GRIM AND HILDE In the Dietrich legend giant guardians of a great treasure. They ravaged the land of Dietrich by fire and Dietrich finally slayed them with the sword Naglering, forged for them by the dwarf Alberich, who later stole the sword from them and gave it to Dietrich. After killing the fire-giants, Dietrich took their treasure, which included the helmet Hildegrim, which provided more than a mortal's strength. This is a fertility legend. The giants represent drought which destroys fertility, the treasure they guard in the otherworld and which Dietrich, as the beneficent fertilizing sun, releases.

GRIMHILD In the Volsung Saga sorceress wife of King Giuki. She gives a magic potion to Sigurd which causes him to forget Brynhild and to marry her daughter Gudrun. She exemplifies excessive mother love.

GRIMNIR (GRIMNER) In Norse mythology a name of Odin, indicating his habit of traveling incognito. He wears a hood covering the upper part of his face.

GRIM REAPER Death.

GRINDSTONE Custom, stubbornness. It carries the same symbolism as wheel, which see.

GRIP See under gestures.

GRISELDA (GRIESEL, GRIZLE, GRIZZEL) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning stone heroine and signifying patience; also from the Germanic, meaning gray and battle. Boccaccio gives the name to a heroine who is a model of enduring and unreasoning devotion, whose husband tests her patience.

GRISMADEVI Summer, one of the Buddhist Goddesses of the four seasons. Her color is red; her vahana is a blue yak; her emblems are a parusu (axe) and kapala (skull cup). She is usually shown with an animal head. In Tibet called dByar-gyi-rgyalmo.

GRJOTTUNGARD In Norse mythology domain of Hrungner; world of frost.

GROA (GROAD) In Norse mythology described as both swan-maiden and sorceress giantess. She was the wife of Orvandel, mother of Svipdag, sister of Signe-Alveig. She loosened but failed to dislodge the fragment of flint stone buried in Thor's forehead. Halfdan, her sister's husband took her as captive, and she became the mother of a son called Gudhorn. As the mistress of Halfdan, she is the mythological equivalent of the legendary Gerutha (Gertrude), mother of Amleth (Hamlet). Orvandel is the equivalent of Horveldillus, who, in the 12th century tale, is the father of Amleth. Her name is from the Icelandic meaning to grow, sprout, and she sometimes is identified as an elf of growth. See Hamlet.

GROMOVIT (GROMOVNIK) Serbian deity. Thunderer, dispenser of good harvests. Christianized as Saint Iliya Gromovnik. Analogue of Perun.

GRONW PEBYR Cymric god of darkness. While chasing a stag, he is seen by Blodeuwedd, flower-maiden, wife of Llew Llaw, who falls in love with him. He kills Llew Llaw, god of light, and in turn is killed by the reborn Llew Llaw. He probably is a twin of Llew Llaw and ruler after Llew Llaw's sacrificial murder (yearly murder of the sun necessary for life-renewal each spring) at the second or darker half of the year. The stag stands for Llew.

GROOM NOT TO BE SEEN See under Marriage with unseen groom.

GROSSNESS In an Italian icon personified by a gross, corpulent woman. In her right hand she holds an olive branch covered with fruit but without leaves; in her left hand she holds a crab.

GROTTE (GROTTI) In Norse mythology the World Mill located in the cold polar night. Hand quern or mill of King Frodi on which Fenja and Menja, two giantess sisters, ground out gold (fertility) and peace (harmony). When the sisters rebelled and turned it in reverse, it ground out salt (drought) and war. The legend is one of the seasons, alternating with fertility and famine. In Icelandic lore a queen grinds out anything the Lord orders. Compare Cardea.

GROUND HOG DAY February 2, Candlemas Day, on which the ground hog is said to come out of his burrow. If he sees his shadow he retreats into his hole for six more weeks in the expectation of more cold weather or a late coming of spring. Also called woodchuck day. Candlemas is a feast of purification or the presentation of Christ in the temple. In Scotland celebrated as one of the quarter days. Compare Saint Swithin's Day.

GROVE In all parts of the world a place of religious worship. Clothing, food, rag, sacrificial victims, and other deity offerings have been hung on trees, especially in sacred groves. Brownies, elves, nymphs, tomtes, and other supernatural beings are associated with the forest or grove. The word Asherah has been rendered grove in English; however, it probably should be rendered "image of Astarte." The golden bough of Roman antiquity was a branch from a sacred grove. See Nemoralia.

GROWTH Personified by Auxo, Horai; represented by plant life of a beneficent sort.

Growth and strength rapidly acquired. Mythological heroes whose growth and strength are rapidly acquired express the brief period needed to fill the sky with light or the clouds with moisture, to give the sun its heat, or the winds their force. Among deities possessing this characteristic are: Cuchulainn, Heracles, Hermes, Magni, Phoebus, Vali, Zeus.

GRUB STREET A London street, in recent times renamed Milton Street, which once was populated by hack writers. For this reason, mean or mechanically written literary productions are called grubstreet. The word also is applied to needy authors.

GRUMBO A giant in the nursery tale of Tom Thumb. When Tom Thumb creeps up Grumbo's sleeve, the giant shakes him off as if he were an insect.

GRUNDY, MRS. A woman who makes much of conventions and rules. A strait-laced gossip, scandal monger.

GRUS Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Crane.

GRYLLI The chimera or griffin. A form worn as a talisman.

gSUN-GI-RGYAL See under Sung-gi-gval-po.

GUABANCEX Taino Indian goddess of water and wind. Her two subordinates are Coatrishie, tempest raiser, and Guatauva, her messenger. They probably are twins of darkness and light.

GUABONITO Taino Indian woman who rose from the sea and taught the hero Guagugiana the value and use of amulets.

GUACARAPITA Same as Attabeira, which see.

GUAGUGIANA (VAGONIONA) Taino Indian hero transformer. Trickster hero. His servant or comrade is Giadrurvava, who, when on an errand, is taken up by the sun and transformed into a singing bird. One night each year, Giadrurvava calls upon his master to come to his aid. Guagugiana was taught the value and use of amulets by Guabonito.

GUALDRADA A woman renowned for her beauty and modesty. Mentioned by Dante.

GUAMANSURI First man of Peruvian Indians. Father of Apocatequil and Piguero, twins.

GUAMAONOCON Literally, ruler of the earth. Supreme and eternal being of Taino Indians. Father Sky. Son of a mother with five names. See Attabeira. Also called Iocauna.

GUAN DI Chinese god of war. His name is used as a talisman against a multitude of evils.

GUARDIAN Represented by an angel with a flaming sword, an armed man, a beneficent dragon, a dog, a lion. 'Guard' resolves into ag-warra, i.e. might ward, is from the same root as Asgard, and is cognate with garden, garner, garrison.

Guardian angel. An angel divinely appointed at an individual's birth to accompany and protect him throughout life.

GUARINOS Paladin of Charlemagne. He was taken captive by the Moslems and escaped.

GUATAUVA Messenger of Guabancex, Taino Indian goddess of water and wind. Probably the light twin of Coatrischie.

GUCUMATZ Guatemalan feathered serpent or bird-serpent. Wind and rain god, who had three manifestations: lightning flash, lightning bolt, and thunder. He was the creator, dominator, fertilizer. He lived alone in the darkness and stillness and visited the underworld Xibalba. Among his titles were Bowels of Earth, Bowels of Heaven, Four Ends of Earth, Heart of Heaven. His emblems were a black stone, flint, or green stone (jadeite). He sometimes is identified with Hurakan. Resembles Kukulcan.

GUDANNA Assyrian-Babylonian celestial bull created by Anu at the appeal of Ishtar to destroy Gilgamesh. Its intense heat caused seven years of drought. Gilgamesh finally emasculated Gudanna. Identical with Taurus, bull of heaven, which draws the plough stars Triangulum. Compare Humbaba.

GUDATRIGAKWITL Wishosk (Wiyot) Indian Above-Old-Man. Creator deity who formed the world and peopled it by joining his hands and spreading them out.

GUDHORN In Norse mythology son of Halfdan and Groa. King of the Danes. Half-brother of Svipdag and of Hadding, against whom he warred. Probably a fertility king or ruler of the realm of darkness.

GUDRUN (GUTHRUN) 1) In the Volsung Saga, daughter of Giuki, king of the Nibelungs, and Grimhild. Her mother bewitched Sigurd with a magic drink, and he forgot his love for Brynhild and married her. To obtain the Andvari and Fafnir gold, possessed by Sigurd, her brother Guttorm, egged by her brothers Gunnar and Hogue, killed Sigurd. After Sigurd's death, Gudrun gave birth to their daughter Swanhild. Reluctantly Gudrun married Atli, brother of Brynhild and king of Huns. He too coveted the gold. He invited Gudrun's father and brothers to visit him and then treacherously attacked them. Gudrun fought with her kin. All but one of her brothers was killed. In revenge, she slew her two sons by Atli, fed their hearts to their father, slew him, and plunged into the sea to drown, but was carried by the waves to the realm of King Jonakr, who married her. She bore Jonakr three sons, Erp, Hamdir, and Sorli. This is a time myth, in which heroes of darkness (winter) and heroes of light (spring) continuously fight, each victorious according to his appropriate season. The gold is the gold of fertility, for which the gods of light and the gods of darkness (underworld) have seasonal battles. Gudrun represents the gloaming or harvest, who, after the death of Sigurd, the sun, marries first Atli, a lord of autumn, and then Jonakr, lord of winter. She is an analogue of Medea and Signy. In the Nibelungenlied she is known as Kriemhild, and in Wagner's Nibelungen Ring she is known as Gutrun. 2) In the Gudrun Lied beautiful daughter of Hettel, king of Hegelingen (Denmark or Ireland), and Hilde. She had three suitors, Hartmut, a Normandy prince; Herwig, a Zee-lander; Siegfried, king of Moorland. Herwig wins the right to marry Gudrun. Hearing this, Siegfried attacks Herwig, and while they are at war, Hartmut kidnaps Gudrun, whereupon Herwig and Siegfried join forces. Gudrun remains a captive in Hartmut's castle for thirteen years, and because of her persistent refusal to marry him, his mother makes a menial servant of her. She is finally rescued by Herwig and married to him. Gudrun is a German type of wifely love and loyalty. Her legend, like that of the legend of Gudrun in the Volsung Saga, is one of light and time. 3) In an Icelandic saga she is a forceful, independent, selfish woman, married first to Thorwald, then Thord, and finally Bolli. She is in love with Kjartan, whose death she brings about.

GUEBRES (GHEBERS) Parsee fire-worshippers. The name was given to them by Arabian conquerors and has become a term applied to fire-worshippers generally.

GUECUBU (HUCUVA) Chilian Indian deity of evil.

GUELPH One who belonged to the papal and popular party in mediæval Italy; opposed to the Ghibellines, the aristocratic or imperial party, which supported the German emperors. The civil war caused much bloodshed in Italy. Guelph came from Welf, name of a founder of a princely German family. In the 19th century the name was used by a secret Italian society which opposed foreign rulers.

GUENDOLOENA In Brythonic legend daughter of Corineus and wife of Lochrine. When Lochrine divorced her and married Estrildis, by whom he already had a daughter named Sabrina, Guendoloena raised an army and fought Lochrine, who was slain. She assumed the government and her first acts were to throw Estrildis and Sabrina into the Severn.

GUENEVER See Guinevere.

GUERMANTES, De In Marcel Proust's Remembrance of Things Past, a French family of noble lineage. They are preoccupied solely with maintaining their position in aristocratic society, and know little of the history and tradition of their family. They are possessed of narrow intelligences and without culture, concerning themselves with balls, banquets, and other entertainments, adultery, duplicity, gossip, political intrigue, and social animosities and jealousies. They are snobs, and even those members who are courteous and affable, are contemptuous under their veneer of all not associated with a family of equally ancient lineage.

GUFITTAR Lapp forest spirit; underground dwarf who brings cattle to earth. Corresponds to the Norwegian Govetter and Scandinavian Ullda.

GUHYA-PATI Buddhist master of secrets; glorious secret assembly. In Tibet called dPal-gsan-dus-pa or Pal-sang-wa-du-pa.

GUIANOS Yellow shells regarded by Taino Indians as talismans.

GUIDANCE Spiritual guidance is represented by a dove, ram, or star.

GUIDO DE MONTEFELTRO Distinguished Ghibelline who was persuaded by Pope Boniface VIII to give fraudulent counsel. By Dante placed in the Inferno.

GUIDO THE SAVAGE Paladin of Charlemagne. He is shipwrecked on the coast of the Amazons, where he is doomed to fight ten of their male champions. After slaying them, he is compelled to marry ten of the Amazons. He finally escapes with Aleria, his favorite wife.

GUIGNOL A character in French puppet-shows. As his performance is usually gruesome and macabre, short plays of this sort are called Guignol.

GULDENSTERN In Shakespeare's Hamlet a companion of Hamlet. He is the type of court knave easily tricked into any hard or dirty work.

GUIMAZOA Same as Attabeira, which see.

GUINEVERE (GUANHUMARA, GUENEVER, GUENHUVARA, GVENOUR, GWENHWYVAR, GWYNHWYVAR) (1) Feminine name from the Welsh, meaning white phantom or white wave. (2) In Arthurian legends wife of King Arthur. According to Malory, she is the daughter of Leodegrance, king of Camelard. She is abducted by Meleagant, lord of the underworld, and, in one version, rescued by Lancelot, and in another by Gawain. She conceives a guilty passion for Lancelot, who becomes her lover, but during the absence of Arthur in his expeditions against Leo, the Roman king, she is seduced by Modred, nephew-son of Arthur, who has usurped the throne. Arthur hastens home, Guinevere flees, and Arthur and Modred fight a desperate battle in which Modred is slain and Arthur mortally wounded. Guinevere takes the veil at Almesbury, where she dies. She is buried at Glastonbury; in some accounts she is buried beside Arthur on Avalon. Her amour with Lancelot appears to be a later addition to the legend. In one account Sir Meliagrance, a knight of the Round Table, informs Arthur of his wife's unfaithfulness, and Lancelot is forced into combat with his fellow knight. He has Meliagrance down and is willing to let him rise again when Guinevere gives him the sign that Meliagrance must die. Thus Guinevere is a beautiful, but faithless wife, sensual in love, merciless in revenge. She is a goddess of dawn and spring, and in the natural course of events is claimed by the lord of darkness, from whom she is periodically rescued by knights or heroes of light. In early legends Arthur is said to have three wives, all named Gwynhwyvar; one the daughter of Ogyrvran, an underworld deity; one the daughter of Gwyrd Gwent, about whom nothing is known; one the daughter of Gwyrthur ap Greidawl, a light deity. The Round Table, a table of plenty, was Guinevere's wedding gift to Arthur.

GUITAR In folklore a form assumed by witches. A guitar is played in making a pact with the devil. It often is played as an accompaniment to love songs, and its dream significance is declaration of love. In China called p'i p'a, and symbolic of determination of the mind, fidelity, purity, and of the moon. Emblem of Mo-li-Hai.

GULA Sumerian patroness of medicine. Great one who cured diseases and prolonged life. As defender of homes the dog is associated with her. Consort of Ninurta. Identified with Bau and Innini. Also called Ninudzalli, lady of the morning light, and Ninkarraka. In some accounts Gula is identified as an Assyrian god who shared with Nebo, Nergal, and Shamash the power of restoring the dead to life and of curing diseases whether from illness or sin.

GULBAN Celtic wild boar (storm demon) always hunted in vain. Diarmaid resolved to slay it, and finally does, but is slain in doing so. In one version Diarmaid is killed by the boar's bristles after the boar is dead.

GULL Adventure, gullibility; sea emblem. Dream significance: safe journey.

GULLFAXI (GOLDFAX) Literally, golden-mane. In Norse mythology steed of Hrungnir. He carried his owner into Asgard, where Hrungnir was slain by Thor, who then gave the steed to his son Magni. Typifies light rays.

GULLINBURSTI (SLIDRUGTANNI) Literally, golden-bristle. In Norse mythology boar which drove Frey's chariot. It typifies the sun and its brilliant rays. As Frey was a fertility deity, some interpretations are that Gullinbursti represents a field swaying with ripe grain. See Hildisvini.

GULLINKAMBI (GULLINKAMBE) Norse cock of the north, which sits on the topmost branch of Yggdrasil. It awakens the gods from sleep and puts demons of darkness to flight. Each morning the red cock answers it. Like Heimdal, his mission is to awaken and speed forth heroes. It crows at Ragnarok to warn the gods. Also called Goldcomb.

GULLINTAMI An epithet of Heimdal because his teeth are of gold.

GULLTOP (GULLTOPP) Literally, goldtop. Steed of Heimdal, Norse god of the rainbow.

GULLVEIG (GOLLVEIG, GOLVEIG-HEID, GULVEIG-HODER) Literally, gold might. In Icelandic signifies gold drink or gold thirst. Goddess of evil, ruler of Iarnvid, mother of the Varns, who pursued the sun and moon. In the guise of one fair and young, she became an attendant of Freyja. In a plot with Loki, her husband, she lured Freyja from the security of her abode, and the goddess was abducted to Jotunheim. To obtain the release of Freyja, the gods warred against the giants and precipitated Ragnarok. Because of her evil designs, Gullveig three times was smitten by Odin, and three times came to life again. She represents the forces of storms and winter, which abducted Freyja, fertility and growth. Her thirst was for the gold of corn or wheat. She was three times burnt and three times came to life because storms and winter periodically revive. Gullveig is sometimes identified as Freyja in her underworld role, the season in which she fails to provide the earth with fruitfulness; a role in which she is an analogue of Persephone. The shepherd of Gullveig is Gymer; other names by which she is known are: Angerboda, Aurboda, and Hag of Iarnvid.

GULU Uganda (Africa) heaven; father of Walumbe (death).

GUN Death, hunting, violence, war. Dream significance: deceptive gain.

GUNA One of the three dominating principles of nature according to the Sankhya (Hindu) theory. The transmigration of the soul through deities, men, beasts, and plants is according to one of the three gunas, which are goodness (sattva), passion (rajas), darkness (tamas).

GUNADHYA In Hindu legend Gunadhya sends a poem he had written in his own blood to the king of Satavahana, who rejects the poem because of the dialect in which it is written. Piece by piece, Gunadhya feeds his poem to a fire. While it is being consumed, his song brings together all the beasts of the forest, who weep at the beauty of his tale. Satavahana falls ill and is told that he must eat game, but none can be found as all beasts are listening to the burning song. Hearing this, the king rushes to the fire and buys the remaining portion of the poem. The song of Gunadhya is the song of the wind.

GUNASARMAN Hindu hero who, like Joseph, has been falsely accused by a woman he scorned. Also like Joseph, he has the skill of interpreting dreams while in prison and is raised to the position of minister to Mahasena.

GUNE A woman; hence son of a gun.

GUNGNIR (GUNGNER) In Norse mythology the unerring spear of Odin, made by the dwarfs. Odin lent it to heroes and gave it to Dag; Sigmund used it. Against it all weapons were useless, and oaths were taken on it because of its strength. Runes were written on its point, and when Odin was represented as the god of eloquence and poetry, the spear represented his stinging mordant satire. The spear typifies light rays.

GUNLAD (GUNNLÖD) Norse underworld princess. Daughter of the dwarf Suttung, who entrusted to her jars of poetic mead. By trickery, Odin won her affection and took the three jars, Bodn, Odrorir, and Son, from her. In spite of this, she aided Odin in his escape from her cave-dwelling in Jotunheim. To avenge the wrong done to her, her grandfather set the world aflame. The escape of Odin typifies the daily (or yearly) escape of light from the realm of darkness.

GUNNAR In Norse mythology son of Giuki and Grimhild, brother of Gudrun, Guttorm, and Hognene. Sigurd, disguised as Gunnar, who lacked the power to penetrate the wall of fire which protected Brynhild, courted Brynhild for Gunnar. When Brynhild discovered she had been deceived she prevailed upon her husband to have her former lover killed. Gunnar, desiring the gold possessed by Sigurd, assigned Guttorm to the deed. After the death of Sigurd, his widow Gudrun became the wife of Atli. He too desired the gold. Atli invited his wife's brothers to visit him, and upon their arrival attacked them, killing Gunnar. This is a seasonal myth, Gunnar and his brothers representing powers of darkness which killed the sun (Sigurd) and robbed him of golden corn or wheat. Gunnar is the analogue of Gunther in the Nibelungenlied.

GUNNODOYAH In Iroquois mythology a mortal, caught by Hino, the Thunderer, and armed by him with the celestial bow.

GUNTHER In the Nibelungenlied warrior king of Burgundy. Husband of Brunhild, brother of Kriemhild, the wife of Siegfried, who had deceived Brunhild. Goaded by the jealous Brunhild to kill Siegfried and, without gratitude for favors he had received from his brother-in-law, but bound by oath not to shed the blood of Siegfried, he commissioned Hagen to do the foul deed. The Nibelungs' treasure was brought to Kriemhild as the widow of Siegfried, and part of this Hagen stole for Gunther, who hid it in the Rhine. When Kriemhild became the wife of King Etzel, at her behest, her brothers, the Burgundians, and their knights were invited to a festival, and all the Burgundians were slain. This is a time myth, in which fertility is hidden in the underworld (waters of the Rhine) after the death of the harvest season. Gunther, a prince of darkness, is an analogue of Gunnar in the Volsung Saga. Gundicarius, a Burgundian king who, with all his people, was slaughtered in 437 by the Huns is said to be the historical character drawn on for these legends.

GURGIUNT BRABTRUC (GUR-GUNTIUS) Son of Belinus. Legendary king of Britain. Mortal form of an old Celtic god Gargantua, which see.

GURIKHOISIB Hottentot first ancestor. Solitary dweller in the wilderness.

GURU KAM BALU Tibetan Buddhist headless monk. Probably a wind deity.

GURU RIMPOCHE In Tibetan Buddhism faithful follower of Strong-Tsong-Gampa.

GUSHASP In Iranian legend fire on Mount Asnavand; one of the three fires that protected the land. The other two were Burzhin Mitro and Frobach.

GUSTAVUS (GUS, GUSTAF, GUSTAVE) Masculine name, Latinization of the Germanic; first element uncertain; second element meaning staff. Also from the Swedish, meaning staff of Goth; hero, warrior.

GUSTR A name of Thjasse signifying gale.

GUTHRIE Masculine name from the Danish, meaning war serpent.

GUTRUNE In Wagner's Nibelungen Ring the sister of Gunther, courted and won by Siegfried. Analogue of Gudrun and Kriemhild, which see.

GUTTORM In Volsung Saga son of Giuki and Grimhild. Brother of Gudrun, Gunnar, and Hogne. A prince of darkness. To obtain the gold possessed by Sigurd (sun) he undertook his murder because he, unlike his brothers, was not bound to Sigurd by oath. He attacked Sigurd in his sleep but, before he died, Sigurd thrust his sword Gram at Guttorm, who was killed. Typifies gloaming.

GUY (WYATT) (1) Masculine name from the Germanic through the French, meaning guide, leader; also wide or wood. (2) In England, a rag or straw effigy of Guy Fawkes carried around in procession and then burned on November 5, in memory of the 17th Century Gunpowder Plot, for which Fawkes was executed; hence any badly or oddly dressed person or one of grotesque appearance. In the United States, the word applies to almost anyone, as 'He's a decent guy.'

Guy de Montfort. One who avenged his father's death through the murder of Henry, son of Richard, Earl of Cornwall, during mass. Placed by Dante in the Inferno.

Guy of Warwick. Hero of a 13th century English romance. To obtain Felice as his wife he must undertake many knightly deeds, in which he slays noxious beasts and rescues maidens. Forty days after his marriage he feels he must put on pilgrim's dress and go to the Holy Land, where he slays the Ethiopian giant Amaran and meets his friend Thierry. Finally, a beggar he returns home. His wife, not recognizing him, asks if he received any news of her husband in his wanderings. He shrinks from breaking into the works of mercy she is performing and takes up his abode nearby as a hermit. When he realizes he has but hours to live, he sends his wife a ring; she rushes to him in time to close his eyes. The legend is a Christian version of the story of the sun-hero Odysseus. In the Pagan version the forces of evil killed by Odysseus are those of darkness, drought, and storm; those killed by Guy are moral forces of evil. As the sun must travel daily across the sky, so must a sun-hero leave his home, to return at gloaming to the wife he left at sunrise, close by the borders of the realm of darkness. Thierry illustrates the animistic belief of the soul which can leave the body and return to it.

GUYON, SIR In Spenser's Faerie Queene, knight personifying temperance or self-government. To him is assigned the task of subduing the sorceress Acrasia, personifying intemperance. He devastates the Bower of Bliss, where Acrasia dwells. Mortal form of the Celtic Gwyn. Name from the Spanish guia, meaning a guide. See Gwyn.

GUZU-TENNO Japanese celestial king of the ox head. An aspect of Susa-no-wo.

GWADYN ODYEITH In Arthurian romance one who aided Arthur in his attack on the boar Twrch Trwyth. By making as many sparks from the sole of his foot as when an iron strikes a solid object, he cleared the way for Arthur and his men. An aspect of the sun.

GWADYN OSSOL In Arthurian romances a giant under whose weight a mountain became a plain.

GWALCHMEI In Brythonic legend a later form of Llew Llaw Gyffes, a light god. A knight of the Round Table who never left an adventure unachieved. He was one of the three men to whom the nature of every object was known; the other two being Llacheu, son of Arthur, and Riwallawn Walth Banhadlen. He was the brother and enemy of Modred. In the dream of Rhonabwy son of Arthur by his sister Gwyar. The name is a Welsh form of Gawain and signifies Falcon of May. See Galahad.

GWA-RIO-BAI The 'recumbent-dragon' plum trees at Kameido, Japan, from which fruit was presented each year to the Shogun. The name comes from the shape of the trees.

GWAWL Literally, light. In Welsh legend son of Clud, betrothed to the fairy Rhiannon, who loved Pwyll. Pwyll, in beggar dress, asked as a boon that the bag he carried be filled with badger. The more that was put into the bag (cloud), the more room it seemed to have. Gwawl became angry, and Pwyll explained that it could not be filled until a man of lands tread the meat down with his foot. When Gwawl put his foot in the bag, Pwyll slipped it over his head and tied it. To escape death he renounced his claim to Rhianon. His friend Llewyd avenged the insult. Probably a sun god covered by clouds in a conflict with a deity of darkness.

GWEIR (GWAIR) In Welsh mythology one of the three notable prisoners of Britain, the other two being Llyr and Mabon. He is imprisoned in Caer Sidi in Annwfn through the spite of Pwyll and Pryderi, and rescued by Arthur. While Annwfn (underworld) is despoiled Gweir sings, thenceforth till doom he remains a bard. Probably a wind deity.

GWEN (GUENER) Irish goddess of smiles. Sister of Jou and Sadurn. She resembles Venus.

GWENDOLEN (GWEN, GWENDOLYN) Feminine name from the Welsh, meaning white-browed.

GWERN In Celtic mythology son of Matholwch and Branwen, nephew of Bran and Evnissyen. When his father abdicated and declared him king, his jealous uncle Evnissyen tossed him into a fire, which consumed him. This legend probably reflects the primitive sacrifice rite in which a child, acting as surrogate for a fertility hero, was killed after temporary investiture as king, and compares with a Greek legend in which Heracles in a state of madness killed children by fire. Gwern means alder, and the alder was used for sacred fires. He may have been surrogate for Bran, an alder deity.

GWEVYL In Arthurian romance knight of the strange lips. When sad, he let one fall to his stomach, while with the other he made a hood over his head.

GWIAWN In Arthurian romance a magician with the power of curing an injury.

GWION BACH In Celtic mythology son of Gwreang. He was exposed and found in a harvest basket on the shore by Cerridwen who lived in the depth of the lake. She set him to stir the caldron in which she was brewing poetic inspiration for her son, the ugly Afagddu. Three great drops fell from the stew and burned Gwion, imparting to him all knowledge of things past, present, and future. Angered that Gwion received that intended for her son, she pursued him. Possessing shape-changing powers, he transformed himself into a hare in autumn, and she pursued him in the shape of a greyhound; into a fish in the winter rainy season, and she pursued him in the shape of an otter; into a bird in the spring, and she pursued him in the shape of a hawk; into a grain of winnowed wheat at the summer harvest, and she finally overtook him in the form of a black hen with a red comb (death colors) and ate him. When she returned to her natural shape, she found herself pregnant and gave birth to a boy which she tied in a leather bag and cast into the sea two days before May Day. The boy (either the son of Gwion or Gwion reborn) was found by Elphin, who renamed him Taliesin (meaning beautiful brow or fine value). Cerridwen typifies a nature goddess and storm hag, who pursued Gwion, a fertility or sun hero. When he concealed himself in a heap of grain, he experienced the ritual murder of a barley-king. See sun hero.

GWLAD YR HAV Welsh other-world. Land of Summer, land from which men came.

GWRACH Y RHIBYN Welsh spirit which warns of approaching death.

GWRAGEDD ANNWN Welsh gentle damsel fairies of lakes and streams. In Christian tradition descendants of villagers condemned to sink below the waters for reviling Saint Patrick. Compare Gwyllion.

GWRHYR GWALSTAWT In Arthurian romances a knight of the Round Table. He knew all the languages of men as well as of all other creatures. A magician able to transform himself into a bird, he acted as Arthur's ambassador (envoy of the god of fertility) in negotiating with the wild boar Twrch Trwyth (a force of destruction). Probably a wind deity.

GWRI A name of Pryderi meaning golden-hair.

GWRNACH In Arthurian legend giant slain with his own sword by Kay.

GWYAR In early Welsh mythology a sister of Arthur and wife of the sky-god Lludd. By Arthur the mother of Gwalchmei. Name meaning gore or shed blood. Personification of dawn or gloaming.

GWYDDNEU GARANHIR In Welsh legend ruler of a lost country, which is now under water. Father of Elphin. He asked and received the protection of Gwyn. In Arthurian legend, Gwyddneu's basket was one from which the whole world might eat according to each one's desire. Resembles Dagda's caldron. See caldron.

GWYDION (GWIDION) Literally, to say poetry. In Cymric mythology son of Don, brother of Amaethon, Gilvaethwy, and Gvannon, brother and lover of Arianrhod. He disguises himself as a bard and goes into the underworld realm of Pryderi, where he entertains and then asks his host to grant him a boon, the herd of swine he had received as a gift from Arawn. When Pryderi received the gift, he promised not to give or sell any until they had doubled in number. By magic, Gwydion turns fungus into twelve greyhounds and twelve stallions and suggests Pryderi need neither give nor sell the swine to him, but exchange them for the animals. Pryderi agrees and Gwydion hurries away with the swine; the magic charm soon passes and Pryderi has nothing left but a lot of fungus, whereupon he invades Math's territory for his swine, but succumbs before the power of light. During the battle, Gilvaethwy outrages Goewin, Math's footholder, and, when Math, the uncle of Gilvaethwy, discovers this, he transforms the brothers, first into a couple of deer, then into swine, and finally into wolves. In Gwydion's endeavors to help mankind, he organizes a second onslaught against the underworld to obtain the deer, dog, and lapwing and is confined by his uncle in the bone-fortress of Oeth and Anoeth. Goewin, no longer a virgin, is discharged as Math's footholder, and Gwydion, pretending his sister Arianrhod is a virgin although she already has conceived his sons, presents her to Math to fill the place vacated by Goewin. Math, discovering she is not a virgin, will not have her, and the furious Arianrhod throws one son, Dylan, into the sea. Gwydion manages to save the other child and tricks Arianrhod into naming him Llew Llaw. Gwydion is an ash and sun god; he is druid of the gods and master of illusion and phantasy; he is hostile to the niggardly gods of the underworld who hoard fertility, which they keep buried under the earth until he, as beneficent trickster (with his warm sunrays) forces from them for the use of mankind. He is credited with originating April Fool's Day when, on April 1, he conjured up the armies to fool Arianrhod and caused her to confer arms on Llew Llaw. He helped Math create Blodeuwedd (flower-wife) for Llew. His mansion, the Milky Way, is believed to be the track he made while seeking Llew Llaw after his treacherous death at the hands of Blodeuwedd. He is said to be a later anthropomorphic form of some ancient swine god because a swine was one of the shapes into which he was transformed. He resembles Arthur, Cuchulainn, Odin, Ogma. See Battle of Trees.

GWYLLION Welsh cruel and fierce mountain fairies. Compare Gwragodd Annwn.

GWYN (GWYNWAS) Literally, fair, white. In Brythonic mythology, son of Nudd. A magician and god of battle, he was the wild hunter of men's souls, which he led to Annwn, where he was lord. He abducted Greudylad, affianced to his brother Gwyrthur. In the fight which followed Arthur interfered, demanded that Creudylad remain with her father, and sentenced Gwyn and Gwyrthur to fight for her each May Day until doom, when she would be given to the victor. The battle is that of winter and summer over the spring maid. Gwyn is the Welsh equivalent of the Cornish Melwas; in Arthurian romances he is mortalized as Gunvasius (Sir Guynas, Gwenbaus, Gwinas), king of the Orkneys, and in Spenser's Faerie Queene as Guyon. He also appears as king of the Tylwyth Teg (Welsh fairies).

GWYNEDD In Brythonic mythology tribe first ruled by Math, later governed by the magic of Gwydion, who was the first herdsman of the tribe's cattle. Gwynedd is the sky, over which Math is lord; the cattle are clouds over which Gwydion, the sun, is herdsman.

GWYNHWYVAR See Guinevere.

GWYRTHUR Brythonic solar deity, a god of summer. Brother and enemy of Gwyn, who abducted Creudylad, to whom Gwyrthur was betrothed. He was forced to fight a perpetual battle with Gwyn. As Gwyrthur ap Greidawl (i.e. Victor, son of Scorcher), he was the father of Gwynhwyvar (Guinevere), one of Arthur's three wives by that name. See Gwyn.

GYALIN King reigning over the Lamayin realm of the Sipa Khorlo or wheel of life of Tibetan Buddhism.

GYAL-TSHAN Tibetan victorious banner or standard. A large one sometimes has the sacred texts and eight Buddhist symbols.

GYGES (GYAS, GYES) (1) In Greek mythology, one of the three Hecatoncheires, giant sons of Uranus and Gaea. The Earthquake. An ally of Zeus in his war against the Titans. Killed by Heracles. (2) Shepherd king of Lydia. He dethroned and put his predecessor Candaules to death. He had a magic ring through which he was able to become invisible and see others at pleasure. The ring is a ring of fertility, the fruitfulness of the earth being seen in spring and invisible in winter.

GYLFE A legendary king of Svithod (Sweden) skilled in cunning and magic. In the form of an old man, called Gangleri, he set out for Asgard. The Aesir, knowing who he really was, prepared deceptions for him. He asked a series of questions of Odin, who assumed three forms: Har (High), Jafnhar (Equally High), and Thrídi (Third). The answers are the myths related in Gylfaginning (Delusion or Beguiling of Gylfe), which composes the first part of the Younger Edda. When all had been related the Aesir tossed Gylfe out.

GYMIR (GYMER) In Norse mythology father of Gerd. Giant shepherd of Gulveig, the Hag of Iarnvid. Storm giant of the east. Also called Egther or Aegir, a title meaning the covering of the depth of the ocean and, as Egther, he was an ocean deity.

GYP A common dog's name. A bitch or female puppy is called a gyp. The name yields ever-existent eye. In England, a gyp is a college servant, and in the United States, a swindler.

GYPSUM In Greek antiquity used in initiations to 'smear off' or purify. Supposedly worn by the Titans as a disguise to keep them from being identified when they mutilated Dionysus.

GYPSY (GIPSY) Fortune teller, musician, nomad, story teller, tent dweller, tinker. Usually identified as of Egyptian descent, the Gypsies being said to be descendants of outcasts of the temple of Thoth. They probably are of Aryan descent, Indian, or Persian. According to a Christian legend they are strays on earth because they refused to shelter the Virgin and her child in their flight to Egypt.

GYRON In heraldry an ordinary, signifying unity.

GYU-O In Japan a lie-detector. A white paper on which a grotesque karasu (crow or raven) is drawn. Used when taking oaths. After a person has sworn that a statement is true the gyu-o is burned and the ashes are given to him to swallow. The guy-o angered by untruths will devour the falsifier. Used especially on suspected thieves or other criminals.

H

H Eighth in a class or series. In gnostic tradition, the Twin Pillars of Heaven, the Aged and Immutable Door or Gateway. Signifies the Hierarch (One who has attained the mystic age of 33). As the equivalent of eight, the letter of atonement or regeneration. Its ladder-like form symbolizes up and down. Mystic emblem of the Celestial Twins, the Horebs, i.e. Cherubs, and of the Harits; all are also represented by HH or twin towers. Occult significance: tends toward gain or pleasure; its period is for eight years. Character traits: fluent with words, love of outdoors, love of splendor, materialistic. Physical weak spots: stomach and tumors. Planetary correspondence: Mercury. Symbolic correspondence: inspiration. Tarot correspondence: Justice. Zodiacal correspondence: Cancer (according to some astrologers, Libra). Among Hebrew cabalists, character traits are: agriculturist, just, traveler. In low form, abuse of justice, dissolute, strife. In medieval Roman notation 200; with line above 200,000.

Parallels the Anglo-Saxon rune haegel (hail); the Arabic hha; Celtic huath (white thorn); Egyptian hieroglyph meander (according to some the sieve, which is really the equivalent of kh), the Hebrew he (window). The Hebrew cheth (fence or enclosure), also equated with h, really is the equivalent of ch. Resolves into a-t-ch, which yields A, the resplendent self-existent (i.e. the sun). See Alphabet Affiliations.

HAAKON (HACO, HACON, HAKON, HOCKEN) (1) Masculine name from the Norwegian, which yields Great One or Great Sun and signifies high kin. (2) In Norse tradition a good king named Haakon is to rise after the Fenris-wolf has been let loose on mankind.

HABAKKUK (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning loving embrace. (2) The name of a minor Hebrew prophet about whom little is known but who has become the subject of many legends.

HABDALAH A Hebrew ceremony at the close of the Sabbath consisting of a benediction over sweet spices; the lighting of a taper, near which the fingers are held for a moment; the sipping of a glass of wine; finally the extinguishing of the taper in the wine.

HABERGEIS Tyrolian malicious bird. One of the tools of the devil, its cry denotes death. Anyone imitating it is torn to pieces.

HABONDE (ABUNDIA) In Danish mythology a distributor of gifts. She corresponds to Fulla, goddess representing the fullness of the earth at harvest.

HABOR Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning agile.

HACHET For symbolism, see ax.

HACHIMAN (HACHIMAN DAIBOSATSU, HACHIMAN TARO) Japanese war god, god of the Eight-banners. Son of Empress Jingo. Later patron deity of the Minamoto family, a warrior clan. A Shinto god adopted by the Buddhists. Apotheosized spirit of Emperor Ojin. Also called Yahata. Compares with Ares, Mars.

HACKELBEREND Literally, mantle-wearer. A name applied to Odin as wind god.

HADAD (ADAD) Syriac Great Father. Probably an atmosphere deity. Father of Seimia, fate goddess. Identical with Balmarcodes. Name means powerful.

HADASSAH Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning myrtle. In the Bible, a name for Esther.

HADDING (1) Norse sea deity. When wounded he was nursed by Ragnhild, who left a ring in his wound. At a later time, when her father instructed her to choose a husband from an assembly of suitors, she felt their bodies and recognized Hadding by means of the ring. A form of the identification motif in folktales. After years of dwelling in hills and in disuse of arms, he longed for the sea; Ragnhild, on the other hand, when away from the woodlands, longed for the cry of the wolves and the howl of beasts. A story analogous to that of Njord and Skadi. (2) Son of Halfdan and Signe-Alveig. After the death of his father by Svipdag, he was cared for by Odin, who gave him to drink of Leifner's Flames, which gave him bravery and strength beyond that of all other men. He became king of Sweden and warred against his half-brother Gudhorn, king of the Danes. He slew a sea monster only to discover he had slain Svipdag in disguise. Although Svipdag had killed his father, he was usually a benignant god, and to appease the gods for killing one of their number, Hadding initiated the practice of human sacrifice, offering a human being annually. Probably a light or sun deity.

HADES (AIDES) (1) In Greek mythology, son of Cronus and Rhea. His brothers were Poseidon and Zeus; his sisters were Demeter, Hera, and Hestia. In primitive Greece he was king of the underworld, which he left only once, when he kidnaped Persephone, who became his bride. He was a benignant deity who watched over agriculture and the harvest. His realm contained the germs of all future harvests and other riches, such as metals and minerals. However, its wealth did not relieve it of gloom. As lord of the wealth contained in the earth, he was also known as Plutus. His emblem was the cornucopia. In later times, he was king of the dead and was the successor of Erebus, ancient primeval divinity after whom the region originally was called. His name was so feared, it rarely was mentioned by mortals. Those who invoked him did so by striking the earth with their hands and in sacrifices to him turned away their faces. His name, meaning unseen, was sometimes uttered as an oath; those who swore by him bound themselves to destruction for failure to keep a pledge. He usually was represented as a bearded man with a dense mass of hair falling forebodingly over his forehead, seated on a throne, clad in a himation, holding a scepter and a patera, with Cerberus at his side. Sometimes he was shown carrying either a two-pronged fork or the keys to the underworld, wearing his helmet of invisibility, and riding a chariot of gold drawn by four black horses. Black sheep were sacrificed to him at night; his priests wore black robes and cypress wreaths. The cypress, maiden-hair fern, narcissus, and poppy were sacred to him. His Roman counterparts were Dis and Pluto. (2) In Primitive Greece, the land of roots and beginnings, a region from which came the wealth of the earth; later the underworld abode of the dead, that which Cronus (Time) was unable to consume, the kingdom of darkness guarded by the many-headed dog Cerberus. It was surrounded by the river Styx, intense darkness, which flowed nine times around the realm, and over which Charon conducted the souls of the dead whose bodies had been buried with proper rites. Hades was divided into two sections, Elysium (abode of the just) and Tartarus (abode of the unjust), and through it flowed four rivers: Acheron, river of woe; Cocytus, river of lamentation; Lethe, river of forgetfulness; Phlegethon (or Pyriphlegeth), river of fire. Anyone who tasted the food of Hades was condemned to remain there. However, in the case of Persephone, Zeus compromised and permitted her to return to earth for half of each year. The three judges of Hades were: Aeacus, Minos, and Rhadamanthys. Late Attic tradition adds Triptolemos. Hades corresponds to the Hebrew Sheol as a state or abode of the dead. Inasmuch as it is not a place of punishment it does not correspond to Hell, but Hades is sometimes used as a euphemism for Hell.

HADHAYOSH (HADHAYAOSH)

Literally, ever pure. Iranian primordial α , on whose back men passed from region to region across Vourukasha, the primeval sea. At resurrection, ambrosia will be prepared from a mixture of the fat of Hadhayosh and white haoma. Also called Sarsaok. Analogue of Behemoth.

HADJI A Moslem who has made a pilgrimage (also called hadji) to Mecca. The pilgrimage is required of every free Mohammedan at least once during his life in the twelfth month of the year. Hadji is sometimes used before a name as a title.

HADUI Iroquois hunchback supernatural being who is the cause of decrepitude and disease, but who gives Yoskeha (Sapling) the secret of medicine and of the ceremonial use of tobacco.

HAEMON (HAIMON) In Greek mythology son of Creon and Eurydice. When Antigone was killed by Creon he committed suicide. Haemon is a counterpart of Romeo. See Antigone.

HAG Scottish she-devil, a sorceress or witch. A malicious ugly old woman believed to be in league with the devil or the dead. The hags ride people at night, especially handsome young men and cause discomfort and nightmares. Anciently the hag-mother was the enemy of all life, she was a spirit of darkness and storms and prevented the union of her son with his bride, thus causing a cessation of fertility and growth.

HAGAN (HAGEN) In the Nibelungenlied a great warrior in the service of Gunther, king of Burgundy. For Gunther, he murders Siegfried, robs Kriemhild of part of the treasure she had inherited from Siegfried and buries it in the Rhine. Kriemhild, after her marriage to Etzel, king of the Huns, invites him to Etzel's court and cuts off his head when he refuses to reveal where the treasure is hidden. Thus Hagan is a great warrior slain by a woman. He usually is described as of lordly gait but rough, with a terrible visage, his chest is broad, his hair is slightly gray, his legs are long and sinewy. Hagan represents the darkness of winter, which murders the summer sun (Siegfried) and then carries its treasure (growth) into the underworld. Hagan appears in many legends as well as in Wagner's Nibelungen Ring. As Hogni, the son of a mortal and a sea-monster, he appears in old Norse sagas. In the German epic Gudrun, he is a young prince of Ireland who, after being abducted, is nurtured by three kings' daughters. He finally succeeds in returning to his native land where he becomes king.

HAGAR (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning stranger or wanderer. (2) In Hebrew lore the servant of Sarah, who being barren gave her to Abraham as a secondary wife, and she became the mother of Ishmael. After the birth of Isaac, son of Sarah, Hagar and Ishmael were cast out into the wilderness at Sarah's instigation. As Hagar and Ishmael were about to perish of thirst, an angel showed Hagar a well of water. Hagar's name is honored among the Arabs, who claim to be her descendants. In a Christian allegory, Hagar represents the Jewish Church as in bondage to the ceremonial law; Sarah represents the true church of Christ, free of bondage.

HAGBART In Icelandic sagas the betrothed of the princess Signe, whose father hanged him. Signe, in despair, set fire to her quarters and was consumed. Hagbart and Signe may be compared with Abelard and Heloise, Haemon and Antigone, Romeo and Juliet.

HAGGADAH The narrative read at the Jewish Seder, the Passover feast. It tells the story of the Exodus, of Israel's deliverance from Egyptian slavery, and of its birth as a nation. It is a nonlegal part of Jewish traditional literature, a free exposition or illustration of the Midrash or scriptures; hence that which is characterized by free interpretation. The legal part of the Midrash is called Halachah.

HAGGAI Literally, festive. A so called minor prophetic book of the Bible bearing the name of its author, one of the three prophets of the restoration who encouraged the Jews in rebuilding Jerusalem.

HAGMENA (HOGMENA) In Scotland a Christian call adopted from the pagan festival of Ag-Mena.

HAHAIWUQTI Pueblo Indian goddess. The Old Woman.

HAHGWEHDAETGAH Seneca Indian evil one who ushered in the West to darken the sun and kidnaped the corn spirit and caused beans and squash to flee from the face of the earth until Hahgwehdiyu, the sun, reached into the underworld and brought them back. A myth which resembles that of Hades and Persephone.

HAHGWEHDIYU Iroquoian Indian good creator god, the sun. Son of Ataensic (Sky Woman) and twin brother of Hahgwehdaetgah, the evil one who constantly strove to destroy everything that Hahgwehdiyu created.

HAHN Masculine name identical with Ian, Ion, John.

