor freedoms, the right to vote, and reforms in the laws and practice of marriage. She equated the condition of Northern white married women with chattel slaves and advocated breaking through the barriers imposed by the discourse of true womanhood (the cult of domesticity) to show that white women shared a common humanity with enslaved black women. She challenged not only the legal framework of marriage but also what she saw as its sterile emotional nature for women. The "enforced inferiority" of women denied them more than just their freedom; it disallowed their self-expression.

The 72 years between the Seneca Falls Declaration of Sentiments and the ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment saw growing conservatism within the women's rights movement, as well as increasing opposition to it. Even so, radical acts of defiance staged by individual women continued as more and more women attempted to enter the professions, African American women rose in protest of continuing mistreatment, and the number of women entering the workforce grew. The defiance of Victoria Woodhull was unequaled in the ranks of feminist radicalism of the time.

Victoria Woodhull (1838–1927) was a colorful and notorious advocate of women's rights, free love, and labor reforms. Her open rebellion against what she saw as the sexual hypocrisy of her time led to accusations by her opponents as advocating sexual immorality, prostitution, and libertinism, but she offered no apologies for her beliefs. She boldly addressed a meeting of the National Woman Suffrage Association in 1871, declaring: "We mean treason; we mean secession. . . . We are plotting revolution; we will . . . [overthrow] this bogus Republic and plant a government of righteousness in its stead." In 1872 Woodhull became the first woman to become a presidential candidate, running on the newly formed People's Party. Frederick Douglass was named as the candidate for vice president but never acknowledged the nomination. Viewed by most as little more than Woodhull's attempt at self-promotion, the ticket stirred up a great deal of controversy. Not only was Woodhull a woman but she was a white woman with a black man as her running mate.

While Woodhull impressed Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton with her pro-suffrage stance, she was responsible for a sex scandal that tarnished the entire suffrage movement. In 1872 she devoted an entire issue of her paper, Woodhull & Claflin's Weekly, to a rumored affair between Elizabeth Tilton and Reverend Henry Ward Beecher, a prominent Protestant figure and, unfortunately, a supporter of female suffrage. Woodhull claimed she wrote the article in order to highlight what she saw as a sexual double standard between men and women. The next day, Woodhull was arrested by federal marshals for violating the anti-obscenity Comstock Law by sending obscene material through the mail. The article that had precipitated her arrest resulted in Beecher's wife suing him for alienation of affection. The trial was sensationalized across the nation, with Woodhull cited as the source of the collapse of the Beechers' marriage. Elizabeth Cady Stanton was one of the few suffragists who defended Woodhull, who was found not guilty six months later, but her arrest prevented her from being present during the 1872 election. She dropped out of public life and moved to England, where she remade her reputation. For years following the event, however, opponents of women's suffrage equated women's rights with free love and destruction of the family.

The greater part of the women's rights movement had become political, however, moving away from feminist outrage. This trend can be seen in the split within the women's suffrage camp. As Congress debated the wording of the Fourteenth Amendment, women's rights activists called for woman suffrage to join with black suffrage in one constitutional act of enfranchisement. Stanton, Anthony, Antoinette Brown Blackwell (1825–1921), and Stone established the American Equal Rights Association (AERA) in pursuit of this goal. Mott was elected president. The creation of this organization was a milestone in the struggle for female equality. It was the first organization formed by American women and men to fight for the right to vote.

Divisions soon emerged in the AERA. Republicans in Congress felt that pursuing women's suffrage at the same time as black suffrage would lead to the defeat of the amendment. Thus, they drafted the Fifteenth Amendment to say: "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude." Gender was not included.

Stanton denounced the action, and the AERA collapsed over accusations that those who opposed the amendment were racists. Thinking it a politically sound move to continue to ally the struggle for woman's suffrage with the Republican agenda, Stone and her husband Henry Brown Blackwell (1825–1909) organized the American Woman Suffrage Association (AWSA) in 1869 and took the battle for suffrage to the state level. Stanton and Anthony took a different, more radical route, breaking with their former Republican allies and forming the rival National Women's Suffrage Association (NWSA). The NWSA's newspaper, defiantly named The Revolution, never found consistent funding and would last only two years. By denying the interrelationship between race and gender, the NWSA lost an important part of the women's rights legacy and would be viewed as an organization for white women only.

The NWSA's response to the ratification of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments was a bold and inventive step. Called the New Departure, Stanton and Anthony argued that women were "persons" whose rights as American citizens were established in the Fourteenth Amendment, and the right to vote was central to and inherent in national citizenship. Therefore, woman's right to vote was established by both amendments and did not require additional changes to the Constitution. It was the New Departure that Victoria Woodhull argued before the Judiciary Committee of the US House of Representatives in 1871.

During the elections of 1871 and 1872 groups of women used the theory of the New Departure at polling places across the country and attempted to vote. African American journalist Mary Ann Shadd Cary (1823–93) was able to register in Washington, DC but not to vote. Anthony was more successful. She managed to cast a ballot, but was subsequently arrested and brought to trial. Her testimony, given under penalty of contempt of court, illustrates her defiant outrage and her refusal to be intimidated by male authority. Suffragist Virginia Minor (1824–94) also attempted to vote, but was turned away. She subsequently sued the official who had not allowed her to vote.

In Minor v. Happersett, one of the most important rulings in the history of women's rights, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously that, while Minor was a citizen, voting was not a right but a privilege bestowed by the federal government on those who could be trusted to use it wisely. The Happersett ruling not only crushed the New Departure theory but by allowing more and more devices aimed at depriving black men of their constitutional right to vote, stripped freed people of the South from government protection for their constitutional rights. Undeterred, the NWSA mounted a campaign for a new amendment to the Constitution. As Stanton had done in the Seneca Falls Declaration of Sentiments, NWSA activists invoked the promises of the Declaration of Independence.

The NWSA and the AWSA pursued their separate goals for 20 years. In 1887 Alice Stone Blackwell, daughter of Stone and Blackwell, launched a campaign to merge the two organizations. In 1890 the two organizations became the National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA). Stanton served as the first president of the NAWSA until she retired from active involvement in 1892.

SEE ALSO: Anthony, Susan B. (1820–1906); Grimké, Angelina (1805–1879) and Sarah (1792–1873); Seneca Falls Convention; Stanton, Elizabeth Cady (1815–1902); Women's Movement, United States, 16th–18th Centuries; Women's Movement, United States, 20th Century; Woodhull, Victoria (1838–1927); World Anti-Slavery Convention, London

References and Suggested Readings

- Dubois, E. C. (2003) Feminism and Suffrage: The Emergence of an Independent Women's Movement in America, 1848–1869. Ithaca: Cornell University Press.
- Flexner, E. (1974) Century of Struggle: The Women's Rights Movement in the United States. New York: Atheneum Books.
- Fuller, M. (1845/1971) Woman in the Nineteenth Century. New York: Norton.
- Goldsmith, B. (1998) Other Powers: The Age of Suffrage, Spiritualism, and the Scandalous Victoria Woodhull. New York: Harper Perennial.
- Griffith, E. (1984) In Her Own Right: The Life of Elizabeth Cady Stanton. New York: Oxford University Press.
- Gurko, M. (1976) The Ladies of Seneca Falls: The Birth of the Woman's Rights Movement. New York: Schocken Books.
- Kerber, L. (1980) Women of the Republic: Intellect and Ideology in Revolutionary America. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press.
- Kornfeld, E. (1997) Margaret Fuller: A Brief Biography with Documents. Boston: Bedford/St. Martin's Press.
- Sherr, L. (1995) Failure is Impossible: Susan B. Anthony in Her Own Words. New York: Random House.
- Silver-Isenstadt, J. (2002) The Visionary Life of Mary Grove Nichols. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press.
- Sklar, K. K. (2000) Women's Rights Emerges within the Antislavery Movement 1830–1870: A Brief History with Documents. Boston: Bedford/St. Martin's Press.
- Stanton, E. C. (1979) History of Women Suffrage. Manchester, NH: Ayer Press.

Women's movement, United States, 20th century

Lucille A. Adkins

The First Wave of feminism in the nineteenth century gathered sufficient momentum in the early twentieth century as more radical expressions of feminism emerged and culminated, in 1920, in the triumph of woman suffrage through the passage of the Nineteenth Amendment to the US Constitution. A long-term waning of women's rights efforts from the Great Depression through the end of the 1950s was reversed in the late 1960s and early 1970s by a dramatic resurgence in the struggle for women's rights in what some have termed the Second Wave of feminism. Its impact continued to be felt well into the early years of the twenty-first century.

Bridges from First to Second Wave

By 1890 a new, more modern culture was emerging in the United States. With it came a cultural shift marked by greater emphasis on individuality, the inner life, and the free development of personality. As women pushed the boundaries of the private sphere to participate more fully in wage earning, education, the professions, or community service, the concept of "true womanhood" was pushed aside in favor of the "New Woman." Author Charlotte Perkins Gilman (1860–1935) was the first great spokeswoman for the New Woman.

Gilman wrote Women and Economics (1898), the utopian novel Herland (1915), and numerous short stories. Her most famous short story is "The Yellow Wallpaper" (1892), in which the protagonist, a sheltered, self-denying wife and mother, slowly goes mad. Gilman's work was a critique of the single-family household and the exclusive dedication of women to motherhood. She advocated, instead, the importance of female individuation, of each woman realizing and expressing her talents, capacities, and personality. Gilman's philosophy was deemed forward-thinking and courageous by some, but her advocacy of a communal family structure in which childrearing and household responsibilities would be shared by its male and female members drew sharp criticism.

It was Elizabeth Cady Stanton (1815–1902), however, who would write a feminist manifesto for the twentieth century. "The Solitude of Self" (1892) was Stanton's greatest expression of a life dedicated to women's freedom. In this one piece, she envisioned not just the New Woman, but also a radically different approach to the pursuit of women's emancipation, insisting on equal rights for women "because of her birthright of self-sovereignty; because, as an individual, she must rely on herself."

Stanton's final act of rebellion was an attack on patriarchal religious control. In 1895, at age 80, she published The Woman's Bible (1895), a feminist interpretation that provides examples of the ways in which scripture and religious teachings deny equality and degrade women. Most of her suffragist colleagues were shocked by her actions, and many found her interpretations blasphemous. However, Matilda Joselyn Gage (1826–98) shared her sentiments and served as her collaborator on this work. Gage was throughout her career one of the more radical leaders of the women's rights movement, and like Stanton focused on the role of social institutions, particularly religion, in the oppression of women. Gage also co-authored Stanton and Anthony's first three volumes of A History of Woman Suffrage (1881). In 1893 Gage published her most widely known work, Woman Church and State. She maintained that the downfall of woman-kind in the West corresponded to the rise in Christianity. Steeped in the triple doctrines of obedience to authority, woman's subordination to man, and woman's responsibility for original sin, the church, Gage said, was the primary enemy of women, "the stronghold of woman's oppression." The church was part of "the four-fold bondage of women": the state, the church, the capitalist and the home.

When Anthony effectively merged the two existing suffrage organizations, thereby bringing in the conservative Women's Christian Temperance Union forces, and formed the National American Suffrage Association in 1890, Gage left the suffrage movement and formed the anti-church group she had been considering. Composed of anarchists, prison reformers, labor leaders, and feminists, the Woman's National Liberal Union (WNLU) was viewed as one of the most radical organizations in the country, prompting the government to intercept Gage's mail. She was editor of the WNLU journal The Liberal Thinker until her death in 1898.

By the mid-1890s Americans were beginning to recognize that the nation's cities were centers of poverty, overcrowding, exploitative employment practices, poor sanitation, and a host of other social injustices. The period up until the end of World War I witnessed a mass mobilization of social reform efforts, known as the Progressive Era, in which women played a leading role. The steady increase of women in the labor force, the growth of college education for women, and the spread of women's organizations in the decades following the Civil War laid the foundations for women's active involvement in the public arena during the Progressive Era.

Feminism in the Twentieth Century

The first two decades of the twentieth century saw the development of a new philosophy of modern womanhood. Advocates of this new, avant-garde approach to the emancipation of women distinguished themselves from the more conventional suffragists and referred to themselves as "feminists" (from the French, féminisme). The feminist agenda of the time was a broad one. They moved beyond political and economic rights to embrace female individuality, sexual freedom and birth control. Labor organizer Elizabeth Gurley Flynn (1890–1964) described her feminist club, Heterodoxy, as providing "a glimpse of women of the future, big spirited, intellectually alert, devoid of old 'femininity.'" Called Heterodoxy because it "demanded of a member that she should not be orthodox in her opinions," this group called the first mass meeting on feminism in February 1914. Most of the adherents of feminism were middle-class college graduates, labor organizers, professionals, artists, and immigrants clustered in urban neighborhoods, particularly New York City's Greenwich Village. While they possessed no precise definition of feminism, they were united on the power of feminism to disrupt the existing gender order. After attending her first meeting of Heterodoxy, Rheta Childe Door wrote: "Feminism is something with dynamite in it. It is the state of mind of women who realize that their whole position in the social order is antiquated . . . made of old materials, worn out laws, customs, conventions, fetishes, traditions and taboos."

Unlike the suffragists, feminists saw the greatest need for change in women's private lives, not their public roles. Gilman's work on collectivizing housework inspired New York City feminist Henrietta Rodman (1878–?) to organize a communal apartment house for women to realize Gilman's vision. Rodman was a flamboyant activist for women's rights, defining feminism as "the attempt of women to grow up, to accept the responsibilities of life, to outgrow those characteristics of childhood – selfishness and unworldliness – that we require our boys to outgrow, but that we permit and by our social system encourage our girls to retain." Rodman organized the radical Feminist Alliance in 1914. Other early feminists advocated freeing women from dependence on and subordination to men, calling, instead, for women and men to live and love openly in mutual passion. A small group of feminists lived openly as lesbians in partnerships with other women.

Emma Goldman (1869–1940) was an anarchist and labor organizer who advocated an integrated philosophy of women's liberation, anti-authoritarianism, and anti-capitalism. Best known as a labor organizer, Goldman's goals were to promote equality in economic dealings, freedom of artistic expression, and equality and freedom in sexual relations. In 1905 Goldman published Mother Earth, her magazine promoting a revolutionary agenda. The first issue contained an article entitled "Tragedy of Women's Emancipation," which described suffrage as a distraction from the real need to change society at its roots. Their "tragedy," in her view, was their limited understanding of emancipation. The right to vote, civil rights, and access to job opportunities were "good demands," but none would lead to "true emancipation." Goldman believed that each woman had to "emancipate herself from emancipation, if she really desires to be free."

Reminiscent of Gage's conviction of personal liberty, Goldman defined emancipation as possible only when women confront the "puritanical vision" that clouds their emotional lives and allow themselves to love and be loved. This meant eliminating the "ridiculous notion that to be loved, to be sweetheart and mother, is synonymous with being a slave or subordinate." She labeled marriage "legalized prostitution" and a parasitic relationship based upon the treatment of women as property. To be truly emancipated, each woman should listen to the "voice of her nature, whether it calls for life's greatest treasure, love of a man, or her most glorious privilege, the right to give birth to a child." Vilified in the press as an exponent of free love who would destroy the American family, Goldman's militancy did add strength to women advocating radical change in gender relations.

Goldman was one of the first to speak widely on women's right to contraception, not only so they could avoid unwanted pregnancy but also so that they could enjoy sexual relationships. In 1912 Margaret Sanger (1879–1966), a nurse and socialist, began to write and speak on women's right to birth control. Sanger knew that immigrant women suffered the most from the ban on discussions of contraception. She began by teaching reproductive and sexual information to young girls by a series of articles entitled "What Every Girl Should Know." The articles were published first in the socialist Call and, beginning in 1914, in her own magazine, The Woman Rebel.

By sending her publications through the US mail, Sanger violated the anti-obscenity Comstock Laws, enacted in the 1870s. She fled to Europe to avoid arrest, but returned in 1916 and opened the first American birth control clinic in an immigrant neighborhood in Brooklyn, New York. As she had expected, Sanger was arrested a few days after her clinic opened. In 1917 she was convicted and served 30 days in jail. She continued to promote the cause of birth control for the next 40 years, but advocated the use of physician-prescribed diaphragms. In 1921 Sanger founded the American Birth Control League, the forerunner of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America. She remained active in the promotion of birth control and pioneered new methods of contraception until her death in 1966.

National Suffrage Movement

In 1913 two new provisions to the Constitution – one establishing a federal income tax and the other requiring the direct election of US senators – were moving through Congress. Suffragists saw this as an opportunity to reintroduce the franchise for women. The National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA), under the new leadership of Anna Howard Shaw (1847–1919), who had replaced the equally conservative Carrie Chapman Catt (1859–1947) as president in 1906, was unwilling to pull suffrage efforts from the traditional route of mounting state campaigns. In 1913, however, two young college graduates, Alice Paul (1885–1977) and Lucy Burns (1879–1966), sought and won NAWSA permission to work on a federal amendment. More radical than NAWSA leadership, Paul and Burns had met in England after becoming members of the Women's Social and Political Union, a women's rights organization. Both were jailed for their radical protests. The feminist struggle for equality in England inspired both women and, on their return to the United States, they joined NAWSA, serving as congressional lobbyists.

In 1916 they organized a suffrage march in Washington, DC the day before Woodrow Wilson's inauguration. The parade drew thousands of spectators, including those who were to greet Wilson's arrival that day. A few weeks later, the suffrage amendment was reintroduced in the House of Representatives and was actively debated for the first time in 17 years.

Paul and Burns formed a new national women's suffrage organization, the Congressional Union, the sole purpose of which was to pressure Congress to pass the amendment. Recognizing that there was strength in the votes of women in the West who had already been enfranchised, in 1916 they changed the name of the organization to the National Woman's Party (NWP) and began publication of the newsletter Suffragist. Their initial strategy of mobilizing enfranchised women in the West to vote against Wilson until he backed the amendment failed. Their actions became more radical and included increased demonstrations, parades, mass meetings, picketing, and hunger strikes.

In January 1917 the NWP staged the first political protest ever to picket the White House. The picketers, known as Silent Sentinels, held banners demanding the right to vote. By the summer, they were becoming a nuisance to the government and were arrested on charges of obstructing traffic. Many, including Paul, were convicted and jailed at the Occoquan Workhouse in Virginia (later the Lorton Correctional Complex) and the District of Columbia Jail. Burns joined Paul and many other women in hunger strikes to demonstrate their commitment to their cause, claiming that they were political prisoners. Both women were force-fed and claimed to have been tortured.

Newspaper coverage of the abusive treatment suffered by the jailed women drew other women to even larger, more militant demonstrations, keeping the pressure on the Wilson administration. In January 1918 the president announced that women's suffrage was urgently needed as a war measure. Two years later, Congress ratified the Nineteenth Amendment, granting women the right to vote. After the 1920 victory, Burns retired from public life, but Paul became involved in the struggle to introduce and pass an Equal Rights Amendment (ERA).

Women activists were optimistic following the ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment, but the lines that divided women before the passage of the amendment – race, class, age, ideology – became more significant, and fragmentation hampered any attempt at developing a strong feminist movement. The greater part of radical women's involvement in the 1920s and 1930s was confined to labor disputes. Women actively participated in strikes, but the Great Depression forced them to focus more on issues of survival than the expansion of women's rights.

Working-Class Women and Labor Unions

Women's activism in the workforce was one of the most dramatic characteristics of the post-World War II era. Unionized women challenged layoffs, poor pay, restricted job opportunities, and other discriminatory practices. A dramatic example of female activism at this time was the actions of the women of the United Packinghouse Workers of America (UPWA). A Congress of Industrial Organization (CIO) union, the UPWA had espoused workplace equity in the 1930s and 1940s. Post-World War II reconversion reduced opportunities and wages for women members, however, and women were laid off in large numbers regardless of their seniority rights. Union men provided no support.

Women turned to national leadership and, working through the union's anti-discrimination department, organized women's conferences, established a women's column in the union newspaper, and became a clearing house for women's grievances. African American women were among the most militant female activists in the UPWA as well as other labor unions. They faced the double challenge of being female and black and were active in fighting discriminatory practices in the workplace. Overall, UPWA women fought for better wages and conditions for women. Their ultimate goal, however, was to improve and protect jobs designated as women's work. Class, more than gender, drove their understanding of the inequalities of the workplace. Consequently, most would not challenge the gendered structure of the workplace as part of the broader women's rights movement of the 1960s.

Women working in the electrical industry were the most militant female workers in the postwar period. During World War II they pressured their CIO union, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (UE), to address wage differentials and other forms of discrimination against women. Once again, after the war employers replaced many women electrical workers with returning soldiers and reverted to prewar discriminatory practices against women workers. They continued to pressure the UE and by 1947 achieved non-discrimination clauses for race, sex, color, creed, and national origin in 700 local contracts.

In the midst of the communist red scare the CIO expelled the UE, known to have a strong communist presence, and established a new union, the International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE). In need of members, the UE increased its efforts to address discrimination against women workers. The most significant document to emerge from the UE's deepened rhetoric of social justice was a 40-page pamphlet released in 1952, "UE Fights for Women Workers." Recent research reveals that Betty Friedan (1921–2006) authored the pamphlet. Through her summary of the plight of women working in the electrical industry, Friedan exposed the situation for working women in all areas of the workforce. With Friedan's (and the UE's) call for women to mobilize for workers' rights, lies the connection between unionized women's activism in the 1940s and 1950s and the roots of the Second Wave of the movement for women's rights in the 1960s.

Second Wave

The experience of defense work and union activism gave millions of women a new sense of confidence and willingness to challenge sexism and traditional gender roles. Yet the 1950s were a time of conformity in America, and women's rights were subsumed beneath a renewed call for domesticity. In 1963 Betty Friedan released The Feminine Mystique, which identified the "problem that has no name." The problem was lack of fulfillment, and Friedan supported her claim through a detailed examination of the frustrating lives of countless American women who were expected to find fulfillment primarily through the achievements of husbands and children.

She contrasted the false vision of the happy modern housewife as described in magazines and on television, what she termed the "mystique of feminine fulfillment," with a compelling vision of women suffering from the loss of "that voice within [them] that says, 'I want something more than my husband and children and my home.” Friedan called for “self-realization,” an awakening of a woman’s personal aspirations, and urged women to leave their homes, reject the smothering constraints of domesticity, and pursue careers.

Left to right, front row: Billie Jean King, Susan B. Anthony, Bella Abzug, Sylvia Ortiz, Peggy Kokernot, Michelle Cearcy, and Betty Friedan carry the bronze torch on the final leg of a 2,612-mile feminist relay from Seneca Falls, New York, to the 1977 Conference for Women in Houston, Texas. (© Diana Mara Henry/dianamarahenry.com)

The scope of Friedan’s exploration of women’s sense of anonymity was limited. Married women were a significant presence in the workforce by the early 1960s. Moreover, her detractors accused her of neglecting issues of race, class, and ethnicity. Nonetheless, The Feminine Mystique was a contributing factor to renewed mobilization of women’s rights activism in the late 1960s.

The women’s rights movement that arose in the late 1960s was composed of two diverse groups of women. In 1966 educated, white, middle-class women who had reached maturity during the postwar period formed the National Organization for Women (NOW). As the first president of NOW, Friedan focused the group’s membership on three goals: the massive reconstruction of traditional gender roles, the need for women to have equal employment opportunities with men, and the right of married women to enjoy an equal partnership with their husbands in home and family care. While some NOW members adopted more radical techniques in their expressions of discontent with the restrictions of domesticity, the overall approach of the group was conservative, opting to act as a legal watchdog for women by working within the political system to bring about change.

In 1972 the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) was finally passed in Congress and sent to the states for ratification. The ERA was one line: “Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.” The campaign for state ratification of the ERA can be seen as revolutionary because of the hundreds of thousands of women who became involved at the grassroots level across the nation. Marches, walk-a-thons, door-to-door canvassing, letter writing campaigns, fundraising, and events of every kind imaginable were held by women who had never before done anything political. In the end, the time required for ratification by every state expired and the ERA was defeated. Fifty years earlier, Alice Paul had referred to the women’s rights movement as a “mosaic” in which each woman “put in one little stone, and then you get a great mosaic at the end.” To Paul’s and surviving First Wave feminists’ disappointment, there was no unified movement, no “great mosaic at the end.”

Indeed, a new generation was assuming leadership in the movement. Younger women on college campuses had been active in New Left anti-war and free speech organizations and protests and were far more militant in their demand for the liberation of women. Many of these women found their efforts at leadership within the broader student movement blocked by men who claimed leadership as the province of men. Their roles were limited to preparing food and performing clerical functions. It was those women who began forming their own “women’s liberation” groups to address women’s role and status within 1960s protest movements and American society. Referred to as “liberationists” or by the pejorative term “women’s libbers,” these more radical feminists encouraged women to understand aspects of their personal lives as politicized – “the personal is political” – and reflective of a sexist society that legitimized male privilege.

Thus, while NOW and the more loosely organized radical feminist groups believed that they spoke in a universal voice for all American women, by the mid-1970s their assumptions were proven wrong. African American, Chicana, Native American, and Asian women raised concern over broader issues than their female identity. Race and class, they asserted, intersected with gender and could only be addressed in the context of what it meant to be a member of a minority group. Working-class and lesbian women also denounced NOW and radical feminist groups for indifference to their specific issues of oppression. Groups such as New York Radical Women and Redstockings espoused feminist activism. Important feminist writing, such as Anne Koedt's "The Myth of Vaginal Orgasm" (1970) and Kate Millet's Sexual Politics (1970) emerged at this time. In 1968 radical feminists protested the Miss America pageant by throwing high heels and other "feminine" clothing into a "freedom garbage bag." Sit-ins publicized the radical feminist agenda. In 1970 a group staged a sit-in at the Ladies Home Journal offices, protesting what they saw as the glorification of domesticity propagated in the magazine. Radical feminist activism was the strongest revolutionary movement within the Second Wave of the women's rights movement from 1967 to 1975. Many of the most influential feminists of that period were part of the radical feminist movement.

Shulamith Firestone (1945–) was a central figure in the early development of radical feminism. She was a founding member of the New York Radical Women, Redstockings (named in reference to the bluestockings, women intellectuals of previous centuries, but "red" for the group's espousal of a cultural revolution), and New York Radical Feminists. In the early 1970s Redstockings were noted for their "speak outs" and "zap actions" (a combination of disruptive protest and guerrilla theater) on the issue of abortion rights. Firestone authored The Dialectic of Sex: A Case for Feminist Revolution in 1970. She saw the roots of women's inequality in their biology. Pregnancy, childbirth, and childrearing resulted in physical, social, and psychological disadvantages for women. She advocated the dissolution of the family and, instead, encouraged women to seize control of the means of reproduction and escape their biology. She supported human reproduction in laboratories, free access to contraception, abortion, and state support for childbearing/rearing. Reminiscent of Gilman's utopian vision, Firestone advocated communal care of children.

Andrea Dworkin (1946–2005) was best known for her work on violence against women. An anti-war activist and anarchist in the late 1960s, Dworkin published ten books on radical feminist theory and practice. During the late 1970s and the 1980s she was best known as a spokeswoman for the anti-pornography movement, and for her writing on pornography and sexuality, particularly in Pornography: Men Possessing Women (1979), which categorizes pornography as an industry of woman-hating dehumanization. Dworkin spoke at the first Take Back the Night (protest against rape) March in November 1978, and joined 3,000 women in a march through the red-light district of San Francisco.

Susan Brownmiller (1935–) is best known for her pioneering work on the politics of rape in Against Our Will: Men, Women, and Rape (1975), in which she argues that rape has been defined by men rather than women. As a consequence, men use and all men benefit from the use of rape as a means of perpetuating male dominance by keeping all women in a state of fear. Brownmiller was co-founder of Women against Pornography in 1979. She continues to write and speak on feminist issues, including a memoir and history of Second Wave radical feminism, In Our Time: Memoir of a Revolution (1999).

As radical women had done in the nineteenth century, Mary Daly (1928–), a theologian and radical lesbian, has challenged patriarchal religion and the institution of the family for over thirty years. Her first work, The Church and the Second Sex (1985), drew sharp condemnation from the Roman Catholic Church. Daly's critics consider her a misandrist who practices reverse discrimination and perpetuates sexism. Her work has influenced decades of feminist work and theology and continues to make a dramatic impact. She has advocated research into parthenogenesis (the growth and development of an embryo or seed without fertilization by a male) as a means of creating a male-free paradise. Her treatise on parthenogenesis appeared in Pure Lust: Elemental Feminist Philosophy (1992), in which she advocates "nothing less than the process of a woman creating her Self." Daly's life and writings are highly controversial. In 1998 she was dismissed from her teaching position at Boston College for refusing to admit male students to her introduction to feminist ethics class. Daly recently protested the commencement speech delivered by Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice at Boston College and continues to speak on campuses around the United States as well as internationally.

In 1970 Robin Morgan (1941–) edited one of the first anthologies of radical feminist writings, Sisterhood is Powerful (1970). A refugee from the New Left, Morgan was a founding member of New York Radical Women, helping to organize their protest of the Miss America pageant in 1968. Later in the same year, Morgan helped to create WITCH, a radical feminist group that used public street theater (called hexes or zaps) to call attention to sexism. The alternative, she asserted, was man-hating: "I feel that 'man-hating' is an honorable and viable political act, that the oppressed have a right to class-hatred against the class that is oppressing them." In 1968 WITCH staged a hex against both House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) and the Chicago Eight, arguing that men in HUAC and the Chicago Eight played off of each other to portray the anti-war movement as the pet project of a few male "stars."

By the 1990s, women's activism was primarily political. Pockets of revolutionary thought still existed and continued to influence the remnants of the Second Wave. Third Wave has emerged, but its members, for the most part, reject as no longer relevant the ideologies passed on to them by their mothers and grandmothers. Nonetheless, Second Wave activism brought about significant change for women: reproductive rights as guaranteed through Roe v. Wade; enrollment in military academies and service in active combat; expanded leadership roles in many religious denominations; anti-pornography legislation; sexual-harassment awareness and legislation; advances in employment laws; marital rape laws; election to public office at all levels of government; and opening of doors of male-dominated professions and trades.

SEE ALSO: Friedan, Betty (1921–2006); Goldman, Emma (1869–1940); National Organization for Women (NOW); Paul, Alice (1885–1977); Sanger, Margaret (1879–1966) and the American Birth Control Movement; Steinem, Gloria (b. 1934); Women's Movement, United States, 16th–18th Centuries; Women's Movement, United States, 19th Century

References and Suggested Readings

- Baxandall, R. & Gordon, L. (Eds.) (2000) Dear Sisters: Dispatches from the Women's Liberation Movement. New York: Basic Books.
- Chalberg, J. (1991) Emma Goldman: American Individualist. New York: Longman.
- Crow, B. A. (2000) Radical Feminism. New York: New York University Press.
- Daly, M. (1968) The Church and the Second Sex. New York: Harper & Row.
- Echols, A. & Willis, E. (1990) Daring to Be Bad: Radical Feminism in America, 1967–1975. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press.
- Evans, S. M. (1989) Born for Liberty: A History of Women in America. New York: Free Press.
- Freedman, E. B. (2003) No Turning Back: The History of Feminism and the Future of Women. London: Ballantine Books.
- Gilman, C. P. (1898) Women and Economics: A Study of the Economic Relation Between Men and Women as a Factor in Social Evolution. Boston: Small, Maynard.
- Gilman, C. P. & Knight, D. D. (1999) Herland, The Yellow Wall-Paper, and Selected Writings. New York: Penguin.
- Hill, M. A. (1980) Charlotte Perkins Gilman: The Making of a Radical Feminist. Philadelphia: Temple University Press.
- Kessler-Harris, A. (1992) Out to Work: A History of Wage-Earning Women in the United States. New York: Oxford University Press.
- Red Stockings (1979) Feminist Revolution. New York: Random House.
- Sochen, J. (1972) The New Woman: Feminism in Greenwich Village, 1910–1920. New York: Quadrangle Books.
- Willis, E. (1992) Radical Feminism and Feminist Radicalism. In No More Nice Girls: Countercultural Essays. Middletown: Wesleyan University Press.

Women's movement, Venezuela

Cory Fischer-Hoffman

Women have been active, not only in support roles, but as organizers and combatants in all social struggles throughout Venezuela's history. Women were leaders and participants in early indigenous resistance, slave rebellions, and independence movements. The first large slave rebellion in Venezuela's history took place in 1553, under the spiritual leadership of Princess Guimar. Guimar led enslaved men and women into battle, at the Rebellion of the Mines of Buría, which is often noted as being instigated by her husband, Negro Miguel. Around 1769 in the coastal region of Barlovento, Juana Francisca, an Afro-descendant woman enslaved by Bernardo Llanos, fled with her lover Guillermo to the Cumbé de Ocoyta. Francisca was noted as one of the most rebellious of the cimaronas. María de la Concepción was a leader in numerous slave rebellions in 1794 and 1795.

The Venezuelan indigenous resistance movements were also characterized by a large participation of women in combat. Ana Soto (1618–68) was a leader in anti-colonial indigenous resistance movements. Soto, a Camago woman, continued resisting Spanish colonialism, even after the great Cacique Guaicaipuro had been defeated. Josefa Joaquina Sánchez died in prison after being held for eight months as a punishment for collaborating with conspirators. Leonor Guerra and Eulalia Ramos de Chamberlain (1796–1817) shouted “Long Live the Patria and Death to the Tyrants!” They were both mutilated and killed, their bodies tied to the backs of horses and sent into town as a warning to those who were conspiring against the Spanish crown. Josefa Camejo, a combatant and commander of rebel forces in Coro, authored a statement advocating for women’s inclusion and participation in the independence struggles. On May 25, 1813 Juana Ramírez, who fought in an all-female battalion called the Bateria de Mujeres during the Batalla de los Altos Godos, earned the nickname “La Advancadora” for being the first to move towards the enemy.

Even after independence, fighting for women’s rights was seen as unacceptably feminist. Even so, some women participated in labor struggles. In 1818 female launderers at the hospitals in Valencia went on strike – the first in Venezuela’s history – to demand payment for their work and wage increases. One tactic women developed was to fight for their rights as women and workers under the label of family rights, such as on May 1, International Workers Day, 1944, when the Asociación de amas de casas was formed to fight for lower food costs and lower rents.

A feminist agenda was also incorporated into the clandestine struggles against the dictatorships of 1936–45 and 1948–58. In 1935 the Agrupación Cultural Feminina was formed at the Universidad Central de Venezuela. From 1937 to 1948 the organization printed a one-page insert entitled “The Culture of Women” into the weekly newspaper Ahora! The Organización de la Unión Nacional de Mujeres was formed in 1946, during the trienio (1945–8). In 1947 women won the right to the vote. After 1948, when a military junta overthrew the democratically elected Romulo Gallegos, many women joined the clandestine struggle against the dictator Pérez Jimenez. While women participated in armed struggle against the dictatorship and pursued feminist organizing, most political parties subjugated women’s liberation to bureaux of their parties such as the Feminine Committee of the Patriotic Junta (CFJP), as well as the feminine secretariat of Acción Democrática. Women joined and collaborated with the guerrillas of the 1960s; however, the leadership of the armed struggle remained male-dominated.

After the democratic opening of the suffrage, elite women in leadership advanced narrow goals that were often alienating to working-class women. In 1968 the First Seminar for the Evaluation of Venezuelan Women was held; however, feminist organizing was fractured across class and party lines during this period. In 1974 the first state agency for women was formed: the Comisión Feminina Asesora de la Presidencia (COFEAPRE); it was replaced by the Ministry for the Participation for Women in Development in 1978.

Large class divides plagued the movement throughout the 1980s and 1990s. The Coordinator of Women’s Non-Governmental Organizations (CONG) was formed in 1985, successfully uniting 26 women’s groups and creating a feminist agenda that was not solely limited to working within the structure of political parties. CONG played an active role in drafting the 1990 Reform of the Labor Law, which did not include provisions for domestic workers, and therefore excluded the interests of working-class women. The National Council for Women (CONAMU) formed in 1992 and strongly backed the 1993 Law of Equal Opportunity for women.

Then, in 1995, a broad alliance of social democratic, leftist, and grassroots women organized regional meetings throughout the world in preparation for an International Women’s Conference to be held in Beijing. The delegation of women from Venezuela insisted that the women representing the government and political parties must seriously incorporate the demands of the grassroots and leftist women. Other victories included the 1997 Suffrage Law, requiring that 30 percent of party candidates be women, and a 1998 law discouraging violence against women and the family.

In 1998 Hugo Chávez Frias was elected president of Venezuela and brought women’s rights into the national spotlight. The 1999 constitution is described as the non-sexist Magna Carta. It is the first in the world to place value on housework and entitle housewives to social security. Women are also the majority participants in many social “Missions.” María del Mar of the National Defender of Women’s Rights proclaimed that under Chávez “feminism is reaching the popular sectors” (Wagner 2005).

SEE ALSO: Caracazo, 1989; Venezuela, Exclusionary Democracy and Resistance, 1958–1998; Venezuela, Guerilla Movements, 1960s–1980s; Venezuela, Negro Miguel Rebellion, 1552; Venezuelan War of Independence

References and Suggested Readings

- Friedman, E. (2000) Unfinished Transitions: Women and the Gendered Development of Democracy in Venezuela, 1936–1996. University Park: Pennsylvania State University Press.
- Petzoldt, F. & Bevilacqua, J. (1979) Nosotros tambien nos jugamos la vida: testimonios de la mujer venezolana en la lucha clandestina 1948–1958. Caracas: Editorial Ateneo de Caracas.
- Troconis de Veracochea, E. (1998) Gobernadoras, Cimarronas, Conspiradoras y Barraganas. Caracas: Alfadil Ediciones.
- Vargas Arenas, I. (2006) Historia, Mujer, Mujeres: Origen y desarrollo histórico de la exclusión social en Venezuela. El caso de los colectivos femeninos. Caracas: Ministerio para la Economía Popular.
- Wagner, S. (2005) Women and Venezuela's Bolivarian Revolution. Venezuelanalysis (January 15). Available at www.venezuelanalysis.com/analysis/877 (accessed May 1, 2008).

Women's movements, Eastern Europe

Pavla Vesela

Despite differences in individual countries, the history of women's movements in Eastern Europe can be divided into three periods: the time when these movements originated and gained their first achievements in the mid-nineteenth until the early twentieth centuries; the era after World War II, when women were officially liberated by the socialist state; and finally the period after the fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989, when women's movements again emerged in their original diversity.

Beginnings

The first women's organizations in Eastern Europe date from the mid-nineteenth century. Most of the countries in the region were striving for national independence (Hungarians, Czechs, and Slovaks from the Habsburg Monarchy; the Poles from the Russian Empire; the Bulgarians from the Ottoman Empire) and women's movements were formed alongside the nationalist movements. In Bulgaria, for example, the first women's organizations were formed during the National Revival in the 1860s and 1870s. In Poland, around the year 1840, a group named the Enthusiasts was created by women left alone after the emigration of men defeated during the 1830–1 uprising against Russian rule. In the Czech lands, women actively participated in the National Awakening (mainly in the cultural and educational spheres, but also on the barricades during the June 1848 uprising). The major figures from this era include Bohuslava Rajská, Božena Němcová, Karolína Světlá, and later, Eliška Krásnohorská and Teréza Nováková. The first organizations in the Czechlands – the Association of Slavic Women and the Slavic Morning Star – date from the late 1840s.

In the last two decades of the nineteenth century these initial steps were followed by a number of women's associations with greater diversity of goals. In Hungary, for example, numerous groups were created, including the Hungarian Feminist Association, the National Association of Women Office Workers, the National Catholic Association for the Protection of Women, and the Association of the Home of Cultivated Women. Among the first prominent Hungarian female activists were Teréz Karacs, Johanna Bischitz, Countess Apponyi, Róza Schwimmer, and Vilma Glücklich – the first woman in Hungary to earn a degree in philosophy at the Budapest State University.

Just as in Western Europe, women's organizations in Eastern Europe were almost exclusively an urban phenomenon, consisting primarily of educated middle-class and noble women, and reflecting the values of this group. Given the great proportion of agricultural population in such countries as Poland, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Romania (in Bulgaria, for example, at the end of World War II, the agricultural population was over 85 percent), the first women's movements were concerned with issues relevant to the minority of women living in those countries. Nevertheless, the achievements were relevant for the future as the region became more modernized. They included the first female organizations devoted to the rights of women, women's periodicals, the opening of higher education to women, female members of parliaments, fewer limitations concerning women's labor, greater freedom to participate in political and cultural activities, and, above all, the right to vote. Although many goals were not met, after gaining suffrage, women's movements were generally on the decline.

State Feminism

After World War II, as the countries of Eastern Europe were gradually brought under the influence of the Soviet Union, the existing women's organizations were absorbed by the state or controlled by it. One primary women's committee was established that oversaw the official emancipation of women. Undeniably, during the era of "state feminism," much was achieved. Women began to work at paid employment in numbers unheard of in the West (in Czechoslovakia in 1989, for example, women made up 46 percent of the labor force); childcare facilities were available; maternity leaves and protective legislation enabled women to keep their jobs while being mothers. Other aspects of state women's liberation included high numbers of educated women, both at secondary and university levels, general availability of birth control and abortion, and minimal presence of prostitution and pornography. Fixed quotas for the participation of women in politics brought them in greater numbers into this traditionally male sphere – on average, there were around 30 percent of women in the parliaments (Einhorn 1993). Finally, efforts were made to emphasize women's role in culture and history, symbolized by such acts as printing the image of Clara Zetkin – an early German socialist and women's rights activist – on the 10 mark bill of the German Democratic Republic (GDR).

However, beyond the achievements of the state controlled women's emancipation, problems persisted. Women's role as mothers and homemakers was never questioned, which resulted in the double burden of public work and family. Women's access to the public sphere coincided with its devaluation as a site of hypocrisy and oppression, rather than a sphere of personal realization, so women often voluntarily remained focused on their families. Moreover, the public professions that women held – mostly in education, banking, light industry, and nursing – were also devalued and lower paid. Finally, such issues as the underground presence of prostitution and pornography, homophobia, and violence against women were not addressed at all.

During the era of socialism women were active in various dissident movements, but they largely remained associated with the struggle for democracy, environmentalism, and peace activism rather than with women's rights. The Czech Charter 77, for example, had 18 percent female signatories and several of the most prominent – like Jiřina Šiklová – were women. Solidarity in Poland was for many years dependent on the clandestine networks run by women like Barbara Labuda, Danuta Winiarska, Helena Luczywo, and Ewa Kulik. In addition to contributing to such major dissident organizations there existed a few underground all-female organizations. One such example is the former GDR group Women for Peace, formed in opposition to the change in the Law of Conscription that called for the participation of women in the army in case of emergency. In the former Yugoslavia, where the environment remained relatively tolerant compared with other socialist countries, remnants of women's movements survived. Especially from the 1970s, female activists were increasingly vocal, which led among other things to the first all-Yugoslav feminist meeting that took place in Ljubljana in 1987.

Post-Socialism

A multitude of women's organizations emerged after the fall of the Berlin Wall, although not all of them placed women's issues on their agenda. Some groups derived from the official socialist women's committees; others were successors to the dissident movements; others were indigenous grassroots organizations; and still others emerged under the influence of western activists and funding from such agencies as USAID, UNIFEM, or the Soros Foundation. These organizations differed in their character and included feminist ones (for example, the Independent Women's Association in the GDR), but also Christian women's associations with pro-life programs and groups of women mobilized in the name of their right to motherhood, such as the Prague Mothers. Most of the post-1989 organizations existed on a non-governmental level.

Currently, conditions for women in Eastern Europe do not significantly differ from two decades ago. Women continue to participate in the public sphere, but in less-paid and “feminized” professions. At the same time, they keep their roles as homemakers and are largely responsible for childrearing. Issues such as violence against women, sexual harassment, the boom of the pornography industry, homophobia, and prostitution are still addressed insufficiently. In several countries, governments repeatedly attempt to put restrictions on abortion.

Women's organizations continue to respond to these issues, still primarily on a non-governmental level. The Network of East West Women, founded in 1990 by feminists from the United States and the former Yugoslavia, continues to connect and support women's initiatives throughout the region. Numerous local groups and organizations have survived since the boom after 1989, for example the Polish Women's Parliamentary Group, the Feminist Association, and Pro Femina; the Czech Gender Studies Center and Profem; the Slovak group Aspekt; the Croatian B.a.B.e. (Be Active Be Emancipated); and the Hungarian MONA. These, however, are hardly representative examples of the plethora of women's groups and organizations that continue to exist all over the region and include rape crisis counseling centers, shelters for abused women, feminist publishing houses and periodicals, women's libraries, university gender studies centers, associations of midwives, environmentalist groups, lesbian groups, groups of women with breast cancer, legal centers that monitor the law, and many others.

SEE ALSO: Hungary, Women Radicals, 1848–1849; Women in the Solidarity Movement, Polish Underground

References and Suggested Readings

- Einhorn, B. (1993) Cinderella Goes to Market: Citizenship, Gender and Women's Movements in East Central Europe. New York: Verso.
- Funk, N. & Mueller, M. (Eds.) (1993) Gender Politics and Post-Communism: Reflections from Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet Union. New York: Routledge.
- Jovanovic M. & Naumovic, S. (Eds.) (2004) Gender Relations in South Eastern Europe: Historical Perspectives on Womanhood and Manhood in 19th and 20th Century. Belgrade: Lit.
- Penn, S. (2005) Solidarity's Secret: The Women Who Defeated Communism in Poland. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press.

Women's War of 1929

Lorna Lueker Zukas

The Aba Women's Riot of 1929, as it was named in British colonial records, is more aptly considered a strategically executed anti-colonial revolt organized by women to redress social, political, and economic grievances. The protest encompassed women from six ethnic groups (Ibibio, Andoni, Ogoni, Bonny, Opobo, and Igbo) of southeastern Nigeria and was named by locals Ogu Umunwanyi (in Igbo) or Ekong Iban (in Ibibio), the “women's war.” The confluence of global events in southeastern Nigeria in the late 1920s gave rise to women's dissatisfaction and ultimate action. A worldwide economic depression caused a reduction in the price of palm oil (a chief export of the Nigerian economy), rising unemployment, and increased school fees and prices for goods. The unceasing British demand for forced labor, increased taxation on the local population, corruption by local administrators, trade restrictions, and newly assessed levies and other fees on women, without corresponding benefits, gave rise to frustration and hostility among women's groups. Having no place within the colonial structure to air their grievances, they took to the roads, utilizing precolonial practices and political structures to demand a hearing before a colonial administration that ignored them.

As early as 1925 women were increasingly active in protests and in the anti-colonial struggles that erupted from various quarters. The 1925 market women's riot in Calabar province protested imposed market tolls on commonly owned land, staging anti-government propaganda dances and protest songs to contest taxes and forced labor, while spiritual movements gave women a voice to express dissatisfaction with colonial reality.

In 1928, amidst colonial promises to improve roads, schools, and court buildings and to end forced labor practices, taxes were collected for the first time among the Ibibio, Ibo, and Delta peoples of southeastern Nigeria. People paid the taxes, albeit somewhat reluctantly, assuming this was a one-time fee for the promised improvements. In 1929 when it was realized that tax collection was to be continuous and that women and their personal property were to be counted and taxed, violent protest erupted.

The first outbreaks of violence occurred at Ukam, Opobo Division, when, failing to collect expected tax revenues, the local administrator, R. K. Floyer, demanded property be reassessed. He ordered farms measured, yam heaps and domestic animals counted, and the number of doors and fireplaces in a man's house calculated. He also directed that women's cooking pots and utensils be counted along with women's belongings, including their clothing. Women considered this counting and recording of their personal belongings an egregious intrusion into their private lives.

On November 23, 1929, after months of preparations and discussion women mobilized against dehumanizing and humiliating behavior enacted upon them by colonial representatives. Women protested by blockading the road from Ikot Abasi Township to Aba. They knocked down telegraph polls and severed wires. Women leaders met with local administrators but when these talks failed, women attacked the Essene Native Court, releasing prisoners detained there. Calling upon the traditional practice of women's protest, all women in the local area participated. Before long, rumors of British taxation of women and protests against it had spread to surrounding towns and countryside.

Colonial administrators, failing to understand women's traditional practices and trade and communication networks, dismissed the first actions as crazy acts by hysterical women. In multiple provinces women set fire to Native Court buildings, some destroyed property, chanted threatening songs, and organized customary "sitting on" to embarrass African warrant chiefs who aided colonial administrations or who were corrupt. They did no physical harm to any persons. Despite police reinforcements and additional troops being called in, the Women's War could not be stopped. On December 13, 1929, a British medical officer, frightened by protesting women, ran over two women in his car and fled. This senseless act of violence angered the women, who damaged his car and chased him into the factory where he had run to hide. Women proceeded to damage local banks, post offices, and merchant stores associated with white foreigners. Within days, groups of women from 400 to 4,000 strong, wearing palm leaves, were attacking government buildings and Native Courts in Ikot Ekpene, Utu Etim Ekpo, Abak, and Opobo. More than 15,000 women in southeastern Nigeria were at war.

British reaction was merciless: soldiers shot protesting women, women were massacred through southeastern Nigeria, and entire villages were burned as collective punishment.

SEE ALSO: Nigeria, 20th-Century Protest and Revolution; Women and National Liberation in Africa

References and Suggested Readings

- Abaraonye, F. I. (1998) The Women's War of 1929 in South-Eastern Nigeria. In M. J. Diamond (Ed.), Women and Revolution: Global Expressions. Dordrecht: Kluwer Academic Press.
- Afigbo, A. E. (1972) The Warrant Chiefs: Indirect Rule in Southern Nigeria 1891-1929. London: Longman.
- Akpan, E. O. & Ekpo, V. I. (1988) The Women's War of 1929: A Popular Uprising in South-Eastern Nigeria (Preliminary Study). Calabar, Nigeria: Government Printer.
- Bastian, M. L. (2002) Vultures of the Marketplace: Southeastern Nigerian Women and Discourses of the Ogu Umanwaanyi (Women's War) of 1929. In J. Allman, S. Geiger, & N. Musisi (Eds.), Women in African Colonial Histories. Bloomington: Indiana University Press.
- Hanna, J. L. (1990) Dance, Protest, and Women's Wars: Cases from Nigeria and the United States. In R. L. Blumberg (Ed.), Women and Social Protest. New York: Oxford University Press.
- Ifeka-Moller, C. (1975) Female Militancy and Colonial Revolt: The Women's War of 1929, Eastern Nigeria. In S. Ardener (Ed.), Perceiving Women. London: Malaby.
- Mba, N. E. (1982) Nigerian Women Mobilized: Women's Political Activity in Southern Nigeria 1900-1965. Berkeley: University of California Press.
- Nzegwu, N. (1995) Recovering Igbo Traditions: A Case for Indigenous Women's Organizations in Development. In M. C. Nussbaum & J. Glover (Eds.), Women, Culture and Development: A Study of Human Capabilities. Oxford: Clarendon Press.
- Osuji, C. (1995) The Aba Women's Revolt of 1929: A Study in the Mass Mobilization Process in Nigeria. In C. Dike (Ed.), The Women's Revolt of 1929. Proceedings of a National Symposium to mark the 60th anniversary of the women's uprising in Southeastern Nigeria. Lagos: Nelag.
- Umoren, U. E. (1995) The Symbolism of the Nigerian Women's War of 1929: An Anthropological Study of an Anti-Colonial Struggle. African Study Monographs (Kyoto), 16 (2): 16-72.
- Van Allen, J. (1976) Aba Riots or Igbo Women's War? Ideology, Stratification and Invisibility of Women. In N. J. Halfkin & E. G. Bay (Eds.), Women in Africa: Studies in Social and Economic Change. Stanford: Stanford University Press.

Woodhull, Victoria (1838–1927)

Amy Linch

Victoria Woodhull was a champion of women's suffrage and workers' rights in the mid-nineteenth century United States. She thought women's rights could be achieved through nothing less than a full-scale social revolution that eliminated oppressive marriage laws, legalized prostitution, and uplifted the poor and oppressed women of society. Her newspaper, Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly, was a beacon for the incipient labor movement, with reports on workers' strikes and capitalist corruption. Editorials discussed abortion and endorsed health education for women, criticized the Franco-Prussian War for the suffering it brought upon peasants, and challenged readers to see the injustice in a system that allowed the wealthy to amass ever greater fortunes while sending poor children to jail for stealing bread. Marx and Engels' Communist Manifesto appeared for the first time in the United States in its pages.

Woodhull developed her remarkable oratory skills as a childhood preacher traveling around Ohio admonishing audiences to repent their sins. The daughter of a conman and itinerant peddler, she supported her family by mesmerizing crowds, first in the hellfire and brimstone spirit of religious revival and later as an accomplished spiritualist. At 15 she married an abusive alcoholic. She lived with him for five years and had two children, one of whom was mentally retarded. Her struggle to care for her children in the face of his absence and drunken tirades set the convictions she would later develop as a leader of the suffrage movement.

Victoria's remarkable life of historic firsts began when she moved to New York City at the age of 29. Her fame as a spiritual healer drew the attention of railroad tycoon Commodore Vanderbilt. With his advice and financial backing she profited enormously from financial investments. In 1870, two years after her arrival in New York City, she and her sister opened a brokerage firm, and Victoria became the first woman to hold a seat on the New York stock exchange, a full century before her successor. She used the profits gained from exploiting capitalist markets to finance Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly, in which she attacked capitalism and its supporting institutions, religion and politics.

In 1869 she allied with Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony, and Lucretia Mott, the radical wing of the women's suffrage movement. Her program was far more progressive than that of the suffrage movement, embracing workers' rights and social reform that would free women from the slavery of domestic relations. Under the current marriage laws, she argued, women were slaves whether they could vote or not. She railed against the moralism and hypocrisy that relegated prostitutes to social outcasts and constructed class divisions among women despite their shared oppression by a society in which they were denied the most basic of human rights. She argued before the House Judiciary Committee that women, as US citizens, already had the right of suffrage under the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments of the Constitution.

She was a keynote speaker in the National Women's Suffrage Association meeting the next day, as well as at subsequent conventions over the next year and a half. She gave numerous public lectures to labor and women's rights activists on the fundamental right to free love, constitutional equality, and the evils of capitalism. In a speech at Lincoln Hall in Washington, DC in February 1871 she declared that barring government recognition of women's right to vote, secession was women's only option. A year later in a speech billed as "Impending Revolution," she charged financial monopolies and minority representation with the enslavement of the working class.

In 1872, impatient with the narrow scope of the suffragists' political agenda, Woodhull split with Stanton and Anthony to form her own People's Party. She endorsed a much broader platform that included social, educational, and employment reform than that of the suffragist leaders who were single-mindedly focused on securing the right to vote. The new party, renamed the Equal Rights Party, nominated Victoria for president of the United States with Fredrick Douglass as her running mate on May 10, 1872. Douglass later declined the nomination to support Horace Greeley. She was supported by socialists, trade unionists, and many of the rank and file of the women's suffragists movement. On the night of the election, however, she and her sister were in prison in New York City charged under the Comstock Act with distributing obscene materials through the mail.

Woodhull's sensational views on free love were tolerated, but her outspoken critique of capitalism drew the ire of the New York establishment. As public reports attacked her character, she lashed back by publishing an exposé of the sexual infidelity of Henry Ward Beecher, a prominent preacher, and Luther Challis, a stockbroker, in Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly. She was ultimately exonerated of the charges but her legal bills left her bankrupt. She moved to England in 1878 where she married a wealthy banker. She remained active in the suffrage movement and continued to work for women's advancement until her death in 1927.

SEE ALSO: Labor Revolutionary Currents, United States, 1775–1900; Stanton, Elizabeth Cady (1815–1902); Women's Movement, United States, 19th Century

References and Suggested Readings

- Frisken, A. (2004) Victoria Woodhull's Sexual Revolution: Political Theater and the Popular Press in Nineteenth-Century America. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press.
- Gabriel, M. (1998) Notorious Victoria: The Life of Victoria Woodhull Uncensored. Chapel Hill, NC: Algonquin Books.
- Goldsmith, B. (1998) Other Powers, The Age of Suffrage, Spiritualism, and the Scandalous Victoria Woodhull. New York: Alfred Knopf.
- Harvard University Library Open Collections Program. Links to speeches available at "Women Working 1800–1930," www.ocp.hul.harvard.edu/ww/people_woodhull.html.
- Underhill, L. B. (1995) The Woman Who Ran for President: The Many Lives of Victoria Woodhull. Bridgehampton, NY: Bridgeworks.
- Woodhull and Claflin Weekly* Archive available at www.victoriawoodhull.com/wcarchive.htm.

Workers' self-management, Yugoslavia

Boris Kanzleiter

The proclamation of workers' self-management in June 1950 shaped Yugoslavia's "own way," independent of the Soviet Union, to socialism. In a basic law, the Yugoslav communists transferred the management of a series of state economic enterprises in key sectors like mining, transport, agriculture, and trade into the hands of working collectives. Through a system of workers' councils, workers would manage the factories. According to the program of the League of Communists of Yugoslavia (LCY) from 1958, workers' self-management would create "new social relationships" without "class contradictions" and "exploitation of man by man." The new system should elevate not only the "degree of material wealth" but also the "degree of true freedom of the individual." Interpersonal and social relationships should develop a "new humanistic quality" in a "socialist democracy."

The program of building workers' self-management was a reaction to the split with the USSR and Stalinism in 1948 that had shattered the Yugoslav communists, who had liberated the country in World War II mainly through the mobilization of their own resources and rejected submission to Moscow. With workers' self-management the Yugoslav Communist Party intended finding a new ideological groundwork, considering the experiment of socialism in the USSR as "deformed." In contrast, the LCY claimed their model of workers' self-management took up the authentic roots of the socialist movement. They emphasized the tradition of "council communism" represented through the Paris Commune of 1871 and the early soviets in the October Revolution in Russia in 1917. The LCY defined the main problem in the Stalinist USSR as statism and the all-powerful role of a bureaucracy. Building socialism through workers' self-management, in contrast, should lead to a process of "withering away of the state," which Lenin and Engels had called for. Instead of bureaucratic rule, the Yugoslav communists wanted the "working people" to manage society by themselves.

Workers' self-management was the key pillar of the political and economic system in socialist Yugoslavia. The growth rates as well as the social and cultural developments that were achieved under its banner were impressive: Although the country was largely destroyed by the fierce battles of World War II, infrastructure, communication, and houses were rapidly rebuilt in the decade immediately following the end of the war. In the 1950s and 1960s, Yugoslavia was one of the fastest-growing economies in the world. Between 1947 and 1964, industrial production multiplied five times. The industrial takeoff and fast urbanization process changed the then largely rural society rapidly. During the 1960s and 1970s, the living standards of large parts of the population grew and soon reached levels comparable to those of Italy and Greece. An effective healthcare and school system was established, and illiteracy was reduced dramatically. The number of employed women grew from 322,000 in 1947 to 2.4 million in 1982. Above all, Yugoslav citizens enjoyed a degree of individual, cultural, and political freedom superior to any other socialist country in the world. Travel was not restricted; literature, music, and films from East and West were part of everyday life.

The so-called "Yugoslav miracle" popularized workers' self-management as a model promoted not only by the LCY but also by western and eastern intellectuals who sympathized with the Yugoslav independent path to socialism. The Czech communist economist Ota Šik, who was one of the chief architects of Alexander Dubček's reform program of the Prague Spring in 1968, was influenced by the Yugoslav concept of workers' self-management. But also trade unions and socialist parties in western countries discussed the Yugoslav model.

In spite of the indisputable achievements of the Yugoslav economic model, problems were manifold and the system went through periods of sharp crisis. After its proclamation, workers' self-management was constantly reformed and reshaped. Dissident voices in Yugoslavia itself, like the former partisan commander Milovan Djilas or the "Marxist humanist" intellectuals of the magazine Praxis, criticized the mainly declarative character of the system. In fact, the LCY never considered giving up final control over the decisions of the workers' councils and defended its monopoly of power. A real grassroots industrial democracy was proclaimed but never developed. Instead, party functionaries and managers remained in key positions of power. Bureaucracy was spreading also in Yugoslavia. In spite of the discussions about the problem of alienation, the working process remained largely unchanged.

At the level of the national economy, workers' self-management generated the problem that the relatively autonomous enterprises favored their particular interests over the general interests of integral social development. Growing wages and income were often given priority over increases in effectiveness and productivity. To overcome stagnation, an "economic reform" was launched in 1965, calling for decentralization of decision-making and a "socialist market economy," in which the enterprises under workers' self-management should compete. Integration into the world market was favored. But the reform deepened the problem. Unemployment and social imbalances grew. The gap between rich republics in the north (e.g., Slovenia) and underdeveloped regions in the south (e.g., Kosovo) widened. Localism and nationalism grew as a consequence. Furthermore, there was some dispute as to whether industrial growth was achieved because of the system of workers' self-management or because of the large foreign credits that Yugoslavia obtained from western banks and monetary institutions. The US, it is argued, was interested in stabilizing Yugoslavia politically, though not necessarily advancing socialist goals, as a counterweight to Soviet influence in Southeast Europe during the Cold War.

For many historical analysts, the Yugoslav experiment of workers' self-management still requires critical investigation. After the nationalist war in the 1990s foreshadowing the break-up and dissolution of Yugoslavia, scholarly interest concentrated on ethnic conflict, nationalism, and European and US imperialism rather than on the socialist experiment. Although the left in Yugoslavia virtually disappeared from the political scene, public recollection of the period of workers' self-management is largely positive, even among leading western political observers such as Charles E. Lindblom, who expounds his theory of Yugoslavian worker democracy in his seminal work, Politics and Markets. Identification of the workforce with "their" company is often relatively high, boosting struggles against privatization. A critical evaluation of the benefits and errors of the system in Yugoslavia could be of interest for the workers' movements in other countries such as Argentina and Venezuela where experiments with workers' self-management are still on the political agenda.

SEE ALSO: Djilas, Milovan (1911–1995); Dubček, Alexander (1921–1992); Paris Commune, 1871; Russia, Revolution of October/November 1917; Tito, Josip Broz (1892–1980); Yugoslavia, Anti-Fascist "People's Liberation War" and Revolution, 1941–1945; Yugoslavia, Formation of the Non-Aligned Movement; Yugoslavia, Marxist Humanism, Praxis Group, and Korčula Summer School, 1964–1974; Yugoslavia, Student Protests, 1966–1974

References and Suggested Readings

- Arzenšek, V. (1985) Struktura i pokret. Belgrade: Centar za filozofiju i društvenu teoriju.
- Lemân, G. (1976) Das jugoslawische Modell: Wege zur Demokratisierung. Frankfurt am Main: Europäische Verlags Anstalt.
- Lindblom, C. E. (1977) Politics and Markets: The World's Political Systems. New York: Basic Books.
- Rusinow, D. I. (1977) The Yugoslav Experiment 1948–1974. Berkeley: University of California Press.
- Savez Komunista Jugoslavije (1958) Program SKJ. Belgrade: Komunist.
- Sekelj, L. (1993) Yugoslavia: The Process of Desintegration. New York: Atlantic Research and Publications.

World Anti-Slavery Convention, London

Lisa Guinn

The World Anti-Slavery Convention met in June 1840 in London. It brought together European and American abolitionist societies to discuss the issue of slavery. As its name suggests, this convention had the potential of influencing an international movement on the issue of abolition. However, what the convention is most remembered for is its influence on the rise of American women's rights. The convention is connected to women's rights because of two major events that occurred: Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott, two of the most important women in the early American women's rights movement, met for the first time and came together in friendship and protest; and the "woman question" that had plagued the American abolitionist movement since the late 1830s was openly discussed on an international stage, prompting American women to equate their own secondary status with that of slaves and begin their own revolution for women's rights.

A week before the convention, seven women delegates, part of the larger American delegation from Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, arrived in London expecting to take their place as active participants in the world conference. The women were informed that while they could attend the conference, they would not be allowed to participate, and in fact were to sit behind a bar in the balcony of the convention hall as "visitors." The women were outraged at this banishment and took every opportunity to protest the situation.

According to historian Lori Ginzberg, women got more attention from the banishment than if they had participated in the convention itself (2000: 87). Since American women had been active participants in the American abolitionist movement, including speaking about the subject to mixed (male and female) audiences on a regular basis, the women delegates were shocked to be treated with such disrespect. The delegates took it upon themselves to protest the action in every possible way.

The first method of protest was a written declaration, authored by Sarah Pugh. Pugh wrote that the women delegates were disappointed to be excluded "as co-equals in the advocacy of Universal Liberty" (Tolles 1952: 28). This resulted after Lucretia Mott exerted independent protest when she refused to respond to British questions on the free produce movement, a movement largely initiated by her. At an informal meeting, members of the British delegation asked to be enlightened on the subject. When the largely male American delegation looked to Mott, she refused to address the free produce movement and instead, according to Mott, "gave some rubs on our proposed exclusion" to the cries of "hear! hear!" (Tolles 1952: 27). The most significant means of protest, however, would not materialize for eight years. At the convention, sitting in banishment, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott resolved to hold a women's rights convention when they returned to the United States to address women's subjugation and unequal treatment.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton was a newlywed when she and her husband, Henry, a member of the American delegation, arrived in London to attend the World Anti-Slavery Convention. Although not a formal member of the seven women delegates, Stanton was still appalled at the women's exclusion. In her memoirs, Stanton remembered that despite these women being "members of the National Anti-Slavery Society, accustomed to speak and vote in all its conventions, and to take an equally active part with men in the whole anti-slavery struggle," they were "rejected because they were women" (Stanton 1971: 79). Stanton further protested that the convention "would have been horrified at the idea of burning the flesh of the distinguished women present with red-hot irons, but the crucifixion of their pride and self-respect, the humiliation of the spirit, seemed to them a most trifling matter" (Stanton 1971: 82).

Lucretia Mott led the American women's delegation that arrived in London. A longtime Quaker abolitionist, Mott believed in the equality of the sexes. It seemed especially absurd to Mott that the convention omitted women from participation since women in the American abolitionist movement had played such a prominent role. She herself had presided over the National Conventions of Anti-Slavery Women in the United States from 1837 to 1839. Although Mott attended the convention, she did so in protest, a protest that continued long after the convention closed. When leaving London, Mott thanked the members of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society for their continued work on abolition but noted that they fell short of supporting "Human Freedom on the broad scale" (Tolles 1952: 58).

The banishment resulted from the long-divisive issue in the American abolitionist movement known as the "woman question" – the debate concerning whether or not to allow women leadership roles within American anti-slavery societies. In May 1839, the movement split into those who followed William Lloyd Garrison and supported strong leadership roles for women (American Anti-Slavery Society) and the "new organization" or the American and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, which excluded women from membership in male societies and restricted them to auxiliary status only. When the two factions headed to London for the World Convention, they took these divisions with them. The British Foreign Anti-Slavery Society sided with the "new organization," which ultimately led to the banishment of the American women delegates. Unlike the American anti-slavery movement that had integrated anti-slavery societies (Lucretia Mott, for example, belonged to both the Philadelphia Female Anti-Slavery Society and the Philadelphia Anti-Slavery Society), British anti-slavery societies had always restricted women to auxiliary status. For the British delegates who authorized the banishment, they were doing nothing more than reinforcing English traditions. When Lucretia Mott attempted to rally her British abolitionist sisters to join her in the protest of the banishment, the British women refused. In her diary, Mott expressed her disappointment to "find so little independent action on the part of women" (Tolles 1952: 38).

It was this banishment in 1840 that led directly to the first women's rights convention in the world, held at Seneca Falls, New York in 1848. The convention, led by Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott, introduced the Declaration of Sentiments that outlined the injustices against women.

SEE ALSO: Anti-Slavery Movement, Britain; Anti-Slavery Movement, United States, 1700–1870; Garrison, William Lloyd (1805–1879); Seneca Falls Convention; Stanton, Elizabeth Cady (1815–1902)

References and Suggested Readings

- Ginzberg, L. D. (2000) Women in Antebellum Reform. Wheeling, IL: Harlan Davidson.
- Maynard, D. H. (1960) The World's Anti-Slavery Convention of 1840. The Mississippi Valley Historical Review 47, 3 (December): 452–71.
- Sklar, K. K. (1990) Women Who Speak for an Entire Nation: American and British Women Compared at the World Anti-Slavery Convention, London, 1840. Pacific Historical Review 59, 4 (November): 453–99.
- Stanton, E. C. (1898/1971) Eighty Years and More: Reminiscences, 1815–1897. New York: Schocken Books.
- Tolles, F. B. (Ed.) (1952) Slavery and "The Woman Question": Lucretia Mott's Diary of Her Visit to Great Britain to Attend the World's Anti-Slavery Convention of 1840. Haverford, PN: Friends' Historical Association.

World Social Forums

Pierre Rousset

The World Social Forum, founded in January 2001 in Porto Alegre, Brazil, was created as an open forum for groups and movements dedicated to resisting globalization. According to its charter of principles, the Social Forum is "an open meeting place for reflective thinking, democratic debate of ideas, formulation of proposals, free exchange of experiences and interlinking for effective action, by groups and movements of civil society that are opposed to neoliberalism and to domination of the world by capital and any form of imperialism, and are committed to building a society centered on the human person."

A Rare Dynamism

The World Social Forum was fueled by movements coming from all continents, especially Latin America and Southern Europe, and expanded rapidly. The year following its Brazilian launching, the first European Social Forum was held in November 2002, in Florence, Italy. The first Asian Regional Forum met in Hyderabad, India, in January 2003. One year later, after three sessions in Porto Alegre, the World Forum was founded. By the fourth meeting, the number of participants had grown to 130,000, and a year later 155,000 people came from 135 countries to attend. This growth occurred at a time when people were predicting its decline, due partly to the move from Mumbai back to Porto Alegre.

The particular success of the fifth World Social Forum (WSF) can partly be explained by the Latin American context: the scale of neoliberal attacks coupled with the aggressive policy of “preventive” intervention and so-called wars that result are creating profound instability and new phases of politicization. Demonstrating this politicization, the debates over questions of orientation and strategy were particularly well attended at the WSF. It was apparently the first occasion for many Brazilian activists, in particular young activists, to engage in broad and disparate discussions to challenge government policies.

In 2006 the WSF was less centralized, meeting on three continents and each gathering with a unique focus. The choice of Caracas, Venezuela, represented another small revolution in Latin America: after the Brazil of Lula, the Venezuela of Chávez. In Bamako, Mali, the process of the social forum truly began to take shape in Africa, since previous African meetings had been much smaller. In Karachi, Pakistan, a world forum met for the first time in a Muslim country under military rule.

Each year local, regional, and national forums are held in many places, to varying though often noteworthy degrees of success. The process of social forums has spread and even resisted the ideological countershock of the attacks of September 11, 2001, as well as repression.

Elements of Continuity

Logically enough, the numerical scope of the social forum depends on the host country (in Europe, for example, the forum was smaller in London than in Florence or Paris). Since 2001, although by no means uniform, forums have been much more consistent and vary less in social scope. They have succeeded in situations both favorable and unfavorable for social movements; in defensive as well as offensive economic situations; in very different cultural areas; and in countries with varied political regimes.

The WSF in Karachi in March 2006 illustrates this point well. The forum was held in a country subjected to military rule and the pressures of religious fundamentalist movements and fragmented social movements. It had to be deferred three months, and militant energies and financial resources were entirely absorbed by efforts to help the victims of the terrible earthquake that had struck Kashmir and the north of Pakistan. Despite this, and the stakes involved (meeting in one of the largest Muslim countries in the world), it made the most of what little international support it had.

The design of social forums emerged out of the characteristics of the period. Defensively, they provided a means for regrouping in the face of the universal nature of neoliberal, anti-democratic, and militarist attacks, while offensively they gave expression to an alternative embodied by new generations of activists. They provided a model for building links of solidarity and ensuring convergent approaches between various sectors of society, as well as offering much more varied fields of mobilization than in the past.

Indeed, conditions of solidarity had changed since the 1970s. In some countries the trade union movement may still play a key unifying role (for example, the KCTU in South Korea), but overall many movements lack such organizational poles of attraction or centralization. This is not to say that the “new” forms of organization eliminate or replace the “old” ones. Many so-called traditional movements like trade unions are vital components of the social forum process. However, solidarities now combine in a novel way.

This new framework, among other factors, explains the present function of the Porto Alegre standard of social forums. These forums offer an “open space” where all kinds of organization meet and exchange views in a much less hierarchical way than in the past. They offer a focus for resistance to liberal economic policies and a space where alternatives and aspirations for change can be collectively expressed. They offer a militant space too, where unity can be forged, where international campaigns can be discussed, and where a common calendar of initiatives can be elaborated. This combination of an “open space” and the capacity to prepare joint actions has proven to be extremely dynamic. The forums also provide a way of becoming involved in politics at a time when the authority of the political left is being challenged.

Social forums embody much more complex and rich international processes than traditional conferences (of trade unions or non-governmental organizations, for example) as well as new forms of unity building. This makes them, sometimes at least, better able to deal with the issues at hand. For example, at the European Social Forum (ESF) held in Florence in November 2002, the call for the massive anti-war demonstration on February 15, 2003, was diffused even before being relayed in January at the international level during the third World Social Forum in Porto Alegre. This “amplifier” function of the social forums thus contributed to the unparalleled success of that day. Just as importantly, the ESF is helping to define common action programs at a specifically European level, something which unions have been unable to do for the last 40 years.

Evolution

The Porto Alegre forum of 2005 benefited from Mumbai’s experiment on many levels. Physically, it benefited by leaving the campus of the Catholic University, pitching its tents by the side of the lagoon, and getting closer to the local center of the city and population. It also benefited from placing the Youth Camp at the very heart of the site instead of at the far fringes, accommodating 35,000 people, especially Brazilians and Argentinians. In terms of practice, it took environmental questions fully into account in the way the site was conceived, using small producers for food supplies, using free software, and relying on the Babels network of voluntary interpreters. Organizationally, priority was given to coal-organized initiatives.

New “methodology” (to use the vocabulary of the forum) was applied. Programs were worked out after wide consultation of base organizations. Eleven “axes,” “fields,” or “areas” were defined so as to ensure the visibility of the major topics dealt with. All the movements were invited to check whether their initiatives could be regrouped in order to reinforce dialogue and collaboration (in a process known as “agglutination”). Every topic had to try to link reflection to proposals for action and campaigns to create a closer link between debates and mobilizations.

Since then, this new, complex methodology has been implemented in a number of other forums, though it is still difficult to judge the results. Nevertheless, it seems to effectively unite networks of militants in discussing different approaches and in defining, over and above political differences, common grounds for campaigning. It has also created a new balance between the topics of debate within the forum and the Assembly of Social Movements, which in Porto Alegre remained the place where a common calendar for international action was elaborated.

Another significant change occurred at the meeting of the international council of the WSF in Parma in October 2006, when it decided to call for one day of action in 2008 instead of organizing a new World Forum following the one in Nairobi, Kenya, in January 2007. This decision brought to a close a politically very important debate on the regularity of forums. The question arose shortly after the first ESF in Florence in 2002: while forums contribute to the development of struggle, their multiplication can exhaust financial and activist resources and in fact become an obstacle to mobilization. La Via Campesina, in particular, requested that world forums no longer meet once a year.

The debate was a difficult one, especially given the disparity of resources of the organizations involved. Most institutions that have significant resources and permanent budgets can easily ensure their presence at the forums, while militant movements such as La Via Campesina face limited means and multiple responsibilities, both inside and outside the forums. Their needs must be particularly taken into account, as it is they who ensure the social and numerical success in forums and mobilizations.

Democracy and Power Centers

By their scope and diversity, social forums pose new problems of organization and democracy. There is no single model in this field. The Brazilian process is directed by a restricted committee of eight organizations representing a balance of sectors and currents. In Europe or India, on the other hand, the process is controlled by open assemblies. In France, for example, it would be impossible to choose a particular federation to represent the whole of the labor union movement, or only one committee for the unemployed, or only one network for migrants. The meetings are thus open to any organization concerned that wishes and is able to participate.

The principle of the open assembly corresponds better to the nature of the process as a whole than a closed management committee, and indeed opens up the political basis of opposition in accordance with the WSF's charter of principles, which call for "an open meeting place" for democratic debate. It is this principle that has allowed convergence between such disparate organizations and even the creation of new international movements like Babels, which brings together thousands of interpreters and professional translators who are actively committed to contributing to the events (which require an enormous effort of translation and interpreting) and also to overcoming at least partially the inequality between languages (usually regarded as "international," "national," or "local").

The question then becomes one of how to exercise democracy in this vast movement of movements. "Traditional" forms of militant democracy, tested in social struggles, presuppose a homogeneity of actors that does not exist here. Strike committees are elected in each company by the striking workers, and councils are elected by the inhabitants in each locality: these bodies can then be centralized by means of delegations elected at the regional or national level. In contrast, the process of the forums is characterized by its heterogeneity. The challenge is how to balance votes between a strong trade union federation of hundreds of thousands of members, a network of feminist organizations, an association of local ecologists, and a small international solidarity committee. It becomes a challenge to elect a delegation without giving rise to a crisis if it means choosing between competing trade unions or movements. Under such conditions, recourse to the vote is infrequent and operation by means of consensus is often the rule.

Achieving consensus requires taking the time to integrate divergent points of view as closely as possible. It does not necessarily mean unanimity: once the debate is exhausted, the minority should not seek to prevent implementation of collective decisions. Consensus seeking makes it possible to ensure that divergences do not prevent joint initiatives.

Consensus plays such an important part in the WSF process since it corresponds well to the idea of an "open meeting place for reflective thinking" which the forums encourage. Concrete measures have been taken to encourage participation in international meetings by the most financially disadvantaged: contributions by social movements in the North reduce travel costs for those in the South, while the "migration" to other countries of the European assembly preparing the ESF facilitates the presence of organizations from the east and southeast of the continent. Of course, financial and social inequalities are far from being overcome, but a more consistent effort is being made to surmount them.

The forums face a number of challenges. In Europe, for example, the question of political parties is the focus of many debates. In accordance with the charter of principles, political parties cannot jointly organize forums with social movements, but neither can they be excluded from these open spaces. The debates especially relate to the "marked" presence of certain organizations on the political left, such as the International Socialists, the European Socialist Party, and the Socialist group in the European parliament. In South Asia, however, it is often the role of non-governmental organizations and the financing they receive that creates difficulties for many movements. The role of churches and church organizations are members of the WSF international council, the degree to which religious institutions may organize in what the charter itself describes as a "non-confessional" space is unclear. For example, can Caritas, a network of charitable organizations under the direct authority of the Vatican, have the same status as another social movement? And how can different religions be represented equally?

The composition of the WSF international council reflects its Latin and western origins, but since the Mumbai forum of 2004 in particular, Indian representation has played a much more central role. This geographic widening of the international council, however, faces much resistance and proceeds at a slow pace. In the same way, the weight of militant social movements is small compared to that of more institutional organizations, which have the means and permanent budgets to participate as often as they wish.

The international council has significant although restricted capacities: it decides the place, date, and a portion of the contents of the world event. For the remainder, it creates a framework in which all the forces concerned can act. In this sense it offers direction to the overall process of the forums. However, at the meeting in Parma, Italy, in October 2006, the international council noted that it is actually the whole of the world forums – regional, national, and local – that nourishes the WSF. Thus, the WSF is directed by multiple centers of capacities, by the movements which, on every level, in every place, take the initiative, some using their financial power, others their capacity of mobilization. There is no “general command,” and as long as the dynamism of social resistance is expressed in and by the forums, they will be able to remain a democratic framework of expression.

Expansion and Articulation

The forum encourages a North to South solidarity that challenges regional inequalities. The 2004 Indian Ocean tsunami serves as a case in point. In the aftermath of the tsunami, the role of local grassroots organizations and people’s movements proved to be essential to the economic, social, and psychological rebuilding of the region, and important links were created and strengthened between social movements in the North and their counterparts in the disaster-stricken countries. Also, more traditional international campaigns have been revived, like that for the cancellation of Third World debt. At the same time, new “horizontal” solidarities are forming. Never in the past have the same neoliberal anti-democratic policies been applied by the same institutions in such a universal way: from East to West and from South to North, all peoples are faced with the same deregulations, privatizations, and opening-up of markets, with the same attacks on civil liberties. “Preventive” war and “anti-terrorist” ideology appear to be the counterparts of capitalist globalization, and this situation is encouraging a unity of resistance.

The social forums offer a framework where both standard solidarities, “traditional” and “horizontal,” can be addressed. Specific campaigns are again occupying a more important place after the big “general” mobilizations of past years against neoliberal policies: for the cancellation of Third World debt, against discrimination, and against the war in Iraq, for example. The role of the regional forums appears to be strengthening, and the World Social Forum is being decentralized, inevitably taking on a more regional content than previously. The decentralization of the movement must not lead to its disarticulation or a weakening of the capacity of collective resistance to liberal and military globalization, so new and concrete answers will also have to be found to meet this challenge.

SEE ALSO: Global Justice Movement and Resistance; Grassroots Resistance to Corporate Globalization

References and Suggested Readings

- De Sousa Santos, B. (2006) The Small Channel of the Total Left: The World Social Forum and Beyond. London: Zed Books.
- Fisher, W. F. & Ponniah, T. (Eds.) (2003) Another World is Possible: Popular Alternatives to Globalization at the World Social Forum. London: Zed Books.
- Interdependent Europe Without Borders (ESSF) (in English and in French): www.europe-solidaire.org/.
- Leite, J. C. (2005) The World Social Forum: Strategies of Resistance. Chicago: Haymarket.
- Nairobi World Social Forum: www.wsf2007.org.
- Sen, J., Anand, A., Escobar, A., & Waterman, P. (Eds.) (2003) The World Social Forum: Challenging Worsens. New Delhi: Viveka Foundation.
- World Social Forum (multilingual): www.forumsocialmundial.org.br/.
- World Social Forum India: www.wsfindia.org/.
- United States Social Forum: www.ussf2007.org/.

World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Cancun, 2003

Mary Lou Malig and Aileen Kwa

The fifth ministerial of the World Trade Organization (WTO) took place in Cancun, Mexico, from September 10 to 14, 2003. There were both internal “protests” by government negotiators and external protests by social movements, peoples’ organizations, and activists, the combination of which contributed to the dramatic collapse of the ministerial.

This was not the first time a WTO ministerial collapsed, the first being the third ministerial in Seattle, US, in 1999, where developing country negotiators refused the demands of developed countries to move forward with a new set of negotiations while ignoring long-standing demands for an assessment of the impacts of the Uruguay Round. The collapse took place as tens of thousands of protesters blockaded the streets. The WTO, however, quickly recovered from that setback at its fourth ministerial in Doha, Qatar, in 2001, held shortly after the dramatic events in

New York on September 11. At that ministerial, the WTO produced a declaration called the Doha Development Agenda (DDA), which launched a new round of trade negotiations. There were four sets of issues that were highly controversial in the DDA: the so-called “new issues” or “Singapore issues” (see below), agriculture, cotton, and industrial products liberalization. These were to be tackled at the fifth ministerial.

As the highest decision-making body of the WTO, the ministerial has the power to seal agreements and frameworks for negotiations for years to come. It is empowered to take decisions on all issues, agreements, and proposals under the realm of the WTO. The Cancun ministerial was important because, if successful, it would include an entire set of “new issues” in the ambit of the WTO. These “new issues” or “Singapore issues” are so called because they were initially proposed at the First WTO ministerial in Singapore. They are investment, competition policy, government procurement, and trade facilitation. If included, the mandate of the WTO would be expanded exponentially. The majority of developing countries were vehemently opposed to the inclusion of these issues. Simply put, it would have meant that domestic governments would not be able to regulate foreign investors. The latter would be given as favorable treatment as local companies.

Also at stake at Cancun was the issue of agriculture. The agriculture negotiations were at a stalemate because the United States and European Union (EU) had come together a month before the ministerial, suggesting a tariff-cutting formula that would imply much larger tariff cuts for developing countries than for themselves. This was owing to pressure from the EU which sought to protect its sensitive agricultural products. In addition, the US and EU were united in ensuring that only cosmetic reductions would come out of the domestic subsidies negotiations. Even before the start of the ministerial, the joint US and EU proposal on agriculture had raised the ante in the negotiations. The third major sticking issue was cotton. The West African countries Mali, Burkina Faso, Chad, and Benin were asking for the US to eliminate its subsidies in cotton.

The Road to Cancun

As soon as Mexico’s offer to host the 2003 ministerial was accepted, preparations began in the spheres of the global justice movement. Around the world, national coalitions, social movements, civil society organizations, and trade activists began preparations for the coming ministerial. Efforts began to coordinate with each other and pool resources for those who were planning to mobilize delegations to Cancun.

On November 15–16, 2002 in Mexico City, a broad spectrum of Mexican and international civil society organizations met to discuss their strategies and plans for the upcoming ministerial. The National Union of Autonomous Regional Peasant Organizations (UNORCA), a network of Mexican small farmer and indigenous farming organizations, played a key role in organizing the meeting. Other key groups were La Via Campesina (an international peasants’ movement), the Hemispheric Social Alliance (a continent-wide alliance of social movements and organizations), and Our World is Not for Sale (OWINFS) (a worldwide network of social movements, organizations, and trade activists). The main outcome of that meeting was a joint call, inviting Mexican and international organizations to coordinate actions and information exchanges with the common goal of organizing protests around the WTO ministerial.

Several months later, on May 11–12, 2003, the Hemispheric Social Alliance, together with Mexican Action Network on Free Trade (RMALC), its national chapter in Mexico, organized a Hemispheric and Global Assembly against the Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA) and the WTO in Mexico City. Also attended by organizations and movements from all over the world, this meeting produced a stronger call. Entitled “Derail the Fifth Ministerial of the WTO,” the participants declared their intention and commitment to disrupting the fifth ministerial of the WTO and called on the world to join them. They also made a strong statement against the war on Iraq, linking the push for free trade to the US military aggression as part of its unilateralist foreign policy. Most importantly, the meeting called for the world “to launch massive united and coordinated demonstrations” during the week of the ministerial. The statement was widely circulated and was used as a tool for mobilizing.

In the meantime, Mexican organizations were busy preparing the ground in their country. At the May meeting, an agreement was reached to organize a common calendar of activities under the banner of the People's Forum for Alternatives to the WTO, Cancun – 2003. Two main groups were organizing parallel forums and mobilizations on the ground. One was being organized by Bienvenido a Cancun or the Welcome to Cancun Committee, and the other by the peasants' movements led by La Via Campesina, called the International Farmers and Indigenous Peoples' Forum. Other groups were simultaneously planning their own autonomous activities.

The Derailment Strategy

"Derail the Fifth Ministerial of the WTO" became the collective battle cry of many movements and organizations around the world. Walden Bello, a prominent and long-term critic and campaigner against the WTO and corporatized globalization, best explained the derailment strategy, arguing that since the WTO makes decisions based on consensus, and in this particular case the Doha mandate calls for "explicit consensus" to be reached to approve the inclusion of the contentious "new issues," the goal should be to prevent the emergence of consensus at all costs (Bello 2003).

Doing so required a multipronged strategy. Organizers had learned from Seattle that the refusal of developing countries to agree to the demands of the developed countries combined nicely with the massive demonstrations in the streets to ensure the collapse of the ministerial. One of the components of the strategy, then, was massive national mobilizations and campaigning to pressurize governments ahead of the ministerial. The second was to work with sympathetic developing country delegations and provide technical support and analysis for them to better argue against demands from developed countries. The third component was to hold massive protests in the streets, not only in Cancun but all over the world to show a global resistance to the WTO. Thus, there was work to be done both inside and outside the Conference Center.

The Collapse of Cancun

A few days before the ministerial, Mexican police were hard at work building fences around the perimeter of the hotel zone. Cancun, with its five-star hotels lining the beach front, was beginning to look like a fortified base. Navy ships sat in the waters only a few meters from the beach. The edge of the hotel zone, which was marked as Kilometer Zero, was where the security perimeter began. The main venue of the ministerial was the Cancun Convention Center, 9 kilometers from the security perimeter at Kilometer Zero, and the Non-Governmental Organization (NGO) Center was at a nearby hotel a kilometer from the Convention Center. Both were inside the hotel zone.

Besides a small number of press events and forums by accredited NGOs, most of the civil society activities were well away from the ministerial. Activists had to be innovative and creative to get their message out. Early on in the week, several activists did a media stunt on the beach, spelling out "NO WTO" with their naked bodies. Some groups held a tour for journalists called the Real Cancun Tour, introducing the media to the displaced locals on the other side of the exclusive tourist destination. Although not in the numbers of Seattle, there were several thousand protesters who traveled to Mexico from all over the world to join the mobilizations against the WTO. There were many obstacles to getting big numbers to Cancun, including the prohibitive costs of travel to, and accommodation in, the city, as well as visa restrictions.

On September 10, the day of the Farmers' March, a few thousand people, including farmers, indigenous peoples, workers, students, activists, some accredited NGOs, and anarchists, all marched from the city center to Kilometer Zero. The farmers and women were at the front of the march, but by the time they reached the fence some members of the demonstration (suspected by some of being agents provocateurs) started throwing rocks at the police who were lined up behind the fence. The police threw rocks back, injuring some of the protesters. Some people started rattling the fence and some started climbing. One Korean farmer, a member of the Korean Advanced Farmers' Federation, Lee Kyung Hae, wearing a placard around his neck that said "WTO Kills Farmers," was able to climb to the top of the fence where he stabbed himself with a Swiss army knife.

Everyone was in shock at Lee's death, including the Korean delegation of almost 200, under the umbrella name Korean People's Delegation against WTO. A number of groups, both on the scene and throughout the world, held vigils. The ministers also observed a minute of silence for Lee. Ultimately, the magnitude of his action reminded people that for many, this was a matter of life or death.

Lee, who had distributed copies of his statement before he took his own life, had gone to Geneva on February 23, 2003, setting up a tent in front of the WTO headquarters and displaying placards which read “WTO Kills Farmers” and “Exclude Agriculture from the WTO.” In his statement, he detailed the suffering of fellow farmers witnessed at first hand, including one farmer poisoning himself because of debt. Lee linked the source of their plight to the WTO and posed the question, “For whom do you negotiate now? For the people, or for yourselves?”

Internal Revolt

Inside the ministerial, the most contentious issues in the negotiations were agriculture, the “new issues,” and cotton. On the issue of agriculture, a new grouping of developing countries was born. The G20 group of 20 developing countries, led by Brazil and India, and which also included China, Argentina, Indonesia, and the Philippines, came together to issue a common position that the US/EU proposal on agriculture was unacceptable. The US and the EU relentlessly attacked the G20 but the coalition remained firm, arguing that it represented over half the world’s population and that it would stand united in its demands. The cotton negotiations were also very heated. The director general, Supachai Panitchpakdi, who had taken on the role of chairing the negotiating group, attempted to push the US to take on board, at least partially, the proposal of the West African countries.

The battle culminated when the draft Cancun declaration was issued on the penultimate day of the ministerial. The text did not represent the views of the majority – neither on the Singapore issues, where it endorsed the launch of these new issues, nor on agriculture, where the text reflected the US and EU position. That evening, the heads of delegations meeting held to discuss the text saw delegation after delegation tearing the draft to shreds.

Pivotal to the collapse of the Cancun ministerial was the refusal by the G90 – the group of countries that included the African, Caribbean, and Pacific countries, the African Group, and the least developed countries (LDCs) – to accept the launch of any of the Singapore issues (Jawara & Kwa 2004).

Fences and Flowers

Outside, after several strategy meetings, the Korean delegation, La Via Campesina, other international movements and organizations, students, and local movements and groups, in a show of unity and determination, marched together to the fence at Kilometer Zero. This was on September 13, the day of the March against Corporate Globalization and Militarization. The police were again standing in line at the ready behind the fences.

The Korean delegation led the march and, with the women, began systematically taking down the fences. As each piece of fence fell, people would erupt into cheers. After the third and last fence fell, there was nothing between the police and the protesters, but instead of rushing into the police and pushing their way inside, the protesters all sat down and held up flowers, dispelling the media’s stereotype of the anti-globalization movement as violent hooligans. The police responded with restraint.

An Abrupt End

The next day, September 14, given the unbridgeable differences in the negotiations, the chair of the ministerial, Mexico’s foreign minister, Luis Ernesto Derbez, pulled the plug on the ministerial at 2.30 p.m., surprising even most of the negotiators and causing a range of reactions. The activists campaigning for the derailment of the ministerial displayed a mixture of relief and joy. Others were in more somber mood. Some of the developmental NGOs saw this as a missed opportunity for developing countries, believing that the DDA could bring development. Others still feared a rush to bilateral free trade agreements, as reinforced by the statement of US Trade Representative Robert Zoellick at his final press conference: “As the WTO members ponder the future, the US will not wait: we will move towards free trade with can-do countries.”

The ministerial in Cancun marked an important historical conjuncture, both in the history of neoliberalism and in the movement against corporate globalization. Several commentators argued that the failure to reach consensus on the basis for a new round of trade talks caused an important rupture in the neoliberal project (Wallerstein 2003). This rupture was further enhanced by the failure of the WTO’s sixth ministerial in Hong Kong in 2005 to repair the growing divisions between developed and developing nations' delegations. On the side of the global justice movement, despite the failure to mobilize the enormous numbers that had been hoped for, important progress was made in terms of building networks amongst both Mexican and international movements, organizations, and civil society. At the same time, the conscious cooperation between grassroots social movements and trade delegations from developing countries, which led to the successful derailing of the ministerial, set in motion an ongoing discussion as to the means by which the movement against neoliberalism could most successfully act and intervene in the future.

SEE ALSO: ATTAC (Association for the Taxation of Financial Transactions for the Aid of Citizens); Global Justice Movement and Resistance; Grassroots Resistance to Corporate Globalization; World Social Forums; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Doha, 2001; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Hong Kong, 2005; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Quebec City, 2001; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Seattle, 1999

References and Suggested Readings

- Barlow, M. & Clarke, T. (2003) Making the Links: A Peoples' Guide to the World Trade Organization and the Free Trade Area of the Americas. Canada: Council of Canadians and Polaris Institute.
- Bello, W. (2003) The Road to Cancun: Towards a Movement Strategy for the WTO Ministerial in Cancun. Focus on the Global South. Available at www.focusweb.org/index2.php?option=com_content&do_pdf=1&id=22 (posted February 26, 2003).
- Bello, W. (2005) Dilemmas of Domination: The Unmaking of the American Empire. New York: Henry Holt.
- Call for Mobilization Toward the WTO Meeting in Cancun 2003*, November 15–16, 2002 Available at www.focusweb.org/call-for-mobilization-toward-the-wto-meeting-in-cancun-2003.html?Itemid=92.
- "Derail the Fifth Ministerial of the WTO" Call of the Hemispheric and Global Assembly against the FTA and the WTO, Mexico City, May 11–12, 2003. Available at www.asc-hsa.org/article.php3?id_article=20.
- Jawara, F. & Kwa, A. (2004) Behind the Scenes at the WTO: The Real World of Trade Negotiations. London: Zed Books.
- Rosset, P. (2006) Food is Different: Why We Must Get the WTO Out of Agriculture. Canada: Fernwood Publishing.
- Wallerstein, I. (2003) Cancun: The Collapse of the Neo-Liberal Offensive. Available at www.fbc.binghamton.edu/122en.htm.

World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Doha, 2001

Peter Hardstaff

The 2001 World Trade Organization (WTO) ministerial meeting in Doha, Qatar tends to be remembered purely for the fact that it resulted in the launch of a new round – the “Doha Round” – of trade talks. Yet Doha marked an important point in the evolution of the global justice movement and also in the ongoing tension between northern and southern governments in the WTO.

The Doha Protests and Global Civil Society

Campaigners in advance of the ministerial suspected that Doha had been specifically chosen as a location in response to major civil society protests at previous summits. Holding the conference in a country where public activism and protest were as good as forbidden was assumed to be a reaction demonstrating that those in power were on the run and showing their true anti-democratic colors.

The decision to hold the conference in Doha was widely condemned by civil society groups, but official reaction was dismissive, stating that governments are the chosen representatives of the people and that civil society groups are not a necessary part of the process. Clare Short, UK secretary of state for international development at the time, argued in a BBC interview that “governments represent the people in an open way that listens to civil society at home and having loads of NGOs [non-governmental organizations] squawking all over the place does not represent the poor of the world. The governments of developing countries do” (Wheeler 2001).

Interestingly, many NGOs were actively supporting the agendas put forth by those governments, hoping to “review, repair, and reform” the WTO, rather than launch a new round of trade talks (WDM 1999). There was also strong NGO support for developing country demands for a more transparent negotiating process.

The response to Doha from a wide coalition of civil society groups was twofold. The first involved organizing protests and events across the world before the ministerial to demonstrate the strength of feeling on the issues. It has been estimated that hundreds of thousands of people were involved in protests or events in over 100 cities worldwide in the run-up to Doha (Indymedia 2001). The largest of these took place in Rome with an estimated turnout of 150,000, New Delhi with 75,000, and Seoul with 20,000 (Indymedia 2001). An “alternative summit” was also organized in Beirut titled the “World Forum on the WTO,” with participants from across the globe.

The second response involved modifying activism tactics to suit the restrictive political atmosphere in Qatar. Unlike several other WTO ministerials, opportunities for people to link with indigenous activist groups and organize major demonstrations away from the convention center were effectively nonexistent. The suppression of activism within Qatar itself, coupled with the difficulty of gaining entry to the country for those not officially accredited for the conference and wanting to engage in protest, limited the numbers of people able to demonstrate.

The task therefore fell to those who gained official NGO accreditation. Alongside media stunts to draw attention to the injustices of the current trade system, civil society representatives also engaged in smaller, more targeted protests within the boundaries of the convention center. For example, some 65 NGO representatives blockaded the door of a press conference being given by Robert Zoellick (US trade representative at the time), chanting slogans to highlight the secretive negotiating process (Indymedia 2001).

The fact that such stunts and protests took place within the boundaries of the convention center insulated activists to some degree from potentially extreme reactions by the Qatari authorities because it was a “neutral territory,” with the WTO secretariat having significant say over how it was policed. And the WTO certainly did not want potentially bad publicity resulting from NGO activists being thrown out or arrested.

The Doha Round and the WTO

Even so, civil society activism was in some ways little match for the high politics taking place, and a major political change occurred after the horrific events of September 11, 2001. With the Doha ministerial just two months later, the pressure increased on trade negotiators to make a deal to demonstrate that international cooperation and the multilateral system worked. Unlike at the previous Seattle ministerial, developing country delegates were more reticent about being perceived as blocking a deal because such opposition was being simplistically linked with support for those who wanted to “attack” the international system.

Combined with this topline political pressure was a secretive negotiating process. For example, developing country proposals were omitted from negotiating texts submitted to the Doha conference; in Doha, developing countries were excluded from meetings; and the conference was extended without agreement from the full membership, meaning some delegates, who were unable to reschedule flights, missed the final stages of the meeting (Jawara & Kwa 2003). Late on November 14, running 24 hours overtime, after 48 hours of continuous negotiations and with several delegations having already caught their flights home, the remaining members of the WTO agreed to launch a comprehensive round of talks (Jawara & Kwa 2003). This outcome was immediately christened the Doha Round or the Doha Agenda. The WTO secretariat, which is supposed to be neutral, unilaterally adopted this strapline to accompany its Doha Round logo. In contrast, many civil society groups criticized the final Doha ministerial text as an anti-development outcome and a long way from the “review, repair, reform” agenda being advocated by many in the developing world.

It is difficult, if not impossible, to claim a direct link between the restriction on civil society activism in Doha and the outcome of the conference, deemed a success by the WTO and major players like the European Union and United States and a failure by many in civil society and some developing country governments. There were several complicated forces at work that influenced the Doha outcome, including the negotiating process and the political pressure created in the aftermath of September 11, 2001. However, it is fair to say that Doha provided lessons for all sides that shaped the interaction between civil society and governments at a range of summits that followed.

SEE ALSO: Global Justice Movement and Resistance; Grassroots Resistance to Corporate Globalization; Indymedia Global Justice Campaign, 2000s; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Cancun, 2003; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Hong

Kong 2005; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Quebec City, 2001; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Seattle, 1999

References and Suggested Readings

- Indymedia (2001) The WTO in Doha: Global Actions, Criticisms, Outcomes. IMC News Blast, November 21. Available at www.archives.lists.indymedia.org/imc-news/2001-November/000235.html.
- Jawara, F. & Kwa, A. (2003) Behind the Scenes at the WTO: The Real World of International Trade Negotiations. London: Zed Books.
- WDM (1999) Wake Up to Seattle: Report on WTO Negotiations. Press briefing, Saturday, December 4. London: World Development Movement.
- WDM (2006) Missing Presumed Dead: Whatever Happened to the Development Round? July. London: World Development Movement.
- Wheeler, J. (2001) Trying to Protest in Doha. BBC News Online. Sunday, 11 November. Available at www.news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/business/1648930.stm.

World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Hong Kong, 2005

Mary Lou Malig

Ever since thousands of protesters successfully blockaded the opening ceremony of the third World Trade Organization (WTO) ministerial in Seattle in 1999, the WTO has been both a point of focus for the movement against neoliberal globalization and an arena of contestation between trade delegates representing countries from the global South and those from the global North. The sixth WTO ministerial, which took place in Hong Kong, China, from December 13 to 18, 2005, was no exception.

The trade negotiations in Seattle had collapsed, failing to reach a basis for a new round of talks to follow the “Uruguay Round” which had called the organization into existence. Boosted in their confidence by the protests taking place outside the Convention Center, a number of delegates from the global South had refused to back down to the intransigence of several countries from the global North to their demands for reform.

The meeting which followed, in Qatar in November 2001, however, saw a number of real advances, due largely to the combination of the post-September 11, 2001 political climate in which many states felt the need to stand “shoulder to shoulder” with the United States, along with the relatively repressive atmosphere of Qatar, which considerably restricted protest. Here, the basis for the Doha Round of negotiations was secured.

However, the WTO’s fifth ministerial, in Cancun, Mexico, in 2003, met a similar fate to that of Seattle, being plagued by both fierce protests outside the conference hall (and indeed, elsewhere in the world whilst the conference was taking place) and division within. A surprising coalition of globalization activists, Mexican and international civil society organizations, and countries from the global South succeeded in “derailing” the Cancun talks. As such, many regarded the Hong Kong ministerial as the last chance for the WTO to move forward with the Doha Round. It is precisely for this reason that the ministerial became the focus of protest activity.

Background and the “July Framework”

Following the collapse of the Cancun negotiations, the United States and others followed through on their pledge to pursue bilateral trade agreements with “can-do” countries, having become frustrated with the multilateral process within the WTO. Simultaneously, pressure was applied to members of the G20, led by Brazil and India, who had played a central role in the derailment of Cancun. The presumed objective was to persuade a number of weaker actors within the group to leave, thereby reducing their overall bargaining power. However, whilst the strategy had some limited success, with countries such as Costa Rica pulling out of the G20 shortly after Cancun, the alliance remained relatively stable. A similar constellation of actors managed to considerably water down the agreements being proposed within the Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA) negotiations in November 2003, where again mass street protests surrounded the talks in Miami. As a result, the United States and European Union (EU) shifted their strategy toward one which sought to court the leaders of the G20.

In April 2004, a new grouping named the Five Interested Parties (FIPS) (the US, the EU, Australia, Brazil, and India) was formed in an apparent attempt to allow the voices of leading developing countries to be heard. The primary goal was to form the basis for an agreement on the issue of agriculture which had been a major stumbling block in Cancun. There was temporary cause for optimism among many developing countries that their demands would finally be listened to. Brazil and India agreed to liaise between the other members of FIPS and the G20, as well as the G33 group of developing nations, formed out of concern with the issue of agriculture (and, in particular, the Special Products and Special Safeguard Mechanism which would allow for limited protectionism in certain cases). Simultaneously, the US and EU made efforts to court the good will of the G90, the group of least developed countries, the African Union, and the Africa Caribbean Pacific (ACP) countries, urging them that the Doha Round offered the promise of development.

In large part as a result of this process, a draft framework for negotiations on issues including agriculture, Non-Agricultural Market Access (NAMA), and services was in place by July 2004. In effect, this was the framework which had failed to be agreed in Cancun. Keen to build on these developments, and in an unusual move, the trade ministers of around 40 countries (out of slightly over 140 members) were invited by the US and EU to take part in the July 27–8, 2004 meeting of the General Council (GC), the WTO's highest decision-making body. Here the GC produced the "July Framework."

The Framework focuses largely on agriculture, as well as the issue of NAMA. It was seen as partially reviving the WTO and the Doha Round, serving as a road map for further negotiations and bringing the conclusion of the Round within sight. The Hong Kong ministerial would be a critical step toward this goal. The passing of the Framework was controversial to the extent that a large number of WTO members had been excluded from the de facto decision-making forum, and that the voices of civil society and popular social movements had also not been given a chance to articulate their criticism in the drawing up of the Framework. Many regarded the content as biased in favor of developed countries. Rather than moving toward the elimination of agricultural subsidies, for example, the US managed to secure an agreement that would allow it to continue with its subsidies. The same NAMA text that developing countries had rejected in Cancun as unfair was also adopted.

The Road to Hong Kong

Preparations for the WTO's sixth ministerial in Hong Kong began in early 2005. John Tsang, Hong Kong's secretary for commerce, industry and technology, was elected as chair of the sixth ministerial, and former EU Trade Commissioner Pascal Lamy was appointed WTO director general, replacing Supachai Panitchpakdi. In his acceptance speech, Lamy stated that his first, second, and third priority was to complete the Doha Development Agenda Round.

On the ground in Hong Kong, members of civil society were also busy preparing for the coming ministerial, dubbed "MC6." On September 22, 2004, the Hong Kong People's Alliance on WTO (HKPA), a broad alliance of movements, trade unions, and other organizations, was formed. On February 26–7, 2005, the HKPA hosted an International Coordination Network Meeting in Hong Kong, bringing together more than 200 delegates from around 80 countries covering a wide array of social movements, networks, and organizations. The meeting formed working groups and drew up plans and an initial schedule for activities and actions during the week of the ministerial. Some of the major agreements at the meeting were that a People's Action Week would be organized, the HKPA would provide space for organizations and movements to meet, and it would coordinate protests on December 11, 13, and 18.

Despite fear of scenes of violence conjured up by the Hong Kong media, groups from across the region and beyond continued to prepare delegations to Hong Kong. Being relatively accessible from most of Asia, a large number of delegations from the region were expected, including fisherfolk, a peasants' delegation, trade unions, and others. La Via Campesina, the international peasants' movement, mobilized over a thousand farmers from all over the world. The Korean People's Delegation Against HK WTO Ministerial consisted of 1,500 delegates from a variety of organizations, including the peasants' movement and trade unions.

With around 31 million labor migrants in Asia, migrants' groups were to play a crucial role in the mobilization. Groups like the Asian Migrant Center, which was also part of the

On December 13, 2005, South Korean farmers protest the sixth World Trade Organization (WTO) ministerial conference (MC6), to be held at the Hong Kong Convention and Exhibition Center in Wan Chai. Some 10,000 protesters formed the Hong Kong People's Alliance on WTO, which gathered in the Chinese territory to march against the WTO under heavily armed police patrol. (Getty Images)

HKPA, linked groups from Indonesia and the Philippines with the Indonesian and Filipino migrants in Hong Kong, providing a strong link between the groups on the ground and delegations coming from abroad.

Changing the Rules

In the run-up to the Hong Kong ministerial, Director General Lamy took an active role in negotiations that was unprecedented, chairing a “mini-ministerial” at the WTO headquarters. The secretariat, which had always played the role of a non-biased facilitator, became an active participant in negotiations. The process for decision-making also underwent a transformation. Whereas consensus had previously been required to add to a draft text, this was now only necessary to remove elements of the text. This raised concerns from some developing country delegates and civil society.

Yet despite the more interventionist role played by both the director general and the secretariat, negotiations nevertheless began to falter as Hong Kong drew closer. The informal meetings of the FIPS and “the new Quad” (FIPS without Australia) were argued by some to have reached an impasse. The deadline of November 15, 2005 for a draft ministerial statement was delayed until December, shortly ahead of the final GC meeting before the ministerial. The text contained many controversial elements that did not reflect the consensus of the membership.

“Kong Yee Sai Mau,” or Protest the WTO

“Kong Yee Sai Mau,” or Protest the WTO, was the common slogan of those participating in the mobilizations and activities during the People’s Week of Action in Hong Kong. As thousands began to arrive, the majority of protest participants joined the activities in Victoria Park where the People’s Week of Action and other activities were being held. The park is a common site of public protest in Hong Kong, playing host to the annual vigils commemorating the July 4, 1989 crackdown on the Tiananmen Square protests in Beijing.

On the morning of the first day of the ministerial, fisherfolk from around Southeast Asia, together with their supporters and allies from other movements and organizations, held a fluvial parade in Victoria Harbor. Two boats carrying colorful banners that called on the WTO to remove fisheries from the NAMA negotiations sailed in Victoria Harbor. In the middle of their journey, some fisherfolk jumped into the cold water to unfurl a banner stating their demands.

Later the same afternoon, 100 Korean farmers leapt into the cold harbor waters, swimming toward the Convention Center during a demonstration. Whilst fellow protesters cheered the Koreans, they were quickly gathered up by police boats.

Protests and other actions took place every day. Groups such as Our World Is Not For Sale carried out media stunts and other actions to capture delegates’ attention and transport a message within the Convention Center, while forums, teach-ins, film showings, and street art events were held on the outside. Concerts took place almost every night, including a major event named Rock Against the Round. Numerous demonstrations and marches were also held. One organized by the Korean delegation lasted several hours. It was called “Sam-bo-it-bae,” literally meaning three steps, one bow. The practice is a form of Buddhist meditation involving the seeking of truth through physical hardship and symbolizing the difficulties faced by those struggling against poverty. Local Hong Kong residents, originally intimidated by negative press coverage, began taking part in the activities in Victoria Park. Others demonstrated solidarity by distributing food and drinks to protesters.

By December 17, the penultimate day of the ministerial, tensions were running high as rumors of a deal despite the protests of developing countries began to circulate. “Green room,” or secret, meetings were said to be being held through the night in order to hammer out a deal. The December 17 march, once again, began in Victoria Park. Yet despite the route having been previously agreed, riot police blocked the demonstration on its way to the Convention Center. Led by Korean peasants and workers, the protesters broke through the police lines before scattering in different directions, creating confusion amongst the police. Protesters were able to reach the street in front of the center, where they were greeted by others holding a candlelight vigil. Korean peasants and workers, together with others, continued attempting to push their way right up to the Convention Center. Riot police, in response, used their shields and pepper spray to hold the demonstrators back. The march was only dispersed after much tear gas was deployed.

After dispersing the crowd, police prevented them from regrouping and began arresting hundreds of protesters. In total, between 900 and 1,000 arrests took place. The majority arrested were Korean. Many of those not arrested joined a vigil in front of the jail, demanding the prisoners’ release. By the end of the ministerial, all had been freed apart from 14 who remained in custody (11 from Korea, 1 from Japan, and 2 from China).

A Deal is Made

On December 18, the final day of the ministerial, a deal was agreed upon. A declaration was released by the WTO, along with detailed annexes on the issues of agriculture, NAMA, and services. The developing country formations that held their ground in Cancun had given in.

The G90 was promised the “Round for Free” and Aid for Trade. The Round for Free referred to the promise that the G90 countries would have duty-free, quota-free market access to developed countries. They were also promised aid or loans to help make their economies WTO-consistent. Upon closer inspection of the agreement, however, it was revealed that the US had only promised to remove 97 percent of their tariffs, with the remaining 3 percent covering the products that are of interest to the G90 countries remaining in force. Meanwhile, the G20 welcomed a pledge by the EU to end agricultural export subsidies by 2013. Other subsidies, however, remained in place, as had been the case with the July Framework.

In the area of NAMA, the “Swiss formula” with coefficients for reducing industrial tariffs was agreed upon. This was a tariff reduction formula that would bring all tariffs closer together, with the highest being reduced to a lower level. In practice, this meant that developing countries, whose industrial tariffs tended to be higher, now had to cut these to the level of developed countries. Analysts were quick to point this out as a raw deal for developing countries.

Despite reaching a deal in Hong Kong, dissatisfaction with the process remained amongst many developing country delegates. They objected that the format of the final plenary made it difficult for opposition to be heard. The WTO nevertheless declared the ministerial a victory and step toward the conclusion of the Round.

Beyond the Ministerial

After the ministerial, many activists either remained in Hong Kong or returned at a later date in order to join the campaign for the release of the remaining 14 protesters. Others held rallies in front of Chinese embassies around the world in support of the detained demonstrators. By March 2006, all had been acquitted. The demonstration of solidarity, continuing long after the protests themselves were over, was interpreted by many as an important strength within the global justice movement.

The mass protests around the WTO ministerial in Hong Kong, despite failing to “derail” the negotiations as had been achieved in Cancun, nevertheless won a number of important victories. First of all, they went some considerable way to maintaining pressure on those negotiating in the Convention Center to offer the poor a better deal. Secondly, they built and strengthened the connections between actors within the global movement against neoliberalism on an international level. And finally, they created new networks on the ground in Hong Kong and throughout the region.

Despite the optimism generated by the deal struck in Hong Kong, the “consensus” formed in the Convention Center proved not to be strong enough to fully reinvigorate the WTO after the collapse in Cancun. Meetings which immediately followed the ministerial soon reached an impasse and came once again to a halt in July 2006 at the GC meeting in Geneva. Talks were suspended for the rest of that year.

SEE ALSO: Global Justice Movement and Resistance; Grassroots Resistance to Corporate Globalization; World Social Forums; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Cancun, 2003; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Doha, 2001; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Quebec City, 2001; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Seattle, 1999

References and Suggested Readings

- Bello, W. (2005) Dilemmas of Domination: The Unmaking of the American Empire. New York: Henry Holt.
- Focus on the Global South (2005) The Derailers' Guide to the WTO. Available at www.focusweb.org.
- Gill, S. (2000) Towards a Postmodern Prince? The Battle in Seattle as a Moment in the New Politics of Globalization. Millennium: Journal of International Studies 29 (1): 131–40.
- Wallach, L. & Woodall, P. (2004) Whose Trade Organization? A Comprehensive Guide to the WTO. New York: New Press.
- Wallerstein, I. (2003) Cancun: The Collapse of the Neo-Liberal Offensive. Available at: www.fbc.binghamton.edu/122en.htm.

World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Quebec City, 2001

William K. Carroll

Introduction

“Amid an explosion of tear gas and the zing of rubber bullets they signed a ‘democracy clause’ in Quebec City. The irony of doing so behind a four-kilometre-long perimeter fence – known as the ‘wall of shame’ – probably went over the heads of the Heads of State. . . . Again and again the more militant protesters tried to storm the fence. They breached it and tore it down on several occasions. In a week of heavy symbolism, this was a symbolic defeat for the forces of order” (Swift 2001: 20).

“We, the delegates of the Second People’s Summit of the Americas, declare our opposition to the Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA) project concocted secretly by the 34 Heads of State and government hand in hand with the American Business Forum. Who are we? We are the Hemispheric Social Alliance, the voices of the unions, popular and environmental organizations, women’s groups, human rights organizations, international solidarity groups, indigenous, peasant and student associations and church groups. We have come from every corner of the Americas to make our voices heard. We reject this project of liberalized trade and investment, deregulation and privatization. This neo-liberal project is racist and sexist and destructive of the environment. We propose to build new ways of continental integration based on democracy, human rights, equality, solidarity, pluralism and respect for the environment” (No to the FTAA! Another America is Possible! Declaration of the Second People’s Summit of the Americas, Quebec City, April 19, 2001).

The above excerpts portray two faces of movement politics, both of which were central to the massive protests that accompanied the third Summit of the Americas at Quebec City in April 2001. In the first account, as militants attempt to breach a three-meter tall fence that has been erected between the heads of state of the western hemisphere and the rest of humanity, they meet with a police response resembling warfare but geared down to minimize risk of fatalities. This face presents a dialectic of force and counterforce, of militant, direct-action protest and state coercion – from enclosing property to police brutality. The activist objective is to disrupt, and even undo, the project of hemispheric integration “from above” and expose the hypocrisy of elite commitments to “democracy.” The second reveals a more discursive politics that strives to supplant the dominant social vision with a resonant alternative attuned to the needs and interests of subordinate groups. These facets are instances of what Italian political theorist Antonio Gramsci termed respectively “war of maneuver” and “war of position” – forms of struggle that are indispensable to radical, transformative politics. The events at the Quebec Summit provide an instructive case in the dual politics of anti-corporate globalization, demonstrating the struggle “from above” and “from below.”

Situating the Quebec Summit of the Americas

The Quebec events reveal one moment in a series of elite summits that, beginning in Seattle, November 1999, elicited dramatic and visible responses “from below.” Ever since the so-called G7 held its first summit in 1975, meetings of heads of states and their entourages have formed an important component in global governance. The G7, comprised of the leading developed capitalist countries (and now including Russia as the G8), has dealt with the major political and economic issues facing its member states and the international community as a whole, such as international trade and North–South relations (Soederberg 2006: 16). Elite summits are one aspect of the globalization of the state, as political management of a globalized capitalist economy requires increased international coordination.

The rise of global governance since the 1970s has occurred in tandem with consolidation of a neoliberal policy framework that emphasizes the virtues of deregulated markets as the preferred means of economic coordination in all fields of life. However, since contemporary capitalism concentrates economic assets and power within a relatively small group of international investors and employers, what Sklair (2001) refers to as a transnational capitalist class, the enhanced “freedom” of the market actually enables those who dominate markets to accumulate wealth to their own advantage, and often to the disadvantage of workers and communities. Viewed in this light, international agreements and policies that promote “free trade” and investors’ rights are key elements in a class project of neoliberal globalization that entails (1) the protection of the interests of capital and expansion of accumulation; (2) the tendency toward homogenization and harmonization of state policies and even state forms in the direction of protecting capital and expanding accumulation; (3) the elaboration of a layer of transnationalized institutional authority, with the aim of penetrating states and rearticulating them to global capital accumulation; and (4) the exclusion of dissident social forces from the arena of policy formation, thereby insulating the neoliberal state forms against the societies over which they preside (Amoore & Dodgson 1997). Not surprisingly, advocates of corporate business have been the most ardent advocates of neoliberalism (Carroll & Carson 2003), while grassroots movements and organized labor have been its leading critics.

In 1994, the first Summit of the Americas brought leaders from the 34 member countries of the US-dominated Organization of American States to Miami (Cuba being the only excluded western hemisphere nation). The Miami Summit’s main achievement was the decision to create a Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA) within ten years. The model for FTAA would be the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), which had taken effect earlier in the same year. A paradigmatic neoliberal arrangement, NAFTA would construct a unified economic zone including the US, Mexico, and Canada, within which corporate investors would have new rights to pursue profit without state interference.

The first Summit of the Americas provoked no visible protest, but by 1998 when formal negotiations on FTAA began at the second Summit of the Americas in Santiago, Chile, the anti-corporate globalization movement had started to mobilize. Indeed, although the extensive protests that Peoples’ Global Action organized at the World Trade Organization’s (WTO) ministerial conference in Geneva in May 1998 have been cited as the first contemporary anti-summit protests (Drainville 2004: 55–6), a month earlier, at Santiago, a People’s Summit convened for the first time, as a political alternative to the elite Summit of the Americas. This first People’s Summit released a critique of plans for FTAA, and resolved to form a Hemispheric Social Alliance in opposition to the neoliberal forces pressing for FTAA (Smith 2004: 222–4).

Intervening between the second Summit of the Americas and the third was the “Battle in Seattle,” a massive protest that contributed to the collapse of the WTO ministerial in December 1999, and a series of protests against neoliberal summits and institutions that followed in its wake. Major actions occurred at the IMF/World Bank meeting in Washington, DC (April 2000), the Asian Development Bank meeting in Chiang Mai, Thailand (May 2000), the World Economic Forum in Melbourne (September 2000), and the IMF/World Bank meeting in Prague (September 2000) (Ayres 2004).

These successive actions began the two-pronged strategy mentioned at the beginning of this article – the one prong directed toward mass resistance, the other toward discursive critique and the promotion of an alternative social vision. Resistance took the form of both conventional mass demonstrations, aimed at attracting media coverage, and militant direct action, aimed at disrupting the summits themselves. Envisioning was centered upon the popular summits that typically convened a day or so before the elite summit, with an agenda focused on both the critique of neoliberal globalization and the assertion of viable alternatives. Hence, by the time of the Quebec Summit, a distinctive strategic approach had been devised and used effectively in the struggle against corporate globalization.

Also by this time, anti-corporate protest had evolved into a global network, enabling supportive actions to occur contemporaneously with the protests at Quebec. Indeed, resistance to the Quebec Summit began on April 7 with a demonstration of 10,000 in Buenos Aires, following a two-week strike against the IMF. During the summit, US and Canadian demonstrators blocked border crossings at Detroit and Vancouver, Mexican and US activists demonstrated their opposition to FTAA along the 14-mile fence separating San Diego and Tijuana, and related actions occurred in Brazil and other Latin American countries (Long & Tichi 2006: 34).

Summit and Protest

The Summit of the Americas was a characteristically extravagant event, including about 9,000 delegates, staff, and corporate executives and advisors from the 34 participating countries, and about 2,500 journalists. Protesters and participants in the People's Summit numbered approximately 60,000, roughly ten times the number of police and security officials on hand. Under the theme "Resisting, Proposing, Together," the People's Summit convened on April 17, three days before the elite summit, with several thousand in attendance. Organized by the union-backed Common Frontiers and Réseau Québécois d'intégration continentale – respectively Canada's and Quebec's links to the Hemispheric Social Alliance – the People's Summit was funded largely by the governments of Canada and Quebec, and was situated in the Lower City, well away from the heads of states' summit (which was also funded by the same governments). In the popular summit, feminists, indigenous peoples, trade unionists, ecologists, human rights activists, and others from across the Americas attended dozens of workshops, panels, and speakers' forums on the social, environmental, human rights, and cultural issues associated with the FTAA. The People's Summit blended countercultural festivities with purposeful work on issues ranging from the clear-cutting of forests, privatization of water, and Tobin tax to health care, union history, and art and activism. Forums, education sessions, and panels featuring high-profile activists and intellectuals helped drive a process of consciousness raising, while evening plenaries searched for ways to aggregate demands and reach a consensus that could be incorporated into the next draft of Alternatives for the Americas, the People's Hemispheric Agreement (Drainville 2004: 54, 68).

On the second day of the People's Summit, a leaked copy of the investment chapter of the proposed FTAA agreement was posted on the website of the Institute for Agriculture and Trade Policy. FTAA had been, to that point, negotiated in absolute secrecy. The public posting of the investment chapter broke that secrecy and created a problem for the elite summit reminiscent of the leakage of the draft Multilateral Agreement on Investment, which had contributed to the collapse of those negotiations three years earlier (Egan 2001).

Comparison immediately revealed that the FTAA's draft investment chapter closely resembled the infamous Chapter 11 of NAFTA, granting extensive rights to corporations to sue interventionist governments for diminished profit opportunities resulting from new policies. This enabled People's Summit activists to expose the bad faith of the Canadian government (which had earlier pledged not to sign an FTAA that contained Chapter 11 of NAFTA) and to challenge the refusal of the elite summit to release any details on the FTAA. Thursday evening, the Common Front on the WTO held a well-attended public forum on the General Agreement on Trade in Services – a WTO initiative that would enhance investor rights in key fields such as finance, education, and health. Friday brought over a thousand people to a Teach-In on the FTAA.

By the close of the People's Summit, the assembled groups had agreed on the direction of revisions to Alternatives for the Americas and had called for a referendum on the FTAA in all 34 countries of the Americas. As one leading activist put matters, the People's Summit "provided a wealth of information on every aspect of hemispheric integration and put forward powerful alternative visions to the corporate-dominated model" (Barlow 2007). By Friday, however, the direct action face of the protest was beginning to eclipse the more discursive, visionary face of the campaign as the Carnival Against Capitalism, organized by the anarchist group CLAC (Convergence de Luttes Anti-Capitaliste) got underway at the perimeter fence.

The People's Summit formally ended on Saturday, April 21, with a march of 60,000. As had happened in 1999 at Seattle, trade union moderates shepherded the vast majority of demonstrators away from the elite summit site to an officially approved site, a parking lot where they heard speeches from representatives. But perhaps a thousand broke away and went back uptown to support direct action at the fence. It was at this point that the battle escalated, as militants breached the fence and drew an extensive police response in the form of tear gas, water cannon, and rubber bullets. Under the rubric of toleration for a "diversity of tactics," CLAC had designated three color-coded zones of protest – green for non-confrontational protest, a yellow zone of peaceful direct action, and a red zone of direct action at the fence – against the police barricade. This geo-coding was quickly overtaken by "The Democracy of Tear Gas" (Friedmann 2007: 101); however, the ventilation system in the elite summit building had to be turned off to protect heads of state from being gassed.

As Mark Engler noted, much of the chaotic nature of the direct action was by design, a product of the organizing that shaped the protest. The adoption of an anything-goes "diversity of tactics," and CLAC's refusal to join with other groups who would use non-violence guidelines as means of facilitating more disciplined collective action, invited the violent police response. "Lost was the idea – so vividly instilled when activists locked themselves peacefully around the Seattle convention center – that there could be an option other than simple marching or uncontrolled mêlée, and that this, indeed, might be a most potent option" (Engler 2001: 2).

Still, if the struggle at the fence, which protesters renamed the Wall of Shame, failed to derail the elite summit, the spectacular media coverage did draw public attention, to both the lack of democracy in the FTAA process and the presence of pitched opposition to that process. And, according to Naomi Klein (2001), the extreme police response did not demoralize or intimidate the protesters as much as it galvanized them enough to cheer for the Black Blockers who dared to throw tear gas canisters back at the riot squads. When the gas fumes had finally dissipated, police had fired 1,700 tear gas canisters and had made 392 arrests. More than 300 protesters, police, and bystanders had been injured (Dougherty 2001).

The elite summit also concluded with a show of unity around a tepid "democracy clause" that could be invoked to "conduct consultations in the event of a disruption of the democratic system of a country that participates in the summit process" (Walkom 2001). On the whole, little tangible progress appeared to have been made within the security perimeter. The heads of state renewed their resolve to achieve an FTAA by January 1, 2005, but they rejected an American proposal to fast-track negotiations into a shorter time frame. In fact, they could not even reach a consensus on the 2005 deadline, as Hugo Chávez, president of Venezuela, dissented, insisting instead that the citizenry of Venezuela assent to FTAA by referendum before Venezuela would commit in principle to joining the pact (Dougherty 2001). This defection from an elusive consensus proved to be a harbinger of problems to come with the FTAA project.

The Aftermath: Implications and Ramifications

In Ricardo Munck's view, the actions at Quebec City in April 2001 were "the most significant protests since Seattle" (2007: 67). FTAA was, after all, to be the world's biggest free trade area, and the linchpin of the regionalization of global neoliberalism – a means of neutralizing nationalist or regionalist tendencies in Latin America. Although the protests may have had little immediate impact on the formal summit outcome, they demonstrated a strong popular resolve to resist the hemispheric neoliberal agenda, and they embarrassed a political-economic elite intent on marketing "free trade" as democracy. For several South American leaders facing the dilemma between hemispheric and continental integration, the summit and the protests accompanying it may have helped to crystallize issues and stiffen their resistance to the neoliberal Washington Consensus. Certainly, the summit was the moment when Hugo Chávez, an ardent critic of neoliberal globalization, stepped onto center stage in international politics, but even before the summit Chávez had met with the president of Brazil and worked out a tentative agreement for Venezuela to join the South American trade bloc Mercosur (Lee 2001: 114–15), strengthening a South American alternative to FTAA.

In this light, the Quebec Summit protests may be seen as part of a political process that led to a major turning point at the eighth ministerial of FTAA negotiations in Miami in 2003. By that time, it was widely recognized that NAFTA had exacerbated economic conditions in Mexico, and this increased skepticism about the value of a NAFTA-type agreement for other Latin American countries. Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva (elected president of Brazil in 2002) and Nestor Kirchner (elected president of Argentina in 2003) had joined Chávez as critics of neoliberal policy. Moreover, the impasse created by US refusal to reduce export subsidies and import tariffs for agriculture had only hardened. At Miami, Brazil led the South American states in forcing the US to accept a provision for varying levels of commitment to FTAA, effectively removing its neoliberal teeth (Wainwright & Ortiz 2006: 356–8). Two years later, the fourth elite Summit of the Americas, at Mar del Plata, Argentina, failed to reach the much-vaunted goal of an FTAA by 2005; in fact, the gap between Washington and Latin America was so wide that no consensus document issued from the meeting.

The defeat of FTAA was juxtaposed to the success of the third People's Summit of the Americas, held at the same time and place. With more than 12,000 Americans from across the hemisphere participating in over 150 workshops and events, covered by 600 mainstream and independent journalists, the People's Summit was a huge success. A closing assembly of over 5,000 people condemned the presence of President Bush in Latin America, the occupation of Iraq, the immoral debt foisted upon poor countries, the WTO and the FTAA, and called for a people's integration based on human needs rather than private profit. The following day, the "No Bush No FTAA" rally, attended by a crowd of 40,000, was electrified by the presence of Argentine soccer star Diego Maradona, Cuban singer Silvio Rodríguez, Indigenous Ecuadorian leader Blanca Chancosa, Bolivian presidential candidate Evo Morales (elected to office shortly thereafter), and Venezuelan President Hugo Chávez (James 2005).

However, if the Quebec Summit protests were part of a political process that led to the defeat of FTAA, they were also part of an elite learning process that led to changes in strategy. Indeed, Quebec, followed a few months later by the events of September 11, 2001, was a turning point for state management of elite summits. After Quebec, and in a climate of increased surveillance of citizenries and the criminalization of dissent, states responded to anti-summit protests with increased repression. At the EU summit in Gothenburg, Sweden (June 2001), protesters were met with live ammunition; a month later, Carlos Giuliani was murdered by police while protesting the G8 summit in Genoa. In the changing situation, the efficacy of the "summit-hopping" activist strategy came into question (Hurl 2005; cf. Grundy & Howell 2001), with implications particularly for the "war of maneuver" face of activism. In their analysis of the failure of direct action protest at the Miami FTAA ministerial of 2003 to even get within reach of the summit conference center, let alone close it down, which was the declared objective, Wainwright and Ortiz note that in heavily policed urban spaces, a movement that defines its goals in terms of closing buildings is practically doomed to fail. The "arms race" of protest (as well as the US state's response to 9/11) has facilitated investments in police technologies, and the US state today enjoys a profound capacity for controlling urban space. Opportunities to recreate the conditions that led to the closure of the Seattle Conference Center in 1999 seem remote. (2006: 363)

After Quebec, intensified direct repression of protesters was combined with a strategy of sequestration, as elite summits met in remote locations such as Doha, Qatar (WTO ministerial, November 2001), where tight visa restrictions and fear of repression led activists, with the exception of Greenpeace, to abandon on-site protests in favor of less effective remote ones (Brooks 2004: 572).

By mid-2005, a further shift away from the high-profile, easily accessed elite summits that celebrated globalization from above in the 1990s could be discerned. With FTAA having been entombed, the three North American states opted for a low-profile, behind-the-scenes approach in working toward a Security and Prosperity Partnership (SPP, known vernacularly as NAFTA II) – removing any visible trace of a target to which protest could be directed. Initiated by the three national leaders, on the basis of a planning document prepared by North American business elites, SPP aims to harmonize economic standards and border policies and to “eliminate disincentives to business, such as state-run public services, restrictions on foreign investment, industrial policies, labor standards, employment insurance, and minimum wages” (Halliwell 2007).

What is striking is the level of secrecy in this program for deep integration. In September 2006, for instance, a “North American Forum” of political and economic elites, relating to SPP, was held in Banff, Alberta. No announcement of the meeting was issued, nor was any public statement made at its conclusion; indeed, Canada’s minister of public safety, Stockwell Day, refused to comment on the meeting or even to confirm his participation, although he apparently was a keynote speaker (Barrett 2006). One senior Canadian official, when asked why the SPP had not been brought before the legislatures of the three countries, replied that the governments did not want a repeat of the “bruising NAFTA battle” (Barlow 2007). The implication is that it is both prudent and appropriate to devise and implement neoliberal policy by stealth, preempting public discussion, let alone resistant collective action.

On August 20–1, 2007 – six years and a few months after the Quebec Summit of the Americas, a summit of the three North American leaders was held behind a security fence at a remote lodge at Montebello, Quebec, in order to firm up the SPP. The summit featured a long session with the 30-member North American Competitiveness Council (composed of CEOs of leading American, Mexican, and Canadian corporations), the only group permitted to give recommendations to the national leaders. Despite SPP’s low profile, some 1,600 protesters attempted to disrupt the meeting but were relegated to state-designated “protest pens,” some distance away from the summit. The hundreds of protesters who refused to be contained at the designated sites were met with tear gas, pepper spray, and rubber bullets when they approached the heavily fortified lodge.

Conclusion

If elite summits such as the Quebec Summit of the Americas have comprised an important component of neoliberal “globalization from above,” anti-summit protest, showing its two characteristic faces, has formed a no less important component of “globalization from below.” Since at least Seattle 1999, they have shaped each other in a strategic interaction that ultimately foregrounds two radically different conceptions of democracy. Globalization from above, via elite summits and free trade agreements, reduces democracy to a “competitive elitist” model, a procedure for competitively selecting leaders, with citizen participation confined mainly to voting every few years – as consumers in a political marketplace. A presumption in the competitive-elitist model is that policymaking elites require autonomy from the mass public so that they can exercise their professional expertise most effectively (Hackett & Carroll 2006: 70). If in this model of democracy active citizen engagement in politics is minimized, the institutions of neoliberal globalization – transnational corporations, global financial markets, the WTO, free trade agreements and the like – go further by reducing the power that governments have to influence economic and social affairs in ways that conflict with the interests of transnational corporations (Lee 2001: 112).

Not surprisingly, the anti-corporate globalization movement – the movement for globalization from below – has framed its main grievance against neoliberal globalization precisely in terms of the weakening of democracy (Ayres 2004). The secrecy of summitry, the elitism, the enclosure of political decision-making within a private space (behind a security perimeter), the use of coercion in repressing protest, the criminalization of dissent add up to a regime of global politics that articulates closely with the needs of a transnational capitalist class but is largely disconnected from majoritarian social interests (Robinson 2004). The two faces of protest, evident at Quebec in 2001 and more generally in the anti-corporate globalization movement, can be read as refusals of this technocratic authoritarianism.

One face, emblemized by direct action struggles at the fences that demarcate the elite from the people, contests the legitimacy of summits in their concrete immediacy, and attempts to block elite actions that lack popular support. The other face, that of popular summitry, promotes public, inclusive discussion, critique, and envisioning as a participatory democratic alternative to the exclusionary practices of elite summitry. Both faces contest the legitimacy of neoliberal democracy, and insist that the core of democracy resides not in the rituals of electoral representation but in the direct participation of the people in practices of self-governance.

The criminalization of dissent and strategies of sequestering summits far away from any possibility of public access virtually preclude a repeat performance of the Battle in Seattle or the Struggle at Quebec, obliging activists to devise new strategies of militant engagement on issues of globalization. Despite its success in institutionalizing popular summits, the World Social Forum, established in 2001 a few months before the Quebec Summit, continued to wrestle with the most effective ways of ensuring that forum discussions become a material force for social change by informing collective actions (Santos 2006). The future of globalization from below rests on the capacities of activists to find ways of advancing an agenda of social justice through both the direct actions of the war of maneuver and the longer, political-cultural transformation that composes a war of position.

SEE ALSO: ATTAC (Association for the Taxation of Financial Transactions for the Aid of Citizens); European Union Summit Protests, Gothenburg, 2001; G8 Protests, Genoa, 2001; G8 Protests, Gleneagles, 2005; G8 Protests, Heiligendamm, June 2007; Global Day of Action Against Capitalism, June 18 (J18), 1999; Global Day of Action Against the IMF and World Bank, Prague, September 26 (S26), 2000; Global Justice Movement and Resistance; Grassroots Resistance to Corporate Globalization; Peoples' Global Action Network; World Social Forums; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Cancun, 2003; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Doha, 2001; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Hong Kong, 2005; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Seattle, 1999

References and Suggested Readings

Amoore, L. & Dodgson, R. (1997) Overturning "Globalization": Resisting the Teleological, Reclaiming the "Political." New Political Economy 2: 179–95.

- Ayres, J. (2004) Framing Collective Action Against Neoliberalism: The Case of the "Anti-Globalization" Movement. Journal of World-Systems Research 10 (1): 11–34.
- Barlow, M. (2007) On the Road with Maude Barlow. Canadian Perspectives (Summer): 4.
- Barrett, T. (2006) Secret Summit on Shared "Security." The Tyee, October 12. Available at www.thetyee.ca/News/2006/10/12/Forum/ (accessed August 10, 2007).
- Brooks, D. C. (2004) Fraction in Movement: The Impact of Inclusivity on the Anti-Globalization Movement. Social Science Quarterly 85 (3): 559–77.
- Carroll, W. K. & Carson, C. (2003) The Network of Global Corporations and Policy Groups: A Structure for Transnational Capitalist Class Formation? Global Networks 3 (1): 29–57.
- Dougherty, K. (2001) Accord at Summit. Montreal Gazette, April 23: A1.
- Drainville, A. C. (2004) Contesting Globalization: Space and Place in the World Economy. New York: Routledge.
- Egan, D. (2001) The Limits of Internationalization: A Neo-Gramscian Analysis of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. Critical Sociology 27 (3): 74–97.
- Engler, M. (2001) Fortress Quebec: A Return to Tear Gas and Violence. Available at www.alternet.org/story/10759 (accessed August 8, 2007).
- Friedmann, H. (2007) The World Social Forum at Porto Alegre and the People's Summit at Quebec City: A View from the Ground. Studies in Political Economy 66: 85–105.
- Grundy, J. & Howell, A. (2001) Negotiating the Culture of Resistance: A Critical Assessment of Protest Politics. Studies in Political Economy 66: 121–32.
- Hackett, R. A. & Carroll, W. K. (2006) Remaking Media: The Struggle to Democratize Public Communication. London: Routledge.
- Halliwell, E. (2007) Deconstructing the Security and Prosperity Partnership. Available at www.gnn.tv/articles/3160/NAFTA_on_Steroids_Deepening_the_trade_bloc (accessed August 20, 2007).
- Hurl, C. (2005) Diversity of Tactics: Coalescing as New Combinations. Master's thesis, University of Victoria, Victoria, Canada.
- James, D. (2005) Summit of the Americas, Argentina: Tomb of the FTAA. Available at www.commondreams.org/views05/1123-22.htm (accessed August 10, 2007).
- Klein, N. (2001) The Bonding Properties of Tear Gas. Toronto Globe and Mail, April 25: A15.
- Lee, M. (2001) The FTAA after Quebec: What Happened? What's Next? Studies in Political Economy 66: 107–19.
- Long, A. S. & Tichi, C. (2006) A Short World History of "Seattle." In A. S. Long & C. Tichi (Eds.),

- What Democracy Looks Like: A New Critical Realism for a Post-Seattle World.* New Brunswick: Rutgers University Press, pp. 25–40.
- Munck, R. (2007) Globalization and Contestation: The New Great Counter-Movement. New York: Routledge.
- Robinson, W. (2004) A Theory of Global Capitalism. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press.
- Santos, B. de Sousa (2006) The Rise of the Global Left. London: Zed Books.
- Sklair, L. (2001) The Transnational Capitalist Class. Oxford: Blackwell.
- Smith, E. T. (2004) From Miami to Quebec and Beyond: Opposition to the Free Trade Area of the Americas. Peace and Change 29 (2): 221–49.
- Soederberg, S. (2006) Global Governance in Question. Winnipeg: Arbeiter Ring.
- Swift, R. (2001) The Enclosed Summit. New Internationalist 338 (September): 20.
- Wainwright, J. & Ortiz, R. (2006) The Battles in Miami: The Fall of the FTAA/ALCA and the Promise of Transnational Movements. Environment and Planning D: Society and Space 24: 349–66.
- Walkom, T. (2001) Just What's in this Trade Deal? Toronto Star, April 24: A21.

World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Seattle, 1999

Jennifer Whitney

The protests against the World Trade Organization (WTO) in Seattle, Washington, from November 29 to December 4, 1999, are often referred to as the global justice movement's "coming out party." Over 75,000 people took to the streets, 10,000 of them taking direct action which shut down the summit's opening ceremonies. Protesters converged from over 700 different organizations to participate in marches, teach-ins, and direct actions that occupied both the city's streets and the worldwide web for over a week, forever changing the national and international debate on the WTO, which, until that time, operated largely unnoticed by people in the global North.

Internationally, November 30 (N30) was called as a global day of action by the Peoples' Global Action (PGA) Network – an international coalition, predominantly from the global South, committed to direct action against economic globalization. Discussions about this began during PGA's Intercontinental Caravan in July of 1999, in which 500 people from all continents traveled across Europe to protest globalization's impacts on peasant farmers in the global South. A month later, it issued a formal call to action. Actions in solidarity with those in Seattle took place in over a hundred cities worldwide.

Context

The WTO ministerial in Seattle was tasked with launching a new "Millennium Round" of trade negotiations, which would vastly expand intellectual property rights such as the patenting of plant and seed varieties, software, genetic material, and drugs; furthering the Agreements on Agriculture, which guarantee market access, domestic subsidies, and export competition for large commercial farming; and inserting new accords similar to those attempted through the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI), which had been thwarted by global campaigning the previous year. The MAI would have removed health, environmental, and social regulations as "barriers to trade," as well as opening up public services like health care and education to the free market.

The summit's location in Seattle was rather fortuitous for the emergent counterglobalization movement. One of the most unionized cities in the United States, it had a fairly liberal city and county government, both of which voted unanimously to declare the city an "MAI-Free Zone." However, the high pressure that the WTO reach a new agreement, combined with the generally low awareness and understanding of trade and other economic issues in the United States, meant that activist groups had to present hundreds of educational events to help people enjoying a booming economy understand the threats inherent to an expansion of economic globalization in concrete terms that would capture their imagination.

Protest Methodology and Organization of the Seattle Protests

The success of the Seattle protests was largely due to the efforts of the Direct Action Network Against Corporate Globalization (DAN), a loose coalition of grassroots groups, which convened, trained, and helped coordinate individuals and affinity groups – usually around a dozen people

Thousands of anti-World Trade Organization (WTO) protesters march in downtown Seattle, Washington, the site of the WTO ministerial conference in 1999. During the conference, from November 30 to December 3, nearly 50,000 protesters congregated in one of the largest anti-globalization movements in the US. (AFP/Getty Images) who take actions together – committed to literally shutting down the WTO's opening ceremonies through large-scale creative direct action. The participants in DAN covered a broad spectrum of politics, ranging from street theater and arts groups to radical ecology organizations, independent trade unions, student groups, and a few non-governmental organizations which supported with training, outreach, and material resources.

The goal was to generate mass disruption through an organizing methodology that operated in stark contrast to the way the WTO functions: widespread, directly democratic participation; recognition of the creative and the cultural as essential components of society; and autonomous planning with a loose coordinating body. It was widely believed that no amount of policy reform or legislation was going to stop, or even slow down, the machinations of the WTO, so the intent was to stop it physically, with human bodies.

One tactic DAN used to bring together a broad coalition and facilitate mass participation was to set guidelines for the action. These were not intended to judge tactics or impose an overall philosophy on how change happens, but to widen a space of possibility, to create a basis for trust, and to emphasize the asymmetrical nature of the struggle. The guidelines were: use no violence – physical or verbal – toward any person; carry no weapons; neither bring nor use any alcohol or illegal drugs; and destroy no property.

There were also relationships built with the municipal Labor Council and with the local AFL/CIO (American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations) leadership. Strong links were also forged between DAN organizers and rank-and-file members of the International Longshore Workers' Union (ILWU) and the United Steelworkers of America, the latter of which was in the midst of a year-long lock-out. The investment that DAN made over several months in supporting their struggle had powerful results, leading a large contingent of union members to participate in the DAN marches and direct actions. There were also several other groups working in parallel, including liberal consumer advocacy groups, student organizations, cross-border labor groups, and a radical grassroots Filipino-led organization.

Concomitant to the action organizing was the birth of the Independent Media Center (IMC) network – a grassroots media project that facilitates primarily Internet-based reporting by independent journalists. The first Indymedia website was launched on November 24 and received over a million and a half hits in its first week. Over 450 independent media makers registered at the IMC headquarters, located in the city center, and in addition to filing regular updates to the website produced a daily newsletter, numerous audio reports, and a nightly television program during the week of the protests.

Both the Indymedia network and the N30 organizing took inspiration from international protests, social movements, and analysis, drawing deeply from the Zapatista movement in Chiapas, Mexico in particular, as well as adhering to the PGA principles (of direct action, non-violent confrontation, rejection of the WTO, and prioritization of local alternatives) from early on. Another major influence was the anti-nuclear movement of the 1980s, which used affinity group-based actions and a formal decision-making process that aimed to achieve large-group consensus. Throughout DAN's organizing ran strong threads of anarchist methodology: decentralization, direct action, consensus decision-making, and affinity groups can all be traced to organizing structures used by the anarchists fighting for the Republic during the Spanish Civil War.

Networking and Popular Education

While organizers in Seattle held weekly public meetings to plan the actions and the convergence, using regional meetings and conference calls with spokespersons from around the country to give updates and offer and request resources, others took the cause on the road. A PGA caravan spent a month traveling to Seattle with people from 12 countries telling stories of how globalization was ravaging their homelands, and a three-week road show by Art and Revolution and other DAN participants toured the western US and Canada, carrying out educational street theater and teach-ins about the WTO. Additionally, in mid-September the California-based Ruckus Society hosted an action training camp, in which 160 people participated in workshops ranging from political theater to blockade tactics to non-violent direct action theory, history, and practice.

Huge waves of people arrived in the final week before the shutdown, taking advantage of a four-day holiday weekend. They got to work transforming the city with posters and stickers announcing the action, as well as disseminating information about free trade's impact on issues ranging from the prison industrial complex to food safety to labor conditions.

The Protests

About a week before the ministerial began, 15,000 spoof newspapers were wrapped around the regular local morning daily, featuring "news" based on the WTO's vision of the future. Other preliminary actions included the occupation of an abandoned building drawing attention to the increase in poverty caused by WTO policies, a giant banner hung from a 52-meter-tall construction crane, and a protest of 30,000 people demanding debt forgiveness for the global South.

On November 30, participants in the DAN actions marched from two locations toward the venue for the ministerial's opening ceremonies at 7.00. Along the way, affinity groups blockaded the intersections with a wide range of materials, including an inflatable whale, a wooden stage for performances, a group of 50 people chained together, and a giant canvas where people painted all day. Adding to the complete shutdown was the suspension of the city bus service and a taxi strike organized by the Cab Drivers' Alliance of King County. By 9.00, the entire city center was at a standstill, with thousands of WTO delegates – including Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and US Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky – trapped in their hotel rooms.

Despite the action planning having been open and the maps publicly displayed at the convergence center, the police were caught off guard and began, with no warning or order to disperse, to fire tear gas into the crowd at around 10.00. Volunteer medics reported treating hundreds of injuries. They were also targeted by police – both directly attacked and having first aid supplies confiscated.

By the time the 50,000-strong permitted labor march began at 12.30, clouds of tear gas and volleys of rubber bullets were ubiquitous, yet the blockaders, though exhausted, held tight to their positions – locked to each other and doorways, linking arms, and building barricades out of newspaper boxes and dumpsters. The announcement at 12.45 that the opening ceremonies had been officially cancelled was cause for celebration, though not nearly as much as the news that hundreds of union members had defied their security marshalls and broken away from their march. They showed up at blockades around the city to reinforce the tired and heavily gassed frontlines.

About two hours after the police attack began, some people formed a "black bloc" – a group of masked people dressed uniformly in black whose actions during mass protests can include property damage, freeing detained protesters, building barricades, and other confrontational tactics. This "black bloc" began breaking windows and painting graffiti on deliberately targeted corporations such as Niketown, McDonald's, Starbucks, Gap, and Old Navy, as well as police cars and government buildings.

At 17.00 Mayor Paul Schell declared a state of emergency, which included a 19.00–daylight curfew, the arrival of hundreds of state police and the National Guard to patrol streets alongside the local police, a ban on the possession or use of gas masks, and the creation of a "no protest zone" – a 54-block area that covered the entire city center. Anyone found within this area expressing political opinions was to be immediately arrested.

Meanwhile, at the convergence center, activist medics were treating people suffering from exposure to chemicals, burns from explosive concussion grenades, and blunt trauma injuries from plastic bullets and truncheons.

The other half of the center was given over to a spokescouncil meeting, where thousands planned the next day's events.

On December 1, a large group of demonstrators marched into the "no protest zone" and flooded into a park, which was sealed off by the police and National Guard, who made hundreds of arrests. That afternoon, the Steelworkers gathered at a dock and staged a recreation of the Boston Tea Party, dumping steel into the Puget Sound in protest against the flooding of the US market with foreign steel. More arrests occurred shortly after, with police surrounding an intersection and firing tear gas into the trapped crowd.

From the moment of arrest, protesters engaged in constant acts of non-compliance – some refused to walk to the buses used to transport, others refused to sit down on the buses, and most of the 600 arrestees refused to give their names and were not in possession of identification. Prisoners were threatened with rape and torture, and some were strapped into four-point restraint chairs when they (unsuccessfully) demanded access to lawyers, who negotiated the release of the majority of protesters within the week.

The next day a press conference took place, denouncing both the WTO and the mayor and police's constitutional violations and violence, and then ended with a march to the King County jail, located in the city center and within the "no protest zone." A constant vigil was maintained there until those arrested were released. The following day, the last day of the summit, more protesters gathered around the jail, while others blockaded the hotels to which the delegates would return, in some cases locking themselves to the entrances. At the end of the day the ministerial was forced to announce that the summit had been a failure, as the delegates were unable even to agree on an agenda, to set a next meeting, or to convince trade representatives from over 70 nations of the global South to sign an agreement written at the closed meetings from which they were excluded.

The Global Day of Action

Solidarity actions took place in over 100 cities worldwide. In the US, the ILWU completely shut down all ports along the West Coast for the day. In France, 75,000 people protested in 80 different cities. Turkish peasants ended a 2,000-mile walk to the capital, while in New Delhi hundreds of indigenous people blockaded the World Bank building, covering it with posters, graffiti, cow dung, and mud.

In Geneva, activists snuck into WTO headquarters, short-circuiting electricity mains and crashing computers for several hours. As 8,000 marched in Manila to the US embassy and Presidential Palace, 200,000 people flooded the WTO website in a virtual sit-in. Over 8,000 in Muzafer Ghar, Pakistan, hit the streets warning about WTO threats to agriculture; and 2,000 people rallied in London against the privatization of public transport. In Mexico City, hundreds of striking university students demonstrated outside the US embassy, demanding freedom for those arrested and an end to neoliberal policies.

Legacy

One of the deepest legacies has been the sharp turn of public opinion against the WTO, both on the streets of Seattle and across the world. For years after there were efforts to mimic aspects of the DAN organizing, ranging from specific tactical decisions to overall structural development. The degree of success of such emulation was varied. The most successful attempts worked largely because they adhered to the notion of successful struggle being locally rooted and relevant to the needs at hand.

Another key product of the success of Seattle was the networking and radicalization of a new generation of activists and journalists, who have gone on to be deeply involved in covering and organizing across as broad a swathe of social justice movements as were represented in Seattle. Even after the attacks on the World Trade Center (WTC) in New York City in 2001 and the subsequent state repression, veterans of the Seattle protests have been involved in nearly every major summit protest since; in solidarity with the Zapatista rebels in Chiapas; in human rights delegations to Palestine; in the anti-war movements in many nations; in organizing for the European and US Social Forums; in movements to abolish prisons; in water rights and national sovereignty struggles in Bolivia.

Additionally, the increased awareness of global trade issues and the momentum generated in Seattle lent itself to struggles against the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, and the Free Trade Area of the Americas, which collapsed just before the Hong Kong WTO ministerial in 2005. As a result, industrialized nations have largely had to negotiate bilateral trade agreements to move their agenda forward.

Seattle led to changes in tactics on both sides as well. In addition to the “no protest zone” and the concomitant attack on civil liberties, a 2004 National Lawyers’ Guild report highlighted Seattle as the turning point for a new wave of law enforcement tactics including: preemptive and unjust arrests before, during, and after protests; content-based permit procedures and onerous liability insurance requirements; abusive and unjustified use of “less-lethal” weapons; the establishment of so-called “free speech zones” which seek to confine protest to pens; arbitrary checkpoints and searches without cause or warrant; unprecedented high bail; restriction of access to counsel; and a lack of prompt processing. Indeed, Seattle is thought to have laid the basis for the introduction of the draconian Violent Radicalization and Homegrown Terrorism Act of 2007 in the United States. At the same time, intense debate sprang up about protest tactics, and a split began between those in support of property damage as an acceptable form of protest and those who felt that it constitutes violence and is damaging to the cause. As a result, a trend developed in later mobilizations toward supporting a “diversity of tactics,” through which efforts are made to incorporate different tactics into a larger strategic plan.

The protest legacy that began in Seattle has really affected the WTO. Unable to agree on a meeting agenda or any new accords in Seattle, the WTO held its next meeting in Qatar, where protest is largely prohibited by law. Here, a few agreements were signed under intense pressure from US Trade Representative Robert Zoellick, who suggested in an earlier speech to the Institute for International Economics that there are “intellectual connections” between those who destroyed the WTC and “others who have turned to violence to attack international finance, globalization, and the United States,” drawing a direct parallel between the Seattle protesters and those who launched the attacks of September 11, 2001. Even so, the WTO failed again to achieve its goals at the fifth ministerial in Cancun, 2003, where delegates from 22 nations from the global South agreed to block any agreements on agriculture whilst popular protests erupted on the streets outside. In 2005, limited agreements were signed in Hong Kong, again amidst considerable protest. These were undercut the following year when the Doha Development Agenda was suspended indefinitely.

SEE ALSO: Anarchism; ATTAC (Association for the Taxation of Financial Transactions for the Aid of Citizens); European Union Summit Protests, Gothenburg, 2001; G8 Protests, Genoa, 2001; G8 Protests, Gleneagles, 2005; G8 Protests, Heiligendamm, June 2007; Global Day of Action Against Capitalism, June 18 (J18), 1999; Global Day of Action Against the IMF and World Bank, Prague, September 26 (S26), 2000; Global Justice Movement and Resistance; Grassroots Resistance to Corporate Globalization; Peoples’ Global Action Network; Indymedia Global Justice Campaign, 2000s; Reclaim the Streets; World Social Forums; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Cancun, 2003; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Doha, 2001; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Hong Kong, 2005; World Trade Organization (WTO) Protests, Quebec City, 2001; Zapatismo; Zapatistas, EZLN, and the Chiapas Uprising

References and Suggested Readings

- Boghossian, H. (2004) The Assault on Free Speech, Public Assembly, and Dissent: A National Lawyers’ Guild Report on Government Violations of First Amendment Rights in the United States. Great Barrington, MA: North River Press.
- Cockburn, A. & St. Clair, J. (2000) Five Days That Shook the World: Seattle and Beyond. London: Verso.
- Gill, S. (2000) Towards a Postmodern Prince? The Battle in Seattle as a Moment in the New Politics of Globalization. Millennium: Journal of International Studies 29 (1): 131–40.
- Hardt, M. & Negri, A. (2003) Convergence in Seattle. In Multitude: War and Democracy in the Age of Empire. Penguin: New York and London, pp. 285–8.
- Notes from Nowhere Collective (2003) We Are Everywhere: The Irresistible Rise of Global Anticapitalism. London: Verso.
- Prokosch, M. & Raymond, L. (2002) The Global Activist’s Manual: Local Ways to Change the World. New York: Nation Books.
- Solnit, D. (2004) Globalize Liberation: How to Uproot the System and Build a Better World. San Francisco: City Lights Books.
- Yuen, E. et al. (2002) The Battle of Seattle: The New Challenge to Capitalist Globalization. New York: Soft Skull Press.

Wright, Frances "Fanny" (1795–1852)

Richard Goff

Frances Wright was a Scotch-American political radical and social reformer, feminist, humanist, and political radical of the early nineteenth century. Ahead of her time in many respects, she defied gender norms by openly opposing slavery, racism, and sexism before such ideas were publicly acceptable. Wright's radical egalitarianism and willingness to speak on divisive issues made her one of the more controversial figures of antebellum America.

Frances "Fanny" Wright was born in Dundee, Scotland on September 6, 1795. A daughter of privilege (her father was a linen merchant and admirer of Thomas Paine), she was orphaned at the age of three and inherited a substantial estate. After self-educating herself at libraries in Glasgow, where her uncle was a professor, she traveled to the United States. During her journey she wrote her first major work, Views of Society and Manners in America (1821), a traveler's tale which praised the progressive and democratic ethos of the United States in comparison to Europe. Being the first major work by a European woman on the United States, it caught the attention of European liberals ranging from Jeremy Bentham to the Marquis de Lafayette.

While her travels to the United States initially prompted praise, in her subsequent visits she became appalled at the institution of slavery and its obvious inconsistency with the democratic and republican values of the nation. In 1825, on tour with the Marquis de Lafayette, she met with Thomas Jefferson and James Madison and made public her plan for gradual emancipation. According to her work, A Plan for the Gradual Abolition of Slavery in the United States without Danger of Loss to the Citizens of the South (1825), Congress would set aside tracts of unsettled land for slaves. This land could be used by the slaves to learn the skills necessary for freedom. In theory, the slaves, after a period of 5–10 years, would be shipped to Africa or to Haiti.

In order to demonstrate the workability of the plan, she used a large portion of her inheritance to purchase a 640-acre plot in western Tennessee to set up an interracial commune comprised of slaves and whites. The community, known as Nashoba, was based on Robert Owen's model of shared labor and radical egalitarianism. Wright had visited utopian communities during her travels through the United States and had been impressed with their functioning and believed that utopian socialist communities could become training grounds for freedom.

The experimental community of Nashoba opened in November of 1825, 14 miles from Memphis. Initially, the community was comprised of about a dozen slaves, either purchased or donated, and several of Wright's friends. The community featured integrated educational facilities and repudiated individual competition. In 1827 Wright abandoned the notion of African repatriation in favor of the idea that whites and blacks could learn to live together in harmony and that Nashoba could provide a model for racial integration and equality. Unfortunately, poor harvests and public controversy quickly eclipsed early successes. By 1828 charges of "free love" and miscegenation made Wright the target of public vitriol and warded off new recruits and investors. While Wright defended the community as one which embraced the idea of liberty in speech and action, Wright's contraction of malaria forced her to leave Nashoba. Upon her return, the community was clearly in disarray and Wright chose to emancipate the slaves, purchasing their passage to Haiti in 1830.

Following the failed experiment, Wright worked with Robert Owen's son, Robert Dale Owen, editing the New Harmony Gazette and the Free Enquirer. Additionally, she became a popular public lecturer on many controversial subjects. Deeply suspicious of organized religion, she routinely attacked religion's influence in politics and faith-based justifications for the subordination of women. She also became a vociferous advocate for liberalized divorced laws, birth control, free public education, and for the political organization of the working class. Her power as an orator earned praise from John Stuart Mill, who called her "one of the most important women of her day," but her radical views and often controversial personal life also invited scorn, and the label "The Red Harlot of Infidelity."

Wright and Owen became increasingly involved in the labor movement in the late 1820s and early 1830s. Wright was an active supporter of the Workingmen's Party of New York. Wright hoped to give women a larger role in the nascent, male-dominated, labor movement and pushed the organization to adopt educational reform as a primary aim. Routinely speaking before large crowds of workers, "Fanny Wrightism" became synonymous with working-class radicalism. After internecine struggles produced the demise of the Workingmen's Party, she became closer to the Jacksonian Democratic Party, going so far as to campaign for Martin Van Buren in support of Jackson's banking policies.

Her political alliance with the Democrats and her fierce opposition to organized religion isolated her from the growing, evangelical, abolitionist movement and contributed to her marginalization. After briefly living in Paris with her husband, Guillaume D'Arusmont, a physician she met at New Harmony, she settled in Cincinnati in 1835. In her later life she divided time between Europe and the United States while writing her final work, England the Civilizer (1848), a treatise on revolutions. She died in 1852 of complications from a broken leg.

Wright is widely credited with being the first American woman to openly advocate complete sexual equality, the abolition of slavery, and racial equality. Her life and thought connected the rational idealism of the Enlightenment with the political radicalism of the nineteenth century. Although she never saw many of the reforms that she advocated, she served as an inspiration for later political activists. Additionally, many of her views on birth control, marriage, and sex predicted cultural changes that would take place in the 1960s and 1970s.

SEE ALSO: Amana Inspirationist Utopians; Cooperative Commonwealth; Father Rapp (1757–1847) and Harmony; Fourier, Charles François Marie (1772–1837) and the Phalanx Utopians; Icaria Utopian Community; New Harmony; Oneida Perfectionist Utopians; Owen, Robert (1771–1858); Utopian Communities, United States; Utopian Intentional Communities; Women's Movement, United States, 19th Century

References and Suggested Readings

- Morris, C. (1992) Fanny Wright: Rebel in America. Champaign: University of Illinois Press.
- Pitzer, D. (Ed.) (1997) America's Communal Utopias. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press.
- Wright, F. & Adams, S. (2004) Reason, Religion, and Morals. Amherst, NY: Humanity Books.

Y

Yaa Asantewaa (ca. 1840–1921)

Joshua Kwesi Aikins

Nana Yaa Asantewaa is remembered throughout Africa and the African diaspora as a leading figure in African anti-colonial resistance. She was the military leader and commander-in-chief of the Asante army during the Asante–British War of 1900–1, which is remembered as Yaa Asantewaa War.

At the time of the war she was Edwesohemaa, the queen mother of Edweso, a small but important state within the Asante confederation, the largest and most powerful indigenous state in today's Ghana. Queen mothers (ahemaa, sing.: ohemaa) had important positions in the political systems of the matrilineal Akan cultures, where inheritance is traced through female lines. Most offices in the two main spheres of politics, the extended lineage and the state, are held by men, but women confer political status as well. The ahemaa had the status of female co-rulers who, together with their male counterpart (ohene), exercised a joint authority and responsibility in all state affairs. In the absence of the ohene, the ohemaa ruled as prime authority and head of the polity. This dual line of authority was accentuated by the fact that ahemaa were older than their male co-rulers, which brought into play the importance of seniority and a corresponding duty to seek the queen mother's advice in all matters of importance to the state or the lineage. Thus, an ohemaa held a vital political office that included participation in the state's governing council, judging cases in her own court, and playing a decisive role in key political controversies, including questions of peace and war. Thus, Nana Yaa Asantewaa's key role in the Asante–British War of 1900–1 was firmly placed in the ahemaa leadership tradition.

Yaa Asantewaa was a member of the Asona royal clan of Edweso–Besease. She was enstooled as Edwesohemaa in around 1888. One of her grandsons, Akwasi Afranie Kuma, became Edwesohehene. Following increasing conflicts with the British, he was forcibly exiled to the Seychelles in 1896, together with other key leaders, most notably the highest political authority of the Asante confederation, Asantehene Agyeman Prempeh I. As a result, Nana Yaa Asantewaa became the paramount chief of Edweso. Although in that same year she signed a Treaty of Protection with the British, she resisted British attempts to seize gold mining lands from her territory.

The event that propelled her into assuming a lead role in Asante anti-colonial resistance, however, was the demand made by Governor Frederick Hodgson in Kumasi on March 28, 1900 for the Golden Stool, the symbol of the Asante state. In an unprecedented act of provocation, he also declared that the Asantehene was not going to come back and reminded Asante leaders of the need to pay for the 1874 and 1896 British war efforts in Asante. In addition, the British resident in Kumasi was to assume the role of Asantehene and was to have the right to use Asantes for compulsory labor. At a secret meeting later that night, Yaa Asantewaa challenged the male Asante authorities to take up their responsibility and fight for Asantes' freedom. She then seized a gun and fired into the air. That night, all the chiefs present took an oath to fight to rid Asante of British rule. Under her leadership, a war council was formed to plan for the war that was to begin immediately. Nana Yaa Asantewaa assumed the role of a military leader and commander-in-chief of Asante forces.

Perceiving their African enemy through the lens of their European gender conventions, British forces were at first unable to identify the over 60-year-old woman as commander of the campaign. The Asante did not only capitalize on the limited perceptions of their enemies during the war, but also used it to turn a military defeat into a symbolic victory: a fake Golden Stool was created and vigorously defended. Thus, while British forces took away a fake in triumph, the real stool, a key symbol of Asante statehood, remained in Asante. This deceit in the face of defeat served as an important basis for continued Asante nationalism and the maintenance of political structures while the Asantehene was exiled.

Despite Nana Yaa Asantewaa's appeal to Asante independence, her campaign was weakened by the fact that some states of the confederation did not support the war effort. As a result, Asante could not withstand the superior fire power of the British forces and their African auxiliaries. The use of newly deployed 75-millimeter guns by the British proved a decisive advantage over the Asante army. Yaa Asantewaa finally surrendered to the British on March 3, 1901. She was exiled to the Seychelles, where she died in October 1921. Though the war ended in the defeat of Asante, Nana Yaa Asantewaa remains a symbol of female leadership in the African struggle against colonialism.

SEE ALSO: Dahomey Women's Army; Queen Nanny and Maroon Resistance; Women and National Liberation in Africa

References and Suggested Readings

- Agyeman-Duah, I. (2000) The Asante Monarchy in Exile; The Exile of King Prempeh I and Yaa Asantewaa in the Seychelles. Ghana: Kumasi.
- Boahen, A. A. (2003) Yaa Asantewaa and the Asante-British War of 1900-1. Accra: Sub-Sahara Publishers; Oxford: James Currey.
- McCaskie, T. C. (2007) The Life and Afterlife of Yaa Asantewaa. Africa: The Journal of the International African Institute 77, 2: 151-78.
- Osei K. (2000) An Outline of Asante History. Kumasi: Cita Press.

Yemen Socialist Revolution of 1962

Stacy Warner Maddern

As with most of the Arabian Peninsula, Yemen has a long history of ethnic/clan/religious sect organization under the theocratic despotism of the imam as ruler. This rule has been periodically tested and challenged by discontented societal groups, particularly those of the Sunni Muslim persuasion. In 1839 the territorial concerns of the imam were altered by British influence, which increased in the southern and eastern portion of Yemen after the British captured the port of Aden in 1839. It was ruled as part of British India until 1937, when Aden was made a crown colony with the remaining land designated as East Aden and West Aden protectorates.

In 1918, after World War I, the Al-Mutawakkilite Yemeni Kingdom was established in northern Yemen with Imam Yahya Mohammed Al-Mansour Hamid Al-Din as its ruler. In 1923, after gaining independence from the Ottoman empire, Northern Yemen was recognized by the League of Nations. In South Yemen, under the British protectorate, Aden became a haven for anti-imam politics. As such the British utilized deportation policies as a means of quelling political uprisings between the North and South. Having jurisdiction only in the South, the British would simply send agitators to the North where they would be confined to the imam's dungeons.

The reign of Imam Yahya, and later his son Ahmed, was characterized as a dark time for Yemen. A number of attempts were made to overcome their rules. In 1948, Imam Yahya died during a failed coup and was succeeded by Ahmed, who in turn ruled with even harsher authority, creating a great deal of animosity toward the British for their presence in the South.

In 1952, the Egyptian Revolution under Gamal Abdel Nasser and the Arab nationalist movement seriously impacted political developments in Yemen. The Egyptian Revolution had been built since the 1950s as a series of trends unfolding against the imperialist forces of Britain. After Nasser created the United Arab Republic, attempts were made to incorporate Yemen, threatening the British protectorate. Britain answered by uniting those states in South Yemen under its protection into the Federation of Arab Emirates of the South in 1959.

In 1962, Ahmed bin Yahya died of natural causes and was succeeded by his son, the Crown Prince Muhammad al-Badr, who served as imam for approximately eight days. On September 26, 1962, revolutionaries overtook imamate rule in favor of a republican form of government and founded the Yemen Arab Republic (YAR), which was supported by troops from Egypt to combat those forces still in favor of imamate rule. Saudi Arabia and Jordan came to the aid of Badr, beginning what was to become the North Yemen Civil War or revolutionary struggle between monarchists and republicans. Then, in 1963, the entire colony of Aden was incorporated into the Federation of South Arabia under British rule. Later that same year, as fighting in YAR spread into Southern Yemen, the Marxist-influenced Nation Liberation Front (NLF) formed in order to force the British colonialists out of Yemen entirely.

By 1964, the British–Saudi coalition was fighting Egyptian-imamate loyal–NLF forces. This lasted until 1966, when the British government announced its intention to withdraw. At the same time the socialist Front for the Liberation of Occupied South Yemen (FLOSY) began a power struggle with the NLF in a bid for power, culminating in mass riots throughout Aden in 1967. After the British government completely withdrew, the Federation of South Arabia was disbanded and Southern Yemen became known as the People’s Republic of South Yemen. Two years later, a radical wing of the Marxist NLF gained power over Southern Yemen and changed its name to the People’s Democratic Republic of Yemen (PDRY) in 1970. In the PDRY, sanctions were made for the existence of one political party – the Yemeni Socialist Party (YSP). This allowed for further diplomatic movements between the PDRY and the Soviet Union, China, Cuba, and radical Palestinian factions. North and South Yemen would remain separate states until reunification in 1990.

SEE ALSO: Egypt, Revolution of 1952; Nasir, Hassan (1928–1960); Nasser, Gamal Abdel (1918–1970); Saud, Abd al-Aziz ibn (1879–1953) and the Founding of Modern Saudi Arabia

References and Suggested Readings

- Crouch, M. (2001) An Element of Luck: To South Arabia and Return. London: Rawlhouse.
- Halliday, F. (1979) Yemen’s Unfinished Revolution: Socialism in the South. MERIP Reports 81.
- Lord, C. & Birtles, D. (2000) The Armed Forces of Aden, 1839–1967. Solihull: Helion.
- Miles, O. (1997) The British Withdrawal from Aden. British-Yemen Society Journal (December).
- Stork, J. (1973) Socialist Revolution in Arabia: A Report from the People’s Democratic Republic of Yemen. MERIP Reports 15.

Yi Ho Tuan (Boxer) Rebellion

James Steinberg

During the 1890s, China suffered a series of humiliations through unfair treaties with western powers. The pent-up frustrations eventually ignited thousands of Chinese to join secret societies and engage in murder and mayhem for revenge. For many decades the Chinese had endured the privations of increasing taxation, along with severe droughts and floods, which resulted in extreme suffering. A series of treaties in which western powers not only established trading concessions in various regions but were also permitted the unimpaired movement of Christian missionaries on what was considered Confucian, Daoist, and Buddhist soil only exacerbated the situation. Gradually, grassroots Chinese groups started fomenting vehement opposition to the “foreigners” and even to the imposing Qing (Manchu) court.

Following China’s defeat in the Opium Wars (1840–2, 1856–60) and the Sino-Japanese War of 1894–5, western powers engaged in a “race” to establish their own additional land concessions. This was the era of “gunboat diplomacy,” which led to numerous unequal treaties with western powers requiring China to pay expensive indemnities and nearly bankrupting the country. The provisions of many treaties also allowed extraterritoriality in their concessions and access by Protestant and Catholic missionaries. Their power eventually infuriated Chinese groups who came to resent the arrogance of the westerners. Gradually, as the western powers pressed to increase their influence, conflicts arose among the Chinese peasants derived from sectarian and militia groups that were trained in traditional boxing. The Qing court enlisted militias to police particularly bandits and rebels, lending some legitimacy to these secret societies.

Western Powers and the Qing (Manchu) Court

In the early 1800s western trade with China was restricted to specific ports, especially Guangzhou (Canton) in the south. Since the 1780s the British had defied a Chinese ban on smuggling opium and attempted to persuade the Daoguang emperor to open a brisk opium trade. However, the debilitating effects of the drug had created problems for the Chinese and generated anti-opium efforts culminating in the Chinese destruction of British opium in 1839. The British were incensed and initiated extensive military action in June of 1840; exchanges of hostilities – using British gunboats – continued and deepened the hatred of the British by the Cantonese. Exposing the weaknesses of the Chinese government’s military, the Opium War resulted in the Treaty of Nanjing, and subsidiary treaties were also signed with the United States and France, essentially opening up China for trade and access by Christian missionaries. The British destruction of Canton fueled anti-foreign sentiments, which caused deep resentment of the intrusive, militarily superior, western powers.

During the Boxer Rebellion in China (1900–1), interventionist troops advance under Admiral Edward Seymour against members of the Chinese Society of Righteous and Harmonious Fists. The Boxer Rebellion is considered a peasant-based movement against foreign influence in Northern China. (akg-images)

Disputes over opium went unsettled, exploding into the Arrow War (Second Opium War) between the Cantonese and the British in 1856. Complicating matters was the northern diffusion of anti-foreign feelings in Peking when the coastal Dagu Fort repulsed the signatories from making a peace settlement. This Chinese act of military aggression further provoked the British. In 1859 they invaded Peking and coerced the court into another set of treaties that further expanded foreign access to Chinese markets and villages. Missionaries maintained a sense of moral superiority, arguing that Confucianism was a heathen religion and thus seeking to eliminate traditional Confucian rituals and observances. This compounded the distrust and hatred of missionaries.

After the Arrow War, the improvement of foreign relations between the Qing and the western powers was a priority for the court. In 1861, it initiated the Self-Strengthening Movement to stabilize China. An office of foreign affairs was formed, the Tsungli Yamen, to coordinate with western legations. Foreign exchanges, however, turned sour when in 1870 an anti-Christian riot erupted in Tianjin. The massacre of ten French nuns, priests, and officials revealed that tensions between villagers and western religion had turned lethal.

Making matters even more troubling for the Qing court was the rise of rebellions, the suppression of which required extensive military efforts. The Taiping Rebellion of 1851–64 was one of the most devastating civil wars in world history and was caused in part by poverty, religious conflict, and the disorganization of the Qing court. To effectively confront the Taiping rebels, the government organized local militias made up of peasants, since the imperial forces (the Green Standards) were poorly trained. While religious and ethnic cleavages caused the Taiping Rebellion, a second major protest was the Nian Rebellion (1856–9), caused instead by a series of devastating floods of the Huang He (Yellow River) that created widespread poverty. A third rebellion (1855–73) among Muslims and Han Chinese in Western China, in which religious independence was a major goal, was inspired by the successes of the Taipings. The problem for the court was that the damage created by the rebellions weakened its economy and the effectiveness of military interventions. It further illustrated that starving peasants in poverty, and those with extreme religious disputes, were attracted to rebel causes and demands for immediate social change.

Following China’s defeat during the Sino-Japanese War of 1894–5, the Treaty of Shimonoseki led to a scramble in which Russia, Britain, and France all prepared to slice up the Chinese “melon.” The expansion of concession areas and another expensive treaty led to a sense of doom among intellectuals and intermediaries in the court. One key result was the initiation by the Qing court of the Hundred Days of Reform of 1898, in which (for a brief interlude) a number of reformist announcements were made. The reforms, however, were shallow and given a superficial reception by the conservative Empress Dowager. It signaled that the traditionencrusted court recognized that many Chinese institutions were poorly developed to provide resources for villagers and that lack of economic and military modernization had caused China's military defeats and decline as a world power. The last half of the nineteenth century found missionaries increasing peasant conversions and building Christian village bases while foreign legations expanded trade beyond the British thirst for China's extraordinary tea.

Following China's defeat in the Sino-Japanese War, local secret societies of young men began to spread the ideology of protest against foreign aggressors. The message of hope generated a grassroots movement and the initiation and growth of boxing training. Between June 4 and 21, 1896, members of a Big Sword Society (the Da-dao hui) attacked Christian residences and burned over 100 homes, schools, and churches. Later, on November 1, 1897, the Juye Incident was even more violent with the murder of two German missionaries, ostensibly by a band of Big Sword Society members. Their resentments against the missionaries were released against haughty foreigners. Although further attacks were suppressed by local authorities, it portended further destruction and murder of Christians living in nearby Shandong Province.

The expansion of foreign development in China created major unemployment problems for peasants in the handicraft industries and the businesses relying on the Grand Canal traffic that shifted to the western-funded railways. This absence of income was not new; the Taipings, a pseudo-Christian movement, created destitution among many peasants. Initially, the Taipings were blamed for peasants' calamities, but gradually the blame shifted, facilitated by the Chinese traditions of prejudice toward foreigners. To compound matters, the Yellow River flood of 1898 and the drought of 1900 were devastating, and foreigners became the scapegoats and were blamed for upsetting the balance of nature. Rumors spread across northern provinces that malevolent Christians poisoned wells and sprinkled blood, causing insanity. These rumors added to the sense of panic and urgency to eliminate Christians. As the blame became focused on Christians, they became nervous about the prospects of more hostilities by villagers in secret societies.

