Basic equipment

One of the great things about making crafts from paper is you don't need lots of expensive equipment. We'll list everything you'll need for each project individually, but the basics covered on this page are used regularly throughout the book, so they are a good investment.

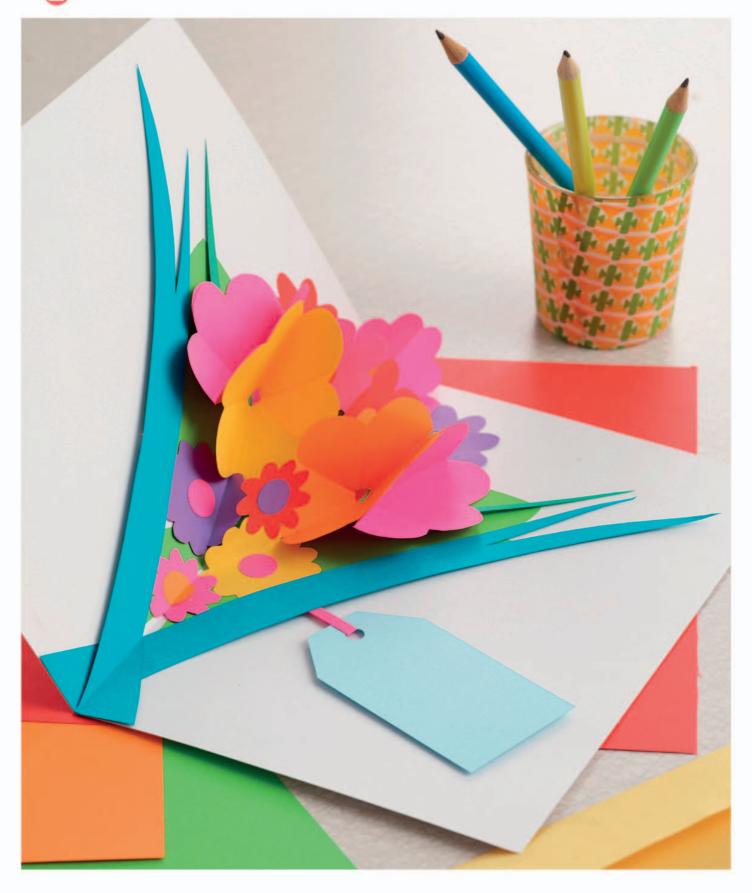

Cards and gift wrap

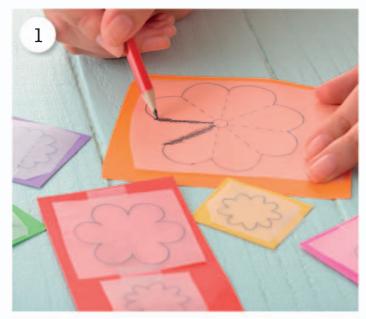

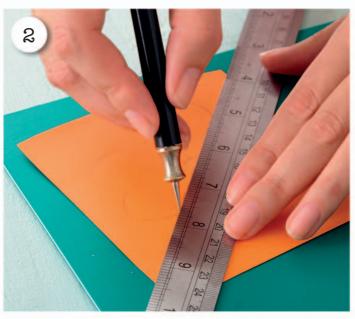

Pop-up bouquet

This cheerful and personal card will bring a smile to anyone's face. It's ideal to send to someone special on a birthday or anniversary, and it works well as a get well soon or congratulations card.

Trace all the pieces of the template and position them image side down on the colored cardstock. Rub over the pattern with a pencil to transfer the image onto the cardstock.

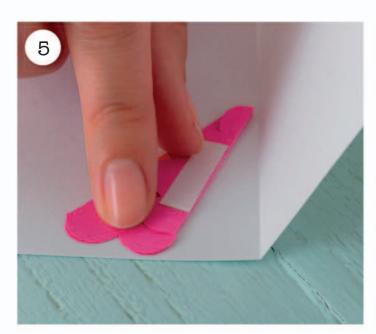

Carefully score along any dotted lines and cut out any solid lines with scissors or a craft knife. Repeat this until you've cut and scored all the pieces of the template.

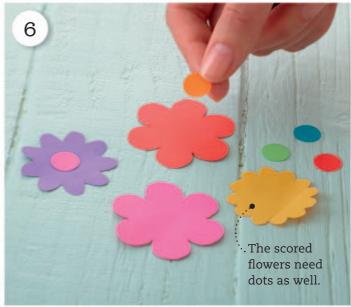

The four central flowers that need to be assembled are made in pairs. Fold along the score marks and overlap the first and seventh petals to make a cone shape, using tape to secure. Fold in half as shown on the orange flower.

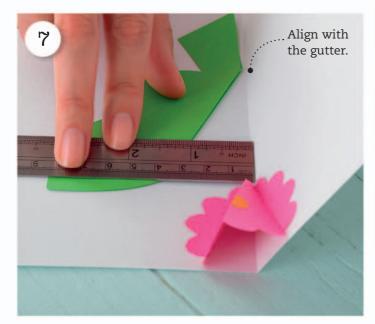

Stick double-sided tape to two petals and attach a different colored flower, leaving one petal unattached at either end. You should end up with a shape that is four petals wide and only attached at the middle two petals.

Fold the small pink central flower that is scored in three places and stick one side on the card at the angle pictured above. Peel the backing off the tape on the top edge and fold the card in half so the other half sticks in the right position.

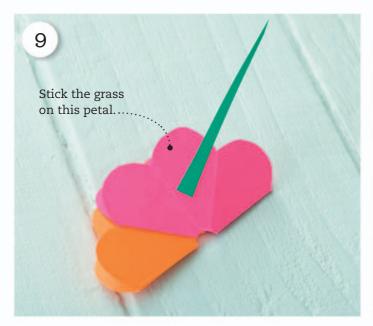

Using the double-sided tape or a little glue, stick a dot in the middle of the central flower so it sits on either side of the fold. Then stick colored dots in the middle of all the remaining flowers.

Fold and position one side of the green leaf as shown. It's crucial that the point of the crease is in the gutter and the top edge is 1½in (4cm) from the gutter. Apply tape to the top and close the card so the other side sticks in the correct spot.

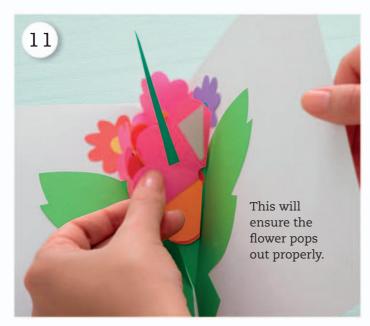

Stick the two flowers that have nine petals in position on either side of the central folded flower. Then stick the two large flowers that have six petals to the top edge of the green leaf—one on either side.

Add a small blade of grass to the back of two of the central flowers that you assembled in steps 3 and 4.

Position the central flowers into the crease in the middle as shown. There should only be tape on the bottom petal.

Stick the other half of the flower to the other side of the card, but this time add tape to just the top petal. Stick on the remaining central flowers in the same way.

Stick the two medium-sized flowers with score lines on either side of the fold. Then add the little red flower above them, and the little pink one below.

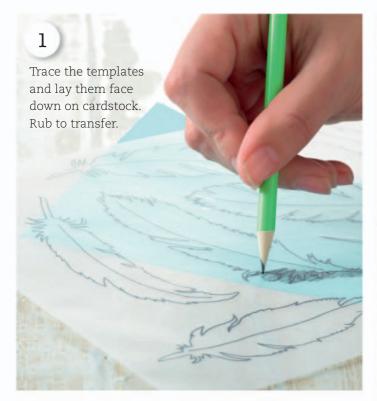

Feather gift tag

Not only are these simple feather tags the perfect way to elevate your gifts, they also make great little decorations or place cards for a dinner party.

DIY envelopes

These little envelopes are the perfect complement to handmade cards, and can be sealed with a sticker, glue, or wax. Best of all, with a little practice, they can be made in a flash.

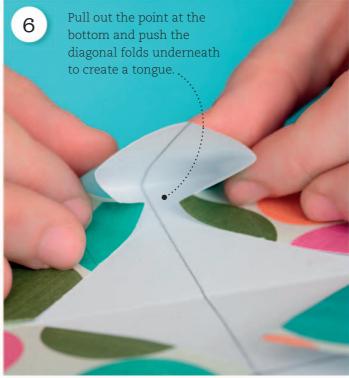

Mini gift box

This little box is easy to make and provides a fun, sturdy wrapping solution for all kinds of small gifts. Experiment with different paper colors and weights that will suit your gift.

