be known, and found, and felt, in every Man, in the same Certainty of Self-evidence, as every Man feels and finds his own Thoughts and Life. And this is the God, whose Being and Providence, thus self-evident in us, call for our Worship, and Love, and Adoration, and Obedience to him: And this Worship, and Love, and Adoration, and Conformity to the Divine Goodness, is our true Belief in, and sure Knowledge of, the self-evident God. And Atheism is not the Denial of a first omnipotent Cause, but is purely and solely nothing else but the disowning, forsaking, and renouncing the Goodness, Virtue, Benevolence, Meekness, &c., of the Divine Nature, that has made itself thus self-evident in us, as the true Object of our Worship, Conformity, Love, and Adoration. This is the one true God, or the Deity of Goodness, Virtue, and Love, &c., the Certainty of whose Being and Providence, opens itself to you in the self-evident Sensibility of your own Nature; and inspires his Likeness, and Love of his Goodness, into you. And as this is the only true Knowledge that you can possibly have of God and the Divine Nature, so it is a Knowledge not to be debated, or lessened by any Objections of Reason, but is as self-evident as your own Life. But to find or know God in reality, by any outward Proofs, or by anything but by God himself made manifest and self-evident in you, will never be your Cause either here or hereafter. For neither God, nor Heaven, nor Hell, nor the Devil, nor the World, and the Flesh, can be any otherwise knowable in you, or by you, but by their own Existence and Manifestation in you. And all pretended Knowledge of any of these Things, beyond or without this self-evident Sensibility of their Birth within you, is only such Knowledge of them, as the blind Man hath of that Light, that never entered into him.

And as this is our only true Knowledge, so every Man is, by his Birth and Nature, brought into a certain and self-evident Sensibility of all these Things. And if we bring ourselves by Reasoning and Dispute into an Uncertainty about them, it is an Uncertainty that we have created for ourselves, and comes not from God and Nature. For God and Nature have made that which is our greatest Concern, to be our greatest Certainty; and to be known by us in the same Self-evidence, as our own Pain or Pleasure is. For nothing is Religion, or the Truth of Religion, nothing is good or bad to you, but that which is a self-evident Birth within you. So that if you call that only God, and Religion, and Goodness, which truly are so, and can only be known by their self-evident Powers and Life in you, then you are in the Truth, and the Truth will make you free from all Doubts; and you will no more fear or regard anything, that talkative Reason can discourse against it, than against your own seeing, hearing, or sensible Life. But if you turn from Self-Evidence, to Reason and Opinion, you turn from the Tree of Life, and you give yourself up to certain Delusion.

Wonder not therefore, my Friend, that though the Mystery under Consideration contains the greatest of Truths, yet I am unwilling to help you to reason and speculate upon it; for if you attempt to go further in it, than Self-evidence leads you, you only go so far out of it, or from it. For the End of this Mystery, is not to furnish new or better Matter for Reason and Opinion, but to bring Man home to that Sensibility, which is self-evident in himself, and to lead him only by self-evident Principles, to see, and find, and feel the Difference between true and false Religion, in the same Degree of self-evident Certainty, as he sees and feels the Difference between Fire and Water. This, I say, is the great Intent of this Mystery, to bring Man into a Sensibility of God and Nature, to know and feel, that Good and Evil, Life and Death, are a self-evident Growth and Birth of Nature in Man, according as his Will enters into, and works with that which is unchangeably good, or unchangeably evil, in the Working of Nature. Now as the Workings of Nature are unchangeable in their Effects, and that which is naturally good or evil, must be always so; and seeing Man's Life standeth in Nature, and must work with it, must have only that Good or Evil which is unchangeable in Nature; and seeing his State in Nature, whether good or evil, is, and can be, only that, which the sensible, self-evident Powers of his own Life manifest to him; then you see the Fitness and Necessity of your keeping steadily to that, which is self-evident in you, as the very Tree of Life, the Criterion of all that Truth and Goodness that belongs to you. Secondly, you see with what good Reason Jacob Behmen so often tells you, That all that he has written, was only to 'help Man to seek and 'find himself,' to see and know his Place and State in Nature, and how to co-operate with God and Nature in generating a Birth of Heaven within himself. Thirdly, you may see how you and I should abuse this blessed Mystery, should we, instead of only and truly seeking and finding its Birth within us, make it a Matter of Reasoning and Opinion.

Academicus. I have neither Power nor Inclination to object to anything that you have said. But still I must desire you to assist me, in your own Way, and such as you judge to be suitable to the Intention of this Mystery. I plainly see, that the whole Ground of Religion lies in the Knowledge of what God is in himself, as distinct from Nature; what Nature is in itself; what I have from God, and what I am in and from Nature; and how

I am to work with it, as God himself is and worketh in Nature. For if this Knowledge can be opened in me, then the Why, and the How, of every Mystery of Redemption must be seen to the Bottom.

Theophilus. By Nature are Meant, all the working, stirring Properties of Life, or all the various Sensibilities which Life is capable of finding and feeling in itself. And therefore you need only look at the working Sensibilities of your own Life, the several Kinds and Ways of feeling and finding your own State, to know by a self-evident Certainty, what Nature is in itself. And thus also, in the same self-evident Certainty, you may know, that Nature is not God. For as you find, that Nature is opened in you; that all its Properties have their Existence in you; and yet that none of these Properties of Life are their own Happiness, or can make themselves to be happy, full of Peace, Delight, and Joy, and free from every Want; so you have a full self-evident Proof, that God is not Nature but entirely distinct from, and superior to Nature; and that, as considered in himself, he is That which alone can make Nature happy, free from Want, and full of all delightful Satisfaction. And thus you know, not from Hearsay, but from a self-evident Certainty in yourself, that God, considered as in himself, is the Happiness, the Rest, the Satisfaction, the Joy, the Fulfilling of all the Properties and Sensibilities of Nature; and also that Nature, in itself, is that working Life of various Properties and Sensibilities, which want to be made happy, which reach after something that they are not, and have not, and which cannot be happy or fulfilled, till something of an higher Nature than themselves be united with them; that is, the Working of Nature must be in Want, in Pain, and Dissatisfaction, till God (the Blessing and Fulfilling of Nature) is manifested, found, and enjoyed in it.

Now suppose you knew no more of what God is in himself, distinct from Nature, and what Nature is as thus distinguished from God, than is already opened in you, you would know enough to be a Key to all that which Jacob Behmen speaks of God, and of Nature; and enough also to show you how to co-operate with God and Nature, in bringing forth a New Birth of the Divine Life within you. For as soon as you know, that Nature in itself is only a working Life of various Sensibilities, which wants something distinct from itself, and higher than itself, to make it happy, then you have a self-evident Certainty of these following Truths: First, That God, considered as in himself, is the Blessing, the Satisfaction, the Heaven, and Happiness, of all and every Sensibility of Nature. Secondly, That therefore, as the Gospel teaches, only the Word, the Light, the Son of God, or Jesus Christ, can redeem fallen Nature, restore it to its first State of Blessedness in God. Thirdly, That therefore, as the Gospel teaches, you have but one Thing to do, and that one Thing absolutely necessary to be done; viz., to deny yourself; that is, to turn this fallen Nature from itself, from all its own Wills and Workings in the Vanity of this Life, to give up itself in Faith, in Hunger and Thirst after that Light, Word, Son, or Jesus Christ of God, who is the Fulness, the Satisfaction, the Joy, and Blessedness, of all Nature; who alone can turn every Working and Sensibility of Nature into a Participation of heavenly Satisfaction and Joy. Now what can you desire, or need you to know of God, of Nature, and the Mystery of Christian Redemption, more than this? And yet all this is a self-evident Knowledge, born within you as soon as you turn to it.

Academicus. Oh! Sir, you quite transport me with this short, easy, and yet full Explication of so great a Matter, which has often perplexed me. But now I shall never be at a Loss, how to understand the Distinction between God and Nature, and also the absolute Necessity of it; which, when rightly known, sets all the Doctrines and Mysteries of Christian Redemption upon such a Ground, as cannot be removed. But still I must beg of you, to help me to the same Self-evidence of the Birth and Generation of the Properties of Nature, as they are set forth by Jacob Behmen, especially of the Three first Forms, which I perceive to be the Ground of all; and yet their Birth and Generation, their Union with, and Distinction from, one another, I do not enough comprehend, as he sets them forth. Thus, the first Form of Nature is said to be Desire; which is the Ground and Foundation of all Things. This Desire (the first Property) he saith, is 'astringing, drawing, shutting up, compressing, hardening,' &c. Now all this is evident enough; for I have a sufficient Sensibility, that this is the Nature of Desire; that, in its spiritual Way, it attracts, draws, compresses, and would shut up, or inclose, &c. But then, it is immediately said, that the Second Property is 'Attraction, Drawing, Sting, and Motion,' &c. Now if the First is Attraction and Drawing, how can the Second be different from it, and yet be Attraction and Drawing?

Theophilus. The Desire is not one Property, but is in itself all the Properties of Nature; it is the Ground in which they all dwell, and the Mother out of which they are all born: So that all that is said of the Three First Forms of Nature, is only so much said of Three Forms or Properties of the Desire. For the Desire is not the First Property of Nature; but every Property hath all that it hath in and from the Desire. The First Property of the Desire, or that which is the Peculiarity of its Nature, as distinguished from the Second, is, to compress, inclose, shut up, &c. whence cometh Thickness, Darkness, Hardness, &c. But no sooner does the Desire begin to compress, shut up, but it brings forth its own greatest Enemy, and the highest Resistance to itself: For it cannot compress or thicken, but by drawing or attracting; but drawing and attracting is quite contrary to shutting up, or compressing; because drawing or attracting is Motion, and every Motion is contrary to shutting up or compressing together.

And thus your Difficulty is removed: Attraction or Drawing is rightly ascribed to the Desire, and rightly called its Second Property, because it is born of it; and yet is directly contrary to that which is the Desire's First Property or Intention; vis., to compress, to hold in Stillness, &c.

Now as these Two Properties are Two Resistances, not in Two different Things, but are one and the same Thing in this Contrariety in and to itself, as they are inseparable, generate each other, are equal in Strength, and can neither of them overcome the other, so as to go one Way, but each of them stops the other in the same Manner; and seeing this Desire cannot cease to be these Two contrary Things; vis., a Holding-fast, and Moving-away, a Shutting-in, and a Going-out, both in the same Degree of Strength; neither able to shut up, nor to go out, nor able to cease from either; these Two Contrarieties become a whirling Anguish in itself, and so bring forth a Third Property of Nature. And in these Three Properties lies the true Ground of all Sensibility of Life and also of every created Thing. Matter, Motion, Darkness, Fire, and every natural Power or Quality of anything, has its Beginning from them. Considered in themselves, they are the working Powers of that great and strong creaturely Life, which cannot be broken, because it begets itself, and every Property is included in, and generates each other. It is a Band or Knot of Life, that can never be loosed; nor is capable of Annihilation, because it is a Birth of eternal Nature, which is as unchangeable as God himself. And as it arises from no outward Thing, but is generated in and from itself, its Work is eternal, and can never be made to cease. For as one Property has no Power over the other, but that of forcing it to exist; as one Property does not weary the other, but always gives Strength to it; so there can be no Cessation of their working, but they must do, as they do, to all Eternity.

Now the Life of these Three Properties, is a Life of Three contrary Wills, equally strong and powerful against each other; and therefore is a Life of the highest Disquiet, Torment, and Anguish, full of the most horrible Sensibility. It is a Life that can feel nothing but its own tearing Contrariety, that reigns within it. And this is the Life of Nature separated from God ; it is the Life of Hell, and the Devils ; and is that Life of dark, raging Distraction, which every living Creature must be in, whose first Properties of Life are not softened and quieted, either by the Light of God, or the Light of this World, dwelling and making Peace in them. And he that will only seek to his Reason, to cool the Flame of these raging first Properties of Life, acts as wisely as he, whose House being on Fire, would only have it extinguished, by reading a Lecture upon the Nature of Water to it.

And now, Sir, you have seen plainly enough the Birth, Nature, and Difference of these three first Properties. But let it be supposed, that you have no feeling, or inward Sensibility, of these Three Properties, in the Manner they have been here described, according to Jacob Behmen ; yet you have no Reason to be troubled at it, or put your Brain upon the Rack how to conceive it, or fear that you must want the Benefit of this Knowledge, till you have it as above described ; for you have in yourself a most self-evident Proof, that the Thing is really so ; and that Desire hath all that in it which he so deeply declares, from its first Seed, or Root.

For it is a Thing self-evident to you, that every Desire, as such, is in itself a restless Torment ; that it hath Pain, Disquiet, and Anguish, in itself ; and, as to itself, consists of nothing else. Now, whether you can, with Jacob Behmen, divide this restless, anguishing Desire into its Three essential Parts, of which it consists, matters not, as to the Reality of the Thing itself ; for you have Sensibility enough, that the Desire is made up of Pain and Anguish, till the thing desired is obtained : And therefore you have all the Certainty and Benefit of this Knowledge, and it serves the same End, as if you knew the Ground of it, with the same Exactness as he has set it forth.

You have yourself for a Proof, that Desire and Pain begin together ; and this is a full Proof of what was said ; viz., that Desire Begins with Two Properties that resist and strive against one another. Again, you have the same Evidence in yourself, that the Desire, left to itself, that is, without the least Glimpse of any Possibility of having that which it desires, is a Degree of Hell, and quite intolerable to itself : And this is a self-evident Proof of what was said ; viz., that the Third and last Property of the Desire, is that whirling Anguish, brought forth by the Two first Properties : For these Three Properties are the Whole of the Desire ; it has nothing more in it. And when your Desire cannot cease, and yet has nothing but itself, without the least Mixture or Feeling of Hope in it, then you have a full Self-evidence of all that which the Desire is, in its Three essential, inseparable Properties, and that strictly according to the Letter of Jacob Behmen.

Now all that is Nature, or natural Life within you, is only the working of Desire in this painful State; and that which can set this painful Life at Rest in you, is so much of God, or the Divine Nature, manifested in you, and changing your restless Properties of Life into Peace and Happiness. And as the working Properties of Desire are your natural Life, so the same working Properties are the Life of eternal Nature; from whence, as out of the Womb, your natural Life is brought forth, and hath neither more nor less in it than that which is in eternal Nature.

And if the working Properties, which constitute the Life of eternal Nature, could be supposed to be without God in them, eternal Nature would be a mere eternal Hell: But as the eternal Desire, with all its working Properties, is brought forth by the magic Power of the Divine Will, only for this End, that the holy Deity may manifest a Heaven of Glory in them; so eternal Nature always was, and always must be, a Kingdom of Heaven, or the unchangeable Manifestation of the invisible God in an outward Sensibility of Life, Happiness, Glory, and Majesty.

Academicus. I am fully satisfied as to this Point; and all that you have said, has the Evidence of Light at Noon-day. And I hope you will now go on in the Birth of the Four remaining Properties; and show me, in the same Degree of Evidence, how these Three Properties bring forth the Four following ones, which turn Nature into a Kingdom of Heaven.

Theophilus. These Three Properties of Nature, cannot bring forth the Four following ones. They can bring forth nothing but themselves to all Eternity, nor can ever be anything else in themselves, but what they were at first. Nature can rise no higher than this painful State; and its painful working Contrariety must always be the Ground of all Life, and all Sensibility of Life. For if (1) This Shutting-up, or Compressing; and (2) This Resistance to it; and (3) This Whirling arising from both, was ever to cease, there Life, and all Sensibility, must cease with them; and therefore these Three Properties must always do as they do, as the only possible Ground of every Kind and Degree of every creaturely Life, both in Heaven, and on Earth.

But if Life is to be happy, something else must come into them, not to destroy their natural Working, but to make every Contrariety in them a strife of Joy, and delightful Sensibilities. Thus, (1) Compressing, or Shutting-up, must find itself only to compress and keep in Light and Love; (2) The Attraction or Drawing-motion, must find itself to be the Drawing and Motion of Love ; and, (3) The whirling Anguish must whirl still, but as a Transport of Joy, unavoidably brought forth from the Strife of Love in the Two Properties of which it is born. And thus Nature remains in its full Strength ; it compresses, it attracts, and it whirls, as it did at first ; and nothing is lost, or taken from it, but its Hatred, Wrath, and Misery. Now here you are to observe, that every Thing or Creature, either in Heaven, Hell, or this World, hath its Substance, or all that is Substantially in it, solely from these Three First Properties of Nature. The creaturely Substance of an Angel, a Devil, or a dead Flint, all stand in these Three First Forms of Nature. And all the Difference betwixt high and low, spiritual and material, in the Creatures, arises from their different Participation of the Four following Forms of Nature. But the Four following Forms cannot exist, or manifest themselves, but in the Three first ; and therefore the Three First are, and must be, as well in the highest as in the lowest of Creatures : They are the first Something, or Substantiality of Nature, in which the Light, and Love, and Spirit of God could manifest itself ; for Spirit cannot work without something to work in and upon, and in which it may be found ; nor could Light shine, unless there was something in Nature thicker than itself, to receive and reflect it : And therefore, Thickness or Darkness is, and must be, as eternal as the visible or shining Light. Darkness is so far from being a mere Negation, or only an Absence of the Light, that it is the first and only Substance, and the Ground of all the possible Substantiality in Nature, and the substantial Manifestor of Light itself, which could have no Visibility, Shine, or Colour, but in, and through, and by the Substantiality of Darkness or Thickness. This Darkness, Thickness, or Substantiality, is not co-existent with, or independent of God, but is the compressing, astringing, thickening Work of the first Property of the Desire ; which Desire comes eternally from God, only as a magic Birth from the Will of the Deity, which willeth to come out of its Hiddenness, into an outward Visibility of a working Life. And therefore the Desire is the Beginning of Nature ; it compresses and thickens. But what does it compress and thicken ? Why, Nothing but itself ; viz., its own Three Properties. And these Three Properties thus brought forth, tied and bound in one another, are, from Eternity to Eternity, all the Substantiality and thickness, that is or ever can be in Nature, or any Creature, from the Highest to the Lowest. And they are thus brought forth, in this indissoluble Band in and by the Desire, that the invisible Light and Life of the hidden Deity, may have its Something to move and shine in ; his hidden Spirit have Something to work and manifest itself in ; his hidden Love have Something into which it may give itself ; and his hidden Life have Something in which it can open itself in a Variety of Births of Life. And this Something is the working compressing Desire, which includes in itself, (1) A continual Thickening, which is Darkness and Substantiality ; (2) Motion or Resistance to this Thickening, which is the Ground of all Sensibility ; And, (3) A restless State of Whirling from these two Properties, which is the very Nature and Power of Life. And thus these three Properties of the Desire, are that sufficient Something, in which the Deity, by entering into it, can manifest his hidden Power in all the Substances and working Properties of Nature, by turning them all in their different Workings, into an endless Variety of delightful Forms and Sensibilities of the creaturely Life.

Now this first Thickness, Darkness, or Substantiality, brought forth in the Desire, though it is not Matter, as Matter is seen and found in this World ; yet these two Things must be affirmed of it : First, That it stands in the same Place, answers the same Ends, and is distinguished from Light and Spirit in the eternal World, just as Matter in this World stands distinguished from the Light and Spirit of this World. Secondly, That all the Darkness, Thickness, and Matter of every Kind in this World, is nothing else in itself, but the first Thickness, Darkness, and Substantiality in the Desire, brought down by various Steps into such Kinds of Materiality as are here to be seen. Look at what Kind of Materiality you will in this World ; it is, in its whole Nature, nothing else but the Darkness or Thickness of the eternal World, brought into a further Degree of Thickness and Compression. And now we are come to see the true Ground ; (1) How the Angels could destroy their Kingdom, or lose all the Light and Happiness of Heaven in it : And, (2) How also, their wasted, spoiled, darkened Habitation in the divided Properties of Nature, could be turned, and created by God, as it is, into this new Form of a material World.

The first Three Properties of Nature were never to have been seen or known, as they are in themselves, by any Creature ; their Thickness, Strife, and Darkness, were brought forth by God, in Union with the Light, and Glory, and Majesty of Heaven ; and only for that End, that the holy Deity might be made manifest in them. And therefore their own Nature, as they are in themselves, without God in them, could only then be first known, when the Angels turned their Desire backwards, to search and find the Ground and Original of Life, which could not be found, till these Properties were found, in which the original Ground of Life lay hid. This turning of their Desire into the Origin of Life, was their whole turning from the Light of God ; and therefore they found themselves where they had turned their Desire ; that is, in the Centre of Nature ; viz., in the first Properties of Nature, which is the Dark Centre, or Ground of Life, which never should have been known or manifest to any Creature. For by the Centre of Nature, or the Dark Centre, you are always to understand these three first Properties ; which, when without or separate from the Light and Goodness of the Deity in them, are in themselves only the Thickness, and Rage, and Darkness, of an omnipotent Compressing, an omnipotent Resistance to it, an omnipotent Whirling from these two omnipotent Contrarieties. I call them all omnipotent, because they cannot be stopped, but do all that they would ; and though they are contrary to one another, yet each of them gives Strength to the other ; so that the Omnipotence of the one, is the Omnipotence of the other.—And this is the boundless, incessant, strong Rage, Darkness, and Strife, of the hellish Life, which only is that, which these Three properties of Nature, when left to themselves, can feel or find. Now the Angels, which turned their Desire into this Centre of Nature, fell into the Life and working Power of these Three Properties : they felt nothing else in themselves, but these Properties ; they had no other Will or Power of Working, but as these Properties worked ; and therefore, as living and active Creatures, they could only live, and act, and co-operate, or unite with that Ground of Nature without them, which was the same and one with their own Nature ; and therefore, all that they could do, was to stir up, awaken, call forth, and act with that Thickness and Darkness, and Strife, that was hidden in Nature, just as the Toad, in a fine Garden, only sucks the Poison that is hid in a good Herb. So the fallen Angels, though in Heaven, having only the Centre of Nature in themselves, could only find and work with that Centre and Root of Darkness, on which the heavenly Glory stood. But from this Power which they had of working in the Centre of Nature, hence came forth a dark, wrathful Substantiality, separated from the Light and Glory of the holy Deity ; and thus a new Kind of Substantiality appeared in their Kingdom ; and their outward Habitation was like their inward Life ; viz., a Manifestation of Nature fallen from God. And here now, you clearly see, how the First Thickness or Compression of the First Property of Nature, which was only the hidden Substantiality of the Light and Glory of Heaven, came into a more outward State, and made its first Approach or Step towards Matter, as you now see it. For there was now a Thickness, a Darkness, and Hardness which never had been before ; for the Light being lost, then the First Property of Nature lost its beatified State of Meekness, Transparency, and spiritual Fluidity ; and became stiff, rigid, dark, and hard ; and this, as I said, was its first Step or Descent towards the Hardness and Darkness of the Matter of this World, till it came to be Earth and Stones, by the creating Power of God. And thus it came to pass, as Moses speaks, that Darkness was upon the Face of the Deep. A State, that had no Possibility of Existence, till the Sin of Angels had manifested the hidden Centre of Nature, in the Working of its Three Properties, without the Light of God in them.

Now as a new Thickness of Darkness, Hardness, or Substantiality, was manifested by the strong working Powers of the Angels in the Centre, or the first Properties of fallen Nature ; so God, to Manifest his Wisdom and Goodness towards this fallen Nature, took all these Properties in their own working Way ; and made them in their own way of Working, to stop and overcome the Evil that was brought forth by them. For the Will of God joining with the wrathful Astringency of the first compressing Property of Nature, became the Divine Fiat, which increased this compacting Property to such a Degree, as created or compacted the darkened Substantiality into a Globe of Earth and Stones. And this same Divine Fiat, or creating Power, which coagulated the Grossness into Earth and Stones, compressed or coagulated all that was substantial, or belonged to Substantiality through their whole Kingdom, as well the heavenly as the earthly Part of it ; so that all their Kingdom, as to its Substantiality, lost its Spirituality, and entered into a new created or compacted State of Thickness, as well the spoiled, as the unspoiled Part of their Kingdom. And as soon as this was done, the Angels lost all their Power in it, and over it. They could kindle no more Wrath in its heavenly Part, nor make any Use of that which they had spoiled, because all was shut up together in this new Compaction, with which the Spirituality of their Nature could have no Communication. And so they were left prisoners in their own Chains of Darkness, unable to stir up Wrath anywhere but in themselves. All this was done in the first Day of the Creation, when the Fiat of God compressed or created their whole Kingdom into a Heaven and Earth. Hence it is ; viz., from a Compaction of their whole Kingdom into a new-created Heaven and Earth ; that all Things in this World, all its Elements and Stars, are a Mixture of Good and Evil, have something of the Goodness of Heaven, and something of the Wrath and Evil of Hell in them. Hence is the great Variety of metallic Ores and precious Stones in the Earth ; the good and bad Qualities in Fire, Air, and Water. It is because the Divine Fiat, or compacting Power, came at once in the utmost Swiftness upon their whole Kingdom, as the Good and Evil stood in Strife against each other, and compressed all into a State of Cessation and Conjunction with one another, as in the Prison of this new-created Materiality. And thus the heavenly and hellish Part of their Kingdom, Light and Darkness, Fluidity and Hardness, Meekness and Wrath, Good and Evil, were all shut up together in the same sudden Compaction; in which they lay, as in a State of Death, till the Divine Fiat should awaken a Life in it.

Now the Three First Properties of Nature; the First, a Shutting up; the Second, a Running out; and the Third, a Whirling; were by the Divine Fiat, in the three first Days of the Creation, become the Ground of an earthly, a watery, and airy Materiality, all according to the working Nature of the Three Properties; and all of them having something of an heavenly Nature shut up in them, which wanted to be delivered from its Bondage. Hence this threefold Materiality of Earth, Water, and Air, became a Subject fit for the Birth of the fourth Property of Nature. And therefore, on the fourth Day of the Creation, the Divine Fiat kindled in this anguishing Materiality, out of that very Fire and Light that was compacted and hid in it, the fourth Property of Nature (the eternal Fire) as a Globe of Fire and Light, which was to stand as an Out-birth of the eternal Fire, in the midst of this new-created Materiality, and become the Opener of all the astral Life and Light in this World. And as the eternal Fire, the fourth Property of eternal Nature, is not a moveable Thing that can change its Place, but must be always in the Place of its Birth, standing for ever, as a Birth, in the Midst of the seven Properties, for ever changing the three first Properties of Nature into the three last Properties of the Kingdom of Heaven; so the Sun, the true Out-birth of the eternal Fire, and having the same Birth and Office in this material World, as the eternal Fire hath in eternal Nature, is not, cannot be, a moveable Thing, or be in any other Place in this World, than where it is; but is, and must be, the Centre or Heart of this whole System, ever separating the three first Properties of this material World, from the three that follow, and ever changing the three first Forms of material Wrath, into the three following Forms of terrestrial Life, Light, and all delightful Sensibilities; in strict Conformity to that, which the eternal Fire does in eternal Nature, changing the Root, or first Properties of Nature, into a Kingdom of God, and heavenly Glory. For the Sun is not a Body of Fire brought into the Place where it is; but the kindled Place is its Body and Birth; and therefore it is as immoveable as Place is, and must be as it is; viz., a Place giving forth Fire and Light till all material Nature is dissolved. The Place is kindled, not by any foreign Fire, but thus: In the first Compaction of the whole angelic Kingdom into this new Materiality, the good and bad Part, that is, the spoiled and unspoiled Substantiality of their whole Kingdom, was shut up in this new Compression or Materiality, in one and the same State of Death. Secondly, In the Beginning of the Creation, God said, 'Let there be Light, and there was Light;' not a shining Light, for that came first from the Birth of the Sun, but a Power or Virtue of heavenly Light, not yet in a visible, material Shine, but as an uncreated Power of Light, entering into this whole Materiality, to stir up, and awaken the good Part of the heavenly Substantiality, that was shut up in the Compaction of this new Materiality.

Without these two Things, material Nature must have continued in its Darkness, and no fourth Form of Fire could ever have come forth in it. But from these two Things, viz., the heavenly Substantiality, stirred up by the Power of Light entering into it, the three first Properties of Darkness were brought into a mere anguishing State; from whence, by the Divine Fiat, the fourth Form of material Nature kindled itself, as a Fire, and broke forth in the Place of the Sun, and must be ever burning and flaming in the Midst of the material System; because it is born of the three first Properties of Darkness, and brings forth the three last Properties of Light, and Life, and the Joy of Nature; and therefore must always be in the Midst of the six Properties of Nature, itself making the Number to be seven. And thus the Sun, as the fourth Form of Nature, must always stand in the Midst of the whole material System. And this proved, not as Copernicus has proved it, from reasonable Conjectures, and outward Arguments, but from the internal Nature of its Birth, the first Root from which it proceeds, and the absolute Impossibility of its being otherwise. And thus it is, that the Truth and Depth of Nature is opened by the Spirit of God, in the Mystery made known to our illiterate Shoemaker. And thus you have a short Sketch, how this World came to be as it is. It is descended as an Out-birth of the eternal World, and all the seven Properties of eternal Nature work in it, as they work in Eternity; and the Eternity is manifested in the temporary Working of a new World, which is only to stand in this State of Thickness or Compaction for a time, till the Goodness of God towards fallen Nature has been sufficiently manifested thereby.

For as this material System of Things may, in a good Sense, be said to be an unnatural State, occasioned by the Disorders which the Fall of Angels brought into Nature ; and as it had no Beginning, but from the Will of God, commanding the first Property of Nature to coagulate and compress their disordered Kingdom into a new Thickness or Materiality, only as a Remedy to stop, remove, and overcome the Evil in Nature ; so when this Remedy shall have had its Trial, and the Will of God shall no longer will this compressing together ; then all that has been brought together by it, must fall back again into its first Eternity. And then, without any Possibility of being otherwise, every Birth in this World, that belongs to the Root or Centre of Nature, and has worked with it, must fall down into that eternal Abyss of Darkness, on which the Light of God for ever stands, unknown to it. And every Life that is born of Heaven, and has worked with it, must ascend into the Kingdom of God, or Abyss of Divine Glory and Majesty.

Oh Academicus ! Look now (whilst these Thoughts are alive in you) at worldly Greatness, fleshly Wisdom, and earthly Schemes of Happiness ; and tell me, if you can, what a Nothingness, what a Folly and Delusion, there is in them ? Look again at the Apostle's Pilgrim, abstaining from worldly Lusts, desiring to know nothing but Christ, and him crucified ; living in the Spirit of Prayer, and Thirst after God ; striving in everything after the fullest Conformity to the Tempers, Spirit, Life, and Behaviour of Christ in this World ; and then tell me, whether Heaven and Earth, God and Nature, and all that is great, and wise, and happy, does not call upon you to be this Pilgrim.

Academicus. Truly, Sir, I enough see, that all worldly Wisdom, and ambitious Views of a Glory of Life in the Things and Concerns of this World, are no better than vain Attempts to be blessed and happy from the Ruins of the angelic Kingdom. For this World is only a Thickness and Materiality of the bestial Life, built upon the Ground of Hell ; that is, upon the first Properties of fallen Nature, brought into a harder, more compacted State of Existence than they have in Hell, and kindled into an astral, terrestrial, bestial Life, by the Power of the Sun. The bestial Life, therefore, is the highest Good and Happiness in it ; and the Creatures of this World have nothing that they seek for further in it. But Man being not created for it, but by Sin fallen into it, is the only Creature that makes an unnatural Use of it, and seeks for that in it, and by it, which cannot be found in it. Man, having been wise, great, and happy in his Creation, though they are all lost, has yet some remaining Sensibility of them, though fallen into a World, that cannot help him to them. Hence it is, that he would be wise, and great, and happy in a World, that has no Happiness but for Beasts ; and can only help Man to know, that he is poor and miserable, and banished from his true native Country.

But, instead of learning this one Lesson of Truth, from the World he is in, which is all the Wisdom, Greatness, and Happiness, that can be had from it, he gives himself up to a Wisdom that is Foolishness, a Greatness that is all Meanness, and a Happiness that begins and ends in Torment and Delusion. Would you see all his greatness, Wisdom, and Happiness united, the Sum total of earthly Glory! It is, when he has in his Cap the Feathers of some Birds, wears a painted Riband, laced Clothes, is called by some new Name, and drawn from Place to Place by a Number of Beasts. Now, poor, and mean, and unnatural as this Fiction of earthly Glory is, yet this is the powerful Idol, that carries all before it! that destroys all Sense of Goodness, and Divine Virtue! and keeps the Heart of Man so earnestly devoted to it, that he has no Sense of the Eternity that is in him; that Eternity brought him forth, and Eternity will take him again!

Theophilus. It is true, Academicus, that the highest Good of this World is its bestial Life; and therefore it has no more, or other Happiness for a Man, than for a Beast; can give no more to one, than to the other; viz., Food and Raiment; with which the bestial Life in Man ought to be content, as well as in the Beast. But seeing Man, in spite of the Nature of Things, will have an earthly Glory of Life; thence it is, that the Wisdom of this World is, and must be, Foolishness with God, and will be Foolishness with Man, as soon as he gets but a moderate Knowledge of himself. But give me leave just to observe, that though this material World has no higher Happiness than the bestial Life; yet God hath much higher Ends in creating it. For though the dark wrathful Properties of fallen Nature could only, in their Compaction, be made the Ground of a vegetable and bestial Life; yet you are to observe, that in the Creation of this World, viz., in the Compaction of the whole angelic Kingdom, the unspoiled heavenly Part thereof was shut up with that, in which the Wrath was kindled: And that for these two great Ends; First, That, by this Compaction, it might be taken out of the Power of the evil Angels, that they might not go on in kindling Wrath in it. Secondly, That this reserved good Part of their Kingdom, might be the Foundation and Ground of an heavenly paradisaical Life, and a new Host of heavenly Creatures, instead of the fallen Angels. Now, to do this, God created an human Angel, who was to call forth the paradisaical Life out of the compacted heavenly Substantiality, as the Sun opened a vegetable bestial Life, out of the gross Substantiality of the material World.

God breathed the Triune Spirit of the holy Deity into a Body taken out of the Earth, that is, into a Body of that Heavenly Substantiality, that was shut up in the Earth, as well as in every other Part of this material System ; and therefore his Body is rightly said to be taken or formed out of the Earth, because it was formed of that Substantiality, that was shut up in the Earth.

But when his wandering Eye had raised a longing Desire to know what the earthly Life was in its Good and Evil, and took the certain Means of knowing it ; then, as his Soul lost the Light and Spirit of God, so it lost also that heavenly luminous Body, in which the Light and Spirit of God could dwell, as it dwelleth in Heaven. And when this heavenly luminous Corporeity was lost, and shut up again in that earthly Bondage and Compaction in which it lay, before it was his Body ; then the poor fallen Soul was only clothed with the gross Corruptibility of bestial Flesh and Blood. You are to understand this Matter thus : When his Body was formed out of that heavenly Substantiality, that was in the Compaction of the Earth, it was not entirely separated from all earthly Materiality (because he was to have a Body of this World, as well as of the heavenly World), but its State in the earthly Materiality was entirely changed ; it was till then shut up in the earthly Compaction, but now it is called out of that earthly Death into a State of Life ; it is set free from the Power of the Earth, in a Superiority over it, to be its Happiness, and open its own Glory in it, and through it.

And thus you see the Possibility, the Truth, and the Manner of the Thing ; how his heavenly Body was taken out of the Earth at his Creation, set in Freedom from it, and in a living Superiority over it ; how, at the Fall, it was swallowed up, or compacted again in its own first Earth ; viz., the earthly Body, or Materiality of Adam : For as it was not separated from this earthly Materiality, but only brought to Life in it, and Superiority over it ; so when the Divine Light, which was the Life of this Body, was lost, it then fell again into a State of Death in that gross Materiality, under which it lay before. And thus in the strictest Truth, the Body of Adam returned again to that very Earth, or Dust, from whence it was taken.

Now, when this happened, the fallen Angels entered again into some Power in their lost Kingdom. There was then something found, with which they could work, and join their own Power. For as the Soul of Man had lost the Light and Spirit of Heaven, so the same dark Centre of Nature, or the Three first wrathful Properties, were opened in it, as are opened in the fallen Angels. And thus they got Entrance into the awakened Hell in Man, and can work in it. For as often as Man stirred, followed, or worked with his Will according to these Properties, the Devil could enter into, and work with him; and so the first Son of fallen Man was made a Murderer. And hence it is, that Sin and Wickedness have known no Bounds; it is because it is the joint Work of fallen Angels, and fallen Man.

Stay a while, Sir, in View of these Truths: Here you see the Seat and Ground, the Birth and Growth, of all Sin and Evil; it lies in these Three dark, selfish, self-willed, wrathful, hellish Properties of the fallen Soul. This is the dark Centre of Nature, in which the Devils have all their own Power in themselves, and all their Power in you;—and till you resist this Hell within you, till you live in Contrariety to it, the Devils will not flee from you.

Here also you see, in a self-evident Light, the deep Ground, and absolute Necessity, of that one Redemption, which is called, and is, the Meekness of the heavenly Blood of the Lamb of God. For these Words in their true Ground, mean only the Changing of the Three first dark wrathful Properties of fallen Nature, into the Three last Properties of the heavenly Life, Light, and Love, which is the Life of God restored to the Soul, or the Light, and Spirit, or Word of God born again in it. Let me only add this one Word; Turn from Wrath of every Kind, as you would flee from the most horrid Devil; for it is his, it is he, and his Strength in you. Whether you look at Rage and Anger in a Tempest, a Beast, or a Man, it is but one and the same Thing, from one and the same Cause; and therefore your own Wrath is to be turned from, as the same with that of Hell; and which has its Birth and Strength from that Hell or Centre of Nature, which the Fall of Angels hath made known; and which only worketh thus differently, whether it be in a Man, a Beast, or the Elements of this World. And this must be, till the Centre of Nature is again in its Place of Hiddenness, by being wholly overcome by Heaven. Embrace therefore every Meekness of Love and Humility, with the same Eagerness as you would fall down at the Feet of Jesus Christ; for if it is his, it is he, and his Power of Salvation in you. Enter into no Strife, or Self-defence against anyone, that either reproaches you, or your Doctrine; but remember, that if you are to join with Christ in doing Good, your Sword of natural Wrath must be locked up in its own Sheath; no Weapons of Flesh are to be used; but you must work only in the Meekness, the Sweetness, the Humility, the Love and Patience of the Lamb of God; who, as such, is the only Doer of Good, the only Overcomer of Wrath, and the one Redemption of fallen Nature. If you are reproached as an Enthusiast, do not take Comfort in thinking, that it is the Truth of your own Piety, or the Want of it in others, that gives Occasion to the Charge ; for though both of these should happen to be the Case, yet they are not proper Reflections for you ; and if you take your Peace from them, it is not the Peace of God in you : But as in good Report, you are to be as though you heard it not, ascribe nothing to yourself from it ; so in evil Report, Self is just as much to be forgotten ; and both of them are to be used, only as an Occasion to generate Humility, Meekness, Love, and the Spirit of the Lamb of God, both in yourself, and all that speak either well or ill of you. For this is the Will and Working of Heaven ; it has but one Will, and one Work ; and that is, to change all the Wrath, Evil, and Disorder of Nature, into a Kingdom of God. And therefore he that would be a Servant of God, and work with Heaven, must will all that he willeth, do all that he doth, and bear all that he beareth, in that one Spirit, and one Will, with which Heaven ruleth over all the Earth.

You rejoice to think, that you know the true Ground of your Redemption ; how Heaven comes again into the fallen Soul, when that Property of Light and Love, which is called the Fifth Property of Nature, is generated in it. It is indeed a blessed Knowledge ; but its Blessedness is only then yours, when yourself are this Fifth Property, that is, when your Life is a Life of this Fifth Property ; when, whatever you do, wherever you go, or whatever you meet, you only do as this Fifth Property doth, give nothing but that which it giveth ; viz., its gentle Light and Love to every Man, and every Thing, whether it be good or bad. For this Property hath nothing else to give, and yet is always giving ; its Nature is, to communicate and impart itself, not here or there, but always and everywhere ; it has no other Will. When therefore this Property (the Christ of God, the Life of Heaven) is born in you, Friend and Foe will have the same from you ; you will have lost all Resentment ; you will love your Enemies ; bless them that curse you ; pray for them that despitefully use you ; and have but one Will towards every Man, and that is, that Light and Love may do that for him, which they have done for you.

Academicus. Oh ! Theophilus, you have given me more than I know how to contain ; and yet have increased my Thirst after more still. You have so touched the Cord of Love within me, that all my Nature stands in a trembling Desire after it ; I would fain feel nothing else but the gentle godlike Power of Love, living in my Heart. Pray therefore, of all Things, help me to understand how the Fire, the Fourth Property of Nature, is born ; and how it turns the Three first wrathful Forms into the Three following Forms of heavenly Joy, Triumph, and Happiness ; the First of which Three Forms, is this Fifth of Light and Love : Therefore, help me here, I beseech you.

Theophilus. What a Therefore have you here drawn? That therefore, of all Things, I must needs help you to an Opinion, or notional Knowledge, how the Fire is born, and how it turns Nature into a Kingdom of God. For were I to join with you in forming Notions of this How, I should only help you to lose all, by being content with the Shadow, instead of the Substance.

You say, that your Nature stands in a trembling Desire after the Birth of this Light and Love: If so, you stand in the very Place of its Birth, and must stand there till it is born in you. It can be born nowhere else, nor in any other Manner; and all that Jacob Behmen has written, is only to direct and bring you to this Place of its Birth. He himself has given you all the hearsay Knowledge that you can have of it; for he can give you no more from the plainest Words. And therefore, to help anyone to work with his Brain for clear Notions, and rational Conceptions, of what he has written, is helping him to do and be that, which all his Works, from the Beginning to the End, absolutely declare against, as contrary to the whole Nature and End of them. Which speak, as he saith, with the Sound of a Trumpet; and chiefly to awaken Man out of the Dream and Death of rational, notional, and hearsay Knowledge; and to show him, that his own inward Hunger and Thirst after God, is that alone which can and must open the Fountain of Light and Divine Knowledge in him.

But to speak a Word or Two of the Fire, whose Birth you want to know. You know already, better than any Words can tell you, from a self-evident Knowledge, that Nature is in you; that it is not God, but is that which wants God, or its true Good; and must be an Emptiness, a Pain, and Want, till God is manifested in it. If you ask, Why Nature is only a State of Want and Disquiet, and unable to be content with itself? It is because the eternal, uncreated, incomprehensible Light, which no Creature can enter into, is that which gave Birth to all Nature, and from whence all Nature hath its Hungering, and State of Want. For Nature had never come into Being, but that the eternal, incomprehensible Light, longed to be manifested in an outsoken Life of Nature and Creatures, and in a Visibility and Shine of Glory: Therefore, as Nature came forth from this first Longing of the Light to be manifested in it, so Nature is in itself only a Want and Hungering, which the Light alone has raised, and can only satisfy.

Now from this Longing on both Sides, Nature wanting God, and God wanting to be manifested in Nature, the Union of both is effected; which is the Birth of that eternal Fire, or Fourth Form of Nature, which is always burning in the same Degree, that is, always doing the same Thing; vis., always overcoming and shutting up the Three first Forms of Nature, and making them to be the hidden Root and Centre of Nature; and always bringing forth out of them the Three following Properties of Light and Love, and every joyful Sensibility of Life; that is, changing Nature into a Kingdom of Heaven. Now that which makes this Change in the Properties of Nature is, and is rightly called Fire, in the strictest literal Meaning of the Word; because all that we can conceive as Fire in this World, hath its whole Nature, Power, and Existence, from it. Not only the Fire of Life in Animals and Vegetables, but the Fire in the Kitchen, and the Candle, is each of them kindled as it is kindled, and doth all that it doth from this Fourth Property, or Fire of eternal Nature. The Thickness and Darkness in the Wood, and the Candle, have Fire kindled in them, and Light from that Fire, in no other Way, than as the Fourth Property is a Fire from the Thickness and Darkness of Nature, kindled by the Light of God entering into Union with it. Had the Wood, and the Candle, no Water or Oil in them, neither of them could give forth Fire and Light. Now Water and Oil have the Properties of Light in them: When therefore the Properties of Nature in the Wood, and the Candle, are put into Strife, and begin to work in Blackness and Darkness (which is the Beginning of every Fire), they by this Strife open an Entrance for the Properties of Light in the Water, and the Oil, to mix and unite with them; and by this Union of Darkness and Light, that Fire is kindled, which turns the Darkness of the Wood and Candle into a Shining and Light. And thus does every Fire kindled in this World, bear an infallible Witness to the Kindling, the Nature, and Power, of that eternal Fire, which, kindled by the Oil of Divine Light, changes the first dark Properties of Nature into the Light and Majesty of Heaven. Now what would you know more of Fire, or its Birth, than that it is, and only can be, kindled by the Light of God entering into, and uniting with, the first Properties of Nature in the Soul? Leave off therefore all working with your Reason in the Way of Notions; empty your Heart of all vain Satisfactions in earthly Things, that so the first Properties of Nature in your Soul, finding their Misery, and Want of God, may make you to be all Hunger, and Faith, and Desire of him. And then the Fire must kindle, nothing can hinder it; God will then infallibly come as a Fire and Light into your Soul, changing all the wanting, empty, restless Properties of your natural Life, into a Sweetness of a New Birth of Rest and Peace in him.

For nothing works either in God, or Nature, or Creature, but Desire. And as God created Angels and Men out of eternal Nature, only through a longing Desire of manifesting his own Goodness and Happiness in them, so every Angel and Man must find God, as a Life of Happiness and Goodness in him, as soon as Nature, either in Angel or Man, is become a Hunger after God. For Hunger does all in all Worlds, and finds all that it wants, and hungers after. Every Thing had its Beginning in it, and from it; and every Thing is led by it to all its Happiness.

Academicus. I am quite satisfied in all my Demands, and will ask for no more Help, as to the Use I am to make of our Author's Writings. Only tell me when they will all come forth in a new Edition, or which will be published first; for I want several of them, which I could never get.

Theophilus. If you have but Two or Three of his Books, it is enough; for every one of them has all in it that you need be taught, and sufficiently opens the Grounds of the whole Mystery of the Christian Redemption. He himself thought his Books to be too numerous; and expressed his Wish, that they were all reduced into one. As he wrote without any Art, and had no Knowledge of Regularity of Composition; so whatever particular Matter he occasionally entered upon, he always began again afresh from the same first Ground, and full Opening of the Mystery of Nature, from whence he explained and determined the Matter he was upon. And it was this frequent, and almost constant Repetition of one and the same Ground, that swelled his Writings into so many Volumes, though it may be said, that there is nothing separately in any of his Books, but what is to be found in almost every other, though not so largely set forth. You have no need therefore, to run with Eagerness through all his Books; but the Thing that you are to intend and look for, is the Ground and Foundation on which all his Doctrines are built, which contain the true Philosophy, or fundamental Opening of all the Powers that work both in Nature and Grace; and that by this Knowledge you may become a true Workman yourself; and know how to conform to, and concur with, all that the working Powers, either of Nature or Grace, require of you. Now this Ground and Foundation of all is (as far as Words can do it) opened to you in every one of his Books: And you have been already also sufficiently brought into the Knowledge of it, by what has been said of the Birth of Nature; what it is, how it works, how it came into Being, how it is distinct from God, how it wants God, how God is manifested in it, how every After-thing is from and out of it, is all that it is, and hath all that it hath, in it, and by it, and must have all its Happiness or Misery, according as it works with, or contrary to Nature. From this fundamental Ground, or Opening of the working Powers of Nature, you have seen how Angels could, and did, lose their first State in Nature; and how a Second new Creation could, and did, come out of their fallen State and Kingdom, all according to the Powers of fallen Nature, over-ruled, and governed, and put into a new Way by the good creating Fiat of God. You have seen how this new Creation, with Man its Lord, could, and did, lose also their First created State in Nature; and how God, overruling fallen Nature again, did, by his merciful redeeming Fiat, or by the Means of the holy Jesus, put this fallen new Creation in a State of Recovery, and all done according to the Powers, and Workings, and Possibilities of Nature. So that nothing is done arbitrarily, or by mere Will, but everything in Conformity to the unchangeable Workings and Powers of Nature; only directed, assisted, and helped, by the Mercy of his redeeming Fiat, so far as Nature was capable of being helped. This, Sir, is the true and fundamental Ground of all his Doctrines; and, standing upon this Ground, you stand in the Centre of Truth, whence everything that you need to know of God, of Nature, of Heaven, of Hell, of the Fall of Man, of his Redemption only and solely in and by the Word or Son of God, is known in such self-evident Certainty, as you find and know the Workings of your own Life: And also, that Happiness or Misery, Life or Death, can only be had, or not had, lost or found, solely as a Birth in Nature, brought forth by the Faith, or magic Power of the Will of Man, working either with, or contrary to, the redeeming Fiat of God.

To make therefore a right Use of his Writings, you should, for a sufficient Time, keep solely to that Part of them, which opens the Ground and Foundation of the Powers that work in Grace and Nature, till by a self-evident Sensibility it is opened in you, and your Heart stands in a Conformity to it, and true Working with it: For it is your own Heart, as finding the working Powers of Nature and Grace in itself, and simply given up in Faith to work with them, that is to be your Key and Guide to that Knowledge you are to have of them; whether it be from the Holy Scripture, or the Writings of this Author. For to this End, he tells you, he has written all; viz., to help Man to seek and find himself; what is his Birth, his State and Place in Nature; what he is in Body, Soul, and Spirit; from what Worlds all these Three Parts of him are come; how they came to be as they are at present; what his Fall is, and how he must rise out of it. And therefore, if, in order to seek and find this Ground in yourself, you were, for some sufficient time, to read only to the 10th or 12th Chapter of his Three Principles, or to the 6th or 8th

Chapter of his Threefold Life; and proceed no further, till this Ground had made itself manifest in you, and your Heart stood in a strict Conformity to it, and Working with it; you would then be in a true Fitness to read further, and reap the full Benefit from any other of his Books, that should fall into your Hands; whether it was the Way to Christ, or the Book upon the Incar-nation. But, above all Things, remember this Advice, as of the last Moment to you, Be no Reasoner upon the Mystery; seek for no Commentaries, or rational Explications of it, to entertain your Reason with: For, as soon as you do this; then, however true and good this Mystery may be in itself, it is, with regard to you, of no better Use than that very vain Philosophy, and Science falsely so called, condemned by the Apostle. It will only be the same Snare and Delusion to you, that other Learning and Philosophy is to other People. For if there is nothing good or Divine in you but the Faith, and Hope, and Love, and Desire of your Heart turned to God; if nothing can do any Good, be any Blessing or Happiness to this Faith, and Love, and Desire turned to God, but only God himself in his holy Being; and if nothing can communicate God to you, but God himself; and if God cannot communicate himself to you under a Notion, or an Idea of Reason, but a Degree of Life, Good, and Blessing, born or brought to Life in your Soul; then you see, that to give yourself up to Reasoning, and notional Conceptions, is to turn from God, and wander out of the Way of all Divine Communication.

Academicus. But if it be strictly thus, Theophilus, had it not been better, that these deep Matters had not been communicated to the World, since it is so natural to Man to make a wrong Use of them?

Theophilus. This Objection, Academicus, comes with the same Strength against the Scriptures themselves. For, excepting the Seven thousands unknown in every Age, as in the Days of Elijah, and a few spiritual Fathers and Writers in almost every Age of the Church, bearing faithful Witness to the truth and Mysteries of Religion, it must be said, that human Learning, governed by human Reason, hath, from Age to Age, to this very Day, not only mistaken the true End and Use of the Scriptures, but hath turned them into an Occasion of much Evil and Mischief. The Scriptures speak only to the Heart and Conscience of Man, not to amend or enlighten it with Notions and Opinions formed from the written Letter of the Word; but solely to make the Being and Power of God known and adored, and to awaken in Man a Sensibility of his Want of God; and to turn all the Power, and Strength, and Will of the Heart wholly to God, to receive Light, and Life, and Rest, in his holy Being.

But to speak now directly to your Objection : If I knew of any Person, who stood in the Faith and Simplicity of the first Christians, free from all carnal Adherence, or vain Trust, to Party-Notions, Doctrines, and Errors, brought forth by the Contention of Sects and Churches ; whose Soul was dead to the earthly Nature, and all the Rudiments of this World, seeking only Light, Life, and Salvation, from God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, living and dwelling in him, redeeming and sanctifying his whole Body, Soul, and Spirit ; To such a one I could freely say, this Mystery was needless ; as having all that already, which this Mystery would do for him. For its only End is, to bring Man out of all the Labyrinths of false and notional Religion, to this very first State and Simplicity of the Gospel-Faith and Life.

And this may pass for a good Reason, why this Mystery was not opened by God in the first Ages of the Church ; since there was then no Occasion for it. For Religion began, and went on, rightly, in its own true Way ; it had the Faith and Heart of Man ; it stood in its own proper Strength and Glory, and was an awakened Divine Life of Faith, simply given up with Joy and Gladness to the Mysteries of the Gospel ; not wanting any Whys or Wherefores, because in the real Possession of all the Good, and Blessing, and Power, of every Mystery of Salvation.

But seeing a worldly Spirituality, called in Scripture the Whore riding upon the Beast, has had its Thousand Years in the Church ; since not only every Kingdom, but almost every Corner of Christendom, has a Babel of its own, built upon some rational Interpretation of the Letter of Scripture ; since learned Reason, within the Church, knows no other Use of Scriptures, but to reproach and condemn all other Babels, and to find Materials to strengthen its own ; since Reason, without the Church, finds it as easy to reproach and condemn all Revelation, as it is to reproach all these Babels built upon it ; since this is the finished Confusion, brought forth by the Reason and fleshly Wisdom both of those that defend, and those that oppose the Gospel ; how adorable is the Goodness of God, in vouchsafing to these last Ages of the World such a Remedy (viz., the Opening the Ground and Mystery of all things) as is suitable to the distressed and confused State of Religion in the World ! And how easy is it also to see the greatest Reasons, why this Remedy was not afforded sooner ! For as true Faith did not want it, and learned Reason, whilst pleased with itself, could not be in a Condition to receive it ; so it was highly suitable to the Goodness and Wisdom of God, not to give forth this Mystery, till Reason, or fleshly Wisdom, had made Shipwreck of Faith ; and had so filled up the Measure of its Folly, as to stand in its last and highest State of Distress, Perplexity, and Confusion. For any Remedy is only then likely to be rightly received, when Distress and Perplexity make the Want of it to be sensibly felt.

Let not therefore the genuine, plain, simple Christian, who is happy and blessed in the Simplicity of Gospel-Faith, take Offence at this Mystery, because he has no Need of it. For it is God's Goodness to the distressed State of the Church, fallen from the Life and Power of Gospel-Faith, and groaning under the Slavery, Darkness, and Perplexity, of bewildered Reason and Opinions.

Neither let the orthodox Divine, who sticks close to the Phrases and Sentiments of Antiquity, reject this Mystery as heretical, because it opens a Ground of Man, and the Divine Mysteries, not known or found in the primitive Writers. For this is the very Reason, why he should thankfully receive it with open Arms, as having, and being that very Thing, which the distressed divided State of the Church now so greatly wants; and yet did not want, till it was fallen from its first Simplicity of Faith. For whilst Faith and Life defended the Mysteries of Religion, the Ground and Philosophy of it was not wanted. But when Orthodoxy had given itself up to Reason, and had nothing else for its Support but Reason and Argument from the Letter of Scripture, without the least Knowledge of the first Ground of Doctrines; then it could only be defended, as it is defended in every Sect and Division of the Christian World. For if Reason will defend the Mysteries of Redemption, without knowing the true Ground on which they stand, or why they must be as they are, from the Nature of the Thing; the more zealous and learned any Man is, the more Errors must he fall into in the Defence of them. For the greater the Strength is, that works without Light, the more Extravagancies it must produce. This is too visible in all the Controversies that have risen in the Church. Now, that learned Reason, as presiding in the Divinity-Schools, never yet had, nor could have, any Knowledge of the Ground of Man, and the Mysteries of Redemption, is plain from this one generally received Opinion, of every Age to this Day; viz., That all Things were created out of Nothing. For this Maxim entirely excludes all Possibility of giving any Account of the Ground and Reason of anything, either in the Nature of Man, or Religion; and is the same thing as saying, that Nothing has any Ground or Reason. For if that which begins to be, comes out of Nothing, it can only have the Nature of that out of which it comes; and therefore can have no more said about it, why it is this or that, than can be said of that Nothing, from whence it comes. And if the Mystery, or Life of the human Nature, is out of Nothing, has no Reality of any antecedent Ground in it, out of which it came to be such as it is, and to have that which it hath; then it is most certain, that all the Mysteries of the Religion of Man must come forth from the same Nothing, and have no antecedent Ground from whence they come, that requires them to be as they are. For Man, created out of Nothing, cannot have a Religion that is of any higher Descent than himself, unless he is to have a Religion that is quite unnatural to him. But a Religion that has its Ground in Eternity, must be an unnatural Religion to Man that comes up in Time, and out of Nothing. If therefore you will hold Man to be out of Nothing, you must of all Necessity hold all the Mysteries of the Religion of Man to be also out of Nothing; and that therefore no possible Account can be given, either of the Ground of Man, or his Religion, or why there can be either Right or Wrong, Good or Evil, in either of them.

Hence you may see, why the Truth has always suffered in every Controversy of the Church; Thus, if you begin with that of St. Austin and Pelagius, about the Freedom of the human Will; do but suppose, what is Fact, that they both of them held the human Will to be created out of Nothing; and then you need not wonder at that Number of Volumes and Systems of Errors, which this Dispute has brought forth. For who can say, what the Will is, or is not; what Nature or Power it must have, if it is created out of Nothing? Whereas, if either of these Disputants had known, from a true Ground, what the human Will is; that it cannot be a made Thing, much less made out of Nothing; but that the Will of Angel or Man, is the eternal uncreated Will become creaturely, as a true direct Birth from the Divine Will, descended from it, born out of it, and from thence come into a creaturely State: then they had known, that the Will of Angel or Man, must have the Nature and Freedom of the eternal Will; and that its Freedom not only consisted in its Self-motion, but chiefly and most gloriously in this, that it could neither receive, nor have, nor be anything, as to its Happiness or Misery, but according to its own Working: And then all that Predestinarian Learning of Decrees, &c., that has tormented the Church ever since the Time of St. Austin, had been prevented.

Look next at the Socinian Controversy. The Socinians, and their Opponents, met in the Field of Reason, to debate about the Fall, Original Sin, its Guilt, the vindictive Wrath of God, and the Necessity of satisfying the Divine Justice; the Necessity of the Incarnation, Sufferings, Death, and Satisfaction, of Christ, These were the great Points to be tried at the Bar of Reason. Now all these Disputants stood upon the old Ground; vis., that the Soul of Man, as well as all other Things, was created out of Nothing. And therefore they all stood absolutely excluded, from every Possibility of touching the true Ground or Reason of any one Doctrine in Debate. For the Soul, created out of Nothing, leaves no room to affirm, or even to suppose. that anything can be affirmed of the Ground and Reason of Christian Redemption. For surely, if the Soul of Man is created out of Nothing, it may and must with as much Sense be affirmed, that it may be redeemed by Nothing; and he that affirms the one, can have no Pretence to deny the other.

Just the same may be said of the present Controversy, betwixt the Christians and Infidels, concerning Christianity itself. You need not wonder, that so many learned Volumes have had so little Effect; or that the Defenders of Christianity seem to lose Ground, though the Infidels, at the same time, get no Advantage to their Cause, but that of increasing their Numbers. For as neither Side can go any higher, than a Creation out of Nothing; so neither Side can say anything from a true Ground, either for or against the Mysteries of the Gospel. If therefore Infidelity increases, it is not because it has got more Light, sees further into the Depths of Nature, or stands upon a more rational Ground; but merely because the Vanity and Blindness of the Dispute, has a natural Tendency to beget Indifference and Infidelity in the Hearts of Men.

Observe this Proposition; viz., 'In God we live and have our Being.' Now, how easy is it for anyone to see, that no one can say anything as to the Ground and Reasons of the Mysteries of the Gospel, either for or against them, till he can go to the Bottom of this Proposition, and plainly show, either how we do, or do not, live and move, and have our Being, in God! For the Truth or Falseness of every Mystery of the Christian Redemption, plainly depends upon this Matter. If the Christian therefore will speak to the Purpose, in Defence of the Ground of the Gospel; he must be able to show, that we so are in God, so have our Life in him and from him, and so move in him, as to prove, from thence, the Ground, the Necessity, and Certainty, of the Christian Means of Redemption. On the other hand, the Deist cannot take one rational Step, or have any true Ground to stand upon, but so far as he can show, that we are not so from God, have not such a Nature in and from him, do not so live and move in him, as to have any Want or any Fitness for that Method of Redemption, which the Gospel teaches. But as neither Side did this, though the one Thing necessary to be done; so you also see, that neither Side had any Possibility of Doing it. For the Soul, created out of Nothing, allows of no Inquiry, whether anything of God be in it, or how it has its Life in him, or stands related to him. It admits of no searching after any Ground or Reason of its Good or Evil, or how it must have its Happiness or Misery from the Nature of the Thing. For if the intelligent Life itself must be supposed to come from no Ground, but to be created out of Nothing; then it is certain, that its Good and Evil, its Happiness or Misery, with everything else, must be supposed to have no Ground or Reason for being as it is, but to be created out of Nothing; and may go again into Nothing, just as the Creator pleaseth.

And now, Sir, you may enough see how all Controversy, both within and without the Church, has been so vain a thing. For Reason was to support Doctrines and Mysteries, without the least Knowledge of the Ground on which they stood; and Reason was to oppose them in the same Ignorance. You see also, why in these last Ages, where literal Learning has made so great a Figure, that the Matter has only been made worse, and Division and Error more triumphant. For as the Ground of the Truths was still wanted, and nothing appealed to, but the Letter and Phrase of Scripture; so the more artful and learned the Disputants were in Reasoning and Criticism, the more Absurdities must be defended on both Sides. Why is not the learned Papist shocked at Transubstantiation, or the Protestant at Predestination and Reprobation? Is it because each of them have enough of the Truth of Reason, and the Goodness of Criticism, to draw the Letter of Scripture to his Side. And this you may be assured of, that Reason, and literal Learning, have just as good Eyes in every other religious Matter, and will give just such an Account of every other Doctrine, when it comes into Dispute, as the Papist and Protestant have done in these two Points. And the thing cannot be otherwise: As the Deist and Christian both hold a Creation out of Nothing, they must both have only an arbitrary God, and arbitrary Religion, that has no antecedent Ground to stand upon, but is left to the arbitrary Proof or Reason of both of them. What Thanks, therefore, are due to the Goodness of God, for opening this great Mystery of all Things in our Author, wherein the Right and Wrong, the True and False, in Religion, is as manifest as any Thing can be to our Senses! Let no one therefore take Offence at the Opening of this Mystery, as if it brought anything new into Religion; for it has nothing new in it; it alters no Point of Gospel-Doctrine, nor adds any Thing to it, but only sets every Article of the old Christian Faith upon its true Ground, and in such a Degree of Light, as, when seen, is irresistible. It disturbs no one, who is in Possession of the Truth, because it points at nothing, drives to nothing, but to the opening the heavenly Life in the Soul. It calls no Man from any outward Form of Religion, as such ; but only shows, that no outward Form can have any Good in it, but so far as it only means, and seeks, and helps, the renewed Life of Heaven in the Soul. 'A 'Christian,' says he, 'is of no Sect, and yet in every Sect'; a Truth which all Sects, as such, will dislike; and therefore a Truth equally wanted to be known, and equally beneficial to all Sects. For the chief Hurt of a Sect lies in this, that it takes itself to be necessary to the Truth ; whereas the Truth is only then found, when it is known to be of no Sect, but as free and universal as the Goodness of God, and as common to all Names and Nations, as the Air and Light of this world.

Suffer me now, before we part, once more to repeat what I have so often said, that you would not receive this Mystery as a System of rational Notions ; nor do with it, as the World has, for the most part, done with the Bible, only gather Opinions of Reason and Speculation from it. For it opens no Depth of Nature or Grace, but to help you to the Heart and Spirit of the returning prodigal Son, and to show you the Blindness and Vanity of Reason and Opinions ; and that Truth can have no possible Entrance into you, but so far as you die to your earthly Nature. The Gospel saith all this to you in the plainest Words ; and the Mystery only shows you, that the whole System of the Universe saith the same thing. To be a true Student or Disciple of the Mystery, is to be a Disciple of Christ ; for it calls you to nothing but to the plain Letter of the Gospel ; and wherever it enters, either into the Height or Depth of Nature, it is only to confirm the Truth of these Words of Christ ; viz., 'He that followeth not me, walketh in Darkness : And unless a Man deny 'himself, and forsake all that he hath, he cannot be my Disciple.' This is the Philosophy opened in this Mystery. It is not to lead you after itself, but to compel you, by every Truth of Nature, to turn to Christ, as the one Way, the one Truth, the one Life, and Salvation of the Soul ; not as notionally apprehended, or historically known ; but as experimentally found, living, speaking, and working, in your Soul. Read as long or as much as you will of this Mystery, it is all Labour lost ; if you intend anything else by it, or would be anything else from it, but a Man dead to this World, that you may live unto God through Christ Jesus, in the Power of Faith, and the Spirit of Prayer. With these Words upon our Minds, my Friends, let us now end this Conversation.

The End of the Third DIALOGUE.

FINIS.

UNIVERSITY of CALIFORNIA
AT
LOS ANGELES
LIBRARY

This book is DUE on the last date stamped below

APR 29 1949

5-13-49

SEP 6 1949

AUG 11 1950

REC'D LD-URL

LD
URL

FEB 22 1973

FEB 15 1973

URL

REC'D LD-URL

APR 08 1985

JUN 11 1985

REC'D LD-URL

LD
URL

OCT 01 1990

JAN 08 1991

LD
URL

SEP 11 1984

Renewed

Renewed

REC'D LD-URL

Renewed

OCT 26 1999

OCT 26 1999

REC'D LD-URL

OCT 01 1990

JUL 17 1992

3 1158 00955 5003

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

AA 000 856 831 3

TRINITY COLLEGE LIBRARY

3 1761 02850555 0

FROM THE LIBRARY OF
TRINITY COLLEGE TORONTO

FROM THE WILLIAM CLARK
MEMORIAL LIBRARY

DONATED 1926 A. D.

THE WORKS
Of the REVEREND
WILLIAM LAW, M.A.,

Sometime Fellow of Emmanuel
College, Cambridge.

In Nine Volumes.

Volume VIII.

- I. The Spirit of Love.
- II. A Short Confutation of Dr.
Warburton's Defence.
- III. Of Justification by Faith and Works.

LONDON: Printed for J. RICHARDSON, 1762.
Privately Reprinted for G. MORETON, 42, Burgate
Street, Canterbury. 1893.

I. The Spirit of Love.

II. A Short Confutation of Dr. Warburton's Defence.

III. Of Justification by Faith and Works.

THE SPIRIT OF LOVE.
PART the FIRST.

In a LETTER to a Friend.

By WILLIAM LAW, M. A.

LONDON:

Printed for G. ROBINSON and J. ROBERTS,
No. 25, Pater-noster-row. 1752.

THE SPIRIT OF LOVE.

My Dear Friend,

YOU had no Occasion to make any Apology for the Manner of your Letter to me ; for though you very well know, that I have as utter an Aversion to waste my Time and Thoughts in Matters of Theological Debate, as in any Contentions merely of a worldly Nature, as knowing that the former are generally as much, if not more hurtful to the Heart of Man, than the latter, yet as your Objections rather tend to stir up the Powers of Love, than the Wrangle of a rational Debate, I consider them only as Motives and Occasions of edifying both you and myself with the Truth, the Power, and Divine Blessedness of the Spirit of Love.

You say, ' There is nothing in all my Writings that has more affected you than that Spirit of Love that breathes in them ; and that you wish for nothing so much, as to have a living Sensibility of the Power, Life, and Religion of Love. But you have these two Objections often rising in your Mind : First, ' That this Doctrine of pure and universal Love may be too refined and imaginary, because you find, that however you like it, yet you cannot attain to it, or overcome all That in your Nature which is contrary to it, do what you can ; and so are only able to be an Admirer of that Love which you cannot lay hold of. Secondly, Because you find so much said in Scripture of a Righteousness and Justice, a Wrath and Vengeance of God, that must be atoned and satisfied, &c., that though you are in Love with that Description of the Deity which I have given, as a Being that is all Love, yet you have some Doubt whether the Scripture will allow of it.'

Thus stand your Objections, which will fall into nothing as soon as you look at them from a right Point of View : Which will then be, as soon as you have found the true Ground of the Nature, Power, and Necessity of the blessed Spirit of Love.

Now the Spirit of Love has this Original. God, as considered in himself, in his holy Being before anything is brought forth by him, or out of him, is only an eternal Will to all Goodness. This is the one eternal immutable God, that from Eternity to Eternity changes not, that can be neither more nor less, nor anything else, but an eternal Will to all the Goodness that is in himself, and can come from him. The Creation of ever so many Worlds or Systems of Creatures adds nothing to, nor takes anything from, this immutable God : He always was, and always will be, the same immutable Will to all Goodness. So that as certainly as he is the Creator, so certainly he is the Blessor of every created Thing, and can give nothing but Blessing, Goodness, and Happiness from himself, because he has in himself nothing else to give. It is much more possible for the Sun to give forth Darkness, than for God to do, or be, or give forth anything but Blessing and Goodness. Now this is the Ground and Original of the Spirit of Love in the Creature, it is and must be a Will to all Goodness ; and you have not the Spirit of Love till you have this Will to all Goodness, at all Times, and on all Occasions. You may indeed do many Works of Love, and delight in them, especially at such Times as they are not inconvenient to you, or contradictory to your State, or Temper, or Occurrences in Life. But the Spirit of Love is not in you, till it is the Spirit of your Life, till you live freely, willingly, and universally according to it. For every Spirit acts with Freedom and Universality, according to what it is. It needs no Command to live its own Life, or be what it is, no more than you need bid Wrath be wrathful. And therefore when Love is the Spirit of your Life, it will have the Freedom and Universality of a Spirit ; it will always live and work in Love, not because of This or That, Here or There, but because the Spirit of Love can only love, wherever it is, or goes, or whatever is done to it. As the Sparks know no Motion but that of flying upwards, whether it be in the Darkness of the Night, or in the Light of the Day, so the Spirit of Love is always in the same Course ; it knows no Difference of Time, Place, or Persons ; but whether it gives, or forgives, bears or forbears, it is equally doing its own delightful Work, equally blessed from itself. For the Spirit of Love, wherever it is, is its own Blessing and Happiness, because it is the Truth and Reality of God in the Soul, and therefore is in the same Joy of Life, and is the same Good to itself, everywhere, and on every Occasion.*

Oh! Sir, would you know the Blessing of all Blessings, it is this God of Love dwelling in your Soul, and killing every Root of Bitterness, which is the Pain and Torment of every earthly selfish Love. For all Wants are satisfied, all Disorders of Nature are removed, no Life is any longer a Burden, every Day is a Day of Peace, everything you meet becomes a Help to you, because everything you see or do is all done in the sweet gentle Element of Love. For as Love has no By-Ends, wills nothing but its own Increase, so everything is as Oil to its Flame ; it must have that which it wills, and cannot be disappointed, because everything naturally helps it to live in its own Way, and to bring forth its own Work. The Spirit of Love does not want to be rewarded, honoured, or esteemed; its only Desire is to propagate itself, and become the Blessing and Happiness of everything that wants it. And therefore it meets Wrath, and Evil, and Hatred, and Opposition, with the same one Will, as the Light meets the Darkness, only to overcome it with all its Blessings. Did you want to avoid the Wrath and Ill-will, or to gain the Favour of any Persons, you might easily miss of your Ends; but if you have no Will but to all Goodness, everything you meet, be it what it will, must be forced to be assistant to you. For the Wrath of an Enemy, the Treachery of a Friend, and every other Evil, only helps the Spirit of Love to be more triumphant, to live its own Life, and find all its own Blessings in an higher Degree. Whether therefore you consider Perfection, or Happiness, it is all included in the Spirit of Love, and must be so, for this Reason, because the infinitely perfect and happy God is mere Love, an unchangeable Will to all Goodness; and therefore every Creature must be corrupt and unhappy, so far as it is led by any other Will than the one Will to all Goodness. Thus you see the Ground, the Nature, and Perfection of the Spirit of Love. Let me now, in a Word or two, show you the Necessity of it: Now the Necessity is absolute and unchangeable. No Creature can be a Child of God, but because the Goodness of God is in it; nor can it have any Union or Communion with the Goodness of the Deity, till its Life is a Spirit of Love. This is the one only Band of Union betwixt God and the Creature. All besides this, or that is not this, call it by what Name you will, is only so much Error, Fiction, Impurity, and Corruption, got into the Creature, and must of all Necessity be entirely separated from it, before it can have that Purity and Holiness which alone can see God, or find the Divine Life. For as God is an immutable Will to all Goodness, so the Divine Will can unite or work with no creaturely Will, but that which wills with him only that which is good. Here the Necessity is absolute: nothing will do instead of this Will; all Contrivances of Holiness, all Forms of religious Piety, signify nothing, without this Will to all Goodness. For as the Will to all Goodness is the whole Nature of God, so it must be the whole Nature of every Service or Religion that can be acceptable to him. For nothing serves God, or worships and adores him, but that which wills and works with him. For God can delight in nothing but his own Will, and his own Spirit, because all Goodness is included in it, and can be nowhere else. And therefore everything that follows an own Will, or an own Spirit, forsakes the one Will to all Goodness, and whilst it does so, has no Capacity for the Light and Spirit of God. The Necessity therefore of the Spirit of Love is what God himself cannot dispense with in the Creature, any more than he can deny himself, or act contrary to his own holy Being. But as it was his Will to all Goodness that brought forth Angels and the Spirits of Men, so he can will nothing in their Existence, but that they should live and work, and manifest that same Spirit of Love and Goodness which brought them into Being. Everything therefore but the Will and Life of Goodness is an Apostasy in the Creature, and is Rebellion against the whole Nature of God.

* Spirit of Love, Second Part, page 177.

There is no Peace, nor ever can be, for the Soul of Man, but in the Purity and Perfection of its first-created Nature ; nor can it have its Purity and Perfection in any other Way, than in and by the Spirit of Love. For as Love is the God that created all Things, so Love is the Purity, the Perfection, and Blessing of all created Things; and nothing can live in God but as it lives in Love. Look at every Vice, Pain, and Disorder in human Nature, it is in itself nothing else but the Spirit of the Creature turned from the Universality of Love to some self-seeking, or own Will in created Things. So that Love alone is, and only can be, the Cure of every Evil; and he that lives in the Purity of Love is risen out of the Power of Evil into the Freedom of the one Spirit of Heaven. The Schools have given us very accurate Definitions of every Vice, whether it be Covetousness, Pride, Wrath, Envy, &c., and shown us how to conceive them, as notionally distinguished from one another. But the Christian has a much shorter Way of knowing their Nature and Power, and what they all are, and do, in and to himself. For call them by what Names you will, or distinguish them with ever so much Exactness, they are all, separately and jointly, just that same one Thing, and do all that same one Work, as the Scribes, the Pharisees, Hypocrites, and Rabble of the Jews, who crucified Christ, were all but one and the same Thing, and all did one and the same Work, however different they were in outward Names. If you would therefore have a true Sense of the Nature, and Power of Pride, Wrath, Covetousness, Envy, &c., they are in their whole Nature nothing else but the Murderers and Crucifiers of the true Christ of God; not as the High-Priests did, many hundred Years ago, nailing his outward Humanity to an outward Cross, but crucifying afresh the Son of God, the holy Immanuel, who is the Christ that every Man crucifies, as often as he gives way to Wrath, Pride, Envy, or Covetousness, &c. For every Temper or Passion that is contrary to the new Birth of Christ, and keeps the holy Immanuel from coming to Life in the

Soul, is in the strictest Truth of the Words a Murderer and Killer of the Lord of Life. And where Pride, and Envy, and Hatred, &c., are suffered to live, there the same Thing is done as when Christ was killed, and Barrabas was saved alive. The Christ of God was not then first crucified when the Jews brought him to the Cross ; but Adam and Eve were his first real Murderers ; for the Death which happened to them, in the Day that they did eat of the earthly Tree, was the Death of the Christ of God, or the Divine Life in their Souls. For Christ had never come into the World as a Second Adam to redeem it, had he not been originally the Life, and Perfection, and Glory of the First Adam.* And he is our Atonement and Reconciliation with God, because by and through him, brought to Life in us, we are set again in that first State of Holiness, and have Christ again in us, as our first Father had at his Creation. For had not Christ been in our first Father as a Birth of Life in him, Adam had been created a mere Child of Wrath, in the same Impurity of Nature, in the same Enmity with God, and in the same Want of an atoning Saviour, as we are at this Day.—For God can have no Delight or Union with any Creature, but because his well-beloved Son, the express Image of his Person, is found in it.—This is as true of all unfallen, as of all fallen Creatures ; the one are redeemed, and the other want no Redemption, only through the Life of Christ dwelling in them. For as the Word, or Son of God, is the Creator of all Things, and by him every Thing is made that was made, so every Thing that is good and holy in unfallen Angels, is as much through his living and dwelling in them, as every Thing that is good and holy in redeemed Man is through him. And he is just as much the preserver, the Strength, and Glory, and Life of all the Thrones and Principalities of Heaven, as he is the Righteousness, the Peace, and Redemption of fallen Man.†

This Christ of God has many Names in Scripture ; but they all mean only this, that he is, and alone can be, the Light, and Life, and Holiness of every Creature that is holy, whether in Heaven or on Earth. Wherever Christ is not, there is the Wrath of Nature, or Nature left to itself and its own tormenting Strength of Life, to feel nothing in itself but the vain restless Contrariety of its own working Properties. This is the one only Origin of Hell, and every kind of Curse and Misery in the Creature. It is Nature without the Christ of God, or the Spirit of Love, ruling over it. And here you may observe, that Wrath has in itself the Nature of Hell ; and that it can have no Beginning, or Power in any Creature, but so far as it has lost the Christ of God. And when Christ is everywhere, Wrath and Hatred will be nowhere. Whenever therefore you willingly indulge Wrath, or let your Mind work in Hatred, you not only work without Christ, but you resist him, and withstand his redeeming Power over you; you do in reality what those Jews did, when they said, 'We will not have 'this Man to reign over us.' For Christ never was, nor can be, in any Creature, but purely as a Spirit of Love.

* Spirit of Love, Second Part, page 34.

† See The Way to Divine Knowledge, page 153.

In all the Universe of Nature, nothing but Heaven and heavenly Creatures ever had or could have been known, had every created Will continued in that State in which it came forth out of and from God. For God can will nothing in the Life of the Creature, but a creaturely Manifestation of his own Goodness, Happiness, and Perfection. And therefore where this is wanted, the Fact is certain, that the Creature has changed and lost its first State that it had from God. Every Thing therefore which is the Vanity, the Wrath, the Torment, and Evil of Man, or any intelligent Creature, is solely the Effect of his Will turned from God, and can come from nothing else. Misery and Wickedness can have no other Ground or Root; for whatever wills and works with God, must of all Necessity partake of the Happiness and Perfection of God.

This therefore is a certain Truth, that Hell and Death, Curse and Misery, can never cease, or be removed from the Creation, till the Will of the Creature is again as it came from God, and is only a Spirit of Love that wills nothing but Goodness. All the whole fallen Creation, stand it never so long, must groan and travail in Pain, this must be its Purgatory, till every Contrariety to the Divine Will is entirely taken from every Creature.

Which is only saying, that all the Powers and Properties of Nature, are a Misery to themselves, can only work in Disquiet and Wrath, till the Birth of the Son of God brings them under the Dominion and Power of the Spirit of Love.

Thus, Sir, you have seen the original, immutable Ground, and Necessity of the Spirit of Love. It is no imaginary Refinement, or speculative Curiosity, but is of the highest Reality, and most absolute Necessity. It stands in the Immutability and Perfection of God; and not only every intelligent Creature, be it what and where it will, but every inanimate Thing, must work in Vanity and Disquiet, till it has its State in, and works under, the Spirit of Love. For as Love brought forth all Things, and all Things were what they were, and had their Place and State, under the working Power of Love, so every Thing that has lost its first-created State must be in restless Strife and Disquiet till it finds it again. There is no sort of Strife, Wrath, or Storm in outward Nature, no Fermentation, Vegetation, or Corruption in any Elementary Things, but what is a full Proof, and real Effect of this Truth, viz., That Nature can have no Rest, but must be in the Strife of Fermentation, Vegetation, and Corruption, constantly doing and undoing, building and destroying, till the Spirit of Love has rectified all outward Nature, and brought it back again into that glassy Sea of Unity, and Purity, in which St. John beheld the Throne of God in the Midst of it. For this glassy Sea, which the beloved Apostle was blessed with the Sight of, is the transparent, heavenly Element, in which all the Properties and Powers of Nature move and work in the Unity and Purity of the one Will of God, only known as so many endless Forms of triumphing Light and Love. For the Strife of Properties, of Thick against Thin, Hard against Soft, Hot against Cold, &c., had no Existence till Angels fell, that is, till they turned from God to work with Nature. This is the Original of all the Strife, Division, and Materiality in the fallen World.

No Fluid in this World ferments, but because there is some Thickness and Contrariety in it which it would not have. And it ferments only for this Reason, to have an Unity and Clearness in itself which its Nature wants to have. Now when you see this in any Fluid, you see the Work of all fallen Nature, and the same that every Thing else is doing, as well as it can, in its own Way ; it is in a restless Working and Strife after an Unity and Purity, which it can neither have, nor forbear to seek. And the Reason why all Things are doing thus is this, because all the Elements of this World, before they were brought down into their present State, had their Birth and Existence in the Unity and Purity of the heavenly glassy Sea, and therefore must be always in some Sort of Strife and Tendency after their first State, and doomed to Disquiet till it is found.

This is the Desire of all fallen Nature in this World ; it cannot be separated from it ; but every Part must work in Fermentation, Vegetation, and Corruption, till it is restored to its first Unity and Purity under the Spirit of Love.

Every Son of fallen Adam is under this same Necessity of working and striving after something that he neither is nor has, and for the same Reason, because the Life of Man has lost its first Unity and Purity, and therefore must be in a working Strife, till all Contrariety and Impurity are separated from it, and it finds its first State in God. All evil as well as good Men, all the Wisdom and Folly of this Life, are equally a Proof of this. For the Vanity of wicked Men in their various Ways, and the Labours of good Men in Faith and Hope, &c., proceed from the same Cause ; viz., from a Want and Desire of having, and being something, that they neither are nor have. The Evil seek Wrong, and the Good seek Right ; but they both are Seekers, and for the same Reason, because their present State has not That which it wants to have. And this must be the State of human Life, and of every Creature that has fallen from its first State, or has something in it that it should not have. It must do as the polluted Fluid does ; it must ferment, and work, either right or wrong, to mend its State. The muddled Wine always works right to the utmost of its Power, because it works according to Nature ; but if it had an intelligent free Will, it might work as vainly as Man does ; it might continually thicken itself, be always stirring up its own Dregs, and then it would seek for its Purity, just as well as the Soul of Man seeks for its Happiness, in the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life. All which must of the same Necessity fall away from the Heart of Man, before it can find its Happiness in God, as the Dregs must separate from the Wine before it can have its Perfection and Clearness.

Purification therefore is the one Thing necessary, and nothing will do in the stead of it. But Man is not purified till every earthly wrathful, sensual, selfish, partial, self-willing Temper, is taken from him. He is not dying to himself till he is dying to these Tempers ; and he is not alive in God till he is dead to them. For he wants Purification only because he has these Tempers ; and therefore he has not the Purification which he wants till they are all separated from him. It is the Purity and Perfection of the Divine Nature that must be brought again into him, because in that Purity and Perfection he came forth from God, and could have no less as he was a Child of God, that was to be blessed by a Life in him and from him. For nothing impure, or imperfect in its Will or Working, can have any Union with God : Nor are you to think that these Words, the Purity and Perfection of God, are too high to be used on this Occasion, for they only mean that the Will of the Creature, as an Offspring of the Divine Will, must will and work with the Will of God, for then it stands and lives truly and really in the Purity and Perfection of God ; and whatever does not thus is at Enmity with God, and cannot have any Union of Life and happiness with him and in him.

Now nothing wills and works with God but the Spirit of Love, because nothing else works in God himself. The Almighty brought forth all Nature for this only End, that boundless Love might have its Infinity of Height and Depth to dwell and work in ; and all the striving and working Properties of Nature are only to give Essence and Substance, Life and Strength, to the invisible hidden Spirit of Love, that it may come forth into outward Activity, and manifest its blessed Powers ; that Creatures born in the Strength, and out of the Powers of Nature, might communicate the Spirit of Love and Goodness, give and receive mutual Delight and Joy to and from one another. All below this State of Love is a Fall from the one Life of God, and the only Life in which the God of Love can dwell. Partiality, Self, Mine, Thine, &c., are Tempers that can only belong to Creatures that have lost the Power, Presence, and Spirit, of the universal Good. They can have no Place in Heaven, nor can be anywhere but because Heaven is lost. Think not therefore that the Spirit of pure universal Love, which is the one Purity and Perfection of Heaven and all heavenly Natures, has been, or can be carried too high, or its absolute Necessity too much asserted. For it admits of no Degrees of higher or lower, and is not in Being, till it is absolutely pure and unmixed, no more than a Line can be straight till it is absolutely free from all Crookedness.

All the design of Christian Redemption is to remove every Thing that is unheavenly, gross, dark, wrathful, and disordered, from every Part of this fallen World. And when you see Earth and Stones, Storms and Tempests, and every kind of Evil, Misery, and Wickedness, you see that which Christ came into the World to remove, and not only to give a new Birth to fallen Man, but also to deliver all outward Nature from its present Vanity and Evil, and set it again in its first heavenly State. Now if you ask, How came all Things into this Evil and Vanity ? It is because they have lost the blessed Spirit of Love, which alone makes the Happiness and Perfection of every Power of Nature. Look at Grossness, Coldness, Hardness, and Darkness, they never could have had any Existence, but because the Properties of Nature must appear in this manner, when the Light of God is no longer dwelling in them.

Nature is at first only spiritual ; it has in itself nothing but the spiritual Properties of the Desire, which is the very Being and Ground of Nature. But when these spiritual Properties are not filled, and blessed, and all held in one Will, by the Light and Love of God ruling in them, then something is found in Nature which never should have been found, vis., the Properties of Nature in a State of visible palpable Division and Contrariety to each other. And this new State of the Properties of Nature is the first Beginning and Birth, and Possibility, of all that Contrariety that is to be found betwixt Hot and Cold, Hard and Soft, Thick and Thin, &c., all which could have had no Existence, till the Properties of Nature lost their first Unity and Purity under the Light and Love of God, manifested and working in them. And this is the one true Origin of all the Materiality of this earthly System, and of every Struggle and Contrariety that is found in material Things. Had the Properties of Nature been kept by the Creature in their first State, blessed and overcome with the Light and Love of Heaven, dwelling and working in them, no Wrath or Contrariety could ever have been known by any Creature; and had not Wrath and Contrariety entered into the Properties of Nature, nothing Thick, or Hard, or Dark, &c., could ever have been found or known in any Place. Now every Thing that you see and know of the Things of this World, shows you that Matter began only in and from the Change of the spiritual Properties of Nature; and that Matter is changed and altered, just as the Light and Purity of Heaven is more or less in it. How comes the Flint to be in such a State of hard dark Compaction? It is because the Meekness and Fluidity of the Light, and Air, and Water of this World, have little or no Existence in it. And therefore as soon as the Fire has unlocked its hard Compaction, and opened in it the Light, and Air, and Water of this World, it becomes transparent Glass, and is brought so much nearer to that first glassy Sea in which it once existed. For the Light, and Air, and Water of this World, though all of them in a material State, yet have the most of the first heavenly Nature in them; and as these are more or less in all material Things, so are they nearer or further from their first heavenly State. And as the Fire is the first Deliverer of the Flint from its hard Compaction, so the last universal Fire must begin the Deliverance of this material System, and fit every Thing to receive that Spirit of Light and Love, which will bring all Things back again to their first glassy Sea, in which the Deity dwells, as in his Throne. And thus as the earthly Fire turns Flint into Glass, so Earth will become Heaven, and the Contrariety of the four divided Elements will become one transparent Brightness of Glory, as soon as the last Fire shall have melted every Grossness into its first undivided Fluidity, for the Light, and Love, and Majesty of God, to be all in all in it. How easy and natural is it to suppose all that is Earth and Stones to be dissolved in Water, the Water to be changed into Air, the Air into Æther, and the Æther rarefied into Light? Is there any Thing here impossible to be supposed? And how near a Step is the next, to suppose all this changed or exalted into that glassy Sea, which was everywhere before the Angels fell? What now is become of hard, heavy, dead, divisible, corruptible Matter? Is it annihilated? No: And yet nothing of it is left; all that you know of it is gone, and nothing but its shadowy Idea will be known in Eternity. Now as this shows you how Matter can lose all its material Properties, and go back to its first spiritual

State, so it makes it very intelligible to you how the Sin of Angels, which was their sinful Working in and with the Properties of Nature, could bring them out of their first Spirituality into that Darkness, Grossness, and Chaos, out of which God raised this material System. See now, Sir, how unreasonably you once told me, that our Doctrine must suppose the Eternity of Matter ; for throughout the Whole you might easily have seen, that it neither does nor can suppose it, but demonstrates the Impossibility of it; it shows the true Origin of Matter, that it is no older than Sin, could have no possibility of beginning to be but from Sin, and therefore must entirely vanish when Sin is entirely done away.

If Matter, said you, be not made out of nothing, then it must be eternal. Just as well concluded, as if you had said, If Snow, and Hail, and Ice, are not made of nothing, then they must be eternal. And if your Senses did not force you to know how these things are created out of something, and are in themselves only the Properties of Light, and Air, and Water, brought out of their first State into such a Compaction and Creation, as is called Snow, Hail, and Ice, your rational Philosophy would stand to its noble Conclusion, that they must be made out of Nothing. Now every time you see Snow, or Hail, or Ice, you see in Truth and Reality the Creation of Matter, or how this World came to be of such a material Nature as it is. For Earth and Stones, and every other Materiality of this World, came from some antecedent Properties of Nature, by that same creating Power, or Fiat of God, as turns the Properties of Light, and Air, and Water, into the different Materialities of Snow, Hail, and Ice.

The first Property of Nature, which is in itself a constraining, attracting, compressing, and coagulating Power, is that working Power from whence comes all Thickness, Darkness, Coldness, and Hardness ; and this is the Creator of Snow, and Hail, and Ice, out of something that before was only the Fluidity of Light, Air, and Moisture. Now this same Property of Nature, directed by the will of God, was the Fiat and creating Power which on the first Day of this World compacted, coagulated, or created the wrathful Properties of fallen Nature in the Angelic Kingdom into such a new State, as to become Earth, and Stones, and Water, and a visible Heaven. And the new State of the created Heaven, and Earth, and Stones, and Water, &c., came forth by the Fiat of God, or the Working of the first Property of Nature, from the Properties of fallen Nature ; just as Snow and Ice, and Hail, come forth by the same Fiat from the Properties of Light, Air, and Water. And the created Materiality of Heaven, Earth, Stones, and Water, have no more Eternity in them, than there is in Snow, or Hail, or Ice, but are only held for a time in their compacted, or created State, by the same first astringing Property of Nature, which for a time holds Snow, and Hail, and Ice, in their compacted State.

Now here you see with the utmost Certainty that all the Matter, or Materiality of this World, is the Effect of Sin, and could have its Beginning from nothing else. For as Thickness, Hardness, and Darkness (which are the Essence of Matter) are the Effects of the wrathful predominant Power of the first Property of Nature, and as no Property of Nature can be predominant, or known as it is in itself, till Nature is fallen from its harmonious Unity under the Light and Love of God dwelling in it, so you have the utmost Certainty, that where Matter, or which is the same Thing, where Thickness, Darkness, Hardness, &c., are found, there the Will of the Creature has turned from God, and opened a disorderly Working of Nature without God.

Therefore as sure as the Materiality of this World stands in the predominant Power of the first attracting, astringing Property of Nature, or in other Words, is a Thickness, Darkness, Hardness, &c., so sure is it that the Matter of this World has its Beginning from Sin, and must have its End as soon as the Properties of Nature are again restored to their first Unity, and blessed Harmony under the Light and Spirit of God.

It is no Objection to all this, that Almighty God must be owned to be the true Creator of the Materiality of this World. For God only brought, or created it into this Materiality out of the fallen sinful Properties of Nature, and in order to stop their sinful Working, and to put them into a State of Recovery. He created the confused Chaos of the darkened, divided, contrary Properties of spiritual Nature into a further, darker, harder Coagulation and Division, that so the fallen Angels might thereby lose all Power over them; and that this new Materiality might become a Theatre of Redemption, and stand its Time under the Dominion of the Lamb of God, till all the Wrath, and Grossness, and Darkness, born of the Sin of Angels, was fitted to return to its first heavenly Purity.

And thus though God is the Creator of the Materiality of this World, yet seeing he created it out of that Wrath, Division, and Darkness, which Sin had opened in Nature, this Truth stands firm, that Sin alone is the Father, first Cause, and Beginner of all the Materiality of this World; and that when Sin is removed from Nature all its Materiality must vanish with it. For when the Properties of Nature are again in the Unity of the one Will of Light and Love, then Hot and Cold, Thick and Thin, Dark and Hard, with every other Property of Matter, must give up all their Distinction, and all the divided Elements of this World lose all their Materiality and Division in that first heavenly Spirituality of a glassy Sea, from whence they fell.

Now as all the whole Nature of Matter, its Grossness, Darkness, and Hardness, is owing to the unequal predominant Working of the first Property of Nature, which is an attracting, astringing, and compressing Desire, so every spiritual Evil, every wicked Working, and disorderly State of any intelligent Being, is all owing to the same disorderly predominant Power of the first Property of Nature, doing all that inwardly in the Spirit of the Creature which it does in an outward Grossness, Darkness, and Hardness. Thus when the Desire (the first Property of Nature) in any intelligent Creature, leaves the Unity and Universality of the Spirit of Love, and contracts or shuts up itself in an own Will, own Love, and Self-seeking, then it does all that inwardly, and spiritually in the Soul, which it does in outward Grossness, Hardness, and Darkness. And had not own Will, own Love, and Self-seeking, come into the Spirit of the Creature, it never could have found or felt any outward Contrariety, Darkness, or Hardness: For no Creature can have any other outward Nature but that which is in the same State with its inward Spirit, and belongs to it as its own natural Growth.

Modern Metaphysics have no Knowledge of the Ground and Nature either of Spirit or Body, but suppose them not only without any natural Relation, but essentially contrary to one another, and only held together in a forced Conjunction by the arbitrary Will of God. Nay, if you were to say, that God first creates a Soul out of nothing, and when that is done, then takes an understanding Faculty and puts it into it, after that adds a Will, and then a Memory, all as independently made, as when a Tailor first makes the Body of a Coat, and then adds Sleeves, or Pockets to it, were you to say This, the Schools of Descartes, Malebranche or Locke, could have nothing to say against it. And the Thing is unavoidable; for all these Philosophers were so far from knowing the Ground of Nature, how it is a Birth from God, and all Creatures a Birth from Nature, through the working Will of God in and by the Powers of Nature, as they were so far from knowing this, as to hold a Creation out of nothing, so they were necessarily excluded from every fundamental Truth concerning the Origin either of Body or Spirit, and their true Relation to one another. For a Creation out of nothing leaves no room for accounting why any Thing is as it is.—Now every wise Man is supposed to have Respect to Nature in every Thing that he would have joined together; he cannot suppose his Work to succeed unless this be done. But to suppose God to create Man with a Body and Soul, not only not naturally related, but naturally impossible to be united by any Powers in either of them, is to suppose God acting and creating Man into an unnatural State; which yet he could not do, unless there was such a Thing as Nature antecedent to the Creation of Man. And how can Nature be, or have any Thing, but what it is and has from God? Therefore to suppose God to bring any Creature into an unnatural State, is to suppose him acting contrary to himself, and to that Nature which is from him.

Yet all the Metaphysics of the Schools do this; they suppose God to bring a Soul and a Body together which have the utmost natural Contrariety to each other, and can only affect, or act upon one another by an arbitrary Will of God, willing that Body and Soul, held together by Force, should seem to do that to one another, which they have no natural or possible Power to do. But the true Philosophy of this Matter, known only to the Soul that by a new Birth from above has found its first State in and from God, is this: Namely, that Nature is a Birth, or Manifestation of the triune invisible Deity. And as it could only come into Existence as a Birth from God, so every Creature, or beginning Thing, can only come forth as a Birth from and out of Nature by the Will of God, willing it to come forth in such a Birth. And no Creature can have, or be any Thing, but by and according to the working Powers of Nature; and therefore, strictly speaking, no Creature can be put into an unnatural State. It may indeed lose, or fall from its natural Perfection, by the wrong Use or Working of its Will; but then its fallen State is the natural Effect of the wrong Use of its Will, and so it only has that which is natural to it. The Truth of the Matter is this: There neither is, nor can be any Thing, nor any Effect in the whole Universe of Things, but by the Way of Birth. For as the working Will is the first Cause or Beginner of every Thing, so nothing can proceed further than as it is driven by the Will, and is a Birth of it. And therefore nothing can be in any Thing but what is natural to its own working Will, and is the true Effect of it. Every Thing that is outward in any Being is only a Birth of its own Spirit; and therefore all Body, whether it be heavenly, or earthly, or hellish, has its whole Nature and Condition from its own inward Spirit; and no Spirit can have a Body of any other Properties but such as are natural to it, as being its own true outward State. For Body and Spirit are not two separate independent Things, but are necessary to each other, and are only the inward and outward Conditions of one and the same Being.

Every creaturely Spirit must have its own Body, and cannot be without it; for its Body is that which makes it manifest to itself. It cannot be said to exist as a Creature till in a Body, because it can have no Sensibility of itself, nor feel nor find either that it is, or what it is, but in and by its own Body. Its Body is its first Knowledge of its Something and Somewhere.

And now, Sir, if you ask why I have gone into this Detail of the Origin and Nature of Body and Spirit, when my Subject was only concerning the Spirit of Love, it is to show you, that Grossness, Darkness, Contrariety, Disquiet, and Fermentation, must be the State of the Body and Spirit, till they are both made pure and luminous by the Light and Love of Heaven manifested in them. All Darkness, Grossness, and Contrariety must be removed from the Body before it can belong to Heaven, or be united with it; but these Qualities must be in the Body till the Soul is totally dead to Self, Partiality, and Contrariety, and breathes only the Spirit of universal Love, because the State of the Body has nothing of its own, or from itself, but is solely the outward Manifestation of nothing else but that which is inwardly in the Soul. Every Animal of this World has nothing in its outward Form or Shape, every Spirit, whether heavenly or hellish, has nothing in the Nature and State of its Body, but that which is the Form and Growth of its own inward Spirit. As no Number can be any Thing but that which the Unities contained in it make it to be, so no Body of any Creature can be any Thing else but the Coagulation, or Sum total, of those Properties of Nature that are coagulated in it. And when the Properties of Nature are formed into the Band of a creaturely Union, then is its Body brought forth, whether the Spirit of the Creature be earthly, heavenly, or hellish.

Nature or the first Properties of Life are in a State of the highest Contrariety, and the highest Want of something which they have not. This is their whole Nature, and they have nothing else in them. And this is their true Ground and Fitness to become a Life of triumphing Joy and Happiness, viz., when united in the Possession of that which they seek for in their Contrariety. And if Life, in its first Root, was not this Depth of Strife, this Strength of Hunger, and Sensibility of Want, the Fulness of heavenly Joy could not be manifested in it.

You are not a Stranger to the Mystery of the Seven Properties of Nature, which we have often spoken of; and therefore I shall shorten the Matter, and only say so much of them as may be of Service to our present Subject.

Nature, whether eternal or temporal, is That which comes not into Being for its own Self, or to be That which it is in itself, but for the Sake of Something that it is not, and has not. And this is the Reason why Nature is only a Desire; it is because it is for the Sake of something else; and it is also the Reason why Nature in itself is only a Torment, because it is only a strong Desire, and cannot help itself to that which it wants, but is always working against itself.*

Now a Desire that cannot be stopped, nor get That which it would have, has a threefold Contrariety, or Working in it, which you may thus conceive, as follows: The first and peculiar Property, or the one only Will of the Desire, as such, is to have That which it has not; and all that it can do towards having it is to act as if it were seizing it; and this is it which makes the Desire to be a magic Compressing, Inclosing, or Astringing; because that is all that it can do towards Seizing of that which it would have. But the Desire cannot thus magically astringe, compress, or strive to inclose, without Drawing and Attracting: But Drawing is Motion, which is the highest Contrariety and Resistance to compressing, or holding together. And thus the Desire, in its magical Working, sets out with two contrary Properties, inseparable from one another, and equal in Strength; for the Motion has no Strength but as it is the Drawing of the Desire; and the Desire only draws in the same Degree as it wills to compress and astringe; and therefore the Desire, as astringing, always begets a Resistance equal to itself. Now from this great and equally-strong Contrariety of the two first Properties of the Desire, magically pulling, as I may say, two contrary Ways, there arises, as a necessary Birth from both of them, a third Property, which is emphatically called a Wheel, or whirling Anguish of Life. For a Thing that can go neither inward nor outward, and yet must be and move under the equal Power of both of them, must whirl, or turn round; it has no Possibility of doing any Thing else, or of ceasing to do that. And this whirling Contrariety of these inseparable Properties is the great Anguish of Life, and may properly be called the Hell of Nature: and every lesser Torment which any Man finds in this mixed World has all its Existence and Power from the Working of these three Properties: For Life can find no troublesome Motions, or Sensibility of Distress, but so far as it comes under their Power, and enters into their whirling Wheel.

Now here you may observe, that as this whirling Anguish of Life is a third State, necessarily arising from the Contrariety of the two first Properties of the Desire, so in this material System, every whirling, or orbicular Motion of any Body, is solely the Effect or Product of the Contrariety of these two first Properties. For no material Thing can whirl or move round, till it is under the Power of these two Properties, that is, till it can neither go inwards nor outwards, and yet is obliged to move; just as the whirling Anguish of the Desire then begins, when it can neither go inwards nor outwards, and yet must be in Motion.

* See The Way to Divine Knowledge, page 196.

And this may be again another strict Demonstration to you, that all the Matter of this World is from spiritual Properties, since all its Workings and Effects are according to them: For if Matter does nothing but according to them, it can be nothing but what it is, and has from them.

Here also, that is, in these three Properties of the Desire, you see the Ground and Reason of the three great Laws of Matter and Motion lately discovered, and so much celebrated; and need no more to be told, that the illustrious Sir Isaac ploughed with Behmen's Heifer when he brought forth the Discovery of them. In the mathematical System of this great Philosopher these three Properties, Attraction, equal Resistance, and the orbicular Motion of the Planets as the Effect of them, &c., are only treated of as Facts and Appearances, whose Ground is not pretended to be known. But in our Behmen, the illuminated Instrument of God, their Birth and Power in Eternity are opened; their eternal Beginning is shown, and how and why all Worlds, and every Life of every Creature, whether it be heavenly, earthly, or hellish, must be in them, and from them, and can have no Nature, either spiritual or material, no kind of Happiness or Misery, but according to the working Power and State of these Properties.

All outward Nature, all inward Life, is what it is, and works as it works, from this unceasing powerful Attraction, Resistance, and Whirling.

Every Madness and Folly of Life is their immediate Work, and every good Spirit of Wisdom and Love has all its Strength and Activity from them. They equally support Darkness and Light: The one could have no Powers of Thickness and Coldness, the other no Powers of Warmth, Brightness, and Activity, but by and through these three Properties acting in a different State. Not a Particle of Matter stirs, rises, or falls, separates from, or unites with any other, but under their Power. Not a Thought of the Mind, either of Love or Hatred, of Joy or Trouble, of Envy or Wrath, of Pride and Covetousness, can rise in the Spirit of any Creature, but as these Properties act and stir in it.

The next and following Properties, viz., the fourth, called Fire, the fifth, called the Form of Light and Love, and the sixth, Sound, or Understanding, only declare the gradual Effects of the Entrance of the Deity into the three first Properties of Nature, changing, or bringing their strong wrathful Attraction, Resistance, and Whirling, into a Life and State of triumphing Joy, and Fulness of Satisfaction; which State of Peace and Joy in one another is called the Seventh Property or State of Nature. And this is what Behmen means by his Ternarius Sanctus, which he so often speaks of as the only Place from whence he received all that he said and wrote: He means by it the holy Manifestation of the Triune God in the seven Properties of Nature, or Kingdom of Heaven. And from this Manifestation of God in the seven Properties of Nature, or Kingdom of Heaven, he most wonderfully opens, and accounts for all that was done in the six first working Days of the Creation, showing how every one of the six active Properties had its peculiar Day's Work, till the whole ended or rested in the sanctified paradisaical Sabbath of the seventh Day, just as Nature does in its seventh Property.

And now, Sir, you may see in the greatest Clearness, how every Thing in this World, every Thing in the Soul and Body of Man, absolutely requires the one Redemption of the Gospel. There is but one Nature in all created Things, whether spiritual or material; they all stand and work upon the same Ground, viz., the three first Properties of Nature. That only which can illuminate the Soul, that alone can give Brightness and Purity to the Body. For there is no Grossness, Darkness, and Contrariety in the Body, but what strictly proceeds from the same Cause that makes Selfishness, Wrath, Envy, and Torment, in the Soul; it is but one and the same State and Working of the same three first Properties of Nature. All Evil, whether natural or moral, whether of Body or Spirit, is the sole Effect of the Wrath and Disorder of the Spirits of Nature working in and by themselves. And all the Good, Perfection, and Purity of every Thing, whether spiritual or material, whether it be the Body or Spirit of Man or Angel, is solely from the Power and Presence of the supernatural Deity dwelling and working in the Properties of Nature. For the Properties of Nature are in themselves nothing but a mere Hunger, Want, Strife, and Contrariety, till the Fulness and Riches of the Deity, entering into them, unite them all in one Will, and one Possession of Light and harmonious Love; which is the one Redemption of the Gospel, and the one Reason why nothing else but the Heart, or Son, or Light of God, can purify Nature and Creature from all the Evil they are fallen into.

For nothing can possibly deliver the Soul from its selfish Nature, and earthly Passions, but that one Power that can deliver Matter from its present material Properties, and turn Earth into Heaven: And that for this plain Reason, because Soul and Body, outward Nature and inward Life, have but one and the same Evil in them, and from one and the same Cause.

The Deist therefore, who looks for Life and Salvation through the Use of his Reason, acts contrary to the whole Nature of every Thing that he sees and knows of himself, and of the Nature and State of this World. For from one End of it to the other, all its material State, all its gross divided Elements, declare that they are what they are, because the Light and Love of Heaven are not working and manifest in them, and that nothing can take Darkness, Materiality, Rage, Storms, and Tempests from them, but that same heavenly Light and Love which was made Flesh to redeem the fallen Humanity first, and after that the whole material System.

Can the Deist with his Reason bring the Light of this World into the Eyes of his Body? If not, how comes it to be less absurd, or more possible, for Reason to bring heavenly Light into the Soul? Can Reason hinder the Body from being heavy, or remove Thickness and Darkness from Flesh and Blood? Yet nothing less than such a Power can possibly help the Soul out of its fallen and earthly State. For the Grossness of Flesh and Blood is the natural State of the fallen Soul; and therefore nothing can purify the Soul, or raise it out of its earthly corrupt State, but That which has all Power over all that which is earthly and material in Nature.

To pretend therefore that Reason may have sufficient Power to remove all hellish Depravity, and earthly Lusts from the Soul, whilst it has not the least Power over Sweet or Sour in any one Particle of Matter in the Body, is as highly absurd, as if a Man should pretend that he has a full Power to alter the inward, invisible, vegetable Life of a Plant, but none at all over its outward State, Colour, Leaves, or Fruit. The Deist therefore, and not the Christian, stands in need of continual Miracles to make good his Doctrine. For Reason can have no Pretence to amend or alter the Life of the Soul, but so far as it can show that it has Power to amend and alter the Nature and State of the Body.

The unbelieving Jews said of our Lord, 'How can this Man 'forgive Sins?' Christ showed them how, by appealing to that Power which they saw he had over the Body: 'Whether,' says he, 'is it easier to say, Thy Sins are forgiven thee, or to say, 'Arise, take up thy Bed and walk?' But the Delusion of the unbelieving Deist is greater than that of the Jew. For the Deist sees, that his Reason has no Power over his Body, can remove no Disease, Blindness, Deafness, or Lameness, from it, and yet will pretend to have Power enough from his Reason to help the Soul out of all its Evil; not knowing, that Body and Soul go hand in hand, and are nothing else but the inward and outward State of one and the same Life; and that therefore he only who can say to the dead Body of Lazarus, Come forth, can say to the Soul, Be thou clean. The Deist therefore, if he pleases, may style himself a natural, or a moral Philosopher, but with no more Truth, than he can call himself a Healer of all the Maladies of the Body. And for a Man to think himself a moral Philosopher, because he has made a choice Collection of Syllogisms, in order to quicken and revive a Divine Goodness in the Soul, or that no Redeemer need come from Heaven, because human Reason, when truly left to itself, has great Skill in chopping of Logic, may justly be deemed such an Ignorance of the Nature of Things, as is seldom found in the Transactions of illiterate and vulgar Life.* But this by the Bye.

To return to our chief Subject: The Sum of all that has been said is this: All Evil, be it what it will, all Misery of every kind, is in its Birth, Working, and Extent, nothing else but Nature left to itself, and under the divided Workings of its own Hunger, Wrath, and Contrariety; and therefore there is no Possibility for the natural earthly Man to escape eternal Hunger, Wrath and Contrariety, but solely in the Way as the Gospel teaches, by denying and dying to Self. On the other hand, all the Goodness and Perfection, all the Happiness, Glory, and Joy, that any intelligent Divine Creature can be possessed of is, and can be, from nothing else, but the invisible uncreated Light and Spirit of God manifesting itself in the Properties of the creaturely Life, filling, blessing, and uniting them all in one Love and Joy of Life. And thus again, there is no Possibility of Man's attaining to any heavenly Perfection and Happiness, but only in the Way of the Gospel, by the Union of the Divine and human Nature, by Man's being born again from above of the Word and Spirit of God. There is no Possibility of any other Way, because there is nothing that can possibly change the first Properties of Life into an heavenly State, but the Presence, and working Power, of the Deity united with and working in them. And therefore the Word was made Flesh, and must of all necessity be made Flesh, if Man is to have an heavenly Nature. Now as all Evil, Sin, and Misery, have no Beginning, nor Power of Working, but in the Manifestation of Nature in its divided contrary Properties; so it is certain, that Man has nothing to turn to, seek or aspire after, but the lost Spirit of Love. And therefore it is, that God only can be his Redeemer, because God only is Love; and Love can be nowhere else, but in God, and where God dwells and works.

Now the Difficulty which you find in attaining to this Purity, and Universality of the Spirit of Love, is because you seek for it, as I once told you, in the Way of Reasoning: You would be possessed of it only from a rational Conviction of the Fitness and Amiableness of it. And as this clear Idea does not put you immediately into the real Possession of it, your Reason begins to waver, and suggests to you, that it may be only a fine Notion that has no Ground but in the Power of Imagination. But this, Sir, is all your own Error, and as contrary to Nature, as if you would have your Eyes do That, which only your Hands or Feet can do for you. The Spirit of Love is a Spirit of Nature and Life; and all the Operations of Nature and Life are according to the working Powers of Nature; and every Growth and Degree of Life can only arise in its own Time and Place from its proper Cause, and as the genuine Effect of it. Nature and Life do nothing by Chance, or accidentally, but every Thing in one uniform Way. Fire, Air, and Light, do not proceed sometimes from one Thing, and sometimes from another; but wherever they are, they are always born in the same Manner, and from the same Working in the Properties of Nature. So in like Manner, Love is an immutable Birth, always proceeding from the same Cause, and cannot be in Existence till its own true Parents have brought it forth.

* Spirit of Love, Second Part, page 22.

How unreasonable would it be, to begin to doubt whether Strength and Health of Body were real Things, or possible to be had, because you could not by the Power of your Reason take Possession of them; Yet this is as well, as to suspect the Purity and Perfection of Love to be only a Notion, because your Reason cannot bring forth its Birth in your Soul. For Reason has no more Power of altering the Life and Properties of the Soul, than of altering the Life and Properties of the Body. That, and that only, can cast Devils and evil Spirits out of the Soul, that can say to the Storm, Be still, and to the Leper, Be thou clean.

The Birth of Love is a Form or State of Life, and has its fixed Place in the fifth Form of Nature. The three first Properties or Forms of Nature are the Ground or Band of Life, that is in itself only an extreme Hunger, Want, Strife and Contrariety. And they are in this State, that they may become a proper Fuel for the fourth Form of Nature, viz., the Fire, to be kindled in them. You will perhaps say, What is this Fire? What is its Nature? And how is it kindled? And how is it, that the Hunger, and anguishing State of the Properties, are a Fitness to be a Fuel of this Fire? It may be answered, This Hunger and Anguish of Nature, in its first Forms, are its Fitness to be changed into a Life of Light, Joy, and Happiness: And that for this Reason, because it is in this Hunger and Anguish only because God is not in it. For as Nature comes from God, and for this only End, that the Deity may manifest Heaven in it, it must stand in an Hunger and anguishing State till the Deity is manifested in it.

And therefore its Hunger and Anguish are its true Fitness to be changed into a better State; and this is its Fitness for the Birth of the Fire: For the Fire means nothing, and is nothing else, but That which changes them into a better State. Not as if Fire was a fourth, distinct Thing, that comes into them from without, but is only a fourth State or Condition into which the same Properties are brought.

The Fire then is that which changes the Properties into a new and heavenly State: Therefore the Fire does two Things; it alters the State of Nature, and brings Heaven into it; and therefore it must work from a twofold Power; the Deity and Nature must both be in it. It must have some Strength from Nature, or it could not work in Nature; it must have some Strength from the Deity, or it could not overcome, and change Nature into a Divine Life. Now all this is only to show you, that the Fire can only be kindled by the Entrance of the Deity or supernatural God into a Conjunction or Union with Nature. And this Conjunction of the Deity and Nature makes or brings forth that State, or Form of Life, which is called, and truly is, Fire: First, Because it does that in the spiritual Properties of Nature, which Fire does in the Properties of material Nature; and Secondly, Because it is that alone, from which every Fire in this World, whether in the Life of animal, or vegetable, or inanimate Matter, has its Source, and Power, and Possibility of Burning. The Fire of this World overcomes its Fuel, breaks its Nature, alters its State, and changes it into Flame and Light. But why does it do this? Whence has it this Nature and Power? It is because it is a true Out-birth of the eternal Fire, which overcomes the Darkness, Wrath, and Contrariety of Nature, and changes all its Properties into a Life of Light, Joy, and Glory. Not a Spark of Fire could be kindled in this World, nor a Ray of Light come from any material Fire, but because material Nature is, in itself, nothing else but the very Properties of eternal Nature, standing for a Time in a material State or Condition; and therefore they must work in Time as they do in Eternity; and consequently there must be Fire in this World, it must have the same Birth, and do the same Work, in its material Way, which the eternal Fire has and does in spiritual Nature. And this is the true Ground and Reason why every Thing in this World is delivered as far as it can be from its earthly Impurity, and brought into its highest State of Existence, only by Fire; it is because the eternal Fire is the Purifier of eternal Nature, and the Opener of every Perfection, Light and Glory in it. And if you ask why the eternal Fire is the Purifier of eternal Nature, the Reason is plain; it is because the eternal Fire has its Birth, and Nature, and Power, from the Entrance of the pure supernatural Deity into the Properties of Nature, which must change their State, and be what they were not before, as soon as the Deity enters into them. Their Darkness, Wrath, and Contrariety, are driven out of them, and they work, and give forth only a Life, and Strength of Light, and Joy, and Glory. And this twofold Operation, viz., on one hand taking from Nature its wrathful Workings, and on the other hand opening a glorious Manifestation of the Deity in them, is the whole Nature and Form of the Fire, and is the Reason why from Eternity to Eternity it is and must be the Purifier of eternal Nature; namely, as from Eternity to Eternity changing Nature into a Kingdom of Heaven. Now every Fire in this World does, and must do, the same Thing in its low Way, to the utmost of its Power, and can do nothing else. Kindle Fire where, or in what you will, it acts only as from and by the Power of this eternal purifying Fire; and therefore it breaks and consumes the Grossness of every Thing, and makes all that is pure and spirituous to come forth out of it; and therefore Purification is its one only Work through all material Nature, because it is a real Out-birth of that eternal Fire which purifies eternal Nature, and changes it into a mere Heaven of Glory.

The eternal Fire is called a fourth Form, or State of Nature; because it cannot exist but from the first Three, and has its Work in the fourth Place, in the Midst of the seven Forms, changing the three first into the three last Forms of Nature, that is, changing them from their natural into an heavenly State. So that, strictly speaking, there are but three Forms of Nature, to answer to the threefold Working of the Triune Deity. For the three last are not three new or different Properties, but are only the three first brought into a new State, by the Entrance of the Triune Deity into Conjunction with them. Which Entrance of the supernatural Deity into them is the consuming of all that is bad in them, and turning all their Strength into a working Life of Light, Joy, and heavenly Glory; and therefore it has the justest Title to be called Fire, as having no other Nature and Operation in it but the known Nature of Fire, and also as being That from which every Fire in this World has all its Nature and Power of doing as it does.

You once, as I remember, objected to my speaking so much in the Appeal, &c., of the Fire of Life, as thinking it too gross an Expression to be taken in its literal Meaning, when mention is made of the eternal Fire, or the Fire in animal Life. But, Sir, Fire has but one Nature through the whole Universe of Things; and material Fire has not more or less of the Nature of Fire in it, than that which is in eternal Nature; because it has nothing, works nothing, but what it has and works from thence. How easy was it for you to have seen, that the Fire of the Soul and the Fire of the Body had but one Nature? How else could they unite in their Heat? How easy also to have seen, that the Fire of animal Life was the same Fire that burns in the Kitchen? How else could the Kitchen Fire be serviceable to animal Life? What Good could it do you to come to a Fire of Wood, where you wanted to have the Heat of your own Life increased? In animal Life the Fire is kindled and preserved in such a Degree, and in such Circumstances, as to be Life, and the Preservation of Life; and this is its Difference from Fire kindled in Wood, and burning it to Ashes. It is the same Fire, only in a different State, that keeps up Life, and consumes Wood; and has no other Nature in the Wood than in the Animal. Just as in Water that has only so much Fire in it as to make it warm, and Water that is by Fire made boiling hot, the same Nature and Power of Fire are in both, but only in a different State. Now will you say, that Fire is not to be literally understood, when it only makes Water to be warm, because it is not red and flaming as you see it in a burning Coal? Yet this would be as well as to say, that Fire is not literally to be understood in the animal Life, because it is so different from that Fire which you see burning in a Piece of Wood. And thus, Sir, there is no Foundation for any Objection to all that has been said of Fire in the Appeal, &c. It is one and the same great Power of God in the spiritual and material World; it is the Cause of every Life, and the Opener of every Power of Nature; and its one great Work through all Nature and Creature, animate and inanimate, is Purification and Exaltation; it can do nothing else, and that for this plain Reason, because its Birth is from the Entrance of the pure Deity into Nature, and therefore must, in its various State and Degrees, be only doing that which the Entrance of the Deity into Nature does. It must bring every natural Thing into its highest State. But to go back now to the Spirit of Love, and show you the Time and Place of its Birth, before which it can have no Existence in your Soul, do what you will to have it.

The Fire, you see, is the first Overcomer of the hungry, wrathful, self-tormenting State of the Properties of Nature; and it only overcomes them, because it is the Entrance of the pure Deity into them; and therefore That which overcomes them is the Light of the Deity. And this is the true Ground and Reason, why every right-kindled Fire must give forth Light, and cannot do otherwise. It is because the eternal Fire is only the Effect or Operation of the supernatural Light of the Deity entering into Nature; and therefore Fire must give forth Light, because it is itself only a Power of the Light ; and Light can be nowhere in Nature but as a fifth Form, or State of Nature, brought forth by the Fire. And as Light thus brought forth is the first State that is lovely and delightful in Nature, so the Spirit of Love has only its Birth in the Light of Life, and can be nowhere else. For the Properties of Life have no common Good, nothing to rejoice in, till the Light is found ; and therefore there is no possible Beginning of the Spirit of Love till then.

The Shock that is given to the three first Properties of Nature by the amazing Light of the Deity breaking in upon them, is the Operation of the Fire, that consumes, or takes away, the wrathful Strength and Contrariety of the Properties, and forces each of them to shrink, as it were, away from itself, and come under the Power of this new-risen Light. Here all Strife of Enmity and wrathful Contrariety in the Properties must cease, because all are united in the Love of the Light, and all equally helping one another to an higher Enjoyment and Delight in it. They are all one Triune Will, all doing the same Thing, vis., all rejoicing in the one Love of the Light. And here it is, in this delightful Unity of Operation, that the Spirit of Love is born, in the fifth Property, or Light of Life ; and cannot possibly rise up in any Creature till the Properties of its Life are brought into this fifth State, thus changed, and exalted into a new Sensibility of Life. Let me give you this Similitude of the Matter : Fancy to yourself a Man shut up in a deep Cave underground, without ever having seen a Ray of the Light, his Body all over tortured with Pain, his Mind distracted with Rage, himself whirling and working with the utmost Fury and Madness he knows not what ; and then you have an Image of the first Properties of Life, as they are in themselves, before the Fire had done its Work in them.

Fancy this Man suddenly struck, or all surrounded, with such a Glare of Light, as in the Twinkling of an Eye stopped, or struck dead, every Working of every Pain and Rage, both in his Body and Mind ; and then you have an Image of the Operation of the Fire, and what it does to the first Properties of Nature. Now as soon as the first Terror of the Light has had its fiery Operation, and struck nothing dead but every working Sensibility of Distress, fancy this Man, as you now well may, in the sweetest Peace of Mind and bodily Sensations, blessed in a new Region of Light, giving Joy to his Mind, and Gratification to every Sense ; and then the Transports, the Overflowings of Love and Delight in this new State, may give you an Image how the Spirit of Love is, and must be born, when Fire and Light have overcome, and changed the State of the first Properties of Nature ; and it never, till then, can have any Existence in any Creature, nor proceed from any other Cause. Thus, Sir, you may sufficiently see, how vainly you attempt to possess yourself of the Spirit of Love by the Power of your Reason; and also what a Vanity of all Vanities there is in the Religion of the Deists, who will have no other Perfection, or Divine Life, but what they can have from their Reason: as great a Contradiction to Nature, as if they would have no Life or Strength of Body, but that which can be had from their Faculty of Reasoning. For Reason can no more alter or exalt any one Property of Life in the Soul, and bring it into its perfect State, than it can add one Cubit to the Stature of the Body. The Perfection of every Life is no way possibly to be had, but as every Flower comes to its Perfection, viz., from its own Seed and Root, and the various Degrees of Transmutation which must be gone through before the Flower is found: It is strictly thus with the Perfection of the Soul: All its Properties of Life must have their true natural Birth and Growth from one another. The first, as its Seed and Root, must have their natural Change into an higher State; must, like the Seed of the Flower, pass through Death into Life, and be blessed with the Fire, and Light, and Spirit of Heaven, in their Passage to it; just as the Seed passes through Death into Life, blessed by the Fire, and Light, and Air of this World, till it reaches its last Perfection, and becomes a beautiful sweet-smelling Flower. And to think that the Soul can attain its Perfection any other Way, than by the Change and Exaltation of its first Properties of Life, just as the Seed has its first Properties changed and exalted till it comes to have its Flower, is a total Ignorance of the Nature of Things. For as whatever dies cannot have a Death particular to itself, but the same Death in the same Way, and for the same Reasons, that any other Creature, whether animal or vegetable, ever did or can die; so every Life, and Degree of Life, must come into its State and Condition of Life in the same Way, and for the same Reasons as Life, and the Perfection of Life, come into every other living Creature, whether in Heaven, or on Earth. Therefore the Deist's Religion, or Reason, which is to raise the Soul to its true Perfection, is so far from being the Religion of Nature, that it is quite unnatural, and declared to be so by every Working in Nature. For since Reason can neither give Life nor Death to any one Thing in Nature, but every Thing lives, or dies, according to the Working of its own Properties, every Thing, dead and alive, gives forth a Demonstration, that Nature asks no Counsel of Reason, nor stays to be directed by it. Hold it therefore for a certain Truth, that you can have no Good come into your Soul, but only by the one Way of a Birth from above, from the Entrance of the Deity into the Properties of your own soulish Life. Nature must be set right, its Properties must enter into the Process of a new Birth, it must work to the Production of Light, before the Spirit of Love can have a Birth in it. For Love is Delight, and Delight cannot arise in any Creature till its Nature is in a delightful State, or is possessed of that in which it must rejoice. And this is the Reason why God must become Man; it is because a Birth of the Deity must be found in the Soul, giving to Nature all that it wants, or the Soul can never find itself in a delightful State and only Working with the Spirit of Love. For whilst the Soul has only its natural Life, it can only be in such a State, as Nature, without God, is in, vis., a mere Hunger, Want, Contrariety, and Strife for it knows not what. Hence is all that Variety of blind, restless, contrary Passions, which govern and torment the Life of fallen Man. It is because all the Properties of Nature must work in Blindness, and be doing they know not what, till the Light of God is found in them. Hence also it is, that That which is called the Wisdom, the Honour, the Honesty, and the Religion of the natural Man, often does as much Hurt to himself, and others, as his Pride, Ambition, Self-Love, Envy, or Revenge, and are subject to the same Humour and Caprice; it is because Nature is no better in one Motion than in another, nor can be so, till something supernatural is come into it. We often charge Men both in Church and State, with changing their Principles; but the Charge is too hasty; for no Man ever did, or can change his Principles, but by a Birth from above. The natural, called in Scripture, the old Man, is steadily the same in Heart and Spirit in every Thing he does, whatever Variety of Names may be given to his Actions. For Self can have no Motion but what is selfish, which Way soever it goes, or whatever it does, either in Church or State. And be assured of this, that Nature in every Man, whether he be learned or unlearned, is this very Self, and can be nothing else, till a Birth of the Deity is brought forth in it. There is therefore no Possibility of having the Spirit of Love, or any Divine Goodness, from any Power of Nature, or Working of Reason. It can only be had in its own Time and Place; and its Time and Place is nowhere, but where Nature is overcome by a Birth of the Life of God in the Properties of the Soul. And thus you see the infallible Truth, and absolute Necessity, of Christian Redemption; it is the most demonstrable Thing in all Nature.—The Deity must become Man, take a Birth in the fallen Nature, be united to it, become the Life of it, or the natural Man must of all Necessity be for ever and ever in the Hell of his own Hunger, Anguish, Contrariety and Self-Torment; and all for this plain Reason, because Nature is, and can be, nothing else, but this Variety of Self-Torment till the Deity is manifested and dwelling in it.

And now, Sir, you see also the absolute Necessity of the Gospel-Doctrine of the Cross, viz., of dying to Self, as the one only Way to Life in God. This Cross, or Dying to Self, is the one Morality that does Man any Good. Fancy as many Rules as you will of modelling the moral Behaviour of Man, they all do nothing, because they leave Nature still alive, and therefore can only help a Man to a feigned hypocritical Art of concealing his own inward Evil, and seeming to be not under its Power. And the Reason why it must be so is plain; it is because Nature is not possible to be reformed; it is immutable in its Workings, and must be always as it is, and never any better or worse, than its own untaught Workings are. It can no more change from Evil to Good, than Darkness can work itself into Light. The one Work therefore of Morality is the one Doctrine of the Cross, viz., to resist and deny Nature, that a supernatural Power, or Divine Goodness, may take Possession of it, and bring a new Light into it.

In a Word, there are, in all the Possibility of Things, but two States, or Forms of Life; the one is Nature, and the other is God manifested in Nature; and as God and Nature are both within you, so you have it in your Power to live and work with which you will; but are under a Necessity of doing either the one or the other. There is no standing still, Life goes on, and is always bringing forth its Realities, which Way soever it goes. You have seen, that the Properties of Nature are, and can be, nothing else in their own Life, but a restless Hunger, Disquiet, and blind Strife, for they know not what, till the Properties of Light and Love have got Possession of them. Now when you see this, you see the true State of every natural Man, whether he be Cæsar or Cato, whether he gloriously murders others, or only stabs himself; blind Nature does all the Work, and must be the Doer of it, till the Christ of God is born in him. For the Life of Man can be nothing else but an Hunger of Covetousness, a Rising up of Pride, Envy, and Wrath, a medley of contrary Passions, doing and undoing it knows not what, because these Workings are essential to the Properties of Nature; they must be always hungering, and working one against another, striving to be above one another, and all this in Blindness, till the Light of God has helped them to one common Good, in which they all willingly unite, rest, and rejoice. In a Word, Goodness is only a Sound, and Virtue a mere Strife of natural Passions, till the Spirit of Love is the Breath of every Thing that lives and moves in the Heart. For Love is the one only Blessing, and Goodness, and God of Nature; and you have no true Religion, are no Worshipper of the one true God, but in and by that Spirit of Love, which is God himself living and working in you.

But here I take off my Pen, and shall leave the remaining Part of your Objection to another Opportunity.

I am, &c.

King's Cliff, June 16, 1752.

THE SPIRIT OF LOVE.

PART THE SECOND.

IN DIALOGUES.

By WILLIAM LAW, M.A.

LONDON:

Printed for M. RICHARDSON, in Pater-noster-
Row. 1754.

THE FIRST DIALOGUE

BETWEEN

Theogenes, Eusebius, and Theophilus.

THEOGENES. Dear Theophilus, this Gentleman is Eusebius, a very valuable and worthy Curate in my Neighbourhood; he would not let me wait any longer for your second Letter on the Spirit of Love, nor be content till I consented to our making you this Visit. And indeed, we are both on the same Errand, and in equal Impatience to have your full Answer to that Part of my Objection, which you reserved for a second Letter.

Theophilus. My Heart embraces you both with the greatest Affection, and I am much pleased at the Occasion of your Coming, which calls me to the most delightful Subject in the World, to help both you and myself to rejoice in that adorable Deity, whose infinite Being is an Infinity of mere Love, an unbeginning, never-ceasing, and for ever overflowing Ocean of Meekness, Sweetness, Delight, Blessing, Goodness, Patience, and Mercy; and all this, as so many blessed Streams breaking out of the Abyss of universal Love, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, a Triune Infinity of Love and Goodness, for ever and ever giving forth nothing but the same Gifts of Light and Love, of Blessing and Joy, whether before or after the Fall, either of Angels or Men.

Look at all Nature, through all its Height and Depth, in all its Variety of working Powers, it is what it is for this only End, that the hidden Riches, the invisible Powers, Blessings, Glory and Love of the unsearchable God, may become visible, sensible, and manifest in it and by it.

Look at all the Variety of Creatures, they are what they are for this only End, that in their infinite Variety, Degrees, and Capacities, they may be as so many speaking Figures, living Forms of the manifold Riches and Powers of Nature, as so many Sounds and Voices, Preachers and Trumpets, giving Glory and Praise and Thanksgiving to that Deity of Love, which gives Life to all Nature and Creature.

For every Creature of unfallen Nature, call it by what Name you will, has its Form, and Power, and State, and Place in Nature, for no other End, but to open and enjoy, to manifest and rejoice in some Share of the Love, and Happiness, and Goodness of the Deity, as springing forth in the boundless Height and Depth of Nature.

Now this is the one Will and Work of God in and through all Nature and Creature. From Eternity to Eternity He can will and intend nothing towards them, in them, or by them, but the Communication of various Degrees of His own Love, Goodness, and Happiness to them, according to their State, and Place, and Capacity in Nature. This is God's unchangeable Disposition towards the Creature; He can be nothing else but all Goodness towards it, because He can be nothing towards the Creature but that which he is, and was, and ever shall be in Himself.

God can no more begin to have any Wrath, Rage, or Anger in Himself, after Nature and Creature are in a fallen State, than He could have been infinite Wrath, and boundless Rage everywhere, and from all Eternity. For nothing can begin to be in God, or to be in a new State in Him; every Thing that is in Him, is essential to Him, as inseparable from Him, as unalterable in Him, as the triune Nature of his Deity.

Theogenes. Pray, Theophilus, let me ask you, Does not Patience, and Pity, and Mercy begin to be in God, and only then begin, when the Creature has brought itself into Misery? They could have no Existence in the Deity before. Why then may not a Wrath and Anger begin to be in God, when the Creature has rebelled against him, though it neither had, nor could have any Existence in God before?

Theophilus. It is true, Theogenes, that God can only then begin to make known his Mercy and Patience, when the Creature has lost its Rectitude and Happiness, yet nothing then begins to be in God, or to be found in him, but that which was always in him in the same infinite State, viz., a Will to all Goodness, and which can will nothing else. And his Patience and Mercy, which could not show forth themselves, till Nature and Creature had brought forth Misery, were not new Tempers, or the Beginning of some new Disposition that was not in God before, but only new and occasional Manifestations of that boundless eternal Will to all Goodness, which always was in God in the same Height and Depth. The Will to all Goodness, which is God himself, began to display itself in a new Way, when it first gave Birth to Creatures. The same Will to all Goodness began to manifest itself in another new Way, when it became Patience and Compassion towards fallen Creatures. But neither of these Ways are the Beginning of any new Tempers or Qualities in God, but only new and occasional Manifestations of that true eternal Will to all Goodness, which always was, and always will be, in the same Fulness of Infinity in God.

But to suppose that when the Creature has abused its Power, lost its Happiness, and plunged itself into a Misery, out of which it cannot deliver itself, to suppose that then there begins to be something in the holy Deity of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, that is not of the Nature and Essence of God, and which was not there before, viz., a Wrath, and Fury, and vindictive Vengeance, breaking out in Storms of Rage and Resentment, because the poor Creature has brought Misery upon itself, is an Impiety and Absurdity that cannot be enough abhorred. For nothing can be in God, but that which He is, and has from Himself, and therefore no Wrath can be in the Deity itself, unless God was in Himself, before all Nature, and from all Eternity, an Infinity of Wrath.

Why are Love, Knowledge, Wisdom, and Goodness, said to be infinite and eternal in God, capable of no Increase or Decrease, but always in the same highest State of Existence? Why is his Power eternal and omnipotent, his Presence not here, or there, but everywhere the same? No Reason can be assigned, but because nothing that is temporary, limited, or bounded, can be in God. It is his Nature to be that which He is, and all that He is, in an infinite, unchangeable Degree, admitting neither higher nor lower, neither here nor there, but always, and everywhere, in the same unalterable State of Infinity. If therefore Wrath, Rage, and Resentment could be in the Deity itself, it must be an unbeginning, boundless, never-ceasing Wrath, capable of no more or less, no up or down, but always existing, always working, and breaking forth in the same Strength, and everywhere equally burning in the Height and Depth of the abyssal Deity. There is no medium here. There must be either all or none, either no Possibility of Wrath, or no Possibility of its having any Bounds. And therefore, if you would not say, that every Thing that has proceeded, or can, or ever shall proceed from God, are and can be only so many Effects of his eternal and omnipotent Wrath, which can never cease, or be less than infinite, if you will not hold this monstrous Blasphemy, you must stick close to the absolute Impossibility of Wrath having any Existence in God. For nothing can have any Existence in God, but in the Way and Manner as his Eternity, Infinity, and Omnipotence have their Existence in him. Have you any Thing to object to this?

Theogenes. Indeed, Theophilus, both Eusebius and myself have been from the first fully satisfied with what has been said of this Matter in the Book of Regeneration, the Appeal, and the Spirit of Prayer, &c. We find it impossible to think of God as subject to Wrath, or capable of being inflamed by the Weakness, and Folly, and Irregularity of the Creature. We find ourselves incapable of thinking any otherwise of God, than as the one only Good, or as you express it, an eternal immutable Will to all Goodness, which can will Nothing else to all Eternity, but to communicate Good, and Blessing, and Happiness, and Perfection to every Life, according to its Capacity to receive it.

Had I an hundred Lives, I could with more Ease part with them all, by suffering an hundred Deaths, than give up this lovely Idea of God. Nor could I have any Desire of Eternity for myself, if I had not Hopes, that by partaking of the Divine Nature, I should be eternally delivered from the Burden and Power of my own Wrath, and changed into the blessed Freedom of a Spirit, that is all Love, and a mere Will to Nothing but Goodness. An Eternity without this, is but an Eternity of Trouble. For I know of no Hell, either here or hereafter, but the Power and Working of Wrath, nor any Heaven, but where the God of Love is all in all, and the working Life of all. And therefore, that the holy Deity is all Love, and Blessing, and Goodness, willing and working only Love and Goodness to every Thing, as far as it can receive it, is a Truth as deeply grounded in me as the feeling of my own Existence. I ask you for no Proof of this; my only Difficulty is how to reconcile this Idea of God to the Letter of Scripture. First, Because the Scripture speaks so much and so often of the Wrath, the Fury, and vindictive Vengeance of God. Secondly, Because the whole Nature of our Redemption is so plainly grounded on such a supposed Degree of Wrath and Vengeance in God, as could not be satisfied, appeased, and atoned by any Thing less than the Death and Sacrifice of the only begotten Son of God.

Theophilus. I will do more for you, Theogenes, in this Matter than you seem to expect. I will not only reconcile the Letter of Scripture with the foregoing Description of God, but will show you, that every Thing that is said of the Necessity of Christ's being the only possible Satisfaction and Atonement of the vindictive Wrath of God, is a full and absolute Proof, that the Wrath of God spoken of never was, nor is, or possibly can be in God.

Eusebius. Oh! Theophilus, you have forced me now to speak, and I cannot contain the Joy that I feel in this Expectation which you have raised in me. If you can make the Scriptures do all that which you have promised to Theogenes, I shall be in Paradise before I die. For to know that Love alone was the Beginning of Nature and Creature, that nothing but Love encompasses the whole Universe of Things, that the governing Hand that overrules all, the watchful Eye that sees through all, is nothing but omnipotent and omniscient Love, using an Infinity of Wisdom, to raise all that is fallen in Nature, to save every misguided Creature from the miserable Works of its own Hands, and make Happiness and Glory the perpetual Inheritance of all the Creation, is a Reflection that must be quite ravishing to every intelligent Creature that is sensible of it. Thus to think of God, of Providence, and Eternity, whilst we are in this Valley and Shadow of Death, is to have a real Foretaste of the Blessings of the World to come. Pray, therefore, let us hear how the Letter of Scripture is a Proof of this God of Love.

Theophilus. Before I do this, Eusebius, I think it requisite to show you, in a Word or two, the true Ground and Nature of Wrath in all its Kinds, what it is in itself, whence it has its Birth, Life, and Manner of Existence. And then you will see with your own Eyes, why, and how, and where Wrath or Rage can, or cannot be. And till you see this fundamentally in the Nature of things, you cannot be at all qualified to judge of the Matter in Question, but must only think and speak at random, merely as your Imagination is led by the Sound of Words. For till we know, in the Nature of the Thing, what Wrath is in itself, and why, and how it comes into Existence, wherever it is, we cannot say, where it can enter, or where it cannot. Nor can we possibly know what is meant by the Satisfaction, Appeasing, or Atonement of Wrath in any Being, but by knowing how, and why, or for what Reason Wrath can rise and work in any Being, and then only can we know how any Wrath, wherever raised, can be atoned or made to cease.

Now there are two Things, both of them visible to your outward Senses, which entirely open the true Ground and Nature of Wrath, and undeniably show what it is in itself, from whence it arises, and wherein its Life, and Strength, and Being consist. And these two Things are, a Tempest in the Elements of this World, and a raging Sore in the Body of Man, or any other Animal. Now that a Tempest in the Elements is Wrath in the Elements, and a Sore in the Body of an Animal a Wrath in the State or Juices of the Body, is a Matter, I think, that needs no Proof or Explanation. Consider, then, how or why a Tempest arises in the Elements, or an inflamed Sore in the Body, and then you have the true Ground and Nature of Wrath. Now a Tempest does not, cannot arise in the Elements whilst they are in their right State, in their just Mixture or Union with one another. A Sore does not, cannot break forth in the Body, whilst the Body is altogether in its true State and Temperature of its Juices. Hence you plainly see, that Wrath has its whole Nature, and only Ground of its Existence, in and by the Disorder, or bad State of the Thing in which it exists and works. It can have no Place of Existence, no Power of breaking forth, but where the Thing has lost its proper Perfection, and is not as it ought to be. And therefore no good Being, that is in its proper State of Goodness, can, whilst it is in such a State, have any Wrath or Rage in it. And therefore, as a Tempest of any kind in the Elements, is a sure Proof that the Elements are not in their right State, but under Disorder, as a raging Sore in the Body is a certain Indication that the Body is impure and corrupt, and not as it should be; so in whatever Mind, or intelligent Being, Wrath or Rage works, and breaks forth, there, there is Proof enough, that the Mind is in that same impure, corrupt, and disordered State, as those Elements that raise a Tempest, and that Body which gives forth an inflamed Sore. And now, Gentlemen, what think you of a supposed Wrath, or Rage in God? Will you have such Things to be in the Deity itself as cannot have Place or Existence even in any Creature, till it is become disordered and impure, and has lost its proper State of Goodness?

Eusebius. But pray, Theophilus, let me observe, that it does not yet appear to me, that there is but one Wrath possible to be in Nature and Creature. I grant there is such a Likeness in the Things you have appealed to, as is sufficient to justify Poets, Orators, or popular Speakers, in calling a Tempest Wrath, and Wrath a Tempest. But this will not do in our present Matter; for all that you have said depends upon this, whether, in a philosophic Strictness in the Nature of the Thing, there can only be one Wrath, wherever it is, proceeding strictly from the same Ground, and having everywhere the same Nature. Now if you can prove this Identity, or Sameness of Wrath, be it where it will, either in an intelligent Mind, the Elements of this World, or the body of an Animal, then your Point is absolutely gained, and there can be no Possibility for Wrath to have any Existence in the Deity. But as Body and Spirit are generally held to be quite contrary to each other in their most essential Qualities, I do not know how you can sufficiently prove, that they can only have one Kind of Wrath, or that Wrath must have one and the same Ground and Nature, whether it be in Body or Spirit.

Theophilus. Wrath can have no better, or other Ground and Nature in Body, than it has in Spirit, for this Reason, because it can have no Existence or Manner of working in the Body, but what it has directly from Spirit. And therefore, in every Wrath that is visible in any Body whatever, you have a true Manifestation of the Ground and Nature of Wrath, in whatever Spirit it is.

And therefore, as there is but one Ground and Nature of Wrath in all outward Things, whether they be animate or inanimate, so you have Proof enough, that so it is with all Wrath in the Spirit or Mind. Because Wrath in any Body, or outward Thing, is nothing else but the inward working of that Spirit, which manifests itself by an outward Wrath in the Body.

And what we call Wrath in the Body, is, truly and strictly speaking, the Wrath of the Spirit in the Body.

For you are to observe, that Body begins not from itself, nor is any Thing of itself, but is all that it is, whether pure or impure, has all that it has, whether of Light or Darkness, and works all that it works, whether of Good or Evil, merely from Spirit. For nothing, my Friend, acts in the whole Universe of Things but Spirit alone. And the State, Condition, and Degree of every Spirit, is only and solely opened by the State, Form, Condition, and Qualities of the Body that belongs to it. For the Body can have no Nature, Form, Condition, or Quality, but that which the Spirit that brings it forth gives to it.