The anti-Christian movement can be traced to a combination of factors. First were the conflicts with Confucian beliefs, manifested in the prohibition of Confucian rituals by Chinese converts. Christian repudiation and condescension of the gentry and court then led the gentry to consider it a heterodox sect, which created problems for the peasants. Then there was the use of local peasant militias for military expeditions, which provided for the creation of the social structure of secret societies using the martial arts. Intervillage disputes then led to resentments that were eventually settled by boxers claiming to be village militias, a self-serving assertion to rationalize violence of the "offending" Christian village. Finally, institutional support and financing of the boxers led to the rapid spread or contagion of volatile confrontations in Shandong Province.

The Rise of the Boxers (Yi Ho Tuan)

Numerous secret societies have existed in China since the early 1800s and can be connected to the gradual emergence of the boxers. The Big Sword Society, the Armor of the Golden Bell, the Eight Trigrams, and the White Lotus sects all used traditional combative boxing (martial arts). Since the 1700s, China had developed a tradition of training in hand-to-hand combat that was used by soldiers and bodyguards along the silk road. A number of different schools refined boxing to a precise, effective, and complex form of fist and kicking combat moves that could be lethal against robbers and ruffians.

The predecessor to the Yi Ho Tuan was the I-ho ch'uan, who were anti-dynastic and anti-foreign, and protested the high taxes and poverty imposed on the peasants. The I-ho ch'uan operated in Shandong, Kiangsu, and Anhwei provinces from the early 1800s. By the 1890s the I-ho ch'uan's activities became more extremist and it developed into a vehemently anti-foreign group that condoned harassment and killing (in its words, extermination) of Christians whom it disparaged as hairy men. Moreover, any foreign-related symbol was demonized, such as churches, schools, railroads, homes, and business establishments. The group's prejudices were inflamed by the conservative governor of Shandong, Li Ping-heng, who supported and compensated the Boxers' organization.

Although the I-ho ch'uan was initially anti-dynastic, the court's support eventually led the Boxers to rally around the slogan "support for the Qing and extermination of foreigners," so their enmity could be concentrated on all things foreign. In fact the movement started to frame its problems in a patriotic and defensive posture. Following complaints by area missionaries, the court was forced to replace the Boxer-sympathizing governor of Shandong Province with Yu-hsien, who unexpectedly continued Boxer support and encouraged the fervor. He renamed them the Yi Ho Tuan – Righteous and Harmonious Fists – lending legitimacy to their cause. Supporting both the Big Sword Society and the Boxers, the governor organized boxing centers to train new recruits, expanding to nearly 800 centers that served as a major mechanism to communicate their enmity and opposition toward foreigners.

The Boxers also used magio-religious practices to increase their members' confidence. With talismans (charms), geomancy (incantations and rituals), ritual taboos, and boxing practice, they imbued themselves with otherworldly power. Preparing for their battles, and supported by the court, the Boxers' weapons were swords, sticks, and lances while the court's military used guns. Because the Boxers believed that contamination by women would doom their cause, women rebels formed their own secret societies as the Red Lanterns. Through the proper adherence to ritual and practice, the Boxers believed they would be protected from harm and would even be immune to their enemies' bullets.

By 1899, the Boxers' numbers had grown, and believing their cause was patriotic, their actions to expel the barbarians took on characteristics of a millenarian movement. Their cause was at its base a form of religious expression. To righteously expel the barbarians and restore China's Confucian past became a spiritual cause, and it was further reinforced by beliefs of invulnerability. Across the northern plains thousands of Boxers were poised for the ensuing harassment of the enemy. Foreigners and missionaries had become the source of their problem and their elimination the source of their salvation.

Boxer Mayhem

Boxer violence started in mid-1899 when Boxers, most of them young impressionable males aged 13–20, harassed Catholics in Shandong Province. Initially their mischief involved vandalism, theft, extortion, kidnapping, and arson. Between May 1899 and January 1900, arson and theft were the most common offenses; however, five deaths were reported, including that of S. M. Brooks, the first foreign missionary to be killed (December 31, 1899). In spite of attempts by local officials to maintain strict order, the Boxers, facing execution, gradually became more violent.

By the spring of 1900, Boxer incidents involved clashes with government troops, which slowed their movements; however, they became emboldened by mid-1900. On their march north they destroyed railways and bridges. In an about-face, the Empress Dowager and the reactionary court began to openly support the Boxers, and in early June they arrived in Peking, burning homes and churches and killing Christian converts. Attacking a number of foreign legations, they killed German minister Clemens von Ketteler, infuriating Germany. Others surrounded the reinforced foreign legations in Peking and staged assaults against them for several months, but the legations managed to hold out and call for military rescue.

An initial military column led by Sir Edward Seymour was organized in June 1900 to march troops to Peking to free the trapped legations. However, it met with fierce resistance 80 miles south of Peking and the international force of about 1,000 had to retreat to Tsiku. Meanwhile, a second and larger international force was assembled to conduct a relief effort to the legations under siege as well as rescue Seymour's forces. On August 3, 1900, news that the garrison was intact led to an assembly of 19,000 soldiers (Great Britain, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, Bengal Lancers, First Indian Brigade, Americans, Japanese, Russian, French, and German), who marched to Peking, fighting minor battles along the way. Initially the international force concentrated on capturing Tientsin, assuming that the Peking legations were annihilated. On August 14, the professionally trained soldiers reached Peking and within hours easily dispersed the disorganized Boxers and Chinese troops. In the aftermath of the rebellion, international troops apprehended and severely punished the leaders of Boxer bands. Samurai sword-wielding Japanese soldiers followed suit and engaged in beheading their foreign enemies. The destruction of buildings and villages was widespread across the North China plain, and order was restored in the absence of Qing rulers. The international force was later condemned for its looting and ransacking of Peking. In the final toll, the rebellion reported at least 231 foreigners and hundreds of Chinese Christians killed. Various other estimates of casualties place the number of Christians killed much higher.

Meanwhile, the imperial court escaped to Xi'an while an international military occupation force was established to sustain order in Peking. The western powers once again anticipated suing for peace, with the discredited Qing government narrowly escaping into exile.

Suing for Peace: The Boxer Protocol

With the Qing court in exile, it pleaded with Canton governor Li Hung-chang to serve as plenipotentiary and negotiate a treaty with the western powers to preserve the Chinese government. For several months Li balked at attending the peace conference until he received some indication from the powers that their negotiations would be reasonable. Several signs reassured Li when the powers ignored the war declaration by Empress Dowager and restricted their sanctions to the Boxer rebels. The attention of the powers was steered to the punishment of the Boxer supporters, with Germany particularly vehement in its revenge for the death of von Kettler, insisting that a monument be erected in his memory with inscriptions expressing "regrets" for his murder.

Li agreed to a number of conditions in the treaty. First, China agreed to pay an indemnity of $67.5 million over 39 years, increasing tariffs and instituting a tax on merchandise to fund this costly indemnity. Each western power assisting in the rescue was designated a percentage of the indemnity. Second, in the matter of punishment of the guilty, a number of officials were ordered to be executed, some were ordered to commit suicide, and Prince Tuan was sentenced to imprisonment for life. The provincial officials also received severe reprisals, with a total of at least 110 penalties ranging from execution to official humiliation.

The Open Door policy circulating in 1900, offered by US Secretary of State John Hays, created a background for the western powers' approach in debating the conditions of the Boxer Protocol. The policy stated that all trading nations should have equal privileges, and in 1900, following the Boxer Rebellion, Hays emphasized the mutual advantage of keeping China's territory and government intact. Preserving the economic system of China allowed the western powers a future destination for their exports. Hays was successful in creating a policy that prevented any country having designs on China that would slice the country into colonies and reduce its economic potential. Most foreign powers agreed with this position in principle and it ostensibly provided restraint in the peace settlements.

Over a year later, on September 7, 1901, the 11 allied powers finally signed the agreement with Li and Prince Ch'ing representing China. The timid court did not return until January to reestablish itself. It was henceforth severely weakened, and its ineptitude revealed a power vacuum. Growing anti-Manchu sentiment centered around the lack of modernization and the urgent need for reform. On October 10, 1911, imperial troops sent to subdue a protest mutinied, moving against the capital of Wuchang and staging a coup that would finally end the imperial system and usher in the republican period led by Yuan Shikai.

SEE ALSO: China, Protest and Revolution, 1800–1911; China, Student Protests, 20th Century; Chinese Nationalist Revolution, 1911; Taiping Rebellion, 1851–1864

References and Suggested Readings

- Bickers, R. & Tiedemann, R. G. (Eds.) (2007) The Boxers, China, and the World. New York: Rowman & Littlefield.
- Cohen, P. A. (1997) History in Three Keys: The Boxers as Event, Experience and Myth. New York: Columbia University Press.
- Elliott, J. (2002) Some Did it for Civilization; Some Did it for their Country: A Revised View of the Boxer War. Hong Kong: Chinese University Press.
- Esherick, J. W. (1987) The Origins of the Boxer Uprising. Berkeley: University of California Press.
- Stiger, G. N. (1966) China and the Occident: The Origin and Development of the Boxer Movement. New York: Russell & Russell.
- Tan, C. (1967) The Boxer Catastrophe. New York: Octagon Books.

Yorkshire Rising, 1820

Fred Donnelly

One of the largest insurrections of the pre-Chartist era of the Industrial Revolution in England took place in the West Riding of Yorkshire in the first two weeks of April 1820. It constituted outbursts in three towns in that county and was loosely connected to a simultaneous revolt in the west of Scotland around Glasgow. It also coincided with the trials of political radicals arrested at “Peterloo” some months earlier.

The rebellion began with a coordinated attack from four directions on the town of Huddersfield by some 2,000 armed men on April 1, 1820. For some reason the assault was called off and most of the insurgents disappeared. The authorities made only four arrests; Nathaniel Buckley (journeyman clothier), Thomas Blackburn (cardmaker), John Peacock (laborer), and John Lindley (nailmaker). The first two served two years in the prison hulks, and the latter two were transported to the penal colony in Tasmania.

A second attempt was made to capture Huddersfield on the night of April 11–12, 1820, this time by an armed band of about 400, mostly linen weavers, from the Barnsley area. Their radical club, the Barnsley Union Society, which had a Secret Acting Committee, directed their efforts. Led by Waterloo veterans Richard Addy and William Comstive, they marched to the beat of a drum to Grange Moor outside Huddersfield. They expected to be a small part of a much larger force, so panic set in when they realized other contingents had not appeared. There was no military engagement, and the authorities simply arrested 17 men and picked up abandoned weapons.

After a trial in September 1820 the government transported 11 Barnsley men to Tasmania; William Comstive, Richard Addy, Charles Stansfield, Benjamin Hanson, Joseph Chapiel, Michael Downing, Joseph Firth, Benjamin Rogers, William Rice, John Burkinshaw, and Thomas Morgan. They along with John Peacock and John Lindley of the Huddersfield area were transported on the convict ship Lady Ridley in 1821. Various other Barnsley rebels were pardoned after serving lesser sentences in the prison hulks. These included James Flowers, John Vallance, William Holland, John and Thomas Farrimond, Abraham Ingham, and George Brien. Other important local leaders who had planned the affair as members of the Secret Acting Committee were never found, including James Lowe, Arthur Collins, Craven Cookson, and Stephen Kitchenman.

Simultaneous with the march to Grange Moor on April 11, 1820 the town of Sheffield experienced a popular disturbance led by a well-known local agitator, John Blackwell. He assembled 200 armed men and marched them about shouting radical slogans such as “The Revolution, the Revolution” and “All in a mind for the Barracks.” For some reason the crowd then dispersed without any attack on the local barracks. The next day only Blackwell was arrested at his house and he was later sentenced at York to 30 months in prison.

SEE ALSO: Luddism and Machine Breaking; Peterloo Massacre, 1819

References and Suggested Readings

- Donnelly, F. (2007) The Yorkshire Rebellion of 1820. Albion Magazine Online (July), www.zyworld.com/albionmagazineonline.
- Thompson, E. P. (1963) The Making of the English Working Class, London: Victor Gollancz.

Yoruba Wars, 19th century

Adebusuyi I. Adeniran

The Yoruba nation of nearly three hundred ethnic groups is one of the three largest in Nigeria, with a population of well over 40 million indigenes. The populace is spread over 10 of the 36 states in Nigeria: Lagos, Ogun, Oyo, Osun, Ondo, Ekiti (Southwest); Delta, Edo (South); Kwara and Kogi (Middle-belt). Yorubas can also be found in Benin Republic, Brazil, Cuba, and Trinidad and Tobago. The ethnic group is renowned for its bravery and entrepreneurship, and in contemporary Nigeria for its educational achievements and advancement.

Oduduwa, who is believed to have migrated southward from ancient Egypt about a thousand years ago, is often referred to as the Yoruba’s progenitor. The impetus for various intra-tribal conflagrations which swept through the entire Yorubaland between 1817 and 1893 was fundamentally the control of trade routes within the region. The massive Yoruba empire of Oyo was renowned as an extraordinary exporter of slaves in the eighteenth century, and also as the seat of government for millions of citizens. The empire was to collapse shortly before the invasion of the Fulani Jihadists during a period of civil strife in the years following 1817. By the mid-1830s the ensuing uprisings had engulfed the entire Yorubaland. Meanwhile, the Owu War, which started around 1820, had earlier facilitated the creation of a new Oyo at Ago-Oja in 1837, and indeed, immediate abandonment of Oyo-Ile, the empire's headquarters. Basically, difficulties in controlling a huge build-up of slaves in and around metropolitan Yoruba settlements, and the intensification of the slave trade along the Lagos-Badagry trade axis during the late eighteenth century, led to the final disintegration of the Oyo empire, and of course, the first waves of intra-tribal wars among the Yorubas.

The scramble for control of Yorubaland post-Oyo empire by emerging power blocs in the region – the Abeokuta, Ibadan, Owo, and Warri – commenced another era of intense insurgencies among the Yorubas, from 1837 to 1878. By this time the British were already retreating from the slave trade, and indeed blockading the coast previously used as transit points for slaves. Such blockades led to changes in slave transactions along the Eko (Lagos) lagoons. War and slavery were undoubtedly complimentary among the Yoruba warriors during this period. Incomes generated from the slave trade were needed to acquire firearms for the prosecution of the war.

The rapid growth of Ibadan, among the largest urban areas in black Africa, and other centers of power in Yorubaland is directly traced to the roles they played during the post-Oyo empire imbroglio. The Ibadans also took advantage of the obvious isolation of the Benins during the insurgencies to take over control of the trade routes linking the blooming slave center at Eko. However, the increasing socioeconomic influence of the Ibadans led to fear of eventual domination among their rivals within Yorubaland. This suspicion was to give rise to the third wave of intra-ethnic uprisings among the Yorubas, which was the deadliest in terms of casualties over a large region. In 1877 the Egbas, in alliance with the Ijebus (from the southern flank of Yorubaland), launched an unexpected attack on some Ibadan businessmen on their way back from Porto Novo, where they had gone to purchase firearms. This attack was to serve as the platform for the Ijeshas and the Ekitis (from northeastern Yorubaland) to launch a revolt against the Ibadans. In 1878 the insurgency against Ibadan occupation began with the killing of all Ibadan outpost personnel in Ijeshaland, Igominaland, and Ekitiland.

Eventually, the Ibadans were entangled in a web of uprisings on nearly five fronts. From the Northeast, they were encountering Ekitiparapo forces under the formidable command of Ogedengbe Agbogungboro – the Seriki of Ijeshaland. On the southern flank, the Egbas and the Ijebus were waging an intense insurrection. From the north, the Ilorin Fulanis were attacking, while the Ifes joined the Ekitiparapo's alliance in 1882. However, historic frictions between the Ifes and the Modakekes were intensified by the war. The Modakekes moved to dislodge the Ifes from their ancestral homeland. Thereafter, the Ifes waged a war of reclamation against the Modakekes.

The major battle of the third wave of Yoruba wars took place at Kiriji in northeastern Yorubaland. Kiriji is about 25 miles north of Ilesha, the capital of Ijeshaland, and a few miles south of Ila-Orangun, the capital of Igboinaland. The Ibadan and Ekitiparapo forces exchanged massive fire at Kiriji, which resulted in weakening Ibadan domination of northeastern Yorubaland, though initial setbacks were suffered by Ekitiparapo forces. The control of the trade routes was the primary bone of contention. Only three such routes linked the interior of Yorubaland, that is, through Ondo, Ijebu, and Egba. The Ondo axis had been opened up by the British colonialists as a result of the inaccessibility of other routes during the war. The Ekitiparapo alliance was to gain an edge in the ensuing altercation courtesy of the support it received from Ijeshas and Ekiti businessmen living in Eko. Breech-loading rifles, more accurate than the arms used by the Ibadans, were constantly supplied to their warring kinsmen.

Between 1879 and 1880 various attempts to resolve the dispute were made but without any real impact. The involvement of the Alaafin of Oyo and the Ooni of Ife, who could not be trusted by either side to the conflict, was the major factor that worked against a timely truce. What is more, the Ifes joined in the fighting, essentially on the side of the Ekitiparapo alliance. The colony of Lagos was under strict orders from London and Accra to stay out of the altercation, though its economy was already battered by the impact of the war. The Lagos government, under a special arrangement, planned to broker a truce, but was rejected. Despite a ceasefire put in place in 1886, which provided for the independence of the Ekitiparapo's settlements, the conflicts continued unabated.

In 1891 the British advanced numerous proactive measures for the penetration of the interior of Yorubaland in view of French colonial competition and interference. By 1892 both trade routes through Egba and Ijebu were taken over by the British. Treaties were thereafter agreed with the Oyos and Egbas. The war between Ekitiparapo and Ibadan forces eventually ended in 1893.

Although intra-ethnic wars among the Yorubas ceased over the years, conspicuous hangovers of the conflicts are still visible in contemporary Yoruba society, such as incessant communal clashes between the Ifes and the Modakekes in northeastern Yorubaland.

SEE ALSO: Agbekoya Peasant Uprising and Rebellion, 1968–1969; Barbados and the Windward Islands, Protest and Revolt; Ethnic and Nationalist Revolts in the Hapsburg Empire, 1500–1848; Ife-Modakeke Conflict; Jamaica, Rebellion and Resistance, 1760–1834; Oke-Ogun Uprising

References and Suggested Readings

- Ade-Ajayi, J. F. (1964) Yoruba Warfare in the Nineteenth Century. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
 Jones, D. H. (1965) The Yoruba and Their Wars. Journal of African History. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
 Smith, R. S. (1988) Kingdoms of the Yoruba. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press.

Young Communist International

Joel A. Lewis

In November 1919, the Young Communist International (YCI) established itself as the youth coordinating body of the Communist International (Comintern). The YCI was neither a creation of Lenin's Bolshevik Party, nor did it originate in the young Soviet republic. The YCI grew out of the anti-war struggles of socialist youth in Western Europe, representing itself as the organizational heir of the Socialist Youth International (SYI).

During World War I, the SYI led the first attempts to reestablish international socialist anti-war activities. Willi Münzenberg of the Swiss Youth League coordinated an international call to action, bringing together youth from ten nations for an International Youth Conference in Berne, Switzerland during April 1915. The Berne Conference inspired anti-war socialists to reconvene in Zimmerwald, Switzerland in September 1915. Here, Münzenberg and the youths consistently supported Lenin's revolutionary positions against the war. Zimmerwald ultimately forged a close association between youth and communism.

The SYI had its first postwar meeting in Berlin during November 1919. Representatives of the newly formed Comintern sent lengthy appeals to the SYI to court their organization away from the SI. This meeting resulted in the socialist youth reforming the SYI as the Young Communist International. When the YCI affiliated to the Comintern in 1919, it considered its organization to be politically independent – a proposition that was quickly squelched by the Comintern executive. The YCI was moved from Berlin to Moscow in the summer of 1921, becoming officially subordinated to the Comintern and dominated by the Soviet YCL (Komsomol).

The primary role of the YCI was to provide ideological education for youth by constructing a “Leninist Generation” of revolutionaries for recruitment into communist parties. By 1924, the YCI had established over 60 Young Communist Leagues (YCL) throughout the world. During the 1920s, however, YCLs outside of Germany and the Soviet Union remained small propagandist sects exerting little impact on labor and youth politics.

With the rise of Hitler in 1933, the role and character of the YCI shifted dramatically, emphasizing anti-fascism over revolutionary communism. In 1935, Georgi Dimitrov, general secretary of the Comintern, instructed the YCI to redirect its appeals to mobilizing a broad “Popular Front” of youth against fascism and war. During the 1930s, YCLs in Britain, France, Spain, and the United States became prominent in the YCI. Western young communists shifted their organizational emphasis from the YCI to the World Youth Congress (WYC). The WYC was a broad coalition of anti-fascist youth dedicated to defending the principles of democracy, youth unity, and peace. Communist youth also played an integral role in the International Brigades during the Spanish Civil War.

The YCI went through a lengthy period of crisis after the signing of the Molotov–Ribbentrop Non-Aggression Pact of August 23, 1939, decimating many of their established youth coalitions. Along with the Comintern, the YCI was dissolved in May 1943 to forge closer anti-fascist bonds between the Soviet Union and its western allies during World War II. In November 1945, the World Federation of Democratic Youth was established, eventually becoming the organizational heir of the YCI.

SEE ALSO: Anti-Fascist People's Front; Communist Party, Germany; Dimitrov, Georgi (1882–1949); Internationals

References and Suggested Readings

- Cornell, R. (1982) Revolutionary Vanguard: The Early Years of the Communist Youth International, 1914–1924. Toronto: University of Toronto Press.
- Davenport, T. (n.d.) Young Communist International (1919–1943): Organizational History. Early American Marxism: A Repository of Source Material, 1864–1964: Online Archive. Available at www.marxisthistory.org/subject/usa/eam/yqi.html.
- Dimitrov, G. (1975) The United Front: The Struggle Against Fascism And War. San Francisco: Proletarian Publishers.
- Privalov, V. (1971) The Young Communist International and its Origins. Moscow: Progress Publishers.
- Waite, M. (1992) Young People and Communist Politics in Britain 1920–1991: Aspects of the History of the Young Communist League. MPhil thesis, University of Lancaster.

Young Hegelians

Lynnette M. Deem

Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel (1770–1831) was a popular name in the academic circles of the 1830s and 1840s, especially in Germany. Many groups were organized to (re)interpret Hegel's complex and unyielding view of history. The Young Hegelians represented Hegel's left-wing advocates. Leaders of this idealist trend, including David Strauss, the Bauer brothers, Max Stirner, Ludwig Feuerbach, Karl Marx, and Friedrich Engels, sought bourgeois reform based on Hegel's dialectical worldview. The Young Hegelians accepted Hegel's dialectical approach, while disagreeing with many of his other conclusions.

The Young Hegelians' reassessment of Hegel's philosophies brought them into conflict with the Right Hegelians (the intellectual leaders of the time). The latter believed in Hegel's proclamation that Prussian society was superior. The former group alleged that Prussian society was rather flawed and that historical progress was an ongoing phenomenon. These idealistic views were often suppressed by the intellectuals and the Prussian government. The primary claim of the Young Hegelians was that a dependency on Lutheranism hindered Prussia's progress; thus ideas of God and Christianity must be destroyed. Most agreed with the idea that God was invented by man, but each expressed this sentiment in his own unique, radical way. David Strauss, for example, argued that Christianity, as an organized religion, went against its nature as a revolutionary movement against oppression. Feuerbach professed that man preferred to blame his insecurities and imperfections on an outside force ("God"), rather than overcoming them on his own. The most extreme claim of the Young Hegelians was Bruno Bauer's claim that Jesus was a fabrication of the church and that Christianity was a lie.

Marx also acted as an opponent of state-sponsored religion. Marx, however, asserted that religion furthered the purposes of the propertied classes by engendering the complacency of the proletariat. The bourgeoisie, therefore, could maintain their socioeconomic domination throughout the world. According to Marx, the only desire of humanity should be the discovery and creation of the good society on earth. Marx's view caused him to break away from this group and write derisive critiques of it, most notably in The Holy Family and The German Ideology.

The increasing disillusionment and continued infighting led to the Young Hegelians' demise in the 1840s. The idealistic trend, however, was semi-revived in the Frankfurt School.

SEE ALSO: Engels, Friedrich (1820–1895); Frankfurt School (Jewish Emigrés); Hegel, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich (1770–1831); Marx, Karl (1818–1883)

References and Suggested Readings

- Breckman, W. (1999) Marx, the Young Hegelians and the Origins of Radical Social Theory: Dethroning the Self. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- Löwith, K. (1991) From Hegel to Nietzsche: The Revolution in Nineteenth-Century Thought. New York: Columbia University Press.
- Mah, H. (1987) The End of Philosophy, the Origin of "Ideology": Karl Marx and the Crisis of the Young Hegelians. Berkeley: University of California Press.
- Massey, J. (1978) The Hegelians, the Pietists, and the Nature of Religion. Journal of Religion 58, 2 (April): 108–29.

Young Ireland

William H. Mulligan, Jr.

Young Ireland was an Irish nationalist movement highly influenced by Thomas Carlyle and the Romantic movement. The name was chosen by a group of nineteenth-century Irish nationalists who wanted to differentiate their approach to Irish nationhood from that of Daniel O'Connell.

They first set forth their ideas in 1842 when the first issue of their journal, the Nation, appeared. The three main founders of the Nation were a diverse group. Thomas Osborne Davis was a Protestant and the son of an English army surgeon. He graduated from Trinity College and was called to the bar in 1838. John Blake Dillon, the son of a Catholic shopkeeper, was also a Trinity graduate and member of the bar. The third founder, Charles Gavan Duffy, a journalist, was from a middle-class Catholic family.

Young Ireland called for equality for all religious traditions, separating the definition of Irishness from Catholicism. In this, they drew on the tradition of the United Irishmen of 1798. Perceiving the Irish nation as a spiritual entity as well as a geographic and political one, Young Ireland demanded cultural as well as political sovereignty, and argued that the Irish language was an important bulwark against English cultural domination.

They distanced themselves, at first gradually and then more dramatically, from O'Connell and his approach to Ireland's future. Young Ireland's cultural nationalism differed sharply from O'Connell's increasing concern with the "bread and butter" political issues of economic development and civil liberties. Furthermore, O'Connell's apparent comfort with the British constitutional system contrasted sharply with their view of England and English culture as oppressive. By 1846 the break between Young Ireland and those who looked to O'Connell for leadership was complete.

Young Ireland did not share O'Connell's aversion to violence. A number of incidents and experiences pushed Young Ireland toward recognizing "physical force" as a legitimate means of gaining Irish freedom. In 1844 O'Connell was arrested even after bowing to government pressure and canceling the Clontarf "monster meeting" he had called. That same year, Charles Gavan Duffy, the editor of the Nation, was imprisoned for sedition. Achieving their goals by legal means seemed ever more hopeless.

O'Connell died in 1847, leaving his movement without a strong, charismatic leader. The following year, 1848, was a year of dramatic events throughout Europe. The February Revolution in Paris gave the Young Ireland leaders a model for action. Then in May, Gavan Duffy's successor as editor, John Mitchel, was convicted of the newly defined crime of felony-treason and transported to Bermuda. With non-violent change apparently no longer an option, Young Ireland began to formulate a plan for an armed rebellion after the harvest. A war council was formed, composed of Dillon, Thomas Francis Meagher, Richard O'Gorman, Thomas D'Arcy McGee, and Thomas Devin Reilly. An effort was made to win O'Connell's son John to the conspiracy, but it was unsuccessful.

The war council recruited William Smith O'Brien to lead the planned rebellion. Smith O'Brien claimed direct descent from Brian Boru, who had reigned in the eleventh century as the last high king of Ireland. The expectation was that his patriotic pedigree (however spurious) would help to rally popular support. Smith O'Brien, however, was a Protestant landowner who had been educated at Harrow and Cambridge, with views on change in Ireland that were rather complex and at times even contradictory. He had served in parliament from 1828, where he supported Catholic emancipation, backed efforts to reform education and the Poor Law, and assisted emigration from Ireland. He joined O'Connell's Repeal Association in 1843 (although his mother disowned him for doing so) and served as the organization's leader while O'Connell was in prison. When Young Ireland broke with O'Connell and left the Repeal Association, Smith O'Brien left with them.

Problems plagued the 1848 rebellion. There was little chance of surprise; government informers and spies had penetrated the organization. Young Ireland's leaders failed to notice the movement of large numbers of troops to Dublin early in the summer, and the suspension of habeas corpus on July 21, as the planned date for the uprising approached. Furthermore, the country remained in the grip of the Great Famine, so the population was weakened by starvation and disease.

Smith O'Brien's commitment to the revolutionary cause was compromised by his membership in the landlord class. He refused to promise that victory would result in confiscation of the land and its redistribution to the peasantry. Furthermore, he even ordered that trees on landlord property not be cut down, and that landlord property generally be respected. Not unexpectedly, the peasantry failed to respond to the call to rise. In addition, the parish priests remained committed to the non-violent approach of O'Connell; with few exceptions they did not support the rebellion, and discouraged their parishioners from participating.

The rebellion was therefore brief and disastrously unsuccessful. A bloodless encounter between rebels and British troops at Killenaule in County Tipperary on July 28 was followed by the somewhat farcical "battle of the Widow McCormack's cabbage patch" the following day. Leaders fled, and some, including Dillon, O'Gorman, and Reilly, made it to the United States. Others, including Smith O'Brien and Meagher, were captured and tried for high treason. British support for relief efforts in famine-plagued Ireland, which had never been strong, plummeted.

The leaders of 1848 were convicted and sentenced to death, but their sentences were commuted and they were transported to Australia instead. A number escaped to the United States, where the Irish American community greeted them as heroes. Smith O'Brien refused to escape, however, because he had given his word as a gentleman not to do so. He accepted a pardon in 1854 and returned to Ireland in 1856, where he lived quietly as a country gentleman until his death in 1864. Dillon and Gavan Duffy later sat in parliament, and D'Arcy McGee was a founder of the Confederation of Canada. Gavan Duffy, after emigrating to Australia, was knighted for his service in government.

Young Ireland never managed to build a base outside the Catholic middle classes, and their rebellion was a calamitous failure. Their cultural nationalism and emphasis on the importance of the Irish language, however, represented a positive legacy that would reemerge years later in the work of Douglas Hyde and the Gaelic League.

SEE ALSO: Fenian Movement; France, June Days, 1848; Irish Nationalism; O'Connell, Daniel (1775–1847); United Irishmen

References and Suggested Readings

Clarke, R. (1942) The Relations between O'Connell and the Young Irelanders. Irish Historical Studies 3: 18–30.

Davis, R. (1987) The Young Ireland Movement. Dublin: Gill & Macmillan.

Donnelly, J. S., Jr. (1989) A Famine in Irish Politics. In W. E. Vaughan (Ed.), Ireland under the Union I: A New History of Ireland, Vol. 5. Oxford: Clarendon Press.

Gwynn, D. (1949) Young Ireland and 1848. Cork: Cork University Press.

Mulvey, H. F. (2003) Thomas Davis and Ireland. Washington, DC: Catholic University of America Press.

Nowlan, K. B. (1965) The Politics of Repeal: A Study in the Relations between Great Britain and Ireland, 1841–1850. London: Routledge & Kegan Paul.

Young Turks

Andrew J. Waskey

The Young Turks was one of the secret societies that arose in the last decades of the Ottoman Empire (1299–1923) to oppose the absolutist rule of Sultan Abdulhamit II (1842–1918). While ultimately able to depose Sultan Abdulhamit, their program to return the Ottoman Empire to its glory days failed.

In 1876 the Ottoman Empire adopted a constitution that provided for a representative legislature and increased personal freedoms. Although the newly installed Sultan Abdulhamit signed this new constitution, he eventually set it aside and instituted autocratic policies that grew

The Young Turks were a revolutionary coalition committed to modernizing and reforming government in the Ottoman empire. The Young Turk Revolution was predominantly composed of student activists and military cadets willing to die to establish a constitutional monarchy. The Young Turks were instrumental in the creation of the Committee of Union and Progress (CUP) in 1906 that help to shape a tradition of dissent in the late Ottoman empire. (Collection of Wolf Dieter Lemke) repressive through the use of state-sponsored violence. The response to Abdulhamit's rule by fear was the formation of secret societies. Some of these were nationalist, others were secular, and still others were religious. The nationalist groups promoted Turkish nationalism in order to transform society from a multi-ethnic empire to a society of Turkish nationalists. The secret societies were composed of students, military cadets, military officers, and others. The most influential of these was a coalition group called the Young Turks, their name taken from their journal, La Jeune Turquie.

In 1906 the Young Turks formed the Committee of Union and Progress (CUP). The membership of CUP was ethnically very diverse and included Turkish nationalists, western-oriented secularists, and a variety of reformers. As the movement flourished it created a tradition of dissent that became a major influence on sociopolitical life and thought throughout the last years of the Ottoman Empire; however, the movement changed as a variety of small uprisings shook the empire.

In 1907 a second Congress of Opposition was held in Paris (where the first congress had been held in 1902). The goal was to unite all of the opposition groups in the empire into a single united movement. In 1908 the Young Turks revolted against Sultan Abdulhamit, forcing him to restore the 1876 constitution. The Sultan then manipulated a counter-coup that failed. The Young Turks forced his abdication and had his brother Mohammed installed as the new Ottoman Sultan.

The Young Turks were able to rule the Ottoman Empire through Sultan Mohammed. However, their imperial ambitions were frustrated as parts of the empire either broke away or were taken by foreign powers. By the outbreak of World War I the only European territory left in the empire was Thrace.

The coup of 1913 put Ismail Enver Pasha (1881–1922, from Salonika) into power, replacing minister of war Nazim Kiamil Pasha (1833–1913). In the autumn of 1914 the Young Turks led the empire into World War I on the side of Germany, its one strong European ally; however, the empire continued to crumble throughout the war. During World War I the empire was led by three Pashas who were leaders of the CUP: Mehmed Talat Pasha, Ismail Enver, and Ahmed Djemal.

SEE ALSO: Atatürk, Mustafa Kemal (1881–1938); Tunisia, Protests Under Ottoman (Bey) Rule to 1881; Turkish Rebellions, 1918–1925

References and Suggested Readings

- Hanioglu, M. S. (1995) The Young Turks in Opposition. New York: Oxford University Press.
- Turfan, M. N. (2000) Rise of the Young Turks: Politics, the Military, and Ottoman Collapse. New York: I. B. Tauris.

Yugoslavia, anti-fascist "People's Liberation War" and revolution, 1941–1945

Boris Kanzleiter

World War II in the territory of former Yugoslavia started with the unannounced bombarding of Belgrade by the German Luftwaffe on April 6, 1941. In the days that followed, the German Wehrmacht and its Italian, Hungarian, and Bulgarian allies invaded the country, which had refused to align with the German Reich. On the orders of Adolf Hitler the state territory was split up. The unfolding war turned Yugoslavia into one of the most destructive battle grounds of World War II. According to estimates around 1 million people were killed. The communist partisans defeated not only the Wehrmacht and its local collaborationists, but also turned the war into a process of social revolution.

The course of war was complex and had strong regional characteristics. The largest parts of Serbia were put under the direct military rule of the German army. After the unconditional surrender of the Kingdom of Yugoslavia on April 17, 1941, a part of the collapsed Yugoslav Royal Army and volunteers regrouped in the Ravna Gora district in central Serbia. Under the leadership of Colonel Draža Mihailović the royalist Serbian nationalist Četnik movement was formed. In the first months of the war they fought against the Germans. However, from the autumn of 1941 they were also fighting against the communist partisans, conducted campaigns of ethnic cleansing against Muslims in Bosnia, and started partially to collaborate with the Germans although they never formally allied with them. The partisans, on the other hand, formed their first liberated territory in the mountainous Užiča region in western Serbia in September 1941. Until a German attack in November 1941 the "Republic of Užiča," which temporarily included large parts of Serbia, was the first liberated territory in German-occupied Eastern Europe. In the liberated zones the partisans formed so called People Councils as the organizations of a new government.

In Croatia the Germans transferred power to the fascist ultranationalist Ustaša movement under the leadership of Ante Pavelić. On April 10, 1941 an Independent State of Croatia (NDH) was declared, which also included Bosnia-Herzegovina and parts of Serbia. The Ustaša were inspired by a racist ideology of Croat supremacy. They committed genocide and ethnic cleansing against Serbs, Gypsies, and Jews. The Pavelić regime set up a system of concentration camps, in which some estimate that over 300,000 Serbs in the NDH were killed. The most notorious was the Jasenovac complex on the Sava River. Here alone as many as 100,000 people, mainly Serbs but also large numbers of Jews, Roma, and Croatian anti-fascists, were killed.

The other regions of former Yugoslavia were also turned into battlegrounds. In Slovenia, which was divided between Austria, Italy, and Hungary, already in April 1941 the Liberation Front (first called the Anti-Imperialist Front) was formed. Its particular characteristic was that it initially consisted of a broad coalition, which included communists, Christian-socialists, and other non-communist forces. Montenegro was put under Italian rule. Like Bosnia it was a center of the partisan movement. Macedonia was occupied by Italians, Bulgarians, and Germans. In the territory of Western Macedonia, Kosovo, and Albania a fascist Greater Albania was formed.

According to its official claims, at the beginning of the war the Communist Party of Yugoslavia (CPY) had only about 8,000 members. Its youth organization had another 40,000 members. Nevertheless, in the period between the start of the partisan uprising after the German attack on the Soviet Union on June 22, 1941 and the liberation of the country in May 1945 it was able to mobilize an army numbering more than half a million soldiers. It achieved this success in extraordinarily difficult circumstances. Until the Teheran Conference in November 1943 the Allies, including the Soviet Union, had supported the Četnik movement and the royal government in exile in London as their partners in Yugoslavia. Only after the partisans had proved that they were the only force in Yugoslavia efficiently fighting the Germans did the Allies change their policies and started to support them.

The partisans achieved their victory largely through the mobilization of their own resources, counting on an organization with an experienced and committed cadre. After its establishment in 1919 the CPY achieved considerable support and won a series of important local elections in 1920. By end of 1920, however, the CPY was banned and remained illegal until the German attack. After several splits the clandestine party was reorganized in 1937 when Josip Broz Tito took control. Around 1,500 Yugoslav communists participated in the international brigades to defend the Spanish Republic between 1936 and 1939. About half of them were killed. Most of the survivors returned to Yugoslavia, where their military experience played an important role in the formation of the partisan units.

However, the main reasons for the success of the Yugoslav partisans were of a political nature. In the first stage of the war in 1941 it was particularly the brutality of the Ustaša regime in Croatia which led mainly Serbs, but also other inhabitants of the NDH, to turn to the partisans to defend themselves. The population was also radicalized by the brutal massacres the German Wehrmacht committed against civilians in retaliation for attacks by the partisans. On September 16, 1941 the German Generalfeldmarschall Keitel issued a command that for every killed German soldier 50 to 100 Serb civilians should be executed. In fact the first to be killed were often Jews and Roma. For example, in the central Serbian city of Kragujevac on October 21, 1941, 2,300 civilians, including students at a local high school, were massacred by the German Wehrmacht.

During the war it became increasingly clear that only the partisans with their slogan of "brotherhood and unity" of the different Yugoslav people and nations could offer a program for the defeat of the German and Italian occupiers and their local collaborators. The communist partisans were the only political and military forces operating in the whole territory of Yugoslavia and could attract people of all nationalities. They presented themselves not only as the most consequential anti-fascist force of national liberation, but also as a force for fundamental social and political change. In November 1942 the partisans formed the Anti-Fascist Council of National Liberation of Yugoslavia (AVNOJ) as a political umbrella organization for all so-called People's Liberation Committees, which were established as a form of local governmental organization in the territories under partisan control.

The second AVNOJ conference took place in the Bosnian town of Jajce in November 1943. It took two main decisions. Firstly, it officially formed a temporary government and proclaimed Tito as its president. The royal government in exile in London was declared illegal. King Peter II Karadjordjevic was banned from returning to Yugoslavia until "the people" decided about the monarchy after the war. Although the monarchy was not formally abolished, the decision opened the door for a process of deep social change, which would lead to the expropriation of considerable parts of the elite and "enemies of the people." Secondly, AVNOJ declared Yugoslavia a federal state of six republics based on the right of self-determination for its different nations, breaking with the centralist concept of the Serb-dominated monarchy.

The year 1943 was also decisive on the military front. The partisans won a series of important battles. In January the Germans and their Italian and Croatian allies started an offensive against the partisans' main units in South Croatia and Western Bosnia (Operation Weiß). But Tito's guerilla army managed to escape into Central Bosnia. At the Neretva River the partisans afterwards would defeat the Četniks in a decisive battle. In May the Germans and Italians started the next offensive against the partisans in Montenegro (Operation Schwarz). Although suffering heavy losses, once again the partisans managed to escape in the battle of Sutjeska. Battles continued throughout 1944 until May 1945.

The anti-fascist People's Liberation War, as it was called by the communists, laid the groundwork for the establishment of the new Yugoslav state after World War II. On March 8, 1945 a coalition government was formed in Belgrade with Tito as premier. On November 29, 1945 King Peter II was deposed and the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia was established as a socialist state. The dominant position of the communists due to their victorious struggle in the war meant that the elimination of bourgeois political forces was faster than in other "people's democracies" in Eastern Europe. A harsh campaign of repression of former collaborators with the Germans, "enemies of the people" and real or imagined anti-communist forces, was conducted. In May 1945 partisans executed around 50,000 Ustaša, Četniks, and members of other anti-partisan formations which had retreated with the German army into Austria, but were turned back on the border to Slovenia by the British. At the same time large parts of the ethnic German and Italian prewar populations, including supporters of the fascist occupation in 1941, were forced to leave the country.

During the time of socialist Yugoslavia between 1945 and 1991 the successful People's Liberation War and its principle of "brotherhood and unity" was the key source of legitimacy for the rule of the Communist Party, which was renamed the League of Communist of Yugoslavia (LCY) in 1952. Between 1945 and 1965 over 30,000 books and essays about the partisan struggle were published. Monuments which commemorated the struggle were built all over the country. The politics of remembrance successfully created, in large parts of the population throughout the country, a feeling of belonging to the new state and identification with the new Yugoslavia.

On the other hand, the institutionalized glorification of the partisan struggle created a dichotomist picture of "good" and "bad," "friend" and "enemy." On one side were the occupiers, collaborators, and traitors, on the other the heroes of the liberation struggle. Passive victims, the survivors of the concentration camps, or the traumatized and invalid veterans did not fit into this simplistic picture and were therefore marginalized in the politics of memory. Controversial issues like inter-ethnic violence and the repression of non-communists were made taboo. In the long run this manichean picture lost credibility and created a countereffect of delegitimization of the political system.

Today, the People's Liberation War is highly disputed in the former countries of Yugoslavia. Attempts at a necessary, differentiated, scientific reevaluation are largely marginalized. Instead, after the breakup of socialist Yugoslavia in 1991, a wave of nationalist and anti-communist revisionism is trying to delegitimize and criminalize the partisan movement. In Croatia alone, about 3,000 monuments paying homage to anti-fascist partisans were destroyed. In the school books of the different post-Yugoslav states the struggle of the partisans is widely neglected while the anti-communist nationalist collaborationist movements are often glorified. In official discourses the numbers of victims of the German army, Ustaša, Četniks, and other anti-communists are minimized while the numbers killed by the partisans are inflated.

SEE ALSO: Djilas, Milovan (1911–1995); Fascism, Protest and Revolution; Hitler, Adolf (1889–1945) and German Nazism; Tito, Josip Broz (1892–1980); Yugoslavia, Resistance to Cominform, 1948

References and Suggested Readings

- Manoschek, W. (1995) “Serbien ist judenfrei”: Militärische Besatzungspolitik und Judenvernichtung in Serbien 1941/42. Munich: R. Oldenbourg.
- Petranović, B. (1988) Istorija Jugoslavije 1918–1988, 3 vols. Belgrade: Nolit.
- Ramet, S. (2006) The Three Yugoslavias: State-Building and Legitimation, 1918–2005. Washington, DC: Woodrow Wilson Center Press.
- Sundhussen, H. (2007) Geschichte Serbiens. 19.–21. Jahrhundert. Vienna: Böhlau.
- Tomsevic, J. (2001) War and Revolution in Yugoslavia, 1941–1945: Occupation and Collaboration. Stanford: Stanford University Press.

Yugoslavia, anti-privatization struggles

Andrej Grubacic

To understand neoliberalism in Serbia, one has to go back to the time of Slobodan Milosevic. Of central importance to the rule of Milosevic was the direct political supervision of the country's economic elite. In Milosevic's Serbia the primary means of capital accumulation did not take place in the market. To the contrary, the major financial profits to be had were achieved via state intervention – in other words through state monopoly, systematic privileges, monetary speculation and shady financial transactions, generalized larceny and appropriation of property, illegal imports, and backroom deals and bribes. It was a given that, in such a system, the power elite could not only easily convert their own “political capital” into real financial gains, but could also control and influence the flow and direction of the entire economy.

That is how Milosevic succeeded in constructing a tight clientalistic net around the entire national economy. It was a net that encompassed any place where capital was being produced, starting with himself and his family, all the way down to factory workers and vendors on the street. Entry into this protected net meant guaranteed financial gain. The most powerful members of that net, the economic elite, could count on rapid accumulation of riches thanks to the market monopoly, from rigged participation in state “barter arrangements” (the import of oil and gas), to the illegal trade in cigarettes, weapons, and other goods.

Thus, in the 1990s, a unique structure of power was installed in Serbia. This structure, or system, could be called a kleptocracy. The neoliberal model would provide this system with a much more sophisticated justification. The key moment for the introduction of the neoliberal doctrine in Serbia was the petooktobarska revolucija of 2001 (October 5th revolution) and the overthrow of Milosevic, which many leftists hoped would result in real, socially progressive change. However, instead of any meaningful steps towards an economic and participatory democracy, a neoliberal system with a distinctly local accent was installed, an economic shock treatment imposed, and a new authoritarian doctrine established: that of Zoran Djindjic.

By mid-2002 Djindjic had essentially taken over Milosevic's entire system of political control of society. Moreover, armed with the neoliberal rhetoric of “economic transition” and “privatization,” Djindjic, exactly as Milosevic had before him, succeeded in gaining control of the legislative, executive, judicial-political, economic elite. Milosevic's system was thereby transposed into a new, neoliberal Serbia.

Zoran Djindjic, and his successors, the so-called neoliberal or “IMF” political class, installed a very specific ideological monopoly on reforms and reformism. The notion that Djindjic was a “pragmatic reformer” who was trying to “lead a dark and backward Serbia into Europe” and similar ideological platitudes were quickly absorbed not only by western governments and all sorts of analysts, but also by the Yugoslav media, and by members of the local “opposition” – the “friendly civil society” comprised of several influential non-governmental organizations. Protagonists of this peculiar “neoliberal consensus” were sympathetic to the long line of laws and policies proposed by Djindjic's government (on privatization, work, taxes) in order to bring Serbia into the world of “strict but just market capitalism.”

In other words there was no essential difference between Milosevic's and Djindjic's systems. A similar, voracious logic of power saturated both systems, and the outcry against it that began during Milosevic's rule continued to resound in the period of neoliberal transition. The neoliberal system both aggravated the myriad social problems that exist in today's Serbia and initiated new ones. Current social conditions are truly catastrophic. Poverty is deepening vastly and spreading widely. The number of unemployed is approaching 1 million. Every day over 15,000 workers demonstrate; 70 percent of the population declares itself to be below the poverty line.

Serbia is a country with the largest number of strikes in Europe, a country where more than 1 million unemployed workers march, and a country in which transition boils down to the property of 8 million people pouring into the pockets of eight people. This is being described as the inevitable side-effect of "technocratic reformism."

What is the nature of working conditions in transitional Serbia governed by the neoliberal elite? According to research conducted by the activists from the Freedom Fight collective, within 50 of the "largest private or foreign-owned companies in the country it was impossible to find a single labor organization." Workers who attempted to organize were discouraged and stopped through various informal means such as managers giving strong "advice" or by simply firing "meddlesome workers" in order to discourage others from organizing. One of the most surprising discoveries of this research was that two of the companies explicitly stated in their code of conduct for workers that labor organizing is not welcome. This is, of course, in stark violation of Article 206 of the Labor Code which explicitly states that "workers have a guaranteed freedom to organize and to act without approval." Recognizing the limitations of the research, as interviews and surveys only cover full-time or temporary hired workers and thus neglect black market workers – among the most precarious and vulnerable segments of the new working class – Freedom Fight considers the research results, quite rightly, "scandalous."

The crucial moment for the articulation of anti-privatization struggles was the case of the pharmaceutical factory Jugoremedija in the town of Zrenjanin. The factory was privatized in 2000, in such a way that 58 percent of the shares were given to the workers, and the state took 42 percent. In 2002 the state sold its shares to a transitional capitalist who made his fortune smuggling cigarettes and was wanted by Interpol. As with all the other buyers involved in Serbian privatization, this wasn't seen as a problem, as the only other alternative would, in the words of one Serbian daily, "bring us back to the dark days of self-management." The PR statements put forth by the company held that the new owners had been facing obstructions from the beginning by shareholders and workers, and that workers had obstructed the previous management as well. "These are remnants of the communist self-management system in which workers were allowed to meddle in everything," one report read. Breaking all the rules, the state allowed the new co-owner of Jugoremedija to become the dominant owner of the factory. Through various illegal maneuvers the ownership structure was changed: the new owner was given 68 percent of the shares and the workers' portion was reduced to 32 percent.

In December 2003 the workers began a strike and a factory occupation, as well as a lawsuit against the recapitalization. This was the first workplace occupation in post-socialist Serbia. In May 2004 the state, pressed by the workers, investigated the privatization of Jugoremedija and found that the new owners were in violation of the privatization contract. Still, the state did nothing to intervene. In response, the workers, mainly women, came to the capital, Belgrade, and occupied the state's Privatization Agency for one whole day. One of the memorable anecdotes from this occupation was when workers answered, with one voice, the question of who was their leader: "We are all leaders." Probably less because of the horizontalist ethics of the workers, and more because the Privatization Agents were locked in a room with no air conditioning, only after this spectacular occupation did the state begin to take the violation seriously. Meanwhile, the factory occupation continued. PR agents called it "a rebellion, a state of anarchy, and a taking of the factory by force," one which warranted intervention and the hiring of private security forces to protect it from future rebellions.

This so-called "private security" inflicted severe injuries on a number of strikers. They even used trained dogs. One woman was badly injured, two women had dislocated arms, and one worker received a blow to the head. In an incredible scene, women workers laid down in front of security vans, with signs declaring “This is OUR factory” and defended their workplace. Throughout the summer of 2004 a private army sent by the new boss tried several times to take over the factory, but the workers, with breathtaking courage, forced them to leave, sometimes using their bodies to block military vehicles. In September 2004 the private army was joined by Serbian police, who had the order to evict the workers. Police and the private army forced their way into the factory, resulting in the hospitalization of many workers and the arrest of four of the strike leaders. The workers were then charged with disturbing the peace. As soon as the factory had been physically emptied in this way the 200 workers were illegally fired.

The most definitive development in the anti-privatization struggle centering on Jugoremedija was the convergence and solidarity between activists of the Serbian alter-globalist movement Another World is Possible (DSM!) and the workers. There were many moving details in this struggle: moments of mutual aid and solidarity that cut across class and regional differences. At the Peoples Global Action conference in Belgrade convened by DSM! in August 2004, workers from Jugoremedija joined with workers from other factories to form the Union of Workers and Shareholders of Serbia. At first the union’s mission was limited to the struggle against corruption in privatization, but after experiencing different aspects of Serbian privatization the union came out with another demand – the call for a constituent assembly. They believed that the people should make the decisions that effect their lives and workplaces, and that a new constitution could help make this happen. Graffiti appeared on the walls of Belgrade asking, “Who owns our factories?”

Although without jobs for two years, the workers of Jugoremedija refused to quit. Their militancy and creative direct action made them a symbol of resistance to neoliberal capitalism in Serbia. At long last, as a response to a series of direct and legal actions, workers won the struggle. Jugoremedija was the first victory of the anti-privatization struggles in Serbia.

Privatization of Zrenjanin’s Sinvoz, a railcar manufacturing and repair plant, began in 1990, as required by the Law on Social Capital. By 1993, when privatization efforts were suspended due to hyperinflation, the Sinvoz workers had acquired 14 percent of shares in the company. In 2004 privatization was reinitiated under the new Law on Privatization. Sinvoz workers and retirees held 30 percent of company shares, while the state sold the remaining 56 percent to a new owner, who personally attended the share auction. At the time of the share auction, Sinvoz employed approximately 870 people.

In the summer of 2006, for the first time ever, Sinvoz workers went out on strike over the issue of unpaid wages. With the intervention of the Ministry of Finance, the strike was suspended after two weeks, but it soon became apparent that the majority owner had no intention of fulfilling the strikers’ demands. In November 2007 Sinvoz went into bankruptcy. The leading bankruptcy trustee appointed was a company also owned by the same boss. Approximately 470 workers were employed at Sinvoz when it became bankrupt; all of them lost their jobs on the same day the trustees were appointed.

On December 28, 2007, after the suicide of one of their fellow workers, about 400 Sinvoz worker-shareholders blockaded the factory and demanded the cancellation of the privatization agreement with the boss and relief from bankruptcy. The worker-shareholders of Sinvoz, together with the worker-shareholders from the Zrenjanin factory BEK (which was also privatized and then forced into bankruptcy), demanded the privatization of Sinvoz be cancelled as well as bankruptcy relief for both companies.

Both factories are now under worker occupation. The workers of occupied factories, together with the workers of Jugoremedija, have established a relationship of solidarity with the workers of Frapè Behr, the occupied factory in Spain. The alter-globalist network of DSM!, now reorganized under the name Freedom Fight, has continued to provide assistance in the struggle. In one of the most remarkable displays of internationalism and solidarity in the Balkans, workers of Jugoremedija began to finance the Serbian edition of the American Z magazine, published by the Freedom Fight activists, by and large anarchist-leaning students from Belgrade. A recent issue of the magazine, proposed by the workers, was devoted to the model of participatory economics, participatory planning, and a participatory workplace, a model that is widely recognized as a viable path for workers’ self-management. The participatory model of self-management suggests economic reorganization that calls for the abolition of the market and the corporate division of labor, recognizing in them the chief structural problems inscribed in the historical experience of Yugoslav self-management.

SEE ALSO: Neoliberalism and Protest; Workers' Self-Management, Yugoslavia

References and Suggested Readings

- Grubacic, A. (2003) Globalizacija Neprijateljstvo. Svetovi: Novi Sad.
- Momcilovic, I. (2003) It's Great We Are Everywhere, We Thought We Were Quite Alone. In Notes from Nowhere (Eds.), We Are Everywhere: The Irresistible Rise of Global Anti-Capitalism. New York: Verso.

Yugoslavia, formation of the non-aligned movement

Boris Kanzleiter

The formal establishment of the non-aligned movement (NAM) was the culmination of increasing convergence of its main member states who sought a path independent of the USSR and the US in the wake of the outbreak of the Cold War in 1948. The term "non-alignment" itself was first coined by Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in 1954. A significant step toward the development of the NAM was the Bandung Conference in 1955 in Indonesia, in which leaders of Asian and African states who had gained independence from colonial rule after World War II participated. Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito took the initiative to form the NAM while Jawaharlal Nehru and Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt were visiting Yugoslavia in July 1956. Following the split with Moscow in 1948, the Yugoslav communists were looking increasingly for cooperation with the postcolonial states in Asia and Africa to counterbalance political pressure from the USSR and the US.

The founding of NAM at its first official conference in September 1961 in Belgrade was an important step in the promotion of political cooperation between a number of postcolonial states that included India, Egypt, Indonesia, and Yugoslavia, with the latter being NAM's main European member. The nation-states attending the summit in Belgrade sent a letter calling for US President John F. Kennedy and Russian Premier Nikita Khrushchev to "remove the danger of war in the world and enable mankind to embark upon the road to peace." In a declaration signed by 25 governments at the summit, the NAM called for "an end to the Cold War" and an international policy of "peace-loving coexistence." The heads of state demanded that the "right of self-determination," "independence," and "freedom to determine the form and way of economic, societal and cultural development" of every nation should be the foundations of international relations.

The political bases of non-alignment may be understood in terms of the five Ds. The NAM demanded:

1. the completion of the process of decolonization, which was initiated broadly in the aftermath of World War II and continued into the 1950s, 1960s, and beyond;
2. disarmament and an end to the Cold War arms race;
3. a policy of development of the postcolonial world and a "new international economic order" to consolidate political independence of the postcolonial states by economic emancipation;
4. a policy of détente (relaxation/easing of tensions) between East and West and peaceful development of international relations; and
5. dissemination, the "decolonization of information," and a "new international order in information" to overcome the monopolization of information by major news agencies based in the US and Europe.

During the 1960s and 1970s NAM gained considerable political influence throughout the newly independent states in the global South. Among the most active members during this period were Yugoslavia, India, Algeria, Sri Lanka, Egypt, Ghana, Indonesia, Cuba, and Mexico. NAM was an important ally for movements of national liberation in Asia, Africa, and Latin America in the struggle against colonialism, neo-colonialism, and imperialism. It spoke out against the Vietnam War and supported Latin American emancipation movements like the Sandinistas in Nicaragua in the 1970s and 1980s. On the other hand, NAM was never able to adopt a coherent political program. Its members followed differing strategies of development. Although NAM demanded democratization of international relationships, many of its member states did not guarantee basic democratic rights to their own citizens. Also, the basic principle of non-alignment was not followed by some of the member states. A typical example of crisis was the invasion of Afghanistan by the Soviet Union in 1979. While NAM members close to Moscow, like Cuba, supported the military action, other members, particularly Muslim countries, protested against it.

NAM lost its importance particularly after the end of the Cold War. Yugoslavia, one of its key founding members, ceased to exist in 1991. Today, 118 states are members of NAM, representing 55 percent of the world's population and almost two-thirds of the votes in the UN General Assembly. After the conferences in Belgrade (1961), Cairo (1964), and Lusaka (1970), summits take place every three years, the last summit taking place in Havana in 2006.

SEE ALSO: Nasser, Gamal Abdel (1918–1970); Nehru, Jawaharlal (1889–1964); Tito, Josip Broz (1892–1980)

References and Suggested Readings

- Bogetic, D. (1990) Koreni jugoslovenskog opredeljenja za nesvrstanost. Belgrade: Institut za savremenu istoriju.
- Köchler, H. (Ed.) (1982) The Principles of Non-Alignment. Vienna: Third World Centre.
- Mates, L. (1970) Nesvrstanost – Teorija i savremena praksa. Belgrade: Institut za međunarodnu politiku i privredu.
- Matthies, V. (1985) Die Blockfreien: Ursprünge, Entwicklung, Konzeptionen. Opladen: Leske & Budrich.
- Rubinstein, A. Z. (1970) Yugoslavia and the Nonaligned World. Princeton: Princeton University Press.

Yugoslavia, Marxist humanism, Praxis group, and Korčula Summer School, 1964–1974

Boris Kanzleiter

The publication of the first issue of the magazine Praxis in September 1964 initiated a philosophical and political project searching for “humanist socialism.” The official sponsor of the magazine was the Croatian Philosophical Society. The editorial board was formed by university professors in Zagreb and Belgrade. Prominent leftist intellectuals from all over the world formed an advisory council in 1966. Within a short time the international edition of Praxis, published in German, French, and English, became one of the most influential Marxist publications until it was closed down in 1974. In socialist Yugoslavia it was the intellectual center of Marxist trends, openly confronting the regime of the ruling League of Communist of Yugoslavia (LCY).

In the preface to the first issue the editors stated the “desire” to create a journal “in which philosophy is the thought of revolution.” An allusion to a famous statement by Marx, it proclaimed the “merciless critique of all existing conditions” as its methodological groundwork. Professor Gajo Petrovic, one of the founders, explained in an article: “Socialism is the sole human outlet offered to mankind to the difficulties with which it is struggling, and Marx’s thought is the theoretical basis of, and the most adequate inspiration for, revolutionary action.” At the same time he made clear that Praxis was breaking with the determinist conceptions of dogmatic Soviet Marxism and called for the “revitalization and development” of the “philosophical thought” mainly in Marx’ early writings.

In the following years Praxis opened pluralistic debates on a variety of philosophical and political topics. Each issue featured a special theme to which a series of essays was devoted. The topics ranged from general problems of philosophy (e.g., “What is History?”) to culture (e.g., “Art in the Modern World”) and critical analysis of the political development of Yugoslavia (e.g., “The Moment of Yugoslav Socialism”). Certain issues contained in-depth considerations of individual thinkers like Karl Marx himself, Antonio Gramsci, or Leon Trotsky. Most essays were contributed by members of the editorial board, such as Milan Kangrga (Zagreb), Gajo Petrović (Zagreb), Mihailo Marković (Belgrade), Ljubomir Tadić (Belgrade), and Zagorka Golubović (Belgrade). Others were written by members of the international advisory board, such as Ernst Bloch, Herbert Marcuse, Erich Fromm, Lucien Goldmann, and many other leading critical intellectuals from East and West.

Praxis was never a homogenous group of thinkers which defined a narrow position or program. It was rather a platform offering debate and communication. An important function for the project was the annual “summer school” organized by Praxis members on the Adriatic island of Korčula between 1963 and 1974. Here, the editors, students from Yugoslav universities, members of the advisory board, and other international guests discussed in an open atmosphere. Every year (except 1966 when the school had to be cancelled because of intense pressure by the LCY) the summer school was dedicated to one main subject. The discussions were later published in the magazine and included the topics Progress and Culture (1963), Meaning and Perspectives of Socialism (1964), What is History? (1965), Creativity and Creation (1967), Marx and Revolution (1968), Power and Humanity (1969), Hegel and Our Time (1970), Utopia and Reality (1971), Freedom and Equality (1972), The Essence and Limits of Civil Society (1973), and Art in a Technologized World (1974).

The editors of Praxis generally supported the experiment of Worker’s Self-Management identified with socialist Yugoslavia and were members of the LCY. Some of them, like Mihailo Marković, had been combatants in the anti-fascist partisan movement which liberated Yugoslavia from German occupation during World War II. Praxis was however increasingly critical of the specific politics and power structures the LCY represented. The magazine called for “democratization” and a fight against “bureaucracy.” The consequences were open conflicts with the LCY.

In the summer of 1968 Yugoslav president Josip Broz Tito accused Praxis professors in Belgrade and Zagreb University of being behind the student protests which had erupted in Yugoslavia. Praxis on the other hand sharpened their criticism of the reality of Self-Management Socialism. In February 1975 a group of eight leading Praxis professors (Mihailo Marković, Ljubomir Tadić, Zagorka Golubović, Svetozar Stojanović, Miladin Životić, Dragoljub Mićunović, Nebojša Popov, and Trivo Indjić) were expelled from Belgrade University. The magazine had already ceased publication due to increasing pressure from the regime in 1974. From 1981 until 1994 a journal named Praxis International was published abroad, in an attempt to continue the project.

The controversial debate about Praxis in the first place contains philosophical questions the editors had raised. On the other hand, discussions center around the concrete political role Praxis and its former members played in socialist Yugoslavia and still play today. Some Yugoslav anti-socialist critics say Praxis never challenged the LCY’s leading role and was not calling for party pluralism. Some of the Belgrade-based Praxis professors were accused of having turned to a Serbian nationalist position in the late 1980s. Most notably, Mihailo Marković took the position of a vice president in Slobodan Milošević’s Socialist Party of Serbia at the beginning of the 1990s. On the other hand, many Praxis members like Nebojša Popov played a leading role in the anti-nationalist, anti-war movements in the 1990s.

SEE ALSO: Tito, Josip Broz (1892–1980); Yugoslavia, Student Protests, 1966–1974

References and Suggested Readings

- Gruenwald, O. (1983) The Yugoslav Search for Man: Marxist Humanism in Contemporary Yugoslavia. South Hadley, MA: J. F. Bergin.
- Popov, N. (1989) Contra Fatum. Slučaj Grupe Profesora Filozofskog Fakulteta u Beogradu 1968–1988. Belgrade: Mladost.
- Popov, N. (Ed.) (2003) Sloboda i nasilje: Razgovor o časopisu Praxis i Korčulanskoj letnjoj školi. Belgrade: Res publica.
- Rütten, U. (1993) Am Ende der Philosophie? Das gescheiterte “Modell Jugoslawien” – Fragen an Intellektuelle im Umkreis der PRAXIS-Gruppe. Klagenfurt: Drava.
- Secor, L. (1999) Testaments Betrayed: Yugoslav Intellectuals and the Road to War. Lingua Franca 9/6. Available at www.linguafranca.mirror.theinfo.org/9909/testbet.html (downloaded February 13, 2008).
- Sher, G. S. (1977) Praxis – Marxist Criticism and Dissent in Socialist Yugoslavia. Bloomington: Indiana University Press.

Yugoslavia, resistance to Cominform, 1948

Boris Kanzleiter

Yugoslavia’s break with the USSR represents the first major split in the communist world movement after World War II. On June 28, 1948, the Information Bureau of the Communist and Workers’ Parties (Cominform), after months of conflict, issued a resolution expelling the Communist Party of Yugoslavia (CPY), then under the leadership of Josip Broz Tito. The Stalin-led alliance of the major communist parties in Europe accused the Yugoslavs of “deviation from Marxism Leninism,” “unfriendly politics” against the Soviet Union, and the “abolishment of the position of the working class.” According to the resolution the errors of the CPY had led to the growth of “capitalist elements” especially amongst the farmers, the negation of the “leading role” of the Communist Party as well as “nationalism” in the CPY’s foreign policies.

The CPY Central Committee rejected Moscow’s attack. Although Tito tried to show loyalty to Stalin in the weeks after the resolution, the gap could not be bridged again. Already in the resolution Cominform had called upon “healthy” parts of the membership to overthrow Tito’s leadership group. The Soviet Union and its allies in Eastern Europe proclaimed an economic blockade against heretic Yugoslavia. In 1949 and 1950 the situation escalated further: the Hungarian army was reinforced largely with Soviet support. The possibility of an invasion was evident. Yet in the meantime Tito had turned to the West for support. The US threatened with a military response in the case of a Soviet intervention in Yugoslavia. The fragile status quo was maintained.

Although the Cominform resolution argued concretely against a number of political decisions of the CPY, ideological difference is not considered the primary factor for the Soviet condemnation of Yugoslav communists. Rather, behind the split lay Stalin’s wish to control Tito and the Yugoslav communists who were seeking a relation of partnership rather than subordination to Moscow. The material base for the CPY’s self-consciousness and confidence was its military victory in the anti-fascist “People’s Liberation War” against the Wehrmacht and its collaborationists (1941–5), a victory achieved without major support from the allies. The strength and international prestige gained in the war enabled the CPY to conduct a relatively independent domestic and foreign policy.

Already during the war the CPY’s decision to form a partisan-led government to replace the monarchy in the second session of the Anti-Fascist Council of National Liberation of Yugoslavia (AVNOJ) in November 1943 had met with resistance from Stalin. After the war, the CPY’s continuing support of the communist partisans in the last stage of the Civil War in Greece (1946–9) and of the territorial claims of Yugoslavia in Carinthia (Austria) and in Venezia Giulia and Gorizia (Italy) were rejected by the Soviet Union, which was not interested in confrontation with the western powers. A conflict between Moscow and Belgrade had also developed around the question of the formation of a Balkan federation. Notably, Tito did not hesitate to exchange support for Greek partisans for US political support for Yugoslavia to maintain control over Macedonia.

The first schism between two ruling communist parties had severe consequences. In Yugoslavia several senior partisan generals and leading communist politicians had sided with Stalin. They were repressed by a purge conducted by Tito against real or alleged supporters of Cominform. An estimated 11,000–15,000 persons were arrested and sent to a prison on Goli Otok (“naked island”) in the Adriatic Sea. On the other hand, in several socialist states in Eastern Europe purges against real or alleged “Titoists” were initiated, coming to an end in the early 1950s. In Czechoslovakia in 1952, the former general secretary of the Communist Party, Rudolf Slansky, was sentenced to death and executed.

After Stalin’s death in March 1953, the new chairman of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, Nikita Khrushchev, and Tito normalized relations between the two countries. In the “Belgrade Declaration” of June 1955 they agreed on the “respect on sovereignty, independence, integrity, and equality” as well as “non-interference” and “peaceful coexistence” in relationships between the states. In the long run, Belgrade’s split with Moscow enabled Yugoslavia to conduct even more independent internal and foreign policies. Yugoslavia was forced to find its “own way to socialism,” which led to its proclamation of “workers’ self-management” and “nonalignment” between the power blocks between East and West during the period of block confrontation.

SEE ALSO: Internationals; Tito, Josip Broz (1892–1980); Workers’ Self-Management, Yugoslavia; Yugoslavia, Anti-Fascist “People’s Liberation War” and Revolution, 1941–1945; Yugoslavia, Formation of the Non-Aligned Movement

References and Suggested Readings

- Banać, I. (1988) With Stalin, against Tito: Cominformist Splits in Yugoslav Communism. Ithaca: Cornell University Press.
- Clissold, S. (Ed.) (1975) Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union, 1939–1973. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

- Dedijer, V. (Ed.) (1979) Dokumenti 1948, 3 vols. Belgrade: Rad.
- Kačavenda, P. & Tripković, D. (Eds.) (1999) Jugoslovensko-sovjetski sukob 1948. godine. Belgrade: Institut za savremenu istoriju.
- Vucinich, W. S. (Ed.) (1982) At the Brink of War and Peace: The Tito–Stalin Split in a Historic Perspective. New York: Brooklyn College Press.

Yugoslavia, student protests, 1966–1974

Boris Kanzleiter

The Yugoslav student protests in June 1968 embraced the struggle for freedom, justice, and self-determination, defined as the underlying moral and political principles of the global youth movements of the era. Yugoslav protests were also marked by a protest between eastern and western influences integrating anti-capitalist and anti-bureaucratic elements. The protest also affirmed the fundamental values and ideologies of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (SRFY). In essence, the Yugoslav students protested in the name of communist principles against a hypocritical and frustrating reality.

The climax of the student movement was the week-long strike at Belgrade University from June 3–9, 1968, spreading to other university centers in Zagreb, Ljubljana, and Sarajevo. The occupied university in Belgrade was renamed Red University Karl Marx. Students and many professors who supported the action established democratically elected action committees (akcioni odbori) and held conventions (zborovi). In declarations the protesters demanded “abolition of all privileges for the elites, democratization of all information media and freedom of assembly and demonstration.” A popular slogan was “Down with the red bourgeoisie!” The protesters affirmed however the ideological groundwork of the ruling system, calling for an extension of the system of workers’ self-management. A statement said: “We do not have our own program. Our program is the program of the most progressive forces of our society – the program of the League of Communist of Yugoslavia (LCY) and the constitution. We demand that it should be put consequently into practice.”

June 1968 was the first open revolt since consolidation of power of the Communist Party following World War II. In heated debates, students, professors, and citizens discussed the country’s problems. With police blocking the facilities, curious crowds gathered and actors, writers, artists, and delegations of workers showed solidarity. The leadership of the ruling LCY was deeply shocked. On June 4, 1968, at a meeting of the inner circle of the party, Stevan Doronjski declared that Belgrade was in a state of “extremely electrified psychosis.” If workers were to take to the streets, which he considered a possibility, then the army should be deployed. LCY leader Josip Broz Tito reacted with an astonishing move. In a televised speech on June 9 he said students were “right” with most criticisms and promised to resign if the situation did not improve. His call for students to end the strike was subsequently honored.

The protests of June 1968 were part of a longer protest cycle at Yugoslav universities lasting from 1966 to 1974, consisting of three phases. In the first period (1966–8) the official student league articulated a series of social demands to improve students’ conditions in a confrontational manner. The demands were in the context of reform politics, introduced by the LCY in 1964, bringing many looming social and political contradictions to the surface of open public debate. Politicized students began articulating demands independently from official structures. Theoretical magazines like Praxis, edited by a series of university professors, formulated criticism on the basis of humanist Marxism. Students discussed the escalating student unrest in western countries, and protests in Poland and Czechoslovakia, while new global trends in the arts were creatively received.

During the second phase from June 1968 to the end of 1971 the LCY leadership sought to control the movement through selective repression and integration. Instead of mollifying unrest, government actions instead radicalized student activists, who expanded criticism of authoritarian power structures and official corruption that they perceived as hypocritical and morally bankrupt. They warned that social and regional economic imbalances in Yugoslavia, as well as the empowerment of regional elite structures in the federal republics through a policy of “decentralization” without democratization, could increase nationalist sentiment. In October 1970, in Belgrade, and in June 1971, in Ljubljana, several thousand students took strike action against the repression of a series of key activists who were imprisoned, including 1968 strike leader Vladimir Mijanović.

The third phase of the student movement began in late 1971 through the beginning of 1975. After a nationalist movement in Croatia that included a student strike at Zagreb University was suppressed at the end of 1971 (later called the Croatian Spring), a government crackdown ensued throughout Yugoslavia. A last moment of student activism was sparked by the February 1975 eviction of Praxis group professors from Belgrade University.

The student movement of 1968 marked a significant rupture in the political development of the SFRY through demystifying the political power elite of the LCY. Until the breakup of the country in 1991 the student protests were taboo for public discussions and scientific research. The student demonstrations, essentially supportive of Yugoslav integration and socialism, are absent from most dominant “nationalist” histories, which reject the multinational Yugoslavia as an “artificial” state created and maintained by pure force.

SEE ALSO: Tito, Josip Broz (1892–1980); Workers’ Self-Management, Yugoslavia; Yugoslavia, Marxist Humanism, Praxis Group, and Korčula Summer School, 1964–1974

References and Suggested Readings

- Arsić M. & Marković, D. R. (1985) '68. Studentski bunt i društvo, 2nd ed. Belgrade: Istraživačko centar SSO Srbije.
- Popov, N. (1990) Sukobi. Društveni sukobi – izazov sociologiji, 2nd ed. Belgrade: Centar za filozofiju i društvenu teoriju.
- Sher, G. S. (1977) Praxis – Marxist Criticism and Dissent in Socialist Yugoslavia. Bloomington: Indiana University Press.

Z

Zambian nationalism and protests

Miles Larmer

International understanding of Zambia (formerly Northern Rhodesia) is usually framed by a regional southern African perspective, dominated by first President Kenneth Kaunda (who ruled from 1964 to 1991, from 1973 as the leader of a one-party state) and his morally informed stand against settler colonialism and apartheid South Africa. However, a more compelling theme in the country's domestic history is the consistent influence of the crowd on national affairs.

In the first half of the twentieth century industrial action, protest marches, rural rebellions, and urban riots provided a considerable impetus to improvements in living standards, the rights of Africans in a colonial setting, and the achievement of national independence in 1964. Continued protests and struggles, while not preventing the country's profound economic and social decline since independence, have consistently reversed the implementation of unpopular policies, provided a significant check on the abuse of political power, and played a major role in the return of democracy in 1991.

Throughout Zambia's history, acts of political protest, resistance, and rebellion have been framed by a largely implicit debate about the meaning of independence. The nationalist struggle of the 1950s against British colonial domination was not, in the minds of those who took part, simply a movement to replace the trappings of British imperialism with the new symbols of a largely invented Zambian state. For most grassroots activists (although not all leaders), implicit in the nationalist project was a revolutionary transformation in both personal and collective prosperity and power, as part of a variously imagined new international post-colonial political and economic order. This new order would enable Zambia to overcome the poverty and marginality that appeared to result from its peoples' forced integration, at the end of the nineteenth century, into a European-dominated global political economy as a supplier of cheap raw materials (specifically, copper). It would thus take its place on the world stage as a "modern" nation-state. The challenges and arguments surrounding attempts to move towards economic independence have underlain not only the actions of the Zambian state, but also disparate sections of Zambian society seeking to realize their own hopes and aspirations for such a process of change.

Urbanization and Working-Class Protest

Zambian politics were shaped by its early and sustained urbanization. In the 1930s the colonial backwater of Northern Rhodesia was transformed into a major global producer of copper. Multinational mining companies rapidly expanded production in the remote Copperbelt region, bordering the Belgian (now the Democratic Republic of the) Congo. Five large mines were producing 116,634 tonnes of copper by 1936, rising to 268,551 tonnes in 1941. Skilled white labor was attracted from South Africa and elsewhere by relatively high wages. Simultaneously, tens of thousands of unskilled African miners were recruited, drawn into the cash economy through taxation and a growing desire for consumer goods. From 7,459 African mine-workers in 1933, the black workforce doubled to 14,023 in 1936, reaching 26,023 by 1940.

White miners, taking advantage of their scarce skills and utilizing the model of racially based labor systems established elsewhere in southern Africa, were able to secure a de facto color bar separating "white" and "African" jobs. Africans were objectified as rural and tribal, working only for “target” wages, and banned from settling permanently in the new mining towns. This migrant labor system passed the costs of labor reproduction onto rural African societies and served to justify low “single male” wages, making Northern Rhodesian copper production among the most profitable in the world. The weak colonial state was, however, never able fully to enforce migration controls. The mines’ requirement for increasingly skilled labor also promoted effective African stabilization, without any official acceptance of African urbanization. Cross-border migration also played a key role in spreading movements like the radical Industrial and Commercial Workers Union, of which a section was formed in Livingstone in 1931. Colonial neglect of the African labor question was decisively exposed by the mine strikes of 1935 and 1940. An increase in poll tax sparked the 1935 strike; this was ultimately put down by force, with six miners killed. Following the strike, colonial officials attempted to stem the stabilization of the African labor force. Africans evaded relatively inefficient colonial pass laws, migrating between mines to ensure continued urban employment.

Official anxiety focused on white mineworkers, who brought the South African practice of militant, if racially based, labor organization. Charlie Harris of the South African Mine Workers Union (SAMWU) went to Northern Rhodesia, and the SAMWU section that was established evolved into the independent whites-only Northern Rhodesian Mineworkers’ Union (NRMWU) in 1936, and secured a job color bar in 1938. In 1941 a segregationist Labor Party was established on the lines of the South African Labor Party, winning several seats in mining constituencies.

In 1940 NRMWU members struck and won a substantial wage increase. This provided an instructive example to African workers, who struck immediately afterwards: African miners demanded 10 shillings a day, access to jobs reserved for whites, and equal wages with them. “Tribal” representatives appointed by the mine companies as an alternative to African trade unions were unable to control the dispute, the real leaders of which remained anonymous. The strike was well organized, but a confrontation between 3,000 strikers and 150 working men was put down by troops; 17 were killed and 60 injured. This episode placed African miners at the center of official concern.

While reluctant to accept African unions, the companies and colonial authorities feared, above all, the creation of a unified trade union representing both African and European labor. If the racism of most white mineworkers made this unlikely, “junior” African branches of the NRMWU were actually established in 1946. The railway strike of 1945, spanning both Northern and Southern Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe), provided an additional warning of African labor militancy.

These events shaped a newly “enlightened” company attitude that conceded the need for African unions. The postwar British Labour government sought to address African demands, sending British union officials to help establish “non-political” African unions that would negotiate without recourse to industrial action. The African Mineworkers’ Union (AMWU) was established in 1949 and a Trade Union Congress (TUC) in 1951. The government’s role in establishing trade unions led some to see them as an imposition from above, with limited capacity to represent African workers (Henderson 1972). However, mineworkers embraced the new unions enthusiastically. AMWU membership rose rapidly from 50 percent of the 37,000-strong labor force in 1949 to 80 percent in 1953. The new unions, however, did not improve industrial relations. Between 1949 and 1953, 30 disputes and 12 strikes occurred, as African mineworkers took the opportunity to express grievances. Activists took bodies designed to be mechanisms of control and remade them in their own interests. AMWU culture emphasized branch and shop steward organization and democratic accountability. Epstein (1958/1973) described monthly branch meetings attended by 8,000 miners where “rank and file members are free to participate in the discussions.” Parpart (1983) demonstrated the importance of community organization and the role of women in particular to ensure effective industrial action, for example in preventing scabbing.

Independent Christianity

As elsewhere in central and southern Africa, Christian missionary activity in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries gave rise to a new generation of mission-educated Africans. These newly literate Africans read stories of struggle and injustice in the Bible, drew comparisons to their subordinate position in colonial society, and often established new theological approaches and independent churches, rooted in a millennial Christianity. Independent churches accused whites of withholding Bible truths, particularly the promised second coming of Christ. From the 1920s, in the mining communities, on white-owned farms, and along the new rail line to South Africa, religious movements provided radical explanations for the upheavals of colonialism and the money economy. Preachers drew on local and global theologies and iconographies to explain African sufferings, and promised salvation in the next world, the arrival of which was widely thought to be imminent.

From the 1910s the Watch Tower church entered the fierce competition among Northern Rhodesian mission churches for the souls of Africans. Originating from (but different to) Jehovah's Witnesses, Watch Tower provided a theological justification for non-participation in the initiatives of the colonial state, including labor recruitment. Preachers reinterpreted scripture for local consumption, depicting the British as Roman oppressors of true Christians, and implicitly identifying Africans as struggling for their promised land. They did not generally advocate open rebellion: they provided an explanation for the dislocation colonialism wrought on generational, gender, and race relations, rather than a program for their political reversal. Nevertheless, the message of non-cooperation was regarded by secular authorities as a threat to colonial order. Local chiefs, whose powers over their peoples were strengthened (in some cases created) by the colonial state, also found their authority challenged by Watch Tower. Legislative steps were taken to suppress these churches, including the deportation of preachers to Nyasaland (now Malawi) and elsewhere.

At times of extreme societal disruption such as World War I, when British and German forces clashed on the Northern Rhodesian-Tanganyikan borders, new waves of millennial preachers emerged. During the Great Depression, when many newly employed mineworkers were thrown out of work, there was a resurgence of millennial religion, and in particular witch-finding movements, which provided desperate people with compelling mythological explanations of hardship. The 1933–4 muçapi movement, introduced from Nyasaland, gave its acolytes medicine which supposedly gave immunity to the innocent and death to those who practiced witchcraft. It was suspected of influencing the 1935 Copperbelt mineworkers' protest. The government responded by outlawing accusations of witchcraft and the use of poison tests to identify witches.

While many independent churches were temporary phenomena, some were able to sustain themselves. On the Copperbelt, Ernest Muwamba's relatively orthodox but independent Union Church grew in the absence of urban missions. Muwamba was a clerk of Nyasa origin, whose position in the Ndola Welfare Association was just one example of an emerging overlap between such churches and more "modern" forms of African representation.

Welfare Associations and the Rise of African Nationalism

Self-conscious African political organization began among mission-educated Africans who had migrated to line-of-rail towns and rural centers in the early 1930s. Welfare Associations (WAs) were organized by teachers, clerks, and traders, and they sought modest practical improvements in the conditions of elite Africans, and also for the wider population. The Livingstone Native Welfare Association, founded in 1930, protested the removal of Africans to reserves, opposed the arrest of Africans for using foot-paths, and highlighted the worst forms of racial discrimination. Some WAs gave evidence to colonial commissions, seeking a legitimate place for Africans within colonialism. However, the frustration of such aspirations pushed educated men to develop wider alliances with the mass of Africans and to seek more radical solutions.

WAs were closely watched by the colonial authorities. Most were permitted to register as legal organizations, but warned not to get involved in political activity. In practice, the associations increasingly tended towards activities regarded as subversive. A leading member of the Luanshya WA, Henry Chibangwa, called for equal rights and "Justice to we Native people of this colony" as early as 1931. In 1933 the nationwide United African Welfare Associations (UAWA) was established, with Godwin Lewanika among its leading members. The UAWA stressed its moderation, praising the "protection" offered by the colonial authorities from abuse by settler employers. It was, however, seen as political by colonial authorities and denied recognition. Colonial officials, while apparently seeking “responsible” Africans with whom to discuss limited advancement, tended to regard as subversive those who put themselves forward in this role. This attitude changed somewhat after the Copperbelt riots of 1935; Lord Hailey’s influential 1938 speech called on colonial authorities to relate constructively to moderate African opinion. In practice, Northern Rhodesia’s colonial authorities lacked the resources to meet WA requests for improved African social welfare and development. Nevertheless, new structures for consultation were established. In the late 1930s Urban Advisory Councils (UACs) were appointed: although they lacked formal powers, they were the first recognition that urban Africans needed to be heard.

During World War II expectations of political representation and social and economic advancement increased across the continent. Northern Rhodesians fought in Burma, in a war depicted as a fight for freedom and justice; demobilized soldiers returned with aspirations to end racial domination at home. In 1943 African Provincial Councils (APCs) were appointed for the first time and in 1946 a nationwide African Representative Council (ARC) was established. These bodies provided a training ground for educated Africans such as Harry Nkumbula and Kenneth Kaunda, who would later play a leading role in African nationalist organizations.

Parallel to this, Africans continued to develop their own organizations, drawing on the experiences of neighboring territories. In 1942 Dauti Yamba returned from South Africa with plans to launch an African Congress on the South African model. In 1946 a new Federation of African (Welfare) Societies was formed by Yamba and Lewanika. The organization’s request for official recognition and five ARC seats was rejected on the basis that it was unrepresentative – a rebuff that inevitably highlighted the inability of Africans to elect representatives.

The post-World War II period saw a reassessment of colonial rule in Africa. In southern Africa pressure from whites led to the proposal for a Central African Federation comprising Nyasaland, Northern Rhodesia, and Southern Rhodesia – designed to entrench settler authority over regional mineral wealth and labor – and was the major stimulus to the development of an overtly nationalist movement in Northern Rhodesia. Individuals and organizations were now forced to confront larger questions of state power, leading the Federation of African Societies to transform into the Northern Rhodesian Congress in 1948, with Godwin Lewanika its first president. It declared its opposition to Federation, and its demands for African advancement, regardless of class, sex, and tribe. Congress sought to lobby colonial authorities regarding Federation, but its application for representation at the 1949 conference to discuss the issue was rejected.

Congress derived its immediate support from urban Africans, many of whom took its message into rural areas. Opposition to Federation was shared by most Chiefs, the educated elite, and the urban and rural masses, and provided a cohesive focus for Congress. Its growing influence was shown in the selection by the ARC of two Congress supporters as the African representatives on the territories’ Legislative Council in 1951. That year, the ARC voted unanimously against the proposals for Federation.

Road to Independence

The launch of the Central African Federation, scheduled for 1953, stimulated a more radical approach by the renamed African National Congress (ANC), now led by Harry Nkumbula. In 1951 Nkumbula launched a public campaign against Federation and traveled throughout Northern Rhodesia to build support. There were parallel struggles against Federation in Nyasaland and Southern Rhodesia. Congress was committed to full self-government, as Nkumbula declared: “There is now a rising tide of nationalism among our people. Our national spirit, now ripe, is an upthrust from our long suffering. There is no going back. We are a nation and like any other nation on earth we love to rule ourselves” (quoted in Mulford 1967).

In 1952 Congress initiated a direct action campaign against Federation. To challenge colonial accusations that it was unrepresentative of rural Africans, it sought (and received) the support of Chiefs. Chiefs who supported its campaigns were suspended or, like the Mambwe Paramount, deposed by the colonial authorities. However, 120 chiefs signed a petition against Federation in 1953. Congress saw the trade union movement as its vanguard. The AMWU had 20,000 members by this time, had won significant wage increases in 1952, and had the ability to halt copper production through industrial action.

At the Congress assembly in March 1953 Nkumbula burnt the British parliamentary bill bringing Federation into existence and declared that two days of “national prayer” would take place in April, during which “measures would be taken to paralyze the industries of this country” (Hall 1965/1976). However, there was no organized call by the AMWU to pull out its members. The government mines and large companies threatened employees with dismissal. Although the “stay away” was supported by 50 percent of workers in Lusaka and 80 percent of mine-workers in Mufulira, it was a failure. Federation was introduced and amid demoralization and recriminations many Congress leaders were replaced by younger militants; Kenneth Kaunda was elected secretary general. In 1955 Nkumbula and Kaunda were sentenced to two months’ hard labor; further arrests significantly weakened the ANC.

When Kaunda and Nkumbula were released, the former achieved notable success in rebuilding Congress on the Copperbelt and the Northern Province. In the latter, the loyalty of Chiefs became the focus of opposing nationalist and colonial pressures; Chiefs were rewarded for banning Congress activity in their areas, and deposed for offering support. In rural areas Congress engaged in local conflicts over discriminatory regulations. In the Gwembe Valley during the removal of 30–40,000 people before the flooding of what became Lake Kariba, eight people were killed and 34 wounded when the police opened fire on those refusing to move. Congress campaigned against African exclusion from public places; blacklisted shops in towns were picketed.

Congress launched, but did not control, such campaigns; some businesses were attacked and white-owned houses and cars were stoned. As the economy stagnated in 1957 with the fall of the copper price, unemployed youths expressed the frustration of their aspirations through acts of arson and the derailment of trains. Younger Congress leaders were frustrated by Nkumbula’s moderation in the face of a settler campaign for a Central African “Dominion” that would entrench racial inequality on South African lines. In 1958, following Nkumbula’s support for African participation in elections which militants argued would legitimize Federal structures, Kaunda, Simon Kapwepwe, and others broke away to form the Zambia African National Congress (ZANC). The ZANC’s election boycott was successful; only 25 percent of eligible Africans registered to vote, ensuring that it could not be portrayed as an endorsement of the political status quo. The ZANC was banned, 2,000 supporters were detained, and its leaders were restricted to rural areas. It was effectively replaced by the United National Independence Party (UNIP) in 1959. UNIP won widespread support and established new branch structures in northern Zambia, and boycotted the Monckton Commission, which was appointed to survey opinion for a review of Federation. UNIP supporters pressured Chiefs to support the boycott. Kaunda, elected UNIP president, pledged the party to non-violence, but insisted Zambia would achieve self-government that year. When Monckton commissioners visited Northern Rhodesia in 1960, UNIP organized demonstrations; Monckton reported an “almost pathological dislike” of Federation.

The authorities sought to impose a new electoral system in 1961, guaranteeing a narrow European majority in a new assembly. Kaunda labeled this a betrayal and declared “practical, non-violent” war against the proposals. By July there was an insurrection in the Copperbelt and northern areas, in what became known as the Cha Cha Cha campaign. Government outposts were cut off and villagers held local marches through the bush chanting UNIP slogans; 27 people were killed, whole villages were burnt by the security forces, and 3,000 were arrested. In September the British offered to negotiate if the disturbances stopped. Kaunda managed to end the uprising, and restrictions on UNIP activities were lifted. From this point forward some form of self-rule seemed inevitable. UNIP participated in the 1962 elections, with UNIP and ANC leaders serving as ministers in a coalition government. UNIP authority was entrenched in a further election in 1964, paving the way for independence later that year.

Alternative Visions of the Post-Colonial Order

However, there was no consensus regarding the meaning of independence among Zambia’s disparate and disconnected peoples. It was initially uncertain whether Zambia would follow the exact contours of Northern Rhodesia. As elsewhere in Africa, the ruling party strenuously resisted any attempt to redraw colonial borders, fearing the disintegration of territories over which they had gained control into smaller territories based on narrowly drawn interpretations of ethnic allegiance.

For UNIP leaders, demands for autonomy or secession smacked of a revival of the Central African Federation that threatened to remove copper revenue from the future government. The Katanga secession in the Congo was a warning: like the Copperbelt, Katanga was a region of vast mineral wealth, and its secession was supported by multinational mining interests, the Belgian military, South Africa, and Roy Welensky, erstwhile Federation premier (and former NRMWU and Labor Party figure). UNIP thus interpreted any questioning of Zambia's artificial boundaries as the machinations of its enemies in the white-ruled territories across the borders.

In the western region of Barotseland the officially endorsed special status of the Lozi king, the Litunga, presented a particular challenge. With the dissolution of Federation, the Litunga sought the secession of Barotseland, but UNIP argued the region was an integral part of Zambia. UNIP's legitimacy was confirmed by its electoral victory in Barotseland in January 1964. In April an agreement was reached allowing the Litunga to retain limited responsibilities after independence. In return he was forced to accept the incorporation of Barotseland into Zambia and to have a UNIP official as Ngambela, the Lozi first minister. The Barotse aristocracy lost much of its remaining autonomy, but the "Lozi factor" remained important in post-Independence Zambia.

Nor was this the only problem UNIP faced in seeking to establish its supremacy in the period before independence. Radical religious challenges to the secular authorities were another. In Chinsali District the Lumpa Church was launched when in 1953 its spiritual leader Alice Lenshina supposedly died and returned to Earth. Lumpa, like many independent African churches, opposed practices like polygamy and witchcraft. It combined rituals like baptism with the singing of newly composed hymns in CiBemba. Thousands of converts flocked to the Lumpa "cathedral" in Sione, the largest church in the district, which was completed in 1958. Lumpas were regarded as a displaced protest against colonial rule; there was initially no conflict with nationalism. In 1958, however, the Lumpas (like the Watch Tower before them) refused to recognize any temporal authority. In the run-up to independence, as UNIP began to secure the earthly power it had campaigned for, it faced the withdrawal of the church's members from wider society to live in secluded Lumpa communities. They refused to send their children to state schools and to carry party membership cards, putting them at loggerheads with UNIP's imposition of its authority in an area that was a key battleground during Cha Cha Cha.

UNIP supporters clashed physically with church members in 1963 when they demanded that locals buy and carry UNIP membership cards; Lumpa supporters saw parallels with the hated colonial pass document or "fitupa." UNIP militants burnt Lumpa churches, while the church's supporters retaliated by burning the houses of party officials. Although talks took place between Lenshina and UNIP leaders, no reconciliation was secured on the ground. In June 1964 a new clash between UNIP and the church took place, resulting in the police killing five of the latter's members. Kaunda, now in control of a state on the brink of national independence, ordered the destruction of all Lumpa villages. Church members, fearing the destruction of their only guarantee for salvation, defended themselves against removal. Two thousand soldiers were mobilized, and between August and October the armed forces ruthlessly destroyed the church. Seven hundred people were killed, the vast majority of them church members. Many of the remaining Lumpa supporters fled into the Congo.

The suppression was presented by outgoing colonial authorities and incoming UNIP politicians alike as a triumph of law and order over savagery and superstition. It represented the assertion of a UNIP-dominated unitary nationalism that would, in its subsequent rule of independent Zambia, brook no challenge to its authority. In the decade after independence, local UNIP militants continued to clash with adherents of Watch Tower and other independent churches that refused to recognize state authority by singing the national anthem or saluting the Zambian flag.

Labor Struggles after Independence

The centrality of mining to development plans (copper earned 60–70 percent of the country's gross national product and provided 90–95 percent of government revenue in the 1960s) ensured that political control of the Copperbelt and its organized workers was a central developmental issue. UNIP, in its efforts to ensure the continued flow of mine revenue, sought to direct mineworkers' labor, curtail their right to strike, and control their union. Weeks after independence, a Zambian Congress of Trade Unions (ZCTU) was created under government auspices, designed to discipline member unions. The "election" of ZCTU officials was carefully controlled by the ministry of labor. However, despite UNIP's best efforts, it was unable to do the same with the mineworkers. Zambia's mineworkers could not be subsumed into an officially sanctioned labor movement with no right to strike, as occurred in other post-colonial African states. While most unions were weak, unorganized, and prone to political interference in the first decade after independence, the mineworkers' union, with its strong central organization and powerful branch structure, was able to resist such interference and, in the long term, provide a basis for the growth of an effective national labor movement.

The high expectations workers had at independence for rapid political and economic progress brought them into conflict with UNIP's policy of cooperation with the foreign owners of Zambia's copper mines. While the companies and the state cooperated in restricting wage demands, Zambian mineworkers defined their struggles as progressive actions against multinational capital in the context of a highly profitable global industry. Significant strikes broke out 18 months after independence, with mineworkers taking unofficial and illegal strike action in protest at the pay agreement signed by their union leadership. Despite the arrest and "rustication" (deportation to rural areas) of militant branch officials and shop stewards, the strikes succeeded in winning a substantial pay increase. These strikes increased government efforts to ensure effective control over mineworkers. In 1967, under government auspices, a new Mineworkers' Union of Zambia (MUZ) was established. The new union's leadership was fulsome in its declarations of loyalty to UNIP. It was, however, unable to end the widespread wildcat strike action that continued throughout the industry. Groups of workers pursued a range of grievances, notably efforts to end the job color bar. Zambia's principled stand for non-racialism – equality and political cooperation between white and black – in southern Africa was compromised domestically by its dependence on a mining industry which continued to pay skilled white mineworkers significantly higher wages and conditions.

Ultimately, Kaunda increased political control over the country's most valuable asset. In 1969 the government announced a 51 percent nationalization of the copper mining companies. Although the state secured greater control over mine revenue, mine management was left in the hands of the multinational companies. One of the key motivations for nationalization was to increase control over the copper revenues; another was to secure control over the strategic industry's workforce, as Kaunda indicated when announcing the move: "The state . . . holds industrial investments, not for its own good, not merely for the good of those directly employed in the state enterprises, but for the benefit of Zambians everywhere. Thus, for a union to push a claim against the state is to push a claim against the people" (Government of Zambia 1969). Kaunda then made his position clear by imposing an immediate wage freeze and a temporary ban on strikes.

The MUZ leadership's attempts to play the role assigned to it in UNIP's corporatist vision put it in conflict with its membership. In the early 1970s it faced repeated challenges from branch leaders and shop stewards who more accurately reflected mineworkers' own vision of a post-independence economic settlement, in which the wealth generated by their labor flowed not to an increasingly unaccountable state and its allies in the multinational companies, but to themselves, their families, and their communities. In 1971 this grassroots mineworkers' movement came close to ousting the MUZ leadership, creating fear among government and company officials that the edifice of corporate industrial relations would be toppled. UNIP loyalists were mobilized to physically intimidate mineworkers from taking protest action, and in May 1971, 15 dissident union leaders were detained and rusticated to their villages of origin. The immediate threat to UNIP's control of the mining industry was addressed. However, rank-and-file rebellions succeeded in removing pro-government MUZ leaders in 1982, and again in 1990. While the incidence of industrial action fell drastically in the 1970s, economic decline and the failure of state ownership to address mineworkers' grievances led to renewed unofficial industrial action in the 1980s.

More importantly, mineworkers' militancy and organization provided the inspiration for the growth of the wider labor movement. During the 1960s the relative autonomy secured by the MUZ encouraged the development of other unions which, by the early 1970s, were effective representative of their membership. Previously controlled by state appointees, the ZCTU was able to elect its own leaders directly for the first time in 1974. Under the new leadership of Frederick Chiluba and Newstead Zimba, the ZCTU emerged as one of the most important critical voices in the one-party state era.

Regional Division and Rural Rebellion

Although UNIP's rhetoric centered on a humanistic and moderate "African socialism," its centralized approach to decision-making expressed itself in the weakening of local government and in 1969 the effective replacement of autonomous local officials with new district governors, appointed by and accountable to President Kaunda. The independent civil service was similarly undermined as the ruling party shaped the post-colonial administration in its image. In this sense, the creation of a one-party state was a process that, although legally confirmed only in 1972, began to be implemented shortly after independence.

Party and state centralization masked considerable unevenness and conflict between Zambia's regions. In the 1960s, high copper earnings enabled the government to distribute significant largesse to the provinces, via, and sometimes into, the hands of loyal supporters. Kaunda's policy of "tribal balancing," the appointment of quotas of various ethno-regional groups to government and state positions, only deepened the sense that competition for central power and funding was defined in "tribal" terms. In a context in which the ruling party's slogan, "It Pays to Belong to UNIP," was interpreted literally by many senior officials, areas of ANC support (particularly Southern Province) perceived themselves as deprived of development funds for political reasons. The ANC nevertheless retained support in the Southern Province and in the 1968 election – the first after Independence – also gained support from Barotse (subsequently Western) Province.

Lozi discontent increased in 1966 when the province's migrant workers were banned from working in South Africa: what was, for UNIP leaders, a principled isolation of the apartheid regime was, for Lozis, the cause of substantial economic hardship in a poverty-stricken region. Following the 1968 election, in a perceived punishment for the defeat of UNIP candidates, the UNIP government removed the Litunga, and Barotse Province's special status. This remains an issue of contention to this day.

In the Mwinilunga district of North-Western Province, similar unhappiness regarding UNIP's authoritarianism was expressed by local political leaders and by the senior Lunda chief Kanongesha. He and his supporters utilized a nostalgic discourse, evoking the once-powerful Lunda empire in rejecting their subordination to a Lusakabased bureaucracy which appeared no more accountable, nor responsive, to local demands than its colonial predecessor. The Kanongesha, like some other Chiefs, demanded regional autonomy and the removal of centrally appointed officials who undermined his chiefly authority. In 1965, faced with his deposition by the state, Kanongesha led hundreds, possibly thousands, of youthful supporters across the still-fragile border into neighboring Lunda areas of Angola, then ruled by Portugal. The Lunda youths, organized by the Portuguese into a guerrilla force, mounted periodic cross-border raids, fighting the Zambian army as well as Angolan national liberation forces based in Zambia. With the advent of the one-party state they were joined by substantial new recruits. Adamson Mushala resigned from his position as a North-Western Province UNIP organizer in 1966 and became an articulate critic of the ruling party's "dictatorship." In the early 1970s Mushala transferred 100 supporters to the Caprivi Strip in South West Africa (now Namibia), to be trained by South African special forces. However, South Africa's détente policy towards Zambia led to their forcible return into the hands of Zambian forces. Following Angola's achievement of independence, Mushala continued his uneasy alliance with South Africa, encapsulating the dilemma facing rebellious forces in southern Africa during this period: in an era of Cold War politics and the struggle against apartheid, opposing one undemocratic and oppressive state often meant making common cause with another.

In 1975 Mushala and a small band of guerrillas escaped what amounted to South African detention and trekked to their home area in North-Western Province, launching a small-scale guerrilla war that lasted until Mushala's death at the hands of Zambian security forces in 1982. Mushala gained significant support from local residents who shared his discontent with the lack of development in the area and the oppressive one-party system. Like many supporters and opponents of UNIP, Mushala equated state control of the economy with socialism: he rallied his followers with a heady mixture of regional autonomism, anti-communist rhetoric, and the use of "medicine" which was believed to protect his forces against army bullets. Although he achieved no demonstrable military gains, Mushala made significant parts of North-Western Province no-go areas for party and government officials in the late 1970s, making a significant dent in UNIP hegemony.

UNIP Divided

In most parts of Zambia there was early and sustained dissatisfaction at the failure of national independence to achieve substantial economic and social development. Within UNIP, competition revolved around the attainment of leading government and party positions that enabled senior politicians to channel resources to their areas of origin. Rising competition within the party ultimately led to the breakaway of former Vice President Simon Kapwepwe's United Progressive Party (UPP) in 1971, when Kapwepwe declared "Independence is good, but is meaningless and useless if it does not bring fruits to the masses" (quoted in Larmer 2006). The UPP criticized UNIP's corruption and the lack of democracy. State repression effectively restricted UPP activities to its Bemba-speaking Northern heartlands and the strategic Copperbelt, where it appealed particularly to discontented workers. Hundreds of UPP supporters were detained, with some being tortured; many were dismissed from government employment and had their businesses attacked by UNIP-organized mobs. Nevertheless, the prospect of a UPP-ANC alliance created the possibility of a UNIP defeat at elections due in 1973.

In 1972, therefore, Kaunda introduced a one-party state. While some opposition leaders bowed to the inevitable and joined the new "one-party participatory democracy," others kept the flame of opposition burning, organizing UPP secret committees on the Copperbelt. This helped ensure a state of paranoia among UNIP leaders, whose formal dominance of the country's political scene was undermined by the virtual collapse of party structures and membership in Bemba-speaking areas.

During this period, Zambia's remaining western-oriented technocratic leaders were marginalized by a group of populist veterans of the liberation struggle, led by the pro-Soviet UNIP Secretary General Grey Zulu. The more the government failed to meet people's aspirations, the more politics was dominated by nostalgia for the certainties of the nationalist struggle. Zambia actively supported the liberation struggles of its southern African neighbors, but many Zambians felt this to be at the expense of their own situation. Economic decline resulted primarily from the dramatic fall in international copper prices, but there was a widespread perception that it was worsened by internal mismanagement, corruption, and the state's increasing domination of economic activity.

In 1977 Kapwepwe and many former UPP supporters rejoined UNIP. The following year both he and Harry Nkumbula sought to challenge Kaunda for the UNIP (and Zambian) presidency. Hasty changes were made to the party's constitution to prevent them standing. At the same time, some of Kapwepwe's lieutenants were accused of bombing a nightclub: although no evidence was ever produced, they were detained for years. Kapwepwe himself died in 1980 in circumstances which led many of his supporters to believe he had been assassinated. With his death, formal political opposition to Kaunda came to an end for a decade.

The inability of Kaunda's opponents to mount an open challenge to his rule within the confines of the one-party state led them to resort to other measures, for example in the coup plot of 1980. Elements of Zambia's educated elite combined with middle-ranking army officers and Katangese opponents of Zairian President Mobutu sese Seko in an attempt to overthrow Kaunda. The plot was uncovered and the plotters tried and convicted. A second coup plot was foiled in 1988.

Anti-IMF Food Riots

In the mid-1970s Zambia's dependence on copper was decisively exposed by the sudden and sustained rise in international oil prices and the simultaneous collapse in global commodity prices, including copper. With the collapse of the copper price went the vast majority of government revenue, the assumptions on which post-independence development and industrial planning had been built, and the patronage system that oiled state and party structures. Zambia borrowed extensively and unsustainably on international markets, soon making it one of the world's most indebted countries. Lenders, coordinated by the International Monetary Fund (IMF), instituted policy conditionalities on future support, regularized in the early 1980s as structural adjustment policies. They pressed Zambia to reduce the size of the state sector, to remove food subsidies, and to reduce social spending; these policies worsened the lives of urban dwellers and led to increasing localized protests.

In December 1986 the IMF secured a major reduction in subsidies on basic foodstuffs, which led to an overnight doubling of the price of the staple, maize meal. Major riots broke out in the Copperbelt towns, with anger directed at both the IMF and the ruling party, whose offices were attacked. Fifteen people were killed in the repression of these riots. The ZCTU called for an end to cooperation with the IMF. The government was forced to reverse the decision, leading international donors to suspend loan payments to Zambia. The following May, Kaunda announced a break from the IMF and the adoption of an indigenous economic policy, which received widespread support. As the IMF ruefully conceded: "The early demise . . . of the adjustment package imposed by the IMF resulted from an unrealistic . . . assumption that the majority of middle and lower income urban Zambians would tolerate pauperization" (World Bank 1989). However, Zambia's inability to manage without donor support led to renewed cooperation in the late 1980s and the resumption of economic liberalization.

Pro-Democracy Movements

Under UNIP's one-party state, open opposition was regarded as treason. Former political opponents, and potential future ones, were kept under close surveillance by the intelligence services. Mild criticism of specific government policies or ministers was therefore carefully combined with general declarations of loyalty to "the party and its government." Nevertheless, as the economic situation worsened, increasingly vocal attacks on UNIP's failure to arrest ongoing economic decline were made by trade union leaders, senior church figures, and leading business representatives.

The resumption of food subsidies following the 1986 riots was a sign of weakness. Dissidents, encouraged by this development, held secret meetings to discuss how to remove UNIP. Once again, the Copperbelt was a focus of this opposition. ZCTU National Chairman Chiluba, detained in 1982 during a significant strike wave, emerged as Kaunda's most public and forcible critic. In the 1980s he consistently highlighted the gap between UNIP's socialist rhetoric and the reality of its economic policies. By the late 1980s he was addressing underground meetings among union officials and intellectuals on the Copperbelt. The Catholic Church also provided a base for the expression of discontent, with local priests utilizing Latin American-style liberation theology to criticize economic injustice and the lack of political democracy.

A spark to this smoldering discontent was provided by the collapse of the Eastern European regimes in 1989–90. Inspired by the overthrow of apparently unassailable communist one-party states, Chiluba led calls for a return to multi-party democracy. Kaunda was forced by internal unrest and donor pressure to concede a referendum on multi-partyism. In 1990 the government was again forced by donors to remove food subsidies: major riots in Lusaka were followed by a failed coup attempt, which had been widely celebrated on the streets of the capital. Both events revealed the extent of popular discontent. Kaunda now cancelled the referendum, agreeing to a multi-party election in 1991.

Mass urban mobilization was vital to the success of the new Movement for Multi-Party Democracy (MMD), which held large rallies in support of an end to the one-party state. The ZCTU provided a powerful organizational basis to the MMD, funding the new party and providing vehicles for its campaign. A substantial rise in industrial action provided an important impetus to rapid and largely peaceful change; strikes combined economic and political demands. As a result, Chiluba was elected MMD president and in October 1991 the second president of Zambia.

Political and Economic Liberalization

The MMD's sweeping electoral victory did nothing to resolve Zambia's economic problems. Copper prices remained low, and despite his record as a longstanding critic of economic liberalization, Chiluba now embarked on one of Africa's most sweeping structural adjustment programs. The government's popular credibility gave it the breathing space to implement the wholesale privatization of state assets and other free market economic policies. The result for most Zambians was a disaster. Incomes fell, educational and health standards collapsed, and life expectancy declined. The capacity of the labor movement to protest was weakened both by the halving of formal sector employment and a post-Cold War ideological vacuum in which, with the collapse of the Soviet bloc, there appeared to be no alternative to neoliberalism. The ZCTU, despite its prominent role in establishing and supporting the MMD, had no institutional role in the party. It was marginalized from official policy-making and, weakened and divided, it split in 1996 over its relationship with the MMD (most affiliates subsequently rejoined).

An unfree election in 1996 gave Chiluba a second term in office, during which the corrupt privatization of the loss-making copper mining industry was overseen by an alliance of the international financial institutions, multinational mining corporations, and the MMD government. Popular anger at the increase in poverty and corruption found expression in 2001, when Chiluba attempted to stand for an unconstitutional third term as president. New civil society organizations, which had gradually emerged in the space provided by the return to democracy, now organized themselves as the Oasis Forum, with church bodies taking a lead in the campaign against a third term; the weak and divided labor movement played only a limited role. This was supplemented by large (and illegal) demonstrations and other creative manifestations of discontent: for example, cars and minibuses throughout Lusaka simultaneously sounded their horns at a scheduled time each week in a show of collective anger. Such actions played an important part in persuading Chiluba not to seek reelection.

The success of this campaign increased the confidence of Zambian activists to seek further economic and political reforms. Demands for a deepening of democracy in a country which, despite multi-partyism, remains authoritarian and centralized, led to a Constitutional Review Commission which in 2005 published a draft constitution guaranteeing freedoms of speech and assembly and limiting presidential powers. When the MMD government of President Levy Mwanawasa threatened to scupper these reforms, a wave of demonstrations took place demanding the implementation of all the commission's recommendations. For the first time in Zambian history, simultaneous marches took place not only in Lusaka and the Copperbelt, but also in small provincial and district capitals; these were enabled by the widespread ownership of cell phones.

Since 2004, rising international mineral prices have made Zambia's copper mining industry profitable for the first time in thirty years. This has thrown into sharp relief the iniquitous and corrupt mine privatizations of the late 1990s, in which foreign corporations were granted significant tax holidays as part of secret agreements with the government. As a result, the 2006 election was framed by populist rhetoric against the poor labor and environmental practices of foreign-owned mining companies, particularly those owned by Chinese investors. In February 2007 Chinese President Hu Jintao's planned visit to the mining town of Chambishi had to be cancelled because of protests by mineworkers. Zambians are once again demanding that a larger proportion of the value extracted from their land and labor remain within their national borders.

The opening years of the twenty-first century have suggested that some Zambians have begun to reclaim their radical tradition and, in doing so, begun to roll back the worst aspects of economic liberalization. In a context in which high mineral prices have again highlighted the old question of the fair distribution of the vast income produced by the natural wealth of one of the world's poorest and most unequal countries, Zambian activists face the challenge of going beyond their proud record of protest, to find a mobilizing discourse that can enable them to achieve the type of society most Zambians would wish to see.

SEE ALSO: Anarchism and Syndicalism, Southern Africa; Angolan National Liberation, 1961–1974; Chiluba, Frederick (b. 1943); Harris, Charles (1896–1939); Kaunda, Kenneth (b. 1924); Malawi National Liberation; South Africa, African Nationalism and the ANC; South Africa, Labor Movement; Southern Africa, Popular Resistance to Neoliberalism, 1982–2007; Zimbabwe, Labor Movement, 1890–1980; Zimbabwe Labor Movement and Politics, 1980–2007; Zimbabwe, National Liberation Movement

References and Suggested Readings

- Bratton, M. (1980) The Local Politics of Rural Development: Peasant and Party-State in Zambia. Hanover: University Press of New England.
- Epstein, A. L. (1958/1973) Politics in an Urban African Community. Manchester: Institute for African Studies, University of Zambia/Manchester University Press.
- Fields, K. E. (1985) Revival and Rebellion in Colonial Central Africa. Princeton: Princeton University Press.
- Gertzel, C., Baylies, C., & Szeftel, M. (Eds.) (1984) The Dynamics of the One-Party State in Zambia. Manchester: Manchester University Press.
- Gewald, J.-B., Hinfelaar, M., & Macola, G. (Eds.) (2007) One Zambia, Many Histories: Towards a History of Post-Colonial Zambia. Leiden: Brill.
- Government of Zambia (1969) Towards Complete Independence. Lusaka: Government Printers.
- Hall, R. (1965/1976) Zambia, 1890–1964: The Colonial Period. London: Longman.
- Henderson, I. (1972) Labour and Politics in Northern Rhodesia 1900–1953: A Study in the Limits of Colonial Power. PhD thesis, University of Edinburgh.
- Larmer, M. (2006) “A Little Bit Like a Volcano”: The United Progressive Party and Resistance to One-Party Rule in Zambia, 1964–1980. International Journal of African Historical Studies 39, 1: 49–83.
- Larmer, M. (2007) Mineworkers in Zambia: Labour and Political Change in Post-Colonial Africa, 1964–1991. London: I. B. Tauris.
- Larmer, M. & Macola, G. (2007) The Origins, Context and Political Significance of the Mushala Rebellion against the Zambian One-Party State. International Journal of African Historical Studies 40, 3: 471–96.
- Meebelo, H. S. (1971) Reaction to Colonialism. Manchester: Institute of African Studies, University of Zambia/Manchester University Press.
- Mulford, D. C. (1967) Zambia: The Politics of Independence 1957–1964. Oxford: Oxford University Press.
- Parpart, J. L. (1983) Labour and Capital on the African Copperbelt. Philadelphia: Temple University Press.
- Rakner, L. (2003) Political and Economic Liberalization in Zambia, 1991–2001. Uppsala: Nordiska Afrikaninstitutet.
- Roberts, A. (1976) A History of Zambia. London: Heinemann.
- World Bank Country Economics Department/Colclough, C. (1989) The Labor Market and Economic Stabilization in Zambia. Washington, DC: World Bank.

Zamora, Ezequiel (1817–1860)

Dario Azzellini

Following the declaration of Venezuelan independence and the founding of Gran Colombia in 1819, the expectations of land redistribution to peasants were not realized and large tracts of arable land remained in the control of a small oligarchic aristocracy. Ezequiel Zamora was a fearless military leader of rebel armies that sought land redistribution, fueling peasant uprisings during 1846 and acting as commander in the Federal War from 1859 to 1863. The son of a small landowner, Zamora moved to Caracas as a youth to finish his primary education. Inspired by his brother-in-law to study revolutionary movements in Europe and by José Manuel García, a lawyer, he examined principles of equality for transforming Venezuela into a democratic society.

In 1846, Zamora ran for electoral office as a candidate for the Liberal Party in the Cantón of Villa de Cura, northwestern Venezuela, but his election was blocked illegally by conservative opponents. In his speeches, Zamora condemned the oligarchs who retained control of most of the arable land after Venezuelan independence from Spain. In the years following the death of the Liberator Simón Bolívar in 1830, General José Antonio Páez closed ranks with large landowners and cattle ranchers seeking to maintain control over farms and natural resources. However, the failure to redistribute land intensified poverty and economic disarray, escalating social and political tensions. As inequality and the scarcity of land expanded, class divisions were brought into stark relief in the 1840s, social and political tensions swelled, and peasant uprisings in central Venezuela expanded.

Zamora demanded the expropriation of property from large landowners and redistribution to the landless poor. After he was barred from office, Zamora led an armed uprising on September 7, 1846 in Guambra, a town several miles due south of Caracas. The uprising and the demand to free slaves laid the foundation for the unification of liberal and peasant leaders in the Valles del Tuy, Barlovento, and other regions in northern Venezuela. Zamora led his army under the slogans “free land and free men,”

“respect for peasants,” and “clear out the godos” (a derogatory term directed at the oligarchy), gaining popular support in the rural regions. After defeating government forces in the battles of Los Bagres and Los Leones, Zamora was defeated and captured on March 26, 1847 and sentenced to death. Zamora’s death sentence was later commuted to ten years’ imprisonment by President General José Tadeo Monagas. In January 1848, Monagas pardoned Zamora and other political prisoners and offered Zamora a position in the army, which he accepted, rising to the rank of brigadier by 1854.

On February 20, 1859, 40 of Ezequiel Zamora’s supporters, under the command of Tirso Salavarría, attacked and captured the Coro garrison in north central Venezuela, seizing 900 rifles, two cannons, and stores of gunpowder. Three days later, Zamora arrived from Curaçao and assumed the general command of troops as a civil war, known as the Federal War, broke out between liberals seeking land distribution and conservatives seeking to maintain oligarchic control.

Zamora was a leading military figure in the guerilla insurgency. Impoverished peasants in rural areas and the urban poor sought redistribution of cultivated land and the overthrow of the conservative oligarchy in power. Zamora led the masses under the slogans “popular elections,” “horror to the oligarchy,” and “free land and free men.” Between 1859 and 1863 the guerilla war was transformed into a popular and peasant revolution aiming to fulfill the unmet popular demands of the War of Independence. Zamora’s popular army was known for setting fire to the houses of landowners and immediately redistributing the land to poor peasants.

Zamora won the battle of El Palito on March 23, 1859 and began advancing on the lowlands of the country, taking San Felipe on March 28 and reorganizing the Federal Province of Yaracuy in the northwest. In a decisive battle on December 10, 1859, Zamora and 3,400 troops were defeated in Santa Inés by conservative troops. After the defeat at Santa Inés, Zamora repositioned his rebel army in central Venezuela and was victorious in Barinas, Portuguesa, Carabobo, Barquisimeto, and Cojedes. On January 10, 1860, Zamora was assassinated during an assault on the city of San Carlos (Cojedes), near Caracas.

Zamora’s sudden death was a blow to the revolutionary goals of the civil war and to militant liberals, who lost their drive and momentum. On May 22, 1863, the Treaty of Coche was signed, putting an end to the Federal War in which one-third of Venezuela’s population, or just over one million people, had lost their lives. A reconstituted liberal oligarchy subsequently imposed control without redistributing land, leaving the social order intact.

Ezequiel Zamora, along with Simón Bolívar and Simón Rodríguez, is a central figure in the historical ideals of Bolivarianism, independence from foreign control, unity, and egalitarianism. Zamora’s legacy is historically rooted among those in Venezuela seeking independence from foreign control and radical land redistribution. Zamora is invoked by Venezuelan peasant organizations and in the names of government projects.

SEE ALSO: Bolívar, Simón (1783–1830); Bolivarianism, Venezuela; Chávez, Hugo (b. 1954); Chávez, Hugo and the Bolivarian Revolution, 1998–Present; Rodríguez, Simón (1769–1854); Venezuelan War of Independence

References and Suggested Readings

- Brito Figueroa, F. (1981) Tiempo de Ezequiel Zamora. Caracas: Universidad Central de Venezuela.
 Tapia, J. L. (1993) Ezequiel Zamora a la espera del amanecer. Caracas: Ediciones Centauro.

Zanzibar Revolution

Ayokunle Olumuyiwa Omobowale

Zanzibar is an island group (including principally Zanzibar, Pemba, and Tumbatu) in the Indian Ocean, off the coast of Tanganyika (Tanzania). Its coast and ports served as major trade routes among African, Arab, Indian, and European traders in the nineteenth century. Even though Zanzibar was first populated by Africans, Asians came as later migrants and it served as the seat of the sultan of Oman from 1828 when the African elite class and peasants alike were subordinated under its rule.

Zanzibar came under British administration as a protectorate in 1890. It remained a British protectorate until 1963, when it gained independence. Nevertheless, the nature of the British departure provided a breeding ground for resentment among native Africans. The British officials manipulated ethnic, racial, and linguistic divisions and discrimination against the African majority

On January 12, 1964, the independent government of Zanzibar and the constitutional monarch, Sultan Jamsid bin Abdullah, were overthrown by a communist rebellion that became known as the Zanzibar Revolution. The revolution resulted in the proclamation of Zanzibar as a People's Republic. Three months later Zanzibar united with Tanganyika to form Tanzania. On November 23, 1964, Nation of Islam leader Malcolm X (1925–65) (left) met with General Abdul Rahman Mohamed Babu (1924–96), a leader of the Zanzibar Revolution. (Getty Images) to secure electoral victory for an Arab- and Indian-dominated alliance between the Zanzibar Nationalist Party (ZNP) and Zanzibar and Pemba People's Party (ZPPP) in the tiny island nation's 1963 pre-independence election. Great Britain consequently granted independence and handed power over to the Arab sultan, while the ZNP/ZPPP coalition formed the government. The pro-Asian government lasted barely a month, when it was overthrown by a pro-African revolution. The nation subsequently drifted into draconian one-party rule.

Anti-Arab Revolution and the Institutionalization of African Rule

On January 12, 1964, a revolution initiated by the radical leader of the Umma Party, Abdul Rahman Mohamed Babu, in collaboration with radical elements of the main opposition party, the Afro-Shirazi Party (ASP), toppled and ended the rule of the Arab sultan and the government of the ZNP/ZPPP coalition. The revolutionaries formed a socialist, majority-African government called the Revolutionary Council, with leftist ASP leaders Abeid Karume and Kassim Hanga as president and vice-president respectively. Babu was named the external affairs and trade minister.

The revolutionaries sought to create a socialist society on the principles of majority rule. Their goals would effectively end the system of discrimination against the African majority, nationalizing land and resources, creating a one-party state, and ending the exploitative system of clientelist patronage and exclusion practiced by the Arab and Indian elite. In order to achieve these goals, the government, which had difficulty gaining recognition from western powers, opted for a union with the neighboring country of Tanganyika. It also sought and received assistance from the socialist countries of the Soviet Union, East Germany, and China. With the consummation of Zanzibar's union with Tanganyika, the two nations were renamed Tanzania. The president of Zanzibar became the first vice-president of Tanzania, but Zanzibar remained semi-autonomous within the union and openly retained socialist ideas and its association with socialist states rather than following the preference of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, who opted for a form of African socialism and non-alignment. Again, irrespective of Nyerere's aversion for ethnic or racial divisions, the leaders of Zanzibar pursued a policy of African domination and the suppression of Arabs and Indians.

Hence, in accordance with its revolutionary goals, the pro-African leadership ensured a merger of the Umma Party and ASP while banning all other political parties. Furthermore, it ensured a redistribution of land from the hitherto dominant elite Asian classes to Africans. Likewise, state offices were predominantly filled by African appointees except where Asian expertise was necessary. While few Africans had previously had access to formal education, following the revolution Zanzibar expanded western education to Africans. Nonetheless, as the leaders of Zanzibar accentuated pro-African policies, the regime drifted into draconian rule, with dire consequences for the nation's population and the revolutionary leaders who were considered oppositional.

The Drift to Draconian Rule

Following the merger of the Umma Party with the ASP, President Karume named prominent members of the defunct Umma Party to leadership positions on the Tanzanian mainland. With little opposition, Karume limited personal freedoms through reducing the powers of the judiciary and abolishing the right to appeal. By 1970, the government replaced the erstwhile judiciary with a People's Court, drawn largely from among party officials. In addition, the ASP government proscribed labor unions, banned strikes, imposed unpaid compulsory labor, and restricted travel outside the island, even for university education. The government required a permit for foreign travel, including to mainland Tanzania, and in 1969 instituted a fee of 56,000 shillings for all those outside Zanzibar wishing to marry a woman from the islands and relocate elsewhere. The charge, according to the proclamation, was to cover the government's costs of educating and providing social services for the young women. Furthermore, unlike mainland Tanzania, where free and fair elections under one-party rule were in effect, officials representing Zanzibar on the Island and the Tanzanian National Assembly were appointed and not elected.

Thus, the 1964 revolution and subsequent merger of the Umma Party and ASP paved the way for consolidation of power under President Karume and his close confidants in the Revolutionary Council. The government sought to repress all opposition through arrest, imprisonment, and death. In 1967, Vice-President Hanga and prominent politicians accused of planning to overthrow Karume were tried under questionable circumstances and subsequently executed.

On April 7, 1972, Karume was assassinated and a new government took over that also sought to consolidate power by suppressing opposition. Those thought to have masterminded the assassination included Babu, who was on the mainland. Nyerere arrested Babu, but refused to turn him over to the Zanzibar authorities since he could not secure an assurance that his trial and judgment would be fair, fearing that Babu would receive the same treatment as Vice-President Hanga after he was turned over to Zanzibar in 1967. Zanzibar officials nonetheless tried Babu in absentia and sentenced him to death. On the mainland, Babu was incarcerated for six years until his release in 1978. After his release, Babu migrated to the US, where he taught in universities and was recognized as an international radical activist until his death on August 5, 1996.

SEE ALSO: Charismatic Leadership and Revolution; International Socialism: Mass Politics; Mau Mau Rebellion, 1952–1959; Nyerere, Julius (1922–1999);

Tanzania, Protest and Independence; Uganda, Protests against British Colonialism and Occupation; Ujamaa Villages

References and Suggested Readings

- Bienen, H. (1965) National Security in Tanganyika after the Mutiny. Transition 21: 39–46.
- Burgess, J., Cliffe, L., Doornbos, M., Selassie, B., Shivji, I., Puritt, P., Abdul-Raheem, T., & Mandani, M. (1996) A Tribute to A. M. Babu. Review of African Political Economy 23 (69): 321–48.
- Chase, H. (1976) The Zanzibar Treason Trial. Review of African Political Economy 6: 14–33.
- Shivji, I. (2003) The Life and Times of Babu: The Age of Liberation and Revolution. Review of African Political Economy 30 (95): 109–18.
- Triplett, G. (1971) Zanzibar: The Politics of Revolutionary Inequality. Journal of Modern African Studies 9 (4): 612–17.

Zapata, Emiliano (1879–1919) and the Comuna Morelense

Janet E. McClellan

Conditions and treatment of indigenous persons in northern and southern Mexico during the conquest of New Spain and the colonial period (1519–1821) varied because of historical and cultural differences between the peoples in those regions. The south comprised a more obvious economic, cultural, social, and political heritage and managed to maintain a great deal of autonomy, with recourse to traditional land rights and access to the established Indian courts for the possibility of redress of grievances. The north did not enjoy such opportunities. Being less populated and more widely disbursed, the people there were subjected to the Spanish encomienda (forced labor) system. In the south the acknowledgment of the historical rights of pueblos, villages, and land ownership assured greater acceptance of the colonial governance, while unfortunately supporting the development of the hacienda system (patronage land grants for Spanish and foreign entities). During the childhood and youth of Emiliano Zapata the centuries-long struggle for land rights, economic survival, and political recognition became increasingly intense.

From 1876 to 1880 and 1884 to 1911, the president of the newly independent Mexico was General Porfirio Diaz, who initiated land privatization reforms, all of which benefited foreign investors and the wealthy and further undermined the rights of indigenous persons, causing them to suffer massive relocations, poverty, starvation, and corporate enslavement. One of those villages and pueblos of indigenous persons was the village home of Emiliano Zapata, whose surrounding farmlands were seized by the encroaching sugar-cane plantation of the Hacienda Hospital.

Emiliano Zapata was born on August 8, 1879, and was raised by his family in the southern Mexican village of Anenecuilco, Morelos. One of ten children, he attended elementary school, spoke the language of his Aztec ancestors, and lived with his family until he was orphaned at the age of 16. He then went into business himself using a mule team to transport supplies from ranches to towns in and around the state of Morelos. Zapata was a successful farmer and charro (horseman) and was known to compete in the village rodeo. His intellectual development was influenced by Pablo Torres Burgos and Professor Otilio Montano. In 1906 Zapata left Anenecuilco to live with Inés Aguilar, although her family did not approve, as he was a reputed womanizer. In 1910 the family's complaints forced Zapata to join the army and serve in the Seventh Army Battalion. He returned to Anenecuilco, where the male citizens named him president of the community defense committee and presented him with the land grants, deeds, and ownership claims of the villagers.

Zapata was raised in the village of his ancestors and schooled in the history, culture, and tabulations of the subjugation of his people. He also knew firsthand the invasive presence of the haciendas. By the age of 30, he had become the embodiment of the embitterment and resentment of the dispossessed, not the anarchist peasant frequently depicted.

In 1910, as the president of the defense committee Zapata won several important legal battles against the encroaching sugar-cane plantation of the Hacienda Hospital and reclaimed wide swaths of the previously disputed lands from the hacienda managers through the local prefect. With his reputation increasing, Zapata's volunteer army grew. In the north the Madero revolt was gaining support and the federal government was unable to suppress or otherwise thwart its spread. The time for open armed revolution approached.

A wealthy and educated hacienda owner, Francisco I. Madero of northern Mexico called the nation to arms in November 1910 with the objective of removing President Porfirio Díaz from power. In March of 1911 Zapata organized a guerilla force and joined the fighting. Díaz resigned the presidency in late May 1911, and Madero and Zapata met in June, though they would not remain on friendly terms. Zapata distrusted Madero's judgment and returned to the mountains with his followers and planned his attacks against Madero. Madero and the other new leaders were more dedicated to developing an emergency democracy than to the land reforms and recovery that Zapata and his followers had expected. Under his guidance and mismanagement, the hacienda owners immediately began maneuvers intended to preserve their power and wealth in the state, further distancing the presidency of Madero from the needs of the followers of Zapata.

Ultimately Madero was deposed and executed by the Porfirista military and his own aides, whom he had unwisely neglected to replace with revolutionary supporters. The attacks and skirmishes by Zapata against Madero and his officials began in late 1911 and continued throughout 1913, shifting only to the reemergent Porfirista military after their execution of Madero. Madero's execution at the hands of the Porfirista military in 1913 was followed by the most violent period of the revolution which continued until 1917 when revolutionary president Venustiano Carranza managed to secure a relative degree of national stability.

In mid-1914 Zapata and Poncho Villa entered Mexico City and secured the capital. By November 1914 the fighting had started again. Zapata captured Puebla in December, but a series of assassinations in the capital strained relations between Zapata and Villa, while the intellectuals they had placed in charge of the government began bickering amongst themselves. Attempting to secure the hard-won gains, Zapata returned to Morelos, where land reform was under way and provided him with the opportunity to fulfill his promises to villagers. For a while, the land reform process spread beyond Morelos and into other areas of neighboring states under Zapatista rule.

Unfortunately the land reform would prove to be temporary, and the country's stability was threatened by the unstable alliance between Villa and Zapata's war effort against Carranza. In mid-1915 Villa lost a major battle of the revolution to the Constitutionalist general Alvaro Obregón, and by early August Zapata's army was driven from Mexico City, followed by the invasion of Morelos by Carranza's troops.

Not one to give up, Zapata sought alliances with anyone who might help him fight Carranza, but the war effort went sour, resources became scarce, and defections from the cause increased at an alarming rate. Desperate to preserve the gains of the rebellion, Zapata contacted Jesús Guajardo, a purportedly disaffected Carrancista colonel. After some correspondence, in the spring of 1919 Zapata rode through the gates of the hacienda expecting to meet with other disaffected Carrancistas. Soldiers were indeed assembled as if to do him military honors, but instead they shot him dead.

Zapata's death did not mean the end of his importance in contemporary Mexican life. The remaining Zapatistas formed alliances with the Alvaro Obregón forces who won the revolution in 1920. Obregón and his successors recognized the power of Zapata's programs of land reform and freedom for the Mexican peoples. In modern Mexico, Zapata is celebrated as the founding father of liberty and the land reform movement.

SEE ALSO: Mexican Revolution of 1910–1921; Obregón, Alvaro (1880–1928) and the Sonoran Generation; Zapatismo; Zapatistas, EZLN, and the Chiapas Uprising

References and Suggested Readings

- Brunk, S. (1995) Emiliano Zapata: Revolution and Betrayal in Mexico. Albuquerque: University of New Mexico Press.
- Hodges, D. C. & Ross, G. (2002) Mexico, the End of the Revolution. Westport, CT: Praeger.
- Krauze, E. (1997) Mexico: Biography of Power: A History of Modern Mexico, 1810–1996. New York: HarperCollins.
- Meyer, M. C. & Breezley, W. H. (Eds.) (2000) The Oxford History of Mexico. New York: Oxford University Press.
- Womac, J. (1969) Zapata and the Mexican Revolution. New York: Alfred A. Knopf.

Zapatismo

John Holloway

Zapatismo represents an important break with the tradition of revolutionary thought. When the Zapatistas rose up in Chiapas in the southeast of Mexico on January 1, 1994, they took the world by surprise. This was not just because they revolted when the age of rebellion seemed to have passed, but because they spoke a new language and expressed new ideas that broke sharply with the received language and ideas of the revolutionary tradition.

The nature of the break became abundantly clear in a letter sent by the Zapatista leadership on January 30, 1994, in which they explained their rebellion: "Then that suffering that united us made us speak, and we recognized that in our words there was truth, we knew that not only pain and suffering lived in our tongue, we recognized that there is hope still in our hearts. We spoke with ourselves, we looked inside ourselves and we looked at our history: we saw our most ancient fathers suffering and struggling, we saw our grandfathers struggling, we saw our fathers with fury in their hands, we saw that not everything had been taken away from us, that we had the most valuable, that which made us live, that which made our step rise above plants and animals, that which made the stone be beneath our feet, and we saw, brothers, that all that we had was DIGNITY, and we saw that great was the shame of having forgotten it, and we saw that DIGNITY was good for men to be men again, and dignity returned to live in our hearts, and we were new again, and the dead, our dead, saw that we were new again and they called us again, to dignity, to struggle" (EZLN, La Palabra, 1: 122).

The Politics of Dignity

The fundamental break with the Leninist tradition lies in the centrality given to the idea of dignity. Dignity speaks in the first words of the Zapatista uprising: ¡Ya basta! Enough! We rebel because we can no longer abide the humiliation of living the way we do. We rebel because, although our dignity has been trampled upon for 500 years, we still have sufficient dignity to revolt against this negation. The revolt is the revolt of dignity against its own negation: it is a struggle of and for dignity, the struggle of dignity for its full realization. It is a movement that comes from below and pushes toward a society based on the recognition of dignity. This includes the struggle for indigenous rights, but this must be understood as just one step, part of a broader and deeper struggle for the creation of a world based on the mutual recognition of dignities. In other words, the struggle of and for dignity is necessarily a struggle against capitalism (as the Zapatistas declare explicitly in the Sixth Declaration of the Lacandon Jungle in 2005).

To start from dignity means to understand people as subjects, not as victims. However victimized, humiliated, or objectified they may be, they are still subjects with dignity. These are not the inherently limited subjects of Lenin's What Is To Be Done? who can have no more than "trade union consciousness" and require the leadership of a party, but rather subjects who do not need to be told what to do by any external authority.

There is no question, then, of having to bring consciousness to the masses: the central issue is not consciousness but dignity. This changes the whole conception of politics, the whole tonality and style of political action. Traditional revolutionary politics is monological: since the central problem is seen as the lack of consciousness, the task of the party is to explain to people what is wrong with the world and what must be done. Leaders speak at length, often at very great length. But if the starting point is the dignity of all, then this leads to a dialogical politics, a politics not of talking but of listening, or, perhaps better, of listening-and-talking. "Preguntando caminamos," "asking as we walk," is one of the central principles of Zapatista organization. We advance not by telling people what to do but by asking them what they are doing and what should be done. Thus, when Subcomandante Marcos left Chiapas to travel around the country as part of the Otra Campaña, the "other campaign" announced in the Sixth Declaration of the Lacandon Jungle in July 2005, it was not to give big speeches but to sit and listen to people talking of their struggles and take notes on what he heard. There is no program, no royal road to follow: the only way forward is the path we make by walking, and we walk by asking.

Dignity is not just the dignity of revolutionaries, it is the dignity of ordinary people. This is perhaps the most profound challenge, theoretically and practically, that the Zapatistas issue: "We are quite ordinary women and men, children and old people, that is to say, rebels, non-conformists, uncomfortable, dreamers" (La Jornada, August 4, 1999). There is nothing special about being an anti-capitalist rebel. We who rebel are not an elite. It is as if the Zapatistas are saying to us, "look at the people around you and listen to their rebellion, listen and look, hear and see." The traditional image of the revolutionary hero has no place here.

This concept of politics is inherently anti-hierarchical. An organization that listens must be a horizontal organization, one that seeks to articulate people's views rather than to dictate a line. The basic unit of Zapatista organization is the village council or assembly, in which all take part, express their views, and work to reach a consensus. The EZLN (Ejército Zapatista de Liberación Nacional, Zapatista Army of National Liberation) itself, however, is organized as an army, with vertical structures of command. This, they argue, is an unfortunate necessity in the situation of conflict in which they live. The way in which they combine the need for effectiveness with radical democracy is through the principle of mandar obedeciendo (to rule by obeying), which states simply that anyone in a position of authority must obey those who have placed her or him in that position. This involves a system of instant recallability of anyone entrusted with a particular responsibility. It is not quite the same as the radical principle of horizontality that was so important in the uprising in Argentina (the uprising that exploded on December 19–20, 2001 and brought down a whole row of presidents), but is perhaps more realistic in its recognition of the tensions inherent in trying to create a different type of society within a capitalist framework.

The emphasis on dignity leads inevitably to a rejection of trying to change society through the state. A focus on the state draws those involved into certain forms of organization. The state is not a thing but a form of organization characterized above all by its separation from society. A state-oriented politics involves processes of exclusion: separation of leaders from led, the adoption of a language that is not accessible to all, the learning of bureaucratic regulations and procedures, the calculation of advantages and disadvantages according to the logic of power, and so on.

Ruling by Obeying

From the beginning the Zapatistas have been consistent in their refusal to enter into this kind of politics, but there has been a process of learning and change in their dealings with the state. In the early period, they entered into a dialogue with the Mexican state in order to achieve the recognition of indigenous rights. This led to the signing of the Agreement of San Andrés in 1996 in which the government agreed to the implementation of many of the demands of the indigenous movement aimed at improving the position of the indigenous peoples and giving recognition to a certain degree of self-government. The agreement, although signed, was never implemented. After a change of government (involving the replacement of the Partido Revolucionario Institucional [PRI] after 70 years in power), the EZLN organized a march (the "March of the Color of the Earth") to Mexico City, where they addressed the Congress. In spite of this, and of the promises of the new government, the Congress proceeded to introduce legislation which, far from implementing the agreement of San Andrés, actually reduced indigenous rights in some respects.

Since then, the EZLN has abandoned any attempt to negotiate with the state and insisted on implementing the demands through their own organization. The key element in this strategy of autonomy is the structure of administration centered on the Juntas de Buen Gobierno (Councils of Good Government), the authorities established by the Zapatistas to regulate the territory that they control in Chiapas. The composition of these councils is based on a combination of the election of instantly recallable delegates (on the basis of mandar obedeciendo) and a rapid rotation at the regional level between the councils of the different villages within the region. The Juntas de Buen Gobierno should not be seen as an alternative state but as a radically different form of organization. They are based not on a separation from society but on the integration of communal organization into the society. Thus, the constant rotation of the composition of the Juntas is designed to ensure that as many people as possible gain experience of community organization, even at the cost of a loss of efficiency.

The rejection of the state as a form of organization means also the rejection of the temporality of the state. A dialogical politics based on discussion, on listening and the taking of decisions by consensus means a different time framework from that of the state and of state-centered politics. This was expressed very neatly in the context of the dialogue that led to the agreement of San Andrés. When the government representatives insisted on rapid replies to their proposals, the Zapatistas replied that they did not understand the indigenous time.

As recounted by Comandante David afterwards, the Zapatistas explained that "we, as Indians, have rhythms, forms of understanding, of deciding, of reaching agreements. And when we told them that, they replied by making fun of us; well then, they said, we don't understand why you say that because we see that you have Japanese watches, so how do you say that you use the indigenous clock, that's from Japan" (La Jornada, May 17, 1995). And Comandante Tacho commented: "They haven't learned. They understand us backwards. We use time, not the clock" (La Jornada, May 18, 1995).

This sense of time is undoubtedly rooted in the practice and traditions of the indigenous communities, but it is also inherent in the construction of a society with different social relations. In the case of the Zapatistas it is expressed in a dual temporality. On the one hand there is the urgency of their cry of ¡Ya basta! Enough! Revolution now! We cannot accept one moment longer this terrible system that is humiliating and destroying us! But also there is a different temporality, the temporality of the patient construction of a different world, beautifully expressed in their saying that "we walk, we do not run, because we are going very far" (caminamos, no corremos, porque vamos muy lejos).

The Challenge of Zapatismo

More than anything else, Zapatismo is a challenge. The Zapatista movement is an indigenous movement and much more. The Zapatista language and practice draw on the traditions and history of the indigenous communities, but this is not just an expression of indigenous wisdom; rather, it is something that resonates profoundly with the questions and reflections of the anti-capitalist movement throughout the world in the last 40 years or so. The Zapatista movement is not a movement out there in faraway Chiapas but a political direction, a new sensibility that was already sprouting in many parts of the world, a particularly powerful articulation of that which was already pushing to be born. That is why it has had so much influence in the "anti-globalization" movement and in the general rethinking of the possibility of transforming the world. The global appeal of Zapatismo was expressed by Major Ana María in her speech to the "Intergalactic" meeting (the Intercontinental Meeting for Humanity and against Neoliberalism organized by the Zapatistas in July 1996):

“Behind us are the we that are you (Detrás de nosotros estamos ustedes). Behind our balaclavas is the face of all the excluded women. Of all the forgotten indigenous people. Of all the persecuted homosexuals. Of all the despised youth. Of all the beaten migrants. Of all those imprisoned for their word and thought. Of all the humiliated workers. Of all those who have died from being forgotten. Of all the simple and ordinary men and women who do not count, who are not seen, who are not named, who have no tomorrow” (Chiapas no. 3, p. 103).

SEE ALSO: Global Justice Movement and Resistance; Marcos, Subcomandante (b. ?); Zapatistas, EZLN, and the Chiapas Uprising

References and Suggested Readings

- Ejército Zapatista de Liberación Nacional (n.d.) La Palabra del los Armados de Verdad y Fuego, 3 vols. Mexico.
- Holloway, J. (2005) Change the World without Taking Power: The Meaning of Revolution Today, 2nd ed. London: Pluto Press.
- Holloway, J. & Peláez, E. (1998) Zapatista! Reinventing Revolution in Mexico. London: Pluto Press.
- Marcos, Subcomandante (2004) Ya Basta! Ten Years of the Zapatista Uprising – Writings of Subcomandante Insurgente Marcos. Edinburgh and San Francisco: AK Press.
- Marcos, Subcomandante (2006) The Other Campaign: The Zapatista Call for Change from Below. San Francisco: City Lights Books.
- Midnight Notes (2001) Auroras of the Zapatistas: Local and Global Struggles of the Fourth World War. New York: Autonomedia.
- Mentinis, M. (2006) Zapatistas: The Chiapas Revolt and What it Means for Radical Politics. London: Pluto Press.
- Zapatistas (2002) Zapatista Encuentro: Documents from the 1996 Encounter for Humanity and Against Neoliberalism, 2nd ed. New York: Seven Stories Press.
- www.ezln.org/documentos/index.html.

Zapatistas, EZLN, and the Chiapas uprising

Vittorio Sergi

The Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN) is a Mexican political-military organization founded on November 17, 1983 in Chiapas, southeast Mexico. In 1994 the EZLN started an armed rebellion against the Mexican government that soon had wide resonance and support in Mexico and among a wide network of anti-capitalist movements worldwide. The EZLN is the military wing of a civil movement that is organized around 40 autonomous councils in the State of Chiapas. The EZLN's discourses and practices have resonance in a wide national and international network of anti-capitalist political organizations.

Historical Context and Origins

The origins of the EZLN can be traced to the cycle of guerilla insurgency that started after the repression of the students' movement of 1968 and lasted until the second half of the 1980s. Its original organization was the National Liberation Forces (FLN), an armed group founded in the industrial city of Monterrey on August 6, 1969, by the brothers Cesar German and Fernando Yañez Muñoz and Alfredo Zarate Mota, among others.

The FLN was a political-military organization that aimed at national insurrection and the implantation of a socialist government in Mexico. It worked from a strictly clandestine structure that had a national organization. Its local sections performed clandestine activity and gathered resources mostly from legal work and voluntary contributions. Its political references were rooted in Mexican revolutionary history and in Latin American anti-imperialism. On February 14, 1974, in a police raid on a secure house in Nepantla, State of Mexico, five FLN members were shot dead and two more were arrested. Using information disclosed in the raid, the army discovered and attacked the movement's base in Chiapas in a rancho called El Diamante near Ocosingo and killed more people. The survivors struggled with the army on various occasions among the mountains of Chiapas, but were tracked down and killed or disappeared. Various other militants were killed or disappeared in the counterinsurgency against the guerillas of the 1970s and 1980s, but the organization was not completely broken.

The surviving militants worked underground in Mexico and in Chiapas until 1983, when a popular army organization was officially founded with strong involvement from Mayan workers and peasants from the Altos Highlands and the new settlement region of the Lacandon Jungle.

Women members of the Mexican Zapatista Army of National Liberation (EZLN) arrive at a meeting of social organizations on September 10, 2005 in Ocosingo, Mexico. The EZLN is an armed revolutionary group based in Chiapas, one of the poorest regions of Mexico, where indigenous peoples declared war on the Mexican state. While considered to be part of a larger anti-globalization, anti-neoliberalism movement, the EZLN struggled to gain control of vital resources in their own land. (AFP/Getty Images)

The EZLN served as a self-defense group while Mayan peasants and landless wage workers organized themselves in unions and associations that faced the repression of both federal and state governments of Chiapas.

A strong movement for Indian rights and land rights had been growing since the mid-1970s in Chiapas with the support of Catholic clergy inspired by liberation theology. With the help of local peasant leaders the armed group succeeded in gaining the support of the population. In 1993 the organization had a wide popular base among Mayan peasants. According to the spokesperson and military leader Subcomandante Marcos, the base of the movement decided to move war to the government because of the increasing pressure that the neoliberalist politics of the government of Carlos Salinas de Gortari was imposing on the already extremely poor peasants of Chiapas. The abolition of article 27 of the constitution that guaranteed the right to collective land tenure in 1992 removed the possibility of land reform and opened up the process of privatization and enclosure.

The North America Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) between Mexico, USA, and Canada was considered as an attack on the living conditions of the peasants and indigenous people of the country. In order to conduct a revolutionary war, the EZLN issued and published in the clandestine magazine El Despertador Mexicano its Revolutionary Laws concerning forms of combat, the civil-military relationship, administration and socialization of private wealth and lands, and women's rights. The EZLN chose as the date for the insurrection the day of the issue of NAFTA, resulting in a symbolic and psychological blow to the government and a menace to US investments in Mexico.

On January 1, 1994 the EZLN declared war on the federal government and army and called the people of Mexico to a national uprising against the authoritarian government and the neoliberal capitalist system with a manifesto called "The first declaration of the Lacandon Jungle." The declaration presented 11 demands concerning basic needs and claimed the importance of republican values such as democracy, freedom, and justice. The EZLN called upon the people of Mexico to support their struggle for "work, land, housing, food, healthcare, education, independence, freedom, democracy, justice, and peace." They added that they would "not stop fighting until the basic demands of our people have been met by forming a government of our country that is free and democratic."

EZLN troops were formed mostly of Mayan indians, both men and women, and attacked by surprise, moving in big military units transported by trucks and vans. They took by surprise the city centers and main infrastructures of six towns and cities, four of which were municipal centers (Margaritas, Ocosingo, San Cristobal de Las Casas, and Altamirano). They fought with the Mexican federal army and police forces, seized radio stations and municipal buildings, burned down archives, and freed prisoners from jails. According to US army reports, the Zapatistas comprised 5,000 soldiers and five to ten times as many civilian supporters. Other sources estimate 2,000–3,500 armed fighters. In the first seven days 17,000 Mexican troops were deployed in the conflict area. Forces from the US and Guatemala provided intelligence and tactical support to the Mexicans but did not intervene directly.

When the rebel troops came under air attack by the Mexican army, they began to retreat into the jungle and mountains and split into smaller units. Heavy fighting occurred around San Cristobal when the insurgent army attacked for several days the military base of the 31st Military Zone in Rancho Nuevo, and in the town of Ocosingo where several Zapatista units were surrounded by the federal army. While retreating, the Zapatistas engaged in combat and set ambushes against the army. The Mexican army successfully cut off the Zapatistas' lines of communication, and from January 12, 1994 was ready to attack guerilla bases in the Lacandon Jungle. In Comitàn the Zapatistas imprisoned General Absalon Castellanos, landlord and former governor of Chiapas, and sentenced him with a political trial to lifelong detention. On February 16 Castellanos was freed in exchange for Zapatista fighters imprisoned by the Mexican army.

International non-governmental organizations (NGOs) accused the federal army of human rights violations such as executions, rape, and the bombing of civilians. On their side, the Zapatistas attacked both military and police forces, and in some case civilian landlords and bosses. The EZLN asked for acknowledgment as a belligerent force in an internal conflict according to the Geneva Convention, but its status was never officially accepted by the Mexican state, which accused the leaders of the movement of terrorism and other criminal offenses.

From the first hours of the rebellion, news coverage, with an important contribution from independent national and international media, spread news and images of the rebellion at the international level. On January 10, 1994 demonstrations of support for the insurgents and requests for a ceasefire were organized in Mexico City and all over the country. After 12 days of open combat, and pressed by national and international public opinion, President Carlos Salinas de Gortari called for a unilateral ceasefire. In the rural areas combat continued until January 17.

The conflict between the Zapatista army and the federal army, after a series of advances and retreats, was stabilized around a virtual border that was drawn in March of 1994. The armed ceasefire that followed defined a conflict zone that included the Altos region, the North Zone between the city of Palenque and the state of Tabasco, and the wide triangle crossed by the valleys called cañadas, where the tributaries of the Usumacinta River flow from the city of Ocosingo and Altamirano south to Comitàn, passing from the southeast border with Guatemala in the region called Marqués de Comillas. In March 1994 a first contact between the government and the EZLN was established thanks to the Catholic bishop of San Cristobal de las Casas, Samuel Ruiz. The EZLN also addressed Mexican and international civil society in an open and public dialogue on the future of the insurgency. In August 1994 a large conference was held in the Zapatista village of Guadalupe Tepeyac, renamed Aguascalientes as the historical place where the Zapatista movement gathered during the Mexican Revolution (1910–20). More than 5,000 delegates from Mexico and around the world attended, bringing together the majority of the leftist and autonomist groups and the Mexican opposition Party of the Democratic Revolution (PRD). This dialogue was the first of a large series of public encounters and meetings organized by the insurgent group.

In August 1996 the First Intergalactic Meeting in the Zapatista conflict zone was organized. In this meeting the EZLN emerged as a political and symbolic point of reference for a wide number of political subjects from the left at the global level. The Second Declaration of La Realidad was issued, marking an important point of reference for the anti-capitalist movement started at the end of the 1990s. The network of subjects and organizations built during this process was defined by scholars as the neo-Zapatista movement.

Development of the Conflict and Main Political Issues

The conflict in Chiapas has been classified as a low-intensity conflict, with less than 1,000 battle-related deaths between 1994 and the present. In reality, casualties of the social unrest and repression are higher, with an average of 100 killings a year. The uprising in Chiapas had resonance in the whole of Mexico, and at an international level due to the economic and geopolitical importance of the area and thanks to the wide dissemination of news and discourses allowed by the new electronic communication technologies. The December 1994 crackdown on the Mexican peso and the subsequent financial crisis that struck the world economy has been related to the Zapatista uprising and widespread opposition to NAFTA.

The relationship of the EZLN with its various and diverse supporters has been described by Arquilla and Ronfeldt (1998) as a "netwar." In this type of conflict the key combatants organize in such a way that small units can effectively conduct military operations. A major organizational innovation in the EZLN was decentralization, and another important move was the group's campaign to win over NGOs and other members of global civil society to its cause. In seeking the support of these groups, the EZLN changed tactics, calling for reform rather than the overthrow of the government. The EZLN uprising combined the use of arms with different political strategies based on communication, civil mobilization, and regional organizing. Nevertheless, it represented the reopening of the armed struggle option within the Mexican left and at the borders with the United States, causing great concern in military and security circles, who decided to apply the counterinsurgency plan named DN-2. Since 1994 the conflict has been deeply militarized by the Mexican state, which deployed in Chiapas up to 70,000 troops and experimented with various low-intensity conflict strategies, supported by financial, military, and information cooperation by the US government, and the governments of Guatemala, Spain, and Israel.

The Zapatista strategy has been marked by a civil and peaceful political initiative. It has restricted low-profile armed self-defense to some extreme cases, as for example the police attacks on the autonomous municipality in 1998, when the rebels fought back by shooting down a military helicopter and killing several soldiers and policemen. The EZLN relies on armed self-defense as a dissuasive means within a political strategy. From 1996 to 2001 the rebels aimed to mobilize civil society in support of indigenous rights claims, and after 2003 assumed an open discourse of class struggle and horizontal national and international class organization for the overthrowing of the state and the capitalist economic system. To confront this strategy the Mexican state has improved since a February 1995 attempted direct military strike on the Zapatista leadership failed. A paramilitary strategy and a complex counterinsurgency plan, named Plan Chiapas, also failed, as did the founding and supporting of several indigenous paramilitary groups in Chiapas to form an ethnic and economic confrontation and to block the Zapatista civil government. The main attack of these groups was the massacre of 43 civilians in the village of Acteal, in the Altos region, on December 23, 1997. Due to such paramilitary violence, there are 15,000 internally displaced persons in Chiapas and various groups are active in the eviction of Zapatista bases and supporters from recovered land and villages. Organizations such as Paz y Justicia, Mascara Roja, and the Peasants and Indigenous Rights Defense Organization (OPDDIC) contribute weapons, training, and funds and are attacking the civil Zapatista supporters in order to displace them.

The Zapatista army is organized as a military-political organization. The armed wing is structured on three main levels. At the bottom there are the support bases (bases de apoyo) formed by people enlisted in the organization who provide logistic and economic support to the structure from their own hometowns and villages. Then there are the militiamen (milicianos) who have periodic military training and can be enlisted according to the need of the army. At the top level there are the insurgents (insurgentes) who are in active permanent service, are organized by military ranks, and are armed. The highest ranks are organized in the General Command (Comandancia General) led by Subcomandante Marcos.

The political structure is linked with the military at the highest level, but relies on a bottom-up organization of delegates, starting from meetings of local assemblies and ending with the Clandestine Indian Revolutionary Committee (CCRI). The CCRI is formed by commanders of both genders, who are entitled to every zone of influence of the EZLN in the territory of Chiapas. They represent the highest political authority within the movement, as the CCRI is the expression of the civil bases and can have authority also over the General Command.

After the unsuccessful call for general insurrection, the Zapatistas formed a dual power structure that responded to the needs of indigenous peasant supporters by providing access to land and basic services, respected indigenous culture, and stressed political autonomy from the state apparatus. From January 1, 1994 Zapatista bases started to occupy lands owned by big landlords and state-owned territories. Soon, other peasant organizations began taking back the land. In 2007 these occupied lands amounted to some 251,000 hectares.

From December 18, 1994 the EZLN broke out from its military encirclement and declared the foundation of Autonomous Councils (Municipios Autonomos). These are civil institutions that rule both the Zapatista supporters and other inhabitants of a territory, autonomous of the Mexican state. In many cases, both the official and the rebel municipality exist in the same town or village, for example as both the Zapatista and official school and health clinic.

In 2007 there were 40 autonomous municipalities, ruling half of the territory of Chiapas. They are coordinated by five regional centers called Caracoles. These centers, situated in the center of five regions of the Zapatista zone of influence, coordinate civil government, administer international cooperation funds and projects, and organize productive and sustainable plans to provide for the basic needs and rights of the population. The Caracoles have instituted parallel services that are open also to non-zapatistas and provide basic services in education, health, food, commerce, justice, and local security. The EZLN exercises a counter-power in territories that are not homogeneous. In fact, they often share social space with official government institutions and often with other political groups. The autonomous councils are in strong conflict with official power for the control of natural resources and the administration of justice and education. As a result, Zapatista supporters, according to their declared stance of resistance, boycott completely the official government, do not vote, do not pay taxes or obey Mexican laws, and do not receive any aid or assistance from governmental agencies, financial or material. The autonomous government receives significant support from international solidarity and cooperation through NGO and direct channels.

The indigenous character of the insurgency was visible from the composition of the Zapatista army, but only became the main point of the political agenda and discourse after the first round of talks with the government in March 1994. The indigenous claims for autonomy and respect for cultural and political ways of organizing were directly linked to the more basic claims of the Mexican peasantry, which is mostly Indian or of Indian origins and culture. The majority of EZLN troops and supporters are from the Tzotzil, Tzeltal, Tojolabal, Chol, and Mam Mayan population. The vast political mobilization was also accompanied by a strong women's movement within the EZLN and within Mexican society that questioned deep gender discrimination and violence.

After two years of standoffs and low-intensity conflict, the EZLN and the federal government of President Ernesto Zedillo came to a dialogue which involved a large number of academics, professionals, and politicians as advisors of both parties. The first talks were about the more urgent needs of the Mayan population and of the whole native population of Mexico. After several months an agreement on Indigenous Rights and Culture, called the San Andrés Agreements, was reached on February 16, 1996. It established collective rights for indigenous people, the right to local and regional self-government, and the right to collective ownership of land. These agreements were boycotted by the government and never became law.

From late 1996 to 2001 the situation remained in a stalemate, and on the ground the ELZN suffered the intensification of the counterinsurgency war by paramilitary groups and by the military. In 1997, 1,111 masked Zapatista delegates traveled the country to promote a political dialogue with other indigenous organizations and with civil society, promoting the acknowledgment of the San Andrés Agreements. In 1999 the EZLN organized the Consulta Civil, an important civil poll in which 2.8 million people expressed their support for the EZLN and the peace process. The EZLN also participated in the national political debate supporting the students' strike in the Autonomous National University of Mexico (UNAM) against neoliberalism in education, which lasted nine months until it was repressed by the federal police. In February 2001, with the new president Vicente Fox of the National Action Party (PAN), the EZLN launched another civil and public campaign with a convoy of unarmed commanders and supporters that traveled around 14 states to get the Federal Congress to open a new dialogue. Despite the wide popular support of the initiative, the dialogue never started.

Recent Developments

In June 2005 the EZLN published the Sixth Declaration of the Lacandon Jungle, calling for the construction of a wide and horizontal network of anti-capitalist organizations and subjects in order to build a national civil insurrection. This national and international initiative was called the Other Campaign in opposition to the presidential campaign that was ongoing in Mexico. The campaign suffered escalating governmental hostility and repression. In May 2006 the members of the Front for the Defense of the Land (FPDT) in Atenco, State of Mexico, an important urban organization in the Other Campaign, were attacked by the police. Two of the young protesters were killed and ten were imprisoned. Police forces exercised sexual violence against prisoners and acted with extreme brutality in the repression. A nationwide campaign for the freedom of the Atenco prisoners resulted.

The Other Campaign continued with a series of national and international meetings, held in Chiapas in July–December 2007 that aimed to make contact between the civil Zapatista movement and the transnational solidarity and anti-capitalist Zapatista network. From 2006 the autonomous councils and the civilian bases of the EZLN suffered a new paramilitary offensive supported by an indigenous peasants' paramilitary organization (OPPDIC) that aims to regain control of occupied land and to disrupt the autonomous social and economic infrastructure. The EZLN has not responded with arms and continued with its national and international civil movement through the support and cooperation networks established over 14 years. Meanwhile, a political dialogue has reopened with other Mexican insurgent groups such as the Revolutionary Popular Army (EPR) and the Revolutionary Army of the Insurgent People (ERPI).

Much has been written about the EZLN and the Zapatista movement. Its peculiar strategy and its insertion in the worldwide electronic communication network have driven some researches to define it as a postmodern insurgency, or to analyze how insurgents used such communication as a fundamental tool of war. Many studies and widespread media coverage have underlined the charismatic and original figure of its leader, Subcomandante Marcos, who soon became an icon of the anti-capitalist movement that emerged by the end of the 1990s in the countries of the global North. Many researchers – sociologists, anthropologists, and political scientists – have studied on the ground in Chiapas the transformations of communal life, culture, and politics between the Maya Indians and the mestizo population in the context of the conflict. Others have analyzed the implications of the insurgency for contemporary post-colonial and radical politics. Zapatism as political discourse resonates strongly in a cross-over of political cultures and practices that are characterized by their radical anti-capitalism and antiauthoritarianism, and the defense of multiple identities and forms of life against gender, race, and cultural discrimination.

SEE ALSO: Mexico, Armed Political Movements, 1960s–Present; Mexico, Indigenous and Peasant Struggles, 1980s–Present; Zapatismo

References and Suggested Readings

- Arquilla, J. & Ronfeldt, D. (1998) Zapatista Social Netwar in Mexico. Santa Monica: Rand.
- Cleaver, H. (1999) Computer-Linked Social Movements and the Global Threat to Capitalism. Available at www.eco.texas.edu/faculty/cleaver/polnet.html (accessed May 5, 2008).
- EZLN (1996) Cronicas intergalacticas, México: Planeta tierra, montañas del sureste mexicano.
- Gilly, A. (1997) Chiapas la razón ardiente. Ensayo sobre la rebelión del mundo encantado. Mexico: Era.
- Higgins, P. N. (2004) Understanding the Chiapas Rebellion, Modernist Visions and the Invisible Indian. Austin: Texas University Press.
- Holloway, J. & Peláez, E. (Eds.) (1998) Zapatista! Reinventing Revolution in México, London: Pluto Press.
- Mentinis, M. (2006) Zapatistas: The Chiapas Revolt and What It Means for Radical Politics. London: Pluto Press.
- Montemayor, C. (1998) Chiapas, la rebelión indígena de México. Mexico: Aceves.
- Muñoz Ramírez, G. (2008) The Fire and the Word: A History of the Zapatista Movement. San Francisco: City Lights.
- Olesen, T. (2005) International Zapatismo. London: Zed Books.
- Rovira, G. (1995) Mujeres de maíz. Barcelona: Virus.
- Shannon Speed, R., Hernández Castillo, A., & Stephen, L. M. (Eds.) (2006) Dissident Women: Gender and Cultural Politics in Chiapas. Austin: University of Texas Press.
- Vanden Berghe, K. (2005) Narrativa de la rebelión zapatista. Los relatos del Subcomandante Marcos. Madrid: Iberoamericana.
- Vázquez Montalbán, M. (1999) Marcos el señor de los espejos. Barcelona: Paidós.

Zasulich, Vera (1849–1919)

Pavla Vesela

Vera Ivanovna Zasulich is remembered primarily for her 1878 attempt to assassinate the governor of St. Petersburg, General Fyodor F. Trepov, and for her subsequent trial. Zasulich went on to become an important figure in the Russian exile community, where she joined efforts to foment revolution from abroad. Although Zasulich's writings never attained the profound influence of her contemporaries Vladimir Lenin, Georgi Plekhanov, or Julius Martov, she was an exceptionally skilled propagandist and organizer and a crucial figure in the formation of Russian Marxism.

Zasulich was born into a family of impoverished nobles on July 27, 1849 in the Gzhatsk district of Smolensk Province. Her father died when Vera Ivanovna was three years old, and her mother, unable to support the family, sent Vera and her two sisters to live with affluent relatives in nearby Biakolovo. After finishing high school in the late 1860s, Zasulich moved to St. Petersburg, where she worked as a clerk and became actively involved in the Russian populist movement, beginning a life in hiding, prison, and exile. She taught evening literacy classes for workers, distributed propaganda, and met with Sergey Nechayev, which resulted in her first imprisonment in 1869. Later, in Kiev, she worked for the anarchist supporters of Mikhail Bakunin.

In 1878, in revenge for the beating of a political prisoner, Zasulich shot and wounded Trepov. She was charged with attempted murder and subject to a widely publicized trial. Her surprising acquittal, as Samuel Kucherov demonstrates, was a symbolic condemnation of the regime, expressing the dissatisfaction of the Russian people toward the government. Zasulich left Russia for Switzerland, and in exile experienced a vital intellectual turn from populism to Marxism. She began to work with Plekhanov, and helped found the first Russian Marxist organization, the Emancipation of Labor Group, in 1883. Later, she assumed a prominent role in the Russian Social Democratic Labor Party (RSDLP). She corresponded with Marx and translated a number of his works from German into Russian, became a member of the editorial board of the Marxist newspaper Iskra, and published work of her own, including the article "Revolutionaries from the Bourgeois Milieu," a study of Voltaire. Her history of the First International was influential in underground communist and leftist circles of the 1890s. Zasulich's works from this era illustrate her conviction in the proletariat's morality, solidarity, cooperation, altruism, unity, and fundamental social power and prominence.

Following the Second Party Congress in 1903, after which RSDLP emerged divided, Zasulich supported the Mensheviks. Returning to Russia after the 1905 Revolution, Zasulich participated actively in politics, though the articles she wrote continued to defend her vision of a mass workers' movement. In 1917 Zasulich opposed the Bolshevik Revolution, considering it premature. She died in 1919.

Jay Bergman, her biographer, portrays Zasulich as a homeless and solitary being subject to bouts of depression and anxiety, who looked for consolation in mass movements and ideologies – first populism and then Marxism. However, delayed research and publication of a number of Zasulich's writings indicate that, despite her idiosyncrasies, her altruism led her to become an important contributor to Marxism in Russia.

SEE ALSO: Bolsheviks; Decembrists to the Rise of Russian Marxism; Lenin, Vladimir Ilyich (1870–1924); Martov, Julius (1873–1923); Marx, Karl (1818–1883); Plekhanov, Georgi (1856–1918); Russia, Revolution of 1905–1907; Russia, Revolution of February/March 1917; Russia, Revolution of October/November 1917; Women in the Russian Revolution

References and Suggested Readings

- Bergman, J. (1983) Vera Zasulich: A Biography. Stanford: Stanford University Press.
- Engel, B. A. (1983) Mothers and Daughters: Women of the Intelligentsia in Nineteenth-Century Russia. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- Kucherov, S. (1952) The Case of Vera Zasulich. Russian Review 11, 2 (April): 86–96.

Zenroren Labor Federation

Keisuke Fuse

Zenroren, the National Trade Union Confederation of Japan, is the second-largest labor federation in Japan, and the most militant class-based federation in the country. Formed in November 1989, Zenroren's roots emerged from leftist unions in the prewar era. In 1950 all communist-influenced labor unions were effectively banned in the red purge. Japan unions affiliated with Sohyo, a major federation formed in 1950, disbanded in 1989. Zambetsu Federation (Japan Council of Industrial Labor Unions), affiliated with the Japanese Communist Party, broke away and joined Sohyo, which embraced an anti-communist ideology, similar to the US union federations. The breakup of Sohyo created three federations: Rengo (center-left), Zenroren (left), and Zenroyko (independent left).

As the largest leftist labor federation in Japan, since 1989 Zenroren has actively advanced global labor solidarity, peace movements, and opposition to neoliberal free-market policies. As Japan's labor unions primarily represent members on a factory level, as opposed to an industrial basis, political action has become a significant activity of labor unions. Headquartered in Tokyo, as of 2007 Zenroren represented some 1.23 million workers, consisting of 22 industrial unions, and 47 prefectural federations. The federation primarily represents public service workers in central and local government, teachers, and medical workers.

Rengo, a moderate federation of some 8 million members, is not as militant as Zenroren, but the union is opposed to the imposition of labor laws favorable to business, and global neoliberal policies that infringe on workers' wages, and supports advancing labor solidarity with labor federations abroad. Moreover, individual unions within the Rengo federation maintain a range of political perspectives. Zenrokyo, a smaller federation, represents some 500,000 workers, including workers in community based unions.

Zenroren maintains the three principles of its Action Program: (1) independent from capital, (2) independent from political party, and (3) pursuing united action based on workers' common demands. The Japanese government has excluded Zenroren from tripartite structures such as the Central Labor Commission and all Policy Boards of central governments. Zenroren demands fair and decent treatment for itself and other independent trade unions.

At its 22nd Statutory Convention held in July 2006, Zenroren launched a campaign called "Another Japan" with the following three objectives: (1) to prevent Japan from waging war and taking part in any war; (2) to establish rules of work, redress the growing social gap, and reduce poverty; (3) to work to create safe and secure local communities. In addition, Zenroren announced that it would take up the challenge of building large-scale trade union joint action and strengthen its ranks to achieve a "2 million member-strong Zenroren."

Zenroren is active in international grassroots and issue-based solidarity with many progressive unions in the world, even though it is independent from any international trade union organization.

SEE ALSO: Japan, Community Labor Union Movement; Japan, Labor Protest, 1945–Present; Japan, Post-World War II Protest Movements; Sohyo

References and Suggested Readings

- Apter, D. E. & Sawa, N. (1984) Against the State: Politics and Social Protest in Japan. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press.
- Aspinall, R. W. (2001) Teachers' Unions and the Politics of Education in Japan. Albany: State University of New York Press.
- Kume, I. (1998) Disparaged Success: Labor Politics in Postwar Japan. Ithaca: Cornell University Press.

Zetkin, Clara (1857–1933)

Alex Zukas

Clara Zetkin, née Eißner, was the most prominent German socialist of her generation to take the concerns and issues of women's oppression seriously in her theoretical and practical work. Born in Wiederau, a small weavers' village in the industrialized kingdom of Saxony where her father Gottfried taught school, she saw first hand the oppressive working conditions of industrial capitalism for men and women. In 1872 the Eißner family moved to Leipzig, a seedbed of the German feminist and socialist movements. Through her mother Josephine, Clara met leaders of the German feminist movement. Graduating with honors in 1878, she had already become attracted to Marxist revolutionary socialism, in part due to the influence of the Russian revolutionary Ossip Zetkin (1848–89), who lived in Leipzig and with whom she fell in love. Ossip Zetkin was expelled from Germany under the Anti-Socialist Laws in 1880 and Clara Eißner joined him in Paris in 1882 where they worked tirelessly in the international socialist movement. They had two sons and she assumed his surname while choosing to remain unmarried to retain her German citizenship.

In 1889, the year Ossip died, Clara Zetkin helped organize the inaugural meeting in Paris of the Second International from which she emerged as the foremost female leader of the German and European socialist movement after giving a speech arguing that women's emancipation required a revolutionary transformation of society, and this change could only be fully realized by socialism. After the lapse of the Anti-Socialist Laws in 1890, Zetkin returned to Germany where she organized the socialist women's movement and became chief editor of the socialist periodical for women, Die Gleichheit (Equality), in 1892. Like all German women, Zetkin was forbidden by law from direct membership in a political party until 1908. She was active in women's auxiliary movements of the Social Democratic Party (SPD) and in socialist trade unions in the decades before World War I and spoke at party conferences. She served as a member of the party's arbitration tribunal from 1895 to 1914 and was instrumental in establishing the annually celebrated International Women's Day beginning March 8, 1911.

A Marxist internationalist, Zetkin belonged to the revolutionary wing of the SPD and was highly critical of the party's reformist male leadership. When the parliamentary SPD authorized German war loans on August 4, 1914, Zetkin and fellow radicals Rosa Luxemburg (1870–1919), Franz Mehring (1846–1919), and Karl Liebknecht (1871–1919) protested publicly that authorization as well as the Burgfrieden (political truce) to which all German parties committed themselves. In March 1915 she convened an International Conference of Socialist Women in Bern, Switzerland that denounced World War I as a capitalist, imperialist conflict. A co-founder of the Spartacist League in 1916, she was removed as editor of Die Gleichheit in 1917 due to her continued criticism of the SPD leadership. She left the SPD that year to join the anti-war Independent Social Democratic Party (USPD). Zetkin supported the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 and joined the German Communist Party (KPD) in early 1919.

She was elected to the German parliament (Reichstag) as a KPD representative in 1920 and remained in parliament until 1933. Zetkin organized a communist women's movement and continued to emphasize the importance of women to revolutionary struggles. A member of the KPD Central Committee from 1919 to 1924 and the Executive Committee of the Communist International from 1921 to 1933, Zetkin moved to Moscow in 1924 due to deteriorating health and only returned to Germany to attend Reichstag sessions. An opponent of Stalin, she became politically isolated after Lenin's death in 1924 even as she continued to be publicly honored by the communist establishment in the Soviet Union. Zetkin died in Moscow in June 1933 and her body was placed in the Kremlin wall. As a socialist theoretician and activist who believed in full human emancipation for both working men and women, Clara Zetkin held that only revolutionary social change and internationalism could achieve that emancipation.

SEE ALSO: German Revolution, 1918–1923; International Women's Day; Internationals; Leninist Philosophy; Liebknecht, Karl (1871–1919); Luxemburg, Rosa (1870–1919); Marxism; Social Democratic Party, Germany; Socialism; Women in the Russian Revolution

References and Suggested Readings

- Badia, G. (1994) Clara Zetkin: Eine neue Biographie. Berlin: Dietz.
- Boxer, M. J. & Quataert, J. H. (Eds.) (1978) Socialist Women: European Socialist Feminism in the Nineteenth and Early Twentieth Centuries. New York: Elsevier.
- Dornemann, L. (1989) Clara Zetkin: Leben und Wirken, 9th ed. Berlin: Dietz.
- Evans, R. J. (1982) Theory and Practice in German Social Democracy, 1880–1914: Clara Zetkin and the Socialist Theory of Women's Emancipation. History of Political Thought (Summer): 285–304.
- Honeycut, K. (1976) Clara Zetkin: A Socialist Approach to the Problem of Women's Oppression. Feminist Studies 3, 3/4 (Spring/Summer): 131–44.
- Pore, R. (1981) A Conflict of Interest: Women in German Social Democracy, 1919–1933. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press.
- Quataert, J. H. (1979) Reluctant Feminists in German Social Democracy, 1885–1917. Princeton: Princeton University Press.
- Zetkin, C. (1984) Selected Writings. Ed. P. S. Foner. New York: International Publishers.

Zhang Guotao (1897–1979)

Alexander V. Pantsov

Zhang Guotao was an important early leader of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP). He was born in Pingxiang County, Jiangxi Province, in 1897. He studied at Beijing University and took part in the May 4th movement in 1919, a sustained anti-imperialist mass mobilization that aimed at combating Japan's occupation of Chinese territories and the West's collusion with that occupation. It also opposed the reactionary Beijing warlord regime that had failed to resist Japan's encroachments. In 1920 Zhang joined the Beijing communist nucleus. In July–August 1921 he served as chair of the First Congress of the Chinese Communist Party, and was elected to membership of the CCP Central Bureau in charge of organizational activity.

In August 1921 Zhang became head of the Secretariat of the Chinese Labor Unions. From January through February 1922 he headed the CCP delegation to the Congress of Far Eastern Peoples in Moscow and Petrograd. While in Moscow he was received, together with Deng Pei, Guomindang (Nationalist Party) member Zhang Qiubai, and a Korean delegate to the Congress, by Lenin himself. After the congress, Zhang returned to China at the end of February 1922. In July, at the Second Congress of the CCP, he was elected a member of the party's Central Executive Committee (CEC). He was one of the leaders of the famous Beijing–Hankou railroad workers' strike on February 7, 1923. In late February 1923 he again traveled to Moscow to brief the Executive Committee of the Comintern (ECCI) and the Profintern (the "Red International of Labor Unions") on the February 7th strike. On March 12–23, 1923 he attended the Third Enlarged Plenum of the ECCI and made a speech on the China question. He returned to China at the end of April.

In June 1923, at the Third Congress of the CCP, Zhang was not reelected to the CCP Central Committee because he opposed Stalin's policy requiring the CCP to form an alliance with the Guomindang (Nationalist Party). The same year, however, he joined the Guomindang. Then in January 1924 he was again elected to membership on the CCP CEC. He was also elected a member of the CCP Central Bureau and became head of the Workers' and Peasants' Department of the CEC, as well as secretary of the CEC Labor Movement Commission. In October 1926 he was appointed a CCP CEC representative in Hubei province and in December became secretary of the Hubei Provincial CCP Committee. In May 1927 he was elected to membership in the CCP CC Politburo.

After the Communist defeat at the hands of Chiang Kai-Shek's Guomindang forces in 1927, Zhang briefly headed the Standing Committee of the CCP CC Provisional Politburo that was organized on July 12, 1927. At the August 7 Conference of party leadership he was elected an alternate member of the CCP Provisional CC Politburo. In June 1928 he went to Moscow again to attend the Sixth Congress of the CCP, and was once again elected to membership in the Politburo. Following the congress, he stayed on in Moscow as a member of the newly organized CCP delegation to the ECCI, and along with Qu Qiubai represented the CCP in the ECCI. In July–September 1928 he attended the Sixth World Congress of the Comintern with full voting rights, and served as a member of the Program Commission. The congress elected him an alternate member of the ECCI, and the ECCI Plenum promoted him to alternate member of the ECCI Presidium. In 1929–30 he studied at the International Lenin School (MLSh).