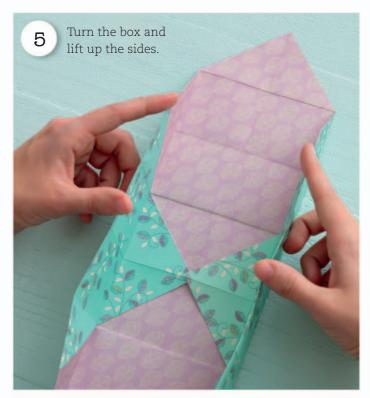

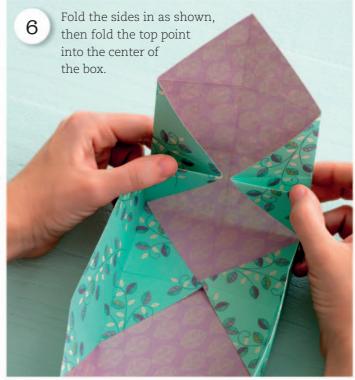

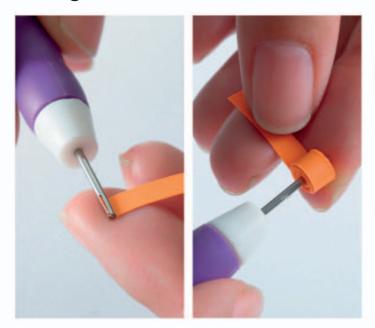

Quilling

Quilling is easier than it looks, even if it seems intimidating at first. Once you can make the basic shapes, it's just a matter of gluing them in place on the card to make interesting patterns.

Coiling

To make a coil, place your paper into the quilling tool so no paper emerges from the other side. Wind the paper around the tool, using your finger to ensure the coil is flat. You can make different shapes by adjusting how tight the coil is.

Gluing

Use a small brush or toothpick to add glue to keep a coil's shape. If you want to make a loose coil, allow the paper to unravel before applying the glue. For an open coil, let it unravel and don't apply any glue at all.

Shaping

Most quilled shapes are created by making adjustments to the basic coils. For example, to make a marquise, you simply create a loose coil and pinch it on both ends. To make a teardrop, you do the same, but only pinch one end.

Experimenting

Experiment to create the other shapes. For example, a heart is made by folding a strip of paper in half and winding each end toward the center, and a V scroll is made by doing the same but winding it away from the center.

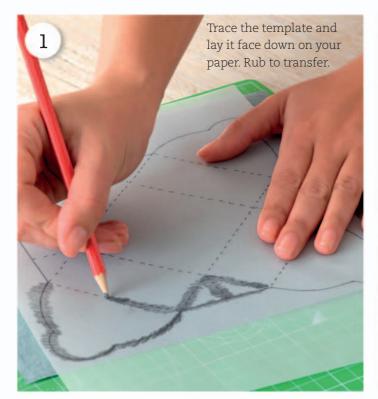

Gift box

Use the alternative templates to create a range of boxes that suit different types of gifts.

Pyramid gift box

An alternative gift box design, this pyramid version is ideal for giving small gifts such as jewelry. They're easy to make and, as an added bonus, they are entirely reusable.

Customized paper

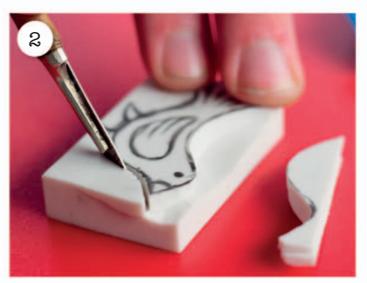

There's no better way to make wrapping paper, envelopes, and gift boxes unique than by creating customized paper. Here's a quick and simple way to make your own.

You will need

- Pencil
- Craft knife
- Scorer
- Ink pad
- Selection of paper
- Eraser

Draw your design onto an eraser. It can be anything you like, but try not to make it too detailed or it'll be hard to cut.

Being very careful, cut around the outside of your design. You want to cut only about halfway through the eraser.

Using a scorer, make shallow indentations to the detailed areas of the design.

Press your stamp onto an ink pad, then press onto the paper. Experiment with the position to create different patterns.

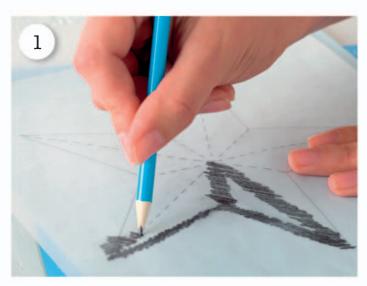

3D star tag

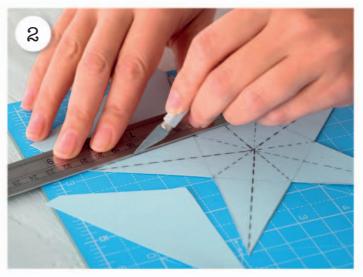

These little star tags are a great way to make your gifts out of this world. They're simple to make, so prepare a big batch and give them to the "stars" in your life when needed.

You will need

- Tracing paper
- Pencil
- Paper or cardstock
- Craft knife
- Ruler
- Scorer

Trace the templates and lay them face down on the paper or card. Rub with a pencil to transfer the image.

Carefully cut around the outside of the star design. Use a ruler to ensure you have straight edges.

Score along the dotted lines, again using a ruler to make sure that your lines are straight.

Bend along the fold lines to pop out the star and create a 3D effect.

Gifts to give

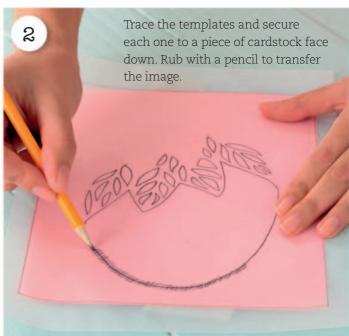

Layered papercut

A framed papercut will look great on a wall or side table. Their best feature is their versatility—once you've mastered the basic technique, get creative and come up with your own designs.

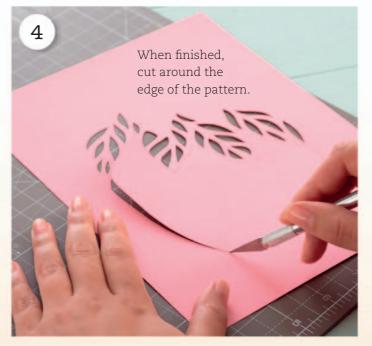

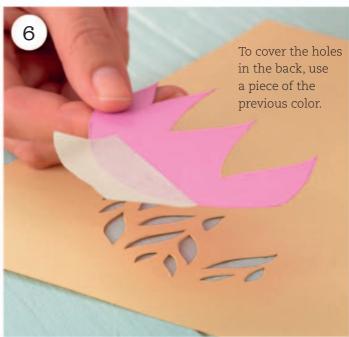

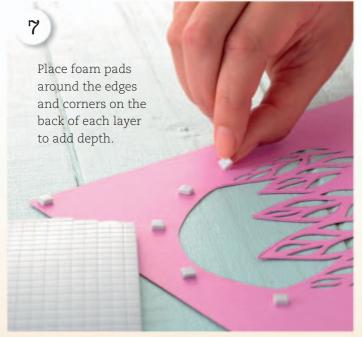

To vary the papercut, design your own template using different flower shapes. Alternatively, you can remove the foam pads to create a flat design.

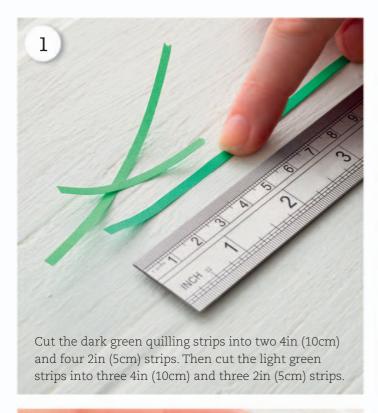

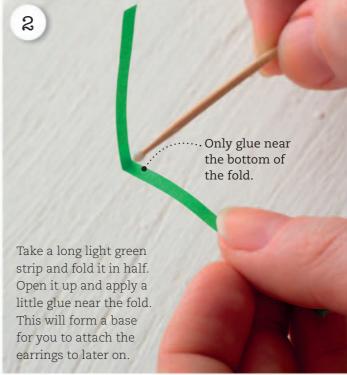

Quilled earrings

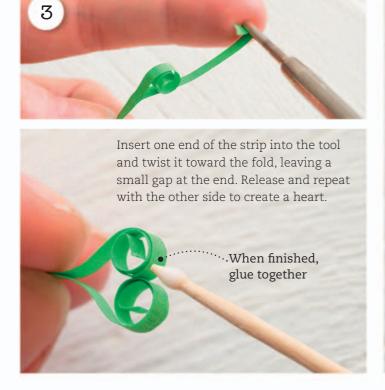

Dark and light strips of quilling paper

The art of quilling has been around for centuries, but this modern twist makes for a perfect gift. You can easily customize the shapes to make your own designs.