HAHNESS Thunder bird of the Chehalis and Chinook Indians. The raven from which mankind was created. See Too-lux.

HAIA In the cabala a higher or fourth principle of the soul. The living soul, vitality. See five.

HAIBET In Egyptian antiquity the shadow or other self.

HAIDEE Feminine name from the Greek, meaning beautiful.

HAIIDUK (HEYDUCK, HEYDUKE) A brigand, marauder. The haiduk first appeared in Hungary in the 16th century as a mercenary soldier fighting in the Protestant cause. Later they appeared as patriotic mountain bandits who fought for the Slavs of the Balkan Peninsula in the struggle for independence against Turkey. A male servant dressed in Hungarian semi-military costume is called a haiduk.

HAIETLIK (HAHEKTOAK) Lightning snake of British Columbia.

HAIL Assault of an enemy. Hail was among the plagues of ancient Egypt, and greatly feared because it was so rarely seen there; it also appeared to help the Israelites defeat an army of Canaanites and is used figuratively by the Jews to represent terrible judgments. The word hail, which also is used as a greeting, is related to the Celtic hael, meaning sun, and to the Danish hjul, meaning wheel. It is radically the same as yule.

HAILLY Cry to the sun, which ended the sacred sun song-dance of Mexican and Peruvian Indians.

HAIN Hebrew letter. Also known as ain (ayin), which see.

HAIR Foliage, rain, sun's rays. Authority, creative energy, greatness, honor, respect, strength. Probably because of its rapid growth, regarded as a special seat of life. According to an old superstition a boy's hair must not be cut until he is seven years of age if he is to grow into a powerful man. Worn unshorn by men who have taken a vow of vengeance until the vow has been fulfilled or until an enemy has been slain. Among primitives sacred as the seat of the soul, the abode of one's personal protective god. Hung on sacred trees or on trees above graves as a substitute for the sacrifice of the individual. Dream significance: costly trickery. Hair is from the radical ar (light). Compare baldness, blood-letting. American Indians in puberty rites cut a lock of hair from the crown of a boy's head and dedicated to Thunderbird, tutelary of war. When the hair grew out again, it was parted in a circle from the rest, braided, and war honors were worn on it. This lock was taken when the dead enemy was scalped as a vehicle which transported the magic power or vital strength of the dead man. A lock of a dead relative was carried by pregnant women to ensure the re-rebirth of the dead. Hopi Indian girls wore their hair in whorls at the side of the head, imitating the squash blossom, symbol of fertility. In Buddhism hair done up in a high chignon, surmounted by a cintamani (flaming pearl), is the headdress of an Adibuddha. In Chinese mythology the hairs and skin of Pa'n Ku became the plants and trees. In Egypt a solitary hair on the bald head of Father Time was known as the lock of Horus. In Greece a lock of hair presented as an offering to a deity signified the surrender of the giver's life to the divine will. Hebrew men wore their hair moderately short. In mourning rites they plucked it out by handfuls, shaved it close, or wholly neglected it. Lepers, when cleansed, and Levites, on their consecration, shaved the whole body. When Samson's hair was cut, his physical strength ascribed to God was lost; the hair being his bond of union which was broken, and which returned when it grew out again. The Hebrew cabalists had a doctrine as follows: Bald in natural course of time - one who undergoes change; if his conduct previously were good, it becomes bad, or vice versa. Bald, prematurely - avaricious, hypocritical. Black and dull - one who quarrels with business associates; successful in holy studies. Black and glossy - one successful in material things if he works alone. Coarse and straight - one who does not fear God and works evil knowingly, but grows better with age. Frizzy - choleric temper. Straight and silky - good companion; business success in partnerships; talkative. In Japan hair typifies evergreens. In Norse mythology abundance, plenty. See Sif.

Blonde hair. Principle of good.

Boar's hair. In Vedic mythology sacrificial grass. Compare head, mouth, teeth, tongue, tusks of boar.

Brunette hair. Principle of evil. Deities of darkness, devils, and villains are portrayed with dark hair.

Combed out hair. A rain charm. Universally a belief prevails that combed-out or cut hair may disturb the weather, cause rain and hail, thunder and lightning. In the highlands of Scotland no sister combs her hair at night if she has a brother at sea. In the Tyrol witches supposedly use combed-out strands of hair to make hailstones.

Dishevelled hair. Distraction, untidiness, war. Deities of the underworld sometimes are portrayed with dense masses of hair falling forebodingly over the forehead.

Dog's hair. In medical superstition a dog's hair applied to a wound caused by the bite of the animal will cure it. Hence the expression, "Hair of the dog that bit you," is used humorously to mean a drink of liquor taken when sobering up from a debauch.

Golden hair. See Blonde hair.

Gray hair. Old age, venerability, wisdom.

Hair in flames. Buddhist Dharmapala form.

Hair knotted. Siouan and other American Indians use as a warrior's medicine charm. The hair of a horse's tail likewise was braided or knotted as a protective charm.

Lock of hair. A love fetish. In contagious magic the hair severed from a person's body, if hurt or injured, will simultaneously hurt or injure the original owner. Thus, when the Nandi have taken a prisoner, they shave his head and keep the shorn hair as surety that he will not escape. When the prisoner is freed or ransomed, his shorn hair is returned. Compare nail, spittle.

Long hair. Father Time. In Christian tradition a man's signifies penitence; a woman's virginity.

Luxuriant hair. Sun's strength in summer.

Red hair. In Egypt persons with red hair were supposedly under the influence of Set or Typhon, the underworld deity. Children with red hair were given amulets to protect them from being carried away by the evil god. In Russia red-headed people are believed to possess more knowledge of magic than others and are disliked on this account.

Scant hair. Winter, when trees have lost their foliage.

Shearing hair. Death, the cutting of life, power, and strength. In many societies, hair shearing is a ritual sacrifice to the sun's daily setting or annual loss of power, or the shearing of evil spirits. At the feast to the mother-goddess in Byblus, virgins sacrificed their hair or their chastity. The shaving of the hair symbolized the sacrifice of oneself to the deity. In mourning ceremonies a perpetual bond of union between the mourner and the dead. A token of disgrace, loss of health and power, cause of destructive thunder and lightning or hail. Because it is a soul or deity abode, shorn hair must be protected against falling into the hands of an enemy who may bewitch it and cause harm to the owner by contagious magic. In Buddhism signifies the rejection of the world of pleasure for a life of contemplation. In Catholicism, rejection of the world of pleasure for the world of religion.

Six hairs. Emblem of water-mothers. Attribute of Sophia.

Three hairs. Three locks on a head typifies Christ's oneness with the Trinity.

Woman's hair. The long abundant hair of a woman symbolizes a virgin bride. In Hebrew tradition lechery, luxury. Roman women, before marriage, sacrificed their hair to Diana, the virgin goddess.

HAITSI-AIBEB Hottentot beneficent god who overcame a hostile being named Gama by hitting him with a stone behind the ear. Gama had used this stone to kill all men who passed by him. Identified with Tsui Goab.

HAJAR-AL-ASWAD The famous black stone in the Kaaba's northeast corner. According to legend, when Abraham desired to build the Kaaba, the stones came to him miraculously without human aid, and he commanded the faithful to kiss this one. The stone is probably an aerolite worshiped before the days of Mahomet; according to a Persian legend it was an emblem of Saturn. In another legend it was white when it came from paradise and turned black with the sins of those who kissed it. On Judgment Day it is to have two eyes by which to recognize all who have kissed it, and a tongue with which it will bear witness to Allah.

HAKO Pawnee ceremony representing the union of Tirawatius (heaven-father) and H'uraru (earth-mother), and the birth of life. A prayer is offered for children, health, long life, and prosperity. The essential symbols of the mystery are the winged wands representing the eagle, the most powerful genii and intermediary between men and gods; a plume of white feather-down, typifying the fleecy clouds of heaven and the winds or breath of life; and an ear of maize (daughter of Heaven and Earth). Parallels the Eleusinian Mysteries.

HALACHAH The legal part of the Midrash. Jewish traditional law embracing minute precepts not found in the written law. See Haggadah.

HALBRED Body guard, ceremonial display, war. Carries the same general symbolism of the spear, which see. Christian implement of martyrdom. Emblem of Saint James the Less, Saint Jude.

Halbred, sonorous stone, fish, two persimmons, and scepter. In China signifies hope for abundant happiness and joy and that all business affairs may be as one desires.

HALCYON Calm weather, peace, security. Bird sacred to Thetis. Also called kingfisher.

Halcyon days. Days of happiness and prosperity, rest and untroubled felicity. Any tranquil period. The seven days preceding and the seven days following the shortest day of the year (winter solstice), from a superstition that calm weather is provided by Thetis because it is the brooding time of the halcyon, whose nest, supposedly floats on the sea.

HALCYONE In Greek mythology wife of King Ceyx. When he perished in a shipwreck, Halcyone plunged into the sea and Thetis made of each a halcyon (kingfisher), as this bird, noted for the tender affection which characterized the unfortunate couple, always flies in pairs.

HALF-CLOTHED The divine. Divinities are usually portrayed with the upper part of the body naked inasmuch as the upper portions of the universe remain unclothed; the body is clothed from the waist down because terrestrial things are hidden from view.

HALFDAN (HEALFDENE) In Norse legends the name of several heroes, usually personifications of darkness. In Icelandic sagas grandson of Skate, younger son of Beli. After the death of his older brother Helge, he was forced to pay tribute to Frithiof (see), husband of his sister Ingeborg. In Norse mythology descendant of Thor. Husband of Signe-Alveig. In the war of the frost giants and the gods, he killed his father-in-law and captured his sister-in-law Groa, who bore him a son named Gudhorn. He also captured Groa's son Svipdag, who eventually killed him. In this tale Halfdan is the mythological equivalent of the legendary Feng, who killed his brother Horwendil, and abducted Horwendil's wife Gerutha, the mother of Amleth (Hamlet). In the Thorstein Saga a hero who becomes the foster-brother of Viking and saves his life.

HALICARNASUS Ancient city in Asia Minor, site of the Mausoleum, one of the seven wonders of the ancient world.

HALIRRHOTHIOS Greek sea god; son of Poseidon. Slain by Ares when he attempted to abduct Alcippe, daughter of Ares. See Areopagus.

HALL In medieval times the main room of a castle or great house, where meals were cooked and eaten; distinguished from the bower or sleeping apartment. In modern times a court of justice, a place of entertainment, a public building; also the entry or passageway of a house.

Hall of Two Truths. In Egyptian mythology seat of judgment where the deceased were brought before Osiris, the supreme judge, who was surrounded by forty-two assessors, each of whom addressed the dead in turn and to whom the dead declared their innocence or guilt.

HALLAH Bread baked in the form of a twisted roll and eaten by Jews on the Sabbath and at festivals; originally a deity offering. Analogue of the hot cross bun.

HALLELUJAH (ALLELUIA, ALLELUIAH) Literally, praise ye Jehovah. An exclamation used in songs of joy, praise, and thanksgiving, meaning praise to God. Probably related to eleleu, Greek war cry meaning shining light.

Hallelujah lass. A humorously contemptuous name applied to active women members of the Salvation Army.

HALLEY Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning hale, healthy, also hallowed, holy.

HALLGERDA In Burnt Njal, an Icelandic saga, the beautiful, selfish, and wilful wife of Gunnar. She quarrels with Berghthora, wife of Gunnar's friend Njal, and stirs up a feud which ends tragically for both families. When Gunnar is finally trapped by his enemies, he begs Hallgerda for a lock of her hair with which to make a new bowstring, and she refuses to let him have it.

HALLIBURTON Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning bright and holy.

HALLINSKIDE (HALLINSKIDI) A title of Heimdal, Norse god of the rainbow. Name signifies owner of the vaulted arch or leaning way.

HALLOWE'EN November eve; night of October 31, when the strength of the gods of darkness, winter, and the underworld were great. In the old Celtic calendar the last night of the old year. To celebrate the end of summer and its fruitfulness the dead, evil supernatural beings, warlocks, and witches, went abroad holding revels. In pagan Irish rites the firstlings of every issue and the chief scions of every clan were sacrificed in a great fire to Cromm Cruaich as a tribute to the god for fertile crops. Christianity borrowed the holiday and called it the Eve of All Hallows or All Saints. It is devoted to all sorts of games in which old rites and superstitions can be traced. It is called gate-night because the young people remove the gates of fences, sometimes using them for bonfires which echo the great fire of Cromm Cruaich. It is called paint-night, because young people paint the houses and walks of their neighbors, reflecting the ancient practice of trying to deceive the evil spirits abroad on Hallowe'en. It is called tick-tack night because a button through which a string has been run and wound is held up against windowpanes, making eerie sounds in imitation of the witches still said to be around. It is called the vigil of All Saints. Hallowe'en is represented by cats, ghosts, goblins, a jack-o-lantern, pumpkin, a witch riding a broomstick, and the colors orange and black. See Samhain.

Hallowmas. November 1. Christian celebration in honor of all saints and martyrs. Also called All-hallows. In Scotland one of the quarter-days celebrating fertility and harvest, the others being, Beltane, Candlemas, Lammass.

HALO Deification, divine assistance, divinity, glory, holiness, sun. Light which knows no shadow, beam purer than ether, perfect wisdom. Placed behind the heads of divine or sacred personages, and indicates the wearer is illumined by the unshadowed and brilliant light of truth. Generally represented as a circle, hexagonal, square, or triangle; the square symbolizing earth, usually distinguishes living persons. In religious rites frequently typified by a pure white garment. In mythology a halo or nimbus was the sign by which the divine birth of abandoned children was made known. Dream significance: esteem, glory. In Buddhism radiation of light from a Buddha's mind.

HALOA Feast at Athens containing mysteries of Demeter, Persephone, and Dionysus on the occasion of the cutting of the vines and the tasting of wine made from them. Sports constituted the actual festival. The name of the festival comes from the growth of the vine, called Aloai. Cakes, in the shape of sex symbols, were served.

HALSEY Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning greeting, salutation.

HALTIA (HALDJA) Finno-Ugric tutelary genius of a man, the ruler which precedes him, usually the culprit of a man, as is obvious from the phrase, "It is not he, but his haltia." Said to appear in the shape of a dog or mottled or striped cat before a misfortune. The person who dies first in a house or lights its first fire usually becomes the haltia of a house. Compare varjohaltia.

HAM Literally, swarthy. In Hebrew mythology son of Noah.

Brother of Japheth and Shem. Ancestor of the Hamitic race. For gazing on his father when naked (drunk), his father cursed him to be the servant of his brothers. He was dark skinned and ruler of the hot south. He had four sons, Canaan, Cush, Mizraim, and Phut, and his descendants were said to have founded Canaan, Ethiopia, Egypt, Libya, and several African tribes. The Arabs call Egypt Misr after Misraim. Ham was an agriculturist; his brother Shem a shepherd, and the eternal quarrel between husbandman and nomad exists in their story as it did in that of Cain and Abel. Ham, dark skinned, represents the forces of darkness; Shem, light skinned, represents those of light. Compare Cain.

HAMA A name of Heimdal. In Beowulf he carries off the Brisenga-men necklace from Eor-manric.

HAMADRYAD Greek individual spirit or nymph whose life begins and ends with that of a particular tree. Represented as quiet, self-reliant. Frequently portrayed as woman to the waist, the trunk of a tree below. The word is from the Greek hama (together) + druas (tree). Compare dryad.

HAMAGUCHI GOHEI (HAMAGUCHI DAIMYOJIN) In Japanese mythology farmer worshiped as a god of agriculture.

HAMAN A favorite of Ahasuerus, king of Persia, he plotted against Mordecai the Jew. He was thwarted by Esther and Mordecai, fell into disgrace, and was executed. Thus he typifies one hanged on the gallows he had prepared for another.

HAMATH One of the four oldest cities of the world; the others being Gaza, Hebron, and Sidon. It was located in Syria, and celebrated in the very earliest ages. In David's time, Toi, king of Hamath, was David's ally.

HAMBARUS Armenian spirits who inhabit deserted places and ruins. From a Persian word meaning house spirits.

HAMELIN A town on the Weser in Germany which appears in medieval legend as a town overrun by rats. See Pied Piper of Hamelin.

HAMILTON Masculine name from Old French, probably meaning from the mountain hamlet.

HAMINGJA Norse female fortune-bringing guardian spirit. She cheers, consoles, warns and brings good luck, especially to a child born with a caul. She stays with a person throughout life, appears in dreams to give noble counsel, and speaks for those who are dead. Name means caul or skin. Analogue of lar or penate.

HAMISTAKAN Iranian resting place of those whose good works and sins exactly counterbalance. In Hamistakan they wait the renovation of the world, their only suffering being from cold or heat.

HAMLET In Shakespeare's tragedy Hamlet, the prince of Denmark whose uncle Claudius kills his brother, Hamlet's father, marries Gertrude, Hamlet's mother, and usurps the throne to become king. To devote himself to revenge, Hamlet pretends madness and puts Ophelia, with whom he is in love, roughly aside. Hamlet vacillates and philosophizes rather than act in the situation. Ophelia drowns herself and Laertes, her brother, challenges Hamlet to a duel. Encouraged by Claudius, Laertes uses a poisoned sword. He wounds Hamlet, but in the conflict both youths drop their swords which are accidentally exchanged, and Hamlet wounds Laertes with the poisoned blade. Gertrude picks up a drink of wine, which Claudius had poisoned and intended for Hamlet, to toast her son's success, and dies. Hamlet, now thoroughly convinced of the evil of his uncle, kills him, and he and Laertes succumb of their poisoned wounds. Shakespeare borrowed Hamlet from mythology. In Danish myths he was known as Amleth (which probably means insane) and in Icelandic sagas he was known as Amlode. He was the son of Horwendil and Gerutha, the nephew of Feng, who slays Horwendil and marries Gerutha. Another Hamlet analogue is Svipdag, whose mother Groa is seduced by Halfdan; Svipdag kills Halfdan. In the mythological accounts the conflicts typify the struggle between light (represented by Horwendil) and darkness (represented by Feng) or summer and winter for the fertility maid (Gerutha). As the fight for supremacy between light and darkness is everlasting, Amleth, the young light or spring of the year, rises to defeat the aging darkness or winter. The poisoned spear replaces the poisonous dragon or monster (cold or withholder of fertilizing rains). The Shakespearean drama has become the subject of endless psychological argument and debate. Hamlet the wronged son is said to be Shakespeare's purgatory. According to August Schlegel, "The whole play is intended to show that calculating considerations exhaust... the power of action." Goethe, agreeing with Schlegel says, "Hamlet is a noble nature without the strength of nerve which forms a hero. He sinks beneath a burden which he cannot bear, and cannot cast aside." Harry Slochower says that Hamlet suffers from uncertainty and indecisiveness caused by his mother complex. He is a man who never mourns his father, but constantly reproaches his mother. Because of his incestuous desires, he continually fences with words, becomes a 'whore of words,' and thus dallying does not attempt to carry out his mission until it is too late to change the nature of the situation or of society. He typifies inner insecurity, a split within one's self; he knows what to do but lacks a guide or belief to carry out the action; he is within himself a conflict of good and evil, weakness and strength. Hamlet has come to be regarded as the prototype of modern introspective man.

Hamlet without the part of the prince. The principal character omitted. Said when the person who was to have been the principal at a function is absent.

HAMLIN, JOHN (OR JACK)

A professional gambler who appears in several of Bret Harte's stories. He is courteous and sportive with a tendency toward melancholy.

HAMMER Celestial power, creative word, divinity emblem, fashioner of the universe, instrument of death, labor, lightning, thunder. Imitator of nature (instrument of sculptors). In metaphor the brain is likened to an anvil or forge; thought to the hammer. Universally instrument which releases the sun after it has been imprisoned in a cave or dungeon, suggesting a sun darkened in winter and making a reappearance during spring storms.

With it artisan gods hammered out the sky and made implements and weapons for the deities. Dream significance: imprudence, lack of skill. Symbolical equivalent of ax, cross, sword. The African Dinkas have a Great Chief of the Hammer; also a House of the Ax in the form of a sacred spear, which supposedly came down from heaven in a thunderstorm. In ancient Britain a hammer was placed in a grave as a symbol of immortality. In Christian art symbolizes martyrdom, the Passion, sign of the crucifixion. Attribute of Saint Eloy. The Egyptians worshiped a hammer deity. In Greek mythology an attribute of Ananke and Hephaestus. The Mayas worshiped a Great Seer of the Hammer, likewise known as God of the Ax. In Norse, as well as in other cultures, symbolized fertility. It was the strength of Thor and was intended to be not only a mallet but a rock, which sometimes gets lost under the sea (as growth disappears in winter) and sometimes rises to heaven. In Rome an attribute of Vulcan.

Hammer of Daikoku. In Japan diligence.

Hammer and Sickle. Insignia of the U.S.S.R., adopted in 1923. Symbolizes the union of industrial and farm labor.

Two-headed hammer. Lightning and thunder, thus life and fertility. Mallet of Thor.

HAMMURABI (KHAMMURABI)
King of ancient Babylon. In the Bible identified with Amraphel, king of Shinar (Sumer). A son of Sinnuballit, king of Babylon, he claimed Dagon, a fish god had created him. Recognized as the greatest king of the First Dynasty, his reign is placed variously from the 23rd to the 18th century B.C. The empire he founded survived for more than 2,000 years. He organized the city states of Sumer and Akkad into a state called Babylonia, with the city of Babylon as the capital. He appointed governors in all the cities to replace the king-priests and Merodach, city god of Babylon, was chosen to head the pantheon. He raised Babylonia to the highest place of power and influence among the nations of the earth. He was a builder of canals and roads. Under his direction scribes committed to writing the great epic of creation and of the deluge which destroyed the elder race of men; astronomers placed new constellations, one the Ship (Argo) the outgrowth of the deluge legend. Others were Centaurus (Kentaur), the Altar (Ara), and the Raven (Corvus). One of the most important documents of the human race, comprising 300 statutes inscribed in more than 3,600 cuneiform lines (now in the Louvre) is a record of the code of ethics he devised. Here the doctrine, "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth," was first enunciated in law. His code of laws imposed sterner justice on the rich than on the poor, but was strict for all. He claimed the laws were received from Bel Merodach. As one who claimed divine birth, an analogue of Sargon I; as one whose laws were god-given, analogue of Mahomet and Moses.

HAMORI Japanese god of leaves. Compare Kukunochi.

HAMSIKA In Hinduism daughter of Surabhi. Supporter of the south corner of the heaven.

HAND Amity, authority, benediction, construction, divine grace, divine presence, faith, force, greeting, honor, labors, mastery, oath, pledge, usefulness, vigor, work. Chief instrument of all operations; that which seizes and holds, as a crown. Universally a hand, sometimes moulded of gold and studded with gems, sometimes of base metals, glass or other materials, is revered as a talisman against fascination and other evil influences. In medieval times the hand became so common as a watermark, it became a generic term among paper makers. Dream significance: flattery; (if cut off) disunion, loss of a friend; (if dirty) visit from an applicant. In heraldry, pledge of faith. Hand yields brilliant or resplendent one and equates with hind (of dawn) and hound (of heaven).

The palm heel is assigned to the underworld goddess, the center is assigned to Mars as it grips weapons and its principal lines form the initial M. The thumb, the master or phallus finger is assigned to Venus as bringer of increase. The forefinger, digit or index finger is that of direction, fortunate guidance, or rule, assigned to Jupiter. Called furze or oak finger. The middle or fool's finger assigned to Saturn, the Christmas Fool, and death. Called heather finger. The fourth or wedding ring finger is also that of the leech or physic, and anciently physicians mixed medicants with it on the theory no poison could adhere to it without communicating the information. Assigned to Apollo, the healer and called gold or poplar finger. The small or ear finger, anciently was used by priests to stop the ear as an aid to inspiration, thus a divinatory finger. Assigned to Mercury as conductor of dead souls and to the yew tree.

In American Indian tradition the hand denotes supplication to the master of life or Great Spirit. In China called shou, a symbol of longevity. Christian symbol of God, the Father, the Divine Logos. In Catholicism, the thumb, that which is stout and strong, denotes the Chief Person of the Godhead; the third finger, taller than the others, denotes Christ, salvation; and the second finger, between the two, denotes the Holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Son; the two remaining fingers denote respectively the divine and human nature of Christ. In Egypt symbolizes fortitude, handicraft. In Hebrew antiquity the "laying on of hands," signified the bestowal of a blessing, consecration to office, or divine gifts. The hands of the high-priest laid upon the scapegoat, as if transferring the guilt of the people to the animal. The right hand meant towards the south, the Jews speaking as if facing the east. The gestures used in Hindu dances correspond to the mudras, which see.

The hand plays an important part in the symbolism of ancient steles and in recent art, including the dance and drama. The uses given here are universal unless otherwise indicated. See also under finger, gestures.

Black hand. Death threat, vendetta.

Bloody hand. Murder. African and Oriental mark of rank; also in English heraldry.

Cross one's hand. Give money for the purpose of receiving a favor or favorable report. From the custom of making gifts to a fortune teller by crossing the hand with money.

Hand across throat. Death threat.

Hand at face. One hand upright at face or both in a U sign is a distress sign making an appeal for help. See hand at head.

Hand at head. Hand supporting head denotes thought. Both hands touching top of head, hope. One hand touching top of head, beckoning, leadership, preservation. Hands sloped forward at head, head sometimes bent forward, praising the deity, reverence, salaaming, worship.

Hand across forehead. Distress.

Hand at heart. Reverence; clenched over heart indicates the plucking or tearing out of the heart, originally as an offering to the deity, in modern secular life, despairing lover. Hand flat over heart, adoration, love, salutation. Hand with a heart on the palm is a Christian symbol of fidelity to charity.

Hand at mouth. Secrecy, silence; anciently, secret of the mastery of resurrection, also of initiation and other secret rites.

Hand at nose. Arrogance, challenge, contempt, insult.

Hand at ray's end. The productive powers of the sun. A symbol frequently seen in Egyptian art. Sometimes the hand holds a seed.

Hand at side. Resignation.

Hand behind back. In Japan charm by which evil is averted from the person who exercises it.

Hand clapping. A custom in Japanese Shinto shrines; believed to be for the purpose of awakening the spirit of the kami (god).

Hand and cross. Talisman against the evil eye. To break a charm composed of these signs was thought to be a great misfortune.

Hand cupped behind ear. Listening (to sounds of solitude).

Hand cut off. In antiquity thievery punishment.

Hand emerging from clouds. Supreme deity.

Hand extended. Faith, fidelity.

Hand, eye on palm. Deity, harmonious accord.

Hand grasping straw. In Christian tradition lottery. It alludes to the drawing of straws to see whether Barabbas or Christ was to be released from execution on the cross.

Hand holding cap. Humility, a suppliant, as one who removes his hat before a superior.

Hand holding or pouring money. Betrayal.

Hand horizontal. Hands held horizontally in front of body, one above the other, separated by two or three inches of space, the palms facing each other, signifies obligation, probably originally an oath sign. Hands horizontally in line with chin, distress.

Hand, index finger extended. Command, direction indicator. Talisman against the evil eye.

Hand in fist. Threat.

Hand in glove. Close intimacy or cooperation.

Hand in grip. See hand clasped, handshake.

Hand of Fatima. North African and Western Asiatic small brass and silver hand, thumb and fingers extended, used as a charm to ward off the evil eye. Sacred Moslem symbol of divine province, generosity, hospitality, power. It represents the holy family; the thumb typifies Mahomet; the first finger, Lady Fatima; the second finger, Ali, her husband; the third finger, Hassan; the small finger, Hussein. It also represents the five principal commandments. Starting with the thumb: keep the feast of Ramadan, accomplish the pilgrimage to Mecca, give alms, perform all necessary ablutions, oppose all infidels. By fortune tellers the hand of Fatima is used as a key for the purpose of reading the abilities, character, and temperament of a person or for the purpose of foretelling the future.

Hand of glory. Charm made from the dried or pickled hand of a dead man, preferably one who had been hanged on a gallows. It supposedly confers invisibility on the owner or renders those to whom it is presented motionless. See hanging.

Hand of God. Health charm.

Hand on abdomen. As the abdomen typifies the physical body or that which is destructible, perishable or subject to decay, a sign of destruction. Earth sign of the Hung Society.

Hand on breast. One hand on breast, the other forming a right angle at the elbow with hand pointing heavenward forming a square is a sign of prayer, preservation of nature, others, or self. One hand on breast, the other not forming a square, implies faith, fidelity, trustworthiness.

Hand on plough. Agriculture, spring. In ancient China, Egypt, and Peru, the hand of the king on a plough was a sign of consecration and dignity. Ancients regarded husbandry a religious art, and the ruler frequently ploughed the first furrow or sod of the year.

Hand open. Justice, victory, also mockery, slapping. An open hand outstretched is a helping hand, symbolic of lack of avarice.

Hand over basin. Ceremonial cleansing, purification.

Hand over hand. With great rapidity, as by passing one's hand alternately one above the other in climbing a rope.

Hand pointing. Command, direction indicator. Signifies note well. Pointing downward is the calling on earth to witness; in Christianity signifies descent of grace, light and virtue, from the plane above to the plane below.

Hand (or foot) print in stone. Divinity markings, existence, immortality. Divinities who supposedly left such markings are: Adam, Buddha, Cabal (dog of Arthur), Heracles, Isis, Quetzalcoatl, Siva, Sume, Tlalnepantla, Vishnu. A hand print painted red is an American Indian symbol of the flaming sun. It was used as a charm to ward off evil and probably represents the earliest form of a seal.

Hand raised. Safety, stop.

Hand, red in color. Sun (see hand print in stone). Death warning, warning of violence. According to occultists, a person with a hand reddish in color will have good luck in politics.

Hands and arms bent in line with head. Distress.

Hands and arms straight up above head. Circumcision, death, distress, helplessness, surrender.

Hands clasped. Affection, brotherly love, greeting, marriage, union.

Hands crossed, downward.

Cross of equinox or Saint Andrew's cross, signifying humility.

Hands crossed over breast.

Death, resignation.

Hands crossed over solar plexus. Death, impotence. Hung Society sign of the wood element.

Hands downward. With palms upward, slightly away from body, completion, despair, finality, resignation. Hands downward swinging signifies beckoning. Modern custom is to move right hand upward and downward.

Hand, second and third fingers closed by thumb. The hand held with the first and fourth fingers extended typifies the devil's horns and is used as a curse or to indicate the presence of evil.

Hands folded. Modesty, prayer, resignation.

Hand shading eyes. Deity respect, respect to a superior, reverence. Dazzled by light of the deity or dazzled by light. In Australia sign of medicine man after initiation to signify his place in the tribe. In China one hand shading eyes with the other over the heart is a Hung Society sign if one is attacked; a fellow member immediately lets go.

Handshake. Survival of the ancient custom of treating a truce by taking hold of the weapon hand to insure against treachery. The ancient custom of greeting a man with a handshake or grip to keep those meeting from stabbing one another led to the modern form of greeting.

Hands in line with chin. Distress.

Hands on hips. Arrogance, independence. With thumbs forward, typifies reins, water, and is a sign of recognition.

Hands, palms together. Prayer, supplication. Palms together with fingers raised at breast, prayer, supplication.

Hands raised above head. With arms squared is a form of prayer, praise, praise of deity and a sign of circumcision; also with knees bent, circumcision, death. Straight up, a circumcision sign, and symbol of death, distress, helplessness, surrender. This gesture has become a popular one in moving pictures treating gangster and western themes. Hands up, tips of fingers touching, typifies divine salvation, exultation.

Hands sloped forward at head or with head bent. Praising the deity, reverence, salaaming, worship.

Hand stressing thumb. Thumb projecting between first and second fingers of a clenched hand which points downward is supposedly an infallible protection against evil influences, especially the evil eye. Thumb and two fingers outstretched, two fingers turned down toward the palm in Christian and Hebrew tradition denotes God as creator. Thumb turned down, denotes no, thumb turned up denotes yes.

Hands well apart. Each hand grasping a straight object, usually a candle, denotes gateway or pillars of the universe, gateway or pillars of dawn, of birth and death, or rebirth.

Hand, third and last fingers bent downwards. Hand with the thumb, first and second fingers extended is a universal sign of benediction. In Greek and Roman tradition, the three extended fingers denoted: thumb for Aphrodite (Venus) or increase; forefinger for Zeus (Jupiter) or fortunate guidance; middle finger for Cronus (Saturn) or fertile rain. Greek and Roman orators never omitted using the sign for fear of offending the gods.

Hand, three fingers extended. In Christian tradition typifies the Trinity.

Hand, tips of thumb, index finger, and third finger touching. In this gesture the third and fourth fingers are bent back so that a square or triangular hole is created. It is a sign of benediction by Jewish priests.

Hand uplifted. Administering or taking oath. Blessing. Suggests the power drawn from above. In Hebrew tradition symbolizes descendants of Aaron and the priestly caste of Cohen; sometimes called the hand of Cohen.

Hand washing. Cleansing, purification.

Hand waving. Farewell.
Hand waving around head. Dispelling demons.

Iron hand in a velvet glove. Severity cloaked by courtesy.

Join hands with. Become a partner of.

Left hand. The non-aggressive hand associated with decay, death, weakness. In the East, to accept anything with the left hand is an affront, as it is considered vile. In Tibet, the left hand is symbolic of the holiness of an incarnate lama. The left hand grasping the right at the center of the waist in ancient Sumer was a posture of prayer. Pointing downward denotes the calling on earth to witness.

Right hand. Deity. The aggressive hand, hand of growth and strength. Right hand laid on a person conveys authority, blessings, power, strength. Right hand lifted to heaven, an oath, swearing. In Hebrew tradition obedience and submission to God. Right hand stretched out, assistance. Right hand placed on left shoulder denotes anxiety, hope, martyrdom, sacrifice. It is a charm against ill luck and the source of the superstition of throwing a pinch of spilled salt over the left shoulder. In Africa boys who have completed circumcision make the sign to indicate adulthood and full membership in the tribe. Right hand pointing to heaven, left hand touching earth, is called the heaven and earth or witness sign and denotes the calling upon earth to witness attainment of virtue or to witness false charges. In Christian art signifies descent from heaven to earth or reascent to heaven or descent to the grave and then ascent to heaven. In Christian, Hebrew, and Moslem tradition, the right hand with three fingers extended symbolizes the three hypostases, the three-fold benediction.

HANDFLOWER Typifies warning.

HANGED MAN Card in Tarot deck illustrated by a young man tied by one foot to a gibbet in the shape of a tau cross. His head hangs downward, his hands are tied behind him, his legs are crossed, expressing crucifixion, submission to a superior will, and the complete cycle of manifestation. The cross symbolizes the four directions; the figure 4 formed by the legs multiplied by the 3 formed from the elbows to the head = 12, the number of signs in the zodiac, thus the complete cycle. The card is identified with Adonis, Attis, Christ, Dionysus, Osiris, Tammuz, all fertility gods. It typifies water, the first mirror and mirror which reflects up-side-down. Attainment: life in image, life in suspension, reflected life, suspended mind. In divination corresponds to number thirteen and the Hebrew letter mem. Denotes: atonement, charity, courage, discernment, discipline, fidelity, he who dies for an ideal, humility, knowledge, martyrdom, prophecy, prudence, reflected life, sacrifice, wisdom. When in reverse: the body politic, the crowd, selfishness.

HANGING Among tragic poets a mode in which the luckless die. A custom of ritual origin. The sacrificial victim was hung, thus choked or strangled, to acknowledge the victory of the strangling snake or dragon of drought or winter. The monster was propitiated with the offering to assure the return of fruitfulness with the rainy season. Similar sacrifices were made to the air or supreme god and, anciently men who died in their beds were given the blessed advantage of hanging after death, a privilege denied women. Some festivals celebrated the sacrificial death of the deity, himself. Christ and Odin were hanged gods. Early in the seventh century, Christ was shown on a cross, as crucifixion had replaced hanging as a mode of sacrificial death. In Saxon lore, the Irminsul, which originally was revered as a universal column or world tree sustaining all things, became known as Hangman's Stone. Inasmuch as a sacrifice had been blessed and consecrated, the clothes of the person hanged, the gallows, nail, rope, or any part of the paraphernalia used became valuable as a talisman with magical powers. Compare garment, rags, swinging.

Hanged person. Dream significance: agreeable surprise.

Hangman. Dream significance: bad news.

HANGING GARDENS OF BABYLON Gardens constructed by Nebuchadnezzar to gratify his wife Amytis, who wearied of the flat plains and pined for her native Median hills. One of the seven wonders of the ancient world.

HANHAU (AHPUCH YUM CIMIL) Yucatec god of death and war. An owl-headed deity.

HAN HSIANG-TZU Chinese sage; one of the Eight Immortals (Pa Kung). He was the nephew of a scholar who opposed all kinds of magic; contrary to the wishes of his uncle he became a disciple of the astrologers and spent his life as an ascetic. He was a favorite of Lu Tung-Pin who carried him to the peach tree of immortality. He is credited with the ability to make flowers blossom and grow instantaneously. He is the patron saint of musicians and his emblem is the flute. He never realized the value of money and, whenever he had any given to him, he scattered it about the ground. In art he is shown carrying with both hands a gourd-shaped basket filled with the peaches of immortality.

HANIEL In the cabala angel representing the grace of God. Corresponds to Netzach.

HANLEY Masculine name from Old English, meaning the high lea.

HANNAH (ANNA, HANNIE) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning grace.

HANNIBAL (1) Masculine name through the Latin from the Phoenician, meaning grace or favor of Baal. (2) Carthaginian general. Son of Hamilcar Barca, who began the reduction of Spain to a Carthaginian province. Hannibal, trained under father's command, was sworn to eternal enmity to Rome. He completed the conquest of Spain, crossed the Alps with elephants, and plunged Rome into danger with his victory at Cannae. Hence the proverbial rallying cry when faced with danger, 'Hannibal ante portas' (Hannibal at the gates). He was defeated by Scipio Africanus and fled from place to place to escape extradition to Rome. Finally faced with no further haven, he committed suicide.

HANNO AND HIMILCO Brothers; Carthaginian navigators of the 6th century B.C., explorers and voyagers, legendary discoverers of America.

HANPA Sumerian lord of wicked demons; father of Pazuzu.

HANS German form of John.

HANSA Hindu swan of eternity; fabulous bird which, when given milk mixed with water, separated the two and drank only the milk.

HA-NUI-O-RANGI Polynesian deity, great breath of heaven, offspring of Rangi, sky father.

HANUKKAH (CHANUCA) Jewish festival celebrated late in December in memory of the restoration of the temple service during the time of the Maccabees. It coincides with the winter solstice and probably derived from an ancient winter solstice observance. From the candle or lamp, an analogue of the yule fire, which remains lit during the eight day celebration, the festival is popularly called Feast of Lights. Also Feast of Dedication.

HANUMAN Literally, having three jaws. Hindu monkey god; son of the wind Vayu and a monkey nymph. Guardian god of village settlements, probably originally a genius of the monsoon as apes in Hindu mythology symbolize rain clouds. He leads the monkey hosts that build a bridge across the straits to Ceylon to assist Rama in rescuing his wife Sita from the demon-king of Ceylon. He is asked to stop whirlwinds, he is adored by women who hope to obtain offspring and by wrestlers. He is unequalled in defeating enemies and in the knowledge of cunning, magic, medicine and other learning. His image is worn as a talisman for good fortune and health.

HAOKAH Sioux two-horned thunder god whose drumstick is the wind. His countenance presents half grief, half cheer. He throws meteors.

HAOMA (HOMA) Iranian cosmic tree. Tree of Life brought from heaven by an eagle to the sacred mountain Hara Berezaiti. The divine tree is a white plant whose juice heals body and soul and provides immortality and prosperity. At resurrection ambrosia will be prepared from a mixture of the fat of Hadhayosh and White Haoma. The myth probably originally was a fire-myth, as an eagle supposedly brought fire (lightning) down from the sky, and the draught of immortality frequently is fire-water. Analogue of Soma, Yggdrasil, Zambu.

HAOSHYANGHA (HOSHANG)

Literally, king of good settlements. Grandson of Siyamak; son of Fravak and Fravakain; twin of Guzhak. He and Guzhak were the parents of Tahmurath and the progenitors of the Iranians. He was the second legendary king of Iran. His reign was marked by contentment, prosperity, and victory. He organized the nation, introduced the use of fire and metals, invented blacksmithing and canal digging and the making of clothes from skins. He was a smiter of the daevas (storm demons), which he attacked on a mountain. His fravashi (genius) is invoked to dispel evil done by daevas. As a civilizer and giver of laws, he resembles Pompilius of Rome. As a demon slayer, he resembles Mithras.

HAOSRAVAH (KAI KHUSRAU)

Literally, gallant hero. In Iranian legend greatest king of the Kaianian dynasty. Grandson of Kavi Usan, son of Siyavahsh. When Nairiyosangha, divine messenger, was about to slay Kavi Usan for conspiring with evil demons, the fravashi (genius) of the yet unborn Haosravah implored that his grandfather be spared on account of his own virtues. Avenging the death of his father was his life task, and he killed the storm demon Afrasiyab. Fearful his achievements would cause him to lapse into pride, he resigned his throne to Aurvataspa and, accompanied by a few paladins, he rode into the mountains. One by one his companions perished in the snow. Sraosha came to guide him and he alone of all those who left his kingdom arrived in heaven alive. This is a light myth. Kavi Usan was a sky god who conspired with storm or wind demons; Siyavahsh was the sun killed by darkness or winter; Haosravah was the young sun who dispelled darkness or winter. Haosravah resembles Yudhisthira.

HAPI (HAP) In Egyptian mythology: (1) Personification of the river Nile. Mate of Muit and Nekhbet. Fertilizer. Depicted as a man with a water pot (a form of Aquarius). Sometimes Hapi is portrayed as a man with pendulous female breasts to represent the fertility brought by the life-giving Nile. (2) One of the four sons of Horus. He was a dog-headed jinnee dwelling in Amenti, where he was lord of the South and assisted Horus in funeral rites. He was caretaker of the small intestines. See Horus's four sons.

HAPPINESS In China, symbolized by the bat (the character for bat and happiness being the same, i.e. fu). In the Occident symbolized by the beryl. In an Italian icon personified by a woman shedding tears on a heart she holds in her hand. A white lamb is at her feet.

Conjugal happiness. In China and Japan symbolized by a fish. In the Occident symbolized by a moonstone.

Happy Hunting Ground. Paradise of American Indians.

HAPTOK RING In Zoroastrianism one of the leaders of the four quarters of the sky; chieftain of the north. Ursa Major.

HAR Literally, high. One of the names of Odin. See Gylfe. Har is cognate with ar (eye), and is the source of names such as Harborough, Hargrave, Hardy.

HARA Literally, sweep away. In Hinduism Siva in his aspect as the devastating power which destroys the universe.

HARA BEREZAITI (MOUNT AL-BURZ) Iranian cosmic or world mountain. When Ahura Mazda created the earth, Angra Mainyu pierced it and caused Hara Berezaiti to rise. From it all other mountains sprang. On Taera, one of the summits of the sacred mountain, the sun, moon, and stars rise; on Hukairya, another summit, the waters flow down forming Ardisura under the Haoma or Tree of Life. All the rivers of the world flow from Ardisura. Hara Berezaiti is the scene of the various struggles between light or sun heroes and demons of darkness, drought, and winter.

HARAB SERAP Cabalistic dispersing raven; bird which drives out its young.

HARAHVAITI Avesta river goddess. Identical with the Afghanistans Helmund and Vedic Sarasvati.

HARAI (O-HARAI) (1) Shinto ceremony of purification performed twice during each year, the casting-out of evil. See hitogata. (2) Box on god-shelf inscribed with the names of the great gods of Ise. Its presence supposedly protects the home; its virtue lasts for six months.

HARA-KIRI In Japanese tradition disembowling, following one's lord in death, self-extermination. Suicide formerly practiced by daimios and military officers. The earliest record of hara-kiri, or Happy Dispatch, was that of Tametomo, brother of Sutoku, a 12th century emperor, after a military defeat at which most of his followers had been slain.

HARALD (1) Norse chieftain. When he attempted to open the barrow which supposedly held the body of Balder to rob it of its treasure, it split open and water poured from it and flooded the land. Storm demon. (2) Danish king, whom Odin, disguised in the form of Brun, the hero's mortal counsellor, advised. Inasmuch as Odin did not permit steel to injure the warrior nor shaft wounds to harm him, Harald offered Odin the souls of the slain.

HARBARD Name taken by Odin when disguised as a ferryman in a contest of wits with Thor, who was disguised as a peasant.

HARBOR Haven, place of safety, refuge. In Christian tradition eternal life, salvation.

HARDGREP Norse sorceress. Giantess daughter of the giant Vagnhofde. She cared for Hadding after the death of his father Halfdan, accompanying and protecting him on the battlefield until she was strangled by a great black hand.

HARE (1) A constellation in the Southern Sky also called Lepus. (2) Good-nature, humility, love of learning, resourcefulness, solitariness, timorousness, track-finder, vigilance. Also falsifier, flightiness, madness (thus 'mad as a March hare'), mischievousness, one lacking in fixed principles, trickster, vagabondage. Libidinousness, swiftness-of-foot, vegetarianism. As a nibbler, a wanton destroyer. In heraldry one who enjoys a peaceable and retired life. In several mythologies sacred to the moon as the cock is to the sun. In folk literature identified with the god of the underworld. A hare crossing one's path is unlucky because witches transform themselves into hares. American Indian Great Spirit; variously called Glooscap, Manabozho, Manabush, Messou, Michabo. In some parts of Africa held to be so unlucky, the hunter will return home if one crosses his path in the morning. In other sections Trickster hero of many tales; animal which gets the better of the lion by inducing the lion to swallow a hot stone. It embodies experienced wisdom and shrewd benevolence, and crossed to the New World as Brer Rabbit in Uncle Remus stories. In a Bushman legend messenger of the moon, who falsifies the message in which the moon promises that people will rise again after they die as the moon does. Because the hare falsified the message, men do not rise again and become mortal. The moon, thus frustrated, hits the hare across the mouth and splits his lip. In China called t'u, the hare is the fourth animal leading the sun through the twelve terrestrial branches (zodiac), is governor of Cancer (Mao), the direction east, and the hours 5 - 7 A.M. It represents Fang in the eastern quadrant, and is a symbol of longevity. In Chinese and Japanese legend a supernatural creature of auspicious omen that inhabits the moon, where it pounds with mortar and pestle the elixir of life. Christian emblem of Easter. It symbolizes fecundity and lust, and a white hare sometimes is placed at the foot of Virgin Mary to indicate her triumph over lust. It also typifies the church or a pursued Christian. In Egyptian art an attribute of Osiris; symbolic of open eyes. In Greek mythology associated with Eros. Hebrew symbol of contemplation, intuition, door, light, open window. In Japan called usagi, it is an animal of sunrise and a symbol of gratitude. Compare white hare of Ianaba, under white.