Was there no eternal universal Spirit, there could be no eternal or universal Nature; that is, was not the Spirit of God everywhere, the Kingdom of Heaven, or the visible Glory of God in an outward Majesty of Heaven, could not be everywhere. Now the Kingdom of Heaven is that to the Deity, which every Body is to the Spirit, which lives, works, and manifests itself in it. But the Kingdom of Heaven is not God, yet all that it is, and has, and does, is only an outward Manifestation of the Nature, Power, and Working of the Spirit of God.

It is thus with every creaturely Spirit and its Body, which is the Habitation or Seat of its Power, and as the Spirit is in its Nature, Kind, and Degree, whether heavenly, earthly, or hellish, so is its Body. Were there not creaturely Spirits, there could be no creaturely Bodies. And the Reason why there are creaturely Bodies of such various Forms, Shapes, and Powers, is because Spirits come forth from God in various Kinds and Degrees of Life, each manifesting its own Nature, Power, and Condition, by that Body which proceeds from it as its own Birth, or the Manifestation of its own Powers.

Now the Spirit is not Body, nor is the Body Spirit; they are so essentially distinct, that they cannot possibly lose their Difference, or be changed into one another; and yet all that is in the Body, is from the Nature, Will and Working of its Spirit. There is therefore no possible Room for a Supposition of two Kinds of Wrath, or that Wrath may have two Natures, the one as it is in Spirit, and the other as it is in Body; first, because nothing can be wrathful but Spirit, and secondly, because no Spirit can exert, or manifest Wrath, but in and by its Body. The kindling its own Body is the Spirit's only Wrath. And therefore, through the whole Universe of Things, there is and can be but one possible Ground and Nature of Wrath, whether it be in the Sore of an animal Body, in a Tempest of the Elements, in the Mind of a Man, in an Angel, or in Hell.

Eusebius. Enough, enough, Theophilus. You have made it sufficiently plain, that Wrath can be no more in God Himself, than Hell can be Heaven. And therefore we ask no more of you, but only to reconcile this with the Language and Doctrine of the holy Scriptures.

Theogenes. You are in too much Haste, Eusebius; it would be better to let Theophilus proceed further in this Matter. He has told us what Wrath is in itself, be it where it will; I should be glad to know its one true Original, or how, and where, and why it could possibly begin to be.

Theophilus. To inquire, or search into the Origin of Wrath, is the same Thing as to search into the Origin of Evil and Sin: For Wrath and Evil are but two Words for one and the same Thing. There is no Evil in any Thing, but the Working of the Spirit of Wrath. And when Wrath is entirely suppressed, there can be no more Evil, or Misery, or Sin in all Nature and Creature. This therefore is a firm Truth, that nothing can be capable of Wrath, or be the Beginning of Wrath, but the Creature, because nothing but the Creature can be the Beginner of Evil and Sin.

Again, the Creature can have no Beginning, or Sensibility of Wrath in itself, but by losing the living Power, the living Presence, and governing Operation of the Spirit of God within it; or in other Words, by its losing that heavenly State of Existence in God, and Influence from Him, which it had at its Creation.

Now no intelligent Creature, whether Angel or Man, can be good and happy, but by partaking of, or having in itself, a twofold Life. Hence so much is said in the Scripture of an inward and outward, an old and a new Man.—For there could be no Foundation for this Distinction, but because every intelligent Creature, created to be good and happy, must of all Necessity have a twofold Life in it, or it cannot possibly be capable of Goodness and Happiness, nor can it possibly lose its Goodness and Happiness, or feel the least Want of them, but by its breaking the Union of this twofold Life in itself. Hence so much is said in the Scripture of the quickening, raising, and reviving the inward, new Man, of the new Birth from above, of Christ being formed in us, as the one only Redemption and Salvation of the Soul. Hence also the Fall of Adam was said to be a Death, that he died the Day of his Sin, though he lived so many hundred Years after it: it was because his Sin broke the Union of his twofold Life, and put an End to the heavenly Part of it, and left only one Life, the Life of this bestial earthly World in Him.

Now there is, in the Nature of the Things, an absolute Necessity of this twofold Life in every Creature that is to be good and happy; and the twofold Life is this, it must have the Life of Nature, and the Life of God in it. It cannot be a Creature, and intelligent, but by having the Life and Properties of Nature; that is, by finding itself to be a Life of various Sensibilities, that has a Power of Understanding, Willing and Desiring: This is its creaturely Life, which, by the creating Power of God, it has in and from Nature.

Now this is all the Life that is, or can be creaturely, or be a Creature's natural own Life; and all this creaturely natural Life, with all its various Powers and Sensibilities, is only a Life of various Appetites, Hungers, and Wants, and cannot possibly be any Thing else. God Himself cannot make a Creature to be in itself, or as to its own Nature, any Thing else but a State of Emptiness, of Want, of Appetite, &c. He cannot make it to be good and happy in and from its natural State; this is as impossible, as for God to cease to be the one only Good. The highest Life therefore, that is natural and creaturely, can go no higher than this; it can only be a bare Capacity for Goodness and Happiness, and cannot possibly be a good and happy Life, but by the Life of God dwelling in, and in Union with it. And this is the twofold Life, that of all Necessity must be united in every good and perfect and happy Creature.

See here the greatest of all Demonstrations of the absolute Necessity of the Gospel Redemption and Salvation, and all proved from the Nature of the Thing. There can be no Goodness and Happiness for any intelligent Creature, but in and by this twofold Life; and therefore the Union of the Divine and human Life, or the Son of God incarnate in Man, to make Man again a Partaker of the Divine Nature, is the one only possible Salvation for all the Sons of fallen Adam, that is, of Adam dead to, or fallen from his first Union with the Divine Life.

Deism therefore, or a Religion of Nature, pretending to make Man good and happy without Christ, or the Son of God entering into Union with the human Nature, is the greatest of all Absurdities. It is as contrary to the Nature and Possibilities of Things, as for mere Emptiness to be its own Fulness, mere Hunger to be its own Food, and mere Want to be its Possession of all Things. For Nature and Creature, without the Christ of God, or the Divine Life in Union with it, is and can be nothing else but this mere Emptiness, Hunger, and Want of all that which can alone make it good and happy. For God himself, as I said, cannot make any Creature to be good and happy by any Thing that is in its own created Nature; and however high or noble any Creature is supposed to be created, its Height and Nobility can consist in nothing, but its higher Capacity and Fitness to receive a higher Union with the Divine Life, and also a higher and more wretched Misery, when left to itself, as is manifest by the hellish State of the fallen Angels. Their high and exalted Nature was only an enlarged Capacity for the Divine Life; and therefore when this Life was lost, their whole created Nature was nothing else, but the Height of Rage, and hellish Distraction.

A plain Demonstration, that there can be no Happiness, Blessing, and Goodness for any Creature in Heaven, or on Earth, but by having, as the Gospel says, Jesus Christ made unto it, Wisdom, Righteousness, Sanctification and Peace with God.

And the Reason is this; it is because Goodness and Happiness are absolutely inseparable from God, and can be nowhere but in God. And on the other Hand, Emptiness, Want, Insufficiency, &c., are absolutely inseparable from the Creature, as such; its whole Nature cannot possibly be any Thing else, be it what or where it will, an Angel in Heaven, or a Man on Earth; it is and must be, in its whole creaturely Nature and Capacity, a mere Hunger and Emptiness, &c. And therefore all that we know of God, and all that we know of the Creature, fully proves, that the Life of God in Union with the creaturely Life (which is the Gospel Salvation) is the one only Possibility of Goodness and Happiness in any Creature, whether in Heaven or on Earth.

Hence also it is enough certain, that this twofold Life must have been the original State of every intelligent Creature, at its first coming forth from God. It could not be brought forth by God, to have only a creaturely Life of Nature, and be left to that; for that would be creating it under a Necessity of being in Misery, in Want, in Wrath, and all painful Sensibilities. A Thing more unworthy of God, and more impossible for Him to do, than to create numberless earthly Animals under a Necessity of being perpetually pained with Hunger and Thirst, without any Possibility of finding any Thing to eat or to drink.

For no creaturely Life can in itself be any higher, or better, than a State of Want, or a seeking for something that cannot be found in itself; and therefore, as sure as God is good, as sure as He would have intelligent Beings live a Life of Goodness and Happiness, so sure it is, that such Beings must of all Necessity, in their first Existence, have been blessed with a twofold Life, viz., the Life of God dwelling in, and united with, the Life of Nature, or created Life.

Eusebius. What an important Matter have you here proved, in the Necessity and Certainty of this twofold Life in every intelligent Being that is to be good and happy; for this great Truth opens and asserts the certain and substantial Ground of the spiritual Life, and shows, that all Salvation is, and can be nothing else, but the Manifestation of the Life of God in the Soul. How clearly does this give the solid Distinction between inward Holiness, and all outward, creaturely Practices. All that God has done for Man by any particular Dispensations, whether by the Law, or the Prophets, by the Scriptures, or Ordinances of the Church, are only as Helps to an Holiness which they cannot give, but are only suited to the Death and Darkness of the earthly, creaturely Life, to turn it from itself, from its own Workings, and awaken in it a Faith and Hope, a Hunger and Thirst after that first Union with the Life of the Deity, which was lost in the Fall of the first Father of Mankind.

How unreasonable is it, to call perpetual Inspiration Fanaticism and Enthusiasm, when there cannot be the least Degree of Goodness or Happiness in any intelligent Being, but what is in its whole Nature, merely and truly the Breathing, the Life, and the Operation of God in the Life of the Creature? For if Goodness can only be in God, if it cannot exist separate from Him, if he can only bless and sanctify, not by a creaturely Gift, but by Himself becoming the Blessing and Sanctification of the Creature, then it is the highest Degree of Blindness, to look for any Goodness and Happiness from any Thing, but the immediate Indwelling Union, and Operation of the Deity in the Life of the Creature. Perpetual Inspiration, therefore, is in the Nature of the Thing as necessary to a Life of Goodness, Holiness, and Happiness, as the perpetual Respiration of the Air is necessary to animal Life.

For the Life of the Creature, whilst only creaturely, and possessing nothing but itself, is Hell; that is, it is all Pain and Want and Distress. Now nothing, in the Nature of the Thing, can make the least Alteration in this creaturely Life, nothing can help it to be in Light and Love, in Peace and Goodness, but the Union of God with it, and the Life of God working in it, because nothing but God is Light, and Love, and heavenly Goodness. And, therefore, where the Life of God is not become the Life and Goodness of the Creature, there the Creature cannot have the least Degree of Goodness in it.

What a Mistake is it, therefore, to confine Inspiration to particular Times and Occasions, to Prophets and Apostles, and extraordinary Messengers of God, and to call it Enthusiasm, when the common Christian looks, and trusts to be continually led and inspired by the Spirit of God! For though all are not called to be Prophets or Apostles, yet all are called to be holy, as He who has called them is holy, to be perfect as their heavenly Father is perfect, to be like minded with Christ, to will only as God wills, to do all to his Honour and Glory, to renounce the Spirit of this World, to have their Conversation in Heaven, to set their Affections on Things above, to love God with all their Heart, Soul, and Spirit, and their Neighbour as themselves.

Behold a Work as great, as Divine and supernatural, as that of a Prophet and an Apostle. But to suppose that we ought, and may always be in this Spirit of Holiness, and yet are not, and ought not to be always moved and led by the Breath and Spirit of God within us, is to suppose, that there is a Holiness and Goodness which comes not from God; which is no better than supposing, that there may be true Prophets and Apostles who have not their Truth from God.

Now the Holiness of the common Christian is not an occasional Thing, that begins and ends, or is only for such a Time, or Place, or Action, but is the Holiness of that, which is always alive and stirring in us, namely, of our Thoughts, Wills, Desires, and Affections. If therefore these are always alive in us, always driving, or governing our Lives, if we can have no Holiness or Goodness, but as this Life of Thought, Will, and Affection, works in us, if we are all called to this inward Holiness and Goodness, then a perpetual, always existing Operation of the Spirit of God within us, is absolutely necessary. For we cannot be inwardly led and governed by a Spirit of Goodness, but by being governed by the Spirit of God himself. For the Spirit of God and the Spirit of Goodness are not two Spirits, nor can we be said to have any more of the one, than we have of the other.

Now if our Thoughts, Wills, and Affections, need only be now and then holy and good, then, indeed, the moving and breathing Spirit of God need only now and then govern us. But if our Thoughts and Affections are to be always holy and good, then the holy and good Spirit of God is to be always operating, as a Principle of Life within us.

The Scripture says, 'We are not sufficient of ourselves to think a good Thought.' If so, then we cannot be chargeable with not thinking, and willing that which is good, but upon this Supposition, that there is always a supernatural Power within us, ready and able to help us to the Good, which we cannot have from ourselves.

The Difference then of a good and a bad Man does not lie in this, that the one wills that which is good, and the other does not, but solely in this, that the one concurs with the living inspiring Spirit of God within him, and the other resists it, and is and can be only chargeable with Evil, because he resists it.

Therefore whether you consider that which is good or bad in a Man, they equally prove the perpetual Indwelling, and Operation of the Spirit of God within us, since we can only be bad by resisting, as we are good by yielding to the Spirit of God; both which equally suppose a perpetual Operation of the Spirit of God within us.

How firmly our established Church adheres to this Doctrine of the Necessity of the perpetual Operation of the holy Spirit, as the one only Source and Possibility of any Degree of Divine Light, Wisdom, Virtue, and Goodness in the Soul of Man, how earnestly she wills and requires all her Members to live in the most open Profession of it, and in the highest Conformity to it, may be seen by many such Prayers as these, in her common, ordinary, public Service.

‘O God, for as much as without Thee we are not able to please Thee, grant that thy Holy Spirit may in all Things direct and ‘rule our Hearts.’ Again, ‘We pray Thee, that thy Grace may ‘ALWAYS prevent and follow us, and make us CONTINU-‘ALLY to be given to all good Works.’ Again, ‘Grant to us, ‘Lord, we beseech Thee, the Spirit to think and do ALWAYS ‘such Things as be rightful, that we, who cannot do ANY-‘THING that is good WITHOUT Thee, may by Thee be en-‘abled to live according to thy Will.’ Again, ‘Because the ‘Frailty of Man, WITHOUT Thee, CANNOT BUT FALL, ‘keep us EVER by thy Help from all Things hurtful, and ‘LEAD us to all Things profitable to our Salvation, &c.’ Again, ‘O God from whom all good Things do come, grant to us thy ‘humble Servants, that by THY holy INSPIRATION we may ‘THINK those Things that be good, and by thy merciful ‘GUIDING may PERFORM the same.’—But now, the true Ground of all this Doctrine of the Necessity of the perpetual Guidance and Operation of the holy Spirit, lies in what has been said above, of the Necessity of a twofold Life in every intelligent Creature that is to be good and happy. For if the creaturely Life, whilst alone, or left to itself, can only be Want, Misery, and Distress, if it cannot possibly have any Goodness or Happiness in it, till the Life of God is in Union with it, as one Life, then every Thing that you read in the Scripture of the Spirit of God, as the only Principle of Goodness, opens itself to you as a most certain and blessed Truth, about which you can have no doubt.

Theophilus. Let me only add, Eusebius, to what you have said, that from this absolute Necessity of a twofold Life, in every Creature, that is to be good and happy, we may, in a still greater Clearness see the Certainty of that which we have so often spoken of at other Times, namely, that the inspoken Word in Paradise, the Bruiser of the Serpent, the Seed of the Woman, the Immanuel, the holy Jesus (for they all mean the same Thing) is, and was the only possible Ground of Salvation for fallen Man. For if the twofold Life is necessary, and Man could not be restored to Goodness and Happiness but by the restored Union of this twofold Life into its first State, then there was an absolute Necessity, in the Nature of the Thing, that every Son of Adam should have such a Seed of Heaven in the Birth of his Life, as could, by the Mediation of Christ, be raised into a Birth and Growth of the first perfect Man. This is the one original Power of Salvation, without which, no external Dispensation could have done any Thing towards raising the fallen State of Man. For nothing could be raised, but what there was to be raised, nor Life be given to any Thing, but to that which was capable of Life. Unless, therefore, there had been a Seed of Life, or a smothered Spark of Heaven in the Soul of Man, which wanted to come to the Birth, there had been no Possibility for any Dispensation of God, to bring forth a Birth of Heaven in fallen Man.

The Faith of the first Patriarchs could not have been in Being, Moses and the Prophets had come in vain, had not the Christ of God lain in a State of Hiddenness in every Son of Man. For Faith, which is a Will and Hunger after God, could not have begun to be, or have any Life in Man, but because there was something of the Divine Nature existing and hid in Man. For nothing can have any longing Desire but after its own Likeness, nor could any Thing be made to desire God, but that which came from Him, and had the Nature of Him.

The Whole mediatorial Office of Christ, from his Birth to his sitting down in Power at the right Hand of God, was only for this End, to help Man to a Life that was fallen into Death and Insensibility in him. And therefore his mediatorial Power was to manifest itself by Way of a new Birth. In the Nature of the Thing nothing else was to be done, and Christ had no other Way to proceed, and that for this plain Reason, because Life was the Thing that was lost, and Life, wherever it is, must be raised by a Birth, and every Birth must, and can only come from its own Seed.

But if Christ was to raise a new Life like his own in every Man, then every Man must have had originally, in the inmost Spirit of his Life, a Seed of Christ, or Christ as a Seed of Heaven, lying there as in a State of Insensibility or Death, out of which it could not arise but by the mediatorial Power of Christ, who, as a second Adam, was to regenerate that Birth of his own Life, which was lost in all the natural Sons of the first Adam.

But unless there was this Seed of Christ, or Spark of Heaven hidden in the Soul, not the least Beginning of Man's Salvation, or of Christ's mediatorial Office could be made. For what could begin to deny Self, if there was not something in Man different from Self? What could begin to have Hope and Faith and Desire of an heavenly Life, if there was not something of Heaven hidden in his Soul, and lying therein, as in a State of Inactivity and Death, till raised by the Mediation of Christ into its first Perfection of Life, and set again in its true Dominion over Flesh and Blood.

Eusebius. You have, Theophilus, sufficiently proved the Certainty and Necessity of this Matter. But I should be glad if you knew how to help me to some more distinct Idea and Conception of it.

Theophilus. An Idea is not the Thing to be here sought for, it would rather hinder, than help your true Knowledge of it. But, perhaps, the following Similitude may be of some Use to you.

The ten Commandments, when written by God on Tables of Stone, and given to Man, did not then first begin to belong to Man; they had their Existence in Man, were born with him, they lay as a Seed and Power of Goodness, hidden in the Form and Make of his Soul, and altogether inseparable from it, before they were shown to Man on Tables of Stone. And when they were shown to Man on Tables of Stone, they were only an outward Imitation of that which was inwardly in Man, though not legible, because of that Impurity of Flesh and Blood, in which they were drowned and swallowed up. For the earthly Nature, having overcome the Divinity that was in Man, it gave Commandments of its own to Man, and required Obedience to all the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life.

Hence it became necessary, that God should give an outward Knowledge of such Commandments as were become inwardly unknown, unfelt, and as it were shut up in Death in the Soul.

But now, had not all that is in these Commandments been really and antecedently in the Soul, as its own Birth and Nature, had they not still lain therein, and, although totally suppressed, yet in such a Seed or Remains, as could be called forth into their first living State, in vain had the Tables of Stone been given to Man; and all outward Writing, or Teaching of the Commandments, had been as useless, as so many Instructions given to Beasts or Stones. If therefore you can conceive, how all that is good and holy in the Commandments, laid hid as an unfelt, unactive Power, or Seed of Goodness, till called into Sensibility and stirring by Laws written on Tables of Stone, this may help your Manner of conceiving, and believing, how Christ, as a Seed of Life, or Power of Salvation, lies in the Soul as its unknown hidden Treasure, till awakened and called forth into Life by the mediatorial Office and Process of the holy Jesus.

Again, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, ' with all thy Soul, and with all thy Strength, and thy Neighbour ' as thyself.' Now these two Precepts, given by the written Word of God, are an absolute Demonstration of the first original Perfection of Man, and also a full and invincible Proof, that the same original Perfection is not quite annihilated, but lies in him as an hidden suppressed Seed of Goodness, capable of being raised up to its first Perfection. For had not this Divine Unity, Purity, and Perfection of Love towards God and Man, been Man's first natural State of Life, it could have nothing to do with his present State. For had any other Nature, or Measure, or kind of Love begun in the first Birth of his Life, he could only have been called to that. For no Creature has, or can have a Call to be above, or act above its own Nature. Therefore, as sure as Man is called to this Unity, Purity, and Perfection of Love, so sure is it, that it was, at first, his natural heavenly State, and still has its Seed, or Remains within him, as his only Power and Possibility of rising up to it again. And therefore all that Man is called to, every Degree of a new and perfect Life, every future Exaltation and Glory he is to have from the Mediation of Christ, is a full Proof, that the same Perfection was originally his natural State, and is still in him in such a Seed, or Remains of Existence, as to admit of a perfect Renewal.

And thus it is, that you are to conceive of the holy Jesus, or the WORD of God, as the hidden Treasure of every human Soul, born as a Seed of the WORD in the Birth of the Soul, immured under Flesh and Blood, till, as a Day-Star, it arises in our Hearts, and changes the Son of an earthly Adam into a Son of God.

And was not the WORD and SPIRIT of God in us all, antecedent to any Dispensation or written Word of God, as a real Seed of Life in the Birth of our own Life, we could have no more Fitness for the Gospel-Redemption, than the Animals of this World, which have nothing of Heaven in them. And to call us to love God with all our Hearts, to put on Christ, to walk according to the Spirit, if these Things had not their real Nature and Root within us, would be as vain and useless, as to make Rules and Orders how our Eyes should smell and taste, or our Ears should see.

Now this Mystery of an inward Life hidden in Man, as his most precious Treasure, as the Ground of all that can be great or good in him, and hidden only since his Fall, and which only can be opened and brought forth in its first Glory by Him to whom all Power in Heaven and on Earth is given, is a Truth to which almost every Thing in Nature bears full Witness. Look where you will, nothing appears, or works outwardly in any Creature, or in any Effect of Nature, but what is all done from its own inward invisible Spirit, not a Spirit brought into it, but its own inward Spirit, which is an inward invisible Mystery, till made known, or brought forth by outward Appearances.

The Sea neither is, nor can be moved and tossed by any other Wind, than that which has its Birth, and Life, and Strength, in and from the Sea itself, as its own Wind. The Sun in the Firmament gives Growth to every Thing that grows in the Earth, and Life to every Thing that lives upon it, not by giving or imparting a Life from without, but only by stirring up in every Thing its own Growth, and its own Life, which lay as in a Seed or State of Death, till helped to come out of it by the Sun, which, as an Emblem of the Redeemer of the spiritual World, helps every earthly Thing out of its own Death into its own highest State of Life.

That which we call our Sensations, as seeing, hearing, feeling, tasting, and smelling, are not Things brought into us from without, or given to us by any external Causes, but are only so many inborn, secret States of the Soul, which lie in their State of Hiddenness till they are occasionally awakened, and brought forth into Sensibility by outward Occurrences. And were they not antecedently in the Soul, as States and Forms of its own Life, no outward Objects could bring the Soul into a Sensibility of them. For nothing can have, or be in any State of Sensation, but that which it is, and has from itself, as its own Birth. This is as certain, as that a Circle has only its own Roundness.

The stinking Gum gives nothing to the Soul, nor brings any Thing into Sensibility, but that which was before in the Soul, it has only a Fitness to awaken, and stir up that State of the Soul, which laid dormant before, and which when brought into Sensibility, is called the Sensation of bad Smelling. And the odoriferous Gum has likewise but the same Power, viz., a Fitness to stir up that State of Sensation in the Soul, which is called its delightful Smelling. But both these Sensations are only internal States of the Soul, which appear or disappear, are found, or not found, just as Occasions bring them into Sensibility.

Again, the greatest Artist in Music can add no Sound to his Instrument, nor make it give forth any other Melody, but that which lies silently hidden in it, as its own inward State.

Look now at what you will, whether it be animate, or inanimate, all that it is, or has, or can be, it is and has in and from itself, as its own inward State; and all outward Things can do no more to it, than the Hand does to the Instrument, make it show forth its own inward State, either of Harmony or Discord.

It is strictly thus with ourselves. Not a Spark of Joy, of Wrath, of Envy, of Love, or Grief, can possibly enter into us from without, or be caused to be in us by any outward Thing. This is as impossible, as for the Sound of Metals to be put into a Lump of Clay. And as no Metal can possibly give forth any other, or higher Sound, than that which is enclosed within it, so we, however struck, can give forth no other or higher Sound, either of Love, Hatred Wrath, &c., than that very Degree, which laid before shut up within us.

The natural State of our Tempers has Variety of Covers, under which they lie concealed at Times, both from ourselves and others; but when this or that Accident happens to displace such or such a Cover, then that which laid hid under it breaks forth. And then we vainly think, that this or that outward Occasion has not shown us how we are within, but has only infused, or put into us a Wrath, or Grief, or Envy, which is not our natural State, or of our own Growth, or has all that it has from our own inward State.

But this is mere Blindness and Self-Deceit, for it is as impossible for the Mind to have any Grief, or Wrath, or Joy, but what it has all from its own inward State, as for the Instrument to give forth any other Harmony, or Discord, but that which is within and from itself.

Persons, Things, and outward Occurrences may strike our Instrument improperly, and variously, but as we are in ourselves, such is our outward Sound, whatever strikes us.

If our inward State is the renewed Life of Christ within us, then every Thing and Occasion, let it be what it will, only makes the same Life to sound forth, and show itself; then if one Cheek is smitten, we meekly turn the other also. But if Nature is alive and only under a religious Cover, then every outward Accident that shakes or disturbs this Cover, gives Leave to that bad State, whether of Grief, or Wrath, or Joy, that laid hid within us, to show forth itself.

But nothing at any Time makes the least Show, or Sound outwardly, but only that which laid ready within us, for an outward Birth, as Occasion should offer.

What a miserable Mistake is it therefore, to place religious Goodness in outward Observances, in Notions and Opinions, which good and bad Men can equally receive and practise, and to treat the ready real Power and Operation of an inward Life of God in the Birth of our Souls, as Fanaticism and Enthusiasm; when not only the whole Letter and Spirit of Scripture, but every Operation in Nature and Creature demonstrates, that the Kingdom of Heaven must be all within us, or it never can possibly belong to us. Goodness, Piety, and Holiness, can only be ours, as thinking, willing, and desiring are ours, by being in us, as a Power of Heaven in the Birth and Growth of our own Life.

And now, Eusebius, how is the great Controversy about Religion and Salvation shortened.

For since the one only Work of Christ as your Redeemer is only this, to take from the earthly Life of Flesh and Blood its usurped Power, and to raise the smothered Spark of Heaven out of its State of Death, into a powerful governing Life of the whole Man, your one only Work also under your Redeemer is fully known. And you have the utmost Certainty, what you are to do, where you are to seek, and in what you are to find your Salvation. All that you have to do, or can do, is to oppose, resist, and, as far as you can, to renounce the evil Tempers, and Workings of your own earthly Nature. You are under the Power of no other Enemy, are held in no other Captivity, and want no other Deliverance, but from the Power of your own earthly Self. This is the one Murderer of the Divine Life within you. It is your own Cain that murders your own Abel. Now every Thing that your earthly Nature does, is under the Influence of Self-will, Self-love, and Self-seeking, whether it carries you to laudable, or blamable Practices, all is done in the Nature and Spirit of Cain, and only helps you to such Goodness, as when Cain slew his Brother. For every Action and Motion of Self, has the Spirit of Anti-christ, and murders the Divine Life within you.

Judge not therefore of your Self, by considering how many of those Things you do, which Divines and Moralists call Virtue and Goodness, nor how much you abstain from those Things, which they call Sin and Vice.

But daily and hourly, in every Step that you take, see to the Spirit that is within you, whether it be Heaven, or Earth that guides you, And judge every Thing to be Sin and Satan, in which your earthly Nature, own Love, or Self-seeking has any Share of Life in you; nor think that any Goodness is brought to Life in you, but so far as it is an actual Death to the Pride, the Vanity, the Wrath, and selfish Tempers of your fallen earthly Life.

Again, here you see, where and how you are to seek your Salvation, not in taking up your travelling Staff, or crossing the Seas to find out a new Luther or a new Calvin, to clothe yourself with their Opinions, No. The Oracle is at Home, that always, and only speaks the Truth to you, because nothing is your Truth, but that Good and that Evil which is yours within you. For Salvation or Damnation is no outward Thing, that is brought into you from without, but is only That which springs up within you, as the Birth and State of your own Life. What you are in yourself, what is doing in yourself, is all that can be either your Salvation or Damnation.

For all that is our Good, and all that is our Evil, has no Place nor Power but within us. Again, nothing that we do is bad, but for this Reason, because it resists the Power and working of God within us; and nothing that we do can be good, but because it conforms to the Spirit of God within us. And therefore, as all that can be Good, and all that can be Evil in us, necessarily supposes a God working within us, you have the utmost Certainty, that God, Salvation, and the Kingdom of Heaven, are nowhere to be sought, or found, but within you, and that all outward Religion, from the Fall of Man to this Day, is not for itself, but merely for the Sake of an inward and Divine Life, which was lost when Adam died his first Death in Paradise. And therefore it may well be said, that Circumcision is nothing, and Uncircumcision is nothing, because nothing is wanted, and therefore nothing can be available, but the new Creature, called out of its Captivity under the Death and Darkness of Flesh and Blood, into the Light, Life, and Perfection of its first Creation.

And thus also, you have the fullest Proof in what your Salvation precisely consists. Not in any historic Faith, or Knowledge of any Thing absent or distant from you, not in any Variety of Restraints, Rules, and Methods of practising Virtues, not in any Formality of Opinion about Faith and Works, Repentance, Forgiveness of Sins, or Justification, and Sanctification, not in any Truth, or Righteousness, that you can have from yourself, from the best of Men or Books, but wholly and solely in the Life of God, or Christ of God quicken'd and born again in you, or, in other Words, in the Restoration and perfect Union of the first twofold Life in the Humanity.

Theogenes. Though all that has passed betwixt you and Eusebius, concerns Matters of the greatest Moment, yet I must call it a Digression, and quite useless to me. For I have not the least Doubt about any of these Things you have been asserting. It is visible enough, that there can be no Medium in this Matter. Either Religion must be all spiritual, or all carnal; that is, we must either take up with the Grossness of the Sadducees, who say there is neither Angel nor Spirit, or with such Purification as the Pharisees had from their washing of Pots and Vessels, and tithing their Mint and Rue, we must, I say, either acquiesce in all this Carnality, or we must profess a Religion that is all Spirit and Life, and merely for the sake of raising up an inward spiritual Life of Heaven, that fell into Death in our first Father.

I consent also to every Thing that you have said of the Nature and Origin of Wrath. That it can have no Place, nor Possibility of Beginning, but solely in the creaturely Nature, nor even any Possibility of Beginning there, till the Creature has died to, or lost its proper State of Existence in God ; that is, till it has lost that Life, and Blessing, and Happiness, which it had in and from God at its first Creation.

But I still ask, What must I do with all those Scriptures, which not only make God capable of being provoked to Wrath and Resentment, but frequently inflamed with the highest Degrees of Rage, Fury, and Vengeance, that can be expressed by Words ?

Theophilus. I promised, you know, to remove this Difficulty, and will be as good as my Word. But I must first tell you, that you are in much more Distress about it than you need to be. For in the little Book of Regeneration, in the Appeal, in the Spirit of Prayer, &c., which you have read with such entire Approbation, the whole Matter is cleared up from its true Ground, how Wrath in the Scriptures is ascribed to God, and yet cannot belong to the Nature of the Deity.

Thus you are told in the Appeal, After these two Falls of two Orders of Creatures (that is, of Angels and Man), the Deity itself came to have new and strange Names, new and unheard of Tempers and Inclinations of Wrath, Fury, and Vengeance ascribed to it. I call them new, because they began at the Fall ; I call them strange, because they were foreign to the Deity, and could not belong to God in Himself. Thus, God is said to be a consuming Fire. But to whom ? To the fallen Angels and lost Souls. But why, and how, is He so to them ? It is because those Creatures have lost all that they had from God, but the Fire of their Nature, and therefore God can only be found and manifested in them, as a consuming Fire. Now, is it not justly said, that God, who is nothing but infinite Love, is yet in such Creatures only a consuming Fire ? And though God be nothing but Love, yet they are under the Wrath and Vengeance of God, because they have only that Fire in them, which is broken off from the Light and Love of God, and so can know or feel nothing of God, but his Fire of Nature in them ? As Creatures, they can have no Life but what they have in and from God ; and therefore that wrathful Life which they have, is truly said to be a Wrath, or Fire of God upon them. And yet it is still strictly true, that there is no Wrath in God Himself, that He is not changed in his Temper towards the Creatures, that He does not cease to be one and the same infinite Fountain of Goodness, infinitely flowing forth in the Riches of his Love upon all and every Life. Now, Sir, mind what follows, as the true Ground, how Wrath can and cannot be ascribed to God. God is not changed from Love to Wrath, but the Creatures have changed their own State in Nature, and so the God of Nature can only be manifested in them, according to their own State in Nature. And, N.B., this is the true Ground of rightly understanding all that is said of the Wrath and Vengeance of God in and upon the Creatures. It is only in such a Sense, as the Curse of God may be said to be upon them, not because any Thing cursed can be in, or come from God, but because they have made that Life, which they must have in God, to be a mere Curse to themselves. For every Creature that lives, must have its Life in and from God, and therefore God must be in every Creature. This is as true of Devils, as of holy Angels. But how is God in them? N.B. Why only as He is manifested in Nature. Holy Angels have the Triune Life of God, as manifested in Nature, so manifested also in them, and therefore God is in them all Love, Goodness, Majesty, and Glory, and theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven.

Devils have nothing of this Triune Life left in them, but the Fire, or Wrath of eternal Nature, broken off from all Light and Love; and therefore the Life that they can have in and from God, is only and solely a Life of Wrath, Rage, and Darkness, and theirs is the Kingdom of Hell.

*And because this Life, though all Rage and Darkness, is a Strength and Power of Life, which they must have in and from God, and which they cannot take out of his Hands, therefore is their cursed, miserable, wrathful Life, truly and justly said to be the Curse and Misery, and Wrath, and Vengeance of God upon them, though God Himself can no more have Curse, Misery, Wrath, and Vengeance, than He can have Mischief, Malice, or any fearful Tremblings in his holy Triune Deity.

See now, Theogenes, what little Occasion you had for your present Difficulty. For here, in the above-cited Words, which you have been several Years acquainted with, the true Ground and Reason is plainly shown you, how and why all the Wrath, Rage and Curse that is anywhere stirring in Nature, or breaking forth in any Creature, is and must be in all Truth called by the Scriptures the Wrath, and Rage, and Vengeance of God, though it be the greatest of all Impossibilities for Rage and Wrath to be in the Holy Deity itself.

The Scriptures therefore are literally true in all that they affirm of the Wrath, &c., of God. For is it not as literally true of God, that Hell and Devils are his, as that Heaven and holy

* Appeal to all that Doubt, &c.

Angels are his? Must not therefore all the Wrath and Rage of the one, be as truly his Wrath and Rage burning in them, as the Light and Joy and Glory of the other, is only his Goodness opened and manifested in them, according to their State in Nature.

Take Notice of this fundamental Truth.

Every Thing that works in Nature and Creature, except Sin, is the working of God in Nature and Creature. The Creature has nothing else in its Power but the free Use of its Will; and its free Will has no other Power, but that of concurring with, or resisting the Working of God in Nature. The Creature with its free Will can bring nothing into Being, nor make any Alteration in the working of Nature, it can only change its own State or Place in the working of Nature, and so feel and find something in its State, that it did not feel or find before.

Thus God, in the Manifestation of himself in and by Nature, sets before every Man Fire and Water, Life and Death; and Man has no other Power, but that of entering into, and uniting with either of these States, but not the least Power of adding to, or taking any Thing from them, or of making them to be otherwise than he finds them.

For this Fire and Water, this Life and Death, are Nature, and have their unchangeable State in the uniform Working of God in Nature. And therefore, whatever is done by this Fire and Water, this Life and Death in any Creature, may, nay, must, in the strictest Truth, be affirmed of God as done by Him. And consequently, every breathing forth of Fire, or Death, or Rage, or Curse, wherever it is, or in whatever Creature, must be said, in the Language of Scripture, to be a provoked Wrath, or fiery Vengeance of God, poured forth upon the Creature. And yet, every Thing that has been said in Proof of this Wrath of God, shows, and proves to you at the same Time, that it is not a Wrath in the Holy Deity itself.

For you see, as was said above, that God sets before Man Fire and Water, Life and Death; now these Things are not God, nor existence in the Deity itself; but they are that which is, and is called Nature, and as they are the only Things set before Man, so Man can go no further, reach no further, nor find, nor feel, or be sensible of any Thing else, but that which is to be felt or found in this Nature, or Fire and Water, Life and Death, which are set before Him. And therefore all that Man can find or feel of the Wrath and Vengeance of God, can only be in this Fire, and this Death, and not in the Deity itself.

Theogenes. Oh, Theophilus, you have given me the utmost Satisfaction on this Point, and in a much better Way than I imagined. I expected to have seen you glossing and criticising away the literal Expression of Scriptures that affirm the Wrath of God, in order to make good your Point, that the Deity is mere Love.

But you have done the utmost Justice to the Letter of Scripture, you have established it upon a firm and solid Foundation, and shown that the Truth of Things require it to be so, and that there can be no Wrath anywhere, but what is and must be called the Wrath and Vengeance of God, and yet is only in Nature.

What you have here said, seems as if it would clear up many Passages of Scripture, that have raised much Perplexity. Methinks I begin to see how the Hardness of Pharaoh's Heart, how Eyes that see not, and Ears that hear not, may, in the strictest Truth, be said to be of or from God, though the Deity, in itself, stands in the utmost Contrariety to all these Things, and in the utmost Impossibility of willing, or causing them to be.

But I must not draw you from our present Matter. You have shown, from the Letter of Scripture, that nothing else is set before Man but Fire and Water, Life and Death; and therefore, no Possibility of Wrath or Love, Joy or Sorrow, Curse or Happiness to be found by Man, but in this State of Nature set before him, or into which at his Creation he is introduced, as into a Region of various Sensibilities, where all that he finds or feels, is truly God's, but not God himself, who has his supernatural Residence above, and distinct from every Thing that is Nature, Fire or Water, Life or Death.

But give me Leave to mention one Word of a Difficulty that I yet have. You have proved that Wrath, Rage, Vengeance, &c., can only exist, or be found in Nature, and not in God; and yet you say, that Nature is nothing else but a Manifestation of the hidden invisible Powers of God. But if so, must not that which is in Nature be also in God? How else could Nature be a Manifestation of God?

Theophilus. Nature is a true Manifestation of the hidden, invisible God. But you are to observe, that Nature, as it is in itself, in its own State, cannot have the least possible Spark, or Stirring of Wrath, or Curse, or Vengeance in it: But, on the contrary, is from Eternity to Eternity, a mere Infinity of heavenly Light, Love, Joy and Glory; and thus it is a true Manifestation of the hidden Deity, and the greatest of Proofs, that the Deity itself can have no Wrath in it, since Wrath only then begins to be in Nature, when Nature has lost its first State.

Theogenes. This is Answer enough. But now another Thing starts up in my Mind. For if the Deity in itself, in its supernatural State, is mere Love, and only a Will to all Goodness, and if Nature in itself is only a Manifestation of this Deity of Love in heavenly Light and Glory, if neither God nor Nature have, or can give forth Wrath, how then can Fire and Water, Life and Death, be set before Man? What can they come from, or where can they exist, since God in himself is all Love; and Nature, which is the Kingdom of Heaven, is an Infinity of Joy, Blessing, and Happiness.

Theophilus. I will open to you all this Matter to the Bottom, in as few Words as I can.

Before God began any Creation, or gave Birth to any Creature, He was only manifested, or known to himself in his own Glory and Majesty; there was nothing but Himself beholding Himself in his own Kingdom of Heaven, which was, and is, and ever will be, as unlimited as Himself.

Nature, as well as God, is and must be antecedent to all Creature. For as no seeing Eye could be created, unless there was, antecedently to it, a natural Visibility of Things, so no Creature could come into a Sensibility of any natural Life, unless such a State of Nature was antecedent to it. For no Creature can begin to be in any World, or State of Nature, but by being created out of that World, or State of Nature, into which it is brought to have its Life. For to live in any World, is the same Thing as for a Creature to have all that it is, and has, in and from that World. And therefore, no Creature can come into any other Kind of Existence and Life, but such as can be had out of that World in which it is to live. Neither can there possibly be any other Difference between created Beings, whether animate or inanimate, but what arises from that out of which they were created. Seeing then, that before the Existence of the first Creatures, there was nothing but God and his Kingdom of Heaven, the first Creatures could receive no other Life but that which was in God, because there was nothing living but God, nor any other Life but his, nor could they exist in any other Place or outward State, but the Kingdom of Heaven, because there was none else in Existence; and therefore, the first Creatures must, of all Necessity, be Divine and heavenly both in their inward Life and outward State.

Theogenes. Here then, Theophilus, comes my Question. Where is that Fire and Water, that Life and Death, that is set before the Creature? For as to these first Creatures, nothing is set before them, nothing is within them, or without them, but God and the Kingdom of Heaven.

Theophilus. You should not have said, There is nothing within them, but God and the Kingdom of Heaven. For that which is their own creaturely Nature within them, is not God, nor the Kingdom of Heaven.

It has been already proved to your Satisfaction, that no Creature can be Divine, good and happy, but by having a two-fold Life united in it. And in this twofold Life of the Creature, is Fire and Water, Life and Death, unavoidably set before it. For as its Will works with either of these Lives, so will it find either Fire or Water, Life or Death. If its Will turns from the Life of God, into the creaturely Life, then it enters into a Sensibility of that which is meant by Death and Fire, viz., a wrathful Misery. But if the Will keeps steadily given up to the Deity, then it lives in Possession of that Life and Water, which was its first, and will be its everlasting heavenly Joy and Happiness.

But to explain this Matter something deeper to you, according to the Mystery of all Things opened by God in his chosen Instrument, Jacob Behmen.

You know we have often spoken of eternal Nature, that so sure as there is an eternal God, so sure is it, that there is an eternal Nature, as universal, as unlimited as God Himself, and everywhere working where God is, and therefore, everywhere equally existent, as being his Kingdom of Heaven, or outward Manifestation of the invisible Riches, Powers, and Glories of the Deity.

Before, or without Nature, the Deity is an entire hidden, shut up, unknown, and unknowable Abyss. For Nature is the only Ground, or Beginning of something; there is neither this nor that, no Ground for Conception, no Possibility of Distinction or Difference; there cannot be a Creature to think, nor any Thing to be thought upon, till Nature is in Existence. For all the Properties of Sensibility and sensible Life, every Mode and Manner of Existence, all Seeing, Hearing, Tasting, Smelling, Feeling, all Inclinations, Passions, and Sensations of Joy, Sorrow, Pain, Pleasure, &c., are not in God, but in Nature. And therefore, God is not knowable, not a Thought can begin about Him, till He manifests himself in, and through, and by the Existence of Nature; that is, till there is something that can be seen, understood, distinguished, felt, &c.

And this is eternal Nature, or the Out-Birth of the Deity, called the Kingdom of Heaven, viz., an Infinity, or boundless Opening of the Properties, Powers, Wonders, and Glories of the hidden Deity, and this not once done, but ever doing, ever standing in the same Birth, for ever and ever breaking forth and springing up in new Forms and Openings of the abyssal Deity, in the Powers of Nature. And out of this Ocean of manifested Powers of Nature, the Will of the Deity, created Hosts of heavenly Beings, full of the heavenly Wonders introduced into a Participation of the Infinity of God, to live in an eternal Succession of heavenly Sensations, to see and feel, to taste and find new forms of Delight in an inexhaustible Source of ever-changing and never-ceasing Wonders of the Divine Glory.

Oh Theogenes! What an Eternity is this, out of which, and for which thy eternal Soul was created? What little crawling Things are all that an earthly Ambition can set before Thee? Bear with Patience for a while the Rags of thy earthy Nature, the Veil and Darkness of Flesh and Blood, as the Lot of thy Inheritance from Father Adam, but think nothing worth a Thought, but that which will bring thee back to thy first Glory, and land thee safe in the Region of Eternity.

But to return. Nothing is before this eternal Nature, but the holy supernatural Deity, and every Thing that is after it, is Creature, and has all its creaturely Life and State in it, and from it, either mediately or immediately.

This eternal Nature has seven chief or fountain Properties, that are the Doers, or Workers of every Thing that is done in it, and can have neither more nor less, because it is a Birth from, or a Manifestation of the Deity in Nature. For the Perfection of Nature (as was before said of every Divine and happy Creature) is an Union of two Things, or is a twofold State. It is Nature, and it is God manifested in Nature. Now God is Triune, and Nature is Triune, and hence there arises the Ground of Properties, three and three; and That which brings those three and three into Union, or manifests the Triune God in the Triune Nature, is another Property; so that the glorious Manifestation of the Deity in Nature, can have neither more nor less than seven chief or fountain Properties, from which every Thing that is known, found and felt, in all the Universe of Nature, in all the Variety of Creatures either in Heaven or on Earth, has its only Rise, or Cause, either mediately or immediately.

Theogenes. You say, Theophilus, that the Triune Deity is united or manifested in Triune Nature, and that thence comes the glorious Manifestation of God in seven heavenly Properties, called the Kingdom of Heaven. But how does it appear that this Nature, antecedently to the Entrance of the Deity into it, is Triune? Or what is this Triune Nature, before God is supposed to be in Union with it?

Theophilus. It is barely a DESIRE. It neither is, nor has, nor can be any Thing else but a Desire. For Desire is the only Thing in which the Deity can work, and manifest itself; for God can only come into That which wants and desires Him.

The Deity is an infinite Plenitude, or Fulness of Riches and Powers, in and from itself; and it is only WANT and DESIRE, that are excluded from it, and can have no Existence in it. And here lies the true immutable Distinction between God and Nature, and shows why neither can ever be changed into the other ; it is, because God is an UNIVERSAL ALL ; and Nature or Desire is an UNIVERSAL WANT, viz., to be filled with God.

Now, as Nature can be nothing but a Desire, so nothing is in, or done in any natural Way, but as Desire does it, because Desire is the All of Nature. And, therefore, there is no Strength or Substance, no Power or Motion, no Cause or Effect in Nature, but what is in itself a Desire, or the Working and Effect of it.

This is the true Origin of Attraction, and all its Powers, in this material World. It gives Essence and Substance to all that is Matter, and the Properties of Matter, it holds every Element in its created State ; and not only Earth and Stones, but Light and Air and Motion are under its Dominion. From the Centre to the Circumference of this material System, every Motion, Separation, Union, Vegetation, or Corruption, begins no sooner, goes on no further, than as Attraction works.

Take away Attraction from this material System, and then it has all the Annihilation it can ever possibly have.

Whence now has Attraction this Nature ?

It is solely from hence ; because all Nature, from its Eternity, has been, is, and for ever can be, only a DESIRE, and has nothing in it but the Properties of Desire.

Now the essential, inseparable Properties of DESIRE are three, and can be neither more nor less ; and in this you have that Triunity of Nature which you asked after, and in which the Triune Deity manifests itself. I shall not now prove these three Properties of the Desire, because I have done it at large, and plainly enough elsewhere.*

But to go back now to your Question, Where, or how this Fire and Water, &c., can be found, since God is all Love and Goodness, and his Manifestation in Nature is a mere Kingdom of Heaven. They are to be found in the twofold State of Heaven, and the twofold State of every heavenly Creature.

For seeing that the Perfection of Nature, and the Perfection of the intelligent Creature, consists in one and the same twofold State, you have here the plainest Ground and Reason, why and how every good and happy and new created Being, must, of all Necessity, have Fire and Water, Life and Death, set before it, or put into its Choice.

Because it has it in its Power to turn and give up its Will to either of these Lives, it can turn either to God, or Nature, and therefore must have Life and Death, Fire or Water in its Choice.

* Way to Divine Knowledge ; Spirit of Love, First Part.

Now this twofold Life, which makes the Perfection of Nature and Creature, is, in other Words, signified by the seven heavenly Properties of Nature; for when God is manifested in Nature, all its seven Properties are in an heavenly State.

But in these seven Properties, though all heavenly, lies the Ground of Fire and Water, &c., because a Division or Separation can be made in them by the Will of the Creature. For the three first Properties are as distinct from the four following ones, as God is distinct from That which wants God. And these three first Properties are the Essence or whole Being of that Desire, which is, and is called Nature, or that which wants God.

When therefore the Will of the Creature turns from God into Nature, it breaks, or looses the Union of the seven heavenly Properties; because Nature, as distinct from God, has only the three first Properties in it. And such a Creature, having broken or lost the Union of the seven Properties, is fallen into the three first, which is meant by Fire and Death. For when the three first Properties have lost God, or their Union with the four following ones, then they are mere Nature, which, in its whole Being, is nothing else but the Strength and Rage of Hunger, an Excess of Want, of Self-Torment, and Self-Vexation. Surely now, my Friend, this Matter is enough explained.

Theogenes. Indeed, Theophilus, I am quite satisfied; for by this Account which you have given of the Ground of Nature, and its true and full Distinction from God, you have struck a most amazing Light into my Mind.

For if Nature is mere Want, and has nothing in it but a Strength of Want, generated from the three self-tormenting Properties of a Desire, if God is all Love, Joy and Happiness, an infinite Plenitude of all Blessings, then the Limits and Bounds of Good and Evil, of Happiness and Misery, are made as visibly distinct, and as certainly to be known, as the Difference between a Circle and a straight Line.

To live to Desire, that is, to Nature, is unavoidably entering into the Region of all Evil and Misery; because Nature has nothing else in it. But, on the other Hand, to die to Desire, that is, to turn from Nature to God, is to be united with the infinite Source of all that is good, and blessed, and happy.

All that I wanted to know, is now cleared up in the greatest Plainness. And I have no Difficulty about those Passages of Scripture, which speak of the Wrath, and Fury, and Vengeance of God. Wrath is his, just as all Nature is his, and yet God is mere Love, that only rules and governs Wrath, as He governs the foaming Waves of the Sea, and the Madness of Storms and Tempests.

The following Propositions are as evidently true, as that two and two are four.

First, That God in his holy Deity is as absolutely free from Wrath and Rage, and as utterly incapable of them, as He is of Thickness, Hardness, and Darkness; because Wrath and Rage belong to nothing else, can exist in nothing else, have Life in nothing else, but in Thickness, Hardness, and Darkness.

Secondly, That all Wrath is Disorder, and can be nowhere but in Nature and Creature, because nothing else is capable of changing from Right to Wrong.

Thirdly, That Wrath can have no Existence even in Nature and Creature, till they have lost their first Perfection which they had from God, and are become that which they should not have been.

Fourthly, That all the Wrath, and Fury, and Vengeance, that ever did, or can break forth in Nature and Creature is, according to the strictest Truth, to be called and looked upon as the Wrath and Vengeance of God, just as the Darkness, as well as the Light is, and is to be called his.

Oh! Theophilus, what a Key have you given me to the right understanding of Scripture!

For when Nature and Creature are known to be the only Theatre of Evil and Disorder, and the holy Deity as that governing Love, which wills nothing but the Removal of all Evil from every Thing, as fast as infinite Wisdom can find Ways of doing it, then whether you read of the raining of Fire and Brimstone, or only Showers of heavenly Manna falling upon the Earth, it is only one and the same Love, working in such different Ways and Diversity of Instruments, as Time, and Place, and Occasion, had made wise, and good, and beneficial.

Pharaoh with his hardened Heart, and St. Paul with his Voice from Heaven, though so contrary to one another, were both of them the chosen Vessels of the same God of Love, because both miraculously taken out of their own State, and made to do all the Good to a blind and wicked World, which they were capable of doing.

And thus, Sir, are all the Treasures of the Wisdom and Goodness of God, hidden in the Letter of Scripture, made the Comfort and Delight of my Soul, and every Thing I read turns itself into a Motive, of loving and adoring the wonderful Working of the Love of God over all the various Changings of Nature and Creature, till all Evil shall be extinguished, and all Disorder go back again to its first harmonious State of Perfection.

Depart from this Idea of God, as an Infinity of mere Love, Wisdom, and Goodness, and then every Thing in the System of Scripture, and the System of Nature, only helps the reasoning Mind to be miserably perplexed, as well with the Mercies, as with the Judgments of God.

But when God is known to be omnipotent Love, that can do nothing but Works of Love, and that all Nature and Creature are only under the Operation of Love, as a distempered Person under the Care of a kind and skilful Physician, who seeks nothing but the perfect Recovery of his Patient, then whatever is done, whether a severe Caustic, or a pleasant Cordial is ordered, that is, whether because of its Difference, it may have the different Name of Mercy or Judgment, yet all is equally well done, because Love is the only Doer of both, and does both, from the same Principle, and for the same End.

Theophilus. Oh Theogenes, Now you are according to your Name, you are born of God. For when Love is the Triune God that you serve, worship, and adore, the only God, in whom you desire to live and move and have your Being, then of a Truth God dwells in you, and you in God.

I shall now only add this one Word more, to strengthen and confirm your right understanding of all that is said of the Wrath, or Rage of God in the Scriptures.

The Psalmist, you know, says thus of God, 'He giveth forth his Ice like Morsels, and who is able to abide his Frosts?' Now, Sir, if you know how to explain this Scripture, and can show how Ice and Frost can truly be ascribed to God, as His, though absolutely impossible to have any Existence in Him, then you have an easy and unerring Key, how the Wrath, and Fury, and Vengeance, that anywhere falls upon any Creature is, and may be truly ascribed to God, as his, though Fury and Vengeance are as inconsistent with, and as impossible to have any Existence in the Deity, as Lumps of Ice, or the Hardness of intolerable Frosts.

Now in this Text, setting forth the Horror of God's Ice and Frost, you have the whole Nature of Divine Wrath set before you. Search all the Scriptures, and you will nowhere find any Wrath of God, but what is bounded in Nature, and is so described, as to be itself a Proof, that it has no Existence in the holy supernatural Deity.

Thus says the Psalmist again, 'The Earth trembled and 'quaked, the very Foundations also of the Hills shook, and 'were removed, because he was wrath.' No Wrath here but in the Elements.

Again, 'There went a Smoke out in his Presence, and a consuming Fire out of his Mouth, so that Coals were kindled at it. 'The Springs of Water were seen, and the Foundations of the 'round World were discovered at thy Chiding, O Lord, at the 'blasting of the Breath of thy Displeasure.'

Now every Working of the Wrath of God, described in Scripture, is strictly of a Piece with this, it relates to a Wrath solely confined to the Powers and working Properties of Nature, that lives and moves only in the Elements of the fallen World, and no more reaches the Deity, than Ice or Frost do.

The Apostle says, 'Avenge not yourselves, for it is written, 'Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord.'

This is another full Proof, that Wrath or Vengeance is not in the holy Deity itself, as a Quality of the Divine Mind; for if it was, then Vengeance would belong to every Child of God, that was truly born of Him, or he could not have the Spirit of his Father, or be perfect, as his Father in Heaven is perfect.

But if Vengeance only belongs to God, and can only be so affirmed of Him, as Ice and Frost are His, and belong to Him; if it has no other Manner of Working, than as when it is said, 'He sent out his Arrows and scattered them, He cast forth 'Lightnings and destroyed them'; then it is certain, that the Divine Vengeance is only in fallen Nature, and its disordered Properties, and is no more in the Deity itself, than Hailstones and Coals of Fire.

And here you have the true Reason, why Revenge or Vengeance is not allowed to Man; it is because Vengeance can only work in the evil, or disordered Properties of fallen Nature. But Man being Himself a Part of fallen Nature, and subject to its disordered Properties, is not allowed to work with them, because it would be stirring up Evil in Himself, and that is his Sin of Wrath, or Revenge.

God therefore reserves all Vengeance to Himself, not because wrathful Revenge is a Temper or Quality that can have any Place in the holy Deity, but because the holy supernatural Deity, being free from all the Properties of Nature, whence partial Love and Hatred spring, and being in Himself nothing but an Infinity of Love, Wisdom, and Goodness, He alone knows how to over-rule the Disorders of Nature, and so to repay Evil with Evil, that the highest Good may be promoted by it.

To say, therefore, that Vengeance is to be reserved to God, is only saying, in other Words, that all the Evils in Nature are to be reserved and turned over to the Love of God, to be healed by his Goodness. And every Act of what is called Divine Vengeance, recorded in Scripture, may, and ought, with the greatest Strictness of Truth, to be called an Act of the Divine Love.

If Sodom flames and smokes with stinking Brimstone, it is the Love of God that kindled it, only to extinguish a more horrible Fire. It was one and the same infinite Love, when it preserved Noah in the Ark, when it turned Sodom into a burning Lake, and overwhelmed Pharaoh in the Red Sea. And if God commanded the Waters to destroy the old World, it was as high an Act of the same infinite Love towards that Chaos, as when it said to the first Darkness upon the Face of the Deep, 'Let there be Light, and there was Light.'

Not a Word in all Scripture concerning the Wrath, or Vengeance of God, but directly teaches you these two infallible Truths. First, That all the Wrath spoken of, works nowhere, but in the wrathful, disordered Elements and Properties of fallen Nature. Secondly, That all the Power that God exercises over them, all that He does at any Time, or on any Occasion with, or by them, is only and solely the one Work of his unchangeable Love toward Man.

Just as the good Physician acts from only one and the same good Will towards his Patient, when he orders bitter and sour, as when he gives the pleasant Draughts.

Now, suppose the good Physician to have such intense Love for you, as to disregard your Aversion towards them, and to force such Medicines down your Throat, as can alone save your Life; suppose he should therefore call himself your severe Physician, and declare himself so rigid towards you, that he would not spare you, nor suffer you, go where you would, to escape his bitter Draughts, till all Means of your Recovery were tried, then you would have a true and just, though low Representation of those bitter Cups, which God in his Wrath forces fallen Man to drink.

Now as the bitter, sour, hot, &c., in the Physician's Draughts, are not Declarations of any the like Bitterness, Heat, or Sourness in the Spirit of the Physician that uses them, but are Things quite distinct from the State and Spirit of his Mind, and only manifest his Care and Skill in the right Use of such Materials towards the Health of his Patient; so in like Manner, all the Elements of fallen Nature are only so many outward Materials in the Hands of God, formed, and mixed into Heat and Cold, into fruitful and pestilential Effects, into Serenity of Seasons, and blasting Tempests, into Means of Health and Sickness, of Plenty and Poverty, just as the Wisdom and Goodness of Providence sees to be the fittest to deliver Man from the miserable Malady of his earthly Nature, and help him to become heavenly-minded.

If therefore, it would be great Folly to suppose Bitterness, or Heat, &c., to be in the Spirit of the Physician, when he gives a hot, or bitter Medicine, much greater Folly surely must it be, to suppose, that Wrath, Vengeance, or any pestilential Quality, is in the Spirit of the holy Deity, when a Wrath, a Vengeance, or Pestilence is stirred up in the fallen Elements by the Providence of God, as a proper Remedy for the Evil of this, or that Time, or Occasion.

Hear these decisive Words of Scripture, 'Whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth.' What a Grossness therefore of Mistake is it to conclude, that Wrath must be in the Deity, because He chastens and threatens Chastisement, when you have God's own Word for it, that nothing but his Love chastens? Again, Thus saith the Lord, 'I have smitten you with Blasting and Mildew. Your Vineyards, and your Fig-Trees, and your Olive-Yards, did the Palmer-Worm devour,' and then the Love that did this makes this Complaint, 'Yet ye have not returned to me.' Again, 'Pestilence have I sent among you; I have made the Stink of your Tents come up even in your Nostrils,' &c. And then the same Love that did this, that made this Use of the disordered Elements, makes the same Complaint again, 'Yet have ye not returned to me.'*

Now, Sir, How is it possible for Words to give stronger Proof, that God is mere Love, that he has no Will towards fallen Man but to bless him with works of Love, and this as certainly, when he turns the Air into a Pestilence, as when he makes the same Air rain down Manna upon the Earth, since neither the one nor the other are done, but as Time, and Place, and Occasion, render them the fittest Means to make Man return and adhere to God, that is, to come out of all the Evil and Misery of his fallen State? What can infinite Love do more, or what can it do to give greater Proof, that all that it does proceeds from Love? And here you are to observe, that this is not said from human Conjecture, or any imaginary Idea of God, but is openly asserted, constantly affirmed, and repeated in the plainest Letter of Scripture. But this Conversation has been long enough. And I hope we shall meet again To-morrow.

The End of the First DIALOGUE.

* Amos iv. 9, 10.

THE SECOND DIALOGUE.

EUSEBIUS. There is no Occasion to resume any Thing of our Yesterday's Discourse. The following Propositions are sufficiently proved.

First, That God is an abyssal Infinity of Love, Wisdom, and Goodness; that He ever was, and ever will be one and the same unchangeable Will to all Goodness, and Works of Love, as incapable of any Sensibility of Wrath, or acting under it, as of falling into Pain or Darkness, and acting under their Direction.

Secondly, That all Wrath, Strife, Discord, Hatred, Envy, or Pride, &c., all Heat and Cold, all Enmity in the Elements, all Thickness, Grossness, and Darkness, are Things that have no Existence but in and from the Sphere of fallen Nature.

Thirdly, That all the Evils of Contrariety and Disorder in fallen Nature, are only as so many Materials in the Hands of infinite Love and Wisdom, all made to work in their different Ways, as far as is possible, to one and the same End, viz., to turn temporal Evil into eternal Good.

So that whether you look at Light or Darkness, at Night or Day, at Fire or Water, at Heaven or Earth, at Life or Death, at Prosperity or Adversity, at blasting Winds or heavenly Dews, at Sickness or Health, you see nothing but such a State of Things, in and through which, the supernatural Deity wills and seeks the Restoration of fallen Nature and Creature to their first Perfection.

It now only remains, that the Doctrine of Scripture concerning the Atonement, necessary to be made by the Life, Sufferings, and Death of Christ be explained, or in other Words, the true Meaning of that Righteousness or Justice of God, that must have Satisfaction done to it, before Man can be reconciled to God.

For this Doctrine is thought by some to favour the Opinion of a Wrath, and Resentment in the Deity itself.

Theophilus. This Doctrine, Eusebius, of the Atonement made by Christ, and the absolute Necessity, and real Efficacy of it, to satisfy the Righteousness, or Justice of God, is the very Ground and Foundation of Christian Redemption, and the Life and Strength of every Part of it. But then, this very Doctrine is so far from favouring the Opinion of a Wrath in the Deity itself, that it is an absolute full Denial of it, and the strongest of Demonstrations, that the Wrath, or Resentment, that is to be pacified or atoned, cannot possibly be in the Deity itself.

For this Wrath that is to be atoned and pacified, is, in its whole Nature, nothing else but Sin, or Disorder in the Creature. And when Sin is extinguished in the Creature, all the Wrath that is between God and the Creature is fully atoned. Search all the Bible, from one End to the other, and you will find, that the Atonement of that which is called the Divine Wrath or Justice, and the extinguishing of Sin in the Creature, are only different Expressions for one and the same individual Thing. And therefore, unless you will place Sin in God, that Wrath, that is to be atoned or pacified, cannot be placed in Him.

The whole Nature of our Redemption has no other End, but to remove or extinguish the Wrath that is between God and Man. When this is removed, Man is reconciled to God. Therefore, where the Wrath is, or where that is which wants to be atoned, there is that which is the blamable Cause of the Separation between God and Man; there is that which Christ came into the World to extinguish, to quench, or atone. If therefore this Wrath, which is the blamable Cause of the Separation between God and Man, is in God Himself; if Christ died to atone, or extinguish a Wrath that was got into the holy Deity itself; then it must be said, that Christ made an Atonement for God, and not for Man; that He died for the Good and Benefit of God, and not of Man; and that which is called our Redemption, ought rather to be called the Redemption of God, as saving and delivering Him, and not Man, from his own Wrath.

This Blasphemy is unavoidable, if you suppose that Wrath, for which Christ died, to be a Wrath in God Himself.

Again, The very Nature of Atonement absolutely shows, that that which is to be atoned cannot possibly be in God, nor even in any good Being. For Atonement implies the Alteration, or Removal of something that is not as it ought to be. And therefore every Creature, so long as it is good, and has its proper State of Goodness, neither wants, nor can admit of any Atonement, because it has nothing in it that wants to be altered, or taken out of it. And therefore Atonement cannot possibly have any Place in God, because nothing in God either wants, or can receive Alteration; neither can it have Place in any Creature, but so far as it has lost, or altered that which it had from God, and is fallen into Disorder; and then, that which brings this Creature back to its first State, which alters that which is wrong in it, and takes its Evil out of it, is its true and proper Atonement.

Water is the proper Atonement of the Rage of Fire; and that which changes a Tempest into a Calm is its true Atonement.

And therefore as sure as Christ is a Propitiation and an Atonement, so sure is it, that that which he does, as a Propitiation and Atonement, can have no Place, but in altering that Evil and Disorder which, in the State and Life of the fallen Creature, wants to be altered.

Suppose the Creature not fallen, and then there is no Room nor Possibility for Atonement; a plain and full Proof, that the Work of Atonement is nothing else, but the altering or quenching that which is Evil in the fallen Creature.

Hell, Wrath, Darkness, Misery, and eternal Death, mean the same Thing through all Scripture, and these are the only Things from which we want to be redeemed; and where there is nothing of Hell, there there is nothing of Wrath, nor any Thing that wants, or can admit of the Benefits of the Atonement made by Christ.

Either, therefore, all Hell is in the Essence of the holy Deity, or nothing that wants to be atoned by the Merits and Death of Christ, can possibly be in the Deity itself.

The Apostle says, that 'we are by Nature Children of Wrath'; the same Thing as when the Psalmist says, 'I was shapen in Wickedness, and in Sin hath my Mother conceived me.' And therefore that Wrath which wants the Atonement of the Sufferings, Blood and Death of Christ, is no other than that Sin, or sinful State, in which we are naturally born. But now, if this Wrath could be supposed to be in the Deity itself, then it would follow, that by being by Nature Children of Wrath, we should thereby be the true Children of God, we should not want any Atonement, or new Birth from above, to make us Partakers of the Divine Nature, because that Wrath that was in us would be our Dwelling in God, and he in us.

Again, All Scripture teaches us, That God wills and desires the Removal, or Extinction of that Wrath, which is betwixt God and the Creature; and therefore, all Scripture teaches, that the Wrath is not in God; for God cannot will the Removal, or Alteration of any Thing that is in Himself; this is as impossible, as for Him to will the Extinction of his own Omnipotence. Nor can there be any Thing in God, contrary to, or against his own Will; and yet, if God wills the Extinction of a Wrath that is in Himself, it must be in Him, contrary to, or against his own Will.

This, I presume, is enough to show you, that the Atonement made by Christ is itself the greatest of all Proofs, that it was not to atone or extinguish any Wrath in the Deity itself; nor, indeed, any Way to affect, or alter any Quality, or Temper in the Divine Mind, but purely and solely to overcome and remove all that Death and Hell, and Wrath, and Darkness, that had opened itself in the Nature, Birth, and Life of fallen Man.

Eusebius. The Truth of all this is not to be denied. And yet it is as true, that all our Systems of Divinity give quite another Account of this most important Matter. The Satisfaction of Christ is represented as a Satisfaction made to a wrathful Deity; and the Merit of the Sufferings and Death of Christ, as that which could only avail with God, to give up his own Wrath, and think of Mercy towards Man. Nay, what is still worse, if possible, the Ground, and Nature, and Efficacy of this great Transaction between God and Man, is often explained by Debtor and Creditor: Man, as having contracted a Debt with God that he could not pay, and God, as having a Right to insist upon the Payment of it; and, therefore, only to be satisfied by receiving the Death and Sacrifice of Christ, as a valuable Consideration, instead of the Debt that was due to Him from Man.

Theophilus. Hence you may see, Eusebius, how unreasonably Complaint has been sometimes made against the Appeal, the Spirit of Prayer, &c., as introducing a Philosophy into the Doctrines of the Gospel, not enough supported by the Letter of Scripture; though every Thing there asserted has been over and over shown to be well grounded on the Letter of Scripture, and necessarily included in the most fundamental Doctrines of the Gospel.

Yet they who make this Complaint, blindly swallow a Vanity of Philosophy in the most important part of Gospel Religion, which not only has less Scripture for it than the Infallibility of the Pope, but is directly contrary to the plain Letter of every single Text of Scripture that relates to this Matter: As I will now show you.

First, The Apostle says, 'God so loved the World, that He gave his only begotten Son, that all who believe in Him should not perish but have everlasting Life.' What becomes now of the Philosophy of Debtor and Creditor, of a Satisfaction made by Christ to a Wrath in God; Is it not the grossest of all Fictions, and in full Contrariety to the plain written Word of God? 'God so loved the World;' behold the Degree of it? But when did He so love it? Why, before it was redeemed, before He sent, or gave his only Son to be the Redeemer of it. Here you see, that all Wrath in God, antecedent to our Redemption, or the Sacrifice of Christ for us, is utterly excluded; there is no Possibility for the Supposition of it, it is as absolutely denied as Words can do it. And therefore the infinite Love, Mercy and Compassion of God towards fallen Man, are not purchased, or procured for us by the Death of Christ, but the Incarnation and Sufferings of Christ come from, and are given to us by the infinite antecedent Love of God for us, and are the gracious Effects of his own Love and Goodness towards us.

It is needless to show you, how constantly this same Doctrine is asserted and repeated by all the Apostles.

Thus says St. John again, 'In this was manifested the Love of God towards us, because He sent his only begotten Son into the World, that we might live through him.' Again, 'This is the Record, that God hath given unto us eternal Life; and this Life is in his Son.' Again, 'God,' says St. Paul, 'was in Christ, reconciling the World unto Himself, not imputing their Trespases to them.' Which is repeated, and further opened in these Words, 'Giving Thanks unto the Father, who hath made us meet to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light, who hath delivered us from the Power of Darkness, and hath translated us into the Kingdom of his dear Son.'* And again, 'Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual Blessings in heavenly Places in Christ.†

How great therefore, Eusebius, is the Error, how total the Disregard of Scripture, and how vain the Philosophy, which talks of a Wrath in God antecedent to our Redemption, or of a Debt which he could not forgive us, till he had received a Valuable Consideration for it, when all Scriptures from Page to Page tells us, that all the Mercy and Blessing and Benefits of Christ, as our Saviour, are the free antecedent Gift of God Himself to us, and bestowed upon us for no other Reason, from no other Motive, but the Infinity of his own Love towards us, agreeable to what the Evangelical Prophet says of God, 'I am He that blotteth out Transgressions for my own sake,‡ that is, not for any Reason or Motive that can be laid before me, but because I am Love itself, and my own Nature is my immutable Reason, why nothing but Works of Love, Blessing, and Goodness, can come from me.

Look we now at the Scripture Account of the Nature of the Atonement and Satisfaction of Christ, and this will further show us, that it is not to atone, or alter any Quality, or Temper in the Divine Mind, nor for the Sake of God, but purely and solely to atone, to quench, and overcome that Death, and Wrath, and Hell, under the Power of which Man was fallen.

'As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive.' This is the whole Work, the whole Nature, and the sole End of Christ's Sacrifice of Himself; and there is not a Syllable in Scripture, that gives you any account of it: It all consists, from the Beginning to the End, in carrying on the one Work of Regeneration; and therefore the Apostle says, 'The first Adam was made a

* Col. i. 12, 13.

† Eph. i. 3.

‡ Isa. xliiii. 25.

‘living Soul, but the last or Second Adam was made a Quicken‘ing Spirit,’ because sent into the World by God, to quicken and revive that Life from above which we lost in Adam. And he is called our Ransom, our Atonement, &c., for no other Reason, but because that which He did and suffered in our fallen Nature, was as truly an efficacious Means of our being born again to a new heavenly Life, of Him, and from Him, as that which Adam did, was the true and natural Cause of our being born in Sin, and the Impurity of bestial Flesh and Blood.

And as Adam, by what He did, may be truly said to have purchased our Misery and Corruption, to have brought Death for us, and to have sold us into a Slavery under the World, the Flesh, and the Devil, though all that we have from him, or suffer by him, is only the inward working of his own Nature and Life within us; so, according to the plain meaning of the Words, Christ may be said to be our Price, our Ransom, and Atonement, though all that He does for us, as Buying, Ransom, and Redeeming us, is done wholly and solely by a Birth of his own Nature and Spirit brought to Life in us.

The Apostle says, ‘Christ died for our Sins.’ Thence it is, that He is the great Sacrifice for Sin, and its true Atonement.
But how and why is he so? the Apostle tells you in these Words, ‘The Sting of Death is Sin.—But Thanks be to God, ‘who giveth us the Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.’ And therefore Christ is the Atonement of our Sins when by and from Him, living in us, we have Victory over our Sinful Nature.

The Scriptures frequently say, Christ gave himself for us. But what is the full Meaning, Effect, and Benefit, of his thus giving Himself for us? The Apostle puts this out of all Doubt, when he says, ‘Jesus Christ, who gave Himself for us, that He might ‘redeem us from all Iniquity, and purify to Himself a peculiar ‘People;—that He might deliver us from this present evil World,— ‘from the Curse of the Law,—from the Power of Satan,—from
‘the Wrath to come:’ or as the Apostle says in other Words, ‘that He might be made unto us, Wisdom, Righteousness, and ‘Sanctification.’

The whole Truth therefore of the Matter is plainly this, Christ given for us, is neither more nor less, than Christ given into us.
And he is in no other Sense, our full, perfect, and sufficient Atonement, than as his Nature and Spirit are born, and formed in us, which so purge us from our Sins, that we are thereby in Him, and by Him dwelling in us, become new Creatures, having our Conversation in Heaven.

As Adam is truly our Defilement and Impurity, by his Birth in us, so Christ is our Atonement and Purification, by our being born again of Him, and having thereby quickened and revived in us that first Divine Life, which was extinguished in Adam. And therefore, as Adam purchased Death for us, just so in the same Manner, in the same Degree, and in the same Sense, Christ purchases Life for us. And each of them solely by their own inward Life within us.

This is the one Scripture Account of the whole Nature, the sole End, and full Efficacy of all that Christ did, and suffered for us. It is all comprehended in these two Texts of Scripture. (1) 'That Christ was manifested to destroy the Works of the 'Devil.' (2) 'That as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be 'made alive.' From the Beginning to the End of Christ's atoning Work, no other Power is ascribed to it, nothing else is intended by it, as an Appeaser of Wrath, but the destroying of all that in Man which comes from the Devil; no other Merits, or Value, or infinite Worth, than that of its infinite Ability, and Sufficiency to quicken again in all human Nature, that Heavenly Life that died in Adam.

Eusebius. Though all that is here said, seems to have both the Letter and Spirit of Scripture on its Side, yet I am afraid it will be thought not enough to assert the infinite Value and Merits of our Saviour's Sufferings. For it is the common Opinion of Doctors, that the Righteousness or Justice of God must have Satisfaction done to it; and that nothing could avail with God, as a Satisfaction, but the infinite Worth and Value of the Sufferings of Christ.

Theophilus. It is true, Eusebius, that this is often, and almost always thus asserted in human Writers, but it is neither the Language, nor the Doctrine of Scripture.

Not a Word is there said of a Righteousness or Justice, as an Attribute in God, that must be satisfied; or that the Sacrifice of Christ, is that which satisfies the Righteousness that is in God Himself

It has been sufficiently proved to you, that God wanted not to be reconciled to fallen Man; that He never was anything else towards Him but Love; and that his Love brought forth the whole Scheme of his Redemption. Thence it is, that the Scriptures do not say that Christ came into the World to procure us the Divine Favour and good Will, in order to put a Stop to an antecedent righteous Wrath in God towards us. No, the Reverse of all this is the Truth, viz., that Christ and his whole mediatorial Office came purely and solely from God, already so reconciled to us, as to bestow an Infinity of Love upon us. 'The 'God of all Grace,' says the Apostle, 'who hath called us to his ‘eternal Glory by Jesus Christ.’* Here you see, Christ is not the Cause or Motive of God’s Mercy towards fallen Man, but God’s own Love for us, his own Desire of our eternal Glory and Happiness, has for that End given us Christ, that we may be made Partakers of it. The same as when it is again said, ‘God ‘was in Christ reconciling the World to Himself;’ that is, calling, and raising it out of its ungodly and miserable State.

Thus, all the Mystery of our Redemption proclaims nothing but a God of Love towards fallen Man. It was the Love of God, that could not behold the Misery of fallen Man, without demanding and calling for his Salvation. It was Love alone, that wanted to have full Satisfaction done to it, and such a Love as could not be satisfied, till all that Glory and Happiness that was lost by the Death of Adam, was fully restored and regained again by the Death of Christ.

Eusebius. But is there not some good Sense, in which Righteousness and Justice may be said to be satisfied by the Atonement and Sacrifice of Christ?

Theophilus. Yes, most certainly there is. But then it is only that Righteousness or Justice that belongs to Man, and ought to be in Him. Now Righteousness, wherever it is to be, has no Mercy in itself; it makes no Condescensions; it is inflexibly rigid; its Demands are inexorable; Prayers, Offerings, and Entreaties have no Effect upon it; it will have nothing but itself; nor will it ever cease its Demands, or take any Thing in lieu of them, as a Satisfaction instead of itself. Thus, ‘Without Holiness,’ says the Apostle, ‘no Man shall see the Lord.’ And again, ‘Nothing ‘that is defiled, or impure, can enter into the Kingdom of ‘Heaven.’ And this is meant by Righteousness being rigid, and having no Mercy; it cannot spare, or have Pity, or hear Entreaty, because all its Demands are righteous, and good, and therefore must be satisfied, or fulfilled.

Now Righteousness has its absolute Demands upon Man, because Man was created righteous, and has lost that original Righteousness, which He ought to have kept in its first Purity. And this is the one, only Righteousness, or Justice, which Christ came into the World to satisfy, not by giving some highly valuable Thing, as a Satisfaction to it, but by bringing back, or raising up again in all human Nature, that Holiness or Righteousness, which originally belonged to it. For to satisfy Righteousness, means neither more nor less than to fulfil it. Nor can Righteousness want to have Satisfaction in any Being, but in that Being, which has fallen from it; nor can it be satisfied, but by restoring, or fulfilling Righteousness in that Being, which had departed from it. And therefore the Apostle says, that 'we are created again unto Righteousness in Christ Jesus.' And this is the one and only Way of Christ's expiating, or taking away the Sins of the World, namely, by restoring to Man his lost Righteousness. For this End, says the Scripture, 'Christ gave Himself for the Church, that He might sanctify and cleanse it, that He might present it to Himself a glorious Church, not having Spot, or Wrinkle, or any such Thing, but that it should be holy, and without Blemish.'*

* 1 Peter v. 10.

This is the one Righteousness, which Christ came into the World to satisfy, by fulfilling it himself, and enabling Man by a new Birth from him to fulfil it. And when all Unrighteousness is removed by Christ from the whole human Nature, then all that Righteousness is satisfied; for the doing of which, Christ poured out his most precious, availing, and meritorious Blood.

Eusebius. Oh Theophilus, the Ground on which you stand must certainly be true. It so easily, so fully solves all Difficulties and Objections, and enables you to give so plain and solid an Account of every Part of our Redemption. This great Point is so fully cleared up to me, that I do not desire another Word about it.

Theophilus. However, Eusebius, I will add a Word or two more upon it, that there may be no Room left, either for misunderstanding, or denying what has been just now said of the Nature of that Righteousness, which must have full Satisfaction done to it by the Atoning and Redeeming Work of Christ. And then you will be fully possessed of these two great Truths. First, That there is no righteous Wrath in the Deity itself, and therefore none to be atoned there. Secondly, That though God is in Himself a mere Infinity of Love, from whom nothing else but Works of Love and Blessing and Goodness can proceed, yet sinful Men are hereby not at all delivered from That which the Apostle calls the Terrors of the Lord, but that all the Threatenings of Woe, Misery, and Punishment, denounced in Scripture against Sin and Sinners, both in this World, and that which is to come, stand all of them in their full Force, and are not in the least Degree weakened, or less to be dreaded, because God is all Love.

Every Thing that God has created, is right and just and good in its Kind, and has its own Righteousness within itself. The Rectitude of its Nature is its only Law; and it has no other Righteousness, but that of continuing in its first State. No Creature is subject to any Pain, or Punishment, or Guilt of Sin, but because it has departed from its first right State, and only does, and can feel the painful Loss of its own first Perfection. And every intelligent Creature, that departs from the State of its Creation, is unrighteous, evil, and full of its own Misery. And there is no Possibility for any disordered fallen Creature to be free from its own Misery and Pain, till it is again in its first State of Perfection. This is the certain and infallible Ground of the absolute Necessity, either of a perfect Holiness in this Life, or of a further Purification after Death, before Man can enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.

* Eph. v. 25—27.

Now this Pain and Misery, which is inseparable from the Creature that is not in that State in which it ought to be, and in which it was created, is nothing else but the painful State of the Creature for Want of its own proper Righteousness, as Sickness is the painful State of the Creature for Want of its own proper Health.

No other Righteousness, or other Justice, no other severe Vengeance, demands Satisfaction, or torments the Sinner, but that very Righteousness, which once was in Him, which still belongs to Him, and therefore will not suffer Him to have any Rest or Peace, till it is again in Him as it was at the first. All therefore that Christ does, as an Atonement for Sin, or as a Satisfaction to Righteousness, is all done in, and to, and for Man, and has no other Operation, but that of renewing the fallen Nature of Man, and raising it up into its first State of original Righteousness. And if this Righteousness, which belongs solely to Man, and wants no Satisfaction, but that of being restored and fulfilled in the human Nature, is sometimes called the Righteousness of God, it is only so called, because it is a Righteousness which Man had originally from God in and by his Creation ; and therefore, as it comes from God, and has its whole Nature and Power of Working as it does from God, it may very justly be called God's Righteousness.

Agreeably to this Way of ascribing that to God, which is only in the State and Condition of Man, the Psalmist says of God, 'Thine Arrows stick fast in me, and thy Hand presseth me sore.' And yet nothing else, or more is meant by it, than when he says, 'My Sins have taken such Hold of me, that I am not able to look up.—My Iniquities are gone over my Head, and are like a sore Burden too heavy for me to bear.'

Now, whether you call this State of Man the Burden of his Sins and Wickedness, or the Arrows of the Almighty, and the Weight of God's Hand, they mean but one and the same Thing, which can only be called by these different Names, for no other Reason but this, because Man's own original Righteousness, which he had from God, makes his sinful State a Pain and Torment to him, and lies heavy upon him in every Commission of Sin. And when the Psalmist again says, 'Take thy Plague away from me, I am even consumed by means of thy heavy Hand;' it is only praying to be delivered from his own Plague, and praying for the same Thing as when he says, in other Words, 'Make me a clean Heart, O God, and renew a right Spirit within me.'

Now this Language of Scripture, which teaches us to call the Pains and Torments of our Sins, the Arrows, Darts, and Strokes of God's Hand upon us, which calls us to own the Power, Presence, and Operation of God, in all that we feel and find in our own inward State, is the Language of the most exalted Piety, and highly suitable to that Scripture which tells us, That 'In God we live, and move, and have our Being.' For by teaching us to find, and own the Power and Operation of God in every Thing that passes within us, it keeps us continually turned to God for all that we want, and by all that we feel within ourselves, and brings us to this best of all Confessions, that Pain, as well as Peace of Mind, is the Effect and Manifestation of God's infinite Love and Goodness towards us.

For we could not have this Pain and Sensibility of the Burden of Sin, but because the Love and Goodness of God made us originally righteous and happy; and, therefore, all the Pains and Torments of Sin come from God's first Goodness towards us, and are in themselves merely and truly the Arrows of his Love, and his blessed Means of drawing us back to that first righteous State, in and for which his first and never ceasing Love created us.

Eusebius. The Matter, therefore, plainly stands thus. There is no righteous Wrath, or vindictive Justice in the Deity itself, which, as a Quality, or Attribute of Resentment in the Divine Mind, wants to be contented, atoned, or satisfied; but Man's original Righteousness, which was once his Peace, and Happiness, and Rest in God, is by the Fall of Adam become his Tormentor his Plague, that continually exercises its good Vengeance upon him, till it truly regains its first State in him.

Secondly, Man must be under this Pain, Punishment, and Vengeance to all Eternity; there is no Possibility, in the Nature of the Thing, for it to be otherwise, though God be all Love, unless Man's lost Righteousness be fully again possessed by Him. And therefore the Doctrine of God's being all Love, of having no Wrath in Himself, has nothing in it to abate the Force of those Scriptures which threaten Punishment to Sinners, or to make them less fearful of living and dying in their Sins.

Theophilus. What you say, Eusebius, is very true; but then it is but half the Truth of this Matter. You should have added, that this Doctrine is the one Ground, and only Reason, why the Scriptures abound with so many Declarations of Woe, Misery, and Judgments, sometimes executed, and sometimes only threatened by God; and why all Sinners, to the End of the World, must know and feel, 'That the Wrath of God is 'revealed from Heaven against all Ungodliness and Unrighteousness, and that Indignation and Wrath, Tribulation and Anguish, 'must be upon every Soul of Man that doth Evil.'*

For all these Things, which the Apostle elsewhere calls 'the 'Terrors of the Lord,' have no Ground, nothing that calls for them, nothing that vindicates the Fitness and Justice of them, either with Regard to God or Man, but this one Truth, viz., That God is in Himself a mere infinity of Love, from whom nothing but outflowings of Love and Goodness can come forth from Eternity to Eternity. For if God is all Love, if he wills nothing towards fallen Man but his full Deliverance from the blind Slavery and Captivity of his earthly, bestial Nature, then every kind of Punishment, Distress, and Affliction, that can extinguish the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of this Life, may, and ought to be expected from God, merely because he is all Love and good Will towards fallen Man.

To say, therefore, as some have said, If God is all Love towards fallen Man, how can he threaten, or chastise Sinners? This is no better than saying, If God is all Goodness in Himself, and towards Man, how can He do that in and to Man, which is for his Good? As absurd as to say, If the able Physician is all Love, Goodness, and good Will towards his Patients, how can he blister, purge, or scarify them, how can he order one to be trepanned, and another to have a Limb cut off? Nay, so absurd is this Reasoning, that if it could be proved, that God had no Chastisement for Sinners, the very Want of this Chastisement would be the greatest of all Proofs, that God was not all Love and Goodness towards Man.

The meek, merciful, and compassionate Jesus, who had no Errand in this World but to bless and save Mankind, said, If thy right Eye, or thy right Hand offend thee, pluck out the one, cut off the other, and cast them from thee. And that He said all this from mere Love, He adds, It is better for thee to do this, than that thy whole Body should be cast into Hell. Therefore, if the Holy Jesus had been wanting in this Severity, He had been wanting in true Love towards Man.

And therefore the pure, mere Love of God, is that alone from which Sinners are justly to expect from God, that no Sin will pass unpunished, but that his Love will visit them with every Calamity and Distress, that can help to break and purify the bestial Heart of Man, and awaken in him true Repentance and Conversion to God. It is Love alone in the holy Deity, that will allow no Peace to the wicked, nor ever cease its Judgments, till every Sinner is forced to confess, That it is good for him that he has been in Trouble, and thankfully own, That not the Wrath, but the Love of God, has plucked out that right Eye, cut off that right Hand, which he ought to have done, but would not do, for himself and his own Salvation.

* Rom. i. 18; ii. 8.

Again, This Doctrine that allows of no Wrath in the Divine Mind, but places it all in the evil State of fallen Nature and Creature, has every Thing in it that can prove to Man the dreadful Nature of Sin, and the absolute Necessity of totally departing from it. It leaves no Room for Self-Delusion, but puts an End to every false Hope, or vain seeking for Relief in any Thing else, but the total Extinction of Sin. And this it effectually does, by showing, that Damnation is no foreign, separate, or imposed State, that is brought in upon us, or adjudged to us by the Will of God, but is the inborn, natural, essential State of our own disordered Nature, which is absolutely impossible, in the Nature of the Thing, to be any Thing else but our own Hell, both here and hereafter, unless all Sin be separated from us, and Righteousness be again made our natural State, by a Birth of itself in us. And all this, not because God will have it so, by an arbitrary Act of his sovereign Will, but because he cannot change his own Nature, or make any Thing to be happy and blessed, but only that which has its proper Righteousness, and is of one Will and Spirit with Himself.

If then every Creature that has lost, or is without the true Rectitude of its Nature, must as such, of all Necessity, be absolutely separated from God, and necessarily under the Pain and Misery of a Life that has lost all its own natural Good; if no Omnipotence, or Mercy, or Goodness of God, can make it to be otherwise, or give any Relief to the Sinner, but by a total Extinction of Sin by a Birth of Righteousness in the Soul, then it fully appears, that according to this Doctrine, every Thing in God, and Nature, and Creature, calls the Sinner to an absolute Renunciation of all Sin, as the one only possible Means of Salvation, and leaves no Room for him to deceive himself with the Hopes that any Thing else will do instead of it. Vainly therefore is it said, That if God be all Love, the Sinner is let loose from the dreadful Apprehensions of living and dying in his Sins.

On the other Hand, deny this Doctrine, and say, with the current of scholastic Divines, That Sin must be doomed to eternal Pain and Death, unless a supposed Wrath, in the Mind of the Deity, be first atoned and satisfied; and that Christ's Death was that valuable Gift, or Offering made to God, by which alone he could be moved to lay aside, or extinguish his own Wrath towards fallen Man; say this, and then you open a wide Door for Licentiousness and Infidelity in some, and superstitious Fears in others.

For if the Evil, the Misery, and sad Effects of Sin, are placed in a Wrath in the Divine Mind, what can this beget in the Minds of the pious, but superstitious Fears about a supposed Wrath in God which they can never know when it is, or is not atoned? Every Kind of Superstition has its Birth from this Belief, and cannot well be otherwise. And as to the Licentious, who want to stifle all Fears of gratifying all their Passions, this Doctrine has a natural Tendency to do this for them. For if they are taught, that the Hurt and Misery of Sin, is not its own natural State, not owing to its own Wrath and Disorder, but to a Wrath in the Deity, how easy is it for them to believe, either that God may not be so full of Wrath as is given out, or that he may overcome it himself, and not keep the Sinner eternally in a Misery that is not his own, but wholly brought upon him from without, by a Resentment in the Divine Mind.

Again, This Account which the Schools give of the Sacrifice of Christ, made to atone a Wrath in the Deity by the infinite Value of Christ's Death, is that alone which helps Socinians, Deists and Infidels of all Kinds, to such Cavils and Objections to the Mystery of our Redemption, as neither have, nor can be silenced by the most able Defenders of that scholastic Fiction. The Learning of a Grotius or Stillingfleet, when defending such an Account of the Atonement and Satisfaction, rather increases than lessens the Objections to this Mystery: But if you take this Matter as it truly is in itself, viz., That God is in Himself all Love and Goodness, therefore can be nothing else but all Love and Goodness towards fallen Man, and that fallen Man is subject to no Pain or Misery, either present or to come, but what is the natural, unavoidable, essential Effect of his own evil and disordered Nature, impossible to be altered by himself, and that the infinite, never-ceasing Love of God, has given Jesus Christ in all his Process, as the highest, and only possible Means, that Heaven and Earth can afford, to save Man from himself, from his own Evil, Misery, and Death, and restore to him his original Divine Life; when you look at this Matter in this true Light, then a God, all Love, and an Atonement for Sin by Christ, not made to pacify a Wrath in God, but to bring forth, fulfil, and restore Righteousness in the Creature that had lost it, have every Thing in them that can make the Providence of God adorable, and the State of Man comfortable.

Here all Superstition and superstitious Fears are at once totally cut off, and every Work of Piety is turned into a Work of Love. Here every false Hope of every Kind is taken from the Licentious, they have no Ground left to stand upon: Nothing to trust to, as a Deliverance from Misery, but the one total Abolition of Sin.

The Socinian and the Infidel are here also robbed of all their Philosophy against this Mystery; for as it is not founded upon, does not teach an infinite Resentment, that could only be satisfied by an infinite Atonement, as it stands not upon the Ground of Debtor and Creditor, all their Arguments which suppose it to be such, are quite beside the Matter, and touch nothing of the Truth of this blessed Mystery. For it is the very Reverse of all this, it declares a God, that is all Love; and the Atonement of Christ to be nothing else in itself, but the highest, most natural, and efficacious Means, through all the Possibility of Things, that the infinite Love and Wisdom of God could use, to put an End to Sin, and Death, and Hell, and restore to Man his first Divine State or Life. I say, the most natural, efficacious Means through all the Possibilities of Nature; for there is nothing that is supernatural, however mysterious, in the whole System of our Redemption; every Part of it has its Ground in the Workings and Powers of Nature, and all our Redemption is only Nature set right, or made to be that which it ought to be.

There is nothing that is supernatural, but God alone; every Thing besides Him is from, and subject to the State of Nature: It can never rise out of it, or have anything contrary to it. No Creature can have either Health or Sickness, Good or Evil, or any State either from God, or itself, but strictly according to the Capacities, Powers, and Workings of Nature.

The Mystery of our Redemption, though it comes from the supernatural God, has nothing in it but what is done, and to be done, within the Sphere, and according to the Powers of Nature. There is nothing supernatural in it, or belonging to it, but that supernatural Love and Wisdom which brought it forth, presides over it, and will direct it, till Christ, as a second Adam, has removed and extinguished all that Evil, which the first Adam brought into the human Nature.

And the whole Process of Jesus Christ, from his being the inspoken Word, or Bruiser of the Serpent given to Adam, to his Birth, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension into Heaven, has all its Ground and Reason in this, because nothing else in all the Possibilities of Nature, either in Heaven or on Earth, could begin, carry on, and totally effect Man's Deliverance from the Evil of his own fallen Nature.

Thus is Christ the one, full, sufficient Atonement for the Sin of the whole World, because He is the one only natural Remedy, and possible Cure of all the Evil that is broken forth in Nature, the one only natural Life, and Resurrection of all that Holiness and Happiness that died in Adam. And seeing all this Process of Christ is given to the World, from the supernatural, antecedent, infinite Love of God, therefore it is, that the Apostle says, 'God 'was in Christ reconciling the World to Himself.' And Christ in God, is nothing else in his whole Nature, but that same, certain, and natural Parent of a Redemption to the whole human Nature, as fallen Adam was the certain and natural Parent of a miserable Life to every Man that is descended from him: With this only Difference, that from fallen Adam we are born in Sin, whether we will or no, but we cannot have that new Birth which Christ has all Power to bring forth in us, unless the Will of our Heart closes with it.

But as nothing came to us from Adam, but according to the Powers of Nature, and because he was that which he was with Relation to us; so it is with Christ, and our Redemption by Him: All the Work is grounded in, and proceeds according to the Powers of Nature, or in a Way of natural Efficacy or Fitness to produce its Effects; and every Thing that is found in the Person, Character, and Condition of Christ, is only there as his true and natural Qualification to do all that He came to do, in us, and for us. That is to say, Christ was made to be that which He was; He was a Seed of Life in our first fallen Father; He lived as a Blessing of Promise in the Patriarchs, Prophets, and Israel of God; He was born of a Man of a pure Virgin; He did all that He did, whether as suffering, dying, conquering, rising and ascending into Heaven, only as so many Things, which as naturally, and as truly, according to the Nature of Things, qualified Him to be the Producer, or Quickener of a Divine Life in us, as the State and Condition of Adam qualified him to make us the slavish Children of earthly bestial Flesh and Blood.

This is the comfortable Doctrine of our Redemption; nothing in God but an Infinity of Love and Goodness towards our fallen Condition; nothing in Christ, but that which had its Necessity in the Nature of Things, to make Him able to give, and us to receive our full Salvation from Him.

I will now only add, That from the Beginning of Deism, and from the Time of Socinus, to this Day, not a Socinian or Deist has ever seen or opposed this Mystery in its true State, as is undeniably plain from all their Writings.

A late Writer, who has as much Knowledge, and Zeal, and Wit in the Cause of Deism, as any of his Predecessors, is forced to attack our Redemption by giving this false Account of it.

‘That a perfectly innocent Being, of the highest Order among intelligent Natures, should personate the Offender, and suffer in his Place and Stead, in order to take down the Wrath and Resentment of the Deity against the Criminal, and dispose God to show Mercy to him,—the Deist conceives to be both unnatural, and improper, and therefore not to be ascribed to God without Blasphemy.’

And again, ‘The common Notion of Redemption among Christians, seems to represent the Deity in a disagreeable Light, as implacable and revengeful, &c.’*

What an Arrow is here, I will not say, shot beside the Mark, but shot at nothing! Because nothing of that, which he accuses, is to be found in our Redemption. The God of Christians is so far from being, as he says, implacable and revengeful, that you have seen it proved, from Text to Text, that the whole Form and Manner of our Redemption comes wholly from the free, antecedent, infinite Love and Goodness of God towards fallen Man. That the innocent Christ did not suffer, to quiet an angry Deity, but merely as co-operating, assisting, and uniting with that Love of God, which desired our Salvation. That He did not suffer in our Place or Stead, but only on our Account, which is a quite different Matter. And to say, that He suffered in our Place or Stead, is as absurd, as contrary to Scripture, as to say, that He rose from the Dead, and ascended into Heaven in our Place and Stead, that we might be excused from it. For his Sufferings, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension, are all of them equally on our Account, for our Sake, for our Good and Benefit, but none of them possible to be in our Stead.

And as Scripture and Truth affirm, that He ascended into Heaven for us, though neither Scripture nor Truth will allow it to be in our Place and Stead, so for the same Reasons, it is strictly true, that He suffered, and died for us, though no more in our Place or Stead, nor any more desirable to be so, than his Ascension into Heaven for us should be in our Place and Stead.

I have quoted the above Passage, only to show you, that a Defender of Deism, however acute and ingenious, has not one Objection to the Doctrine of our Redemption, but what is founded on the grossest Ignorance, and total Mistake of the whole Nature of it. But when I lay this gross Ignorance to the Deists' Charge, I do not mean any natural Dulness, Want of Parts, or Incapacity in them to judge aright, but only that something or other, either Men, or Books, or their own Way of Life, has hindered their seeing the true Ground and real Nature of Christianity, as it is in itself.

* Deism Fairly Stated and Fully Vindicated, page 41.

Eusebius. I would fain hope, Theophilus, that from all that has been said in the Demonstration of the fundamental Errors of the Plain Account; The Appeal to all that doubt, &c., and the rest that follow, to these Dialogues; in all which, Christianity and Deism, with their several Merits, are so plainly, and with so much good Will and Affection towards all Unbelievers, represented to them, all that are serious and well-minded amongst the Deists will be prevailed upon to re-consider the Matter. For though some people have been hasty enough to charge those Writings with Fanaticism, or Enthusiasm, as disclaiming the Use of our Reason in Religious Matters, yet this Charge can be made by none, but those who, having not read them, take up with hearsay Censures.

For in those Books from the Beginning to the End, nothing is appealed to but the natural Light of the Mind, and the plain, known Nature of Things; no one is led, or desired to go one Step further. The Use of Reason is not only allowed, but asserted, and proved to be of the same Service to us in Things of Religion, as in Things that relate to our Senses in this World.*

The true Ground, Nature, and Power of Faith is opened, by fully proving, that this Saying of Christ, 'According to thy Faith, so be it done unto Thee,' takes in every Individual of human Nature; and that all Men, whether Christians, Deists, Idolaters, or Atheists, are all of them equally Men of Faith, all equally, and absolutely governed by it, and therefore must have all that they have, Salvation, or Damnation, strictly and solely according to their Faith.† All this is so evidently proved, that I cannot help thinking, but that every considerate Reader must be forced to own it.

Theogenes. All this is well said. But let us now return to the finishing of our main Point, which was to show, that the Doctrine of a God all Love, not only does not destroy the Necessity of Christ's Death, and the infinite Value and Merits of it, but is itself the fullest Proof and strongest Confirmation of both.

Theophilus. How it could enter into anyone's Head, to charge this Doctrine with destroying the Necessity, and Merits of Christ's Death, is exceeding strange.

* Demonstration of the Errors of the Plain Account.

† Way to Divine Knowledge.

For look where you will, no other Cause, or Reason of the Death of Christ, can be found but in the Love of God towards fallen Man. Nor could the Love of God will or accept of the Death of Christ, but because of its absolute Necessity, and availing Efficacy to do all that for fallen Man, which the Love of God would have to be done for him.

God did not, could not love, or like, or desire the Sufferings and Death of Christ, for what they were in themselves, or as Sufferings of the highest Kind. No, the higher and greater such Sufferings had been, were they only considered in themselves, the less pleasing they had been to a God, that wills nothing but Blessing and Happiness to every Thing capable of it.

But all that Christ was, and did, and suffered, was infinitely prized, and highly acceptable to the Love of God, because all that Christ was, and did, and suffered in his own Person, was That which gave him full Power, to be a common Father of Life to all that died in Adam.

Had Christ wanted anything that he was, or did, or suffered in his own Person, he could not have stood in that Relation to all Mankind as Adam had done. Had he not been given to the first fallen Man, as a Seed of the Woman, as a Light of Life, enlightening every Man that comes into the World, He could not have had his Seed in every Man, as Adam had, nor been as universal a Father of Life, as Adam was of Death. Had he not in the Fitness, or Fulness of Time, become a Man, born of a pure Virgin, the first Seed of Life in every Man, must have lain only as a Seed, and could not have come to the Fulness of the Birth of a new Man in Christ Jesus. For the Children can have no other State of Life, but that which their Father first had. And therefore Christ, as the Father of a regenerated human Race, must first stand in the Fulness of that human State, which was to be derived from him into all his Children.

This is the absolute Necessity of Christ's being all that He was, before he became Man; a Necessity arising from the Nature of the Thing. Because he could not possibly have had the Relation of a Father to all Mankind, nor any Power to be a Quickener of a Life of Heaven in them, but because He was both God in himself, and a Seed of God in all of them.

Now all that Christ was, and did, and suffered, after He became Man, is from the same Necessity founded in the Nature of the Thing. He suffered on no other Account, but because that which he came to do in, and for the human Nature, was and could be nothing else in itself, but a Work of Sufferings and Death.

A crooked Line cannot become straight, but by having all its Crookedness given up, or taken from it. And there is but one Way possible in Nature for a crooked Line to lose its Crookedness.

Now the Sufferings and Death of Christ stand in this kind of Necessity. He was made Man for our Salvation, that is, He took upon Him our fallen Nature, to bring it out of its evil crooked State, and set it again in that Rectitude in which it was created.

Now there were no more two Ways of doing this, than there are two Ways of making a crooked Line to become straight.

If the Life of fallen Nature, which Christ had taken upon Him, was to be overcome by Him, then every Kind of suffering and dying, that was a giving up, or departing from the Life of fallen Nature, was just as necessary, in the Nature of the Thing, as that the Line to be made straight must give up, and part with every Kind and Degree of its own Crookedness.

And therefore the Sufferings and Death of Christ were, in the Nature of the Thing, the only possible Way of his acting contrary to, and overcoming all the Evil that was in the fallen State of Man.

The Apostle says, 'the Captain of our Salvation was to be 'made perfect through Sufferings.' This was the Ground and Reason of his Sufferings: Had he been without them, He could not have been perfect in Himself, as a Son of Man, nor the Restorer of Perfection in all Mankind. But why so? Because his Perfection, as a Son of Man, or the Captain of human Salvation, could only consist in his acting in, and with a Spirit suitable to the first created State of perfect Man; that is, He must in his Spirit be as much above all the Good and Evil of this fallen World, as the first Man was.

But now, He could not show that He was of this Spirit, that He was above the World, that He was under no Power of fallen Nature, but lived in the Perfection of the first created Man; He could not do this, but by showing, that all the Good of the earthly Life was renounced by Him, and that all the Evil which the World, the Malice of Men and Devils, could bring upon Him, could not hinder his living wholly and solely to God, and doing his Will on Earth with the same Fulness, as Angels do it in Heaven.

But had there been any Evil in all fallen Nature, whether in Life, Death, or Hell, that had not attacked Him with all its Force, He could not have been said to have overcome it. And therefore so sure as Christ, as the Son of Man, was to overcome the World, Death, Hell and Satan, so sure is it, that all the Evils which they could possibly bring upon Him, were to be felt and suffered by Him, as absolutely necessary, in the Nature of the Thing, to declare his Perfection, and prove his Superiority over them. Surely, my Friend, it is now enough proved to you, how a God all Love towards fallen Man, must love, like, desire, and delight in all the Sufferings of Christ, which alone could enable Him, as a Son of Man, to undo, and reverse all that Evil, which the first Man had done to all his Posterity.

Eusebius. Oh, Sir, in what an adorable Light is this Mystery now placed. And yet in no other Light than that in which the plain Letter of all Scripture sets it. * No Wrath in God, no fictitious Atonement, no Folly of Debtor and Creditor, no suffering in Christ for Sufferings' sake, but a Christ suffering and dying, as his same Victory over Death and Hell, as when He rose from the Dead, and ascended into Heaven.

Theophilus. Sure now, Eusebius, you plainly enough see wherein the infinite Merits, or the availing Efficacy, and glorious Power of the Sufferings and Death of Christ consist; since they were that, in and through which Christ himself came out of the State of fallen Nature, and got Power to give the same Victory to all his Brethren of the human Race.

Wonder not, therefore, that the Scriptures so frequently ascribe all our Salvation to the Sufferings and Death of Christ, that we are continually referred to them, as the Wounds and Stripes by which we are healed, as the Blood by which we are washed from our Sins, as the Price (much above Gold and precious Stones) by which we are bought.

Wonder not also that in the Old Testament, its Service Sacrifices and Ceremonies were instituted to typify, and point at the great Sacrifice of Christ, and to keep up a continual Hope, strong Expectation, and Belief of it. And that in the New Testament, the Reality, the Benefits, and glorious Effects of Christ our Passover being actually sacrificed for us, are so joyfully repeated by every Apostle.

It is because Christ, as suffering and Dying, was nothing else but Christ conquering and overcoming all the false Good, and the hellish Evil, of the fallen State of Man.

His Resurrection from the Grave, and Ascension into Heaven, though great in themselves, and necessary Parts of our Deliverance, were yet but the Consequences, and genuine Effects of his Sufferings and Death. These were in themselves the Reality of his Conquest; all his great Work was done, and effected in them and by them, and his Resurrection and Ascension were only his entering into the Possession of that, which his Sufferings and Death had gained for Him.

* See the Collection of Letters, Letter iv.

Wonder not then, that all the true Followers of Christ, the Saints of every Age, have so gloried in the Cross of Christ, have imputed such great Things to it, have desired nothing so much, as to be Partakers of it, to live in constant Union with it. It is because his Sufferings, his Death, and Cross, were the Fulness of his Victory over all the Works of the Devil. Not an Evil in Flesh and Blood, not a Misery of Life, not a Chain of Death, not a Power of Hell and Darkness, but were all baffled, broken, and overcome by the Process of a suffering, and dying Christ. Well therefore may the Cross of Christ be the Glory of Christians.

Eusebius. This Matter is so solidly and fully cleared up, that I am almost ashamed to ask you any Thing further about it. Yet explain a little more, if you please, how it is, that the Sufferings, and Death of Christ, gave Him Power to become a common Father of Life to all that died in Adam. Or how it is, that we, by Virtue of them, have Victory over all the Evil of our fallen State.

Theophilus. You are to know, Eusebius, that the Christian Religion is no arbitrary System of Divine Worship, but is the one true, real, and only Religion of Nature; that is, it is wholly founded in the Nature of Things, has nothing in it supernatural, or contrary to the Powers and Demands of Nature; but all that it does, is only in, and by, and according to the Workings and Possibilities of Nature.

A Religion that is not founded in Nature, is all Fiction and Falsity, and as mere a nothing as an Idol. For as no Creature can be, or have any Thing, but what it is and has from the Nature of Things, nor have any Thing done to it, Good or Harm, but according to the unalterable Workings of Nature, so no Religion can be of any Service, but that which works with and according to the Demands of Nature. Nor can any fallen Creature be raised out of its fallen State, even by the Omnipotence of God, but according to the Nature of Things, or the unchangeable Powers of Nature; for Nature is the Opening and Manifestation of the Divine Omnipotence; it is God's Power-world; and therefore all that God does, is and must be done in and by the Powers of Nature. God, though omnipotent, can give no Existence to any Creature, but it must have that Existence in Space and Time.—Time comes out of Eternity, and Space comes out of the Infinity of God.—God has an omnipotent Power over them, in them, and with them, to make both of them set forth and manifest the Wonders of his supernatural Deity. Yet time can only be subservient to the Omnipotence of God, according to the Nature of Time, and Space can only obey his Will, according to the Nature of Space ; but neither of them can, by any Power, be made to be in a supernatural State, or be any Thing but what they are in their own Nature.

Now Right and Wrong, Good and Evil, True and False, Happiness and Misery, are as unchangeable in Nature, as Time and Space. And every State and Quality that is creaturely, or that can belong to any Creature, has its own Nature, as unchangeably as Time and Space have theirs.

Nothing therefore can be done to any Creature supernaturally, or in a Way that is without, or contrary to the Powers of Nature ; but every Thing or Creature that is to be helped, that is to have any Good done to it, or any Evil taken out of it, can only have it done so far, as the Powers of Nature are able and rightly directed to effect it.

And this is the true Ground of all Divine Revelation, or that Help which the supernatural Deity vouchsafes to the fallen State of Man. It is not to appoint an arbitrary System of religious Homage to God, but solely to point out, and provide for Man, blinded by his fallen State, that one only Religion, that according to the Nature of Things can possibly restore to him his lost Perfection. This is the Truth, the Goodness, and the Necessity of the Christian Religion ; it is true, and good, and necessary, because it is as much the one only natural and possible Way of overcoming all the Evil of fallen Man, as Light is the one only natural possible Thing that can expel Darkness.

And therefore it is, that all the Mysteries of the Gospel, however high, are yet true and necessary Parts of the one Religion of Nature ; because they are no higher, nor otherwise, than the natural State of fallen Man absolutely stands in Need of. His Nature cannot be helped, or raised out of the Evils of its present State, by any Thing less than these Mysteries ; and therefore they are in the same Truth and Justness to be called his natural Religion, as that Remedy which alone has full Power to remove all the Evil of a Disease, may be justly called its natural Remedy.

For a Religion is not to be deemed natural, because it has nothing to do with Revelation, but then is it the one true Religion of Nature, when it has every Thing in it that our natural State stands in need of ; every Thing that can help us out of our present Evil, and raise and exalt us to all the Happiness which our Nature is capable of having. Supposing therefore the Christian Scheme of Redemption to be all that, and nothing else in itself, but that which the Nature of Things absolutely require it to be, it must, for that very Reason, have its Mysteries.

For the fallen, corrupt, mortal State of Man, absolutely requires these two Things as its only Salvation. First, The Divine Life, or the Life of God, must be revived in the Soul of Man. Secondly, There must be a Resurrection of the Body in a better State after Death. Now nothing in the Power of Man, or in the Things of this World, can effect this Salvation. If therefore this is to be the Salvation of Man, then some Interposition of the Deity is absolutely necessary, in the Nature of the Thing, or Man can have no Religion that is sufficiently natural; that is to say, no Religion that is sufficient, or equal to the Wants of his Nature.

Now this necessary Interposition of the Deity, though doing nothing but in a natural Way, or according to the Nature of Things, must be mysterious to Man, because it is doing something more and higher than his Senses or Reason ever saw done, or possible to be done, either by himself, or any of the Powers of this World.

And this is the true Ground and Nature of the Mysteries of Christian Redemption. They are, in themselves, nothing else but what the Nature of Things requires them to be, as natural efficacious Means of our Salvation, and all their Power is in a natural Way, or true Fitness of Cause for its Effect; but they are mysterious to Man, because brought into the Scheme of our Redemption by the Interposition of God, to work in a Way and Manner above, and superior to all that is seen and done in the Things of this World.

The Mysteries therefore of the Gospel are so far from showing the Gospel not to be the one true Religion of Nature, that they are the greatest Proof of it, since they are that alone which can help Man to all that Good which his natural State wants to have done to it.

For Instance, if the Salvation of Man absolutely requires the Revival, or Restoration of the Divine Life in the human Nature, then nothing can be the one, sufficient, true Religion of Nature, but that which has a natural Power to do this.

What a Grossness of Error is it therefore to blame that Doctrine which asserts the Incarnation of the Son of God, or the Necessity of the Word being made Flesh, when in the Nature of the Thing, nothing else but this very Mystery can be the natural efficacious Cause of the Renewal of the Divine Life in the human Nature, or have any natural Efficacy to effect our Salvation?

Having now, Eusebius, established this Ground, that nothing is, or can be a Part of true, natural Religion, or have any real Efficacy, as a Means of Salvation, but only that which has its Efficacy in and from the Nature of Things, or in the natural Fitness of Cause to produce its Effect, you are brought into the clear View of this Truth, viz., That the Religion of Deism is false, and vain, and visionary, and to be rejected by every Man as the mere enthusiastic, fanatic Product of pure Imagination; and all for this plain Reason, because it quite disregards the Nature of Things, stands wholly upon a supernatural Ground, and goes as much above, and as directly contrary to the Powers of Nature, as that Faith that trusts in, and prays to a wooden God.

I say not this (as is too commonly done) in the Spirit of Accusation, or to raise an Odium. No, by no Means. I have the utmost Aversion to such a Procedure. I would no more bring a false Charge against the Deist, than I would bear false Witness against the Apostle. And I desire to have no other Temper, Spirit, or Behaviour towards them, but such as the loving God with all my Heart, and loving them as I love myself, require of me. And in this Spirit of Love I charge them with visionary Faith, and enthusiastic Religion; and only so far, as I have from Time to Time proved, that they trust to be saved by that, which according to the unchangeable Nature of Things can have no Power of Salvation in it.

For a Religion, not grounded in the Power and Nature of Things, is unnatural, supernatural, or superrational, and is rightly called, either Enthusiasm, Vision, Fanaticism, Superstition, or Idolatry, just as you please. For all these are but different Names for one and the same religious Delusion. And every Religion is this Delusion, but that one Religion which is required by, and has its Efficacy in and from the unchangeable Nature of Things.

And thus stands the Matter betwixt the Deists and myself: If I knew how to do them or the Subject more Justice, I would gladly do it; having no Desire, either for them or myself, but that we may all of us be delivered from every Thing that separates us from God, all equal Sharers of every Blessing that He has for human Nature, all united in that Spirit of Love and Goodness for which he created us, and all blessed with that Faith and Hope to which the God of Love has called us, as the one, only, possible, natural, and full Means of ever finding ourselves saved, and redeemed from all the Evils both of Time and Eternity.

And now, Eusebius, upon this Ground, viz., (1) That there is but one true Religion, and that it is the Religion of Nature. (2) That a Religion has no Pretence to be considered as the Religion of Nature, because it rejects Divine Revelation, and has only human Reason for its Guide, but wholly and solely because it has every Good in it that the natural State of Man wants, and can receive from Religion. (3) That nothing can be any religious Good, or have any real Efficacy, as a Means of Salvation, but only that which has its Efficacy in and from the natural Power of Things, or the Fitness and Sufficiency of Cause to produce its Effect. (4) That the Religion of the Gospel, in all its Mysteries and Doctrines, is wholly grounded in the natural Powers of Things, and their Fitness to produce their Effects. Upon this Ground I come to answer your Question, viz., How it is that the Sufferings and Death of Christ gave Him full Power to become a common Father of Life to all those that died in Adam? Or how it is that we, by Virtue of them, are delivered out of all the Evils of our fallen State?

The Sufferings and Death of Christ have no supernatural Effect that is above, or contrary to Nature; because the Thing itself is impossible. For a Thing is only therefore impossible, because the Nature of Things will not allow of it.

The Fall of all Mankind in Adam is no supernatural Event or Effect, but the natural and necessary Consequence of our Relation to him. Could Adam at his Fall into this earthly Life have absolutely overcome every Power of the World, the Flesh, and the Devil, in the same Spirit as Christ did, he had been his own Redeemer, had risen out of his Fall, and ascended into Paradise, and been the Father of a paradisaical Offspring, just as Christ, when He had overcome them all, rose from the Dead, and ascended into Heaven. But Adam did not do this, because it was as impossible, in the Nature of the Thing, as for a Beast to raise itself into an Angel. If therefore Man is to come out of his fallen State, there must be something found out that, according to the Nature of Things, has Power to effect it. For it can no more be done supernaturally by any Thing else, than it could by Adam.

Now the Matter stood thus: The Seed of all Mankind was in the Loins of fallen Adam. This was unalterable in the Nature of the Thing, and therefore all Mankind must come forth in his fallen State.

Neither can they ever be in any State whatever, whether earthly or heavenly, but by having an earthly Man, or a heavenly Man for their Father. For Mankind, as such, must of all Necessity be born of, and have that Nature which it has from a Man. And this is the true Ground and absolute Necessity of the one Mediator, the Man Christ Jesus. For seeing Mankind, as such, must have that Birth and Nature which they have from Man; seeing they never could have had any Relation to Paradise, or any Possibility of partaking of it, but because they had a paradisaical Man for their Father, nor could have had any Relation to this earthly World, or any Possibility of being born earthly, but because they had an earthly Man for their Father ; and seeing all this must be unalterably so for ever ; it plainly follows, that there was an utter Impossibility for the Seed of Adam ever to come out of its fallen State, or ever have another, or better Life, than they had from Adam, unless such a Son of Man could be brought into Existence, as had the same Relation to all Mankind as Adam had, was as much in them all as Adam was, and had as full Power, according to the Nature of Things, to give a heavenly Life to all the Seed in Adam's Loins, as Adam had to bring them forth in earthly Flesh and Blood.

And now, Sir, that Christ was this very Son of Man, standing in the same Fulness of Relation to all Mankind as Adam did, having his Seed as really in them all, as Adam had, and as truly and fully qualified, according to the Nature of Things, to be a common and universal Father of Life, as Adam was of Death to all the human Race, shall in a Word or two be made as plain and undeniable, as that two and two are four.

The Doctrine of our Redemption absolutely asserts, that the Seed of Christ was sown into the first fallen Father of Mankind, called the Seed of the Woman, the Bruiser of the Serpent, the ingrafted Word of Life, called again in the Gospel, that Light which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World. Therefore Christ was in all Men, in that same Fulness of the Relation of a Father to all Mankind, as the first Adam was. Secondly, Christ was born of Adam's Flesh and Blood, took the human Nature upon him, and therefore stood as an human Creature in the same Relation to Mankind, as Adam did. Nothing therefore was further wanting in Christ, to make him as truly a natural Father of Life to all Mankind, as Adam was at first, but God's Appointment of him to that End.

For as Adam could not have been the natural Father of Mankind, but because God created and appointed him for that End, so Christ could not have been the natural Regenerator, or Redeemer of an heavenly Life that was lost in all Mankind, but because God had appointed and brought him into the World for that End. Now that God did this, that Christ came into the World by Divine Appointment, to be the Saviour, the Resurrection and Life of all Mankind, is a Truth as evident from Scripture, as that Adam was the first Man.

And thus it appears, in the utmost degree of Plainness and Certainty, that Christ in his single Person was, according to the Nature of Things, as fully qualified to be a common Redeemer, as Adam was, in his single Person, to be a common Father of all Mankind. He had his Seed in all Mankind, as Adam had. He had the human Nature, as Adam had. And He had the same Divine Appointment, as Adam had. But Christ, however qualified to be our Redeemer, could not be actually such, till He had gone through, and done all that, by which our Redemption was to be effected.

Adam, however qualified, could not be the Father of a paradisaical Offspring, till he had stood out his Trial, and fixed Himself victorious over every Thing that could make Trial of Him. In like manner, Christ, however qualified, could not be the Redeemer of all Mankind, till he had also stood out his Trial, had overcome all That by which Adam was overcome, and had fixed Himself triumphantly in that Paradise which Adam had lost.

Now as Adam's Trial was, Whether he would keep Himself in his paradisaical State above, and free from all that was Good and Evil in this earthly World? So Christ's trial was, Whether as a Son of Man, and loaded with the Infirmities of fallen Adam, sacrificed to all that which the Rage and Malice of the World, Hell, and Devils could possibly do to him; whether He in the midst of all these Evils, could live and die with his Spirit as contrary to them, as much above them, as unhurt by them, as Adam should have lived in Paradise?

And then it was, that every Thing which had overcome Adam, was overcome by Christ; and Christ's Victory did, in the Nature of the Thing, as certainly and fully open an Entrance for Him, and all his Seed into Paradise, as Adam's Fall cast him and all his Seed into the Prison and Captivity of this earthly bestial World.

Nothing supernatural came to pass in either Case, but Paradise lost, and Paradise regained, according to the Nature of Things, or the real Efficacy of Cause to produce its Effects.

Thus is your Question fully answered; viz., How and why the Sufferings and Death of Christ enabled him to be the Author of Life to all that died in Adam? Just as the Fall of Adam into this World, under the Power of Sin, Death, Hell, and the Devil, enabled him to be the common Father of Death, or was the natural, unavoidable Cause of our being born under the same Captivity; just so, that Life, and Sufferings, and Death of Christ, which declared his breaking out from them, and Superiority over them, must in the Nature of the Thing as much enable Him to be the common Author of Life, that is, must as certainly be the full, natural, efficacious Cause of our inheriting Life from Him. Because, by what Christ was in Himself, by what He was in us, by his whole State, Character, and the Divine Appointment, we all had that natural Union with Him, and Dependence upon Him, as our Head in the Way of Redemption, as we had with Adam as our Head in the Way of our natural Birth. So that as it must be said, that because Adam fell, we must of all Necessity be Heirs of his fallen State, so with the same Truth, and from the same Necessity of the Thing, it must be said, that because Christ our Head is risen victorious out of our fallen State, we as his Members, and having his Seed within us, must be and are made Heirs of all his Glory. Because in all Respects we are as strictly, as intimately connected with, and related to Him as the one Redeemer, as we are to Adam as the one Father of all Mankind. So that Christ by his Sufferings and Death become in all of us our Wisdom, our Righteousness, our Justification and Redemption, is the same sober and solid Truth, as Adam by his Fall become in all of us our Foolishness, our Impurity, our Corruption and Death.

And now, my Friends, look back upon all that has been said, and then tell me, Is it possible more to exalt or magnify the infinite Merits, and availing Efficacy of the Sufferings and Death of Christ, than is done by this doctrine? Or whether every Thing that is said of them in Scripture, is not here proved, from the very Nature of the Thing, to be absolutely true? And again, Whether it is not sufficiently proved to you, that the Sufferings and Death of Christ are not only consistent with the Doctrine of a God all Love, but are the fullest and most absolute Proof of it.

Eusebius. Indeed, Theophilus, you have so fully done for us all that we wanted to have done, that we are now ready to take Leave of you. As for my Part, I want to return Home, to enjoy my Bible, and delight myself with reading it in this comfortable Light, in which you have set the whole Ground and Nature of our Redemption. I am now in full Possession of this glorious Truth, that God is mere Love, the most glorious Truth that can possess and edify the Heart of Man. It drives every Evil out of the Soul, and gives Life to every Spark of Goodness that can possibly be kindled in it. Everything in Religion is made amiable, by being a Service of Love to the God of Love.

No Sacrifices, Sufferings, and Death, have any Place in Religion, but to satisfy and fulfil that Love of God, which could not be satisfied without our Salvation. If the Son of God is not spared, if He is delivered up to the Rage and Malice of Men, Devils, and Hell, it is because, had we not had such a Captain of our Salvation made perfect through Sufferings, it never could have been sung, 'Oh Death, where is thy Sting, Oh Grave, where is thy Victory!' It never could have been true, that 'as by one Man Sin entered into the World, and Death by Sin, so by one Man came the Resurrection of the Dead.' It never could have been said, 'that as in Adam all die, so in Christ 'shall all be made alive.'

Therefore, dear Theophilus, adieu: God is Love, and He that has learnt to live in the Spirit of Love, has learnt to live and dwell in God. Love was the Beginner of all the Works of God, and from Eternity to Eternity nothing can come from God, but a Variety of Wonders, and Works of Love, over all Nature and Creature.

Theophilus. God prosper, Eusebius, this Spark of Heaven in your Soul. May it, like the Seraphims' Coal taken from the Altar, purify your Heart from all its Uncleanness! But before you leave me, I beg one more Conversation to be on the practical Part of the Spirit of Love, that so Doctrine and Practice, hearing and doing, may go Hand in Hand.

The End of the Second DIALOGUE.

THE THIRD DIALOGUE

EUSEBIUS. You have shown great Good-will towards us, Theophilus, in desiring another Meeting before we leave you. But yet I seem to myself to have no Need of that which you have proposed by this Day's Conversation. For this Doctrine of the Spirit of Love cannot have more Power over me, or be more deeply rooted in me; than it is already. It has so gained and got Possession of my whole Heart, that every Thing else must be under its Dominion. I can do nothing else but love; it is my whole Nature. I have no Taste for any Thing else. Can this Matter be carried higher in Practice?

Theophilus. No higher, Eusebius. And was this the true State of your Heart, you would bid fair to leave the World as Elijah did; or like Enoch to have it said of you, that you lived wholly to love, and was not. For was there nothing but this Divine Love alive in you, your fallen Flesh and Blood would be in Danger of being quite burnt up by it. What you have said of yourself, you have spoken in great Sincerity, but in a total Ignorance of yourself, and the true Nature of the Spirit of Divine Love. You are as yet only charmed with the Sight, or rather the Sound of it; its real Birth is as yet unfelt, and unfound in you. Your natural Complexion has a great deal of the animal Meekness and Softness of the Lamb and the Dove, your Blood and Spirit are of this Turn; and therefore a God all Love, and a Religion all Love, quite transport you; and you are so delighted with it, that you fancy you have nothing in you but this God and Religion of Love. But, my Friend, bear with me, if I tell you, that all this is only the good Part of the Spirit of this bestial World in you, and may be in any unregenerate Man, that is of your Complexion. It is so far from being a genuine Fruit of Divine Love, that if it be not well looked to, it may prove a real Hindrance of it, as it oftentimes does, by its appearing to be that which it is not.

You have quite forgot all that was said in the Letter on the Spirit of Love, that it is a Birth in the Soul, that can only come forth in its proper Time and Place, and from its proper Causes. Now nothing that is a Birth can be taken in, or brought into the Soul by any notional Conception, or delightful Apprehension of it. You may love it as much as you please, think it the most charming Thing in the World, fancy everything but Dross and Dung in Comparison of it, and yet have no more of its Birth in you, than the blind Man has of that Light, of which he has got a most charming Notion. His Blindness still continues the same ; he is at the same Distance from the Light, because Light can only be had by a Birth of itself in seeing Eyes. It is thus with the Spirit of Love ; it is nowhere, but where it rises up as a Birth.

Eusebius. But if I am got no further than this, what Good have I from giving in so heartily to all that you have said of this Doctrine? And to what End have you taken so much Pains to assert and establish it?

Theophilus. Your Error lies in this ; you confound two Things, which are entirely distinct from each other. You make no Difference betwixt the Doctrine, that only sets forth the Nature, Excellence, and Necessity of the Spirit of Love, and the Spirit of Love itself ; which yet are two Things so different, that you may be quite full of the former, and at the same Time quite empty of the latter. I have said every Thing that I could, to show you the Truth, Excellence, and Necessity of the Spirit of Love ; It is of infinite Importance to you to be well established in the Belief of this Doctrine. But all that I have said of it, is only to induce and encourage you to buy it, at its own Price, and to give all that for it, which alone can purchase it. But if you think (as you plainly do) that you have got it, because you are so highly pleased with that which you have heard of it, you only embrace the Shadow, instead of the Substance, of that which you ought to have.

Eusebius. What is the Price that I must give for it?

Theophilus. You must give up all that you are, and all that you have from fallen Adam ; for all that you are and have from him is that Life of Flesh and Blood, which cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.

Adam after his Fall had nothing that was good in him, nothing that could inherit an eternal Life in Heaven, but the Bruiser of the Serpent, or the Seed of the Son of God that was reserved, and treasured up in his Soul. Every Thing else in Him was devoted to Death, that this incorruptible Seed of the Word might grow up into a new Name in Christ Jesus.

All the Doctrine of God's Reprobation and Election relates wholly and solely to these two Things, viz., the earthly bestial Nature from Adam, and the incorruptible Seed of the Word, or the Immanuel in every Man.

Nothing is elected, is foreseen, predestinated, or called according to the Purpose of God, but this Seed of the new Man, because the one eternal, unchangeable Purpose of God towards Man is only this, namely, that Man should be a heavenly Image, or Son of God. And therefore nothing can be elected, or called according to the Purpose of God, but this Seed of an heavenly Birth, because nothing else is able to answer, and fulfil the Purpose of God. But every Thing else that is in Man, his whole earthly bestial Nature, is from Sin, and is quite contrary to God's Purpose in the Creation of Man.

On the other Hand, nothing is reprobated, rejected, or cast out by God, but the earthly Nature which came from the Fall of Adam. This is the only Vessel of Wrath, the Son of Perdition, that can have no Share in the Promises and Blessings of God.

Here you have the whole unalterable Ground of Divine Election and Reprobation; it relates not to any particular Number of People, or Division of Mankind, but solely to the two Natures that are, both of them, without Exception, in every Individual of Mankind. All that is earthly, serpentine, and devilish in every Man, is reprobated and doomed to Destruction; and the heavenly Seed of the new Birth in every Man, is That which is chosen, ordained and called to eternal Life.

Election therefore and Reprobation, as respecting Salvation, equally relate to every Man in the World; because every Man, as such, has That in him which only is elected, and that in him which only is reprobated, namely, the earthly Nature, and the heavenly Seed of the Word of God.

Now all this is evident, from the very Nature of the Thing. As soon as you but suppose Man at his Fall to have a Power of Redemption, or Deliverance from the Evil of his fallen Nature, engrafted into him, you then have the first unchangeable Ground of Election and Reprobation; you are infallibly shown what it is that God elects and reprobates, and the absolute Impossibility of any Thing else being reprobated by God, but that fallen evil Nature from which he is to be redeemed, or of any Thing else being elected by God, but that Seed of a new Birth, which is to bring forth his Redemption.

Here therefore you have a full Deliverance from all Perplexity upon this Matter, and may rest yourself upon this great, comfortable, and most certain Truth, that no other Election or Reprobation, with Regard to Salvation, ever did, or can belong to any one individual Son of Adam, but that very same Election and Reprobation, which both of them happened to, and took Place in Adam's individual Person. For all that which was in Adam, both as fallen and redeemed, must of all Necessity be in every Son of Adam; and no Man can possibly stand in any other Relation to God than Adam did, and therefore cannot have either more or less, or any other Divine Election and Reprobation, than Adam had. For, from the Moment of Man's Redemption, which began at the Fall, when the incorruptible Seed of the Word was given into Adam, every Son of Adam, to the End of the World, must come into it, under one and the same Election and Reprobation with Regard to God. Because the whole earthly Nature, from which Man was to be redeemed, and the Seed of the Word, by which he was to be redeemed, were both of them in every Man, one as certainly as the other.

Now this being the inward, essential State of every Man born into the World, having in himself all that is elected, and all that is reprobated by God, hence it is, that in order to publish the Truth and Certainty of such Election and Reprobation, and the Truth and Certainty of that twofold Nature in Man, on which it is grounded, that the Spirit of God, in holy Scripture, represents this Matter to us by such outward Figures, as are yet in themselves not figurative, but real Proofs of it.

This is first of all done under the Figures of Cain and Abel, the two first Births from Adam, where the one is murdered by the other, hereby demonstrating to us, by this Contrariety and Difference of these two first Births, the inward real State of the Father of them, namely, that the same twofold Nature was in him, that discovered itself in these two first Births from him.

The same Thing is, Age after Age, set forth in Variety of Figures, more especially in Ishmael and Isaac, in Esau and Jacob. And all this, only further to confirm and establish this great Truth, viz., That such Strife and Contrariety as appeared in the Sons of the same Father, were not only outward Representations, but full Proofs of that inward Strife and Contrariety, which not only existed in their Fathers, but universally in every human Creature. For Cain and Abel had not come from Adam, but because both their Natures were antecedently in him, and in the same State of Opposition and Contrariety to each other. And as Cain and Abel were no other than the genuine Effects of the twofold State, which Adam, as fallen and redeemed, was then in, so every Man, descended from Adam, is in himself infallibly all that which Adam was, and has as certainly his own Cain and Abel within himself as Adam had. And from the Beginning to the End of the human Race, all that which came to pass so remarkably in the Births of Cain and Abel, Ishmael and Isaac, Esau and Jacob, all that same, some Way or other, more or less, comes to pass in every Individual of Mankind. In one Man, his own Abel is murdered by his own Cain, and in another, his own Jacob overcomes his own Esau that was born with him.

And all the Good, or the Evil that we bring forth in our Lives, is from nothing else, but from the Strife of these two Natures within us, and their Victory over one another. Which Strife, no Son of Adam could ever have known anything of, had not the free Grace and Mercy of God chosen and called all Mankind to a new Birth of Heaven within them, out of their corrupt and fallen Souls. No possible War, or Strife of Good against Evil, could be in fallen Man, but by his having from God a Seed of Life in him, ordained and predestinated to overcome his earthly Nature. For that which is put into him by God, as the Power of his Redemption, must be contrary to that from which he is to be redeemed.

And thus a War of Good against Evil, set up within us, by the free Grace and Mercy of God to us, is the greatest of all Demonstrations, that there is but one Election, and but one Reprobation, and that all that God rejects and reprobates, is nothing else but that corrupt Nature which every individual Man, Abel as well as Cain, has in himself from Adam, as fallen; and that all that God elects, predestinates, calls, justifies and glorifies, is nothing else but that heavenly Seed, which every individual Man, Pharaoh as well as Moses, has in himself from Adam, as redeemed.

And thus you have an unerring Key to all that is said in Scripture of the Election falling upon Abel, Isaac, and Jacob, &c., and of the Reprobation falling upon Cain, Ishmael, and Esau; not because God has Respect to Persons, or that all Men did not stand before him in the same Covenant of Redemption; but the Scriptures speak thus, that the true Nature of God's Election and Reprobation may thereby be made manifest to the World.

For the earthly Nature, which God only reprobates, having broken forth in Predominance in Cain, Ishmael, and Esau, they became proper Figures of that which God reprobates, and were used by God as such. And the heavenly Seed, which is alone elected to eternal Glory, having broken forth in Predominance in Abel, Isaac, Jacob, &c., they became proper Figures of that which God only elects, and were used by God as such.

Nothing is here to be understood personally, or according to the Flesh of these Persons on either Side; but all that is said of them, is only as they are Figures of the earthly Nature, and heavenly Seed in every Man. For nothing is reprobated in Cain, but that very same which is reprobated in Abel, viz., the earthly Nature; nor is anything elected in Jacob, but that very same which is equally elected in Esau, viz., the heavenly Seed.

And now, Gentlemen, you may easily apprehend, how and why a God, in whose holy Deity no Spark of Wrath or Partiality can possibly arise, but who is from Eternity to Eternity only flowing forth in Love, Goodness, and Blessing to every Thing capable of it, could yet say of the Children, before they were born, or had done either Good or Evil, 'Jacob have I loved, and Esau have I hated.' It is because Esau signifies the earthly bestial Nature, that came from Sin; and Jacob signifies the incorruptible Seed of the Word, that is to overcome Esau, and change his Mortal into Immortality.

But now I stop, for you may perhaps think that I have here made a Digression from our proposed Subject.

Eusebius. A Digression you may call it, if you please, Theophilus, but it is such a Digression, as has entirely prevented my ever having one more anxious Thought about God's Decrees of Election and Reprobation.

The Matter stands now in open Daylight, notwithstanding that Thickness of learned Darkness, under which it has been hidden, from the Time of St. Austin to this Day. And now, Sir, proceed as you please, to lay open all my Defects, in the Spirit of Love; for I am earnestly desirous of being set right in so important a Matter.

Theogenes. Let me first observe to Theophilus, that I am afraid the Matter is much worse with me, than it is with you. For though this Doctrine seems to have got all my Heart, as it is a Doctrine, yet I am continually thrown out of it in Practice, and find myself as daily under the Power of my old Tempers and Passions, as I was before I was so full of this Doctrine.

Theophilus. You are to know, my Friends, that every Kind of Virtue and Goodness may be brought into us by two different Ways. They may be taught us outwardly by Men, by Rules and Precepts; and they may be inwardly born in us, as the genuine Birth of our own renewed Spirit. In the former Way, as we learn them only from Men, by Rules and Documents of Instruction, they at best only change our outward Behaviour, and leave our Heart in its natural State, and only put our Passions under a forced Restraint, which will occasionally break forth in spite of the dead Letter of Precept and Doctrine. Now this Way of Learning and attaining Goodness, though thus imperfect, is yet absolutely necessary, in the Nature of the Thing, and must first have its Time, and Place, and Work in us; yet it is only for a Time, as the Law was a Schoolmaster to the Gospel. We must first be Babes in Doctrine, as well as in Strength, before we can be Men. But of all this outward Instruction, whether from good Men, or the Letter of Scripture, it must be said, as the Apostle says of the Law, that it maketh nothing perfect; and yet it is highly necessary in order to Perfection.

The true Perfection and Profitableness of the holy written Word of God is fully set forth by St. Paul to Timothy: 'From 'a Child,' says he, 'thou hast known the Scriptures, which are 'able to make thee wise unto Salvation, which is by Faith in 'Christ Jesus.' Now these Scriptures were the Law and the Prophets, for Timothy had known no other from his Youth. And as they, so all other Scriptures since, have no other Good or Benefit in them, but as they lead and direct us to a Salvation, that is not to be had in themselves, but from Faith in Christ Jesus. Their Teaching is only to teach us, where to seek and to find the Fountain and Source of all Light and Knowledge.

Of the Law, says the Apostle, it was a Schoolmaster to Christ: Of the Prophets, he says the same. 'Ye have,' says he, 'a more 'sure Word of Prophecy, whereunto you do well that ye take 'Heed, as unto a Light that shineth in a dark Place, until the 'Day dawn, and the Day-Star ariseth in your Hearts.' The same Thing is to be affirmed of the Letter of the New Testament; it is but our Schoolmaster unto Christ, a Light like that of Prophecy, to which we are to take great Heed, until Christ, as the Dawning of the Day, or the Day-Star, arises in our Hearts. Nor can the Thing possibly be otherwise; no Instruction that comes under the Form of Words can do more for us, than Sounds and Words can do; they can only direct us to something that is better than themselves, that can be the true Light, Life, Spirit, and Power of Holiness in us.

Eusebius. I cannot deny what you say, and yet it seems to me to derogate from Scripture.

Theophilus. Would you then have me to say, that the written Word of God is that Word of God which liveth and abideth for ever; that Word, which is the Wisdom and Power of God; that Word, which was with God, which was God, by whom all Things were made; that Word of God, which was made Flesh for the Redemption of the World; that Word of God, of which we must be born again; that Word which lighteth every Man, that cometh into the World; that Word, which in Christ Jesus is become Wisdom, and Righteousness, and Sanctification in us; would you have me say, that all this is to be understood of the written Word of God? But if this cannot possibly be, then all that I have said is granted, namely, that Jesus is alone that Word of God, that can be the Light, Life, and Salvation of fallen Man. Or how is it possible more to exalt the Letter of Scripture, than by owning it to be a true, outward, verbal Direction to the one only true Light, and Salvation of Man.

Suppose you had been a true Disciple of John the Baptist, whose only Office was to prepare the Way to Christ, how could you have more magnified his Office, or declared your Fidelity to him, than by going from his Teaching, to be taught by that Christ to whom he directed you? The Baptist was indeed a burning and a shining Light, and so are the holy Scriptures; 'but he was not that Light, but was sent to bear Witness of that Light. That was the true Light, which lighteth every Man, 'that cometh into the World.'

What a Folly would it be, to say that you had undervalued the Office and Character of John the Baptist, because he was not allowed to be the Light itself, but only a true Witness of it, and Guide to it? Now if you can show, that the written Word in the Bible can have any other, or higher Office, or Power, than such a ministerial one as the Baptist had, I am ready to hear you.

Eusebius. There is no Possibility of doing that.

Theophilus. But if that is not possible to be done, then you are come to the full Proof of this Point, viz., that there are two Ways of attaining Knowledge, Goodness, Virtue, &c., the one by the Ministry of outward, verbal Instruction, either by Men or Books, and the other by an inward Birth of Divine Light, Goodness, and Virtue, in our own renewed Spirit: and that the former is only in order to the latter, and of no Benefit to us, but as it carries us further than itself, to be united in Heart and Spirit with the Light, and Word, and Spirit of God. Just as the Baptist had been of no Benefit to his Disciples, unless he had been their Guide from himself to Christ.

But to come now closer to our Subject in Hand.

From this twofold Light, or Teaching, there necessarily arises a twofold State of Virtue and Goodness. For such as the Teacher, or Teaching is, such is the State and Manner of the Goodness, that can be had from it. Every Effect must be according to the Cause that produces it. If you learn Virtue and Goodness only from outward Means, from Men or Books, you may be virtuous and good according to Time, and Place, and outward Forms; you may do Works of Humility, Works of Love and Benevolence, use Times and Forms of Prayer; all this Virtue and Goodness is suitable to this Kind of Teaching, and may very well be had from it. But the Spirit of Prayer, the Spirit of Love, and the Spirit of Humility, or of any other Virtue, are only to be attained by the Operation of the Light and Spirit of God, not outwardly teaching, but inwardly bringing forth a new-born Spirit within us.

And now let me tell you both, that it is much to be feared that you as yet stand only under this outward Teaching; your good Works are only done under Obedience to such Rules, Precepts, and Doctrines, as your Reason assents to, but are not the Fruits of a new-born Spirit within you. But till you are thus renewed in the Spirit of your Minds, your Virtues are only taught Practices, and grafted upon a corrupt Bottom. Everything you do will be a Mixture of good and bad; your Humility will help you to Pride, your Charity to others will give Nourishment to your own Self-Love; and as your Prayers increase, so will the Opinion of your own Sanctity. Because, till the Heart is purified to the Bottom, and has felt the Axe at the Root of its Evil (which cannot be done by outward Instruction) every Thing that proceeds from it partakes of its Impurity and Corruption.

Now that Theogenes is only under the Law, or outward Instruction, is too plain from the Complaint that he made of himself. For notwithstanding his Progress in the Doctrine of Love, he finds all the Passions of his corrupt Nature still alive in him, and himself only altered in Doctrine and Opinion.

The same may be well suspected of you, Eusebius, who are so mistaken in the Spirit of Love, that you fancy yourself to be wholly possessed of it, from no other Ground, but because you embrace it, as it were, with open Arms, and think of nothing but living under the Power of it. Whereas, if the Spirit of Love was really born in you from its own Seed, you would account for its Birth, and Power in you, in quite another Manner than you have here done; you would have known the Price that you had paid for it, and how many Deaths you had suffered, before the Spirit of Love came to Life in you.

Eusebius. But surely, Sir, imperfect as our Virtues are, we may yet, I hope, be truly said to be in a State of Grace; and if so, we are under something more than mere outward Instruction. Besides, you very well know, that it is a Principle with both of us, to expect all our Goodness from the Spirit of God dwelling and working in us. We live in Faith and Hope of the Divine Operation; and therefore I must needs say, that your Censure upon us seems to be more severe than just.