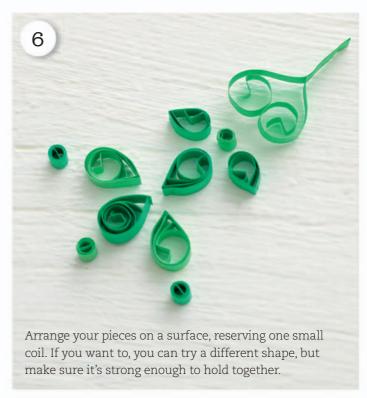

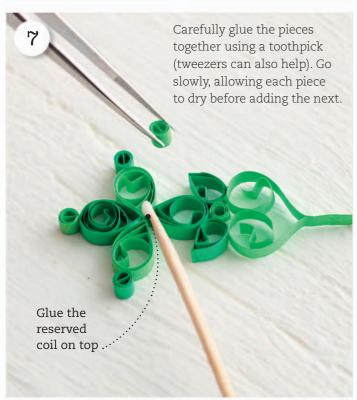

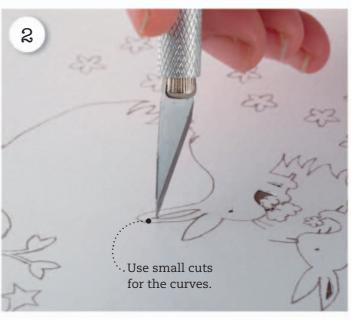

Nursery papercut

This charming papercut is deceptively simple to put together and would make a lovely decoration for a nursery or young child's bedroom. It's easily adaptable, so tailor your papercut's subject and size to whatever you wish.

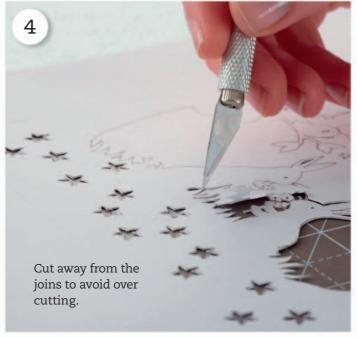

Using a pencil, transfer the template to tracing paper and turn it over. Lay it on top of your cardstock and rub over the tracing with pencil to transfer the image onto the cardstock.

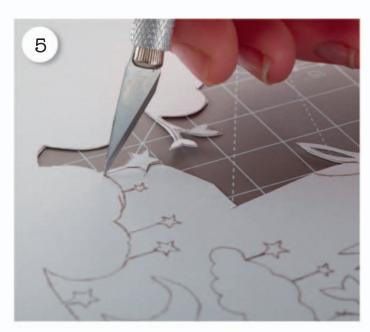

Using a fresh blade, carefully start cutting the smaller, more delicate areas of the picture such as the eyes, arms, and the inside of the ears.

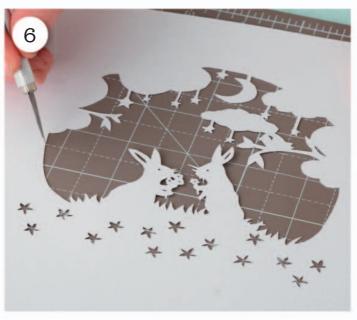

Working in a clockwise direction, cut one side of each petal at the bottom toward the center of each flower, then cut the other side of each petal working in the other direction.

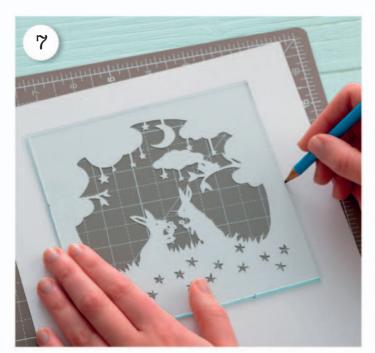

Turn the image upside down and cut out the grass. When this is complete, carefully cut away the remaining paper between the rabbits.

Working around the edges, begin to cut away the rest of the image. Take your time, especially with smaller areas such as the stars and leaves.

Once you have finished cutting away all of the images, flip the cardstock over and go back over any snagged areas to tidy them up

Measure the size of the glass in your frame and cut the image, acetate, and background cardstock to this size. Use the glass to ensure the image is central to the markings.

Place the glass and image in the frame, followed by the acetate. Add the frame insert and lay the background cardstock on top before affixing the back of the frame in place.

Papercut locket

With a little creativity, patience, and a very steady hand, you can adapt the same technique used for the nursery papercut to make something small enough to fit in a locket.

Almost any simple shape will work, but since the papercut needs to be small, choose something without too much detail or it will be very hard to cut neatly.

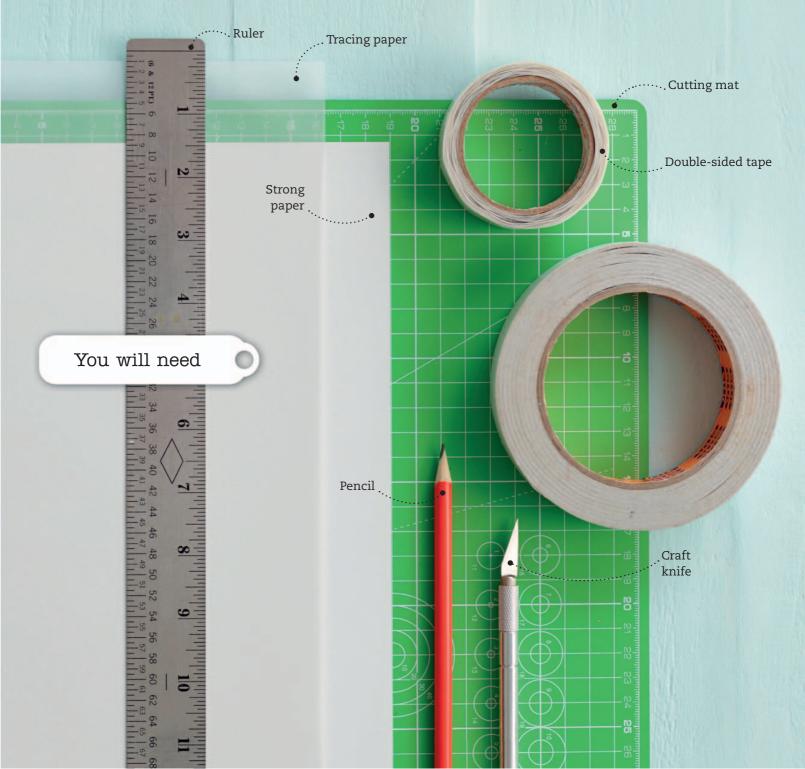

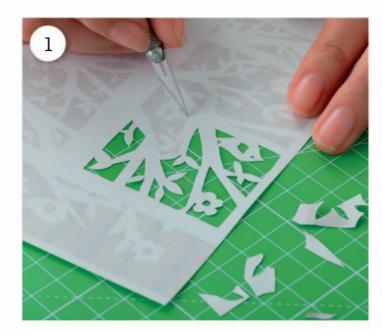

Papercut lantern

These stylish hand-cut lanterns will produce a lovely, gentle glow and will look great on any mantelpiece. They also make perfect table decorations for a dinner party or wedding.

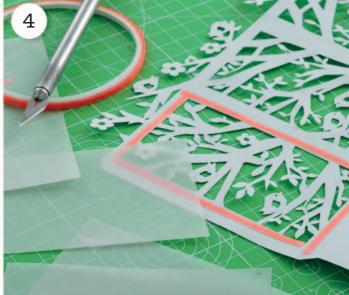

Prepare your template and begin to cut away the inside of one of the four panels. Make sure you keep the template right-side up during the whole cutting process.

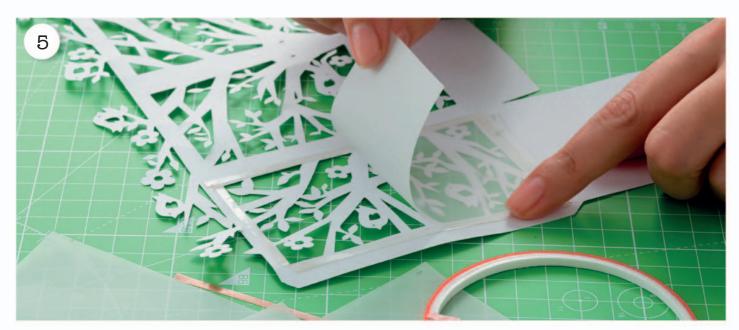

Once you've finished cutting the inside of the first panel, cut out the pattern above it. Repeat this process, going from one side of the template to the other.

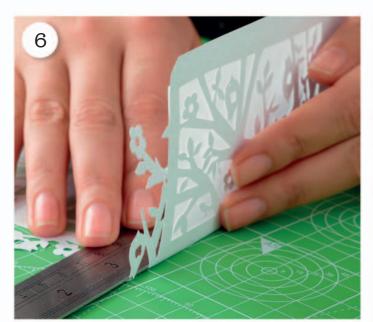

Continue until all of the excess paper has been cut away. You may need to change your blade several times to avoid creating frayed edges.

Apply thin double-sided tape to the edges of the panels. Before peeling off the second side, measure and cut four tracing paper rectangles the same size as the tape's border.