Harebrained. Foolish, giddy, heedless, rash, wild.

Hare ears. Fear and suspicion.

Hare foot. Agility, speed, swiftness. A talisman of actors.

Hare tracks. Fleetness, swiftness. By druids used for purposes of divination.

Hold with the hare and run with the hound. Play a double and deceitful part; be a traitor.

Kiss the hare's foot. Arrive too late.

Mad as a March hare. Erratic, freakish; from the actions of the hare in the breeding season. Also mad as a marsh hare as hares are wilder in marshes because of the absence of cover.

HAREBELL Childhood, grief, humility, submission. In Christianity flower of Virgin Mary.

HARGRAVE Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning a title of honor.

HARI In Hinduism Vishnu in dwarf form. In this form he asked a boon of Bali. Bali granted the request, which was to give Hari as much ground as he could cover in three strides, whereupon Hari assumed the full form of Vishnu, and occupied the earth, the atmosphere, and the sky. Hari typifies the sun, which springs to a great size and embraces the universe after rising.

Harihara. A combination of names of Vishnu and Siva, representing the union of the two deities.

HARINEGAMESI (HARINAIGAMAISIN) Jain a god with the power to grant children to those who pray to him. He was entrusted with the transfer of the embryo of Mahavira. In art represented with an antelope's head.

HARITI Hindu she-devil, eater of children. In Japan she became Kishibojin, protectress of babies and children.

HARITS In Hinduism the beautiful winged sisters who are the steeds of Indra. The name denotes the glistening surface produced by anointing with fat or oil; they are thus the shining lights of dawn, the bright and resplendent morning. They are sometimes interpreted to be the Asvins, twin brothers of dawn, physicians of heaven, who are symbolized by the letter H or by HH. Harits is the root of Charities.

HARLAN Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from the frost land.

HARLEQUIN Buffoon, clown. One who conjures away by magic tricks, plays the droll, makes sport of by playing ludicrous tricks. A personification of discordant elements of life; in allusion to the performer who wears party-colored, spangled garments, carries a mock sword or wand, and amuses the audience with droll tricks. In Italian comedies the servant of Pantalone and lover of Colombina. In England he dances through the world and frustrates the knavish tricks of the Clown and is the rival of the clown for the affections of Columbine. In general he is a mischievous intriguer. An Italian counterpart, a stock character in comedy, is Arlecchino. The name appears to be derived from that of a hobgoblin or sprite. The dream significance of harlequin is love of the unknown.

Harlequin bloom. Symbolizes laughing at trouble.

HARLEY Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the hart's lea.

HARLOT Appellation anciently applied to the cities of Jerusalem, Nineveh, Samaria, and Tyre. Among the Jews prostitutes were often foreigners, and for this reason they were called, "strange women." Inasmuch as they were devoted to the worship of idols and their abominations were part of the worship (see prostitution), the term harlot was applied to cities and nations given to idol worship.

HARLOW Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the hill fort.

HARMACHIS Egyptian god of the rising sun, worshiped at Heliopolis. Horus as lord of the two horizons, in which character he became a form of Ra. Sometimes identified as the god represented by the great sphinx at Gizeh.

HARMATTAN A dry wind of the west coast of Africa, which comes from the interior during December, January, and February. The clouds of dust it carries makes the atmosphere dense. It withers vegetation and parches the human skin, but mitigates climatic fever and dysentery. It brings intensely hot days which alternate with cool nights.

HARMONIA In Greek mythology daughter of Ares and Aphrodite; wife of Cadmus. At her wedding Harmonia was given two gifts, a necklace and veil made by Hephaestus. The gifts carried a curse which led the pos-essor to become a victim of betrayal, destruction, and theft. After Cadmus and Harmonia had finished their work, they were changed into dragons and taken away to Elysion. Harmonia typifies, by her birth from strife and love, order (harmony) arising from chaotic repulsion and attraction; by her union with the inventor of the alphabet, the civilizing of a rude people by arts and letters. The gifts are fertility, which the deities of winter destroy or steal and, for which, in turn, other deities battle to bring them back from the underworld. The final serpent forms of Harmonia and Cadmus are those of deities representing the reproductive powers of nature.

HARMONY In an Italian icon personified by a beautiful woman wearing a crown which glitters with jewels. With one hand she holds a base violin, with the other a bow.

HAROLD (HAL) Masculine name from the Scandinavian, meaning army and power, champion, leader of an army.

HAROSETH Served at the Jewish Passover feast to symbolize the mortar which the Israelites used in building the treasure cities for Pharaoh. The haroseth is a mixture of grated apples, raisins, chopped nuts, and cinnamon, saturated in wine. Also used to temper sharpness of bitter herbs.

HARP Celestial realms, death, heavenly bliss. Instrument of angels and wind deities. Gentility, harmony, joy, music, poetry. Dream significance: happiness, pleasure. In heraldry signifies contemplation. A constellation in the Northern Sky also called Lyra. In Hebraic-Christian tradition typifies praise of God; an attribute of David. Emblem of Ireland. Druids believed the soul of a man lingered by the body until such time as the sacred harp released it and sent it on its way to heaven. If a man had lived honorably according to the three grand articles of religion, the bards sang a requiem on a harp in the form of a triangle, on three strings, turning keys with three arms, which served as a passport to the soul's ascent. When Dagda played his harp (wind), it released the seasons in order, winter, spring, summer, autumn, and winter.

HARPALUKE In Greek mythology wife of Alastor. Possessed by her father Klumenos, she bore him a son. This son and a brother she killed and served to her father. A sacrificial-cannibalism myth. In another legend, her father was the heaven's law-breaker Lycurgus, and she became a bird.

HARPE (1) In Greek mythology one of the Amazons. (2) Curved sword with a pronged back that Hermes lent to Perseus for cutting off the head of Medusa. Thracian gladiators used the sword. It is the shape of the natural weapon of birds of prey. A kite and falcon's genitals also were called harpe. It is the root of many Greek names.

HARPICHRUTI (HER-PE-KHRED, HERU-P-KHART) In Egyptian mythology Horus the child, represented sitting on a lotus flower with a finger in his mouth. The Greeks adopted the name as Harpocrates, which see.

HARPOCRATES In Greek mythology personification of the splendor, strength, and youth of the morning sun. Borrowed from the Egyptian Harpichruti, he sits on a lotus flower, his finger at his lips. Because of this gesture, the Greeks called him the god of silence. In one legend the heel of Harpocrates is hung by a scorpion. See heel. His image was used as a talisman for fecundity. A deity with a sacred heel, he resembles Achilles, Bran, Llew Llaw, Mopsus, Talus.

HARPY (HARPYIAE) In Greek mythology one of the three daughters of Thaumias and Electra, sisters of Iris. Their names were Aello (storm), Celaeno (blackness or obscurity), Ocypeta (rapid). In Hesiod they are described as beautiful; by Virgil as loathsome and vengeful. In later myths the harpies appeared as death demons with the head and body of a woman with hooked beak, pendant dugs, and the legs and claws of a vulture. They lived in an atmosphere of filth and stench and contaminated everything that came near them. They were perpetually devoured by pangs of hunger, which caused them to rob their victims of food. In one legend they carried off the daughters of King Pandareos to act as servants to the Erinyes (Eumenides). They were ravening, snatching nature, demons of the pesitential south wind which came across the desert and brought blight and destruction with it. In heraldry signifies ferocity under provocation. Compare Harmattan, Ker.

HARRIS The Scotch island of this name is believed to have been the Fortunate Island of the ancients. The name Harris yields ur-is, i.e. great light.

HARROW (1) Seven bright stars of the constellation Ursa Major in the Northern sky are known as the Big Dipper or Harrow (Plow), and serve to locate other constellations. In primitive belief, when shown in proper relation to the moon, it was accepted as a heavenly sign to indicate the time to break up fallow ground, plow, and commence annual labors. (2) Agriculture, fertility. Implement of martyrdom.

HARRY (HAL) Masculine name; variant of Henry. The feminine equivalent is Harriet (Harriot, Hatty, Henriette). Old Harry is applied to the devil; perhaps a corruption of Old Hairy. The "hairy ones" in the Bible has been translated "devils."

HART Agility, elegance, grace. The morning star is likened to a young hart. It was sacred to Artemis, Christ, and Esther. In art and literature sometimes substituted for the unicorn. See hind. Hart is from the same root as Harits; Old German for hart was hiruz, the equivalent of iris. In Christian tradition piety and religious aspiration, purity of life. Attribute of Saints Giles, Goar, Hubert.

White hart. Soul.

HARUN-AL-RASHID (HAROUN-AL-RASCHID) Literally, Harun (or Aaron) the Just. Calif of the Saracens; hero of romances drawn from an actual 8th century calif. In the Arabian Nights things curious and wonderful are associated with his name and reign.

HARUT AND MARUT (HAROOT AND MAROOT) Two fallen Moslem angels. Because they were impatient with the sinfulness of mankind, God placed them on earth for a time. They lusted after the daughters of men and other temptations became too great for them. They were banished from heaven, became kings of Babel, and taught men astrology and witchcraft. For having failed in compassion to men, they hang head down in a closed pit. Probably entered Moslem legend from Iranian Haurvatat and Ameretat.

HARU-YAMA-NO-KASUMI-ONOKO Japanese god of spring. Name signifying Mist-man-of-the-Spring-Mountain. Younger brother of Aki-Yama-no-Shitabi-onoko (Autumn). See Izushio-tome.

HARVESPTOKHM Avestan tree of all seed. Compare Jambu, Parijata.

HARVEST Autumn, death. Dream significance: (bad) exploitation; (good) abundance, wealth. A harvest is symbolized by fruit in festoons or pouring from a cornucopia, a full moon, sheaf of wheat and a sickle, shocked corn or wheat, red, a wagon laden with vegetables or hay, yellow. Anciently the term of office of the barley or oak king expired with the harvest, at which time the king was emasculated and imprisoned or ritually murdered. The conception of the corn or grain-spirit as old and dead at harvest is wide spread. Some peoples have rites in which a sheaf of wheat is laid at the bottom of a grave as the mourners cry, "The old man is dead." Earth is thrown over the sheaf and a prayer is offered in which a deity is invoked to bring back the wheat of the dead. Sometimes the corn-mother is the center of the harvest rites, and the last sheaf is joyfully carried home as a divine being and preserved. It is dressed as a doll or drenched with water, the water being a rain-charm. In the spring, it is scattered over the earth. A corn-baby is also worshiped, the last corn (or grain) cut being the corn-spirit separated by the stroke of the sickle from its mother. In some parts of the world, devil-expulsion rites are held. Fires are set, guns and other weapons shot to drive evil spirits from the fields and granaries. Compare h'Ativa, reaping. In Hebrew tradition, a harvest typifies Day of Judgment, i.e. the separation of good to be preserved as grain and the evil to be destroyed as chaff; destroying judgment, i.e. people fall as corn by the scythe; destruction through war, i.e. the cutting down the ranks of men in battle.

HARVEY Masculine name from the Germanic through the French, meaning army and battle, and from the Celtic, meaning bitter.

HASTATE LEAF Authority.

HASTSHEHOGAN Navaho house deity; god of the evening, of the west, and of yellow maize. Man and woman were created from white and yellow maize by Hastsheyalti and Hastshehogan. Some of his functions resemble those of a genius or lar.

HASTSHEYALTI Navaho talking deity; god of the dawn, of the east, and of white maize. With Hastshehogan a creator. Also known as Yebitshai, maternal grandfather of the gods. His functions resemble those of a genius or lar.

HAT According to its style denotes dignity and rank. In ecclesiastical circles color also is taken into account. Dream significance: bitter disillusion.

Hat in ring. Challenge, competition.

Hat-tipping. Greeting, respect. Survival of the ancient custom of removing a helmet when among those with whom one is not in danger, showing that one can stand unprotected. According to a legendary account hat-tipping as a form of courteous greeting dates back to the days of Alexander, who demanded that helmets be off those who spoke to him.

High hat. Act with formality and stiffness; treat with affected superiority.

Mad as a hatter. Corruption of, "mad as an adder (or atter)." Mad in the sense of harmful or hurtful; mad formerly meant venomous.

Pass around the hat. Ask for money, take up a collection, for a charitable object or by an itinerant performer, who receives payment in no other way.

HATAMOTO Japanese banner supporters; samurai who were directly attached to the shogun's service.

HATCHET Carpentry, log fire, timber, woodlands. Also destruction, execution, martyrdom, suffering. See ax. Symbol of Saints Joseph and Matthew.

Buried hatchet. Peace. North American Indians formerly buried the hatchet (tomahawk) at the cessation of hostilities.

Hatchet and cherry tree. Emblematic of George Washington, symbolic of truth.

Hatchet taken up. Declaration of war. American Indians of North America formerly dug up the hatchet (tomahawk) when about to go to war.

HATHOR (ATHOR) Literally, castle or house of Hor (wisdom). In Egyptian mythology born of the eye of Ra. Her husband usually is Horus, male ruler of the heavens. Said to be the mother of Isis and, in early myths, to be identical with Isis. Great cosmic or mother goddess. She personifies the great power of nature, perpetually bringing forth, rearing, and destroying all things. She is the revered lady of the sky, goddess of beauty, joy, love, mirth, music, ornaments, social gaiety, and the patroness of women and marriage. As the great nourisher she is shown with the head of a cow; as a sky goddess the sun disk is between her horns, which represent the crescent moon; as destroyer she is lioness headed. In one representation the moon emerges from her breast and the sun from her womb. Her human body is often star-spangled to typify the night sky. Her limbs are the four supporting pillars of the universe. In a leopard-skin garment she is assimilated to the goddess of fate. She displaces Nut, and later she merges into Sekhet. As Hathor-Sekhet she is queen of Amenti, realm of the dead, and of the West, a moon and war goddess, who gives nourishment to the ba (soul of the departed). When Ra decided to stop the slaughter she was causing, he flooded the Nile and made her drunk with the waters so that she would forget mankind. She has been multiplied into the seven Hathors, who foretell the future, especially of children at birth. The allusion is probably to the seven bright stars of Ursa Major. Her emblems are the ankh, eye of Ra, heifer, staff, sun disk, sycamore, and uraeus. She is an analogue of Ishtar-Astarte, and the Greeks identify her with Aphrodite.

HATI (1) In Egyptian mythology same as Ab, the testifying heart. (2) The Hater. One of the two Norse Varns, gigantic wolves, offsprings of the Fenris-wolf and a giantess in Iarvid (Ironwood). A moon-wolf or moon-devourer. His myth is one of eclipse. Hati is also known as Mana-garme; the name of his twin is Skoll.

HATIM A Bedouin chief noted for his warlike deeds. He was also famous for his boundless generosity, and the Arabs say, "Generous as Hatim," when speaking of a magnanimous person.

H'ATIVA Literally, mother-breathing life. An ear of white corn used in the Pawnee Hako ceremony. h'Ativa is the corn daughter of Tirawatius (heaven-father) and h'Uraru (earth-mother), and in the ceremony represents the supernatural powers which reside in her parents. Part of it is painted blue to symbolize that its fertility comes from above; the top of the ear represents the dome of heaven and the four equidistant lines on the sides represent the paths of the four winds. To it are bound two plum-tree sticks, one projecting above and one below. The stick above has tied to it a downy eagle's feather, which is Tirawatius's feather, and its movement in the slightest current of air typifies the breathing of life. Compare harvest.

HATTO A 10th century archbishop of Mainz. According to tradition, during a famine in Germany, he shut the poor up in a barn and burned them rather than give them grain from his supply, saying, "They are like mice, good only to devour the corn." Later to escape a plague of mice, he retreated to a tower on Bingen, an island in the Rhine. The army of mice followed and devoured him. The tower is still called Mouse Tower.

HATUIBWARI (HASIBWARI) Melanesian Supreme Being. He is a winged serpent with a human head and, though male, he has huge breasts with which he feeds all created things. He formed a woman from red clay and from her rib created a man.

HAUMAI-TIKITIKI Polynesian primeval god, father of wild-growing food; offspring of Rangi (sky) and Papa (earth).

HAURVATAT A Zoroastrian Amesha Spenta or archangel. In the moral sphere he presides over perfect happiness; in material nature he presides over water.

HAUS BERGHOF A luxurious mountain sanatorium for tuberculosis patients in The Magic Mountain by Thomas Mann. It is located in Davos, Switzerland, and is understood to symbolize isolated and sterile aestheticism.

HAUYNITE Mineral which carries the message, Do not bid me leave you.

HAVAMAL Literally, words of the high one. In the Elder Edda a compilation of maxims relating to the conduct of life uttered by Odin.

HAVELOCK Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning of the lake haven.

Havelock the Dane. Hero of a medieval romance. The son of Birkabeen, king of Denmark, he is orphaned while still an infant and set adrift at sea by his guardians. On the coast of Lincolnshire in England he is rescued by a fisherman named Grim who raises him. Years later some ambitious English nobles, seeking to degrade the princess by marrying her to a peasant, select the foundling. In time Havelock discovers his true identity, raises an army, recovers his own kingdom and his wife's possessions, and becomes king of Denmark and part of England. The Havelock legend belongs to the class of fatal children who are born to be kings. See fatal child.

HAVETH CHILDERS EVERYWHERE One of the many disguises of the name of Humphrey Chimpden Earwicker, hero of James Joyce's Finnegans Wake.

HAVFRUE Mermaid of Danish folklore. She is extremely beautiful, sometimes friendly to man, sometimes seductive and predatory. Fishermen who see her through sea mists expect storms to follow. She gathers the bones of the unfound drowned.

HAVGAN (HAFDAN) Literally, summer-white. In Brythonic mythology rival of Arawn, king of Annwfn the underworld, for sovereignty of that land. Only a single blow can overcome him, a second will revive him. Pwyll, who changed places with Arawn, mortally wounds Havgan and saves Annwfn for Arawn. Havgan pleads for a second blow to end his suffering, but Pwyll refuses to give it, as Havgan is not to be revived until the summer season.

HAVILAH One of the quarters of the Garden of Eden, land of gold. Havilah means circle or district and compares with hav, Welsh for summer, haven, and heaven. Akin to Awaji, Elysian Fields, and Hawaii.

HAVMAND Merman of Danish legend. He is bearded, handsome, and usually friendly to man.

HAWAII (HAVAII, HAVAIIKI)

Polynesian Isle of Souls. Identical with Japanese Awaji. Emblem: hibiscus, pineapple; motto: Righteousness perpetuates the life of the land; nickname: Paradise of the Pacific.

HAWENIYO Iroquois creator god. In his honor the ganeo'q is danced.

HAW HAW, LORD Name assumed by William Joyce, British traitor, in radio broadcasts in which he spread Nazi propaganda for the Germans during World War II. He was executed.

HAWK Ferocity, fire, immortality, penetration, rapacity, speed, splendor, vanquishment. Flesh-eater, bird of prey. Anciently a sign of nobility representing the right of chase, because it soars right into the glare of the sun. In mythology variously represented as a bird of clouds, storms, sun, and wind. Because it drinks no water and overcomes all other birds, it symbolizes blood; because it flies into that which is remote and above the human, it symbolizes the soul aspiring to heaven; inasmuch as it flies in a straight line, it symbolizes humility and sublimity, on account of its long life, it symbolizes divinity. It typifies the cleaving, destructive, predatory, soaring mind, and figuratively is one who lives at the expense of another, one who is grasping, swindler. Aztec messenger of the gods. Bornean bird having foreknowledge of the future. In Buriat mythology the hawk was the thief who stole the secret of fire-making from the porcupine, who invented it; the hawk told the secret to the gods, and they, in turn, gave the secret to man. Compare Galta-Ulan-Tengeri.

In Christianity typifies the Holy Spirit. Emblematic of Saint Quirinus. Egyptian symbol of the male principle, power, and the soul. Sacred to the sun. The hawk was a hieroglyph for god, and was an attribute of Horus, Kebhsennuf, Khonsu, Mentu, Ptah, Ra, Rehu, Sebek-Ra, Sokar, Sphinx, Supti (Sept-Hor). It typified the East Wind, and sometimes was four-headed, denoting the winds of the four directions. On funeral urns, it was the guard of the liver and gall bladder. See Horus's four sons. In Greece sacred to Apollo and Hera. To ancient Hebrews, because of its migrations, it illustrated the wise providence of the Creator. In Hinduism it carried off the soma.

Gold hawk. Sun deity.

Hawk on a lion. In Egypt the might and power of the sun.

Hawk perched on a mummy. In Egypt typified the soul.

HAWKWEED November 21 birthday flower. Symbol of quick-sightedness. A love oracle, a time oracle, and used by children to tell whether one lives east, west, north, or south.

HAWTHORN (1) In Brythonic legend father of Olwen. He was a monstrous giant, and his ponderous eyebrows fell so heavily over his shoulders, he was unable to see until they had been lifted with a fork. This and the fact that he had been forewarned that his life would cease with his daughter's marriage, make his story a parallel of that of Balor. Probably an aspect of winter, whose heavy eyebrows are snow, defeated by growth or spring (Olwen and her lover Kulhwch). (2) February 10 birthday flower with the sentiment contentment, joy. Symbolic of fertility, hope, marriage, self-denial, spring.

In heraldry used in the crests of Tudor princes. Emblem of the state of Missouri. Also called May-haw because its fruit ripens in May. Hawthorn yields thorn of haw or A (i. e. thorn of primal cause or sun). Celtic tree of enforced chastity. At first associated with May as a month of abstinence from sexual intercourse; later as an orgiastic month with dances around the Maypole. The sixth or hawthorn month in the druidic calendar extended from May 14 to June 10. Tree of Yspaddaden Penkawr. The destruction of a hawthorn attended great peril, the death of one's cattle or children or the loss of one's money. In druidic tree alphabet, tree of the sixth consonant, Uath (H). A Christian holy tree, associated with the Virgin Mary. In Europe the hawthorn or whitethorn is generally an unlucky tree. In Greek antiquity lighted on altars of Hymen and hawthorn flowers were used in a bride's wreath or otherwise worn at nuptials. In Roman antiquity tree over which the goddess Cardea cast spells.

HAY Harvest, pasture. Dream significance: profitable business.

Between hay and grass. Too late for one purpose; too early for another. Neither one thing nor another; sometimes said of a boy in his teens who is neither child nor man.

Make hay while the sun shines. Act while conditions are favorable; take advantage of any opportunity.

Neither hay nor grass. Neither one thing nor the other; things spoiled in the making.

HAYA-AKHIKO-NO-KAMI AND HAYA-AKITSU (AKIDZU)-HIME-NO KAMI Shinto deities, Prince-

Swift-Autumn and his younger sister and wife, Princess-Swift-Autumn. Children of Izanagi and Izanami. His domain was the rivers; hers, the raging seas, where she swallowed up calamities. They were parents of water deities, mountain, tree, and wind deities, a deity of moors, and grandparents of deities of birds, fertility, fire, and land.

HAYDEN Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning from the hay or hedge.

HAYHUAYPANTI Literally, shining ones. Inca messengers of Viracocha; light rays.

HAYK (HAYIK) Literally, little Hay or little giant. A handsome giant of Armenian mythology. Father of Armenak. A culture hero and lover of freedom who led his people out of slavery. He was an eponymous hero, and later became a vegetation and wine god. Hayk is identical with the Phrygian Hyas and, as one who led his people out of slavery, resembles Moses.

HAYOWENTHA See Hiawatha.

HAZEL Justice, reconciliation, truth. In the language of love; Be wise and desist. Given by a girl as a sign of discouragement. Compare birch. Twigs of hazel were used widely to make one's self invisible and as divining rods to discover hidden treasures. In some localities only rods cut on Saint John's Eve or Night possessed magic power. In medieval times the hazel rod served in courts of justice for discovering murderers and thieves. A hazel breastband was placed on the harness of a horse to protect the animal from evil spirits. A double hazel nut was carried to prevent toothaches. In a sea superstition a shipmaster wearing a cap into which hazel twigs have been woven will weather any storm. One of the two sacred trees of Irish antiquity, for the wanton felling of which, death was exacted. The other was the apple. In ancient Ireland cattle were driven through the Beltane and Midsummer fires with their backs singed with hazel to protect them from mischievous fairies, and the scorched rods were preserved and used for driving the cattle during the year. In the druidic tree alphabet tree of the ninth consonant, Coll (C), which became the 10th consonant when consonants were increased from thirteen to fifteen. Tree of the ninth Celtic month, from August 6 to September 2. Venerated as the tree of wisdom, which shaded Connla's Well; with its nuts it fed the sacred salmon in the pool. H was the tree of poetic art, which produced flowers (beauty) and fruit (wisdom) simultaneously. A hazel wand was carried by heralds as a badge of office. Luchta made a shield of the hazel for Manannan, and it became one of the famous shields of Erin, comparable to the aegis of Athena. H could not be touched and caused utter rot; it finally became the shield of Fionn and, with it, he killed thousands of the enemy. Thus it was a tree of wisdom which could be put to destructive uses. As Fionn was a sun hero, the shield typified the scorching destructive rays of the sun. See Trinity Well. In Norse mythology the hazel was the tree of Thor. The last two syllables of the sacred Yggdrasil tree, az-il, may be compared with hazel. In Prussia if a thief could not be caught, a piece of a suspect's clothing was beaten with a hazel switch. This made a guilty man sick. In Wales hazel twigs were woven into wishing caps.

HAZERETH Bitter herbs used at the Passover Feast to symbolize the bitterness of Israelites' bondage in Egypt, usually whole horse radish.

HE (HA, HEH) Fifth letter of the Hebrew alphabet meaning window and with a numerical value of five. H corresponds to the English h. According to the mystics, meaning window, it is that which admits air (breath, life, spirit) and light (knowledge). Its planetary attribution is Mars (or Mercury); its symbolic correspondence is the High Priest; its zodiacal correspondence is Aries. Its color is scarlet; its direction on the cube of space is northeast, signifying that which is clear, in action that which is destructive of error. In white magic, it typifies Nadour, the majesty of God. H corresponds to the fifth angelical hierarchy, which is the choir of might and power. Its intelligences are called Powers. By their ministry, the elements were evolved by Elohim-Gibor, whose numeration is Pachad, which signifies fear and judgment, and whose attribute is Geburah, which signifies power and strength. See Alphabet Affiliations.

HEA See Ea.

HEAD Authority, chief, knowledge, mind, toilet, spiritual leadership, wisdom. Residence of reason. Dream significance: (big), power; (cut off) deliverance, liberty; (dead) ambush, mourning; (living) good omen; (shaved) bad omen; (swollen) pride, wealth. In heraldry honor, power. The head and face are anatomical denominations governed by Aries. Anciently the heads of warriors were believed to have apotropaic virtues, and the heads of captured enemies were offered to a divinity. A severed head continued to discourse wisdom, and those of Arthur, Bran, Cerunnos, and others were expected to advise their people when they were in need. Odin consulted the head of Mimir. In China mountains were made from the head of P'an Ku.

Boar's head. In the Vedas judgment, wisdom.

Double-faced head. In Japanese Buddhism, if female, the head of Mirune, the woman whose eyes behold all secret sin; if male, the head of Kaguhana, the man who smells all odors of evil doing. In Roman antiquity the head of Janus.

Grotesque head. Talisman against the evil eye.

Head bowed. Prayer.

Head buried. Ancients believed the buried head of a great warrior had the power to turn back invaders. Sculptured heads or heads of dead warriors were buried facing the direction of possible danger for purposes of national protection.

Head cupped in hands. Distress, sorrow.

Head discoursing. See Speaking Head.

Head-hunting. Among the Kwa-kiutl Indians of North America death of a member of the family was considered an insult. To wipe out the insult the mourner would go head-hunting, that is cut off the head or kill a person of equal rank to the one who had died. Head-hunting was called, "killing to wipe one's eyes," and was a form of getting even with a fate that had shamed the mourner.

Head in art:

Head of	Meaning
Apollo	arts, music
ass	ignorance
Athena	knowledge, wisdom
bull	Astarte
cat	Bast (Pasht)
cock	Abraxas
cow	Astarte, Hathor, Isis
death	penitence; emblem of Saints Bruno, Francis of Assisi, Mary Magdalene dog	Contention, litigation; emblem of Anubis, Saint Christopher elephant	Ganesh
goat	diligent workman; Indra
hawk	Horus, Ra
Hermes	commerce, industry, medicine
horse	Carthage, Demeter-Ceres
ibis	Thoth
lion	Abraxas, force, terror
lioness	Bast (Pasht)
Medusa	against incantations, amulet, frightfulness, full moon, generation.
ram	Kneph
serpent	earth god or goddess
sparrow	Horus, Ra maiden wearing a coronal of flowers	caprice

Head

severed from body

Meaning

Judith, Salome, Saints Alban, Ansano, Catherine of Alexandria, Dionysius of Paris, Felicita, John the Baptist, Lambert, Lucian, Nicasius, Valerie, Veronica.

Head inclined. Confession of faults, humility, submission.

Head in clouds. State of mental unreality.

Head in Hindu Thandava and Lasya dances: 1- Adhomukha, hanging the head down, represents bad intentions, bowing, dejection, shyness. 2- Alolita, moving the head around, represents intoxication, possessed by devils, sleepiness. 3- Dhuta, turning head from left to right, represents calling, down-heartedness, drunkenness, fear, fighting, looking at one's own body, looking from side to side, no, shivering from cold. 4- Kam-pita, shaking head up and down, represents call to come near, challenge, command to stop. 5- Paravrtta, turning head back, represents indifference, shyness, turning the face in anger. 6- Parivahita, moving the head from one side to another, represents exhaustion, happiness, praise, separation, thought. 7- Sama, the head in natural position, represents the start of the dance, affectionate anger, doing nothing, meditation, pride, shock. 8- Udwahita, head raised up, represents looking up at flag, moon, mountain. 9- Utkshipta, raising the head at an angle, represents acceptance, go, growth, take.

Head in sand. Endeavor to escape a disaster or avoid an unpleasant situation by ridiculous means; from the supposed behavior of ostriches when pursued.

Head in triple form. Three-fold character; birth, growth, death. Image of Cernunnos, a Celtic underworld god, reproduced to give triple power to its apotropaic virtues.

Head on hand. The hand supported at the elbow by the other hand, the arm of which lies across the body, signifies despair, regret.

Head turned, looking backward. History, searching the past.

Head turned over shoulder, hand raised, palm outward. Horror.

Long head. In Japanese tradition a long-headed deity indicates gifts of wealth and wisdom to his worshipers. See Fuku.

Long and oval head. Nobility of feeling.

Long and round head. Ambitious, alert, independent, prudent.

Long and square head. Duplicity, hardness.

Man's head. Beauty, wisdom.

Severed head in man's hand. David, alluding to his striking down Goliath.

Severed head in woman's hand. Judith, alluding to her killing of Holofernes; Salome, alluding to the execution of John the Baptist.

Square head. Energy, morality, orderliness, thoughtfulness.

Three male heads. One young, one middle-aged, one old, typifies the future, present, past.

Tonsured head. In Egyptian antiquity mode adopted by priests worshipping Isis. In Japan indicates adherence to Buddhism. In many religions monks or those entering into the priesthood shave part of the head.

Woman's head. Understanding.

HEADLESS SPECTER In the folklore of many nations, murdered people frequently become phantoms carrying their heads. Also wind demon.

HEADSTOOL A stool-like pillow used in medieval Europe and in the Orient into quite recent times, especially in Japan, to protect an elaborate coiffure from being ruffled.

HEALING Personified by Asclepius, Hygeia. Symbolized by balm of Gilead.

HEALTH In literature frequently represents justice, virtue, wisdom. Symbolized by agate, ankh, black peas, bufonite, fish, five-pointed star, green, kantharos, pentagon, serpent, staff, yellow. Personified by Asclepius and Hygeia. In an Italian icon typified by a robust woman holding a cock and a knotty staff with serpents twisted around it.

HEARSE Death, interment. Dream significance: festivity, triumph.

HEART (1) Affection, assistance, compassion, concord, counsel, courage, despair, devotion, emotions, generosity, hope, innocence, kindness, life, love, piety, religion, sincerity. Residence of animal virtues, seat of understanding that regulates all actions of man. Force for good or evil, courage or cowardice. Abode of life, innermost or vital part of anything. In heraldry typifies sincerity. Anatomical denomination governed by Leo. Dissected by ancients for prophetic readings. In most primitive societies a mysterious organ, seat of the soul. Offered to deities in sacrificial rites. The heart of a slain enemy frequently is eaten by the victor to acquire the strength of the foe and thus prevent him from rising from the dead. The pear and raspberry symbolize the heart. In China the heart typifies three stars in Scorpio in eastern quadrant, spring season, called Hsin. Propitious time for building and weddings. In Christianity typifies love of God, love and piety. Ancient Egyptians believed it was the seat of intelligence. In Greece an emblem of Eros. (2) The name of a suit in the Tarot deck, replacing the chalice, cup or goblet of ancient decks. Its color is red, and its pattern that of a heart, symbol of love, the female organ, life. Heraldic emblem of Mercury as Chthonius and of Thoth. Corresponds to the creative world, world of patterns, the element water, the first \blacksquare in IHVH, and To know. Holder of liquid life, instrument of brotherhood, friendship, hospitality, libations. Insignia of priesthood or sacerdotal rank. When a majority appear in a deal signifies happiness, love, merri-ment, pleasure.

Bleeding or broken heart. Disappointment in love; disillusionment.

Flaming heart. Ardent affection. Christian zeal, divine love, fervent piety, God's guidance. A flaming heart encircled by thorns and bleeding represents the heart of Jesus.

Heart of a naga. In Hinduism part from which fertile rains flow.

Heart pierced with an arrow. Contrition, devotion, love, repentance.

Heart with cross. Emblem of Saint Catherine of Siena, alluding to the legend that, in response to her prayers, Christ replaced her heart with his own.

Heart with seven orifices. In ancient Chinese belief the heart of a man of superior virtue. See Pi Kan.

Heart with wound. Martyrdom of Christ.

Large heart. Generosity, kindness.

HEARTH Domesticity, good cheer, home, hospitality. Anciently because fire was so difficult to ignite, the hearth constituted the sanctum of the family. The fire on the hearth served the double purpose of being the place on which the meal was prepared and where family sacrifices were consumed, hence an altar. The hearthstone typified the navel of the earth. See Hestia, Vesta. In Christianity the hearth symbolizes temperance.

HEART'S EASE In the language of flowers: you occupy my thoughts.

HEATHCLIFFE In Emily Bronte's Wuthering Heights the fierce, brooding and melancholy protagonist.

HEATHER (1) Feminine name alluding to the plant. (2) Plant of desert places symbolizing humility, solitude. In druidic tree alphabet tree of the third vowel, Ura (U), and in the calendar, tree of the summer solstice. The red heather is a tree of passion, while the white is a protection against acts of passion. Heather-ale is a favorite restorative in Wales. Tree sacred to the Sicilian love goddess Erycina, a name of Venus.

Heather cat. A wild cat found among the heather; hence a person of roving habits.

HEAVEN Abode of the Supreme Deity and of blessed spirits. Euphemistic term for God. Infinity, light, mansion of the creator, moral law. Realm of fate, holiness, purity, salvation. Region of perfect harmony and truth. Seer of everything. State of existence after life on earth, hence a state of exalted felicity, supreme bliss or happiness. Universally the active or male principle. In alchemy the essence or most subtle portion of a body. In mythical astronomy revolving sphere which carries the heavenly bodies around the earth; the region within which a planet is always confined. Symbolized by the acanthus, blue color, closed garden, moon, sapphire, stars, sun. In an Italian icon represented by a young man of noble aspect in imperial dress covered with moon, stars, and sun. In his right hand he carries a scepter; in his left hand a flame-pot with a heart in the middle of the flame. His girdle is a zodiac. A jeweled crown is on his head and golden buskins on his legs.

In ancient Egypt the heavenly spheres were ten. The first seven were those of the planets; the eighth was the firmament of heaven containing all fixed stars; the ninth, the crystalline sphere, held the precession of the equinoxes; the tenth was the primum mobile, which revolved diurnally and gave motion to the inner spheres with the planets; hence symbolizing any mainspring of action. In Greek and Roman antiquity heaven was a region reserved to gods, deified heroes, and demigods. In Hebraic-Christian tradition heaven is free of death, sin, and all other evils. It is a kingdom, an inheritance, where there are glorious lights, rapturous songs, rivers of pleasure, trees of life, crowns, feasting, mirth, robes, treasures, triumphs. The degrees of glory vary, and the most righteous dwell in the presence of God. Although Hebrews of antiquity understood heaven as the region of air, clouds, planets, and stars, it was chiefly the world of holy bliss above the visible heavens, more particularly known as third heaven, where the holy dwelt seeing all of God. Hebrew mystics believe that seven heavens rise one above the other: the first, the space between the clouds and earth; the second, the region of the clouds; third, through sixth, the home of various grades of angels; the seventh, the abode of God and the seraphim. The Moslems likewise have seven heavens: 1st- of pure silver, abode of Adam and Eve; 2nd- of pure gold, abode of John the Baptist and Jesus; 3rd- of pearl, domain of Joseph and of Azrael, angel of death; 4th- of white gold, realm of Enoch; 5th- of silver, where Aaron dwells, 6th- of garnets and rubies, dwelling of Moses; 7th- of glorious lights, ruled by Abraham. In Scandinavian mythology Niflheim (heaven) contained nine worlds constructed from the skull of Ymir and ruled over by Odin.

Heavenly City. Holy City, New Jerusalem.

Heavenly contemplation. Symbolized by a sapphire.

Heavenly reward. Symbolized by a palm and a rose.

Heavenly wisdom. Represented by a star or stars.

Heaven's fire. Lightning.

Heaven's river. Milky Way.

Heaven's tree. Mythical tree or vine that supposedly reaches up to heaven or down to the lower regions. American Indians describe an ever-growing tree which finally reaches the sky and by means of which a journey is made there by a mortal. Jack and the Beanstalk and other old world legends and tales describe similar trees. The Laerad, Soma and Yggdrasil are such trees. Compare World Tree.

HEBE Literally, youth. In Greek mythology daughter of Zeus and Hera, wife of the deified Heracles. In some accounts she is the wife of Zephyrus and mother of Eos. She is a dawn goddess, who remains everlastingly young (dawn cannot age), and is the cup-bearer to the gods of Olympus. In early myths she is spoken of as Ganymede, the brilliant, and in later myths she is supplanted by Ganymede, a beautiful youth. She is a spring divinity and perhaps the earth goddess in the prime of maidenhood, who provides the deities with ambrosia and nectar, and who has the power of making the old young again, i.e. bring about the rejuvenation of earth in spring. Inasmuch as she was of such distinguished rank, she exemplified the patriarchal custom in which the daughters of noble houses personally assisted in serving guests. She is portrayed as bearing a shallow dish containing ambrosia, pouring nectar from a vessel into a goblet, feeding the eagles of Zeus, offering nectar to Heracles, or as a bride of Heracles. Freed slaves hung their chains on trees in cypress groves sacred to her. She resembles the Roman Juventas and the Sanscrit Yavan.

HEBER (EBER) Literally, ally. Eponymous ancestor of the Hebrews, who are called sons of Heber.

HEBREWS In the Bible the name is first identified with Abraham, later believed to have been derived from Heber, the last of the long-lived patriarchs. Heber is said to have outlived six generations of his posterity, including Abraham. Hebrews appears to have been the name by which Jewish people were known to other nations, in distinction from their domestic name of Children of Israel. Originally the Hebrews were ancestor and idol worshipers, later monolithic. Throughout history they have been useful as scapegoats.

Hebrew Tribes. Each of the twelve sons of Jacob heading many families was said to head a tribe. Jacob on his deathbed adopted Ephraim and Manasseh, the two sons of Joseph, and would have each also constitute a tribe, thus increasing the number to thirteen, one inheriting the lands of Joseph. However, under the order of God, Joshua had reckoned but twelve tribes and made but twelve lots, so the tribe of Levi, being appointed to the sacred service as priests was given no share in the distribution of land, but received certain cities in which to dwell with first-fruits, tithes, and oblations of the people. Each tribe ruled a zodiacal house. The table following is according to the Midrash Bemidbar, Rabbinical commentary on numbers. See under gem, Jacob.

Tribe	Zodiacal House	Color	Gem	Symbol
Gad	Aries	gray	shebo	tent or mounted troops
Issachar	Taurus	black (as stibium)	sappir	ass
Simeon-Levi	Gemini	green	pitdah	water pitcher and sword
Benjamin	Cancer	colors of all stones	yashpneh	wolf
Ephraim (or Joseph)	Leo	very black	shoham	cluster of grapes or an ox
Assher	Virgo	pearl	tarshish	olive branch or a cup
Manasseh	Libra	black, red, white	bareketh	palm tree or vine
Dan	Scorpio	sapphire blue	leshem	serpent or apple
Judah	Sagittarius	sky blue	jophek	lion
Naphtali	Capricornus	wine	ahlamah	African deer
Reuben	Aquarius	red	odem	man or sunburst above water
Zebulun	Pisces	white	yahalom	ship

HEBRON One of the four oldest cities of the world; the other being Gaza, Hamath, and Sidon. Hebron was a favorite residence of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The cave of Machpelah, in which Abraham was buried, is said to have been in Hebron. It was a Levitical city of refuge, and a seat of the government of David. Here Absalom raised his banner of revolt. Over the pool in Hebron, David hung up the assassins of Ish-bosheth. Also called Kirjath-arba and Mamre. In recent times, it has been called El-khulil (the friend) by the Arabs, who call Abraham friend of God.

HECATE In Greek mythology daughter of the Titan Perses and Asteria or of Zeus and Asteria. Originally a moon goddess worshiped by the Thracians; later in parts of Greece, she was identified with Artemis, Selene, and Persephone. Her name conveyed the far-reaching action of lunar rays. She was benignant, administering to childbirth, fostering human children, guarding flocks and vineyards, helping kings administer justice, giving victory in war. However, when her orb was dark, she was queen of dismal regions where she was malignant, presiding over witchcraft, haunting crossroads, where murders were committed, and sepulchers. Her sway extended over heaven, earth, and the lower world, and she was triformed, her three heads being that of a dog, horse, and lion. Her image was placed at crossroads as a charm against evil spirits. Feasts were served at the forks of roads under a full moon to obtain her favor or placate her. Offered were black lambs, dogs, eggs, honey, and milk. When queen of the underworld, she appeared as a gigantic woman bearing sword and torch, her feet and hair formed of snakes, her voice like that of a howling dog. She is most commonly portrayed in triple form, all three bodies back to back carrying a spear or a pitcher, a deep sacrificial saucer, and a torch. Other emblems are a divided serpent, hound, key, knife, lotus, rays, rope, sword. In medieval demonology she appears as a witch.

HECATONCHEIRES (HECATONTOCHEIROI, HEKATONCHEIRES)

In Greek mythology the three hundred-handed giant sons of Uranus and Gaea. Their names are Briareus (hurricane), Cottus (volcano), Gyges (earthquake). Each has fifty heads. In the war of Zeus against the Titans, they are allies of Zeus. Also known as Centimani, they personify the brute force of the subterranean powers of nature and cause earthquakes.

HECATOS (HECAERGUS) Apollo as the god whose rays reach to the ends of the earth.

HECTOR In Greek mythology son of Priam and Hecuba, husband of Andromache, brother of Paris. Leader of the Trojans in the War against the Greeks. He kills Patroclus, the friend of Achilles. To avenge the death of his friend, Achilles, who had retired from the battle, rejoins the conflict, pursues Hector around the walls of Troy, slays him, tramples on his body, and then with it lashed to his chariot, drags it in the dust. On the pleas of Priam, Hector's father, Achilles ransoms the body. Hector, the most magnanimous and the noblest of the Trojan heroes, is a deity of darkness pursued by the sun of dawn, Achilles, who finally tramples him to death. Hector is said to be the legendary ancestor of the kings of France. The name, meaning defender or holding fast, is related to actor, Arthur, author. In modern usage it has deteriorated to mean bully, swagger, tease.

Hector's cloak. The cloak of Hector Armstrong of Harlaw. In 1569, when Thomas Percy, Earl of Northumberland, was defeated, he hid himself in Armstrong's house. Armstrong betrayed his guest for the reward money, and Percy was executed. Thereafter the fortunes of Armstrong went down, and he died in rags on the roadside. Hence, wearing the cloak you prepare for another; being paid off in your own coin.

HECUBA (HEKABE) In Greek mythology a moon goddess. Wife of Priam, king of Troy; mother of Cassandra, Hector, Helenus, and Paris. Before the birth of Paris she dreamed she had given birth to a flaming torch which consumed Troy. Interpreted as an evil omen, the infant was left exposed on Mount Ida. Years later he returned and caused the Trojan war which destroyed the city. In some accounts Hecuba is said to be the mother of Polydorus. To avenge his murder by Polymnestor, a Thracian king, she slew the two children of Polymnestor and tore out his eyes. Although acquitted by the Greeks, she was changed into a dog that the Thracians pursued with stones. To escape, she jumped into the sea at Cynossema (i. e. tomb of the dog). A time myth.

HEDDA Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning war.

HEDGE Privacy, secrecy. Dream significance: difficulty; (if jumping across) getting out of a difficulty.

HEDGEHOG Defense, self-armed. Also evil-one, rascal, thief (robber of vines). From its habit of rolling into a prickly ball symbolic of the sun. Dream significance: difficulties, struggle. In heraldry, provident provider. A hedgehog surmounted by a crown was an emblem of Louis XII of France.

HEDWIG (HEDVIG) Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning war and holy.

HEEL Sacred part of a moon or sun hero's foot. That part which may be bruised by the serpent (earth), and that part of the hero's body which may bruise or conquer the serpent. The heel must not touch the earth (or sea); when it does the sun must die (set). To protect the sacred (vulnerable) heel a hero frequently is provided with buskins or sandals. Some heroes with sacred heels are: Achilles, Bran, Chiron, Diarmaid, Jacob, Llew Llaw, Math, Mopsus, Talus. See foot, hobbling, partridge, shoes.

Come to heel. Yield with docility, in allusion to the habit of dogs, which follow at their master's heels.

Cool one's heel. Wait an unreasonable time attending the will of another. The allusion is to waiting on a cold doorstep for someone to open a door after the bell has been rung.

Down (or out) at heel. Evidence of carelessness in personal appearance or poverty.

Heel of a shoe. Protection for the sacred king who is not permitted to rest his heel on the ground. The Canaanite Agag, the Greek Dionysus, and other gods and heroes wore high-heeled buskins.

HEFEDHA Arab god worshiped for protection against danger.

HEGEMONE Literally, leader. Worshiped by early Athenians as one of the Graces.

HE-GOAT, WOOLLY Kindly, sociable.

HEH Hebrew letter; also he, which see.

HEHU (HEH) Egyptian god of infinite space. A primeval air deity represented with the head of a frog. With his mate Hehut, second pair of the Egyptian ogdoad. His name signifies endless space; sometimes it is understood to mean flood or rain water. He and his consort, phases of light and darkness, the active and passive forces of nature, daily lift Khepri (young sun) over the eastern horizon. Later blended with Shu.