During his stay in the Soviet Union Zhang actively participated in exposing and severely repressing the clandestine Chinese Trotskyist organization in the Soviet international schools, cooperating closely in this activity with Stalin's secret police and the International Control Commission of the Comintern. At the same time he was involved in the factional struggle among Chinese students at Sun Yat-Sen University, in which one group of students opposed the dictatorial leadership over the student community of Wang Ming, who was supported by the university rector, Pavel Mif. Unlike most members of the CCP delegation who backed the anti-Wang Ming student group, Zhang equivocated. Nevertheless, during the ECCI purge of foreign communists in the Soviet Union that took place in late 1929 and early 1930, some students at the Communist University of the Toilers of China (KUTK) accused Zhang of being a supporter of the Trotskyists. He was endorsed by the ECCI, however. The spring 1930 ECCI secret resolution concerning the "mistakes" of the CCP delegation mentioned Zhang as one of the "minority" of the CCP delegation that had opposed the majority's incorrect views, although not from the very beginning of the contest. After the departure of Qu Qiubai and Zhou Enlai for China in July 1930, Zhang remained an official representative of the CCP Central Committee to the ECCI. He attended the meeting of the ECCI Presidium regarding the extreme-leftist "Li Lisan line" in December of 1930 as a member of the CCP delegation.

In April 1931 Zhang returned to China and in May became secretary of the Hubei-Henan-Anhui Soviet Region CCP Bureau, and the chairman of the regional military committee. In November 1931 he was elected deputy chairman of the Chinese Soviet Government. In 1935, during the Long March, he was appointed general political commissar of the Red Army, but he split with the majority of the CCP CC leadership and led his troops to Xinjiang, where they were defeated by warlords. In August 1935 at the Seventh Congress of the Comintern he was elected to membership on the ECCI. He arrived in the CCP CC headquarters in Northern Shaanxi in July 1936 and was appointed secretary of the CCP CC Northwest Bureau. The following April he was elected deputy chairman (from August, executive chairman) of the government of the Shaanxi-Gansu-Ningxia border region.

Due to personal differences with Mao Zedong, in April 1938 Zhang left for the Guomindang headquarters in Wuhan and broke relations with the Chinese communist movement. He was expelled from the party on April 18, 1938. In late 1948 he fled the mainland to Taiwan and at the end of 1949 moved to Hong Kong. He moved to Canada in 1968, where he spent the last decade of his life, and died in Toronto on December 3, 1979.

SEE ALSO: China, Maoism and Popular Power, 1949–1969; China, May 4th Movement; China, Student Protests, 20th Century; Chinese Communist Revolution, 1925–1949; Lenin, Vladimir Ilyich (1870–1924); Mao Zedong (1893–1976); Zhou Enlai (1898–1976)

References and Suggested Readings

- Chang Kuo-t'ao, F. (1971) The Rise of the Chinese Communist Party: 1921–1927, 2 vols. Lawrence: University of Kansas Press.
- Dangshi yanjiu ziliao* (1982) (Study Materials on Party History), Vol. 3 Chengdu: Sichuan renmin chubanshe.
- Liao Gailong et al. (Eds.) (2001) Zhongguo gongchandang lishi dacidian. Zonglun. Renwu (Big Historical Dictionary of the Chinese Communist Party. General Part. Personalities). Enlarged and revised ed. Beijing: Zhonggong zhongyang dangxiao chubanshe.
- Xiang Qing (1985) Gongchan goji yu Zhongguo geming guanxi lunwenji (Collection of Articles on the Relationship between the Comintern and the Chinese Revolution). Shanghai: Shanghai renmin chubanshe.

Zhang Wentian (1900–1976)

Alexander V. Pantsov

Zhang Wentian, whose real name was Zhang Ying, was an important early leader of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP). He was born in Nanhui County, now a part of Shanghai, Jiangsu Province, on August 30, 1900. He studied at the Nanjing Engineering Institute. In 1919 he took part in the May 4th movement, a sustained anti-imperialist mass mobilization that aimed at combating Japan's occupation of Chinese territories and the West's collusion with that occupation. It also opposed the reactionary Beijing warlord regime that had failed to resist Japan's encroachments. The movement began in Beijing but soon involved hundreds of thousands of young patriots throughout the country. Around this time Zhang joined Shaonian Zhongguo (Young China), a patriotic society. He went abroad to study in the United States and then returned to China.

Zhang joined the CCP in 1925, and that fall went to Moscow where he enrolled as a student at Sun Yat-Sen University of the Toilers of China (UTK). He graduated two years later, but stayed on at UTK as an instructor and translator. In September 1928 he entered the Institute of Red Professors (IKP). Between 1928 and 1930 he also taught at the Communist University of the Toilers of China (KUTK) and worked in the Eastern Department of the Executive Committee of the Comintern (ECCI). He returned to China in 1930 and was appointed head of the Propaganda Department of the party's Central Committee (CCP CC). In January 1931 he was elected to membership in the Politburo. Early in 1933 he went to the Central Soviet Region and became head of the Propaganda Department of the CCP CC bureau. He was reelected to the Politburo in January 1934 and became secretary of the CC Secretariat.

In February 1935, during the Long March, Zhang was elected to the executive post of general secretary of the CCP CC. In the fall of 1938 he yielded the leading position in the CCP CC Secretariat to Mao Zedong, and took the position of secretary and head of the Propaganda Department of the CCP CC. From 1937 to 1941 he was also editor-in-chief of the CCP CC magazine Jiefang zhoukan (Liberation Weekly). From May 1938 to 1941 he was also head of the CCP CC Institute of Marxism-Leninism. At the Seventh Party Congress in June 1945 he was once again reelected to the Politburo. During the Civil War of 1946–9 Zhang headed the Organization Department of the CCP CC Northeast Bureau and served as secretary of the Liaoning Provincial CCP Committee.

In 1951 Zhang was sent to Moscow as the People's Republic of China (PRC) ambassador. He returned to China in 1955 and was appointed first deputy foreign minister. At the Eighth Party Congress in September 1956 he was elected an alternate member of the Politburo. In 1959 he joined Peng Dehuai, minister of defense, in criticizing Mao Zedong's Great Leap Forward policy, and was consequently dismissed from all his party and government positions. After that he worked as a research fellow at the Institute of Economy of the PRC Academy of Sciences. Persecuted during the Cultural Revolution, Zhang died in disgrace in Wuxi on July 1, 1976, but two years later was posthumously rehabilitated.

SEE ALSO: China, Maoism and Popular Power, 1949–1969; China, May 4th Movement; China, Student Protests, 20th Century; Chinese Communist Revolution, 1925–1949; Mao Zedong (1893–1976); Peng Dehuai (1898–1974)

References and Suggested Readings

- Deng Liqun (Ed.) (1994) Zhonggong dangshi renwu zhuan (Biographies of the Chinese Communist Party History Activists), Vol. 52. Xian: Shanxi renmin chubanshe.
- Liao Gailong et al. (Eds.) (2001) Zhongguo gongchandang lishi dacidian. Zonglun. Renwu (Big Historical Dictionary of the Chinese Communist Party. General Part. Personalities). Beijing: Zhonggong zhongyang dangxiao chubanshe.

Zhou Enlai (1898–1976)

Alexander V. Pantsov

Zhou Enlai, born in Huaian County, Jiangsu, on March 5, 1898, was a leading figure in the Chinese Communist Party and Revolution of 1949. He enrolled in Nankai University in Tianjin in 1913. He went to study in Japan in 1917, and returned in 1919 in time to take part in the May 4th movement, an anti-imperialist sustained mass mobilization that aimed at combating Japan's occupation of Chinese territories and the West's collusion with that occupation. It also opposed the conservative Beijing warlord regime that had failed to resist Japan's encroachments. Originating in Beijing, hundreds of thousands of Chinese youth throughout the nation joined the May 4th movement.

In 1919 Zhou founded Juemu she (Awakening), a patriotic society, in Tianjin. In 1920 he traveled to France to participate in a work study program. He was one of 18 young Chinese in France who, in June 1922, organized the Communist Party of Chinese Youth in Europe (CPCYE), and he was elected head of the Propaganda Department of its Executive Committee. When the CPCYE was renamed the European branch of the Chinese Socialist Youth League in October 1922, Zhou became its secretary. In February 1923 its name was changed again, to the European branch of the Chinese Communist Party, and Zhou remained a member of its leadership. Between 1923 and 1927 he was also a member of the Guomindang (Nationalist Party).

In August 1924 Zhou returned to China and became head of the Guangdong and Guangxi United CCP Committee and head of the Political Department at the Whampoa Military Academy, a Guomindang school for training officer cadre for their National Revolutionary Army (NRA). Shao Lizi replaced him in that latter position in July 1925, and Zhou was appointed head of the Political Department in the 1st Corps of the NRA. After the March 20 incident of 1926 (Chiang Kai-shek's bloodless coup d'état in Canton), he was dismissed from this position, but in May was made head of the Advanced Political Courses at Canton. In the winter of 1926 he moved to Shanghai where he served as secretary of the Military Department of the Chinese Communist Party's Central Committee (CCP CC), and as secretary of the Military Commission of the Jiangsu-Zhejiang Regional CCP Committee. He became a member of the CCP CC in May 1927, and on July 12 a member of the Standing Committee of the CCP CC Provisional Politburo. After the communist defeat by Chiang Kai-shek's Guomindang forces in the spring and early summer of 1927, he was one of the leaders of the anti-Guomindang August 1 uprising in the National Revolutionary Army in Nanchang.

In the first half of 1928 Zhou traveled to Moscow to attend the Sixth Congress of the CCP. He was a member of the CCP CC Politburo from July 1928. In July–September 1928 he attended the Sixth World Congress of the Comintern with full voting rights, and was elected an alternate member of the Comintern’s Executive Committee (ECCI). He returned to China after the congress and was appointed head of the CCP CC Organization Department and secretary of its Military Commission. In April 1930 he traveled to the Soviet Union again as head of the CCP delegation to the ECCI and in June he attended the Sixteenth Congress of the Soviet Communist Party. The following month he took part in the Comintern’s discussion on the Chinese question concerning the extreme leftist “Li Lisan line.” He returned to China in the summer of 1930, and together with Qu Qiubai followed ECCI instructions to convene the Third Plenum of the CC that exposed Li Lisan’s “mistakes.” As of January 1931, he, Lu Fudan, and Wang Ming constituted a three-man party leadership.

In December 1931 Zhou moved to the Central Soviet Region, and became secretary of the region’s CCP CC Bureau, as well as general political commissar of the Red Army and political commissar of the Red Army 1st Corps. In 1934–5 he took part in the Long March. At the CCP leadership conference in January 1935, he was blamed for the communists’ defeat in Eastern China and dismissed from office. Following the conference he served as deputy chairman of the CCP CC Military Revolutionary Council. He was elected in absentia to membership on ECCI at the Seventh World Congress of the Comintern in August 1935. In 1936–7 he took part in negotiations with Chiang Kai-shek’s Guomintang concerning the organization of an anti-Japanese united front. In December 1937 he was appointed head of the CCP CC Changjiang (Yangzi) Bureau Propaganda Department at Wuhan. After the liquidation of the Changjiang Bureau, in November 1938 he became secretary of the CCP CC Southern Bureau at Chongqing.

At the end of August 1939, along with his wife, Deng Yingchao, he went to the Soviet Union again for medical treatment. On December 29 he delivered a report at a secret meeting of the ECCI Presidium concerning the situation in China. In it, he raised the question of whether the CCP CC should abandon the tactics of the united front since the Guomintang was following a policy of persecuting the communists. He returned to China in March 1940 bearing the ECCI Presidium’s decision to continue the current united front policy and carrying $300,000 in financial subsidies. On his return he resumed the post of deputy chairman of the CCP CC Revolutionary Military Committee and secretary of the CCP CC Southern Bureau. In August 1943 he transferred to CCP CC headquarters in Yan’an, Shaanxi province. At the Seventh Party Congress in June 1945 he was elected secretary of the CCP CC secretariat. He participated in the peace negotiations with the Guomintang and US envoy General George C. Marshall in 1946. During the civil war of 1946–9 he was head of the general staff of the People’s Liberation Army.

After the communist victory in 1949, Zhou served from that year until his death as premier of the State Council. At the Eighth Party Congress in September 1956 he was elected deputy chairman of the CCP CC, and was a member of the Standing Committee of the Politburo. He died in Beijing on January 8, 1976.

SEE ALSO: China, May 4th Movement; China, Student Protests, 20th Century; Chinese Communist Revolution, 1925–1949; Mao Zedong (1893–1976)

References and Suggested Readings

- Ci hai: Lishi fence: Zhongguo xiandai shi* (Ci Hai Dictionary: History Section: Chinese Contemporary History) (1984) Shanghai: Shanghai cishu chubanshe, pp. 229–31.
- Dangshi yanjiu ziliao* (Study Materials on Party History), Vol. 2, 2nd ed. (1982) Chengdu: Sichuan renmin chubanshe, p. 797.
- Liu Wusheng (Ed.) (1998) Zhou Enlai da cidian (The Dictionary on Zhou Enlai). Nanchang: Jiangxi renmin chubanshe.
- Xiang Qing (1985) Gongchan goji yu Zhongguo geming guanxi lunwenji (Collection of Articles on the Relationship between the Comintern and the Chinese Revolution). Shanghai: Shanghai renmin chubanshe, pp. 353–93.

Zhu De (1886–1976)

Alexander V. Pantsov

Zhu De, whose real name was Zhu Daizhen, was one of the principal military leaders of the Chinese Revolution of 1949. He is commonly credited with having founded the Red Army (precursor of the People’s Liberation Army) in the prerevolutionary period.

Zhu was born in Yilong County, Sichuan Province, on December 1, 1886 and was a graduate of the Yunnan Infantry School. As a young man in 1909 he joined Sun Yat-Sen's Revolutionary Alliance. He participated in both the anti-monarchy Xinhai Revolution of 1911–12 and the movement to oppose Yuan Shikai's imperial aspirations in 1915. After the October Revolution of 1917 in Russia, Zhu went to study in Germany. In 1922 he joined the Chinese Communist Party (CCP). In July 1925 he was expelled from Germany and went to Moscow to study at the Communist University of the Toilers of the East (KUTV). Subsequently, he transferred to a secret military training school. He returned to China in the summer of 1926 and participated in the Northern Expedition of the Guomindang National Revolutionary Army (NRA). Following the Communist defeat by Chiang Kai-Shek's Guomindang forces in the late spring and early summer of 1927, he participated in the anti-Guomindang August 1 uprising in the NRA in Nanchang. After the uprising was suppressed, in early 1928 he led his troops to the mountainous region of Jingganshan where he joined up with Mao Zedong's peasant forces. He was co-founder of the first Soviet region in China, and became commander of the Red Army 4th Corps.

In June 1930 he was appointed commander of the Red Army 1st Army Group (renamed the Red Army First Front in August). In September 1930 he became an alternate member of the Party's Central Committee (CCP CC). He became chairman of the Central Revolutionary Military Council and People's Commissar of Military Affairs in November 1931. In January 1934 he was made an alternate member of the Politburo and the following month he was elected a member of the Presidium of the Chinese Soviet government. In 1934–5 he was one of the leaders of the Long March. He was promoted to full membership in the Politburo in January 1935, and in June he became commander-in-chief of the Red Army. During the Sino-Japanese war of 1937–45, Zhu De was commander of the Communist 8th Route Army and deputy chairman of the CCP CC Military Revolutionary Council. At the Seventh Party Congress in May 1945 he was reelected to the Politburo and made a secretary of the CC Secretariat. During the Civil War of 1946–9 he served as commander-in-chief of the People's Liberation Army.

Following the Communist victory in 1949 he became deputy chairman of the Central People's Government. In 1954 he was elected deputy chairman of the People's Republic of China and deputy chairman of the Defense Council. From November 1949 through May 1955 he was secretary of the CCP CC Discipline Commission. In September 1958 he was elected deputy chairman of the CCP CC. In 1959 he became chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress (NPC). At the Tenth Party Congress in August 1973 he became a member of the Politburo Standing Committee. He died in Beijing on July 6, 1976 at the age of 90.

SEE ALSO: China, Maoism and Popular Power, 1949–1969; Chinese Communist Revolution, 1925–1949; Mao Zedong (1893–1976); Russia, Revolution of October/November 1917

References and Suggested Readings

- Ci hai: Lishi fence: Zhongguo xiandai shi* (Dictionary Ci Hai. History Part. Chinese Contemporary History) (1984) Shanghai: Shanghai cishu chubanshe.
- Dangshi yanjiu ziliao* (Study Materials on Party History) (1982) Vol. 2, 2nd Ed. Chengdu: Sichuan renmin chubanshe.
- Wang Yongjun et al. (1986) Zhongguo xiandai shi renwu zhuan (Biographies of Chinese Contemporary History Activists). Chengdu: Sichuan renmin chubanshe.

Zimbabwe, labor movement, 1890–1980

Timothy Scarnecchia

The very foundation of Southern Rhodesia, first as the province of the British South Africa Company (BSAC) and then after 1923 as a white settler-controlled British crown colony, established a privileged position for white workers in relation to African workers. The failure of the BSAC to find large and profitable mining prospects in Southern Rhodesia – as compared to Northern Rhodesia's copper belt and the gold and diamonds of South Africa – meant that the landlocked colony would look to agriculture as its primary asset, along with capital-intensive gold mining, and a large deposit of coal at Wankie. In order to satisfy the interests of white farmers, industrialists, and mining companies, the Southern Rhodesian government instituted a regime of laws and regulations used to recruit labor – often forced labor – and to maintain strict controls on terms of employment and wages.

Charles van Onselen has written about this system – known in the local ChiShona language as chibaro, or slave labor – and the high toll it took on the first generations of Africans employed in Rhodesian farms, mines, and towns. Van Onselen has also criticized the academic writings of those who tried to fit the African labor experience into a narrative of development. Rather than conceptualizing the history of African labor in Southern Rhodesia as a search for unity and formal labor organization, van Onselen believes the violent nature of the labor system in Southern Rhodesia, and the state's extensive investment in maintaining cheap labor, overrides conventional narratives of working-class history (van Onselen 1975). Much of the wealth of the colony would come from supplying goods and services to Northern Rhodesia and South Africa, a pattern which would later result in strong industrialization after World War II. The first trade unions therefore developed around rail transport and mining, as the railways linked the economies of Southern and Central Africa to the world, and the gold and coal mining industries required relatively large numbers of skilled and unskilled laborers early on (Phimister 1994; Lunn 1997).

The first attempts at organization by white railway workers in Southern Rhodesia in 1911–1912 were crushed by the railway authorities. It was only after World War I that the Rhodesian Railway Workers' Union (RRWU) was formed, in October 1917. The RRWU's leader, Jack Keller, the RRWU's president, dominated the railway union from 1920 until the early 1940s (Lunn 1997: 93). In 1919, the white mine workers formed the Rhodesian Mine and General Workers' Association (RMGWA). The RRWU and the RMGWA held a series of successful strikes in 1919 and early 1920, which led to sizable wage increases and an eight-hour day for white workers.

The Southern Rhodesian government and industrialists worked together to defend against the unified effort of trade unions in different key sectors after 1920, first by designing the Industrial Disputes Act of 1920, which gave the state a mediating role between labor and employers, while allowing “individual industries to set up their own structures of arbitration” (Lunn 1997: 94). The mining and railway authorities also worked to divide the white trade unions by supporting their own Amalgamated Engineers' Union (AEU). The AEU was instrumental in making sure that the RRWU and the RMGWA were incapable of creating a “closed shop” union structure, therefore giving employers the ability to challenge strike actions and break the unity of white labor.

Following a failed RRWU strike in 1929 and the economic depression of the early 1930s, railway management removed the more radical trade unionists. Facing a weakened position, the RRWU became more cooperative with management, and increasingly involved in preserving skilled and semi-skilled jobs for whites. The 1934 Industrial Conciliation Act (ICA) was an important step in protecting the “color bar” in wages and job classifications. The ICA required the establishment of industrial councils, and, most importantly, required the designation of one registered trade union to represent workers in each industry, therefore restricting Africans from forming official unions in those industries where a white trade union was already recognized by the ICA. The act was also explicit in its definition of workers covered by the ICA, as it did not originally include African workers as “workers” with rights to collective bargaining.

African Workers and the Labor Movement

The chronology of African organized labor is similar to that of white labor. The aftermath of World War I and the 1918 influenza epidemic, as van Onselen and Phimister argue, created conditions that allowed African workers to carry out strike actions in the mines and on the railways (Raftopolous & Phimister 1997). Tsuneo Yoshikuni (1989) has shown how both African railway workers and municipal workers in Bulawayo and Salisbury were able to gain pay increases in strike actions during 1919 and 1920.

In the late 1920s, as Terence Ranger has shown, although there were no official African trade unions in the mines, there were organizations such as the Beni dance societies and the Watch Tower movement that allowed African miners to organize themselves into concerted action against their extreme forms of exploitation. In 1927, for example, African workers went on strike at the Shamva mines. It was generally believed that members of the Watch Tower movement were behind the strike. The strike was put down relatively easily, by deportations of the more radical foreign workers, but the ability of African workers to organize themselves to withhold their labor power surprised many employers (Ranger 1970: 142, 147). It was in this radicalized environment at the end of the 1920s that the message of Clement Kadalie's Industrial and Commercial Workers' Union (ICU) began to make inroads with African workers in mines and in urban townships.

The ICU made its way into Southern Rhodesia during 1927, led by Clement Kadalie's talented representative Robert Sambo. Sambo managed to get the ICU up and running in Bulawayo but the authorities soon expelled him from the colony. As Ranger explains, there were three Rhodesian Africans who planted the roots of the ICU in Southern Rhodesia: "S. Mosoja Ndlovu, General Secretary of the ICU in 1929, Charles Mzingeli, [who] was organizing secretary in Salisbury, and . . . Job Dumbutshena, who was responsible for attempting to spread the movement to the mining towns and compounds" (Ranger 1970: 152). Although the ICU advocated trade unionism, the real strength of its message was a pan-African notion of race-pride that linked the mistreatment and segregation of African workers and residents throughout Southern Africa. Mzingeli and Ndlovu had some early successes in the towns, while Dumbutshena faced fierce resistance from mine managers and the police. An interesting influence on Mzingeli's early career with the ICU was a female community leader, Martha Ngano, who Mzingeli suggests helped to form the ICU and create the basis for African protest politics in Southern Rhodesia (West 2002: 128–9).

Mzingeli was not very successful in forming a strong trade union in Salisbury, but after World War II he established the Reformed ICU as a viable protest organization for township residents and workers. The main impetus for recognition of African trade unions came from the railway workers, who organized a successful strike in 1945. The African railway strike succeeded in opening the door to recognition of African workers "as workers." It would still take until the late 1950s, but the state and employers began to deal directly with African trade unions and their leaders in hopes of averting the numerous work slow-downs and strikes after World War II.

African workers managed to orchestrate a general strike in 1948, this time broadening the scope and breadth of working-class unity across a wide range of industries and cities. Both of these major strike actions were achieved with little in the way of national unity or strong trade union leadership, and subsequent attempts to sustain unity proved difficult. Given the severity of employer and state repression against African trade unions, the need for secrecy and covert planning may in fact help explain the lack of any specific political or trade union organization leadership during strike actions, especially in the 1948 general strike.

Opposition from employers and the state was not the only factor slowing down the creation of a national-level African trade union body. Leaders such as Charles Mzingeli in Salisbury and Benjamin Burombo in Bulawayo resisted any move to form a national organization, jealously guarding their own political organizations. Jasper Savanhu, for example, tried to create a national African trade union after the 1945 railway workers strike but soon met with intransigence from Mzingeli in particular. After the 1948 general strike, the Rhodesian state was nevertheless worried that more radical white trade unionists, socialists, and communists would work with African workers to establish more effective trade unions.

In the Cold War climate of 1950, the state introduced the Seditious Organization Act (1950), which, among other repressive measures, made it illegal for whites and Africans to work together in political and trade union organizations. It also, importantly, created the Special Branches division of the police who were granted powers to investigate suspected subversives and deport those who were not Rhodesian citizens. It also gave the police the power to use live ammunition against African workers during strikes and protests. Critics of the Seditious Organization Act were quick to point out that the laws were directed at African workers and trade unions, and not white workers and trade unions.

One of the key shifts in the late 1950s was the Southern Rhodesian government's actions to change the Industrial Conciliation Act in such a way that Africans could technically be recognized and given rights to collective bargaining. But the shift to a "non-racial" ICA in 1959 was accompanied by efforts to co-opt African workers under the existing recognized white trade union bargaining units. The impact of this in the key mining sector, where South African and British firms dominated the industry, was to strengthen the power of the white trade unions who used their power to maintain rigid job classifications that became de facto lines of discrimination.

Against such formidable laws and employer powers, African workers continued to organize themselves into more effective trade union organizations. One exception to this was the Waiters and Caterers' Union, established in 1938 by Shato Nyakauru in Salisbury. Another key exception was the railway workers who, given the regional coverage of the railways, were able to gain trade union recognition in the early 1950s because African railway workers in Northern Rhodesia had done so. The Federation of the Rhodesias and Nyasaland (1953–63) would soon open up the possibility for legal recognition of more African trade unions.

Trade Unions and Nationalism in the 1960s

The Federation period and the high profits it brought to Salisbury for building and industrial firms created an atmosphere where large firms sought a more conciliatory approach to African labor in the 1960s. Unfortunately, just as industrialists began to be interested and in a position to recognize African trade union demands in order to create a more stable and skilled industrial workforce, African nationalists began to fight over control of the Southern Rhodesia Trade Union Congress (SRTUC) led by Reuben Jamela.

The nationalist movement absorbed many of the trade union leaders, including Joshua Nkomo who started his career as a trade unionist with the railway workers and had led the SRTUC before taking the leadership position in the succession of nationalist organizations created after the previous organization was banned by the Southern Rhodesian state: the Southern African National Congress, the National Democratic Party (NDP), and the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU), respectively. In 1960, after many nationalists had been arrested and the NDP was under threat from the state, more radical elements in the NDP/ZAPU campaigned against Jamela's leadership in hopes of taking over the leadership of the SRTUC and also gaining access to the sizable foreign funding the SRTUC received from the United Kingdom and the United States. Jamela decided to fight back rather than relinquish control, leading to factional fighting in Harare and Bulawayo between the SRTUC and ZAPU in 1961. The trade union movement was officially divided between Jamela's SRTUC and Josiah Maluleke's SRATUC (Southern Rhodesian African Trade Union Congress) in 1962.

The difficulties of maintaining a coherent trade union congress soon became apparent, and the SRATUC had a failed strike in May of 1962. Jamela's earlier headway in gaining recognition for African workers under the ICA was weakened by this factionalism, however, and the decision by the nationalists to use general strikes as a political weapon left the African trade union membership vulnerable should such strikes fail. The early 1960s also started to see a rise in unemployment in Southern Rhodesia, after years of state-sponsored labor recruitment from neighboring states and the use of the overcrowded African reserves in Southern Rhodesia as sources of cheap labor.

Trade Unions after UDI

During the UDI (Unilateral Declaration of Independence) period, from 1965 until the late 1970s, the Rhodesian state continued to crack down on African trade unions. Actions were taken to weaken African trade unions by amending the ICA in 1967 to make it more difficult for trade unions to receive external support. In 1971, the ICA was again amended and this "gave the state the power to remove the right to strike if it was considered to be against the 'public interest'" (Raftopoulos & Phimister 1997: 92). A large number of key African trade union leaders were detained during these years. The gap between European and African wages continued to widen during UDI, as the white skilled-labor leadership of the key railway and mining trade unions bargained on behalf of all workers, while continuing to recognize the vast differences in pay structures for the various grades of workers.

The year 1975 marked a turning point in the liberation war which involved guerilla warfare on the part of the African nationalist forces that fought against Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front. The independence of the former Portuguese colony of Mozambique opened up an important front for the African military forces. As a result of increased access to Southern Rhodesia from Mozambique by the liberation forces, diplomatic efforts pushed Ian Smith to accept a more conciliatory attitude toward an eventual sharing of power with African nationalists. It was during this period that white trade unionists began to see the writing on the wall and thus began to negotiate more equitable multiracial trade union structures in order to protect themselves in a future Zimbabwe, where they would be in the minority and no longer be able to maintain their privileged protection, higher wage scales, and separate bargaining power (Raftopoulos & Phimister 1997: 102).

SEE ALSO: Mzingeli, Charles (1905–1980); Southern Africa, Popular Resistance to Neoliberalism, 1982–2007; Zimbabwe, Labor Movement and Politics, 1980–2007

References and Suggested Readings

- Lunn, J. (1997) Capital and Labour on the Rhodesian Railway System, 1888–1947. Oxford: Macmillan.
- Phimister, I. (1994) Wangi Kolia: Coal, Capital, and Labour in Colonial Zimbabwe, 1894–1954. Harare: Baobab Books.
- Raftopoulos, B. & Phimister, I. (Eds.) (1997) Keep on Knocking: A History of the Labour Movement in Zimbabwe, 1990–97. Harare: Baobab Books.
- Ranger, T. O. (1970) The African Voice in Southern Rhodesia, 1898–1930. Evanston: Northwestern University Press.
- Scarnecchia, T. (2008) The Urban Roots of Democracy and Political Violence in Zimbabwe: Harare and Highfield, 1940–1964. Rochester: Rochester University Press.
- van Onselen, C. (1975) Black Workers in Central African Industry: A Critical Essay on the Historiography and Sociology of Rhodesia. Journal of Southern African Studies 1 (2): 228–46.
- van Onselen, C. (1976) Chibaro: African Mine Labour in Southern Rhodesia, 1900–1933. London: Pluto Press.
- West, M. O. (2002) The Rise of an African Middle Class: Colonial Zimbabwe, 1898–1965. Bloomington: Indiana University Press.
- Yoshikuni, T. (1989) Strike Action and Self-Help Associations: Zimbabwean Worker Protest and Culture after World War I. Journal of Southern African Studies 15 (3): 440–68.

Zimbabwe, labor movement and politics, 1980–2007

Timothy Scarnecchia

As political scientist Eldred Masunungure concludes, Zimbabwe's ruling ZANU-PF party emerged in the 1980s in the confident expectation that the state-sponsored Zimbabwe Congress of Trade Unions (ZCTU) would continue its “dependence on the state for political patronage” (Masunungure 2004: 169), thus ensuring the trade union movement's loyalty to the state and ruling party. The nationalist party's dominance over trade unions was institutionalized after independence through the formation of the ZCTU on February 28, 1981, when 52 unions agreed to unify under the leadership of Alfred Mugabe, a relative of Zimbabwe's president, Robert Mugabe. Workers' rights improved during the formative period of independence, especially with the passage of the Labor Relations Act of 1985 repealing repressive elements of labor law, including the right to form or join labor unions. The 1985 Act, however, maintained the state's vertical union structure, permitting only one union in each industry (Madhuku, in Raftopoulos & Sachikonye 2001: 109).

The entwined relationship between ZCTU and the state lasted until 1988 when a new, more radical leadership within ZCTU “severed all ties with the ruling ZANU-PF” during an extraordinary congress. The new ZCTU secretary general, Morgan Tsvangarai, “accused the ruling party of being in an ideological crisis and of being insecure” (Masunungure 2004: 169). Tsvangarai was arrested in October 1989 for supporting students at the University of Zimbabwe. Tsvangarai's anti-ZANU-PF pronouncements led to his being charged with “attempting to bring about the downfall of Government through unconstitutional means . . . and that he was acting under external influences” (Masunungure 2004: 170). Such charges would become the hallmark of state tactics against the trade union movement and were reminiscent of tactics used in Southern Rhodesia.

Reforms of labor laws in 1992 officially removed the restriction on one union for each industry, but still gave power to the government to deregister unions if necessary. In addition, the government increased its role in collective bargaining and raised the barriers to strike action. As Madhuku comments, the post-1992 “law on strikes in Zimbabwe is ridiculous: it is almost impossible to have a legal strike owing to a number of restrictions,” as the definition of “essential services” was expanded to include “virtually every service,” and “there is no clear constitutional protection for a right to strike” (Madhuku, in Raftopoulos & Sachikonye 2001: 127).

By the mid-1990s, ZCTU began staging successful protests, strikes, and stayaways from work to protest government policies such as levies to pay war veterans' pensions and other regressive taxes. In addition, public sector workers successfully went on strike in the early to mid-1990s, including railway workers in 1992, postal and communications workers in 1992 and 1994, bank workers in 1993 and 1994, and a large civil service workers' strike in 1996. But as Sachikonye writes, these strikes "represented a last-ditch attempt by workers to obtain wage awards to mitigate the downward slide in their living standards" (Sachikonye 1997: 122). However, a successful national strike in December 1997 resulted in the withdrawal of the war veterans' pension levy.

Raftopoulos describes ZCTU's successes by 1998 as mostly from having "turned the concerns of the strikers into broad common-sense issues, gaining important hegemonic ground in the struggle against the state. However, the labor actions also showed the need for the ZCTU to extend its reach into the rural areas, small towns and mining centers" (Raftopoulos & Sachikonye 2001: 14). The successful ZCTU strike actions led to the Presidential Powers (Temporary Measures) (Labor Relations) Regulations of 1998, which "outlawed any concerted action by workers or employers whose purpose was (i) resisting any law or lawful measures of the Government, or (ii) inducing or compelling the Government to alter any law or lawful measures" (Madhuku, in Raftopoulos & Sachikonye 2001: 128).

Urban food riots and uprisings in Harare and Bulawayo in 1999 and 2000 added to growing public opposition to the ZANU-PF government's intransigence on a host of economic issues. In this atmosphere, ZCTU's leadership and members of the National Constitutional Assembly launched an opposition party, the Movement for Democratic Change (MDC), on September 11, 1999. Morgan Tsvangarai of ZCTU was named MDC's president. In view of the successful shift from a trade union congress to political party in Zambia, MDC sought to channel labor's discontents into those of the urban poor and unemployed to build a unified opposition to Robert Mugabe and his ZANU-PF government.

The defeat of a ZANU-PF referendum in February 2000 that was to give Mugabe increased executive powers was the first electoral loss ZANU-PF experienced since independence in 1980. Shifting strategies, Mugabe and his associates immediately began to support land invasions of white-owned farms and launched a violent campaign against the MDC before the June 2000 parliamentary elections. Such political violence led to "more than 30 people reportedly killed, mostly MDC members, and approximately 18,000 others were victims of a myriad of human rights violations" (Masunungure 2004: 178). In the June 2000 parliamentary elections, 12 trade unionists were elected as MDC candidates, representing 21 percent of all MDC parliamentarians.

The election of trade unionists to parliament initiated a debate over the future autonomy of ZCTU from MDC (Raftopoulos & Sachikonye 2001: 23). Nevertheless, the violence surrounding the 2000 parliamentary elections, continuing against ZCTU members, particularly during the farm occupations of 2000, led Morgan Tsvangarai to threaten President Mugabe in September 2000: "Mugabe should go peacefully. If he does not want to, we will remove him violently. This country cannot afford Mugabe to rule a day longer than is necessary" (quoted in Raftopoulos & Sachikonye 2001: 23).

As Kanyenze describes, the meltdown of the Zimbabwe economy, coupled with repressive measures against political and trade union organizing, intensified the difficulty of ZCTU and Zimbabwe's other trade unions. There were attempts in April 2003 to organizing a three-day stayaway protesting fuel price hikes and "the continued unilateral decisions of government," which met with some successes as the business community also aligned with ZCTU. The ZANU-PF's refusal to respond to trade union and business interests, along with the economically disastrous fast-track land reform program, created a financial and economic meltdown that dramatically increased unemployment from 2002 to 2008. In 2008, Zimbabwe recorded an annual inflation rate of 2.2 million percent. Hyperinflation, unemployment, and repression of trade unions made daily survival the priority for workers in Zimbabwe, as many were forced to leave for work in South Africa, Botswana, or Zambia, or to the United Kingdom, Australia, and North America. In the early 2000s, remittances from the diaspora were a lifeline for many Zimbabweans.

The situation for ZCTU leaders and their affiliated union leaders also deteriorated greatly from the early 2000s. Attempts to organize strikes and protests were met with arrests and beatings, as Mugabe's ruling party unleashed paramilitary forces against any group perceived to oppose it. Youth trained in violence as part of “national service” and war veterans on the government payroll terrorized union leaders and rank-and-file members, particularly in the run-up to presidential or parliamentary elections in 2002, 2005, and 2008. In 2007, ZCTU leaders were severely beaten while in police custody, following their arrest and the breakup of a demonstration calling for higher wages, more anti-retroviral medications for HIV-positive Zimbabweans, reductions of taxation, and an end to the harassment of street vendors and other informal sector workers.

The crackdown and violence against the leadership of ZCTU was followed by similar beatings of the MDC leadership in police custody in 2007. During the 2008 elections, in which the MDC won a majority in parliament and the majority of presidential votes, violence against the MDC and ZCTU intensified during the two-month “run-off” campaign for the presidency. ZCTU President Lovemore Matombo and Secretary General Wellington Chibebe were arrested and held in jail during the run-off campaign and faced charges of “communicating falsehoods” and “inciting the public to rise against the government” for having stated what everyone, including the Zimbabwean Electoral Commission, clearly recognized: that the MDC and Tsvangarai had gained the most votes during the March 29 elections (ZCTU Newsflash, 2008). The general secretary of the Progressive Teachers’ Union of Zimbabwe (PTUZ), Raymond Majongwe, who has been arrested and beaten on numerous occasions since 2002, was forced into hiding from ZANU-PF paramilitary forces. A ZCTU councillor, Rebecca Butau of Chegutu, was “seriously beaten and had to seek medical attention” during the run-off campaign (ZCTU Newsflash, 2008). Meanwhile, members of the General Agriculture Plantation Workers’ Union of Zimbabwe (GAP-WUZ) were forced to seek shelter in safe houses in Harare “after being harassed and beaten up by youth militia” (ZCTU Newsflash, 2008).

In the wake of the 2008 elections, there were signs of regional trade union solidarity to support ZCTU and the MDC as the Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) labor federation and others agreed to boycott handling goods destined for Zimbabwe. During the 2008 elections, the COSATU dock workers’ union in Durban, South Africa, represented by the South African Transport and Allied Workers’ Union (SATAWU), stopped unloading a Chinese ship, the An Yue Jiang, containing ammunition and weapons destined for the Zimbabwean government. This show of solidarity undoubtedly saved many lives, although even without these weapons the ZANU-PF assault on the opposition and trade unions over three months in 2008 reportedly killed over 130 people, injured hundreds more, and displaced thousands of others.

In such difficult times, Zimbabwe’s trade union rank and file and leaders demonstrated the bravery and tradition of resistance shown over the previous 90 years. As in the past, Zimbabwe’s labor movement will undoubtedly remain a crucial force in the fight against oppression, exploitation, and tyranny.

SEE ALSO: COSATU (Congress of South African Trade Unions); Mugabe, Robert (b. 1924); Mzingeli, Charles (1905–1980); Southern Africa, Popular Resistance to Neoliberalism, 1982–2007; Zimbabwe, Labor Movement, 1890–1980

References and Suggested Readings

- Kanyenze, G. (2004) The Zimbabwe Economy 1980–2003: A ZCTU Perspective. In D. Harold-Barry (Ed.), Zimbabwe: The Past is the Future. Harare: Weaver Press, pp. 107–46.
- Masunungure, E. (2004) Travails of Opposition Politics in Zimbabwe since Independence. In D. Harold-Barry (Ed.), Zimbabwe: The Past is the Future. Harare: Weaver Press, pp. 147–92.
- Raftopoulos, B. & Phimister, I. (Eds.) (1997) Keep on Knocking: A History of the Labour Movement in Zimbabwe, 1990–97. Harare: Baobab Books.
- Raftopoulos, B. & Sachikonye, L. (Eds.) (2001) Striking Back: The Labour Movement and the Post-Colonial State in Zimbabwe, 1890–2000. Harare: Weaver Press.
- Sachikonye, L. (1997) Trade Unions: Economic and Political Development in Zimbabwe since Independence in 1980. In B. Raftopoulos & I. Phimister (Eds.), Keep on Knocking: A History of the Labour Movement in Zimbabwe, 1990–97. Harare: Baobab Books, pp. 107–28.
- ZCTU Newsflash (2008) www.zctu.co.zw/.

Zimbabwe, national liberation movement

Lisa B. Sharlach

Zimbabwe, formerly Southern Rhodesia, became independent in 1980 after a decades-long war of liberation that killed over 30,000 (and possibly twice that figure). Marxist guerilla groups fought against the European settlers of Southern Rhodesia to end white oligarchy and establish multiracial democracy. Tragically, the guerillas also fought against each other, and this bloodshed continued after independence. Instead of embracing democracy, the leaders of ZANU-PF, victorious in Zimbabwe's first elections, terrorized those supposedly affiliated with the defeated political party, ZAPU. It was largely comprised of the Ndebele ethnic minority, so the partisan conflict had an ethnic dimension. To this day, the ruling party continues to intimidate the opposition to forestall true multiparty democracy in Zimbabwe.

Colonial Context

The Shona are the largest ethnic group in Zimbabwe, with slightly more than 80 percent of the population, and the Ndebele, at slightly less than 15 percent, are the largest minority. The Ndebele (or "Matabele") were descendants of but had broken off from the South African Zulu. The expansion of Zulu and South African Boers' territories forced the Ndebele to move northward in the nineteenth century, subjugating the Shona people already there. In 1890, a "Pioneer Column" of several hundred whites, financed by diamond prospector Cecil Rhodes and his British South Africa Company (BSAC), trekked from South Africa to this territory and named it Rhodesia after their benefactor. Rhodes's motivations were to expand British influence and to find gold, but the supply of the latter was long since extinguished. King Lobengula of the Ndebele appealed to the British government for help against invasion by these pioneers, but none arrived. The whites defeated him in 1893, and in 1896–7 quashed a series of African uprisings that the Shona termed the Chimurenga, or "struggle for freedom."

The white settlers, disappointed by prospecting, became farmers. They forced the resident Africans on to small Native Reserves of the poorest-quality land and took the rest for themselves. The Land Apportionment Act of 1930 gave 20 million hectares of land to whites and only 8.7 million hectares to Africans. Within a couple of generations the result of this uneven allocation of land was crop failure; too many African peasants on too little and too arid farmland destroyed the soil and depleted the water. The colonial administration blamed environmental degradation on African farming methods and overpopulation. Authorities commanded Africans to work in gangs on ecological projects (such as building dams), causing much resentment.

In 1923, when the BSAC charter expired, Southern Rhodesia opted against joining South Africa and instead became internally self-governing under British annexation. The British intended for Southern Rhodesia to be a "white man's colony," much like the United States or Australia had become. Frontier life in Southern Rhodesia did not lure many Europeans to relocate there, however, until during and after World War II. By the 1960s, whites in Southern Rhodesia enjoyed one of the highest standards of living in the world, made possible by low taxes, cheap labor, and plenty of land. The average European farmer in Southern Rhodesia at that time owned 100 times more land than did his or her African counterpart. By 1969, so many Europeans had moved to the country that Rhodesian-born whites were less than half of the country's white population.

The colonial administrators passed a series of laws institutionalizing European hegemony over the Africans and their lands. First, this disenfranchised all but a few African citizens. The vote was in theory race-blind, but the income criteria for eligibility was so high that few Africans qualified. Second, it put the force of law behind the orders of white supervisors. In 1891, the Masters and Servants Act criminalized any disobedience to an employer's command by an employee. This Act applied to farm as well as domestic workers. Third, it limited the opportunity for upward mobility of Africans by the 1934 Industrial Conciliation Act, which barred Africans from apprenticeships, skilled labor, and unions. Fourth, it chilled African resistance with the 1936 Sedition Act, criminalizing political and religious discontent. Fifth, it transferred an African man's control of his labor to the white settlers by means of the 1942 Compulsory Native Labour Act, which required some 15,000 Africans to work for European farmers. Finally, the 1955 Public Order Act permitted police to arrest and detain anybody for any reason without charge or trial.

The Second Chimurenga

The middle of the twentieth century witnessed non-violent African demands for more rights by civil society – churches, clubs, students, teachers, and women. In 1948, a general strike in Bulawayo concerning land rights lasted three days. In 1957, the ANC (African National Congress, and not related to the South African political party of the same name) was formed by Joshua Nkomo, a railway union official and lay preacher. The ANC was the first organized group in Southern Rhodesia demanding independence and majority rule. It mobilized many people, but the government banned it in 1959 and arrested its leaders. The next year, Nkomo reemerged as the leader of the NDP (National Democratic Party). It demanded majority rule, and the government banned it in December 1961. ZAPU (Zimbabwe African People's Union) formed that same month, and Nkomo again was the leader. Robert Mugabe was the secretary for information and policy. The authorities banned ZAPU in September of 1962. Several smaller political parties also opposed white rule, but they were not nationally based and eventually disappeared.

In 1962, the Rhodesian Front (RF) formed as an alliance of conservative whites. Most colonies in Africa were transitioning to or had already won independence. The massacres of Europeans in what had been the Belgian Congo and also accelerated white flight from their own colony frightened the RF members. They believed that Africans were too immature for self-government – probably for several generations to come – and should have only limited self-autonomy (or “separate development”) under benevolent European guidance. The RF wanted independence for Southern Rhodesia, as did Great Britain. The UK wanted a constitutional clause guaranteeing majority rule and an end to racial segregation in Southern Rhodesia; however, this was entirely unacceptable to the RF.

In 1965, under Prime Minister Ian Smith, the RF government waged the UDI (Unilateral Declaration of Independence) from Great Britain. Patterned after the US Declaration of Independence, the document had been ratified by most Southern Rhodesian voters. Great Britain imposed sanctions, and no nation, not even apartheid South Africa, ever recognized the UDI as legitimate. The United Nations imposed selective sanctions on Southern Rhodesia in 1966, and mandatory ones in 1968. Nevertheless, the standard of living for whites did not diminish appreciably. Mozambique (still under Portuguese rule) and South Africa shipped supplies to Southern Rhodesia despite the boycott. Moreover, import-substitution industrialization flourished in Southern Rhodesia, and the country also profited by being able to default on its loans to the UK.

In 1969, three-quarters of the Southern Rhodesian electorate approved a new constitution. Like its predecessor, this constitution reserved 16 parliamentary seats for Africans (out of 66). “Chiefs” – appointed and paid by the government – selected the representatives for eight of the African seats, and the electorate voted for the remaining eight. The new constitution stated that Africans would get more than their 16 reserved seats only when the day came that they paid at least 25 percent of the national taxes. Africans paid about 0.05 percent of the national taxes at that time, with only negligible growth rates, so it would likely be many centuries before they could win more than 16 seats. Moreover, the new constitution permanently allocated half of the country's land to blacks and half to whites – even though there were about 20 times more blacks than whites. This entailed some transfer of what had been white land, but did not cause a major economic shift in power because the land reallocated to Africans was the least desirable. Furthermore, the RF government resegregated city facilities, private schools, and sports that had been racially desegregated under the previous regime.

While Southern Rhodesian whites became more repressive of the majority, the independence movement became more militant in the mid-1960s. Shona speakers split from Nkomo's ZAPU because of conflicts amongst the leadership and the perception that it was dominated by the Ndebele. Ethnic violence between the Shona and Ndebele in parts of Southern Rhodesia accompanied this split. ZANU formed as a breakaway group from ZAPU in 1963, with Ndabaningi Sithole as its leader (and Robert Mugabe as a member). Its military wing, ZANLA (Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army), waged a few attacks in the 1960s but at first suffered many losses to the Southern Rhodesian military. It gained some, although limited, support from China.

By early 1965, ZAPU also created an armed wing, ZIPRA (Zimbabwe People's Revolutionary Army), which became based in Zambia and enjoyed Soviet financing and training. In the late 1960s, it cooperated with South Africa's ANC (African National Congress), providing safe passage through the country. About one-tenth of ZIPRA soldiers were women, most of them in the Women's Brigade, which had female commanders and conventional military training. In 1974, quarrels erupted within ZAPU between moderates (generally pro-capitalist) and Soviet-influenced communists. The latter were primarily the leaders of ZAPU in exile. The former wanted to negotiate with Smith, and became increasingly irrelevant.

The Organization of African Unity (OAU), instead of favoring one faction over the other, decided to support both. It strongly urged reconciliation between them. Thus ZAPU and ZANU reluctantly united into FROLIZI (Front for the Liberation of Zimbabwe) in October of 1971. Its leadership was overwhelmingly of the minority Zezuru ethnicity, and the collaboration soon withered.

The Zimbabwe People's Army (ZIPA) was the next try at cooperation between ZAPU and ZANU. The OAU refused to provide weapons to either until they agreed to coalesce. This union was also unsuccessful, in part because of discrepancies in capabilities between the two militias. ZAPU's army was well trained and well supplied by the Soviets. According to a ZAPU fighter at the time, however, many of the ZANU recruits had so little training that they could barely fire a gun. Another problem was that ZIPA was perceived as being dominated by ZAPU, even though half of the commanders of ZIPA came from each army. Bloodshed between ZANU and ZAPU troops in ZIPA (stationed in Mozambique) ensued with a few weeks. Those ZAPU soldiers who survived fled for Zambia.

Thus ZAPU and ZANU fought separately against the RF. Government counterinsurgency forces displaced residents of areas suspected of supporting guerillas and destroyed crops to prevent them from nourishing insurgents. Soldiers forced peasants on to fenced and guarded "protected villages" that were sealed between 6 at night and 6 in the morning. Forced relocation took place rapidly and without compensation, in some cases moving tens of thousands of people at a time. Some were simply dropped off in new areas, without sanitation, shelter, adequate nutrition, blankets in the wintertime, or water. Simultaneously, soldiers blocked off the country's northern border to prevent the guerillas' escape. Southern Rhodesia's government also covertly formed a counterinsurgency group in Mozambique known as RENAMO (Mozambican National Resistance), which attacked the guerillas who had fled Southern Rhodesia.

Attacks on the government and on Southern Rhodesian white civilians intensified during the 1970s and included the downing of a commercial passenger plane and the destruction of the oil reserves in Salisbury (now Harare). Combating the "terrorists," as white Rhodesians called ZANU and ZAPU, necessitated militarization. The armed forces drafted both white and black men (although the latter served only at the lower ranks). Both the fear of ongoing guerilla attacks and the threat of perpetual military conscription sapped the enthusiasm of some white Southern Rhodesians for a continuation of white minority rule. Black Southern Rhodesians, meanwhile, were often the targets of terrorist attacks by both government and guerillas, in addition to being forced to risk their lives in battle to defend a government that oppressed them.

British and African leaders, too, grew increasingly irritated by the prolonged conflict in Southern Rhodesia and especially by the liberation movement's internal power struggles. The Patriotic Front (PF), formed in October of 1976, was the last alliance between Mugabe's ZANU and Nkomo's ZAPU. There was much distrust between the two groups in the PF. Nkomo secretly negotiated with Ian Smith in 1978 to try to come to power himself. Smith had crafted a power-sharing agreement that put three African leaders and himself at the helm of a new, still white-dominated government called Rhodesia-Zimbabwe. The OAU and the PF refused to recognize it. Relations between Nkomo and Mugabe were extremely strained at the three-month-long Lancaster House peace negotiations amongst rebels and the RF in 1979, hosted by Margaret Thatcher.

Nkomo, who was older and in worse health than Mugabe, badly wanted negotiations to succeed and welcomed reconciliation with whites. Mugabe, however, wanted an end not just to settler rule but also to capitalism. Britain offered to give some compensation to the white farmers so that land reform might commence, and in return asked for a clause in the peace treaty permitting the white farmers to keep their lands for ten years after independence. A team of pre-eminent African leaders warned a recalcitrant Mugabe that if he did not consent, he could no longer keep his army in Mozambique and

As the newly appointed prime minister of Zimbabwe, Dr. Robert Gabriel Mugabe holds a press conference in his garden in Mount Pleasant, Salisbury (Harare). Mugabe later emerged as the first president of Zimbabwe in 1987. Mugabe rose to power through the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU), of which he was leader, and was instrumental in negotiations resulting in the Lancaster House Agreement granting Zimbabwe independence from Britain. (Getty Images) his soldiers would face arrest. Mugabe signed the agreement, and thus Southern Rhodesia, one of the very last European colonies in Africa, became the sovereign state of Zimbabwe. Britain's other African colonies had won independence some 20 years earlier; disunity within the liberation movement was surely a factor in the delay in Southern Rhodesia.

Gukurahundi* and the Third Chimurenga?

In March of 1980, the two elements of the PF, ZANU and ZAPU, split again and ran against each other at the polls. Nkomo felt hurt by Mugabe's decision to have ZANU run alone and was devastated by his party's electoral defeat to Mugabe's ZANU. On April 11, 1980, at independence, Robert Mugabe became prime minister. He offered Nkomo the ceremonial position of president, which he refused. Nkomo did eventually take the "home affairs" position, putting him in control of the police.

Peace did not last long. The British supervised a reintegration of ZANU and ZAPU into the national army, but this unification was fraught with suspicion. There were regional and linguistic differences between the two groups, and irregulars from both armies had become bandits. Soon skirmishes broke out between the soldiers of ZANLA (ZANU's army) and ZIPRA (ZAPU's army). Fighting also erupted in the newly integrated units, killing over 300 and causing many ZIPRA members to flee. Moreover, Mugabe survived several assassination attempts.

Mugabe secretly brought 106 North Koreans to Zimbabwe to train a new elite force that reported directly to him. He called it the Fifth Brigade and the Shona term Gukurahundi, "the rain that washes the chaff off of the wheat." Mugabe's forces staged raids on ZAPU property of arms caches, with which Mugabe claimed that Nkomo was plotting to overthrow him. After Mugabe fired Nkomo from the government, several hundred ZIPRA "dissidents" deserted the new army. Many became criminals in what is known as Matabeleland, where the Ndebele minority are concentrated. South Africa's apartheid government had already recruited many elements of the old RF army, including the famous Selous Scouts. South Africa then recruited the ZIPRA defectors, trained them, and sent them back into Zimbabwe to cause unrest.

In December of 1982, Mugabe unleashed his new elite force on the ZAPU and ZIPRA affiliates. The Fifth Brigade tortured, humiliated, and murdered (sometimes several dozen at a time and often simply because of being Ndebele). The Ndebele refer to this time of massacre and famine as the Gukurahundi. The army ordered all stores to close and stopped shipment of food supplies into an area that had been suffering from drought for four years. Tens of thousands were beaten and over 2,000 killed within a month and a half. Hundreds vanished. Gukurahundi continued for months, during which time, despite the ZANU-sponsored slaughter, all citizens had to attend ZANU pep rallies. ZANU Youth Brigades, modeled on China's Red Guards, flooded Matabeleland on the eve of elections, and ZAPU officials "disappeared." Nkomo, who had since fled to London, condemned the violence. In December of 1987, to avoid more deaths amongst his supporters, he signed a Unity Accord that merged ZAPU and ZANU into a single party, called ZANU-PF. Mugabe then offered an amnesty to the remaining ZIPRA "dissidents," but there were only 122 of them left. Between 10,000 and 20,000 Ndebele had died in the aftermath of Zimbabwe's independence, and the country had become a de facto one-party state.

Power became even more centralized after 1987, when Mugabe changed the constitution so that he could be executive president. The distinction between the army and the civilian government became increasingly blurred. Corruption, structural adjustment programs, the AIDS epidemic, and military operations in Zaire all soured Zimbabwe's economy in the 1990s. Britain had begun to issue to Zimbabwe compensation for whites' land, as agreed to at Lancaster House, but stopped abruptly in the late 1980s. The British complained that Mugabe was embezzling the funds and awarding land to his friends in government instead of needy farmers. Mugabe, in turn, lambasted Great Britain for renegeing on the agreement and began, in his words, "the Third Chimurenga" against neo-imperialism in Zimbabwe.

Approximately half of Zimbabwe's farmland still belonged to an ever-shrinking white minority. In 2000, the day after the government circulated a list of properties, squatters violently "repossessed" several hundred large white-owned farms (and 21 black-owned ones). Western press coverage tended to emphasize the racial nature of the violence and to sidestep the history of the whites' violent seizure of the land 100 years prior. Mugabe's legacy as a war hero has been further overshadowed by his improbable victories at the polls; the killing and torture of members of the current opposition; the episodic persecution of ethnic minorities; and his reliance on simply printing more money when there are bills to pay, causing Zimbabwe to have the world's highest inflation rate. The European Union (EU) and the US have imposed sanctions on Zimbabwe, and President Bush has denounced Mugabe's regime as "illegitimate."

With respect to world leaders who denounce his regime as authoritarian, however, Mugabe responds that the origins of African democracy are to be found in the liberation struggle rather than in the intervention of western donors. The West, he asserts, has tampered with Zimbabwe's elections under the guise of "monitoring." Mugabe has claimed repeatedly that the UK is trying to recolonize Zimbabwe, and that the churches and the opposition party, the MDC (Movement for Democratic Change), support this goal as well. Constitutional and institutional restructuring of Zimbabwe (specifically, strengthening its leadership) is necessary in light of the peril of imminent recolonization. According to Mugabe, the International Monetary Fund (IMF), World Bank, the EU, and the US are controlling the international media to demonize his government as retaliation for the 2000 invasions of white-owned farmland. The advanced industrialized world, he explains, criticizes him because he stands up to them. They fear the "Zimbabwean Contagion" effect across the region and the continent.

SEE ALSO: Mugabe, Robert (b. 1924); Mzingeli, Charles (1905–1980); Southern Africa, Popular Resistance to Neoliberalism, 1982–2007; Zimbabwe, Labor Movement, 1890–1980; Zimbabwe Labor Movement and Politics, 1980–2007; Zimbabwe People's Army (ZIPA)

References and Suggested Readings

- Brickhill, J. (1995) Daring to Storm the Heavens: The Military Strategy of ZAPU 1976 to 1979. In N. Bhebe & T. Ranger (Eds.), Soldiers in Zimbabwe's Liberation War. London: James Currey, pp. 48–72.
- Dabengwa, D. (1995) ZIPRA in the Zimbabwe War of National Liberation. In N. Bhebe & T. Ranger (Eds.), Soldiers in Zimbabwe's Liberation War. London: James Currey, pp. 24–35.
- Meredith, M. (1980) The Past is Another Country: Rhodesia: UDI to Zimbabwe. London: Pan.
- Meredith, M. (2002) Mugabe: Power and Plunder in Zimbabwe. Oxford: PublicAffairs.
- Mugabe, R. (1983) Our War of Liberation: Speeches, Articles, Interviews 1976–1979. Gweru, Zimbabwe: Mambo Press.
- Mugabe, R. (2001) Inside the Third Chimurenga. Harare: Department of Information and Publicity, Office of the President and Cabinet.
- Nhongo-Simbanegavi, J. (2000) For Better or Worse? Women and ZANLA in Zimbabwe's Liberation Struggle. Harare: Weaver Press.
- Nkomo, J., Mugabe, R., & Zvobgo, E. (1978) Zimbabwe: The Final Advance: Documents on the Zimbabwe Liberation Movement. Oakland, CA: Liberation Support Movement Information Center.
- Ranger, T. (1985) Peasant Consciousness and Guerrilla War in Zimbabwe: A Comparative Study. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press.
- Sithole, M. (1999) Zimbabwe: Struggles Within the Struggle (1957–1980). Harare: Rujeko Publishers.

Zimbabwe People's Army (ZIPA)

Stephen O'Brien

In late 1975 a movement of young Marxist-inspired guerrillas formed the Zimbabwe People's Army (ZIPA). ZIPA's combination of a persuasive approach to politics, a transformational vision, and aggressive military tactics altered the course of the liberation struggle against Ian Smith's Rhodesia. However, its success also paved the way for its downfall and the rise to power of Robert Mugabe.

ZIPA grew out of the flood of young people who fled Rhodesia in the 1970s to join the respective military wings of the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) and the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU). In 1975 the key nationalist leaders became entangled in factional strife and long-running and unproductive peace talks with Smith. By 1975 the young recruits who would go on to form ZIPA sought to take charge as the war stalled and the old leaders became increasingly sidelined. In October 1975 a group of ZANU officers from the training camps in Tanzania approached President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and the leader of newly independent Mozambique, President Samora Machel, for support to restart the war against Smith. Both Machel and Nyerere had supported peace negotiations and a ceasefire with Rhodesia, but as little real progress had been made, they were sympathetic to the young officers' proposal.

The ZANU officers also sought unity with ZAPU. They won its backing and in November 1975 ZIPA was formed with a joint high command with equal numbers from ZAPU and ZANU. While the alliance with ZAPU disintegrated after a few months, it was an important attempt at unity which went against the prevailing trend of disunity. ZIPA's nominal head was Solomon Mujuru, who later became head of the Zimbabwe army, but the real leadership came to reside in his young deputy, Wilfred Mhanda.

The new army relocated to Mozambique from Tanzania. In January 1976, 1,000 guerrillas crossed into Rhodesia. The entire eastern border of Rhodesia became a war zone as mines, farms, and communication routes, such as the new rail line to South Africa, came under attack. ZIPA educated its cadre against the sexual abuse of women and sought to win the support of the peasantry through persuasion rather than coercion. It established Wampoa College to help institute its vision and ran Marxist-inspired courses in military instruction and mass mobilization for the combined ranks of ZIPA.

ZIPA aimed for political and economic transformation which sought to overturn the social and economic relations of Rhodesia. The previous conception of the old guard nationalists had seen armed struggle mostly as a means to pressure external intervention, as Rhodesia technically remained a British colony. Many of the ZIPA leaders, such as Mhanda, had been influenced by the youth radicalization of the 1960s. They became known as the Vashandi, a word which means worker in the Shona language, but which took on a broader meaning as the revolutionary front of workers, students, and peasants.

Theory influenced tactics. ZIPA fighters were not regarded as cannon fodder, lines of retreat and supply lines were secured, counteroffensives were anticipated, and strategic reserves were readied. Senior commanders were seen at the front. Smith's regime reeled under the offensive. Despite intensified repression it was forced to borrow 26 helicopters from South Africa and deploy 60 percent more troops. In order to counter the influence of the young Marxists in Zimbabwe, Henry Kissinger, the United States secretary of state, kick-started talks in Geneva in October 1976.

ZIPA remained opposed to negotiations and wary of the old leadership. When pressed to nominate an intermediary, in a decision which was to have fateful consequences, they nominated Robert Mugabe, one of the ZANU leaders. Disunity had long plagued the nationalist movement, and on at least two occasions – the March 11 movement within ZAPU (1971) and the Nhari Rebellion (1974–5) within ZANU – guerrilla revolts against what were perceived to be incompetent leaders were brutally suppressed. The fallout from the Nhari Rebellion saw Herbert Chitepo, the ZANU chairman, assassinated. In response, Kenneth Kaunda, the Zambian president, who had hosted the liberation forces in Zambia, banned Zimbabwean nationalist organizations and detained hundreds of their leaders and supporters. However, these leaders were subsequently released so that they could attend the Geneva talks, along with Mugabe, who had been under detention in Mozambique. In Geneva, ZIPA unsuccessfully tried to unite the various nationalist delegations. Disunity contributed to the collapse of the talks.

While the ZIPA leaders were distracted with solidarity duties in Europe following the breakdown of the talks, Mugabe and Josiah Tongogara, the official military leader of ZANU, rushed back to Mozambique. In January 1977, with Machel's support, they started to impose control.

The radio and print media were taken over, Wampoa closed, and ZIPA officers arrested. A massive purge was conducted throughout ZANU. According to Astrow (1983: 107), at least 300 ZIPA junior cadre were executed.

In August 1977 Mugabe, possibly feeling sufficiently in control of ZANU, called a special congress and was appointed party president. While the congress adopted many aspects of ZIPA's left discourse, this mainly served to provide a cover for its apparent repressive tendencies. Most of the key ZIPA leaders were not released from detention in Mozambique until after independence in 1980 and the movement dispersed. In 2000 Mhanda and other ex-combatants formed the Zimbabwe Liberators' Platform to reclaim the rights of Zimbabwe's genuine war veterans.

SEE ALSO: Chimurenga Armed Struggles; Machel, Samora (1933–1986); Kaunda, Kenneth (b. 1924); Mugabe, Robert (b. 1924); Nyerere, Julius (1922–1999); Zimbabwe, Labor Movement, 1890–1980; Zimbabwe, National Liberation Movement

References and Suggested Readings

- Astrow, A. (1983) Zimbabwe, A Revolution That Lost Its Way? London: Zed Books.
- Chung, F. (2006) Re-Living the Second Chimurenga: Memories from Zimbabwe's Liberation Struggle. Stockholm: Nordic Africa Institute in cooperation with Weaver Press.
- Martin, D. & Johnson, P. (1981) The Struggle for Zimbabwe. Harare: Zimbabwe Publishing.
- Mhanda, W. (2007) Interview with Wilfred Mhanda by Stephen O'Brien, August 2007. Harare.
- Moore, D. (1990) The Contradictory Construction of Hegemony in Zimbabwe: Politics, Ideology and Class in the Formation of a New African State. PhD dissertation, York University, Toronto.
- Nhongo-Simbanegavi, J. (2000) For Better or Worse: Women and ZANLA in Zimbabwe's Liberation Struggle. Harare: Weaver Press.

Zionism

Shellie K. McCullough

Zionism is an international movement comprising political, cultural, and social ideologies which calls for the return of Jewish people to a homeland. The term "Zion" is derived from ancient biblical sources and embodies a yearning for a return to a lost place of origin: "Weeping, we sat by the rivers of Babylon, thinking of Zion"

(Psalms 137:1). With that said, the actual term "Zionism" was not coined until 1890, when Nathan Birnbaum began to formulate ideas concerning "political" Zionism which he felt were the direct result of anti-Semitism.

Political Zionism was emancipated western Jewry's response to the mass diffusion of anti-Semitism, but was also a reaction to the failure of the Enlightenment, which did not always improve the status of the Jew on a par with others. Initially, the objective for political Zionists concerned the establishment of a Jewish homeland. However, the property did not necessarily have to hail from the Holy Land, nor did it have to be in Palestine. From the outset, the political Zionists were searching for any available territory to fit their requirements. Many political Zionists viewed the so-called "Jewish problem" through an Enlightenment rationalistic approach, hoping that European countries would support the establishment of a Jewish state outside Europe to help solve the "Jewish problem" and secure for Jews equal rights and protections as others in society.

Up until the end of the eighteenth century, Jews received limited status as citizens across Europe. During the half-century or so following the French Revolution and the emancipation contract, the status of Jews in Western and Central Europe changed for the better, as they seemed to be assimilating to the national cultures of their respective states. Jews were entitled to become citizens of particular countries post-emancipation, but they were often still differentiated by the religion they practiced on an individual basis. In Eastern Europe, however, where the great majority of Jews were concentrated, the situation was more complex and problematic. It seems the western Enlightenment and emancipation had only marginal impact there, although Eastern European Jewry did retain collective traditions such as the common language of Yiddish and a unique style of dress that set them apart. In these societies social modernization progressed at a slower rate than in Central or Western Europe, and the Jewish community remained somewhat autonomous. Jews were still sharply repressed, but a narrow and influential stratum of Jews did manage to respond to the liberal movements unfolding across Europe.

These hopes aroused by Jews among the liberalizing tendencies were tested, if not completely dashed, by the rise of anti-Semitism and the (re)emergence of the Jewish question in post-revolutionary Europe. In France, Edouard Drumont's anti-Semitic text La France Juive sold more than a million copies, making it one of the top-selling books in the last half of the nineteenth century. Also during the fin-de-siècle period, the Dreyfus Affair burst onto the French political scene as a patriotic, assimilated French Jewish military captain was falsely accused of treason. It was not until the writer Emile Zola came to his defense with J'accuse! that Dreyfus was finally able to clear his name, but only after years of public humiliation and turmoil in the French court system. Aside from France, there was a significant amount of anti-Semitism growing all across Europe. In Germany there was a major financial crisis that caused an outpouring of anti-Semitism; in Austria there was Karl Lueger's anti-Semitic Christian Social Party (which would later inspire Adolf Hitler's regime); and in the tsarist empire of Russia, bloody pogroms and cases of blood libel were emerging at an alarming rate.

Standing at the crossroads of these two influential Jewish worlds were countries such as West Prussia, Serbia, Ukraine, Romania, Poland, and Russia, and many important Zionist writings were generated from the cultural intersection where a variety of Zionist ideas were converging. Interestingly enough, the first Jew to articulate a Zionist platform was a Russian doctor living in Odessa. In 1881, in response to the devastating Russian pogroms, Leo Pinsker wrote in his pamphlet Auto-Emancipation that anti-Semitism was a phenomenon stronger than any Enlightenment philosophy or belief system could conquer. From Pinsker's perspective, the Jews must therefore seek out their own national homeland because self-emancipation could only occur outside the boundaries of Europe. Pinsker eventually became the head of the organization Hibbat Tziyyon (Lovers of Zion), a group devoted to Hebrew education and national regeneration. Moses Hess, a former acquaintance of Karl Marx, also established a reputation in intellectual circles when he published Rome and Jerusalem in 1862, a text that expounds on the author's beliefs in the rediscovery and redefinition of Judaism as a nationality and not a religion, and directly correlates his preoccupation with the Jewish question to the rise of anti-Semitism.

The Zionist idea crystallized during these difficult times in tandem with the exacerbation of the Jewish question in nineteenth-century Europe. In the individual biographies of many seminal Zionist thinkers, such as Theodore Herzl, one finds that anti-Semitism was the crucial driving force behind the Zionism movement. As Herzl relates in his diary, "We were led to [Zionism] by the new enemy just when we were in the process of complete dissolution: by anti-Semitism. I am still aware what an impression it made upon me when I . . . read Duhring's book on the Jewish Question, a book that is as full of hate as it is brilliant. I think that prior to that I really no longer knew that I was a Jew."

The driving force behind a Zionist organization with outlined, specific goals, Herzl put forth his solution to the Jewish question in his 1896 publication Der Judenstaat (The Jewish State). In this particular work he called for the establishment of a Jewish state, in any available territory, which would then allow the majority of European Jewry to immigrate there in order to solve the Jewish question in Europe. This new state would be modeled after a European state that had already been emancipated, so in this way it granted no special privilege to the Hebrew language, Judaism or devoutness of religion, or even the ancient Jewish homeland in Palestine. Herzl firmly believed in the Enlightenment principles that were rooted in a faith that all men were rational and would work toward goals that they perceived to be in their best interests. Along those same lines of thinking, Herzl also believed that European countries would "rationally" follow suit and aid the Zionists in their cause, and because of this, he actively sought the aid of various countries in creating a Jewish state. In 1897 Herzl assembled the first Zionist congress in Basel, Switzerland. The World Zionist Organization (WZO) formally established a congress and outlined its goals for establishing a homeland for the Jewish people. The WZO developed and cultivated membership in societies worldwide, eventually encouraging settlement in Palestine, registering a bank in London, and going on to establish the Jewish National Fund, which would aid in purchasing the land in Palestine. This first convening of the Zionist congress, which Herzl brought about, established a set of collective goals for Zionists, but it also came to symbolize a new Jewish identity, one that had been lost since the destruction of the Second Temple in 70 CE.

Social Zionism

In 1897, just one year after Herzl published Der Judenstaat, a Jewish philosopher from Belorussia named Nahman Syrkin published his own work on Zionism, entitled “The Jewish Question and the Socialist Jewish State,” in an Austrian socialist monthly. He went on to become a leader of the social Zionist movement, and outlined the goals of this faction at the third convening of the Zionist congress in 1899. Although Syrkin sometimes disagreed with those in his own faction of social Zionism, he became infamous for attacking the body of religious Zionism started by Ahad Ha’am (also known as Asher Ginsberg, 1856–1927). Syrkin felt that Ha’am’s spiritual aims disregarded the hard, factual evidence of anti-Semitism and could not cope with all the problems that would arise with Jewish immigration en masse. Syrkin believed that an answer to the Jewish question in Europe could only be found through the elimination of capitalism and through immigration to Palestine.

The fundamental belief system of social Zionism (reminiscent of socialism) is deeply rooted in the idea of a settlement or kibbutz (Hebrew for “a gathering”) in which Jews would supervise and work their own land autonomously, without any kind of outside aid. Jews from Eastern and Western Europe (and theoretically all over the world) would immigrate to Palestine and recharacterize themselves specifically as a Jewish proletariat of workers and farmers rather than as merchants. Liberation, from this perspective, is derived from labor and a Jewish identity tied directly to the land. Owing to a variety of disagreements in regard to the core belief system of social Zionism (with that of, say, Marxism), many branches split off and formed a diverse assortment of organizations that led to the formation of youth movements such as Hashomer Hatz’air and Hehalutz. Prominent leaders who headed these parties, like David Ben-Gurion and Yitzhak Ben Zvi, went on to lead the national Labor Party in Israel, which is one of the two main political parties in Israel today.

Cultural or Spiritual Zionism

Ahad Ha’am, whose Hebrew name means “one of the people,” was born Asher Ginsberg in Skvira, Ukraine. Ha’am, the founding father of the cultural or spiritual branch of Zionism, believed that the revival of a Jewish and specifically Hebraic culture, as a new center of Jewish society, would save Judaism, and not just the Jewish people. So while Herzl wanted to prevent harm from befalling the Jews due to anti-Semitism in Europe, Ha’am sought out a homeland to save Judaism itself. Feeling that there was nothing inherently Jewish about Herzl’s Jewish state, Ha’am decided to found a cultural center in Palestine that was specifically dedicated to the revival of Jewish culture during the Diaspora.

For Ha’am, the possibility of successful assimilation meant that Judaism itself would lose its identity as well, whereas for Herzl the mere thought of a failed, assimilated Jewish homeland would have been his greatest personal and professional defeat. The points counterweighed between tradition and a response to the Jewish problem also influenced the Israeli nationalist movement, or the Jewish national movement. In addition to being a statesman and a writer, Ha’am was above all else a close critic of Herzl. In an 1889 analytic piece regarding what he saw as the failure of the Hibbat Tziyyon movement, entitled “This is Not the Way,” Ha’am focused on building strong cultural and spiritual foundations because he believed any efforts without such spiritual undergirding would ultimately fail. In addition to spiritual criticism in regard to Zionism, Ahad Ha’am was also one of the first to warn of impending tensions with the Arab population.

Beginning as early as 1891, groups of influential Arabs from Jerusalem with authoritative political and economic sway protested against the influx of Jews into the region as well as the Jewish purchase of land by means of an official letter to Istanbul. Despite the fact that Jewish immigration was occurring at a relatively slow rate, clashes between Jewish émigrés and the indigenous Arab population occurred with increased frequency. While the sultan was ruling tensions could be suppressed, but with the Young Turks revolution in 1908 a new political dawn emerged in this region. As Ottoman rule came to an end, Arab nationalism and Zionism became adversarial, and each began its own struggle for independence. In November 1917 the British issued the Balfour Declaration, a letter stating Great Britain’s support for the creation of a Jewish national homeland. The declaration was the result of lobbying by a small British Zionist movement, headed by Dr. Chaim Weizmann. Throughout the 1920s many Arab riots broke out across the region in Jaffa, Haifa, Hebron, and Jerusalem in violent response to the Balfour Declaration.

After uncontrollable, widespread rioting throughout the 1920s and 1930s, the British responded with a 1939 White Paper which decreed that only 15,000 Jews would be allowed to enter Palestine each year for five years, and thereafter immigration would be subject to Arab approval. During World War II (1939–45) and the Holocaust, the threat of extermination was increased for Jews following the closure of Palestine's gates by the 1939 White Paper. After the war, the British lifted the restrictions, leaving many Arabs frustrated with the situation once again. The fight over who holds claim to this land continued after Israel became an independent state for Jews as secular and religious Palestinian organizations sought to reclaim the land that they view as theirs, in hopes of forcing the Jews back out of the region.

SEE ALSO: Arafat, Yasser (1929–2004), Fatah, and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO); Ben-Gurion, David (1866–1973) and the Haganah; Dreyfus Affair; Enlightenment, France, 18th Century; French Revolution, 1789–1794; Hamas: Origins and Development; Hitler, Adolf (1889–1945) and German Nazism; Israeli Peace Movement; Israeli Settlers Movement; Jewish Bund; Jewish Resistance to Nazism; Jews and Revolution in Europe, 1789–1919; Marx, Karl (1818–1883); Marxism; Socialism; Young Turks; Zola, Emile (1840–1902)

References and Suggested Readings

- Brenner, M. (2006) Zionism: A Brief History. Trans. S. Frisch. Princeton: Markus Wiener.
- Herzl, T. (1966) Zionism. In Z. Zohar (Ed.), Israel Among the Nations. Jerusalem: World Zionist Organization.
- Laqueur, W. (2003) A History of Zionism. New York: Schocken Books.
- Poliakov, L. (2003) The History of Anti-Semitism, Vol. 3: From Voltaire to Wagner. Trans. M. Kochan. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press.
- Salmon, Y. (1996) Tradition and Nationalism. In J. Reinharz & A. Shapira (Eds.), Essential Papers on Zionism. New York: New York University Press, pp. 94–116.
- Vital, D. (1980) The Origins of Zionism. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Žižek, Slavoj (b. 1949)

Gal Kirn

Born in Ljubljana, Slovenia, Slavoj Žižek was awarded a Bachelor of Arts in philosophy and sociology in 1971, a Master of Arts in philosophy in 1975, and a Doctor of Arts in philosophy in 1981 at the Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Arts, Ljubljana. In 1985, at the University of Paris-VIII, he received his second PhD, this time in psychoanalysis.

After his MA studies he wished to remain at the University of Ljubljana, but was rejected on account of his potential political and theoretical aberrations. However, in 1977 he obtained a post at the Central Committee of the League of Slovene Communists, where he wrote speeches for politicians and continued studying philosophy. In 1979 he became a researcher at the University of Ljubljana's Institute for Sociology. This was also the period of the foundation of the Society for Theoretical Psychoanalysis with the takeover of the editorial board of the journal Problemi. The so-called "Slovenian theoretical school" cannot be understood without its struggle for the Marxist legacy; it was through critique of classical Marxism that the fusion of post-Marxism (thinkers like Ernesto Laclau and Chantal Mouffe were important in this regard) and psychoanalysis took place. Žižek's main academic fields remain Marxism, German classical philosophy, and psychoanalysis, whereas the basis for his thought is located in Jacques Lacan's theory. Žižek became famous in the 1990s and 2000s with numerous visits, conferences, and professorships abroad as well as the numerous books he published. In the 2000s, Žižek has become a trendy figure on college campuses in Europe and North America, and his work has popularized intellectual discourse on Marxism, Leninism, and socialist philosophy and a resurgence of interest in the French psychoanalyst Jacques Lacan, among others. He became a member of many editorial boards: Analecta (in Slovene), Wo es war (in German), and Wo es war (with Verso) and SIC (with Duke University Press) in English.

One of his most important contributions was his innovative use of psychoanalysis: with his understanding of a range of cultural phenomena, from pop culture (film) to opera and political theory, Žižek not only enabled a new perspective on these phenomena but also supplied readers with a different access to psychoanalysis itself. The use of popular examples and jokes is a vital part of his philosophical arguments.

On the other hand, Žižek's works are explicitly political, contesting the widespread consensus that we live in a post-ideological or post-political world, where there is no alternative and history has already reached its end and goal. In contradiction to such ideological presuppositions, he is one of a very few authors who seriously advocates a return to Lenin. If nowadays Marx has become an important academic reference (although not in the post-socialist countries), Lenin still haunts Marxism and political thought in general. Žižek's notion of the political act that breaks up radically with the existing order, namely, with capitalism and liberal democracy, is consistent throughout his texts. Moreover, on the background of the debate of revolution, he remains loyal to the Leninist idea of taking over power. What kind of new political form it will take is of course another question, but Žižek locates the new "proletariat" in the excluded masses (e.g., the sans-papiers, slum dwellers).

If it is true that Slavoj Žižek remains consistent and faithful to revolutionary ideas on the level of theory, the question of political practice reveals quite a different perspective, one that contradicts the theory. In the 1980s Žižek was a frequent contributor to Mladina, a weekly magazine which, together with Radio Student, became the most important platforms for democratic oppositional social movements in Slovenia. He was one of the founders of the famous Committee for the Defense of Human Rights. After the 1980s his political path became less alternative, when in 1990 he ran for the four-man presidency of the Republic of Slovenia in the first multiparty elections, which he narrowly lost. He became an ambassador of science for the Republic of Slovenia in 1991 and later was the main ideologue of the Liberal Democratic Party that remained in power from 1992 to 2004.

Even if this contradictory relationship between political theory and political practice is apparent, Žižek remains one of the most important reference and orientation points in contemporary debates.

SEE ALSO: Lenin, Vladimir Ilyich (1870–1924); Marxism

References and Suggested Readings

- Butler, R. (2004) Slavoj Žižek: Live Theory. London: Continuum.
- Daly, G. (2009) Žižek: Ideology, the Real and the Subject. London: Sage.
- Kay, S. (2003) Žižek: A Critical Introduction. Cambridge: Polity.
- Myers, T. (2003) Slavoj Žižek (Routledge Critical Thinkers). London: Routledge.

Parker, I. (2004) Slavoj Žižek: A Critical Introduction. London: Pluto Press.

Sharpe, M. (2004) Slavoj Žižek: A Little Piece of the Real. Aldershot: Ashgate.

Žižek, S. (2001) Repeating Lenin. Zagreb: Arkzin.

Žižek, S. (2002a) Revolution at the Gates: Žižek on Lenin, the 1917 Writings. London: Verso.

Žižek, S. (2002b) Welcome to the Desert of the Real. London: Verso.

Žižek, S. (2005) Interrogating the Real. London: Continuum.

Žižek, S. (2006) The Parallax View. Cambridge, MA: MIT Press.

Žižek! (2007) Film directed by Astra Taylor. www.zizekstudies.org/

Zola, Emile (1840–1902)

Annette Richardson

Emile Zola was a French novelist and social critic whose novels criticized all aspects of Second Empire France (1852–70). In 1898 he protested the imprisonment of Captain Alfred Dreyfus, a Jewish officer in the French army who had been falsely convicted of being a traitor. This volatile article J'accuse ("I Accuse") polarized the country and resulted in his conviction for criminal libel.

Emile Edouard Charles Antoine Zola was born on April 12, 1840 in Paris to François Zola and Emilie Aubert. François died seven years later, leaving his family destitute. Zola was educated at Aix College and granted a scholarship to attend Lycée Saint Louis, but he never obtained a degree. He was unsuccessful in several vocations until he began to write freelance columns for newspapers as a political journalist. Zola's work illustrated a strong dislike for Emperor Napoleon III, who ruled France from 1852 to 1870.

Zola's writing went beyond journalism. Early in his career he wrote a number of essays, short stories, plays, and novels. He obtained a position with M. M. Hachette, a prominent publishing house, but lost it in 1865 when his lurid novel, La Confession de Claude (Claude's Confession), appeared in print. In 1867 Zola published Thérèse Raquin, the novel which brought him fame. From 1871 to 1893 he worked on a successful series (Les Rougon-Macquart) about the travails of several generations of a family's life during the French Second Empire period. The series eventually grew to 20 volumes. Zola's well-researched stories about working-class families, with realistic plots and interesting character portrayals, made his work extremely popular. In 1880 he examined and wrote about the sex trade, which made him both enemies and admirers simultaneously. His masterpiece, Germinal, which focused on the coal industry, was published in 1885. Although Zola presented factory owners sympathetically, the political right in France perceived the novel as a call for revolution.

Even more controversial was his letter concerning the Dreyfus Affair. In the 1890s Alfred Dreyfus, a Jewish army captain, was accused of espionage and found guilty on false evidence in two separate trials. He ultimately served a 5-year sentence on Devil's Island in French Guiana. The anti-Semitic generals of the French army were aware of Dreyfus's innocence but refused to admit fault. Realizing the injustice against Dreyfus, Zola exploded against the "establishment." At huge cost to his personal safety but with great clarity of conscience, Zola published a 4,000-word open letter, J'accuse, to President Félix Faure in the newspaper L'Aurore on January 12, 1898. By making such a public attack, Zola knew he could be charged with libel, but the letter challenged the army, the general staff, and the military justice system, clearly accusing the government of anti-Semitism. One of the most famous publications in French history, J'accuse was instrumental in transforming public opinion and convinced many people of Dreyfus's innocence. As Zola expected, he was convicted of criminal libel on February 23, 1899. His title of Knight of the Legion of Honor was repealed, and, at the approach of his second trial, he fled to England to escape a prison sentence. He successfully appealed his conviction to the Court de Cassation and returned to France after being given amnesty on December 24, 1900.

Zola died of carbon monoxide fumes from a blocked chimney in September 29, 1902. He was buried initially at Montmartre Cemetery in Paris. On June 4, 1908, he was moved to the Panthéon, an honor reserved for the greatest of French citizens.

SEE ALSO: Dreyfus Affair

References and Suggested Readings

- Bloom, H. (Ed.) (2004) Émile Zola. Philadelphia: Chelsea House.
 Brown, F. (1995) Zola: A Life. New York: Farrar, Straus, Giroux.

Hemmings, F. W. J. (1977) The Life and Times of Emile Zola. London: Paul Elek.

Zola, É. (1998) The Dreyfus Affair: "J'accuse" and Other Writings. Ed. A. Pagès. Trans. E. Leveux. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Zumbi (ca. 1655–1695)

Gregory R. Smulewicz-Zucker

Zumbi was the final and most famous leader of Palmares, a quilombo known in English as a maroon society (a community or society of escaped slaves) that existed nearly throughout the seventeenth century in the Brazilian state of Pernambuco. Under Zumbi's leadership, the citizens of Palmares (Palmarinos) defended the quilombo against the final Portuguese offensive, which ultimately led to Palmares' destruction. Like much of the history of Palmares, few verifiable facts are known about Zumbi and much about his life has become mythic. Zumbi's name is also often spelled "Zambi." It is unclear whether "Zumbi" is a proper name, a title, or a term expressing reverence. Much that is known about Zumbi's life comes from Portuguese reports and is the subject of debate among scholars.

Zumbi was probably born free in Palmares around 1655. At the time of his birth, Palmares had already been in existence for about 50 years and was home to thousands of escaped slaves as well as free-born people of African descent. The year 1655 also saw the Portuguese lead their first major assault on Palmares, under the command of Brás da Rocha Cardoso, after first expelling the Dutch who had controlled Pernambuco from 1637 to 1654. The assault was largely as ineffective as previous offenses led by the Dutch and those led by the Portuguese prior to the Dutch capture of Pernambuco in 1637. Early reports suggest that Zumbi was captured as a baby by the Portuguese during the assault of 1655. As an infant, Zumbi was placed under the charge of Father Antônio Melo, a priest in the town of Porto Calvo. He was baptized by Father Melo and given the name Francisco. Under Father Melo's tutelage, Zumbi received a remarkable education for a person of African descent living among the Portuguese. He learned both Portuguese and Latin and probably also received instruction in other subjects that comprised the education of a Catholic priest. In 1670, at the age of 15, Zumbi ran away from Porto Calvo and Father Melo and returned to Palmares. However, he apparently remained grateful to Father Melo for his kindness and would often sneak back to visit the priest.

Upon his return to Palmares, Zumbi gave up the Christian name Francisco and came to be known as Zumbi. By the mid-1670s, he had acquired distinction as a great warrior. Portuguese reports of this time refer to him as a general in the armies of Palmares. The fact that Zumbi attained such a rank suggests that he came from royal blood, since such ranks were most commonly bestowed by the king to his relatives. Zumbi became a popular leader among the citizens of Palmares for his bravery in fending off the Portuguese attacks of the 1670s. According to Portuguese reports on the attacks of 1675–6, Zumbi received a wound that left him with a limp.

While the Portuguese attacks of the 1670s failed to overtake Palmares, they did have a devastating impact on the quilombo. In 1678, the king of Palmares, Ganga Zumba, sued for peace. Some reports suggest that Zumbi was Ganga Zumba's nephew. It remains unclear whether Zumbi was in fact Ganga Zumba's nephew: given the nature of traditional African family structures, Zumbi may have been related to Ganga Zumba by blood, by adoption, or by some other form of kinship. Regardless of the exact nature of their relationship, the two men were close and Zumbi was considered an important advisor to Ganga Zumba; however, a rift formed between the two men over Ganga Zumba's decision to sue for peace. The terms of the peace set by the Portuguese stipulated that the Portuguese authorities would recognize Palmares' right to exist on condition that, among other demands, the Palmarinos resettle in the Cucaú Valley. Zumbi was incredulous of the Portuguese promises to allow the citizens of Palmares to relocate and live freely. The Cucaú Valley lacked the mountainous terrain that made Palmares so easy to defend. Further, the Portuguese military had not demobilized its units, adding to Zumbi's suspicions. Ganga Zumba's decision to accept the peace and travel to the Valley led to the creation of a rival faction under Zumbi's command. Ganga Zumba was ousted from power and Zumbi was put in his place. Just how violent the coup was and how much popular support it had remains unknown. Ganga Zumba may have abdicated or the regicide may have been sanctioned by the Council in Palmares' capital, Macaco, which served as a balance to the king's power. Some reports suggest that Zumbi murdered Ganga Zumba, while others suggest that Ganga Zumba took his own life after realizing that accepting the Portuguese peace was an error.

From the time Ganga Zumba led his faction to Cucaú, Zumbi continued his resistance against the Portuguese. By 1680, Zumbi was recognized as the supreme chief of Palmares. Under Zumbi, the peace negotiations were abandoned and the war with the Portuguese resumed. The Portuguese launched almost continuous attacks on Palmares, but met with little success. For years, the Portuguese battled the large network of villages ruled from Palmares' capital, Macaco, but made little headway. In 1693, due to the stalemate, the Portuguese governor of Pernambuco hired a group of bandeirantes (frontiersmen) led by Domingos Jorge Velho. Velho's forces were more accustomed to fighting the kind of guerilla warfare necessary to defeat the Palmarinos. Velho's forces succeeded in defeating the villages outside of Macaco. In February 1694, Velho's forces and 3,000 Portuguese soldiers finally captured Macaco and Palmares was defeated.

Reportedly, Zumbi escaped before Palmares' destruction. He continued to lead a small band of fighters and managed to elude the Portuguese for nearly two years. Ultimately, one of Zumbi's men was captured and, in exchange for his life, led a group of Paulistas to Zumbi's hideout. Zumbi was taken alive. He was decapitated on November 20, 1695, and his head was put on public display. Portuguese reports suggest that the head was put on display to show the slaves that Zumbi was not immortal; however, Zumbi has acquired a different kind of immortality. His memory is celebrated by people of African descent as a symbol of resistance to racism. He has become something of a national hero among Afro-Brazilians who continue to live in a country with deep racial divides. In 1995, the tercentenary of Zumbi's death was marked by celebrations throughout the country, among them a speech by then president of Brazil, Fernando Henrique Cardoso. The date of Zumbi's execution continues to be celebrated in Brazil as National Black Consciousness Day.

SEE ALSO: Brazil, Peasant Movements and Liberation Theology; Canudos, Religion and Rebellion in 19th-Century Brazil; Palmares Slave Revolts, 1602–1603

References and Suggested Readings

- Anderson, R. N. (1996) The Quilombo of Palmares: A New Overview of a Maroon State in Seventeenth-Century Brazil. Journal of Latin American Studies 28, 3 (October): 545–66.
- Diggs, I. (1953) Zumbi and the Republic of Os Palmares. Phylon 14, 1 (1st Qtr.): 62–70.
- Kent, R. K. (1965) Palmares: An African State in Brazil. Journal of African History 6 (2): 161–75.

Zwane, Ambrose Phesheya (1922–1998)

Ackson M. Kanduzo

Ambrose Phesheya Zwane was born into a relatively privileged family background and had bright prospects in Swaziland's traditional political system. However, he chose to strive instead for fundamental social reform, taking a path that placed him at loggerheads first with the British colonial power, then with the Swazi traditional authorities, and finally with the postcolonial regime.

Zwane's father, Amos Zwane, was a personal physician and advisor to King Sobhuza II – the Swazi crown prince from 1900 to 1921, and then the country's longest-reigning monarch, ruling from 1921 to 1982. The elder Zwane was in London in 1922 (accompanying Sobhuza II, who was appealing a land case at the Privy Council) when his son Ambrose Phesheya was born: Phesheya means “across the seas” (Kuper 1978).

Ambrose Phesheya Zwane studied in neighboring South Africa and became, in 1951, the first Swazi medical doctor to graduate from medical school at the University of the Witwatersrand. Three things engendered his embarking on what many in Swaziland saw as quite a revolutionary path. First, his studies in South Africa at the Universities of Fort Hare and Witwatersrand introduced him to African nationalism, which gave rise to a rejection of both colonialism and traditional power. He became active in campus politics. Second, when he returned to Swaziland he suffered racial discrimination: he saw this as so widespread at all levels of Swazi society that he resigned from government employment in 1960 (Kuper 1978: 218). Third, he believed strongly in blending the ideals of Pan-Africanism, which dominated African decolonization politics, with those of liberal democracy.

Zwane therefore assisted both the main African nationalist groups of South Africa – the African National Congress (ANC) and the Pan-Africanist Congress (PAC) – in Swaziland, during their long years of exile and armed struggle against apartheid. These influences shaped Zwane's social and political life until his death in 1998 (Dlamini 2006: 269).

African nationalism was a late development in Swaziland, a British protectorate. Decolonization was also fairly peaceful; however, the movement for decolonization was deeply divided between the more modernizing African nationalists, among whom Zwane counted himself, and forces linked to Swaziland's powerful traditional authorities, linked to Sobhuza II. In July 1960, the nationalist Swaziland Progressive Association converted itself into a political party, the Swaziland Progressive Party (SPP), and Zwane was invited to become secretary general. Two months later, Sobhuza II called for the abolition of political parties, arguing that they were incompatible with Swazi and African traditions.

The early 1960s saw constitutional talks with the colonial power taking place: Zwane participated as a member of the SPP and was part of the Swazi delegation to the negotiations until a deadlock in February 1963 caused the British government to suspend the talks. The radical wing of the SPP broke away and formed the Ngwane National Liberatory Congress (NNLC), with Zwane as its president. When elections were held in April 1964 and April 1967, the royalists were the dominant force. The NNLC performed poorly in elections. Its Pan-Africanism was portrayed by opponents as a “foreign ideology,” and it had a limited appeal to Swazi voters, who rallied strongly behind the king's party, the Imbokodvo National Movement (INM) (Macmillan 1985).

The INM formed the first government of independent Swaziland following its overwhelming victory in April 1967. Zwane did not accept what he viewed as a “government of the royal family and its in-laws” (Legum 1975: 634). He established strong ties with Pan-Africanists like Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana and Julius Nyerere of Tanzania after 1964, and sent young Swazis to Ghana for political training.

These developments eventually paid off for Zwane. In the first elections in independent Swaziland, held in April 1972, he was elected to parliament and his party had three representatives. These were elected in the Mpumalanga constituency in the sugar cane plantations, where the emerging Swazi working class gave the NNLC and Zwane overwhelming support for the first time. This was seen as an indication of Zwane's increasing popularity, as well as signifying the emergence of a liberal democracy with competing parties. The INM and the king moved decisively to stop this trend.

On April 12, 1973, Sobhuza II abrogated Swaziland's constitution and banned all political parties. In 1975, Zwane was detained under a 60-day detention law. Modeled on legislation used against political opponents of the government in apartheid South Africa, it authorized the government to detain anyone for 60 days without explanation or legal redress in a court of law. It is indicative of the political sympathy that Zwane enjoyed even amongst government and security officials that he was able to escape into exile in Mozambique. Zwane had welcomed the independence of Mozambique in June 1975 with a public statement anticipating increased support for Pan-Africanism and socialism; he also hoped it would protect him against repression in Swaziland.

Later Zwane moved to Tanzania. President Nyerere negotiated with Sobhuza II in 1978 to arrange Zwane's return with immunity from political detentions. Even so, Zwane was detained several times in the late 1980s and early 1990s. He died on September 13, 1998, still widely recognized as leader of the NNLC in Swaziland. He left behind a strong tradition of support for liberal democracy: disputing the claim that absolute monarchy was the "Swazi way," he envisaged a Swaziland based on economic and social equality, progress, and human rights.

SEE ALSO: Nkrumah, Kwame (1909–1972); Nyerere, Julius (1922–1999); South Africa, African Nationalism and the ANC

References and Suggested Readings

- Booth, A. R. (2000) Historical Dictionary of Swaziland. Lanham: Scarecrow Press.
- Dlamini, N. C. (2006) The Legal Abolition of Racial Discrimination and its Aftermath: The Case of Swaziland, 1945–1973. Unpublished PhD thesis, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg.
- Kuper, H. (1978) Sobhuza II. Ngwenyama and King of Swaziland: The Story of an Hereditary Ruler and his Country. London: Duckworth.
- Legum, C. (1975) African Contemporary Record. London: Africana Publishing House.

- Macmillan, H. (1985) Swaziland: Decolonization and Triumph of "Tradition." Journal of Modern African Studies 23: 643–66.
- Matsebula, B. N. (2006) A History of the Swaziland Progressive Association, 1929–1960. BA thesis, University of Swaziland.

Zwingli, Huldrych (1484–1531)

Jordan J. Ballor

Born in the Swiss town of Wildhaus, Huldrych Zwingli was a first-generation leader along with Martin Luther in what would later be known as the Protestant Reformation. His first public writings expressing clear sympathies for the Reformation date to 1522, although in the years prior he had taken steps sympathetic with the position of Luther. Zwingli dates his decisive shift to the year 1516, when he decided to preach the gospel directly from the scriptures. For the next decade Zwingli would be a major figure in the spread of the Reformation among the Swiss cantons, particularly in Zurich, where he had been called to minister in 1519. He spoke out against medieval church practices such as tithes, indulgences, and invocation of saints.

Zwingli was particularly influential in his desire to evangelize the Swiss confederation to form a political bulwark for Protestantism against Roman Catholic states. On the one hand, Zwingli faced doctrinal opposition from Luther, especially on the question of the Lord's Supper. On the other, Zwingli was challenged by Anabaptists and radical reformers who denied the validity of infant baptism, which Zwingli defended on appeals to the biblical doctrine of covenant.

Futile attempts to resolve the disputes between Zwingli and Luther culminated in the Marburg Colloquy in 1529. Luther insisted that Zwingli's account of the presence of Christ in the supper was inadequate and that Zwingli could therefore not be counted as a brother in the Protestant faith. This continuing disagreement was enough to prevent a greater political alliance between the Swiss Reformed and German Lutheran powers, despite the attempts at mediation by figures like Martin Bucer, Philip Melancthon, and Johannes Oecolampadius.

In 1531, five Catholic cantons joined forces to invade and attack Zurich. As minister in the city's “great church” (Grossmünster), it was custom for Zwingli to ride with the defending guard. Zwingli was mortally wounded in the battle, which was lost by the Zurich forces. Zwingli’s influence was sustained primarily through the work of his successor, Heinrich Bullinger, who continued his reforms. It was particularly Zwingli’s views on the relation of the civil magistrate and the authority of the church that led to a model of church–state relations later identified with figures like Bullinger, Wolfgang Musculus, and Thomas Erastus. Zwingli’s positive view of the magistrate’s role in society also separated him from the more radical reformers. Zwingli represents part of the variegated and pluriform reformed tradition, in distinction from both Roman Catholicism and the “Radical” Reformation.

SEE ALSO: Anabaptist Movement; Calvin, John (1509–1564); German Reformation; Luther, Martin (1483–1546); Reformation

References and Suggested Readings

- Gordon, B. (2002) The Swiss Reformation. Manchester: Manchester University Press.
- Locher, G. W. (1981) Zwingli’s Thought: New Perspectives. Leiden: Brill.
- Stephens, W. P. (1992) Zwingli: An Introduction to His Thought. Oxford: Clarendon Press.
- Zwingli, H. (1987) Early Writings. Ed. S. M. Jackson. Durham, NC: Labyrinth Press.

Index

Note: page numbers in bold denote main entries.

- Aarafa, Muhammed Ben 2336
Aba Island Rebellion 3191–2
Aba Women's Riot, Nigeria 2482, 3634
Ababda tribe 1075
Abacha, Maryam 3548
Abacha, Sanni 2116, 2481, 2483
Abad de Santillán, Diego 261, 1187
Abadia Méndez, Miguel 343
Abalone Alliance 1–2, 1052
Abantu Batho (The People) 3205
Abatangelo, Pasquale 2402
Abbas, Chaudhuri Ghulam 1929
Abbas, Ferhat 45, 1246–7
Abbas, Mahmoud 1550
Abbey, Edward 1054
Abboud, El-Ferik Ibrahim 3191
'Abd al-Halīm Çelebi 3356, 3358
'Abd al-Madǧīd 3356
Abd al Qadir Wad Habuba 3192
Abd al-Rahman, Sayyid 3194
Abd al-Rahman al-Mahdi 3192, 3195
Abdali, Ahmad Shah 1928
Abdelkrim uprising 44
'Abduh, Muhammad 1809
Abdul Aziz, Sultan 2235
Abdul-Hamid II 283, 285, 293, 3347, 3681
Abdul-Jelil, Animasawun Gbemisola 547–8
Abdul Salam II 352
Abdul Wali Khan 2582
Abdullah, Farooq 1933–4, 1935
Abdullah, Hussaina 3547
Abdullah ibn Muhammad, Khalifa 2164
Abdullah, Muhammad 1928, 1929–30, 1931
Abdullah, of Jordan 399
Abdullahi, Khalifa 3192
Abdullatif, Ali 3193
Abdurahman, Abdullah 2–3, 2395
Abdurrahman Khan 15, 16
Abejas, Las (The Bees) 2289
Abella, Maria 3597
abeng (cow's horn instrument) 612
Abeng Newspaper movement 1863
Abeokuta 954, 3677
Aberdeen Trades Council 2821
Abern, Martin 596
Abernathy, Ralph 1852, 1972, 1973
Aberri 1128
'Ābidīn Khōdja, Zayn al- 3357
Abiola, Moshood Kashimawo Olawale 2481, 2483
Abiyot Seded (Revolutionary Flame) 1137
abolitionism
 antebellum 214–16
 Britain 200–5, 1223
 Civil War 56
 Declaration of Independence 1113
 Enlightenment 203, 1112–13 militant resistance to slavery 88
 non-violence 2491
 Spain 917
 see also American Anti-Slavery Society; anti-slavery movement; Anti-Slavery Society; Anthony, Susan B.; Douglass, Frederick; Garrison, William Lloyd; Wilberforce, William Aboriginal Affairs 310
Aboriginal Land Rights Act 311 aboriginal protests, Australia 3–6, 307–12
Aboriginal Rights Coalition 6
Aboriginal Tent Embassy 3–4, 309–10
Aborigine Integral Law 258
Aborigines Advancement League 308
Aborigines Progressive Association (APA) 307
Abouré people 883
Abraham, Collin Rajasingham 2176–9
Abraham Lincoln Brigade 6–7, 2847
Abrahamsen, R. 1948
Abramowski, Edward 140
Abreu e Lima, José Inácio de 493
Abrilada rebellion 187
absolutism
 of monarchy 783, 1303–4, 2125, 2922
 of papacy 2829 absurdist theater 582, 1563 abu Bakr 234
Abu Dharr 234
Abu-Jamal, Mumia 7–8
Abu Roaf group 3194

- Abu Sayyaf 2329, 2330
 Abu Turab, Shaykh 1766
 abu-Zyad, Ziad 1814
 Abubakar, Abdusalami 2482 Abuelas de Plaza de Mayo: see Grandmothers of the Plaza de Mayo
 Abuja Declaration, OAU 3113
 Abukir Bay, Battle of 441
 Abunimah, Ali 1760
 Abyssinia 450
 Academia dos Renascidos 485
 Academy of Sciences, France 2990, 2991, 2992
 Ação Libertadora Nacional (ALN) 472
Acción Católica 2057
 Acción Católica de la Mujer 3611
 Acción Democrática (AD) 604, 3436, 3437, 3442, 3447, 3450
 Acción Revolucionaria Salvadoreña (ARS) 1163
 Aceh War 1720
 Aceiceira, Battle of 188
 Achar Sua 3476
 Achcar, G. 1771, 1773
 Acheson, George 1894
 Achmont, Zachie 3312
 Ackerson, Wayne 209–11
 Acqui Division 2834
ACT UP (AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power)
 8–10, 1482, 2100, 2108, 2503
 Action Command of Indonesian (KAMI) 1724, 3180
 Action Directe (AD) 1369, 2817
 Action Française 824
 Action Socialiste 2784
Actos (Valdez) 28
 Acuña, Antonio de 844, 845
 Adam, Barry D. 2092–6
 Adamec, Ladislav 3434
 Adams, Abigail 84, 3614–15, 3616
 Adams, Gerry 1802, 3044
 Adams, John 83, 996, 1546, 2570, 3614
 Fries's Rebellion 1300, 1301–2
 Adams, Samuel 77, 452
 Adapazarı Rebellion 3357
 Adas, M. 552
Addams, Jane 10–12, 1742, 3519
 Adebayo, Adeyinka 24
 Adedeji, Adebayo 3111
 Adekunle, Julius O. 23–6
 Aden, captured 3670
 Adeniran, Adebusuyi I. 563–5, 852–3, 858–9, 2478–80, 2484–5, 3006–7, 3007–8, 3676–8
 Adeoye, Tafa 25
 Adhikari, Mohamed 2–3
 Adhisuryo, Tirto 1728
 Adirondack Forest Preserve 1119
adivasi (tribal villages) 2802
 Adkins, Lucille A. 3612–16, 3616–23, 3623–30
 Adlan, Mohammed Wad 3196
 Adler, M. 321, 322, 354, 1581
 Adman, Ursula 1109
 Administration of Justice Act 78
 Adolat (Justice) 3422
 Adolf Frederick, of Sweden 1496
 Adongo, Ambrose 1950
Adorno, Theodor W.
 Authoritarian Personality, The 906, 1302
 and Brecht 504
 Dialectic of Enlightenment 12, 906, 907, 1255
 Frankfurt School 12–13, 325, 904, 1253
 and Horkheimer 905, 907–8
 Marxism 2249
 Minima Moralia 906
 Negative Dialectics 13
 works 1255
 Adrian of Utrecht 844 adult education 2543
 Adultery Act 1104, 2805
Adunata dei Refrattari, L' 131
 Advance organization 964
 Advani, L. K. 1585, 1693, 1694, 1935 aesthetic socialism 3061
 Afary, J. 3017
 affirmative action 754
 Affirmative Action (Equal Employment of Women) Act 3563
Affranchis, Les 1534, 1543–4
 Afghan War I 1688
 Afghani, Jamal al-Din al- 234, 236, 1809
Afghanistan
 Amanulla Khan 329, 330, 1934
 April Revolution 13
 Bin Laden 3247
 British invasion 15–16
 Islamic Civil War 14–15
 Khazara peoples 329
 Pashtuns 13
 PDPA 13, 14
 Revolution (1978) 13–15
 Soviet Union 388, 1465
 and Tajikistan 3243
 US invasion 1401, 1664, 3247–8
 warlords 14
 see also Bacha-i Sakkao's movement; Durrani empire; Khuda-i Khidmatgar (Red Shirts); Roshaniya movement; Taliban
 AFL-CIO 416–17, 2036–7, 2803, 3662
 see also American Federation of Labor; Congress of Industrial Organizations
 Aflaq, Michel 1069, 3221, 3222, 3223, 3224, 3226
 Afranie Kuma, Akwasi 3669

- Africa
 average income 1671
 cash crops 1662
 European colonialism 1657–8, 1663, 3545, 3670
 feminism 3548–9
 gold 1657 independence struggles 3545–9
 Islam 1657
 Make Poverty History 1312, 1402–3
 Marxism 2249
 patriarchy 3547
 postcolonial 3547–9
 slave trade 1657
see also individual countries
 Africa Caribbean Pacific countries (ACP) 1995, 3644, 3651
 Africa Growth and Opportunity Act 3114
Africa Times and Orient Review 1336
 Africa Trade Network 3114
 African Advisory Council (AAC) 454
 African Aid Society 208, 209
African Americans
 American Civil War 20
 American Revolution 84
 Black Codes 20
 black male identity 2846 churches 2799
 CPUSA 394
 Declaration of Independence, American 213
 Great Migration 2822
 Jim Crow era 16–19
 Lincoln and 394, 2121–3 martyrs 3460
 Reconstruction Era 19–21, 2798–9 right to own weapons 20–1
 women's rights 212, 217
 World War I 2822
 World War II 17
see also black community; civil rights movement
African Blood Brotherhood 21–3, 394, 837
African Chronicle 3603
 African Church 3460
 African Civil Service Association 456
African Communist 3040, 3104
African Daily News 2221
 African Elected Members' Organization (AEMO) 2269
 African Food and Canning Workers' Union 26
 African Institution 204, 210, 941–2, 3022, 3529
 African Labor Research Network (ALRN) 3111
 African Lakes Company 2172
 African Methodist Episcopal Church 214, 391
 African Mineworkers' Union (AMWU) 834, 3093, 3696
 African National Congress (ANC)
 African nationalism 3084–90
 Aggett 26
 banned 172
 Blaxall 2357
 COSATU 2192, 3084, 3101, 3112
 CPSA 171, 832
 Defiance Campaign 2191
 foreign support 173 and FOSATU 874–5
 Freedom Charter 2192, 3249 ideological splits 3086 Mandela 171, 1940, 2111, 2189
 and MK 3105–6
 Mozambique 2153
 neoliberalism 3098
 Nkumbula 3698
 and NP 170–1 and NRC 1940 and PAC 171, 2192, 2358, 3104
 post-Fordism 1399
 Rand Revolt 832
 and SACP 2192, 3052, 3084, 3103, 3249
 Tambo 3248
 unbanned 175, 3107
 water supplies 3099, 3101–2
 women's participation 3603
 African National Congress, Rhodesia 3735
 African National Congress's Women's League (ANCWL) 3603
 African National Prison Organization 3373
 African National Reparation Organization (ANRO) 3373
 African Newspapers 2221
 African Orthodox Church 1336
 African Party for the Independence of Guinea and Cape Verde (PAIGC) 2360
 African People's Socialist Party (APSP) 395, 3373
 African People's Solidarity Committee 3373
 African Political Organization (APO) 2
 African Provincial Councils (APCs) 1940, 3698
 African Regeneration 208
 African Representative Council (ARC) 1940, 3698
 African Union 3651
 African Women Living in Europe Conference 326
Africano, O 153, 2354
 Afrikaner League of Mineworkers 1557
 Afrikaner Student League (ASL) 3180
 Afrique Occidentale Française (AOF) 2181
Afro-Colombian movements 794–6
 Afro-Costa Ricans 640
 Afro-Cubans 911–14

- Afro-Germans 91–2
see also Ayim, May
- Afro-Jamaicans 1858, 1860, 1861
- Afro-Shirazi Party (ASP) 3708–9
- Afro-Venezuelans 737
- Aga Khan 1921
- Agadir Incident 2335
- Agartala Conspiracy Case 346, 2579
- Agbekoya Parapo (Farmers Resist Suffering Society) 2483
- Agbekoya Peasant Uprising and Rebellion 23–6, 2481
- age of consent 3543
- Age of Consent Act 1582, 1696
- Agee, Chris John 2258–60
- Aggett, Neil 26–7
- Agha, Ismael 1762
- Agitators 1101
- Agitprop 27–8, 2962, 3133
- Agnew, Spiro 532
- Agnos, Art 1207
- Agoda prisons, storming of 25
- Agranat State Investigating Committee 1813
- agrarian capitalism 1090
- Agrarian Leagues 2606–7
- Agrarian Party of Greece (AKE) 1436, 1444
- Agrarian Reform Law, Bolivia 1936
- agribusinesses 3461
- Agricultural Labor Relations Act 1610
- Agriculture et Artisanat* 242
- Agrupación Cultural Feminina 3631
- Agrupación de Mujeres Antifascistas (Anti-Fascist Women) 3139
- Agrupación Mujeres Libres (Group of Free Women) 123
- Agua Prieta Plan 2540, 2541
- Aguas Blancas Manifesto* 1122
- Aguas Blancas massacre 1121, 2285, 2288
- Aguas del Tunari, Bechtel Corporation 790, 791–2
- Aguascalientes Convention 2278–9, 2540
- Agudelo, William and Teresita 606
- Agüeybaná I 28–9
- Agüeybaná II 28–9
- Aguilar, Carlos 2129
- Aguilares killings 2868
- Aguinaldo, Emilio 445, 2668–9
- Aguirre Cerda, Pedro 50
- Aguirre Gainsborg, José 428
- Ahern, G. P. 902
- Ahidjo, Ahmadou 580, 1252
- ahimsa* (non-injury) 1701, 1969
- Ahlman, Nicolai 990
- Ahmad, Chaudhury Manzoor 2584
- Ahmad, Muhammad 2163, 2164
- Ahmad, Sheikh 352
- Ahmad Pacha Bey 3334
- Ahmad Shah 1763
- Ahmadullah, Maulavi 1690
- Ahmed, Muzaffar 961, 2582, 3229
- Ahmed, Tajuddin 347
- Ahmed, Ziauddin 2577
- Ahmed the Prophet 1074, 1075
- Ahmed the Vizier 1074
- Ahmedabad textile mills 1325, 1694, 1700, 2429
- Ahora!* 3631
- Aid for Trade 3653
- AIDS
 LGBT 2095, 2098, 2099
 Thailand 3273
 Zimbabwe 3738
see also ACT UP (AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power); HIV/AIDS
- AIDS ACTION NOW! 2100
- AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power: see ACT UP
- Aiken, Frank 1050
- Aikins, Joshua Kwesi 91–2, 325–6, 2788–90, 3669–70
- Aikoku Fujin Kai (Patriotic Women's Association) 3595
- Ailhaud, Jean-Antoine 1532
- Aini, Sadriddin 3241
- AK (Polish underground army) 2695
- Akaev, Askar 813, 2511, 3328–30, 3331–2
- Akali Party 1930
- Akanle, Olayinka 1640–1, 2480–2
- Akanran village 25
- Akbar, Mughal emperor 1928
- Akbar Khan 1931
- Akbayan (Citizens' Action Party) 2686, 2687
- Akselrod, Lyubov 3554
- Akselrod, Pavel 2228
- Akwesasne Mohawk Reserve 2417–18
- Al Ahad Society 1775
- Alaafin of Oyo 2558, 2559
- Alagoa Grande trade union 52
- Alais, peace of 1069
- Alakananda flood 736
- Alam II, Shah 368
- Alamance Creek 77
- Alasia, Walter 2815, 2817
- Alavi, S. 1686
- Alawi community 3222, 3224, 3226, 3357
- Alba, Duke of 517, 1035
- ALBA (Alternativa para las Américas) 2352
- Albania
 alphabet 34, 35 and China 32
 Christians 34, 36
 Greek Christians 36

- Greek Muslims 36
 Italian occupation 386
 Kosovo 35, 37
 languages 34
 millet system 34
 nationalism 34–8
 Ottoman empire 34
 pyramid banking 33 refugees 38 religious divide 34
 socialism 29–33
 Soviets in Czechoslovakia 32 tribal affiliations 34
see also Kosovo
- Albanian Church 1452
 Albanian Communist Group 29
 Albanian Communist Party (ACP) 30
 Albanian League of Prizren 34–5
 Albany Free School 118
 Albert, Michael 2620
 Albert I, of Belgium 362
Albizu Campos, Pedro 38–9, 2769, 2773, 2774
 Albright, Madeleine 1397, 2594, 3663
 Alcasa oil company 3454
Alcatraz Uprising
 American Indian Movement 39–40
 Red Power 2413–14
 Alcazar, Henry 3315
 alcohol supply 2927
 Alcott, Louisa May 3165
 Alcuin 2829
 Alday Sotelo, Rafael 2296
 Aldermaston marches 513
 Alebu, Ezekiel 3081
 Alegria, Rafael 3462
 Alejandro, Lean 2684
 Aleksic, Srdjan 224
 Alembert, Jean le Rond d' 846, 1001, 2316, 2991, 3495
 Alessandri, Arturo 692
 Alessandri, Jorge 50, 680
 Alessandrini, Emilio 2750
 Alevi community 3354
 Alevi Kurdish Uprisings 3358–9
 Alexander, Jacqui 2734
 Alexander, Kristian Patrick 399–400, 635–6, 2068–70, 2070–2, 2072–4
 Alexander Action Committee (AAC) 2264
 Alexander I, Tsar 442, 977, 1201, 2716, 3209
 Alexander II, Tsar 157, 2703, 2921, 2922, 3550
 and Kropotkin 2006
 Alexander III, Tsar 1201, 2081, 2689
Alexander Nevski (Eisenstein) 1081
 Alexandre-Derbay, Janine 3576
 Alexey, Tsar 2806
 Alexis, Jacques Stephen 1517, 1519
 Alexis, Nord 1513, 1514–15
 Alfa-Romeo 1840
 Alfaïates 485
 al-Fajr groups 3194
 Alfaro, Eloy 1063
 Alfaro Lives, Dammit! (AVC) 1058
 Alfieri, Vittorio 1825
 Alfonsín, Raúl 2159
 Alfonso I 186
 Alfonso VII 186
 Alfonso XII, of Spain 1187
 Alfonso XIII, of Spain 145
 Alfred, Taiaïake 111
 Algeciras, Conference of 2335
Algeria
 Arab people 42, 43, 44
 Barricades Week 42
 Ben Bella 366–7
 Berber people 42–3, 44
 civil war 1645–6
 colons/indigènes 1246–7 de Gaulle 43, 1247
 Fanon 1162
 FLN 226, 366, 1072
 forced labor 43
 French citizenship 42, 43, 1246, 1643
 French Communist Party 44
 French rule 226, 1246–7
 independence 43–5, 3546
 Islamic Salvation Front 40–1
 Jewish people 42–3
 Liberation War 41–2
 riots 1235
 Sétif massacres 226
 torture 41, 1022
 Toussaint rouge 45
 women's rights 356
 women's role 46, 47, 3546
 see also Algerian National Revolution; Algerian War of Independence; Front de Libération
 Nationale; Kabyl resistance to government
 Algerian Communist Party (PCA) 44, 45
 Algerian National Liberation Army (ALN) 42, 45
 Algerian National Liberation Front 564
Algerian National Revolution 41–7
 Algerian People's Party (PPA) 44
 Algerian War of Independence anti-war activists 226
 Camus 581
 Corsica 873
 Côte d'Ivoire 884
 FLN 1644
 Kabyl 1927
 and Tunisia 3336

- Algiers, Battle of 42, 46
 Al-Jazeera television network 389
 Ali, Ayann Hirsi 2448
 Ali, Mirza Husayn 1766
 Ali, Mohammed 1326, 1702
 'Ali, Muhammad: see Muhammad 'Ali
 Ali, Muhammad (formerly Cassius Clay) 221
 Ali, Rashid 1705, 3221
 Ali, Shaukat 1326, 1702
 Ali, Tariq 218, 2260–4
 Ali, Zulfikar 2388
 'Ali Dinar, Sultan 51
 Ali Ghālip Incident 3355
 Ali I Bey 3334
 Ali II Bey 3334
 Alia, Ramiz 32
 Aliança Nacional Libertadora 470–1, 2749
 Alianza Anticomunista Argentina (AAA) 246, 249, 273
 Alianza Democrática M-19 802, 1082, 2149–50
 Alianza Nacional Popular (ANAPO) 800, 801
 Alianza PAIS 871
 Alianza Patriótica por el Cambio (APC) 2135
 Alianza Popular Revolucionaria Americana (APRA) 47–9, 1567, 2648, 2649, 2651, 3431 Alien Acts 1300, 1301, 1412
 alienation
 dialectics 2837, 2839
 Lukács on 2136
 Marxist 784, 1843
 Alimi, Eitan Y. 1812–16
 Alinsky, Saul 661, 2499
 Community Service Organization 1609 have-nots theory 2539
 Industrial Areas Foundation 49
 Reveille for Radicals 49
 Rules for Radicals 49
 Alipore Conspiracy Case 1675
 Aljubarrota, Battle of 186
 Alkatiri, Mari 1045
 Alkebulan, P. 398
 All-African Convention 2220
 All-African People's Revolutionary Party 395
 All-Bengal Muslim Students' League (MSL) 1705
 All-Bengal Students' Association 3179
 All Blacks rugby team, NZ 3155–6
 All Burma Congress 554
 All Burma Students Union 301, 3180
 All Burma Youth League 553
 All-Ceylon Harbor and Dock Workers' Union 1494, 2052
 All-Ceylon United Motor Workers' Union 2052
 All-Ceylon Youth Congress 969
 All-China Federation of Labor (ACFL) 2124
 All-China Labor Congress 723
 All-Ethiopia Peasant Associations (AEPA) 1137
 All-Ethiopian Socialist Movement (MEISON) 1135–7
 All-Ethiopian Trade Union (AETU) 1136
 All-Ijaw Youths' Conference 2485
 All-in African Conference 2192
 All India Communist Party 961–2
 All-India Congress Committee (AICC) 1329, 1702, 1704, 2423, 2793
 All India Coordination Committee 3587
 All India Coordination Committee of Revolutionaries (AICCR) 2265, 2423
 All India Democratic Women's Association (AIDWA) 3587
 All-India General Strike 1922
 All India Khilafat Committee 1680
 All India Kisan Sabha (AIKS) 1710, 2793
 All-India Nepali National Congress 2441
 All India Peasant Conference 2576
 All-India States People's Conference 1929–30
 All-India Textile Workers' Strike 1922
 All-India Trade Union Congress (AITUC) 1325, 1680, 1700, 1710, 2430, 2585, 2793
 All India Women's Conference (AIWC) 646, 2388, 3586
 All Japan Seamen's Union 1894
 All Nations/Four Directions March 2417
 All Pakistan Federation of Labor (APFOL) 2585
 All Pakistan People's Party 2580
 All Pakistan Students Organization 2404
 All People's Congress (APC) 3031
 All-Russian Communist Party (Bolshevik) 439
 All-Russian Congress of Representatives of Trade and Industry 2906
 All-Russian Constituent Assembly 676
 All-Russian Metalworkers' Union 3029
 All-Russian Soviet of Peasant Deputies 2908, 2909
 All-Russian Union for Women's Equality 3390, 3551
 All-Russian Women's Congress 3553
 All-Union Communist Party (Bolshevik) 439
 All-African Convention (AAC) 833
 All-African People's Conference 857
 Allah Tigers 1935
Allam Nékül (Without State) 128
 Allard, J. 2621
 Alleanza della Democrazia Socialista 1161
 Alleanza Nazionale 1307
 Alleg, Henri 226
 Allen, Barbara C. 3028–30
 Allen, Ethan 78, 79, 80
 Allen, Louis 1258
 Allen, Richard 391
 Allen, William 210, 899, 2460
 Allende, Ignacio 1578, 1579

- Allende Gossens, Salvador 49–50, 112, 678, 679–80, 683, 685
 Christians for Socialism 2061
 coup 2436, 2507
 killed 1911
 Santiago demonstration 690
 Socialist Party 693
 Unidad Popular 2377, 2379
- Allgemeine Deutsche Burschenschaften (ADB) 3177
- Allgemeiner Deutscher Arbeiterverein 1351
- Alliance des Ba-Kongo (ABAKO) 856, 2137
- Alliance des femmes pour la démocratie (Women's Alliance for Democracy) 3576
- Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Congo (ADFL) 853, 858
- Alliance of Korean Youths 136
- Alliance Nationale pour la Démocratie et le Progrès (ANDP) 1505
- Alliance Party, Fiji 1197
- Alliance of the Peoples of the Forest 2273, 2274
see also Mendes, Chico
- Alliance of Progressive Labor (APL) 2686
- Alluri Sitaram Raju 1703
- Almada, Martín 2597, 2598
- Almeida, Helena de 3605
- Almonte, Ramón 1016
- Aló Presidente* 667, 3454
- Alonso, José 864
- ALP–ACTU (Australian Council of Trade Unions) accord 316
- Alpha Boys School, Kingston 611
- al-Qaeda 388–90, 1646, 1783, 1810, 3247
- al-Qa'idah* 2953
- al-Qassam regiments 1548
- Alquati, Romano 1842
- Alsace-Lorraine 1919
- al-Sanusi, Muhammad ibn Ali 50–1
- Altagracia Cáceres, Manuel 1017
- Altamirano, Luis 692
- alter-globalization movement 1307, 2305, 2306, 3687
- Alternativa para la Américas (ALBA) 667
- Alternative Canberra 107
- Alternative Democratic Pole (PDA) 809
- Alternative Information and Development Centre (AIDC) 3114
- Alternative Libertaire 121, 122
- Alternatives for the Americas* 3656–7
- Alternatives to Neoliberalism in Southern Africa (ANSA) 3111, 3112
- Altgeld, John Peter 1570
- Althusser, Louis 1669, 2249, 2307, 2316, 2735
- Altman, Dennis 305
- Altman, J. 5
- Altos Godos, Batalla de los 3631
- altruism 842
- Alvarado, María Jesús 3598
- Alvarado, Pedro de 2080, 3255
- Alvaréz, Juan 1925
- Alvarez, Lenín 639
- Álvarez, María Teresa 845
- Alvarez, Mariano 445
- Alvarez, Osvaldo 3440
- Alvarez Martínez, María Ximena 1012–20, 1268, 1270–1, 2593–5
- Alvarez Tabio, Pedro 3573–4
- Alves, Margarida Maria 51–2
- Alves, Nito 2360–1
- Amador, Ernest A. 1335–6, 2840–1, 3373–4
- Amador, Zulma 2350–3
- Amakasu Masahiko 1848
- Amal (Hope) 1575, 1576, 2405
- Amalgamated Clothing Workers 1737
- Amalgamated Engineers' Union (AEU) 3728
- Amana Inspirationist Utopians 52–3, 3417
- Amandala* 1634
- Amangkurat II 1718
- Amanullah Khan 329, 330, 1934
- Amara, Fadela 3577
- Amaral, Francisco Xavier do 1043
- Amarasinghe, Somawansa 2634
- Amasya Protocol 293
- Amato, Giuliano 1311
- Amauta* journal 2218, 2649
- Amazonian rainforest protest and resistance 2273–4
- Ambedkar, B. R. 53–5, 955, 957–8
Buddha and His Dhamma, The 54, 958
 Buddhism 54
 class 1710
 as Dalit leader 1328, 2435
 and Gandhi 54, 958
 literary works 54 non-payment of taxes 1683 political parties 54
 resignation 3586
 social struggles 54
 untouchables 53, 957–8, 2434
- Amchitka Island nuclear test 1460
- Amdowa people 3290, 3291, 3293
- Amendola, Giovanni 1383
- America First Committee (AFC) 2489
- American Anti-Slavery Society
 disbanded 217
 Douglass 168
 Garrison 168, 214–15, 216, 1334, 3640
 Grimké 1467
 membership 2491
 women in 215, 1467, 3640

- American Birth Control League 2969, 3626
 American Brazilian Railway Company 467
 American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) 12, 1203
 Scottsboro Resistance 3002–3
 Sinclair 3041
American Civil War 55–69
 black troops 16, 56, 63, 71
 Cuba 917–18
 draft riots 69–70 financing of 62
 noncombatants 65 politics of 59–61
 radicalization 61–2
 Reconstruction 68, 2798–801
 Republicanism 62–3
 as revolution 61–3, 2020
 secession 58, 59 sectionalism 55–6
 slavery 59, 70–2, 755–7 socialist influences 2024–9 uniforms/flags 59
 Union forces 58, 59
 women's role 62, 3617
 see also Brown, John; Harpers Ferry
 American Colonization Society 207, 213–14, 394, 942
 American Communist Party (CP) 3413
 see also Communist Party of America (CPUSA)
 American Equal Rights Association (AERA) 169, 3622 American Federation of Labor (AFL) craft unionism 3411
 Debs 2031–2, 3064
 Gompers 2031, 2033, 3380
 Green 3411
 and IWW 1735
 and Knights of Labor 1978, 2026, 2258–9
 Morones 2340
 origins of 2028
 SPA 3064 and TUEL 1220
 see also AFL–CIO
 American and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society 215–16, 3640
 American Friends Service Committee 1170
American Historical Review 794
 American Indian Environmental Activism 2417–19
American Indian Movement (AIM) 385, 399, 2414–15
 Alcatraz Uprising 39–40
 Peltier 2628–9 split 2415
 American Indian Movement of Colorado 2416
 American Institute for Free Labor Development (AIFLD) 2128
American left 72–4
 American Legion 1532, 3150
 American Livestock Commission Company 2726
 American Medical Association 2969
 American Peace Mobilization (APM) 2489
 American Peace Society Congress 12
 American Philosophical Society 75
 American Railway Union (ARU) 595, 974, 2030–1
 American Revenue Act 77
American Revolution 74–88
 African Americans 84
 aftermath 3022
 American Independence 2022–4
 Atlantic port seaman resistance 294–7 early settlers 74–7
 Enlightenment 112
 France 1218
 and French Revolution 1274
 influence on Ireland 1785, 3392
 Lafayette 2041
 New England phase 78–9 organization of working 2020
 Paine 2569–71
 Saint-Simon 2952
 sexuality 3016
 Southern states 85–6
 utopian communities 3416
 War of Independence 74
 women's movement 3613–16
 women's rights 3612–13
American slave rebellions 88–90
 American Teheran embassy 1964
American Trotskyism 595–7
 American Vegetarian Society 3428
 American Veterans Committee (AVC) 72
 American War of Independence 74, 202, 1126, 1807, 2041 see also American Revolution
 American Woman Suffrage Association (AWSA) 169, 3622
 American Workers' Party (AWP) 596, 2035, 3412
 Americas Watch 2060
 Americo-Liberians 2114
 Ameringer, Oscar 1459
 Amerio, Ettore 2815
 Amharic language 1132
Ami du peuple, L' 2805
 Amiama Tió, Luis 1017
 Amicale, L' 853
 Amicales 3218
Amico del popolo, L' 1419
 Amiens, Peace of 442, 1224

- Amin, Jamil Abdullah al- 531–2
see also Brown, H. Rap
- Amin, Obaid Haj al- 3193
- Amin, Samir 1313, 1392, 1669
- Amirthalingam, A. 3252
- Amis de la Loi 1294
- Amish 1633
- Amman, Pottu 3252
- ammiyah* uprisings 2073
- Amnesty International
 Abu-Jamal 8
 Chiapas 2288
 Colombia 810
 Dalits 959
 Davitt 967
 Genoa G8 1309, 1401
 Madres de la Plaza de Mayo 2159
 Morocco 2339
 Ochoa 2289
 Paraguay 2603
 Saro-Wiwa 2973
Tutela Legal 2060
- Amo, Anton Wilhelm 91–2
- Amritsar, Treaty of 1928
- Amroz* 2581
- Ana María, Major 3713
- Anabaptist movement 92–3, 1356–7, 1633–4, 2491, 2831, 3417
 and Scientific Revolution 2987–8
- Anacaona 601, 602
- Anakpawis 2686
- Analytical Review* 3540
- Anand Panyarachun 3272
- anarcha-feminism 103, 124
see also anarcho-feminism
- Anarchie, L'* 120, 3013
- anarchism 93–101
 abstention from voting 100, 104
 anti-clericalism 99
 Argentina 101–5
 Australia 105–8
 Brazil 474
 Britain 108–10
 Canada 110–11
 CGT 120
 Chile 111–13, 691
 China 96, 113–15 cinema 116 culture 115–17
 education 117–18
 Finland 118–19
 France 119–22
 gender 122–6
 global justice movement 100
 Greece 126–7
 Hungary 127–9
 Italy 129–33
 IWW 98
 Japan 96, 133–5
 Jews 96–7, 99
 Korea 135–7
 marriage 123
 and Marxists 1745, 1755
 May Day 158
 Mexico 97, 137–9
 Mozambique 153
 New Zealand 139–40
 patriarchy 124
 Poland 140–1
 Puerto Rico 141 and punk 2064
 Russia 141–3, 3013
 sabotage 143–4
 South Africa 148–9
 Southern Africa 147–55
 Spain 97, 100, 144–7
 Spanish Civil War 100 spread of 96–7
 students 127
 syndicalism 147–55
 USA 154–60
 violence 142 virile 125
 Zapatismo 100
see also Black Bloc; individual anarchists
- Anarchist, The* 108
- Anarchist Black Cross 131
- Anarchist Exclusion Act 1412
- Anarchist Federation of Britain (AFB) 109, 3072
- Anarchist Federation of Uruguay (FAU) 3597
- anarchist feminism 122
 publications 124
- Anarchist League of Japan 1807
- Anarchist Library 142
- Anarchist People of Color 160
- anarchist-socialist movement 95–6
- Anarchist Workers Group (AWG) 3072
- Anarchists Against the Wall 1815
- Anarchistyczna Inicjatywa Robotnicza (AIR) 140
- anarcho-banditry 104
- anarcho-capitalism 97
- anarcho-feminism 2962
- anarcho-indigenism 111
- anarcho-punk 159
- Anarcho-Surrealist Insurrectionary Feminists 107
- anarcho-Zionism 99

- anarchocommunism 97, 160–1, 2048
 France 119
 Japan 133
 Kropotkin 120, 123
 Malatesta 98
 Reclus 2813
 anarchopacifism 99, 2048
anarchosyndicalism 98, 161–2, 2048
 Catalonia 145, 351, 2739, 3130, 3141
 Finland 119
 France 119, 120
 Hungary 3228
 IWW 96
 Landauer 2048
 SolFed 3071
 Spanish Civil War 847–50, 3136–7 see also Proudhon, Pierre Joseph Anarchy 109
Anarchy: A Journal of Desire Armed 159
Anarkiets Bibel (The Anarchist's Bible) 2524
 Anastasopoulou, Maria 3581–3
 Anatolia 283, 3350, 3355, 3360
 Anatolian Tigers 3343
 Anavatan Partisi (ANAP) 3342–3
 Anaya, Elbio Carlos 277
 Anaya González, Benjamín 562–3, 1911–12, 2157–8, 2853
 ANC: see African National Congress
 ANC Youth League 349, 3085, 3086, 3249
 Anckarström, Jacob Johan 1496 Andean communities
 music 2377
 peasant mobilization 2647
 Peru 2218, 2643, 2647, 2648–9 religious practices 2660 and Spaniards 3337–8
 Andean Community of Nations 871
 Anderson, Benedict 96, 2767
 Anderson, Elijah 3047
 Anderson, Guillermo 640, 641
 Anderson, J. L. 929
 Anderson, K. B. 3017
 Anderson, Michael 308, 309
 Anderson, Perry 3282
 Anderson, Sherwood 2253
 Anderson, Terry 1576–7
 Andhra Mahasabha 1707
Andhra Pradesh, Rampa rebellions 2802–3
 Andhra Pradesh Revolutionary Communist Committee (APRCC) 2423
 Andhra Provincial Congress Committee 2793
 Andijon protests 3422
 Andō Shōeki 133
 Andover Union 2720
 Andrade, David 105, 106
 Andrade, Juan 2738
 Andrade, Mario d' 2359
 Andrade, William 105
 Andreassi, Ansoino 1310, 1311
 Andrés Pastrana government 797
 Andrés Pérez, Carlos 604, 605, 665, 3437, 3439, 3440
Andresote, Zambo 162–4
 Andress, David 893
 Andrews, Jack 106
 Andrews, Stephen Pearl 123, 156
 Andrews, W. H. 149, 150, 151, 154, 832, 834, 2222, 3091, 3092
 Andropov, Yurii 1626, 3118
Ang Bayan 2682, 2687
 Angelim, Eduardo 490, 562
 Angell, Alan 678–83
 Angeloni, Elena 1433
 Angiolillo, Michele 130, 145, 383
 Anglican Church 516
 Anglo-Boer War 148
 Anglo-Burmese War III 552
 Anglo-Dutch Treaty 1720, 2176
 Anglo-Dutch War IV 86
 Anglo-Egyptian Agreement 3195
 Anglo-Egyptian Treaty 3194
 Anglo-Iranian Oil Company (AIOC) 1763, 1764, 2343
 Anglo-Irish Agreement 2573
 Anglo-Irish Treaty 1802, 3044
 Anglo-Irish War 793, 1801, 3044
 Anglo-Malayan Defense Treaty 2178
 Anglo-Portuguese alliance 187
 Anglo-Russian Convention 3366
 Anglo-Russian entente 1768
 Anglo-Scottish Union of Parliaments 1789, 1854
 Anglo-Yoruba treaties 1641
Angola
assimilado elite 164, 2448
 and Cuba 166 government in exile (GRAE) 2359
 independence 3546
 Lara 1216
 National Heroes Day 2449
 national liberation 164–7
 Neto 2448–9
 Portuguese rule 878, 1042, 2448, 3204
 rebellion 1216
 trade unions 3112
 USA 164–5
see also Frente Nacional de Libertação de Angola
 (FNLA); Mondlane, Eduardo; Movimento
 Popular de Libertação de Angola (MPLA)
 Angolan Communist Party 164
 Angoulvant, Gabriel 884

- Angry Brigade 512
 Anguas Barragán, Francisco 2776
Angustura Address 412
 Anicinabe Park 585
 Anido, Martínez 145, 352
 Anielewicz, Mordechai 3513
 Aniello, Tommaso (Masaniello) 1847
 Anilewicz, Mordecai 1917
 Animal Liberation Front 160, 1052, 1054, 1055, 3429 animal liberation movement 1052
 Animal Rights Militia 3429 animal rights movement 3429
Animals' Agenda, The 3429
 Anjuman-I-Islah-ul-Afghana (Society for Afghan Reform) 1966
 Ankara Democratic Higher Education Association (ADYÖD) 2010
 Annam provinces 2054, 3468, 3469, 3476
 Annan, Kofi 738
 Annapolis Convention 87
 Anne of Austria 1303–4
 Anne of Cleves 516
 Annenkov, Yuri 327
 Annese, Gennaro 1847
 Annexation Club 1564
 Annual, Battle 2336
 Anorí Operation 801, 1082
 Another World is Possible (DSM!) 3687
 Ansar people 3191, 3194
 Ansari, Bayazid 2869
Anschluß 320, 321, 1179
 Anson, George 1924
 ANSWER 227, 229, 2504
 Antal, S. P. 2857
 Antananarivo 2156
Anthony, Susan B. 167–70
 abolitionism 167
 AERA 3622
 coeducation 168, 170
 and Douglass 169
 History of Woman Suffrage, A 3624
 National American Suffrage Association 3624
 NWSA 167, 169–70
 and Parren 3583
 resistance to 168
 Seneca Falls 167, 3621
 and Stanton 3164
 women's rights 3620
 women's suffrage 167, 2492
 and Woodhull 3621, 3636
Anthorcha, La 104
 anthracite industry 2344
 Anti-Airport League 1906–7 anti-apartheid movement
 Britain 173
 South Africa 170–6, 2503
 anti-art 953
 Anti-Authoritarian International 1756 anti-authoritarianism Godwin 1410
 punk 2777
 Anti-Boycott Act 553 anti-Brahmin campaigns 1682
Anti-Bread-Tax Circular 177
 Anti-Capitalist Alliance 831 anti-capitalist movement 324, 1387, 1388
 Reclaim the Streets 2809–10
 anti-Catholicism 1405–7, 1418–19 Anti-Circular Society 1698, 1699
 anti-clericalism
 anarchism 99
 Ecuador 1062–3
 England 2988
 Enlightenment 1109–11
 free schools 118
 Ireland 1785
 Mussolini 2384
 secularism 1109
 Anti-Communist Act, Thailand 3259
 Anti-Compromise Conference 451
Anti-Corn Law agitation 176–8, 658
 Anti-Corn Law League 176, 2693 anti-corporatism 3659 anti-delinquency projects 49
 Anti-Discrimination Act 3563 anti-dowry campaigns 3588–9 anti-fascism
 GDR 1338
 Italy 1832–5
 Partito d'Azione 1383–4
 People's Front 178–80, 1003
 Resistenza 1832–5, 2834–6
 Yugoslavia, World War II 3682–5
 Anti-Fascist Council on National Liberation of Yugoslavia (AVNOJ) 3296, 3684, 3691
 Anti-Fascist Organization (AFO) 302, 556
 Anti-Fascist People's Freedom League (AFPFL) 302, 556, 2527, 2977–8, 3279 anti-fascist People's Front 178–80
 Anti-Fascist Student Association of Greece (AASPE) 1435
 Anti-Flag 885, 2778 anti-Franco worker struggles 180–4 anti-globalization 110, 1147–8, 1431, 2503–4, 3588 anti-GM protests 1040
 Anti-Imperialist League 2225
 Anti-Imperialist United Front (FRA) 420

- anti-Japanese boycotts 185–6
 Anti-Japanese Federation 3258
 Anti-Japanese National Salvation Association 1926 anti-Jewish action 1914 see also anti-Semitism anti-Kaihatsu Foundation 1904–5 anti-Lutheran Church revolt 3603 anti-monarchy protests, Portugal 186–8 anti-Napoleonic Wars of Liberation 188–90 anti-nuclear campaigns 190–9
 Australia 305
 Britain 190–1
 Food Not Bombs 159
 Japan 191–3, 1887, 1888
 Marshall Islands 199
 New Zealand 2528–9
 non-violent 2501
 see also environmental protest
 Anti-Occupation Treaty – Year 21st 1814 anti-organizationalists 98, 162
 Anti-Partition League 1416
 Anti-Poor Law movement 2720
 anti-power 323
 Anti-Privatization Forum (APF) 3100 Anti-Racist Action (ARA) 199–200, 3071 anti-rape movement 3588–9
 Anti-Rightist Campaign 2203
 anti-roads movements 1039, 1052, 1054 see also Reclaim the Streets
 Anti-Saloon League 3543
 anti-Semitism
 Austria 3741
 black nationalism 396–7
 Europe 1181
 France 405, 1021–2
 Hitler 1589
 Proudhon 2766
 Russia 1914, 1915
anti-slavery movement
 Britain 200–5, 206–9, 209–11
 USA 211–18
 Wilberforce 3527–9
 women's organizations 3620
 see also abolitionism
 Anti-Slavery Society 204, 212, 3529, 3618 Anti-Socialist Laws 3066, 3721 anti-statism 156 anti-Tamil riots 2741
 anti-tax riots 734, 3201
 anti-terrorism 3644
anti-Vietnam War movement 1946–7, 2785, 3170, 3178
 Britain 218–19
 United States 219–23
- anti-war movement
 Australia 303–4
 France 225–7
 Iraq 227–30
 punks 2778
 World War I 2489
 Yugoslavia 223–4
 see also anti-Vietnam war movement anti-war songs 2380
 Anti-Zionism 349
 Antietam, Battle of 61, 64, 217
 Antigua 2075, 2077
 Antigua Trades and Labor Union 2077
 Antillean Islands 942, 1032 antinomianism 155, 401, 2988
 Antirreleccionista National Party 2158
 Antliff, Allan 110–11
 Antonescu, Ion 2857
 Antonietti, Colomba 3592
 Antonio, José 182
 Antônio Conselheiro 597–9, 600, 601
 Antonioli, Maurizio 997–8, 1821–4
 Antonov-Ovseenko, Vladimir 3141
 Antrobus, Peggy 3579
 Antun, Farah 235
 Anvil Operation 2256
 Anzavur, Ahmed 3356
 ANZUS (Australia, New Zealand, United States Security Treaty) 2529 Aoun, Michel 2405
 apartheid
 COSATU 874–5, 3096–8
 United Nations 2398
 see also anti-apartheid movement apartheid-capitalism 173
 Apodeti 1042–3
 Aponte uprising 89, 911
Apóstil, El 2868
 Apostol, Gheorghe 2866
Apostolato Popolare 2267
Appeal to Reason 3418
APRA: see Alianza Popular Revolucionaria Americana
April Fifth Forum 985
 April Rebellion, Nicaragua 605
 April Revolution, Korea 3181, 3182
April Revolution, Nepal 230–2
 Aprista Party: see Partido Aprista Peruano
 Apte, Narayan 1331
 Aptheker, Bettina 233
Aptheker, Herbert 232–3, 964
 Aqqaqir, Battle of 51 al-Aqsa Intifada 1760, 1815 al-Aqsa Mosque 1760
 Aquash, Anna Mae 2629

- Aquino, Benigno 2506, 2682
 Aquino, Corazon (Cory) 2506, 2682
 Ar-Namys 3329
 Arab-Israeli War (1948) 399
 Arab Liberation Movement 3222
Arab socialism 233–7, 1072
 Arab Socialist Union 2406
 Arabi, Ahmed 3395
 Arabi Revolt 3395
 Arabic language 2577
Aracaré 237
Arafat, Yasser
 death of 1760
 and Fatah 238–9, 1758 in Kuwait 237–8
 Oslo Accords 1759, 1815
 and PLO 237–40, 399
 Araguaia Guerilla movement 472–3
 Aramburu, Pedro Eugenio 244, 245, 2638
 Arana Osorio, Carlos 1476
 Araujo, Arturo 2020, 2224, 2225, 2956
Arbeiter Fraint, Der 108
Arbeiter-Stimme 2027
Arbeiterverbrüderung 1350
Arbenz, Jacobo Guzmán 240–1, 1217, 1473, 1485, 1604
 Arce, Bayardo 2469
Arch, Joseph 241–2
 Arcos, Federico 110
 Arcos, Santiago 111
 Arden enclave 3418
 Arditti, Rita 1427–8
 Aref, Abd al-Rahman 1781
 Aref, Abdul 1781
 ARENA (Aliança Renovadora Nacional) 497, 2959
 Arena Theater 406
 Arenal, Concepción 3610
 Arenas, Gloria 2285
 Arenas, Reinaldo 923, 3018
Arendt, Hannah 242–3, 504, 904 banality of evil 243
 Human Condition, The 242
 Hungarian 1956 Revolution 1625
 Origins of Totalitarianism, The 242, 3157
 On Revolution 243
 Arenstein, Rowley 3104
 Arévalo Bermeja, Juan José de 240, 1014, 1472
 Argaña, Luis María 2603, 2608
 Argelian independence 1271
 Argenlieu, Admiral Georges Thierry d' 3471
Argentina
 armed struggle/guerrillas 243–7 bakers' strike 101–5 bishops 2059
 car industry 864, 867
 CGT 863–8, 2638–9, 2640
 class struggle 248–9
 Communards 102
 Cordobazo and Rosarioz uprisings 863–9 currency pegged 262, 267, 2347
 de-Peronization 863, 2638
 Dirty War 1155
 disappeared 105, 251, 255, 1427–8, 1579–81, 2159, 2500
 escraches 1579–80
 general strikes 247–9, 260–1, 2641–2
 grassroots workers' movement 250–3
 Grita de Alcorta 253–4
 Guillén 1491–2
 harvest failures 254 human rights movement 254–7
 ILO 258
 IMF 1085, 2640–1
 indigenous popular protests 257–9 interclass cooperation 268–9
 kidnappings 255, 1427–8 labor strikes 259–61
 labor unions 261–3
 literary figures 103
 March Against Hunger, Unemployment, and Repression 263
 May Day 103
 metal workers' strike 2640 military government 254
 Montoneros 245–6, 1155–7, 2149
 Movement of Recuperated Factories 2346–50 neighborhood assemblies 1085–7
 NGOs 2346
 Nueva Canción 2377
 piquetero movement 262, 263, 263–5
 poverty 268, 2347
 priests resigning 868
 punk rock 105
 resistencia commandos 2639–41
 road blockades 262
 Semana Roja 265–7
 Semana Trágica 103, 247–8 social and political protest 267–70
 socialism 270–3
 socialist and communist workers' movement 270–3 state terror 1427–8
 student movement 3181
 sugar cane cultivation 866, 2642
 torture 1427–8
 trade unions 2638–9, 2642
 trash collectors' strike 2640
 Triple A 1155
 two demons theory 2159

Argentina (cont'd)

- unemployed protests 261–3, 2347
- University Reform 864, 273–4
- worker actions 274–6
- worker strikes in Patagonia 276–8
- workers' self-management 2347–9
- see also* Madres de La Plaza de Mayo
- Argentinazo, El* 264, 1084–7, 1580
- Argentine Anarcho-Communist Federation 104
- Argentine Corporation of Producers 2641
- Argentine League for the Rights of Man 254
- Argentine Libertarian Federation 104
- Argentine University Federation (FUC) 274
- Argentine Vanguard Socialist Party 271
- Argüelles, José Albino 277
- Arias, Arnulfo 1480, 3304
- Arias, Desiderio 1012
- Arias, Juan Angel 2018
- Arias Altamirano, Luis 163
- Arias Cárdenas, Francisco 3441, 3449
- Arias Peace Plan 2958
- 'Arif, 'Abd al-Rahman 3225, 3226
- 'Arif, 'Abd al-Salam 3225, 3226
- Aringo, Peter Aloo 1948
- Aristide, Jean-Bertrand 278–80, 1503, 1506–7, 1508, 1509
 - Lavalas* 1520–1
 - overthrown 1510
- Aristotle 777, 2836, 2987
- Ariza, Daniel 1014
- Arizmendiarieta, José María 2314, 2315
- Arjona, Ricardo 639–40
- Arkansas National Guard 763
- Arkzin* 224
- Armand, E. 97
- Armand, Inessa 3553, 3606, 3607
- Armed Forces Movement (MFA) 1042, 2729, 2731–2
- Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) 413, 800, 2771, 2772, 3442–3
- Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) 1615
- Armed Islamic Group (GIA) 41
- Armed Islamic Movement (MIA) 41
- Armée de Libération Nationale Kameronaise (ANKL) 580
- Armenia
 - Diaspora 281, 282, 284
 - genocide 280, 281–3, 285, 286
 - Ottoman empire 285–6
 - popular mobilization 280–5
 - resistance 285–7
 - suicide attack 284
 - terrorism 280, 281
 - Turkey 3348
 - see also* Young Turks

- Armenian, Garo 283
- Armenian language 283, 286
- Armenian Question 281, 282
- Armenian Revolutionary Army (ARA) 280
- Armenian Revolutionary Federation (ARF) 283, 286
- Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) 280, 284
- arms, right to bear 331
- Arms Act 1674, 1681, 1695
- Armstrong, Louis 2380
- Army of National Liberation 1614
- Arnauld, Marie-Angelique 1304
- Arnold, Benedict 79–80, 82, 84, 2041
- Arnold, Victoria 545–7, 1552–4, 2692–3, 3150–2
- Arnold-Forster, H. O. 518
- Arns, Paulo Evaristo 2060
- Aron, Raymond 2316
- Aronowitz, Stanley 771, 1398–9
- Arora, Jagjit Singh 348
- Arouas people 1269
- Arouch Movement 1927
- Arouet, François Marie: see Voltaire
- Arp, Jean 953
- Arpilleristas 3598
- Arquilla, J. 3716
- Arriaga, Don Antonio de 3337
- Arrow Cross 1175, 1176
- Arrow War 3672
 - see also* Opium Wars
- Arroyo, Gonzolo 2061
- Arrufat, Anton 923
- Arshinov, Peter 98, 143, 2166, 2167
- Arslan, Shaqib 236
- art and anarchy 115, 116
- Art is a Weapon* 27
- Artaud, Antonin 1482
- Artavia Araya, Fernando 1017–20, 2843–4
- Artêşa Rizgariya Gelê Kurdistan 2011
- Artésano, El* 270
- Articles of Confederation 86, 87
- Artigas, Gervasio José 287–9
- Artigas Sugar Workers' Union 3408
- artisans/savants 2991–2
- Artiukhina, Alexandra 3552, 3607
- Artois, Comte d' 891, 892, 896, 897
 - see also* Charles X
- Arts and Crafts movement 2340
- Artykov, Anvar 3331
- Aruba 1032, 1033
- Aruna Yukanthor, Prince 567
- Arundel, Henry, third Lord 289
- Arundel, Lady Blanche 289–90
- Arusha Declaration* 2532
- Arya Samaj 1583, 1697

- Aryanization 1179, 1587
 Asad, Asaduzzaman 2578
 Asad, Hafiz al- 2779, 3226
 Asamblea de Barrios (Assembly of Shantytowns) 605
 Asamblea Popular, Bolivia 419
 Asante, Molefi Kete 393
 Asante-British War 3669
 Asante culture 3669-70
 Asbestos (Quebec), civil rights 2783
 Ascaso, Francisco 1187
 Ascaso Column 131
 ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) 2656, 3263, 3488
 Asedillo, Teodoro 2673
 Ash, Timothy Garton 1342, 3557
 Ash Can School 1125 ash-Sharif, Shaykh Muhammad 2163
 Ashaninka people 1923
 Ashgabat fortress 3366
 Ashida, Hitoshi 1909
 Ashihama plant, Chubu Electric 191
 Ashio riots 1898
 Ashiqqa Party 3194, 3195
 Ashley, Lord 2125
 Ashman, Sam 1672
 Ashwood, Amy 3559
 Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Summit 111
 Asian Bureau of the Comintern 2874
 Asian Development Bank 3288, 3655
 Asian Labor Education Center 2676
 Asian Migrant Center 3651-2
 Asian Pacific Economic Conference (APEC) 1397, 1399-400
 Asian Regional Forum 3641
 Asian Relations Conference 2389
 Asian Social Forum 959
 Asinara Special Prison 2402, 2816
 Aske, Robert 509
 Aslanov, Kadreddin 3245
 Asociación Nacional de Agricultores Pequeños (ANAP) 921, 936
 Asquith, Herbert 527, 528, 1047
 Ass'ad, Ahmad el- 2069
 Assad, Cemil al- 2011
 Assad, Hafiz al- 2011
 Assad, Rifat al- 2011
 Asamblea de Catalunya 632
Assemblés coloniales 1526
Assemblés provincials 1526
 Assembly Bomb Case 1677
 Assembly of Factory Workers of St. Petersburg 2879
 Assembly of First Nations 584
 Assembly of Notables 1298, 2041
Assembly of the Poor 290-1, 3276
 Assembly of Social Movements 3642
 Assembly for the Sovereignty of the Peoples (ASP) 788
assimilado elite
 Angola 164, 2448
 South Africa 153
 Assmann, Hugo 478
 Assoa revolt 566, 567
 Associação Social Democrática Timorense (ASDT) 1042
Association, L' 2811
 Association of African Women for Research and Development (AAWORD) 3549
 Association of Agriculturalists of Alto Paraná (ASAGRAPA) 2602
 Association of All Classes and All Nations 2461
 Association amicable des originaires de l'AEF: see Amicale
 Association of Anarchist Movements (ADA) 143
 Association of Cretan Students 1434
 Association of Displaced Afro-Colombians (AFRODES) 796
 Association of the Friends of the People 2366
 Association for Human Rights 2104
 Association of International Cooperation and Disarmament (AICD) 304
 Association of Rural Workers (ATC) 2474
 Association of Slavic Women 3632
 Association for Social Knowledge (ASK) 2099
 Association of Southeast Asian Nation: see ASEAN
Association for the Taxation of Financial Transactions for the Aid of Citizens: see ATTAC Association of United Workers of Thailand 3259 Association for Women's Rights 3597
 Association for Women's Suffrage 2524
 Association of Young Democrats 1618
 Association for Yugoslav Democratic Initiative (UJDI) 224
 associationists 2620
 Associations for the Defense of Rights 3349
 Astiz, Alfredo 255
 Aston, Louise 3579
 Astrow, A. 3740
Asturias
 guerilla warfare 3138
 October uprising 291-3
 Provincial Revolutionary Committee 292
 repression 292
 Spanish Revolution 3129, 3130-1, 3133
 Aswan High Dam 1072, 2406
 Aswan revolt 1074
 Atabayev, Gaigysyz 643

- Atabekian, Alexander 142
 Atahualpa, Inca emperor 1923–4, 2876
 Atahualpa (Juan Santos): see Juan Santos Atahualpa Rebellion
 Atanasov, Velcho 539
 Ataque Frontal 2063
Atatürk, Mustafa Kemal 293–4 anti-secularists 3342
 Armenia 281
 and Bolsheviks 282
 death of 3362
 Liberation War 3355
 modernization 3359
 and PKK 293–4, 1116, 2010
 Turkish nationalism 1453
 War of Independence 3349, 3350
 Atbara, Battle of 2165
 Ateneo Artístico y Literario de Señoras 3610
 Athens, Battle of 1454, 1455
 Athens, famine 1436
 Athens Law School 1434
 Athit Kamlang-ek 3272
 Atiyah, Bahjat al- 2954
 Atlacatl Brigade 2958, 2959
 Atlantic Charter 3194
Atlantic Monthly 10, 615
Atlantic port seaman resistance 294–7
Atlantic slave trade, shipboard insurrections
 3024–7
 Atomic Energy Basic Law 192
 Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) 194
ATTAC (Association for the Taxation of Financial Transactions for the Aid of Citizens) 297–301, 1152, 1308, 1313, 1316, 1402, 1403, 3100
Attaque, L' 2071
 Attlee, Clement 302, 557, 1330, 2039, 2792
 Attwood, Thomas 633
 Atwoli, Francis 1950
 Audin, Maurice 226
 Audu, Reine 1294
 Audubon Society 617
Aufbau 242
 Aulfray, Hughes 2382
 August Revolution, Vietnam 1716–17
 Augustenburg, Duke of 2985
 Augustine of Hippo 2828–9
 Aulard, Alphonse 1283
 Auld, William 1566
Aung San 301–3
 AFPFL 3279
 assassinated 2977, 3068
 Blueprint for Burma 555 and Bose 301–3, 451, 1679
 federal union plans 549 and Nu 2527
 as student 549, 554
 and Than Tun 3279
 Aung San Suu Kyi 301, 303, 550, 551, 2522, 2528 house arrest 3279
 Aurangzeb 368, 2869
 Auriol-Bao Dai Agreements 3473
Aurora, L' 3745
 Auschwitz-Birkenau camps 13
 Australasian Secular Association (ASA) 105
Australia aboriginal protests 307–12
 anarchism 105–8
 anti-war movement 303–4
 Commonwealth Parliament 314 dispossessed 307
 femocrats 3563–4
 gay rights movement 305, 2097
 green bans movement 1456–8, 2373
 IWW 315, 1738–9
 labor movement 312–16
 Labor's Volunteer Army 2038–9 land rights movement 3 left-wing politics 313–14, 316–17
 LGTB 2096–8
 new social movements 305–6
 squatting 1944
 suffrage 3561–2
 unemployment 315
 unionization 313–14
 wages 314, 3562–3
 welfare state 3561–2
 women's movement 3561–4
 youth movements 107
 see also Eureka Stockade; Munday, Jack; New Australia movement; Vinegar Hill Rebellion Australia, New Zealand, United States Security
 Treaty (ANZUS) 2529
 Australian Aboriginal Fellowship 3
 Australian Aboriginal Progressive Association
 (AAPA) 307
 Australian Aborigines League (AAL) 307
 Australian Anarchist Centenary Celebrations 108
 Australian Freedom League 303
 Australian Labor Party (ALP)
 Aboriginal Affairs 310, 313–15, 316–17
 Australian Political Economy Movement 823
 Australian Student Labor Federation 304
Austria
 Anschluss 320, 321
 anti-Semitism 3741
 Catholic Church 320
 Christian Socialists 319
 ethnic mix 318, 319, 320

- European Union 321
 fascism 320
 and Italy 1826
 Napoleon I 189
 National Socialist Sturmabteilung 319
 Nazism 320
 NSDAP 320, 1172
 parliamentary democracy 319–20 protests, twentieth century 317–21
 Schutzstaffeln (SS) 320
 Social Democratic Party 319
 World War I 318–19
 Austria-Hungary 318, 319
 Austrian Succession, War of 1126, 2851
 Austro-Fascist coup 354
 Austro-Hungarian Dual Monarchy 1624
 Austro-Hungarian War 2689
Austro-Marxism 321–2, 354, 1581
 Auténticos 926
 Authentic Labor Front (FAT) 2294, 2298
 Authentic Radical Liberal Party 2606
 authoritarianism 648, 815
 Autodefensa Obrera (Workers' Self-Defense) 3389
 Automatists 110
autonome 1741
Autonomía magazine 2162
 Autonomia Operaia (Workers' Autonomy) 1838, 1840, 1842, 1843, 2426
autonomism 322–5
 autonomist Marxism (operaism) 1841
 Autonomous Action (AD) 143 autonomous free time politics 1420 autonomous Marxism 2306–7
 Autonomous Social Centers: see Centri Sociali Autonomous University of Chapingo 3297 autonomy
 heteronomy 622, 2307 of migration 2305, 2306, 2307 organization forms 2371–2
 Autumn Harvest Uprising 725, 2201
 Avalos, Eduardo 275–6
 Avanguardia Operaia (AO) 1840, 2622
Avanti! 1440, 2169, 2383, 3013, 3015
 Ave Lallemand, Germán 270
 Aveling, Edward 2229, 2341, 3061
 Avendaño 277, 278
 Aviano, Italy 1008
 Ávila-Espinosa, Felipe Arturo 606–7, 2158
 Avineri, S. 1000
 Avineri, Shlomo 1649
 Avlihos, Mikelis 126
 Avneri, Uri 1816
 Avrich, Paul 159, 2167
 Avril, Prosper 1506
 Awakening 89 1345
 Awami Jamhoori Party (People's Democratic Party) 2583
 Awami Jamhoori Tehreek (People's Democratic Movement) 2585
 Awami League 344, 346, 2578, 2581, 2582–3
 Awami National Party (ANP) 1857, 2404, 2584 Awolowo, Obafemi 23, 25
Axe, The 2784, 2785
 Axel Springer publishing 1037
 Axelrod, Pavel 979
 Ayacucho, Battle of 3458
 Ayacucho people 2644
 Ayala, C. J. 2769, 2774
 Ayala, Eligio 2609
 Ayala, Eusebio 2599, 2609
 Ayala Plan 2277, 2279, 2540
Ayim, May 325–6
 Aylwin, Patricio 687, 2507
 Aymara Altiplano 1936
 Aymara protesters 434, 1936–7, 1939, 2371, 2658, 2660
 'Ayn, Qurrat al- 1766
 Ayub Khan 16, 346, 2262, 2578, 2579
 Jalib on 1857
 martial law 2580, 2581
 Ayyanger, N. Gopalaswamy 1932
 Azad, Chandrasekhar 1678, 1710, 3041
 Azad, Maulana 2432
 Azad Hind Fauz 451, 1679, 1704–5, 1710–11
 Azad Muslim Conference 1929
 Azad Pakistan Party (APP) 2580
 Āzādi (Freedom) Society 3358–9
 Azaña, Manuel 3144
 Azania People's Organization (AZAPO) 3084, 3086, 3088
 Azania Youth Unity (AZANYU) 3089
 Azanian Confederation of Labor 3096
 Azerbaijan 811
 Azhari, Ismail al- 3191, 3194
 Azione Cattolica (Catholic Action) 2835
 Azione Rivoluzionaria 131
 Aznar, José Maria 229
 Azores 186
 Aztlan Underground 2064
 Azzellini, Dario 162–4, 412–16, 737, 1006–10, 1081–4, 1307–12, 1471–2, 1832–5, 1835–9, 2814–18, 3436–41, 3441–5, 3448–50, 3450–1, 3451–2, 3452–5, 3706–7
 Ba Jin 115, 158
 Ba Maw, Dr. 302, 554, 556, 2527, 2977, 3279
 Ba Pe, U. 552, 554, 3068
 Ba Sein, Thakin 2978
 Baader, Andreas 1368

- Baader-Meinhof Group: see Red Army Faction
- Baathists
 counterrevolution 2955
 Iraq 353, 1777, 1781, 1782–3, 3221–7
 socialism 1069
 Syria 3221–7
- Baba Chinese 2176
- Babacar, Seye 3007
- Babangida, Ibrahim 2114, 2481, 2483, 3547
- Babangida, Maryam 3548
- Babbar Akali Movement 1677
- Babel, Isaac 327–8
- Babels network 3642, 3643
- Babeuf, François-Noël (Gracchus) 328–9, 403, 545, 894, 1004, 1743, 2543
- Babi Conference 1766–7
- Babi Yar 1183
- Babington, Thomas 3528
- Babu, Abdul Rahman Mohamed 3708, 3709
- Baby Doc: see Duvalier, Jean-Claude
- Bach, Alexander 1620
- Bacha-i Sakkao's movement 329–30, 3243
- Bachmann, Josef 1037
- back-to-Africa movement 208
- Back of the Yards Neighborhood Council 49
- Bacon, David 1641–3
- Bacon, Francis 2987, 2988–9
- Bacon, Nathaniel 330–1
- Bacon, Wendy 107
- Bacon's Rebellion 75, 330–1
- Badasht Conference 1766
- Baden, Max von 2117
- Badiou, Alain 2263
- Badl-ke-Serai, Battle of 1690
- Badlands National Monument 2413
- Badoglio, Pietro 1384, 1833, 2834
- Badr Bahini al- 347
- Baeck, Rabbi Leo 1916
- Baer, James 1332–3
- Báez, Buenaventura 1015, 1016
- Báez, Cecilio 2608
- Báez, Ramón 1017
- Bagha Jatin 1675, 1676, 2874
- Baghdad Pact 1769, 1776, 1780
- Baghiu, Aurel 2866
- Bagley, Sarah 2130–1
- Bahadur Shah II 1687, 1688, 1689, 1690, 1709
- Bahamas 89, 2734
- Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) 959
- Bai, Rani Lakshmi 1690
- Bailey, Amy 3559
- Bailey, Melanie A. 225–7, 1601–2, 2805–6
- Bain, J. T. 149, 331–2, 3091
- Bainimarama, Frank 1199, 1200
- Baird, Ernest 2572
- Baird, John 1385
- Baise Uprising 986
- Bajpai, Girja Shankar 1932
- Bak, János M. 3227–8
- Baker, Ella Josephine 73, 332–3, 740, 1259
 and King 1973
 SCLC 1974, 3186
- Baker, Josephine 1555, 1556
- Baker, Newton D. 2824
- Baker, Samuel 3369
- Baker, Thomas 1196
- Baker, Valentine 2164
- Bakht Khan 1689
- Bakhtiar, Shapour 1770
- Bakhtiari, Haj Aligoli Khan 1768
- Bakhtin, Mikhail 1148
- Bakiev, Kurmanbek 3331, 3332, 3333
- Bakke, Allan 754
- Bakongo 164
- Bakr, Ahmad Hassan al- 1781, 3225, 3226–7
- Baksh-Soodeen, Rawwida 3579
- Bakshi Ghulam Mohammed 1932–3
- Baku Opposition 3030
- Baku soviet 2919
- Bakunin, Mikhail Alexandrovich 333–7
 anarchism 95, 122, 124, 335–6, 1575, 2926
 collectivism 335, 2008, 2813
 and communism 161
 domestic revolution 976
 and Fanelli 1161
Federalism, Socialism, and Anti-Theologism 334
 First International 977, 1755, 2237
 as influence 102, 129, 141, 154, 336, 973, 2008, 2009, 2030
 International Alliance of Social Democracy
 2811
Knouto-Germanic Empire, The 335 and Marx 96, 333–4, 335, 1744
 and Mazzini 335 and Nechaev 334, 2425 and Nicholas II 334
 and Pisacane 2692
 and Proudhon 333
 and Reclus 2811
 state collapse 976
Statism and Anarchy 335, 2237
 and Zasulich 3720
- Bala, Sruti 1965–70
- Balabanoff, Angelica 2382
- Balabanov, Slavi 540
- Balafrej, Ahmad 1248
- Balaguer, Joaquín 1017, 1019
- Balaiada revolt 491
- Balasingham, Anton 2741
- Balch, Emily G. 1742

- Baldwin, James 73, 391, 964
 Baldwin, Stanley 520, 521, 525
 Bale revolt 1134
 Balfour, Sebastian 180
 Balfour Declaration 374, 3742, 3743
 Bali, Conquest of 1720
 Balibo Accord 1043
 Balkan Alliance 338
 Balkan Communist Federation 338
 Balkan Federation 31
 Balkan Federative Republic 337
Balkan socialist confederation 337–9, 1440
 Balkan Wars 35–6, 338, 1440
 Balkans 338, 1450, 1452, 1453, 2341
see also Albania
 Ball, Hugo 116, 953
 Balladur, Edouard 2459
 Ballarat goldfields 1144, 1944, 2043
 Ballarat Reform League 1144
 Ballén, Durant 1066
 Ballestrino de Careaga, Esther 2159
 Balli Kombëtar (National Liberation Front) 30
 Ballinamuck, Battle of 1788
 Ballinger, William 833
 Ballivián, Hugo 431
 Ballor, Jordan J. 3748–9
 Ballynahinch, Battle of 1788
 Balmaceda, José Manuel 690–1, 693
 Baloo, Palwankar 1328
 Baltic Chain 811
 Baltic Fleet 2004, 2911
Baltic protests 339–43
 German control 2890
 rebellions against landlords 2884
 Russian Revolutions 340
 Singing Revolution 810–11
 World War II 340–1
 Baltimore MTW 1753
 Baluches Rebellion 1029
 Baluchistan 13, 1680
 Balweg, Conrado 2686
 Balzac, Honoré de 1283
 Bama-htwet-yat Ghine (Freedom Bloc) 302
 Bamford, Samuel 1632
 Bamileke peoples 579, 580, 1252
 Ban the Bomb 190, 2877
 Ban Me Thuot 3485
 banana growing
 Colombia 795
 Costa Rica 447
 Ecuador 1064
 massacres 805
 Nicaraguan emigrants 447
banana plantation worker rebellion,
 Colombia 343–4
 Banbury Mutiny 1102
 Banco Popular 144
 Banda, Aleke 2176
 Banda, Hastings 2174, 2175, 3112
 Banda Tepanhuani 639
 Bandaranaike, S. W. R. D. 2050, 2052, 2053, 2632
 Bandopadhyay, Surendranath 2574
 Bands Against Bush 2845
 Bandung Conference 1731, 2434, 3035, 3688
 Banerjea, Surendranath 1689, 1698
 Banerjee, Rameswar 1704
 Banff North American Forum 3659
 Banfi, Antonio 2870
Bangabasi 1697
bangabhanga movement 2574
 Bangali people 2577, 2579
 Bangiyo Pradeshik Krishak Sabha 2575
 Bangkok Labor Federation 3258
 Bangla language 345, 2577
Bangladesh
 British East India Company 368
 creation of 368
 divided 347
 independence 2425, 2579
 languages 368
 Liberation War 344–8
 peasant movement 2574
 scorched earth policy 347
 Bangladesh Freedom Party 344
 Bangura, John 3031
 Bangwaketse Tribal Council 460
 Bangwato people 1955
 Bani-Sadr, Abolhasan 1774
 Banks, Dennis 2414
 BankWatch 1391
banlieues, Paris 2307
Banna, Hasan al- 1557–60, 1962–3
 Bannerjee, Albion 1928
 Bano, Shah 1585, 3590
 Bantman, Constance 2171–2
 Bantu Authorities Act 2192, 3087
 Bantu Education Bill 2192
Bantu Mirror 2221
 Bantu Women's League 3603
 Bantustans 2398
 Banyamulenge ethnic group 852, 858
 Banzer Suárez, Hugo 418, 419, 420, 790, 791, 1936, 2060
 Bao Dai 1598, 1599, 1716, 3473, 3479, 3484
 Bao Jingyan 113
 Baoulé people 883, 884
 Baptist Church 332, 1100, 1869, 2804
 Baptista, Mariano 425
 Baptiste, Jean Pierre 1508

- Baragua, Protest of 919
 Barak, Ehud 239, 1759
Baraka, Imanu Amiri 348–9, 393
 Baran, Paul 1648, 1649, 1668, 2249
 Barang, Marcel 2747
 Barata, Cipriano 485, 488, 489
Barayi, Elijah 174, 349, 3094, 3096
 Barbachano, Miguel 621
Barbados
 Busso 204, 559
 IMF loan 609
 independence 351
 protest and revolt 350–1
 slave insurrection 90, 204, 559
 Barbados Labour Party 609
 Barbara Affair 3576
 Barbarossa 3334
 Barbarossa Operation 451
 Barbé-Marbois, François 1526
 Barber, James 3085
 Barbès, Armand 403, 1234
 Barbie, Klaus 421, 1242
 Barbuse, Henri 2217
 Barcelona 145, 180, 227, 351–2, 3142
Barcelona General Strike 351–2
 Barchiesi, Franco 873–4
 Barco, Virgilio 798, 2791
 Bardez, Félix-Louis 568
 Bardo, Treaty of 3335
 Bardot, Brigitte 2216
 Bare, Marie Rose 1293
 Barebones Parliament 910, 1103, 1194
 Barei, Geoffrey 2220–2
 Barev, Tsenko 538
 Barfurushi, Mulla Muhammad Ali 1766
barga 2574
 see also sharecropping
 Bari, Judy 125
 Barisan Nasional Pembebasan Patani (BNPP)
 3270
 Barisan Revolusi Nasional (BRN) 3269
 Barkat, Abul 2578
 Barker, Tom 1738
 Barnave, Antoine 1284
 Barnes, Mary 1091
 Barnes de Carlotto, Estela 256, 1428
 Barnés de Castro, Francisco 3378–9
 Barnett, Ross 743, 2275
 Barnett, Samuel and Henrietta 10
 Barnitz, Jacqueline 2313
 Baron, Samuel 2694
 Barotseland 3700, 3702
 Barras, Paul 1079
 Barren Hill 83
 Barrera, Ernesto 2061
 Barres, Maurice 888
 Barrett, James R. 1220
 Barrett, Rafael 2609
 Barrias, Louis-Ernest 3147
Barricada 448
 Barrientos, René 416
 Barrio, Damián del 3451–2
 Barrio Assemblies 3439
 Barrionuevo, Francisco 1117
 Barrios, Gonzalo 3437
 Barrios, Justo Rufino 1475
 Barrios de Chamorro, Violeta 2470, 2476, 2564
 Barriteau, Eudine 3579
 Barroso, América 2963
 Barry, John 79
 Barry, Marion S., Jr. 3186
 Barry, Redmond 1944
 Barshevsky, Charlene 1397, 3663
 Barthélemy, G. 1537
 Bartoletti, Luigia Sassi 3592
 Barudi, Mahmud Sami al- 3395
 Baryatinskiy, Duke 2806
Barzani, Mulla Mustafa 352–3, 1777, 1778
 Barzola, Maria 429
 Barzón, El 2293, 2294
 Basarwa relocation 3113
 Baschetti, R. 2640
 base communities (CEBs)
 Brazilian Church 478, 2059, 2351
 El Salvador 2059
 Guatemala 1479, 2059
 and Gutiérrez 1497
 Nicaragua 2059, 2061, 2468
 non-violence 2500
 Vatican on 2062
 Basel, Council of 2830
 Basel, Treaty of 3307, 3310
 Bashir, Amir 2073
 Bashir Sfar 3335
 Bashkimi (Unity) 29
 Bashorun Ogunmola 1641
 Basiana 3081
 Baskin, Jeremy 875
 Basmachi movement 643, 3243–4, 3365, 3366,
 3421
 Basotho people 2110, 2111
Basque Country clandestine organizations 1128 industrialization 1128
 Mondragón 2314–15
 nationalism 1127–32
 Spanish Revolution 3129, 3133
 see also Euzkadi Ta Askatasuna (ETA) Bassa peoples 579, 580
 Bassanesi, Giovanni 1383