Peel back the other half of the tape and carefully stick the tracing paper on top. Repeat this process until the tracing paper covers all four panels.

Fold all of the flaps and side lines, making sure that there's a stiff crease on all the edges. This will ensure that the lantern will stand up straight when finished.

Glue or tape all of the flaps in place, holding them in position for a short while to make sure they stick properly. To finish, add a flameless candle or fairy lights.

You can also create papercut lanterns by wrapping colored tracing paper around a vase and placing the papercut on top.

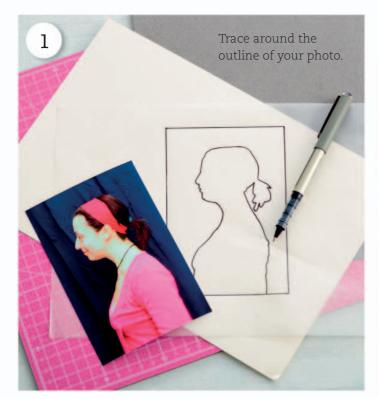

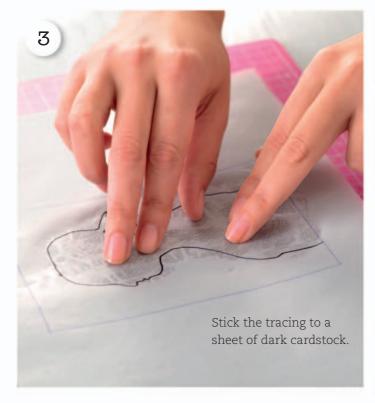

Silhouette frame

A modern take on the classic family portrait, a silhouette gallery is simple to put together and can make an instant impression. They're also a great way to repurpose old photos.

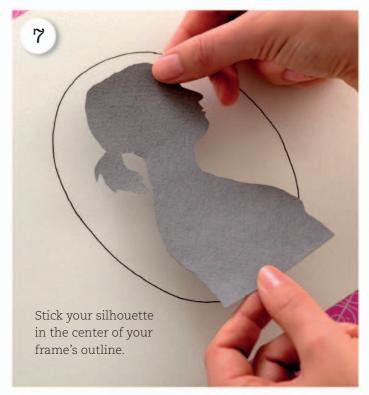

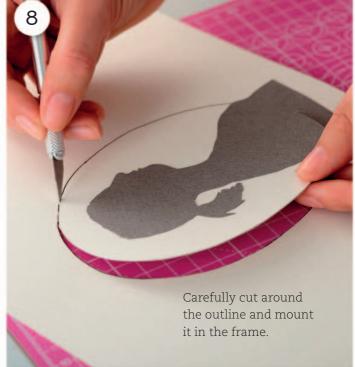

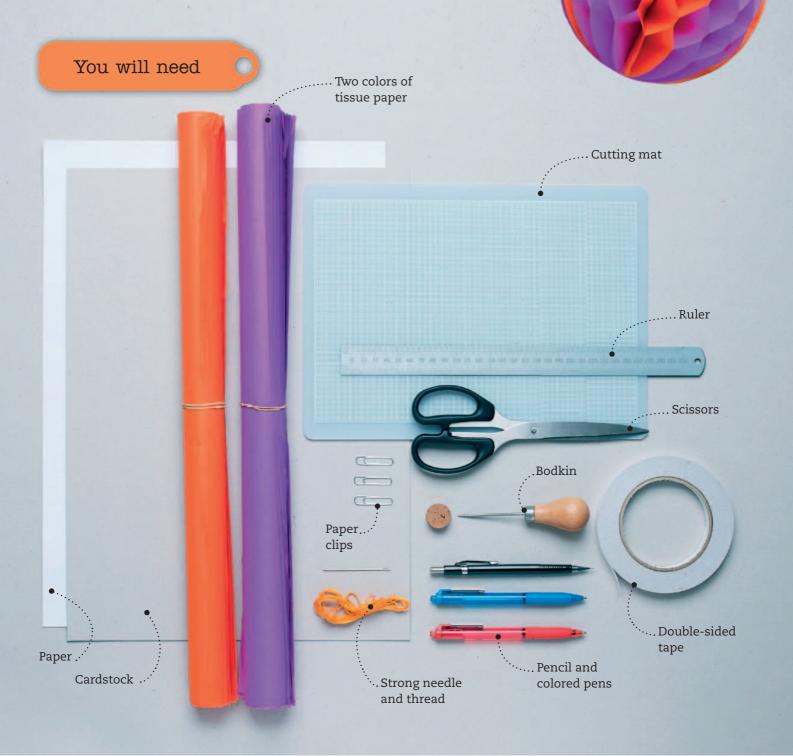

Decorations

Honeycomb pom-pom

These appealing pom-poms can liven up any room, and are perfect for a party, wedding, or just as decorations for a room. They work well in both bright and pastel colors.

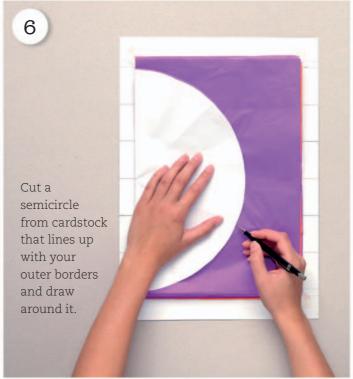

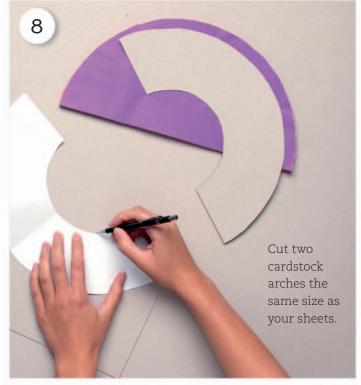

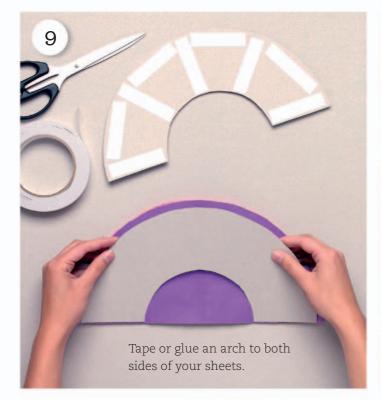

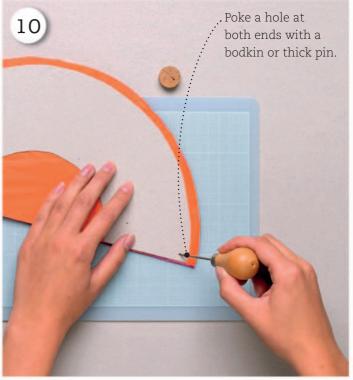

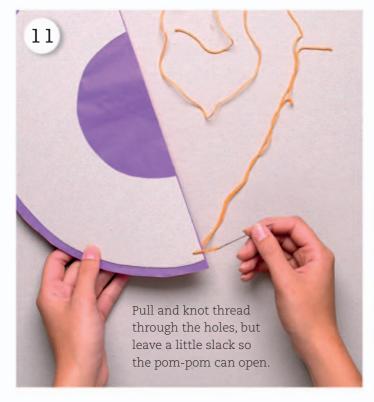

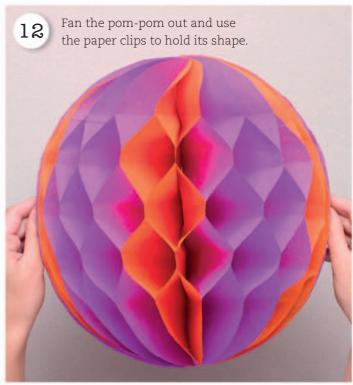

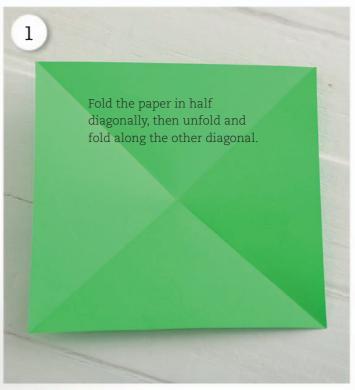

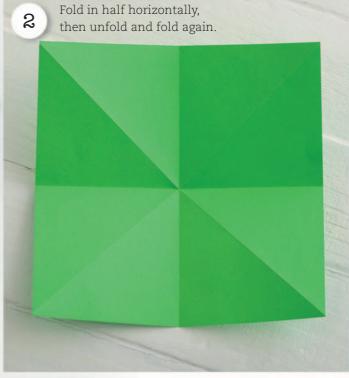

Origami fairy lights

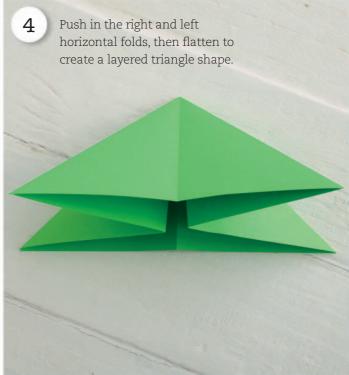

Whether the holiday season is right around the corner or you're just looking to brighten up a room, these fairy lights will do the trick. Depending how strong your LED lights are, you may need to experiment with a variety of paper opacity to get the right look.