HEI In Japan the Taira family, high society.

HEID Norse sibyl or volva. A practitioner of mind-disturbing magic, patroness of evil women. A Van, she was three times smitten by Odin, because of her use of sorcery. The Vanir, insulted, warred against the Aesir. See Hostage. Heid was known also as Gollveig and Gulveig-Hoder. She may have been an aspect of Freyja.

HEIDRUN Norse she-goat standing above Valhalla. She feeds on the tree Laerad and yields from her teats enough mead (dew) every day to fill a bowl sufficient for all heroes. The name is from Icelandic, meaning bright, running stream. Personification of cloud.

HEIFER Fertility, giver of milk, nourishment. Emblem of the mother-goddess; in folklore frequently typifies the fairy godmother. Animal sacred to Hathor, Io, Isis, Shri. In Cinderella stories an attribute of the fairy godmother. Anciently among the Jews a red heifer was offered as a sacrifice for a national sin, the well-fed heifer being symbolic of wanton wildness. In India a red heifer typifies the dawn. In the Orient a heifer signifies wife or queen.

Heifer of Anu. In Assyrian antiquity the moon, because the horns of the new moon resembled those of a cow. Portrayed with a beard the color of lapis lazuli to denote light rays. An aspect of Sin.

HELIO Japanese legendary castle of peace.

HEIKE-GANI In Japanese legend the transformed angry spirits of Heike warriors who perished at Dan-no-ura. Superstitious Japanese believe that the resentful face-like imprint on the shell of the crab is that of a Heike, hence an ugly man. Heike was the name of one of the two leading feudal families of 12th century Japan. In a struggle with Genji, the other family, they met with defeat and, true to samurai tradition, committed mass suicide by throwing themselves into the sea.

HEIMDAL (HEIMDALL, HEIMDALLR) Literally, heaven defender. In Norse mythology he was born on the horizon or where land and sea meet, the son of nine giantesses (personification of waves): Angeyja, Atla, Eistla, Eyrgjafa, Gjalp, Greip, Ind, Jarnsaxa, Ulfrun, by Odin. He was nurtured on the moisture of the sea, the strength of the earth, the warmth of the sun. His dwelling was in Himinbjorg, (Heaven mountain), close by Bifrost, the bridge of heaven (rainbow), where, as the possessor of acute sight and hearing, he was the watchman of Asgaard and maintained an unsleeping vigil against attacks by giants or evil forces (winter). He could see hundreds of miles by night as well as by day, and he could hear the grass grow. One night, disturbed by a noise, he looked across to Folkvang and saw Loki, disguised as a fly, in Freya's bedroom, stealing her necklace Brisingamen (fertility). Pursuing Loki into the depths of the sea, he retrieved the necklace for the goddess. Heimdall was a guardian of flocks and the inventor of the Norse social system. Using the name Rig, he descended to earth and entered three homes. In a seacoast hovel, a mortal named Edda bore his dark-skinned and thick-set son Thrall, the first of the slaves; in a farmhouse, Amma bore his blue-eyed, sturdy son Karl (Churl), the first of the yeomen or free-men, who became farmers; in a castle Mothir bore the slender, handsome Jarl, the first of the noblemen. He was mighty in arms, wore white shining armor, rode the horse Gulltop, carried a flashing sword and the Gjallarhorn. At Ragnarok, at the clarion call of Heimdal's horn, the gods and heroes answered the summons to fight the 'wolf' (world-destroying-winter). In the battle of the gods against the giants, he slayed Loki and was slain by Loki (summer and winter alternately slay each other). In early myths, probably identical with Tyr, and in rites was the personal representative of the sacred fire. The account of his birth is a personification of day dawning out of the sea or over mountains which overlook the sea or nine reincarnations. Other of his names are: Gullintani (gold teeth), Hallinskidi (ram), Irmin (whiteness), Rati (traveler or rider of a horse), Vindlir (Ice fighter). The strife between Heimdal and Loki compares with that of Michael and Satan. In medieval schemes he corresponds to Saint Peter, who keeps the door of heaven.

HEIMER In the Volsung Saga spirit of wind or air. Brother-in-law of Brynhild, uncle of Aslog, which see.

HEIMGANG German word for death meaning going home. Heim (home) is identical with Om (Sun) or omma (eye).

HEIMIN Japanese common people, not permitted to carry swords and possessing no income except that which they earn by their hands. Divided into three classes, artisan, husbandman, and trader. Above them are the kuge (nobles) and the samurai (warriors); below them are the chori (outcasts) and hinin (beggars).

HEINRICH VON AUE Hero of Poor Heinrich, a medieval romance. A nobleman afflicted with leprosy, he is told he will not recover until a virgin of spotless purity is willing to die on his behalf. Heinrich, without hope for such a sacrifice, gives the greater part of his fortune to the poor, and takes up his residence with one of his vassals, a poor tenant farmer. The farmer's daughter goes to Salerno to offer herself as the victim. No sooner is the offer made than the lord becomes healthy. The girl's life is spared and she becomes Heinrich's wife. This has something of the element of beast-human marriages. See beast marriages.

HEINZELMANNCHEN German elves who work for people at night.

HEI-TIKI Maori amulet. Charm which represents the human foe-tus. It is worn to preserve the wearer against the attacks of spirits of still-born children, who are especially malicious because they believe they have been cheated out of a chance of life.

HEITSI-EIBIB Hottentot deity of fertility who died several times and came to life again. Resembles Tammuz.

HEKA (HEK, HEKAU, HYK) Egyptian god of magic who accompanies the sun god's ship on its daily journey into darkness. Personification of the soul of all the gods. Heka served as a word of power or talisman. It yields great A or Au (sun).

Later identified with Shu.

HEKE-HEKE-I-PAPA In Polynesian mythology third wife of Rangi (sky). Name signifying coming down to earth.

HEKKENFELDT A favorite meeting place of Danish witches.

HEKLA A mountain in Iceland; favorite resort of witches.

HEKT (HEQET) Egyptian frog goddess. Protectress of mothers and new born babies. Deity of resurrection. Consort of Khnumu. Later identified with Hathor.

HEL (HELA) In Norse mythology a monstrous offspring of Loki, whom Odin cast into Helheim, giving her power over the nine worlds of the dead. Her hall, Sleet-cold was located under one of the roots of Yggdrasil. Her bed was Disease, her bedcover was Unhappiness, her servants were Hunger and Tardy. She received all who died of old age and sickness as distinguished from the heroes who went to Valhalla. Hel is identical with El, and the Teutonic for holy is hel, heil, or heli. Also called Urd or Urth.

HELEN (AILEEN, EILEEN, ELAIN, HELENA, HELENE, LENA, NELL) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning bright one, light. (2) In Greek mythology variously said to have been the daughter of the Spartan king Tyndareus and Leda, of Nemesis, of Zeus, who visited Leda in the form of a swan, and of Zeus and Pyrrha (ruddy earth). The brothers of Helen were Castor and Pollux; her twin sister was Clytemnestra. She was the wife of Menelaus and the mistress of Paris. Her name has become synonymous with beautiful woman. She also stands for agitation, beauty inspiring passion, and dissension. At Sparta, in the temple of Artemis, Theseus and his friend Pirithous saw her dancing. Although she was only nine years of age, her beauty was so overwhelming, they abducted her, and then cast lots to see which would have her. Theseus won and placed her under the charge of his mother Aethra, but she was recovered by the Spartans, and when of age became the wife of Menelaus, who thus became king. Paris, promised the loveliest of all women by Aphrodite, was led by the goddess to Sparta during the absence of Menelaus, and the beautiful Helen readily eloped with him. The Trojan War, which lasted ten years and ended in the downfall of Troy was the outcome of this abduction. After the death of Paris, Helen betrayed the Trojans to the Greeks, and she and Menelaus were reconciled. Helen probably originally was a moon goddess; her most popular legend as preserved is that of dawn, the gleaming beautiful daughter of sky and night. Her abductions by Paris and Theseus were those of the dawn by sun-heroes. On her dowry rested the curse that accompanied the treasures of all dawn or spring maids, death, as the light must die to rise anew each day, and growth must die to rise anew each spring. The treasure she brought to Menelaus was much like that of the Andvari hoard connected with the story of Brynhild. Kunopsis, an epithet of Helen, means light beams or rays. Helene is a transliteration of Sarama and is identical with Selene. Roman sailors gave Helen's name to Saint Elmo's fire. If one flame showed itself, they called it Helen and said it portended the worst of the storm was yet to come; when more than one flame showed itself, it was called Castor and Pollux, and the worst of the storm was believed to be over.

HELENIUM September 2 birth-day flower, symbolic of tears.

HELENUS In Greek mythology a Trojan prince, son of Priam and Hecuba. A prophet, he was captured by the Greeks and was persuaded by Odysseus into using his gifts against his native Troy. He revealed that three conditions were indispensable to the conquest of Troy: the son of Achilles, Neoptolemus, must fight in the ranks of the Greeks; the arrows of Heracles must be used against the Trojans (see Philoctetes); the Greeks had to obtain possession of the wooden image of Pallas-Athene from the famous Palladium of Troy. In some accounts he fell to the share of Pyrrhus as a captive and, because he saved the life of the Greek, he was permitted to marry Andromache, his brother Hector's widow.

HELGA Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning holy night.

HELGA-FELL Literally, holy-fell or holy mountain. In Icelandic lore, the hill into which the 'dead died.'

HELGE (HELGI) In Norse mythology: (1) Son of Bele. After the death of Bele, with his younger brother Halfdan, he was co-king of Sogn. Slain by Frithiof, to whom his brother was forced to pay tribute. In another version of the legend he was accidentally killed by Halfdan. A prince of darkness. (2) King of Halogaland. In love with Thora, daughter of Cuse, ruler of the Finns, he was ashamed to press his suit because he stuttered, and called upon his friend Hother, who spoke with charm and eloquence, to win Thora for him. This theme appears in Cyrano de Bergerac, a drama by Edmond Rostand, in Longfellow's Courtship of Miles Standish, and in other modern literary works. (3) In the Volsung Saga son of Sigmund and Borghild. He was a mighty warrior who fought so fiercely against King Hunding, enemy of the Volsungs, he was surnamed Hundingsbane. After slaying Hunding, to escape those who pursued him he took the form of a wolf (i.e. disguised himself in a wolf-skin). In his wolf form he met and fell in love with Sigrun, a swan maid and valkyrie. Inasmuch as her father already had promised her to Hodbrod, Helge challenged Hodbrod and killed him. Except Dag, all the kin of Sigrun, who aided Hodbrod were slain. Helge and Sigrun were married, and Dag and Helge took vows of fellowship, nevertheless Dag, with the spear Gungner, given to him by Odin, struck Helge through the back. The spirit of Helge went to Valhalla, but every night it returned to Sigrun, who slept on his mound, and stayed with her until dawn. This is a light myth, in which Dag (Day) killed a hero of darkness. Sigrun, probably an aspect of wind, was as Helge had told her, "Doomed from birth to be the cause of great bloodshed," i.e. cause her kin, princes of light, to spread the blood of night across the dawn sky. The fairy tale Little Red Riding Hood echoes this myth.

HELGRINDR Icelandic underworld gate. Compares with Tuonen-portti.

HELHEIM (HEL) One of the nine Norse worlds of the dead. The holy or hollow place located deep in the earth under the roots of the Yggdrasil. In a primitive version realm of all the dead. Later a region of those who died in bed of old age or sickness, as distinguished from Valhalla, where heroes went. Still later, abode of the evil dead, a place of cold, disease, and famine. On the road to it were turbid rivers, heavy with mud, swords, and venom. A dog with blood-stained breasts leaped at those who were doomed to the realm, gates creaked harshly behind those who entered it. Also mentioned as the abode of the red cock, whose fire purified what was good and destroyed what was evil, and which each morning answered Goldcomb. Valhalla and Helheim referred to the state of things between death and Ragnarok; Naastrand and Gimle to the state of things after Ragnarok. Also called Elvidner and Niflheim. In late mythology Hel was not merely queen of the realm, but the realm itself.

HELIADES In Greek mythology daughters of Helios and Clymene, sisters of Phaethon. Their names were Aegle (or Phoebe), Lampetia, and Phaethusa. They favored their brother's rash act, and when he plunged into the water, the gods changed them into poplars and their tears crystalized into amber. Phases of light.

HELIAEA Law court of ancient Athens.

HELICE Cretan nymph; one of the nurses of the infant Zeus. Like Callisto, with whom she is confused, she is said to have been placed in the heavens as the constellation Great Bear.

HELICON A mountain range in Greek antiquity celebrated as the favorite seat of Apollo and the Muses. The fountains Aganippe and Hippocrene on its slopes were reputed to impart poetic inspiration. The name is from the Greek helice (willow).

HELIOPOLIS Literally, city of the sun. (1) Sacred Egyptian city where the phoenix (often portrayed as a peacock) supposedly rejuvenated itself. By Hebrews called Beth-shemesh (house of the sun), Aven and On, both meaning sun, and by the Arabs called Ain-Shems (fountain of the sun). (2) An ancient city in Syria; modern name of Baalbek. Its stupendous ruins have been the wonder of many centuries.

HELIOS In Greek mythology son of Hyperion (passing over) and Thia (order) or of Hyperion and Euryphaessa (far-shining). Brother of Eos and Selene. A sun god, incarnation of beauty and light, whose worship probably was introduced into Greece from Asia. His herd composed 350 cattle and 350 sheep, probably a reference to the days and nights of the lunar year. He was invoked as a witness when a solemn oath was taken because of the belief that nothing escaped his all seeing eye. He was beloved by Clytie and Leucothea; was the husband of Perse, and their children were Aeetes, Circe, and Pasiphae. By Clymene, he was the father of the Heliades and of Phaethon. He was the driver of the solar quadriga or he sailed across the skies to his palace in Colchis each night in a winged golden boat. The Colossus of Rhodes, his chief seat of worship, which was 105 feet in height, portrayed him as a beautiful youth wearing a radiated crown, guiding the horses of his chariot with a whip. His emblems were the cock, cornucopia, crown with seven or twelve rays, horse's head, number seven, oxen, ripened fruit. Sometimes con-founded with Apollo. He com-pares with the Egyptian Ra and some forms of Osiris, with the Persian Mithra, Roman Sol, Russian Dazbog, Syrian Baal. Christianized as Saint Elias. A name cognate with Heol.

HELIOTROPE (1) March birthstone; gem governing the zodiacal house Aries. Symbol of courage and wisdom. It sup-posedly has the power to make the wearer invisible. If wrapped in laurel leaf with a wolf's tooth and carried on the person, will keep away slander. Also called bloodstone. (2) March 1 birth-day flower, symbolizing devotion, eagerness, faithfulness. In the language of flowers: I remain true. Typifies that which fol-lows the sun. Dream signifi-cance: long life. In Greek my-thology flower of Clytie.

HELJAR-RAN In Norse my-thology abode of Delling.

HELL Originally an underworld abode for all the dead corre-sponding to the Greek Hades or Hebrew Sheol. Now understood as a place of eternal punishment after death for the wicked. Resi-dence of the devil, Lucifer, Satan. Figuratively, any condi-tion or place of extreme evil or misery. A place where evil-doers gather, as a gambling house; a place or state without mercy. Hell is personified by a monster with an open jaw emit-ting flames; within the jaws are devils or human beings or both. To dream of Hell signifies quarrels. In Christian Science Hell is a carnal belief, death, hatred, lust, self-imposed agony and destruction. The French word for hell is enfer, which yields one fire. Analogous to Gehenna, Naraka, Nastrand, Tartarus.

Hell-broth. A magical mix-ture prepared for malignant pur-poses; witch-broth.

Hell-cat. A furious or spite-ful woman.

Hell-hag. An evil old woman; also hell-witch.

Hell-hated. So vile, hated even in Hell.

Hell-hound. A fierce, cruel pursuer. Cerberus.

Hell-kite. A fierce bird of prey; a wantonly cruel person.

Hell-matter. In printer's cant broken or useless type thrown into the hell-box (waste receptacle).

HELLANODIC In Greek anti-quity, judge of the Nemean and Olympic games; a judge in the Spartan army. Literally Greek (Hellen) right (dike).

HELLE In Greek mythology daughter of Athamas (sun) and Nephele (cloud), sister of Phryxus. When Helle and Phryxus are mistreated by their step-mother, Nephele provides a winged ram with golden fleece (sun-lit cloud) for their escape. Helle falls from its back into the sea and is drowned, the sea be-ing named Hellespont to honor her. Phryxus reaches Colchis safely. Helle typifies the warm, sun-lit air; whereas Phryxus typifies the cold air, which can-not be destroyed. Helle and Phryxus correspond to the Nif-lungs, Norse children of mists.

HELLEBORE Flower symbol-izing calumny, scandal. In witchcraft an antidote against madness.

Black hellebore. Witches' flower. In Christianity typifies the nativity of Christ.

HELLEN In Greek mythology grandson of Prometheus, son of Deucalion and Pyrrha. Legendary king of Phthia; eponym of the Hellenic or Greek race. Father of Aeolus, Dorus, Xuthus; grandfather of Achaeus, Ion, and Sisypus.

HELLER Masculine name from Old High German, meaning the bright.

HELMET Conflict, contest, fortification, gladiatorism, knighthood, prowess, prudence, salvation, war, wisdom. Typifies the ability to resist. In heraldry signifies surety in defense, wisdom. Christian emblem of Saint George typifying salvation. An attribute of Aides, Athena, Hephaestus, Mars, and Minerva. Typifies a cloud.

Helmet crowned by a wolf's head. Courage supplanted by astuteness.

Helmet topped by a cross or fleur-de-lis. Christian emblem of salvation.

Winged helmet. Flight, swiftness of poetic thought. Attribute of Hermes, Mercury.

HELM GUNNAR In Volsung Saga a great warrior defeated by a young one. Chosen for Valhalla by Brynhild because he was an old man. Odin had instructed her to select Agnar but, struck by his youth and beauty, she saved him, permitting him to smite down Helm Gunnar. As Odin had promised victory to Helm Gunnar the god punished Brynhild with a prick of the sleep-thorn and she remained asleep until awakened by Sigurd. A time myth.

HELMUND Afghanistan river

goddess; identical with Harahvaiti and Sarasvati.

HELOISE (1) A feminine name, same as Eloise, which see. Also a form of Louisa. (2) One of the most beautiful and learned women of medieval times. She fell in love with her tutor Pierre Abelard and, after she gave birth to a son, they were married, although she had begged her lover not to marry her as she feared marriage might ruin his career. Her enraged uncle Canon Fulbert of Notre Dame Cathedral had Abelard emasculated. Heloise entered a nunnery and Abelard became a monk. The letters written by the separated lovers have become famous. After their deaths, both lovers were placed in the same tomb. Their tragic love affair is compared to that of Romeo and Juliet and has become the theme of innumerable dramas and poems.

HELOT One of a class of serfs in ancient Sparta bound to the soil, but owned by the state and not to be sold. The term is applied to serfdom in general, or to any bondman, slave, abject or servile person.

HELSKO In Norse mythology sandals or shoes bound upon a dead man's feet for his toilsome journey along Helvegr to the other world.

HELVEGR (HELVEG, HELVIG) Literally, Hel's way. Norse path of the dead, the long dark way along which a dead man travels to reach Helheim.

HEMAN Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning faithful.

HEMANTADEVI In Buddhism one of the goddesses of the four seasons, winter. Portrayed with an animal head. Her color is blue, her vahana is the camel, her emblems are the hammer and skull cup. In Tibet called dGungyi-rgyal-mo.

HEMATITE Gem symbolizing vivacity and wifehood. Used as a talisman to procure for wearer a favorable hearing of petitions addressed to kings and a fortunate issue of judgments and lawsuits. Held to stop the bleeding of wounds and to relieve pain. Anciently rubbed on the body by warriors before advancing into combat. Name derived from the Greek haima, meaning blood, because a red streak shows when scratched.

HEMERA Greek abstract divinity of time. Daylight. Various-ly described as an offspring of Erebus and Nyx, Uranus and Nyx, or Tithonos and Eos.

HEMISPHERE Earth, universe. Female principle in nature. According to the mystics an emblem of the cult of death and of lunar worship, symbolizes the asceticism of a hermit, belief in the divine quality of man, concentration, help from within, inner activity, inner transformation, intuition, moon, motherhood, night, revolution, self-deliverance. Also carries the symbolism of ball and circle.

HEMLOCK February 15 birthday flower. Evil omen, symbolic of death, foreboding, poison. In the language of flowers: You will cause my death. Among North American Indians a hemlock wreath indicated heads taken in warfare.

HEMOPHILIA The royal disease, so called because several royal families of Europe were subject to the morbid bleeding condition, which characterizes the disease.

HEMP June 24 birthday flower, symbolic of fate. In Japan hemp strips are hung as a charm to bind lovers.

Stretch hemp. Be hanged, hemp rope being used in hanging executions.

HEMSET In Egyptian mythology a mate of Nuu, which see. Name signifying sitting, resting force.

HEN The female principle, maternal care, providence. Dream significance: (black) news; (colored) honest competence; (fat) wealth; (pecking) ruin; (several) gossip; (thin) mediocrity; (white) festivity. In China the crowing of a hen indicates ruin for a family. In Christianity symbolic of defender, provider. The Finno-Ugrians cut a hen's throat at a gateway immediately a death occurs, that the hen may lead the soul on its way. If the body of the hen falls into the courtyard, a new death will occur soon in the house. Among some tribes a living hen is placed in the coffin to prevent the dead from taking 'poultry-luck' away with it.

Hen eggs. In Malay placed under the armpits of a woman who has died in childbirth to prevent her from returning as a langsuvar (shrieking ghost). Beads are placed in her mouth and needles in her hands.

HENBANE Used as a talisman for cheerful dispositions. It supposedly adorned the robe of the Jewish high priest. In a medical superstition used as an antidote for liver complaints and ulcers.

HENEB Egyptian wine god.

HENGEST (HENGIST) Literally,

stallion. Legendary chief of the Jutes, joint founder with his brother Horsa of the English kingdom of Kent in the 5th century. In Norse mythology a name of Ivalde or a son of Ivalde also known as Gelder or Hyuki. An elf smith.

HENRY (HAL, HANK, HARRY, HEN) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning wood and ruler, head of a house. The feminine equivalent is Henriette (Etta, Hetty, Nettie).

HEOL Breton sun-deity, king of stars; cognate with Helios. The name yields eternal El, and compares with Hel. The Celtic word for sun is heol, which is equal to huyl (chuy), Celtic word for beetle, and is the source of such words as hale, holy, hull, and whole.

HEOROT In Danish saga great hall built for warriors by Hrothgar and from which the monster Grendel regularly carried off sleeping men until he was slain by Beowulf. Heorot was the hall of night raided by the darkness demon.

HEOSPHORUS In Greek mythology son of Astraeus and Eos. The morning star, brother of Hesperus, evening star. Identified with Roman Lucifer.

HEPATIC September 3 birthday flower, symbolizing confidence.

HEPHAESTUS (HEPHAISTOS) In Greek mythology the son of Zeus and Hera or of Hera alone without male progenitor. God of the fire of the hearth, born puny at birth, but like a spark he soon grew strong and terrible as a devouring flame. His ugliness so displeased his mother, she cast him from Olympus; later he took her part in a quarrel, and Zeus cast him from Olympus; he landed maimed in Lemnos and henceforth was lame. Although rejected by the gods, he fashioned many things of beauty for them, armor, arrows, chariots, golden boots, jewels, palaces, as well as the maid Pandora. The Cyclops were apprenticed to him. His workshop, which was in the heart of the volcanic mountain Aetna (Etna), where sparks from his anvil were constantly seen, was guarded by dogs. In the Iliad his wife was said to be Charis; in the Odyssey, the faithless Aphrodite; both renowned for beauty, suggesting the province of art is to lift materials from the useful to the beautiful. He was the father of the robber Periphetes. By Athena or Gaea he was the father of Erichthonius. He was revered by potters and workers in metal as the god of fire in its beneficial aspects, the celestial architect, god of the anvil, mechanical arts, metallurgy, and pottery-making, and as the god governing the zodiacal house Libra. In art, he appears as a dwarf; as a laboring man; but most frequently as a lame bearded man wearing a chiton, with right shoulder free, and a pointed cap, holding a hammer and standing near an anvil; sometimes with a thunderbolt or pincers. Other emblems were his helmet and the metal iron. The boar, calf, and pig were sacred to him. His festival was the Chalceia, which he shared with Athena. He is an analogue of Agni Yavishta. He also compares with Credne, Goibniu, Ptah, Regin, and Vulcan.

HEPHZIBAH Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning my delight.

HEPIALES (EPHIALTES, EPIALES, HEPIALOS) Primitive Greek demon of nightmare.

HEPTAGON Seven-pointed star symbolizing human skill.

HEQES Egyptian god of fishermen; lord of the mouth of rivers.

HEQET Egyptian frog-headed spouse of Khnum, with whom she formed men and made the gods.

HERA (HERE) Greek queen of heaven. Daughter of Cronus and Rhea, sister-wife of Zeus. Originally a pan-Hellenic divinity of weather and fertility; later a goddess of childbirth. Also worshiped as a moon goddess and as an earth mother. She was a scolding, quarrelsome wife, frequently countermanding the orders of her husband. As Zeus typified the regions of the upper air, she typified the lower atmosphere, and its variations were thought to result from the frequent domestic quarrels of the couple. She was jealous, unforgiving, vain, vindictive. She caused the fall of Troy because Paris, son of its king Priam, had proclaimed Aphrodite to be more beautiful. She had the power to cause insanity and struck Dionysus crazy. The ugliness of her son Hephaestus displeased her and she cast him from Olympus. She agreed to suckle an exposed infant, not realizing the child was Heracles, whom she hated. When he bit hard at her breasts (the sun stung the sky), she threw him from her, drops of milk scattered over the sky and formed the Milky Way. In spite of her many faults, she was set up as the model wife and revered as the noblest of goddesses. She was invoked under various names, among them: Chera, patroness of widows. Eileithyia and Lucina, protectress in child-bearing. Gamelia (Gamelion was the seventh and marrying Attic month), Pronuba, Teleia (consecrator), and Zugia (yoker) were names given to her as goddess who presided over the whole course of married life. Karpophoros and Kourotrophos, guardian of suckling children. Parthenos, custodian of the virginity of maidens.

She was the mother of Ares, Eileithyia or Ilithyia, a name under which she herself was invoked, Hebe. She governed the zodiacal house Aquarius. In primitive myths her name was that of a death goddess who had charge of souls of sacred kings and made oracular heroes of them. Her festival was the Heraeum (plural Heraea), and a ewe-lamb was sacrificed to her the first day of every month. Greek artists represented her as a beautiful mature woman of noble bearing, clad in a long tunic, wearing a diadem, with or without a veil, holding a patera and a scepter, seated on a throne. She also was shown with a peacock, a bird that by its cry indicates the changes in weather, suggesting her office as weather-goddess. A great matriarchal goddess, things emblematic of fertility were sacred to her: the cow, cuckoo, goose, hawk, ewe-lamb, pomegranate, serpent, sow, vine, white heifer. Her favorite flowers were the dittany, lily, and poppy. Her name is identical with era and probably is connected with the Sanscrit svar, i.e. bright sky. She is identified with the Roman Juno and resembles Khotun, Manzan Gormo, and Sati.

HERACLES (HERAKLES) (1)
In Greek mythology son of Alc-

mene, by Zeus, who visited her in the guise of her husband Amphitryon. Twin brother of Iphicles, son of Amphitryon. Shortly before the birth of Heracles, Zeus boasted to Hera that the first child born that day to the family of Perseus, grandfather of Alcmena and Amphitryon, should rule over all his race. Hera, aided by Ate, the spirit of mischief, hastened the birth of Eurystheus, a grandson of Perseus, and preceding Heracles in birth he became entitled to the honor Zeus intended for Heracles, who was doomed by Hera's action to serve his kinsman. Alcmena, fearful of Hera's wrath, exposed the child. Athene, attracted by the infant's cries, prevailed upon Hera to feed the unknown baby; as soon as she did so, the child bit her breast, and she threw him from her. The milk that dropped formed the Milky Way. Athene then asked Alcmena to care for the child, and to this she willingly consented, knowing the child to be her own. Hera, discovering whom she had nursed, sent two serpents to destroy Heracles, but he strangled them both. Amphitryon, astonished by the display of supernatural strength, declared the child must have been sent as a special gift from Zeus, adopted him as his own son, and taught Heracles how to drive a chariot. He engaged as tutors; Autolycus to teach the boy dexterity in boxing; Castor, the arts of armed warfare; Eurytus, how to handle a bow; and Linus, how to play the lyre. Heracles had an ungovernable temper, and Amphitryon, fearful that the boy might come to harm, placed him in the country in the care of a shepherd.

When, as a youth, he learned that a lion on Mount Cithaeron was attacking the herds of Am-phitryon, grazing at the base of the mountain, he killed the lion. Ever afterwards he wore the hide of the animal over his shoulders; the head served as his helmet. With Amphitryon and a few other brave men, he defended the city of Thebes. Amphitryon died in the conflict, and Creon, the king, grateful to Heracles, bestowed his daughter Megara upon the hero in marriage.

When the time came for Heracles to serve Eurystheus, he was assigned twelve labors, each corresponding to the movement of the sun through a house of the zodiac. See under Zodiac Legends.

Heracles was unable to resume a happy life with Megara after accomplishing his labors because, in a fit of madness, caused by Hera, he murdered their children. When restored to sanity, he gave Megara as a wife to his nephew Iolaus (fire). He sought the hand of Iole (dawn), but was rejected because her father Eurytus feared she might suffer the fate of Megara. Seeking purification for his murders Heracles set out on a weary pilgrimage and became the slave of Omphale, queen of Lydia. In her palace, he abandoned himself to the luxuries of an oriental life and, while she playfully doomed his lion's skin and helmet, he wore her garments and labored at a spinning wheel. When his term of bondage expired, his manliness returned, and he set out to revenge himself upon Laomedon who had failed to give Heracles his sacred horses as promised for rescuing the princess Hesione (fertility) from a dragon (drought). After killing Laomedon, Heracles asked Hesione if she wished to ransom one of the prisoners. She thereupon gave Heracles her golden diadem and asked for the release of her brother Podacres, who ever after was called Priam, i.e. ransomed one. Heracles then wooed the beautiful Deianeira for whom he had to battle a rival, the river god Achelous. At a banquet Heracles accidentally killed a noble youth serving the wine. To atone for the boy's death Heracles banished himself, taking with him his wife and his young son Hylus. In the course of their journey, they arrived at the river Evenus, over which Heracles carried his son and entrusted his wife to Nessus, who attempted to carry her off, whereupon Heracles shot him. The dying Centaur called Deianeira to his side and gave her his blood-covered shirt, telling her that, if ever in danger of losing the love of Heracles, she had only to place the shirt on him to win him back. Arriving at the court of Eurystus, Heracles, to punish the king for refusing him Iole as a wife, stormed the palace, killed the king and carried off Iole as captive. For his victories he desired to offer a sacrifice to Zeus, and asked Deianeira for a sacrificial robe. To test the efficacy of the love-charm of the robe given to her by Nessus she sent it to Heracles. The hot flames rising from the altar heated poisons in the robe and in his agony, he implored his friends to set his body on a funeral pyre. No one but his friend Philoctetes had the courage to obey, and he lighted the pyre on Mount Oeta. Before dying he called upon his son Hylus to marry Iole. Deianeira hanged herself, and the body of Heracles was borne to Olympus by Athene, where he became a constellation in the Northern Sky. Hera became reconciled to him, and gave him as a wife her daughter Hebe, goddess of eternal youth.

For his exploits he had been given a boat and a bow by Apollo, a bronze breastplate by Hephaestus, a coat of mail by Athene, and a sword by Hermes; his club he cut himself from an oak tree in Nemea. The animals sacred to him were the boar, bull, deer, and ram; his emblems were the club, lion's skin, and poplar leaves. Greek artists usually portrayed him as an infant in his cradle (sun boat) strangling a serpent (night); as a bull-necked youth with a club and a lion's skin, and as a youth in woman's garments with a distaff. His descendants, the Heraclidae, were: by Auge, Telephus; by Hebe, Alexiades and Anticetus; by Deianeira, Hyllus and Leichas. He had sons but no daughters and, in primitive Greece, titles were matrilinearly conveyed. His name means glory (klutos) of sky (Hera). He also was known as Alcides, Canopic (Celestial) Heracles, Heracles of Oeta, and Heracles of Tiryns.

He was the most renowned hero of ancient times, one of gigantic strength and indomitable courage. The legends woven around him incorporate almost every aspect attributed to a sun deity or to the continually dying and continually reborn Spirit of the year. Born of the sky and dawn, he is found by another dawn, Athena, and given to the female aspect of sky, Hera, to be fed. He is given to the care of a shepherd, that is raised among flocks (clouds). His fierce temper and madness are his scorching rays. His return to sanity typifies beneficial, fertilizing rays. He serves one meaner than himself and undertakes the burden of the world (relieves Atlas) because the magnificent sun toils ceaselessly for man. His arrows are deadly rays. He labors at a spinning wheel or omphalos (navel of the earth). Compare Blanaid and Caer Sidi. He wears a woman's clothing. See Androgynous deities. The sun is the constant wanderer across the sky, never at rest, never faithful. He forsakes Iole, the dawn, for Deianeira, the gloaming, whom he in turn forsakes for Iole, and when he turns again to Deianeira, she causes his death, to which he goes down battling blood-red clouds. His death is an astronomical allegory, representing the end of the year when the sun reaches the most westerly point in its annual journey at the time of the winter solstice. After the death of Heracles, the tyrant Eurystheus asked for the surrender of his sons. The youths fled; thus on the death of the sun, the golden hues of evening flee from the sky and are not seen again until dawn. Like Christ, his birthday was celebrated on December 25 and like Christ, Izanagi, Orpheus and other sun deities, he descended into the realm of the dead and rose again. In a Christian interpretation his victory over wild beasts typifies victory and control of the higher nature over the lower. He is the counterpart of Hercules. Others whose exploits resemble his are Bata, Bhima, Indra, Krishna, Kwasind, Melicertes (Melkart), Oedipus, Perseus, Rustan, Samson Theus.

(2) Heracles of Oeta. At first an oak hero, later fused into a barley god. He originally appeared as a pastoral sacred king, the leader of his people in hunting and war. He was the sun-hero, rain and thunder maker, that is bringer of fertility. His twelve chieftains were pledged to respect his authority, but he was subservient to the Queen-of-the-Woods, whose priestess was the tribal law-giver and disposer of the good things of life. The health of the people was bound up with his, and he was the male leader of an orgiastic rite in which he had twelve archer companions, including his twin brother Poeas (Philoctetes), moon-hero, who was spear-armed and who was he deputy. Heracles carried an oak-club because the oak provided his beasts with fodder, was useful to his people, and attracted lightning (fertile rains) better than other trees. He performed an annual green-marriage with the Queen-of-the-Woods and shortly thereafter died. In one of the varied accounts of his death: at midsummer, the end of the half-year reign, he was made drunk and led into the middle of a circle of twelve stones and blinded, castrated, flayed, and impaled with a mistletoe stake stretched into a five-fold bond. He finally was hacked into joints on the round altarstone which stood before an oak tree. His blood was sprinkled over the whole tribe to make all fruitful and vigorous. The joints were oak-roasted and his twelve chieftains danced wildly in a figure eight, singing, and eating his flesh eucharistically. The head and genitals were put in an alder-wood boat and floated down a river. Sometimes the head was cured and preserved for oracular use. His twin Poeas, who had lighted his fire, succeeded him and reigned until the New Year when Poeas was sacrificially killed by a new Heracles. The worship appears to have been connected with a group of oracular heroes of different Mediterranean nations at different stages of religious development previous to the Trojan War, who finally merged into the demi-god worshipped as Heracles. He seems to have sprung from the same source as the Egyptian god Shu. His symbols were the acorn, mistletoe, rock-dove which nests in oaks as well as in rocks, and the serpent, all of sexual significance. Deities with whom he appears to have had things in common are Agag the Amalekite, Anchises, Cuchulainn, Dagda, Llew Llaw, Orion, Romulus, Samson, Tammuz.

(3) Heracles of Tiryns. Like Heracles of Oeta, a deity of early Greeks. He was an agricultural and pastoral king specializing in the cultivation of barley. He became lover to fifty water-priestesses of a mountain-goddess in whose honor he wore his lion's skin. His joint reign with his twin Iphiclus was about eight years because a rough approximation of lunar and solar times occur at every one hundredth lunar month. In later times, to prolong his reign, he offered a child-victim yearly in his stead. This offering of surrogates, death by fire after temporary investiture as king, explains the killing of children by Heracles either accidentally or in a fit of madness. See Surrogate. Early portraits, show him with grain sprouting from his shoulder, wearing a lion skin, and carrying a club. He sometimes is confused with Maneros, Tammuz, and Triptolemus.

Heracleian knot. A snake compilation on a rod adopted by Greek brides as a girdle fastening, which only the bridegroom may untie. A talisman for many offspring.

Heraclidae. A descendant of Heracles; one of Spartan royalty who claimed such descent. According to tradition, descendants of Heracles and Deianeira, allying themselves with the Dorians, secured preponderance in ancient Greece. In their fifth and successful invasion of the Pelopon-nesus they were led by Oxylus, a man with three eyes.

HERACLITUS Greek philosopher of the 5th century B.C. who regarded life as hopeless. Because of his solemnity, he was called the weeping philosopher; because of his literary style, he was called the obscure.

Heracleitean fire. That which cleanses, burns away; that from which all comes and to which all returns; pertaining to the philosophy of Heraclitus.

HERALDRY The art of performing the function or office of a herald. Anciently, the function was to announce public ceremonies, carry declarations of war or messages between sovereigns, proclaim the birth of a royal child, peace, or war, etc. This led to the science which treats of armorial bearings or coats of arms, which determine pedigrees, indicate the manner in which families are represented, etc. The escutcheon or shield is divided into nine points which are identified by the first nine letters of the alphabet. On the first line are A, dexter chief point; B, middle chief point; C, sinister chief point. The center is composed of D, honor or collar point; E, fess point; F, nombril or navel point. The bottom three are: G, dexter base point; H, sinister base point; I, middle base point. Tinctures are the seven colors, eight furs, and two metals. The colors and metals and their symbolic meanings are:

Color	Represented by	Symbolism
argent (silver or white)	white space or plain surface	faith, purity
azure (bright sky blue)	horizontal lines	piety, sincerity
gules (vermilion red) or (gold)	vertical lines	courage, zeal
purpure (purple)	dots	honor, loyalty
	lines at an angle from left to right, starting at the left, moving upward.	rank, royalty
sable (black)	perpendicular lines crossing horizontal lines, forming squares	grief, penitence sanguine or murrey (purplish red)	same lines as purpure crossed by lines from right to left.	patriotism, sacrifice
tenne (orange, tawney)	same lines as vert crossed by horizontal lines.	endurance, strength
vert (green)	lines at an angle from right to left, starting at the right, moving upward	hope, youth

The furs which were worn on ceremonial occasions and typified both the ceremony and the rank, are:

Fur	Represented by
ermine	black dots and bell-shaped figures on a white field ermine	white dots and bell-shaped figures on a black field
ermineois	black dots and bell-shaped figures on a gold field
pean (sable)	transparent bell-shaped figures on a black field potent	a white figure, the shape of a crutch-head or tau cross in reverse, on blue field.
potent, counter-potent	same as potent, with the figure repeated in reverse form vair (or vare)	white figure, which supposedly typifies squirrel skins on blue or white field.
vair, counter-vair	same as vair, with the squirrel skin design repeated in reverse.

In blazoning royal coats of arms, heralds sometimes used the names of planets; in blazoning those of nobles, precious stones were used for tinctures, the equivalents being:

Color	Planet	Gem
argent	Luna (Moon)	pearl
azure	Jupiter	sapphire

Color	Planet	Gem
gules	Mars	ruby
or	Sol (Sun)	topaz
purpure	Mercury	amethyst
sable	Saturn	diamond
vert	Venus	emerald

The positions of beasts and their meanings are:

Position	Emblematic of
couchant, lying down	sovereignty
counter-passant	moving in opposite directions
coue (tail hanging between legs)	coward
dormant	sleeping
gardant, full-faced	fearlessness, prudence hauriant (fish on its tail)	readiness issant	rising from the top or bottom (of an ordinary) lodged, reposing	content
naiant (fish)	swimming
nascent	rising out of the middle (of an ordinary) passant (walking, the face in profile)	resolution
passant gardant (walking, face full)	prudence and resolution
passant regardant (walking, looking behind)	caution
rampant (rearing, head in profile)	magnanimity rampant gardant (erect on hind legs, full face)	prudence rampant regardant (erect on hind legs, looking behind)	circumspection regardant (looking back)	circumspection salient (springing)	valor
sejant (seated)	counsel
stantant (standing still)	Unmoving
trippant (running)	Action
volant (flying)	Soaring

Heraldry is personified by a woman in medieval costume, seated, holding heraldic escutcheon. Attended by Genealogy, holding scrolls and showing family trees, and by Sphragistics in the act of sealing a document adorned with seal and ribbons.

HERB Appetiser, healing, nobility. American Indians believed herbs were impregnated with divine influences and consequently possessed life-giving and life-prolonging qualities. In medieval Christian belief herbs picked on Ascension Day are especially good for medicinal purposes. Emblem of Saint Cyr. By Jews used at the Passover Feast. See bitter herbs, Hazereth. In Tibetan Buddhism one of the eight objects used in Man-la ritual.

HERBERT (BERT, HERB) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning army and bright.

HERCULES Roman deity identical with the Greek Heracles, which see. Because of his recuperative abilities (the sun continually renews itself), his power to restore health, sulphur springs were dedicated to him. Hercules was represented by Roman artists as bull-necked, muscular, and of huge proportions. After his death, he was made immortal and placed as a constellation in the Northern Sky.

Attic Hercules. Theseus, who like Hercules destroyed evil demons of drought and winter.

Hercules Barbatus. Literally, Hercules bearded, a name appearing on Rhenish inscriptions. A form of Donar or Thor.

Hercules' choice. Immortality, the reward of toil in preference to pleasure.

Hercules' labors. Difficult tasks, very great toil. The cycle of the year.

Hercules' pillars. Promontories at the entrance to the Mediterranean; one in Africa, one in Spain. According to legend, they were bound together and Hercules tore them apart to get to Gades (Cadiz). Anciently they were called Abyla and Calpe; they now are called Mount Hacho and Gibraltar.

Jewish Hercules. Samson.

HERDSMAN In the Occident the constellation Bootes in the Northern Sky. In China Ch'ien Niu the star Altair in the constellation Aquila. He neglected his duties as celestial herdsman (keeper of clouds) for love of Weaver Damsel, and the gods punished him by separating him from his love. He was permitted to meet her only once a year when they stood facing each other on opposite sides of the bridge formed by crows over the River-of-Heaven (Milky Way). His Japanese name is Hikoboshi or Kengiu, and Tona-bata is the festival celebrating the meeting of the lovers, sometimes identified as Amaterasu and Susa-no-wo. In Korea called Ching Yuh. Also known as Cowherd.

HERESY In an Italian icon personified by a lean old woman of terrible aspect. Flames issue from her mouth. Her hair hangs in disorder and her body is almost entirely exposed; her breasts flag. She carries a closed book with serpents coming out of it. With the other hand she scatters serpents about. The word heresy is cognate with Greek airetikos, i. e. able to choose, and with Erosy (of Eros); heretics frequently are heroic erotics.

HERETOGA The commander or leader of an Anglo-Saxon army. The word survives in the German name Herzog and was translated into Latin as dux. Hengist was a heretoga.

HERFATHER A name of Odin; literally, father of hosts.

HERFJOTUR In Norse mythology an Idisi or Valkyrie; spirit who causes paralyzing terror in battle to those she regards as foes.

HER-KA Literally, Horus the Bull. Egyptian name for the planet Saturn.

HERMAN Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning army and man, soldier.

HERMAS One of the five Apostolic fathers of the Catholic Church.

HERMES (HERMEIAS) In Greek mythology son of Zeus and Maia, father of Pan by an Arcadian nymph. Born in a cave on Mount Cyllene in Arcadia. A few hours after his birth he stole some oxen (clouds) belonging to Apollo, and on his way back to his cave, he found a turtle which he killed and then, by stretching seven strings across the empty shell, he invented the lyre. To appease Apollo's anger, aroused by the theft, he gave him the lyre, and the two brothers became fast friends. Apollo, in return gave Hermes his winged shepherd's staff, capable of uniting in love those divided in hate; permitted Hermes full dominion over flocks, herds, horses, and wild animals; and taught him to prophesy by dice and by signs, but forbade him to use speech in prophesying. Hermes tested the staff, which became his famed caduceus, when he saw two serpents fighting. He placed it between them, and they entwined around it in lasting concord. Zeus appointed his son conductor of shades to Hades and messenger of the gods, offices connected with wind deities, and presented him with a petasus and talaria. He freed Io by lulling her hundred-eyed watchman Argus to sleep with his music, and he secured Prometheus to Mount Caucasus and Ixion to the eternally revolving wheel. He was mischievous and stole the girdle of Aphrodite, the arrows of Artemis, and the spear of Ares, but whatever he did was accomplished with such dexterity and grace, he always was forgiven and was a favorite of all. Thus Hermes, the wind, giver of fecundity, destroyer, mediator between the living and dead, was the companion of the sun, the moon, the sea, and the favorite of the sky. In the zodiac, he was ruler of Cancer. He encouraged athletic pursuits, he was the inventor of the alphabet and music (sounds of moving air), and of weights and measures (the balance created by the winds of the four directions, over which he was lord); he was the cultivator of the olive (carrier of seeds). He was master thief, who stole that which was in his path and penetrated or sneaked into cracks. His proclivities made him a patron of liars, rogues, thieves, and vagabonds. A god of herdsman he granted increase to flocks. Trade in ancient times was conducted chiefly by means of exchange of cattle, and so he was worshiped as god of commerce and science, protector of merchants, and the dice used in prophecies identified him as a god of luck and wealth. He was worshiped at crossroads (the place at which a man moves from one realm to another), where his image, the herm, was placed. Connected with conjuring or necromancy; later a decipherer of dreams, he evolved into a god of sleep, dreams, and magic. A bringer of fecundity, he was worshiped as a deity of health, and his image became an emblem of the medical profession.