Theophilus. Dear Eusebius, I censure neither of you, nor have I said one Word by Way of Accusation. So far from it, that I love and approve the State you are both in. It is good and happy for Theogenes, that he feels and confesses, that his natural Tempers are not yet subdued by Doctrine and Precept. It is good and happy for you also, that you are so highly delighted with the Doctrine of Love, for by this means each of you have your true Preparation for further Advancement. And though your State has this Difference, yet the same Error was common to both of you. You both of you thought, you had as much of the Spirit of Love as you could, or ought to have; and therefore Theogenes wondered he had no more Benefit from it; and you wondered that I should desire to lead you further into it. And therefore, to deliver you from this Error, I have desired this Conference upon the practical Ground of the Spirit of Love, that you may neither of you lose the Benefit of that good State in which you stand.

Eusebius. Pray therefore proceed as you please. For we have nothing so much at Heart, as to have the Truth and Purity of this Divine Love brought forth in us. For as it is the highest Perfection that I adore in God, so I can neither wish nor desire any Thing for myself, but to be totally governed by it. I could as willingly consent to lose all my Being, as to find the Power of Love lost in my Soul. Neither Doctrine, nor Mystery, nor Precept has any Delight for me, but as it calls forth the Birth, and Growth, and Exercise of that Spirit, which does all that it does, towards God and Man, under the one Law of Love. Whatever therefore you can say to me, either to increase the Power, manifest the Defects, or remove the Impediments of Divine Love in my Soul, will be heartily welcome to me.

Theophilus. I apprehend that you do not yet know what Divine Love is in itself, nor what is its Nature and Power in the Soul of Man. For Divine Love is perfect Peace and Joy, it is a Freedom from all Disquiet, it is all Content, and mere Happiness; and makes every Thing to rejoice in itself. Love is the Christ of God; wherever it comes, it comes as the Blessing and Happiness of every natural Life, as the Restorer of every lost Perfection, a Redeemer from all Evil, a Fulfiller of all Righteousness, and a Peace of God which passeth all Understanding. Through all the Universe of Things, nothing is uneasy, unsatisfied, or restless, but because it is not governed by Love, or because its Nature has not reached or attained the full Birth of the Spirit of Love. For when that is done, every Hunger is satisfied, and all complaining, murmuring, accusing, resenting, revenging, and striving, are as totally suppressed and overcome, as the Coldness, Thickness, and Horror of Darkness, are suppressed and overcome by the breaking forth of the Light. If you ask, Why the Spirit of Love cannot be displeased, cannot be disappointed, cannot complain, accuse, resent or murmur? It is because Divine Love desires nothing but itself; it is its own Good, it has all when it has itself, because nothing is good but itself, and its own working; for Love is God, and he that dwelleth in God, dwelleth in Love. Tell me now, Eusebius, are you thus blessed in the Spirit of Love?

Eusebius. Would you have me tell you, that I am an Angel, and without the Infirmities of human Flesh and Blood?

Theophilus. No: But I would have you judge of your State of Love by these angelical Tempers, and not by any Fervour or Heat that you find in yourself. For just so much, and so far as you are freed from the Folly of all earthly Affections, from all Disquiet, Trouble and Complaint about this, or that, just so much, and so far is the Spirit of Love come to Life in you. For Divine Love is a new Life, and new Nature, and introduces you into a new World ; it puts an End to all your former Opinions, Notions and Tempers, it opens new Senses in you, and makes you see high to be low, and low to be high ; Wisdom to be Foolishness, and Foolishness Wisdom ; it makes Prosperity and Adversity, Praise and Dispraise, to be equally nothing. ‘ When ‘ I was a Child,’ says the Apostle, ‘ I thought as a Child, I spoke ‘ as a Child, but when I became a Man, I put away childish ‘ Things.’ Whilst Man is under the Power of Nature, governed only by worldly Wisdom, his Life (however old he may be) is quite childish ; every Thing about him only awakens childish Thoughts, and Pursuits in him ; all that he sees and hears, all that he desires or fears, likes or dislikes, that which he gets, and that which he loses, that which he has, and that which he has not, serve only to carry him from this Fiction of Evil, to that Fiction of Good, from one Vanity of Peace, to another Vanity of Trouble. But when Divine Love is born in the Soul, all childish Images of Good and Evil are done away, and all the Sensibility of them is lost, as the Stars lose their Visibility when the Sun is risen.

Theogenes. That this is the true Power of the Spirit of Divine Love, I am fully convinced from my own Uneasiness at finding, that my natural Tempers are not overcome by it. For whence could I have this Trouble, but because that little Dawning that I have of the Spirit of Love in me, makes just Demands to be the one Light, Breath, and Power of my Life, and to have all that is within me overcome and governed by it. And therefore I find, I must either silence this small Voice of new risen Love within me, or have no Rest from Complaints and Self-condemnation, till my whole Nature is brought into Subjection to it.

Theophilus. Most rightly judged, Theogenes. And now we are fairly brought to the one great practical Point, on which all our Proficiency in the Spirit of Love entirely depends, namely, that all that we are, and all that we have from Adam, as fallen, must be given up, absolutely denied and resisted, if the Birth of Divine Love is to be brought forth in us. For all that we are by Nature is in full Contrariety to this Divine Love, nor can it be otherwise ; a Death to itself is its only Cure, and nothing else can make it subservient to Good ; just as Darkness cannot be altered, or made better in itself, or transmuted into Light, it can only be subservient to the Light, by being lost in it, and swallowed up by it.

Now this was the first State of Man; all natural Properties of his creaturely Life, were hid in God, united in God, and glorified by the Life of God manifested in them, just as the Nature and Qualities of Darkness are lost and hid, when enlightened and glorified by the Light. But when Man fell from, or died to the Divine Life, all the natural Properties of his creaturely Life, having lost their Union in and with God, broke forth in their own natural Division, Contrariety, and War against one another, just as the Darkness, when it has lost the Light, must show forth its own Coldness, Horror, and other uncomfortable Qualities. And as Darkness, though in the utmost Contrariety to Light, is yet absolutely necessary to it, and without which no Manifestation or Visibility of Light could possibly be, so it is with the natural Properties of the creaturely Life; they are in themselves all Contrariety to the Divine Life, and yet the Divine Life cannot be communicated, but in them and by them.

Eusebius. I never read, or heard of the Darkness being necessary to Light: It has been generally considered as a negative Thing, that was nothing in itself, and only signified an Absence of Light. But your Doctrine not only supposes Darkness to be something positive, that has a Strength and Substantiality in itself, but also to be antecedent to the Light, because necessary to bring it into Manifestation. I am almost afraid to hear more of this Doctrine: It sounds harsh to my Ears.

Theophilus. Do not be frightened, Eusebius. I will lead you into no Doctrine, but what is strictly conformable to the Letter of Scripture, and the most orthodox Piety. The Scripture says, 'God is Light, and in Him is no Darkness at all'; therefore the Scripture affirms Light to be superior, absolutely separate from, and eternally antecedent to Darkness; and so do I. In this Scripture you have a noble and true Account of Light, what it is, where it is, and was, and always must be. It can never change its State or Place, be altered in itself, be anywhere, or in another Manner, than as it was, and will be, from Eternity to Eternity. When God said, 'Let there be Light, and there was 'Light,' no Change happened to eternal Light itself, nor did any Light then begin to be; but the Darkness of this World then only began to receive a Power, or Operation of the eternal Light upon it, which it had not before; or Eternity then began to open some Resemblance of its own Glory in the dark Elements, and Shadows of Time, and thus it is, that I assert the Priority and Glory of Light, and put all Darkness under its Feet, as impossible to be any Thing else but its Footstool.

Eusebius. I am quite delighted with this. But tell me now, how it is that Light can only be manifested in, and by Darkness.

Theophilus. The Scripture says that 'God dwelleth in the Light, to which no Man can approach': Therefore the Scripture teaches, that Light in itself is, and must be invisible to Man; that it cannot be approached, or made manifest to him, but in and by something that is not Light. And this is all that I said, and the very same Thing that I said, when I affirmed, that Light cannot be manifested, or have any Visibility to created Eyes, but in and through and by the Darkness.

Light, as it is in itself, is only in the Supernatural Deity; and that is the Reason, why no Man, or any created Being, can approach to it, or have any Sensibility of it, as it is in itself. And yet no Light can come into this World, but that in which God dwelt before any World was created. No Light can be in Time, but that which was the Light of Eternity. If therefore the Supernatural Light is to manifest something of its incomprehensible Glory, and make itself, in some Degree, sensible and visible to the Creature, this supernatural Light must enter into Nature, it must put on Materiality. Now Darkness is the one only Materiality of Light, in and through which it can become the Object of creaturely Eyes; and till there is Darkness, there is no possible Medium, or Power, through which the Supernatural Light can manifest something of itself, or have any of its Glory visible to created Eyes. And the Reason why Darkness can only be the Materiality of Light, is this, it is because Darkness is the one only Ground of all Nature, and of all Materiality, whether in Heaven or on Earth. And therefore every Thing that is creaturely in Nature, that has any Form, Figure, or Substance, from the highest Angel in Heaven to the lowest Thing upon Earth, has all that it has of Figure, Form, or Substantiality, only and solely from Darkness. Look at the glittering Glory of the Diamond, and then you see the one Medium, through which the Glory of the incomprehensible Light can make some Discovery or Manifestation of itself. It matters not, whether you consider Heaven or Earth, eternal or temporal Nature, nothing in either State can be capable of visible Glory, Brightness, or Illumination, but that which stands in the State of the Diamond, and has its own Thickness of Darkness. And if the Universe of eternal and temporal Nature is everywhere Light, it is because it has Darkness everywhere for its Dwelling-Place. Light, you know, is by variety of modern Experiments declared to be material; the Experiments are not to be disputed. And yet all these Experiments are only so many Proofs, not of the Mate- riality of Light, but of our Doctrine, viz., that Materiality is always along with visible Light, and also that Light can only open, and display something of itself, in and by Darkness, as its Body of Manifestation and Visibility. But Light cannot possibly be material, because all Materiality, as such, be it what and where it will, is nothing else but so much Darkness. And therefore to suppose Light to be material, is the same Absurdity, as to suppose it to be Darkness; for so much Materiality is so much Darkness; and it is impossible to be otherwise. Again, All Matter has but one Nature; it admits of neither more nor less, but wherever it is, all that is material is equally there. If therefore Light was material, all the Materiality in the World must be Light, and equally so. For no Materiality could be Light, unless Light was essential to Matter, as such, no more than any Materiality could be extended, unless Extension was essential to Matter, as such.

Eusebius. What is it then, that you understand by the Materiality of Light?

Theophilus. No more than I understand by the Materiality of the Wisdom, Mercy, and Goodness of God, when they are made intelligible and credible to me, by the Materiality of Paper, and Ink, &c. For Light is as distinct from, and superior to all that Materiality, in and by which it gives forth some Visibility of itself, as the Wisdom, Mercy, and Goodness of God, are distinct from, and superior to all that written Materiality, in and through which they are made in some Degree intelligible, and credible to human Minds.

The incomprehensible Deity can make no outward Revelation of his Will, Wisdom, and Goodness, but by articulate Sounds, Voices, or Letters written on Tables of Stone, or such-like Materiality. Just so, the visible, inaccessible, supernatural Light can make no outward Visibility of itself, but through such Darkness of Materiality, as is capable of receiving its Illumination. But as the Divine Will, Wisdom, and Goodness, when making outward Revelation of themselves, by the Materiality of Things, are not therefore material, so neither is the Light material, when it outwardly reveals something of its invisible incomprehensible Splendour and Glory, by and through the Materiality of Darkness.

All Light then, that is natural, and visible to the Creature, whether in Heaven, or on Earth, is nothing else but so much Darkness illuminated; and that, which is called the Materiality of Light, is only the Materiality of Darkness, in which the Light incorporates itself.

For Light can be only that same visible unapproachable Thing, which it always was in God, from all Eternity. And that which is called the Difference of Light, is only the Difference of that Darkness, through which the Light gives forth different Manifestations of itself. It is the same, whether it illuminates the Air, Water, a Diamond, or any other Materiality of Darkness. It has no more Materiality in itself, when it enlightens the Earth, than when it enlightens the Mind of an Angel, when it gives Colour to Bodies, than when it gives Understanding to Spirits.

Sight and Visibility is but one Power of Light, but Light is all Power, it is Life; and every joyful Sensibility of Life is from it. 'In Him,' says the Apostle, 'was Light, and the Light was 'the Life of Men.' Light is all Things, and Nothing. It is Nothing, because it is supernatural; it is all Things, because every good Power and Perfection of every Thing is from it. No Joy, or Rejoicing in any Creature, but from the Power and Joy of Light. No Meekness, Benevolence, or Goodness, in Angel, Man, or any Creature, but where Light is the Lord of its Life. Life itself begins no sooner, rises no higher, has no other Glory, than as the Light begins it, and leads it on. Sounds have no Softness, Flowers and Gums have no Sweetness, Plants and Fruits have no Growth, but as the Mystery of Light opens itself in them.

Whatever is delightful and ravishing, sublime and glorious, in Spirits, Minds, or Bodies, either in Heaven, or on Earth, is from the Power of the supernatural Light opening its endless Wonders in them. Hell has no Misery, Horror or Distraction, but because it has no Communication with the supernatural Light. And did not the supernatural Light stream forth its Blessings into this World, through the Materiality of the Sun, all outward Nature would be full of the Horror of Hell.

And hence are all the Mysteries and Wonders of Light, in this material System, so astonishingly great and unsearchable; it is because the natural Light of this World is nothing else but the Power and Mystery of the supernatural Light, breaking forth, and opening itself, according to its Omnipotence, in all the various Forms of elementary Darkness which constitute this temporary World.

Theogenes. I could willingly hear you, Theophilus, on this Subject till Midnight, though it seems to lead us away from our proposed Subject.

Theophilus. Not so far out of the Way, Theogenes, as you may imagine; for Darkness and Light are the two Natures that are in every Man, and do all that is done in him.

The Scriptures, you know, make only this Division, the Works of Darkness are Sin, and they who walk in the Light are the Children of God. Therefore Light and Darkness do every Thing, whether good or evil, that is done in Man.

Theogenes. What is this Darkness in itself, or where is it ?

Theophilus. It is everywhere, where there is Nature and Creature. For all Nature, and all that is natural in the Creature, is in itself nothing else but Darkness, whether it be in Soul or Body, in Heaven or on Earth. And therefore when the Angels (though in Heaven) had lost the supernatural Light, they became imprisoned in the Chains of their own natural Darkness. If you ask, Why Nature must be Darkness? It is because Nature is not God, and therefore can have no Light as it is Nature. For God and Light are as inseparable, as God and Unity are inseparable. Every Thing therefore that is not God, is and can be nothing else in itself but Darkness; and can do nothing but in, and under, and according to the Nature and Powers of Darkness.

Theogenes. What are the Powers of Darkness ?

Theophilus. The Powers of Darkness are the Workings of Nature or Self: For Nature, Darkness, and Self, are but three different Expressions for one and the same Thing.

Now every evil, wicked, wrathful, impure, unjust Thought, Temper, Passion, or Imagination, that ever stirred or moved in any Creature, every Misery, Discontent, Distress, Rage, Horror, and Torment, that ever plagued the Life of fallen Man or Angel, are the very Things that you are to understand by the Powers or Workings of Darkness, Nature, or Self. For nothing is evil, wicked, or tormenting, but that which Nature or Self does.

Theogenes. But if Nature is thus the Seat and Source of all Evil, if every Thing that is bad is in it and from it, how can such a Nature be brought forth by a God who is all Goodness ?

Theophilus. Nature has all Evil, and no Evil in itself. Nature, as it comes forth from God, is Darkness without any Evil of Darkness in it: for it is not Darkness without, or separate from Light, nor could it ever have been known to have any Quality of Darkness in it, had it not lost that State of Light in which it came forth from God, only as a Manifestation of the Goodness, Virtues, and Glories of Light. Again, It is Nature, viz., a Strife and Contrariety of Properties, for this only End, that the supernatural Good might thereby come into Sensibility, be known, found and felt, by its taking all the Evil of Strife and Contrariety from them, and becoming the Union, Peace, and Joy of them all. Nor could the Evil of Strife, and Contrariety of Will, ever have had a Name in all the Universe of Nature and Creature, had it all continued in that State in which it came forth from God. Lastly, It is Self, viz., an own Life, that so, through such an own Life, the universal incomprehensible Goodness, Happiness, and Perfections of the Deity, might be possessed as Properties and Qualities of an own Life in creaturely finite Beings.

And thus, all that is called Nature, Darkness, or Self, has not only no Evil in it, but is the only true Ground of all possible Good.

But when the intelligent Creature turns from God to Self, or Nature, he acts unnaturally, he turns from all that which makes Nature to be good; he finds Nature only as it is in itself, and without God. And then it is, that Nature, or Self, has all Evil in it. Nothing is to be had from it, or found in it, but the Work and Working of every Kind of Evil, Baseness, Misery, and Torment, and the utmost Contrariety to God and all Goodness. And thus also you see the Plainness and Certainty of our Assertion, that Nature or Self has all Evil, and no Evil in it.

Theogenes. I plainly enough perceive, that Nature or Self, without God manifested in it, is all Evil and Misery. But I would, if I could, more perfectly understand the precise Nature of Self, or what it is that makes it to be so full of Evil and Misery.

Theophilus. Covetousness, Envy, Pride, and Wrath, are the four Elements of Self, or Nature, or Hell, all of them inseparable from it. And the Reason why it must be thus, and cannot be otherwise, is because the natural Life of the Creature is brought forth for the Participation of some high supernatural Good in the Creator. But it could have no Fitness, or possible Capacity to receive such Good, unless it was in itself both an Extremity of Want, and an Extremity of Desire of some high Good. When therefore this natural Life is deprived of, or fallen from God, it can be nothing else in itself but an Extremity of Want, continually desiring, and an Extremity of Desire, continually wanting. And hence it is, that its whole Life can be nothing else but a Plague and Torment of Covetousness, Envy, Pride, and Wrath, all which is perfectly Nature, Self, or Hell.

Now Covetousness, Pride, and Envy, are not three different Things, but only three different Names for the restless Workings of one and the same Will or Desire, which, as it differently torments itself, takes these different Names; for nothing is in any of them, but the working of a restless Desire; and all this because the natural Life of the Creature can do nothing else but work as a Desire. And therefore, when fallen from God, its three first Births, which are quite inseparable from it, are Covetousness, Envy, and Pride: It must covet because it is a Desire proceeding from Want; it must envy, because it is a Desire turned to Self; it must assume and arrogate, because it is a Desire founded on a real Want of Exaltation, or a higher State.

Now Wrath, which is a fourth Birth from these three, can have no Existence, till some or all of these three are contradicted, or have something done to them that is contrary to their Will; and then it is that Wrath is necessarily born, and not till then.

And thus you see, in the highest Degree of Certainty, what Nature or Self is, as to its essential constituent Parts. It is the three forementioned inseparable Properties of a Desire thrown into a fourth of Wrath, that can never cease, because their Will can never be gratified. For these four Properties generate one another, and therefore generate their own Torment. They have no outward Cause, nor any inward Power of altering themselves. And therefore all Self, or Nature, must be in this State, till some supernatural Good comes into it, or gets a Birth in it. And therefore every Pain or Disorder, in the Mind or Body of any intelligent Creature, is an undeniable Proof that it is in a fallen State, and has lost that supernatural Good for which it was created. So certain a Truth is the fallen State of all Mankind. And here lies the absolute indispensable Necessity of the one Christian Redemption. Till fallen Man is born again from above, till such a supernatural Birth is brought forth in him, by the eternal Word and Spirit of God, he can have no possible Escape or Deliverance from these four Elements of Self or Hell.

Whilst Man indeed lives among the Vanities of Time, his Covetousness, Envy, Pride, and Wrath, may be in a tolerable State, may help him to a Mixture of Peace and Trouble: they may have at Times their Gratifications, as well as their Torments. But when Death has put an End to the Vanity of all earthly Cheats, the Soul that is not born again of the supernatural Word and Spirit of God, must find itself unavoidably devoured, or shut up in its own, insatiable, unchangeable, self-tormenting Covetousness, Envy, Pride, and Wrath. Oh! Theogenes, that I had Power from God to take those dreadful Scales from the Eyes of every Deist, which hinder him from seeing and feeling the infinite Importance of this most certain Truth!

Theogenes. God give a Blessing, Theophilus, to your good Prayer. And then let me tell you, that you have quite satisfied my Question about the Nature of Self. I shall never forget it, nor can I ever possibly have any Doubt of the Truth of it.

Theophilus. Let me however go a little deeper in the Matter. All Life, and all Sensibility of Life, is a Desire; and nothing can feel or find itself to exist, but as it finds itself to have and be a Desire; and therefore all Nature is a Desire; and all that Nature does, or works, is done by the Working of Desire. And this is the Reason why all Nature, and the natural Life of every Creature, is a State of Want, and therefore must be a State of Misery and Self-Torment, so long as it is mere Nature, or left to itself. For every Desire, as such, is and must be made up of Contrariety, as is sufficiently shown elsewhere.* And its essential Contrariety, which it has in itself, is the one only possible Beginning, or Ground of its Sensibility. For nothing can be felt, but because of its Contrariety to that which feels. And therefore no creaturely Desire can be brought into Existence, or have any possible Sensibility of itself, but because Desire, as such, is unavoidably made up of that Contrariety, from whence comes all Feeling, and the Capacity of being felt.

Again, All natural Life, is nothing else but a mere Desire founded in Want; now Want is contrary to Desire; and, therefore every natural Life, as such, is in a State of Contrariety and Torment to itself. It can do nothing but work in, and feel its own Contrariety, and so be its own unavoidable incessant Tormentor.

Hence we may plainly see, that God's bringing a sensible Creature into Existence is his bringing the Power of Desire into a creaturely State; and the Power and Extent of his own working Desire is the Bounds or Limits of its own creaturely Nature. And therefore every intelligent Creature, of whatever Rank in the Creation, is and can be nothing else, in its creaturely or natural State, but a State of Want; and the higher its natural State is supposed to be, the higher is its Want, and the greater its Torment, if left only in its natural State. And this is the Reason of the excessive Misery and Depravity of the fallen Angels.

Now the Contrariety that is in Desire, and must be in it, because it is a Desire, and the only Ground of all Sensibility, is plainly shown you by the most undeniable Appearance in outward or material Nature. All that is done in outward Nature is done by the working of Attraction. And all Attraction is nothing else but an inseparable Combination, and incessant Working of three contrary Properties, or Laws of Motion. It draws, it resists its own Drawing; and from this Drawing and Resisting, which are necessarily equal to one another, it becomes an orbicular, or whirling Motion, and yet draws and resists just as it did before.

Now this threefold Contrariety in the Motions, or Properties of Attraction, by which all the Elements of this material World are held and governed, and made to bring forth all the Wonders in all Kinds of animate and inanimate Things, this Contrariety, being the only possible Ground of all material Nature, is a full

* Way to Divine Knowledge; Spirit of Love.

Demonstration, (1) That Contrariety is the one only possible Ground of Nature and all natural Life, whether it be eternal or temporal, spiritual or material. (2) That no other Contrariety is, or can be in the Properties or Laws of Attraction in this material Nature, but that one and the same Contrariety, which was from Eternity in spiritual Nature, is inseparable from it, and can be nowhere but in it. For Time can only partake of Eternity, it can have nothing in it but the Working of Eternity, nor be any Thing but what it is by the Working of Eternity in it. It can have nothing that is its own, or peculiar to it, but its transitory State, and Form, and Nature. It is a mere Accident, has only an occasional Existence, and whatever is seen, or done in it, is only so much of the Working of Eternity seen and done in it.

For Attraction, in the material World, has not only nothing material in it, but is impossible to be communicated to Matter; or rather Matter has no possible Capacity to receive Attraction. It can no more receive or obey the Laws of Attraction, than it can make Laws for Angels. It is as incapable of moving, or stirring itself, as it is of making Syllogisms. For Matter is, in itself, only Death, Darkness, and Inactivity, and is as utterly incapable of moving itself, as it is of illuminating or creating itself; nothing can be done in it, and by it, but that which is done by something that is not material.

Therefore, that which is called the Attraction of Materiality, is in itself nothing else but the Working of the spiritual Properties of Desire, which has in itself those very three inseparable Contrarieties, which make the three Contrarieties in the Motions of Attraction. Material Nature, being an accidental, temporary, transitory Out-Birth from eternal Nature, and having no Power of existing, but under it, and in Dependence upon it, the spiritual Properties of eternal Nature do, as it were, materialize themselves for a Time, in their temporary Out-Birth, and force Matter to work as they work, and to have the same contradictory Motions in it, which are essential to eternal Nature.

And thus the three inseparable contrary Motions of Matter, are in the same Manner, and for the same Reason, a true Ground of a material Nature in Time, as the three inseparable, contrary, contradictory Workings of Desire, are a true Ground of a spiritual Nature in Eternity. And you are to observe, that all that is done in Matter and Time, is done by the same Agents, or spiritual Properties, which do all that is naturally done in Eternity, in Heaven or in Hell. For nothing is the Ground of Happiness and Glory in Heaven, nothing is the Ground of Misery, Woe, and Distraction in Hell, but the Working of these same contrary Properties of Desire, which work Contrariety in the Attraction of Matter, and bring forth all the Changes of Life and Death in this material System. They are unchangeable in their Nature, and are everywhere the same ; they are as spiritual in Hell, and on Earth, as they are in Heaven. Considered as in themselves, they are everywhere equally good, and equally bad ; because they are everywhere equally the Ground, and only the Ground, for either Happiness or Misery. No possible Happiness, or Sensibility of Joy for any Creature, but where these contrary Properties work ; nor any Possibility of Misery but from them.

Now Attraction, acting according to its three invariable inseparable Contrarieties of Motion, stands in this material Nature, exactly in the same Place, and for the same End, and doing the same Office, as the three first Properties of Desire do in eternal or spiritual Nature. For they can be, or do nothing with Regard to Earth and Time, but that same which they are, and do in Heaven and Eternity.

In eternal Nature, the three contrary Properties of Desire, answering exactly to the three contrary Motions of material Attraction are in themselves only Resistance, Rage, and Darkness, and can be nothing else, till the supernatural Deity kindles its Fire of Light and Love in them ; and then all their raging Contrarieties are changed into never-ceasing Sensibilities of Unity, Joy, and Happiness.

Just so, in this material System, suppose there to be nothing in it but the contrary Motions of Attraction, it could be nothing else but Rage against Rage in the Horror of Darkness.

But when the same supernatural Light, which turns the first fighting Properties of Nature into a Kingdom of Heaven, gives forth something of its Goodness into this World, through the kindled Body of the Sun, then all the fighting contradictory Motions of Attraction, serve only to bring new Joys into the World, and open every Life, and every Blessing of Life, that can have Birth in a System of transitory Matter.

Theogenes. Oh Theophilus, you quite surprise me, by thus showing me, with so much Certainty, how the Powers of Eternity work in the Things of Time. Nothing is done on Earth, but by the unchangeable Workings of the same spiritual Powers, which work after the same Manner both in Heaven and in Hell. I now sufficiently see how Man stands in the midst of Heaven and Hell, under an absolute Necessity of belonging wholly to the one, or wholly to the other, as soon as this Cover of Materiality is taken off from him.

For Matter is his only Wall of Partition between them, he is equally nigh to both of them ; and as Light and Love make all the Difference there is between Heaven and Hell, so nothing but a Birth of Light and Love in the Properties of his Soul, can possibly keep Hell out of it, or bring Heaven into it.

I now also see the full Truth and Certainty of what you said of the Nature and Power of Divine Love, viz., 'that it is perfect Peace and Joy, a Freedom from all Disquiet, making every Thing to rejoice in itself; that it is the Christ of God, and wherever it comes, it comes as the Blessing and Happiness of every natural Life; as the Restorer of every lost Perfection; a Redeemer from all Evil; a Fulfiller of all Righteousness; and a Peace of God, which passes all Understanding.' So that I am now, a thousand Times more than ever, athirst after the Spirit of Love. I am willing to sell all, and buy it; its Blessing is so great, and the Want of it so dreadful a State, that I am even afraid of lying down in my Bed, till every working Power of my Soul is given up to it, wholly possessed and governed by it.

Theophilus. You have Reason for all that you say, Theogenes; for were we truly affected with Things, as they are our real Good, or real Evil, we should be much more afraid of having the Serpents of Covetousness, Envy, Pride, and Wrath, well nourished and kept alive within us, than of being shut up in a Pest-house, or cast into a Dungeon of venomous Beasts. On the other Hand, we should look upon the lofty Eloquence, and proud Virtue of a Cicero, but as the Blessing of Storm and Tempest, when compared with the heavenly Tranquillity of that meek and lowly Heart, to which our Redeemer has called us.

I said the Serpents of Covetousness, Envy, Pride, and Wrath, because they are alone the real, dreadful, original Serpents; and all earthly Serpents are but transitory, partial, and weak Out-Births of them. All evil earthly Beasts, are but short-lived Images, or creaturely Eruptions of that hellish Disorder, that is broken out from the fallen spiritual World; and by their manifold Variety, they show us that Multiplicity of Evil, that lies in the Womb of that Abyss of dark Rage, which (N.B.) has no Maker, but the three first Properties of Nature, fallen from God, and working in their own Darkness.

So that all evil, mischievous, ravenous, venomous Beasts, though they have no Life, but what begins in and from this material World, and totally ends at the Death of their Bodies, yet have they no Malignity in their earthly temporary Nature, but from those same wrathful Properties of fallen Nature, which live and work in our eternal fallen Souls. And therefore, though they are as different from us, as Time from Eternity, yet wherever we see them, we see so many infallible Proofs of the Fall of Nature, and the Reality of Hell. For was there no Hell broken out in spiritual Nature, not only no evil Beast, but no bestial Life, could ever have come into Existence.

For the Origin of Matter, and the bestial earthly Life, stands thus. When the Fall of Angels had made their Dwelling-Place to be a dark Chaos of the first Properties of Nature left to themselves, the infinite Wisdom and Goodness of God created, or compacted this spiritual Chaos into a material Heaven, and a material Earth, and commanded the Light to enter into it. Hence this Chaos became the Ground, or the Materiality of a new and temporary Nature, in which the heavenly Power of Light, and the Properties of Darkness, each of them materialized, could work together, carrying on a War of Heaven against Earth ; so that all the evil Workings of fallen spiritual Nature, and all the Good that was to overcome it, might be equally manifested both by the good and bad State of outward Nature, and by that Variety of good and bad living Creatures, that sprung up out of it ; to stand in this State, viz., of a spiritual Chaos changed into a Materiality of Light striving against Darkness, till the omnipotent Wisdom and Goodness of God, through the Wonders of a first and second Adam, shall have made this Chaotic Earth to send as many Angels into the highest Heaven, as fell with Lucifer into the hellish Chaos.

But to return. I have, I hope, sufficiently opened to you the malignant Nature of that Self, which dwells in, and makes up the working Life of every Creature that has lost its right State in God ; viz., that all the Evil that was in the first Chaos of Darkness, or that still is in Hell and Devils, all the Evil that is in material Nature and material Creatures, whether animate, or inanimate, is nothing else, works in and with nothing else, but those first Properties of Nature, which drive on the Life of fallen Man in Covetousness, Envy, Pride, and Wrath.

Theogenes. I could almost say, that you have shown me more than enough of this Monster of Self, though I would not be without this Knowledge of it for half the World. But now, Sir, what must I do to be saved from the Mouth of this Lion, for he is the Depth of all Subtlety, the Satan that deceiveth the whole World. He can hide himself under all Forms of Goodness, he can watch and fast, write and instruct, pray much, and preach long, give Alms to the Poor, visit the Sick, and yet often gets more Life and Strength, and a more immovable Abode, in these Forms of Virtue, than he has in Publicans and Sinners.

Enjoin me therefore whatever you please ; all Rules, Methods, and Practices, will be welcome to me, if you judge them to be necessary in this Matter.

Theophilus. There is no need of a Number of Practices, or Methods in this Matter. For to die to Self, or to come from under its Power, is not, cannot be done by any active Resistance we can make to it by the Powers of Nature. For Nature can no more overcome or suppress itself, than Wrath can heal Wrath. So long as Nature acts, nothing but natural Works are brought forth, and therefore the more Labour of this Kind, the more Nature is fed and strengthened with its own Food.

But the one true Way of dying to Self is most simple and plain, it wants no Arts, or Methods, no Cells, Monasteries, or Pilgrimages, it is equally practicable by every Body, it is always at Hand ; it meets you in every Thing, it is free from all Deceit, and is never without Success.

If you ask, What is this one true, simple, plain, immediate, and unerring Way? It is the Way of Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God. This is the Truth and Perfection of dying to Self ; it is nowhere else, nor possible to be in any Thing else, but in this State of Heart.

Theogenes. The Excellence and Perfection of these Virtues I readily acknowledge ; but alas, Sir, how will this prove the Way of overcoming Self to be so simple, plain, immediate, and unerring, as you speak of? For is it not the Doctrine of almost all Men, and all Books, and confirmed by our own woeful Experience, that much Length of Time, and Exercise, and Variety of Practices and Methods are necessary, and scarce sufficient for the Attainment of anyone of these four Virtues?

Theophilus. When Christ our Saviour was upon Earth, was there any Thing more simple, plain, immediate, unerring, than the Way to Him? Did Scribes, Pharisees, Publicans, and Sinners, want any Length of Time, or Exercise of Rules and Methods, before they could have Admission to him, or have the Benefit of Faith in him?

Theogenes. I do not understand why you put this Question ; nor do I see how it can possibly relate to the Matter before us.

Theophilus. It not only relates to, but is the very Heart and Truth of the Matter before us : It is not appealed to, by way of Illustration of our Subject, but it is our Subject itself, only set in a truer and stronger Light. For when I refer you to Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God, as the one simple, plain, immediate, and unerring Way of dying to Self, or being saved from it, I call it so for no other Reason, but because you can as easily and immediately, without Art or Method, by the mere Turning and Faith of your Mind, have all the Benefit of these Virtues, as Publicans and Sinners, by their turning to Christ, could be helped and saved by him.

Theogenes. But, good Sir, would you have me then believe, that my turning and giving up myself to these Virtues is as certain and immediate a Way of my being directly possessed and blessed by their good Power, as when Sinners turned to Christ to be helped and saved by him? Surely this is too short a Way, and has too much of Miracle in it, to be now expected.

Theophilus. I would have you strictly to believe all this, in the fullest Sense of the Words, and also to believe, that the Reasons why you, or any others are for a long Time vainly endeavouring after, and hardly ever attaining these First-rate Virtues, is because you seek them in the Way they are not to be found, in a Multiplicity of human Rules, Methods, and Contrivances, and not in that Simplicity of Faith, in which, those who applied to Christ, immediately obtained that which they asked of Him.

‘Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will refresh you.’ How short and simple and certain a Way to Peace and Comfort, from the Misery and Burden of Sin! What becomes now of your Length of Time and Exercise, your Rules and Methods, and round-about Ways, to be delivered from Self, the Power of Sin, and find the redeeming Power and Virtue of Christ? Will you say, that turning to Christ in Faith was once indeed the Way for Jews and Heathens to enter into Life, and be delivered from the Power of their Sins, but that all this Happiness was at an End, as soon as Pontius Pilate had nailed this good Redeemer to the Cross, and so broken off all immediate Union and Communion between Faith and Christ?

What a Folly would it be to suppose, that Christ after his having finished his great Work, overcome Death, ascended into Heaven, with all Power in Heaven and on Earth, was become less a Saviour, and gave less certain and immediate Helps to those, that by Faith turn to him now, than when he was clothed with the Infirmary of our Flesh and Blood upon Earth? Has He less Power, after he has conquered, than whilst he was only resisting and fighting with our Enemies? Or has He less good Will to assist his Church, his own Body, now he is in Heaven, than he had to assist Publicans, Sinners, and Heathens, before he was glorified, as the Redeemer of the World? And yet this must be the Case, if our simply turning to Him in Faith and Hope, is not as sure a Way of obtaining immediate Assistance from him now, as when he was upon Earth.

Theogenes. You seem, Sir, to me, to have stepped aside from the Point in Question, which was not, Whether my turning or giving myself up to Christ, in Faith in him, would not do me as much Good as it did to them, who turned to him when He was upon Earth? But whether my turning in Faith and Desire, to Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God, would do all that as fully for me now, as Faith in Christ did for those who became his Disciples?

Theophilus. I have stuck closely, my Friend, to the Point before us. Let it be supposed, that I had given you a Form of Prayer in these Words. O Lamb of God, that takest away the Sins of the World; Or, O Thou Bread that camest down from Heaven; Or, Thou that art the Resurrection, and the Life, the Light and Peace of all holy Souls, help me to a living Faith in Thee. Would you say, that this was not a Prayer of Faith in and to Christ, because it did not call Him Jesus, or the Son of God. Answer me plainly.

Theogenes. What can I answer you, but that this is a most true and good Prayer to Jesus, the Son of the living God? For who else but He was the Lamb of God, and the Bread that came down.

Theophilus. Well answered, my Friend. When therefore I exhort you to give up yourself in Faith and Hope to Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God, what else do I do, but turn you directly to so much Faith and Hope in the true Lamb of God? For if I ask you, what the Lamb of God is, and means, must you not tell me, that it is, and means, the Perfection of Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God? Can you say, it is either more or less than this? Must you not therefore say, that a Faith of Hunger and Thirst, and Desire of these Virtues, is in Spirit and Truth the one very same Thing, as a Faith of Hunger, and Thirst, and Desire of Salvation through the Lamb of God; and consequently, that every sincere Wish and Desire, every inward Inclination of your Heart, that presses after these Virtues, and longs to be governed by them, is an immediate direct Application to Christ, is worshipping and falling down before him, is giving up yourself unto him, and the very Perfection of Faith in him?

If you distrust my Words, hear the Words of Christ himself; 'Learn of me,' says He, 'for I am meek and lowly of Heart, and ye shall find Rest unto your Souls.' Here you have the plain Truth of our two Points fully asserted, First, That to be given up to, or stand in a Desire of Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God, is strictly the same Thing, as to learn of Christ, or to have Faith in Him. Secondly, That this is the one simple, short, and infallible Way to overcome, or be delivered from all the Maligancy and Burden of Self, expressed in these Words; 'and ye shall find Rest unto your Souls.'

And all this, because this simple Tendency, or inward Inclination of your Heart to sink down into Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God, is truly giving up all that you are, and all that you have from fallen Adam, it is perfectly leaving all that you have, to follow and be with Christ, it is your highest Act of Faith in him, and Love of Him, the most ardent and earnest Declaration of your cleaving to him with all your Heart, and seeking for no Salvation, but in him and from him. And therefore all the Good, and Blessing, Pardon, and Deliverance from Sin, that ever happened to anyone from any Kind, or Degree of Faith and Hope, and Application to Christ, is sure to be had from this State of Heart, which stands continually turned to him in a Hunger, and Desire, of being led and governed by his Spirit of Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God. Oh Theogenes, could I help you to perceive or feel what a Good there is in this State of Heart; you would desire it with more Eagerness, than the thirsty Hart desires the Water-Brooks, you would think of nothing, desire nothing, but constantly to live in it. It is a Security from all Evil, and all Delusion; no Difficulty, or Trial, either of Body or Mind, no Temptation either within you, or without you, but what has its full Remedy in this State of Heart. You have no Questions to ask of any Body, no new Way that you need inquire after; no Oracle that you need to consult; for whilst you shut up yourself in Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God, you are in the very Arms of Christ, your whole Heart is his Dwelling-Place, and He lives and works in you, as certainly as he lived in, and governed that Body and Soul, which he took from the Virgin Mary.

Learn whatever else you will from Men and Books, or even from Christ Himself, besides, or without these Virtues, and you are only a poor Wanderer in a barren Wilderness, where no Water of Life is to be found. For Christ is nowhere, but in these Virtues, and where they are, there is He in his own Kingdom. From Morning to Night, let this be the Christ that you follow, and then you will fully escape all the religious Delusions that are in the World, and what is more, all the Delusions of your own selfish Heart.

For to seek to be saved by Patience, Meekness, Humility of Heart, and Resignation to God, is truly coming to God through Christ; and when these Tempers live and abide in you, as the Spirit and Aim of your Life, then Christ is in you of a Truth, and the Life that you then lead, is not yours, but it is Christ that liveth in you. For this is following Christ with all your Power: You cannot possibly make more Haste after Him, you have no other Way of walking as he walked, no other Way of being like Him, of truly believing in him, of showing your Trust in him, and Dependence upon him, but by wholly giving up yourself to That, which He was, viz., to Patience, Meekness, Humility, and Resignation to God.

Tell me now, have I enough proved to you, the short, simple, and certain Way of destroying that Body of Self, which lives and works in the four Elements of Covetousness, Envy, Pride, and Wrath.

Theogenes. Enough of all Reason. But as to Covetousness, I thank God, I cannot charge myself with it, it has no Power over me, nay, I naturally abhor it. And I also now clearly see, why I have been so long struggling in vain against other selfish Tempers.

Theophilus. Permit me, my Friend, to remove your Mistake. Had Covetousness no Power over you, you could have no other selfish Tempers to struggle against. They are all dead, as soon as Covetousness has done working in you. You take Covetousness to relate only to the Wealth of this World. But this is but one single Branch of it, its Nature is as large as Desire, and wherever selfish Desire is, there is all the evil Nature of Covetousness.

Now Envy, Pride, Hatred, or Wrath, can have no Possibility of Existence in you, but because there is some selfish Desire alive in you, that is not satisfied, not gratified, but resisted or disappointed. And therefore so long as any selfish Tempers, whether of Envy, Uneasiness, Complaint, Pride, or Wrath, are alive in you, you have the fullest Proof, that all these Tempers are born and bred in and from your own Covetousness, that is, from that same selfish bad Desire, which when it is turned to the Wealth of this World is called Covetousness. For all these four Elements of Self, or fallen Nature, are tied together in one inseparable Band, they mutually generate, and are generated from one another, they have but one common Life, and must all of them live, or all die together. This may show you again the absolute Necessity of our one simple and certain Way of dying to Self, and the absolute Insufficiency of all human Means whatever to effect it.

For consider only this, that to be angry at our own Anger, to be ashamed of our own Pride, and strongly resolve not to be weak, is the Upshot of all human Endeavours; and yet all this is rather the Life, than the Death of Self. There is no Help, but from a total Despair of all human Help. When a Man is brought to such an inward full Conviction, as to have no more Hope from all human Means, than he hopes to see with his Hands, or hear with his Feet, then it is, that he is truly prepared to die to Self, that is, to give up all Thoughts of having or doing any Thing that is good, in any other Way but that of a meek, humble, patient, total Resignation of himself to God. All that we do before this Conviction, is in great Ignorance of ourselves, and full of Weakness and Impurity. Let our Zeal be ever so wonderful, yet if it begins sooner, or proceeds further, or to any other Matter, or in any other Way, than as it is led and guided by this Conviction, it is full of Delusion. No Repentance, however long or laborious, is Conversion to God, till it falls into this State. For God must do all, or all is nothing; but God cannot do all, till all is expected from Him; and all is not expected from Him, till by a true and good Despair of every human Help, we have no Hope, or Trust, or Longing after any Thing, but a patient, meek, humble, total Resignation to God.

And now, my dear Friends, I have brought you to the very Place for which I desired this Day's Conversation; which was, to set your Feet upon sure Ground, with Regard to the Spirit of Love. For all that Variety of Matters through which we have passed, has been only a Variety of Proofs, that the Spirit of Divine Love can have no Place, or Possibility of Birth in any fallen Creature, till it wills and chooses to be dead to all Self, in a patient, meek, humble Resignation to the good Power and Mercy of God.

And from this State of Heart also it is, that the Spirit of Prayer is born, which is the Desire of the Soul turned to God. Stand therefore steadfastly in this Will, let nothing else enter into your Mind, have no other Contrivance, but everywhere, and in every Thing, to nourish and keep up this State of Heart, and then your House is built upon a Rock; you are safe from all Danger; the Light of Heaven, and the Love of God, will begin their Work in you, will bless and sanctify every Power of your fallen Soul; you will be in a Readiness for every Kind of Virtue and good Work, and will know what it is to be led by the Spirit of God.

Theogenes. But, dear Theophilus, though I am so delighted with what you say, that I am loath to stop you, yet permit me to mention a Fear that rises up in me. Suppose I should find myself so overcome with my own Darkness and selfish Tempers, as not to be able to sink from them into a Sensibility of this meek, humble, patient, full Resignation to God, what must I then do, or how shall I have the Benefit of what you have taught me?

Theophilus. You are then at the very Time and Place of receiving the fullest Benefit from it, and practising it with the greatest Advantage to yourself. For though this patient, meek Resignation is to be exercised with Regard to all outward Things, and Occurrences of Life, yet it chiefly respects our own inward State, the Troubles, Perplexities, Weaknesses, and Disorders of our own fallen Souls. And to stand turned to a patient, meek, humble Resignation to God, when your own Impatience, Wrath, Pride, and Irresignation, attack yourself, is a higher and more beneficial Performance of this Duty, than when you stand turned to Meekness and Patience, when attacked by the Pride, or Wrath, or disorderly Passions of other People. I say, stand turned to this patient, humble Resignation, for this is your true Performance of this Duty at that Time; and though you may have no comfortable Sensibility of your performing it, yet in this State you may always have one full Proof of the Truth and Reality of it, and that is, when you seek for Help no other Way, nor in any Thing else, neither from Men nor Books, but wholly leave and give up yourself to be helped by the Mercy of God. And thus, be your State what it will, you may always have the full Benefit of this short and sure Way of resigning up yourself to God. And the greater the Perplexity of your Distress is, the nearer you are to the greatest and best Relief, provided you have but Patience to expect it all from God. For nothing brings you so near to Divine Relief, as the Extremity of Distress; for the Goodness of God has no other Name or Nature, but the Helper of all that wants to be helped; and nothing can possibly hinder your finding this Goodness of God, and every other Gift and Grace that you stand in Need of, nothing can hinder or delay it, but your turning from the only Fountain of Life and living Water, to some cracked Cistern of your own Making; to this or that Method, Opinion, Division, or Subdivision among Christians, carnally expecting some mighty Things either from Samaria, or Jerusalem, Paul, or Appollos, which are only and solely to be had by worshipping the Father in Spirit and in Truth; which is then only done, when your whole Heart and Soul and Spirit trusts wholly and solely to the Operation of that God within you, in whom we live, move, and have our Being. And be assured of this, as a most certain Truth, that we have neither more nor less of the Divine Operation within us, because of this or that outward Form, or Manner of our Life, but just and strictly in that Degree, as our Faith, and Hope, and Trust, and Dependence upon God, are more or less in us.

What a Folly then to be so often perplexed about the Way to God? For nothing is the Way to God, but our Heart. God is nowhere else to be found; and the Heart itself cannot find Him, or be helped by any Thing else to find Him, but by its own Love of Him, Faith in Him, Dependence upon Him, Resignation to Him, and Expectation of all from Him.

These are short, but full Articles of true Religion, which carry Salvation along with them, which make a true and full Offering and Oblation of our whole Nature to the Divine Operation, and also a true and full Confession of the holy Trinity in Unity. For as they look wholly to the Father, as blessing us with the Operation of his own Word, and Spirit, so they truly confess, and worship the holy Trinity of God. And as they ascribe all to, and expect all from this Deity alone, they make the truest and best of all Confessions, that there is no God but one.

Let then Arians, Semi-Arians, and Socinians, who puzzle their laborious Brains to make Paper-Images of a Trinity for themselves, have nothing from you but your Pity and Prayers; your Foundation stands sure, whilst you look for all your Salvation through the Father, working Life in your Soul by his own Word, and Spirit, which dwell in Him, and are one Life, both in Him and you.

Theogenes. I can never enough thank you Theophilus, for this good and comfortable Answer to my scrupulous Fear. It seems now, as if I could always know how to find full Relief in this humble, meek, patient total Resignation of myself to God. It is, as you said, a Remedy that is always at hand, equally practicable at all Times, and never in greater Reality, than when my own Tempers are making war against it in my own Heart.

You have quite carried your Point with me. The God of Patience, Meekness, and Love, is the one God of my Heart. It is now the whole Bent and Desire of my Soul, to seek for all my Salvation in and through the Merits and Mediation of the meek, humble, patient, resigned, suffering Lamb of God, who alone has Power to bring forth the blessed Birth of these heavenly Virtues in my Soul. He is the Bread of God, that came down from Heaven, of which the Soul must eat, or perish and pine in everlasting Hunger. He is the Eternal Love and Meekness, that left the Bosom of his Father, to be Himself the Resurrection of Meekness and Love in all the darkened wrathful Souls of fallen Men. What a Comfort is it, to think that this Lamb of God, Son of the Father, Light of the World, who is the Glory of Heaven, and the Joy of Angels, is as near to us, as truly in the midst of us, as He is in the midst of Heaven; and that not a Thought, Look, and Desire of our Heart, that presses towards Him, longing to catch, as it were, one small Spark of his heavenly Nature, but is in as sure a Way of finding Him, touching Him, and drawing Virtue from Him, as the Woman who was healed, by longing but to touch the Border of his Garment?

This Doctrine also makes me quite weary and ashamed of all my own natural Tempers, as so Many Marks of the Beast upon me; every Whisper of my Soul that stirs up Impatience, Uneasiness, Resentment, Pride, and Wrath within me, shall be rejected with a Get thee behind me, Satan, for it is his, and has its whole Nature from him. To rejoice in a Resentment gratified, appears now to me to be quite frightful. For what is it, in reality, but rejoicing that my own Serpent of Self has new Life and Strength given to it, and that the precious Lamb of God is denied Entrance into my Soul. For this is the strict Truth of the Matter. To give into Resentment, and go willingly to gratify it, is calling up the Courage of your own Serpent, and truly helping it to be more stout and valiant, and successful in you.—On the other Hand, to give up all Resentment of every Kind, and on every Occasion, however artfully, beautifully, outwardly coloured, and to sink down into the Humility of Meekness under all Contrariety, Contradiction, and Injustice, always turning the other Cheek to the Smiter, however haughty, is the best of all Prayers, the surest of all Means to have nothing but Christ living and working in you, as the Lamb of God, that takes away every Sin that ever had Power over your Soul.

What a Blindness was it in me, to think that I had no Covetousness, because the Love of Self, was not felt by me! For to covet, is to desire. And what can it signify whether I desire This or That? If I desire any Thing but that which God would have me to be and do, I stick in the Mire of Covetousness, and must have all that Evil and Disquiet living and working in me, which robs Misers of their Peace both with God and Man.

Oh sweet Resignation of myself to God, happy Death of every selfish Desire, blessed Unction of a holy Life, the only Driver of all Evil out of my Soul, be thou my Guide and Governor wherever I go! Nothing but thou canst take me from myself, nothing but thou canst lead me to God; Hell has no Power, where thou art; nor can Heaven hide itself from thee. Oh may I never indulge a Thought, bring forth a Word, or do any Thing for myself or others, but under the Influence of thy blessed Inspiration!

Forgive, dear Theophilus, this Transport of my Soul: I could not stop it. The Sight, though distant, of this heavenly Canaan, this Sabbath of the Soul, freed from the miserable Labour of Self, to rest in Meekness, Humility, Patience, and Resignation under the Spirit of God, is like the joyful Voice of the Bridegroom to my Soul, and leaves no Wish in me, but to be at the Marriage-Feast of the Lamb.

Theophilus. Thither, Theogenes, you must certainly come, if you keep to the Path of Meekness, Humility, and Patience, under a full Resignation to God. But if you go aside from it, let the Occasion seem ever so glorious, or the Effects ever so wonderful to you, it is only preparing for yourself a harder Death. For die you must to all, and every Thing that you have worked or done under any other Spirit, but that of Meekness, Humility, and true Resignation to God. Every Thing else, be it what it will, has its Rise from the Fire of Nature, it belongs to nothing else, and must of all Necessity be given up, lost, and taken from you again by Fire, either here, or hereafter.

For these Virtues are the only Wedding Garment; they are the Lamps, and Vessels well furnished with Oil.

There is nothing that will do in the Stead of them; they must have their own full and perfect Work in you, if not before, yet certainly after the Death of the Body, or the Soul can never be delivered from its fallen wrathful State. And all this is no more than is implied in this Scripture Doctrine, viz., that there is no Possibility of Salvation, but in and by a Birth of the meek, humble, patient, resigned Lamb of God in our Souls. And when this Lamb of God has brought forth a real Birth of his own Meekness, Humility, and full Resignation to God in our Souls, then are our Lamps trimmed, and our Virgin-hearts made ready for the Marriage Feast.

This Marriage Feast signifies the Entrance into the highest State of Union, that can be between God and the Soul, in this Life. Or in other Words, it is the Birth-Day of the Spirit of Love in our Souls, which, whenever we attain it, will feast our Souls with such Peace and Joy in God, as will blot out the Remembrance of every Thing, that we called Peace or Joy before.

In the Letter on the Spirit of Love, you have been shown, according to the Mystery of all Things opened by the Goodness of God in the blessed Behmen, the Time and Place of its Birth. That it neither does, nor can possibly begin any sooner, than at the Entrance, or Manifestation of the Divine Light, in the three first wrathful, self-tormenting Properties of Nature, which are and must be the Ground of every natural Life, and must be Darkness, Rage, and Torment, till the Light of God, breaking in upon them, changes all their painful working into the strongest Sensibilities of Love, Joy, and Triumph, in the Perception and Possession of a new Divine Life.

Now all that we have said To-day, of the Necessity of the fallen Souls dying to Self, by Meekness, Patience, Humility, and full Resignation to God, is strictly the same Thing, and asserted from the same Ground, as when it was then said, that the three first Properties of Nature must have their wrathful Activity taken from them, by the Light of God breaking in upon them, or manifesting itself in them. Now this was always the State of Nature, it never was a State of Wrath, because it never was without the Light of God in it. But the natural, creaturely Life, having a Possibility of falling, and having actually fallen from God, has found and felt, what never ought to have been found and felt, viz., what Nature is in itself, without the Manifestation of the Deity in it.

Therefore as sure as the Light of God, or the Entrance of the Deity into the three first Properties of Nature, is absolutely necessary to make Nature to be a heavenly Kingdom of Light and Love, so sure and certain is it, that the creaturely Life, that is fallen from God under the wrathful first Properties of Nature, can have no Deliverance from it, cannot have a Birth of heavenly Light and Love, by any other possible Way, but that of dying to Self, by Meekness, Humility, Patience, and full Resignation to God.

And the Reason is this. It is because the Will is the Leader of the creaturely Life, and it can have nothing but that to which its Will is turned. And therefore it cannot be saved from, or raised out of the Wrath of Nature, till its Will turns from Nature, and wills to be no longer driven by it. But it cannot turn from Nature, or show a Will to come from under its Power, any other Way, than by turning and giving up itself to that Meekness, Humility, Patience, and Resignation to God, which so far as it goes, is a leaving, rejecting, and dying to all the Guidance of Nature.

And thus you see, that this one simple Way is, according to the immutable Nature of Things, the one only possible and absolutely necessary Way to God. It is as possible to go two contrary Ways at once, as to go to God any other Way than this. But what is best of all, this Way is absolutely infallible; nothing can defeat it. And all this Infallibility is fully grounded in the twofold Character of our Saviour; (1) As he is the Lamb of God, a Principle, and Source of all Meekness, and Humility in the Soul. And (2) As he is the Light of Eternity, that blesses eternal Nature, and turns it into a Kingdom of Heaven.

For in this twofold Respect he has a Power of redeeming us, which nothing can hinder; but, sooner or later, he must see all his and our Enemies under his Feet, and all that is fallen in Adam into Death must rise and return into a Unity of an Eternal Life in God.

For, as the Lamb of God, he has all Power to bring forth in us a Sensibility and a Weariness of our own wrathful State, and a Willingness to fall from it into Meekness, Humility, Patience, and Resignation to that Mercy of God, which alone can help us. And when we are thus weary and heavy laden, and willing to get Rest to our Souls, in meek, humble, patient Resignation to God, then it is, that He, as the Light of God and Heaven, joyfully breaks in upon us, turns our Darkness into Light, our Sorrow into Joy, and begins that Kingdom of God, and Divine Love within us, which will never have an End.

Need I say any more, Theogenes, to show you how to come out of the Wrath of your evil earthly Nature, into the sweet Peace and Joy of the Spirit of Love? Neither Notions, nor Speculations, nor Heat, nor Fervour, nor Rules, nor Methods, can bring it forth. It is the Child of Light, and cannot possibly have any Birth in you, but only and solely from the Light of God rising in your own Soul, as it rises in heavenly Beings. But the Light of God cannot arise, or be found in you, by any Art or Contrivance of your own, but only and solely in the Way of that Meekness, Humility, and Patience, which waits, trusts, resigns to, and expects all from the inward, living, life-giving Operation of the Triune God within you, creating, quickening, and reviving in your fallen Soul that Birth and Image, and Likeness of the holy Trinity, in which the first Father of Mankind was created.

Theogenes. You need say no more, Theophilus; you have not only removed that Difficulty which brought us hither, but have, by a Variety of Things, fixed and confirmed us in a full Belief of that great truth elsewhere asserted, namely, 'That there is 'but one Salvation for all Mankind, and that is the Life of God 'in the Soul. And also, That there is but one possible Way for 'Man to attain this Life of God, not one for a Jew, another for a 'Christian, and a third for a Heathen. No, God is one, and the 'Way to it is one, and that is, the Desire of the Soul turned to 'God.*

Therefore, dear Theophilus, adieu. If we see you no more in this Life, you have sufficiently taught us how to seek, and find every kind of Goodness, Blessing, and Happiness, in God alone.

The End of the Third DIALOGUE.

FINIS.

A SHORT but SUFFICIENT
CONFUTATION
Of the Reverend
Dr. WARBURTON'S
Projected DEFENCE
(As he calls it)
OF CHRISTIANITY, IN HIS
Divine Legation of MOSES.
IN A LETTER To the RIGHT REVEREND the Lord Bishop of LONDON.

By WILLIAM LAW, M. A.

LONDON:
Printed for J. RICHARDSON, in Pater-noster
Row. 1757.

A Short Confutation of Dr. Warburton's Defence.

My LORD,

THE Reason of my humbly presuming to write to your Lordship on the following Subject is, because it is a Matter on which your Lordship has employed your most excellent, and much admired Pen, greatly to the Instruction, and Benefit of the World.

And the Reason of my Writing at all, is owing to a Book newly published* in Defence of Doctor Warburton, in which your Lordship is with much Freedom, and more Injustice, charged with a Multitude of Contradictions, and Inconsistencies relating to this Point, in your Sermons, and other Discourses.

It is not my Design to enter here as an Assistant to your Lordship, or with any View of adding further Light or Strength to your Arguments, or to show the Weakness and Insufficiency of this Author's Attempt to puzzle and invalidate them : For either of these, is equally, and quite needless.

My intention is, as mentioned in the Title Page. And because Doctor Warburton has owned this Writer, as a most able Defender of his Scheme, and from whom He looks even for the Establishment of it, I have taken Occasion from his Book, to show, that it is a Scheme so contrary to Scripture, and the Truth of Things, as no Art of Words, or Stretch of Genius, however powerful in Paradox, can ever be able to support.

The Author of this Book, as Doctor Warburton assures us,† is too modest to make his Name known to the World; a Quality, which from the Reading of his Book, one would not suspect to be so predominant in Him.—But though Modesty has forced him to conceal his Name, yet he has given us some Information of his Character. He begins thus; ‘I, who am a bare Looker-on, and absolutely disengaged from all that Bias of Affection, which is so wont to warp the Followers of an old System, or the Inventors of a new, have done my best to examine this Question, with all Impartiality.’‡

Had one of the ancient Writers of Greece said this of himself,

* Free and Candid Examination of the Bishop of London's Sermons, &c.

† Preface to Critical Inquiry, &c.

‡ Examination, page 2.

how clear, and positive, might an able, modern Critic have been, from the decisive Words, a bare Looker-on, that he had never wrote upon the same Subject before. And that therefore, any Book of that Kind ascribed to him, must infallibly, and according to the best, and safest Rules of Criticism, be pronounced to be false and spurious. And yet, to the Confusion of Criticism, this Author, who unasked, and of his own free Motion, declares, that he begins this Work as a bare Looker-on, has for more than ten years before he made this Declaration, been sweating in the thickest Dust, and Heat of Doctor Warburton's most ardent Contention for Novelties.*

I have the Doctor's own Words for this, both for the Novelties, and this Gentleman's wonderful Zeal, and Skill shown in the Defence of them, so many Years ago.

'Notwithstanding, says the Doctor, all that can be said, much 'Clamour will ever attend Novelties, though never so strongly 'proved.—But Truth seldom thrives the worse, for unreasonable 'Opposition; and it would seem (N.B.) not to be far from its 'Establishment, when such Writers, as the following, appear in its 'Defence.—He hath established what he undertook to defend, 'with such Extent of Learning, and Force of good Argument, 'that I dare become responsible for all he says; and am willing, 'that those of my Opinions here debated, may stand, or fall, by 'the Strength, or the Invalidity of this Defence.†

This Compliment, so very hearty, as well as elegant, puts me in mind of another, which the learned Doctor made some Time since, to the whole Clergy of this Nation; 'a Body of Men,' says he, 'the most learned, virtuous, and truly Christian, that ever 'adorned a Church, or State.‡

These two Compliments are of so very high a Strain, that were it not for the Gravity of the Doctor's Character, and the Seriousness of the Subject, the Reader might have thought himself obliged to understand them both ironically. But if the Doctor meant no more by this, than to buy a Peace with the Clergy, it must however be said, that he gave more for the Purchase of it, than a Man of a scrupulous Conscience would have given.

However, the Compliment paid to this modest Gentleman (who to be sure, will now never be able to let the World know his Name) seems to have been comfortably received in secret, by the ample Return he has made the Doctor for it, in his new Book. Where, speaking of a Part of the Doctor's Performance, he says, 'For this Answer, I must refer the Reader to the D. L. where he

* Critical Inquiry, &c., published 1746.

† Preface to the Critical Inquiry, page 10.

‡ D. L., vol. ii., Preface, page 6.

'will find the Subject handled with that Force, Solidity, and Precision of Argument, which so eminently distinguish the Author from all his Co-temporaries.'

I shall now only just observe, that the Compliment made by the Doctor to the Clergy, has here very much Abatement made to it, by his great Ally.—For as Matters now stand, if this very Clergy, Good, Learned, and Christian, beyond anything ever heard of in the World before, should one and all unite in opposing the Doctor, all that they could possibly get by their Pains, would be only to show, how eminently he stands distinguished by Force, Solidity, and Precision of Argument from all his Co-temporaries.

But no more of this. Doctor Warburton grounds his Scheme upon the Doctrine of the Old, and the New Testament. But seeing he affirms that to be of the greatest Weight, which is taken from the New Testament, and this Author also begins there, I shall do so likewise.

First, I shall clearly evince, that there is not in all the New Testament, one single Text, which either in the Letter, or the Spirit proves, or has the least Tendency, or Design to prove, that the Immortality of the Soul, or its perpetual Duration after the Death of the Body, was not an universal, commonly received Opinion in, and through every Age of the World from Adam to Christ. Secondly, that this Doctrine, or Belief of a future State, was not designedly secreted, or industriously hidden from the Eyes of the People of God by Moses, neither by the Types and Figures of the Law, nor by any other Part of his Writings.—From whence I shall occasionally show, that the true Ground, Method and Power of Christian Redemption to eternal Life, preached by the Apostles, began with Adam, was the Religion of Adam, and all his Descendants. And also, that the Writings of Moses, and the Patriarchal Faith, give the very same full Proof of the Immortality of the Soul, or a future State, as the Gospel doth.

It must be needless, I think, to observe that the whole Merits of the Debate, betwixt Doctor Warburton on the one Side, and the whole Christian Church of all Ages, on the other Side, lie wholly in these Particulars, which, if they can be made good, the whole costly Fabric of the Doctor's projected Defence of Christianity (as he calls it), built at the Expense of such immense Treasures of Learning, fetched from all Quarters of the ancient, and modern World, must have the Fate which always happens to Castles built in the Air.

This learned Writer, to show, that the Immortality of the Soul, or its perpetual Duration in a future State, was entirely unknown in all the former Dispensations of God, until the coming of Christ, begins with this Passage of St. Paul. 'God ‘hath saved us according to his own Purpose, and his Grace which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the World began. But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished Death, and hath brought Life and Immortality to Light, through the Gospel.’

On which Words he thus proceeds: ‘We are told, that God, before the World began, had decreed to restore Mankind, to that lost Inheritance of eternal Life, which they should forfeit by the Disobedience of our first Parents. It is added, that this secret Purpose, and Design, was now at last made manifest, by the appearing of Christ, who hath abolished Death, and brought Life, and Immortality to Light by the Gospel. The Apostle mentions two Periods, one, when it was originally formed in the secret Counsels of God, the other, when it was published and revealed. The Opposition between these two States, seems necessarily to imply, that during the Interval, it remained a Secret.—If the Apostle may be allowed to be his own Interpreter, it will be easy to establish this Exposition by a parallel Passage in the Epistle to Titus. In hope of eternal Life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the World began, but hath in due Time manifested his Word through Preaching. Agreeably to this, the Author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, assures us, that the great Salvation of the Gospel, that is, the Promise of eternal Life, first began to be spoken by the Lord. But how could He be the first who taught this Doctrine, if Moses and the Prophets had taught it long before? Or how did He begin to speak of that, which so many others had been commissioned to teach before? Sometimes we are told, that Life and Immortality are brought to Light, sometimes that it was made manifest, sometimes that it first began to be spoken by Jesus Christ. The bringing to Light, and making manifest, are equivalent to the other of beginning first to teach. And if so, the Publication ascribed to Jesus Christ, must have been the first, and original Publication, and not merely the illustrating, or giving new Splendour to a Doctrine, by the Addition of one, or more Circumstances, unknown before. However, an eminent Writer (meaning your Lordship) assures us, that Jesus Christ did not give the first Notice of this Doctrine. All that I need remark upon it, is, that this Assurance seems directly to contradict the Word of Inspiration.’

Your Lordship has also said, that the ancient Revelations afforded a good Proof of a future State. This Writer makes great show of Triumph over this most true and well-grounded Assertion, and is continually bringing it forth as a Proof of your Inconsistency, both with yourself, and the Apostles.

But to follow him further: 'St. Paul,' saith he, 'observes, that Jesus Christ was sent to show Light to the People, that is, to the Jews, and to the Gentiles. It is plain from hence, that he was a Light to the first, in the same Sense, in which he was a Light to the last; and therefore as he was a Light to the Gentiles, by Revealing the Mystery of Redemption, in a Restoration to Life and Immortality, to them absolutely unknown, it seems to follow, that he also enlightened the Jews, by the Manifestation of a Truth equally unknown.—Agreeably to this Account of Things, Zacharias, in his Prophecy upon the Birth of John Baptist, says, "The Day-spring from on high hath visited us, to give Light to them that sat in Darkness, and in the Shadow of Death, to guide our Feet into the Way of Peace." A Description, which will by no means permit us to suppose, that they were enlightened with a good Proof of a future State. If they had been enlightened with such a Proof, they would have been in the Region of Life and Immortality, and not in the Verge and Shadow of Death. They would not have been sitting in Darkness, but walking in the Light, if they actually saw the grand Object in Question: How consistent it is, to assign a good View of an Object, to a People sitting in Darkness, must be left to the Judgment of others. However, this seems to be the necessary Consequence of affirming, that the Jews had a good Proof of a future Life.'

This is the glaring Contradiction, which he is continually charging upon your Lordship throughout his whole Book. Again he attacks your Lordship thus, from your own Words: 'St. Peter, says his Lordship, tells all Christians, that they are called out of Darkness into a marvellous Light. Ask the Evangelists, they will tell you, "The Day-spring from on high hath visited us, to give Light to them that sit in Darkness, and in the Shadow of Death." Ask any, or all the Apostles, and they will tell you, their Commission is, to open the Eyes of the People, and turn them from Darkness unto Light. But how could the Jewish People have a good View or Prospect of Life, and Immortality, if their Eyes were not opened? How could they be called out of Darkness, if their Situation presented them with a good View of an Object, which they were now first invited to behold? And how could they sit in the Shadow of Death, if they had been favoured with a good Proof of a future State?

'It would be ridiculous to say, that they sat in Darkness, or that they had not their Eyes, merely, because they did not see the Object in its full Proportions, or Extent, or had not an exact View of every distinct and minute Part, and the Oppor'tunity of examining and surveying it quite round. The sitting 'in Darkness and the Shadow of Death, evidently implies a total 'Absence and Want of Light, by which the People thus circum-'stanced, were to be enlightened ; it being impossible to express 'the most absolute and entire Ignorance in more significant, and 'emphatic Terms.'*

I have here, my Lord, made these large Quotations from this Author, containing all his chief Texts of Scripture, and his comments upon them, in his own Words, that there might be no Complaint of my robbing his Arguments of any of their Force, or of leaving out anything material ; for all that he further says on this Subject, whether in defence of the Doctor, or against your Lordship, is but mere Repetition.

I shall now show, that all his Reasoning upon these Texts is false in itself, and nothing at all to the Purpose, as not touching in the least degree the one great Point in Question, which is the Doctrine or Belief of a future State, or the Immortality of the Soul in a Life after this.—And this I shall do, by making it evidently plain, that not one of the Texts he has appealed to, nor any other in all the New Testament, proves, or has the least Tendency or Design to prove, that the Doctrine or Belief of the Soul's Immortality, and a future State, was not known in and through every Age of the World, before the coming of Christ in the Flesh.

This will be sufficiently done, by showing, that the Doctrine of the Immortality of the Soul, or the Certainty of its future Existence in some kind of Happiness or Misery in another Life, is a Matter about which these Texts say not a Syllable, but leave it as untouched as the Doctrine of the Pre-existence of Souls.

If it be asked then, What is the great Discovery, new Light and Knowledge, declared in these Texts, as newly made known to the World by the Gospel? It is answered, that the one only Thing meant both by the Letter and Spirit of all these, and every other the like Passages of Scripture, speaking of that Mystery, new Light, Discovery or Knowledge made known by the Gospel, and unknown before, is strictly and absolutely nothing else, means nothing else, points at nothing else, and has nothing else implied in it, but the one whole Process of Christ, in his Personality, his Birth, his Life, his Sufferings, his Death, his Resurrection, and Ascension into Heaven. This, and this alone, namely, The whole Process of Christ, in all these important Particulars of it, is the great Salvation, the great Mystery, the hidden Wisdom of God, &c., kept secret from the Foundation of the World, and not manifested, nor possible to be manifested, but by Christ himself entering into, and going through all the Parts of this Process.—Of this Process alone it is, that the Apostles speak, when they declare the Mystery opened in the Gospel, to have been a Mystery kept secret since the World began; and the Reason why it was so is plain, because it must be a Secret, and continue such, till what was contained in it came into actual Existence, and thereby manifested itself. For as Light can only manifest itself by coming into Existence, so the Mystery implied in Christ's Process, could only manifest itself, and nothing but its full actual Existence in all its Parts, could possibly be its Manifestation.

Of this Process alone, and its wonderful Effects, it is that the Apostles speak, when they glory of the Abolishment of Death, and of that Life and Immortality brought to Light through the Gospel. Because it is the Gospel alone, that manifests the actual Existence of this Process of Christ in all its Parts, in and by which alone Death has its Abolishment, and Life its true Resurrection. Nor do they ever speak of any Light, Life, or Knowledge, as formerly the hidden Wisdom of God, and now made manifest to the World, but solely that Light, that Life, and that Knowledge, which arises from, or is contained in some one or other, or all the Parts of our Saviour's Process, as the one only possible and actual Redeemer of the World, in and by, and through that Process.

That this is, and must be the plain full Truth of the Matter, viz., That the one only Thing, or Mystery discovered to the World by the Light of the Gospel, is solely the one whole Process of Christ, must be acknowledged by every considerate Man, even from the Nature of the Thing itself.—For what can the Mystery of the Gospel be, but the Mystery of Christ, as a Saviour, made known to the World? And what can the Mystery of Christ, as a Saviour made known be, but the Manifestation of what He is in himself, in the Power of his Personality, in the Efficacy of his Birth in our Flesh, in the blessed Effects and Consequences of his Life, his Sufferings, his Death, Resurrection, and Ascension into Heaven, as our second Adam, or Father of a new, heavenly Birth of the Divine Nature, derived into us by his wonderful Process in all its Parts.

Now as all these Particulars make up the whole Manifestation of the Mystery opened in the Gospel, so there is not in any of these Parts of our Saviour's Process, the least Implication, or most distant Hint given, that the Doctrine of a future State, was not as soon, as universally, and constantly known and believed, as the Fall of Man was. Nor do they any more imply, or suppose such Ignorance, than they imply, or suppose the Fall of Man not known, till Christ came in the Flesh.—Now that which is not taught in, and by the Process of Christ, cannot be taught by the Manifestation of the Gospel Mystery. But in all our Saviour's Process, there is not the least Possibility of making any Part of it to prove, that the natural Immortality of the Soul, or its certain Destination to a future Life after this, was not the common Belief, and Expectation of every Age of the World from Adam to Christ.

For this wonderful Process of Christ, which is the whole Mystery opened in the Gospel, is about quite another kind of Life in the Soul, than that which is implied, or consists in its bare Immortality. For Immortality, considered in itself, as a physical Necessity of its continuing in Life for ever, may as well be a Curse as a Blessing, and have Heaven or Hell for its Portion. But this is not the Life and Immortality that the Gospel boasts of. It leaves such natural Immortality, which belongs as well to the Spirits of Devils as of Men, as wholly untouched, as it does the Original of the Alphabet. And all for this Reason, because the one Knowledge which the former World wanted, and the Christian World got, is by all the Evangelists and Apostles solely confined to that, which Christ, as God and Man, was, did, suffered, purchased, and obtained, in and through the Power, Efficacy and Merits of his Process, till as a second Adam, he was placed at the right Hand of God in Heaven, with full Power of drawing all Men to himself.

It is the living Knowledge, the real Participation of all these efficacious, meritorious Parts of our Saviour's Character and Process, as a God incarnate, that contains all that Life and Immortality, all the glad Tidings of Salvation, and Light out of Darkness, made known to the World by Christ and his Apostles. Nor do they ever call the Attention of Mankind to any other new Light or Knowledge, but that of seeing and knowing, how every Part of Christ's Process had its particular and joint Efficacy, to destroy the Works of the Devil, and the Power of Hell in fallen Man.

This was the good News of Life and Immortality brought to Light by a glorious Gospel, which showed the whole Counsel of God towards fallen Men; how they were before the Foundation of the World seen in Christ Jesus, predestinated to be made conformable to his Image, who by all that He was, did and suffered, from his first coming down, to his Ascension into Heaven, was the one, only possible and infallible means of their partaking again of the Divine Nature.

Christ by his Process, became the Lord and Redeemer, the Quickener and Reviver of fallen Man, an over-ruling Principle of a Divine Life in all faithful Souls, by which, of Children of Wrath, and Heirs of eternal Death, they became Sons of God, and true Heirs of Christ's Glory and Ascension into Heaven, in and by the same Reality of a Divine Birth from him, as they were by Nature really born in Adam's Sin, and Heirs of his Misery in a cursed World.—This is the one Life and Immortality first made known by the Gospel.—Every Step of our Saviour's Process from first to last, was only so many necessary Steps of our Progress out of the eternal Death of Sin and Misery, into a Participation of an heavenly Life in Christ Jesus. And in the Boundary of this Process is solely contained all that Christian Theology, which makes up the whole Doctrine of Christ and his Apostles.—The Matter therefore plainly stands thus. First, the whole Mystery opened in the Gospel, neither is, nor can be any Thing else, but the Existence and Knowledge of this Process, and the Necessity and Efficacy of every Part of it, to change and purify the whole sinful State and Nature of fallen Man, and to bring again the eternal WORD, and SPIRIT of God into the natural Life of his Soul.—This is the one Immortality of Christians, which whether it be called the one new Birth, the one Salvation, matters not, for the Thing solely meant by everyone of these three Expressions is but one and the same.—Not one jot either more or less is meant by Life and Immortality, than is meant by the new Birth from above, nor is Salvation any Thing else in itself, but the new Birth of the WORD and SPIRIT of God in our Souls.—And every Soul that obtains not this one new Birth, obtains nothing of the one Immortality preached by the Gospel, but abideth in that Immortality of fallen Angels, which is, and is called eternal Death.—It is by this wonderful Relation between God and Man, begun and finished by the Process of Christ in our Flesh, that we by Faith are united with him, He in us, and we in Him. And this Union with Christ, not for a Time, but to all Eternity, purchased for us by all that He was, did, suffered and obtained, this essential Union with Christ, is our Participation of that one Life and Immortality made known by the Gospel. Which Life and Immortality is quite different from that natural immortal Duration of Souls, whether good or bad, and means nothing else, consists in nothing else, but in an acquired Birth of the heavenly Nature, and Righteousness of Christ in our Souls, begun by his Power in us in this World, and to abide in us, as the Glory of our Life, to all Eternity.—It is this our real, vital, essential Union with an eternal Jesus Christ dwelling in us, and we in him, that is the new Immortality which the Gospel alone could, and has made known to us.

Not a Word of any Life, but the one Life of God, not a Word

146 A Short Confutation of

of any Immortality, but the one immortal, heavenly Nature, and Holiness of Christ brought to Light in our Souls, is ever thought of or mentioned through all Scripture, as purchased for us by the precious Blood, and Merits of Christ.

And the Reason of this is very plain, for it was solely the Loss of the Light, Life and Spirit of God in the Soul, it was this State of the Soul fallen from a Life of God, into an endless Slavery under its own immortal, satanical Nature, that wanted, and only could be helped by such a Process of a God incarnate; not to continue the Soul in its Immortality, or perpetual Duration, not to inform the World of such a Duration, but to make known to Man, that by a new Grant of a new heavenly Birth, obtained by the Process of Christ, his natural State of Duration should be made an immortal, never-ceasing Participation, and Fruition of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, dwelling again in Man, as their redeemed Image and Likeness to all Eternity.

No Power of Reasoning, no Art of Criticism, can force one single Text of the New Testament to speak, or so much as hint at any other Life or Immortality but this, as first made known to the World by the Gospel.—The natural Immortality of the Soul, or its physical Necessity of never ceasing to live, whether happy or miserable, is no Part of its Redemption, but belongs to it as it belongs to all Angels, whether in Heaven or in Hell, and is an Immortality no more purchased for Man by the Incarnation of the Son of God, than the Immortality which belongs to Lucifer and his Angels, is purchased for them by it.—Therefore that Immortality which is natural and essential to the Creature, and is one and the same Thing, from one and the same Cause, in Angels, Devils, and the Souls of Men, cannot be that Immortality, which is the Gift of God through Jesus Christ. And therefore nothing that is said of that Immortality, which comes to fallen Man first, and only by Jesus Christ, can be the least Proof, that the Doctrine or Belief of the Soul's perpetual Existence in a future State came first, or only by Him, and was not always held by every Age, from the Beginning of the World.—For these two Immortalities are so different and distant from one another, in their whole Nature, that nothing that is said of the one, can be understood of the other. They are as contrary to one another, as Happiness and Misery.

Natural Immortality has its full Nature and Perfection in the fallen Angels, it cannot be better or higher in itself than it is in them; but the one Immortality that comes by Jesus Christ, is the Glory of the holy Trinity dwelling and manifesting itself in the immortal creaturely Nature of the Soul, as it does in the immortal Nature of Angels in Heaven.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 147

For this is a certain Truth, founded in the immutable Nature of Things, that all that is Divine and God-like in any Creature, dwells as a supernatural Gift or Operation of God in it ; which may be lost, as it was in Angels, and Adam ; and can be kept by no other Power but that of Faith, Adherence and Resignation to God ; nor regained, when lost, but by the Return of that same Faith, and full Resignation to God. So that the natural Immortality of Angels or Men, is nothing else but their Capacity or Fitness to receive the never-ending, but always increasing Manifestation of Divine Glory in, and through all their natural Powers. And this is the one Immortality made known, and purchased for us through the blessed Jesus, being and doing what he was and did, in our poor immortal Nature, that had lost its God.

But to consider now the Texts of the New Testament, on which this Author has endeavoured to establish Dr. Warburton's Opinion. The first and chief of these is that of St. Paul, in these Words : ' God hath saved us, according to his own Purpose, and ' his Grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the World ' began. But is now made manifest by the appearing of our ' Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished Death, and brought ' Life and Immortality to light through the Gospel.'

Now every Word in this Passage excludes all Thought and Regard to the natural Immortality of the Soul, and necessarily leads and confines us to that one Life and Immortality above mentioned, namely, to a Life and Immortality of the heavenly Nature and Goodness of Christ, born and brought forth in our Souls, as their immortal Treasure.—For the Life and Immortality here granted to us, or obtained by us, is expressly affirmed to be effected by Christ's Abolishment of Death. Therefore as is the Death here abolished, such must be the Life that is contrary to it, or brought forth in the Stead of it.

The Death here abolished is not the natural Mortality of Body or Soul, but is that same individual Death, whose Destruction is declared in these Words of the Apostle, ' Christ was manifested ' to destroy the Works of the Devil ' ; the Destruction of which is the one true Abolishment of the Death here spoken of, and from that Destruction comes forth the one true Life and Immortality, which is an eternal Union of Righteousness in and with Christ, as a Principle of a Divine Life eternally dwelling in us. That this is the one only meaning of the Death abolished by Christ, is evident from the whole Letter and Spirit of Scripture.—For the Death that Christ has abolished, or delivered us from, is the deadly Nature of Sin in the Soul.—Death and the Evil of Sin in the Soul, are everywhere considered as one and the same Thing, and Life and Immortality as coming from Christ, are everywhere considered as the holy and heavenly Nature of Christ begotten in us, and triumphing over this Death or evil of Sin in our Souls, for ever and ever.

Thus, 'There is no Condemnation' (that is, no Sentence or Power of Death) 'to them which are in Christ Jesus.' Therefore, to be in Christ Jesus, is to have that Life and Immortality which is brought forth by his Abolishment of Death; which Life, and Immortality of Life, is neither more nor less than what is expressed in these Words of the Apostle, 'Christ in us, the Hope 'of Glory.' The Apostle goes on, 'For the Law of the Spirit of 'Life in Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the Law of Sin 'and Death.' Sin therefore and Death are one and the same Thing, and Life and Immortality mean only and solely the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus, dwelling in us.

Therefore, the Life and Immortality here said to be brought to Light by the Gospel, hath no reference to the natural Duration or Immortality of Souls, but only and solely to a new Birth and Life of the holy Jesus, brought forth in the Soul by the Abolishment of the Death, or Power of Sin in it.

Again, 'To be carnally minded,' saith the Apostle, 'is Death,' this is the one Death that Christ is here said to abolish; 'but to 'be spiritually minded is Life and Peace;' and this is the one Life and Immortality of Life that Christ sets up in the Stead of Death, by making us spiritually minded, or as St. Peter words it, 'Partakers of the Divine Nature, by which we are made Children of 'God, and if Children, then Heirs of God, and joint Heirs with 'Christ.'

Therefore to be joint Heirs with Christ, by having the Nature of Christ brought to Life in us, is the one Life, and Immortality of Life first made known by the Gospel; not an Immortality considered as a Duration of the Soul's Existence, but an immortal Participation of, and ever enduring Union with the one Life, Light and Spirit of Christ.

The Nature of the Death said to be abolished, and the Nature of the Life and Immortality that was contrary to it, is fully set forth by that Contrariety which is between the State of the Law, and the State of Grace, which came by Jesus Christ.

The State of Man under the Law is called the Ministration of Death, and the Ministration of Condemnation, and this is the Death and Condemnation, abolished by Christ, as the Apostle expressly affirms, saying, 'The Law of the Spirit of Life in 'Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the Law of Sin and 'Death;' therefore the Death abolished, is the one Death of Sin, and the one Immortality, is the Spirit of Life, or ever enduring Holiness of Christ brought to Life in us.

Again, the Apostle says, 'if there had been a Law given, which could have given Life, Righteousness should have been by the Law.'

A plain Demonstration, that Life and Righteousness are put for one another, and are only two Words for one and the same Thing; and that therefore Life and Immortality of Life given us by Jesus Christ, is strictly and absolutely the one Life and Immortality of Righteousness, in, and from Christ's Nature and Spirit brought to Life in us.

Again, 'If by one Man's Offence, Death reigned by one, much more they which receive the Gift of Righteousness, shall reign in Life by one, Christ Jesus.' Therefore to reign in Life with Christ Jesus, or to have the everlasting Gift and Power of his Righteousness in us, is one and the same Thing, and the one only Life and Immortality of Life, that was first made known to the World by the Gospel.

Further, St. John saith, 'This is the Record, that God hath given unto us eternal Life,' surely this is the one Immortality brought to Light by the Gospel. But to show us what, and wherein this immortal, or eternal Life consists, the Apostle adds, 'and this Life is in his Son: He that hath the Son, hath Life, and he that hath not the Son, hath not Life.'

Therefore this Immortality, or eternal Life given unto us of God, not only has nothing in it concerning the natural Immortality of Souls, but is necessarily to be understood of quite another Matter.

For they only can have this eternal Life given to them of God, who have the Son; therefore it has no relation to the natural Immortality of Souls, and they can only have the Son, of whom it can be truly said, that 'Christ is of God become Wisdom and Righteousness, and Sanctification to them.'

From all these Passages, the Proof is as strong, as words can make any Thing to be, that the one Immortality of Life first made known by the Gospel, is, and can be in itself, nothing else, but the one immortal Life, Spirit and Righteousness of Christ, begotten and brought to Light in our Souls, in, and by, and through the efficacious Power, and availing Merits of all that he was, did, suffered and obtained in our Nature.

This Truth is further confirmed to us by Christ himself, who in a Variety of the strongest Forms of Expression, has confined all Life to himself, and shown us, that nothing is, or can be eternal Life given unto us of God, but solely that Life, which we have from him, by our full Union with, and Existence in Him, as the Branch is, and has its Life in and from the Vine, on which it grows.

Thus, 'I am the Way, the Truth and the Life,' therefore no other Life manifested by Him, but the one Life, that is in Him, no other Immortality offered, or made known to his, but the ever enduring Union of his immortal Holiness of Life, brought forth by a Birth of his Nature, and Spirit in them.

Again, 'He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet 'shall he live.' How dead? Why in the Death of Sin? How live? Why in a Life free from the Death of Sin, obtained by the righteous Life of Christ begotten in Him. Therefore Christ in us, is the one Immortality of Life, which we have from Him.

Again, 'Except ye eat the Flesh of the Son of Man, and 'drink his Blood, ye have no Life in you.' Therefore no Life, or Immortality of Life brought to Light by Christ Jesus, as a new Doctrine, first made known to the World by Him, but the one Immortality, which is only to be had by eating his Flesh, and drinking his Blood.

'Whoso eateth my Flesh and drinketh my Blood, hath eternal 'Life.' Surely this eternal Life, is the one Immortality of Life, brought to Light by the Gospel, and consequently no possibility of its being understood of the natural Immortality of Souls, or their physical Power of perpetual Duration in their creaturely Life.

For how ridiculous would it be, to say, that Souls, or Spirits, could have no Life of Natural Duration, except they did eat the Flesh and drink the Blood of Christ? And yet this must be said both of the Devils, and damned Souls, if the immortal Life here spoken of, as only possible to be had from this eating of Christ's Flesh and Blood, could possibly mean a natural Duration, or Immortality of Souls.

Further, the Reason given by our blessed Lord, for this eating, &c., is a still further Proof of all that has been urged above. 'He 'that eateth my Flesh and drinketh my Blood, dwelleth in me, 'and I in Him.' Therefore the eating the Flesh of Christ, is Eternal Life, for this only Reason, because by such eating, Christ dwelleth in us, and we in Him.

Therefore our dwelling in Christ, and He in us, is the one eternal, or immortal Life, only and first made known by the coming of Christ; further asserted in these other words: 'as I live by the 'Father, so He that eateth me, even He shall live by me.' Therefore no Life or Immortality of Life offered to Christians, but such an intimate essential Unity, or Oneness of Life, in and with Christ, as is that of the Son, in and with the Father. Agreeable to this Unity is the Prayer of Christ for all that are, or shall be 'his, that they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in 'Thee, that they also may be one in us:—I in them, and Thou 'in me, that they may be made perfect in one.'

As another full Proof of all that has been said, it may be added, that the Life and Immortality brought to Light by the Gospel, is purely conditional, and only offered to Mankind, as a Gift of God, upon certain Terms. And therefore does not, cannot mean an Immortality of the Soul's creaturely Life, or its perpetual natural Duration in a future State.

Thus, 'God gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him, should not perish, but have everlasting Life. Ye will not come to me, that ye may have Life.' Therefore the Immortality of Life revealed by the Gospel, is purely conditional, and adventitious to the Soul, such as may be received, or not received, and consequently cannot possibly be, or mean a natural Immortality, or perpetual Existence of the Soul, for such Immortality, if belonging to the Soul, is the Immortality of its own creaturely Life, which it has no Power of freely receiving, or not receiving upon Terms.

'My Sheep,' saith Christ, 'hear my Voice, and I give unto them eternal Life, and they shall never perish.' Now if by eternal Life, was here meant the eternal Duration of the Soul's creaturely Life, then it would certainly follow, that those who perish, because they have not this eternal Life, would be proved to lose their natural Existence, and become totally annihilated. So plain is it in the highest Degree, from all Scripture, that the Gospel does not first make known to the World an Immortality of Life, considered as the perpetual Duration of its creaturely Life, but only and solely sets forth such an Immortality of Life, as has no necessary Connection with the creaturely Life of the Soul; but may belong to it, or not belong to it, be received, or not received by it, according to its Faith, or want of Faith in God and Christ.

For if the natural Duration of the Soul, was not a Thing entirely distinct from, and independent of this Immortality made known by the Gospel, how could the Soul be capable either of receiving such a Promise, or the Thing promised? Must not that which receives, be distinct, and different from that which is received? Therefore the Immortality, made known as the Gift of God to the Soul, is, and must be a Life quite distinct, and different from the natural, creaturely Life that receives it. It has only, and solely the Nature of a Blessing; therefore as that which wants, and is capable of being blessed, must have its own Nature and Existence in itself, of quite a different Kind from the Blessing, that may, or may not be bestowed upon it; so it is with the natural Life of the Soul, it must have an Existence in itself, entirely different in Nature and Kind, from that Blessing of a heavenly Immortality, freely given by God to it, which is nothing else but a celestial Holiness, Purity, and Perfection brought forth in the Soul, by its having the eternal WORD and SPIRIT of God again restored to, and united with it; called Immortality, not because of its eternal Duration, but because eternally free from all that, which is Death, or the deadly Evil of Sin in the Soul; called also so, in Opposition to that natural Immortality, or Duration of Devils, and damned Souls, which though never ceasing, is only an eternal Death, not because it wants Life, but because the Image and Likeness of God is no longer living in it.—So that no Argument, from what is said of the Life and Immortality made known by the Gospel, can be drawn into a Proof, that the Doctrine, or Belief of a future State, was not the general Belief of the World before. Because the Immortality preached by the Gospel, is a Thing quite distinct and different from the natural, perpetual Duration of the Soul, and means neither more, nor less, than that Glory, and Perfection of a Divine Life, to which Adam died the very Day that He did eat of the forbidden Tree, and which is quickened and revived again, in and by the whole Process of Christ in our Nature. Which Glory of a Divine Life, whether it be called, the Image and Likeness of God, as in the Creation of Adam, or a being born again of the SPIRIT, and WORD, as in our Regeneration, or Life and Immortality, as by St. Paul; only one and the same Thing is meant by all these three different Expressions. For it is just one and the same Divine Truth to say, that Life and Immortality was brought to Light by the Creation of Adam, as to say that Life and Immortality was brought to Light by Jesus Christ; for as Christ came only to seek, and restore that which was lost, so the Life and Immortality which came by him, is that same Life and Immortality, which first came to Light in and by the Creation of Adam, or He could not have fallen from it, or wanted the Restoration of it by Jesus Christ. Therefore all that is meant by Life and Immortality coming only by Jesus Christ, is only this, that He, by all that He was and did, and suffered, and obtained by his Process, was the first and only possible Restorer of that heavenly Purity and Perfection in Man, which was first brought to Light in and by the Creation of Adam.—And to say, that this Life and Immortality was first made known, and published from Heaven, by the Creation of Adam, is the same Divine and indubitable Truth, as to say, that Adam was created in the Image and Likeness of God.

I come now, my Lord, to my second Proposition, namely, to show, that the Doctrine of a future State, or the Immortality of the Soul, was not designedly secreted, or industriously hidden from the Eyes of the People of God by the Types and Figures of the Mosaic Dispensation.—My Reasons for it are as follow. First, because it is a groundless Fiction and highly unworthy of God, to suppose, that it was, or could be the Nature and End of those Types and Figures, designedly to secrete, or industriously to hide from the People of God, the Knowledge or Perception of any Truth, natural, or Divine, much less the Knowledge of a Truth, absolutely necessary, and essential to the very Possibility of any spiritual Relation, or religious Communication between God and Man, as that of the Immortality of the Soul, is, and must be.—For though the Mosaic State, may be justly called a Shadow of Death, because the Power of Death, or Sin, was not destroyed in it, and a Region of Darkness, when compared to that Light which has arisen from the Process of Christ; yet considered as it was in itself, and so far as it went, and could go, and with regard to the People under it, it was a Degree of Light, and a Degree of Life, it was some Progress in the Victory over Death, it was some opening of Divine Light, a true Help to such kind of Knowledge, as could be had in such a State, as was only formed to support, and keep up a Faith, and Hope, and Expectation of such a Redemption to come, as had been promised from the Beginning of the World, but could have no open Manifestation in, or through any Age, till its own Existence manifested itself.—It is therefore a gross Mistaking the whole Nature of the Law, to consider its Types and Figures as designedly covering, or hiding any Thing from the Knowledge of Man.—Their Design was quite the Contrary, namely, to convey new Light, and further Information. And though they may be said to be a shadowy, and imperfect Representation, yet its whole Meaning, and Intent is, to lead to, and give some Knowledge of the Substance; and by its Marks and Signs to make the Things to come be more expected, than they would have been without such Types and Figures.

Doctor Warburton, speaking of typical Representation, saith, 'it necessarily implies the throwing a Thing into Shade, and 'secreting it from vulgar Knowledge.'

Typical Representation, in the Law, is not, cannot be the Throwing a Thing into Shade, or secreting it from vulgar Knowledge. For this supposes the Thing typified to have been already in Existence, or it could not be thrown into Shade, or secreted from vulgar Knowledge. But all this hath no Place in the Mosaic Types and Figures, they are not the putting any Thing already Existent, under a Cover from Inspection, but are a Degree of Light cast upon such a Matter, as had never shown itself, and which could therefore only be typically intimated, or pointed at, till it came into actual Existence.

Again, that typical Representation does not necessarily imply, the throwing a Thing into Shade, and secreting it from vulgar Knowledge, is plain from hence.—Water-Baptism, and Bread and Wine in the Sacrament, are certainly, and merely corporeal Types and Figures of spiritual Things; but if it was necessarily essential to typical Representation, to throw Things into Shade, and secrete them from vulgar Knowledge, it would necessarily follow, that these two Sacraments could have no other End, but to cast the spiritual Things of the Gospel into Shade, and Darkness, and secrete them from vulgar Knowledge. Type, Figure, and human Language, with regard to spiritual Things, have the same kind of Imperfection, though not in the same Degree, but yet teaching and informing, is the End and Design of both of them.

Of the Mosaic Types therefore it may justly be affirmed, that they were so far from designedly hiding, or covering any Truths from Man, that their whole Nature and Intent was, to uncover, and make less hidden (as far as they could) such Things as at that Time, could not be seen, or known as they were in themselves.—For nothing could possibly manifest the real Nature, Power, Operation and Efficacy of Christ's Process (the one only Thing typified) but its own real Nature, its own full Power, and redeeming Efficacy, come into actual Existence in all its Parts.—Therefore through every Age of the World, from the first Promise made to Adam, of a Seed of the Woman to bruise the Head of the Serpent, to that Time, all the religious Goodness of Mankind consisted in their walking before God in an implicit Faith of a full Redemption, made known to them under the Representation of a Seed of the Woman, overcoming the Mischief that the Serpent had done to them.—And through this Faith alone it was, that all the holy Men of old had their Righteousness, and Peace, and Union with God. And 'God was not 'ashamed to be called their God, inasmuch as having received 'the Promises, and seen them afar off, and embraced them, they 'confessed they were Strangers and Pilgrims on Earth, desired 'a heavenly Country, and through Faith looked for a City whose 'Builder and Maker is God.'

Hence are the following great Truths of Religion undeniably evident, (1) That Faith in Christ, has always been, and always must be, the one only Ground of all Righteousness, and Salvation possible to Man, in any Age of the World, past, present, or to come. (2) That this Faith itself, and all its Power and Efficacy, has always, as fully proceeded from Christ alone, as the Faith of those who believed in him, when come in the Flesh. For as then Christ truly said of himself, without me ye can do nothing, so it was equally true of the first promised Seed of the Woman, that without it, nothing good could have been done by fallen Man. No Abel, no Seth, Enoch, or Noah, &c., could have appeared amongst Mankind. (3) Not a Son of Adam, but has the first Seed of the Woman within him, the very same seed and Power of Christ in his Soul, from whence all the Saints of God, both before, and since the Birth of Christ, have had all their Holiness, Purity and Perfection.

Therefore, (4) the Covenant of God with all Mankind through Christ, is a living, operative Covenant of Life and Immortality, not first begun, or first made known, when Christ was on Earth, and died for us, but a Covenant as ancient as our first Parents, as universal as their Offspring; everywhere, and in all Ages of the World, vitally present to, and actually operative in every Man that is born of a Woman, from the Beginning to the End of Time.—And what the Apostle saith, that ‘God was in Christ’ Jesus reconciling the World unto himself,’ tells us a Truth and Goodness of God, that equally respects, and extends itself to every Nation, People, and Language, that ever hath been, or ever shall be upon the Face of the Earth.—Shem, Ham, and Japhet, Heathens, Turks, Jews, and Christians, are all from one Parent, and all in one and the same Covenant of Life. For the Seed of the Woman, the true and only Source of a heavenly Birth of Life, is with, and in them all, however they may in their several, and different Ways, act and rebel against it.—Yet this is an eternal Truth, that God’s Covenant standeth sure and steadfast, and no Man, wherever born, can possibly be separated from the Love of God, which is in Christ Jesus; it will always be active, and operative in every Individual of human Nature, till the last, great Separation of all that is Good, from all that is Evil, and the End shall be again in the Beginning.

But to return. As an implicit Faith in a promised Redemption, was all the Religion of the old World, and their true Union with all the whole Process of a Christ to come; so on the other Hand, all that could be done by the infinite Wisdom and Goodness of God, was according to the Fitness of Times, Seasons and Occasions (only known to Himself) to give forth such typical and prophetic Intimations of this Redemption, as should more and more direct and confirm their Faith, and prepare them and the World to see, and find, and know, that the whole Process of Christ, when finished, was that very Redemption first promised to all the World, in the Promise made to the first and common Father of all Mankind, and through succeeding Ages kept constantly in View, by a Train of Types and Prophecies pointing at it.

Secondly, As the History and Ritual of Moses did not, could not possibly design to take away Light or Knowledge of any Divine Truths from the People of God, so least of all could they designedly hide, or secrete from them a Sense, and Belief of the natural Immortality, or perpetual Duration of the Soul's Life. A Truth absolutely necessary and essential to the very Possibility of any spiritual Relation, or religious Communion between God and Man.

And indeed, Moses is as entirely free from any such Design, as the Apostles themselves.

For to say, that the Mosaic History, and Types of the Law have designedly hid, and secreted from the People of God, all Thought and Sense of the natural Immortality of the Soul, is as false, as bold, and extravagant, as to say the same Thing of the Gospel.

For in the New Testament, not a Word is to be found, that expressly affirms the Soul to be naturally Immortal; in this Respect the Law and the Gospel are equally silent; and yet neither of them secrete, or hide it from the People of God, but both of them do equally and fully prove, and with the same Kind of Proof, the absolute Necessity of believing it.

For as in the Gospel it is never expressly mentioned, or asserted, and yet is fully proved, because unavoidably supposed, and necessarily implied in and by the open, and plain Doctrines of the Gospel: so it is with the Books of Moses, they never mention, or expressly affirm the natural Immortality of the Soul, and yet give one, and the same full Proof of it, as the Gospel doth. Because the open and express Doctrines of the Mosaic, and every other Dispensation of God, from Adam to Christ, do openly teach Doctrines, which not by Inference and Deduction, but in the first and plain Nature of the Thing, unavoidably require, and necessarily imply, a real, natural Immortality, or never-ceasing Duration of the human Soul, and the common Belief of it in all Ages of the Church before the coming of Christ.

That the Gospel never expressly asserts any Thing about the natural Immortality of the Soul's Life, is enough shown in the above Establishment of my first Proposition. Where it is proved in the fullest Manner, that the one Immortality brought to Light by the Gospel, is nothing else in its whole Nature but that immortal new Birth of Holiness, brought forth and quickened again in the natural Life of the Soul, in and by, and through the all-powerful, life-giving Process of Christ in our fallen Nature. Which Immortality is nothing else in itself, but our eternal Union in, and with the heavenly Life and Spirit of Christ.

But the Gift of this Immortality in, and with Christ living in us, is a full Demonstration of the natural Immortality of the Soul, because it must be necessarily implied, and unavoidably supposed in the Power that we have to receive it. For an ever-enduring Holiness, and heavenly Perfection of Life, can only be given to, or received by an ever-enduring Creature.

For that which can lose, or again receive an immortal Union, or Fellowship with Christ, must of all Necessity be immortal in its own creaturely Life, and have a natural Life of its own, entirely independent of, and distinct from that immortal Union with Christ, which it may, or may not receive.

Now according to the Tenor of the Gospel, this want of Union with Christ, is, and is called eternal Death: Therefore the Soul must have an ever-enduring Nature in itself, or it could not be capable of an eternal Death.

On the other Hand, the obtaining of this Union with Christ, is the one Life and Immortality brought to Light by the Gospel, therefore this Immortality also unavoidably requires, and necessarily implies the perpetual Duration of the Soul's natural Life. For surely it may be affirmed, that nothing but an ever-enduring Life, or Creature, is capable of possessing and enjoying an eternal or everlasting Gift.

Therefore the Gospel, though never once expressly asserting, yet continually demonstrates the natural Immortality of the Soul.

And this is the whole Truth of the Matter, with regard to the Mosaic History and Types; they just hide it, in the same Manner as the Gospel hides it, that is, not at all; and they fully prove it, in the same Manner as the Gospel proves it, by Doctrines which necessarily require, and absolutely imply it, in the first Conception of them.

For the History of the Creation and the Fall of Man, contains an express Covenant of a Redemption, promised to Adam and all his fallen Posterity, in which a Seed of the Woman should do away the Evil, which the Serpent, or first Deceiver, had brought into the human Nature, that is, should restore the first, lost, heavenly Life of Paradise to all Mankind.

But this Covenant with God, and the immediate Benefit and Blessing of it, could neither be wanted nor received, but by immortal Creatures, that believed themselves to have an Immortality of Life, which had lost that Glory and Perfection which belonged to it at the first. Nor could such immortal Creatures have any Power of receiving, or entering into this Covenant any other way, than by an absolute, implicit, unlimited Faith in God. For it was a Covenant of an assured Redemption, or return of their first Glory of Life, without the least Intimation of the Time, or Age, when, or the Means, or Manner, how, it was to be brought to pass. Therefore such a Covenant, and such a Faith, in the very first Conception of them, without the least Reasoning or Deduction, absolutely imply, and necessarily require a full Belief of a future State.

And how could Almighty God better keep up a full Sense and Belief of it, or more fix and radicate it in the Hearts and Consciences of Men, than by placing, and fixing all their Faith, Hope, Life, and Comfort, in a Redemption certainly to come upon all the World, and yet might or might not come, till half the World was dead?

Or how could Mankind possibly give into this Faith, had they had the least Doubt or Suspicion of the Certainty of a Life to come? For their Faith in such a promised and expected Redemption, could not in the smallest Degree, be either more or less, than their Faith in, and Dependence upon a future State.

Therefore God's teaching, and requiring this Faith of them, was in the highest Degree his teaching, and requiring them to believe the natural, ever-enduring Life of their Souls. Consequently, in the first Revelation of God to Man, Life and Immortality, as it means an ever-enduring State of the Soul, was as fully, and in the same Degree brought to Light, as in the Revelation of the Gospel. For the Proof of it is just the same in one, as in the other.

In the Gospel it is proved, because an Immortality of a heavenly Life is made known, purchased and given by Christ, which necessarily supposes, and implies an immortal Nature in Man, or He could not receive, or partake of it.

In the first Revelation, it is equally proved, because a Redemption to come, that was to be waited for, and obtained by an implicit Faith, without any Regard to, or Knowledge of the Time when it was to appear, whether before or after many and many Generations of Men were dead and gone, unavoidably requires, and necessarily implies a full Belief of a State belonging to Man, that is beyond Time, and the Death of the Body.

This Proof of the natural Immortality of the Soul, thus inseparable from the first Revelation of God, is so strong, that nothing need, or hardly can be added to it. For how could God more fully assert the Immortality of our Nature, than by requiring our Faith in such a Redemption? Or how could Man more strongly declare his full Belief of, and Dependence upon such Immortality, than by his Faith in a Redemption that had nothing to do with Time, or the Life, or Death of the Body in this present World?

Again, The Murder, or rather the Martyrdom of Abel, and the Translation of Enoch into Heaven, both recorded by Moses for the Instruction of the People in this very Point, are two undeniable Examples, or rather first Fruits of the Redemption promised to Adam, and all Mankind; two invincible Proofs, that this first Covenant was certainly a Covenant of Life and Immortality in a future State, confirmed to Mankind by Facts strong and convincing, like those of Christ's Resurrection from Death, and Ascension into Heaven.

For immediately after a Covenant of Redemption was made with all Mankind, the First good Man after it, in the very Beginning of the World, and the Beginning of his own Life, after his first Act of Divine Worship, and as soon as God had declared his good Pleasure in it, this first good Man was slaughtered like a Beast, and his Blood poured out upon the Earth.

Now can there possibly be a fuller Demonstration, that the Covenant of Redemption made by God with Man, was for a Life and Immortality in another or future State? Otherwise it must follow, that the first good Man in the World lost all the Benefit of God's Covenant, merely because he was good; that He lost all the Life that he had to lose, and all that was dear and precious both to Body and Soul, merely through the Devotion that he showed towards God, and the Favour which God showed towards him.

Therefore either Abel's Blood cries aloud the absolute Certainty of a future State, or Abel must be said to have been undone, ruined, and utterly deprived of all that was, or could be any good to him, purely because of a Friendship discovered between God and him.

This Fact therefore, recorded by the Spirit of God through Moses, tells, and assures all the Mosaic Generations in the strongest Manner, that another Life and another World belonged to Abel and to them, besides that which Abel lost by his Death. Does it not as directly, and openly declare this to them, as when Christ said, his 'Kingdom was not of this World?' Does it not say the same Thing to them, as when Christ said to his Disciples, 'fear not them that can only kill the Body'? The same Thing, as the Voice from Heaven, which cried, 'Blessed are the Dead that die in the Lord'?

Again, Another Proof of the same Force and Kind, is the Translation of Enoch. The Spirit of God saith by Moses, 'Enoch walked with God, and was not, for God took him.' Now, could any the most expressive Form of Words, have told the ancient World with more Certainty than this Fact does, that God's Covenant with Man, was for a Kingdom of Heaven?

Our blessed Lord, when speaking of his own Departure out of this World, saith to his Disciples, 'I go to prepare a Place for you, that where I am, there ye may be also.' And does not

Enoch's Translation into Heaven, directly and fully say as much, as if he had been sent again by God to say, 'God has taken me 'from this World into Heaven, to make it manifest to you, that 'where I am gone, there are ye to come also.'

Behold here the adorable Goodness of God to the first and succeeding Ages of the World! These two great Articles of Faith, which are now the Comfort and Support of the Christian World, namely, Victory over Death, and Ascension into Heaven, had the utmost and most convincing Proof given to them by God.

The old World, from the first Man, were all in a Covenant of Redemption.—Life and Immortality was in the fullest Manner, both by Doctrine and Example, made known to them, and nothing remained as a Mystery or Wisdom hidden in God, to be revealed in the last Times, but that one only Thing which could not be manifested, till by its own actual Existence it manifested itself, namely, the wonderful, efficacious, meritorious Process of Christ in our fallen Nature. By which Process alone it was, that all the Faith as well before as after Christ, had all its Efficacy to a full obtaining of that heavenly Life, which the human Nature had lost.

Thus stood the Faith of the Patriarchal World, which Faith in itself, or its true Root and Ground, was an incorruptible Seed, or Power of the WORD of God in their Souls, a Pledge of the heavenly Birth from above, a Tasting of the Powers of the World to come, which having not seen, yet believing, they rejoiced with Joy unspeakable and full of Glory.

For as every Son of fallen Adam hath the Seed of the Serpent, the Tree of Death, the Power of Satan and Darkness made alive in him, from all which he has his Faith, his Hope, and Love of this World, his ever-working Covetousness, Ambition, and Pride of Life; so every Son of Adam, from the first Covenant of Life restored in Paradise, is born into this World with the Seed of the Woman, the Tree of Life, and the Power of Christ, and Light from above in his Soul; whence alone, and from no other possible Thing else, he hath all his Faith, Hunger, Love and Desire of God and heavenly Goodness, that he ever can have.

Hence it is, that the Faith and Religion of the first World was in Substance, Truth, and Reality, the very Christian Faith and Christian Religion, one and the same Way, Means, and Power of Salvation; which Oneness consists unchangeably in this, that Christ, the same Yesterday, to Day, and for ever, was the same one Mediator between God and Man from the Beginning of the World, one and the same Power of Life and Salvation to murdered Abel, as to martyred Stephen.

This Faith from this Original, was their true Peace, and Reunion with God through Jesus Christ, the very same Faith of which Christ saith, 'He that believeth in me shall never die.' The same Faith of which He again saith, 'If any Man thirst, let 'him come unto me and drink; he that believeth in me, out of 'his Belly shall flow Rivers of living Water.' The very same Faith of which He saith, 'He that drinketh the Water that I 'shall give him, shall never thirst. He that eateth my Flesh, and 'drinketh my Blood, dwelleth in me and I in him.'

That this was the Nature and Power of the catholic, living, saving Faith, common to all the patriarchal Ages, we are fully assured by the Spirit of God in the Epistles to the Corinthians and Hebrews, telling in express Words, 'That they did all eat 'the same spiritual Meat, did all drink the same spiritual Drink, 'for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and 'that Rock was Christ.'

Are we not here told expressly by the Spirit of God, that very same Thing of the patriarchal Generations, which the Christ of God said to those that believed in Him, that by eating his Flesh, and drinking his Blood, they have eternal Life.

In the eleventh Chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews, the same Spirit of God, speaking of the patriarchal Ages, saith, 'All 'these died in Faith, not having received the Promises, but having 'seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced 'them, and confessed they were Strangers and Pilgrims on Earth, '—who desired a better Country, that is, an Heavenly.'

Dr. Warburton is so out of Humour with this whole Chapter, thus full of patriarchal Light and Glory, that he gives it the heathenish Name of the Palladium of the Cause, which he had undertaken to demolish. And he accordingly attacks it with a Number of critical Inventions, that may as truly be called heathenish; for they are in direct Opposition to all Christian Theology.

For he thus begins; He will have it, that the Faith set forth in this whole Chapter, is concerning a Faith in the Abstract, and not a specific Faith in the Messiah. An Invention, as little grounded in the Gospel, as Goodness in the Abstract, in opposition to specific Goodness. Goodness in the Abstract, if it hath any meaning, is all Goodness, and therefore must have every Species of Goodness in it; so Faith in the Abstract, if it hath any meaning, is all Faith, and therefore must have every Species of Faith in it. Now if the Doctor will have the Apostle speak of a Faith in the Abstract, which yet wants the specific Faith in the Messiah, his Faith in the Abstract, is but like that Goodness in the Abstract, which keepeth the whole Law, and yet offendeth in one Point.

His first Reason, why this whole Chapter is concerning a Faith in the Abstract, and not a Faith in the Messiah, is taken from that Definition of Faith there given, namely, 'The Substance of Things hoped for, the Evidence of Things not seen.'

And yet this very Definition, if it had been ever so much intended, to give the most precise and distinct Idea of the Nature of Faith in the Messiah, could not have been better expressed, for there is every Thing in it, that can fully and truly set forth that very Faith above all Mistake. For if Faith in a Messiah to come, must be a Faith in Things hoped for, and a Reliance and Dependence upon the Certainty of Things not seen, if this, and nothing but this, can be a true Faith in a Messiah to come, how could it possibly be more precisely described, or more directly pointed at, than by making it to be 'the Substance of Things hoped for, the Evidence of Things not seen'?

For in this Definition, not only the true Object, but the true Efficacy of Faith in the Messiah is fully set forth, in that it is made to be such a real, vital Foretaste, and Participation of Things hoped for, and not seen, as is justly called, the very Substance and Evidence of them.

Again, the Doctor appeals to the following Words, as another Proof, that the Faith described in this Chapter, is not a Faith in the Messiah, viz., 'He that cometh to God, must believe that He is, and that He is a Rewarder of all those that diligently seek Him.' Which Words contain neither more nor less, than if it had been said, 'He that cometh to God, must believe that He is 'a Fulfiller of his Promises to all those that truly believe in Him, 'and them': For God cannot be considered as a Rewarder of Mankind, in any other Sense, than as He is a Fulfiller of his Promises made to Mankind in the Covenant of a Messiah. For God could not give, nor Man receive any Rewards or Blessings, but in and through the one Mediator Christ Jesus.—Without Him no possible Intercourse, or Reconciliation between God and fallen Man. Therefore to trust, or believe in God, as a Rewarder, and Blessor, is the very Truth, and Reality of a right Faith in the Messiah.

The Doctor has another Proof, which He says, puts the Matter out of all Doubt, which is this. In this Chapter it is said, by Faith Rahab the Harlot escaped, by Faith the Israelites passed through the Red Sea, by Faith the Walls of Jericho fell down. But was any of this, saith the Doctor, a Faith in Jesus the Messiah?

Now not to rob this Argumentation of any of its Strength, it must be allowed to proceed thus.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 163

Joshua's Faith could not be in the Messiah, or the Promises of God made to his Forefathers. But why so? Because by his Faith the Walls of Jericho fell down.

Just as theologically argued, as if it had been said, Abel's Faith could not possibly be a Faith in the Seed of the Woman, promised to his Parents; because by his Faith 'he offered unto God a more acceptable Sacrifice than Cain.'

Enoch's Faith could not be in a Messiah to come, because by his Faith he was immediately taken up to God.

Abraham's Faith could not be in the Messiah, because by his Faith, 'He sojourned in a strange Country, chose to dwell in 'Tents, and looked for a City that hath Foundations, whose 'Builder and Maker is God.' His Faith could not be in a Messiah to come, in a Redeemer given to all Mankind, because by his 'Faith he offered up Isaac, his only begotten Son.'

Having set the Doctor's Argument in its best Light, no more need be said about the Worth of it.

At last comes his invincible Argument, which if it were as strong, as he gives out, all that went before might have been spared.

'To evince it impossible,' says the Doctor, 'that Faith in the 'Messiah, should be meant by the Faith in this eleventh Chapter, 'the Apostle expressly saith, that all those, to whom he assigns 'this Faith, had not received the Promises, therefore they could 'not have Faith in that, which was never proposed to their Faith. 'For how should they believe on him of whom they had not 'heard?'

Now if this Argument has any good Logic, or true Theology in it, it must necessarily follow, that no one, whether Patriarch or Prophet, before, or after the Law, ever had, or could have Faith in the Messiah, for all who died before the Birth of Christ, must have died without receiving the Promises, which only could, and were then first received, when good old Simeon could sing, 'Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, for mine 'Eyes have seen thy Salvation.' Till this Time, there was no Receiving of the Promises.

St. Paul, speaking to the Jews, saith, 'Behold, we declare 'unto you glad Tidings, how that the Promise, which was made 'unto the Fathers, God hath fulfilled the same to us their 'Children.'

Here, by the Spirit of God himself, is made known to us, the true Difference between receiving, and not receiving the Promises. The Fathers, to whom the Promises were only made, and who could only see them afar off, are those who died without receiving the Promises, that is, without receiving the Things promised.

164 A Short Confutation of

And their Children who lived to see the Promises fulfilled, are they that can be only said to have received the Promises, that is, the Things promised.

Further, the Spirit of God saith, 'All these died in the Faith, 'not having received the Promises.'

But why, or how could they die in this Faith? It was for this only Reason, because they had not received the Promises, that is, the Things promised. For if they had, they could not have died in Faith, but in the Enjoyment of the Things promised.

The Doctor therefore has unluckily pitched upon That, as an Argument against the Possibility of their Faith in the Messiah, which is in itself the only true Reason, why they could possibly die in the Faith of Him. For the holy Spirit saith, they all died in the Faith; and then the Reason is added, why they did, and and could, namely, because not having received the Promises, therefore their not having received the Promises, is the Reason why they could die in the Faith of them. And their Faith had this Foundation, because they had seen the Things promised, as afar off, that is, long after their own Deaths, and therefore to be fulfilled, or made good in a future Life. Consequently, their Faith was in a Redemption to come in a Life after this; which surely may be affirmed to be a true and right Faith in the promised Messiah, or in all That, which had been promised, or could be expected from the first joyful Notice, and absolutely infallible Assurance which God gave of Him, 'in a Seed of the Woman to 'bruise the Head of the Serpent.' Which in Gospel Language is called, 'destroying the Works of the Devil,' and bringing all that to Life and Immortality again, which died in Adam's Transgression.

It is added of these holy Men dying in the Faith of Promises seen afar off, that they 'were persuaded of them, and embraced 'them, and confessed they were Strangers and Pilgrims on the 'Earth; and they that say such Things, plainly declare, that they 'seek a better Country, that is, an Heavenly.'

What an Extravagance is it therefore in the learned Doctor, to say in the Words of the Apostle, 'How should they believe in 'Him of whom they have not heard'; as in the least Degree applicable to those departed Saints of the old World? For their Faith was in Promises made to them, but not fulfilled before their Deaths, which they beholding as afar off, died in the fullest Faith and Expectation of a blessed Life and heavenly Country in Virtue of them. Therefore they believed in That, of which they had heard, they knew what it was that they believed, namely, a Redemption from all the Evil of their fallen State, or Pilgrimage on Earth, to a Life in Heaven; which surely may be allowed not only to be a Faith in Him, who was to redeem them, but such a Faith, as had all the Properties, and every Perfection, that the truest Faith in the Messiah to come, could possibly have. For as a Messiah to come, could only be acknowledged by an implicit Faith in That, which was to be done by Him; which was the Redemption of Mankind, or a Restoration of their first, lost State of Life, so their Faith, however good and true, could only be a Fulness of Faith in the Thing itself, without knowing what, or what manner of Person, their Redeeming Messiah was to be. Which could only then be first known, when this promised Redeemer should manifest Himself, as was done in the Wonderful Birth, and whole Process of Christ in all its Parts.

Our blessed Lord said to the Jews, 'Your Father Abraham rejoiced to see my Day, and he saw it, and was glad.' Surely then Abraham had Faith in the Messiah, and yet he is numbered by the Apostle amongst those, who died not having received the Promises, that is, not having seen them fulfilled.

But now, though Abraham's rejoicing at the Sight of that Day, was a sufficient Proof, that his Faith was in the Messiah, yet the implicit Faith of the more ancient, patriarchal World in That, which they had not seen, as Abraham had, was as right, as full, and blessed a Faith in the Messiah, as Abraham's was. This point is absolutely determined, in the following Words of Christ. 'Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they, which have not seen, and yet have believed.'

This, and this alone, is the only real Difference between the Religion of the Faithful before, and after Christ. Before Christ, the Living Faith, and Substantial Hope, was in a Messiah to come in some wonderful, but unknown way of Power and Victory, over every Misery into which Man was fallen. By this Faith, they stood under the blessed Power of the Seed of the Woman, and from Generation to Generation were kept in the one true Covenant of Grace, of Life, of Love and Union with God, through that very Cross of Christ, which is now the Faith and Glory of Christians.

After Christ, the same Living Faith, and Substantial Hope, rejoiced in a Messiah made known by a miraculous, and Divine Birth, in the fallen human Nature, leading it through a necessary Process of an efficacious Purification, redeeming and raising it out of every Evil of Life, of Death, of Sin and Hell, till it was placed, as God and Man in one Person, at the right Hand of God in Heaven.

Now when in Process of Time, the one true Covenant of Life between God and all Mankind, had lost much of its Effect, and the People of God had greatly fallen away from the Faith and Piety of the first Patriarchs, and perhaps not more remarkably than the Christian World is fallen from the Truth and Faith of the first apostolic Ages) it pleased God by his Servant Moses, to introduce the Descendants of the Patriarchs into a new and further Covenant of Care, and Protection over them.

Which Covenant was not a succeeding true Part of, or a new progressive State of that first one true Religion, that alone unites God and fallen Man, but was in its whole Nature, merely a Covenant of outward Care and Protection; not given for its own Sake, or because of any intrinsic Goodness in its Washings and Purifications, but an Indulgence granted to the Hardness of their Hearts, as a temporal Means of keeping a fallen People from falling further under the Blindness and Vanity of their earthly Minds.

The first Covenant was so perfect that nothing could be added to it, but the Manifestation of that which was promised in it, because it contained all the Power of Life, that could work out Salvation, from the first to the last Man. It was a Promise of Life and Redemption to all Mankind, to be fulfilled in and by the Seed of the Woman. Now the Promise, and the Fulfilling of it, are not (as in human Matters) two distant, separate Things, that begin at different Times, nor can the one ever be without the other. They both began together, and must exist together. The End, that is, the Fulfilling, grows out of the Beginning, goes along with it, and has all its Efficacy from it; and the Beginning, that is, the Promise, is only so much of the End.

As these two cannot be separated, so nothing can come between them, as dividing the one from the other. The Promise and the Fulfilling are but one Thing, one Operation, one Gift of God, the one only Redemption, Reconciliation, Satisfaction, and Atonement, that ever did, or ever can help fallen Man to Peace, Blessing and Union again with God. Nothing else can do it. Every Thing besides the living Power, and Working of this first promised, or rather first given Seed of the Woman, is destitute of Life.

It is therefore a great Truth, that all that is said in the Gospel of the Power of Christ, and the availing Efficacy of his whole Process, from his Divine Birth to his Ascension into Heaven, is in Truth and Reality so much said of the Why, and the How, the Seed of the Woman has worked from the Beginning, and been the one Power of Salvation through every Age of the World.

For though the Visibility and outward Manifestation of Christ's Process, was and only could be first and fully known at his Ascension into Heaven, yet its inward spiritual Power, in all its Parts, began with the first Covenant of Life, made with Adam and Eve. And though all was then as a hidden Life, under the Name of a Seed of the Woman, yet it had its Divine Power and Working within, and brought Men to God by that Spirit of Christ, which manifested itself through all his Process.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 167

For as the holy Jesus is but One, the very same Yesterday, to Day, and for ever, so his Mediatorial, Redeeming Spirit in fallen Man, is but one, namely, the Spirit of his Process, which is one and the same, always working in one and the same Manner, where it is submitted to, as well before, as after his Incarnation; that is, whether it be called the Seed of the Woman, or Jesus Christ born of the Virgin Mary. For the one is only the first, the other, the last Name of one and the same Redeeming Son of God. In the first Name, it was the Power of Jesus, living in Man, in the last Name it was Jesus Himself become Man.

Not the smallest Spark of Goodness ever sprung up in fallen Man, no kind of Faith, Hope, or Trust in God, no Patience in Adversity, no Self-denial, no Love of God, or Desire of doing his Will, no Truth of Humility, Meekness, and Compassion, ever did, or could work in the Heart and Spirit of any Son of Adam, but solely for this Reason, because all these Tempers were the Spirit of Christ's Process, which Spirit was inspoken, or ingrafted into fallen Man, as soon as God looked with Pity, Compassion, Love and Relief towards Adam and Eve.

For this Looking of God with Compassion, Love and Relief at Man, was in Truth the very Beginning of the Incarnation of the Son of God; for it was not something without or separate from Man, (because God is not without or separate) but it was Divine Compassion, Love and Relief, inwardly working in the inmost Ground of the Life of Man; which blessed Power of the redeeming Love of God in the Soul, was at first called the Seed of the Woman, till by all kind of Evidence it was known, and found to be the Eternal Son of God born of a Virgin.

Now that which Christ did, suffered, and obtained in and through his Process in our Flesh, calling all to turn to God, to deny themselves, to be of his Spirit, to enter into the strictest Union with Him, giving heavenly Birth, and Life, and all Divine Graces to Men, and yet only and solely according to their Faith in Him; That very same, the Seed of the Woman did, and from the Beginning was always doing in the same Way of Life, and Blessing, and heavenly Graces, yet only and solely according to their Faith in it.

The Loss of this Faith in the first Ages of Mankind, gave Birth to that which is called the heathen, or rational World, for they both began together, and are the same Thing, and brought forth a Race of People, full of Blindness, Wickedness, and Idolatry. For so far as they departed from Faith, so far they fell from God, under the Dominion and Government of their Reason, Passions, and Appetites. And thence began the Kingdom of this World, and the Wisdom of this World, which had and ever must have full Power over every Man, as soon as he ceases to live by Faith.

168 A Short Confutation of

For to live by Faith, always was, and always will be, living in the Kingdom of God; and to live by Reason, always was, and always will be, living as a Heathen, under the Power of the Kingdom of this World.

Reasoning instead of Faith, brought about the first Fall, and dreadful Change in the human Nature, no less than a real Death to God, and the Kingdom of Heaven. And nothing but Faith instead of Reasoning, can give any one fallen Man Power to become again a Son of God. Now to the End of the World, this will be the unalterable Difference between Faith in God, and Reasoning about the Things of God; they can never change their Place, Nature, or Effects; That which they were, and did to the first Man, that they will be, and do to the last.

Faith in God, is nothing else but a full adhering to God; and therefore it is one with God, and God with it, and all that is holy, Divine and good, may well be found in it.

Reasoning, is nothing else, but a full adhering to ourselves; and therefore, all that is selfish, perverse, corrupt, and serpentine in fallen Man, must be kept up, and nourished by it.

It matters not in what Age, or under what Dispensation of God we live; the Necessity, the Nature, and Power of Faith, is always the same; that simple, illiterate, unreasoning Faith, that helped Abraham to Righteousness, Life, and Union with God, is the one Faith that alone can be Justification, Life and Salvation to Christians; or, which is the same Thing, can alone be Christ in us, the Hope of Glory. For Faith is nothing else, but so much of the Nature, and Spirit of Christ, born and living in us. 'I came,' says Christ, 'not to do my own Will, but the Will of Him that sent me. My Meat and Drink is to do the Will of Him that sent me.' This is the whole Nature, and Perfection of Faith. And as no one but Christ had Power to say this of Himself, so no one can have, or live in this Faith, but because the Divine Nature of Christ is truly born, and formed in him, and is become the Life of his Life, and the Spirit of his Spirit.

Again, It matters not, how much the Revelations and Precepts of God are increased, since the first single Command given to Adam; for no more is offered to our reasoning Faculty by the whole Bible, than by that single Precept. And the Benefit of the whole Bible is lost to us, as soon as we reason about the Nature and Necessity of its Commands, just as the Benefit of that first Precept was lost in the same Way.

'Hath God indeed said, ye shall not eat of every Tree in the 'Garden.' This was the first Essay, or beginning of Reasoning with God. What it was, and did then, that it will always be, and do. Its Nature, and Fruits will never be better, or any other, to the End of the World. And though in these last Ages, it hath passed through all Schools of Quibbling, and is arrived at its utmost height of Art, Subtlety and Precision of Argument, yet as to Divine Matters, it stands just where it stood, when it first learnt that Logic from the Serpent, which improved the Understanding of Eve. And at this Day, it can see no deeper into the Things of God, can be no Wiser, give no better Judgment about them, than that Conclusion it at first made, that Death could not be in the Tree, which was 'so good for Food, so 'pleasant to behold, and to be desired for Knowledge.'

In short, these two, Faith and Reasoning, have, and always will divide all Mankind, from the Beginning to the End of the World, into two Sorts of Men fully distinct from each other.

The Faithful, through every Age, are of the Seed of the Woman, the Children of God, and sure Heirs of his Redemption through Jesus Christ.

The Reasoners, are of the Seed of the Serpent, they are the Heathens through every Age, and real Heirs of that Confusion, which happened to the first Builders of the Tower of Babel.

To live by Faith, is to be truly and fully in Covenant with God; to live by Reasoning, is to be merely and solely in Compact with ourselves, with our own Vanity, and Blindness.

To live by Faith, is to live with God in the Spirit and Power of Prayer, in Self-denial, in Contempt of the World, in Divine Love, in heavenly Foretastes of the World to come, in Humility, in Patience, Long-suffering, Obedience, Resignation, absolute Trust and Dependence upon God, with all that is temporal and earthly under their Feet.

To live by Reasoning, is to be a Prey of the old Serpent, eating Dust with him, groveling in the Mire of all earthly Passions, devoured with Pride, embittered with Envy, Tools and Dupes to ourselves, tossed up with false Hopes, cast down with vain Fears, Slaves to all the good and evil Things of this World, to Day elated with learned Praise, to Morrow dejected at the unlucky Loss of it; yet jogging on Year after Year, defining Words and Ideas, dissecting Doctrines and Opinions, setting all Arguments and all Objections upon their best Legs, sifting and refining all Notions, Conjectures, and Criticisms, till Death puts the same full End to all the Wonders of the ideal Fabric, that the cleansing

Broom does to the Wonders of the Spider's Web, so artfully spun at the Expense of its own Vitals.

This is the unalterable Difference between a Life of Faith, and a Life of Reasoning in the Things of God; the former is from God, works with God, and therefore it saveth, it maketh whole, and all Things are possible to it; the latter is from the Serpent, works with the Serpent, and therefore vain Opinions, false Judgments, Errors and Delusions are inseparable from it, and can only belong to it.

Every Scholar, every Disputer of this World, nay, every Man, has been where Eve was, and has done what she did, when she sought for Wisdom that did not come from God. All Libraries of the World are a full Proof of the remaining Power of the first sinful Thirst after it: they are full of a Knowledge that comes not from God, and therefore proceeds from that first Fountain of Subtlety that opened her Eyes. For as there cannot possibly be any Goodness in Man, but so far as the Divine Goodness is living and working good in Him, so there cannot be any Divine Truth, or Knowledge in Man, but so far as God's Truth and Knowledge is opened, living and working in him, because God alone is all Truth, and the Knowledge of it.

But to return from this short Digression, to my main Subject, namely, the Unity, or the Sameness of the Patriarchal and Christian Religion; of which Adam was as truly a Member as St. Paul.

For the Spirit of Christ, or which is the same Thing, the Spirit and Power of his Process, did not begin to be, but only came into outward Manifestation in the Gospel Age, but was, and had been invisibly the one only possible Source of Goodness in Man, as well before, as after his Incarnation.

It made all the Saints and Martyrs of the Old Testament, as truly and solely as of the New; and all the Miracles of that Time, of what kind soever, were as truly in the one Name, and by the sole Power of his victorious Spirit dwelling in them, as when Peter said to the lame Man, 'In the Name of Jesus Christ, rise up and Walk.'

Abel had not lived a Saint, and died a Martyr, but because the Spirit of Christ, as dying a Sacrifice for Sin, was living and working in him. No Enoch could have been taken up to God, no Elisha have ever ascended into Heaven, but because Ascension into Heaven, was a Part of Christ's victorious Process in the human Nature.

Abraham could not have been willing to Sacrifice his Son, nor content to be only a Pilgrim and Sojourner upon Earth, but because Christ was as truly living in Him, as He was in St. Paul, when he 'counted all Things but Dung, that he might win Christ, and be found in Him.'

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 171

The Spirit of God has expressly told us, 'that Moses esteemed 'the Afflictions of Christ greater Riches, than the Treasures of 'Egypt': was not therefore Moses as true a Christian, as truly under the blessed Power of the Cross of Christ, and as fully confident in it, as St. Paul, crying out, 'God forbid that I should 'glory, save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by which the 'World is crucified unto me, and I unto the World.'

Nor was there ever any Man in the World, either before, or after Christ's Manifestation in the Flesh, that ever had the least Faith, Hope, or Desire of God, or any possible Access, or Communion with Him, but so far as the Spirit of Christ's Process, was begotten, living, and working in him.

For as Christ was the only possible Redeemer of the fallen human Nature, because He was that which He was, did that which He did, suffered, died, rose from Death, and ascended into Heaven, with that fallen, but by him redeemed Humanity, which He had taken upon him, so no one Man, or Member of the fallen human Nature, from first to last, can have any Righteousness, or Sanctification brought forth in it, but because the Spirit of Christ lives, and works in it, as it did in that fallen human Nature, which He took from the Virgin Mary.

And thus it is, that the availing Efficacy of Christ's Mediation, Reconciliation, &c., reached backward to the first Man in the World, not by an arbitrary Imputation of it, or because God would account it as there, though it were not there, but the true Reason is, because the Spirit of Christ's Process, which alone reconciles God to Man, began to work from the Beginning, was as really and vitally operative in the first Man, and his Descendants, as it was in that human Soul and Body, which Christ took from the Virgin Mary. For as nothing but the Spirit of Christ's Process, could have overcome, or redeemed that fallen Soul and Body, which Christ took upon him, so nothing can possibly overcome and redeem the fallen Body and Soul of any Son of Adam, but that same overcoming and redeeming Spirit, really living and operating in it, in the same Manner as it did in the Humanity of Christ. Goodness cannot come into Man, or belong to him two different Ways, or from two different Causes; That alone from which he had his original Goodness at his Creation, from that alone can he have Goodness in his Regeneration. Nor can fallen Man be made really good by the Imputation of an absent Goodness, any more than a blind Man can see, by having Sight only imputed to him. And a Spirit and Power of Christ, not possessed, but only imputed to the Soul, in which it is not, is but like a Christ only imputed to, but not really born of the Virgin Mary. And indeed, to suppose Christ to be, where his Spirit is not living, that his Salvation was in Paul, because Christ lived in Him, and his Salvation was in Abel and Enoch, though his Spirit was absent from them, has as much Sense and Divinity in it, as if it were said, Christians live, and move, and have their Being in God; but the former Ages did not live, and move, and have their Being in God, but it was only imputed to them.

So plain is it, that nothing but the one Spirit of Christ, living and working in Man, from the Beginning to the End of the World, can possibly be the Source, or Cause of any Goodness, Holiness, or Redemption of Man.

The Scriptures abound with Proof of this. What can be more decisive than the following Words? 'If any Man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.—If Christ be not in you, ye 'are Reprobates.' Must not this be equally true of every Man in the World, as true of all Men in the Patriarchal as in the Gospel Ages? If any Man, says the Apostles, therefore no Regard had to Time or Place, but where there is any Man, there this Truth is affirmed of him by the Apostle, that unless he hath the Spirit of Christ he is none of his, but is a Reprobate. But if none can be Christ's, but because they have his Spirit living in them, and none can be God's, but because they are Christ's, it necessarily follows, that if Christ was not the Spirit and Power of that first, universal Covenant made by God with fallen Adam, if He was not only and solely that which was meant by the Seed of the Woman, if his Spirit and Power was not then from that Time the real Bruiser of the Serpent's Head, or the Power of Satan in the Nature of every Man, it necessarily follows, both that Adam, and all his Posterity, for much more than three thousand Years, lived and died mere Reprobates, and that by an unavoidable Necessity, because they had not the Spirit of Christ living in them.

Again, 'As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are 'the Children of God'; therefore if the first Ages of the World were not led by the Spirit of God, they were all cut off from being Children of God. And to say, that though they were without the Spirit of Christ, yet his Merits might be imputed to them, is no better than saying the same Thing of fallen Angels. For Man, without Christ living in Him, is as far from him, as the fallen Angel can possibly be. For the fallen Angel hath no Darkness, and Depravity of Nature, nor any other Contrariety to God, or Separation from Him, but only for this one Reason, because nothing of the Spirit and Power of Christ liveth and worketh in him.

Further, of Christ it is said, 'Neither is there Salvation in any 'other. For there is none other Name under Heaven given 'amongst Men, whereby we may be saved.'

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 173

What a Folly to think, that all the World is not included in this? None other Name under Heaven, is surely extensive enough to take in every Part of the Earth, and every Time of Man. And what is here said, is evidently grounded in the Nature of the Thing, for Salvation must be one and the same Thing, effected by one and the same Power through all Ages, because the Fall of Man, or that which he wants to be saved from, is one and the same Thing in all Men; therefore one and the same Saviour is equally and absolutely necessary to all Men, in every Age of the World. Salvation is nothing less in itself, than our being created again unto Righteousness, by such a Power of God united with our Nature, as can quicken and renew that first heavenly Life, to which Adam died. How then can such a Salvation have any Difference either in itself, or the Saviour that effects it? How can it be one Thing at one Time, and another at another; in one Age no Possibility of having it, but because Christ's redeeming Spirit is really living, and operating in Men, in another Age effected by something else instead of it?

Such Absurdities as these, are unavoidable, unless we hold, that Adam, Abel, Seth, &c., were saved by the same Spirit of Christ, living, and working Faith, Hope, Goodness, and every Virtue in them, as truly and solely, as he is Wisdom and Righteousness, and Sanctification in those who believe in Him after his Birth in our Flesh.—The Bruising the Head of the Serpent, could only and solely belong to Him, who could destroy the Works of the Devil. Therefore the Seed of the Woman was as truly Immanuel with Adam, as the Son of the Virgin was God with us; and so named, because He was that God, who from the Covenant made with Adam, had always been with Men.

To this the holy Spirit beareth full Witness, saying, 'Jesus Christ, the same Yesterday, to Day, and for ever.' Therefore, if to Day, He alone is, and can be the one Power of a Divine Life in Man, that same He certainly was from the Beginning, and will be to the End. A Truth asserted by Himself in the strongest Form of Words, saying, 'I am Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End, the first and the last.' Therefore He is the Beginning of every Thing that ever was Good in any Man, and the End and Finisher of every Good, that can ever grow up in him. How else could it be an eternal Truth, what Christ says of Himself, that without Him we can do nothing, that unless He be in us, and we in Him, we are but as dead Branches broken off from the Vine. For if the former Ages could do something that was good without Him, if they could be living Branches, though he lived not in them, what Force is there left in our Saviour's Words?

And now, my Lord, I think I have sufficiently proved not only my two Propositions, but also that the first Covenant with Adam, in and by the Seed of the Woman, was the Truth and Reality of the one Christian Means, Method and Power of Salvation, so wonderfully manifested by the whole Process of Christ revealed in the Gospel. Therefore it is a theological Truth of the utmost Certainty, and greatest Comfort, that from the Beginning of the World to the End of it, there never was, nor ever will be any more, or any other, but one and the same true Religion of the Gospel, which began with Adam and Eve through Jesus Christ, the one Mediator and Reconciler of God to Man, who was as certainly the Life, Strength and Salvation of all the Faithful in the old World, as he was in after Times, when the Son of the Virgin Mary, The Way, the Truth, and the Life, to all that had Faith in him.

And indeed a Plurality of Religions, or Means of Salvation, is as gross an Imagination, as a Plurality of Gods, and can subsist upon no other Foundation.

A better Religion necessarily supposes a better God, and a Change in Religion a Change in that God, that makes it.—A partial God, not giving the only right Religion to all Men, but withholding the one true Power of Salvation, till the last Ages of the World, is as atheistical as Epicurus his God.

In sundry Times, and in divers Manners, it may please the Wisdom and Goodness of God, to vary that which is only an outward Help, or Direction to the Truth of Religion; but the inward Spirit and Truth of that, which only is, and can be Salvation, is as unvariable, as God Himself.

The Law therefore of Moses, as consisting of carnal Ordinances, &c., not only makes nothing Perfect, but it brings nothing new into the one Covenant of Life and Redemption, but was only a temporary, provisional Help, added because of Transgressions, till the promised Seed should come; that is, till the whole process of Christ, signified by the promised Seed, should openly, and in its last and highest Degree of Evidence manifest itself in all its Parts.

This Law then no more belonged to the true Religion of the Old Testament, than of the New, neither did it ever stand between these two Dispensations, as in their stead, or as separating, and suspending their Union for a Time. No: It was purely, and merely on the outside of both, had only a temporary, external Relation of Service to the true Religion, either before or after Christ, but was no more a Part, or instead of them for a Time, than the Hand that stands by the Road, directing the ignorant Traveller, is itself a Part of the Road, or can be instead of it to him.

Now though the Reason of Man, ought not to pretend to fathom all the Depths of Divine Wisdom and Goodness, in the whole Form and Manner of this additional Covenant of outward Care and Protection, yet two most gracious and excellent Ends of it, are very apparent.

First, to bring this corrupted People of Israel into a new State of such Observances, religiously to be kept, as might best preserve them from the gross Superstitions and Idolatries, to which they were too much inclined. And this, by a Ritual of such Condescensions to their carnal Minds, as might nevertheless be a School of Restraints and Discipline, full of such Purifications, Types, and Figures, as give much spiritual Light and Instruction, both backwards and forwards. Backwards, as truly significative of their fallen State, plain, daily Memorials of their lost Purity and Perfection: Forwards, as truly foretelling, and variously pointing at that promised Victory over the Serpent, Death, and the Curse of this World, which had been the constant Faith and Hope of all their pious Forefathers from Adam to that Day.

Secondly, That by a Theocracy added to this Ritual, which showed itself in a Covenant of continual Care and Protection in all Temporal Things, openly blessing their Obedience, and punishing their Rebellion, and working all kinds of Miracles in the Overthrow of their Enemies, not only they themselves, but all the Rest of the World, might be forced to see and know, that there was no God, that had all Power in Heaven and on Earth, but the one God of Israel.

As to the Israelites themselves, this Temporal Covenant of Care by outward Rites, and extraordinary outward Protection, was a great Instance of God's Goodness towards them. For they were thus called out of Idolatry, separated from the Rest of the World, forbid to have any Communication with them, built into an holy Church of God, put under a most amazing Theocracy, full of every Proof that God was with them; indulged for a Time with a Ritual of carnal Institutions, because of the Hardness of their Hearts, which Ritual was full of every Instruction by Doctrines, Types, Figures and Miracles, all showing in the strongest Manner, that they were to be Heirs of the heavenly Promises made to their Forefathers.

And as to the rest of the World, no particular Message, or Messenger, though new risen from the Dead, and sent by God amongst them, could preach or proclaim to them in so powerful a Manner, the Vanity of their Idols, the Knowledge of the one true God of all the World, as this remarkable Body of People set up in the midst of the World, impossible to be unknown, did. So that the Law and its Theocracy, though nothing else in its whole Nature, but a temporal Covenant of outward Care and Protection, was not only most divinely contrived to preserve the Faith of the first Holy Patriarchs, and guide them to the Time and Manner of receiving the Promises made to their Fathers, but it was all Mercy and Goodness to the rest of the World, being no less than one continual, daily, miraculous Call to them, to receive Blessing and Protection, Life and Salvation in the Knowledge and Worship of the one true God of Heaven and Earth.