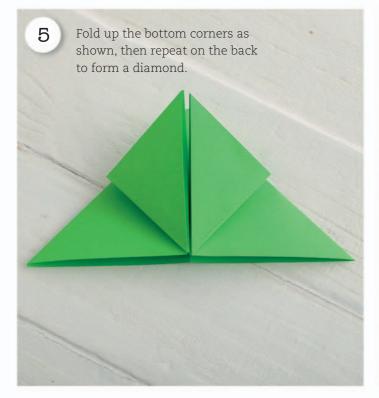

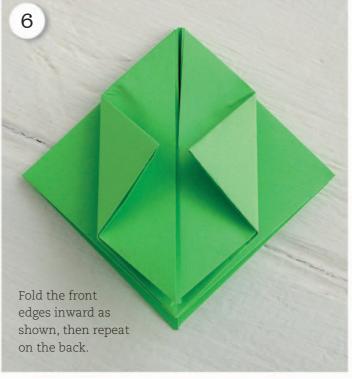

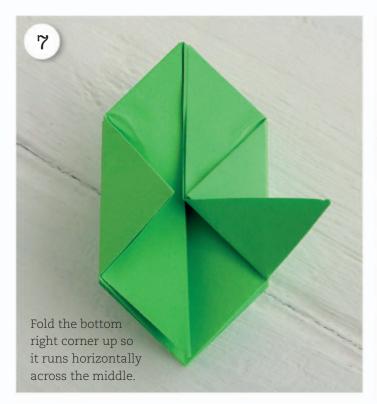

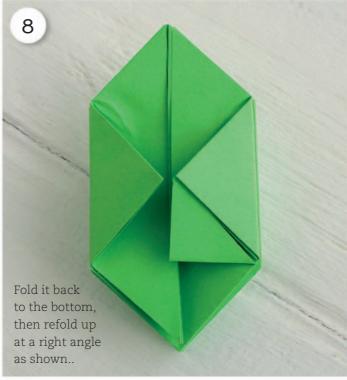

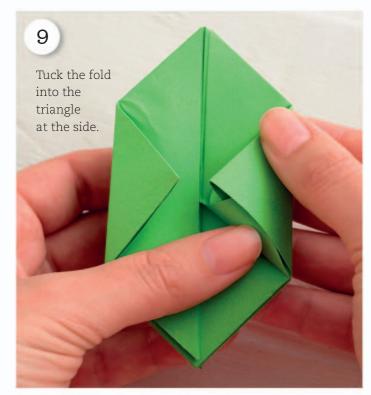

Hanging fan

These bright, bold fans can take a while to put together, but the results are stunning. By making several in a variety of colors and sizes, you'll be able to create a striking wall display.

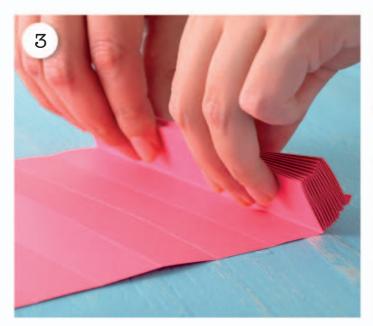

Score equally-spaced vertical lines on several sheets of paper. The more sheets you use and the wider the lines, the bigger the fan will be. Use the guides on your cutting mat to make sure the lines are straight.

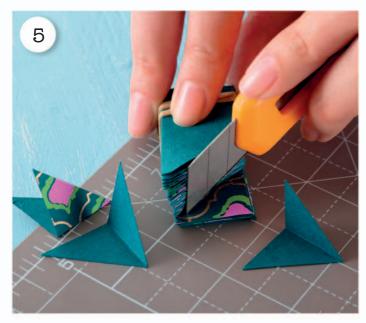

Apply PVA glue to the bottom segment of one of the sheets of paper. Stick the top segment of another sheet of paper on top so they overlap. Allow to dry and then repeat with the other sheets (minimum of two).

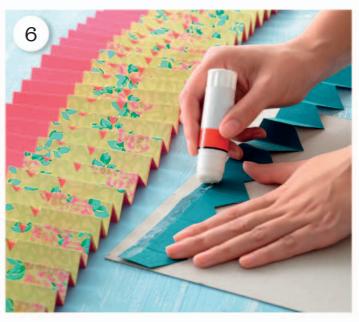

Fold the paper along the scored creases to create an accordion effect.

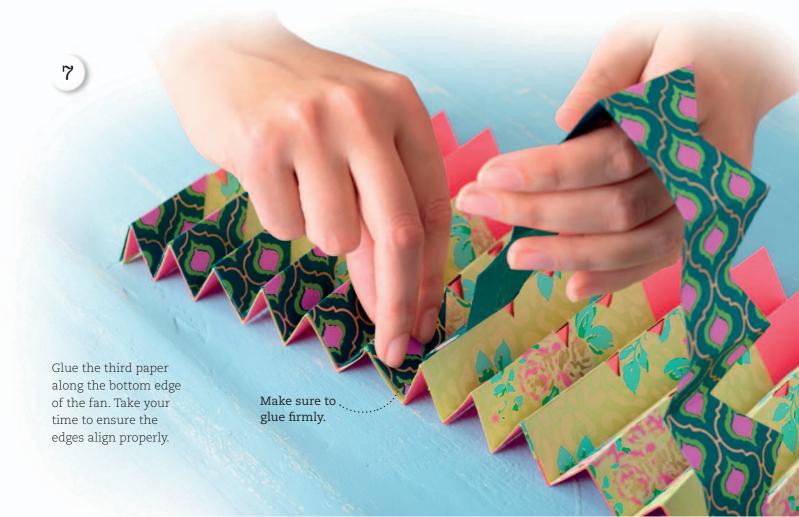

Repeat this process with slimmer sheets of paper that are a different color. When done, lay them flat and cut shapes into the folds to add detail.

Use a glue stick to attach the second paper to the first and allow to dry. Now apply glue to the bottom of the third.

Apply PVA glue to one of the ends, then bring the two sides of the accordion together to form a large circle.

Lay the fan on the greaseproof paper and use a hot glue gun to create a pool of glue in the center.

Using both hands, carefully squeeze the fan inward so the center moves toward the glue and shrinks. Hold in place until the glue sets, then peel away the greaseproof paper.

Use the inside ring of a roll of sticky tape to mark two discs from cardstock. One should be plain, and the other one should have colored paper stuck to it. Neatly cut out the discs.

Turn the fan on its back and stick the plain disc to the center with hot glue. Fold a ribbon in half, place the opposite ends on top, then stick the second disc on top with more hot glue.

Lay the folded ribbon between one of the fan's folds, then secure in place with a strip of paper and some PVA glue.

Hanging garlands

Garlands are a simple but effective decoration for any party or celebration. You can use colored papers that match your theme, but they can also be made from pretty scraps.

Snowflake ornament

A simple but pretty winter decoration, these snowflakes can be hung from string or ribbon to great effect. However, they look even better when encased in ornaments and placed on a tree.

Kids' crafts

Origami bird

These cute little birds are easy to put together and make great decorations. You can also put paper leaves in their beaks and use them as placeholders at a dinner party.

Animal mask

Simple to make and fun for kids, you can adapt the basic technique for this bear mask to create a dog, a monkey, or almost any creature from the animal kingdom.