His story symbolizes the action of the wind, emerging from a cave to fly across the sky, fighting, playing pranks, stealing, giving fertility and taking it back again. He is portrayed as a handsome youth, nude, except for his winged cap, the petasus, and wings at his heels, the talaris. He carries his magic caduceus. Frequently he has one foot raised and is on the toe of the other foot, to indicate speed; also to indicate the moving air does not rest on the ground. As a god of eloquence, he appears with a gold chain hanging from his lips; as a patron of merchants, he carries a purse. Sometimes he wears a short chlamys. Four, the number of the winds or directions, was sacred to him; likewise the square. Honey and animal tongues were sacrificed to him as well as the cock, goat, ram, tortoise. Other emblems are the calathus, dice, fig, globe, olive wreath on a milestone. His name is a transliteration of the Sanscrit Sarameyas. He is prototype of Jizo and is identified with Anubis, Mercury, Nebo, and Thoth; his name has been coupled with that of various Egyptian deities, making him an actual aspect of such deities. He was known alternately as Agoneus, Arcus, Camillus, Terminus. Other of his names are: Hermes-Anubis (Hermanubis), jackal-headed god of the intellect; Hermes Argeiphontes, Argus-slayer, releaser of Io; Hermes Psychopompos, bearer of souls of the dead to Hades. The Egyptian god Thoth, confounded by the Greeks with Hermes, was called Hermes Trismegistus (thrice great).

Herm (Herma). A square pillar surmounted by the head of Hermes or by a phallus. Originally placed at three-road junctions, where travelers invoked him. These holy three-way posts or trivia were so numerous, the word trivial came to mean something commonplace or of little account. In later times the hermae were placed at cross-roads, in public squares, and streets, and used as boundary-stones or place-markers.

Hermaia. Festival dedicated to Hermes.

Hermaphrodite. Union; also inner or self-conflict. Bisexuality of the ultimate; the self-engendered. Primordial creator; primitive man having looked upon the universe as a conjunction of man and woman, he worshiped androgynous symbols of life. A frequent figure in Egyptian art representing the two Niles, Upper and Lower; also night and day. The word is from Hermaphroditus. Compare Androgynous deities.

Hermaphroditus. Fabled son of Hermes and Aphrodite. While bathing, the nymph Salmacis became enamored of him and prayed that she might be so closely united they would become one body. Her prayer was heard and they were joined. Personification of indissoluble marriage.

Hermes' Fig. The first fig gathered off a tree was sacred to Hermes; thus a proverbial saying applied to all first fruits or works.

HERMIONE (HERMIA) (1) Feminine name derived from the name of the Greek god Hermes; also a form of Harmonia. (2) In Greek mythology daughter of Menelaus and Helen. She was betrothed to Orestes, but she married Neoptolemus. Orestes thereupon assassinated Neoptolemus and married Hermione. Probably an earth goddess over whom phases of light (fertility) battled.

HERMIT (1) Asceticism, contemplation, contempt, cynicism, misanthropy, religious devotion, wisdom. Dream significance: quiet life. (2) Card in tarot deck illustrated by a man wrapped in a large cloak supported by a staff and carrying a lantern, which represent the support and light of the occult path of science. Also called Capuchin or Sage. Typifies the Absolute, the Ancient who is above all things, preceding all and succeeding all, supporting all; Holy Ancient. One identified with cause, origin, primal will; Lighter-of-the-Path, Shower-of-the-Way; also follower of a solitary path lighted by his own lamp; searcher of truth and justice. Identified with Diogenes searching for an honest man. Attainment: aloneness. In divination corresponds to the number ten and the Hebrew letter yod. Denotes: circumspection, eternal urge to freedom, perfection, primal will, philanthropy, protection, prudence, search, wisdom of silence; and when card is in reverse: concealment, corruption, disguise, dissimulation, fear, roguery, treason, unreasoned caution.

HERMOD (HERMODR) In Norse mythology son of Odin. A wind deity. With Bragi he received and welcomed to Valhalla the heroes who fell in battle. A messenger of the gods, he went to Helheim to bring Balder back, but was unsuccessful. However, he brought with him the ring Draupner (fertility), which Balder had taken into Helheim. Hermod also was a war god.

HERMON A mountain rising into the realm of perpetual snow in Palestine. It also was called Sion and for this reason is erroneously identified with Zion.

HERNE, THE HUNTER In English legend a malevolent spirit; ancient keeper of Windsor forest. Accompanied by hounds he roams through the forest, especially in the vicinity of an old tree called Herne's oak. He disappears at midnight. Herne is a British oak-god, a wind deity, a hunter of souls who equates with Anubis and Gabriel.

HERO In mythology usually the son of a deity and a mortal; a demigod. Widely prevalent marks of the hero race are their being brought into the world by abdominal section, as Aesculapius and Macduff, and their being suckled by beasts or fed by birds as Oedipus. They are made known by doing something a mortal cannot do. Although they smite down those with whom they battle, their lives are filled with suffering and unwilling labor for the benefit of mankind. They often are bondsmen and slaves, the quarrels in which they become involved are not of their own making, they slay dragons and monsters which ravage fruitful lands or otherwise afflict mankind. The same characteristics frequently appear in heroes widely separated by time or place; Bissat (Tatar), Issi (Norse), Lugh (Celtic), Odysseus (Greek), all burned out the eye of a one-eyed giant. Heroes suffer death which puts them in an exalted rank and immortality is granted to them. Light and fertility, as opposed to darkness and drought (villain). In modern usage a hero is understood to be one distinguished for bold enterprise, courage, fortitude. The term also is applied to the chief character in a literary work.

HERO AND LEANDER In Greek legend, Hero, a priestess of Aphrodite at Sestos, was the beloved of Leander, who nightly swam across the Hellespont from Abydos to meet her. One night during a storm he was drowned, and Hero in despair threw herself into the sea. Hero personifies dawn, Leander sun. Their love story may be compared with that of Abelard and Heloise, Paolo and Francesca, Pyramos and Thisbe, Rome and Juliet. See Ill-fated lovers under Lovers.

HEROD (1) The name of several rulers, puppets of Rome, of the first centuries before and after Christ. Herod the Great, king of Judea, in his desire to destroy the infant Jesus, ordered the death of all children under two years of age. Mary fled with Jesus to Egypt. In a fit of jealousy, he murdered his wife Mariamne, a Jewish princess, and her two sons. He reigned thirty-seven years as a cruel, unscrupulous, violent monarch, and the name Herod is used figuratively for any wicked tyrant, particularly for one who is cruel to children. Five days before he died one of his sons failed in an attempt to poison him; the son was executed. (2) Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great, and tetrarch of Galilee, induced Herodias, his brother's wife and his own niece, to desert her husband for him. Because John the Baptist called their relations incestuous, Herodias conspired to have John killed, and Herod presented his head to Salome, the daughter of Herodias, on a platter.

Out-Herod Herod. Outdo in cruelty, noisy rant, and violent gesturing. Herod became common in morality plays as a noisy, roaring tyrant.

HERODOTUS Greek historian known as the Halicarnassian, after his birthplace; as the father of history, because of his great work recording the Greco-Per-sian wars; as the father of lies, because of the many fanciful allusions in his work.

HERON Fertility, forgetfulness, longevity, morning, provider of children, regeneration. Symbolizes morning because, standing in water or at the seashore, it is the first to welcome Dawn as she rises in the east. Dream significance: (to the left) failure, miscalculation; (to the right) good luck.

Heron plumes. Symbol of silence.

HEROSTRATUS (EROSTRATUS) A Greek of the 4th century B. C. who set fire to the temple of the Ephesian Artemis, one of the seven wonders of the world. This act, he said, would make his name famous. Although the Ephesians forbade his name to be mentioned, it has become immortalized through his evil deed. Coincidentally, Alexander the Great was born the night of the fire.

HERRING In Norse mythology called the arrows of the sea.

Dead as a herring. Absolutely dead; from the fact that people generally know the herring only as a dead fish.

Neither fish, flesh, nor fowl, nor good red herring. Without the particular qualities or traits of one thing or another. The allusions are: fish as the food for monks, flesh or fowl as the food for the wealthier classes of laity, red herring as the food for the poor.

HERSE Greek goddess of dew. One of the Agraulid, which see. Name signifies offspring.

HER-SHEF Egyptian ram god, symbolic of the male principle in nature. Patron deity of Khenen-su (Heracleopolis). He was a self-created Great Father, whose head was in the heavens while his feet rested on earth. His right eye was the sun, his left eye was the moon, and his soul was the light he shed over the world. From his nostrils, he breathed the north wind, which gave life to all living things. Identified with Osiris, or in the Greek view, with Heracles. As a wind deity, he resembled Khnumu (Kneph). Also resembled Ptah Tanen. In one statue he was represented with four heads, that of a bull, a ram, and two hawks. His emblems were a white crown with plumes, surmounted by two disks (sun and moon) and two serpents with two disks. He was associated with the goddess Atet. Plutarch regarded him as a symbol of strength and valor.

HERTHA (AERTH) Northern goddess identified by Tacitus as Mother Earth.

HERUKA In Yogacara, Buddhist esoteric doctrine, a personification of karuna (compassion). His sakti, Nairatma, is a personification of prajna (knowledge). The yoga (union) of Heruka and Nairatma leads to a realization of the nothingness of existence which results in Nirvana or Mahasukha (eternal bliss).

Herukabuddhas. With their saktis, manifestations of Buddhist Dhyani-buddhas and their saktis. Both have pacific and angry manifestations. Generally shown in ardhaparyankasana or in pratyalidhasana. See asanas. In Tibetan Book of the Dead known as knowledge-holding deities. Sometimes shown with one head and two arms, also in other manifestations, as with three heads, six arms, and four legs. They are: Kamaheruka, green; Padmaheruka, red; Ratnaheruka, yellow; Vairocana, white or reddish brown; Vajraheruka, blue.

HERU-PA-KAUT Egyptian Great Mother of Mendes. Female counterpart of the creator god Ba-neb-tettu, who also was her son. She was represented with a fish, symbol of abundance and fecundity, on her head. Her festivals were bacchanalian. In time she was displaced by Isis as her son was by Horus.

HERVOR Norse fertility goddess; daughter of Angantyr. After her father's death, she rode through the fire around his burial mound to obtain the sword Tyr-fing, which had been buried with him, although he had warned her the sword would bring destruction with it. The sword typifies the rays of the sun, which bring fertility and death.

HESED Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning kindness.

HESIONE Literally, lady of Asia. (1) In Greek mythology her father, Laomedon of Troy, agreed to give Heracles (beneficent sun) the celestial horses he had received from Zeus for rescuing Hesione (fertility maid) from the dragon (drought) about to devour her. When the king failed to live up to his agreement Heracles turned vindictive, ransacked the city, killed Laomedon and all his family with the exception of Hesione and her brother Priam, who became king. Hesione was given in marriage to the Greek Telamon and became the mother of Teucer. The refusal of the Greeks to return her to Troy is given as one of the causes of the Trojan War.

(2) Sea nymph, wife of Prometheus us.

HESIONEUS In Greek mythology father of Dia, who became the wife of Ixion. Ixion had promised Hesioneus rich gifts for his bride, but after the marriage refused to send them, whereupon Hesioneus stole the horses (winds) which bore the chariot (sun) of Ixion. To regain his horses he invited Hesioneus to visit him and select gifts. When Ixion opened the door of his treasure house Hesioneus was consumed by fire in the pit. Drought followed the crime as Hesioneus, a river deity, was unable to supply fertilizing waters.

HESPERIDES (HESPERIA)

Greek nymphs variously given as three to seven in number. Aided by the dragon Ladon they guarded the garden of the gods on the river Oceanus at the western extremity of the world bordering on the region of eternal darkness, where grew the tree bearing golden apples of fertility. In some accounts said to be the daughters of Atlas; in others of Nyx. Aegle, Arethusa, Erytheia, Hesperia, Hestia are names given to individual nymphs. The nymphs also are called Atlantides and Hesperides is applied to the garden, an island paradise is the west resembling Avalon, Eden, San Hsien Shan. Hesperides typifies the beauties of western clouds lit by the sunset glow.

Hesperian apples. Apples of love and fruitfulness. Golden apples given by Gaea (Earth) to Zeus and Hera (king and queen of the sky) as a wedding gift. They were located in the garden of Hesperides (land of sunset). As his eleventh labor Heracles slew the dragon Ladon (night) and carried off the apples (fertility and growth) to Eurystheus. The tree on which the apples grew represents a tree of life in a celestial paradise.

HESPERUS (HESPER) In Greek mythology son of Astraeus and Eos. Personification of the evening star, brother of Heophorus the morning star. By the Romans known as Vesper (Evening). Hesperus is from the Greek meaning evening or western sky. Compare Phosphorus.

HESTER (HETTY) Feminine name, variant of Esther.

HESTIA In Greek mythology one of the twelve great Olympians. Daughter of Cronus and Rhea, sister of Zeus. Personification of the fire of the hearth. The goddess of fire in its first application to the wants of mankind, she was presiding deity of the household and guardian spirit of humans. Also the guardian of the public hearth at Prytaneum, and in the zodiac, ruler of Capricornus. In art portrayed as a sedate matron whose gown is decorated with flowers and fruits. Libations in her honor were oil, water, wine. Young animals, tender shoots of plants, and first portions of all other sacrifices were offered to her. Her emblems were: fire, gate of city, house, or temple; globe; hearth; lamp; lighted torch; serpent; sickle and grain near the head of a horse (suggesting pasture); veil; vestibule of home or temple. In ancient writings, she is mentioned as one of the nymphs guarding the golden apples of Hesperides. Identical with the Roman Vesta, some of her functions answer to the Egyptian Anouka and Hindu Agni.

HESUS A Gaulish god; a fierce deity to whom humans were sacrificed. An evergreen solar god, whose name was inscribed by Druids on the right horizontal branch of their sacred oaks. He resembled Horus in some respects. Compare Belenus, Taramis, Thau.

HETAERA Literally, companion. In ancient Greece, one of a class of professional courtesans or entertainers, composed of freed women, foreigners, or slaves. The hetaerae were distinguished for talents and accomplishments and became the mistresses of the wealthy. Lais and Phryne are the two most famous.

HETMAN Cossack chief; also commander of a Polish army.

HETPET Egyptian female personification of happiness.

HEVAH At Greek mysteries worshipers shouted "hevah" or "evoe." Akin to Jehovah. Probable source of heave-ho.

HEVAJRA Buddhist Yidam or tutelary god; eternal thunderbolt. Usually shown treading on animals or genii. His color is blue; his emblem a kapala (skull cup); his ornaments, Bodhisattva and Dharmapala.

HEVE (HAVA) Eve, common mother of mankind.

HE-WHO-INVITES Japanese creator god. See Izanagi.

HEXAGON Carries the same symbolism as six, which see. Because it has angles but approaches the shape of the circle, it represents the energy yet peace of yellow, the color of the sun.

Hexagram. Six-pointed star formed by two equilateral triangles interlaced typifying the union of light (spirit) and darkness (matter). A miracle worker, used as a talisman to curb rebellious spirits and to ward off danger. A symbol of Judaism known as David's shield (Magen Dawid); implies divine protection.

HEXE Witch, so-called in Germany. Name related to Hecate.

HEY A British jig, originally in honor of Hey, i.e. immutable A (Sun).

HEZEKIAH Literally, strength of the Lord. One of the kings of Judah, noted for his efforts to abolish idolatry and establish the worship of Jehovah. He decreed abolition of Hebrew serpent worship. Shown crowned and carrying a scepter.

HIA DYNASTY Legendary Chinese emperors which bridge the gap between old Aryan deities Yao (Varuna) and Wu-shun (Vishnu) and advent of Chinese twins, the Cheokung (about 1,200 B.C.). Also known as Tokhar Dynasty.

HIAN In Kei Island creation myth deity, who, with his youngest brother Parpara, and another brother and sister, descended on a rope from the skyworld, discovered earth, and became an ancestor of the human race.

HI-ASA In mythology of Admiralty Islands Hi-asa cut her finger and collected the blood which fell from the wound in a mussel shell. Two eggs formed in the shell and from them sprang a man and a woman, who became the parents of the human race. In Oceania creation myths deities as well as humans have been formed from clots of blood.

HIAWATHA (HAYOWENTHA)

Literally, man who combs. In American Indian legend a hero of miraculous birth who comes to bring peace and goodwill to mankind. He desires to conquer the ruler of the depths and is devoured by a sturgeon but eventually is rescued by sea gulls. This legend typifies storm goading to fury the man-devouring waters or a conquest of the watery chaos by the creative genius of light. In legendary history a Mohawk chieftain by the name conceived the idea of a union of Iroquois and Algonquin Indians to ensure universal peace. His great dream was frustrated by Atotarho, magician and war chief of the Iroquois, but six Iroquois tribes formed a confederacy, Hiawatha was raised to the status of demigod, and he combed the hair of Atotarho. The hair being the seat of power this was an insult; probably a parable for the final conversion of the warrior chief by the orator. In Longfellow's Hiawatha, he typifies advancing civilization. He is an Ojibway, son of Mudjekeewis (west wind). His mother Wenonah dies at his birth, and he is brought up by a grandmother, Nokomis, daughter of the moon. He wrestles with Mondamin (maize), and subduing him, gives man corn-bread. He teaches man navigation, overcomes Mishe-Nahma (sturgeon), and then battles Megissogwon, the magician, who gave man the fever and death and sent the white fog from the fen-lands. After killing the monstrous magician, he teaches men the science of medicine. He marries Minnehaha (Laughing Water), and establishes the institution of marriage. He teaches people picture writing and, hearing about Jesus from the missionaries, he introduces Christianity to his people, and then departs for the kingdom of Ponemah, land of the hereafter.

Hiawatha's mittens. Magic mittens made of deer-skin. When Hiawatha wore them, he could cause rocks to split in two by striking them.

Hiawatha's moccasins. Enchanted boots made of deer-skin. When they were bound around his ankles, each step measured a mile. Compare buskin.

HIBERNIA Latin or literary name of Ireland.

HIBISCUS Delicate beauty. In Japan, called fuyo, stands for enchanting beauty; a beautiful but unhappy woman.

HICKORY Authority. Emblem of Jupiter.

HIDAKA-GAWA In Japanese legend a jealous woman. She turned herself into a serpent and coiled herself around a bronze bell in which her unfaithful lover had concealed himself and, with the heat of her body, melted it.

HIDDAI Hebrew masculine name meaning mighty chief.

HIDDEKEL One of the rivers of Paradise. Its modern name is Tigris. See Eden.

HIDDENITE Gem symbolizing courtship.

HIDDEN PERSON REVEALED BY REFLECTION IN WATER Sunrise, as in Indonesian mythology.

HIDEYOSHI In Japanese legend an untrained genius. Peasant who became a general by courage, shrewdness, and natural skill of arms, and who became renowned for his clemency and wisdom.

HIDIMVA Hindu demon.

HIEL Hebrew masculine name meaning God liveth.

HIERACONPOLIS Greek name for the oldest capital city known to history; located in Egypt. A city of sun-worship. Name resolves into Hier (sacred) + ac (great) + on (sun) + polis (city).

HIERACOSPHINX A hawk-headed sphinx of later Egypt. Probably represented the god Ra.

HIERARCH An ecclesiastical chief ruler; a leader of celestial hosts. From the Greek and resolving into hieros (sacred) + archos (ruler). In Christianity, a leader of an angelic host. In Greek antiquity the officer in charge of votive offerings in a temple.

Hieratic. Consecrated, devoted to sacred uses, as hieratic chants or writing. The Greeks used the term to designate a form of hieroglyphic writing used by ancient Egyptian priests. Distinguished from demotic.

HIEROGLYPH Literally, sacred carving. Divine word in picture writing. From the Greek hieros (sacred) + glyphein (to carve).

HIERONYMITE A recluse; a follower of Saint Jerome (Hieronymus).

HIEROPHANT (1) Chief officer in Eleusinian Mysteries. (2) Card in tarot deck illustrated by a high priest, the master of the arcana, wearing a triple crown and seated between the pillars of Solomon's Temple. With two fingers raised he makes esoteric gestures and leans on a cross. Two lesser ministers kneel before him to suggest he communi-cates inspiration or is the holy man, revealer of sacred things. He also is known as Abbott, Patriarch, and Pope. Ruler of the three worlds, physical, psychical, and spiritual, he typifies intuition which follows reasoning or subconscious response to reasoning, or the spiritual father. The card is the instrument of the Egyptian god Ptah. Attainment: beneficence and mercy. Denotes: alliance, aspiration, control, faith, health, intelligence, inspiration, servitude, strength of will, teaching, union. When the card is in reverse, good understanding, natural ability, over-kindness, oversight, self-centeredness, society, weakness.

HIERO SOLYMA Greek synonym for New Jerusalem. The holy city, spiritual city of the sun.

HIERUM Most famous sanatorium or health retreat in ancient Greece. Sanctuary of Asclepius. Hence any sacred place.

HIGASA Japanese paper umbrellas or sun-shades. Peasants were not permitted to carry them. See umbrella.

HIGH A word which equates with I or eye (sun).

High day. A holy day, solemn festival.

High Heels and Low Heels. The names of opposing factions in Swift's Gulliver's Travels, satirizing the parties of the High and Low Church.

High jinx. A noisy frolic.
High, low, jack, and the game. Everything that is of consequence or counts, from the four material scoring points in the game of high-low-jack.

High Place. Among early Jews and allied peoples, the hill or mound, either natural or artificial, used for sacrificial purposes or worship. An altar or temple. See hill.

High seas. Seas for public use. The open seas; that part of the ocean more than three miles from the coast line or outside the territorial jurisdiction of any nation.

High treason. A grave crime against the sovereign or state; the highest civil offense.

High, wide, and handsome. Distinctive bearing; outstanding in manner. Frequently used satirically.

On a high horse. Behave conceitedly or pretentiously; be overbearing or on a rampage.

HIGHGATE A North London suburb, where, in the 16th century, a road was turned through the park of the bishop of London and a gate was set up to collect tolls for the bishop. The village stood on a hill.

Sworn at Highgate. A custom prevailed anciently at the inns in Highgate to administer a ludicrous oath to all strangers. The traveler was sworn on a pair of horns fastened to a stick: 1- Never to kiss the maid when he can kiss the mistress; 2- Never to eat brown bread when he can eat white; 3- Never to drink small beer when he can get strong, unless he prefers to do so.

HIGH PRIESTESS Card in tarot deck illustrated by a priestess seated between two pillars. Her emblem is a triple phallus, symbol of regeneration. Also known as Abbess, Female Pontiff or Pope, Mother of the convent, Pope Joan. She represents the Empress before union with the Magician, and typifies the virgin state of cosmic subconscious, the spiritual bride and mother. She is the priestess of the Temple of Thoth, instructor and persuader, instrument of Artemis, Bona Dea, Cybele, Diana, Eve (before union with Adam), Isis, Maia, Mary, and all virgin goddesses. Ruler of art, faith, richness, and sound. Erudition, law, and the occult sciences are under her protection. In divination the card corresponds to number three and the Hebrew letter gimel. Denotes: adoration, constancy, mystery, possessing, receiving, repose, science, secrets, silence, stability, tenacity, unrevealed future, wisdom; also bringer of evil, duality, dumbness, fluctuation, laziness, resistance. When card is in reverse: conceit, moral or physical ardour, surface knowledge.

HIISI Finno-Ugric evil spirit, probably a forest or underground spirit.

HIKLVTH In the cabala, celestial palaces.

HICO-HOHODEMI-NO-MIKOTO (HOHODEMI, HOORI, HO-WORI) Literally, fire-subside. In Japanese mythology a descendant of the sun-goddess Amaterasu. A younger brother who has an older brother (Ho-no-Susori) in his service; also one whose curiosity destroys marriage. By nature a mountain-gift, talent for hunting, he exchanged his bow and arrow for his elder brother's magic hook, which he lost. To recover the hook, he visited the under-sea palace of Wata-tsu-mi, the sea king, who not only returned the hook but gave his daughter Toyo-tama-hime to Hohodemi as a bride and two jewels, Kanji, pearl of ebb, and Manji, pearl of flood (symbolizing divine authority and life force) with which to control the ebb and flow of tides. With these jewels Hohodemi sujugged his brother, whom he kept in poverty, symbolizing the supremacy of a new season. When his wife instructed him not to look at her as she gave birth to her son, curiosity compelled him to ignore her request, whereupon she deserted him and the boy, thus following the pattern of divine-mortal marriages, in this myth signifying separation of sea and sun. Compare Urashima-Taro.

HILARIA (1) A Roman festival in honor of Cybele, held at the vernal equinox and characterized by gaiety; originally any day or period of festivity. Source of the word hilarity. (2) Feminine name from the Latin, alluding to the Roman festival and meaning cheerful, merry. In masculine form the name is Hilary.

HILDA (HILDE) Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning war and battle, war-maiden. In the Dietrich legend the wife of Grim is named Hilde. See Grim.

HILDEBRAND (1) In German legend tutor of Dietrich von Bern. A magician and valiant warrior; hero, who in the Nibelungenlied slays Kriemhild and, in the Hildebrandslied, kills his son Hadubrand. The legend reflects the father-son (see) conflict theme. The Teutonic meaning of the name is battle-brand or battle-sword. (2) Name of Pope Gregory VII, noted for diminishing the powers of the German emperors; detested by early reformers because of his ultra-pontifical views.

HILDEGARDE Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning war and protection.

HILDEGRIM In Dietrich legend, helmet of Dietrich, which gave the one who possessed it more than a mortal's strength.

HILDESHEIM In a German legend a monk of Hildesheim, an old Hanoverian city, doubted how with God a thousand years could be as one day, until he stopped to listen to birds singing in a wood for a period he thought to be three minutes and found he had been listening for three hundred years.

HILDISVINI Literally, battle wine. In Norse legend horse which Freyja rides and sometimes passes off as Frey's. In reality he is her lover Ottar in that form.

HILL Anciently an altar of the fire god or sun. The everlasting. Heavenly pillar or support. According to mystics, typified by the letter A. Once a word for god, and identical with el (god) and with hell, hole, ill, words which probably once meant god. Like these words, hill now infers difficulty. Compare mountain. In ancient Britain an altar or grave. See cairn. In Christian tradition delectable mountains or holy hills dropped sweet wine. Heavenly communion, heavenly land, meditation, salvation. Anciently Jews worshiped on artificial elevations (hence altars), hills, and mountains. The prophets reproached the Israelites from worshipping on high places because the temptations of groves led to idol worship, and one reason why Jehovah presumably required the festivals and sacrifices to be centered in the temple in Jerusalem. In Norse mythology entrance to Valhalla; that into which the dead died. Abode where the dead feasted and occupied themselves with the affairs of their living kindred.

Hill difficulty, The. In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, one of the obstacles met by Christian on his way to the Celestial Land.

Hill folk. Fairy folk. In Irish legend, sidh folk.

Hill of Bat. Hill on which the Egyptian heaven rests.

Hill of Howth. Literally, rocky chair. Burial ground of ancient Irish kings and queens, located on a peninsula overlooking Dublin harbor. Formerly called Ben Edar. On it is Howth Castle. It is pictured as the head of a sleeping giant, whose body is the peninsula. The hill and castle appear in the works of James Joyce, and the legend of the sleeping giant probably accounts for the role of Howth, one of the metamorphoses of the sleeping H.C. Earwicker in Finnegans Wake. Jarl van Hooher, a pseudo-Dutch form of Earl of Howth is an epithet applied to Earwicker.

Hills of Bether. Hills over which Christ is expected to come from the east; hills of sunrise.

Hills of Frankincense (or Myrrh). In Song of Solomon heavenly lands, meditation.

HIMATION Large square robe of Zeus. The shawl-like mantle worn by Greeks of both sexes in antiquity. It was draped about the body according to the taste of the wearer, worn over a tunic or as the sole garment. It often was lavishly embroidered.

HIMAVATA Tibetan sacred mountain on which grows Zampu, a tree of life. Navel of the earth. Mountain on which the ark landed at Naubandha after the deluge.

HIMEROS Greek abstract deity; desire of love, longing. One of the attendants of Aphrodite and following in her train.

HIMINBJORG (HIMINBIORG) Norse hill of heaven. Citadel of Helmdall, situated where the rainbow bridge Bifrost approaches heaven. Icelandic for heaven-defender. Analogue of the Roman Mons Coelius.

HIMINBRJOTER (HIMINBRJOT, HIMINBRJOTR) In Norse legend largest bull or ox in the herd of the giant Hymir. Thor cut off the head of the beast and used it as fishing bait in trying to catch the Midgard serpent. The ox is an iceberg; the name is from the Icelandic meaning heaven-breaker or sky-cleaver.

HINA (INA) In Tahitian mythology the moon, daughter-wife of Taaroa. In a Society Island version daughter-wife of Tii, to whom was born a son Tii the first man. In some accounts wife of Maui.

HINAYANA The Little Vehicle or Buddhism of Southern India. Orthodox Buddhism. After the schism which took place in Jalandhara about 100 A.D., opposed to Mahayana. Hinayana is the doctrine which restricts salvation to the few; Mahayana, Buddhism of the North, gives salvation to all. Primarily a philosophy with rules of conduct and ethics with worship of deities secondary.

HIND Emblem of dawn. Symbolic of elegance, grace, swiftness, sure-footedness. Word which equates with hand. Compare hart. In the Bible an affectionate and faithful wife is compared to the hind, and Esther is called, "Hind of Dawn." In Greek mythology animal sacred to Artemis.

HINDUISM Popular religion of India in contrast to orthodox Brahmanism. Brahmanism modified by an admixture with Buddhism and other Indian beliefs and philosophies. Its pantheon is headed by the triad composed of Brahma, Vishnu, and Siva, and contains innumerable deities, but the principal devotion is that given to the supreme deity Vishnu in his various incarnations. All beings have souls which go through at least 40,000 reincarnations, starting with the insect and moving on until they reach the stage of disappearance, as Hinduism promises man mortality, eventual death, or peace. The system has no place for an outsider who wishes to adopt the religion. Compare Islamism.

HINE-AHU-ONE Polynesian earth-formed woman, mother of mankind. Fashioned at Hawaiki by Tane. In some versions, he marries her; in other versions, she becomes the wife of Tiki, the first man, molded from earth by Tane. In still other accounts, she is sister-wife of Maui.

HINE-I-TAU-IRA In Polynesian mythology daughter-wife of Tane. When she discovered her husband to be her father, she killed herself in shame and descended to the underworld where she became Hine-nui-a-te-po, goddess of night.

HINE-MAKI-MOE In Polynesian mythology daughter of troubled sleep.

HINE-NUI-A-TE-PO Polynesian guardian of the underworld, goddess of night and death. Descendant of Tii. Ancestress of Maui, who had crawled into her. If he had emerged from her body, he and mankind would have become immortal and the goddess would have died; he did not emerge from her body, thus man is mortal. Identical with Hine-i-tau-ira.

HININ In Japan the lowest class, ambulant musicians, beggars, prostitutes, wandering outcasts, etc., who lived in restricted districts and were not permitted to marry, eat, drink, or associate with anyone of a higher class. To them were assigned the duties of removing and burying the corpses of executed criminals. They lived as gypsies. Their name signifies not-men or not-human-beings. Compare chori, eta.

HINO (HENO, HINUN) Iroquois Thunderer or Thunderbird. Guardian of the heavens. Armed with bow and flaming arrows, he is the hater and destroyer of all things noxious. He kills the water-serpent (deluge) which is devouring mankind and, with his brother, West Wind, he exterminates the race of stone giants. He is the spouse of the Rainbow. Among his assistants are Gunno-doyah, a mortal; Keneu, golden eagle (sun); Oshadagea, dew-eagle. An invisible spirit from whose eyes lightning flashes and in whose wings is the noise of thunder.

HINOKI In Japan wood of a superior quality, which the peasant was not permitted to use when building a home.

HIPPA Literally, horse. Greek goddess represented with a horse's head; soul of the world; nurse of Bacchus. Word related to the Phoenician Hip, which signifies Parent of All. Hippa or hippos probably originally meant ship; in Chaldee the word for ship was hipha. Compare Epona.

HIPPOCAMPUS Greek sea creature with the head of a horse and the tail of a dolphin. It drew the chariots of Poseidon and the Tritons and led the Argonauts to safety when they were caught in the Syrtes, treacherous quicksands off the Libye coast. It was a horse which developed its legs into fins to indicate it was in harmony with its environment.

HIPPOCENTAUR A Centaur; the body of a man to the waist attached to the body of a horse.

HIPPOCRATES Greek born about 460 B.C. on the island of Cos, supposedly in a direct line from Asclepius. He is known as Father of Medicine and as Prince of Physicians. He made the fame of the Coan school imperishable. He supposedly set down on oath outlining the duties and obligations of a physician, which still is administered to those about to enter into the practice of medicine.

HIPPOCRENE In Greek mythology a fountain on Mount Helicon in Boeotia; created when Pegasus kicked the mountain. From it the Muses quaffed their richest draughts of inspiration, hence poetic inspiration. The word resolves into hippos (horse) + krene (fountain).

HIPPODAMEIA (HIPPODAMIA) Literally, horse-tamer. In Greek mythology: (1) A name of Briseis, Achilles' female slave. (2) Daughter of Oenomaus, who offered her in marriage to the man who could win a race against his horses. Pelops succeeded when Hippodameia, for love of him, weakened her father's chariot wheel by removing a spoke; thus Pelops was one who won a race against the sun.

HIPPOGRIFF Horse with the head and wings of an eagle. Its father was a griffin; its mother a filly. In Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, he carries Rogero away from his beloved Bradamant to many strange adventures. Hippogriff was a common steed in medieval romances.

HIPPOLYTA (HIPPOLYTE)

Literally, horse destruction. In Greek mythology daughter of Ares the war-god, wife of Theseus, mother of Hippolytus. She was queen of the Amazons and received from her father the gift of a girdle which Heracles obtained as one of his twelve labors. The girdle was a sign of authority and royal power. Also known as Antiope.

HIPPOLYTUS In Greek mythology son of Theseus and the Amazon Hippolyta. His step-mother Phaedra, when he rejected her advances, accused him or ravishing her; whereupon Theseus, her husband, called upon Poseidon for vengeance. While Hippolytus was driving his chariot, the sea-god scared the horses with sea-calves and Hippolytus was dragged to his death. The innocence of Hippolytus proved, Phaedra hanged herself. Artemis caused Asclepius to restore Hippolytus to life. The legend of Hippolytus is a sun myth, in which the sun is destroyed because of the moon (Phaedra) by the sea (Poseidon), and is brought to life again by the celestial physician (Asclepius) at the request of another aspect of the moon (Artemis). This legend resembles that of Art and Becuma, Bellerophon and Antaea, Bikki and Svanhild, Joseph and Potiphar's wife.

HIPPOMANE A black fleshy substance supposedly found on the forehead of a newly born colt; sought by ancients as a love potion. Or the mucous-like substance passed by a mare in heat, also believed to be a philter.

HIPPOMEDON In Greek mythology brother of Adrastus and leader of a detachment of troops in the battle against Thebes. Also called Eteoclus. See Seven Against Thebes.

HIPPOMENES In Greek mythology a sun-hero who outstripped Atalanta in a foot race by dropping three golden apples from the garden of the Hesperides, which she stopped to pick up. The apples had been supplied by Aphrodite, goddess of love, and because he neglected to offer the goddess thanks for the apples, she turned Hippomenes and Atalanta into lions. In Roman accounts called Milanion. See Atalanta.

HIPPONA Greek goddess of horses.

HIPPONOOS (HIPPONUS) A name of Bellerophon, meaning destroyer of horses (or monsters).

HIPPOPOTAMUS Amphibiousness, awkwardness, insensitivity, materialism, oppressiveness, stupidity. Destroyer of cultivation, lack of spiritual development. Fierce in the water; mild on land. In the T.S. Eliot poem The Hippopotamus, symbolic of hypocritical materialism of the Anglo-Saxon Church. Totem of several African tribes, and in African folklore, the butt of smaller animals, which by cunning outwit the huge beast. In Egyptian antiquity sacred to Set (Typhon), the destroyer or evil principle.

HIRAM (CHIRAM, HURAM) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning noble, nobly born.

Hiramite. A Freemason; specifically a master mason; literally a descendant of Hiram, king of Tyre, who furnished cedar, fir, trees, and workmen to Solomon for the building of the temple.

HIRANYAGARBHA Literally, golden germ. Vedic creator god; creator of heaven, earth, waters, and all that lives. In one legend said to be the golden egg produced by primal waters. From the egg was born the creator Prajapati. In another legend Hiran-yagarbha was Brahma, the first male, formed in the golden egg by the first cause. After a year, by thought, he divided the egg into two parts and formed heaven and earth from the two halves, placing atmosphere between.

HIRANYAKASIPU In Hinduism one of the Daityas. A sea deity. He obtained the boon that he should not be slain by animal or man. His son Prahlada was a devotee worshiper of Vishnu, whom Hiran-yakasipu hated. Learning that Vishnu was concealed in a pillar at one of the Daitya assemblies, he attacked the god, who was disguised as half lion, half man, but was torn to pieces by the lion claws.

HIRUGO (HIRUKO) In Japanese mythology son of Izanagi and Izanami. The first kami (deity) conceived as a result of cohabitation, he was born prematurely in the shape of a jelly-fish or leech. Because he could not stand even at the age of three years, his parents set him adrift in a reed boat. He arrived at Ebisu Shore and became known as Ebisu, deity of fishermen and of daily food. Being deaf, he could not hear the summons to the assemblage of the gods in Kami-nashi-tsuki (see), and was the only kami not to attend. As an exposed child, he resembles Moses, Oedipus, Taliesin.

HISA FEMALES Eight Japanese thunder deities: Black Thunder, Cleaving Thunder, Earth Thunder, Fire Thunder, Great Thunder, Moor Thunder, and Young Thunder. Ugly females of the underworld; bogies which frightened children. Also called Gogo-me.

HITOGAKI In Japanese tradition the human hedge; circle of humans buried up to the neck and left to perish around the grave of a great personage. The ghosts following of the noble dead.

HITOGATA Literally, mankind shapes. In Shinto purification rites (harai) the paper silhouette forms which supposedly absorb the misfortunes or ills of the person using them. After contamination they are deposited at the temple and burned.

HITTAVAINEN Finnish forest spirit which provides the hunter with hares.

HIVE A place teeming with life and activity; a busy assemblage or organization.

HIYEI-ZAN Japanese Buddhist hill of evil influences. Site of a famous Buddhist monastery.

HIYOYOA New Guinea land of the dead, located under the sea. The ruler is Tumudurere, who lives there with his wife and children and directs the spirits of the dead where to build their gardens.

HJAALPREK (HIALPREK) Norse fertility lord. King of Denmark to whom Regin was smith, and at whose court Sigurd was raised after the death of his father Sigmund. Father of Alva.

HJORDIS (HIORDIS) In the Volsung Saga daughter of King

Eylime. Second wife of Sigmund and by him mother of Sigurd, the greatest of the Volsungs. After the death of Sigmund, the wife of Alva. She prevailed upon Regin, smith at Hjaalprek's court, to forge a sword for Sigurd. Probably personifies dawn.

HKAUNG-BEIT-SET Burmese consecrated objects made of gems, gold, lead, pebbles, shells, or silver, and placed under the skin as talismans.

HKRIP HKRAWP Burmese male spirit of earth. By Sik Sawp, heaven, father of Chanum and Woi-shun, the first ancestors.

HKUN HSANG LONG Burmese and Indo-Chinese creator spirit, whose abode was Mong Hsang. He made Ta-hsek-khi and Ya-hsek-khi, the father and mother of all sentient beings and then renamed them Ta-hsang-kahsi (Great-all-powerful) and Ya-hsang-kahsi (Grandmother-all-powerful).

HKUN HSANG L'RONG In Burmese and Indo-Chinese mythology he who came from the sky and ate the ashes of Thalesan (Old earth) and became a debased spirit. He cut open the two gourds of Nang-Pyek-kha Yek-khi, from which animals and mortals poured, and she became his wife. They formed Nawng Hkeo Lake and this became a sacred sea and abode of Ta-hsek-khi and Ya-hseh-khi (Yatawn and Yatai) in their tadpole state.

HKUN SAK-YA In Burmese and Indo-Chinese mythology a name for Indra.

HLAKANYANA In Zulu folklore a quasi-human being; a trickster-transformer, who resembles Tom Thumb.

HLEBARD Norse elf smith from whom Odin received a magic wand. After getting the wand, Odin stole away his understanding. In another version Loki robbed Hlebard of understanding after he had shaped the mistletoe into the magic arrow with which Balder was slain. This is a time myth; once Hlebard had shaped the winter plant (mistletoe) with which Loki was able to destroy the summer youth (Balder), Hlebard was of no further use. Sometimes described as a giant, thus seasons change their shapes.

HLER Norse giant of the deep sea, son of Fornjot. Identified with Aegir.

HLDSKJALF (HLITHKJALF) In Norse mythology Odin's high throne in Asgard, gate-seat from which he surveys the whole world.

HLIF In Norse mythology maid of Freyja. The protectress.

HLIN (HLINA) In Norse mythology maid servant of Frigga. She carries to Frigga the prayers of mortals and guards those whom Frigga would protect from danger.

HLODYN (HLOTHYN) In Norse mythology one of Odin's wives; mother of Thor. Personification of earth.

HLORIDE (HLORIDI) A cosmic title of Thor. Icelandic for bellowing thunder.

HNIKAR In Norse mythology Odin as giver of rain. Resembles the Old English water-god Nicor.

HNIT-MA-DAWGYI NAT In Burmese mythology elder sister of Min Magaye (or Mahagiri) usually worshiped with him. Creation deities.

HNOSS (HNOS, HROSS) In Norse mythology one of Freyja's two daughters. She typifies beauty and in Icelandic her name signifies jewel or the costly or handsome one.

HO (1) In Chinese mythology, with the Lo, a sacred river. Also the crane is called Ho. Next to the Feng it is the most famous bird in Chinese legend. It reaches a fabulous age, humans have been changed into its shape, and it manifests an interest in human affairs. (2) Japanese name for the phoenix, which see. Also called Foo (Chinese Foh), Hobo, Howo, O.

HOA Chaldean holy-one. Also known as Aos, which see.

HOARD OF GOLD In Norse mythology treasure of underworld dwarfs, which invariably is taken from them by sun-heroes, who in turn are slain for the treasure by princes of darkness. It is the bane of whoever possesses it, because with the wealth comes death. The treasure typifies the gold of grain or wheat, which is seized by the rays of the sun and brought to earth in spring and summer, only to be taken from the sun by deities of darkness and winter, who rebury the wealth underground.

HOARHOUND March 30 birthday flower. Symbolic of frozen kindness, imitation.

HOB (1) Middle English for Robert or Robin. Masculine name meaning bright or glory. Equates with Oberon. (2) An elf, hobgoblin, sprite. Colloquial for mischief. In England, a clumsy rustic; a clownish country fellow.

Be in Hob's pound. Be in difficulty or embarrassment.

Play (or raise) hob. Cause confusion, do mischief.

HOBAB Hebrew masculine name meaning beloved. Cognate with baobab, hob-hob.

HOBAL Pagan Arabian idol of red agate in the form of a man at Mecca. Worshipped for rain.

HOBBIDIDANCE An evil mischievous fiend that anciently figured in the morris-dance. In Shakespeare's King Lear prince of dumbness.

HOBBINOLL In Spenser's Shepherd's Calendar a shepherd who sings in praise of Eliza, queen of shepherds (Queen Elizabeth). He represents Gabriel Harvey, hence figuratively a boor, countryman, rustic.

HOBBLE-DE-HOY A youth between boyhood and manhood; an awkward stripling.

HOBLING Sacred kings were not permitted to walk with their heels (or heel) on the ground and frequently walked on their toes with a lurching or swaggering gait, or were supplied with heeled buskins to protect the heel from the ground. Such kings personified the sun (or moon), whose heel, when injured by the serpent (earth or sea), resulted in death. Thus the vulnerability of Achilles, Chiron, Diarmaid, Llew Llaw, Math, Mopsus, Talus, etc. In ancient fertility rites, the sacrifice of the phallus, suffered by the sacred king, caused a lameness which provided the king with a sacred heel. In later rites, where a surrogate took the place of the king, the king simulated the lame foot, aided by a heeled buskin. The maiming also represented the harvest threshing. In some rites genitals were buried as an act of sympathetic magic for rebirth in spring and hobbling dances were performed on the threshing floor to celebrate the burial. The gait sometimes was a penalty for victory or in imitation of the dislocation which was the result of a wrestling match with a divinity, as in the case of Jacob. In ancient matches legs were forced widely apart, creating a hip dislocation. The injury given to the oak-king (Adonis, etc.) was of this nature. In war-dances, performed by warriors for their women-folk, the love-dance of the cock-partridge, which flutters around with a hobbling gait because one foot is kept in readiness to strike a rival, is mimicked. In Spain, where the bull-fight has been imported from Thrace via Rome, the matador, who kills the bull with exceptional dexterity and grace, is awarded the pata, or foot. In orgiastic rites a similar dance was performed. Ancient Greek tragic actors used this gait and its erotic waggle of the buttocks has caused it to be used by prostitutes. The letters SALM, which quite frequently appear in the names of ancient kings, suggest the word saleuma, meaning a swinging of the buttocks, and Greek prostitutes were called salmakides. See Beth-Hoglah, bull-foot, buskin, dance with a limp, emasculation, foot, heel, partridge, Pesach, shoes.

HOBBY HORSE A horse on which one gets nowhere, hence folly. A favorite figure in English revels, especially the morris-dance. In colloquial use, a courtesan, a jester, a person easily controlled by others.

Ride a hobby horse. Talk continuously about one's favorite interest or pastime.

HOBGOBLIN An evil sprite of frightful appearance, a frightful apparition, a mischievous imp; hence any alarming apparition, a bogey, brownie, bugbear, the pixy leader Puck, Robin Good-fellow.

HOB-HOB Frenzied cry at ancient solar festivals; source of hubbub; cognate with Hobab.

HOBNIL (HOBNEL) (1) Mayan god of food supply. With Ah-Kiuc and Chac formed a triad. (2) A Mayan word meaning belly or hollow and figuratively signified subsistence or life. Used as a title, as belly of the earth, belly of the sky.

HOBOMOKKO American Indian evil spirit; a devil.

HOBOWAKA Algonquin Indian calumet, pipe of peace.

HOBSON Masculine name from the Arabic, meaning beautiful and goodly.

Hobson's choice. The choice of taking either the thing offered or nothing. After Thomas Hobson, 17th century English horse renter, who obliged each customer to take in his turn the horse nearest the stable door or none at all.

HOCUS POCUS A term once used by conjurers, hence the trick itself or deception. Also applied to the performer. The word hoax is derived from hocus.

HOD In Cabalistic system, the eighth Sephira. Name signifying the Glory or Splendor. See Sephira.

HODEKEN Literally, little hat. A German gnome that wears a little felt hat pulled over his eyes.