- Bastian, Gert 1946
 Bastidas Puyucagua, Micaela 3337
Bastille 353–4, 1274, 1275, 1526, 1743, 2851, 3256
 Bastille Day 354, 1273, 1274, 1744–5, 2339
 Bästlein, Bernhard 1377
 Bastwick, John 2118
 Basu, Jyoti 1637, 2422
 Basutoland 2109, 2111
 see also Lesotho
 Basutoland Congress Party (BCP) 2111
 Basutoland National Council (BNC) 2110
 Basutoland National Party (BNP) 2111
 Basutoland Progressive Association (BPA) 2110
 Bataan, Battle of 2674
Bataille Syndicaliste, La 870
Batalla, La 103, 2257, 2740
 Batallones Rojos (Red Battalions) 2279, 2280
 Batasuna 1131
 Batatu, Hanna 1780, 1781
 Batavia (Jakarta) 1727
 Batavian Republic 2445
 Bateria de Mujeres 3631
 Bates, Daisy 17
 Bates, Ruby 3002
 Batista, Fulgencio amnesty 928
 attempted coup 1013–14
 Camp Columbia base rebellion 2152
 Castro against 623, 914–17, 926, 927, 1216, 2762
 in exile 2996
 against guerillas 932 and Machado 2150–1 rural warfare 2467
 unpopularity of 933
 Batlle y Ordóñez, José 3408, 3410
 Batra, R. L. 1931
 Batraverse, Benoît 1516
Battaglia, La 131
 Batthyány, Ervin 128, 3228
 Batthyány, Lajos 1620, 1623
Battleship Potemkin (Eisenstein) 1080
 Baudouin I, of Belgium 363, 854, 2137
 Bauer, Bruno 333, 2230, 3679
Bauer, Otto 354–5, 1756, 2243
 Baum, Herbert 1378
 Baumfree, Isabella 3618
 see also Truth, Sojourner
 Bauthumley, Jacob 1104, 1105, 2805
 Bautista Arismendi, Juan 3457
 Bautzen, Battle of 443
 bauxite 608, 2197
 Bavdra, Timoci 1197, 1198, 2797
 Baxter Springs 65
 Bay of Pigs invasion 626–7, 923, 2376, 3573
 Bayan, Philippines 2681, 2682, 2686
 Bayar, Celal 3363
 Baylor Massacre 85
 Bayo, Alberto 929
 Bayonet Constitution, Hawaii 1564
 Bayrou, François 1645
 Bazin, Marc 1505, 1507
Beacon, The 3316
 Beale, Dorothea 3566
Bean na hEireann (The Irish Woman) 1416
 Beaton, David 3001
 Beauharnais, Josephine de 1546
 Beaulieu, Christian 1517, 2872
 Beaulieu, Yannick 2776–7, 3044–6
 Beaumont, Florence 220 beauty contests 3569, 3629
Beauvoir, Simone de 355–7, 2974, 3575, 3576 autobiographies 356
 Mandarins, The 356
 Nouvelles féministes 3575
 Pour une morale de l'ambiguïté 356
 Pyrrhus et Cinéas 356
 Second Sex, The 355–6, 2262, 3167, 3575
 Temps Modernes, Les 1420
 Bebel, August 124, 1351, 1942, 2237, 2243, 3055, 3066, 3551
 Women in the Past, Present and Future 3580
 Beccaria, Cesare 1112, 2101
 Beccaris, Bava 3014
Bechaland News 700
 Bechtel Corporation 790, 791
 Bechuanaland
 beef exports 455
 as British High Commission 2111 cultural organizations 455
 Khama 1955–7
 Maripe 2220–2
 Mpho 2357–8
 Reformist phase 455
 see also Botswana
 Bechuanaland Democratic Party (BDP) 456, 460
 Bechuanaland Federation of Labour (BFL) 456
 Bechuanaland Protectorate African Teachers' Association 456
 Bechuanaland Protectorate Federal Party (BFP) 456, 458–9
 Bechuanaland Protectorate Workers' Union 456
 Bechuanaland Trade Union Congress (BTUC) 456, 2358
 Beck 2378
 Beck, Ludwig 1595
 Becker, Elizabeth 574
 Becker, Marc 1056–7, 1057–8, 1058–60
 Beckerman, Paul 1066–7

- Beckford, George 1862
 Bédié, Henri Konan 881
 Bedouins 234, 1074
 Beecher, Henry Ward 216, 3622, 3637
 Beer Hall Putsch 1365, 1374–5, 1589, 2271
Beethoven, Ludwig van 357, 896
 Beg, Yaqub 716
Begin, Menachem 358–60, 374, 376, 1813–14
 Likud Party 1817, 1851
 Beggs-Sunter, Anne 1144–6, 2043–4
 Begum, Hazara 3587
 Behbudi, Mahmudkhoja 3241
 Beheiren (Peace for Vietnam Committee) 1888
Behem, Hans: see Böhm, Hans Behrens, E. 1370
 Behrens, Fritz 1340
 Bei Dao 3285
 Beijing 2309, 3289
 see also World Conference on Women
 Beijing Intellectuals' Autonomous Federation 3287
Beijing Spring 985
 Beijing Workers' Autonomous Federation 3287
 Beilharz, Peter 822–3
 Beilis, Mendel 2942, 2944
 BEK factory 3687
 Bekken, Jon 1752–5, 2252–3
 Beknazarov, Azimbek 3331, 3333
 Belarus 811, 812
 Belaúnde Terry, Fernando 1568, 2643, 2657, 3430
 Belén Sárraga Women's Centers 3598
 Belfast bombings 1802
 Belgian Federation for Women's Suffrage 2722
Belgian League for Women's Rights 2721–2
 Belgian Socialist Party 361
 Belgian Workers' Party 1745
 Belgioioso, Cristina Trivulzio di 3592
Belgium 360–4
 Christian Socialist Party 362–3 coal strike 360–1
 Congo 1661
 independence 362
 language disputes 363–4 political conflict, twentieth century 362–4
 Strike of the Century 361–2
 Belgium, National Congress of 362
 Belgrade Declaration 3691
 Belgrade University, renamed 3692
Belize (formerly British Honduras) 364–6
 Despard 364, 993
 general strikes 364
 Hyde 1634–5
 national independence movement 365–6
 Belize Estate and Produce Company 365
- Bell, Daniel 3064, 3188
 Bell, John 57
Bell, journal 1574
 Bell, M. S. 3307
 Bell, William 3081
 Bell Rebellion 1496, 2514
 Bell Trade Act 2675
 Bellamy, Edward 861, 2341, 3041, 3418
 Bellecourt, Clyde 2414
 Bello, Adolfo Ramón 866
 Bello, Walden 1392, 1429–32, 1672, 2687, 3646
 Belloc, Hilaire 634, 2171
 Bellows, George 1125
 Belo, Bishop 1044
 Belo Monte massacre 597, 599–600
 Beltane 2258
 Beltrão, Oscar 2351
 Belzu, president of Bolivia 424
 Bem, Józef 1621
 Bemis Heights 82
 Ben Barka 2337, 2338
Ben Bella, Ahmad 366–7, 1247
Ben-Gurion, David 358, 359, 372–5, 3742
 Benalcázar, Sebastian Moyano de 1061, 2876
 Benaroya, Avraam 1440, 1442, 3220
 Benary, Arne 1340
 Benavides, Oscar 2650
 Bendigo gold miners 1144
 Benedict XVI, Pope 1497
 Benello, G. 2314
 Beneš, Edvard 2252, 3294
 Benett, Hans 7–8
 Benett, Juan Pablo 692
Benezet, Anthony 202, 203, 213, 367–8, 3022, 3521
- Bengal
 age of consent 1697
 anti-partition movement 1697–8, 2573–4
 British rule 368, 1708
 Bulaki Shah's Revolt 370
 Chakma Revolt 370
 Chittagong revolt 1710
 colonial era 368–72
 Fakir-Sannyasi Revolt 368–9
 famine 1208
 Hatikheda Revolt 371
 Indigo rebellion 1711–13
 Manasa Devi goddess 955
 nationalism 344, 2573–9
 Pagolponthi Revolt 371–2
 partition 1697–700, 1709
 Permanent Settlement 370, 1695 revolution, nineteenth century 370–1 Sandwip Revolt 369–70
 Sen 1678

- Shamsher Gazi's Revolt 369
 sharecropping 1706, 2574, 3586
 Siraganj revolt 372
swadeshi 1698–9
 tax revolts 1682 tebhaga movement 1706, 1711, 1922, 2265, 2574–5
 women's movement 3588
zamindars 370, 371, 372, 1703, 1712, 2574
 Bengal army 1685–7
 Bengal Chemical Works 1698
 Bengal Jute Workers' Association 3229
 Bengal Provincial Students' Federation 1704
 Bengal Technical Institute 1698
 Bengal Tenancy Act 372
 Bengal Volunteers 1678
 Bengali Language Movement martyrs 2578
 Beni dance societies 3728
 Benjamin, Mary 3189–90
Benjamin, Walter 375–7
 Arcades project 376
 On the Concept of History 376
 Critique of Violence 375–6
 Frankfurt School 376, 904, 1256
 Illuminations 904
 Life of the Students, The 375
 Marxism 2249
 One Way Street 376
 Selected Writings 905
 on "Sixty-Eight" 3170
 "Work of Art in the Age of Mechanical Reproduction" 376
 Bennett, Mary 3652
 Bennett, R. B. 2831
 Bennett, Rolla 3460
 Bennett, Terri 290–1, 303–4, 500–1
 Bennett, W. B. 2563
 Bensaid, Daniel 2260
 Benson, Allan 1458
 Benson, Helen 1334
 Bent, David L. 586–90, 2752–3, 2831
 Benteen, Frederick W. 901
 Bentham, Jeremy 2460, 3666
 Benziane, Sohanne 3577
 Béranger, Pierre-Jean de 1229
 Berber Decree 1248
 Berber language 1927
 Berber people
 Algeria 42–3, 1927
 Morocco 2332–3
 Tunisia 3335
 and Wattasids 2332
 Berbice 1031
 Berdimuhammedow, Gurbanguly 3368
 Berdyayev, Nicholas 634
 Beresford, John 1786
 Berg, Alban 1255
 Berg, Peter 1482
 Berg Damara people 2390, 2394
 Bergama resistance 3343
 Berger, John 2308
 Berger, Joseph 3161
 Berger, Meta 837
 Berger, Victor 837, 3064, 3065
 Bergere, M. C. 735
 Bergés, Jorge 246
 Bergman, Jay 3720
 Bergsten, Fred 1430
 Berisha, Sali 32, 33
Berkeley Free Speech Movement (FSM)
 377–8
 Berkely, William 330
Berkman, Alexander 94, 158, 161, 378–9 deportation 1412, 2589
 and Goldman 1125
 Berlichingen, Götz von 1354
 Berlin
 Garment Workers' Strike 2047
 gay scene in Weimar period 2104
 Koepi 1741
 revolutionary sailors 1362
 Berlin, Congress of 34
 Berlin, Isaiah 336
 Berlin Conference 883, 2353
 Berlin Peace 2985
 Berlin Treaty 2856
 Berlin Wall 811, 1339, 1344, 1948, 3632
Berlinguer, Enrico 379–81, 683, 1146, 1820
 Berlusconi, Silvio 1307
 Berman, A. Z. 152
 Bermudez, José Francisco 3458
 Bermúdez Cerutti, Francisco Morales 2643
 Bernabe, R. 2769, 2774
 Bernadotte, Jean-Baptiste 3209
 Bernal, J. D. 195, 2999
 Bernard, John 841
 Bernardes, Artur 468, 469, 2748
 Berneri, Camillo 131
 Bernhard, M. 2697
Bernstein, Eduard 381–2, 973, 1648, 1749,
 1756, 2838
 Erfurt Program 1942
 and Jaurès 1913
 and Luxemburg 382, 2143
 Preconditions of Socialism, The 382 revolutionary socialism 2243
 Sozialdemokrat, Der 1941
 SPD 3055, 3058
 Bernstein, Leonard 1551, 3104
 Berr, Isaac Cerf 1919

- Berrigan, Daniel 73
 Berrigan, Philip 73
 Berríos, Juan Carlos 639
 Berry, Duc de 896
 Berseba people 2394
 Bertinotti, Fausto 1010
 Bertolucci, Bernardo 1237, 3014–15
 Bertolucci, Franco 1419–20
 Bertrand, Francisco 2018
 Bertrand Russell Foundation 2677
 Berwick, Treaty of 3000
 Berzenci, Sheikh Mahmud 352
 Besant, Annie 1699, 2388
 Beseler, Wilhelm 2895, 2984
 Besier, Gerhard 1342
 Besnard, Pierre 851
 Bessarabia 2856, 2857
 Besson, Jean 1870
 Besteiro, Julian 3145
Betances, Ramón Emeterio 382–3, 2767
 Grito de Lares 382, 383, 2767
 Betancourt, Rómulo 1015, 3436, 3442, 3451
 Betancur, Belisario 801, 1120, 1168, 3389
 Betar youth movement 1851
Bethune, Henry Norman 383–4
 Beto, Frei 414, 478
 Better Life for Rural Women Program (BLP)
 3547, 3548
 Beuys, Joseph 1945
 Bevin, Ernest 520, 523
 Bey, Hakim 159, 979, 1741
 Bey dynasty 3334, 3335
 Beyond ESF 1147
 Beyond Pesticides 617
Bezerra, Gregório 384
 Bhagalpur 2970
 Bhakna, Baba Sohan Singh 1676
 Bhakra-Nangal Dam 2434
 Bhandari, Madan 2437, 2438
 Bharati, Uma 1584
 Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) 1584, 1585, 1692, 1694, 2435
 Bhasani, Moulana 2579, 2581
 Bhattacharya, Nandini 1762–3, 1763–6, 1766–8, 1768–75, 2342–4, 3241–6
 Bhattacharyya, Abinash 1674
 Bhattacharyya, Amit 732–6, 3200–2, 3230–5
 Bhattacharyya, Narendranath 1676
 see also Roy, M. N.
 Bhattarai, Baburam 230, 2438, 2439, 2440
 Bhattarai, Krishna Prasad 2437
 Bhave, Vinoba 2403
Bhil tribals 3587
 Bhongir Conference 1707
Bhoodan movement 2403
 Bhopal gas disaster 3590
 Bhumibol, of Thailand 2747, 3259
 Bhumibol Adulyadej, King 660
 Bhutto, Benazir 2584, 2585
 Bhutto, Zulfikar Ali 346, 348, 1160, 1857, 2582, 2583
 Biafra 2482, 2484
 Biagi, Marco 2818
 Bianchini, Guido 1842
 Biassou 1529, 1530, 1533, 3306–7, 3309
 Bibikov, Alexander 2776
 Biblioteca Popular José Ingenieros 104
 Biblioteca Social Reconstruir 138
Biblioteka Warszawska 3544
 Bicesse Accords 2361 bicycle demonstrations: see Critical Mass Biddle, Brenda 1210–12
 Bielefeld Agreement 1365
 Bielsky brothers 1918
Biennio Rosso 384–7, 446, 1822, 2168, 3013
Biermann, Wolf 387, 1344
 Bierut, Boleslaw 2699
 Biet, Bishop 1269
 Big Bear 583, 584
 Bigelow, Albert 1461
 Biggar, Joseph 2616
 Biggin Hill 510
 Bikini Atoll 199, 1461, 1885, 1887, 2303
 Bikini Kill 2845
 Biko, Steve Bantu 1163, 3088
 Bikont, Anna 3556
 Bilbao, Francisco 111
 Bill of Rights 87, 3531
 Bill of Rights Society 3531
 Billingham, Guillermo 2648
 Billionaires for Bush 1482–3
 Billiton mining 2419
 Bin Gia 3482
Bin Laden, Osama 388–90
 Afghanistan 388, 389
 “bayan” against USA 389
 Salafism 1810
 Sudan 388–9
 World Trade Center 389, 3247
 Binational Indigenous Oaxacan Front (FIOB)
 2536 Bio, Julius Maada 3031
 biofuels 1211
 biopolitics 1006, 2305
 biotechnological revolution 2998
 Bir Singh 2970
 Biratnagar strike 2441–2
 Birchfield, Vicki 297–301
 Bird, Robert Montgomery 3147
 Bird, V. C. 2078

- bird flu 1605
 Birendra, of Nepal 230, 2437, 2443
 Birla, Ghanshyam Das 1327, 1684, 2431, 2434 Birmingham, Alabama
 King 743–4
 Sixteenth Street Baptist Church bombing 745, 1974
 Birmingham, UK 1797
 see also G8 protests, Birmingham
 Birmingham Campaign (Alabama) 3398
 Birnbaum, Nathan 3740 birth control by abstention 3567 feminism and 3567, 3568
 Flynn 1204
 Goldman 1412
 Sanger 2968–9
 Birth Control Clinical Research Bureau 2968
 Birth Control Federation of America 2969 Birth Control Review 2968 bisexuality 1300
 Bisharin tribe 1075
Bishop, Maurice 390–1, 1462, 1464, 1465–6, 2461–2
 Bishops' War 1097, 3000
 Bisig organization 2682, 2686
 Bismarck, Otto von
 Franco-Prussian war 2610 homosexuality laws 2101 and Lassalle 2236
 nationalism 887, 1744
 Prussian expansion 1348
 Social Democrats 3055 united Reich 1351
 Bissolati, Leonida 3015
 Bitar, Salah al-Din al- 3221, 3222, 3223, 3224, 3226
Biuletyn Informacyjny 2696, 2698
 Bix, H. P. 1899
 Bizoton Affaire 1513
 Bjerneboe, Jens 2526
 BJP: see Bharatiya Janata Party
 Black, Bob 160
 Black, Conrad 2263
 Black Allied Workers' Union 3095
 Black Arts movement 393
 Black Arts Repertory Theater School 348
 Black Bear Ranch 3419
 Black Bloc 132, 1308, 1309, 1317, 3663
 Black Blockers 3657
 black capitalism 1853 black community 611, 1023
 see also African Americans; black nationalism Black Consciousness 1517, 1860, 3088–9, 3604
 Black Consciousness Movement (BCM) 174,
 3084, 3086, 3095
Black Dwarf 218, 2260, 2262
 Black Flag 109, 2778, 3476
 black flag 2300
 Black Flag Federation 136
 Black Friend Society 136
 Black Guards 2840
 Black Hawk War 57
 Black Hills, South Dakota 900
 Black Hundreds 2921, 2926
 Black Lamp 819
 Black Liberation Army 395
 Black Madonna 3557
 Black Mask 159
 Black Monday 406
 Black Movement Society 136
 Black National Baptist Convention 695
black nationalism 391–7, 1863
 anti-Semitism 396–7
 Baraka 348
 critiqued 395–7 cultural 393 economic 392–3 educational 393 global impact 2396 goals/strategies 394–5 political 393 religious 393–4
Black Newspaper 136
Black Panthers 18, 159, 393, 397–9, 613, 2757
 FBI 19, 395
 Hampton 1551
 Hoover 751
 Maoist influence 2199
 Murray 3169
 Black People's Convention 3084
 Black Power 391
 APSP 3373
 Australian Aborigines 308
 Carmichael 393
 emergence 750
 FBI 19
 and FLQ 2785
 Jim Crow era 16, 18–19
 Malcolm X 398
 Meredith 2275
 salute 750, 3169
 SNCC 3186, 3187
 Trinidad and Tobago 1463
 Black Repartition 2693
 Black Revolt 348
Black September 239, 399–400
 Black Spring protests 1927, 1928
 Black Star Line 1336, 2396

- Black Stone Rangers 1551
 Black Student Union (BSU) 3169
 Black Studies 3170
 Black and Tans 793, 1048, 1801
 Black Terrorist Unit 1926
 Black Tiger day 3252
 Black Wave Society 136
 Black Youth Alliance, Beijing 135
 blackbirding 1196, 3425
 Blackburn, Thomas 3676
 Blackett, Richard J. M. 3046–8
 Blackman, Robert H. 328–9, 545
 Blackwell, Alice 3623
 Blackwell, Antoinette Brown 3622
 Blackwell, Henry 169, 3622
 Blackwell, John 3676
 Blades, Tiempos 640
 Blagoev, Dimitar 540
 Blair, Ezell, Jr. 739, 3186
 Blair, Tony Clause Four and 2040, 3062
 coming to power 2040
 Commission for Africa 1314
 Iraq invasion 2040
 July 2005 bombings 1315
 neoliberalism 512, 1398
 New Labour 3062
 Third Way 1913, 2040, 3056
 Blake, Eubie 1555
Blake, William 400–1
 Blakeney, Allan 2975, 2976
Blanc, Louis 401–2, 1149, 1910
 Histoire de dix ans 401
 Histoire de la révolution française 402
 Luxembourg Commission 401, 1244, 2765
 Organisation du travail, L' 401
 Revue du progrès 401 right to work 2843
 statist communism 2763
 Blanc, Olivier 1421
 Blanchelande, Philibert 1528, 1530, 1531, 1532
 Blanck, Max 3314
 Blanco, Luis 866
 Blanco Party, Uruguay 3340
 Blancpain, F. 1546
 Blanketeers 520
Blanqui, Louis Auguste 402–4, 1234 anti-Louis XVI 403
 Central Republican Society 403
 as influence 2382, 2805
 Parisian workers 1244 storming National Assembly 404
 Blasphemy Act 1104, 2805
Blast 379
 Blaurock, George 92, 1356
 Blaxall, Arthur 2357
 Blazer, Lillian 604
 Bleakney, David 2618–19
 Bloch, Ernst 2249, 3689
Bloch, Marc 405
 Block, Marcelline 842–3, 1234–9, 1824–6,
 2228–9, 2952–3, 3164–5, 3208–10, 3575–8
 Block G8 coalition 1403
 Bloem, Filip 387
 Bloncourt, Gérald 1517
 Blood, Fanny 3540–1
 Bloody Assizes 1405
 Bloody Friday, Belfast 1802
Bloody Sunday Demonstration 405–6, 2341
 Bloody Sunday (Ireland) 1797–8, 1801
 Bloody Sunday (Liverpool) 518
 Bloody Sunday (Russia) 1746–7, 1915, 1979, 2718, 2789–91, 2883, 3551, 3553 anniversary strike 2891, 2894, 2941
 Bloody Sunday (US, 1965) 748, 1975
 Bloody Week, Paris Commune 1323, 2410
 Bloomer, Amelia 168
 Bloque de Obreros y Campesinos (BOC) 879,
 2257, 2486, 2737
 Blount, James A. 1565
 Blücher, Gerhard Leberecht von 189
 Blue Shirts, Guomindang 727
 Bluemel, Helen 317–21, 821–2, 1346–52, 2373–4
 Bluestein, Abe 3082
 Blum, Léon 179, 824, 825, 1003
 Blumenfeld, Kurt 242
Boal, Augusto 406–7
 Boal, Iain A. 903–4
 Boas, Franz 1555
 Boas, M. 2114, 2116
 Boatmen of Thessaloniki 126
 Bobo, Rosalvo 1516
 Bobo uprising 2181
 Bobrovskaya, Cecelia 3552
 Boccia, Alfredo 2597
 Bochev, Dimitar 538
 Bochkareva, Maria 3554
 Bode, Johan Joachim Christophe 3146
 Bodichon, Barbara Leigh Smith 3566, 3567
 Bodnāraš, Emil 2866
 Boff, Claudius 2500
 Boff, Clodovis 478
 Boff, Leonardo 478, 2059, 2062, 2500
 Boffa, Paul 2187
 Bogan, Alexander 1918
 Bogdan, Jolan 2856–62, 2862–5
 Bogdanov, Alexander A. 438, 2083
 Boggs, James 772
 Bogle, Paul 1869, 1870, 2321–2, 2323

- Bognor, Ro 3563
 Bognot, Cirilo 2672
Bogotazo 407–10, 623, 805, 1321
 Bohemia 318, 1143, 2829
 Bohemian United Brethren 2323
 Bohley, Bärbel 1345
Böhm, Hans 410–11
 Bois Caïman 1529, 3584
 Bojadžijev, Manuela 2305–8
 Bokina, John 534–6, 2213–15, 3145–50
 Boland, Harry 793, 1048
 Boleyn, Anne 515, 516, 1093
 Bolingbroke, Viscount 1853
 Bolívar, Didalco 3446
 Bolívar, Rocio 1191
Bolívar, Simón 411–12, 576, 2555, 3706
 Admirable Campaign 3457
 Afro-Colombians 785
 Angostura Address 412, 3458
 Haitian support 1538
 as influence 3448
 Letter from Jamaica 412
 as El Libertador 424
 M-19 802
 and Miranda 412, 3456 Oath of Monte Sacro 412 and Rodríguez 2854 and Sucre 1061 theft of sword 800, 801, 2149
 in Venezuela 412
 see also Bolivarianism
 Bolivarian Circles 666
 Bolivarian Liberation Forces-Liberation Army
 (FBL-EL) 3445
 Bolivarian Movement, Venezuela 605
 Bolivarian Revolution 413, 664, 668–74
Bolivarianism 412–16, 2949
Bolivia 425–35
 Agrarian Reform Law 1936
 bishops 2060
 Catholic Church 2061
 Chaco War 1936, 2599
 and Chile 433
 Civil War 430
 clientelism 789–90
 coca leaf cultivation 423, 433, 434, 435, 707–8
 Cochabamba Water Wars 790–2
 Creoles 424
 decolonization 787 dictatorships 420–1 elites 790
 factory workers 419–20
 Federalist Revolution 425
 Great Rebellion 3339
 IMF 421, 433, 434
 independence struggle 424–5
 indigenous population 424, 3337–8
 Katarismo indigenous popular mobilization
 1936–9
 Labor Movement 426–7 military socialism 427–8 mine closures 422–3 miners' strike 422, 426
 MNR 788, 789
 as multinational state 1939
 National Revolution 425–32, 787
 neoliberalism 432–5 peasant mobilization 420, 1936–9
 PGA 2637
 pongueaje (bondage system) 426 protest and repression 416–23 reproletarianization 2371
 road blockades 1936
 social mobilization 432–5
 State Socialist Party 428
 student protests 419–20
 tin mining 425–6, 432
 universal suffrage 432
 War of the Pacific 425–32
 women's rights 3598
 World Bank 791
 World War II 429
 see also cocaleros peasant uprising; Morales
 Ayma, Juan Evo; Movimiento Al Socialismo
 (MAS)
 Bolivian Workers' Confederation (COB) 46, 416, 418, 421, 431, 1937
 Bolland, O. N. 3318
 Bologna 1008, 1838
 Bologna, Sergio 323, 1836
 Bologna University 1838
 Bolotnikov, Ivan 436
Bolotnikov's Rebellion 435–6
 Bolsa Familia 3038
Bolshevichki (Old Bolshevik Women) 3606
Bolshevik 153, 437
 Bolshevik Leninist Party of India (BLPI) 969, 1494, 1705, 2051, 2793, 2794
 Bolshevik Petersburg Committee 2897
 Bolshevik Revolution
 Comintern 1373
 as counterrevolution 436, 888 impact on USA 3065
 Tajikistan 3242
 Tito 3295 universalist outlook 1920 and Uzbekistan 3420
 Zasulich on 3720
 see also Russian Revolution of October/November (1917)

- Bolsheviks 436–40
 agrarian program 2908
 and anarchism 100
 anti-World War I 438–9
 Democratic Conference 2916–17 dictatorship of the proletariat 1171, 2887
 dual power 2902
 Estonia 340
 Goldman on 1413
 industrial centers 2911, 2914
 Kemal 282
 Kollontai 1980
 Latvia 340
 Lenin 2082, 2085–6
 Liberty Loan 2904
 and Mensheviks 2228, 2887, 2926
 rise of 2082
 Second Party Congress 437
Soldatki 3554
 Trotsky 437
 workers' control 2907–8
 working class 2942–3
 world capitalism 439
see also Bolshevik Revolution
- Bolshevization 1172
 Bolshoi Ballet 3149
 Boltanski, E. 2436
 Bolten, Virginia 103, 124
Bolton Free Press 2550
 Bolzaneto Detention Center 1311
 Bombay
 strikes 1705
swadeshi 1699
 textile industry 961, 1684, 1695
 Trotskyists 1705
 World Social Forum 959, 2306
 Bombay army 1685–6, 1687
 Bombay Mill-Owners' Association 1681
 Bombay Plan 2433
 Bombay Students' Brotherhood 3179
Bon Sens, Le 401
 Bonaerense Typographical Society 270
 Bonafini, Hebe de 255, 2159, 2160
 Bonald, Louis 1228
 Bonanno, Alfredo Maria 132, 979
 Bonapart, Rosa Muki 1042, 1043
 Bonaparte, Louis 1079–80, 1718
Bonaparte, Louis-Napoleon 440, 1150, 1245, 2216 see also Napoleon III
- Bonaparte, Napoleon (Napoleon I) 441–4
 Austria 189
 banishment and escape 189 crowned 1227
 death 1228
 Egypt campaign 1796
 Eighteenth Brumaire 1079–80, 3033
 Italy, invasion of 441
 Lafayette 2042
 Malta 2184–5
 O'Connor 2547
 Portugal 187
 Rochambeau 2852
 Russia 443
 and Sieyès 3033
 Spain 442–3
 Toussaint Louverture 1265–6, 1523, 1545
 Waterloo 189, 443, 1282, 2445
- Bonapartism 1228–9
 Bonavena, Pablo 243–7
 Bond, Patrick 3109–14
 Bonda 703 bonded labor 2173
 Bondelswart Rebellion 2395, 2396, 2397
 Bondelswarts 2394
 Bondfield, Margaret 521–2
 Bonfire of the Vanities 410
Bongobondhu 347, 348
 Boniece, Sally A. 676–7, 3152–4
 Boniface VIII, Pope 2829
Bonifacio, Andres 445–6, 2668, 2846
 Bonilla, Policarpo 2018
 Bonilla, Yarimar 1468–71
 Bonilla-Milina, Luis 413
 Bonjol, Tuanku Imam 1719
 Bonnelly, Rafael F. 1017
 Bonner, Raymond 2958
 Bonnot Gang 120
 Bonnymuir, Battle of 1384
 Bono 1312, 1314, 1317, 1402
Bonus Army Unemployed Movement (1932) 445–6, 2489
 Book of Common Prayer 509, 516, 517, 1094 Bookchin, Murray
 influencing Greens 99, 159
 Institute of Social Ecology 159 lifestyle anarchism 160 social ecology 99, 161, 1052, 2620, 2808
- Boomerang* 1145
 Boone, Daniel 84
 Boorstein, Daniel 973
 Booth, John Wilkes 2123
 Booth, Joseph 694
Africa for the Africans 695
 Bootstrap Operation 2770
 Bopage, Lionel 2633
 Borah, William 445
 Bor'ba 142
 Bordaberry, Juan María 3340, 3405
 Bordas Valdez, José 1017

- Bordeaux 1919
 Bordeaux, Duc de see also Chambord, Comte de Bordiga, Amadeo 446–7, 1422, 1818–19
 Borduas, Paul-Émile 110
 Borg, Filippo 2184
Borge, Tomás 447–8, 1205, 1206, 2467, 2469,
 2964
 Borge Martínez, Tomás 2467
 Borghi, Armando 131
 Borge, Pozzo di 873
 Boricua Popular Army-Macheteros (EPM-B)
 2844
 Boris, Tsar 542, 543, 544
 Borja, Rodrigo 1066
 Borlaug, Norman 3028
 Bormann, Martin 1593
 Borno, Louis 1516–17
 Borodin, Michael 1597, 2874
 Borodino, Battle of 443
 Borro, Sebastián 2641
 Bortolotti, Attilo 1110
 Borton, H. 1899
 Borusewicz, Bogdan 3502
 Bosch, Juan 1017, 1018, 1029
 Bose, Bhupendranath 1698
 Bose, Rashbehari 451, 1676, 1679
 Bose, Sarat Chandra 1704, 1705
Bose, Subhas Chandra 448–52
 arrested 1710
 Azad Hind Fauz 1704–5, 1710–11
 death of 1704
 election 1329
 and fascism 450
 Indian Legion 1678–9
 Indian Struggle, The 450 and Irwin 1327, 1681
 and left 1710
 and Prabhakaran 2741 reforms 2430
 removed from power 2792
 and Roy 2875
 and Tojo 451
 World War II 1330, 2432
 Bosin, Yury V. 13–15, 15–16, 329–30, 435–6,
 536, 1029, 2342, 2689, 2775–6, 2806–7,
 2877–8, 2927–8, 3246–8
 Bosnia 226–7, 318
 Bosnia-Herzegovina 223
 Bosnian War 1831
 Bossi-Fini law 1830
 Boston 1305, 1753
 Boston Anarchist Club 105
 Boston Massacre 77, 296
 Boston Port Act 78
Boston Tea Party 78, 156, 452–3, 2491
 Bosworth, Richard 1180
Bota e Re (New World) 29
 Botha, Fanie 2626
 Botha, P. W. 2194
Botswana 453–63
 ethnic groups 453
 exports 455, 3110
 Frontline States 461 independence transition 462
 JAC 458
 Khama 457–8, 460
 labor force 3112
 Legco 457–8, 460
 nationalism 454–5, 457–61, 1955–7
 protest and nationalism 453–63
 Women's Affairs Department 3605
 Botswana Alliance Movement (BAM) 461
 Botswana Congress Party (BCP) 461
 Botswana Democratic Party (BDP) 1956,
 2358
 Botswana Federation of Trade Unions
 (BFTU) 461
 Botswana Freedom Party 2358
 Botswana Independence Party (BIP) 460, 2358
 Botswana Mineworkers' Union (BMWU) 461
 Botswana National Front (BNF) 461, 1957, 3605
 Botswana People's Party (BPP) 455, 459, 1956, 2222, 2358
 Botto, Pietro and Maria 2623
Boucaniers 1540
 Bouchard, Jennifer Westmoreland 350–1, 2427–9, 3578–9
 Boucherette, Jessie 3566, 3567
 Bouchor, Maurice 3217
 Bougainville, Louis Antoine de 3425
 Bouglé, Celestin 2766
 Boukalas, Christos 621–3, 2735–7, 3062–3, 3168
 Boukman 1529, 1530, 1536
 Boum Om 2055
 Boumedienne, Houari 367
 Boun Oum, Prince 2054, 2055
 Bound Brook 82
 Bourassa, Robert 2557
 Bourbons
 counterrevolution 896–7, 1228
 Kingdom of the Two Sicilies 1332, 1333, 1825, 1826
 Louis XVIII 443 and Napoleon I 895
 Reforms 424
 Restoration 896–7
 Spain 424, 1848

- Bourgeault, Ron 2841–2
 Bourgeois, Robyn 2556–8
 bourgeoisie
 Engels 766
 Germany 821–2
 Marx 777, 821, 1284, 1647
 Reiss 766–7
 Trotsky 1667–8
 Bourget, Paul 888
 Bourguiba, Habib 1248, 2337, 3335–6
 Bourke, Brian 311
Bourses du Travail 463–4, 1821
 Pelloutier and 463, 464, 850, 2628, 3216
 Bouteflika, Abdelaziz 41
 Bouterse, Desi 1032
 Boven Digul camp 1729
 Boves, José Tomas 3457
 Bovio, Giovanni 1419
 Bowdoin, James 3022, 3023
 Boxer, Marilyn J. 1750–2
 Boxer Rebellion 717–18, 733, 1214, 1896, 2392, 2780, 3289
 see also Yi Ho Tuan (Boxer) Rebellion
 boyars, Romania 2862, 2864
 Boyce, Ed 1570
 Boycott, Charles 2617
 boycotts 209, 2491, 2492, 2617
 Boyd, Lennox 946
 Boyer, Jean-Pierre 1015, 1511
 Boyle, Robert 2989
 Boyne, Battle of 1786
Boynton v. Virginia 1257
 Boyocá, Battle of 3458
 Bozkiir Uprisings 3356
 Bozoki, Andras 127–9
 BR-Partito Comunista Combattente 2817–18
 BR-Partito della Guerriglia 2817
 BR-Unione Comunisti Combattenti 2818
 BR-Walter Alasia 2817
 Bracegirdle, Mark 969
 Bradford, David 3524, 3525
 Bradford, Marion Peter 2061
Brado Africano, O 2355
 Bradshaw, John 1106
 Bradshaw, Robert 2078
 Bradstreet, Anne 3612
 Braechlein, Ingo 1343
 Braes, Battle of the 2819
 Bragado prisoners 254
 Braganza, House of 187
 Bramble, William 2078
Brand, Adolf 464–5, 1586, 2103
 Brand, Ulrich 1315–18
 Brando, Marlon 2412
Brandreth, Jeremiah 465–6
 Brandt, Willi 1945, 2583, 3056, 3523
 Brandywine Creek 82
 Branicki, Franciszek Ksawery 2712
 Brant, Shawn 586, 2557
 Brasilia 2636
 Brassens, Georges 2381
 Bratmobile 2845
 Braun, Otto 2749
 Braverman, Harry 768, 773, 2249
 Bravo, Douglas 665, 3442, 3443, 3444
 Bravo, Ignacio A. 621
 Bravo, José Molina 683–5
 Braxfield, Lord 2366
Brazil 466–500
 abolition of slavery 598
 agrarian reform 52, 2350–3
 anarchists 474
 Araguaia Guerilla movement 472–3
 Bolsa Familia 500, 3038
 Cabanagem of Grão-Pará 490, 561–2
 Canudos 468, 597–601
 Catholic Church 482–3, 494, 599, 2060
 Central Única dos Trabalhadores (CUT) 112,
 477, 494–500, 681, 808–9
 Church of the Poor 478
 Constitutionalist Revolution 470
 Contestado War 467–8
 Farmers' Leagues 1925
 gold mining 483, 484–5
 guerilla movements 466–73 independence movements 483–7
 Intentona Comunista 470–1 labor struggles 473–8
 land reform 2117–18
 liberation theology 478–83
 Ligas Camponesas 472, 2117–18, 2350–1
 Maroon communities 2586 military dictatorships 471–2, 496–7, 598, 2273 millenarianism 598, 599
 Movimento Sem Terra 481–3, 2350–3, 2635
 Música Popular 2377
 participatory budgeting 2621
 Partido dos Trabalhadores (PT) 494–500
 peasant movements 478–83
 Portuguese rule 2350, 2586–8, 3745–6 protest song 2377–8 rebellions 483–94
 as republic 493–4 sugar cane plantations 2350, 2586
 syndicalism 474
 Tenentismo movement 468–70
 urban guerilla movement 2219–20
 Vargas era 470

- World Social Forums 1009, 1401, 1431–2
see also Rio de Janeiro; São Paulo; Silva, Luis Inácio Lula da
- Brazilian Communist Party (PCB) 2319, 2350, 3388
see also Communist Party of Brazil (PCdoB)
- Brazilian Labor Party (PTB) 2351
- Brazilian Socialist Party (PSB) 2351
- Brazilian Worker Federation (COB) 474
- Brazzaville protest 853–4
- Bread and Puppet Theater 500–1, 1482
- Bread and Roses Strike 502–4, 2032
- Bread or Blood riots 1040–1, 3212
- bread riots 501–2, 777, 1277, 3014
- Breadbasket Operation 1852
- Brecht, Bertolt 387, 504–5
 Epic Theater 28, 1482
- Breckenridge, John C. 56
- Breitman, George 772
- Brel, Jacques 2381
- Brenner, Robert 1430, 1669–70
- Brereton, Bridget 3318
- Bresci, Gaetano 130, 1419
- Brest Trials 2690
- Brest-Litovsk, Treaty of 143, 1359, 1979, 2085–6, 2932–4, 3153
- Breton, André 2428
- Breton Club 1288, 1294
- Brett, Edward T. 364, 365–6, 605–6, 614–15, 1189–90, 1578–9, 1603–4, 1634–5, 2019–20, 2055–63, 2128–9, 2226–7, 2867–9, 2956–9, 3303–4
- Bretton Woods 1209, 3110 breakdown of 3461
- Brewster, Lee 2108
- Brezhnev, Leonid
 Czechoslovakia 950, 1025, 2262
nomenklatura 3117, 3118
- Brian Boru, King 2544
- Briand, Aristide 225
- Briand-Kellog Pact 1173
- Bridges, Harry 2035, 3414
- Briel, Holger 2046–7
- Brigada Internacionalista Simón Bolívar 3444
- Brigadas Rojas (Red Brigades), Argentina 245
- Brigate Rosse: see Red Brigades
- Briggs, Cyril 17, 21, 22, 394, 837
- Bright, John 2827
- Brine, James 3301
- Brinton, Maurice
 Solidarity 325
- Brión, Luis 3457
- Brisbane, Arthur 1222–3
Social Destiny of Man, The 1222
- Brisbane Commonwealth Games 308, 311
- Brissot, Jacques Pierre 505–6, 893, 1281, 1525, 2848
 on sans-culottes 2969
- Brissotins 506, 1289
- Bristol Riots 506–7
- Britain 507–30
 abolition of slavery 200–5, 367–8
 American colonies 201
 American War of Independence 507–9
 anarchism 108–10
 Anti-Corn Law 176–8, 658
 anti-nuclear campaigns 190–1 anti-roads protests 1039, 1054
 anti-slavery movement 200–5, 206–9, 209–11
 anti-Vietnam War movement 218–19, 512
 bread riots 501–2
 coalition government 2792
 colonialism 206–9, 1655
 color bar 2526
 fascism 1172–3, 2526
 feudalism 1665–6
 general strike 518–19, 520, 2821
 Glorious Revolution 75, 1224, 1404–8
 homosexuality 2263
 immigration 511–12
 India 1656, 1708, 2970–1
 Industrial Revolution 2340, 2566
 Labour Party 198, 520, 521, 522–3, 528, 2039–41
 Marxism 2249
 May Day 2258
 mutinies 510–11
 peasant uprisings 509
 Poor Law 656, 658, 2720–1, 3380 post-World War II 511–14
 race riots 511–12
 Reform Acts (1832) 205, 633, 655, 786, 1632, 2692, 2825–7, 3499, 3565
 Reform Bills (1867, 1884) 526, 2827–8, 3061, 3565
 Renaissance era 514–17 sexual liberation 512–13
 socialism 3060–2
 strikes 109, 518–19, 529–30
 syndicalism 518
 Syria 2073
 Tolpuddle Martyrs 656, 3300–1
 trade union movement 519–26
 unemployment 521, 525, 3380, 3384
 women's movement 3564–70
 women's suffrage campaign 526–9, 3567
- British Association for the Promotion of Cooperative Knowledge 2129
- British Central Africa Company 2174
- British Central Africa Protectorate 2172

- British Columbia
 Doukhobors 592
 indigenous activism 584, 2557 land claims 2556 relief camps 2831
 Vancouver Island 785
- British Council for Peace in Vietnam (BCPV) 218
- British East Africa Protectorate 2253
see also Kenya
- British East India Company 1655, 1691
 Bangladesh 368
 Bengal army 1685
 China 1657, 1658
 and direct rule 1695
 Iraq 1775
- British Empire Citizens' and Workers' Home Rule Party 3316
- British Foreign Anti-Slavery Society 3640
- British Guiana: see Guyana
- British Guiana Labor Union (BGLU) 1500
- British Guiana Workers' League (BGWL) 1500
- British Honduras: see Belize
- British National Party (BNP) 512, 2526
- British Nationality Act 511
- British Socialist Party (BSP) 511, 3061
- British Solomon Islands Protectorate 3080
- British South Africa Company (BSAC) 453, 699, 700, 701–2, 3727–8, 3734
- British Statesman* 2543
- British Union of Fascists 1587
- British Vietnam Committee (BVC) 218
- Brittain, Vera 3569
- Brittany 892, 893–4, 1288, 2215
- Brix, Harald 990
- Brixton Riots 511, 530–1
- Brizola, Leonel 495, 499, 2749
- Broad, Robin 1430
- Broad Contemporary Art Museum 1483
- Broad Front for the Creation of a National Liberation Movement (FAC-MLN) 2289
- Broad Left Front (FADI) 1058
- Broad Opposition Front (FAO) 2469
- Broderick, Bertie 1087, 1557
- Broken Hill 2038
- Bronner, Stephen Eric 755, 885–90, 904–8
- Bronterre's National Reformer* 2543
- Brook Brothers 69
- Brook Farm community 1222
- Brookfield, Percy 2039
- Brooklyn 81
- Brooks, S. M. 3674
- Brosses, Charles de 3146
- Brotherhood of the Cooperative Commonwealth 3417–18
- Brotherhood for the Defense of the People's Rights 676
- Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen 974
- Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters (BSCP)
 393, 757, 2037, 2803
- Brotherhood of Timber Workers 1736
- Brouard, Carl 1516
- Broué, Pierre 2250
- Brousse, Pierre 1304, 1756
- Browder, Earl 839, 1220
- Browder v. Gayle* case 2615
- Brown, Bradford C. 1227–33
- Brown, Desmond 591
- Brown, Gordon 2040
- Brown, H. Rap 531–2, 751
 and Randolph 2804
- Brown, J. 1326
- Brown, J. Forrester 149
- Brown, John 532–4
 Addams on 10
 anti-slavery 90, 156–7, 216
 Harpers Ferry 57, 90, 533, 534, 2491
 and Spartacus 3146
- Brown, Morris 3460
- Brown, Roy 2380
- Brown, Susan Love 332–3, 1257–8, 1258–9, 1971–7, 3186–7
- Brown, Thomas 3047
- Brown, Will 2823–4
- Brown v. Board of Education* 651, 739, 741, 760–4, 2498
- Browne, Bill 3414
- Brownell, Herbert 760
- Brownmiller, Susan 3629
- Brownstein, Carrie 2845
- Broz, Josip: see Tito
- Bruat, Armand-Joseph 1272
- Brubaker, Rogers 392
- Brugha, Cathal 1048, 1049
- Bruhn, K. 1122
- Brunete, Battle of 3143
- Brüning, Heinrich 3066, 3382
- Brunkenberg, Battle of 1495
- Brunswick Manifesto 1289
- Brunswick-Oels, Duke of 189
- Bryan, William Jennings 3064
- Bryant, Anita 2099
- Bryant and May strike 2229
- Buarque, Chico 2378
- Buback, Siegfried 1368
- Buber, Martin 1916, 2047–8
- Bucak, Mehmet Celal 2010
- Bucareli Accords 2541
- Bucer, Martin 1094, 1357, 3748
- USS Buchanan 2529

- Buchar* 3172
 Bucharest 2860–1
 Buckley, Nathaniel 3676
 Buckridge, Steeve O. 1871–4
 Budaj, Ján 3435
 Budapest Anarchist Group 128
 Buddhism
 Burma 552–3, 2496, 2978–9, 2980
 in China 113
 and Marxism 3259
 Middle Path 303
 Sam-bo-it-bae (three steps, one bow protest) 3652
 Sri Lanka 2053
 Thailand 3259, 3266–8
 Tibet 2496, 3293
 Vietnam 219
 Buddhist monks 2496, 3481
 Budenz, Louis 3412
 Budyonny, Semyon 327
 Buechler, S. 779, 782
 Buenos Aires
 Central Fruit Market 261
 Ezeiza massacre 1155–7
 First International 102
 strikes 247–8
 Buenos Aires University 3169
Buysameike (The Bolshevik) 2781
 Buganda, Kingdom of 3369–70, 3546
 Buhle, Paul 1734–8, 3071
 Bui Cong Trung 3472
 Buk-ro-gun-jung-sea (Northern Military Administration Office Army) 1970
 Bukhara 1029, 3241
Bukhara-i-Sharif (Noble Bukhara) 3241
 Bukharan Emirate 642
Bukharin, Nikolai Ivanovich 534–6, 1649, 1757, 2243
 ABC of Communism 535 communist theory 2247
 executed 3162
 Historical Materialism 535
 Imperialism and World Economy 1672
 Leninism 2089, 3159
 NEP 2087
 Stalin 2248
 and Togliatti 3298
 Bukharin People's Party 3421
 Bukharinists 2875
 Bukhoro, Battle of 3421
 Bukovina 2856, 2857
 Bulaki Shah's Revolt 370
 Bulavin, Kondratiy 536
Bulavin's Rebellion 536
 Bulawayo 700, 3732, 3735
- Bulgaria 536–45, 3068–9
 anti-Soviet movements 536–8
 communism 542–5
 dissidents 3068
 economic protests 539–40 independence movement 538–9
 Jewish people 543
 language war 1452
 leftist and workers' movements 540–2
 nationalism 1452
 opposition parties 537
 Sofia demonstrations 3068–9
 Turkish minority 3069
 women's movement 3632
 World War II resistance 542–5
 Bulgarian Agrarian National Union (BANU) 540
 Bulgarian Church 1452
 Bulgarian Liberating Movement 538
 Bulgarian National Committee 537
 Bulgarian National Front 537
 Bulgarian Social Democratic Party 540
 Bulgarian Social Democratic Union 540
 Bulgarian Socialist Party (BSP) 539
 Bulgarian Workers' (Communist) Party 541, 542, 1003
 Bulgarian Workers' Social Democratic Party (BWSDP) 540
 Bull Ring Riots 657
 Bull Run creek 58
Bulletin 1145
Bulletin, Sidney 2450, 2454
Bulletyn Informacjya 3556
 Bullinger, Heinrich 1356, 3749
 Bulzani, Francisco 253
 BUMIDOM 1469
 Bunce, Valerie 1417
 Bündnis 90/Die Grünen 1366
 Bunker Hill 79
 Bunster, Alvaro 683
 Bunting, S. P. 149, 152, 154, 349, 832–3, 3092, 3093
 Bunyoro-Kitara, Kingdom of 3369–70
Buonarroti, Philippe 328, 403, 545, 2266, 2543
 Buozzi, Bruno 998, 1823
 Burbridge, Jake 1039
 Burchett, Wilfred 2457
 Burden, Jane 2341
Burdett, Sir Francis 519, 545–7, 1553, 2692
 Bureau Central de Renseignement et d'Action (BCRA) 1240
 Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement 1642
 Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) 40, 2413, 2414, 2628
Burevestnik (Storm Petrel) 142

- Burford Mutiny 1102
 Burger King boycott 1054
 Burgmann, Meredith 1458–60
 Burgmann, Verity 306, 1458–60, 1738–9, 2373
 Burgos, Carmen de 3610
 Burgos, José 2667
 Burgos trial 183, 1129
 Burgoyne, John 82
 Burham, Viola 3559
 Burke, Edmund 507, 886, 1223, 2715, 3024 on common people 3151
 Reflections on the Revolution in France 1115, 1224, 1284, 2570
 Burke, T. H. 2617
 Burkert, Olga 2018–19, 2045–6, 3294–5
Burkina Faso 547–8
 Burla mining region 3451
 Burley Colony 3418
Burma 548–58
 British rule 302, 551–2, 556–7
 Buddhism 552–3, 2496, 2978–9, 2980
 Buddhist monks 2979 democracy movement 548–51 ethnic minorities 549–50, 551
 Four-Cut Policy 550
 Freedom Bloc 555
 Home Rule Association 2978
 hybrid color revolution 811, 817
 Japanese Occupation 556
 Land Acquisition Act 2979 military coups 550 national movement 551–8
 no tax rebellion 2979
 Nu 2527–8, 3068 religion and protest 2496
 Saw 2977–8
 Saya San movement 553, 2978–81
 SLORC 551
 Soe 3068
 student movement 553, 554 Village Act 2980
 youth movements 553–4
 see also Aung San Burma Independence Army 302, 555
 Burma Oil Company 554
 Burmese Socialist Programme Party (BSPP) 550
 Burne-Jones, Edward 2340
 Burnham, Forbes 1497, 1500–1, 1502 burning of sugar cane 1866, 2076, 2554
 Burns, Anthony 216
 Burns, Lucy 2624, 3626
 Burombo, Benjamin 3729
 Burroughs, Major 2971
Burschenschaften 558, 3177
 Burton, Beatrice 2121–3
 Burton, Henry 2118
 Burton, Orville Vernon 70–2, 2121–3, 2798–801
 Burton, Richard 2452
 Buscayno, Bernabe 2677, 2680, 2681
 Busch, Alberto Natusch 421
 Busch, Germán 428
 Bush, George H. W.
 Iran-Contra scandal 2475
 Los Angeles riots 3403
 Bush, George W.
 Chávez on 667 electoral support 1459
 free trade 1430
 globalization 1430
 Iraq invasion 227, 1831
 on Mugabe 3738
 Panama 2594
 People's Summit of the Americas on 3658
 Road Map to Peace 1760 and Saddam Hussein 2504
 Swedish visit 1152
 Uruguay 3407
 Vanuatu 3427
 Vieques 3465
 war on terror 1401
 Bush, Melanie E. L. 1602–3
 Bush, Roderick 21–3, 1551–2, 1874–5, 2852–3
 Buss, Mary Frances 3566
Bussa's Rebellion 204, 559
 Bustamante, Alexander 1859, 1867
 Bustamante Industrial Trade Union (BITU)
 1861, 1867
 Bustamante y Rivero, José Luis 1567–8
 Bustamante y Rivero, Manuel 2650
 Bustani, Boutros al- 234
 Butadroka, Sakesai 1197
 Butau, Rebecca 3733
 Buthelezi, Mangosuthu Gatsha 3086, 3088
 Butler, Benjamin 61, 65, 70
 Butler, John 1804
 Butler, Josephine 3567
 Butler, Judith 1191–2
 Butler, Smedley 2489
 Butler, Tubal Uriah 3316, 3319
 Butler Home Rule Party 3317
 Butler Party 356
 Butt, Isaac 967, 2616
 Butt, Maqbool 1934
 Butterwick, Richard 2710–15
 Buttigieg, Emanuel 2182–7
 Buttonshaw, Harvey 107
 Buxton, Charles 208
 Buxton, Thomas 205
 Buzby, Amy 327–8, 3428–9
 Bydgoszcz crisis 3074, 3076

- Bydlinska, Zofia 3556
 Byrne, David 2378
 Byrne, Joe 1943
 Byrnes, Jack 510–11
- Ca-canny strategy 2169, 2820
 Caamaño Deñó, Francisco Alberto 1018
 Cab Drivers' Alliance 3663
 Caballero, Florencio 615
 Caballero Aburto, General 3427
Cabanagem of Grão-Pará 490, 561–2
 Cabañas Barrientos, David 2285, 2286
Cabañas Barrientos, Lucio 562–3, 1122, 2283, 2285, 3427, 3428 cabanos 561
 Cabello, Tristan 2106–9
 Cabet, Étienne 2763, 2843, 3417
Voyage en Icarie 1639, 2763, 3417
 Cabeza de Vaca, Alvar Núñez 237
 Cabindan oil 2360
Cabral, Amilcar 563–5, 602, 1042, 1492, 2249
 Cabral, José Maria 1016
 Cabral, Juan José 866
 Cabral, Luis de Almeida 564, 603
 Cabral, Luiz 1493
 Cabral, Pedro Alvares 187
 Cabrera, David 2642
 Cabrera, Teodoro 2289
 Cabrera Infante, Guillermo 923
 Cabrera M., Gabriel 47–9, 1923–4, 3430–1
 Cacchione, Pete 841
 Cacciari, Massimo 1836 cacelorazo (popular mobilization) 268, 687, 1085, 1580
 Cáceres, Alonso de 2080
 Cachalia, Maulvi 2191
 Cachin, Marcel 824
 Caco rebellions 3584
cacos 1521, 1522
 Cacuangó, Dolores 1056
 Cadet Revolution, Poland 2715–17, 3544
 Cadiz Constitution 2667
 Cadogan, Jack 2453
 Cadogan, Roger 2455–6
 Caetano, Marcello 2729, 2731, 2732, 3546
 Caffentzis, George 1401
 Cafiero, Carlo 129, 1161, 2169, 2692
 Cagol, Maria 2815
 Cagoule group 2871
 Cairns, Daniel 113–15
 Cairo Anti-War Conference 367
 Cairo Conference 1775
 Cairo Declaration 3239
 Caja Laboral Popular (CLP) 2315
 Cakchiquel rebellion 1476
 Cakobau, Ratu George 1196, 1197
 Calais Agreement 1468
 Calas Affair 3494
 Calatafimi, Battle of 1826
 Calcutta Pottery Works 1699
 Calcutta riots 1705, 1711
 Caldera, Rafael 666, 3436, 3437, 3440, 3441, 3443, 3446, 3449
 Calderón, Felipe 2286, 2294–5, 2539
 Calderon, Sila 3465
 Calderón Guardia, Rafael 878, 2058
 Caldicott, Helen 305
 Caldoches 2458
 Caldwell, Malcolm 574
 Caledonian Multi-Racial Union (UMNC) 2458
 Calédonie dans la République (RPCR) 2458
 Calenzana, Battle of 872
 Čalfa, Marián 3434
 Calgary Winter Olympics 585
Call, The 2968, 3626
 Call of Mercedes 288
 Callaghan, James 2040
 Callahan, Kevin J. 1742–50
 Callao Port uprising 48
 Calleja, Félix 1579
 Calles, Plutarco Elias 606, 2278, 2280
 exiled 2542
 law reforms 902
 Morones 2340
 National Revolutionary Party 2542
 Sacasa 2541
 Sonorans 2539
 Callinicos, Alex 1392
 Callinicos, Luli 2189–96, 3248–50
 Calloway, Cab 1555
Calvin, John 565, 1094, 1357–8, 3001
 Calvinism
 Church of Scotland 1111, 2300, 3001
 Gaelic society 3002
 Geneva 1111
 Netherlands 1033, 1034–5
 Cama, Bhikaji Rustam 1674
 Camacho, Isaac 416
 Camacho, Manuel Avila 2542
 Camacho, Marcelino 180, 181
Cambodia 566–78
 agrarianism 1960 anti-colonial protests 566–9 Chinese businessmen 576 communist movement 568 communist protests and revolution 569–75 eviction to countryside 574 as French Protectorate 566, 568, 575, 3035 invaded 2055
 Japanese defeat 569

Cambodia (cont'd)

Khmer Republic 3484
 massacres 572
 National Assembly elections 570, 573
 Phnom Penh protests 1713
 political parties 576–8
 rebellion against France 568–9, 575–8 Umbrella Revolt 568, 1713, 1958
 and Vietnam 3474
see also Kampuchea; Sihanouk, Norodom
 Cambodian Genocide War Crimes Tribunal
 1961
 Camden, Lord 508
 Camejo, Josefa 3631
Camejo, Pedro (Negro Primero) 578–9
 Cameron, Andrew 2727
 Cameron, Mary 2453
Cameroon 579–81, 1251–2
 Camilist Union–National Liberation Army
 (UC-ELN) 801
 Camilista Union-ELN (UCELN) 1083
 Camp New Havana 685
 Campa, Valentín 2297
 Campaign Against Moral Persecution (CAMP)
 2096–7
 Campaign for Democracy, Nigeria 2481
 Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament (CND)
 190, 195–6, 513, 2528, 2877, 3178, 3282
 Campaign for Popular Democracy (CPD),
 Thailand 3272
 Campaore, Blaise 548
 Campbell, Colin 1690
 Campbell, Jack 307
 Campbell, John, Duke of Argyll 1854
 Campbell, Louis 837
 Campbell, Robert 208
 Campbell, Robert, of Glenlyon 1385–6
 Campbell, Susan 22
 Campbell Soup Company 1170
 Campero, Leonel Sagahón 2374–6
 Campesino Environmentalist Organization
 (OCESP) 2289
 Campesino Justice Brigade 2283
 Campesino Organization of the Sierra del Sur
 (OCSS) 2288
 Campo, Diego de 2079
 Campo Formio, Treaty of 441
 Campoamor, Clara 3611
 Cámpora, Héctor J. 1155, 1156
 Campos, Batista 561
 Campos Alúm, Antonio 2597
 Campusano Corenjo, Rosita 2949
Camus, Albert 356, 581–2
 Can Lao Nhan Vi (Personalist Labor Party) 2465
 Can Vuong 3477, 3478

Canada 582–93

anarchism 110–11
 anarchist journals 110
 Charter of Rights and Freedoms 592
 Chinese immigrants 110
 class consciousness 2975
 Constitution Act 585 draft resisters 220
 freed slaves 214, 216
 Great Depression 591, 2562, 2832
 immigrants 587
 indigenous peoples 2098
 indigenous resistance 582–6
 IWW 110, 587
 labor protests 586–90 law and public protest 590–3
 LGTB 2098–100
 MTW 1753
 neoliberalism 2562
 Nine-Two Resolutions 593
 OCAP 2560–2
 One Big Union 588, 3535, 3536
 postal workers' strikes 590
 Riel 2841–2
 Saskatchewan socialist movement 2975–6
 unemployment 588, 2561, 2563
 Union, Act of 594
 Vietnam volunteers 220 welfare payments 2562
 Winnipeg general strike 3534–6
 World War II 589
 Zionism 845
Canada, Rebellion of 1837–8 593–5, 2841
 Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labor
 (CCCL) 589
 Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms 592
 Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) 589, 590, 2619, 2975
 Canadian National Farmers' Union 3462
 Canadian Socialist Party 110
 Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW)
 2618
 Cananea miners' strike 137, 2276
 Canary Islands 1657
 Canboulay riot 3316
 Cancel Miranda, Rafael 2770
 Cancun: see World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Cancun
Candide 404
 cane cutters' newspaper 107
 Caneca, Frei 489
 Cangiano, M. C. 252
 Cannibal Army prison break-in 1508
Cannon, James P. 595–7, 837, 2250, 3413
 Cano, Alonso 1168

- Cano, Gabriela 3017
 Cano, Maria 805
 Canovas, Antonio 130, 383
 Canterbury Working Men's Mutual Protection Society 829
Canudos 468, 597–601
 Cao Bang, Battle of 3473
 Cao Rulin 713, 719
Caonabo 601–2
 Caos 2063
 Capanna, Mario 2622
 Capanoghlu insurrection 3357
 Caparaó guerilla 472
 Cape Colony 2109
 Cape Federation of Labor 152, 3092
 Cape Town 148
Cape Verde 602–3
 Cabral 563
 French/British fighting 86 independence struggle 602–3
 PAIGC 1492
 Capet, Louis: see Louis XVI, of France
 Capetillo, Luisa 123, 141
 Capistran Garza, René 903 capital accumulation 2245, 3160, 3685
 capitalism agro-industrial 795
 class 766–7, 1667–8
 colonialism 1381, 1648
 Engels 766, 777, 2240
 Europe 1655
 global shake-up 1398
 Herzen on 1574
 imperialism 1649–53
 Japan 1663
 laissez-faire 1171, 1174
 Marx 766, 777, 2232–4, 2240
 Mexico 2280
 Nkrumah 2488
 plutocratic 1174 production modes 1666–7 prostitution 3017
 surplus value 784
 transnational 1430
 working class 768, 783–4, 2920
 Yates 778
 Yuppies 1281
 Capitulation Law 1770
 Caporosso, Stefano 129
 Capuchin Society 891 car industry, Argentina 864, 867
 Carabinieri 1836
 Carabobo, Battle of 578
 Caracas accord 1166
 Caracas Pact 933
Caracazo 603–5, 665, 3439, 3448
 Carafa, Giulia 3591
 Carbonari 403, 1825
 Carboniera 2266
 Carcaterra, Giovanni 1833
Cardenal, Ernesto 605–6, 2061, 2062, 2473
 Cardenal, Fernando 2061, 2471, 2473
 Cardenal, Katia and Salvador 638
 Cárdenas, Cuauhtémoc 2285, 2287, 2292, 2538
Cárdenas del Río, Lázaro 428, 606–7, 2287
 corporatism 2542
 land reforms 2281, 2282
 MLN 2283
 Morones 2340
 and Velázquez 3432
 Cardoso, Fernando Henrique 477, 499, 1669, 3746
 Carias Andino, Tiburcio 1603, 2018
 Caribbean Association for Feminist Research and Activism (CAFRA) 3560, 3578–9
 Caribbean Community and Common Market (CARICOM) 1465, 1509 Caribbean Conference of Churches 3560
Caribbean islands 607–12
 emancipation 350–1 ethnic divisions 350–1
 feminist meetings 3600
 IMF 607–10, 3560
 indentured labor 1031, 1512
 Leninism 1863–4
 protest music 610–12
 slave communication networks 297 slave revolts 201, 350–1
 strikes 3559
 sugar cane cultivation 1657
 women fiction writers 3579 women-headed households 3578
 women's movement 3558–60
 see also Dutch Caribbean; French Caribbean Caribbean Women's Association (CARIWA) 3559, 3560
 CARICOM (Caribbean Community and Common Market) 3559
 Caridad González, José 737
 Caritas 3643
 Carl XVI Gustaf, of Sweden 3209
 Carlier, Julie 2721–2
 Carlisle, R. 392
 Carlism 1127
 Carlo Alberto, of Sardinia 2267
 Carlos, Sixto 2680
 Carlos I, of Portugal 2730
 Carlot, Maxime 3427
 Carlsbad Decrees 558, 3178
 Carlsson, Chris 903–4

- Carlyle, Thomas 2548
 Carlyle Circular 1698
Carmichael, Stokely (Kwame Turé) 18, 393, 531, 612–14, 653
 LCFO 750–1
 and Randolph 2804
 SNCC 2499, 3169, 3187
 Carmona Estanga, Pedro 666
Carnation Revolution 165, 1042, 1262,
 2728–9, 2731, 2972
 Carney, Amy Beth 1587–94
 Carney, James 2061
Carney, James Francis “Guadalupe” 614–15
 Carnival Against Capital 111, 1388, 1397, 3657
 Carnival of Freedom 3073–4
 Carnival for Full Enjoyment 1313
 Carnival Knowledge 1191
 carnivalesque 1148, 1390, 1393, 1873
 Čarnogurský, Ján 3434, 3435
 Carnot, Lazare 328–9, 1795–6
 Caro, José María 806, 2058
 Carol I, of Romania 2856
 Carol II, of Romania 2857
Caroline, steamer 594
 Carolingian Renaissance 2829
 Carpa de la Reina, La (The Queen’s Tent) 2379
 Carpenter, Edward 1807–8
 Carpio, León 1478
 Carr, E. H. 1574
 Carr, Shirley 590
 Carranza, Venustiano 619, 2278–9, 3710
 Constitutionalists 2539, 3431
 death of 2541
 Guadalupe Plan 2279–80
 Morones 2340
 and Obregón 2539, 2540–1 Obregonistas 2541
 ousted 2541
 and Roy 2874
 and Villa 3489–90
 Carrera, José Miguel 2555
 Carrera, Rafael 1475
 Carrero Blanco, Luis 183, 1129
 Carriacou island 1462
 Carrilho, Fernão 2588
 Carrión, Luis 2469
 Carroll, Peter N. 6–7
 Carroll, William K. 3654–61
 Carson, C. 652
 Carson, Edward 1045
Carson, Rachel 615–18
 Silent Spring 615–16
 Carter, J. O. 1566
 Carter, Jimmy and Begin 360 cruise missiles in Sicily 1830–1
 El Salvador 2957
 Haiti 1519
 human rights 2469
 Iran 1963
 Nicaragua 1164, 2469, 2957
 nuclear weapons 197
 Panama 2594
 Paraguay 2606
 Puerto Rico 2771
 and Romero 2868
 Suharto 1725
 Thailand 3486
 US traditional values 889
 Carter, R. O’Brian 402–4, 823–6, 3493–5
 Carter Center 672
 Carteret, Philip 3080
 Carvajal, Francisco Henríquez 1012
 Carvalho, Jorge Isaac 638
 Carvalho, Manuel de 489
 Carvalho, Setembrino de 468
 Cary, Mary Ann Shadd 217, 1102, 1106–7, 1194, 1195, 3623
 Casa de las Americas 3571, 3574
 Casa del Mundo Obrero 138
Casa del Obrero Mundial (COM) 618–19,
 2279, 2280, 2340, 2540, 3597
 Casablanca 2332
 Casablanca Conference 2336
 Casado, Segismundo 3144
 Casaroli, Agostino 2058
 Casarini, Luca 1006
Casement, Roger 619–20, 1046
 Caserio, Sante 130
 Casey, Gilbert 2453
 Cassen, Bernard 298
 Cássia Rodrigues, Fabiana de 51–2, 3388
 Cassinga camp attack 3204
 Castañeda, Jorge 2283
 caste system
 Bengal army 1685–6
 and class struggle 785
 Hindu society 1582–3
 Korea 1997
 Sri Lanka 2632
caste war of Yucatan (Guerra de castas en Yucatán) 620–1
 Castejon Diez, Jaime 3428
 Castellanos, Absalon 2284, 3716
 Castelli, Roberto 1310
 Castells, Manuel 1400
 Castilla, Enrique 2657–8
 Castillo, Heberto 2291
 Castillo, José María 2468
 Castillo Armas, Carlos 240, 241

- Castle, John 3280
 Castle Hill Rebellion: see Vinegar Hill Rebellion
 Castlereagh, Robert Stewart 210, 896, 1789
Castoriadis, Cornelius 325, 621–3
 Socialisme ou Barbarie 2839, 3062, 3062–3 castration, Santal rebellion 2971
 Castro, Fernando 3610
Castro, Fidel 623–9 attempted invasion of Dominican Republic 926 and Eisenhower 922, 934
 Granma era 624, 928–31, 3573, 3574 guerilla attacks 2762
 and Guevara 624, 625, 626–7, 928–9, 1486–90 on homosexuality 3016
 as influence 447
 and Malcolm X 2180
 and Manley 2197
 Marxism-Leninism 2249
 Moncada barracks 916, 927, 928, 2150
 Revolutionary Agrarian Reform Law 933
 and Soviet Union 2996–7
 Unity Manifesto 932
 Castro, Raúl 624, 625, 626, 629, 932, 1485, 3573
 Castro, Rómulo 640, 641
 Catalan Federation 2737
Catalonia 629–32
 anarchism 3130
 anarchosyndicalists 145, 351, 2739, 3130, 3141
 Assembly of 183 against centralism 629–32
 CNT 630, 3129
 Communist Party 179
 FAI 3129
 fall of 2963
 Nin 2486–7
 Nova Cançó 632
 POUM 2737–40
 propaganda 3129
 separatists 351, 629
 Solidaridad Obrera 145, 847
 Souchy 3082–3
 Spanish Revolution 3129, 3133
 Workers' Commissions 181–3
 Catastrophists 2308
 Catavi Massacre 422, 428
 Catayée, Justin 1270
 Catesby, Robert 1186
 Catherine II, of Russia, “the Great” 1002, 1112, 1114, 2710, 2711, 2775
 Catherine of Aragon 514, 1092
 Catherine of Braganza 2333
 Catholic Action 1477, 1479
 Catholic Association 633, 2544
 Catholic Church
 anti-nuclear protests 195
 Austria 320
 birth control 2968
 Bonaparte 442
 Brazil 482–3, 494, 599, 2060
 Ecuador 1056, 1057
 England 517, 1405–7
 Haiti 279, 1504, 1506–7
 Hungary 1618
 imperialism 1654
 Index of Forbidden Books 1111, 2316
 Ireland 971, 1099, 1806–7
 Italy 1177
 Latin America 1924, 2055–63
 liberation theology 2059–60
 Mexico 2281
 Pilgrimage of Grace 509
 Poland 2700, 2712, 3076, 3077, 3078
 Portugal 877
 Quebec 2783–4
 Scotland 3001
 Stroessner 2605–6
 Venezuela 3437
Catholic emancipation 632–4, 655, 2544, 2546
 Catholic German Center Party 3066
 Catholic Intelligentsia Club (KIK) 2696
 Catholic Labor Youth (JOC) 2600
 Catholic land pastoral 2273
 Catholic Relief Act 633, 1418, 2544
Catholic Worker 634, 968
Catholic Worker movement 228, 634–5,
 2489–90, 3420
Cato Street Conspiracy 3151, 3280–1
 Catt, Carrie Chapman 170, 1751, 3551, 3626
 Cattaro mutiny 318
 Cattle Acts 1785 cattle plantations 795
 Catumay Camones 639
caudillos (regional chiefs) 807, 2651
Causa Radical 3440, 3441, 3445–8
 Cavaço Silva, Anibal 2732
 Cavagnari, Louis 15
 Cavaignac, Eugène 1233, 1244, 1245
 Cavaliers 289, 909, 1097
 Cavallo, Domingo 262, 1580
 Cavendish, Lord 2617
 Cavite mutiny 2667
 Cavour, Camillo Benso di 1824, 1826
 Cawal ng Capayapaan 1614
 Cayenne Company uprising 1270
 Cayetano Carpio, Salvador 1164
 Cayo Confite Invasion 1014
 Cazerta agreement 1437
 Ceant, Eamonn 1046
 Ceasefire Monitoring Group (ECOMOG) 2114, 3032

- Ceaușescu, Nicolae 2855, 2858, 2859–60
 Cecil, Sir William 516
Cedar Revolution, Lebanon 635–6
 Cédras, Raoul 279, 1507, 1520 celibacy 1110, 1185, 3019
 Celt, E. 2698
 CENESEX 3571–2
 Center for the Biology of Natural Systems 820
 Center for Gender and Development Studies
 3578, 3579
 Center for Higher Military Studies (CAEM)
 3430
 Center Union, Greece 1432
 Centipede-Flying Eagle Operation 419
 Central African Federation 2174, 2175, 3698
 Central African Republic 1250–1
Central America 637–41 peasant groups 3462
 protest music 637–41
see also individual countries
 Central American All-Stars 641
 Central American University (UCA) 1165
 Central American Workers' Revolutionary Party
 (PRTC) 614
 Central and Eastern European BankWatch 1391, 1392
Central Asia 641–4, 3420 independence from Soviet Union 642–3
 Jadidism 643, 3366
 protest movements 641–4
 Russian control 641, 3420
 settlement by Russian peasants 642 Turkic language 3366
see also individual countries
 Central Commission for Agitation and Propaganda among Working Women 3606
 Central Committee of the Opposition of the Seine 1243 Central Council of Factory Committees 2907
 Central Executive Committee (CEC) 2909–12, 2915, 2928, 2929
 Central General dos Trabalhadores (CGT) 477
 Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)
 Archive of Terror 2597–8
 Bishop 390
 Bolivia 417
 Castro 922
 Chile 2472
 Fiji 1198
 Grenada 2462
 Guatemala 240, 2472
 Iran 1765
 Manley 2198
 Nasi, support for 1833
 Nicaragua 2472
 Paraguay 2597–8, 2606
 Philippines 1615–16
 Tibet 3292
 torture and 2597–8
 Central Kalahari Game Reserve (CKGR) 462
 Central Labor Union (CLU) 3259
 Central Organization of Trade Unions (COTU)
 1949, 1951
 Central Republican Society 403
 Central Soviet of Factory Committees 2913
Central Única dos Trabalhadores (CUT)
 112, 477, 494–500, 681, 808–9 establishing 2601
 Mendes 2274
 Central University of Venezuela (UCV) 3437
 Centri di Permanenza Temporanea (CPTs) 1830
Centri Sociali, Italy 1831–2, 1841, 1845
 Centro Artistico 2375
 Centro de Acción Legal en Derechos Humanos
 (CHARLA) 1478
 Centro de Investigaciones Regionales de
 Mesoamerica (CIRMA) 1478
Centro Italiano Femminile (CIF) 3593
 Cepeda, Iván 798
 Cepeda Vargas, Manuel 798
 Ceresole, Norberto 666
 Cerezo, Vinicio 1477
 Ceric, Irina 590–3, 785–6
 Černík, Oldřich 2745
 Cerpa Catolini, Nestor 2363
 Cerro Corá, Battle of 2608
Césaire, Aimé 644–5, 1162, 1469, 1554, 2427
 Négritude 2428, 3007, 3578
 Césaire, Suzanne 2428
 Cespedes, Carlos Manuel 918
 Céspedes, Carlos Maria de 2152
 Cetiwe, Reuben (Alfred) 152, 154
 Četnik people 3682, 3684, 3685
 Ceylon Federation of Labor 2051
 Ceylon Mercantile Industrial and General
 Workers' Union (CMU) 2632
 CGT-Argentinos 866
 CGT-Azopardo 866
 Cha Cha Cha campaign 3699, 3700
 Chabry, Louise 1293
 Chacabuco, Battle of 2555
 Chacha Goicochea, Vicente Evangelista 1012–13
 Chaco War 419, 427, 432, 1936, 2455, 2599, 2603
 Chadwick, Edwin 656
 chaebols 1985
 Chagla, Muhammad Karim 1931
 Chaguaramas base 3317
 Chaikovsky Circle 2006
Chainsaw 2844
 ChainWorkers 1147

- Chaki, Prafulla 1675
 Chakma Revolt 370
Chakravartty, Renu 645–6
 Chalid, Aini 1724
 Challenger, Edgar 2077
 Challis, Luther 3637
 Chamberlain, Neville 525, 1592
 Chamberlain, Peter 1102
 Chamberlin, W. 2932, 2940, 3508
 Chambers, Ed 49
 Chambers, George Michael 3320
 Chambers of Industry and Commodities
 Exchange (TOB), Turkey 3352
 Chamblain, Jodel 1508
 Chamdo, Battle of 3290
 Chamorro, Pedro Joaquín 2468, 2469
 Chamoun, Camille 2068, 2069, 2070
 Champaran village 1325, 2430, 2493
 Champion, H. H. 2229
Champion, The 3280
 Champlain, Lake 82
 Champs de Mars 892, 1231, 1276, 1288, 1294
 Champseix, Léodile Bréa 2612
 Chan, Florentino 621
 Chancellor, J. R. 3318
 Chancellorsville 64
 Chancosa, Blanca 3658
 Chand, Lokendra Bahadur 2443
 Chanel, Josiane 3575
 Chaney, James 747, 1258, 1975
 Chang Kilsan 1997
 Chang Tai-yen 733
 Changsa massacre 725
 Chanlatte, Antoine 1534–5
 Chantries Act 1094
 Chao Anou 2054
 Chapekar, Damodar and Balkrishna 1674
 Chaplin, Charlie 3044
 Chaplin, Ralph 463
charisma 646–54
 Ahmed the Prophet 1074, 1075
 authoritarianism 648
 King 651–3
 leadership and revolution 646–54
 origins of 650
 Weber 647–9
 Charlemagne 2829
 Charles Albert, King 1149, 1150
 Charles I, of England
 Cavaliers 289
 civil unrest 1097–8, 1601 and Cromwell 908, 909 execution 909, 1106
 Scottish Prayer Book 3000
 Scottish unrest 1096
 Charles I, of Portugal 188
 Charles I, of Spain 843
 Charles II, of England
 Arundel 289
 Bacon's Rebellion 330
 Boyle 2989
 Catherine of Braganza 2333
 enthroned 1100
 Fell's petition 1099, 1190
 Restoration 1194
 Charles IV, of Spain 288
 Charles IX, of Sweden 2514
 Charles the Bold 1034
 Charles V, Holy Roman Emperor 515, 845,
 1034, 1035, 1093, 1355, 1805
 Malta 2183
 Charles VI, of France 353
 Charles X, of France 403, 897
 abdication 1231, 1607
 enthroned 1227–8, 1229–30
 see also Artois, Comte d'
 Charles XIII, of Sweden 3209
 Charles XIV, of France 2950
 Charles XIV John, of Sweden 3209
 Charlotte, Grand Duchess of Luxembourg 2142
 Charta 77 1618
 Chartand, Michel 2786
Charter 77 654–5, 951, 1563, 2698, 3177, 3433, 3434, 3633
 Charter for Peace and National Reconciliation 41
 Charter of Rights and Freedoms 2100
 Charter of Workers' Rights 2698
 Chartist Cooperative Land Society 2551
Chartists 520, 655–9, 2463
 Ballarat 1144–5
 decline of 657–9 historical background 655–6 as mass movement 1744
 Newport rising 2463–4
 O'Connor 2548–52
 origins of 633, 656–7
 patriarchy 658
 People's Charter 656, 657, 658, 2549, 2693 physical/moral force 657
 Prince Edward Island 2753
 Reform Acts 2827
 Reform Bills 2828
 socialism 3061
 Wales 3500–1
 women 657
 Chartrand, Michel 2787
Charusathira, Prapas 659–60
 Chase, Ashton 1856, 3559
 Chase, Samuel 1302
 Chateaubriand, René de 1228

- Chatichai Choonhavan 3272
 Chatra Shibir 347
 Chatterjee, Debi 53–5, 954–61, 2372, 2403–4
 Chatterjee, Jogesh 1678
 Chatterjee, Kanai 2423
 Chatterjee, Shibashis 1775–7, 1779–82
 Chattopadhyay, Bankim Chandra 369, 1582–5, 1674
 Chattopadhyay, Gautam 449
 Chattopadhyay, Kamaladevi 1329, 2389
 Chattopadhyay, Kunal 448–52, 783–5, 996–7, 1324–32, 1673–9, 1680–4, 1685–92, 1692–4, 1694–700, 1700–4, 1704–8, 1711–13, 1920–2, 1928–30, 1930–6, 2317–18, 2429–35, 2791–5, 2802–3, 2874–6, 2970–1, 3041–2
 Chattopadhyay, Virendranath 1675, 2388
 Chau Sen Cocsal 575, 576
 Chaudhurani, Sarala Debi 1689, 1698
 Chaudhuri, J. N. 1707
 Chaudhuri, S. B. 1687
 Chaudry, Mahendra 1199, 2797
 Chauri Chaura attack 1326, 2430
 Chautaria, Fateh Jang 2441
 Chavalit government 3276
 Chavalit Yongchaiyudh 3272
 Chavannes, Jean-Baptiste 1263, 2555
 Chaves, Federico 2600, 2601, 2604
Chávez, César 660–4, 1609
 criticisms of 663–4
 non-violence 663, 2499
 see also United Farm Workers
 Chávez, Joaquín M. 1163–7
 Chávez Frias, Adán 665
Chávez, Hugo 664–74
 Bolivarian Revolution 413, 664, 668–74
 Bolivarianism 413, 664, 672–4
 and Correa 1059 failed coup 665, 667, 670–1, 3440, 3449–50
 and FARC 1169
 Guacaipuro 1472
 and MBR-200 3448
 participatory democracy 2620
 and Pérez Jiménez 3436 and Primera 2751 return to power 414, 3441 support for 3445, 3446, 3448
 women's rights 3631–2
 WTO, Quebec 3657, 3658
 Chávez y González, Luis 2868
 Che-Lumumba Club 964
 Cheap Art Press 501
Checas (private prisons) 3143
 Chechnyan War 3127
 Cheikh Mokrani Rebellion 1927
 Cheka (political police) 1000, 2228, 2934, 2938, 3607
 Chekhova, Mariya 3390, 3551
 Chelcický, Peter 2323, 2830
 Chelvanayakam, S. J. V. 3250
 Chemical Workers' Industrial Union (CWIU) 2801
Chen Duxiu 114, 674–6, 713 discredited 725–6
 Guomindang 725
 May 4th movement 723
 New Youth 2200
 sinization of Marxism 730, 2249
 totalitarianism 676
 Trotsky 675, 2782
 Chen Shuibian 3237
 Chen Tien-hua 3236, 3240
 Chen Yi 3236, 3240
Chenbao (Morning) 2781
 Cheney, G. 2315
 Cheng, Hongming 2975–6
 Cheng Ch'eng-kung (Koxinga) 2311
 Cheng Heng 572
 Chénière, Ernest 1645
 Chepman, Walter 3001
 Chernenko, Konstantin 3118
 Chernobyl disaster 192, 193, 2529
Chernov, Victor 676–7, 979, 2904, 2909, 2911, 2937–8, 3153
Chernyshevsky, Nikolai G. 677–8, 1575, 2081
 What Is To Be Done? 678, 977
 Chertoff, Michael 1642, 1643
 Cherubini, Donatella 2009, 2870–1, 2959–60, 3341–2
 Chesapeake Bay 86
 Chesneaux, J. 3231, 3234
 Chesterton, G. K. 634
 Chevaliers de La Foi 896, 1228
 Chevron-Texaco terminal occupied 2734
 Cheyenne people 2418
 Chhattisgarh Mukti Morcha 3590
 Chhotanagpur Tenancy Act 2372
 Chi, Cecilio 621
 Chiang Kai-Shek
 alienating national opinion 729 arrest of Hô 1598
 civil war 726–7
 death of 2271
 Guomindang 705, 724, 2113, 2201, 3238, 3723
 Japanese agreements 726
 Long March 2201
 Nationalists 2630
 Sino-Japanese War 727
 US support 1217
 Whampoa Military Academy 3202
 white terror 2201, 2202

- Chiang Mai, Thailand 2636
- Chiapas uprising 1122, 1395, 2293, 3714–19
 Amnesty International 2288
 liberation theology 481
 Marcos 2212–13
 massacres 2289
see also Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN)
- Chiapello, L. 2436
- Chibangwa, Henry 3697
- Chibás, Eduardo 623, 916, 927
- Chibebe, Wellington 3733
- Chicago
 discriminatory housing policies 1976 fire 2344
 Hough Riot 3400
 King 751–2
 poverty 11
 Puerto Rican Day celebration 3400
 Puerto Rican street gangs 2770
 race riots 2823, 2824, 3400
 Red Summer 2822–3
 segregated beaches 2823
 Southside 837
 unemployment 2822
 Woodlawn 49
see also Haymarket tragedy
- Chicago Boys 690, 2436
- Chicago Circle 1752
- Chicago Columbian Exposition 3519
- Chicago Eight 3630
Chicago Tribune 11, 2489
- Chicago Urban League 12
- Chichibu Rising 1898, 1899–900
- Chickamauga battle 64
- Chickasaw Bayou, Battle of 62
- Chidley, Katherine 1107
- Chien Heng Company 732
- Chiennes de garde 3577
- Chifley, Ben 315
- Chihuahua 2540
- Chikerema, James 2385
- child labor 960, 2460, 2567
- Child Marriage Restraint Act 2389
- childcare 3629, 3633
- Childers, Erskine 1050
- Childers, Shari 1298–300
- Children of the Disappeared
 HIJOS Movement 256, 1579–81
- Children's Campaign 744
- Children's Crusade 1974
- "Children's Exodus" 503
- Children's Fund 2195
- Chile 678–94
 anarchism 111–13, 691
 and Bolivia 433
 Catholic Church 2060, 2061
 CIA 3472
 copper industry 50, 689
cordones industriales 112
 coup 688–90, 2444
 Democratic Alliance 687
 FPMR 1226–7
 Freire in 1261
 IMF 2436–7
 independence movement 2555–6
 IWW 112, 1753
 JAP bureaucracy 685
 Labor Law 686 land grants 2209
 Mapuche 2209–10
 MTW 1753
 mutual aid 111, 691
 neoliberalism 688, 690, 1398, 2436
 Neruda 2444
 Nueva Canción 2377, 2378–9 people's power 683–5
 Pinochet 685–8, 2507
 Popular Front 3060
 protests 688–90
 punk movement 2063
 silver 691
 social and political struggles 690–4
 socialism 678–83, 684
 squatting 680, 682
 strikes 691–2
 student movement 3181
 terror 688
 torture 688
 unemployment 686
 Vicariate of Solidarity 2060
 women's rights 3598
 working class 690
see also Allende Gossens, Salvador; Left Revolutionary Movement; Pinochet, Augusto
- Chilean Congress 691
- Chilembwe, John 694–6, 2173, 2174
- Chilembwe Rebellion 2173
- Chiluba, Frederick 696–8, 1941, 3111, 3702, 3704, 3705
- Chimurenga armed struggles 698–705, 3734, 3737
- China 705–21
 agrarian reforms 705–6, 723, 729
 anarchism 96, 113–15
 anti-Japanese resistance 727–8 anti-tax riots 734 army 708
 boycotting Japanese goods 185

China (cont'd)

bureaucracy 708
 cadres 708
 Christianity 718, 3233, 3289, 3671, 3673
 civil war 725–7, 2121
 class struggle 706, 707
 collectivization 709–10
 Confucianism 113, 674, 707, 723, 2994, 3284
 Cultural Revolution 710, 720, 2121, 2125, 2204–5, 2422, 3016
 decollectivization 3285 deindustrialization 3230
 earthquake 2205
 ethnic uprisings 715
 European colonialism 1657–8, 1663
 famine 2204
 flooding 3673
 Great Leap Forward 709–10, 986–7, 2203–4
 human rights 3518
 Hundred Flowers Campaign 708–9, 985, 2203, 3479
 imperialism 1654
 industrialization 723
 land redistribution 3233
 Maoism 705–12
 Marxism 723, 730, 2249
 May 4th movement 712–14, 723
 mutual aid 707
 newspaper editors 3286
 peasant revolts 707, 714–15, 3230
 as People's Republic 2202–3, 2995, 3236
 People's Republic proclaimed 2202–3 popular power 705–12 population growth 3230 protest and revolution 715–18
 Red Guards 720, 2996
 science and technology 2994–6
 sexuality 3016, 3017
 silver exports 3230
 social revolution 705, 1663
 student movement 3181
 student protests 708–9, 710, 713, 718–21, 3180
 Taiwan 3236
 Tianjin Massacre 3289–90
 Tibet 2433 treaty ports 718
 unemployment 3230–1
 urban centers 706–7
 women 707–8, 730, 3233
see also anti-Japanese boycotts; Communist Party of China; Deng Xiaoping; Mao Zedong; Tiananmen Square protests
 Chinchilla, Manuel 111

Chinese Communist Revolution 713, 721–32, 1213–14
 First Chinese Revolution 723
 science and technology 2994–6
 Second Chinese Revolution 722, 723–5
 Third Chinese Revolution 728–9
 Chinese Exclusion Act 1978
 Chinese Historical Society 3234
Chinese Nationalist Revolution 674, 732–6
 Chinese Socialist Youth League 3725
 Ching Dynasty 1996
 Chinyama, Ralph 2175
 Chipembere, Henry Blasius Masauko 2175
 Chipenda, Daniel 2360
Chipko movement 736, 3028, 3590
 Chiquito, Manuel 1016
 Chirac, Jacques 645, 1237, 1238, 1273, 2458, 2459, 3577
 Chirife, Adolfo 2609
Chirinos, José Leonardo (Zambo) 737, 3443
 Chirinos, Yoel Acosta 3448
 Chirwa, Orton 2176
 Chirwa, Wellington Manoah 2175
Chissano, Joaquim 738, 1262
 Chit Hlaing, U 552, 553
 Chitepo, Herbert 3739
 Chittagong revolt 1710
 Chittagong struggle 1328, 1678
 Chiume, Murray William Kanyama 2175
 Chkheidze, N. 2899
 Choi Gabryong 136
 cholera 3100
Chomsky, Noam 738–9, 1783 anti-Vietnam War 222
 and Bakunin 336
 on humanitarian intervention 159, 224
Manufacturing Consent 739 mass media 739 non-voting anarchists 100
 Chorotega group 1005
 Chosun Dynasty 1996
 Chowdhurani, Debi 369
 Chowdhury, Abu Torap 369
 Christian Academic Youth (JUC) 478
 Christian Agrarian Leagues 2597, 2605
 Christian Commonwealth Colony 3419–20
 Christian Confederation of Workers (CCT) 2605 Christian Democratic General Confederation of Guatemalan Workers (CGTG) 1473, 1481
 Christian Democratic Party (PDC), Chile 50,
 679–80, 681–2, 684
 Christian Democratic Party (PDC), El Salvador
 1164, 2957
 Christian Democrats (CDU), Germany 1366, 3056

- Christian Federation of Peasants of El Salvador (FECCAS) 2957
- Christian I, of Denmark 2983
- Christian II, of Denmark 988, 2513, 2523
- Christian III, of Denmark 2513, 2523
- Christian VIII, of Denmark 2984–5
- Christian X, of Denmark 991
- Christian Marxism 606, 614, 2061
- Christian revolutionary movement 3303
- Christian socialism 111, 870, 3061
- Christian Socialist Party 362–3
- Christianity
- in China 718, 3232–3
 - Clapham Sect 206
 - Enlightenment 1111
 - Nyasaland 2174
 - Slavs 1142
 - socialism 1343
 - Syrian 235
 - Tolstoy 3301
 - in Vietnam 3477
 - Zambia 3696–7, 3704
 - see also* Catholic Church; Protestantism; Reformation
- Christians for National Liberation (CNL) 2680
- Christians for Socialism 2061
- Christiansen, Samantha M. R. 3177–9
- Christie, Stuart 109
- Christmas, William 965
- Christobal de Olid 911
- Christophe, Henri 1266, 1511, 1522, 1538, 1546
- Christoyannopoulos, Alexandre J. M. E. 3301–2
- Chroniques d'une imposture* 3576
- Chrysler strike 250, 2067
- Chu Ch'ang-fang 2309
- Chu I-hai 2310
- Chu Yu-chien 2309
- Chu Yu-sung 2309
- Chuan Leekpai 3276
- Chubu Electric 191
- Chukaku League 1907–8
- Chulalongkorn, of Thailand 3256
- Chulavitas, Los 408, 1321
- Chumash Indian burial ground 1
- Chun, Michael H. C. 1604–6
- Chun Du-hwan 1981, 1982, 2014, 3183
- Chun Kuo Min Chiao Yu Hui (Educational Society of China) 733
- Chun Tae-il 1981
- Chung Kuo Jih Pao* (China Daily) 733
- Chungara, Domitila 420
- Church Ladies for Choice 1482
- Church of England 1092, 3612
- Church of Ireland 1806
- Church of the Poor 478
- Church of the Province of Kenya (CPK) 1951
- Church of Scotland 1111, 1940, 2300, 3001
- Churchill, Winston
- Athens visit 1438
 - and Haldane 1778
 - India 2432, 2792
 - Kenya 2253
 - and Saw 2977
 - statue transformed 2810
 - Taiwan 3239
 - V-for Victory 1240
- Chushi Gandruk 3292
- Chustenahlah attack 59
- Chusto-Talasa attack 59
- Čič, Milan 3435
- Cicero 1207
- Cienfuegos, Camilo 625, 933, 1488
- Cienfuegos, Joaquin 862–3
- Cientificos 2276
- Ciferri, Elvio 446–7, 2266–8
- Cigarrón label 2751
- Çiller, Tansu 3344
- cimarrones* 795
- Cincinnati riots 3403
- Cinéma du Peuple 116
- Cinque Giornate insurrection 2267
- CIO: see Congress of Industrial Organizations
- Cipriani, Amilcare 126, 1419
- Cipriani, Arthur Andrew 3316
- Circassian Brothers 3357
- Circolo Socialista Avanti trade union 474
- Cirillo, Ciro 2817
- CITE (Interunion Confederation of State Workers) 2653
- Cité Libre* 2783
- Citizen* 3535
- citizen activism 820
- citizen patrols 862
- citizen protest 2603
- Citizens Action for Free and Fair Elections (CAFFE) 1865
- Citizens' Alliance 3413, 3414
- Citizens' Committee, Poland 3076, 3079
- Citizen's Committee of One Thousand 3535
- Citizen's Constitutional Forum (CCF) 1198
- Citizens' Daily* 733
- Citizens' Party 820
- Citizens' Union of Serbia (GSS) 224
- Ciudad Juárez, Treaty of 2277
- Civic Association of Guerrero (ACG) 3427
- Civic Associations of the Southern Transvaal (CAST) 2265
- Civic Campaign 98 811–12
- Civic Female Party 3598
- Civic Forum, Prague 951, 3177, 3434, 3435

- Civic Legal Watch 1392
 Civil Constitution, France 892, 893
 civil disobedience
 Barayi 349
 Committee of 100 190
 environmentalism 785
 Gandhi 1327–9
 India 1684
 La Boétie 2017
 Quakers 1225
 Tute Bianche 1007
 Vancouver Island 785
 see also satyagraha
 Civil Guards, Spain 3131
 Civil Rights Act 2800, 2803
 Friedan 1299
 Johnson 745, 1974
 passing of 740–1, 746, 753, 3166
 Paul 2625
 Civil Rights Commission 740
 Civil Rights Guards 17
civil rights movement 739–64 anti-Vietnam protests 220 black grassroots 1154
 Black Power 749–55
 charisma 652–3
 Columbia University 811
 Cuffe 941
 Jackson 1852–3
 Johnson 745
 King 220, 889, 3397
 Meredith 2275
 nascent 758–61
 non-violence 742–3
 overview 755–64
 Parks 2615
 Scottsboro Resistance 3002–3
 SNCC 651
 USA (1960–5) 739–49
 World War II 2497
Civil Society 1638
 Cixous, Hélène 3576
 Clamshell Alliance 1, 125, 159, 1051
 Clandestine Indian Revolutionary Committee
 (CCRI) 3717
 Clandestine Insurgent Rebel Clown Army
 (CIRCA) 1313, 1482
 Clandestine Revolutionary Workers' Party-Union of the People (PROCUP) 1122, 2285, 2286
 Clann na Gael 2616–17
 Clapham Sect 203, 206, 208, 210
 Clapton, Rick 219–23
 Claramunt, Teresa 116, 123
Claridad 2649, 2770
Clarion 331
 Clarion Fellowship 830
 Clark, George Rogers 84
 Clark, Peter H. 2027
 Clarke, John 2560–2
 Clarke, Maura 2060
 Clarke, Thomas 620, 860, 1046, 2627, 3022
 Clarkson, John 210, 3528
 Clarkson, Lawrence 1104
Clarkson, Thomas 203, 204, 205, 210, 764–5 abolitionist writings 368, 764–5, 3528 colonization 206
Clarté 2217
 Clash, The 2777
class 776–83
 capitalism 766–7, 1667–8
 consciousness 769–71
 gender 3565–6
 identity 771–3
 interclass cooperation 268–9
 Japan 1880, 1895–6
 Marx 765–7
 Mills 768, 772 poverty/revolution 776–83
 solidarity 102
 Winstanley 3537
 women's rights 1293
 working class 767–8 class-based anarchism 109
class identity 765–76
class struggle 782, 783–5, 821
 Argentina 248–9
 autonomism 323
 China 706, 707
 Communist Manifesto 765–7
 Foucault 772, 1221
 French Revolution 1287
 identity 771–3
 Italy 1842–3
 IWW 1844
 Japan 1880, 1895–6
 Marx 783, 1912, 2231–4
 sans-culottes 778
 Thompson 769–70, 773
 unemployment 3385
 workplace 3072
Class Struggle 2584
 Class War Federation 1387, 3072 class warfare 779, 2024, 2662
Classe Operaia (Working Class) 1842, 1843
 CLAT (Latin American Central of Workers) 808
 Claussen, H. R. 2984
 Clay, Cassius 221
 Clay, Henry 214
 Clay, Philippe 2381

- Clayoquot Sound 785–6
Cleage, Albert B. 394
Clean Air Act 617
Clean Government Party (CGP) 1910
Cleaver, Harry 1397–8
Cleburne Demands 2725, 2727
Clemenceau, Georges 851
Clemenceau, M. 3218
Clément, Léon 3217
Clement, Skipper 988, 2513, 2516
Clement VII, Pope 515, 1093
Clément XIII, Pope 1001
Clements, Evans 3552
Clements, Samuel (slave) 3047
Clermont-Tonnere, Count 1918
Cleveland, Grover 1565
Cleyre, Voltairine de 115, 157
clientelism 789–90, 1861, 3685
Cliff, Tony 2250
Clifford, Henry 1632
Climate Camp (2007) 1040
Climate Change Operation 2479, 2485
Clinton, Bill and Barak 239, 1759 and Carney 615
 Guatemala 1473
 Haiti 1520
 Huerta 1610
 neoliberalism 1398
 Panama 2594
 Puerto Rico 2772
 transnational capitalism 1430
 Vieques 3465
Clinton, Henry 81, 83, 85
Clive, Robert 368, 1708
Clontarf meeting 2544
Clothing Workers' Industrial Union 152, 1414, 3092
Clouds, Battle of 82
Cloward, R. A. 781–2, 2756, 2757–8, 2759
Club des Impartiaux 891
Club Liberal Ponciano Arriaga 998
Club Massiac 1525, 1527, 2553, 2554
Club War 2514
Clubmen Associations 1097
Cluchette, John 965
CND: see Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament
CNT: see Confederación Nacional del Trabajo
CNT-FAI 131, 848, 849, 1030, 1188, 1413
Coal Wars 2418
Coalición de Organizaciones del Pueblo Maya (COPMAGUA) 1478
Coalition to Abolish the Fur Trade 513
Coalition Against Water Privatization (CAWP) 3102 Coalition of Democratic Ethiopian Forces (CODEF) 1139
Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK) 3036
Coard, Bernard 390, 1464, 1465, 1466, 2462
cobas 1307, 1308, 1311, 1839–41
Cobb, Richard 1285
Cobban, Alfred 1284
Cobbett, William 786, 1632, 2543, 3024
 Political Register 546, 547
Cobden, Richard 177
Coca-Cola workers 809, 1479, 1480 coca growers' movement 423, 434, 1938–9, 2653
coca leaf cultivation
 Bolivia 433, 434, 435, 787–8
 FARC 1169
 Morales 2320
cocaleros peasant uprising 786–90
Cochabamba Water Wars 423, 432, 433, 434, 790–2
Coche, Treaty of 3707
Cochinchina region 1714, 1715, 3468, 3470, 3471, 3475
Cochran, Bert 840
Cochrane, Kelso 2527
Cochrane, Lord 488, 489
Cock Crowing in the Dark Society 113
Cockcroft, James 2541
Coco, Francesco 2815
cocoa cultivation 23, 24, 25, 1382, 1541
Code Napoléon 2721
Code Noir laws 1543
CODESRIA 3549
Codreanu, Cornelius Zelea 2857
Coe, Paul 309, 310
Coercion Bill 2617
Coercive Acts 78, 453
COFAVIC 604–5
coffee industry
 Brazil 469
 El Salvador 2956
 Haiti 1530, 1535, 1542
 prices 469
Cohen, G. A. 770
Cohen, Giuseppe 2184
Cohen, Joseph J. 3419
Cohen, Joshua 2620
Cohen, Ran 1812
Cohen, Sheila 771
Cohen-Cruz, Jan 407
Cohn, Jesse 93–101, 115–17, 122–6, 158–60, 160–1, 161–2, 1609, 2047–9, 3082–3
Cohn-Bendit, Daniel 224, 792, 1235, 2260, 2705
 Socialisme ou Barbarie 3062

- Cohn-Bendit, Gabriel 792
 Coiffe, Dorothea 641–4
 COINTELPRO 19, 395, 398, 2769, 2840
 Colbert, Jean Baptiste 1541, 2842, 2991
 Colborne, John 594
 Cold War
 anti-nuclear protests 194
 autonomism 324
 CPA 822
 dependency theory 1671
 end of 223, 1147 espionage 840
 France 825
 GDR 1337
 Kashmir 1931
 nuclear arms race 2501
 Red Scare 194
 revisionism 73
 Saddam Hussein 1782
 start of 2248–9
 US–Japan 1885
 Coldbath Fields Prison 546
 Cole, G. D. H. 2547, 2620
 Colectivo Feminista 3611
 Colectivo Situaciones 1580
 Coligny, Admiral 2950
 Collado, Pablo 1471
 Collazo, Oscar 2770
 Collectif des féministes indigènes 3577 collective action 983
 LGTB 2503
 non-violent 2492–4
 poverty 780–2 reasons for 781–2
 Sweden 2519
 Tilly 2490 unemployed 781
 Collective Bargaining Act 181
 collectivism 97, 98, 3417
 anarchocommunism 161
 Bakunin 161
 France 119
 Winstanley 3537
 collectivization 1343, 3117, 3134, 3625
 College of Science and Humanities (CCH),
 Mexico 3378
 Collenberg, Carrie 1036–7
 Collett, Camilla 2524
 Collingwood, Luke 203
 Collins, John 2129
 Collins, Michael 793–4, 972, 1048
 Collins, Tom 2589, 2947–8
 Collor, Fernando 477
 Collor de Melo, Fernando 499
 Collot d'Herbois, Jean-Marie 1298
 Cologne: see G8 Protests, Cologne
Colombia 794–810
 Afro-Colombian movements 794–6
 Agrarian Reform Law 700
 Amnesty International 810
 anti-neoliberalism 808–10 anti-racist protests 794–6 anti-war movements 796–8 armed insurgency 798–800, 801–3 banana plantation rebellion 343–4
 bishops 2059
 Constitution 796 displaced communities 796, 1084
 drug cartels 808
 ELN 244, 410, 420, 800, 801, 1081–4, 2791
 FARC 244, 410, 796, 799, 801, 1081, 1082, 1084, 1167–70
 Gaitán 408
 homicides 810
 ILO 809
 IMF 808
 independence struggles 795
 Indian/peasant organization 2045–6 indigenous mobilization 797–8, 803–5, 3294–5 insurrection 805–6
 kidnappings 1169
 labor 805–6
 M-19 802, 1082, 2149–50
 paramilitary groups 802, 808 peasant self-defense 798–800, 801–3
 punk movement 2063
 radical popular movements 798–800, 801–3
 Socialist Revolutionary Party 805–6
 strikes 808–10
 Thousand Days' War 806–7, 2045
 Tisquesuza 3294–5
 trade unions 808–10
 UNIR 1320–1
 UP 3388–9
 US financing 1169
 women's movement 798
 Colombia Plan 797, 803, 809, 1084, 1169
 Colombian Agrarian Reform Institute (INCORA)
 799 Colombian Federation of Workers (CTC) 808
 Colombian Union of Workers (UTC) 808
 Colombini, Chiara 1383–4
 Colonia Cosme: see Cosme Colonists Colonia Nueva Australia: see New Australia movement
 Colonial Declaration of Rights and Grievances 78
 colonialism
 Africa 3545
 Americas 74–7 black response 206–9

- Britain 206–9, 1695–700
 and capitalism 1381, 1648
 India 1695–700
 Luxemburg on 1649–51
 Portugal 186, 2731
 self-reliance 76
- color revolutions 810–18, 2510–11 future of 817 social forces 816–17 technology of 814–16
see also specific revolutions
- Colorado coalfields 2344
 Colorado Labor Wars 1570
 Colorado Party
 and Liberal Party 2608
 Paraguay 2135, 2450, 2596, 2599–600
 purges 2604
 and Stroessner 2601
 Uruguay 3340, 3405, 3408, 3410
- Colorum* religious organizations 2672
- Colpoys, John 3154
 Colson, Charles 1947
 Colucci, Francesco 1310
 Columbia, Tennessee 17
- Columbia University, civil rights protests
 818, 904
- Columbus, Bartolomé 601
 Columbus, Christopher 2055, 2074, 2416, 3315
 Columbus Day 2416, 2420
Coluna Prestes 469, 475, 2748
 Colville, Colonel 3369–70
- Comando Descamisados (Shirtless Commandos) 245
- Comando Geral dos Trabalhadores (CGT) 476 Comando Nacional Unitario (Unitary National Command) 809
- Comaposada Guillén, Mercedes 2367, 3611
- Combat* 581
 Combat Organization 2718, 2719
 Combative Class Current (CCC) 264
 Combattants de la Libération (CDL) 45
- Combination Laws 519, 655, 818–20, 2133
 repeal of 2692
- Comblin, José 2059
 Comeau, Robert 2786
 Comenius, John Amos 2323
- Cominform, in Yugoslavia 3690–2
- Coming Nation, The* 3418
 Cominiello, Sebastián 1579–81
 Comino island 2183
- Comintern: see Communist International
- Comisión Feminina Asesora de la Presidencia
 (COFEAPRE) 3631
- Comitato di Liberazione Nazionale (CLN) 131, 1833, 2835, 3298
- Comité Central des Sociétés Fraternelles 1294 Comité de Enlace Intersindical (Inerunion Liaison Committee) 274–5
 Comité de Organización Política Electoral Independiente (COPEI) 3436
 Comités Sindicalistas Revolucionarios 2257
 Commandos Populares de Liberación (CPL) 245
 Commands of Revolutionary Areas, Venezuela 415
 Commercial Workers' Union 2220–1, 3729 Commission for Industrial Relations Reform,
 Korea 1988
 Commission on Interracial Cooperation (CIC)
 3002–3
 Commission of Peace and Justice 2060
 Commission on Race Relations 2824
 Commission of Rehabilitation of Refugees (EAP)
 1442
 Committee of 100 190, 196
 Committee for Campesino Unity (CUC) 1477, 1480, 2272
 Committee for the Defense of Human Rights
 3744 Committee for the Defense of the Revolution
 (CDR) 626, 921, 936
 Committee for the Defense of Workers (CDR)
 626
 Committee on Labor Organization (CLO)
 1612–13
 Committee of National Liberation: see Comitato di Liberazione Nazionale (CLN)
 Committee for Nuclear Information 820
 Committee of Public Safety 962, 1277, 1291,
 1298, 2611, 2849
 Committee for a Unified NewArk 348
 Committee of Union and Progress (CUP),
 Turkey 293, 1452, 3347–8, 3357
 Committee for the Unjustly Persecuted (VONS)
 654
 Committee of Women for Progress 3560
- Committee for Workers (KOR), Poland: see
 Workers' Defense Committee (KOR)
- commodification of knowledge 2992
 commodity fetishism, Marx 973, 1648
 Common Action 361
Common Cause 3567
 Common Frontiers 3656 common land rights 1354, 3150
 common property 3061
- Commoner, Barry 820–1
 Commoners' Society 133
Commonweal, The 2229, 2341
Commonwealth, The 861
 Commonwealth Arbitration Court 3562–3
 Commonwealth College 3419

- Commonwealth Immigration Act 2527
 Commonwealth of Independent States 1418,
 3125, 3245, 3330
 Commonwealth of Northern Marianas 2304
 Commonwealth Parliament 1099
 Communards/Communardes 270, 402, 1608 see also Paris Commune Commune, La 1204–5 communes, draft resisters 3419
 communism
 Buonarroti 2266
 collapse of 2263
 and counterrevolution 888
 revolution 778
 voluntary 1410
see also individual countries' communist parties Communist Correspondence Committee 1091,
 2234
 Communist International: see Internationals,
 Third
 Communist Labor Party 595, 836, 2825, 3065
 Communist League (CL) 2234, 2235, 3061, 3413, 3424
 Communist League of America (Opposition)
 (CLA) 596
 Communist League of India 3229
 Communist League of South Africa (CLSA) 833
 Communist Left of Spain (ICE) 2737
Communist Manifesto (Marx and Engels)
 821–2, 2234–5, 2451, 2754
 capitalism 1647, 2241–2
 class struggle 765–7, 777–8
 Communist League 3056
 counterrevolution 887 development 2240 history and struggle 1398 influence on Lenin 2082
 as programmatic text 1148
 proletariat 2241
 revolution 777–8, 1215, 2760, 3424
 Singh 3042
 socialism 3056 translations 3229
 in Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly 3636 workers of the world 839, 1742, 2244
 working class 767–8, 770, 1351, 2147, 2241–2
 Communist Party of America (CPA) 22, 595, 835–6, 3065
see also Communist Party of the United States of America
 Communist Party of Aotearoa 831
 Communist Party of Argentina (PCA) 244, 271–2
Communist Party of Australia (CPA) 3, 304, 316, 822–3, 830, 1738–9
 Munday 2373
 Communist Party of Austria (KPÖ) 2046
 Communist Party of Bolivia (PCB) 417, 428
 Communist Party of Brazil (PCdoB) 471–2, 474, 495
 Bezerra 384
 Frei Chico 3038 illegal 2749
 Moraes 2319
 Silva 3039
 Communist Party of Bulgaria (BCP) 536, 540,
 541, 3069
 Communist Party of Burma (CPB) 550, 3068, 3278
 Communist Party of Canada (CPC) 383, 588, 2783, 2831
 Communist Party of Ceylon 2631, 3526
 Communist Party of Chile (CChP) 683, 687,
 692, 693, 1226
Communist Party of China (CCP)
 agrarian reforms 706
 Central Committee 2124–5
 civil war 725–7
 Deng 3284–6
 founding of 114, 674
 and Guomindang 1597
 Liu Shaoqi 2124–5
 Lu Xun 2132
 Mao 2199, 2203–4, 3284
 as model for Philippines 2680–1
 Qin Banxian 2780
 Qu Qjubai 2781–2
 reconstruction 711
 Russian control 2200
 Second Chinese Revolution 722 and students 720–1, 2203
 Sun Yat-Sen 3202
 Zhang Guotao 3722–3
 Communist Party of Chinese Youth in Europe
 (CPCYE) 3725
 Communist Party of Colombia (PCC) 798, 1121
 Communist Party of Cuba (Partido Comunista Cubano, PCC) 916–17, 922, 929, 936, 940,
 2151, 2853
 Communist Party of Cuba (Partido Socialista Popular, PSP) 623, 625, 930
 Communist Party of Cyprus (AKEL) 945, 948
 Communist Party of Czechoslovakia
 (CPCS/KSČ) 951, 2742, 3048, 3433–4
 Communist Party of East Pakistan (CPEP) 2581
 Communist Party of Ecuador (PCE) 1057
 Communist Party of El Salvador (CPS) 1163,
 2224, 2225, 2957
Communist Party of France (PCF) 121, 823–6
 Algeria 44

- Amicale, L' 853
 anti-fascist 179
 Cameroon 579
 Hô Chi Minh 1597
 Indochina 225–6
 membership 3383
- Communist Party of Germany (KPD)
 826–9, 3067
 formation of 1374
 and Frankfurt School 1253
 Luxemburg 2117
 Marxists 1338
 membership 1374, 3383 against Nazis 1376–7
Rote Fahne, Die 1376
 Spartakusbund 2117
 Zetkin 3722
- Communist Party of Great Britain (CPGB) 524, 2050, 2821, 3062, 3282, 3383
- Communist Party of Greece (KKE) 1432–3, 1436, 1446, 1447–8, 1453, 1454, 3220
- Communist Party of Greece (Interior) (KKE-Εσωτερικόν) 1433, 1446, 1447–8
- Communist Party of Guiana 1270
- Communist Party of Haiti (PCH) 1517, 2872
- Communist Party of Hungary 2866
- Communist Party of India (CPI)
 Bose 449
 de-Stalinization 2421
 formation of 961, 1677
 independence 2421
 Kashmir 1934
 Mazumdar 2265
 Muslim League 2793
 peasant movements 2573, 2575
 Quit India 2051
 World War II 1329–30
- Communist Party of India (Marxist) (CPI-M) 961, 1934, 2265, 2422, 3587 ideological struggle 2422
- Communist Party of India (Marxist-Leninist)
 (CPI-ML) 2423
 women's roles 2424, 3587
- Communist Party of Indochina (ICP) 2065,
 3468, 3472
- Communist Party of Indochina (PKI) 1598, 1713, 1722–3, 1724, 1728, 3257
 armed insurgency 1728–9
 Sukarno 3180
- Communist Party of Indonesia 2677
- Communist Party of Iran: see Tudeh Party
- Communist Party of Iraq (ICP) 1159, 1776, 1779, 2953–6, 3225, 3516
- Communist Party of Italy (PCI) 1818–21 and AO 2622
- Berlinguer 379–80
- Bordiga 446–7
 formation of 386, 1828
 Gramsci 1422
 outlawed 1818
 Red Brigades 2814–15
 Rossanda 2870
 Serrati 3013–14
 Soviet invasion of Hungary 1834
 and Soviet Union 2196
 Togliatti 1146, 3298
 Turin 1835
see also Red Brigades
- Communist Party of Japan 134, 1883, 1910–11
- Communist Party of Kampuchea 569
- Communist Party of Lesotho (CPL) 2111
- Communist Party of Luxembourg 2142
- Communist Party of Malaya (CPM) 2178, 3260, 3269
- Communist Party of Malaysia (MDU) 2178
- Communist Party of Mexico (PCM) 2291, 2296,
 2298, 2755, 2874
- Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) (CPN-M)
 230, 231–2
 Maoist influence 2199, 2437, 2438
- Communist Party of Nepal (United Marxist Leninist) (CPN-UML) 230, 232, 2437, 2438
- Communist Party of the Netherlands (CPN) 2446
- Communist Party of New Zealand 829–31
- Communist Party of Pakistan (CPP) 1857, 2580, 2581
- Communist Party of Palestine 3161
- Communist Party of Paraguay 2600, 2609
- Communist Party of Peru 2219, 2664
- Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP)
 2677, 2679–80, 2682–8
- Communist Party of the Philippines (PKP)
 2673–4, 2677, 2679
- Communist Party of Poland (PZPR) 996, 3497
- Communist Party of Puerto Rico 2769
- Communist Party of Romania 2855, 2856, 2857, 2861
- Communist Party of Russia
 Bolsheviks 2993
 Makhno 2166–7
 membership 3509
 Stalinism 2247–9
 Women's Section 1979–80
- Communist Party of Scotland 2820–1
- Communist Party of Siam (CPS) 3257
- Communist Party of Slovakia (CPS) 3048
- Communist Party of Slovenia 3052

- Communist Party of South Africa (CPSA)
 831–5, 1414
 and ANC 171, 832
 Botswana mine laborers 455
 Dunbar 1028
 formation of 2222, 3092
 and LLB 2111
 Marks 2222–3
 Motsaedi 2345
 Rand Revolt 832 revival 833
 and SALP 153, 832
 Simons 3039
 World War II 834
 Young Communist League 2948
see also South African Communist Party (SACP)
- Communist Party of South Vietnam 3479
- Communist Party of Spain (PCE) 182
 Eurocommunism 1146
 Maurin 2257
 post-war 181
 and socialists-anarchists 179
 Spanish Revolution 3130–1, 3139–40
- Communist Party of Sudan (SCP) 3198
- Communist Party of Thailand (CPT)
 2746–7, 3256–65
 BRN 3269 crises 3261–5
 Fourth Congress 3263–4
 Laos bases 3261 origins 3258–9
 Revolution (1932) 3257, 3261
 Sino-Indochinese Wars 3262–3
 Wirat 3538–9
- Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU)
 799, 3103, 3432
 and Bolsheviks 3158
 Brezhnev 3432
 Stalinist view of Leninism 2089
see also Gorbachev, Mikhail
- Communist Party of Turkmenistan (TCP) 3367
- Communist Party of the United States of America (CPUSA) 835–42
 African Americans 394
 Aptheker 233
 Cannon 595
 European revolutionary feeling 22
 Foster 1220
 McCarthy era 1220
 membership 3383
 Spanish Civil War 7 support from public figures 841
 unemployment 3386
- Communist Party of Venezuela (PCV) 413, 668, 3441–2, 3445, 3451
- Communist Party of Vietnam (CPV): see Dang Cong San Viet Nam
- Communist Party of Yugoslavia (CPY) 1011, 3052, 3295, 3683, 3690–1
- Communist Party Opposition 1371
- Communist Party Vanguardia Popular 878
- Communist Refoundation Party 1820
- Communist University of the Toilers of China (KUTK) 2782, 3723, 3724
- Communist University of the Toilers of the East (KUTV) 1159, 2124, 3727
- Communist Workers Peasants Party (CMKP) 2584
- Communist Youth of Siam (CYS) 3257
- Communist Youth of Venezuela (JCV) 3442, 3451
- communitarians 2450
see also utopian communities
- Community for Peace and Construction 1380
- Community of Peace People 2522
- Community Radio 107–8
- Community Relations Serice 746
- Community Service Organization (CSO) 661
- community union 1876, 1877
- Community Union National Network (CUNN) 1877
- Comonfort, Ignacio 1925
- Comorera, Joan 3141
- Compact of Free Association 2304
- Compagnie Calédonienne des Nouvelles-Hébrides (CCNH) 3425–6
- Compagnie des Indes Occidentales 1540
- Compagnies Républicaines de Sécurité (CRS) 1235
- Compañón, Francis 3404
- company-owned stores system 253
- Companys, Lluís 3136
- Compiègne, Treaty of 872
- Complete Suffrage Union 2464
- Comprehensive Peace Accord 2439–40
- Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty 197
- Compulsory Native Labor Act 3734
- Comstock Law 1412, 2968–9, 3622, 3626
- Comte, Auguste 842–3, 2764
 positivism 600, 842–3, 2276
 and Saint-Simon 842
- Comuna Morelense 3709–11
- Comunero movement 843–5, 2569
- concentration camps 685, 1338, 1917
- Concentrazione di Azioni Antifascista 1383, 2871, 3342
- Concepción, María de la 3630
- Concha, Luis 2059, 3303

- Concklin, Seth 3047
- Concordia University, student protests 845–6
- Condera, Juan Gerardi 2060
- Condillac, Etienne 2873
- Condominium Agreement 3192
- Condor Operation 2598, 2607
- Condorcanqui Noguera, José Gabriel: see Túpac Amaru II
- Condorcet, Madame de 1293
- Condorcet, Marquis de 846–7, 1115, 1421, 1525, 2547
death of 2990
Equisse d'un tableau historique 846
- Cone, James H. 394
- Confederação do Equador 489
- Confederação Operária Brasileira (COB) 474
- Confederación Española de Derechas Autónomas (CEDA) 146, 291, 3130, 3131
- Confederación General de Trabajadores (CGT) 138, 244
- Confederación General del Trabajo (CGT), Argentina 249, 251, 271, 274, 863–8, 2638
- Confederación Nacional del Trabajo (CNT) 847–50
anarchism 98, 99
anarchosyndicalism 161, 1413
Asturias 291
Barcelona General Strike 351
Catalonia 630, 3129
and CGT 850
and CGT-SR 851
emergence of 145
FAI 1030, 1187–9
Maurín 2257
and Mujeres Libres 2368–9
Nin 2486–7
post-war 181
Sánchez Saornil 2962
SolFed 3072
Souchy 3082
Spanish Civil War 3135–7
- Confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana (CROM) 619, 2280, 2296, 2340
- Confederación de Trabajadores de Cuba (CTC) 915, 921, 936
- Confederación de Trabajadores de México (CTM) 619, 2291, 2297, 2340, 2542
- Confederate States of America 57
- Confederation of Anarchosyndicalists (KAS) 143
- Confédération des Associations Tribales du Katanga (CONAKAT) 856
- Confederation of Ethiopian Labor Unions (CELU) 1135, 1136
- Confédération Générale du Travail (CGT) 850–1
anarchism 120
anarchosyndicalism 161
and Bourses du Travail 161, 463 dock workers 1235
membership 3216
Pelloutier 2628
Syndicaliste Révolutionnaire 850–1
- Confédération Générale du Travail Unitaire (CGTU) 851, 3385
- Confederation for an Independent Poland (KPN) 3077
- Confederation of Indigenous Nationalities of Ecuador (CONAIE/CONACNIE) 480, 803, 1056–7, 1064, 1065, 1066
- Confederation of Indigenous Nationalities of the Ecuadorian Amazon (CONFENIAE) 1056, 1064
- Confederation of Labor Unity of Guatemala (CUSG) 1481
- Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM) 607
- Confederation of National Trade Unions 589
- Confederation of Peasant Workers of Bolivia (CNTCB) 1937
- Confederation of Revolutionary Trade Unions (DİSK), Turkey 3342, 3352
- Confederation of Venezuelan Workers (CTV) 670, 3437
- Confederation of Workers of Chile (CTCH) 692
- Confederation of the Workers of Peru (CTP) 2650
- Confederazione Generale del Lavoro (CGdL) 997, 1822, 1823, 3015
- Confederazione Generale Italiana del Lavoro (CGIL) 130, 380, 998, 1834, 1835
- Confederazione Italiana dell'Industria 1822
- Confederazione Italiana Sindacati dei Lavoratori (CISL) 998, 1823
- Confederazione Unitaria di Base (CUB) 1147, 1837, 1840
- Conference of Working Women, Petrograd 3606
- Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) 816
- Conferência Nacional da Classe Trabalhadora (CONCLAT) 498
- Conferencias de San Vicente de Paúl 3610
- Conferença Nacional dos Trabalhadores na Agricultura (CONTAG) 3039
- Confiscation Acts 70, 217
- Conflict and Consensus movement 1007
- Confucianism 113, 674, 707, 723, 2994, 3284
and communism 3472

- Congo, Democratic Republic of 852–9 anti-colonialism 857, 2137, 2138
 armed insurgency 852–3
 Belgium 856–7, 1661, 2138
 Brazzaville protest 853–4
 Copperbelt 3695
 crisis 854–6
 Kinshasa protest 856–8 protest and uprisings 858–9 self-determination 856
 Soviet Union 855
 UN 855
see also Mobutu; Zaire
- Congo-Brazzaville 1251
 Congo Free State 619, 856
 Congo War II 2364
 Congolese National Liberation Front (FNLC) 852
 Congrégation 1228
 Congreso Obrero de Filipinas (KAP) 2672
 Congress Against Imperialism 2430
 Congress Alliance 171–2, 2346, 2357, 3103, 3105, 3249
 Congress of the Christian Peasants' Federation (FCC) 2605
- Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) 838, 3411–15
 Alinsky 49
 black members 2066
 membership 3411
 moderation 2036–7
 rise of 1737, 2035–6 sit-down strikes 2494
 unemployment 3387
 UPWA 3627
see also AFL-CIO
- Congress of Labor (CT) 2294, 2299
 Congress–League alliance, India 1921
 Congreso Obrero de Filipina (COF) 2672 Congress Poland: see Poland, Congress Kingdom of
- Congress of Polish Culture 3075
- Congress of Racial Equality (CORE)
 869–70, 2840
 Carmichael 613
 Freedom Rides 741, 1973, 3186
 Freedom Summer 750
 Harlem riots 3398
 Jim Crow era 18
 non-violence 762, 2498
- Congress of Representatives of Trade and Industry 2892
- Congress Socialist Party (CSP) 450, 1683, 2793, 2794
- Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) 349, 874–7 and ANC 2192, 3084, 3101, 3112
 anti-apartheid 174 growth of 3106
 Mandela 2195
 Mayekiso 2264, 3096
 and MDC 3733
 post-apartheid democratization 3097–8
 Soviet support 175
 and Swaziland 3207
- Congress of Soviets of Central Asia, Fifth 3242
 Congress of Soviets of Workers' and Soldiers' Deputies 2918, 2928
 Congress Working Committee (CWC) 448, 1326, 2793
 Congressional Union (CU) 2624
 Conintes Plan 2641, 2642
 Conjuração Baiana 485–6
 Conjuração Carioca 484
 Conn, Matthew B. 558
 Connaught, Republic of 1795–6
 Connaught Rangers mutiny 511
 Conner, Clifford D. 992–4, 1273–83, 1654–64, 1790–6, 2545–8, 2548–52, 2986–99
- Connolly, James 859–61
 Easter Rising 620, 1046
 Irish Citizen Army 1046
 labor politics 1800
Labour in Irish History 2545
 land reform 2819
 and Larkin 1026
- Connor, Eugene “Bull” 742, 743, 1974
Conquest, The 135
 Conquest of the Desert 257
- Conquistadors
 Alvarado 3255
 Aracaré 237
 Ecuador 237, 1061, 1925–6
 and Incas 2876
 Taíno 1561
- conscientious objectors 1343 consciousness raising 116, 3569
 Conscription Act 12
 Conseil Electoral Provisoire (CEP) 1505
 Conseil National de la Résistance (CNR) 1240
 Consejo de Comunidades Étnicas “Runujal Junam” (CERJ) 1478
 Consejo de Organizaciones Mayas de Guatemala (COMG) 1478
 Conselho Nacional da Resistência Maubere (CNRM) 1044 Conselho Nacional da Resistência Timorense (CNRT) 1044 conservation ethic 1117 Conservative Party, Britain 528, 529 see also Thatcher, Margaret

- Conservative Party, South Africa (KP) 2626
 Considérant, Victor 2843
 Consiglio Nazionale delle Donne Italiane (CNDI) 3592
 Consolidated Slave Law 204
 Consolidation of Peace (COPAZ) 1166
 Conspiração dos Suassunas 484
 Conspiracy of Equals 328–9, 545, 1004, 1743, 2543
 Constantine, Emperor 2828
 Constantine, King: see Konstantinos, of Greece
 Constantinescu, Emil 2861
 Constitution Act, Canada 585
 Constitutional Convention 3023
 Constitutional Society 3531
 Constitutional Union Party 1776, 1779
 Constitutionals 1019, 1020, 2541
Constitutionnel, Le 1229
 Construction Workers' Syndicate, Turkey 3352
 Constructivism 116
 Constructora Nacional de Válvulas (CNV) 3453
 consubstantiation, doctrine of 1356
 Consultative Committee of Black Trade Unions (CCOBTU) 3095 Consultative Labor Commission (CCT) 2356 consumption, mass 1665
 Contadora Group 2475
Contemporary, The 677
Contemporary Society, The 136
 Contestado War 466–8, 467–8
 Continental Army
 Bound Brook 82
 Lafayette 2851
 Rochambeau 2851
 Washington 79, 2851
 Continental Congress 78, 80, 2041
 Continental System 442
 Continuity IRA 1802, 1803
 see also Irish Republican Army (IRA)
 Continuous Discharge Book 1754
 Contra Revolutionary Democratic Alliance (ARDE) 2473, 2475
 contraception: see birth control Contract Labor Law 1978
 Contrat Première Embauche 1148, 1238
 Conventicle Act 517, 1190
 Convention Act 1787
 Convention for a Democratic South Africa (CODESA) 1552, 3107
 Convention of the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) 3275
 Convergence Démocratique (CD) 1509
 Convergence de Lutte Anti-Capitaliste (CLAC) 3657
 Convergencia 3440
 Conversion Our Goal (COG) 2108
 Convocation 515
 Conzé, Jean-Baptiste 1523
 Konzett, Conrad 2027
 Cooch's Bridge 82
 Cook, James 2205, 2456, 3425
 Cook, William 7–8
 Cooke, John William 2639
 Coolie Riots 554
coolies 1511, 3232, 3468
 Cooper, David 2335
 Cooper, William (Australian) 307
 Cooper, William (Prince Edward Island) 2752–3
Cooperative Commonwealth 861
 Cooperative Commonwealth Federation (CCF) 592, 2783, 2975 cooperatives 990
 Argentina 2349
 Soviet Union 3122
 USA 2725–6, 3041, 3215
 and utopianism 3416
 Venezuela 3453
 Coordinadora de Defensa del Agua y de la Vida 790, 791–2
 Coordinadora Nacional de Frentes Regionales 2655
 Coordinadora Nacional de Pueblos Indígenas y Campesinos (CONIC) 1478
 Coordinating Committee of Oaxacan Women (COMO) 2536
 Coordinating Committee of Revolutionary Syndicalist Youth Groups of the Suburbs 3218
 Coordinator of Indigenous Organizations of the Coast of Ecuador (COICE) 1064 Coordinator of Women's Non-Governmental Organizations (CONG) 3631
 Coorey, Tony 309–10
Cop Watch Los Angeles 862–3
 Copacabana Fort revolt 2748
 COPEL 665
 Copenhagen 1741, 2733, 2982
 Coppe, Abiezer 1104, 1105, 2805
 copper industry
 Chile 50, 689
 Mexico 137
 Namibia 3204
 prices 689, 1941
 Zambia 1941, 3695, 3697–8, 3700–1, 3704, 3705
 Copperbelt region 3695, 3697, 3698, 3699
 Coppi, Hans 1377
 Coppi, Hilde 1371
 copra industry 2304
 Coptic Church 1132

- Corach, Carlos 1580
 Corbo, Jean 2785
 Corda Frates 274
 Corday, Charlotte 894, 1296, 2212
 Cordeliers Club 962, 1288–9, 1292, 1294, 2211
 Cordero, Luis 1063
 Córdoba, José María 578
 Córdoba, Piedad 796
 Córdoba University 3179
Cordobazo Uprising 248–9, 250–1, 272, 863–9, 3598
cordones industriales 112, 681–2, 3598
CORE: see Congress of Racial Equality core–periphery theory 1218
 Corfield, Justin 199, 569–75, 575–8, 602–3, 659–60, 738, 1196–200, 1261–2, 1271–3, 1492–5, 1662–3, 1958–61, 2054–5, 2065–6, 2153–4, 2303–5, 2309–11, 2313–14, 2332–9, 2448–9, 2456–60, 2464–5, 2527–8, 2663–4, 2797–8, 2971–2, 2977–8, 3034–6, 3080–2, 3083–4, 3278–9, 3425–7, 3492–3
 Corfu Channel incident 31
 Corn and Provision Laws 176, 655
 Corn Laws, repealed 177, 3498
 Cornbush Field 1098
Cornelissen, Christianus Gerardus 870–1
 Cornish Rebellion 509
 Cornwallis, Charles
 Ireland 2547
 and Lafayette 81, 85, 370, 508, 1788, 1789, 1795, 2041 surrender 2851
 Coromante slaves 1871
 Corona, Bert 1641
 Corpo Volontari della Libertà (Freedom Volunteer Corps) 2835 corporate corruption 2263 corporate globalization 1429–32
 Corporation Act 655, 2826
 Corpuz, Victor 2680
 Corral, Victor 480
 Correa, Omayra 2594
Correa Delgado, Rafael Vicente 871–2, 1058–60
 Corretjer, Juan Antonio 2770, 2771
 Corridoni, Filippo 1822
Corsica 872–4
 Algerian War for Independence 873
 Britain 872–3
 Corsican Revolution 872–3
 French Revolution 872–3
 Genoa 872
 independence movement 872–4
 Maquis 873, 1240
 vendetta 872
 Corso, Sampiero 872
 Corsu language 873–4
 Corte Anarchosindicalista group 618
 Cortés, Carmelo 2283
 Cortés, Hernán 910, 911, 2080
 Cortés Castro, León 879
 Cortes system 844
 Cortez Vargas, Carlos 344
 Cortiella, Felipe 116
 Cortiñas, Nora de 255
COSATU: see Congress of South African Trade Unions
 Coser, Lewis 769
 Cosgrave, William 971, 972, 1050
 Cosme Colonists 2450, 2453–4
 Cossacks 536, 2806, 2914, 2920
 Cossutta, Armando 2622, 2623
Costa, Afonso Augusto da 877–8
 Costa, Andrea 129, 2009
 Costa Gomes, Francisco da 2729, 2731
Costa Rica 878–80
 civil war and uprising 878–80
 music 640
 Nicaraguan migrants 447
Côte d'Ivoire 880–5
 France 883
 IMF 880
 post-independence protest 880–3 pre-independence protest 883–5
 SAPs 880
 women in politics 884
 Côte d'Ivoire Democratic Party (PDCI) 880
 Cotton, John 1632, 3613
 cotton gin 213 cotton industry 1196, 3253–4 bulking 2723
 Egypt 2365
 Haiti 1535
 Paraguay 2607
 Peru 2647
 Tajikistan 3244
 Tanzania 3253–4
 USA 213, 2725
 Vanuatu 3425
 WTO 3645
 Coty, René 1235
 council communism 162, 325, 3637
 Council for Aboriginal Reconciliation (CAR) 312
 Council of Federated Organizations (COFO) 747, 1258
 Council of National Trade Unions (CNTU) 2786
 Council of Non-European Trade Unions (CNETU) 834, 2222, 2346, 3093
 Council of People's Commissars 2918–19
 Council for Reconciliation Bill 4

- Council of Unions of South Africa (CUSA) 3096 counterrecruitment 885
counterrevolution 885–97
 aristocratic 891
 Baathists 2955
 Bourbons 896–7
 Charles X 1228
 France 891–7
 Hitler 1365
 Kosovo 3010
 moderates 891–3
 Peng Dehuai 2631
 Poland 2702–3
 sexuality 889
 Soviet Union 3608–9
 Spain 3142–4
 Trotsky 3116
 Countryside Can Stand No More 2294
 Counts' Feud 2523
 Courage to Refuse 1816
Courbet, Gustave 897–8, 2766
 Courcy, General de 3477
 Cousins, Margaret 2388
 Coussarys 1269
 Couthon, Georges 894
 Covas, Mário 499
 Covenanters 1806, 3000, 3002
 Coverdale, Miles 1094
 Cowan, Edith 3562
 Cowherd, John 3428
 Cox, John M. 1373–81, 2271–2, 3055–6
 Cox, Oliver 772
Coxey's Army 898–9, 2344
 Cozma, Miron 2855
CPSA: see Communist Party of South Africa
CPUSA: see Communist Party of the United States of America CQL: see Quintin Lame craft unions 784, 3411
 Craig, James 1045
 Craigie, Billy 308, 309
 Crane, Richard Francis 405
 Cranmer, Thomas 515, 516, 517, 1093, 1094, 1095
 Crassus, Marcus Licinius 3145
 Crawford, Archie 148, 149, 331, 1556, 3091
 Craxi, Bettino 380, 1829
Crazy Horse 899–902
 Creagh, Ronald 155–8
 Creeks 59, 212
 Crémieux Decree 1644
 Creoles 424, 917, 1543, 1544
 Cresson, Edith 3576–7
 Crete, Battle of 1436
 CRIC (Regional Indigenous Council of Cauca) 803, 2791
 Crick, Daisy 3559
 Crimean War 1452, 1688, 2921, 2927, 3507
 Crimes Act 2617
 CrimethInc. Ex-Workers' Collective 160
 Criminal Code of Canada 591
 Criminal Justice Act 2807
 Criminal Justice Commission 2632
 Criminal Law Amendment Act 519, 2819
 Criminal Procedures Act 3589
criollo (American-born Spaniards) 1061, 1578
 Cripple Creek Mine Owners' Association 1570
 Cripps, Stafford 1929, 2792, 3229
 Cripps Mission 1329–30
Crisis 508, 1023, 1024, 1025, 1554, 1555, 2569
 Crisp, Charles 899
 Crispus Attacks 296
Cristero uprising 902–3, 1116, 2281, 2542
 Cristiani, Alfredo F. 1166, 2958
Critica Sociale 2009, 3341
Critical Mass 903–4 critical theory 904–8
 Croatia 3683, 3689, 3693
 Croce, Benedetto 1423, 2960
Croes Penmaen 3499
 Crofters' Act (1886) 2819
 Crofters' Holding Act 2820
 Crofters' War 2819
 Croix-des-Bouquets, Concordat of 1528
 Croix de Feu 824
Cromwell, Oliver 908–10, 1098 and Lilburne 2118 as Lord Protector 1100, 1103 military dictatorship 1102 on monarchy 1101
 New Model Army 2989
 and Trapnel 1194
 Winstanley 3537
see also Rump Parliament
 Cromwell, Thomas 516, 1093, 1804
Cronaca Sovversiva 1321, 2947
 Cronkite, Walter 1461, 2465
 Crook, George 900–1
 Crooked Circle Club 2013, 2301, 2695
 crop lien system 2723
 Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young 222
 Cross, James 592
 Cross, James Richard 2787
 cross-dressing 1871–2, 2949
 Croton water project 1118 crowd psychology 1587
 Crowder, G. 1409
 Crowley, Mark J. 519–26, 3497–501
 Crudos, Los 2064 cruise missiles 1830, 1945, 2501
 protests against 1830

- Crusader, The* 21, 3534
 Cruse, Harold 772
 Crusenstolpe, M. J. 2518
 Cruz, Aracelis 3400
 Cruz, Arturo 2475
 Cruz, Benjo 418
 Cruz, Francisco 146
 Cruz, Juan de la 621
 Cruz, Rigoberto 2468
 Cruz, Viriato da 2359
 Cruz Sánchez, Gabriel Alberto 1121, 2286
 Cruzada de Mujeres Españolas 3610
 Cuales, Sonia 3579
Cuauhtémoc 910–11
Cuba 911–40
 American Civil War 917–18
 Amnesty Law 928
 anti-racist movement 911–14
 Batista regime 914–17
 bishops 931–2
 Christians for Socialism 2060
 Constitution 912, 2150
 Creole elite 917
 elections 936–7
 Family Code 3572
 general strikes 914–17, 932, 2151
 Granma Years 1486 and Grenada 2462 guerilla war 1486 healthcare 2997
 homosexuality 923, 924, 925
 independence from Spain 917–21 literacy campaign 934, 2997 massacre 913–14
 musicology 2565
 National Assembly 936–8, 939–40
 nationalization 934
 NGOs 936, 3572
 Nueva Canción 2379–80
 Nueva Trova 2377, 2379, 2853
 oil industry 626
 Partido Independiente de Color 911–14, 2150 post-revolutionary protests 922–6 protest songs 2379–80 revolutionary government 935–40
 sexuality 3016, 3017
 slavery 90, 917–18
 social revolution 1663
 and Soviet Union 934
 student movement 3180
 sugar industry 627, 628, 916, 917, 926, 928, 2151
 Ten Years' War 911, 917–21, 2226, 2565 tourist industry 925
 trade unions 921
 transition to socialism and government 921–2
 US occupation 920
 women's movement 3571–4
 women's rights 912, 3597–8
 see also Castro, Fidel; Cuban Revolution;
 Guevara, Ernesto "Che"
 Cuba Libre movement 2226
 Cubah, slave 1872
 Cuban American Sugar Foundation 2150
 Cuban Labor Federation (CTC) 934
 Cuban Missile Crisis 190, 197, 627, 922–3, 1490
Cuban Revolution 926–35
 and Argentina 272 and Brazil 472 government 935–40
 Guevara 1488–91
 Marxism 2996
 as model 1056, 1205, 2770, 3442
 and Nicaragua 2466, 2564 post-revolutionary protest 922–6
 science 2996–8
 Soviet Union support 1216, 1490, 2996
 students 3180
 and US 1217
 and Venezuela 3437
 see also Castro, Fidel
 Cuban–Soviet Sugar Agreement 1490
 Cuban Women's Organizations 3571–2
 Cubas Grau, Raúl 2603
 Cubism 116, 1555
 Cucutá, Congress of 3456
Cuffe, Paul 207, 214, 392, 394, 941–2
 Cugoano, Quobna Ottobah 202, 206–7
 Cuito Cuanavale battle 166
 Cullen, Countee 1024, 1554, 1555
 Culloden, Battle of 1854 cultural materialism 3533 cultural studies 3533 culture/anarchism 115–17
 Cultuur-en-Ontspannings Centrum (COC) 2093
 Cunningham, Phil 3491
 Cuong De 2663, 3465
Curaçao 942–3
 Chinese laborers 1032–3
 oil industry 1032
 uprising (1969) 942–3, 1031
 Curaçao Federation of Workers (CFW) 942
 Curcio, Renato 2815, 2816, 2817
 Curragh Mutiny 1046
 Curran, Philpot 1089
 Currency Act 77
 Current of Socialist Renewal (CRS) 1083
 Currlin, Albert 2027
 Curtin, John 315
 Curtin, Nancy 1787
 Curtis, Richard 1314

- Curtis-Bennett, Frederick Henry 2978
 Curzon, Lord 1674, 1698, 3358
 Cusa, Alexandru 2856
 Cusi, Titu 3336
 Custer, George Armstrong 899, 901
 Customs Commissioners, Board of 77
 CUT: see Central Única dos Trabalhadores Cut Nyak Dien 1720
 Cuyamel Fruit Company 2018
 Cuzco, siege of 3338
 Cyganowski, Carol Klimick 2624–5
 Cynics 94
 Cynn, Christine 3198–9
Cyprus 943–8
 as Crown Colony 944
 Enosis 1455
 Greeks/Turkis 943, 944, 945
 millet system 943
 protest and revolt 943–8, 1446
 Turkish invasion 1435, 1447
 Cyril, Saint 3050
 Czaplinski, Daniel 1957
 Czartoryski, Adam 2700, 2716, 2717
 Czech and Slovak Federative Republic (CSFR)
 3435
 Czech Children 3176
 Czech Republic 1392, 1563, 3632
 Czech Socialist Republic 3435
 Czech Technical University 3172
 Czecho-Slav Society 3051
 Czecho-Slovakia, creation of 3433, 3435
 Czechoslovak Socialist Republic (CSSR) 2509, 3432, 3435
 Czechoslovak Youth Union (CYU) 3172
Czechoslovakia 948–52
 break-up of 3435
 Brezhnev 950
 Civil Forum 2509 civil resistance 2745
 currency reform 949
 de-Stalinization 949, 2742
 Dubček 628, 654, 950–1, 2742–5
 Hapsburg empire 318
 PCI support 1820 resistance to Soviet political and economic rule 948–52
 Soviet invasion 2743, 3117
 student movements 1820, 2743
 wage cuts 949 worker–student solidarity 2743 see also Charter 77; Prague Spring; Velvet
 Revolution
 Czechoslovakian republic 319
 Cziernokóv, Adam 3512
 Czolgosz, Leon 1412
 D-Day Normandy invasion 1241
 da Cunha, Euclides 597, 601
 Da Gama, António Pinto Chichorro 493
 Da Nang 3482, 3485
 da Silva, Antonio 878
 da Silva Xavier, Joaquim José 485
 Dachseltner, Niklaus 3213
 Dacke, Nils 1496
 Dacke's Rebellion 1496, 2514
 Daco-Roman historical theory 2863
Dada 116, 953–4, 2777
 Dadaoglou, Emanouil 126
 Dadoo, Yusuf 3104
 Daendels, H. W. 1718
 Daer, Lord 2126
 Daewoo Apparel Company union 1983
 Daewoo Motors 1983, 1989
 Daftardar people 3197
 Dagohoy, Francisco 2666
 D'Agostino, Anthony 2167–8
 Dahal, Pushpa Kamal 2437
 Dahlmann, Friedrich Christoph 2983, 2985
Dahomey Women's Army 954
 Dai Viet 3480
 Dáil Eireann 793, 971, 1048, 1801, 3044
Daily Herald 521
Daily Nation 1950
Daily People 1736
Daily Worker 840, 841, 1603, 2804
Dakshin Desh group 2423
 Daladier, Edouard 1592
 Dalai Lama 3290, 3291, 3292
 Dalakoglou, Dimitrios K. 29–33, 34–8, 126–7, 972–4
 Dale, David 2567
 Dalecarlian Dance 2516
 d'Alesio, Giuseppe 1847
 Daley, Richard J. 751, 1976, 2824
 Dalhousie, Lord 1687
 Dalit Panthers 958–9
 Dalit Solidarity Networks (DSN) 959
Dalits 954–61
 Ambedkar 53
 child labor 960
 CPI 1707
 equality 1585
 feminism 960
 Gandhi 1327
 Gujarat 1693
 Hindu nationalism 1684 liberation struggles 954–61
 Nepal 231–2
 Quit India 2794
 separate electorate demand 1683
 Daljankare, Gustav rebellions 1496

- Dalrymple, John 1385, 1386
 Dalton, Roque 1164, 2223
 Daly, Mary 3629
 Daly, V. T. 983
 Damas, Léon 2427, 3578
 Damska Grupa Operacyjna (DGO) 3557–8
 Dan, Alexander 327
 Dan Kao village 3276
 dancehall music 611
 Dang Cong San Viet Nam (Communist Party of Vietnam) 3262, 3467
Dange, S. A. 961–2, 1700
 Gandhi Versus Lenin 961
 Dangwai candidates 2270
 Daniel, Evan Matthew 119–22
Dannevirke 2984
 D'Annunzio, Gabriele 2169
 Danquah, J. B. 2488
 Dansard, Claude 1294
 Dantas, A. J. 3038
Danton, Georges Jacques 962–3, 1277, 1281, 1283
 Cordeliers 1288
 Indulgents 1291–2
 Robespierre 2849
 on sans-culottes 2969
 D'Antona, Massimo 2818
 Dantonists 1288
 Danubian Confederacy 2865
 Dao Zuy Anh 3479
 Dap Chhuon 575–6, 578
Daquilema, Fernando 963, 1063
 Darboy, Monsignor 2611
 Darío, Rubén 2312
 Darnand, Joseph 1240
 Darrien Insurrection 16
 Darrow, Clarence 1571, 3041
 Dartiguenave, Sudre 1516
Dartmouth 453
 Dar'ul-Islam 532
 D'Arusmont, Guillaume 3667
 Darwin, Charles 2007, 2238
 Das, C. R. 448, 449, 1326, 1702, 2430
 Das, Hemchandra 1675
 Das, Jatin 1677
 Das, Tarak Nath 1675
 DAS Rural 1121
 Dasgupta, Nupur 301–3, 551–8, 2978–81
 Dastidar, Tarakeswar 1678
 Dato, Eduardo 2486
 Datta, Mahesh Lal 2971
 D'Aubuisson, Roberto 2868
 Daud, Karim Ahmad al- 2954
 Daudeij, J. M. F. 2589–92
 Daughters of Anahuac 3597
 Daughters of Bilitis 2093, 2106, 2107
 Daumier, Honoré 1283
 Dauve, Gilles (Barrot) 325
 David, Commandante 3713
 David, Jacques Louis 2212
 David, Prudhomme 3315
 David, Randolph 2682
 Davide Lazzaretti movement 1846
 Davidson, C. 2621
 Davidson, Lawrence 237–40, 358–60, 372–5, 389–90, 1547–51, 1557–60, 1575–7, 1758–61, 1816–17, 1851–2, 1961–5, 2976–7
 Davies, Emily 3567
 Davies, Miles 2380
 Davila, Carlos 693, 1468
 Dávila, Gil González 1005
 Davila, Pedrarias 3404
Davis, Angela 963–5
 Davis, Belinda 3521–4
 Davis, Benjamin, Jr. 841
 Davis, J. C. 2804
 Davis, Jefferson 57
 Davis, Laurence 1–2
 Davis, Michael T. 501–2, 2126–7, 2366–7, 3390–2, 3394–5
 Davis, Paulina Wright 3621
 Davis, R. G. 1482
 Davis, Thomas Osborne 3680
Davitt, Michael 967–8, 1045, 2617, 2820
 Davos: see World Economic Forum, Davos
 Dawes, William 78
 Dawisha, K. 2746
Dawn 1857, 1921, 3561
 Dawson, Jane 3001
 Daxi Dynasty 714
Day, Dorothy 634, 635, 661, 968–9, 2489, 3420
 Day, Luke 3023
 Day, Richard 111
 Day, Stockwell 3659
 Day of Loyalty 276
 Day of Mourning 307
 Dayan, Moshe 1812
 Dayr al-Qamar village 2073
 Days of May 2826
 Daza, Victor Hugo 791
 DDT 616
 De Ambris, Alceste 1822
 De Falla, Manuel 2381
 de Gaulle, Charles African colonies 884
 Algeria 43, 2381
 Cambodian visit 570
 coming to power 1235
 in exile 1239
 Free France 1239, 1713, 2336

- French Polynesia 1272
 Madagascar 1249
 Marianne 2216
 May 1968 events 2260, 2261, 3178
 PCF 825
 protest song about 2381
 Resistance movement 1240 on Sartre 2261
 De Gennaro, Gianni 1311
 De Jesus Bonifacio, Gregoria (Lakambini) 444
 De Klerk, F. W. 3107
 De La Beckwith, Byron 744, 1155
 De la Cuadra, Alicia Zubasnarbar de 255, 256 de la Huerta, Adolfo 2278, 2280, 2541, 3490
 de la Madrid, Miguel 2287, 2293
 de la Rúa, Fernando 262, 263, 264, 268, 1580
 De la Sagra, Ramón 144 de la Torre, Ed 2680, 2682, 2684 de la Torre, García 163
 de la Torre, Miguel 578
 De Lanessan, General Governor 3477
 De Launy, Bernard René 354
 De Leon, Daniel 149, 151, 2028, 2820, 3013
 De Santiago Ramos, Simone Cezanne 1352–5
De Silva, Colvin Reginald 969–70, 2050, 2052, 2053
 De Soto, Hernando 2652, 2653 de Sousa, Luís Pereira 469
 de Souza, Doric 2051, 2052 de Souza, José Francisco 2118 de Souza Castro, Aires 2588 de Valera, Eamon 970–2 and Albizu Campos 38
 Collins 38, 793
 Easter 1916 Rising 970, 971
 electoral success 1047, 3044
 resigning 1049
 de Waard, Marco 1408–10
 De Waele, Michel 1069, 2950
 Deacons for Defense and Justice in the South (DDJ) 18, 862 Dead Kennedys 2778
 Deans, Eric 611
 Death March, Philippines 2674
 d'Eaubonne, Françoise 125
 Dębe Wielkie, Battle of 2716
Debord, Guy 972–4
 anarchism 3045
 Situationists 2808, 3044
 Socialisme ou Barbarie 3062
 Society of the Spectacle 972–4, 1237, 3044–5, 3423
 Debray, Régis 417, 628, 2754
Debs, Eugene 974–5
 AFL 2031–2
 American Railway Union 595, 974–5, 1458, 1571, 1735, 2030–1
 IWW 974, 2032, 3413
 Pullman Strike 2031
 Socialist Party of America 2489, 3041, 3064–5, 3416
 Debswana Diamond Company 2221 debt cancellation 3644
 debt peonage 233, 2647, 2723
 DeCaux, Len 2036
Decembrists 975–9
 Deçiq battle 35
 Decker, Alicia C. 3545–50
 Declaración of Iximché 1481
 Declaration of Independence, American
 abolitionism 1113
 African Americans 156, 213 democratic values 2022–3 and Enlightenment 1114
 equal rights 2023, 3620–1
 as model 1145
 sailors 296
 Declaration of the Rights of Man and the Citizen 1113, 1127, 1275, 1281, 1525, 1912
 Jewish people 1919
 Lafayette 2041
 Mirabeau 2312
 Robespierre 2848
 Sieyès 3033
 Declaration of Sentiments 3005, 3621, 3640
 see also Seneca Falls convention
 Declaratory Act 77, 1785, 1786, 2402
 Declercq, Pierre 2458 deconstructive theory 908
 Dedering, Tilman 2389–401, 2529–31, 3202–5, 3300, 3539–40 Deem, Lynette M. 3212–13, 3679 deep ecology 1039, 1053
Defender 2824
 Defenders, Catholic 1787, 1791, 1792
 Defense of National Sovereignty of Nicaragua (EDSN) 2966
 Defense of Public Order and Liberty of Persons 2604
 Defense Sites, Treaty of, Panama 2593, 2594
Défenseur de la Constitution, Le 2848
 Defiance Campaign 2346, 3087
 Défilée 3584
 Defoe, Daniel 765 deforestation 2603
 Degalvès, Manuel 1124
 Déjacque, Joseph 97, 122, 123
 Humanisphère, L' 156
 Dekoninck, Mireille Barbara 3576
 del Mar, Maria 3631

- Delacroix, Eugene 1231–2, 2216
 Delane, John 2720
 Delany, Martin R. 208, 209, 217, 391, 392, 394
North Star 1021
delegados 2059
 DeLeon, Abraham P. 117–18
 DeLeon, Daniel 1735–6
 DeLeonites 830
 Delesalle, Paul 120, 2628
 Deletant, Dennis John 2865–7
Deleuze, Gilles 979–83
Anti-Oedipus 980
 autonomism 324
Capitalism and Schizophrenia 980
Difference and Repetition 980 global justice movement 979–83
Kafka: Towards a Minor Literature 980
Logic of Sense 980 and Negri 2427
 nomadism 980, 2750
 and Prima Linea 2750
Thousand Plateaus, A 980, 981
What is Philosophy? 980
 Delgrès, Louis 1266
 Delhi 1331, 1690, 1699
 Delhi Bomb Case 1677
 Delibash Insurrection 3357
 Dell, Floyd 2253
 Dell, S. 179
 Delli Veneri, Domenico 2402
 Dellinger, Betty 3419
 Dellinger, David 73, 3419
 Delrio, Walter 257–9
 Demarchi, Juan 50
 DeMarco, Patricia 615–18
 Dembowski, Edward 2701
Demerara, slave rebellion 204, 983–4
 Demetriou, Andreas 946
 Demirel, Süleyman 3344, 3351
 democracy 777
see also participatory democracy
 Democracy Now 1345
Democracy Wall 984–6, 2203, 3285, 3518
 Democrat Party, Turkey 3363, 3364, 3365
 Democratic Alliance, Bulgaria 541
 Democratic Alliance, Chile 687
 Democratic Alliance, Philippines 1613
 Democratic Army of Greece (DSE) 1438, 1445
 Democratic Club of Patras 126
 Democratic Conference, October Revolution 2915
 Democratic Convergence (CD) 1166
 Democratic Defense 1432, 1433, 1446, 1448
 Democratic Federation of Unions of Public Servants (FEDESSP) 2294 Democratic Female Party 3598
 Democratic Front 1165
 Democratic Front, Peru (FREDEMO) 2652, 2654
 Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine 1812 Democratic Kampuchea: see Kampuchea
 Democratic-KMP 2686
 Democratic Labor Party (DLP), Korea 1981, 1990–2
 Democratic League of Kosovo (LDK) 2002
 Democratic League of the People, Greece 126
 Democratic National Convention 747, 758, 1975
 Democratic Nationalist Union (UDN) 1164
 Democratic Opposition of Serbia (DOS) 812, 2509, 3011, 3012
 Democratic Party of Albania (PD) 32
 Democratic Party of Chile 692
 Democratic Party of Costa Rica 879
 Democratic Party of Kosovo (PDK) 2003
 Democratic Party of the Left (PDS) 1820
 Democratic Party of Turkey 3350
 Democratic People's Republic, Huambo 166
 Democratic Popular Left (IDP) 2286
 Democratic Progressive Party (DPP), Taiwan 3237 Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV): see Vietnam, Democratic Republic of Democratic Republican Party 1301
 Democratic Revolutionary Front (FDR), El Salvador 1163, 1165, 1167, 2957
 Democratic Revolutionary Government (GDR) 1165
 Democratic Revolutionary Tendency-Army of the People (TDR-EP) 2286
 Democratic Rural Union 2273
 Democratic and Social Power Party (PODEMOS) 435
 Democratic Socialist Party (DSP) 1909
 Democratic Socialist Party, Argentina 271
Democratic Spring, Guatemala 240, 1472–4
 Democratic Tendency (TD) 2291, 2299
 Democratic Union of Hungarians in Romania (DAHR) 322
 Democratic Union of Liberation (UDEL) 2468
 Democratic Union Party, Sudan 3191 Democratic Unionism, Korea 1985–6
 Democratic Unionist Party (DUP) 1797–8, 2572
 Democratic Women's League of Germany (DFD) 3580
 Democratici di Sinistra 1307
Démocratie de l'Ouest, La 2628
 Democrats, American Civil War 55
 Democrazia del Lavoro 2835
Democrazia Proletaria (DP) 2621–3

- demokratizatsiya* (democratization) 3121–2
- Demszy, Gabor 1618
- Deng Pei 3723
- Deng Xiaoping 709, 711, 720, 726, 830, 986–7
 death of Mao 2205
 Four Modernizations 985, 986–7, 3518
People's Daily editorial 3287
 recentralization 2204
 science 2996
 social reform 3284–6
- Deng Yingchao 3726
- Denikin, Anton 3507
- Denis, Lorimer 1517
- Denmark 987–92
 absolute monarchy 2519, 2983 agricultural reform 989, 2983 as Composite State 988, 2983 cooperative associations 990 democratization 2520 farmers' protests 2520
 German invasion 2495
 Great Depression 2520
 insurrection and revolt 987–92
 Napoleonic Wars 2983
 Reformation 988
 strikes 2495
see also Nordic countries; Schleswig-Holstein uprisings
- Departamento Intersindical de Estatística e
 Estudos Socioeconômicos (DIEESE) 496
- Departamento de Investigaciones de la Policía de la Capital (DIPC) 2597
- Department of Aboriginal Affairs (DAA) 311
- Department of Indian Affairs 583
- departmentalization, Guadeloupe 1469
- dependency theory 1668–70, 1671
- Depestre, René 1517
- Depressed Classes 53
- Deputies Run, Battle of 3414
- Derbez, Luis Ernesto 3647
- Derby, Lord 2828
- Derby-Lewis, Clive 1552
- DerGhougassian, Khatchik 267–70, 280–5
- Derogy, Jacques 283
- Derrida, Jacques 772, 3576
- Derry City 1797
- Dervishes 2164
- Desai, Bhulabhai 2792
- Descamisado, El* 270
- Descartes, René 1601, 2988–99, 3151
Discourse on Method 2989
- Deschamps, Frederic 1244
- Deshapremi Janatha Vyaparaya 2633
- Deslondes, Charles 89
- Desmond, Earl of 1804, 1805
- Desmoulins, Camille 962, 1277, 1288, 2969
- Desobediencia Civil 2063
- Despard, Charlotte 1416
- Despard, Edward Marcus 819, 992–4, 3391
- Despard Conspiracy 992–4
- Despertador Mexicano, El* 3715
- Despertar, El* 2609
- Dessalines, Jean-Jacques 994–6 elected leader 1547
 as Emperor Jacques I 1511, 1538 independence for Saint-Domingue 994–6, 1522, 1537–8
 remains of 3584
 and Toussaint Louverture 1265, 1266, 1534
- Destour Party 1248, 3335
- Destructive, The* 2543
- Determination of Right and Unity for Menominee Shareholders (DRUMS)
 2413–14
- Detroit
 race riots 3165, 3397, 3401
 racial tensions 758 racially stratified employment 2067
- Deuba, Sher Bahadur 2438
- Deutsche Arbeitsfront (German Labor Front) 1371
- Deutscher, Isaac 996–7, 2250
- Deutscher Bund* 1347–8
- Deutscher Herbst (German Autumn) 1368
- Dev, Narendra 2432
- development, uneven/combined 773–4, 1666–8
- Devi, Bimalprotiva 1705
- Devine, Michael 2967
- Devoy, John 2627
- Dewey, John 713
- Dewey Commission 3325
- Deyanova, Liliana 1002–4
- Dhaka University Central Students' Union 2578, 3180
- Dhar, D. P. 1932–3
- Dhar, Sushovan 230–2, 2437–8, 2438–41, 2441–4
- d'Héricourt, Jenny 122
- Dhingra, Madanlal 1675
- Dhlakama, Afonso 738, 1262
- Dhonde, Kamal 1706
- Di Gennaro, Giuseppe 2402
- Di Stefano, Alfredo 3443
- Di Vittorio, Giuseppe 997–8, 1823
- Diabate, Naminata 880–3
- Diablo Canyon 1
- Dial* 1305
- dialectical materialism 1080, 2240, 2838, 2992
- dialectics 1423, 2240, 2836, 2837, 2839
- diamond industry 147, 2394, 2492, 3091

- Diario, El* 2660
Diario de Costa Rica 879
Diary of Gloumov (Eisenstein) 1080
Dias Lopes, Isidoro 469
Díaz, Adolfo 2541
Díaz, Epifanio 930
Díaz, Felix 2277
Díaz, Italo Ricardo 2286
Díaz, Porfirio
 anarchosocialists against 3597
 Madero 2275
 and Magón 137, 2162
 Mexican Revolution 2276, 2375, 3431 opposition to 13, 998, 2158
 ousted 2539
 privatization 3709–10
 revolts 1925
Díaz Ordaz, Gustavo 3296
Díaz-Plaja, Guillermo 2313
Díaz Soto y Gama, Antonio 277, 278, 998–9, 2541
Dickens, A. G. 1092, 1094
Dickerson, Isaiah 1608
Dickinson, H. T. 507–9, 786
Dickman, Enrique 271
dictatorship of the proletariat 999–1001
 Bolsheviks 1171
 Lenin 2087
 Mandel 2188
 Marx and Engels 2247, 3057
dictatorships 2266, 3021
Diderot, Denis 1001–2
 Encyclopédie 1001, 1109, 2316, 2873, 3495
 and Holbach 1001–2, 1602
 Lettre sur le commerce de la librairie 1002
 Lettres sur les aveugles 1001–2
 Pensées philosophiques 1001
 Religieuse, La 1002
Diebitsch, Hans Karl von 189
Diegues, Carlos 2588
Dien Bien Phu, Battle of 44, 1599, 2054, 3083, 3473, 3474, 3493
Digger 107
Diggers 93, 161, 1103–4, 3536–7
Digna, Osman 2164
dignity, politics of 3711–12
Digos incident 2684
Diliman Commune 2678
Dillard, Angela D. 2275
Dillon, John 1047
Dillon, John Blake 3680, 3681
Dillon, Peter 3425
Dillwyn, William 203
Dimitratos, Panagis 1440, 1441
Dimitrieff, Elizabeth 2612
Dimitrov, Georgi 1002–4
 Agrarian Party 537
 Anti-Fascist People's Front 178
 Balkans 338, 339
 coup attempt 543, 544
 Old Guard communists 542
 Popular Front 2248, 2431, 3678
 Reichstag Fire 2833
 and Tito 31, 339
Dimitrova, Blaga 3068
Dimokratiki Amyna: see Democratic Defense
Din Nuri, Baha' al- 2954
Dinescu, Mircea 2861
Ding Ling 1752
Dinh Cong Trang 3478
Diokno, José 2678, 2683
Diouf, Abdou 3006, 3008
Dipendra, Crown Prince of Nepal 230
Diponegoro, Prince 1719–20
Direct Action 110
direct action
 environmentalism 1051
 journalism 1461
 road protests 2807
Direct Action 140, 304, 1738
Direct Action Movement (DAM) 109, 3072
Direct Action Network (DAN) 1397, 3661, 3663–4
Direct Tax on Lands, Dwelling Houses, and Slaves 1300, 1301
Directorio Revolucionario 624, 926, 927, 930, 933
Directory 1004–5, 1792
 conspiracy against 328
 Eighteenth Brumaire 1079
 Saint-Simon 2952
 Sieyès 441–2, 3033–4
 Tone 2545
Diriangén 1005–6
Dirty War, Mexico 2022
disappeared
 Argentina 105, 251, 255, 273, 1579–81, 2159, 2500
 Italy 1833
 Mexico 2288
disease 74–5, 1196, 1655, 3382
Disinherited, Movement of the 2405
Disobbedienti 1006–10, 1307
Disolucion Social 2063
Dispatch Industry Workers' Union (DIWU) 3072
displaced communities 307, 796, 1711
Disraeli, Benjamin 519, 2828
disruption, social 2757–8
Dissent! network 1313, 1314, 1316, 2636
Dissenters 3302, 3392

- dissidents 2757
Dittmar, Louise 3579
DIVA TV project 2503
Diverse Women for Diversity 2734
Divide Bengal Plan 2574
Division Street riots, Chicago 3400 divorce
 Iran 1774
 Muslims 1585, 1693, 3367
 racial policy 1179
 Soviet Union 3609
 Winstanley 3538
Dix, Dorothea 1010–11
Dixiecrat revolt 747, 759
Djerba, Battle of 3334
Djilas, Milovan 1011–12, 3638
Djindjic, Zoran 3011, 3012, 3685–6
Dlamini, Mtfuso 3207
Dlamini, Nhlanhla 3205–8
Dlamini rulers 3205
Dmowski, Roman 2717, 2718, 2719
Dmytryk, Edward 1603 do-it-yourself media 1739
 punk 2778
 Riot Grrl 2844–5
Dobama Asiyone (We-Burmans Association)
 302, 553–4, 2527, 3278
Dobbs, Farrell 3413
Dobrev, Nikolai 539
Dobroliubov, Nikolai 977
Docena, Herbert 2324–32, 3265–71
Dochev, Ivan 537
dock workers' strikes 2229, 3061
Doctor, Manilal Maganlal 1196
Dodd, Thomas J. 196
Dodge Plan 1898
Dodge Revolutionary Union Movement (DRUM)
 2067
Dodziuk, Anna 3556
Doe, Samuel 2115
Dogra Rajputs 1928
Doha, WTO: see World Trade Organization
 (WTO) protests, Doha
Doherty, Kieran 2967
Dohm, Hedwig 3580
Doi, Takako 1910
Doitsh, Tzvika 1812
Dokie, Samuel 2116
Dokubo-Asari, Mujahid 2480, 2485
Dolan, J. 1191
Dole, Sanford 1565
Dolgoft, Sam 158–9
Dolgorukiy, Duke 536
Dollfuss, Engelbert 291, 320, 3130
Dolphin Coast concession 3101
Dome of the Rock mosque 1817
Domei Federation (Japan Federation of Labor)
 1878, 1880, 1882, 3069
Dominguez, Rufino 1642
Dominguez Navarro, Ofelia 3571
Dominica
 IMF loans 351, 609
 independence 351
Dominica National Council of Women 3560
Dominica Public Service Union 609
Dominica Women's Bureau 3560
Dominican Liberation Movement (MLD) 1014
Dominican Nationalist Union (UND) 1013
Dominican Republic 1012–20
 civil war 1217
 Cuban invasion attempt 926
 IMF 609–10, 1018
 independence 1512
 IRI 1509
 protests 1015–17
 resistance to military 1017–20 slavery ended 1015
 Triumvirate 1018
 US imperialism 1012–15
Dominican Revolutionary Party (PRD) 1018
Dominican Voice 1015
Dominique, Jean 1520
Don Juan, of Austria 3334
Dona Naca revolt 2351
Donaldson, Stephan 2107
Dong Duong Cong San Dang (ICP) 3468
Dong Khanh 3477
Dong Kinh Nghia Thuc (Hanoi School of the Just Cause) 3466
Donghak Peasant War 1998
Dongo, Margaret 3604
Donish, Ahmed 3241
Dönitz, Karl 1593
Donnelly, Fred 3675–6
Donoughmore Constitution 2050
Donovan, Jean 2060
Door, Rheta Childe 3625
Dora, Gantam 2803
Dora, Mallu 2803
Dorbe, Marie 1295
Dorchester Unionists 3301
Dorman-Smith, Reginald 302, 556, 2978
Doro union 1882
Doronjski, Stevan 3692
dos Anjos Ferreira, Manuel Francisco 491
Dos Passos, John 837, 3003 dos Prazeres, José 2351
Dos Prazeres, Zezé 2118
Dos Rios, Battle of 2227

- Dos Santos, José Eduardo 166, 2354, 2359, 2360, 2361
- Dos Santos Albasini, João 153, 2355
- Dos Santos Albasini, José 2355
- Dost Muhammad Khan, Shah 14
- Dostoevsky, Fyodor 634
- double standards, sexuality 1111
- Double V Campaign 757–8
- Douc Rasy 573
- Doud, Muhammad 13
- Douglas, Angela 2108
- Douglas, Kirk 3149
- Douglas, R. Stuart, Jr. 2489
- Douglas, Stephen A. 56, 57, 2025, 2123
- Douglas, Tommy 589, 2975
- Douglass, Aaron 1554
- Douglass, Frederick 1020–1
- abolitionism 90, 3619
 - American Anti-Slavery Society 168, 215
 - and Anthony 169
 - on Lincoln 2121–2, 2123
 - North Star* 3006
 - organized labor movement 2023
 - People's Party 3622, 3636
 - in Pittsburgh Gazette 71
 - Radical Abolition Party 216
 - and Stanton 3165
- Doukhobors 592
- Dowling, Andrew 629–32, 1127–32
- Dowling, Emma 1312–15
- Downing Street Declaration 1798
- dowry death 3589
- Doyle, W. 892
- Dozier, James Lee 2817
- draft resisters 220, 3419
- draft riots, American Civil War 69–70
- Drake, Francis 517, 602
- Drakoulis, Plato 1440
- Dramis, Attanasio 2692
- Drapeau, Jean 2787
- Draper, H. 767, 1000, 2238, 2250
- Draper, Theodore 22
- Draper, Timothy Dean 2824–5
- Dravya Shah 2441
- Dred Scott v. Sandford* 56, 70
- Drenica massacres 2002
- Drennan, William 1786
- Dreschel, Thomas 92
- Dresden, Battle of 443
- Drew, Allison 831–5, 1552, 3103–9
- Drexler, Anton 1588
- Dreyfus, Alfred 887, 1021–2, 1912–13, 3744
- Dreyfus Affair 405, 887, 1021–3, 3741, 3744
- Dri, Ruben 478
- Drinot, Paulo 2647–50
- Drogheda, Battle of 909
- Drovetti, Bernadino 1074, 1075
- Drucker, Wilhelmina 2721
- drugs, medicinal generic 2998
- DRUM (Dodge Revolutionary Union Movement) 393
- Drumgo, Fleeta 965
- Drummer of Niklashausen 410
- drumming 611–12
- Drummond, Don 611
- Drumont, Edouard 3741
- Druze community 2069, 2073, 2502, 3222, 3224
- Du Bois, W. E. B. 1023–5
- African Blood Brotherhood 22
 - and Aptheker 233
 - Black Reconstruction in America* 1024–5
 - Darkwater* 21
 - double consciousness 391
 - Dusk of Dawn* 1025
 - on Garvey 1336
 - Harlem Renaissance 1554
 - and Ignatin 3070
 - and James 1023–5, 1874
 - Jim Crow era 16, 1608
 - NAACP 395, 756, 1023, 1554
 - and Nkrumah 1025
 - Paris Peace Conference 2396
 - Philadelphia Negro, The* 1023
 - and Randolph 2803
 - Souls of Black Folk, The* 1023
 - and Washington 756
- Du Camp, Maxime 1826
- dual consciousness
- working class 3070
- Dual Monarchy, Sweden/Norway 2513
- Duarte, José Napoleón 1165, 2957, 2958
- Duarte, Juan Pablo 1015
- Duarte Frutos, Nicanor 2135
- Dubasov, Admiral 2885
- Dubček, Alexander 1025–6
- Czech–Slovak relations 3051
 - Czechoslovak Federal Assembly 3434
 - KSČ 2742, 3174
 - Prague Spring 3051, 3638
 - and Russian tanks 628, 654, 950–1, 1025–6, 2262
- Dubček shifts 2743
- Dubie, Sven 739–49, 3396
- Dublin
- Castle Party 1785
 - General Post Office 1046, 2627
 - General Strike 860, 1026–7
 - Transit Strike 1046
- Dublin Brigade 860
- Dublin Castle 1089

- Dublin Volunteers 1785–6
Dubois, Laurent 1262–8
Dubois, Pierre 143
Duc, Aimée 2104
Duc, Thic Quang 220
Duchamp, Marcel 953
Duclos, Jacques 824
Duclos, Pierre Roger 442
Ducos, Roger 3033
Dudley, John: see Northumberland, Duke of Dudman, Richard 574
Dudu Mia 371
Due Obedience law 1579, 2160
Dufferin, Frederick 3396
Duffy, Charles Gavan 3680
Duffy, E. 1094
Dufour, François 298
Duhalde, Eduardo 268
Dukakis, Michael 1853
Duke, David 2275
Dukhtaran-e-Millat (Daughters of the Nation) 1935
Dulce, Domingo 918
Dulles, Allen 240
Dulles, John Foster 196, 240, 3474
Dumbutshena, Job 3729
Dumont, René 934
Dumouriez, Charles 1290
Dunayevskaya, Raya 1027–8, 1303
 Hegelianism 2250, 2839
 Marxism and Freedom 2838
Dunbar, Andrew 149, 1028–9, 3092
Dunbar, Battle of 1099
Dunbar-Ortiz, Roxanne 1459
Dunca, Ion 2857
Dundas, Henry 3528
Dungan Revolt 716
Dunkerley, James 420
Dunlap, Andrew 2724, 2725, 2727
Dunmore, Lord 79, 202, 213
Dunne, Bill 596, 836
Dunne, Ray and Vince 3413, 3414
Dunne, Vincent Raymond 2035
Dunstan, Graeme 107
Duo Guardabarranco 638
Duong Chakr 567
Duong Van Minh 3485
Dupetit-Thouars, Abel 1272
Duplessis, Maurice 589, 2783
Dupré, Admiral 3476
Duraiappah, Alfred 2741, 3251
Durban Conference on Racism 959
Durban Indian Workers' Industrial Union 3092
Durban strike 174
Durgan, Andrew 291–3, 2257–8, 2486–7, 2737–40, 3128–45
Durham, Lord 594
Durkheim, Emile 2316
Durnovo, P. 2890
Durr, Clifford 2614, 2615
Durrani empire 1029
Durruti, Buenaventura 1029–30, 1187, 3142
Dushanbe Riots 3245
Dussel, Enrique 478, 2059
Dutch Caribbean 1030–3
 abolition of slave trade 1031
 languages 1033
 Maroon communities 1031, 1032
 migration to Netherlands 1031 postcolonial resistance 1031–2 rebellion against colonialism 1030–1
Dutch colonial system, Indonesia 1718–19, 1727
Dutch East India Company 1656, 1718
Dutch East Indies 1721
Dutch Gold Coast Colony 1720
Dutch Guianas 1031
Dutch Provos 161
Dutch Republic 2589–92
Dutch Revolt 1033–6
Dutra, Olivio 476, 496, 2219
Dutronic, Jacques 2381
Dutschke, Rudi 1036–7, 1368, 1945, 3523
 Frankfurt School 12, 1256
Dutt, Aswini Kumar 1697
Dutt, Batukeswar 3041, 3042
Dutt, Kalpana 1922
Dutt, R. C. 1695
Dutta, Bhupendranath 1674, 1698
Dutta, Dhirendranath 2577
Dutta, Kalpana 1678
Dutta, Narendranath: see Vivekananda
Dutta, Saroj 2424
Duvalier, François (Papa Doc) 278, 996, 1503, 1508–9, 1517, 1518, 1523, 3585
Duvalier, Jean-Claude (Baby Doc) 278, 1519, 3585
 overthrown 1503–4, 1508–9
Düzce-Hendek Rebellion 3357
Dwernicki, Jozef 2716
Dworkin, Andrea 3629
Dwyer, Kate 3561
Dwyer, Michael 1788
Dybic, Field Marshal 2715
Dyer, Mary 3613
Dylan, Bob 632
Dzeliwe Shongwe 3207
Dzherzhinsky, Felix 2086
Dzurinda, Mikuláš 812

- E-Verify federal database 1642
 Ealham, Chris 1188
 EAM/ELAS 1438, 1453, 1454
 Earth Day 820
Earth First!
 deep ecology 125, 159, 1039–40, 1052, 1054
 Summer Gathering 1387
 Earth Liberation Front 160, 1040, 1052, 1054, 1055
 Earthlife Africa 3100
 East African Association 3545
 East African Indian National Congress (EAINC) 3043
East Anglian Wheat County Riots 1040–2
 East India Company 452
 East Pakistan Student League 2578
 East Pakistan Student Union 2578
East Timor anti-colonial struggle 1042–5
 civil war 1043
 independence 1043
 Indonesian occupation 1043–4
 Portuguese traders 1718
 UN 1044–5
Easter Rising (1916)
 Connolly 859, 860
 de Valera 793, 970
 as example 2769
 Irish Civil War 1045–50
 nationalist spirit 1193, 1800
 Pearse 2627
 Sinn Féin 1800–1, 3043
Eastern Europe
 anti-state protest 810–18
 color revolutions 2510–11
 Jewish people 3740–1
 NGOs 811–12
 post-socialism 3633–4 religion 3740
 revolution 2508–11
 student movement 3170
 women's movement 3632–4
 women's organizations 3634
 Eastern Orthodox Russians 2865
 Eastern Question Association 2341
Eastman, Max 1050–1, 2253, 2825
 Eastman Kodak 49
 Eade, Michael 180–4
 Ebenezer community 52
 Ebert, Friedrich 1359, 1361–2, 1363, 1373, 3055
 Ebert, Teresa 124
 Ebola virus outbreak 852
 Eboue, Felix 853
 Ebrié people 883
 Ebro, Battle of 3143, 3144
 Echandi, Mario 880
 Echandiá, Dario 409
 Echeverría, José Antonio 624, 926, 930, 1017
 Echeverría, Luis 2290, 2299, 3297
 Echeverría, Rodolfo 2604
 Echigo Rising 1898, 1899
 Eckstein, G. 321
 Eclectic Institute 2543 eco-anarchism 99, 1051–2 eco-feminism 125, 1052 eco-sabotage 159 eco-terrorism 1055 eco-village protest 1313
Ecole Emancipée 3219 ecological protest movements 1052–5 Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) 882, 2115, 2116, 2182
 economic democracy 2620
 Economic Development Corps (EDCOR) 1615
 Economic Partnership Agreements (EPAs) 1431
 Economic Research and Action Project (ERAP) 3188 Economic Sabotage Law 2360
Economist, The 2012
 Economy, Pennsylvania 1185
 ECOPETROL 809
 ecotage 1054
 ECOWAS: see Economic Community of West African States
Ecuador 1056–68
 anti-clericalism 1062–3
 banana exports 1064, 1065
 Bolivarianism 1061–2
 Campesinismo 1063–4
 Catholic Church 1056, 1057, 1062
 Conquistadors 1925–6
 Correa 1058–60
 coup 1058
 dollarization 1067 economic decline 1065–8
 ethnic divisions 1059
 Glorious May Revolution 1057
 IMF 1067
 independence from Spain 1061
 Indians/mestizos 1064–5 indigenous uprising 1056–7, 1058–60, 1925–6 left and popular movements 1057–8 mass mobilization 480 oil exports 1064, 1065 and Peru 2655
 political parties 1063, 1067
 protest and revolution 1059, 1060–8
 Uprising (1871) 963
 women's rights 3598
 World Bank 1067