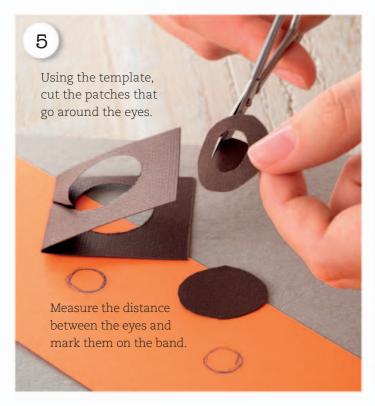

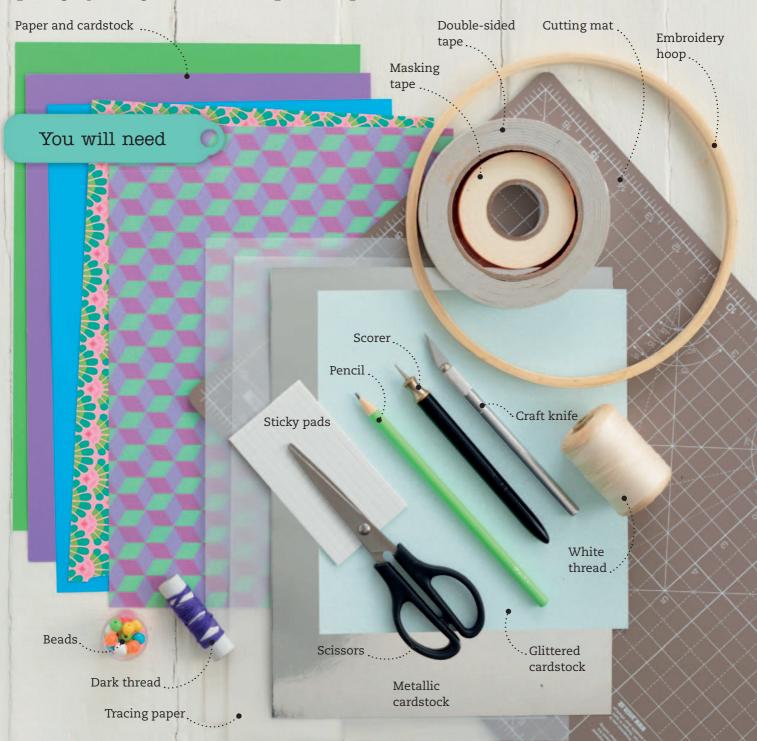

Owl mobile

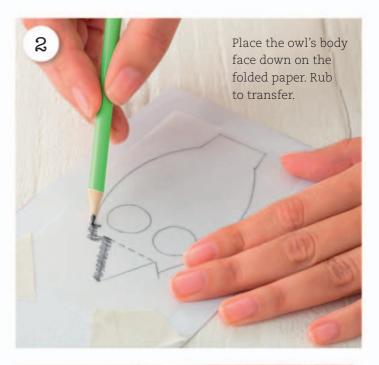

This cheerful mobile is the perfect decoration to hang above a child's bed. The basic design is fairly easy to adapt, so it's a great project to personalize and give as a gift.

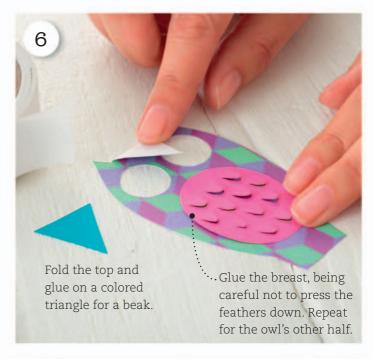

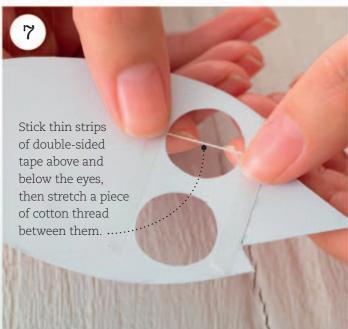

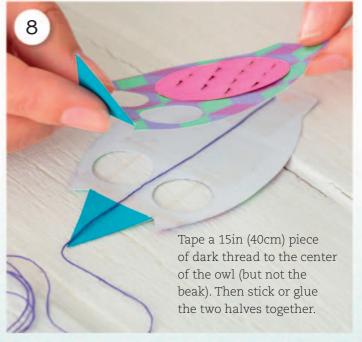

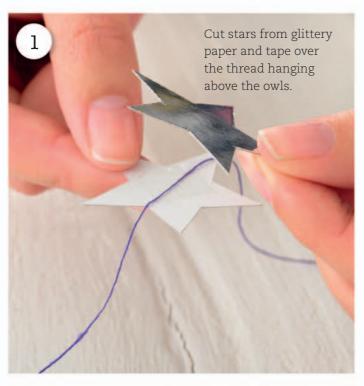

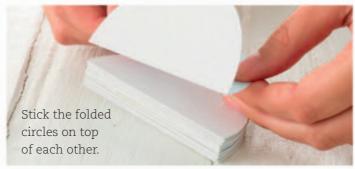

Attach leaves with tape or glue.

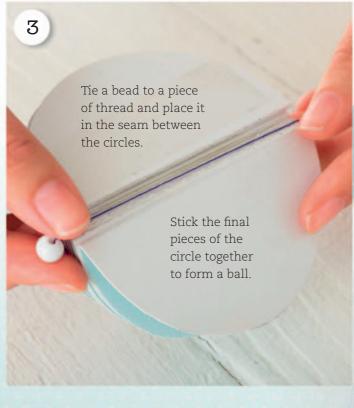

and glue it in place. Repeat to make the other four owls. ..

Flowers

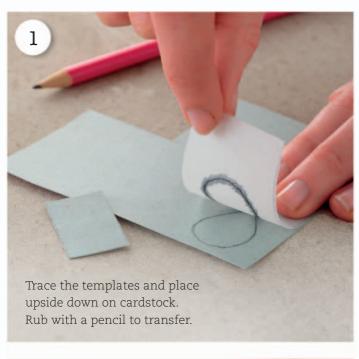

Cherry blossom

While most popular in Japan, cherry blossoms are a symbol of renewal and growth all over the world. This gorgeous paper version will make you feel like spring is always just around the corner.

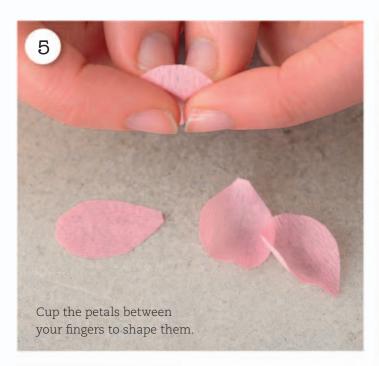

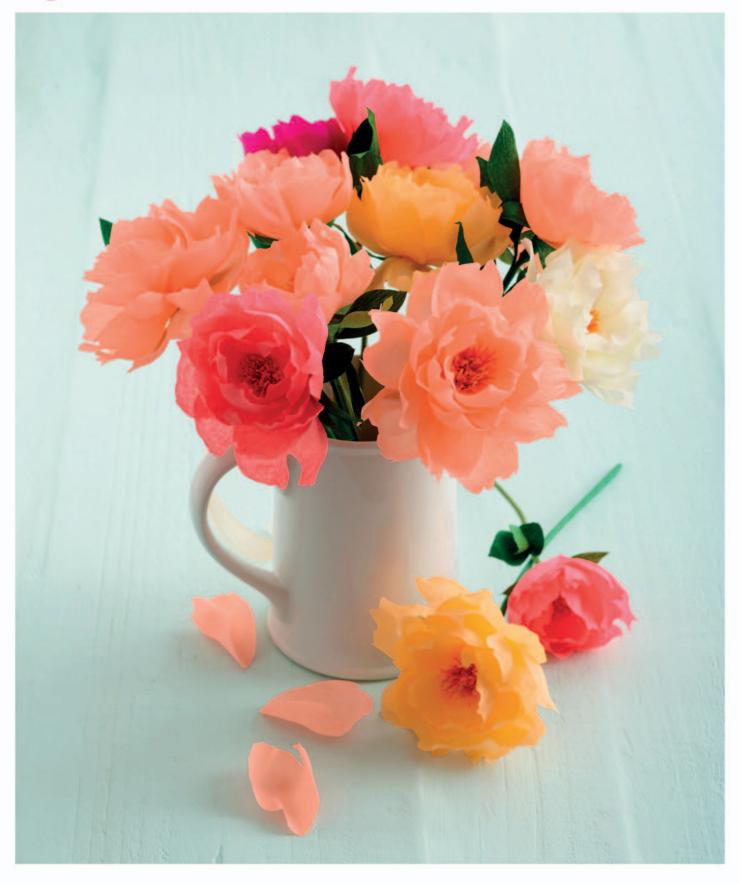

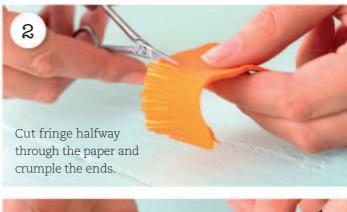

Peony

Prized for their size and petal count, peonies are one of the most popular flowers in the world. And while paper versions can't replicate their scent, they definitely deliver the wow factor.