HODER (HOD, HODIR, HODR, HODUR, HOTHERUS) In Norse mythology the blind, silent-footed son of Odin. With a dart of wintry mistletoe, aimed by Loki, Balder's enemy, he kills Balder. Hoder, in turn, is killed by the one-day old Vali. Like Balder, Hoder is rescued after Ragnarok, at the rebirth of the world, and the two are reconciled. Hoder is the lord of wintry darkness who kills Balder, the summer sun, and is in turn killed by the spring sun. In an early version of the myth, dated before the year 1,000, Hoder, unaided by Loki, is responsible for the death of Balder. He is a legendary hero rather than a god, son of King Hodbrodd of Sweden and fosterling of Gewar, king of Norway, who instructs him in the art of warfare. He is skilled in all accomplishments, and Nanna falls in love with him. Balder, desiring Nanna, resolves to slay Hotherus, who meanwhile becomes king of Denmark, which he joins to Sweden. In a battle with Balder, he is defeated and Denmark is lost to him. In a return battle with his magic sword Misteltein (Mistletoe) he wounds Balder, who dies three days later. Years later he is slain by Bous (Vali), who himself dies of his wounds. In the Edda, Nanna is the wife of Balder; in Saxo, the wife of Hotherus; in both legends, she is the cause of the conflict between Balder and Hotherus. Also known as Bjorno-Hoder and Hromund. He resembles the Celtic Balor and the Greek Argus.

HODGE Masculine name; diminutive of Roger.

HODMIMER'S FOREST In

Norse mythology forest which Sutr's flaming sword is unable to destroy at Ragnarok. Here Lif and Lifthrasir seek refuge and sleep through the destruction of the earth, awakening when earth is verdant again.

HOE Agriculture, diligence, fertility. Emblem of Saint Isidore.

HOENER (HONER, HONIR)

In Norse mythology brother of Odin and Loki, and with them he composed the trinity which made the world from Ymir's body, ruled heaven and earth, and formed the first man, and the first woman, Embla. His gifts to the first human pair were memory, understanding, and will. After the battle of the Aesir and the Vanir, he was given as hostage to the latter and made ruler of the Vanagods in Vanaheim. Although physically beautiful and strong, his judgments were weak and he was dull and stupid except when advised by Mimer, who accompanied him. He survived after the doom of the gods at Ragnarok and appeared in the renewed world, where he chose the hlaut-vipr, a slip of wood with runes engraved on it, which gave him knowledge of the future. He was variously described as king of clay or moisture, the long-footed god, the swift-footed. He probably typified the waves. Also known as Ve.

HOFFMAN Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning man from the court.

HOFVARNER (HOFVARNIR)

Literally, hoof-tosser. In Norse mythology Gnaa's horse, which runs through air and water. Personification of the wind.

HOG Filth, gluttony, graspingness, impurity, insensibility, selfishness, slothfulness, stupidity. The word hog yields mighty one, and pig yields the mighty hoop (sun). Both words once probably had pleasant associations; hog is related to ehog, Cornish for salmon, and pig is Welsh for pike, the fish. Compare boar and twrch.

Christian symbol of sensuality; attribute of Saint Anthony, who is said to have vanquished this demon. In ancient Egypt and Palestine represented the unclean.

HOGARTH Masculine name from Old English, meaning gardener from the hill.

HOGEN-MOGEN Literally, high and mighty. Originally applied to the States General of the Netherlands; now applied contemptuously to the Dutch people. The term is a corruption of the Dutch hoogmogend (high in might). Colloquially it means strong and is applied to liquor.

HOGNE (HOGNI) In the Volung Saga son of Giuki and Grimhild. His brothers are Gunnar and Guttorm; his sister is Gudrun, wife of Sigurd. With his brothers, he is involved in the murder of Sigurd for the gold which Sigurd possessed. Atli, Gudrun's second husband, murders Gunnar and Hogue for the treasure. This is a time myth, in which Hogue and his brothers, princes of darkness, slay Sigurd, sun hero, and in their turn are slain. The magic sword of Hogue, Dainslef, was made by dwarfs. See Gudrun, Gunnar.

HO-HO (HO-O) Chinese Immortal Pair, patron deities of merchants. Portrayed as two boys with long hair, one carrying a box (ho), the other a lotus flower (ho), symbols of concord and harmony. Also a fabulous eagle bearing a large animal in its claws, a bird cognate with the garuda, griffin, and rukh.

HO HSIEN-KU In Chinese legend the only woman among the Eight Immortals (Pa Kung). The daughter of a shopkeeper, she ate the supernatural peach, became a fairy and wandered alone through the hills, existing on a diet of mother-of-pearl and moonbeams, which caused her to become invisible. Once, when she was lost in the woods and in great danger from a malignant dragon, Lu Tung-pin appeared and saved her by using his magic sword. She assists in house management. Her emblem is the lotus. Sometimes she carries the peach of immortality. Identified with the Japanese Kasenko.

HOJO (1) Great Japanese family, which assumed an attitude toward the shogun similar to that filled by the Fujiwara in relation to the emperor. The shogun's consort was always chosen from the Hojo family, and a shogun who attempted to assert his independence was promptly deposed. Dictators to the shoguns. Also known as shikken (Constable). (2) Ten square feet, size of a Japanese Buddhist monk's hut.

HOJU NO TAMA Japanese jewel of omnipotence. Attribute of divinity, jewel of the dragon king. Identical with the Chinese Chu.

HOLD (HOLDE) In German folklore the progeny of a witch and a demon, which assumes forms other than those of an elf or fairy, such as a bee, butterfly, caterpillar, etc.

HOLDA Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning to conceal.

HOLDE (FRAU HOLLE, HOLLA, HULDA) In North German folklore the gracious lady, corresponding to the South German Berchta. In early myths she was a sky goddess who rode the winds. Snow was said to be a feather from her bed. She was also a goddess of lakes and streams in which, as a beautiful white maid, she bathed at noon. If observed, she disappeared under the water. She was a goddess of both fertility and death, representing courtesy and discourtesy, gentleness and severity, kindness and unkindness. After the introduction of Christianity she became a hag accompanied by witches, who frightened and kidnapped children. The souls of unbaptized babies went to her realm and became part of her furious host. The hero Eckhart was caught up in one of her furious rides and carried to her court on Mount Hoeselberg, where he is to remain until Judgment Day. The Grimm fairy tale Mother Holle is based on the Holde legend of opposites. The principal characters are an industrious sister, who is mistreated by her stepmother and given gold by Mother Holle, and an envious and lazy elder sister, who is the pet of her mother and on whom Mother Holle showers pity.

Holde's troop. German equivalent of the Wild Hunt. Also called Holla's troop, Hulda's troop.

HOLDEN Masculine name from Anglo-Saxon, meaning friendly, gracious, loyal.

HOLDIKEN A German sprite.

HOLE One of man's first homes (others were caves and trees); hence a refuge. Hole is identified with el, hell, and hill, and once probably meant god.

Hole in one's coat. Figuratively, a blot on one's reputation.

Hole in the wall. Abaco, an island of the Bahama group, so called by seamen. Any undesirable location.

HOLGER DANSKE Danish name of Ogier the Dane, a paladin of Charlemagne.

HOLINESS Represented by frankincense, myrrh, spices, spikenard.

HOLLAND In medieval times known as the asylum and arsenal of new ideas, the great ark of heresy, the workshop of innovators.

HOLLER See Ullerus.

HOLLY March 5 birthday flower, symbolic of domestic happiness, foresight, friendship, good wishes. In the language of flowers: Am I forgotten? When the holly has many berries, a severe winter is indicated; if kept in the house after New Year's day, it brings ill luck. Dream significance: honor well kept. In heraldry signifies truth. Identical with the word holy. In Celtic tree alphabet, tree of the eighth letter, tinne (t); ruler of the eighth (number of increase) druidic month; month of the barley harvest, from July 9 to August 5. Emblem of the Green Knight. Emblem of Christmas festivities. Anciently it was hung in churches as a sign of welcome to elves and fairies; presently used as a decoration symbolic of eternal life and hospitality. It has become glorified beyond the oak and, with thorns, typifies suffering, the Passion of Christ; with red berries, representing drops of blood, typifies love unto death. An attribute of Saint John. Anciently in Europe, especially in Rome, the ass, later supplanted by the Christmas Fool, was killed by his rival at the mid-winter Saturnalia, with the holly. The holly, Saturn's club, was the evergreen ruling the waning part of the year. In Rome an emblem of good-will and sent as a gift at the festival of Saturn as well as at weddings, when it was a token carrying congratulations.

Holly and bitter-sweet garland. In the middle ages hung around a horse's neck to keep it from being hag-ridden.

HOLLYHOCK June 25 birthday flower, symbolizing ambition, fecundity, fruitfulness. The word yields holy great one. In Japan symbolizes jealousy and passion.

White hollyhock. Female ambition.

HOLOCAUST A sacrifice completely consumed by fire; so called because the victim of the burnt offering was whole. Hence complete or wholesome destruction, as by fire.

HOLT Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning the woods.

HOLY In practically all language, the word for holy has been derived from the divinely honored sun. Holy is identical with whole and is related to hale (free from defect) and heal (to make well), and signifies dedicated to the service of God, free from sin.

Holy chalice. Container of divine light and blessings. See chalice for further symbolism.

Holy communion. The eucharist.

Holy day. A sacred day, as the Sabbath, or one observed in honor of a sacred person or event. Also holiday, which now is understood as a day set aside for the suspension of business and for celebrations and enjoyments as well as for religious rites. A Roman holiday is a term which implies enjoyment whereby others suffer, alluding to the gladiatorial sports.

Holy Family. In Christian tradition, Joseph, Mary, and Jesus, symbolized by the manger, nativity. Anne, Elizabeth, and John the Baptist sometimes are counted in the Holy Family.

Holy Ghost (Holy Spirit). The incarnation of Buddha was brought about by the descent of the divine power or Holy Ghost in the form of a white elephant upon Maya, a human mother. In Christianity the third person of the Trinity, said to have proceeded from the Father, and to be equally the spirit of the Father and the Son. The advocate or comforter, paraclete, promised by Christ to abide with and guide his disciples. According to mystics, the Holy Spirit reigns from Pentecost until Advent (season of death or period in which the sun is in descent); whereas God the Father reigns during Advent (season of conception) and Christ reigns from Christmas to Ascension (season of growth). Gnostics identified the Holy Ghost with Mary and with Sophia. The six sins against the Holy Ghost are: despair, envy, final impenitence, impugning a known truth, obstinacy in sin, presuming on God's mercy. Emblems of the Holy Ghost are: child, dianthus flower, dove, flame, goose, orange-yellow color, S (for Spiritus), soul, SS (for Sanctus Spiritus), wind, winged wheel. The Holy Ghost parallels pagan wind deities.

Holy Grail (Sacred Chalice, Sangraal, Sangreal). In Christian legend the chalice or cup traditionally used by Jesus at the Last Supper. It typifies fertility, heavenly hierarchy, vineyard. Knights were fed from the Grail, and a child as bright and red as fire emerged from it; the child then entered a portion of bread, which formed into a man. Compare Drona. Its quest became the occupation of the knights of the Round Table. The main object of the quest was to restore health and vigor to the Fisher King who was suffering from infirmity caused by old age, sickness, or wounds, and whose infirmity deprived his kingdom of vegetation contained in the Grail. The Fisher King was the aging or Old Year, who could be revitalized only by a knight who never had sinned (spring sun which had not yet scorched the earth). A whirling mystery, the Grail turned with greater speed than the fastest wind and equated with Revolving Castle. The Holy Grail which provided only for the virtuous, developed from the Celtic caldron of inspiration or plenty, which administered to the wants of all. A giver of plenty, it compares with the cornucopia and other miraculous vessels; its symbolism is that of the cup, drinking horn, urn, vase, water pot. See Caer Sidi, Omphalos.

Holy herb. Symbolizes enchantment. By Christians worn as a herb of grace on the person.

Holy House of Loretto. According to medieval tradition house in which Virgin Mary was born, and which was conveyed by angels to Loretto, Italy.

Holy Joe. A preacher; one who displays piety.

Holy Land. Among Buddhists, India; among Christians and Jews,

Palestine; in Greek antiquity, Elis, where the temple of Zeus was located and where a sacred festival was held every four years; the holy land of the Moslems is called Mecca.

Holy of Holies. Inner compartment of the Jewish tabernacle and temple, in which the ark of the covenant or the most sacred relics were kept. Only the high priest was permitted to enter it, and he only on the Day of Atonement. Hence any place held particularly sacred.

Holy place. Inner sanctuary of Solomon's Temple, in which the altar of incense, the candlestick, and the holy table were kept.

Holy rood. Cross of the crucifixion. Symbolic of beneficence, saving, and typifies man and woman or the male and female principles in nature.

Holy rood day. May 3, day the cross supposedly was invented. Also called holy cross day.

Holy Saturday. Saturday before Easter in the Christian calendar.

Holy spectacles. In John Amos Comenius's Labyrinth of the World, a revealer of surprising wonders. They supposedly were bestowed by Christ on the Pilgrim when he separated himself from Falsehood, who had been his guide in the City of Queen Vanity or Vanity Fair. The rim of these glasses supposedly was the word of God, the glass itself, the Holy Ghost, and enabled the Pilgrim to perceive and recognize fellow-Puritans, who previously had remained unseen, and other marvelous things.

Holy Spirit. Among American Indians the eagle or Thunderbird. In Christian tradition, breath, fertilizer of Virgin Mary. Also called Holy Ghost, which see.

Holy Thursday. In the Anglican church, Ascension Day, the last Thursday but one before Whitsunday; in the Roman Catholic Church, the day before Good Friday, Maundy Thursday.

Holy War. A war in which religious zeal or fanaticism is appealed to; a war to defend or to extend the domination of a religion. The Crusades were holy wars.

Holy water. Water from Lourdes.

Holy week. Week before Easter.

Holy Willie. A religious hypocrite. From a character created by Robert Burns.

HOMA (HOM) Same as Haoma, which see.

HOME A fixed abode; in original sense a resting place. Symbolized by a hearth, house, house interior, open fire, orange-yellow color (sun color). Home is akin to Aum (Sun), Om (Sun), and omma (eye), and is a radical of hamlet.

HOMER Literally, hostage, security. Name applied to the Greek epic poet (or poets) who composed the Iliad and the Odyssey. A singer of heroes and of the tragedies of war. According to Aristotle, one who portrays men superior to what they are. Homer portrays gods and demigods, personifications of natural phenomena; the incidents in which they are involved are extraordinary and miraculous, and belong to celestial realms, to the reality of the universe rather than to the reality of a small community on earth. The name Homer equates with the Persian Omar, both equating with Amor and amour, primarily meaning sunfire or sunlight, secondarily love. Prototype of Klingsor von Ungerland.

Homeric laughter. Unquenchable, long-drawn-out laughter; from a Homeric account of the laughter of the gods in the Odyssey.

Homer sometimes nods. Even the most trustworthy sometimes makes a mistake. The line is from Horace's Ars Poetica.

HOMETEULI Mexican creator of the universe; First Cause; god of three-fold dignity.

HOMEYOCO (HOMEIOCAN) In Mexican mythology place in which exists the creator Hometeuli. Place of the holy Trinity, who by their word begot Cipatonal and a woman named Xumio, who lived before the deluge.

HOMO FERUS Children who have been abandoned and maintain themselves in forests apart from other human beings and develop into gnomelike creatures.

HOMONOIA Greek divinity typifying unanimity. Often represented on coins. Analogue of the Roman Concordia.

HOMO SIGNORUM Figure of a man identified by animal symbols (symbols of animals on man's body). Also known as Dominium Signorum and Imago Signorum.

HOMUNCULUS According to Paracelsus, a tiny man produced artificially and endowed with miraculous powers, hence a dwarf, mannikin.

HONEST Without fraud. A word which resolves into shining light of the one (sun); honest as the light of day is proverbial.

Honest Abe. The most widely known of the nicknames of Abraham Lincoln.

Earn (or turn) an honest penny. Earn a small or modest reward for honest labor.

HONEY Celestial food, eloquence, knowledge, persuasion, precious results of experience, sweetness, wisdom. A term of endearment or flattery. Dream significance: success in business. In Egyptian and Hebrew antiquity symbolized initiation and wise discourse. In Greece elixir of life, a nectar of the gods. A symbol of eternal bliss, it was used to embalm the dead. It was one of the four libations offered, the others being milk, oil, and water. According to the Jews divinely given food. In Norse mythology honey mingled with the blood of Kvasir produced the mead of poets and the drink of the gods. Comparable to ambrosia, haoma, nectar, and soma.

Honeyed words. Hypocritical or insincere approval; flattery.

Honey mixed with oil. In China false friendship.

HONEYCOMB Incubator, industry, mirth. As a labyrinth, confusion; as a storage place, foresight, prudence.

Honeycomb, Will. A man about town and an authority on fashions and women. He was a member of the imaginary club from which the Spectator of Addison and Steele issued.

HONEY-FLOWER April 19 birthday flower symbolizing love which is secret and sweet.

HONEYSUCKLE November 20 birthday flower symbolizing bonds of love, constancy, domestic happiness. In the language of flowers: I will not answer hastily. Chinese symbol of sweetness of disposition. Used as a talisman to cure boils. In Greek antiquity an object of religious worship paralleling the lotus bud. Also found on Nineveh monuments.

Coral honeysuckle. Fidelity.

French honeysuckle. Rustic beauty.

Wild honeysuckle. April 21 birthday flower symbolizing inconstancy in love.

HONEYWOOD In Goldsmith's comedy the good-natured man, the over-generous and unselfish hero who is continuously taken advantage of. Miss Richland 'reforms' and marries him.

HONO-IKA-ZUCHI Japanese Fire-Thunder. Kami (god) who transformed himself into an arrow (lightning), and was one of the furies who pursued Izanagi.

HONOR Represented by gold, purple and fine linen, rank, rich gifts. In China represented by the color yellow.

HONORIUS Masculine name from the Latin, meaning honor. The feminine form is Honoria (Honor, Honora, Nora, Norah).

HO-NO-SUSORI (HODERI) In Japanese mythology elder brother of Hiko-hohodemi. By nature a sea-gift, talent for fishing. One who refuses to forgive and therefore is compelled to enter into the service of a younger brother. Name signifies fire-shine. Also called Hoderi. See Hiko-hohodemi.

HOOD Blindness, secretive-ness.

HOOF Cloven hoof. Mark of the evil one; Satan. Division, separation, treachery.

Unparted hoof. Inconsiderateness; intent on self-gratification and pleasure.

HOOK An attribute of Cronus and Saturn; Father Time. It carries the same symbolism as sickle and scythe, which see.

By hook or crook. By fair means or foul, either rightfully or wrongfully, in one way or another. At one time, the poor of a manor were allowed to go into a forest with a hook and a crook to get wood; the branches they could not reach, they pulled down with a crook.

Give the hook. Force a performer off the stage. Formerly, actors who displeased an audience were pulled off the stage by means of a long nook held by a stagehand in the wings.

Swallow hook, line, and sinker. Be gullible, accept without consideration, as a fish seizes bait.

Take the hook without the bait. Be readily deceived, make a foolish or thoughtless response.

HOOLOGAN A gangster, rowdy, a street ruffian. From Hooligan, the name of a spirited Irish family whose members enlivened the monotonous life in Southwark towards the end of the 19th century.

HOOP Carries the same symbolism as circle, which see. Hoop is from the root op (orb or eye), and is identical with hap of happy and hope. The surname Hooper, which is composed of the two syllables of Europe reversed, resolves into Eye (hoop) of light (er).

HOOPOE (HOOPOO, PUPU) Filth, parental devotion, tender-heartedness, poverty. In Egyptian antiquity the khu or intelligent portion of the soul was represented by a crested bird resembling the hoopoe, and a hoopoe-headed scepter symbolized virtuous affections.

HOP BLOOM April 7 birthday flower symbolizing injustice, passion, and pride.

Hop hornbeam. A tree that can withstand a wind that would fell almost any other tree, hence emblematic of stability of opinion.

HOPE (1) Name of one of the Gnostic Aeons. Also a feminine name; use of the abstract noun. (2) Represented by anchor, blue, cypress, green, jasmine, opal, rosebud, sapphire, sprouting leaves. In an Italian icon personified by a young woman dressed in green, crowned with flowers, a cupid sucking her breast. The word is from the root op (orb) and is identical with hoop.

Forlorn hope. A small body of troops sacrificed to gain an advantage for the main army; from the Dutch verloren hoop (lost troop); thus a project, situation, or task, which appears practically impossible of fulfillment or realization.

Hope against hope. Hope when things appear to be hopeless; from the Roman expression, "Who against hope believes in hope."

Hope Blue. A brilliant deep-blue diamond; one of the largest ever mined without a flaw. Said to bring ill-luck.

Hope frustrated. Symbolized by a broken column.

Hope of immortality. Cleft pomegranate showing seeds.

HOPEFUL In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, Christian's companion after the death of Faithful at Vanity Fair.

HOPI Name of a Pueblo Indian tribe meaning peaceful.

HO PO One of the nine celebrated legendary Chinese heroes; god of the Yellow River. Compare Feng I, Shi I, Yu Po.

HOP-O'-MY-THUMB A dwarf, midget, or pigmy. A name given to the tiny hero of English nursery tales.

HOPPINGS North English word for wakes. Derived from the Anglo-Saxon hoppan, a religious dance or leap. An informal dance is now called a hop. Compare waltz.

HORACE (HOD, HORATIO) Masculine name from the Roman family name Horatius, meaning light of the sun. In feminine form Horatia.

HORAE (HORAI) Greek goddesses of the seasons and of the fast fleeting hours. Daughters of Zeus and Themis. They assisted every morning in yoking the celestial horses to the chariot of the sun. Originally personifications of the clouds who opened and closed the gates of heaven to pour down or shut off their life-giving streams (dew). In some parts of Greece they were worshiped as two: Carpo, corn or fruit bearing; Thallo, bloom goddess. They were worshiped at Athens as: Thallo, spring and bloom; Auxo, summer and growth; Karpo, autumn and fruitage. Three in number because of the notion of the ancient Greeks that nature is wrapped in death during the winter months. Outside of Athens they were worshiped as Eunomia, spring and wise legislation; Dice (Dike) summer and justice; Irene (Eirene) autumn and peace. When winter was counted a season, the three represented Eunomia, spring; Dice, autumn; Irene, winter. In later myths they became four, and finally twelve. The spring goddess was laden with flowers; the summer goddess with a sheaf of corn; the autumn goddess had her hands filled with grapes and other fruits. Hori, singular of Horae, is a book of hours, generally illustrated.

HORA-GALLES Lapp thunder god. Also called Tora-galles.

HORAI Japanese elf-land where the palace of the Dragon King is located. A mollusk opening its shell releases a purple mist that supposedly creates a vision of Horai.

HORAISAN In Japan alternate name of Fuji; cognate with horizon (bounding circle).

HOR-AKHI In Egyptian mythology Horus of the horizons.

HORAM Hebrew masculine name meaning elevated.

HORATIO In Shakespeare's Hamlet the faithful, silent companion of Hamlet.

Horatio Alger hero. In books by Horatio Alger, Jr., the stock character of a poor but worthy boy who surmounts impossible obstacles and achieves wealth and success.

HORATIUS COCLES Literally, Horatius the One-eyed. Semi-mythical Roman hero of the 6th century B.C. Captain of the bridge gate across the Tiber, which he defended with two others against the advancing Etruscan army led by Lars Porsena while Romans on the bank broke up the supports of the bridge. He ordered his two companions to make good their escape just as the bridge was about to crash. To save himself, Horatius jumped into the river and swam safely to shore amid the applauding shouts of both armies.

Horatius Cocles of Horn.

John Haring of Horn. In 1573, single-handed he opposed the advance of a thousand Spaniards by standing on top of a dyke on which two men were unable to stand abreast.

HOREB (CHOREB) A sacred mountain connected with the worship of Jehovah. On it the prophet Elijah rested. An alternate name for Mount Sinai. Horeb yields fire-eye, thus it was the mountain of glowing heat, the mountain sacred to the sun.

HOREHOUND A mint symbolizing fire.

HOREI A west African evil spirit.

HORIZONTALITY Female principle; heaviness, inertness, quietness. The word horizon means limiting circle and suggests wheel of Horus, a god frequently addressed as Horus of the Horizon (Hor-akhi). The Greek orizon resolves into or-is-zone (wheel of golden light). Horizon is akin to Arizona, Horaisan, and raisin.

HORMUSDA Mongol heaven god; identical with Ahura-Mazda.

HORN (ANTLER) Authority, divine strength, flame, good luck, intelligence, light, monarchy, plenty, protection, salvation, strength, trophy of the hunt. Also cuckoldry. The power and wealth, thus the dignity, of primitive peoples, consisted mainly of flocks and herds, and horns, to designate the social standing, were hung on altars. The horns of an elk, ox, stag, etc., as defensive arms, typify guarding, indomitability, protection against evil, and the notion of horns warding off evil has been transferred to the horseshoe. A watchfob made of horn was once a fashionable charm for men. A horn typifies the crescent moon and the sun's rays and, as such, is a phallic symbol. Sacred to Ashtoreth, Baal, Bel, Moses, Pan, and others. The Chinese Dragon of the Infinite was horned, as was the Egyptian asp and Mexican sacred serpent. Several African tribes train the horns of their cattle into a perfect circle or into the one horn of the unicorn (einhorn or monoceros), or into spiraled spikes, all fire or sun symbols. In Britain stag horns were placed in graves as symbols of immortality. Married women among the Druses wear silver horns on their heads, and chiefs of neighboring peoples wear a horned crown. In Egyptian and Hebrew antiquity the horn symbolized fecundity, honor, and radiance.

Altar horns. In Hebrew tradition typifies light and the might of God. A flame-shaped horn appeared at each of the four corners of the Altar of Burnt-offerings. Ancients regarded the horns of an altar a sanctuary or asylum for refugees who held them; thus deity protection. In oaths Romans held the horns of the altar; anyone who broke an oath called on himself the vengeance of the angry gods.

Amalthea's horn. Horn of plenty.

Draw in one's horns. To mitigate or retract an opinion; to restrain pride. The allusion is to the horns of a snail.

Horn cups. In China called hsi chueh, symbolic of happiness.

Horned deity with bag of grain. Old Celtic god of plenty.

Horned goat of Mendes. Emblem of Typhon.

Horned headdress. Authority, divinity, royalty. Emblem of Ashur as war god and of Enlil.

Horn gate. In Greek mythology dreams left the realm of Sleep through two gates, one of horn, one of ivory. Those which passed through the gate of horn were true.

Horn of consecration. A pictorial horn in Mycenaean art suggesting the horns of oxen, shown with a double ax and pillar. Symbol of an unidentified cult.

Horn of fidelity. Horn sent by Morgan Le Fay to King Arthur. Its virtue was such, when a woman who had been unfaithful to her husband tried to drink from it, its contents spilled.

Horn of Moses. The representation of Moses with horns may be due to a misinterpretation. The ancient Hebrew word for horn also meant radiant and shining or sending forth beams; the translator in describing Moses as he came down from Mount Sinai said, 'he sent forth horns,' instead of, 'he sent forth beams.' The horns, however, are interpreted as symbolic of the light or wisdom of God.

Horns butting. Employment of the intellect; verified in the metaphors 'ramming' a point home, 'rebutting' an argument.

Horns of gold. The new moon. In art drawn to form a crescent rhinoceros horn. Bravery.

Horns on a beast. In Hebrew tradition ravenousness, tyranny.

Horns on head of a man. Cuckoldry. See antlers.

Horns on head of the lamb of God. Christian symbol of the power against evil.

HORN (TRUMPET) Rallier of the Hosts of Heaven; death, salvation. Anciently, at the conclusion of labor in the field, sacred horns were blown. During the year these horns were kept in secret places for fear they might be blown during the hot season, the dangerous or evil time before the grain was ripe. In heraldry typifies hunting, high pursuits, sportsmanship. Long telescopic horns, sometimes ten feet in length, made of copper and ornamented with dragons, are used as Buddhist ritual objects. In Christian tradition typifies the Holy Spirit, and heralds the elevation of the mistletoe in Christmas celebrations. In Hebrew tradition blown to call a solemn assembly or sanctify a congregation or a fast. Called Shofar. In Norse mythology preserved under Yggdrasil, the sacred tree. It was fabled to have the same magical properties of making the desert bloom that were assigned to the Grail. Heimdal, watchman of the guards, blows the horn at Ragnarok.

Horn of Oberon. Summoner of fairy hosts.

Horn of Roland. Olivant, the ivory horn that Roland won from the giant Jutmundus. When in danger Roland sounded it to let Charlemagne know. It was so loud, birds fell dead and the Saracen army was struck with horror. At the third blast, it cracked in two. Charlemagne heard the blast, but he reached Roland too late. The horn of Roland when associated with troubadours was emblematic of heretical preaching, a symbol of the scoffer of the doctrines, mysteries, and ritual of Rome.

Horn of Saint Hubert. One blast of his horn was sufficient to bring 100,000 warriors to his rescue. Analogue of the horn of Oberon.

HORNBEAM November 19 birthday flower, symbolic of extravagance, ornament.

HORNSTONE A variety of chalcedony also called chert. In the language of gems: You are changed.

HOROLOGIUM A constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Clock.

HORSE Clairaudience, endurance, fertility, force, freedom, generosity, grace, gratitude, intellect, motion, solar energy, science, speed, strength, time, triumph, understanding. Also obstinacy, pride, war. Steed of the gods typifying clouds, lightning, rays, waves, wind. When the mount of the Devil a phallic symbol. Dream significance: (black) sorrow followed by pleasure; (colored) small profit; (falling) sad news; (gray or piebald) unquiet life; (harnessed) good luck; (running) early success; (white) success, wealth. In heraldry signifies readiness for all employments whether in peace or war. In an old carving, a survival of British stone-age art, a man is shown wearing a horse-mask; this probably is the remote ancestor of the hobby-horse mummers in the British Christmas play. Celts, Danes, and Saxons venerated the horse, and the taboo placed on eating horse meat, except at the sacred autumn festival, survives as a strong physical repugnance. In Buddhism a horse or dragon is the mount of Brahma, the White Jambhala. In China animal which carries the sun through the seventh of the twelve terrestrial branches of the zodiac. Governs Hsing and Wu (Libra), the direction south, and the hours 11 A.M. to 1 P.M. The image of the king of horses is found at wayside shrines. In Christianity an attribute of Saints Aiden, Columba, George, and James the Great. In renaissance imagery a symbol of lust. Hebrew symbol of war, opposed to the ass, which symbolized peace. Anciently Semites consecrated horses to idols, and they were used as symbols of angelic and earthly powers under control of God.

Jews were forbidden to keep a large number, the object being to restrict them from growing fond of conquest, from becoming idolatrous and proud. In Hindu zodiacs the horse governs Aries, the sign controlling the head or mentality. As the constellation in which the sun starts his yearly journey, symbolic of the birth of new thought as well as the dawn of a new era. The chariot of Surya is drawn by seven green horses to typify renewal or life eternal. In Japan associated with the moon, the first hour of the day, and the seventh sign of the zodiac. In Norse mythology a horse was buried or burned with its owner to carry him over Helway. The Persians sacrificed horses to the sun daily to be used in his course through the skies. The four sacred horses of the sun were called Benik, Enik, Menik, Senik. In Russia a symbol of domestic happiness.

Airy horse. In Buddhism the lung-ta, which see.

Black horse. Death, pestilence. In Iran form of the drought demon. In Japan sacrificed to Tatsuta-hime, the wind goddess, when asking for cessation of rain.

Blind horse. Obscurity; one deprived of discernment.

Flower-laden horses. Divine reason, resurrection.

Flying horse. Deity steed. Typifies birth of intellect, science and understanding.

Four horses. The four cardinal directions. In Christian tradition the Horsemen of the Apocalypse, i.e. conquest, death, pestilence, and war. Their colors were respectively white, pale, black, and red.

Gray horse. Welsh devil.

Horse bridle. In Arabia emblem of wisdom.

Horse and chariot. Sea, sun, or wind deity.

Horse head. In Germany, where it decorates gable ends, charm against evil.

Horseman. Bearer of immortality or prophecy; death. Dream significance: (falling off) danger of reverses; (galloping) success in an undertaking. In Christian tradition the Apocalypse. In Hebrew tradition the Messiah. Anciently worn on amulets to represent Solomon.

Horseskull. Death, mortality.

Horse and stag. Foolishness, simplemindedness.

Horse with flying mane. Sun.

Legendary horses. Some famous horses of folklore are:

Horse	Steed of
Al Bōrak	Mahomet
Aligero Clavileno	Don Quixote
Ario	Poseidon
Arundel	Bevis of Southampton
Bavieca	Cid
Bayard	Rinaldo
Bevis	Marmion
Black Bess	Dick Turpin
Blank	Cinderella
Brass	Cambuscan
Brigliadore	Sir Guyon
Bucephalus	Alexander the Great
Dapple	Sancho Panza
Dobhar	Irish legend
Fadda	Mahomet
Grani	Siegfried
Marocco	Elizabethan performing horse
Pegasus	Bellerophon
Rabicano	Argalia
Reksh	Rustam
Rosinante	Don Quixote
Seian	Seius
Sleipnir	Odin
Xanthus	Achilles

Pale horse. Death.

Red horse. War.

Seven green horses. In the East the everlasting, the evergreen.

Two horses. The Morning and Evening Star as companions of the sun.

White horse. Intellect, mount of a saviour, purity, reason, sun-steed, unblemished innocence. In heraldry emblem of the Han-over family. Steed on which Buddha left to become an ascetic, and which saved his life from cannibal demons. Mount of Saint George and of the second coming of Christ. The white horse brings a new kingdom on earth of happiness and joy and purity. Also a horse of the Apocalypse, i.e. conquest. In Hinduism mount of Vishnu. The Japanese worshiped a white horse as a giver of purification. Confessions were made to it in the belief that it heard well because its ears were long and carried the confessions to the kami. Shrines which could not afford a live horse had a wooden horse painted white. A white horse was offered to Tatsuta-hime, the wind-goddess when rain was wanted, and with a white boar and a white cock to Mi-tosh-no-kami for a good harvest. In Norse mythology the horse of Odin was white.

White and gold horse. In Iranian mythology a form of Tishtrya, the dog-star as rain bringer. Symbolic of virility.

Wild horse. Means of punishment; untamed power.

Winged horse. Opinion and reason coursing through natural things. Pegasus.

Wonder horse. Horse with a mane like a cloud of gold in Slav folklore. He typified the light of descending truth.

Wooden horse. Deception, alluding to the monstrous wooden horse constructed by the Greeks. They pretended it was an offering to the gods. The Trojans dragged it into their city only to discover it was filled with Greek soldiers who, at night, crept out of their place of concealment, killed the Trojan guards, opened the city gates, and set fire to Troy. A marvelous wooden horse also appeared in romances of the middle ages. The rider had only to turn its peg to fly through the air.

HORSE-CHESTNUT October 1 birthday flower symbolizing luxury. Because of its spiky burr, it typifies darting, piercing, radiating fire. Also called buck-eye.

HORSE-HAIR WIGS Worn by English judges; almost identical with the kluft worn by Isis. They supposedly endow the wearer with discernment and wisdom. Wig is derived from Hu, i.e. Hu-ig, thus a sun symbol.

HORSEL Swabian goddess of love and lady of the moon. A name identical with that of Ursula (Saint Ursula). A horse was sacred to her, and places of Horsel (Horse) worship are found in such names as Horselberg, Horselydown, Horsenden Hill. A hostelry is known as horsel.

HORSELBORG Sacred mountain which was the locale of Tannhauser's adventure with Venus.

HORSELEECH In Hebrew tradition an emblem of avarice and rapacity.

HORSE-RADISH See hazereth or maror.

HORSESHOE Good luck. If hung with horns up, talisman against ill luck, and nailed over doors and on masts of ships to prevent the power of witches. A survival of the belief that elk horns (horseshoe-shaped) guard against evil; also derived from the crescent moon. If horns point downward, luck runs out. Worn as a talisman, especially by hunters and warriors. Emblem of a blacksmith, farrier, and horse-dealer. Dream significance: happy journey. Attribute of Saints Eligius and Eloy. In India typifies the yoni.

HORTENSE (HORTENSIA) Feminine name, form of a Roman family name, and from the Latin, meaning gardener.

HORUS (HAR, HOR) Literally, he who is above. Supreme god of early immigrants to Egypt; personification of the over-reaching sky. In later mythology the splendid young sun of morning and spring, the terrible slayer of his enemies, the serpents of darkness and drought. As Horus the Elder he was the hawk-headed son of Hathor and the brother of Osiris and Isis. He sometimes is identified as another aspect of Osiris. As Horus the Younger he was the son of Osiris and Isis. When Set pursued Isis after the death of Osiris she feared for the life of Horus and placed him in a chest or boat. He was rescued and raised by the virgin goddess Uazit, a serpent (earth) deity, i.e. the sun nourished by earth increased (rose) to great size and strength. Horus waged war against Set, whom he mutilated as Set had mutilated Osiris. Thus the young sun destroyed the darkness or drought as the darkness had destroyed the aged sun. The myths of Horus the Elder and Horus the Younger eventually merged into one, thus Horus became a resurrected deity. While in the underworld he had the head of a baboon and received the dead in the Judgment Hall of Osiris; he sat in the eleventh hour division of the night, where the enemies of Ra were consumed by fire. In some localities he was blended with Ra to become Harmachis (Hor-akhi or Horus Aroeris), lord of the two horizons, those of the rising and setting suns. In Lower Egypt he was Horus of the two-eyes, the sun and the moon, and portrayed with the solar disk and the horns of the crescent moon. His image was carved above temple doors to protect them from evil. In Upper Egypt he was the All-seeing and symbolized by an eye. In one legend he is said to have lost one eye in his struggle with Set. Horus, the child in the chest, was placed in the constellation Argo; he was repeated four times and appeared at each of the four quarters of the universe, or he is said to have had four sons. The planet Saturn was known as Horus the Bull; Mars as Red Horus; Jupiter as Horus Revealer of Secrets. As Horus the child, he was Har-pi-chruti, a boy sitting on a lotus flower with a finger in his mouth, typifying the sun reborn each morning and rising in a sun-ship from the waters. Sometimes with a finger in his mouth he was carried by Hathor or Isis. The finger in mouth typified wisdom. The Greeks identified Har-pi-chruti with Harpocrates, a deity of silence, depicted with a finger at his lips. In sacred writings, he was described as Bruiser of the Serpent, Divine Healer, Giver of Rays, God of the Pole Star, Good Physician, Light of the World, Lord of the Northern Lights, Lord of the Pillars, Overcomer of the Powers of Darkness and Drought, Prince of the Emerald Stone, Prince of Goodwill and Peace, Teacher of the Way, and was regarded as symbolic of the power which leads the soul from darkness, death, and ignorance to the mansions of the blessed. He was the representative of eternal youth and the green shoots of trees. In hieroglyphs he was represented by a hawk, the bird sacred to him because it flies into the firmament, or by a hawk-headed man wearing a pschent. His image was worn as a protective talisman. His emblems were an eye, horns of the crescent moon, the sun disc, the winged sun disk. In Egypt, Father Time was portrayed as a bald man with a single lock of hair, and that was known as the lock of Horus. An abandoned child on the waters, his analogues are Moses and Perseus; an avenger of his father, he is resembled by Hamlet; his battles with Set compare with those of Cain and Abel, Loki and Balder; a destroyer of dragons, he bears a likeness to Heracles, Indra, Marduk; lord of the sun, he corresponds to Apollo; one-eyed, he is resembled by Odin; one nourished by a beast, he is akin to Paris; one who rises from the dead, he is cognate with Tammuz. Horus, an Egyptian generic term for god, is akin to the names Ares, Eros, Horsa, Horsel, Ursula, and Urus, and is a radical of heureuse (French for happy) and of Russe (Russia).

Horus's four sons. The four sons of Horus were the guardians placed on funeral urns in which the internal organs of mummies were stored. Compare Amenti Genii. The four were: Amset, lord of the north. He had a human face and protected the large intestines and stomach. Duamutef, lord of the east. He had a jackal's head and protected the heart and lungs. Hapi, lord of the south. He had a dog's head and protected the small intestines. Kebeh, lord of the west. He was hawk-headed and protected the gall bladder and liver.

HORVENDIL (HORVENDILLUS, HORWENDIL) In a 12th century Danish legend warrior and sun hero in the service of King Rorik, who gave the hero his daughter Gerutha (Gertrude) in marriage and made him king of Jutland. He and Gerutha became the parents of Amleth (Hamlet). Horvendil's brother was Feng. Probably identical with the mythological Orvandel. See Amlode, Hamlet.

HOSEA Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning salvation.

HO-SHEN Chinese god of fire. Sometimes identified with Tsao-shen.

HOSIA In Greek mythology heavenly justice.

HOSIOI Delphic priests.

HOSPITAL Shelter, sickness. Dream significance: distress, sorrow.

HOSPITALITY Typified by a hearth fire, open door, orange. See eating. In Asia typified by a crow. In an Italian icon personified by a beautiful woman wearing a jeweled crown. Her arms are open; she carries a cornucopia. An infant catches the many things that pour from it. A pilgrim holds his hands up to her. In Russia represented by bread and salt.

HOSPODARICEK Bohemian word meaning master of the house. Penate or guardian genius. Believed to have the form of a snake. Parallels Zmek.

HOST In Lutheran, Roman Catholic, and other Christian churches, the consecrated bread or wafer used in the sacrament. It is called Host because it is regarded as a real victim consisting of flesh, blood, and soul, offered in sacrifice. At the benediction it is exposed for adoration. It has replaced the Agnus Dei, the Lamb of God, formerly sacrificed. It typifies Christ, sacrificed at the Lord's Supper. Symbolic of sacrifice, unleavened bread, victim. Host is from the Latin hostia, i.e. sheep offered in sacrifice.

HOSTAGE In Norse mythology the war between the Vanir and Aesir was concluded when a compromise was reached, and Hoenir and Mimir of the Aesir were sent as hostages to the Vanir, and Njord and his son Frey were sent as hostages to the Aesir. The war was a battle between the dark forces of winter and the light forces of summer; the exchange of hostages provided for the normal cycle of the year, i.e. the imprisonment of fertility and the release of underground powers.

HOT CROSS BUN A ceremonial cake or bread marked with a cross and eaten by Christians on Good Friday. Descendant of cakes originally eaten to honor the pagan goddess Eostre. Compare bread, bun, cake, Eostre.

HOTEI (HOTEI-OSHO) In Japanese Buddhism one of the Schichi-Fukujin, the seven gods of happiness. God of contentment and good fortune, embodiment of cheerfulness, lover of children. He is fat with a big belly, and is always smiling. He carries or sits on a bag which is filled with the good things he dispenses. Probably identical with Miroku. Parallels Chinese Pou-tai.

HOTOKE Japanese Buddhas of the dead and of hope.

HOTOOGISU Japanese cuckoo, guide to hades.

HOT SPRINGS Health, rejuvenation, youth. In Japan divine manifestation of Suku-na-riko, god of medicine.

HOTU-PAPA In Polynesian mythology wife of Rangī. Name signifying sobbing earth. In some accounts said to be the mother of Rongo and Tu.

HOTURU Pawnee god of the winds.

HOU CHI In Chinese mythology son of a virgin. His mother trod on a toeprint made by the Supreme God and became pregnant, later giving birth to Hou Chi. He was reared with the aid of birds, oxen, and sheep, and became the legendary founder of the Chou Dynasty. A culture hero, he taught his people agriculture. Deified as patron of grain. He compares with Christ, Horus, Romulus, Zeus.

HOUGHTON Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from the high place or manor.

HOUMEA Maori ogress who devours the food suppliers; a drought demon.

HOUND The chase, courser, divine hunt for souls (death), guardianship, intelligence, smell-outer, watcher. The word hound equates with hand and, in colloquial use, means a dastardly, despicable fellow. Compare dog. In Celtic mythology a white hound with red ears (i.e. the wind) sweeps across the sky hunting stags (souls). Companion of Garbh Ogh and Lugh. In British lore also a symbol of death-bringing winds and called Gabriel's hounds or Gabriel's ratches. Christian redeemer, temporal savior. Christ is called the Hound of Heaven. In Greek mythology companions of Artemis.

Orion's Hounds. The constellation in the Southern Sky of the Great Dog (Canis Major).

HOOR (1) One of the Horae or

Mansion	China	Europe	Greek Antiquity	Mongol	Soyot
11 P.M. to 1 A.M.	Rat	Ram	Cat	Mouse	Dragon
1 A.M. to 3 A.M.	Ox	Bull	Dog	Cow	Tiger
3 A.M. to 5 A.M.	Tiger	Lovers	Snake	Tiger	Cow
5 A.M. to 7 A.M.	Hare	Crab	Crab	Hare	Sow
7 A.M. to 9 A.M.	Dragon	Lion	Ass	Dragon	Monkey
9 A.M. to 11 A.M.	Serpent	Virgin	Lion	Snake	Mouse
11 A.M. to 1 P.M.	Horse	Scales	Goat	Horse	Dog
1 P.M. to 3 P.M.	Goat	Scorpion	Ox	Sheep	Frog
3 P.M. to 5 P.M.	Monkey	Centaur	Hawk	Monkey	Snake
5 P.M. to 7 P.M.	Cock	Goat	Monkey	Cock	Cock
7 P.M. to 9 P.M.	Dog	Waterman	Ibis	Dog	Horse
9 P.M. to 11 P.M.	Boar	Fish or Ship	Crocodile	Sow	Hare

HOORGLASS Measure of time, passage of time, shortness of life, time successively renewing its course. Typifies time of night in contrast to the sun dial, which signifies time of day. If on its side symbolized time lost. In heraldry typifies mortality. In Greek mythology an attribute of Cronus.

HOORI Mohammedan beautiful damsels. Black-eyed nymphs who were delightful companions to the faithful in Paradise. They were everlastingly beautiful and young; their virginity was renewed at pleasure. Every believer had seventy-two of these beauties. Intercourse with them was fruitful or otherwise, according to his wish. The offspring of these unions grew to full stature in an hour. Probably typified stars.

Greek goddesses of law and order in nature. (2) According to astrologers the sun is conveyed through the mansions (hours) of the day. The carriers correspond to those that carry the sun through the zodiacal houses, the first hour corresponding to Aries. Usually the carriers are animals; some hourly calendars follow:

HOUSE Hospitality, security, shelter. The body of a house typifies earth; the roof, heaven; the window, deity. Prehistoric dwellings nearly always were circular or in sun form and were named after the sun. House is from the Anglo Saxon hus and probably related to the Sanscrit kosha, a coop, from the root kus, of uncertain meaning; perhaps signifying to cover or hide, as the roof or sky. Among Central American Indians symbolizes repose, sleep. In China two stars in the northern quadrant, winter season, are named Shih (House). It is an exceedingly propitious period.

House containing fish. Fertility; house of Ishtar.