- Ecuador Indians Awaken (ECUARUNARI) 1064
 Ecuadorian Communist Party (PCE) 1057
 Ecuadorian Confederation of Catholic Workers (CEDOC) 1057
 Ecuadorian Confederation of Free Trade Union Organizations (CEOSL) 1058
 Ecuadorian Confederation of Workers (CTE) 1058
 Ecuadorian Federation of Evangelical Indians (FEINE) 1056–7
 Ecuadorian Federation of Indians (FEI) 1056, 1064
 Ecuadorian Marxist Leninist Communist Party (PCMLE) 1058
 Ecuadorian Revolutionary Socialist Vanguard (VSRE) 1057
 Ecuadorian Socialist Party (PSE) 1057
 Ecuaurunari (Ecuador Indians Awaken) 1056
 Eda, Saburō 1909–10
Edad de Oro (Golden Age) 2227
 Edelman, Marc 1917, 3461–3
 Edelstadt, David 115
 Edge, Thomas 1154–5, 2179–81, 3533–4
 Edgehill, Battle of 1098
 Edict of Nantes: see Nantes, Edict of Edinburgh, Treaty of 3000, 3001
 Editions Tierce 3576
 Edmund Pettus Bridge incident 748
 Edogawa Union 1876
 Edogawa Ward Labor Union Federation (EWLUF) 1876
 education
 anarchism 117–18
 equality of access 3170
 gender 3566
 Greece 3582
 Indochina 1714
 neoliberalism 3185
 Place on 2692
 Rousseau 1203
 scholarships 3517
 segregation 11, 743, 745
 Soviet Union 3609
 syndicalism 3217
 Venezuela 671
 see also Montessori, Maria Education Acts 526
 Edward IV, of England 514
 Edward V, of England 514
 Edward VI, of England 509, 516, 1094
 Edward VIII, of Britain 525
 Edwards, George 3281
 Edwards, Thomas 1107
 Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front (EPRLF) 3251, 3252
 Eelam Revolutionary Organization of Students (EROS) 3251
Efimeris ton Kyrion 3581
 Egan, Jim 2099
 Egan, Michael 820–1
 Egbe Omo Oduduwa 23
 Egbesu Boys of Africa (EBA) 2484, 2485
 Egerton, Douglas R. 1318–19, 3459–61
 Eggleston, Lennie 1551
 egoism 133
Egoist, The 116
Eguaglianza 129
Egypt 1069–79
 Arab socialism 1069–73
 British high commissioner 1557
 exports 2365
 loans to peasants 1072
 Ottoman empire 2365
 peasant rebellion 1073–6
 re-Islamization 1559–60
 Revolution 1076–9, 2406
 Shari'a law 1557
 UAR 1072
 unemployment 1560
 Urabi movement 3395–6
 see also Nasser, Gamal Abdel
 Egyptian Federation of Workers 235
 Eichmann, Adolf 242
 Eiderdanes 989, 2985
 Eidlin, F. 2746
 Eigene 2093
Eigene, Der 2103
 Eight Trigrams 716–17
Eighteenth Brumaire 1079–80
 Eighth Route Army 2202 see also Red Army, China
 Eighty Years' War 1036
 Einaudi, Luigi 2871, 2960
 Einstein, Albert 195, 2947, 2993
 Eisenhower, Dwight D. and Castro 922, 934
 civil rights 762, 763
 Dominican Republic 1014
 French Resistance 1241–2
 Japan 1887
 nuclear test ban hopes 195
 Panama 2593
 on unemployed 446
 Vietnam War 2499, 3480
 Eisenhower Doctrine 2068
Eisenstein, Sergei 28, 1080–1
 Eisenstein, Zillah 772
 Eisner, Kurt 1361, 1363, 2048
 Ejercito Bolivariano Revolucionario 200 (EBR-200) 414, 3439

- Ejército Guerrillero del Pueblo (EGP) 244
Ejército de Liberación Nacional (ELN) 420, 1081–4, 2791
 birth of 801
 Collectives of Unions' Work 1082
 Concha 2059
 and EPL 1120
 and FARC 1081, 1082, 1084, 1167, 1168, 3389
 formation of 244, 800, 1081 pipeline blown up 1083
 Torres 3303
Ejército Popular de Liberación (EPL) 801,
 1082, 1120–1, 2791
Ejército Popular Revolucionario (EPR)
 1121–3, 2285, 2289, 3428, 3719
 Ejército Revolucionario del Pueblo (ERP) 245,
 254, 2293
 Ejército del Sur (Army of the South) 2276, 2277
 Ekici, Deniz 352–3
 Ekitiparapo alliance 3677
 Ekoglasnost 3068
 El Chaparral invasion 1205
 El Orabi, Hosni 235
 El Palito, Battle of 3707
 El Salvador
 Catholic Church 1163, 1165, 2060 coffee 2956
 death squads 2868
 demilitarization 1166
 FENASTRAS 1166, 1189–90, 2959
 Fourteen Families 2956
 Fuerzas Populares de Liberación 2061 and Honduras 2956 income per capita 2956 indigo 2956
 kidnapping 2957
La Matanza 638–9, 1163, 2019–20, 2956 left-wing parties 1164
 liberation theology 481
 Marmón 2223–4
 Martí 2224–6 massacre of 1932 638–9 Mayan culture 639
 music 639
 Reagan 1163, 1165
 Romero 2060, 2867–9
 Soccer War 2956–7
 Truth Commission 2959
 UN accords 1166
see also FMLN; Martí, Farabundo; Salvadoran
 Civil War
 El Troudi, Haiman 413
 Elazar, David 1813
 Elbaum, M. 3071
 Eldorado dos Carajás massacre 3463 elephant trapping 371
 Eleven Years' Tyranny 1097
 Elias, Serrano 1478
 Elifas, Philomenon 3204
 Eliot, Charles 2253
 Elisabeth of Austria 130
 elites 781–2, 790
 Elizabeth I, of England birth 516
 enthroned 516
 Irish insurrections 1805
 Protestantism 1095–6, 3001
 and States General of the Netherlands 1035
 Elizabeth II, of Britain 1199, 2487, 3317
 Elizarova, Anna 3553
 Elizondo, Francisco 1579
 Ellacuría, Ignacio 478, 2958, 2959
 Ellington, Duke 1555
 Elliot, Gilbert 873
 Elliott, Marianne 993
Ellis, Daniel Edward “Daan” 1087–8, 1557, 2626, 3093, 3094
 Ellis, Havelock 2968
 Ellis, Sarah Stickney 3565–6
 Ellis, Sylvia 218–19
 ELN: see Ejército de Liberación Nacional
 Elphinstone, John 1097
 Elser, Georg 1370
 Elton, G. R. 1092
Emancipador, O 153
 Emancipation Movement 204–5
 Emancipation of Labor Group 3720
 Emancipation Proclamation 2491
 Emang Basadi Women's Association 3605
 Emergency Acts, Germany 1366
 Emerson, Ralph Waldo 1222, 1305, 2491
 emigration 394, 537, 1798
 Emiliano Zapata Campesino Organization
 (OCEZ) 2288
 Emiliano Zapata National Independent
 Campesino Alliance (ANCIEZ) 2288
 Emmenegger, Hans 3212
Emmet, Robert 819, 1088–9, 1789, 3490
 United Irishmen 2545
 Emmet, Thomas Addis 1088–9, 1787
Emmet's Rebellion 993, 1088–9
 Emperan, Vincente 3456 empire as concept 1672 see also imperialism
 Enabling Act, Finland 1202
 Enabling Act, Nazi Germany 1178, 1590, 2832 enclosure movement 1089–90, 1103, 1785, 3211 encomienda (forced labor) 3709
 Encouragement of Industry Law 3348

- Encruzilhada Natalito 2352
- Encyclopédie*
- d'Alembert 1109
 - Diderot 1101, 1109
 - Holbach's contributions 1602
 - Montesquieu 2316
 - Voltaire's contributions 3495
- Endara, Guillermo 2594
- Enes, António 2354
- Enfantin, Prosper 1232, 2953
- ENFO-FANM 3585
- Engel, George 1569, 1570
- Engelbrektsson, Olav 2523
- Engels, Friedrich 1091–2
- on Bakunin 336
 - Bernstein on 381
 - Condition of the Working Class in England* 1091, 2923
 - Dialectics of Nature* 2992
 - exploitation 773
 - Ludwig Feuerbach* 2837
 - and Marx 2230, 2238–9
 - on Northern Star 2549
 - Origin of the Family* 1091, 3042
 - Outlines of a Critique of Political Economy* 1091
 - on Paris Commune 1000, 2236–7, 2612–13
 - on patriarchy 124
 - Polish liberation 2701
 - Revolution and Counter-Revolution* 887
 - on sabotage 143–4
 - scientific socialism 2992
 - Socialism: Utopian and Scientific* 2244, 2952
 - see also Communist Manifesto
- engineering workers' commission 181–2
- England
- common law 201, 590
 - Glorious Revolution 75, 1224, 1404–8
 - Jacobins 1116, 3150
 - Reformation 514–16, 1092–6
 - Restoration 1100
- Engler, Mark 3657
- English Civil War 93, 289, 908, 1098–9, 1100, 1194, 2118, 2125
- Locke 2125
 - Paracelsus 2988
- English Reformation 1092–6
- English Revolution 1096–109
- Charles I 1097–8
 - Civil Wars 1098–9
 - Commonwealth 1099–100
 - radical sects 1100–6, 2988
 - women 1106–9
- English Woman's Journal* 3566
- Eniwetok nuclear testing site 199, 1461, 2303
- Eniya Rizgariya Netewa Kurdista (ERNK) 2011
- Enlightenment 1109–16
- abolitionism 203, 1112–13
 - Adorno 13
 - American Revolution 80, 1112
 - anti-clericalism 1109–11
 - on Christianity 1111
 - democracy 1113–14
 - Diderot 1001
 - effect on China 713
 - France 1109–16
 - Germany 1349
 - Judaism 1111
 - Locke's influence 2125
 - and modernity 886
 - monarchy 115
 - reason 1112
 - Renaissance legacy 886
 - sexuality 1110, 2101
 - slavery 91
 - Voltaire 1110, 1111
- Enlightenment* 985
- Enmore Riots 1856
- Enniscorthy, Battle of 1788
- Enosis* (union with Greece) 943, 945, 947, 1455
- Enquirer* 1409
- Enragés* 962, 1277, 1288, 1290–1, 1296, 1531, 2849–50
- Enrique of Hispaniola 2079
- Enriquez, Fadrique 844
- Enriquillo and Taíno revolt 1116–17
- Enron 2263
- Ensler, Eve: The Vagina Monologues 1191
- Ensslin, Gudrun 1368
- Enthusiasts 3544–5, 3632
- Enver Pasha 51, 3243, 3366–7, 3421, 3682
- Environmental Defense Fund 617
- environmental justice activism 1053
- Environmental Protection Agency 617, 2418
- environmental protest 1117–21
- Australia 305
 - Carson 616–17
 - civil disobedience 785
 - direct action 1051
 - First Nations 785
 - NGO 3113
 - as social movement 1052
- Ephevion school 3582
- Epic Theater 28, 504, 1482
- Epifanio de los Santos Avenue (EDSA) 2506, 2683
- Epinay, Congress of 825
- Episcopal Church, Scotland 1854, 1855
- Episcopal Conference of Latin America (CELAM) 479, 480, 2057, 2500
- Episkopopoulos, N. 3583

- EPL Maoist guerrilla movement 1120–1
EPR: see Ejército Popular Revolucionario
 Epstein, A. L. 3696
 Epstein, I. 3234
 Equal Opportunity Employment Commission 746
 Equal Opportunity Law, Venezuela 3631
 Equal Pay Act 3166
 equal rights employment 3566–8 same-sex relations 2100
 Wollstonecraft 3541
 Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) 2411, 2624, 2625, 3626, 3628
 Equal Rights for Everyone 1009
 Equal Rights Party 3636
 Equality colony 3418
 Equator, Confederacy of 489
Equiano, Olaudah 202, 206, 207, 296, 1123–4, 3022
 Erasmus, Desiderius 1355
 Erbakan, Necmettin 3342, 3344, 3353
 Erdman, D. V. 401
 Eretz Israel 359, 1816
 Erfurt Program 1942
 Erickson, Reed 2108
 Erignac, Claude 873
 Eritrea 3546
 Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) 1138
 Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF) 1132, 1138
 Eroshenko, Vasilij 135
Erőszaknélküliség (Non-Violence) 128
 Erskine, John, Earl of Mar 1854
 Erundina, Luiza 1260
 Ervin, Charles Wesley 969–70, 1493–5, 2049–54
 Ervin, Lorenzo Komboa 159
 Esack, Farid 1811
 Escalante, Anibal 627, 934
 Escarpit, Robert 2261
 Escheat movement 2752–3
 Escóbar, Filemón 418
 Escobar, Pablo 797
 Escoto, Miguel d' 2061, 2473
escrache 1579–80
 Escuela de Mecánica de la Armada (ESMA) 254
Escuela Moderna movement (The Modern School) 145, 1124–5, 3217
 Escuela Nacional Sindical (ENS) 809–10
 Escuela Racionalista 618
 Eshref, Sheikh 3356–7
 ESKOM 3099–100
 Espanyolists 630
 Espejel, Leticia Pacheco 618–19, 910–11, 1015–17, 1269–70, 1924–5, 2339–40, 2538–9, 3378–9
 Esperanza, Paz y Libertad party 1121
 Espin, Vilma 3572–3
 Espino Negro Pact 2965
 Espinosa, Gaspar de 3404
 Espinosa de los Monteros, María 3610
 Espionage Act 12, 975, 1051, 1412, 1571, 2489
 Espirito Santo, Diana 917–21
 Espiritu Santo 3426
Esprit 226
 Esquerra Republicana de Catalunya (ERC) 630, 2737, 3136
 Esquipulas Accords 2475
 Esquipulas II accord 1165–6
Esquire 3166
 Essien-Udom, Essien U. 396
 Estaing, Charles Hector d' 2553
Estates General 1125–7, 1525
 Lafayette 2041
 Marat 2211
 Saint-Simon 2952
 women's participation 1125–7, 1274–5, 1292–3
 Estenoz, Evaristo 912, 913, 914
 Estenssoro, Victor Paz 416
 MNR 419, 428
 National Revolution 431
 neoliberalism 422–3, 432
 ousted 1260
 shock therapy 787
 tin mining 432
 Esterhazy, C. F. 1022
 Estevam, José 153
 Estigarríbia, José Félix 2599
 Estimé, Dumarsais 1518
 Estonia 340, 341, 3507
 Estrada, Joseph 2687
 Estrada Palma, Tomás 912, 918, 919
 Estrup, J. B. S. 990
Estudios Centroamericanos 2958
ETA: see Euzkadi Ta Askatasuna (ETA)
 Eternal League 2374
 Ethem, Çerkes 3349, 3357
Ethiopia 1132–42
 Christianity 1132
 Coptic Church 1132
 Eritrea 1138–9
 Italian occupation 1133, 1180, 2383
 National Period Charter 1139–40
 Revolution 1132–42
 state–society relations 1133, 1140
 students 1134, 1135–6
 Zemene Mesafint 1132
 Ethiopian Democratic Union (EDU) 1136

- Ethiopian People's Democratic Revolutionary Front (EPDRF) 1132, 1139–41
- Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Party (EPRP) 1135
- ethnic cleansing 223, 1180, 1855, 3683
- Etudiant noir, L'* 2427
- Etxebarrieta, Txabi 1129
- eugenics 1587, 1591–2
- Eulenberg Affair 1586
- Eureka Stockade 1144–6, 1944, 2043
- Eureka Youth League 304
- Eurocentrism 2733
- Eurocommunism 379, 823, 1146–7
- Eurogold 3343
- EuroMayDay 1147–8, 1390, 1403
- Europe 1148–51
- anti-Semitism 1181
 - capitalism 1655
 - Marxism 2249
 - revolutions (1848) 1148–51
 - see also* Eastern Europe
- European Coal and Steel Community 360
- European Convention on Human Rights 2011
- European Democratic Central Committee 2267
- European Farmers' Coordination 3462
- European Nuclear Disarmament (END) 198, 3283
- European Social Forum (ESF) 227, 1009, 2306, 3641
- Florence 1009, 1311, 3642
 - London 1147
 - see also* World Social Forums
- European Socialist Party 3643
- European Trade Union Confederation 228
- European Union 1151–4
- anti-neoliberalism 1400–1
 - Common Agricultural Policy 3461
 - Gothenburg summit protests 1151–4, 1307, 1401
 - Haiti 1504
 - Malta 2187
 - promoting democracy 816
 - sanctions on Zimbabwe 3738
 - Thessaloniki Leader Summit 127
 - Turkey 3345
- Eusebius of Caesarea 2828
- Euskadi 182, 183
- Eutaw Springs 86
- euthanasia program 1179
- Euzkadi Ta Askatasuna (ETA) 1127–32
- assassinations 182, 2776
 - execution of members 183
- Evading Standards* 1388, 2809
- Evangelical Protestantism 214, 3520
- homosexuality 2094
- Evangelista, Cristo 2672
- Evangelista de Monte Marciano, João 600
- Evans, Arthur "Slim" 2563, 2832
- Evening Standard* 1388
- Everard, William 1104, 3536–7
- Evers, Medgar 73, 744, 1154–5, 1258, 1975
- Evian Agreement 1247
- Evrard, Simone 2211
- Evseksiia* 3606
- Ewald, Kerstin 447–8, 1005–6, 2223–4
- Ex-Slave Mutual Relief, Bounty, and Pension Association 1608
- Examiner* 3210
- Exceso de Equipaje 639
- existentialism 581
- Expeditionary French Task Force (CEFEO) 3472, 3473, 3474
- exploitation 1662–3
- Explorations* 985, 3518
- Export, Valie 1191
- Exposition Coloniale Internationale 851
- Expressionism 116
- Exxon Corporation 2418
- Eylau, Battle of 442
- Eyre, Edward John 1870, 2321–3
- Eyschen, Paul 2141
- Eyskens' Bill 361
- Ezeiza Protest and Massacre 1155–7
- Ezhavas 955–6
- EZLN: see Zapatista Army of National Liberation
- Faas-Hardegger, Margarethe 2049
- Fabbri, Luigi 1322, 1419, 2168, 3015
- Fabian Society 316, 381, 830, 2341, 3061, 3516
- Fabre d'Eglantine, Philippe 1297
- Fábrica Adentro* program 3454
- Facilities for Titles Law 2197
- Facio Brenes, Rodrigo 879
- factories
- councils 249, 1818
 - grassroots leadership 250
 - occupation of 1236
 - Russia 2923–4
 - see also* Movement of Recuperated Factories, Argentina
- Factory Acts 658
- factory guerillas 250
- Fadayan-e-Islam 1764, 1770
- Fadlallah, Sayyid Muhammad Husayn
- Islam and the Logic of Force* 1575–6
- Fagor Electrodómicos 2314
- Fahd, Yusuf Salman Yusuf 1159–60, 1779, 2953–4
- Fahri Pasha 287
- FAI: see Federación Anarquista Ibérica

- Faina, Gianfranco 131
 Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC)
 757, 2803
 Fair Housing Act 753
 Fairbanks, Calvin 3047
 Fairfax, Anne 1106
 Fairfax, Thomas 1101, 1104, 3537
 Fairhope enclave 3418
 Faisal, Prince 1775
Faiz Ahmed Faiz 1160–1, 1761, 2581
 Faizpur Congress 2431
Fakir-Sannyasi Revolt 368–9
 Fakudze, Mliba 3207
 Falange, Bolivia 419, 431
Falange Española 180, 1587
 Sección Femenina 3611
 Falck, Niels Nicolaus 2983, 2984
 Falcon, Lidia 3610, 3611
 Falcón, Ramón 243, 266
 Falintil 1043
 Falk, Jim 305
 Fallas del Sistema 2063
 Fallmerayer, Jacob Philipp 1451
 Fals Borda, Orlando 3303 false consciousness 771
 False Dmitry 436
 Families against State Terrorism (FAST) 1865
 Family Code, Soviet Union 3607
 Family Protection Law 1774
 Family Support Program, Nigeria 3548
 famine
 China 709, 2204
 France 1304
 India 3587
 Ireland 1798, 2545
 Russia 2922
 Spanish Civil War 180
Fanelli, Giuseppe 97, 144, 1161–2, 2692
 Fang Kuo-an 2310
 Fanm D'Ayiti (Women of Haiti) 3585
 Fanmi Lavalas Party 280
 Fanning, R. 3305
 Fanny Wright Party 2024, 3617, 3667
Fanon, Frantz 18, 613, 1162–3, 2784
 Damnés de la Terre, Les 1162, 1163, 2839, 2974
 dialectics 2839
 Peau noire, masques blancs 1162, 2839
 Farabundo Martí, Agustín 2020, 2224, 2249
Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front
 (FMLN) 1163–7
 Catholic Church 2060
 formation of 1163
 and Mármol 2224
 military units 1165
 Primera 2751
 Salvadoran Civil War 2956–9
 and Torrijos 3304
 Farber, S. 933
FARC: see Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de
 Colombia
 FARC-EP 797, 1120, 1167, 3389
 Fard, Wallace D. 394
 Farel, Guillaume 565
 Farga Pellicer, Rafael 145
 Farina, Louis 3065
 Farjallah, Muhammad Husayn 2953
 Farkas, E. 1631
Farm Labor Organizing Committee 1170
 Farmer, James 613, 653, 762, 869–70, 1975
 CORE 2498
 Freedom Rides 1257, 2498
 Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union 2721
 Farmers' Association of the Middle Atrato
 (ACIA) 795–6
 Farmers' League, Japan 1901–2
 Farmers' March 3646
 Farouk, King 1069, 1070, 1076, 1077, 2366
 Farr, Roger 3423–4
 Farrakhan, Louis 397
 Farrapos, Guerra dos 491–2
 Farthing, L. 433
Fasci Siciliani movement 2168
fascism 1170–85
 Austria 320
 collapse of 1183–4
 economics of 1174
 Germany 1171, 1176–80, 1587–8
 Italy 1171, 1172, 1176–80, 1184, 1828–9, 3341–2, 3593
 motherhood 1174
 nationalism 1173
 Portugal 2730
 protest and revolution 1170–5
 Spain 291–2
 student groups 3178 as third way 1171
 violence 1173
 and war 1180–3
 Fascist Repubblica Sociale 1823
 Fascist Trade Unions 1177
 Fasehun, Frederick 2484
 Fasi, Allal al- 1248, 1249
 Fassnacht, Robert 222
 Fast, Howard 3149 fast-food corporations 671, 1054 fasting as protest 1605
Fat Korean 136
 Fatah 238–9, 1758
 Fatemi, Hossein 1765
 Fatherland Front coalition 536, 537, 544

- fatwa* 3356
 Faubourg Saint Germain 1228
 Faubus, Orval 763
 Faulkner, Daniel 7, 8
 Faure, Félix 3745
 Faure, Sébastien 98, 120, 1124, 3217
 Fauset, Jessie 1024, 1554, 1555
 Favras, Marquis de 892
 Fawcett, Millicent 527, 3551
Fawkes, Guy 1186–7
 FBI: see Federal Bureau of Investigation
 Feake, Christopher 1103
 Febrerista Revolution 2599, 2600
 February 28 Incident (2–28): see Taiwan,
 February 28 protests (1947)
 Febvre, Lucien 405
 fedayeen 285
 Fedecamaras 670, 3450
 Federación Agraria Argentina 253
Federación Anarquista Ibérica (FAI)
 1187–9, 1433
 Catalonia 3129
 Durruti 1030
 emergence of 145
 as proto-political party 848
 Federación de Estudiantes de Chile (FECh) 112
 Federación de Estudiantes de Estudios Medios
 (FEEM) 936
 Federación de Estudiantes Universitarios (FEU)
 936
 Federación de Trabajadores de Chile (FTCh)
 111, 112
 Federación de Trabajadores de la Región
 Española (FTRE) 145
 Federación Ibérica de Juventudes Libertarias
 (FIJL) 849, 1189
 Federacion Obrera Argentina (FOA) 102, 260,
 261, 1419
 Federacion Obrera de la Región Argentina
 (FORA) 102, 161, 247–8, 254, 265, 277
 Federación Obrera Regional Paraguaya (FORP)
 2609, 2648
 Federación Obrera de Unidad Sindical (FOUS)
 2739
 Federación Sindicalista Libertaria 848
 Federación Universitaria Argentina 864
 Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI)
 Addams 12
 Black Power 19
 BPP 398
 COINTELPRO 395, 398
Daily Worker 1603
 IWW 1737
 on Steinem 3167
 Uhuru movement 3373
 Federal Coordination for Internationalism
 (BUKO) 1316
 Federal Council of Aboriginal Affairs (FCAA)
 307–8
 Federal Council for Aborigines and Torres Strait
 Islanders (FCAATSI) 3, 308, 309
 Federal Drug Administration 617
 Federal Electrical Commission (CFE) 2299
 Federal Homestead Act 63
 Federal Labor Party 316
 Federal Party, Sri Lanka 3250–1
 Federal Preventive Police (PFP) 3379
 Federal Theater Project 28
 Federation of African (Welfare) Societies 3698 Federation of Anarchist-Communist Groups in Exile 142
 Fédération Anarchiste 121
 Fédération des Bourses du Travail (FBT) 850
 Fédération Communiste Libertaire (FCL) 121, 122
 Fédération Communiste Révolutionnaire
 Anarchiste 120
 Federation of Cuban Women (FMC) 921, 936, 3572
 Federation of Free African Trade Unions of South Africa (FOFATUSA) 3094, 3095
 Federation of Free Farmers (FFF) 1617, 2676
 Federation of Free Workers (FFW) 2676
 Federation of Independent Students of Thailand (FIST) 2747, 3261
 Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FICCI) 1681, 1684
 Federation of Indigenous Organizations of Napo
 (FOIN) 1056
 Federation of Indonesian Peasants 3462
 Federation of Korean Trade Unions (FKTU)
 1981, 1982, 1986–7, 1988, 1989–90
 Federation of Mining, Metallurgical, and Steel Workers (FNTMMSP) 2652
 Fédération Nationale des Syndicats (FNS) 850
 Federation of Non-European Trade Unions
 (FNETU) 832, 2111, 3093
 Federation of Organized Trades and Labor Unions of the United States and Canada
 (FOTLU) 2028, 2029
 Federation of Peasants of Thailand 3261
 Federation of the Rhodesias and Nyasaland 3730
Federation of Salvadoran Workers
(FENASTRAS) 1166, 1189–90, 2959
 Federation of Shuar Centers 1064
 Federation of South African Labor (FEDSAL)
 3097
 Federation of South African Trade Unions
 (FOSATU) 174, 874, 2264, 2801, 3089, 3096, 3106

- Federation of South African Women (FEDSAW)
171, 3040, 3603
- Federation of Unions of South Africa (FEDUSA) 3097
- Federation of Unions of Workers at the Service of the State (FSTSE) 2294
- Federation of University Students of Paraguay (FEUP) 2601
- Federazione Anarchica Informale (FAI) 132
- Federazione Anarchici Italiani (FAI) 131
- Federazione dei Comunisti Anarchici Italiani (FCAI) 131
- Federazione Giovanile Socialista 997
- Federazione dei Lavoratori Metalmeccanici
(FLM) 1823
- Federazione Operaia Napoletana 1161
- Federazione Sindacale Mondiale 998
- Federazione unitaria 1823
- Fédérés* 2611
- Fedraheimen* (Home of the Forefathers) 2524
- Feijó, Diogo 562
- Feillet, Paul 2357
- Felco, Juan 1614, 1616, 2672
- Felker, Clay 3166
- Fell, Margaret 1106, 1107, 1190
- Fell, Thomas 1190
- Fellagha group 1248
- fellahin* (peasant-origin officers) 1076, 1077
- Fellowship of Reconciliation (FOR) 194, 869, 2498
- Felquistes* 2785, 2786
- Feltrinelli, Giangiacomo 1836, 1837, 1847
- Female Republican Party (PRF) 3598
- Female Society of Birmingham 204
- Feminine Committee of the Patriotic Junta (CFJP) 3631
- femininity 3565
- feminism
- Africa 3548–9
 - Belgium 2721–2
 - first wave 3616–23
 - France 3620
 - Goldman 1411–12
 - Hoy 1609
 - Huerta 1609
 - Iraq 1784
 - Japan 3595–6
 - lesbianism 2093–4, 3569
 - Marxism 2249
 - Montessori 2317
 - postcolonial 2733–5
 - race 3570
 - second wave 124, 355, 3569–70, 3627–30
 - third wave 3630
 - transnational 2734–5
 - World War I 3568
see also women's movement
- Feminist Alliance 3625
- feminist performance 1191–2
- Féministes révolutionnaires 3575, 3576
- femocrats 305
- FENASTRAS: see Federation of Salvadoran
Workers
- Feng Ziyou 674
- Fenian Brotherhood 793, 1192
- Fenian movement 967, 1192–3, 1799
- Fennell, Vera Leigh 2199–205
- Fenner Brockway, A. 218
- Feral Faun 979
- Ferdinand I, Emperor 186, 3178
- Ferdinand II, of Aragon 844, 2055
- Ferdinand IV, of Naples and Sicily 2185
- Ferdinand Maximilian of Austria 1925
- Ferdinand V, of Spain 1623, 2055
- Ferdinand VII, of Spain 3457
- Ferghana Valley 3422
- Ferguson, Bill 307
- Ferīd Bey 3358
- Fermin, Claudio 3440
- Fernandez, R. 2771, 2774
- Fernández, Rafael Tomás 1018
- Fernández de Cevallos, Diego 2293
- Fernando, H. N. 2633
- Fernando VII, of Spain 3456
- Ferrari Bravo, Luciano 1844
- Ferrat, Jean 2381
- Ferré, Léo 2381–2
- Ferré, Théophile 2300
- Ferreira, Benigno 2608
- Ferreira, Câmara 2219
- Ferreira Aldunate, Wilson 3406
- Ferreira da Silva, Newton 561–2, 3008–9
- Ferrer, Francisco 117, 153, 2048, 3217
- Ferrer Colony 3418
- Ferrer Modern School 379, 3418
- Ferrer y Guardia, Francisco 99, 145, 618, 1124
- Ferrera, Gregorio 2018
- Ferrero, Pietro 130
- Ferrucci, Caterina Franceschi 3592
- Fersen, Axel von 2518
- Fès, Treaty of 2335
- Festival of Light 513
- Festival of Resistance 2807
- Fetjó, François 1625
- Fetterman Fight 900
- Feuchtwanger, Lion 1193–4
- feudalism
- Britain 1665–6
 - Deleuze/Guattari 980
 - Free Officers 1071

- French Revolution 1275, 1279, 1286
 Germany 1352–3
 Japan 1897
 Korea 1998
 Kurdistan 2010
 Luxemburg on 1650, 2144
 peasants 1352–3
 Romania 2863
 Russia 2921
 Feuerbach, Ludwig 677, 2230, 3679
 and Bakunin 333
 and Proudhon 2764
 Feuillants 1288–9, 1292, 1531, 2042
 Fez Treaty 1249
 Fiallo, Viriato 1018
 Fianna Fáil 971, 1050
 Fiat
 Argentina 864
 Italy 1836, 1837, 1839, 1844
 Fichte, Johann Gottlieb 333
 Fidelismo 627
 Fidelity Exploration and Production Co. 2418
 Fielden, John and Joseph 2720
 Fielden, Samuel 1569, 1570
 Fier rebellion 29
 Fifteen Years' War 134
Fifth Estate 159, 1052
Fifth Monarchists 1099, 1100, 1102–3, 1194–5
 women 1109, 1194–5, 1225
Figaro, Le 1229
Fight, The 3469
 Fighting Solidarity 2708
 Figner, Vera 3550, 3554
 Fignolé, Daniel 1518, 1520
 Figueres Ferrer, José 878, 879
 Figueroa Alcocer, Rubén 2285, 2288
 Figueroa Cordero, Andres 2770, 2771
 Figueroa Figueroa, Rubén 563, 2283
Fiji 1196–200
 as British Crown Colony 1196
 Chinese immigrants scheme 1198
 CIA 1198
 indentured labor 1196, 1197, 3425
 Indian population 1196, 1197
 Methodists 1196, 1198
 missionaries 1196
 parliamentary insurrection 1196–200
 Rabuka 2797–8
 sugar cane cultivation 1196
 World Wars 1197
 Fiji Military Force 1197
 Fijian Nationalist Party 1197
 Fijian Political Party 2797 filibustero interventions 56
 Filizzola, Carlos 2601, 2603, 2607
 Fillon, François 1238
 Filmer, Robert 2370
 Filosofova, Anna 3067, 3390
 Fim-Cisl (Catholic trade union) 1840
Finally Got the News 2068
 Fine Gael 1050
 Fini, Gianfranco 1310
Finland 1200–2
 anarchism 118–19
 anarchosyndicalism 119
 break with Russia 1202, 2932
 civil war 1200–2, 2517–18, 2519
 General Strike 2517
 independence 2517
 parliament dissolved 2911
 Plekhanov 2694
 Red Guard/White Guard 2517
 revolution 1200–2
 in Russian Empire 2512, 2883
 Social Democratic Party 2519
 Soviet Union 2520, 3507
 and Sweden 1200–1
 women's suffrage 3550
 see also Nordic countries
 Finley-Bowman, Rachel 3540–2
 Finney, Charles Grandison 214
 Finnish Question 1979
 Finnish War 3209
 FIOM (metal workers' union) 1307, 1311, 1821, 1823
 Fionn mac Cumhail 1192
 Fiorino, Vinzia 3591–3
 FIOT (textile workers' union) 1821
fiqh, Iran 1774
 Firemen's Union of the Pacific Coast 1754
 Firestone, Shulamith 772, 3167, 3629
 Firmin, Anténor 1515
 First, Ruth 2357, 2358, 3053
 First All Burma Conference, Youth League 553
 First All-Russian Congress of Worker and Peasant Women 3606
 First All Russian Women's Congress 3551
 First Balkan Social Democratic Conference 337
First Book of Discipline 3001
 First Coalition, War of 3154
 First Czechoslovak Army in Slovakia 3049
 First Intergalactic Encuentro for Humanity and Against Neoliberalism 1386, 1396
 First Nations 582, 785, 2098
 First Nations Policing Policy 2557
 First Quarter Storm 2678
 First Seminar for the Evaluation of Venezuelan Women 3631
 First Workers' Congress 2648
 Fischer, Adolph 1569, 1570

- Fischer, Bram 3104
 Fischer, E. 770
 Fischer, Joschka 224, 1367, 3523
 Fischer-Hoffman, Cory 2949–50, 3630–2
 Fischhof, Adolf 1920 fish-ins 2412
 Fisher, John 515
 Fisher, Mochi 2856
 Fisher, Percy 151, 154, 832, 3091
 Fitrart, Abdurrauf 3241, 3244
Fitzgerald, Edward 1203, 1788, 1790–1, 1795
 United Irishmen 2545, 2546, 3393
 Fitzgerald, James Fitzmaurice 1805
 Fitzgerald, Mary 148–9
 Fitzgerald, William 837
 Fitzgibbon, John 1786, 1787
 Fitzjames, Alexander 3315
 Fitzpatrick, Claire 1026–7, 1798–800
 Fitzpatrick, John 2034
 Fitzpatrick, Sheila: Everyday Stalinism 3160–1
 Five Interested Parties (FIPs) 3650, 3652
 Five-Percent Nation 394
 Five Republics of Central America 2949
 Flamank, Thomas 509
 Flaubert, Gustave 2974
 Fleming, John “Chummy” 106–7
 Fleming, Klaus 2514
 Flemish 361, 362–4
 Flesselles, Jacques de 1607
 Fletcher, Ben 2033
 Fleurus, Battle of 1292, 2850, 2951
Flibustiers 1540
 Flick 1367
 FLN-FALN 3442
FLOC: see Farm Labor Organizing Committee
 Flon, Catherine 3584
 Flood, Henry 1786
 Flor, Christian 989, 2983
 Florence 227
 European Social Forum 1009, 1311
 Flores, Andres 2770
 Flores, J. 2774
 Flores, Juan José 1062
 Florescu, Madalina 2358–62
 Florestan Fernandes National School 2352
 Florida 88
 Flosse, Gaston 1273
 Floud Commission 2574
 Flower, Richard 2460
Flynn, Elizabeth Gurley 125, 143, 836, 1125, 1203–4
 Alderson Story, The 1204
 Heterodoxy 3625
 IWW 2032, 2623
FMLN: see Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front
 FMLN-FDR 1165, 2958
Fo, Dario 131, 1204–5
 Foa, Vittorio 2622
 Folk Brothers 612
 Follen, Karl 558
 Fonda, Jane 221
Fonseca, Carlos 1205–6, 2467, 2469, 2471, 2964, 2966
 Fonseca, Hermes da 469
 Fonseca, Jorge Carlos 447, 603
 Font, José 278
 Fontanier, Henri 3289
 Fontenelle, Maria Luisa 499
 Fontenis, Georges 121
 Fontes, Paulo 473–8
 Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) 1211, 2319, 3111, 3463
 Food and Canning Workers' Union (FCWU) 2398, 3039, 3093, 3094
 Food First Information and Action Network (FIAN) 1211, 3462
Food Not Bombs 159, 161, 1206–7 food prices
 French Revolution 1277–8
 Germany 1360
 setting 1208
 Wales 3498
food riots 501, 1207–10 anti-IMF 1209–10
 England 3211
 French Revolution 1208
 harvest failure 1209
 Italy 130, 1846
 women 1209
 World War I 1209
 Zimbabwe 3732
 food shortages, Russia 1417, 2934–6 food sovereignty 1210–12, 3461
 Foot, Hugh 946 Foot, Michael 2040
foquismo (guerilla cells) 1489
 Forbes Commission 1516
 Força Sindical 477
 Force Ouvrière (FO) 1236
 forced labor 1279
 Forces Françaises de l'Intérieur (FFI) 1241
 Ford, Gerald 1043
 Ford, Henry 1424
 Ford, Ita 2060
 Ford protests 512, 837
 Ford-Smith, Honor 3579
 Fordism 1007, 1398, 1399, 1423, 2370, 3171

- foreign intervention 1212–19
 China 1213–14
 France 1214
 ideology 1215–16
 imperialism 1216–17
 Japanese and Prussian exceptions 1214–15 revolutionaries 1218–19
 Russia 1214
 Skocpol 1213
 world systems theory 1217–18
- Forest Acts 2802
 Forest Brothers 341 forest defense campaigns 1052 Forest movement, Iran 1768 forestry 1119 formalism/social realism 1081
 Forman, James 1259
 Forman, Michael 1755–8
 Forrest, Edwin 3147
 Forrest, Nathan Bedford 65, 2801
 Forsberg, Randall 198
 Fort, Jeff 1551
 Fort Donelson 59
 Fort Henry 59
 Fort Laramie, Treaty of 900, 2413
 Fort Pillow massacre 65, 2801
 Fort Sumter 58, 65
 Fort Ticonderoga 79, 82
 Fort Wagner 65
 Fort Wilson Riot 84
 Forten, James 207
Fortnightly Review 2172
 Fortune, Thomas 16, 756
 Fortuyn, Pim 2448
 Forum Against Oppression of Women 3589
 Forum Demokrasi (FODEM) 1723
 Forum of Indigenous Peoples of Oaxaca 2537
 Forum for Union Coordination (FCS) 2356
Forverts (Forward) 1916
Forward 2821
 Forward Bloc (FB) 450, 1704, 2792
 Forza Italia 1307
 Forza Nuova Nazi group 1310
 Fos-Lavera blockade 1235
 Foster, Abby Kelly 167
 Foster, Frank 2029
 Foster, John (Irish politician) 1786, 1787, 1789
 Foster, John (US Secretary of State) 1565
 Foster, John Bellamy 2249
Foster, William Z. 596, 836, 840, 1220, 1737, 2034, 2037
 Foti, Alex 1147–8
 Fottorino, Éric 1238
Foucault, Michel 1220–2
Archaeology of Knowledge 1221
 biopolitics 1006, 2305
 class struggle 772, 1221
History of Sexuality 1221 power theory 1221, 2736
 sexuality 1221, 3018
- Fouché, Joseph 895
 Foulards Rouges 2458
 Fouque, Antoinette 3575, 3576
 Four Mothers 1816
 Fourah Bay College demonstration 3031
Fourier, Charles François Marie 973, 1222–3, 1910, 3147
 communities 2842–3
 as example 1638
 Phalansteries 2763
Theory of Four Movements and of General Destinies 1222 utopian socialism 677, 1574, 2231
- Fournier, Michelangelo 1310
 Fourshey, Catherine Cymone 2960–2
 Fourteen Families, El Salvador 2956
 14th of June movement 1014, 1018
 Fourth Congress of Soviets 2934
 Fourth International Organization of South Africa (FIOSA) 834
 Fourth (Unification) Conference 438
Fox, Charles James 507, 1203, 1223–4, 2546, 3024, 3529
Fox, George 201, 1105, 1107, 1190, 1224–5
 Fox, Vicente 2286, 2289, 2291, 2294, 2536, 3718
 Foxe, John 1095
Foxe's Book of Martyrs 1095
- FPMR: see Frente Patrioco Manuel Rodriguez (FPMR)
- FPRLZ: see Lorenzo Zelaya Popular Revolutionary Forces
- Frackman, Kyle E. 1200–2
 fragging, Vietnam War 221
 Friginals, Moreno 919
 Frame Breakers' Bill 2134
 Franc-Tireur Resistance group 405
- France
 Algeria 225, 226
 American Revolution 1218
 anarchism 119–22
 anarchocommunism 119
 anarchosyndicalism 119, 120
 anti-Semitism 405, 887–8
 anti-war movement 225–7
 Charter of 1814 1227–8, 1229 clandestine societies 1228
Code Noir 201
 Cold War 825
 collectivism 119
 counterrevolution 891–7

France (cont'd)

- 1830 Revolution 1227–33
- 1848 Revolution 1242–5
- Enlightenment 1109–16
- Fanon 1162–3
- fascism 1172–3
- feminism 3620
- food riots 1208
- Haiti 1527–8, 1541–2
- Huguenots 1068–9, 2950, 3494
- immigrants/social conflict 1643–7
- Indochina 44, 225, 3473
- Jewish people 1918–19
- June Days 1233–4, 1244, 2044, 2409
- labor protests, post-World War II 1234–9 and Latin America 486
- May 1968 events 323, 2260–4
- music, songs, and protest 2380–2
- Muslim headscarf debate 1644–5
- mutualism 119
- Nazism resisted 1239–42
- nuclear weapons 196
- pacifism 225
- Popular Front 3469
- Protestantism 1110
- Restoration 1229
- strikes 2933, 3216
- student protests 3172, 3178
- unemployment 1644, 1646, 3380, 3381, 3385
- universal suffrage 1243–4
- women's movement 3575–8
- working class 1280
- see also* French Revolution
- France, Anatole 2947
- Franceschini, Alberto 2815
- Francia, José Gaspar Rodríguez de 2608
- Francis, Will 2408
- Francis Joseph, Emperor 1623
- Francisca, Juana 3630
- Francisco Ferrer School, New York 1125
- Francistown African Employees' Union (FAEU) 456
- Franck, James 194
- Franco, Eduardo 409
- Franco, Francisco
 - CNT 849–50
 - coming to power 180
 - and CPUSA 840
 - protest song about 2381
 - in Spanish Foreign Legion 2336
 - student movement 3170
 - terror 292
 - victory of 146
- Franco, Itamar 499
- Franco, João 188
- Franco, Rafael 2599, 2600
- Franco-Prussian War 440, 1323, 1611, 1827, 3636
 - aftermath 2236
 - Paris besieged 2410, 2610
- Franco-Thai war 1713
- Francois, Elma 3559
- François I, of France 2017
- Francophone Africa 1246–53
 - Algeria 1246–7
 - Cameroon 1251–2
 - Central African Republic 1250–1
 - Congo-Brazzaville 1251
 - Madagascar 1249–50
 - Morocco 1248–9
 - RDA 1252
 - Tunisia 1247–8
- Frank, André Gunder 1668–9
- Frank, Christopher 2463–4, 3280–1
- Frank, Louis 2721
- Frank, Thomas 1459
- Franke, W. 3232
- Frankenhausen, Battle of 2831
- Frankfurt Parliament 1920
- Frankfurt School 1253–7
 - Adorno 12
 - Authoritarian Personality, The* 1254
 - Benjamin 376, 904, 1256
 - critical theory 324, 904–8
 - Lukács 2136
 - primitivism 99
 - student movements 3170
 - Studies on Authority and Family* 1254, 1255
 - Western Marxism 1423
 - Young Hegelians 3679
- Frankfurter, Felix 2947
- Frankfurter Rundschau* 1317
- Franklin, Benjamin 1113, 1114, 1785
 - Poor Richard's Almanac* 76
- Franklin, Washington 204
- Franks, Benjamin 108–10, 143–4, 3071–2
- Franqui, Carlos 923
- Franz Ferdinand 318
- Franz-Joseph, Emperor 1621
- Franz Joseph of Austria 1150
- Franzén, Johan 1159–60, 1777–9, 2953–6, 3515–16
- Frape Behr factory 3687
- Fraser, Malcolm 311
- Frashëri, Abdyl 35
- Frashëri, Sami 35
- Frassanito network 2306
- Frauenzeitung* 3580
- Frayhayt* (Freedom) 1916
- Frazer, E. Franklin 1556

- Freda, Ricardo 3149
 Frederica, Battle of 2985
 Frederick, of Sweden 1496
 Frederick Henry of Orange 1036
 Frederick II, Holy Roman Emperor 1034
 Frederick II of Prussia, "The Great" 1114 gay rights 2101
 Steuben 3514
 Voltaire 3494
 Frederick the Wise of Saxony 2987
 Frederick VII, of Denmark 2985
 Frederick William II, of Germany 2711, 2715
 Frederick William III, of Germany 2981
 Frederick William IV, of Germany 1150–1, 1348, 2702
 Fredericksburg, Battle of 62, 64
 Frederik I, of Denmark 988
 Free Acres enclave 3418
 Free and Independent Trade Unions (SLIM)
 2356
 Free and Open Source Software (FOSS)
 1739
 Free Angela Davis campaign 965
 Free Association 1153
 Free Basic Water 3101–2
 Free Cambodia Party 575
 Free City project 161
 Free Corps for the National Security (VSN) 1503, 1518
 see also tontons macoutes
Free Enquirer 3617, 3666
 Free Farmers' Union (MASAKA) 1617
 Free Forum 1152
 Free France 1162, 2336, 2457
 Free German Foundation for Science 2102
 Free German Youth 1343, 1344
 Free Homeland Montoneros (MPL) 1058
 free love 2566, 3626, 3636, 3637, 3666
 Free Officers movement 1069–70, 1076, 2406
 Free Party (FP), Turkey 3361
 Free Patriotic Movement 2405 free produce concept 208–9 free-rider problem 649, 651, 652, 2758
 Free Romanian Television 2861
 free schools 118
 Free Software Movement 161
 Free Soil Party 55, 56, 216
 Free Southern Theater 1482
Free Speech 3519
 Free Speech League 1412
Free Speech Movement (FSM), Berkeley
 377–8
 Free Store movement 107
 Free Theater Associates 221
 free trade 176, 1658
 Free Trade Agreement of the Americas (FTAA)
 111, 434, 592, 667, 809, 1431, 3645, 3650, 3654, 3655
 Free Trade Agreements (FTAs) 804, 1210, 1431
 Free Trade Area of the Americas 1400, 2636
 Free Trade Unions (WZZ), Poland 3073, 3078
 Free Universities 156, 305, 3169
 Free Workers' Federation (FLT) 141, 2767–8
 Freedmen's Bureau 217, 2800
Freedom 106, 108, 109, 3087
 Kropotkin 2007
 Freedom and Understanding Party (HIF) 3357
 Freedom Bloc 555
 Freedom Charter
 ANC 2357, 3085, 3106
 Congress Alliance 171–2, 2357
 Freedom Fight collective 3686, 3687
Freedom group 148 freedom from hunger 1212
Freedom Rides 1257–8, 3186
 Australia 308, 309
 CORE 741–2
 Farmer 1257, 2498
 Freedom Schools 1258
 Freedom Shop 139
 freedom of speech 10
Freedom Summer 18, 378, 747, 1258–9
 SNCC 750, 3186
 freedom of thought 2247
Freedom's Journal 3504
 Freegans 3428
 Freeland Colony 3418
 Freely Associated State (ELA) 2769
 Freeman, Donald 18
 Freeman, Harris 3411–15
 Freeman, Kenneth 8
 Freeman, Luke 2156–7
 Freemantle, A. F. 465
 Frei, Eduardo 2377
 Frei Chico 3038
 Frei Montalva, Eduardo 50, 684, 694
Freie Arbeiter Stimme 158
 Freie Arbeiter Union Deutschland (FAUD) 3082
Freiheit, Die 157, 1581
Freikorps 3055, 3056
Freire, Paulo 1259–61, 2500
 as influence 1042, 2605
 Pedagogy of the City 126
 Pedagogy of the Oppressed 407, 1259–60, 1261, 2059
 Freisler, Roland 3526
FRELIMO: see Frente de Libertação de Moçambique
 French, Joan 3579

- French Caribbean 1262–8, 3578–9
see also specific islands
- French Council for the Muslim Religion 1645
- French Equatorial Africa 1239
- French feminists 3576
- French Foreign Legion 219, 954, 1273
- French Guiana 1268–71
 Codigo Negro 1269
 departmentalization 1270–1
 ecological movements 1268
 First War of Resistance 1269 indigenous rebellions 1269–70
 Kourou Space Center protests 1268, 1269 as overseas department 1270–1
 slavery 1269–70
- French Polynesia 1271–3
- French Resistance
 Camus 581
 de Gaulle 1240
 Eisenhower 1241–2
 Spanish supporters 1241
see also Bloch, Marc; Free France
- French Revolution 1273–83, 1283–7, 1287–92, 1292–7, 1297–8 achievements of 1278–83 aristocratic privilege 1275–6
 bread riots 777
 class struggle 1287
 Enlightenment 1115
 Estates General 1274–5
 as example 1203, 1786
 feudalism 1275, 1279, 1286
 food riots 1208
 forced labor 1279
 historians' interpretations 1283–7
 Jacobins/Girondins 1277
 July Days 142, 1230–2
 July Monarchy 403, 897, 1227, 1242, 1244, 2044
Liberty 2215–16
 Maximum, Law of the 1243, 1277–8, 1291
 monarchy overthrown 1276–7
 National Assembly 1275, 1532, 3033
 National Convention 2848–50
 National Workshops 1233, 1243–4
 October Days 1276, 1293 radical factions and organizations 1287–92 and Russian, compared 2922
 Sainte-Domingue and 1539, 1540–5
 science and technology 2990–2
 Terror 1243, 1277, 1285
 theater 1297–8
 Thermidor 894–6, 1278, 2992
 Tilly on 1215
 Trotsky on 1666
 women's rights 1293
 women's role 1292–7
see also Bastille; Danton, Georges Jacques; Marat, Jean-Paul; Robespierre, Maximilien de; sans-culottes
- French Sudan 3006
- Frente Americo Silva (FAS) 3443
- Frente Amplio (FA) 3405, 3409–10
- Frente de la Juventud Trabajadora Revolucionaria 2740
- Frente de Liberación Popular (FLP) 182
- Frente de Libertação de Moçambique (FRELIIMO) 1261–2
 Machel 738, 2153
 Mondlane 2313–14
 and SACP 1261–2, 3106
 Soviet support 166
 Tanzanian troops 1261 victories 2355
 Women's Detachment 3547
- Frente Democrática Nueva Guatemala (FDNG) 1478
- Frente Guerrillero Antonio José de Sucre (FGAJS) 3443
- Frente Justicialista de Liberación (FREJULI) 246, 1156
- Frente Militar de Carrera 3450
- Frente Nacional (FN), Colombia 164, 798, 801
- Frente Nacional de Libertação de Angola (FNLA) 164, 2359, 2449, 3605
- Frente Obrero Liberashon (FOL) 942
- Frente Patrioco Manuel Rodriguez (FPMR) 687, 1226–7
- Frente Popular* (Spanish Popular Front) 179
- Frente Social y Politico 809
- Frente Sur (Southern Front) 799
- Frente Unido (United Front), Colombia 800, 3303
- Fresno Larrain, Juan Francisco 2060
- Fretilin party 1042, 1043
- Freud, Sigmund 973, 1256, 1302
 and Hirschfeld 1586, 2103
 Marcuse on 2214
 and Sanger 2968
 on sexuality 3167
- Freyberg-Inan, Annette 297–301
- Frick, Henry Clay 379, 1411
- Friedan, Betty 1298–300, 3627
Feminine Mystique, The 1298, 3166, 3627
Second Stage, The 1299–300
- Friedländer, Benedikt 442, 464, 1300, 1586, 1609
- Friedman, Milton 2436
- Friedman, Samuel 3065
- Friedrich Karl of Hesse 1202

- Friedrich Wilhelm III 189
 Friedrich Wilhelm of Prussia 1918
 Friendly Correspondence Club 553 friendly societies 941, 1821
 Friendly Society of Agricultural Labourers 656, 3300
 Friends of Durruti 1030, 3142, 3143
 Friends of the Earth 1392–3
 Friends of Freedom of the Press 1229
 Friends of Jacques Roumain society 2872
 Friends of Liberty 894
 Friendship Associations 2104
Fries's Rebellion 1300–2
 Frisone, Nicole 818
 Frogier, Pierre 2459
From Caligari to Hitler 905
Fromm, Erich 904, 907, 1256, 1260, 1302–3
 Escape from Freedom 905, 907, 1302
 Frankfurt School 1253, 1254
 Marxism 2249
 Marx's Concept of Man 2838
 Praxis 3689
Fronde, France 1303–5
 Frondizi, Arturo 863, 864, 2640
 Frondizi, Silvio 272, 2839
 Front Antillo-Guyannais (FAG) 1469
 Front Capitán Parmeño 1082
 Front for the Defense of the Land (FPDT) 3719
 Front Domingo Laín 1082 Front for the Liberation of the Enclave of Cabinda (FLEC) 166
 Front for the Liberation of Occupied South
 Yemen (FLOSY) 3671
 Front de Libération du Québec (FLQ) 592, 2784
 Front de Libération Nationale (FLN) 226, 366,
 1072, 1162, 2284
 Front de Libération Nationale Kanak et Socialiste
 (FLNKS) 2458–9
 Front for the Liberation of Zimbabwe
 (FROLIZI) 3736
 Front National (FN) 1645
 Front National pour le Changement et la
 Démocratie (FNCD) 1507
 Front National de Concertation (FNC) 1505
 Front Uni de Libération Kanak (FULK) 2458
 Fronte Popolare 1333
 Frontier Crimes Regulation Act 1966
 Frontiers Army 46
 Frontline States 461
 Frost, John 2463, 2464
 Froude, James Anthony 3316
 Frundt, Henry J. 1472–4, 1474–9, 1479–82
 Frutos, Duarte 2603
 Frutos, Juan Manuel 2600
 Frye, Marquette and Ronald 3399
FSLN: see Sandinista National Liberation Front
 Fuad I, King of Egypt 1076
 Fuat, Ali 3357
 fueros 1127
 Fuerzas Armadas de Liberación (FAL) 245
 Fuerzas Armadas Peronista (FAP) 244
 Fuerzas Armadas de la Revolución Nacional
 (FARN) 244, 1165
 Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias (FAR) 244,
 272, 1481, 2283
Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de
 Colombia (FARC) 244, 410, 796, 799, 1167–70
 birth of 801
 and ELN 1081, 1082, 1084, 2791, 3389
 Fuerzas Populares de Liberación 2061
 Fugazi 2845
 Fugitive Slave Act 56, 70, 216, 533
 Fujimori, Alberto 48, 2363, 2643, 2645, 2646, 2652 demonstrations 2655
 reelection bid 2655
 resignation 2656
 self-coup 2654
Fujin Sensen (Women's Front) 133
 Fukuyama, Francis 1154, 1386, 1395
 Fulani Jihadists 3676
 Fulbrook, Mary 1341, 1342
 Full Stop law 1579, 2160
 Fuller, Bampfylde 1674–5
Fuller, Margaret 1222, 1305–6, 3618
 Women in the Nineteenth Century 1305, 1306
 Fumagalli, Andrea 1839–41
 FUNCINPEC 1961
 Fundamental Laws of the Russian Empire 2921
 Fundidora de Monterrey steel mill closure 2293
 Funj kingdom 3196, 3197
Funke 2046
 Fur kingdom 3196
 Fur and Leather Workers' Union 836
 fur trade 582
 Furet, François 1278, 1284, 1285
 Furnas, J. C. 3146
 Furnivall, J. S. 3279
 Furtado, Isaac 1872
 Fuse, Keisuke 3720–1
 Fusion Government, South Africa 833
 Füssli, Heinrich 3190
 Futurism 116 poetry 2962
 Fyodor, Tsar 436

 G7 3655
G8 protests 1307–18
 Birmingham 1387, 1397, 2636
 Cologne 1389, 1397, 2636

G8 protests (cont'd)

Genoa 127, 132, 299, 1006, 1154, 1307–12,
1390, 1401, 1431, 1450, 1740
Gleneagles 1312–15, 1402, 2636
Heiligendamm 300–1, 1315–18, 1402
G8 Alternatives coalition 1313
G20 group 3647, 3650
G33 group 3651
G90 3647, 3651, 3653
GABRIELA 2681, 2686
Gabriel's Rebellion 297, 1318–19, 2408
Gabrovski, Nikola 540
Gabungan Melayu Patani Raya (GAMPAR)
3269
Gadea, Hilda 1485
Gaelic League 1799, 2627, 3681
Gaelic Society 3001–2
Gaffar Khan, Khan Abdul 1328
Gag Law 1301
Gage, Matilds Joslyn 3624
Gage, Thomas 78, 79
Gagging Acts 3280
Gagnon, Charles 2785, 2787
Gaillard, Micha 1510
Gairy, Eric Matthew 1463–4, 2462
Gaitán, Jorge Eliécer 1320–1
assassinated 623, 1320
Banana Massacre 805
Colombia 408
FARC 1167
Gál, Fedor 3435
Galán, José Antonio 1081
Galán, Luis Carlos 802, 808, 3389
Galbaud, François 1533
Galeano, Eduardo 2223, 2637
Galinsoga, Luis de 631
Gallatin, Albert 3525
Galleani, Luigi 98, 1321–3, 1419, 2169, 2947
Gallegos, Rodolfo 903
Gallegos, Romulo 3631
Gallinari, Prospero 2815
Gallipoli 293
Gallo, Marie 884
Gallo, Max 181
Galón athins 2979
Galón Peasant Rebellion 2977
Galván, Javier A. 186–8, 2729–32
Galván, Rafael 2291, 2299
Galveston & Houston Towing Co 1754
Gálvez, Mariano 1475
Gálvez Durón, Juan 1603, 1604
Gama, Vasco da 187
Gamarra, Eduardo 788, 790
Gambari, Ibrahim 2480

Gamber, Cayo 1741–2, 2410–11
Gamber, Francesca 211–18
Gambetta, Léon 463, 1323–4
Gamboa, C. Andrés 2555–6
Gambone, Larry 111–13
Gambuzzi, Carlo 129
Gámiz García, Arturo 2157, 2284
Gamola fight 1074
Gandamak, Treaty of 15
Gandhi, Feroze 2432
Gandhi, Indira (née Nehru) 2432, 2434, 2435, 3251
Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand 1324–32, 1709 ahimsa 1701
All India Khilafat Committee 1680
and Ambedkar 54, 958
arrested 2051
assassinated 1584, 2433
Belgaum Session 1677
civil disobedience 449, 1327–9
fasting 53, 1684
Harijan upliftment program 1324, 1683, 1684, 1710
hartals 1330, 1701, 2492
Hind Swaraj 1324, 1701
Indian National Congress 2493, 2792
indigo farmers 2493
and Jinnah 1330, 1680, 1710, 1711, 1921
Khilafatists 1702
and King 1971
non-violence 1324, 2490–1
peasants' rights 1681, 1703 at Round Table Conference 1678
and Sanger 2969
satyagraha 1324, 1679, 1681–2, 1701, 2492–4
sexuality 1329
South Africa 2492–3
swaraj 1701
women's roles 1329
World War II 1329–30
Gandhi, Rajiv 1692, 2432, 2741, 3251, 3252
Gandhi–Irwin Pact 449, 450, 1328, 1683–4
Ganeshman Singh 2443
Ganev, Robin 400–1
Gang of Four 985, 2204, 2205
Ganga Zumba 2588, 3746
Ganguly, Dwarkanath 1695
Ganguly, Jyotirmoyee 1705
Ganilau, Ratu Penaia 1198
Gapon, Father Georgi 1743, 1746, 2879
García, Alan 2362, 2651
García, Carlo P. 2676
García, Cipriano 181
García, Ismael 3446

- García, Luis 1603
 García, Robert Francis 2685
 García Barragán, Marcelino 3297
 García Godoy, Héctor 1019, 1020
 García Guirao, Pedro 144–7, 2776–7, 3609–12
 García Laviana, Gaspar 2061, 3303
 García Lorca, Federico 2381
 García Márquez, Gabriel 805
 García Meza, Luis 421, 2060
 García Moreno, Gabriel 963, 1062
 García Oliver, Juan 138, 1187, 1188, 3142
 García Pérez, Alan 48
 García Ponce, Guillermo 3443
 García y Moreno, Joaquín 3306
 Garde Mobile 1234
 Gardiner, Stephen 1094
Gardista 1596
 Garfield, James 976, 1900
 Garhwali, Thakur Chandra Singh 1682
Garhmali troops, Hindu 1970
Garibaldi, Giuseppe 492, 1332–3, 2169
 and anarchism 129
 compared with Spartacus 3149 liberal internationalism 1744
 Red Shirts 1826
 Risorgimento 1332, 1824
 Garland, Christian 322–5, 738–9, 2003–5
 Garment Workers' Union 2948, 3093
 Garnier, Francis 3476
 Garrett, Elizabeth 3567
 Garrigo, Xavier 2776
Garrison, William Lloyd 90, 156, 1333–5
 American Anti-Slavery Society 168, 214–15, 216, 217, 3640
 Declaration of Sentiments 1334
 immediatism 2491
 Liberator, The 215, 1021, 1333, 1335, 3619
 non-violence 2491
 suffrage 2492
 Garvey, Amy Jacques 3559
Garvey, Marcus 1335–6
 Africa for Africans slogan 3085
 black nationalism 391, 394
 Black Star Line 392
 Ex-Slave Mutual Relief 1335–6, 1608
 as influence 154, 307, 3092, 3373
 Jim Crow era 17
 Rastafarians 1860
 UNIA 21, 756, 837, 1024, 1336, 1634, 2179, 2396, 3559
 Garvey, Ronald 364, 365
Garveyism 1335–6, 1870, 3559
Garvey's Watchman 1335
 Gary, Joseph E. 1569
 Gates, Horatio 85
 Gatica, Antonio 1924
 GATT: see General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade
 Gaughan, Evan M. 1385–6
 Gauthier, Michele 2788
 Gaviara, César 1120–1, 2149
 Gaviria, César 802, 808, 1083
 Gay Activists Alliance 9 gay liberation 2093, 2098, 2099
 Gay Liberation Against the Right Everywhere 2099
 Gay Liberation Front (GLF) 512, 2106, 2108 see also lesbian, gay, transsexual, bisexual movements (LGTB)
 gay rights movement 305, 2097, 2100–1
 Gaylani, Rashid 'Ali al- 1777
 Gayot, François 1505
 Gaytán, Salomón and Salvador 2157
 Gaza City 1548
 Gaza Strip 1548, 1549, 1758, 1817, 2502
Gazeta Wyzbrocza 2302, 3557–8
 Gbagbo, Laurent 880, 881
 Gbaya revolt 1250–1
 Gdańsk Agreement 3502
 Gdańsk monument 3074
 Gdańsk shipyard strike 2302, 2698, 3073, 3497, 3502
 GDR: see German Democratic Republic
 GEAR (Growth, Employment, and Redistribution) strategy 2195, 3099, 3101
 Geffard, Fabre-Nicholas 1513
 Geldof, Bob 1312, 1314, 1317, 1402
 Geldof, Lynn 924
 Gell, Monday 3460
 Gellhorn, Martha 7
 Gemayel, Bashir 2071
 Gemayel, Pierre 2070
 Gemeinschaft der Eigenen 1300, 2103
gender anarchism and 122–6 class and 3565–6
 Hindu nationalism and 1582–5 gender equality
 anarchists 107
 Bakunin 123
 Fuller 1305
 Goldman 123
 gender revolution 2097
 gender roles double day reality 3599, 3608
 identity 3565
 patriarchy 3564–6
 World War I 1171

- General, Levi 584
- General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) 1396, 1995, 2293, 3462
- Uruguay Round 1995, 3644, 3650
- General Agriculture Plantation Workers' Union of Zimbabwe (GAPWUZ) 3733
- General Association of Guadeloupean Students (AGEG) 1469
- General Confederation of Democratic Workers (CGTD) 808
- General Confederation of Greek Workers (GSEE) 1441, 1442, 1448, 3220
- General Confederation of Guatemalan Workers (CGTG) 1478
- General Confederation of Labor (CGL) 385
- General Council of Buddhist Associations (GCBA) 552, 2978
- General Factory Workers' Benefit Fund (GFWBF) 3095
- General Federation of Nepalese Trade Unions (GEFONT) 232
- General German Workers' Association (ADAV) 3066
- General Headquarters of the Allied Powers (GHQ) 1878, 1889, 1890, 1892, 1893–4, 3069
- General Line* (Eisenstein) 1081
- General Motors strike 250, 589, 3413
- General Service Enlistment Act 1686
- General Union of Guadeloupean Workers (UGTG) 1470
- General Workers' Confederation of Peru (CGTP) 2218, 2649–51, 2655–6
- General Workers' Union 364, 365
- General Workers' Union (AMT), Philippines 2673
- Genesh group 3368
- Genesis story 3612
- genetically modified organisms 3461, 3462
- genetics 2994
- Genette, Gérard 3062
- Geneva 2636
- Calvinism 1111
- PGA 1386, 2636
- Protestantism 1113–14
- see also* World Trade Organization (WTO)
- protests, Geneva
- Geneva Accords 1166, 1599
- Geneva Convention 1817, 3716
- Geneva Group of Anarchists 142
- Geneva Peace Talks 2663
- Genoa 872, 1834, 2635
- see also* G8 protests, Genoa
- Genoa Social Forum 1008, 1307, 1308, 1309, 1401
- genocide
- Armenia 280, 281–3
- Croatia 3683
- Holocaust 2497
- Nazi Party 1594
- Pakistan 347
- Genovese, Eugene 350
- Genovesi, Antonio 1825
- Gentle Revolution: see Velvet Revolution
- Geoffroy, Pierre-Paul 2786
- Geoghegan-Clements, Charlie 2367–9
- George, Alys 1160
- George, Dudley 585, 593
- George, Henry 967, 2820, 3418
- Progress and Poverty* 2450, 2451, 2819
- George, Stefan 2102–3
- George, Susan 298, 299, 1313, 1403
- George-Circle 2102–3
- George Grey Commission 3205
- George I, of Greece 126
- George II, of Greece 1436, 1438, 1443
- George III, of Britain 80, 508, 992, 994, 1223, 3280, 3529
- George IV, of Britain 655, 2826
- Georgia
- non-governmental organizations 814
- Rose Revolution 811, 812, 2510, 3011, 3021, 3329
- Georkadjis, Polikarpos 947
- Geremek, Bronislaw 3076
- Gerhardt, Christina 12–13, 1253–7, 2135–7
- Gerlach, Allen 1062, 1065, 1067
- Gerlach, Kurt Albert 1253
- German, Kieran 1853–6
- German–Danish War I 2985
- German–Danish War II 2896
- German Democratic Republic (GDR)
- 1337–46
- autumn 1989 mass uprising 2508–9
- Biermann 387, 1344
- civil disobedience 1344
- Cold War 1381
- collectivization 1343
- emigrants to FDR 1340
- emigrants to Hungary 3433
- gender rights 3580
- grassroots activism 1338–9
- homosexuality 2105
- KPD 828–9
- Protestantism 1342–4
- protests 1337–46
- Stalinization 1339
- Stasi 1340, 1341–2, 1343–4, 1369
- totalitarianism 1337

- workers' revolt 1340
Zetkin on currency 3633
- German Federal Republic (FDR)
autonomism 324
Extraparliamentary Opposition (APO) 1037, 3523 homosexuality 2105–6
“new left” 3521–4
women's rights 3580
see also Green movement, Germany
- German Friendship Association 2093
- German Peasant Rebellion 1352–5, 1357, 2374
- German Reformation 1355–8, 2139
Calvin 1357–8
Grebel 1356–7
Luther 1355–6
Peasant Rebellion 1357
Reformed Protestantism 1358
Zwingli 1356
- German Revolution (1918–1923) 826, 1358–66, 2093
first wave 1359–63
second wave 1363–4
third wave 1364–5 fourth wave 1365
- German Saxons 2862
- German Socialist Party (SPD) 2084
- German Tariff Union 1349
- German Workers' Party (DAP) 1588, 1589
- Germana, César 1566–8, 2217–19
- Germantown Petition 212
- Germany
and Austria 1347, 1350
bourgeoisie 821–2
counterrevolution 1358
currency devalued 1365
Enlightenment 1349
fascism 1171, 1176–80
Green Party (Die Grünen) 1366–7
Haiti 1514
and Holy Roman Empire 1347 homosexual rights movement 1300 industrialization 1346, 1349, 1352
inflation 827
invading Soviet Union 1181–2, 1377, 2792, 3048
Jewish people 1173, 1175, 1179, 1182–3
League of Nations 1592
lesbian, gay, transsexual, bisexual movements 2093, 2100–6
National Socialism 1173
nationalism 1346–52, 1373–81, 2982
“new left” 3521–4
proletariat 1350
- Protestantism 1347
racial stereotyping 326
Red Army Faction 1368–9
Reformation 2831
resistance to Nazism 1369–72
socialism 1373–81
strikes 1359–63, 2932–3
student movement 558, 1347
taxation 1352–3
totalitarianism 1590–1
trade unions 1365
unemployment 3380–1, 3385–6
unification 326, 829, 1345, 1346, 1367, 2106, 3056 welfare state 1351
women's movement 3579–81
workers' educational associations 1350 workers' movements 1346–52 working classes 1178
see also German Democratic Republic; German Federal Republic; Nazi Party, Nazism;
Weimar Republic
- Gerő, Ernő 1626, 1628
- Gershwin, George 1555
- Gesell, Silvio 2048
- Gestapo 1240, 1592
Barbie 1242
homosexuality 2104
and KPD 1376
- Getleff, Poul 990
- Gettysburg 64
- Geva, Eli 1814
- Geve, Augustine 3082
- Geyer, Florian 1354
- Gezo, King 954
- Ghadar (Revolution) Party 1675
- Ghadr Party 3042
- Ghaffar Khan, Abdul 1682, 1683, 1966, 1967, 1969, 2491, 2494
PPP 2580
- Ghana 1381–3
Asante culture 3669
cocoa cultivation 1382 economic prominence 2181
gold mining 1382
independence 1381, 1660, 3545
nationalism and socialist transition 1381–3 state ownership 1382
see also Nkrumah, Kwame
- Ghani Khan 1967
- Ghare-Baire* (At Home and Outside) 3586
- Ghassemlon, Abdul Rahman 1763
- Gheorghiu-Dej, Gheorghe 2857, 2858, 2865, 2866–7
- Ghilzai rebellion 1029

- Ghioldi, Rodolfo 2748
 Ghislanzoni, Antonio 3149
 Ghosal, Sarala 1674
 Ghosh, Aurobindo 1674, 1697, 1698
 Ghosh, Barindra Kumar 1674
 Ghosh, Girishchandra 1712
 Ghosh, P. 552
 Ghosh, Sisir Kumar 1712
 Ghoshal, Gokul 369
 Ghost Dance movement 902
 Ghurye, G. S. 954
Giai Pham 3479
Giant Killer or Anti-Landlord 3151
 Gibbet Rath surrender 1788
 Gibbs, D. N. 2138
 Gibbs, Pearl 307
 Gicheru, Evans 1948
 Gichuru, Andrew Kiiru 1948, 2268–70
 Giedroyc, Jerzy 3077
 Gierek, Edward 2695
 Gifford, Carolyn DeSwarte 3542–3
 Gikuyu resistance 3371–2
 Gil, Gilberto 2378, 2588
 Gilbert, Oliver 3327
 Gilbert's Act 2720
 Gilchrist, J. 2522
 Giles-Peters, Andrew 107
 Gillard, Julia 3563
 Gilly, Adolfo 2292
 Gilman, Charlotte Perkins 3594, 3624, 3625
 Gilmore, Mary 2453, 2455
 Ginger Group 2975
 Gini, Eleni 1438
 Ginsberg, Allen 3173
 Ginsberg, Asher (Ha'am) 3742
 Ginzberg, Lori 3639
 Giolitti, Giovanni 386, 1828, 2960, 3014, 3341
 Giorgeri, Licio 2818
 Giovagnoli, Raffaello 3149
 Giovane Italia movement: see Young Italy
 Giovani Comunisti (GC) 1008
 Giovanni, Severino di 104, 131, 243
 Giovannitti, Arturo 115, 2032
 Giovanopoulos, Christos 1436–9, 1447–50
 Gioventù Italiana del Littorio (GIL) 1177
 Girardot, Atanasio 3457
 Girga, Battle of 1074
 Giri, V. V. 1637
Girl Germs 2844
 Girmi Kamgar (Worker) Union 961, 1327
 Girón, Pedro 844, 2569
 Girondins
 Brissot 506
 Condorcet 846
 and Jacobins 894, 1288, 1289–90
 Marat against 2211
 as moderates 1277
 and Robespierre 403, 1292
 Giroud, Françoise 3576
 Giscard d'Estaing, Valéry 1271, 3576
 Gitlow, Benjamin 3065
 Gitting, Barbara 2107
 Giuliani, Carlo 1009, 1307, 1308, 1310, 1311, 1401, 3658
 Giuliani, Rudolph 501
Giustizia e Libertà
 Partito d'Azione 131, 1383–4, 2835
 Rosselli 2871, 2960
 Glaberman, M. 3071
 Gladstone, Jack 204, 984
 Gladstone, Quamina 984
 Gladstone, William Ewart 519, 2164, 2617, 2827
 Glaoui brothers 2336
Glasgow 1384–5
 general strike 519, 1384–5
 Red Clydeside 3061
 road protests 1040
 Glasier, J. Bruce 2820
glasnost (openness) 628, 1395, 1417, 3119–20, 3245, 3421
 Glass, C. Frank 152, 154
 Glasse, Henry 148, 149, 152
 Glasse, John 2820
 Glassman, R. M. 652
 Glavovic, Alen 224
 Glazman, Jacob 1918
Gleichheit, Die 3721
 Gleijeses, Piero 1216
 Glen Canyon Dam 1054
 Glen Gardner Cooperative Community 3419
Glencoe Massacre 1385–6
Gleneagles: see G8 Protests, Gleneagles
 Gleneagles Agreement 3155
 Glenn, Karen C. 3043–4
 Glinkaya, Anna 2342
 Global Call to Action Against Poverty (G-CAP) 1313
 global capitalism 298–9, 2502
Global Day of Action Against Capitalism (J18) 1386–91, 1397, 2809, 2810
Global Day of Action Against the IMF and World Bank (S26) 1391–5, 3664
 INPEG 1391–2
 global governance 3655
global justice movement 1395–404, 3274
 anarchism 100
 Block G8 coalition 1402, 1403
 Deleuze 979–84
 Fukuyama 1395
 Genoa G8: see G8 protests, Genoa

- Gleneagles G8: see G8 protests, Gleneagles Heiligendamm G8: see G8 protests, Heiligendamm history/struggle 1398–9
 Italy 1398, 1830
 Keynesianism 1402–3
 Mexico 1395–6 migration struggles and 2305–8 and neoliberalism 1400–1
 post-Fordism 1399–400
 Seattle: see World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Seattle
 students 3181
 Thailand 979–84
 Zinn 72
see also Deleuze, Gilles; Guattari, Félix; Peoples' Global Action Network (PGA)
- Global* magazine 1009
 Global Network 1010
Global Refusal 110
 Global Resistance 2504
Global South student movements 3179–81, 3274
 Global Street Party 1387
 globalization capital 1670 crisis of 1430–1
 imperialism 1670–2, 2250
 labor 1670–1
Globe, Le 1229
 Glorietta Pass battle 59
 Glorious Holiday Operation 2014
 Glorious May Revolution, Ecuador 1057
Glorious Revolution 75, 1224, 1404–8, 2125
Glos (Voice) 2698
 Glover, Danny 221
 Glücklich, Vilma 3632
 Glynn, Tom 149, 1028, 1738
 GMD: see Guomindang
 Gneisenau, Neithardt von 189
 Gobetti, Piero 1383, 2871
 Godesberg Program 1910
 Godett, Wilson “Papa” 942, 943
Godey's Lady Book 3620
 Godly Reformation of England 1102
 Godo Roso unions 1876
 Godoy, C. M. 1005
 Godse, Nathuram 1331, 1584
 Godunov, Boris 436
Godwin, William 1408–10
 anarchism 122, 1410
 Cursory Strictures 1409
 Enquiry Concerning Political Justice 1409 fire case 1409 gradualism 1409
 revolution 1116, 1409
 and Wollstonecraft 1409, 3540, 3542
 Godwyn, Morgan 201
 Goebbels, Joseph 1378, 1593
 Goerdeler, Carl 1595
 Goethe, Johann Wolfgang 3189, 3190
 Goff, Richard 52–3, 861, 1185–6, 1222–3, 1633–4, 1638–9, 2460–1, 2559–60, 3018–20, 3415–17, 3666–7
 Goffman, Erving 2758
 Gohier, Louis Jérôme 1079
 Goitia, Francisco 2375
 Goizueta, Adrián 640
 Gök-Tepe, Battle of 3366
 Gökalp, Ziya 293, 3362
 Gokaroren 1879
 Gokhale, Gopal Krishna 1698, 2388
 Golan, G. 2746
 gold
 Africa 147–8, 794, 3091
 Ballarat 1144
 Bendigo 1144
 Black Hills of Dakota 900
 Brazil 483, 484–5
 California 1119–20
 explorations 1655
 Ghana 1382
 Peru 237
 slave labor 794
 Venezuela 3451–2
 Gold, Ted 818
 Gold Coast: see Ghana
 Gold Star Families for Peace 229
 Goldberg, Denis 2194
 Goldberg, Jackie 377
 Golden Hill, Battle of 77
 Golden Law 494
 Goldfield, Michael 835–42, 2066–8
 Goldman, Asher 139–40
Goldman, Emma 1411–14
 anarchism 94, 96, 1411
 anarchosyndicalism 1413
 and Berkman 1125, 1411
 birth control 1412, 2968, 3625–6
 Bolsheviks 1413
 in Canada 94, 110
 deportation 1412–13, 2589
 emancipation 3625
 feminism 1411–12
 Fleming 107
 free love 3626
 gender equality 123
 Hoover 412, 1411, 1412
 on Jack London 2127
 Japanese translations 1848

Goldman, Emma (cont'd)

- Jewish anarchism 158
- and Kropotkin 1411
- Living My Life* 1413
- and Malatesta 1411
- Mother Earth* 379, 1412, 3625
- pamphleteering 1413
- on prostitutes 1411–12
- Goldmann, Lucien 3689
- Goldmark, William 1920
- Goldson, Philip 364
- Goldstein, M. 3293
- Goldstein, Vida 303, 3562
- Goldstone, J. A. 2505, 2762
- Goldthree, Reena N. 3558–60
- Goldwater, Barry 748
- Goli Otok prison 3691
- Golian, Ján 3048
- Golin, Stephen 2624
- Golkar party 1722, 1725, 1726, 1732
- Golpayegani, Ayatollah 1771
- Golwalkar, M. S. 1584, 1692
- Gomas, Johnny 152, 832, 1414–15, 3092, 3093
- Gomes, Albert Maria 3316
- Gomes, Eduardo 469, 470
- Gómez, Dolores Ibárruri (La Pasionaria) 2962
- Gómez, Francisco 1016
- Gómez, José Miguel 912–13
- Gómez, Laureano 408, 410
- Gómez, Luis A. 790–2
- Gomez, Mariano 2667
- Gomez, Maximo 918, 920
- Gomez, Rodrigo 999
- Gómez Hurtado, Álvaro 799
- Gómez Ramírez, Pablo 2157
- Gómez y Báez, Máximo 2227
- Gomperism 3064
- Gompers, Samuel 1735, 2028, 2029, 2038
 - AFL 2031, 2033, 3380
 - May Day 2259
 - WTUL 3313–14
- Gompo Tashi Andrugstang 3292
- Gomulka, Wladyslaw 1626, 2695, 2699–700, 2707
- Gona, George 1947–53, 1953–5, 2253–7
- Gonçalves Bento 492
- Gonçalves Campos, João Batista 490
- Gondra, Manuel 2609
- Gongadze, Hrihory 3376–7
- Gonne, Maud 1415–16
- Gonzaga, Tomás Antônio 485
- Gonzaga das Virgens, Luis 485
- González, Ignacio Maria 1016
- Gonzalez, Mike 623–9, 914–17, 922–6, 926–35, 1484–91, 2150–3
- González, Myrian 2597
- González, Natalicio 2600
- González, Pablo 2278, 2541
- González, Valentín R. 116
- González Arenas, Mauricio 1467–8, 2064–5
- González Casabianca, Miguel Anger 2601
- González Navero, Emilio 2609
- González Prada Popular Universities (UPGP) 2648
- Gonzalez-Rojas, Eugenio 112
- González Videla, Gabriel 693, 2444
- Gonzalo Sánchez, José 2045
- Good Friday Agreement 1798, 1802, 2573
- Goodman, Andrew 747, 1258, 1975
- Goodman, Paul 95, 158, 159
 - Compulsory Miseducation* 117
- Goodrich, Robert 321–2, 354–5, 1581–2
- Goodwin, Clive 2261
- Goodwin, Jeff 2505
- Goodwin, William 501
- Goodwyn, Lawrence 2722–8
- Goody, Manuel de 187
- Goonesinghe, A. E. 1494, 2050
- Goonewardene, Leslie 2050, 2051, 2052
- Gorbachev, Mikhail 1416–18
 - Afghanistan 14
 - Baltics 341
 - to Beijing 3288
 - Berlinguer 380
 - on Bukharin 535
 - downfall 3125
 - elections 3123–4
 - and Honecker 1345
 - nomenklatura* 3118–24
 - opportunity for change 2757
 - reforms 1214, 1344, 1395, 1417–18, 3116, 3118–25, 3421
 - and Yeltsin 3124–5
- Gorbachev Foundation 1418
- Gorchakov, Viceroy 2703
- Gordillo, Elba Esther 2294
- Gordon, Arthur 1196
- Gordon, Charles George 2164, 3198
- Gordon, George (Lord) 1418
- Gordon, George William 1869, 1870, 2321
- Gordon, Leonard 449
- Gordon, Max 833, 834, 3093
- Gordon, Uri 1051–2
- Gordon College strike 3194
- Gordon Riots 506–7, 1418–19, 3531
- Gore, Al 2594
- Gore, Thomas Pryor 1458
- Görgey, Artúr 1620
- Gorgopotamos National Resistance 1446
- Gori, Pietro 102, 1419–20, 2168
- Göring, Heinrich 2391

- Göring, Hermann 1593
 Gorino, Maurizio 130
 Gorkha Parishad 2442
 Gorky, Maxim 327
 Gorn, Elliott 2344–5
 Gorrie, Richard 3024
 Gorter, Herman 2243
Gorz, André 1420
 Ecology as Politics 1420
 Farewell to the Working Class 771, 1420
 Gotha party convention 3066
 Gothenburg Action 1152
Gothenburg EU summit protests 1151–4, 1307, 1401
 Gotong Rojong 1731
 Gottlieb, K. 2790
 Goudé, Charles Blé 882
Gouges, Olympe de 1294, 1297, 1421–2
 Gougou, Danielle 1467
 Goulart, João 471, 476, 3039
 National Literacy Program 1260
 ousted 416
 Peasant Leagues 2351
 PTB 495, 496
 Gould, Jay 2724
 Gourgue, Gérard 1505
 Gouros people 884
 Gove Land Rights case 309
 Government of Burma Act 554
 Government of India Act 1329, 1684, 1700, 1710, 2791–2
 Government of Ireland Act 1801
 Gowon, Yakubu 24, 2482
 Gozo island 2183
 Gracey, D. D. 1598–9
 Grachev, Pavel 1417
 Graduates General Congress, Sudan 3194
 Graeber, David 95
 Graf, Willi 3525, 3526
 Graham, Gerald 2164
 Graham, Helen 2962–3
 Graham, Loren 2992, 2993, 2994
 Graham, Sylvester 3429
Gramsci, Antonio 1422–7 on Das Kapital 1423
 Bolivarianism 414
 and Bordiga 447 death in jail 2383
 Di Vittorio 997
 dialectics 1423, 2839
 on Giovagnoli 3149
 hegemony 1424, 1426–7, 2247, 3070 influence in Australia 823 on leadership 1424–5
 Modern Prince, The 1425
 Open Marxism 1423–4
 Ordine Nuovo, L' 130, 385
 PCI 1818, 3014
 Prison Notebooks 1146, 1423
 Quaderni 3299
 “Real Dialectics” 1425 on Stalinism 1424
 Togliatti 3298
 wars of maneuver/position 3654
 working class 772
 Gran Círculo de Obreros de México 137, 2279
 Gran Colombia, Republic of 411, 1061, 3706
 Gran Mancomunal de Obreras 112
 Granada 2055, 2332
 Grand National Consolidated Trades Union
 2461, 2567
 Grande, Rutilio 2868
 Grandi, Achille 998, 1823
Grandmothers of the Plaza de Mayo 255–6, 1427–8, 2160
 Grant, Ted 2250
 Grant, Ulysses S. 59, 63, 65–6, 67, 68, 900
 grape boycotts 2499
Grass, Günter 1428–9
 Grasse, Admiral de 86, 2851
 Grassroots Network 2502
grassroots resistance, Argentina 250–3, 1429–32
 Gratien, Pierre Guillaume 2982
 Gratiant, Gilbert 2427
 Grattan, Henry 1786
 Grau San Martín, Ramón 623, 915, 916, 926, 1014, 2152
 Graus, Günter 1342
 Grave, Jean 120, 121, 1124, 2628
 Gray, George 510
 Gray, Obika 1856–65, 1865–8
 Gray, Stan 2786
 Gray, Thomas 2409
 Great Awakening 76, 202, 3614
 Second 214, 2559, 3416, 3616–17
 Great Columbian Republic 411, 3456, 3458 see also Venezuela
 Great Depression
 anti-Nazi resistance 828
 Belize 365
 Brazil 469
 Canada 591, 2562, 2832
 Chile 693
 Jim Crow era 17
 May Day 2259
 Nordic countries 2519, 2520
 poverty 11
 protest and revolution 2756–7 radicalization of workers 2035

- Great Depression (cont'd)
 unemployment 837, 898–9, 2831, 3379–88
 USA 445
 Vietnam 3469
 women's rights 3627
 Zambia 3380–2, 3697
- Great Leap Forward 709–10, 986–7, 2203–4, 2630
- Great Marylebone Radical Association 2550
- Great Northern War 2516
- Great Rebellion, Ireland (1798) 909, 1790–6, 1807, 2402–3, 2544, 2545, 3002, 3024, 3392
- Great Society program 782
- Great Southwest Strike 2724
- Grebel, Conrad 92, 1356–7
- Greco-Turkish War 1454, 3582
- Greece 1432–56
 anarchism 126–7
 anti-dictatorship protests 127, 1432–5
 Balkans 1450, 1452
 civil war 3691
 coup d'état 1432
 ethnic/national identity 3581 ex-Ottoman Christians 1441
 famine 1182, 1436
 formation of 1439
 German invasion of 1182, 1453
 independence 538
junta 1433, 1446, 1447–8 liberation 3581
 military dictatorship 127, 1439
 Muslims 1441
 National Issues 1454
 nationalism 1451–6
 Nazi resistance 1449
 partisan resistance 1436–9 socialism, communism, and the left 1439–51
 squatting 127
 student protests 126, 127, 1434, 1448, 3168, 3170
 torture 1433, 1439
 Triple Occupation 3220 and Turkey 1441, 3349, 3355
 US intervention 1445
 white terror 1444
 women's movement 3581–3
- Greek Civil War 621, 1433, 1438–9
- Greek European Youth Association (EKIN) 1128, 1434
- Greek Force of Cyprus (ELDIK) 947, 948
- Greek General Confederation of Labor 126
- Greek Orthodox Church 1452
 in Russia 2925
- Greeley, Horace 69, 1223, 3618, 3636
- Green, Christina Suszynski 504–5, 1297–8
- Green, Rob 845
- Green, William 3411, 3415
- Green Action Future 1366
- Green Anarchist* 1052
- Green Anarchy* 1052
- green bans movement, Australia 1456–8, 2373
- Green March, Morocco 2338
- Green movement, Germany 125, 192, 198, 1366–7, 3523
 Cohn-Bendit 792
 Dutschke 1036–7
 Kelly 1945
- Green Party, Australia 305
- Green Revolution 3028
- Green Student Network 1039
- Green v. School Board of New Kent County* 753
- Greenback Labor Party 2028
- Greencorn Rebellion, Oklahoma 1458–60
- Greene, J. Megan 185–6, 718–21, 984–6, 2270–2, 2780–1, 3235–7, 3238–9, 3239–40, 3289–90, 3518
- Greene, William B. 156
- Greenham Common 125, 198, 2501
- Greenpeace 1460–2, 3658
 founded 513
 New Zealand 1055, 2528
Rainbow Warrior 199, 1272
- Greensboro sit-in 1973, 2067
- Greenshirts 569, 2857
- Greenville, Treaty of 3525
- Greenwood demonstrations 751
- Greer, Germaine 107, 305, 3563
- Grégoire, Abbé 896, 1525, 2215
- Gregorian Reform 2829
- Gregory, Dick 2412, 3400
- Gregory VII 2829
- Gregson v. Gilbert* 203
- Greineman, Boris 1918
- Grenada 1462–6
 British/French struggle 1264
 Cuba 2462
 education 1465
 imperialism 1664
 independence 351
 PRG 1462, 1464–5, 1864
 Revolution 1462–6
 and US 2462
 US invasion 1864
see also Bishop, Maurice; New Jewel movement
- Grenada National Party (GNP) 1463
- Grenada United Labour Party (GULP) 1463
- Grenat, Stella 2158–60
- Grenelle agreements 1236
- Grenimann, Rabbi Yehiel 1916–18

- Grenville, Richard, of Temple 3530
 Gretz, Michael F. 1033–6, 2116–17, 2444–6, 2446–8
 Grey, Charles, 2nd Earl of 2826
 Grey, Jane 516, 1094
 Grey de Wilton, Arthur 1805
 Grey Wolves 3353
 Gribble, Joe 518
 Grieco, Ruggiero 3298
 Griem, Rowena 1300, 1562–3
 Grier, Barbara 2107
 grievance theory 776–7, 778–80
 Griffin, Carl J. 1040–2, 2720–1, 3211–12
 Griffith, Arthur
 death of 793–4, 972, 1050
 Sinn Féin 971, 1048, 1192, 1799, 3043
 Griffith, D. W.
 Birth of a Nation 2822
 Griffith, Robert 2078
 Griffuelhes, Victor 98, 850, 3219
 Grigg, Nanny 204
 Griggs, Christian A. 1186–7, 2566–7, 2661–2
Grimké, Angelina and Sarah 215, 1467, 3619
 Grinnel, Julius 1569
Griots, Les 1517
Grita de Alcortá Peasant Rebellion 253–4
Grito de Jayuya 38, 2769, 2774
Grito de Lares 382, 383, 2767, 2774, 2844
Grito del Pueblo 111
 Grivas, Georgios 943, 947, 1455
 Groener, Wilhelm 1362
 Grogan, Larry 1803
 Grönemeyer, Herbert 1317
 Gronlund, Laurence: see Lofgreen, Peter Gronniosaw, Ukawsaw 202
 Gross, Jan 2706
 Grosvenor Square rally 218
 Group Areas Act 171, 172, 3087
 Group Aris 1433
 Group of Sound Experimentation (GESI) 2853
 Groupe d'Organisation Nationale de la Guadeloupe (GONG) 1469
 Groupes Anarchistes d'Action Révolutionnaire (GAAR) 121
 Grupo Cultural Feminino CNT 2367
 Groups of Partisan Action (GAP) 1837
 Groups of Revolutionary Commandos (GCR) 3443
Grove Vallejo, Marmaduke 50, 692, 693, 1467–8
 Growth, Employment, and Redistribution (GEAR) policy 875–6
 Grubacic, Andrej 3685–8
 Gruhl, Herbert 1366–7, 1945
Grün 2020 1367
 Grünberg, Carl 904, 1253
Grünberg Archiv 1253
 Grundtvig, N. F. S. 2983
 Grünen, Die (German Green Party): see Green movement, Germany grunge bands 2845
 Grupo, El (the Group) 1164
 Grupo Colina 2646
 Grupo Cultural Femenino 3611
 Grupo Experimental, El 640
 Grupo Luz 138, 618
 Grupo Pueblo 638
 Grupo Tuirá 640
 Grupos Dinamizadores 2355
 Gruppe Funke 2046
 Gruppi Anarchica Federati (GAF) 131
 Gruppi di Azione Patriottica (GAP) 2834
 Gruppo Femminile Luisa Michel 124
 Gruppi di Iniziativa Anarchica (GIA) 131
 Gruppo XXII Ottobre 2815
 Guadalajara, Battle of 1180, 3141
 Guadalajara, Declaration of 2299
 Guadalupe Plan 2279–80, 2541
Guadeloupe 1468–71
 Abolition Day 1471 armed resistance groups 1470
 British invasion 1264
 departmentalization 1469
 emancipation 1267
 French rule 1262–3, 1264, 1266, 1270, 1468–9
 labor protests 1468–71
 mass suicide 1266, 1267 reintroduction of slavery 1267, 1546 trade union membership 1470–1
Guaicaipuro 1471–2, 3631
 Guajardo, Jesús 3711
 Gual y España insurrection 2854
 Gualavisi, Jesús 1056
 Gualberto, João 467
 Gualberto Gómez, Juan 911
 Guam 2303
 Guantánamo Bay 915
 Guaraguao, Los 2751
 Guaraní War 3009
Guardian 1403, 3297
 Guardians of the Oglala Nation (GOONs) 2415, 2629
 Guarocuya: see Enriquillo
Guatemala 1472–82
 anti-liberal revolts 1475–6 base communities 1479 campesinos 1479–80
 Catholic Church 2060
 Christian revolutionary movement 2061
 CIA 240

Guatemala (cont'd)

coffee growing 1476
 Creoles 1475
 Democratic Spring 240, 1472–4
 earthquake 1479
 forced labor 1475
 guerillas 1476–7
 Guevara 241, 1485
 human rights violations 1473
 IMF 1477
 indigenous people's involvement 1473, 1474, 1477 indigo cultivation 1474–5, 1480
 labor movement 1479–82
 massacres 1480
 Mayans 1472, 1473, 1474–5, 3255
 Menchú 2272–3
 music 639–40
 October Revolution 240 popular rebellion 1474–9
 Quiché resistance 3255
 self-defense practice 1480 Spanish colonialism 1474–5
 students 3180
 sugar plantations 1474–5
 UN Security Council 240–1
 United Fruit Company 1472, 1473, 1475 worker struggles 1479–82
see also Tecún Umán

Guatemalan Food and Agricultural Workers' Federation (FESTRAS) 1481
 Guatemalan Human Rights Commission 1481
 Guatemalan National Revolutionary Unity (URNG) 1477–8, 1481, 2272
 Guatemalan Revolution (1954) 1478, 1479
 Guatemalan Section of the Communist Party (PGT) 1473, 1475, 1480

Guattari, Félix 979–84
Anti-Oedipus 980
Capitalism and Schizophrenia 980
 global justice movement 979–84
Kafka: Towards a Minor Literature 980
Molecular Revolution 980, 982
 and Negri 2427
Party Without Bosses 982
Soft Subversion 980
Thousand Plateaus, A 980, 981
What is Philosophy? 980

Guayaquil 1061, 1062
 Guchkov, Aleksandr 2893
 Guebuza, Armando 1262
 Guéi, Robert 881
 Gueiler, Lidia 421
 Guelaguetza Popular 2537
 Guerilla Army of the Poor (EGP) 1480, 1481

Guerilla Coodination Simón Bolívar (CGSB) 1083, 1120, 1168, 2791 guerilla movements, Brazil 466–73 guerilla theater 1482–3
 guerilla warfare 244, 417, 932, 1206, 1487–8, 2266, 2630
 Guérin, Daniel 122, 125, 1284, 1286, 2249, 2766
 Guerra, Armand 116
 Guerra, Leonor 3631
 Guerra Chiquita 919
 Guerra Grande 919
 Guerra Hernández, Héctor 49–50, 685–8, 690–4, 2209–10
 Guerra Montemayor, Román 2297
Guerra Sociale 131
 Guerrero, Amado 2680
 Guerrero, Práxedes 137
Guerrilla Girls 1482, 1483–4
 Guesde, Jules 1756, 1913
Guevara, Ernesto “Che” 1484–91
 African American resistance 18
 agrarian reform 923
 and Bethune 384
 Bolivarianism 414, 1491
Bolivian Diary 1491
 and Castro 624, 625, 626–7, 928–9, 1486–90
 fidelismo 933
 Guatemala 241, 1485
 guerilla warfare 244, 417, 932, 1206, 1487–8, 2467
Guerrilla Warfare 1489 influences on 1163
 J-26-M 916
 land redistribution 933
 “Man and Socialism in Cuba” 1490–1
 as martyr 1216
 Marxism 2249
Motorcycle Diaries 1484
 Guevara, Juan Romualdo de 163
 Guevarism 271
 Guevarist Revolutionary Army (ERG) 1083
 Guha, Ranajit 1325
 Guha Roy, S. 1931, 1935
 Guiana Industrial Workers' Union (GIWU) 1501
Guiana Space Center, Kourou, ecological movements against 1268
 Guianese Movement of Decolonization (MOGUYDE) 1271
 Guianese National Movement 1271
 Guianese Trade Union (UTG) 1271 guild socialism 2620 guilds, Meiji Restoration 1897
 Guillain, Charles 2456, 2457
 Guillaume, James 122–3, 2991
 Guillaume, Peter 3062

- Guillaume-Sam, Vilbrun 1514, 1515, 1522
 Guillemin, Henri 1243
Guillén, Abraham 244, 1491–2, 2771
 Guillén Vicente, Rafael Sebastián: see Marcos, Subcomandante
 Guillermoprieto, Alma 2958
 Guinama 639
 Guinea 1252, 3545
Guinea-Bissau 1492–5
 Cabral 564
 coup 602
 independence 564, 3546
 literacy 1493 nationalist movement 1492–5
 Portuguese rule 1042
 rural liberation 164
 Guinn, Lisa 3005–6, 3639–40
 Guiomar, Princess 3630
Guipuzcoana Revolt 162–4
 Guise family 2950
 Guiteau, Charles 976
 Guiteras, Antonio 915, 926, 2150, 2151, 2152
 Guizot, François 1231, 1242–3
 Gujarat 1585, 1693–4
Gukurahundi 3737
 Gul Mohammed Shah 1933
 Gulab Singh 1928
 Gulags 3159, 3161
 Gulf Council States 1782
 Gulf Oil Company 165, 418
 Gulf War 1054, 1782, 2339, 3438 gun technology 1686–7
 Gun War, Lesotho 2109
 Gunasekera, Vernon 2050
Gunawardena, Don Philip Rupasinghe 969, 1493–5, 2050, 2052
 Gunawardena, Robert 2050
Gunk 2844
Gunpowder Plot 1186–7
 Guomindang (Nationalist Party)
 Blue Shirts 727
 Chen Duxiu 725
 Chiang Kai-Shek 705, 724, 2113, 3723
 Chinese communists 2124
 Li Dazhao 724
 origins of 722
 science and technology 2995–6
 Soviet support 1757–8
 students 720
 Sun Yat-Sen 114, 675, 724, 2630, 3201–2
 Taiwan 2270–1
 US financial support 2202
 VNQZD 1714
 Gupta, C. 1583
 Gupta, Nalini 449, 961
 Guralski, Abraham 2748
 Gurevich, Lyubov 3390, 3551
 Gurindji people 3
 Gurkhas 569, 1686, 1687
 Gush Emunim (Block of the Faithful) 1813, 1814, 1817
 Gusmão, Xanana 1044
 Gustafsen Lake confrontation 585, 586
 Gustav III, of Sweden 1496
 Gustav IV Adolf, of Sweden 3208
Gustav Rebellions 1495–7
 Gustavo, Soledad 123
 Gustavus III, of Sweden 3208
 Gustavus Vasa 2514
 Gutenberg, Johannes 1355, 2753–5
 Gutenberg Revolution 1355, 2753–4
 Guthrie, Arlo 221
 Gutiérrez, Eulalio 2540
Gutiérrez, Gustavo 478, 1497
 Bolivarianism 414
 liberation theology 2059, 2062, 2500
 Gutiérrez, Lucio 1067–8
 Gutiérrez de Mendoza, Juana Belén 124, 3597
Guturama insult 3545
Guyana 1497–502
 abolition of slave trade 1498
 anti-colonialism 1856–7 devaluation of currency 608
 ethnicities 1498–500
 IMF loans 608, 1856
 indentured labor 1498
 People's Progressive Party 1501, 3559
 Political Affairs Committee 1500–1 politics/ethnic divisions 1499 protests and revolts 1497–502
 Rodney 1497–8
 strikes 1499, 1866
 sugar industry 1498, 1500
 trade unionism 1500
 Guzmán Iza, Antonio 277, 1019
 Guzmán Reymoso, Abimael 2644, 2658–60
 Gwiazda, Andrzej 2708
 Gyanchand, Anusuya Bai 3587
 Gyanendra, Prince of Nepal 232
 Haakon VII 2525
 Ha'am, Ahad 3742 habeas corpus 58, 3281, 3529 habeas data right 2597
 Haber, Al 3188
 Habermas, Jürgen 908, 1256, 1572
 Habibie, B. J. 1044, 1726
 Haddad, Niqula 235
 Hadi al-Mahdi, al Sadiq al- 3191
 Hadi al-Mahdi, Imam Sayyid al- 3191

- Hadira, al-* 3335
 Hadj, Messali 44, 1246
 Haeckel, Ernst 1941
 Hafiz, Sultan Mulay 1248
 Hafsid Sultan Hamid 3334
Haganah 358, 359, 372–5
 Hague Congress 157
 Hahn, Dwight R. 786–90
 Hahn, Roger 2991
 Haig, Alexander 1369
 Haile Selassie 1132, 1133, 1138, 1140–1
 Hailey, Lord 3084, 3698
Haiti
 anti-dictatorship 1504
 Avril 1506
 black independence 1267, 1537–40
 cash-cropping 1522
 Catholic Church 1504, 1506–7
 Chirinos 737
 coffee industry 1530 democratic uprising 1503–8
 European Union 1504
 exports 1535–6
 farm units 1538
 forced labor 1522 foreign-led insurgency 1508–10
 freed slaves 214
 French Revolution 1510, 1525, 1539, 1540–5, 3310
 French troops 996
 German settlers 1515
 Germany 1514
 hurricane 1518
 IMF 610
 Indigénisme 1516
 indigo 1530
 kleptocracy 1504
 land reform 737, 1505
 Lavalas 1507, 1508, 1510, 1520–1
 Louis XVI 3307
 massacres 1505, 1506, 1508
 mulattos 1527–9, 1532–3, 1534, 3308–9 as nation 1263, 1529 protest and rebellion 1510–21
 Putsch Government 1506 resistance to US occupation 1521–3 slave rebellion 1525, 3584
 sugar cane workers 1530, 1541 sugar exports 1513 terror regime 1513
 tontons macoutes 278–9, 1503, 1504, 1505, 1506, 1507
 trade agreements 1525, 1536, 1541
 US Marines 1516, 1522
 Vatican 1519 wage levels 1519 white planters 3307–8 women writers 3585
 women's movement 3583–6
 yellow fever 1547
 see also Haitian Revolutions; Saint-Domingue Haitian American Sugar Company (HASCO)
 1521
Haitian Revolutions 442, 1525–37, 1545–7, 3528 Aristide 278 battles 1546
 Chirinos 737
 Dessalines 994–5
 Gabriel's Revolution 297
 independence 1521, 1545–7
 Ogé and Chavannes 2554
 Toussaint Louverture 89, 1545, 1546, 3306–12
 Hajeka, Jiri 654
 Haji Sulong 3268, 3269, 3270
 Hakka tribe 3231
 Hale, Nathan 81
 Halevy, Daniel 464
 Halili, Rigels 29–33, 34–8
 Halimi, Gisèle 3575
 Halisi, C. R. D. 3087
 Hall, Anthony 582–6
 Hall, Louis 585
 Hall, R. 3699
 Hallet, R. 856
 Halliday, Lt. Governor 1689
 Halloway, Nada 954, 2521–2
 Halt All Racist Tours (HART) 3155
 Ham Nghi 3477, 3478
 Hamann, Johann Georg 886, 3190
Hamas 1547–51
 electoral success 1550
 Intifada 1758, 1760
 origins and development 1547–51, 1811
 Hamba, Ali Bash 3335
Hambacher Fest 1348
 Hamburg Club 2824
 Hamburg Massacre 20, 21
 Hamden, John 1097
 Hameed, Abdul 2582
 Hamer, Fannie Lou 73, 653
 Hamilton, Alexander 1302, 3515, 3524–5
 Hamilton, Alice 1742
 Hamilton, Carrie 3015–18
 Hamilton, Charles V. 613
 Hamilton, Cicely 3569
 Hamilton, Henry 84
 Hamilton, James 3460
 Hamlin, Michael 2066–8
 Hammar skjold, Dag 855, 2138, 2397

- Hammett, James 3301
 Hammouda Bey 3334
Hampton, Fred 1551–2
 Han, Jin H. 581–2, 1027–8, 2973–4
 Han-jok chong-yun-hap-hoi (General League of Koreans) 1970
 Han people 715
 Hanchongryun (Korean Confederation of Student Unions) 3185
 Hancock, John 77, 452, 3023
 Hang Dongfang 3287
 Hanga, Kassim 3708, 3709
 Hangu script 1996
Hani, Chris 175, 1552, 2194, 3053, 3105, 3107, 3249
 Haniya, Ismail 1549
 Hanna, Kathleen 2845
 Hannan, Jason 1808–12
 Hannington, Walter 3383
 Hannover Group 1316
 Hanoi, Battle 3471
 Hansen, Nicole B. 1073–6
Happerset case 3623
Hapsburg empire 1142–4
 Austria 317
 collapse of 319, 1749
 Comunero movement 843–5
 ethnic and nationalist revolts 1142–4
 Hungarian autonomy 1619
 Jewish people 1919, 1920
 Luxembourg 2141
 Masaryk 2252
 Netherlands 1034, 2445
 Transylvania 2862–3
 Harara Declaration 3250
 Haras al-Istiqlal (Guardians of Independence) 1778
 Haraszti, Miklos 1618
 Haraway, Donna 2306
 Harbi, Mohammed 44
 Hardayal, Lala 1675
 Hardegger, Margarethe 1609
 Hardie, Andrew 1385
 Hardie, James Keir 860, 1742, 1745, 2820, 3061
 Harding, John 946, 947
 Harding, Neil 2089
 Harding, Warren G. 975, 1013
 Hardstaff, Peter 3648–50
 Hardt, Michael 982, 2369–72
 autonomism 324
 Empire 979, 1399, 1672, 1842, 1845
 Multitude 979, 1399
 on the multitude 1006
Hardy, Thomas 1552–4, 1607, 3151
 London Corresponding Society 2126–7
 Hare, J. Laurence 987–92, 2522–6, 2982–6
 Hari Singh, Maharaja 1929, 1930–1
 Harich, Wolfgang 1340
Harijans 954, 1683, 1684
 Bhoo dan movement 2403
 see also Dalits
 Harison, Casey 1233–4, 2044–5
Harlem Renaissance 393, 1023, 1523, 1554–6, 2428
 Roumain 2872
 Scottsboro case 3003
 Senghor 3007
 Harlem riots 1556, 3397
 Harmel, Michael 3103
Harmony 1185–6, 3417
 Harnack, Arvid 1377
 Harnecker, Camila Piñero 1561–2
Harp, The 860
 Harpers Ferry 57, 90, 532, 533, 534, 2491
 Harpham, Bruce T. 511–14
 Harriman, Job 3063–4, 3418
 Harrington, Michael 2037, 3188
 Harrington, Tim 1415
 Harriott, Joe 611
Harris, Charles 1556–7, 2626, 3093, 3696
 Harris, Isaac 3314
 Harris, Mary: see Mother Jones
 Harris, Mike 2561–2
 Harris, William 155
 Harrison, Benjamin 1564
 Harrison, Hubert 21
 Harrison, J. P. 3234
 Harrison, Kristina Hinds 607–10
 Harrison, Thomas 1101
 Harrison, Wilfred H. 148, 149, 154, 833, 3092
 Harry Thuku Riot 3545–6, 3549
 Hart, Armando 929
 Hart, Steve 1943
hartals (mass work stoppage)
 Bengal partition 1697
 Bose 448
 Gandhi 1330, 1701, 2492–3
 Malaysia 2178
 Pakistan 2578
 Pashtuns 1966
 Sri Lanka 2632
 see also strikes
 Hartley, David 507
 Hartmann, Georg Wilhelm 3066
 harvest failures 254, 501, 1148–9, 1209, 1350, 1899, 2922, 3468
 Harvester case 314, 3563
 Harvey, D. 1398, 1672, 2436
 Harwood, Christopher W. 1563
Hasan al-Banna 1557–60, 1962–3

- Hasegawa, Hiroshi 1893
 Haselrig, Arthur 2120
 Hasenclever, Wilhelm 3066
 Hashemite monarchy 3224
 Haskell, Burnett 861
 Hassan, Moisés 2470
 Hassan II 2337–8
 Hasta Mitra 1725
 Hastings, Warren 368, 1223
 Hatch, Orrin 1752
 Hatch, R. B. 785
Hatikhedá Revolt 371
 Hatmaker, Amy 532–4, 565, 869–70, 1333–5, 2125–6, 3002–3, 3533
 Hats and Caps, of Sweden 1496
 Hatta, Mohammad 1729, 1732
 Indonesian independence 1730
Hatta Shūzō 133, 136, 1561
 Hatter's War 2524
Hatuey 1561–2
 Haudenosaunee 2620
 Haughey, Charles 2573
Hauptmann, Gerhart 116, 1562–3
Weber, Die 1562, 3036
 Hausa-Fulani 2482, 2484
 Hausa-Ibo Riot 2482
 Hauserne, Marie Carpenter 1293
 Haussmann, Georges Eugène 2764
 Havana Workers' Federation (FOH) 2151
Havel, Václav 1563
 arrested 951
Charter 77 654, 3433
 criticizing communism 949
 Global Day of Action 1392
 and KSS-KOR 2698 opposition party 2742
 as president 2509, 3434
 and student movement 3176
 Velvet Revolution 1026
 Havelock, Henry 1690
 Havemann, Katia 1345
 Havemann, Robert 387
Hawaii, resistance to US invasion and occupation 1563–6
 Hawaiian League 1564
 Hawatmeh, Nayef 2011
 Hawke, Bob 305, 311, 3563
 Hawkins, John 517
 Hawley, Joseph 899
 Hawthorne, Nathaniel 1222
 Hay, John 3675
 Hay-Bunau Varilla, Treaty of 2593
Haya de la Torre, Victor Raúl 47–8, 1566–8, 2218, 2648
 Hayden, Tom 2619, 3188
 Hayes, Roland 1555
Haymarket tragedy 1568–70
 commemoration of 259 and Goldman 1411
 IWPA 2030
 police brutality 2259
 repression of anarchists 157, 1734 working hours 1643 worldwide impact 106, 158, 898
 Haynes, John 840
Haywood, Big Bill 836, 1570–2, 1735, 2030, 2033, 2623
 Haywood, Harry 394
 Hazel Hurricane 1518
 Hazlett, Hugh 3047
 Heagney, Muriel 3562
 Healey, Dan 3016 health hazards 1881
 Healy, Kevin 787
 Hearts of Oak 1785
 Heath, Nick 119–22, 141–3
 Heathorn, Stephen 2877
 Heathrow Airport 1040
 Heaven and Earth Society 3231
 Heaven Helps Those Who Help Themselves
 1229 Hébert, Jacques René 1277, 1291, 2849
 on sans-culottes 2969
 Hébertistes 962, 1288, 1291–2, 2849
 Hedmark peasantry 2513
 Hédouville, Joseph d' 3311, 3312
Hegel, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich 1572–4, 3679
 and Bakunin 333
 dialectics 1423, 1572, 2230, 2836
 French Revolution 2836
 as influence 771, 973, 3679
 Marx 907, 2229–30
 master/slave dialectic 356, 2839
Phenomenology of Mind 2836
 revolutions 1572–3
Science of Logic 2837
 Hegelian Marxism 324
 hegemony 1218, 1424, 2247, 3070
 Heiberg, Peter Andreas 989
 Heidegger, Martin 904, 1256, 2213
 Heidelberger Program 1581
 Heiligendamm: see G8 protests, Heiligendamm
 Heiman, Larry W. 464–5, 1585–7, 2155
Heimin shimbun 2566
 Heiminsha (Commoners' Society) 3595
 Heimwehr 320
 Heine, Heinrich 2140
 Heinrich, Rolf 1345
 Heinz Corporation 3453

- Heinz USA 1170
 Heke, Hone 2206
 Hélder Câmara, Dom 2058
 Helena, Heloisa 500
 Helg, Aline 911–14
Hellenic Democracy 126
 Helms, Jesse 2275
 Helms-Burton Act 3572
 Helsinki 2915
 Helsinki Accords 654, 1618
 human rights 341
 Helsinki Committees 224
 Helsinki Final Act 3049, 3433
 Helsinki Summit 3345
 Helsinki Watch 817
 Helvétius, Claude-Adrien 1409, 1602
 Hem Chieu 568–9
 Hémerly, Daniel 1713–18, 3465–71, 3471–5,
 3475–8, 3479–86, 3486–9
 Hemingway, Ernest 7
 Hemispheric Conference to End the War in Vietnam 2786
 Hemispheric Social Alliance 3645, 3655
 Henderson, Arthur 528, 3061
 Hendrix, Jimi 221
 Heng Samrin 575, 1960
 Henninger, Max 1845–7
 Hennings, Emmy 953
 Henoko beach 1888
 Henri IV, of France 1068, 1228
 Henris, John Robert 593–5, 1117–21
 Henry, Claudius 1860
 Henry, Émile 120
 Henry, Hubert Joseph 1022
 Henry, Milton 394
 Henry, Richard 394
 Henry, William “Jerry” 216
 Henry I, of Haiti 1511
 Henry IV, of England 1803–4
 Henry of Navarre 1068, 2950
 Henry the Navigator 186, 1654
 Henry VI, of England 514
 Henry VII, of England 509, 590, 1804
 Henry VIII, of England break with Rome 514, 1092
 Kildare rebellion 1805
 Reformation 1093
 Hérard, Charles 1512
 Herbst, Iosif 541
 Herder, Johann Gottfried 1142, 3189
 Herero people cattle breeders 3539
 communities 2390
 German genocide 2392, 2396, 3603
 resistance 3539–40
 Truppspieler 2396
 UN 2530
 Herero Proclamation 2393
 Heres, Tomás de 2949
 heretics 1355
 Hernández, Berenice 3596–601
 Hernández, María Julia 2060
 Hernandez, Melba 3574
 Hernandez, Ortega 2296
 Hernández Juárez, Francisco 2299
 Hernández Martínez, Maximiliano 2020, 2223,
 2224, 2225–6
 Hernandez Toledo, José 3297
 Herrera Campins, Luis 3438
 Herrnhut 2323
 Herrnhut, Rudolf 1339, 1340
 Herscher, Walter R. 357, 897–8, 2215–16
 Herstigte Nasionale Party 2626
 Hertell, Elisha 3619
 Herter, Christian 196
 Hertzog, Albert 1088
 Hertzog, Barry 2397
 Hertzog, Enrique 430
 Hertzog, J. B. M. 2, 2111
 Hervey, Frederick 1786
 Herwegh, Georg 333
 Herz, Alice 220
Herzen, Alexander Ivanovich 334, 976,
 1574–5, 2763
 Herzl, Theodore 372, 3741, 3742
 Hess, Moses 2230, 3741
 Hetch Hetchy Dam 1119 heteronomy/autonomy 622
 Hetherington, Henry 2543
 Heureaux, Ulises 1016
 Heutsz, J. B. van 1720
 Heyrick, Elizabeth 204
Hezbollah 636, 1575–7, 1811
 counterdemonstration 636 and Islamic Jihad 2072
 martyrdom 1576
 Nasrallah 2404
 suicide bombings 1577
 Hêzên Rizgariya Kurdistan (HRK) 2011
 Hib (Haemophilus influenza type b) 2998 hibakusha (survivors of atomic bombs) 1887
 Hibbat Tziyyon 3741, 3742
 Hibbert, Lennie 611
 Hicks, William 2164
Hidalgo y Costilla, Miguel 1578–9, 2281
 Hideyoshi Toyotomi 1996
 Higgins, H. B. 3563
 Higgins, William 1577
 Higgonson, John 3425
 High Treason Incident 2566

- hijab* (Muslim headscarf) 644, 1644–5, 1766, 1774
 hijackings 400, 1576, 3443
Hijo del Ahuizote, El 137
HIJOS Movement, Children of the Disappeared 256, 1579–81
Hilferding, Rudolf 321, 322, 354, 1581–2, 1649, 2243
 Finance Capital 1581, 1582
 Hill, Christopher 2249, 2988, 2989
 Hill, Joe 1204
 Hill, Robert 22
 Hille, Peter 1609
 Hillquit, Morris 3063, 3065
 Hilsner trials 2252
 Himmler, Heinrich 1593–4, 3512
 Hindenburg, Paul von 1178, 1375, 1590, 2833
Hindoo Patriot 1689, 1712
Hindu, The 2741
 Hindu Code Bill 645, 3586
 Hindu Communalism 1582–4, 1692
 Hindu Mahasabha 1328, 1330, 1331, 1583, 1680
 Hindu–Muslim unity 1326, 1331, 1921, 2388, 2430
Hindu nationalism 1582–5, 1684, 2574
 Hindu society 954, 1583, 1692
 Hindustan Republican Association (HRA) 1677, 3041
 Hindustan Socialist Republican Army 1682, 1710
 Hindustan Socialist Republican Association (HSRA) 449, 1677, 3041
 Hindustani, Hojji Muhammadjan 3244
Hindutva 1331, 1582–5, 1692–4, 2435
 Hinnawi, Colonel Sami al- 3222
 Hiratsuka Raicho 3595, 3596
 Hirohito, Emperor 194, 1848, 1889
 Hiroshima atomic bomb 194, 195, 728, 1729, 1885, 1887, 1890
 Hiroyuki, Shima 1903
Hirschfeld, Magnus 464, 1300, 1585–7, 2103
 Sappho und Sokrates 1586, 2103
 WhK 2093, 2104
 Hirst, Paul 2620
 Hispaniola 601–2, 1510, 1561, 2079–80
 see also Dominican Republic Historical Association of Kenya 3043
 historical materialism 375, 376, 821, 2231–4, 2240
Historical Materialism 2249
 history, theory of 2240
 Hitchmough, Samuel 877–8
Hitler, Adolf 1587–94, 1594–5
 anti-Semitism 1589
 assassination plot 1594–5
 and Austria 320
 as chancellor 2832
 coming to power 3130, 3386
 coup attempt 1365
 downfall 1593–4
 foreign policy 1592–3
 Führer (leader) 1591
 German Nazism 1587–94 invading USSR 451
 Mein Kampf 1375, 1590, 2271–2
 rise of 1373, 3678
 and Stalin 1377
 Yugoslavia 3682
 Hitler–Stalin Pact 73, 1372
HIV/AIDS
 ACT UP 8
 Cuba 924
 drugs for 3113
 South Africa 876, 2195, 3312
 Zimbabwe 2364
 Hizb ut-Tahrir 1811
 Hizbul Mujahedeen (Party of Freedom Fighters) 1935
 Hladik, Radim 1391–5
 Hlaváček, Michal 1619
 Hlayhel, Raed 992
Hlinka, Andrej 1595–6, 3293
 Hlinka Guard 1596, 3048
 Hlinka Slovak People's Party (HSPP) 1596, 3048, 3293
 HMI (Islamic Students' Association) 1724
 Hmong tribesmen 2055
 Hnchakists 285
 Hnutí Duha 1391
Hô Chi Minh (Nguyen Tat Thanh) 1596–601
 Asian Marxism 730, 2249
 in Canton 3467
 communism 3472
 ICP 1958 prestige 3480 return from USSR 1714
 revolution 1216, 1219
 Revolutionary Path 1597 at Tan Trao 1716
 in Thailand 3258
 Hô Chi Minh City (Saigon) 1600, 3487, 3488
 Hô Chi Minh Trail 222, 1599, 3480, 3483
 Hoa Hao 3480
 Hoang Ha Tam 2664
 Hobart-Houghton, D. 148
Hobbes, Thomas 1601
 Element of Law, The 1601 Leviathan 1601
 multitude 2370
 social contract 75, 1113, 1601 state of nature 95
Hobbies, The 2357

- Hobkirk's Hill 86
Hobsbawm, Eric 3211, 3282
Black Dwarf, The 2261
on Mafia 2160
Marxism 2249
poverty/revolution 296, 778 social banditry 1944
Hobson, J. A. 1649
Höchberg, Carl 1941
Hoche, Lazare 894, 895, 1792–3, 1795–6, 2545
hod begari system 2576
Hodensaunee (Iroquois) 2412
Hodges, Donald 2283
Hodgkin, Roger 1103
Hodgkin, Thomas 207–8
Hodgson, Frederick 3669
Hodña, Michal Miloslav 3051
Hoel, Halvor 2518
Hoffman, Melchior 93, 1357, 2831
Hoffmanowa, Klementyna 3544
Hofmann, Melchior 2831
Hogan, Walter 2676
Høgsbjerg, Christian 530–1, 2526–7
Hohenzollern dynasty 1373, 1749, 1920, 2856
Hoho, Chieftainess 3602
Hojč, Samuel 1620
Hokkaido Newspaper 1894
Hokuriku Electric 192–3
Holbach, Paul-Henri Thiry, Baron d' 1111, 1601–2
Holbrooke, Richard 2003
Holdsworth, William 590
Holeček, Lubomir 3172, 3173
Holland: see Netherlands
Holloway, John 323, 981, 2620, 3711–14
Hollywood Ten 1602–3
Holmstrom, Nancy 772, 2249
Holocaust
Begin on 358 genocide 2497
homosexuals 2093
labor camps 1183
Nazi Party 1594
Werfel 287
Holt, Joseph 1788
Holt, P. M. 3198
Holt, T. 1868
Holtby, Winifred 3569
Holy Alliance 2864
Holy Club 3520
Holy Roman Empire 1347, 2987
Holzmann, Johannes: see Hoy, Senna
Hombres de Maiz 639
Home colony 3418
Home Rule Association 2616, 2617
Home Rule Bill 783, 1045, 3043
Home Rule Leagues 1699–700, 1701
Homecoming Operation 199, 2303
homeless 1994, 2000
Homes not Roads 1039
Homestead strike 379 homoeotericism 1300 homophile groups 2093
Homophilenbewegung 2106
homophobia 2572, 3016–17
Homosexual Law Reform Society 2096 homosexual rights 1300, 1609
homosexuality
Brand 464
Britain 2263
decriminalization 2263
Hirschfeld 464
Mackay 2155
Nujoma on 2531
Zimbabwe 2364
Homosexuellen Aktion Westberlin (HAW)
2106
Homosexuellen Arbeiter Aktion Westberlin
(HAAW) 2106
Homosexuelleninitiative Berlin 2105
Honduran Commission for Human Rights 614
Honduras 1603–4, 2080
Despard 993
FENACH 2128–9
General Strike 1603–4
indigenous peoples 2080
Lempira 2080
López Gutiérrez 2018
MISURA 2473
music 640
Soccer War 2956–7
Zelaya 2128–9
Honduras Liberal Party 2018
Honecker, Erich 1341–2, 1344, 2509, 3078
Hong Kil-dong 1997
Hong Kong 1604–6, 1658
see also World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Hong Kong
Hong Kong Alliance in Support of Democratic Movement in China 1605
Hong Kong Federation of Trade Unions 1605
Hong Kong People's Alliance 3651
Hong Kyung-rae's Rebellion 1997
Hong Phong 3469
Hong Xiuquan 717
Hongqi (Red Flag) 3505
Honort, Jean-Jacques 1507
Hood, Alexander 3154
Hook, Paulus 83
Hook, Sidney 3187

- Hooke, Robert 2989
 Hooper, John 516
 Hoopes, Darlington 3065
 Hoover, Herbert 445, 3411
 Hoover, J. Edgar
 Black Panthers 751
 on Goldman 1411, 1412
 King 752–3
 McCarthyism 3149
 Scottsboro case 3003
 Hopi tribe 39
 Hopkinson, Henry 945
 Hopper, John 3280
 Horat, Mario 868
horizontalidad (social relationship) 1086, 1740 Horkheimer, Max 12, 904, 905 and Adorno 905, 907–8, 1255
 Dialectic of Enlightenment 907, 1255
 Frankfurt School 1253, 1254
 Longing for the Totally Other 906
 Marxism 2249
 Studies in Prejudice 906
 Studies on Authority and Family 1302
 Horne, John 3531
Horne Tooke, John 546, 1606–7, 3024, 3151
 Horner, Arthur 524
 Horney, Karen 1256
 Horowicz, Alejandro 274–6
 Horse Drivers' Union 152, 1414, 3092
 Hortense, Queen 2457
 Horthy, Miklós 129, 1175
 Hørup, Viggo 991
 Hosea riot 3316
 Hosokawa, Morihiro 1910 hospitality, codes of 1385 hospitality houses 634, 3420 hostage-taking
 Iran 1964
 Iraq 1831
 M-19 2149
 Mali 2182
 Silesia 3037
 strikers 277
Hôtel de Ville, Paris 1243, 1244, 1607–8, 2850
 Hotham, Charles 1145
 Hou Wailu 3235
 Hou Youn 569, 571, 1959
 Hough Riot, Chicago 3400
 Hountondji, J. P. 92
 Houphouët-Boigny, Felix 880, 881, 884, 1252
 Hourani, Akram 3222, 3223, 3224
House, Callie 1608–9
 House Un-American Activities Committee
 (HUAC) 220, 221, 1602, 3630
 Houses of Hospitality 634, 3420 housewife feminism 3596
 Houtman, Cornelis de 1718
 Houtman, G. 303, 555
 Howard, Catherine 516
 Howard, Ebenezer 2048
 Howard, John 5, 312
 Howard, M. C. 1670
 Howe, Earl 3154
 Howe, William 79, 81, 82
 Howell, J. 1459
 Howrah–Sibpur Conspiracy Case 2874
 Hoxha, Enver 30, 32, 339, 830
Hoy 915
Hoy, Senna 1609
 Hsaya San 553, 2977, 2978–81
Hsiang River Review 2200
 Hsing Chung Hui (Revive China Society) 732,
 733, 734, 3201
 Hu Feng 708
 Hu Jintao 3705
 Hu Nim 571, 574, 1959, 1960
 Hu Shi 713, 3236
 Hu Yaobang 3284–5, 3286
 death 3286
 Hua Guofeng 2205
 Hua Hsing Hui (Society for Revival of the Chinese Nation) 733
 Huampu, Edwin 433
 Huanuni miners 421
 Huasipungo 2064
 Hubbard, Gill 1313
 Hubbard, Jocelyn 1856, 3559
 Hubei Provincial Federation of Labor 2124
 Huber, Kurt 3525, 3526
 Huberman, Leo 2249
 Hubmaier, Balthasar 93
 Hudicourt, Max 1517
 Huei, Pang Yang 1596–601
Huerta, Dolores 1609–10
 Huerta, Victoriano 618–19, 999, 2277, 2278, 2539–40, 3431, 3489
 Hughes, Andrew 1200
 Hughes, Francis 2967
 Hughes, Holly: Clit Notes 1191
 Hughes, Langston 1024, 1554, 1555, 1556, 2428, 2872
 Hughes-Peynado Plan 1013
 Hugo, Jacob Moller 1557
Hugo, Victor 1610–11
 Communards 402
 on Louis-Napoleon 440
 works 1610–11
 Huguenots 1068–9, 2950, 3494
 Hugues, Victor 1264
Huk Rebellion 1611–17, 2674–5, 2676

- Hukbalahap Communist Party (PKP) 1611–12, 1614–15, 2674–5
- Hull House 10, 11
- Hülßenbeck, Richard 953
- human capital 2348
- human rights abuses 1473
Argentina 254–7
Casement on 619–20
Guatemala 1473
Helsinki Accords 341
Menchú 2272–3
Paraguay 2597–8, 2606
rights to identity 1428
Uruguay 3406
- Human Rights Watch 959, 3246
- humanism 1355, 1940
- Humanist Way* 2876
- humanitarian intervention 224, 2997
- Humanité* 823, 1913, 3219
- Humbert, Jean-Joseph 1788, 1794–5, 1796
- Humboldt, Alexander von 411
- Humboldt Park riots, Chicago 3400
- Hume, Allan Octavian 1695
- Hume, David 1113, 2873
- Humffray, John Basson 1144, 1145
- humor, revolutionary 814, 815
- Humphrey, Hubert 1975
- Hun Sen 571, 1961
- Hundred Flowers Campaign 708–9, 985, 2203, 3479
- Hundred Years' War 514
- Hung Fu Hui 734
- Hung Hsiu-chuan 3231, 3233
- Hung-kuang 2309
- Hungarian Academy of Sciences 1619
- Hungarian Revolution 996, 1620
- Hungarian Soviet Republic 128
- Hungary 1617–31
anarchism 127–9
anarchosyndicalism 3228
anti-communist protests 1617–19
April Laws 1623
Arrow Cross 1175
Catholic Church 1618
Centralists 1622
Congress of Nationalities 1621–2
Hapsburgs 1623
Jewish people 1920
Language War 1619–20, 1621
Magyars 1620–2
protests 1619–22
Reform Era 1624
revolt 1339
Revolution (1848) 1622–4, 1630–1, 2508
Revolution (1956) 1625–30, 2387, 2508,
2857–8, 2865
Soviet invasion 1819, 2387, 3062
Stalinist repression 1625 women radicals 1630–1
women's movement 3632
- Hunger Marches 523–5, 3384, 3559
- hunger strikes
Bolivian miners' wives 420
Sands 1798, 2967–8
- Hungerford, Edward 289
- Hünkâr Iskelesi, Treaty of 538
- Hunkpapas 900
- Hunt, Henry "Orator" 546, 1631, 2543, 2661
- Hunt, Leamon 2818
- Hunt, Lynn 1285
- Hunt, R. N. 2238
- Hunter, Tera 774
- Hunter Commission 1702
- Hunters' Lodges 594
- Hunters Point riot, San Francisco 3401
- hunting rights 1119–20
- Huntington, Samuel 889
- Huq, Zahurul 2579
- Hurban, Josef 1621, 3051
- Hurlock, slave 1872
- Huron Indians 1203
- Hurson, Martin 2967
- Hurst, Fannie 1555
- Hurston, Zora Neale 1024, 1555
- Hurtado, Osvaldo 1062, 1063
- Hus, Jan (John Huss) 1355, 2323, 2829
- Husák, Gustáv 654, 1563, 2745, 3174, 3433–4
- Hüsni, Kâzım 3358
- Husri, Sati' al- 1776
- Hussain, Imam 1770
- Hussein, Saddam: see Saddam Hussein
- Hussein Bey I 3334
- Hussein dynasty 3334
- Hussein of Jordan 239, 399, 400
- Husseini, Faisal 1814
- Husserl, Edmund 1255
- Hussites 1355, 2829
- Huszádik Századi* journal 3228
- Hut, Hans 93
- Hutcheson, Francis 3054
- Hutchinson, Anne 155, 1632–3, 3613, 3619
- Hutchinson, Leslie 611
- Hutchinson, Thomas 3615
- Hutter, Jacob 93, 1633
- Hutterites 93, 1633–4, 3417
- Hutton, Drew 107
- Huttwil League 3213
- Hutu militiamen 852
- Huxley, Thomas 2007

- Huy Kanthoul 577, 578
 Huynh Nghi 568
 Huynh Phu So 1716
 Hwang, Dongyoun 135–7
 Hyde, Douglas 1799, 3681
Hyde, Evan Anthony 366, 1634–5
 Hyde Park riot 2808
 Hyderabad 1397
 hydroelectric project, Paraguay 2601, 2607 hydrogen bomb testing 1272
 Hyndman, Henry Mayers 2341, 3061
 Hyundai chaebol 1984, 1989
- Ialá, Kumba: see Yalla, Kumba
 Iatrides, J. 1438
 Ibadan, Bashorun Ogunmola 1641
 Ibadan people 3677
 Ibáñez del Campo, Carlos 112, 692, 1468, 1753
 Ibarra de Piedra, Rosario 2291
 Ibárruri Gómez, Dolores 2962, 3611
 Iberian Federation of Libertarian Youth (FIJL) 146 Iberian Liberation Movement (MIL) 147
 Ibn Khaldun Center 1638
 Ibrahim, Fatima Ahmed 3199
Ibrahim, Mirza 1637–8
Ibrahim, Saad Eddin 1638
 Ibrahim Bek 3243–4
 Ibrahim Khan, Muhammad 1930
 Ibrahim Pasha 2073
 Ibsen, Henrik 116, 2524
 Ibsen, Sigurd 2525
Icaria Utopian Community 1638–9, 3417
 Iceland
 Danish rule 2516
 famine 2517
 fishing rights 2517 public sector cuts 2520
 see also Nordic countries
 Ichiko Kamachiko 1848
Ideal 3431 identity, rights to 1428 identity movements 783 identity politics 2427, 2538
 Idris I 2779
 Idstedt, Battle of 2985
 Ieng Sary 574, 1958–9, 1960, 1961
 Ieu Koeus 577
Ife–Modakeke conflict 1640–1
 Ife people 3677, 3678
 Iftikhar-ud-Din, Mian 2580, 2581
 Iganie, Battle of 2716
 Igbo secessionists 2484
 Igbo Women’s War 3546, 3549
 Iggy Pop and the Stooges 2777
- Iglesias, María Cristina 3454
 Ignace, William Jones 586
 Ignatin, Noel 3070
 Ijaw Youth Movement 2485
 Ijaw Youths Council (IYC) 2479–80, 2484
 Ikeda, Takashi 1561
 Iliescu, Ion 2858, 2859, 2861
 Illegal Oaths Act 656, 3395
 Illia, Arturo 244, 863
 Illich, Ivan 2058
 illiteracy 954–5, 1714
 Illuminati 3146
 ILO: see International Labor Organization
 Iloilo, Ratu Josefa 1200
ilustrados, Philippines 2667, 2668, 2669
 Image Theater 407
 Imbert Barrera, Antonio 1017, 1019
 Imbokodvo National Movement (INM) 3206, 3747
 IMF: see International Monetary Fund
 Imlay, Gilbert 3541
 immediatism 979, 2491
immigrants 1641–3
 Britain 511–12
 housing discrimination 1644 politicization of 1645 social conflict, France 1643–7
 US protests 1641–3, 2021, 2259–60
 Immigration Act 2589
 Immigration Reform and Control Act 1641
 Immorality Act 171
 Imperial Academy of Sciences 2993
 Imperial Blue Book 2394
 Imperial British East African Company 3369
 Imperial Cigar Manufacturing and Trading Company 3034
imperialism 1647–53, 1654–64, 1664–73
 capitalism 1647–53
 exploitation 1662–3
 globalization 1670–2, 2250
 historical evolution 1654–64
 Industrial Revolution 1659
 industrialization 1659–60
 Kautsky 1652
 Lenin on 2245
 modernization to globalization 1664–73
 nationalism 1660, 2246
 revolution 1649–52
 USA 1660, 1663, 1664
 import-substitution 3092, 3351
 Imre, Baláys 2866
Imroz 1160
 Imsul Rebellion 1997
 In Tam 573
 Inca Plan 3430

- Inca Revolt, Last 3337–9
- Incas
- Atahualpa 1923–4, 2876
 - Conquistadors 2876
 - empire restored 1923
 - Machu Picchu 1484
 - Rumiñahui 2876
 - see also* Andean communities
- Incondicional, O* 153
- Inconfidência Mineira 484–5
- indentured labor
- America 75, 211
 - Caribbean 1031, 1512
 - Fiji 1197, 3425
 - Guyana 1498
 - Indian tea plantations 1695
- Independence Front 1617–18
- Independence train station bombing 1570
- Independent Central of Rural Workers and Campesinos (CIOAC) 2287
- Independent Class Syndicalism (SIC) 1082
- Independent Farmers' Coordination (CCI) 3427
- Independent Labor Party 331
- Independent Labour Party, Scotland 2820, 2821
- Independent Labour Party (ILP), Britain 520, 528, 1748, 2595
- Hardie 860, 2820
- Independent Labour Party (ILP), India
- Ambedkar 54, 958
- Independent Media Center 1309, 3662
- Independent Peace Association 3176
- Independent Social Democratic Party of Germany (USPD) 826, 1359, 1373–4, 1581, 1942, 3722
- Independent Socialist Party, Argentina 271
- Independent Socialist Party of Hungary (ISP) 128
- Independent Women's Association, GDR 3633
- Independent Worker Unity (UOI) 2298
- Index of Forbidden Books 1111, 2316
- India
- armed struggle 1673–9
 - British rule 1662, 1694–700
 - caste system 1582–3, 1685–6
 - civil disobedience movement 1680–4
 - civil service 1695
 - civilian revolt 1687–91
 - communist parties 3586–7
 - constitutionalism 1684–5
 - deindustrialization 1662
 - extremism 1696–7
 - fascism 1692–4
 - French vs. British 86–7
 - Great Rebellion 1685–92
 - Hindutva 1331, 1582–5, 1692–4, 2435
 - Home Rule movement 1699–700
 - illiteracy 954–5
 - independence 1331, 1660, 1680–4
 - Independence Day 2431
 - independence movement 1673–9
 - inflation 1700
 - jute mills 1700
 - Karnataka State Farmers' Association 2635
 - and Kashmir 1930–6
 - land reforms 2421
 - Maoism 2421
 - mass peasant revolt 2422
 - Munda Rebellion 2372
 - nationalism 1673–4, 1694–700
 - Naxalite Movement 2265, 2266, 2421–5, 3587
 - non-violent non-cooperation movement 1700–4
 - partition/violence/migration 1330–1, 2577, 3586
 - patriarchy 3589
 - peasant resistance 3461
 - post-World War II upsurge 1704–8
 - Rampa rebellions 2802–3
 - rape 3589
 - Santal Rebellion 2970–1
 - secret societies 1674
 - Sepoy Revolt 1685–7
 - student protests 1698
 - Students Congress 3180
 - tribals 2970
 - women's movement 3586–90
 - working-class strikes 2793
 - see also* Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand; Nehru, Jawaharlal
- India Indigo Company 1712
- Indian Act 583
- Indian Association 1695
- Indian Councils Act 1691, 1696, 1699
- Indian Evidence Act 3589
- Indian Independence Act 1932
- Indian Independence Committee 1676
- Indian Movement of Chimborazo (MICH) 480
- Indian Muslim Students Union 3180
- Indian National Army (INA) 1679, 1704–5, 1710, 2404
- see also* Azad Hind Fauz
- Indian National Congress 1965–70
- creation of 1695
 - Gandhi 2493–4
 - Government of India Act 2791–2
 - and Muslim League 2573
- Indian national liberation 1708–11
- Indian Ocean tsunami 3643
- Indian Peacekeeping Force (IPKF) 2741, 3251, 3252

- Indian Renaissance Institute 2876
Indian Sociologist 1675
 Indian Territory 58, 59, 68
 Indian Women's Association 3603
 Indian Workers' Choir 151
 Indian Workers' Industrial Union 151, 3034
 Indians of All Tribes 2413 see also Native Americans
Indicatore Genovese 2266
 Indies Social Democratic Organization (ISDV) 1728
 Indigénisme 1516
 Indigenous Authorities of Colombia (AICO) 803
 Indigenous Clandestine Revolutionary Committee-General Headquarters (CCRI-CG) 2212
 Indigenous Environmental Network 2417, 2419
 Indigenous Organization of Antioquia (OIA) 2791 indigenous peoples, oral histories 3601
 Indigenous Peoples Council 258
 Indigenous Peoples Participation Program 258
 Indigenous Popular Committee of Oaxaca (CIPO)
 2536
 Indigenous Resistance Council, Mexico 2289
 Indigenous Social Alliance (ASI) 804, 2791
 Indigo Commission 1712
 indigo cultivation 1474–5, 1530, 1541, 2493, 2956
Indigo Rebellion 1711–13
 individualism 76, 120, 1173–4, 1409
 Indo-Lanka Accord 2633, 3527
 Indo-Pakistani War 1160
Indochina 1713–17
 Chinese/Soviet influence 3486
 education 1714
 France 44, 568, 3473
 Free France 1713
 PCF 225–6
 World War II and liberation in 1713–17
Indochina War I 1596, 1599, 3471–5
Indochina War II 1600, 2663, 3479–86
 Indochina War III 3262–3, 3486–9
 Indochinese Communist Party (ICP) 1958
 see also Communist Party of Indochina (PKI)
 Indochinese Democratic Front 3470
Indonesia 1718–34 anti-Suharto protests 1724–6
 colonial protests 1718–21
 Dutch colonial system 1718–21, 3199–200 financial crisis 1430 forced cultivation 1719
 independence 3200
 Petition of Fifty 1723
 Portuguese traders 1718
 pro-democracy protests 1721–4 revolution and counterrevolution 1727–34
 Suharto, fall of 3273
 terror 1733
 World War II 3200
 Indonesian Center for Labor Struggles (PPBI)
 1726
 Indonesian Democratic Party (PDI) 1722, 1725
 Indonesian Legal Aid Foundation (YLBHI) 1723
 Indonesian Nationalist Party (PNI) 1722, 1724,
 1729, 3199
 Indonesian Socialist Party (PSI) 1730
 Indonesian Students' Action Front (FAMI) 1723 Indonesian Students in Solidarity with Democracy (SMID) 1723
 Indulgents 1291–2
 Industrial Aid Society (IAS) 3095
 Industrial and Commercial Workers' Union (ICU)
 152, 154, 832, 1414, 2222, 2385, 3696
 South African branch 2395, 3092
Industrial Areas Foundation 49
 Industrial Conciliation Act (ICA) 3092, 3094,
 3096, 3728, 3729–30, 3734
 Industrial Disputes Act 3728
 Industrial Disputes Investigation Act 588
Industrial Freedom 3418
 Industrial Paraguya 2608
 Industrial Peace Act 2676
 Industrial Policy Resolution 2433
 Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act 589
 Industrial Revolution
 Britain 2340, 2566
 development 1667
 Germany 1352
 and global economy 1647
 imperialism 1659
 Luddites 2133
 Marx on 2232
 modernization 1665
 Morris 2341
 and utopian communities 3416
 Industrial Socialist League 152
 Industrial Trainee System (ITS) 1994
 Industrial Workers of Africa 151, 152
Industrial Workers of the World (IWW) 1734–9
 anarchism 98
 anarchosyndicalism 109, 161–2
 Australia 315, 1738–9, 2039
 Bread and Roses Strike 502–4
 Canada 110, 587
 Chile 112
 Debs 974, 2032
 draft evasion 2489
 Finland 119

- Flynn 1204
 Haywood 836, 1571
 Indian Workers' Industrial Union 151
 and Knights of Labor 1978, 2021
 Lawrence mills 2623
 London, Jack 1734–8, 2128
 Marine Transport Workers 1752–5
 May Day 1570
 Mexican Revolution 2279
 Mother Jones 2345
 New Zealand 139, 830
 One Big Union 1734, 1738
 Paterson Silk Strike 2623 and PLM 2162
 revitalized 160
 Sinclair on 3041
 and Socialist Party 2489
 SolFed 3072
 South Africa 3092
 spontaneity 157
 unemployment 3383
 Villa 2540
Indymedia global justice campaign 1388, 1397, 1739–40, 3662 infant mortality rates 268 infanticide 1871, 3583
 info shops 324
 Informations et Liaisons Ouvrières 3063
Infoshops 1740–1
 Ingenieros, José 270
 Inghinidhe na hEireann (Daughters of Erin) 1415
 Iñiguez, General 2642
 Initiative Against Economic Globalization
 (INPEG) 1391
 Initiative of Black People in Germany 326
 Initiative for Peace and Human Rights 1345
 Inkatha Freedom Party (IFP) 3084, 3086, 3089
 Inkiov, Dimitar 538
Inkululeko 455
Inkululeko-Freedom 3105
 INLA: see Irish National Liberation Army Inner City Voice 2067
 Innis, Roy 870
Innya Minya Thanbanda Apwe 553
 İnönü, Mustafa İsmet 3355, 3357, 3363
 Inoue, Masao 1878–84, 3069–70
 Institución Libre de Enseñanza 3610
 Institut de France 2992
Institut für Sexualwissenschaft 1586, 1587, 2093
 Institute for Defense Analysis 818
 Institute for International Economics 3665
 Institute for Legal Defense (IDL) 2652 Institute for Social Research 904 see also Frankfurt School
 Institute of Anarchist Studies 160
 Institute of National Memory 3503
 institutional racism 651
 Instituto Indigenista 2538
 Instituto Indigenista Nacional 1472
 Instituto de la Mujer 3611
 Instituto Nacional de Asociativismo y Economía
 Social (INAES) 2348
 Insurgent War 1476
 Insurrection Act 156, 1787 insurrectionary anarchism 979
Integralismo Lusitano 188, 2730 intellectual property 3171, 3461
 Intentona Comunista 470–1
 Inter-American Development Bank 1067, 2274
 Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance
 (TIAR) 2593
 Interamerican Commission of Human Rights
 3305
 Argentinian visit 255, 256
 Interamerican Human Rights Court 802
 interclass cooperation 268–9
 Intercollegiate Socialist Society 3041
 Inter-Continental Caravan, PGA 1389, 2637
 INTERFET peacekeeping force 1044
 Interim Coordinating Commission (TKK) 3076
Intermittents 1147
Internacional, La 271
International 150, 152, 153
 International Alliance of Social Democracy 2811
 International Anti-Militarist Commission 3082 International Assessment of Agricultural Knowledge, Science, and Technology for Development (IAASTD) 1211–12
 International Brigades, Spanish Civil War 851, 3138–9, 3678, 3683
see also Abraham Lincoln Brigade
 International Brotherhood of Teamsters 596, 3413 International Campaign Against Aggression in Iraq (ICAAI) 367
 International Committee for Permanent Peace
 1742
 International Confederation of Autonomous
 Chapters of the American Indian Movement
 2415
 International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) 2221, 2269, 2356, 2681
 International Conference of Socialist Women 3722
 International Congress for Sexual Reform 1586
International Congress of Women, The Hague 1741–2
 International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Their Families 2306

- International Coordinating Committee (ICC) 3462
- International Council of Women 2721
- International Court of Justice 1741, 1764, 2398
Israeli settlements 1817
New Zealand vs. France 1273
- International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) 3011
- International Dalit Solidarity Network 959
- International Day for Peace 1831
- International Federation of Agricultural Producers (IFAP) 3463
- International Federation of Democratic Women's Conference, Chile 3573
- International Forum on Globalization 3028
- International Foundation for Electoral Systems
(IFES) 3330
- International Fund for Agricultural Development 3463
- International Human Rights Day 2270
- International Institute of Social History 850, 1189
- International Labor Defense (ILD) 595, 3002
- International Labor Organization (ILO)
Argentina 258
Colombia 809
Morais 2319
Poland 3502
Southern Africa 3112
- International Labor Union 2028
- International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (ILGWU) 2031, 3313, 3412
- International Left Opposition 2050, 2738
- International Longshore and Warehouse Union (ILWU) 839, 2259, 3662, 3664
- International Longshoremen's Association (ILA)
1752, 3414
- International Monetary Fund (IMF)
Argentina 1085, 2640–1
Asia 1430
Bolivia 421, 433, 434
Burkina Faso 548
Caribbean 607–10, 3560
Chile 2436–7
Colombia 808
conditions attached to loans 1661–2
Côte d'Ivoire 880
Dominican Republic 1018
Ecuador 1067
food riots 1209–10
food sovereignty 1210, 1211
Guatemala 1477
Guyana 608, 1856
Jamaica 2198
Korea 1996
- Mali 2182
Morocco 2338
Mozambique 2355
Nicaragua 2476
Nigeria 2483
Paraguay 2604
Peru 2651
Philippines 1400
Russia 3126
Senegal 3007
Thailand 3272, 3273–4
Turkey 3344, 3354
Tute Bianche 1008
Uruguay 3404, 3408
Venezuela 604, 3439, 3446
Yugoslavia 3011
Zambia 696–7, 3111, 3703–4
Zimbabwe 2364
- International Petroleum Company (IPC) 3430
- International Planned Parenthood Federation 2969
- International Planning Committee for Food Sovereignty 1211, 3462
- International Pop Underground Festival 2845
- International Proletarian Women's Day 3554
- International Red Aid 2225
- International Republic Institute (IRI) 1509, 3012
- International Seamen's Union (ISU) 1752
- International Security Zone 1019
- international socialism: mass politics 218, 1742–50
anti-Nicholas II 1746–9
International Socialist Bureau 1745–6, 1747
Second International 1744–5
up to Second International 1743–4
- International Socialist Circle 259
- International Socialist Combat League (ISK) 1379
- International Socialist League 150, 151, 152, 1028, 1414, 2948, 3034
- International Socialist Party, Argentina 271 International Socialist Review 2253
- International Students' Day 3176
International Symposium of Socialist Humanism 1303
- International Trade Union Confederation (ITUC) 809
- International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE) 3627
- International Vegetarian Union 3428
- International Vietnam Congress 1037
- International Women's Conference
Beijing 3275, 3572, 3585, 3631
- International Women's Congress 3597

- International Women's Day (IWD) 1750–2, 3722
 February Revolution 1743, 2084, 2895–6
 International Women's Day of Action for Nuclear Disarmament 2529
 International Women's Suffrage Alliance (IWSA) 170, 3580
 International Woodworkers of America (IWA) 589
 International Workers' Association 120, 990, 3071, 3082
 International Workers' Congress 259
 International Workers' Day 2258
 International Working Men's Association (IWMA) 129, 157, 404, 829, 1750, 2026, 2612, 2764 see also First International
 International Working People's Association (IWPA) 1569, 2028, 2029
 International Working Union of Socialist Parties 355
 International Working Women's Day 3554
 International Workingmen's Association (IWA) 1000
 Bakunin's influence 2237
 Marine Transport Workers 1753
 Spain 144
 Switzerland 2006
see also First International
 International Youth Conference 3678
Internationale Situationiste 972, 3045, 3423
Internationals 1755–8
 First 1755–6
 Bakunin 333–7, 977, 1755, 2237
 Buenos Aires 102
 ending of 2242
 founding of 2239, 3056
 London 1744
 Malatesta 2168
 world politics 2236
 Second 1749
 Bastille Day 1744–5
 formation of 2242–4
 Lenin 1423, 1756, 2084
 Marx, Eleanor 2229
 Roy 2874
 Russian February Revolution 2889–90
 SPD 3055
 World War I 2239
 Zetkin 3721
 Third anti-fascism 178–9
 capitalism in crisis 832
 Colonial Thesis 1682–3
 critiqued 2247
 Egypt 235
 formation of 3065
 Gramsci 1422
 Hô Chi Minh 1597
 International Women's Day 1751
 International Women's Secretariat 1980
 Lenin on 2246
 Lovestone 596
 LSSP 1494
 Lukács 2086, 2136
 Marxist view of society 1174
 Marx's influence 2239
 Serrati 3014
 unemployment 3383
 World War I 1756–8
 Fourth 245, 996, 2049, 2165, 2239, 2250, 2794
 Internet use 815, 1389, 2504, 3377–8
 Interstate Commerce Commission 1973
Intervention 823
 Interventionist Left (IL) 1316
 Intifada 1399, 1547, 1548, 1549, 1777, 1780, 1814, 2502
Intifada I and II 239, 1758–61
 Intolerable Acts 78, 453
 Ioannides, Dimitrios 947
 Ioannides, George 1435
 Ioannidis, Yannis 1435, 1444
Iqbal, Muhammad 1761–2, 1810, 1929
IRA: see Irish Republican Army
Iran 1762–8, 2342–4
 AIOC 1763, 1764, 2343
 Cold War 1765
 homosexuality 3016
 hostage-taking 3181
 Kurdish national autonomy 1762–3
 Mossadegh era 1763–6, 2342–4
 nationalism 1764
 oil 1783, 3227
 oil industry 1763, 1769, 2343–4, 2505
 Ottoman rule 1778 political and cultural protests 1766–8 protest, rebellion, revolution 1777 railway workers' strike 1779
 Rashid Ali revolt 3221
 resistance 1782–4
 Revolt (1920) 1777–9
 SAVAK 1769
 Shi'ite Muslims 1811
 Shi'ite/Sunni tensions 1776, 1782–3
 squatting 780
 strike 1769
 student movement 1963, 3181
 US-backed coup 1765, 1768
 US invasion 1401, 1664, 1672, 1783, 2504
 US support 1775

Iran (cont'd)

- weapons of mass destruction 1783
- women's movement 1767, 1774
- women's organizations 1783–4
- women's status 1770, 1771, 1774
- World War II 1762
- see also* Iranian Revolution; Khomeini, Ayatollah
- Iran–Contra scandal 2475
- Iran–Iraq War 1777, 1782, 3227
- Iranian Revolution 1768–75
 - Fadlallah 1576
 - Foucault 1221
 - Gulf War 3438
 - KDP 1763
 - non-violence 2505
 - oil 3438
 - poverty 780
 - and USA 889, 1217
- Iraq 1775–9, 1782–4, 3221–7
 - anti-British nationalists 1775–7, 1778
 - Baathists 353, 1777, 1781, 1782–3, 3221–7
 - Communists/Nationalists 1779
 - Fahd 1159
 - Gulf War 1782–3
 - hostage-taking 1831
 - invasion of Iran 1782
 - invasion of Kuwait 1782
 - Kurds 353
 - Revolt (1920) 1777–9
 - US invasion 1783
 - women's organizations 1783–4
 - see also* Iraq Revolution (1958); Iraq War
- Iraq Petroleum Company (IPC) 1779
- Iraq Revolution (1958) 1779–82
- Iraq Veterans against the War 229
- Iraq War
 - Australian troops 304
 - Blair 2040
 - global day of action 228
 - protests against 227–30, 1311, 1401–2, 2040
- Iraqi Governing Council (IGA) 1783
- Iraqi Petroleum Company 3226
- Iraqi Student's Organization 3224
- Ireland 1784–96, 1798–800, 1803–7, 2571–3
 - agrarian warfare 1793
 - anti-clericalism 1785
 - Bloody Sunday 1797–8, 1801
 - Catholic Church 971, 1099, 1806–7
 - Cromwell 909
 - emigration 1798
 - famine 1798, 2344, 2545
 - Great Rebellion (1798) 909, 1790–6, 1807, 2402–3, 2544, 2545, 3002, 3024, 3392
 - nationalism 1798–800
 - Protestantism 1784, 3305

- revolts, early 1803–7
- revolutions 1784–90
- sectarian violence 1788
- torture 1794
- Tory rebellion 1046, 3305–6
- the Troubles 1796–8
- World War II 971–2
- see also* Irish Free State; Northern Ireland; Ulster
- Ireton, Henry 1098, 1101
- Irgun Zva'i Leumi 358–60, 374, 375, 1550, 1851
- Irigaray, Luce 3576
- Irish Citizen Army 860, 1045, 1046
- Irish Civil War
 - Anti-Treaty Struggle 794, 1802–3
 - Collins 794
 - de Valera 971
 - see also* Easter Rising (1916)
- Irish Free State 1050
 - Anglo-Irish Treaty 3044
 - Collins 793, 794
 - composition of 1796
 - de Valera 971
 - elite 1798
- Irish Land League 2820
- Irish Land War 2616, 2617
- Irish language 2627
- Irish National Land League 2617
- Irish National Liberation Army (INLA) 1801
- Irish News* 2522
- Irish Parliamentary Party 1047, 1799
- Irish People* 1192
- Irish Rebellion (1798): see Great Rebellion, Ireland (1798)
- Irish Republican Army (IRA) 1800–3
 - Anglo-Irish War 3044
 - Collins 793, 794, 1048
 - London bombings 1387
 - Maguire children 2522
 - membership 1802
 - Pearse 1800–2, 2627
 - Provisionals 1797
 - recruitment rise 2967
 - resistance campaign 1802–3
- Irish Republican Brotherhood (IRB)
 - Davitt 967
 - de Valera 970
 - regrouped 1799
 - Sinn Féin 793
 - Stephens 1192
 - World War I 1046
- Irish Republican Social Party (IRSP) 1801
- Irish Socialist Federation 860
- Irish Socialist Republican Party 860

- Irish Transport and General Workers' Union 860, 1026
- Irish Volunteers 620, 793, 1045, 1785–6, 1807, 2627
- Irish War for Independence 793, 1415, 1416
- Irlande Libre* 1415
- Irokawa, D. 1900
- Iron Guard 2856–7
- Iron Molders' International Union 3214
- iron rice bowl concept 3286
- Iron Workers' Union 1897
- Iroquois Confederacy 75, 84, 2620
- irredentism 36, 1825, 1827
- Irvin, B. H. 296
- Irwin, Lord 1327, 1681, 2431, 3042
- Isaac, Steven 233–7, 1069–73
- Isabel II, of Spain 1016, 1161
- Isabella, of Spain 2055
- Isak, Joesoef 1725
- Isak, Mary and Abraham 123
- ISCOR 3110, 3114
- Ishaq Khan, Ghulam 2584
- Ishikawa Sanshirō 134, 1807–8
- Ishimoto Shidzue 3595
- ishtirak* (socialism) 233–4
- Iskra* 437, 1914, 2082, 3029, 3321, 3720
- Islahat Ferman* 3346
- Islam 1808–12
- eschatology 2163
 - in France 1644–5
 - fundamentalism 890, 1771–2, 1964–5, 3247
 - hadith* 1809
 - ijtihad* 1809
 - Iran 1810
 - Mappilas 2317
 - modernity 1809
 - non-violence 2505–6
 - political currents 1808–12
 - political organizations 1810
 - socialism 235
 - South Asia 1810
 - taqlid* 1809
 - Turkey 3342
 - in west 1811
 - see also* Muslims; Qu'ran
- Islam, Syed Nazrul 347
- Islamic Civil War, Afghanistan 13–15
- Islamic Jihad 1811, 2071
- Islamic Party of Afghanistan 14
- Islamic Renaissance Party (IRP) 3245
- Islamic Republican Party 1962
- Islamic Revolution, Iran: see Iranian Revolution
- Islamic Salvation Army (AIS) 41
- Islamic Salvation Front (FIS), Algeria 40–1
- Islamic Socialist Party 1070
- Islamic Society of Afghanistan (Jamaat-i-Islami) 14
- Islamist Welfare Party 3344
- Isly, Battle of 2334
- Ismail, Khedive 3395
- Ismail, of Sudan 3196–7
- Israel 1812–17
- Global Day of Action 1389
 - Golan Heights 2502
 - independence 373
 - Intifada 1758–60
 - Labor Party 1816
 - National Water Carrier project 238
 - peace movement 1812–16
 - settlers movement 1816–17
 - state terrorism 1550
 - water supplies 1817
 - women's organizations 1815
 - see also* Intifada I and II; Palestine
- Israeli Socialist Organization 1812
- Issaku, Tomura 1902
- Isserman, Maurice 839
- Istabu Freedom Movement 3081
- Istanbul 234
- Istiaql nationalistic movement 2336
- Isthmian Canal Commission 2593
- Istiqal (Independence) Party 1249, 1779, 2954, 3516
- Istúriz, Aristóbulo 3447
- Itaipú Dam 2607
- Italian Communist Party: see Communist Party of Italy (PCI)
- Italian General Confederation of Labor 1311
- Italian Risorgimento 1824–7
- Italian Social Movement 1820
- Italian Social Republic (RSI) 2384
- Italian Socialist Party (PSI) 385, 1827–9, 2959–60
- Craxi 1829
 - maximalists 1828
 - Mussolini 2383
 - pacifism 2871
 - Salvemini 2959–60
 - scandals 1829
 - Settimana Rossa 1822, 1827–9, 3015
 - Soviet invasion of Hungary 1834
 - Turati 3341
- Italian Workers' Association 2267
- Italians in Spanish Civil War
CNT-FAI 131
- Italo-Turkish War 51
- Italy
- agricultural sector 1845
 - anarchism 129–33, 1419
 - anti-fascist resistance/new left 1832–5

Italy (cont'd)

anti-racist movement 1829–30
 anti-war movement 1830–1
 Austrian rule 1825
autunno caldo 1398, 1823, 1839, 1843
 Biennio Rosso 384–7
 bread riots 3014
 Catholic Church 1177
 Centri Sociali 1831–2, 1841, 1845
 Christian Democracy (DC) 1819
 class struggle 1842–3
 cobas 1839–41
 Disobbedienti 1006–10, 1307
 Ethiopia 1133, 1180, 2383
 fascism 1171, 1172, 1176–80, 1184, 1828–9, 3341–2, 3593
 food and work protest 130 friendly societies 1821
 labor movement 1821–4
 in Libya 130, 1180, 1822, 3014
 massacres 2835
 maternity funds 3592
 motherhood 1177, 3591
 new left/great repression 1835–9 new syndicalism 1839–41
 operaism/post-operaism 1006, 1841–5, 2426, 3170
 peasant movements 1845–7
 precarious workers' organization 1839–41 railway workers' union 3015 red belt 1819
 Resistenza 1832–5, 2834–6 revolts in the south, 17th century 1847–8 secret service 1311
 Settimana Rossa 3014–15
 social movements 2401
 squatting 323, 1147, 1831, 1846 student associations 1836, 1840, 1843
 unification 1333, 1845
 women's movement 3591–3
 women's roles 1177
 women's suffrage 3593
see also Communist Party of Italy; G8 protests, Genoa; Italian Risorgimento; Italian Socialist Party; Red Brigades
 Itihad el-Nisai (Sudanese Women's Union) 3199
 Itō Noe 134, 1848–9, 2566, 3595
 Ittihad al-Islami al- (The Evolutionist) 3335
 Ivan IV 2342
Ivan the Terrible (Eisenstein) 1081
 Ivanov, Anton 543
 Ivanovo-Voznesensk 2891, 2898, 2905, 2907, 2914
 Ivasiuc, Alexandru 2866
 Ivól, Ambre 72–4

Ivon Jones, David 149, 150, 151
 Ivonnet, Pedro 912, 914
 Ivorian Human Rights League (LIDHO) 881
 Ivorian Popular Front (FPI) 880
 Ivy Day 2617
 Iwasa Sakutarō 133, 134, 136
IWD: see International Women's Day
IWW: see Industrial Workers of the World
 Iyengar, Srinivas 449
 Iyotake, Tatanka: see Sitting Bull
 Izbrannaya Rada 2342
 Izquierda Comunista de España (ICE) 2486, 2737
 Izquierda Unida (IU) 146, 788, 2320, 2362, 2650–2, 2656, 2657, 2659–60
Izvestiya 535, 2005, 2257, 3333

J18

Global Day of Action Against Capitalism
 1386–91, 2809
 London 1152, 1388–9, 1397
 UK Indymedia 1739
 J8 (Junior Eight) summit 1314
 Ja'afar al Askari 51
 Jabiluka uranium mine 4
Jabotinsky, Vladimir (Ze'ev) 358, 1851–2
 Jabr, Salih 1776, 1779, 3515, 3516
 Jachowicz, Stanislaw 3544
 Jack Scott Operation 1954
 Jackel, Marcelo 259
 Jackson, Andrew 2023
 Jackson, George 964
Jackson, Jesse 1852–3, 3402
 Jackson, Jimmy Lee 1975
 Jackson, Jonathan 965
 Jackson, Thomas J. "Stonewall" 60, 63
 Jackson, Thomas Witter 2322
 Jackson, William 3302
 Jackson State University 222
 Jacob, Franz 1377
 Jacobin Club 2848
 Jacobins
 Amis des Noirs 1530 and Girondins 894, 1289–90 influence abroad 1282
 Montagnards 1277
 purged 896
 and Robespierre 328, 2847–9 sans-culottes 894, 1277–8, 1287–8
 women's role 1421
Jacobite risings, Britain 1385, 1853–6, 3001
 Jacques, Amy 1336
 Jacques, Cathérine 2721–2
 Jadidism
 Central Asia 643, 3420
 Tajikistan 3241, 3242, 3244

- Turkmenistan 3365, 3366
 Uzbekistan 3241, 3421
 Jaeger, Hans 2524
 Jafar Sultan 1762
 Jaffna Library 3251
Jagan, Cheddi 1500–1, 1856–7, 3559
 Jagan, Janet 1856, 3559
 Jagger, Mick 218
 Jagi-Jagi 1128
 Jagielski, Mieczyslaw 3073, 3502
 Jagmohan 1934
 Jahāngir Khān, Mirzā 1767
Jahrbuch für sexuelle Zwischenstufen 1586
 Jaish-e-Mohammad 1811
 Jakarta transport strike 1723
 Jakeš, Miloš 3433, 3434
 Jakobson, Pia K. 1606–7, 1632
 Jaldung, Håkan 1153
 Jalée, Pierre 1669
Jalib, Habib 1857–8
jallaba (itinerant traders) 3197–8
 Jallianwala Bagh massacre 1701, 2403
 Jamaat al Muslimeen 3320
 Jamaat-e-Islami (Islamic Society of Afghanistan)
 14, 344, 347, 1810, 2582
Jamahiriya (state of the masses) 2779
Jamaica 1858–74, 2320–3
 anti-colonial movement 2196
 Baptist War 205
 bauxite 2197
 black culturalism 1859–60, 1863–4
 clientelism 1861
 freed people 2320–1
 IMF 608, 2198
 independence movement 1858–65
 intellectuals 1862–3 labor riots (1938) 1865–8
 Maroons 88, 201
 Morant Bay Rebellion 2320–3
 new social movements 1865
 obeah 2789
 peasant uprisings 1868–70
 protest music 611
 Rastafarians 394, 611, 1336, 1498, 1859–60 rebellion and resistance 203, 1871–4
 Rude Boys 1861–2 rural–urban migration 1859, 1866
 self-help groups 3558
 slave uprising 1871–3, 2789 sugar plantation unrest 1868–9
 wages 1866
 Windward Maroons 2788–90
see also Manley, Michael Jamaica Labour Party (JLP) 1859, 1861, 1862–3, 1867, 2197, 2198
Jamaica Mercury 1872
 Jamaica Royal Commission 1870
 Jamaicans for Justice (JFJ) 1865
 Jamali, Fadil al- 3515
 Jamat-al-Ahali 1776
 Jamati-Islami 3246
 Jamela, Reuben 2730
 James, Bob 105–8
James, C. L. R. 613, 772, 1874–5
Black Jacobins 1874, 1875
 dialectics 2839
 Hegelianism 2250
History of Negro Revolt 1874
 Johnson-Forest Tendency 1027
 Leninism 2089
 Marxism 2249
Minty Alley 1874 and Rodney 2852
 STO 3070
 and Williams 3532
 James, Clive 107
 James, Henry, Sr. 156
 James, Selma 2249, 2852
 James I and VI, of England and Scotland 517, 1186, 1806, 2989
 James II and VII, of England and Scotland 289, 1106, 1385, 1405–8, 1853
 James III and VIII (Old Pretender) 1854
 James V, of Scotland 3000
 James Meredith March 18
 Jamestown 330
 Jamiat Ulema Islam (JUI) 2582
 Jamiyat Taruiyat al-Mar'a (Society for the Promotion of Women) 3199
 Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front (JKLF)
 1934
 Jammu-Kashmir 1928, 1930, 1931, 1932
 Jan Andolan (People's Movement) 2437
 Jan Bux Khan 370
 Jan Sangh (People's Association) 1584
Janata 2441
 Janata Party 1584, 1692, 2403
Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (JVP) 970,
 1495, 2053, 2631–3, 3252, 3527
 Janco, Marcel 953
Jang 1857
 Jang-Whan, O. H. 1926, 1970–1
 Jango: see Goulart, João
 Janissary system 3346
 Janjati 232
 Jansen, Wilhelm 464
 Janssens, Emile 854, 857, 2138
 Janvion, Emile 1124
Janvedana (dalits' newspaper) 3588
 JAP bureaucracy, Chile 685

Japan

- agrarian land reform 1890
- anarchism 96, 133–5, 1561
- anarchocommunism 133
- anti-nuclear campaigns 191–3
- capitalism 1663
- class struggle 1880, 1895–6
- community labor union movement 1875–8
- development terms 1904–5
- earthquake 1877
- economic depression 1883–4, 1890
- employment reforms 1883–4
- European colonialism 1657–8, 1663
- farmers 1890, 1901–2, 1903
- feminism 3595–6
- Fifteen Years' War 134
- free trade 1658
- general strike attempt 1895–6
- harvest failures 1899
- health disasters 1881
- Indonesian recruits 3200
- industrializing 1889–90, 1896, 1897–8
- Labor Law 1876–7
- labor protest 1878–84
- labor unions 1895, 1896, 1897–8
- land reform 1892, 1901
- Meiji Restoration 1214, 1896
- mining industry 1891
- modernization 3594
- Narita airport 1881, 1901–9
- new left 1905–6
- Pacific War 3035
- pacifist movement 1884–9
- patriarchy 3596
- Pearl Harbor 727
- peasant revolts 1898–9
- police 1896–7
- post-World War II protest 1889–96
- protest and revolt 1896–901
- radiation fallout 191
- Red Purge 3069
- Sanrizuka unrest 1901–6
- social movements 1876
- Sohyo Federation 1876, 1878, 1879, 1881, 1882, 1909, 3069–70
- stagflation 1881
- student demonstrations 3169
- taxation 1898, 1899, 1900
- trade unions 1875–8, 3720–1
- Twenty-One Demands 185, 719
- US imperialism 1885–6
- US military bases 1886, 1888–9
- US occupation 1898
- wages 1879
- women's movement 3594–6
- workers' production control 1892–3
- World War II 727, 1711, 1884, 1889, 1998–9, 2202, 3200
- Zenroren Labor Federation 3720–1
see also Tokyo
- Japan–US Security Treaty 1880, 1909
- Japan Community Union Federation (JCUF) 1877
- Japan Council against A&H Bombs 1887
- Japan Council of International Metalworkers' Federation (IMF-JC) 1878, 1881, 3069
- Japan Federation of Labor (Domei Federation) 1898
- Japan Peasant Union 1892
- Japan–Russian War 2200
- Japan Socialist Party (JSP) 1879, 1909–10, 3069
- Japanese Communist Party (JCP) 134, 1883, 1910–11
- Japanese National Railways (JNR) 1882, 1894, 1895
- Jara, Albino 2609
- Jara Martínez, Víctor Lidio 1911–12, 2378, 2379
- Jaramillo, Rubén 2282
- Jaramillo Ossa, Bernardo 802, 808, 1168, 3389
- Jaramogi Oginga Odinga 1954, 2269, 2691
- Jaraus, Konrad 1337, 1341
- Järnefelt, Arvid 119
- Jarrow March 525
- Jaruzelski, Wojciech 380, 810, 1147, 2302, 3075, 3078, 3503, 3556
- Jasna Gora, Battle of 3557
- Jászai, Oscar 3228
- Jatoi, Haider Bux 1857
- Jatto 1935
- Jaurès, Jean 225, 887, 1756, 1912–13
Armée Nouvelle, L' 1913
Austro-Marxist 2243
Humanité 225, 823, 1913
Socialist History of the French Revolution 1283
- Java 1723
- Java War 1719–20, 1721
- Javier de Elío, Francisco 288
- Jawa'ib, al-* 234
- Jawzi, Bandali 236
- Jay, Martin 1255
- Jay Treaty 1301, 3525
- Jayakar, M. R. 1681
- Jayewardene, J. R. 3251, 3252
- jazz 611, 1555, 2380
- Jean-Bosco Church 1506
- Jean-François, Haiti 995, 1529, 1530, 1533, 3306–7, 3309

- Jean-Paul II, Pope 1519
 Jebhe Melli (National Front) 1764, 2343
 Jeddojuhđ Inqilabi Tehrik (Struggle Revolutionary Movement) 2585
 Jedhe, Keshavrao 1682
 Jeenbekov, Jusupbek 3331
 Jeenbekov, Ravshan 3330
 Jeeves, Alan 148
 Jefferson, Thomas on Christianity 3515
 and Gabriel 1319
 Hô Chi Minh 1219
 Kentucky Resolution 1301 and Lee 80
 Notes on Virginia 1113 and Paine 2571
 and Saint-Domingue 996, 1546
 and Wright 3666
 Jehovah's Witnesses 592, 3697
 Jeju Island revolt 1998
 Jelačić, Josip 1623
 Jellačić, Joseph 1149, 1620
 Jellicoe, Anna 3566
 Jena, Battle of 442, 1282, 3208
 Jena University 3177
 Jennings, James 393
 Jeon Bong-jun 1998
 Jerilderie Letter 1943, 1944
 Jerry Rescue 216
 Jessen, Ralph 1337
 Jesuits
 Brazil 3008
 expelled from Portugal 877
 France 1228
 French Guiana 1269
 in FSLN 2473
 Mexico 1578
 Micronesia 2303, 2304
 New World 2056
Jet 761
 Jeune Haïti 1519
 Jeunesse de la Voiture 3218
 Jeunesse Syndicaliste d'Asnières 3218
 Jeunesse Syndicaliste des Ferblantiers 3218
 Jeunesses Syndicalistes 3218
 Jewell, Jason 509, 1092–6
 Jewish Agency 374
 Jewish Brigade 358, 374, 1918
Jewish Bund 142, 1914–16, 1917, 2717
Jewish Daily Forward 3064
 Jewish Fighting Organization (ZOB) 3512, 3513
 Jewish Legion 1851
 Jewish Military Union (ZZW) 3512
Jewish people 1916–20, 3740–3
 Alsace-Lorraine 1919
 anarchism 96–7, 99
 Austria 320, 3741
 in Bulgaria 543
 in Canada 110 children rescued 1917
 counterrevolution 886
 Croatia 3683
 Declaration of the Rights of Man and the Citizen 1919 emigrating from Russia to USA 1915
 France 1918–19
 Germany 1173, 1175, 1179, 1182–3
 in Greece 1440–1
 Hapsburg empire 1919, 1920
 Hungary 1920
 Italy 1173, 2835
 Morocco 2336
 non-Jewish wives 2495–6
 as plutocrats 1174
 Poland 1851, 2713
 resistance to Nazism 1916–18 revolution in Europe 1918–20
 Romania 2856, 2857
 against Romans 2490
 Russian pogroms 1851, 3741
 self-defense 1851
 in Slovakia 3049
 in Ukraine 1958
 Warsaw uprising 1915, 1917, 3512–14
 youth movements 1917
 see also anti-Semitism; Jabotinsky, Vladimir (Ze'ev); Zionism; Zionism, revisionist
 Jewish Question 3740
 Jewish Social Democratic grouping 142
 Jewish Workers' Solidarity Federation 3220
 Jian, C. 3292
 Jiang Jieshi: see Chiang Kai-Shek
 Jiang Jinguo 3237
 Jiang Qing 223, 711, 2204
 Jiang Zemin 987
 Jiangxi Soviet 2201
Jiefang ribao (Liberation Daily) 2780
Jiefang zhouban (Liberation Weekly) 3725
Jigsaw 2844
 Jihadiyya 3197
 Jim Crow era 16, 1608
 institutional racism 651
 King 1972
 Redeemer governments 68
 segregation 756, 759
 white supremacy 1608
 Jimenes, Enrique A. 2593
 Jimenes Grullón, Juan Isidro 1012, 1014, 1017