Now when the Children of the Patriarchs, were to be entered into this new Covenant of outward Care and Protection, the utmost Care was taken by the Spirit of God, that to Eyes that could see, and Ears that could hear, enough should be shown and said, to prevent all carnal Atheism to temporal and outward Things, and bring forth a spiritual Israel, full of that Faith and Piety, in which their holy Ancestors, as Pilgrims on Earth, had lived and died devoted to God, in hope of everlasting Redemption from the Fall of Adam.

To this End, Moses, though bringing them, as their State required, under a Ritual of carnal Ordinances, bodily Washings and Purifications, yet that they might use them only as outward Confessions and Memorials of an inward spiritual Pollution, and as sure Types and Figures of their being to be cleansed, and delivered from it; he is led by the Inspiration of God, not only to insert in the Books of the Law, the most sublime Doctrines and heavenly Precepts of Patriarchal and Christian Holiness, but to lay before them, for their daily Instruction, a History of the most deep, and affecting Truths: Truths that had every Thing in them fitted to awaken, and keep up that Divine, strong Faith and Hope of an eternal Redemption, under the Power of which, the most holy Patriarchs had overlooked every Thing in Time for the Sake of Eternity.

I mean, the most wonderful and affecting History of the Creation and Curse of this World, of the high Origin of Man, and his dreadful Fall from it, his Redemption, and Covenant of Life restored in a Seed of the Woman, the Lives and Deaths of the most holy Patriarchs, their Patience under all Sufferings, their Contempt of worldly Pleasures and Advantages; their heavenly Visions, Revelations and Speeches from the invisible, incomprehensible God, keeping them thereby in an holy Union and Intercourse with the invisible World, full of Faith and Hope of the good Things of Eternity.

To mention one or two of those great Doctrines of Moses, which set forth the original Perfection, and heavenly Nature of Man, as created by God.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 177

God said, 'Let us make Man in our own Image and Likeness.' Is not this as high, and Christian a Doctrine of Immortality, does it not give the same Instruction, raise the same Hope, and call for all the same Sentiments and Elevations of the Heart to God, as when St. John saith, 'Beloved, it does not yet appear 'what we shall be, but we know that when He shall appear, we 'shall be LIKE Him'? Just the same Truth, and fitted to have the same Effects, as when Moses said, God made Man in his own LIKENESS?

St. Peter writes thus to all Christians; 'Grace and Peace be 'multiplied unto you, through the Knowledge of God, and of 'Jesus our Lord.—Whereby are given unto us exceeding great 'and precious Promises, that by these ye might be Partakers of 'the DIVINE NATURE.' A truly warm and affecting Address of the Apostle, enough to inspire into his Readers, the most exalted Thoughts, and earnest Desires after God, and a Divine Life. Yet what is there more in these Words, to raise in us a Thirst and longing Desire after the Divine Nature, than when Moses preaches, that God made Man in his own Image and Likeness? Is not this directly telling them, that they were at first Partakers of the Divine Nature? Is it not the same direct and powerful Call to a Faith and Hope of being again Partakers of the Divine Nature, as that of St. Peter?

St. Paul says, 'God was in Christ Jesus, reconciling the World 'unto Himself.' A comfortable Doctrine indeed, and full of Hope of Immortality, yet only the same Comfort, and Hope of Immortality which had been as openly preached by Moses.

For the Satan of all Subtlety, called the old Serpent, is by Moses set forth as insinuating himself into our first Parents, deceiving them into their Fall, or Death to the Divine Life, which whether it be called the Evil of the Serpent brought to Life in us, or our Loss of the Divine Nature, is the same Thing.

When therefore Moses bringeth in the Deity, as saying, 'The 'Seed of the Woman shall bruise the Head of the Serpent'; He preaches that very same Gospel, and in the same Manner, as the Apostle did. For his Words as plainly teach, that 'God was in 'the Seed of the Woman reconciling the World unto Himself,' as 'when St. Paul says, 'that God was in Christ Jesus reconciling the World to Himself'; for the Difference is in nothing else, but in two different Names given to our Redeemer.

Now though Moses was the first Recorder of the Gospel Salvation in a written Book, yet was He not the first Preacher of it. For it was proclaimed in Adam's Day, from Heaven itself, like as the Birth of Christ in the Flesh in the Days of Herod. For when God said, 'The Seed of the Woman shall bruise the Head

‘of the Serpent,’ the same good Tidings of Salvation were proclaimed from Heaven by God Himself, as when the Angel said to the Shepherds, ‘Unto you is born this Day in the City of David, ‘a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.’

For the Day that God said this to Adam and Eve, the ‘Power ‘of the Highest overshadowed them,’ and that which was born in them, was the bruising Spirit of Christ, who from that Time began his same great Office of a Destroyer of the Works of the Devil, which He fully completed by his Death, Resurrection, and Ascension into Heaven.

Again, Moses saith, ‘God breathed into Man the Breath of ‘Life, and Man became a living Soul,’ that is, by the Breath of God living in Him. Now the Breath that comes from God, must have the Nature and Properties of God, and therefore that which lives in and by the Spirit of God breathed into it, must be a Creature made in the Image and Likeness of God. Every Child of Man, hath the Nature of Man, only for this Reason, because the Spirit of Man is brought to Life in Him. Therefore no Creature can be a Child of God, or made in his Image and Likeness, but because the Spirit of God is born, and living in it.—Therefore what is said by Moses, declares the highest Relation that can be between God, and an immortal Creature, and shows, that Man’s created Nature, had a Birth and Participation of the Divine Nature; beginning its Life in this World, by that same Spirit of God living in it, which is the Spirit and Life of Angels in Heaven.—And as Angels can have no higher a Principle of Life in them, cannot be more above Time and Mortality, cannot be nearer to God, have more of the Divine Nature, Image, and Likeness, than by having their Life breathed into them from the Breath of God, so Man is openly said by Moses to be created by God, in and for all that Union, Fellowship, and Immortality with God, as the holy Angels were. Nor is he in any Respect a little lower than the Angels, but because his angelic Nature is created into that Union with Flesh and Blood, which the Deity in Christ vouchsafed to enter into.

Now in all the New Testament, where Life and Immortality, and all the Glories of a new Birth, Union, and Fellowship with God through Christ Jesus, are so manifestly brought to Light, yet is there Nothing higher, or more Divine concerning Man’s Nature, said, or indeed can be said, than in these Words of Moses.—In the Gospel, there is nothing to be found that more exalts the Nature of Man, than when our Lord says, ‘Except a ‘Man be born again of the Spirit, born again from above, he can’t see, or enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.’—Yet all that is here said, is only a Divine Confirmation, or Testimony given by the Son of God to that high Account of the Dignity of Man, and his Divine Destination to Heaven and Immortality, which Moses teacheth, by his first created State.—All likewise which the Apostles say of the Necessity of 'being led by the Spirit of God,' by the Spirit of Christ, neither had, nor could have had any Ground, or Reason, but because, as Moses teacheth, the Spirit of God was breathed into Man at his first Creation, and gave him that Life, which made him to be in the Image and Likeness of God.—For if the Spirit of God had not been the blessed Life of Man by virtue of his Creation, he never afterwards, could possibly have had any Communion with it, but must have lived, though it had been ever so long, not only without any want of it, but without any Possibility of receiving it. For no Creature can be, or have, or want to have any Thing, but that which it was, and had at its Creation.—Its first created Nature is its unalterable Bounds.—No Desire, Love, Pleasure, Knowledge, or Sensation of any kind, can be in Angel, Man, or Beast, but so far as they are grounded in its natural State.—Nothing but that which began with its Life, and is essentially involved in its first created State, can ever possibly be found in it. This is as certain, as that a Circle can never have either more or less than its own first Properties.

Divine Love, Delight, Knowledge, Sensation, and Capacity for further Happiness in God, may, and certainly will increase to all Eternity, but nothing can increase in Man, but that which was in him before it increased.

Permit me, my Lord, in passing, just to observe, that here, and nowhere else, lies all our true Knowledge and absolute Certainty, both of the Being of God, and our own Immortality.—To come at the Knowledge of outward Things, a Man must look outwards, because nothing can be seen, or found, but where it is, and therefore for the same Reason, all that concerns Man's Life, or has Relation to or Connection with his Life, can only be found and known, by his finding out That, which lives in him.—We could know nothing of God, or our own Immortality; but because they have both manifested themselves in us, both came forth in our first created Nature, so that the Life which we received, was a Participation of them. Otherwise no Possibility of our Knowledge, or Sensibility of them. For as we can have no other Knowledge of ourselves, but that which our Nature manifests to us, so we can have no Knowledge of God, and Immortality, but so far as the Nature of God, and the Nature of Immortality make themselves to be livingly felt, and found within us. And to seek for a Proof of them, by abstract Reasoning, is but like seeking in the same Way for a Proof of our Thinking, Seeing, and Feeling.

For as these Qualities of Mind can only manifest themselves, so to seek for a Proof of them, from any Thing else, but our own Sensibility of them, can only proceed from Ignorance both of them and ourselves.—Now God, and Immortality, if they belong to us, must be as near to us, as essentially within us, and as truly inherent in our own Life, as our own Thinking, Seeing, and Feeling; neither can they come into our Knowledge any other Way, than as our own Seeing, and Feeling does.—And as soon as we seek for any other Proof of them, but their own Manifestation sensibly found in ourselves, we demonstrate both our Ignorance of them, and of that which is to prove them. For nothing can prove, or be a Proof of any Thing, but that which partakes of the Nature of the Thing to be proved. Therefore all abstract Reasoning, or ranging of Ideas into a Form of Argument, cannot be any Proof of a God, or Immortality found in Man, because they partake not of the Nature of the Things to be proved, and so must be as false and fictitious, as that Conclusion, which has nothing of the Nature of the Premises in it.

As Life can only manifest Life, so no particular Form of Life can be manifested but by itself.

Now Mortality, and Immortality are two essential Forms of Life, and are what they are, from that which is peculiarly essential to them, they are so immutably distinct, that the one cannot be changed into the other, and neither of them can be proved by abstract Reasoning to be, or not be, anywhere.—They have no Proof but their own Existence.—A Life that is Mortal, or only for a Time, can only be so, because it has its Existence and Form from transitory and perishable Things, and therefore all its Tempers are transitory, it can live to nothing else, love nothing else, partake of nothing else, but such Gratifications, as transitory and perishable Things have for it.—Immortality is another Form of Life, and no Life can have this Form, but because it is a Birth from that which is everlasting. And as every Form of Life must manifest itself according to that, which is peculiarly essential to it, so this Form of Life does, and always must unavoidably manifest itself according to that which is essential to it, and give forth the same, full, indubitable Proof of itself, as the fleshly, mortal Life does.—It must have its Thoughts, its Cares, its Fears, its Hopes, and Expectations, about eternal Things, whether it will or no, just as the earthly, mortal Life must have its Cares, its Fears and Desires about earthly Things, whether it will or no.

And thus it is, that we have the same infallible Certainty of our own Immortality, that we have of our earthly and fleshly Life. For the Desires and Appetites peculiar to, and inseparable from each Nature, are in both Cases, the same Demonstration of the Reality of each Form of Life. And thus also it is, that our Immortality is revealed to us by God, in a Way much superior to any outward Information that could possibly be given to us. Therefore to expect or require any other Revelation of it, from God, is as groundless, as to expect, or require a Revelation, to tell us, that we are Flesh and Blood, and have Hunger and Thirst after earthly Nourishment.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 181

To turn therefore to Argumentation upon metaphysical, or logical Principles, as the only right Way of trying, whether Immortality be natural to us, is no better, can come no nearer to the Truth of the Matter, than if we were to appeal to the Doctrines of muscular Motion, as the only right Way of trying, whether we live, and move, and have our Being in God.—For as Tempers, Affections, and Desires must unavoidably show, and make us feel, what kind of Life they proceed from; so our Cares, Fears, Hopes, Joys, &c., relating to an Immortality, unavoidably show, and make us feel, that an Immortality is living and working in us.—Hence it is, that neither in the Old, nor the New Testament, are we ever expressly told, that our Nature is in itself Immortal, any more than we are told, that we exist in Flesh and Blood. But as the Scriptures only inform us, how to live wisely in Flesh and Blood, so all the Instruction they give us concerning our Immortality, is only how to live wisely with regard to the Consequences of it.—Thus, ‘these shall go away into everlasting Punishment, but the Righteous into Life eternal,’ is not a first Notice, or Revelation given of our Immortality, but is a Declaration that proceeds upon the Supposition of it, and is only a Divine, awakening Assurance given of That, which must be the Consequence of our having it, namely, that according as we live, it must inevitably bring us into a Happiness, or Misery, as everlasting as itself.

Again, a Divine Life, or a Life in Union with God, is another Form of Life, which wherever it is, wants no outward Proof, but is its own full Manifestation. Which Form of Life cannot be, or be found in any Creature, but so far as God is living and operating in it.—And from this Life alone it is, that any Creature, whether in Heaven, or on Earth, can have any true and real Knowledge of God. For nothing can be truly known of God by the Creature, but that which God makes known of Himself in the Life of the Creature.—So far as God is living and operating in the Creature, and manifesting Himself in it either by Light and Love, or Reproof, so far it truly knows, and is taught of God.—Any other Knowledge of God, however learned, high, or deep it may pretend to be, is as vain and spurious, as that Goodness, which proceeds from something else, than God's good Spirit living in us.

Genius, Parts, and Literature, however set forth with Wit and Rhetoric, have no Affinity with Divine Knowledge, they are as different from it, and can no more give it, than the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life, can generate Humility and Purity of Heart. These Accomplishments live, and act in a Sphere of their own, and have no more Power of taking to themselves, any living Knowledge of God, than the Art of Painting to the Life, can give the Power of creating Life.

Now, that this Form of a Divine Life is in every Man, and that no Man is without this Witness of God in Himself, is a Truth as evident as any Thing, that can be affirmed of human Nature. For was not God in Man, as a Principle of Life, and Man in God, as a Birth of Him, and in him, or in Scripture Words, did He not live, and move, and have his Being in God, He could no more begin to form a Thought of Enquiry after God, or have the least Desire of knowing any Thing about him, than the Worms in the Earth can begin to hunger after the Power of Syllogisms, and crawl about in quest of them.—But as all Instincts, Appetites, and Inclinations are, and can be nothing else, but the various Workings of that kind of Life, which is in the Animal, so the Cares, Fears, Hopes, &c., relating to God, and inseparable from Man, are and can be nothing else, but the various Workings of a Life and Power of God essentially existing, as a Birth in the Soul of Man.

Had Mankind been created to live without the Use of any Food, and absolutely free from the least Sensibility of Hunger and Thirst, can it be supposed, that a Search and Enquiry after the Nature of Food, what it was, and how to be found, should have been the great Contention of all Men in all Ages of the World, and that divided as they were in their Opinions about it, yet none could live at Rest, till satisfied with some Notion, or Idea, which they had got of it? Now, absurd, and impossible as this is, yet it is more so, to suppose all Mankind, from the Beginning of the World, busy and earnest, as they have always been, about the Nature of God, what He is, and how to be worshipped, and though unable to agree in their Opinions, yet unable to drop the Enquiry, or to have any Content, till they had found a God, to be worshipped some Way or other.—All this must be said to be the highest Absurdity, and Impossibility, had not the LIFE and POWER of God come forth as a Birth in the Life of the human Nature.—Therefore the Cares, the Inquiries, the Hopes, Fears and Joys of Man, concerning God and Religion, which ever did, and ever will, in some Degree or other, manifest themselves in the Hearts of all Men, give forth not only a convincing Proof, but an infallible Certainty, (1) of the Being of God,

(2) of his living in all that which lives and working with all that which works, in the Hearts, Souls, and Spirits of all Men.

The Blindness, and Follies which have overrun both the ancient and modern World in Matters of Religion, make nothing at all against this.—They are only a full and irresistible Proof of the most capital Doctrines of Divine Revelation, namely, that Man (now the defaced Image of God) is so miserably changed and fallen from his first created State, that nothing less than a new Birth from above, can bring him again into the Region of Divine Truth, or the Kingdom of Heaven.

And hence it is, that though Religion has its deepest Ground in the Nature of Man, though God be essentially, vitally present in the Souls of all Men, yet from the Fall of Adam, to the End of the World, it will be an immutable Truth, that Strait is the Gate, and narrow is the Way that leadeth unto Divine Knowledge, and none but the simple of Heart, the poor in Spirit, or the real Followers of Christ through all his Process, can possibly find it.

And here, my Lord, may be plainly seen why the Wisdom of this World, always was, and always must be, Foolishness with God. It is because the Wisdom of this World, be it of what kind it will, in whatever Form, or Shape it appears, has nothing of the Process of Christ in it, is not only without it, but contrary to it. Therefore let a Man be doing what he will, however great, wise, and distinguishing, it may seem to be, yet since it has not its Rise and Growth in, and from the one Spirit of Christ's Process, it is but mere Foolishness with God, and has all the Loss and Misery in it, to Man, that can be the Effect of any Folly. For since the one great Want, or the one Thing needful to Man, is to come out of the Evil, the Blindness, and Misery of his fallen Nature, and nothing either in Heaven, or on Earth can possibly do this for him, but the one Spirit of Christ's whole Process, nothing else can possibly be his Wisdom.—This State of Things is unalterable, it equally takes in every Man, and every Age of the World.—The Law, the Prophets, the Gospel, may be all embraced, honoured, and defended with Zeal, in their respective Times ; but if the one Spirit of Christ's whole Process is not the one Thing sought, the one Thing found, and kept alive by them, Law, Prophets, and Gospel, however Holy, Spiritual and Good in themselves, will be made to set up a Kingdom of that worldly Wisdom, which is Foolishness with God.

For all the Dispensations of God, have but one Wisdom, and one Meaning, they mean nothing, seek nothing, but to bring forth a true, and real Resurrection of the Life, Spirit, and Power of Christ in the fallen human Nature.

A carnal Mind always was and always will be the same Death to the Soul, the same Separation from God, whether it be found under the Law, or under the Gospel. And this ought well to be observed, that every Man is, and must be carnally minded, till his whole Heart, and Soul, and Spirit, is led and governed by the one Spirit of Christ's whole Process; every Thing but Christ in Man, is carnal, and governed by the Law of impure Flesh and Blood. A Truth sufficiently told us, as in all Scripture, so by these Words of Christ, 'He that followeth not me, walketh in 'Darkness.' Confirmed by the Spirit of God, saying, 'If any 'Man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.'

Christianity without the Spirit of Christ, and Christianity with the Spirit of Christ, began in the two first Sons of Adam. These two Brothers, Cain and Abel, had no other Difference, they were both entered into the one Christian Covenant of Salvation, they both began to worship God outwardly according to it.—The Spirit of Christ's Process dwelling in Abel, made his Sacrifice acceptable to God, and crowned him with Martyrdom.—Outward Worship performed without the Spirit of Christ had no Interest with God, but brought forth in Cain a Spirit of Envy, Hatred, and Murder.

That which happened to these two Brothers, will unavoidably happen to two Lines of People, which will both of them be incessantly kept up, so long as the War lasts between the Seed of the Woman, and the Serpent. So long Cain and Abel will have their genuine Posterity. That which was true of Abel, namely that his outward Sacrifice was pleasing to God, will be true of every Man, whose outward Worship of God, is done, in and through the Spirit of Christ's Process. And that which was true of Cain, namely, that He was filled with Envy, Hatred, Self-seeking, and Ambition, will in a certain Degree be true of every Man, of every Church, whose outward Religion has the Wisdom of this World cloaked under it.

But it is Time to have done. I shall now only trouble your Lordship with the few following Remarks.—Dr. Warburton says, 'He has proved that the Doctrine of a future State of Rewards, 'and Punishments is not to be found in, nor did make a Part of 'the Mosaic Dispensation.*' The Mosaic Dispensation means nothing else, but a temporal Ritual, and a temporal Theocracy of worldly Blessings, and Curses to support it. These are its fixed Bounds within which it is confined.—Therefore, to prove that a State beyond Time and this World, was not to be found in, nor did make a Part of a State, that is confined to Time, and this

* D. L., vol. ii., page 474.

Dr. Warburton's Defence 185

World, is as easily, and as vainly done, as to prove, that the Garden of Eden is not to be found in, nor makes a Part of a Map that is confined to England. And to infer that the Israelites therefore had no Notion, or Belief of an Immortality, because it was not a Part of their Ritual, is no better, than to infer, that the People of England can have no Notion, or Belief about the Garden of Eden, because nothing of it is to be seen in the Map of this Island.—For though not the Ritual, yet Moses in other Parts of his Books, written by Inspiration of God, and for the Instruction of those, to whom He gave the Ritual, has in the plainest Words given them the fullest Notice, and highest Proof of that godlike and immortal Nature, they received at their Creation, showing them to be the Children of the Patriarchal Covenant, Heirs of all the Promises of eternal Redemption, made to their Fathers from the Beginning of the World. Nay, the most heavenly Doctrines and Precepts given by the Apostles to the Redeemed of Christ, as Heirs of Immortality, are to be found in the Books of Moses.

Dr. Warburton, takes much Pains to get rid of the best, and only true Sense of the following Texts of Moses. Thus, 'Let us 'make Man in our own Image and Likeness.' From these Words, he says, it is inferred, that the Soul is immaterial. But he thinks, Moses intimated quite another Matter. And so do I; for to intimate the Immateriality of the Soul, by saying, that Man was made in the Image and Likeness of God, is quite short of the Sense of the Words; for to say, that the Soul is immaterial, is saying no more, than that it is not a Circle, or a Piece of Clay, it is saying nothing at all of it, but only of something that it is not. Therefore Moses cannot be supposed to intimate such a Nothing as this, by the Image and Likeness of God. But he asserts a much higher Matter, namely, that being created in the Image and Likeness of God, he was made a Partaker of the Divine Nature, had the triune Life, Likeness, and Spirit of God, living in his own creaturely Life, and therefore had not only Immortality, but the Riches and Perfections of the Deity grounded, and growing up in That, which was living in him. For as it was the Life of Man that had this Image and Likeness of God in it, so the unfathomable Riches, Powers, and Perfections of the Divine Nature, came forth in a creaturely State in the Birth of the human Life. And this is the true Ground of our eternal Happiness, that is, of that eternal Increase of Union, Perfection and Glory, which the redeemed Soul will find in God; it is because the Image and Likeness of God, being as a Seed sown into it, at its Creation, it will to all Eternity, after its Admission into Heaven, be made to open more and more its Divine Nature, and spring forth in new and further Fruits and Growths of Glory, Beatitude and Union with God.

And as it is a certain Truth, that no Fruits, Flowers or Virtues can be, or come forth in any Vegetable, but what were first in its Seed, or Root, so no Divine Glory, Perfection, or Power, can ever come forth in any Creature in Heaven, but what arises from that Seed of the Deity sown into it, at its Creation. Therefore, as sure as the heavenly Soul will to all Eternity increase in new Openings, and Enlargements of Divine Union, Enjoyment, and Perfection in God, so sure is it, that in the Centre, or inmost Birth of the Soul's Life, lies the Riches of the Divine Nature, as a Seed, or Root of Glory, given into it, by its first created Image, or Likeness to God.

Every Thing that is endless, numberless in the Depth of Eternity, is endless and numberless in the Essence of the Soul; what Seeing is, what Hearing, Feeling, &c., are in their boundless Variety, and ever increasing newness of Delights in Eternity, these, with all their Wonders, are the innate Birthright, and sure Inheritance of every immortal godly Soul; the Things 'which Eye hath not seen, nor Ear heard, nor hath the Heart of Man conceived,' nor will conceive, till all that belongs to Time is separated from it. And on the other Hand, the same boundless, numberless Depth and Growth of every tormenting, painful, frightful Sensation, will open itself in every Soul, that has lost its God, and is left to its own immortal Life within itself.

Vain therefore, and entirely to be rejected, is that Principle published to the World, by a celebrated Philosopher of the last Century, namely, that the Soul in its first created State, has nothing in it, but is a mere Rasa Tabula, or blank Paper. A Fiction, that is contradicted by all that we know of every created Thing in Nature.

For every Creature of this World, animate or inanimate, is in its Degree, a Microcosm of all the Powers, that are in the great World, of which it is a Part. And every Thing, or Creature is That, which it is, because the Powers of this World, or Properties of Nature, are in such, or such a Combination included, or treasured up in its Essence, and give it its Difference from other Things.—But nothing through all this Universe, has in its Essence, only the Nature of a Rasa Tabula, or blank Paper, but is in its kind, full of the Riches, and Powers of all outward Nature.

In like Manner must it be with the eternal World; every Thing which comes from it, or is born of it, must be in its Degree, a Microcosm of all the Powers and Glories of Eternity.—And it ought well to be observed, that nothing can possibly be called into an Enjoyment or Participation of the Powers, Glories, and Perfections of the eternal World, but only That which has its Birth from it. Therefore, if the Soul of Man is to enter into the Kingdom of God, and partake of its Glories and Beatitudes, it must of all Necessity have its Birth and Nature from thence, as a Microcosm of its Riches and Perfections, or in the Words of Moses, be at first created in the Image and Likeness of God.

Further, Let it be said, that the Matter of this World, was in its first created State, free from all Extension, Solidity and Parts, and this would be as grave a saying, and as much founded in Nature, as the Rasa Tabula of the Soul; say again, that by Degrees it got a Materiality of Length, Breadth and Parts, from without, and this would be no greater a Wonder, than that a Soul, created inwardly destitute of any Principle of Knowledge, and Wisdom, should from outward Causes grow up into a profound Philosopher. Again, say that the Soul was at first, in itself, but a blank Paper, till the Organs of the Body began to act upon it; and may not all the Enemies of Religion, as justly say, that it must be the same blank Paper again at the last, when the Body shall be broken off from it?

If therefore the Essay upon human Understanding (which the Doctor calls the most original Book that ever was published) has produced a Metaphysics, in many Points dangerous to Religion, and greatly serviceable to false, and superficial Reasoning, it is not to be wondered at, since so eminent an Error, is the fundamental Principle on which it proceeds. For to consider the Soul as devoid and empty in itself, as a Piece of blank Paper, is placing it below every material Substance that exists, even lower than the Caput Mortuum of the Chemists. For there is not a Clod of Earth, but what as such, has its Fulness of invisible Riches and Powers, innate and essential to its Nature, which it gives forth, in and through the Qualities, Beauties, and Varieties of Vegetables, which have their roots in it.

Strange indeed! that every Clod of Earth should be a mystery of almost infinite Powers, and Qualities hid, and treasured up in its own Essence, but the thinking spiritual Substance, created to live, and rejoice in the Delights and Blessings of Knowledge, Wisdom, and Goodness, should be only a Mystery of Emptiness, having in itself, neither Spark nor Seed of that Life, for which it was created. An Absurdity beyond all Comparison, except it be that, of making Nothing to be the Father of Something!

The pernicious Nature of this Principle, obliged me in this Place, to expose the Falseness of it.

But to return to the Doctor: He says, 'The Divine Image and Likeness must consist in something that is peculiar to Man,—' that the two Things Peculiar to Man, are his Shape and his ‘Reason, that it cannot be in his Shape, therefore it must be in his Reason.’*

The Divine Image and Likeness cannot consist in something that is peculiar to Man, it might as well consist in his Shape, as in his Faculty of making Syllogisms; but on the contrary, it must, in every Part of it, consist in That, and only in that, which is, and must be peculiar to God. Nor could Man possibly be created in the Image and Likeness of God, unless something peculiar to God, and not possible to be appropriated to Man, had come forth, as the Divine Glory and Perfection of His creaturely Life. For the creaturely Life, and all that is peculiar to it, is at the utmost Distance from God, and can only have a Likeness to that, which is to be found in Creatures.—God dwelling in a supernatural Way in the Creature, is the only possible Image and Likeness of God that can be in it. The fallen Angels have every Thing that was creaturely left in them, but they are horrible Devils, because they have lost the supernatural Image and Likeness of God, which dwelt in them at their Creation. They have still Reason, Craft and Subtlety; but because they have nothing, but that which is creaturely, or peculiar to the Creature, they are all Rage, Torment and Misery.

The Doctor therefore, instead of appealing to two Things in Man, his Shape and his Reason, as his true Distinction from Beasts, should have said, by the Authority of Moses, that only one Thing was peculiar to Man, as his glorious Distinction both from fallen Angels, and terrestrial Animals, and that one Thing is, his being created in the Image and Likeness of God. As to his outward Shape, when considered only as different from other Animals, there is but little of a Distinction in it, because they are as different in Shape from one another, as Man is from them all. But when his Shape is considered, as it truly is, the natural Effect, and Form of his heaven-born Spirit, and Life, then it is a glorious Distinction from all the animal Creation. For if Man at his Creation had had no higher a Guest within him, than his Reason, his Shape would never have been better, than that of a Fox, or a Serpent. For Reason, when considered alone, and not under the Government of a higher Principle, is that same selfish Craft, Subtlety and Cunning, that is visible in Variety of Beasts; and is often, and for the most Part, as selfish, as earthly an Instrument of mischievous Passions, and Lusts in Men, as it is in Beasts. And what is more, it must be so, till it comes under the Government of That, which was the Image and Likeness of God, in the first Creation of Man.

What is the Difference between Reason in St. Paul, a Spinosa, a Hobbes, or a Bolingbroke? None at all, or no other than in their outward Shape. Therefore if Reason be the Divine Image and Likeness of God in Man, a Hobbes and a Bolingbroke, had as much of it as St. Paul. And a Man that is all his Life long reasoning himself into Atheism, and the Wisdom of Living according to his own Lusts, must be allowed to give daily continual Proof of his having the Image and Likeness of God, very powerfully manifested in Him.

The Doctor's great Proof, that Reason is the Image and Likeness of God, is because Moses immediately adds, 'Let them rule over the Fish of the Sea, and over the Fowls of Heaven, and over the Beasts of the Earth,' &c. 'For what, says He, could invest Man with this Dominion de Facto, as well as de Jure, but his Reason?'

Our blessed Lord, at leaving the World, saith, 'These Signs shall follow them that believe; in my Name they shall cast out Devils, they shall speak with new Tongues, they shall take up Serpents, and if they drink any deadly Thing, it shall not hurt them.' Now let it here be asked, what could invest the Believers in Christ with this Dominion de Facto as well as de Jure, but their Reason? Now both this Question, and the Solution of it, is just as sound, and theological as the Doctor's.

For it was not any Thing of their own, or within themselves, but only and solely the Name, that is, the Strength and Power of Christ dwelling, and operating in them, that invested them with this Dominion over Devils, Serpents, Diseases, and all outward deadly, or hurtful Things. Now That which gave this Power, and Authority to the Believers in Christ, was that very same, which gave to the first created, perfect Man, a Power of ruling over all the Creatures of this World, and of living in full Superiority and Dominion over all that was, or could be hurtful, and deadly, in Fire, or Water, Heat or Cold, or any Elementary Things. So that Adam whilst standing in his first State of Glory, and Power, had the same full Reason to say of all that he was, and did, that which St. Paul said, yet not I, but Christ that liveth in me. And had not Christ, or the WORD, been in Man at his Creation, the WORD made Flesh, had not been his Redemption.

And how the Doctor came to think of any other Power, as the Ability of Man to rule over the Creatures, and all other outward Things of this World, is very strange, since the Gospel has so plainly told him, that they are only the Children of God, who are led by the Spirit of God. If therefore the first Man, created in the Image and Likeness of God, may be supposed by his Creation to have been a Child of God, then as the Gospel is true, so sure is it, that he had the Spirit of God, living and working in him. And that surely may be allowed to have been his true and his only Qualification, to have and exercise a Dominion over the rest of the Creation, that had only the Spirit of this World in them.

But if we suppose him to have this Power, and right of Dominion, only because of his Faculty of Reasoning, it would only be like that which crafty Tyrants get over their fellow-Creatures, or skilful Hunters over Wolves, and Foxes.

The Doctor, in order to find out that Image, and Likeness of God in Man, of which Moses writes, looks into the Constitution of that two-legged Animal, who is the Disputer of this World. As well done, and as likely to succeed, as if in order to find out that Paradise, of which Moses writes, he should search for it in the Hundreds of Essex, or in the Wilds of Kent.

For Moses, to prevent the Folly of looking for the Divine Image and Likeness in any Thing, that is natural to the present State of Man, has given us the most undeniable Assurance, that this first Man, created in the Image and Likeness of God, died the very Day that he did eat of the forbidden Tree. And that nothing of this Divine Man remained, but Terrors within, and such an outward bestial Figure of himself, as filled him with Shame and Confusion at the Sight of it.

And a greater than Moses has also told us, that Man, in his present natural State, is so certainly dead to that first Divine Glory, which he had at his Creation, that He has no Possibility of entering into the Kingdom of God, till he is born again from Above, of the Word and Spirit of God.—Proof enough, surely, that Man has lost the State of his first Birth; and also, that the Birth which he lost, was that Spirit and Life from Above, which He must, and only can have by being born again, in, and by the Power of Christ. This might have sufficiently shown the learned Doctor, that He who will find out, in what the Image and Likeness of God in Man, consisted, must of all Necessity, as the Apostle saith, walk by Faith, and not by Sight.

The next Text of Moses, which the Doctor most miserably injures, is thus quoted by him. ‘The Lord God formed Man of ‘the Dust of the Ground, and breathed into him the Breath of ‘Life, and Man became a living Soul; that is, say the Objectors, ‘had an Immortal Soul.’

Who the Objectors are, I know not, but the Truth of the Text, requires us to say, that therefore Man had a Divine and godlike Soul, a true Offspring, or Partaker of the Divine Nature. Because the Breath or Spirit of the holy triune God, was that Breath, by which he was made a living Soul.—And therefore the Riches of this first Life in Man, were the Riches of the Divine Nature manifesting itself in the creaturely Life of the Soul. And had not the first Life of Man been thus an Offspring of the Holy Trinity, neither the Belief of the Trinity, nor the Operation of the Trinity could have had any Connection with our Redemption, nor could there have been any Thing in fallen Man, that had deserved Redemption, much less any Thing that could require the Incarnation of the eternal Son of God, as the only Thing that could effect it.

But the Doctor will have it, that only an unlearned English Reader, can collect any Thing to be Divine in the Soul, from the Words of Moses, as not knowing, that what is translated, a living Soul, signifies, in the Original, only a living Animal. But this every English Reader may know to be a vain Criticism; for no Stress is laid upon the Expression, a living Soul, no more than if it had been said, a living Creature, or Animal. But the true and full Proof of the Divine Greatness, and Riches of the human Soul, lies solely in this, that the Breath, or Spirit of the holy Trinity was breathed into it, and was that which made it to be a living Soul, and therefore the Life that arose in it, was the Life of God in the Soul.

The Doctor thus comments upon the Words of the Text. 'God, the great plastic Artist, is here represented, as making and shaping out a Figure of Earth and Clay, which He afterwards animates, or inspires with Life. He breathed into this Statue the Breath of Life, and the Lump of Clay became a living Creature.'

Had this elegant, and most graphical Description been only found in some Minor Poet, or School Declamation, it might have been overlooked, but in a Prose Treatise of Divinity pretending to set forth the Truth of the Matter, it ought not to pass uncensured. I know of nothing that can equal it, unless it be supposed that some ingenious Anthropomorphite, reading these Words, 'and the Lord God did unto Adam and Eve, make Coats of Skins, and clothed them'; should thus describe the Matter, 'Here, God, the great Artist, is represented, as having the Skins of Beasts before him, and with his Divine Hands, cutting, shaping and joining them together in Forms of Garments, fitted to the Size, and Distinction of the first Man and his Wife.'

I may defy anyone to show, that this Comment, does not pay as great Regard to the Letter, and do as much Honour to the Sense of this Scripture, as the Doctor's doth to the other Text.

The sacred Text, 'God formed man of the Dust of the 'Ground, and breathed into him the Breath of Life,' is a short and full Declaration of a most important and Divine Truth, namely, that Man was brought into Being, in a twofold Nature, having the Nature of this outward World, and the Nature of Heaven in the Birth of his Life; the former signified by his being formed of the Dust of the Ground, the latter, by the Breath of God breathed into Him, as his Life.—To be formed out of the Dust of the Ground, is the same Thing, as if it had been said, that He was formed out of all the Riches, Powers and Virtues that are in this whole visible World. For every Property of Nature, that is in the Sun, the Stars and Elements, is hidden in the Earth, and every Thing that cometh out of the Earth, cometh out of all the Properties, that work in the whole outward World.—Nay, all the heavenly Powers of Paradise are in the Earth, or Paradise could never have sprung up in Eden. Now Man was formed out of this paradisaical State of the Earth, when Paradise was in its full Glory, and that which He received, was the good Powers of paradisaical Earth, which were to be his Entrance into, or Union with this outward World, created for paradisaical Glory.—The Tree of Life, in the midst of the Garden in Eden, may as truly be said to have been formed out of the Dust of the Earth, as Man was. And Man, so far as he was designed to be a Creature of this outward World, is therefore said to be formed out of the Earth, because the Earth is not only the Treasure-house of all that is in outward Nature, but is the Mother, as of all the three other Elements, so also of the Sun and Stars themselves. For all that is visible and bodily in every Thing, whether it be Sun, Stars, Light or Air, is from the Dust of the Earth, that is, from the earthly Nature, for nothing else can give an outward, and visible Body, or Form of Existence. And as all Things of this World, whether animate or inanimate, are from the Earth, as their Mother, so in the Earth is there every Power, and Blessing of Life, to sustain every Thing that has its Body from it; as appears by that fruitful Power, which is continually giving forth itself in all kinds of vegetable Food, fitted to the Wants of every Life.

What therefore can it be called, but a most deplorable Blindness in learned Reason, to consider Man as making his first Entrance into Paradise in no better a State, than that of Dust and Clay formed into a dead lumpish Figure of a Man, for this Reason, because he was said to be formed out of the Dust of the Ground? Blindness indeed! when it is so fully evident, that even now, after the Curse is in the Earth, yet every Thing, even the poorest Weed that comes out of the Dust of the Ground, is in a much higher State, and enters into this World with a Degree of Life from its Mother, the Earth.—Had the Doctor never seen, or heard of any other Thing formed out of the Earth, but such as our Potters, and Dealers in Clay can make out of it, there might have been some sort of Excuse for his Adam of dead Clay formed out of the Earth. But when every Day of his Life has shown him that almost infinite Variety, and Plenty of fruitful Powers, Virtues and Wonders in the Kingdom of Vegetables, all coming out of the Earth, and nourished by it, when the Scripture has told him that the Beasts and Cattle of all Kinds were formed out of the Earth, had their Flesh and Blood from it, and their daily Sustenance from its fruitful Womb; it is strange to a Degree of Astonishment, that he should hold, that out of this rich Earth, when in its paradisaical State, when Man, the Glory of the Creation, was formed out of it, and God the Former, that nothing should come forth, but a dead Lump of Clay in the Figure of a Man.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 193

For this very Thing, viz., Man's being formed out of the Earth, which the Doctor makes the Reason of his being only a Statue of dead Clay, ought to have been received as a full Proof of his having all the Perfections of Life, and Glory, that are to be found in this whole outward, visible World.—For what higher Proof can there possibly be, that all the Riches, and Powers of this whole material Universe, are treasured up in the Earth, than that all kinds of Life under the Heavens, whether animal or vegetable, have their Being, and Nourishment from it?—And the Reason why the inspired Text, when teaching us, that Man, as to one Part of him, had his Birth from this World, says, that He was formed out of the Earth, is not, because Fire and Air, and Water, and Sun, and Stars, had not as full, and necessary a Share in the Formation of him, but because the Earth being the Ground, or Mother, not only of all the other Elements, but of the Sun and Stars also, is justly put for all of them.

Again, What a total Disregard has the Doctor here shown to the very Letter of Scripture. The Text saith, 'God formed Man out of the Dust of the Ground,' nothing else is ascribed to God, as his Work in this Matter; but the Doctor adds quite another Matter as the Work of God, namely, shaping and forming lumpish Clay into a dead Figure of a Man.

And then follows another Fiction equally against the Letter of Scripture. For He says, that AFTERWARDS, God breathed Life into it. But in the Scripture Account, there is not a Syllable of any First, or Afterwards, nor indeed any Room for either.—Two Things are spoken of the Birth of Man, and as they cannot be spoken both at once, so one must come after the other in the Relation of them. The Scripture mentions them as two distinct Things, which they certainly are in a very great Degree, and the Reason of mentioning them thus distinctly, is not to teach us, they were done at two different Times, the one first, and the other afterwards, but to give us the fullest Assurance, that Man came into the World in a twofold Nature, the one from the heavenly Breath of God, and the other from this visible World.

But the Meeting, or Union of these two Natures in the Formation, or Birth of Man, was owing to one, and the same undivided Fiat, or Operation of God.—There is no sooner, or later, in the Beginning of the Soul, and of the Body; the Beginning of one, is the Beginning of the other, and Life as creaturely is equally from them both.

When it is said, that ‘God breathed into him the Breath of Life, and Man became a living Soul,’ the Truth really signified under this Form of Words, is this, namely, that God willed the Breath of his own Life, to become creaturely in such a Form, as Man. And from this Fiat, or Will of God, it was, that Heaven and Earth, Time and Eternity, brought forth the human Creaturely Life, kindled from both of them.

All Life is from the invisible World, and in order to its Entrance into the visible World, it neither wants, nor can possess a Place prepared for it.—Spirit can have no Place, but its own Body, nor can be anywhere but in That, which proceeds from itself. The Life of the Soul is generated in, and from the Body, and the Body has its Birth, and Growth in and from the Soul, and therefore neither of them can be before the other, in the Formation of the Creaturely Life.

And to suppose with the Doctor that Man was first made a dead Image, and afterwards had Life breathed into it, is no better a Philosophy, than to suppose, that God first created the vegetable Creature, and afterwards added a vegetable Life to it; that He first created the Globe of the Sun, and afterwards added Heat and Light to it.

‘God said, Let the Earth bring forth the living Creature,’ &c. What a Folly to suppose, that the Creature, and its Life, are two separate Things, that the one came first, and the other afterwards? No better, than supposing, that a Circle and its Roundness, are two separate Things, that first comes forth the Figure, and afterwards its Roundness.—Life is not, cannot be a second or posterior Power in the Formation of the living Creature, and if its Body (which is only another Name, for its creaturely State) could begin to be formed without Life, it never could have any Communion with Life. For nothing can have any Communion with Life, but that which proceeds from it. Nor can the Body have Communion with any other Soul, but that which came to Life in, and through, and by the Body.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 195

In Eternity, or before the Creation, the Spirit of Life is unfathomable, incomprehensible ; but the Spirit of Life, coming by the Divine Fiat, to be creaturely, is Life generating a Body ; for Body, Form, and Creature, are synonymous Terms ; for nothing can be creaturely, but because it is bodily, and under some Form.

The Spirit of Life cannot come into any Creature from without, nothing can be its Life, but that which arises as a Birth within itself. And as Life, so every Quality, State, or Condition of every Creature, whether good, or bad, is from a Birth, or magical Power working in it, for Birth, and magical Power is the same Thing.

Every Vegetable, and Animal of this World demonstrates the Truth and Certainty of this magical Power ; they are all, both as to their Existence, Qualities and Conditions, whether good or bad, so many full Proofs of it, they are what they are, and have what they have, as so many Births, and Growths of a magical Power.

We cannot in the Nature of the Thing, have any higher Proof, that this same magical Power works in the same Manner in the Birth, and Growth of all intelligent Beings, than that which our blessed Lord has given us in the following Words, ' Except a Man be born again, He cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven ;' for this would not have been said, namely, that we can be heavenly no other way than by a Birth, but because it is the one Way of our Nature, to have and be only that, which we are, and have, by a Birth, or Growth in us. Again, ' That which is born of the Flesh, is Flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit.' The very same Thing, as if it had been said, that Man cannot be either fleshly, or spiritual, but so far as the Birth either of the one, or of the other, is in Him. But a Birth there must be, and of no other Kind than as the Will-Spirit worketh. When it worketh with God, it is in Scripture called that Divine ' Faith, to which all Things are possible :' That, to which it is said, ' According to thy Faith, so be it done unto Thee.' When it worketh contrary to God, it is that magical Power, which bringeth forth a Birth of the diabolical Nature in the Soul, and is described in Scripture in these Words, ' Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the Works of your Father ye will do.' Plainly showing us, that all that is in us, and proceeds from us, has a magical, generating Power, and that as our Will-Spirit worketh, so a Birth either of Heaven, or Hell, making us to be either Sons of God, or Children of the Devil, is unavoidably brought forth.

The Will-Spirit in God, is the Beginner, or first Cause of all that is in Nature and Creature, it is that Mysterious, and Abyssal Power of the Deity, which generateth, and bringeth forth Nature with all its Properties, is always in them, and with them, as the Cause of all that they are, and work. And hence it is that the Apostle saith, that 'of him, and through him, and to him, are all 'Things, and by him all Things subsist.' For that which God willed in Nature, and all its Creatures, is inseparable from them, worketh with them, and is the highest Relation, or Connection, that the Creature hath with the Deity.

The Will-Spirit in the Creature, called in Things inanimate, Attraction, and in Animals, Instinct, coming from the Will-Spirit of the Creator, as a Ray from it, is that which keeps up the whole System of Stars and Elements, with all its Creatures, vegetable and animal, in their full Conformity to the first working Will of God in their Creation, which is never separate from them.

The Will-Spirit in the intelligent Free Creature, is of a much higher Nature, it has the never-beginning Eternity in it, and is a genuine Offspring of the Will-Spirit of God, and therefore in its Degree, partakes of the Power of God over Nature. And were it not so, that is, had it not something in it, higher than Nature, it would be as right, and fitting in every Man to follow his natural Lusts and Appetites, as it is in Beasts; neither could it be any Part of Man's Glory and Perfection to imitate the Divine Goodness, or strive to 'be perfect, as his Father in Heaven is perfect.'—All which is the highest Demonstration, that the Will-Spirit of the intelligent, Free Creature, has its Birth, and Power, out of that Abyss of Eternity, which is before, and superior to Nature, and that all that it hath in, and from Nature, must work, and generate, according as this superior Will-Spirit worketh. It is this alone, that can either unite, and work with God, or depart from him, and the Soul of Man hath no other Near or Far from God, but as its Will-Spirit worketh.

All outward Life, with all its Forms of Wisdom, Knowledge, Learning, or religious Distinction, all the highest Appearances of Prudence in Behaviour, are but mere temporal Things, and have no eternal Good in them, but so far, as the Will-Spirit, which governs all, is holy and Divine, and works in that heavenly Goodness, and Love, which God bears towards all the Creation. 'My 'Meat and Drink,' saith the holy Jesus, 'is to do the Will of Him 'that sent me.' A sure Proof, that nothing can minister Food to the eternal Life of the Soul, but only That, which is done in, and from the Will of God working in us, and governing all, that proceeds from us.

The Will-Spirit therefore is justly called the great magical Power of the Soul, because, though working secretly, and without any Materials, yet it never is, nor can be without its real and vital Effects. It always generates, and a Birth must be brought forth, either from above, or below. For our Nature standeth in the Growth, for a Life out of Time into Eternity.—As fallen Men, we are born, only to be born again, and according to our Faith, such must be our Birth. When Christ said, 'According to thy Faith, so be it done unto Thee,' nothing was said, as particular to that Person, and Occasion, but the whole Nature and Power of Faith, or the Will-Spirit given up to God, was declared, with Respect to all Persons, and all Times. For as Truth and Lies have the same Nature, and the same Effects, do the same Good, and the same Hurt to every Man, that is wholly given up to them, so the same Faith hath the same Effects upon every Man, that it has upon any Man.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 197

And here, my Lord, permit me to say to every perplexed Seeker after God, and religious Goodness, and to every eager Dealer in Notions, Opinions, and new-modelled Forms, that we neither want nor can receive any other Good from Religion, but that of being brought wholly under the continual indwelling Influence of the Spirit of God; and nothing can hinder, or help us to this, but solely our Faith, or the Working of our own Will-Spirit. For from the Beginning of the World, a common, universal Saviour was given to the first Father of Sinners, who says of Himself, that He stands knocking at the Door of Man's Heart. And nothing did, or could hinder Cain from having the same full Benefit from Christ that Abel had, but only his Faith, and Will-Spirit working another Way.—To turn to God with our whole Will and Desire, is to find the Life-giving Power of his holy WORD and SPIRIT within us.—To ask, is certainly to receive, but then, it is as certain, that nothing does, or can either ask, or receive, but the Faith, or Will-Spirit of the Soul; which may therefore in a certain, true and good Sense, be said to be our Creator, our Governor, and will be our final Judge. For according as our Faith, or working Will hath been here, to such a God, and such a World, Death and Judgment will deliver us up hereafter.

No go ye Cursed, but to Those whose Will-Spirit hath chosen to unite, and work with the Curse, and Disorders of fallen Nature. No come ye Blessed, but to Those whose living Faith and working Will, is itself become that blessed Purity of Heart, which alone can see God.

Thus all lieth in the working of the Will, a domestic, innate Power, which if rightly turned, helps us to all that we want, and is every Man's sure Guide to God, and Happiness. And all our religious Delusion, Perplexity of Life, and little Progress in a Victory over ourselves, arises from our seeking to something else than God, in order to be godly, who has his own Seed within us, which would infallibly grow up unto a perfect Man in Christ Jesus, did we but in an undivided Faith call solely to, and rely wholly upon the Operation of God, inwardly Drawing, inwardly Redeeming, and inwardly Sanctifying, in the Name of Father, Son, and holy Spirit, all that is, or can be Divine within us. This is the short and sure Way of being born again of God, which in the Nature of the Thing is as necessary to our Salvation now, as our being created in the Image and Likeness of God, was to our first Perfection.

And the Reason, why it must be so, is because there is nothing else but Birth, and Growth, through all Nature and Creature. For whatever begins to be, out of something else, must be That which it is, by way of Birth; and as this is the State both of eternal, and temporal Nature, of eternal and temporal Creatures, to begin to be, out of something, that was before them, so from the highest intelligent Creature to the lowest Vegetable, every Thing must begin, and go on to its highest State only by way of Birth, or magical Growth. Neither could there be any such Thing as the Birth of any Animal, or the Growth of any vegetable Life in this World, but because in all Worlds, and through all Nature, all Things come forth, as so many Births and Growths of a Variety of Life, through the Fiat of the Divine Will. Man therefore neither hath, nor can have any Goodness or Perfection of a Divine Life, but as a Birth and Growth of the Divine Nature in his Soul. Hence it is, that Adam's turning his Faith, or working Will into the Life of this World, had the Fulness of a real Death in it to the Divine Life, and is so called by Moses; and the Deliverance from this Death, can be only by that which is in Reality a new Birth from Above, and is so called by Jesus Christ.

To what End therefore, is that Multiplicity of Sects, Reformations, and Divisions, that Learned Labour in Grammatical, Critical Distinctions of Words, Notions and Opinions; to what End is all this, when the Perfection of every Life, stands only and solely in a Birth, and Growth; no Life, vegetable, animal, or Divine, grows, but by its innate Hunger after its proper Food of Life? The Flint lies dead under the generating Influence of the Sun, because it has no Hunger after the good Powers of the Sun. —The Seed rises up into a perfect Vegetable, because it Hungers after the Riches that are in the Sun.

And thus it is that Man, as a Heaven-born Plant, must have all his Growth of Goodness from God, as the Vegetables of the Earth have all their Growth of Perfection from the Sun. But as Hunger alone helps every Thing to find and eat that Food, which its Life wants, so Faith, or the Will-Spirit, is alone that Hunger of the Soul which can either find, or eat that Flesh and Blood, which is its eternal Life.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 199

But to return once more to the D. L. the Design of which, is to establish this most horrible Doctrine, that Moses designedly and industriously secreted from God's chosen People of Israel, all Thought, and Apprehension of any eternal Relation that they had with God; which is the same Thing, as saying, that He designedly suppressed the one only possible, and necessary Foundation of true Religion. For the Immortality, or perpetual Existence of the human Nature, is the only Ground of Homage and Regard to an invisible and eternal God. And unless Man was by Nature essentially related to God, and the invisible eternal World, it would have been as unnatural and unreasonable for the invisible God of the eternal World, to call Man to an heavenly Adoration of him, as to bid earthly Flesh and Blood, be, and do that, which Angels are, and do in Heaven. For, from whence is it, that the Beasts, however apprehensive and teachable, are utterly incapable of Religion? It is because they have nothing in them, but what began from this World, and therefore cannot hear, understand, or have the least Sensibility of any Thing that is higher than this World.—Therefore the first Notice from an eternal invisible God, given to Man of a religious Homage due to Him, and the bare Capacity of Man to receive and embrace such Notice, is the greatest of Proofs, that Man has something of the eternal and invisible God in him. For as nothing can Hunger, but that which by Nature, both wants and has a Capacity to eat; so nothing can possibly receive a Religion relating to the eternal God, but that which has within itself, both a Want, and Capacity to partake of the eternal World. And had not Man an eternal Spirit in him, as an Offspring of the eternal God, He could no more want to have any Intercourse with the eternal World, than a Fish can want to be out of the Water. Nor could any taught Adoration of the one eternal, incomprehensible God, enter any further into his Heart, or be of more use to him, than so much Religion taught to a Parrot. For Man being, or entirely believing himself to be, as merely a Creature of this World, as the Parrot is, could no more regard any Thing, but what his earthly Nature has a Fondness for, than the Parrot doth. Let us eat and drink, for To-morrow we die, would be the highest and truest Philosophy, if there is no more of a Divine Life, or heavenly Nature in Man, than in the chattering Sparrow. In this Case, worldly Craft, or Cunning, whether in a Fox, or a Man, is the highest Use of its natural Powers. For if the earthly Life and Nature, is equally the All of both of them, earthly Wisdom must be equally the Perfection and Praise of them both. For it can no more be the Duty of an earthly Creature to be heavenly minded, than of a celestial Creature to be carnally minded.

If therefore the Israelites under Moses, were by Him led, and directed to consider themselves merely as Creatures of this World, having nothing to enjoy, or hope for, but the good Things of this Life, it must be said, that He did all that well could be done, to make them an earthly, covetous, envious, rapacious, stiff-necked, and brutal People. And all the Complaints which the Prophets have brought against them, on that Account, were unjust, and ought to have been made only againt Moses himself, and the Religion that was set up by Him. For a Religion only offering, and wholly confining People to earthly Enjoyments, may surely be said, not only to make, but even require them to be wholly sensual and earthly minded. And every hearty Believer of such a Religion, is by his very Faith called upon, to make the most that He can, of the Lust of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life.

Moses saith, 'Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord ; 'and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, and 'with all thy Soul, and with all thy Strength.' Now to these Israelites, looking backwards to God's Covenant of Life and Redemption, made with their Forefathers, of which they were the undoubted, and recorded Heirs in the inspired Word of God ; and forwards to this new Covenant of a Theocracy, added, as God's peculiar Mercy to them in this Life, to keep them to himself, to support them under their Afflictions, and Trials from the idolatrous World, and to arm them with Patience in waiting for that eternal Redemption, in the Faith of which, their Ancestors had died so full of Joy and Comfort. In this double View of their State under God, and which Moses had so fully set before them, and with the strongest Injunctions, to be daily teaching them to their Children, they had the highest Reason to rejoice in God, and to love Him with all their Heart and Soul and Strength, who had shown such Wonders of Goodness to them, and their Forefathers.

But to suppose this Moses, as designedly secreting from them, the Knowledge of that eternal Relation they had to God, on which the Hopes of their Forefathers were founded, and on which He himself was made able to choose rather the Afflictions of Christ, than the Glories of the Egyptian Court, has something very shocking in it. For if Moses was that Good Man, that He was, because He knew in whom He had believed, and had a Fulness of Faith in the eternal Redemption promised from the Beginning, can there be a more religious Cruelty, than in supposing him, designing by his religious System, wholly to obliterate all Thought and Remembrance of God's universal, unchangeable Covenant of Life, and extinguish all Sense, and Hope of a Redemption to come hereafter? To what Purpose is it to say to such a People, shut up in earthly Hopes, and worldly Expectations of a carnal Life, 'Thou shalt love the one God of Heaven with all thy Heart,' &c. For if He had succeeded in his Design, and fixed them in the Belief, that they had no Treasure but in this World, we have Christ's Word for it, that the Affections of their Hearts could go no where else, saying, as an eternal Truth, that 'where our 'Treasure is, there must the Heart be also.' So that in this Case, no Love of God, and therefore no other Divine Virtue, could have any Place in those, who conformed to the Design of Moses in his Religion.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 201

The Doctor with some Indignation, tries to evade this unavoidable Consequence, in a Passage upon Peter Baro. 'But 'those, says He, who will talk after him in this Age, must have 'lost both Sense and Shame. The true Foundation of Morality 'is the Will of God. But is not the Distinction between Right 'and Wrong, perpetually enforced by the Law of Moses on this 'Principle? This then is the Spring and Origin of all Virtue, 'and to give it the greatest Efficacy, the Love and Fear of God 'is there likewise incessantly inculcated. But how does a long, 'or short Existence, a Life here, or elsewhere, at all affect the 'Practice of Virtue so founded?*

All this is quite beside the Point, and leaves the Jews under the same Incapacity of every Divine Virtue, as has been above asserted. For a short or long Existence of the Creature is here never thought of, or urged as a Reason, why it should, or should not be morally Good. For Duration, considered in itself, whether short or long, is only a natural Consequence of that kind of Life, which the Creature hath. For, such as its internal Nature and Birth of Life is, such is its Duration. And again, such as its internal Nature, and Birth of Life is, such is the Good, and Evil that belongs to it, without any Regard to its longer, or shorter Duration.

Now it is the internal State, and Nature of Man's Life, not considered as short, but as wholly earthly, and created for only earthly Goods, that is the Reason, why such a kind of Life is incapable of any Divine Virtue, and cannot possibly have any other Love, Affections or Tempers, but such as are confined to this World. And also, why every kind of Envy, Greediness, Selfishness, Craft, and Contrivance how to get the most of every earthly Thing, that he likes best, must govern every Man, that has only the earthly Nature of this World in him, as unavoidably, as they govern Birds, and Beasts. And to tell such a People of a Goodness, to which their earthly Nature does not lead them, as it leads every other Animal to that which it likes, is as vain, as to preach to the Sparks, not to fly upwards. Nor can a Nature, wholly earthly, any more sin, by coveting only earthly Things, than the Lion sins, by having all his Heart set upon his Prey.

* D. L., page 587.

But the Doctor has a Maxim, by which he proves, that the Jews, though having only the earthly Life of this World in them, and wholly confined to earthly Hopes, and Enjoyments, yet might and ought to have been heavenly minded, namely, because the true Foundation of Morality, is the Will of God. And yet so it is, that this very Maxim is itself a sufficient Proof, that an earthly People, created only for earthly Goods, are by the very Will of God directed to be earthly minded. For the Will of God, is only so far the Law of every Creature, as his Will is in it; and his Will is, and can be, no other in the Creature, but that which is manifested by that kind of Nature, which it hath only from the Will of God. Therefore earthly Creatures, by being earthly minded, pay as full Obedience to the Will of God, as pure heavenly Spirits by their being heavenly minded. Therefore if Man is only an Animal of this World, by the Will of God, distinguished only from other Creatures, by superior Skill, Subtlety, and Contrivances (as they are from one another), he neither is, nor can be, under any other Law, or Rule relating to his Good and Evil, but that which is the Law and Rule of all other Animals, that have all their Good and Evil from this World. And as it is as good in the Wolf, to be ravening, as in the Lamb to be harmless, because they both follow their created Nature; so if Man is as merely a Creature of this World, as they are, when he, by his superior Subtlety, in order to make the most of his worldly Life, either feigns the Innocence of the Lamb, or puts on the ravening Wolf, he follows his Nature, as they do theirs, and is just as good and as bad as they are. And to tell such a Man of the Beauty of Holiness, or call him to the Denial of his own Will, for this Reason, because the true Foundation of Virtue, is the Will of God, would be to as much Purpose, as heartily received, and as fully observed, as if you were only to require him never to sleep any more, for this Reason, because holy Angels never slumber, nor sleep in Heaven. For what can Earth have to do with Heaven, or a Creature that can have no Good, all its Life, but that which is like the good of Milk and Honey, have to do with the Goodness of any Divine Virtue?—If therefore Moses designedly, and effectually fixed the Israelites in a firm Belief, that they had no Good to receive, or hope for, but that which Flesh and Blood could find in earthly Things, they were by him taken out of the Sphere of every Virtue, that can be called godly or Divine, could have no other Fear of God, but like That, which they might have towards Him, or the Giants, nor any other Love of God, but that which they had to their Bellies.

Further, that the Doctor has not at all entered into any right Conception of the Subject, He is upon, is plain from his asking, 'But how does a short or long Existence, a Life here or elsewhere, at all affect the Practice of Virtue so founded?'—It just so much affects it, as Place, or Space affects the Existence of Bodies, they are not brought forth by Place or Space, but they could have no Possibility of Existence, but in Place or Space. And thus it is, that Duration affects the Practice of all Divine Virtue, that it could have no Possibility of Existence, but in a Nature incapable of dying.—Corruptibility, and Divine Goodness, are as impossible to be united, as Life and Death.—And a perishable Creature, full of Divine Love, is as absurd, as a Storm or Tempest full of heavenly Serenity.—Death may as well exert all the Functions of Life, as a mortal Creature breathe forth the Spirit of heavenly Tempers and Affections. How comes it that Flesh and Blood cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven? It is because nothing that is mortal, can be heavenly, and therefore if all that is in Man, is mortal, nothing in Man can possibly be heavenly minded. For though the Duration of the Creature is not the Ground, or Reason of any Divine Virtue, yet no Creature can be capable of it, but that, which by the Divinity of its Birth, is born immortal.—Again, As no Divine Goodness, so also no sin against God, can have Place in any Creature that is subject to Death. For nothing can Sin against God, but that which hath truly, and essentially the Nature and Life of God in it; as nothing can act contrary to Sense and Reason, but that which hath Sense and Reason in its Nature. If therefore Angels and Men, were not Partakers of the Divine Nature, in the Birth of their Lives, they could no more sin against God, than a Man born blind can sin against the Light of the Eyes.

For where the Divine Nature is not in the Creature, it could no more commit one Sin against God, though it should live a thousand Years, than Adam could have fallen from God, a thousand Years before He was created in the Image and Likeness of God. The one, is the same Absurdity as the other.

Now the true Origin of Immortality in the Soul of Man, lies in its Will-Spirit, which is not a created Thing, but is a generated Birth, or real Offspring of the eternal, unbeginning Will-Spirit of God, of the same Nature with it, coming from God, as the Thoughts of the Mind, are generated from the Mind, are of the same Nature with it, as Births, and Issues out of it. And no Creature can have Freedom of Will, but that which has this Will-Spirit of God in it. For no Will is, or can be free, but the Will of God, and where the Will-Spirit of God is not, there is, and can be nothing, but the Instinct of Nature, which can only go on in one Way, as Nature works. Therefore so sure as Angels and Men have a Freedom of Will, so sure is it, that the Will-Spirit of God, has its Birth in them.

And this is the Ground, and Reason, why the Soul of Man, is, and must inevitably be immortal. It is because the Will-Spirit of the Soul, the Leader, and Former of its Life, being generated from the Will-Spirit of God, Death can have nothing to do with it, or have any Relation to it. It must always live, because it has nothing but Life in it. Neither can its Works die, or depart from it, because whatever it works, it works from itself, and every Thing it brings forth, is its own Offspring, or rather a Growth of itself. All therefore that the Will-Spirit hath done, though in a temporal World, must go along with it into its own Eternity. It can no more depart from its own Works, than it can depart from itself, and therefore the Scripture saith, that our Works follow us.

In this free Divine Will-Spirit of the Soul, lies all Man's Capacity for Divine Goodness. For, to choose to will that, which God wills, and to love that which God loves, is the whole Essence and Spirit of all Divine Morality. But nothing can do this, where the Divine Nature is not, any more than there can be bestial Appetites, where there is no bestial Nature.—To have Freedom of Will, is the same Thing, as to be born of God, and to be born of God, is the same Thing, as to have a Capacity for Divine Virtue.

What a Weakness therefore is it in the learned Doctor, to suppose, that a long, or short Existence, hath nothing to do with Divine Virtue, when nothing can have a short or long Existence, but according to the Birth or Quality of its Nature? But if the Birth, or Quality of its Nature has nothing to do with the Capacity for Divine Virtue, then every kind of Nature, whether it hath Freedom, or no Freedom of Will, a Birth, or no Birth of the Divine Nature, is equally capable of Divine Virtue. But if Freedom of Will, if a Birth of the Divine Nature in the Soul, are the only possible Ground of Divine Goodness in the Creature, then no creaturely Nature can be Good, or capable of Goodness, but that which is as incorruptible, and immortal as that Will-Spirit which is an immediate Birth out of the ever-living God.

What an Inconsistency, to say of a Creature of a short Existence, or whose Life is vanishing away, that its true Father is in Heaven, and that it ought therefore to be perfect as its heavenly Father is perfect? Can That which is daily tending to Non-existence, be daily growing up in the Perfection of God, or that which is always approaching towards Death, be a true Child of the ever-living God? As well might it be said of the Mushroom, that it has the Angels in Heaven for its true Brethren, as of Man, beginning to exist to Day, and ending his Existence Tomorrow, that He is a true Birth or Child of his everlasting Father in Heaven.

Now as nothing can have any moral Goodness in it, but so far, as the Goodness of the Divine Nature is brought to Life in it, so neither can it have any free Will, but because the free Will of God is born in it. For nothing has Power over Nature, or any Possibility of ruling its Workings, but the one free Will of God, which brought forth Nature. Therefore, so sure as Man has any Freedom of Will over his Nature, so sure is it, that the Divine free Will hath a Birth in Him. And so sure as he has any Possibility of loving God, and Goodness, so sure is it, that he is born of God. And therefore of all Truths, none can be more evident than that the Immortality of the Divine Nature is essential to, and inseparable from the Soul of Man.

Hence may be seen the great Impropriety of speaking of a future State, as a Sanction to the Laws of God, and of asking as the Doctor, and this Author doth, 'If the Doctrine of a future State, was intended for a Sanction of the Jewish Religion, why 'is it not plainly to be found there?' Since all agree, 'that the Sanctions of a Religion, should be delivered in as open and explicit a Manner, as the Precepts of it.'*

I have sufficiently shown, that a Future State was as evidently the one Foundation of the Patriarchal, as it is of the Gospel Religion; but to call it a Sanction, under either State, and Reason upon it under that Idea, is a most gross Mistake of the whole Nature of the Thing. For a Sanction is purely That, which may be discretionally, or arbitrarily given, or not given, done or not done to those, who are called to obey a Law.

But a future State, whether of Happiness, or Misery, has nothing of this Nature in it, it is nothing discretionally or arbitrarily done, or given to the Soul, but is only the Soul's Continuance in the Possession of That, which this Life hath done in it, and to it.

Therefore to speak of future Happiness and Misery, as

* Free Examination, pages 75, 82.

Sanctions, and such Sanctions as are to be found in one Divine Religion, and not in another, is as absurd, and contrary to the Nature of the Thing, as to call our free Will, and natural Understanding, Sanctions, and such Sanctions, as are in one Dispensation of God, and not in another.

For Happiness, and Misery are as essential to our Life, are as daily with us, make as much a Part of us, and are as inseparable from our Nature, as the Workings of our Will and Understanding are, and we have neither the one, nor the other, but just as the Workings of our Will, and Understanding proceed. And a future State is nothing else but a going on, or Increase of that same Happiness or Misery which we had here, just as it is the Increase, or Progress of that same Working of the Will and Understanding, that we had here. But if a Sanction, is in its whole Nature, a discretionary, and arbitrary Thing, to call a future State a Sanction, because it may and ought to be considered, as a Motive to Holiness, is as much mistaking the Nature both of a Sanction, and a future State, as to call our Will and Understanding Sanctions, because they are, and ought to be considered, as powerful Motives to eschew Evil, and cleave to that which is Good.

There are some other most egregious Errors which I intended to have remarked upon, but I am already got beyond the proper Bounds of a Letter.—But holy David's Case, I cannot but mention, as sufficient to have deterred the Doctor from an Hypothesis, which has obliged him to place this Divine sweet Singer of Israel amongst those, who had not the least Sense, or Thought of any eternal Relation, they had to God. This holy David, the Man after God's Heart, the Type of Christ, the Royal Prophet, 'who knowing that God had sworn with an Oath, that out of the Fruit of his Loins according to the Flesh, 'He would raise up Christ to sit on his Throne'; this great Prophet, who foretold the Resurrection of Christ, 'that his Soul 'was not left in Hell, neither did his Flesh see Corruption,' this David, thus deep in the Counsels of God, and acquainted with the great Article of the Resurrection, whose inspired Psalms are, and have been chanted in all Ages of the Christian Church, as the pious Breathings of the Holy Spirit, this holy, spiritual, typical, prophesying David is, for the sake of the Doctor's Project, crowded amongst those, who were not allowed to have any other Relation to God, or any Thing else to hope from Him, or Thank Him for, but the Blessings of a temporal Life, till Death had put the same End, to the All of David, as it did to those few Sheep, that He had once kept. And what is still worse, this same David is made the most zealous Preacher up of the Folly of fearing, or hoping for any Thing after Death. And is, as such, appealed to by the Doctor, and his Assistant, as giving the most full Evidence against all Happiness, but that of this Life, and represented in his Divine Transports, as setting forth the Wisdom of Believing that the Life of Man ends like that of rotten Sheep, in a Death that brings him into the dark Land of Forgetfulness; singing gloriously, 'the Dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into Silence. In Death 'there is no Remembrance of Thee: in the Grave, who shall 'give thee Thanks?'

Thus it is, that David, by these Gentlemen is made a Preacher against a future State; not considering, that such Infidelity would have been worse in David, than it possibly can be in any modern Infidel. But the Truth of the Matter is this, the Holy Prophet in all Passages of this kind, is only calling upon God for the Continuance, and full Manifestation of the Blessings of that temporal Theocracy, which could only be given by God, or received by Man, whilst He was on this side Death, and the Grave. And the Darkness, Silence, or Insensibility affirmed of Death, has no Relation to a total End of all Life and Sensibility, but only and solely to a total End of all Enjoyment, Sight, or Sense of the Wonders and Blessings promised by the Divine Theocracy. Thus, 'Shall thy Lovingkindness be showed in the 'Grave? Shall thy Wonders be known in the Dark? Or thy 'Faithfulness in Destruction?' Plainly shows, that He calls Death, a State of Darkness and Insensibility solely with Regard to God's temporal Wonders and Blessings, and only sets forth this plain, and innocent Truth, that temporal Death puts a full End to all temporal Enjoyments. And thence it is, that He calls upon the Divine Faithfulness either to make good that Covenant of temporal Blessings in this Life, or it could not be made good at all; because a Death to this Life, must be an absolute Death to all the good Things of this Life.—David, as a Son of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, had their Faith and Piety, and as such, his Psalms are as full of heavenly Devotion, as flaming with Divine Love, as if composed by an Angel. But David, as a Son of the Covenant made with Moses, was also an Heir of the temporal Blessings of the Theocracy; and in this Capacity, the heavenly, angelic Psalmist, had a Right to say, 'Why do the Wicked prosper? My Tears have been my Meat, 'while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God?—Wilt 'thou show thy Wonders in the Grave?' That is, canst thou perform thy promised temporal Blessings, when Death has taken away all Possibility of receiving them?

And thus the holy David, though full of the Faith of Abraham, and knowing that Christ, his Son according to the Flesh, should die, and rise from Death, to effect the Redemption, promised to his Fathers, could with the Fulness of this Belief, call temporal Death, an utter Insensibility, and Incapacity to receive the temporal Blessings of that Theocracy under which God had placed him. And this is the Ground of rightly understanding all that is said, by the other holy Penmen of Scripture in the Language of David.

But if it could be supposed, that David by the foregoing Expressions, meant to give up the Promises of eternal Redemption made to all his Forefathers, and called the World to look for no more, but what they could get in this Vale of Misery, what Excuse can be made for the Christian Church, which from first to last, has made such heathenish Songs a Part of the Gospel Service? For in this Case, these Psalms may be justly esteemed profane, as having a more direct Tendency to beget, and fix Infidelity in the Hearts of Men, than the Hymns of the heathen Poets.

In haste, as I am, to have done troubling your Lordship, I must yet add a Word, upon the Doctor's most theological Account of Man's first Ability to speak articulate Words.

'In judging,' says He, 'only from the Nature of Things, without 'the surer Instruction of Revelation, one should be apt to embrace 'the Opinion of Diodorus Siculus, that the first Men lived for 'some Time in Woods, and Caves, after the manner of Beasts, 'uttering only confused Sounds.* And yet it is hardly possible for a Man to make a Judgment more contrary to the Nature of Things. For does not the Nature of almost all Animals, Beasts, and Birds show us, that they have all of them, a natural untaught Language, not consisting of confused Sounds, but altogether distinct by an articulate Difference, and highly intelligible to everyone of the same Species? If therefore the Nature of Things will allow us to suppose, that Man was created as perfect in his Kind, as the Animals were in theirs, then the Nature of Things will oblige us to affirm, that the first of Mankind had from Nature, an untaught Language, as suitable to the Ends of their Creation, as useful, as distinct, and intelligible to themselves, as that of Birds, or Beasts, is to them in their several Kinds. Now it must not be said, that the Doctor has adopted the whole Opinion of Diodorus, though so highly (as he thinks) conformable to the Nature of Things; for he has given up that of Man's living in Woods and Caves, &c., and has only chosen to stand by that, which is much the worst Part of it, namely, his natural Inability to utter any Thing but confused Sounds.—However, to make Amends for all this Poverty of Speech, in which Man was brought forth by God, the Doctor has a Conjecture, how it soon came to be better with Him. In Scripture, says He, 'we find that God taught the first Man, Religion, and can 'we think, He would not at the same Time, teach him Language? 'Again, when God created Man, He made Woman for his Companion, and Associate, but the only Means of enjoying that 'Benefit, was the use of Speech. Can we believe that He would 'leave them to get out of the forlorn Condition of Brutality as 'they could?*'—Shocking and even blasphemous Words! For how little short can it be of that, to say, that Man, created in the Image and Likeness of God, was created in a forlorn Condition of Brutality? Has, or can any Infidel more despise and ridicule all that is said both in the Old, and New Testament, concerning Man's Creation, his high Birth, and Destination, his Fall, and Redemption, than is here done?

* D. L., vol. ii., page 81.

In the Scripture we are told, that Man in the first, perfect State of his Creation, came forth a living Image, and Likeness of the all-perfect God; that He came forth in this distinguished, and exalted State of Perfection, above all other Animals of this World, in order to be a Lord, and Ruler over them. Can there be a more open Ridicule made of all this, than to hold, that this first glorious Image of God, came forth in a forlorn brutal Condition, unable to utter any Thing, but dumb, and confused Sounds? Or what can be more unbecoming a Christian Doctor, than to espouse such a paltry Notion from the Authority of a Pagan Greek, in full Contradiction to all, that Moses, Christ and his Apostles, have said of the first heavenly Nature, Divine Birth and glorious Prerogatives of Man? What a Mockery is here made of the whole Christian System, which supposes Man to have fallen from such a high Degree of heavenly Union with God, that nothing less than the Birth of the Son of God in fallen Man, could restore him to that Perfection, which He had at first? What a Folly to talk of the Fall of Man, or his Possibility of sinning against God, if he came out of the Hands of God in a forlorn Condition of Brutality? For supposing him to be such, he must have wanted a new Birth, before He fell, or could possibly be guilty of falling from any heavenly Perfection, unless in such a good Sense, as a Creature born without any Eyes, may be charged with the Guilt of having renounced the Perfection of Sight.

But the Doctor comes now to his full Proof, that Man had at first no articulate Speech, and that He was actually taught it afterwards by God, from these Words of Moses; 'God brought 'every Beast of the Field, and every Fowl of the Air, unto 'Adam, to see what He would call them.'

* D. L., vol. ii., page 81.

And yet, so unlucky is the Doctor, that no Words in the World can give a higher Proof, that Adam had not only an articulate Speech, but in such a Degree of Perfection, as none of his Natural Sons, not the whole Tribe of Linguists, Critics, and Grammarians, ever had, or can possibly have. For if it could be supposed, that any Man was a hundred Times more knowing than the Doctor is, in what He calls his Enigmatic, Curiologic, Hieroglyphic, Emblematic, Symbolic, &c., &c., Profundities, yet if all the Beasts of the Field, and all the Fowls of the Air, were to be brought before him to be distinguished from one another, by articulate Sounds of his Voice, even such a Man would be as unequal to the Task, as a Tom Thumb. And of all the Absurdities, that ever were heard of, surely none can equal that, of supposing, that Adam had not an articulate Speech, but had it to learn at a Time, when he was called to the highest Exercise of the highest Perfection of Language, namely, to distinguish such an infinite Number of Creatures, by different articulate Sounds of his Voice. It is like supposing, that a Man whose Eyes had no natural Power of distinguishing one Thing from another, should therefore, and on that Account, have all the Creatures in the World, brought before him, that He might describe every Difference in Form, and Figure, that belonged to them. And yet the Doctor is so charmed with this Sense of the foregoing Words, that He fathers it upon Moses, as an uncommon Elegance.—He proceeds next to censure a generally received Opinion, viz., that Adam gave every Creature a Name suitable to its Nature. And yet the inspired Text directly affirms this, saying, 'And whatsoever Adam called 'every living Creature, that was its Name,' that is, That was true of it; for surely the Text would not have said, 'That was its 'Name,' if it had not been true of it, which it could not have been, if it had mistook, or misrepresented its Nature.—But, however, in Favour of the Doctor let it be supposed that Adam neither did, nor could name the Creatures suitable to their Natures, and then it will follow, that they were all brought before him in vain, that He might as well have named them before He saw them, as afterwards; that He was called to do That, which had neither Right, nor Wrong in it, to say something, which was no better, than if He had said the Contrary, and to distinguish Creatures by different Names, but not according to their different Natures.

Dr. Warburton's Defence. 211

But of Adam's Divine Ability to give Names to the Creatures suitable to their Natures, much greater Things are to be said, which must be left to some other Occasion.—The Language of every Creature is natural, and not taught; it is as much the Effect of its whole Nature, the joint Operation of its Soul, Spirit and Body, as its Life is; and is articulate, or not articulate, good or evil, harmonious or horrible, just as the Life of the Creature has more or less of the Perfection of a Divine, or earthly Harmony in it.—And these Words of our Saviour, though spoken on a particular Occasion, that ‘out of the abundance of the Heart the Mouth speaketh,’ contain the whole Philosophy of the Language of all Creatures, whether in Heaven, on Earth, or in Hell. And no Creature wants any more Teaching, how to speak its own Language, than it wants to be taught how to hear. And if Man is the only Creature in this World that wants to be sent to School, it is the greatest of all Proofs that he has lost the original Perfection of his Nature, and is dead to that living WORD of God, which he had at his Creation, and so must learn an A, B, C, Language that is neither natural to him, or any Man else. And if it were not thus, that He was dead to his first heavenly Power of speaking, it would be as impossible for one Man born in this Climate to speak unintelligibly to a Man born in another Climate, as for one Angel to speak unintelligibly to another, nor could there be any more two Languages amongst Men on Earth, than there are two Languages amongst Angels in Heaven.

Hence the shining Sons of verbal Literature, whether Critics, Linguists, or grammatical Orators, may see, if they will, that the mighty Province in which they make such Figure, is procured for them, by Man's having lost all that was good, Divine and heavenly in the Language of his first perfect Nature. Otherwise the Prince and the Peasant all round the Globe, had had but one Language on Earth, as Angels have in Heaven, as sure as they had but one Nature.

The Doctor has by strength of Genius, and great Industry, amassed together no small Heap of learned Decisions of Points, Doctrines, as well Heathenish, as Christian, much the greatest Part of which, the Christian Reader will find himself obliged to drive out of his Thoughts, as soon as he can in right, good Earnest say with the Jailor, ‘What must I do to be saved?’—This Collection of Decisions, he calls his projected Defence of Christianity, which if it was such, Christianity must have been but poorly provided for its Support by the four Gospels. I shall make no Doubt of his intending, what he says, by them. But a Project in Defence of Christianity, is not more promising, than a Trap to catch Humility. The Nature of Things allows no more of the one, than of the other. To be a Defender of Christianity, is to be a Defender of Christ, but none can defend Him in any other Sense, or Degree, than so far as he is his Follower. To be with Christ, is to walk as He walked, and He that is not so with him, is against Him, and is rejected as an Enemy, though He should say, that He had prophesied and wrought Miracles in his Name.

There are two Ways of embracing Christianity, the one is, as a Sinner, the other as a Scholar; the former is the Way taught by Christ and his Apostles, the latter is the Invention of Men, fallen from the first Spirit and Truth of the Christian Life under the Power of natural Reason, and verbal Learning.—A Change, which has some Likeness to that, which happened to the good Light of the Heathen World: The Original Philosophers, who lived what they said, were succeeded by a Race of Sophists, who had no Wisdom of Philosophy, but that of Descanting, Disputing, and Writing about what the Philosophers had taught.—Now, the two Ways above-mentioned, are not to be considered, as only the one better than the other, but in such a Difference, as Right and Wrong, true and false, bear to one another. For there is no Possibility of entering, or taking one progressive Step in Christianity, but as a Sinner, for it has no Errand but to the Sinner, has no Relief but for Sin, and nothing can receive it, but the Heart wounded, and wearied with the Burden of its own Sin. All the Gospel is but a foreign Tale, a dead Letter to the most logically learned Man in the World, who does not feel and find in the Depth of his Soul, that all the Reasonableness, and Excellency of Gospel Truth, lies in that Fund of Sin, Impurity, and corrupt Tempers, which are and must be inseparable from Him, till in Christ Jesus he is born again from Above.—Every other Confession of the Reasonableness and Excellency of the Christian Religion, but that which the Conviction of Sin and Misery in the Soul, makes of it, is but like the Praise of a Stander-by, who commends something in which he has no Concern. And if the Doctor, in his Application to the Deists, had pressed home this affecting Truth, which stands at the Door of every Man's Heart, and is the only Ground of Christian Redemption, he had shown a better Care and Concern for their Souls, and had done more to awaken them out of their Infidelity, than by all that Wit and Satire in his Dedication of his Book to them. For Like begets Like; Love and Seriousness in the Speaker, begets Love and Seriousness in the Hearer; and He that has no Earnestness towards Unbelievers, but that of persuading them not to lose their Share of the Love and Mercy of God in Christ Jesus, towards helpless, fallen Man, must and can only do it, in the Spirit, and Language of that Love and Goodness, in whose Arms, He longs to see them embraced.

But as no Man ever came to Christ, but because he was weary, and heavy laden with the Burden of his own Natural Disorder, and wanted rest to his disturbed Soul, so nothing can help Man to find the Necessity of coming to Christ, but that, which helps him to find and feel a Misery of Sin and Corruption, which in some, the Care and Pleasures of this Life, and in others, the Happiness of finding themselves Wits, and polite Scholars, never suffered them to feel before.

Our Lord's Parable of the Prodigal Son, contains the whole Matter between God and fallen Man, it relates nothing particular to this, or that Person, but sets forth the strict Truth of every Man's State, with regard to his heavenly Father. For every Son of Adam has every Thing in Him, that is said of that Prodigal, he has lost his first State and Condition, as he did, is wandered as far from his heavenly Father and Country, has abused, and wasted his Father's Blessings, and is that very poor Swineherd, craving Husks in a Land of Famine, instead of living in the paradisaical Glory of his Father's Family; and of every Reader of that Parable, it may be justly said, 'Thou art 'the Man.' And no Son of Adam, do what he will, can possibly come out of the Poverty, Shame, and Misery of his fallen State, till he finds, and feels, and confesses from the Bottom of his Heart, all that, which the penitent Prodigal found, felt, and confessed.

I should have had much Uneasiness, my Lord, in exposing so many gross Errors both in the Matter, and Manner of the Doctor's Books, did not my Heart bear me full Witness, that no want of Good-will, or due Respect towards him, but solely a Regard to That, which ought only to be regarded, has directed my Pen.

I am, My LORD,
With all dutiful Respect and Veneration,
Your Lordship's most Obedient, Humble Servant,

King's Cliffe,
Mar. 14, 1757.

WILLIAM LAW.

FINIS.

OF JUSTIFICATION
BY Faith and Works.
A DIALOGUE
BETWEEN A METHODIST
AND A CHURCHMAN.

By WILLIAM LAW, M.A.

LONDON:
Printed for J. RICHARDSON, in Pater-noster-
Row. 1760.

A DIALOGUE BETWEEN
A Methodist and a Churchman.

METHODIST. Say what you will, Sir, I must still stand to it, that almost all the Sermons of your Bishops and Curates, for these last hundred Years, have been full of a Soul-destroying Doctrine.*

Churchman. Pray, what is that Doctrine ?

Methodist. It is the Doctrine of Salvation, 'partly by Faith, and partly by Works ; or Justification by Faith and Works.'†

Churchman. Salvation by Faith and Works, is a plain, and very intelligible Scripture-Truth. But Salvation partly by Faith and partly by Works, is a false and groundless Explication of the Matter, proceeding either from Art, or Ignorance.—What sounder Gospel-Truth, than to say, that we are saved by Jesus Christ, God and Man ? But, what falser Account could be given of it, than to say, that if so, then we are saved, partly by Jesus, and partly by Christ ; that Jesus does something, and Christ adds the rest. For is not Jesus Christ, as such, the one undivided Saviour, with one undivided Operation ? And who can more endeavour to lose the Meaning, and pervert the Sense of this Gospel-Truth, than he, who considers Jesus, as separately, and Christ as separately, doing their Parts one after the other, the one making up what was wanting in the other, towards the Work of our Salvation ?

Now to separate Faith from Works, in this manner, the one partly doing this, and the other partly doing that, is in as full Contrariety to Scripture, to all Truth, and the nature of the thing, as to separate Jesus from Christ. For as the one Saviour is manifested in and by Jesus Christ, one undivided Person ; so the one Salvation is manifested, when Faith is in Works, and Works are in Faith, as Jesus is in Christ, and Christ is in Jesus.

Again, how plain and good a Scripture-Truth is this, that the loving of God with all the Powers of Heart, Soul, and Spirit, and the loving our Neighbour as ourselves, is the one true fulfilling of the whole Law and Prophets. But how falsely would this be set forth by him, who should say, that it is partly the Love of God, and partly the Love of our Neighbour, the one adding that which the other wanted, and doing that which the other could not do; as if they were two separate Things, which with their different Powers make up the fulfilling of the Law.—For these two Loves, or rather two Names of Love, are, in the strictest Truth, but one Thing, one Divine Spirit of Love, from one Ground, full of one and the same Operation, no more different, or separable from one another, than Flame is different, or separable from its flying upwards.—Thus St. John, ‘If a Man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a Liar;’—but he could not therefore be a Liar, if the Love of God was a different, or separate Thing from the Love of our Neighbour.

* Mr. Berridge's Letters, page 20.

† Ibid., page 13.

Yet this is your Friend’s false and mistaken way of setting forth Justification, if so be, it is by Faith and Works; namely, his dividing them asunder from one another, and ascribing his own invented partlys and partlys, first to one, and then to the other; all which is as mere Fiction, and full of the same Absurdity, as if some other Scholar, should with the like partlys set forth the State of a living Creature; viz., that if it is in a living State, it must be so, partly by Life, and partly by its living Operations, as if Life and its living Operations were two distinct and separate Things, that contributed their separate Powers, and joined in their different Actions, to make and keep up a living Creature.—This, and not one jot less, is the Absurdity of your partlys and partlys, ascribed to a Justification, supposed to be the Effect of Faith and Works.—For Christian Faith and Christian Works, are as much one and the same indivisible Thing, as Life is one and the same indivisible Thing with its living Operations.

Methodist. I can call all this nothing else but quibbling about Words, and mere running away from the one only Thing, which ought to be debated, and that is, whether St. Paul hath not, over and over, placed the whole of Justification in and by Faith alone?

Churchman. Let me ask you, did you ever hear or read of a dead Faith, and a living Faith, or do you think the difference between them to be nothing at all, but that the one has as much of Justification in it as the other?

Methodist. This is a trifling Question, since you know, as well as I do, that our awakened Preacher has expressly declared, that there is dead Faith, and that it is then dead, when it worketh not by Love.

Churchman. Well then, if so, the Matter stands thus; Works prove Faith to be living; Want of Works prove Faith to be dead; and thence you conclude, that it is a Soul-destroying Doctrine, to teach Christians, that they are to be saved by Faith and Works.—Surely, Sir, you are not quite awake.

Methodist. You are growing hot, my Friend, but be as hot as you will, I must tell you in the Words of Mr. B—— ‘That be ‘you ever so sober, serious, just, and devout, you are still under ‘the Curse of God, provided you have any allowed Reliance on ‘your own good Works, and think that they are to do something ‘for you, and Christ to do the rest.’

Churchman. In Answer to this, I only say, that be you and your Friend ever so full of Faith, so that you could remove Mountains, you are still under the Curse of God, provided you have any allowed Reliance upon your own Faith, and think that it is to do something for you, and Christ to do the rest.—For a Reliance upon our own Faith, and a Reliance upon our own Works, are just that same good Thing, and equally contrary to the Truth of Faith, and the Truth of Works.

Methodist. What true Methodist ever called true Faith our own Faith? Does not the Scripture say, it is the Gift of God?

Churchman. What true Christian ever called good Works our own Works? Does not the Scripture say, ‘it is God who worketh ‘in us, both to will, and to do?’—Now if your Faith may be called good and saving, because it is God’s Gift, and Power within you; then a Christian’s Works may be called good and saving, or such as work out his Salvation, because they are all wrought in God, and by his Power working in him.—But now, suppose one Man to rely on his own Faith, and another to rely upon his own Works, they then are both of them carnally minded, and the Faith of the one, and the Works of the other, are equally the same worthless, filthy Rags.—On the other hand, do but (as plain Scripture requires you) ascribe good Works of the same Original, and Divine Power, as a right Faith must be ascribed to, and then Faith and Works are equally one Power of God to Salvation, because equally the same saving, redeeming, and sanctifying Work of God in our Souls.

Methodist. I wonder you should thus strive to puzzle and darken one of the greatest, and most plain Truths of the Gospel. Can anything be more plain than the Case of the Pharisee, ‘God, ‘I thank Thee, that I am not as other Men are; I fast twice in ‘the Week, I give Tithes of all that I possess,’ &c.? Here you have Works pleading their Cause.—Now how came the Publican without any Works, saying only, ‘God be merciful to me a ‘Sinner,’ to be justified rather than this good working Pharisee? Can anything be more decisive than this?

Churchman. Let it then be supposed that the Pharisee had said, God, I thank Thee, that my Faith is not like other Men's Faith, it needs not the help of fasting and praying, &c. I ask you, had this been a better Pharisee than the other? Had this boasting of a Faith been better than that boasting of Works? Or might not Christ have here justly said, that the Publican's 'God be merciful to me a Sinner,' had more of God and Goodness in it, than the Pharisee's boasting of his solitary Faith?—But now, if such a Passage as this, of a Pharisee boasting of a Faith without Works, was to be found in Scripture, and condemned by Christ, surely it would be great Delusion to appeal to it, as a full and decisive Proof of the Vanity and Insignificancy of Faith, and of its being rejected by Christ, as of no Avail.—Yet this would be full as well, as to appeal to what Christ said of the Pharisee's boasted Works, as a full Proof that Works are rejected by Christ, as worse than nothing.

Methodist. Say what you will, I am fully assured of this great Truth, thus expressed by our Friend, 'That the Moment a Man seeks to be justified by his own Obedience to God's Laws, that Moment he falls from Christ, and ceases to have an Interest in him.'

Churchman. Here just the same Answer as before will be sufficient, viz., that the Moment a Man seeks to be saved or justified by his own Faith in God, that Moment he falls from Christ, and ceases to have an Interest in him.—This is just as good an Argument against Faith itself, as your Friend's is against Works. For own Faith and own Obedience are at the same Distance from God, and are as mere Works of the Flesh, as Self-seeking and Self-love.—But if your Friend would have spoken to the Purpose of the Matter in hand, he should have expressed himself thus, viz., that the Moment a Man seeks to be justified, or made acceptable to God, by Works wrought by the Spirit of Christ living in him, that Moment he falls from Christ, and ceases to have an Interest in him.—Had he thus expressed himself, you see what an Absurdity there had been in it, and yet, without thus expressing himself, his Words are quite foreign to the Matter, and touch not those Works, which are affirmed to be essential to a Justifying Faith.—For the true Christian Man never thinks, or talks of being justified by any own Obedience, any more than of being washed and saved by his own precious Blood.—But though he has no own Obedience, no own Works, any more than he has an own Will, and own Love, yet he has an Obedience and Works, and Will and Love that reach Heaven, and unite with God. How so? It is because by the supernatural WORD and SPIRIT of God, come to a Fulness of Birth in him, his Obedience, his Works, his Will, his Love, are that which they are, and do that which they do on Earth, to the Glory, and by the same Spirit of God, as Angels do in Heaven.—This is the new Creature that is justified by Faith and Works. Suppose Faith to be not from Christ, or Works not from Christ, and then they are both of them but Works of the Flesh.—But add Christ to Faith, and Christ to Works, and then they are but one and the same Power of God to Salvation, and all Difference between Faith and Works is lost, and nothing remaineth, but ‘Christ in us the Hope of Glory.’ But your Friend forgetting, or not knowing, that no Works, are called Salvation Works, or pleaded for as such, but those that Christ worketh in us, considers, and confounds all Works as own Works, and selfish Works, and so condemns Christian Works, and the Necessity of them, upon no other Ground, but because own Works, which proceed from self, are false, vain, and unprofitable to our Salvation.—Whereas our blessed Lord, has in the plainest Manner distinguished them from one another, and shown us, when and how Works are our own, and of no Avail before God, and also when and how Works are good and godly, and Works of Salvation, Justification, and Sanctification. ‘When thou dost ‘thine Alms,’ saith he, ‘do not sound a Trumpet before thee, as ‘the Hypocrites do in the Synagogues, and in the Streets, to be ‘seen of Men. Verily I say unto you, they have their Reward.’ Here you see what an own Work is, and why it has no Salvation-Goodness in it, it is because it is done only to trumpet forth its own Glory. Now where anything like this Trumpet goes along, either with that which we call Faith, or Works, though it should have ever so heavenly an Appearance, it has only the Nature, and can have only the Reward of vain-glorious Alms.—God said to a holy Prophet of old ‘Cry aloud, and spare not, lift up thy ‘Voice like a Trumpet.’ Here is one kind of a religious Trumpet. The Pharisees were learned Men, and full of religious Zeal, and they also had their religious Trumpet, which our Lord condemned.—Therefore Zeal and Trumpeting, are not good, and Things to be trusted to, because they pretend Religion, but may be as different from one another, as a Pharisee is from a holy Prophet.—This ought well to be considered by all, who set a Trumpet to their Mouths in God’s cause; for if all that was alive in the trumpeting Prophet, be not alive in them, and all that was alive in the Pharisee, be not dead in them, they will begin too soon, and run before they are sent by God, to preach of the true Life, and the true Death, to a World ignorant, and careless about them.—Again, our Lord saith, ‘when thou prayest, thou shalt ‘not be as the Hypocrites are, for they love to pray, standing in ‘the Synagogues, and in the Corners of the Streets, that they 'may be seen of Men. Verily I say unto you, they have their 'Reward,' and can have no better a Reward, because he that thus prays, makes Prayers an own Work of own Glory, and therefore they are but an abomination before God.—But now, will you from hence tell the World, that Alms and Prayers are Soul-destroying Things, or at best but mere filthy Rags, that signify nothing to him that uses them, because such Alms and Prayers are said to be so by Christ?

For has not Christ in this very Place taught you the direct contrary, and said as much of the Salvation-Power of good Works, as he has said of the Nothingness of pharisaical Works?—'When 'thou dost thine Alms,' saith he, 'let not thy left Hand know 'what thy right Hand doth.' And again, 'When thou prayest, 'enter into thy Closet, and when thou hast shut thy Door, pray 'to thy Father which is in Secret, and thy Father which seeth in 'Secret, shall reward thee openly.'—Why is all this Secrecy? It is, that the whole Work, may be solely from, and to, and for God, and that self may have neither Beginning, nor End, or the least Share in it. — Now I ask, have these Alms and these Prayers nothing of Salvation-Goodness in them, when our Lord therefore commands them, that we may thereby obtain a Reward in Heaven? Can they help us to a Reward in Heaven, without helping forward our Salvation? If a heavenly Reward follows such Works as these, must they not on the same Ground, in the strictest sense of the Words, be called saving Alms, saving Prayers, as any Faith, from Adam or Abraham to this Day, can be called saving Faith?—What are all the Promises made to the Faith of the Fathers, of a 'City that hath Foundations, whose 'Builder and Maker is God'? what is that better and Heavenly Country, which was to be the Reward of their Faith, but these very Rewards here promised by Christ to the Works of Christian Alms, and Christian Prayers? Our blessed Lord's whole Divine Sermon on the Mount, is nothing else but a continual Doctrine of good Works, and a continual Doctrine of such Rewards as belong to the faithful, diligent Workers.—No Blessedness is ascribed to a single Faith, but all along to some one or other godly Work. 'Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain Mercy.—Do good 'to them that hate you.—Give to him that asketh you.'—But why all this? It is, 'that you may be Children of your Father, 'which is in Heaven.'—Surely then such Works as make us to be Children of our Father, which is in Heaven, may be said to be saving Works.

Methodist. Well, now I fully believe, what a very great Man has often said, that you have not one right Thought or Notion about Justification. But however for once, I must desire you to say, what, and when, and where Justification is.

Churchman. Surely I shall not be much mistaken, if I shall venture to say, it is then and there, where there is no Condemnation. Now St. Paul saith, 'there is no Condemnation to them 'that are in Christ Jesus.' If you ask him, who are those that are in Christ Jesus? He tells you in the very next Words, they are those 'who walk not after the Flesh, but after the Spirit.'—But no one doth, or can walk after the Flesh, but he who doth the Works of the Flesh, nor anyone walk after the Spirit, but he who doth the Works of the Spirit.—So then whether you consider Justification, or Condemnation, Works are the whole of the Matter. No Condemnation but from our evil Works, no Justification but from our good Works.—Evil Works are from the Spirit of Satan, working and ruling in our animal Birth of Adam's poisoned Flesh and Blood.—Good Works are from the Spirit of Christ, working in that blessed Seed of the Woman, or incorruptible Seed of the WORD (common to all Men) till it comes to a Birth of the new Creature, created unto good Works in Christ Jesus.—Thus the Works of the Devil in us, are our only Condemnation, and the Works of Christ in us, are our only Justification.—And by thy Works, thou shalt be justified, is just the same scriptural, immutable Truth, as by thy Works thou shalt be condemned.

Would you see the Truth of Justification, and the Truth of Condemnation, free from all Possibility of Mistake, look how the righteous Judge of all the World, will proceed at the last Day.—Mankind is then to be divided into two sorts of People, the one called Sheep, the other Goats. To the Sheep, saith Christ, 'Come 'ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you 'from the Foundation of the World.'—Whence now comes this Blessedness, or how came they to be the blessed Heirs of such a prepared Kingdom? The one sole Reason of it, is thus given by Christ, namely because of their good Works. 'For I was an 'hungered and ye gave me Meat, naked and ye clothed me, sick 'and in Prison, and ye visited me.' Here you have the last, full and final Justification, ascribed to nothing else but Works, done in and by and for Christ.—Is there here any Room left for you, or any Christian to ask one single Question, or have the least doubtful Thought about Justification, what it is, and how it comes to pass? Can you be taught by an higher Authority, or in plainer Words, that Works, Christian Works, are all the justification that will stand you in stead at the last Day?

Again, to the Goats saith Christ, 'Go ye cursed into everlasting Fire prepared for the Devil and his Angels.' Whence now have these Goats their cursed State, that casts them into the Hell of the Devil? The one sole Reason given by Christ, is because they had not done those Works, by which his Sheep were justified and blessed, and made to inherit the Kingdom of Heaven.—Here you have the last, full and final condemnation, ascribed to no one thing else, but the want of Works. And who is it that teaches you, but He who is the Truth itself, and the Father of all Truth, both in Men and Angels.

What occasion then for so many laboured critical Volumes, about Faith and Works in order to Justification? If you hold more or less, or anything else about Justification, than that which Christ has here asserted, the Spirit of Anti-Christ must have helped you to it.—For call any Thing a justifying Faith, but good Works, and then you have your Doctrine as surely from Anti-Christ, as if you were to hold, that they were the blessed Sheep, whom Christ called Goats and Cursed.—Christ is the one great infallible Teacher about Justification, and what He has said in two or three Words about it, can no more have anything taken from it, or added to it, or altered in it, than his last Sentence on his Judgment-Seat.—Deceive not yourself, my Friend, with a Faith, that hath not all its Goodness, its Truth and Perfection, from Works. For what greater Deception can you fall under, than to believe, that any Thing can be your Justification, or your Condemnation, whilst you are in the Body, but that which will be your Justification, or Condemnation, after you are risen from the Dead?—Now after this Determination of Christ, that nothing but Works will pass for Justification at the last Day, look at the Determination made by your Friend, saying, in the fullest Contradiction to Christ, ‘That Justification by Faith and Works, is a most pernicious, papistical, and damnable Doctrine. Which Doctrine, says he, I am verily assured, no one can hold, and be in a State of Salvation.’*

Is not every Word here, in full Condemnation of Christ’s Doctrine of his Sheep and their Salvation through Works, as a most pernicious and damnable Doctrine, tending to the Destruction of all those who believe it, and walk according to it?

For does he who preaches up Salvation by Faith and Works, teach any Thing else, but that very Doctrine which Christ taught, when he said, Come ye blessed, because of the Works which ye have done, and go ye cursed, because wanting the Works, which ye should have done.—Say no more then, that Papists, and Popish Protestants, have invented this damnable Doctrine of Faith and Works.—Christ is the Author of it, and he has sealed it with the same Certainty, as the Day of Judgment. Your Friend’s Verily assured, is quite as outrageous and frantic, as if he had said, I am verily assured, that Damnation will be the State of all Preachers and Hearers, who do not as fully exclude Works from Justification now, as Christ will require them for Justification hereafter.

* Letters, page 22.

Methodist. But pray, Sir, if I am to give up my Friend's Doctrine, must I not give up St. Paul also, as a Deceiver and false Apostle, for so he must be, if Justification is by Works? What are his Epistles to the Romans, the Galatians, and Ephesians, but so much Pains taken, to prove that we are saved, or justified, by Faith alone.

Churchman. I am as much for all St. Paul's Doctrine, as for any other Scripture, and fully believe that he said nothing about Faith, but what he said by the Inspiration of the holy Spirit.—But if you believe that St. Paul ever said one single Word about Faith, as it signifies a single Act, or Operation of the Mind, or ever ascribed any Good to that, in opposition to Works, or that he ever distinguished, or divided Christian Faith from Christian Works, you may be said to have read him with Eyes that see not,—and Ears that hear not.

Methodist. Surely your St. Paul and mine cannot be the same Person, or you could never talk at this Rate.

Churchman. I would ask you whether St. Peter taught a Faith without Works, when he said to the Jews, 'This is the Stone, which was set at nought of you Builders, which is become the Head of the Corner. Neither is there Salvation in any other, for there is no other Name under Heaven given among Men, whereby we must be saved,' Acts iv. 11, 12. Now did it ever come into your Head, from reading these Words of St. Peter, that he there taught a Salvation through Christ (that is, through the Gospel Religion) by Faith without Works?—See also what Christ himself had spoken before of this very Stone, and the Builders that rejected it, therefore, saith he, 'I say unto you, the Kingdom of God,' that is, this very Stone, 'shall be taken from you, and given to a Nation bringing forth the Fruits thereof,' Matt. xxi. 43. Now would you from these Words of Christ, on which St. Peter's Words are grounded, have ever thought of proving that the Religion of the Gospel, called by St. Peter the Head Stone of the Corner, and by Christ the Kingdom of God bringing forth its Fruits, must be a Religion of Faith without Works. What could be more extravagant than this, and yet not more so, than to pretend to prove it from any Words of St. Paul.—For I defy anyone to show, that he hath ever said any more, or other Thing about Faith alone, or meant anything else by it, as our Salvation, but strictly and to a tittle, that same which St. Peter calls the Stone, or that Name alone, by which Salvation is to be had.—St. Paul's Faith alone, is nothing else, means nothing else, but the Gospel Religion alone, and only attests that Divine Truth spoken from the Beginning to the End of the new Testament, that the Gospel Dispensation, or Religion, alone, can be the Salvation of Men.—When St. Paul speaks of Works, as quite unprofitable, nay hurtful to Salvation, nothing is meant by them, but Jewish and Heathenish Works; and by that Faith, which he opposes to them, and sets up in the stead of them, he always means the whole System of Gospel Truths, the whole Process of Christ, with all the Salvation Doctrines that belong to it.—This is St. Paul's Faith alone, by which we can only be saved, just the same thing as St. Peter's saying, There is no other Name under Heaven but this alone, by which we can be saved.—The only Difference between Peter and Paul is this, that Peter, in his short Expression, calls that the Name alone by which we can be saved, which Paul, in his short Expression, calls Faith alone, and both of them mean the whole of That, which Christ calls the Kingdom of God with its Fruits thereof; which Kingdom of God is neither more nor less, than the whole Gospel System of Christ's Process, with all the Benefits and Doctrines essential, or belonging to it.

Away then with your idle Fancy of Paul's ever distinguishing Christian Faith from Christian Works, or ever giving the smallest Preference of the one to the other.—To the Jews, who said to Christ, 'What shall we do, that we may work the Works 'of God?' Christ saith, 'This is the Work of God, that ye 'believe in him, whom he hath sent.'—This is St. Paul's sole and whole Doctrine about Faith alone, it is to believe in Christ, and that Belief is the whole Christian Work, the whole Work that God requires, the whole Salvation Work. But why so? Because to believe in Christ, is to embrace all and the whole of that, which Christ was, did, suffered, taught, and commanded, as the one only Salvation of Men.

Methodist. I must confess you have said more than I expected to hear, and more than I can at present answer. But pray show me how it appears, that St. Paul by his Faith alone, means nothing else but the Christian Religion alone, or the System of Gospel Doctrines alone.

Churchman. You might as well ask me, how it appears that Paul was an Apostle, or Witness of Jesus Christ alone; for how could he be an Apostle of Christ alone, if he meant anything by his Faith alone, but the whole that is meant by the whole Gospel Religion of Christ? Therefore wherever St. Paul ascribes Salvation to Faith alone, you have the fullest Proof, that he himself could possibly give you, that by Faith alone, he means neither more nor less than the whole Gospel Religion alone.—St. Paul has these Words, ‘God forbid, that I should glory in any Thing, ‘save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ.’—Here you see, all is rejected but the Cross of Christ alone, this alone is his Glory, and a good Glory it was; but would not all that is true and good in this Speech of Paul’s be perverted and lost, unless by the Cross alone, you understand the whole Process, Doctrines, and Precepts, of a crucified Saviour, that is, the whole Christian Religion? Now thus it is with Faith alone; and if Paul had said, God forbid that I should glory in any Thing but in Faith alone in Christ, he had said just the same Thing, as when he would have no Glory but in the Cross alone.—For where all that is Christian Joy, or Hope, or Comfort, or Salvation, is ascribed to any one single Thing, whether it be called Faith alone, or the Cross alone, there that Faith, and that Cross, must stand equally, and only for the whole Gospel Religion. And then to say, that a Man is saved by the Cross alone, or by Faith alone, is the same sound, and good Truth.—‘I know whom I have ‘believed,’ saith the Apostle, and if he had said, I know whom I have followed, whom I have obeyed, the Thing had been just the same.—For to follow Christ, or to be in the Faith of Christ, or to be a Disciple of the Cross, are three different Expressions, but the Meaning of them all, is but one and the same.

‘I am not ashamed,’ saith St. Paul, ‘of the Cross of Christ,’ just the same as if he had said, I am not ashamed of the Gospel Kingdom of Christ. For that he means by the Cross, the whole Religion of the Gospel, he tells you, in saying, that it is the Power of God to Salvation; and what is, or can be this Power, but that whole Process, Precepts, and Doctrines of Christ, which make the whole Religion of the Gospel? Again, ‘I have ‘determined,’ saith he, ‘to know nothing among you but Christ, ‘and him crucified.’ But will you thence infer, that all other Knowledge, whether of the Birth, Life, Resurrection, and Ascension of Christ, was rejected by him as quite useless and unprofitable? Yet this would be full as well, as to infer, that because he saith, by Faith alone ye are saved, therefore no Works are to be admitted as saving, but are to be rejected as vain and quite unprofitable to Salvation.—For the Knowledge of Christ crucified alone, and Faith alone, are then each of them put for the whole Gospel-Religion, and not for Faith, as signifying a single Power of the Mind, nor for the Cross, as meaning the single Crucifixion of Christ.

Further, drop now for awhile this Consideration of Faith, in which St. Paul has used it for the whole Gospel-Doctrine, and consider Faith in the Sense, in which our Lord and the whole

Scripture most frequently speak of it, as a living working Power of the Mind, that wills, and desires, and hopes, and trusts, and believes, and obeys; and in this Sense of the Word, it will be absolutely true, that Works have just the same Salvation in them, that Faith hath, because in the very Nature of the Thing, Works are of the same Nature with, and inseparable from Faith, let the Faith or Works be what they will, because Faith is nothing else, has nothing else, but what its Works are.—This is equally true of every Man, and every Faith in the World, he has no Works, but the workings of his Faith.—For as Life has no Existence but in and by its living Operations, so Faith hath no Existence, but in its own Workings.—Now if you will have a Life alone without its living Operations, then you must have a Life that is without Motion, without Will or Desire, without Hearing, Seeing, Feeling, or any Inclination to any Thing, and then you have a Life, that is just as good as a dead Carcase.—So if you will have a Christian Faith that is alone, and not made up of Works, you must have a Christian Faith, that has no Penitence, no Humility, no Denial of Self, no Hunger after Righteousness, no striving to enter in at the strait Gate, no Love of God, or your Neighbour. For Faith cannot be alone, or without Works, till it is without all these Workings.—And then you have a Faith alone, that is just as able to fight St. Paul's good Fight of Faith, as the dead Carcase is to take a City.—And let me tell you, that these Works are not only the very Essence of Faith, and inseparable from it, but that Faith itself can have no Beginning, but from some one, or other of them, nor any further Growth, but as these grow more and more. For Faith and its Works beget, and are begotten of one another, for as it must be said, that Humility and Penitence are the true Fruits, or Works of Faith, so it may be as truly said, that Humility or Penitence are the first Root, or Seed, from whence Faith gets its Birth—Faith, considered as an Act or Operation of the Mind, is like any other Faculty or Power, it cannot be alone, any more than will, desire, longing, hoping, fearing, wishing, loving, trusting, or rejoicing, can any of them be alone, or in a State of Separation from the rest.—And to ascribe Salvation to any one of these Tempers alone, and by itself, would be as consistent with Scripture, and the Nature of the Thing, as to ascribe it to Faith alone, considered as a single Thing, and separate from all other Works, or working of the Mind.

But Faith, not considered as the working of the Will, or an Operation of the Mind, but as meaning the whole System of Gospel-Religion, may and must be alone Salvation, without any Thing else but itself, and that for the same Reason, as St. Peter says, that Christ alone, is the only Stone, or the only Name whereby we can be saved.

Would you therefore come out of that Thickness of Darkness, which a blind Babylonish Spirit of Dispute, has in these latter Ages brought into St. Paul's Doctrine of Faith without Works, this must be your Way.

You must take, or put Faith for the whole Gospel-Religion, when he opposes it to, or separates it from Works, and then you will rightly understand why he saith, By Faith alone ye are saved.—You must also put Jewish, or Heathenish to the Works, which he excludes from Faith, and then you will rightly understand what Works he declares to have no Salvation in them. This is the true, unerring Key to all his whole Doctrine about Faith without Works.

Methodist. But where has St. Paul himself told you, that by Faith alone, he means the whole Gospel-Religion alone?

Churchman. He has told it me, as often, and wherever he has said, that by Faith alone we are saved. For how could he more show you, that he means neither more nor less by it, than by telling you that it alone is Salvation? Would you have Salvation to be obtained by something different from the whole of Gospel-Religion? Fancy now St. Paul explaining himself, and saying, when I ascribe Salvation to Faith alone, I do not mean by Faith, the whole of Gospel-Doctrine; what greater Absurdity could you charge upon him?

His Doctrine of Faith alone, and without Works, is nothing else but the Gospel-Religion alone, in Opposition to the Religion and Works of Jews and Heathens, and is solely directed to these two sorts of People, and not, as is blindly imagined, to set Christian Faith in Opposition to Christian Works, which would be no better, than teaching a Christian to be good without Goodness.

To the Jews he thus speaks, 'We have believed in Jesus Christ, 'that we might be justified by the Faith of Christ, and not by 'the Works of the Law.' Here Faith and Works stand for the two Religions, the one of Christ, and the other of Moses. For what are the Works of the Law, but the whole of the Mosaic Religion, or what the Faith of Christ, but the whole new Religion of the Gospel? Therefore to tell these People, that they were to be saved by Faith alone, and without Works, was only telling them, that they were to be saved by leaving or turning from Judaism to Christianity, or that they could not enter into the Kingdom of God, or the Gospel-Faith, or the Church of Christ (for they all mean the same Thing) till they had done with, and left off all the Works of the Law? 'I testify,' says he, 'unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.'

To the Heathens, or Greeks, he preaches the same Doctrine with Regard to their Religious State, namely, that all the Works of their Religion and Lives, must be forsaken and turned from, that by embracing the Religion, or Faith of Christ, they might be saved.—I have, says he, 'kept back nothing that was profitable 'unto you,—publicly, and from House to House, testifying both 'to the Jew and to the Greek, Repentance towards God, and 'Faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ.'—Repentance towards God, signified the Necessity of their having done with their former Religion, Works, and Manner of Life; Faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, signified the Necessity of their becoming Members of a new Gospel-Church, or Kingdom of Jesus Christ.

Not a Word through all St. Paul, that rejects any Works, but those which Jews and Heathens were satisfied with, and would not give up for the Gospel State of the Kingdom of God, which Kingdom, is called by Paul, the Faith of Christ. Not a Word of the Sufficiency of Faith alone, but where it stands for the whole of Gospel-Doctrine.

Again, St. Paul hath himself told me, that by Faith alone he means the Gospel-Religion alone, in the following Passages, 'I 'have,' says he, 'fought the good Fight, I have finished my 'Course,' and as a Proof of this, he adds, 'I have kept the Faith.' Must not Faith here stand for the whole Gospel-Religion?—Again, 'Before Faith came, we were under the Law.' Does not Faith here as certainly signify the whole Religion of the Gospel, as the Law signifies the whole Religion of Moses? Again, 'If 'they who are under the Law, be Heirs, then Faith is made 'void,' that is, the whole Religion of Jesus Christ, is made needless, and of no Use or Benefit. Can he more plainly tell you, that by Faith, as opposed to the Works of the Law, he means nothing else, but the whole of the Gospel-Doctrine? This is said to the Jews.—To the Gentiles at another Time, he speaks the same Truth in these Words; 'By Grace ye are saved through 'Faith in Christ, and that not of yourselves, not of Works, lest 'any Man should boast, it is the Gift of God,' the very self-same Gift, of which Christ spoke to the Woman at Jacob's Well, saying, 'if thou knewest the Gift of God, and who it is that saith, 'give me to drink, thou wouldest have asked of Him, and he 'would have given thee living Water.'—Now what is this Gift of God with his living Water, but the Christ of God with all his redeeming Process, from his Birth to his Ascension into Heaven, freely given by God, that Man might thereby be saved. Therefore this Faith, or Gift of God, by which alone we can be saved, signifies neither more nor less, than the whole Gospel-Means of Salvation.—The Apostle adds, ‘and that not of yourselves, ‘not of Works, lest any Man should boast.’ Here Works are totally excluded. But what Works? Why only Works of self, and Works that Man could, or would, boast of. But these Works are only therefore excluded from Gospel-Faith or Salvation, that godly Works which have nothing of self, or boasting in them, may come up in their stead.—This the Apostle affirmeth, saying, ‘For we are his Workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good ‘Works, which God hath before ordained,’ Eph. ii. How great then is that learned Delusion, which opposes Christian Faith to Christian Works, because Paul opposes it to the unchristian Works of Jews and Heathens; or because he will not allow their several Works to have any Salvation in them, therefore will have it, that the true Followers of Christ, neither can, nor ought to have any Salvation from their doing the Works, which Christ has taught and commanded them to do.—A Believer, or a Hearer, without doing, is but one and the same self-deceived Person.—In the Gospel, we have a Father bidding his Son go to Work in his Vineyard. The Son consents, and saith, ‘I go, Sir, but he went ‘not.’ This consenting and not doing, is the Perfection of a Faith without Works.

Methodist. Surely you never minded these Words of St. Paul,—‘To him that worketh not, but believeth on him who justifieth ‘the ungodly, his Faith is counted unto him for Righteousness.’

Churchman. Surely you have been deaf to all that has been said, or you could never come now with such a Text as this. For no more is said in it against working, or against any other Works, but that very single Thing, which he saith in these Words, ‘That ‘by the Deeds of the Law there shall no Flesh be justified in his ‘Sight.’—Now if it be the Apostle’s repeated Doctrine, that the Deeds or Works of the Law, must of all Necessity be forborn, or ceased from, must he not for that very Reason say, to him that worketh not, that is, to him that ceaseth from working, as the Law, or Religion of Moses requires, and turns to the Faith of Christ, called the Kingdom of God, this Faith becometh his Righteousness.—But how doth it become his Righteousness? The Apostle tells you, ‘It is through the Redemption that is in ‘Christ Jesus; Whom God hath set forth to be a Propitiation ‘through Faith in his Blood.’—Now what is the Redemption through Jesus Christ, but a Redemption by and through all that, which Christ, as God-Man, was, did, suffered, obtained, taught, and commanded, that is, through and by the whole of the Gospel-Religion? How is Christ our Propitiation, or Peace, but by that which he is, and does in the inward Change, and Renewal of our Nature, in creating us again to good Works, in bringing forth a new Creature, not born of Man, nor of the Will of Man, nor of the Will of the Flesh, but of God?—What is Faith in his Blood, but the same Thing as Faith in his Cross, and what is Faith in either Case, but a hearty Willingness, and full Desire wholly to cease, or turn away from all Heathenish, or Jewish Works, and to embrace and give up ourselves to all that is meant, taught, and required by the Gospel-Faith, or Kingdom of God?

Would you know the whole of St. Paul's Doctrine about Faith, and against Works, or working, you have it all summed up by himself in the following Words, 'Therefore we conclude, that a Man is justified by Faith without the Deeds of the Law.' What room then for one single Word about what he means by not working? Faith stands here for the Gospel-Religion, and the Deeds of the Law signify the Religion of Moses; no Wonder therefore that he saith a Man is justified by Faith, without the Deeds of the Law. So sure therefore as you conclude either more or less, or other than St. Paul's own Conclusion, so sure you may be, that you abuse the Apostle, falsify his Doctrine, and sow your own Tares amongst his Wheat.

Methodist. Let me here ask you, in the elegant Words of a late most amiable Divine, 'Must the Efficacy of Christ's Obedience be enforced by the Accession of our Works, maimed and 'Worm-eaten Things?'

Churchman. There may, for aught I know, be Elegance enough in these Words, but Truth and Sense is quite wanting.—For what have our good Works to do with the Efficacy of Christ's Obedience, either as to the lessening, or increasing of it; or how has his Obedience anything more added to it by our good Works, than it has anything taken from it by the evil Works of those who crucified him?—What careful Doer of good Works, ever said or thought after this Manner? 'I strive to obey thy Will, O God, that thereby Christ's Obedience may be made more perfect, than it was in him.—I lift up my Eyes and Heart towards Heaven, that Christ's sitting there at thy right Hand, may be more powerful than it is in itself.'

On the other hand, what a wise Man of Faith would he be, who should abstain from Prayer, &c., least he should seem by such Worm-eaten Petitions, to be adding something to Christ's all-sufficient Intercession in Heaven.—Again, fancy another Man of Faith alone, saying thus, 'I cannot have any Care about denying myself, taking up my daily Cross and following Thee. I cannot do these Things, as helping forward my Salvation, because that would be no better, than presuming to help Thee to be a more full and sufficient Saviour, than thou art in thyself, and without my Works.'

Can anything be more absurd, or irreligious than this? And yet all of it is manifestly contained in the elegant Words of your Friend. If we walk as Christ walked, and do the Works of Christ, we shall on that Account be rewarded with him.—This is the same good Doctrine, as when the Apostle saith, ‘If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him.’—Here you see our own Sufferings are not only required, but made the Ground of our reigning with our suffering Saviour.—But what Man, not intoxicated with the Elegance of Words, would call, or look upon this, as adding our maimed, Worm-eaten Sufferings, to make the Sufferings of Christ, greater and more valuable than they are in themselves?—As silly a Thought, as to say, that our following of Christ, is helping him to be the Son of God.

Our Blessed Lord keeps our Eye continually upon good Works, or Things that we ourselves are to do. ‘Strive,’ says he, ‘to enter in at the strait Gate; Ask, and ye shall receive; Seek, and ye shall find; Knock, and it shall be opened unto you.’ He does not say, all is already gained, received, found, and opened, by what he has done and suffered.—Now if this striving, asking, knocking, &c., were but maimed, Worm-eaten Things, surely it had been better to forbid, than to command them. Or if he had said to his Disciples, that this striving and seeking were such maimed, Worm-eaten Things, surely he had said as much against them, and with the same Intention of turning them from them, as when he bid them ‘beware of the Leaven, of the Pharisees,’ and compared their Goodness to whited Sepulchres, full of Stench, Corruption, and dead Men’s Bones.

You vehemently accuse the Clergy, with acting contrary to the Articles of the Church, because preaching up Justification by Faith along with Works. But you quite forget, that your making Christian Works no better than maimed, Worm-eaten Things, stands in full Contrariety to many of the best Prayers in our Liturgy.—Thus, how many Collects are like this, ‘Grant, O Lord, that by thy holy Inspiration, we may think those things that be good, and by thy merciful guiding may perform the same.’—Is this Prayer in vain; or if God hears us, can no better Works come from it, than Worm-eaten Things?—Agreeable to this Prayer, St. Paul saith, ‘I can do all things through Christ that strengtheneth me’; the same may everyone say as well as he; but according to your new Light, these all Things, are but Worm-eaten Things.

Again, what difference is there between the old Man and his Deeds, which we are to put off, and the new Man in Christ, that is to be put on, if he has no Deeds, but what are maimed, Worm-eaten Things?—But hear now what Christ saith of the Necessity, the Excellence, and Efficacy of Christian good Works, in the following Words, 'Whosoever heareth my Sayings and DOETH 'them, is like a Man which built an House, and digged deep, and 'laid the Foundation on a Rock. And when the Floods arose, 'the Stream beat vehemently upon that House, and could not 'shake it, for it was founded upon a Rock.'—Here you see the Excellence, the Power and Efficacy of Christian good Works, compared by our Lord to the Strength and Firmness of a House built upon a Rock, which Floods and Tempests cannot overthrow. How could he more fully show you, that they are the Beginning, the continual Strength and Support of the Divine Life, than by comparing them to a Rock on which a House begins, and from which it hath all its Power of standing against all Floods and Tempests? How could he better show you, that this Rock of good Works, all proceeding from his Power within us, is that very Rock, on which he builds a Church, against which the Gates of Hell shall never prevail?—On the other Hand, call anything Salvation but Christian Works, and then you have Christ's Word for it, that you are 'like the Man that without a Foundation built his House upon the Sand, against which the Stream 'did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell, and great was the 'Fall of it.'—Hear again what our Lord saith of Christian Works, 'A good Man,' saith he, 'out of the good Treasure of his 'Heart bringeth forth that which is good'; but how could this possibly be, if Christian Works could be no better than maimed, worm-eaten Things?—And here by the by, let me desire you well to observe, whence it is, that the good Man bringeth forth good Things. Not as your Orator tells you, because Christ's Goodness, or Righteousness is outwardly imputed to him, and so made his. No, Truth itself tells you the direct contrary, that it proceeds from the good Treasure of his Heart, and therefore is a Goodness born within him. Now, whence has he this good Treasure of his Heart, and what is it? It is that Treasure of a Divine Life, or Nature, which Adam had at first, and to which he died, and which by the free Grace and Mercy of God, was secured to him and all his Posterity, as a Seed of the Woman, a preserved Remains, or Power of his first Divine Nature.—Christ in Adam, was his first Glory and Perfection of Life; Christ remaining in fallen Adam, as a preserved seed of his first Divine Nature, is the only Ground and Foundation, of his being able to be made again in Christ a new Creature.—This Divine Seed of the Woman, is so much of Christ remaining in him; and thence it is, that Christ alone hath Power to be the Mediator and Redeemer of Man, because that which is to be raised from Death into Life in us, is nothing else but the incorruptible Seed of himself in us.—This,

Sir, is that good Treasure of the Heart, out of which the good Man bringeth forth good Things, and is in itself nothing more or less, than a Seed of Adam's first Divine Life within us, preserved by God's never-ceasing Love towards Man, as his Covenant of Grace and Redemption within us, which Seed, as it comes through the Mediation of Christ to a new Power of Life in us, causes all those different Sensibilities, called Humility, Penitence, Fear, Prayer, Faith, Hope, and earnest seeking after God.

Will you now ever say a Word more, about your Fiction of an outwardly imputed Goodness, when Christ has so expressly told you, that its Birth is from within, from the good Treasure of the Heart, which is himself within us. And to show, That all must come from this Divine Root, preserved within us, as good Fruit doth from a good Tree, he saith, 'Either make the Tree 'good, and its Fruit good, or make the Tree corrupt, and its 'Fruit corrupt.'—'For (N.B.) the Tree is known by its Fruit.'—No, say your Imputation-Doctors, that need not be; Let some good Hand only hang good Fruit outwardly upon it, and then you will rightly know the Tree by its Fruits.—And it will be more glorious to the Tree, to have a Variety of good Fruit outwardly imputed to it, or hung upon it, than to have good Fruit from its own good Root.

Methodist. Our present Matter is not about the Doctrine of Imputation.—If you will not stick closely to the Point of Faith alone, I must beg leave to depart.

Churchman. The Doctrine of the outward Imputation of Christ's Righteousness, and the Doctrine of Faith alone, is but one and the very same individual Point; for what is your Faith alone, but a Faith in that imputed Righteousness?

The Righteousness of Christ we must have, or he can be no Saviour to us. This is granted on both sides.—But you, for the great Glory of God, and the great Good of Man, are for having it only outwardly imputed to us; which is just such a Glory to God, and would be such a Good to a blind Man, as if instead of opening his own Eyes, only the good far-seeing Eyes of an Angel were outwardly imputed to him.

On the other Hand, we believe, and contend for an inward Birth of Christ's Righteousness in us, because it was the Birth of our first glorious Father, and because it is to the eternal Glory of God, and the eternal Good of Man, that his inward sinful Nature be quite destroyed, by a Birth of his original Righteousness rising up in its Stead; that so, all that was lost in Adam, may be found again in Christ.—Can you possibly be told this in stronger Terms, than when Christ saith, 'Except a Man be 'born again from above, of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the 'Kingdom of God?'—St. John beareth Witness to this Truth, saying, 'Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit Sin;' the same as saying, till a Man is born of God, he continueth under the Power of his sinful Nature. But why does such a Man not sin? The Apostle tells you, because his Seed, that is, the Seed of God, remaineth in him.—Had St. John the least Thought of a Righteousness of Christ outwardly imputed, when he places all our Freedom from Sin, and Power over it, to a Seed of God remaining in us? Or if he had ever heard of such a Thought in other People, how could he more fully condemn it, than in saying, 'Little Children, let no Man deceive you, he that doth Righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous.'

Here you see all is Deceit, be they Notions, Opinions, Faiths, Hopes, imputed Righteousness, or whatever else you can name, all is Deceit, till a Man by doing Righteousness, is righteous even as he is righteous. Then it is, that Christ's Righteousness is become his Righteousness, and this alone is the Righteousness of Christ that is his full and only Justification in the Sight of God; and that for this one Reason, because it is Christ himself, that is, his Divine and righteous Nature born within him. Which the Apostle thus strongly asserts, 'If ye know that he is righteous;' what follows from this knowledge? The Apostle adds, then, 'ye know, that everyone that doth Righteousness (N.B.) is born of him,' that is, hath a Birth of his Divine and righteous Nature, brought forth in him; and consequently, he that is not born of him, hath nothing of Christ's Righteousness—to be his Salvation.

Methodist. I must say again, that you ramble strangely about with Multiplicity of Words.—Our Doctrine is, that Works have no Share in saving us, because, as our Friend strongly expresses it, 'Christ will either be a whole Saviour, or none at all.'

Churchman. Had your Friend said, We can have no Salvation but in Christ alone, he had said a good Scripture-Truth; but this strange unscriptural Language of a Christ, who will either be a whole Saviour, or none at all, has the same bad Meaning in it, as if he were to say, Christ will do nothing for us, unless we forbear to concur, or do anything along with him.

Now Christ saith, 'Follow me,—Take my Yoke upon you.' But if following of Christ, if taking his Yoke upon us, is necessary, then something that is to be done by ourselves, is as necessary to our Salvation, as that which is done by Christ for us, and some Works are as truly Salvation-Works, as any Acts of Faith are saving.

Methodist. Who ever denied, that we are to follow Christ, and take his Yoke upon us?

Churchman. But will such Works do us any Good, or recommend us to God?

Methodist. I will give you no Answer, but in the decisive Words of our Friend; 'If, says he, you think that you have any 'good Service of your own, to recommend you to God, you are 'certainly without any Interest in Christ.'

Churchman. Own Service is but like own Will, and no more Good can come from it, than from the natural old Man with his Deeds. But our Saviour has assured us, that there is a good Man, who out of the good Treasure of his Heart, bringeth forth that which is good.—Now these are the good Works that are pleaded for as absolutely necessary, and essential to a true and saving Faith.

Say now, that if we think such good Works recommend us to God, we are certainly without any Interest in Christ, and then it were better, that you should preach such Doctrine to Stocks and Stones, than to Christian Ears.—For who can receive it, without giving up the most constant and repeated Salvation-Doctrines of Scripture?—What more frequent through all our Bible, than Passages of the same Nature with this: 'To do good, and to 'communicate, forget not. (N.B.) For with such Sacrifices God 'is well pleased.'—Now must a Man who believes this, and thinks, that such Things recommend him to God, be therefore certainly without any Interest in Christ?

Hear Christ himself thus calling out for good Works, in all those who expect to have any Interest in him, 'Not every one 'that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom 'of Heaven, but he that doth the Will of my Father which is in 'Heaven.'

Will such a Caller upon the Lord, without good Works, have his sufficient Excuse, by saying, Lord, I thought thou wouldst be my whole Saviour, or none at all; and therefore, I durst not think of recommending myself to God, by doing his Will, lest I should thereby lose all Interest in Thee.

Methodist. If you do not like my Friend's Expression, take the same Truth in other Words of some most excellent Divines. Thus says one, 'Nothing is required in order to our Participation 'of Christ and his Benefits;—there is no clogging Qualification, 'no Worth to be possessed, no Duty to be performed, in order to 'our full Participation of Christ and all his Riches;' for all which he gives this solid Reason, because, 'It is not a Matter of 'Bargain, nor the Subject of Sale, but a Deed of Gift, the Gift of 'Righteousness; and Gifts we all know, are not to be purchased, 'but received.'

Churchman. As wild and extravagant Words as ever met together, as may thus be fully shown.—Christ said to his Disciples, ‘I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life;’ and that they might more fully understand the true Meaning of that, he said also, ‘Strait is the Gate, and narrow is the Way that leadeth to life.’—Now, what Christ here saith of the strait Gate and narrow Way, is strictly so much said of himself, and how he is the Saviour of the World; for the Way and Gate could not lead to Life, if they meant anything else but Christ himself.—Now Christ and his Benefits, considered as the blessed strait Gate, and narrow Way to Life, provided by God, is wholly and solely the free Grace and Gift of God; here was no Bargain, or Sale of any Thing; Nothing was done on Man’s Part to obtain it, and that for this very good Reason, because Christ was thus given by God before the Foundation of the World, and again, before there was a Man born of a Woman.

See then the miserable Delusion of your Doctors, who, from this Scripture-Truth, that God has freely, and out of mere Mercy to the fallen State of Man, provided, and given a blessed narrow Way, and strait Gate to eternal Life, thence conclude, that no Pains, or Trouble of striving to get into this narrow Way, and through this strait Gate, need be taken, (N.B.) because, without any Pains of our own, he freely gave it to all Mankind; though there could be no Blessedness in the Gift, but because blessed are they, who with all their Powers, Works, and Endeavours of Spirit, Soul, and Body, strive to walk in this narrow Way, and pass through this strait Gate.—Is not all this as gross a Delusion, and in as full Contrariety to the Nature of the Thing, as to conclude, that because God has freely prepared and given us a Cup of Salvation, therefore there is no need that we should drink it; or think that our own drinking it, need not be added to make his free Cup of Salvation a Benefit to us.

Now, gross as all this is, it is the strong Foundation-Absurdity, on which alone, your great Divines build all their rhetorical Flourishes of a Salvation that is wholly the Gift of God, without any Works of Man belonging to it.—For they have not a Word to say against Salvation-Works, but that Works did not produce God’s first free Gift of a Saviour to us; and therefore, Works can no more belong to this free Gift of a Saviour, after he is given, than they did before he was given to us; being too systematically blind to see, that as a strait Gate and narrow Way were only given to us, that we might do that which we could not do before they were given, or as the Cup of Salvation is only given, that we may drink that, which we could not drink before it was given, so Christ was only and solely given for the sake of Salvation-Works, which we could not do, till in him and by him we became new Creatures, created again unto good Works.

How easily may you now see the Vanity of these, and such-like flourishing Words; 'The Gifts of the great eternal Sovereign 'are intended, not to recognise our imaginary Worth, but to 'aggrandise our Views of his Mercy and Grace.'

Just as full of Scripture-Truth, and good Sense, as to say, that God's Gifts of Five and Ten Talents, are not given us with this Intention, that our good Use of them may appear, and that God may have occasion to say to us, 'Well done, good and faithful 'Servant,' but to show us how great are the Talents and Riches of God. Or again, that God's Gift of a strait Gate and narrow Way to Life, is not given us, that our well striving in it may appear, but only, that the greatness of God's Goodness to us may be shown thereby.

See again, what the same Writer says of the Man who is in the Truth of the Gospel; 'He labours neither first nor last to 'acquire any Requisite to Justification.' When Christ himself has told him, 'By thy Words thou shalt be justified, and by thy 'Words thou shalt be condemned': Surely, this is enough telling him, that from first to last, nothing but Works have either Justification or Condemnation in them.—See again what another of your excellent Divines saith; 'Do not think by any preparatory Works, to make yourselves worthy of Christ.' What is this but saying, do not believe Christ when he is speaking of Worthiness and Unworthiness, when he says, 'He that taketh 'not his Cross, and followeth me, is not worthy of me.—He that 'loveth Father and Mother more than me, is not worthy of me.'—Do not believe St. Paul, when he exhorteth the Thessalonians, 'to walk worthy of God, who hath called them to his Kingdom 'and Glory.'—Again, have a care of these Words of Christ, 'Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at Hand'; for you may easily be thereby led to think, that Repentance-Works have some Kind of worthy Preparation in them, to make you fit for the Kingdom of God.

And now let me tell you, that two or three old Heresies joined together, would not more abuse and contradict the Gospel, than your three Doctrines, (1.) Of Faith without Works. (2.) Of a Righteousness of Christ only outwardly imputed to us. (3.) Of absolute Election and Reprobation. These are the Scandal and Reproach of the Reformation, wherever they are found, and have nothing to support them, but that implicit Adherence, and systematic Obstinacy, which keeps Romish Scholars steady to a Trent-Creed.

Gospel-Salvation, is on God's Part, a Covenant of free Grace and Mercy, and cannot possibly be any Thing else ; on Man's Part, it is wholly a Covenant of Works, and cannot possibly be any Thing else.—For the sake of Works, Man was that which he was by his Creation : for the sake of Works, he is all that he is, by his Redemption.—Works are the Life of the Creature, and he can have no Life better or worse than his Works : That which he does, that he is.

THIS DO AND THOU SHALT LIVE, is the Law of Works, which was from the Beginning, is now, and always will be, the one Law of Life.—And whether you consider the Adamical, Patriarchal, Legal, Prophetic, or Gospel-State of the Church, DOING is ALL. Nothing makes any Change in this. Nay, it is not only the one Law of all Men on Earth, but of all Angels in Heaven.—And this as certainly, as our best and highest Prayer is this, 'Thy Will be done on Earth, as it is in Heaven.'

'This do, and thou shalt live,' was the only Law of Life given to Adam in Paradise.—Adam could not have been capable of this Law, but because the Divine Nature, or a Birth of Christ within him, was his first created State.—No Law of doing God's Will could have been given to, or received by any of his Posterity, but because a Seed of the first Divine Life, or Christ in Man, was by God's free Grace and Mercy, preserved and continued in Adam, and secured to all his Posterity, as a redeeming Seed of the Woman, which through all Ages of the Church, should continue bruising the Head of the Serpent, till this first Seed of Life became a God incarnate, with all Power in Heaven and on Earth, to restore original Righteousness, and to raise again in fallen Man, that first Birth of himself, which was in Adam before he fell ; This was the one Power that he gave them to become Sons of God.

Methodist. Nothing more need be said against all your Doctrine, but that it is direct Arminianism.

Churchman. Do you think then, that no more need be said in Defence of your Doctrine, than that it is true Calvinism ? I have appealed to nothing for what I have asserted, but to the Words of Christ and his Apostles, and would no more consult a Calvin, an Arminius, or a Zinzendorf, how I was to understand them, than I would pray to God to be led by their Spirit, instead of the Spirit of Christ. Nor is the one a Wit better or worse than the other.—Christ said, 'He that hath Ears to hear, let him hear.'—And again, 'He that is of God, heareth God's Words.'—If therefore you want hearing Ears, or are not of God, to consult a Grammarian how you are to understand the Words of Christ, is as sure a Way as you can take, to be content with spiritual Deafness and Blindness, and never to be taught of God, so long as you live.

If I have called the Law of Works, the one Law of Life, it is because Christ hath said the same, to the Lawyer, who asked him, what he should do to inherit eternal Life. Christ asked him, 'What is written in the Law?' He answered, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, Soul, Spirit and Strength, and thy Neighbour as thyself.' To which Christ said, 'Thou hast answered right, THIS DO AND THOU SHALT LIVE.' Here you have just the same Thing said of Works, as is said of Faith; 'The Just shall live by Faith.' Therefore you can have no fuller Proof given you, that Faith and Works mean but one and the same Thing, whenever Life is sometimes ascribed to one, and sometimes to the other, and therefore Faith and Works can no more be two Things, than eternal Life can be two Things. Again, hear how St. Paul asserteth the Law of Works, to be the one Law of Life. 'For we must all appear before the Judgment-Seat of Christ, that everyone may receive the Things DONE in his Body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.' Now if you have your Senses so exercised to discern between Good and Evil, as to think, that the Law of Works asserted by Christ and his Apostle to be the Law of Life, is fitter to be received, or not received, just as a Calvin, or an Arminius, are with it, or against it, where must you look for the People, who have Eyes and see not, Ears and hear not?

Methodist. I am quite tired with disputing in this Manner, but yet will add one Thing, which you will not be so able to puzzle, as you have the Scripture, and which must be acknowledged to be decisive, at least with Regard to our awakened Preacher. He heard a Voice (as he really thought from Heaven) saying unto him, Cease from thine own Works.

Churchman. Whencesoever the Voice came, it spoke well, and might have been just as beneficial to him, as if it had said, Cease from thine own Wisdom, thine own Faith, or thine own Projects in Religion; for all these are not only alike, but the very same Thing. But if he took an Advice to cease from his own Works, to be an Advice to cease from Works, that were not his own, it is much to be feared, he misunderstood his Adviser.

If the Voice had said, Cease from thine own Faith, would he have taken this to be a sufficient Divine Authority, to call the Christian World to a Religion of Works without Faith, and to have told them of the damnable Doctrine of adding Faith to Works? Yet this would be full as well, as to preach against good Works, as having no Salvation-Goodness in them, because he was bid to cease from his own Works.

If you knew a Minister, so full of Expectation from his own

Works, as to be quite uneasy at their Insignificancy for many Years, both with Regard to himself, and his Hearers, such a Man might well be said to have his Eye too much upon his own Works, to mistake the Nature of them, and to expect that from them, which can only be done by quite another Power.—To such a Man as this, how wholesome would the Advice be, Cease from thine own Works. And why so? Because thou canst neither be thine own Saviour, nor the Saviour of them that hear thee, by any Thing that can be called thine own Work. If therefore your fruitless Preacher, instead of making a Division between Faith and Works, in order to preach with Divine Success, had said to himself, and to his Hearers, We have hitherto lived and laboured in vain, because (as the Prophet speaks) ‘we have committed two Evils; we have forsaken the Fountain of living Water, and hewed out to ourselves, broken Cisterns that can hold no Water;’ Now when, or how may we be said to have ‘forsaken the Fountain of living Water’? It is when we expect or seek for Good in any Thing, but that, which God is, and does by his own WORD, LIGHT, and SPIRIT within us.—Look after any Thing but this, have any Trust in, or Dependence upon any Thing else but this Divine Operation, and then be as full of religious Zeal, as you will, you have forsaken the Fountain of living Water. Collect, divide, distinguish, and new model all Doctrines, Notions, and Opinions, as nicely as ever you can, you are only making a new-fashioned, cracked Cistern that can hold no living Water in it. What is the Reason that Sin and Wickedness overflow, like a flood, the whole Christian World? It is because Popish, and Protestant Churches, have been Age after Age, wholly taken up in hewing out of the Gospel-Rock their several Opinion-Cisterns. The Pope has his Infallibility, and therefore his Cisterns can have no Failure, or Crack in them.—Protestants have a Luther, a Calvin, an Arminius, a Beza, a Socinus, a Zinzendorf, &c. And if their Cisterns are free from Cracks, it is because they have Nouns and Pronouns, Verbs and Adverbs, Prepositions and Conjunctions, to cement and strengthen them.—What Infallibility does in Popish, that Criticism does in Protestant Countries, and so (sad Truth!) the one Fountain of living Water is everywhere forsaken, and quite out of Date. What Wonder then, if Christianity is but an empty Name, a vain Battle of Opinions, instead of the Life and Power of God, born, dwelling, and manifested in our fallen Nature. And here let me tell you, that all that you see, or hear, or read of the best Notions, Truths, or Doctrines, whilst you place any Thing in them, as considered in themselves, are to you only broken Cisterns, that afford you no Water of Life. Eugenius said one Day, how charmed he was at first with the Doctrines of the spiritual Life, and the Glories of a new Birth; but that now, after some Years striving to be good by the Knowledge of such Things, he found himself to be but just where he was, before he knew any Thing of them.—But did anyone ever tell Eugenius, that these Doctrines were the Fountain of living Water, and that by drinking of them he would have eternal Life?—How good are these Words of Christ, ‘Unless a Man be born again from ‘above, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God’? But how useless are they to him, who is not thereby turned to seek and expect it all from God? How good is it to know that Abyss of Death, into which our Father Adam has plunged us; but how unprofitable is this Knowledge, unless it makes us all hunger and thirst after that essential Operation of the Divine Nature in us, which lived in Adam before he fell?—All Scripture-Doctrines whether of Life or Death, are nothing in themselves, nor have any Power of Godliness in them, but are only to show us, again and again, this great Truth, that the Departure from God into whatever it be, is the Death of Deaths; and the cleaving wholly and solely to God, is eternal Life.