House god. Tibetan god. Usually has the head of a pig, holds a long banner and staff, and wanders about the house, settling in a different location every month. Special restrictions and rules are observed where the god is located. Comparable to the Roman lares.

House of cards. Insecurity, uncertainty.

House of cedar. In Hebrew tradition, Temple of Solomon; symbolic of the incorruptible and strong.

House of clay. Burial ground.

Houses of the zodiac. In astrology the heaven is divided into twelve houses or mansions by the drawing of great circles crossing the north and south points of the horizon through which the heavenly bodies pass every twenty four hours. Each house denotes a circumstance or state affecting natural phenomena as well as human lives. In casting a horoscope, beginning from the east, six of the houses are placed above, six below the horizon. The eastern houses are ascendant inasmuch as they are about to rise; the other six are descendant because they have passed the zenith, and the ascendancy or descendancy of the stars in the houses assigned to one whose horoscope is being cast governs the destiny of a person. Three houses are assigned to each of the four ages of the person. The special function of the twelve houses are:

Mansion	Carrier of the Sun	Anatomical Part Governed	Ruling Planet	Special Function
Aries	Ram	head and face	Mars	new life
Taurus	Bull	neck	Venus	wealth
Gemini	Twins or Lovers	shoulders and arms	Mercury	neighbors and mind
Cancer	Crab	breast	Moon	relatives
Leo	Lion	heart	Sun	children
Virgo (the paradise of the zodiac)	Virgin	bowels	Mercury	health and work
Libra	Scales	reins	Venus	marriage
Scorpio	Scorpion	reproductive organs	Mars	death
Sagittarius	Centaur	thighs	Jupiter	religion
Capricornus	Goat	knees	Saturn	dignities, honors
Aquarius	Waterman	legs	Uranus	friendship
Pisces (hell of the zodiac)	Ship Argo or Fish	feet	Neptune	enemies

House-top worship. Ancient Semitic astral worship. Adoration of the evening star at which cakes, served only by women, were offered. Wine was drunk and incense burned.

Sixteen houses. In Tibet the afterworld houses of torture; eight cold and eight hot.

Six-windowed house. In Tibet typifies the six senses; the sixth sense being akin to instinct. See Sipa Khorlo.

Three-cornered house. In Hebrew antiquity a house immune from uncleanness in leprosy.

HOUSELEEK Herb symbolizing domestic economy and industry, vivascity.

HOUSTANIA November 18 flower; symbolic of contentment.

HOUSSAIN In Arabian Nights owner of a marvelous carpet. It transports anyone who sits on it to any place he desires to go in a minute. It typifies a cloud.

HOU-T'U Originally worshiped in China as a god of earth (see T'u-ti Shen); later transformed into a goddess and called Hou-t'u nai nai.

HOUYHNNMS In Swift's Gulliver's Travels, one of a race of horses endowed with reason and remarkable virtue. They rule the Yahoos, a race of degraded brutish creatures having the shape of man. The word was coined by Swift from the whinny of a horse.

HOVAS In the social system of Madagascar the middle class as distinguished from the andevo (slaves) and the andriana (nobles).

HOWARD Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning right direction.

HOWELL Masculine name from the Welsh, meaning sound, whole.

HO-WO Japanese phoenix, a manifestation of the sun. Its appearance on earth is a portent of great events, and the torii is provided for it. Talisman for benevolence, fidelity, justice, obedience, rectitude.

HOWTH CASTLE See Hill of Howth.

HOYA September 4 birthday flower; symbolic of sculpture.

HPAUNG-DAW-U Indo-Chinese Buddhist guardian of the lake; a water-dragon god.

HPI (HPI-HPAI) A spirit demon of Burma and Indo-China; an ogre which has red eyes and casts no shadow.

HRAESVELG (HRAESVELGR, HRAESVELGUR) In Norse mythology giant eagle that inhabits the northern extremities of the heavens, that makes the winds with its wings and produces devastating storms. It screams at Ragnarok, the doom of the gods, and gnaws at corpses. From the Icelandic meaning corpse-swallower.

HRAFNA-GOD Odin as a raven god.

HREIDMAR (HREITHMARR, REIDMAR) In Norse mythology a peasant. Father of three sons Fafnir, Ottar, and Regin, and three daughters. Hreidmar was skilled in necromancy and he compelled the three gods Odin, Hoener, and Loki to pay as ransom for killing his son Ottar enough gold to cover the skin of the otter in which his son had been disguised. He demanded that the gods were not to leave an inch uncovered. The gold, taken from Andvare, was cursed to bring ill fortune to anyone who possessed it. Hreidmar, who was a dwarf, was slain while asleep by his son Fafnir, who desired the treasure. The outer skin was a skin of snow; the gold Hreidmar demanded was that of the rays of the sun, which would melt every inch of the covering of winter and permit spring growth to come up from the earth. The gold brings ill fortune to the possessor because deities of the underworld rob the wealth and hold it underground.

HRIM FAXI (HRIMFAXE) Literally, frosted mane. In Norse mythology steed of Nat. From his bit foam falls every morning that congeals on earth into dew.

HRIMTHURSAR (HRIMTHURSEN) Norse frost or rime giants who lived under one of the roots of Yggdrasil. In a battle with the sons of Bor, beneficent gods, which lasted for centuries, only one of the Hrimthursar, named Bergelmer, survived. See Ymir.

Hrim (Hyrm). Leader of the frost-giants in the battle against the gods at Ragnarok.

Hrimgerd. Giantess who lays in wait for ships, a corpse-hungry witch.

Hrimgrimnir. Frost giant.

Hrimnir (Hrimner). Frost giant; father of Angerboda, the east wind.

HRINGHORN (HRINGHORNI)

In Norse mythology Balder's ship; largest of all vessels, and used as his funeral pyre. When launched for this ceremony, fire leaped from the rollers on which the ship rested, and the whole earth shook. Probably the rays of the sun in clouds or the sun itself afire as it set.

HRODVITNIR Literally, mighty-wolf. Father of Skoll, wolf which pursues the sun, and Hati, wolf which pursues the moon. Another name of the Fenris-wolf.

HROMUND In Norse legend possessor of the sword Mistel-teinn (mistletoe). Two magicians Bildr and Voli (Balder and Vali) oppose Hromund for love of Svanhit as Bildr desires her. In the conflict Hromund slays Bildr with his sword; Voli wounds Hromund but is slain. Hromund typifies darkness; Bildr, the sun; Voli, the wind.

HRONESNESS Headland where Beowulf was buried to guide ships through mist. Various translated as Eagle's Ness (Earnaness), Ran's Ness, Whale's Ness.

HROTHGAR (HROAR) In Beowulf grandson of Scyld, son of Halfdan, brother of Helgi, mate of Wealtitheow, father of Rorik. A fertilizing king, ruler of Denmark, whose abode was Heorot Hall. Beowulf delivered him from the sea and underworld monster Grendel. When Halfdan was murdered by his brother Frodi, Hrothgar and Helgi, although children, feigned madness, and their uncle permitted them to escape. They eventually killed Frodi and claimed the kingdom. Their story resembles that of other hero brothers, such as Romulus and Remus, who were exposed, expelled, or escaped, and who returned years later to claim their kingdom.

HROTTE In the Volsung Saga sword which was one of the treasures guarded by the dragon Fafnir.

HRUNGNIR (HRUNGNER) Literally, blusterer. In Norse mythology a frost giant. He visited Asgard seeking Freyja as a bride. Freyja poured out ale for him until he became drunk; then he was slain by the gods. As he succumbed he fell over Thor, and only Magni, Thor's three day old son, was able to lift him off the foot of Thor. His desire for Freyja suggests the power of winter trying to overcome fertility. He was lifted from the foot of Thor by Magni, the warm breeze.

HRUNTING Magic sword given to Beowulf by Unferth, King Hrothgar's spokesman. With it Beowulf slays the dam of the monster Grendel. Typifies sun rays.

HSI Chinese alphabetical character meaning happiness or joy, when doubled expresses great happiness or matrimonial bliss.

HSIA Golden age of China; about 2200 to 1818 B.C. The Hsia dynasty, in power during the great age of Chinese civilization and prosperity, included Ta Yu (Chinese King Alfred) and other legendary heroes.

HSIANG Chinese emblematic symbols composed of an unbroken line and a broken line. The unbroken line represents the yang principle; the broken line represents the yin. When placed successively over each other they form the eight Kwa (pa kua) or Trigrams.

HSIANG CHUN One of the nine celebrated legendary Chinese heroes. God of waterways. Male aspect of Hsiang Fu-jen.

HSIANG FU-JEN In Chinese mythology the two daughters of Yao. As a pair regarded as one of the nine celebrated legendary heroes, the older named Wo Huang, the younger named Nu Ying. They became the empress and consort of the righteous Emperor Shun. Female aspect of Hsiang Chun, god of waterways.

HSIEN A Chinese character composed of two pictographic elements, 'man,' 'mountain.' It originally applied to men who retired from the world and lived a hermit's life in the mountains. Later applied to immortals or fairies who had the power to invoke lightning and thunder, rain and wind, and who were able to pass through fire or solid matter unharmed, who could transform their shapes, move with incredible speed, and appear at several places at once. They lived in the air, on mountains, or in water. Their most delightful abode was called San Hsien Shan (Three Isles of the Blest), and located in the Eastern Sea, where the plant of immortality was kept by them.

HSI HAI In Chinese mythology Western Sea, husband of Lady of T'ai Shan (whirlwind).

HSI-LING SHIH Wife of the legendary Chinese Yellow Emperor, Huang-ti. She supposedly introduced the culture of silk worms and the production of silk into China.

HSIN In China the Heart, three stars, Antares, Sigma, Tau, in the heart of Scorpio, in eastern quadrant, spring season. Represented by the fox; element the moon. A propitious time for weddings, and building or construction of any kind.

HSING (1) In China the Star, seven stars, Alpha, Iota, Kappa, two Nuns, two Taus, in the heart of Hydra, in the southern quadrant, summer season. Represented by the horse, element sun. An unlucky period in general. (2) Cursive or running writing hand. In common use for private letters and bookkeeping.

HSING SHEN Chinese god of the road.

HSI T'IEN Chinese name for Amitabha's Western Heaven. Also called Sukhavati.

HSI WANG MU (SI WANG MU) Chinese queen-mother of the West; wife of Tung Wang Kung. She personifies the female quintessence of western air and reigns over San Hsien Shan (Three Isles of the Blest), where she cultivates the peach tree of immortality, Shen t'ao, which bears fruit once every 3,000 years. She is usually depicted with two handmaidens, one holding a large fan, the other a basket of peaches. A picture of her with her favorite Ma-ku is given to women on their birthdays to express the wish of a life as happy and long as that of these two. Parallels Japanese Sei-O-Ba. As creators, she and Tung Wang Kung resemble Izanami and Izanagi.

HSU In China, Emptiness, two stars in a straight line, Alpha in the forehead of Equuleus, and Beta in the left shoulder of Aquarius, in northern quadrant, winter season. Represented by the rat, element sun. A lucky period.

HSU CHEN-CHUN Chinese dragon slayer.

HTAMENMAS (PHARMEN-MA) Eight animal or birdheaded goddesses holding corpses and skeletons, etc., appearing in the Tibetan Chonyid Bardo.

H'TEE Bell-shaped gilded iron canopy which crowns every pagoda in Burma.

HU (HUGH) (1) Egyptian generic term for god the father. (2) The name of two gods; one a nature deity, giver of abundance connected with the Nile. Associated with the birth of the sun, and in legends, accompanies the sun on the solar ship. The other, a deity of the senses, personification of feeling, taste, and wisdom; revealer of the divine word. Portrayed in the form of a man or a sphinx. Often accompanies the solar deity in his boat and, in this aspect, identified with Hu, deity of abundance. The Egyptian hieroglyph 'hu' is a dove, and Iahu is the name of Isis as dove goddess; also a name of Set. See Khu. (3) British oak and sun deity; the elementary and primitive All-pervading. God of gentleness; the first of three chieftains who obtained dominion over Britain. He established himself, not by bloodshed and war, but by justice and peace. He killed a dragon and caused the cessation of disastrous floods; he federated the people into tribes and introduced civil government; he taught them the art of agriculture, and was the first on British soil to draw a furrow with a plough. He introduced letters, literature, and history. Hu appears to be identical with the Guernsey Hou; with the Welsh Hu Gadarn, and with the Welsh Llew (Lleu). The Welsh word llew, meaning both light and lion, is probably a deterioration of el Hu (lord Hu), and equates with Lugh, the name of the Irish sun god. The syllables huish have blended into hush; thus "Hushabye baby," is unconsciously saying, "May the light of Hu be with you, baby." Hu is a radical of hew, huge, humane, humor, Huon, wakes (hu-akes), whisper (hu-isper), white (hu-ite), wig (hu-ig), winsome (hu-insome), wish (hu-ish), wit (hu-it), and of the expression, "hue and cry," the outcry of one in pursuit of a criminal. (4) Chinese for lord and sir; Zend for boar. Cornish for sow was baneau, which yields good hu.

HUACA Peruvian all-pervading spirit dispersed throughout the habitable world; also any material object the spirit was believed to have entered. Later, term applied to one of the local powers or spirits believed to dominate the forces of nature as distinguished from the major Inca divinities. Also a totem, an object or place believed to be the abode of a spirit or minor god, as a certain lake, mountain, rock, or burial mound. Prehistoric Peruvian temples and tombs were pyramidal or truncated in form in honor of Huaca.

HUA HSIEN Chinese goddess of flowers.

HUAMINCA Inca word meaning faithful soldiers. Light rays; messengers of Viracocha.

HUAN CHING In Chinese mythology pupil of the magician Tei-Ch'ang-fang. See Kite Flying Festival.

HUANG TI Third legendary Chinese emperor. His conception was miraculous, after which his mother carried him for 24 months. He was born on Wussu Day, which corresponds to the element earth, and Shen Nung, his predecessor, awarded him a tablet which signified he possessed the virtue of earth. The color of earth being yellow he was called Yellow Emperor. His reign was filled with marvelous events. He destroyed the evil god Ch'ih Yeo, he extended the boundaries of his land, he invented bricks and bamboo musical instruments, composed a calendar, and with Ts'ang Chieh developed the tadpole or bird-track script from the signs which the unicorn had brought to Fu Hsi. His consort was Hsi-ling Shih. His age symbolized the age of invention and his reign was so auspicious the phoenix and the unicorn appeared as evidences of the benignity of his rule.

HUANG T' IEN Chinese imperial heaven.

Huang T'ien Shang Ti. Imperial heaven's supreme ruler. Ruler of the dark heaven or northern sky. He floats on the back of a tortoise encircled by a serpent and drives away evil spirits.

HUARD In Brittany a demon which teases travelers.

HUA YANG-TZU In China white paper embroidery patterns pasted on doors and windows at the Lunar New Year and other festivals as charms for good fortune.

HUAYNA CAPAC (HUANA CAP-AC) Famous Peruvian monarch. He is deemed the eleventh Inca ruler. He brought the Inca power to its zenith; at his death, the empire was divided between his sons Atahualpa and Huascar. The name Huana is cognate with Bechuana, i.e. crocodile, an earth or fertility symbol.

HUB Navel or wheel of the universe. The Hub, humorously applied to the city of Boston, meaning that it is the hub of the solar system, around which everything revolves and on which everything is dependent. The allusion is to a statement by Oliver Wendell Holmes.

HUBERT Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning mind bright.

HUBUR Babylonian river of death, compares with the Styx.

HUCKLEBERRY FINN Hero of a story by Mark Twain. He is an adventurous, sharp-witted boy who refuses to adjust himself to the discipline of civilization. He became a vagabond and on his raft, with his faithful friend, Jim the Negro, drifts down the Mississippi into innumerable adventures.

HUD Moslem prophet who rebuked Shedad, king of the Adites, for his display of pride in building Ad. Hud was unheeded.

HUDIBRAS Hero of Butler's poem Hudibras. He is a justice, who desires to reform abuses. He is humpbacked and potbellied and wears a ragged yellow-red beard. The horse he rides on his campaign is half-blind and he himself has something of the character of Don Quixote. From this satiric poem against the Puritans came the adjective hudibrastic, meaning burlesque-heroic. Two characters in Spenser's Faerie Queene have the name; one, the lover of E-lissa, personifies rashness; the other is a legendary king of Britain. The name also refers to Sir Hugh de Bras, one of the knights of the Round Table.

HUDSON, HENRY Adventurer, explorer.

HUDSON, SIR JEFFREY Dwarf.

Page to Queen Henrietta Maria at the English court during the 17th century. He once was concealed in a pie. He was captured by pirates and escaped; later imprisoned for a time in connection with the Popish plot. He has been the subject of several romances.

HUECOMITL The Aztec great original vase; holder of rain. Also called Akbal.

HUEHUETEOTL Mexican fire god. The ancient god, the oldest of the gods.

HUEHUETLAPALLAN In Aztec mythology the old red land or land of the north.

HUEMAC Literally, the strong hand. Aztec god of earthquakes. In one myth co-ruler with Quetzalcoatl of Tollan; sometimes regarded as an aspect of Quetzalcoatl.

HUERGO (UREGO) Old Spanish man-eating demon. Cognate with the Roman Orcus.

HUEYTECPATL One of the four Meztitlan (Aztec) primeval quadruplets. Name signifies ancient flint stone (fire stone). See Hueytonantzin.

HUEYTONANTZIN Literally, our great ancient mother. Meztitlan (Aztec) mother of the primeval quadruplets who were lords of the four directions: Hueytecpatl, Ixcuin, Nanacatlzatzitzi, Tentemic. Each day her sons slew her, sacrificing her to the sun. A myth personifying the cardinal points defined at daybreak by the Dawn, who is lost to the sun on its appearance.

HU GADARN Welsh oak and sun deity; ancestor of the Cymry, who led them into Britain. Allegorical champion of Welsh liberty. Probably also known as Har Hou and identical with Hu, which see.

HUGGINS AND MUGGINS Two characters who appeared in English comic literature during the 19th century. They personify boastful vulgarity. The phrase appears to be corrupted from the Dutch hooge en mogende (high and mighty), or it may be from Hugin and Munin, the two ravens of Odin.

HUGH (GUGH, HU, HUGO) Masculine name from the Germanic through Norman French, meaning mind; serious thinker.

HUGHLIGAN In British political cant a member of the extreme High-church division of the Conservative party, headed by Lord Hugh Cecil. An imitation of Hooligan.

HUGI Literally, thought. In Norse mythology sometimes said to be a dwarf sometimes said to be a giant. In Utgard he ran against Thjalfe (Swiftness), a servant of Thor, and won the race.

HUGIN AND MUNIN Literally, thought (or reflection) and memory. In Norse mythology the two ravens that sit on the shoulders of Odin. He sends them out at daybreak to fly over the world and bring back its news; which they whisper in his ear; thus the expression, a bird told me.

HUGON In the folklore of Southern France an evil spirit or ogre, which supposedly traverses the country at night, inflicting personal injury and frightening children.

HUHI (KHUHI) Egyptian All-Father. Probably identical with Hu, which see.

HUITZILOPOCHTLI (HUICHILOBOS, UITZILOPOCHTLI)

Literally, humming bird to the left (south). Aztec god of war. Son of Coatlicue. Born magically he came into the world fully armed. In one account he had two mothers, the second being Teteionnan. He was one of the four divine brothers, the others being Quetzalcoatl and Tezcatlipoca the Black and Tezcatlipoca the Red. He had solar attributes and was a fire god, ruler of the summer sun. His aspect was that of a bird-serpent or feathered serpent, and as a rain god of the south, he was opposed to Tezcatlipoca, god of the north wind and winter sun. He was seer and sorcerer and, in the form of Huitziton, guided the Aztecs into Mexico. As a rain deity he was associated with Tlaloc. Also called Mexitli, source of Mexico.

HUITZITON (HUITZON) Literally, small humming bird. Aztec mythical hero. A dragon slayer who understood the language of birds, which advised him to lead the Aztecs into Mexico. Probably Huitzilopochtli in human form, and like him a soothsayer.

HUITZNAHUA One of the four primeval brothers in Aztec legend.

HULDA (1) Feminine name from the Scandinavian, meaning amiable, lovely. (2) German goddess of fruitfulness and marriage.

HULDAH Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning weasel.

HULDERFOLK (HULDRE-FOLK, HULDU-FOLK) Literally, hidden folk. Norse mountain fairies or wood nymphs; folk of the wild hunt. Spirits of wind. The women are beautiful. They roam the hills clad in blue or gray, and have a tail. Although their songs are melancholy, they are fond of dancing and merry-making and will marry mortals. The unions usually are not happy. A Hulderman seeks to obtain a human wife.

HULI FESTIVAL Hindu celebration on March 31, commemorating the vernal equinox, corresponding to April Fool's Day in the West.

HULL, HELL AND HALIFAX

In an old prayer, beggars and vagabonds, asked to be delivered from the three places. From Halifax, because anyone caught stealing cloth there was beheaded without a trial; from Hell, because it loomed as their last resting place, although probably the least feared inasmuch as it was the most remote; from Hull, because it was well governed and they had little chance of getting anything without working hard for it.

HULOT A character who appears in several of Balzac's novels. In The Chouans he appears as a distinguished soldier, the elder of two brothers. He is a man of great honor and the misdeeds of his brother, Baron Hector Hulot d'Evry, hasten his death.

HUMA Fabulous bird of the East. A restless wanderer it is always on the wing, never resting anywhere. It brings good luck and any head which it overshadows will wear a crown.

HUMAN BODIES If clothed or veiled, symbolic of deception, illusion, secrecy, subtlety. If unclad or unveiled, symbolic of candor, revelation, truth.

Human race. In Chinese mythology parasites which infest the body of P'an Ku, which see.

Human sacrifice. A practice in most primitive societies for the purpose of appeasing or humoring the gods or for the purpose of assuring the growth of vegetation and the increase of flocks. In Greek antiquity Prometheus, with his divine gifts, had created so large a race of people, the gods instituted laws of sacrifice as payments for protection. The Incas, to appease the wrath of the gods and to pray for health, offered human blood. Bells and drums accompanied the sacrifice rites. In ancient Mexico and elsewhere sacrifices were made to the sun to renew his energies of heat, light, and motion. The constant need of victims to feed the solar fire was filled by warring yearly on neighboring tribes and sacrificing the captives.

HUMBA An Elamitic counterpart of Enlil, the earth god. A variant of the demon Humbaba.

HUMBABA (HUBABA, HUWAWA) Babylonian merciless demon. Guardian of the cedar forests. His beard resembled human entrails. Enkidu and Gilgamesh cut off the monster's head. Thus the storm demon whose home was in the cedar forest of Lebanon was destroyed by wind (Enkidu) and sun (Gilgamesh).

Humbaba masks. In Babylon, Sumer, etc., attached to houses as a talismanic protection against the demon Humbaba. The masks had large projecting ears and a snaring grin. The markings of the head were made of a single line, giving it the appearance of having been made of entrails.

Some of the masks had a merry grin, illustrating the ancient principle of fighting demons by presenting to them a caricature of themselves. Compare Gargoyle.

HUMBER Mythical Hun chief. Said to have drowned in the Ouse in the days of king Lo-crine. Probably a sun hero. His name, given to one of the estuaries of the Ouse, is akin to amber, Ambres (a sun deity), Cambria (an alternative name for Wales), ember, and appears in Cumberland and Northumberland.

HUMBERT Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning high and bright.

HUMBLE PIE Anciently, at hunting banquets, a pie made of the umbles or numbles (entrails, heart, liver) of the deer. The venison meat was served to the lord and his guests; the umbles were made into a pie and served to the hunters and other menials. Thus to eat humble pie, by popular etymology, is to abandon a higher position, apologize, eat one's own words, humiliate oneself.

Humble plant. September 5 birthday plant, symbolic of despondency.

Humility. Represented by the amethyst, ass, convolvulus, dove, gray color, heath, heather, hyssop, lamb, lily-of-the-valley, violet. Personified by a veiled virgin, seated, an open book on her knee, a vial of perfume in her hand, or by a virgin in white, her arms across her breast, her head inclined, a gold crown at her feet. In Christian tradition represented by Saint Andrew's cross.

HUME Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning of the home.

HUMMING BIRD Courage, gaiety, jealousy. In Aztec mythology an aspect of Huitzilopochtli, god of the south.

HUMMUM (HAMMAM) Turkish bath house, and in western countries, a name given to Turkish baths. In London's Covent Garden, two hotels were given the name, one was known as the Old Hummums, one as the New Hummums. As they were frequented by prostitutes, a hummum became known as a house of prostitution.

HUMOR According to an ancient theory, the humors were four: black bile or melancholy, blood, choler or yellow bile, phlegm. When one or the other predominated a person supposedly became apathetic, angry, irritable, or peevish. Thus the expressions melancholic, sanguine, choleric, and dull or phlegmatic humors.

Humorsomeness. In an Italian icon personified by a young man in a vary-colored garment. He wears a small cap in which are stuck feathers of several colors. He carries bellows in one hand, a spur in the other.

HUMPSBACK (HUNCHBACK)

According to a superstition, to touch one brings good luck. Dream significance: Happiness.

HUMPHREY (HUMPH, HUMPHRY)

Masculine name from the Germanic through Norman French, meaning high and peace, protector of the home.

Dine with Duke Humphrey. Go without dinner. Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, was renowned for his hospitality. At his death an announcement was made that he would be buried in Saint Paul's, but his body was interred elsewhere. However, visits were made to a grave on the south side of Saint Paul's by those who misunderstood the grave to be his. When these visitors left for dinner, the poor, who had no dinner to go to, or those who feared to be arrested for debt once outside the precincts of the cathedral, remained, and jokingly said they would dine with Duke Humphrey.

Humphrey Chimpden Earwicker. The masculine principle in James Joyce's Finnegans Wake. The events of the novel are presented through his dreams and nightmares. See under Earwicker.

HUMPTY DUMPTY Anything that may be irretrievably shattered. A short, dumpy person. The allusion is to the character, an egg, in the Mother Goose nursery rhyme, which developed into a favorite character in pantomime. In James Joyce's Finnegans Wake, Humpty Dumpty stands for Lucifer, Tim Finnegan, and mankind in general.

HUMPTY JACK A character in a Mumming Play.

HUN-AHPU AND XBALANQUE Among the Kiches of Guatemala twin hero gods. Magicians who overthrew earth-giants and underworld lords and raised 4,000 buried youths to become adored stars in heaven. They were born of the spittle of Hunhun Ahpu by the maiden Xquiq.

HUNCHED UP SHAPE By demons in Dante's Inferno regarded an attitude of prayer.

HUNDING In Nibelung Ring the husband of Sieglind. He warred against the Volsungs, in Valhalla, he was given bondsman's tasks, and set to cut wood, groom horses, leash hounds. A storm deity.

HUNDRED-EYED Argus Panoptes, which see.

Hundred-handed. The Hecatoncheires, which see.

HUNGER Dream significance: vain efforts.

Hunger strike. The refusal of a prisoner to take any food until he obtains some desired concession or is released. This practice is frequently followed by political prisoners and probably originated in Russia. During the early part of the 20th century it was employed by Irish political prisoners, suffragettes in England and the United States, and by the Indian nationalist leader, Mohandas (Mahatma) K. Gandhi. Compare black fast, fasting.

Hungry as a bear. Extremely hungry, referring to the excessive hunger of a bear after its hibernation period.

HUNG SOCIETY Chinese secret society, whose ritual symbolizes a journey through the underworld. Its five signs represent the five elements and are: 1- earth (center of the universe) typified by a hand over the abdomen to signify gross matter, the physical body which is destructible, hence destruction; 2 - fire (lightning) represented by hands above the head, sign of distress or helplessness; 3- gold (or metal), hands raised above heads and fingers touching to express exultation; 4- water, hands on hips with thumbs forward, a reins sign; 5- wood, represented by hands crossed downward to express impotence and humility. Originally it was a religious society; then active in political revolts. In recent times the society has been dreaded as one engaged in criminal and terrorist activities, and a hand shading the eyes with the other over the heart is used when one is attacked; a fellow member then immediately lets go. Fingers crossed indicates membership in the society. Also known as the Triad Society, the triad being heaven, earth, and man.

HUNHUN AHPU Kiche of Guatemala divinity who every evening restored to life the 400 barbarians (stars) which every morning were slain by Zipacna. From his spittle by Xquiq was born the twin hero gods Hun-Ahpu and Xbalanque.

HUNIMAN Same as Hanuman, which see.

HUN-PIC-TEK Literally, eight thousand flints. Mayan thunder god. See flint.

HUNTING Catching, killing, pursuing, searching. Dream significance: useless labor. American Indians hunted scalps and the Dyaks of Borneo hunted heads, which were preserved, not merely as trophies of war or of the hunt, but as talismans which supposedly provided the possessor with the strength of the deceased enemy. In Aryan tradition the hunt by departed souls was conceived in four different ways: 1- The host of women in ecstatic exaltation bordering on madness, girdled with snakes and hissing like snakes, tearing living animals apart and devouring the flesh, as the Greek Maenads and the Indian Senas. 2- Spectral army composed of the souls of warriors slain in battle. The Northern Einherier or tradition of ghostly battles and spectral combats, heard but not seen, were of this class. 3- The spectral hunt of the type of Artemis-Hecate, Dionysus-Zag-reus, or of the Wild Huntsman of German folk literature. 4- The theriomorphic hunt; the phallic demons of fertility with their companion groups of beautiful women, as that of the Greek satyrs and nymphs, the Indian Ganharvas and Apsaras.

Among the Letts there is the hunt by child souls; dead babies and children feeling cheated, become malicious spirits hunting the souls of the living. A similar hunt is that in many primitive mythologies of women who have died in childbirth and resent being separated from their children. Almost all these hunts are personifications of hurricanes, storms, tornadoes, winds. In ancient Japan hunting was a means of divination. Wild beasts were hunted in order to foretell the outcome of an invasion by the results of the chase.

Happy Hunting Ground. Paradise of North American Indians.

Hunter. He who seeks to devour another, thus one who causes another to go astray. In Christian tradition the Devil, one who desires evil.

Hunting Dogs. A constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Canes Venatici.

Hunting horn. Dream significance: sorrow.

HUON, SÎR Hero of the medieval French romance. He was a knight who traveled from Syria to Babylon, and on his way met Oberon, king of the fairies. Oberon gave to Huon a horn which yielded the costliest wines or which with one blast called up 100,000 warriors in an hour of need when blown by a good man. When Oberon went to Paradise he appointed Huon his successor as lord and king of Mommur, the forest in which he had lived. Huon married Esclairmond and was crowned king of the fairies. The horn of Huon (or Oberon) compares with the cornucopia, the Sangreal, and other vessels of plenty.

HUR Literally, free, noble. Chief man among the Hebrews in the absence of Moses in the desert. He strengthened the hand of Moses at Rephidim as well as by fulfilling the prophet's place while Moses was absent on Sinai.

HURAKAN Central American deity of rain, tempest, thunder, and the sky. Among the Kiche of Guatemala, the first man, created by Qabauil and Gucumatz. Among the Mayans, he had three manifestations: lightning, thunder, and the thunderbolt, or lightning flash, its track, and the bolt. God of the mighty wind and sender of cyclones and whirlwinds. His name has been adopted into English as hurricane, French as ouragan, German as orkan, Russian as urahan, Spanish as huracan, Swedish as orkan, etc.

H'URARU Pawnee mother earth. Also called Atira (Mother) because she brings forth. She brings forth all life and all life returns to her to await the appointed time of rebirth. Omniscient, she knows all places and all acts of men.

HURRAH Cry of approval, exultation, triumph. Hurrah yields fire of the great A (fire of the great sun). It is akin to eureka and to ooororake, with which fiends are said to have hailed Lucifer. Vulgarized into hooray.

HURUING WUHTI In Hopi Indian myths of the beginnings only water existed with two women; one living in the east, and one living in the west, both called Huruing Wuhti. Each day the Sun made a journey from one to the other.

HUSBISHAG Assyrian-Babylonian goddess of the underworld. Wife of Namtaru; keeper of the tablets on which the hour of each person's death is recorded.

HUS BROTHERS In Wintun legend the two brothers who created death. They had the shape of buzzards.

HUT Shelter. Dream significance: isolation, solitude. The word hut equates with heat, hot. Compare house. Used in the Jewish Sukkoth festival to commemorate the tents in which Jews lived in the wilderness. Originally probably connected with the symbolism of trees, the taking of fruits from trees in autumn or the use of palm branches and willow boughs for the building of shelters during the harvest or for the purpose of worshiping numen dwelling in the trees.

HUXLEY Masculine name from Old English, meaning huckster.

HUYEN-THIEN Indo-Chinese Buddhist dragon god. Guardian of the north of the heavens which keeps danger away and subdues devils. National tutelary deity; protecting spirit of Tongking. Also known as Nguyen-quan and Tran-vu. In China worshiped as Huyen-vu.

HUYL (CHOUIL, CHUYL) Celtic name for beetle; equal to heol (haul or houl), Celtic name for sun.

HUZRUWAUQTI Pueblo goddess. Woman of hard substances, coral, shell, etc. Located in the western home of the sun.

HVAR Zend sun deity.

HVA-SANG A preacher of Mahayana Buddhism. An historical person deified. He holds a mala (rosary) and a sankha (conch shell). He is fat and happy and usually surrounded by others. He wears a shawl over his shoulders and his belly is exposed. Sometimes included in the arhats to make eighteen.

HVERGELMIR (HVERGELMER) Literally ancient kettle. Norse fountain or spring in the midst of Niflheim, the realm of death, which was the source of several rivers, including the cold and venomous rivers Elivagar and Gjol. It was at the base of the Yggdrasil, the tree of life, where Nidhug and his brood were ever gnawing at the roots of the tree.

HYACINTH (1) Feminine name, alluding to the flower. (2) Color of absolution, constancy, consummation, hope, perfection. (3) Jewel of January; emblematic of faithfulness. In the language of gems, We must part. It supposedly bestows second sight. Dream significance: sincere affection. (4) March 7 birthday flower. Symbolic of faith, prudence, resurrection, wisdom, woe. Also games, play, sports. Flower governing Taurus. Dream significance: heavy storm. In Christian tradition typifies desire for heaven, peace of mind, prudence. Dedicated to the Virgin Mary. In Greek mythology, according to some accounts, formed from the blood of Hyacinthus (see); according to others, formed from the blood of Ajax, who went mad when he lost the arms of Achilles to Odysseus and killed himself uttering as a sigh, "ai" (alas or woe), the initials of his name, said to appear on the flower. The hyacinth formed the couch of Zeus and Hera.

Blue hyacinth. Constancy.

Purple hyacinth. Jealousy, sorrow.

White hyacinth. Modest loveliness.

HYACINTHUS (HYAKINTHOS) Greek spring vegetation deity. A youth of great beauty, the son of Amyclas, king of Sparta. Apollo and Zephyr both fell in love with him. According to one account he preferred Zephyr, the west wind, and Apollo, becoming enraged drove one of his quoits (rays) into the youth's head and killed him. In another account Hyacinthus chose Apollo and Zephyr, becoming jealous, blew the quoit out of the hand of Apollo and caused the mortal blow. Apollo, unable to save Hyacinthus, changed him into a flower (hyacinth). A dying god, one sacrificed for rebirth. Resembles Adonis and Tammuz.

Hyacinthia. Greek festival which marked the death of Hyacinthus. Its first days were devoted to a demonstration of grief; its last day was one of rejoicing, signifying the alternating dying and revival of vegetation. In some sections of ancient Greece, it lasted eleven days and was celebrated during May; in other sections, it was a three day festival celebrated during the summer.

HYADES Literally, to rain. In Greek mythology daughters of Atlas by either Aethra or Pleione. They were guardians or muses of Bacchus; described variously as three, four, or seven in number. The names when seven were given as Ambrosia, Coronis, Eudora, Pedile, Phyto, Polyxo, Thyene (or Dione). When their brother Hyas was killed in the chase, they wept incessantly and were honored by a place in the heavens as a reward for the love they bore him. Zeus placed them as a cluster of stars in the head of Taurus, and the ancients believed that, when they rose simultaneously with the sun, rainy weather followed. They thus typify rain clouds. Sometimes they are confused with the Heliades, nymphs who mourned the loss of their brother Phaethon.

HYAENAE Literally, sows. Iranian women celebrants at the orgies of Mithras at which a bull was sacrificed and eaten raw. Compare Agave, Leontes.

HYAGNIS A Phrygian satyr.

HYAS (1) In Greek mythology a name of Atlas as father of the Hyades. Also the name of a son of Atlas, a vegetation deity, who was killed accidentally. (2) Phrygian tribal deity who eventually became a god of vegetation and wine.

HY-BREASAIL (HI-BRASIL) Gaelic land of everlasting pleasure and feasting. Many men have sought the beauties and wonders of this mythic land and it appears on old maps. Some adventurers in the Spanish service thought they had discovered it and called the land they found Brazil. Also known as Breasal's Island. Analogue of Elysium.

HYDRA (1) In Greek mythology offspring of Typhon and Echidna. Demon of drought and darkness. A nine-headed water-withholding serpent that ravaged the country of Argos and dwelt in the Lernean swamp near the well of Anymone. As his second labor, Heracles was directed to slay it, but its middle head was immortal and, every time Heracles cut it off, it grew on again, until, with the assistance, of Iolaus, Heracles burned the head and buried it under a rock. By dipping his arrows in the Hydra's blood, Heracles rendered them fatal. Heracles accomplished this task in the month of Taurus. After its death, the Hydra was made whole again by the gods and placed in the Southern Skies as the constellation also known as the Sea Serpent. (2) Any calamity or misfortune springing from a multitude of sources; a difficulty which appears to increase as it is combated; an evil hard to overcome. In heraldry a many-headed serpent signifies conquest of a powerful enemy.

Hydra-headed multitude. The mob, the rabble, which is many-headed, and which seems to increase the more it is attacked.

HYDRANGEA January 5 birthday flower. Symbolic of boastfulness, heartlessness, remembrance, and cold beauty, inasmuch as it is a beautiful flower without scent. In Japan enchanting beauty, a fascinating but fickle woman.

HYDRIA Greek naiad or water nymph. A vessel used for carrying water is called hydria; it has a large body and a narrow neck with handles at the sides and a larger one at the back.

HYDROGRAPHY In an Italian icon personified by an old woman in silver cloth which resembles the waves of the sea. Above her are stars. She holds a chart of navigation, a compass and a ship. The mariner's compass is on the ground.

HYDRUS A constellation in the Southern Skies also known as Water Snake. In legend, it is a hater of the crocodile (devil or evil), which it destroys.

HYENA Brutality, carnivorousness, cowardice, ghoulishness, nocturnal prowling, sneakiness. Also fiendish, mirthless laughter. According to ancient belief it has the power of changing its sex, thus symbolic of deception, one who is changeable, fickle, two-faced. Inasmuch as its habits are nocturnal and it feeds on corpses, it typifies vice, one who preys on corruption. In African folklore the butt of smaller animals who, by cleverness, outwit him. A messenger of witches it opens graves and digs out the dead. Totem of the Nandi tribe. In the Orient symbolic of sorcery.

HYGEIA (HYGIEIA) In Greek mythology variously described as the daughter of Asclepius and sister of Machaon, Panacea, and Podalirius, and as the granddaughter of Asclepius and the daughter of Machaon. A goddess of health, her function was to maintain the health of the community. She is usually shown with a serpent drinking from a kantharos, which she holds. She is one of the symbols of the medical profession.

HYKSOS Literally, Bedouin chief. The dynasty of shepherd kings in Egyptian antiquity. They supposedly were of Semitic origin and sometimes are connected with the residence in Egypt of the Israelites. One of them, Apepi or Nub, is believed by some to be the Pharaoh who made Joseph his prime minister.

HYLAS A beautiful Greek youth who was a favorite of Heracles. When the Argonauts stopped at the island of Mysia, Hylas went ashore to have a drink at the fountain of Dryope. Dryope and her nymphs drew him down beneath the waters of the spring, and he was never seen again. Hylas is a Phrygian form of Heracles who dies ceremonially every year in fertility rites. Hylas may also represent a male who trespassed into a woman's realm and was sexually assaulted in a murderous way, suggesting a fertility sacrifice. Among certain savages men are punished for trespassing in the vicinity of mysteries being celebrated by women. Compare Agave, dying god, Endymion.

HYLLUS In Greek mythology son of Heracles and Deianeira. After the death of Heracles, he and his brothers fled the tyranny of Eurystheus. The flight typifies the disappearance of the brilliant hues of twilight from the sky after the sinking of the sun.

HYMAN Masculine name from the Hebrew Chaim, masculine form of Eve, meaning life.

HYMEN Greek marriage song; later personified as a god of marriage and accounted a son of Apollo and the muse Urania. His love for his wife was so great, his name became synonymous with conjugal felicity. He was represented as a youth, older and graver than Eros, carrying a bridal veil and a torch. The name Hymen is identical with hymn.

HYMETTUS A mountain in Attica famous for its honey and marble.

HYMIR (HYMER) Norse ice giant, lord of the winter sea. He is a Van god, son of Fornjot, brother of Aegir, and owner of a great kettle and the ox Himin-brjoter. Thor obtained the kettle by subterfuge to brew ale for the Asa gods invited to Aegir's banquet. He also used the head of Hymir's ox as bait to catch the Midgard serpent, but Hymir cut the line, and the serpent fell back into the sea. The legend of Hymir and Thor typifies the everlasting struggle between the forces of winter and death (darkness) and those of spring and growth (light). The giant ox typifies an iceberg, the kettle is a caldron of fertility, which lies hidden in the underworld of darkness until released by warm rays.

HYMN In Greek antiquity hymns accompanied the dances at sacrificial ceremonies. Generally, they were composed in honor of the gods and contained an account of their famous actions and the gifts they conferred on mankind as well as invoking their continued favor.

HYNDLA Literally, she-dog. In Norse mythology one of the Ivthjar (wood giantesses). Sister of Freyja. She was skilled in genealogies and in the fates of giants and men. Freyja kindled a fire (flaming aurora of the morning) about Hyndla to gain from her the drink of remembrance (dew).

HYPAPANTE A festival in the Greek Church commemorating the meeting of the child Jesus and His mother with Simeon and Anna in the temple. Corresponds to Candlemas in the Western Church.

HYPASPIST In Greek antiquity armor or shield-bearer; one of the royal foot-guards of the Macedonian army.

HYPERBOREA In Greek mythology land in back of the North Wind. Land that is up, hence land to the north of beautiful gardens and eternal light, of joyousness and peace, of perpetual health, sunshine, and youth. Over it Apollo wandered after the death of Asclepius and shed tears of gold. A celestial paradise comparable with Avalon, Eden, and Hesperides; in attempts to identify it as an actual place, it is said to be the frigid arctic or a land of the Celts beyond the Caucasian or Rhiphaean mountains in which Boreas dwelled. Any people of the far north, such as the Eskimos, are now called Hyperborean, and Hyperborea is applied to the arctic or cold regions, rather than to regions of eternal spring. The name resolves into hy-pere (high power) + borea (Boreas or north wind).

HYPERION (1) A Greek Titan. Son of Uranus and Gaea; brother-mate of Thia by whom he was father of Eos (Dawn), Helios (Sun), and Selene (Moon). The name of his wife sometimes is given as Euryphaessa. Hyperion, whose name is said to signify height, passing over, or superiority, is a primitive aspect of the sun, and poets frequently use his name for the sun; he also is treated as a wanderer. He is portrayed as a superbly handsome man. (2) Seventh satellite of Saturn.

HYPERMNESTRA In Greek legend daughter of Danaus, wife of Lynceus. She was the only one of the fifty daughters of Danaus who failed to slay her husband on her bridal night; thus typifies a disobedient daughter; one whose love for her husband is greater than that for her father. See Danaides.

HYPERSTHENE In the language of gems: You are the sun of my life.

HYPHENATED AMERICAN An American citizen of alien origin whose legion is divided or whose loyalty is really to the land of his birth or forebears. Theodore Roosevelt popularized the expression.

HYPNUS (HYPNOS) Greek god of sleep. Son of Nyx and Erebus. With his twin brother Thanatos (death), he lived in the realm of shade. Father of Morpheus. He was universally loved as a benefactor of mankind, a bringer of rest and freedom from pain; whereas Thanatos was feared and hated. Represented with his eyes closed; usually he carries a poppy, and is attended by Morpheus and dreams. Analogue of the Roman Somnus.

HYPOCRISY Represented by an ape and a mask. In an Italian icon personified by a pale woman in linsey-woolsey; her head inclined to the left. A veil covers most of her forehead. She has the feet and legs of a wolf. She carries beads, a mass book, and drops a piece of money to a lame beggar.

HYPSIPYLE In Greek mythology queen of Lemnos a land of warrior women and only one man, Thaos, her father. When the women massacred all the men of the island she saved him by disguising him as Bacchus and setting him adrift on the sea in a hollow coffer. Later, the women weary of their single existence, enticed the sailors of the Argosy, who remained with them for a while. By Jason, Hypsipyle became the mother of a son named Euneus. In some accounts she is said to have borne twin sons. The massacre of the men probably is related to the massacre in fertility rites, or it may represent males who trespassed into a woman's realm during the celebration of mysteries as Pentheus was murdered by Agave.

HYP SISTARIAN One of a 4th century heretical Christian sect, which worshiped God only as the Most High and regarded fire and light as his special symbols.

HYP SISTOS (HYP SESTUS) Literally, the most high. Greek name for the Phoenician god Elioun. Culture hero slain in a conflict with wild beasts and deified as a sun or sky god. His death parallels that of Adonis by a boar. His name is akin to that of the Greek Hephaestus, god of fire and metal working.

HYRIEUS In Greek mythology father of Orion. Owner of a great treasure, he engaged Agamedes and Trophonius, brothers who were architects, to build a vault to hold his wealth. The brothers left a stone loose in order to enter the vault secretly at will and steal the gold. Hyrieus, astonished at the lessening of his wealth, set a snare in which Agamedes was caught. Trophonius cut off the head of his brother to keep Hyrieus from identifying the body. Agamedes typifies the pole or axis god trapped in the world of darkness, i.e. underworld vault which contains the wealth of the world. Compare Rhampsinitus.

HYROKKIN Norse giantess or hag who launched the ship Hringhorn on which the pyre of Balder (the sun) was set. Her steed was a wolf and her bridle was a snake. Hyrokkin, an aspect of Angerboda, was a winter storm goddess.

HYSMINAI Abstract Greek deity of battle. Descendant of Eris.

HYSSOP January 14 birthday flower. Symbolic of cleanliness, holiness, humility, purification. In Christian tradition typifies baptism, innocence regained, penitence, and purgation. Old Testament plant not clearly identified, used in ceremonial sprinklings in purificatory and sacrificial rites. It is contrasted with the lofty cedar, to which it apparently was related as the mistletoe is to the oak. The hyssop, the plant of the winter solstice, may have grown in the fissures of old cedars where leaf mould kept it alive, and, mythologically, the union of the cedar and the hyssop typifies the whole course of the sun from its birth at the winter solstice to its prime at the summer solstice and its decline back to the winter solstice.