- Jinnah, Muhammad Ali 1920–2
 and Gandhi 1330, 1680, 1710, 1711, 1921
 Gandhi–Irwin Pact 1683
 and Iqbal 1810
 Muslim League 1685, 1921–2, 1930, 2577
 Naidu's biography 2388
 and Nehru 1921, 2430, 2433
 Pakistani independence 1922, 2433
 Urdu 2577
- Jit Phumisak 3258
- Jiu Valley 2854, 2858–9
- Jiuguo shibao* 2114
- Joachim of Fiore 1104
- Joanna the Mad 844
- João, Dom 486, 488
- Jock Scott Operation 2256
- Jogiches, Leo 3147
- Johannesburg 2190–1, 3100, 3101
Johannesburg Witness 331
- Johanningsmeier, Edward 839
- John, Cecilia 303
- John, Sándor S. 416–23, 424–5, 425–32
- John XII, Pope 2829
- John XXIII, Pope 2058–9, 2572
Gaudium et Spes 2058–9
Mater et Magistra 2058
Pacem in Terris 2058
- John I of Aviz 186
- John IV, of Portugal 187
- John Paul II, Pope 2062, 2308, 2472, 2508,
 3073, 3078, 3079, 3502
- John VI, of Portugal 187
- Johnson, Andrew 68, 2800
- Johnson, Eric F. 1004–5, 2969–70, 3256
- Johnson, Hugh 2820
- Johnson, James Weldon 1554, 1556
- Johnson, Janet Rae 2313
- Johnson, Joseph (friend of Blake) 401
- Johnson, Joseph (Peterloo) 2661
- Johnson, Joseph (publisher) 3541
- Johnson, Linton Kwesi 326
- Johnson, Lyndon B.
 Australian visit 304
 Black Panthers 398
 Bolivian aid 417
 Civil Rights Act 745
 Dominican Republic 1019, 1217
 FBI investigations of disappearances 1259
 Freedom Budget 2037
 Great Society program 782
 Kerner Commission 3401–2
 MFDP 1259
 and Pham Van Dong 2663
 segregationism 762
 Vietnam 1600, 3482, 3483
 voting rights legislation 748–9
 War on Poverty 752
- Johnson, Marsha P. 2108
- Johnson, William 3460
- Johnson, Yeduo 2115
- Johnson–Forest Tendency 1027
- Johnson–Sirleaf, Ellen 2116
- Johnston, C. 2098
- Johnston, Edith Mary 1784
- Johnston, George 3491
- Johnstone, Harry 2174
- Joliot–Curie, Frederic 195
- Joncker insurrection 1718
- Jones, Claudia 2527
- Jones, Ernest 2547
- Jones, Evan 2727–8
- Jones, G. S. 3054
- Jones, John Gale 546
- Jones, John Paul 79
- Jones, Mary: see Mother Jones
- Jones, P. M. 1285
- Jones, William 2463
- Jones Act 2767, 2768
- Jonkonnu masquerades 1873
- Jooste, Rhayn Garrick 1162–3, 3531–3
- Jopson, Edgar 2682
- Jordan 238, 399
- Jordan, David 2874
- Jordan, John 2807–11
- Jordon, Frank 1207
- Jorn, Asger 3044
- Jornada, La* 408, 2285
- Jornal Sem Terra* 2352
- Jorquera, Carlos 111
- José Antonio Circles 182
- Joseph, P. 398
- Joseph, R. 580
- Joseph an Gof, Michael 509
- Joseph II, of Austria 357, 1114, 1143, 1421, 1918
- Josh, Sohan Singh 3041
- Joshi, M. M. 1694
- Joshi, P. C. 1922–3, 2421, 2792
 Jospin, Lionel 299, 872, 1645 jotedars 2574–5
- Jouhaux, Léon 851
- Journal des Économistes* 2843
- Joven, Manuel 1613
- Joven Cuba 2152
- Jover, Gregorio 1187
- Joyce, Cornet George 1101
- Juan Carlos, King 183
- Juan Santos Atahualpa Rebellion 1923–4
- Juárez García, Benito 1924–5
 Jubilee 2000 1392, 1397, 3100
 Jubilee South Africa 3100, 3113

- Judea 1816–17
Judenrat 3512
 Judeo-Christian values 2022
 Judt, T. 951
Juewu she (Awakening) 3725
 Jugoremedija factory 3686
Jukta (United) Front 345, 2578
 Julian the Apostate 2828
Julião, Francisco 1925, 2118, 2319, 2351
 Julius II, Pope 514, 515
 July, Miranda 2845
 July Column, Place de la Bastille 354, 1233
 Jumagulov, Apas 3329
Jumandi 1925–6
 Jumblatt, Kamal 2069, 2070
 Jumonville Glen 76
 Jun Doo-hwan 1999
 June 18, 1999: see J18
 Jung, Carl 1586
Jung Hwa-Am 1926
Junge Gemeinde (Youth Groups) 1342
Junge Welt 1317
 Jungvolk 1429
 Junín, Battle of 3458
 Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps (JROTC) 885
 Junta de Salvação Nacional 2731
Juntas de Buen Gobierno 3713
 Juntas de Coordinación, Ejecución e Inspección (JUCEI) 921
 Juntas Patrióticas 3389
 Juppé, Alain 1237, 1400
 Jura Bookshop 107
 Jura Federation 120, 157, 2006, 2811, 2813
 Juriga, Ferdinand 1595
 Jusos (Young Socialists) 3056
 Just Cause Operation 2594
 Just Militia 1997
Justice 1748, 2229
 Justice Commandos for the Armenian Genocide (JCAG) 280, 284
 Justice and Development Party (AKP) 3345
 Justice Party, Turkey 3351
 Justo, Juan B 253, 270–1
 Justo, Liborio 272 jute industry 1700, 2726, 3229
 Juventud Socialista Unificada (JSU) 2739, 3139
Jyllands-Posten 992

 K-Groups 1366
 Kabaka's Protest 3546, 3549
 Kabalega, King 3369, 3370
 Kabat, Marina 261–3
 Kabataan Makabayan (KM) 2677, 2680
 Kabba, Alie 3031
 Kabbah, Ahmad Tejan 3031–2
 Kabila, Joseph 859
 Kabila, Laurent-Désiré 853, 858, 859, 2364
 Kabul 15, 329–30, 1676, 3247
 Kabwe conference 3106, 3249
Kabyl resistance to government 1927–8
 Kadalie, Clements 152, 695, 832, 2385, 3092, 3093, 3729
 Kádár, János 1625, 1627, 1628, 2387–8, 2866, 3432
 Kader Toy Factory arson attack 3274
 Kadet Congress 3551
 Kadets (Constitutional Democrats) 438, 2881–2, 2886, 2891, 2900, 2904, 2915, 2925, 2938, 2942
Kadro group 3362
 Kafka, Franz 949
 Kafrun, Battle of 3367
 Kagame, Paul 859
 Kaganovich, Lazar 3161
 Kaggia, Bildad 1954, 2256
 Kaguvi, Sekuru 703, 704
 Kahina, Queen 42
 Kahlo, Frida 1483
 Kahnawake blockade 2557
 Kahr, Gustav von 1365
 Kai Colo Uprising 1196
 Kaibara Ekken 3594
 Kaigang indigenous people 2352
kaihatsu development 1905, 1908
 Kaipkire, Chieftainess 3602
 Kaisei Rising 1899
 Kaiser, Georg 116, 2047
 Kak, Ramachandra 1929
 Kakori case 1677, 3041
 Kalakauna, King 1564
 Kalamata strike 126
 Kalauokalani, David 1566
Kalayaan 444–5
 Kalikani, Habibulla: see Bacha-i Sakkao's movement
 Kalisch, Treaty of 189
 Kalmanovich, Anna 3390, 3551
 Kalmar Union 988, 2512, 2513, 2523
 Kalpokas, Donald 3427
 Kaltezas, Michalis 127
 Kamaiya (bonded laborers) 232
 Kamenev, Lev
 Bolshevik Revolution 2085–6 death of Lenin 438, 2005, 3159
 executed 3162
 Leninism 2089
 and Trotsky 3158
 Kamichika Ichiko 2566
 Kampuchea (Cambodia) 574–5, 3475

- Kampuchean United Front for National Salvation (KUFNS) 1960, 3486–7
- Kamukunji grounds 1948, 1950–1, 1952
- Kanagawa City Union 1876
- Kanai Yoshiko 3596
- Kanak Attak 2306
- Kanak population 2457
- Kanduzi, Ackson M. 3747–8
- Kaneko Fumiko 134, 136
- Kaneko–Pak treason trial 134
- Kanelopoulou, Stamatina 127
- Kangaroo faction 3064
- Kanno Suga 134, 2566
- Kanogo, Tabitha 3545
- Kanongesha, chief 3702
- Kanpur Bolshevik Conspiracy Case 961
- Kanpur massacre 1690
- Kansai Electric 191
- Kansas–Nebraska Act 56, 533
- Kant, Immanuel 1254, 2658, 2836
- Kanto earthquake 3595
- Kanyenze, G. 3732
- Kanzleiter, Boris 223–4, 1011–12, 3011–12, 3295–6, 3637–9, 3682–5, 3688–9, 3689–90, 3690–2, 3692–3
- Kaohsiung incident 2270
- Kaoru, Higashiyama 1902
- Kaos 2063
- Kapenguria Six 3043
- Kapp, Wolfgang 1364
- Kapp–Lüttwitz Putsch 1364
- Kapwepwe, Simon 3703
- Kar, Vasily 2775
- Kar Sevaks train attack 1694
- Karachi Congress 1328
- Karagiorgas, Sakis 1433
- Karalasingham, V. 2053
- Karamanić, Slobodan 178–80, 337–9, 3009–11
- Karamanlis, Konstantinos 1447, 1449
- Karameh, Battle of 238
- Karami, Omar 635
- Karami, Rashid 2069
- Karan Singh 1932
- Karaolis, Michail 946
- Karat, Brinda 3588
- Karen revolt 549
- Karenga, Ron 18, 393
- Karimov, Islom 813, 3422
- Kariwa Village protests 192
- Karl Marx Platz, Leipzig 2508–9
- Karlsbad decrees 1349
- Karmu: see Ngainoumbey, Barka
- Karnataka State Farmers' Association 2635
- Karnow, Stanley 2663
- Karpinski, Jakub 3076
- Karsner, Rose 596, 597
- Kartini 1727
- Kartodikromo, Marco 1729
- Karumba, Kungu 2256
- Karume, Abeid 3708–9
- Karuna, Colonel 3253
- Karzai, Hamid 3247–8
- Kasai province 857
- Kasavubu, Joseph 854, 855, 856, 2137, 2139
- Kashmir 1928–36
 democracy 1933
 under India 1930–6
 Mughals 1928
 Muslims' unpaid labor 1929 and Pakistan 1931 popular struggles 1928–30 see also Jammu–Kashmir
- Kashmiri National Conference 1929, 1931
- Kashmiri nationalism 1928–9
- Kashmiri Pandits 1693
- Kaskaskia 84
- Kaskiv, Vlad 3377
- Kasmir, S. 2315
- Kassala revolt 3197
- Kastner, Jens 2161–3
- Kataeb Social Democratic Party 2070
- Kataib Party 2065, 2070
- Katajala, Kimmo 2512–21
- Katanga 855, 857
- Katanga secession 3700
- Katari, Túpac 1937–8
- Katarismo indigenous popular mobilization 1936–9
katarista–indianista movement 1937
- Katayama, Tetsu 1909
- Kathmandu 230, 2437
- Katipunan 444–5, 2668
- Kato Kanju 3595
- Kato Shidzue 3596
- Katrina Hurricane 100, 1207
- Katsiaficas, Georgy 324, 2620
- Katubusan ng Bayan* 2674
- Katyń Forest massacre 2705
- Katz, Friedrich 2540
- Katznelson, Ira 773
- Kaufman, Arnold 2619
- Kaulia, James 1566
- Kaunda, Kenneth 1940–1, 3545, 3698
 anti-apartheid 3695
 copper industry 3701
 tribal balancing 3702
 UNIP 696, 1940, 3700 and Zimbabwe 3739
- Kautokino Revolt 219

- Kautsky, Karl 1941–3, 2238, 3228, 3551 and Bauer 355 on Bernstein 382
 Bund 1915
Erfurt Program 978, 1942
 imperialism 1652
 influence in Greece 1440
 and Jaurès 1913
 and Lenin 1942, 2084
 Lenin on 1672
 on Marxism 1664–5, 2924 Orthodox Marxism 2084, 2243
 pacifism 1942
 Second International 1756, 3058
 as social democrat 2084
 socialism 1653, 3424
 Socialization Committee 1942
 Third International 1757 ultra-imperialism 1316, 1653
Vorwärts 1582
- Kaweah colony 861, 3417
 Kaya, Marie Martine 3003–4
 Kaye, Anthony E. 2407–9
 Kaye, J. W. 1686
 Kazairwe, Joseph 3371
 Kazakhstan 811, 813, 3421
 Kazel, Dorothy 2060
 Kazemi, F. 780
 Keane, Shake 611
 Keating, Paul 4, 305
 Kedung Ombo World Bank project 1723
 Keefer, Chris 383–4
 Keefer, Tom 845–6
 Keen, B. 2056
 Kegame, Paul 852
Kein mensch ist illegal 2306
 Keisei Dentetsu 1892
 Keita, Modibo 2181
 Keitel, Wilhelm 3683
 Keith, George 213
 Keke, Harold 3081
 Kel Kel (It's Time) 814, 817, 3330, 3331, 3332
 Kelkar, Lakshmbai 1583
 Keller, Helen 2489
 Keller, Jack 3728
 Keller, Lisa 405–6
 Kelley, Abby 215
 Kelley, Florence 3041
 Kellogg, Edward 2727
 Kellogg, John Harvey 3429
Kelly, Edward “Ned” 1943–5
 Kelly, Jason M. 200–5, 655–9, 2340–2, 3529–31
Kelly, Petra 1366, 1457, 1945–6
 Kelly, Wynton 611
- Kelly Gang 1943–5
 Kelly's Bush 1457
 Kelmendi, Ali 29
 Kelmscott Press 2341–2
 Kemaleza, Allan 3081
 Kemal, Mustafa: see Atatürk
 Kemp-Welch, A. 2698–700, 2705–7
 Kempton Park 510
 Kenafick, K. J. 107
 Kendal commune 156
 Kendo, Curtis 3088
 Keneally, Thomas 2982
 Kenefick, William 2818–22
 Kengo Wa Dondo 852
 Kenilorea, Peter 3081
 Kenjayev, Safarali 3245
 Kennedy, Charles 2820
 Kennedy, John F. affirmative action 754
 Alliance for Progress 799
 assassinated 745, 746–7, 2180
 Birmingham Campaign 1974
 Bolivian aid 417
 civil rights 741–2, 1258, 3398
 Commission on the Status of Women 3166
 Cuba 922
 Dominican Republic 1017
 Iran 1963
 Ngo Dinh Diem 2465
 non-alignment 3688
Spartacus 3150
 Vietnam 3480
 Kennedy, M. 3078
 Kennedy, Robert 741, 742, 743, 752
 Kennington Common 659
 Kent, Holly M. 1305–6
 Kent, R. K. 2586
 Kent, Susan 3564–70
 Kent, Victoria 3611
Kent State student uprising 1236, 1946–7, 2500
- Kenya 1947–53, 2268–70
 Harry Thuku Riot 3545–6
 labor unrest 2269
 Lyttelton Constitution 2269
 Mau Mau Rebellion 220, 1155, 1954, 2253–7,
 2269, 2690, 3371
 Mboya 2268–70 national protests for independence 1947–53 pro-democracy 1949
 trade union movement 3042
 women's role in liberation 3545
 World War II 1954
 Kenya Africa Union (KAU) 1954, 2255, 2269,
 3043

- Kenya African National Union (KANU)
1947–8, 1951–2, 1953, 2269
- Kenya African Workers' Congress 2691
- Kenya Federation of Registered Trade Unions
(KFRTU) 2269
- Kenya Land Freedom Army 3043
- Kenya Local Government Workers' Union
(KLGWU) 2269
- Kenya National Union of Teachers (KNUT)
1950
- Kenyan Independent Movement (KIM) 2269
- Kenyatta, Jomo 395, 1949, 1950, 1953–5, 3545
arrested 3043
Facing Mount Kenya 1953
Jock Scott Operation 2256
KANU 2269
and Robeson 2847
- Keo Ann 573
- Keo Meas 574, 1959, 1960
- Keo Sang Kim 573
- Keogh, Daire 1785–90
- Keogh, John 1787
- Kepple-Mamros, Deborah 1601
- Kerala 955–6, 2434
- Keralio, Louise (later Louise Robert) 1294
- Kerensky, Alexander 142, 2085, 2895, 2911, 2913, 2915, 2917, 2918, 3058, 3554
- Kerina, Mburumba 3300
- Kerkvliet, Benedict J. 1617
- Kern, Jerome 2846
- Kerner Commission 750, 3401
- Kerr, Charles H. of Chicago 1737
- Kerry, John 221
- Kershner, Jacob 1411
- Kesari* 1699
- Ketelholdt, Maximillian von 2322
- Ketteler, Clemens von 3674, 3675
- Kettle Creek 85
- Kett's Rebellion 509
- Key, Ellen 2968
- Key, Francis Scott 214
- Keynes, John Maynard 2436
- Keynesianism 1398, 1402–3, 1843
- Kgasa, M. 458
- Kgositsile, Keorapetse 2428
- Khachaturian, Aram 3149
- Khaitan, D. P. 1681
- Khaldunniyya School 3335
- Khalid Bey 3357
- Khalifah, Al-Khatim 3191
- Khalil, Abd Allah 3191
- Khama, Seretse 1955–7
BDP 460, 2358
Botswana nationalism 457–8, 1955–7 and Maripe 2221
- Khama, Tshekedi 458
- Khaminwa, John 1951
- Khampa people 3290, 3291, 3292, 3293
- Khan, Afzal 1697
- Khan, Khan Bahadur 1691, 1709
- Khan, Khushhal 2869
- Khan, M. S. 1705
- Khan, Meraj Muhammad 2583
- Khan, Zarina Rahman 344–8, 2753–9
- Khan Rebellion 2869
- Khartoum 2164
- Khatmiyya sect 3194
- Khattak, Afrasiab 2584
- Khattak tribe 2869
- Khazara peoples 329
- Khe Sanh, Battle of 3483
- Khidmat* (service to community) 1968
- Khidmatgar* (colonial use of term) 1968, 1970
- Khieu Samphan 569, 571, 573, 1959, 1960, 1961
- Khilafat* movement 2318, 2340, 2573
- Khiva, Battle of 3421
- Khivan Khanate 642, 3420
- Khizirkhayn al din: see Barbarossa
- Khleb I Volia* (Bread and Freedom) 142
- Khleivniuk, Oleg 3161
- Khmelnysky Uprising 1957–8
- Khmer alphabet, Romanized 569
- Khmer Issarak 575, 577
- Khmer Krom 1959
- Khmer People's Revolutionary Party (KPRP) 569, 1959
- Khmer Renewal Party 570
- Khmer Republic 3484
- Khmer Rouge 574–5, 1958–61
CPT 3262
DRV 1599
Indochinese War III 3486
Lon Nol 3485
Pol Pot 573–4, 1958–61
- Khoekhoe people 3539
- Khojaev, Faizullah Ubaidullaevich 3244, 3421
- Khomeini, Ayatollah Sayyid Ruhollah
Mussau'i 780, 889, 1763, 1769–75, 1811,
1961–5
Shi'ite Islamic Revolution 1961–5, 2505–6
students 3181
- Khrong Chandawong 3260
- Khrushchev, Nikita anti-Stalin speech 839, 1220, 2262, 2387, 2698, 3062, 3282, 3299, 3367 arms control 196 de-Stalinization of Hungary 1625, 1627–8, 3117
non-alignment 3688
revolution 1216

- Romanian student protests 2866 threatening Poland 2699
 and Tito 3691
 withdrawal of aid for China 2995
- Khuda-i Khidmatgar (Red Shirts) 1328, 1682, 1965–70, 2494
 banned 2580
- Khuzestan 1763
- Khyber, Mir Akbar 13
- Kiangsi News* 734
- kibbutz* 3742
- kidnappings 255, 1427–8, 1576, 2362
- Kiel, Treaty of 2523
- Kiergaard, Søren 973
- Kiernan, Victor G. 2249
- Kiesinger, Kurt-George 3523
- Kikuyu 2254–5, 2256, 3545
- Kikuyu Central Association (KCA) 1953
- Kildare, Earl of 1804
- Kiliç Ali 3357
- Kill the Lord Society 1997
- Killdeer Mountain, Battle of 900
- Killian, L. M. 776, 779
- Kilmainham, Treaty of 967, 2547, 2617
- Kim Dae-jung regime 1980, 1982, 1989, 1992, 2000, 2014, 3184
- Kim Jae-gyu 1999
- Kim Joa-jin 1970–1
- Kim Jong-jin 1970
- Kim Kyung-sook 1982
- Kim Woo-jung 1983
- Kim Young-sam regime 1988, 2000, 3184
- Kimathi, Dedan 2255, 3043
- Kimberley 147, 148, 3091
- Kin Lalot 639
- Kina Hurricane 1198
- King, A. D. 1974
- King, Alexander 1503–8, 1508–10, 1525–34,
 1534–7, 1537–40, 1540–5, 1545–7, 3306–12
- King, Cheryl L. A. 2196–8
- King, Coretta Scott 1971, 1977
- King, J. B. 1738
- King, J. E. 1670
- King, James M. 242–3, 3036–7
- King, Martin Luther, Jr. 1971–7
 assassinated 19, 1976, 3402
 attacked 1973
 Birmingham, Alabama 743–4, 3398
 on Black Power 751
 Carmichael on 613
 charisma 651–3
 Chicago 751–2, 3400
 civil rights movement 220, 651, 889, 3398
 Freedom Summer 1259
 and Gandhi 1971, 2498
- Hoover 752–3
- “I Have a Dream” speech 745, 2037, 2803
- “I Have Been to the Mountaintop” speech 1976
- MIA 761, 2614
- Montgomery Bus Boycott 17, 762, 1971–2, 2615
- NAACP 1971
 and Nehru 1973
- Nobel Peace Prize 745
- Stride Toward Freedom* 1973
- Time* magazine cover 1973
- on Vietnam 753
- see also* Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC)
- King, Nathan 330–1, 452–3, 3022–3, 3060–2, 3524–35
- King, Robert 1124
- King, Rodney 3403
- King, Stewart R. 994–6, 1510–14, 1521–3, 2552–5
- King, William Lyon Mackenzie 588, 2832
- King David Hotel 358–9
- Kingdom community 3327
- Kingitanga (king movement) 2206
- Kingston, Steve 837
- Kinjikitile, chief 3254
- Kinmel Park riot 510
- Kinshasa protest, Congo 856–8
- Kinsman, Gary 2098–100
- Kintanar, Romulo 2685, 2687
- Kipré, Pierre 884
- Kirchenleute 1301
- Kirchheimer, Otto 905
- Kirchner, Néstor 264, 268, 269–70, 2160, 3658
- Kirk, James 3000
- Kirkland, Frank M. 1572–4
- Kirkpatrick, Gwen 2313
- Kirn, Gal 1080–1, 3743–4
- Kirner, Joan 3564
- Kirov, Sergei 3030, 3162
- Kirschbaum, Stanislav J. 1596–7, 3048–9, 3049–50, 3293–4, 3432–6
- Kirti* 1677, 3041
- Kisan Sabha (Peasant Association) 1706, 2265
- Kishi Nobusuke 1887
- Kishinev pogroms 1746
- Kishkina, Elizaveta Pavlovna 2114
- Kissa Khani Bazaar 2494
- Kissinger, Henry 689, 1146, 2436, 3483, 3484, 3739
- Kissyov, Hadji Yordan 539
- Kiszcak, General 3076
- Kitchener, Horatio Herbert 2164
- Kitson, Ian 3104

- Kizil Tepe peace 3242
 Klaew Norapati 3259
 Klaus, Václav 3435
 Kleber-Claux family 107
 Klehr, Harvey 839, 840
 Klein, Naomi 1400, 3657
 Klennerman, Fanny 833
 kleptocracy 1504, 3685
 Klerides, Glafkos 948
 Klessmann, Christoph 1342
 Klimmer, Rudolf 2105
 Kline, Michael 2610–13
 Kling, B. 1712
 Klinger, Friedrich Maximilien 3189
 Klub Sigma 140
 Kmara 814, 817, 3377
 KMT (Kuomintang): see Guomintang
 Knazko, Milan 3435
 Knight, Anne 205, 3620
 Knight, Joseph 202
 Knight, Louise W. 10–12, 3165–8
Knights of Labor 587, 830, 1734, 1977–9,
 2021, 2029, 2450
 AFL 1978, 2026, 2258–9
 Knights of St. Crispin 587
 Knights of the White Camelia 19
 Knights Templar 2183–4 knitting frame: see machine breaking Knöchel, Wilhelm 1377
 Knowles, Christopher 294
 Knowles Riot 294, 296
 Knox, Henry 3023
 Knox, John 1095, 3000
 Knox, Macgregor 1176
 Knuden, Halsten 2524
 Knudsen, Peter 990
 Ko Ba Thaug 553–4
 Ko Hla Baw 554
 Ko Shan Theater gatherings 1605
 Kobe Workers' Union 1877
 Kobu Rebellion 1998
 Koçgiri Uprising 3358
 Kochan, L. 2921
 Koedt, Anne 3167, 3629
 Koenigstein, François Claudius (Ravachol) 120
Koepi 1741
 Koestler, Arthur 3149
 Kohl, B. 433
 Kohl, Helmut 1344, 1345, 1367
 Köhler, Major General 1720
 Koinange, Mbiyu 1953
 Koirala, B. P. 2441, 2442, 2443
 Koirala, Girija Prasad 230, 231, 2437, 2438, 2439 Kokand Autonomous Provisional Government 643
 Kokori, Frank 2481
 Kokoshkin, F. 2909
 Kokuro (Japanese National Railways' Union)
 1879, 1882, 3070
 Kokushoku Sensensha (Black Battle Front) 134
 Kokutetsu Rodokumiai Sorengokai 1895
 Kokutetsu Soren 1894, 1895
 Kol revolt 1708
 Kolakowski, Leszek 2301, 2302, 2839
 Kolakowski lectures 2695
 Kolhapur Bomb Case 1675
 Kollataj, Hugo 2711
Kollontai, Alexandra 124, 1979–80, 2087,
 2243, 3016, 3553
 Conference of Working Women 3606
 feminism 3553
 and Gurevich 3551 on Lenin 3554 recognition 3553
 sexual liberation 3607–8
 and Shlyapnikov 3029
 Social Bases of the Women Question 3553
 Union for Women's Equality 3390
 Worker's Opposition 3029
 Zhenotdel 3606–7
 Kollwitz, Käthe 1483
 Kom, Anton de 1032
 Koma Ciwakên Kurdistan (KCK) 2012
 Koma Komelên Kurdistan (KKK) 2012
 Komala (KDP) 1762
 Komarayya, Doddi 1707
Kombinat 140
 Komin-Kochin Party 554
 Komité Nasyonal Kongrè Oganisasyon
 Démokratik (KONAKOM) 1505
Komites (vigilante committees) 1964
Kommunist, Der 2046
 Komsomol 534
Komunikat 2696, 2698
 Konare, Alpha Oumar 2182
 Kondo Kenji 1848
 Kondratieff cycle 1217–18
 Kong Le 2055
 Kong Yee Sai Mau (Protest the WTO) 3652–3
 Kongra-Gel (Kurdistan Peoples) 2012
 Kongreya Azadî û Demokrasiya Kurdistan
 (KADEK) 2012
 Koniecpolski, Aleksander 1957
Konmayi Athins 553
 Konoplyanikova, Zina 3552
 Konovalov, Aleksandr 2900, 2906
 Konstantin, Prince 2878
 Konstantinos, of Greece 1441, 1452
 Koonz, Claudia 1183
 Kooper, Simon 2393

- Koornhof Bills 3089
 Koornong school 107
KOR: see Workers' Defense Committee (KOR)
Korčula Summer School, Yugoslavia 3690
 Korda, Alexis 1484
 Kordatos, Yannis 1442
Korea
 anarchism 135–7
 April Revolution 3181, 3182
 caste system 1997
 civic movement 1980–1
 Democratic Unionism 1985–6
 feudalism 1998
 General Strike 1988–9
 Great Workers' Struggle 1985–6, 1990
 Hot Summer of 1987 1984–5
 IMF 1996
 Japanese rule 734, 1896, 1998–9
 June Uprising 3181
 Kwangju uprising 1982–3, 2014–15, 3181, 3182–3 labor law revision 1988
 labor movement 1981–93
 migrant workers' struggle 1993–4
 national liberation 1999, 3183
 neoliberalism 1988–9, 2001–2
 New Management Strategy 2001
 NGOs 1994
 peasants' and farmers' movement 1995–6 popular movements for democracy 1998–2001 popular rebellions and uprisings 1996–8 Renovation Government 3182 self-immolation of worker 1981 shipbuilding 1987–8
 student movement 3181–5
 union structure 1981–2 urban poor 1994–5 urbanization 1994
 see also South Korea
 Korea Telecom 1993
 Korean Advanced Farmers' Federation 3646
 Korean Anarchist Federation in China 135, 1926
 Korean Anarcho-Communist Federation 136
 Korean Confederation of Student Unions (Hanchongryun) 3185 Korean Confederation of Trade Unions (KCTU) 1986–7, 1988, 1992, 1993, 1994
 Korean Congress of Trade Union Representatives (KCTUR) 1986–7
 Korean Council of Industrial Trade Union Federations 1986
 Korean Employers Federation (KEF) 1986
 Korean Federation of Poor People's Movements 1995
 Korean Independent Army 1970
 Korean Peasant League (KPL) 1995, 3463
 Korean People's Delegation Against HK WTO 3651
 Korean Trade Union Congress (KTUC) 1985–6
 Korean War
 Australian resistance 304 impact on Uruguay 3404
 and Japan 1879, 1885, 1909, 3069 and national liberation 1999
 Peng 2630
 South Korean society 1999
 Korean Youth Federation in South China 1926
 Korean Youth Wartime Operational Unit 1926
 Korec, Bishop 3050
 Korfanty, Wojciech 3037
 Kornegger, Peggy 159
 Kornilov, Lavr 2085, 2913–14, 2915, 3325
 Korokyo 1879, 1882
 Korom Shah 371
 Koromah, Johnny Paul 3032
 Korsch, Karl 377, 2136, 3082
 Marxism and Philosophy 905, 2838
 Western Marxism 1423
 Korsun, Battle of 1958
 Kościuszko, Tadeusz 2715
 Kosik, Karel 2839
Kosovo
 Albanian nation-state 35
 Albanians 2002–3 civil and armed resistance 2002–3
 counterrevolution 3010
 general strike 3010
 Milošević 37
 NATO 1831, 2003
 rebellion 223
 Tute Bianche 1008
 Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA) 37, 2002–3
 Kosovo Protection Corps (KPC) 2003
 Kossomak, Queen 571
 Kossuth, Lajos (Louis) 1143, 1149, 1619, 1620, 1623, 1624
 Kostov, Vladimir 538
 Kostroma 2891, 2944
 Koštunica, Vojslav 812, 2509, 3011, 3012
 Kotahitanga (Unity) movement 2208
 Kotane, Moses 171, 172, 832, 3104, 3106
 Kotoku Shusui 97, 133, 158, 1807, 2566
 Kotzebue, August von 558, 1347
 Koukoules, Georgos 3219–21
 Koumis, Iakovos 127
 Kovacs, Bela 1618
 Kovel, Joel 2249
 Kovner, Abba 1917
 Kowalewski, David 1217, 1218
 Koxinga (Cheng Ch'eng-kung) 2311

- Koy Pech affair 572
 KPD: see Communist Party of Germany
 Kraai, Hamilton 152, 154
 Kracauer, Siegfried 905, 1256
 Krahl, Hans-Jürgen 3170
 Krahom, Ben 568, 1958
 Krakatoa eruption 1900
 Krakow Revolution 2701–2
 Krakow students 2706
 Král', Janko 1621
 Kramártsik, Karl 1620
 Kramer, Larry 8–9
 Kramer, Mark 2746
 KRAS (Russian IWA) 143
 Krasnov, General 2919, 2929
 Krause, Allison 1947
 Krausism 3610
 Krausz, Károly 128
 Kravchuk, Leonid 3376
 Kreisauer Circle 1595
 KREM Television 1634
 Krenz, Egon 1345
 Krieger Vasena, Adalbert 865, 866, 868
 Krim, Abdel 2336
 Kripalani, J. B. 1329
 Kripalani, Sucheta 1329, 2794
 Krishak Sabha (Peasant Association) 2575, 2576
 Kristeva, Julia 3576
 Kristian I, of Sweden 1495
 Kristian II, of Sweden 1495–6
 Kritzingner, F. J. 1088
 Krivine, Alain 2261
 Krivoshein, General 2889
 Kroesen, Frederick 1369
 Krog, Gina 2524
 Krom Pracheachon (People's Group) 577, 1959
Kronstadt Mutiny 100, 143, 379, 1413,
 2003–5, 2087, 2883, 2905, 3013, 3507
 Workers' Opposition pamphlet 3029
Kropotkin, Peter 2005–9
 anarchism 94, 95, 98, 634, 2005, 2926
 anarchocommunist 120, 123, 160, 2008
 and Bakunin 2008
Conquest of Bread 2007 and Cornelissen 870
 decentralism 2048
Fields, Factories, and Workshops 2007
Freedom 2007
 funeral 143 and Godwin 1410
 and Goldman 1411
 as influence 119, 133, 142, 1561
 and Makhno 2166
Memoirs of a Revolutionist 2007
Mutual Aid 114, 2007, 2620 mutual aid theory 2006, 2007
 and Reclus 2008, 2813, 2814
Révolution, La 2006, 2811
Révolution, Le 2006, 2811 scientific work 2006 and Seymour 108
 Socialist League 2341
 and tsars 2005–6
 United Brethren 2323
 World War I 2890
 Krüger, Hans Andersen 990
 Krukowiecki, Jan 331, 2716
 Krupp iron mines 165
 Krupskaya, Nadezhda 2082, 2993, 3159, 3553
Zhenshchina Rabotnitsa 3552
 Krymov, General 2895
 Ku Klux Klan (KKK)
 Birmingham Campaign 3398
 black resistance 16, 17, 18, 19
 Fort Pillow massacre 2801
 Freedom Rides 742, 1257–8
 and law officers 1259
 lynching 1024
 NAACP against 2067, 3534 and Oklahoma tenant farmers 1459 reestablished 2822–3, 2824
 Kuang Fu Hui 733
 Kuang-hsu, Emperor 3201
 Kubai, Fred 2256
 Kubik, Jan 3072–80
 Kubilay, killed 3361
 Kubitschek, Juscelino 2351
 Kubota, Shigeko 1191
 Kubrick, Stanley 3149
 Kucan, Milan 224
 Kuchma, Leonid 3329, 3376, 3377
 Küçük, Hülya 3354–9
Kudi Arasu 956
 Kühn, Augusto 259
 Kuhn, Gabriel 158–60, 2299–300
 Kuhn, Thomas 2987
kulaks (landowning farmers) 2898, 2935, 3509
Kulaura uprising 2576
 Kuliev, Avdi 3368
 Kulik, Eva 3556
Kuliscioff, Anna 2009, 3341
 Kulov, Felix 3329, 3331, 3333
Kultura 3077
 Kumaramand, Swami 1680
 Kumaranatunga, Vijaya 2633
 Kumaranatunga, Chandrika 3252, 3253
 Kumbikano, Clement 2175
 Kun, Bela 1598, 1920, 2136, 2387
 Kundera, Milan 949, 1235
 Kung-chuan Hsiao 3235

- Kunnuji, Michael O. N. 2114–16
 Kuokkavierasjuhlat 118–19
 Kuomintang: see Guomindang
 Kupi, Abaz 29
Kurdish national autonomy movement
 1762–3
 Kurdish rebellions 283, 3358–9
Kurdistan 1762, 2009–13, 2010
 nationalist movement 352, 2009–13, 3355
 Kurdistan Democratic Party (KDP) 1762, 1776, 3516
Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) 2009–13, 3343–4, 3354
 Kurds
 Al Ahad Society 1775
 assimilation attempts 2010 declaration of independence 1762, 1775 distribution of 1762
 Iraq 353
 Lausanne, Treaty of 2010
 Kuria, Manasses 1949
 Kuro Solidarity Strike 1983–4, 3182
Kuroń, Jacek 2013–14, 2695, 2696, 2698, 2705
 Kurras, Karl-Heinz 1037
 Kurt, Andrew 2406–7
 Kurtz, Geoffrey 1912–13
 Kurtz, Lester 2511
 Kurzack, Roska 1917
 Kusin, Vladimir 2745
 Kuskova, E. D. 3554
 Kutako, Hosea 2396, 2530
 Kutler, N. 2900, 2906
 Kwa, Aileen 3644–8
 Kwahjalein Atoll 199
 Kwaio Rebellion 3081
 Kwangju residents' riot 1994
Kwangju student uprising 1982–3, 2014–15, 3181, 3182–3
 KwaZulu-Natal areas 3100
 Kwiatek, Józef 2718
 Kwon Young-gil 1987, 1991, 1992
 Kyoto Protocol 1430
 Kyprianos, Archbishop 943
Kyrgyzstan 3328–34, 3421
 NGOs 814
 poverty 3328
 Tulip Revolution 811, 813, 2511, 3021,
 3328–34
 Kyrkos, Michalis 1445
 L7 2845
 La Barbera, Arnaldo 1310
La Boétie, Etienne de 2017–18
 Discourse of Voluntary Servitude 2017
 La Botz, Dan 2290–5, 2297–9
 La Canadiense power plant 351, 847
 La Cassiere, Jean Levesque de 2183–4
La Ceiba Uprising 2018–19
 La Escalera, Conspiracy of 911
 La Follette, Robert 2488–9, 3065
 La Guma, Jimmy 2395–6
La Matanza Peasant Revolt 638–9, 1163,
 2019–20, 2956
 La Mon House restaurant firebombing 1797, 1802
 Labadie, Jo 157
 Laban, Abu 992
 Laban ng Masa (Struggle of the Masses) 2687
 Laberge, Yves 1001–2, 2315–16, 2380–2
 “LABIA” (Lesbians and Bisexuals in Action)
 2109
 labor forced 1475, 1522, 3163, 3709
 globalization 1670–1
hod begari system 2576
 indentured 75, 211, 1031, 1197, 1498, 1512, 1695, 3425 racially segregated 313 reproductive 3370
 unpaid 371
see also wages
Labor 2218, 2649
 Labor, Livio 2622
 Labor and Unemployed Association (LUA) 365
 Labor Contract Act 2075
 Labor Relation Adjustment Law, Japan 1895, 1898
 Labor Relations Act 875, 3097, 3731
Labor Standard 2027
 labor theory of value 2233
 Labor Union of Women 3598
labor unions: see trade unions
Labor's Volunteer Army 2038–9
 Labotsibeni, Queen Regent 3205
Labour and the New Social Order 3517
 Labour Discipline Law 2360
Labour Party, Britain 520, 521, 522–3, 528, 2039–41
 Labriola, Antonio 1423, 2243, 2838
 Labyrinth Foundation Counseling service 2108
 Lacalle, Luis Alberto 3407
 Lacan, Jacques 3576, 3743
 Lacandon Jungle Declarations 3712, 3715, 3718
 Lacandon Selva insurgency 2287
 Lacayo, Gonzalo 2564
 Lacey, Tom 307
 Laçi, Vasil 30
 Lacin, Asja 376
 Laclau, Ernesto 772, 773, 983, 3743
 Lacombe, Claire 1290, 1294, 1296–7

- Laczó, Ferenc 1622–4, 1625–30
Ladder, The 2107
Ladies' Home Journal sit-in 3629
 Lady Musgrave Self-Help Society 3558
 Ladyfest 2845
 Lafargue, Laura 2754
 Lafargue, Pablo 144
Lafayette, Marquis de 83, 505, 1231, 1276, 1525, 1607, 2041–2
 National Guard 2409
 Ogé 2553
 Washington 505, 2041
 Wright 3666
 Laflamme, Rodolphe 2841
 Lafleur, Jacques 2458, 2459
 Lafontant, Roger 1507
 Lagardelle, Hubert 3228
 Lagman, Felimon 2685
 Lagos colony 3676, 3677, 3678
 Lagrée, Doudart de 3476
 Laguiller, Arlette 3577
 Lagun-Aro 2315
 Lahore Resolution 1921
 Lahoud, Emile 636
Lail-o-Nehar 1160, 2581
 Laín Sáenz, Domingo 1082
 Laíno, Domingo 2601, 2603, 2606
 Laisant, C. A. 3218–19
 Laitinen, Jukka 118–19
 Lake, Gerard 1788, 1793, 1794
 Lake, Marilyn 303, 3561–4
 Lal-i-Badakhshan 3245
 Lala Har Dayal 158
Lalor, Peter 1145, 2043–4
 Lalumière Report 299
 Lam, Wilfredo 2428
 Lama, Luciano 1838
 Lamar group 3611
 Lamarck, Jean-Baptiste 2994
Lamartine, Alphonse de 1149, 2044–5
 History of the Girondins 2044
 Méditations poétiques 2044
 Lamb, William 2724, 2725
 Lambert, John 1100
 Lambert, Tobias 2224–6
 Lambeth Loyal Association 2127, 3150–1
 Lambrakis, Grigoris 1446
Lame, Manuel Quintín 805–6, 2045–6, 2791 see also Quintín Lame (CQL)
 Lamennais, Felicité de 111
 Lamming, George 2852
 Lamont-de la Huerta Treaty 2541
 Lamy, Pascal 3651, 3652
 Lancaster, Roger 774
 Lancaster House Conference 3736, 3738
 Lanctôt, Jacques 2786–7
 Land Acquisition Act 2575, 2979
 Land Apportionment Act 3734
Land and Freedom (Loach) 2738
 Land and Freedom Army: see Mau Mau
 Rebellion
 Land and Freedom movement 2426, 2693
 Land and Housing Federation (FTV) 264
 Land League of Ireland 967, 968, 1415
 see also Irish National Land League
 Land and Liberty movement 334, 978
 Land Nationalization Act, Burma 2527
 Land Research Action Network (LRAN) 3462 Land Rights Act (NT) 4, 5
 Land Rights Commission 4
 Land to the Tiller Act 3238
Landau, Kurt 2046–7
Landauer, Gustav 116, 1609, 2047–9
 anarchopacifism 99, 2048
 Aufruf zum Sozialismus 2048
 Revolution, Die 2048–9
 Sozialistischer Bund 2048, 2049, 3082
 Landes, J. B. 1292
 Landes, Joan 3016
 Landless People's Movement 3100, 3462
 see also Movimento Sem Terra (MST)
 Lane, Fintan 619–20
 Lane, Max 1721–4, 1727–34
 Lane, William 106, 108, 2449–50
 Bushmen of Australia 2451
 death 2454
 Guaraní Indians 2452
 see also New Australia movement
 Lang, J. D. 105
 Lang Son attack 1713
 Langa massacre 2358, 3094
 Lange, David 2529
 Langford, Charles 2615
 Lanka Estate Workers' Union 2053
Lanka Sama Samaja Party (LSSP) 969,
 1494, 2049–54, 2631, 2632, 3527
 Lansdale, Edward G. 1615
 Lanteri Renshaw, Julieta 3597
 Lanusse, Agustin 249, 1156
 Lanz, Carlos 3444, 3454
 Lanzmann, Jacques 2381
 Lao Dong (Workers' Party of Vietnam) 1599, 1600, 3479, 3480, 3481, 3482
 Lao Hun 568
 Lao Issara (Free Lao movement) 2054, 3083, 3472
 Lao People's Democratic Republic 2055
 Lao Popular Party 3474
 Laor, Yitzhak 1760
Laos 2054, 2054–5, 3261, 3474

- Lapita people 3080
 Laplace, Pierre Simon 2990
 Laporte, Pierre 592, 2787
 LaPorte, Roger 220
 Lappe, Francis Moore 3429
 Lapse Doctrine, Dalhousie 1687
 Lapua movement 2519
 Lara, Lúcio 1216
 Lara, Ruth 3605
 Lara Parada, Ricardo 1082
 Lardizával, Martín de 163–4
 Largo Caballero, Francisco 146, 291, 3130, 3136, 3140, 3142
 Popular Army 3137
 Larkin, E. 1027
 Larkin, James 860, 1026, 1027
 Larmer, Miles 696–8, 3695–706
 Larocca, Giuseppina 3067, 3389
 Larsen, Henry 148
 Larsen, Nella 1555
 Las Casas, Bartolomé de 601, 1116, 1562, 2056, 2593
 Las Queseras del Medio, Battle of 578
 Lascaris Castellar, Jean Paul 2184
 Lashkar-e-Taiba 1811
 Lasker-Schüler, Else 1609
 Laski, Harold 2197
 Lassalle, Ferdinand 1350, 1910, 2025, 2026, 2236, 2237, 3055, 3066
 Latief, Abdul 1723
 Latimer, Hugh 516, 1095
Latin America 2055–64, 2376–80, 3596–601 agricultural production 1662
 anti-neoliberalism 1400
 average income 1671
 bishops' conferences 2057
 Catholic Church 1924, 2055–63 colonial period 2055–6 debt crises 3461
 feminist meetings 3600–1
 folk Catholicism 2057 historical space-time theory 48 hunger 1662
 Japanese-descent people 1876
 Marxism 2249
 missionaries 2057–8
 music and protest 2376–80 national identities 2767
 NGOs 3599–600
 poverty 2058, 2059–60
 punk rock/protest 2063–4
 rebellious peasant movements 480–1
 “Sixty-Eight” 3169
 strikes 2494
 student movements 3179, 3180
 women's movements 3596–601
 women's suffrage 3598
 World Social Forum 3641
 see also individual countries
 Latin America Security Operation (LASO) 799
 Latin American Bishops' Council (CELAM) 479
 Latin American Bridge of the Americas 2593
 Latin American Coordinating Group of Rural Organizations (CLOC) 3462
 Latino politics 2499
 Latortue, Gérard 1509, 1510
 Lattre de Tassigny, General de 3473
 Latvia 340, 2925, 2933, 3039–40
 Latvian Independence Day 341
 Laud, William 908, 1097, 2118
 Laurel, José P. 1614, 1615
 Laurel, Salvador 2675, 2682
 Laurens, Henry 295
 Lausanne, Treaty of Cyprus 944
 Greece 1454
 Kurds 2010
 Turkey 3349, 3355, 3358, 3360, 3362
 Lause, Mark 55–69, 74–88
Lautaro 2064–5
 Lava, Jesus 1612, 1616
 Lava, José 1612, 1615, 1616, 2677
 Lavabre, Guillaume 2215
 Laval, Pierre 179
 Lavalas 1507, 1508, 1510, 1520–1
 Laveaux, Etienne 3311
 Laver, Brian 107
 Lavoisier, Antoine 2990–1, 2992
 Lavrov, Pëtr 976
 Law and Liberty League 406
 Lawrence, Carmen 3564
 Lawrence, D. H. 2262
 Lawrence, Henry 1690
 Lawrence textile workers' strike 502–4, 836, 1204, 2623
 Lawson, F. 1075
 Lawson, Henry 2449, 2454
 Lawson, Louisa 3561
 Lay, Benjamin 213
 Laycock, Lieutenant 3491–2
 Lazare, Bernard 99
 Lazare, Mzumbo 3315
 Lazzaretti, Davide 1846
 Lazzari, Constantino 1822
 Le Blanc, Paul 677–8, 765–76, 1422–7, 1574–5, 1647–53, 1664–73, 2020–31, 2031–8, 2081–8, 2088–91, 2120–1, 2142–8, 2165–8, 2229–39, 2239–51, 2629–31, 3156–64, 3321–7, 3424 le Bon, Gustav 886

- Le Carré, John 840
Le Duan 1600, 2065–6, 3480
 Le Duc Tho 3480, 3484
 Le Duy Phung 3475
 Le May, Curtis 416
 Le Pen, Jean-Marie 1449, 1645, 2458
 Leabua Jonathan, Chief 2112
 Leach, James 657
 Leacock, Eleanor 2249
Leader, The 1799
 League Bazaars 177
 League of Communists of Yugoslavia (LCY)
 3011, 3637, 3689, 3692
 League of Empire Loyalists 2526
 League of the Free Peoples 288
 League of Freethinking Women 3598
 League of Gileadites 533
 League for the Independence of Vietnam 1598
 League of the Just 2234
 League of Nations 1182, 1749
 Albania 36
 Bulgaria 541
 Charter 1173
 Germany 1592
 Greece 1442, 1453
 Iraq 1775
 Namibia 2394, 2397
 Silesia 3037
 Versailles System 1172
 League of Peace and Freedom 2811
 League of Reform Forces 224
League of Revolutionary Black Workers
 2066–8, 3071
 League for Social Reconstruction 2975
 League for Women's Equality 3554, 3606
 League of the Working Classes of Greece 1440
 Lease, Mary Elizabeth 2727
 Leather Workers' Union 2345
 Leballo, Potlako 2111
 Lebanese Front 2070
 Lebanese National Movement 2070
Lebanon 635–6, 2068–74
 ammiyyah 2073
 Cedar Revolution 635–6
 Christians 635
 civil war 1575, 1576, 2070–2
 Druze–Christian conflicts 635, 2073, 2074
 insurrection 2068–70
 Maronites 2073
 Muslims and Druzes 635
 National Pact 2068, 2070 partition of 2073
 PLO 360 revolts, 19th century 2072–4
 Shi'ite Muslims 635
 Sunni Muslims 635, 2073
 and Syria 635–6, 2069, 2072
 US intervention 2069
 Lebanon War 1813, 1814, 2405
 LeBas, Philippe 2951
 Lebel, Jean-Jacques 2260
Lebensraum (living space) 1590, 1592, 2272
 Leberstein, Stephen 463–4, 1124–5, 3215–19
 Lebron, Lolita 2770
 Lecesne, Louis 205
 Lech Walesa Institute 3503
 Lechín, Juan 419, 422, 428, 429, 430
 Lecky, W. E. H. 1794
 Leclerc, Charles 995, 1546, 1716
 Leclerc, Jacques 1266, 1599
 Leclerc, Théophile 1290
 Leclerc, Victor-Emmanuel 1266
 Lecompte, Claude Martin 2610
 Lecompte, Thomas 2610
 Ledru-Rollin, Alexandre Auguste 1149, 1243, 1245
 Lee, Algernon 3065
 Lee, Arthur 508
 Lee, Gordon 151
 Lee, Harry 83
 Lee, Herbert 1258
 Lee, M. 1039
 Lee, Martin Chu-ming 1604, 1605
 Lee, Mary 3561
 Lee, "Mother" Ann 3019, 3614
 Lee, Richard Henry 80
 Lee, Robert E. 60, 63, 66–7, 534
 Lee Jesu 1998
 Lee Kyung Hae 1996, 3463, 3646, 3647
 Lee Mong-hak 1997
 Lee Pilje 1998
 Lee Seok-gyu 1984
 Lee Sung-gye 1996
 Lees–Mody Pact 1684
Leeward Islands
 abolition of slavery 2075 emigration rates 2076, 2077
 Garveyites 2077
 labor protests 2074–9
 racism 2076, 2078
 sugar industry 2075–6
 Trade Union Act 2077
 see also individual islands
 Lefebvre, Georges 1274, 1283, 1286, 2249
 Lefebvre, Henri 973, 1284, 2249, 3045, 3423
 Lefela brothers 2110
 Lefort, Claude 621, 3062
 Lefranc, G. 3216
 Left Front, Bengal 3588

- Left Revolutionary Movement (MIR) 50, 679, 683, 684, 687, 1058, 2644, 2660, 3437, 3442, 3446, 3450
- Left Social Revolutionaries 3058
- Leghari, Farooq 2584
- Legien, Carl 1362
- Legión Británica 3458
- Legion of the Archangel Michael 1173, 2857
- Leguía, Augusto 1567, 2217, 2648
- Lehi (Fighters for Israel's Freedom) 374, 375
- Lehman, Herbert 841
- Lehmann, Orla 989, 2984, 2985
- Lehning, Arthur 3082
- Lei Zhen 3236–7
- Leibensperger, Summer D. 351–2, 465–6, 2643, 3365–8, 3518–20
- Leigh, General (Chile) 683
- Leinster colonists 1804
- Leipzig, Battle of 443, 1347, 1349
- Leisler's Rebellion 75
- Lekhanya, J. M. 2112
- Lekhotla la Bafo (LLB) 2110–11
- Lemass, Séan 2572
- Lemba, Sebastian 2079–80
- Lembede, Anton 2111, 2191, 3086, 3087
- Lemel, Nathalie 2300
- Lemieux, Robert 2787
- Lemisch, Jesse 296
- Lemkin, Raphael 282
- Lemoine Plan 2458
- Lempira 2080
- Lemus, José María 1163
- Lena goldfields 2940
- Lenin, Vladimir Ilyich 2081–8, 3424–5
- April Theses* 439, 2085, 2902–3, 3554
- on Bernstein 381, 382
- Bolshevism 2082, 2085–6
- Brest-Litovsk 2933–4
- and Bukharin 535
- on colonialism 1649
- Declaration of Rights of the Peoples of Russia 643
- Development of Capitalism in Russia* 2082
- Draft Law on Workers' Control 2918
- in exile 2890, 2894
- Finland 1202
- on Hegel 2838
- Hô Chi Minh 1597
- on imperialism 1649, 1651–2
- Imperialism, the Highest Stage of Capitalism* 1651–2, 2084
- influence in Caribbean 1863–4
- on Kautsky 1672, 1942, 2084
- Kautsky on 1664
- Left-Wing Communism* 2086, 2447
- and Martov 2228
- Marxism 2089, 2244–7
- Marxist theories 2090, 2243
- Materialism and Empirio-Criticism* 438, 2083, 2838, 2993
- nationalization 2903
- NEP 535, 2087, 3510
- Olson on 649
- One Step Forward* 2082
- on Paris Commune 2613
- and Plekhanov 2694
- proletariat 1215
- Proletkult* 2993–4
- RSDWP 1915
- on Russian Revolution 2878
- Second International 175, 2889, 3058
- self-determination 322
- on Stalin 2087–8, 3059, 3158, 3511
- State and Revolution* 1000, 2085, 2147, 2237, 3058–9
- state capitalism 2934
- and Trotsky 2244–5, 3158, 3321
- Twenty-One Conditions 823, 824
- Two Tactics* 2082
- Vanguard party 3424–5
- war communism 2086–7
- What Is To Be Done?* 437, 770, 2082, 3424
- women's section of government 1751
- World War I 2083–4
- Lenin Club 833
- Leningrad 1182
- Leninist philosophy 1875, 2003, 2088–92
- Lennon, Danny 2522
- Lenormand, Maurice 2457
- Lenshina, Alice 3700
- Lenz, J. M. R. 3190
- Léo, André 123, 2613
- see also* Champseix, Léodile Bréa
- Leo X, Pope 515, 2830
- Leo XIII, Pope 2057
- Leon, José de 1616
- Léon, Pauline 1290, 1294, 1296
- León de la Barra, Francisco 2277
- Léonard, Roger 45
- Leoncavallo 1006
- Leopold I, of Belgium 362
- Leopold II, of Belgium 620, 856, 2714
- Leopold III, of Belgium 362, 363
- Leopold of Austria 892
- Leopold of Tuscany 1112
- Léques, Jean 2459
- LeRoi Jones: see Baraka, Imanu Amiri
- Leroux, Didier 2459
- Lerroux, Alejandro 291, 3130
- Les Cèdres 80

- Lesage, Jean 2783
- lesbian, gay, transsexual, bisexual movements (LGTB) 2092–109
- Australia 2096–8
- Canada 2098–100
- collective action 2503
- Germany 2093, 2100–6
- USA 2106–9
- lesbianism 3016
- feminism 2093–4, 3569, 3625
- movements 2103–4
- NOW 1299
- Lesbians Against the Right 2099
- Lescot, Élie 1517, 2872
- Lesotho 2109–13, 3112
- Lesotho Congress for Democracy (LCD) 2112
- Lesotho Highlands Water Project (LHWP) 2112, 3113
- Lesotho Liberation Army 2112
- Lespwa (Hope) 1510
- Lessing, Gotthold Ephraim 3146
- Letsie III 2112
- Lettrist International 972, 3044
- Leuenberger, Niklaus 3212, 3213
- Leutwein, Theodor 2391, 2392
- Levantamiento Indígena 1065–6
- Levasseur, Thérèse 2873
- Levelers 1100–2
- anarchist 93
- dissolution of monarchy 1098, 1099
- Lilburne 1100, 2118–19
- women 1107–8
- Lévesque, René 2783–8
- Levin, V. 2916
- Levinger, Moshe 1817
- Levingston, Roberto M. 249
- Levins, Richard 2997
- Levy, Carl 2168–71
- Lewanika, Godwin 3697, 3698
- Lewis, David Levering 1023
- Lewis, G. K. 2769
- Lewis, Joel A. 3678–9
- Lewis, John 745, 748, 750, 1257, 3187
- Lewis, John L. 49, 838, 2035–6, 3411, 3415
- Lewis, Mary Dewhurst 1643–7
- Lewis, Rufus 1971
- Lewis, Sarah 3562
- Lewis, Simon L. 2635–8
- Lewis, Tyron 3373
- Lexington 78
- Leyden, Jan van 2831
- LFLRA: see Lowell Female Labor Reform Association
- Lhasa rebellion 3290, 3291
- Li Dazhao 2200
- death of 725, 730
- Guomindang 114, 724
- May 4th movement 723
- Li Hsiu-cheng 3233
- Li Hung-chang 3675
- Li Lisan 2113–14, 2782, 3723–4, 3726
- Li Peng 3286, 3287
- Li Ping-shu 735
- Li Shizeng 114
- Li Tzu-cheng 2309, 2310
- Li Wencheng 717
- Li Zehou 3285
- Li Zicheng 714
- Libel Act 1223, 1224
- Libelt, Karol 3544
- Liberal, El* 408
- Liberal Autonomist Party 919
- Liberal Democratic Party, Japan 1882, 1889, 1907, 1909
- Liberal Party, Britain 522, 527–8
- Liberal Party, Canada 2787
- Liberal Party, Honduras 2018
- Liberal Party, Mexico 137
- Liberal Party, Paraguay 2608
- Liberal Revolution of Oporto 187
- Liberal Thinker, The* 3624
- Liberal Wars 187
- liberalism 1172, 1913
- Liberation* 2423
- Libération* 3576
- Liberation, Wars of 188–90, 2982
- Liberation Front, Slovenia 3683
- Libération Operation 2787
- Liberation Operation, Tamil 3251
- liberation theology
- Brazil 478–83
- CELAM 2059, 2500
- Gutiérrez 1497
- Haiti 279
- John Paul II on 2062, 2472
- Lugo 2134–5
- music 640
- Zambia 3704
- Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) 2634, 2740–1, 3251–3
- liberationist Christianity 479
- Liberator, The* 215, 1021, 1333, 1335, 1467, 2253, 3619
- Liberia
- freed slaves 2114, 2409
- origins of 207, 214
- protest and revolution 2114–16
- warlords 2115
- Liberian National Transitional Government 2115

- Liberians United for Reconstruction and Democracy (LURD) 2116
- Libertaire, Le* 120, 121
- libertarian communism 106
- Libertarian Education League 1124
- Libertarian Group 153
- Libertarian League 158
- libertarian socialism 96
- Libertarian Torch reading club 2755
- Libertarian Workers group 108
- libertarianism 97
- Liberty* (Tucker) 157
- Liberty, France* 2215–16
- Liberty Boys 77
- Librairie des femmes 3576
- Libya
Italy 1180, 1822, 3014
Nasserism 2406–7
and Philippines 2330
Qaddafi 2779
Sanusyyia 51
socialism 2328
- Lichtheim, George 1653
- Liebkecht, Karl 2116–17, 3147
anti-tsar demonstrations 1748
death of 1253, 1363, 3056, 3148
German Socialist Republic 1361
German war loans 3722
and Luxemburg 2117, 2147
Militarismus und Antimilitarismus 2117
Second International 1756
Spartacus League 3147–8
on SPD 2084, 2116
Studies in the Dynamic Laws of Social Development 2117
- Liebkecht, Wilhelm 259, 1351, 1756, 2116, 2237, 2243, 3055
- Liebman, Marcel 2089
- Life* 624
- Liffe (London International Financial Futures and Options Exchange) 1389, 1397, 2809
- Liga Filipina 444, 2846
- Liga Patriótica (Patriotic League) 248
- Ligas Agrarias 245
- Ligas Camponesas 472, 2117–18, 2350–1
- Ligondé, Archbishop 1507
- Ligue Communiste Révolutionnaire 2261
- Ligue du Droit des femmes (League of Women's Rights) 3575
- Ligue Féminine d'Action Sociale 3584–5
- Ligue internationale pour l'éducation rationnelle de l'enfance 1125
- Lih, L. T. 975–9, 3424
- Likud bloc 359, 1813, 1816, 1817
- Likud Party 1817, 1851
- Lilburne, Elizabeth (née Dewell) 1108, 2119
- Lilburne, John 1100, 1101, 1102, 1108, 2118–20
Freemans Freedom Vindicated, The 2119
Levelers 2119–20
Protectorate 2120
- Lilburne, Robert 1101
- Liliuokalani, Queen 1563–4, 1565–6
- Lilliput 1308
- Lim Keok-jung 1997
- Lim Su-kyung 3184
- Lima 2645, 2651, 2655–66
- Lima e Silva, Luis Alves de 491, 492
- Limanowski, Boleslaw 2717
- Limerick, Articles of 1784
- Limerick, fall of 1099
- Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty 197, 1460
- Lin Biao 711, 2120–1, 2204, 2422, 2631
- Lin Qing 717
- Linás-Marcoussis agreement 882
- Linch, Amy 167–70, 1190, 1194–5, 1224–5, 1608–9, 1632–3, 2013–14, 2301–3, 2688–90, 2694–8, 2700–5, 2715–17, 3501–4, 3636–7
- Lincoln, Abraham 2121–3
African Americans 394, 2121, 2122, 2123
anti-slavery 61, 2024, 2122
and Douglass 2121–2, 2123
election of 1860 57, 216
Emancipation Proclamation 70, 755
Preliminary Emancipation Proclamation 61
reelection bid 66
Second Inaugural 67
- Lincoln, Benjamin 3023
- Lindblom, Charles E. 3638
- Lindenberger, Thomas 1337
- Linder, Walter 2495
- Lindlay, Augustus 3232
- Lindley, John 3676
- Lingg, Louis 1569, 1570
- Lini, Walter 3426–7
- Linke, Die 829
- Linker Flügel der KPD/Marxisten/Leninisten 2046
- Linlithgow, Lord 1330, 1710, 2792, 2794
- L'Instant de Pradine, S. 205
- Linton, Marisa 2951–2
- Lipan, Battle of 2830
- Lipinski, Edward 2694
- Lippard, Lucy 1483
- Lippman, Walter 2825
- Lipset, Seymour Martin 2976
- Lipski, Jan Józef 2696
- Lisandro de la Torre Meatpacking Plant 2641
- Lisbon rebellion 2731
- Lisbonne, Maxime 97
- Lissagaray, H.-P.-O. (el Marx) 2229

- Lista Marrón group 252
 Lista Rosa group 252 literacy campaigns 671, 934, 1493, 2997
Literaturstreit 387
 Lithuania 340, 1417, 2714
 see also Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth
Little Bighorn, Battle of 899–902
 Little Rock, Arkansas 17, 763
 Litton Systems 110
 Litunga 3700
 Liu Renjing 2782
Liu Shaoqi 570, 709, 710, 711, 726, 2123–5
 CCP 2124–5
 Cultural Revolution 2124, 2125
 purged 2125
 recentralization 2204
 working class 731
 Liu Shipai 114
 Live 8 1312, 1314–15, 1402
 Live Aid 1314
 Liverpool 518
 Liverpool, Lord 2826
 Liverpool dockers 1387, 2809
Living Daylights 107
 Living Newspapers 28
 Living Theater 1482
 Livingstone, David 2172
 Livingstone, William Jerves 695
 Livingstone Native Welfare Association 3697
 Livingstonia Mission 2172–3
 Livonian War 436
 Lizzadri, Oreste 998, 1823
 Llamas, Ronald 2682
 Llano del Rio colony 3418
 Lleras Camargo, Alberto 407–8, 799
 Lleras Restrepo, Carlos 409
 Liga Regionalista 630
 Lloyd, John 203
 Lloyd George, David 522, 793, 971, 1047–9, 3508, 3509
 Lluís Companys 630
 Llunas Pujols, José 95, 145
 Loach, Ken 2738
 Lobato, Nicolau 1042, 1043
 Lobengula, King 700, 3734
 Lobo de Sousa, Bernardo 561
 Local Labor Centers, Greece 3220
 Local Organs of People's Power (OLPP) 922, 935, 937–9
 Local Workers' Federation of Callao (FOLC)
 2648
 Local Workers' Federation of Lima (FOLL)
 2648, 2649
 Locarno Treaty 1173
 Locke, Alain 1554
Locke, John 2125–6
 on absolute monarchy 2125
 Enlightenment 1126
 Epistola de Tolerantia 2125
 Essay Concerning Human Reasoning, An 2125
 Glorious Revolution 1408 influence of 2435, 2436, 3392 sensationalism 1409
 social contract 76, 1113
 Two Treatises on Government 1114, 2125
 women's rights 3613
 Lockerbie bombing 2779
 Lockier, Robert 1108
 lockouts 521–2, 2906, 2915
 Łódź general strike 2718
 Loewenheim, Walter 1379–80
 Lofgreen, Peter 861, 2027, 2451
 Loft, Fred 584
 Loft, Leonore 505–6
 Lofthus Uprising 2515
 Logan, William 2317
 Lollards 514, 1092, 3000
 Lomax, Louis 3400
 Lombok, Conquest of 1720
 Lon Nol 569–71, 572–3, 1959, 3035, 3485
 Lon Non 573
 London
 anti-Iraq war protest 228
 dock workers' strikes 2229, 3061
 Grosvenor Square rally 218
 Hyde Park riot 2808
 J18 1152, 1386–91, 1397
 July 2005 bombings 1315
 matchgirls' strike 3061
 RampART 1741
 squattling 1039
 Stop the War Coalition 227, 228 street party protests 2808 work stoppage 295
 London, Conference of 36
 London, First Treaty of 2141
London, Jack 2127–8, 3041
 Call of the Wild, The 2128
 Iron Heel, The 2128
 Revolution 2127
 War of the Classes, The 2127
 White Fang 2128
 London Co-operative Trading Association 2129
London Corresponding Society (LCS) 2126–7
 bread riots 502
 Godwin 1409
 Hardy 1552–3, 1607
 Place 2126–7, 2692
 Spence 3150–1

- Thelwall 3279
 treason trials 3024
 United Englishmen 3391
London Dispatch 2543
 London Greenpeace 1387
 London International Financial Futures and Options Exchange: see Liffe
 London Mechanics Institute 2692
 London Missionary Society 204, 983
 London Pact 1827
 London Protocols 2985
London Review of Books 1760
 London School of Economics 512, 3517
 London Trades Council 1755
 London University 2692
 London Working Men's Association (LWMA)
 656 Londonderry 1797
 Lonefighters 585
 Long, Edward 1871
 Long, Huey 1587
 Long, James 1712
 Long Boret 573
 Long Island 81, 156
 Long March
 CCP 707
 Deng Xiaoping 986
 as forced retreat 2680
 Lin Biao 2120
 Mao regime 726
 Peng 2120, 2630, 3285
 Qu Qiubai 2782
 Red Army 726, 2680
 Zhang 3724–5
 Zhou 3726
 Zhu 3727
 Long Parliament 909, 1097
 Longest Walk 2415 longshoremen
 Canada 1753
 Los Angeles 3041
 MTW 1752–4
 San Francisco 3414
 West Coast 2035
 Longue-Pointe, Battle of 80
 Longuet, Jean 2084
 LoPatin-Lummiss, Nancy 632–4
 Lopes, Manuel and F. 152
 Lopez, Alfredo 2151
 López, Atilio 868, 2640
 López, Carlos Antonio 2608
 Lopez, Miguel 2664
 Lopez, Nativo 1642, 1643
 López Arango, Emilio 104, 1187
 López Arellano, Oswaldo 2128–9
 López de Santa Anna, Antonio 1924
 López Gutiérrez, Antonio 2018
 López Mateos, Adolfo 2283, 2296, 2298
 López Maya, M. 3447
 López Michelsen, Alfonso 800
 López Obrador, Andrés Manuel 2294
 Lopez Pena, Suzie 862
 López Pérez, Rigoberto 447, 2466
 López Pumarejo, Alfonso 407–8, 1320
 López Rega, José 249, 1155, 1580
 López Rodríguez, Rosana 273–4
 Lopizzo, Anna 503
 Lora, César 416
 POR 419, 420
 Lora, Guillermo 429
 Lorca, Federico García 2381
 Lord's Resistance Army 738
 Lords of Congregation 3001
 Lorenzen, Nis 2984
 Lorenzen, Peter Hiort 2984
 Lorenzen-Schmidt, K. 989
Lorenzo Zelaya Popular Revolutionary Forces (FPRLZ) 2128–9
 Lornsen, Uwe Jens 989, 2984
 Los Angeles
 South Central Riot 3403
 Watts riots 749, 3399–400
see also Cop Watch Los Angeles
Los Angeles Times 3415, 3418
 Los Bagres, Battle of 3707
 Los Leones, Battle of 3707
 Los de Palacagüina 638
 Los Santos, Emilio de 1018, 1019
 Lotta Continua 1836, 1838, 1840, 2401, 2622, 2749
Lotus 1160
 Lotvala, R. B. 961
 Lotz, Gerhard 1343
 Lotzer, Sebastian 2830
 Loubet, Emile 1022
 Louis Philippe abdicated 1243
 as Citizen King 1231, 1283
 fleeing to England 1149
 Hugo 1611
 July Monarchy 403, 1227, 2216 as king 897, 3033
 and Lafayette 1607, 2042
 and Lebanon 2073
 Louis XIII, of France 1069
 Louis XIV, of France
 absolutism 1304
 and Anne of Austria 1304 and James II 1406, 1854
 Nantes Edict 1069

- Louis XVI, of France
 absolutism 1303
 Estates General 1126, 1525, 2311
 and Favras 892 financial backing 1274
 Haiti 3307
 Rochambeau 2851
 Sieyès 3033
 supporters 1276
 Tennis Court Oath 3033, 3256
 trial and execution of 893, 1227, 1277, 2211, 2849, 3306
 Turgot 846
- Louis XVII, of France 893
- Louis XVIII, of France
 Carbonari 403
 Charter of 1814 1227–8, 1229
 enthronement 189, 443, 895, 896
- Lourenço Marques 153, 2354
- L'Ouvrier, Albert 402, 1244
- Love Canal 1053
- Love & Rage Federation 160
- Lovejoy, Elijah 215
- Loveless, George 3301
- Loveless, James 3301
- Lovera, Waldino 2601
- Lovestone, Jay 596
- Lovett, William 656, 657, 2129–30
- Lowell factory girls' strike 2023
- Lowell Female Labor Reform Association
 (LFLRA) 2130–1
- Lowenthal, Leo 904, 1253, 1255
- Lowndes County Freedom Organization 613, 750
- Löwy, Michael 375–7, 2238, 2273–4
- Loyal Repeal Association 2544, 2545
- Loyola, Martin de 3337
- Lozado, Perico 1016
- Lozi discontent 3702
- LSSP: see Lanka Sama Samaja Party
- Lu Fudan 3505, 3726
- Lu Jingru 3505
- Lu Xun 713, 2131–2
- Lu Zongyu 713
- Luango slave rebellion 737
- Lubitz, Leonard H. 714–15, 715–18, 829–31, 986–7
- Lucas García, Romeo 1480
- Luccheni, Luigi 130
- Luch* 2943
- Lucha Social* 2257
- Lucien, Arnaud 3334
- Lucifero, Il* 3015
- Lucknow Congress 2431
- Lucknow Pact 1699
- Luczywo, Helena 3556
- Luddism, machine breaking 143–4, 2133–4, 3281
- Luddite riots, Nottingham 465, 2134
- Ludendorff, Erich 1364
- Lüder, Marie-Elisabeth 3580
- Ludlam, Isaac 465
- Ludlow Massacre 3041
- Lueger, Karl 887, 3741
- Luena, Memorandum of 2361
- Luganda language 3370
- Lugard, Frederick 23, 2558, 3369
- Lugo Méndez, Fernando Armindo 2134–5
- Lugones, Leopoldo 270, 2313
- Luisa Amanda Espinoza National Women's Association (AMNLAE) 2474
- Luisi, Paulina 3597
- Lukács, Georg 376, 2135–7, 2838
 alienation 2136
History and Class Consciousness 771, 905, 2136, 2247, 2838
 as influence 973, 3045
 interrogated 2867
 Western Marxism 1423
 works 2136
- Lukanov, Andrei 539
- Łukasiewiczówna, Małgorzata 2696
- Lüke, Martina G. 188–90
- Lukov, Hristo 543
- Lula: see Silva, Luis Inácio Lula da
- Lumad people, Philippines 2679, 2686
- Lumpa Church 3700
lumpenproletariat 766–7, 887, 1863, 2306
- Lumumba, Patrice 854–5, 856, 2137–9
- Lumumba Institute 2691
- Luna, Alfonso 2226
- Luna, Antonio 2669
- Lundy, Ben 1334, 2491
- Lunes de Revolución* 626
- Lunev, K. 2909
- lunfardo* argot 103
- Lung Hua Hui 733
- Lung-wu, Emperor 2310
- Lunigiana region 3014
- Lupeni strike 2858
- Luperón, General 1016
- Lupovitch, Howard N. 1918–20
- Lupu, Petre 2866
- Lusaka Declaration 3114
- Lusaka riots 3704
- Lusitania 187, 188
- Lussu, Emilio 1383
- Luther, Martin 1355–6, 2139–41
Admonition to Peace 2140
On the Babylonian Captivity of the Church 2139

- On the Freedom of a Christian* 2139 and Müntzer 93
 Ninety-Five Theses 558, 1034, 1347, 1353, 1355, 2139, 2830
Open Letter, An 2140 and peasant rebels 2987
 Peasants' War 2830
 Reformation in England 514 and Zwingli 3748
 Luther, Seth 2023
 Lutheranism 483, 515, 1185, 1301, 2513–14, 3000, 3679
 Luthuli, Chief 2193, 3249
 Lüttwitz, Walther von 1364
 Lutze, Battle of 443
Luxembourg 2141–2
 Luxembourg Commission 401–2, 1244, 2765
Luxemburg, Rosa 2142–8, 2839
Accumulation of Capital, The 1649–50, 2144–5
 anarchism 98
 anarchosyndicalism 162
 and Bernstein 382, 2143, 3055 bureaucratism 2244
 class consciousness 325
 on colonialism 1649–51
 council communism 162
Crisis in the German Social Democracy 2147
 death of 1253, 1363, 3056, 3148
 dialectics 2838
 dictatorship of the proletariat 98, 2147
 feudalism 1650, 2144
 freedom 2247
 German war loans 3722
 as influence 973, 3045
 and Jaurès 1913
 Jewish origins 1920
 Kautsky on 1664
 and Liebknecht 2117, 2147
 Marxism 1000, 2143–4, 2243–4
Mass Strike, Trade Union, and Political Party
 771, 2145–6, 2244
Reform or Revolution? 2143, 3055
 reformism 2243
 revolutionary-democratic socialism 2146–7 on Russian communism 1146
 Second International 1756, 2889
 Spartacus League 3147–8
 Spartakusbund 1757, 2147
 on SPD 2084, 2142, 2144, 2145–6
 “Stagnation and Progress of Marxism” 2143
 Luz Cunha, Joaquim da 2729
 Luz y Fuerza 864, 865, 867
 Luzhenovskii, Gavriila N. 3153, 3552
 Luzon Island 2666, 2669
 Lynch, Kevin 2967
 Lynch, Liam 971, 1049, 1050
 lynching of African Americans 757, 1746, 2823, 3519
 Jim Crow era 16
 rape 756, 3519
 Sweden 2518
 Warsaw 2716
 Wells against 3518–20
 Lyndhurst, Lord 2720
 Lyon, Phyllis 2107
 Lyons, Clare A. 3016
 Lyons, Denis 793
 Lyons, Edith 3562
 Lyons suburban unrest 1645
 Lyotard, Jean-François 3062
 Lysenko, Trofim 2994
 Lyttelton Constitution 2269

 M3 road protests 1040, 1054, 2807
M-19 of Colombia 802, 1082, 2149–50, 2791
 M11 link road protest 1040, 2807
 M41 street party 1040, 2808–9
 Mabhida, Moses 3106
 Mabini, Apolinario 2669
 Mabo, Eddie 4–5
 Mac Diarmada, Sean 1046
 McAdam, D. 779, 2758–9
 Macandal, Black Messiah 1529
 Macao 2587, 2731, 2732
 Macapagal-Arroyo, Gloria 2688
 MacArthur, Douglas 446, 1885, 1889, 1894, 2673, 2675
 Macas, Luis 1059
 Macaulay, Thomas Babington 1406
 Macaulay, Zachary 210
 Macaya 1266, 3307
 MacBride, John 1416
 McCain, Franklin 739, 3186
 McCarthy, Eugene 1303, 2260
 McCarthy, J. D. 652, 779–80, 2758, 2759
 McCarthy, Joseph 1051, 3165
 McCarthyism
 blacklisted writers 2262
 communism 836
 and Hollywood Ten 1603
 Robeson 2847
 SWP 596
 Zinn on 73
 McClain, James 965
 McClellan, George 60, 66
 McClellan, Janet E. 1896–901, 1910–11, 3489–90, 3709–11
 McClure, Nikki 2845
 McCook, Tommy 611
 McCormick, John 2039–41

- McCormick, Richard 1787
 McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. strike 2259
 McCoy, Chris 1482–3
 McCracken, Henry Joy 1794
 McCreesh, Raymond 2967
 MacCulloch, D. 1358
 McCullough, Michael F. 1259–61, 3037
 McCullough, Shellie K. 3740–3
 MacDonagh, Thomas 1046
 MacDonald, Alexander (MacIain) 1385–6
 McDonald, David 3100
 Macdonald, Dwight 158
 MacDonald, J. Ramsay 521, 522, 1328, 1683, 1749, 2039
 McDonald, Kevin 306
 McDonald's 1662, 1877–8
 Macdonalds of Glencoe 1385–6
 McDonnell, Donald 661
 McDonnell, J. P. 2027, 2028
 McDonnell, Joe 2967
 McDuffie, Arthur 3402
 Macedo, Rogério Fernandes 384, 3039
 Macedonia
 divided 1442 military conflicts 223
 nationalism 1440, 1452
 Ottoman 1453
 Slavs 1442, 1455
 Macedonia, Former Yugoslav Republic of 1456
 McElwee, Thomas 2967
 Maceo, Antonio 911, 912, 920, 1562
 McFarland, James 1571
 McFarlane, James 3524
 McGee, Thomas D'Arcy 3680, 3681
 McGhee, Richard 2820
 McGill University 2786
 McGovern, George 3166
 McGowan, R. 200
 MacGregor, Catherine 1191
 MacGregor, Peter 107
 McGuinness, Martin 1798
 McGuinty, Dalton 2562
 McGuire, Peter J. 2026, 2028
 Mach, Ernst 2993
Machado, Gerardo popular Cuban anti-government struggle 915, 927, 2150–3
 women's movement 3571, 3598
 Machajski, Jan Waclaw 140
 Machcewicz, Pawel 2700
Machel, Samora 738, 1042, 1261, 1262, 2153–4, 2314, 3739
 Macheteros, Los 2771, 2773, 2843
 Machiavelli, Niccoló 2247
 The Prince 1424 machine breaking 1040, 3211 see also Luddism, machine breaking; sabotage
 Machoro, Eloi 2458
 Machsom Watch 1815
 Machu Picchu 1484
 McHugh, Edward 2820
 Macierewicz, Antoni 2696, 2698
 MacInnis, Angus 592
 Macintosh, Ebenezer 77
 McIntyre, James R. 792
Mackandal, François 2154–5
 McKay, Claude 22–3, 1554, 1555, 1556
Mackay, John Henry 2155
 McKee, Michael 2844–5
 McKenna, Bridget 2522
 Mackenzie, William Lyon 593, 594
 MacKenzie-Papineau battalion 7
 McKeown, Ciaran 2522
 McKinley, Dale T. 170–6
 McKinley, William F. 920, 1412, 1566, 2669
 McKinley Act 919
 MacKinnon, Catharine 124
 MacKinnon, Dolly 2999–3002
 MacKinnon, P. 591
 Mackintosh, William 1854
 McKissick, Floyd 869–70
 McLachlan, J. B. 588
 McLaughlin, James 902
 McLaughlin, Paul 333–7
McLaurin v. Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education 759
 McLellan, David 770, 3147
 McLogan, Paddy 1803
 McLuhan, Marshall 1461
 McMahan, William 3, 309
 Macmillan, Harold 947
 MacMillan Bloedel company 785
 McMurray, Matthew 1142–4
 McNabb, Vincent 634
 McNally, Leonard 1795
 McNamara, Robert 220, 223, 3480, 3482, 3493
 McNeil, Joseph 739, 3186
 Macoutism 1519
 see also tontons macoutes
 Macquarie, Lachlan 3492
 McQuillen, Colleen K. 2308–9
 McQuilton, John 1943–5
 McShane, Harry 3383
 McShine, Kynaston 1483
 McSwiney, Terence 1048
 Macune, Charles 2727, 2728
 McWhirter, Martha 3419
Madagascar 2156–7
 French rule 1249–50

- planters killed 2156
 Senegalese troops 1250
 Madari, Ayatollah Shariat 1770
 Maddern, Stacy Warner 39–40, 69–70, 190–1, 241–2, 362–4, 445–6, 898–9, 899–902,
 953–4, 974–5, 1206–7, 1428–9, 1563–6,
 1570–2, 1946–7, 1977–9, 2477–8,
 2488–90, 2569–71, 2753–5, 2777–8,
 3040–1, 3670–1
 Madeira 186
Madera Uprising, Chihuahua 2157–8
Madero, Francisco 998, 2158, 2162, 2275
 Chihuahua region 2277
 coming to power 2539
 and Huerta 3489
 Mexican Revolution 2276–7
 and Zapata 3710
 Madhesi population 231, 2438
 Madisha, Willie 3108
 Madison, James 765, 1301, 3416, 3666
 Madox, John 1073
 Madras army 1685–6, 1687
 Madras Forest Act 2802
Madres de la Plaza de Mayo 105, 255, 1085, 1428, 2158–60, 3598
 non-violence 2500
 police brutality 2500–1
 Madrid 1132, 3133
 Madrid, Conference of 2335
 Madrid Peace Conference 1815
 Madrid Treaty, Brazil 3008
 Madsen, D. 650
 Madumarov, Adahan 3330
 Maffeo, Lois 2845
Mafia 2160–1
 Mafutsanyana, E. T. 3087
 Magaia, Filipe 2153
 Magalhães, Gonçalo Jorge de 562
 Magan, Tony 1803
 Magdalena massacre 1320
 Magdoff, Harry 1649, 2249
 Magee, Ruchell 965
 Magellan, Ferdinand 2303, 2304, 2664
 Maghrebi Union Treaty 2338
MAGIN 3571–2
 Magloire, Paul 1518
 Magón, Enrique Flores 158, 2541
Magón, Ricardo Flores 158, 1736, 2161–3 against Díaz 137, 2276 influences on 2161–2
Magonistas 1736, 2161–3, 2279
 Magri, Lucio 2196, 2870
 Magsaysay, Ramon 1615
 Maguga, Prince 3207
 Maguire, Mairead Corrigan 2521–2
 Maguire, Tom 1803
 Magyars
 and Croats 1149
 Hungary 1142
 independence claims 1920 language 3051
 Transylvania 2862
 uprising against 1620–1
 Mahabad Republic 353
Mahachon (the Masses) 3258
 Mahad Satyagraha 54
 Mahajan, Meher Chand 1931, 1932
 Mahajana Eksath Peramuna (MEP) 1494, 2052
 Maharaj, Mac 3107
 Maharaj, Sahu 955
 Maharashtra 1697, 1699, 1707
 Maharero, Samuel 2390, 2391, 2392, 2396
 Mahasabha 2433
 Mahdi, Mohammad Ahmed al- 51, 3191
 Mahdi, Sadiq al- 3191
 Mahdi al-Senussi, Sayyid Muhammed al- 51
Mahdist Revolt 2163–5, 3198
 Anglo-Egyptian invasion 3192, 3396
 Sudan 2163, 3369
 Mahendra, of Nepal 2442
 Maher, Ali 1070
 Mahila Atma Raksha Samity (MARS) 645, 3586
 Mahila Dakshata Samiti (Women's Capability Society) 3588, 3589
 Mahila Mukti Morcha 3590
 Mahila Samta Sainik Dal (League of Soldiers for Women's Equality) 3588
 Mahir, Ali 1078
 Mahmud II 2366, 3358
 Mahmut II, emperor 3346
 Mahuad, Jamil 1067
 Maier, Wendy 1303–5
 Mailer, Norman 73
 USS Maine 920
 Maintenance of Order Law 3359, 3360
 Mainwaring, William 546
 Maistre, Joseph de 886, 1228
Maitan, Livio 245, 2165, 2250
 Maitree network 3588
 Majhi, Domon 2970
 Maji-Maji Revolt 3253–4
Majles (legislative assembly) 1963
 Majno, Ersilia 3592
 Majongwe, Raymond 3733
 Major, John 1039
 Makabeni, Gana 833
 Makarios III, Archbishop 945, 946, 947
 Make Poverty History (MPH) 1312, 1402–3
 Makeba, Miriam 613
 Makhkamov, Khakhar 3245

- Makhno, Nestor 98, 100, 143, 1970, 2003, 2165–8 anarchism and influences 2166 leadership 2167
 and Malatesta 2170
- Maki referendum 192–3
- Makinson, Lista 595
- Maklakov, V. 2892
- Makombe-nguruve dynasty 699
- Makonen, Endalkachew 1135
- Makronisos military camp 1439, 1445
- Malabar 2317
- Malabarba, Gigi 1310
- Malabari, Behramji 1696
- Malagasy nationalism 1249, 1250, 2156
- Malaita Eagles 3081
- Malatesta, Errico 2168–71
 as anarchist-socialist 2169
 anarchocommunist 98, 2169, 2170
 Ancona meeting 102, 130
 and Bakunin 129, 336
 ca'canny 2170
 and Fanelli 1161
 against fascism 2169
 fleeing to England 3015
Fra Contadini 2170
 Galleani on 1322, 2169
 and Goldman 1411
 and Kropotkin 2170
 and Mussolini 2170
 and Pisacane 2692
 propaganda by the deed 2169 return from exile 385
 Villa Rossa meeting 3015
- Malato, Charles 121, 1124, 2171–2
- Malaviya, Madan Mohan 1327, 1583, 1681
- Malawi 2172–6
see also Nyasaland
- Malawi Congress Party (MCP) 2176
- Malawi News* 2176
- Malay language 1727–8
- Malay Nationalist Party 3269
- Malay Peninsula 1718
- Malay States 2176
- Malaya
 anti-colonialism 3269
 Fijian soldiers 1197
 as jewel in crown 2178
 Muslims 3266–8
 Thailand 3265
see also Malaysia; Patani Malay nationalism
- Malayang Pagkakaisa ng Kabataang Pilipino (MPKP) 2677
- Malaysia
 Chinese immigrants 2177
 ethnicities 2177
 globalization crisis 1430
hartals 2178
 and Philippines 2330
 protest and revolt 2176–9
see also Malaya
- Malcher, Felix 561
- Malcolm X 73, 220–1, 348, 394, 964, 2179–81
 armed resistance 3373
 assassinated 2181
 Black Power 398, 750
 Carmichael 613
 and Castro 2180
 charisma 653
 on Kennedy's assassination 2180
 Message to Grassroots 395
 NOI 746, 764
 OAAU 395, 2181
 Pan-Africanism 395
 racism 2179–80
 RAM 2840
- Malenkov, Georgy 2866
- Mali 1252, 2181–2
- Mali Federation 3006
- Malig, Mary Lou 3644–8, 3650–4
- Malik, Abdel 2333
- Malik, Adam 1725
- Malik, Yasin 1934
- Maliki, Adnan al- 3223
- Malinowski, Bronislaw 1953
- Malle, Louis 1237
- Malleson, G. B. 1686
- Malmö Truce 2985
- Malraux, André 2381
- Malta
 Bonaparte 2184–5
 British rule 2185–7
 Catholic Church 2185–6
 European Union 2187
 French rule 2184–5
 Hospitaller Era 2183–4
 Labor Party 2187
 Language Question 2185–6
 Marriage Question 2186 Muslim slaves 2184
 protest and revolution 2182–7
Sei Maggio (May 6) 2186
Sette Giugno (June 7) 2186
 World War II 2186–7
- Maltby Main Colliery 3062
- Malthus, Thomas 2008
- Maluleke, Josiah 3730
- Malunge, Prince 3205
- Mamaloni, Solomon 3081
- Mamarchov, G. 539

- Mameluks 2365
Mamoon, Muntassir 344–8, 368–72, 1711–13, 2573–9
Managers' Union Tokyo 1876
Manahan, Jacinto 2672
Manasa Devi goddess 955
Manchester, Thomas 2077
Manchester Anti-Corn Law Association 176
Manchester Yeomanry 2662
Manchu rule, crises of 719, 722, 734–5, 2309, 2781, 3200, 3201
Manchuria Invasion 1896
Manchurian Incident 134, 1926 mancomunales (resistance groups) 112, 691
Mancotal 638
Mandalay 549
Mandel, David 2878–89, 2889–902, 2902–20, 2920–7, 2928–40, 2940–5, 3115–28, 3506–12
Mandel, Ernest 245, 2187–9
class struggle 2188
revolutionary Marxism 2250 translated 2165
works 2187–8
Mandela, Nelson 2189–96
Abdurahman honored 2
African nationalism 3084, 3086
ANC 171, 1940, 2111, 2189
in ANC Youth League 3087
anti-apartheid 2503
arrested and imprisoned 172, 2193, 2358, 3088, 3106
HIV/AIDS protests 3312 on Iraq war 227
neoliberalism 3110
as president 2194, 2195
and SACP 2193
and Slovo 3053
and Tambo 2190, 2194
Mandela, Winnie Madikizela 2193
Mandume, Ovambo chief 2395
Mane, Ansumane 1493
Maneiro, Alfred 665, 3445
Manganga people 2174
Mangano, Attilio 2621–3
Mangonès, Albert 1536
Manhattan Project 193
Manifest Destiny concept 2022
Manifeste de Seize 2172
Manifeste des 343 3575
Manifesto, II 1837, 2196, 2870
Manifesto of the 121 226
Manifesto de Timanaku 1937
Manigat, Leslie 1506, 1509
Manila-Americans 2670
Manila protest 1397
Manin, Daniele 1826
Manipoud, Louis 576
Manitoba province 584
Manley, Michael 1864, 2196–8
Manley, Norman Washington 1859, 1867, 2196–7
Mann, Tom 149, 518
Mannarino, Gaetano 2184
Manner, Kullervo 1202
Mannerheim, Carl Gustaf Emil 1202
Manning, Patrick 3320
Mano Negra (Black Hand) 145
Manso de Velasco, José Antonio 1923
Mansour, Ahmed el- 2333
Mansur, Hassan Ali 1770
Mantashe, Gwede 3108
Mantegazza, Laura Solera 3592
Mantegna, Andrea 1484
Manto, Abid Hassan 2583
Mäntsälä, Mutiny of 2519
Mantuanos oligarchy 3456, 3458
Manuel, George 584
Manuel II, of Portugal 188, 2730
Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Movement (MPMR): see Frente Patrioco Manuel Rodriguez
(FPMR)
Manufahi War 1042
Manuitt, Elias 3443
Manukian, Dashnak Aram 287 manumission 213
Manumission Act 1319
Manz, Felix 92
Manzanas, Melitón 182
Manzaneda, Juan de 163
Mao Zedong 2199–205
Analysis of the Classes in Chinese Society 724
Chen Duxiu 674, 676
Cultural Revolution 710, 985, 2204–5, 2995–6, 3725
death of 984, 2205
Great Leap Forward 709–10, 986–7, 2203–4, 3725
Jiangxi Soviet 2201
Li Lisan 2114
Little Red Book 2121, 2204
Long March 2201–2
Lu Xun 2132
Marxism 2249
May 4th movement 2200
peasant uprisings 113
Red Army 2201–2
Red Guards 2204
resignation, forced 2204
and Soviet Union 1215–16

- Mao Zedong (cont'd)
 on Stalin 705
 on Taiping Rebellion 3234
 Tibet 3291
 and Wang 3506
 Yenan Period 2202
- Maoism
 April Revolution 230
 Australia 317
 Ecuador 1058
 India 2421, 2423–5
 Nepal People's War 2437–41
see also Naxalite movement
- Maoist Communist Center (MCC) 2423
- Maoris
 assimilation 2206
 indigenous resistance 2205–9
 land purchases from 2206 land rights 2208, 3155–6
- MAPU Lautaro 687
- Mapuche Indian resistance 2209–10
see also Lautaro
maquiladora zone 2293
Maquis 146, 180, 872, 1240–1
 MAR guerillas 563
 Mara, Ratu Kamisese 1197, 1198, 1199
 Marable, M. 396, 772, 774
 Maradona, Diego 3658
 Maraj, Ralph 3320
- Marat, Jean-Paul 1276, 1281, 2210–12
Ami du peuple, L' 2211, 2848
 and Brissot 506
Chains of Slavery 2210
Découvertes de M. Marat sur le feu 2211
 Jacobin Republic 2211
Offrande à la Patrie 2211
 and Robespierre 1289, 2848
 on sans-culottes 2969
 science 2990–1
 stabbed 894, 1296, 2212
- Maravall, José Antonio 845
 Marburg Colloquy 1358, 3748
 Marcantonio, Vito 841
- March Against Corporate Globalization and Militarization 3647
- March Against Hunger, Unemployment, and Repression 263
- March Against Poverty 2561
 March Days 1620
 March of the Beurs 1645
 March of the Blanketeers 3281
 March for Democracy 2538
 March of the Hungry 3352
 March of Silence 866, 1320
 March for Social Justice 2809
- March of Torches 1320
 March 1st Organization (OPM) 2606
 Marchais, Georges 825
 Marchand, Captain 883
 Marchand, Len 584
 Marchant, William Sydney 308
 Marches of Resistance 2159, 2160
 Marcos, Ferdinand 1723, 2327, 2330, 2506, 2678–9, 2682–3, 3717 anti-capitalism 3719
 Marcos, Imelda 2679
- Marcos, Subcomandante 1122, 1739, 2212–13, 2284, 2293, 3712, 3714
- Marcus of the Woods 2075
- Marcuse, Herbert 2213–15
Aesthetic Dimension, The 2215
Counterrevolution and Revolt 2215
Eros and Civilization 907, 1256, 2214
Essay on Liberation 2215
 Frankfurt School 904, 1253, 1254, 1256, 2213
 on Freud 2214
Hegel's Ontology 2214
 Marxism 2249
One-Dimensional Man 907, 2214
Praxis 3689
Reason and Revolution 1256, 2214, 2838
 “Repressive Tolerance” 2214
Soviet Marxism 907, 2214 at University of California 964
 works 1256–7, 2214
- Mardi Gras, Sydney 2097–8
 Marek, Franz 770
- Marematlou Freedom Party (MFP) 2111
- Marengo, Battle of 442
 Marengo, Jacob 2393
 Margai, Milton 3031
 Margaritis, George 1439–51
 Margarot, Maurice 2366
 Marginalist School 321, 355
 Margo Commission of Inquiry 2154
 Marguerite, Bernard 2706
 Maria I, of Portugal 187
 Maria II, of Portugal 188
 María Lionza cult 3452
 Maria Theresa, Empress 1143
 Mariani, María Isabel Chorobik de 255
- Marianne revolutionary icon 2215–16
- Mariátegui, José Carlos 48, 414, 2217–19, 2249, 2649
- Marie Adélaïde 2141
 Marie Antoinette 1208, 1421
 Marie Louise of Austria 443
Marighella, Carlos 472, 2219–20

- Marik, Soma 92–3, 645–6, 999–1001, 1100–6, 1106–9, 1283–7, 1287–92, 1708–11,
2118–20, 2388–9, 2847–51, 3424–5, 3536–8, 3550–5, 3586–90, 3606–9
- marimba 637
- Marin, Craig 294–7
- Marin, Maria 2755
- Marín, Pedro Antonio 1168
- Marin, Raul 2598
- Marin County Courthouse plot 965
- Marine Transport Workers (MTW) 1752–5
- Mariño, Santiago 3457, 3458
- Marion, Francis 85
- Maripe, Knight 456, 2220–2
- Maritime Worker Federation (FOM) 247
- Marivault, Bishop 1269
- Marker, Chris 1237
- Markezinis, Spyros 1435
- Markievicz, Constance 1046, 1049
- Markoff, John 1285
- Markov, Georgi 538
- Markovic, Ante 224
- Marković, Mihailo 3690
- Marks, J. B. 171, 832, 2222–3, 3093
- Marlborough, Duke of 1405
- Marlborough Conference 3317
- Marley, Bob 1860, 1864
- Mármol, Miguel 2223–4
- Marof, Tristán 428, 432
- Marongoni, Guido 1747
- Maronites 1577, 2069, 2070
- Maroon resistance 1269
- Dutch Caribbean 1031, 1032
 - founding communities 212
 - Haiti 1536–7
 - Hispaniola 2079–80
 - Jamaica 88, 201, 1868
 - Mackandal 2154–5
 - music 612
 - Palmares 2586–9, 3745
 - Queen Nanny 2788–90
 - Saint-Domingue 1263, 1546
 - USA 88
 - Venezuela 3451–2
 - Windward Maroons 2788
- Marquetalia massacre 1167
- Marquez, Pompeyo 3443, 3445, 3446
- Marrakech 2333, 2336
- Marrast, Armand 1243
- marriage
- age of consent 1696, 1774
 - anarchism 123
 - child-marriage 1324, 1583
 - complex 2560
 - Enlightenment 1110
 - Goldman on 1411
 - Gouges 1421
 - Icaria Community 1639
 - Iran 1774
 - post-French Revolution 1297
 - Quakers 1107
 - radical sects 1107
 - same-sex 2094, 2097, 2100
 - Soviet Union 3608, 3609
 - Winstanley 3537–8
 - women's property rights 3564, 3566–7, 3613, 3619
 - see also* divorce
- marriage counseling 1586
- Married Women's Property Acts 3566–7
- marronage* 1269, 3583
- see also* Maroon resistance
- Marroquín, Manuel 806–7
- Mars, Perry 1856–7
- Marsden, Dora 116
- Marseillaise* 2380
- Marshall, Burke 744
- Marshall, George 1039
- Marshall, George C. 1320, 3726
- Marshall, P. H. 1410
- Marshall Islands 199, 2303
- Marshall Plan 838
- Albania 31
 - Greece 1438
 - Italy 1834
 - Korea 304
 - Netherlands 2447
 - Turkey 3365
- Marsilli, Maria N. 3337–9
- Marson, Una 3559
- Marston Moor, Battle of 909, 1098, 2118
- Martello, Il* 130
- Marten, Henry 1101
- Martí, Farabundo 1163, 2224–6, 2956, 2966
- see also* Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front
- Martí y Pérez, José Julián 2226–7
- anti-racism 912
 - Bolivarianism 414, 650
 - death of 920, 2227
 - Guantanamo* 2227
 - Hatuey Regiment 1562
 - independence war 926
 - influence on Castro 1486
 - Modernismo 2312
 - Partido Revolucionario Cubano 2226–7
 - in USA 919
- Martin, Del 2107
- Martin, Henri 225–6
- Martin, James 861

- Martin, John B. 1019
 Martin, Nathan James 1495–7
 Martin V, Pope 2829
 Martineau, Harriet 3566
 Martinez, Antonio 474
 Martínez, Boris 3304
 Martínez, Maximiliano Hernández 2956
 Martínez Campos, Arsenio 918
 Martínez de Hoz, Alfredo 251
 Martínez de Rozas, Juan 2555
 Martínez Soriano, Felipe 2285
 Martínez Verdugo, Arnaldo 2285
 Martinique
 British invasion 1264
 Fanon 1162
 French rule 1270
 Négritude writers 1162
 revolt 1263
 Martino, Mario 2108
 Martone, Eric 1847–8, 2851–2
 Martone, Nicole 514–17, 1610–11, 1847–8
 Martov, Julius
 and Trotsky 3321
Martov, Julius 2227–8, 2694
 Mensheviks 979, 2082, 2227
 Second International 2889
 martyrdom
 African Americans 3460
 Cercado 1015
 Cuban 1561
 ETA 1129
 Germany 2982
 Guevara 1216
 Haymarket 2030
 Hezbollah 1576
 Iranian 1770
 Iraqi communists 2955
 Irish 994, 1047, 1089, 1203, 2967, 3043, 3302
 Korean 1984
 Nepal 2441
 Nicaraguan 2467
 Pakistan 2578
 Scottish 2366
 South African 2801
 Tai Ping rebels 717
 Tolpuddle 3300–1
 Wales 3499
 Martyrs' Day 2578
 Martyrs of Arad 1620
 Martyrs of Cercado 1015
 Marulanda, Manuel (Tirofijo) 409, 1168
 Marwa, Mallam Muhammed 2483
Marx, Eleanor 2228–9, 2230, 2243, 3061
Marx, Karl 2229–39
 and Bakunin 96, 333–4, 335, 1744
 capitalism 1664–5
 Civil War in France, The 1000, 1755, 2236, 2612
 class identity 765
 class struggle 783, 1912, 2231–4
 Class Struggle in France 887, 1234, 1242 commodity fetishism 973
 communism 2837
 and Comte 842
 Contribution to the Critique of Political Economy 2231–2 on Crimean War 1452
 Critique of the Gotha Program 2237
 and Debord 973
 Economic and Philosophic Manuscripts of 1844 2238, 2837, 2838 Eighteenth Brumaire of Louis Bonaparte 440, 770, 887, 1080, 1152, 1232, 2231 and Engels 2230–1, 2238–9
 Ethnological Notebooks 2238
 German Ideology 2238, 3679
 Grundrisse 1842, 1843, 2238
 and Herzen 1575
 historical materialism 622, 2231–4
 Holy Family, The 3679 influence in China 2200 influence in Japan 1910 influence in USA 2025, 2028
 IWA 2026
 Kapital, Das 355, 504, 766, 1423, 1647, 2026, 2144, 2232–4, 2238, 2451, 2837
 labor theory of value 2233
 on Louis-Napoleon 440
 on Northern Star 2549
 on Paris Commune 2236–7, 2612–13
 Polish liberation 2701
 Poverty of Philosophy 2231
 proletariat 778
 and Proudhon 2763–4
 religion 3679
 on revolution 776, 2759, 2760
 Silesia 3036
 Spartacus as hero 3146, 3147
 surplus value 2233
 Taiping Rebellion 3235
 Theories of Surplus-Value 2238
 Value, Price and Profit 2236
 Wage-Labor and Capital 2235
 workers' struggle 1749
 see also Communist Manifesto; Marxism
 Marx–Engels Historisch-Kritische Gesamtausgabe 1253
 Marx-Studien 1581, 1582
Marxism 2239–51
 Asian 730

- autonomous 2306–7
 Britain 108
 bureaucracy 2242–4
 China 723, 730
 class struggle 768
 on French Revolution 1283
 Guzman 2658
 Indian 3588
 Kautsky on 1664–5
 Lenin 2089, 2244–7
 Luxemburg 2143–4
 Martov 2227
 Orthodox 1664–5, 2084, 2244, 2694 poststructuralism 972
 reformism 2242–4
 revolutionary 2240, 2241–2, 2250, 3059–60 Russian 975–9, 2924, 3720
 sabotage 144
 science 2992–3
 scope of 2240–1 variants 2239, 2249–50, 3265
 Yugoslavia 3689–90, 3692
 Marxism-Leninism 2010, 3156
 Marxist humanism 1027
 Marxist-Leninist Communist Party of Colombia
 (PCC-ML) 1120, 2791
 Marxist-Leninist Party of the Philippines
 (MLMPP) 2686
 Mary I, Tudor 515, 516, 1094–5
 Mary II of Orange 1405
 Mary of Guise 3001
 Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots 517, 1095, 3000
 Maryknoll Society 2058, 2061
 Marzani, Carl 1427
 MAS: see Movimiento Al Socialismo
 Masaliyev, Absamat 3329
 Masang Treaty 1719
Masaryk Garrigue, Tomas 1595, 2251–2
 Mascara Roja 3717
 Mascarenhas Monteiro, António 603
 Masetti, Augusto 3014
 Mashaal, Khaled 1550
 Mashayamombe 703
 Masina Ruu 3081
 Masindi, Battle of 3369
 Masire 460
 Mason, Charlotte Osgood 1555
 Mason, George W. 149
 Masoud, Ahmed Shah 3246
 mass politics 1742–9
 Massachusetts Government Act 78
 Massacre 68 2063
 Massari, Edoardo 132
Masses, The 1051, 2252–3, 2825
Masses and Mainstream 2253
 Massieu Helguera, Wilfrido 3296
 Massin, Jean 2210
 Masters and Servants Act 2075, 2077, 2197, 3734
 Mas'ud, 'Abdullah 1159
 Masunungure, Eldred 3731, 3732
 MASYUMI Party 1730
 Matabele 698, 702, 3734
 Matabeleland 701, 3737
 Matante, Philip 459
Matanza, La: see La Matanza Peasant Revolt
 Matanzima, Kaiser 3088
Match!, The 159
 matchgirls' strike 3061
 Materka, Edyta V. 3497, 3544–5
 Maternity Allowance 3592, 3652 maternity leave 3633
 Mathenge, Stanley 2255
 Matheu, Pierre 2785
 Mathiez, Albert 1283, 2249
 Mathura Rape Case 3589
 Matiba, Kenneth 1948, 1950, 1951
 Matignon Agreement 824, 825, 2459
 Matin, Abdul 2577
Matka Polka stereotype 3557
 Matles, James 2036
 Matni, Nassib al- 2069
 Matombo, Lovemore 3733
 Matos, Huber 626, 924, 934, 1489
 Matsuoka, K. 1892
 Matswa, André 853, 1251
Mattachine Review 2107
 Mattachine Society 2093, 2106–7
 Mattei, Héctor 102
 Matteotti, Giacomo 1176, 2871, 2960, 3341
 Matthaei, J. 2621
 Matthews, Herbert 624
 Matthews, Tom 3091
 Matthias, Prophet 3327
 Matthijs, Jan 93, 2831
 Mattina, Anne F. 502–4, 2130–1, 2623–4, 3313–14
 Matzpen (Compos) 1812
Mau Mau Rebellion 220, 1155, 1954, 2253–7,
 2269, 2690, 3371
 Maududi, Sayyid Abul A'la 1810
 Maudit, Chevalier 1526
 Maugard, Adolfo Best 2375
 Maugée, Aristide 2428
 Maung Gyi, U 552, 553, 2980
 Maung Maung, U 303, 553, 555
 Maurer, James 2029
 Mauriac, François 2449
 Maurice, Frederick Denison 3061
 Maurice of Nassau 1035
Maurín, Joaquín 2257–8, 2737

- Maurin, Peter 634, 968, 2489, 3420
 Mauritius 455, 3110
 Mauroy, Pierre 825
 Maurras, Charles 888
 Mauthner, Fritz 2048
Mavo group 116
 Max of Baden, Prince 1361
 Maxeke, Charlotte 3603
 Maximilian I 844, 1034
 Maximum, Law of the 1243, 1277–8, 1291
 Maxwell, Alexander 1619–22
 Maxwell, John 1046
 Maxwell, Reginald 2793
 May, Todd 979
May Day 2258–60
 anarchism 158
 Argentina 103, 266–7
 Brazil 497
 Great Depression 2259
 immigrant protests 1642
 Iran 1773
 Japan 1893
 Loyalty Day, US 2259
 Mexico 2292
 Ohio 836
 working-class solidarity 1570
May Day Manifesto 3283
 May First Movement 2681
May 4th movement 712–14, 723, 1116, 2995, 3235
 anarchism 114
 Beijing University 3179
 Chen 675
 Mao 2200
 student protest 719
 70th anniversary 3286 and Tiananmen Square protest 3284
 May Movement 942
May 1968
 French students 323, 2260–4 revolutionary legacy 1234–5 worldwide youth protest 1236
 May 7 Schools 711
 May 30 Incident 720, 724–5, 2201
 Mayakovsky, Vladimir 327
 Mayans
 caste war 620–1
 EZLN 481, 3719
 involvement in Guatemala 1472–3, 1478
 music 637
 peasant massacres 2289
 Quezaltenango 3255
 MayDay Parade 1147
 Mayegun Society 24
Mayekiso, Moses 174, 2264–5, 3096, 3106
- Mayer, Arno J. 2167
 Maynard, Fred 307
 Mayorga, Silvio 447, 1205, 2467, 2468, 2964
 Mazarin, Jules 1303–4
 Mazdoor Jeddojuhd (Workers' Struggle) 2584 Maze prison dirty protests 2967
 Mazower, M. 1183
 Mazowiecki, Tadeusz 3077
 Mazrik Kurdish tribe 286
 Mazrui, Ali 2532
Mazumdar, Charu 2265–6, 2422, 2423
Mazzini, Giuseppe 2266–8
 Duties of Man 10
 Fuller 1306
 as influence 2871, 2960
 liberal internationalism 1744
 Paris Commune 2168
 Pisacane on 2691
 and Pius IX 1149
 Risorgimento 1332, 1824
 Young Italy 1332, 1825
 Mbeki, Govan 3086, 3104
 Mbeki, Thabo 876, 2195, 3108, 3110, 3112
 Mbida, Andre-Marie 1251
Mboya, Tom 2268–70, 2691
MBR-200: see Movimiento Bolivariano
 Revolucionario-200
 MC5 2777, 2778
 Mda, A. P. 2191
 Me Trinh Dinh Thao 3484
 Mead, Mary 3529
 Meagher, Thomas Francis 3680, 3681
 Mealmaker, George 3395
 Means, Russell 2416, 2417
 means testing 523–5, 3382
 Meany, George 2037, 2038
 Meat Inspection Act 3040 mechanical philosophy 2989
 Mečlar, Vladimír 811, 812, 814, 3021, 3377, 3435
Medan Priyayi 1728
 Medellín conference 2059, 2060, 2061
 Medellín documents 2059
 Medical Silicosis Bureau 1087
 medical students 274
 Medici, Catherine de 2950
 Medina, Manuel 2642
 Medrano, Florencio 2284
 Medrano, José 2956
 Medvedev, Roy 3163
 Medvedev, Sergei 3030
 Meeks, Brian 1462–6
 Meerut Conspiracy Case 449, 961, 1922, 3229
 Meerut garrison 1686–7
 Mega-Bintang alliance 1725–6
 Megawati Sukarnoputri 1726

- Mehenni, Ferhat 1928
 Meherali, Yusuf 1683
 Mehmed, Delibash 3357
 Mehmet Ali: see Muhammad 'Ali
 Mehmet V, of Turkey 3348
 Mehring, Franz 2243, 3147
 German war loans 3722
 Mehta, Brinda 3579
 Mehta, Usha 2793
 Meiji Civil Code 3594
 Meiji Restoration 1896, 1897
Meilidao (Formosa) 2270, 2271, 3237
Meilidao protests 2270–1
Mein Kampf 1375, 1590, 2271–2
 Meinhof, Ulrike 1368
 Meir, Golda 1813
 Meira Paibi 3590
 Mejía Godoy, Carlos 638, 640
 Mejía Godoy, Luis Enrique 638
 Mekenye, R. O. 2110
 Mekong Delta 3481
 Mekunnu Parapo (Association of Poor People) 24
 Melbourne 1457, 2636
 Melbourne Anarchist Club (MAC) 105
 Melchiorites 93
 Meléndez, Jorge 2225
 Meli, Francis 3086
 Melkonian, Monte 284
 Mella, Julio Antonio 2151, 2152, 2249
 Melliet, Leo 2820
 Mellingen, peace of 3213
 Melo, Antônio 3745
 Meltzer, Albert 108
 Melville, Thomas 2061, 3303
 Memminger Peasant Parliament 1354, 1357
 Mena, Máximo 867
 Menalamba revolt 1249
Menchú, Rigoberta 1480, 2272–3
 Menchú, Vicente 1480
 Mendana y Neyra, Alvaro de 3080
 Mendel, Gregor 2994
 Menderes, Adnan 3350, 3364, 3365
Mendes, Chico 2273–4
 Mendes Filho, Francisco Alves: see Mendes, Chico
 Mendès-France, Pierre 226, 1248, 1249, 3335, 3473, 3474
 Mendes Maciel, Antônio Vicente: see Antônio Conselheiro
 Mendez, Luis 618
 Méndez Fleitas, Epifanio 2604, 2605
 Mendieta, Colonel 915
 Mendiola, Battle of 2677
 Mendive, Rafael María 2226
 Mendoza, Eugenio 3451
 Mendoza, Felipe 2672
 Mendoza, José Antonio de 1923
 Menelik, Emeror 1132
 Menem, Carlos Saúl 256, 262, 267, 269, 1580, 2159, 2347, 3407
 Menezes, Fradique de 2972
 Menezes, Gilson 499
 Meng Qingshu 3505
 Mengin, F. 1075
 Mengistu Haile Mariam 1137
 Ménil, René 2428
 Mennonites 93, 201, 1633, 2491
 Menocal, Mario 2150
 Menominee Warrior Society 2413, 2415
 Menon, V. K. Krishna 2435
 Menon, V. P. 1922
 Men's League for Women's Suffrage 1051
 Mensalão Scandal 3038
 Menser, Michael 736, 2619–21, 3027–8
 Menshevik-Internationalists 2892, 2918, 2928
 and CEC 2929
 Constituent Assembly 2931 workers' control 2906–7
 Mensheviks
 and Bolsheviks 437, 2228, 2887, 2926
 dual power 2902
 and Left Social Revolutionaries 3058
 Martov 979, 2082, 2227
 Party Dictatorship 2937
 and Trudoviks 2892
 and workers 2893
 Zasulich 3720
 mentally handicapped 1179
 Menzel, Jiří 949
 mercantilism 76
 MERCOSUR 871, 3658
Meredith, James 743, 2275
 Meredith March 2275
 Méricourt, Théroigne de 1294
 Merina Island Kingdom 1249
 Merino, Admiral 683
 Merkel, Ina 3580
 Merkouri, Melina 1433
 Merleau-Ponty, Maurice 356, 2839
 Meron, Theodor 1817
 Merritt College 398
 Mers-el-Kebir attack 1239–40
 Merthyr Riots 3499–500
 Merton, Thomas 605
 Mesa Gisbert, Carlos 433, 434–5, 787, 789
 Meslier, Jean 1113
mesocratismo (populist movement) 692
 Mesquita, Carlos Frederico de 468
 Mesters, Carlos 478
 Mestre, Ricardo 138

- Meszmann, Tibor T. 2707–10
 Metafas, Petros 1220–2
 Metal Allied Workers' Union (MAWU) 2264, 3095, 3096 metal workers 251, 1751
 metalworkers' union (KOVO) 2744, 2745
 Metaxas, Ioannis 1443, 1453, 3220
 Métayer, Butteur 1508
Methodism 202, 3520–1
 Methodist Episcopal Church 695
 Methodius, Saint 3050
 Methuen, Treaty of 484
 Métis struggle 2841–2
Metropolitan Magazine 2825
 Metropolitan Museum of Art 1483
 Metropolitan Political Collective (CPM): see Red Brigades
 Mett, A. 2004
 Metternich, Klemens von 189, 558, 896, 1143, 1149, 1347, 1619, 1744, 1825
 Metz, Christian 52
 Mexican Action Network on Free Trade (RMALC) 3645
 Mexican Americans 1170
 Mexican Anarchist Federation 138
 Mexican General Union of Farmers and Peasants (UGOCM) 2157
 Mexican Indians 1578
 Mexican Labor Party (PLM) 619
 Mexican Railroad Workers' Union (STFRM) 2295–6, 2298
Mexican Revolution 2275–82
 anarchists 138
 Batallones Rojos (Red Battalions) 2279, 2280
 Cárdenas 606
 Carranza 1217
 de la Huerta 2277
 Díaz 2276 economy of 2280
 Haya de la Torre 1567 influence on Sandino 2965
 Madero 2158
 Magonists 2161–2
 muralism 2375
 US intervention 1217
 Velázquez 3431
 Villa 1217, 3489
 women soldiers 2277
 see also Villa, Francisco Pancho; Zapata, Emiliano
 Mexican Revolutionary Party 2542
Mexican student movement 3296–8, 3297, 3378–9
 Mexican Teachers' Union (SNTE) 2291, 2294, 2296, 2298
 Mexican Union Front (FSM) 2294
 Mexican Union of Electrical Workers (SME) 2294
 Mexican Workers' and Peasants' Party (PO-CM) 2296, 2298
 Mexican Workers' Party (PMT) 2291
Mexico 2282–99
 agrarian reform program 2282
 anarchism 97, 137–9
 armed political movements 2282–6
 capitalism 2280
 Catholic Church 2281
 copper industry 137
 Cristero uprising 902–3
 currency devaluation 2296 debt crisis 2292
 Dirty War 2022, 2157, 2282
 disappeared 2288
 earthquake 2292
 Global Day of Action 1389
 indigenous and peasant struggles 2286–90, 2294–5, 3709
 intellectuals 1924
 Jesuits 1578
 labor code 138 labor movement and protests 2290–5 land reforms 2281
 massacres 2291, 2298
 May Day 2262, 2292
 muralism 2374–6
 national identity 2374, 2376
 native population declining 1655
 oil industry 606
 poverty 1395, 1396, 2286–7
 privatization 2292–3 railway workers' struggle 2295–7 soldaderas 2278, 3016–17 state-owned sector 2297 student movements and protests 2262, 2291, 3169, 3296–8, 3297, 3378–9 teachers 2291, 2294, 2296, 2298 trade unions and worker struggles 2294, 2297–9 US war 55
 working hours 619
 World Bank study 2287
 WTO 2294
 Mexico accord 1166
 Mexico City 2286, 2292, 2733
 Meyer, Alfred G. 2089
 Mezzadra, Sandro 1841–5
 Mhanda, Wilfred 3739, 3740
 Mhlaba, Raymond 3104
 Miami Pact 931
 Miami Rebellion 3402
 Miami Showband attack 1797

- Miami Summit 3655
 Miao Revolt 715
 Miao tribe 3231
Michael Collins (film) 794
 Michael of Portugal 188
Michel, Louise 123, 2299–300
 exiled 97, 2457
 Paris Commune 2611, 2612
 Michelet, Jules 1232
 Michelini, Zelmar 3409
 Michels, Robert 1743, 2171, 2244
 Michigan University 222
 Michna, Amram 1814
Michnik, Adam 2013, 2301–3, 2695, 2705–6 on late 1960s 2705
 works 2301
 Mickiewicz, Adam 1143
 Dziady 2301, 2705
 micromobilization 2758
Micronesia 2303–5
 Mid-Atlantic War 81
 Middlesex Declaration 1147
 Middleton, Sir Charles and Lady 3528
 Midnight Ride 78
 Miedzyniastówka Anarchistyczna (Anarchy International) 140
 Mielke, Erich 1341
 Mieroslawski, Ludwik 2702, 3544–5
 Mif, Pavel 2113, 2782, 3505, 3723
 Miglioli, Guido 386
 Mignoni, Fernando 116
 Migrant Branch of Equality Trade Union (MB-ETU) 1994 migration struggles autonomy of migration 2305, 2306, 2307 global justice movement and 2305–8
 Mihai, of Romania 2857
 Mihailović, Draža 3682
 Miike labor union 1880, 3070
 Mijanović, Vladimir 3693
 Mikhailov, N. 2885–6
 Mikhelson, Ivan Ivanovich 2776
 Mikloško, František 3050
 Mi'kmaq nation 586
 Mikulski, Barbara 1752
 Milagrosa Operation 1616
 Milan
 bombing of bank 1837
 Cinque Giornate insurrection 2267
 labor force 3341
 Piazza Fontana bombing 1820
 social centers 1010
 uprising 1826
 youth festival 1838
 Milan, Declaration of 1006
 Milan Chamber of Labor 1821
 Milanés, Pablo 2380, 3574
 Milea, Vasile 2860
 Miles, Nelson A. 901
 Mileti, Carlo 2692
 Mileti, Raffaele 2692
 Milev, Geo 541
 Milford Haven mutiny 510
 Miliband, Ralph 768, 773, 2249, 2736
 Milice Française 1240
 Milicias Rodruiguistas 1226
Militant 833
 Militant Tendency 2250
 Military Assistance Command in Vietnam (MACV) 3481
 Military Base Agreement 2675
 Military Intelligence Service (SIM) 1014, 3142
 Military Revolutionary Committee (MRC) 2917
 Miliukov, Paul 976, 3551
 Miliukova, Ana 3551
 Mill, John Stuart
 Subjection of Women, The 10 translated into Japanese 526, 842, 1410, 3567, 3594 translated into Spanish 3610 on Wright 3666 mill children's strike 2345
 millenarianism
 Brazil 598, 599
 CPT 482
 and Enlightenment 1116
 and Fifth Monarchists 1102, 1194
 Millennium Development Goals 3114
 Miller, Charles 2832
 Miller, David 1314
 Miller, Emma 3561
 Miller, Jeffrey 1947
 Miller, Jennifer A. 3579–81
 Miller, Lewis 2322
 Miller, Timothy 3417–20
 millet system 34, 943
 Millett, Kate 3167, 3563, 3629
 Millevoeye, Lucien 1415
 Milli Selamet Partisi (MSP): see National Salvation Party
 Milli Uprising 3358
Milliken v. Bradley 754
 Million Man March 965
 Mills, C. Wright on Castro 626
 class 768, 772
 exploitation 773
 Marxism 769
 on Thompson 3282 wage-workers 771

- Milošević, Slobodan
 anti-bureaucratic revolution 3009
 capital accumulation 3685
 death of 3011
 Kosovo 37, 2002
 and Markovic 224
 ousted 812, 2509–10, 3011, 3178, 3377
- Milošević–Holbrooke Agreement 2003
- Milosz, Czeslaw 2308–9
- Milyukov, Paul 2892, 2895, 2897, 2904, 2910, 3390
- Milyukova, Anna 3390
- Milyutin, V. 2913
- Mimang Tsongdu 3291
- Min, General 3552
- Minas del Frio 931
- Minbu Conference 2979
- Mindanao 2670, 2679
- Mindanaoan collective 2330
- Miners' Federation of Britain 108, 522
- miners' strikes
 Bolivia 422, 426
 Britain 109, 529–30, 591
 Cananea 137, 2276
 Romania 2854–6, 2858–9
 Shamva mine 3728
 Zambia 3695–8, 3701
- miners' wives, mop and broom brigades 2345
- Minerva* 1572
- Mines and Works Amendment Act 3092
- Mineworkers' Union (SNTMMRM) 2293
- Mineworkers' Union of Zambia (MUZ) 3701–2
- Ming Dynasty 714, 3231
- Ming Rebellions 2309–11
- Minimax chain 244
- Minimum Wage Act 1707, 2676
- Minjusahoe-dang 1926
- Minkanrengo (Japan Private Labor Union Federation) 1883
- Minneapolis strike 3413–14
- Minor, Virginia 3623
- Minorca 86
- minoritarianism 982–3
- Minto, Lalo Watanabe 2318–19
- Mintoff, Dominic 2187
- Mintz, Sidney 1868
- minutemen 78, 3514
- Minya, Aggray 2269
- Miodowicz, Alfred 2708
- Mir-Hosseini, Ziba 1774
- MIR–Patria Libre 801, 1082–3
- Mir Qasim 1708
- Mirabal, María 1014
- Mirabal, Minerva 1014
- Mirabal, Patria 1014
- Mirabeau, Honoré Gabriel Riqueti, Comte de 892, 1126, 1298, 1525, 2311–12
- Mirage* 2108
- Miranda, Francisco de 412, 2555, 3456
- Mirbeau, Octave 115
- Mirbeck, Frédéric-Ignace de 1530, 1531
- Mirghani, Sayyid Ali al- 3195
- Miron, Gaston 2784
- Mirovich-Ivanova, Zinaida 3390, 3551
- Mirrakhimov, Mirbobo 3245
- Mirrar people 4
- Mirza, Iskandar 2581
- Mirza Kuchak Khan 1768
- Mirza Mughal 1688
- Misa Campesina 640
- Misikito Indians 2473–4
- Misión Barrio Adentro 667
- Misión Che Guevara 3455
- Misión Vuelvan Caras 3454–5
- Mission des Nations Unies pour la Stabilisation d'Haiti (MINUSTAH) 1508, 1510
- Mission Guaicapuro 1472
- Mississippi 1259
- Mississippi, University of 2275
- Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party (MFDP)
 748, 750, 1259, 1975, 3187
- Missouri Compromise line 533
- Missouri ex rel. Gaines v. Canada* 759
- Mistral, Gabriela 2444, 2966
- Misuari, Nur 2328, 2331
- Mitchel, John 3680
- Mitchell, Juliet 2249, 2262
- Mitchell v. US* 1257
- Mitra, Dinabandhu 1712
- Mitra, Ila 2575
- Mitra, Ramendranath 2575
- Mitrione, Dan 3004, 3340
- Mitrovich, Giorgio 2186
- Mitsui Mining Co. 1880, 3070
- Mitter, Armin 1337
- Mitterrand, François
 La Baule address 880
 Burkina Faso 548
 Côte d'Ivoire 880
 election 826
 Euromissile 198
 French Guiana 1271
 May 1968 events 2261
 New Caledonia 2458
 PS 825
Rainbow Warrior 1273
 women's movement 3576–7
- Mitzenheim, Moritz 1343
- Mizzi, Fortunato 2186

- Mizzi, Nerik 2187
Mkwati 699, 702, 703, 704
Mladina 3744
MLN-Tupamaros: see Tupamaros
Mmanthasi of the Sotho 3602
MNL-T (National Liberation Movement-Tupamaros): see Tupamaros Moakley, Joseph 2959 mobile army surgical hospitals 384 mobilization mass 2762
 tactics 2758
“Mobilization” 2499
Mobilization for Life 1057
Mobutu, Joseph-Désiré (Sese Seko) 3703
 Congo armed insurgency 852–3
 Morocco 2338
Moctezuma 910
Moczulski, Leszek 3077
Modakeke people 1640–1, 3677, 3678
Modarres, Hassan 1763
Moderate, The 1101, 2119
Modern Black Convention 348
Modern Times colony 156
Modernismo 2312–13
modernization 1664–73, 3594
 dependency theory 1668–70 globalization and empire 1670–2 non-Marxist theory 1665–6
 Orthodox Marxism 1664–5
 uneven/combined development 1666–8
 world systems theory 1668–70
Modestino, Valentino 2623
Modi, Narendra 1694
Mods and Rockers 512
Mody, Homi 1327, 1683
Modzelewski, Karol 2013, 2301, 2705
Moffat, John Smith 699
Moffat Treaty 700
Moghul empire 2869
Mohacs, Battle of 1142
Mohale Dam 2112
Mohammad Ali Shah 1767
Mohammad V 2336, 2337
Mohammed, Patricia 3579
Mohammed ben Arafa 1249
Mohammed VI 2339
Mohani, Maulana Hasrat 1326, 1680
Mohanlal, Monish 1688
Mohanty, Chandra Talpade 2733, 2734
Mohawk community 585 blockades 2557
 Ganienke encampment 2415
 Kanestake reserve 2556–7
 Mother’s Milk Project 2418
 and OCAP 2561
 Oka crisis 2557
Mohr, Jean 2308
Mohri, Kenzo 1649
Moi, Daniel arap 1947, 1948, 1951, 1952
Mokhehle, Ntsu 2111
Mokrani, Mohamed El- 1927
Molas López, Felipe 2600
Moldavia 2862, 2863, 2865
Mole Lake 2419
Molema, S. M. 455
Molina, Arturo A. 1164, 2957
Molina Ureña, José 1019
Moll, Albert 1586
Mollet, Guy 226
Molnar, Tamas 1618
Molotov–Ribbentrop Pact 179, 340–1, 824, 1376, 1593, 1823, 3678–9
Molucca Islands 1656, 1718
Molyneaux, William 1785
Molyneux, J. 3424
Mombasa dock strike 2269
Momoh, Joseph 3031
Momoyo Kamo 1877
Monagas, José Tadeo 3707
Monarchist Manifesto 467–8
monarchy
 abolished in France 2970
 absolutism 783, 2125, 2519, 2922
 Enlightenment 1115
 see also Portugal, anti-monarchy protests
Monatte, Pierre 120, 2628
Monbiot, George 1403
Moncada, José María 2965–6
Moncada barracks battle 916, 927, 928, 2150, 3574
Moncaleano, Francisco 998
Monck, George 1100
Monckton Commission 3699
Mond–Turner talks 521
Mondale, Walter 1975
Monde, Le 1238, 2261, 2706, 3575
Mondelli Plan 250
Mondlane, Eduardo Chivambo 738, 1261, 2313–14
 assassinated 2153, 2314
Mondolfo, Rodolfo 2839
Mondragón Collective 663, 2314–15
Monestel, Manuel 640
Monge Alfaro, Carlos 879
Mongoose Gang 1463, 2462
Moni Singh 2576
Monipong, Sisowath 3035
Monireth, Sisowath 566, 567, 569, 3035
Monks of Medmenham Abbey 3530

- Monmouth 83, 84, 1405
 Monongahela, Battle of 76
 Monroe, Ben 1860
 Monroe, James 1319, 1512
 Monroe Doctrine 1514, 1521, 1523, 1663
 Monrovia 2115
 Mont Pelerin Society 2436
 Montagna, Nicola 1829–30, 1830–1, 1831–2
 Montagnard faction 962, 1277, 1288, 1290–1, 2849, 2970
 Montagu, Edwin 2388
 Montague–Chelmsford Report 552, 1700
 Montague County Farmers' Alliance 2724
Montaña, La 270
 Montaña Mestizo, Tathiana 796–8, 803–5, 2791
 Montaña Hernández, Andrés 2296
 Montañ, Otilio E. 2277
 Monte Bello Islands 513
 Montebello, Quebec 3659
 Monteiro, Enrico 603
 Montejo, Governor 2080
 Montenegro 35, 3010
 Monterrosa, Domingo 2958
 Montesinos, Vladimiro 2646, 2654
Montesquieu, Charles-Louis de Secondat
 1112, 1114, 2315–16, 2713
 De l'esprit des lois 1115, 2316
 Enlightenment 1126, 2316 environmental determinism 1409
 Lettres persanes 2316
Montessori, Maria 2316–17
 Monteverde, Domingo 3456
 Montevideo, Battle of 288
 Montez, Lola 1150
 Montgomery, Richard 79
 Montgomery Bus Boycott 762
 King 651, 1971–2, 2067
 Parks 1971, 2613–16
 SNCC 3186
 Montgomery Improvement Association (MIA)
 761, 1972, 2614
Monthly Review 1649, 2249
 Montiel, Rodolfo 2289
 Montjuic trial 145
 Montoneros 245–6, 249, 273, 1155–7, 2149
 Montreal 80, 845, 2099, 2783, 2786
 see also Concordia University, student protests
 Montreynaud, Florence 3577
 Montseny, Federica 115, 124, 3142
 Montserrat 2075
 Montserrat Trades and Labor Union 2078
 Monzalvo, Luis 275
 Moodie, Susanna 3146–7
 Moodley, R. K. 151
 Moody, Kim 769
 Mooloya strike 2051
 Mooney, Tom 836
Moonhunter (film) 2747
Moonshadow 2108
 Moore, Amzie 73
 Moore, Andrew 3490–2
 Moore, Barrington 3235
 Moore, Fred 2948
 Moore, Johnny “Dizzy” 611
 Moore, Mike 1429
 Moore, Queen Mother 394
 Moore, Richard 837
 Moore, William 899
 Moore Town Maroons 1873
 Moore's Creek 81
 Moorhouse, Frank 107
 Moorosi 2109
Moplah Revolts 2317–18
 MOPOCO, Paraguay 2601, 2605, 2606
Moraes, Irineu Luís de 2318–19
Morais, Clodomir de 2319
Moral and Political Magazine 2126
 Morales, Gómez 249
 Morales, Horacio (Boy) 2680, 2682, 2684
Morales Ayma, Juan Evo 2319–20 cocaleros 788, 1938, 1939
 election 433, 786–7, 2371
 MAS 418, 423, 433, 434, 788, 789–90, 2320
 WTO, Quebec 3658
 Morales Bermúdez, Francisco 1568, 3431
 Moran, D. P. 1799
 Morandi, Rodolfo 1829
Morant Bay Rebellion 1868, 1869–70, 2320–3
 Morapedi, Wazha Gilbert 453–63, 1955–7, 2357–8
 Moravia 318, 3050
Moravian Brothers 2323–4
 More, Hannah 203, 3566
 More, Thomas 514–15
 Utopia 1639, 3415–16
 Moreau, Alicia 271
 Moreira César, Antônio 600
 Moreno, Major 3232
 Moreno, Nahuel 272
 Moreno, Victor 3447
 Moretti, Mario 2815, 2816, 2817
 Morgan, Edward 3499
 Morgan, Henry Lewis 1091
 Morgan, John Tyler 1565, 1566
 Morgan, Robin 3167, 3629
 Morgan, Steffan 529–30
 Morgan, Thomas J. 2026
 Morgan-Curtis, Samantha A. 289–90
Morgan v. Virginia 760, 869, 1257
 Morgari, Oddino 3013

- Morillo, Pablo 578, 3457, 3458
 Morin, Thérèse 2785
 Morinigo, Higinio 2599, 2600
 Moritz van Nassau, Johan 2588
 Morley, Ian 2804–5
 Morley-Minto Reforms 1699
Morning Post 1702
 Morning Star Uprising 2515
 Moro, Aldo 380, 1820, 1839, 2816
 Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) 2329–31, 2688
Moro national liberation 2324–32
 Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) 2327, 2328–31, 2679
 Moro people, Philippines 2679, 2686
 Moroccan Liberation Army 1249
 Moroccan Workers' Union (UMT) 2337
Morocco
 Abdelkrim uprising 44
 French rule 1248–9
 Green March 2338
 IMF 2338
 independence 1249, 3336
 Jewish people 2336
 NLA 1247
 as protectorate 42
 protests 2332–9
 Riff rebellion 1125, 2336
 Roosevelt 2336
 Morogoro General Conference 3088
 Moroka, Dr. 3087
Morones, Luis Napoleon 2279, 2280, 2339–40
 Moroni, Antonio 3015
 Moroz, Oleksandr 3376
 Morrill, John 1100
 Morris, A. D. 650, 651
 Morris, Abraham 2395
Morris, William 2340–2, 2820
 Morse, Chuck 137–9, 141 mortality rates 3382
 Mosca, Gaetano 2244
 Moscato, Antonio 2165
Moscow fire and protest, 1547 2342
 Moscow Trust Group 198
 Moses, Marian 3166
 Moses, Robert 747, 1258, 1259
 Moses, Wilson J. 391
 Moseveni: see Museveni, Yoweri
 Moshoeshoe I 2109
 Moshoeshoe II 2112
 Mosley, Oswald 524, 1174, 2526
Mossadegh, Mohammad 1763–6, 1768–9, 1770, 2342–4
 Most, Johann 128, 157, 1411, 1562
 Motahhari, Morteza 1811
 Motakallemin, Malek al- 1768
Mother Earth 158, 379, 1412, 3418
Mother Jones 2344–5
 Mother Theresa Association 2002
 motherhood
 Italy 1177, 3591
 Mother Jones 2344
 Poland 3557
 Republican Motherhood 3616
 Soviet Union 3607, 3608
 Mother's Milk Project 2418
 Mothers' Day protest 3575
 Mothers of the Nation 3546
 Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo: see Madres de La Plaza de Mayo
 Motley, Constance 2275
 Motsete, Kgalemang 459, 2358
 Motshidisi, Klaas 457
Motsoaledi, Elias 171, 2345–6, 3094
 Mott, Lucretia
 Seneca Falls convention 168, 3005, 3164
 suffrage 2492
 and Woodhull 3621, 3636
 World Anti-Slavery Convention 205, 3620, 3639–40
 Motua movement 956
Moudjahid, El 1162
 Mouffe, Chantal 772, 773, 3743
 Moulian, T. 692, 693
 Moulrier Boutang, Yann 2305
 Moulin, Jean François August 1079
 Mounier, Emmanuel 892, 1260, 2465
 Mountbatten, Louis Francis 556, 1704, 1711, 1802, 1922
 Mournier, Emmanuel 634
 Moussaoui, Zacarias 1646
 Moustaki, Georges 2382
 Mouvement autonome des femmes (MAF) 3575
 Mouvement pour la Démocratie en Algérie (MDA) 367
 Mouvement Démocratique de la Rénovation Malgache (MDRM) 1250
 Mouvement des Forces Démocratiques de la Casamance (MFDC) 3006
 Mouvement de libération du taxi 2786
 Mouvement pour la Liberté de l'Avortement (MLAC) 3575
 Mouvement National Congolais (MNC) 854, 856–7, 2137
 Mouvement Ouvrier et Paysan (MOP) 1518
 Mouvement Patriotique de Côte d'Ivoire (MPCI) 882
 Mouvement Populaire Ivoirien du Grand Ouest (MPIGO) 882
 Mouvement républicain populaire (MRP) 825

- Mouvement Socialiste* 3228
 Mouvements Unis de la Résistance 405
 MOVE organization 7
 Movement for the Actualization of the Sovereign State of Biafra (MASSOB) 2484–5
 Movement Against the Monarchy 1389
 Movement of Alternative Society 140
 Movement for the Autonomy of Kabylia (MAK) 1928
 Movement for the Defense of Human and Citizens' Rights (ROP*Ci*O) 3077 Movement for Democracy (MPD) 603
 Movement for Democracy in Liberia (MODEL) 2116
 Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) 2364–5, 3112, 3732, 3738
 Movement for the Emancipation of Chilean Women 3598
 Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta (MEND) 2480, 2483, 2484
 Movement for Independence (MPI) 2770
 Movement for the Liberation of Congo (MLC) 858
 Movement for Multi-Party Democracy (MMD) 697, 1940, 3111, 3112, 3704
 Movement for National Unity in the Fight against Neoliberalism 2294 Movement for People's Participation (MPP) 3340–1
 Movement Peronista Montenoro 1156
 Movement of Plurinational Unity (MUPP) 1066, 1067
Movement of Recuperated Factories, Argentina 2346–50
 Movement for Restoration of Democracy (MRD) 2584, 3451
 Movement of Revolutionary Communities (MPR) 684
 Movement of the Revolutionary Left (MIR EL) 788, 2362
 Movement of Revolutionary Youth (MRY) 3175
 Movement for Self-Defensive Rural Communities 135
 Movement for the Survival of the Ogoni People (MOSOP) 2479, 2635, 2972
 Movement Toward Socialism: see Movimiento Al Socialismo (MAS)
 Movement for the Victory of Democratic Rights (MTLD) 44 Movement for Workers' Unity 112
 MoveOn.org 2504
 Movimiento Todos por la Patria (All for the Fatherland Movement) 246
 Movement Socialista de Catalunya 2740
 Movimento Democrático Brasileiro (MDB) 497
 Movimento per la Democrazia Repubblicana 1384
 Movimento de la Izquierda Revolucionaria: see Left Revolutionary Movement (MIR)
 Movimento de Libertação de São Tomé e Príncipe (MLSTP) 2971
 Movimento del Nuevo Cancionero 2377
 Movimento Politico dei Lavoratori (Workers' Political Movement) 2622
Movimento Popular de Libertação de Angola (MPLA) 164, 564, 2358–62, 2449, 3106, 3605
 Movimento Revolucionário Oito de Outubro (MR-8) 472
Movimento Sem Terra (MST) 481–3, 2350–3
 formation of 2273, 2351–3, 2635
 Moraes 2319
 and South Africa 3462
 Movimento Sociale Italiano (MSI) 1834, 1838
 Movimiento 80 3443
 Movimiento de Acción Revolucionaria (MAR) 562–3
Movimiento Al Socialismo (MAS) 423, 668, 787, 788, 789, 3443 and Causa Radical 3440, 3445–8
 founding of 2292
 Morales 418, 423, 433, 434, 788, 789–90, 2320
Movimiento Bolivariano Revolucionario-200 (MBR-200) 605, 665–6, 668, 3439, 3441, 3448–50
 Movimiento del 2 de Febrero 2596
 Movimiento Electoral del Pueblo (MEP) 668, 3437, 3448
 Movimiento Ibérico de Liberación (MIL) 147
 Movimiento de Liberación Nacional-Tupamaros (MLN-T): see Tupamaros
 Movimiento Libertario (ML) 849, 1188
 Movimiento Nacional de Empresas Recuperadas (MNER) 2347
 Movimiento Nacional de Fábricas Recuperadas por los Trabajadores (MNFRT) 2347
 Movimiento Nacionalista Revolucionario (MNR) 416, 428, 431, 788, 1164, 1936–7
 Movimiento Quinta República (MVR) 666, 668, 3441, 3448, 3450
Movimiento Revolucionario Túpac Amaru (MRTA) 2063, 2362–3, 2643, 2644, 2645, 2658
 Movimiento Universitario Julián Apaza 1937
 Moyano, Maria Elena 2654, 2658
 Moyer, Charles 1570
 Moyne Commission 1867, 3316
 Moynihan Report 752
 MOZAL metal workers' strike 2356

- Mozambican African National Union (MANU) 1261
- Mozambique
anarchism 153
anarchosyndicalism 2354
ANC bases 2153
assimilation 2354
Chissano 738, 1262
civil war 1262
IMF 2355
independence 3546, 3730, 3748
indigenous communities 2354
Machel 2153–4
migrant labor 3091
Mondlane 2313–14
Portuguese rule 1042, 1261, 1656, 2353, 2731
slavery 2353–4
and Southern Rhodesia 3735
trade unions 3112
women's movements 3547
worker protests 2353–7
see also Frente de Libertação de Moçambique; Resistência Nacional Moçambicana
- Mozen, Chelsea 1391–5
Mozote massacre 2958
Mozzoni, Anna Maria 3592
- Mpho, Motsamai 454, 459, 2357–8
- MPLA: see Movimento Popular de Libertação de
Angola (MPLA)
- MRTA: see Movimiento Revolucionario Túpac
Amaru
- Ms. Magazine* 1610
MSN 3329
- MST: see Movimento Sem Terra
- Mswati II, of Swaziland 3205
Mswati III, of Swaziland 3207
- MTW: see Marine Transport Workers (MTW)
- Mtyingizana Beata 2353–7
Mubarak, Ali 1073, 1075
Mubende Banyoro Committee (MBC) 3371
mucapi movement 3697
Mudanya, Truce of 3355
Mudros, Truce of 3348, 3354–5
Muela Dam 2112
Mugabe, Alfred 3731
Mugabe, Robert 2363–5, 3110, 3731, 3735
black nationalism 396
in Mozambique 3739–40 and Nkomo 3736
as prime minister 3737
and ZANU-PF 3732 and ZCTU 3732
ZIPA 3738
Mugalla, Joseph 1950, 1951
- Mughals
Kashmir 1928
Mughul empire 1687, 1695, 1708
Muhammad, Abdallahi ibn 2163, 2164
Muhammad, Elijah 18, 394, 746, 2179
Muhammad, Khalid 397
Muhammad, Qazi 1762
Muhammad, Sayyid Ali (the Bab) 1766
Muhammad al-Badr, Prince 3670
Muhammad 'Ali 2365–6
Muhammad III al-Sadiq 3335
Muhammad Pacha Bey 3334
Muhammad VIII al-Amin Bey 3336
Muhammed, Qadi 353
Muhiddinov, A. 3244
Muir, Thomas 983–4
Mühsam, Erich 116, 1193, 1609, 2048
Muir, John 652, 1119
Muir, Thomas 2366–7, 3394
Muisca people 3294
Mujahedeen 14, 1773, 3244, 3246
Mujer Nueva, La 3598
Mujeres Contra la Guerra y el Fascismo 3611
Mujeres Libres (journal) 2368, 3611
Mujeres Libres (Free Women) 146, 2367–9,
2962–3, 3134, 3611
Mujica, José 3341
Mujuru, Solomon 3739
Mukherjee, Abani 449, 2874, 3229
Mukherjee, Harishchandra 1712
Mukherjee, Jatindranath: see Jatin, Bagha
Mukti Bahini army 347, 348, 2583
Mukti Sena (Liberation Army) 2442
Muktivyodha 347
Mulai Mohammed 2333
mulattos, Haiti 1527–9, 1531, 1532–3, 1534
Mulay abd al-Rahman 2334
Mulay Hassan 2335
Mulay Hisham 2334
Mulay Ismail al-Samin 2333–4
Mulay Suleiman 2334
Mulay al-Yazid 2334
Mulcahy, Richard 1050
Muldoon, Robert 3155
Mulford, D. C. 3698
Mulji Jetha Market 1699
Mullany, Kate 3215
Müller, Frank I. 2079–80, 2154–5, 2755
Müller, Fredrick 3190
Müller, Hans 1353, 1354
Müller, Jiri 3172, 3173
Müller, Tadzio 1151–4
Mulligan, William H., Jr. 793–4, 859–61, 967–8, 970–2, 2543–5, 2616–18, 2626–8, 3680–1
Mullings, L. 396

- Mulrone, Brian 2557
 Multatuli (Dekker) 1718
 Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) 298, 301, 1396, 3656, 3661 multilateralism, crisis of 1429–30 multinational corporations 3099, 3113 see also pharmaceutical industry
Multitude 2369–72
 Mumba, Levi 2174
 Mumford, Lewis 973
 Munck, Ronaldo 769, 773, 1671, 3657
Munda, Birsa 1708, 2372
Munday, Jack 1456–7, 2373
Mundia 2218
 Mungunda, Kakurukaze 3603
 Munich Agreement 3144
 Municipal Corporations Act 526, 655
 Munje, B. S. 1682
 Munk, Kai 991
 Muñoz, Cesar German 3714
 Muñoz, Fernando Yañez 3714
 Munoz Marin, Luis 2769, 2770
 Munro, Henry 1794
 Munro, Lyall Jr. 308
 Munson, Rube 1459
 Münster, Anabaptists 93, 1357, 2987
 Muntazar, al-Mahadi al- 2163
Müntzer, Thomas 93, 1353, 1357, 2373–4, 2830–1
 Münzenberg, Willi 2430, 3678
 Muoroto Episode 1949–50, 1951
 Murad, Adbal Hakim 1811
Muralista movement 2374–6
 Muratori, Ludovico 1825
 Murayama, Tomiichi 1910
 Murch, D. 398
 Murillo, Luis Gilberto 796
 Murmu, Sidhu and Kanhu 2971
 Murphy, Emma G. 3–6
 Murphy, Timothy S. 2426–7
 Murphy, William Martin 1026
 Murray, George (General Lord) 1854
 Murray, George (student) 3169
 Murray, John: see Dunmore, Lord
 Murray, Judith Sargent 3615
 Murray, William 202
 Murray Hill Company 2786
 Murrow, Edward R. 194
 Mururoa Atoll 1272
 Musa, Said 1634
 Musa, Salamah 235
 Musa Dagh 287
 Mūsahm, Erich 3082
 Musaliar, Ali 2318
 Musawi, Abbas al- 1575, 1576, 2405
 Museum of Memory, the Dictatorship, and Democracy 2598
 Museum of Modern Art 1483
 Museveni, Yoweri 852, 858
 Musgrave, Richard 1788
 Mushala, Adamson 3702–3
 Müsham, Erich 2047, 2049
 Musharraf, Pervez 2584, 2585
 Música Popular Brasileira 2378
 Muslim Association of Britain 227
 Muslim Brotherhood 237, 1069, 1071, 1557–60, 1810, 2406, 3223
 Muslim Conference (MC) 1929
 Muslim League and Congress 2573, 2792 constitutionalism 1685
 CPI 2793
 elections (1937) 346, 1329
 formation of 1709
 Jinnah 1685, 1921–2, 1929, 1930, 2577
 Lahore Resolution 1921
 Nankar protests 2576 power in Pakistan 2575 seats in Congress 1699
 student wing 3180
 Muslim Mosque 747
 Muslim Personal Laws 1585, 1693
 Muslim United Front (MUF) 1933 Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act 1692
 Muslims
 Albania 36
 in China 715, 716
 exiled from Spain 2056
 and Hindus 1582–3 population dispersal 1808 young French women 3577 see also Shi'ite Muslims; Sunni Muslims
 Mussallam, Maqdoom 3196
Mussolini, Benito 2382–4
 anti-clericalism 2384
 and Bose 450
 and CGdL 3015
 as example 1365
 fascism 1170–1, 1176–80, 1422, 2384
 Heimwehr 320
 Hitler 1592
 influence in Colombia 408
 Iqbal on 1761
 and Malatesta 2170
 March on Rome 1589
 as maximalist 1828
 overthrown 1181
 PCI 3341
 PSI 2383

- Reggio Emilia Congress 1822
 Repubblica Sociale Italiana 2834
 and Spartacus 3149
 Turati 3341
 Mustafa, Sam A. 2981–2
 Muste, A. J. 596, 837, 2035, 3411, 3412
 Musteites 3383, 3386 al-Mutawakkilite Yemeni Kingdom 3670
 mutinies
 Britain 510, 3154–5
 Congo 854
 India 1686
 Mutiny Act 3300–1
 Muṭiu, Caius 2866
 Mutlak, Natalie 871–2
 Muto, Ichiyo 1884–9, 1901–9
 Mutraw, A. May-Oo 548–51
 mutual aid
 Chile 691
 China 707
 Kropotkin 2070
 Kuron 2014
 Peru 2647–8
 Philippines 2672
 Russia 2879
 Sierra Leone 941
 Mutual Aid Society of Peasants 1846
 mutualism
 Chile 111
 France 119
 Huichol 97
 Landauer 2048
 Proudhon 97, 111, 119–20
 Mutualist Confederation 111
 Muwamba, Ernest 3697
 Muzorewa, Gwinyai P. 698–705
 Mwakenya 1947
 Mwanawasa, Levy 697, 3705
 Mwanga, Kabaka 3370
Mwari cult 699, 702
 Mwiandi, Mary Ciambaka 2253–7
 Mwinilunga district 3702
 Myanmar 347
 Myllar, Andrew 3001
 Myrdal, Gunnar 758
 Myrntinen, Henri 1718–21
 Mzilikazi, chief 700
 Mzingeli, Charles 2384–5, 3092, 3729

 N30 3662
 NAACP: see National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
 Nabat Confederation of Anarchists 143
 Nabi Isa doctrine 3192
Nabil's Narrative 1766

 Nabyev, Rahman 3245–6
Nacion, La 248
 Nacpil, Lidy 2687
 Nadir Khan 330, 3243
 NAFTA: see North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA)
 Nagani (Red Dragon) Book Club 2527
Nagaravatta (Angkor Wat) 568
 Nagasaki atomic bomb 194, 195, 728, 1729, 1885, 1887, 1890
 Nagashima protests 191
 Nagriamel movement 3426
 Naguib, Muhammad 1070, 1071, 1078
 Nagy, Ferenc 1618
Nagy, Imre 1618, 1625, 1627–8, 1629, 2136,
 2387–8, 2866
 Nagy, Ladislau 2866
 Nahdatul Ulama 1730
 Naicker, E. V. R. 1327, 1328–9, 1710
 Naicker, G. M. 2191
Naidu, Sarojini 1329, 1682, 1709, 2388–9
 Naipaul, V. S. 1499
 Nairobi African Local Government Servants'
 Association (NALGSA) 2268
 Naisseline, Nidoish 2458
 Najimuddin, Khwaja 2577
 Nakakita, Koji 1909–10
 Nakasone, Yasuhiro 191, 1882
Naled ea Lesotho 2110
 Nalivkin, Vladimir 3242
 Nam Bo 1716
 Nam Choan Dam 3276
 Nama communities 3539
 Bondelswart 2394
 guerillas 2393
 Kooper 2393
 transhumants 2389–90
 Namangan province 3422
 Namasudra renaissance 956
 Nambodiripad, E. M. S. 2422
 Nambu Rising 1898, 1899
Namibia 2389–401, 2529–31, 3202–5
 anarchism 147
 and Angolan independence 3204
 decolonization 2530
 German rule 2389–94
 independence 166, 2389–401, 3112, 3204
 indigenous communities 2391–3, 2394
 Nujoma 2399, 2400, 2529–31, 3202, 3204–5
 Ovambo people 2530
 PLAN 2399, 2531, 3203, 3204 post-independence 2399–400
 Schutztruppe 2392, 2393
 South African occupation 2394–8
 SWANU 2530

- Namibia (cont'd)
 SWAPO 2398–9, 2400, 2530–1, 3112, 3202–5, 3604–5
 unemployment 2399
 water resources 2394
 women's sexual intercourse strike 3603
 World War II 2398
see also Witbooi, Hendrik
- Namphy, Henri 279, 1504, 1505–6, 1520
 Nana Yaa Asantewaa: see Queen Nanny
 Nanayakkara, Vasudeva 2632
 Nanchang Uprising 725
 Nane Nane riots 1952
 Nanjing, Treaty of 1658
Nankar protest movement 2576
 Nanking, Rape of 727
 Nanking, Treaty of 3230
 Nanny, slave 1873
 Nanterre University 2260
Nantes, Edict of 1068–9, 1110, 2950
 Nanyang Party 3257
 Naoroji, Dadabhai 1695, 1699
NAP: see Nuclei Armati Proletari
 Naples 1149, 1825, 1827, 1847, 1848
 Napoleon I: see Bonaparte, Napoleon
 Napoleon III
 Algeria 43
 Carbonari 1825
 counterrevolution 887, 1234
 coup d'état 2610
 Gambetta 1323
 Hugo 1611
 Mexico 1925
 Romania 2865
 Second Empire 404
 Vietnam 3475
see also Bonaparte, Louis-Napoleon
 Napoleonic Code 1282
 Napoleonic Wars 486, 1348, 1718
see also anti-Napoleonic Wars of Liberation
Napper Tandy, James 1786, 2402–3, 3393
Narayan, Jayaprakash 1329, 2403–4, 2432, 2794, 3587
 Narayana Guru 955–6
 Narcosis 2063
 narcotrafficking 808
 Nardal, Paulette and Jane 2427, 3578
 Nari Nirjatan Parairodh Mancha (Forum Against Oppression of Women) 3588
Narita airport, resistance to construction of 1881, 1901–9
 Narodnaya Volya 283, 3550
 Narodniks 2169, 2227, 2426, 3550, 3551
 Narong Kittikachorn 660
 Narváez, Luis de 1472
 Naseby, Battle of 909, 1098
 Nash, Diane 1258
 Nash, Gary 296
 Nasha Ukraina 3376
 Nashoba community 2460, 2461, 3617, 3666
 Nasi, Virgilio 1833
Nasir, Hassan 2404, 2581
 Nasional Samling Party 2525
Nasrallah, Sayed Hassan 1577, 2404–5
Nasser, Gamal Abdel 2406–7
 Arab socialism 1069, 1072, 3224
 Aswan High Dam 2406
 Czech arms deal 1071
 Free Officers 1076, 1077
 land reform 1779
 and Naguib 1071
 Pan-Arabism 399, 2068
 Philosophy of the Revolution 1070, 2406 and Qadaffi 2779
 and Sadiq al-Mahdi 3191
 Suez treaty 1078
 UAR 1072, 3223
 Yemen 3670
 Yugoslav visit 3688
 Nasser-al-Din Shah 1767
 Nasserism 2406–7
Nat Turner Rebellion 233, 2407–9
 Natali, Shahan 283
 Natanson, M. 2934
 Natera, Ramón 1013
 Nath, Rani Narendra 2388
Nation 3680
 Nation Labor Union 1977
 Nation Liberation Front, Yemen 3671
 Nation of Islam (NOI) 746, 763, 764, 1336, 2179
 Nation of Ulysses 2845
 Nation Party, Turkey 3363
Nation Review 107
National, Le 401, 1230
 National Aboriginal Alliance 6
 National Aboriginal Consultative Committee (NACC) 311
 National Aboriginal and Islander Health Organization (NAIHO) 311
 National Accord, Paraguay 2606
 National Action Party (PAN), Mexico 999, 2291, 2294, 2537, 3432, 3718
 National Advisory Committee on Civil Disorders 750
 National African Council of Trade Unions (NACTU) 3096, 3097
 National African Union of Independent Mozambique (UNAMI) 1261
 National Afro-American League 756
 National Agrarian Confederation (CNA) 2655

- National Agrarian Party (PNA) 999
 National Agricultural Labourers' Union (NALU) 241
 National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression 965
 National Alliance Dai Viet 3470
 National Alliance for Reconstruction (NAR) 3320
 National Alliance of Shoemakers 2224
 National Amalgamated Sailors' and Firemens' Union 831
 National American Indian Movement 2415
 National American Suffrage Association 3624
 National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA) 3165, 3623, 3626
 National Anti-Slavery Society 3639
National Anti-Slavery Standard 215
 National Army for Democracy 1167
 National Army of Democratic Kampuchea 1960–1
 National Army of Greece 1438
 National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP)
 Abu-Jamal 8
 Addams 8, 12
 Baker 332
 and Black Panthers 399
 Du Bois 395, 756, 1023, 1554
 Evers 1155
 Jim Crow era 17
 King 1971
 legal attack on segregation 759–61 and Niagara movement 1024
 non-violence 2498
 Scottsboro Resistance 3002–3
 Wells 3519
 Williams 2067, 3533–4
 Zinn 73
 National Association of Colored Women 756, 3519
 National Association of Honduran Peasants (ANACH) 614, 2128, 2129
 National Association of Labor Movement Organizations (NALMO) 1985
 National Association of Nigerian Students (NANS) 2483
 National Association for Promoting the Political and Social Improvement of the People 2130
 National Association to Repeal Abortion Laws 1299
 National Association of Spanish Women (ANME) 3510
 National Association for Women's Suffrage 2524
 National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM) 2292, 3297, 3718
 National Awakening, Nepal 2443
 National Awami Party (NAP) 2579, 2580, 2581–2
 National Black Consciousness Day 3746
 National Campaign on Dalit Human Rights (NCDHR) 959, 960
 National Campesino Confederation (CNC) 2287, 2542
National Catholic Reporter 2061
 National Center for Student Action (NSCT) 2747
 National Charter Association (NCA) 657–9, 2464
 National Civic Union (NCU) 1017
 National Commission on the Disappearance of Persons (CONADEP) 2159
 National Committee in Defense of the Popular Economy 2291
 National Committee of Trade Union Unity (CNUS) 1472, 1479
 National Committee for Unemployed 3385
 National Committee on Women and Development 3547
 National Complete Suffrage Union 658
 National Confederation of Agriculture Workers (Contag) 3388
 National Confederation of Cuban Workers (CNOG) 2151
 National Confederation of Peasants of the Philippines (KPMP) 2672, 2673
 National Conference of Brazilian Bishops (CNBB) 482
 National Conference of Catholic Charities 1170
 National Conferences of the Autonomous Women's Movement 3589
 National Conscription Act 69
 National Conventions of Anti-Slavery Women 3640
 National Coordinating Committee (KKP) 3073 national coordinating committees, Mexico 2291
 National Coordination of Agricultural Producers (CONAPA) 2602
 National Coordination of Christian Grassroots Farmers (KOGA) 2606
 National Council of Churches 1259
 National Council of Education (NCE) 1698
 National Council of Private Enterprise (CONEP) 2594
 National Council of Student Representatives, Korea 3184
 National Council for Women (CONAMU) 3631
 National Covenant 1097, 3000
 National Day of Mourning 3094
 National Defense Law, Turkey 3362
 National Defender of Women's Rights 3631
 National Democratic Action Party 788
 National Democratic Alliance 1693

- National Democratic Coalition (NADECO) 2481, 2483
- National Democratic Front (FDN), Mexico 2287, 2292
- National Democratic Front (NDF), Botswana 461
- National Democratic Front (NDF), Philippines 2680, 2682
- National Democratic Party (NDP), Iraq 2954, 3516
- National Democratic Party (NDP), Pakistan 2584
- National Democratic Party (NDP), Poland 2717
- National Democratic Party (NDP), Zimbabwe 1779, 2363, 3730, 3735
- National Democratic Revolution (NDR) 1136
- National Democratic Union of Mozambique (UDENAMO) 1261
- National Direction 3449
- National Economic Development and Labor Council (NEDLAC) 875
- National Educators' Union (UNE) 1058
- National Emergency Committee Against Mob Violence 758
- National Employment Law, Argentina 262
- National Endowment for Democracy (NED) 3012
- National Farm Workers' Association 660
see also United Farm Workers
- National Farm Workers' Service Center 1610
- National Farmers' Alliance 2725
- National Fascist Party (PNF) 1172
- National Federation of Christian Agrarian Leagues (FENELAC) 2605
- National Federation for Democracy and National Unification (NFDNU) 1991
- National Federation of Free and Independent Trade Unions of Mozambique (CONSILMO) 2356
- National Federation of Honduran Peasants (FENACH) 2128–9
- National Federation of Indian Women (NFIW) 646, 3587
- National Federation of Indigenous, Peasant, and Black Organizations (FENOCIN) 1056
- National Federation of Peasant Organizations (FENOC) 1056
- National Federation of Sugar Workers (NFSW) 2681
- National Federation of Unions of the Salvadoran Workers: see Federation of Salvadoran Workers (FENASTRAS)
- National Federation Party (NFP), of Fiji 1197
- National Feminist Party 3598
- National Feminist Union 3597
- National Forum (NF) 174, 3089
- National Front, Britain 512
- National Front, Cyprus 947
- National Front in Defense of Wages 2291
- National Front for the Liberation of Angola: see Frente Nacional de Libertação de Angola (FNLA)
- National Front for the Liberation of Corsica (FLNC) 873
- National Front for the Liberation and the Rights of Women 2291
- National Front for the Liberation of South Vietnam (NFLSV) 220, 1599
- National Front of Popular Action (FNAP) 2291, 2299
- National Front against Repression 2291
- National German Women's Association (BDF) 3580
- National Government Council (CNG) 1504–5
- National Government of Reconstruction 2470
- National Guard 2042, 2409–10, 2969–70
- National Guerilla Coordination (CNG) 1082–3, 1168
- National Heroes Day 2449
- National Human Rights Commission (CNDH) 2289
- National Independence Party (NIP) 1634
- National Independent League 2609
- National Indian Brotherhood (NIB) 584
- National Indian Youth Council (NIYC) 2412
- National Indigenous Organization of Colombia (ONIC) 803, 804
- National Industrial Recovery Act (NIRA) 3411, 3412
- National Institute of Agrarian Reform 2471
- National Institute of Colonization and Agrarian Reform (INCRA) 2352
- National Institute of Indigenous Affairs (INAI) 258
- National Intelligence Service (SIN), Peru 2654
- National Labor Party (NLP), Thailand 3265
- National Labor Relations Board 1754
- National Labor Union 2025, 3214–15
- National Labor University 114
- National Land Planning, Japan 1904
- National Lawyers' Guild 3664
- National League, Ireland 1415
- National League, Poland 2717
- National Liberal League 1414, 2341
- National Liberation Alliance (ALN) 45, 2220
- National Liberation Army, Costa Rica 878
- National Liberation Committee (CLN), Spain 1384
- National Liberation Forces (FLN), Mexico 3714
- National Liberation Front (Balli Kombëtar) 30

- National Liberation Front (EAM) 1436, 1437, 1438, 1444
- National Liberation Front (FNL), Venezuela 40, 3442
- National Liberation Front of Guiana (FNLG) 1271
- National Liberation Front of Patani (NLFP) 3270
- National Liberation Movement (MLN) 2283, 2771, 2772
- National Liberation Revolutionary Army 543
- National Maritime Union (NMU) 838, 1754
- National Movement of Democratic Defense (EKDA) 1432
- National Movement for Free Elections (NAMFREL) 1615
- National Movement of Victims 798
- National Museum of the American Indian 2420
- National Opposition Union (UNO) 1164, 2476
- National Order Party 3353
- National Organization of Cypriot Fighters (EOKA) 943, 946
- National Organization of Cyprus (EOK) 944
- National Organization for Women (NOW) 1299, 1752, 2410–11, 3166, 3628
- National Partisan Association (ANPI) 1834
- National Party, Chile 681
- National Party (NP), South Africa 170–1, 3093
- National Party of Nigeria (NPN) 1640
- National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) 2115
- National Peasant Confederation 607
- National Peasants' Union (PKM) 1612
- National People's Congress 987
- National Petroleum and Natural Gas Workers' Union (NUPENG) 2481
- National Piquetero Bloc (PBN) 264
- National Polytechnic Institute (IPN) 3297
- National Popular Liberation Army (ELAS) 1436, 1437, 1438, 1444
- National Products Preservation Association 185
- National Progressive Party, Pakistan 2584
- National Project Simón Bolívar 3449
- National Protection Law, Turkey 3365
- National Radical Union of Cyprus (EREK) 944
- National Reformer* 658, 3006
- National Repeal Association 2544
- National Republican Greek League (EDES) 1436, 1437
- National Resistance (RN) 1433
- National Revolutionary Army (NRA) 3727
- National Revolutionary Civic Association (ACNR) 2283, 3427
- National Revolutionary Front (NRF) Malay 3269
- National Revolutionary Party (PNR), Mexico 999, 3432
- National Salvation Front (FSN) 2855
- National Salvation Party (MSP) 3353
- National Security Council (NSC), Turkey 3351
- National Security Law, Korea 3184
- National Shanghai Labor University 135
- National and Social Liberation (EKKA) 1437
- National Socialism, Germany 1173, 3580
see also Nazi Party, Nazism
- National Socialist German Student Group 3178
- National Socialist German Workers' Party (NSDAP) 1172, 1588, 2832
see also Nazi Party, Nazism
- National Socialist Women's Association (NSF) 1591
- National Society of Italy 1826
- National Solidarity, Greece 1438
- National Solidarity of Casual Workers' Unions 1993
- National Strike Council (CNH) 3297
- National System for Social Mobilization (SINAMOS) 3431
- National Teachers' Schools 3297
- National Typographical Union 62
- National Unemployed Workers' Movement (NUWM) 524, 3384
- National Union of Agricultural Workers (NUAW) 242
- National Union of Autonomous Regional Peasant Organizations (UNORCA) 3645
- National Union of Distributive Workers 3093
- National Union of Dock Laborers (NUDL) 2819
- National Union of Food Industry Workers (SINALTRAINAL) 809
- National Union of Gasworkers and General Laborers, Women's Branch 2229
- National Union of Iron Molders 3214
- National Union of Metal Workers (NUMSA) 2264, 3096, 3098
- National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) 349, 529, 874, 3062, 3096, 3098
- National Union of Namibian Workers (NUNW) 3112, 3204
- National Union of Popular Forces (UNFP) 2337
- National Union of Railwaymen 519
- National Union of Social Security Workers (SNTSS) 2294
- National Union of Societies for Equal Citizenship (NUSEC) 3568, 3569
- National Union of South African Students (NUSAS) 3088, 3180
- National Union of Textile Workers 3095
- National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) 2361, 2449, 2531
- National Union of the Working Classes 2129

- National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies (NUWSS) 527–8, 3567
- National Union of Workers (UNT) 2224, 2293–4, 3454
- National Unity Coalition, Israel 1814
- National Unity government 1437
- National University of Cordoba 273–4
- National University of Nicaragua (UNAN) 2964
- National Volunteer Defense Army (NVDA) 3292
- National Woman's Party (NWP) 2624, 2625, 3626
- National Women's Association 3582
- National Women's Political Caucus 1299
- National Women's Rights Convention 3621
- National Women's Suffrage Association (NWSA) 167, 169, 3164, 3622–3, 3636
- National Women's Trade Union League 11
- National Worker Peasant Popular Assembly (ANOCP) 2291
- National Workers' Central (CNT) 1479
- National Workers' Confederation (CNT), Paraguay 2599
- National Workers' Liberation Front (EEAM), Greece 3220
- National Workers' Party 2583
- National Workers' Union (NWU) 1861, 2197, 2718
- National Workshops, France 1233
- National Youth Organization (EON) 1443
- nationalism
- African 3084–90
 - Albania 34–8
 - Basque 1127–32
 - Bengal 344, 2573–9
 - Botswana 453–63, 1955–7
 - Bulgaria 1452
 - and fascism 1173
 - Germany 1346–52, 1373–81, 2982
 - Ghana 1381–3
 - Greece 1451–6
 - Hindu 1582–5, 1684, 2574
 - imperialism 1660, 2246
 - India 1673–4, 1694–700
 - Iran 1764
 - Ireland 1798–800
 - Kashmir 1928–9
 - Macedonia 1440, 1452
 - Madagascar 1249, 1250, 2156
 - Nyasaland 2174–5
 - Moro 2324–32
 - Oromo 1134, 1138–9
 - Panama 2593–5
 - Puerto Rico 2768–9
 - Quebec 2783–8
 - Sinhala Buddhist 3527
 - Sudan 3192
 - Swaziland 3026–7
 - Taiwan 3235–7
 - Tamil 2633, 3250–3, 3527
 - Turkish 1453
- see also* black nationalism; Patani Malay nationalism
- Native American peoples
- aiding runaway slaves 212
 - American Revolution 2022
 - enslaved 211
 - environmental activism 2417–19
 - protest 2411–20
 - reservations 2412
 - resistance 899–902
 - rights 39, 2412
 - water usage 1119–20
 - white colonists 74–5
- Native Baptist Church 2322
- Native Bills, South Africa 2111
- Native Labor Act 172
- Native Labor Code 2354
- Native Labor (Settlement of Disputes) Act 3094
- Native Land Court 2207
- Native Republic thesis 2222
- Native Title Act 5, 312
- Native Title Amendment Act 5
- Native Trust and Land Bill 833
- Natives' Representative Council (NRC) 833, 1940
- NATO: see North Atlantic Treaty Organization
- Natoli, Aldo 2870
- Natu brothers 1696
- Natural Justice* 113
- natural rights
- Anthony 169
 - Paine 1409
 - Sylvis 2025
 - Winstanley 1104
- Nature, Capitalism, and Socialism* 2249
- naturiens 99
- Naudet, Jean-Baptiste 1298
- Naujawan Bharat Sabha (Young India Association) 1328, 1677, 1683, 3041
- Nautz, Jürgen 1941–3, 3066–7
- Nauvoo community 1639
- Nav Nirman* (New Construction) movement 3587
- Nava Sama Samaja Party 2053, 2633
- Navajo Reservation 2415
- Navarre, General 3474
- Navarro, Arias 184
- Navarro, Atoy M. 444–5, 2845–6
- Navarro, Gustavo 428
- Navarro Wolff, Antonio 2149
- Navdanya movement 2734, 3028
- Naxalbari, Bengal 2422
- Naxalite movement 2265, 2266, 2421–5, 3587
- Naya Kashmir* (New Kashmir) 1929

- Naylor, James 1105
- Nazi Party, Nazism
 anti-Semitism 758, 1375
 and Antonescu 1590, 2857
 Austria 320
 exiles 1372
 fascism 291, 1183–4
 Final Solution 1594
 Führerprinzip 1371
 Greek resistance 1436–9
 Holocaust 1594
 homosexuality 465, 2104–5
 Jewish resistance 1916–18
 membership 1375
 Netherlands 2447
 racism 1184
 resistance to 1376–81
 rise of 1374–5
 totalitarianism 1917
 and Weimar Republic 1359 workers' resistance 1370–1
see also Hitler, Adolf
- Nazi–Soviet Non-Aggression Pact 1593
- Nazim Kiamil Pasha 3682
- Nazir, Aizaz 2584
- Ndebele people 698–9, 700, 702, 3734, 3735
- Ndlovu, S. Mosoja 3729
- Ndlovu-Gatsheni, Sabelo J. 3084–90
- Ndola Welfare Association 3697
- Ne Win 550, 555, 2528, 3068, 3279
- Nea Dimokratia 3168
- Nechaev, Sergei 159, 334, 977, 1575, 2425–6, 3720
Catechism of a Revolutionary 2425
- Necker, Jacques 891, 1275, 3033
- Neebe, Oscar W. 1569, 1570
- Neely, Daniel T. 610–12
- Neeno, Timothy M. 1239–42, 2822–4
- Neff, Francisco 692
- negative liberty 888
- nego-feminism* 3548
- Negri, Antonio 2426–7
 arrested 1839
 autonomism 323, 324, 1843
 Bolivarianism 414
Empire 979, 1399, 1672, 1842, 1845, 2427
Insurgencies 2427
Marx Beyond Marx 2427
Multitude 979, 1399, 2427
 on the multitude 982, 1006 plan state theory 1843, 1844
Political Descartes 2426
Savage Anomaly, The 2427
Stato e diritto nel giovane Hegel 2426
 Turin 1836
- Negrin, Juan 849, 1188, 3142, 3143, 3144
- Negrismo movement 2428
- Négritude 2428
- Négritude movement 393, 644–5, 1162, 1523, 2427–9
 French Caribbean 3578
 Harlem Renaissance 1554
 Roumain 2872
 Senghor 3007, 3008
- Negro Cultural and Welfare Association (NWCSA) 3559
- Negro Factories Corporation 1336
- Negro Miguel Rebellion 3451–2, 3630
- Negro School, Philadelphia 367
- Negro Seamen Act 3460
- Negro World* 1336
- Neguib, Muhammad 2406
- Nehanda, Ambuya 704
- Nehru, Indira (later Gandhi) 2429, 2432
- Nehru, Jawaharlal 2429–35
 agrarian reforms 1683
 All-India States People's Conference 1929–30
 and Bose 449
 China policy 2434–5
Discovery of India 2795 economic policies 2433–4 education/social reform 2434
 foreign policy 2434–5
 and Gandhi 2429, 2433
Glimpses of World History 2429
 Home Rule movement 1700
 and Irwin 1327, 1681
 in jail 1683–4
 and Jinnah 1921, 2430
 on Kashmir 1931–2
 Khilafat movement 1326, 1677, 1702
 and King 1973
 and left 1710, 2431–2
 non-alignment 3688
 Popular Front 2431
 as prime minister 2433–5
 resignation 2875
 scientific socialism 450
 World War II 2792–3
- Nehru, Kamala 2429, 2430, 2431
- Nehru, Motilal 448, 449, 1326, 1680–1, 2429, 2430
- Nehru Report 1680–1, 2430
- Neill, A. S. 117–18
- Neilson, Samuel 1786
- Neither God Nor Master* 404
 “Nekomma” (Vengeance) 1918
- Nelken, Margarita 3611
- Nello, Paolo 2382–4
- Nelson, David, G. 441, 1807–8, 1848–9, 2565–6