Think of any Thing but God, as the Cause of Goodness; or that his Goodness can be your Good, but by being born in you, as it was in Adam and holy Angels, and then, though you have all the three Christian Creeds, you have turned your Christian-God into an outward Idol.—For a God, not living and working within you all that is, or can be called your good Life, is but an outward Idol of a God.—And be assured of this, that as is the Birth and working Life within, so are you, and can neither here, nor hereafter, be any Thing else, but that which is born within you.—Righteousness imputed from without, is but like such imputed Wickedness.—And you may as well frighten yourself with fearing, that the Devil’s Wickedness should be outwardly imputed to you, as to think of having any Righteousness of Christ, but that which of him and by him, is born in you.

But to return to Eugenius; let it be supposed, that having found himself not sanctified by his former Notions, that he had Recourse to others quite contrary to them; as Faith without Works:—Christ’s Righteousness, not as a new Birth in us, but only outwardly imputed to us:—The number of Saved and Damned to all Eternity, neither greater or less than God’s absolute Decrees had made it. Suppose him now so charmed with the sweet Sound of these Doctrines, to be under such a Sense of their saving Power, as to be forced to come forth as a Preacher of eternal Death and Damnation to all, that would not seek to be saved by them.—Could Eugenius possibly give fuller Proof, that he had forgotten and forsaken the one Fountain of living Water, and was calling the Christian World to a rotten Cistern instead of it?

Methodist. This kind of reasoning comes too late; God has already set his Seal to the Truth and Goodness of our Friend's preaching: Thousands from far and near flock about him.—Sighs, Groans, Swoonings, Screaming of young and old, proclaim the two-edged Sword, that is in his Mouth. If you will not allow this to be Proof enough, it is in vain to talk any further with you.

Churchman. All this is so far from being Proof enough of the Truth and Goodness of his Doctrine, that it is no Proof at all. If it will do for him, it will do for Mahomet, and every successful Deceiver.

Zinzendorf has Plenty of this Proof. Not only these Kingdoms, but great part of Europe and America, bear Witness to it.—And yet of these Moravians, carrying Conviction wherever they go, and gaining such awakened Converts out of every Part of the Reformation, as are ready to sell Lands and Houses, and lay the Price at their Feet, of these, your Friend says, he bears a 'preaching Testimony against their corrupt Principles and Practices, and might as well be called a Murderer, as a 'Moravian.' What becomes now of your Success, as being God's Seal set to the Truth of your Doctrine?

If Rome was allowed to send her preaching Missionaries amongst us, to attack with full Liberty of Speech every Protestant Form of Religion, to travel from Place to Place, daily telling all the Men and Women they could get together, on Hills, in Churchyards, or elsewhere, that dreadful Soul-destroying Doctrines had been constantly preached to them ever since the Reformation; that they had lost all Interest in Christ ever since they left the Pope; that Church and Sects, however setting themselves above one another, were all equally in a certain State of Damnation, and must be so, till they had true Priests and true Sacraments, nowhere to be had, but in the one ancient, infallible Mother-Church of Rome. If I should say, that Damnation thus thundered out, to awaken People from their Reformation-Dream of Safety, would soon have Converts ten times more numerous, and much greater Crowds of various Followers, than you have yet to boast of, who could have any Show of Reason to deny it?

Methodist. Poor Man! Can you not see the miserable and wretched State of Christendom, that Heathen Wickedness reigns everywhere, that nothing of Christianity is left amongst us, but an outward Profession, destitute of every Goodness but that of Words and Doctrines? How then ought you to rejoice, that the Mercy of God has here and there raised up awakened Preachers, to shake the hardened Hearts of such apostate Christians? Who that has any Spark of Goodness in him, would endeavour to stop their Course?

Churchman. Whoever would, I am sure I would not.—I wish from my Heart, that not only every Parish, but every House had such a Divine Preacher in it.—Nay, though some should preach Christ out of Envy, and others through Strife, yet I would rejoice, if such contentious Preachers, did but preach the Truth as it is in Jesus.—But now supposing (as is but too true) that we have only the Words and Doctrines, but not the Spirit of the Gospel, what is to be done to this fallen State of Christians, but that which was done to Jews and Heathens, who had not yet embraced the Gospel? For if Christians have lost the Spirit of Christianity, they are in the State of those that never had it, and must be called to that same Change of Life, as they were, before they can be Christians in Spirit and in Truth.

The Gospel thus began, 'REPENT, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at Hand.' This Kingdom was God's free Gift; his own Love was the sole Cause of it; but it was only given to Repentance, because Nothing else could possibly receive it. This Repent, in order to the Kingdom of God, was the only preaching which Christ set on Foot, and sent into every City and Village.—But what do your Preachers now say? Do they call the present unchristian World, as Christ ordered the unchristian World to be called, to the Kingdom of God? Do they say to Christians become Workers of Iniquity, that have long resisted God's holy Spirit, long abused all Gospel-Blessings, trampled all its Pearls under their Feet, and ever since their Baptism, been wallowing in the Mire of their sensual Lusts; do they cry aloud to these miserable Sinners, Repent, and bring forth Works meet for Repentance, or it will be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrhah at the Day of Judgment than for you? So far from this, that they teach and affirm with Vehemence to all these Sinners, that no Repentance, no Qualifications, no Requisite, no Preparation, is necessary to put them in full Possession of Christ and all his Riches; and all for this absurd Reason, Because Righteousness, that is, the Means of Righteousness is the free Gift of God, and was not procured, or obtained by any Works of Men, therefore Salvation can require no Works of Man.—Who can be blinder than he, who sees not the Difference between a Saviour prepared and given, and that Salvation which is to be from him? Or who can more confound the most distinct Things, than he who affirms that of Salvation, which is only true of the Saviour alone.—It is true of the Saviour to say, that he is freely given of God, to be the Saviour of all Men ; but it is not true to say of Salvation, that it is freely given to all Men.

The Works of Man, do no more towards making Christ to be the all-sufficient Saviour of the World, than towards making him to be God and Man ; but to have Salvation from this free-given, perfect Saviour, all is requisite, all is to be worked, laboured, and done, which he commands us to have, and do, and be. Therefore saith St. Paul of this perfect Saviour, ‘that he is the ‘Author of Salvation (N.B) to all that obey him.’—Here you see what an Error it is, to speak of Saviour and Salvation, as one and the same Thing, equally free and independent on Man’s Works. The perfect, all-sufficient Saviour, is the free Gift of God, that all Men might be saved : But Salvation is no free Gift, but stands in the utmost Contrariety to it ; it is to be purchased. A Saviour you cannot, you need not buy, he is already given you without Price and without Money ; but all the Salvation that you can have, must be bought of this Saviour, there is Nothing gratis here. But what are you to give for it? All that you have from fallen Adam, all that the World, the Flesh, and the Devil have treasured up in you ; nay, Houses, Lands, Fathers, Mothers, Brethren, &c., are all to be forsaken, they must all of them lose that Place and Power, that they had in you, or you have no Salvation, though you never wanted a free-given Saviour.—Think of coming to Christ without these Requisites, these Qualifications, these Preparation-Works, and then you will be just as welcome as the prodigal Son would have been, had he come to his heavenly Father with his Harlots in his Arms, that he and they might have Rings and the best Robes put on them, without their giving or doing any Thing for them.—What now is the Parable of all that Penitence of the Prodigal, his Renunciation of himself, his forsaking his way of Life, his Sense of his great Unworthiness to have his first Sonship, his begging to be admitted to the Labour and Obedience of an hired Servant, what is all this for, but to tell every Son of fallen Adam, that he is this very Prodigal, this Keeper of Harlots, living with, and like Swine in a strange Country, till he thinks of going to Christ with all those Qualifications, Preparations, and Changes of Life and Manners, with which the Prodigal Son went to his Father?—May it not now be justly said with St. Paul, ‘Who hath bewitched you,’ ye foolish Preachers, to come forth with Zeal and Vehemence against Qualifications, Preparations, and Requisites to fit us for the Grace and Favour of Christ?—Did the heavenly Father send the Ring and the best Robe to his wicked Son, whilst he was content with his Harlots, his Husks, and his Swine? Was his Eye of Goodness turned towards him, till he saw him upon the Road, a sorrowful Seeker of his Father, with penitential Works, and full Change of Life?

Now if Christ in his Parable hath set forth a Sinner come to his right Senses, how can you more show, that you have lost yours, than by cautioning Sinners against Qualifications, penitential Requisites and Preparations to be received by Christ?—What is the whole Gospel, but one continual Doctrine of all that is to be done, denied, renounced, and suffered, in order to have any Interest in God's free Gift of Christ, as a Saviour of the World?—Hear what the Saviour, who came to save all Men, saith to those who forgot, that Repentance and good Works were the Qualifications, and Requisites to have any Share of Salvation, 'I know ye not, depart from me all ye Workers of Iniquity.'—Is this a Saviour, that calls for no Salvation-Works, but will himself, be our whole Saviour, or none at all?

Had Christ begun his Gospel, with saying, I am come to save you all, without putting you to any Pains or Labour to be saved; I bring no Terms with me, nor have any Demands upon you; I look for no Requisites, no Preparatory, no Repentance, and self-denying Works; I and all my Riches are freely yours; inward, inborn Goodness cannot belong to you, but ye shall be the Children of God, not because ye are led by the Spirit of God, but because my Righteousness shall be outwardly imputed to you; had this been the Gospel of Christ, your Preachers of no Requisites, no Qualifications to have Interest in Christ, might well be received as faithful Apostles.

You all complain that Christianity is become a mere outward Profession, without the inward Spirit of the Gospel. This just and true Complaint, how vain is it in your Mouths? For how can your Christianity in its best State, be any Thing else but bare outward Profession, if Christians neither have nor can have any Righteousness, but that which is outwardly imputed to them? Can you complain, or accuse them of not being inwardly of the Spirit and Life of the Gospel, if Gospel-Goodness cannot be a Birth within them, but only the Goodness of another, that is to be accounted as theirs? Either therefore, give up your outwardly imputed Righteousness, or complain no more that Christians are mere Formalists; for both you and all your Preachers, however awakened, can only be Formalists yourselves, and can awaken nothing but Formality in others, unless the righteous Spirit of Christ hath its Fulness of a Birth in the inmost Spirit, both of Preachers and Hearers.

St. Paul saith, 'Circumcision is not that which is outward, but 'of the heart.' Is it not full as necessary to say of Righteousness, that it cannot be an outwardly imputed Thing, but must be the Righteousness of the Heart? Had Paul told them, that the Circumcision of the Heart could only be outwardly imputed to the Circumcisers of the Flesh, he had preached the Law, as you do the Gospel. Again, 'He is not a Jew,' saith he, 'that is 'one outwardly.' How unlike is this to your Doctrine, which will not allow the Christian to be one inwardly, but solely by that which is outwardly imputed to him?—Again, 'the Spirit,' saith he, 'beareth Witness with our Spirit, that we are the Children of 'God.' But how could this be, but because the Spirit that is within us, is a Birth of that holy Spirit, whose Witness agreeth with it? For suppose no Birth of the Spirit within us, and then we have only that 'natural old Man, that knoweth not the 'Things of the Spirit, because they are foolishness to him.'

Methodist. Let me before we part, only ask you these two Questions. Would you be glad to see Christianity continued in its present, poor, blind, and apostate State from the Truth and Life of the Gospel? Or can you show me, how it can return to its first Purity and Perfection of Godliness, unless Preachers go forth in such a Spirit of Zeal, calling the World to Christ, as ours do?

Churchman. Take this for a full Answer to every Question of this Kind.

There are but two Spirits that govern every rational and intelligent Life.—The one is the Spirit of God, the other is the Spirit that is fallen from God, and works contrary to him.—Nothing is good in any Creature, but because the good Spirit of God is the Doer of it; nothing is Evil, but that which is done by the Spirit of the Creature fallen off from God, and working in Self-will.—Here you have the infallible Touch-Stone for the Trial of all Spirits, which never can deceive you.—Every Spirit that calls you to be delivered from any Thing, but the Evil that is in your own Spirit, or that turns you to any Thing, as a Deliverance from it, but to the Spirit and Power of God within you, is not of God, but is an Agent under that Spirit, that is fallen off from God.

The Christian Religion has no Ground, or Foundation, but because the Spirit of Man has lost its first State of Union with God, and is unable of itself to recover it.—Hence it is, that Christ, God and Man united, is the one only possible Restorer of Man's first Union with God.—Therefore the whole of our Redemption consists in our being made one with Christ, essentially born of him, that having his whole redeeming Nature come to Life in us, we may be in him, as he is in God, one Spirit, one Life to all Eternity.—'God was in Christ Jesus,' saith Paul, ‘reconciling the World to himself.’ But Christ was the Reconciler between God and Man, only and solely by that which he was, did, suffered, and obtained by and through his whole Process. This is his Mediation-Work.—Are you in this Process, you are in the Arms of your Mediator; his Mediation-Work is like a new Creation within you, and what God saw in his beloved Son, that he sees in you; and you must belong to God, as he does, because his Nature, Life, and Spirit, are in you.—Therefore, is anyone reconciled to God, it is because Christ is born in him; but the Seed of Christ, which is in every Son of Adam, never comes to the Fulness of the Birth of the new Creature, but through the Process of Christ.—This is the one strait Gate, and narrow Way, out of which, there is nothing but Sin, Death, and Hell, to every Man.—Without Christ, we are without God; but who is without Christ, is told you in the following Words, ‘Unless a Man deny himself, take up his Cross,’ &c., ‘and follow me, he cannot be my Disciple.’ This is the one Term of Union with Christ.

Suppose now a Preacher comes to you from Rome, with his invented Doctrines about Saints, Images, Sacraments, and Transubstantiation, &c., threatening certain Damnation to all that do not receive them; suppose another coming from Geneva, as full of Damnation for all those, who will not receive his invented Doctrines of saving Faith without Works;—of the Righteousness of Christ, not inwardly born, but only outwardly imputed to you;—of a Salvation and Damnation, equally the one sole Work or Gift of God, neither of which you can any more help, or hinder, than you can help or hinder the Duration of the World, or add one Cubit to your own Stature;—What Gospel-Eyes must he have, who did not see as many Marks of the Beast, the Whore, and the false Prophet in one of these Preachers, as in the other? Or can you think, if St. Paul was again in the World, he would give a heartier God-Speed to the one, than to the other?—Had the Apostle been a Preacher of your Imputation-Doctrine, he would never have said, ‘What Fellowship hath Righteousness with Unrighteousness?’ as knowing that this was the very Fellowship which Christ had with the Sons of fallen Adam; his Righteousness being only outwardly imputed to their Unrighteousness. And how could he have cried out, as of an impossible Thing, ‘What Communion hath Light with Darkness, or what Concord hath Christ with Belial?’ For had your Imputation-Doctrine been his, he would have known, that if Light was but outwardly imputed to Darkness, then the Darkness would be in Communion with Light; and if Christ’s Righteousness was but outwardly imputed to the Sons of Belial, then there would be Concord between Christ and Belial.—This is the blasphemous Absurdity of your Imputation-Doctrine ; for unless the whole fallen Nature of Man be born again from above, the Righteousness of Christ outwardly imputed to it, is but like the same imputed to the unchanged Sons of Belial.

‘Without me,’ saith Christ, ‘ye can do Nothing,’ that is, all is in vain without my Process ; for Christ is that, which his Process is.—St. Paul saith, ‘No one can call Jesus Lord, but by the Holy ‘Ghost.’—In these two short Texts, you have the whole Nature and Substance of Christian Redemption, namely, that it all consists in the Process of Christ, and the coming of the Holy Ghost. Christ’s Process in the Flesh, is the one only way of dying to all that fleshly Evil, that Adam brought to Life in us ; Christ came in the Spirit, is the one only quickening of that Divine Life, to which Adam died. Trust to any Thing else, seek to any Thing else, but this Process of Christ, and this Power of the Holy Ghost, and then all your leaning upon the Gospel, will be no better than leaning upon a broken Reed.—These two fundamental Truths plainly show, why the first preaching of the Gospel began, and must ever go on, saying Nothing but what is implied in these Words, ‘Repent, for the Kingdom of God is at Hand.’—Repent, shows the Necessity of making Christ’s Process the one Way to the Kingdom of God ; for Repentance-Works are in his Process, and nowhere else.—‘For the Kingdom of God is at ‘Hand,’ shows that Christ’s coming in the Spirit, is the one Thing sought for by his Process ; for the Kingdom of God come amongst Men, is Nothing else but Christ come in the Power of the Spirit ; and where this Power is not come in the Likeness of a Kingdom, wherever Plenty there may be of Preachers, the Kingdom of God is yet afar off.

The Law ended with Christ come in the Flesh ; his Process was the fulfilling of all its Types, Figures, and Sacrifices.

The coming of Christ in the Spirit, is just the same one only fulfilling of all the Gospel-Dispensation.—And as the Law would have been all in vain, without Christ’s coming in the Flesh ; so would the Gospel also, without Christ’s coming in the Spirit. And the Jew with his Old Testament, rejecting Christ come in the Flesh, is just as true to the Law, as the Christian is to the Gospel, who does not own Christ as come in the Spirit, to be the one only fulfilling of all its Doctrines.—For as all the Types, Figures, and Sacrifices of the Law, were in themselves but empty Shadows, without Christ being the Life of them, so all Things written in the Gospel, are but dead Letters, till Christ coming in the Spirit quickens a new Creature, to be the Reader, the Rememberer, and Doer of them.—Therefore, where the Holy Spirit is not sought after, trusted to, and rested in, as the End, the Substance, and living Power of the whole Gospel, it is no Marvel, that Christians, high or low, learned or unlearned, Churchman or Dissenter, should have no more of Gospel-Virtues, than the Jews have of patriarchal Holiness ; or that the same Lusts, Vices, and worldly Craft, which prosper among apostate Jews, should break forth with as much Strength in a fallen Christendom.

See here then your Work, ye awakened Preachers, if God has sent you forth, you can have no other Errand but that, on which Christ sent his Apostles.—Do you preach any Thing but the Process of Christ, as the way to the Kingdom of God, or call Men to any Power of walking in it, but that of the Holy Spirit, you are Strangers to, or Deserters from the Truth, as it is in Jesus, for neither Christ, nor his Apostles, ever taught any Thing else but this.—The old Man must die, or the new Man can never be made alive in Christ. But Nothing brings Death upon the old Man, but that one self-denying Process of Christ; Nothing gives Life to the new Man, but the one Spirit of Christ born in it. This is the Gospel-Language from the Beginning to the End.

With this Language in your Mouths, the whole Gospel is with you, you may cry aloud and spare not ; be as zealous here as you will or can ; go out into the Streets and Lanes, the Highways and Hedges ; compel Hypocrites, Sensualists, Worldlings, and hardened Sinners to tremble at their Ways, to dread every Thing that is contrary to Christ's Salvation-Process ; preach certain Damnation to every sinful Lust of the Flesh, and no possible Power to be delivered from it, but by Christ coming in the Spirit, to set up his own Kingdom of God within you ; and then, every one who has the least Spark of Goodness living in his Soul, will call you the Sent of God, will wish Prosperity to all your Labours of Love ; and no one will be against you, but he that is not with Christ.

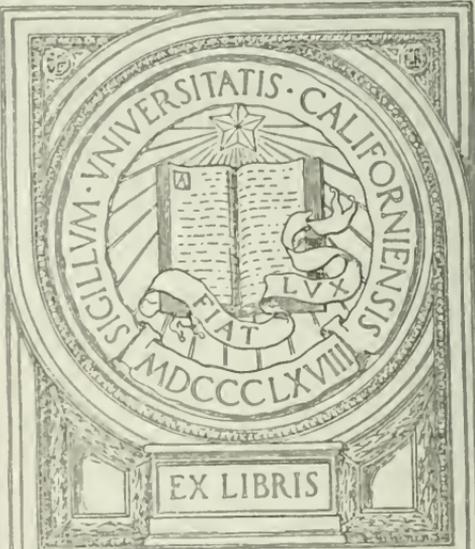

But if you come forth with the new-fangled Ungospel Doctrines of a Calvin, a Zinzendorf, &c., be your Zeal as great as it will, it only unites you with the Brick and Mortar-Builders of that Anti-christian Babel, which the Prince of the Power of the Air has set up, in full Opposition to that Rock, on which Christ has built his one, Catholic, universal Salvation-Church.

And now, my dear Friend, wishing you, from the Bottom of my Heart, all that Blessing which Christ bestowed upon his Apostles, when he said, ' My Peace I leave with you, my Peace ' I give unto you,' I bid you Farewell.

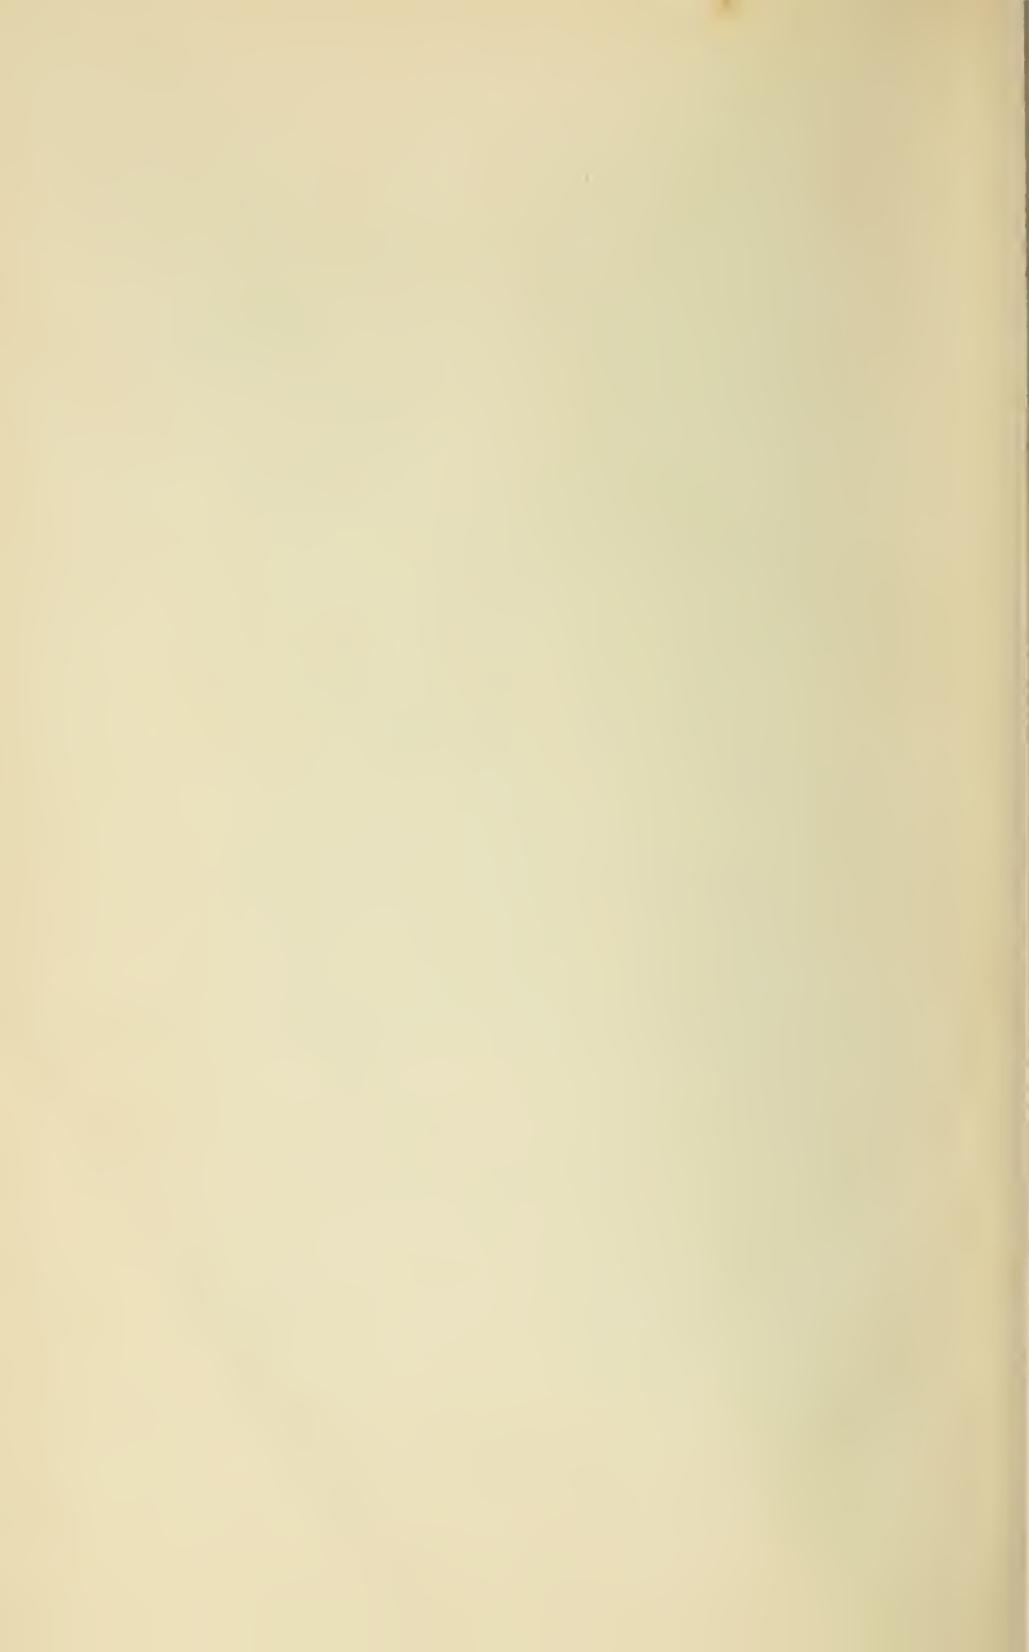

FINIS.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA
AT LOS ANGELES

EX LIBRIS

THE WORKS
Of the REVEREND
WILLIAM LAW, M.A.,

Sometime Fellow of Emmanuel
College, Cambridge.

In Nine Volumes.

Volume IX.

- I. An Humble, Earnest, and Affectionate Address to the Clergy.
- II. A Collection of Letters on the most Interesting and Important Subjects.
- III. Letters to a Lady inclined to enter into the Communion of the Church of Rome.

LONDON: Printed for J. RICHARDSON, 1762.
Privately Reprinted for G. MORETON, 42, Burgate
Street, Canterbury. 1893.

eh 5/5/43

BX
5037
L41
1892
V. 9

Prefatory Advertisement.

THE 'Address to the Clergy,' which forms the first work in this volume, was finished a few days before the Rev. WILLIAM LAW'S death (9th April, 1761), and published the same year. Though generally considered to be an excellent work, it is, perhaps, somewhat diffuse in the setting forth of its idea, which might have been amended had its Author lived to see it through the Press.

The 'Collection of Letters' contained in this volume is that arranged for publication under the superintendence of Mr. THOMAS LANGCAKE and Mr. GEORGE WARD during the Rev. W. Law's lifetime. According to Mr. WALTON the letters were adapted from WILLIAM LAW'S correspondence; and therefore in some instances are not in the same form as they were originally written. Mr. WALTON (page 554) of his 'Materials, &c.,' writes: 'The fact is, Mr. WARD and Mr. LANGCAKE, both resident in London, manufactured (so to speak) a few of these letters from originals or copies which they had by them, cutting off certain portions from one letter and appending them to another, according to their own taste and judgment; finally, perhaps, procuring Mr. LAW himself to touch up the parts which did not well dove-tail in each other; who also was willing to please them and saw a little providential use in it.'

The 'Three Letters to a Lady inclined to enter the Romish Communion' are now for the first time included in the Rev. W. LAW'S works. They were written during the years 1731-2; but there is some uncertainty respecting the identity of the person to whom they were originally addressed, which is however a matter of only slight consequence.

For the appearance of these letters in this republication Readers are indebted to the Rev. F. SANDERS, Vicar of Hoylake, who kindly lent his copy for this purpose; and whose remark respecting WILLIAM LAW'S works—that he knew of no author so likely to do good in this restless and impatient age—is well worthy of repetition here.

During the progress of this work through the Press, further writings by the Rev. WILLIAM LAW have been discovered; which, together with his other correspondence and various matters of interest in connection therewith will—with an Index or Summary to his complete works—be issued in a volume of Miscellanies, of which due notice will be given.

G. B. M.

Preston House, Near Wingham, Kent.
November, 1893.

AN HUMBLE, EARNEST,
AND Affectionate ADDRESS TO THE CLERGY.

By WILLIAM LAW, M. A.

LONDON :

Printed for M. RICHARDSON, in Pater-Noster-
Row. 1761.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

LIBRARY

Advertisement.

AS this ADDRESS makes its Appearance after the Decease of the Author, it cannot be thought improper to inform the Reader, that the Whole was sent to the Press by himself, except a few Pages, the last of which was Wrote by him not many Days before his Death.

An Address to the Clergy.

THE Reason of my humbly and affectionately addressing this Discourse to the Clergy, is not because it treats of Things not of common concern to all Christians, but chiefly to invite and induce them, as far as I can, to the serious Perusal of it ; and because whatever is essential to Christian Salvation, if either neglected, overlooked, or mistaken by them, is of the saddest Consequence both to themselves and the Churches in which they minister.— I say essential to Salvation, for I would not turn my own Thoughts, or call the Attention of Christians, to any Thing but the one Thing needful, the one Thing essential and only available to our Rising out of our fallen State, and becoming, as we were at our Creation, an holy Offspring of God, and real Partakers of the Divine Nature.

If it be asked, What this one Thing is? It is the SPIRIT OF GOD brought again to his FIRST POWER OF LIFE IN US. Nothing else is wanted by us, nothing else intended for us, by the Law, the Prophets, and the Gospel. Nothing else is, or can be effectual, to the making sinful man become again a godly Creature.

Everything else, be it what it will, however glorious and Divine in outward Appearance, every Thing that Angels, Men, Churches, or Reformations, can do for us, is dead and helpless, but so far as it is the immediate Work of the Spirit of God breathing and living in it.

All Scripture bears full witness to this Truth, and the End and Design of all that is written, is only to call us back from the Spirit of Satan, the Flesh, and the World, to be again under full Dependence upon, and Obedience to the Spirit of God, who out of free Love and thirst after our Souls, seeks to have his first Power of Life in us. When this is done, all is done that the Scripture can do for us.—Read what Chapter, or Doctrine of Scripture you will, be ever so delighted with it, it will leave you as poor, as empty and unreformed as it found you, unless it be a Delight that proceeds from, and has turned you wholly and solely to the Spirit of God, and strengthened your Union with and Dependence upon Him. For Love and Delight in matters of Scriptures, whilst it is only a Delight that is merely human, however Specious and Saintlike it may appear, is but the Self-love of fallen Adam, and can have no better a Nature, till it proceeds from the Inspiration of God, quickening his own Life and Nature within us, which alone can have or give forth a godly Love. For if it be an immutable Truth, that 'no man can call Jesus, Lord, 'but by the Holy Ghost,' it must be a Truth equally immutable, that no one can have any one Christ-like Temper or Power of Goodness, but so far, and in such Degree, as he is immediately led and governed by the Holy Spirit.

6 An Address to the Clergy.

The Grounds and Reasons of which are as follow.

All possible Goodness that either can be named, or is nameless, was in God from all Eternity, and must to all Eternity be inseparable from him; it can be nowhere but where God is. As therefore before God created anything, it was certainly true that there was but one that was good, so it is just the same Truth, after God has created innumerable Hosts of blessed holy and heavenly Beings, that there is but one that is good, and that is God.

All that can be called Goodness, Holiness, Divine Tempers, heavenly Affections, &c., in the Creatures, are no more their own, or the Growth of their created Powers, than they were their own before they were created. But all that is called Divine Goodness and Virtue in the Creature is nothing else, but the one Goodness of God manifesting a Birth and Discovery of itself in the Creature, according as its created Nature is fitted to receive it. This is the unalterable State between God and the Creature. Goodness for ever and ever can only belong to God, as essential to him and inseparable from him, as his own Unity.

God could not make the Creature to be great and glorious in itself; this is as impossible, as for God to create Beings into a State of Independence on himself. 'The Heavens,' saith David, 'declare the Glory of God'; and no Creature, any more than the Heavens, can declare any other Glory but that of God. And as well might it be said, that the Firmament shows forth its own Handy-Work, as that a holy Divine or heavenly Creature shows forth its own natural Power.

But now, if all that is Divine, great, glorious, and happy, in the Spirits, Tempers, Operations, and Enjoyments of the Creature, is only so much of the Greatness, Glory, Majesty, and Blessedness of God, dwelling in it, and giving forth various Births of his own triune Life, Light, and Love, in and through the manifold Forms and capacities of the Creature to receive them, then we may infallibly see the true Ground and Nature of all true Religion, and when and how we may be said to fulfil all our Religious Duty to God. For the Creature's true Religion, is its rendering to God all that is God's, it is its true continual Acknowledging all that which it is, and has, and enjoys, in and from God. This is the one true Religion of all intelligent Creatures, whether in Heaven, or on Earth; for as they all have but one and the same Relation to God, so though ever so different in their several

An Address to the Clergy. 7

Births, States or offices, they all have but one and the same true Religion, or right Behaviour towards God. Now the one Relation, which is the Ground of all true Religion, and is one and the same between God and all intelligent Creatures, is this, it is a total unalterable Dependence upon God, an immediate continual receiving of every Kind, and Degree of Goodness, Blessing and Happiness, that ever was, or can be found in them, from God alone. The highest Angel has nothing of its own that it can offer unto God, no more Light, Love, Purity, Perfection, and glorious Hallelujahs, that spring from itself, or its own Powers, than the poorest Creature upon Earth. Could the Angel see a Spark of Wisdom, Goodness, or Excellence, as coming from, or belonging to itself, its Place in Heaven would be lost, as sure as Lucifer lost his. But they are ever-abiding Flames of Pure Love, always ascending up to and uniting with God, for this Reason, because the Wisdom, the Power, the Glory, the Majesty, the Love, and Goodness of God alone, is all that they see, and feel, and know, either within or without themselves.—Songs of Praise to their heavenly Father are their ravishing Delight, because they see, and know, and feel, that it is the Breath and Spirit of their Heavenly Father that sings and rejoices in them.—Their Adoration in Spirit and in Truth never ceases, because they never cease to acknowledge the ALL of God;—the ALL of God in themselves, and the ALL of God in the whole Creation. This is the one Religion of Heaven, and nothing else is the Truth of Religion on Earth.

The Matter therefore plainly comes to this, Nothing can do, or be, the Good of Religion to the intelligent Creature, but the Power and Presence of God really and essentially living and working in it. But if this be the unchangeable Nature of that Goodness and Blessedness which is to be had from our Religion, then of all Necessity, the Creature must have all its Religious Goodness as wholly and solely from God's immediate Operation, as it had its first Goodness at its Creation. And it is the same Impossibility for the Creature to help itself to That which is good and blessed in Religion, by any Contrivance, Reasonings, or Workings of its own Natural Powers, as to create itself. For the Creature, after its Creation, can no more take any Thing to itself that belongs to God, than it could take it, before it was created. And if Truth forces us to hold, that the Natural Powers of the Creature could only come from the one Power of God, the same Truth should surely more force us to confess, that That which comforts, that which enlightens, that which blesses, which gives Peace, Joy, Goodness, and rest to its natural Powers, can be had in no other way, nor by any other Thing, but from God's immediate holy Operation found in it.

8 An Address to the Clergy.

Now the Reason why no Work of Religion, but that which is begun, continued, and carried on by the Living Operation of God in the creature, can have any Truth, Goodness, or Divine Blessing in it, is because nothing can in Truth seek God, but that which comes from God. Nothing can in Truth find God as its Good, but that which has the Nature of God living in it; like can only rejoice in Like; and therefore no religious Service of the Creature can have any Truth, Goodness, or Blessing in it, but that which is done in the Creature, in, and through, and by a Principle and Power of the Divine Nature begotten and breathing forth in it all holy Tempers, Affections, and Adorations.

All true Religion is, or brings forth, an essential Union and Communion of the Spirit of the Creature with the Spirit of the Creator: God in it, and it in God, one Life, one Light, one Love. The Spirit of God first gives, or sows the Seed of Divine Union in the Soul of every Man; and Religion is That by which it is quickened, raised, and brought forth to a Fulness and Growth of a Life in God.—Take a Similitude of this, as follows.—The Beginning, or Seed of animal Breath, must first be born in the Creature from the Spirit of this World, and then Respiration, so long as it lasts, keeps up an essential Union of the animal Life with the Breath or Spirit of this World. In like manner, Divine Faith, Hope, Love, and Resignation to God, are in the religious Life its acts of Respiration, which, so long as they are true, unite God and the Creature in the same living and essential manner, as animal Respiration unites the Breath of the Animal with the Breath of this World.

Now as no Animal could begin to respire, or unite with the Breath of this World, but because it has its Beginning to breathe begotten in it from the Air of this World, so it is equally certain, that no Creature, Angel or Man, could begin to be religious, or breathe forth the Divine Affections of Faith, Love, and Desire towards God, but because a Living Seed of these Divine Affections was by the Spirit or God first begotten in it.—And as a Tree or Plant can only grow and fructify by the same Power that first gave Birth to the Seed, so Faith, and Hope, and Love towards God, can only grow and fructify by the same Power, that begot the first Seed of them in the Soul. Therefore Divine immediate Inspiration and Divine Religion are inseparable in the Nature of the Thing.

Take away Inspiration, or suppose it to cease, and then no Religious acts or Affections can give forth any Thing that is godly or Divine. For the Creature can offer, or return Nothing to God, but That which it has first received from him; therefore, if it is to offer and send up to God Affections and Aspirations that are Divine and godly, it must of all necessity have the Divine and godly Nature living and breathing in it.—Can any Thing reflect Light, before it has received it? Or any other Light, than that which it has received? Can any Creature breathe forth earthly, or diabolical Affections, before it is possessed of an earthly, or diabolical Nature? Yet this is as possible, as for any Creature to have Divine Affections rising up and dwelling in it, either before, or any further, than as it has or partakes of the Divine Nature dwelling and operating in it.

An Address to the Clergy. 9

A religious Faith that is uninspired, a Hope, or Love that proceeds not from the immediate Working of the Divine Nature within us, can no more do any Divine Good to our Souls, or unite them with the Goodness of God, than an Hunger after earthly Food can feed us with the immortal Bread of Heaven.—All that the natural or uninspired Man does, or can do in the Church, has no more of the Truth or Power of Divine Worship in it, than that which he does in the Field, or Shop, through a Desire of Riches.—And the reason is, because all the Acts of the Natural Man, whether relating to Matters of Religion or the World, must be equally Selfish, and there is no Possibility of their being otherwise. For Self-love, Self-esteem, Self-seeking, and Living wholly to Self, are as strictly the Whole of all that is or possibly can be in the Natural Man, as in the Natural Beast; the one can no more be better, or act above this Nature, than the other. Neither can any Creature be in a better, or higher State than this, till something Supernatural is found in it; and this Supernatural something, called in Scripture the WORD, or SPIRIT, or INSPIRATION of God, is that alone from which Man can have the first Good Thought about God, or the least Power of having more heavenly Desires in his Spirit, than he has in his Flesh.

A Religion that is not wholly built upon this Supernatural Ground, but solely stands upon the Powers, Reasonings, and Conclusions of the Natural uninspired Man, has not so much as the Shadow of true Religion in it, but is a mere Nothing, in the same Sense, as an Idol is said to be Nothing, because the Idol has nothing of That in it which is pretended by it. For the Work of Religion has no Divine good in it, but as it brings forth, and keeps up essential Union of the Spirit of Man with the Spirit of God; which essential Union cannot be made, but through Love on both Sides, nor by Love, but where the Love that works on both Sides is of the same Nature.

No Man therefore can reach God with his Love, or have Union with him by it, but he who is inspired with that one same Spirit of Love, with which God loved himself from all Eternity, and before there was any Creature.—Infinite Hosts of new created

10 An Address to the Clergy.

Heavenly Beings can begin no new Kind of Love of God, nor have the least Power of beginning to Love him at all, but so far as his own Holy Spirit of Love, wherewith he hath from all Eternity loved himself, is brought to Life in them. This Love, that was then in God alone, can be the only Love in Creatures that can draw them to God; they can have no Power of cleaving to him, of willing that which He wills, or adoring the Divine Nature, but by partaking of that eternal Spirit of Love; and therefore the continual immediate Inspiration or Operation of the Holy Spirit, is the one only possible Ground of our continually Loving God. And of this inspired Love, and no other, it is that St. John says, 'He that dwelleth in Love, dwelleth in God.' Suppose it to be any other Love, brought forth by any other Thing but the Spirit of God breathing his own Love in us, and then it cannot be true, that he who dwells in such Love, dwells in God.

Divine Inspiration was essential to man's first created State. The Spirit of the triune God, breathed into, or brought to Life in him, was that alone which made him a holy Creature in the Image and Likeness of God. To have no other Mover, to live under no other Guide or Leader, but the Spirit, was that which constituted all the Holiness which the first man could have from God. Had he not been thus at the first, God in him and he in God, brought into the World as a true offspring and real Birth of the Holy Spirit, no Dispensation of God to fallen man would have directed him to the Holy Spirit, or ever have made mention of his Inspiration in Man. For fallen Man could be directed to Nothing as his Good, but that which he had, and was his Good, before he fell. And had not the Holy Spirit been his first Life, in and by which he lived, no inspired Prophets among the Sons of fallen Adam had ever been heard of, or any holy men speaking as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. For the Thing would have been impossible, no fallen Man could have been inspired by the Holy Spirit, but because the first Life of Man was a true and real Birth of it; and also because every fallen Man had, by the Mercy and free Grace of God, a secret Remains of his first Life preserved in him, though hidden, or rather swallowed up by Flesh and Blood; which Secret Remains, signified and assured to Adam by the name of a Bruiser of the Serpent, or Seed of the woman, was his only capacity to be called and quickened again into his first Life, by new Breathings of the Holy Spirit in Him.

Hence it plainly appears, that the Gospel State could not be God's last Dispensation, or the finishing of Man's Redemption, unless its whole Work was a Work of the Spirit of God in the Spirit of Man; that is, unless without all Veils, Types, and

An Address to the Clergy. II

Shadows, it brought the Thing itself, or the Substance of all former Types and Shadows, into real Enjoyment, so as to be possessed by Man in Spirit, and in truth. Now the Thing itself, and for the sake of which all God's Dispensations have been, is that first Life of God which was essentially born in the Soul of the first Man, Adam, and to which he died. But now, if the Gospel Dispensation comes at the End of all Types and Shadows, to bring forth again in Man a true and full Birth of that Holy Spirit which he had at first, then it must be plain, that the work of this Dispensation must be solely and immediately the Work of the Holy Spirit. For if Man could no other possible way have had a holy Nature and Spirit at first, but as an Offspring or Birth of the Holy Spirit at his Creation, it is certain from the Nature of the Thing, that fallen Man, dead to his first holy Nature, can have that same holy Nature again no other way, but solely by the Operation of that same Holy Spirit, from the Breath of which he had at first a holy Nature and Life in God. Therefore immediate Inspiration is as necessary to make fallen Man alive again unto God, as it was to make Man at first a Living Soul after the Image and in the Likeness of God. And Continual Inspiration is as necessary, as Man's Continuance in his redeemed State. For this is a certain Truth, that That alone which begins, or gives Life, must of all Necessity be the only Continuance or Preservation of Life. The second Step can only be taken by That which gave Power to take the first.—No Life can continue in the Goodness of its first created, or redeemed State, but by its continuing under the Influence of, and working with and by that Powerful Root, or Spirit, which at first created, or redeemed it. Every Branch of the Tree, though ever so richly brought forth, must wither and die, as soon as it ceases to have continual Union with, and Virtue from that Root, which first brought it forth. And to this Truth, as absolutely grounded in the Nature of the Thing, our Lord appeals as a Proof and full Illustration of the Necessity of his immediate indwelling, Breathing, and Operating in the redeemed Soul of Man, saying, 'I am the Vine, ye are the Branches, as the Branch cannot bear fruit of itself, no more can ye, except ye abide in me. He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much Fruit. If a man abides not in me, he is cast forth as a withered Branch; for without me, ye can do Nothing,' John xv.

Now from these Words let this conclusion be here drawn, viz., That therefore to turn to Christ as a Light within us, to expect Life from nothing but his holy Birth raised within us, to give ourselves up wholly and solely to the immediate continual Influx and Operation of his Holy Spirit, depending wholly upon it for every Kind and Degree of Goodness and Holiness that we want, or can receive, is and can be Nothing else, but proud, rank Enthusiasm.

12 An Address to the Clergy.

Now as infinitely absurd as this conclusion is, no one that condemns continual immediate Inspiration as gross Enthusiasm, can possibly do it with less absurdity, or show himself a Wiser Man, or better Reasoner, than he that concludes, that Because without Christ we can do Nothing, therefore we ought not to believe, expect, wait for, and depend upon his continual immediate operation in every Thing that we do, or would do well.—As to the Pride charged upon this pretended Enthusiasm, it is the same absurdity. Christ says, ‘without me ye can do Nothing,’ the same as if he had said, As to yourselves, and all that can be called your own, you are mere helpless Sin and Misery, and Nothing that is good, can come from you, but as it is done by the continual immediate Breathing and Inspiration of another Spirit, given by God to over-rule your own, to save and deliver you from all your own Goodness, your own Wisdom, and Learning which always were, and always will be, as corrupt and impure, as earthly and sensual, as your own Flesh and Blood. Now is there any selfish Creaturely Pride, in fully believing this to be true, and in acting in full Conformity to it? If so, then he that confesses he neither has, nor ever can have a single Farthing, but as it is freely given him from Charity, thereby declares himself to be a Purse-proud vain Boaster of his own Wealth. Such is the Spiritual Pride of Him, who fully acknowledges that he neither has, nor can have the least Spark or breathing after Goodness, but what is freely kindled, or breathed into him by the Spirit of God. Again, if it is Spiritual Pride to believe, that Nothing that we ever think, or say, or do, either in the Church, or our Closets, can have any truth of goodness in it but that which is wrought solely and immediately by the Spirit of God in us, then it must be said, that in order to have religious Humility we must never forget to take some Share of our religious Virtues to ourselves, and not allow (as Christ hath said) that without Him we can do Nothing that is good. It must also be said, that St. Paul took too much upon him when he said, ‘the Life that I now live, is not mine, but Christ’s that liveth in me.’

Behold a Pride, and a Humility, the one as good as the other, and both logically descended from a Wisdom, that confesses it comes not from above.

The Necessity of a Continual Inspiration of the Spirit of God, both to begin the first, and continue every step of a Divine Life in Man, is a Truth to which every Life in Nature, as well as all Scripture, bears full Witness.—A natural Life, a bestial Life, a diabolical Life, can subsist no longer, than whilst they are immediately and continually under the working Power of that Root, or Source, from which they Sprung. Thus it is with the Divine Life in Man, it can never be in him, but as a Growth of Life in and from God.—Hence it is, that Resisting the Spirit, Quenching the Spirit, Grieving the Spirit, is that alone which gives Birth and Growth to every Evil that reigns in the World, and leaves Men, and Churches, not only an easy, but a necessary Prey to the Devil, the World, and the Flesh. And Nothing but Obedience to the Spirit, trusting to the Spirit, walking in the Spirit, praying with and for its continual Inspiration, can possibly keep either Men, or Churches, from being Sinners, or Idolaters, in all that they do. For everything in the Life, or Religion of Man, that has not the Spirit of God for its Mover, Director, and End, be it what it will, is but earthly, sensual, or devilish.—The Truth and Perfection of the Gospel State could not show itself, till it became solely a Ministration of the Spirit, or a Kingdom in which the Holy Spirit of God had the doing of all that was done in it.—The Apostles, whilst Christ was with them in the Flesh, were instructed in heavenly Truths from his Mouth, and enabled to work Miracles in his Name, yet not qualified to know and teach the Mysteries of his Kingdom. After his Resurrection, He conversed with them forty Days, speaking to them of Things pertaining to the Kingdom of God; nay though he breathed on them, and said, ‘receive ye the Holy Ghost,’ &c., yet this also would not do, they were still unable to preach, or bear Witness to the Truth, as it is in Jesus. And the Reason is, there was still a higher Dispensation to come, which stood in such an opening of the Divine Life in their Hearts, as could not be effected from an outward Instruction of Christ himself. For though He had sufficiently told his Disciples the Necessity of being born again of the Spirit, yet he left them unborn of it, till He came again in the Power of the Spirit. He breathed on them, and said, ‘Receive ye the Holy Ghost,’ yet that which was said and done, was not the Thing itself, but only a Type or outward Signification of what they should receive, when He, being glorified, should come again in the Fulness and Power of the Spirit, breaking open the Deadness and Darkness of their Hearts with Light and Life from Heaven, which Light did, and alone could, open and verify in their Souls, all that he had said and promised to them whilst he was with them in the Flesh.—All this is expressly declared by Christ himself, saying unto them, ‘I tell you the Truth, it is expedient for you that I go away’; therefore Christ taught them to believe the Want, and joyfully to expect the Coming of a higher and more blessed State, than that of his bodily Presence with them. For he adds, ‘if I go not away, the Comforter will

14 An Address to the Clergy.

'not come'; therefore the Comfort and Blessing of Christ to his Followers could not be had, till something more was done to them, and they were brought into a higher State than they could be by his verbal Instruction of them. 'But if I go away,' says he, 'I will send him unto you, and when the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth is come, he will guide you into all Truth; He shall glorify me' (that is, shall set up my Kingdom in its Glory, in the Power of the Spirit) 'for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you: I said of mine, because all Things that the Father hath are mine,' John xvi.

Now when Christ had told them of the Necessity of an higher State than that they were in, and the Necessity of such a comforting illuminating Guide, as they could not have till his outward Teaching in human Language was changed into the Inspiration, and Operation of his Spirit in their Souls, He commands them, not to begin to bear Witness of him to the World, from what they did and could in an human Way know of him, his Birth, his Life, Doctrines, Death, Sufferings, Resurrection, &c., but to tarry at Jerusalem, till they were endued with Power from on high; saying unto them, 'Ye shall receive Power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you. And then shall ye bear witness unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and unto the utmost Part of the Earth.'

Here are two most important and fundamental Truths fully demonstrated, First, that the Truth and Perfection of the Gospel State could not take Place, till Christ was glorified, and his Kingdom among Men made wholly and solely a continual immediate Ministration of the Spirit: Every Thing before this was but subservient for a Time, and preparatory to this last Dispensation, which could not have been the last, had it not carried Man above Types, Figures and Shadows, into the real Possession and Enjoyment of that which is the Spirit and Truth of a Divine Life. For the End is not come till it has found the Beginning; that is, the last Dispensation of God to fallen Man cannot be come, till putting an End to the 'Bondage of weak and beggarly Elements,' Gal. iv. 9, it brings Man to that dwelling in God, and God in Him, which He had at the Beginning.

Secondly, That as the Apostles could not, so no man, from their Time to the End of the World, can have any true and real Knowledge of the Spiritual Blessings of Christ's Redemption, or have a Divine call, Capacity, or Fitness to preach, and bear Witness of them to the World, but solely by that Same Divine Spirit opening all the Mysteries of a Redeeming Christ in their inward Parts, as it did in the Apostles, Evangelists, and first Ministers of the Gospel.

An Address to the Clergy. 15

For why could not the Apostles, who had been Eye-Witnesses to all the whole Process of Christ, why could they not with their human Apprehension declare and testify the Truth of such Things, till they 'were baptized with Fire, and born again of the 'Spirit'? It is because the Truth of such Things, or the Mysteries of Christ's Process, as Knowable by man, are Nothing else in themselves, but those very Things which are done by this heavenly Fire and Spirit of God in our Souls. Therefore to know the Mysteries of Christ's Redemption, and to know the Redeeming Work of God in our own Souls, is the same Thing; the one cannot be before, or without the other. Therefore Every Man, be he who he will, however able in all Kinds of human literature, must be an entire Stranger to all the Mysteries of Gospel Redemption, and can only talk about them as of any other Tale he has been told, till they are brought forth, verified, fulfilled, and witnessed to by That, which is found, felt and enjoyed of the whole Process of Christ in his Soul. For as Redemption is in its whole Nature an inward Spiritual Work, that works only in the altering, changing, and regenerating the Life of the Soul, so it must be true, that Nothing but the inward State of the Soul can bear true Witness to the Redeeming Power of Christ. For as it wholly consists in altering That which is the most radical in the Soul, bringing forth a new Spiritual Death, and a new Spiritual Life, it must be true, that no one can know or believe the Mysteries of Christ's redeeming Power, by historically knowing, or rationally consenting to That which is said of him and them in Written or Spoken Words, but only and Solely by an inward experimental finding, and feeling the Operation of them, in that new Death, and new Life, both of which must be effected in the Soul of Man, or Christ is not, cannot be found, and Known by the Soul as its Salvation. It must also be equally true, that the redeemed State of the Soul, being in itself Nothing else but the Resurrection of a Divine and holy Life in it, must as necessarily from first to last be the Sole Work of the Breathing creating Spirit of God, as the first holy created State of the Soul was.—And all this, because the Mysteries of Christ's redeeming Power, which work and bring forth the renewed State of the Soul, are not creaturely, finite, outward Things, that may be found and enjoyed by verbal Descriptions, or formed Ideas of them, but are a Birth and Life, and Spiritual Operation, which as solely belongs to God alone, as his creating Power. For Nothing can redeem, but that same Power which created the Soul. Nothing can bring forth a good Thought in it, but that which brought forth the Power of thinking. And of every Tendency towards Goodness, be it ever so small, that same may be truly affirmed of it, which St. Paul affirmed of his highest State, 'yet not I, but Christ that liveth in me.'

16 An Address to the Clergy.

But if the Belief of the necessity and Certainty of immediate continual Divine Inspiration, in and for everything that can be holy and good in us, be (as its Accusers say) rank Enthusiasm, then He is the only sober orthodox Christian, who of many a good Thought and Action that proceeds from him, frankly says, in order to avoid Enthusiasm, My own Power, and not Christ's Spirit living and breathing in me, has done this for me. For if all that is good is not done by Christ, then Something that is good is done by myself. It is in vain to think, that there is a middle Way, and that rational Divines have found it out, as Dr. Warburton has done, who though denying immediate continual Inspiration, yet allows that the Spirit's 'ordinary Influence 'occasionally assists the faithful.'*

Now this middle Way has neither Scripture nor sense in it; for an occasional Influence or Concurrence is as absurd, as an occasional God, and necessarily Supposes such a God. For an occasional influence of the spirit upon us supposes an occasional Absence of the Spirit from us. For there could be no such Thing, unless God was sometimes with us, and sometimes not, sometimes doing us good, as the inward God of our Life, and sometimes doing us no good at all, but leaving us to be good from ourselves. — Occasional Influence necessarily implies all this blasphemous Absurdity. Again, this middle way of an occasional Influence and Assistance necessarily supposes, that there is something of man's own that is good, or the Holy Spirit of God neither would, nor could assist or co-operate with it. But if there was any Thing good in Man for God to assist and co-operate with, besides the SEED of his own Divine Nature, or his own WORD of Life Striving to bruise the Serpent's Nature within us, it could not be true, that there is only one that is good, and that is God. And were there any Goodness in Creatures, either in Heaven, or on Earth, but the one Goodness of the Divine nature, living, working, and manifesting itself in them, as its created Instruments, then good Creatures, both in Heaven and on Earth, would have something else to adore, besides, or along with God. For Goodness, be it where it will, is adorable for itself, and because it is Goodness; if therefore any Degree of it belonged to the Creature, it ought to have a share of that same Adoration that is paid to the Creator.—Therefore, if to believe that Nothing godly can be alive in us, but what has all its Life from the Spirit of God living and breathing in us, if to look Solely to it, and depend wholly upon it, both for the Beginning, and Growth of every Thought and Desire that can be holy and good in us, be proud rank Enthusiasm, then it must be the same Enthusiasm to own but one God. For He that owns more goodness than one, owns more Gods than one. And He that believes he can have any good in him, but the one Goodness of God, manifesting itself in him, and through him, owns more goodness than one. But if it be true, that God and Goodness cannot be divided, then it must be a Truth for ever and ever, that so much of Good, so much of God, must be in the Creature.

* Sermons, vol. i.

An Address to the Clergy. 17

And here lies the true unchangeable Distinction between God, and Nature, and the Natural Creature. Nature and Creature are only for the outward Manifestation of the inward invisible unapproachable Powers of God; they can rise no higher, nor be anything else in themselves, but as Temples, habitations, or Instruments, in which the Supernatural God can, and does manifest himself in various Degrees, bringing forth Creatures to be good with his own Goodness, to love and adore him with his own Spirit of Love, for ever singing Praises to the Divine Nature by That which they partake of it. This is the Religion of Divine Inspiration, which being interpreted, is Immanuel, or God within us. Every Thing short of this, is short of that Religion which worships God in spirit and in Truth. And every religious Trust or Confidence in any Thing, but the Divine operation within us, is but a sort of Image-Worship, which though it may deny the Form, yet retains the Power thereof in the Heart. And he that places any religious safety in theological Decisions, Scholastic Points, in particular Doctrines and opinions, that must be held about the Scripture Words of Faith, Justification, Sanctification, Election, and Reprobation, so far departs from the true Worship of the Living God within him, and Sets, up an Idol of Notions to be worshipped, if not instead of, yet along with him. And I believe it may be taken for a certain Truth, that every Society of Christians, whose Religion stands upon this Ground, however ardent, laborious, and good their zeal may seem to be in such Matters, yet in spite of all, sooner or later, it will be found that Nature is at the Bottom, and that a selfish, earthly, overbearing Pride in their own Definitions and Doctrines of Words, will by Degrees creep up to the same Height, and become that same fleshly Wisdom, doing those very same Things, which they exclaim against in Popes, Cardinals, and Jesuits. Nor can it possibly be otherwise. For a letter-learned zeal has but one Nature wherever it is, it can only do that for Christians, which it did for Jews. As it anciently brought forth Scribes, Pharisees, Hypocrites, and Crucifiers of Christ, as it afterwards brought forth Heresies, Schisms, Popes, papal Decrees, Images, Anathemas, Transubstantiation, so in Protestant Countries it will be doing the same Thing, only with other materials; Images of wood and Clay, will only be given up for Images of Doctrines; Grace and Works, imputed sin, and imputed Righteousness, Election and Reprobation, will have their Synods of Dort, as truly evangelical, as any Council of Trent.

This must be the Case of all fallen Christendom, as well Popish as Protestant, till single Men, and Churches, know, confess, and firmly adhere to this one Scripture Truth, which the blessed Behmen prefixed as a Motto to most of his Epistles, viz., 'That our Salvation is in the Life of Jesus Christ in us.' And that, because this alone was the Divine Perfection of Man before he fell, and will be his Perfection when he is one with Christ in Heaven.—Every Thing besides this, or that is not solely aiming at and essentially leading to it, is but mere Babel in all Sects and Divisions of Christians, living to themselves, and their own old man under a seeming holiness of Christian Strife and Contention about Scripture works.—But this Truth of Truths, fully possessed, and firmly adhered to, brings God and Man together, puts an End to every Lo here, and Lo there, and turns the whole Faith of Man to a Christ that can no where be a Saviour to him, but as essentially born in the inmost Spirit of his Soul, nor possible to be born there by any other means, but the immediate Inspiration and working Power of the holy Spirit within him.—To this Man alone all Scripture gives daily Edification; the Words of Christ and his Apostles fall like a Fire into him. And what is it that they kindle There? Not Notions, not Itching ears, nor rambling Desires after new and new Expounders of them, but a holy Flame of Love, to be always with, always attending to, that Christ and his holy Spirit within him, which alone can make him to be and do all that, which the Words of Christ and his Apostles have taught. For there is no possibility of being like-minded with Christ in anything that he taught, or having the Truth of one Christian Virtue, but by the Nature and Spirit of Christ become essentially living in us. Read all our Saviour's Divine Sermon from the Mount, consent to the Goodness of every Part of it, yet the Time of practising it will never come, till you have a new Nature from Christ, and are as vitally in him, and he in you, as the Vine in the Branch, and the Branch in the Vine. 'Blessed are the pure in Heart, for they shall see 'God,' is a Divine Truth, but will do us no Divine good, unless we receive it as saying neither more nor less, than 'Blessed are 'they that are born again of the Spirit, for they alone can see

An Address to the Clergy. 19

'God.'—For no Blessedness, either of Truth or Life, can be found either in Men or Angels, but where the Spirit and Life of God is essentially born within them. And all Men or Churches, not placing all in the Life, Light, and Guidance of the Holy Spirit of Christ, but pretending to act in the Name, and for the Glory of God, from Opinions which their Logic and Learning have collected from Scripture Words, or from what a Calvin, an Arminius, a Socinus, or some smaller Name, has told them to be right or wrong, all such, are but where the Apostles were, when 'by the Way there was a Strife among them who should be the 'greatest.' And how much soever they may say, and boast of their great Zeal for Truth, and the only Glory of God, yet their own open notorious Behaviour towards one another, is proof enough, that the great Strife amongst them is, which shall be the greatest Sect, or have the largest number of Followers. A Strife, from the same Root, and just as useful to Christianity, as that of the Carnal Apostles, who should be greatest. For not numbers of Men, or Kingdoms professing Christianity, but numbers redeemed from the Death of Adam to the Life of Christ are the Glory of the Christian Church. And in whatever National Christianity any Thing else is meant or sought after, by the Profession of the Gospel, but a new heavenly Life, through the mediatorial Nature and Spirit of the eternal Son of God, born in the Fallen Soul, wherever this Spirituality of the Gospel-Redemption is denied or overlooked, there the Spirit of Self, of Satanic and worldly Subtlety, will be Church and Priest, and supreme Power, in all that is called Religion.

But to return now to the Doctrine of Continual Inspiration. The Natural or unregenerate Man, educated in pagan Learning, and Scholastic Theology, seeing the Strength of his Genius in the Search after Knowledge, how easily and learnedly he can talk, and write, criticize and determine upon all Scripture Words and Facts, looks at all this as a full Proof of his own religious Wisdom, Power and Goodness, and calls immediate Inspiration Enthusiasm, not considering, that all the Woes denounced by Christ against Scribes, Pharisees, and Hypocrites, are so many Woes now at this day denounced against every Appearance and Show of Religion, that the natural Man can practise.

And what is well to be noted, everyone, however high in human literature, is but this very natural Man, and can only have the Goodness of a carnal secular Religion, till as empty of all, as a new born Child, the Spirit of God gets a full Birth in him, and becomes the Inspirer and Doer of all that he wills, does, and aims at, in his whole Course of Religion.

Our Divine Master compares the Religion of the learned Phari-

20 An Address to the Clergy.

sees 'to whited Sepulchres, outwardly beautiful, but inwardly 'full of Rottenness, stench, and dead Men's bones.'

Now whence was it, that a Religion, so serious in its Restraints, so beautiful in its outward form and Practices, and commanding such Reverence from all that beheld it, was yet charged by Truth itself with having inwardly such an abominable Nature? It was only for this one Reason, because it was a Religion of Self.—Therefore, from the Beginning to the End of the World, it must be true, that where Self is kept alive, has Power, and keeps up its own Interests, whether in Speaking, Writing, teaching or defending the most specious Number of Scripture Doctrines and religious Forms, there is that very old Pharisee still alive, whom Christ with so much Severity of Language constantly condemned. And the Reason of such heavy Condemnation is, because Self is the only Root, or rather the Sum total of all Sin; every Sin that can be named is centred in it, and the Creature can Sin no higher, than he can live to Self.—For Self is the Fulness of Atheism and Idolatry, it is nothing else but the Creature broken off from God and Christ; it is the Power of Satan living and working in us, and the sad Continuance of that first Turning from God, which was the whole Fall or Death of our first Father.

And yet, sad and Satanical as this Self is, what is so much cherished and nourished with our daily Love, Fears, and Cares about it? How much worldly Wisdom, how much laborious Learning, how many Subtleties of Contrivance, and how many flattering Applications and Submissions are made to the World, that this apostate Self may have its Fulness, both of inward Joys, and outward Glory?

But to all this it must yet be added, that a Religion of Self, of worldly Glory and Prosperity carried on under the Gospel State, has more of a diabolical Nature than that of the Jewish Pharisees.—It is the highset and last Working of the Mystery of Iniquity, because it lives to Self, Satan, and the World, in and by a daily Profession of denying and dying to Self, of being crucified with Christ, of being led by his Spirit, of being risen from the World, and set with him in Heavenly Places.

Let then the Writers against continual immediate Divine Inspiration take this for a certain Truth, that by so doing, they do all they can to draw Man from That which is the very Truth and Perfection of the Gospel State, and are, and can be, no better than pitiable Advocates for a Religion of Self, more blamable and abominable now, than that which was of old condemned by Christ. For whatever is pretended to be done in Gospel Religion, by any other Spirit or Power, but that of the Holy Ghost bringing it forth, whether it be Praying, Preaching, or practising any

An Address to the Clergy. 21

Duties, is all of it but the Religion of Self, and can be nothing else. For all that is born of the Flesh, is Flesh, and nothing is spiritual, but that which has its whole Birth from the Spirit. But Man, not ruled and governed by the Spirit, has only the Nature of Corrupt Flesh, is under the full Power and Guidance of fallen Nature, and is that very natural Man, to whom the Things of God are Foolishness. But Man boldly rejecting, and preaching against a continual immediate Divine Inspiration, is an Anti-Apostle, he lays another Foundation, than that which Christ has laid, he teaches that Christ needs not, must not, be all in all in us, and is a Preacher up of the Folly of Fearing to grieve, quench, and resist the Holy Spirit.—For when, or where, or how could every one of us be in Danger of grieving, quenching, or resisting the Spirit, unless his holy Breathings and Inspirations were always within us? Or how could the Sin against the Holy Ghost have a more dreadful Nature, than that against the Father and the Son, but because the continual immediate Guidance and Operation of the Spirit, is the last and highest Manifestation of the holy Trinity in the fallen Soul of Man? It is not because the Holy Ghost is more worthy, or higher in Nature than the Father and the Son, but because Father and Son come forth in their own highest Power of redeeming Love, through the Covenant of a continual immediate Inspiration of the Spirit, to be always dwelling and working in the Soul. Many weak Things have been conjectured, and published to the World, about the Sin against the Holy Ghost; whereas the whole Nature of it lies in this, that it is a Sinning, or Standing out against the last and highest Dispensation of God for the full Redemption of Man. Christ says, 'If I had not come, they had not had Sin,' that is, they had not had such a weight of guilt upon them; therefore the Sinning against Christ come into the Flesh, was of a more unpardonable Nature, than Sinning against the Father under the Law. So likewise Sinning against the Holy Ghost is of a more unpardonable Nature than Sinning against the Father under the Law, or against the Son as come in the Flesh, because these two preceding Dispensations were but preparatory to the Coming, or full Ministration of the Spirit. But when Father and Son were come in the Power and Manifestation of the Spirit, then he that refuses or resists this Ministration of the Spirit, resists all that the holy Trinity can do to restore and revive the first Life of God in the Soul, and so commits the unpardonable Sin, and which is therefore unpardonable, because there remains no further, or higher Power to remove it out of the Soul. For no Sin is pardonable, because of its own Nature: or that which it is in itself, but because there is something yet to come that can remove it out of the Soul; nor can any Sin be unpardonable, but because it has withstood, or turned from that which was the last and highest Remedy for the Removal of it.

22 An Address to the Clergy.

Hence it is, that grieving, quenching, or resisting the Spirit, is the Sin of all Sins, that most of all stops the Work of Redemption, and in the highest Degree separates Man from all Union with God. But there could be no such Sin, but because the Holy Spirit is always Breathing, Willing, and Working within us. For what Spirit can be grieved by us, but that which has its will within us disobeyed? What Spirit can be quenched by us, but that which is, and ever would be, a holy Fire of Life within us? What Spirit can be resisted by us, but that which is, and has its Working within us? A Spirit on the outside of us cannot be the Spirit of God, nor could such a Spirit be any more quenched, or hindered by our Spirit, than a Man by indignation at a Storm could stop its Rage. Now, dreadful as the above mentioned Sin is, I would ask all the Writers against continual immediate Divine Inspiration, how they could more effectually lead Men into an habitual State of Sinning against the Holy Ghost, than by such Doctrine? For how can we possibly avoid the Sin of grieving, quenching, &c., the Spirit, but by continually reverencing his holy Presence in us, by continually waiting for, trusting, and solely attending to That which the Spirit of God wills, works, and manifests within us? To turn Men from this continual Dependence upon the Holy Spirit, is turning them from all true Knowledge of God. For without this, there is no Possibility of any edifying, saving Knowledge of God. For though we have ever so many mathematical Demonstrations of his Being, &c., we are without all real Knowledge of Him, till his own quickening Spirit within us manifests Him, as a Power of Life, Light, Love, and Goodness, essentially found, vitally felt, and adored in our Souls. This is the one Knowledge of God, which is eternal Life, because it is the Life of God manifested in the Soul, that Knowledge of which Christ says, No one knoweth the Father but the Son, and He to whomsoever the Son revealeth him. Therefore this Knowledge is only possible to be found in Him, who is in Christ a new Creature, for so it is that Christ revealeth the Father. But if none belong to God, but those who are led by the Spirit of God, if we are Reprobates unless the Spirit of Christ be living in us, who need be told, that all that we have to trust to or depend upon, as Children of God and Christ, is the continual immediate Guidance, Unction, and Teaching of his Holy Spirit within us? Or how can we more profanely Sin against this Spirit and Power of God within us, or more expressly call Men from the Power of God to

An Address to the Clergy. 23

Satan, than by ridiculing a Faith and Hope that look wholly and solely to his continual immediate Breathing and Operations, for all that can be holy and good in us?

'When I am lifted up from the Earth,' says Christ, 'I will draw all Men to me.' Therefore the one great Power of Christ in and over the Souls of Men is after he is in Heaven; then begins the true full Power of his Drawing, because it is by his Spirit in Man that he draws. But who can more resist this Drawing, or defeat its Operation in us, than he that preaches against, and condemns the Belief of a continual and immediate Inspiration of the Spirit, when Christ's Drawing can be in nothing else, nor be powerful any other Way?

Now That which we are here taught, is the whole End of all Scripture; for all that is there said, however learnedly read, or studied by Hebrew or Greek Skill, fails of its only End, till it leads and brings us to an Essential God within us, to feel and find all that which the Scriptures speak of God, of Man, of Life and Death, of Good and Evil, of Heaven and Hell, as Essentially verified in our own Souls. For all is within Man that can be either Good or Evil to him: God within Him, is his Divine Life, his Divine Light, and his Divine Love: Satan within Him is his Life of Self, of earthly Wisdom, of diabolical Falseness, Wrath, Pride, and Vanity of every Kind. There is no middle way between these two. He that is not under the Power of the one, is under the Power of the Other. And the Reason is, man was created in and under the Power of the Divine Life; so far therefore as he loses, or turns from this Life of God, so far he falls under the Power of Self, of Satan, and Worldly Wisdom. When St. Peter, full of an human good Love towards Christ, advised him to avoid his sufferings, Christ rejected him with a 'Get thee behind me, Satan,' and only gave this Reason for it, 'for thou savourest not the Things that be of God, but the Things that be of Men.' A plain Proof, that whatever is not of and from the Holy Spirit of God in us, however plausible it may outwardly seem to Men, to their Wisdom, and human Goodness, is yet in itself Nothing else but the Power of Satan in us. And as St. Paul said truly of himself, 'By the Grace of God I am what I am'; so every Wise, every Scribe, every Disputer of this world, every Truster to the Strength of his own rational Learning, everyone that is under the Power of his own fallen Nature, never free from Desires of Honours and Preferments, ever thirsting to be rewarded for his theological Abilities, ever fearing to be abased and despised, always thankful to those who flatter him with his distinguished Merit, everyone that is such, be he who he will, may as truly say of himself, Through my turning and Trusting to something else than the Grace and Inspiration of God's Spirit, I am what I am. For Nothing else hinders any Professor of Christ from being able truly to say with St. Paul, 'God forbid that I should glory in any Thing but the Cross of Christ, by which I am crucified to the World, and the World to me.' Nothing makes him incapable of finding That which St. Paul found, when He said, 'I can do all Things through Christ that Strengtheneth me;' nothing hinders all this, but his Disregard of a Christ within him, his choosing to have a Religion of self, of Laborious Learning, and worldly Greatness, rather than be such a Gospel fool for Christ, as to renounce all that which he renounced, and to seek no more earthly honour and Praise than he did, and to will Nothing, know Nothing, seek Nothing, but that which the Spirit of God and Christ knows, wills, and seeks in Him. Here, and here alone, lies the Christian's full and certain Power of overcoming self, the devil, and the world. But Christians, seeking and turning to anything else, but to be led and inspired by the one Spirit of God and Christ, will bring forth a Christendom that in the Sight of God will have no other Name, than a spiritual Babylon, a spiritual Egypt, and Sodom, a Scarlet Whore, a devouring Beast, and red Dragon. For all these names belong to all men, however learned, and to all Churches, whether greater or less, in which the Spirit of this World has any share of Power. This was the Fall of the whole Church soon after the Apostolic Ages; and all human Reformations, begun by ecclesiastical Learning, and supported by Civil Power, will signify little or Nothing, nay often make things worse, till all Churches, dying to all own Will, all own Wisdom, all own Advancement, seek for no Reforming Power but from that Spirit of God which converted Sinners, Publicans, Harlots, Jews, and Heathens, into an holy apostolical Church at the first, a Church which knew they were of God, that they belonged to God, by that Spirit which He had given them, and which worked in them.

24 An Address to the Clergy.

'Ye are not in the Flesh,' says the Apostle, 'but in the Spirit;' but then he adds, as the only Ground of this, 'If so be that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you;' surely he means, if so be ye are moved, guided, and governed by that, which the Spirit wills, works and inspires within you. And then to show the absolute Necessity of this Life of God in the soul, he adds, 'If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.'—And that this is the State to which God has appointed, and called all Christians, he thus declares, 'God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, crying, Abba, Father,' Gal. iv. 6. The same Thing, most surely, as if he had said, Nothing in you can Cry, or Pray to God as its Father, but the Spirit of his son Christ come to Life in you. Which is also as true of every Tendency in the Soul towards God or Goodness ; so much as there is of it, so much there is of the seed of the Woman striving to bring forth a full Birth of Christ in the Soul.

An Address to the Clergy. 25

‘Lo, I am always with you,’ says the holy Jesus, ‘even to the ‘End of the World.’ How is he with us? Not outwardly, every illiterate Man knows ; not inwardly, says many a learned Doctor, because a Christ within us is as gross Enthusiasm, or Quakerism, as the Light within us.—How then shall the faith of the common Christian find any Comfort in these words of Christ’s promise, unless the Spirit brings him into a Remembrance and Belief, that Christ is in him, and with him, as the Vine is with and in the Branch. Christ says, ‘Without me ye ‘can do Nothing ;’ and also, ‘If any man loves me, my Father ‘will Love him, and we will come unto Him, and make our ‘Abode with Him.’ Now if without Him we can do Nothing, then all the Love that a Man can possibly have for Christ, must be from the Power and Life of Christ in Him, and from such a Love, so begotten, Man has the Father and the Son dwelling and making their Abode in Him. What higher Proof, or fuller Certainty can there be, that the Whole Work of Redemption in the Soul of Man is and can be Nothing else, but the inward, continual, immediate Operation of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, raising up again their own first Life in the Soul, to which our first Father died ?

Again, Christ, after his Glorification in Heaven, says, ‘Behold ‘I STAND at the DOOR and KNOCK.’ He does not say, Behold ye have me in the Scriptures. Now what is the DOOR at which Christ, at the Right-hand of God in Heaven, KNOCKS ? Surely it is the Heart, to which Christ is always present. He goes on, IF ANY MAN HEARS MY VOICE ; how hears, but by the hearing of the Heart, or what Voice, but that which is the Speaking or Sounding of Christ within Him ; He adds, AND OPENS THE DOOR, that is, opens his Heart for me, I WILL COME IN TO HIM, that is, will be a living holy Nature, and Spirit born within him, AND SUP WITH HIM, and HE WITH ME.—Behold the last finishing Work of a Redeeming Jesus, entered into the Heart that opens to him, bringing forth the Joy, the Blessing, and Perfection of that first Life of God in the Soul, which was lost by the Fall, set forth as a Supper, or Feast of the Heavenly Jesus with the Soul, and the Soul with him. Can anyone justly call it Enthusiasm to say, that this supping of the Soul with this glorified Christ within it, must mean something more heavenly transacted in the Soul than that last Supper which he celebrated with his Disciples, whilst

26 An Address to the Clergy.

He was with them in Flesh. For that Supper of Bread and Wine was such, as a Judas could partake of, and could only be an outward Type or Signification of that inward and blessed Nourishment, with which the Believing Soul should be feasted, when the glorified Son of God should as a Creating Spirit enter into us, quickening, and raising up his own heavenly Nature and Life within us. Now this continual Knocking of Christ at the Door of the Heart, sets forth the Case or Nature of a continual immediate Divine Inspiration within us; it is always with us, but there must be an opening of the Heart to it; and though it is always there, yet it is only felt and found by those, who are attentive to it, depend upon, and humbly wait for it.—Now let anyone tell me how he can believe any Thing of this Voice of Christ, how he can listen to it, hear, or obey it, but by such a Faith, as keeps him habitually turned to an immediate constant Inspiration of the Spirit of Christ within him? Or how any heathenish profane Person, can do more Despite to this Presence and Power of Christ in his own Soul, or more effectually lead others into it, than that Ecclesiastic, who makes a Mock at the Light within, a Christ within, and openly blasphemes that Faith, and Hope, and Trust, which solely relies upon being moved by the Spirit, as its only Power of doing that which is right, and good, and pious, either towards God or Man.—Let every Man, whom this concerns, lay it to Heart.—Time, and the Things of Time, will soon have an End; and he that in Time trusts to any Thing but the Spirit and Power of God working in his Heart, will be ill fitted to enter into Eternity; God must be all in all in us here, or we cannot be his hereafter.—Time works only for Eternity; and Poverty eternal must as certainly follow him, who dies only fully stuffed with human Learning, as he who dies only full of Worldly Riches.—The Folly of thinking to have any Divine Learning, but that which the Holy Spirit teaches, or to make ourselves rich in Knowledge towards God, by Heaps of Common-Place Learning crowded into our Minds, will leave us as dreadfully cheated, as that rich Builder of Barns in the Gospel, to whom it was said, ‘Thou Fool, this Night, shall thy Soul be ‘required of Thee. And then, whose shall all these Things be?’ Luke xii. So is every Man that treasures up a Religious Learning that comes not wholly from the Spirit of God.—But to return. To this inward continual Attention to the continual working of the holy Spirit within us, the Apostle calls us in these Words, ‘See that ye refuse not him that speaketh; for if they escaped ‘not, who refused him that spoke on Earth, much more shall ‘not we escape, if we turn from Him, that speaketh from Heaven,’ Heb. xii. 25. Now what is this Speaking from Heaven, which it is so dangerous to refuse, or resist? Surely not outward Voices from Heaven. Or what could the Apostle's Advice signify to us, unless it be such a Speaking from Heaven, as we may and must be always either obeying or refusing?—St. James saith, 'Resist the Devil, and he will flee from you.' What Devil? Surely not an outward Creature or Spirit, that tempts us by an outward Power. Or what Resistance can we make to the Devil, but that of inwardly falling away, or turning from the Workings of his evil Nature and Spirit within us?—They therefore who call us from waiting for, depending upon, and attending to the continual secret Inspirations and Breathings of the Holy Spirit within us, call us to RESIST God in the same manner as the Apostle exhorts us to resist the Devil. For God being only a Spiritual Good, and the Devil our Spiritual Evil, neither the one nor the other can be resisted, or not resisted by us, but so far as their Spiritual Operations within us are either turned from, or obeyed by us.—St. James having shown us, that Resisting the Devil is the only Way to make him flee from us, that is, to lose his Power in us, immediately adds, how we are to behave towards God, that He may not flee from us, or his holy Work be stopped in us. 'Draw near,' saith he, 'to God, and God will draw near to you.' What is this Drawing near? Surely not by any local Motion, either in God or us. But the same is meant, as if he had said, Resist not God, that is, let his holy Will within you have its full work; keep wholly, obediently attentive to That, which he is, and has, and does within you, and then God will draw near to you, that is, will more and more manifest the Power of his holy Presence in you, and make you more and more Partakers of the Divine Nature. Further, what a Blindness is it in the forementioned Writers, to charge private Persons with the Enthusiasm of holding the Necessity, and Certainty of continual immediate Inspiration, and to attack them as Enemies to the Established Church, when every Body's Eyes see, that Collect after Collect, in the Established Liturgy, teaches and requires them to believe, and pray for the Continual Inspiration of the Spirit, as that alone, by which they can have the least good Thought, or Desire? Thus, 'O God, Forasmuch as without Thee we are not able to please Thee, mercifully Grant that thy Holy Spirit may in all Things direct and Rule our Hearts.' Is it possible for words more strongly to express the Necessity of a Continual Divine Inspiration? Or can Inspiration be higher, or more immediate in Prophets and Apostles, than that which directs, that which rules our Hearts, not now and then, but in all Things? Or can the absolute Necessity of this be more fully declared, than by saying, that if it is not in this Degree both of Height and continuance in and over our Hearts, Nothing that is done by us can be pleasing to God, that is, can have any Union with him?

An Address to the Clergy. 27

28 An Address to the Clergy.

Now the Matter is not at all about the different Effects or Works proceeding from Inspiration, as whether by it a Man be made a Saint in Himself, or sent by God with a prophetic Message to others, this affects not the Nature and Necessity of Inspiration, which is just as great, just as Necessary in itself to all true Goodness, as to all true Prophecy.—All Scripture is of Divine Inspiration. But why so? ‘Because holy men of Old ‘spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.’ Now the above Collect as well as Christ and his Apostles oblige us in like manner to hold, that all Holiness is by Divine Inspiration, and that therefore there could have been no holy men of old, or in any latter Times, but solely for this Reason, because ‘They ‘LIVED as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.’ Again, The Liturgy prays thus, ‘O God, from whom all good Things do ‘come, grant that by thy holy Inspiration we may think those ‘Things that be good, and by thy merciful Guiding may perform ‘the Same.’—Now, if in any of my Writings I have ever said any thing higher, or further of the Nature and Necessity of continual Divine Inspiration, than this Church-Prayer does, I refuse no Censure that shall be passed upon me. But if I have, from all that we know of God, of Nature, and Creature, shown the utter Impossibility of any Kind, or Degree of Goodness to be in us, but from the Divine Nature living and Breathing in us, if I have shown that all Scripture, Christ and his Apostles, over and over say the same Thing; that our Church Liturgy is daily praying according to it; what kinder Thing can I say of those Churchmen who accuse me of Enthusiasm, than that which Christ said of his blind Crucifiers, ‘Father, forgive them, for they know ‘not what they do.’

It is to no Purpose to object to all this, that these Kingdoms are over-run with Enthusiasts of all Kinds, and that Moravians with their several Divisions, and Methodists of various Kinds, are everywhere acting in the Wildest Manner, under the Pretence of being called and led by the Spirit. Be it so, or not so, is a matter I meddle not with; nor is the Doctrine I am upon in the least affected by it. For what an Argument would this be; Enthusiasts of the present and former Ages have made a bad use of the Doctrine of being led by the Spirit of God, Ergo, ‘He is enthusiastic, or helps forward Enthusiasm, who preaches up the Doctrine ‘of being led by the Spirit of God.’ Now absurd as this is, was any of my Accusers as high in Genius, as bulky in Learning, as Colossus was in Stature, he would be at a Loss to bring a stronger

An Address to the Clergy. 29

Argument than this, to prove me an Enthusiast, or an Abettor of them.

But as I do not begin to doubt about the Necessity, the Truth, and Perfection of Gospel Religion, when told that whole Nations and Churches have, under a Pretence of Regard to it, and for the Sake of it, done all the bad Things that can be charged upon this or that Leading Enthusiast, whether you call those bad Things, Schism, Perjury, Rebellion, Worldly Craft, and Hypocrisy, &c. So I give not up the Necessity, the Truth, and Perfection of looking wholly to the Spirit of God and Christ within me, as my promised Inspirer, and only Worker of all that can be good in me, I give not this up, because in this, or that Age, both Spiritual Pride and Fleshly Lusts have prospered by it, or because Satan has often led People into all the Heights of Self-Glory, and Self-Seeking, under a Pretence of being inspired with Gospel Humility, and Gospel Self-denial.

Another Charge upon me, equally false, and I may say, more senseless, is that I am a declared Enemy to the Use of Reason in Religion. And why? Because in all my Writings, I teach that Reason is to be denied, &c. I own, I have not only taught this, but have again and again proved the absolute Necessity of it. And this, because Christ has made it absolutely Necessary, by saying, 'Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself,' &c. For how can a Man deny himself, without denying his Reason, unless Reason be no Part of Himself? Or how can a rational Creature, whose chief Distinction from Brutes is that of his Reason, be called to deny himself any other Way, than by denying that which is peculiar to Himself? Let the Matter be thus expressed, Man is not to deny his Reason. Well, how then? Why, (N.B.) He is only to deny himself. Can there be a greater Folly of Words? And yet it is their Wisdom of Words, who allow the Denying of self to be good Doctrine, but boggle, and cry out at the denying of Reason, as quite bad. For how can a Man deny himself, but by denying That which is the Life, and Spirit, and Power of Self?—What makes a man a Sinner? Nothing but the Power and Working of his Natural Reason. And therefore, if our natural Reason is not to be denied, we must keep up and follow That which works every Sin that ever was, or can be in us. For we can Sin nowhere, or in any Thing, but where our Natural Reason or Understanding has its Power in us.—What is meant in all Scripture by the Flesh and its Works? Is it something distinct, and different from the Workings of our rational and Intelligent Nature? No, it is our whole intelligent, rational Nature, that constitutes the Flesh or the Carnal Man, who could not be criminally so, any more than the Beasts, but because his Carnality has all its Evil from his intelligent Nature or Reason, being the Life and Power of it. And every Thing which our Lord says of Self, is so much said of our natural Reason; and all that the Scripture says of the Flesh and its evil Nature, is so much said of the evil State of our Natural Reason, which therefore is, ought, and must be denied, in the same manner and Degree as self and Flesh is, and must be denied.

30 An Address to the Clergy.

I have elsewhere shown the Gross Darkness and Ignorance which govern that which is called Metaphysics in the Schools, 'that it is so great, that if you were to say, that God first creates 'a Soul out of Nothing, and when that is done, then takes an 'Understanding Faculty and puts it into it, after that, adds a 'Will, and then a Memory, all as independently made, as when a 'Tailor first makes the Body of a Coat, and then adds sleeves, 'and Pockets to it; were you to say this, the Schools of Des-'cartes, Malebranche, or Locke, could have Nothing to say 'against it.'*

And here Truth obliges me to say, that Scholastic Divinity is in as great Ignorance about the Most fundamental Truths of the Gospel, as I have again and again shown, in Regard to the Nature of the Fall of Man, and all the Scripture Expressions Concerning the new Birth; and here also concerning the Doctrine, of a Man's denying himself, which modern Learning supposes to be possible without, or different from a Man's denying his own natural Reason; Which is an Absurdity of the greatest Magnitude. For what is Self, but that which a man is, and has in his natural Capacity? Or what is the Fulness of his Natural Capacity, but the Strength and Power of his Reason? How then can any Man deny Himself, but by denying that which gives Self its whole Nature, Name, and Power? If man was not a Rational Creature, he could not be called to deny himself, he could not need, or receive the Benefit and Goodness of Self-Denial: No man therefore can obey the Precept of denying Himself, or have any Benefit or Goodness from it, but so far as he denies, or dies to his own natural Reason, because the Self of Man, and the Natural Reason of Man, are Strictly the same Thing.—Again, our Blessed Lord said in his Agony, 'Not my Will, but thine be done.' And had not this been the Form of his whole Life, He had not lived without Sin.—Now Thus to deny our own Will, that God's Will may be done in us, is the Height of our Calling; and so far as we keep from our own Natural Will, so far we keep from Sin. But now, if our own Natural Will, as having all sin and evil in it, is always to be denied, whatever it costs us, I would fain know, how our Natural

* Spirit of Love, First Part.

An Address to the Clergy. 31

Reason can ever escape, or how we can deny our own Will, and not deny that rational or intelligent Power, in and from which the Will has its whole Existence and continual direction? Or how there can be always a Badness of our own Will, which is not the Badness of our own natural intellectual Power? Therefore it is a Truth of the utmost Certainty, that as much as we are obliged to deny our own Natural Will that the Will of God may be done in us, so much are we obliged to deny our own natural Reason and Understanding that our own Will may not be done, or followed by us. For whoever lives to his own natural Reason, he necessarily lives to his own natural Will. For our natural Will, in whatever State it is, is nothing else but our Natural Reason willing this, or that.

Now hard as this may seem to unregenerate Nature, and yet harder to nature highly exalted, and big with the Glory of all That, which Wits, Poets, Orators, Critics, Sophists, and Historians have enriched it with, yet true it is, and a Truth as certain as the Fall of Man, that this full Denial of our own natural Will, and our own Natural Reason, is the only possible Way for Divine Knowledge, Divine Light, and Divine Goodness, to have any Place or Power of Birth in us.—All other religious Knowledge, got any other Way, let it be as great as it will, is only great in Vanity, Emptiness, and Delusion. For Nothing but That which comes immediately from God, can have any Thing godly in it, and all that which comes from Self, and natural Reason, however outwardly coloured, can have no better a Nature within, than Self-seeking, Self-esteem, and fleshly Wisdom, which (N.B.) are those very works of the Devil in us, which Christ came into the World to destroy.—For the Efforts of natural Reason, and Self-abilities, to be great in religious Knowledge from our own particular Talents, are as Satanical Things as any we carry about us, and most of all fix us in the highest Contrariety to that State, which our Lord affirms to be absolutely necessary.

‘Except ye be converted, and become as little Children, ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.’—Now as sure as this is necessary, so sure is it, that no one can be thus converted, or come under the good Influence of this childlike Nature, till natural Reason, Self, and own Will, are all equally denied.—For all the Evil and Corruption of our fallen Nature consists in this, it is an awakened Life of own Reason, own Will broken off from God, and so fallen into the Selfish Workings of its own earthly Nature.

Now whether this Self broken off from God, reasons, wills, and contends about the Difference of Scripture Words and Opinions, or reasons against them all, the same evil State of fallen Nature, the same Loss of Life, the same Separation from God, the same evil Tempers of Flesh and Blood, will be equally strengthened and inflamed by the one as by the other,—Hence it is, that Papists and Protestants are hating, fighting, and killing one another for the Sake of their different excellent Opinions, and yet, as to the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eye, and the Pride of Life, they are in the highest Union and Communion with one Another. For if you expect a zealous Protestant to be therefore a new born Creature alive unto God, or a zealous Papist to be therefore dead to all Divine Goodness, you may be said to have lived in the World without either Eyes or Ears.—And the Reason why it must be so, is because bad Syllogisms for Transubstantiation, and better Syllogisms against it, signify no more towards the Casting Satan out of our Souls, than a bad or better Taste for Painting.

Hence also it is, that Christendom, full of the nicest Decisions about Faith, Grace, Works, Merits, Satisfaction, Heresies, Schisms, &c., is full of all those evil Tempers which prevailed in the heathen World, when none of these things were ever thought of.

A Scholar, pitying the Blindness and Folly of those who live to themselves in the Cares and Pleasures of this vain Life, thinks himself Divinely employed, and to have escaped the Pollutions of the World, because he is, day after day, dividing, dissecting, and mending Church-Opinions, fixing Heresies here, Schisms there; forgetting all the while, that a carnal Self and natural Reason have the doing of all that is done by this learned Zeal, and are as busy and active in him, as in the reasoning Infidel, or projecting Worldling. For where Self is wholly denied, there nothing can be called Heresy, Schism, or Wickedness, but the Want of loving God with our whole Heart, and our Neighbour as ourselves; nor any Thing be called Truth, Life, or Salvation, but the Spirit, Nature, and Power of Christ living and manifesting itself in us, as it did in him. But where Self or the natural Man is become great in Religious Learning, there the greater the Scholar, the more firmly will he be fixed in their Religion, whose God is their Belly. I write not to Reason, says the blessed Jacob Behmen; O Enthusiasm! says the Mouth of Learning: And yet Jacob said as sober a Truth, as if he had said, I write not to Self and own Will; for natural Reason, Self and own Will, always did, and always must see through the same Eyes, and hear through the same Ears. Now let it only be supposed, that Behmen and myself, when we speak of natural Reason, mean only the natural Man (as is over and over declared by us) and then Behmen's saying, that he writes neither from Reason, nor to the natural Reason of others, is only saying that very same Thing as St. Paul says, that 'the natural Man receiveth not the Things of

An Address to the Clergy. 33

‘the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him, (N.B.) neither can he know them, (N.B.) because they are Spiritually ‘discerned.’

But that I may fully show the Perverseness of my Accusers, in charging me with denying the Use of Reason in Religion, see here a Word or two of what I have said at large, and in the plainest Words, more than twenty-four years ago, which Doctrine I have maintained in all that I have since wrote.—My Words are these.

‘You shall see Reason possessed of all that belongs to it. I will grant it to have as great a Share in the good Things of Religion, as in the good Things of this Life; that it can assist the Soul, just as it can assist the Body, that it has the same Power and Virtue in the Spiritual, that it has in the natural World; that it can communicate to us as much of the one, as of the other, and is of the same Use and Importance in the one as in the other. Can you ask more?’ All which I thus make out in the following Manner.

‘Man, considered as a Member of this World, who is to have his Share of the Good that is in it, is a sensible, and a rational Creature, that is, he has a certain Number of Senses, as Seeing, Hearing, Tasting, Touching, and Smelling, by which he is sensible of that which the outward World, in which he is placed, can do for him, or communicate to him, and so is sensible of what Kind and Degree of Happiness he can have from it.

‘Now besides these Organs of Sense, he has a Power or Faculty of Reasoning upon the Ideas, which he has received from these Senses.

‘Now how is it, that the good Things of this World are communicated to Man? How is he put in possession of them? To what Part of him are they proposed? Are his Senses, or his Reason, the Means of his having so much as he has or can have from this World?

‘Now here, you must degrade Reason just as much as it is degraded by Religion, and are obliged to set it as low with Respect to the Things of this World, as it is set with Respect to the Things of the Spiritual World. It is no more the Means of Communicating the good Things of the one, than of the other. And as St. Paul says, “The Natural Man cannot receive the Things of the Spirit of God,” for this Reason, because they are Spiritually discerned; so you must of Necessity say, the Rational Man cannot receive the Things of this World, for this Reason, because they are sensibly received, that is, by the Organs of Sense. Reason therefore has no higher Office or Power in the Things of this World, than in the Things of

34 An Address to the Clergy.

‘ Religion ; and Religion does no more Violence to your Reason, ‘ or rejects it any other Way, than all the good Things of this ‘ World reject it ; it is not Seeing, it is not Hearing, Tasting, or ‘ Feeling the Things of this Life ; it can supply the Place of no ‘ one of these Senses.

‘ Now it is only thus helpless and useless in Religion ; it is ‘ neither Seeing, nor Hearing, Tasting, nor Feeling of Spiritual ‘ Things ; therefore in the Things of Religion, and in the Things ‘ of this World, it has one and the same Insignificance.—It is the ‘ Sensibility of the Soul that must receive what this World can ‘ communicate to it ; it is the Sensibility of the Soul that must ‘ receive what God can communicate : Reason may follow after ‘ in either Case, and view through its own Glass what is done, ‘ but it can do no more. Reason may be here of the same ‘ Service to us, as when we want any of the Enjoyments of this ‘ Life ; it may direct us how and where they are to be had ; it ‘ may take away a Cover from our Eyes, or open our Window- ‘ Shutters when we want the Light ; but it can do no more ‘ towards Seeing, than to make way for the Light to act upon ‘ our Eyes. This is all its Office and Ability in the Things of ‘ Religion ; it may remove that which hinders the Sensibility of ‘ the Soul, or prevents the Divine Light’s acting upon it, but ‘ it can do no more ; because the Faculty of Reasoning is only ‘ the Activity of the Mind upon its own Ideas or Images, which ‘ the Senses have caused it to form from that which has been ‘ stirred up in them, but has Nothing of the Nature of that which ‘ it speculates upon by Ideas ; it does not become dark, when it ‘ reasons upon the Cause or Nature of Darkness, nor becomes ‘ Light, when it reasons about it ; neither is it Religion, nor gets ‘ any Thing of the Nature of Religion, when it is wholly taken ‘ up in Descriptions and Definitions of religious Doctrines and ‘ Virtues.

‘ For the Good of Religion is like the Good of Food and Drink ‘ to the Creature that wants it. And if instead of giving such an ‘ one Bread and Wine, you should teach him to seek for Relief ‘ by attending to clear Ideas of the Nature of Bread, of different ‘ ways of making it, &c., he would be left to die in the Want of ‘ Sustenance, just as the Religion of Reasoning leaves the Soul ‘ to perish in the Want of that Good which it was to have from ‘ Religion. And yet as a Man may have the Benefit of Food ‘ much assisted by the right use of his Reason, though Reason ‘ has not the Good of Food in it, so a Man may have the Good ‘ of Religion much assisted and secured to him, by the right use ‘ of his Reason, though Reason has not the Good of Religion in ‘ it. And as it would be great Folly and Perverseness, to accuse

An Address to the Clergy. 35

‘ a Man as an Enemy to the true Use of Reasoning about Food, because he declares that Reason is not Food, nor can supply the Place of it, so is it equally such, to accuse a Man as an Enemy to the Use of Reasoning in Religion, because he declares that Reasoning is not Religion, nor can supply the Place of it. We have no Want of Religion, but because we want to have more of the Divine Nature in us than we have in our fallen Nature. But if this be the Truth of the Matter (and who can deny it?) then we are sure that nothing can be our Good in Religion, but that which communicates to us something of God, or which alters our State of Existence in God, and makes us Partakers of the Divine Nature, in such a Manner and Degree as we wanted. What a Folly is it then to put any Trust in a Religion of rational Notions and Opinions logically deduced from Scripture Words? Do we not see Sinners of all Sorts, and Men under the Power of every corrupt Passion, equally zealous for such a Religion? Proof enough, that it has not the good of Religion in it, nor any Contrariety to the Vices of the Heart; it neither kills them, nor is killed by them. For as Pride, Hypocrisy, Envy or Malice, do not take away from the Mind its Geometrical or Critical Abilities; so a Man may be most logical in his Religion of Reason, Words, Doctrines, and Opinions, when he has Nothing of the true Good of Religion in him.

‘ But as soon as it is known and confessed, that all the Happiness or Misery of all Creatures consists only in this, as they are more or less possessed of God, or as they differently partake of the Divine Nature, then it must be equally known, that Nothing but God can do or be any religious Good to us, and also that God cannot do, or be any religious Good to us, but by the Communication of himself, or the Manifestation of his own Life within us.’

Hence may be seen the great and like Blindness both of Infidels and Christians; the one in trusting to their own Reason dwelling in its own logical Conclusions; the other in trusting to their own Reason dwelling in learned Opinions about Scripture Words and Phrases, and Doctrines built upon them. ‘ For as soon as it is known and confessed, that God is all in all, that in him we live and move and have our Being, that we can have Nothing separately, or out of him, but every Thing in Him, that we have no Being or Degree of Being but in Him, that He can give us Nothing as our good but Himself, nor any Degree of Salvation from our fallen Nature, but in such Degree as he again Communicates something more of Himself to us, as soon as this is known, then it is known with the utmost Evidence,

36 An Address to the Clergy.

‘that to put a religious Trust in our own Reason, whether Confined to itself, or Working in Doctrines about Scripture Words, has the Nature of that same Idolatry that puts a religious Trust in the Sun, a departed Saint, or a graven Image.* And as Image-Worship has often boasted of its Divine Power, because of the Wonders of Zeal and Devotion that have been raised thereby in thousands, and ten thousands of its Followers, so it is no Marvel, if Opinion-Worship should often have and boast of the Same Effects.—But the Truth of the whole Matter lies here: As the WORD manifested in the Flesh or become Man, is the one Mediator, or Restorer of Union between God and Man, so to seeing Eyes it must be evident, that Nothing but this one Mediatorial Nature of Christ, essentially brought to Life in our Souls, can be our Salvation through Christ Jesus. For that which saved and exalted that Humanity in which Christ dwelt, must be the Salvation of every human Creature in the World. But to return. What poor Divinity Knowledge comes from great Scholars, and great Readers, may be sufficiently seen from the two following judicious Quotations in a late Dissertation on Enthusiasm; the one is taken from Dr. Warburton’s sermons, the other from a Pastoral Letter of Mr. Stinstra, a Preacher among the Mennonists of Friesland. That from Dr. Warburton stands thus: ‘By them (that is, by the Writings of the New Testament) the prophetic Promise of our Saviour, that the Comforter should abide for ever, was eminently fulfilled. For though his ordinary Influence occasionally assists the Faithful, yet his constant Abode and Supreme Illumination is in the Sacred Scriptures.’† Dr. Warburton’s Doctrine is this, that the inspired Books of the New Testament is that Comforter, or Spirit of Truth, and Illuminator, which is meant by Christ’s being always with his Church. Let us therefore put the Doctor’s Doctrine into the Letter of the Text, which will best show how true or false it is.

Our Lord says, ‘It is expedient for you that I go away, or the Comforter will not come;’ that is, it is expedient for you, that I leave off teaching you in Words, that sound only into your outward Ears, that you may have the same Words in Writing, for your outward Eyes to look upon; for if I do not depart from this vocal Way of Teaching you, the Comforter will not come, that is, ye will not have the Comfort of my Words written on Paper. But if I go away, I will send Written Books, which shall lead you into such a Truth of Words as you could not have, whilst they were only spoken from my Mouth; but being written on Paper, they will be my spiritual, heavenly, constant Abode with you, and the most supreme Illumination you can receive from Me.

* Demonstration of the Gross Errors in the Plain Account, &c.

† Dissertation, page 10.

An Address to the Clergy. 37

Christ says further: 'I have many Things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now: howbeit when He, the Spirit of Truth, is come, He shall guide you into all Truth; for He shall not speak of Himself, for He shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you;' that is, though you cannot be sufficiently instructed from my Words at present, yet when they shall hereafter come to you in Written Books, they will give you a knowledge of all Truth, for they shall not speak of themselves, but shall receive words from me, and show them unto you. Again, Christ says, 'These things have I spoken unto you in Proverbs; but the Time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in Proverbs, but will show you plainly of the Father.' That is, hitherto you have only had spoken Proverbs from me, and therefore you have not plainly known the Father; but the time cometh when these spoken Proverbs shall be put into Writing, and then you shall plainly know the Father. Again, Christ adds, 'Ye now therefore have Sorrow, but I will see you again, and your hearts shall rejoice, and your Joy no Man taketh from you.' That is, you are now troubled at my personal Departure from you, but some written Books shall be my seeing you again, and in that Visit you shall have such Joy as cannot be taken from you.

Christ also says, 'If any Man loves me, my Father will Love him, and we will come unto him and make our Abode with Him.' That is, according to the Doctor's Theology, certain Books of Scripture will come to him, and make their Abode with him; for he expressly confines the constant Abode and supreme Illumination of God to the holy Scriptures. Therefore (horrible to say) God's inward Presence, his operating Power of Life and Light in our Souls, his Dwelling in us, and we in Him, is something of a lower Nature, that only may occasionally happen, and has less of God in it than the dead Letter of Scripture, which alone is his Constant Abode and Supreme illumination.—Miserable Fruits of a paradoxical Genius!

Christ from Heaven says, 'Behold I stand at the Door, and knock; if any man hear my Voice, and open unto me, I will come into him, and sup with him.' This is his true eminent Fulfilling of his prophetic Promise of being a Comforter, and Spirit of Truth to his Church to the end of the World. But according to the Doctor, we are to understand, that not the heavenly Christ, but the New Testament continually stands and knocks at the Door, wanting to enter into the Heart, and sup with it; which is no better than holding, that when Christ calls himself Alpha and Omega, He means not himself, but the New Testament.—Again, ‘I am the Vine, ye are the Branches; as ‘the Branch cannot bear Fruit of itself, except it abide in the ‘Vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me; for without me, ‘ye can do Nothing.’ Now take the Doctor’s Comment, and then the Truth of all these Words of Christ was only temporary, and could be true no longer, than till the Books of the New Testament were written; for then all this, which Christ has affirmed of himself, of the Certainty and Necessity of his Life and Power in them, ended in Christ, and passed over to the Written Words of the New Testament, and they are the true Vine, and we its Branches, they are That without which we can do Nothing. For thus it must be, if, as the Doctor affirms, the Writings of the New Testament are that, by which we are to understand the constant Abode and supreme Illumination of God in Man.—Now absurd, and even blasphemous, as this Interpretation of the foregoing Text is, it must be evident to every Reader, that it is all the Doctor’s own; for the Letter of Scripture is only made here to claim that Divinity to itself, which the Doctor has openly affirmed to be true of it.

38 An Address to the Clergy.

‘Rabbi,’ says Nicodemus to Christ, ‘we know that thou art a ‘Teacher come from God.’ Now that which was here truly said of Christ in the Flesh, is the very Truth that must be said of the Scripture teaching in Ink and Paper; it is a Teacher come from God, and therefore fully to be believed, highly revered, and strictly followed. But as Christ’s Teaching in the Flesh was only preparatory to his future vital Teaching by the Spirit, so the Teaching of Scripture by words written with Ink and Paper is only preparatory, or introductory to all that inward essential Teaching of God, which is by his Spirit and Truth within us.—Every other Opinion of the holy Scripture, but that of an outward Teacher and Guide to God’s inward Teaching and Illumination in our Souls, is but making an Idol-God of it: I say an Idol-God; for to those who rest in it as the Constant Abode and Supreme Illumination of God with them, it can be Nothing else. For, if Nothing of Divine Faith, Love, Hope, or Goodness, can have the least Birth, or Place in us, but by Divine Inspiration, they who think these Virtues may be sufficiently raised in us by the Letter of Scripture, do in Truth and Reality make the Letter of Scripture their Inspiring God.—The Apostles preached and wrote to the People by Divine Inspiration. But what do they say of their inspired Doctrine and Teachings? What Virtue or Power was there in them? Do they say, that their Words and Teachings were the very promised Comforter, the Spirit of Truth, the true Abode and Supreme Illumination of God in the Souls of Men? So far from such a blasphemous Thought, that they affirm the direct contrary, and compare all their inspired Teachings and Instructions to the dead Works of bare Planting and Watering, and which must continue dead, till Life comes into them from another and much higher Power. 'I have planted,' says St. Paul, 'Apollos has watered, but God gave the Increase.' And then further to show that this Planting and Watering, which was the highest Work that an inspired Apostle could do, was yet in itself to be considered as a lifeless, powerless Thing, he adds, 'So then, neither is he that planteth any thing, nor he that watereth, but God that giveth the Increase.'—But now, if this must be said of all That which the inspired Apostles taught in outward Words, that it was nothing in itself, was without Power, without Life, and only such a Preparation towards Life, as is that of Planting and Watering, must not that same be said of their inspired Teachings, when left behind them in Writing? For what else are the Apostolical Scriptures, but those very Instructions and Teachings put into Writing, which they affirmed to be but bare Planting and Watering, quite powerless in themselves, till the Living Spirit of God worked with them? Or will anyone say, that what Paul, Peter, John, &c., spoke by Inspiration from their own Mouths, was indeed bare Planting and Watering, in order to be capable of receiving Life from God; but when these apostolical Teachings and Instructions were written on Paper, they were raised out of their first Inability, got the Nature of God himself, became Spirit and Life, and might be called the great quickening Power of God, or, as the Doctor says, the Constant Abode and Supreme Illumination of his Spirit with us?

An Address to the Clergy. 39

It would be great Folly and Perverseness, to charge me here with slighting, or lessening the true Value, Use, and Importance of the inspired Apostolical Scriptures; for if the Charge was just, it must lie against Paul, and not against me, since I say nothing of them, but that which He says, and in his own express Words, viz., that all their Labour of Preaching, instructing, and Writing by Divine Inspiration, had in themselves no other Nature, Use, or Power, than that of such Planting and Watering as could not fructify till a higher Power than was in them gave Life and Growth to that which they planted and watered.

I exceedingly love, and highly reverence the Divine Authority of the sacred Writings of the Apostles and Evangelists, and would gladly persuade everyone, to be as deeply affected with them, and pay as profound a Regard to them, as they would to an Elijah, a St. John Baptist, or a Paul, whom they knew to be immediately sent from Heaven with God's Message to them.—I reverence them as a literal Truth of and from God, as much the greatest heavenly Blessing that can be outwardly bestowed upon us.—I reverence them as doing, or fitted to do all that good amongst Christians now, which the Apostles did in their Day, and as of the same Use and Benefit to the Church of every Age, as their Planting and Watering was to the first.

40 An Address to the Clergy.

But now, if this is not thought that Fulness of Regard that is due to the holy Messengers of God; if anyone will still be so learnedly wise, as to affirm, that though Paul's Preaching in his Epistles, whilst He was alive, was indeed only bare Planting and Watering, but the same Epistles, being published after his Death, got another Nature, became full of Divine and living Power, such a one has no Right to laugh (as the Doctor does) at the silly Mahometan, who believes the Alcoran to be uncreated. For wherever there is Divine Efficacy, there, there must be an uncreated Power. And if, as the Doctor says, the Scriptures of the New Testament are the only constant Abode and Supreme Illumination of the Spirit of God with us, all that is said of the Eternal Spirit of God, of the uncreated Light, might and ought to be said of them; that they are the WORD that was God, was with God, and are our true Immanuel, or God within us.

I shall now only add this friendly hint to the Doctor, that he has a Remedy at hand in his own Sermon, how he may be delivered from thus grossly Mistaking the Spirit of the Gospel, as well as the Law of Moses.—St. Paul, (says the Doctor) 'had a 'quick and lively Imagination, and an extensive and intimate 'Acquaintance with those Masters in moral Painting, the classic 'Writers, (N.B.) all which he proudly sacrificed to the Glory of 'the everlasting Gospel.'*

Now if the Doctor did that, though it was only from Humility, which he says the Apostle did proudly, such Humility might be as great a Good to him, as that Pride was to the Apostle.—And indeed, one would have thought, that as soon as the Doctor had discovered these Writers to be only great Masters in moral Painting, it should have had the same effect upon him, as if he had found them great Masters in Delusion. For where there is Moral Painting, there, there is moral Delusion. And the Spirit, the Life, the Purity, and Divine Simplicity of Gospel Truth, is more eluded, lost, and destroyed by moral Paintings, whether in Books or Pulpits, than by any material Colourings put upon Images of Wood or Clay, to excite Spiritual Devotion in Churches.—Again, if the everlasting Gospel is now as glorious a Thing, as it was in St. Paul's Days; if the highest, most accomplished classic Knowledge is so unsuitable to the Light and Spirit of the Gospel, that it is fit for Nothing but to be cast away, or as the Doctor says, 'to be all sacrificed to the Glory of the 'Gospel,' how wonderful is it, that this should never come into his head from the Beginning to the End of his three long Legation-Volumes, or that he should come piping hot with fresh and fresh classic Beauties found out by himself in a Shakespeare, a Pope, &c., to preach from the Pulpit the Divine Wisdom of a Paul, in renouncing all his great Classic Attainments, as mere loss and Dung, that by so doing he might win Christ, and be found in him!

* Sermons, vol. i., page 229.

An Address to the Clergy. 41

Let it be supposed, that our Lord was to come again for a while in the Flesh, and that his coming was for this end, to do that for the Christian World cumbered with much Learning, which he did to poor Martha, only cumbered with much Serving, who thereby neglected that Good Part which Mary had chosen; must we suppose that the Doctor would hasten to meet him with his Sacred Alliances, his Bundles of Pagan Trash, and hieroglyphic Profundities, as his full Proof that Mary's good Part, which shall never be taken from her, had been chosen for himself and all his Readers? As well might it be thought, that the Pope would come richly laden with his blessed Images, his heavenly Decrees, his Divine Bulls, as infallible Proofs of his being born again from above, and solely devoted to the one Thing Needful.

Let the Doctor figure to himself the gaudy Pageantry of a Divine high Mass in a Romish Cathedral; let him wonder at that flagrant daring Contrariety that it hath to that first Gospel-Church of Christ, viz., 'where two or three are gathered together 'in my Name, there am I in the midst of them'; would he not be still fuller of Wonder, if he should hear the Pope declaring, that all this heathenish show of invented Fopperies was his projected Defence of that first Church of Christ?—But if the Doctor would see a Protestant Wonder full as great, he need only look at his own theatrical parading Show of heathen Mysteries, and heathenish Learning, set forth in highest Pomp. To what End? Why to bring forth, what he calls (as the Pope above) his projected Defence of Christianity.

O vainest of all vain Projects! For what is Christianity, but that which Christ was while on Earth? What can it be, but that which it is, and has from him? He is a King, who has all Power in Heaven and on Earth, and his Kingdom, like himself, is not of this World. Away then with the Projects of popish Pomp, and pagan Literature to support it; they are as wise Contrivances, as a high Tower of Babel to defend it against the gates of Hell.

42 An Address to the Clergy.

I come now to the Quotation from the pastoral Letter of Mr. Stinstra. 'A judicious Writer' (says the Dissertation), 'observes, that Sound Understanding and Reason are That on which, 'and by which, God principally operates (N.B.) when he finds it 'proper to assist (N.B.) our weakness by his Spirit.'*

I cannot more illustrate the Sense, or extol the Judgment, both of the Author, and Quoter of this Striking Passage, than by the following Words.

'A judicious Naturalist observes, that Sound and Strong Lungs 'are that on which, and by which, the Air or Spirit of this World 'principally operates, when (N.B.) he finds it proper to assist, '(N.B.) the Weakness of our Lungs, by his Breathing into them.'—Now if any right minded Man should happen to find his Heart edified, his Understanding enlightened, by the above Passage on Divine Inspiration, he will be much pleased at my assuring him, that the Pastoral Letter of Mr. Stinstra, and the Dissertation on Enthusiasm by Mr. Green, are from the Beginning to the End full as good, in every Respect, as that is.

These two Instances are Proof enough, that as soon as any Man trusts to natural Abilities, Skill in Languages, and common-place Learning, as the true Means of entering into the Kingdom of God, a Kingdom, which is Nothing else but Righteousness, Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghost, he gives himself up to certain Delusion, and can escape no Error that is popular, or that suits his State and Situation in the learned, religious World.—He has sold his Birth-right in the Gospel State of Divine Illumination, to make a Figure and Noise with the Sounding Brass and Tinkling Cymbals of the natural Man.

Whence is it, that we see Genius and natural Abilities to be equally pleased with, and equally contending for the Errors and Absurdities of every System of Religion, under which they are educated? It is because Genius and Natural Abilities are just the same Things, and must have the same Nature now, as they had in the ancient Schools of the Peripatetic, Academic, Stoic, and Atheistical Philosophers.—'The Temptation of Honour, which the 'Academic Exercise of Wit' (as Dr. W. says) 'was supposed to 'bring to its Professor,'† has still its Power among Church-Disputants. Nor can it possibly ever be otherwise, till Parts and Genius, &c., do, as the Blind, the Deaf, the Dumb, and Lepers formerly did, go to be healed of their natural Disorders by the Inspiration of that Oracle, who said, 'I am the Light of 'the World, He that followeth me, walketh not in Darkness.'—'No Man cometh unto the Father but by me.'—Well therefore might St. Paul say, 'I have determined to know Nothing among 'you, but Christ, and him crucified.'—And had it not been for this Determination, he had never known, what he then knew, when he said, 'The Life that I now live, is not mine, but Christ's 'that liveth in me.'—Now did the Apostle here overstretch the Matter? Was it a Spirit of Enthusiasm, and not of Christ living in him, that made this Declaration? Was He here making Way for Ignorance and Darkness to extinguish the Light that came down from Heaven, and was the Light of the World?—Did he here undermine the true Ground and Rock on which the Church of Christ was to stand, and prevail against the Gates of Hell? Did he by setting up this Knowledge, as the best and only Knowledge that an apostle need to have, break down the Fences of Christ's Vineyard, rob the Church of all its strong Holds, leave it defenceless, without a Pale, and a ready Prey to Infidels?—Who can say this, but that 'Spirit of Antichrist, that confesseth 'not that Jesus Christ is come in the Flesh?' For, as Christ's intending Nothing, knowing Nothing, willing Nothing, but purely and solely the whole Course of his crucifying Process, was the whole Truth of his being come in the Flesh, was his doing the whole Will of him that sent him, was his overcoming the World, Death, and Hell, so He that embraces this Process, as Christ embraces it, who is wholly given up to it, as Christ was, He has the Will of Christ; and the Mind of Christ, and therefore may well desire to know Nothing else.—To this Man alone, is the World, Death, and Hell, known to be overcome in him, as they were in Christ; to him alone is Christ become the Resurrection and the Life; and he that knows this, he knows with St. Paul that all other Knowledge may, and will be cast away as Dung.—Now if St. Paul, having rejected all other Knowledge but that of a crucified Saviour, which to the Jew was a Stumbling-Block, and to the Greek Foolishness, if he had afterwards wrote three such Legation-Volumes as the Doctor has done, for the Food and Nourishment of Christ's Sheep, who can have no Life in them but by eating the true Bread that came down from Heaven, must they not have been called Paul's full Recantation of all that he had taught of a Christ crucified?

* Dissertation, page 73.

† Divine Legation of Moses, Book I., page 33.

An Address to the Clergy. 43

The other Instance of Delusion from Book-learning, relates to Mr. Green, who wanting to write on Divine Inspiration, runs from Book to Book, from Country to Country, to pick up Reports wherever he could find them, concerning Divine Inspiration, from this and that judicious Author, that so he might be sure of compiling a Judicious Dissertation on the Subject. All which he might have known to be mere Delusion and lost Labour, had he but remembered, or regarded any one single Saying either of Christ or his Apostles concerning the holy Spirit and his Operations. For not a Word is said by them, but fully shows that all Knowledge or Perception of the Spirit is nothing else but the Enjoyment of the Spirit, and that no Man can know more of him than that which the Spirit himself is, and does, and manifests of his Power in Man.

44 An Address to the Clergy.

'The Things of God,' says St. Paul, 'knoweth no Man, but 'the Spirit of God.' Is not this decisive upon the Matter? Is not this Proof enough, that Nothing in Man but the Spirit of God in him, can know what the Spirit's work in Man is and does? The Fruits of the Spirit, so often mentioned in Scripture, are not Things different, or separate from the Spirit; and if the Spirit is not always working in us, his Fruits must be as absent from us as He is. St. John says, 'Hereby we know that he 'abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.' A Demonstration, that the Spirit can no other way make himself known to us, but by his dwelling and working in us. St. James says, 'Every good and perfect Gift cometh from ABOVE': But now does not he in reality deny this, who seeks for the highest Gift of Knowledge from BELOW, from the poor Contrivance of a Common-Place Book? Again, 'if any Man lacketh Wisdom, 'let him ask it of God'; St. James does not say, let him go ask Peter, or Paul, or John, because he knew that Divine Wisdom was Nothing else, but Divine Inspiration.—But Mr. Green has got together his ingenious, his eminent Writers, his excellent, learned, judicious Authors, his cool, rational-morality Doctors (a Set of Men whose glorious Names we read no more of in the Gospel, than of the profound Aristotle, or the Divine Cicero) and these are to do that for him, which the whole College of Apostles could do for nobody.—Now this Doctrine, that Nothing but the Spirit can know the Things that be of God, and that the Enjoyment of the Spirit, is all the Knowledge we can have of him, is a Truth taught us, not only by all Scripture, but by the whole Nature of Things. For every Thing that can be seen, known, heard, felt, &c., must be manifested by itself, and not by another. It is not possible for any Thing but Light to manifest Light, nor for any Thing but Darkness to make Darkness to be known. Yet this is more possible, than for any Thing but Divine Inspiration to make Divine Inspiration to be known. Hence there is a Degree of Delusion still higher, to be noted in such Writers as Mr. Green; for his Collection of ingenious, eminent, rational Authors, of whom he asks Counsel concerning the Necessity or Certainty of the immediate Inspiration of the Spirit, are such as deny it, and write against it. Therefore the Proceeding is just as wise, as if a Man was to consult some ingenious and eminent Atheists, about the Truth and Certainty of God's immediate continual Providence ; or ask a few select Deists, how, or what he was to believe of the Nature and Power of Gospel Faith. Now there are the Holy Spirit's own Operations, and there are Reports about them. The only true Reports, are those that are made by inspired Persons ; and if there were no such Persons, there could be no true Reports of the Matter. And therefore to consult uninspired Persons, and such as deny and reproach the Pretence to Inspiration, to be rightly instructed about the Truth of immediate continual Divine Inspiration, is a Degree of Blindness greater than can be charged upon the old Jewish Scribes and Pharisees.

An Address to the Clergy. 45

The Reports that are to be acknowledged as true concerning the Holy Spirit and his Operations, are those that are recorded in Scripture ; that is, the Scriptures are an infallible History, or Relation of that which the Holy Spirit is, and does, and works in true Believers ; and also an infallible Direction how we are to seek, and wait, and trust in his good Power over us. But then the Scriptures themselves, though thus true and infallible in these Reports and Instructions about the Holy Spirit, yet they can go no further than to be a true History ; they cannot give to the Reader of them the Possession, the Sensibility, and Enjoyment of that which they relate. This is plain, not only from the Nature of a written History or Instruction, but from the express Words of our Lord, saying, 'Except a Man be born again of the Spirit, he cannot see or enter into the Kingdom of God.' Therefore the new Birth from above, or of the Spirit, is that alone which gives true knowledge and Perception of that which is the Kingdom of God. The History may relate Truths enough about it ; but the Kingdom of God, being Nothing else but the Power and Presence of God, dwelling and ruling in our Souls, this can only manifest itself, and can manifest itself to Nothing in Man but to the New Birth. For every Thing else in Man is deaf and dumb and blind to the Kingdom of God ; but when that which died in Adam is made alive again by the quickening Spirit from above, this being the Birth which came at first from God, and a Partaker of the Divine Nature, this knows, finds, and enjoys the Kingdom of God.

'I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life,' says Christ : this Record of Scripture is true ; but what a Delusion, for a Man to think that he knows and finds this to be true, and that Christ is all this Benefit and Blessing to him, because he assents, consents, and contends, it may be, for the Truth of those Words. This is impossible. The new Birth is here again the Only Power of Entrance ; every Thing else knocks at the Door in vain : I know you not says Christ to every Thing, but the New Birth.—'I am

46 An Address to the Clergy.

'the way, the Truth and the Life;' this tells us neither more nor less, than if Christ had said, I am the Kingdom of God, into which Nothing can enter, but that which is born of the Spirit.

Here again may be seen, in the highest Degree of certainty, the absolute Necessity of immediate Divine Inspiration through every Part of the Christian Life. For if a Birth of the Spirit is that alone that can enter into, or receive the Kingdom of God come amongst Men, that alone which can find Christ to be the Way, the Truth and the Life, then a Continual Life or Breathing of the Spirit in us, must be as Necessary as the first Birth of the Spirit. For a Birth of the Spirit is only to make a Beginning of a Life of the Spirit: Birth is only in order to Life; if therefore the Life of the Spirit continues not, the Birth is lost, and the Cessation of its Breathing in us is nothing else but Death again to the Kingdom of God, that is, to every Thing that is or can be Godly. Therefore the immediate continual Inspiration of the Spirit, as the only possible Power and Preservation of a Godly Life, stands upon the same Ground, and is as absolutely necessary to Salvation, as the new Birth.

Take away this Power and working Life of the Spirit from being the one Life of all that is done in the Church, and then, though it be ever so outwardly glorious in its Extent, or ever so full of learned Members, it can be Nothing else in the sight of God but the wise Greeks and the carnal Jews become a Body of water-baptized Christians. For no one can be in a better State than this, the Wisdom of the Greek, the Carnality of the Jew, must have the whole Government of him, till he is born of and led by the Spirit of God; this alone is the Kingdom of God, and every Thing else is the Kingdom of this World, in which Satan is declared to be the Prince.—Poor, miserable Man! that strives, with all the Sophistry of human Wit, to be delivered from the immediate continual Operation and Government of the Spirit of God, not considering, that where God is not, there is the devil, and where the Spirit rules not, there all is the Work of the Flesh, though nothing be talked of but Spiritual and Christian Matters. I say talked of; for the best Ability of the natural Man can go no further than Talk, and Notions, and Opinions about Scripture Words and Facts; in these, he may be a great Critic, an acute Logician, a powerful Orator, and know everything of Scripture, except the Spirit and the Truth.

How much then is it to be lamented, as well as impossible to be denied, that though all Scripture assures us, that the Things of the Spirit of God are and must, to the end of the World, be Foolishness to the natural Man, yet from one end of learned Christendom to the other, nothing is thought of as the true and proper means of attaining Divine Knowledge, but that which every natural, selfish, proud, envious, false, vain-glorious, worldly Man can do. Where is that Divinity Student who thinks, or was ever taught to think, of partaking of the Light of the Gospel any other Way, than by doing with the Scriptures that which he does with Pagan Writers, whether Poets, Orators, or Comedians, viz., exercise his Logic, Rhetoric, and critical skill, in descanting upon them? This done, he is thought by himself, and often by others, to have a sufficiency of Divine apostolical Knowledge. What Wonder therefore, if it should sometimes happen, that the very same vain, corrupt, puffing Literature, that raises one Man to be a Poet-Laureate, should set another in a Divinity Chair?

An Address to the Clergy. 47

How is it that the logical, critical, learned Deist comes by his Infidelity? Why just by the same Help of the same good Powers of the Natural Man, as many a learned Christian comes to know, embrace, and contend for the Faith of the Gospel. For, drop the Power and Reality of Divine Inspiration, and then all is dropped that can set the Believer above, or give him any Godly Difference from the Infidel. For the Christian's Faith has no Goodness in it, but that it comes from above, is born of the Spirit; and the Deist's Infidelity has no Badness in it, but because it comes from below, is born of the Will of Flesh and of the Will of Men, and rejects the Necessity of being born again out of the Corruption of fallen Nature. The Christian therefore that rejects, reproaches, and writes against the Necessity of immediate Divine Inspiration, pleads the whole cause of Infidelity; he confirms the Ground, on which it stands; and has Nothing to prove the Goodness of his own Christianity, but that which equally proves to the Deist the Goodness of his Infidelity. For without the New Birth, or which is the same Thing, without immediate continual Divine Inspiration, the Difference between the Christian and the Infidel is quite lost; and whether the uninspired unregenerate Son of Adam be in the Church, or out of the Church, he is still that Child of this World, that fallen Adam, and mere natural Man, to whom the Things of the Spirit of God are and must be Foolishness. For a full Proof of this no more need be seen, than that which you cannot help seeing, that the same shining Virtues, and the same glaring Vices are common to them both. For the Christian, not made such by the Spirit of God continually inspiring and working in him, has only a Christianity of his own making, and can have only such Appearances of Virtues, and will have such Reality of Vices, as natural Self wants to have. Let him therefore renounce what is called natural Religion as much as he will, yet unless he is a new born and Divinely inspired Christian, he must live and die in all his natural Corruption.

48 An Address to the Clergy.

Through all Scripture nothing else is aimed at or intended for Man, as his Christianity, but the Divine Life, nor any Thing hinted at, as having the least Power to raise or beget it, but the holy Life-giving Spirit of God.—How gross therefore is that Blindness, which reading the Gospel, and the History of Gospel Christians, cannot see these two fundamental Truths, (1) ‘That Nothing is Divine Knowledge in Man, but the Divine Life:’ (2) ‘That the Divine Life is Nothing else but a Birth of the ‘Divine Nature within him’?

But this Truth being lost or given up, vain Learning and a worldly Spirit, being in Possession of the Gospel-Book, set up Kingdoms of Strife and Division.—For what End? Why, that the Unity of the Church may not be lost. Multiply Systems of empty Notions and Opinions: For what? Why, that Words and Forms may do that for the Church now, which to the first Church, of Christ’s own forming, could only be done by being born of the Spirit.

Hence it is, that the Scripture-Scholar is looked upon as having Divine Knowledge of its Matters, when he is as ready at Chapter and Verse, as the Critic is at every Page of Cicero. And nothing is looked upon as defective in Divinity Knowledge, but such supposed Mistakes of the Genius of the Hebrew, or Greek Letter, as the sublime Students of the immortal Words of a Milton, or a Shakespeare, charge as Blunders upon one another.

Now to call such Scripture Skill Divine Knowledge, is just as solid and judicious, as if a Man was said, or thought to know, that which St. John knew, because he could say his whole Gospel and Epistles by Heart, without missing a Word of them. For a literal Knowledge of Scripture is but like having all Scripture in the Memory, and is so far from being a Divine Perception of the Things spoken of, that the most vicious wicked Scholar in the World may attain to the highest Perfection in it. But Divine Knowledge and Wickedness of Life are so inconsistent, that they are mutual Death and Destruction to one another; where the one is alive, the other must be dead.—Judas Iscariot knew Jesus Christ, and all that he said and did to his Crucifixion; he knew what it was to be at the Lord’s Table, and to partake of his Supper of Bread and Wine. But yet, with much more Truth it may be said, that he knew nothing of all this, and had no better a Knowledge of it than Pontius Pilate had. Now all Knowledge of Christ, but that which is from Divine Inspiration, or the New-Birth, is but as poor and profitless, as Judas his Knowledge was. It may say to Christ, as he did, Hail Master; but no one can call Jesus Lord, but by the Holy Spirit.—This empty Letter-learned Knowledge, which the natural Man can as easily have of the Sacred Scripture and Religious Matters, as of any other Books or human Affairs, this being taken for Divine Knowledge, has spread such Darkness and Delusion all over Christendom, as may be reckoned no less than a general Apostasy from the Gospel State of Divine Illumination. For the Gospel State is in its whole Nature nothing else; it has but one Light, and that is the Lamb of God; it has but one Life, and that is by the Spirit of God. Whatever is not of and from this Light, and governed by this Spirit, call it by what high Name you will, is no more a Part of the Gospel State, nor will have a better End, than that which entereth into the Mouth, and corrupteth in the Belly.

An Address to the Clergy. 49

That one Light and Spirit, which was only one from all Eternity, before Angels or any heavenly Beings were created, must to all Eternity be that one only Light and Spirit, by which Angels or Men can ever have any Union or Communion with God.—Every other Light is but the Light whence Beasts have their Sense and Subtlety; every other Spirit, is but that which gives to Flesh and Blood all its Lusts and Appetites.—Nothing else but the Loss of the one Light and Spirit of God turned an Order of Angels into Devils.—Nothing else but the Loss of that same Light and Spirit took from the Divine Adam his first Crown of paradisaical Glory, stripped him more naked than the Beasts, and left him a Prey to Devils, and in the Jaws of eternal Death.—What therefore can have the least Share of Power towards Man's Redemption, but the Light and Spirit of God making again a Birth of themselves in Him, as they did in his first glorious Creation? Or what can possibly begin, or bring forth this Return of his first lost Birth, but solely that which is done by this eternal Light and Spirit.—Hence it is, that the Gospel State is by our Lord affirmed to be a Kingdom of Heaven at Hand, or come among Men, because it has the Nature of no worldly Thing or creaturely Power, is to serve no worldly Ends, can be helped by no worldly Power, receives nothing from Man but Man's full denial of himself, stands upon nothing that is finite or transitory, has no Existence but in that working Power of God that created and upholds Heaven and Earth, and is a Kingdom of God become Man, and a Kingdom of Men united to God, through a continual immediate Divine Illumination. What Scripture of the New Testament can you read, that does not prove this to be the Gospel State, a Kingdom of God, into which none can enter but by being born of the Spirit, none can continue to be alive in it but by being led by the Spirit, and in which not a Thought, or Desire, or Action, can be allowed to have any Part in it, but as it is a Fruit of the Spirit?

'Thy Kingdom come, thy Will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven.' What is God's Kingdom in Heaven, but the Manifestation of what God is, and what He does in his heavenly Creatures? How is his Will done there, but because his Holy Spirit is the Life, the Power, and Mover of all that live in it.—We daily read this Prayer, we extol it under the Name of the Lord's Prayer, and yet (for the Sake of Orthodoxy) preach and write against all that is prayed for in it. For nothing but a continual, essential, immediate Divine Illumination can do that which we pray may be done.

For where can God's Kingdom be come, but where every other Power but his is at an End, and driven out of it? How can his Will only be done, but where the Spirit that wills in God wills in the Creature?

What now have Parts, and Literature, and the natural Abilities of Man, that they can do here? Just as much as they can do at the Resurrection of the Dead; for all that is to be done here is nothing else but Resurrection and Life. Therefore, that which gave Eyes to the Blind, cleansed the Lepers, cast out Devils, and raised the Dead, that alone can and must do all that is to be done in this Gospel Kingdom of God. For every the smallest Work or Fruit of Grace must be as solely done by God, as the greatest Miracle in Nature; and the Reason is, because every Work of Grace is the same overcoming of Nature, as when the Dead are raised to Life.—Yet vain Man would be thought to be something, to have great Power and Ability in this Kingdom of Grace, not because he happens to be born of noble Parents, is clothed in Purple and fine Linen, and fares sumptuously every Day, but because he has happened to be made a Scholar, has run through all Languages and Histories, has been long exercised in Conjectures and Criticisms, and has his Head as full of all Notions, theological, poetical, and philosophical, as a Dictionary is full of all Sorts of Words.

Now let this simple Question decide the whole Matter here: Has this great Scholar any more Power of saying to this Mountain, 'Be thou removed hence, and cast into the Sea,' than the illiterate Christian has? If not, he is just as weak, as powerless, and little in the Kingdom of God as he is. But if the illiterate Man's Faith should happen to be nearer to the Bulk of a Grain of Mustard-Seed, than that of the prodigious Scholar, the illiterate Christian stands much above him in the Kingdom of God.

Look now at the present State of Christendom, glorying in the Light of Greek and Roman Learning (which an Age or two ago broke forth) as a Light that has helped the Gospel to shine with a Lustre, that it scarce ever had before. Look at this, and you will see the Fall of the present Church from its first Gospel State, to have much Likeness to the Fall of the first Divine Man from the Glory of paradisaical Innocence and heavenly Purity into an earthly State, and bestial Life of worldly Craft and serpentine Subtlety.

An Address to the Clergy. 51

In the first Gospel Church, heathen Light had no other Name than heathen Darkness; and the Wisdom of Words was no more sought after, than that Friendship of the World which is Enmity with God. In that new born Church, the Tree of Life, which grew in the Midst of Paradise, took Root and grew up again.—In the present Church, the Tree of Life is hissed at, as the visionary Food of deluded Enthusiasts; and the Tree of Death, called the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, has the Eyes and Hearts of Priest and People, and is thought to do as much Good to Christians, as it did Evil to the first Inhabitants of Paradise.—This Tree, that brought Death and Corruption into human Nature at first, is now called a Tree of Light, and is Day and Night well watered with every corrupt Stream, however distant, or muddy with Earth, that can be drawn to it.

The Simplicity indeed, both of the Gospel Letter and Doctrine, has the Shine and Polish of classic Literature laid thick upon it.—Cicero is in the Pulpit, Aristotle writes Christian Ethics, Euclid demonstrates Infidelity and Absurdity to be the same Thing.—Greece had but one Longinus, Rome had but one Quintilian; but in our present Church, they are as common as Patriots in the State.

But now, what follows from this new risen Light? Why, Aristotle's Atheism, Cicero's Height of Pride and Depth of Dissimulation, and every refined or gross Species of Greek and Roman Vices, are as glaring in this new enlightened Christian Church, as ever they were in old Pagan Greece or Rome.—Would you find a Gospel-Christian in all this Mid-day Glory of Learning, you may light a Candle, as the Philosopher did in the Mid-day Sun, to find an honest Man.

And indeed, if we consider the Nature of our Salvation, either with Respect to That which alone can save us, or That from which we are to be saved, it will be plain, that the Wit and Elegance of classic Literature, brought into a Christian Church to make the Doctrines of the Cross have a better Salvation-Effect upon fallen Man, is but like calling in the Assistance of Balls and Masquerades, to make the Lent-Penitence go deeper into the Heart, and more effectually drive all Levity and Impurity out of it.—How poorly was the Gospel at first preached, if the Wisdom of Words, and the Gifts of natural Wit and Imagination had been its genuine Helps? But alas, they stand in the same

52 An Address to the Clergy.

Contrariety to one another, as Self-denial and Self-gratification. To know the Truth of Gospel Salvation, is to know that Man's natural Wisdom is to be equally sacrificed with his natural Folly; for they are but one and the same Thing, only called sometimes by one Name, and sometimes by the other.

His intellectual Faculties are, by the Fall, in a much worse State than his natural animal Appetites, and want a much greater Self-denial. And when own Will, own Understanding, and own Imagination have their natural Strength indulged and gratified, and are made seemingly rich and honourable with the Treasures acquired from a Study of the Belles Lettres, they will just as much help poor fallen Man to be like-minded with Christ, as the Art of Cookery, well and daily studied, will help a Professor of the Gospel to the Spirit and Practice of Christian Abstinence.—To know all this to be strictly the Truth, no more need be known, than these two Things: (1) That our Salvation consists wholly in being saved from ourselves, or that which we are by Nature; (2) That in the whole Nature of Things, nothing could be this Salvation, or Saviour to us, but such an Humility of God manifested in human Nature, as is beyond all Expression.—Hence, the first unalterable Term of this Saviour to fallen Man, is this, 'Except a Man denies himself, forsakes 'all that he has, yea and his own Life, he cannot be my Disciple.' And to show, that this is but the Beginning, or Ground of Man's Salvation, the Saviour adds, 'Learn of me, for I am meek, and 'lowly of Heart.' What a Light is here, for those that can bear, or love the Light! Self is the whole Evil of fallen Nature; Self-denial is our Capacity of being saved; Humility is our Saviour. This is every Man's short Lesson of Life; and he that has well learnt it, is Scholar enough, and has had all the Benefit of a most finished Education. Then old Adam with all his Ignorance is cast out of him; and when Christ's Humility is learnt, then he has the very Mind of Christ, and that which brings him forth a Son of God.

Who then can enough wonder at that Bulk of Libraries, which has taken Place of this short Lesson of the Gospel, or at that Number of Champion Disputants, who from Age to Age, have been all in Arms to support and defend a Set of Opinions, Doctrines, and Practices, all which may be most cordially embraced, without the least degree of Self-denial, and most firmly held fast, without getting the least Degree of Humility by it?

What a Grossness of Ignorance, both of Man and his Saviour, to run to Greek and Roman Schools to learn how to put off Adam, and to put on Christ? To drink at the Fountains of Pagan Poets and Orators, in order more Divinely to drink of the Cup that Christ drank of?—What can come of all this, but that which is already too much come, a Ciceronian-Gospeller, in Stead of a Gospel-Penitent? In Stead of the Depth, the Truth and Spirit of the humble Publican, seeking to regain Paradise, only by a broken Heart, crying, ‘God, be merciful to me a Sinner,’ the high-bred Classic will live in daily Transports at the *enormous Sublime of a Milton, flying thither on the unfeathered Wings of high sounding Words.

An Address to the Clergy. 53

This will be more or less the Case with all the Salvation-Doctrines of Christ, whilst under Classical Acquisition and Administration. Those Divine Truths, which are no further good and redeeming, but as they are Spirit and Life in us, which can have no Entrance, or Birth, but in the Death of Self, in a broken and contrite Heart, will serve only to help classic Painters (as Dr. W.† calls them) to lavish out their Colours on their own Paper Monuments of Lifeless Virtues.

How came the learned Heathens by their Pride and Vanity, by their Inability to come under the Humility of the Cross? It was because the natural Man shined in the false Glory of his own cultivated Abilities. Have Wit and Parts, an elegant Taste, any more good or redeeming Virtue in Christians, than they had in Heathens? As well might it be said, that own will is good, and has a redeeming Virtue in a Christian, but bad and destructive in a Heathen. I said a redeeming Virtue in it; because nothing is or can be a religious Good to fallen Man, but that which has a redeeming Virtue in it, or is, so far as it goes, a true Renewal of the Divine Life in the Soul. Therefore, said our only Redeemer, ‘Without me, ye can do nothing.’ Whatever is not his immediate Work in us is at best but a mere Nothing with Respect to the Good of our Redemption.—A Tower of Babel may to its Builders’ Eyes seem to hide its Head in the Clouds, but as to its reaching of Heaven, it is no nearer to that, than the Earth on which it stands.—It is thus with all the Buildings of Man’s Wisdom and natural Abilities in the Things of Salvation; he may take the Logic of Aristotle, add to that the Rhetoric of Tully, and then ascend as high as he can on the Ladder of Poetic Imagination, yet no more is done to the reviving the lost Life of God in his Soul, than by a Tower of Brick and Mortar to reach Heaven.

* See Milton’s Enormous Bliss.

† As this Address was wrote some time ago, in which are certain Strictures upon Dr. Warburton’s Writings, who has lately been consecrated a Right Reverend Lord Bishop; I thought it more candid not to alter my Style, than to take the Advantage of charging such gross Errors on a Bishop of Gloucester, which I only found in a Mr. and Dr. Warburton.

Self is the Root, the Tree, and the Branches of all the Evils of our fallen State. We are without God, because we are in the Life of Self.—Self-love, Self-esteem, and Self-seeking, are the very Essence, and Life of Pride; and the Devil the first Father of Pride, is never absent from them, nor without Power in them.—To die to these essential Properties of Self, is to make the Devil depart from us. But as soon as we would have Self-Abilities have a Share in our good Works, the Satanic Spirit of Pride is in Union with us, and we are working for the Maintenance of Self-love, Self-esteem, and Self-seeking.

All the Vices of fallen Angels and Men have their Birth and Power in the Pride of Self, or I may better say, in the Atheism and Idolatry of Self; for Self is both Atheist and Idolater. It is Atheist, because it has rejected God; it is an Idolater, because it is its own Idol.—On the other Hand, all the Virtues of the heavenly Life are the Virtues of Humility. Not a Joy, or Glory, or Praise in Heaven, but is what it is through Humility. It is Humility alone that makes the unpassable Gulf between Heaven and Hell.—No Angels in Heaven, but because Humility is in all their Breath; no Devils in Hell, but because the Fire of Pride is their whole Fire of Life.

What is then, or in what lies the great Struggle for Eternal Life? It all lies in the Strife between PRIDE and HUMILITY: All other Things, be they what they will, are but as under Workmen; Pride and Humility are the two Master Powers, the two Kingdoms in Strife for the Eternal Possession of Man.