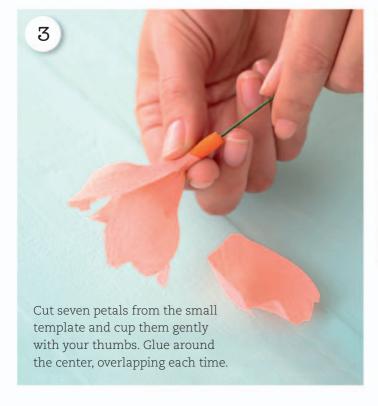

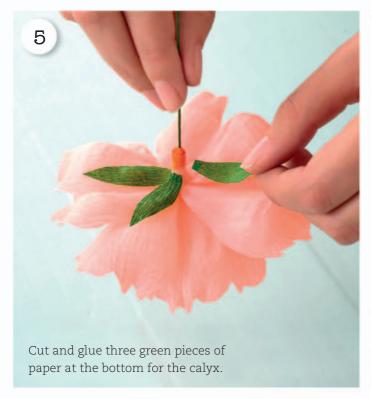

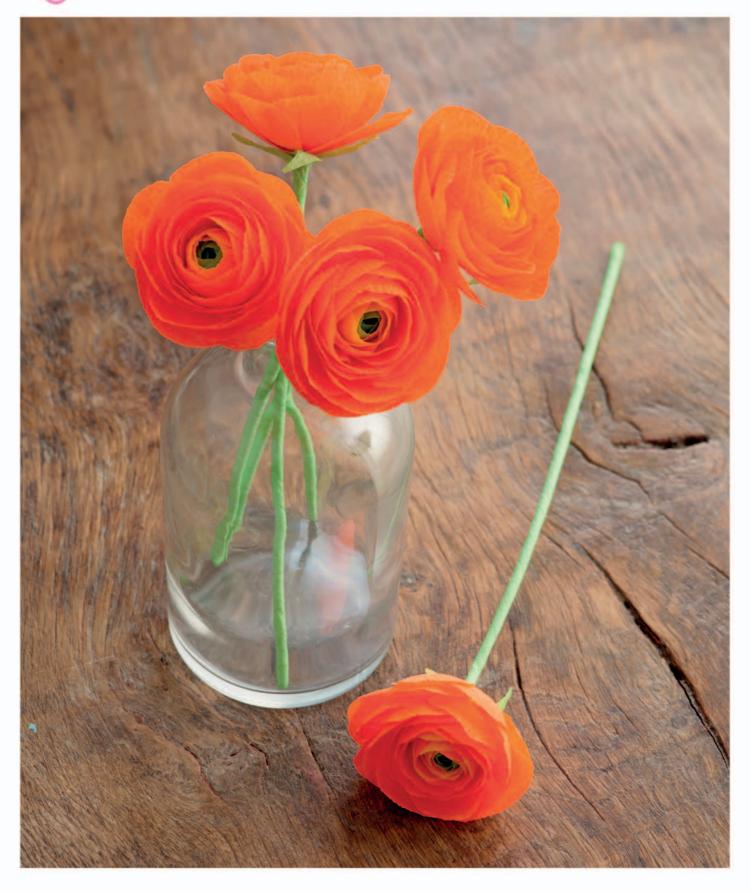

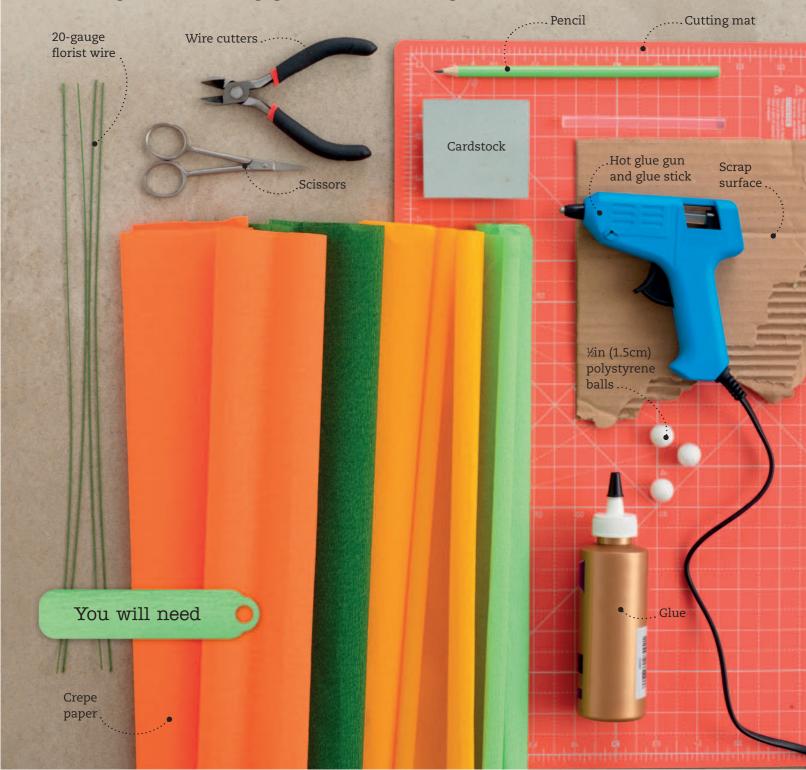

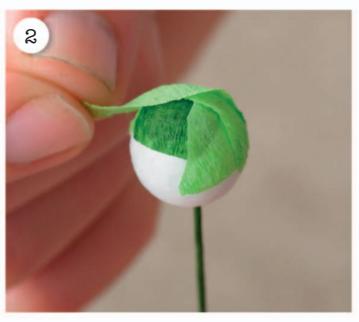

Ranunculus

Known for their delicate petals and brilliant colors, a ranunculus arrangement can breathe life into any room. This simple and beautiful paper version is no exception.

Place a little hot glue on the end of a piece of floral wire and insert it into the center of a polystyrene ball. Glue a small dark green circle on top of the ball, then cut out 15 light green petals using template 1.

Cup each petal between your thumb and forefinger and apply glue to the bottom. Glue a petal so the curved edge almost meets the center of the ball, then overlap five more by 50 percent so they curve away from the one before.

Add the remaining green petals, but layer them slightly higher than before. Cut out and cup 11 yellow petals from the same template and overlap these on top of the green petals, bringing them slightly higher.

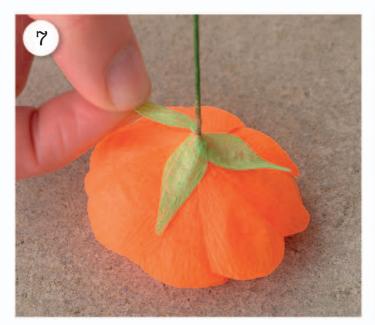

Cut out the orange petals. You will need 21 from template 2 and 18 from template 3. These petals need to have a deeper cup than the yellow or green ones.

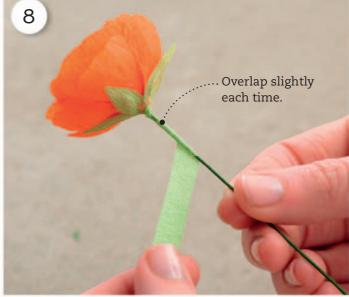

Add a little glue to the bottom of the petals from template 2 and begin gluing them to the flower slightly higher than the yellow layer. Continue overlapping as you go, bringing the layers down slightly as the flower begins to take shape.

Glue the petals from template 3 so that the base of each petal touches the stem and covers any remaining areas of the polystyrene ball. Continue overlapping these petals around the flower.

To make the calyx, cut four pieces of green crepe paper and slightly cup in the middle to give them a little shape. Glue the end of the calyx shapes to the foot of the stem.

Cut a strip of paper across the grain about ½in (1cm) wide and stretch it out. Glue one end under the calyx and wind the paper around the wire, applying a little glue every six or so turns. Repeat until the stem is your desired thickness.

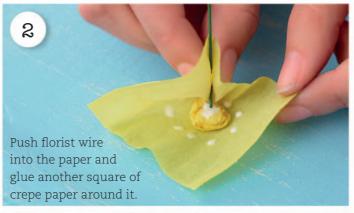

Daisy

These bright and cheerful daisies add a touch of spring to any room. Although they are made of paper, their white petals and yellow centers manage to look quite realistic.

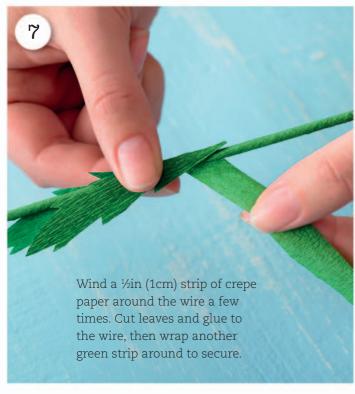

Anemone

You can make amazing paper anemones in a variety of shades, from pale pink and lilac to a rich jewel-like purple. Their delicate crepe paper petals are almost impossible to distinguish from the real thing.

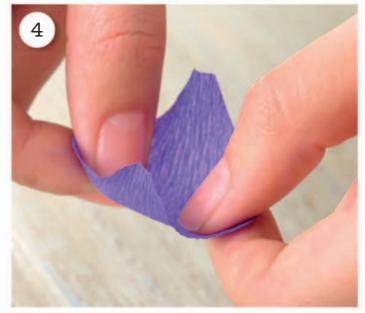

Cut two squares of black crepe paper, then cut one in half. Stretch out the square, then scrunch one of the rectangles into a ball and wrap the other rectangle around it.

Place the ball of crepe paper in the middle of the stretched square and dot small amounts of glue around it. Holding the center down with straight floral wire, pull the corners of the square up around the scrunched paper and wire.

Cut a strip of purple crepe paper about 2in (5cm) long and fringe two-thirds of it. Wrap it around the black center and glue in place, then secure with wire and paint the tips black.