- Nelson, Horatio 442, 873, 993, 2185
 Nelson, Robert 594
 Nemenzo, Francisco 2679, 2682
 Nemequene, of Colombia 3294
 Nemes, Robert 1630–1
 Nemesis Operation 281, 283
 Nenni, Pietro 1829, 2871, 3015
 Neo Destour Party 1248, 3335
 Neo-Kantianism 321
 Neo-Malthusianism 2968 neo-Nazism
 Bologna 1008
 Czech Republic 1392
 Neoclassical Austrian School 355 neocolonialism 1660–2, 2058 neoconservatism 889–90 neoimperialism 1660–2
neoliberalism 3685
 Bolivia 432–5
 Canada 2562
 Chile 690, 1398
 education 3185
 global governance 3655
 hegemony of 298, 299
 Korea 1988–9, 2001–2
 Peru 2650–6
 protest 1006, 1390, 2436–7
 Puerto Rico 2772
 Serbia 3685
 South Africa 3095, 3096, 3098
 South Korea 2000
 Sweden 1151
 Venezuela 3438–41
 World Social Forums 3640
 WTO 97
Nepal 230–2, 2437–41, 2441–4
 April Revolution 230–2
 Comprehensive Peace Accord 2439–40
 Dalits 231–2, 2440
 emigration 2440
 Gurkhas 569, 1686, 1687
 hybrid color revolution 811, 817
 Indian border violence 2443
 Madhesi population 231, 2438
 Maoists 2437–41 nationhood 231
 protest movements 2441–4
 Ranas 2441–2
 Seven Parties Alliance 230, 2439
 water resources 2442
 women 231–2
 Nepal Bank Limited 232
 Nepal Democratic Congress 2442
 Nepali Congress Party (NCP) 230, 2437, 2442, 2443
 Nepali National Congress 2441, 2442
Nepali Sangh (Nepalese Society) 2441 nepotism 2000, 2415
 Nérette, Joseph 279, 1507
Neruda, Pablo 112, 679, 1484, 1911, 2444
 Alturas de Macchu Picchu 2444
 NESEHNUTÍ 1391
 Ness, Henry 3414
 Ness, Immanuel 40–1, 390–1, 774, 1940–1, 2133–4, 2461–3, 3052–3, 3420–2
 Nestlé workers 809
 Netanyahu, Benjamin 239, 846, 1759
Netherlands 2444–8
 American gold and silver 1655
 Calvinism 1033, 1034–5
 COC 2093
 CPN 2446
 England declaring war on 83
 German invasion 1182, 2495
 Hapsburg 1034, 2445
 Interchurch Peace Council 198
 Marshall Plan 2447
 Muslims 2448
 Nazi Party 2447
 Protestant Reformation 1034–5
 protests (1650–1800) 2444–6
 protests (1800–2000) 2446–8
 SDAP 2446
 starvation 2447
 student protests 2447
 workers' movement 2446
 see also Dutch entries
 Netivot Shalom (Paths of Peace) 1813
Neto, António Agostinho 164, 167, 563, 2359, 2360–1, 2448–9
 Quatro Poemas 2448–9
 Neto, Ruth 3605
 Netri, Francisco 253
 Netri, José 253
 Netri, Pascual 253
 Nettleau, Max 95, 1609, 2691
 Network Gothenburg 1152
 Network of East West Women 3633
 Network of Free Initiatives 1618
 Network in Solidarity with the People of Guatemala (NISGUA) 1481
 Neubert, Ehrhart 1337, 1342
 Neue Freie Volksbühne 116, 2047
Neue Rheinische Zeitung 2235
Neue Zeit, Die 1942, 3228
Neues Deutschland 1317, 1340
 Neuhoff, Theodore de 872
 Neumann, Caryn E. 1617–19
 Neumann, Franz 905
 Neutrality, Treaty of 2594

- Neutrality Acts 56
 Never Again War 991
 Neves, José Maria 603
 Neville, John 3524
 Nevis 2075
 Nevskii Prospect strike 2896, 2904
 Nevsky Shipbuilding and Machine Plant 3029
New Age 2357
New Australia movement 313, 2449–56 color line 2452–3
 women 2453
New Caledonia
 anarchist exiles 97
 Communard exiles 2300, 2456–7
 French control 3425
 immigrants 2458
 Kabyl exiles 1927
 nickel 2457, 2458, 2459
 protest and revolt 2456–60
 US base 2457
 volunteers in World War I 2457
 New Catholic Association 2544
 New Chinese Cinema 3285
 New Deal 839, 887, 1568, 2036, 2248, 3387
 Great Society 889
 trade unions 3065
 New Democracy Party (ND), Greece 1447, 1449–50
 New Democratic Party (NDP), Canada 390, 2561, 2975
 New Economic Policy (NEP) 3148, 3607
 Lenin 2087, 3510
 Makhno 2167
 prostitution 3017
 New England 78, 156, 1118–19
 New England Anti-Slavery Society 214, 1334
 New England Restraining Act 78
 New England Workingmen's Association (NEWA) 2130
New Era 113
 New Forum 1345
New German Critique 907
 New Granada 3457
 New Green Alliance 2976
 New Guinea hunter gatherers 3080
New Harmony 156, 1185, 1186, 2460–1, 2567, 3417, 3617
New Harmony Gazette 3666
 New Hebrides (Vanuatu) 2458, 3425
 New Israeli Left (SIH) 1812
 New Jersey mill strike 2825
New Jewel movement 390, 1462–6, 2461–3, 3559
 New Lanark Mills 2460, 2567
 New Left, Japan 1902–4
“new left,” Germany 3521–4
New Left Review 2249, 2262, 3282
New Masses 2253
 New Model Army 909, 1099, 1100, 1103, 2119
New Moral World 1091
 New Negro movement 17, 21, 22, 2822
 New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) 3114
 New People's Army (NPA) 2680
 New Poor Law Act 2720, 3500
New Reasoner 3282
new social movements 101, 782, 2503
 Australia 305–7
 Jamaica 1865
 USA 889
New Society 3283
 New South Wales 307, 310, 1456–8
 New South Wales Builders' Laborers' Federation (NSWBLF) 1456–8, 2373
New Statesman 525, 3283, 3517
New Times 3281
 New Woman 3623
 New World Group 1862
New World Quarterly 1862
New York 3166
 New York accords 1166
New York Age 3519
 New York City
 anti-Iraq war protest 227
 East Side Jewish Women 1209
 Irish immigrants 63, 69
 Leisler's Rebellion 75
 Puerto Rican street gangs 2770
 riots 63
 slave insurrection 88, 212
New York Daily Tribune 69, 3618
 New York Doll 2777
 New York Radical Women 3629
New York Times 222, 743, 2012
 Castro 930
 flying pickets 3412
 Macune 2728
 Mozote massacre 2958
 Pentagon Papers 222
 Samkange 2961–2
 water supplies 3100
New York Tribune 1305
New Yorker 615
New Zealand
 All Blacks rugby team 3155–6
 anarchism 139–40
 indigenous people 2205–9
 IWW 139
 Rainbow Warrior 1273
 see also Maoris; Nuclear-Free New Zealand

- New Zealand Herald* 2454
 New Zealand Labour Party 830, 831
 New Zealand Marxian Association 830
 New Zealand Nuclear-Free Zone Disarmament and Arms Control Act 831, 2528, 2529
 New Zealand Socialist Party 139, 830
 New Zealand Wars 2207
 Newark, Battle of 1098
 NewArk Student Federation 348
 Newark Uprising 531
 Newcastle, Town Moor 3150
 Newllano Colony 3418, 3419 newly industrializing countries 1670
 Newman, Paul Douglas 1300–2
 Newman, Saul 979
Newport Rising 657, 2463–4
News & Letters 1027
 Newsinger, J. 1027
Newsweek 965
 Newton, Huey P. 395, 398, 532, 613
 Newton, Isaac 2210, 2989, 2990
 Newton, John 3528
 Ney, Michel 443
 Nezib, Battle of 2366
 Nga Tamatoa (Young Warriors) 2208
 Ngainoumbey, Barka (Karmu) 1250
 Ngala, Ronald 2269
 Ngano, Martha 3729
 Ngei, Paul 2256
 Ngo Dinh Diem 219, 570, 1599, 2464, 2465, 3474, 3481
 Ngo Dinh Kha 2465
Ngô Đình Nhu 2464–5, 3480
 Ngo Dinh Ziem 3479, 3480, 3481
 Ngoni people 2174
 NGOs: see non-governmental organizations
 Ngoyi, Lilian 3603
 Nguni groups 699
 Nguyen An Ninh 3469, 3470
 Nguyen Binh 3471
 Nguyen Cao Ky 3482
 Nguyen Chi Thanh 3480
 Nguyen Huu Tho 3480
 Nguyen Manh Tuong 3479
Nguyen Tat Thanh: see Hồ Chí Minh
 Nguyen Thai Hoc 3468
 Nguyen Van Hinh 2465
 Nguyen Van Tan 3470
 Nguyen Van Thieu 3482, 3484, 3485
 Nguyen Van Tinh 3471
 Ngwane, Trevor 1313
 Ngwane National Liberatory Congress (NNLC)
 3206–7, 3747
Nhan Van 3479
 Nhari Rebellion 3739
 Nhu, Madame 2465
 Ni Putes, Ni Soumises 3577
 Niagara Movement 756, 1023, 1024, 1555
 Nian Rebellion 3672
 Niassa Company 2354
 Nicaragua
 April Rebellion 605
 Carter 1164
 Catholic Church 2061
 CIA 2472
 civil war 2475
 Constitutionalist War 2965 dictatorship of Somoza 605
 earthquake 2468
 El Chaparral invasion 1205 ethnic groupings 2473 filibustering 637 health issues 2471–2
 IMF 2476
 indigenous resistance 1005
 John Paul's visit 2062
 MISURA 2473
 MISURASATA 2473
 National Government of Reconstruction 2470
 National Literacy Crusade 2471 political music 637–8
 Socialist Party 2467
 students 2470
 UNAG 2474
 US intervention 2466, 2469
 US occupation 2965–6
 see also Nicaraguan Revolution; Sandinista
 National Liberation Front (FSLN)
 Nicaragua Exchange 2502
 Nicaraguan National Union of Agriculturalists and Livestock Producers (UNAG) 2474, 3462
Nicaraguan Revolution 447, 774, 2465–76
 see also Sandinista National Liberation Front
 (FSLN)
 Nicholas I, Tsar 2716 as absolute monarch 2921
 and Bakunin 334
 cholera riot 2878
 Decembrists 977
 and Kropotkin 2005
 overthrown 2889
 Nicholas II, Tsar 438
 abdication 439
 anti-Jewish 2921
 Chernov 676
 demonstrations against 1746–9
 Finland 1201
 Polish language 2718
 as saint 2921

- Nicholls, Doug 307
 Nichols, Mary Grove 3617
 Nichols, Thomas Low 3617
 nickel industry 2457, 2458, 2459
 Nickels, Benjamin P. 2779
 Nico 2777
 Nicola, Jabra 1812
 Nicolas, Louise 3584
 Niehaus, William Frank 3443
 Nien Rebellion 717
 Nietzsche, Elisabeth 2478
Nietzsche, Friedrich 2477–8
 On the Genealogy of Morals 2477
 as influence 2382, 2478
 Japanese readers 133 on Luther 2140–1
 Thus Spoke Zarathustra 2478
 Übermensch 2478
 works 2477
 Nieuwenhuis, Domela 870, 1419
Niger Delta, protest movements 2478–80
 Niger Delta Development Commission (NDDC) 2479
 Niger Delta People's Volunteer Force (NDPVF) 2480, 2483, 2485
 Niger Delta Vigilante Force (NDVF) 2483, 2484
 Niger Delta Vigilante (NDV) 2480, 2484, 2485
Nigeria 2480–5
 Aba Women's Riot 2482, 3634
 British control 1659
 feminism 3548
 Global Day of Action 1389, 1397
 Igbo Women's War 3546
 IMF 2483
 independence 2484
 indirect rule 2482 land tributes 1640
 Land Use Decree 1640
 Movement for the Survival of the Ogoni People 2635
 NAFTA 1053
 oil production 2485 political and electoral protest 2480–2
 pre-colonial 2558
 protest and revolution 2482–4
 separatism 2484–5
 State Security Service (SSS) 2481
 women's movement 2734, 3547
 Women's War 3634–5
 Yoruba 1640
 youth organizations 1640
 see also Saro-Wiwa, Ken Nigeria Cocoa Marketing Board 24
 Nigerian Civil War 24, 25
 Night of Broken Glass 1179
 Night of the Long Knives 1591, 2104 nihilism 1858
 Nihon Anarchist Club 1561
Nihon Heimin Shimbun 133
 Nihon Nōmintō (Japan Farmers' Party) 1911
 Nihon Nomin Kumiai (Japan Peasant Union) 1892
 Nihon Rōnōtō (Japan Labor Farmer Party) 1911
 Nihon Rodo Sodomei (Labor Confederation of Japan) 1890, 1892
 Nihon Rodokumiai Sodomei 1892
 Nii Win Intertribal Council 2419
 Nikolaeva, Klavdia 3552, 3607
 Nilsen, Celestine Micheline 2610–13
 Nimeiri, Jaafar Muhammad 3191
 Nimr, of Ja'liyīn tribe 3197
 Nimtz, A. H., Jr. 2238
Nin, Andreu 2257, 2486–7, 2738, 2739, 2740, 3136, 3141, 3142
 Nine-Two Resolutions, Canada 593
 Nine Years' War 1805
 Ninn, Serge 121
 Nippon Railway company 1897
 Nisbet, Murdoch 3000
 Nisga'a Indians 585
 Nishio, Suehiro 1909
 Nita, Amador 942
 Nitschmann, David 2323
 Nitti, Fausto 1383
 Nivedita, Sister 1697, 1698
 Nixon, E. D. 73, 761, 2614
 Nixon, Richard M.
 Bolivia 419
 Chile 689
 in China 711, 3484
 civil rights 741
 Freedom Budget 2037
 Kent State students 1946, 1947
 and Pham Van Dong 2663
 SDS 3189
 and Steinem 3167
 student protests 221
 Vietnam War 221, 223, 1946, 3484
 Niyazov, Saparmurat 3367–8
 NJM: see New Jewel movement
 Njonjo, Charles 1955
 Njoya, Timothy 1948
 Nkhwa, Kenneth 456
 Nkomati Accord 1262, 2154, 3106
 Nkomo, Joshua 1955, 2221, 2363, 3735, 3736
Nkrumah, Kwame 2487–8
 Botswana People's Party 459
 Du Bois 395, 1025
 fall of 1382–3
 independence movement 1381, 3545

- Nkrumah, Kwame (cont'd) and Kenyatta 1954 and Lumumba 2137
 Marxism 2249
 and Mpho 2358 and Mugabe 2363
 and Robeson 2847
 socialism 1382
 and Zwane 3747–8
- Nkumbula, Harry 1940, 3698–9, 3703
- NKVD (Russian secret police) 3030, 3139, 3142, 3505
- Nnaemeka, Obioma 3548–9
- No Borders 2306
- No Child Left Behind Act 885
- No-Conscription League 1412
- No Mas march 797
- no-rent campaign 1328
- Noboa, Gustavo 1067
- Noche de los Bastones Largos, La* 865
- Nogaret, Guy Chaussinand 1285
- Nogueras, Antonio 253
- Nohke, Gustav 259
- Noir et Rouge* 121
- Nokor Thom* 573
- nomadic concept, anarchism 96
- nomadic war machine (NWM) 981, 982, 2750
- nomadism, Deleuze/Guattari 980, 2750
- nomenklatura* (bureaucracy) 3115, 3116–17, 3118–20, 3123, 3128
- Nōmin Jichi Kai (Peasants' Self-Governing League) 133
- Non-Aggression Pact 1377
- Non-Agricultural Market Access (NAMA) 3651, 3653
- Non-Aligned Countries Summit, Cuba 3304
- non-aligned movement (NAM)
 African National Congress 1940 five demands 3688
 Yugoslavia 3295, 3296, 3688–9
- non-compliance 3664
- non-cooperation 1326, 2490
- Non-Cooperation movement 448
- Non-European Movement (NEM) 3084
- Non-European Unity Movement (NEUM) 171, 834, 3086
- non-governmental organizations (NGOs)
 Argentina 2346
 and ATTAC 300
 Cuba 936
 Eastern Europe 811–12
 Internationals 814, 1755–8
 Japan 1876–7
 Korea 1994
 Latin America 3599–600
- Make Poverty History 1312–13
 post-Fordism 1399–400
 Southern Africa 3114
 Thailand 3274–5
 Ukraine 814
 and WTO 3648
- non-interventionists 1219, 2488–90
- Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) 197
- Non-Resistance Society 78, 156
- Non-Sect Radicals 1881
- non-violence
 Chávez, César 663
 civil rights movement 17–18
 collective action 2492–4
 First Nations protest 785
 Food Not Bombs 1206
 Gandhi 1324, 2490
 La Boétie 2017
 Pashtuns 1965–70
 as protest 2757
 religion 2496
 strikes 2494
 USA 2498–500
see also non-violent movements; non-violent revolutions; Sharp, Gene
- non-violent movements 2490–7, 2497–505
- non-violent revolutions 2505–12 see also color revolutions
- Nonconformists 1406, 3501
- Nonviolent Action Group (NAG) 613
- Norbu, D. 3292–3
- Nordic countries
 conscription 2516
 Great Depression 2519
 peasant/landlord relations 2516 revolts and protests 2512–21 social welfare 2520
see also individual countries
- Nore mutiny 994, 3154–5
- Noriega, Manuel 2594
- Norindeth, Prince 576, 577
- Norodom, King 566, 567
- Norodom Naradipho 570
- Norodom Phanouvong 567
- Norris-LaGuardia Act 3411, 3412
- North, Lord 86, 508, 1223, 1786
- North, Oliver 2475
- North African Star (ENA) 43–4
- North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) 1053, 1210, 1386, 1396, 1642, 2212, 2293, 3655, 3715
- EZLN 1053, 1386, 3600
- North American Indian Brotherhood 584
- North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) British Labour Party 2040

- Czech Republic 1563
 Germany 1366
 Iceland protests 2520
 Kosovo 37–8, 1831, 2003
 missiles 1366
 nuclear weapons 197, 513
 Turkey 281–2
 weapons storage 227
North Briton 3530
 North Carolina 85, 869
 North Korean Workers' Party (NKWP) 3183
North Star 1021, 3006
 North Western Frontier Provinces (NWFP) 1680
 Northeastern Federation of Anarchist
 Communists (NEFAC) 160, 200
 Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation 2418
 Northern Farmers Network 3275
 Northern Ireland Civil Rights Association
 (NICRA) 1797, 1801
Northern Ireland peace movement 2521–2
 Northern Marianas, Commonwealth of 2304
 Northern Rhodesian Congress (NRC) 3698
 Northern Rhodesian Mineworkers' Union
 (NRMWU) 3696, 3700
Northern Star 656, 658, 1786, 2543, 2549, 2550, 3393
 Northern Territory Land Rights Act 310
 Northern Wisconsin Resource Group 2419
 Northumberland, Duke of 1094
 Northwest Frontier Province, Pakistan 1922, 1965
 Northwest Indian War 87
 Norton, M. B. 3614
Norway
 anarchism 2526
 Danish rule 2513
 German invasion 2495
 Ice Front 2525–6
 industrialization 2524
 protest and revolution 2522–6
 Reformation 2523
 strikes 2495, 2519
 women's suffrage 2524
 see also Nordic countries
 Norwegian Association for the Rights of Women
 2524
 Norwegian Syndicalist Federation 2526
 Norwegian Women's Public Health Association
 2524
 Noske, Gustav 1361, 1363
Nosotros 1188
 Notting Hill Carnival 2527
Notting Hill Riots 2526–7
 Nottingham Captain: see Brandreth, Jeremiah
 Nouméa Accord 2459
 Nouri, Said Abdullo 3245
 Nourry, J. B. Jacques 1298
Nouvel Observateur 3575
 Nouvelle Calédonie Pour Tous (NCPT) 2459
Nouvelles Calédoniennes 2458
Nouvelles féministes (Feminist News) 3575
 Nova Canço 632
 Nova Scotia 210
 Novaes, Henrique Tahan 1925, 2117–18, 2219–20
 Novalis 1143
Novaya-zhizn 2919
 Novgorodtseva-Sverdlova, K. T. 3606
 Novi Sad demonstration 3010
 Novomirskii, Daniil 142
 Novotny, Antonín 949, 1025, 3173
NOW: see National Organization for Women
 Nowa Huta steelworks 3076
 Noyes, John Humphrey 156, 2559
 n'Soumer, Fadhma 1927
Nu, U 302, 557, 2527–8, 3068, 3279
 Nuba people 3192–3
Ñucanchic Allpa 1056
 nuclear arms race 190, 2501
 Nuclear Claims Tribunal 199, 2303
 Nuclear Exit Law 1367 nuclear fallout 191, 820, 1461
Nuclear-Free New Zealand 2528–9
 Nuclear Freeze 198
 Nuclear Safety Commission 192
 Nuclear Test Ban Treaty 820 nuclear testing
 Alaska 1460
 French Polynesia 1272, 1273, 1460
Nuclei Armati Proletari (NAP) 2401–2
 nudist movement 107
 Nueva Australians: see New Australia movement
Nueva canción 637–41, 1911, 2376, 2751
 Nueva Trova Cubana 2853
Nujoma, Sam 2399, 2400, 2529–31, 3202, 3204–5
 Nunes, Rodrigo 1400
 Núñez, Carlos 2469
 Nuñez, Rafael 806
 Núñez, Serafin 562
 Nuñez de Balboa, Vasco 2592–3
 Nuova Sinistra Unità (New Left Unity) 2622
 Nuqrashi, Mahmud 1560
 Nūr al-Dīn Pasha 51, 3558
 Nuremberg Trials 889, 1594
 Nuremberg Party Rallies 1175
 Nuri-al-Said 1776, 1779
 Nuruddin, Yusuf 232–3, 531–2, 963–5, 1852–3
 Nussel, Jill M. 3594–6
 Nuu-chah-nulth First Nation 785
 Nwazurike, Ralph 2484

- Nyakasikana, Nehanda 3602
 Nyakauru, Shato 3730
 Nyandoro, George 2385
 Nyasaland
 cash-cropping 2174
 Chilembwe 694–6
 Christianity 2174
 labor conflict 2173–4
 Land Ordinance 2173
 nationalism 2174–5
 Native Associations 2173 plantation culture 2173 resistance, early 2174
 see also Malawi
 Nyasaland African Congress (NAC) 459, 2174
Nyasaland Times 695
 Nyatisime College 2961
 Nyeko, Balam 2109–13
Nyerere, Julius 2532–3
 Maji Maji revolt 3254
 and Manley 2197
 and Mondlane 2314
 nationalism 3545
 and Sobhuze II 3748
 TANU 3254–5
 terms of trade 1661
 Ujamaa socialism 2532–3, 3374–5
 and ZANU 3739
 and Zanzibar 3708
 and Zwane 3747
 Nyobe, Reuben um 1251, 1252
Nyoinin Geijutsu (Women's Arts) 133
 Nzinga M' Bandi, Queen 3602
- Ó Beacháin, Donnacha 810–18, 3328–33
 Ó Brádaigh, Ruairí 1802, 1803
 Oakboys 1807
 Oakes, Richard 39
 Oasis Forum 3705
 Oastler, Richard 657
 Oates, Titus 289
Oaxaca uprising 2162, 2286, 2290, 2295, 2535–8
 civil disobedience 2535
 COCEI 2287
 women's pots and pans march 2536
 Obando y Bravo, Miguel 2061, 2062, 2742
 Obata, Y. 1876
 obeah 2789
Obrador, Andrés Manuel López 2538–9
Obregón, Alvaro 619, 2539–42, 3431
 assassinated 903
 and Carranza 2539, 2540–1
 Casa del Obrero Mundial 2540
 Conventionists 2279
 Morones 2340
 revolutionary nationalism 2281 and Zapatista 3711
 Obregón, Manuel 641
Obrero, El 270
O'Brien, Bronterre 658, 2543, 3061
 O'Brien, Stephen 2038–9, 3738–40
 O'Brien, William 967
 O'Byrne, Feagh McHugh 1805
 Öcalan, Abdullah captured 3344
 handed over to Turkey 1450, 2010, 2011 withdrawing to Syria 1450, 2010–11
 OCAP Women of Etobicoke 2562
 Occhetto, Achille 2622
 Occupied Social Centers: see Centri Sociali
 Ochoa, Arnaldo 629, 924
 Ochoa, Digna 2289
 Ochoa Antich, Fernando 604
 O'Coigly, James 3391
 O'Connell, Dáithi 1803
O'Connell, Daniel 547, 633, 655, 1789,
 2543–5, 2549, 3680
O'Connor, Arthur 546, 1203, 1788, 1790–1, 2545–8
 exile to France 2547 imprisonment 2546–7 legacy of 2547–8, 2549
 and Sheridan 3024
 United Irishmen 2546, 3393
 O'Connor, E. 1026
O'Connor, Feargus 656, 657, 658–9, 2543,
 2545, 2548–52
 Chartism 2548–9, 2550–1
 Northern Star 2543, 2549, 2550
 and O'Connell 2549
 State of Ireland, The 2549
 Tolpuddle Martyrs 3301
 utopianism 2551
 O'Connor, J. Patrick 8
 O'Connor, James 2249
 O'Connor, Roger 2549
October (Eisenstein) 1081
 October 8 Revolutionary Movement (MR8) 384
 October War, Israel 1813
 Octobrist Party 2882, 2891, 2910, 2925–6
 Odi massacre 2485
 O'Doherty, Cahir 1806
 O'Donnell, Manus 1805
 O'Donnell, Rory 1806
 O'Donnell, Ruan 3490, 3491
 Odreman, Hernan Grüber 3449
 Odria, Manuel A. 1568, 2650
 Oduduwa 3676
 O'Dwyer, Michael 1325, 1701

- O'Farrell, Patrick 3490
 Offaly, Lord Thomas 1804–5
 Offen, Karen 1421–2
 Office of Strategic Services, USA 1598, 1715
 Official Secrets Act 1696
 Ogarev, Nikolai 1574
 Ogbar, J. 399
 Ogé, Vincent 1527, 2552–5
Ogé's Revolt 2552–5
 Oginga Odinga: see Jaramogi
 Oglala Sioux Civil Rights Organization 2415
 Ogoni people 1053, 2972, 2973 see also Movement for the Survival of the Ogoni People (MOSOP)
 O'Gorman, Richard 3680, 3681
 Oguda, Lawrence 2269
 Ogundipe-Leslie, Molara 3548
 O'Hara, Patsy 2967
O'Higgins, Bernardo Riquelme 2555–6
 O'Higgins, Kevin 1050
 Ohio Catholic Bishops 1170
 Ohnesorg, Benno 12, 1037, 1256, 1368, 3523
 Ohrwalder, Joseph 2164
 Ohta, Kaoru 1879
 Oikeutta Eläimille 118
 Oil Enforcement Agency 1482
 oil industry
 Cuba 626
 Ecuador 1064, 1065
 Iran 1763, 1769, 2343–4, 2505
 Iraq 1783
 Mexico 606
 Nigeria 2485
 Peru 2647
 prices 670
 Russia 3127
 Trinidadian workers 1866
 Venezuela 670, 942, 3436, 3438
 Ojeda, Alonso de 601
 Ojeda, Fabricio 3437, 3442
 Ojeda Ríos, Filiberto: see Ríos, Filiberto
 Ojibwe Indians 2414, 2419
 Ojoawo, Mofeyisra Oluwatoyin 2558–9, 3030–2
 Ojukwu, Odumegwu 24
 OK 98 812, 814, 815
Oka crisis 2556–8
Oke-Ogun Uprising 2558–9
 Okinawa anti-base protest 1886–7 pacifist resistance 1888–9
 US imperialism 1885–6
Oklahoma Greencorn Rebellion 1458–60
 Okullu, Henry 1951
 Okyar, Fethi 3361
 Olalia, Rolando 2684
 Olaya Herrera, Enrique 407, 1320
 Old Finns 1201
 Old Republic 466–7
 Olday, John 107
 Oldenbarnvelt, Johan van 1035
 O'Leary, John 1415
 Oliver, William 465
 Oliver the Spy 3281
 Olivera, Oscar 791
 Olivier, George Borg 2187
 Ollman, Bertell 2839
 Olorunkoya (Society Against Injustice) 24
 Olsen, Floyd 3413, 3414
 Olshausen, Theodor 2984
 Olson, Mancur 649, 652, 2758
 Olubadan of Ibadan 24
 Olumide, Olusanya 2487–8
 Olutayo, Seun Molatokubo 1381–3
 Olympic Games
 Beijing 720
 Mexico City 2262, 3296
 Montreal 2099
 Omagh bombing 1797, 1802
 Omaha race riots 2823–4
 O'Mahoney, John 1192
 O'Malley, Vincent 2205–9
 Omar, Mullah Muhammad 3246–7
 Omdurman, Battle of 2165
 Omido, Fred 1950
 Omobowale, Ayokunle Olumuyiwa 579–81,
 853–4, 854–6, 856–8, 1246–53, 2137–9,
 2482–4, 2532–3, 3253–5, 3374–5, 3707–9
 Omowali, Ashanti Alston 159
 Omsk Opposition 3030
 Omvedt, G. 1707
On-to-Ottawa Trek 588, 2562–4, 2831, 2832
 One Big Union
 Canada 588, 3535, 3536
 and IWW 1734, 1738
 Lawrence Mills 110, 149, 150, 154, 315, 502
 South Africa 3090, 3092
 syndicalism 1026
ONE Magazine 2107
 One Pack movement 1904
 One Tsubo movement 1907
 O'Neal, William 1551
Oneida Perfectionist Utopians 2559–60, 3417
Oneida Whig 3006
 O'Neill, Con 1805
 O'Neill, Eugene 1555, 2846
 O'Neill, Hugh 1805–6
 O'Neill, John 1192
 O'Neill, Phelim 1806
 O'Neill, Shane 1805
 O'Neill, Terence 2572

- O'Neill, Vincent Wilfrid 2784
 Oneko, Achieng' 2256
 Onfroi, Comte d' 2073
 Ongania, Juan Carlos 249, 863, 864, 865, 868
 Ongaro, Raimundo 868
 Onjo of Okeho 2558
Ontario Coalition Against Poverty (OCAP)
 2560–2
 Ontario Days of Action 2561
 Onus, Bill 307
 Oodua People's Congress (OPC) 2484
 Oorlam people 2390
 Oostindie, Gert J. 1030–3
 Opdyke, George 69
 OPEC: see Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries
 Open Door policy 1214
 Open Society Institute 815
 Opera Nazionale Balilla (ONB) 1177
 Opera Nazionale Dopolavoro (OND) 1177
Operai e capitale (Workers and Capital) 1842
Operai e stato (Workers and State) 1844
operaism/post-operaism
 Finland 119
 Italy 1006, 1841–5, 2426, 3170
 opium trade 1657–8
 Opium Wars 185, 715, 1214, 1658, 2145, 2994, 3230, 3232, 3475, 3671
 Opletal, Jan 2509
 Oposición Sindical Obrero (Workers' Union Opposition) 181
 Oppenheim, James 2032
 Oppenheimer, J. Robert 194–5
 Opportunists 1323
Opportunity 1554
 Opposition League, Japan 1902, 1907
 Opposition United Workers Party 609
Oprimido, El 111
 OPZZ (trade union federation) 2708–9
 Ora, Antonio 2673
 oral histories, indigenous peoples 3601
 Oral Intangible Patrimony of Humanity 1939
 Oram, Gerard 510–11
 Orange, House of 2445, 2591
 Orange Free State 153, 3603
 Afrikaners 2109
 Orange Order 1787
Orange Revolution, Ukraine 811–12, 814–15, 817, 2510, 3011, 3021, 3329, 3375–8
 Oranges, War of the 187
 ORDEN 2956, 2957
 Order of Perfectibilists 3146
Ordine Nuovo, L' 130, 385, 446, 1422, 3298
 O'Reilly, chieftain 1804
 Org 1379–80
 Organisation de l'armée secrète (OAS) 226
 Organisation Pensée Bataille (OPB) 122
 Organisation Révolutionnaire Anarchiste (ORA) 121
 Organisation Speciale 366
 Organización Comunista Poder Obrero (OCPO) 245
 Organización Feminista Revolucionaria 3611
 Organización Revolucionaria del Pueblo (ORP) 246
 Organización Revolucionaria de los Trabajadores (ORT) 1164
 Organización Sindical Estatal (OSE) 180
 Organizaciones Peronistas 864
 Organization of African Unity (OAU) 395, 459, 2359, 2530, 3736
 Organization of Afro-African Unity (OAAU) 395, 747 Organization for Afro-American Unity 395, 2181
 Organization of American States (OAS) 672, 1015, 1019, 1067, 1320, 2594, 2655
 Ministerial 592
 Organization of Angolan Women (OMA) 3605
 Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) 298, 2293
 Organization of Indigenous Nations and Peoples in Argentina (ONPIA) 259 Organization of Indigenous Peoples of Pastaza (OPIP) 1056, 1057, 1065
 Organization of Marxists-Leninists of Greece (OMLE-PPSP) 1447
 Organization for Marxist Unity 831
 Organization of Mozambican Women (OMM) 3547
 Organization of the Mozambican Workers (OTM) 2355
 Organization of People in Arms (ORPA) 1480, 1481
 Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) 667, 670, 1065, 1135, 1782
 Organization of Republican Workers (ORO) 2600
 Organization of Revolutionaries (OR) 3443
 Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) 2003, 3330 Organization of Women of Asian and African Descent (OWAAD) 3570
Organizer, The 3414
 Organs of People's Power (OPP) 922, 935, 940
 Orgreave Colliery 529–30, 3062
 Oribe, Manuel 1332
 Orlove, B. S. 1207
 Orly Airport bombing 284
 Ormond, Earl of 1804
 Oromo Liberation Front (OLF) 1134, 1138–9
 Oromo nationalism 1134, 1138–9

- Orozco, José Clemente 2375
 Orozco, Pascual 2277, 2539, 3431
 Orquesta Papaya 641
 Orr, Scott D. 339–43
 Ortega, Camilo 2564
 Ortega, Humberto 2467, 2470, 2564
 Ortega, Samuel 2296
Ortega, Daniel 448, 2468, 2469, 2470, 2474–5, 2476, 2564, 2964–5
 Orthodox Church of Cyprus 943
 Ortigoza, Napoleón 2597
Ortiz, Fernando 2565
 Ortiz, R. 3658
 Ortíz Contreras, Raúl 2209–10
 Ortiz Monasterio, Angel 621
 Ortiz Rubio, Pascual 2542
 Ortodoxo Party 623, 624, 926, 927
 Oruuano Independent Church 3603
 Orwell, George 107, 2128, 2738
 Oshawa Strike 589
 O'Shea, Kitty 967, 2617
 O'Shea, William 2617
 Ōshima Eizaburō 134
 Oslo Accords 239, 1758, 1759, 1815
 Osmani, M. A. G. 347
 Osmena, Sergio 1613
 Ospina Pérez, Mariano 408, 409, 1321
 Ostoyich, Kevin 1355–8
Ōsugi Sakae 136, 1848, 2565–6, 3595
 O'Sullivan, Michael E. 1337–46
 Osvobodilna Fronte (OF) 3052
 Oswald, John 3428
 Otálvaro H., Andrés 343–4, 806–7, 3388–9
 Otis, James 76
 Otpor movement 812, 814, 3011, 3377
Otra campaña, La, Zapatistas 1403, 3712, 3719
 Ottama, U 552, 2979
 Ottanelli, Fraser 839
 Ottawa Imperial Economic Conference 1684
 Otto, King of Greece 1451
 Otto, Louise 3579
 Otto I 2829
 Ottoman empire
 Armenia 285–6
 Bulgaria 538
 collapse of 337, 2862
 Greece 1451
 Hospitallers 2183
 Islam 1808
 Romania 2864–5
 trade 1657
 Turkey 3346–8
 Young Turks 3681–2
 Otunbaeva, Rosa 3331, 3333
 Ouattara, Alassane Dramane 881
 Ouelette, Jean 2556–7
 Oufkir, Mohammed 2337–8
 Ouko, Robert 1948, 1949, 1951
 Oulart, Battle of 1788
 Oum Mannorine 572
 Oumar Tall, El Hadj 2181
 Our World Is Not For Sale (OWINFS) 3645, 3652
 Outerelo, Manuel 277, 278
 Outram, James 1690
ouvriérisme 120
 Ovambo people 2395, 2529, 3202
 Ovamboland, as war zone 2398, 3204
 Ovamboland People's Congress (OPC) 3300
 Ovamboland People's Organization (OPO) 2530, 3202
 Ovando, Alfredo 417–18
 Ovando, Nicolás de 28, 601, 1116, 2079
 Overseas Reform Act 884
 Overton, Mary 1108
 Overton, Richard 1100, 1102, 1108, 2119
 Ovid 3428
 Oviedo, Fernández de 2593
 Oviedo, Lino 2602–3
Oway (Peacock's Call) 301
 Owen, Chandler 21, 22, 1554
Owen, Robert 655, 656, 2566–7
 Addams on 10
 al-Bustani on 234 collapse of communities 1222, 2461
 as example 1638
 New Harmony 156, 1186, 2460–1, 3417, 3617
 Report to the County of Lanark 2460 utopian socialism 678, 2231, 2460, 2551, 3061
 and Wright 2460–1
 Owen, Robert Dale 2024, 2461, 3666
 Owenite socialist movement 655, 2454
 Owens, Joe 1456
 Oxfam 1312
 Oxford Movement 2340
 Oyinlola, Olagunsoye 1641
 Oz Ve'Shalom (Valor and Peace) 1813
 Ózal, Turgut 2011–12, 3342–3

 Pabna uprising 372
 PAC: see Pan-Africanist Congress
 Pacey, Battle of 2665
 Pach Chhoeun 570, 575
 Pachakutik Indian Movement (MIP) 433, 1057, 1939
 Pacheco, María 844
 Pacheco Areco, Jorge 3409
 Pacific, War of 425–32, 433, 1890, 2647, 3035, 3594
 Pacific Rim countries 1663

- Pacification of Ghent 1035
 Pacification Pact, Mussolini 2383
 pacifism 225
 see also non-violent movements
 Pact of Brotherhood of Workers Societies 2267
 Pact of Punto Fijo 665, 3436, 3437
 Pact of the Caribbean 879
Pacte colonial 1525, 1527, 1540–1
 Pacto Social 249
 Paddy Lands Act 1494
 Padilla, Heberto 923
Padilla, Juan de 844, 2569
 Padlewski, Zygmunt 2704
 Padmore, George 395, 613, 1874–5, 1954, 2249
 Padri War 1719, 1721
 Páez, José Antonio 578, 3458, 3706
 Páez Monges, Manuel María 2598 paganism 2258
Pagolponthi Revolt 371–2
 Pahlevi, Mohammad Reza Shah 1256, 1762, 1763, 1765, 1768, 1769, 1811, 1962, 3523
 exiled 2505
 and Mossadegh 2342–3 see also Iranian Revolution
 Paikhas group 3368
Paine, Thomas 1116, 1409, 2569–71, 2754
 Age of Reason 2571
 Common Sense 80, 83, 2022, 2570
 Crisis papers 81, 2569, 2570 and Fitzgerald 1203
 Rights of Man, The 1284, 1607, 2126, 2570–1, 3150
 and Smith 3054
 and Thelwall 3280
 Pais, Frank 624, 916, 929, 930–1, 3573
 Pais, Sidonio 878
Paisley, Ian 1797, 1798, 2571–3
 Pajaros, Los 408, 1321
 Pak Mun Dam project 290, 3276
 Pak Yol 134
 Paktoonkhwa QIP 2584
 Pakhtun Zalemy 1970
Pakistan 1761, 2573–9, 2579–86
 Bengali nationalist struggles 344–8, 2573–9
 Cold War 2580
 creation of 344–5, 1810
 displaced communities 1711
 earthquake 3641
 Faiz 1160
 genocide 347
 Global Day of Action 1389
 Ibrahim 1637
 independence 1660, 2579–80
 Iqbal 1761
 and Kashmir 1931
 language movement 2577–8
 Northwest Frontier Province 1965 protest and rebellion 2579–86
 rape 1711
 student movement 3181 student uprisings 2262, 2577
 trade unions 2580
 World Social Forum 3641
 see also Jammu-Kashmir; Jinnah, Muhammad Ali; Pashtuns
 Pakistan Muslim League 2584
 Pakistan National Congress 2577
 Pakistan National Party (PNP) 2580–1
 Pakistan People's Party (PPP) 1637, 1857
 Pakistan Telecommunication Corporation Limited (PCTL) 2585
Pakistan Times 1160, 2581
 Pakistan Trade Union Federation (PTUF) 1637, 2585
 Pal, Bipin Chandra 1696, 2574
 Palabra Obrera (PO) 244
 Palach, Jan 951, 2744, 3174, 3176, 3433
 Palacio, Alfredo 253, 271, 870, 1059
 Palacios, Andy 640
 Palamas, Costis 3583
 Palau 2304
 Palau, Rosa 2597
 Palazzo Vidoni Pact 1822
 Palestine
 autonomy 360, 374
 Balfour Declaration 374
 Intifada 1399, 1547, 1549, 1777, 1780, 1814, 2502
 Jewish immigrants 3743
 League of Nations Mandate 237
 Occupied Territories 238, 239, 1758, 1760
 poverty 1550
 self-determination 2502
 water supplies 1817
 Zionists 373, 3743
 see also Black September; Intifada I and II Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) 237–40
 creation of 238, 399
 Hamas 1549
 Lebanon 360, 2070
 post-Fordism 1399
 renouncing violence 2502
 see also Black September
 Palestine National Authority 239, 1548–9, 1550, 1759
 Palestine National Council (PNC) 1758
 Palit, C. 1712
 Palit, Tarak Nath 1698
 Palladino, Carmelo 1161

- Pallares, Amalia 1064–5
 Palloy, Pierre François 354
 Palm d'Aelders, Etta 1294
 Palma, Arturo Alessandri 693, 1468
Palmares slave revolts 2586–9, 3745
 Palme, Olaf 223
 and Manley 2197
 Palme-Dutt, R. 450
 Palmer, A. Mitchell 595, 836, 1321, 2589, 2947
 Palmer, Bryan D. 591–2, 595–7, 2783–8, 3281–4
 Palmer, S. 501
 Palmer, Thomas Fyshe 2366
Palmer raids 158, 836, 1412, 2253, 2589
 Palmerston, Lord 2827
 Palo de Mayo 638
 Palonegro, Battle of 807
pamphleteering and political protest, Dutch Republic 1096, 1106, 1413, 2589–92
 Pampillon, Santiago 865, 868
 Pan-African Amicalist Movement 853
 Pan African Conference (1945) 1954
 Pan-Africanism 392, 395, 3578, 3729, 3747
 Pan-Africanist Congress (PAC)
 African nationalism 3084, 3086
 and ANC 171, 2192, 2358, 3104
 banned 172
 and BCP 2111
 Du Bois 395
 Pogo 3087–8 support from China 173
 unbanned 175, 3107
 pan-Arabism 399, 1776, 2068
 pan-Caribbeanism 3532
 Pan-Pacific Trade Union 830 pan-Slavic liberation 334
 Pan-Slavism 1619
 Panagoulis, Alexandros 1433, 1448
Panama 2592–5, 3304–5
 Agrarian Councils 3304
 Cemaco's anti-colonial resistance 2592–3
 imperialism 1664
 independence 2593
 leftist groups 3304
 music 640
 National Guard 3304 nationalism and popular mobilization 2593–5
 Torrijos 3304–5
 US intervention 2593
 US invasion 2594
 Panama Canal Zone 48, 416, 1754
 Panama Students' Federation (FEP) 2593
 Panamerican Conference 412
 Panamerican Federation of Labor (PFL) 2340
 Panamian National Assembly 2593
 Panarchy 107
Panathenaea 3583
 Pancasán 638
Panchayat (local self-government) 1688, 2437, 2442, 2443
 Pandey, Gyanendra 1327
 Pandey, Mangal 1686
 Pando, José Manuel 425
 Pangalos dictatorship 1442
 Panhellenic Liberation Movement (PAK) 1433, 1446, 1448
 Panhellenic Socialist Movement (PASOK) 1446, 1447, 1448–9, 3220
 Panitchpakdi, Supachai 3647, 3651
 Panizzari, Giorgio 2402
 Pankhurst, Adela 2595, 2596
Pankhurst, Christabel 527, 2595–6
Pankhurst, Emmeline 527, 2595–6
Pankhurst, Sylvia 511, 527, 2595–6
 Pannekoek, Anton 414, 973, 2446
 Pant, Govind Ballabh 450, 1329, 2795, 2876
 Pantev, Atanas 543
 Panthay Rebellion 716
 Pantsov, Alexander V. 674–6, 2113–14, 2123–5, 2780, 2781–2, 3505–6, 3722–4, 3724–5, 3725–6, 3726–7
 Panzieri, Raniero 1836
 Paoli, Giacinto 872
 Paoli, Pasquale 441, 545, 872
 Paoli Massacre 85
 Papa Doc: see Duvalier, François
 Papadopoulos, George 1433, 1435
 Papanastassiou, Alexandros 1441, 1443
 Papandreou, Andreas 1448, 1449
 Papandreou, Georgios 1434, 1437, 1446
 Papeete uprisings 1273
 Papen, Franz von 1590, 2833
 Papineau, Louis-Joseph 593
 Papon, Maurice 1644
 Papua New Guinea 3080, 3426
 Paracelsianism 2987–8
Paraguay 2599–610
 Amnesty International 2603
 Archive of Terror 2596–8
 Australian radical migrants 313, 2449–56
 Carter 2606
 Catholic Church 2060
 Chaco War 2599
 CIA 2597–8, 2606
 citizen protest 2603
 Civil War 2609
 Colorado Party 2604
 cotton 2607
 exports 2609
 Guaraní 3009
 human rights 2597–8, 2606

- Paraguay (cont'd)
 IMF 2604
 independence 2608
 indigenous population 2601
 landless peasantry 2601
 liberation theology 2135 protest in post-Stroessner era 2601–3
 protest and revolt 2603–8
 protests in liberal era 2608–10 resistance to rise of the military 2599–601
 students 2601
 Triple Alliance 2608–10
see also Aracaré; New Australia movement
- Paraguayan Peasant Movement (MCP) 2602, 2607
- Paraskevov, Vasil 536–8, 539–40, 540–2, 542–5, 3068–9
- Pardo Bazán, Emilia 3610
- Pardo Leal, Jaime 802, 808, 1168, 3389
- Parents Against Silence 1814
- Pareto, Vilfredo 2244
- Paria, La* 1597
- Paris
 besieged by Prussians 898, 2610
 general strike 1241–2
 May 1968 demonstrations 3178
 subway bombing 1646
see also Hôtel de Ville, Paris
- Paris, Conference of 3484
- Paris, Treaties of 189, 920, 2752, 2767
- Paris Commune 123, 2610–13
 Bloody Week 1323, 2410, 2611
 casualties 2611
 council communism 3637
 Courbet 898 equal pay 2612
 ideology 2611–12, 2903
 Lenin 2613
 Marat 2211
 Marianne 2216
 Marx and Engels on 2612–13, 3057
 Michel 2299–300
 as model 935, 1744
 and Proudhon 120
 Raspail 2805
 Reclus 2811
 Robespierre 2850
 Trotsky 2613
 women's participation 123, 2612
- Paris Congress 1756
- Paris Peace Accord 223, 1960–1, 3036, 3485
- Paris Peace Conference 31, 944, 1453, 1816, 2396, 3036, 3508
- Paris Peace Treaty for Vietnam 1959, 3488
- Paris Treaty 76, 2669
- Park, Sabina 1871
- Park Chung-hee 1982, 1999, 2000, 2014, 3182
- Park Jong-chul 3183
- Park Yeol 136
- Parker, John 3047
- Parker, Richard 3154
- Parker, Thomas 3612
- Parke, Bessie Raynor 3566
- Parkes, Henry 105
- Parks, Rosa 72–3, 761, 2492, 2498
 Montgomery Bus Boycott 1971, 2613–16
 voting rights march 2615
- Parlato, Valentino 2196
- Parliamentary Reform Bill 547
- Parma, Duke of 1035
- Parnell, Charles Stewart 967, 1799, 2616–18
- Parnell, Samuel 830
- Parnell, William 2616
- Parpart, J. L. 3696
- Parr, Catherine 516
- Parra, Violeta 1911, 2378, 2379
- Parrales, Edgar 2061
- Parren, Callirrhoe 3581–3
- Parren, Jean 3582
- Parri, Ferruccio 1384
- Parrot, Jean-Claude 2618–19
- Parsley Massacre 1013
- Parsons, Albert 1569, 1570, 2026, 2027, 2029
- Parsons, Lucy 123, 157, 2029
- Parsons, N. 1956
- parthenogenesis 3629
- Parti Communiste Français: see Communist Party of France (PCF)
- Parti Communiste Internationaliste (PCI) 621
- Parti Démocratique Sénégalais (PDS) 3006
- Parti pour l'Entente Nationale (PEP) 1519
- Parti de Libération Kanak (PALIKA) 2458
- Parti Ouvrier 2628
- Parti Pris* 2784
- Parti Québécois: see Quebec, nationalism
- Parti Rouge 2841
- Parti Socialiste 825, 3006
- Parti Socialiste Populaire (PSP) 1517
- participatory budgeting 2621
- participatory democracy 2619–21
 types of 2620–1
- Partido Africano da Independencia do Guine e Cabo Verde (PAIGC/PAICV) 165, 563, 564, 602, 603, 1492
- Partido Aprista Peruano 48, 1567
- Partido Azul (Blue Party) 1016
- Partido Comunista Marxista Leninista Argentino (PCMLA) 245
- Partido Comunista del Perú-Sendero Luminoso (PCP-SL): see Sendero Luminoso (Shining Path)

- Partido Democrata (PD) 1167
 Partido Democratico, Portugal 877
 Partido Feminista 3611
Partido Independiente de Color 911–14, 2150
 Partido Justicialista 243
 Partido de Liberacion Nacional (PLN), Costa Rica 878
 Partido Liberal de México (PLM) 137, 998, 2161, 2276
 Partido Nacional Revolucionario 2281
 Partido Nacionalista Vasco (PNV) 1128, 1130–1
 Partido ng Bayan 2684
 Partido Obrero 270
Partido Obrero de Unificación Marxista (POUM) 2737–40
 anarchosyndicalism 2486
 and CNT 849 and CNT-FAI 1188 and CPE 3141
 German volunteers 1379
 made illegal 3142–3
 Maurin 2258
 Nin as leader 2486–7
 People's Army 3137–8
 Popular Front 146, 2486
 and PSUC 3131
 Partido Republicano Nacional (PRN) 879
 Partido Republicano Paulista 494
 Partido de la Revolución Mexicana (PRM) 2281
Partido Revolucionario Cubano (PRC) 2226–7
 Partido Revolucionario de los Trabajadores El Combatiente 245
 Partido Revolucionario de los Trabajadores (PRT) 272, 802, 1082, 2291
 Partido Revolucionario Institucional (PRI) 2157, 2281, 2282, 2287, 2290, 2296, 2297, 2535, 2538, 3713
 corporatism 2542
 and Mexican student movement 3296
 Partido Rojo (Red Party) 1016
 Partido Socialismo e Liberdade 500
 Partido Socialista Obrero Español (PSOE) 145, 291, 1131
 Partido Socialista de los Trabajadores 272
 Partido Socialista de Vanguardia (PSAV) 244
Partido dos Trabalhadores (PT) 494–500
 creation of 477, 494, 495 electoral victories 499
 Guattari on 982
 Lula 499–500, 2352
 presidential campaign 499–500
 Partido Trabalhista Brasileiro (PTB) 476, 495, 496 partisan liberation movements 338–9
 Partit Socialista Unificat de Catalunya (PSUC) 630, 2739, 3131
Partito d'Azione 2835
 Giustizia e Libertà 131, 1383–4
 Partito Comunista Internazionalista 447
 Partito Democratico della Sinistra (Democratic Party of the Left) 2622
 Partito Popolare (Popular Party) 2835
 Partito della Rifondazione Comunista (PRC) 2165, 2622
 Partito Socialista Italiano 2169
 Partito Socialista Italiano di Unità Proletaria (PSIUP) 2622, 2835
Partito di Unità Proletaria (PdUP) 2196, 2621–3
 Partiya Jiyana Azad a Kurdistanê (PJAK) 2012
 Partiya Welatparêzên Demokrat ên Kurdistanê (PWD) 2012
 Party of Democratic Convergence-Reflection Group (PCD) 2972
 Party of Democratic Kampuchea 1960
Party of the Democratic Revolution (PRD) 2287, 2292, 2538–9
 Party of Labor of Albania (PPSh) 30
 Party of National Conciliation (PCN) 1163
 Party of Policy Members for Indigenous Fijians (SVT) 1198
 Party of the Poor (PDLP) 1122, 2283, 3428
 Party of Socialist Revolutionaries (PSR) 975, 979
 Party of the United Struggle for Africans in Angola (PLUA) 164, 2449
 Party of the Working People of Ethiopia (COPWE) 1137
 Partzsch, Lena 3099–103
 Parvus, A. 2888
 Pascal-Trouillot, Eartha 1506
 Pascucci, Silvina 263–5
 Pasdaran Revolutionary Guards 1964
 Pasha, Raouf 2163
 Pashtuns 2494, 3246
 Afghanistan 15, 330
 Durrani 1029
 identity 1968, 1969
 Khuda-i Khidmatgar 1965–70
 Nadir Khan 330
 Pasipamire 699
 Pass Laws, South Africa 172, 3087, 3603
 Passalidis, Yannis 1445
 Passive Resistance Campaign 3603
 Pastora, Edén 2469
 Pastoral Indígena 1477
 Pastoral Land Commission (CPT), Brazil 481–2, 2351
 Pastrana Borrero, Misael 800, 801
 Pat, Jacinto 621

- Patagonia 258, 276–8, 2451
Patani Malay nationalism 3265–71
 Patani United Liberation Organization (PULO)
 3270, 3277
 Pataud, Emile 851
 Patel, A. D. 1197
 Patel, Raj 1207–10
 Patel, Sardar 1331, 1705, 1706, 1930, 2795
 Patel, Vallabhbhai 2431, 2433, 3586
 Patel, Zarina 3042–3
 Pateman, Carole 2620
 Patent of Toleration 1918 patents 2991
 paternalism 1897
Paterson Silk Strike 116, 157–8, 1204, 2623–4
 Pathet Lao 1599, 2055, 3083, 3472, 3482, 3485
 Patiño, Pedro 183
 Patniak, Prabhat 1670
 Patocka, Jan 654
Patria Libre 2226
 Patria para Todos (PPT) 668, 3447
 Patria y Libertad (Fatherland and Freedom) 689
 patriarchy
 Africa 3547, 3549
 anarchism 124
 Beauvoir on 356
 Britain 3564–6
 Chartism 658
 gender roles 3564–6
 India 3589
 Japan 3596
 Proudhon 97
 Steinem on 3165
 Patriot movement (Parti Patriote) 593, 2784
 Patriot Party, Ireland 1807
Patriote français 505–6
 Patriotic Anti-Dictatorship Front (PAM) 1432, 1433
 Patriotic Coalition for Democracy (PCD) 1856
 Patriotic Front (PF), Zimbabwe 3736
 Patriotic Front Manuel Rodriguez: see Frente
 Patrioco Manuel Rodriguez (FPMR)
 Patriotic Industrial Association (Sampo) 1898
 Patriotic Junta, Venezuela 3436
 Patriotic Ladies' Committee 1013
 Patriotic Military Service 2475
 Patriotic Society Party (PSP), Ecuador 1067
 Patriotic Union (UP) 798, 801, 1168
 Patriotic Union of Belgian Women 2722
 Patriotic Union Society, Manchester 2661
 Patriots, Haiti 1526, 1527, 1528, 1529, 1530, 1532 patron–client relations, Indonesia 1730
 Patten, George 307
 Patten, Jack 307
 Patzi, Felix 1939
 Pauer, J. 2746
Paul, Alice 2624–5, 3626, 3628
 Paul, Gangacharan 372
 Paul, Saint 3612
 Pauli, Benjamin J. 49, 634–5, 885, 968–9, 2005–9, 2811–14
 Pauling, Linus 195, 196, 652
 Paull, Andy 584
 Paulsen, Christian 989, 2984
Paulus, Petrus Jacobus “Arrie” 2625–6
 Pavelić, Ante 3683
Pavletich case 592
 Pavlovich, Konstantin 2716
 Pavone, Claudio 2834–6
 Pawlicka, Malgorzata 3556
 Paxton, Tom 221
 Paz, Néstor 2061, 3303
 Paz, Octavio 2375
 Paz Barahona, Miguel 2019
 Paz García, Policarpo 614
 Paz y Justicia 3717
 Pažout, Jaroslav 3172–5
PCI: see Communist Party of Italy (PCI)
PdUP: see Partito di Unità Proletaria
 Peace and Friendship Treaty (India–Nepal)
 2438, 2441
 Peace Bloc 1816
 peace camps 2501
 Peace Constitution 1885
 Peace Movement New Zealand 2528
 Peace Operation 360
 Peace Preservation Law, Japan 1897
 Peace Squadron 2528
 Peace Treaty to End the Yoruba Wars 1641
 Peaceful National Strike, Spain 182
 Peacock, John 3676
 Pearl Harbor 727, 757, 2489
Pearse, Patrick (Pádraig) 620, 793, 794, 860, 2626–8
 Easter Rising 1045, 1047, 1800
 Irishness concept 1048
 Pearse, Willie 1047, 2627
 Peasant Congress 2909, 2929–30
 Peasant League of Dumont 2319
 Peasant League of Galiléia 2118
 Peasant League of Ipatinga 2351
 Peasant Leagues, Brazil: see Ligas Camponesas
 Peasant Movement of Philippines (KMP) 2681
 Peasant Organization of the Southern Sierra 563
 Peasant Rebellion 93, 1357
 Peasant Union 3551
 Peasant War 1352, 1353, 1354, 2141, 2374, 2830
 peasants
 landowning 1279–80, 1353
 Marxist view 784–5

- militias 2600
 rights 1352–3, 1354, 2806
 taxation 1352–3
 Trotsky 784–5, 1667–8
Ujamaa socialism 2532–3, 3374–5
- Peasants and Indigenous Rights Defense
 Organization (OPPDIC) 3717, 3719
- Peasants' International 997
 Peasants' Revolution 2139
 Pease, Elizabeth 205
 Peatling, G. K. 3305–6
 Peçanha, Nilo 468
 Peci, Patrizio 2816
 Peci, Roberto 2817
 Pedro I, Dom 487–9, 561
 Pedro II, Dom 490, 493, 561
 Pedro León Arboleda Movement 1120
 Peel, Robert 633, 3211
 Peffer, William 899
 Pegenaut, Lidia 255
 Peguero, Martín 1013
 Peiró, Joan 145, 848, 1188
 Pélage, Magloire 1266
 Pelligrini, Carlos 2452
- Pelloutier, Fernand 120, 850, 2170, 2628, 3216
 Bourses du Travail 463–4, 850, 3216
 La Vie ouvrière en France 2628
- Peltier, Leonard 2628–9
- Pemex bombings 1121, 1122, 2286
 Peña Chepe, Alfonso 804, 2791
 Peña Taveras, Mario 1018
 Penal Laws 633, 1405
 Peñaranda, Enrique 429
 Penderyn, Dic 3499
- Peng Dehuai 709, 711, 2120, 2629–31
 as counterrevolutionary 2631
 influences on 2630
 and Lin Bao 2631
 and Mao 705, 2121, 2629, 2630
 and Zhang 3725
- Peng Pai 724
 Peng Zhen 710, 3285
- Peninsula Campaigns 189
- Penn, William 212, 1225
- Pennsylvania 80, 83, 155–6, 202, 212
 Pennsylvania Abolition Society 213
 Penny Post 177
Pensiero, Il 1419
Pensiero e Volontà 2170
 Pentagon Papers 222
- Pentland, Gordon N. 1223–4, 1384–5, 2825–7
- Pentrich Rising 465–6
- People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals 1055
- people of color demographic statistics 774
- People's Action Committee (PAC) 1481, 1634
 People's Armed Struggle (ELA) 1448
 People's Army of Vietnam (PAV) 3485, 3487, 3493
 People's Charter 656, 657, 658, 2549, 2693
 People's Commission 1202
 People's Convention Party (PCP) 2269
People's Daily 709, 2203, 2422, 3287
 People's Democracy (PD), Korea 3183
 People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan
 (PDPA) 13
 People's Democratic Party (PRD), Indonesia
 1723, 1725
 People's Democratic Republic of Ethiopia
 (PDRE) 1137
 People's Democratic Republic of Yemen (PDRY)
 3671
 People's Democratic Union (UDP) 421–2, 1937
 People's Fedayeen 1769
 People's Forces for the Liberation of Mozambique (FPLM) 2153
 People's Front 1003
 People's Liberation Army (PLA) of China 2204,
 2996, 3288, 3290, 3726
 People's Liberation Army of the Cordillera
 (CPLA) 2686
 People's Liberation Army of Namibia (PLAN)
 2399, 3203, 3204
 People's Liberation Army of Thailand (PLAT)
 2747, 3262, 3263
 People's Liberation Army of Vietnam 3471, 3481
 People's Liberation Committees 3684
People's Liberation Front of Sri Lanka (JVP)
 2631–4
 People's Liberation Organization of Tamil Eelam
 (PLOTE) 3251
 People's Liberation War 3296, 3682
 People's Militia 2743, 3434
 People's Mojahedin 1769
 People's National Congress (PNC) 1497,
 1501–2, 3559
 People's National Movement (PNM), Trinidad
 3317, 3319, 3320, 3532
 People's Nationalist Party (PNP) 1861, 1864,
 1867, 2198
 People's Organizations 290
 People's Party, Thailand 3257
 People's Party, Turkey 3350
 People's Party, US 2722, 2727, 3636
 People's Progressive Party 1856, 3559
 People's Progressive Party (PPP), Guyana 2852
 People's Property Area 2471
 People's Republic of Kampuchea (PRK) 575, 1960
 People's Revolutionary Army (ERP) 1083

- People's Revolutionary Army (PRA), Grenada 1462
 People's Revolutionary Government (PRG), Grenada 1462
 People's Revolutionary Party (PRP) 556, 2527
 People's Socialist Party, Kashmir 1933
 People's Summit 3655, 3656, 3658
 People's Summit of the Americas 3654, 3656–7
 People's United Democratic Movement (PUDEMO) 3207
 People's Unity Party (PUP) 364, 365–6, 1634, 3559
 People's Victory 21 1991
People's Voice 985
 People's Volunteer Organization (PVO) 557
People's War 2794
 People's Week of Action, Hong Kong 3652
 People's Will Party 976, 977, 2081, 2693
Peoples' Global Action Network (PGA) 2635–8
 Belgrade 3687
 Geneva WTO 3655
 Inter-Continental Caravan 1389, 2637, 3661
 J18 2809
 Manifiesto 2636–7
 Organizational Principles 2636
 Reclaim the Streets 2809
 Support Group 2637–8
 World Social Forum 1313, 1386, 1396
 Peoples of the Isthmus Regional Assembly 2537
 Peoples Publishing House 2404
 Pepper, John 596
 Péralte, Charlemagne 1516, 1522–3
 Perdicaris, Ion 2335
 Pereira, Aristide Maria 602
 Perera, N. M. 969, 2051, 2052
 Perera, Selina 2051 perestroika (economic restructuring) 628, 1395, 1417, 3119–24, 3127, 3245, 3421
 Pérez, J. 845
 Pérez, Manuel 1082, 1083
 Pérez de Cuéllar, Javier 1166, 3205
 Pérez Esquivel, Adolfo 255, 2159
 Pérez Jiménez, Marcos 3436, 3441, 3448, 3450, 3631
 Pérez Rios, Francisco 2299
 Pérez Rivera, J. Encarnación 2298
Perfect Diurnall, A 1106 performance artists 1191–2, 1237
 Pèrier, Casimir 1232
 Perkins, Charles 308
 Perkins, Frances 3411
 Perlman, Fredy 99, 159, 1052
 Permanent Agrarian Congress, Mexico (CAP) 2294
 Permanent Assembly for Human Rights 254
 Permanent Revolution Group 831
 Permanent Settlement Act 1695, 2574, 2575, 2970
 Pernambucana 487
 Pernambuco 2117–18, 2351, 2586–8 see also Palmares slave revolts
 Perón, Eva 2638
 Perón, Isabel Martínez 249, 254
 Perón, Juan Domingo 104, 427, 2638 coup attempts 2638
 and Lanusse 1155
 overthrown 243, 275, 276
 Partido Justicialista 243 return to government 251
 Triple A 1580
 Peronism 271, 863
Peronist resistance 2638–43
 Peroomian, Rubina 285–7
 Pérouse, Comte de la 2456
 Perovskaya, Sophia 157, 3550
 Perrone, Sean T. 2569
 Perrot, John 1105
 Perry, Luke 1416–18
 Perryville, Battle of 61
 Pershing, John J. 3490
 Persian Gulf War 1369 personal is political slogan 3593, 3628 personalism 634, 2465
Peru
 agrarian reforms 2655, 3430
 anarchism 2648, 2649
 armed insurgency 2643–6 coca 2653
 cotton 2647
 counterinsurgency 2656–61
 currency devaluation 2651
 debt peonage 2647
 Dirty War 2643–6, 2657
 and Ecuador 2655 educational reforms 3430–1
 gold mining 237
 IMF 2651
 indigenistas 2648–9
 indigenous population 1923–4, 2647 labor and peasant mobilizations 2647–50
 Mariátegui 2217–18
 MRTA 2362–3, 2645 mutual aid societies 2647–8
 neoliberalism 2650–6
 oil fields 2647
 “people's war” 2656–61
 poverty 2653
 punk movement 2063
 rondas campesinas 2362, 2644

- rubber plantations 2647
 Shining Path 2644–5, 2656–7
 social mobilization 2650–6 state violence 2657, 2658–9
 strikes 2651, 2654
 students 2218
 Truth and Reconciliation Commission 2363, 2646, 2657
 Velasco Alvarado 3430–1
 women's rights 2655, 3598
see also Andean communities; Sendero
 Luminoso (Shining Path)
- Peru, Upper: see Bolivia
 Peru's Peasant Confederation (CCP) 2654
 Peruvian Socialist Party 2218
 Pestaña, Ángel 145, 848 pesticides
 protests 2499
 soy cultivation 616–17, 1053, 1170, 2603
 Pétain, Philippe 179, 225, 405, 1239, 1713, 2336
 Peter I, the Great 536, 2927, 3420
 Peter II Karadjordjevic 3684
 Peter III, of Russia 2775
 Peter IV, of Portugal 187–8
Peterloo Massacre 507, 547, 1632, 2661–2, 3281, 3676
 Peteroa, Battle of 2064
 Petersburg 66, 67
 Petersburg Committee of the Bolsheviks 2898
 Petersen, Nicolaj 990
 Peterson, David 2560–1
 Peterson, Hector 3089
 Peterson, Nora M. 2139–41
 Pethick-Lawrence, Emmeline 3569
 Pétion, Alexandre 1511, 1534, 1538, 1545, 1546, 3457
 Pétion, Jérôme 1288
 Petit Martinique 1462
 Petition of Fifty, Indonesia 1723
 Petition of Rights 1108
petits blancs 1526, 1527, 1541, 1543, 1544
 Petkoff, Teodoro 3440, 3443, 3445
 Petkov, Nikola 537, 544
 Petőfi, Sándor 1620, 1625, 1626, 1920
 Petone Marxian Club 830
 Petra Kelly Foundation 1946
 Petrangol 165
 Petras, James 1066
 Petrazhitsky, Professor 3551
 Petri, Olaus 1496
 Petrofina 165
 Petrograd
 Bolsheviks 2934
 Cheka 2938
 food shortages 2891
 lockouts 2901
 soldiers/workers 2897
 soviets 2899, 2908
 strikes 2891
 Wilson's visit 2895
 see also St. Petersburg
 Petrograd Conference of Factory Committees
 2906, 2935
 Petrograd Metalworkers' Union 2913, 3029
 Petrograd Society of Factory Owners 2900, 2901
 Petrograd Soviet of Workers' Deputies 3029
 Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. (PdVSA) 667, 671
 Petroleum Workers' Federation of Curaçao
 942
 Petroleum Workers' Union (STPRM) 2293
Pétroleuses, Les 3575
Petropavlovsk 2004, 2005
 Petrovic, Gajo 2839, 3689
 Pettibone, George 1571
 Pettigrew, Richard Franklin 1566 petty bourgeoisie 1667–8
 Peyret, Alejo 259
 Peza, Muslim 30
 Pezzino, Paolo 2160–1
 Pfemfert, Franz 1609
PGA: see Peoples' Global Action Network
 Phadnavis, Nana 1708
 Phalangist Party 2070
 Phalanstries 2763
Phalanx Utopians 1222–3
Pham Van Dong 1599, 1600, 1714, 2662–3, 3480
 Phamotse, Simon 2110
Phan Boi Chau 1597, 2663–4, 3465, 3467
 Phan Chu Trinh 3465, 3467, 3492
 Phan Dinh Phung 3477
 Phan Khoi 3479
 Phan Thanh Gian 3476 pharmaceutical industry anti-retroviral drugs 3113
 HIV/AIDS 10
 multinational corporations 2998, 3113, 3312–13
 Serbia 3686–7
 Phelps, Mark Anthony 1125–7
 Phetsarath, Prince 2054
 Phibun: see Plaek Phibun Songkram
 Philadelphia
 Quakers 213, 367
 race riots 3399
 Philadelphia Female Anti-Slavery Society 3005
Philadelphia Tribune 3399
 Philadelphia Vigilance Committee 3047
 Philiki Etairia 1451
 Philip I, of Netherlands 1034

- Philip II, of Spain
 Djerba 3334
 Latin America 2056
 and Mary I 516
 Netherlands 1035, 2950
 O'Neill 1805
 ruling Portugal 187, 2333
- Philip of Hesse 1356
- Philippe, Guy 1508
- Philippe, Jean-Baptiste 3315
- Philippine Revolution 445, 2506–7
- Philippines 2664–88
 agrarian structure 1613–14, 2681 agricultural products 2326–7 anti-nuclear protests 2501–2
 armed resistance 2327–8
 Bonifacio 444–5, 2668
 Chinese workers 2665–6
 Christianity 2324, 2326, 2665–6, 2667, 2671
 civil war 2684
 CLO 1613
 colonial protests 2664–70
 colonialism 2324–5, 2664
 counterinsurgency 1615–16
 creoles 2667
 Death March 2674
 death squads 2688
 Democratic Alliance 1613
 dispossession 2325–6
 exports 2670
 fascists 2671
 February Revolution 2683–4 feminist networks 2686–7 global justice movement 2687
 IMF 1400
 independence 2328–31
 indigenous peoples 2686
 Islam 2324–5, 2326, 2328, 2664–5
 Japanese occupation 1612, 2674
 labor unions 2672–3, 2681
 land redistribution 1613, 2325–6
 languages 2666, 2671
 left-wing organizations 2685–8 marginalization 2326–7
 martial law 2678–9
 militant organizations 2677
 Moro national liberation 2324–32
 mutual aid 2672
 nationalism 2677
 natural resources 2670
 People Power 2506–7 pluralism 2687–8
 protests 2676–8, 2678–88
 Reaffirmists/Rejectionists 2686
 Rizal Day 2845
 sharecropping 2672
 social stratification 2665–6
 Spanish-era protests 2664–70
 Tenant Congress 2672
 torture 2684–5
 US marines 2669
 US military bases 2675, 2688
 US-era protests 2670–6
 Yan'an 2680–1
see also Huk Rebellion; Rizal, José
- Philips, Ulrich B. 233
- Phillips, James 764
- Phillips, Utah 1737
- Phillips, Wendell 217
- philosophes* 1109, 1110, 1409
- Philp, Robert Kemp 657
- Phimister, I. 3728
- Phnom Penh capture of 3493
 demonstration 571, 3035
 evictions to countryside 574 manifestation of parasols 568, 1713, 1958
- Phoenix Park murders 967, 2617
- Phoui Sananikone 2055
- Phouk Chhay 574
- Phoumi Nosavan 3482
- Phraya Phahon Phonphayuhasena 3257
- Phu Nu Tan Van* (Women's News) 3467
- Phuc Quoc 1713, 1714
- Phule, Jyotirao Govindrao 955
- Phulmoni case 1696
- physiocrats 1112
- Pi y Margall, Francisco 97, 144–5
- Piaf, Edith 2382
- Piar, Manuel 3457, 3458
- Piazza Fontana bombing 1820
- Piazza Statuto uprising 1843
- Pibul Songgram 659
- Picado, Teodoro 878, 879
- Piccinini, Alberto 251
- Pichincha, Battle of 1061
- Pickering, Paul A. 176–8, 2129–30, 2543, 3300–1
- Pico, F. 2767, 2774
- Picquart, Georges 1022
- Picton, Thomas 3315
- Pidjot, Roch 2458
- Pieck, Wilhelm 1338
- pieds noirs* 226, 1644
- Pielgrzym* (Pilgrim) 3544
- Pieper, Christopher 2490–7, 2497–505
- Pierce, Franklin 1011
- Pierwiosnek* 3544
- Pietism 52, 1185
- Piggott, Richard 2617
- Pig's Meat* periodical 3151, 3280

- Pijiguaiti Massacre 1492
 Pilar, Marcelo H. del 2668
 Pilbeam, Pamela 2842–3
 Pilgrimage of Grace 509
 Pillai, Anthony 1706
 Pillnitz declaration 892
 Pilsbury, Parker 3164
Pilsudski, Józef 2688–90, 2717, 2719
 Pimentel, Antonio 1016
 Pimentel, Eleonora Fonseca 3591
 Pinatubo volcano 2688
 Pinchot, Gifford 1119
 Pinckney Treaty 3525
 Pincus, Steven 1404–8
 Pine Ridge Indian Reservation 2415
 Pinelli, Giuseppe 131, 1205, 1837
 Pinheiro, Diogo L. 466–73, 483–94, 494–500, 2376–80, 2748–9
 Pinheiro, Wilson 2273
 Pink and Silver Bloc 1308, 1393
 Pino del Agua ambush 931
 Pinochet, Augusto and Allende 686, 2507
 and Bolivia 417 church opposition 2060
 coming to power 2436
 Jara 1911
 military rule 683, 686 popular resistance to 685–8, 690 putsch 49
 repression 2437
 Pinochet Boys 2063
 Pinot-Gallizio, Giuseppe 3044
 Pinsker, Leo 3741
 Pinter, Harold 224
Pinto, Pio Gama 2690–1
 Pinto Coelho da Cunha, José Feliciano 493
 Pinto da Costa, Manuel 2972
 Pinto de Fonseca, Manoel 2184
 Pintor, Luigi 2196, 2870
 Pio, Louis 990
 Pio and Thulia 107
 Pioneer Youth League 1501
 Piquet Revolt 3584
piquetero movement 262, 263–5, 2349
 Pir-i Roshan: see Ansari, Bayazid
 Pires, Pedro 603
Pisacane, Carlo 129, 1161, 2169, 2691–2
 Pisani, Edgard 2458
 Pisarev, Dmitri 977
 Piscator, Erwin 28, 1482
 PIT-CNT 3407
 Pitcher, Molly 84
 Pitt, William 507, 519, 633, 1223, 3024
 death 3529
 Ireland 1787, 1789, 2546
 and Wilberforce 3527, 3528 and Wilkes 3530
Pittsburgh Commercial-Gazette 2028
Pittsburgh Courier 757
Pittsburgh Gazette 71
 Pittsburgh Manifesto 2029–30
 Pius V, Pope 517
 Pius VI, Pope 441
 Pius VII, Pope 442
 Pius IX, Pope 493, 1149, 1150
 Piven, F. F. 780, 781–2, 2756, 2757–8, 2759
 Piyale Pasha 3334
 Pizarro, Carlos 802, 808, 3389
 Pizarro, Francisco 2592, 2876, 3336
 Pizarro Leongómez, Carlos 2149
PKK: see Kurdistan Workers' Party
PLA: see People's Liberation Army
 Plaatje, Solomon 152
 Placanica, Mario 1310
Place, Francis 519, 2692–3
 Plaek Phibun Songkram 3257
 Plains Warriors 900
 Plan Bolivar 2000 670
 Planned Parenthood Federation of America
 2968, 2969, 3626
 Plassey, Battle of 1708
 Platania, Pietro 3149
 Plato 95, 2102, 2836
 Platt Amendment 926, 2150
 Plaza de Mayo 255, 274
 Plaza of Congress March 2602
 Pledge of Resistance 2502
 Plehve, V. von 2879
Plekhanov, Georgi 2693–4
 Bolsheviks 437, 2887
 dialectics 2243, 2838
 History of Russian Thought 2694
 and Martov 2228
 Marxist influences 2082
 Mensheviks 2082, 2887
 Orthodox Marxism 1664–5
 Russian Social Democrats 978
 SPD model 979
 Szabó 3228
 and Trotsky 3321
 works 2693–4
 World War I 2890
 and Zaslulich 1914, 3550
Plessy v. Ferguson 756, 2798
PLO: see Palestinian Liberation Organization
Plody 3051
 Plowden, Alison 289
 Plug Plots 658
 Plunkett, Joseph Mary 1046, 1047

- Plutarch 3428
 Plzeň demonstrations 2252
PM 923
 Poch y Gascón, Amparo 2367, 2962, 3611
 Podkrepa 539, 3068
 Poglajen-Kolaković, Tomislav 3050
 Pohamba, Hifikepune 2400, 2531
 Point Blank 159
 Pokrovskaya, Maria Ivanovna 3551
Pol Pot 573–4, 1958–61
 Polakoff, Pedro 8
Poland 2694–710
 anarchism 140–1
 Bakunin on 334
 Catholic Church 2700, 2712, 3076, 3077, 3078
 Citizens' Committee 3076, 3079
 Constitution 2713
 counterrevolution 2702–3
 émigrés 2717
 food prices, rising 2695–6
 German takeover 1180, 1181
 ILO 3502
 independence 2703, 2715
 invading Ukraine 3507, 3508
 January Insurrection (1863) 2703–5
 Jewish people 2713
 KOR 2013, 2301, 2302, 2694–8, 3077–8
 Krakow Revolution 2701–2
 Kuroń 2013–14, 2695, 2696, 2698, 2705
 March Revolution (1848) 2701
 martial law 3075, 3078, 3555–6
 motherhood 3557
 Nazi invasion 2248
 1956 uprising 2698–700
 Poznań uprising 2699, 2700, 2702–3
 Reds/Whites 2704 repression of dissidents 1147
 revolutions 2700–5, 3544–5
 Russian occupation 2710, 3544
 student movements 2705–7, 3170 trade unions and protest 2707–10
 Ukrainian rebellions 2712 women in 1848 revolution 3544–5
 women's movement 3632
 see also Polish Revolution (Sejm) (1788–92);
 Polish Revolution (1830); Polish Revolution
 (1905–7); Solidarność; Warsaw
 Poland, Congress Kingdom of 2715–17
 Polatkan, Hasan 3350
 Polay Campos, Victor 2362, 2363
 Polese, Abel 810–18, 2017–18, 3020–1, 3375–8
 police
 Canada 2562–3
 Carnival against Capital 1388–9 shooting of 532
 SUNY-Buffalo campus 222
 see also Cop Watch Los Angeles
 police brutality
 Genoa G8 1307, 1308–9
 Gleneagles G8 1314
 Haymarket tragedy 1569, 2259
 India 1682, 1694
 London 1389
 Madres de la Plaza de Mayo 2500–1
 Prague 1393–4
 SNCC 748
 USA 862
 Police Service Northern Ireland (PSNI) 1798
 Polignac, Jules de 896, 1229, 1231
 Polisario Front 2338
 Polish Democratic Society 2700–1
 Polish League 2703, 2717
 Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth 436, 2690,
 2700, 2704, 2710, 2715
 Polish People's Republic 2697, 2701
Polish Revolution (Sejm) (1788–92) 2710–15
Polish Revolution (1830) 2715–17
Polish Revolution (1905–7) 2717–20
 Polish Socialist Party (PPS) 142, 2689, 2695, 2717
 Polish Union of Socialist Youth (ZMS) 2718
 Polish United Workers' Party (PUWP) 2695,
 3073, 3074, 3075
 Política Obrera 272
 Political Affairs Committee (PAC) 1856
 Political Committee of Cypriot Struggle (PEKA)
 946 Political Committee of National Liberation
 (PEEA) 1437, 1444
 Political Instrument for the Sovereignty of the Peoples (IPSP) 2320
 Political Metropolitan Collective (CPM) 1837 Political Theater 28
 Political Union 633 Political Week 2201
Politician 2126
 Poljarevic, Emin 1076–9
 Poll, Christabel 2096
 Pollack, Sam 3412
 Pollock, Friedrich 1253, 1254
 pollution 1053, 1881, 3100
 Polster, Joshua E. 27–8
 Polverel, Etienne 1264, 1532, 1533, 1535, 3307
 polycentrism 2699
 polychlorinated biphenyl (PCB) pollution 2418
 Polynesians 3080
 Polytechnic School uprising 1447
 Pomarańczowa Alternatywa (Orange Alternative) 140
 Pomare IV, of Tahiti 1272

- Pomare V, of Tahiti 1272
 Pompidou, Georges 1236
 Ponce, Francisco 240
 Ponce de Bianco, María 2159
 Ponce de León, Juan 28, 2450
 Ponce Erile, Juan 2683
 Ponce Massacre 2768, 2774
 Poncet de Brétigny, Charles 1269
 Pondoland revolt 3087 ponguaeje (bondage system) 426, 429
 Poniatowski, Michal 2712
 Poniatowski, Stanislaw August 2710, 2714
 Ponte Novo, Battle of 872
 Pontes, Paula Rodrigues 466–73, 2376–80, 2748–9
 Pontiac 77, 582
 Ponto, Jürgen 1368
 Pookotoor battle 2318
 Poole, Andrea Geddes 3516–18
 Poole, Steve 506–7, 3279–80
 Poona Pact 53, 1684, 1710
 Poor Bear, Myrtle 2629
Poor Law, Britain 656, 658, 2720–1, 3380
 Poor Law Acts 523, 656
 Poor Law Amendment Act 2720
 Poor Law Commission 2720
Poor Man's Guardian 2543
 Poor People's Campaign 753, 1976
 Poor People's Party (PDL) 562
 Pop, Gheorghe 2866
 Pope, Mary 1106
Popelin, Marie 2721–2
 Popieluszko, Jerzy 3075
 Popol Vuh 1474
 Poptla, Battle of 910
 Popov, Gavriil 3123, 3124, 3127
 Popov, Nebojsa 3690
 Popular Armed Forces for the Liberation of Angola (FAPLA) 2360
 Popular Army of Liberation: see Ejército Popular de Liberación (EPL) Popular Assembly of the Peoples of Oazaca (APPO) 1121, 2290, 2295, 2535
 Popular Defense Fronts (FDIPs) 2650
 Popular Democratic (PD), Philippines 2684
 Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PDFLP) 2011
 Popular Democratic Party (MPD), Ecuador 1058
 Popular Democratic Party (PPD), Puerto Rico 2769
 Popular Front (FP), Chile 693
 Popular Front (FP), Comintern 3678
 Popular Front (FP), France 179
 Popular Front (FP), Russia 28, 1922
 Popular Front, Spain 146, 3132, 3133, 3144
 Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) 400, 1368 Popular and Indigenous Minga 797
 Popular Liberation Movement (MLP) 1164
 Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) 1216
 Popular Movement of the Revolution (MPR) 852
 Popular Revolutionary Army: see Ejército Popular Revolucionario (EPR)
 Popular Revolutionary Democratic Party (PDPR) 1122, 2285
 Popular Social Christian Movement (MPSC) 1165
 Popular Union for the Liberation of Guadeloupe (UPLG) 1470
 Popular Villista Revolutionary Army (EVRP) 1121 population growth/social organization 2986 Population Registration Act 171 populism 2722–8
 agrarian resistance 2723–5 cooperative movement 2725–6
 National Alliance 2727–8
 People's Party 2723
 Populist Revolt 2722 sub-treasury system opposition 2726–7
 Populist Socialism 677, 3040
Populli (People) 29
 PORA, Yellow/Black 3376–7, 3378
 PORA (It's Time NGO) 814, 817, 3375–6
 Porcupine, Peter: see Cobbett, William Porecatu guerilla movement 2351 pornography 3629
 Porphyry 3428
 Porsile, Giuseppe 3146
 Port and Railway Employees' Association 153, 2354
 Port-au-Prince 1528–9, 1543, 3585
 Port Huron Statement 3188
 Porte, Sublime 1451, 1452
 Porteñazo, El 3451
 Porter, Brian 2705
 Porter, Henry 2408, 2409
 Portes Gil, Emilio 2542
Portugal 2728–32
 anti-monarchy protests 186–8
 Brazil 187, 483–4
 British rule 187
 in Cape Verde 602
 Carnation Revolution 165, 1042, 1262, 2728–9, 2972
 Catholic Church 877
 colonies 186, 2731
 coup d'état 602, 1042, 2360
 Estatuto do Trabalho Nacional 2730

Portugal (cont'd) exploration 186

 fascism 2730
 immigrants 1643
 imperialism 1654
 independence 186
 Makombe-nguruvu dynasty 699 and Morocco 2332–3
 Palmares 3745–6
 protest and revolution 2728–32
 slave trade 186–7, 3024–5
 Spanish invasion 187 standard of living 2732 trading-post empires 1656
 World War II 2730
see also Anglo-Portuguese alliance
 Portuguese Guinea 2731
 Portuguese Reconquista 186
 Portuguese Republican Party (PRP) 877
 Portuguese traders 1718
 Portuondo, Fernando 919
 Portuondo Linares, S. 914
Porvenir, El 144, 1016
 Posada, José Guadalupe 2375
 Posadas, Gervasio Antonio 288
 Posadas, Juan 272
 positivism 600, 842–3, 2276
 Post, K. 1866
 post-anarchy movement 979
 post-Fordism 1007, 1399–400, 3171
 working class 2370
 Post Office Workers' Society 2137 postal workers' strikes, Canada 2618–19 postcolonial Caribbean 2839 postcolonial feminism 2733–5 poststructuralism 771, 772, 908
 Marxism 972
 Potatau Te Wherowhero 2206
 Potemkin, Grigorii 2712
 Potere Operaio (Workers' Power) 1836, 1838,
 1840, 1842, 1843, 2426
 Potocki, Ignacy 2713
 Potomac, Army of 61, 64
 Potosi massacre 430
 Potresov, Alexander 2694
 Potsdam Ultimatum 1889
 Pottawatomie Massacre 533
 Potter, Thomas 3529
 Poubalt 2004
 Pouget, Émile 115, 120, 162, 850, 2170
 Poukombo revolt 566, 567
 Poulaille, Henry 115
Poulantzas, Nicos 2735–7
 Crisis of Dictatorships 2736
 Fascism and Dictatorship 2736

Political Power and Social Classes 2735
Social Classes in Contemporary Capitalism 2736
State, Power, Socialism 2736
POUM (Workers' Party of Marxist Unification): see Partido Obrero de Unificación Marxista
 Pound, Ezra 1587
 Poundmaker 583
 Pouvanaa Committee 1272
poverty
 apathy 780
 Camus on 582
 Chicago 11
 culture of 777
 deindustrialization 782
 Latin America 2058, 2059–60
 Mali 2182
 Mexico 1395, 1396, 2286–7
 Palestine 1550
 Peru 2653
 pollution 1053
 and revolution 776–83
 Tilly 778–9
 urban 968
 Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers 3114
 Powder Alarm 78
 Powder River Country 900
Powderly, Terence 1977–9
 Powell, Adam Clayton, Jr. 841
 Powell, Vavasour 1103, 1194 power theory, Foucault 1221, 3018
 Powers, Richard 2028
 Poyas, Peter 3460
 Poynings' Law 1785, 1786, 1804, 1807, 2402
 Poznań uprising 2699, 2700, 2702–3
Prabhakaran, Velupillai 2740–1, 3251, 3252
 Prachanda (Maoists) 2347–441
 Pradhan, Sahana 232
 Prado, Manuel 1568, 2650
 Pragatisheed Mahila Samiti (Progressive Women's Association) 3588
 Práger, Ármin 127
 Prague 1390, 1431, 3655
 Global Day of Action 1391–5
 Russian tanks 2262
 squatting 1394
 see also Prague Spring
 Prague, Treaty of 990
Prague Manifesto 2374
 Prague Mothers 3633
Prague Spring 1339, 1340, 1346, 2742–6, 3117
 Dubček 1025
 student movement 3170, 3177, 3178
 Prague Students Council 3176

- Praja Parishad (People's Council) 1932, 1933, 2441
 Praja Sabha 1930
Praktika 2684
 Praloto the Maltesean 1529
 Pramanik, Kewala 2970
 Prange, W. 2983
 Prasad, Patel 1329
 Prasad, Rajendra 1329, 3586
 Prasert Sapsunthon 3258
Prasertkul, Seksan 2746–8, 3261, 3263
Pratap 3041
 Pratap, Anita 2741
 Pratap, Raja Mahendra 1676
 Pratap Singh, Viswanath 1934
 Prats, Carlos 682, 689
Pravda 2083, 2705, 2904, 2943, 2944, 3029, 3553, 3554
Praxis 272, 2839, 3638, 3689–90, 3692–3
 Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom 332
prazeros (European lease holders) 2353
PRC: see Partido Revolucionario Cubano
 Pre, Roland 580
 Pre-Raphaelites 2340
 Preap In 570 precarious workers' organization, Italy 1839–41
 precariousness 634, 1148, 1403, 3171 predestination 565
 Prem Tinsulanonda 3264
 Premadasa, Ranasinghe 2634, 3252
Prensa, La 2468, 2469, 2472, 2475, 2476
 Preobrazhensky, Evgenii 535, 3608
 Preoteasa, Grigore 2867
 Presbyterian Church 517, 1854
 Presbyterians
 Ireland 1806
 Kenya 1948
 Ulster 1045
Presse, La 2785, 2788
 Prestes, Júlio 469
Prestes, Luís Carlos 469, 475, 2748–9
Prestes, Olga Benário 2748–9
 Preston, Battle of 909, 1098, 1854
 Preston, Thomas 3280
 Prestonpans, Battle of 1854
 Pretoria Agreement 859
 Pretoria Socialist Society 148
 Préval, René 280, 1510, 1520
 Preventive Detention Act 2221
 Price, Cecil 1259
 Price, George 364, 366
 Price, Richard 507–8, 1553
 Price, Victoria 3002
 Price-Mars, Jean 1516, 1523, 2872
 Prichard, Alex 2763–6
 Pride, Thoma 909
 Pridi Banomyong 3257, 3258, 3259
 Priestley, J. B. 190
 Priestley, Joseph 1116
 Prieto, Horacio M. 145
 Prieto, Indalecio 291, 3131
 Prigione, Geronimo 481
Prima Linea 2749–50
Primera Rosell, Alí Rafael 2750–2
 primitivism 99, 979
 Primo de Rivera, Miguel 145, 352, 848, 1188, 2257, 3128
 Primo de Rivera, Pilar 3611
Prince Edward Island protests 2752–3
 Princip, Gavriilo 318
 Pringle, Bob 1456
 printed word
 Protestantism 3001
 Scotland 3001
 Solidarność 3077
 state-making 2592
printing press/protest 109, 473, 587, 2753–5
 Prío Socarrás, Carlos 623, 624, 916, 929
 Prison Activist Resource Center 965
 Pristine University 37
 Pritchard, George 1271
 Pritchard, Jack 3460
 Pritchett, Laurie 742
 Prithvi Narayan Shah 2441 privatization, water supplies 790–2, 3099–100
 Pro-Indigenous Association 2649
 Pro-Prisoners Committee 254
Proal, Héron 138, 2755
 Proaño, Leonidas 480, 2058
Problemy Kitaya (Problems of China) 2782
 Probst, Christoph 3525, 3526
 Proceso de Reorganización Nacional 246, 250, 254
 Prodi, Romano 132, 1820
 production modes
 Althusser on 1669
 Asatic 766
 capitalism 1666–7, 2232–4 class society 783 flexible networks 1007, 1399
 historical materialism 821
 just-in-time 1399
 Marx on 1648, 2232–4
 performative 2370
 tributary 766
 Profane Existence 159
 Profintern 1003
 Progressive Bloc, Duma 2892
 Progressive Democratic Party, Iraq 3516

- Progressive Labor Party (PLP) 3189
 Progressive Organization of Women (POW) 3587
 Progressive Papers Limited (PPL) 2581
 Progressive Party, Burma 552
 Progressive Party of Working People (AKEL) 945
 Progressive Republican Party (PRP) 3359
 Progressive Teachers Union of Zimbabwe
 (PTUZ) 3733
 Progressive Writers Movement 1160, 1761
 Progressive Youth Movement 139
 Progressivism 886–7
 Prohibition of Mixed Marriages Act 171
 Proletarian Tendency 2469
 proletariat
 autonomism 323
 Engels 766, 821, 3057
 Germany 1350
 Marx 778, 821, 3057
 Reiss 766–7
 revolution 821
 Trotsky 1667–8
 see also dictatorship of the proletariat
Proletarii 2912
Proletario, Il 3013
 Proletkult Theater 1080
 Prolonged Popular War tendency 2469
 Promborirak, Norodom 3475
 propaganda 2962, 3129, 3133
 propaganda by the deed
 anarchism 94, 120, 161, 2048
 Galleani 1322
 Goldman 1411
 Malatesta 2169
 Reclus 2813
 Prosser, Gabriel 89, 214
 Prosser, Thomas Henry 1319 prostitutes 1411–12, 2183–4, 2368, 3636
 prostitution 2100, 3017, 3566
 Protection of Aboriginal Children from Sexual Abuse Report 5
 Protection of People and State Decree 2832 Protection of the Nation Law 543 protest and revolution, stages in 2756–63 confluence of events 2762 cycles of 2759
 Goldstone 2762
 Marx 2760
 mobilization 2758–9
 opportunity 2756–7
 outcomes 2760–2 stages and struggles 2759–60
 tactics 2757–8
 protest music 610–12, 632, 637–41
 protest pickets 3041
 protest songs 221, 611, 632
Protesta, La 104, 248
Protesta Humana, La 102
 Protestant Ascendancy in Ireland 1784, 1806
 Protestant Volunteers 2572
 Protestantism
 Bohemia 1143
 Calvinism 1034
 as dissent 1343
 Evangelical 2062
 France 1110
 GDR 1342–4
 Germany 1347
 Ireland 1784, 3305
 Latin America 482
 Nonconformists 1406
 print technology 1355
 Reformed 1358
 see also English Reformation; German Reformation; Reformation; Scottish Reformation
 Proud Quakers 1105
Proud Valley (film) 2846
 Proudhon, Charles 2843
Proudhon, Pierre Joseph 2763–6
 anarchism 94, 95, 96, 122, 2763–4
 anti-feminism 2766
 anti-Semitism 2766
 artistic creation 115
 and Bakunin 333
 and communism 161
 De la Capacité Politique des Classes Ouvrières 2765 followers 2628
 and Godwin 1410
 as influence 2691
 on justice 2765
 and Marx 2763–4
 Marx on 2231
 mutualism 97, 111, 119–20, 2008, 2048, 2813
 patriarchal family 97
 revolution 100
 on war 2765
 What is Property? 2763
 working class 161, 2765
 Provence, Comte de: see Louis XVIII
 Providence Industrial Mission (PIM) 695
 Provisional Democratic Government of Greece 1445
 Provisional Government of India 1676
 Provisional IRA 1797, 1801
 Provisional Military Administrative Council
 (PMAC) 1135
 Provisional Office of Mass Organizational Affairs
 (POMOA) 1136

- Provisional Peasant Self-Defense Committee 3077
- Provisors and Praemunire, Statutes of 514
- Prus, Maciej 3073
- Prussia 1214, 1348, 2714
- Prussian Reform Movement 1282
- Prynne, William 2118
- Pryser, T. 2524
- Przegląd Naukowy* (Scientific Review) 3544
- Przegląd Pedagogic* (Pedagogical Review) 3544
- Psychanalyse et politique (Psych et po) 3575–6
- Pu Yi 3201
- Public Against Violence (PAV) 3435
- Public Assistance Committees 3383
- Public Opinion* 2197
- Public Order Act 591, 3734
- Public Order Amendment 2221
- Public Peace Police Law, Japan 1896, 1897, 1898
- public–private partnerships 3099–100
- Public Security Bureau 1431
- Public Service Staff Relations Act 590
- Public Works scheme 522
- public workshops, France 2842
- Publiciste parisien* 2211
- Puc, Venancio 621
- Puente, Galileo 2642
- Puertan Rican prisoners
radiation experiments 39
- Puerto Cortés 1603, 2018
- Puerto Rican Day celebration, Chicago 3400
- Puerto Rican Independence Party (PIP) 2769
- Puerto Rican Nationalist Party 38, 39
- Puerto Rican Socialist League (LSP) 2771
- Puerto Rican Socialist Party (PSP) 2770, 2771
- Puerto Rican street gangs, US 2770
- Puerto Rican Telephone Company 2772
- Puerto Rican Young Lords 399, 2770
- Puerto Rico 2843–4
- anarchism 141
 - cultural identity 2767
 - culture 2768
 - emigrants 2767, 2770
 - Grito de Lares* 382, 383, 2767, 2774, 2844
 - independence movement 2766–74, 2774, 3071
 - languages 2767, 2768–9
 - nationalism 2768–9
 - Nationalist Party 2768, 2770–1
 - neoliberalism 2772
 - Ponce de León 28
 - punk rock 141
 - resistance to colonialism 2767
 - sugar cane cultivation 39
 - US rule 2767
 - Vieques 3464–5
 - Young Lords 399
see also Albizu Campos, Pedro
- Puey Ungpakorn 3274
- Pugachev, Emilian 2775
- Pugachev's Rebellion 2775–6, 2883, 2922
- Puget Sound 861, 2501, 3664
- Puget Sound Cooperative Colony 3418
- Pugh, Sarah 3639
- Pugwash Conference of Concerned Scientists 190, 2877
- Puig Antich, Salvador 146–7, 2776–7
- Puiggrós, Rodolfo 273
- Puisaye, Count 895
- Pujol, Jordi 631
- Pulacayo, Theses of 429–30
- Pulaski, Kazimierz 85
- Pullman Company 2803
- Pullman Strike 11, 974, 1570, 1735, 2034
- Punjab 1701–2
- Punjab Wars 1688
- punk movement 109, 139, 159, 2777–8
- punk rock/protest 105, 141, 885, 2063–4, 3176
- Punnappa Vyalur 1922
- Punto Fijo pact 665, 3436, 3437–8
- Purcell, Thomas 2319–20
- Purdy, Murray Gow 2794
- Pure Food and Drugs Act 3040
- Purishkevish, V. 2912
- Puritanism 76, 517, 1632–3, 3416, 3612–13, 3614
- Purvis, June 2595–6
- PUSH Operation 1852
- Pushkin, Alexander 2878
- Pushtuns: see Pashtuns
- Putilov Works 2880, 2891, 2900, 2916, 2944
- Putin, Vladimir 143, 3329, 3333
- Putin Youth 817
- Putney Debates 1098, 1099
- Putumayo atrocities 620
- Putzgruppe* 1366
- Puyricard, Governor 1526
- Pyidawtha (Welfare) program 2527
- Pyjas, Stanislaw 2697, 3077
- Pyliavtski, Battle of 1958
- Pyramids, Battle of 441
- Pythagoras 3428
- Qaddafi, Muammar al- 2328, 2779, 3031
- Qadr, Birjis 1689
- Qajar dynasty 1766, 1767–8
- Qandahar, captured 3247
- Qarase, Laisenia 1199, 1200
- Qarmatians 236
- Qasim, Abd al-Karim 353, 1708, 1777, 1780–2, 2955, 3224
- Qaumi Inqilabi Party (QIP) 2583

- Qaumi Mahaz e Azadi 2583
 Qavam, Ahmad 2343
 Q'eqchi massacre 1480
 Qhichwa peasants 1936, 1937
Qin Bangxian 2780
 Qing Dynasty 714, 3230
 absolutism 715
 Hundred Days of Reform 3672–3 military defenses 712 overthrow of 721, 2994, 3201
 Self-Strengthening Movement 3672
 Sino-Japanese War 3236
 Tianjin Massacre 3290
 and western powers 113, 3671–2 see also Manchu rule, crises of Qiu Jin 719, 2780–1
Qu Qiubai 2113, 2781–2, 3723, 3725
Quaderni Piacentini (Piacenza Notebooks) 1836
Quaderni Rossi (Red Notebooks) 1836, 1842, 1843, 2426
 Quadrelli, Emilio 2401–2, 2749–50
 Quakers
 abolition of slavery 201
 anti-nuclear protests 194, 1460
 civil disobedience 1225
 Fox 1224–5
 and Moravians 1301 peaceful resistance 1105–6, 2491
 Pennsylvania 155–6, 202, 212
 Philadelphia 213, 367
 and Ranters 2804 and Shakers 3019 tithes 1105
 women's rights 1106, 1108, 3613
 Quartering Act 78, 453
Quarto Stato 2871
 Quddus (Barfurushi) 1766
 Que faire? group 2046
Que Viva México (Eisenstein) 1081
Quebec
 French civil code 591
 nationalism 2783–8
 October Crisis 2786–8
 Oka crisis 2556–7
 Quiet Revolution 2783–4, 2788
 separatism 2784–6
 see also World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Quebec
 Quebec Act 78
 Quebec City, Summit of the Americas 3654, 3656–7
 Quebec Rouges 2842
 Quechua people 480, 2371, 2658, 3430
Queen Nanny, Maroon resistance 2788–90
 Queen's Park Riot 2562
Queens Magazine 2108
 queer activism 2098, 2100
Queer Eye for the Straight Guy 2109
Queer as Folk 2109
 Queer Nation 2100, 2106, 2108, 2109
 Quesada, Gonzalo Jiménez de 3294–5
Questions féministes (Feminist Questions) 3575
 Quetzalcóatl 910
 Quetzaltenango, Battle of 1474, 1476, 3255
 Quezon, Manuel 2673
 Quiché resistance 1474, 3255
 Quijos revolt 1925–6
 Quilapayún 2379
 Quimpo, Nathan (Villalobos) 2684
 Quinim Pholsena 2055
 Quiñones Guerra, Victor R. 3464–5
 Quintero-Rivera, A. 2774
Quintín Lame (CQL) 1083, 2791
 Quintín Lame Armed Movement (MAQL) 802,
 804, 2791
 Quintín Lame Indigenous Movement (MIQL)
 2791
 Quinwonka 2115
 Quipp, June 586
 Quirino, Elpidio 1614, 1615
 Quiroga Santa Cruz, Marcelo 418
 Quisling, Vidkun 2495, 2525
 Quispe Huanca, Felipe 433, 789, 1938
Quit India movement 645, 1329–30, 1494, 1704, 1710, 2051, 2389, 2432, 2791–5
 Quit Kashmir movement 1929–30
 Quito uprising 1062
 Quota Acts 3154, 3155
 Qur'an 1558–9, 1964, 3367
 Qureshi, Ashraf 1934
 Qureshi, Hashim 1934, 1935
 Quwatli, Shukri 3223

 Rabbani, Burhanuddin 14
 Rabin, Yitzhak 239, 1759, 1813
 Rabinowitch, Eugene 194
 Raboteau massacre 1508
Rabotmisa 3553, 3554, 3607
Rabuka, Situveni Ligamamada 199, 1197–8, 2797–8
 Rachel Carson Council 617
 Rachel Carson Homestead Association 618
 Rachid Bey 3334
 Rachman, Hasyim 1725
 racial capitalism 3088
 Racial Discrimination Act (Australia) 6 racial uplift 941
 racism
 and class struggle 785
 Leeward Islands 2076, 2078

- Malcolm X 2179
 Nazism 1184
 Russia 2921
 Stanton 3165
see also anti-apartheid movement; apartheid
- rack-renting 1793, 2318, 2802
 Radama I, of Madagascar 2156
 Radama II, of Madagascar 2156
 Raddeker, Hélène Bowen 133–5
 Radek, Karl 2167
 Radetsky, Joseph 1150
 Radi, Husayn Ahmad al-: see Salam ‘Adel
- radiation experiments
 Puertan Rican prisoners 39
 radiation exposure 191, 192, 195, 199
 Radical Abolition Party 56, 216
 Radical Associations 2550
 Radical Cheerleaders 125
 Radical Civic Union (UCR) 266
 Radical Democratic Party, India 2876 radical feminism
 Britain 3569
 Japan 3594
 Spain 3611–12
 USA 159, 2844–5, 3629
 Radical Humanist Association 2876
 Radical Hungarian Women 1630–1
 Radical Party of Chile 693
 Radical Party of Denmark 991
Radical Reconstruction, USA 755, 2027,
 2798–801
 Radical Socialists 128, 824 Radical Women’s Center 3597 radicalesbians 2097
 Radicals and Opportunists 1323 radio, power of 611
 Radio Barcelona 2871
 Radio Cacerola 2536
 Radio Campesina 1610
Radio Free Dixie 3534
 Radio Free Europe 3077
 Radio Free Grenada 1462
 Radio Hristo Botev 543, 544
 Radio Illimani 419
 Radio KREM 1634
 Radio Moscow 543
 Radio Naroden Glas 543
 Radio Rebelde 932
Radio Student 3744
 Radio Universidad 2535, 2537
 Radio Venceremos 639
Radio Zid 224
 Raditladi, Leetile 458
Raditsela, Andries 2801–2, 3096
 Radkey, Oliver 2886
 Radoinov, Tsvyatko 543
 Radom strikes 2696
 Radowitzky, Simón 243, 254, 267
 Raffarin, Jean-Pierre 1237
 Raftopoulos, B. 3732
 Ragen’s Colts 2824
 Raggi, Anne-Marie 884
 Rahman, Habibur 452
 Rahman, Motiur 2579
 Rahman, Sheikh Muhibur 344, 345, 346–7, 2578, 2579
 Rahman, Ziaur 344
 Rahman Khan, Zarina 368–72
 Rahmonov, Emomali 3246
 Rai, Lala Lajpat 1677, 1680, 1696, 3042
 Railway Engineers’ and Firemen’s Union 1897
 Railway Worker Federation (FOF) 247
 Rainbow Coalition 1853
Rainbow Warriors 199, 1272, 2303, 2529
 Rainford, Charan 2740–1, 3250–3 rainforest, protected 1268 see also Amazonian rainforest protest and resistance
- Rainsborough, Thomas 1098, 1102
 Rajagopalachari, Chakravarthi 1628, 2432, 2792–3
 Rajan, Zahid 2690–1
 Rajapakse, Mahinda 3253
 Rajk, László 1625
 Raju, Alluri Seetha Rama 2802–3
 Rakoczi, Franciscus 1142
 Rákosi, Mátyás 1618, 1626, 2387
 Ralin, Radoi 3068
 Ralli-Arbore, Zemfir C. 142
 Rallis, Ioannis 1437
 Rally for Congolese Democracy (RCD) 858
 Ram Janmabhoomi 1584, 1585, 1692–3
 Ram Mandir (temple) campaign 1693
 Ramadan, Tariq 1811
 Ramakrishna-Vivekananda movement 1696
 Ramanenjana 2156
 Ramasami, E. V. 956–7
 Rambhupati 2802
 Ramchandra, Baba 1703
 Rame, Franca 1204–5
 Ramey, John 503
 Ramgarh Congress 2792
 Ramien, Th.: see Hirschfeld, Magnus
 Ramirez, Juana 3631
 Ramírez, Sergio 2470, 2474, 2965
 Ramón de la Fuente, Juan 3379
 Ramona, Comandante 3600
 Ramonet, Ignacio 298
 Ramos, Benigno 2673
 Ramos, Fidel V. 2683, 2684
 Ramos, Isabel 563

- Ramos de Chamberlain, Eulalia 3631
 Ramos-Horta, José 1042, 1044
 Ramos-Zayas, A. Y. 2774
Rampa rebellions 2802–3
RampART 1741
 Ramphele, Mamphela 3604
 Ramsay, James 206, 3528
 Rana, Sardar Singh Raoji 1675
 Ranade, M. G. 1695, 1697
 Ranadive, B. T. 961, 2421
 Ranariddh, Prince 1961
 Ranavalona I, of Madagascar 2156
 Rance, Hubert 302, 557, 2978
 RAND Corporation 280, 1399
 Rand Formula 589
 Rand Revolt 153, 831–2, 3091
 Randall, Adrian 502, 2134
Randolph, A. Philip 73, 1554, 2803–4
 African Blood Brotherhood 22
 and Baker 332
 Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters 393, 757, 2037, 3187
 civil rights 745
 Freedom Budget 752, 2037
 Messenger 21
 Rangel, José Vicente 3445
 Ranger, Terence 3728, 3729
 Rangoon Institute of Technology 550
 Rangoon University 552
 Rangoon University Students' Union (RUSU)
 301, 554
 Ranis, Peter 2346–50
 Ranjit Singh 1928–9
 Rankin, Jeanette 2489
Ranters 94, 1104–5, 1107, 2804–5
 Rao, C. Rajeswara 961, 2421
 rape allegations 3002–3
 as collective dishonoring 1585
 Gujarat 1585, 1694
 India 3589
 marital 3567 of missionaries 2060
 Muslims/Hindus 1584, 1585 of nuns 1585
 Pakistan 1711
 by police 3589
 politics of 3629
 punishments 3233
 Santal rebellion 2971
 Rape Crisis Centers 3579
 Raphael, D. D. 3054
 Rapid Response Brigades 925
 Rapoport, David 281
Rapp, Father George 1185–6, 2460
 Rappites 2560
 Rappresentanza di base (Rdb) 1840
 Raseta, Joseph 1250
 Rashid, al- 2333
 Rashid, Hama 1762
 Rashra Sevika Samity (Society of Women Serving the Nation) 1583, 1584
 Rashtriya Panchayat 2443
 Rashtriya Praja Party (RPP) 2438
 Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS) 1330, 1331, 1583, 1692, 2433
 in Kashmir 1930
 Raskin, Jonah 2127–8
Raspail, François-Vincent 403, 2805–6
 Raspe, Jan-Carl 1368
 Rasputin, Grigori 2890, 2895, 2942
 Rassemblement Démocratique Africain (RDA)
 579, 884, 1249, 1251, 1252
 Rassemblement pour l'Indépendance Nationale
 (RIN) 2784
 Rassemblement du peuple français (RPF) 825
 Rastafarianism 394, 611, 1336, 1498, 1859–60, 1864, 1870, 2852
 Rastokhez 3245
 Rathbone, Eleanor 3568
 Rational Dissenters 507 rational dress 168
 Rational Society 2567
 Ratshosa, Simon 455, 458
 Ratsiraka, President 2157
 Ratzinger, Joseph 1497
 Ratzinger Report 2062
 Raurich, Héctor 272
 Rauschenbusch, Walter 762
 Ravines, Eudocio 2219
 Ravoahangy, Joseph 1250
 Rawalpindi Conspiracy Case 1160, 1637, 2404, 2581, 2582
 Rawlings, Jerry 2182
 Rawson de Dellepiane, Elvira 3597
 Ray, James Earl 753
 Ray, Man 1125
 Ray, Rajat 1689
 Ray, Rup Narayan 1706
 Raymond, Battle of 63
 Raymond, Jean de 578
 Raymond, Julien 3311
 Razin, Stepan (Stenka) 2775, 2806, 3148
Razin's Rebellion 2806–7
 Raziq, 'Ali 'Abd al- 1809
 Razmara, Ali 1764
Razón, La 2217
 Réaction Démocratique (RD) 1517 ready-mades 953
 Reaffirmists/Rejectionists, Philippines 2686

- Reagan, Ronald
 on anti-nuclear movement 2502 arms race 1831
 Black Student Union 3169 and Davis 964, 965
 El Salvador 1163, 1165, 2868, 2956, 2957
 elected 889, 1395
 Grenada 2462
 Iran–Contra scandal 2475
 Lebanon 2071
 and Manley 2198
 and Marcos 2683
 neoliberalism 690, 1387, 1395, 1882
 Nicaragua 2472, 2564
 reelected 198
 on same-sex relations 2094
 Screen Actors' Guild 1603
 Strategic Defense Initiative 513
- Real de Minas region 3452
 Real Friend Federation 136
 Real Whigs 507
Reasoner 3282
 Rebecca Riots 520, 3500
 Rebel Armed Forces (FAR) 1476, 1480
Recht voor allen 870
 Reclaim the City 1153 reclaim the state group 2620
Reclaim the Streets 1040, 1387, 1390, 1392,
 1393, 1397, 1483, 2807–11
 Reclus, Elie 2811
Reclus, Elisée 1419, 2811–14 anarchism and Christianity 2813
 anarchocommunist 2812, 2813
 as influence 1807
 and Kropotkin 2008, 2813, 2814
 Moravian school 2323
Nouvelle Géographie universelle, La 2812
 propaganda by the deed 2813
 racism condemned 2813
- Reconstruction: see Radical Reconstruction,
 USA
 Reconstruction Act (1867) 2800
 Reconstruction Amendments 68
 Reconstruction and Development Policy 2195
 Reconstruction and Development Program
 (RDP) 875, 3101
 Recto, Claro M. 2676
 Red Academy 2120
 Red Army, China
 Long March 726, 2201–2
 Mao 708, 726, 2201–2
 origins of 708, 722, 725, 729, 731
 Red Army, Russia 2086, 3507
Red Army Faction 1366, 1368–9, 3522
 Red Bonnets, Revolt of 2215
Red Brigades (Brigate Rosse) 380, 1820,
 1837, 1844, 2402, 2814–18
 Red Channels pamphlet 1603
 Red Cloud agency 901
 Red Clydeside 2820, 2821, 3061
 Red Fern Black Rose 107
 Red Flag Communist Party 3279
 Red Flag guerilla 3443
 Red Guards 710, 711, 720, 2204, 2995, 3168, 3180
 Red International of Labor Unions (RILU)
 2257, 2486
Red Light 986
 Red Orchestra 1377, 1378
 Red Panthers 2401
 Red Power Movement 40, 2412–14, 2419
Red Rag 3569
Red Revolutionary Tenants 2755
Red Rover 2844
 Red Ruhr Army 1364
 Red Scare repression 194, 379, 824, 2034, 2107
Red Scotland: see Scotland
 Red Shirts, Italy 1332, 1333
 Red Shirts (Khuda-i Khidmatgar): see Khuda-i Khidmatgar (Red Shirts)
 Red Shock Troop 1379
 Red Socorro 254
Red Summer, USA 22, 2822–4
 Red Sun 1058
 Red Terror 2086
Red Week: see Settimana Rossa
 Redding, Kimberly A. 2892
 Reddock, R. 3560
 Reddock, Rhoda 3579
 Reddy, Baddam Yella 1707
 Reddy, C. P. 2422, 2423
 Reddy, Jai Ram 1199
 Reddy, Ravi Narayan 1707
 Reddy, T. Nagi 2422, 2423, 2425
 Redfern black community 309
 Redistribution Act (1885) 241
 Redjeb, Sheikh 3357
 Redmond, John 1045, 1047, 1799 redondilla work-sharing system 1753
Reds (film) 836, 2825
 Reds/Whites
 Poland 2704
 Russia 2167
 Redstockings 3629
 Redstone, John 861
 Reeb, James 1976
Reed, John 2253, 2623, 2824–5, 3065
Insurgent Mexico 2825
Ten Days that Shook the World 836, 2825
 Reef Shop Assistants' Union 2948

- Rees, James 3147
 Reeve, Charlie 1737
 Reeves, Steve 3149
 Refet, Colonel 3357
Reform Acts, Britain and Ireland (1832) 205, 633, 655, 786, 1632, 2692, 2825–7, 3499, 3565
Reform Bills, Britain (1867, 1884) 526, 2827–8, 3061, 3565
Reforma Universitaria 864
Réformateur 2805
Reformation
 Denmark 988
 England 514–16, 1092–6
 Finland 2513
 Germany 1355–8, 2139
 Netherlands 1034–5
 Norway 2523
 Radical 92
 as revolution 1357
 Scientific Revolution 2987–8
 Scotland 2999–3002
 Sweden 2513
 Switzerland 92, 3748
 Reformation Parliament 515, 1093
Reforme, La 1243
 Reformed Kirk 3001, 3002
 Reformers' Organization 1087, 1557 refugees, Greek–Turkish war 1442
 Refuseniks 1816
 Regala, Williams 1506
 Regan, Tom 3429
 Regency Crisis 1223, 1786
Regeneración 137, 2162
 reggae 611, 1860
Regina Riot 588, 2562–3, 2831–2
 Regional Council of Negro Leadership (RCNL) 1155
 Regional Council of Peasant Leagues (CRLC) 2351
 Regional Federation of Salvadoran Workers (FRTS) 2223
 Regional Indigenous Council of Tolima (CRIT) 2791
 Regional Mexican Workers' Confederation (CROM) 2541
 Regional Organization of Embera Waunan of Chocó 2791
 Regional Workers' Federation (FRTS), El Salvador 2225 Regional Workers' Federation, Puerto Rico 141
 Rehman, Abdul 2583
 Rehoboth Basters 2392, 2397
 Rehoboth Council 2397
 Rehoboth Rebellion 2397
 Reich, Haviva 1917
 Reich, Jens 1345
Reichseimigung 1351
Reichstag Fire 1003, 1178, 1375, 2832–3
 Reid, Donald 235
 Reid Cabral, Donald 1018
 Reign of Terror 2851–2, 2970
 impact on Britain 819
 Robespierre 894, 2849, 2970
 Rochambeau 2851
sans-culottes 2970
 Sieyès 3033
 Reilly, Thomas Devin 3680, 3681
 Reiman, Michel: The Birth of Stalinism 3161
 Reinaga, Fausto 1937
 Reinette, Luc 1470
 Reinherz, Adam 2141–2
 Reis, Turgut 3334
 Reiss, Edward 766–7
 Reitman, Ben 125
 Relief Acts 1785
 Relief Camp Workers' Union 2832 relief camps for unemployed 2831 religion
 Marx on 3679
 non-violence 2496
 pacifism 2490
 and revolution 3017
 on violence 2490
 Religion, Wars of 1035, 1068, 2950
Religious Recorder 3006
 Religious Socialists 1380
 religious tolerance 1110, 1408
 Remilik, Haruo 2304
 Remington, Blake W. 3512–14
 Renaissance 886
 RENAMO: see Resistência Nacional Moçambicana
 Renard, André 361
Rendao (Human Path) 2781
 Rengo trade unions 1876, 1877, 1883, 3069, 3721
 Rénique, Gerardo 2535–8, 2650–6
 Renner, Karl 319, 321, 322, 354
 Reno, Marcus 901 rent strikes 2819
 Reparation of Victims of the Dictatorship Law 2598
 Repeal Association 3680
 Repetto, Nicolás 271
 Representation of Natives Bill 833
 Representation of the People Act 520, 528, 1047 Representation of the People (Equal Suffrage) Act 529 reproductive rights 3630
Repubblica, La 1310

- Republic Assault Guards 3131, 3141–2
 Republic of New Africa 18, 394
 República Chiquita de Indios 2045
 Republican Mobilization, Nicaragua 2467
 Republican Motherhood 3616
 Republican National Convention (RNC) 229, 500
 Republican Party, India 54, 958
 Republican Party, USA black voters 762 coalition 63
 formation of 56
 northern workers 2024
 Reconstruction 2027
 Republican People's Party (RPP), Turkey 3351, 3359, 3362, 3363–4
 Republican Sinn Féin 1802, 1803
 Republican Union of Democratic Women's Organizations 3554
 Republican Womanhood 3615
Republika 224
 Repudiation movement 2207
 Research and Analysis Wing, India 3251, 3252
 Research Foundation on Science, Technology, and Ecology 3028
 Réseau des Organisations Paysannes (ROPPA) 3463
 Réseau Québécois d'intégration continentale 3656
 Reserve Officer Training Corps bombings 222, 1946
 Residence Law, Argentina 261
 Resistance Society 112
 Resistencia Libertaria (RL) 104–5
 Resistência Nacional Moçambicana (RENAMO) 738, 1262, 2153–4, 2355, 3547, 3736
Resistencia Peronista 272
Resistenza 1832, 1833, 2834–6
Respublika 3329
 Restoration, England 1100, 1194
 Quakers 1106
Restrictive Covenant Cases 760
Rethinking Marxism 2249
 Reuther, Walter 837, 2037, 2066
Réveil des masses 110
 Revere, Paul 78, 296
 Reverend Billy and the Church of Stop Shopping 1482
 reverse strikes 2502
 Revisionist Zionist Herut Party 359
 Revisionist Zionists 358
Revista Sem Terra 2352
Revolt 106
 Revolta Activa 2360
 Revolta Praieira 493
 Revoltas Liberais 492–3
Révolution, La 2006, 2811
Révolte, Le 2006, 2811
 Revolução Pernambucana 487
Revolución 923, 930
Revolución Argentina 244
 Revolución Libertadora 863, 864, 1156, 2638
revolution from above 3156–64 from below 684, 2282
 class identity 765
 communism 778
 counterrevolution 885–90
 democratic 886
 dialectics of 2836–40 freeing from oppression 2986
 imperialism 1649–52
 Khrushchev 1216
 Narayan 2403 permanent 2083, 2247
 proletariat 821
 see also American Revolution; Chinese Communist Revolution; Chinese Nationalist Revolution; color revolutions; Cuban Revolution; French Revolution; Haitian Revolutions; protest and revolution, stages in; Russian Revolution (1905–7); Russian Revolution of February/March (1917); Russian Revolution of October/November (1917); science and revolution; sexuality, revolution and; Spanish Revolution
Revolution 3164
Revolution, The 169, 3622
Révolution cosmopolite 2171
Revolution Québécoise 2785
Revolutionary Action Movement (RAM) 18, 1634, 2841–2
 Revolutionary Action Party 1472
 Revolutionary Alliance 3727
 Revolutionary Anarchist Socialist Party 1419
 Revolutionary Armed Forces of the People (FARP) 1121, 2285
Revolutionary Armed Forces and Popular Liberation Army: see Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia (FARC)
 Revolutionary Army of the Insurgent People (ERPI) 1121, 2285, 2286, 3428, 3719
 Revolutionary Artibonite Resistance Front 1508
 Revolutionary Autonomous Communities (RAC) 862
 Revolutionary Bolivarian Movement 200 (MBR-200) 414–15
 Revolutionary Brigades 1042
 Revolutionary Command Council (RCC) 1071, 1078, 2406
 Sudan 3191

- Revolutionary Commune of Russian Anarchists 142
 Revolutionary Communist Movement of Greece (EKKE/AASPE) 1445 Revolutionary Communist Party of India 1704–5, 3229
 Revolutionary Coordination of the Masses (CRM) 1165 Revolutionary Cuban Party 919 revolutionary defensism 2903, 2904
 Revolutionary Ethiopia Women's Association (REWA) 1137
 Revolutionary Ethiopia Youth Association (REYA) 1137
 Revolutionary Government of the Armed Forces in Peru 3430
 Revolutionary Institutional Party 3427
 Revolutionary League 153
 Revolutionary Left Party (PIR) 416, 428
 Revolutionary Liberal Movement (MRL) 800
 Revolutionary Mexican Junta 1924
 Revolutionary Movement Carapaica 3445
 Revolutionary Movement of November 13 (MR-13) 1476
 Revolutionary National Committee 28
 Revolutionary Offensive, Cuba 628
 Revolutionary Organization of Toilers of Kurdistan 1763 Revolutionary Party of the Khmer People 3474
 Revolutionary Party of the National Left (PRIN) 416
 Revolutionary Party of the New Vietnam 3467
 Revolutionary Party of Venezuela (PRV-FALN) 413, 3443, 3444
 Revolutionary Peasants' Movement (MCR) 684
 Revolutionary Popular Army (ERP) 3718
 Revolutionary Provisional Government (RPG) 3484 Revolutionary Single Front 386 revolutionary socialism 2243
 Revolutionary Socialist Party (PSR ML) 2362
 Revolutionary Socialist Party of Ecuador (PSRE) 1058
 Revolutionary Socialist Party (RSP), India 343, 1678, 1704–5
 Revolutionary Socialist Party of Peru 2644
 Revolutionary Struggle for Ethiopian Masses (ECHAAT) 1137 Revolutionary Students' Front (FER) 684 Revolutionary Students of Budapest 2136 revolutionary syndicalism 120, 162
 Revolutionary Syndicalist Committees (CSRs) 851
 Revolutionary Tendency (TR) 3444
 Revolutionary Trade Union Opposition (RGO) 3385
 Revolutionary Tribunal 962
 Revolutionary Tupamaro Movement: see Tupamaros
 Revolutionary Union of Ecuadorian Youth (URJE) 1058
 Revolutionary United Front (RUF) 3030–2
 Revolutionary Workers' Front (FTR) 684
 Revolutionary Workers' League 830, 996
 Revolutionary Workers' Movement (MRT) 1058, 3444–5
 Revolutionary Workers' Party (POR) 416, 419, 420, 428
 Revolutionary Workers' Party–Mindanao (RPM-M) 2686 Revolutionary Youth League 2662–3
Révolutionnaire, La 270
Revue du monde noir 3578
Revue Indigène 1516
Revue Socialiste 2784
Rexue ribao (Hot Blood Daily) 2781
 Reyes, Bernardo 2277
 Reyes, Cipriano 274
 Reyes, Elfreda 3559
 Reyes, José Maria 614
 Reyes, Pablo 1016
 Reyes, Raúl 1169
 Reyes, Ricardo 2685
 Reyes Amaya, Edmundo 1121–2, 2286
 Reyes Monterrey, José 447
 Reyes Villa, Manfred 790
 Reynaud, Paul 362
 Reynolds, Earle 1461
 Reynolds, Thomas 1203, 1795
 Reza, Saiyad Hyder 1698
 Reza Shah, Mohammad: see Pahlevi, Mohammad Reza Shah
 Rhee Syng-man 1981, 1999, 3169
 student protests 3181, 3182
Rheinische Zeitung 2230
 Rhenish Mission Society 2390
 rhizome concept 981
 Rho Moo-hyun 2000
 Rho Tae-woo regime 1986, 2000
 Rhodakanaty, Plotino C. 97, 137
 Rhodes, Cecil 453, 694, 700, 704, 3734
 Rhodes, J. 399
 Rhodes, James A. 1946
 Rhodesia
 anarchism 147
 slave labor 3728
 UDI 3730
 white settlers 3734
 see also Zambia; Zimbabwe

- Rhodesia Railway Workers' Union (RRWU) 3728 Rhodesia Railways African Workers' Union (RAWU) 456, 2220–1
 Rhodesian Front (RF) 3730, 3735
 Rhodesian Mine and General Workers' Association (RMGWA) 3728
 Riazanov, David 2238, 2243
 Ribbentrop, Joachim von 451
 Ribbentrop–Molotov Pact 830, 2705
 Ribe, Treaty of 2983
 Riberio de Spinola, Antonio 1492–3
 Ricanstruction 2064
 Ricardo, David 2231, 2451
 Rice, Condoleezza 3629
 Richard, Pablo 478
 Richard II, of England 514
 Richard III, of England 514
 Richards, E. 2819
 Richard's Constitution 23
 Richards, Glen 2074–9
 Richardson, Annette 441–4, 908–10, 1079–80, 2041–2, 2387–8, 2872–4, 3744–5
 Richardson, John 1566
 Richardson, Leigh 364
 Richer, Léon 2721
 Richmond 67
 Richmond, David 739, 3186
 Richmond, Duke of 508
 Rida, Rashid 236, 1809
 Ridge, Lola 115
 Ridley, Nicholas 1094, 1095
 Riegel, N. D. 989
Riel, Louis 583–4, 2841–2
 Rif rebellion 1125, 2336
 Rifondazione Comunista 1307
 Rifqi, Uthman 3395
 Riga 1183
 Rigas Pheraios 1435
 Rigaud, André 995, 1534, 1535, 1545, 1546, 3308, 3310, 3311
 Riggs, E. Francis 2768
 Right to Privacy Committee (RTPC) 2099 right-to-work protests, France 2842–3
 Rightboys 1785
 Righteous and Harmonious Fists 718, 3672
 see also Yi Ho Tuan (Boxer) Rebellion
 Rights Recovery Movement 735
 Rigoberta Menchú Foundation 2272
 Rikabi, Fuad al- 3224
 Rimke, Heidi M. 1091–2, 1411–14, 1568–70
Rinascita 379
 Rincon Hill, Battle of 3415 rinderpest 2392
Ringeren 2525
 Rini, Snyder 3082
 Rio de Janeiro 473, 474
 Riopelle, Jean-Paul 110
Ríos, Filiberto Ojeda 2843–4
 Rioss Montt, Efraim 1481, 2273
Riot Grrl 2844–5
 Ripley, George 1222
 Risley, H. H. 2574
 Risorgimento movement 1332, 2691, 2959 see also Italian Risorgimento
 Rist, Gilbert 1665
Risveglio, Il 107
 Riswick, Treaty of 1540, 1543
 Ritter, Daniel 2490–7, 2505–12
 Ritter, J. 1572
 Ritter von Schoenerer, George 887
 Rivas, José Félix 3457
 Rivas Declaration 2306
 River Rouge protest march 837
 Rivera, Diego 2375, 2449
 Rivera, Francisco 1332
 Rivera, R. Z. 2774
 Rivera, Rudecindo 963
 Rivera, Sivlia 2108
 Rivera Cuesta, Marcos 1018
 Rivera Cusicanqui, Silvia 1936–9
 Rivera Damas, Arturo 2060
 Rivera y Damas, Arturo 2868, 2958
 Riza Efendi, Ali 293
Rizal, José 444, 2668, 2669, 2672, 2676, 2845–6
 Rizzi, Bruno 973
 Roa Sierra, Juan 408, 1320
 road blockades
 Argentina 262
 Bolivia 1936
 Gleneagles G8 1313
 Paraguay 2603
 Thailand 3274
 USA 1054
 see also Reclaim the Streets
 Robert, François 1294
 Roberto, Holden 2359, 2449
 Roberts, W. R. 1192
Robeson, Paul 954, 1555, 1556, 2846–7
 Here I Stand 2847
 Robespierre, Augustin 441
Robespierre, Maximilien de 2847–51
 Babeuf on 328
 Girondins 403
 Jacobin Club 1288
 overthrown 2852, 2990
 Reign of Terror 2851–2, 2970
 rise to power 962 and sans-culottes 2970 treason arrests 1281, 1283, 1292
 Robin Hood school funding programs 781

- Robins, Philip 400
 Robinson, Arthur Napoleon 3320
 Robinson, J. A. G. 2614
 Robinson, Jo Ann 761, 1971, 2614
 Robinson, Samuel: see Rodríguez, Simón
 Robinson, Samuel S. 1013
 Robles, Alfonso 2470, 2475
 Robles, Amelia/Amelio 3017
 Robles, Francisco 1062
 Robles, Gil 291, 292
 Robles, Marcos 2594
 Robnett, Belinda 652
Robotnik 2689, 2698, 3078, 3556
Robotnik Wjbrzeza 3497
 Roca, Julio Argentino 257, 261
 Rocard, Michel 2459
 Rocco Law 1177
 Rocha, Otto de la 638
Rochambeau, Comte de 86, 1547, 2041, 2851–2
 Rochefort, Henri de 2172, 2457
 Rochester Riot 3398
 Rock Against the Round 3652 rock music 221, 1344
 Rockefeller, John D. 3041
 Rockefeller, Nelson 244–5, 3399
 Rockefeller Foundation 2434
 Rocker, Rudolf 96, 108, 158, 3072
 Rockers and Mods 512
 Rockites 656
 Rodda, John 3297
Rodina group 3049–50
 Rodman, Henrietta 3625
Rodney, Walter 1497, 1502, 1660, 2852–3 as alleged security threat 1862–3
 Groundings with My Brothers 1498, 2853
 How Europe Underdeveloped Africa 1497–8, 1660, 2853
 works 2852–3
 Rōdō Nōmintō (Labor–Farmer Party) 1911
Rodo Undo (Labor Movement) magazine 1848
Rodrigazo, el 249
 Rodrigo, Celestino 249, 250
 Rodrigues, Deolinda 3605
 Rodrigues, Olinde 2953
 Rodríguez, Abelardo 2542
 Rodríguez, Alí 3444
 Rodríguez, Andrés 2596–7, 2602, 2608
 Rodríguez, Carlos Rafael 932
 Rodríguez, Jorge 3443
 Rodríguez, Juan 1014
 Rodríguez, Silvio 3574, 3658
Rodríguez, Simón 413, 664, 2854
 Rodríguez, Teresa 262
 Rodríguez Bautista, Nicolás 1082
 Rodríguez Cristobal, Angel 2772
Rodríguez Domínguez, Silvio 2380, 2853
 Rodríguez Veltze, Eduardo 435, 789 rodriguista culture, Chile 1226, 1227
 Rodzyanko, M. 2910
Roe v. Wade 1299, 3630
 Roediger, David 773, 774
 Rogdaev, Nikolai 142
 Roger–Ducos, Pierre 895, 1079
 Rogers, Joel 2620
 Rogers, William 400
 Rogers Plan 400
 Roggero, Gigi 3168–72
 Rogue States 738
 Roh Moo-hyun regime 1980, 1991, 1992, 2000, 2001
 Rohan, Chevalier de 3494
 Röhm, Ernst 1591, 2104
 Rohwedder, Detlev 1369
 Rojas, Ernesto 1120
 Rojas, Isaac 2638
 Rojas, Manuel 112
 Rojas, R. 688
 Rojas Pinilla, Gustavo 410, 800
 Rokossovsky, Konstantin 2699
 Roland, Madame 1297
 Roldan-Figueroa, Rady 843–5, 1491–2, 2323–4, 2828–31
 Rolfe, John 211
 Rolim, Padre 485
 Rolin, Françoise 1293
 Rolland, Romain 2217
 Rolling Thunder Operation 1600
 Rollins, Sonny 611
 Rolls, Albert 3327–8
 Rolón, Raimundo 2600
 Roma people
 Austria 320
 Croatia 3683
 expelled from Kosovo 2003
 Nazi Germany 1175, 1179
 Romania 2857
 Román, Juan Miguel 1014
 Roman, Peter 921–2, 935–40
 Roman Empire, Western 872, 3145
 Roman Republic 1332
Romania 2854–67
 anti-Soviet protests 2866
 boyars 2862, 2864
 counterrevolution 2867 cultural developments 2863–4
 feudalism 2863
 Hungary, resistance to 2863–4, 2865
 Jewish people 2856, 2857
 Legion of the Archangel Michael 1173, 2857

- mineworker protests 2854–6, 2858–9
 Napoleon III 2865
 Ottoman empire 2864–5
 peasant uprising 2856, 2863
 protest and revolution 2856–62, 2862–5
 Revolution (1989) 2859–60
 Roma people 2857
 Russian language classes 2866 student and worker protests 2865–7
 Transylvanian School 2863
 Turkish rule 2862
 Unification Day 2856
 Romanian Orthodox Church 1173, 2863
 Romanones, Conde de 351–2
 Romanos, Eduardo 847–50, 1187–9
 Romanov dynasty 1749
 Romanow, Roy John 2975–6
 Romanska, Magda 140–1, 348–9, 644–5, 1191–2
 Romanticism 1143, 2231
 Rome bombings 1837
 Rome General Peace Accords 1262
 Romegas, Hospitaller 2183
 Römer, Beppo 1377
 Romero, Carlos Humberto 1164, 2957
 Romero Bosque, Pio 2225
Romero, Óscar (Archbishop) 2867–9, 2868
 assassinated 2060, 2957
 Ronchi, Edo 2622
rondas campesinas (peasant patrols) 2362, 2644
 Rondeau, José 288
 Ronefelt, D. 3716
 Rongelap Atoll 199, 2303
 Rongerik Atoll 199, 2303
 Ronsin, Charles Philippe 1292
 Roosevelt, Eleanor 758, 3166
 Roosevelt, Franklin D.
 AFC 2489
 charisma 650
 Good Neighbor policy 1523
 Haiti 1515
 Mexico 607
 Morocco 2336
 New Deal 839, 887, 1568, 2036, 2248,
 2756–7, 3411
 Selective Service Act 757
 on Somoza 2466
 Taiwan 3239
 unemployment 3386
 Roosevelt, Theodore
 Anarchist Exclusion Act 1412
 meatpacking industry 3040
 Rosa, Maria Soledad 132
 Rosa Luxemburg group 3598
 Rosales, Manuel 3446
Rosario Uprising 251, 863–9
 Rosario Sanchez, Francisco del 1016
 Rosas, Juan Manuel de 1332
Rosca, La 425–6, 428, 430
 Rose, Ernestine 3619–20
 Rose, Flemming 992
 Rose, Hugh 1690
 Rose, Jacques 2787
 Rose, Margaret 1610
 Rose, Paul 2786, 2787
 Rose Revolution, Georgia 811, 812, 2510, 3011,
 3021, 3329
 Rosenbach, Ulrike 1191
 Rosenbaum, Peter 3525–6
 Rosenberg, Marcel 3140
 Rosenblum, April 1914–16
 Roses, Wars of the 514, 1092, 1804
Roshaniya movement 2869
 Ross, C. 1337
 Ross, Catherine 578–9
 Ross, Fred 661
 Ross, Horatio Nelson 900
 Ross, Larry 2528
 Ross, M. L. 2115
Rossanda, Rossana 2196, 2870
 Anno degli studenti, L' 2870
 Ragazza del secolo scorso, La 2870
 Rosseli, Nello 2871
Rosselli, Carlo 1383, 2835, 2870–1, 3342
 Rosselló, Pedro 3465
 Rossetti, Dante Gabriel 2341
 Rossi, Giovanni 131
 Rossi, Michael 948–52, 2251–2
 Rostock Action Conferences 1316
 Rostock Alternative Summit 1317
 Rostow, Walt Whitman 1665–6, 1669
Rote Fahne, Die 1376, 2046
Roter Wedding movement 2046
 Roth, Stephen Ludwig 1620, 1621
 Rothschild family 1920
 Roudy, Yvette 3576
 Rouerie, Marquis de la 892
 Rouget de Lisle, Claude Joseph 2380
 Rough Wooing 3000
Roumain, Jacques 1516, 1517, 2872
 Roume, Philippe-Rose 1530, 1531, 1534, 3310–11
 Roumer, Emile 1516
 Round for Free 3653
 Round Mountain attack 59
 Roundheads 289, 1097
Rousseau, Jean-Jacques 2872–4
 anarchism 94, 95
 and Babeuf 328 and Buonarroti 545
 Confessions 2873
 Discourse on the Arts and Sciences 2873

Rousseau, Jean-Jacques (cont'd)

education 1203
 egalitarianism 2619
Emile 2873
Encyclopédie contributions 2873
 Enlightenment 1126, 2316
 and Holbach 1602
 as influence 3448
Julie 2873
 noble savage 95, 1203, 2872 proto-socialism 1639
 and Robespierre 2848
 and Rodriguez 413
 on science 2992
Social Contract 1113, 1421, 2873 social inequality 1409, 3494
 and Wollstonecraft 3541

Rousset, Pierre 705–12, 721–31, 1611–17,
 2670–6, 2676–8, 2678–88, 2746–8,
 3256–65, 3272–8, 3538–9, 3640–4

Roux, Jacques 1277, 1290, 1296
 Roux, Philip R. 149
 Rowbotham, Sheila 772, 2249, 2263
 Rowe, Trevor 559
 Rowlatt Act 1325, 1677, 1701–2, 2403
 Rowlatt Satyagraha 1709, 2430
 Roxas, Manuel 1614, 2675
 Roy, Chittapriya 1676
 Roy, Ishan Chandra 372
Roy, Manabendra Nath 2874–6
 CPI 1677
 and Dange 961 followers 450, 2875
 independence 2792
 Marxism 2249
 and Stalin 2875
 works 2875–6

Roy, Prafulla Chandra 1698
 Roy, Raoul 2784
 Roy, T. 1688, 1689
 Royal, Gérard 1273
 Royal, Ségolène 3577
 Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) 2099,
 2557, 2563, 2831
 Royal Commission on Trade Unions 519
 Royal/Dutch Shell 1053
 Royal Franchise Commission 3315
 Royal Indian Navy 1705–6
 Royal Irish Constabulary 1026, 1048
 Royal Philippine Company 2666–7
 Royal Society of London 2989–90
 Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) 1797, 1802, 2572
 Ruam Wongphan 3260
 rubber goods factory 2941

rubber plantations 620
 Rubia, Charles 1948, 1950, 1951
 Rubin, Robert 1430
 Rubiner, Ludwig 1609
 Rubinson, Paul 193–9, 1052–5, 1212–19, 2756–63
 Rubisohn, Zeev 3148
 Rubison, Paul 646–54, 776–83
Ruche, La 1517
 Ruche, La (model school) 3217
 Ruckus Society 3663
 Rudd, Kevin 304
 Rudd, Mark 818
 Rudé, George 296, 1284, 1286, 1287, 2249, 3211
 Rude Boys, Jamaica 1861–2
 Rüdiger, Helmut 3082, 3083
 Rüdiger von der Goltz, General 1202
 Ruge, Arnold 333, 2230, 3147
 Rugege, S. 2110
 Rüger, Sigrid 3580
 Rugova, Ibrahim 2002
 Rühle, Otto 3082
 Ruiz, Henry 2469
 Ruiz, Hermann 798–800, 801–3, 808–10, 3388–9
 Ruiz, Samuel 480
 Ruiz, Vince 107
 Ruiz Cortinez, Adolfo 2296, 2298
 Ruiz Guevara, Esteban 664
 Ruiz Ortiz, Ulises 2290, 2295, 2535, 2536
 Ruling, Anna 2104
 Rumbold, Horace 3358
Rumiñahui 2876–7
 Rumney, Ralph 3044
 Rump Parliament 909, 910, 1099, 1100, 2120
 Rumveldt Riots 1500
 Rummyantsev, Sergei 541
runanga (tribal assemblies) 2206, 2207
 Runyoro language 3371
 Rupert, Prince 909
 Rupp, L. J. 1742
 Ruppert, Kathleen 1415–16, 1803–7, 2571–3
 Ruptura 3444
 Rural Associations of Collective Interest (ARICs)
 2288, 2290
 Rural Mobile Police Patrol Units (UMOPAR)
 2320
 Rural Society of Planters and Cattle Breeders of Pernambuco (SAAP) 2351
 Rural Workers' International Union 3039
 Rush, Benjamin 87
 Ruskin, John 1324, 2340, 3061
 Ruskin Colony of Tennessee 2454, 3418
Russell, Bertrand 190, 195, 196, 2877
 CND 513
 on Itō Noe 1848

- Vietnam Solidarity Campaign 218
War Crimes in Vietnam 222
- Russell, Dora 3568
- Russell, John 2827–8
- Russell, Thomas 1786, 3302, 3392
- Russell–Einstein Manifesto 190, 2877
- Russia 2877–8, 2920–8, 2940–5
 anarchism 141–3
 anti-Jewish pogroms 1851, 2881–2, 3741 aristocracy 2921, 2942 as autocracy 2920
 bourgeoisie 2923, 2942
 cholera riots 2877–8
 class divisions 2932
 factories 2923–4
 famine 2922
 feudalism 2921
 and Finland 2932
 food shortages 1751, 2895, 2934–6
 Greek Orthodox Church 2925
 harvest failures 2922
 IMF 3126
 intelligentsia 2924–5, 2930, 2943
 IWW 1736
 multinationalism 2925
 mutual aid 2879
 nationalization 2935
 New Economic Policy 3510
 oil industry 3127
 Old Belief 3028
 peasants 3506–8
 political parties 2925–6 post-Soviet 3126–8
 racism 2921
 revolutionary labor upsurge 2940–5 revolutions/sources 2920–7 serfdom ended 2921
 social revolution 1663
 strikes 2940–5, 3511 temperance movement 2927–8 tsarist 1668
 urban society 2922
 wages 2923
 women's rights 3390, 3554 worker militancy 2922–4, 2940–1
 World War I 3115
see also Bolotnikov's Rebellion; Bolsheviks; Bulavin's Rebellion; Mensheviks; Moscow fire and protest, 1547; Pugachev's Rebellion;
 Razin's Rebellion; Russian Civil War;
 Russian Revolution (1905–7); Russian Revolution of February/March (1917);
 Russian Revolution of October/November
 (1917); Soviet Union; war communism
- Russian Church 2921
- Russian Civil War 2928–40
 Bolshevik Revolution 2085–6
 Constituent Assembly 2930–2 famine and poverty 2003 foreign intervention 2936–7, 2940
 Lenin on 2086–7
 party dictatorship 2937–9
 red terror 2939
 socioeconomic consequences 2939–40, 3509–10
- Russian Marxism 975–9
Russian News 3551
- Russian Revolution (1905–7) 2878–89
 background for 2878–9
 Bloody Sunday 1746–7, 2879–81
 class divisions 2881–3, 2889
 Days of Freedom 2882, 2883
 labor protest 2883
 October Manifesto 2881–3, 2884
 Spiridonova 3152–3
 terrorism 3153
- Russian Revolution of February/March (1917) 2889–902 autocracy fallen 2890–1
 casualties 2890
 dual power 2896–9, 2902 factory workers 2899–901
 insurrection 2894–6
 Lenin 2893–4
 Liberal Opposition 2891–2
 Nicholas I overthrown 2889 peasants/workers 1279–80, 1285–6, 2895, 2899
 Shlyapnikov 3029 socialist positions 2892–3 women's protests 1743, 2084, 2895–6, 3554
 worker protests 2889–91, 2897
- Russian Revolution of October/November (1917) 721, 778, 2902–20, 3550–5
 April Theses 2902–3
 April Days 2904–5
 attempted coup 2912–14
 Bolshevik debates 2916–17 coalition government 2905–6
 counterrevolution 2910–12
 Decree on Land 2918
 Decree on Peace 2918
 economic crisis 2906–8
 influence on Europe 318, 1818
 July Days 2911–12
 Kornilov 2912–14
 land reform 2902, 2903
 Lenin's return from exile 2902–3
 Liberty Loan 2904
 New Economic Policy 3156

Russian Revolution of October/November

- (1917) (cont'd)
 origins of 2762
 peasant revolution 2908–10
 science 2993–4
 sexuality 3016
 Skocpol 1214
 Trotsky on 439
 Whites 2920
 women 1751, 3550–5
 workers' control 2906–8 workers' support 2928
see also Bolshevik Revolution
- Russian Social Democratic Labor Party (RSDLP) 436–9, 1979, 2082, 2083, 2693, 3321, 3552, 3720
- Russian Social Democratic Workers' Party
 (RSDWP) 1914, 3029
 Second Congress 2926
- Russian Worker Social Democratic Party
 (RWSDP) 975
- Russo, Vito 9
- Russo-Anglo battles 642
- Russo-Japanese War 734, 1746, 1896, 2689, 2717, 2879
- Russo Spena, Giovanni 2622
- Russo-Swedish Wars 3208
- Russo-Turkish War 34, 2711
- Rustemi, Avni 29
- Rustin, Bayard 762, 1259, 1975, 2803
- Ruthenberg, Charles Emil 596, 836
- Rutherford, Jeff 1170–84
- Rutz, Michael 2827–8
- Rwanda 852, 858
- Rwanda Patriotic Army 859
- Ryabushinskii, Pavel 2906, 2912, 2939
- Ryan, Joseph 3414
- Ryan, Peter 1818–21, 1827–9
- Ryan, Susan 3563
- Ryder, Guy 809
- Ryesgade revolt 992
- Rykov, Alexei 535, 3159, 3162, 3606
- Ryzhkov, N. 3124
- Saad, Marouf 2070
- Saadi dynasty 2332–3
- Saakashvili, Mikheil 3330
- Saba Saba rally 1950–1, 1952
- Sabbat, A. 2698
- Sabbir Shah 1934
- Sabinada rebellion 491
- Sabino Vieira, Francisco 491
- sabotage 143–4
 alienation 784 ecological 1039, 1040 factory machinery 658
 German workers 1371
 Italy 130
see also Luddism, machine breaking
- Sabra camp massacre 1814, 2071
- Sacasa, Juan Bautista 2541, 2966
- Sacco, Ferdinando Nicola 104, 158, 254, 836, 1321, 2947–8
- Sacco and Vanzetti case 104, 254, 258, 836, 1204, 2947–8
- Sachikonye, L. 3732
- Sachs, Jeffrey 422, 1402–3, 1671
- Sachs, Solly 2948–9, 3093
- Sackoum, Margueritte 884
- Sacks, Karen Brodtkin 2249
- SACP: see South African Communist Party
- Sacred Bond of Greek Army Officers (IDEA) 1445
- Sadat, Anwar al- 359, 1070, 1073, 1078, 2407
- Saddam Hussein
 and Baath Party 1777, 1781, 1782–3, 3226–7
 Cold War 1782
 coming into power 2779
 Lebanese Shi'a 2405
 Soviet support 1782
 US invasion 2504
 US support 1770, 1775, 1782
- Saddiq al-Mahdi 3191
- Sadhvabana 2438
- Sa'di, Ali Saleh al- 3225, 3226
- Sadiq Pacha Bey 3334
- Sadler, Mary 1872
- Sadok Bey 3334
- Sadr, Baqir al- 2405
- Sadr, Hasan al- 1778
- Sadr, Muhammad al- 1778, 1779
- Sadr, Musa al- 2405
- Saefkow-Jacob group 1377
- Sáenz, Manuela 2949–50
- Sáenz Peña, Roque 266
- Sáenz Peña Law 104, 247, 271, 273
- Safe Drinking Water Act 617
- Sagarará battle 3338
- Saget, Nissage 1513
- Sa'he, Vicente 1042
- Saheb, Nana 1688, 1689, 1690, 1709
- Sahiun, Jorge Christ 797
- Sa'id, Sheikh 3358, 3359, 3361
- Saigon 1600, 2260, 3487
- Saigon, Battle of 1716
- Saigon, Treaty of 3475
- sailors: see Atlantic port seaman resistance;
 Marine Transport Workers (MTW)
- Sailors', Soldiers', and Airmen's Union (SSAU) 510

- Sailors' Union of the Pacific 1754
St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre 2950
 St. Adrià del Besòs Power Station 183
 St. Andrews 3000, 3001
 St. Anthony's Indian Mission 3034
Saint-Domingue 1537–40, 1540–5
 abolition of slavery 204, 1533, 1535
 Civil Commissions 1530–3 colonial system 1525–9
 Créoles 1544
 formation of 1542–3
 and French Revolution 1539, 1540–5
 French Rule 1262–3, 1540–5
 Hegel on Revolution 1572–3
 Jefferson 996, 1546
 Ogé's Revolt 2552–5
 petits blancs 1526, 1527, 1541, 1543, 1544 produce 1530, 1541–2 slave mortality rates 1542 slave revolt 88, 203–4, 1263–4, 1525–30, 1537–40, 3145, 3306
 slaves' origins 1544
 Spain and Britain 1533, 1535
 see also Haiti
 St. Enda's school 2627
 St. Francis Acres 3419
 St. George's Hill 3536–7
 St. Ita's school 2627
 St. John, James 1073
Saint-Just, Louis Antoine 894, 2849, 2951–2
 St. Kitts 1866, 2075, 2076, 2077
 Saint Léger, Edmond de 1530, 1531
 St. Louis Commune 2027
 St. Lucia 351, 1264, 1866
 St. Martin island 1031, 1033
 St. Peter's Field, Manchester 2661 see also Peterloo Massacre
 St. Petersburg
 cholera riots 2878
 lockouts 2883
 massacre 2083, 2880
 metalworking 2941
 militant workers 2941
 Nicholas II 2924
 printers' strike 2881, 2882
 strikes 2884, 2891, 2924, 2944 see also Petrograd
 Saint Petersburg, Florida 3373
 Saint-Saëns, Camille 3147
Saint-Simon, Henri de 2952–3
 and Comte 842, 2953
 followers 1439, 1574, 2230, 2953
 utopian socialism 2231
 works 2953
 St. Vincent 351, 1264, 1866
 Sainteny, Jean 3471
 Saintine, Thierry 278–80
 Sainville, Léonard 2427
 Saitoti, George 1952
 Sakai, Yohichi 1889–96
 Sakazov, Yanko 540
 Sakdalistes 2673
 Sakharov, Andrei 196, 198, 2698
 Salafism 1809–10
 Salafist Group for Combat and Predication
 (GSPC) 2182
 Salam, Abdus 1704
 Salam, Saeb 2069
Salam 'Adel 2953–6
 Salamanca, Daniel 427
 Salamat, Hashim 2329, 2331
 Salandra, Antonio 3015
 Salas, Rodolpho (Rudy) 2680, 2685
 Salavarría, Tirso 3707
 Salazar, António de Oliveira 563, 2355, 2730–1
 Salazar, Othón 2298
 Salazar, Vicente Lucio 1063
 Salcedo, Antonio 1016
 Salcedo, Guadalupe 409
 Salinas de Gortari, Carlos 1395, 2284, 2287, 2292, 2538, 3714, 3716
 Sallust 3146
 Salmerón, Catalina 3611
 Salmi parish incident 2516
 Salmon, Joseph 1104 salmon runs, fouled 1119
 Salnave, Sylvain 1513
 Salonika 1440
 Saloth Sar: see Pol Pot
 Salt, Henry 1075
Salt of the Earth (film) 1752
 Salt Pan Creek 307
 salt satyagraha 1329, 1681–3, 2431, 2493–4
 women's participation 1682, 2389
 saltpeter production 692, 3598
Salvador 2776
 Salvador, Apo Ipe 2672
 Salvador, David 934
Salvadoran Civil War 1163, 2956–9
 see also El Salvador
Salvemini, Gaetano 2871, 2959–60, 3341
 Sam-bo-it-bae (three steps, one bow protest)
 3652
 Samahan ng Demokratikong Kabataan (SDK)
 2677
 Samakee-kum (Solidarity) 3260
 Samakkhitham party 3272–3
 Samarakkody, Edmund 2053
 Samaria 1816–17
 Samasamajist Party 2052

- Samba 2377
 Sambo, Robert 3729
 same-sex relations 2092, 2094–5 see also lesbian, gay, transsexual, bisexual movements (LGTB)
 Sami people 2519
 Samiti, Anushilan 1674, 1675, 1678
samitis (associations) 1699
samizdats (illegal publications) 1618, 2252, 3050
Samkange, Stanlake John William
 Thompson 2960–2
 Sammaniyya brotherhood 2163
 Samoilova, Konkordia 3553, 3606
 Samoza Garcia, Anastasio 605
 Samper, Ernesto 808–9, 1169
 Sampson, Nicos 948
 Samways, Tom 2522
 Samyukt Vidhayak Dal 1923
 San Andrés Accords 2285, 2286, 3713, 3718
 San Antonio, Battle of 1332
 San Francisco 161, 3401, 3629
 San Francisco Mime Troupe 1482
 San Francisco Peace Treaty 1885, 1909
 San hunter-gatherers 2390
 San José I accord 1166
 San Luis Obispo 1
 San Luis Potosí Plan 2276
 San Martín, José de 2555, 3458
 San Precario 1147–8, 1841
 San Remo Conference 1778
 San Stefano, Treaty of 34
 Sanabria, Herbert Anaya 2958
 Sanabria, Victor Manuel 879
 Sanabria Martínez, Victor 2058
 Sanbetsu Federation 1878, 3069
 Sanbetsu Kaigi 1891, 1893, 1894–5
 Sánchez, Celia 929, 3573–4
 Sánchez, Josefa Joaquina 3631
 Sanchez Cerro, Luis M. 1567
 Sánchez de Lozada, Gonzalo 422, 432, 434, 787, 789, 2320
Sánchez Saornil, Lucía 2367, 2962–3, 3611
 Sanchez-Vasquez, Adolpho 2839
 Sancho, Ignatius 202, 206
 Sanclemente, Manuel Antonio 806
 Sanctuary 2502
 Sand, Carl Ludwig 558
 sandalwood harvest 3425
 Sandburg, Carl 1555, 2253
 Sanders, Grace L. B. 3583–6
Sandhya 1674
 Sandinista Defense Committees (CDS) 2474–5
Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN) 2564, 2963–5
 agrarian reform 2473, 2476
 Borge 447
 Cardenal 606
 Chilean troops 1226 corrido 637
 democracy 2474–5
 Fonseca 1205 guerilla foco 2467–8
 Jesuits 2473
 music 637–8
 National Directorate 2470
 Ortega and 2564
 Samoza ousted 1164, 2470
 Tercerista 2469, 2564
 Torrijos 3304
 see also Nicaraguan Revolution
 Sandinista Popular Army 2473, 2564
 Sandinista Popular Revolution 637
 Sandinista Renovation Movement 2965
 Sandinista Revolutionary Front 2061
 Sandinista Worker Federation (CST) 2474
Sandino, Augusto César 161, 2466, 2564, 2965–7
 Bolivarianism 414
 and FSLN 2964, 2966
 killed 1205
 and Martí 2225
 music 637
Sands, Bobby 1798, 1801, 2967–8
 Sandwip Revolt 369–70
 SANE (Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy)
 195, 1303, 2501
 Sanes, Angel 3464
 Sanes, David 2773
 Sanfelice, Luisa 3591
 Sangala, Frederick 2174
Sangamo Journal 2122
Sangathan campaign 1583
Sanger, Margaret 1412, 2968–9, 3595, 3625–6
 Sangkum National Congress 570
 Sangkum Reastr Niyum (Popular Socialist Community) 569
 Sanguinetti, Julio Maria 3340, 3406
 Sangyo Hokoku Kai (Industrial Patriotic Federation) 1890
Sanjibani 1697
 Sankara, Thomas 547
 Sankoh, Foday 3031
 Sanlakas 2686
 Sanrizuka Organic Farm Association 1903
 Sanrizuka unrest 1901, 1902–4, 1907–9
sans-culottes 2969–70
 Bastille 1275
 Brissot 506
 class struggle 778
 Jacobins 1277–8, 1287–8

- and Montagnards 1290–1
and Robespierre 894, 2850
sans-jurons 1295
Sans-Souci 1266
Sanson, G. B. 1898–9
Santa Clara 933
Santa Inés, Battle of 3707
Santa Maria La Antigua 2592
Santa Maria Massacre 112, 692
Santal Rebellion 1708, 2970–1
Santamaria, Haydée 929, 3574
Santana, Pedro 1015
Santander, Francisco de Paula 3458
Santella, Agustin 250–3
Santiago demonstration 690
Santiago General Strike 112
Santibañez, Felipe 999
Santo Agostinho, José María de 467
Santo Domingo 601, 1542
Santora, Joseph C. 654–5, 1025–6
Santos, Eduardo 407
Santos, Evangelista and Abad 2674
Santos, Juan: see Juan Santos Atahualpa Rebellion
Santos, Mateo 116
Santos, Pedro Abad 2673
Santos López, Colonel 2467
Santry, James 793
Santucho, Mario Roberto 245, 272
Sanusi, Muhammad ibn Ali al-: see al-Sanusi, Muhammad ibn Ali
Sanusi Sufis 50–1
Sanyal, Kanu 2422
Sanyal, Sachindranath 3041
São Paulo 474, 476
São Tomé e Príncipe 2971–2
Sarabha, Kartar Singh 3041
Sarabhai, Ambalal 1325
Sarafis, Stefanos 1437
Saragih, Henry 3462
Saraiva de Carvalho, Otelo 2729
Saraswati, Dayanand 1583, 1697
Saraswati, Sahajanand 451
Saratoga, Battle of 508
Sardar, Bishwanath 1712
Sardinia banditry 1847
barbagia 1846–7
House of Savoy 1825
Victor Emanuel II 1826
Sarekat Dagang Islam 1725, 1728
Sarekat Priyayi (Union of Priyayi) 1728
Sargent, Aaron A. 3164
Sargon of Akkad 1654
Sarit Thanarat 659, 3260
Sarkar, Nil Ratan 1698
Sarkar, Raju 372
Sarkar, Sumit 1324–5, 1330, 1673
Sarkozy, Nicolas 645, 1235, 1238–9, 2263, 2382, 3577
Sarla Mudgal case 1585
Saro-Wiwa, Ken 1053, 2479, 2483, 2972–3
Sárraga, Belén de 124, 3598
Sarrat, revolt of 2667
Sarraud, Albert 3466
SARS outbreak 1606
Sartelli, Eduardo 247–8, 248–9, 265–7, 270–3
Sartre, Jean-Paul 2973–4
“Black Orpheus” 2428
and Césaire 645 and Beauvoir 356, 2974 and de Gaulle 2261 and Deleuze–Guattari 980
dialectics 2839
existentialism 2260, 2974
on Flaubert 2974
Manifesto of the 121, 226
Marxism 2249, 2974
Neto 2449
Temps Modernes, Les 226, 1420
on violence 1163
works 2973–4
Saskatchewan Grain Growers’ Association (SGGA) 2975
Saskatchewan socialist movement 2975–6
SASOL 3110, 3113
sati (self-immolation of widow) 1582
Satrom, Leroy 1946
Sattar Khan 1768
Sattler, Michael 92, 1357
Saturday Mothers, Turkey 3344 satyagraha (peaceful protests) 1324, 1679, 1681–2, 1701, 1966, 2429, 2492–4
Satyagraha Sabha 1701
Satyasodhak Samaj 955
Sau, Antonio 116
Saud, Abd al-Aziz ibn 2976–7
Saudi Arabia 2976–7
Saunders, J. P. 3042
Saurin, Bernard Joseph 3146
Savage, Benjamin 3047
Savanhu, Jasper 3729
Savarkar, Ganesh 1674
Savarkar, V. D. 1331, 1583–4, 1674, 1689
Save the Seeds (Beej Bachao Andolan) movement 736
Savelev, P. I. 2227
Saverio Merlino, Francesco 100, 1321, 2168, 2171
Saville, John 3282
Savimbi, Jonas 167, 2449

- Savio, Mario 377, 378, 3169
 Savo, Battle of 3081
 Savona, Sigismondo 2186
 Saw, U 557, 2527, 2977–8
 Saw Maung, U 3068
Samat el-Mara (Woman's Voice Magazine) 3199
 Sawyer, Amos 2115
 Sawyer, Stephen W. 1242–5, 1607–8
 Say, Jean-Baptist 403
Saya San (Hsaya San) movement 553, 2977, 2978–81
 Sayre, Stephen 508
 Sayyid, Mufti Muhammad 1933
 Sazonov, D. 2892
 scabs, strikes 503, 1753, 2495
 Scajola, Claudio 1310
 Scalmer, Sean 305–7, 312–16
 Scargill, Arthur 529
 Scarman Report 512, 531
 Scarnecchia, Timothy 2384–5, 3727–31, 3731–3
 Scavenius, Erik 991
 Scelba, Mario 1833
 Scerri, Mikiel 2185
 Schaack, Nick 2832
 Schachtman, Max 596
 Schaefer, Richard 1148–51, 1302–3
 Schaerer, Eduardo 2609
 Schama, Simon 1285
 Schappeler, Christoph 2830
 Scharenberg, Albert 391–7
 Scharff, Werner 1380
 Schechner, Richard 1191
 Schedules Castes Federation 54, 958, 2433
 Scheerbarth, Paul 1609
 Scheidemann, Philipp 1361, 1373, 3055
 Schell, Paul 3663
 Schenkel, Emilie 451
 Scheu, Andreas 2341, 2820, 3061
 Scheuer, Sandra 1947
 Schiff, Paolina 3592
 Schiffmann, Michael 8
 Schiffrin, H. Z. 732
Schill, Ferdinand Baptista von 189, 2981–2
 Schiller, Friedrich von 357, 3189
 Schilling, George 2026, 2027
 Schinas, Alexandros 126
Schindler, Oskar 2982
Schindler's List (film) 2982
 Schirdewan, Karl 1340
 Schleicher, Kurt von 2833
 Schleithem Confession 92, 1357
 Schlesinger, Arthur M. 396
 Schleswig Assembly 2984
Schleswig-Holstein uprisings 989, 2982–6
 Danish language 2984
 emigrants 2985
 Frederica, Battle of 2985
 Idstedt, Battle of 2985
 Schleyer, Hanns-Martin 1368
 Schmid, Bernard 41–7
 Schmidt, Helmut 3056, 3523
 Schmidt, Ingo 826–9, 1369–72, 1594–5, 2832–3
 Schmitt, Jenö Henrik 128
 Schmorell, Alexander 3525, 3526
 Schneider, M. 1370
 Schneider, René 680
 Schneiderman, Rose 3313
 Schodt, David W. 1062
 Schoeters, Georges 2784
 scholarships 3517
 Scholl, Hans 3525, 3526
 Scholl, Sophie 3525
 Scholtz-Klink, Gertrud 1591
 Schonbrunn, Treaty of 443
 Schönherr, Bishop 1343
 Schopenhauer, Arthur 2477
 Schrecker, Ellen 73
 Schroeder, Gerhard 1913, 3056
 Schroeder, William Knox 1947
 Schroeder-Arce, Roxanne 406–7, 2312–13
 Schult, Reinhard 1345
 Schultze, Guillermo 259
 Schulze-Boysen, Harro 1377
 Schuman Plan 360
 Schumann, Peter 500
 Schutzbund march 319
 Schutzman, Mady 407
 Schutzstaffeln (SS) 320, 1591, 2591, 2982, 3512
Schutztruppe, Namibia 2392, 2393
 Schwab, Michael 1569, 1570, 2029
 Schweikart, David 2620
 Schweitzer, A. 651
 Schwerner, Mickey 747, 1258, 1975
 Schybi, Christian 3212 science and revolution 2986–99
 Anabaptists 2987–8
 Aristotelian/empirical 2987
 Bacon 2988–9
 Chinese Revolution 2994–6, 2999
 Cuban Revolution 2996–8, 2999
 Descartes 2988–9
 English Revolution 2988
 French Revolution 2990, 2991–2
 Lavoisier 2990–1
 Marat 2990–1
 Marxism 2996
 Mechanick Preachers 2988–9
 Newtonianism 2989–90
 Paracelsians 2987–8
 Royal Society 2989–90

- Russian Revolution 2993–4, 2999
 Scientific Revolution 2986–7
 Socialist Revolution 2992–3
Science and Society 2249
 Scientific Humanitarian Committee (WhK)
 2093, 2104
 scientific management 1398
 scientific socialism 2240, 2992
 Scientists Against Nuclear Arms 2528
SCLC: see Southern Christian Leadership Conference
 Scobie, Ronald 1437, 1444
 Scotch Cattle 3498–9
Scotland 1384–5, 2818–22, 2999–3002
 anti-war movement 2820–1
 Bishops' War 1097, 3000
 Calvinism 1111, 3001
 Catholic Church 3001
 Charles I 1096
 class consciousness 2820
 coal industry 2819, 2821
 Cromwell 909–10
 Culloden, Battle of 1854
 emigrants 2821
 Enlightenment 1114
 Episcopal Church 1854, 1855
 home rule 2819
 Independent Labour Party 2820, 2821
 National Covenant 1097
 Newark, Battle of 1098
 October Revolution's impact 2820
 printed word 3001
 radical left 2818–22, 3061
 Reformation 2999–3002
 road protests 1040
 Social Democratic Federation 2819, 2820
 socialism 2819
 Socialist Labour Party 2820
 Socialist League 860, 2820
 Socialist Party 1040
 strikes 519, 1384–5, 2818–19
 unemployment 2820, 2821
 see also Glencoe Massacre; Jacobite risings,
 Britain
 Scott, Michael 2398, 3300
 Scott, Rose 3561
 Scott, Walter 2340
 Scottish Enlightenment 1114
 Scottish Land and Labour League (SLLL) 2820
 Scottish Martyrs 2366
 Scottish Militia Act 3394
 Scotto, Clemente 3447
Scottsboro Resistance 838, 840, 3002–3
 Scramble for Africa 453, 883, 1659, 2172
 Berlin Conference 883, 2353
 Screen Actors' Guild 1603
 Scruggs, T. M. 637–41, 2750–2
SDS: see Students for a Democratic Society
 Seabrook reactor 1051
 Seaga, Edward 608, 2198
 Seale, Bobby 395, 398, 613 seamen strikes 518
 Search Light Operation 347
 Seattle
 general strike 22
 Indymedia 1739–40
 PGA 2635
 Reclaim the Streets 2807
 see also World Trade Organization (WTO) protests, Seattle
 Sebastian, of Portugal 187, 2333
 Sebata, Cranmer 2110
 Secchia, Pietro 3299
 Séchan, Renaud 2382
 Second Adventism 2596
 Second Congress of Russian Social Democratic Workers' Party 2926
 Second Institutional Act, Brazil 3039
 Second Intergalactic Encuentro for Humanity and Against Neoliberalism 1386, 2809
 Second Party Congress, Bolsheviks 437
 Second People's Summit of the Americas 3654
 Secrett, Charles 1040
 Section Française de l'Internationale Ouvrière (SFIO) 824, 851
 secularism 1109, 1116
 Securitate secret police 2857, 2859–60, 2867
 Security Administration Department (DAS)
 801, 802
 Security and Prosperity Partnership (SPP) 3659
 Seddon, D. 1209
 Seddon, Richard 830
 Sedition Act 1300, 1301, 1412, 2489, 3734
 Seditious Organization Act 3729
 Seeckt, Hans von 1364, 1365
 Seekers after Contradictions Club 2301, 2695
 Seepaul, Occah 3320
 Seferis, Georgis 1434
 segregation
 armed forces 757
 Johnson 762
 Paulus 2625–6
 USA 755, 2822
 Ségui, René Degni 881
 Seguí, Salvador 351
 Segundo, Juan Luis 2059
 Sehestedt, Battle of 2983
Sei Maggio (May 6) 2186
 Seigenthaler, John 742, 1257
Seito (Blue Stocking) 1848, 3595

Seitsha (Blue Stocking Society) 1848, 3595
 Sejong, King 1996
 Sekirankai (Red Wave Society) 1848
 Selander, Ted 3412
 Selbmann, Fritz 1340
 Selective Service Act 757
 self-defense 1007, 1168, 1480, 1583
 Jewish people 1851, 1914
 Korean workers 1987
 self-determination 322
 African Americans 395, 750
 Australia 5
 autonomism 322
 Caribbean 3552
 Lenin 322
 Native Americans 2411–12
 Nigeria 1640
 USA 87
 self-government 2765
 self-help groups 2021, 3558
 self-immolation
 Buddhist monks 2500, 3481
 Czech student 220, 2744, 3174, 3176, 3433
 Korean worker 1981
 Quakers 2500
 self-representation 1740
 Self-Respect movement 956–7, 1329
 Selim III, emperor 3346
 Selma march 740, 748, 1975–6
 Selous Game Reserve 3254
Semana Roja, Argentina 265–7
Semana Trágica, Argentina 103, 247–8
Semana Trágica, Barcelona 145, 1125
 Semaun 1728
Sembène, Ousmane 3003–4
 Seminarios Indígenas 1477
 Seminoles 59, 212
 Sen, Amartya 128
 Sen, Amulya 2423
 Sen, Latika 3587
 Sen, Manikuntala 645
 Sen, S. N. 1689
 Sen, Surya 1678, 1682, 1710
 Sen Gupta, Shatarupa 961–2, 1922–3, 2265–6, 2421–5, 3229–30
 Sénard, Antoine Marie Jules 1244
 Sendero Luminoso (Shining Path) 1058, 2063, 2362, 2363, 2644–5, 2651, 2652 annihilation squads 2658, 2660
 Guzmán 2658–9
 Maoist influence 2199, 2643
Sendi 1724
Sendic, Raúl 3004–5, 3340, 3408, 3409
 Sène, Jean-Jacques 2181–2
Seneca Falls convention 3005–6, 3620–1

Senegal

anti-neoliberal protests 3006–7
 IMF 3007
 independence 3007
 Sembène 3003–4
 structural adjustment 3007
 troops to Madagascar 1250
 Sénégal battalion, Côte d'Ivoire 883
 Senegalese Democratic Bloc Party 3007
 Senesh, Hanna 1917
Senghor, Léopold 563, 1554, 2427, 3006,
 3007–8, 3578
 Sengupta, Jatindra Mohan 449
 Seni Pramoj 3258
 Seniloli, Jopi 1200
 Seoul 3183
 Seoul-Gyeonggi-Incheon Migrant Worker's
 Union 1994
 Separate Representation of the Voters Act 3087
Sepé Tiarajú 3008–9
 Sepoul, John 148
Sepoy Revolt, India 1685–7
 September 11, 2001 attacks 889, 1401, 1886, 2504, 3649, 3664
 September 23 Movement 2284
 September 30 movement, Indonesia 1733
 September 19 Movement (M-19) 800, 801, 802, 808, 1082, 2149–50
 September Massacres 962, 1286, 1290
 Séptima Papeleta (Seventh Paper) 808
 Sequoia National Park 861, 3417
 Serantini, Franco 131
Serbia anti-bureaucratic revolution 3009–11
 Austria-Hungary 318
 autonomy 319
 Četnik movement 3296, 3682, 3684, 3685
 clientelism 3685
 corruption scandals 3012
 military conflicts 223
 Milošević 2509–10, 3021
 neoliberalism 3685
 OTPOR 3011–12
 revolution 811
 strikes 3686
 US aid 3012
 World War II 3682
see also Kosovo
 Serbian League of Communists 3010
Serbian Revolution 2509–10, 3011–12, 3021
 Serdaru, Mihai Victor 2866
 Seregni, Liber 3409 serfdom 2921
Serge, Victor 3012–13

- Sergeants' Conspiracy 1015
 Sergi, Vittorio 620–1, 998–9, 2295–7, 3296–8, 3427–8, 3431–2
 Seri, Guillermina S. 863–9
 Seri Thai (Free Thai) 3258 seringueiros (rainforest peasants) 2273–4
 Serra, Rafael 912
 Serrano, Isagani 2682
 Serrat, Joan Manuel 2380
Serrati, Giacinto Menotti 3013–14
 Seruvakula, Viliame 2798
 Service du Travail Obligatoire (STO) 1240
 Servile War 3145, 3146, 3147
 Sesay, M. A. 2115–16
 Sétif massacres 226
 Seton-Watson, R. W. 1143
Sette Giugno (7 June) 2183
Settimana Rossa (Red Week) 997, 1822, 2168, 3013, 3014–15
 Settlement of Ireland, Act of 909
 Settlers' Nyasaland Association 2175–6
Sevastopol 2004
 Seven Party Alliance (SPA) 230, 2439
 Seven Peoples Missions 3009
 Seven Pines battle 60
 7 Year Bitch 2845
 Seven Years' War 424, 1124, 1126, 1785, 2666, 2851
 Sèvres Treaty 293, 1326, 1702, 3345, 3349, 3355, 3558
 Sex Pistols 2777
Sexenio Rosquero 430 sexual difference 3564–6, 3568 sexual intercourse, abstention as birth control 3567
 feminism and 3567
 Namibian women 3603
 sexual liberation
 Britain 512–13
 German anarchist movement 1609
 Kollontai 1979, 1980, 3607–8
 Soviet Union 3607–8
 see also sexuality, revolution and sexual relations 1979, 3561
 sexual violence 3560
sexuality
 Canadian indigenous people 2098
 counterrevolution 889
 double standards 1111, 3622
 Enlightenment 1110, 2101
 Foucault 1221
 Gandhi 1329
 Judeo-Christian values 2092
 Oneida community 2559–60 and race 1180–1 revolution and 3015–18
 state and 2092
 Seymour, Edward: see Somerset, Duke of Seymour, Edward Hobart 3674
 Seymour, Henry 108
 Seymour, Jane 516, 1094
 Seyn, Franz Albert von 1201
 Shabanova, Anna 3554
 Shabazz, Betty 2181
 Shah, A. B. 1930
 Shah, G. 955
 Shahidullah, Muhammad 2577
 Shahin, Tanyus 2074
 Shakai Minshūtō (Social Mass Party) 1911
 Shakaishugi Kenkyukai (Association for the Study of Socialism) 1910
Shakers 2491, 3614
 gender equality 2560, 3019
 utopian communities 3018–20, 3417
 Shakir, Zaid 1811
 Shalom Achsav (Peace Now) 1814, 1815
 Shamir, Itzhak 358, 1759
 Shamsher, Juddha 2441
 Shamsher, Mohan 2442
 Shamsher, Padma 2441–2
 Shamsher Gazi's Revolt 369
 Shamva mine strike 3728
 Shan Byu 2980
 Shanghai
 Green Gang 2201
 International Settlement shootings 724
 strikes 724
 Shanghai, Battle of 1926
 Shanin, Teodor 767
 Shanmugathanan, N. 2632, 3526
 Shantz, Jeff 164–7, 378–9, 1029–30, 1321–3, 3012–13
 Shao Lizi 3725
 Shaonian Zhongguo 3724
 sharecropping 17
 barga 2574
 Bengal 1706
 India 2265
 Philippines 2672
 see also tebhaga movement
Shari'a law
 Egypt 1557
 Iran 1771–2, 1774, 1962, 1963, 1965
 Nigeria 2483
 Saudi Arabia 2977
 Turkey 3342
 Shariati, Ali 1811
 Shariatullah, Haji 371
 Sharif, Khalifa 3192
 Sharif, Mohammad al- 2333