And here it is to be observed, that every Son of Adam is in the Service of Pride and Self, be he doing what he will, till a Humility that comes solely from Heaven has been his Redeemer. Till then, all that he doth will be only done by the right Hand, that the left Hand may know it. And he that thinks it possible for the natural Man to get a better Humility than this from his own right Reason (as it is often miscalled) refined by Education, shows himself quite Ignorant of this one most plain and capital Truth of the Gospel, namely, That there never was, nor ever will be, but one Humility in the whole World, and that is the one Humility of Christ, which never any Man, since the fall of Adam, had the least Degree of but from Christ.—Humility is one, in the same Sense and Truth, as Christ is one, the Mediator is one, Redemption is one. There are not two Lambs of God that take away the Sins of the World. But if there was any Humility besides that of Christ, there would be something else besides him that could take away the Sins of the World.—‘All that came before me,’ says Christ, ‘were Thieves and Robbers:’ We are used to confine this to Persons; but the same is as true of every Virtue, whether it has the Name of Humility, Charity, Piety, or any Thing else; if it comes before Christ, however good it may pretend to be, it is but a Cheat, a Thief, and a Robber, under the Name of a Godly Virtue. And the Reason is, because Pride and Self have the all of Man, till Man has his all from Christ. He therefore only fights the good Fight, whose strife is, that the Self-Idolatrous Nature which he hath from Adam may be brought to Death, by the supernatural Humility of Christ brought to Life in him.

The Enemies to Man's rising out of the Fall of Adam, through the Spirit and Power of Christ, are many. But the one great Dragon-Enemy, called Antichrist, is SELF-EXALTATION. This is his Birth, his Pomp, his Power, and his Throne; when Self-Exaltation ceases, the last Enemy is destroyed, and all that came from the Pride and Death of Adam is swallowed up in Victory.

There has been much sharp looking out, to see where and what Antichrist is, or by what Marks he may be known. Some say he has been in the Christian World almost ever since the Gospel Times, nay, that he was even then beginning to appear and show himself. Others say he came in with this, or that Pope; others that he is not yet come, but near at Hand. Others will have it, that he has been here, and there, but driven from one Place to another by several new risen Protestant Sects.

But to know with certainty, where and what Antichrist is, and who is with him, and who against him, you need only read this short Description which Christ gives of himself. '(1) I can do 'nothing of myself. (2) I came not to do my own Will. (3) I 'seek not my own Glory. (4) I am meek and lowly of Heart.'—Now if this is Christ, then Self-Ability or Self-Exaltation, being the highest and fullest Contrariety to all this, must be alone the one great Antichrist, that opposes and withstands the whole Nature and Spirit of Christ.

What therefore has everyone so much to fear, to renounce and abhor, as every inward Sensibility of Self-Exaltation, and every outward Work that proceeds from it.—But now, at what Things shall a Man look, to see that working of Self which raises Pride to its strongest Life, and most of all hinders the Birth of the humble Jesus in his Soul? Shall he call the Pomps and Vanities of the World the highest Works of Self-Adoration? Shall he look at Fops and Beaux, and painted Ladies, to see the Pride that has the most of Antichrist in it? No, by no means. These are indeed Marks, shameful enough, of the vain, foolish Heart of Man, but yet, comparatively speaking, they are but the Skin-deep Follies of that Pride which the Fall of Man has begotten and brought forth in him.—Would you see the deepest Root, and Iron-Strength of Pride and Self-Adoration, you must enter into the dark Chamber of Man's fiery Soul, where the Light of God (which alone gives Humility and meek Submission to all created Spirits) being extinguished by the Death which Adam died, Satan, or which is the same Thing, Self-Exaltation became the Strong Man that kept Possession of the House, till a Stronger than he should come upon him.—In this secret Source of an eternal fiery Soul, glorying in the astral Light of this World, a swelling Kingdom of Poms and Vanities is set up in the Heart of Man, of which, all outward Poms and Vanities are but its childish transitory Playthings. The inward Strong Man of Pride, the diabolical Self, has his higher Works within; he dwells in the Strength of the Heart, and has every Power and Faculty of the Soul offering continual Incense to him.—His Memory, his Will, his Understanding, his Imagination, are always at work for him, and for no one else.—His Memory is the faithful Repository of all the fine Things that Self has ever done; and lest any Thing of them should be lost or forgotten, she is continually setting them before his Eyes. His Will, though it has all the World before it, yet goes after Nothing, but as Self sends it. His Understanding is ever upon the Stretch for new Projects to enlarge the Dominions of Self; and if this fails, Imagination comes in, as the last and truest Support of Self, she makes him a King and mighty Lord of Castles in the Air.

56 An Address to the Clergy.

This is that full-born natural Self, that must be pulled out of the Heart, and totally denied, or there can be no Disciple of Christ; which is only saying this plain Truth, that the apostate Self-idolatrous Nature of the old Man must be put off, or there can be no new Creature in Christ.

Now what is it in the human Soul that most of all hinders the Death of this old Man? What is it that above all other Things strengthens and exalts the Life of Self, and makes it the Master and Governor of all the Powers of the Heart and Soul? It is the fancied Riches of Parts, the Glitter of Genius, the Flights of Imagination, the Glory of Learning, and the Self-conceited Strength of natural Reason: These are the strong Holds of fallen Nature, the Master-Builders of Pride's Temple in the Heart of Man, and which, as so many Priests, keep up the daily Worship of Idol-Self.—And here let it be well, and well observed, that all these magnified Talents of the natural Man are started up through his miserable Fall from the Life of God in his Soul.—Wit, Genius, Learning, and natural Reason, would never have had any more a Name among Men, than Blindness, Ignorance, and Sickness, had Man continued, as at First, an holy Image of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.—Every Thing then that dwelt in him, or came from him, would have only said so much of God, and nothing of Himself, have manifested nothing to him but the heavenly Powers of the triune Life of God dwelling in him.—He would have had no more Sense or Consciousness of his own Wit, or natural Reason, or any Power of Goodness in all that He was, and did, than of his own creating Power, at beholding the created Heavens and Earth.—It is his dreadful Fall from the Life of God in his Soul, that has furnished him with these high intellectual Riches, just as it has furnished him with the substantial Riches of his bestial Appetites and Lusts. And when the Lusts of the Flesh have spent out their Life, when the dark thick Body of earthly Flesh and Blood shall be forced to let the Soul go loose, all these bright Talents will end with that System of fleshly Lusts, in which they begun; and that of Man which remains will have nothing of its own, nothing that can say, I do this, or I do that; but all that it has or does, will be either the Glory of God manifested in it, or the Power of Hell in full Possession of it.—The Time of Man's playing with Parts, Wit, and Abilities, and of fancying Himself to be something great and considerable in the intellectual World, may be much shorter, but can be no longer, than he can eat and drink with the Animals of this World.—When the Time comes, that fine Buildings, rich Settlements, acquired Honours, and Rabbi, Rabbi, must take their Leave of him, all the stately Structures, which Genius, Learning, and Flights of Imagination, have painted inwardly on his Brain and outwardly on Paper, must bear full Witness to Solomon's Vanity of Vanities.

An Address to the Clergy. 57

Let then the high accomplished Scholar reflect, that he comes by his Wit, and Parts, and acute Abilities, just as the Serpent came by his Subtlety; let him reflect, that he might as well dream of acquiring angelic Purity to his animal Nature by multiplying new invented Delights for his earthly Passions and Tempers, as of raising his Soul into Divine Knowledge through the well exercised Powers of his natural Reason and Imagination.

The finest intellectual Power, and that which has the best Help in it towards bringing Man again into the Region of Divine Light, is that poor despised Thing called Simplicity. This is that which stops the Workings of the fallen Life of Nature, and leaves room for God to work again in the Soul, according to the good Pleasure of his holy Will. It stands in such awaiting Posture before God. and in such Readiness for the Divine Birth, as the Plants of the Earth wait for the inflowing Riches of the Light and Air. But the Self-assuming Workings of Man's Natural Powers shut him up in himself, closely barred up against the inflowing Riches of the Light and Spirit of God.

Yet so it is, in this fallen State of the Gospel Church, that with these proud Endowments of fallen Nature, the Classic Scholar, full fraught with Pagan Light and Skill, comes forth to play the Critic and Orator with the simplicity of Salvation Mysteries; Mysteries which mean nothing else but the inward Work of the triune God in the Soul of Man, nor any other Work there, but the raising up a dead Adam into a living Christ of God.

However, to make way for Parts, Criticism, and Language-Learning, to have the full Management of Salvation Doctrines, the well-read Scholar gives out, that the ancient Way of knowing the Things of God, taught and practised by Fishermen-Apostles, is obsolete. They indeed wanted to have Divine Knowledge from the immediate continual Operation of the Holy Spirit, but this State was only for a Time, till Genius, and Learning entered into the Pale of the Church.—Behold, if ever, ‘the Abomination’ of Desolation standing in the holy Place!’—For as soon as the Doctrine is set up, that Man’s natural Parts and acquired Learning have full Right and Power to sit in the Divinity Chair, and to guide Men into that Truth which was once the only Office and Power of the Holy Spirit, as soon as this is done, and so far as it is received, it may with the greatest Truth be said, that the Kingdom of God is entirely shut up, and only a Kingdom of Scribes, Pharisees, and Hypocrites, can come instead of it. For by this Doctrine the whole Nature and Power of Gospel Religion is much more denied, than by setting up the Infallibility of the Pope; for though his Claim to Infallibility is false, yet he claims it from and under the Holy Spirit; but the Protestant Scholar has his Divinity Knowledge, his Power in the Kingdom of Truth, from himself, his own Logic, and learned Reason.—Christ has nowhere instituted an infallible Pope; and it is full as certain, that he has nowhere spoke one single Word, or given the least Power to Logic, Learning, or the natural Powers of Man, in his Kingdom. He has never said to them, ‘Whatsoever ye shall bind on Earth, shall be bound in Heaven;’ never said to them, ‘go ye and teach all Nations,’ no more than he has ever said to Wolves ‘go ye, and feed my Sheep.’—Christ indeed said of himself, according to the Flesh, It is expedient for you that I go away. But where has he said of himself according to the Spirit, It is also expedient for you that I go away, that your own natural Abilities and learned Reason may have the Guidance of you into all Truth? This is nowhere said, unless Logic can prove it from these Words, ‘With out me ye can do nothing,’ and, ‘Lo, I am with you to the end of the World.’

The first and main Doctrine of Christ and his Apostles was, to tell the Jews, ‘that the Kingdom of God was at Hand,’ or was come to them. Proof enough surely, that their Church was not that Kingdom of God, though by God's Appointment, and under Laws of his own commanding. But why not, when it was thus set up by God? It was because it had human and worldly Things in it, consisted of carnal Ordinances, and had only Types, and Figures, and Shadows of a Kingdom of God that was to come.—Of this Kingdom, Christ says, 'My Kingdom is not of 'this World'; and as a Proof of it, he adds, 'if it was of this 'World, then would my Servants fight for me'; which was saying, that it was so different in Kind, and so superior in Nature to this World, that no Sort of worldly Power could either help, or hinder it. But of this World, into which the Kingdom of God was come, the Holy One of God says, 'In the World ye shall 'have Tribulation, but be of good Comfort, I have overcome the 'World.' Now how was it that Christ's Victory was their Victory? It was, because he was in them, and they in Him, 'Because I live, ye shall live also; in that Day ye shall know that 'I am in the Father, and you in me, and I in you.'

An Address to the Clergy. 59

This was the Kingdom of God come to them, the same Kingdom of God in which Adam was born and begun his first glorious Life, when the Image and Likeness of the holy Trinity had an outward Glory, like that which broke through the Body of Christ, when on 'Mount Tabor his Face did shine as the Sun, 'and his Raiment was white as the Light.'—To the Children of this Kingdom, says its Almighty King, 'When they bring you before 'Magistrates and Powers, take no Thought how, or what ye shall 'answer, or what ye shall say unto them, for the Holy Ghost shall 'teach you in that same Hour what ye ought to say. For it is not 'ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you.'

No higher, or other Thing is here said, than in these other Words, 'Take no Thought, what ye shall Eat, or Drink, or 'wherewithall ye shall be clothed, but seek first the Kingdom of 'God, and his Righteousness, and all these Things shall be added 'unto you.' This is the Truth of the Kingdom of God, come unto Men, and this is the Birth-right Privilege of all that are living Members of it, to be delivered from their own natural Spirit which they had from Adam, from the Spirit and Wisdom of this World, and through the whole Course of their Lives only to say, and do, and be that, which the Spirit of their Father worketh in them.

But now, is not this Kingdom gone away from us, are we not left comfortless, if instead of this Spirit of our Father speaking, doing, and working every Thing in us and for us, we are left again to our own natural Powers, to run to every Lo here, and Lo there, to find a Share in that Kingdom of God, which once was, and never can be any Thing else but God, the Wisdom and

60 An Address to the Clergy.

Power of God manifested in our Flesh? Had it not been as well, nay better for us, to have been still under Types and Figures, sacrificing Bulls and Goats by Divine Appointment, than to be brought under a Religion that must be Spirit and Life, and then left to the jarring Interests of the Wisdom of the Greek, and the Carnality of the Jew, how to be living Members of it? For where the Spirit of God is not the continual immediate Governor of spiritual Things, nothing better can come of it. For the Truth and full Proof of this, no more need be appealed to than all the Libraries and Churches of Christendom for many Ages to this Day.

What is the Difference between Man's own Righteousness and Man's own Light in Religion? They are strictly the same Thing, do one and the same Work, namely, keep up and strengthen every Evil, Vanity, and Corruption of fallen Nature. Nothing saves a Man from his own Righteousness, but that which saves and delivers him from his own Light.—The Jew that was most of all set against the Gospel, and unable to receive it was he that trusted in his own Righteousness; this was the rich Man, to whom it was as hard to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven as for a Camel to go through the Eye of a Needle.—But the Christian, that trusts in his own Light, is the very Jew that trusted in his own Righteousness; and all that he gets by the Gospel, is only that which the Pharisee got by the Law, namely, to be further from entering into the Kingdom of God than Publicans and Harlots.—How comes it, that a Beast, a scarlet Whore, a horned Dragon, and other the most horrible Descriptions of diabolical Power, have been by the Spirit of God made Descriptions of the Christian Church? How comes it, that the Spirit describes the Gospel-Church as driven into a Wilderness;—the two faithful Witnesses, Moses and Jesus, as prophesying so many Ages in Sackcloth, and slain in the Streets of spiritual Sodom and Egypt? It is because Man's own natural Light, Man's own conceited Righteousness, his serpentine Subtlety, his Self-love, his sensual Spirit and worldly Power, have seized the Mysteries of Salvation that came down from Heaven, and built them up into a Kingdom of envious Strife and Contention, for learned Glory, spiritual Merchandise, and worldly Power.—This is the Beast, the Whore, and Dragon, that has governed, and will govern in every private Christian, and public Church, till, dead to all that is Self, they turn to God; not to a God that they have only heard of with their Ears, and their Fathers have told them, but to a God of Life, Light, and Power, found living and working within them, as the essential Life, Light, and Power of their own Lives.—For God is only our God, by a Birth of his own Divine Nature within us. This, and nothing but this, is our whole Relation to, our only Fellowship with him, our whole Knowledge of him, our whole Power of having any Part in the Mysteries of Gospel-Salvation. Nothing can seek the Kingdom of God, or hunger and thirst after his Righteousness, Nothing can cry Abba Father, Nothing can pray, 'Thy Kingdom come,' Nothing can say of Christ, 'My Lord, and my God,' but That which is born of God, and is the Divine Nature itself become creaturely in us. Nothing but God in Man can be a Godly Life in Man.—Hence is that of the Apostle, 'The Letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth Life.' But you will say, can this be true of the Spiritual Divine Letter of the Gospel? Can it kill, or give death? Yes, it kills, when it is rested in; when it is taken for Divine Power, and supposed to have Goodness in itself; for then it kills the Spirit of God in Man, quenches his holy Fire within us, and is set up instead of it.—It gives Death, when it is built into Systems of Strife and Contention about Words, Notions and Opinions, and makes the Kingdom of God to consist, not in Power, but in Words. When it is thus used, then of Necessity it kills, because it keeps from That which alone is Life and can give Life.—This then is the Whole of the Matter; all the literal Truths, and Variety of Doctrines and Expressions of the written Word, have but one Nature, one End, and one Errand, they all say Nothing else to Man but that one Thing which Christ said, in these Words, 'Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will refresh you'; just the same, as when it is said, 'Jesus Christ, who is of God made unto us Wisdom, Righteousness, and Sanctification'; this is the only Refreshment from Christ. Again, 'But ye are washed, but ye are cleansed in the Name of our Lord Jesus'; just the same as when it is said, 'Except ye abide in me, and I in you, ye have no Life in you.' Again, 'By Grace ye are saved, by Faith ye are saved,' says neither more nor less than this, 'He that eateth my Flesh, and drinketh my Blood, hath eternal Life'; the same as when Christ says, 'Without me ye can do nothing'; the same as the Apostle says, 'Yet not I, but Christ that liveth in me'; the same as 'Christ in us the Hope of Glory'; if Christ be not in you, ye are Reprobates.—Therefore to come to Christ, to have our heavy laden, fallen Nature refreshed by him, to be born Spirit of his Spirit, to have his heavenly Flesh and heavenly Blood made living in us, before we put off the bestial Body and Blood of Death which we have from Adam, is the one only Thing taught and meant by all that is so variously said in the Scriptures of the Merits and Benefits of Christ to us.—It is the SPIRIT, the BODY, the BLOOD of Christ within us that is our whole Peace with God, our whole

An Address to the Clergy. 61

62 An Address to the Clergy.

Adoption, our whole Redemption, our whole Justification, our whole Glorification; and this is the one Thing said, and meant by that new Birth, of which Christ says, 'Except a Man be born again from above, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.' Now, the true Ground why all that is said of Christ in such a Variety of Expressions has only one Meaning, and points only to one and the same Thing is this, it is because the whole State and Nature of fallen Man wants only one Thing, and that one Thing is a real Birth of the Divine Nature made living again in him, as at the first; and then all is done, that can be done, by all the Mysteries of the Birth, and whole Process of Christ, for our Salvation.—All the Law, the Prophets, and the Gospel are fulfilled, when there is in Christ a new Creature, having Life in and from him, as really as the Branch has its Life in and from the Vine.—And when all Scripture is thus understood, and all that either Christ says of himself, or his Apostles say of him, are all heard, or read, only as one and the same Call to come to Christ, in Hunger and Thirst to be filled and blessed with his Divine Nature made living within us; then, and then only, the Letter kills not, but as a sure Guide leads directly to Life.—But Grammar, Logic, and Criticism knowing nothing of Scripture but its Words, bring forth nothing but their own Wisdom of Words, and a Religion of Wrangle, Hatred, and Contention, about the Meaning of them.

But lamentable as this is, the Letter of Scripture has been so long the usurped Province of School-Critics, and learned Reasoners making their Markets of it, that the Difference between literal, notional, and living Divine Knowledge, is almost quite lost in the Christian World. So that if any awakened Souls are here or there found among Christians, who think that more must be known of God, of Christ, and the Powers of the World to come, than every Scholar can know by reading the Letter of Scripture, immediately the Cry of Enthusiasm, whether they be Priests, or People, is sent after them.—A Procedure, which could only have some Excuse, if these Critics could first prove, that the Apostle's Text ought to be thus read, The Spirit killeth, but the Letter giveth Life.

The true Nature, and full Distinction between literal and Divine Knowledge, is set forth in the highest Degree of Clearness in these Words of our Saviour, 'The Kingdom of God is like a Treasure in a Field': Thus far is the true Use and Benefit, and utmost Power of the Letter, it can tell us of a Treasure that we want, a Treasure that belongs to us, and how and where it is to be found; but when it is added, that a 'Man goes and sells all that he has, and buys that Field,' then begins the Divine

An Address to the Clergy. 63

Knowledge, which is nothing else, but the Treasure possessed and enjoyed. Now what is here said, is the same that is said in these other Words of Christ, 'Except a Man denies himself and forsakes all that he hath, he cannot be my Disciple'; that is, he cannot partake of my Mind, my Spirit, and my Nature, and therefore cannot know Me; he is only a Hearer of a Treasure, without entering into the Possession and Enjoyment of it. And thus it is with all Scripture, the Letter can only direct to the doing of that which it cannot do, and give Notice of something that it cannot give.

Now clear and evident as this Distinction is, between a mere literal Direction to a Thing, and a real Participation of it, which alone is a true Perception of it, the generality of Christians seem quite insensible of any other religious Perception, or Knowledge of Divine Things, but such Ideas or Notions of them, as a Man can form from Scripture Words. Whereas Good and Evil, the only Objects of religious Knowledge, are an inward State and Growth of our Life, they are in us, are a Part of us, just in the same Manner as seeing and hearing are in us, and we can have no real Knowledge of them any other way, than as we have of our own seeing and hearing. And as no Man can get or lose his seeing or hearing, or have less or more of them, by any Ideas or Notions that he forms about them, just so it is with that which is the Power of Good, and the Power of Evil in us; Notions and Ideas have no effect upon it. Yet no other Knowledge is thought of, or sought after, or esteemed of any Value, but that which is notional and the Work of the Brain.

Thus, as soon as a man of Speculation can demonstrate that, which he calls the Being and Attributes of God, he thinks, and others think, that he truly knows God. But what Excuse can be made for such an Imagination, when plain Scripture has told him, that to know God is eternal Life, that is, to know God is to have the Power, the Life, and the Spirit of God manifested in him, and therefore it is eternal Life. 'No man knoweth the Father, but the Son, and he to whom the Son revealeth him.' Because the Revelation of the Son is the Birth of the Son in the Soul, and this new Creature in Christ has alone Knowledge of God, what he is, and does, and works in the Creature.

Again, Another, forming an Opinion of Faith from the Letter of Scripture, straightway imagines that he knows what Faith is, and that he is in the Faith. Sad Delusion! For to know what Faith is, or that we are in the Faith, is to know that Christ is in us of a Truth; it is to know the Power of his Life, his Sufferings, his Death, his Resurrection and Ascension, made good in our Souls. To be in the Faith, is to have done with all Notions and Opinions about it, because it is found and felt by its living Power and Fruits within us, which are Righteousness, Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghost. All which are three Names or Powers peculiar to Jesus Christ; He alone is our Righteousness, our Peace, our Joy in the Holy Ghost. And therefore Faith is not in us, by reason of this or that Opinion, Assent or Consent, but it is Christ, or the Divine Nature in us; or its Operations could not be Righteousness, Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghost.—By Faith ye are saved, has no other Meaning than By Christ ye are saved. And if Faith in its whole Nature, in its Root and Growth, was any Thing else but Christ, or a Birth of the Divine Nature within us, it could do us no Good, no Power could be ascribed to it, it could not be our Victory, it could not overcome the World, the Flesh, and the Devil.—Every Faith that is not Christ in us is but a Dead Faith.

64 An Address to the Clergy.

How trifling therefore (to say no worse of it) is that Learning, which sets up a Difference between Faith and its Works, between a Justification by Faith, and Justification by its Works.—Is there any Difference between Christ, as a Redeemer, and his redeeming Works? Can they be set above one another in their redeeming Efficacy? If not, then Faith and its Works, which are nothing else but Christ in us, can have no separation from, or excellency above one another, but are as strictly one, as Christ is one, and no more two Things, than our Saviour and our Salvation are two different Things in us. Every Thing that is said of Faith, from Adam to this Day, is only so much said of the Power, and Life of a one redeeming Christ, working within us; so that to divide Faith from its Works is as absurd, as to divide a Thing from its self, a Circle from its Roundness. No Salvation would have ever been ascribed to Faith, but because it is, in the strictest Sense, Christ Himself, the Power of God, living and working in us. It never would have been said of Faith, that every Power of the World, the Flesh, and the Devil, must yield to it, but because it is that very Christ within us, without whom we can do nothing. But if without Christ we can do nothing, and yet all things are possible to our Faith, can there be a fuller Demonstration that our Faith is nothing else but Christ born, and living within us? Whatever therefore there is of Power within us, that tends to Salvation, call it by what Name you will, either Faith, or Hope, or Prayer, or Hunger after the Kingdom of God and his Righteousness, it is all but one Power, and that one Power is Christ within us. If therefore Faith and its good Works are but one and the same Christ living in us, the Distinction between a good Faith and its good Works, and all the contentious Volumes that have been written about it, are as mere ignorant Jargon, as a Disinction made and contended for, between Life and its living Operations.

An Address to the Clergy. 65

When the holy Church of Christ, the Kingdom of God came among Men, was first set up, it was the Apostle's Boast, that all other Wisdom or Learning was sunk into nothing. 'Where,' says he, 'is the Wise, the Scribe, the Disputer of this World? Hath not God made them Foolishness?' But now, it is the Boast of all Churches, that they are full of the Wise, the Scribes, the Disputers of this World, who sit with learned Pomp in the Apostle's Chair, and have the Mysteries of the Kingdom of God committed to them.

Hence it is, that from a Religion of Heavenly Love, built upon the redeeming Life and Doctrines of a Son of God dying to save the whole World, Division, Bitterness, Envy, Pride, Strife, Hatred, and Persecution, nay every Outrage of War and Bloodshed, breathe and break forth with more Strength in learned Christendom, than ever they did from a Religion of Pagan Idolatry, set up by Satan.

It may perhaps be here said, Must there then be no Learning or Scholarship, no recondite Erudition in the Christian Church? Must there be nothing thought of, or got by the Gospel, but mere Salvation? Must its Ministers know nothing, teach nothing, but such Salvation-Doctrines as Christ and his Apostles taught; nothing but the full denial of Self, Poverty of Spirit, Meekness, and Humility, and unwearied Patience, a never ceasing Love, an absolute Renunciation of the Poms and Vanities of the World, a full Dependence upon our Heavenly Father; no Joy or rejoicing but in the Holy Ghost; no Wisdom but that which God gives; no Walking but as Christ walked; no Reward or Glory for their Labours of Love, but that of being found in Christ, Flesh of his Flesh, Bone of his Bones, Spirit of his Spirit, and clothed with the Wedding-Garment when the Bridegroom comes, 'when the Lord Himself shall descend from Heaven with a Shout, with the Voice of the Archangel, and with the Trumpet of God, and the Dead in Christ shall rise first'?

To this the first Answer is, Happy, thrice happy are they, who are only the thus learned Preachers of the Gospel, who through all their Ministry, seek nothing for themselves or others, but to be taught of God; hunger after nothing but the Bread of Life that came down from Heaven, owning no Master but Christ, no Teacher but his Holy Spirit; as unable to join with the Diggers in Pagan Pits of Learning, as with those that 'Labour for the Wind, and give their Money for that which is not Bread.'

Secondly, with regard to the Demand of learned Knowledge in the Christian Church, it may be answered, that all that has been said above, is only for the Increase and Promotion of it, and that all Ignorance and Darkness may be driven quite out of it.—The Church of Christ is the Seat or School of all the highest Knowledge that the human Nature is capable of in this Life. Ignorance is everywhere but in the Church of Christ.—The Law, the Prophets, and the Gospel, are the only Treasures of all that can be called the Knowledge either of God or Man; and He in whom the Law, the Prophets, and the Gospel are fulfilled, is the only well-educated Man, and one of the first-rate Scholars in the World. But now, who is he, that has this Wisdom from these rich Treasures? Who is he, in whom all is known and fulfilled which they teach? The Lip of Truth has told us, that it is he, and he alone, ‘who loves God with all his Heart, with all his Soul, with all his Mind, and with all his Strength, and his Neighbour as himself.’ This is the Man that is all Wisdom, all Light, and let into full Possession of all that is meant by all the Mysteries contained in the Law, the Prophets, and the Gospel.—Where this Divine Love is wanting, and a diabolical Self sits in its Place, there may be great Wits, shining Critics, Orators, Poets, &c., as easily as there may be a profound Machiavel, a learned Hobbs, or an atheistical Virtuoso. But would you divinely know the Mysteries of Nature, the Ground and Reason of Good and Evil in this World, the Relation and Connection between the visible and invisible World, how the Things of Time proceed from, are influenced by, and depend upon the Things and Powers of Eternity, there is but one only Key of Entrance; nothing can open the Vision, but seeing with the Eyes of that same Love, which begun and carries on all that is, and works in visible and invisible Nature.—Would you divinely know the Mysteries of Grace and Salvation, would you go forth as a faithful Witness of gospel Truths, stay till this Fire of Divine Love has had its perfect Work within you. For till your Heart is an Altar, on which this heavenly Fire never goes out, you are dead in yourself, and can only be a Speaker of dead Words, about Things that never had any Life within you. For without a real Birth of this Divine Love in the essence of your Soul, be as learned and polite as you will, your Heart is but the dark Heart of fallen Adam, and your Knowledge of the Kingdom of God will be only like that which murdering Cain had.—For every Thing is Murder, but that which Love does.—If Love is not the Breath of your Life, the Spirit that forms and governs every Thing that proceeds from you, every Thing that has your Labour, your Allowance and Consent, you are broken off from the Works of God, you have left his Creation, you are without God, and your Name, and Nature, and Works, can have no other Name, or Nature, but that which is called Pride, Wrath, Envy, Hypocrisy, Hatred, Revenge, and Self-Exaltation, under the Power of Satan in his Kingdom of Darkness.—Nothing can possibly save you from being the certain Prey of all these evil Spirits, through the whole Course of your Life, but a Birth of that Love which is God himself, his Light, and Spirit within you.

66 An Address to the Clergy.

An Address to the Clergy. 67

There is no Knowledge in Heaven, but what proceeds from this Birth of Love, nor is there any Difference between the highest Light of an Angel, and the horrid Darkness of a Devil, but that which Love has made.—But now, since Divine Love can have no Beginning, but from a Birth of the Divine Nature in us, therefore says St. John, we love him because he FIRST loved us, the same as saying, we desire God, because he first desired us; for we could not desire God, but because He first desired us, we could not turn to God, but because he first turned to us. And so it is, that we could not love God, but because he first loved us, that is, because he first by our Creation brought forth, and by our Redemption continued and kept up that same Birth of his own Spirit of Love in us.—For as his Holy Spirit must first be a Gift to us, or born in us, and then we have that which can worship God in Spirit, so his Love must of all Necessity be a Gift to us, or born in us, and then we have that of God in us which alone can love him with his own Love.—A Truth absolutely asserted in these Words; ‘Love is of God, and he that loveth, is born of God.’

Let this be my Excuse to the learned World, for owning no School of Wisdom, but where the one only Lesson is Divine Love; and the one only Teacher the Spirit of God. Let no one call this wild or extravagant; it is no wilder a Step, no more injurious to Man, to Truth and Goodness, than the owning no God but one.—For to be called from every Thing but Divine Love and the Spirit of God, is only being called from every Thing that has the Curse of fallen Nature in it.—And no Man can come from under this Curse, till he is born again of Divine Love, and the Spirit of God. For thus to be born, is as much the one sole Happiness, Joy, and Glory of Men, both now and ever, as it is the sole Joy and Glory of Angels eternally in the Heavens.—Believe me then, thou great Scholar, that all that thou hast got of Wisdom or Learning, Day after Day, in any other School but this, will stand thee in as much Stead, fill thee with as high heavenly Comfort at the Hour of Death, as all the long Dreams, which Night after Night, thou hast ever had in thy Sleep.—And till a Man knows this, with as much fulness of Conviction as he knows the Vanity of a Dream, he has his full Proof, that he is not yet in the Light of Truth, not yet taught of God, nor like-minded with Christ.

68 An Address to the Clergy.

One of Christ's Followers said, 'Lord, suffer me first to go and 'bury my Father'; the Answer was, 'Let the Dead bury their 'Dead, follow thou me.'—Another said to him, 'Let me first go 'bid them Farewell, that are at Home in my House'; Jesus answered, 'No Man having put his Hand to the Plough, and 'looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God.'—Now let it be supposed that a Third had said, Lord, I have left several deep-learned Books at Home, written by the greatest Masters of Grammar, Logic and Eloquence, suffer me first to go back for them, lest losing the Light which I had from them, I might mistake the Depth and Truth of thy heavenly Doctrines, or be less able to prove and preach them powerfully to others.—Would not such a Request as this have had a Folly and Absurdity in it, not chargeable upon those two other Requests which Christ rejected?—And yet, what can scholastic, classic, and critical Divinity say for itself, but that very same Thing, which this Requester here said?

The Holy Jesus said, 'I am the Light of the World, he that 'followeth me, walketh not in Darkness.'—Here spiritual Light and Darkness are as immutably fixed, and separated from one another, as the Light and Darkness of this World were divided on the first Day of the Creation. Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of God, is the one only Light both of Men and Angels.—Fallen Nature, the selfish Will, proud Tempers, the highest Abilities, the natural Sagacity, Cunning Arts and Subtleties, that are or can be in fallen Men and Angels, are nothing else but their fulness of spiritual Darkness, from which nothing but Works of Darkness can come forth.—In a Word, Darkness is the whole natural Man; Light is the new born Man from above. Therefore says the Christ of God, 'I am the Light of the World,' because He alone is the Birth of Heaven in the fallen Souls of Men.—But now, who can more reject this Divine Light, or more plainly choose Darkness instead of it, than he who seeks to have his Mind enriched, the Faculties of his fallen Soul cultivated by the Literature of Poets, Orators, Philosophers, Sophists, Sceptics, and Critics, born and bred up in the Worship and Praises of Idol Gods and Goddesses? What is this, but like going to the Serpent to be taught the innocent Spirit of the Dove; or to the elegant Lusts of Anacreon and Ovid, to learn Purity of Heart, and kindle the Flame of heavenly Love in our Souls? Look where you will, this is the Wisdom of those who seek to Pagans for Skill to work in Christ's Vineyard; who from long Labours in restoring the Grammar, and finding out the hidden Beauties of some old vicious Book, set up for qualified Artists to polish the Gospel Pearl of great Price.—Surely this is no better a Proof of their savouring the Things that are of God, than Peter gave, when his Master said to him, 'Get thee behind me, Satan.'—A grave Ecclesiastic, bringing forth out of his Closet skilful Meditations on the Commentaries of a murdering Cæsar, or the sublime Rhapsody of an old Homer, or the astonishing Beauties of a modern Dunciad, has as much Reason to think that he is walking in the Light of Christ, and led by the Spirit of God, as they have who are only eating and drinking, and rising up to play.

An Address to the Clergy. 69

But to see the exceeding Folly of expecting Ability in Divine Knowledge, from any Thing that is the Wit, Wisdom, or Spirit of the natural Man, you need only read these Words of the holy Messenger of God, the Elias that was to come. 'I indeed,' says he, 'baptize you with Water, but He that cometh after me, whose 'Shoe's Latchet I am not worthy to unloose, He shall baptize 'you with the Holy Ghost, and with Fire.'—Now if this which the Baptist said of Christ is not our Faith, if we do not receive it as the Truth in which we are firmly to stand, then, be as learned as we will, we have no better a Faith, or higher Wisdom, than those blind Rabbies who received not the Testimony of John.—A Fire and Spirit from above was the News which he published to the World; this, and nothing else, was his Kingdom of God that was at hand.—Now if this Fire and Spirit from above has not baptized us into a Birth of the Life of God in our Souls, we have not found that Christ and Kingdom of God, to which John bore Witness. But if (what is still worse) we are so bewitched through the Sorcery of Learning, as to turn Writers and Preachers against this inward, and only redeeming heavenly Fire and Spirit, we are baptized with the Spirit of those, to whom our Lord said, 'Woe 'unto you Scribes, Pharisees, Hypocrites, for ye shut up the 'Kingdom of Heaven against Men; for ye neither go in your'selves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.'

For what is, or can be the Fall of a Divine Adam under the Power of Sin, Satan, and Hell, but the Extinction of that heavenly Fire and Spirit, which was his First Union with God and all heavenly Beings.—Say now, that he had not this heavenly Fire and Spirit at the first, that nothing lived or breathed in him but that astral Fire and Spirit which is the Life and Spirit of all earthly Animals, and then you have a Religion as Divine as that of the old Sadducees, who allowed of no Resurrection, Angel, or Spirit.—For, deny the Truth and Fulness of a Divine Life in the first Man, and then his Fall and Redemption are equally empty Sounds about nothing. For what can he be fallen from, or redeemed to, if he has now all that Fire and Spirit of Life which he ever had, or ought to have, and if all that is more than this, is but the Fiction and Dream of a distempered Brain? Tell me, why that burning and shining Light, that Man that was more than a Prophet, should come with his Water, and the Son of God, God of God, should come with his Fire-Baptism, if Man neither wanted, nor could receive a higher Water, and Fire of Life, than that which he has in common with the Beasts of the Field? Why is there all this Stir about Religions, Expiations and Atonements, why all these priestly Ordinations, Consecrations, Churches, Sacraments, and Prayers? For if the Fire and Spirit of this World is the one Life, and highest Life, both of Man and Beasts, we have it unasked for, and on the same Terms as the Beasts have it, and can only lose it, as they do when they lose their Existence.

70 An Address to the Clergy.

But if Fire and Spirit from Heaven can alone make heavenly Creatures, and us, to be Children of an heavenly Father; if the Son of God took our fallen Nature upon him, that the first heavenly Fire and Spirit might again come to Life in us, if Divine Life, Divine Light, and Divine Goodness, can only come from them, and only in such Degree, as they are kindled in our Souls, what a Poverty of Sense is it in those, who are called to a Resurrection of the first Divine Life, where a new Creature is taught by that same Unction from above whence all the Angels and Principalities of Heaven have their Light and Glory, what a Poverty of Sense, I say, in such, to set themselves down at the Feet of a Master Tully, and a Master Aristotle, who only differ from the meanest of all other corrupt Men, as the Teaching Serpent differed from his fellow Animals, by being more subtle than all the Beasts of the Field.

Behold then your State, ye Ministers, that wait at Christian Altars, who will have neither Faith, nor Hope, nor Desire of Heavenly Fire kindled in your Souls, you have a Priesthood, and an Altar not fit to be named with that, which in Jewish Days had a holy Fire from God descending upon it, which made Priest and Sacrifice acceptable to God, though only Type and Pledge of that inward celestial Fire, which Christ would kindle into a never ceasing Burning, in the living Temples of his new born Children from above.

Complain then no more of Atheists, Infidels, and such like open Enemies to the Gospel Kingdom of God; for whilst you call heavenly Fire and Spirit, kindled into the same essential Life in us as they are in holy Angels, downright frenzy, and mystic Madness, you do all that infidel Work within the Church, which they do on the outside of it.—And if through a learned Fear of having that done to your earthly Reason, which was done to Enoch when God took him, you will own no higher a Regeneration, no more Birth of God in your Souls, than can be had by a few cold Drops of Water sprinkled on the Face, any of the heathen Gods of Wood and Stone are good enough for such an elementary Priesthood.—For let this be told you, as a Truth from God, that till heavenly Fire and Spirit have a Fulness of a Birth within you, you can rise no higher by your highest Learning, than to be elegant Orators about Scripture Words.

An Address to the Clergy. 71

Our Lord has said, 'The Kingdom of God is within you,' that is, the heavenly Fire and Spirit, which are the true Kingdom and Manifestation of God, are within you. And indeed, where can it be else? Yet what learned Pains are taken to remove the literal Meaning from these Words, as too visionary a Thing for learned Ears.—And yet it is a Truth obvious to common Sense, that even this outward World of Stars and Elements, neither does, nor can belong to us, or we to it, but so far as it is, literally speaking, a Kingdom within us. For the outward Kingdom or Powers of this World signify nothing to a worldly Man that is dead; but no Man is dead, but because the Kingdom of this World, with all its Powers of Fire, Light, and Spirit, stands only outwardly about him, but has lost its Life and Power within him.

Say now, out of Reverence to sound Literature, and abhorrence of Enthusiasm, that the Kingdom of God is not really and virtually within, that its heavenly Fire, Light, and Spirit, are not, ought not to be born in a sober right-minded Follower of Christ, and then you have a good Disciple of Christ, as absolutely dead to the Kingdom of Heaven, as the Corpse that has Nothing of the Fire, Spirit, and Light of this World in it, is dead to all the outward World round about it.

What a Sobriety of Faith and sound Doctrine is it, to preach up a Necessity of being living Members of the Kingdom of Heaven, and at the same time the Necessity of orthodoxly holding, that a heavenly Birth neither is, nor can, nor ought to be within us! For if it either is, or could, or ought to be within us, then it could not be a brain-sick folly to believe, that the literal Words of Christ had no Deceit, Falsity, or Delusion in them, when he said, 'Except a Man be born again from above, he cannot see, or enter into the Kingdom of God.' That is, he cannot possibly have any godlike or Divine Goodness, he cannot be a Child of an heavenly Father, but from the Nature and Spirit of his heavenly Father brought to a real Birth of Life in him.—Now if, without this Divine Birth, all that we have in us is but fallen Adam, a Birth of Sin, the Flesh, and the Devil, if the Power of this heavenly Birth is all the Power of Goodness that is or was, or ever can be in a Son of Adam; and if Logic, Learning, and Criticism, are almost everywhere set in high Places, to pronounce and prove it to be mere Enthusiasm and spiritual frenzy, what Wonder is it, if Folly of Doctrine, Wickedness of Life, Lusts of the Flesh, Profaneness of Spirit, Wantonness of Wit, Contempt of Goodness and Profession of Christianity, should all of them seem to have their full Establishment among us?

What Wonder, if Sacraments, Church-Prayers, and Preachings, leave high and low, learned and unlearned, Men and Women, Priests and People, as unaltered in all their aged Vices, as they leave Children unchanged in their Childish Follies? For where the one only Fountain of Life and Goodness is forsaken, where the Seed of the Divine Birth is not alive, and going forwards in the Birth, all the Difference between Man and Man is as Nothing with Respect to the Kingdom of God.—It matters not what Name is given to the old earthly Man of Adam's bestial Flesh and Blood, whether he be called a zealous Churchman, a stiff-necked Jew, a polite civilized Heathen, or a grave Infidel; under all these Names, the unregenerate old Man has but one and the same Nature, without any other Difference, but that which Time, and Place, Education, Complexion, Hypocrisy, and worldly Wisdom, happen to make in him. By such a one, whether he be Papist, or Protestant, the Gospel is only kept as a Book, and all that is within it is only so much Condemnation to the Keeper, just as the old Man, a Jew, has kept the Book of the Law and Prophets, only to be more fully condemned by them.

That the Jewish and Christian Church stand at this Day in the same Kind of Apostasy, or fallen State, must be manifest to everyone, that will not shut his Eyes against it. Why are the Jews in a fallen State? It is because they have refused Him, who in his whole Process was the Truth, the Substance, the Life, and Fulfilling of all that which was outwardly taught, and prescribed in their Law and Prophets.

But is it not as easy to see, that the whole Christian Church are in a fallen State, and for the same Reason, because they are fallen or turned away from that Holy Spirit who was promised, and given to be the one only Power, Life, and Fulfilling of all that which was outwardly taught, and prescribed by the Gospel. For the Holy Spirit to come was just the same ALL, and FULFILLING of the whole Gospel, as a Christ to come was the All, and the Fulfilling of the Law.—The Jew therefore with his Old Testament, not owning Christ in all his Process to be the Truth and Life, and Fulfiller of their Law, is just in that same Apostasy, as the Christian with his New Testament, not owning the Holy Spirit in all his Operations, to be his only Light, Guide, and Governor.—For as all Types and Figures in the Law were but empty Shadows without Christ's being the Life and Power of them, so all that is written in the Gospel is but dead Letter, unless the Holy Spirit in Man be the living Reader, the living Rememberer, and the living Doer of them. Therefore, where the Holy Spirit is not thus owned and received, as the whole Power and Life of the Gospel State, it is no Marvel, that Christians have no more of Gospel Virtues, than the Jews have of Patriarchal Holiness, or that the same Lusts and Vices which prosper amongst Jews, should break forth with as much Strength in fallen Christendom. For the New Testament not ending in the Coming of the Holy Spirit, with Fulness of Power over Sin and Hell, and the Devil, is but the same, and no better a Help to Heaven, than the Old Testament without the Coming of a Messiah.—Need I now say any more, to demonstrate the Truth of that which I first said was the one Thing absolutely essential, and only available to Man's Salvation, namely, the SPIRIT of God brought again to his FIRST POWER of LIFE IN US. This was the Glory of Man's Creation, and this alone can be the Glory of his Redemption.—All besides this, that passes for a Time betwixt God and Man, be it what it will, shows only our Fall and Distance from God, and in its best State has only the Nature of a good Road, which is only good, because that which we want is at the End of it.—Whilst God calls us by various outward Dispensations, by creaturely Things, figurative Institutions, &c., it is a full Proof, that we are not yet in our true State, or that Union with God which is intended by our Redemption.

An Address to the Clergy. 73

God said to Moses, 'Put off thy Shoes, for the Place whereon thou standest is holy Ground.' Now this which God said to Moses, is only that very same Thing, which Circumcision, the Law, Sacrifices, and Sacraments, say to Man. They are in themselves nothing else but outward Significations of inward Impurity, and lost Holiness, and can do no more in themselves, but intimate, point, and direct to an inward Life and new Birth from above, that is to be sought after.

But here lies the great Mistake, or rather Idolatrous Abuse of all God's outward Dispensations.—They are taken for the Thing itself, for the Truth and Essence of Religion. That which the learned Jews did with the outward Letter of their Law, that same do learned Christians with the outward Letter of their Gospel.—Why did the Jewish Church so furiously and obstinately cry out against Christ, Let him be crucified? It was because their letter-learned Ears, their worldly Spirit, and Temple-Orthodoxy, would not bear to hear of an inward Saviour, not bear to hear of being born again of his Spirit, of eating his Flesh, and drinking his Blood, of his dwelling in them, and They in Him.—To have their Law of Ordinances, their Temple-Pomp sunk into such a Fulfilling Saviour as this, was such enthusiastic Jargon to their Ears, as forced their sober, rational Theology, to call Christ, Beelzebub, his Doctrine, Blasphemy, and all for the sake of Moses and rabbinic Orthodoxy.

74 An Address to the Clergy.

Need it now be asked, Whether the true Christ of the Gospel be less blasphemed, less crucified, by that Christian Theology which rejects an inward Christ, a Saviour living and working in the Soul, as its inward Light and Life, generating his own Nature and Spirit in it, as its only Redemption, whether that which rejects all this as mystic Madness be not that very same old Jewish Wisdom sprung up in Christian Theology, which said of Christ when teaching these very Things, 'He is mad, why hear ye him?' Our blessed Lord in a Parable sets forth the blind Jews, as saying of himself, 'We will not have this man to reign OVER us.'—The sober-minded Christian Scholar has none of this Jewish Blindness, He only says of Christ, we will not have this Man to REIGN IN US, and so keeps clear of such mystic Absurdity, as St. Paul fell into, when he enthusiastically said, 'Yet not I, but Christ that liveth in me.'

Christian Doctors reproach the old learned Rabbis, for their vain Faith, and carnal Desire of a glorious, temporal, outward Christ, who should set up their Temple-Worship all over the World.—Vanity indeed, and learned Blindness enough?

But nevertheless, in these Condemners of rabbinic Blindness, St. Paul's words are remarkably verified, viz., 'Wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself, for thou that judgest dost the same Thing.'—For, take away all that from Christ which Christian Doctors call Enthusiasm, suppose him not to be an inward Birth, a new Life and Spirit within us, but only an outward, separate, Distant heavenly Prince, no more really in us, than our high Cathedrals are in the third Heavens, but only by an invisible hand from his Throne on high, some Way or other raising and helping great Scholars, or great temporal Powers, to make a Rock in every Nation for his Church to stand upon; suppose all this (which is the very Marrow of modern Divinity) and then you have that very outward Christ, and that very outward Kingdom, which the carnal Jew dreamed of, and for the Sake of which the Spiritual Christ was then nailed to the Cross, and is still crucified by the new risen Jew in the Christian Church.—If it now be asked, Whence, or from what, comes all this Spiritual Blindness, which from Age to Age thus mistakes and defeats all the gracious Designs of God towards fallen Mankind? Look at the Origin of the first Sin, and you see it all.—Had Eve desired no Knowledge but what came from God, Paradise had been the Habitation of her and all her offspring.—If after Paradise lost, Jews and Christians had desired no Knowledge but what came from God, the Law and Prophets had kept the Jew close to the first Tree of Life, and the Christian Church had been a Kingdom of God, and Communion of Saints to this Day.

An Address to the Clergy. 75

But now Corruption, Sin, Death, and every Evil of the World, have entered into the Church, the Spouse of Christ, just as they entered into Eve, the Spouse of Adam in Paradise, in the same Way, and from the same Cause, viz., a Desire of more, or other Knowledge, than that which comes from God alone.—This Desire is the Serpent's Voice within every Man, which does all that to him, and in him, which the Serpent at the Tree did to Eve.—It carries on the first deceit, it shows and recommends to him that same beautiful Tree of own Will, own Wit, and own Wisdom, springing up within him, which Eve saw in the Garden; and yet so blind is this Love of Wisdom, as not to see, that his eating of it is in the strictest Truth his eating of the same forbidden Fruits as Eve did, and keeping up in himself all that Death and Separation from God, which the first Knowledge-Hunger brought forth.

Let then the eager Searcher into Words for Wisdom, the Book-Devourer, the Opinion-Broker, the Exalter of human Reason, and every projecting Builder of religious Systems, be told this, that the Thirst and Pride of being learnedly Wise in the Things of God, is keeping up the grossest Ignorance of them, and is nothing else but Eve's old Serpent, and Eve's evil Birth within them, and does no better work in the Church of Christ, than her Thirst after Wisdom did in the Paradise of God.—Speak, Lord, for thy Servant heareth, is the one only Way by which any Man ever did, or ever can attain Divine Knowledge, and Divine Goodness.—To knock at any other door but this, is but like asking Life of that which is itself Dead, or praying to him for Bread who has nothing but stones to give.

Now strange as all this may seem to the labour-learned Possessor of far-fetched Book-Riches, yet it is saying no more, nor any Thing else, but that which Christ said in these Words, 'Except ye be converted, and become as little Children, ye can not enter into the Kingdom of God.' For, if classic Gospellers, Linguist Critics, Scripture-logicians, Salvation Orators, able Dealers in the grammatic Powers of Hebrew, Greek, and Roman Phrases, Idioms, Tropes, Figures, &c., &c., can show, that by raising themselves high in these Attainments, they are the very Men that are sunk Down from themselves into Christ's little Children of the Kingdom of God, then it may be also said, that he who is labouring, scheming, and fighting for all the Riches he can get from both the Indies, is the very Man that has left all to follow Christ, the very Man that 'labours not for the Meat that 'perishes.'

76 An Address to the Clergy.

Show me a Man whose Heart has no Desire, or Prayer in it, but to love God with his whole Soul and Spirit, and his Neighbour as himself, and then you have shown me the Man who knows Christ, and is known of Him;—The best and wisest Man in the World, in whom the first paradisaical Wisdom and Goodness are come to Life.—Not a single Precept in the Gospel, but is the Precept of his own Heart, and the Joy of that new-born heavenly Love which is the Life and Light of his Soul.—In this Man, all that came from the old Serpent is trod under his Feet, not a Spark of Self, of Pride, of Wrath, of Envy, of Covetousness, or worldly Wisdom, can have the least Abode in him, because that Love, which fulfilleth the whole Law and the Prophets, that Love which is God and Christ, both in Angels and Men, is the Love that gives Birth, and Life, and Growth to every Thing that is either Thought, or Word, or Action in Him.—And if He has no Share or Part with foolish Errors, cannot be tossed about with every Wind of Doctrine, it is because, to be Always governed by this Love, is the same Thing as to be Always taught of God.

On the other Hand, show me a Scholar as full of Learning, as the Vatican is of Books, and he will be just as likely to give all that he has for the Gospel-Pearl, as he would be, if he was as rich as Cræsus. Let no one here imagine, that I am writing against all human Literature, Arts and Sciences, or that I wish the World to be without them.—I am no more an Enemy to them, than to the common useful Labours of Life.—It is literal Learning, verbal Contention, and critical Strife about the Things of God, that I charge with Folly and Mischief to Religion. And in this, I have all learned Christendom, both Popish and Protestant on my Side. For they both agree in charging each other with a bad and false Gospel-State, because of that which their Learning, Logic, and Criticism do for them. Say not then, that it is only the iliterate Enthusiast that condemns human Learning in the Gospel Kingdom of God. For when he condemns the Blindness and Mischief of popish Logic and Criticism, he has all the Learned Protestant World with him; and when he lays the same Charge to Protestant Learning, he has a much larger Kingdom of popish great Scholars, logically and learnedly affirming the same Thing. So that the private Person, charging human Learning with so much Mischief to the Church, is so far from being led by Enthusiasm, that he is led by all the Church-learning that is in the World.

Again, all learned Christendom agrees in the same Charge against temporal Power in the Church, as hurtful to the very Being and Progress of a Salvation-Kingdom that is not of this World, as supporting Doctrines that human Learning has brought into it. And true it is and must be, that human Power can only support and help forward human Things.—The Protestant brings Proof from a thousand Years' Learning and Doctrines, that the Pope is an unjust Usurper of temporal Power in the Church, which is Christ's spiritual Spouse. The Papist brings the Learning of as many Ages to show that a temporal Head of the Church is an Anti-Christian Usurpation.—And yet (N.B.) he who holds Christ to be the one, only Head, Heart, and Life of the Church, and that no Man can call Jesus, Lord, but by the Holy Ghost, passes with the learned of both these People for a brain-sick Enthusiast.—Is it not then high Time to look out for some better Ground to stand upon, than such Learning as this? Now look where you will, through all the whole Nature of Things, no Divine Wisdom, Knowledge, Goodness, and deliverance from Sin, are anywhere to be found for fallen Man, but in these two Points; (1) a total entire Entrance into the whole Process of Christ; (2) a total Resignation to, and sole Dependence upon the continual Operation of the Holy Ghost, or Christ come again in the Spirit, to be our never-ceasing Light, Teacher, and Guide into all those Ways of Virtue, in which He himself walked in the Flesh.—All besides this, call it by what Name you will, is but dead Work, a vain Labour of the old Man, to new create himself. And here let it be well observed, that in these two Points consists the whole of that mystic Divinity, to which a Jewish Orthodoxy at this Day is so great an Enemy. For nothing else is meant, or taught by it, but a total dying to Self (called the Process or Cross of Christ) that a new Creature (called Christ in us, or Christ come in the Spirit) may be begotten in the Purity, and Perfection of the first Man's Union with God.—Now, let the Christian World forget, or depart from this one mystic Way of Salvation, let anything else be thought of or trusted to but the Cross of Christ, and the Spirit of Christ, and then, though Churches, and Preachers, and Prayers, and Sacraments are everywhere in Plenty, yet nothing better can come of it than a Christian Kingdom of Pagan Vices, along with a Mouth-Belief of an holy catholic Church, and Communion of Saints.—To this melancholy Truth, all Christendom both at home and abroad bears full Witness. Who need be told, that there is not a Corruption or Depravity of human Nature, no Kinds of Pride, Wrath, Envy, Malice, and Self-love; no sorts of Hypocrisy, Falseness, Cursing, Swearing, Perjury, and Cheating; no Wantonness of Lust in every Kind of Debauchery, but are as common all over Christendom, as Towns and Villages?—But to pass these by, I shall only instance in two or three Particulars, which though little observed, and less condemned, yet fully show that the Beast, the Whore, and the fiery Dragon, are in Possession of Protestant as well as Popish Churches.

An Address to the Clergy. 77

78 An Address to the Clergy.

And First, can it be said that Mammon is less served by Christians, than by Jews and Infidels? Or can there be a fuller Proof that Christians, Jews, and Infidels, are equally fallen from God and all Divine Worship, since Truth itself has told us, that we cannot serve God and Mammon? Is not this as unalterable a Truth, and of as great Moment, as if it had been said, Ye cannot serve God and Baal? Or can it with any Truth or Sense be affirmed, that the Mammonist has more of Christ in him than the Baalist, or is more or less an Idolater for being called a Christian, a Jew, or an Infidel? Look now at all those Particulars which Christ charged upon the Jewish Priests, Scribes, and Pharisees, and you will see them all acted over again in the fallen State of Christendom. And if God's Prophets were again in the World, they would have just the same Complaints against the fallen Christian Church, as they had against the old carnal stiff-necked Jews, namely, 'that of their Silver and Gold they had 'made themselves Idols,' Hos. viii. 4. For though figured Idol-Gods of Gold are not now worshipped either by Jews or Christians, yet Silver and Gold with that which belongs to them is the Mammon God, that sits and reigns in their Hearts. How else could there be that universal Strife through all Christendom, who should stand in the richest and highest Place, to preach up the Humility of Christ, and offer spiritual Sacrifices unto God? What God but Mammon could put into the Hearts of Christ's Ambassadors, to make, or want to make a Gain of that Gospel, which from the Beginning to the End means nothing else but Death to Self, and Separation from every View, Temper, and Affection, that has any Connection with the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life?—Our Blessed Lord said a Word to the Jews, that might well have made their Ears to tingle, when he told them, that they 'had made his Father's 'House a Den of Thieves'; because Sheep and Oxen were sold, and Money-Changers sitting in the outer Court of the Temple.—Now if you will say, that Mammon has brought forth no Profanation like this in our Christian Church, your best Proof must be this, because our Church-Sale, is not Oxen and Sheep, but holy Things, Cures of Souls, Parsonages, Vicarages, &c., and our Money-Changers, our Buyers, and Sellers, are chiefly consecrated Persons.

Look at Things spiritual, and Things temporal, and say if you can, that the same Arts, the same Passions, and worldly Wisdom, are not as visibly Active in the One, as in the Other.—For if Christ at leaving the World had said to his Disciples, Labour to be Rich ;—Make full Provision for the Flesh ;—Be conformed to the World ;—Court the Favour and Interest of great Men ;—Clothe yourselves with all the worldly Honours, Distinctions, and Powers you can get ; I appeal to every Man, whether Popish and Protestant Churches need do any Thing else, than that which they now do, and have done for Ages, to prove their Faithfulness to such a Master, and their full Obedience to his Precepts. And now, what is all this in Truth and Reality, but the same Whore riding upon the same Beast, not here or there, but through all fallen Christendom, where God has only, in every Age, People, and Language, his seven Thousands, who have not bowed the Knee to Mammon ?

An Address to the Clergy. 79

Again, Secondly, ‘Ye have heard,’ says our Lord, ‘that it hath ‘been said by them of Old ; thou shalt not forswear thyself, but ‘shalt perform unto the Lord thine Oaths.’—The Jews practised promissary Oaths, and thought all was well, when there was a Performance of them.—But this, with Numbers of other Jewish Practices, was not to be allowed in this Kingdom of God, that was then come into the World.—Christ totally rejects, and absolutely forbids it, saying, ‘I say unto you, swear not at all.’ But instead of it, he appoints and absolutely demands a most perfect Simplicity of Language, to support and adorn the mutual Communication of those, whom He had created again unto Righteousness, and given Power to become Sons of God, saying, ‘Let your ‘Communication be YEA, YEA, and NAY, NAY, for (N.B.) ‘Whatsoever is more than this, cometh of Evil.’—What more could have been done by Christ to prevent the Use, or hinder the Entrance of an Oath into his Church ? What then shall we say of the present Universal Christendom ? For if Christ had commanded the direct contrary, had He said, behold I give you this new Commandment, let not a simple YEA and NAY be of any Avail in all your Communication, but let Oaths be required of all that bear my Name, as a Proof that they belong to me, and Act in all their Dealings as become Saints ; for whatsoever is less than this, cometh of Evil.—Had this been Christ’s new Commandment, all the Churches of Christendom, as well Popish as Protestant, and these reformed Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, might have much to boast of their Obedience to it. For through Town and Country, in all ignorant Villages, in all learned Colleges, in all Courts Spiritual and Temporal, what with Law-Oaths, Corporation-Oaths, Office-Oaths, Trade-Oaths, Qualification-Oaths, Simony-Oaths, Bribery-Oaths, Election-Oaths, &c., &c., &c., there is more Swearing and For-swearing, than all

80 An Address to the Clergy.

History Reports of any Idol-worshipping Nations.—It was said of Old, 'Because of Swearing, the Land mourneth'; It is full as true to say now, Because of Swearing, the Land rejoiceth in Iniquity, is full of Profaneness, and without any Fear or Awe of the Divine Majesty, daily swallowing down all Manner of Oaths, in the same good State of Mind, and with as much serious Reflection, as Pot-companions swallow down their Liquor.

'He that despiseth me,' says Christ, 'despiseth not me, but 'him that sent me.'—Can that Church, which absolutely requires That which Christ has absolutely forbidden, be free from the most open and public Despising of Christ, which in full Contrariety to his express Word, refuses the Sufficiency of that Yea and Nay, which He has commanded to be sufficient; and what is still more wonderful, compels all Orders of Christians to swear by that very Book, which says to all, whether high or low, Prince, Priest, or People, SWEAR NOT AT ALL?

If the Swearing Law was to order, that instead of kissing the Gospel-Book, the Swearer should say, 'In Remembrance of, and 'in Regard to the Words of Christ, forbidding me to swear, I 'make this Oath,' who would not see the open Contempt of Christ and his Gospel? But the Contempt of both is as truly there, when the Gospel-Book is kissed by the Swearer; for the Book has Nothing relating to Oaths, but those Words of Christ, which absolutely forbid the Use of them.—Instead, therefore, of a SO HELP ME GOD and his HOLY GOSPEL, it might have been much better, if every Swearing Law through all Christendom had obliged every Swearer to finish his Oath with these Words, Let God and his holy Gospel PARDON ME IN THIS ONE THING.

If it here be asked, Whether I would have all private Christians to beggar themselves, and lose all their Right and Title to House and Land, which by the Laws of Christendom, cannot be preserved without certain promissary Oaths? I say not so.—But my Answer is, that as the Jews were of old carried captive into Babylon, so as real a Captivity, and full as great, must happen to all private Christians, born and living under a fallen State of governing Christendom.—For whether it be a Pope, or a Nebuchadnezzar, popish, or protestant Church Governors, that make the Goods and Properties of private Christians, only possible to be possessed by Obedience to their swearing Laws, the Captivity is the same.—And as God bore with the Want of a Jerusalem-Worship in those Jews, whose Captivity suffered them not to perform it, so it may well be hoped and believed, that he will bear with that Want of Gospel Purity, in the Yea and Nay of private Christians, which their Captivity under a fallen State of Christian Government suffers them not constantly to adhere to.—And also, that the Piety of private Christians, loving and longing after Gospel-Purity of Communication, under their Church-Captivity, will be as acceptable to God, as the Piety of captive Jews was, who though living under Heathen Laws, and forced to say their Prayers in Babylon, yet had always their Eyes turned towards, and their Hearts longing after Jerusalem and its holy Worship.

An Address to the Clergy. 81

What I write, is not to show that Christendom's Oaths, and the Manner of them, are not to be submitted to by any private good Christian, but to show in the plainest Manner, that the Laws of Christendom, which make them necessary, are a full Proof that the Spirit which governs all Christendom, is fallen away from the Spirit of Christ. And also to show, that if gross Impiety runs through all the Christian World, if much and much the greatest Part of Swearing Christians have lost all pious Fear of Oaths and Swearing, it is because the Necessity of Swearing meets every Man, in almost every Thing, at the Peril of losing all that he has, or can have, unless he will Swear.

When the Matter of an Oath is a manifest Lie, or an Engagement to do some wicked Thing, all is to be suffered, rather than take it.—But where there is nothing false or bad, affirmed or promised, nor any Blame chargeable, but that of going further than our Lord's Yea and Nay, it is plain from Christ's Words, that the Evil is only in That, and There, from whence the Oath comes.

When a Person swears of his own Accord, or wantonly, then the Oath comes of, or from the Evil of his own Heart. But when a Christian, in whose Heart the Simplicity and Purity of Gospel-Language is written and loved, when he submits to use more than a Yea or Nay, compelled by that Authority which makes the Refusal to be the Loss of Goods, and bodily Imprisonment, then such Departure from Gospel-Language comes of and from the Evil in that Power which required it, whether it be a Pope, a Kirk, a Church, an Assembly of Divines, or a Nebuchadnezzar.—All this, I say, is plain from Christ's own Words.—'Let your Yea be Yea, and your Nay Nay.' But why so? It is because, whatsoever is more than this cometh of Evil, that is, is caused by Evil.—Therefore the Evil that is in the Use of an imposed Oath, is by the Words of Christ, charged upon and confined to That, which causes or forces it to be done.—For that which the Oath comes from, is that which our Saviour calls the Evil of it; but the Oath comes from that which causes it, therefore, that which causes Swearing, is by our Saviour's Words charged with all the Evil of the Oath.—But (N.B.) all this supposed Freedom from the Evil of an imposed Oath, in the private Christian's Submission to the Use of it, is only then and there, where what is affirmed, or denied by the Oath, has all that Innocence, Truth, or Righteousness in it, which the true Yea or Nay of Christ might justly affirm, or deny.

But here let it be well observed, that nothing that has here been said, is intended to blame the Piety of those, who on no Account whatsoever will be prevailed upon to take any Kind of Oath, because our Lord and Master has said, 'Swear not at all.' I am so far from blaming this, or looking upon it, as the Effect of a false or blind Piety, that I wish with my whole Heart, it may come to be the Piety of all the three Estates of this Kingdom; and that all swearing, whether in secular or religious Matters, may by all the Authority of the Nation be as utterly condemned, as absolutely renounced, and declared to be as Antichristian, as the Pope's Supremacy.

In a Word, That which calls for, and requires Oaths among Christians, requires That which Christ forbids; but governing Christendom everywhere establishes, requires, and even compels Christians to swear, therefore governing Christendom is fallen from Christ, and acts by and through that Spirit, which being contrary to Christ, is and must be called ANTICHRIST.

But to proceed now to a third and last Instance, which I shall mention, of the full Power of Antichrist in and through every Part of governing Christendom.

In the darkest Ages of Romish Superstition, a Martial Spirit of Zeal and Glory for the Gospel, broke forth in Kings, Cardinals, Bishops, Monks, and Friars, to lead the Sheep of Christ, Saints, Pilgrims, Penitents, and Sinners of all Kinds, to proceed in Battle Array, to kill, devour, and drive the Turks from the Land of Palestine, and the old earthly Jerusalem. These Bloodthirsty Expeditions were called an holy War, because it was a fighting for the holy Land; they were called also a Croisade, because Crosses and Crucifixes made the greatest Glitter among the sharpened Instruments of human Murder.—Thus under the Banner of the Cross went forth an Army of Church Wolves, to destroy the Lives of those, whom the Lamb of God died on the Cross to save.

The Light which broke out at the Reformation, abhorred the bloody superstitious Zeal of these Catholic Heroes.—But (N.B.) what followed from this new risen, reforming Light, what came forth instead of these holy Croisades? Why Wars, if possible, still more diabolical.—Christian Kingdoms with bloodthirsty Piety, destroying, devouring, and burning one another, for the Sake of That which was called Popery, and That which was called Protestantism.

An Address to the Clergy. 83

Now who can help seeing, that Satan, the Prince of the Powers of Darkness, had here a much greater Triumph over Christendom, than in all the holy Wars and Croisades that went before? For all that was then done, by such high-spirited Fighters for old Jerusalem's Earth, could not be said to be so much done against Gospel-Light, because not one in a Thousand of those holy Warriors were allowed to see what was in the Gospel. But now, with the Gospel opened in everyone's Hands, Papists and Protestants make open War against every Divine Virtue that belonged to Christ, or that can unite them with that Lamb of God, that taketh away the Sins of the World:—I say against every Divine, redeeming Virtue of the Lamb of God, for these are the Enemies which Christian War conquers. For there is not a Virtue of Gospel-goodness, but has its Death-blow from it.—For no Virtue has any Gospel-goodness in it any further, than as it has its Birth and Growth in and from the Spirit of Christ; where his Nature and Spirit is not, there is nothing but the Heathen to be found, which is but saying the same Truth, as when the Apostle said, that He who hath not, or is not led by the Spirit of Christ, is none of his.

Now fancy to yourself Christ, the Lamb of God, after his Divine Sermon on the Mount, putting himself at the Head of a blood-thirsty Army, or St. Paul going forth with a Squadron of Fire and Brimstone, to make more Havoc in human Lives than a devouring Earthquake.

But if this be too blasphemous an Absurdity to be supposed, what follows, but that the Christian who acts in the destroying Fury of War, acts in full Contrariety to the whole Nature and Spirit of Christ, and can no more be said to be led by his Spirit, or be one with Him, than those his Enemies who 'came forth with Swords and Staves to take him.'

Blinded Protestants think they have the Glory of slaughtering blind Papists; and the victorious Papist claims the Merit of having conquered Troops of Heretics: But alas! the Conquest is equally great on both Sides, both are entitled to the same Victory; and the glorious Victory on both Sides, is only that of having Gospel Goodness equally under their Feet.

When a Most Christian Majesty, with his Catholic Church, sings a Te Deum at the high Altar, for Rivers of Protestant Blood poured out; or an Evangelic Church sings Praise and Glory to the Lamb of God, for helping them from his holy Throne in Heaven, to make popish Towns like to Sodom and Gomorrah, they blaspheme God as much as Cain would have done, had he offered a Sacrifice of Praise to God for helping him to murder his Brother.—Let such Worshippers of God be told this, that the Field of Blood gives all its Glory to Satan, who was a Murderer from the Beginning, and will to the End of his Reign be the only Receiver of all the Glory, that can come from it.

A glorious Alexander in the heathen World is a Shame and Reproach to the human Nature, and does more Mischief to Mankind in a few Years, than all the wild Beasts, in every Wilderness upon Earth, have ever done from the Beginning of the World to this Day.—But the same Hero, making the same Ravage from Country to Country with Christian Soldiers, has more Thanks from the Devil, than twenty Pagan Alexanders would ever have had.—To make Men kill Men, is Meat and Drink to that roaring Adversary of Mankind, who goeth about seeking whom he may devour. But to make Christians kill Christians for the Sake of Christ's Church, is his highest Triumph over the highest Mark, which Christ has set upon those whom he has purchased by his Blood.—'This Commandment,' says he, 'I give unto you, that ye love one another.—By this shall all Men know that ye are my Disciples, if ye love one another as I have loved you.'

Can the Duelist, who had rather sheathe his Sword in the Bowels of his Brother, than stifle that which he calls an Affront, can he be said to have this Mark of his belonging to Christ? and may not he that is called his SECOND, more justly be said to be Second to none in the Love of human Murder?—Now, what is the Difference between the haughty Duelist with his provided Second, meeting his Adversary with Sword and Pistol behind a Hedge, or a House, and two Kingdoms with their high-spirited Regiments slaughtering one another in the Field of Battle? It is the Difference that is between the Murder of one Man, and the Murder of an hundred thousand.

Now imagine the Duelist fasting and confessing his Sins to God to Day, because he is engaged to fight his Brother To-morrow; fancy again the Conqueror got into his Closet, on his bended Knees, lifting up Hands and Heart to God for blessing his Weapons with the Death of his Brother; and then you have a Picture in Little of the great Piety, that begins and ends the Wars all over heavenly Christendom.

What Blindness can well be greater, than to think that a Christian Kingdom, as such, can have any other Goodness, or Union with Christ, but that very Goodness, which makes the private Christian to be one with Him, and a Partaker of the Divine Nature? Or that Pride, Wrath, Ambition, Envy, Covetousness, Rapine, Resentment, Revenge, Hatred, Mischief, and Murder, are only the Works of the Devil, whilst they are committed by private or single Men; but when carried on by all the Strength and Authority, all the Hearts, Hands, and Voices of a whole Nation, that the Devil is then quite driven out of them, loses all his Right and Power in them, and they become holy Matter of Church Thanksgivings, and the sacred Oratory of Pulpits.

An Address to the Clergy. 85

Look at that which the private Christian is to do to his Neighbour, or his Enemy, and you see that very Thing, which one Christian Kingdom is to do to another. Look at that which proves a Man to be not led and governed by the Spirit of Christ, and you see that, which proves a Kingdom to be under the Dominion and Power of Satan.—Wherever Pride is, there the Devil is riding in his first fiery Chariot; and wherever Wrath is, there he has his first murdering Sword at Work.—What is it, that fallen Man wants to be redeemed from, but Pride and Wrath, Envy and Covetousness? He can have no higher Separation or Apostasy from God, no fuller Union with Satan and his Angels, than he has of the Spirit of these Tempers: They constitute that, which whether you call it SELF, or Satan in him, the Meaning is the same. Now suppose Man not fallen into this Self or Satan, and then there could be no more War or fighting in him, than there was in the WORD made Man in our Flesh. Or suppose him redeemed from his fallen Nature, by a new Birth of the Lamb of God born in his Soul, and then he can no more be hired to kill Men gloriously in the Field, than to carry a dark Lanthorn by Night to a Powder-Plot.

Love, Goodness, and Communication of Good, is the immutable Glory and Perfection of the Divine Nature, and nothing can have Union with God, but that which partakes of this Goodness.—The Love that brought forth the Existence of all Things, changes not through the Fall of its Creatures, but is continually at work, to bring back all fallen Nature and Creature to their first State of Goodness. All that passes for a Time between God and his fallen Creature, is but one and the same Thing, working for one and the same End; and though this is called Wrath, that called Punishment, Curse, and Death, it is all from the Beginning to the End, nothing but the Work of the first creating Love, and means nothing else, does nothing else, but those Works of purifying Fire, which must, and alone can burn away all that dark Evil, which separates the Creature from its first created Union with God.—God's Providence, from the Fall to the Restitution of all Things, is doing the same Thing, as when he said to the dark Chaos of fallen Nature, 'Let there be light'; He still says, and will continue saying the same Thing, till there is no Evil of Darkness left in all that is Nature and Creature.—God creating, God illuminating, God sanctifying, God threatening and punishing, God forgiving and redeeming, is but one and the same essential, immutable, never ceasing Working of the Divine Nature. That in God which illuminates and glorifies Saints and Angels in Heaven, is that very same working of the Divine Nature, which wounds, pains, punishes, and purifies Sinners upon Earth. And (N.B.) every number of destroyed Sinners, whether thrown by Noah's flood, or Sodom's Brimstone, into the terrible Furnace of a Life, insensible of any Thing but new Forms of raging Misery till Judgment's Day, must through the all-working, all-redeeming Love of God, which never ceases, come at last to know that they had lost, and have found again such a God of Love as this.

86 An Address to the Clergy.

And if long and long Ages of fiery Pain, and tormenting Darkness, fall to the Share of many, or most of God's Apostate Creatures, they will last no longer, than till the great fire of God has melted all Arrogance into Humility, and all that is SELF has died in the long Agonies and Bloody Sweat of a lost God, which is that all-saving Cross of Christ, which will never give up its redeeming Power, till Sin and Sinners have no more a Name among the Creatures of God.—And if long Ages hereafter can only do that for a Soul, departing this Life under a Load of Sins, which Days and Nights might have done for a most hardened Pharaoh, or a most wicked Nero, whilst in the Body, it is because, whilst the Soul is in the Body, it has only the Nature and State of fallen Adam, but when Flesh and Blood are taken from it, the strong apostate Nature of fallen Angels is found in it, which must have its State and Place in that Blackness of Darkness of a fiery Wrath, that burns in them and their Kingdom.

O poor Sinner, whoever thou art, repent and turn to God, whilst thou hast Adam's Flesh upon Thee ; for as long as that lasts, the Kingdom of God is nigh at hand ; but if thou diest without Adam's Repentance, black Lakes, bottomless Pits, Ages of a gnawing Worm, and Fire that never ceases to burn, will stand between Thee and a Kingdom of Heaven afar off.

To prevent all this, and make Thee a Child of the first Resurrection, Jesus Christ, God and Man, the only begotten Son of this infinite Love, came into the World in the Name, and under the Character of infinite Pity, boundless Compassion, inexpressible Meekness, bleeding Love, nameless Humility, never ending Patience, long suffering, and Bowels of redeeming Mercy, called the Lamb of God, who with all these supernatural Virtues taketh away the Sins of the World.

Now from this View of God's infinite Love and Mercy in Christ Jesus, willing nothing, seeking nothing through all the Regions of his Providence, but that Sinners of all Kinds, the boldest Rebels against all his Goodness, may have their proper Remedy, their necessary Means of being fully delivered from all that Hurt, Mischief, and Destruction, which in full Opposition to their God and Creator, they had brought upon themselves; from this View I say, of God and Christ, using every Miracle of Love and Wisdom to give recovery of Life, Health, and Salvation to all that have rebelled against them, look at the murdering Monster of WAR. And what can its Name, or Nature be, but a fiery great Dragon, a full Figure of Satan broke loose, and fighting against every redeeming Virtue of the Lamb of God?

An Address to the Clergy. 87

The temporal Miseries and Wrongs which War carries along with it, wherever it goes, are neither to be numbered or expressed.—What Thievery bears any Proportion to that, which with the boldness of Drum and Trumpet plunders the innocent of all that they have? And if themselves are left alive with all their Limbs, or their Daughters unravished, they have many Times only the Ashes of their consumed Houses to lie down upon.—What Honour has War not gotten from its Tens and Tens of Hundreds of Thousands of Men Slaughtered on Heaps, with as little Regret or Concern, as at Loads of Rubbish thrown into a Pit?—Who, but the fiery Dragon, would put Wreaths of Laurel on such Heroes' Heads? Who but He could say unto them, 'Well done, good and faithful Servants'?

But there is still an Evil of War much greater, though less regarded.—Who reflects, how many Hundreds of Thousands, nay Millions of young Men, born into this World for no other End, but that they may be Born again of Christ, and from Sons of Adam's Misery become Sons of God, and fellow Heirs with Christ in everlasting Glory; who reflects, I say, what nameless Numbers of these are robbed of God's precious Gift of Life to them, before they have known the one sole Benefit of Living; who are not suffered to stay in this World, till Age and Experience have done their best for them, have helped them to know the inward Voice and Operation of God's Spirit, helped them to find, and feel that evil, Curse, and Sting of Sin and Death, which must be taken from within them, before they can die the Death of the Righteous; but instead of all this, have been either violently forced, or tempted in the Fire of Youth, and full strength of sinful Lusts, to forget God, Eternity, and their own Souls, and rush into a kill or be killed, with as much furious haste, and goodness of Spirit, as Tiger kills Tiger for the sake of his Prey?

That God's Providence over his fallen Creatures is nothing else but a Providence of Love and Salvation, turning through Ways of infinite Wisdom, sooner or later, all kinds of Evil into a new Good, making that which was lost to be found, that which was dead to be alive again; not willing that one single Sinner should want That which can save him from eternal Death, is a Truth as certain, as that God's Name is, I AM that I AM.

Among unfallen Creatures in Heaven, God's Name and Nature is LOVE, LIGHT, and GLORY.—To the fallen Sons of Adam, that which was Love, Light, and Glory in Heaven, becomes infinite PITY and COMPASSION on Earth, in a God clothed with the Nature of his fallen Creature, bearing all its Infirmities, entering into all its Troubles, and in the meek Innocence of a Lamb of God living a Life, and dying a Death, of all the Sufferings due to Sin.—Hence it was, that when this DIVINE PITY suffered its own life-giving Blood to be poured on the Ground, all outward Nature made full Declaration of its atoning and redeeming Power; the Strength of the Earth did Quake, the Hardness of Rocks was forced to Split, and long-covered Graves to give up their Dead.—A certain Presage, that all that came by the Curse into Nature and Creature must give up its Power; that all Kinds of hellish Wrath, hardened Malice, fiery Pride, selfish Wills, tormenting Envy, and earthly Passions, which kept Men under the Power of Satan, must have their Fulness of Death, and Fulness of a new Life, from that all-powerful, all-purifying Blood of the Lamb, which will never cease washing RED into WHITE, till the Earth is washed into the Crystal Purity of that Glassy Sea, which is before the Throne of God, and all the Sons of Adam clothed in such White, as fits them for their several Mansions in their Heavenly Father's House.

Sing, O ye Heavens, and Shout all ye lower Parts of the Earth, this is OUR GOD that varies not, whose first creating Love for knows no Change, but into a redeeming Pity towards all his fallen Creatures.

Look now at Warring Christendom, what smallest Drop of Pity towards Sinners is to be found in it? Or how could a Spirit all Hellish, more fully contrive and hasten their Destruction? It stirs up and kindles every Passion of fallen Nature that is contrary to the all-humble, all-meek, all-loving, all-forgiving, all-saving Spirit of Christ.—It unites, it drives, and compels nameless Numbers of unconverted Sinners to fall, Murdering and Murdered among Flashes of Fire, with the Wrath and Swiftmess of Lightning, into a Fire infinitely worse than that in which they Died.—O sad Subject for Thanksgiving Days, whether in Popish or Protestant Churches! For if there is a Joy of all the Angels in Heaven for one Sinner that repents, what a Joy must there be in Hell over such Multitudes of Sinners, not suffered to repent? And if they who have 'converted many to Righteousness, shall 'Shine as the Stars in the Firmament for ever,' what Chorazin's Woe may they not justly fear, whose proud Wrath and vain Glory have robbed such numberless Troops of poor Wretches, of all Time and Place of knowing what Righteousness they wanted, for the Salvation of their immortal Souls.

An Address to the Clergy. 89

Here my Pen trembles in my Hand; but when, O when will one single Christian Church, People, or Language, tremble at the Share they have in this Death of Sinners!

For the GLORY OF HIS MAJESTY'S ARMS, said once a Most Christian King: Now if at that Time, his Catholic Church had called a solemn Assembly to unite Hearts and Voices in this pious Prayer, 'O blessed Jesus, dear redeeming Lamb of God, 'who camest down from Heaven, to save Men's Lives, and not 'destroy them, go along, we humbly pray Thee, with our Bomb-'Vessels and Fire-Ships, suffer not our thundering Cannon to 'roar in Vain, but let thy tender Hand of Love and Mercy direct 'their Balls to more Heads and Hearts of thine own redeemed 'Creatures, than the poor Skill of Man is able of itself to do':—Had not such Prayers had more of the Man of the Earth, more of the Son of Perdition in them, than the Most Christian King's glorying in his Arms?

Again, would you further see the Fall of the Universal Church, from being led by the Spirit of Christ, to be guided by the Inspiration of the great fiery Dragon, look at all European Christendom sailing round the Globe with Fire and Sword, and every murdering Art of War, to seize the Possessions, and kill the Inhabitants of both the Indies.—What natural Right of Man, what supernatural Virtue which Christ brought down from Heaven, was not here trodden under Foot? All that you ever read or heard of Heathen Barbarity, was here outdone by Christian Conquerors. And to this Day, what Wars of Christians against Christians, blended with Scalping Heathens, still keep staining the Earth and the Seas with human Blood, for a miserable Share in the Spoils of a plundered Heathen World! A World, which should have heard, or seen, or felt nothing from the Followers of Christ, but a Divine Love, that had forced them from distant Lands, and through the Perils of long Seas, to visit Strangers with those glad Tidings of Peace and Salvation to all the World, which Angels from Heaven, and Shepherds on Earth, proclaimed at the Birth of Christ.

Here now, let the Wisdom of this World be as Wise as ever it will, and from its learned Throne condemn all this as Enthusiasm; it need be no Trouble to anyone, to be condemned by that Wisdom, which God himself has condemned as Foolishness with Him. For the Wisdom of this World has all the Contrariety to Salvation-Wisdom, that the Flesh has to the Spirit, Earth to Heaven, or Damnation to Salvation. It is a Wisdom, whose Spirit and Breath keep all the Evil that is in fallen Man alive, and which in its highest Excellence has only the full grown Nature of that carnal Mind, which is Enmity against God.—It is a Wisdom that is Sensual, and Devilish, that hinders Man from knowing, and dying all those Deaths, without which there can be no new Life.—It is a Wisdom that turns all Salvation-Truths into empty, learned Tales, that instead of helping the Sinner to confess his Sins, and feel the Misery that is hid under them, helps him to an Art of hiding, nay of defending them. For that which the Lusts and Passions do contrary to the Wisdom from above, is proved to be right Reason by this Wisdom from below, whose greatest Skill is shown, in keeping all the Powers and Passions of the Natural Man in Peace and Prosperity; and so the poor blinded Sinner lives and dies in a total Ignorance of all that Light, blessing, and Salvation, which could only be had by a broken and contrite Heart.—For (N.B.) with Respect to Conscience, this is the chief Office of Worldly Wisdom; it is to keep all Things quiet in the Old Man, that whether busied in Things spiritual, or temporal, he may keep up the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life, without any Disturbance from Religious Phantoms, and Dreams of mystic Idiots, who for want of sober Sense and sound Learning, think that Christ really meant what he said in these Words, ‘Except a Man be born again of the Spirit, or from above, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.’—For this Wisdom, come to its highest perfection, is a Classic Moral Painter, which though it cannot alter the Nature, yet can change the Colours of every Thing; it can give to the most heavenly Virtue such an outward Form and Colour, as will force the Stoutest of aged and learned Men to run away from it; and to a Vice of the greatest Deformity it can pencil such charming Features, as will make every Child of this World, wish to live and die with it.—Its next Perfection is that of a flattering Orator, who has Praise and Dispraise at his own free Disposal; for as they are all of his own making, so he can dispose them on whom, and on what he will; not only as outward interesting Occasions call for them, but also as the inward Necessities, the Ups and Downs of his own poor Self want them. For Self, however willing to be always strong, has its weak Hours, and would be ever tottering, unless this Elbow-Orator kept him every Day (though perhaps not every Night) free from the disturbing Whispers of a Seed of God in his Soul.—Now join (if you please) Learning and Religion to act in fellowship with this worldly Wisdom, and make their best of it, and then you will have a Depravity of Craft and Subtlety as high as Flesh and Blood can carry it, which will bring forth a glittering Pharisee, with a hardness of Heart, greater than that of the Sinner Publican.

‘Demas,’ says St. Paul, ‘hath forsaken me, having loved this present World.’—Here you see all the Good and Blessing that is inseparable from the Wisdom of this World, it always does the same Thing, and has the same Effect wherever it is; it will do to high and low, learned or unlearned, Clergy or Laity, that same unavoidably which it did to Demas; it will make them forsake Christ, turn their Backs on every Grace and Virtue of his Holy Spirit, as certainly as the Love of the World made Demas to forsake Paul.

An Address to the Clergy. 91

This Wisdom has asked me, how it is possible for Christian Kingdoms in the Neighbourhood of one another to preserve themselves, unless the Strength and Weapons of War are everyone's Defence, against such Invasions, Encroachments, and Robberies, as would otherwise be the Fate of Christian Kingdoms from one another.

This Question is so far from needing to be answered by me, that it is wholly on my Side; it confesses all, and proves all that I have said of the fallen State of Christendom, to be strictly true.—For if this is the governing Spirit of Christian Kingdoms, that no one of them can subsist in Safety from its neighbouring Christian Kingdoms, but by its Weapons of War, are not all Christian Kingdoms equally in the same unchristian State, as two neighbouring bloody Knaves, who cannot be safe from one another, but as each other's murdering Arms preserve and protect them? This Plea therefore for Christendom's Wars, proves nothing else but the want of Christianity all over the Christian World, and stands upon no better a Foundation of Righteousness and Goodness, than when one Murdering Knave kills another that would have killed him.

But to know whether Christianity wants, or admits of War, Christianity is to be considered as in its right State.—Now the true State of the World turned Christian, is thus described by the great Gospel-Prophet, who showed what a Change it was to make in the fallen State of the World.—‘It shall come to pass,’ says he, ‘in the last Days,’ that is, in the Days of Christendom, ‘that the ‘Mountain of the Lord's House’ (his Christian Kingdom) ‘shall ‘be established in the Top of the Mountains, and all Nations ‘shall flow into it; and many People shall say, Let us go up to ‘the Mountain of the Lord's House, and he will teach us of his ‘Ways, and we will walk in his Paths,’ Isaiah ii. 2.

Now what follows from this going up of the Nations to the Mountain of the Lord's House, from his teaching them of his Ways, and their walking in his Paths? The holy Prophet expressly tells you in his following Words, ‘They shall beat their ‘Swords into Plough-Shares, and their Spears into pruning ‘Hooks: Nation shall not lift up its Sword against Nation, ‘(N.B.) neither shall they learn War any more.’—This is the Prophet's true Christendom, with one and the same essential Divine Mark set upon it, as when the Lamb of God said, 'By 'this shall all Men know that ye are my Disciples, if ye Love 'one another as I have loved you.'—Christ's Kingdom of God is nowhere come, but where the Works of the Devil are destroyed, and Men are turned from the Power of Satan unto God.—God is only another Name for the highest and only Good; and the highest and only Good means nothing else but LOVE with all its WORKS.—Satan is only another Name for the Whole and all of Evil, and the whole of Evil is nothing else but its whole Contrariety to Love.—And the Sum Total of all Contrariety to Love is contained in Pride, Wrath, Strife, Self, Envy, Hatred, Revenge, Mischief, and Murder. Look at these with all their Fruits that belong to them, and then you see all the princely Power that Satan is, and has in this fallen World.

92 An Address to the Clergy.

Would you see when and where the Kingdoms of this fallen World are become a Kingdom of God, the Gospel Prophet tells you, that it is then and there where all Enmity ceases.—'The 'Wolf,' says he, 'shall dwell with the Lamb, and the Leopard 'shall lie down with the Kid. The Calf and the young Lion and 'the Fatling together, and a little Child shall lead them. The 'Cow and the Bear shall feed, and their young ones shall lie down 'together, and the Lion shall eat Straw like the Ox. The suck-'ling Child shall play on the Hole of the Asp, and the weaned 'Child shall put his Hand on the Cockatrice's Den.'—For, (N.B.) 'they shall not HURT or DESTROY in all my holy Mountain,' that is, through all holy Christendom, Isaiah xi. 6.

See here a Kingdom of God on the Earth; it is nothing else but a Kingdom of mere Love, where all HURT and DESTROYING is done away, and every Work of Enmity changed into one united Power of Heavenly Love.—But observe again and again, whence this comes to pass, that God's Kingdom on Earth is, and can be nothing else, but the Power of reigning Love; the Prophet tells you, it is because in the Day of his Kingdom, 'the 'Earth shall be full of the Knowledge of the Lord, as the Waters 'cover the Sea.'—Therefore, O Christendom, thy Wars are thy certain Proofs, that thou art all over as full of an Ignorance of God, as the Waters cover the Sea.

As to the present fallen State of universal Christendom, working under the Spirit and Power of the great fiery Dragon, it is not my Intention, in any Thing I am here upon, to show how any Part of it can subsist, or preserve itself from being devoured by every other Part, but by its own Dragon Weapons.

But the Christendom which I mean, that neither wants, nor allows of War, is only that where Christ is King, and his Holy Spirit the only Governor of the Wills, Affections, and Designs of all that belong to it.—It is my Complaint against, and Charge upon all the Nations of Christendom, that this Necessity of murdering Arms is the Dragon's Monster, that is equally brought forth by all and every Part of fallen Christendom; and that therefore all and every Part, as well Popish as Protestant, are at one and the same Distance from the Spirit of their Lord and Saviour the Lamb of God, and therefore all want one and the same entire Reformation.

An Address to the Clergy. 93

In these last Ages of fallen Christendom, many Reformations have taken Place; but alas! Truth must be forced to say, that they have been in all their Variety, little better than so many run-away Births of one and the same Mother, so many lesser Babels come out of Babylon the great.—For among all the Reformers, the one only true Reformation has never yet been thought of.—A Change of Place, of Governors, of Opinions, together with new formed outward Models, is all the Reformation that has yet been attempted.

The Wisdom of this World, with its worldly Spirit, was the only Thing that had overcome the Church, and had carried it into Captivity. For in Captivity it certainly is, as soon as it is turned into a Kingdom of this World; and a Kingdom of this World it certainly is, as soon as worldly Wisdom has its Power in it.—Not a false Doctrine, not a bad Discipline, not an usurped Power, or corrupt Practice ever has prevailed, or does prevail in the Church, but has had its whole Birth and Growth from worldly Wisdom.

This Wisdom was the great evil Root, at which the reforming Axe should have been laid, and must be laid, before the Church can be again that Virgin Spouse of Christ, which it was at the Beginning.—‘If any Man,’ says St. Paul, ‘will be wise, let him become a Fool in this World.’ This admits of no Exception, it is a Maxim as universal and unalterable, as that which says, ‘If any Man will follow Christ, let him deny himself.’—For no Man has any more to deny than that, which the Wisdom and Spirit of this World are, and do in him. For all that is in this World, the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eye, and the Pride of Life, are the very Things in which alone the Wisdom of this World lives, and moves, and has its being. It can be no other, can rise no higher, nor be any better, than they are and do.—For as heavenly Wisdom is the Whole of all heavenly Goodness, so earthly Wisdom has the whole Evil of all the earthly Nature.

St. Paul speaks of a natural Man, that cannot know the Things of God, but to whom they are mere Foolishness. This natural Man is only another Name for the Wisdom of this World; but though he cannot know the Things that be of God, yet he can know their Names, and learn to speak that which the Saints of God have spoken about them.—He can make Profession of them, be eloquent in their Praise, and set them forth in such a desirable View, as shall make them quite agreeable to the Children of worldly Wisdom.—This is the natural Man, who having got into the Church, and Church Power, has turned the Things of God into Things of this World.—Had this Man been kept out of the Church, the Church had kept its first Purity to this Day; for its fallen State is nothing else but its Fall into the Hands of the natural Man of this World.—And when this is the State of the Church, the Wisdom of this World (which always loves its own) will be in Love with it, will spare no Cost to maintain it, will make Laws, fight Battles in Defence of it, and condemn every Man as Heretical, who dares speak a Word against this Glorious Image of a Church, which the Wisdom of this World has set up.

94 An Address to the Clergy.

This is the great Antichrist, which is neither better nor worse, nor any Thing else, but the Spirit of Satan working against Christ, in the Strength and Subtlety of earthly Wisdom.

If therefore you take any Thing to be Church-Reformation, but a full Departure from the Wisdom of this World, or any Thing to be your Entrance into a Salvation-Church, but the Nature, Spirit, and Works of Christ, become living in you, then, whether Papist or Protestant, Reformation or no Reformation, all will be just as much Good to you, as when a Sadducee turns Publican, or from a Publican becomes a Pharisee.—For the Church of Christ, as it is the Door of Salvation, is nothing else but Christ himself.—Christ in us, or we in his Church, is the same Thing. When that is alive, Wills, and Works in you, which was alive in Christ, then you are in his Church; for that which he was, that must they be who are his. Without this, it matters not what Pale you are in. To every Thing but the new Creature, Christ says, 'I know you not'; and to every Virtue that worldly Wisdom puts on, 'Get thee behind me, Satan, for thou savourest 'not the Things that be of God.' And the Reason why it must be thus, why worldly Wisdom, though under a Religious Form, is and can be nothing else, but that which is called Satan, or Antichrist, is because all that we are, and have from this World, is that very enmity against God, that whole Evil which separates us from him, and constitutes all that Death and Damnation that belongs to our fallen State.—And so sure as the Life of this World is our Separation from God, so sure is it, that a total Departure from every Subtlety and Prosperity of worldly Wisdom, is absolutely necessary to change an evil Son of Adam into a holy Son of God.—And here it is well to be observed, that the Church of Christ is solely for this End, to make us Holy as he is Holy. But nothing can do this, but that which has full Power to change a Sinner into a Saint. And he who has not found that Power in the Church, may be assured that he is not yet a true Son of that Church. For the Church brings forth no other Births, but holy Children of God; it has no other End, no other Nature, or Work, but that of changing a Sinner into a Saint.—But this can only be done, just as the change of Night into Day is done, or as the Darkness is quite lost in the Light.—Something as contrary to the whole Nature of Sin, as Light is to Darkness, and as powerful over it, as the Light is powerful over Darkness, can alone do this.—Creeds, Canons, Articles of Religion, stately Churches, learned Priests, Singing, Preaching, and Praying in the best contrived Form of Words, can no more raise a dead Sinner into a living Saint, than a fine System of Light and Colours can change the Night into Day. For, (N.B.) That which cannot help you to all Goodness, cannot help you to any Goodness, nor can that take away any Sin, but that which can take away all Sin.

An Address to the Clergy. 95

On this Ground it is, that the Apostle said, 'Circumcision is 'nothing, and Uncircumcision is nothing'; and on the same Ground it must be said, that *Poper*y is nothing, and Protestantism is nothing, because all is nothing, as to Salvation, but a Sinner changed into a Saint, or the Apostle's new Creature.—Call nothing therefore your Holy, Salvation-Church, but that which takes away all your Sins; this is the only Way not to be deceived with the Cry about Churches, Reformations, and Divisions.—If it be asked, What is meant by taking away all our Sins? The Whole is fully told us in these Words, 'To as many as believed, to them 'He gave Power to become Sons of God.' This is the true taking away, or Forgiveness of Sins; not a strong Imagination, or Brain-Fancy, that on such an Hour, on such a Day, or in such a Place, you felt and knew assuredly that all your Sins were forgiven you: By such a Forgiveness of Sins, That which made you a Sinner is not destroyed, but you will have every Day the same Necessity of confessing yourself a miserable Sinner, as you had that Morning, when your Sins were not forgiven you till the Afternoon.—The true Forgiveness of Sins is only then, when That which Sinned in us is done away, or become Powerless in us; but nothing can do this, but That Power by which we become Sons of God.—A blind Man has then only a Deliverance from his Blindness, when he is put in full Possession of seeing Eyes; this is the only doing away of his Darkness.—Just so, and no otherwise, are our Sins forgiven us, or done away, when the Power by which we become Sons of God, or the new Creature, is so given to us, so possessed by us, as seeing Eyes are given to and possessed by the Man, who before that was all Blindness.— And as our Old Man can only then be said to be truly put off, when the New Man in Christ is raised to Life in his Stead, so our Sins are only then truly blotted out, or done away, when an un sinning Nature, or a Birth of God that Sinneth not, is come to be the ruling Life in us.

96 An Address to the Clergy.

Many are the Marks, which the learned have given us of the true Church ; but be that as it will, no Man, whether Learned or Unlearned, can have any Mark or Proof of his own true Church-Membership, but his being dead unto all Sin, and alive unto all Righteousness.—This cannot be more plainly told us, than in these Words of our Lord, ‘ He that committeth Sin, is the Servant of Sin ’ ; but surely that Servant of Sin, cannot at the same Time be a living Member of Christ’s Body, or that new Creature, who dwells in Christ, and Christ in him.—To suppose a Man born again from above, yet under a necessity of continuing to Sin, is as absurd as to suppose, that the true Christian is only to have so much of the Nature of Christ born in him, as is consistent with as real a Power of Satan still dwelling in him.—‘ If ‘ the Son,’ says Christ, ‘ shall make you free, then ye shall be free ‘ indeed.’ What is this, but saying, if Christ be come to Life in you, then a true Freedom from all Necessity of Sinning is given to you. Now if this is hindered, and cannot come to pass in the faithful Follower of Christ, it must be, because both the Willing and Working of Christ in Man is too weak to overcome that, which the Devil wills and works in him.—All this Absurdity, and even Blasphemy, is necessarily implied in that common Doctrine of Books and Pulpits, which teaches, that the Christian can never have done Sinning as long as he lives.—Well therefore may Christendom Sleep as securely as it does, under the Power of Sin, without any Thought, Hope, or Desire of doing God’s Will on Earth, as it is done in heaven ; without any concern at their not being Pure, as he who has called them is Pure, or Walking as he Walked.

The Scripture knows no Christians but Saints, who in all Things Act as becometh Saints. But now if the Scripture Saint did not mean a Man that eschewed all Evil, and was Holy in all his Conversation, Saint and no Saint would have only such Difference, as one carnal Man will always have from another.—Preachers and Writers comfort the half Christians with telling them, that God requires not a perfect, sinless Obedience, but accepts the Sincerity of our weak Endeavours instead of it.—Here, if ever, the Blind lead the Blind.—For St. Paul, comparing the Way of Salvation to a Race, says, ‘ In a Race all run, but

An Address to the Clergy. 97

'ONE obtaineth the Prize: So run that ye may obtain.'—Now if Paul had seeing Eyes, must not they be Blind who teach, that God accepts of all that run in the religious Race, and requires not that any should obtain the Prize.—How easy was it to see, that the Sincerity of our weak Endeavours was quite a different Thing from that, which alone is, and can be the required Perfection of our Lives. The first God accepts, that is, bears with. But why or how? Not because he seeks or requires no more, but he bears with them, because, though at a great Distance from, they are, or may be making towards that Perfection, or new Creature, which he absolutely requires, which is the Fulness of the Stature of Christ, and is that which Paul says, is the ONE that obtains the Prize.

The same which Paul says, is said by Christ in other Words, 'Strive,' says he, 'to enter in at the strait Gate.' Here our best Endeavours are called for, and therefore accepted by God, and yet at the same Time he adds, 'that many shall strive to 'enter in, but shall not be able.'—Why so, whence comes this? It is because Christ himself is the one Door into Life.—Here the Strivers mentioned by Christ, and those which St. Paul calls Runners in a Race, are the very same Persons; and Christ calling himself the one Door of Entrance, is the same Thing as when Paul says, that one only receives the Prize, and that one, which alone obtains the Prize, or that enters through the right Door, is that new Creature in whom Christ is truly Born. For whether you consider Things Natural or Supernatural, Nothing but Christ in us, can be our Hope of Glory.

The Pleader for Imperfection further supports himself by saying, No Man in the World, Christ excepted, was ever without Sin.—And so say I too; and with the Apostle I also add, 'That 'if we say we have not Sinned, we make him a Liar.'—But then it is as true to say, that we make him a Liar, if we deny the Possibility of our ever being freed from a Necessity of Sinning. For the same Word of God says, 'If we confess our Sins, he is 'faithful and just to forgive us our Sins, and (N.B.) to cleanse us 'from all Unrighteousness.'

But surely he that is left under a Necessity of Sinning as long as he lives, can no more be said to be cleansed from all Unrighteousness, than a Man who must be a Cripple to his dying Day, can be said to be cured of all his Lameness.—What weaker Conclusion can well be made, than to infer, that because Christ was the only Man that was born and lived free from Sin, therefore no Man on Earth can be raised to a Freedom from Sinning; no better than concluding, that because the Old Man is every-one's Birth from Adam, therefore there can be no such Thing as a New Man, created unto Righteousness, through Christ Jesus, living and being all in all in him; no better Sense or Logic, than to say, that because our Redeemer could not find us any Thing else but Sinners, therefore he must of all Necessity leave us to be Sinners.

98 An Address to the Clergy.

Of Christ it only can be said, that he is in himself the true Vine; but of every Branch that is his, and grows in him, it must be as truly said, that the Life and Spirit of the true Vine, is the Life and Spirit of its Branches, and that as is the Vine, so are its Branches.—And here let it be well noted, that if the Branch has not the Life and Goodness of the Vine in it, it can only be, because it is broken off from the Vine, and therefore a withered Branch, fit for the Fire.—But if the Branches abide in the Vine, then Christ says this glorious Thing of them, ‘Ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you,’ John xv. 7. The very same glorious Thing, which he had before said of himself, ‘Father, I thank Thee, that Thou hast heard me,’ and (N.B.) ‘I knew that thou hearest me always,’ John xi. 41. Now say that this new Creature, who is in such Union, Communion, and Power with God, because Christ is in him, and he in Christ, as really as the Vine is in the Branches, and the Branches in the Vine, say that he must be a Servant of Sin, as long as he lives in this World, and then your Absurdity will be as great, as if you had said, that Christ in us must partake of our Corruption.

The sober Divine, who abhors the Pride of Enthusiasts, for the Sake of Humility, says of himself and all Men, We are poor, blind, imperfect Creatures; all our natural Faculties are perverted, corrupted, and out of their right State; and therefore nothing that is perfect can come from us, or be done by us. Truth enough! And the very same Truth, as when the Apostle says, ‘The natural Man knoweth not the Things that be of God, He cannot know them, they are foolishness to him.’ This is the Man that we all are by Nature.—But what Scripture ever spoke of, or required any perfect Works from this Man, any more than it requires the Ethiopian to change his Skin? Or what an instructed Divine must he be, who considers this old natural Man as the Christian, and therefore rejects Christian Perfection, because this Old Man cannot attain to it? What greater Blindness, than to appeal to our fallen State, as a Proof of a Weakness and Corruption which we must have, when we are redeemed from it? Is this any wiser, than saying, that Sin and Corruption must be there where Christ is, because it is there where he is not?

Our Lord has said this absolute Truth, That unless we be born again from above, there is no possible Entrance into the Kingdom of God.—What this new Birth is in us, and what we get by it, is as expressly told us by his beloved Apostle, saying, 'That which is born of God sinneth not.'—This is as true and unalterable, as to say, that which is born of the Devil can do nothing else but add Sin to Sin. To what End do we pray, that 'this Day we may fall into no Sin,' if no such Day can be had? But if Sinning can be made to cease in us for one Day, What can do this for us, but that which can do the same To-morrow? What Benefit in Praying, that 'God's Will may be done on Earth, as 'it is in Heaven,' if the Earth as long as it lasts must have as many Sinners, as it has Men upon it? How vainly does the Church pray for the Baptized Person, 'that he may have Power and Strength to have Victory, and to triumph against the 'Devil, the World, and the Flesh,' if this victorious Triumph can never be obtained; if notwithstanding this Baptism and Prayer, he must continue committing Sin, and so be a Servant of Sin, as long as he lives? What Sense can there be in making a Communion of Saints to be an Article of our Creed, if at the same Time we are to believe that Christians, as long as they live, must in some Degree or other follow, and be led by the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life?

An Address to the Clergy. 99

Whence now comes all this Folly of Doctrines? It is because the Church is no longer that Spiritual House of God, in which nothing is intended and sought after, but Spiritual Power and Spiritual Life, that is become a mere human Building, made up of worldly Power, worldly Learning, and worldly Prosperity in Gospel Matters. And therefore all the Frailties, Follies, and Imperfections of human Nature, must have as much Life in the Church, as in any other human Society. And the best Sons of such a Church, must be forced to plead such Imperfections in the Members of it, as must be where the old fallen human Nature is still alive.—And alive it there must be, and its Life defended, where the being continually moved, and led by the Spirit of God, is rejected as gross Enthusiasm.—For nothing but a full Birth, and continual Breathing and Inspiration of the Holy Spirit in the new born Creature, can be a Deliverance from all that which is Earthly, Sensual, and Devilish in our fallen Nature.—This New Creature, born again in Christ, of that ETERNAL WORD which created all Things in Heaven and on Earth, is both the Rock and Church, of which Christ says, 'The Gates of Hell shall never prevail against it.'—For prevail they will, and must against every Thing, but the New Creature.—And every fallen Man, be he where he will, or who he will, is yet in his fallen State, and his whole Life is a mere Egyptian Bondage, and Babylonian Captivity, till the heavenly Church, or new Birth from above, has taken him out of it.

See how St. Paul sets forth the Salvation-Church, as being nothing else, and doing nothing else, but merely as the Mother of this new Birth.—‘Know ye not,’ says he, ‘that so many of us ‘as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his ‘Death? Therefore we are buried with him by Baptism into ‘Death, that like as Christ was raised from the Dead by the ‘Glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in Newness of ‘Life.’—Here we have the one true Church, infallibly described, and yet no other Church, but the New Creature.—He goes on, ‘For if we have been planted together in the Likeness of his ‘Death, we shall be also in the Likeness of his Resurrection.’—Therefore to be in Christ, or in his Church, belongs to no one, but because the Old Man is put off, and the New Creature risen in Christ, is put on.—The same thing is said again in these Words, ‘Knowing this, that our Old Man is crucified with Him, ‘that the Body of Sin might be destroyed, That (N.B.) HENCE-‘FORTH we should not serve Sin’; therefore the true Church is nowhere but in the New Creature, that henceforth Sinneth not, nor is any longer a Servant to Sin.—Away then with all the tedious Volumes of Church Unity, Church Power, and Church Salvation.—Ask neither a Council of Trent, nor a Synod of Dort, nor an Assembly of Divines, for a Definition of the Church. The Apostle has given you, not a Definition, but the unchangeable Nature of it in these Words.—But now ‘being made free from ‘Sin, and become Servants to God, ye have your Fruits unto ‘Holiness, and the End everlasting Life.’ Therefore to be in the true Salvation-Church, and to be in Christ that New Creature which Sinneth not, is strictly the same Thing.

What now is become of this true Church, or where must the Man go, who would fain be a living Member of it?—He need go nowhere; because wherever he is, That which is to save him, and That which he is to be saved from, is always with him.—SELF is all the Evil that he has, and God is all the Goodness that he ever can have; But Self is always with him, and God is always with him.—Death to Self is his only Entrance into the Church of Life, and Nothing but God can give Death to Self.—Self is an inward Life, and God is an inward Spirit of Life; therefore nothing kills That which must be killed in us, or quickens That which much come to Life in us, but the inward Work of God in the Soul, and the inward Work of the Soul in God.—This is that Mystic Religion, which, though it has nothing in it but that same Spirit, that same Truth, and that same Life, which always was, and always must be the Religion of all God’s holy Angels and Saints in Heaven, is by the Wisdom of this World accounted to be Madness. As wisely done, as to reckon him mad, who says, That the Vanity of Things Temporal cannot be, or give Life to the Things that are Eternal; or that the Circumcision of the Flesh is but as poor a Thing, as the Whetting the Knife, in Comparison of that inward mystic Circumcision of the Heart, which can only be done by 'that WORD of God, which is Sharper than any two edged Sword, 'and pierces to the dividing asunder of the Soul and Spirit,' Heb. iv. 12.—Now fancy to yourself a Rabbi-Doctor, laughing at this Circumcision of the two edged Sword of God, as Gospel Madness, and then you see that very same Christian Orthodoxy, which at this Day condemns the inward working Life of God in the Soul, as Mystic Madness.

An Address to the Clergy. 101

Look at all that is outward, and all that you then see, has no more of Salvation in it, than the Stars and Elements.—Look at all the good Works you can think of, they have no Goodness for you, but when the good Spirit of God is the Doer of them in you.—For all the outward Works of Religion may be done by the natural Man, he can observe all Church-Duties, Stick close to Doctrines, and put on the Semblance of every outward Virtue; thus high he can go. But no Christian, till led and governed by the Spirit of God, can go any higher than this feigned, outward Formality of this natural Man; to which he can add nothing, but his own natural fleshly Zeal in the Defence of it. For all Zeal must be of this Kind, till it is the Zeal of That which is born of God, and calls every Creature only to that same new Birth from above.—'My little Children,' says St. Paul, 'of whom I travail again in Birth, till Christ be formed in 'you.' This is the whole Labour of an Apostle to the End of the World. He has nothing to preach to Sinners, but the Absolute Necessity, the true Way, and the certain Means, of being Born again from above.—But if dropping this one Thing only necessary, and only available, he becomes a disputing Reformer about Words and Opinions, and helps Christians to be zealously separated from one another, for the Sake of being saved by different Notions of Faith, Works, Justification, or Election, &c., he has forgot his Errand, and is become a blind Leader of all, who are blind enough to follow him.—For all that is called Faith, Works, Justification, Sanctification, or Election, are only so many different Expressions of That which the restored Divine Life is, and does in us, and have no Existence anywhere, or in any Thing, but the New Creature.—And the Reason why every Thing that is, or can be Good in us, or to us, is nothing else but this Divine Birth from above, is because the Divine Nature dead in Adam, was his entire Loss of every Divine Virtue, and his whole Fall under the Power of this World, the Flesh, and the Devil; and therefore the Divine Nature brought again to Life in Man, in his Faith, his Hope, his Prayer, his Works, his Justification, Sanctification, Election, or Salvation.—And that ELECTION, which systematical Doctors have taken out of its Place, and built it into an absolute irreversible Decree of God, has no other Nature, no other Effect, or Power of Salvation, but that which equally belongs to our Faith, Hope, Prayer, Love of God, and Love of our Neighbour; and just so far as these Divine Virtues are in us, just so far are we the Elect of God, which means nothing else but the beloved of God; and nothing makes us the beloved of God, but his own first Image and Likeness rising up again in us.—Would you plainly know what is meant by being elected of God, the same is plainly meant, as when the Scripture says, ‘God heareth those only who ‘call upon him’; or that he can only be ‘found by those who ‘seek him’; so he only elects Those and That which elect him.—Again, ‘He that honoureth me, him will I honour,’ says God: ‘He that loveth me,’ says Christ, ‘shall be beloved of me and ‘my Father.’ This is the Mystery of Election (N.B.) as it relates to Salvation.—At divers Times and in sundry Manners, God may have, and has had his chosen Vessels for particular Offices, Messages, and Appointments; but as to Salvation from our fallen State, every Son of Adam is his chosen Vessel, and this as certainly, as that every Son of Adam has the Seed of the Woman, the incorruptible Seed of the WORD born along with him; and this is God’s unchangeable universal Election, which chooses, or wills the Salvation of all Men.—For the Ground of all Union, Communion, or Love between God and the Creature, lies wholly in the Divine Nature.—That which is Divine in Man tends towards God, elects God; and God only and solely elects his own Birth, Nature, and Likeness in Man.—But seeing his own Birth, a Seed of his own Divine Nature is in every Man, to suppose God by an arbitrary Power, willing and decreeing its eternal Happiness in some, and willing and decreeing its eternal Misery in others, is a blasphemous Absurdity, and supposes a greater Injustice in God, than the wickedest Creatures can possibly commit against one another.

But Truth, to the eternal Praise and Glory of God, will eternally say, that his Love is as universal and unchangeable as his Being, that his Mercy over all his Works can no more cease, than his Omnipotence can begin to grow weak. God’s Mark of an universal Salvation set upon all Mankind, was first given in these Words, ‘The Seed of the Woman shall bruise the Head of ‘the Serpent’: Therefore wherever the Serpent is, there his Head is to be bruised. This was God’s infallible Assurance, or omnipotent Promise, that all that died in Adam, should have its first Birth of Glory again.—The eternal Son of God came into the World, only for the Sake of this new Birth, to give God the Glory of restoring it to all the dead Sons of fallen Adam.—All the Mysteries of this incarnate, suffering, dying Son of God, all the Price that He paid for our Redemption, all the Washings that we have from his all-cleansing Blood poured out for us, all the Life that we receive from eating his Flesh, and drinking his Blood, have their infinite Value, their high Glory, and amazing Greatness in this, because nothing less than these Supernatural Mysteries of a God-Man, could raise that new Creature out of Adam's Death, which could be again a living Temple, and deified Habitation of the Spirit of God.

That this new Birth of the Spirit, or the Divine Life in Man, was the Truth, the Substance, and sole End of his miraculous Mysteries, is plainly told us by Christ himself, who at the End of all his Process on Earth, tells his Disciples, what was to be the Blessed, and full Effect of it, namely, that the Holy Spirit, the Comforter (being now fully purchased for them) should after his Ascension, come in the Stead of a Christ in the Flesh.—'If I go 'not away,' says he, 'the Comforter will not come; but if I go 'away, I will send Him unto you, and he shall guide you into all 'Truth.' Therefore all that Christ was, did, suffered, dying in the Flesh, and ascending into Heaven, was for this sole End, to purchase for all his Followers a new Birth, new Life, and new Light, in and by the Spirit of God restored to them, and living in them, as their Support, Comforter, and Guide into all Truth.—And this was his, 'LO, I AM WITH YOU ALWAYS, EVEN UNTO 'THE END OF THE WORLD.'

FINIS.

A COLLECTION OF LETTERS

On the Most Interesting and Important SUBJECTS, AND ON Several Occasions.

By WILLIAM LAW, M.A.

LONDON:
Printed for J. RICHARDSON, in Pater-Noster-
Row. 1760.

An Advertisement to the Reader.

THE Letters in this Collection having been experimentally found of great private Benefit, the consent of the Author has been obtained to their being made Public. And as they contain a rich Treasure of Divine Truths, and come home to the Bosoms of Men, comprehending the Fulness of Religion, and resolving a great Variety of important Points, the Editors have great Pleasure, in being allowed to publish them.

T. L. G. W.

A Collection of Letters.

Letter I.

To Mr. J. L.

My dear and most worthy Friend,

FOR so I must salute you, as having long dwelt in my Heart under that Idea, though personally unknown to me. I shall not trouble you with apologizing for this long Silence, but speak directly to the Matters of yours, concerning your Difficulty to join in any Church Communion.

Religion, or Church Communion is in its true Nature, both external and internal, which are thus united, and thus distinguished; the one is the outward Sign, the other is the inward Truth signified by it: The one never was, nor ever can be, in its true State, without the other.

The inward Truth, or Church, is Regeneration, or the Life, Spirit, and Power of Christ, quickened and brought to life, in the Soul.

The outward Sign, or Church, is that outward Form, or manner of Life, that bears full witness to the Truth of this regenerated Life of Christ, formed or revealed in the Soul.

The inward Truth gives forth its outward proper Manifestations of itself, and these Manifestations bring forth the true outward Church, and make it to be visible, and outwardly known.

As thus, everything in the inward Life, and Spirit, and Will of Christ, when it becomes living, dwelling and working in the Spirit of our Minds, or inward Man, is the inward Church, or Kingdom of God set up within us: And everything in the outward Behaviour, and visible Conversation of Christ, whilst dwelling amongst Men, when practised and followed by us, in the Form and Manner of our Life, makes us the Members of that outward Church, which he set up in this World.

Inwardly nothing lived in Christ, but the sole Will of God, a perpetual Regard to his Glory, and one continual Desire of the Salvation of all Mankind. When this Spirit is in us, then are we inwardly one with Christ, and united to God through Him.

Outwardly Christ exercised every kind of Love, Kindness and Compassion to the Souls and Bodies of Men; nothing was visible in the outward Form of his Life, but Humility and Lowli-ness of State in every shape; a contented Want, or rather total Disregard of all worldly Riches, Power, Ease or Pleasure; a continual Meekness, Gentleness, Patience and Resignation, not only to the Will of God, but to the haughty Powers of the World, to the Perverseness, and Contradiction of all the Evil and Malice of Men, and all the Hardships and Troubles of human Life: Now this, and such like outward Behaviour of Christ, thus separate from, and contrary to the Spirit, Wisdom and Way, of this World, was that very outward Church, of which he willed all Mankind to become visible, and living Members.—And whoever in the Spirit of Christ, lives in the outward Exercise of these Virtues, lives as to himself in the highest Perfection of Church Unity, and is the true inward and outward Christian.—He is all that he can be, he hath all that he can have, he doth all that he can do, and enjoyeth all that he can enjoy, as a Member of Christ's Body, or Church in this World.

For as Christ was God and Man, come down from Heaven, for no other end, but fully to restore the Union that was lost betwixt God and Man, so Church Unity is, and can be nothing else, but the Unity of this, or that Man, or number of Men with God, through the Power and Nature of Christ. And therefore it must be the Truth, and the whole Truth, that nothing more is required, nor will anything less be able, to make anyone a true Member of the one Church of Christ, out of which there is no Salvation, and in which there is no Condemnation, but only and solely his Conformity to, and Union with the inward Spirit, and outward Form of Christ's Life and Behaviour in this World.—This is the one Fold under one Shepherd; though the Sheep are scattered, or feeding in Valleys, or on Mountains ever so distant, or separate from one another.

On the other hand, not only every unreasonable unjust Action, be it done to whom it will, not only every unkind, proud, wrathful, scornful, disdainful inward Thought, or outward Behaviour to any Person, but every Unreadiness to do good of all Kinds, to all that we can; every Unwillingness to rejoice with them that rejoice, and to weep with them that weep, and love our Neighbour as ourselves; every Aversion to be inwardly all Love, and outwardly all Meekness, Gentleness, Courtesy, and Condescension in Words and Actions towards every Creature, for whom Christ died, makes us Schismatics, though we be ever so daily gathered together, into one and the same Place, joining in one and the same Form of Creeds, Prayers and Praises offered to God, and is truly a leaving, or breaking that Church Unity, which makes us one with Christ, as our Head, and unites us with Men, as the Members of his Body.

That the matter is thus ; that the true Church Unity consists in our walking as Christ walked, fully appears, as from many others, so from these plain Words of our Lord himself: 'Ye are 'not of this World, as I am not of this World, but I have chosen 'you out of the World.' Therefore to have that Contrariety to the World, which Christ had, is the one necessary and full Proof of our being his, of our belonging to him, and being one with him.

Again, 'Abide in me, and I in you, if ye abide in me, ye shall 'ask what ye will, and it shall be done to you. If a Man abide 'not in me, he is cast forth as a Branch withered, &c. For with- 'out me ye can do nothing.'

Therefore the one true Proof of our being living Members of Christ's Church on Earth, or only dead Branches, fit for the Fire, is nothing else but our being, or not being inwardly of that Spirit, and outwardly of that Behaviour, which Christ manifested to the World.

Again, 'This is my Commandment, that ye love one another 'as I have loved you, and by this shall all Men know that ye are 'my Disciples.'

Therefore the true and sufficient Mark of our outward Church Membership, is there only, and fully, outwardly known, and found in every Man, where the outward Form of Christ's loving Behaviour to all Men, is outwardly seen and known to be in him. These and the like Passages of Christ and his Apostles (though quite overlooked by most modern Defenders of the one Church) are the only Places that speak home to the Truth, and Reality of Church Unity.

It may now be reasonably asked, What is the Divine Service, or Worship in this Church? For every Church must have its Divine Service and Worship, which is the Life, Strength, and Support of it.

It is answered: 'That no Man can call Christ Lord, but by 'the Holy Ghost.' Therefore nothing is, or can be a Divine Service in that Church, which has Christ for its Lord, but what has the Holy Spirit for its Beginner, Doer, and Finisher. For if it be certain that no one can own Christ as his Lord, but by the Holy Spirit, then it must be equally certain, that no one can serve or worship God through Christ his Lord, in any other Way, Help, Power, or Means, but so far as it is all done, in, and by the Power of the same Holy Spirit. Whatsoever is born of the Flesh is Flesh ; that is, whatsoever proceeds from, or is done by the natural Powers of Man, from his Birth of Flesh and Blood, is merely human, earthly, and corrupt, and can no more do anything that is heavenly, or perform a Service or worship that is Divine, than our present Flesh and Blood can enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Thus saith the Apostle, 'Ye are not in 'the Flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be, the Spirit of God dwelleth 'in you. Now if any Man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is 'none of his.' And consequently if not his, he can perform no Divine Service to him. Nor can any Worship cease to be carnal, or become Divine, but by its being all that it is, and doing all that it doth, by the Power, and Presence of Christ dwelling in our Souls, and helping us by his Holy Spirit to cry in Truth and Reality, Abba Father.

The New Testament never calls us to do, or offer, or allows anything to be done or offered to God, as a Divine Service, or Worship, but what is done in the Truth, and Reality of Faith, of Hope, of Love, and Obedience to God.

But through all the New Testament, no Faith, no Hope, no Love is allowed to be true, and godly, but only that Faith, that Hope, &c., which solely proceeds from, and is the Fruit of the Holy Spirit, living, dwelling, and working in our whole Heart, and Soul, and Spirit.

This Spirituality of the Christian Religion, is the Reason why it was first preached to the World under the Name of the Kingdom of God, because under this new Dispensation, freed from Veils, Shadows and Figures of good Things absent or to come, God himself is manifested, ruling in us and over us, as an essential Light of our Lives, as an indwelling Word of Power, as a life-giving Spirit within us, forming us by a new Birth, to become a chosen Generation, a royal Priesthood, to offer spiritual Sacrifices to God, through a new and living Way which Christ hath consecrated for us. The Truth and Perfection of which State, is plainly set forth by the following Prayer of Christ, viz., 'That they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me, and I in 'thee, that they also may be one in us—I in them and thou in 'me, that they be made perfect in one, and that the Love where- 'with thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them.' Now for the Truth and Certainty of this spiritual Kingdom, in which are only spiritual Worshipers baptized from above, into an Union, and Communion with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, through the mysterious Union of God and Man in the one Mediator Jesus Christ; for the Truth, I say, of this spiritual State of Christianity, we have the plainest Words of Christ, expressly declaring that the Jerusalem Service, and consequently every Thing, or Service that has the Nature of it, was to have its End in the Establishment of his Church.

'Believe me,' saith he, 'the Hour cometh when ye shall neither 'in this Mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father:

'But the Hour cometh and now is, when the true Worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in Truth: For the Father seeketh such to worship him.'

Therefore it must be certain in the highest degree, that Christ cannot, nor could set up any other kind of Worship, or Worshippers, but such as the Father seeketh; because he and his Father were one, both in Will and Work. And the Reason and Necessity of this kind of Worship, is added by Christ in the following Words, 'God is a Spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in Spirit and in Truth.'

Therefore if Christ had not only and solely set up this Truth of spiritual Worship, he had been but another Moses, and though a better Teacher, yet still but as a Schoolmaster, to some higher State of Religion, that was yet wanted, and must be revealed, if so be that Man was to be restored to his true State of Life, Union, and Happiness in and with the Divine Nature. For as God is a Spirit, and our Life is spiritual, so no religious Worship can be in its true Perfection, or bring us into the Possession of our highest Good, till it raises all that is Spirit and Life in us, into Union and Communion with Spirit and Life in God.

If it should here be asked, How we are to become and continue Worshippers of the Father in Spirit and Truth? It is answered; All consists in turning inwards, in Attention to that, which is daily and hourly stirring, living, and working in our Hearts.

Now though the Scripture nowhere gives this Direction in these very Words, yet, since it is said in Scripture, that God dwelleth not in Temples made with Hands, but in the Temple of our Hearts, since the Kingdom of God is said to be within us, and not to come with outward Observation, but to be in us, as a secret, living Seed of the incorruptible Word; since our Hearts is our whole Life, and we are said to live, and move, and have our Being in God, it is directly telling us that we are to turn inwards, if we would turn to, and find God.

It is directly telling us, that in what manner we are within, as the Worship is done there, so is God in such manner within us; and that he is no otherwise our God, our Life, our Rest and Happiness, than so far as the Working of our Hearts, is a willing and choosing, a hungering and thirsting to find, feel and enjoy the Life-giving Power of his holy Presence in our Souls.

To be inwardly therefore attentive to God, showing the Good and the Evil, distinguishing the Light from the Darkness in our own Souls; to listen to the Voice of his ever speaking Word, and to watch the Movings of his ever sanctifying Spirit within us, waiting and longing in the Spirit of Prayer, of Faith and Hope, of Love and Resignation, to be inwardly quickened and revived in the Image, and according to the Likeness of that Son, in whom he is well pleased, is the worshipping of God with our whole Heart and Soul, in Spirit and in Truth.

It is living to God, in and through the Power of Christ, as he lived; it is praying with him, and by his Spirit, that continual Prayer which he always had, whether speaking to the Multitude, or healing their Diseases, or alone by himself in the Stillness of Nights, and Loneliness of Mountains. For this inward Prayer, in which the whole Heart, and Soul, and Spirit, loves, worships, and applies to a God, not absent or distant, but to a Trinity of Goodness and Mercy, of Light and Love, of Glory and Majesty, dwelling, and working within us, willing and desiring to do all that in the Temple of our Hearts, which is done and always doing in His own Temple in Heaven, is a Prayer, that only needs outward Words for the sake of others; and of which it may be said, as Christ said: 'Father, I knew that thou always hearest me, but because of the People, which stand by, I said it.'

I begin to apprehend, worthy Sir, that you will think I am gone too far about, and not come close enough to the Matter in hand. But I hope it is not so: I have gone through all that I have said, only to show, that Church Unity or Communion, is not a matter that depends on any particular Society, or outward Thing, but is complete, or defective, in such degree, as we live in Unity with, or Contrariety to the inward Spirit and outward Example of Christ. For no Union signifies anything to us, or our Salvation, but Union with God, through Christ, and nothing unites us to Christ, or makes us to be his, but his Holy Spirit dwelling, and working inwardly and outwardly in us, as it did in him.

This is the only Church Unity, that concerns the Conscience, and when we are in this Unity, we are in Union with Christ, and with everyone who is united to him, however distant, or separated from us, by human Inclosures.

I come now to consider the Church under another, and more common Idea of it, namely as external, and about which, all the Christian World is at enmity, strife, and debate.

After Christianity had been a few Ages in the World, it became national, and obtained the Protection, and Patronage of the Princes of this World.

Hence it was enriched with many Gifts and Privileges, and strengthened by Powers, that were foreign to the Nature of it; and Churchmen, beginning to quarrel about Christian Doctrines, were supported in their Strife and Division from one another, by the temporal Powers, under which they lived.

This State of the Church hath continued to this Day, where almost every Age hath multiplied the Number of divided Churches, brought forth, by the Union of the civil and ecclesiastical Power.

This State therefore of external Churches, hath the Nature of Things merely human, and is subject to such Alterations, Changes, and Corruptions, as the Forms and Revolutions of temporal Government all over the World. And therefore the private Christian, who, as such, is a Member of a Kingdom, that is not of this World, has little or no Concern in it.

Without entering into the Merits of divided Churches, which I shall not do here, or anywhere else; Thus much I think, may with truth be affirmed, that where the Church and the State are incorporated, and under one and the same Power, all the evil Passions, corrupt Views, and worldly Interests, which form and transform, turn and overturn all outward Things, must be expected often to come to pass, as well in the Church, as in the State, with which it is united.

But as private Christians have no Power, or Call to govern the World, or set up Thrones according to the Principles of Truth and Righteousness, but are by the Spirit of the Gospel obliged to submit to, and be contented with that state of Government, good or bad, under which the Providence of God has placed them, so are they in like manner, to exercise a patient Submission, and Resignation under such an imperfect State of the outward Church, which Providence has not prevented, and only to take care, to be inwardly found such Worshippers in Spirit and in Truth, as the Father seeketh.

I mean not by this, as some have done, that any Evil however great in the Beginning, or continuing of usurped Power, either in the Church or State, loses its evil Nature, and may be called right and good, as soon as Providence has suffered it to become successful.

No, by no means. Success, though always to be owned to have God's Permission, leaves all things in their own Nature, neither Good because successful, nor Bad, because defeated and suppressed.

The Wickedness of the Jews conspiring and effecting the Death of Christ, was not only permitted, but suitable to the Designs of Providence, in the Redemption of Mankind.—But that the evil Nature of their Wickedness did not lose its Guilt, because suffered by God to be successful, but still continues, is plain from the Curse of God still abiding upon it to this day.

The Duty of private Christians, with regard to Providence in such Cases, is not to call that Good which before was Evil, or that Evil which before was Good, but patiently to suffer, and humbly acquiesce under all that bad outward Course of Things, either in Church or State, which the Providence of God has not thought fit to prevent, and that for these Reasons: First, as fully knowing that all Things must work together for good, to those who love God; Secondly, as piously believing that in all successful Wickedness, whether of Princes against their People, or of People against their Princes, there is always something hid under it, which in its way and degree, will like the successful Wickedness of the Jews towards Christ, help forward that Salvation, for which Christ hath laid down his Life.

Who can say, what a Good, and Blessing, the Christian World had been deprived of, had the righteous Providence of God not permitted the Princes of the heathen World, to make such bloody Havoc of the first Christians.

But suppose Errors of the following Kind got into the Church, viz., 1. The Scripture Baptism of the whole Body under Water, only as it were mimicked, by scattering a few Drops of Water on a new-born Child's Face. 2. The Supper of the Lord in one Church, held to be Bread and Wine changed into the real Flesh and Blood of Christ: In another, as Bread and Wine, not changed into, but substantially united with the real Flesh and Blood of Christ: In another, mere Bread and Wine, only made Memorials of the Body and Blood of Christ. In one Church this, in another that Form and Manner of Consecration held to be essential; in another, all Priestly Consecration rejected, as rank Superstition. 3. Suppose the original Apostolical Constitution of Church Assemblies, where all meet together, that all in their turns, might prophesy one by one, that all might learn, and all be comforted, should in some Churches be so changed, that all praying, speaking or prophesying, as from the Power, and Presence of Christ amongst them, was quite prohibited; where one and the same long, tedious, humanly-contrived Form of Worship, is daily, from Year's end to Year's end, to be read by one, who is become their only Speaker and Instructor, not because he alone is daily full of Faith and of the Holy Ghost, but because he is either hired to that Office, or because, by some means or other, the Church and Churchyard are become his Freehold. Is not such a State of Church Assemblies, in full contrariety to the first Assemblies, and to the Apostle's Injunction; quench not the Spirit, despise not Prophesyings? 4. Suppose again, that in the settled Service of the Church, certain Prayers and Petitions, not according to Truth and Righteousness, or suitable to the Goodness of the Evangelical Spirit, are read, as Prayers for Success in unchristian Wars, Prayers for the Destruction of our Christian Brethren, called our Enemies, Thanksgivings for the violent Slaughter and successful killing of Mankind : When these are made Parts of the Church Service, are we in Obedience to the Providence of God, suffering Things in Church Assemblies to come to this pass, to unite and bear a Part in such Church Service ?

My Answer to all this, shall be only personal ; that is, what I would do myself, in these supposed Cases.

First, As to any Defects, Mutilation, or Variations in the outward Form, and Performance of Baptism and the Supper of the Lord in the Church, I am under little, or no Concern about them ; and that for this very good Reason,—Because all that is inwardly meant, taught, or intended by them, as the Life, Spirit, and full Benefit of them, is subject to no human Power, is wholly transacted between God and myself, and cannot be taken from me, by any Alteration made by Man, in the outward Celebration of them.

If the Church, in my Baptism, should sprinkle a little Milk, or Wine, instead of Water, upon my Face, it would be no defective Baptism to me, if I had all that inward Disposition of Repentance, of Faith in Christ, to be born again of Him, which was meant, figured, and implied by such Immersion into Water, as was the first Baptism.

The same may be said of the Supper of the Lord, however altered, or varied in its outward Manner from what it was at first, if the inward Truth, pointed at by it, is in me, is loved and adhered to by me, I have all the Benefit that was meant, or could be had by it, when it was kept to a Tittle in the same outward Form, in which the first Church used it.

And therefore the outward Celebration of these Sacraments is revered by me, wherever they are observed, as standing in the same Place, and significant of the same inward Blessing, as in their first Institution.

As to the fore-mentioned supposed Prayers, though I am present when they are read in the Church, I neither make, nor need I make them, any more my own Prayers, than I make, or need to make all the Curses in the Psalms, to be my own Curses, when I hear both Priest and People reading them in the Church, as a Part of Divine Service. Nor is there any more Hypocrisy, or Insincerity, in one Case, than in the other.

I join therefore in the public Assemblies, not because of the Purity, or Perfection of that which is done, or to be found there, but because of that which is meant and intended by them : They mean the holy, public Worship of God ; they mean the Edification of Christians ; they are of great Use to many People ; they keep the World from a total Forgetfulness of God ; they help the Ignorant and Letterless to such a Knowledge of God, and the Scriptures, as they would not have without them.

And therefore, fallen as these Church Assemblies are, from their first spiritual State, I reverence them, as the venerable Remains of all that, which once was, and will, I hope, be again, the Glory of Church Assemblies, viz., the Ministration of the Spirit, and not of the dead Letter.

And there are two very great Signs of the near Approach of this Day, in two very numerous, yet very different kinds of People in these Kingdoms.

In the one Sort, an extraordinary Increase of new Separations, Particularity of Opinions, Methods, and religious Distinctions, is worked up to its utmost Height. And we see them almost every Day running with Eagerness from one Method to another, in Quest of Something, by the Help of a new Form, which they have not been able to find in the old one.

Now, as the Vanity and Emptiness of any Thing, or Way, is then only fully discovered and felt, when it has run all its Lengths, and worked itself up to its highest Pitch, so that nothing remains untried, to keep up the Deceit; so when religious Division, Strife of Opinions, invented Forms, and all outward Distinctions, have done their utmost, have no further that they can go, nor anything more to try, then is their inevitable Fall at Hand; and if the Zeal was simple and upright, all must end in this full Conviction, viz., That Vanity and Emptiness, Burden and Deceit, must follow us in every Course we take, till we have done with all our own Running, to expect all, and receive all, from the invisible God dwelling in, and blessing our Hearts with all heavenly Gifts, by a Birth of his eternal, all-creating Word, and life-giving Spirit brought forth in our Souls.

The other Sign I mentioned, is to be found in another Kind of a much awakened People, in most Parts of these Kingdoms, who in the Midst of the Noise and Multiplicity of all Church-Strife, having heard the still, and secret Voice of the true Shepherd, are turned inwards, and wholly attentive to the inward Truth, Spirit and Life of Religion, searching after the mystical, spiritual Instruction, which leads them from the outward Cry, of a Lo here, or there, is Christ, to seek to him and his redeeming Spirit within them, as the only safe Guide from inward Darkness to inward Light; and from outward Shadows into the Substantial, ever-enduring Truth; which Truth is nothing else, but the everlasting Union of the Soul with God, as its only Good, through the Spirit and Nature of Christ truly formed and fully revealed in it.—But to go no further; I shall only add, that as yet, I know of no better Way of thinking or acting, than as above, with regard to the universal fallen State of all Churches ; for fallen they all are, as certainly as they are divided.

Every Church Distinction is more or less in the corrupt State of every selfish, carnal, self-willed, worldly minded, partial Man, and is what it is, and acts as it acts, for its own Glory, its own Interest and Advancement, by that same Spirit, which keeps the selfish, partial Man solely attached to his own Will, his own Wisdom, Self-regard, and Self-seeking. And all that is wanting to be removed from every Church, or Christian Society, in order to its being a Part of the heavenly Jerusalem, is that which may be called its own, human Will, carnal Wisdom, and Self-seeking Spirit ; which is all to be given up, by turning the Eyes and Hearts of all its Members, to an inward Adoration, and total Dependence upon the supernatural, invisible, omnipresent God of all Spirits ; to the inward Teachings of Christ, as the Power, the Wisdom, and the Light of God, working within them every Good, and Blessing, and Purity, which they can ever receive, either on Earth, or in Heaven.

Under this Light, I am neither Protestant, nor Papist, according to the common Acceptation of the Words.—I cannot consider myself as belonging only to one Society of Christians, in separation and distinction from all others.—It would be as hurtful to me, if not more so, than any worldly Partiality. And therefore as the Defects, Corruptions, and Imperfections, which, some way or other, are to be found in all Churches, hinder not my Communion with that, under which my Lot is fallen, so neither do they hinder my being in full Union, and hearty Fellowship with all that is Christian, Holy, and Good, in every other Church Division.

And as I know, that God and Christ, and Holy Angels, stand thus disposed towards all that is Good in all Men, and in all Churches, notwithstanding the Mixture in them, is like that of Tares growing up with the Wheat, so I am not afraid, but humbly desirous, of living and dying in this Disposition towards them.

*I am, worthy Sir,
With much Truth of Love and Respect,
Your faithful Friend,
And hearty Servant.*

*King's Cliffe,
Feb. 28, 1756.*

Letter II.

To the Reverend Mr. S.

My dear Friend and Brother,

I HOPE my long Silence has not occasioned your being offended at me, or any Suspicion, that I have disregarded you, or the Matter you wrote upon. If I were to offer at a Reason in excuse of it, it would be an invented one, for it has never been known to myself. But I was contented to know, that my Heart was right towards you, full of all good Will and Desire to serve you, in the Way that God should lead me to it. And so it is come to pass, that you have not heard from me sooner.

It is a great Pleasure to me to think (as you say) that my Letter to you, will also be to two of your Brethren, who stand in the same State of Earnestness, to know how to be faithful and useful in their Ministry, as you do: I hope God will increase your Number.

The first Business of a Clergyman awakened by God into a Sensibility, and Love of the Truths of the Gospel, and of making them equally felt, and loved by others, is thankfully, joyfully and calmly, to adhere to, and give way to the Increase of this new-risen Light, and by true Introversion of his Heart to God, as the sole Author of it, humbly to beg of him, that all that, which he feels a Desire of doing to those under his Cure, may be first truly and fully done in himself.

Now the Way to become more and more awakened, to feel more and more of this first Conviction, or Work of God within you, is not to reflect and reason yourself into a further and deeper Sensibility of it, by finding out Arguments to strengthen it in your Mind. But the one true Way is, in Faith and Love to keep close to the Presence and Power of God, which has manifested itself within you, willingly resigned to, and solely depending upon the one Work of his all-creating Word, and all-quickening Spirit, which is always more or less powerful in us, according as we are more or less trusting to, and depending upon it.

And thus it is, that by Faith we are saved, because God is always ours, in such Proportion as we are his; as our Faith is in him, such is his Power and Presence in us. What an Error therefore, to turn one Thought from him, or cast a Look after any Help but his; for if we ask all of him, if we seek for all in him, if we knock only at his own Door of Mercy in Christ Jesus, and patiently wait and abide there, God's Kingdom must come, and his Will must be done in us.

For God is always Present, and always working towards the Life of the Soul, and its Deliverance from Captivity under Flesh and Blood. But this inward Work of God, though never ceasing, or altering, is yet always, and only hindered by the Activity of our own Nature, and Faculties, by bad Men through their Obedience to earthly Passions, and by good Men through their striving to be good in their own Way, by their natural Strength, and a Multiplicity of seemingly holy Labours and Contrivances.

Both these sorts of People obstruct the Work of God upon their Souls. For we can co-operate with God no other Way, than by submitting to the Work of God, and seeking, and leaving ourselves to it.

For the whole Nature of the fallen Soul, consists in its being fallen from God, into itself, into a Self-government and Activity, under its own Powers broken off from God, and therefore dying to self, as well to our Reason, as our Passions and Desires, is the first and indispensable Step in Christian Redemption, and brings forth that Conversion to God, by which Christ becomes formed and revealed in us. And nothing hinders this Conversion from being fruitful in all Good, and gaining all that we want from God, but the retaining Something to dwell in as our own, whether it be earthly Satisfaction, or a Righteousness of human Endeavours.

And therefore all the Progress of your first Conviction, which by the Grace of God you have had from above, and from within, consists in the Simplicity of your Faith, in adhering to it, as solely the Work of God in your Soul, which can only go on in God's Way, and can never cease to go on in you, any more than God can cease to be that which he is, but so far as it is stopped by your Want of Faith in it, or trusting to something else along with it. God is found, as soon as he alone is sought; but to seek God alone, is nothing else but the giving up ourselves wholly unto him. For God is not absent from us in any other respect, than as the Spirit of our Mind is turned from him, and not left wholly to him.

This Spirit of Faith, which not here, or there, or now and then, but everywhere, and in all Things, looks up to God alone, trusts solely in him, depends absolutely upon him, expects all from him, and does all it does for him, is the utmost Perfection of Piety in this Life. The Worship of God in Spirit and Truth, can go no higher, it does that which is its Duty to do; it hath all that it Wants, it doth all that it will, it is one Power, one Spirit, one Will, and one Working with God. And this is that Union or Oneness with God, in which Man was at first created, and to which he is again called, and will be fully restored by God and Man being made one Christ.

‘Stephen was a Man full of Faith and the Holy Ghost.’ These are always together, the one can never be without the other.

This was Stephen's Qualification for the Deaconship, not because of any Thing high or peculiar in that Office, but because the Gospel Dispensation was the opening a Kingdom of God amongst Men, a spiritual Theocracy, in which as God, and Man fallen from God, were united in Christ, so an Union of immediate Operation between God and Man was restored. Hence this Dispensation was called, in Distinction from all that went before it in outward Types, Figures, and Shadows, a Ministration of the Spirit, that is, an immediate Operation of the Spirit of God itself in Man, in which nothing Human, Creaturely, or depending upon the Power of Man’s Wit, Ability, or natural Powers, had any Place, but all Things begun in, and under Obedience to the Spirit, and all were done in the Power and Strength of Faith united with God.

Therefore to be a faithful Minister of this new Covenant between God and Man, is to live by Faith alone, to act only, and constantly under its Power, to desire no Will, Understanding, or Ability as a Labourer in Christ’s Vineyard, but what comes from Faith, and full Dependence upon God’s immediate Operation in and upon us.