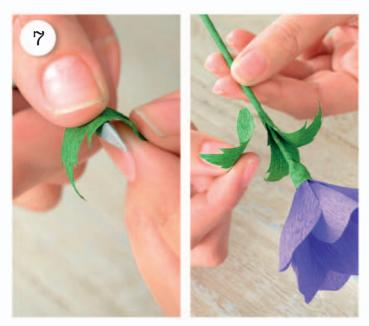

Using the template, cut six petal shapes from the purple crepe paper. Push your thumbs into the center and gently stretch outward to give them a rounded shape.

Dab glue around the base of the cut petals and attach them to the stalk, overlapping slightly. Once the glue has dried, cut away the excess black crepe paper below the petals.

Wrap the base of the flower with a long strip of green crepe paper and then wrap it down the stem diagonally. Glue in place at the bottom. Repeat until the stem is thick enough.

Use the template to cut four leaves from green crepe paper. Curl the leaves with scissors to give them a realistic shape, then glue them to the stem underneath the flower.

Finally, gently curl the tips of the petals over the scissors so that they curve inward.

Daffodil

These bright and cheerful daffodils are simple to make and will last a lot longer than the real thing. With their natural looking yellow petals, you can imagine it's spring all year long!

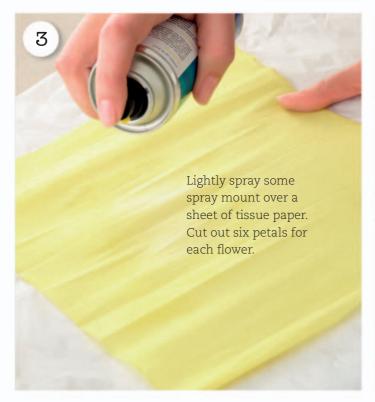

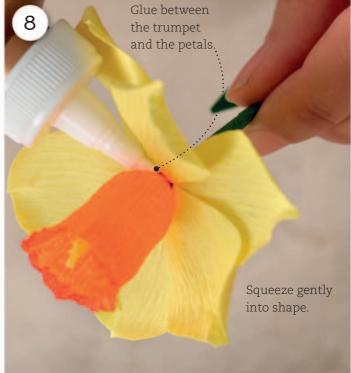

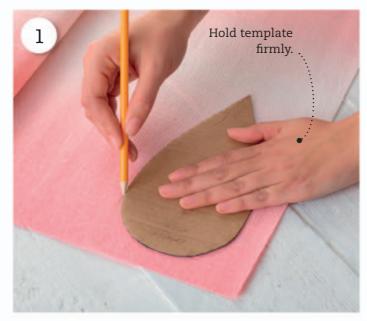

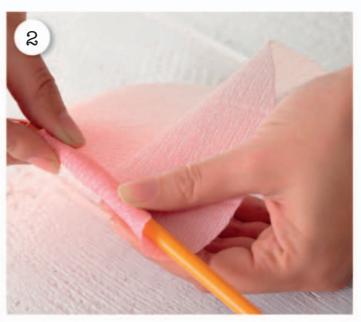

Large rose

Perfect for a wedding or birthday party, these giant roses will make a beautiful statement. The dramatic and delicate petals make them look stunning and appealing.

Trace the templates on cardboard and cut them out. Draw around them and cut out six small, ten medium, and six large petals from pink crepe paper. Then cut eight sepals and one large leaf from dark green crepe paper.

Put two small petals to one side, then use a pencil to curl the tips of the remaining petals. Stretch the paper slightly as you roll it. For the large petals, roll each lobe separately.

Push your thumbs into the center of the small petals to cup them. Push out the medium and large petals in the same way, but this time at three points on the petal.

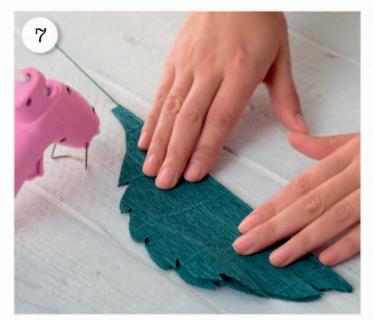

Add a dab of hot glue to the bottom point of the two small, uncurled petals and attach them to the dowel rod. Apply glue to the top of the rod and roll the petals into a spiral around it.

Going from small to large, attach the remaining petals in the same way, spacing by eye. Add glue further up the petal to keep the shape if need be. You also may have to stretch the base of the large petals to fit.

For the sepals, slightly stretch the bottom of each one so that they fit around the base of the flower head. Then curl the points and glue them on, ensuring that some of the paper attaches to the dowel rod.

Place a line of hot glue along the center of the large green leaf and attach the floral wire. Fold the leaf in half and allow the hot glue to set before opening again.

Starting at the base of the rose, wind the stem tape around the dowel rod. After a few turns, add the wired leaf and glue it in place with the glue gun. Continue to wrap the stem tape around the rod until you reach the end.

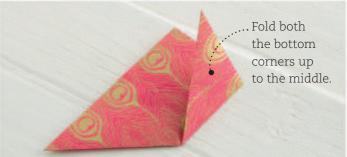

Kusudama

These beautiful origami flowers are surprisingly simple to make and will liven up any room. They sit perfectly in a vase, but you can stick them to almost anything with a little glue.

Wreath

Making a wreath is a great way to bring together all the flowers you have created into a single display. Try different combinations to get the effect that suits your home.

Boutonniere

For a wedding or other special event, boutonnieres add to the sense of occasion. If you make them from paper, you can prepare them well ahead of time and be sure they'll still look fresh on the big day.

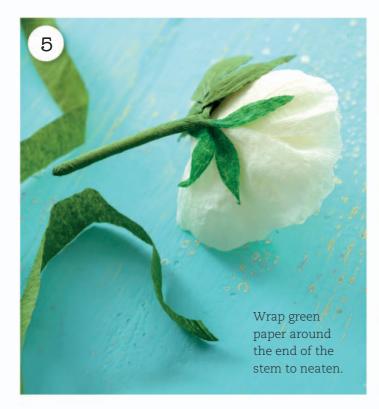

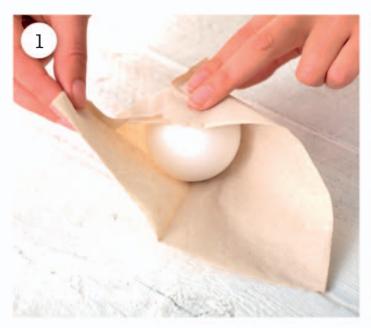

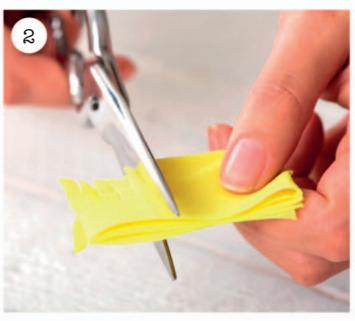

Large poppy

Guaranteed to make an impression, this giant poppy is a real show stopper. It would make an excellent decoration for a festival, party, child's room, or a wedding.

Wrap a napkin or square of beige tissue paper around the polystyrene ball so that it is completely covered. Use a glue gun to secure it in place.

Cut a strip of yellow tissue paper slightly longer than the ball's circumference and 3in (8cm) wide. Fold it up and cut halfway into it from one side to create a fringed effect. Wrap around the ball and secure with the glue gun.

Mix your paint and slightly dilute it with water (you will need a mix of green and yellow buds). Dip the swabs in the paint to color them, then remove and set aside to dry.

Once dry, cut the yellow cotton swabs in half and stick them around the ball with a glue gun. Don't worry about making them perfect, you want them to look a little uneven.

The green cotton swabs for the stamens need to be a little longer, so instead of cutting them in half, cut the tips off of one end.

Glue the green buds around the outside of the ball so they fan out. You may find it easier to do this by attaching them lower on the ball.

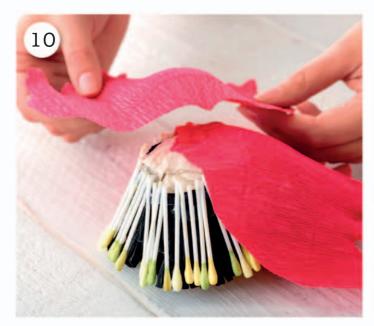

Transfer the petal templates onto cardboard and cut them out. Draw around the templates onto the crepe paper, then cut out three small and three large petals.

Shape the top of the petals by twisting and stretching the paper. To achieve the petals' overall shape, work into the center of the petals with your thumbs to create curves.

Glue the small petals to the center of the flower, ensuring they are evenly spaced. Try to shape them to the curve of the ball as you stick them.

Shape the centers of the large petals in the same manner used for the small. Attach to the rest of the flower head, placing these petals in the gaps between the smaller petals.

Festival headband

While primarily worn at festivals, these headbands have become increasingly popular at weddings and springtime events. Most combinations of bright flowers will work well.

Scrapbooking

Make your favorite photos look even more special by adding corners and frames. These steps can be adapted to fit photos of any size in your collection.