- Sharif, Nawaz 2584
 Sharif, S. M. 346
 Sharlach, Lisa B. 3733–8
 Sharma, O. P. 1693
 Sharon, Ariel 1759, 1814, 1817
Sharp, Gene 3020–1
 From Dictatorship to Democracy 815, 3020, 3021
 Gandhi Wields the Weapons of Moral Power 3020 on La Boétie 2018
 Orange Revolution 3375, 3377
 Politics of Nonviolent Action, The 815, 3020
 Theory of Power, The 815
 Sharp, Geoff 305
Sharp, Granville 3021–2 anti-slavery cases 202, 203 and Benezet 367, 368, 3521
 Black Poor 209–10 and Clarkson 764
 colonization 206, 208, 209
 and Equiano 1124
 Representation of the Injustice, A 3022
 Sierra Leone Company 3528
 Sharpe, Michael Orlando 942–3
 Sharpe, Samuel 205
 Sharpeville massacre 172, 1414, 2192, 2346, 2357, 3087
 aftermath 3094, 3249
 Shatila camp massacre 1814, 2071
 Shaw, Anna Howard 3313, 3626
 Shaw, George Bernard 3061
 Shaw University 740
 Shaykan, Battle of 3198
 Shayqiyya people 3196
 Shays, Daniel 3022–3
Shays' Rebellion 87, 156, 1300, 3022–3
 Sheehan, Cindy 229
 Sheffield metalworkers 203
 Shehab, Fouad 2069
 Shehu, Mehmet 32
 Shekhawat, Seema 3335–6
 Shell Oil 2479, 2972
 Sheller, Mimi 1868–70
 Shelley, Mary 1409, 3428, 3542
 Shelley, Percy Bysshe 896, 1409
 Shen Shicai 3506
 Shenandoah Valley 67
 Shepard, Benjamin 8–10, 3312–13
 Shepard, William 3023
 Sher Ali Khan 15
Sheridan, Richard Brinsley 1203, 3024
 Sheriffmuir, Battle of 1854
 Sherman, William Tecumseh 62, 66, 67
 Sherritt, Aaron 1943
 Sheth, D. L. 2621
 Shevardnadze, Eduard 812, 2510, 3021, 3329, 3377
 Sheykh Mosleheddin Friday Mosque 3244
 Shidlovsky Commission 3553
 Shiel, Richard Lalor 633
 Shifu 113, 115
 Shih, V. Y. C. 3235
 Shi'ite Muslims 1961–5
 Hezbollah 2404
 Iran 1770
 Iraq 1776, 1782
 Shikhradov, Boris 3368
 Shiloh, Battle of 59, 61
 Shimonoseki, Treaty of 732, 3201, 3672
 Shin Chaeho 135
 Shin Fujinkyōkai (New Women's Association) 3595
 Shining Path: see Sendero Luminoso (Shining Path)
 Shinji, Ishii 1907
shipboard insurrections, Atlantic slave trade 3024–7
 Shippen, Nichole 355–7, 1420
 Shirazi, Muhammad Taqi al- 1778
 Shishakli, Adib al- 3222
 Shitetsusoren 1879
Shiva, Vandana 2734, 3027–8
 see also Chipko movement
Shlyapnikov, Alexander Gavrilovich 2087, 3028–30
 Shoman, Assad 1634
 Shona people 698–9, 700, 701–4, 3602, 3734, 3735
 Shonekan, Earnest 2481, 2483
 “SHOP” (Suburban Homosexual Outreach Project) 2109
 Shore, M. 2742
 Shoreham mutiny 510
 Short, Clare 3648
 Shotgun Policy, Mississippi 20
 Shoup Mission 1900
 Shramik Sangathana (Workers' Organization) 3587
 Shrestha, Marich Man Singh 2443
 Shreveport 65
Shrew 3569
 Shriver, Sargent 741
 Shuahj, Shah 15
 Shuar Federation 1056
Shuddhi campaign 1583
 Shumayyil, Sibli 235
 Shumilin, Boris 2867
shunto (wage claims) 1879, 1881, 3069
 Shuqayr, N. 3198
Shurugis (rural migrants) 3516

- Shuster, Morgan 1768
 Shuttlesworth, Fred 17, 1973–4
 Shuysky, Vassily 436
 Si Votha revolt 566, 567, 575, 3475
 Siam (Thailand) 3256
 Siantos, Giorgis 1444
 Sibanda, Eliakim 694–6, 2172–6, 2363–5
 Sicily
 Bourbons 1825
 Fanelli 1661
 fascists 1176, 1846
 food riots 1846, 1847
 Mafia 1833, 2160–1
 and Malta 2183
 rebellion 1848, 3014 rural unrest 1846
 Spanish occupation 1847
 Side, Vyborg 3067
 Sidelsky, Lazar 2191
 Sidi Mohammed 1248, 1249, 2334
 Sidmouth, Lord 3281
 Sidney, Henry 1805
 Sidqi, Aziz 1072
 Siebert, Battle of 1511
 Sierakowski, Robert 1205–6, 2465–76, 2564, 2963–5, 2965–7
 Sierra Club 617
 Sierra de Manantlan resistance 2287
Sierra Leone 209–11, 3030–2 black response to 206, 207, 208
 civil war 3030, 3031–2
 Clarkson 764, 3022
 Cuffe 394, 941
 Equiano 207, 1124
 founding of 206, 209–11
 independence 3030
 protest and revolution 3030–2
 RUF 3030
 Sharp 1124, 3022
 Wilberforce 3022, 3528
 Sierra Leone Company 3528, 3529
 Sierra Leone People's Party (SLPP) 3030
 Sierra Maestra Declaration 930
 Sierra Tarahumara 2284
Sieyès, Abbé Emmanuel Joseph 3032–4
 Declaration of the Rights of Man and the Citizen 3032
 Directory 441–2, 895, 1004, 1079
 Estates General 1126, 2312, 3032
 What Is the Third Estate? 1004, 3032
Sigamoney, Bernard L. E. 151, 3034, 3092
 Sigurimi (Albanian Secret Service) 31
Sihanouk, Norodom 569, 572, 573, 576, 578, 1713, 1715, 3034–6 anti-American 3479
 assassination attempt 2465
 in China 3035–6
 Crusade for Independence 3474
 house arrest 3036
 Khmer Rouge 1959
 neutrality 3482
 overthrown 1716, 1959
 and Pol Pot 1960, 3036
 Šik, Ota 3638
 Siles Zuazo, Hernán 416, 421–2
 National Revolution 431
Silesia, uprisings 1350, 3036–7
 Silicosis Act 1087
 silk production 1900, 2073
 Silos, Jill 1050–1
 Silva, Fernando T. 473–8
 Silva, Jacobo 2285
 Silva, José Fernando da: see Frei Chico
Silva, Luis Inácio Lula da 495, 3037–9
 Bolsa Familia 500, 3038
 electoral victory 477 and MDB 498
 Mensalão Scandal 3038
 MST 2352–3 on neoliberalism 3658 presidency 500 and PT 494, 497, 498, 499–500
 rise of 477
Silva, Lyndolpho 3039, 3388
 Silva Henríquez, Raúl 2060
 Silveira, Onesimo 603
 silver 691, 3230
 Silver, Lynette Ramsay 3490
 Silvério dos Reis, Joaquim 485
 Silvern, Steven E. 2411–20
 Silvertown Strike of Rubber Workers 2229
 Silvestre, Manuel 2336
 Sima, Hoira 2857
 Simeon II, of Bulgaria 538
 Simmel, Georg 771, 2136
 Simmons, Terry 1460–2
 Simnel, Lambert 1804
 Simó, Alejo 868
 Simon, John 1680, 3042
 Simón Bolívar Guerilla Coordination (CGSB)
 802
 Simon Commission 53, 957, 1327, 1680, 1683, 2431
 Simone, Anna 2870
 Simonoff, Peter 2039
 Simons, Jack 3040
 Simons, Menno 93
Simons, Ray Alexander 171, 834, 2398, 3039–40, 3093
 Simpkins, Dulcey 3274

- Simpson, Joseph 984
 Simpson, Sockless Jerry 2727
 Sims, Yvonne D. 1020–1
 Sin, Jaime Cardinal 2506, 2683
 SINALTRAINAL (National Union of Food Industry Workers) 809
Sinclair, Upton 1125, 2127, 2344, 2947, 3040–1
Jungle, The 49, 1571, 3040, 3429
 Scottsboro case 3003
 Sindacato Ferrovieri Italiani (railwaymen's union) 1822
 Sindacato Italiano Dell'Auto (SIDA) 1835
 Sindacato de Trabajadores Técnicos Pintores y Escultores 2376
 Sindall, Thomas 1040
 Sindicatos Libres 2486
 Singapore
 Japanese invasion 2792
 WTO 1429
 Singer, Peter 305, 3429
 Singh, Amar 1691
Singh, Bhagat 3041–2 on anarchism 3042
 and Bose 449
 hanged 1683, 3042
 Saunders 1680
 sentenced to death 1328 sentenced to transportation 1328, 1677
 Why I Am An Atheist 3042
 Young India Association 1677
 Singh, Gulab 1708
 Singh, Kunwar 1689, 1691
Singh, Makhan 1954, 3042–3
 Singh, Mohan 451, 1679
 Singh, Moni 2582
 Singh, Raja Man 1691
 Singh, Ranjit 1708
 Singh, Sardar Ajit 3041
 Singh, Sardar Bhagat 1710
 Singh, Shamsher 371
 Singh, Viswanath Pratap 1692–3
 Singing Revolution 811
 Sinhala Buddhist nationalism 3527
 Sinhala Maha Sabha movement 2050
 Sinistra Proletaria 2814
Sinn Féin 3043–4
 Connolly 860
 Easter Rising (1916) 1800–1
 electoral candidates 971 electoral success 1047
 IRB 793
 Provisional 1797 tricolor 2572
 Sino-Filipinos 2667
 Sino-Indian border dispute 961, 1922, 2421
 Sino-Indochinese War 2747, 3262
 Sino-Japanese War 926, 1896, 3236
 boycotts 185
 Chiang Kai-shek 719, 727
 Chinese defeat 734, 3671
 Qing Dynasty 3239
 Shimonoseki treaty 732
 Sino-Soviet split 710, 2995
 Sinti 1175, 1179
 Sinvoz plant 3687
 Sinyetha Wunthanu 554, 555
 Sioui, Jules 584
 Sioux tribe 899–900
Sipuel v. Oklahoma State Board of Regents 759
 Siqueiros, David Alfaro 2375, 2376
 Sir George Williams University 2786
 Siraj-ud-Daulah 368, 369, 1708
 Sirajganj revolt 372
 Siregar, Hariman 1724
 Sirik Matak, Prince 572, 573
 Sirikmatak, Sisowath 571
 Sirinelli, Jean-François 1237
 Sisavang Vong 1715, 1716
 Sison, José Maria 2677, 2680–1, 2684, 2685
 Sison, Juliet 2681
 Sistani, Ali al- 1783
 Sisterhood of International Peace 303
 Sisulu, Albertina 2193
 Sisulu, Walter 2196, 3086, 3087
 and Tambo 2191, 3249 sit-ins 222, 3186
 Sita, Nana 2191
 Sitarmayyah, Pattavi 450
 Sithole, Ndabangingi 2364, 3735
 SITRAC-SITRAM 864
 Sitrin, Marina 1084–7
Sitting Bull 899–902
 situated knowledge 2306
 Situationist International (SI) 325, 972, 3044, 3423
situationists 159, 973, 1237, 1844, 2808, 2839, 3044–6
 Six Acts 465, 2662, 3281
 Six Articles, Act of 1093
 Six-Day War 1758, 1812, 1816
 Six Federations of the Tropic of Cochabamba 1939
 Six Nations community 584, 586
 Six Weeks' War 2102
 Sixth Coalition, War of 188
 "Sixty-Eight" 3168
 ska 611
 Skalidakis, Giannis (Jean-Marie) 1436–9, 1447–50
 Skanderbeg, G. K. 37

- Skanthakumar, Balasingham 2631–4, 3526–7
 Skeffington, Francis Sheehy 1047
 Skilling, H. G. 2746
 Skinner, E. P. 547
 Skirving, William 2366
 Sklair, L. 3655
 Skocpol, Theda 1213, 1214–15
 Skoglund, Carl 3413
 Skoropadskii, General 2938
 Skrypnik, N. 2916
 Skycák, František 1595
 Slansky, Rudolf 3691
 slash and burn tactics 704
 Slatin, Rudolf von 2164
 Slav Congress 1143, 1149
 Slave Codes 75 slave rescues 90, 156, 212, 216, 2491, 3046–8, 3327–8
slave revolts
 Barbados 90, 350
 Caribbean 201
 Demerara 204, 983–4
 Palmares 2586–9, 3745
 shipboard 89, 3024–7
 South Carolina 212
 Turner 233, 2407–9
 Vesey 3459–61
 see also American slave rebellions; Maroon resistance slave stealing 3047
 slave trade 1657, 3024–7
 slaveholders 56–7
slavery
 American Civil War 59, 70–2, 755–7
 Brazil 494, 598
 chattel 1112–13, 2021
 Cuba 90, 917–18
 Enlightenment 91
 French Guiana 1269–70
 Haiti 1525, 3584
 Hegel on 356, 2839
 Jamaica 90, 2320
 Lincoln 61, 2024, 2122 wage-slaves 2021 see also abolitionism; anti-slavery movement
Slavery Abolition Act 205 slaves buying freedom 211 dress as resistance 1871–3 freed and repatriated 213, 214 property accumulation 211, 559
 resistance 88, 212
 runaway 70, 88, 212, 533
 as sailors 296
 shipboard insurrections 88, 3024–7 see also Maroon resistance; slave revolts;
 Underground Railroad
 Slavic Morning Star 3632
 Slavov, Atanas 538
 Slavs 1142, 1442, 1451
 Sloan, John 1125
 Slonimski, Antoni 2301
 Sloterdijk, Peter 140
 Slovak National Council (SNC) 3048, 3051, 3435
 Slovak National Uprising 3049
Slovak People's Party 1595–6, 3293–4
 Slovak Republic 3293, 3294
 Slovak Social Democratic Party (SSDS) 1025
 Slovak Volunteers 1621
Slovakia 3048–51
 1944 Uprising 3048–9
 autonomy 1595, 3435
 dissidence 3049–50
 Gentle Revolution 811, 3050, 3435
 languages 3051
 PAV 3435 religious dissidence 3049–50
 Soviet invasion 3048
 Štúr generation 3050–1
 Tiso 3293–4
 Slovenia 223, 319, 1175, 3683
 see also Žižek, Slavoj
Slovenian National Liberation Front (Osvobodilna Fronta) 3051–2 Slovo, Joe 172, 173, 175, 1552, 2192, 2358, 3052–3, 3093, 3104
 arrested 3249
 Has Socialism Failed? 3106
 Slutskaya, Vera 3555
 Small, Gail 2418
 Small, Tony 1203
 Small Landholders' Party 1627
 Small-Scale Farmers of the Northeast 3275
 Smallholders' and Hungarian People's Parties 1618
 Smallwood, Joey 589
 SMATA Córdoba 864, 865
 Smeathman, Henry 206, 209
 Smedley, Agnes 2969
 Smelser, N. J. 776, 779
 Smets, Dore 361
 Smidovich, Sofia 3607
 Smirnov, V. 2915
Smith, Adam 3053–5
 as influence 2231, 2436
 on labor 2024
 Wealth of Nations, The 508, 1112, 1113, 2451, 3054–5
 Smith, Bessie 1555
 Smith, David Michael 227–30, 2187–9, 3056–60

- Smith, Earl T. 930
 Smith, Ethel M. 2625
 Smith, Gerrit 216, 3005
 Smith, Harold L. 526–9
 Smith, Ian 2153, 3730, 3735, 3739
 Smith, J. B. 177
 Smith, James Mc-Cune 216
 Smith, Jen 2844
 Smith, John 204
 Smith, John (Rev.) 984
 Smith, Matthew J. 1514–21, 2872
 Smith, Vern 836
 Smith Act 596, 1204
 Smith O'Brien, William 3680–1
Smith v. Allwright 759
 Smithfield burnings 1095
 Smrkovský, Josef 2744 smuggling 75, 76
 Smulewicz-Zucker, Gregory R. 2586–9, 3214–15, 3745–7
 Smuts, J. C. 2395, 2397
SNCC: see Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee
 Sneevliet, Henk 725
 Sneh, Moshe 359
 Snow, D. A. 652, 2758
 Snow, P. G. 650
 Snowden, Philip 522
 Snowden, Thomas 1013
 So Thein 553
 Soberanis Gómez, Antonio 365
 Sobhuza II, of Swaziland 2111, 3206, 3747
 Soboul, Albert 1283, 1284, 1286, 2249
 Sobrino, Jon 478, 2059
 Sobukwe, Robert Mangaliso 2111, 2192, 3086
 Soccer War 2956–7
 social activists 613
 social banditry 1944 social capital 3171 social centers 324
 social Christianity 10
 Social Committee for Ecological Protection of Russe 3068
 social contract
 Locke 76, 1113
 Tennis Court Oath 3256
 social Darwinism 912
 Social Defense Law, Argentina 266
 Social Democracy of America 3064
 Social Democratic and Labour Party (SDLP)
 1797
 Social Democratic Confederation 990
 Social Democratic Federation
 Cape Town 148
 Morris 2341, 3061
 Social Democratic Federation (SDF), Scotland
 2819, 2820
 Social Democratic Labor Party, Netherlands 870 Social Democratic Movement of the Kingdom of Poland (SDKPiL) 2718, 2719
 Social Democratic Party of Austria 318, 1745
 Social Democratic Party of Britain 1748, 2040
 Social Democratic Party of Costa Rica 879
 Social Democratic Party of Czechoslovakia 1391
 Social Democratic Party of Finland 1201
Social Democratic Party of Germany (SPD)
 381, 826, 975, 1338, 1359, 1366, 1375,
 3055–6, 3522
 Godesberg Program 1910
 Hilferding 1581
 Kautsky 1942
 Liebknecht 2116, 2213
 Luxemburg 2084, 2142, 2143, 2145–6, 2213
 Marcuse 2213
 Marx and Engels 3056–7
 membership 1373, 1742–3, 1756 against Nicholas II 1746
 resisting Nazi Party 1377, 1378–9
 Social Democratic Party of Hungary 128
 Social Democratic Party of Portugal 2732
 Social Democratic Party of Russia 1418, 3552, 3721
 Social Democratic Party of Sweden 1745
 Social Democratic Party of Thailand 3265
 Social Democratic Party of the USA 974
 Social Democratic Student Organization (SDS)
 3522, 3580
 Social Democratic Union (SDE) 1444
 Social Democratic Workers' Party (SDAP) 3066
 Social Democratic Workers' Party of Austria
 (SDAPÖ) 354
 Social-Democratic Workingmen's Party of North America 2026
 Social Democrats, USA 3065
 social ecology 99, 161, 1052, 1053, 2620, 2808
 Social Gospel movement 3419 social justice 661, 3660
 Social Justice Program, Philippines 2673
 social movements changes in 782 emergent 2762
 European 2401
 Italy 2401
 Japan 1876
 poverty 780–1
 rhizomatic 981
see also new social movements; punk movement social physiology, Kropotkin 1561
 Social Revolutionary Congress 157
 Social Security Act 782, 3381

- Social Self-Defense Committee (KSS-KOR) 2697–8, 3078
- Social Transformation Involving Women in Africa 3548
- Social Well-Being 404
- Sociale, La* 120
- “socialfascism” period 3298
- socialism 3056–62
- African 3702
 - agrarian-based 677
 - Albania 29–33
 - anarchist movement 95–6
 - Arab 233–7, 1069–73
 - Argentina 270–3
 - Britain 3060–2
 - Chávez, César 663
 - Chile 678–83, 684
 - Christianity and 1343
 - cooperatives 861
 - Cuba, transition to 921–2
 - Draper 2250
 - Germany 1373–81
 - Ghana, transition to 1381–3
 - Greece 1439–51
 - Iran, Mossadegh era 1763–6
 - Kautsky 1653
 - libertarian 2877
 - Marxist 2240
 - Nkrumah 1382
 - non-Marxist 333
 - Owen 2567
 - Pilsudski 2689
 - reformist 1913
 - Senghor 3008
 - third-way Yugoslavian 1011
 - Ujamaa* 2532–3, 3374–5
 - Venezuela 3455
 - Weimar Republic 1374
 - working class 3056
 - Yemen 3670–1
 - see also* international socialism: mass politics; utopian socialism
- Socialism and Democracy* 2249
- Socialisme ou Barbarie 325, 621, 2839, 3062–3
- Socialist* 961
- Socialist Ashram, Almorea 1923
- Socialist Citizens League 1910
- Socialist Courier* 2228
- socialist feminism 2595, 3569
- Socialist German Student Union (SDS) 1037, 3580
- Socialist Ideas and Action (PAS) 112
- Socialist International: see Internationals, Second
- Socialist Labor Party (SLP), USA 1735, 2028, 3064
- Socialist Labor Party of Greece (SEKE) 1441, 3220
- Socialist Labour Party (SLP), Scotland 2820
- Socialist League (LS) 2229, 2341, 3443
- Socialist League of Scotland 860
- Socialist Left, Peru (IS) 2652
- Socialist Party of Albania (PS) 32
- Socialist Party of America (SPA) 3063–6
- and Communist Party 835–6
 - Debs 974, 2031
 - Haywood 1571
 - and IWW 2489
 - London, Jack 2128
 - and Thomas 596
 - unemployment 3383
- Socialist Party of Argentina 1747
- Socialist Party of Burma 556
- Socialist Party of Chile (PS) 683, 692, 693, 1468
- Socialist Party of France 1746, 1748–9
- Socialist Party of Germany (SPD) 1253
- Socialist Party of Greece (SKE) 1436, 1440, 1444
- Socialist Party of Guiana (PSG) 1270
- Socialist Party of India 2403
- Socialist Party of Italy: see Italian Socialist Party (PSI)
- Socialist Party of Japan: see Japan Socialist Party (JSP)
- Socialist Party of Michoacán (PSM) 3432
- Socialist Party of Nicaragua (PSN) 2964
- Socialist Party of Peru 2649
- Socialist Party of the Philippines 2673
- Socialist Party of Poland 1915
- Socialist Party of Portugal 2732
- Socialist Party of Serbia (SPS) 3011
- Socialist Party of Spain (PSOE) 182–3, 184
- Socialist Party of Thailand (SPT) 3262
- socialist realism 28, 3160
- Socialist Register* 3282
- Socialist Revolutionary (SR), Russia 142, 2892, 2908, 2919–20, 2926
- and CEC 2928
 - Chernov 676, 3551
 - dual power 2902
 - Party Dictatorship 2937
 - Spiridonova 2082, 3152–4
 - Tajikistan 3242
- Socialist Revolutionary Party, Colombia 805–6
- Socialist Trades and Labor Alliance 1735
- Socialist Unity Party of Germany (SED) 826, 828, 1337, 1338, 1369, 3067
- Socialist Women’s Conference 1750
- Socialist Workers’ Party of Germany (SAP) 1351, 1371, 1379, 3066–7

- Socialist Workers' Party of Germany (SAPD) 3066–7
- Socialist Workers' Party (SWP) of Britain 1402
- Socialist Workers' Party (SEK) of Greece 1444
- Socialist Workers' Party (SWP) of the USA 596–7, 840, 3383
- Socialist Working Party, Chile 692
- Socialist Youth International 3678
- Socialist Youth Organization of Germany (SJV) 3067
- Socialista, El* 270
- socialization of land 676
- Sociedad de Estudios Afrocubanos 2565
- Sociedad del Folklore Cubano 2565
- Sociedad de la Igualdad (Equality Society) 111
- Sociedad Italiana de Socorros Mutuos 253
- Sociedad Obrera de Oficios Varios 276–7
- Società Nazionale 2267
- Société des Amis des Noirs 203, 1525–6, 1527, 1530, 2553, 2554
- Société des Citoyennes Républicaines Révolutionnaires 1296
- Société Française des Nouvelles-Hébrides (SFNH) 3426
- Société Fraternelle des Minimés 1295
- Société des Inventions et Découvertes 2992
- Société du Point Central des Arts et Métiers 2992
- Society for the Abolition of the Slave Trade 3022
- Society for Academic Courses (TKN) 3077
- Society for Cheap Lodgings 3067
- Society for Constitutional Information (SCI) 1553
- Society of Equals 403
- Society of Factory Owners 2916, 2943
- Society of Families 403
- Society of Friends: see Quakers
- Society of the Friends of the Rights of Man and Citizen 1288
- Society of Muslim Brothers 1548, 1560
- Society of Planters of Pernambuco (SAPP) 2117–18
- Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts 3520
- Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings 2341
- Society of Revolutionary Republican Women 1291
- Society of the Rights of Man and the Citizen 1015
- Society of Separatists 3417
- Society of Spencean Philanthropists 3151, 3280
- Society for the Struggle against Communism, Turkey 3353
- Society for Theoretical Psychoanalysis 3743
- Society of United Irishmen 1203, 1786, 3302
- sodomy laws 2101, 2107, 3016
- Soe, Thakin 555, 556, 3068, 3279
- Sofia, Pietro 2402
- Sofia demonstrations 3068–9
- Sofri, Adriano 2622
- Sogavare, Manasseh 3082
- Sohyo 1876, 1878, 1879, 1881, 1882, 1909, 3069–70
- Sojourner Truth Organization 3070–1
- Sokomanu, Ati George 3426
- Sol, El* 2340
- Solano Lopez, Francisco 2452
- Solares, Jaime 789
- Soldatki* 3554
- Soldiers Against Silence 1814
- Soledad Brothers 964–5
- Solemn League and Covenant 1098
- Soler, Adolfo 2608
- SolFed: see Solidarity Federation
- Solidaarisuus 119
- Solidaridad* 2668, 2846
- Solidaridad Internacional Antifascista (SIA) 2962
- Solidaridad Obrera* 145, 1440
- Solidaridad Obrera (Workers' Solidarity) 145, 847
- Solidarios, Los* 1187
- Solidaritas Perempuan 1726
- Solidarity: see Solidarność
- solidarity 2021
- class 102
- Galleani 1322
- Solidarity, cycling association 903
- Solidarity 80 2708
- Solidarity Committee 150
- Solidarity Federation (SolFed) 3071–2
- Solidarity of Filipino Workers (BMP) 2686
- Solidarity for Palestinian Human Rights 845
- Solidarity Party, Cape Verde 603
- Solidarity Weekly* 3074
- Solidarność (Solidarity) 3072–80
- emergence of 140, 810, 2698
- fragmented 2709, 3076
- and GDR 1346
- going underground 3075, 3078
- ideology 3079
- importance of 2707–8, 3079–80
- KKP 3073
- KOR 2013, 2301, 2302, 2694–8, 3077–8
- Kuroń 2014, 2301
- Michnik 2301, 2707
- National Executive Council 3076
- organization of 3078–9
- Polish Revolution 2507–8
- printed word 3077, 3557–8

- roots of 3077–8 telerevolution 3557–8
 women in 3555–8, 3633
see also Walentynowicz, Anna; Walesa, Lech
- Solmonson, Le'Ann L. 1010–11
- Solomon Islands 1197, 3080–2
- Solt, Ottillia 118
- Solzhenitsyn, Alexander 2262
- Somali Abo Liberation Front 1139
- Somali women, OCAP Women of Etobicoke 2562
- Sombart, Werner 2244
- Somerset, Duke of 509, 516, 1094, 1095
- Somerset, James 202, 3022
- Somerset Decision 367, 3021
- Somoza Debayle, Anastasio 2466, 2467, 2468
 assassins of 2597
 family lands nationalized 2964
 Nicaraguan Revolution 640, 1164, 2061, 2465
 ousted 2957
 and Sandino 1205, 2564
- Somoza Debayle, Luis 2466
- Somoza García, Anastasio 447, 2466, 2966
- Somsanith, Prince 2055
- Son Sen 574, 1960, 1961
- Song of Freedom* (film) 2846
- Song Yu-jin 1997
- Sonnelitter, Karen 1088–9, 1203, 2402–3, 3210, 3302–3, 3392–4
- Sonoran generation 2539–42
- Sonthi Boonyaratkalin 3277
- Sonthonax, Léger-Félicité 1264, 1531, 1532, 1533, 1535, 1537
 Third Civil Commission 3310
 Toussaint Louverture 2554, 3307, 3311
- Sope, Barak Tame 3426
- Sorel, Georges 463, 2136, 2244, 2257, 2766, 3228
- Sorge, Friedrich 2026, 2028, 2030
- Sorie, Mohammed 3031
- Soros, George 816
- Soros Foundation 816, 3333, 3633
- Soroush, Abdolkarim 1811
- SOS Femme-Alternative 3575
- SOS Femmes Violées 3575
- Sosa, Mercedes 2377
- Sossi, Mario 2815
- Sotelo, Calvo 3131
- Sotho popular resistance 2112
- Soto, Ana 3630–1
- Souchy, Augustin 3082–3
- Soul Students Advisory Council 398
- Soulouque, Faustin 1512
- sound money theories 2728
- soup kitchens 1206–7
- Souphanouvong, Prince 1716, 2054, 2055, 3083–4, 3472
- Soustelle, Jacques 45
- South Africa
 African nationalism 3084–90
 agricultural sector 3097
 anarchism 148–9
 ANC 3084–90
 anti-apartheid movement 170–6 apartheid 2222, 2502–3, 3094–6
assimilado elite 153 extraction industries 3090–2
 formation of 147, 3091
 Gandhi 2492–3
 GDP 3092, 3110
 global capitalism 2502
 labor movement 3090–9
 Marks 2222–3
 Mayekiso 2264–5
 Motsoaledi 2345–6
 multiracial democratic elections 3546
 National Party 170–1, 2222
 neoliberalism 3095, 3096, 3098
 Pact government 3092
 Pass Laws 172, 3087, 3603
 post-apartheid 176, 3097
 privatization 3099–100
 Raditsela 2801–2, 3096
 segregation 3084, 3091
 syndicalism 148
 trade unions 3084–5, 3090–2, 3095
 water struggles 3099–103
 women's activism 3603
see also Mandela, Nelson; Slovo, Joe
- South African Allied Workers' Union (SAAWU) 3096
- South African Clothing Workers' Union 2948
- South African Colored Organization 171
- South African Communist Party (SACP) 3103–9
 and ANC 2192, 3052, 3084, 3103, 3249
 Batswana miners 455
 Congress Alliance 171
 and COSATU 875
 in exile 3104–6
 Hani 1552
 Mayekiso 2265
 MK 3104
Path to Power 3107
 post-apartheid 3107–9
 Slovo 3052, 3104 socialist Marxism 3086
 unbanned 175, 3107
see also Communist Party of South Africa (CPSA)

- South African Confederation of Labor (SACL) 1087, 3094
- South African Confederation of Trade Unions (SACOTU) 3097
- South African Congress of Trade Unions (SACTU) 171, 173, 349, 2346, 2357, 3039, 3089, 3094
- South African Development Coordinating Conference (SADCC) 1957, 2112
- South African Indian Congress (SAIC) 2, 171, 2357, 3103
- South African Industrial Federation (SAIF) 149, 3091
- South African Labor Party (SALP) 148, 331, 832, 1028, 3091, 3094
- South African Mineworkers' Union (SAMWU) 1087, 1088, 1556–7, 2625, 3091, 3097, 3098, 3101, 3696
- South African National Civic Organization (SANCO) 2265
- South African Native National Congress (SANNC) 152, 1414, 3085, 3205
- South African Student Organization (SASO) 3088
- South African Trades and Labor Council (SATLC) 834, 1087, 3093
- South African Transport and Allied Workers' Union (SATAWU) 3733
- South African Worker* 832
- South Asia 1810, 3643
see also individual countries
- South Carolina 85, 212
- South China Club 1926
- South Colombo Youth League 969, 2050
- South End* 2067
- South Korea
economic crisis 2000 economic success 1998
GDP 2000
Global Day of Action 1389
GNP 1663
homeless 2000
military dictatorships 1999–2000
neoliberalism 2000
student uprising 2014–15, 3169, 3180
see also Korea
- South Korea–US Free Trade Agreement 2001
- South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone Treaty 1272
- South Russian Group of Anarchosyndicalists 142
- South West Africa Affairs Amendment Act 2398
- South West Africa National Union (SWANU) 2530, 3203
- South West Africa Progressive Association (SWAPA) 3202–3
- South West African People's Organization (SWAPO) 2398–9, 2530, 3112, 3202–5, 3300, 3604–5
- Southborough Committee 957
- Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty 2676
- Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) 2676, 3259
- Southern Africa 147–55, 3109–14, 3601–6 anarchism and syndicalism 147–55 colonial struggles 3602–4 economic statistics 3110 health statistics 3110
ILO 3112
labor force 3112–13
migrant labor 3110–11
popular resistance to neoliberalism 3109–14
Structural Adjustment 3110–11 women leaders 3602–4
women's movement 3601–6
World Bank 3113
- Southern African Customs Union 2395
- Southern African Development Community (SADC) 858, 2111, 3110
- Southern African Trade Union Coordinating Council (SATUCC) 2356, 3111–12
- Southern California Anarchist Federation (SCAF-LA) 862
- Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) 17, 332, 652, 740, 762, 1852, 1971–7, 2498, 3186, 3187
- Southern Homestead Act 63
- Southern Indigenous Creole Community (SICC) 2473
- Southern Mercury* 2726
- Southern Rhodesia African National Congress (SRANC) 2221
- Southern Rhodesia African Trade Union Congress (SRATUC) 3730
- Southern Rhodesia Trade Union Congress (SRTUC) 2221, 2730
- Southern Rhodesia Labor Party (SRLP) 2385
- Southern Rights faction 56, 57
- Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching 3520
- Souvanna Phouma 1716, 2054, 3083, 3485
- Souvarine, Jeanne 2257
- Sovereign Revolutionary Convention 2540
- Soviet, II* 446
- Soviet and Food Committee Congress 2935
- Soviet of Workers', Soldiers' and Peasants' Deputies 2907
- Soviet–Polish War 3037
- Soviet Republics 3124, 3156–7
- Soviet system 2005, 2083, 2903, 3115–18

Soviet Union

- Afghanistan 388, 1465
- agriculture 3163
- anti-nuclear protests 198
- and anti-Soviet revolts 1217
- break-up 1386, 1418, 1663–4, 2088, 2762, 3115–28, 3367–8
- Central Asia 642–3
- conformism 3160–1
- counterrevolution 3608–9
- Cuba 934
- education 3609
- elite 3115–16
- Family Code 3608
- famine 3160
- German invasion 1181–2, 1183, 1377, 2792, 3048
- Gulags 3159, 3161
- Hungary 3062
- influence on Nkrumah 1381
- marriage 3608, 3609
- modernization 3162
- motherhood 3607, 3608
- nationalisms 3366–7
- purges 3161–2
- science 2993
- and Vietnam 3481
- women workers 3608–9
- women's movement 3606–9
- World War II 3117
- see also* Gorbachev, Mikhail; Stalin, Joseph; war communism
- Sovnarkom 2086
- Soweto uprising 2194, 3089, 3095–7, 3113
- soy cultivation 2603
- Sozialdemokrat, Der* 1941
- Sozialist, Der* 2047, 2048
- Sozialistengesetz* 1351
- Sozialistische Aktion* 1380
- Sozialistische Arbeiterpartei Deutschland:
see Socialist Workers' Party of Germany (SAPD)
- Sozialistischer Bund 2048, 2049, 3082
- Spa Fields Riots 3151
- Spain
- anarchism 97, 100, 144–7, 1161
- anarchosyndicalism 847–50
- anti-clericalism 3132
- Bourbons 424, 1848
- campaign of terror 3132
- fascism 291–2, 1175
- foreign investment 180–1
- Global Day of Action 1389, 1397
- immigrants 1643
- imperialism 1654–5

- memory wars 2776
- Muslims expelled 2056
- Napoleon 442–3
- repression 3132
- strikes 183–4
- student movement 180, 3170
- women's movement 3609–12
- women's suffrage 3611
- Workers' Commissions 181–3
- World Bank 180
- see also* Catalonia; Euzkadi Ta Askatasuna (ETA); Spanish Civil War; Spanish Revolution
- Spanish–American War 1566
- Spanish Civil War 3135–7
- Abraham Lincoln Brigade 6–7, 2847
- and anarchism 100, 158, 2248
- anarchist vaudeville 116
- anarchosyndicalism 3135, 3136–7
- anti-fascists 104
- Asturias 291–3, 3138
- Basque Country 629
- Catalonia 629
- CNT-FAI 131, 848, 849, 1030, 1188, 1413
- Durruti 1029
- Falange Española* 180, 1587
- famine 180
- German volunteers 1372, 1379
- International Brigades 851, 3138–9, 3678, 3683
- international factors 3138–9
- Jews 3139
- Landau 2046
- literary output 116
- Madrid 3138
- Mexican aid 3138
- Moroccan troops 3138
- Nin 2486
- propaganda 3133, 3143
- radio's role 3133
- Rosselli 2870–1
- Russian fighters 3139
- Spanish Republic 1128
- Stalin on 3140
- US neutrality 6
- women's roles 124, 2962, 3133–4
- workers' control 162
- working class 180
- see also* Federación Anarquista Ibérica (FAI); Franco, Francisco; Mujeres Libres (Free Women); Partido Obrero de Unificación Marxista (POUM); Sánchez Saornil, Lucía
- Spanish conquistadors 28, 29
- Spanish Revolution 3128–45
- agrarian collectivists 3134, 3135
- collectivization 3134–5

Spanish Revolution (cont'd)

- cultural associations 3134
- Durruti 1030
- Popular Army 3137–8
- resistance 3131–3
- women's role 2367–8
- Spanish Succession, War of 484
- Spanish War of Independence 3456
- Spare Rib* 3569
- Spartacus 3145–50
 - historical character 3145–6
 - political hero 3146–9
 - portrayals in arts 3149–50
 - and slavery 3146–7
- Spartacus* 3147
- Spartacus* (film) 3149–50
- Spartacus League 826, 1361, 1362, 1373, 1374, 3147
- Spartacus Uprising 827, 1253, 2117
- Spartakiad 3149
- Spartakusbund 2117
- Special Night Squad 374
- Special Operations Executive (SOE) 1240
- spectacle, society of: see Debord, Guy
- Spector, Maurice 596
- Speight, George 1199, 1200, 2797
- Spence, Thomas 2127, 3150–1, 3280, 3391
- Spencer, Herbert 2007
- Spendiff, Harry 151, 154
- Speras, Konstantinos 126
- Speyer, Carl 2026, 2028
- spice trade 1656, 1718
- Spicer, André 1739–40
- Spielberg, Steven 2982
- Spies, August 116, 1569, 1570, 2029
- Spinanes 2845
- spinning jennies 1040
- Spínola, Antonio de 2729, 2731
- Spinoza, Baruch 3151–2
 - Negri on 1845, 2369, 2427
 - Short Treatise on God, Man, and His Well-Being* 3152
 - Tractatus Theologico-Politicus* 3152
- Spiridonova, Maria 3152–4, 3552
- Spiritual Board of Central Asian Muslims 3244
- Spithead mutiny 3154–5
- Spoden, Elizabeth 3154–5
- Spontaneists 107
- Spontis 1366
- Spooner, Lysander 157
- Spotsylvania Court House 66
- Springbok rugby tour protests 3155–6
- Springfield, Buffalo 221
- Springsteen, Bruce 1737
- Sprinkle, Annie 1191

- Spurlock, R. Scott 1096–100
- Sputnik* 196
- Squandermania scandal 1463
- squatting
 - anarchism 109
 - Australia 1944
 - autonomism 323
 - Chile 680, 682
 - Denmark 992
 - Germany 324
 - Greece 127
 - Homes not Roads 1039
 - Iran 780
 - Italy 323, 1147, 1846
 - Leoncavallo 1006
 - London 1039
 - Prague 1394
 - Salt Pan Creek 307
 - Swaziland 3207
- Squire, Heather 1203–4, 2063–4, 2314–15, 2436–7, 2528–9, 2628–9, 2972–3, 3155–6
- Sri Lanka 1493–5, 2049–54, 2631–3
 - Black July 3251
 - De Silva 969–70, 2050, 2052, 2053
 - Federal Party 3250–1
 - Gunawardena 969, 1493–5, 2050, 2052
 - independence 2052
 - insurrection (1971) 2632
 - insurrection (1987–9) 2633–4
 - radicalism 2049–54
 - Tamil minority 2633, 2634
 - United Front 2632
 - see also* Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (JVP); Lanka Sama Samaja Party (LSSP); Tamil nationalist struggle; Wijeweera, Rohana
- Sri Lanka Freedom Party (SLFP) 969, 1494, 2052, 2631, 3527
- Sri Narayana Guru Dharma Paripalana Yogam (SNDP) 956
- Srinivas, M. N. 955
- Srinivasan, Rao Bahadur 53
- SS: see Schutzstaffeln
- Stack, Austin 1046, 1049
- Stackelberg, Otto von 2710
- Ståhlberg, K. J. 1202, 2519
- Stakhovich, Mikhail 1201
- Stalin, Joseph 3156–64
 - bureaucracy 3158–9
 - collectivization 3159–60
 - coming to power 3158, 3608
 - Congress of the Victors 3162
 - critics of 3163
 - death of 1618, 3163, 3282
 - Fourth International 2239
 - and Hitler 1377

- Khrushchev on 839, 1220, 2262, 2387, 2698, 3062, 3282, 3299, 3367
 and KPD 1374
 Lenin on 2087–8, 3059, 3511
 Leninism 2088–9
 and Mao 705, 2630
 modernization 3159–61
 and Nazis 2248–9 revolution from above 3156–64 Socialist Offensive 644 on Soviet system 3115
 on Spartacus 3148
 terror 2994
 and Tito 339, 3296
 and Togliatti 3298
 toppling of statue 1625, 1626
 totalitarianism 3156, 3511
 and Trotsky 3321
 Stalin–Hitler Pact 1494, 2051
 Stalinism 2247–9
 Stamboliski, Aleksander 540, 541
 Stammheim prison 1368
 Stamp Act 77, 84, 295
 Stampacchia, Mauro 379–81, 1146–7, 1204–5, 3013–14, 3298–9
 Stanca, Teodor 2866
 Standard Fruit Company 1603, 1866, 2018
 Standard Oil 428
 Standfield, John 3301
 Standfield, Thomas 3301
 Standing Rock Reservation 902
 Standstill Act 3384
 Stanford, Maxwell (Muhammad Ahmad) 18, 2840
 Stankevich, Nikolai 333
 Stanley, Robert C. S. 3081
 Stanton, Edwin 69
Stanton, Elizabeth Cady 3164–5
 AERA 3622
 History of Woman Suffrage, A 3624
 NAWSA 3623
 NWSA 170
 racism 3165
 Seneca Falls convention 3005, 3620–1
 “Solitude of Self” 3624
 universal suffrage 3165
 Woman’s Bible, The 3624
 women’s rights 167, 168, 3619
 and Woodhull 3621, 3636
 works 3164
 World Anti-Slavery Convention 205, 3620,
 3639–40
 Stanton, Henry 3005, 3164, 3639
 Star Chamber, Court of 514, 591 STAR (Street Transvestite Action
 Revolutionaries) 2108
 Starbucks 1737
 Starhawk 1052
 Starr, Ellen Gates 10, 11
 Starr, Henry 1459
 Stasi 1340, 1341–2, 1343, 1369
 Stasova, Nadezhda 3067, 3390
State Adversary 139
 State Alliance Exchange 2726
 state capitalism 1567, 2934, 2935
 state/civil society 1409
 State Cooperative Exchange 2725
 state feminism 3633
 State Law and Order Restoration Council
 (SLORC) 551
 state ownership 1382
 State Protection Authority (ÁVH) 1626
 state repression 2757
 State Security Service (SSS) 2481
 Staten Island 81
 Statev, Hristo 537
 statism, critiqued 621–2
 Statuti, Michelangelo 129
 Staudenmaier, Michael 38–9, 199–200, 382–3, 2766–74, 3070–1
 Stauffenberg, Claus Schenk Graf von 1594–5
 Stavisky Affair 824
 Steakley, James 2101
 Stedile, João Pedro 483, 2352
 steel drums 612
 Steelboys 1785, 1807
 Stefanski, Walenty 2702
 Steger, Manfred B. 381–2
 Steinberg, James 3290–3
Steinem, Gloria 1299, 3165–8
 Sten Sture the Elder 1495
 Sten Sture the Younger 1495
 Stendhal 886
 Stephens, Alexander Hamilton 57
 Stephens, James 1192
 Stephens, Joseph Rayner 657
 Stephens, Uriah S. 1977
 Stepniak (Stapan Kravchinsky) 976 sterilization, forced 1179
 Stern, Avraham 358, 374
 Stern gang 358, 359, 1550, 1759
 Steuben, Friedrich von 82–3, 3514
 Steunenberg, Frank 1570–1
 Stevens, Jimmy 3426
 Stevens, John L. 1564–5
 Stevens, Reginald 2077
 Stevens, Siaka 3031
 Stevens, Thaddeus 217
 Stevenson, John 502
 Steward, Ira 2025, 2026
 Stewart, A. T. Q. 3305

- Stewart, Bruce E. 1060–8
 Stewart, Charles 202
 Stewart, Maria 3618
 Stewart, William 3328
 Stewart, Willie 2821
 Stewart-Steinbeck, Suzanne 2316–17
 Stickland, Gerald 2186
 Stiglitz, Joseph 1670
 Stimson, Henry 2965
 Stinnes-Legien Agreement 1362
 Stirner, Max
 and Debord 973
 egoism 97, 116, 134
 individualism 1322
 as influence 2382
 and Kropotkin 2007
 and Mackay 2155
 and Marx 335
stimanism 3548
 Stock, Robin 2362–3, 3339
 Stockholm Bloodbath 988, 1495
 Stoddard, Lothrop 21
 Stoddard, T. S. 1531, 1541, 1542
 Stoecker, Adolf 887
 Stokes, E. 1688, 1689
 Stokes, Rose Pastor 22
 Stolpe, Manfred 1343
 Stolypin, Pyotr 2719, 2886, 2893, 2926, 3551
 Stone, Dan 2122
 Stone, Lucy 169, 3618–19, 3622
 Stones River, Battle of 62
 Stonewall Riots 2094, 2107, 2108
 Stono Rebellion 75, 88, 212
 Stony Gut incident 1869, 2322
 Stop Killer Coke movement 809
 Stop the City 1387, 1388
 Stop the War 2504
 Stop the War Coalition (STWC) 227, 228
 Stopes, Marie 3568
 Storch, Nicolas 92
 Storni, Alfonsina 3597
 Stowe, Harriet Beecher 216, 2492
 Uncle Tom's Cabin 216
 Stoykewych, R. 592
 Strachan, Selwyn 1464
 Strasser, Adolph 2026, 2028
 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT) 197
 Strategic Hamlets program 2465
 Stratimirović, Djordje 1620
 Strauss, David 2230, 2477, 3679
 Strauss, Richard 2155
 Stravenhaven, Rodolfo 1669
 Stree Mukti Sanghatana (Women's Liberation Organization) 3589
 Stree Sangharsh (Women's Struggle) 3588
 Stresser, Balentione 3031 strike, strikes
 Argentina 101–5, 247–9, 259–61, 2641–2
 Belgium 360–1, 361–2
 Belize 364
 Berlin Garment Workers 2047
 Biratnagar 2441–2
 Bloody Sunday anniversary (Russia) 2891, 2894, 2941
 Britain 109, 518–19, 529–30, 2821
 Bryant and May 2229
 Caribbean islands 3559
 Chile 691–2
 Chrysler 250, 2067
 Colombia 808–10
 Cuba 914–17, 932, 2151
 Denmark 2495
 Dublin 860, 1026–7, 1046
 Durban 174
 Finland 2517
 France 2933, 3216
 Gdańsk shipyard 2302, 2698, 3073, 3497, 3502
 General Motors 250, 589, 3413
 Germany 1359–63, 2932–3
 Glasgow 519, 1384–5
 Gordon College 3194
 Great Southwest 2724
 Guyana 1499, 1866
 Homestead 379
 Honduras 1603–4
 India 1705, 1922
 Iran 1769, 1779
 Jakarta 1723
 Kalamata 126
 Korea 1988–9
 Kosovo 3010
 Kuro Solidarity Strike 1983–4, 3182
 Lawrence textile workers 502–4, 836, 1204, 2623
 Łódź 2718
 London dock workers 2229, 3061
 London matchgirls 3061
 Lowell factory girls 2023
 Lupeni 2858
 McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. 2259
 mill children 2345
 Minneapolis 3413–14
 Mombasa dock workers 2269
 Mooloya 2051
 MOZAL metal workers 2356
 Nevskii Prospect 2896, 2904
 New Jersey mill 2825
 Norway 2495, 2519
 Oshawa 589

- Patagonia 276–8
 Peru 2651, 2654
 postal workers, Canada 2618–19
 Pullman 2031
 Radom 2696
 rent 2819
 Russia 2940–5, 3511
 St. Petersburg 2881, 2882, 2884, 2891, 2924, 2944
 Scotland 519, 1384–5, 2818–19
 Seattle 22, 3663
 Serbia 3686
 Spain 183–4
 Sweden 2518
 Szczecin 3073
 Telefónica 2962
 Tokyo street car 1898
 Trinidad and Tobago 3316
 UNAM 3297, 3378–9
 United Fruit Company 240, 343, 805
 Ursus 2696
 Valparaiso harbor 691
 Vietnam 3469
 Walvis Bay 3203
 Warsaw school 2718
 Women's Strike for Equality 1299
 ZiSPO 2699
see also Barcelona General Strike; Bread and Roses Strike; hunger strikes; miners' strikes; Paterson Silk Strike; Winnipeg General Strike Strike (Eisenstein) 1080 strike action as non-violent resistance 2494
 reverse strikes 2502
 see also hartals; strike, strikes
 Strike Pageant 2623–4
 Striler War 2515
 Stroessner, Alfredo 2060, 2135, 2450, 2456, 2596, 2598, 2599–600, 2601 and Catholic Church 2605–6
 Colorado Party 2604–5, 2607 end of rule 2603–4, 2607
 MOPOCO 2605
 Ströhle, Isabel 2002–3
 Strong, Jonathan 3021
 Strong, Walter 1458
 Stroop, Jürgen 3513
 Structural Adjustment Participatory Review
 International Network (SAPRIN) 301 Structural Adjustment Policies (SAPs) 1431 conditionalities 1398
 Côte d'Ivoire 880
 Nigeria 2483
 Southern Africa 3110–11
 Struve, Lynn 2311
 Stuart, Charles Edward (Young Pretender) 1853–5
 Stuart, John, of Bute 3530
 Stuart, Roy R. 3412
 Stuart dynasty 517, 1099
 Stubbe, Lars 2275–82
 Stübner, Mark Thomas 92
 Studdart, Captain 2790
 Student, Peasant, and Worker Movement (MOEC) 800 student activism
 anarchism 127
 international socialism 218
 LGBT 2107–8
 May 1968 323, 1234–6, 2260–4
 see also Kwangju student uprising; student movements; student protests
 Student Council of the National University (CUUN) 1205
 Student Homophile League 2107–8
 Student League for Industrial Democracy (SLID) 3187 student movements 2705–7, 3168–85
 Burma 553, 554
 Czechoslovakia 3172–7
 Europe 3177–9
 Frankfurt School 3170
 Germany 558, 1347
 Global South 3179–81
 Greece 126, 127, 3168
 Korea 3181–5
 Pakistan 3181
 Paraguay 2601
 Poland 2705–7, 3170
 Spain 180, 3170
 USA 3169–70
 see also Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC); Students for a Democratic Society (SDS)
 Student Movement of Popular Unity (MEUP) 3443
Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) 3186–7
 Baker 332, 740
 Black Power 1259
 Carmichael 613, 3169
 civil rights 651
 and CORE 869–70
 Freedom Rides 1257
 Freedom Summer 750
 interracialism 2499
 police brutality 748
 RAM 2840
 Zinn 72

- Student Press and Information Center (STIS) 3176
- student protests
- Bolivia 419–20
 - China 708–9, 718–21
 - Concordia University 845–6
 - France 2260–4, 3172, 3178
 - Greece 126, 127, 1434, 1448, 3170
 - Kent State student uprising 1236, 1946–7, 2500
 - Korea 2014–15
 - Malta 2186
 - Mexico 2262, 2291, 3169, 3296–8, 3378–9
 - Netherlands 2447
 - Pakistan 2262, 2577
 - Romania 2865–7
 - Yugoslavia 3170, 3692–3
- Student Solidarity Committees 3077
- Student Struggle Council 2578
- Student Voice* 3187
- Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) 3187–9
- anarchists 159
 - Canada 2785
 - collapse of 3070
 - Columbia University 818
 - Dutschke 12
 - emergence of 222, 2500
 - HUAC 73
 - participatory democracy 2619
 - SNCC 3186
- Stuha (Ribbon) 3176
- Štúr, Ludovít 1621, 3050–1
- Štúr generation, Slovakia 3050–1
- Sturge, Joseph 205, 658
- Sturm und Drang 3189–90
- Sturmabteilung (SA) 319, 1172, 1179, 1589, 2104, 3386
- Stuurman, Shepherd 2393
- Styron, William 233
- Suara Ibu Peduli (Voice of Concerned Mothers) 1726
- Suárez, Adolfo 184
- Submission of the Clergy Act 1093
- Subsistencia 2064
- sub-treasury system 2726–7, 2728
- Subversive Aktion 1037
- Success Operation 240
- Succession, Act of 515
- Suchinda Kraprayoon 3273
- Sucre, Antonio José de 424, 1061, 3458
- Sudan 2163–5, 3191–8
- Aba Island Rebellion 3191–2
 - Anglo-Egyptian rule 3192–5
 - Bin Laden 388
 - independence 3191
 - Mahdist revolt 2163–5, 3192–3, 3198
 - nationalism 3192
 - October Revolution 3191
 - School Graduates Club 3193
 - Turko-Egyptian era 3196–8
 - writers 3193
- Sudan Campaign: see Mahdist Revolt
- Sudan Workers' Trade Union Federation (SWTUF) 3195
- Sudanese Women's League 3198–9
- Suez Crisis 237, 946, 1071–2, 1078–9, 1776, 1780
- Pan-Arabism 2068
 - and Syria 3223
- suffrage
- gradualist approach 169
 - Mother Jones 2345
 - universal 889, 3006, 3165
 - universal male 2828
 - women 889, 3005
 - see also* Pankhurst, Sylvia; voting qualifications
- Suffrage Law, Venezuela 3631
- Suffragist* 3626
- Sufis 34, 50, 1761, 3197, 3245, 3356
- Sugai, Masuro 191–3
- sugar cane cultivation
- Argentina 866
 - Brazil 2350
 - Caribbean 1657
 - Cuba 627, 916, 928
 - Dominican Republic 1014
 - Fiji 1196
 - Guatemala 1474–5
 - Guyana 608, 1498, 1500, 1856
 - Haiti 1530, 1541
 - Hawaii 1564
 - Jamaica 1868–9
 - Leeward Islands 2075–6
 - Micronesia 2304
 - Puerto Rico 39
 - strikes 1014
 - see also* burning of sugar cane
- Sugar Duties Act 1869
- Suharto government 1043, 1721–2, 1723
- fall of 3273
 - protests against 1044, 1724–6
 - reelected 1726
 - socialism 1733
 - and Untung 1732
- Suicidal Tendencies 2778
- suicide
- in custody 132, 1570
 - Delgrès and men 1266
 - against marriage 2200

- Marx, Eleanor 2229
 as protest 1996
 ritual 1720 as self-determination 3190
 slaves 1871
 as social mass movement 2252 unemployment and 3382–3
see also self-immolation
- suicide bombings 1760
- Sujatmiko, Budiman 1725
- Sukarno 3199–200
 equality 1729
 Indonesian independence 1730, 1731
 New Order 1722–3
 protests against 1724, 3180
 writing banned 1733
- Sukhair* uprising 2576
- Sukhanov, N. 2893, 2903, 2917, 2919
- Sukru, Ali 294
- Suleau, François-Louis 1295
- Sulehria, Farooq 1160–1, 1637–8, 1761–2, 1857–8, 2404, 2579–86
- Suleiman the Magnificent 2183
- Sullivan, Françoise 110
- Sullivan, Kenneth 612–14
- Sultaneh, Samsam ul 1768
- Sumatra, Western 1718, 1719
- Summer University 300
- Summerfield, Rose 2453
- Summerhill 117
- Sumner, Charles 217
- Sun City Agreement 858, 859
- Sun Yat-Sen 3200–2
 anti-tax riots 734, 3201
 death of 724
 Guomindang 114, 724, 2200, 2630, 3238
 Hsing Chung Hui 732
 May 4th movement 712, 3232–3
 modernization 732
 Revolutionary Alliance 3727
 Second Chinese Revolution 723
 three principles of the people 3201
 Tung Meng Hui 735, 3201
- Sun Yat-Sen University of the Toilers of China
 (UTK) 3724
- Sunagawa struggle 1886
- Sunar, Setu 232
- Suni, Porfirio 2657
- Sunni Muslims
 Dar'ul-Islam 532
 Future Movement 635
 Iraq 1776, 1782
 Khilafat movement 1326
 Turkey 3354
- Sunningdale Agreement 2572
- Sunrise Co-Operative Farm Community 3419
- Sunrise Operation 2176
- SUNY-Buffalo campus 222
- Suomen Anarkistiliitto 118
- Superior Council of Private Enterprise (COSEP) 2472
- supermarkets/grocery stores 1662
- Supplex Libellus Vallachorum* 2863
- Suppression of Communism Act 171, 172, 835, 2346, 2949, 3053, 3087, 3103
- Supremacy Act 517, 1092
- Supreme Administration of Civil Servants' Trade Unions (ADEDY) 3220
- Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers
 (SCAP) 1878, 3069
- Surachman, Ali 1733
- Surat Congress 1699
- Surayud Chulanont 3269
- Surendra, of Nepal 2441
- Suriname 1031, 1032, 1271
- Suriya Mal campaign 2050
- Surjeet, Harkishen Singh 1935
- Surkh Posh* (Red Shirts) 1967
- surplus value 2233
- surrealism 2428
- Survival International (SI) 462
- Survival of American Indians Association 2412
- Suryadi, Beathor 1723
- sus laws 531
- Susavang Vong, King 2054
- Susquehannocks 330
- SUTERM 2299
- Sutherland, Donald 221
- Suture 2845
- Suzuki, Mosaburō 1882, 1909
- Svensson, Anders 1153
- Sverdlov, Yakov 3606
- Svinhufvud, Pehr Evind 1202, 2519
- Svyatopolk-Mirsky, Prince 2878–9
- Swabeck, Arne 596
- Swabian League 1354
- Swadeshi* products 1697, 1698–9, 2573, 2574
- Swaminathan, Lakshmi 451, 764–5, 1679
- Swaminathan, Srividhya 367–8, 1123–4, 3021–2, 3520–1, 3527–9
- Swamp '81 Operation 531
- Swann v. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Board of Education* 753
- SWAPO: see South West African People's Organization
- swaraj* (self-rule) 1324, 1680, 1701, 1702
- Swarajya Party 448, 1326
- SWAT team 1153
- Swatos, W. H., Jr. 652

- Swaziland 3205–8
 as British High Commission 2111
 decolonization 3747
 demonstrations 3207–8
 labor force 3112
 modernization 3206–7 squatter evictions 3207
Tinkhundla regime 3207–8
 Zwane 3747–8
- Swaziland Federation of Trade Unions 3207
 Swaziland Progressive Association (SPA) 3206, 3747
 Swaziland Progressive Party (SPP) 3206, 3747
 Swaziland Youth Congress (SWAYOCO) 3207
Sweatt v. Painter 759
- Sweden
 anti-monarchist riots 2518
 collective action 2519
 defeated by Russia 2517
 food riots 2518
 Gustav Rebellions 1495–7
 Kalmar Union 1495–6
 lynching 2518
 neoliberalism 1151
 nuclear weapons ban 197 police tactics 1153–4 recession 1152
Regeringsformen 3209 social democracy 1152, 1154
 strikes 2518
 supporting ANC 173
see also Nordic countries; Swedish Revolution (1809)
- Swedish Estates 3208
Swedish Revolution (1809) 3208–10
 Sweet and Jam Workers' Industrial Union 152, 3092
 Sweezy, Paul 1649, 1669, 2249
 Swift, Jonathan 1785, 3210
 Swift, R. 3654
 Swiney, Frances 3567
Swing Riots 655, 1041, 1090, 2720, 3211–12
 Swiss Brethren: see Anabaptist movement
Swiss Peasants' War 3212–13
 Sword Society 1997
 Syahrir, Sutan 1724, 1729
 Sydney
 Day of Mourning 307
 green bans movement 1456–8, 2373
 Mardi Gras 2097–8
see also Munday, Jack Sydney Libertarians 107
 Syed, Mufti Muhammad 1934
 Syed, Rubiya 1934
 Sylvain-Bouchereau, Madeleine 3584
- Sylvis, William H. 2025–7, 3214–15
 Symbolists 116, 2312
 Synaspismos 1449–50
syndicalism 147–55, 3215–21
 anarchism and, Southern Africa 147–55
 Britain 108, 518, 3061
 and education 3217
 France 3215–19
 Greece 3219–21
 humanistic 850
 One Big Union 1026
 South Africa 148
 Syndicalist International 870
 Syndicalist Workers' Federation (SWF) 109, 3072
Syndicaliste Révolutionnaire: see
 Confédération Générale du Travail (CGT)
- Syria
 Baathists 353, 3221–7
 Britain 2073
 Christians 235
 in Lebanon 635–6, 2072
 Suez Crisis 3223
 UAR 1072
 Syrian Socialist National Party 2069, 3223
 Syrkin, Nahman 3742
Szabó, Ervin 1622, 2136, 3227–8
 Szálasi, Ferenc 1175
 Szalay, András 127
 Szczecin strike 3073
 Szczepkowska, Joanna 3077
 Szczesna, Joanna 3556, 3557
 Széchenyi, István 1143, 1619
 Szechwan-Chando rebellion 3291
 Szekely people 2862
 Szeto Wah 1604, 1605
 Szilard, Leo 193
 Szlajfer, Henryk 2706
 Szold, Henrietta 1917
 Szulc, T. 930, 932
- Ta Mok 1961
 Ta Thu Thau 3470
 Ta'ayush (life in common) 1815
 Tabaré 237
 Tabasco oil blockades 2288
 Tabata, I. B. 834
 Taborites 2830
TAC: see Treatment Action Campaign (TAC)
 Tachikawa USA air base 1886
 Tacho, Commandante 3713
 Tacitus 1587
 Tacky Rebellion 1263, 1871, 2790
 Tactical Combat Unit Nestor Zerpa Cartolini (UTCNZC) 3445

- Tacuarembó, Battle of 288
 Taejo, King 1996
 Taft-Hartley Act 1754
 Tagalog language 2666, 2668, 2674
Tageszeitung, Die 1317
 Tagore, Rabindranath 450, 1697, 1698, 1702, 2389, 2574
Tagore, Saumyendranath 3229–30
 Meerut Conspiracy Case 3229
 works 3229
 Taha, Fadwa A. A. 3192–5, 3196–8
 Tahiti
 Pomare IV 1272
 Tahitian battalion
 World War II 1272
 Tahupotiki Wiremu Ratana 2208
 Taif Agreement 636, 2072, 2405
 Tailors' and Upholsterers' Union 2905
 Taine, Hippolyte 1287
 Taino people 28, 1561, 2767, 3404
Taino revolt 1116–17
Taiping Rebellion 71, 3230–5, 3476, 3672
Taiwan 3235–40
 anti-imperialism 3235–7
 Chinese control 3235–7
 Dangwai candidates 2270
 Dutch control 3235–6
 February 28 protests (1947) 3236, 3239–40
 GNP 1663
 Guomindang 2270–1, 3235–7, 3238–9
 indigenous peoples 3235
 International Human Rights Day 2270
 Japanese control 2270, 3239
 land reform 3238–9
 martial law 3236
 nationalism 3235–7
 peasants 3238–9
 UN seat 2271
 Taiwan Expedition 1896
 Taiwan Garrison Command 3240
Tajikistan 3241–6, 3421
 Basmachi movement 643, 3243–4 collectivization of agriculture 3244
 cotton growing 3244
 creation of 3241, 3243, 3421
 elections 813
 guerillas 15
 Islam 3244–5, 3246
 Jadidism 3241, 3242, 3244
 national identity 3241–2 resistance fighters 329
 Russian Revolution 3242–3
 Taliban 3246
 Takagi, I. 1876
 Takamura Itsue 133, 3596
 Takashi, Tsumura 1904
 Take Back the Night 2411, 3629
 Takeda, Junko 962–3, 2210–12, 2311–12, 3032–4
 Takeda Rising 1898, 1899
 Takeo, Miki 1881
 Takeuchi, Aiko 2958–69
 Talbot-Williams, R. 152
 Talib, Fatima 3198
Taliban 14, 3246–8
 Talleres Ulgor 2314–15
 Talleyrand, Charles 895
taluqdars (landed intermediaries) 1687, 1703
 Talwar, Bhagat Ram 451
Tambo, Oliver 171, 172, 1940, 3203, 3248–50
 ANC 3248
 arrested 3249
 Harare Declaration 3250 and Mandela 2190, 2194, 3248
 Tambroni, Fernando 1834
 Tamil Eelam Liberation Organization (TELO)
 3251
Tamil nationalist struggle 2633, 3250–3, 3527
 Tamil Nadu politicians 2741, 3252
 Tamil New Tigers 2741, 3251
 Tamil United Liberation Front (TULF) 3251
 Tammany Hall Democrats 69
 Tampere, fall of 2932
 Tampoe, Bala 2053
 Tamtakos, Yiannis 126
 Tan Chung 3234
 Tan Malaka 2249
 Tan So 3477
 Tañada, Lorenzo 2682
 Tanaka, Kakuei 192, 1724
 Tanco, Raúl 244
 Tanganyika 2532
 see also Tanzania
 Tanganyika African National Union (TANU)
 3254–5
 Tangier, Treaty of 2334
 Tangney, Dorothy 3562
Tanka uprising 2576
 Tanna island 3426
 Tannenbaum-Tamarov, Mordecai 1917
Tanzania 3253–5, 3374–5
 and ANC 173
 British rule 3254
 cotton growing 3253–4
 Frontline States 461
 Maji-Maji Revolt 3253–4
 Nyerere 3254–5
 protest and independence 3253–5
 Ujamaa socialism 2532–3, 3374–5
 see also Nyerere, Julius; Tanganyika
 Tanzimat (New Order) period 1452, 3346

- Tao Cheng-chang 733
 TAO (Transsexual/Transvestite Action Organization) 2108
 Taoists 94
 Tappan, Arthur and Lewis 215
 Tappan Massacre 85
 Tara Devi, Queen 1931
 Taranaki War 2207
 Tarasevich, William 510
 Tarcus, Horacio 253–4, 254–7, 276–8 tariff system 1280–1
 Tariq, Farooq 2585
 Tarleton, Banastre 85
 Tárnovan, Aristid 2866
 Tarrida del Mármol, Fernando 98
 tarring and feathering 296
 Tarrow, S. G. 649, 650, 653, 2756–7, 2758, 2759, 2760–1
Társadalmi Forradalom (Social Revolution) 128
 Tartar cavalry 1074
 Taruc, Luis 1614, 1616, 2675, 2677
 Taruc, Peregrino 1616
 Taschereau Affair 404
 Tasco, Angelo 1422
 Tashkent 1710, 2874, 2919
 Tasman, Abel 1196, 2205
 Tasmania 2097
 Tata, Jamshedji 1698
 Tata-Birla Plan 2433
 Tatars 436
 Tati Company 459
 Taukei movement 2797
 Taurogen, Convention of 189
 Tavares, Josimo 482
 Tavárez Justo, Manuel A. 1014, 1018
 Tavini Huia'atira Party 1273
 Távora, Juarez 470
 Tawanka, Igñi 638
 Tawfiq, Khedive 1076, 3395
 Tax Law Opposition, Japan 1898, 1900
 taxation
 Bengal 1682
 Germany 1352–3
 Japan 1898, 1899, 1900
 non-payment 371, 1682, 1846, 3193
 peasants 1352–3
 state churches 1110 whiskey 3524–5
 see also ATTAC (Association for the Taxation of Financial Transactions for the Aid of Citizens)
 Taxco meeting 3599
 taxi strike, Seattle 3663
 Taylor, A. J. P. 513
 Taylor, Charles 2115
 Taylor, Eric Robert 3024–7
 Taylor, F. W. 1398, 1399
 Taylor, LeRoy 1862
 Taylor, Maxwell 3481
 Taylor, Richardson 1319
 Tblisi 2510
 Te Kooti Arikirangi Te Turuki 2207
 Te Whiti-o-Rongomai 2208
 Tea Act 77
 teach-ins 222
 Teachers' League of South Africa 2
 Teachers' Revolutionary Movement (MRM) 2298
 Teatro Campesino 1482
 Teatro Porvenir 444
tebhaga movement 1706, 1711, 1922, 2265, 2574–5
 techno-rationality, rejected 622
 Técnica, La 2597, 2598
 Tecumseh 583, 584
Tecún Umán 1474, 3255–6
 Teelucksingh, Jerome 3318–19
 Tegart, Charles 1677
 Teheran American embassy 1964
 Teheran Conference 3683
 Tejada Gómez, Armando 2377
 Tejar, Battle of 878
 Tekebaev, Omurbek 3332
 Tekkororen federation 1883
 Telangana struggle 1707, 1711, 3586
 Télé Diffusion France (TDF) 1268
 TELECOM 809
 Telefónica strike 2962
 Telephone Workers' Union (STRM) 2294
 Television 2777
 TELKOM 3099–100
 Téllez, Dora María 2469
 Telmex 2298
Telos 907
 Temaru, Oscar 1273 temperance 168, 3233 temperance movement, Russia 2927–8 see also Woman's Christian Temperance Union (WCTU)
 Temponeras, Nikos 1450, 3168
Temporary Autonomous Zone tactic 1741
 Temporary Bulgarian Representation 538
Temps, Le 402
Temps Modernes, Les 1420
Temps Nouveaux, Les 120, 1124, 2628, 3217
 Ten Hours Act 2464
 Ten Years' War, Cuba 911, 917–21, 2226, 2565
 Tenali Convention 2265, 2422 tenant farmers 1458–60
 Tenentismo movement 466, 468–70, 2748
Tennis Court Oath 1127, 2312, 3033, 3256

- Tepos people 884
 Tequila Effect 261
 Terán, Reque 418, 420
 Terboven, Josef 2525
Tercerista (Third Way) 2469, 2564
 Teresa Lives Movement Without Work 264
 Teresa Rodriguez Movement (MTR) 264
 Terjesen, E. A. 2524
 Termination policy 2412
 terms of trade 1661
Terra Livre 3388
terra nullius doctrine 5
 Terra Preta 1211
 Territorial Movement of Liberation 264 terror: see Archive of Terror, Paraguay terrorist attacks 280, 889, 2504, 3649
 Teruel, Battle of 3143
 Tesfaye, Aaron 1132–42
 Test Act 633, 655, 1405, 2826
 Testa, F. J. 1566
Testvériség (Fraternity) 128
 Tet offensive 818, 2260, 3168, 3483, 3493
 Teuku Umar 1720
 Texas 2726, 2824
 Texas Alliance 2725
 textile industry
 Ahmedabad 1325, 1694, 1700, 2429
 Bombay 961, 1684, 1695
 Ivanovo-Voznesensk 2891, 2898, 2905, 2907, 2914
 Korea 1981
 Lawrence strike 502–4, 836, 1204, 2623
 strikes 1750, 1751
 women workers 1750, 1751
 Textile Workers' Union 2907
 Tha Thu Thau 2249
 Thach Chia 573
Thai Communist Party: see Communist Party of Thailand (CPT)
 Thai Labor Campaign 3275
 Thai National Trade Union Confederation
 (TNTUC) 3259
 Thai Nguyen 3466, 3472
 Thai Rak Thai (Thai Love the Thais) 3277
Thailand 3265–71, 3272–8
 AIDS 3273
 anti-communism 3259
 Assembly of the Poor 290–1
 Buddhism 3259, 3266–8, 3270
 Carter 3486
 Charusathira 659
 communism 3257–8
 coup 3277, 3278
 currency devaluation 3274 democracy crisis 3272–3, 3276–8
 feminism 3275
 financial crisis 1430, 3273–4 free trade zones 3274
 French 568
 IMF 3272, 3273–4
 Islam 3266, 3267, 3270
 and Laos 2054
 Marxism 3259, 3264
 migrant laborers 3273
 NGOs 3274–5
 Patani Malay nationalism 3265–71 peasantry 3257, 3270–1, 3274
 People's Party 3257 popular movements 3272–8 reeducation of dissidents 3539
 revisionism 3264
 Revolution (1932) 3257
 road blockades 3274
 sex tourism 3273 student demonstrations 2746, 3169
 and USA 1431, 3277
 World Bank 3272, 3273–4
 Thailand Social Forum 3278
 Thailmann, Ernest 1375–6
 Thakin Party 302, 555
 Thaksin Shinawatra 1431, 3268, 3276–7
 Thakur, Guruchand 956
 Thakur, Harichand 956
 Thalia Theater 2136
 Thamilchelvan, S. P. 3253
 Thammasat University protests 3261
Than Tun, Thakin 303, 555, 3278–9 thangata (bonded labor) 2173
 Thanh, Son Ngoc 569, 572, 577, 1716
 coming to power 3035
 exiled 1713
 Umbrella Revolt 1958
 Thanksgiving Day protests 2416–17, 2420
 Thanom Kittikachorn 659
 Thant Myint-U 549
 Thapa, Surya Bahadur 2443
 Thapar, Romila 955
 Thatcher, Margaret 2040
 on anti-nuclear movement 198
 Clause 28 2094
 and Haughey 2573 hunger strikers 2967 immigration 512, 531
 and Jamaica 2198
 Lancaster House Conference 3736
 miners' strike 422, 529
 neoliberalism 690, 1387, 1395, 1882, 2807 poll tax 513, 1040
 privatization 3062
 protest song about 2382

- Thatcher Ferry Bridge, renamed 2593
 Thayer, Webster 2948
 Theater of Cruelty 1482
 Theater of the Absurd: see absurdist theater
 Theater of the Oppressed 406
Thelwall, John 1607, 3151, 3279–80
 Theodorakis, Mikis 1433, 1434
 Theodore I, of Corsica 872
 Theodosius I 2828
 Thep Jotinuchit 3259
 There Is A Limit 1814, 1815
 Thermidor 894–6, 2992
 Thermidorean Convention 895
 Thermidoreans 328, 2847
 Thésée, Lucie 2428
 Thet Kywe 553
 Thibedi, T. W. 150, 152, 154, 349, 832, 833, 1414, 3092, 3093
 Thierry, Albert 3216
 Thierry, Augustin 2953
 Thiers, Adolphe 1230, 1323, 2610, 2612
 Thimmel, Stefan 237, 1497, 2134–5, 3004–5, 3339–41
 Thiounn 567
 Third Estate 2311–12, 3256
 Third National Conference of the Commission on the Status of Women 2410
 Third Party Congress, Bolsheviks 437–8
 Third Way 322, 1395, 1913
 Third Worldism 1395, 1669, 1670, 1773
 Thirty-Nine Articles 1092, 1096
 Thirty Years' War 1034, 1046, 1110, 1358
 France 1303
 Spain 1847
 Switzerland 3212
Thistlewood, Arthur 3280–1
 Thloome, Dan 3107
 Tholoniati, Yann 401–2
 Thomas, Hugh 918
 Thomas, J. J.: Fraudacity 3316
 Thomas, John 3499
 Thomas, Norman 596, 1756, 3065
 Thomášek, Johann 1620
Thompson, Edward Palmer 3281–4
 Beyond the Frontier 3283
 on Blake 401, 3283
 and brother, Frank 3282, 3283
 class 769–70, 773
 CND 190, 513
 Combination Laws 819
 Customs in Common 3283
 experience concept 252
 Karl Marx's Theory of History 770 on Luddites 144, 2133–4
 Making of the English Working Class, The 993, 2133–4, 3282
 Marxism 2249
 nuclear disarmament 3283
 Out of Apathy 3282 on riots 1207–8
 William Morris 3282
 and Williams 3282
 Thompson, Lyn 308
 Thompson, Michael J. 2131–2, 3284–9
 Thompson, Thomas Perronet 210
 Thompson, William 1102
 Thompson, William Hale 2823
 Thomson, Charles 566
 Thoreau, Henry David 156, 652, 761, 1305
 non-violence 2491, 2492
 Thorez, Maurice 824, 825
 Thornton, Henry 210
 Thornton, John 1263
 Thornton, Merle 3563
Thousand Days' War, Colombia 806–7, 2045
 Thrace 1453, 1454
 Thrane, Marcus 2518, 2523
 Thranites 2523, 2524
 Three Electric Utility Laws 192
 Three Kings, Battle of 2333
 Three Mile Island 1, 192 threshing machines, destroyed 1040, 3211–12
 Thuku, Harry 3545–6
Thuriya (Sun) 2977
 Thurston, J. B. 1196
 Thurston, Lorrin A. 1564–5
ti legliz (little church) movement 279, 1519
Tiananmen Square 3284–9, 3289–90 annual vigils 3652
 demonstration (1919) 719–20
 demonstration (1989) 721, 987, 2509, 3181, 3284–9
Tibet
 Buddhism 2496, 3293
 China 2433, 2435
 CIA 3292
 religion and protest 2496 uprising and resistance 3290–3
 Tientsin, Treaty of 3232
 Tickers 2070
 Tigray People's Liberation Front (TPLF) 1138, 1139
 Tigrayans 1133
 Tigre, Le 2845
 Tikhvinsky, S. L. 3233
 Tilak, Bal Gangadhar 1674, 1682, 1696, 1699
 Till, Emmett 651, 761, 762, 1155

- Tilly, Charles 647, 778–9, 783, 1213, 1215, 2490, 2590, 2757, 2760
- Tilly, L. A. 1208
- Tilsit, Treaty of 442, 486, 3209
- Tilton, Elizabeth 3622
- Time* 617, 820, 1902, 1973, 3167, 3493
- Times, The* 178, 510, 2617, 2720, 3235
- Timor 1042, 1045
- Timoté, Eutiquio 2045
- Timur Shah 1029
- tin mining 425–6, 432
- Tio, El 426
- Tipu the Garos 371–2
- Tiradentes 485
- Tirado, Victor 2469
- Tirelli, Vincent 3187–9
- Tirofino 1168
- Tishiwa 703
- Tiso, Josef 1596, 3293–4
- Tisquesuza 3294–5
- Tisse, Edouard 1080
- Tisza, Kálmán 1621
- Tito, Josip Broz 3295–6
coming to power 3683
CPY 3691
dictatorship 3063
Dimitrov 31, 339 and Djilas 1011 and Khrushchev 3691
non-alignment 3688
PCI 621
on Praxis 3690
and Stalin 339, 3296
student protests 3692
Third Way socialism 950
- Tito Winyi 3371
- Tiutiukin, S. V. 2227, 2694
- Tjibaou, Jean-Marie 2458
- Tkachev, Pètr 976
- Tlatelolco 1968 massacre 2298, 3169, 3180, 3296–8
- tobacco industry 75, 2666–7
- Tobacco Workers' Union 3034
- Tobago: see Trinidad and Tobago
- Tobago Independence movement 3532
- Tobias de Aguiar, Rafael 493
- Tobin, Dan 3414
- Tobin, James 298
- Tobin tax 298, 3656
- Tocqueville, Alexis de 1234, 1279, 2044
- Tocsin* 106, 2172
- toddy tax 2802
- Todmorden textile mill 2720
- Todorov, Todor 538–9
- Toekes, Laszlo 2859
- Toer, Pramoedya Ananta 1725, 1728
- Togliatti, Palmiro 998, 1384, 1422, 1842, 3298–9
PCI 1819, 1833, 1834
polycentrism 2699
- Toivo ya Toivo, Andimba 2530, 3202, 3300
- Tojo, Hideki 451, 1679, 1887
- Tokoi, Oskari 1201
- Tokugawa era 133, 1896
- Tokyo
Chinese radicals 113
earthquake 1848, 2566
Natural Justice 113
street car strike 1898
- Tokyo Electric Power Company 191, 192
- Tokyo Printers' Union 134
- Tolain, Henri 2765
- Tolbert, William 2114–15
- Toledo, Francisco de 3336
- Toledo Auto-Lite workers 2035, 3412–13
- Toleration Act 1406
- Toller, Ernst 116, 1193
- Töller, Inga 2592–3, 3304–5
- Tolpuddle Martyrs 656, 3300–1
- Tolstoy, Leo N. 99, 634, 2323, 3301–2
as influence 140
non-violence 2491, 2492
works 3301–2
- Tolstoy Farm 1324
- Tom, Ateke 2485
- Tomek, Beverly 206–9, 941–2, 3504, 3514–15
- Tomic, Radomiro 50
- Tomsky, Mikhail 535, 3159
- Ton That Thuyet 3477, 3478
- Tone, Theobald Wolfe 3302–3 on Catholic peasantry 1790 conspiracy writings 1787
Directory 2545
and French Revolution 1786, 1793
Great Rebellion 633, 1790, 1793
as martyr 1795
and Napper Tandy 2402
United Irishmen 1800, 2545, 3392
- Tongogara, Josiah 3740
- Tonkin 2054, 3468, 3469, 3476, 3477–8
- Tonkin Gulf Resolution 220
- tontons macoutes* 278–9, 1503, 1504, 1505, 1506, 1507, 1518
- Tonypandy Riots 518
- Toomer, Jean 1555
- Topi, Tantia 1689, 1690
- Topolobampo 2454
- Toptani, Essad Pasha 36
- Torch Operation 1240, 2336
- Torchon Brûle, Le* (Burning Rag) 3576

- Toro, David 427–8
 Torogoces de Morazán, Los 639
 Toronto 2562
Torpille, La 110
 Torre Santos, Jorge 1821–4
 Torrence, Jason 1039, 1040
 Torres, Eloy 3442, 3445, 3451
 Torres, Elpidio 868
 Torres, Juan José 418–19, 420
 Torres Apablaza, Iván 1226–7
Torres Restrepo, Camilo 414, 1081–2, 2059, 2061, 3303–4
 Torrijos, Martín 3305
 Torrijos–Carter Treaty 2594
Torrijos Herrera, Omar 414, 2594, 3304–5
 torture
 Algeria 1022
 Alleg 226
 Argentina 1427–8
 Chile 688
 CIA 2597–8
 Codigo Negro 1269
 Greece 1433, 1439
 Ireland 1794
 Philippines 2684
Tory rebellion, Ireland 1046, 3305–6
 Toscano, Joe 108
 Tosco, Agustín 866, 868
 Tosta Carrasco, Vicente 2019
 totalitarianism 1175
 Arendt against 242
 Chen on 676
 GDR 1337
 Germany 1590–1
 Havel on 1563
 Lenin 2089
 Nazism 1917
 Stalin 3511
 Tou Samouth 569, 570, 1959
 Touareg peoples 2181, 2182
 Touraine, A. 3078
 Touré, Amadou Tournani 2182
 Touré, Samory 883
 Touré, Sékou 1252, 2488, 3545
 Tours, Congress of 823
 Toussaint, Michael F. 3314–18, 3319–21
Toussaint Louverture 1522, 2428, 3306–12
 Bonaparte 1265–6, 1523
 and Christophe 1511
 compared with Spartacus 3145
 and Dessalines 995, 1264–5 Haitian Revolution 89, 1533, 1534–7 and Jean-Baptiste 2552 racial egalitarianism 1265
 Sonthonax 2554, 3307, 3311
 Towers, Dorothy (later Thompson) 3282
 Townsend movement 782
 Townshend Revenue Act 77, 452
 Townsville Peace Agreement 3081 toxic waste 1053
 Toxteth riots 511
 Toynbee Hall 11
 TPAJAX 1765
 Trade Dispute Bill 3042
 Trade and Labor Union (Prohibition) Ordinance 2077
 Trade and Transit Treaty 2442
 Trade Union Act (1871) 519, 2819
 Trade Union Act (1984) 3062
 Trade Union Advisory Coordinating Council (TUACC) 3095
 Trade Union Congress: see Trades Union Congress (TUC)
 Trade Union Council of South Africa (TUCSA) 3094, 3095, 3097
 Trade Union Educational League (TUEL) 836, 1220, 2034
 Trade Union Law, Japan 1898
 Trade Union Law, Turkey 3364
 Trade Union Unity League 2034
trade unions 519–26, 808–10, 1821–4, 3720–1
 Australia 312–13
 Britain 510, 519–26
 Colombia 808–10
 Combination Laws 818–19
 Germany 1365
 Italy 1821–4
 Japan 1875–8, 3720–1
 Kenya 3042
 legality of 819 reform groups 2021
 South Africa 3084–5, 3090–2, 3095
 see also Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU)
 Trade Unions Act, Canada 587, 588
 Trade Unions and Collective Bargaining Law 2708
 Trades Disputes Act 520
 Trades and Labor Councils 313
 Trades Union Congress (TUC) 519, 520
 Trafalgar, Battle of 442, 486
 Trafalgar Square demonstration 190, 405–6
 Trail of Broken Treaties 40, 2414, 2629
 Train, George 169
 Train Apartheid Resistance Committee 834
Tramontana, La 145
 Tran Cao Van 3466
 Tran Duc Thao 3479
 Trân Van Giau 1715, 1716, 3472
 Trân Van Tra 3485

- Tranquillity Act 1966
 transcendence/immanence 980–1
 Transcendentalists 761, 1222–3, 1305
 Transform Columbus Day Alliance (TCDA) 2416 transgender activism 2108 transnationalism 135
 Transport Workers' Union (TWU) 838
 Transsexual Counseling Unit 2108 transubstantiation, doctrine of 1356
 Transvaal Federation of Trade Unions 3091
 Transvaal Miners' Association 3091
 Transvaal Native Congress 152
 Transylvania 2857, 2858, 2862–3, 2865
 Transylvanian School 2863
 Trapnel, Anna 1194–5
 Traugutt, Romuald 2704
 Trautmann, William E. 1735
Travail, Le 3492
Travailleur/The Worker 110
 Travancore struggles 1707
 Traveso, Trinidad 578
 Travis, Hark 2408, 2409
 Travis, Joseph 2408
 Treason Trials 172, 3087, 3103
Treatment Action Campaign (TAC) 3113, 3312–13
 Treblinka camp 3512
 tree spiking 1039, 1054
 Trejo, R. 2162
 Trent, Evelyn 2874
 Trentin, Silvio 1384
 Trepov, Fyodor F. 3719
 Tresca, Carlo 131, 158, 2032, 2033
 trespass as protest 1119
 Trespass on Commonwealth Lands Ordinance 310
 Tretiakov, Sergei 1080
 Treugol'nik Rubber Factory 2931
Triangle Shirtwaist fire protests 3313–14
 Trianon, Treaty of 1622
 Tribhuvan, of Nepal 2442
Tribune 1340, 3279
Tribune of the People 328
 Tribunisten 2446
 Triennial Act 1097
 Trier, Gerson 990
 Trikoupis, Charilaos 3220
Trinidad and Tobago 3314–21, 3531–2
 anti-colonial movement 3314–18
 British rule 3315–17
 Butler Riots 3316, 3318–19
 Carnival 611, 612
 IMF loans 608–9
 indentured servants 3318
 independence 3317–18
 labor protests 3318–19
 oil workers 1866 parliamentary crisis 3319–21
 self-help groups 3558
 sugar 2076, 3318–19
 US base 3317
 Water Riots 3316, 3318
 waterfront strike 3316
 Williams 3317, 3320, 3531–2
 World War I 3316
Trinidad Workingmen's Association (TWA) 3316, 3318
 Trinitario movement 1015
 Tripartite Alliance 3098
 Tripartite Union (Syria–Iraq) 3225
Triple Alliance: see Paraguay, Triple Alliance
 Triple Alliance (Alianza Anti-comunista Argentina) 273, 1580
 Triple Alliance, War of 493, 494, 2452
 Triple Entente 2890
 Triple Industrial Alliance 2821
 Tripuri Congress 2432
 Tristán, Flora 3610
 Troaré, Moussa 2182
 Trocchi, Alexander 3044
 Trolle, Gustav 1495
 Tronti, Mario 323, 1836, 1842, 1843
 Troops Out Now Coalition (TONC) 229
 Tropical Federation 2320
 Tropicalia 2378
Tropiques 2428
 Trotha, Lothar von 2392–3
Trotsky, Leon 3321–7
 American followers 2035 and Balkans 337
 Bolsheviks 437, 439, 3323
 bureaucracy 3324–5
 Chen 675
 coalition government 2905
 Communist International 596
 counterrevolution 3116
 in exile 2894
 February Revolution 2894, 2901
 Fourth International 2250
 History of the Russian Revolution 276, 3322 influence in Bolivia 427, 430 influence on James 1874 influence in Vietnam 3469
 on Jack London 2128
 Jewish origins 1920
 Kronstadt Mutiny 2003, 2005
 and Lenin 2244–5, 3158
 Leninist philosophy 2003, 2089
 Loewenheim 1380

- Trotsky, Leon (cont'd)
 maximalist position 2894 on Mensheviks/Bolsheviks 2888–9, 3323 and Nin 2486
 October Revolution 439
 on Paris Commune 2613
 permanent revolution 2083, 2247, 3323–6
 Petrograd soviet 2916, 2919
 and Qu 2782
Results and Prospects 2888
 St. Petersburg 2885
 and Serge 3013
 socialism 3322
 on Soviet system 3115, 3128 against Stalin 3059, 3115, 3324
 Tilly on 2760
 and Togliatti 3298
 uneven/combined development 773, 1666–8
 Vanguard party 3425
 war/revolution 424, 2901 and Well 2046
 women's rights 3608
 workers' democracy 3326
- Trotskyism
 Argentina 272
 Australia 317
 CPSA 272, 833
 Italy 2165
 USA 595–7
- Trott, Ben 1386–91, 1395–404
 Trovoada, Miguel 2972
 Trubnikova, Maria 3067, 3390
 Trudeau, Pierre 584, 592, 2197, 2783–4, 2787
 Trudoviks 2886, 2892, 2895, 3551
 True Path Party 3344
 True Whig Party 2114
trujillismo 1017
 Trujillo, Rafael Leónidas 933, 1013, 1014, 1017, 1217
 Trujillo revolt 48
 Truman, Harry 758, 2769, 2770
 Truman Doctrine 838, 1438, 1445
 Trumbo, Dalton 3150
 Trump, Eric Frederick 1945–6
 Trumpbour, John 1458–60
 Truong Chinh 1600, 1714, 2065, 2066, 3472, 3479, 3480, 3492
 Truong Cong Dinh 3475
 Truong Dinh Dzu 3482
Truth, Sojourner 215, 3327
 Truth Commission on El Salvador 2959
 Truth and Reconciliation Commission, Peru 2363, 2646
 Truth and Reconciliation Commission, South Africa 2195
- Tsai Yuan-pei 733
 Tsaldaris, Constantinos 1438, 1445
 Tsang, John 3651
 Tsankov, Alexander 541
 Tschombé, Moïse 3522
 Tshisekedi, Etienne 852, 853
 Tshombe, Moïse 854, 855, 856, 2138
 Tsikouris, George 1433
 Tsiranana, Philibert 1250, 2157
 Tsoebebe, Archie 459, 460
 Tsolakoglou, Georgios 1436
 Tsou Jung 733
 Tsuji, Teruyuki 1497–502
 Tsumeb copper mines 3204
 Tsvangirai, Morgan 2364–5, 3731, 3732
 Tu Duc 2663, 3476
Tubman, Harriet 3047, 3327–8
 Tubman, William V. S. 2114
 Tucapel, Battle of 2064
 Tucker, Benjamin 97, 106, 157, 2007, 2155, 3159–60
 Tucker, Corin 2845
 Tucker, Josiah 508
 Tucker, Marge 307
 Tucker, Robert C. 3158
 Tudeh Party (Communist Party of Iran) 1763, 1765, 1769, 1773, 2343
 Tудjman, Franjo 224
 Tudu, Munshi 2422
 Tuileries uprising 962
 Tuka, Vojtech 3293–4
 Tuke, Mabel 2596
 Tukhachevsky, Mikhail 2005
 Tulagi, ruined 3081
Tulane Drama Review 1482
 Tularam, Rao 1690
Tulip Revolution 811, 813, 2511, 3021, 3328–34
 Tulsa riot 17
 Tung Meng Hui (Revolutionary Brotherhood) 734, 735, 3201
- Tunisia
 French rule 1247–8
 independence movement 3335–6
 NLA 1247
 as protectorate 42
 protests under Ottoman (Bey) rule 3334
Tunisien, Le 3335
 Tunublá, Floro 804
 Tuol Sleng center 574
 Túpac, Sayri 3336
Túpac Amaru 2362, 3336–7
Túpac Amaru Rebellion II 2362, 3337–9
Túpac Katari 789, 3339
 Túpac Katari Indian Movement (MITKA) 1937, 1938

- Túpac Katari Revolutionary Movement (MRTK) 1937
- Tupamaros 1491, 2149, 2815, 3004, 3339–41, 3405, 3408, 3445
- Tür, Özlem 3342–6, 3346–50, 3350–4, 3359–65
- Turajonzoda, Qazi-kalon 3245
- Turati, Filippo 1818, 1828, 2009, 2871, 2959, 3013, 3341–2
- Turbay, Gabriel 408
- Turbay Ayala, Julio César 2149
- Turbay Cote, Rodrigo 797
- Turco-Napolitano law 1830
- Turè, Kwame: see Carmichael, Stokely
- Turgenev, Ivan 678
- Turgot, A. R. J. 846, 2842
- Turgot, Jacques 1114, 1280
- Turin 1835, 1843
- Türk-Iş* 3344, 3345, 3352
- Türk İş Workers' Union 3364
- Türk İsci Partisi (TWP) 3351
- Turkestan 643, 1029
- Turkey 3342–6, 3346–50, 3350–4, 3359–65
 agriculture 3343, 3362
 alphabets 294, 3361 anti-secular protest 3342–6 civil liberties 3350–1 coal mines 3352 coalition government 3344–5
 coup 3350
 debt 3360 economic liberalization 3343
 European Union 3345
 gender issues 3348
 GNP 3353
 and Greece 1441, 3349, 3355
 IMF 3344, 3354
 import-substitution 3351
 Islam 3342, 3344
 Land Distribution Law 3364
 Land Reform Law 3363
 language 3361
 Liberation War 3355–6
 Marshall Plan 3365
 modernization 3359
 multi-party politics 3346, 3363–5
 Ottoman empire 3346–8
 protest and revolution 3346–50, 3359–65
 rebellions 3354–9
 Saturday Mothers 3344
 Spring Demonstrations 3343
 Sunni Muslims 3354
 Tanzimat (New Order) period 1452, 3346
 War of Independence 3348–50
 workers' movements 3345, 3353 working-class protest 3350–4
 World War I 3348–50, 3355
 World War II 3362–3
see also Atatürk, Mustafa Kemal
- Turki, Daoud 1812
- Turkish Cypriots 1455
- Turkish embassies, occupied 280–1
- Turkish Grand National Assembly (TGNA) 3349, 3356
- Turkish Industrialists' and Businessmen's Association (TÜSIAD) 3353
- Turkish-Islamic synthesis (TIS) 3342
- Turkish Resistance Organization (TMT) 946
- Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic 3366
- Turkmenistan 3365–8, 3421
 independence 3367–8
 Jadidism 3365, 3366
 Latin alphabet 3367
 Qur'an law 3367
 women's roles 3367, 3368
- Turnbull, Clive 2044
- Turner, Brian 2599–601, 2601–3, 2603–8, 2608–10
- Turner, Christina 2596–8, 2599–601, 2601–3, 2603–8, 2608–10
- Turner, Henry McNeal 393
- Turner, Ian 2044
- Turner, John 108
- Turner, Nat 71, 89, 214, 1334, 3504
see also Nat Turner Rebellion
- Turner, R. H. 776, 779
- Turner, William 465
- Tuscaloosa 18
- Tuscarora War 75, 2412
- Tute Bianche 1006–10, 1307, 1308, 1392, 1393, 1830
- Tutela Legal* 2060
- Tutsi rebels 852
- Tutu, Desmond 2194, 2503
- Twenty-One Demands, Japan 185, 719
- 21 Party 552
- 26th of July Movement (J-26-M) 624, 625, 626, 916, 924, 928, 929, 930
 and Communist Party 934
 factions 929, 930–1
Granma 1486
 Ojeda Ríos 2843–4
- Twickel, Christoph 603–5, 664–8
- Two Acts 3394
- Twyford Down 1040, 1054, 2807
- Tygodnik Mazowsze* (Regional Weekly) 3075, 3556, 3557, 3558
- Tyler, C. B. 150
- Tyndale, William 514, 1092, 3000
- Tyrkova, Ariadna 3390, 3551
- Tyrone's Rebellion 1805

- Tyssowski, Jan Józef 2701
 Tzara, Tristan 953
 Tzimas, Andreas 1437
 Tzu Hsi, Empress Dowager 718, 734, 3201
- U-Thant 1019
 Ubico Casteñeda, Jorge 240, 1472, 1475, 3180
 Udom Srisuwan 3258
- Uganda
 anti-colonialism protests 3369–73 as British protectorate 3371–2
 Kabaka's Protest 3546
 Ndaiga Settlement Scheme 3372
 Uganda People Congress 3372
 Uganda People's Defense Force 859
 Uhl, Petr 3175
 Uhrig, Robert 1377
- Uhuru movement 3373–4
- UIZENSEN 1877
- Ujamaa* villages 2532–3, 3374–5
- Ukraine 1957–8, 3375–8
 dictatorship 2938
 ethnic mix 3378
 independence 1418, 2919
 Jewish people 1958
 Khmelnytsky Uprising 1957–8
 NGOs 814
 Orange Revolution 811, 812, 814, 815, 817, 2510, 3011, 3021, 3329, 3375–8
 Polish invasion 3507, 3508
 starvation 1182
- ulama* 1326, 1963, 2505
- Ulate Blanco, Otilio 878, 879
- Ulbricht, Walter 1338, 1339, 1340, 1341
- Ulema* (religious scholars) 3356
- Ulivo 1307
- Ullrich, Jan 411–12, 878–80, 3455–9
- Ulotrichian Universal Union (UUU) 2077
- Ulrich, Nicole 26–7, 2222–3, 2264–5, 2801–2, 3039–40, 3090–9
- Ulrichs, Karl Heinrich 2101–2
- Ulster collective punishment 1794 composition of 1796
 Cromwell 909
 Great Rebellion 1794
 Home Rule 783
 martial law 1793–4
 Presbyterians 1045, 1790 set up 3044
 Steelboys 1785
 Tory rebellion 3305
- Ulster Constitution Defense Committee (UCDC) 2572
- Ulster Unionist Covenant 1045
- Ulster Unionist Party (UUP) 1047, 1797, 2573
- Ulster Workers' Council 2572
- ULTAB-Brazil: see União dos Lavradores e
 Trabalhadores Agrícolas do Brasil
 (ULTAB-Brazil)
- ultra-imperialism 1316, 1653
- Ultramontanism 2841
- Ulufa'alu, Bartholomew 3081
- Uluji Ali 3334
- Ulyanov, Aleksandr 978, 2081
- Ulyanov, Vladimir Ilyich: see Lenin, V. I.
- Um Nyobe, Reuben 579, 580
- Umanità Nova* (New Humanity) 130
- 'Umar 234
- 'Umar Fāruk 3356
- Umberto I, of Italy 130, 1419, 2170
- Umberto II, of Italy 3298
- Umbrella Revolt 568, 1713, 1958
- Umkhonto We Sizwe* (MK) 172, 2193, 2222,
 2346, 3087, 3094, 3104, 3105, 3249
- Umm Diwaykarat, Battle of 2165
- Umma (Nation) Party 3708, 3709, 3191, 3194
- Umphrey, George W. 2312
- Umsebenzi* 455, 3106
- Una* 3621
- UNAM strike 3297, 3378–9
- Uncia Massacre 426–7
- underclass 772
- underdevelopment 1655, 1660, 1665–6
- Underground Railroad 90, 156, 212, 216, 2491, 3046–8, 3327–8
- Underhill Convention 1869
- UNEF-Strasbourg 3045
- Unemployed Brigade 365
- Unemployed Leagues 837, 3386, 3412
- unemployed protests 3379–88
 Argentina 261–3
 Bonus Army Unemployed Movement (1932)
 445–6, 2489
 collective action 781
 Coxey's Army 898–9
- Unemployed Workers' Council (UWC) 1860–1
- Unemployed Workers' Movements 264
- unemployment
 class struggle 3385
 Comintern 3383
 Great Depression 837, 2831, 3379–80 hidden 3381
 suicide and 3382–3
see also individual countries
- Unemployment Assistance Boards 525, 3384
- unemployment benefit 3380, 3381
- UNESCO
 Bangla language 2578
 International Language Day 2578

- Menchú 2272
 Nicaraguan literacy 2471
 Oral Intangible Patrimony of Humanity 1939 protected sites 3254
 Ungar, Molly Pulver 2562–4
Ungdomshuset 1741
 Unger, Brian 1089–90
 União Africano 2355
 União Democrática Timorense (UDT) 1042
União dos Lavradores e Trabalhadores Agrícolas do Brasil (ULTAB-Brazil)
 3039, 3388
 União Nacional para a Independência Total de Angola (UNITA) 164
 Uariate Church 2712
 Unidad Acción Sindical Popular (UASP) 1477
 Unidad Popular (UP) 112, 678, 680, 683, 693
 Unidade Sindical 498
 Unidades Táticas de Combate (UTC) 3442
 UNIFEM 3633
 Unification Day, Romania 2856
 Unification Socialist Party, Korea 1926
 Unified General Confederation of Greek Workers
 (EGSEE) 1442
 Unified Revolutionary Directorate (DRU) 1165
 Unified Socialist Party of Algeria, (PSU) 47
 Unified Socialist Party of Mexico (PSUM) 2291
 Unified Socialist Party of Venezuela (PSUV)
 674, 3443, 3446, 3447–8
 Uniform Civil Code (UCC) 1584, 1693, 3586, 3589–90
 Uniformity Act 516, 633, 1092
 Unilateral Declaration of Independence (UDI)
 3730, 3735
 Union, Act of (Canada) 594
 Union, Act of (Ireland) 1045, 1789, 1796, 2043, 2544, 2616
 repeal movement 2043, 2544
 Union, Peasant, Social, Indigenous, and Popular Front (FSCISP) 2294
 Union to Advance (UPA), Mexico 3437
 Union for the Algerian Manifesto (UDMA) 45
 Union Anarchiste (UA) 121
 Union Anarchiste Communiste Révolutionnaire
 121
 Union of Australian Women 3563
 Union Calédonienne 2457, 2459
 Union Carbide 3590
 Union of the Center 1445
 União Cívica Radical (UCR) 243, 271, 273, 277, 2640
 União Cívica Radical Intransigente (Intransigent Radical Civic Union) 2640
 Union of Democratic Forces 3068–9
 Union of the Democratic Left (EDA) 1432, 1445
 Unión Democrática, Argentina 271
 Unión Democrática Nacionalista (UDN) 1164
 Union Démocratique pour la Défense des Intérêts
 Africains (UDDIA) 854
 Union Federation of Mining Workers of Bolivia
 (FSTMB) 422, 426, 429, 430, 1938
 Union des Femmes 2612
 Union General de Trabajadores (UGT) 102,
 145, 181, 266, 848, 3130, 3137
 Union Générale de l'Agriculture Tunisienne
 (UGAT) 1248
 Union Générale des Travailleurs de Côte d'Ivoire
 (UGTCI) 880
 Union Générale des Travailleurs Tunisiens
 (UGTT) 1248
 Union of Great Britain and Ireland Act 1789
 Unión Gremial Femenina 3597
 Union of Guiana's People (UPG) 1271
 Union League 2799
 Union of Liberation, Russia 3550–1
 Union Minière 855
 Union of Moderate Parties (UMP) 3426
 Union Movement 2526
Unión Nacional Izquierdista Revolucionaria
 (UNIR) 1320–1
 Unión Nacionalista 915
 Union Nationale Party 2783
 Union Obrera Democrática (UOD) 2672
 Unión Obrera Metalúrgica (UOM) 249, 251, 864
Unión Patriótica (UP) 808, 1121, 2063, 3388–9
 Union Patriotique 3584
 Union of Peoples of Angola (UPA) 164
 Union of Poor Guadeloupean Peasants (UPG)
 1470
 Union of Popular Democracy (ELD) 1436, 1444
 Union for a Popular Movement (UMP) 645
 Union des Populations du Cameroon (UPC)
 579, 1251
 Union of Post and Telegraph Workers 2882
 Union and Progress government 283
 Unión Republicana Democrática (URD) 3442, 3450
 Union of Russian People 2882, 2921, 2926
 Union of Russian Workers 2589
 Union of School Teachers 3552
 Unión Sindical de Trabajadores del Magdalena
 (USTM) 343
 Union of Socialistic Youth (SSM) 3175–6
 Union of South American Nations (UNASUR)
 871
 Union of Soviet Socialist Republics 2085, 3160, 3162 see also Soviet Union
 Union des Syndicats Confédérés du Cameroon
 (USCC) 579

- Union of Textile Workers 3553
 Unión de Trabajadores Azucareros de Artigas (UTAA) 3004
 Union des Travailleurs Agricoles (UTA) 1470
 Union of Unions 2880, 3551
 Union of University Students (UUS), Czechoslovakia 3174
Union for Women's Equality 3389–90
 Union of Workers and Shareholders of Serbia 3687
 Union of Young Communists (UJC) 936
 Unione Anarchica Italiana (UAI) 385, 2169
Unione Donne Italiane (UDI) 3593
Unione Femminile 3592
 Unione Italiana dei Lavoratori (UIL) 998, 1835
 Unione Italiana del Lavoro (UIdL) 1822
 Unione Sindacale Italiana (USI) 130, 1822, 3015
Unionism, Northern Ireland 2571–3
UNIR: see Unión Nacional Izquierdista Revolucionaria (UNIR)
Unità, L' 1422, 2960
 Unitarian Grassroots Committee (CUB) 1837, 1838
 Unitary Home 156
Unitas Fratrum (United Brethren) 2830
 United African Welfare Association (UAWA) 3697
 United American Indians of New England (UAINE) 2417
 United Arab Republic (UAR) 1072, 1781, 2068, 3223
 United Auto Workers (UAW) 589, 1876, 1974, 2066, 2494–5
 United Black Association for Development (UBAD) 366, 1634
 United Brethren 2323
United Britons 3390–2
 United Brothers 348
 United Communist Party of Germany (VKPD) 1942
 United Communist Party of India 961–2
 United Communist Party (UCP) 836
 United Confederation of Peasant Workers of Bolivia (CSUTCB) 1937, 1938
 United Democratic Front (UDF) 174, 874, 3084, 3088, 3096, 3249
 United Democratic Party 366, 2442
 United Development Party (PPP) 1722, 1725
 United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers (UE) 3627
United Englishmen 3390–2
United Farm Workers 660–4, 1170, 1609
 United Farm Workers of America (UFWA) 2499
 United Farmers of Canada 2975
 United Federal Party (UFP) 2961
 United Front (FU), Sri Lanka 1081, 2632
 United Front of Revolutionary Action (FUAR) 800, 1163
 United Front for Sudan Liberation 3195
 United Front for Women's Rights (FUPDM) 3597
 United Fruit Company
 Ecuador 1065
 Guatemala 1472, 1473, 1475, 1485
 Honduras 1603, 2018
 Jamaica 1866
 land nationalized 1217
 strikes 240, 343, 805
 United Gold Coast Convention (UGCC) 2488
United Ireland 2617
 United Irish Society 994, 1088, 3390
 banned 3393
 and French Revolution 1792–3, 3393
 Great Rebellion 1786–7, 1795–6 leadership in exile 1796
 Tone 2546, 3392
United Irishmen 633, 993, 994, 1786, 1791, 3392–4
 French support 1793
 Muir 2366
 O'Connor 2545, 2546
 social equality 1792 transported to Australia 3490–1 and Young Ireland 3680
 United Kingdom of Portugal, Brazil, and the Algarve 486–7
 United Labor Front (ULF), Trinidad 3319
 United Left, Greece 1447
 United Left Front, Nepal 2437
 United Mine Workers (UMW) 2035–6, 2344, 3411–12
 United National Congress (UNC), Trinidad 3320
 United National Front, Lebanon 2069
 United National Independence Party (UNIP) 696, 3111, 3699, 3700–3
 United National Leadership of the Uprising (UNLU) 1758
 United National Liberation Front (FULNA) 2605
 United National Party (UNP), Sri Lanka 1495, 2052, 2633, 3526
 United Nations
 anti-terrorism 1401
 Castro at General Assembly 626 Congo Crisis 855, 857
 formation of 2497
 human rights protocol 654
 Namibia 2530

- Six Nations 584
- Universal Declaration of Human Rights 959, 2497, 3563
- United Nations Charter on Human Rights 1861
- United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) 2471, 3111
- United Nations Commission on the Status of Women 2625
- United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) 311, 2319
- United Nations Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide 283
- United Nations Decade for Women 3547, 3559, 3560
- United Nations Decolonization Committee 2771
- United Nations Development Program 1431, 3111
- United Nations Economic Commission on Africa 3111
- United Nations General Agreement on the Establishment of Peace and National Accord 3246
- United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) 626, 2359, 2398
- United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) 37, 796, 3246
- United Nations International Conference on Population and Development 2969
- United Nations Millennium Development Goals 1671
- United Nations Organization in the Congo (UNOC) 855, 857
- United Nations Security Council
 - Congo 859
 - Guatemala 240–1
 - Kashmir 1931
 - Resolution 1244 38
 - Resolution 1559 636
- United Nations Subcommission for Human Rights 284
- United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor (UNTAET) 1045
- United Negro Improvement Association (UNIA) 21, 756, 837, 1024, 1336, 1634, 3558
- United Norwegian Labor Association 2524
- United Opposition 3159
- United Packinghouse Workers of America (UPWA) 839, 3627
- United for Peace and Justice 227, 229, 2504
- United People's Front (SJM) 2438
- United People's Movement (MPU) 2469
- United Popular Action Front (FAPU) 1164
- United Progressive Party (UPP) 2703
- United Provinces, India 2794
- United Provinces of the Netherlands 1034, 2444–5
- United Representation of the Guatemalan Opposition (RUOG) 2272
- United Rhodesia Party Congress (URP) 2961
- United Scotsmen 3391, 3394–5
- United Self-Defense (AUC) 796, 798
- United Socialist Front (USF) 3262
- United Socialist Party, Italy 2871, 3342
- United Socialist Party, South Africa 149
- United States Colored Troops 68
- United States of America
 - anarchism 154–60
 - Angola 164–5
 - anti-slavery movement 211–18
 - anti-Vietnam War movement 219–23, 3482–3
 - Archive of Terror 2597–8
 - ATTAC 297–301
 - birth control movement 2968–9
 - civil rights 739–49
 - cooperatives 2725–6, 3041, 3215 and Cuban sugar industry 926
 - Environmental Protection Agency 617, 2418
 - environmental protest 1117–21
 - European immigrants 3620
 - exclusion laws 185
 - Food Not Bombs 159, 161, 1206–7
 - foreign intervention 1218–19
 - Guatemalan Human Rights Commission 1481
 - Haiti 1504, 1509, 1515, 1538
 - imperialism 1660, 1663, 1664
 - Iraq invasion 1401, 1664, 1672, 1783, 2504
 - labor rebellions 3411–15
 - labor revolutionary currents 2020–31, 2031–8
 - LGBT 2106–9
 - Marxism 2249
 - May Day 2258–9, 2295
 - Mexican immigrants 2295
 - missionary work 2058
 - non-interventionists 2488–90
 - non-violence 2498–500
 - Office of Strategic Services 1598, 1715
 - population:consumption of resources 1654
 - Reconstruction 755, 2027, 2798–801
 - Red Summer 22, 2822–4
 - Russian Jewish immigrants 1746
 - slave rebellions 88–90, 2407
 - student movement 3169–70
 - Thailand 1431, 3277
 - Trotskyism 595–7
 - Underground Railroad 90, 156, 212, 216, 2491, 3046–8, 3327–8
 - unemployment 3380, 3381–2
 - urban rebellions 3396–404
 - War on Drugs 788

- United States of America (cont'd) women in public life 214
 women's movement 3612–30
see also American entries; US entries; utopian communities
- United Steelworkers of America 3662
 United Tajik Opposition 3245
 United Tanganyika Party (UTP) 3095, 3254
 United Textile Workers (UTW) 3412
 Unity and Peace Party 3068
 Unity and Struggle 348
 Unity Party of Nigeria (UPN) 1640
 Universal Benevolent Association (UBA) 2077
 Universal Declaration of Human Rights 959, 2497, 3563
 Universal Negro Improvement Association (UNIA) 21, 22, 392, 1024, 1336, 2179, 2396
 Universal Union Artisan Confederation 2647
 Universidad Mayor de San Andrés (UMSA) 418
 Universidad Tecnológica Nacional (UTN) 865
 University Federation of Paraguay (FUP) 2601
University of California Regents v. Bakke 754
 University of the West Indies (UWI) 1862, 3560, 3578, 3579
- University Reform, Argentina 864, 273–4
 University Student Council (CEU) 2292
 University Students' Union (UEU) 2593
 Unlawful Organization Act 2221
 UNRRA 31
 UNSITRAGUA 1481
 untouchables
 Ambedkar 53, 955, 957–8, 2434
 Hindu communalism 1582–3
see also Dalits; Harijans
- Untung, Colonel 1732 unveiling as protest 1766
 Urabi, Ahmad 1076
- Urabi movement 2163, 3395–6
 Uranism 2102
 Urano, Edson I. 1875–8
 Urban Advisory Councils (UACs) 3698
 Urban League 2498
 Urban Popular Movement (MUP) 2292
- urban rebellions, USA 3396–404
 Birmingham Campaign 3398
 Chicago 3396, 3400–1
 Cincinnati 3403
 Detroit 3397–8, 3401
 Harlem 3397, 3398
 Los Angeles 3399–400, 3403
 Oklahoma 3396
 Philadelphia 3399
 Rochester Riot 3399
- Urban Self-Managed Community of Villa El Salvador (CUAVES) 2654, 2658
 Urbánek, Karel 3434
 Urbina, José María 1062
 Urdaneta Hernández, Jesús 3448
 Urdu language 345, 1922, 2577
 Ure, Midge 1314
 Uregei, Yann 2459
 Uri Party 1991
 Uribe Márquez, Thomas 805
 Uribe Vélez, Alvaro 797, 798, 809, 1083, 1085, 1169
 Uriburu, José Félix 104
 Uriona, Viviana 28–9, 287–9, 601–2, 1116–17, 1925–6, 2080, 2876–7, 3336–7, 3404
 Uritskii, M. 2938
- Urracá, Cacique of Veraguas 3404
 Urriolagoitia, Mamerto 431
 Urrutia, Manuel 625, 922, 932, 934
 Ursus strikes 2696
- Uruguay 287–9, 3339–41, 3404–11
 Artigas 287–9
 Blanco Party 3340
 CNT 3404
 Colorado Party 3340, 3405, 3408, 3410
 economic downturn 3410
 Frente Amplio 2135, 3340, 3404, 3408–10
 IMF 3404–5, 3408 labor and populist movements 3404–7
 left-wing politics 3408–11
 National Party 3405, 3408
 poverty 3410
 sugar industry 3408
 Tupamaros 3339–41, 3408–10
 women's rights 3597
- Uruguay Round 1995, 3644, 3650
 Uruguayan Alliance for the Women's Vote (AUSF) 3597
 Uruguayan Women's Alliance 3597
 US Agency for International Development (USAID) 3012, 3633
 US Constitution
 Thirteenth Amendment 20, 68, 70, 217, 755
 Fourteenth Amendment 20, 68, 167, 217, 755, 2800, 3165, 3616, 3621, 3636
 Fifteenth Amendment 68, 167, 168, 755, 2800, 3165, 3616, 3622, 3636
 Eighteenth (Prohibition) Amendment 3543
 Nineteenth Amendment 170, 1209, 2625, 3543, 3624, 3626
- US Fish and Wildlife Service 1460, 1461
 US Foreign Policy Association 2151
 US Labor Against the War (USLAW) 227
 US Navy 80
US v. Classic 759

- Usmani, Shaukat 961
 USSR: see Soviet Union
 Ustasha people 1173, 1176, 3296, 3683, 3684, 3685
 ‘Uthman, Hamid 2955
 Uthmani, Mahmud ul Haq 2581
 utilitarianism 1409–10, 2460, 3033
utopian communities 156, 3415–17
 Amana Inspirationists 52–3
 Brook Farm 3618
 Harmony 1185–6, 3417
 Icaria 1639
 Kingdom 3327
 Nashoba 2024, 3617
 New Harmony 156, 1185, 2460–1, 2567, 3417, 3617
 New Lanark 2567
 Shakers 3018–20
utopian intentional communities 3417–20
 utopian socialism 402, 677, 1574, 2231, 2567, 2766
 Owen 678, 2231, 2460, 2551, 3061
 Utraquists 2323, 2830
 Utrecht, Treaty of 1854
 Uttar Pradesh 736
 Uturuncos (Tiger-Men) 244, 1491, 2642
 Uvero, Battle of 930
Uzbekistan
 cotton growing 3422
 hybrid color revolution 811, 813
 independence 3421
 Jadidists 3241
 national movement 3420–2
 resistance fighters 329
 Užica, Republic of 3683

 Vaca Diez, Hormando 435
 Vaculík, Ludvík 949
 Vafeiadis, Markos 1438, 1439, 1445
 Vahdettin, Sultan 3349
 Vail, Tobi 2844
 Vaillant, Auguste 120
 Vaillant, Eduard 1745, 1748
 Vakanovic, Antony 1143
 Valcour Bay 80
 Valdez, Luis 28
 Valdivia, Pedro de 2064
 Vale, Antonio Caban 2380
 Valech Commission 688
 Valencia Conference 1187
 Valentinian I, Emperor 2831
 Valle, Juan José 244, 2639
 Valle Giulia, Battle of 1836
 Vallejo, Demetrio 2296, 2298
 Vallès, Jules 115

 Valletta 2183, 2186
 Vallières, Pierre 2783, 2785, 2787
 White Niggers of America 2783, 2785
 Valmy, Battle of 893
 Valparaiso harbor strikes 691
 Van Buren, Martin 3667
 Van Cott, Donna Lee 788 van der Enden, Franciscus 3151–2 van der Lubbe, Marius 2833 van der Walt, Lucien 147–55, 331–2, 349, 1028–9, 1414–15, 2345–6, 2948–9, 3034, 3039–40, 3090–9 Van Hoesen, Brett M. 1483–4 van Onselen, Charles 3728
 Van Pattern, Philip 2027
 Van region 287
 Van Rhyn, A. J. R. 1087
 Van Tien Zung 3484
 Van Vechten, Carl 1555
 Vancouver Island 785
 Vancouver protest 2832
 vandalism as protest 2777
 Vanderbilt, Cornelius 3636
 Vandiver, Ernest 741
 Vador, Augusto T. 249, 864, 865, 868
 Vandrè, Geraldo 2378
Vaneigem, Raoul 2808, 3044, 3045, 3421–3
 Vaněk, Miroslav 3175–7
 Vanguard Books 833
Vanguard party 3424–5
Vanguardia, La 248, 270, 631
 Vanguardia Popular 879
Vanu Bil uprising 2576
 Vanua’aku Party (My Land Party) 3426, 3427
Vanuatu 3425–7
 Vanunu, Mordecai 2522
 Vanzetti, Bartolomeo 104, 158, 254, 836, 1321, 2947–8
 Vaptsarov, Nikola 543
 Varela, Héctor Benigno 104, 243, 277, 278
 Vargas, Antonio 1067
 Vargas, Getúlio 428, 470, 475, 495, 2219, 2748
 Vargas Llosa, Mario 2652
Variedades 2218
 Varkiza, Agreement of 1438, 1444
 Várkonyi, István 128
 Varlet, Jean 1290, 1291
varna-jati system 958
Varnashrama (caste ideals) 1327
 Vasa, Gustav 1495–6
 Vasconcelos, José 2375
 Vasena Workshops 247
 Vashandi 3739
 Vasi, Ion Bogdan 2854–6
 Vasile, Radu 2855

- Vasilev, Nikolai 3068
 Vasili, Pyotr 1159
 Vásquez Castaño, Fabio 1081, 1082
 Vassalli, Michele Antonio 2184
 Vatican II 2058–9, 2351
 Vaughn, Henry 1608
 Vaux, Comte de 2851
 Vavi, Zwelinzima 3108
 Vázquez, Tabaré 3341, 3408
Vázquez Rojas, Genaro 1122, 2283, 3427–8
 Veblen, Thorstein 3041
 Vega, Father 903
 Vega, Louis Mercier 143
 vegans 3428
vegetarian protests and movements 3428–9
 Vegetarian Society 3428
 Veiga, Carlos 603
 Veil, Simone 3575, 3576
 Velasco, Íñigo de 844
Velasco Alvarado, Juan Francisco 414, 3430–1
 agrarian reforms 2643
 anti-imperialism 1568 political alliance 3405
 Velasco Ibarra, José María 1058
 Velásquez, Cayetano 1016
 Velásquez, Febe Elizabeth 1189, 2959
 Velásquez, Ramón 3440 velayat-e faqih (jurisprudence) 1963
 Velázquez, Andrés 3447
 Velázquez, Fidel 2299
Velázquez, Francisco José 3431–2
 Velázquez de Cuéllar, Diego 602, 1562
 Velho, Domingos Jorge 2588, 3746
 Véliz, Alejo 1938
 Veloso, Caetano 2378
 Velouhiotis, Aris 1436
 Veltmeyer, Henry 1066
Velvet Revolution 810, 1025, 1391, 1563, 2509, 3176, 3178–9, 3432–6
 Velvet Underground 2777
 Vendée region 442, 893–4, 1004, 1277 vendetta, Corsican practice 872
 Vendôme Column 898, 1228
 Venepal factory 3453 venereal disease 2968
Venezuela
 banking crisis 3440
 Bolivarianism 412–16
 Burla mining region 3451
 Caracazo 603–5
 Catholic Church 3437
 co-management 3454
 coffee production 3459
 cooperatives 3453
 Creole elite 3459
 democracy 3436–41
 earthquake 3456–7
 endogenous development 3454–5
 gold mining 1471, 3451–2
 Guaicaipuro 1471–2
 guerilla movements 3441–5
 IMF 604, 3439, 3446
 independence 3706
 indigenous resistance 3630–1
 kidnapping 3443–4 looting 3439
 martial law 3439
 MAS and Causa Radical 3445–8
 massacre 603–5
 MBR-200 3448–50
 MERCOSUR 3658
 military uprisings 3448–51
 National Electoral Council 672
 Negro Miguel Rebellion 3451–2
 neoliberalism 3438–41
 oil industry 670, 942, 3436, 3438, 3453
 Primera 2750–2
 recovered companies 3453–4
 resistance 3436–41
 Social Production Enterprises 2453 socialist enterprises 3455 solidarity economy 3452–5
 women's movement 3630–2
 women's rights 3598
 worker control 3452–5
 see also Chávez, Hugo
Venezuelan War of Independence 3455–9
 Venizelos, Eleftherios 1441, 1442, 1452, 1453
 Venkiah, Kolla 2423
 Venner, Thomas 1103
 Venstre (Left) Party 990, 2524
 Ventiris, Constantinos 1438
 Veqilharxhi, Naim 34
 Veracruz Revolutionary Syndicate of Tenants 2755
Verbote 2027
 Verdeç, Ilie 2866
 Verdi, Giuseppe 1496
 Verdonk, Rita 2448
 Verdun, Treaty of 2829
 Verein Unabhängiger Sozialisten 2047
 Verma, Shiv 3041
 Verma, Shyamji Krishna 1675
 Vernengo Lima, Héctor 275, 276
 Versailles, storming of 2611
 Versailles, Treaty of aftermath 1588
 China/Japan 719, 2200, 2995, 3202
 Chinese students' protest 3179

- Corsica 872
 Germany 889, 1179, 1363, 1365, 1592, 3036–7
 Versailles Peace Conference 713, 722, 971, 1597, 1778
 Versailles System 1172
 Verschueren, Nicolas 360–1, 361–2
 Vertov, Dzigo 1080
 Vesela, Pavla 2227–8, 2693–4, 3632–4, 3719–20
 Vesey, Denmark 71, 89, 214, 2408 see also Vesey's rebellion
 Vesey, Robert 3460
 Vesey, Susan 3460
Vesey's rebellion 3459–61
 Vetruba, Brian 1368–9
Vía Campesina 1210, 1211, 1996, 2621, 3461–3, 3642, 3645–6, 3651
 Vian, Boris 2380–1
 Viani, Osvaldo Gnocchi 1821
 Vicari, Angelo 1833
 Vicariate of Solidarity 2060
 Vichy regime 1240
 Vicksburg, siege of 63
 Victor Emmanuel II 1150, 1333, 1824, 1826, 1827
 Victor Emmanuel III 30, 1176, 2383
 Viores, Mejia 1481
 Victoria, of Britain 16, 368, 1691, 2206
 Victoria Agreement 701
 Victorian Women's Trust 3563
 Victory y Suárez, Bartolomé 270
 Vidal, Gore 74, 1458
 Vidali, Enrico 3149
 Videla, Jorge Rafael 255, 2159
 Videnov, Zhan 539
 Vidyarthi, Ganesh Shankar 3041
Vie Nuove 3149
Vie Ouvrière, La 3217
 Vieira, Joao Nino 1493
 Vienna, Congress of 189, 1148, 1347, 1744, 1825, 2445, 2715
 Vienna, Treaty of 2185
 Vienna World Peace Congress 1922
Vieques 3464–5
 environmental concerns 3464
 military occupation 3464
 and Puerto Rico 2772, 2773
 Viera Gallo, José Antonio 904
 Viet Minh 1714, 1716, 3480
 Viet Nam Quoc Zan Dang (VNQZD) 3467–8, 3480
 Viet Nam Zuy Tan Hoi (Society for the New Vietnam) 3465
 Vietcong (National Liberation Front) 218, 572
Vietnam 3465–71, 3475–89 anti-colonial movements 3465–71, 3475–8 August Revolution 1716–17
 collectivization 3487 communist movements 3465–71 divided 3474
 feminism 3467
 French Foreign Legion 219
 Indochina War I 3471–5
 Indochina War II 1600, 2663, 3479–86
 Indochina War III 3262–3, 3486–9
 land redistribution 3480
 neoliberalism 3488
 peasants 3466, 3487, 3488
 protests 3486–9
 reeducation camps 3487
 reformist nationalism 3466 reunification 1600, 3479, 3486
 Soviet Union 2066
 strikes 3469
 worker demonstrations 3468
 WTO 3488
 see also Hồ Chi Minh (Nguyen Tat Thanh); Indochina
 Vietnam: A Television History 2663
 Vietnam, Democratic Republic of (DRV) 1596, 1598, 1716, 2464–5, 2663, 3471, 3479, 3487
 Vietnam, Republic of 1599, 3479
 Vietnam, Socialist Republic of 3487
 Vietnam Action Committee (VAC) 304
 Vietnam Bulletin 218
 Vietnam Conference 3523
 Vietnam Duy Tan Hoi 2663
 Vietnam Restoration League 2664
 Vietnam Revolutionary Youth League 1579
 Vietnam Solidarity Campaign (VSC) 218
 Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW) 221
 Vietnam War 303–4, 1887, 2260, 2499–500
 Vietnamese Federation of Christian Workers 2465
 Vietnamese Nationalist Party (VNQDD) 1598
 Viglietti, Daniel 2380
 Vigor Youth of EOKA (ANE) 946
 Vila Piola, Ramón 1014
 Vilafrancada Revolution 187
 Vilas, Carlos 773, 2470
 Vile Ordinance 1271
Villa, Francisco Pancho 606, 2162, 3489–90
 Division of the North 2277, 2540
 peasant army 2539
 Red Battalions 138
 Reed on 2825
 and Zapata 3710
Villa Constitución 251
 Villaflo de Devincenti, Azucena 255, 2159
 Villalar, Battle of 2569
 Villalba, Jovito 3436

- Villalobos, Marti 2684
 Villanova Castro, Maria Cristina 240
 Villarroel, Aurora 420
 Villarroel regime 429
 Villatte, General 3310
 Villeda Morales, Ramón 2128
 Villepin, Dominique de 1238, 1646
 Villistas 606, 2540
 Vinagre, Antônio 562
 Vinagre, Francisco 561
 Vincent, Cuthbert 2727, 2728
 Vincent, Henry 2463, 2727
 Vincent, Jean-Marie 1845
 Vincent, Stênio 1516–17, 2872
 Vincent, Steven 2766
 Vinci, Luigi 2622
Vinegar Hill Rebellion 1788, 3490–2
 Viola, Roberto 2159 violence against women
 Australia 3564
 Bahamas 2734
 Caribbean 3560
 Hindu/Muslim 1585
 see also rape; sexual violence violence/religion 2490
Violencia, La, Colombia, 407–10, 795, 798, 801, 1167
 Violent Radicalization and Homegrown Terrorism Act 3665
 Viplavakari LSSP 1494, 2052
 Viqueque Revolt 1042
 Virginia
 American Civil War 66
 American Revolution 79
 Bacon's Rebellion 75, 330–1
 Brown 534
 Saint-Domingue refugees 1319 slave laws 201, 331
 Virno, Paolo 1845, 2369–72
 Visconti, Francisco 3449
 Visigoths 2828
 Visser, Paul 1088
 Visser, Wessel P. 1087–8, 1556–7, 2625–6
 Vitale, Luis 692
 Vitoria Workers' Coordinating Committee 184
 Vivekananda, Swami 1674, 1696
 followers 1698
 Vladimirescu, Tudor 2864, 2865
 Vlasic Foods 1170
 Vllasi, Azem 3010
Vo Nguyen Giap 3492–3
 communism 3472
 Dien Bien Phu 3474
 Easter offensive 3485 and Hô 1598, 1599, 1600, 1714
 PLA 3471, 3472
 as pro-Soviet 3480
Voce degli italiani, La 998
 vodka 2927
 Vodou: see voodoo
 Vodun religion 1513
 Vogel, Lise 772
 Vohor, Serge 3427
 Voice of America 3077
 Voice of Coloradism 2606
 Voice of Dalits International (VODI) 959
Voice of Industry 2130
Voice of Labour 108, 148, 149
 Voitinsky, Grigorii (Zharkin) 674
Voix des Femmes, La 3584, 3620
Voix du Peuple, La 870
volcanto (political music) 637
 Voline 98
 Volkenstein, Olga 3551
 Volkova, Varvara 3390
Volksgemeinschaft (people's community) 1591
Volksverein 1350
Volontà 2170
 Vol'skii, Vladimir Kazimirovich 3153
Voltaire 3493–5
 anti-clerical 1110, 1111
 Candide 1112
 on history 2263
 Newtonianism 2990
 on Spartacus 3146
 works 3494–5
 Volunteer Organization for Armed Opposition to Japan 3258
 von Busche, Baron 3146
 Von Hayek, Friedrich August 2436
 Von Tessmar, Richard Karl 2141–2 von Weichs, Raphaela 3369–73
 Vonnegut, Kurt 73 voodoo 2154
 Vorkuta labor camp 143
 Vörösmarty, Mihály 1920
 Vorse, Mary Heaton 2253
Vormwärts 1582, 2116
 Vorwärts Association 259, 270
Vormwärts Weekly 259
 voting qualifications 2826
 Voting Rights Act 748–9, 1975
La Voz de la Mujer 103, 124
 Voz Propia 2063
 Vradis, Antonios 126–7, 1740–1
 Vuelvan Caras 3454–5
 Vula Operation 3107
 Vulamanzi Operation 3102
 Vyborg district 2898–9
 Vychinski, A. Y. 705

- Wada Kyutaro 1848
 Waddedar, Pritilata 1678
 Wade, Abdoulaye 3006, 3007
 Wade-Davis Bill 66
 Wadud, Amina 1811
 Wafd Party 1069, 1077, 1557
 Wage Act, South Africa 3093
 Wagenmann, Uta 688–90
 wages
 Australia 314
 gender (in)equality 512, 3134, 3554
 Jamaica 1866
 Japan 1879
 maximizing 784
 Russia 2923
 Wages for Housework 2099
 Wagner, H. L. 3190
 Wagner, Richard 2477
 Wagram, Battle of 443
 Wahehe Uprising 2392
 Wahhabis 371, 1809, 1810, 2365, 2976, 3422
 Wahid, Abdurrahman 1726
 Wahlert, Matthew H. 410–11, 1192–3
 Waikato War 2207
 Wainwright, J. 3658
 Waitangi, Treaty of 2206, 2208
 Waiters and Caterers' Union 3730
 Wakasa Bay 191
 Waldeck-Rousseau Act 850
 Walden, Herwarth 1609
 Waldman, Louis 3065
 Waldorf Astoria Declaration 1602
Walentynowicz, Anna 2508, 2695, 3073, 3497
Wales 2463–4, 3497–501 Chartism 657, 3500–1
 coal miners 518, 3497–8
 communism 524
 iron industry 3499
 language 3501
 means testing 524
 Merthyr Riots 3499–500
 nationalist protest 3497–501
 Newport Rising 657, 2463–4
 Rebecca Riots 520, 3500
 rebellion 1804
 Scotch Cattle 3498–9
 unemployment 525
Walesa, Lech 3501–4
 and Kiszczak 3076
 KKP 3073
 KOR 3502
 and Kuroń 2013 and Michnik 2301
 OPZZ 2708
 as president 2508
 reinstatement 2709, 3073
Walker, David 214, 215, 395, 3504
 Walker, William 637, 2465–6, 2472
Walker's Appeal 3504
 Wall, Derek 1039–40
 Wall Street Crash 521, 3380
 Wallace, George 744, 748, 754
 Wallace, Henry 838
 Wallace, Ian 1193–4
 Wallachia 2862, 2863, 2865
 Wallachian Uprising 2864
 Wallerstein, Immanuel 1217, 1669, 3647
 Walloon Popular Movement 361
 Walloons 361, 362–4
 Walsall by-election violence 177
 Waltham-Lowell system 1118
 Walton, J. 1209
 Walus, Janusz 1552
 Walvis Bay strike 3203
 Walwyn, William 1100, 1102, 2119
 Wandel, Torbjörn 1323–4
 Wandycz, P. 2720
 Wang Dan 3287
 Wang Hongwen 2204
 Wang Jinwei 725
Wang Ming 726, 727, 2782, 3505–6, 3726
 Wang Ruoshui 2839
 Wani, Asfaq 1934
war communism 535, 2003, 2086–7, 2936, 3158, 3506–12
 War to Death Decree 3457
 War Economy Enabling Act 318
 War Measures Act 2787
 War Precautions Act 303, 2039
 War Resisters' International (WRI) 2500 war on terrorism 72, 803, 1401–2, 2778, 2779
 War on Want 1312
 Ward, Colin 109, 2171
 Wardha CWC 2793
 Wardley, James and Jane 3019
 Wardour Castle 289
 Ware, John 2096
 Warren, Bill 1648, 1669
 Warren, Joseph 78
 Warren, Josiah 156
 Warren, Mercy Otis 84, 3615, 3616
 Warriors of Christ the King 183
 Warsaw
 anti-Jewish riot 1915
 Great Synagogue destroyed 3513
 lynching 2716
 school strike 2718
Warsaw ghetto uprising 1915, 1917, 3512–14
 Warsaw Pact 32, 197, 198, 628, 950

- Wartburgfest* 1347, 1349
 Waruhiu Itote, Chief 2255
 Washington 745, 3402
 Washington, Booker T. 392, 756, 1023, 1608
Washington, George 3514–15
 American Revolution 76, 79
 Continental Congress 3514–15
 freeing slaves 3514
 and Lafayette 505, 2041
 resigning 87
 and Rochambeau 2851
 Whiskey Rebellion 3525
 Washington, Harold 1852
 Washington Conference 724
 Washington Consensus 267, 787, 2263, 3407
Washington Post 222, 2958
 Wasielewski, P. L. 650, 651
 Waskey, Andrew J. 50–1, 293–4, 366–7,
 1021–3, 1638, 1927–8, 1957–8, 2163–5,
 2365–6, 2404–5, 2728–9, 3068, 3151–2,
 3191–2, 3199–200, 3395–6, 3681–2
 Wasmosy, Juan Carlos 2601, 2602
 Watch Tower church 3697, 3700, 3728
 Water Riots, Trinidad 3316
 water supplies
 ANC 3099, 3100
 multinational corporations 3099
 pollution 1119–20
 prepayment meters 3100
 privatization 790–2, 3099–100
 South Africa 3099–103
 USA 1118, 1119–20
 Water Wars, Cochabamba 790–2
 Watergate scandal 223, 3484
 Waterloo, Battle of 189, 443, 1282, 2445
 Waters, Ethel 1555
Wathbah 1776, 1777, 2954, 3515–16
 Watson, David 1052
 Watson, James 3280
 Wattasid dynasty 2332
 Watts, Susannah 204
 Watts riots 749, 3399–400
 Wave Hill dispute 315
 Wavell, Viceroy 1704, 1705
 Wawer, Battle of 2716
 Waxhaw Creek 85
 Wayland, J. A. 2454, 3418
 Wayne, Anthony 83
 Waz (Labor) League 1137
WCTU: see Woman's Christian Temperance
 Union
 weapons of mass destruction 1783, 2779
 Weather 395
 Weather Underground 818, 2500, 3189
 Weathermen 2757
 Webb, Philip 2341
Webb, Sidney and Beatrice 3061, 3516–18
 Webb, Todd 3053–5
 Webber, John 77
 Weber, Max
 bureaucracy 647, 2244
 capitalism and religion 479 Catholicism 481
 charisma 647–8, 647–9
 class 769
 and Lukács 771, 2136
 socialism 1743
 status 771
 Webster, Delia 3047
Weckruf, Der (Dawn) 1609
 Wedderburn, John 202
 Wedgwood, Josiah 203
 Wedman, Homme 870–1
 Wei Chang-hui 3231
Wei Jingsheng 985, 3285, 3518
 Weil, Felix J. 1253
 Weill, Kurt 504
 Weimar Republic
 equality for women 3580
 and German Revolution 888, 889, 1359
 Hitler 2832
 homosexuality 2104
 KPD 827
 socialism 1374
 start of 1587, 1588
 Weinberg, Bill 2286–90, 2539–42
 Weinberg, Jack 377
 Weinbren, Ben 832, 3093
Weinsberger Bluttat 1354
 Weinzierl, Karolin 2854
 Weishaupt, Adam (Spartacus) 3146
 Weiskel, Timothy 884
 Weisman, Jean 3571–4
 Weiße Rose (White Rose) 1370, 3525–6
 Weitling, Wilhelm 333, 2025, 2234
 Weizmann, Chaim 372, 1816, 3742
 Welensky, Roy 3700
 Welfare Dictatorship 1341 welfare state 1351, 3171
 Well, Roman 2046
 Wellawatte Spinning and Weaving Mills 969, 2051
 Welles, Sumner 2151–2
 Wellesley, Arthur: see Wellington, Duke of Wellington, Duke of 187, 189, 443, 633, 2826
Wells, Ida B. and Addams 11, 3519
 anti-lynching campaign 16, 3518–20
 Red Record, A 756
 Wells, R. 2720

- Welsh Trades Union Congress 3384
 Wenceslas IV 2829
 Wendt, Simon 16–19, 19–21, 88–90
 Went, Robert 1670
 Wentworth, Thomas 1806
 Wentworth, W. C. 105
 Werfel, Franz 287
 Werkspoor Caribbean (WESCAR) 942, 943
Wesley, John 3520–1
 abolitionism 202, 368
 Advice to the People call'd Methodists 3521
 American War of Independence 508
 colonization 206
 Thoughts upon Slavery 3521
 Wesselényi, Miklós 1619, 1620
 Wessin y Wessin, General 1018, 1020
 West, Rebecca 3569
 West Africa National Secretariat (WANS) 2487
 West Bank 1816, 2502
 West Germany: see German Federal Republic
West Indian Gazette 2527
 West Indies 86
 West Indies Federation 1862
 West Indies Sugar Company (WISCO) 1866
 West Timor 1043
 Westad, Odd Arne 1218
 Westergaard, Kurt 992
 Western Desert Campaign 1181
 Western Federation of Miners (WFM) 1570,
 1735, 2030, 2345
 Western Labor Conference, Calgary 3535
Western Labor News 3535
 Western Province General Workers' Union
 (WPGWU) 3095, 3096
 Western Province Workers' Advice Bureau
 (WPWAB) 3095
 Western Rebellion 509, 1094
 Western Somali Liberation Front 1139
 Westmoreland, General 3482
 Westmoreland Tollgate Riots 1869
 Weston, Randy 611
 Westphalen, Jenny von 2230
 Westphalen, Ludwig von 2230
 Westphalia, Kingdom of 1281
 Westphalia, Peace of 1358, 1919, 2323
 Wetherell, Charles 507
 Wetie Operation 2481
 Wexford 1788
 Weydemeyer, Joseph 999, 2025
 Weydemeyer, Otto 2026, 2028 whales 1460
 Whampoa Military Academy 3202
 wheat county riots: see East Anglian Wheat County Riots
 wheat market 501, 593, 2975
 Wheelock, Jaime 2469
 Wheelwright, John 155
 Whelehan, Niall 1161–2, 2691–2
 Whipps, J. D. 1742
Whiskey Rebellion 1300, 3524–5
 Whitaker, Ann-Maree 3490
 White, Doug 305
 White, R. J. 465
 White, Robert W. 1797–8, 1800–2, 1802–3
 White, Walter 758
 White Army 3507
 White Australia Policy 1738, 3425
 White Bicycle Plan 161
 White Citizens' Council 2275, 2614
 White Defense League 2526
 White Flag League 3193
 White Lotus Society 716, 718
 White Overalls 1152
 White Revolution 1770
White Rose (Weiße Rose) 1370, 3525–6 white supremacists 19, 755, 1608, 2801 white terror, Chiang Kai-shek 2201, 2202
 White Warriors Union 2957
 Whiteboys 656, 1785, 1807
 Whitefield, George 3520, 3614
 Whitehead, Anne 2449–56
 Whitelaw, William 531
 Whiteman, Unison 1464
 Whitfield, George 3019
 Whitlam, Gough 3, 4, 223, 305, 310, 315, 316, 2458
 Whitman, Walt 1555
 Whitney, Dwight 903
 Whitney, Jennifer 3661–5
 Whitney Museum of American Art 1483
 Whorton, J. C. 3428, 3429
 Whyte, William 973
 Wickens, Peter 153
 Wiehahn Commission 874
 Wielopolski, Franciszek 2703
 Wiesel, Elie 2857
 wig manufacturing protest 1982
 Wiik, Karl H. 975
Wijeweera, Rohana 2621, 2632, 2633, 2634,
 3526–7
Wik People v. Queensland High Court 5
Wilberforce, William 203, 204, 764, 3022, 3521, 3527–9
 Clapham Sect 210
 colonization 206
 Letter on the Abolition of the Slave Trade 3529
 Wilbur, C. Martin 3202
 Wilckens, Kurt Gustav 278
 Wilcox, Robert W. 1564, 1565–6
 Wildcat Anarchist Collective 831

- Wildman, John 1100
 Wilhelm I, of Germany 887, 2101
 Wilhelm II, of Germany
 abdication 1361, 1587, 2117
 coronation of 1351
 fleeing Berlin 1373, 3055
 shipbuilding 1349
 Wilkens, Kurt 104, 243
Wilkes, John 508, 1606, 2210
 Wilkes and Liberty movement 3529–31
 Wilkie, David 530
 Wilkins, Roy 3187
 Wilkinson, Ellen 525
 Wilkinson, Jemima 3614
 Will, Brad 2537
 Willard, Frances 3543
 William I of Orange 1035
 William III of Orange 1385, 1405, 2445, 2591–2
 William IV, of Britain 2826
 William V of Orange 1718
 Williamite Wars 1784
 Williams, Bert 309
 Williams, Betty 2522
 Williams, David 505
 Williams, Donovan 3084, 3085
Williams, Eric 3317, 3320, 3531–3
 Capitalism and Slavery 3531, 3532
 Documents Illustrating the Development of Civilization 3531–2
 Negro in the Caribbean, The 3532
 Williams, Eugene 2823
 Williams, Fannie Barrier 11
 Williams, Gary 308
 Williams, Howell 2967–8
 Williams, Hugh 3500
 Williams, K. 2746
 Williams, Kath 3563
 Williams, Kieran 2742–6
Williams, Raymond Henry 765, 2249, 3283, 3533
Williams, Robert F. 17, 2067, 2840, 3533–4
 Williams, Ruth 1955–6
 Williams, William Appleman 73
 Williams, Yohuru 397–9
 Williams, Zephania 2463
 Willingdon, Viceroy 1684
 Willis, Albert S. 1565
 Willisen, Wilhelm von 2702
 Willner, A. R. 650
 Wilmot, Swithin 2320–3
 Wilpert, Gregory 668–74, 3436–41, 3448–50
 Wilson, Charlotte 123
 Wilson, Dick 2415
 Wilson, George 3460
 Wilson, Harold 512, 2039
 Wilson, Henry 1046, 2895
 Wilson, Henry Lane 2277
 Wilson, James 1385
 Wilson, Joseph 774, 2803–4
 Wilson, Woodrow
 “Fourteen Points” speech 319, 1742, 2186, 2200, 2932
 Germany 1360
 Haiti 1522
 and Huerta 2278, 2540
 against IWW 1737
 Mexico 3490
 Oklahoma protesters 1458
 Palmer raids 1412
 protest at inauguration 2625
 Russian Revolution 1217
 and Socialist Party 3064 suffrage march 3626
 Wilson’s Creek 58
 Wimmin’s Fire Brigade 110
 Winch, D. 3055
 Windhoek 2390, 2530
 Windischgrätz, Alfred 1621
Windward Islands 350–1, 1273, 3578–9
 Winiger, José 259, 260
 Wink, W. 2502
 Winkler, Hans 1380
 Winkler, Inga T. 3099–103
 Winne, George Jr. 220
Winnipeg General Strike 588, 591, 3554–6
Winstanley, Gerrard 99, 122, 3536–8
 class 3537
 Diggers 1099, 1103–4, 2988, 3536–7
 Law of Freedom, The 3537–8
 New Law of Righteousness, The 3536
 pamphlets 3536
 St. George’s Hill 3536–7
 Winter Palace siege 2918
 Winthrop, John 1633, 3416
Wirat Angkathawon 3538–9
 Wiremu Tamihana Tarapipipi 2206
 Wisconsin-Madison University 222
 Wishart, George 3000
Wissenschaftlich-humanitäres Komitee 1586
Witbooi, Hendrik 2391, 2393, 2530, 3539–40
 WITCH 3630
 witchcraft 3697
 Without Languor 1814
 Witko, Tashunke: see Crazy Horse
 Witkop, Milly 158
 Witkop-Rocker, Milly 125
 Witness for Peace 2502
 Witt, Cornelius de 2591–2, 3152
 Witt, Jan de 2591–2, 3152
 Witte, Sergie 2719

- Wittenberg, Joseph 1917
 Wittig, Monique 3575
 Wittner, Lawrence 193, 197
 Witwatersrand 147–8, 3091
 Witwatersrand Middlemen Tailors' Association 2948
 Witwatersrand Mine Employees' and Mechanics' Union (Labor Union) 331
 Witwatersrand Shop Stewards' Council 150
 Władysław IV Vasa 1957
 Wobblies: see Industrial Workers of the World
 Wodié, Francis 880
 Wofford, Harris 741
 Wohlschwil, Battle of 3213
 Wojtyła, Karol 2308, 2508, 3078
 see also John Paul II, Pope
 Wolde, Aklilu Habte 1135
 Wolf, Eric 766, 1474
 Wolf, Martin 299
 Wolf Watershed Educational Project 2419
 Wolfe, Bertram D. 2089
 Wolfe Tone, Theobald: see Tone, Theobald Wolfe
 Wolff, Wilhelm 3036
 Wolle, Stefan 1337
 Wollstonecraft, Mary 122, 886, 1409, 1421, 3540–2
 Wolman, Gil J. 3044
 Wolseley, Garnet 944, 2164
 Wolsey, Thomas 514–15
 Wolstenholme Elmy, Elizabeth 3567
 Wolton, Douglas 832
 Womack, John, Jr. 1459
Woman Rebel 2968, 3626
Woman Voter 3562
Woman's Christian Temperance Union (WCTU) 3542–3
 Woman's Commonwealth 3419
 Woman's Property Bill 3164
 Woman's State Temperance Society 3164
women anti-slavery movement 3620
 Caribbean 3558–60
 fiction writers 3579
 Chartists 657
 China 707–8, 730, 3233
 English Revolution 1106–9
 Fifth Monarchists 1109, 1194–5, 1225
 French Revolution 1292–7
 Hungary 1630–1
 Islamic dress 644, 1644–5, 1766, 1774, 1964, 3345 in labor force 3134
 Levelers 1107–8
 motherhood 1177, 2344, 3557, 3591, 3607, 3608, 3616, 3633
 National Guard 2410
 national liberation in Africa 3545–50
 Nepal 231–2
 Poland's 1848 Revolution 3544–5 in Polish Solidarity movement 3555–8
 Puerto Rican politicians 38, 39 reproductive health and rights 2969
 Russian Revolution 3550–5
 self-sacrifice 1582 as soldiers 3546–7
 voting rights 1108
 see also feminism; women's movement; women's rights
 Women in Black 224, 1814, 1815
 Women and Development Unit (WAND) 3560
 Women against Free Trade Zones 3560
 Women and Law in Southern Africa Research Trust 3605
 Women in Nigeria (WIN) 3548
 Women for Peace 3633
 Women against Pornography 3629
 Women of Union Action 2292
 Women's Affairs Department, Botswana 3605
 Women's Anti-Clerical Center 3598
 Women's Battalion of Death 3554
Women's Bell 2200
 Women's Club for Equal Rights (CFDIM) 3598
 Women's Committee, UOM 252
 Women's Cultural Group 3598
 Women's Day, Namibia 3603
 Women's Electoral Lobby 3563
 Women's Emancipation Bill 528
 Women's Employment Board 3562
 Women's Evolution 3598
 Women's Indian Association 2388
 Women's International Democratic Federation 646
 Women's International League for Peace and Freedom 12, 303, 1742 women's liberation: see feminism Women's Military Congress 3554
women's movement
 Africa, postcolonial 3547–9
 Australia 3561–4
 Britain 3564–70
 Caribbean islands 3558–60
 Colombia 798
 Cuba 3571–4
 Eastern Europe 3632–4
 France 3575–8
 Germany 3579–81
 Greece 3581–3
 Haiti 3583–6
 India 3586–90

women's movement (cont'd)

- Iran 1767, 1774
- Italy 3591–3
- Japan 3594–6
- Latin America 3596–601
- Nigeria 2734, 3547
- Southern Africa 3601–6
- Soviet Union 3606–9
- Spain 3609–12
- USA 3612–30
- Venezuela 3630–2
- Windward Islands 3578–9
- Women's National Liberal Union (WNLU) 3624
- Women's Peace Army 303
- Women's Political Council (WPC) 761, 1971, 2614
- Women's Prisoners' Defense League (WPDFL) 1416
- Women's Progressive Party 3551
- Women's Revolutionary Socialist Movement (WRSM) 3559
- women's rights
 - and African Americans 217
 - American Revolution 3612–13
 - Condorcet 846
 - Davis 965
 - Douglass 1021
 - France 1293
 - Quakers 1106, 1108, 3613
 - Russia 3390, 3554
 - Seneca Falls convention 3005–6, 3620–1
 - Wright 2024
- Women's Social and Political Union (WSPU) 527, 2595, 2624, 3567, 3626
- Women's Strike for Equality 1299
- women's studies, Cuba 3571–2
- women's suffrage campaign, Britain 526–9
- Women's Technical Institutes 3554
- Women's Trade Union League (WTUL) 2229, 3313–14
- Women's Union, Russia 3551, 3553
- Women's Union Tokyo 1876
- Women's War of 1929 3634–5
- Won Young-su 1980–1, 1981–93, 1993–4, 1994–5, 1995–6, 1996–8, 1998–2001, 2001–2, 2014–15, 3181–5
- Wood, Bill 2454
- Wood, Enrique 2455
- Wood, Robert 1459
- Woodcock, George 2167
- Woodford, Charles Morris 3080
- Woodhull, Victoria 123, 3622, 3623, 3636–7
- Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly* 123, 3622, 3636, 3637
- Woodlawn, Chicago 49
- Woods, Ngairé 1430
- Wood's Halfpence affair 1785
- Woodward, Richard 1785
- Woodworth, Fred 159
- Woollen Acts 1785
- Woolman, John 201, 213
- Woolsey, Garnet 3396
- Woolworth store sit-in 739–40, 1973, 3186
- Wootten, D. 2369
- Worcester, Battle of 1099
- Work Centres 525–6
- Work-Study movement 114
- Worker, The* 990, 3469, 3499
- Worker Accident Law 2647
- Worker–Campesino–Student Coalition of the Isthmus (COCEI) 2287
- worker cooperatives 2047, 2843
- worker–peasant alliance 2245
- Worker Socialist Party, Argentina 271
- Worker Solidarity with Haitian Women (SOFA) 3585
- Worker Woman's Federation of Peace 3598
- Worker's Power* 2786
- workerism 174, 1420
- workers
 - atomization 1007
 - dignity 3711–12
 - factory committees 2907
 - self-management 2901
 - self-organization 2765
 - skilled/unskilled 2021, 2029, 3498
 - Socialisme ou Barbarie 3063
 - solidarity 2021, 3499
 - Trotsky 3321
 - undocumented 1642
 - women 658
- Workers' Alliance of America (WAA) 3387
- Workers' Alliances against Fascism 291
- Workers' and Peasants' Party (WPP) 3041, 3229
- Workers' Commissions 181–3, 631
- Workers (Communist) Party 836
- Workers' Confederation of Paraguay (CPT) 2599, 2600, 2604
 - in Exile 2605
- Workers' Defense Committee (KOR) 2694–8
 - founding of 2696–7
 - membership 2695
 - Solidarność 2013, 2301, 2302, 2694, 3077–8
- Workers' Dreadnought* 151, 153
- Workers' Education Project 332
- Workers' International League (WIL) 834
- Workers' Interunion Plenary (PIT) 3406
- Workers' Laboratory Theater 27
- Workers' League of Salonika 1440
- Workers' Liberation League (WLL) 1863

- Workers' Opposition 1980, 3028, 3029
 Workers' Party of Jamaica (WPJ) 1863, 1864
 Workers' Party of Kampuchea 1959
Workers' Party of Marxist Unification (POUM): see Partido Obrero de Unificación Marxista
 Workers' Party of South Africa (WPSA) 833
 Workers' Party of the Philippines (PMP) 2686
 Workers' Party of Vietnam: see Lao Dong Workers' Pensions Act 851
Workers' Republic 860
 Workers' Rights Charter 3502
 Workers' Self-Defense Group (ADO) 801 workers' self management
 Japan 1881
 Yugoslavia 3295, 3637–9
 Workers' Struggle Party 3577
 Workers' Theatre movements 582
 Workers' Unemployed Insurance Bill 3386
 Workers United Front (FUT) 1058 Workers' Voice 833, 1440 workhouses 2720
 working class 767–8
 Bolsheviks 2942–3
 capitalism 768, 2920
 Chile 690
 dual consciousness 3070
 Epic Theater 28, 1482
 fragmentation 2021
 French Revolution 1280
 Germany 1178
 India 2793
 labor movement 2020–1 living conditions 2341
 Mandel 2188
 Marxism 2240
 Morris 2341
 nomadic 96
 post-Fordism 2370
 Proudhon 161, 2765
 self-organization 3425
 socialism 3056
 Spanish Civil War 180
 syndicalism 3215–16
 Trotsky 1668
 women in labor unions 3627
 Working Class Union (WCU) 1458 working conditions 784
 Working Federation of Magallanes 692
 working hours
 Australia 106, 312, 313
 France 1646
 Mexico 619
 Russia 2923
 USA 502
 Working People's Alliance (WPA) 1498, 1502, 1856, 2853
 Working Women's Trades Union 3561
 Workingmen's Party of New York 2461, 3666–7
 Workingmen's Party of the United States (WPUS) 2026–7
 Workingwomen 3579
World Anti-Slavery Convention, London 205, 3005, 3620, 3639–40
 World Bank
 Bolivia 791
 conditions attached to loans 1661–2
 Ecuador 1067
 food sovereignty 1210, 1211
 Kedung Ombo project 1723
 Mali 2182
 Mexican study 2287
 Prague 1390
 Southern Africa 3113
 Spain 180
 Thailand 3272, 3273–4
 Turkey 3354
 see also Global Day of Action Against the IMF and World Bank (S26) World Charter for Immigrants 2306
 World Confederation of Labor (WCL) 808
 World Conference against Atomic and Hydrogen Bombs 1887
 World Conference Against Racism (WCAR) 3113
 World Conference on Human Rights 960
 World Development Movement 1312 World Economic Forum
 Davos 301, 1401, 1432
 Kuroń 2014
 Melbourne 2636, 3655
 World Federation of Democratic Youth 3679
 World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU) 3259
 World Food Summit 1210
 World Forum for Alternatives 301 World Health Organization 2997, 3102
 World Hindu Council 1693
 World League for Sexual Reform 1586, 2093
 World Peace Council (WPC) 195, 2358
World Social Forums 3640–4, 3660
 and ATTAC 301
 Brazil 1009, 1401, 1431–2
 Charter of 982
 Chávez, Hugo 667
 churches 3643
 G8 Alternatives 1313
 Internationals 1755
 Italy 1831
 Karachi 2585
 Latin America 3641

World Social Forums (cont'd)

- Mumbai 959, 2306
- participatory democracy 2619, 2621
- PGA 2638
- Porto Alegre 2687
- Thailand 3274
- Via Campesina 3461

World Student and Youth Festival 3184

World Summit on Sustainable Development 3102

world systems theory 1217

World Trade Center attacks: see September 11, 2001 attacks

World Trade Organization (WTO)

- established 1396
- food sovereignty 1210, 1211
- July Framework 3651
- Mexico 2294
- neoliberalism 97, 1996
- and PGA 2635
- Qatar 3665
- resistance to 1396–7, 3461
- Vietnam 3488

World Trade Organization (WTO) protests 1210

- Australia 317
- Cancun 1400, 1431, 2636, 3644–8, 3650, 3665
- Doha 1400, 3645, 3646, 3648–50, 3651, 3659, 3665
- Geneva 1386, 2636, 3655
- Hong Kong 1400, 1431, 3647, 3650–4, 3665
- Quebec 3654–61
- Seattle 72, 160, 300, 500, 1152, 1307, 1386, 1390, 1392, 1393, 1395, 1397–8, 1400, 1431, 1450, 2503, 2807, 3644–5, 3655, 3661–5
- Singapore 1429

World turn'd upside down, The (Taylor) 1096

World War I

- African American soldiers 2822
- Austria 318–19
- Bolshevik Party 438–9
- food riots 1208–9
- gender roles 1171
- IRB 1046
- New Caledonian volunteers 2457
- Russia 2889, 2903–4, 3115
- Trinidad 3316
- Turkey 3348–50, 3355
- unemployed veterans 445–6
- war industries 2822

World War II

- African Americans 17
- Balkans 1453
- Baltics 340–1
- Bolivia 429

Bulgaria 542–5

Canada 589

civil rights movement 2497

CPSA 834–5

Gandhi 1329–30

Indochina 1713–17

Iran 1762

Ireland 971–2

Japan 727, 1711, 1884, 1889, 1998–9, 2202, 3200

Malta 2186–7

Nazi–Soviet Pact 1593

resistance 2495–6

Soviet Union 3117

US involvement 2489

Yugoslavia 1011, 3682, 3691

World Wildlife Fund (WWF) 1268

World Woman's Party (WWP) 2625

World Youth Congress (WYC) 3678

World Zionist Organization (WZO) 1851, 3741

Worms, Imperial Diet of 1355

Worsley, Peter 2249

Woss y Gil, Alejandro 1016–17

Wounded Knee 40, 585

Wounded Knee II 2414–15, 2629

Woyane Rebellion 1133, 1139

Wrangel, General 3507

Wray, John 983

Wright, Erik Olin 773

Wright, Frances "Fanny" 1186, 2024, 2460–1, 3617–18, 3666–7

Wright, Jaime 2060

Wright, Martha Coffin 3620

Wright, Paulina (later Davis) 3617, 3621

Wright, Richard 2428

Writers' Association 2782

WTO: see World Trade Organization

Wu Kejian 3505

Wu Shimo 3235

Wu'er Kaixi 3287

Wuhan uprising 2200

Wunthanu Athins 553

Wunthanu Movement 552–3

Wyatt's Rebellion 1095

Wybrzeze Theater 3073

Wycliffe, John 514, 1092, 2829, 3000

Wyllie, John Curzon 1675

Wyndham (Land Purchase Act) 968, 1799

Wyoming Valley Massacre 85

Wysocki, Piotr 2715

Wyvill, Christopher 508

xenophobia 1645, 2565, 3110

Xiang Jingyu 2201

Xiangdao 3505

- Xin qingnian* (New Youth) 674, 2132
Xin shehui (New Society) 2781
 Xinhai Revolution 3727
Xinhua (New China) 2780
 Xinjiang province 3506
 Xochimilco, Pact of 2279
 Xolotl 639
 Xoxe, Koçe 31
 Xoxi, Niko 29
 Xu Xinliang 2271, 3237
 Xuma, A. B. 171, 2191, 3087
- Ya Basta 1006
Yaa Asantewaa, Nana 3669–70
 Yagi Akiko 3596
 Yahya Ghālip 3357
 Yahya Khan 346, 348, 2425, 2579, 2582–3
 Yahya Mohammed Al-Mansour Hamid Al-Din 3670
 Yakovlev, Kornila 2806
 Yalla, Kumba 1493
 Yalta agreement 339, 729, 730
 Yamba, Dauti 3698
 Yan'an, Philippines 2680–1
 Yaneekian, Kurken 284
 Yanev, Sotir 543
 Yannios, Nikos 1441
 Yanoulopoulos, Yanis 1451–6
 Yanukovych, Viktor 2510, 3329, 3375, 3377–8
 Yao tribe 2174, 3231
 Yao Wenyuan 2204
 Yaqui rebellion 2541
 Yarmolinsky, Avrahm 678
 Yaruquies community 963
 Yarur textile industry 684
 Yasin, Shaykh Ahmad 1548, 1549
 Yates, Michael 778, 1671, 2249
 Ye Shengtao 713
 Years of Indigenous Resistance Campaign 2289
 Yeats, W. B. 1415, 2389
 Kathleen Ni Houlihan 1416
 Yeiwene Yeiwene 2459
 Yekka, Kabaka 3372
 yellow-dog contract 3411
 Yellow Ford, Battle of 1805
 Yellow Hat Buddhists 3290
 Yellowstone National Park 1120
 Yeltsin, Boris banning Communist Party 3245 dissolution of Soviet Union 644, 3422 emergency rule 3126–7 and Gorbachev 3124–5 power 3125–6
 as president 3124
 public election 1417
 shock therapy 3126–7
 Yèm Sambaur 577, 578
 Yemen Arab Republic 3670–1
Yemen Socialist Revolution 3670–1
 Yemeni Socialist Party (YSP) 3671
 Yen Bay mutiny 1598, 3467
 Yeshitela, Omali 3373
Yi Ho Tuan (Boxer) Rebellion 3671–5
 Yiangou, Anastasia 943–8
 Yiannios, Nikos 1440
 Yippies 159, 1482
 Ynagban elite 1996
 Yogurt Revolution 3010
 Yolocamba Ita 639
 Yom Kippur War 1813, 2338
 YoMango collective 1147
 Yomiuri Newspaper Company 1891, 1892
 Yone, Ohki 1902
 Yorck von Wartenburg, Johann Ludwig Graf 189
Yorkshire Rising 819, 3675–6
 Yorktown 86
 Yorktown siege 2851
 Yoruba
 Agbekoya Peasant Uprising 23–6, 2481
 inter-ethnic wars 3677–8
 Mekunnu movement 2481
 OPC 2484
 Oyo 3676
 pre-colonial 2558
Yoruba Wars 3676–8
 Yosemite National Park 1119
 Yoshida, Shigeru 1894–5
 Yoshikuni, Tsuneo 3728
 Youlou, Abbe Fulbert 854, 1251
 Young, C. M. 857
 Young, Christopher 2100–6
 Young, M. C. 2138
 Young, Robert A. 395
 Young, Steven 3333
 Young, Thomas 78
 Young, Whitney 73, 3187
 Young Bukhara 643, 3242, 3366
Young Communist International 3678–9
 Young Communist League (YCL) 2948, 3108, 3109, 3678–9
 Young Finnish Party 1201
 Young Gay and Proud 2097
Young Hegelians 2230, 3679
 Young India 1326
 Young India Association 449, 1677
Young Ireland 1192, 1415, 1800, 2544, 3394, 3680–1
 Young Italy 1161, 1332, 1825, 2266

- Young Maori Party 2208
 Young Men's Buddhist Association (YMBA) 551–2
 Young Ottomans 3347
 Young People's Forum (YPF) 332
 Young Pioneers 1382
 Young Poland's Movement (RMP) 3077
 Young Socialist League 1862
 Young Tunisian Party 3335
 Young Turk Unionists 3355
Young Turks 281, 286, 293, 1440, 1452, 3272, 3347–8, 3681–2, 3742
 Youtévong, Sisowath 576, 577
Youth Aliyah 242
 Youth Brigade, Japan 1903, 1904
 Youth House 992
 Youth Improvement Society 553
 Youth Patriotic Front 2593
 Youths of First Line 1714
 YouTube 1740
 Yozgat uprising 3357
 Yrigoyen, Hipolito 248, 266, 273, 274, 277
 Yu Pingbo 713
 Yuan Shikai 735, 736, 2200, 3201, 3675, 3727
 Yucatan: see caste war of Yucatan (Guerra de castas en Yucatán)
 Yudelman, David 148
 Yudenich, General 3507
Yugantar 1674
 Yugoslav Communist Party 3637
 Yugoslav Royal Army 3682
Yugoslavia
 anti-privatization struggles 3685–8 anti-war activism 223–4 breaking up 1455 humanitarian intervention 224
 ICTY 3011
 IMF 3011
 Korčula Summer School 3690
 Marxist humanism 3689–90
 non-aligned movement 3688–9, 3691
 participatory democracy 2620
 People's Liberation War 3682–5, 3691
 Praxis group 3689–90 resistance to Cominform 3690–2
 state feminism 3633
 student protests 3170, 3692–3
 workers' self-management 3295, 3637–9, 3691, 3692 in World War II 1011, 3682–5, 3691 see also Tito, Josip Broz
 Yugoslavia, Kingdom of 3295
 Yukanthor Affair 567
 Yung-li, Emperor 2310–11
 Yupanqui, Atahualpa 2377
 Yuppies 1281
 Yushchenko, Viktor 812, 2510, 3330, 3374, 3376–8
 Yushin regime 1982, 2014, 3182
 Yusuf, Hamza 1811
 Yusuf, Naji 2954
 Yusuf, Yusuf Salman: see Fahd, Yusuf Salman Yusuf
 Yusupov, Shodmon 3245
 Yuvasala organization 568

Z magazine 3687
 Zachariadis, Nikos 1443, 1444, 1445, 1454
 Zack, Bernhard 2155
 Zadnikar, Darij 3051–2
 Zafra Roja (Red Harvest) 419
 Zagary group 2308
 Zaghoul, Sa'd 1076
 Zagoria, D. S. 3235
 Zagreb University 3693
 Zahar, Mahmud al- 1548
 Zahedi, General 2344
 Zahir, Khaldia 3198
 Zahle, Carl Theodor 991
Zahra, al- 3335
zaibatsu system 1890
 Zaim, Lebanon 2071
 Zaim, Husni al- 3222
 Zaimis, Alexandros 944
 Zaimov, Vladimir 543
 Zaire 164, 166, 1217, 2338
 see also Congo
 Zaisser, Wilhelm 1339, 1340
 Zajic, Jan 951
 Zald, M. N. 652, 779–80, 2759
 Zaldivar, Felipe Nery 2597
 Zalkind, Aron 3608
 Zalmu Jirga (Youth League) 1966, 1967
zamba 2377
 Zambetsu Federation 3720
Zambia 696–8, 3695–706
 anarchism 147
 Chiluba 696–8, 1941, 3111, 3702, 3705
 Christianity 3696–7, 3704
 color bar 3695
 copper industry 1941, 3695, 3697–8, 3700–1, 3704
 Frontline States 461
 Great Depression 3697
 IMF 696–7, 3111, 3703–4
 mining industries 3695–8, 3701
 MMD 697, 2940, 3111, 3112, 3704, 3705
 pro-democracy 3704
 raw materials 3695

- welfare associations 3697–8
 witchcraft 3697
see also Kaunda, Kenneth; Rhodesia
- Zambia African National Congress (ZANC) 3699
 Zambian Congress of Trade Unions (ZCTU)
 696, 3701–2, 3704, 3731–3
- zamindars*
 Bengal 370, 371, 372, 1703, 1712, 2574
 Land Acquisition Act 2575
 Pakistan 2575
 Permanent Settlement 2575, 2970
 Santal rebellion 2970–1
- Zamora, Ezequiel 413, 664, 2854, 3706–7
Zamora, Jacinto 2667
Zamoyski, Andrzej 2703
Zanco, Jean-Philippe 850–1, 2628
 Zanjon peace agreement 919
 Zanón workers 2348–9
Zanzara, La 3593
Zanzibar 3707
 Zanzibar Nationalist Party (ZNP) 3708
 Zanzibar and Pemba People's Party (ZPPP) 3708
Zanzibar Revolution 3707–9
- Zapata, Emiliano
 agrarian revolution 2282
 Comuna Morelense 3709–11
 Ejército del Sur 2277
 killed 2280
 Liberator Army 2283 and Madero 3710
 peasant army 2539
 Red Battalions 138
 Tierra y Libertad 2162
 and Villa 3489
- Zapata, Mario 2226
- Zapatismo 2063, 3711–14
 anarchism 100, 138
 indigenous communities 3713–14
 minoritarian 982
- Zapatista Army of National Liberation (EZLN)
 Aguascalientes 2540
 Army of the Convention 2540
 Autonomous Councils 3717–18
 Chiapas 284, 1395, 1396, 2162, 2293, 3711, 3714–19
 Consultation Center for Propaganda and Revolutionary Unification 2281 and EPR 1122
 First Intergalactic Meeting 3713, 3716
Juntas de Buen Gobierno 3713
 liberation theology 480
 as model 1006, 1152, 1739, 3662
 NAFTA 1053, 1386, 3600
 netwar 3716–17
- Obregón 3711
Otra campaña, La 1403, 2286
 PGA 2635
 politics of dignity 3711–12
 Second Encuentro 1396
 women soldiers 3017
see also Marcos, Subcomandante
- Zaragoza 3131
 Zaragoza Conference 848
 Zárate, Pablo 425
 Zarkhin (Voitinsky) 674
Zasulich, Vera 1914, 2228, 3550, 3719–20
 Zavala, Consuelo 3597
 Zavaleta Mercado, René 427
 Zay, Károly 1619, 1620
 Zayas Sotomayor, María de 3609–10
 Zealots 2490
 Zedillo, Ernesto 2285, 2293, 3379, 3718
 Ze'ev: see Jabotinsky, Vladimir
 Zeitler, Michael 1023–5, 1554–6, 2846–7
 Zeituntsians, Berj 281
 Zelaya, José Santos 2466
 Zelaya, Lorenzo: see Lorenzo Zelaya Popular Revolutionary Forces (FPRLZ)
- Zemene Mesafint* 1132
zemstva (local self-government) 2879
 Zengakuren 3169
 Zenkyoso 1895
 Zenminrokyo (All-Japan Private Labor Union Council) 1883
 Zeno of Elea 2836
Zenrō 1909
- Zenroren Labor Federation 3720–1
 Zensendomei federation 1883
 Zenteisin Rodokumiai 1895
 Zervas, Napoleon 1436
 Zerzan, John 99, 160, 979, 1052
- Zetkin, Clara 124, 3551, 3580, 3721–2
 on GDR currency 3633 and Kollontai 1979
 and Luxemburg 2243
 Second International 1756
 Spartacus League 3147
 women's suffrage 1750
- Zetkin, Ossip 3721
 Zhang Binglin 114
Zhang Guotao 2781, 3722–4
 Zhang Ji 114, 674
 Zhang Qiubai 3723
Zhang Wentian 3724–5
 Zhang Xianzhong 714
 Zhang Zhongxiang 713
 Zhange Chungqiao 2204
 Zhao Ziyang 987, 3286, 3288
 Zhelev, Zhelyu 3068, 3069

- Zhenotdel* (Women's Section of Communist Party) 3606
- Zhivkov, Todor 3068, 3069
- Zhongguo nu bao* (Chinese Women's Journal) 2781
- Zhou Enlai 3725–6
and Bognot 2672
cooperatives 709
and Hoxha 32
Nanchang Uprising 725
and Philippine labor union leaders 2672 and Qu Qiubai 2113, 2782, 3723, 3725
recentralization 2204
treaty with Soviet Union 705
Vietnam 223, 1599
and Wang 3505
Whampoa Military Academy 3202
- Zhovti Vody, Battle of 1958
- Zhu De 2120, 3726–7
- Zhu Yuanzhang 714
- Zhu Ziqing 713
- Zhuangzi* 113
- Zhunyi meeting 2201
- Zia ul Haq regime 1637, 1857, 2584
- Zibechi, Raul 3404–7
- Zicchitella, Martino 2402
- Ziemecka, Eleonora 3544
- Ziller, Gerhart 1340
- Zimba, Newstead 3702
- Zimbabwe
anarchism 147
Chimurenga armed struggles 698–705
food riots 3732
HIV/AIDS 3738
homosexuality 2364
IMF 2364
independence 3546
labor movement 3727–31, 3731–3
Mugabe 2363–5
Mzingeli 2384–5
national liberation movement 3604, 3733–8
Samkange 2960–2
UN Development Program 3111 women's role in liberation struggle 3604
see also Rhodesia
- Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army (ZANLA) 3604, 3735, 3737
- Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) 1940, 2363, 2364, 2961, 3112, 3735–7, 3739–40
- Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front (ZANU-PF) 2364–5, 3604, 3731–3, 3734
- Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) 2363, 2364, 3105, 3730, 3734, 3735–7, 3739
- Zimbabwe Liberators' Platform 3740
- Zimbabwe People's Army (ZIPA) 3736, 3738–40
- Zimbabwe People's Revolutionary Army (ZIPRA) 3105, 3604, 3735–6
women soldiers 3736
- Zimbabwe War Veterans' Association 3604
- Zimmering, Raina 805–6, 902–3, 1120–1, 1167–70, 1320–1, 2149–50, 2212–13
- Zimmerwald conference 1440, 1756
- zinglins* 1513
- Zinn, Howard 72–4
- Zinoviev, Gregory
Bolshevik Revolution 2085–6
executed 3162
and Lenin 2084, 2918
Leninism 2089
and Trotsky 438, 595, 3158
on women's congress 3606
- Zionism 1550, 1560, 3740–3
Arab-Palestinian 1813
Ben-Gurion 372–5
Bund 1914–15
Canada 845
Eretz Israel 359, 1816
Jewish anarchism 158
youth movements 3742
- Zionism, revisionist 1851–2
- Zionist Socialist Party 373
- Zipa people 3294
- Zirakzadeh, Cyrus Ernesto 660–4, 1170, 1609–10
- Zisly, Henry 99
- ZiSPO strike 2699
- Zito, Dima 240–1, 2272–3, 3255–6
- Ziyou zhongguo* 3236–7
- Žižek, Slavoj 983, 3743–4
- Zizka, John 2323
- Žmichowska, Narcyza 3544–5
- Zoellick, Robert 3647, 3649, 3665
- Zog, Ahmet 29
- Zogby International 636
- Zola, Emile 3744–5
Dreyfus Affair 887, 1022
Germinal 1744, 3744
J'accuse 1022, 3741, 3744
Thérèse Raquin 3744
- Zolberg, A. 1151, 1153
- ZOMO (riot police) 3075
- Zone One Tondo (ZOTO) 2681
- Zong* massacre 203, 3022
- Zorlu, Fatın Rüstü 3350
- Zrenjanin factories 3687–8
- Zube, John 107
- Zuckerman, Yitzhak 3512

- Zukas, Alex 436–40, 1358–66, 1979–80, 3379–88, 3721–2
- Zukas, Lorna Lueker 2733–5, 3601–6, 3634–5
- Zulu, Grey 3703
- Zulu peoples 3086, 3601
- Zulu Territorial Authority 3088
- Zuma, Jacob 876, 3108, 3112
- Zumbi 2588, 3745–7
- Zunes, Stephen 2511
- Zurich agreements 947
- Zuy Tân 3466
- Zveno group 542
- Zwane, Ambrose Phešeya 3747–8
- Zwanziger Brothers 3036
- Związek Syndykalistów Polskich (Union of Polish Syndicalists) 140
- Związek Związków Zadowowych (ZZZ) 140
- Zwickau Prophets 92
- Zwingli, Huldrych 1353, 1356, 1358, 3748–9
- Zwyer, Sebastian Peregrin 3213