This is that very thing, which is expressly commanded by St. Peter, saying, ‘If any Man speak, let him speak as the Oracles of God, if any Man minister, let him do it as of the Ability which God giveth.’ For all which he giveth this Reason, which will be a Reason as long as the World standeth, viz., ‘That in all Things God may be glorified through Jesus Christ.’ A plain and sufficient Declaration, that where this is not done, there God is not glorified by Christians through Christ Jesus.

God created Men and Angels solely for the Glory of his Love; and therefore Angels and Men, can give no other Glory to God, but that of yielding themselves up to the Work of his creating Love, manifesting itself in the several Powers of their natural Life, so that the first creating Love, which brought them into Being, may go on creating, and working in them, according to its own never-ceasing Will, to communicate God for ever and ever. This is their living to the Praise and Glory of God, namely by owning themselves, in all that they are, and have, and do, to be mere Instruments of his Power, Presence, and Goodness in them, and to them; which is all the Glory they can return to their Creator, and all the Glory for which he created them. We can no otherwise give religious Glory to God, than by worshipping him in Spirit and in Truth, seeing Christ has said, that 'the Father seeketh such to worship him.'

But we can no otherwise worship God in Spirit and in Truth, than as our Spirit in Truth and Reality, seeks only to, depends only upon, and in all things adores, the Life-giving Power of his universal Spirit; as the Creator, Upholder, and Doer of all that is or can be Good, either in Time or Eternity. For nothing can be Good, but that which is according to the Will of God, and nothing can be according to the Will of God, but that which is done by his own Spirit. This is unchangeable, whether in Heaven, or on Earth. And this is the one End of all the Dispensations of God, however various, towards fallen Man, viz., to bring Man into an Union with God. Comply with all the outward Modes and Institutions of Religion, believe the Letter, own the Meaning of Scripture Facts, Symbols, Figures, Representations, and Doctrines, but if you stand in any other use of them, or seek to gain some other Good from them, than that of being led out of your own Self, from your own Will, and own Spirit, that the Will of God, and the Spirit of God, may do all that is willed, and done by you; however fixed, and steadily you may adhere to such a Religion, you stand as fixed and steadily in your own fallen State. For the Restoration of fallen Man, is nothing else but the Restoration of him to his first State, under the Will and Spirit of God, in and for which he was created.

You may here perhaps, my dear Friend, think that I am speaking too much at large, and not closely enough to the particular Matter of your Enquiry. But my Intention hath been, so to speak to you on this Occasion, as to lay a Ground for a proper Behaviour, under every Circumstance of the outward Work of your Ministry. All Things must be set right in yourself first, before you can rightly assist others, towards the attaining to the same State.

I do not mean, that you must be first in a State of Perfection, before you can be fitted to teach others. But I mean that you must first see, in what you place your own Perfection, and have the Witness in yourself of the Truth of it, before you can rightly direct others in the Way to it; otherwise your Instruction would be of such practical Things, of which you had no practical Knowledge.

For this Reason, I have said all that is said above, to help you to set out under a right Sense of all that, which Religion is to do for yourself, and why, and how, and by what means alone, it can be done in you. When these two Things are not notionally, but practically known, and adhered to, then are you enabled, according to your measure, to speak of Things, and Truths of Religion, to those that are ignorant, or insensible of them.

Hence you may learn, what you are chiefly to drive at, in all your Discourses from the Pulpit, and Conversation; namely, to turn the Attention of Men to a Power of Good, and a Power of Evil, both of them born and living within them. For in these two Things, or States of the Soul of every Man, lies the full Proof of the whole Nature, both of the Fall, and Redemption from it.

Were we not naturally evil, by a Birth of Evil essentially born and living in us, we should want no Redemption; and had we not a Birth of something Divine in us, we could not be redeemed. Inward Evil can only be cured, or overcome by an inward Good.

And therefore, as all our Salvation is an inward Work, or Struggle of two Births within us, so all the Work of your outward Instruction, must be to call everyone home to himself, and help every Heart to know its own State, to seek, and find, and feel his inward Life and Death, which have their Birth, and Growth, and Strife against one another, in every Son of Adam.

And as this is the one good Way of Preaching, so it is, of all others, the most powerful, and penetrating into the Hearts of all Men, let their Condition be what it will.

For as these two States are certainly in every Soul of Man, however blended, smothered, and undistinguished, in their Operations for a Time, yet they have each of them, in some degree, their hearing Ears, which though ever so sunk into Dulness, will be forced, more or less, to feel the Power of that Voice, which speaks nothing but what is, and must be in some sort spoken within themselves.

And this is the true End of outward Preaching, namely, to give loud Notice of the Call of God in their Souls, which though unheard, or neglected by them, is yet always subsisting within them. It is to make such outward Sounds, as may reach and stir up the inward hearing of the Heart. It is so to strike all the outward Senses of the Soul, that from sleeping in an inward Insensibility of its own Life and Death, it may be brought into an awakened and feeling Perception of itself, and be forced to know, that the Evil of Death which is in it, will be its eternal Master, unless the Good of Life that is in it, seeks for Victory in the Name and Power and Mediation of Christ, the only Prince of Life, and Lord of Glory, and who only hath the Keys of Heaven, of Death and Hell in his Hands.

Thus far, and no further, goes the Labour and Ministry of Man, in the Preaching of the Word, whether it be of Paul, or Cephas.

Hence also you will be well qualified, to open in your Hearers, a right Sense and Knowledge of the Truth and Reality of every Virtue, and every Vice, that you are discoursing upon.

For since all that is Good and Evil, is only so to them, because it lives in the Life of their Heart; they may easily be taught, that no Virtue, whether it be Humility, or Charity, has any Goodness in it, but as it springs in, and from the Heart, nor any Vice, whether it be Pride, or Wrath, is any further renounced, than as its Power, and Place in the Heart is destroyed. And thus the Insignificancy and Vanity of an outward Formality, of a virtuous Behaviour, and every Thing short of a new Heart, and new Spirit in, and through the Power of Christ, dwelling vitally in them, may be fully shown to be Self-delusion, and Self-destruction.

Your next great Point, as a Preacher, should be to bring Men to an entire Faith in, and absolute Dependence upon, the continual Power and Operation of the Spirit of God in them.

All Churches, even down to the Socinians, are forced, in obedience to the Letter of Scripture, to hold something of this Doctrine.

But as the Practice of all Churches, for many Ages, has had as much Recourse to Learning, Art, and Science, to qualify Ministers for the preaching of the Gospel, as if it was merely a Work of Man's Wisdom, so Ecclesiastics, for the most part, come forth in the Power of human Qualifications, and are more or less full of themselves, and trusting to their own Ability, according as they are more or less Proficients in Science, and Literature, Languages and Rhetoric.

To this, more than to any one other Cause, is the great Apostasy of all Christendom to be attributed. This was the Door, at which the whole Spirit of the World, entered into Possession of the Christian Church.

Worldly Lusts, and Interests, Vanity, Pride, Envy, Contention, Bitterness, and Ambition, the Death of all that is good in the Soul, have now, and always had their chief Nourishment, Power, and Support, from a sense of the Merit, and sufficiency of literal Accomplishments.

Humility, Meekness, Patience, Faith, Hope, Contempt of the World, and heavenly Affections (the very Life of Jesus in the Soul) are by few People less earnestly desired, or more hard to be practised, than by great Wits, classical Critics, Linguists, Historians, and Orators in Holy Orders.

Now to bring Man to a right practical Knowledge, of that full Dependence upon, and Faith in the continual Operation of the Holy Spirit, as the only Raiser and Preserver of the Life of God in their Hearts, and Souls, and Spirits, it is not enough, you sometimes, or often preach upon the Subject, but everything that you inculcate, should be directed constantly to it, and all that you exhort Men to, should be required, only as a means of obtaining, and concurring with, that Holy Spirit, which is, and only can be, the Life and Truth of Goodness. And all that you turn them from, should be as from something that resists, and grieves that blessed Spirit of God, which always wills and desires to remove, all evil out of our Souls, and make us again to be sanctified Partakers of the Divine Nature.

For as they only are Christians, who are born again of the Spirit, so nothing should be taught to Christians, but as a Work of the Spirit; nor any Thing sought, but by the Power of the Spirit, as well in hearing, as teaching. It is owing to the Want of this, that there is so much Preaching and Hearing, and so little Benefit either of the Preacher or Hearer.

The Labour of the Preacher is, for the most part, to display Logic, Argument, and Eloquence, upon religious Subjects; and so he is just as much carried out of himself, and united to God by his own religious Discourses, as the Pleader at the Bar is, by his Law, and Oratory upon Right and Wrong.

And the Hearers, by their regarding such Accomplishments, go away just as much helped, to be new Men in Christ Jesus, as by hearing a Cause of great Equity well pleaded at the Bar.

Now in both these Cases, with regard to Preacher and People, the Error is of the same kind, namely, a trusting to a Power in themselves; the one in an Ability, to persuade powerfully; the other in an Ability, to act according to that which they hear.

And so the natural Man goes on preaching, and the natural Man goes on hearing of the Things of God, in a fruitless Course of Life. And thus it must be, so long as either Preacher or Hearers, seek anything else but to edify, and be edified in, and through the immediate Power and essential Presence of the Holy Spirit, working in them.

The Way therefore to be a faithful, and fruitful Labourer in the Vineyard of Christ, is to stand yourself in a full Dependence on the Spirit of God, as having no good Power, but as his Instrument, and by his Influence, in all that you do; and to call others, not to their own Strength or rational Powers, but to a full Hope, and Faith of having all that they want, from God alone; not as teaching them to be good by Men, but by Men and outward Instruction, calling them to Himself, to a Birth of essential, inherent living Goodness, Wisdom and Holiness from his own eternal WORD, and Holy Spirit, living and dwelling in them. For as God is all that the fallen Soul wants, so nothing but God alone, can communicate himself to it; all therefore is lost Labour, but the total Conversion of the Soul, to the immediate essential Operation of God in it.

As to the other Parts of your Office, whether they relate to Things prescribed, or to such as are to be done, according to your best Discretion, there will not be much Difficulty, if you stand in the State as above described.

As to several outward Forms, and Orders in the Church, they must be supposed to partake, in their Degree, of that Spirit, which has so long borne Rule in all Church Divisions. But the private Man, who has sufficient Call to the Ministry, is not to consider, how outward Things should be, according to the Primitive Plan, but how the inward Truth, which is meant by them, may be fully adhered to.

Baptism and the Lord's Supper, as differently practised in almost every particular Church, may afford ground of Scruple about them, since almost every Church in these Matters, is condemned by all other Churches.

But the Way to be above, and free from these Scruples, is to keep yourself, and your people wholly intent to that Spiritual Good, of which these Institutions are the appointed outward Figures, namely to that spiritual Regeneration, which is meant by Baptism, and to that spiritual Living in Christ. and Christ in us, which is meant by the Supper of the Lord. And then, though the Sacraments practised by you should have any outward Imperfection in them, they would be of the same Benefit to you, as they were to those, who used them in their first, outwardly perfect Form. And thus you will be led neither to overrate, nor disregard such use of them, as is according to the present State of the Church. It is only the Inward Regenerate Christian, that knows how to make a right Use of all outward Things. His Soul being in such a State of Union with God, and Man, as it ought to be, it takes every Thing by the right Handle, and turns every Thing into a Means of carrying on his Love towards God and Man. To the Pure, all Things are pure.

When you visit the Sick, or well Awakened, or dully Senseless, use no pre-contrived Knowledge, or Rules, how you are to proceed with them, but go as in Obedience to God, as on his Errand, and say only what the Love of God and Man suggests to your Heart, without any Anxiety about the Success of it; that is God's Work. Only see that the Love, the Tenderness, and Patience of God towards Sinners, be uppermost in all that you do to Man. Think not, that here Severity, and there Tenderness, is to be shown; for nothing is to be shown to Man, but his Want of God; nothing can show him this so powerfully, so convincingly, as Love. And as Love is the fulfilling of the whole Law, so Love is the fulfilling of all the Work of the Ministry.

*I am, with my best Wishes
To you and your Brethren,
Your most affectionate Friend,
And willing Servant.*

April 10th, 1756.

Letter III.

To a Clergyman of Bucks.

I AM much surprised, my Friend, that you should still want more to be said, about the Doctrine of Imputation, whether of Adam's Sin, or the Righteousness of Christ to his Followers. Our polluted sinful Birth of Adam, is all the Sin we can have from him; and our supernatural Birth of Christ, is all the Righteousness that we possibly can have from him. Imputation neither hath, nor can have any Thing to do in either Case; Sin and Righteousness are both inward and innate Things, and the sole Work of the Spirit, that lives in us. That which is born of God, is godly, and cannot sin; and that which is born of sinful Man, cannot be without a sinful Nature and Tempers. Cain could not possibly have any other natural Life, than that which was in Adam; and therefore so sure as Adam in Soul, Spirit, and Body, was all Sin and Corruption, so sure is it, that all his Offspring must come from him in the same Depravity of Soul, Spirit and Body. And to talk of their having this disordered fallen Nature, not from their natural Birth, but by an outward Imputation of it to them, is quite as absurd, as to say, that they have their Hands and Feet, or the whole Form of their Body, not from their natural Birth, but by an outward Imputation of such a Form, and Members to them.—Suppose it was said, that Adam's evil and polluted Condition of Body and Soul, was not the natural Effect of his Transgression, but independently of that, came upon him from God's imputing it to him, as his, though it was not his. What a Blasphemy would this be? And yet not less than that, of saying, that his Children have their evil Nature, the sinful State of their Wills and Affections, not by their natural Birth from him, but independently of that, solely from God's imputing such a sinful State to them, that is, that God imputed Adam's sinful Nature to Cain, though he was by Birth free from Sin, and Born in the Purity and Perfection, in which Adam was created; for so he must have been, if his Birth had nothing of sinful Adam in it. But if Cain was not so born, then he had his Sin, not by an Imputation of another's Sin to him, but plainly in the same Way of natural Birth, as every Man has his natural Life and Form of his Body, from Parents of the same Nature and Form. And indeed, to speak of Sin imputed to a Person that has it not, and so made his, is the same Absurdity, as speaking of Will and Affections, imputed to a Person that has them not, and so made his. For Sin is nowhere but in, and from the Will and Affections, and therefore to make Sin to be there by Imputation, where it is not, has no more Sense in it, than to make Will and Affections, to be by Imputation in a Creature that has them not.

'As in Adam all die,' says the Text: Is not this the same, as saying, that all Men have their fallen Nature, because born of Adam? Say, this does not follow, and then the Matter will stand thus: 'In Adam all die': But why, or how? Why because no Man hath the Evil of a mortal fallen Nature from his Birth from Adam, but merely by God's free Imputation of it to him.

But such a free Imputation of Adam's sinful State to his Children, when they had it not by natural Birth, is quite blasphemous, and leaves no room for magnifying the free Grace of God in Christ Jesus; since free Grace comes only to help Man out of a sinful State which he had not by natural Birth, but came upon him, by God's free Imputation of it to him, when he had it not. Thus, the adorable Love of God in his free Grace in Christ Jesus, is quite destroyed, upon supposition, that Mankind have not their sinful State from their natural Birth from Adam, but by a free Imputation of it by God to them.

Take now the other Part of the Text, so 'in Christ shall all be 'made alive.' Is it not a flat Denial of all this, to say, they are not made alive by a Birth of that to which Adam died, brought to life again in them, but are accounted as if they were alive, by the Imputation of Christ's Life to them, but not born in them? Could dead Lazarus have been said to have been made alive again, if still lying in the Grave, he had only been accounted as alive, by having the Nature of a living Man, only imputed to him?

Our Lord said to a Leper, whom he had cleansed, 'Go, show thyself to the Priest,' &c. But if instead of cleansing him, he had bid him go to the Priest, to be accounted as a clean Man, by the Imputation of another's Cleanness to him, had he not still been under all the evil of his own Leprosy? Now this is strictly the Case of the Righteousness of Christ, only outwardly imputed to us, and not inwardly born within us.—A Fiction, that runs counter to all that Christ and his Apostles, have said of the Nature of our Salvation. We want Christ's Righteousness, because by our natural Birth, we are inwardly full of Evil; therefore saith Christ, 'Except a Man be born again, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.' Does not this place all in a Birth? But a Birth, and outward Imputation, are inconsistent; that which is born in us, cannot be said, to be outwardly imputed to us. 'I am the Vine,' saith Christ, 'ye are the Branches.' Now if this be a true Representation of the Matter, then these two plain Doctrines of Christ, affirming, (1) The absolute Necessity of a new Birth from above, and (2) Declaring this Birth to be as really brought forth in us, as the Life of the Vine is really in the Branches, do, as far as Words can do it, entirely reject the Notion of a Righteousness imputed to us from without; a Righteousness, that has no more to do with our own Life, after it is imputed to us, than it had a thousand Years before we were born. For that which is not in us, or ours, by a Birth of itself in us, can never be any nearer to us, or have a more real Union with us, after it is called ours, than before it was so called. I say called, for Imputation, whether of Sin, or Righteousness, if its Power is not living in us, is no more than mere calling that ours, which is not ours.

It is needless to cite Places of Scripture, affirming that all consists in a Christ revealed, begotten, formed and living in us. Let this one Word of Paul suffice, 'Yet not I, but Christ that liveth in me.' He does not say, a Christ who is only called his, or outwardly imputed to him, but the quite contrary, a Christ who liveth in him.

Again, if Christ's Holy Nature, be not a Birth in us, but only outwardly imputed to us, then no Virtue, or Power of an Holy Life, can have any more real Existence, or vital Growth in us, than in the Devils, but are only outwardly imputed to us, and not to them, only called ours, and not theirs, though we have no more of them within us, than they have. Thus, be ye 'holy, for I am holy; be ye perfect, as your Father, which is in Heaven, is perfect; thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart,'

&c. All these are but vain Exhortations to do, and be, that which is not within our Sphere, but entirely inconsistent with it. For these Virtues are, in their whole Nature, nothing else but the very Righteousness of Christ, therefore if that can be only outwardly imputed to us, the same must be said of all these Virtues, that they can have no real Life or Growth in us, but only outwardly imputed to us. And indeed, unless Christ be truly and essentially born in us, we can have no more of any Christian Virtue, but the empty, outward Name of it: For neither Man, nor Angel ever did, or can thus love God with all his Heart, be holy because God is holy, be perfect as he is perfect, but because there is a Spirit born and living in them, which is of God, from God, and partakes of the Divine Nature.

Further, say that the Holy Spirit is not born and living in us, that his Operation is not inwardly in us, as the Spirit of our Spirit, the Life of our Life, but only outwardly imputed to us, as if he was in us, though he be not there: What a Blasphemy would this be! And yet full as well, as to say the same of Christ, and his Righteousness. For if Christ was only outwardly imputed to us, the same must, of all necessity be said of the Holy Spirit; for where and what Christ is, there and that is the Holy Spirit. How constantly are we told in Scripture, that they only are Sons of God, 'who are led by the Spirit of God'; that unless 'a Man hath the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his; that if Christ 'be not in us, we are Reprobates.' Now I would ask, can any Man be truly said to be led by the Spirit of the World, the Flesh and the Devil, who has nothing of this Spirit living in him, but only outwardly imputed to him? Can any Creature be said to be led by the Spirit of Man, who has not the Nature of Man within him, but only outwardly imputed to him? Yes, just as a Beast may be said to be a Newtonian Philosopher, by having Sir Isaac's System outwardly imputed to him.

Take Notice, Sir, that if Christ's righteous and holy Nature is only outwardly imputed to Christians, then all of them, whether they are called Good, or Bad, are without any Difference as to their inward Man, and all under the same unaltered Evil of their fallen Nature, as much after, as they were before Christ's Righteousness was imputed to them.—When a good Man has anything falsely laid to his Charge, is not this outwardly imputing something to him, that is not his, does not belong to him? But is not his own inward Goodness just in the same fulness of Truth in him, after such an Imputation of Evil to him, as it was before it was so imputed. Now this is the whole Nature of Imputation; and therefore if the righteous Nature of Christ is only outwardly imputed to the Sinner, it leaves him in all the Evil of his fallen Nature, and can no more make him inwardly good, than a good Man can be made inwardly evil, by having an Evil outwardly imputed to him, that is not his.

The Relation between Christ and the fallen Soul, is thus: Christ is the one Mediator between God and Man, and that which his Mediation consists in, is the restoring that Life in Man, which was his first created Union with God. Nothing separated Man from God, or made him want a Mediator, but the Loss of his first Divine Life; and therefore nothing can mediate, or be a means of Union again between God and Man, but that which can, and doth raise again in Man, that Divine Life which was his first Union with God. Everything therefore, that is said of this one Mediator, as redeeming, ransoming, justifying, sanctifying, making Peace, or Reconciliation, &c., however variously expressed, has no other Nature, or Meaning, but that of making fallen Man, inwardly alive again in God.—He in whom Christ is the Way, the Truth, and the Life, has just that same Change made in him, just that same done to him, as he that has his Sins washed and cleansed by the Blood of the Lamb. For these different Expressions mean only one and the same Thing, and that one Thing, is Christ in us, our Hope of Glory. This is Justification, Sanctification, Redemption, Peace, Reconciliation, and everlasting Union with God.—Trifling therefore, to the last degree, is their Orthodoxy, who raise Disputes, and set up different Doctrines, on the different Meaning of these Words, and the Danger of not knowing, or not stiffly contending for the blessed Difference between Justification and Sanctification, &c., Full as trifling, as to raise Disputes, and set up different Doctrines on the different Names given to Jesus Christ, as Word of God, Son of Man, Lamb of God, Alpha and Omega, Mediator, Immanuel, Atonement, Reconciliation, Resurrection, &c., and the great Danger of ascribing that to Christ, as our Reconciliation, which only belongs to him, as called the Resurrection and the Life.—Figure to yourself such an orthodox Dispute as this, and then you will see the Importance of that pious Zeal, which will not suffer Justification and Sanctification to encroach upon one another.

What an egregious Folly, to be learnedly laborious in dividing and distinguishing these different Names of Christ, or the different Effects of his purchasing, justifying, or sanctifying our Souls, &c., when all that these Things are told us for, and all the Benefit that we can receive from them, lies solely in this one Word of Christ, 'if anyone will be my Disciple' (that is, if anyone will have the Benefit of all that I am, and of all that is said of me) 'let him deny himself, take up his Cross and follow me.' Then, and then only, all the different Names of Christ, and all the different Powers ascribed to him, will be, not critically, but blessedly known and understood to be one, as God is one, whether he be called I AM, or the Creator of Heaven and Earth, or the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

But to proceed: All that is said of the Nature, Office, and Qualities of Christ, in order to be our Redeemer, is so much said of the Necessity of their being essentially found, and realized in every Soul, that is to partake of his Redemption.—If ‘Christ be ‘not in us, we are none of his.’ But how can Christ be in us, but because all that which Christ was, in the Spirit and Nature of his whole Process, is in us, as it was in him? If the same Mind be not in us, which was in Christ Jesus; if that which loved, that which willed, that which suffered in him, be not the same Spirit in us, we shall never reign with him. He may be truly called a Redeemer, but we are not His redeemed, for such as the Redeemer is, such are they that are redeemed.

‘To him that overcometh,’ saith Christ, ‘will I grant to sit ‘with me on my Throne, (N. B.) even as I overcame, and am set ‘down with my Father on his Throne.’ What becomes now of the vain Fiction of an outward Imputation? Is Christ’s Victory here imputed to us? Is not the Contrary as strongly taught us, as Words can do it? ‘To him that overcometh, even as I also ‘overcame.’

Can we have fuller Proof, that Christ’s righteous Nature must be inwardly born, living and manifesting itself in us, as it did in him; how else can we overcome, even as he overcame? That Spirit which overcame in Christ, was manifest in the Flesh, for no other End, but that the same conquering Spirit might be born in us. And when that is done, then all is done, by that Grace of God, which bringeth Salvation, Justification, Sanctification, or the new Creature. For whether you call it by one, or by all these Names, it is the white Stone with the new Name written in it, which no Man knoweth, but he that hath received it. And that for this Reason, because it is no outwardly imputed Thing, but is the new Name, the new Nature and Spirit of Christ, become all in all in us, and so only to be known by those, who have it brought to Life in them.

Again, ‘This is my Blood, which is shed for many, for the ‘Remission of Sins’; what follows? Why, ‘Drink ye all of ‘this;—If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him;—‘The Blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all ‘Iniquity;—who hath washed us from our Sins in his Blood.’ Now to show you, that all these different Sayings have but one and the same Doctrine, you need only read the following decisive Words: ‘These are they that came out of great Tribulation,’

(that is, have trodden the Wine Press with Christ) 'and have washed their Robes in the Blood of the Lamb.' Here you see is no outward Imputation of the Sufferings of Christ, but 'their coming out of great Tribulation,' or passing through the whole Process of Christ, was that alone, which made their 'Robes to be Washed in the Blood of the Lamb.' And no other Doctrine is in this Text, than if it had been said, 'these are they, who having denied themselves, taken up their daily Cross, and followed Christ, have thereby washed their Robes in the Blood of the Lamb.' Through all the New Testament, this is the one Doctrine of Salvation through the Blood of Christ, it is 'drinking the Cup, that he drank of,' and not the Bitterness of his Cup outwardly imputed to us.

You tell me, my Friend, that the seraphic Aspatio is quite transported with the Thought of the Imputation of Christ's Righteousness to the Sinner, and that it should in the Account of God, be esteemed as his—It may be so, Transport seems to be as natural to Aspatio, as flying is to a Bird. But surely, a more transporting, a more glorious Thing it is, both to the Glory of God, and the Good of Man, that the Sinner is, through the righteous Nature of Christ, born and brought to Life in him, set up again in his first Likeness and Image of God. For if Man's Righteousness is not essentially restored in him, as it was essentially in him at the First, has he not less of God in him, by his Redemption, than he had at his Creation? Is it to the Happiness of Man, and the Glory of God, that God has not obtained that Dwelling in Man, for which he alone created him?

Is it matter of Transport to think, that fallen Man will to all Eternity live destitute of his first heavenly Nature, his first Divine Life, which he had in, and from God? But this must be the Case, if Christ's Righteousness is only outwardly imputed to him, and not essentially born in him.

Transports, my Friend, are but poor Proofs of Truth, or of the Goodness of the Heart, from whence they proceed. Martyrdom has had its Fools, as well as its Saints, and Zealots may live and die in a Joy, that has all its Strength from Delusion.

You may see a Man drowned in Tears, at beholding, and kissing a wooden Crucifix, and the same Man condemning another, as a wicked Heretic, who only honours the Cross, by being daily baptized into the Death of Christ.—Nay, so blind is Opinion-zeal, that some good Christian Pastors will not scruple to tell you, they could find no Joy in their own State, no Strength, or Comfort in their Labours of Love towards their Flocks, but because they know, and are assured from St. Paul, that God never had, nor ever will have, mercy on all Men, but that an unknown Multitude of them, are through all Ages of the World, inevitably decreed by God to an eternal Fire, and Damnation of Hell, and an unknown Number of others, to an irresistible Salvation.

Wonder not then, if the Inquisition has its pious Defenders, for Inquisition-Cruelty, nay, every Barbarity that must have an End, is mere Mercy, if compared with this Doctrine.—And to be in love with it, to draw sweet Comfort from it, and wish it God Speed, is a Love that absolutely forbids the loving our Neighbour, as ourselves, and makes the Wish, that all Men might be saved, no less than a Rebellion against God.—It is a Love, with which, the cursed Hater of all Men, would willingly unite and take Comfort; for could he know from St. Paul, that Millions, and Millions of Mankind, are created and doomed to be his eternal Slaves, he might be as content with this Doctrine, as some good Preachers are, and cease ‘going about as a roaring Lion, seeking whom he may devour’; as knowing, that his Kingdom, was so sufficiently provided for, without any Labours of his own.

Oh, the Sweetness of God’s Election, cries out the ravished Preacher! Oh, the Sweetness of God’s Reprobation! might the hellish Satan well say, could he believe that God had made him a free Gift of such Myriads, and Myriads of Men, of all Nations, Tongues and Languages, from the Beginning to the End of the World, and reserved so small a Number for himself. This is the blessed Fruit of the imputation Doctrine.

What a Complaint, and Condemnation is there made in Scripture, of those who sacrificed their Sons and Daughters unto Devils? And yet, this Reprobation Doctrine, represents God, as sacrificing Myriads of his own Creatures, made in his own Image, to an everlasting Hell.

There is not an Absurdity of heathenish Faith and Religion, but what is less slocking than this Doctrine, and yet so blindly are some zealous Doctors of the Gospel bigoted to it, as to set it forth, as the glorious Manifestation of the supreme Sovereignty of God.

My Friend, let any old Woman preach to you, rather than these Doctors.

But to end in one Word, Christ’s righteousness is ours, in our Redemption, just in the same manner, as it was Adam’s in his first Holy Birth. For Adam had then no Righteousness in him, but that which was created in Christ Jesus. And that is the one only Reason, why there could be no other Redeemer but Christ, because the Loss of Christ, was that Death which Adam died by his Fall; and therefore no Possibility of coming out of his fallen State, but in, and by a Birth of Christ’s righteous Nature, essentially born and living in him, as it was living in him before he fell.

‘Little Children,’ saith St. John, ‘let no Man deceive you’; (N.B.) He that doth Righteousness, is righteous, (N.B.) even ‘as He is righteous.’ Therefore to expect, or trust to be made righteous, by the Righteousness of another, only outwardly imputed to us, is, according to the Apostle, deceiving ourselves.

Either Man, by the Mediation of Christ, is united again with God, or he is not; if he is not, then he has no more of the Divine Life in him, after his Redemption, than he had before he was redeemed. But if he is again united with God, as he was at his Creation, then his Redemption must wholly consist in the Birth of a Divine Nature and Spirit, essentially brought to Life in him.—That which is Spirit in Man, must be godlike, before it can unite with that Spirit, which is God. And was there not a Divine Spirit in Man, truly born of, and proceeding from the Spirit of God, as his real Offspring, no Union of Will, Love, or Desire, could be between God and Man. For this is a Truth, that extends itself through all that is natural, or supernatural, that Like can only unite with Like. There is no Separation between Things, but that which is effected by Contrariety. If therefore nothing in Man was a Partaker of the Divine Nature, Man must in his whole Nature, be for ever separated from God, and stand in the same Impossibility of being united with him, that two the most contrary Things, do to one another.—So sure, therefore, as the Mediation of Christ, is by himself declared to be for this End, viz., ‘that they all may ‘be one, as thou, Father, art in me, and I in Thee, that they ‘also may be one in us; I in them, and thou in me, that they ‘may be made perfect in one;’ so sure is it, that an outwardly imputed Christ, is as absurd in itself, and as contrary to Scripture, as an outwardly imputed God.

Farewell.

Letter IV.

IN ANSWER to a SCRUPLE.

THAT you may have a full Answer to your Scruple, concerning these Words, the Folly of Debtor and Creditor, in the Second Part of the Spirit of Love, I will set forth the Doctrine from whence it is taken.—Great Part of that Book, is to clear up, and assert the true Scripture Doctrine of the Nature, Necessity, and Merit of our Lord's Sufferings and Death, as an Atonement, and Satisfaction before God, in the Work of our Redemption.—No Point of Christianity has been more mistaken, in our common Systems of Gospel Doctrine, or given greater Offence than this, and yet nothing clearer, or more reasonably to be believed, when it stands in its own Scriptural Manifestation.

Now the right Ground of understanding the true Meaning of every different Expression, relating to Christ, as our Saviour, or Salvation, lies in these two Things: 1. What Christ is in himself. 2. What he does, or intends to do for us.

The Scripture saith, 'God was manifested in the Flesh;' this describes his whole Nature, what he was in himself, viz., the Deity become Man. What he is, and does in us, to us, and for us, is expressed in the following Words, 'He was manifested to destroy 'the Works of the Devil;' and again, 'as in Adam all die, so in 'Christ, shall all be made alive.'

Now according to this Ground, every Expression concerning our Saviour, is to have its true infallible Meaning fixed. Everything that is said of his Birth, his Life, his Sufferings, his Death, his Resurrection and Ascension, are all of them, both with respect to God, and ourselves, of one and the same Efficacy, full of one and the same Merit, and all for one and the same End, viz., to destroy in Man the Works of the Devil, and to make all that died in Adam, to be alive again in Christ.

Suppose now, any one of these to be wanting, and the same will follow from it, as if they were all wanting. Had his Birth been otherwise than it was, not God as well as Man, He could have made no Beginning of a Divine Life in us. Had not his Life been without Sin, his Death upon the Cross could have done us no Good, nor could have been the one Mediator between God and sinful Man. Had his Sufferings been less than they were, had there been any Evil, Trial, or Temptation, which had not attacked him, through the whole Course of his Life, with all its Force, he could not have been said, to have overcome them. So sure therefore as Christ, as a Son of Man was to overcome all that the World, the Flesh, and the Devil, could do to fallen Man; so sure is it, that all the Evils, which they could possibly bring upon fallen Man, were to be felt, and suffered by him, as absolutely necessary in the Nature of the Thing, to prove his victorious Superiority over them. Had he not given up his Body to an ignominious Death, in all the Horrors of a Soul, that had lost its God: He could not have suffered That in, and for Man, which every Man must have suffered, who had died in his fallen State.—But Christ dying, and sacrificing himself, as he did, in and through that horrible Death, which was fallen Man's Gate to eternal Misery, and conquering this State of Man, as he had every evil Power of the World, the Flesh, and the Devil, then it was, that he could say to those, who were all their Life in Fear of this Death, be of good Comfort, I have overcome this Death, and that upon the same Ground, as he said to his Followers, under a Sense of worldly Tribulations, 'be of good Comfort, I 'have overcome the World.' And thus his Death, had no other Nature, with respect to us, than every other Part of his Process, that was antecedent to it, only as it was the last, and greatest, and finishing Part of that redeeming Work, which was begun by his Divine Birth, and carried on in, and through his sinless, perfect Life. And as I said, that the Death of Man unredeemed, was his Gate into an eternal Separation from God, so Christ's Entrance into this Gate of Damnation, and pouring out his Blood, thus forsaken of God, had a Suffering in it, that Thoughts can no more conceive, than Words express.

Hence it is, by way of Eminence, justly said, to be the highest Price, that he paid for us; and that by his Blood it is that we are washed, and redeemed, not only because of its Greatness in itself, but because it finished, and for ever completed the whole redeeming Work, which he had to do for us in the Flesh.—Hence it was, that through the Old Testament, this Sacrifice of his Death, is the great Thing mostly pointed at in all its Sacrifices, Types, and Figures; hence also is all the Boast of it in the Gospel. Well therefore may the Church, through all Ages, have ascribed so much to the Merit of his Blood shed for us; well may it have been celebrated, as the one great Price, by which we are ransomed from the Power of Death and Hell; because, though all that he was, and did, antecedently to it, was equally necessary to our Salvation, yet all had been without any effect, unless by his so dying, this damnable Death had been swallowed up in Victory.

In short, had not Christ been real God, as well as real Man, he could have made no Beginning in the Work of our Salvation, and had he not ended his Life in such a Sacrifice, as he did, he could never have said, It is finished.—He therefore, who denieth the Truth, the Certainty, and absolute Necessity of these two essential Points, is in the Abomination of Socinianism, and is that very Liar and Antichrist described by St. John in his first Epistle.

Again, though Christ's Death was thus absolutely necessary in the very Nature of the Thing, thus great in its Merits and Effects, yet unless his Resurrection had followed, we had been yet in our Sins, nor could he, till risen from the Grave, have purchased a Resurrection for us. Lastly, had he not ascended into Heaven, he could not have had the Power of drawing, as he said, all Men to himself.—Every Part therefore of our Saviour's Character, or Process, has its full and equal Share in all that, which is said of him, as our Peace with God, our Righteousness, our Justification, our Ransom, our Atonement, our Satisfaction, our Life and new Birth; for all these different Expressions, have no Difference in Doctrine, but whether separately, or jointly taken, signify nothing else, but this one Thing, that he was the true and full Destroyer of all the Works of the Devil in Man, and the true Raiser of a Divine Life, in all that died in Adam.

And here, Sir, you are well to observe, that all that Christ was, did, suffered, and obtained, was purely and solely on the Account, and for the sake of altering, or removing that which was wrong, evil, and miserable in Man, or in Scripture Words, 'God was in Christ Jesus, reconciling the World to himself,' that is, taking away from Man every Property, or Power of Evil, that kept him in a State of Separation from God. Thus it was, and to this End, that 'God was in Christ Jesus' in his whole Process.

Unreasonably therefore have our scholastic Systems of the Gospel, separated the Sacrifice of Christ's Death, from the other Parts of his Process, and considered it as something chiefly done with regard to God, to alter, or atone an infinite Wrath, that was raised in God against fallen Man, which Infinity of just Vengeance, or vindictive Justice, must have devoured the Sinner, unless an infinite Satisfaction had been made to it, by the Death of Christ.

All this, is in the grossest Ignorance of God, of the Reason and Ground, and Effects of Christ's Death, and in full Contradiction to the express Letter of Scripture. For there we are told, that God is Love, and that the Infinity of his Love was that alone, which showed itself towards fallen Man, and wanted to have Satisfaction done to it; which Love-desire could not be fulfilled, could not be satisfied with anything less than Man's full Deliverance from all the Evil of his fallen State. That Love, which has the Infinity of God, nay, which is God himself, was so immutably great towards Man, though fallen from him, 'that he 'spared not his only begotten Son'; and why did He not spare him? It was because nothing but the incarnate Life of his eternal Son, passing through all the miserable States of lost Man, could regenerate his first Divine Life in him. Can you possibly be told this, in stronger Words than these, 'God so loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son'; how did He give him? Why, in his whole Process. And to what end did He give him? Why, 'that all who believe in him, might not perish, 'but have everlasting Life.'—Away then with the superstitious Dream, of an infinite Wrath in God towards poor fallen Man, which could never cease, till an infinite Satisfaction was made to it. All Scripture denies it, and the Light of Nature abhors it.—The Birth, the Life, the Death of Christ, though so different Things, have but one and the same Operation, and that Operation is solely in Man, to drive all Evil out of his fallen Nature, and delight the Heart of God, that desires his Salvation.—God is Love, and has no other Will towards Man, but the Will of Love. That Love, which from itself began the Creation of an holy Adam, from itself began the Redemption of a fallen Adam.—The Death of Christ was a Sacrifice from the Love of God the Son towards Man, to overcome thereby that damnable Death, which, otherwise, every Son of Adam must have died; it was a Sacrifice offered to the same Love, in God the Father; a Sacrifice, equally loved and desired by both of them, because, in the Nature of the Thing, as absolutely necessary to alter and overcome that Evil, which belonged to Man's State of Death, as the Incarnation of the WORD, was absolutely necessary in the Nature of the Thing, to make Man to be alive again in God.

This is the one only true, and full Confutation of Socinianism.

But to have Recourse to a supposed Wrath, or vindictive Justice, in a God incensed towards fallen Man, in order to confute the Socinian, who denies the Necessity, and Effects of Christ's Death, is only opposing one great Falsity with another.—For Wrath has no more Place in God, than Love has in the Devil. Wrath began with Devils, Hell, and fallen Nature, and can have no possible Existence anywhere, or in any Thing, but where Devils, Hell, and fallen Nature, have their Power of working.

Do not, my Friend, be here so furious, as to say, that if it was strictly true, that there was no Wrath in God, you would burn your Bible: For if it was not strictly true, you would never have had a Bible to burn; nor any more Messages from Heaven about Man's Salvation, than from Hell.—For if you will have Wrath in the most high God, you can have no other, or better a God, than that which the atheistical Spinoza invented.

For if Wrath is in the Supreme God, then Nature is in God, and if so, then God is Nature, and nothing else; for Nature cannot be above itself. Therefore if Nature is in the most high God, then the lowest Working of Nature, is the true Supreme God.—And so instead of a supernatural God, who created Heaven and Earth, Heaven and Earth, and all Things else, are the only God.

This is the atheistical Absurdity, that necessarily follows from the supposing a Wrath in God; for Wrath can no more be anywhere, but in Nature, than Storms and Tempests can be, where there is nothing that moves.

Let me here, Sir, observe to you the barefaced Calumny, that Dr. Warburton has ventured to cast upon me, in charging my Writings with Spinozism, though all that I have wrote for these last twenty Years, has been such a full Confutation of it, as is not to be found in any Book, that has been purposely wrote against it. Had I only proved, as I have done, by a Variety of Proofs, that Wrath cannot possibly be in the true God, I had sufficiently confuted Spinozism; for if not Wrath, then nothing of Nature is in God. But I have gone much further, and have, in my Appeal, the Book of Regeneration, the Spirit of Prayer, the Spirit of Love, and the Way to Divine Knowledge, opened the true Ground of the unchangeable Distinction between God and Nature, making all Nature, whether temporal or eternal, its own Proof, that it is not, cannot be God, but purely and solely the WANT of God, and can be nothing else in itself but a restless, painful Want, till a supernatural God manifests himself in it.—This is a Doctrine, which the Learned of all Ages have known nothing of; not a Book ancient or modern in all our Libraries, has so much as attempted to open the Ground of Nature, to show its Birth and State, and its essential unalterable Distinction from the one abyssal, supernatural God; and how all the Glories, Powers, and Perfections of the hidden, unapproachable God, have their wonderful Manifestation in Nature and Creature. This is a Blessing reserved by God for these last Times, to be opened in his chosen Instrument, the poor, illiterate Behmen. And this I will venture to say, that he who will declare War against him, has no Choice of any other Weapons, but Raillery and Reproach. To call the blessed Man, a possessed Cobbler, will be doing something; to call his Writings, senseless Jargon, may stand his learned Adversary in great stead; but if he tries to overcome him any other Way, his Success will be like his, who knocks his Head against a Post.—But no more of this here.

And now, Sir, what shall I say of my learned, accusing Doctor? Why only this, that if he knows how to forgive himself, then there will be one Thing at least, in which we are both of us like-minded.

A Word or two now to yourself and Friends, who are so loath to own a God who is all Love: Let me tell you, if you will have Wrath in the Supreme God, you must have a God, in whom is Selfishness, Envy, and Pride, with all the Properties of fallen Nature. For as it is impossible for one of these to be without the other in the Creature, so if any one of them was in God, all the other must be there. They are the four essential Elements of Hell, or fallen Nature, which mutually beget, and are begotten of one another; where one is, there are all of them, and where all are not, there cannot be one of them. Every Pride consists of three Things, Selfishness, Envy, and Wrath. And so of every one of them, take which you will, it consists of the other three, so that to separate them, is to separate a Thing from itself.

Divine Love is just as contrary to them, as God is to the Devil; and where Love is not, there God is not, and where the Work is not wholly the Working of Love, it is no Work of God, but the selfish, wrathful, proud, envious Working of the diabolical Nature, fallen from its first blessed Subjection to, and Union with the supernatural God of Love.

To talk (as some do) of a good Wrath in God, which is only so called, because it has a Likeness to, and Produces like Effects to those that come from Wrath in the Creature, is but calling that a good Wrath, which is like a bad Wrath, and is no better, no wiser, than to talk of a good Envy, a good Pride in God, which are only so called, because they have a Likeness to that, which is a bad Pride, and a bad Envy in the Creature. Can any Thing be more profanely absurd than this? Which yet is the best that can be said by those, who will have it the Glory of God, to be wrathful, who think all is lost, that the gospel Salvation is blasphemed, if the same Love that created Man in Glory, should be his only Redeemer, when he had fallen from it. Not considering, that Salvation could never have come into the World, but because, all that Good and Blessing, which Love can be, and do to the Creature, must be done, and doing for ever and ever, by that first creating God, whose Name and Nature, whose Will and Working, is Love, the same Yesterday, to Day, and for ever.

And now, Sir, need I say much more, to remove your Scruple about the following Passage in the Spirit of Love, 'No Wrath in God, no fictitious Atonement, no Folly of Debtor and Creditor, no Suffering for Suffering's sake, but a Christ suffering and dying, as his same Victory over Death and Hell, as when he rose from the Dead and ascended into Heaven.'*

I said Folly of Debtor and Creditor, because Christ's overcoming Man's damnable Death, by his victorious Passage through it, has nothing in it that has any Likeness to the Transaction of a Debtor paying his Creditor; nothing was done in it by way of Payment of a Debt, any more than Christ paid a Debt for Lazarus, when he raised him from the Dead, or paid a Debt for the Man born Blind, whom he helped to seeing Eyes. For the Good that is done us by the Death of Christ, is a Good that relates solely to ourselves. Nothing in it, is given to, or received but by ourselves; it overcomes, and saves us from our own Evil of Death, just as that, which Christ did to Lazarus, and the blind Man, overcame the Death that was in the one, and the Darkness that was in the other.

* Spirit of Love, Second Part.

You appeal to a Parable of our Lord's, which has no more Relation to the Nature and Efficacy of Christ's Death, than the Parable of the Tares of the Field. St. Peter saith, 'How oft shall 'my Brother sin against me, and I forgive him, till seven Times?' Christ answereth, 'Not until seven Times, but until seventy 'Times seven.' And then he sets forth this Doctrine of continual Forgiveness in the following Parable.

'The Kingdom of God is likened to a certain King, who would 'take Account of his Servants,' &c. Read the whole Parable, and you will be forced to see, that nothing else is intended to be taught by it, but that one Conclusion, which Christ draws from it: 'So likewise shall my heavenly Father do unto you, if ye 'from your Hearts, forgive not everyone his Brother their Tres- 'passes.' All that the Parable saith, is neither more nor less, than is said in these other Words, 'Be ye Merciful, as your Father 'which is in Heaven is merciful': Again, the Doctrine of this Parable, quite overthrows that, which systematic Doctors intend by Debtor and Creditor; for their Doctrine is, that the injured Authority of God must have full Satisfaction made to it, and thence it is, that they ground the Necessity of so great a Payment, as Christ made to it. Whereas this Parable of the Kingdom of God, sets forth a King, (N.B.) frankly forgiving, and not requiring any Payment at all, either from the Debtor himself, or from anyone else for him.—Can there therefore be a greater Folly, than to appeal to this, and the like Scriptures, to make God a Creditor, whose vindictive Wrath against his Debtor, will not be appeased, till full Payment is made to it? And what a blind Persisting is it in the same Folly, to urge the Petition in the Lord's Prayer, forgive us our Debts, as we forgive our Debtors, as another Proof, that God is that Creditor, who will be fully paid the Debts, that are due to him? For surely, if God requires us to expect, and pray for the Forgiveness of our Debts, it is badly concluded from thence, that therefore full Payment of them, must be made.—The Truth is, this Petition teaches the same frank Forgiveness, as the foregoing Parable, and is utterly inconsistent with the Doctrine of an infinite Satisfaction, necessary to be made: For if so, then the Petition ought to have been thus, forgive us our Debts, as we forgive our Debtors, (N.B.) when full Payment is made, either by themselves, or by someone else for them.

In a Word, a vindictive Wrath in God, that will not forgive, till a Satisfaction equal to the Offence, is made to it, sets the Goodness of God in a lower State, than that which has been found in Thousands of Mankind. The Truth of the Matter, is this, the Divinity of Christ, and his whole Process through Life and Death, was absolutely necessary in the Nature of the Thing, to raise Man out of the Death of Sin, into a heavenly Birth of Life. And the Necessity of all this, is grounded upon the Certainty of Man's Fall, from a Divine, into a bestial Life of this World. The Socinian Blasphemy consists in the Denial of these Points, the Deity of Christ, and the Fall of Man, and the Necessity of Christ's Death.—Our scholastic Doctors, own the Fall of Man, but know, or own Nothing of the true Nature and Depth of it. They own the Truth of Christ's Divinity, and the Necessity of his Sufferings; they plead for the Certainty of these Things from Scripture Words, but see not into the Ground of them, or in what, the absolute Necessity of them consists.—Hence it is, that when opposed by Socinian Reasoning, they are at a Loss how to support these great Truths, and are forced to humanize the Matter, and to suppose such a vindictive Wrath in God, as usually breaks forth in great Princes, when a Revolt is made, against their sovereign Authority.

What a paltry Logic, to say, God is Righteousness and Justice, as well as Love, and therefore his Love cannot help, or forgive the Sinner, till his Justice, or righteous Wrath has Satisfaction?—Every Word here, is in full Ignorance of the Things spoken of. For what is Love in God, but his Will to all Goodness? What is Righteousness in God, but his unchangeable Love of his own Goodness, his Impossibility of loving anything else but it, his Impossibility of suffering anything that is Unrighteous, to have any Communion with him? What is God's forgiving sinful Man? It is nothing else in its whole Nature, but God's making him Righteous again. There is no other Forgiveness of Sin, but being made free from it. Therefore the compassionate Love of God, that forgives Sin, is no other, than God's Love of his own Righteousness, for the Sake of which, and through the Love of which, he makes Man righteous again. This is the one Righteousness of God, that is rigorous, that makes no Abatements, that must be satisfied, must be fulfilled in every Creature that is to have Communion with him. And this Righteousness that is thus rigorous, is nothing else but the unalterable Purity and Perfection of the Divine Love, which from Eternity to Eternity can love nothing but its own Righteousness, can will nothing but its own Goodness, and therefore can will nothing towards fallen Man, but the Return of his lost Goodness, by a new Birth of the Divine Life in him, which is the true Forgiveness of Sins.—For what is the sinful State of Man? It is nothing else, but the Loss of that Divine Nature, which cannot commit Sin; therefore the forgiving Man's Sin, is in the Truth and Reality of it, nothing else, but the Revival of that Nature in Man, which being born of God sinneth not. Lastly, Let me ask these Dividers of the Divine Nature, what different Shares, or different Work, had the Righteousness, and the Love of God in the Creation of Man? Was there then something done by the Love of God, which ought not to be ascribed to the Righteousness of God? Who can be so weak, as to say this? But if the Love and the Righteousness of God, is one, as God is one, and had but one Work in the Creation of Man, it must be the highest Absurdity, to say, that in the Redemption of Man, the Love, and the Righteousness of God, must have, not only different, but contrary Works, that the Love of God cannot act, till the Righteousness of God, as something different from it, is first satisfied.

All that which we call the Attributes of God, are only so many human Ways of our conceiving that Abyssal All, which can neither be spoken, nor conceived by us. And this Way of thinking, and speaking of God, is suitable to our Capacities, has its good Use, and helps to express our Adoration of him, and his Perfections. But to conclude, and contend, that there must therefore be, different Qualities in God, answerable, or according to our different Ways of thinking, and speaking of his Perfections, is rather blaspheming, than truly glorifying his Name, and Nature. For omnipotent Love, inconceivable Goodness, is that Unity of God, which we can neither conceive, as it is in itself, nor divide into this, or that.—The Importance of the Subject I have been upon, has led me further than I intended. But for the full Illustration of it, I refer you to the Second Part of the Spirit of Love. And so committing you to a God, who has no Will towards you, but in, and through the Life, and Death, the Spirit and Power of the Holy Jesus, to deliver you from all your natural Evil, and make you his beloved Son, in whom, he can be well pleased to all Eternity, I bid you farewell.

July 18, 1757.

Letter V.

To a Clergyman in the North of England.My dear Brother, LIVE as you now do, in such Activity of Spirit, and Multiplied Ways of being good, and though you were to live half an hundred Years longer, you would stick in the same Mire, and end your Life in the same Complaints, as filled your last Letter to me.—You tell me, that after all the great Change you have made in your Life, you find nothing of that inward Good and Satisfaction, which you have so much expected, and more especially since you have been a Reader of the Books, recommended by me.

But, Sir, you quite mistake the Matter, you have not changed your Life; for that which is, and only can truly be called your Life, is in the same State it was when I first knew you.—Nothing is in your Life, whether it be good or bad, but That which WILLS and HUNGERS in you; and your own Life neither is, nor can be anything else but this.—Therefore nothing reaches your Life, or can make a real Change in it, from bad to good, from Falseness to Truth, but the right Will and the right Hunger.—Practise as many Rules as you will, take up this or that new Opinion, be daily reading better and better Books, follow this or that able man, the Bread of Life is not there.—Nothing will be fed in you, but the Vanity and self-conceited Righteousness of your own old Man. And thus it must be with you, till all that is within you is become one Will, and one Hunger after that which Angels eat in Heaven.

But now, if Will and Hunger are the whole of every natural Life, then you may know this great Truth with the utmost Certainty, namely, that Eating is the one Preservation of every Life, from the highest Angel in Heaven, to the lowest living Creature on Earth.—That which the Life eats not, that the Life has not.—Now everything that lives on Earth, is a Birth or Production of the astral, elementary Fire, Light, and Spirit, to which Water is always essential, and it continues in Life, tastes and enjoys the Good of its Life, no longer than these Powers and Virtues of the Stars and Elements are essentially and continually eaten by it.

It is just so with the immortal, heavenly Life of the Soul, it is a Birth of those same Powers, in their highest Glory, in the invisible World; a World, where the Triune Deity of Father, Son and Holy Ghost, brings forth a triune glorious Habitation for itself, of Fire, Light, and Spirit, opening an Infinity of Wonders, Births, and Beauties in a crystal transparent Sea, called the Kingdom of Heaven.

Out of these Powers, or out of this Kingdom of Heaven, are the Births of all holy, angelic Creatures ; nothing lives or moves in them, but that Fire, Light, and Spirit, which comes as a Birth from Father, Son, and Holy Ghost ; and nothing feeds, keeps up, and exalts this heavenly Fire, Light, and Spirit, but the hidden, inconceivable, supernatural Trinity, which is before, and deeper than all Nature, and can only manifest itself, and communicate its Goodness, by such an outward Birth of its own unapproachable Glory.—And here you may find a glorious Meaning of those Words of our Lord, saying, ‘ my Kingdom is not of this World,’ because it is a Kingdom of those heavenly Powers of the Triune God, which give Food and Nourishment, Purity and Perfection to the Fire, Light, and Spirit of those Divine Creatures, which are to be holy as he is holy, perfect as he is perfect, in his own heavenly Kingdom.

Here therefore, in this spiritual Eating of that same invisible Food, which gives Life, and Perfection of Life to all the Angels of God, and not in any human Contrivances, or Activity of your own, are you to place your all, as to the Change of your Life ; it all consists in the right Hunger, and the right Food, and in nothing else.

The Fall of Adam, and the Origin of all Sin and Misery, began in his Lust and Hunger after the Knowledge of Good and Evil in the Kingdom of this World. By this, he left, and lost the Food which Heaven gives.—He died to all the Influences and Enjoyments of his first Fire, Light, and Spirit, which was his vital Union with God, in the Kingdom of Heaven.—All the Evil that was hid in this earthly Creation, and its numerous Creatures, opened, and diffused itself with all the Power of a poisonous Food, through his whole Soul and Body.—But in all this, nothing more came upon him, or was done to him, than that which his own Hunger had eaten.—Here you have the fullest Demonstration, how every Change in the Life of Man is, and only can be made, namely, by hungering, and eating.—Adam had not fallen, had known no Death, or Extinction of that heavenly Fire, Light, and Spirit, which was his first Birth in God, but because he hungered after the State of the animal Life in this World, which has no other Fire, Light, and Spirit in it, but that which gives a transitory Life, of diverse, contrary Lusts and Appetites, to all the Beasts, Birds, and Insects.

This is the Doctrine of the Old Testament, concerning the Power of Hunger and Eating in the first Adam.—On the other hand, in conformity to this, and in full Proof of the Truth of it, that it must have been so; the second Adam, the Lord from Heaven, in the New Testament, has declared, that Hunger and Eating is that alone, which can help fallen Man to that first heavenly Fire, Light, and Spirit, with the spiritual Flesh and Blood that belonged to it; saying again and again, in a Variety of the strongest Expressions, this great Truth, That except a Man eat his Flesh, and drink his Blood, he hath no Life in him, that is, no Life of that celestial Body and Blood, which Adam lost, and which alone can live in the Fire, Light, and Spirit of Heaven.

Every Spirit that is creaturely, and every Desire of the Spirit, has always something bodily, as its own Birth, No spiritual Creature can begin to be, but by beginning to be bodily.—For creaturely Existence, and bodily Existence, is the same Thing; the Spirit is not, cannot be in the Form of a Creature, till it has its Body; and its Body is the Manifestation of Spirit, both to itself, and other Beings.

Live in the Love, the Patience, the Meekness, and Humility of Christ, and then the celestial, transparent, spiritual Body of Christ's Flesh and Blood, is continually forming itself, and growing in and from, and about your Soul, till it comes to the fulness of the Stature in Christ Jesus; and this is your true, substantial, vital eating the Flesh, and drinking the Blood of Christ, which will afterwards become your Body of Glory to all Eternity.—And though your astral Reason, and outward Senses, whilst you are in Adam's bodily Flesh, know nothing of this inward Body of Christ, yet there it is, as surely as you have the Love, the Patience, the Meekness, and Humility of Christ; for where the true Spirit of Christ is, there is his true spiritual Body.

On the other hand, live to Selfishness, to diabolical Pride, Wrath, Envy, and Covetousness, and then nothing can hinder these Tempers, from forming within you such a spiritual Body to your Soul, as that which Devils have, and dwell, and work in.

Be as unwilling as you will, through learned Wisdom, or Fear of Enthusiasm, to believe this, your Unbelief can last no longer, than till Adam's Flesh and Blood leave you, and then, as sure as your Soul lives, you will, and must have it living, either in the spiritual Body of fallen Angels, or in the spiritual Body of the redeeming Jesus.—Oh, Sir, trifle away no more Time in Many Matters, your first spiritual Body must come again.—Without it, you are the very Man that came to the Marriage Feast, not 'having on a Wedding Garment.'—He was bound Hands and Feet, and cast into utter Darkness, that is, he was the chained Prisoner of his own dark, hellish, spiritual Body, which had been all his Life growing up in him, from that which his Soul had daily eaten, and hungered after; and so was become those very Chains of Darkness, under which the fallen Angels are reserved unto the Judgment of the great Day.

Now there is no being saved, or preserved from this Body of Chains and Darkness, but by the one Hunger and Thirst after Righteousness that is in Christ Jesus, and by eating that, which begets heavenly spiritual Flesh and Blood to the Soul.—The two Trees of Paradise, with their two Fruits, viz., of Death to the Eater of the one, and Life to the Eater of the other, were infallible Signs, and full Proofs, that from the Beginning to the End of the World, Death and Life, Happiness and Misery, can proceed from nothing else, but that which the Lust and Hunger of the Soul chooseth for its Food.—Now spiritual Eating is by the Mouth of Desire, and Desire is nothing else but Will, and Hunger, therefore, that which you will, and hunger after, that you are continually eating, whether it be good, or bad, and that, be it which it will, forms the Strength of your Life, or which is the same thing, forms the Body of your Soul. If you have many Wills, and many Hungers, all that you eat is only the Food of so many spiritual Diseases, and burdens your Soul with a Complication of inward Distempers.—And under this Working of so many Wills, it is, that religious People have no more Good, or Health and Strength from the true Religion, than a Man who has a Complication of bodily Distempers, has from the most healthful Food. For no Will or Hunger, be it turned which way it will, or seem ever so small or trifling, is without its Effect.—For as we can have nothing but as our Will works, so we must have always some Effect from it. It cannot be insignificant, because nothing is significant, but that which it does.

Do not now say, that you have this one Will, and one Hunger, and yet find not the Food of Life by it.—For as sure as you are forced to complain, so sure is it, that you have it not.—‘Not my Will, but thine be done’; when this is the one Will of the Soul, all Complaints are over, then it is, that Patience drinks Water of Life out of every Cup; and to every Craving of the old Man, this one Hunger continually says, ‘I have Meat to eat, that ye know nothing of.’

‘Thy Kingdom come, thy Will be done,’ is the one Will, and one Hunger, that feeds the Soul with the Life-giving Bread of Heaven. This Will is always fulfilled, it cannot possibly be sent empty away, for God’s Kingdom must manifest itself with all its Riches in that Soul, which wills nothing else; it never was, nor can be lost, but by the Will, that seeks something else. Hence you may know with the utmost Certainty, that if you have no inward Peace, if religious Comfort is still wanting, it is because you have more Wills than one. For the Multiplicity of Wills, is the very Essence of fallen Nature, and all its Evil, Misery, and Separation from God lies in it; and as soon as you return to, and allow only this one Will, you are returned to God, and must find the Blessedness of his Kingdom within you.

Give yourself up to ever so many good Works, Read, Preach, Pray, visit the Sick, build Hospitals, clothe the Naked, &c., yet if anything goes along with these, or in the Doing of them you have anything else, that you will and hunger after, but that God's Kingdom may come, and his Will be done, they are not the Works of the New-born from above, and so cannot be his life-giving Food.—For the new Creature in Christ is that one Will, and one Hunger that was in Christ; and therefore where that is wanting, there is wanting that new Creature, which alone can have his Conversation, which alone can daily eat and drink at God's Table, receiving in all that it does, continual Life from 'every Word, that proceedeth out of the Mouth of God.'

From what Word, and from what Mouth of God? Why only from that hidden, supernatural Power of the Triune Deity, which speaks, and breathes continual Nourishment to that heavenly Fire, Light, and Spirit, in and from which, all that are about the Throne of God, have their inward Joy above all Thought, and their outward Glory, that can only be figured, or hinted to us, by Pearls, Sapphires, and Rainbow Beauties.

It is from this Power of the Triune God, working in the Fire, Light, Spirit, and spiritual Water, or Body of your new-born Creature, that all the Good, and Comfort, and Joy of Religion, which you want, is to be found, and found by nothing, but the Resurrection of that Divine, and heavenly Nature, which came forth in the first Man.

Do not take these to be too high flown Words, for they are no higher, than the Truth; for if that which is in you, is not as high as Heaven, you will never come there.—That heavenly Fire, Light, and Spirit, which makes the angelic Life to be all Divine, must as certainly be your inward Likeness to God; and that which God is, and works in Angels, that he must be, and work in you, or you can never be like to, or equal with them, as Christ has said.—To be outwardly Glorious, as they are, you must stay till this Corruptible shall have put on Incorruption, but to have the same inward Glory of the same celestial Fire, Light, and Spirit, burning, shining, and breathing in your inward Man, as Angels have, belongs to you, as born at first of the triune Breath of the living God, and born again of Christ, out of Adam's

Death, to have, and be, all that by a Wonder of Redemption, which was your Divine Birthright at first by a Wonder of Creation.

And now, my dear Friend, choose your Side: Would you be honourable in Church, or State, put on the whole Armour of this World, praise that which Man praises, clothe yourself with all the Graces and Perfections of the Belles Lettres, and be an Orator, and Critic, as fast as ever you can, and above all, be strong in the Power of flattering Words.

But if the other Side is your Choice; would you be found in Christ, and know the Power of his Resurrection; would you taste the Powers of the World to come, and find the continual Influences of the Triune God, feeding and keeping up his Divine Life in your triune Soul, you must give up all for that one Will, and one Hunger, which keeps the Angels of God in their full Feasts, of ever new, and never-ceasing Delights in the nameless, boundless Riches of Eternity.

Think it not hard, or too severe a Restraint, to have but one Will, and one Hunger; it is no harder a Restraint, than to be kept from all that can bring forth Pain, and Sorrow to your Soul; no greater Severity, than to be excluded from every Place, but the Kingdom of God.—For to have but this one Will, and one Hunger, is to have every Evil of Life, and all Enemies put under your Feet. It is to have done with every Thing, that can defile, betray, disappoint, or hurt that eternal Nature, which must have its Life within you.—On the other hand, every Thing that is not the Effect and Fruit of this one Will, and one Hunger, but added to your Life by a selfish Will, and worldly Hunger, must sooner or later, be torn from you with the utmost Smart, or become Food for that gnawing Worm, which dieth not.

Do you ask, how you are to come at this one Will, and one Hunger, I refer you to no Power of your own, and yet refer you to that which is within yourself.

Angels in Heaven, are not good and happy by any Thing they can do to themselves, but solely by that which is done to them.—Now that Holy Spirit, which does God's Will in Heaven, and is the Goodness and Happiness of all its Inhabitants, that same Spirit is every Man's Portion upon Earth, and the Gift of God within him.—It is but lost Labour, to strive by any Power of your Reason, or Self-activity, to work up this one Will and one Hunger within you, or to kindle the true Ardency of a Divine Desire, by anything that your natural Man can do.—This is as impossible, as for fallen Adam to have been his own Redeemer, or a dead Man to give Life to himself.—The one Will, and one Hunger which alone can eat the true Nourishment of the Divine Life, is nothing else but the Divine Nature within you, which died in Adam no other Death, but that of being suppressed and buried for a while, under a Load and Multiplicity of earthly Wills.

Hence it is, that nothing can put an End to this Multiplicity of Wills in fallen Man, which is his Death to God, nothing can be the Resurrection of the Divine Nature within him, which is his only Salvation, but the CROSS of Christ, not that wooden Cross, on which he was crucified, but that Cross on which he was crucified through the whole Course of his Life in the Flesh. It is our Fellowship with him on this Cross, through the whole Course of our Lives, that is our Union with Him, it alone gives Power to the Divine Nature within us, to arise out of its Death, and breathe again in us, in one Will, and one Hunger after nothing but God.

To be like-minded with Christ, is to live in every Contrariety to Self, the World, the Flesh, and the Devil, as he did; this is our belonging to him, our being one with him, having Life from him, and washing our Robes in the Blood of the Lamb.—For then, and then only are we washed, and cleansed by his Blood, when we drink his Blood, and we drink his Blood, when we willingly drink of the Cup that He drank of.

Again, not to be like-minded with Christ, is to be separated from him.—To have another Mind than he had, is to be in the State of those, who crucified him. Such as the Redeemer was, such are they that are redeemed.—as Adam was, such are they that are born of him.—Life from Adam, and Life from Christ, is the one single Thing, that makes the one our Destroyer, the other our Redeemer.—But to have done, cast not about in your Mind, how you are to have the one Will, and one Hunger, which is always eating at God's Table, and continually fed with the Bread of Life; the Thing is already done to your Hands. 'I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life,' saith Christ, the same as if he had said, the Way is nowhere, the Truth is nowhere, the Life is nowhere, but in me. What Room therefore for any learned Contrivances, or further Enquiry about the Matter? Follow Christ in the Denial of all the Wills of Self, and then all is put away that separates you from God: The heaven-born new Creature will come to Life in you, which alone knows, and enjoys the Things of God, and has his daily Food of Gladness in that manifold BLESSED, and BLESSED, which Christ preached on the Mount.

Tell me then no more of your new Skill in Hebrew Words, of your Paris Editions of all the ancient Fathers, your complete Collection of the Councils, Commentators, and Church Historians, &c., &c. Did Christ mean anything like this, when he said, 'I am the Way, the Truth and the Life'? Did the Apostle mean anything like this, when he said, 'No Man can call Jesus 'Lord, but by the Holy Ghost'?—Great, good, and Divine Teachers, you say, were many of the Fathers: I say nothing to it, but that much more great, good, and Divine is He, who is always teaching within you, ever standing and knocking at the Door of your Heart, with the Words of eternal Life.

You perhaps may ask, why I go on writing Books myself, if there is but one true, and Divine Teacher? I answer, though there is but one Bridegroom, that can furnish the Blessing of the Marriage Feast, yet his Servants are sent out to invite the Guests.—This is the unalterable Difference between Christ's Teaching, and the Teaching of those, who only publish the glad Tidings of him. They are not the Bridegroom, and therefore have not the Bridegroom's Voice. They are not the Light, but only sent to bear Witness of it. And as the Baptist said, 'He 'must increase, but I must decrease;' so every faithful Teacher saith of his Doctrine, it must decrease, and end, as soon as it has led to the true Teacher.

All that I have written for near thirty Years, has been only to show, that we have no Master but Christ, nor can have any living Divine Knowledge, but from his holy Nature born and revealed in us.—Not a Word in favour of Jacob Behmen, but because, above every Writer in the World, he has made all that is found in the Kingdom of Grace, and the Kingdom of Nature, to be one continual Demonstration, that Dying to self, to be born again of Christ, is the one only possible Salvation of the Sons of fallen Adam.

But I will have done, as soon as I have given you a little Piece of History, which your friend Academicus, has given of himself: 'When I had,' says he, 'taken my Degrees in the University, I consulted several great Divines to put me in a Method 'of studying Divinity.—It would take up near half a Day to tell 'you the Work, which my learned Friends cut out for me. One 'told me, that Hebrew Words are all; that they must be read 'without Points, and then the Old Testament is an opened Book. 'He recommended to me a cart Load of Lexicons, Critics, and 'Commentators upon the Hebrew Bible.—Another tells me, the 'Greek Bible is the best, that it corrects the Hebrew in many 'Places, and refers me to a large Number of Books learnedly 'writ in Defence of it.—Another tells me that Church-history is 'the main Matter, that I must begin with the first Fathers, and 'follow them through every Age, not forgetting to take the Lives of the Roman Emperors along with me, as striking great Light 'into the State of the Church in their Times. Then I must 'have Recourse to all the Councils held, and the Canons made

 'in every Age: Which would enable me to see with my own 'Eyes, the great Corruptions of the Council of Trent. Another,
 'who is not very fond of ancient Matters, but wholly bent upon
 'rational Christianity, tells me, I need go no higher than the 'Reformation; that Calvin and Cranmer were very great Men;
 'that Chillingworth and Locke ought always to lie upon my
 'Table; that I must get an entire Set of those learned Volumes
 'wrote against Popery in King James's Reign; and also be well
 'versed in all the Discourses, which Mr. Boyle's, and Lady
 'Moyer's Lectures have produced; and then, says he, you will 'be a Match for our greatest Enemies, which are popish Priests,
 'and modern Deists.—My Tutor is very liturgical; he desired
 'me, of all things, to get all the Collections, that I can, of the 'ancient Liturgies, and all the Authors that treat of such Matters, 'who, says he, are very learned and very numerous. He has 'been many Years making Observations upon them, and is now
 'clear, as to the Time, when certain little Particles got Entrance
 'into the Liturgies, and others were by Degrees dropped.—
 'He has a Friend abroad in search of ancient MSS. Liturgies;
 'for by the by, said he, at Parting, I have some Suspicion,
 'that our Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is essentially de'fective, for want of having a little Water mixed with the 'Wine.—Another learned Friend told me, that the Clementine
 'Constitution is the Book of Books; and that all that lies
 'loose, and scattered in the New Testament, stands there in 'its true Order and Form. And though he will not say, that
 'Dr. Clarke, and Mr. Whiston, are in the Right, yet it might be 'useful to me to read all the Arian and Socinian Writers, pro'vided I stood upon my Guard, and did it with Caution.—The 'last Person I consulted, advised me to get all the Histories of 'the Rise and Progress of Heresies, and of the Lives and Cha'racters of Heretics.—These Histories, he said, contract the 'Matter, bring Truth and Error close in view; and I should find
 'all that collected in a few Pages, which would have cost me
 'some Years to get together. He also desired me to be well 'versed in all the casuistical Writers, and chief Schoolmen, for
 'they debate Matters to the Bottom, dissect every Virtue, and
 'every Vice, and show how near they may come together with'out touching. And this Knowledge, he said, might be very 'useful, when I came to be a Parish Priest.

'Following the Advice of all these Counsellors, as well as I 'could, I lighted my Candle early in the Morning, and put it 'out late at Night. In this Labour I had been sweating for some ‘Years, till Rusticus, at my first Acquaintance with him, seeing ‘my Way of Life, said to me, had you lived about seventeen ‘Hundred Years ago, you had stood just in the same Place, as ‘I stand now.—I cannot read, and therefore, says he, all these ‘hundreds of thousands of Doctrine and Disputing Books, which ‘these seventeen Hundred Years have produced, stand not in my ‘Way; they are the same Thing to me, as if they had never ‘been. And had you lived at the Time mentioned, you had just ‘escaped them all, as I do now, because, though you are a very ‘good Reader, there were then none of them to be read.—Could ‘you therefore be content to be one of the primitive Christians, ‘who were as good as any that have been since, you may spare

‘all this Labour.—It is not easy for me, says Academicus, to tell ‘you how much Good I received from this simple Instruction of ‘honest Master Rusticus. — What Project was it, to be grasping ‘after the Knowledge of all the Opinions, Doctrines, Disputes, ‘Heresies, Schisms, &c., which seventeen Hundred Years
‘had brought forth, through all the Extent of the Christian ‘World! What Project this, in order to be a Divine, that is, in ‘order to bear true Witness to the Power of Christ, as a Deliverer
‘from the Evil of earthly Flesh and Blood, and Death and Hell,
‘and a Raiser of a new Birth and Life from above! For as this ‘is the Divine Work of Christ, so He only is a true and able ‘Divine that can bear a faithful Testimony to this Divine Work
‘of Christ.—How easy was it for me to have seen, that all this ‘Labyrinth of learned Enquiry, into such a dark, thorny Wilderness ‘of Notions, Facts, and Opinions, could signify no more to ‘me now, to my own Salvation, to my Interest in Christ, and ‘obtaining the Holy Spirit of God, than if I had lived before it ‘had any Beginning. But the blind Appetite of Learning, gave ‘me no Leisure to apprehend so plain a Truth.—Books of ‘Divinity indeed, I have not done with, but will esteem none to ‘be such, but those that make known to my Heart the, inward ‘Power and Redemption of Jesus Christ. Nor will I seek for any‘thing even from such Books, but that which I ask of God in ‘Prayer, viz., How better to know, more to abhor, and resist
‘the Evil that is in my own Nature, and how to obtain a Super- ‘natural Birth of the Divine Life brought forth within me. All ‘besides this is Pushpin.’*

God be with you.

March 5, 1753.

Letter VI.

In Answer to a QUESTION.

YOU tell me, Sir, that after a twenty Years' Zeal, and Labour in Matters of Religion, it has turned to so little Account, that you are forced, most earnestly to desire a speedy Answer to this Question, Where you shall go, or what you shall do, to be in the Truth?

Let me first premise thus much. Every Man in his fallen State, has all that in him, though in a State of Death, and Hiddenness, which was the living Glory, and Perfection of the first created Man. Just as the Root of the Lily, in the Winter's Cold, hath all that in it, though as in a State of Death, which was the Glory and Beauty of the Summer's Flower.—What is hidden in the Root of the Lily, lies no longer in its seeming Death, than till the Spring-Sun calls forth its Life.—Now, one Divine Dispensation after another, is to do that same to the fallen Soul, which the Spring, and daily advancing Sun does to the Lily Root; namely, to call it out of its State of Death, and make something of its first Glory come to life, and spring forth out of it. Hence it is that the Kingdom of God (which was that to which Adam died) is like to Treasure hid in a Field; and again, the Kingdom of God is within you. But this could not be true, unless all that Glory, which Adam lost, was still preserved, as a Seed, or shut-up Root of Life within him: And all this, through the Mercy, and free Grace of God, who foreseeing the Fall of Adam, willed, that a Seed of his first Glory, should be preserved in him; declared, and made known to him, by a Seed of the Woman, which through the Word made Flesh, should, in spite of Death and Hell, grow up to the Fulness of the Stature in Christ Jesus.

And as the Kingdom of Heaven, is every Man's Treasure, as surely within him, as his own Soul, so that which hides, and covers it from us, is that awakened, bestial Life, which is called Adam in us, and in which, the immortal Soul, that was born for Heaven, is wedded to the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life, and subject to the Workings of that Satanical Nature, which our Lord calls the Prince of this World.—And thus it is, that every Man comes into this World in a twofold State; Adam and Christ are both born in him.—And if this was not the State of Man, nothing within you, would, or could ask, as you have done, or have any Anxiety after the Truth. And your being either led from this true Knowledge of your State, or having never been sensible of it, is the Reason of your having made so many religious Inquiries in vain, both from yourself, and other People.—For nothing can tell you the Truth, or establish you in a just and solid Discernment of Right from Wrong, in Doctrines, Opinions, and Practices of Religion, but this home Knowledge of yourself, namely, that Christ and Adam, are not only both of them essentially within you, but the whole of you; that nothing is Life or Salvation, but that, which is the Life and Growth of Christ in you, and that all that is done from the Life, the Power and natural Capacity of the Adamic Nature, is heathenish, is mere Vanity and Death, however gloriously set forth by the natural Gifts of Wit and Learning.

Religion has no Good in it, but as it is the Revival, and Quickening of that Divine Nature, which your first Father had from God, and nothing can revive it, but that which first created it. God is no otherwise your God, but as He is the God of your Life, manifested in it; and He can be no otherwise the God of your Life, but as his Spirit is living within you.—Satan is no other Way knowable by you, or can have any other Fellowship with you, but as his evil Spirit works, and manifests itself along with the Workings of your own Spirit.—‘Resist the Devil, and he will flee from you’; but he is nowhere to be resisted, but as a working Spirit within you, therefore to resist the Devil, is to turn from the evil Thoughts, and Motions that arise within you. ‘Turn to God, and he will turn to you’: But God is an universal Spirit, which you cannot locally turn to, or from; therefore to turn to God, is to cleave to those good Thoughts and Motions which proceed from his Holy Spirit, dwelling and working in you.—This is the God of your Life, to whom you are to adhere, listen, and attend, and this is your worshipping him in Spirit and Truth. And That is the Devil that goeth about as a roaring Lion, who has no Voice, but that which he speaks within you. Therefore, my Friend, be at home, and keep close to that which passes within you, for be it what it will, whether it be a Good, in which you delight, or an Evil, at which you grieve, you could have neither the one, nor the other, but because a holy God of Light and Love is essentially dwelling in you. Seek therefore for no other Road, nor call any Thing the Way to God, but solely that, which is eternal, all-creating WORD, and SPIRIT worketh within you. For could any Thing else have been Man’s Way to God, the WORD had not been made Flesh.

The last Words in your Question, viz., To be in the Truth, are well expressed, for to be in the Truth, is the finished State of Man returning to God, thus declared by Christ himself, ‘Ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free’; free from the Blindness and Delusion of your own natural Reason, and free from Forms, Doctrines and Opinions, which others would impose upon you. To be in Truth, is to be, where the first holy Man was, when he came forth in the Image and Likeness of God.—When he lost Paradise, he lost the Truth; and all that he felt, knew, saw, loved, and liked of the earthly, bestial World, into which he was fallen, was but mere Separation from God, a Veil upon his Heart, and Scales upon his Eyes.—Nothing of his first Truth could be spoken of to him, even by God himself, but under the Veil of earthly Things, Types, and Shadows. The Law was given by Moses; but Moses had a Veil upon his Face, the Law was a Veil, Prophecy was a Veil, Christ crucified was a Veil, and all was a Veil, till Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ, in the POWER of his HOLY SPIRIT. Therefore to be in the Truth, as it is in Jesus, is to be come from under the Veil, to have passed through all those Dispensations, which would never have begun, but that they might end in a Christ spiritually revealed, and essentially formed in the Soul. So that now, in this last Dispensation of God, which is the first Truth itself restored, nothing is to be thought of, trusted to, or sought after, but God's immediate, continual Working in the Soul, by his Holy Spirit. This, Sir, is the Where you are to go, and the What you are to do, to be in the Truth. For the Truth as it is in Jesus, is nothing else but Christ come in the Spirit, and his coming in the Spirit, is nothing else but the first lost Life of God, quickened, and revealed again in the Soul.—Everything short of this, has only the Nature of outward Type and Figure, which in its best State, is only for a Time.—If therefore you look to any Thing but the Spirit, seek to any Power, but that of the Spirit, expect Christ to be your Saviour, any other Way, than as he is spiritually born in you, you go back from the Grace and Truth, which came by Jesus, and can at best be only a legal Jew, or a self-righteous Pharisee; there is no getting further than these States, but by being born of the Spirit, living by the Spirit, as his Child, his Instrument, and holy Temple, in which he dwells, and works all his good Pleasure.—Drop this full Adherence to, and Dependence upon the Spirit, act as in your own Sphere, be something of yourself, and through your own Wisdom, &c., and then, though all that you say, or do, is with the outward Words of the spiritual Gospel, and in the outward Practices of the spiritual Apostles, yet for all this, you are but there, where those were, who worshipped God with the Blood of Bulls and Goats; for (N.B.) Nothing but the Spirit of God, can worship God in Spirit and in Truth.

But you will perhaps say, that you are still but where you were, because you know not how to find the continual Guidance of the Holy Spirit.—If you know how to find your own Thoughts, you need not be at a Loss to find the Spirit of God. For you have not a Thought within you, but is either from the Good of the Spirit, or from the Evil of the Flesh. Now the Good and the Evil that are within you, and always more or less sensible by turns, do each of them teach you the same Work and Presence of the Spirit of God. For the Good, could not appear as Good, nor the Evil, be felt as Evil, but because the immediate Working of the Spirit of God creates, or manifests this Difference between them, and therefore be in what State you will, the Power of God's Spirit within you, equally manifests itself to you; and to find the immediate, continual, essential Working of the Spirit of God within you, you need only know what Good, and Evil are felt within you. For all the Good that is in any Thought or Desire, is so much of God within you, and whilst you adhere to, and follow a good Thought, you follow, or are led by the Spirit of God. And on the other hand, all that is selfish and wicked in Thought, or Affection, is so much of the Spirit of Satan within you, which would not be known, or felt, as evil, but because it is contrary to the immediate, continual Working of the Spirit of God within you. Turn therefore inwards, and all that is within you, will demonstrate to you, the Presence, and Power of God in your Soul, and make you find, and feel it, with the same Certainty, as you find and feel your own Thoughts. And what is best of all, by thus doing, you will never be without a living Sense of the immediate Guidance and Inspiration of the Holy Spirit, always equal to your Dependence upon it, always leading you from Strength to Strength in your inward Man, till all your Knowledge of Good and Evil, is become nothing else, but a mere Love of the one, and mere Aversion to the other.—For the one Work of the Spirit of God, is to distinguish the Good, and Evil, that is within you, not as in Notion, but by Affection; and when you are wholly given up to this new-creating Work of God, so as to stay your Mind upon it, abide with it, and expect all from it, This, my Friend, will be your Returning to the Rock, from whence you were hewn, your drinking at the Fountain of Living Water, your walking with God, your living by Faith, your putting on Christ, your continual hearing the WORD of God, your eating the Bread that came down from Heaven, your supping with Christ, and following the Lamb wherever he goeth.

For all these seeming different Things, will be found in every Man, according to his Measure, who is wholly given up to, and depending upon the blessed Work of God's Spirit in his Soul.

But your Mistake, and that of most Christians, lies in this;

you would be Good by some outward Means, you would have Methods. Opinions, Forms, and Ordinances of Religion, alter and raise your fallen Nature, and create in you a new Heart, and a new Spirit, that is to say, you would be Good in a Way that is altogether impossible, for Goodness cannot be brought into you from without, much less by any Thing that is Creaturely, or the Action of Man; this is as impossible, as for the Flesh to sanctify the Spirit, or for Things temporal, to give Life to Things that are eternal.

The Image and Likeness of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, are in every Man, antecedent to every outward Work, or Action that can proceed from him: It is God thus within him, that is the sole Cause that any Thing can be called Godly, that is done, observed, or practised by him. If it were not so, Man would only have his Being from God, but his Goodness from himself.

All Man's outward good Works, are only like his outward good Words; he is not Good, because he is frequent in the Use of them, they bring no Goodness into him, nor are of any Worth in themselves, but as a good, and godly Spirit speaks forth itself in the Sound of them. This is the Case of every outward, creaturely Thing, or Work of Man, be it of what Kind it will, either Hearing, Praying, Singing, or Preaching, &c., or practising any outward Rules, and Observances; they have only the Goodness of the outward Jew, nay, are as vain, as sounding Brass, and tinkling Cymbals, unless they be solely the Work, and Fruits of the Spirit of God: For the Divine Nature, is that alone, which can be the Power to any good Work, either in Man, or Angel.

When a Man, first finds himself stirred up with religious Zeal, what does he generally do? He turns all his Thoughts outwards, he runs after this, or that Man, he is at the Beck of every new Opinion, and thinks only of finding the Truth, by resting in this, or that Method, or Society of Christians. Could he find a Man, that did not want to have him of his Party, and Opinion, that turned him from himself, and the Teaching of Man, to a God, not as historically read of in Books, or preached of in this, or that Society, but to a God essentially living and working in every Soul, him he might call a Man of God; as leading him from himself to God, as saving him from many vain Wanderings, from fruitless Searchings into a Council of Trent, a Synod of Dort, an Augsberg Confession, an Assembly's Catechism, or a thirty-nine Articles. For had he an hundred Articles, if they were any Thing else but a hundred Calls to a Christ come in the Spirit, to a God within him, as the only possible Light, and Teacher of his Mind, it would be a hundred Times better for him, to be without them.—For all Man's Blindness and Misery lies in this, that he has lost the Knowledge of God, as essentially living within him, and by falling under the Power of an earthly, bestial Life, thinks only of God, as living in some other World, and so seeks only by Notions, to set up an Image of an absent God, instead of worshipping the God of Life, and Power, in whom he lives, moves, and has his being.—Whoever therefore teaches you to expect great Things from this, or that sort of Opinions, or calls you to anything as saving, and redeeming, but the Manifestation of God in your own Soul, through a Birth of the holy Nature of Christ within you, is totally ignorant of the whole Nature, both of the Fall, and the Redemption of Man. For the first is nothing else, or less, than a Death to the Divine Life, or Christlike Nature, which lived in the first Man; and the other, is nothing else, but Christ new-born, formed, and revealed again in Man, as he was at the first. These two great Truths are the most strongly asserted by Christ, saying, ‘If any Man will be my Disciple, let him deny himself, take up his Cross daily, and follow me.’ Let him ‘deny himself,’ is the fullest Declaration, and highest Proof, that he has lost his first Divine and heavenly Nature, that he is not that Self, which came first from God, or he could not be called to deny it.—Say, if you will, that he has not lost that first heavenly Life in God, and then you must say, that our Lord calls him to deny, crucify, and renounce that holy, and godlike Self, which was the first Gift of God to him.

To read whole Libraries on these Matters, is only to be bewildered in the Strife of Fictions, and Contradictions about them. But to read this one single Line of Christ, is to be led into the open, full Truth of the whole Nature, both of the Fall, and Redemption. And indeed, if we were but freed from the Babel of Opinions, which have so long confounded the first Truths of the Gospels, it would be plain from every Part of it, that nothing could be called the Fall of Man but his Loss of the Divine Life, or Nature, nor anything be called his Redemption, or the real Means of it, but solely That, which God is, and does in him. For what can be a Good, or work Good in Man, but God, or the Divine Nature in him? All the Divine Truths, that ever came from God, speak only to the Pearl of the Divine Nature, that is hidden in our earthly Field of Flesh and Blood, because nothing else wants them, or has any Capacity to receive them; that which is Divine, can only receive the Divine Things from God. And thence it is, that unless a ‘Man be born again’ from above, it is not possible for him to see, or enter into the ‘Kingdom of God,’ that is, the Divine Life must arise again, in the Power of a new Birth, or there is nothing in fallen Man, that can partake of the Kingdom of God. And the Reason is, because 'the Kingdom of God is Righteousness, and Peace, and 'Joy in the Holy Ghost,' and therefore not possible to be anywhere, but where it proceeds from the Holy Ghost. 'Thou shalt 'love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, with all thy Soul, 'with all thy Mind, and with all thy Strength.' Now what is this God, that you are thus to love? Is it some abstract Idea, that learned Men have helped you to form of him? No such thing. This would be but a poor Fiction of God, and a poor Fiction of Love.—God is all Good, the only Good, and there is nothing Good besides him, therefore to love God with all your Heart, &c., is to love all Goodness, and to love nothing else but Goodness, and then, and only then, do you love God with all your Heart, and Soul, and Strength.—But now, to what Purpose could this Precept of such a Love be given to Man, unless he essentially partook of the Divine Nature? For to be in Heart, and Soul, and Spirit, all Love of God, and yet have nothing of the Nature of God within you, is surely too absurd for anyone to believe. So sure therefore as this Precept came from Truth itself, so sure is it, that every Man (however loath to hear of any Thing but Pleasures, and Enjoyments in this vain Shadow of a Life) has yet a Divine Nature concealed within him, which, when suffered to hear the Calls of God, will know the Voice of its heavenly Father, and long to do his Will on Earth, as it is done in Heaven.

The Conclusion then, is this, if to love God with your whole Heart, and Soul, is to love all Goodness, and nothing else but Goodness; and if all that is done without this Love, whether in religious Duties, of common Life, is but mere Separation from God, then it must be the grossest Blindness, to believe you can have any Love of God, or Goodness in any Duties you perform, any further, or in any other Degree, than as the Eternal, Holy Spirit of God, lives and loves in you.

Again, to see the Divinity of Man's Original, you need only read these Words: 'Be ye perfect, as your Father which is in 'Heaven is perfect.' For what could Man have to do with the Perfection of God, as the rule of his Life, unless the Truth and Reality of the Divine Nature was in him? Could there be any Reasonableness in this Precept, or any Fitness to call us to be good, as God is good, unless there was that in us, which is in God? Or to call us to the Perfection of an heavenly Father, if we were not the real Children of his heavenly Nature? Might it not be as well, to bid the heavy Stone to fly, as its flying Father the Eagle doth?

But this Precept from the Lip of Truth, is another full Proof, that by the Fall, a Death, or Suppression is brought upon our first Divine Life, and also that it is yet in a State, capable of being revived again, in us. For if it was not in a State of Death, or suppressed in us, there could be no Need of calling us to live according to it; for every Being naturally acts according to the Life, that is manifested in it. Nor could we be called to be heavenly, but because the heavenly Nature has its Seed in our Soul, in a Readiness to come to Life in us.

Lastly, 'Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy Self,' is another full Proof, that God is in us of a Truth, and that the Holy Spirit hath as certainly, an essential Birth within us, as the Spirit of this World hath. For this Precept might as well be given to a Fox, as to a Man, if Man had not something quite Supernatural in him. For mere Nature, and natural Creature, is nothing else, but mere Self, and can work nothing but to, and for itself. And this, not through any Corruption, or Depravity of Nature, but because it is Nature's best State, and it can be nothing else, either in Man, or Beast.

'I say unto you, love your Enemies, do Good to them that hate you, pray for them that despitefully use and persecute you,' &c. Every Word here is Demonstration, that nothing but the new Birth from above, can be a Christian. There is no other Nature, or Spirit that can breathe forth this universal Love and Benevolence, but that same, which laying aside its own Glory, came down from Heaven, to forgive, to love, to save, and die for a whole World of Enemies and Sinners.

This is the Spirit of Christ, that must as essentially live and breathe in you, as it did in him, or all Exhortations, to do as he did, to walk as he walked, are but in vain. The natural Man is in full Separation from this Holiness of Life, and though he had more Wisdom of Words, more Depth of Literature, than was in Cicero, or Aristotle, yet would he have as much to die to, as the grossest Publican, or vainest Pharisee, before he could be in Christ, a new Creature. For the highest improved natural Abilities, can as well ascend into Heaven, or clothe Flesh and Blood with Immortality, as make a Man like-minded with Christ in any one Divine Virtue. And that for this one Reason, because God, and Divine Goodness, are inseparable.

No Precept of the Gospel, supposes Man to have any Power to effect it, or calls you to any natural Ability, or Wisdom of your own to comply with it. Christ and his Apostles called no Man, to overcome the Corruption and Blindness of fallen Nature, by learned Cultivation of the Mind. The Wisdom of the learned World, was the same pitiable Foolishness with them, as the grossest Ignorance. By them, they only stand thus distinguished, the one brings forth a Publican which is often converted to Christ, the other a Pharisee, that for the most part, condemns him to be crucified. They (Christ and his Apostles) taught nothing but Death, and Denial to all Self, and the Impossibility of having any one Divine Temper, but through Faith, and Hope of a new Nature, not 'born of Blood, nor of the Will of the Flesh, nor of 'the Will of Man, but of God.'

To speak of the Operation of the Holy Spirit, as only an Assistance, or an occasional Assistance, is as short of the Truth, as to say, that Christ shall only assist the Resurrection, of our Bodies. For not a Spark of any Divine Virtue can arise up in us, but what must wholly and solely be called forth, by that same Power, which alone can call our dead Bodies, out of the Dust and Darkness of the Grave.

If you turn to your own Strength, to have Christian Piety, and Goodness; or are so deceived, as to think, that Learning, or logical Abilities, critical Acuteness, Skill in Languages, Church-Systems, Rules and Orders, Articles and Opinions, are to do that for you, which the Spirit of Christ did, and only could do for the first Christians; your diligent Reading the History of the Gospel, will leave you as poor, and empty and dead to the Divine Life, as if you had been only a diligent Reader of the History of all the Religions in the World.—But if all that you trust to, long after, and depend upon, is that Holy Spirit, which alone made the Scripture-Saints able to call Jesus Lord; if this be your one Faith, and one Hope, the Divine Life, which died in Adam, will find itself alive again in Christ Jesus. And be assured, that nothing but this new Birth, can be the Gospel Christian, because nothing else can possibly love, like, do, and be that, which Christ preached in his Divine Sermon on the Mount. And be assured also, that when the Spirit of Christ, is the Spirit that ruleth in you, there will be no hard Sayings in the Gospel; but all that the heavenly Christ taught in the Flesh, will be as Meat and Drink to you, and you will have no Joy, but in walking, as he walked, in saying, loving, and doing, that which he said, loved, and did.—And indeed, how can it be otherwise? How can Notions, Doctrines, and Opinions about Christ, what he was, and did, make you in him a new Creature? Can anyone be made a Sampson, or a Solomon, by being well versed in the History of what they were, said or did?

Ask then, my Friend, no more, where you shall go, or what you shall do, to be in the Truth; for you can have the Truth, nowhere, but in Jesus, nor in him, any further, than as his whole Nature, and Spirit is born within you.

Farewell.

Letter VII.

To a Person of Quality.

Madam,

I HAD the Honour of your Ladyship's Letter, and no want of true Regard for your Ladyship, or the Subject, has been the Occasion of my delaying this Answer so long. I am in some Hopes, that the Person that wanted it, may, by this Time, have found something better than it, by being left to God and himself, and that I have done more for him by my Silence, than I should have done by my Writing.

To be always tampering with Physicians, upon every Occasion, is the Way to lose all natural Soundness of Health; and to be continually talking, and enquiring about the Nature of Distempers, and the Powers of Medicines, for the Head, the Heart, the Spirits, and Nerves, is the Way to lose all true Judgment, either of our own Sickness or Health.

It is much the same, with regard to our spiritual Health and Constitution, we do much Hurt to it, by running after spiritual Advice on every Occasion, and wanting the Help of some human Prescription, for every Fear, Scruple, or Notion, that starts up in our Minds, and to weaken the true Strength of our spiritual Constitution, which if left to itself, would do all that we want to have done.

If it be asked, What this Soundness of our spiritual Constitution is? It may be answered that it is a State or Habit of such humble, total Resignation of ourselves to God, as by Faith, and Hope expects all from Him alone. This is the Health, and Strength of our spiritual Constitution, and nothing is Health in the Soul, but this State.

And if we left all our incidental, accidental, sickly Notions, and Imaginations that so frequently attack our Minds, if we left them to be overcome, and done away by the Strength of our spiritual Constitution, (N.B.) We should never fail of Success.

How this pious and worthy Person came to think of leaving his Parish, or what Scruples occasioned his doubting, whether he should stay in it, I cannot guess, and therefore can say nothing to them. I should have thought, that such a Change as he found in himself, his Parish, and Neighbourhood, should have everything in it, that could render his Situation comfortable to him.

The greatest Danger that new Converts are liable to, especially if they are young, arises from their conceiving something great of their Conversion, and that great Things are to follow from it. Hence they are taken up too much with themselves, and the supposed Designs of God upon them. They enter into Reasonings, and Conjectures how they shall be, and do something extraordinary, and so lose that Simplicity of Heart, which should think of nothing but of dying to Self, that the Spirit of God might have time and place to create, and form all that is wanting in their inward Man.

There is nothing more plain and simple than the Way of Religion, if Self is but kept out of it; and all the Perplexities, and Scruples which pious Persons meet with, chiefly arise from some Idea they have formed, of a Progress they ought to make in order to be That, which Self would be. But Piety makes little Progress till it has no Schemes of its own, no Thoughts or Contrivances to be any Thing, but a naked Penitent, left wholly, and solely in Faith and Hope to the Divine Goodness. Every Contrivance for human Help, from this, or that, be it what it will, is at best but dropping some Degree, of that Fulness of Faith and Hope, and Dependence upon God, which only is, and only can be our Way of finding Him, to be the Strength and God of our Life.

Nothing but the Life of God, opened by his Holy Spirit within us, can be the Renewal of our Souls, and we shall want this Renewal no longer, than whilst we are seeking it in something, that is not God. The Faith that ascribes all to God, and expects all from him, cannot be disappointed.

Nothing could hinder the Centurion from having, that which he asked of Christ, because his Heart could thus speak, 'Lord 'I am not worthy, that thou shouldest come under my Roof, 'speak the Word only, and my Servant shall be healed.'

He that has this Sense of Religion, and this Faith in God, is in the Truth and Perfection of Religion: If we knew the Goodness of this State, we should be always content with the Simplicity of it, and let everything else come, and go, as it would; all is well and safe, so long as the Heart rests all upon God alone. Your Ladyship says, this worthy Person fears his Zeal, and yet dreads the Abatement of it. It would be better, not to indulge a Thought about his own Zeal, or to speak a Word of it to any Person. For if it is godly Zeal, it is no more his than it is mine, nor comes any more from him, than it does from me; and therefore when he thinks, or speaks of it as his, or as something he would be glad to keep in its right State, it is giving Way to Delusion, both with regard to himself, and the Nature of true Zeal: For as the 'Wind bloweth where it listeth,' so it is with Him, who is driven by true Zeal.

I do not wonder, that his Audience is so much affected, and increased, since he has preached up the Doctrine of Regeneration amongst them. All other Preaching passes away as a Tale that is told, and indeed is nothing better, till it enters into the Things within Man, brings him to a Sensibility of the State of his Heart, and its Want of God's Holy Spirit therein.

How far it may be right for him to comply with their Request of visiting, reading, and expounding the Scripture to them, I pretend not to say:—But only thus much, that it seems to be right to be in no Anxiety about it, or use any Reasoning, either to persuade himself to it, or from it, or to put himself under any stated Rules about it, but leave it to be done, as he finds himself inwardly stirred up to it, and able out of the Abundance of his Heart to perform it.

Expounding the Scriptures, has a fine Sound, but I should rather advise such Persons, to read only in Love, and Simplicity of Heart, such Scriptures as need no Expounder, but their own Heart turned to God. Persons who are come to this inward Conviction, that they must live, and die, under the Power of Satan, and of fallen Nature, unless by a Fulness of Faith in Christ, they be born again from above, have nothing more to enquire about, where, or how Christ is to be found.

They have no other Use to make of the Scripture, but that of being refreshed, and delighted with such Passages, as turn, and stir up the Heart, to a Fulness of Faith, Love, and Resignation to the blessed Guidance, and Operation of the Holy Spirit of God.

January 10, 1754.

Letter VIII.

To the Same.

Madam,

MR. WESLEY'S Letter did not at all disappoint me. I had no Expectation of seeing a better, either with regard to the Substance, or to the Style, and Manner of it. If I knew of any kind of Answer, that would do him any real Good, I should advise it. But to Answer it for the Good of anyone else, seems to be quite needless. It does not admit of a serious Answer, because there is nothing substantial, or properly argumentative in it. And to answer it in the way of Ridicule, is what I cannot come into, being full as averse to make a Mock of him in a religious Garb, as to the doing the greatest bodily Injury to his Person. How far he has answered, or does answer any good Ends of Providence, or is an Instrument in the Hands of God, is a Matter I meddle not with; only wishing, that every Appearance of Good, every stirring of Zeal, under whatever Form it appears, whether in Knowledge, or Ignorance, in Wisdom, or Weakness, may be directed, and blessed by God, to the best Ends it is capable of.

As to myself, I seem to myself to have no other Part to Act, nor any Call to any Thing else, in this Hurry, and Struggle of Zeal against Zeal, in such a Variety of Forms, but only, and fully to assert the true Ground, and largely open all the Reasons, of that one inward Regeneration, which is equally the one Thing needful to every Sect, and the one Thing alone that can make every Sect, or Method, or outward Form, not hurtful to those that adhere to it.

For every outward Form, however specious or promising, will only help us to be carnally minded, till it is in some degree known, to have no other, or better Nature, than that of the Shell, which helps us to the Kernel.

The Doctrines I have published, are in their best State with regard to the Reader, as they stand in my Books, and will be less useful to him, when they are drawn into Controversy. For this Reason, I can lend no Help to that.

This may perhaps seem to your Ladyship, as if I had too great an Opinion of what I had done.—And I believe, such a free Way of speaking sometimes in Conversation of my own Books, may have been suspected of smelling too much of Self-esteem.—But I can with Truth assure you, Madam, that when I speak of the Fulness and Clearness of my own Writings, I feel no other Sentiments of Self-sufficiency, than when I speak of the Goodness of my own Eyes. Nor do I know how to consider the one, more than the other, to be any Merit of my own; and therefore when any Man, great or little, contemns, reproaches, or asperses me, or my Books, as void of Sense, Truth, and Light; I feel no more inward Uneasiness, or think myself any more hurt, than if he had only told the World, that my Eyes were miserably bad, and I could scarce see to read, even with the best Spectacles. And so have no Desire controversially to defend the one, more than the other, but contentedly leave them both, to be their own Proof of what they are.

I was once a kind of Oracle with Mr. Wesley. I never suspected any Thing bad of him, or ever discovered any Kind, or Degree of Falseness, or Hypocrisy in him.

But during all the Time of his Intimacy with me, I judged him to be much under the Power of his own Spirit, which seemed to have the Predominancy in every good Thing, or Way, that his Zeal carried him to.

It was owing to his Unwillingness, or Inability to give up his own Spirit, that he was forced into that false, and rash Censure which he published in Print against the Mystics:—As Enemies to good Works, and even tending to Atheism. A Censure so false, and regardless of Right and Wrong, as hardly any Thing can exceed it; which is to be found in a Preface of his to a Book of Hymns.—But no more of this.

February 16, 1756.

Letter IX.

To the Same.

Madam,

THE Passage in the Letter from a pious and very excellent Clergyman, as you style him, calls for no Regard, either from your Ladyship, or me. More insignificant Words cannot well be put together:—‘I think,’ says he, ‘Mr. Law has gone half a Bow Shot too far.’ If I have shot so far beyond, or beside the Truth, he should have shown where, and why, and how. Without this, his Words are but a Random Shot at nothing. His Reason for this Censure, is still worse, viz., ‘because I have touched the Heart-String of all systematical ‘Divinity.’ As grievous a Charge, as if he had said, that I had shook the very Foundation of every Babel in every Country. For not a System of Divinity, since Systems were in being, whether Popish, or Protestant, deserves a better Name.

His next Reason is, ‘because it should not be touched without Skill from above.’

If this Gentleman ever preaches from the Pulpit, concerning the Ways of God, and the Doctrines of Redemption, without Skill from above, all he says, will be a whole Bow-Shot beside the Matter.

If, therefore, in touching this Point, I have touched that, which ought not to be touched without Skill from above, I have taken no bolder a Step, than he does, every Time he mounts the Pulpit, to give forth the Doctrines of Christ.

His third Reason is this, ‘I choose in my present Ignorance,

‘as touching the Necessity and Virtue of an outward Atonement, to bow down before the awful Subject.’

But in Truth, he should have said, I choose to bow down before the awful Heart String of all Systematical Divinity, which resolves all the Atonement into an infinite Wrath, and Vengeance, raised in the Holy Deity itself, and which would not be appeased, or satisfied by any Thing else, but the Sacrifice of an infinite Son of God. It is by reason of his Attachment to this Heart String, or rather his having so constantly preached according to it, that he cannot bear a Demonstration of the most glorious Truth, that either Heaven or Earth can proclaim, viz., that God from Eternity to Eternity, is mere, unchangeable, and ever-overflowing Love; and that nothing but this Infinity of never-ceasing, never-changing Love, gave the Birth, the Life, the Sufferings, the Death, Resurrection, and Ascension of Christ, for the Salvation of all Mankind; because in the whole possible Nature of Things, nothing else but this whole Process of a God made Man, could have any Ability, to extinguish the Hell, and Wrath of fallen Nature, and give Man a second Birth of such a Life from above, as could for ever and ever, have Union and Communion with the unbeginning, never-ending, never-changing Trinity of Love.

Letter X.

To Mr. J. T.

My dear worthy Friend,

WHOM I much love and esteem, your Letter, though full of Complaints about the State of your Heart, was very much according to my Mind, and gives me great hopes, that God will carry on the good Work he has begun in you, and lead you by his Holy Spirit, through all those Difficulties, under which you at present Labour.

The Desire that you have, to be better than you find yourself at present, is God’s Call begun to be heard within you, and will make itself to be more heard within you, if you give but way to it, and reverence it as such; humbly believing that he that calls, will, and only can, help you to pay right and full Obedience to it.

As to the Advertisement in the public Papers, it deserved no Regard from you, or anyone else. It must have come, either from a very ignorant and weak Friend, or from a very insignificant Enemy to the Writings of J. B. But be it as it will, it was not an Object of your Attention, nor could be of any Use to you.

But to come to your own State, You seem to yourself to be all Infatuation and Stupidity, because your Head, and your Heart are so contrary, the one delighting in heavenly Notions, the other governed by earthly Passions, and Pursuits. It is happy for you, that you know and acknowledge this: For only through this Truth, through the full and deep Perception of it, can you have any Entrance, or so much as the Beginning of an Entrance into the Liberty of the Children of God. God is in this Respect dealing with you, as he does with those, whose Darkness is to be changed into Light. Which can never be done, till you fully know (1) the real Badness of your own Heart, and (2) your utter Inability to deliver yourself from it, by any Sense, Power, or Activity of your own Mind.

And were you in a better State, as to your own thinking, the Matter would be worse with you. For the Badness in your Heart, though you had no Sensibility of it, would still be there, and would only be concealed, to your much greater Hurt. For there it certainly is, whether it be seen and found, or not, and sooner or later, must show itself in its full Deformity, or the old Man will never die the Death which is due to him, and must be undergone, before the New Man in Christ can be formed in us.

All that you complain of in your Heart is common to Man, as Man. There is no Heart that is without it. And this is the one Ground, why every Man, as such, however different in Temper, Complexion, or natural Endowments from others, has one and the same full Reason, and absolute Necessity, of being born again from above.

Flesh and Blood, and the Spirit of this World, govern every Spring in the Heart of the natural Man. And therefore you can never enough adore that Ray of Divine Light, which breaking in upon your Darkness, has discovered this to be the State of your Heart, and raised only those faint Wishes that you feel to be delivered from it.

For faint as they are, they have their Degree of Goodness in them, and as certainly proceed solely from the Goodness of God working in your Soul, as the first Dawning of the Morning, is solely from, and wrought by the same Sun, which helps us to the Noon-day Light. Firmly, therefore, believe this, as a certain Truth, that the present Sensibility of your Incapacity for Goodness, is to be cherished as a heavenly Seed of Life, as the blessed Work of God in your Soul.

Could you like any Thing in your own Heart, or so much as fancy any Good to be in it, or believe that you had any Power of your own to embrace and follow Truth, this comfortable Opinion, so far as it goes, would be your turning away from God and all Goodness, and building iron Walls of Separation betwixt God and your Soul.

For Conversion to God, only then begins to be in Truth, and Reality, when we see nothing that can give us the least Degree of Faith, of Hope, of Trust, or Comfort in any Thing, that we are of ourselves.

To see Vanity of Vanities in all outward Things, to loath and abhor certain Sins, is indeed something, but yet as nothing, in comparison of seeing and believing the Vanity of Vanities within us, and ourselves as utterly unable to take one single Step in true Goodness, as to add one Cubit to our Stature.

Under this Conviction, the Gate of Life is opened to us. And therefore it is, that all the preparatory Parts of Religion, all the various Proceedings of God either over our inward, or outward State, setting up, and pulling down, giving, and taking away, Light, and Darkness, Comfort, and Distress, as independently of us, as he makes the Rain to descend, and the Winds to blow, are all of them for this only End, to bring us to this Conviction, that all that can be called Life, Good, and Happiness, is to come solely from God, and not the smallest Spark of it from ourselves. When Man was first created, all the Good that he had in him was from God alone. N.B. This must be the State of Man for ever.—From the Beginning of Time through all Eternity, the Creature can have no Goodness, but that which God creates in it.

Our first created Goodness is lost, because our first Father departed from a full, absolute Dependence upon God. For a full, continual, unwavering Dependence upon God, is that alone which keeps God in the Creature, and the Creature in God.

Our lost Goodness can never come again, or be found in us, till by a Power from Christ living in us, we are brought out of ourselves, and all selfish Truths, into that full and blessed Dependence upon God, in which our first Father should have lived.

What Room now, my dear Friend, for Complaint at the Sight, Sense, and Feeling of your Inability to make yourself better than you are? Did you want this Sense, every Part of your Religion would only have the Nature and Vanity of Idolatry. For you cannot come unto God, you cannot believe in him, you cannot worship him in Spirit and Truth, till he is regarded as the only Giver, and you yourself as nothing else but the Receiver of every heavenly Good, that can possibly come to life in you.

Can it trouble you, that it was God that made you, and not you yourself? Yet this would be as unreasonable, as to be troubled that you cannot make heavenly Affection, or Divine Powers to spring up, and abide in your Soul.

God must for ever be God alone; Heaven, and the heavenly Nature are his, and must for ever and ever be received only from him, and for ever and ever be only preserved, by an entire Dependence upon, and Trust in him. Now as all the Religion of fallen Man, fallen from God into himself, and the Spirit of this World, has no other End, but to bring us back to an entire Dependence upon God, so we may justly say, Blessed is that Light, happy is that Conviction, which brings us into a full and settled Despair, of ever having the least Good from ourselves.

Then we are truly brought, and laid at the Gate of Mercy: At which Gate, no Soul ever did, or can lay in vain.

A broken and contrite Heart God will not despise. That is, God will not, God cannot pass by, overlook, or disregard it. But the Heart is then only broken and contrite, when all its strong Holds are broken down, all false Coverings taken off, and it sees, with inwardly opened Eyes, every Thing to be bad, false, and rotten, that does, or can proceed from it as its own.

But you will perhaps say, that your Conviction is only an uneasy Sensibility of your own State, and has not the Goodness of a broken and contrite Heart in it.

Let it be so, yet it is rightly in order to it, and it can only begin, as it begins at present in you. Your Conviction is certainly not full and perfect; for if it was, you would not complain, or grieve at Inability to help or mend yourself, but would patiently expect, and only look for Help from God alone.

But whatever is wanting in your Conviction, be it what it will, it cannot be added by yourself, nor come any other Way, than as the highest Degree of the Divine Life can come into it.

Know therefore your Want of this, as of all other Goodness. But know also at the same Time, that it cannot be had through your own willing and running, but through God that showeth Mercy; that is to say, through God who giveth us Jesus Christ. For Jesus Christ is the one only Mercy of God to all the fallen World.

Now if all the Mercy of God is only to be found in Christ Jesus, if he alone can save us from our Sins; if he alone has Power to heal all our Infirmities, and restore original Righteousness, what Room for any other Pains, Labour, or Enquiry, but where, and how Christ is to be found.

It matters not what our Evils are, Deadness, Blindness, Infatuation, Hardness of Heart, Covetousness, Wrath, Pride, and Ambition, &c., our Remedy is always one and the same, always at hand, always certain and infallible. Seven Devils are as easily cast out by Christ as one. He came into the World, not to save from this, or that Disorder, but to destroy all the Power and Works of the Devil in Man.

If you ask where, and how Christ is to be found? I answer, in your Heart, and by your Heart, and nowhere else, nor by any Thing else.

But you will perhaps say, it is your very Heart that keeps you a Stranger to Christ, and him to you, because your Heart is all bad, as unholy as a Den of Thieves.

I answer, that the finding this to be the State of your Heart, is the real finding of Christ in it.

For nothing else but Christ can reveal, and make manifest the Sin and Evil in you. And he that Discovers, is the same Christ that takes away Sin. So that, as soon as complaining Guilt, sets itself before you, and will be seen, you may be assured, that Christ is in you of a Truth.

For Christ must first come as a Discoverer and Reprover of Sin. It is the infallible Proof of his holy Presence within you.

Hear him, reverence him, submit to him as a Discoverer and Reprover of Sin. Own his Power and Presence in the Feeling of your Guilt, and then he that wounded, will heal, he that found out the Sin, will take it away, and he who showed you your Den of Thieves, will turn it into a holy Temple of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

And now, Sir, you may see, that your Doubt and Enquiry of me, whether your Will was really free, or not, was groundless.

You have no Freedom, or Power of Will, to assume any holy Temper, or take hold of such Degrees of Goodness, as you have a Mind to have. For nothing is, or ever can be goodness in you, but the one Life, Light, and Spirit of Christ revealed, formed, and begotten in your Soul. Christ in us, is our only Goodness, as Christ in us, is our Hope of Glory. But Christ in us is the pure free Gift of God to us.

But you have a true and full Freedom of Will and Choice, either to leave, and give up your helpless Self to the Operation of God on your Soul, or to rely upon your own rational Industry, and natural Strength of Mind. This is the Truth of the Freedom of your Will, in your first setting out, which is a Freedom that no Man wants, or can want so long as he is in the Body. And every unregenerate Man has this Freedom.

If therefore you have not that which you want to have of God, or are not that which you ought to be in Christ Jesus, it is not because you have no free Power of leaving yourself in the Hands, and under the Operation of God, but because the same

Freedom of your Will, seeks for Help where it cannot be had, namely, in some Strength and Activity of your own Faculties.

Of this Freedom of Will it is said, 'According to thy Faith, 'so be it done unto thee'; that is to say, according as thou leavest and trustest thyself to God, so will his Operation be in thee.

This is the real, great magic Power of the first turning of the Will; of which it is truly said, that it always hath that which it willeth, and can have nothing else.

When this Freedom of the Will wholly leaves itself to God, saying, not mine, but thy Will be done, then it hath that, which it willeth. The Will of God is done in it. It is in God. It hath Divine Power. It worketh with God, and by God, and comes at length to be that Faith, which can remove Mountains; and nothing is too hard for it.

And thus it is, that every unregenerate Son of Adam hath Life and Death in his own Choice, not by any natural Power of taking which he will, but by a full Freedom, either of leaving, and trusting himself to the redeeming Operation of God, which is eternal Life, or of acting according to his own Will and Power in Flesh and Blood, which is eternal Death.

And now, my dear Friend, let me tell you, that as here lies all the true and real Freedom, which cannot be taken from you, so in the constant Exercise of this Freedom, that is, in a continual leaving yourself to, and depending upon the Operation of God in your Soul, lies all your Road to Heaven. No Divine Virtue can be had any other Way.

All the Excellency and Power of Faith, Hope, Love, Patience, and Resignation, &c., which are the true and only Graces of the spiritual Life, have no other Root or Ground, but this free, full leaving of yourself to God, and are only so many different expressions of your willing nothing, seeking nothing, trusting to nothing, but the life-giving Power of his holy Presence in your Soul.

To sum up all in a Word. Wait patiently, trust humbly, depend only upon, seek solely to a God of Light and Love, of Mercy and Goodness, of Glory and Majesty, ever dwelling in the inmost Depth and Spirit of your Soul. There you have all the secret, hidden, invisible Upholder of all the Creation, whose blessed Operation will always be found by a humble, faithful, loving, calm, patient Introversion of your Heart to him, who has his hidden Heaven within you, and which will open itself to you, as soon as your Heart is left wholly to his eternal ever-speaking WORD, and ever-sanctifying Spirit within you.

Beware of all Eagerness and Activity of your own natural Spirit and Temper. Run not in any hasty Ways of your own.

176 A Collection of Letters.

Be patient under the Sense of your own Vanity and Weakness ; and patiently wait for God to do his own Work, and in his own Way. For you can go no faster, than a full Dependence upon God can carry you.

You will perhaps say, Am I then to be idle, and do nothing towards the Salvation of my Soul? No, you must by no means be idle, but earnestly diligent, according to your Measure, in all good Works, which the Law and the Gospel direct you to, both with Regard to your Self and other People.

Outward good Works to other People, may be justly considered as God's Errand on which you are sent, and therefore to be done faithfully, according to the Will, and in obedience to him that sent you.

But nothing that you do, or practise as a Good to yourself, and other People, is in its proper State, grows from its right Root, or reaches its true End, till you look for no willing, nor depend upon any doing that which is good, but by Christ, the Wisdom and Power of God, living in you. I caution you only against all Eagerness and Activity of your own Spirit, so far as it leads you to seek, and trust to something that is not God, and Christ within you.

I recommend to you Stillness, Calmness, Patience, &c., not to make you lifeless, and indifferent about good Works, or indeed with any Regard to them, but solely with regard to your Faith, that it may have its proper Soil to grow in, and because all Eagerness, Restlessness, Haste, and Impatience, either with regard to God, or ourselves, are not only great Hindrances, but real Defects of our Faith and Dependence upon God.

Lastly, be courageous then, and full of Hope, not by looking at any Strength of your own, or fancying that you now know how to be wiser in yourself, than you have hitherto been ; no, this will only help you to find more and more defects of Weakness in yourself ; but be courageous in Faith, and Hope, and Dependence upon God. And be assured, that the one infallible Way to all that is good, is never to be weary in waiting, trusting, and depending upon God manifested in Christ Jesus.

I am your hearty Friend and Well-Wisher.

March 20, 1756.

Letter XI.

To a Person burdened with inward and outward Troubles.

Worthy Sir,

MY Heart embraces you, with all the Tenderness and Affection of Christian Love ; and I earnestly beg of God, to make me a Messenger of his Peace to your Soul.

You seem to apprehend, I may be much surprised at the Account you have given of yourself; but I am neither surprised, nor offended at it; I neither condemn, nor lament your Estate, but shall endeavour to show you, how soon it may be made a Blessing and Happiness to you. In order to which, I shall not enter into a Consideration of the different Kinds of Trouble you have set forth at large. I think it better to lay before you the one true Ground and Root, from whence all the Evil and Disorders of Human Life have sprung. This will make it easy for you to see, what that is, which must, and only can, be the full Remedy and Relief for all of them, how different soever, either in Kind, or Degree.

The Scripture has assured us, that God made Man in his own Image and Likeness; a sufficient Proof, that man, in his first State, as he came forth from God, must have been absolutely free from all Vanity, Want, or Distress of any Kind, from any Thing either within, or without him.—It would be quite absurd and blasphemous, to suppose, that a Creature beginning to exist in the Image and Likeness of God, should have Vanity of Life, or Vexation of Spirit: A God-like Perfection of Nature, and a painful, distressed Nature, stand in the utmost Contrariety to one another.

Again, the Scripture has assured us, that Man that is born of a Woman, hath but a short Time to live, and is full of Misery: Therefore Man now is not that Creature that he was by his Creation. The first Divine and God-like Nature of Adam, which was to have been immortally Holy in Union with God, is lost; and instead of it, a poor Mortal of earthly Flesh and Blood, born like a wild Ass's Colt, of a short Life, and full of Misery, is through a vain Pilgrimage, to end in Dust and Ashes. Therefore, let every Evil, whether inward, or outward, only teach you this Truth, that Man has infallibly lost his first Divine Life in God; and that no possible Comfort, or Deliverance is to be expected, but only in this one Thing, that though Man had lost his God, yet God is become Man, that Man may be again alive in God, as at the first. For all the Misery and Distress of human Nature, whether of Body or Mind, is wholly owing to this one Cause, that God is not in Man, nor Man in God, as the State of his Nature requires: It is, because Man has lost that first Life of God in his Soul, in and for which he was created. He lost this Light, and Spirit, and Life of God, by turning his Will, Imagination, and Desire, into a tasting and Sensibility of the Good and Evil of this earthly bestial World.

Now here are two Things raised up in Man, instead of the Life of God: First, Self, or Selfishness, brought forth by his choosing to have a Wisdom of his own, contrary to the Will and Instruction of his Creator. Secondly, an earthly, bestial, mortal Life and Body, brought forth by his eating that Food, which was Poison to his paradisaical Nature. Both these must therefore be removed; that is, a Man must first totally die to Self, and all earthly Desires, Views, and Intentions, before he can be again in God, as his Nature and first Creation requires.

But now if this be a certain and immutable Truth, that Man, so long as he is a selfish, earthly-minded Creature, must be deprived of his true Life, the Life of God, the Spirit of Heaven in his Soul; then how is the Face of Things changed! For then, what Life is so much to be dreaded, as a Life of worldly Ease and Prosperity? What a Misery, nay what a Curse, is there in every Thing that gratifies and nourishes our Self-love, Self-esteem, and Self-seeking? On the other Hand, what Happiness is there in all inward and outward Troubles and Vexations, when they force us to feel and know the Hell that is hidden within us, and the Vanity of every Thing without us, when they turn all our Self-love into Self-abhorrence, and force us to call upon God to save us from Ourselves, to give us a new Life, new Light, and new Spirit in Christ Jesus.

‘O Happy Famine,’ might the poor Prodigal have well said, ‘which, by reducing me to the Necessity of asking to eat Husks with Swine, brought me to myself, and caused my Return to my first Happiness in my Father’s House.’

Now, I will suppose your distressed State to be as you represent it; inwardly, Darkness, Heaviness, and Confusion of Thoughts and Passions; outwardly, ill Usage from Friends, Relations, and all the World; unable to strike up the least Spark of Light or Comfort, by any Thought or Reasoning of your own.

O happy Famine, which leaves you not so much as the Husk of one human Comfort to feed upon! For this is the Time and Place for all that Good and Life and Salvation to happen to you, which happened to the prodigal Son. Your Way is as short, and your Success as certain as his was: You have no more to do than he had; you need not call out for Books, or Methods of Devotion; for, in your present State, much reading, and borrowed Prayers, are not your best Method: All that you are to offer to God, all that is to help you to find him to be your Saviour and Redeemer, is best taught and expressed by the distressed State of your Heart.

Only let your present and past Distress make you feel and acknowledge this twofold great Truth: First, That in and of yourself, you are nothing but Darkness, Vanity, and Misery; Secondly, that of yourself, you can no more help yourself to Light and Comfort, than you can create an Angel. People at all Times can seem to assent to these two Truths; but then it is an Assent that has no Depth or Reality, and so is of little or no Use: But your Condition has opened your Heart for a deep and full Conviction of these Truths. Now give Way, I beseech you, to this Conviction, and hold these two Truths, in the same Degree of Certainty as you know two and two to be four, and then you are with the Prodigal come to yourself, and above HALF YOUR WORK IS DONE.

Being now in full Possession of these two Truths, feeling them in the same Degree of Certainty, as you feel your own Existence, you are, under this Sensibility, to give up yourself absolutely and entirely to God in Christ Jesus, as into the Hands of infinite Love; firmly believing this great and infallible Truth, That God has no Will towards you, but that of infinite Love, and infinite Desire to make you a Partaker of his Divine Nature; and that it is as absolutely impossible for the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, to refuse all that Good and Life and Salvation which you want, as it is for you to take it by your own Power.

O drink deep of this Cup! for the precious Water of eternal Life is in it. Turn unto God with this Faith; cast yourself into this Abyss of Love; and then you will be in that State the Prodigal was in, when he said, 'I will arise and go to my Father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against Heaven, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy Son;' and all that will be fulfilled in you, which is related of him.

Make this, therefore, the twofold Exercise of your Heart: Now, bowing yourself down before God, in the deepest Sense and Acknowledgment of your own Nothingness and Vileness; then, looking up unto God in Faith and love, consider him as always extending the Arms of his Mercy towards you, and full of an infinite Desire to awell in you, as he dwells in Angels in Heaven. Content yourself with this inward and simple Exercise of your Heart, for a while; and seek, or like nothing in any Book, but that which nourishes and strengthens this State of your Heart.

‘Come unto me,’ says the holy Jesus, ‘all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will refresh you.’ Here is more for you to live upon, more Light for your Mind, more of Unction for your Heart, than in Volumes of human Instruction. Pick up the Words of the holy Jesus, and beg of him to be the Light and Life of your Soul: Love the Sound of his Name; for Jesus is the Love, the Sweetness, the compassionate Goodness, of the Deity itself; which became Man, that so Men might have Power to become the Sons of God. Love and pity and wish well to every Soul in the World; dwell in Love, and then you dwell in God; hate nothing but the Evil that stirs in your own Heart.

Teach your Heart this Prayer, till your Heart continually saith, though not with outward Words: ‘O holy Jesus: meek Lamb of God! Bread that came down from Heaven! Light and Life of all holy Souls! help me to a true and living Faith in thee. O do thou open thyself within me, with all thy holy Nature, Spirit, Tempers, and Inclinations, that I may be born again of thee, in thee a new Creature, quickened and revived, led and governed by thy Holy Spirit.’

Prayer so practised, becomes the Life of the Soul, and the true Food of Eternity. Keep in this State of Application to God; and then you will infallibly find it to be the true Way of rising out of the Vanity of Time, into the Riches of Eternity.

Do not expect, or look, for the same Degrees of sensible Fervour. — The Matter lies not there. — Nature will have its Share; but the Ups and Downs of that are to be overlooked. Whilst your Will-Spirit is good, and set right, the Changes of creaturely Fervour lessen not your Union with God. It is the Abyss of the Heart, an unfathomable Depth of Eternity within us, as much above sensible Fervour, as Heaven is above Earth; it is this that works our Way to God, and unites with Heaven. This Abyss of the Heart, is the Divine Nature and Power within us, which never calls upon God in vain; but whether helped or deserted by bodily Fervour, penetrates through all outward Nature, as easily and effectually as our Thoughts can leave our Bodies, and reach into the Regions of Eternity.

The Poverty of our fallen Nature, the depraved Workings of Flesh and Blood, the corrupt Tempers of our polluted Birth in this World, do us no hurt, so long as the Spirit of Prayer works contrary to them, and longs for the first Birth of the Light and Spirit of Heaven. All our natural Evil ceases to be our own Evil, as soon as our Will-Spirit turns from it; it then changes its Nature, loses all its Poison and Death, and only becomes our holy Cross, on which we happily die from Self and this World into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Would you have done with Error, Scruple, and Delusion? Consider the Deity to be the greatest Love, the greatest Meekness, the greatest Sweetness, the eternal unchangeable Will to be a Good and Blessing to every Creature; and that all the Misery, Darkness, and Death of fallen Angels and fallen Men, consist in their having lost their Likeness to this Divine Nature. Consider yourself, and all the fallen World, as having nothing to seek or wish for, but by the Spirit of Prayer to draw into the Life of your Soul, Rays and Sparks of this Divine, meek, loving, tender Nature of God. Consider the holy Jesus as the Gift of God to your Soul, to begin and finish the Birth of God and Heaven within you, in Spite of every inward or outward Enemy. These three infallible Truths, heartily embraced, and made the Nourishment of your Soul, shorten and secure the Way to Heaven, and leave no Room for Error, Scruple, or Delusion.

Expect no Life, Light, Strength, or Comfort, but from the Spirit of God, dwelling and manifesting his own Goodness in your Soul. The best of Men, and the best of Books, can only do you good, so far as they turn you from themselves, and every human Thing, to seek, and have, and receive every Kind of Good from God alone; not a distant, or an absent God, but a God living, moving, and always working in the Spirit and Heart of your Soul.

They never find God, who seek for him by Reasoning and Speculation; for since God is the highest Spirit, and the highest Life, nothing but a like Spirit, and a like Life, can unite with him, find or feel, or know any Thing of him. Hence it is, that Faith, and Hope, and Love, turned towards God, are the only possible, and also infallible Means of obtaining a true and living Knowledge of him. And the Reason is plain, it is because by these Holy Tempers, which are the Workings of Spirit and Life within us, we seek the God of Life where he is, we call upon him with his own Voice, we draw near to him by his own Spirit; for nothing can breathe forth Faith, and Love, and Hope to God, but that Spirit and Life which is of God, and which therefore through Flesh and Blood thus presses towards him, and readily unites with him.

There is not a more infallible Truth in the World than this, that neither Reasoning nor Learning can ever introduce a Spark of Heaven into our Souls: But if this be so, then you have nothing to seek, nor any Thing to fear, from Reason. Life and Death are the Things in Question: They are neither of them the Growth of Reasoning or Learning, but each of them is a State of the Soul, and only thus differ, Death is the Want, and Life the Enjoyment of its highest Good. Reason, therefore, and Learning, have no Power here; but only by their vain Activity to keep the Soul insensible of that Life and Death, one of which is always growing up in it, according as the Will and Desire of the Heart worketh. Add Reason to a Vegetable, and you add nothing to its Life or Death. Its Life and Fruitfulness lieth in the Soundness of its Root, the Goodness of the Soil, and the Riches it derives from Air and Light. Heaven and Hell grow thus in the Soul of every Man: His Heart is his Root; if that is turned from all Evil, it is then like the Plant in a good Soil; when it hungers and thirsts after the Divine Life, it then infallibly draws the Light and Spirit of God into it, which are infinitely more ready and willing to live and fructify in the Soul, than Light and Air to enter into the Plant, that hungers after them. For the Soul hath its Breath, and Being, and Life, for no other End, but that the TRIUNE God may manifest the Riches and Powers of his own Life in it.

Thus Hunger is all, and in all Worlds, every Thing lives in it, and by it; nothing else eats, or partakes of Life; and every Thing eats according to its own Hunger. Every Thing hungers after its own Mother, that is, every Thing has a natural magnetic Tendency to partake of that from which it had its Being, and can only find its Rest in that from whence it came.—Dead as well as living Things bear Witness to this Truth: The Stones fall to the Earth, the Sparks fly upwards, for this only Reason, because every Thing must tend towards that from whence it came.

Were not Angels and the Souls of Men breathed forth from God, as so many real Offsprings of the Divine Nature, it would be as impossible for them to have any Desire of God, as for Stones to go upwards, and the Flame downwards. Thus you may see, and feel, that the Spirit of Prayer not only proves that you came from God, but is your certain Way of returning to Him.

When, therefore, it is the one ruling, never ceasing Desire of our Hearts, that God may be the Beginning and End, the Reason and Motive, the Rule and Measure, of our doing, or not doing, from Morning to Night; then everywhere, whether speaking or silent, whether inwardly or outwardly employed, we are equally offered up to the eternal Spirit, have our Life in Him and from Him, and are united to Him, by that Spirit of Prayer, which is the Comfort, the Support, the Strength and Security of the Soul, travelling by the Help of God, through the Vanity of Time into the Riches of Eternity. For this Spirit of Prayer, let us willingly give up all that we inherit from our fallen Father, to be all Hunger and Thurst after God ; and to have no Thought or Care, but how to be wholly his devoted Instruments ; everywhere, and in every Thing, his adoring, joyful, and thankful Servants. Have your Eyes shut, and Ears stopped to every Thing, that is not a Step in that Ladder that reaches from Earth to Heaven.

Reading is good, Hearing is good, Conversation and Meditation are good ; but then they are only good at Times and Occasions, in a certain Degree ; and must be used and governed, with such Caution, as we eat and drink, and refresh ourselves, or they will bring forth in us the Fruits of Intemperance. But the Spirit of Prayer is for all Times, and all Occasions ; it is a Lamp that is to be always burning, a Light to be ever shining ; every Thing calls for it, every Thing is to be done in it, and governed by it ; because it is, and means, and wills nothing else, but the whole Totality of the Soul, not doing this or that, but wholly, incessantly given up to God, to be where, and what, and how he pleases.

This State of absolute Resignation, naked Faith, and pure Love of God, is the highest Perfection, and most purified Life of those, who are born again from above, and through the Divine Power become Sons of God : And it is neither more nor less, than what our blessed Redeemer has called, and qualified us to long and aspire after, in these Words : 'Thy Kingdom come ; thy Will be done, on Earth, as it is in Heaven.' It is to be sought for in the Simplicity of a little Child, without being captivated with any mysterious Depths or Heights of Speculation ; without coveting any Knowledge, or wanting to see any Ground of Nature, Grace, or Creature, but so far as it brings us nearer to God, forces us to forget and renounce every Thing for Him ; to do every Thing in Him, with Him, and for Him ; and to give every breathing, moving, stirring, Intention, and Desire of our Heart, Soul, Spirit, and Life to Him.

Let every Creature have your Love. Love with its Fruits of Mee kness, Patience, and Humility, is all that we can wish for to ourselves, and our fellow Creatures ; for this is to live in God, united to him, both for Time and Eternity.

To desire to communicate Good to every Creature, in the Degree we can, and it is capable of receiving from us, is a Divine Temper ; for thus God stands unchangeably disposed towards the whole Creation : But let me add my Request, as you value the Peace which God has brought forth by his Holy Spirit in you, as you desire to be continually taught by an Uction from above, that you would on no Account enter into any Dispute with anyone about the Truths of Salvation ; but give them every Help, but that of debating with them ; for no Man has Fitness for the Light of the Gospel, till he finds an Hunger and Thirst, and Want of something better, than that which he has and is by Nature. Yet we ought not to check our Inclinations to help others in every Way we can. Only do what you do, as a Work of God ; and then, whatever may be the Event, you will have Reason to be content with the Success that God gives it. ' He ' that hath Ears to hear, let him hear ' ; may be enough for you, as well as it was for our blessed Lord.

The next Thing that belongs to us, and which is also Godlike, is a true unfeigned Patience, and Meekness, showing every Kind of Good-Will and tender Affection towards those that turn a deaf Ear to us ; looking upon it to be full as contrary to God's Method, and the good State of our own Heart, to dispute with anyone in contentious Words, as to fight with him for the Truths of Salvation.

' Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I ' will give you Rest, ' saith our blessed Lord. He called none else, because no one else hath Ears to hear, or a Heart to receive the Truths of Redemption.

Every Man is a vain Disputer, till such Time as something has disturbed his State, and awakened in him a Sensibility of his own evil and miserable Nature. We are all of us afraid both of inward and outward Distress ; and yet, till Distress comes, our Life is but a Dream, and we have no awakened Sensibility of our own true State.

We are apt to consider Parts and Abilities, as the proper Qualifications for the Reception of Divine Truths ; and wonder that a Man of a fine Understanding should not immediately embrace just and solid Doctrines : But the Matter is quite otherwise. Had Man kept Possession of his first rich and glorious State, there had been no Foundation for the Gospel Redemption ; and the Doctrine of the Cross, must have appeared quite unreasonable to be pressed upon him : And therefore says our Lord, ' To the Poor the Gospel is preached. ' It is solely to them, and none else : That is, to poor fallen Man, that has lost all the true natural Riches and Greatness of his first Divine Life ; to him is the Gospel preached. But if a Man knows and feels nothing of this Poverty of his Nature, he is not that Person to whom the Gospel belongs : It has no more Suitableness to his State, than it had to Man unfallen : And then the greater his Parts and Abilities are, the better is he qualified to show the Folly of every Doctrine of that Salvation, of which he has no want.

Such a Man, though he may be of an humane, ingenuous, generous and frank Nature, of lively Parts and much candour, is nevertheless entirely ignorant of the Depth of the Heart of Man, and the Necessities of Human Nature. As yet (though he knows it not) he is only at Play and Pastime, pleasing himself with supposed deep Enquiries after strict Truth, whilst he is only sporting himself with lively wandering Images of This and That, just as they happen to start up in his mind. Could but he see himself in the State of the poor distressed prodigal Son, and find that himself is the very Person there recorded, he would then, but not till then, see the Fitness of that Redemption, which is offered him by the Mercy of God in CHRIST JESUS. But such a one, alas! is rich; he is sound; Light is in his own Power, Goodness is in his own Possession: He feels no Distress or Darkness; but has a Crucible of Reason and Judgment, that on every Occasion separates Gold from Dross: And, therefore, he must be left to himself, to his own Elysium, till something more than Argument and Disputation awakens him out of these golden Dreams.

Let us beware also of the religious Pharisee, who raves against spiritual Religion, because it touches the very Heart string of all systematical Divinity, and shakes the very Foundation of every BABEL in every Country; for not a System of Divinity, since Systems were in being, whether Popish or Protestant, deserves a better Name.

All Preachers of the true spiritual Mystery of the Gospel, of a Birth, Light and Life from above, in and by JESUS CHRIST (which are the Mystic Writers of every Age) ever were, and will be, treated by the reigning fashionable Orthodoxy, as Enemies to the outward Gospel, and its Services, just as the Prophets of God (who were the Mystic Preachers of the Jewish Dispensation) were by the then reigning Orthodoxy, condemned and despised, for calling People to a spiritual Meaning of the dead Letter, to a Holiness infinitely greater than that of their outward Sacrifices, Types, and Ceremonies.

Whoever he is that has any Situation of his own to defend, be it that of a celebrated Preacher, a Champion for received Orthodoxy, a Head, a Leader, or Follower of any Sect, or Party, or particular Method; or that seems, both in his own Eyes, and in the Eyes of others, to have made himself significant in any kind of religious Distinction; every such Person, sooner or later, will find, that he has much of that very same to give up, which hindered the zealous, and eminently religious Pharisee from converting to CHRIST, in the Spirit of a little Child.

Nor doth it help the Matter, that such an one abounds with Piety and Excellency ; for St. Paul was governed by a Spirit of great Piety, great Excellency, and Zeal for God. He says of himself, that when he was persecuting the Disciples of Christ, he 'lived in all good Conscience, as touching the Law blameless, 'and according to the straitest Sect of the Jewish Religion': For the Pharisees, though many of them had all that Hypocrisy and Rottenness which Christ laid to their Charge, yet as a Sect, they were an Order of most confessed and resplendent Sanctity ; and yet the more earnest and upright they were in this kind of Zeal for Goodness, the more earnestly they opposed and condemned the heavenly Mystery of a new Life from CHRIST, as appears from St. Paul.

This Sect of the Pharisees did not cease with the Jewish Church ; it only lost its old Name ; it is still in being, and springs now in the same Manner from the Gospel, as it did then from the Law : It has the same Place, lives the same Life, does the same Work, minds the same Things, has the same Goodness at Heart, has the same religious Honour, and claim to Piety, in the Christian, as it had in the Jewish Church ; and as much mistakes the Depths of the Mystery of the Gospel, as that Sect mistook the Mystery signified by the Letter of the Law and the Prophets.

It would be easy to show in several Instances, how the Leaven of that Sect works amongst us, just as it did amongst them. 'Have any of the Rulers believed on Him?' was the orthodox Question of the ancient Pharisees. Now we Christians readily and willingly condemn the Weakness and Folly of that Question ; and yet who does not see, that, for the most Part, both Priest and People, in every Christian Country, live and govern themselves by the Folly and Weakness of the very same Spirit which put that Question : For when God, as He has always done from the Beginning of the World, raises up private and illiterate Persons, full of Light and Wisdom from above, so as to be able to discover all the Workings of the Mystery of Iniquity, and to open the Ground, and Truth, and absolute Necessity of such an inward Spirit and Life of CHRIST revealed in us, as Time, carnal Wisdom, and worldly Policy have departed from ; when all this is done, by the weakest Instruments of God, in such a Simplicity and Fulness of Demonstration, as may be justly deemed a Miracle ; do not Clergy and Laity get rid of it all, though ever so unanswerable, merely by the Strength of the Pharisees' good old Question, saying with them, 'Have any of the Rulers believed and taught these Things? Hath the Church in Council or Convocation? Hath Calvin, Luther, Zwinglius, or any of our renowned System-makers, ever taught or asserted these matters?'

But hear what our blessed Lord saith, of the Place, the Power, and Origin of Truth: He refers us not to the current Doctrines of the Times, or to the Systems of men, but to his own Name, his own Nature, his own Divinity hidden in us: 'My Sheep,' says he, 'hear my Voice.' Here the whole Matter is decisively determined, both where Truth is, and who they are that can have any Knowledge of it.

HEAVENLY Truth is nowhere spoken but by the Voice of CHRIST, nor heard but by the Power of CHRIST living in the Hearer. As He is the eternal only Word of GOD, that speaks forth all the Wisdom, and Wonders of GOD; so He alone is the Word, that speaks forth all the Life, Wisdom, and Goodness, that is or can be in any Creature; it can have none but what it has in him and from him: This is the one unchangeable Boundary of Truth, Goodness, and every Perfection of Men on Earth, or Angels in Heaven.

Literary Learning, from the Beginning to the End of Time, will have no more of Heavenly Wisdom, nor any less of Worldly Foolishness in it, at one Time than at another; its Nature is one and the same through all Ages; what it was in the Jew and the Heathen, that same it is in the Christian. Its Name, as well as Nature, is unalterable, viz., Foolishness with God.

I shall add no more, but the two or three following Words.

I. Receive every inward and outward Trouble, every Disappointment, Pain, Uncasiness, Temptation, Darkness, and Desolation, with both thy Hands, as a true Opportunity and blessed Occasion of dying to Self, and entering into a fuller Fellowship with thy Self-denying, suffering Saviour.

II. Look at no inward or outward Trouble in any other View; reject every other Thought about it; and then every Kind of Trial and Distress will become the blessed Day of thy Prosperity.

III. Be afraid of seeking or finding Comfort in any Thing, but God alone: For that which gives thee Comfort, takes so much of thy Heart from God. 'Quid est Cor purum? cui ex toto, et pure sufficit solus Deus, cui nihil sapit, quod nihil delectat, nisi Deus.' That is, What constitutes a pure Heart? One to which God alone is totally, and purely sufficient; to which nothing relishes, or gives Delight, but God alone.

IV. That State is best, which exerciseth the highest Faith in, and fullest Resignation to God.

V. What is it you want and seek, but that God may be all in all in you? But how can this be, unless all creaturely Good and Evil become as nothing in you, or to you?

'Oh Anima mea, abstrahere te ab Omnibus. Quid tibi cum mutabilibus Creaturis? Solum Sponsum tuum, qui omnium est Author Creaturarum, expectans, hoc age, ut Cor tuum ille

'liberum et expeditum semper inveniatur, quoties illi ad ipsum 'venire placuerit.' That is, O my Soul! abstract thyself from every Thing. What hast thou to do with changeable Creatures? Waiting and expecting thy Bridegroom, who is the Author of all Creatures, let it be thy sole Concern, that he may find thy Heart free and disengaged, as often as it shall please him to visit thee.

Be assured of this, that sooner or later, we must be brought to this Conviction, That every Thing in ourselves by Nature is Evil, and must be entirely given up; and that Nothing that is creaturely, can make us better than we are by Nature. Happy, therefore, and blessed are all those inward or outward Troubles, that hasten this Conviction in us; that with the whole Strength of our Souls, we may be driven to seek ALL from and in GOD, without the least Thought, Hope, or Contrivance after any other Relief: Then it is, that we are made truly Partakers of the Cross of CHRIST; and from the Bottom of our Hearts shall be enabled to say, with St. Paul, 'God forbid that I should Glory in 'any Thing, save the Cross of our Lord JESUS CHRIST: by 'which I am crucified to the World, and the world is crucified 'to me.'

Give up yourself to God without reserve. This implies such a State or Habit of Heart, as does Nothing of itself, from its own Reason, Will or Choice, but stands always in Faith, Hope, and absolute Dependence upon being led by the Spirit of God into every Thing that is according to his Will; seeking Nothing by Designing, Reasoning, and Reflection, how you shall best promote the Honour of God, but in Singleness of Heart, meeting every Thing that every Day brings forth, as something that comes from GOD, and is to be received, and gone through by you, in such an Heavenly Use of it, as you would suppose the HOLY JESUS would have done, in such Occurrences.—This is an attainable Degree of Perfection; and by having CHRIST and his Spirit always in your Eye, and Nothing Else, you will never be left to yourself, nor without the full Guidance of GOD.

Letter XII.

To Mr. T. L.

My dearly beloved Friend,

I BEGIN, as I did my last, with assuring you, that I love to hear from you.

I am in some Concern about the Activity of your religious Spirit, which I have often cautioned you against.— You have seen, and as I think deeply apprehended, the true Ground, on which Man's Redemption stands. This Ground has been shown you, not only from the plain Letter of Scripture, but confirmed by the whole Frame of Nature.

Every Thing in Heaven and Earth, every Thing that you inwardly or outwardly feel, or know of your own Soul, and Body, are all shown to bear infallible Witness to these two fundamental Truths of the Gospel: That our first Father died to his first Life in God; and that nothing in the whole Nature of Things, can be our Redemption, but the first Life of God, born again of God in the Soul. You have had the fullest Proof, that Man was created in this high Perfection of Life. You have had the fullest Proof, that Adam had no other Way of dying to Heaven, or losing his first State in God, but by the working of his Will; and that every Son of Adam, is to this Day, only That which his Faith, or the working of his Will, or the Desire of his Heart (for they are all the same Thing) maketh him to be. Jesus Christ is the Divine Nature, which must be alive again in Man. But the Life of the Deity can only arise by a Birth in us, by the Hunger and Faith and Desire of the Heart, or the working of the Will turned to it; and this is the Faith in Christ that does all.

To what Purpose therefore, is so much anxious Enquiry about this or that? Why this running after everyone, to hear the History of Himself, and the Secrets of his own fancied Experience?

If you know a Man to be a Fatalist, do you not enough know, that he cannot explain the Mysteries of the Gospel, all which have a quite contrary Ground.

If a Man has no Notion, or Belief of the Fall of Man, can he tell you either the Nature, or the Necessity of Christian Redemption? What Room could there be for the Divine Philanthropy, if it could be supposed, that Man and the World had not a better State, and Life from Him at first, than they have now?

If a Man denies the Necessity of the new Birth from above, will you believe that this proceeds from an intimate Familiarity with Christ, teaching him in private, the Disbelief of that which he taught publicly when on Earth? What Folly to tell you, that you are only in a Legal State, unless he could prove to you, that you have no Aversion to Wickedness, nor abstain from any Sin, but so far as the Fear and Dread of Punishment keep you from it. For this is the Truth of the Legal State; but when Sin is disliked, and the Commandments kept through a Love of God, and a Desire of Divine Goodness, There is the Man in Christ a new Creature, no longer under the Yoke of the Law, but living in the Freedom, and Spirit of God.

If a Man tells you that Jesus is not God, surely it is Time to have no Fellowship with him. If he tells you, you are not to pray to God, but to Jesus, who is only a Creature, is not this telling you, that it is unlawful for us to pray, as Jesus taught his Disciples? And if it was wrong to pray to God, the Old and the New Testament are, from the Beginning to the End, full of false Religion? Or will he say, that though under the Old Testament Men might rightly pray to the Deity, yet we, by being Christians, have lost this Privilege of Relation to, and Dependence upon God? But surely, I need not expose the Extravagancy of these Things, nor exhort you to be weary of such Entertainment.

You tell me, that you cannot help thinking with Mr. S. 'That all partial Systems of Salvation, are greatly derogatory to the Goodness of God:' But that you would say this to very few, but myself. But dear Soul, why should you say this to me? I have without any Scruple, openly declared to all the World, that from Eternity to Eternity, nothing can come from God but mere infinite Love.—In how many ways have I proved, and asserted, that there neither is, nor can be any Wrath, or Partiality in God, but that every Creature must have all that Happiness, which the infinite Love and Power of God can help it to. Can I, or any Creature, possibly say more of an Impartiality in God? And is it not quite unreasonable, to ask more about it, or to carry it further? You say 'the seeming Impossibility of the Spirit and Light of God, arising up again in any Creature, that has extinguished it, is, you presume, the strongest Argument that can be offered, in Support of everlasting Misery.' And therefore you say, 'you have chosen, with Submission, to examine the Force of this principal Argument, which runs through the APPEAL, and my other Writings.' But, my dear Friend, how came you to say this? For this is so far from being the principal, or any Argument that runs through my Appeal, and other Books, that there is not one single Word, in all the Appeal, nor any other of my Books, that touches upon this Matter, till you come to the last Book, viz., The Way to Divine Knowledge; and even in that Book, the Impossibility is so far from being asserted, that it is there affirmed, that this Impossibility is not proved, nor ever likely to be so. Will you therefore charge me with proving a Thing, that I show cannot be proved? It is my capital Doctrine, That God is all Love, and merely a Will to all Goodness; that he must eternally will that to the Creature, which he willed at its Creation.

But, my dear Soul, debate not such Matters as these, either with me, or anyone else. Stop your Ears to all that you hear about them, and turn from everyone that will lead you into them. The Perplexity that you make to yourself in such Matters, is Death to the Divine Life within you, is a great Abuse of God's Goodness towards you, and is a likely Way for you to lose the Peace and Joy of that Divine Light, which has so largely opened itself within you.

Mr. G. and Mr. S. both of them (as they say) come out of the Depths of Hell, full of a New risen Divine Light within them. The first makes me a greater Blasphemer of God, than the Devils are, (N.B.) because I say, God has no other Nature, or Will towards every Creature, but Love and Goodness.

The other calls me Blind, and Ignorant, because I have not a self-evident Knowledge of the Salvation of Devils. Now were you to find out a Third, laying Claim to the same certainty of Divine Light, as these two do, you might perhaps have them both condemned by one who had a Self-evident Knowledge of Absolute Election, and Reprobation, and who knew with as great Certainty, that God damns some eternally to make his Power to be known, as Mr. S. knows Christ to be only a Creature, and that Prayer is not to be made to God, but solely to this Creature.

Dear L. Son of my Love, I do not know that ever I wasted my Spirits in Writing, or Thinking in the Manner of this Letter before, and trust I never shall again. But Love towards you, and a hearty Zeal for your true Growth in the Spiritual Life, has compelled me into this Wrangle.

Put away all needless Curiosity in Divine Matters, and look upon every Thing to be so, but that which helps you to die to yourself, that the Spirit and Life of Christ may be formed, and revealed in you.

As for the Purification of all Human Nature, either in this World, or some after Ages, I fully believe it. And as to that of Angels, if it is possible, I am glad of it, and also sure enough, that it will then come to pass.

Dear Soul,
Adieu.

Letter XIII.

To the same.

My Dear Friend,

I THANK you for the favour of yours. In the Two Extracts, you have sent, the Writer says twice, He cannot adopt the Dark side of my System. If what I have wrote may be called a System, it has put a full End to all that was Dark, and Partial, in every other System. It makes all the Universe both of Nature and Grace, to be an Edifice of Love, kept up and governed by Love. For I allow of no other God but Love, who from Eternity to Eternity, can have no other Will towards the Creature, but to communicate Good; and that no Creature can have any Misery, from which infinite Goodness can deliver it. Where then is the Dark Side? Must I assert God to be more than infinitely Good?

*Dear Soul,
Adieu.*

June 9, 1752.

Letter XIV.

To the same.

My dear L.,

I CANNOT tell you how much I love you. But that which of all Things I have most at Heart, with Regard to you, is the real Progress of your Soul in the Divine Life. Heaven seems to be awakened in you. It is a tender Plant. It requires Stillness, Meekness, and the Unity of the Heart, totally given up to the unknown Workings of the Spirit of God, which will do all its Work in the calm Soul, that has no Hunger or Desire, but to escape out of the Mire of its Earthly Life, into its lost Union and Life in God.

I mention this, out of a Fear of your giving into an Eagerness into many Things, which though seemingly innocent, yet divide and weaken the Workings of the Divine Life within you. For a Multiplicity of Wills, is the one only Evil, Disease, and Misery, both of our Souls and Bodies. That which can make the Soul to have only one Will, and one Love, is the universal Tincture, both for Soul and Body. And nothing else is it. That alone can take the Fall, or Curse out of the Body, which can take it out of the Soul. For the Curse through all Nature, and Creature, is but one and the same thing, viz., The Absence of the Heavenly Power. Heaven is dead in Gold, just as it is dead in Man; and its heavenly Tincture can only be made alive, in the same Manner, and from the same Power, as the inward Man is born again of the Water, and Spirit from above.

Our outward Man must be tormented, crucified, mortified in the Fire of our own Flesh and Blood; and then it is as the gross Gold in the Crucible heated by earthly Fire. But as no fiery Torments of our own Flesh and Blood, can glorify our inward Man, and set Him in his first angelic State, so no outward Fire can torment Gold into its first Heavenly State. Our Lord said to the crucified Thief, To Day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.

Now no one is a Divine Magus, till he is thus qualified to say to his Subject, To Day shalt Thou be with me in Paradise. If He himself is not in Paradise, he can do no paradisaical Work. But, my Friend, let not what I here say, put you upon disputing this Point with anyone, for I say it for quite a Contrary End, to show you the Vanity of all such Discourse.

*My dear Soul,
Adieu.*

Oct. 16, 1752.

Letter XV.

To the same.

My dear L.,

I HEARTILY thank you for your Last. Talk no more of obtruding upon me with your Letters. Every Thing that comes from you is welcome. I have no need to write any Thing to you, for you know all that I have to say. You stand upon the same Ground, that I do. And you have Nothing to do, but to be steadfast and unmoveable in that Light, which God has vouchsafed to you.

But, my Friend, take Notice of this, no Truths, however solid and well grounded, help you to any Divine Life, but so far as they are taught, nourished, and strengthened by an Unction from above; and that Nothing more dries, and extinguishes this heavenly Unction, than a talkative, reasoning Temper, that is always catching at every Opportunity of hearing, or telling some religious Matters.

You have found enough, to prove to you, that all must be found in God, manifested in the Life of your Soul. And I must say again, shut your Eyes, and stop your Ears, to all Religious Tales.

My dear Soul,
Adieu.

Feb. 12, 1753.

Letter XVI.

To the same.

My dear L.,

YOU have communicated to me several Letters, that you have written to your Friends, and I much approve of the Spirit in which you have written them. Only I must repeat, what I have often said, Have a care of too much Eagerness to set other people right, lest it lead you too far from Home, or too much exhaust that Breath, which is to keep up the Strength of your own inward Life. I believe you understand me.

You want a Remedy, to prevent the Growth of Suicide, and Madness. They are not to be remedied by any new Way of setting forth the Folly, and Extravagancy of them. When the Fruit is evil, there is no Remedy, but in putting the Root of the Tree in a better State.

Pride, is the Father and Mother of Suicide and Madness. Would you have a share in removing these Evils, you must not cast about for high Speculations, there is but one Step to be taken, and that is, to show the Necessity of Dying to Pride, and seeking for Salvation only in Humility. JESUS CHRIST is the only Peace, and Rest, and Satisfaction of human Life. This is absolute, and admits of no Exception. St. John the Baptist was the true Preparer of the Way to CHRIST; if you think of any other Way, it is Labour lost. This Point is absolutely determined where CHRIST says, 'They have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them. If they believe not Moses, nor the Prophets,

'neither will they be persuaded though one arose from the Dead.'

Miracles, and Demonstrations, you see, are in vain, till Moses, and the Prophets are believed.

Now Moses is Sin, made known by the Law, and the Prophets, are Faith and Hope in God. And these two Things must have their State, and work in the Soul, before it can have any Benefit from CHRIST and his Miracles. If you would therefore give some Check to the Growth of Suicide and Madness, it cannot be by attacking them in themselves, or speaking to the Unreasonableness of their particular Nature, this is as useless, as a Miracle to Him, that heareth neither Moses, nor the Prophets.

Now as Moses and the Prophets were of Necessity, before the Coming of CHRIST, so it must be in every human Soul.

And this proves the Truth, of what has been so often asserted, of the Importance of apprehending the Fall of Man, in its true and full Depth. For to hear Moses and the Prophets is in Reality only this, viz., Man become truly sensible of his impure, and fallen Nature, and looking up to God to be delivered from it. Then, whether he has, or has not, ever seen the Bible, he is a true Believer of Moses and the prophets, is that Lost Sheep, that is sure of being found, that weary and heavy laden, that must find Rest and Refreshment in CHRIST.

It matters not therefore, my Friend, what you are upon, whether you would save a Man from Deism, Debauchery, or Suicide, you must begin in the same Place, from one and the same Ground, and this as unavoidably, as every Fruit must have its Beginning from the Root, and from the Root in its right State.

The Amiableness of any Virtue, or the horrid Nature of any Vice, whilst only considered as in themselves, are but as Pictures set before our Eyes, and have no other Effect upon us. And this is the Unprofitableness of all Moral Instructions, whether Heathen, or Christian.

If you can help a Man to seek, and find, and know Himself, and his real Relation to God; to know that he has neither inward, nor outward Evil, but because he has lost his true State, and place in God; and that therefore Nothing can be his peace and Happiness, but his first Divine Life, or Nature quickened again in Him, then you have done all that you can for him, whatever his Malady is.—But enough of this.

Dear Soul,

Adieu.

Letter XVII.

To the same.

My dear L.,

YOU have a Scruple about the wondrous Lives of the Fathers in the Deserts, because in such Contrariety to his Character, who went about doing good. But if you only consider what you have said of them yourself, that the reading of their Lives, at 'once struck you with the 'deepest Devotion, and made you think what a Noviciate you 'were in the Love of God,' you would have Reason enough to place them amongst the faithful, and true Disciples of Him, who went about doing Good. For what greater Good, than to do that to others, for so many Ages, which they have done for you? They are not written to raise an Emulation in you, to copy after them; nor is there any Reason to think, that their Story is not much exaggerated. But be that as it will, it is certain, they were the Salt of the World for that Time, and that the good Providence of God blessed his Church with them.

They are not for you to read, but as it were en passant, or for a little Change of Air, and their Particularity of Life no more concerns you, than that of John the Baptist.

God's last Dispensation to the World, is the opening the Ground, and Mystery of all Things, to which every Blindness, and Vanity, and Strife of Human Life must, sooner or latter, be forced to give up itself.

The Children of this Dispensation have no Occasion to look backwards. It is like learning your A B C, when you are called and qualified to read.

Be not too fond of Abstemiousness, nor too much attached to a Milk Diet; let nothing be a Reason for your doing, or not doing any Thing of this Kind, but the Health and Strength of your Body. As soon as you are able to bear a stronger Diet, I would have you by all Means to use it. There is no more Harm in getting Strength from good Food, than from sound Sleep. And this Kind of Diet, is only to be used as a Remedy for a Time.

Dear Soul,

Adieu.

Letter XVIII.

To the same.

My dear Friend,

THE Variety of Trials, you have lately met with, are but a Specimen of what you are to expect, in some Form or other, so long as you breathe the Air of this fallen World.—The longer we are without them, the more our Need of them is increased. And they never give great Smart, but where something is to be torn off, that sticks too close to us.—One Reflection upon these sacred Words, ‘My Kingdom is not of this World :—The Son of Man hath not where to lay his Head,’ are sufficient to take not only the Sting out of every Cross, that can here befall us, but even to make us afraid, and ashamed of being pleased with any Thing, that has the Name of Worldly Honour, and Prosperity.

You have no Reason to wonder at any Thing you see, or hear, of the Partiality, Selfishness, Envy, and Enmity, that so often breaks out between Brothers and Sisters of the same Blood.—For if Blood-Relations, considered as such, could have any true Goodness, or unselfish Regard to one another, we should not be under the Necessity of being born again from above.

Will it do you any good to tell you, that thus says my Heart, without speaking a Word. ‘Let Nothing live in me, but the Redeeming Power of thy holy Jesus, Nothing pray in me but thy Holy Spirit.’—This is my Ship, in which, I would be always at Sea.—All that I seek, or mean, either for myself, or others, by every Height and Depth of Divine Knowledge, given us by God in his illuminated Behmen, is only for this End, that we may be more willing, and glad to become such little Children, as our Lord has told us, are the only Heirs of the Kingdom of God.

The Piercing Critic may, and naturally will grow in Pride, as fast as his skill in Words discovers itself.—And every kind of Knowledge, that shows the Scholar, the Orator, the Disputer, the Commentator, the Historian, his own Powers, and Abilities, are the same Temptation to him, that Eve had from the Serpent; and he will get no more good by the Love and Relish of such Knowledge, than she got by her Love of the Tree, that was so desirable to make one wise.

But he whose Eyes are opened, to see into this Mystery of all Things, sees Nothing but Death to himself, and to every Thing, that he had called, or delighted in as his own This is the bold Depth of his Knowledge. And if you would know its aspiring Height, it consists in learning to know, that which the Angels and Twenty-four Elders about the Throne of God, knew, when they cast down their Crowns, before him that sat on the Throne, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, thou art worthy to receive Glory, and Honour, and Power; for thou hast created all Things, and for thy Pleasure they are, and were created.— It is to know that the Triune Majesty of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, are the threefold Power, Life, Glory, and Perfection of every Creature, that sings praises to God, in Heaven and in Earth. This is the proud Knowledge of those, who are let into the Holy of Holies, opened by the Spirit of God in his chosen Instrument, Behmen. Which goes no deeper, than to see the Nothingness of Man, ascends no higher, than to know that God is All; which begets nothing in Man, but that which was begotten in Paul, when he cried out, ‘God forbid, that I should ‘glory in any Thing, but the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ.’

Letter XIX.

To the same.

My dear Friend,

YOUR Strictures upon Messieurs of the Foundery, the Tabernacle, &c., are very just. These Gentlemen seem to have no other Bottom to stand upon, but that of Zeal. I hope God will direct it for them, that more good may come from it, than the World is willing to believe.—But I say no more of them.—I would advise you not to enter into Disputes with them, nor any others, in Defence of those Principles, which are the very Life and Heart of the Law, the Prophets, and the Gospel.—No one begins to object against them, but on the Account of something that is personal, either with Regard to himself, or the Author of them, or because they are contrary to his Views and Situation in the World. He who could free himself from these Prejudices, would want no one to persuade him of the Truth of them.

Mr. J. W. is an ingenious Man; and the Reason why his Letter to me, is such a juvenile Composition of Emptiness, and Pertness, as is below the Character of any Man, who had been serious in Religion but half a Month, is because, it was not Ability, but Necessity, that put his pen into his Hand.—He had condemned my Books, preached much against them, and to make all sure, forbid his People the use of them.—And for a Cover to all this, he promised from Time to Time to write against them.—Therefore an Answer was to be made at all Adventures.—What you happen to hear of Mr. J. W. concerning me, or my Books, let it die with you.—Wish him God speed in every Thing that is good.—But this you may easily know, that he, and the Pope, have the same Reasons, and are under the same Necessity of condemning and anathematising the Mystery revealed by God, in J. B.

Adieu.

Sept., 1756.

P.S. I have no objection to your learning the French Language, but think you much in the right, in intending to proceed very leisurely in it, and as it were by the by.—To learn, and Love the Language of the internal Speaker, is more than to have the Tongues of Men and Angels.

Letter XX.

To the same.

My dear Friend,

I WAS much concerned at the Account you sent me, of the State of your health, and think it very advisable, to seek out for Help.—But there is the Difficulty where to find it.—All is so very superficial in the Art of Physic, and from so poor a Ground, that one has little to like in one Physician more than in another, but his Personal Tempers and Behaviour.—Air, and gentle Exercise much pursued, must be greatly beneficial to you.—If your Physician be for your Purpose, he will not load you with Shop-Medicines, nor ought you to submit to anyone that does.—Nothing can assist you, but some simple Regimen, that gradually lessens the Hectic in your Blood.

My dear Brother Pilgrim, be of good Comfort, our Road of Life is such, that Weakness can help us on as fast as Strength.—Use outward Medicines, as if you used them not.—The Universal is within you, and whether you find it in a sickly, or a healthy Body, is but a small Matter.

Daily, hourly, thankful Resignation to God in every Thing, is the best Regimen, you can enter into, both for Soul and Body.— Every good Wish attends my dear Fellow-Traveller out of Time, into Eternity.

Farewell.

Oct. 10, 1756.

Letter XXI.

To G. W.

THE large Account you have given of yourself, is very affecting, and I hope God will turn all the Variety of your past Distress, into Means of a future solid Peace, and Rest in his Divine Love.

To be weary and heavy Laden, is to have the highest Fitness to receive that Rest, that CHRIST alone can give. These are the persons that he called to him, when he was upon Earth. They who are content with themselves, are in the utmost Danger of never knowing that Happiness, for which they were created.

For a while, consider yourself in such Solitude, as if there was only God and you in the World, free from every Thought, but that of desiring to be wholly and solely his, and looking wholly to his Goodness, to be delivered out of the Misery of your fallen State.

Stand firmly in this Faith, That God and the Kingdom of Heaven are certainly within you, and within you for this only Reason, that they may become your Salvation.—As all therefore is within, so let all your Care be turned inwards, in loving, adoring, and praying to this GOD and CHRIST within you.

Be not too eager about much Reading. Nor read any Thing, but that which nourishes, strengthens, and establishes this Faith in you, of an inward Saviour, who is the Life of your Soul. To grow up in this Faith, is taking the best Means, of attaining to the best Knowledge in all Divine Matters.

Cast away all Reflections about yourself, the World, or your past Life. And let all be swallowed up, or lost in this joyful Thought, that you have found the Messiah, the Saviour of the World, not in Books, not in History, but in the Birth, and Bottom of your own Soul. Give yourself up to this Birth of Heaven within you, expect all from it, let it be the humble, faithful, longing Desire of your Heart, and desire no Knowledge, but that which is born of it, and proceeds from it. Stand only in this Thirst of Knowledge, and then all that you know will be Spirit and Life.

*With a Heart full of good Wishes to you,
I am,
Yours, &c.*

May 8, 1750.

Letter XXII.

To the same.

My dear Friend,

I KNOW not myself, how to write to the most illuminated Person upon Earth, for Advice, or Instruction. And the more dark, and distressed my State should be, the more I should be averse to seek Counsel of any Creature; not from an Opinion of any Sufficiency in myself, but from a Fulness of Conviction, that I run away from Relief, and deprive myself of true Light, and Comfort, by not seeking, and depending upon God ALONE for it.

All my Writings have no other End, but to communicate this Conviction to my Readers, and consequently to teach them to have done with me, as soon as I have convinced them, that GOD and CHRIST and the Kingdom of Heaven are only to be found by Man, in his own Heart, and only capable of being found there, by his own Love of them, Faith in them, and absolute Dependence upon them.

What room, therefore, for calling out for Help and Direction, when once it is known, that all consists in an implicit blind Faith, in Purity of Love, and total Resignation to the Spirit of GOD? For where can these be exercised, but in the States and Trials through which Human Life must pass.

And to acquiesce in God, when Things are inwardly, and outwardly easy with us, but to cast about for Help from something that is not God, when Distress and Darkness come upon us, is the Error of Errors, and the greatest Hindrance to our true Union with GOD in CHRIST JESUS.

*I am with much Truth and Sincerity,
Your affectionate Friend.*

Sept. 22, 1754.

Letter XXIII.

To the same.

My dear Friend,

THE Charge of Spinozism brought against me by Dr. Warburton, has all the Folly and Weakness, &c., &c., that can well be imagined. For as Spinozism, is nothing else but a gross confounding of God and Nature, making them to be only one and the same thing, so the full Absurdity, and absolute Impossibility of it, can only be fundamentally proved, by that Doctrine which can go to the Bottom of the Matter, and demonstrate the essential, eternal, and absolute Distinction, between God and Nature; a Thing done over and over, from Page to Page in those Books, from which the Doctor has extracted Spinozism, just with as much Acuteness, as if he had spied rank Warburtonianism, in my Letter to the Right Reverend the Bishop of London.

Now although the Difference between God and Nature, has always been supposed, and believed, yet the true Ground of such Distinction, or the Why, the How, and in What, they are essentially different, and must be so to all Eternity, was to be found in no Books, till the Goodness of God, in a Way not less than that of Miracle, made a poor illiterate Man, in the Simplicity of a Child, to open and relate the deep mysterious Ground of all Things; in which is shown the Birth and Beginning of Nature, or the first Workings of the inconceivable God, opening and manifesting his hidden, Triune Deity, in an outward State of Glory, in the Splendour of united Fire, Light, and Spirit, all kindled, and distinguished, all united and beatified, by the hidden, invisible, inconceivable, supernatural Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, working all the Glories in Heaven, and every kind of Life, and Blessing on Earth, by visible, and invisible Fire, Light, and Spirit.

This is the wonderful Gift of God to these last distracted Ages of the World; and as every Purpose of God must stand, and sooner or later produce all that, which God intended by it; so the more the Wise and the Learned in all Churches, reject this Counsel of God, the more they will promote its Success over themselves, and only help it, to come forth with greater Strength, and Glory to God, by being owned, and proclaimed by the Mouths of Babes, and Sucklings.

Babel hath always had Men for its Builders; but the Kingdom of God ever was, and ever will be made up of little Children.

Farewell.

April 10, 1757.

P.S. I have read the Pamphlet you sent on Divinity Studies. It may be said to be much better, than most of the kind in this and the last Century, and infinitely beyond Mr. Wesley's Babylonish Address to the Clergy; but yet so wrong, as to be worse than no Advice at all.—We seem to be further from the Gospel, in Point of Spirit, than in Distance of Time.—What shall I say? Babel is not a City, it is the whole Christian World. As to all these Directors of Divinity-Students, no more Folly need be laid to their Charge, than is done by our Lord in these Words, 'Without me ye can do nothing; as my Father sent me, so send I you; the Holy Spirit shall guide you into all Truth.' To all which the Apostle subscribeth in these Words, 'Who hath made us able Ministers, not of the Letter, but of the Spirit.'

Now, put these Words of Christ and his Apostle, at the Beginning and End of Mr. Wesley's Address, and then you will see, that almost all that is betwixt them, is empty Babble, fitter for an old Grammarians, that was grown blear-eyed in mending Dictionaries, than for one who had tasted the Powers of the World to come, and had found the Truth as it is in Jesus.

Letter XXIV.

To Mr. T. L.

My dear L.,

TAMPER with no Physicians, but content yourself, to have that Share of Health, which a regular and good Life can help you to.—Reflect not upon your predominant Complexion, or how long it will be, before you get from under its Power.—St. Paul wanted to be delivered from his Thorn in the Flesh. He had all he prayed for, though the Thorn might continue, when God said to him, 'My Grace is sufficient for thee;' this was better to him, than if his Thorn had been taken from him.—This enabled him to say, 'I will glory in my Infirmities; for when I am weak, then I am strong.' You believe, that if it was not for earnest and continual Prayer, your Turn to Melancholy would get the better of you.—You cannot believe this too much, for nothing else can preserve you, from being led away by every other evil Temper. But let Resignation to God, be the predominant Part of your Spirit of Prayer; it is not so much ardent Desires, as humble Resignation to be as God pleases, that keeps the Heart in the highest Union with him.—Faith and Hope and Love get their best Strength, and work their highest Work, when Resignation is the Salt wherewith they are seasoned.

You think, if you were to live an hundred Years in an abstracted Contemplation, some Property of Nature, would still be occasionally breaking forth in you.—What occasion had you, my Friend, to make this Complaint about such a Contemplation?

You have no Business with it, nor any Reason to expect it should do anything for you.—Had you changed your Words, and said, I believe if I were for a hundred Years to be wholly trusting in, and depending upon God, to do that for me, which He has promised to do for all that trust in Him, it would not be done:—Had you expressed your Complaint in these Words, you would have seen, that neither Faith, nor Hope, nor Love, nor Resignation, would have allowed you to make it.—Look at yourself, at the Power of Time, or anything that this or that Complexion does, and then you may be afraid of everything; but look at God, as him that is to do all for you, and in you, and then you need be afraid of Nothing.—A Thorn, or no Thorn, bad or good Blood, with all its Effects, lose all their Difference, as soon as you know, that you are not your own, nor left to yourself, nor where to seek a Physician, that will not leave you unhealed.

We know that all Things must work together for Good, to them that love God. Now what signifies what the Things are, if we are to have the same good from them, be they what they will? Let Complexion show itself, let the dead Ashes of old Sins, seem to be ready to come to Life again, what is all this, but helping us to be more alive unto God? Flesh will be Flesh as long as we live, but every State of the Flesh may help us to grow in the Spirit.—Therefore rejoice evermore, in every Thing give Thanks, and call nothing but this, abstracted Contemplation.

Farewell.

Letter XXV.

To a Clergyman of Westmoreland.

Reverend Sir,

CONCERNING the following Texts, God hardened the Heart of Pharaoh;—‘He hath mercy on whom He will have mercy, and whom He will He hardeneth;’—‘Good and Evil are from the Lord;’—‘I create Light, and I create Darkness;’ you ask, how these Things can be consistently affirmed of a God, all Love and Goodness to his Creatures?

I would ask you also, is there any Difficulty of admitting the Truth of this Scripture, ‘In God we live, and move, and have our Being?’ does this clash with the Idea of a God all Love and Goodness to the Creatures?—Now take all the contrary Things that are said of God, with Relation to that which passes between God and Man, and they all imply no more, affirm no more, than the single foregoing Text, namely, that in every State of the Life of Man, be it what it will, either under a Sense and Enjoyment of Good, or the Power and Pain of Evil, it is all owing to this Divine, original, essential Relation between God and Man, or because in him we live, and move, and have our Being.—For Man, thus come from God, must through the whole Course, or endless Ages of his Life, neither know, nor find, nor feel anything of Good or Evil, Life or Death, Happiness or Misery, but solely because of That, which God is in him, and to him, and because of That, which he is in God, and hath from him, by his original Birth or Creation.

The earthly Animals, whose Birth is only in and from this World, can have no Evil of Sin, or Misery in their State, from God; and that only for this one Reason, because they are not born of God, or partakers of the Divine Nature. Therefore God’s creating Evil in Man, is the same Thing, as if it were said, the Divine Birth in Man, is that which creates his Evil, because he could have no Sin of a wrathful, proud, hardened Heart, these Things could neither exist in him, or be known by him, but because he came into Being by a Divine Birth.—Angels could not be diabolical Spirits of Darkness, fiery Dragons of Wrath, Fury, Malice, Vengeance, Envy, Hatred, &c., &c., but because they were all born of God, to live and move and have their Being in him. This has created all the Evil of every Kind, that they can feel or know in their whole State.

All the Difficulty of reconciling such contrary Things as are said of God, that He willeth only Life and Good, and yet that Evil and Death, are said to come from him, arises from our considering the Operations of God in a creaturely Manner, or as we should understand the same contrary Things, if they were affirmed of any Creature.—Whereas the Operation of God, in its whole Kind and Nature, is as different from any Thing that can be done by Creatures, as the Work and Manner of Creation, is different, in Power, Nature, and Manner, from that which Creatures can do to one another.—For (N.B.) the Operation of God is never in or with the Creature in any other Manner, or doing any other Thing, but that which it was and did in the Creation of them.—This, and this alone is the working of the Deity in Heaven and on Earth; nothing comes from him, or is done by him through all the Eternity of his Creatures, but that essential Manifestation of himself in them, which began the Glory and Perfection of their first Existence.—Now from this one, single, immutable Operation of God, that He can be nothing else in, or towards the Creature, but that same Love and Goodness, that He was to it, at its Creation, it necessarily follows, that to the Creature that turns from him, God can be nothing else to it, but the Cause of all its Evil and miserable State. Hence is that of the Apostle, that ‘Sin cometh by the Law, because where there is no Law, there is no Transgression.’—Now God, or the Divine Nature in Man, is the One great Law of God in Man, from which, all that is Good and all that is Evil in him, hath its whole State and Nature.—His Life can have no Holiness or Goodness in it, but as the Divine Nature within him, is the Law by which he lives. He can commit no other Sin, nor feel any kind of Hurt or Evil from it, but what comes from resisting, or rebelling against That of God, which is in him; and therefore the Good and Evil of Man, are equally from God.—And yet this could not be, but because of this Ground, viz., that God is unchangeable Love and Goodness, and has only one Will and Work of Love and Goodness towards the Creature.—Just as the Law could not make Sin, or Evil, but because it has no Sin or Evil in itself, but is immutably righteous, holy, and good, and has only one Will and one Work towards Man, whether he receives Good or Evil by it.—Therefore the righteous, holy Law, that is so, because it never changes its good Will, and Work towards Man, can truly say of itself these two contrary Things, I create Good, and I create Evil, without the least Contradiction.—In the like Truth, and from the same Ground, it must be said, that Happiness and Misery, Life and Death, Tenderness and Hardness of Heart, are from God, or because God is that which He is, in and to the Birth and Life of Man.

This is the one true Key to the State of Man before his Fall, to his State after his Fall, and to the whole Nature of his Redemption. All which three States, are in a few Words of our Saviour, set forth in the clearest and strongest Degree of Light. 'I am the true Vine, ye are the Branches. He that abideth in Me, and I in him, bringeth forth much Fruit.' This was Man's first created State of Glory and Perfection, it was a living and abiding in God, such a Birth and Communion of Life with him, and from him, as the Branch hath in and from the Vine.

The Nature of Man's fallen State, and whence he has all the Evil that is in it, is set forth in the following Words, 'If a Man 'abide not in me' (the true Vine) 'he is cast forth as a Branch, 'and is withered, and Men gather them, and they are cast into 'the Fire and burned.' This comprehends the whole of Man's fallen State, namely, a being broken off from the Life of God, and therefore become such a poor, withered, helpless Creature, as may have all that done to him, as a Firebrand of Hell and Devils, which Men may do to a broken off, withered Branch of the Vine. And his State is as different from that of his Creation, as a withered Branch, smoking and burning in the Fire, is different from its first State of Life and Growth in the rich Spirit of the Vine.—Again, the whole of Man's redeemed State, is in the following Words,—'I am the Bread of Life, that came down 'from Heaven ;—He that eateth this Bread shall live for ever ;—'Whoso eateth my Flesh and drinketh my Blood, hath eternal 'Life,—dwelleth in me, and I in him.'

This is our whole Redemption, it consists in nothing else, but having the full Life of God, or Birth of Christ begotten, and born in us again.—And thus do these three States of Man fully show, that our first Perfection, our miserable Fall, and blessed Redemption, have all that they have in them, whether of Glory, or Misery, merely and solely because God alone is all that is good, and can be nothing else but good towards the Creature ; and that neither Angel, nor Man can be happy or miserable, but because it either hath, or hath not, this one God of Goodness essentially living and operating in it.

What a Number of Things called Religion, are here cut off at once? since nothing is Life, Happiness, and Glory, but the one essential Operation of the Triune God of Love, and Goodness within us ; nothing is Death, Evil, or Misery, but the Departure, or turning from this essential God of our Lives, to something that we would have from ourselves, or the Creatures that are about us.—And how greatly is he deluded, who living among the Throng of religious Schemes, thinks this, or that, or any Thing in Nature, can be his Atonement, his Reconciliation, and Union with God, but the Spirit, the Body, and the Blood of Christ forming themselves into a new Creature within him. Then, and then only is he that first Man that God created, in whom alone he can be well pleased. But till then, he is that Man, whom the Cherub's two-edged flaming Sword will not suffer to enter into Paradise.—How is it now, that we are to regain that first Birth of Christ? Why just in the same Way, as Adam had it at first. What did he then do? How did he help forward God's creating Power?—Now creating again, or restoring a first Life in God, is just the same thing, and the same sole Work of God, as creating us at first; and therefore we can have no more Share of Power in the one, than in the other.—Nothing lies upon us as Creatures fallen from God, or is required of us with Regard to our Growth in God, but not to resist That, which God is doing towards a new Creation of us.

That which God is doing towards the new Creation of us, had its Beginning before the Foundation of the World.—'In Christ 'Jesus,' saith St. Paul, 'we were chosen before the Foundation 'of the World;,' the same as saying, that God out of his great Mercy, had chosen to preserve a Seed of the WORD and SPIRIT of God in fallen Man, which through the Mediation of a God incarnate, should revive into that fulness of Stature in Christ Jesus, in which Adam was at first created. And all this Work of God towards a new Creation, is by that same essential Operation of God in us, which at first created us in his Image and Likeness. And therefore Nothing belongs to Man in it, but only to yield himself up to it, and not resist it.

Now who is it, that may be said to resist it? It is everyone who does not deny himself, take up his Cross daily, and follow Christ. For everything but this, is that Flesh that warreth against the Spirit. The whole Life of the natural Man, resisteth all that essential Operation of God, which would create us again in Christ Jesus.—Further, every Religious Man resisteth it, in and by and through the whole Course of his Religion, who takes anything to be the Truth of Piety, the Truth of Devotion, the Truth of Religious Worship, but Faith, and Hope, and Trust, and Dependence upon That alone, which the All-Creating WORD, and All-Sanctifying SPIRIT of God, inwardly, essentially, and vitally worketh in his Soul.

Would you know, how you are to understand this essential Operation of the Triune holy Deity in our Souls, and why nothing else is, or can be that Grace or Help of God, which bringeth Salvation, take this earthly Similitude of the Matter.

The Light and Air of this World, are universal Powers, that are essential to the Life of all the Creatures of this World.

They are essential, because Nothing sees, till the Light has brought forth a Birth of itself in the Essence of the Creature, which Birth of Light can last no longer, than it is essentially united with the Operation of that universal Light which brought it forth:—Air is also essential to the Life of the Creature, because nothing lives, till a Birth of the Air is born in it, nor any longer, than its own in-born Air, is in essential Union with that universal Air, and Operation of Air, that first brought it forth.—Now from this essential, unalterable Relation between Light and Air, and seeing, living Creatures, it plainly follows, that Darkness and Death, may be ascribed to them, as well as Seeing and Life.

Thus, if Light and Air could say anything of themselves in outward Words, of that which they are, and do to all Animals; If the Light was to say, It is I that make seeing and blind Eyes; If the Air was to say, I create Life, and I create Death; could there be any Difficulty of understanding, or allowing the Truth of these Words? Or could they be true in any other Sense, but because where Light is not, there is the Cause of Darkness, and where Air is not, there is the Cause of Death.—And so in the strictest Truth of the Words, seeing and blind Eyes are from the Light; living and dead Bodies are from the Air. Because Darkness could not be, but because Light does not shine in it, nor the Body be dead, but because the breathing of the Air is not in it.

It is thus, with the essential Operation of the Triune Holy God, in the Life of all Divine and godly Creatures, whether Men or Angels.—The Light and Holy Spirit of God, are universal Powers, and essential to the birth of a godly Life in the Creature; which creaturely Birth of a Divine Life, can begin no sooner, than the WORD and SPIRIT of God bring forth a Birth of themselves in the Creature, nor subsist any longer, than it is united with, and under the continual Operation of that Word and Spirit, which brought it forth.—Hence it is truly said, that spiritual Life, and spiritual Death, spiritual Good and spiritual Evil, Happiness and Misery are from God, and that for this one Reason, because there is no Good, but in God, nor any other Operation of God in, and to the Creature, but that of heavenly Life, Light, Love, and Goodness.

When Man, created in the Image and Likeness of God, to be an Habitation and Manifestation of the Triune God of Goodness, had by the Perverseness of a false Will, turned from his holy State of Life in God, and so was dead to the blessed Union, and essential Operation of God in his Soul, yet the Goodness of God towards Man, altered not, but stood in the same good Will towards Man as at the first, and willed, and could will nothing else towards the whole human Nature, but that every Individual of it, might be saved from that State of Death and Misery in an earthly Nature, into which they were fallen.

Hence, that is, from this unchangeable Love of God towards Man, which could no more cease, than God could cease, came forth that wonderful Scene of Providence, of such a variety of Means, and Dispensations, of Visions, Voices, and Messages from Heaven, of Law, of Prophecies, of Promises and Threatenings, all adapted to the different States, Conditions, and Ages of the fallen World, for no other End, but by every Art of Divine Wisdom, and Contrivance of Love, to break off Man from his earthly Delusion, and beget in him a Sense of his lost Glory, and so make him capable of finding again that blessed essential Operation of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit in his Soul, which was the essential Glory of his first Creation.

Now, as in this Scene of a Divine and redeeming Providence, God had to do with a poor, blind, earthly Creature, that had lost all Sense of heavenly Things, as they are in themselves, so the Wisdom of God, must often, as it were, humanize itself, and condescend to speak of himself after the Manner of Men. He must speak of his Eyes, his Ears, his Hands, his Nose, &c., because the earthly Creature, the mere natural Man, could no otherwise be brought into any Sense of That, which God was to him.

But now, all this Process of Divine Providence, was only for the sake of something higher; the Mystery of God in Man, and Man in God, still lay hid, and was no more opened, than the Mystery of a redeeming Christ, was opened in the Type of a Paschal Lamb.

Pentecost alone was That, which took away all Veils, and showed the Kingdom of God, as it was in itself, and set Man again under the immediate, essential Operation of God, which first gave Birth to a holy Adam in Paradise. Types and Shadows ended, because the substance of them was found. The cloven Tongues of Fire had put an End to them, by opening the Divine Eyes, which Adam had closed up, unstopping the spiritual Ears, that he had filled with Clay, and making his dumb Sons to speak with new Tongues.

And what did they say? They said all old Things were gone, That a new Heaven and a new Earth were coming forth, That God himself was manifested in the Flesh of Men, who were now all taught of God. And what were they taught? That same which Adam was taught by his first created Life in God, namely, that the immediate, essential Operation of Father, Son, and

Holy Spirit, was henceforth the Birthright of all that were become true Disciples of Christ.—Thus ended the old Creation, and the Fall of Man, in a God manifested in the Flesh, dying in and for the World, and coming again in Spirit, to be the Life and Light of all the Sons of Adam.

Look now at all God's Dispensations to the Day of Pentecost, in this true point of View, as so many Schools of different Discipline and Education of the natural Man, till by a Birth from above, he could bear the Language of Heaven, and be taught of God, and then you will sufficiently see the childish Folly of those gray-headed Doctors, who forgetting that the last Times are come, when God will be known only as a Spirit, worshipped only in Spirit, because everything else is but Shadow, and not the Truth, yet set up themselves as Masters, or Rabbies of new Schools of their own, which can only keep up that doting Learning, and Wisdom of Words, which compelled the learned Jews, for the sake of God, and Goodness, for the sake of Law and Prophecy, to crucify the Christ of God, as a Beelzebub, and Blasphemer.

This old Logic and Criticism of Scribes and Pharisees, is that which robs disputing Christians of the Truth as it is in Jesus, and instead of the true Bread that came down from Heaven, feeds their unregenerate Hearts with the dry Husks of That, which can be got from Text set against Text in the outward Letter. Nay so wise are these verbal Proficients, as to think the Gospel must be false, and the Bible itself only fit to be burned, if all That, is not to be ascribed to God, as true of him, as he is in himself, which in Condescension to the poor, ignorant, fallen, earthly Creature, he speaks of his Eyes, his Ears, his Hands, his turning his Back, and turning his Face, his coming down, and going up, his fiery Wrath, his destroying Fury, everlasting Vengeance, &c., &c.—Whereas all these Things are said, not because of That, which God is in himself, in his holy, supernatural Being, but because of that, which Man is, in the Blindness of his fallen State, so ignorant of God, so averse to Godliness, as only capable for a Time, to be instructed by the Impressions of such Language:—That is, till the Threatenings of the Law, and the Word of Prophecy have done their Work, and that Day-Star ariseth in the Heart, which knoweth, and teacheth, that CREATOR, REDEEMER, and LOVE, are the one true unchangeable, Triune God, that Father, that Son, and Holy Spirit, which from Everlasting to Everlasting have only one Will, and one Work of heavenly Life, Light, and Love in, and towards the Creature.—And as true as this is, so true is it also, that from the first to the last Man, no one was, or ever will be any further from this essential Operation of the holy Deity in his Soul, but so far as he hath withdrawn himself from it.—‘God ‘hardened the Heart of Pharaoh;’ this saith neither more nor less, than that Pharaoh had withdrawn his Heart from God. When God saith to Moses, ‘I will harden his Heart, that he will ‘not let the People go;’ it hath no other Meaning, than to give to Moses that same full Assurance of Pharaoh’s State, which he gave to Jeremiah at another Time. ‘Thou shalt’ (saith God) ‘speak all these Words to them,’ (N.B.) ‘but they will not hearken to thee, thou shall call unto them, but they will not answer thee,’ Jer. vii. 27.—God helped Pharaoh to his hardened Heart, just as he helped Adam not to be afraid of eating of the evil Tree, by assuring him, that certain Death was hid in it.—But Adam’s turning from God, to hear the Voice and Instruction of his own Reason and Imagination, and the Suggestions of a satanical Serpent, was that which created in him a new hardened Heart, bold enough to eat of the forbidden Tree.—Now here, Sir, I would have you observe, that this Rise of the first Sin, fully demonstrates how the Matter unalterably stands between God and every Sinner, to the end of the World; there cannot be the smallest Variation, either on the side of God, or on the side of the Sinner. The whole Nature of God, his one unalterable Will and Work, stands in the same full Opposition and Contrariety to every Work, of Sin in every Man, as it did to Adam’s first Transgression. Nothing new will ever be in any Sin, it has but one Way of coming into the World, it must always be born out of Self and Satan, as the first was.—And that which God did to prevent the first Sin, saying to Adam, Eat not, that same miraculous Voice of Love, keeps saying, and saying to every Son of Adam, Sin not.

Yet so wise in the Ways of God, are some Divinity-Students, as to teach and preach, that the whole World, through its thousands of Years, has been bringing forth its millions of Myriads of Sinners all round the Globe, who as soon as they have done with the Vanity and Misery of this World, are to be roaring in the hottest Fire of an eternal Hell. For what? Why, because they have been just as wicked, as the Decrees of God required and forced them to be. And also through every Age of the World, there hath always been a little Number of Righteous, who were to go to Heaven, which Number had no Littleness in it, but because God would not suffer it to be greater.

Can a Charge like this be brought against Satan? Nay, doth it not even free Satan from all the Evil that is charged upon him, and make him, though going about as a roaring Lion, to be as insignificant a Tool in the Work of Sin, as the Preacher is in the Work of Godliness, though with ever so loud a Voice, he beseeches the Reprobate to be reconciled to God, or with Tears in his Eyes, exhorts the Elect not to depart from him?

You once, I remember, said to me, that you thought I over did the Matter, in my Censure upon Learning.—Let Learning therefore speak for itself. Let its own Works praise it. What has it done? What has brought forth a Multiplicity of Churches, but that very same Acuteness of Learning, which asserts and proves there is but One? Whence comes Transubstantiation, Election, Reprobation, Justification of several Sorts, Necessity and Insignificancy of Works, Socinianism, Arianism, &c., but from that Knowledge of History, and critical Skill in Words, which is the Glory of the learned World.

‘Without me ye can do nothing,’ saith Christ.—‘That which a Man soweth, that shall he reap,’ saith the Apostle. Truths like these, of which the Scripture is full, would keep all Believers in the true Church, attentive to the one thing needful, had not a Learning falsely so called, filled all Eyes with the Dust of Darkness.

Now, Sir, be as sober as you will about the Use and Power of Learning, Logic, and Eloquence, in the Doctrines of Salvation; condemn the bad use that Heretics, Schismatics, Arians and Socinians have made of them; yet let me whisper this Truth into your Ear, that you will never be delivered from the Delusion and Cheat of your own Learning, till by a Light of Life risen up within you, you come to see, and know, that you want no more Learning, to change you from a Sinner into a Saint, than Mary Magdalen did.

God said to Abraham, ‘Walk before me, and be thou perfect.’ This was the Hebrew School, in which the Father of the Faithful, was to learn to be perfect.—But here now comes the Scholar-Critic, and finds, that Matters stand not thus now, because the glorious Light of the Gospel (he says) has discovered that all lies in an Election and Reprobation, and that Salvation and Damnation come from nothing else, the Apostle expressly saying, ‘It is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth Mercy.’—What a learned Strife has there been about the Meaning of these Words? And yet they mean not one Jot more or less, than when the Apostle saith, ‘The natural Man knoweth not the Things of the Spirit, neither can he know them.’—All that is in the one Text, is in the other; and both of them say only this one great and good Truth, namely, that the Creature can have no Divine Life, Light, Goodness, and Happiness, but from That, which the holy Triune God is, and operates by a Birth of his holy Nature in it.

Farewell.

FINIS.

LETTERS

TO A

LADY

Inclined to enter into the

COMMUNION

OF THE

CHURCH OF ROME.

By WILLIAM LAW, M.A.

LONDON:

Printed by J. PHILLIPS, in George-Yard,
Lombard-Street, for H. PAYNE, at
No. 67, Pall-Mall. 1779.

Letters to a Lady inclined to enter the Romish Communion.

Letter I.

Madam,

YOUR complaint against the church, as chargeable with permitting the licentiousness of the press, is not just ; for the church, as such, has no more right to regulate or restrain the press, than to make laws about peace or war, or prohibit gentlemen from wearing swords, or corrupting the world with the free use of their riches and power. The licentiousness of the press is certainly a great evil, and has dreadful effects ; but the church has no other support against it, but that which it has against the world, the flesh, and the devil. It may be as suitable to the wisdom and goodness of God, and answer the same ends of his All-wise Providence, to suffer these times to fall under the trial of a persecution from the press, as to suffer former ages to be so dreadfully persecuted by merciless tyrants : and it may be as unreasonable to think the church defective in not restraining the licentiousness of the press, which betrays so many Christians into infidelity, and staggers weak minds ; as to think the Providence of God was defective in suffering tyrants to exercise such cruelty in former ages upon Christians, as forced numbers of them into apostasy.

I cannot pass by one thing in your papers, though it is a digression from the matter in hand. You say, ' You think the Scriptures are in nothing plainer, than in the doctrine of predestination and absolute decrees, in the strictest sense ; nay, you think hardly anything is so plain, as that is : yet you are afraid to think upon that doctrine, it so perplexes you ; you see undeniable reasons for believing it, but cannot answer the difficulties that attend it.' But if it were thus, Madam, would you not see too many undeniable reasons or causes, why your friend was in such a state as he is in, or why this or that church was in such a condition ? For, if all things are effects of absolute decrees in the strictest sense, to inquire why any man or men are in such a state or condition, is to ask why fire is not water ? Suppose you were told, that God sent angels and spirits to exhort trees to be of no shape, or mountains to turn themselves into birds : would not the manifest absurdity of such a thing, sufficiently prove to you the absolute impossibility of it? could you think it a matter of dispute, or solemn inquiry? But if you are told, that God sends angels and prophets to exhort mankind to forsake their sins and practise holiness, on pain of eternal punishment, when they are under eternal absolute decrees, and fatal necessity of being what they are; is not the absurdity as great as in the former case, heightened with the addition of the highest injustice? Religious duties, and exhortations to them, necessarily suppose some degree of liberty: if, therefore, it be plain from Scripture, that mankind are under absolute decrees, it must be plain also, that there are, in Scripture, no exhortations to religious duties, no suppositions that men are capable of receiving or rejecting good advice, &c., for these things can no more subsist together, than the opposite parts of a direct contradiction. All that is plain in Scripture about predestination, is only this: God has an eternal knowledge of, and exercises an eternal providence over all things that are; the justice, wisdom, and goodness of which, are not possible to be comprehended by creatures of our size, but are to be believed and adored by all that are capable of piety, humility, and faith towards God. And to pretend to know the nature of God's decrees, or the effects of them; how far they ordain, and how far they permit; how far they inwardly or outwardly influence our wills; to pretend to any absolute knowledge in such secrets of Divine Providence, or to state them according to our comprehensions of them; is much more unreasonable, than to pretend to state the methods by which God supports the vegetable and animal world. When we look into the methods of God's predestination or providence, we should only be affected with it, as St. Paul was, when he cried out, 'O the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!' But now, Madam, if St. Paul had thought it the plainest thing in Scripture, that all mankind are under absolute decrees in the strictest sense, could he have cried out as he did? could he have said, that 'God's ways were past finding out,' if he had found them to be in absolute decrees? To return:

Another reason for your apprehending a not sufficient safety in the church of England, proceeds thus: you say, 'If people were to live up to the obligations of Christianity, the world would then be only too happy a place, and we should have no temptation to wish for a remove. Whence then, you ask, 'is this great defection?' And then you conclude thus: 'Surely, was our religion, as by law established, such as it ought to be, God's grace would more sensibly attend the use of his ordinances, and we should see all in earnest in things of the greatest con-

'cernment.' It may be answered, First, Had you lived in any of the ages preceding the reformation, I believe the complaint of a general defection might have been more justly made; and, therefore, the reformation cannot be justly charged with it. Secondly, If you were now a member of the Romish church in any nation abroad, perhaps you might have full as great, if not greater reason, to put the same question as you have here. Thirdly, As it would be unreasonable to think, that the Jews so frequent falling into abominable idolatry, was owing to some defect in the state of their church, or the benefit of their ordinances; so it may be as unreasonable, to impute the corruptions of Christians to any defect in their church, as an external means of holiness. And as the rights and institutions of the Jews not having their proper effect upon their hearts, could not be imputed to any defect in their ordinances, but to that which was in their own power; so ordinances of Christians not having their true effect upon the hearts of Christians, ought not to be imputed to any want of God's grace attending his ordinances, but to that liberty which we have of rendering them useless. Fourthly, You think, 'If all Christians were such as their religion requires them to be, the world would be too happy a place to wish for a remove.' This, Madam, proceeds upon mistake; for were Christians such as their religion requires them to be, they could have no happiness but in the hope of a remove: for there is nothing in the nature or design of Christianity, to turn this world into a state of happiness considered in itself. Christian perfection is nothing else, but a continual struggle with the world, the flesh, and the devil; and they that live best up to its rules, must be 'of all men most miserable,' were it not for their faith and hope of a remove. 'They who do not find this life a cross, have not found the way to heaven.' And though morality, as such, has a good influence on the peace and happiness of civil societies; yet Christian piety is to proceed so much further, has so much to oppose both within and without us, our corrupt nature has so much need of fiery trials and purifications, that it is one end of our Saviour's crucifixion and sufferings to show us, that 'all his followers must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.' It is no objection, therefore, against Christianity, or the excellency of any particular church, that it does not put an end to the troubles and vexations of human life. Fifthly, To build any doctrine, or form any judgment, upon a supposed general corruption, is proceeding with great uncertainty: for though we cannot help seeing a great and general corruption of Christians in this part of the world where we live; yet, how general it is, what proportion it bears to the body of Christians, how far it is more or less than in other parts of Christendom, is not to be known by us. When the prophet complained to God, that 'All Israel was fallen away;' the answer was, that 'There were seven thousand men in Israel, who had not bowed the knee to Baal.' How many hundred thousands there may be in our church, who are receiving the continual benefits of God's ordinances; and have a better right to complain of the defections and corruptions of others, than either you or I may have; is only known unto God, and can by no means be known to either of us. Can you think the state of your own family, an argument of the want of God's grace attending the ordinances of the church? Do you know of no near relations or friends, who are serious Christians, happy in the enjoyment of their religion, and sincerely bent upon doing their duty to God? I persuade myself, you have not been without very strong domestic proofs of the power of religion, and the happy effects of such means as the church affordeth to preserve its members in a state of holiness and piety: and how can you tell what numbers of families may be in the same, or a much better state? Every private person, who has hardly ever been out of the town in which he was born, is apt to think, that he knows the religious state of the world; whereas the greatest experience, founded upon the best means of information, must leave everyone in great ignorance of it: and much more difficult is it, to pretend to state how far the disorders of Christians are owing to the external state of the church, the fitness of its institutions, or to the internal liberty which all have, of rendering the means of grace ineffectual to them. To observe the general corruption of Christians, may be a very useful reflection; but it is only so, when it moves us to a profound humility, excites our zeal in the reformation of our own lives, and fills us with tenderness, charity, and intercession for those who neglect it. Lastly, To ask, 'Why such a state of things?' or, 'How, supposing a sufficiency of Divine Grace, men could be 'in such a state?' is an unreasonable anxiety, and blamable curiosity: for what is there in all the Bible, to make us think ourselves qualified, either to ask or answer such questions; or, that any part of our duty depends upon the knowledge of them? Nay, it is the very end and intent of all Revelation, to silence such inquiries; and to show us how that disorder of heart and mind from whence they proceed, is to be cured. Where could there be any room for that infant simplicity, that profound humility, that implicit faith, that high adoration of the infinite ways and methods of an infinitely wise and good Creator, if such questions as these could be solved by us? How unreasonably should we be told of the blindness and disorder of our nature, if we could measure or fathom such depths of an Infinite Providence? For what could be a secret to us, if we knew the nature of man, and the nature of God, to perfection? But, without such knowledge, it cannot be possible for us to see how far the Eternal Providence of God, and the liberty of man, have been jointly the cause of so many different states of perfection, or corruption, in human life. You would not think it proper in anyone, to be anxious in his inquiries into the reason of the fall of angels, or why their state seems to be irrecoverable, or why God seems to be represented as treating our fall with more compassion than theirs. You would think it very blamable in a man, to be at a stand in his religion, to doubt whether he should be all zeal, and love, and devotion to God, for his mercies in Christ Jesus, 'for the means of grace, and for the hope of glory,' because he could not resolve these difficulties relating to the state of angels, or the justice of God's dealings with them. Now it is the same unreasonable anxiety, to want to know how so many Christians, in a sufficient state of grace, can fall into such corruptions; as to want to know how angels could fall, or fall as they did. Such anxieties as these, are to have no allowed place in the meek and lowly spirit of the followers of Jesus Christ, but are all to be buried in a profound resignation to the adorable Providence of God: and if, through weakness and infirmity, they sometimes intrude upon our minds, we must resist them, as we do other thoughts that are contrary to piety.

I agree with you, in your opinion of the methods made use of to begin and carry on the reformation; the bare history of it is satire enough. But then, the history of Popes, written by persons of their own communion, the methods of gaining and supporting the papal power, and the frequent unjust executions of it, are as large and undeniable a history of scandal. So that there seems to be little room for private judgment to form any opinion concerning the excellency of one church above the other, on that account; or to think, that God's blessing must be with the one, and not with the other, because of those external means which have been called in to their assistance. You wonder, that God's judgments did not suddenly overtake the reformers; and many seemingly good and learned Christians have often wondered, that the papal tyranny has so long escaped them. From whence, I think, we may collect, how much we are out of our way, when we are guessing at the fitness of God's judgments: and, perhaps, they may then be executing in the severest manner, when we are wondering why they do not fall. I have so much trust and confidence in the Goodness of God in the care of his church, that I hope the means of Christian salvation are fully preserved both in the English and Romish communion, for all such as are disposed to make a right use of them ; and that the guilt of any sinful proceedings, past or present, of those that either have or had the government of either church, extends no further than to those that either are or have been the causes of such sinful proceedings. Let us suppose that it was the lust of Henry VIII. and the temporal claims and usurpations of the Pope, that occasioned the schism : that Henry, to support himself, commits sacrilege of all kinds, and stops at no injustice ; that the Pope, to preserve his power, excites to rebellion, and calls subjects from their natural allegiance : supposing all this injustice on both sides, does it follow, that communion in either or both churches became unlawful to these, who had not only had no hand in the beginning or continuance of such injustices, but heartily grieved for them, and prayed to God to put an end to them ? Usurpations and false claims appeared on each side, and the King and the Pope seem to be equally blamable in the measures they took to support them. The convocation in England, and the council of Trent, proceeded in such a manner, as to leave it very doubtful, which of them contributed most to establish the schism. But was the church lost, when it became thus divided ? Were baptism, the holy eucharist, and all the sacred offices of Divine worship, no longer of any benefit to the true lovers of Jesus Christ, friends to holiness, purity, and unity ? Did they lose the means of salvation, pray to and worship God in vain, receive fruitless sacraments, not because they were unworthy to receive the benefits of them, not because they had done anything ill themselves, but because they did not govern their governors, and do that which they had neither power nor any right to do ? How comes it to be an uncontested maxim in religion, that the personal vices of the priest do not render the sacraments useless to those who receive them from his hands ? Is it not, because it is too absurd, too contrary to Scripture, to common reason, the goodness of God, and the ends of the sacraments, to suppose the contrary ? Is it not, because all sins are personal ; and only so far chargeable upon any person, as they are his own voluntary acts ?

Should it be objected, ' That there is a contagion in schism ; ' and that all in a schismatical communion are affected with it, ' and as such in a state of schism : ' It is answered, The contagion of schism is just like the contagion of all other sins ; so far as we are accessory to anything sinful, either in aiding, defending, or approving it, so far we are under the contagion or guilt of it : and so far as the cause, or continuance of schism, can be chargeable upon any man, by what he does in a schismatical communion ; so far is he under the guilt or contagion of schism, and no further. And to suppose that schism, the greatest and most dreadful of any sin, may be imputed to a man, without his having any hand in it, though at the same time it is allowed to be great injustice to charge a man with the guilt of the smallest offence in which he had no concern, is surely too gross an absurdity. Further, to make those people chargeable with the guilt of a schism, which they did not begin or continue by any act of their own; who have every sentiment of humility, charity, and meekness, that is contrary to it; who have nothing in their heart and spirit that is schismatical; to charge such persons with the contagion of schism, only because their governors, spiritual and temporal, make and have made laws prejudicial to the peace and unity of the church; is as absurd, as to conclude a man of an honest and just spirit guilty of injustice, because he lives under a master who makes little or no conscience of what he does, but is very tyrannical and oppressive.

Again, should it be asked, 'How can you communicate with a schismatical church, without partaking of its schism; since your act of communicating is an approbation of its terms of communion, and by that means is a consenting to and partaking of that which is schismatical in it?' It is answered, If I communicate with a church because it has such terms of separation from others, and am glad to see it so divided, and others so excluded from it; then, by communicating with a schismatical church, I partake of its schism. But if I communicate with it, not because it is so divided, or has such terms of communion; but because it is a church, and has the means of salvation in it; because it has an authority, though an abused authority, over me; and because I cannot renounce its communion, and enter into any other church, without making myself a party with those who also schismatically condemn and divide from its communion; if these are the principles that keep me in the communion of any church, neither entering into it because it is divided, nor leaving it because I dare not abet the principles that divided from it; it seems to be against all the principles of equity, reason, and religion, to lay schism to my charge. For what is it that has made the schism, but the unreasonable quarrels, and unjust claims of the governors on both sides? Can I undo what they have done, by my changing sides? can I clear myself of schism, by being a party with one against the other, when both are to blame in what they do? can I be made guilty by schismatical laws, which had none of my consent nor approbation? I stay in the church of England, because Providence has placed me in its communion, and because it has the terms of salvation; I wish everything that is schismatical in it was removed, by those who have a power of removing it; I do not go over to the church of Rome, because that would be showing my approbation of those reasons on which the governors of that church proceed in their division from others, and would make me guilty of all the wrong steps that they have taken. This is not the case of those who are educated in that church; they may be free from all the schismatical or unjust proceedings of their governors, as the private members of any other church may; but it seems to be the case of those that renounce the church of England for that of Rome: such an act, I think, must make them a party to all that the church of Rome has done in relation to the schism. These seem to be the only principles of piety and religion, for serious Christians to found their peace upon, in this divided state of the church, where the division is wholly owing to the unreasonable claims and uncharitable proceedings of the governors on both sides, and where both retain all that is of the essence of religion. The whole of this matter seems to stand thus:

First, The beginning of this schism could only be charged upon those, on both sides, who began it, and acted as causes of it; it could not take away the means of salvation, or render sacraments useless to those who were no way assistant to it.

Secondly, The continuance and guilt of the schism can only be charged upon those, on both sides, who continue or help to continue it, either as defending what is already wrong done, or by proceeding in further unjustifiable methods; but cannot take away the terms of salvation, on either side, from those who have no hand in continuing it, but wish to see everything removed that is prejudicial to the peace and unity of the church of Christ.

Thirdly, The contagion or guilt of schism is contracted as the guilt of any other sin is, only by personal acts of concurrence in that which is schismatical. And to suppose that the contagion or guilt of schism may be secretly and unknowingly conveyed to those, that are in a state of spirit and life contrary to all that is schismatical; is as absurd as to say, that an innocent man may be secretly and knowingly involved in the guilt of a murder, which with all his heart and hand he desired to prevent.

Fourthly, Supposing churches thus schismatically divided by the unreasonable and unjust proceedings of the governors on both sides, all the private members of each communion are in great danger of being more or less involved in the guilt of schism: 1st, As they are in danger of being educated in schismatical principles, in fury, and party zeal, in hatred and contempt of those who are of a different church, and by that means made blind and furious defenders of unjust and schismatical laws, and so involved in the guilt of them in some degree. 2ndly, As they are thereby much exposed to the temptation of temporal motives, to take an advantage of the divided state of the church, and, by being clamorous defenders, writers, and preachers of certain principles, make their court either to prince or people. 3rdly, As honest and well-meaning minds are thereby exposed to great mistakes in religion; to be content with their state, because they are zealously affected to certain notions; to be ignorant what spirit they are of; and to place the perfection of Christianity in the exercise of those passions, which Christ came into the world to destroy. These are the miserable effects of schism, to which the private members of each communion are constantly exposed; and whether we look at home or abroad, we shall find equal proofs of this observation. So that, though a man is not necessarily a schismatic, because he lives in a schismatical communion; yet he is in great danger of thereby entering into schismatical principles and passions, and of living in false and erroneous notions of religion; for the religion of the Gospel seems to be unobserved, unthought of, whilst both parties are contending for a national orthodoxy: and though the Unity of the Church of Christ is the common pretence for which all passions and all arms are employed, yet it seems to be schism only that is defended on both sides. A man need only look into the controversy on both sides, to see the miserable effects of division; how sadly time, and parts, and learning, are employed in wrangle, calumny, and misrepresentation, in furnishing fresh matter for the corruption of our hearts, for hatred and schism to subsist upon. To such a height have learning and orthodox labours carried this hatred and schism, that every attempt for clearing up misunderstandings, and showing that Christians need not hate one another as they do, is, by both parties, treated as the attempt of some false brother, or enemy to the Christian religion; and he that should only say unto them, as Moses said unto the Israelites, 'Sirs, ye are brethren, why do ye wrong one to another?' might have Moses's reward for his pains. What is, therefore, left for us to do, Madam, but to devote ourselves to such penitence, piety, and prayer, as the Heavenly Spirit of the Gospel requires of us; and to make the best use of the sacraments and institutions of Christ, that the present state of the church affordeth? We can neither stay in one communion, nor go into another, but we are in the same state, as to the Unity of the Church; every part is in a state of division, and chargeable with contributing to the cause of it. The thing that we are to look for, therefore, is, not to be out of a divided part of the church, which is impossible, till it pleases God to alter the state of Christendom; but, that we may live in these divided schismatical and uncharitable parts of Christendom, free from schismatical principles and passions, and wholly attentive to everything that the most ardent love of God, the most perfect love of our neighbour, and the highest imitation of the Spirit, Life, and Sufferings of our blessed Saviour, require of us.

226 Letters to a Lady inclined to

Observe, Madam, in the first place, All this reasoning proceeds upon a supposition, that the divided state of Christendom is truly chargeable upon that, which every divided part contributes towards it; so that the schism is not the schism of any one part, but of every part of whole Christendom unreasonably and uncharitably at variance in itself: to lay this schism separately either upon the Grecian, Roman, or Reformed church, seems equally unreasonable, and the effect of the same passion and partiality. Secondly, It supposes the means of salvation to be fully preserved in these divided parts. This, as to the church of England, seems to be plainly granted by the church of Rome; since history attests, that the Roman Catholics, for several years after the reformation, contented themselves with our communion. Thirdly, This reasoning does not suppose, that the great divided parts of Christendom are equally to blame as to the schism; or that they have the same number of corruptions, or false demands, that occasion it. Two persons may be both unreasonable, and justly chargeable with a difference betwixt them; but yet one may have more practices or tempers to recede from than the other, in order to peace; and this may be the case of the divided churches. Fourthly, It does not suppose, that each divided communion, though containing the full means of salvation, is equally desirable, or has all the same helps to piety and holiness of life that the others have. If you ask, whether the church of Rome or England has the most helps to a solid and substantial piety, it is more than I pretend to answer; and, perhaps, it is a question, that cannot be absolutely or strictly determined, by considering those churches absolutely in themselves. For as most of the practices and usages, that are not of the essence of religion, but are mutable in their nature, and only appointed by ecclesiastical authority as helps to that which is essential to piety, may be more or less subservient to those ends in some different ages and places of the world, than in others; so that which has the nature of an excellent communion at one time and place, may not have that same excellence at every other time and place: thus, those very same usages, which may serve to carry people of such a climate and time to great perfection and piety, may lead away people of another nature and age from true religion. Had you and I learned our religion in Italy or Spain, perhaps we might not have had half that seriousness in religion, or regard for piety, that we now have ; and many people that are now saints in those countries, had they been educated in our church, might perhaps have fallen into libertinism. So that the excellency of one communion above another, as to these helps to piety, is very difficult to be stated by us, who know not for whom such things are best, and for whom they are not. In this respect, therefore, we are humbly to submit to the Providence of God ; and piously to believe, that His Goodness overrules this vast disorder and differences in churches, so as to make them subservient to the benefit of all parties that are disposed to make a right use of them. And confused as the world appears to be by the effects of these divisions, yet, for aught we know, Christianity, thus rent and torn, thus condemning and condemned, thus various in its outward forms, may continually present unto God a greater number of souls purified by faith and good works in Jesus Christ, than if the church had continued united in that state it was in before the reformation. The unreformed part of the church seems to have received no small benefit from the reformation itself ; first, as it raised an uncommon spirit of piety in many of their members, on account of the reproaches that were cast upon their communion : and secondly, as it put their governors under a necessity of departing from some practices, of removing some scandals, and of being more careful to prevent those idolatries and superstitions, with which their adversaries charged them in so violent a manner, and with so much appearance of reason.

That which seems sufficient to prevent all scrupulous anxiety in private persons, is this : I am a private member of a church that has the full means of salvation in it ; whether the practices and usages in which it differs from other churches, be fitter for the age and place in which I live, or would have a better effect upon myself and the generality of its members, than those of other churches, I cannot tell ; and as I have no ability, so I have no call or commission to judge in these matters ; they belong to those who, by the Providence of God, have the care of this church : and if, from any supposed betterness of another communion, I renounce this, in order to enter into that, I then quit my private station of safety, and by such an act make myself a party in the schism, and become a defender of the principles and proceedings of those who are and have been the causes of the schism. And if the divisions of Christendom be more or less the common crime of all the divided parts, then private persons cannot get out of a blamable communion by changing sides, but seem to have reason to content themselves with that communion which appears to want nothing, but the union that every other church equally wants. And though it is an easy thing for private persons to find books that have determined this point with great positiveness, and make one communion only right, and all others wrong, yet I cannot think in this manner; I see too much to be liked and disliked in every communion, to think that any side is free from objection, or that salvation is only to be had in one communion. And notwithstanding all sides pretend the primitive perfection to be with them, yet I believe all must alter their modern terms of communion, before the causes of the division can be laid to any one divided part exclusive of every other.

228 Letters to a Lady inclined to

You seem much pleased with Dr. Hickes's propositions concerning the Catholic church. Those propositions contain, perhaps, nothing erroneous in them; as they are an ideal description of such a state of order, as is truly consistent with the doctrines and institutions of Christ. But if you consider them any further, than as an ideal or speculative description of what the church might have been; if you consider them as a true description of its necessary state; and of such a church as every Christian must be a member of, in order to be of the true church; then these propositions have nothing to be liked in them, and they can be of no use to any Christian in the world to lead him to the true church. The reformation itself, in which Dr. Hickes received his orders, and of which he was a sufficiently zealous defender, could have no foundation upon these propositions; and it would be the last extravagance to suppose, that the nonjuring church was founded upon these propositions. If there are nonjurors that think the true catholic church is only in their communion, I think they are a thousand times less pardonable, than those that think so of the church of Rome. The nonjurors have no foundation to consider their communion as a distinct church from the established, or in a state of greater purity. Either they consider its laws and doctrines as theirs, or they do not: if they do, then the purity of that church is theirs also; if they do not, then they are new reformers without authority, and deserters of that which they accuse the conforming clergy of having deserted. If I could not communicate with them, but upon the terms of declaring the nullity and invalidity of the sacraments in the church of England, I should sooner communicate with the church of Rome upon the same terms. But if no church would receive me, but upon the terms of unchurching all the rest; I should think my best private prayers would be more acceptable to God in the unity and peace of my own heart, than outward communion with only one part purchased at that rate.

But Dr. Hickes's propositions you take to be a true account of the primitive state of the church, as it was at first instituted; and you suppose that, for the peace and good of the church, this state might receive alterations, and the Bishop of Rome be invested with that power which he long enjoyed, and now claims. Now, Madam, this concession is sufficient to deliver you from all those scruples you are under, about the claim and authority of the Bishop of Rome over you. For, first, If this authority given him against the primitive constitution, was then just and valid, because it was given for the supposed good of the church; must not the taking away that authority be as just and valid, upon a supposed good of the church? In the giving him that authority, there was primitive institution against it; but in the taking it away, nothing was altered but their own mere human provision. And if great episcopal or national churches came under that authority by their own consent, upon their own reasoning about the good of the church; they must have the same power to recede from such authority, when the good of the church shall seem to them to require it. And if they are right, or wrong, in either of these cases, either as to first giving or afterwards taking away this power; it is a right and wrong that does not affect private Christians, or the church as a means of salvation in Christ Jesus, but wholly relates to themselves. But secondly, Supposing this power thus given, yet what was given was only spiritual power; and if this spiritual power is turned into temporal, and become a temporal tyranny, not only over spiritual persons, but over all temporal princes, and pretends further to exercise this temporal tyranny by virtue of its spiritual power; are not all bishops and churches under the greatest necessity to seek for temporal protection against a temporal tyrant, and to recall that spiritual authority, which was only a human grant, and which had been perverted to such bad ends? Besides, if, as you observe from Dr. Cave, patriarchs were at first instituted, because of the increase of bishops, and the different state of nations, in the first spreadings of the church; does not this sufficiently show, that the institution of patriarchs, or the nature of their power or districts, has nothing Divine in it, or of necessary observation to the nature of the church? Does it not show, that their institution arose from temporal changes in the church, and that the reason of them must follow the nature of the church? If, therefore, the temporal state of the church gave the existence, and the manner of existence, to the first patriarchs, must not the present temporal state of the church be as good reason for any changes in the nature of patriarchs? The temporal state of the church, from the apostolic age to the institution of the first patriarchs, was very little different; but in the present temporal state of the church, and its manner of existence in the established laws of so many kingdoms and nations upon the earth, there is an inconceivable difference from what it was at the first institution of patriarchs ; and is it not against all reason to ask what patriarchs were fifteen hundred years ago, to know what they ought to be now ? Patriarchs were what they were then, because the temporal state of the church required them to be what they were : but the present state of the church is infinitely different from what it was then ; is there not, therefore, the same reason for an infinite difference in the present patriarchs, from those of former times ? If, in the early growth of churches, patriarchs of such a kind were found convenient for peace and good order in the state of the church ; may not a much different alteration in the church be as good a reason either for having no patriarchal power, or of a very different nature from that which has been ratified in primitive councils ? or must we stay, till we can have just such primitive councils as those were ; that is, must we stay for an impossibility, before we can know that it is lawful to make that a rule for us now, which was a rule to them ? If a patriarch, fifteen hundred years ago, was found a convenient president over several churches ; and a patriarch now over several different churches established by civil laws under several different kings and princes, be found inconvenient and prejudicial to the common peace ; can any serious Christian find matter of uneasiness, because of modern changes in patriarchs, or even upon their total abolition ? Can it be any reason for my being afraid of the Bishop of Rome's patriarchal power over me, because an ancient council, before there was any national church in the world established by civil laws, says, ' Let the rights and jurisdictions of ' ancient patriarchs be observed.' Can this possibly be any rule for the rights or pretence of the Bishop of Rome above fourteen hundred years after that council ; or that a decree in favour of ancient patriarchs, suitable to the state of the church at that time, can be of any authority for retaining a patriarchal turned into the greatest temporal tyranny, and when the state of the times has nothing in common with the state of those ancient times ? Lastly, Supposing this patriarchate of Rome to be unnecessarily dissolved, what is the crime, and whose is it ? The crime is a mistake in a human provision concerning the external good government of bishops ; and if this mistake be made criminal through human passions, it is still only the crime and guilt of human passions in our governors. So that I see no foundation for scruples of piety in private persons, on this account.

Another reason for your inclination to the Romish communion, is ' on the account of some excellent books written by persons ' of that communion. You think their persons must have been 'very acceptable to God, and that they had very large assistances 'from him.' I think you judge exceeding right in both respects ; I think the same of a great many more of their writers, and bless God for the knowledge I have had of them. As I consider their church, and all its members, as my brethren in Christ, and as nearly related to me as any Protestants ; so it is the same satisfaction to me, to receive benefit from their church, as from that of England ; and I am as glad to find the increase of piety, or any extraordinary instances of it amongst them, as amongst ourselves. In my own heart I drop and forget all those divisions and distinctions which the enemy hath set up amongst us, and desire God to receive me and my devotions, as united with and recommended by all His Church in Heaven and on earth ; and by this oblation of myself to God, I trust to be received by him as truly of the same communion with all his saints, as if I had been a member of every particular church in which any of them lived. By this means I have the same comfort and joy, from the piety and prosperity of one part of the church, as from another : and being of this particular church, not because it is externally so divided, but because there is no other part free from the same external division, I consider every saint as a proof and testimony of God's blessing upon that church of which I am a member.

If the sentiments that I here send you are errors, I earnestly beg of God to prevent your being deceived by them ; and of his great mercy to pardon and deliver me from them : but if they are agreeable to truth and piety, I hope his Holy Spirit will assist you to find your peace and satisfaction in them. These are the prayers which I make to God both for you and myself, and hope that you will do the same both for yourself and me.

*I am,
Madam,
Your sincere friend,
WILLIAM LAW.*

May 24th, 1731.

Letter II.

Madam,

I PROCEED upon this supposition, that schism and corruption, speculative and practical errors, are more or less the common charge and guilt of all the divided parts of Christendom: and I only consider, how a person, who has no way been the cause of the beginning or continuance of this corrupt schismatical state of the Church, nor has any power of altering it, is to behave in such a state; and how he may escape the guilt of the schism and corruption, and live in truth, and love, and unity, a true member of the One Holy Catholic Church, in the midst of such external confusion and disorder. Here I have frankly and sincerely laid open to you the state of my own mind; and shown you every principle of my own particular conduct, and, as far as the compass of such a letter would permit, the reasons on which it is founded.

This, Madam, is the plain state of my own heart, and the foundation of my own peace and conduct, in the midst of this external division and disorder in the Church of God: I pray to God, in the name of Christ, united in heart and spirit with His Whole Church in Heaven and on Earth; and, therefore, I trust, that the schism, which reigns and runs through the whole Church, no more affects me than any other public or national guilt, in which I am neither an actor or an abettor. I hope, therefore, I may safely recommend it to your practice, to continue a member of one particular part of the Church, upon these principles of union and communion with the whole; to love the Church of Rome or Greece with the same affection, and with the same sense of Christian fellowship, as you love the Church of England; and to consider yourself, not as an external member of one in order to renounce communion with the other, but as necessarily forced into one externally divided part, because there is no part free from external division. And if there should be any mistake or weakness of judgment in this conduct, yet this I think may be said for it, that it seems to have so much foundation in humility, meekness, and Christian charity, and is at the same time so much the support of all those virtues in our hearts; that I think you cannot well be in a better state, either to have your error entirely pardoned, or your understanding better directed by God himself.

The apostle says, 'His commandments are not grievous;' but does he by this mean, that, therefore, he is no longer 'crucified

'to the world, and the world crucified to him'? The short of the matter is this: man fallen from innocence and perfection, can only turn to God as a penitent: he is, therefore, as such, turned out of Paradise, a place of heavenly enjoyment, into a world cursed for his sake, full of cross, and trouble, and burthen, and vanity, that he may there have continual occasion to exercise all the humble tempers of a pious penitence, and meet with every trial that may best purify and prepare his soul for its return to God. And when one considers how poorly and vainly human philosophy has, in all ages, talked about God, and religion; and, on the other hand, what a depth of wisdom and treasure of knowledge is discovered to us in the Scriptures, without any help from human parts, or human learning; it is easy to see from whence our light and knowledge in religion is to be expected, and who are the best qualified to partake of it.

If we look into history, we can hardly find any churchman remarkable for an uncommon extent of human learning, without having troubled the world with some inventions of his own, some fancied improvements upon the Common Christianity. The great Origen was one of the first instances of this kind; he was celebrated as the oracle of learning, as a possessor of all the sciences; along with this, he was of a very pious and mortified life, and full of contempt of the world: but, for my own part, I should have left his conversation, his deep discoveries, and allegorical explanations of Scripture, to have spent my time and learned religion with a poor mechanic that I have somewhere read of, whose heart and life was governed by this spirit: 'I am nothing, I have nothing, I am worth nothing: I desire nothing, but to love, adore, praise and obey God, in everything, and for everything.'

Were the world to see this remark upon learning, they would in all probability impute it to my want of learning; and though they would be very right in judging my pretensions to learning not to be great, yet it would be unjust to think me an entire stranger to the nature of it. But I profess to you, that whatever parts or learning I am possessed of, I think it as necessary to live under a continual apprehension of their being a snare and temptation to me, as of any worldly distinctions, whether of riches or dignity, that I should be possessed of: and I desire no other improvement of science or knowledge, nor to see into any depths, but such as penitence, humility, faith, hope, charity, the pure love of God, and an absolute resignation to his Providence, shall discover to me. These virtues fill the mind with more light and knowledge of God, than all the libraries of human learning in the world; and are a much shorter and surer way to the possession and enjoyment of Divine Truth, than that of turning over the endless volumes of the learned. They are the keys of Divine Knowledge, and afford an easy entrance to those that keep them: they make us friends of God; and, as such, always in a state of finding his certain care and guidance of us: they are, as it were, so many inward eyes of the soul, always receiving a sufficiency of light from God: and we never are at loss or perplexity, but when some of these Divine Virtues are either too imperfectly practised, or wholly neglected by us. I take the matter to be just thus with relation to the discourses about the restoration of all things, &c., they are about something that we have not the least knowledge of, nor any faculties or foundation for such knowledge: we have nothing certain or plain within ourselves about it, and so have nothing to oppose to anything that is told us; we are, therefore, easily taken by every writer, that has parts and abilities to form an agreeable scheme of it. Again, there is another thing which prepares our minds for a reception of such discourses. The irrecoverable state of men, or angels, is a dreadful thought to us; our sense of misery, tenderness, and compassion for our fellow-creatures, makes us wish that no creatures might fall into it; and we are unable to show how such a state should result from the Infinite Wisdom, Goodness, and Perfection of God; and so we are mightily prepared to think every scheme to be rational and well grounded, that puts an end to such a state. But then we must consider, that we are here governed by our passions and weakness, and only form a God according to our own conceptions: we must consider, that the Infinite Wisdom, Goodness, and Perfection of God, is the fathomless object of our faith and adoration, and not of our comprehension; and to pretend to know what God must do, by virtue of such attributes, in the vast compass of futurity, with regard to his fallen creatures, is as absurd, as to pretend to be infinitely wise ourselves. For as God is so, for this only reason, because he knows what Infinite Wisdom, Goodness, and Perfection, require of him; so if we knew that, we should be in the same state of perfection. The inability to account for the present disordered state of the creation, has made many philosophers turn atheists, and deny an Allwise and Good Providence: but these poor men are self-condemned, and fall into the greatest of all absurdities, only to avoid a difficulty that has no absurdity in it. They deny a Providence of an Infinitely Perfect Being, because they cannot account for such a Providence in the present state of things: and yet, if there was such a Providence, it could not be what it is supposed to be, unless it was infinitely above their comprehension: this is their great self-condemnation and absurdity. Again, they reject a First and Governing Cause of Infinite Wisdom, and Goodness, because they see so much evil and disorder in the world. But why do they conclude thus? It is from their own sense of wisdom and goodness: they feel such a goodness and benevolence in themselves, that they would not permit what they see permitted in the present state of things; and, therefore, they conclude, that such a state cannot come from, or be under the direction of a Cause of Infinite Wisdom and Goodness. But here they are again in a state of self-condemnation, and taken in the greatest of absurdities: for if they feel wisdom and goodness in themselves, whence have they them? As their existence is an infallible proof, that something did always exist; as everything finite is a proof of something infinite in the same kind; so their own wisdom and goodness is as plain and infallible a proof that the cause from whence they proceed, and under which they subsist, is Infinitely Wise and Good. So that for a being to argue from his own wisdom and goodness that the first Cause is destitute of both, has all the absurdity in it, as if he should conclude from his own power and life, that the First Cause from which he proceeds, and under which he subsists, is destitute of power and life. These absurdities must be embraced by those, who are too reasonable to adore an Infinitely Wise and Incomprehensible Providence. Deep and long thinking upon the Providence of God has an appearance of a very pious exercise; and a zeal to set it in some new light, or confute adversaries in some better way than common texts of Scripture, has often betrayed well-meaning men into measures prejudicial to religion; and that which they intended as a support to religion, has helped the adversary to oppose it with a greater show of argument. I am not against our using all the arguments that reason and learning can furnish us with, in defence of religion; but I think we are much mistaken, when we place our chief strength there, and conclude that Christianity must prosper, or infidelity decline, accordingly as all objections and difficulties are more or less cleared up and solved. For as religion never entered into the fallen world that way, by condescending to explain all the difficulties, or answer the objections that ignorance, malice, self-love, pride, curiosity, wit, or worldly learning, could bring against it; as no Revelation from God ever dealt in this manner, with this kind of adversaries; so it is against reason to think, that it must now, or at any other time, be supported in that manner. For these tempers have no right or claim to be answered or satisfied in their own way; as they are only so many disorders or corruptions of the soul, so they are to have no relief from religion, but that of dying before it.

236 Letters to a Lady inclined to

To give pride, self-love, or curiosity, the resolutions they require, would be keeping up the disorder of fallen spirits, which, as such, can only be saved by a religion that calls them to self-renunciation, to penitence, humility, faith, and absolute resignation to God. If speculative instructions, and resolutions of doubts, had been the right way of delivering man from the corruption and disorders of his nature; if nice and determinate decisions of the difficulties and depths of Providence, had been a proper requisite for entering into the Spirit of Christianity; can it be thought that our Blessed Lord would have said, 'Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye cannot enter into the kingdom of God'? But if an infant simplicity, if self-renunciation, if humility of heart, and a total resignation of ourselves to the Wisdom and Goodness of God, be proper and necessary dispositions of the soul that is to be saved through Christ; it cannot well be thought that Christianity is then best defended, or the hearts of people best assisted for the reception of it, or adherence to it, when speculative decisions of its matters of faith are most studied and appealed to. If all who wish well to Christianity, and are desirous to stop the growth of infidelity, would oppose it with their lives, and produce the practice of true Christian virtues in defence of religion; infidelity would sink into the utmost shame and confusion, and Christianity would be more than mathematically demonstrated to common-sense. But the misfortune is, that, in every attack, we think there is something wanted in point of argument, and so are racking our thoughts for something new in the way of reasoning; whereas the enemy is in his state of strength, and we in our state of weakness, because we are doing nothing but argue, and are contending for a dead Christianity: did we but begin its defence, by entering upon new lives, the old arguments would be sufficient.

You ask, 'When discoveries of this kind are thrown into our way, is it matter of strict duty to reject, instead of giving them entertainment, and not rather be grateful for them? And if we may not give them the credit of Divine Revelation, yet may we not entertain such things as probabilities, as a harmless entertainment of one's busy thoughts, as things that may innocently be believed or rejected?' I do not deny that there are such things. But if I knew of anybody that wanted them, or sought for relief in them, I should caution him against them; for such entertainment of our busy thoughts, is often as dangerous as the entertainment of our restless passions; because the activity and curiosity of our minds is not a little prejudicial to true devotion and piety of heart. If it could be supposed, that these probabilities would be always considered as we at first received them, there would be very little to be said for them; for why should our mind, which should be always in a state of reverence and adoration of Divine Truths, and feeding itself with solid enjoyment and satisfaction in them, seek for religious amusement in groundless imaginations? for supposing (what is here supposed) that they may be as innocently denied as believed, they can only be groundless imaginations. But when we consider the weakness of our minds, how easily they are affected with what they admit, and how soon that which was thought of only as an amusement or bare probability, is changed into a solid truth or fundamental point, we shall find that such entertainment is a dangerous indulgence of our thoughts. The matter you here propose, seems to be taking this very turn upon your own mind: you propose it as an innocent probability, or speculative amusement of one's busy thoughts; yet, a few lines after, you say, 'This does not, therefore, seem to be a matter of mere speculation, but of great use and benefit:' and perhaps a little longer dwelling upon it, would make you take it for a fundamental point, and that Christianity could not be received without it; and so the entertainment of busy thoughts would drive you upon a rock. Humility, faith, and a total resignation of ourselves to the fathomless depths of the Divine Providence, are our only guard against this danger. As the fall of our first parents, though in innocence, seems to be owing to the desire of a knowledge not suitable to their state; so we sin in the same temper, when our curiosity searches for higher knowledge than that which is revealed to us. It is an excellent saying of the son of Sirach, 'Seek not out the things that are too hard for thee; neither search the things that are above thy strength; but what is commanded thee, think thereupon with reverence. For it is not needful for thee to see with thine eyes the things that are in secret. Many are deceived by their own vain opinion, and an evil suspicion hath overthrown their judgment,' chap. iii.

I hope I shall not offend you by observing of your great and good father, whose memory I esteem and reverence, that his chief foible seems to have lain in a temper too speculative; and perhaps, you may have some reason to resist and guard against it, as a temper to which you have a natural inclination. But be that as it will, thus much I think I may assure you of, that however such curiosity might be innocently indulged, yet, if upon a principle of humility, faith, and resignation to God, you deny it, you will be a much greater gainer by the exercise of these virtues in such an instance of self-denial, than you could possibly be, by any knowledge such curiosity would lead you into. You may perhaps think, that I have too often recourse to these virtues, and seek for too much support from them: but, Madam, they are the highest virtues of the most enlightened souls; and as they lead the mind farthest into the truest deepest knowledge of the mysteries of God, so the best knowledge of the mysteries of God gives the greatest height and strength to these virtues. And when a Christian is at the height of all the perfection which the Spirit and the Grace of the Gospel leads to, though he has been with St. Paul in the third heavens, he will then be, more than ever, all humility, all faith, and all resignation to God; and will find all language too weak, to express that fulness and extent in which he desires to practise these virtues. As to the matter proposed, it cannot well be looked upon as a harmless probability; because the tenor of Scripture, both as obvious to common-sense, and as interpreted by the constant general belief of the church, is contrary to it; and, therefore, till it shall please God to give some new revelation of this matter, and show its consistency with the Divine Revelation already made, there seems to be no room for an innocent reception of it. As to the relief which is sought for in such discoveries, humility, faith, and resignation, make it needless, and give the mind a comfort and rest in God, which cannot be equalled by any such speculative light. For my own part, this one saying, 'Shall not the judge 'of all the world do right?' is more to me, is a stronger support to my mind, and a better guard against all anxiety, than the deepest discoveries that the most speculative inquisitive minds could help me to. With this one assurance of the infinitely infinite Goodness of God, I resign up myself, my friends, relations, men, and angels, to the adorable and yet incomprehensible disposal of His Wisdom; content and happy with this thought, that myself and all creatures will not only be treated with a goodness and benevolence like mine, but with a goodness so exceedingly superior to it, as no thought can comprehend or language describe.

I do not intend to lessen that tenderness of affection for your brother, which both nature and piety direct us to bear towards our nearest relations: but it must be considered, that there is hardly anything, though ever so good in itself, but may and will become a snare and temptation to us, unless conducted by the principles of piety, and by some higher light than that of nature. The Jews were under the same obligations, both from nature and piety, to love their relations, as we are; but the law of God stood thus with them: 'If thy brother the son of thy mother, or thy daughter, or the wife of thy bosom, or thy friend which is as thine own soul, entice thee secretly, saying, Let us go and serve other gods; thou shall not consent unto him, neither

‘ shall thine eye pity him, neither shalt thou spare him, neither shalt thou conceal him. Thine hand shall be the first upon him to put him to death, and afterwards the hands of all the people ; and thou shalt stone him with stones that he die,’ Deut. xiii. 6, &c. Now if the Jew had been too full of tenderness for his nearest relation, to comply with this law of God, then that affection, which is so just and pious under certain limits, had become a snare and temptation to him, and made him prefer the love of an idolatrous fellow-creature, to the love and honour and glory of his infinitely adorable Creator : he had then been in the state of those, of whom our Saviour saith, ‘ He that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me.’ It is matter of duty to love all people as ourselves, to show the same affection and good wishes towards them, that you do towards your brother ; and if we want that fulness of affection for them which we show to our relations, it is owing to the infirmity of our nature, and to some degrees of that self-love which unites us most strongly to those whom we consider as parts of ourselves. When the people said unto our blessed Lord, ‘ Thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee ; he looked upon them that sat round him, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren ! for whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, my sister, and mother,’ Mark iii. Now our blessed Lord is, in this, as strictly to be considered as our example, as when he says, ‘ Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart ;’ and that spirit by which he was governed, with regard to the relations of flesh and blood, and those which became his kindred by their love and obedience to God, is to be the spirit of those who desire to ‘ walk as he walked.’ And, indeed, the thing considered in itself, without the authority of this infallible example, is highly agreeable and obvious to common reason : for if our relation to God, be our greatest and most important relation ; if it is such a relation, as justly demands all the love, honour, and adoration, that our whole heart and mind and spirit is able to offer ; must not all those creatures be justly considered as nearest and dearest to us, who are most full of love and duty, honour and adoration, of this our common Sovereign Lord and Father ? And if nothing but this can be right in heaven, how can anything contrary to this be right on earth ? The apostle saith, ‘ None of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself ; for whether we live, we live unto the Lord ; or whether we die, we die unto the Lord : for to this end Christ both died and rose again, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the living and the dead,’ Rom. xiv. But now, Madam, if neither you nor I are to be considered as our own, that are to act for ourselves, or to live to ourselves, but as creatures that are wholly devoted to the love, and honour, and glory of God ; much less are we to live so to any of our fellow-creatures ; or become so much theirs, that we cannot find our peace in God, any satisfaction in his Goodness, or continue our love and service to him, unless such relations or friends join with us. As all our virtues are nothing worth, but as they are acts of love, obedience, and conformity to the Will of God ; so our love to our relations is no virtue of any worth, but as it is under the direction of the same pious spirit. As God is not the object of our love and adoration because we have such relations, but because he is what he is, the sole adorable Lord of all beings ; and as he is equally adorable by us, notwithstanding there are wicked angels and wicked men in the world ; so he is not less the object of our love and adoration, because some that are nearly related to us join with those that have wickedly departed from their love and obedience to him. It is a happiness of constitution to have our nature assist us in those affections, which we owe to our fellow-creatures and relations ; and this seems to be the happiness of your constitution, which gives great strength to this kind of affections. But then this happiness of constitution has, like other things that are natural to us, the weakness of our nature ; and so easily becomes a rock of danger to us, unless we give up ourselves to the directions and assistances of Grace. If you ask Grace and Religion, why you should be more affected with the state of a person that is born of the same parents with you, than with the state of another that has only the same first parents with you, it will not be easy to find an answer. You will there see, that the reasons of flesh and blood, and the principles of kindred, plead as justly for an equal compassion and concern for all that have the same nature, and the same first parents with you, as for those that are related to you by your last parents. And though natural instinct, increased by the familiarity of domestic friendships, fixes our strongest affections on those that received their first breath and nourishment where we received ours ; and though this instinct, thus formed and strengthened, has many good ends in this state of human life, as helping us to that assistance from our relations which we stand in need of ; yet when we examine things to the bottom, and look into the reasons of kindred affections by the light of Grace and Piety, we shall find, that all mankind, as creatures of the same nature, and as children of the same first parents, are, upon the principles of flesh and blood, and kindred affections, all justly entitled to the same affection and compassion from us. And it is on this ground, that the Scripture calls us to an universal charity ; to consider, not our nearest relations, but all mankind, as 'our brethren, whom we are to 'love as ourselves.' But when we take a step further, and consider mankind in a still higher and better view, not as of the same nature, and descended all from one and the same parent, but as creatures made in the Image of God, as the offspring of the Deity, who are blessed with a nature that represents, and with faculties to love, adore, and rejoice in, the infinite riches and perfections of this adorable Creator and Father of all beings and all worlds; then we shall find, that our love to the creatures, whether born with us or before us, whether above us or below us, whether in heaven or in earth, must be more or less in proportion as God has more or less of theirs. For as, in this consideration of God and the creatures, God is All in All, the beginning and the end, the measure and motive of every duty that can be rendered to him; as we are to consider ourselves, as so many beings issued from him, living in and by his Spirit, in union with the Holy Trinity, members of a holy society of which God is the life, the light, the happiness and perfection; so here, we are to have no will but in the Will of God, no desire but in conformity and union with his Desire, nor any love but what flows from his Love and is the effect of it. This state of holy union and society with God, is thus prayed for in those mysterious words of our blessed Lord, 'That they all may be one, 'as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee; that they also may 'be one in us, I in them, and Thou in me, that they may be 'made perfect in one.' It was a sense of this high spiritual union with God in Christ, that made the apostle say, 'Henceforth know we no man after the flesh.' Not as if those, who were thus full of 'a life hid with Christ in God,' had lost all affection and concern for their fellow-creatures, or relations in the flesh; on the contrary, they are fuller of this affection and love than ever: but it is, because they now begin to love with a better spirit, and with a better light, as Christ himself loved mankind; they now act upon a new principle, as servants of God, who do nothing but upon a principle of love and obedience to him, to whom all actions of the spiritual rational world are to be wholly directed. They love all, because all are in the Image of God their Father and Creator: they forget the distinctions of friends and enemies, strangers and domestics, relations and countrymen; and as they love all in God and for God, so they love none more or less, but as the pure and perfect Love of God requires it of them. Now, as true Love, enlightened and governed by Grace and the Spirit of God, loves all things and persons in God, and for God, and God more than all things; so it allows of no love, but that which is in some degree an effect or exercise of the Love of God ; and so is always ready to submit to that which cannot be disapproved, without disapproving something that God either does or permits. A Christian full of this Spirit of Love, if he had as many lives as he has brethren in the world, would freely lay them down for the salvation of his brethren : but as it is an inexpressible height of the Love of God, and not any instinct of nature or human love, that would make him be thus a sacrifice ; so the same height of the Love of God keeps him from the least thought of renouncing God, because the salvation of mankind does not proceed according to his wishes. The more he sees the increase of that part of his brethren and fellow-creatures, that by sin and ingratitude depart from God, and enter themselves amongst those that rebel against him ; the more he is inflamed with a love and desire of living in a more exemplary manner, and higher degree, to the glory and honour of God.

This, Madam, is the spirit and temper you are to have recourse to ; and I make no doubt, but the piety of your heart, and those degrees of holiness to which you have already attained, will by the Grace of God enable you to find your peace and rest in it. How little is it you owe to your brother, or even to your parents, in comparison of that which you owe to God ! so much good as you have in them, is only so much received from God through their hands : there being nothing to give you any affection for any creature, but as it has so much of the Goodness of God in it : it can be nothing in itself, nor anything to you, but as it has so much good derived from God. How unreasonable is it, therefore, to let the love of any creature, or our concern for it, stop the current of our heart and affections to our Infinitely Lovely and Adorable Creator ! since we can have no reason for loving any creature, but because it represents so much of our Creator ; nor any foundation for delighting in it, but for something of God that we see in it, or receive from God by it. So that, whilst there is anything lovely or the least desirable in any creature, we can never want a reason or motive to believe God to be the only object of our love and adoration ; and that all other things are only to be loved in him, and for him, and as related to him. Were you of the same nature and the same birth with some fallen Cherubim, how unreasonable would it be, to let your love for a fallen brother, though of so high a nature, withdraw your zeal, and devotion, and obedience, from God ? For look at the height of their nature, and it is only a faint image of something infinitely more high in God ; look at all that is near and dear in such a relation, and it is but a poor shadow of that infinitely nearer and dearer relation between God and you, 'in whom you live, and move, and have your being.' And if it was hard to nature, to lay aside the love of so high a brother; must it not be much harder to nature, to lay aside the love of so much higher a Father and Creator? Never, therefore, fancy, that infidelity or distraction must be your lot, whatever you should live to see, though it should be the departure of all your friends from a belief in God: but reject every such thought with as much abhorrence, as you would the worst actions. If it comes upon you unawares, despise and stifle it; and look upon it only as a vain threat from him, who has no power over you, whilst you seek to God for protection; and let it have no other effect upon you, but that of exciting you to more frequent acts of faith and trust in and resignation to God. When, therefore, difficult questions or objections about the Providence of God, are either suggested to you by the activity of your own mind, or from other people; you must look upon it to be as right and just to silence and confute such suggestions by humility, faith, and resignation to God, as it is right to throw water upon a fire that ought to be quenched, or to use any medicine proper to any distemper. And as this is our strength, so it is always at hand, and nothing can take it from us. Every disorder, calamity, or temptation of life, whether within or without us, only helps us to so many occasions of being more eminent in these virtues, and of finding our relief and strength in them. It is always in your power, to express to God your want of these virtues, and your earnest desire to practise them in the most perfect manner, and to find your strength and protection in them; and so long as you do so, you will put yourself into a condition to say, with the apostle, 'When I am weak, then am I strong.'

I am,

Madam,

Your sincere friend,

WILLIAM LAW.

Letter III.

Madam,

I SHALL begin with the latter part of your letter, where you write thus: 'You seem, Sir, to think, that I love my brother too well. It is very true, that I love him extremely; and I think my affection for him must continue, so long as I do in this world. I do not pretend any virtue in it; it seems to be rather necessity. I do not know that it is in my power to love him less; and I think it would be barbarous in me to desire it, only because he stands in greater need of it. He was not mine by choice: had he been so, and I had voluntarily fixed my affections to such a degree upon him, I should have thought, that I had sufficiently read my crime or my folly in my punishment. But God and nature gave him a right and share in my affections, without my own seeking; and if it should now, by accident or my fault, exceed a common share, it may surely be the more excusable.' Again, 'Since then my too well-grounded fear and apprehensions tell me, that it is more than probable, that the so much dreaded hour may overtake me; I think I ought to endeavour to expect that, which I truly think far worse than death; that which will render me a trouble to my Friends, and a useless burthen to the world. I cannot see how it is possible, humanly speaking (and miracles I am sure I have no reason to expect) for me to keep my senses, if it should please God to take him hence before me: I should be very apt to suspect my own sincerity, and to believe there must be some hidden reserves of infidelity in my heart, if I could. Distraction, surely, Sir, cannot be called a sin; nor are we, I suppose, to look upon those many dismal spectacles of that kind, which the world presents us with, as so many criminals; at least, not peculiarly such; not so, upon that very account. If, therefore, I make this greatest of afflictions my ready choice, rather than harbour the least thought of wilfully departing from my God; and endeavour to make the best use I can of the present time allowed me; I think that is all that is in my power to do.'

In your first papers, you seemed to want to be of the church of Rome, that you might be delivered from the anxiety and danger of thinking and reasoning for yourself in matters of religion; and that you might have a sufficient authority, to which you might absolutely resign up yourself. Now, Madam, if it was in your power to give up the anxiety and private suggestions of your own judgment, as soon as you were in a church that claimed such an authority over you; why do you indulge yourself in such expostulations, as the present? You will, perhaps, say, that you have as yet found no such authority; and, therefore, are left to the reflections of your own mind. But I must take leave to tell you, that your present expostulations are not for want of a proper authority to resign yourself unto; they are determined by an authority much greater in itself, and more certainly made known to you, than any church authority can possibly be: for is there anything more certain, or more undisputed in religion, than this, that an humble submission and constant resignation of yourself, in every circumstance of your life, is a duty expressly required and determined by God's Providence and Authority over you? Can any church make any article of faith, or rule of practice, more known to you than this is? If, therefore, you can lay aside all reasoning and disputing in a church, that required your submission to her authority; if you could so submissively and dutifully resign up yourself to an implicit faith in her determinations; if you wanted such a church, that you might be delivered from the uncertainty and weakness of your own reasonings; pray be so consistent with and kind to yourself, as to acquiesce in a determination made for you by the Greatest of all Authorities. You have all the infallibility in the present case, that can possibly be imagined: if angels were sent from heaven to assure you, that you ought always to be in a state of humility, of resignation and gratitude to God, in everything that happens to you; you could not be more assured than you are at present, that God demands this resignation from you. Is it not, therefore, a great mistake in you, to be so anxious in search of a church, to which you might resign up all your reasonings and reflections; and yet stand by your own reason, indulge yourself in all kinds of anxious reflections, where you know that the authority of God is so full and express for your submission and resignation to him? You somewhere mention your apprehension of the Bishop of Rome's claim to your obedience; and seem frightened at the very possibility of his claim being just. But pray, Madam, why is not this same tenderness of mind awakened in the present case? You have no doubt about God's claim to your resignation and gratitude to him; there is nothing to make this doubtful to you; reason, scripture, all churches, how contrary to one another in other matters, agree in determining this matter for you. And shall the suspicion of a duty to the Pope, have more effect upon your mind, than the certainty of one of the greatest duties that you owe to God? Deal faithfully, therefore, with your own heart ; try it to the truth ; make it show itself plainly and openly to you : if it has this tenderness about the Divine Pleasure ; if it would so fain be right in matters of church obedience, and is so fearful of falling short of its duty in that respect ; ask it, why it is so taken up only with one sort of duties ? why it is so tender and fearful of offending in matters where it has only suspicion to proceed upon, and yet so unaffected with the greatest of all duties to God, and in a case that admits of no doubt ? why it is so desirous of finding some new means of pleasing God, that it only suspects to be wanting ; and yet so regardless of that means of pleasing God, which is always at hand, always required, and needs no inquiring after ? Offer to God an humble resignation, a constant gratitude of heart, at all times, and on all occasions ; commit yourself to his Providence by an implicit faith, loving and adoring him in all things, and for all things ; and then you are performing a certain duty ; you are resigning yourself up to a certain and undeniably just authority ; you are offering an acceptable sacrifice unto God, and you are worshipping him on earth as he is worshipped in heaven. Whilst you are in this state of heart, empty of all self-seeking and self-reflection ; full of an implicit faith in God, and of resignation and gratitude to him, in all things, and for all things ; making everything, however dark and inexplicable to your own reason, a fresh occasion of adoring his Goodness, and resigning yourself unto it ; whilst you are in this state of heart, you are in the best of churches ; and by thus giving all to God, you will receive all from him. All the uneasiness and imperfection of your past and present state of life, seems to be owing to your want of this turn of mind. A restless, inquisitive, self-seeking temper, by which you have been prompted to seek for your own ease and happiness, by accounting to yourself, from your own reason, for everything in your own state, the state of religion, and the state of other people ; seems to me to have been plainly the rock on which you have constantly split. Religion was a comfort to you, so long as it offered no difficulties to your mind, or brought nothing to your view, but what you could account for from your own way of thinking : but as soon as anything appeared in your own state, or your reflections upon religion in general, that you could not explain or account for from yourself, or by reasons of your own, immediately you resigned yourself up to discontent, and melancholy views of the Providence and Goodness of God.

‘ Fourteen or fifteen years ago, at the reading of certain ‘ books,’ you say of yourself, ‘ I was in the greatest confusion ; a ‘ deep and fixed melancholy seized me. I thought I saw the 'greatest necessity and impossibility together, in what they recommended: I began to believe every the most innocent thought and word, and the most necessary trifling action, to be a crime, which kept me in continual terror night and day.' Here it is, that this restless, inquisitive, self-seeking temper, betrayed you into error. Those books had their right effect upon your mind; they filled you with a true light; they showed you the true extent of your duty, and your want of strength to fulfil it; they awakened you into a lively sense of the misery and danger of your condition. Thus far all was right; and God had mercifully done that for you by means of those books, which he did for Job, when he said thus of himself: 'God maketh my heart soft, and the Almighty troubleth me; therefore am I troubled at his presence: when I consider, I am afraid of him.' And again, 'When I say my bed shall comfort me, my couch shall ease my complaint; then thou scarest me with dreams, and terrifiest me with visions.' Now, as Job was carried to greater heights of piety by these impressions, so might you have had the same effect from the impressions you received from those books. But it was that restless, inquisitive, self-seeking temper, that drew contrary effects from these impressions; by this temper, you were driven to seek for satisfaction from yourself, from your own reasoning and reflections about your own state. If you could have seen and fully comprehended, with your own reason and senses, how you could have had all that perfection in every part of your life, which those books pointed at, then you could have been easy; that is, if you could have had satisfaction from yourself, then you would have been satisfied. This is the reason why I call this inquisitive, a self-seeking temper. But because you were not to have this matter satisfied, by what you could see with your own eyes, or comprehend with your own reason; because you were to see the extent of your duty, without seeing how you could in every respect perform it; and there was nothing left for you, but a total, implicit, absolute resignation of yourself to the incomprehensible depths of Divine Mercy and Power over you; because you were thus to come out of yourself, lose all self-support, have nothing of your own to rest upon, and be wholly left to what God, in ways above your comprehension, would please to do for you; therefore, you gave up yourself to melancholy: that is, you grew displeased and impatient against God, because you were not sufficient for yourself. But if, when those books had brought you to this point, and shown you such perfection in your duty, and such imperfection in yourself, you had then absolutely resigned yourself up to God, by an humble, implicit, unlimited faith in his incomprehensible Power and Goodness over you ; if you had then broken forth into the love and adoration of him for those incomprehensible depths of Mercy in Christ Jesus, which direct us to perfection, and yet save us though imperfect ; which propose to our imitation the love and obedience of angels, and yet accept of the poor endeavours of fallen men ; if you had thus taken hold of faith, you would then no more have felt the want of your own poor reason to support you, than Peter felt the want of his own strength when he ventured to walk upon the water to his Lord and Master. A true implicit faith, and an unlimited resignation of yourself to God, will make you rejoice in books that carry your duty to the greatest height ; you will be glad to see, that all is due to God, that everything is to be done for him from a principle of love and devotion to him ; and yet, at the same time, make you content to be without any security from yourself, entirely dependent upon a dispensation of Divine Mercy, not to be measured by our poor conceptions, but embraced and adored by an humble and implicit faith. The best state of heart that you can be put into, is to have the highest sense of the perfection of your duty to God ; to believe that all your thoughts, words, and actions, are to be consecrated to his honour and glory ; to look upon it as your duty, to do his will on earth, as angels do it in heaven ; and, at the same time, to look upon yourself as so far sunk into the depths of corruption and impurity, that everything you can think, or say, or do, of yourself, is full of weakness and imperfection, unworthy of his acceptance, and far short of that duty which you owe to him. Now this state of mind, so just and good in itself, and so desirable for the effects that might justly be expected from it, this state of mind cast you into melancholy and discontent ; and yet nothing more was required of you to make it a state of peace and consolation in God, than a hearty resignation of yourself to God, to be saved by him in a way of mercy above your own sight and comprehension. And if, after all, you could not have prevented that melancholy which then seized you ; had you then kept close to resignation, and humbly committed yourself to God, in some form of words like the following, all had been safe and well in the midst of melancholy : ‘ O my God ! if it be thy good pleasure to leave me thus to myself, to want the light of thy countenance, to be devoured by dark and gloomy thoughts, I submit ; ‘ ‘ Thy will, not mine, be done ! ’ I adore thy Providence ; I ‘ heartily resign myself up to it, to be everything, to do every ‘ thing, to suffer everything, that can make me most acceptable ‘ unto thee. Let my vain reason and restless imagination ‘ torment me as long as thou permittest ; I humbly accept of

'this cross from thy hands, as a just punishment of my sins. I am unworthy to choose anything for myself; I submit to thy choice, whether in light or darkness, in sickness or health, in desolation of spirit or joy of heart: I desire and resolve, by thy grace, equally to adore thy infinite goodness; I ask nothing of thee, but that, in this, and all other states of my life, I may conform to thy Holy Will; and humbly resign myself up, by a boundless faith, to thy Adorable Providence over me.'

This spirit of resignation to God, which is the truest Spirit of Religion, would then, will now, and at all times, be your sufficient support on all occasions; it will certainly either remove your evil, or make it no evil to you to be under it. This spirit of resignation will secure you from being frightened at any heights of piety, that any books lay before you; and the higher you see your duty raised, the more you will be incited to adore the wonderful Goodness of God, who has appointed a means of redeeming such imperfect creatures, and receiving us, with so many defects in our duty, to a state of perfection and glory in another life.

As to the books you cast aside, I have no intention to recommend any of them to your perusal again, but 'Kempis,* of the 'Imitation of Christ.' Next to the Scriptures, it is, I think, the best devotional book that I know of. If you had a mind to confine yourself to Scripture, I have no objection to it; for no books are of any value, but so far as they are of the same spirit with the Holy Scriptures. Our Blessed Saviour's discourses are a fund of instruction, never to be exhausted; and when they once get possession of the heart, it will not want much other instruction. But as John the Baptist was 'the voice of one crying in the wilderness, preparing disciples for Christ, and by his water-baptism fitting them to be baptized by the Holy Ghost;' so many human writers are still in some degree in John the Baptist's place, crying in the wilderness, exhorting and preparing mankind to become the true disciples of Jesus Christ. With this spirit of faith and resignation, which I have here recommended, a little reading will do; or if more is delighted in and sought after, it is no ill temper. You seem to be affected with my 'Serious Call to a Devout and Holy Life.' I pray God you may have benefit by it; and desire you will think the chapter upon resignation to the Will of God, deserves most of your attention. For this implicit faith and total resignation of ourselves to the adorable Providence of God, willing nothing but what he wills, and because he wills it; it is a state of mind, whose excellency I cannot represent to you ; it covers all our imperfections, sanctifies all our endeavours, makes us holy without any holiness of our own, makes our weakness as serviceable to us as our strength, and renders us acceptable to God at the same time that we do nothing worthy of him. Let me, therefore, intreat you to put on this temper ; to lay hold of it with all your might ; to make everything you hear, or see, or find, in yourself, the world, religion, or Providence, so many fresh occasions, of committing yourself to God by a faith without any bounds, a resignation without any reserve.

* Thomas à Kempis, 'Imitation of Christ.'

You will, perhaps, say, that ' you see the piety and excellency ' of this temper ; but as you cannot remove or prevent your ' doubts and discontents, so you cannot practise this faith and ' resignation.' It is answered, either these doubt or discontents are voluntary, or they are not ; if they are voluntary, such as you strive to raise and support in your mind by your own reasoning and reflections ; then, indeed, they are inconsistent with the faith and resignation here recommended : but if, through the weakness of your nature, they only obtrude themselves upon your mind, as any other involuntary thoughts ; if you are sorry to find them, turn from them with dislike, and do all you can to suppress them, by not suffering your mind to attend to them, or hear their reasons ; then, these involuntary doubts and discontents are so far from being a hindrance of your faith and resignation, that they become certain occasions of giving them a greater perfection. Who can suppose, that Abraham had no inward struggles, no suggestions offered to his mind from reason, nature, instinct, and paternal affection, when he was preparing Isaac for sacrifice ? but his faith and resignation were great and exalted ; not because he could prevent or entirely silence the objections of reason, nature, and instinct ; but because, in the midst of all these objections, he acted as if there had been none ; and by faith and resignation conformed to the Divine Command with the same exactness, as if there had been no contradiction to reason, nature, and instinct in it. In a word, do but love and desire this faith, and then you are in the right way to have it ; dislike every thing that opposes it, and then you live in the exercise of it ; for no one wants this faith, but he that wants the love and desire of it, and deliberately sets himself against it. To return to your case.

As the above-mentioned restless, inquisitive, self-seeking temper (for so it must be called) plunged you then into melancholy, so the effects and workings of the same temper have shown themselves in the succeeding parts of your life. The papers I have received from you, sufficiently show me, into how many fruitless searches, and uneasy reflections, this temper has led you. At last, it filled you with scruples about the means of salvation in that church of which you were a member. You thought it was the piety of your heart, and a desire of pleasing God, that raised and encouraged this scruple; and so it was; but then it was a piety governed by an inquisitive, self-seeking temper. As this temper had before led you into melancholy, through the apprehension of the impossibility of doing your duty; and as that melancholy proceeded from hence, because you could not see with your own eyes, and comprehend with your own reason, how such duty could be performed; so, under the conduct of the same temper, your uneasiness about church communion seized upon you, because, in the divisions of Christianity, there is not a plain visible evidence and security sufficient to satisfy the demands of this temper, and because the church of which you are a member, does not claim that infallibility, in which it could so contentedly repose itself. And as there was much talk of authority, infallibility, certainty and security of salvation, in the church of Rome; so your desire after that church was much awakened; and this desire, no doubt, was strengthened by the piety of your own mind, disposing you to be of a church so certainly acceptable to God. But then this self-seeking temper had a great share in it. You wanted this security, that this temper might have its self-satisfaction; that your reason and senses might be satisfied in their own way; that, instead of being left to an implicit faith, hope, and confidence in the Goodness of God, you might be, as it were, in possession of visible deeds, bonds, and securities, of your being in a right way. There are, without all doubt, great differences in churches considered as a means of arriving at Christian Holiness; some of them are so merely human and of man's contrivance, as to make it necessary to come out of them. The inquiry, therefore, after a true Christian church, is a rational inquiry; and, without all doubt, good people, by the Spirit of God, have been led out of one communion into another. But the case in which you and I are concerned, relates to the contest between us and the church of Rome; and the way for us to find the true church in this dispute, is, I think, by such humility and resignation of heart to God, as is expressed in the following words: 'My adorable God and Creator! thy Holy Church, which should be one pious society united in the love and adoration of thee, is, by the wickedness of mankind, divided into various communions, hating, condemning, and endeavouring to destroy one another. I made none of these divisions, nor am I a defender of them. I wish everything removed out

‘of every communion, that hinders the Common Unity. As I ‘made no division, so I have made no choice of any divided ‘part, upon my own persuasion that it alone is thy True ‘Church: but as thy Good Providence, which I will always ‘adore, has without my choice educated me in one communion, ‘which according to my best judgment seems to be agreeable
‘in its fundamental doctrines and institutions to the Holy ‘Scriptures; so, I humbly and thankfully continue in it without ‘condemning or hating others, till by thy Good Providence ‘thou shalt afford me some light, that I yet have not. The ‘wranglings and disputings, not only of private men, but of ‘whole churches and nations, and their mutual accusations, ‘condemnations, and misrepresentations of one another, have so
‘confounded all things, that I have no ability to make a true
‘and just judgment of the matters between them. If I knew ‘that any of these communions was alone acceptable to thee
‘I would do or suffer anything to make myself a member of it:
‘for, my Good God, I desire nothing so much as to know and ‘love thee, and to worship thee in the most acceptable manner.
‘And as I humbly presume thou wouldst not suffer thy Church
‘to be thus universally divided, if no divided part could offer ‘any worship acceptable unto thee; as I have no knowledge of ‘what is absolutely the best in these divided parts, nor any ‘ability to put an end to them; so I fully trust in thy goodness, ‘that thou wilt not suffer these divisions to separate me from ‘thy Mercy in Christ Jesus; and that, if there be any better ‘means of serving thee than those I already enjoy, thou wilt, ‘according to thine Infinite Mercy, lead me to them.’ This disposition of heart, which resolves itself into an humble resignation and confidence in the Goodness of God, is, I think, a better preparation and a more secure guide to the True Church, than the laborious perusal of all the volumes of controversy in the world. And if a person, who is truly of this disposition living wholly unto God with all his heart and spirit, worshipping and adoring him according to his best light, humbly trusting and praying for the continual guidance of his Holy Spirit, without that animosity, strife, pride, hatred, and self-confidence, which divides Christians one from another; if such a person should be in any want of any external means of salvation, it seems not improbable, that he would be favoured by God, as good Cornelius was, who had an angel sent to him to direct him to St. Peter. But to proceed.

The next trouble that you fell into, was occasioned by your brother’s unhappy state. Here that same inquisition, self-seeking temper, got greater power over you, and tormented you in a greater degree, than it had done before ; and it is visible enough to me, that your greatest distress proceeded from the workings of this temper. As soon as this case falls before you, you begin to be distressed with it, chiefly because you cannot account for it. You look backwards and forwards, into the nature of Providence, the nature of Religion, the state of our church, the corruption of the world, the temper and constitution of your brother, and the manner of his education ; you give yourself up to a restless inquiry into all these things ; and because you cannot, by wandering into these labyrinths, account for your brother's state, therefore you return home wearied and fatigued, a burden to yourself, displeas'd with Providence, with the state of our church, and without any comfort in religion, and ready to wish there were none. This may show you, even to demonstration, that your distress proceeded from your being under the conduct of this temper, which had given you so much trouble on former occasions. Had you been dead to this temper, had you been at that time practis'd in an humble implicit faith, an unreasoning resignation of yourself to God, when this case happened to you, you would then have received it with a true Christian concern ; it would have pierc'd your heart, without hurting it ; you would have mourned for it with such a spirit, as our Saviour mourned over Jerusalem ; and your own piety would rather have been quicken'd into greater vigour, than abated by it. It may be justly supposed, that when the apostles found their Divine Master betray'd by one of their own family, a brother apostle, that their love, and zeal, and devotion to their Lord and Master, was quicken'd and inflam'd by it ; that they wanted to show some new tokens of their love, and to be more devoted to him, who had been so ungratefully betray'd by a brother of theirs. And your piety would certainly have taken this turn, you would have felt some new zeal towards God, you would have wanted to be devoted to him in some higher manner than you ever thought of before ; and the shame and sorrow for such an instance of ingratitude to God in your own family, would have awak'ned in you this new zeal : this would have happen'd to you, had you not been interrupted by the specious pretences of this inquisitive temper ; and, as it never could be indulg'd at any time, without prejudicing the best state of your heart, and taking it out of its true place or position in God, so it is not to be wonder'd at, that it should have its worst effects upon you, when you gave yourself up to it at a time of such affliction. For as your case wanted its proper relief ; as it could be reliev'd by nothing, but an application and conversion of your whole heart and spirit unto God, by new repeated acts of zeal, devotion, faith and resignation, by new vows of love and duty, new oblations of your whole body and soul and spirit unto him; as this conversion and application of your heart to God, was the one sole relief that could possibly be found for you in the whole nature of things; so, your departure from it, to seek for relief in reflections upon providence, religion, predestination, the state of the church, the constitution and education of your brother, the foundation of his prejudices, the difficulties peculiar to his state, and the probability of others being as bad as he, had the same difficulties fallen in their way; your giving yourself up to these speculations, was not only departing from your proper relief, but creating to yourself as great a variety of torments as you could well do. For all these topics were only so many topics of disappointment and fatigue to your mind; and as it had left its proper resting-place in God, to wander in these labyrinths, so it was left, by God to prey upon itself, and feel all that tormenting emptiness which every soul must feel in such a wilderness of its own imaginations. But, Madam, God, though thus left, is still at hand: he 'stands at the door of your heart, and knocks for 'entrance;' and as soon as you open your heart for so blessed a guest, by an humble resignation to and faith in him, by new vows and oblations of love and obedience to him, with an infant simplicity embracing and resigning yourself up to his Adorable Providence; you will find yourself in the Arms of his Love, restored to that light, and peace, and support in him, which you have lately so much wanted.

To speak now to the affection which you plead for to your brother. The affections which are founded in nearness of blood, are very useful, helping infants, and young and old people, to that assistance from their kindred, which all stand in need of. But if these affections are not made as subordinate to the rules of Piety, as all other temporal things; if they are not considered as mere nothings, when they come into competition with our Duty to God; they become matter of as great sins, as any other unlawful affections; and the love of a relation may be as great an idolatry as the love of money. Speaking of your love to your brother, you say, 'I do not pretend to any virtue in it; it 'seems to be rather necessity.' But, Madam, if virtue is not at the bottom of this affection, if you cannot find it either caused or demanded by virtue, it demands your government of it. And your recourse to a necessity, is only the same plea that anyone may make for any affection of any kind, as soon as he perceives its strength in him. Again, you say, 'I do not know that it is 'in my power to love him less; and I think it would be barbarous in me to desire to do it, only because he seems to stand in ‘greater need of it.’ Here, again, you look upon yourself as having no power over this passion; as being something that is what it is, without your assistance; and yet, in the same breath, show that you do what you can to support it, are unwilling to part with it, and seek for reasons for its continuance: for you say, ‘You think it would be barbarous in you to desire to do it;’ that is, to abate this passion. Does not this show plainly, that this degree of passion is your choice and judgment; that it is supported by your reasoning and reflection; and that you avoid its abatement, as an instance of barbarity? How can you appeal to your want of power to do that, which you avoid out of choice? How can you know your power in any matter, unless it is made the subject of your prayer to God? or how can you be supposed to have prayed to God for that, which you take to be barbarous and inhuman? But what is this degree of love, that you are possessed of, and plead for? It is a degree of passion, that robs you of all peace and comfort in God, that hurries you from one precipice to another, and leaves you without any choice of anything, ‘but either infidelity or distraction;’ and the latter you choose as the lesser evil, and to avoid the ‘necessity of recurring to the other.’ And is this a degree of love, Madam, that it would be barbarous in you to desire to lessen? Would it be barbarous in you, to find God your support between these two precipices? would it be barbarous in you to desire, that the Knowledge and Love of God might have the full government of your heart, and give laws and rules to your love and regard for every fellow-creature? Is the Scripture defective in the doctrine of brotherly love, or that regard we ought to have for the salvation of one another? or is there anything in Scripture, either in doctrine or practice, that gives the least hint of, or makes the smallest approach to this degree of passion which you plead for? Is Adam to be condemned of barbarity, because he seems to have been in none of your straits, either of infidelity or distraction, when his two first sons, who were the only men in the world besides himself, were so taken from him, one murdered, and the other cursed and driven away as a vagabond from the presence of God? You appeal, indeed, to ‘St. Paul’s wishing himself accursed for his brethren,’ as an instance of a particular affection to his relations: but it is a flaming instance of a quite different affection. He calls them, ‘His brethren according to the flesh,’ only to show who they were of whom he was speaking: but the reason of his being so concerned for their conversion, is given in the next words, where he says, ‘Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law,

'and the service of God, and the promises, &c.' It was under this view of them, as a people thus related to God, and as thinking the honour of all God's former dispensations, and the credit of Christianity, depended much upon this people's receiving the Gospel; it was in this view of the sole glory of God, that he wished that this people, 'whose were the fathers,' who had thus been the Channels of all God's mercies and blessings to the world, might receive the Gospel, though it was to be granted on the condition of 'himself being made a curse for 'them.' St. Paul was in the very reverse of that state, in which you suppose him to be: he was so full of the honour and glory of God; God was so All in All to him; he was so out of himself, and all selfish reflections, so above the common instincts and tempers of flesh and blood, that he could look upon his own destruction as desirable, if the glory of God and the honour of his Providence, could be more raised and increased by it. Could a Seraph give you a higher proof of his being all Divine Love, and empty of all partial selfish affection? And yet you appeal to this seraphic instance of Divine Love, as a plea for a gross blind passion, that leads you out of God, destroys the piety of your heart, renders it dead and unaffected with the honour and glory of God, sinks you into flesh and blood and self-seeking reflections, and leaves you a prey either to infidelity or distraction. You argue for the continuance of your love, because your brother 'seems to stand in more need of it:' but, Madam, has he any need of this kind of love? or does this kind of love answer or assist any of his needs? Would he be left in a more helpless state, if you had the piety of an apostle, the devotion of a saint, and was all wrapt up in love and adoration of the Divine Being? Would he be deserted, unkindly treated, if his sister, and all his kindred, were thus attached to God, had such interest in heaven, and could send up such prayers for him as they can whose hearts are thus inflamed with Divine Love? 'Love God 'with your whole heart,' make him yours by an unlimited devotion and oblation of yourself to him, and then your brother will at least have one friend and advocate for him with God. Remember, that you owe him no love, but in God, and for God; and that you can do him no good, but by your example, and the total application of yourself to God; and then your love of him, thus expressed, will be a benefit both to him and yourself.

You say, 'You are satisfied, that, in the next life, all these 'partial regards will be perfectly done away, and that God will 'be All in All.' But, Madam, if it is barbarous to desire, that the Love of God should now moderate and govern the love of your brother; and that you should have no love for him, but such as the Love of God requires of you; must not this be barbarity in the other life? And if this state of heart must take place, where 'God is All in All;' must it be barbarous in you, to endeavour to imitate this great perfection; to endeavour, as far as you can, by your prayers and desires, that 'God may be All 'in All' to you now; and that, to the utmost of your power, you may do his will on earth, with such a spirit as it is done in heaven? We are commanded to 'love God, in this life, with all 'our heart, with all our soul, with all our mind, and with all our 'strength;' it is thus, that God is to be 'All in All to us' in this life: and he that is careful to bring his heart under the direction of this first and greatest commandment now, will find himself in the state of those, to whom God is to be 'All in All' for ever. Were you now in the same state of mind as when you put away those books, you might here again be cast into melancholy, at the sight of impossibilities; but I hope you now know how to avoid this rock, and to be contented to be all devoted and resigned to God, without seeing how you are to perform all that is expected of you. 'Love,' in the Scripture phrase, 'is as 'strong as death;' it is omnipotent, it is armed with the whole power of God; and as nothing is impossible with God, so nothing is impossible to those, that truly love, or truly desire to love him. To proceed.

You thus further contend for this degree of passion that possesses you: you say, 'If you could bear your brother's death 'without distraction, you should suspect your sincerity; and 'believe there were some secret lurkings of infidelity in your 'heart.' This is strangely excessive. For supposing God was so far 'All in All to you,' that you could find a sufficient relief in the love and adoration of him; would this just and pious acquiescence in God, give you reason to suspect some lurkings of infidelity in you? Are patience, love, resignation, a holy peace, acquiescence and satisfaction in God, become signs of infidelity? Are you forced to come out of this peace in God, to hang hovering between infidelity and distraction, that you may have in you some visible signs of your being a sincere believer in God? Will you suspect the Saints of infidelity, because they have not gone distracted at the death of impenitent sinners? will you suppose their piety to be insincere, or their hearts not right, because God was their continual centre and place of rest, from which nothing could move them? and yet you are afraid of this, as a sign of infidelity. While you thus think of it as an ill state of mind, how can you pray to God for it? and if you do not hope, and desire, and pray for it, must not your want of it be imputed to your own voluntary choice? You say, indeed,

258 Letters to a Lady inclined to

'You do not see how it is possible for you to avoid distraction, 'without a miracle from God.' But is this consistent with what is just now said, that you should suspect yourself of infidelity, if you could keep your senses? For can you be said to be doing all that is possible to procure this peace, when you declare, that if you had it, you should suspect yourself of infidelity? Can you look at it as a sign of infidelity, and yet be supposed doing all you possibly can to procure it to yourself? I hope I need say no more to show you the delusion of these reflections, and to persuade you to cast them from you with the utmost contempt and abhorrence. You cannot altogether prevent their sometimes presenting themselves to your mind: but you can turn your mind from them; you can despise them, refuse any attention to them, and make them an occasion of resigning yourself up to God; and then they are no hurt to you, and will by degrees be forced to leave you. You say, 'You cannot have 'this possession of your senses, without a miracle of God.' If it were really so, I would exhort you, Madam, for that very reason, to be the more confident of having it: for if you want that which God alone can give you in a particular way, which no other means can help you to, it is happy for you that your relief is lodged in so good hands; for he is too much a God of Love, to deny that which can only be had from himself. 'All 'things are possible to him that believeth.' Remember him that said, 'If ye had but faith as a grain of mustard seed,' &c. If, therefore, your state really wants a miracle, draw near to God by faith, and then that Scripture will certainly be fulfilled in you, 'By faith ye are saved.' No one can ever be in distress, that will give himself up to God. This I say, upon supposition that a miracle was wanting, or absolutely necessary. But you do not enough consider what you say, in declaring 'that nothing 'less than a miracle can preserve you.' For do you know, what degree of God's Grace and Assistance, is to be reckoned a miracle, and what is not? But if you do not know this (as you certainly do not) you strangely deceive yourself in declaring, that nothing less than his Miraculous Grace can preserve you, when you do not at all know what degrees of it you are to esteem miraculous, and what ordinary or common. It is enough for us to know, without this distinction of miraculous and ordinary, that all necessary degrees of Divine Grace and Assistance, however great, are always given to those that truly pray for them, in right dispositions of heart. Have you no reason to think, that you have hitherto been frequently assisted by extraordinary degrees of Divine Favour? Will you say, that nothing but common instances of God's assistance, has happened to you?

Can you think of no part of your life that has been blessed by a Particular Providence, that you ought never to forget? And though your life may show you instances of this kind, which you cannot help confessing; yet those that you know nothing of, which are only known to that Goodness from whence they flowed, may be more numerous, for aught you know, than those that you look upon as the ordinary and common blessings of Divine Providence. But if God has preserved you, guided you by visible and invisible means, as well when you knew it not, as when you knew it; if he has saved you from dangers that you never apprehended, blessed you with assistances that you could not contrive, nor knew how to seek for yourself; is it not great ingratitude, to distrust his Goodness in those instances, in which you can see your need of it? Has he blessed you so often without your own care, in things where you could not ask his assistance, because you did not see your wants; and do you think such Goodness will forsake you in your known wants, and when you humbly apply to it for help? Trample upon every thought of this kind, with disdain; and never think yourself destitute or in distress, because you have nothing but faith in God to rely upon, nothing to support you but an humble confidence in his extraordinary Goodness; for you may, with infinitely greater security, trust to that, than to all the visible human means that your reason and senses could contrive for you. When you see your help, and depend upon what can be made visible to you, your dependence may easily be disappointed; and that which you take to be your support, may have no support in it; but, when destitute of all visible supports, by an unbounded faith you depend upon God, you are secure from all disappointment. Read the power of faith, Heb. xi. Though all worlds, and all beings in all worlds, should set against you; though your own strength, compared to that of your enemies, should be but as a drop of water compared to the ocean; yet faith in God would 'make you more than conqueror.' Though, therefore, all means of continuing in your senses, were visibly removed from you; though every creature threatened you with it; though you had no more appearance of preserving them, than Abraham had of seeing his seed blessed in Isaac, when he was about to offer him in sacrifice; yet do but you, as Abraham did, commit yourself to God with his faith, and then you will come off with his success.

To come now to the last particular. You say, 'Distraction, surely, cannot be called a sin; nor are we to look upon all the dismal spectacles of that kind, as so many criminals on that account: if, therefore, I make this greatest of afflictions my

'ready choice, rather than harbour the least thought of wilfully 'departing from God, and endeavour to make the best use I can 'of the present time allowed me, I think that is all that is in my 'power to do.' Distraction may be considered as an unavoidable accident; and, as such, it has the nature of all other unavoidable evils, and is not to be looked upon as a state of sin, or that which renders a man a sinner, because he is in it. But when distraction is the effect of our disorderly passions, and owing to our indulgence of them; as distraction then finds us in a state of sin, and is the effect of it, so it may then be called a sinful state, because it continues us in that state of sin in which it found us, and from which it had its being. Though, therefore, distraction is a state that renders us not accountable for what we do in it, yet if we are accountable for those tempers that brought it upon us, our condition is not relieved by it; it is no refuge from evil, but only the sealing up our doom, and presents us before God in that state of sin and disorder in which it found us. If our heart had been in a right state towards God, full of those tempers which render us acceptable to him, when this accident came upon us; then, I conceive, we shall receive no harm from it. But if it was ill tempers, a disordered heart, a forgetfulness of God, a want of faith and trust in him, or an indulgence of irregular passions, that plunged us into it; it would be strange to suppose, that distraction, which is the effect of those sins, should free us from them. Distraction, when it is the effect of ill passions, and for want of right dispositions of heart towards God, differs only from those passions, as an imperfect state or habit differs from one that is more finished and complete of the same kind. Thus, would you know what that distraction is which arises from impatience and discontent; you need only consider what impatience and discontent are, in a more moderate and imperfect state: for if impatience and discontent, when they are short of distraction, are yet great sins; surely, when they proceed to and end in distraction, they are still greater: so that a distraction of that kind, is only those disorderly sinful tempers run out to their greatest length. You, therefore, strangely deceive yourself, Madam, when you talk of making 'that greatest of afflictions your 'choice,' because you take it not to be a sin in itself. For though it may, as I have said, be considered barely as an unavoidable accident, and so only in the nature of an external evil; yet, in this respect, or thus considered, it cannot be an object of your choice; because, as soon as you choose it, it ceases to be an accident, and becomes your sin. If you were ignorantly to sit under a sword, that should drop upon your head, and kill you, you might then be said to die by an accident that brought no guilt upon you; but if it was your choice to sit under the sword, in expectation that it would certainly fall upon you and kill you, then you would not die by an accident, but by the sin of self-murder: so that a thing, in some supposed cases most innocent in itself, may, by being chosen, be made one of the greatest sins. How can you choose distraction, without choosing those tempers which must cause it? For as you cannot fall into this supposed distraction, so long as your mind is in a state of humility, meekness, and resignation to God, enjoying any comfort or satisfaction in him; so you cannot choose this distraction, without choosing the removal of those tempers that must necessarily prevent it. It is plain, therefore, that you did not at all apprehend what you said, when you talked of 'making this your choice,' and as a means of preserving you from sin; for you cannot choose it, without choosing those sinful tempers that must occasion it. You have no more reason to fear distraction, than I have; your danger is my danger, and my security is yours. When I consider my own weakness, how often my mind is affected and discomposed with trifles, I might justly apprehend, that, if I was left to myself, very common misfortunes might put me beside myself; but when I consider, that I have the Goodness of God to rely upon, and his Preservation of me to trust to, then I can look upon myself as under the Protection and Security, not of human probable means, but of Divine Never-failing Omnipotent Goodness. You are, therefore, no more to prepare yourself for distraction, than for infidelity; nor to look upon one, with any more approbation than the other: it is a crime to fear it, and a much greater to approve of it. It is a strange deception in you, to fancy that you 'choose distraction, to avoid the danger of infidelity:' it is, as if you should choose to renounce your faith in God, for fear of falling into infidelity some time or other. For, what is infidelity, but a departing from that love, faith, acquiescence and satisfaction in God, which Religion supposes? And how can you choose this supposed distraction, without choosing to be thus departed from God, emptied of those tempers which religion supposes? A distraction, therefore, of this kind, does not avoid infidelity, but only lays hold of it in a different way. Though, therefore, there may be much difference between infidelity and distraction, considered in themselves, and in some supposed cases; yet this difference is destroyed, and they are made much the same, when they proceed from the same cause. If the same discontent drives me to distraction, which leads another into infidelity, the difference between us is but small; because we agree in that which is our common guilt, namely, that neither of us can find any comfort in God. And as we have both departed from God upon the same account, because his Providence is not enough according to our reason and senses, because he does not comfort us in a way that these demand; as we have both departed from God on these same motives, so it matters not much that we are gone different ways. Give the infidel that self-satisfaction in God, which his reason, his senses, his natural tempers and instincts demand, and then you save him from his infidelity: give the impatient, distrustful, unresigned man, that self-satisfaction in God, which his reason, his senses, his temper and natural instincts demand, and then he will have no design of hiding himself, in distraction, from his own thoughts. A distraction, therefore, of this kind, that is the effect of impatience, distrust, and dissatisfaction in God, can no more be innocently made the object of our choice, than we can innocently choose infidelity; because it is formed of, and proceeds from infidelity; it has the whole nature of infidelity; and we cannot choose it, without choosing those tempers which constitute infidelity. To make this supposed distraction look something innocent to you, you propose 'to make the best use of the intermediate time.' But, Madam, is not this as absurd, as to propose to be sober and virtuous only for a certain time? And if you set bounds to your piety, and limit it to a certain time, do you not thereby destroy it? Suppose you should fancy, that you cannot serve God in this intermediate time; would not such a fancy be owing to your own unreasonable imagination? would you have anything to impute it to, but your own distrust of God, and want of application to him? If you intend to make a right use of the present time, by a dependence upon your own strength, your intention would be in vain. And if you intend to live unto God all your life, by a continual dependence upon his continual assistance, is not such an intention as well grounded, and as much within your power, as if you extended it only to one day, or one hour? For is not 'God every day the same,' and full of the same Power and Goodness? And can you think, that, in a partial, poor intention, of a goodness limited to a certain time, God will have the goodness to enable you to perform it; and that, in a better intention of being always devoted to God in all events, God will fail to assist you? Do you think, if you give God only a part of your heart, upon certain terms, and in certain events, that you may expect God's Grace for your present assistance? but if you give him your whole heart, to be all his, at all times, without any regard to any trials that may come upon you, can you think that such devotion to God will leave you without any hopes of his future assistance? Now, Madam, if this be unreasonable and extravagant, as most certainly it is, then you may see reason to take up a better proposal, than that of acquiescing in the Love and Service of God only for a certain time. God gives his Grace and Assistance, only because we want it; and yet you strangely suppose, that, when your wants shall be greatest, you shall be most of all forsaken by God. Have you any proof of God's dealing thus with you hitherto? Have not all your common and uncommon wants, had an Assistance from God proportioned to them? And is it not strange ingratitude and a departure from every principle of Piety, distrustfully to surmise such a defect in the Goodness of God, and such a want of his Assistance, as is contrary to all that the Scripture teaches you of God, and contrary to all the experience of your whole life? You ought to fear everything without God's Assistance, and to fear nothing with it. Wants and dangers, the greater they are, are only so many greater reasons for an entire confidence and faith in God. In little things, we cannot be sure of God's particular direction of them; but, in fiery trials, where our own strength is as nothing, there it is, that we may look up to God with firm confidence, and have the utmost assurance that our application to him will not be in vain. If to distrust God's Providence for our ordinary sustenance, be a sin; surely, it is a greater, to distrust his preserving us in our senses. 'Ye 'are of more value,' saith our Blessed Saviour, 'than many 'sparrows;' and thence he concludes God's greater care for us. Our senses are of more value than food and raiment; may we not, thence, infer God's greater care to preserve them? and yet, forgetting this good Providence, you imagine, that you must inevitably lose your senses, because you do not know how you shall be able to keep them by your own strength, or without God's Extraordinary Assistance. Would a person, in any other case, be excusable for this despair, because he could see nothing but God's Extraordinary Goodness to depend upon? No, most surely! for the reason why despair is always so criminal, is because God's Extraordinary Goodness is always at hand, is the best and greatest of all supports, and the most to be depended upon. If, therefore, you had said, 'I shall then want God's 'Extraordinary Assistance to preserve my senses, and, therefore, 'by prayer to him, and faith in him, humbly and thankfully 'depend upon having all that I shall want; for, as he cannot 'give me a scorpion when I want a fish, nor a stone when I want 'bread; so, I have the utmost satisfaction and assurance in his 'Goodness, that he will not give me only his Ordinary Assistance,

'when my case wants that which is Extraordinary'—had you said thus, you had made a just and pious conclusion; and found a rock to build your peace upon, against which the gates of hell could not prevail. Bury, therefore, all your reasonings and speculations, all your doubts and distrusts, in such resignation, such faith and confidence in the Love and Goodness of God, as this is; and then all trials and temptations will but increase your safety, and give you a more confirmed Repose in God. I am, Madam, with hearty prayers to God for you and your relations,

Your sincere friend and servant,

WILLIAM LAW.

May 29, 1732.

FINIS.

This book is DUE on the last date stamped below

AUG 11 1947

APR 29 1948

5-13-49
SEP 6 1949

AUG 11 1960

LD
URL FEB 22 1973

Apr 4 73

REC'D LD-URL
DRION
LD/JURI OCT 12 '89
MAY 27 1990

REC'D LD-URL
OCT 01 1990
JAN 08 1991

University of California, Los Angeles

L 005 780 672 1

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

AA 000 856 833 9