HYSTERIA A form of religious ecstasy. The hysterics of the Pythonesses or priestesses of Apollo were regarded as the utterances of the sun deity. In Dionysian and other mysteries, the offering of human sacrifices frequently was accompanied by frenzied or hysterical dancing and singing.

HYUKI AND BIL In Norse mythology a small girl and boy who had been sent out at night by Vidfinner (Ivalde), their father, to draw song-mead from the mountain spring Byrger (the hidden). They filled their pail Saeger and were carrying it away on their pole Simul, when Mani, the moon god, seized them and carried them up to the moon. They are the spots seen at night, and Bil sometimes sprinkles her song-mead for the minstrels. In one legend Hyuki is attacked by his father, who wounds him in the thigh (see emasculation) and steals the song-mead Hyuki had brought up to the moon. Hyuki, also known as Gelder, Hengest (Saxon name), Ide, and Slagfin-Gjuki, was a favorite deity of skiers. This tale is told widely in Asia and Europe in a variety of forms. It is the source of Jack and Jill of nursery rhyme. Compare Garuda, Nini, Rona.

I

I Ninth in a class or order. Among gnostics the Ever-Existent, the Holy One, the Axis or Pole of the Universe, a male phallic symbol, a pillar or column. In metaphysics the spiritual personality; that which is aware of its own existence; the Ever-Existent. Occult significance: dominates sensitivity; its period is for nine years. Character traits: exaggerate the favors of others and depreciate those rendered; forgiving without forgetting; insight; prudent; quiet with strong imagination; reticent; understanding, uprightness. Physical weak spot: liver. Planetary or zodiacal correspondence: Leo. Symbolic correspondence: wealth. Tarot correspondence: Hermit. I echoes the mystic words I am and reflects the Latin word ego, which resolves into great O. Phonetically, it is eye, the orb or sun. I and J formerly were identical and only separated in recent times.

Celtic death letter. In Christian tradition stands for Iesus (Jesus). Hebrew cabalists character traits are: cautious, prudent, sincere. In low form: fearful, guileful. In Roman numeral notation, one. If repeated twice, as II = 2; if three times = 3. Before V, X, etc., signifies minus; if after signifies plus. Parallels the Anglo-Saxon ic, the Celtic idho (yew), Danish and Swedish jag or jeg, Dutch and Old English ik, the Egyptian hieroglyph of parallels, French je, German ich, Greek iota, Hebrew yod (hand), Icelandic ek, Lithuanian asz. (See Word roots, Alphabet Affiliations, I - O).

IA (IO) Name root, pointing to the violet tints of morning, as Iamus, Iasion, Iokaste, Iole, Iona.

IACCHUS (IAKCHOS) Mystic name of Bacchus used in Eleusinian Mysteries. Also the festal song in his honor. The name resolves into Iak or Y-ak (Great Ghost, Spirit or Breath) + chos (goose).

IACHIMO In Shakespear's Cymbeline, an Italian libertine.

IAGO (1) Masculine name; Spanish form of John. (2) In Shakespear's Othello, a scheming perfidious villain, whose treachery causes Othello, in a jealous rage, to murder his wife, Desdemona.

IAH (JAH) A contracted form of Jehovah, Hebrew God. Found in hallelujah, Hezekiah, Jeremiah, Keziah, Obadiah, Uriah, Zedekiah, etc.

IAHU Egyptian title meaning exalted dove, and in early mythology applied to Set, later a title of Horus; also a name for Isis as dove and moon goddess. Akin to Elath-Iahu, Iacchus and to Iahu-Bel (Canaanite Bel or Jehovah).

IAKIM British Columbia Indian sea monster.

IALMENUS In Greek mythology son of Ares fighting for the Greeks in the Trojan War.

IAM In the cabala, The Being; Eheieh (existence); the First Ancient; God in connection with the wonders of the ten plagues.

IAMBE In Greek mythology an old maid-servant in the employ of Celeus and Metaneira who, by playful jests, eased Demeter's sorrow over the loss of Persephone.

IAMUS In Greek mythology son of Apollo and Evadne, born on the banks of the Alpheius. Fearing the wrath of her father, Evadne abandoned her son on a bed of violets, where he was nurtured by two grey-eyed snakes (earth's wisdom) until he was found by his grandfather, who recognized the marvelous qualities of the child by the wondrous light which surrounded him. Iamus personified the dawn sky. Apollo had touched his ears, and so he understood the voices of birds, from the serpents and from the waters of the Alpheius, he gained a knowledge of things hidden from the minds of men, and he became famous as a seer, and his descendants, the Iamidae, became the famous prophets of Olympia.

IAN Masculine name, Scotch form of John.

IANTHE Feminine name from the Greek, meaning violet and flower.

IAO (IAΩ) (1) Gnostic Ineffable Name; Jehovah, the Supreme Spirit, i.e., Ever-Existent Ao. Worn as an amulet. Cognate Aos, Jao, Tao. (2) Ionian four-fold transcendent deity; in winter, Hades; in spring, Zeus; in summer, Helios; in autumn, Bacchus (Iacchus or Iao). By Orphics known as the four-eyed Phanes (from phaino, i. e., I appear), first born of the gods. The four eyes probably typify the four directions.

IAPETUS Literally, intention. In Greek mythology son of Uranus and Gaea, brother of Themis, whose husband he sometimes is said to be. The goddess Asia is also mentioned as his wife, as is Clymene. His sons are Atlas, Epimetheus, Menoetius and Prometheus. He is said to have been the creator of man. In another account Epimetheus and Prometheus formed man from clay. Iapetus was an antagonist of Zeus, and his antagonism culminated in Prometheus's championship of mankind. Iapetus is thought to be identical with Japhet of the Bible. The human race is sometimes called genus Iapeti, the progeny of Iapetus.

IARNVID Literally, Ironwood. Norse black forest of iron trees on the world's edge. Inhabited by witches. Abode of Gulveig-Hoder.

IASION (IASIUS, IASUS) In Greek mythology son of Zeus and Electra, a mortal. Brother of Dardanos. Beloved of Demeter, he lay with her in a thrice-plowed field and, for his presumption, Zeus struck him dead by a thunderbolt. Plutus was born of the union. Possibly originally a deity or hero of agriculture, who was sacrificed at the end of his reign in the manner of Adonis or Tammuz. The myth probably is derived from a ritual symbolizing the fertilization of the fields.

IAW Gnostic God, Jehovah. Represents the creative principle.

Worn as a talisman for protection, understanding, vitality. Identical with Iao.

IBERIA A name for Spain. In Greek antiquity, when the known world extended beyond Avernus (Italy), Iberia was the land where the light of day was extinguished; the site of Hades. Ancient Celts believed their ancestors, the Milesians, came from Iberia.

IBEX See goat for symbolism. In heraldry an antelope depicted with serrated horns projecting straight out from the forehead; used as a charge.

IBIS Christian symbol of carnal desire, filth, laziness. In Egypt symbolized dawn or morning because, standing in the water, it was the first to welcome Dawn as she rose in the east. Revered as a drinker of pure water and a destroyer of venomous serpents. It represented aspiration and perseverance, and was an emblem of Thoth. Called Techu, which was a name of Thoth. In European zodiacs the bird governing Aquarius. In Greece sacred to Hermes.

Ibis-faced ape. The moon-faced Thoth, god of learning and writing, reformer and regenerator, as he sits in the judgment scene.

IBN Arabic prefix meaning son. It corresponds to the Gaelic mac (son), Hebrew ben (son), and Irish O' (son of).

IBRAHAM Moslem equivalent of Abraham.

IBUKIDO NUSHI Shinto evil deity. Master of Spurting-out-place; deity who spurts offenses into nether regions. The heavenly offenses he spurts out are the destruction of rice fields, water courses, etc.; the earthly offenses he spurts out are the calamities from creeping things, the cutting up of dead or living bodies, incest, leprosy, etc. Compare Haya-Sasura-hime.

IC Monogram of Iesus Christos (Jesus Christ).

ICARIUS (IKARIOS) An Athenian who received Dionysus hospitably and to whom the god taught the cultivation of the vine. Icarus, wishing to bestow a boon upon men, gave a band of shepherds some wine. They drank too freely and became drunk. Believing they had been poisoned they killed Icarus and buried his body under a tree. Erigone, daughter of Icarus, searching for her father, was led to the spot by the howling of his dog, Maera. When she discovered the body she hung herself for grief. Icarus was placed in the sky as the constellation Bootes or the star Arcturus in Bootes, Erigone as the constellation Virgo, and Maera as the star Procyon, which rises in July, shortly before the dog-star. Probably an agricultural deity.

ICARUS In Greek mythology son of Daedalus, who fashioned wings from wax that both might escape from Crete. Although warned by his father that the wax would melt, he soared close to the sun; the wings fell off and he was drowned. Thus one who soars too high and gets burned. Icarus may typify one who acted as a surrogate, which see. Resembles Etana.

Icarian. Name given to the sea into which Icarus fell. When used as an adjective, icarian means high flying, presumptuous, rash, venturesome.

ICCHA-SAKTI Hindu sakti

pregnant with desire for manifestation. Symbolized by a double curved line (elephant goad).

ICE Death, winter. Also symbolic of the abstract principles of mathematics or science. Dream significance; ambushes, dangers.
Iceman. Death.

ICELAND MOSS Symbolic of health.

ICELOS In Greek mythology son of Somnus. Personification of dreams that appear real. With Phantasos and Phoboter an attendant of Morpheus.

ICENI Ancient British tribe to whom the boar was sacred.

ICE PLANT January 6 birthday flower symbolizing an old beau, frigidity, rejected.

ICHABOD (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning glory has departed; where is the glory? (2) In the Bible, the grandson of Eli and the son of Phinehas. The day he was born they both died as well as his mother. Probably an early Semitic sun god.

Ichabod Crane. In Washington Irving's Sleepy Hollow, a typical yokel. A gullible schoolmaster, he is the suitor of Katrina Van Tassel, until his rival, disguised as a headless horseman, frightens him away from the community. The headless horseman was probably inspired by the Hindu Dund or the Irish Dulachan, spirits of the wind.

ICHEIRI Carib household gods, kindly and familiar intermediaries between man below and heaven above. Resemble the Roman lares and penates.

ICHI-NO-MIYA Shinto temples of the first grade, whose deities are spirits of great daimyo, nobles, princes; or deities of elemental forces, fire, sea, wind; or clam gods, gods of destiny, harvests, longevity.

ICHOR In Greek mythology the ethereal fluid which supposedly flowed, instead of blood, in the veins of the gods. It never engendered disease and, when shed, had the power of producing new life. In medical lore the acrid fluid discharged from ulcers or wounds.

ICHTHUS (IKHTHIS) Greek word for fish, which resolves into ik-theos, i.e., great god. Because the letters of the word form the notarikon of the Greek phrase Iesous CHristos THEou Uios Soter (Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior), it became a talisman of early Christians and, with the fish form, a symbol to indicate the owner was a Christian. The fish also symbolizes Christ. Ichthus is used as a password of initiates in secret Christian societies.

ICON In the Eastern Church, an illustration, mosaic, etc., representing Christ, the Virgin Mary, some martyr, or saint, worshiped by incense, kissing, lights, etc. From the word developed the word iconoclast, i.e. image breaker; one hostile to image worship, especially one of a group of 8th century reformers of the Greek Church.

ICONA Mexican Indian great father. A word akin to cone and icon.

ICOSAHEDRON Symbolic of water.

ICXC Early and medieval monogram of Iesous Christos (Jesus Christ). From the Greek letters iota-sigma-chi-sigma.

IDA (1) Feminine name from the Germanic meaning labor, and from Old Teutonic, meaning happy. (2) An ancient mountain in Crete connected with the worship of Zeus. Sometimes personified as a great Earth-Mother, who nourished or nursed Zeus. (3) Name of a sacred mountain in Asia Minor. Scene of the judgment of Paris, the rape of Ganymede, and the rites of the cult of Cybele. (4) In Hindu mythology the universal or Great-Mother formed by Manu, the thinker, out of the waters which were impregnated by the heavenly seed. She became the wife of Dyaus.

IDAEAN MOTHER (1) Rhea, mother of Zeus, who haunted the uplands of the Cretan Mount Ida accompanied by a train of Dactyli. (2) Cybele, who had a temple on Mount Ida in Asia Minor. She was accompanied by the Corybantes.

IDAHO Its emblem, the syringa; its motto, Esto Perpeius; its nickname: Gem.

IDAKERU Japanese deity, son of Susa-no-wo; introducer of the seeds of plants and trees.

IDALAH Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning memorial of God.

IDALIA A name of Aphrodite from Idalium, a town in Cyprus, where she was worshiped.

IDAS Greek light hero and demi-god. Son of Alphareus. He abducted the nymph Marpessa, wooed by Apollo. In the conflict that followed Zeus allowed Marpessa her choice. Fearful that Apollo would desert her when she grew old, she chose Idas, who would grow old with her. He participated in the Argonaut expedition and, with his twin brother Lynceus, in the Calydonian boar hunt. Idas and Lynceus quarreled with their cousins, Castor and Pollux. Idas killed Castor; whereupon Pollux slew Lynceus. Idas was killed by Zeus. Idas and Lynceus typify devoted brothers, and are the Messenian doubles of the Dioscuri. The battle typifies the conflict between various stages of light and darkness.

IDAVOLD (IDAVOLIR, IDAVOLL, ITHAVALL, ITHAVOLL) Literally, Plains of Ida. Originally the site of Asgard, location of the throne of Odin; site of Gladshain, temple of the gods, and of Vingolf, mansion of the goddesses. After Ragnarok the gods held a council of justice on Idavold.

IDDAHEDU In Babylonian mythology ship of Nabu, god of wisdom.

IDDAWC In Arthurian legend owner of a horse which, on exhaling, blows into the distance those he pursues, and which, on respiring, draws them back into his nostrils. Arthur sent him to reason with Mordred; instead of delivering the gracious words Arthur had sent, he incited Mordred against Arthur. Iddawc personifies an aspect of storm or wind.

IDEA In an Italian icon personified by a beautiful woman walking on clouds. Her nakedness is covered only by a white veil. A flame is on her head, which is circled by a gold band set with jewels. She holds the infant nature in her arms and give it her breast, as she points below.

IDEALS Represented by stars.

IDENTIFICATION MOTIF Deities, demi-gods, heroines and heroes, long lost or separated from their families or friends, are recognized by an article, implement, piece of jewelry or by a scar. The legendary Norse king Hadding, when wounded, was nursed by Ragnhild, who left a ring in his wound. At a later time, when her father instructed her to choose a husband from an assembly of suitors, she felt their bodies, and selected Hadding by means of the ring. The divinity of abandoned children is made known by the glow that lights up their bodies.

IDES In Old Roman calendars, the 15th day of March, May, July and October; in other months the 13th day. It always was the 8th day after the nones; intermediary days between the nones and ides were reckoned backward from the ides.

Ides of March. A day of certain danger or impending disaster; alluding to the warning Julius Caesar had received from a soothsayer to beware of the ides of March. Caesar was killed according to prophecy.

IDGAH Literally, place of festival. A section, outside a city, set apart by the Moslems for prayer on the feast of Sacrifice, and for the feast of the breaking of the fast after Ramadan.

IDIOT For general symbolism, see crazy, fool, jester. Dream significance: upset.

IDIPTU Babylonian storm deity. Name signifies whirlwind.

IDISI Norse female spirits or supernatural women. A name probably derived from Disir, which included the Norns and the Valkyries. In battles they bound (paralyzed) with fetters or loosened fetters on prisoners of war, according to whether they favored them or regarded them as foes.

IDLENESS In an Italian icon personified by a hag in rags, sitting in careless posture on a stone, her head bound in black cloth, inclined and supported by her left hand which rests on her left knee. A torpedo fish is also on her knee. Her right elbow rests on her right leg. Her motto, "Torpet iners," shows sloth and aversion to labor.

IDMON Son of Apollo. A seer; an Argonaut.

IDOCRASE Gem symbolizing justice.

IDOHO Primeval creator god of Society Islands.

IDOL (1) Occultist Creator, a material name for God. (2) Object to which is ascribed consciousness or mental powers. An image of a divinity or an object used as a medium of worship. Articles worshiped as idols range from monuments, portraits and sculpture to small coins and neilli carried by peasants. Some nations of antiquity worshiped a rough stone. Jews of antiquity regarded idol worship as Paganism. The dream significance of an idol is bad luck. Compare icon, image.

Idolatry. Represented by a dragon, golden calf or figure typifying a deity. In an Italian icon personified by a blind woman on her knees offering incense to the statue of a bull.

IDOMENEAN According to mystics a race with but one sense, that of sight, and which conceived space as having but two dimensions.

IDOMENEUS In Greek mythology king of Crete and one of the major chiefs of the Greek army in the Trojan War. With the destruction of Troy he made a vow to sacrifice whomever he first encountered, if the gods provided him with a safe return to his home. He first came upon his son and, to fulfill his vow, sacrificed him. A plague followed, and he was banished from Crete as a murderer. Compare Iphigenia, Jephthah.

IDRIS Welsh giant; a prince.

IDUN (IDHUNN, IDUNA, IDUNNA, ITHUN, Y'DUN) In Norse mythology daughter of the dwarf Svald and Sol, wife of Bragi. Keeper of the golden apples, which preserved the youth of the gods. Her brother, the giant Thjasse-Volund, aided by Loki, abducted her from Asaheim to Jotunheim. To carry her Loki, who had taken the form of a falcon, transformed her into a nut. With her departure, the trees shed frozen tears and the gods, unable to obtain the golden apples, felt old age approaching, and demanded her return. Loki finally yielded to their demands and brought her back in the form of a quail. This is a fertility or rebirth myth, in which Idun personifies the year between March and September, when the sun is north of the equator. When the sun descends below the equator, she is carried off to the frost-giants in the form of a nut, an autumn fruit; she returns in the form of a quail, the first bird of spring. Her apples are the fruit of eternal youth, i.e.

eternal growth and rejuvenation. She resembles Persephone and the daughters of Atlas.

IDURMER (ILUMER, ILUWIR) Semitic god of rain and thunder. Identical with Adad.

IDZUMO (IZUMO) Japanese realm of the gods ruled by Ohokuni-nushi. Early name for Japan; later a shrine to which those desiring an auspicious marriage made pilgrimages. It probably signifies sacred quarter; Iz (Idz) corresponds to Is (or Ish), which means light.

IELLA Same as Attabeira, which see.

IFING Norse river which never freezes, and which separates the realms of giants and gods.

IGAL In the Old Testament: (1) The faithless spy of the tribe of Issachar; (2) One of David's mighty men.

IGART BAT MAHLAT In Jewish folklore a queen of demons who rides in her chariot followed by a train of eighteen myriads of demons.

IGDRASIL See Yggdrasil.

IGEAL Hebrew masculine name meaning deliverer.

IGERNA (IGERNE, IGRAINE, YGERNE) In Arthurian legend wife of Gorlois with whom Uther Pendragon was in love. By Uther, Igerna became the mother of Anne and King Arthur. See Uther Pendragon.

IGIGI Assyro-Babylonian group of cruel celestial spirits led by the god Anu. In incantations associated with the anunaki. Probable source of the conception of angels.

IGNARO In Spenser's Faerie Queene personification of ignorance. He walks one way and looks another, because ignorance is always "wrong-headed."

IGNATIUS (IGNACE) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning ardent, fiery.

IGNIS FATUUS Literally, foolish fire. Also known as fair maid of Ireland, friar's lanthorn, Jack-o'-lantern, spunkie, walking fire, will-o'-the-wisp. It is a phosphorescent light, probably caused by spontaneous combustion of gas from decaying animals, seen above the ground in marshy places, and deluding those who try to follow it; thus, an aim, hope or thing that misleads, or any Utopian scheme that is utterly impracticable.

IGNOBILITY In an Italian icon personified by a woman in a short dress, her hair disheveled to denote low thoughts. She has the ears of an ass and an owl sits on her head. The owl has no known pedigree and therefore lacks nobility. She sweeps with a broom.

IGNORANCE Represented by a dragon, a dunce-cap, and a man with an ass's head orating. In Buddhism, the basic cause of all pain and suffering.

IGUANA Central American lizard-god, provider of food and nourishment.

IHAI Japanese Buddhist soul-commemoration. Mortuary tablets or list of household dead placed in a Butsudan (household shrine). Compare Mitama-shiro.

IHA-NAGA-HIME (IWA-NAGA-HIME) Japanese goddess. Because she was ugly, Ninigi-nomikoto refused to have her as his wife; in revenge she brought about death for mankind. Her name signifies Rock-long-princess and her descendants lived as long as a rock. Sister of Ko-no-hana-sakya-hime.

IHA-NO-HIME Japanese goddess. Name meaning Rock-princess, indicative of prosperity and long life. Wife of Nintoku. Noted for her jealousy.

I-HE-WEI Taoist abstract self-created trinity. A name related to Hebrew Yahweh.

IHI-YORI-HIKO Japanese fertility deity; one of the four faces of Futa-na Island. Name signifying Prince-Good-Boiled-Rice.

IHOH Cabalistic name for the Deity, the absolute creator and destroyer, author and regulator of motion and time, male and female principle. Related to Io.

IHRAM White cotton dress, consisting of two cloths, one worn around the waist, the other over the left shoulder, worn by Moslem pilgrims to Mecca. Ihram is also applied to the state of the pilgrims after assuming the costume and to the regulations binding the pilgrims.

IHS Monogram signifying IHSOUS, i. e. Jesus. Originally a corruption of the Greek IHΞ (for IHΞΟΥΞ). Used as a symbol during the middle ages, and appears in the iconography of 15th century saints. This symbol, as well as JHS, in error has been regarded an abbreviation of Iesus Hominum Salvator (Jesus, Savior of Men) and of

In hac [cruce] salus (in this [cross] safety). IHS is a mystic surname of Bacchus: I(ota) = Iacchus; H(eta) = Helios, the sun; Ξ (sigma) = son or incarnation of the sun.

IHVH Jehovah, the divine name.

IJA-KYL In Yakut belief the life of the shaman depends on the life of this spirit animal, which appears to the shaman three times, viz., at his call to office, in the middle of his shaman life, and immediately before death, when the spirit animal also dies. The animal is the shaman's means of conveyance to the other world and is taboo to the clan of the shaman.

IKE-NO-NUSHI Shinto deity of ponds.

IKHNATON See Akhenaten.

IKKAKU SENNIN Japanese fallen deity. Miracle performer who lost his supernatural powers because he yielded to human passion by succumbing to the beauty of a woman and drinking the wine she offered. Name signifying one-horned. Resembles Satan.

IKU-GUHI-NO-KAMI Japanese life-integrating deity. Younger sister and wife of Tsunu-guhi-no-kami (Germ-integrating deity). One of the Seven Divine Generations; deities born without parents.

IKU-TAMA-YORI-HIME Japanese Life-jewel-good-princess. Nightly she was visited by a handsome youth who disappeared through the keyhole. One night she pierced his garment with a needle which contained three strands of thread and in this manner discovered that he returned to his shrine on Mount Miwa (three threads). From this union a son, Oho-tata-ne-ko, ancestor of the Dukes of Miwa and Kamo, was born. Resembles Danae.

IL (ILU) (1) Equivalent of El, ancient Semitic title for god. (2) South Arabian moon god. Name corresponding to Allah, El or Elohim. Identical with Wadd, Warah. Also Ilah, Ilmu-gah.

ILA (IDA, IRA) Vedic sacrificial goddess. Daughter of Manu, with whom she recreated the world after the deluge; she also passes as the child of Mitra and Varuna. Personification of the sacrificial food in the Vedic offering, which consists of butter and milk. She is known as butter-handed and butter-footed.

ILAMATECUTLI Literally, old goddess or old mother. Aztec mother of the gods; ruler of the thirteenth hour of the day. An aspect of Ciuateotl. Sometimes portrayed as the earth-toad Tlaltecutli swallowing the stone knife.

ILANCUEITL Literally, old skirt or old woman. In Aztec mythology first wife of Iztac Mixcoatl. An earth goddess.

ILAT (ALILAT, ALLAT, HAL-LAT) Early Arabian mother goddess; in North Arabia, an earth goddess; in South Arabia, a sun goddess. Mother of the gods, mate of Il. Identified with Astarte.

ILBHREACH Irish deity, son of Manannan; probably a fertility god.

ILDICO (HILDA) A legendary Teutonic princess said to have killed Attila on the night of their marriage. Heroine of a time myth.

ILEX The holly-oak symbolizing aspiration and eternal life. Among early Britons it typified the Great Spirit. In Christianity symbolic of the Passion of Christ. An attribute of Saints Jerome and John the Baptist.

ILI-ABRAT (ILABRAT) Babylonian chief messenger of Anu, a winged angel. Carries a staff or wand in his right hand. Identical with Ninsubur and with Pappukkal.

ILIAD The most celebrated epic poem extant. It is in twenty-four books, identified with the twenty-four hours of the day, and describes the siege of Ilium (Troy). While generally ascribed to Homer, it is believed to be the work of several poets. The work deals with the conflicts of nature, the constant battle of drought and rain, growth and decay, light and darkness, storm and sunshine, summer and winter. Practically every calamity known to man is treated, all the horrors of war, forced concubinage on captive women, the loss of young men to their families, pestilence, and probably every range of human character is revealed, courage, cowardice, good humor, hate, integrity, intelligence, madness, meanness, petulance, self-interest, self-sacrifice, stupidity, as well as hate for war and a desire to be done with it.

ILITHYIAE Greek goddess who presided over childbirth, a midwife. An attendant of Hera, and later confounded with Hera. She aided Leto, when Hera, in jealousy, caused the birth of Apollo and Artemis to be delayed. Her emblem is a torch. Compares with the Roman Lucina.

ILJUM (ILION) Another name for Troy.

ILKA Feminine name from the Scotch, meaning each and every one.

ILLAHUN Name of one of the Egyptian pyramids, which yields lord-everlasting-immutable-one.

ILLANN Literally, the fair. In the second or heroic cycle of Irish legend son of Fergus. A light hero.

ILLA TICCI Epithet of Viaracocha, Peruvian omnipresent god.

ILLEGITIMACY In heraldry the bar sinister sometimes is taken to mean illegitimacy. See bar sinister, bend sinister.

ILL-HEALTH When a result of improper living, typifies injustice. In modern literature sometimes associated with the aesthetic or artist, the individual in conflict with his society or withdrawn from his society, in opposition to the practical (healthy) individual who adjusts to or is in harmony with the conventions of his society. Hans Castorp, in the Magic Mountain by Thomas Mann, is such a character. Dream significance: melancholy, sorrow.

ILLINOIAN Third of the North American glacial periods.

ILLINOIS Its emblem is the wood violet; its motto: State sovereignty, National union; its nickname: prairie; nickname of its natives: sucker.

ILL-OMEN Typified by a raven or a vulture.

ILMARINEN (ILEM, ILMA, INMAR, ISMARONEN, JEN, JUMLA, SANGKE) Finno-Ugric sky god. Son of Ilmatar. His image is unknown. When sacrificing to him his worshipers faced the sun. Under the name Ilmaris worshiped as a wind god. He forged the heavens of blue steel and made the magic Sampo and other talismans. He formed one of his wives out of gold and silver and breathed life into her, but she was so cold, whatever came near her froze. He practiced agriculture, had green pastures, excellent cattle, and bees. Some of his train of deities had wings. He conquered the terrible fresh-water monster, a devouring pike. In Christian times his wife Kildisin was merged into Virgin Mary. He resembles Jehovah and Zeus.

ILMATAR Literally, daughter of the air. Finnish celestial virgin, daughter of Ilma. Creatrix of the universe. She descended to embrace the surface of the primeval sea and was tossed about by the waves for seven hundred years; then she shaped the earth, sun, moon and vault of heaven from the six golden eggs and one iron egg laid by the celestial duck. Her sons were Ilmarinen, Lemminkainen and Wainamoinen, to whom she gave birth after being miraculously impregnated by wind when air, light and water were the only primeval materials. Ilmatar resolves into El-mater, i.e. God-mother. The legend of the eggs reappears in the fairytale The Ugly Duckling.

ILMUQAH Principal deity of the Sabaeen pantheon. A moon deity. Identical with Il.

ILSAN THE MONK In the medieval epic, Rose Garden at Worms, Ilsan is a blustering friar who gathers fifty-two garlands in Kriemhild's Rosegarten and presses the thorns of his garlands into the flesh of his fellow friars until they consent to pray to God for the forgiveness of his sins. Also known as Monte Ilisan.

ILU The one-great-god of ancient Assyria.

ILU LIMNU Assyrian evil god; a ghost.

ILUS (ILOS) In Greek mythology, descendant of Zeus and Electra, son of Tros, brother of Ganymede, father of Laomedon, grandfather of Priam. Founder of Ilium or Troy. A deity of darkness.

ILU-TASHMIT Designation of Nebo as god of revelations.

IMAGE In primitive societies worshiped as the deity or the body or house in which a deity resides. Ancients frequently believed their national power resided in a god's image. For this reason, the conquerer would carry off the images of the vanquished. In fertility rites straw figures on a bonfire represented a fertility god or an offering to a god, and in resurrection rites represented the old king (autumn sun) losing his old age (life) and in exchange receiving rebirth. Injury to an enemy's image caused the foe himself to feel pain. Compare shadow. Image, in the Old Testament, usually applied to false gods, graven, painted, etc.

Image of mother and child. Universally a symbol of fertility, typifying the virgin mother and divine child. The mother is usually an earth or moon goddess or the planet Venus; the child usually grows into the youth who is sacrificed for the benefit of mankind, killed at the harvest festival to assure the return of verdure in the spring.

IMAM Literally, guide or teacher. A title of the Sultan as spiritual successor of Mohammed. The title was conferred on Ali, Mohammed's adopted son, and his ten successors. Mahdi has the title. In Moslem mosques, the officer who receives the prayers and directs the devotions of the faithful is called imam. In Turkey an imam conducts the burial, circumcision and marriage ceremonies.

Imam Mahdi. The expected Messiah of the Moslems. He will signal the last hour, the end of time, by chanting the Adzan in so mighty a voice, the sound will roll around the world.

IMANA Warundi (African) Supreme Being, ancestor of the race; chief of ancestral spirits.

IMDER In Norse mythology daughter of Aegir and Ran. One of the fire maids who set off sparks of fire from the World Mill; also one of the Vana-mothers of Helmdal. A personification of waves. See Vana-mothers.

IMGIG Sumerian chaos and storm demon. Lion-headed eagle, foe of the sun, whence it became a symbol of the sun. Identical with Zu. Also associated with the constellation Pegasus.

IMHOTEP (IEMHETEP, IMHETEP) Wisest man of his age. Counselor to King Zoser of first Memphite dynasty, designer and probable builder of Zoser's pyramid, the first constructed in Egypt and known as the step pyramid of Sakkara. He was skilled in medicine and priestly magic and, in Ptolemaic times, deified as god of medicine and science, patron of builders and craftsmen.

Said to be the son of Ptah and Sekhet and, with these two, formed the triad of Memphis. Later identified with Thoth as scribe. His name means one who comes in peace. By ancient Greeks called Imuthes and identified with Asclepius.

IMITATION In an Italian icon personified by a woman with pencils in her right hand, a mask in her left, and an ape at her feet.

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION Scarcely a nation is without the tradition of the existence of a savior god born to an immaculate virgin, and frequently the name of the mother is related to the name Maria or one equivalent, pointing to the sea (mare). Adonis was born of the virgin Myrrha; Buddha was born of Maya; Christ of Mary; Hermes of Maia. The virgin mother of the Siamese Savior was Maya Maria. According to Harold Bayley, "The immaculate purity of the various Mother-Marys is explained by the mystic tenet that Spirit in its element was like water, essentially pure, and that sin and materialism, being merely foreign bodies, would in the course of time settle into sediment and leave the Spirit in its pure pristine beauty." In the Roman Catholic Church immaculate conception is the immunity from original sin, divinely granted to the Virgin Mary. See virgin mother.

IMMANUEL Same as Emmanuel, which see. Cognate with Immanuence.

IMMANUENCE An alternate name of Lud. Akin to Emmanuel and to immense.

IMMORTALITY Represented

by acacia, cypress, emerald, evergreens, fir, green color, lotus, palm, peacock, phoenix, pine, scarabaeus, serpent, stork, tortoise.

Eight Immortals. See Pan Hsien.

IMMOVABLE Name of one of the Gnostic Aeons.

IMOGEN (IMOGENE) Feminine name; origin and meaning uncertain. It probably first appears in Shakespeare's Cymbeline, where Imogen is a model of conjugal fidelity.

IMP An evil spirit of low rank; a puny, small, contemptible supernatural being; a small or young demon; a hobgoblin. Imp is applied to a mischievous person, especially a child; an urchin.

Imp of Lincoln. A small grotesque carving in the chancel of Lincoln Cathedral, England. It supposedly is a memorial of a visit to the cathedral by the devil. Also known as Lincoln devil.

IMPERIAL AUTHORITY Represented by the fasces, sword. Imperial Dignity. Represented by crown, robe, scepter, throne. In China, typified by the color yellow; in Japan by the phoenix.

IMPLEMENTS OF FREEMASONRY Cement typifies the binding of masons in a common fraternity; square, level and plumb represents the degree of fellow crafts; trowel, the degree of master mason; twenty-four inch gage and gavel, degree of entered apprentice.

IMPOSSIBILITIES MOTIF In folklore men giving birth to babies, metal-gnawing animals, or other impossible feats, usually are used to illustrate to a tyrant the impossibility of complying with his commands or to expose the cruelty of a tyrant in demanding the fulfilment of an impossible or superhuman task, thus the impossibilities motif is an exposition of a ruler's injustice.

IMRAM In the Koran, father of Virgin Mary.

IN Female principle of Japanese mythology. The passive principle, ruler of the north. Opposite of Yo, the male principle. Analogue of the Chinese Yin, Sanscrit Yoni.

INA (HINA) Polynesian maid who was seduced by Tuna, an eel, who turned out to be a beautiful youth in disguise. He finally instructed her to cut off his head and bury it. From it the coco-nut tree sprang and the face of Tuna, who sacrificed himself for the benefit of mankind, can be seen on the husked nuts of the fruit. The story typifies a beauty and the beast incident. The burial of his head resembles that of other heroes, such as Arthur and Bran. The sacrifice of Ina resembles that of fertility heroes, such as Adonis and Tammuz, who give their lives to assure rebirth.

IN-AB In Babylonian-Sumerian mythology pilot of Ea's ship.

INACHUS Greek river god who became the first king of Argos; father of Io. Also the name of the river in which Pallas-Athene bathed each year to renew her virginity. See Canathus.

INADA-HIME Shinto goddess of love; name signifying Lady-of-the-Eightfold-Hedge.

INANNA Sumerian goddess of war. Wife of Dumuzi, whom she resurrected each year; thus mother-goddess resembling Ish-tar.

INAPERTWA Australian rudimentary human beings, incomplete men who lived along the sea-shore in the form of a round mass in which the outline of the various parts of the body might be seen vaguely in outline. Two sky beings came to earth with stone knives and chiseled men and women from the inapertwa.

INARI-M'YOJIM Japanese goddess of rice. Invoked for prosperity, good fortune in love and long life. Her messenger is a fox. Sometimes worshiped as a male deity. Also known as Uka-no-kami.

INCA King or royal prince of ancient Peruvians; later the name was applied to the ancient tribe.

INCENSE Adoration, confession, deity offering, flattery, homage, libation, propitiation, protection, purification, act of prayer, caster of spells in divination and prophecy, fire worship. In Freemasonry signifies a grateful and pious heart. Compare funeral fire. In China scholarship. Among ancient Hebrews typified atonement, authority, favor, power. To offer incense, known also as frankincense, was an office peculiar to the priests, for which purpose they entered into the holy apartment of the temple each morning and evening. Its use for other than sacred purposes was forbidden, and the Levites were not permitted to touch the censers. On Yom Kippur the high priest burned incense as he entered the Holy of Holies, and the smoke prevented his looking with too much curiosity on the ark and the mercy seat; interpreted to mean a cloud protected the rabbi in the inner room against the Shekinah. To see the Shekinah meant death. Also interpreted to be the manifest Shekinah, hence God, as well as the protecting agent. Thus the expression, to hate a thing as the devil hates incense.

Incense Burner or Pot. Symbolism identical to that of incense. Buddhist ritual object. Kept burning as a symbol of everlasting fire. See lamp. In China called ting; symbolic of ancestral worship.

Incense Smoke. Believed to carry prayers or sacrifices to the sky, drive out demons and evil spirits, and to aid the soul in its last flight.

INCEST Source of the human race. A theme world-wide in cosmogonic tales. The primeval mother marries her son, to whom she gave birth as a virgin without cohabitation, or the primordial man marries the daughter he had fashioned, to become the procreator of the human race and sometimes of the animal world. Sometimes a primordial pair, brother (sky) and sister (earth) are the progenitors of the human race. Heroes frequently are born of incestuous relations.

Incest of brother and sister. In some societies, the marriage of a brother and sister is regarded as calamitous; in others, as in ancient Egypt, a marriage of royalty.

Incest of mother and son. A frequent folklore theme typifying the marriage of the present or new day or year to the past or old day or year. The son, the new day, who marries his mother, as in the Oedipus story, meets disaster, i.e. he suffers the ravages of time.

INCONSTANCY In an Italian icon personified by a woman in blue walking on a crab, which is like the Cancer of the zodiac. She holds a crescent moon.

INCORRUPTIBLE THINGS According to Dante those things which are acted upon by the secondary influences of the stars.

INCROYABLE During the French Directorate a member of the Royalist party, who affected a fantastic extravagance in language, in which "r" was dropped from speech, and absurd foppery in dress, imitating the singer Garat, who was the rage at the time. The name was a pun on one of their catch words, "C'est incroyable ma paole d'honneur (Incredible! On my honor!)."

INCUBUS The nightmare or form in which it appears; in the middle ages, a demon which supposedly cohabited with sleeping women, who thus became an instrument of virgin birth. The incubus was thought to be a male spirit of the air, not completely evil, but far from angelic. In Taino Indian tradition form in which the soul of the dead returns to earth; it possessed all bodily members except a navel. Incubus is from the Latin incubare, to lie on.

INDECH Celtic Formorian king who aided Bres in his war against the Tuatha De Danann. Son of Domnu. Killed in single combat with Ogma at the battle of Mag Tured. Deity of darkness.

INDIA Represented by an elephant, red lotus, silver star in the center of a blazing sun.

INDIAN A constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Indus. American Indian. Personifies cunning, woodcraft, sagacity.

Apache Indian. Emblem of the state of Arizona.

Indian corn. Maize, especially the variety used as food for animals and for making meal, as distinguished from sweet corn, which is eaten as a vegetable.

Indian cress. Plant symbolizing resignation.

Indian file. Single file. On expeditions the one behind carefully stepped into the footprint of the one before, the last man obliterated the track, to keep an enemy from tracing the track or estimating the number of the invaders.

Indian giver. One who offers a gift with the expectation of one in return or who expects the gift made to be returned.

Indian paintbrush. Plant symbolizing the state of Wyoming.

Indian plumb. Privation.

Indian summer. Season of warm weather occurring after an early frost. Usually early in October and often the finest and mildest part of the whole year in North America. So called because Indians harvested their corn during this season.

Sioux Indian. Typifies North Dakota.

INDIANA Flower; carnation; nickname Hoosier.

INDIGO Symbolic of evil and night. Ancient astrologists associated with the planet Saturn; modern astrologists associate with the planet Jupiter. Its corresponding musical tone is A natural.

INDOCILITY In an Italian icon personified by a woman of ruddy complexion lying on the ground holding an ass by the bridle. The elbow of her other arm rests on a hog. She wears a black cap.

INDRA In Hinduism Son of Dyaus and Nistigri, consort of Indrani, Mahendrani, and Sacti. In some accounts his father is said to be Tvastr. In early mythology god of the firmament and fertilizing rains. In the Vedas he is king of heaven; in the Purana he falls to secondary rank, is worshiped little, and is conceived as a sensuous deity in a celestial paradise surrounded by Apsarases and Gandharvas. A king of heaven, Indra is wielder of the vajra (thunderbolt), he has a beard which flashes like lightning, he is possessed of inscrutable wisdom, is the bringer of rain and harvest, and bestower of wealth on his pious followers. He battles Vritra and Panis, who steal his cows (rain clouds), until he frees his herds that their milk may once again refresh earth. Because of his victory over Vritra, he sometimes is called Vritrahan (slayer of Vritra). Panis keeps the cows hidden in a cave beyond the Rosa, a celestial stream, and when Indra rescues them and drives them before him, he is called Parjanya (Rain-bringer). He battles the strangling snake Ahi, and Ushas, the dawn, which suggests dawn being obscured by thunder-storm. The gods exclude him from the soma because of his sins, which include: feeding Yatis to the hyenas, insulting his teacher Brhaspati, and killing Visvarupa. When he is excluded from the soma, the whole warrior race is excluded with him, so he steals it from Tvastr, gets drunk (rains to excess), and has to be cured. After defeating Vritra, he flees and lives concealed in a lotus stalk, whereupon earth becomes desolate, forests wither. Nahusa is set to rule in his place, but after receiving his new rank Nahusa abandons himself to idle enjoyment, and Indra is then prevailed to return. This is a seasonal myth; the return of Indra coincides with the rainy season. In one legend Gautama curses him for his inability to restrain his passions and as punishment causes a thousand eyes to appear on his body which, in compassion, he later allows to disappear. (Stars which disappear each morning). Best known as an irresistible deity of battle, who defeats the foes of mankind. One of the great national gods of the Indo-Aryans, he is an atmosphere god; generator of heaven and earth; lord of the East (rain); lord of kine (rain clouds); lord of light; a sky support (axis god); a storm god; a sun god; the watcher, lord of stars (thousand-eyed). In one aspect he absorbs the attributes of Vayu, the wind deity. He is shown with golden locks falling over his shoulders and with unerring arrows that have a hundred points and are winged with a thousand feathers (rays). He holds a golden whip and is borne across the heavens in a flaming chariot drawn by gold and red horses, the Harits. Later he rides the elephant Airavata (rain cloud) and carries the elephant goad (lightning) and varja. In early representations his body is marked with a multitude of yoni (probably to symbolize the fertility which rain brings to the earth); later the yoni appear as eyes and he is the watcher. His charioteer is Matalli; his flagstaff is Vaijayanta, the blue and gold (firmament) colors; his steed is Uccaihsravas; his wish-cow Sarvakamadugha; his chief weapons the conch Devadatta, the spear Vijaya, and the vajra made from the bones of the seer Dadhica. His brow is lighted by seven rays; seven great rivers flow from him; he sometimes is shown with seven arms, carrying a diadem, a discus, a goad, prayer beads, sickle, sword and thunderbolt. His mother is described as a cow, he as a bull, and he was willed to be born unnaturally through her side. Indra wins the earth by running around it three times. See Vishnu. He does not kill his enemy but wounds or imprisons him, thus his battle with drought is everlasting. The name Indra, which has many meanings including dew, moisture, sap, yields One-Enduring-A, i.e. enduring primal cause or enduring sun. In Buddhism, as Inda, he is subservient to Buddha and king of the Devas. In the Iranian Avesta he is known as Andra, and is one of the Daevas or evil spirits. He is opposed to Asha-Vahista (Supreme Virtue), plays on distress and gloom, and waits on the bridge Cinvat to hurl souls into hell's torments. He is prototype of Atlas, Heracles, Ninurta, Perkun, Phra In, Thraetaona, and Lucifer.

Indra's sheep. Fleecy clouds.
Indrani. Hindu fertility goddess; wife of Indra. She remained forever young.

INDUS A constellation in the Southern Sky, also known as the Indian. Name from the Persian meaning river.

INDUSTRY Represented by a beaver, bee, beehive, cogwheel, distaff, machine, spider, tool.

INESCUTCHEON In heraldry shield of pretence; a small shield borne within another. Testimony of the claim of a prince to the throne or by the husband of an heiress who claims his wife's lands.

INEXHAUSTIBLE SUPPLIERS
The vessel of plenty, the mystic container, frequently endowed with the power of speech and wisdom, and controlled or owned by a mother goddess, sun god, or lord of the wealth contained in the infernal regions. For the release of the wealth contained in the vessel, heroes, such as Arthur, Cuchulainn, Gwydion, Heracles and others, have traveled into the world of no return; various sacrifices have been made; demigods of fertility, such as Adonis and Tammuz, have been mutilated; children, youths and sacred kings have been slain at the harvest to assure a supply of plenty with the return of spring. Among the inexhaustible suppliers, i. e. symbols of earth's fecundity, are the Andvari Hoard, ark, caldron, cornucopia, horn of Amaltheia or Oberon, goblet of Jemshid, lamp of Aladdin, lotus, Round Table, Sangraal, shell of Aphrodite, ship, table of the Ethiopians, Tree of Life, well of Apollo Thrysis, wishing quern of Frodi, World Mill, yoni.

INFANT AND ANIMALS The Nativity.

INFERNAL DIVINITIES Ahhazu, Alastor, Alu lumnu, Asmodeus, Azhi Dahaka, Beelzebub, Belial, Gallu limnu, Hades, Labasu, Leviathan, Lilitu, Lilu, Lucifer, Mammon, Persephone, Pluto, Samael, Satan, Tiamat, Vritra, Yama. See demon.

INFIDELITY Typified by a cuckoo.

INFINITE ONE Supreme Deity, typified by blue color, a circle, and by fire.

INFORMATION Typified by a candle and by a bird.

INGCEL In Irish legend a spy who had only a single eye, and who invaded Ireland. Probably the moon.

INGEBORG (INGEBJORG) The name of several heroines in Icelandic solar legends; probably personifies dawn. In the Frithiof Saga, daughter of King Bele, sister of Halfdan and Helge. She loved Frithiof, the solar hero, but was given by her brothers to the aged King Ring. After his death, she married Frithiof.

INGENUITY In an Italian icon personified by a daring young man. He wears a helmet, on the crest of which is an eagle; otherwise he is almost naked. His wings are vari-colored, and he holds a bow and arrow as if he were about to shoot.

INGNERSUIT Eskimo fire-people who dwell in cliffs or in crevasses between land and sea. They are of two kinds: one noseless, enemies of men; one pug-nosed, kindly to men.

INGOMA East African war dance.

INGRAM Masculine name from Old Teutonic, meaning raven.

INGRATITUDE, FILIAL In Japan typified by an owl.

INGUN (YNGVI) Aspect of Freyja as a fertility goddess. A form of mother-earth.

INGUNAR-FREY In Norse mythology Frey of Ingun, or lord (husband) of Ingun (Freyja).

INGO Masculine personal name from the Greek, meaning fiery.

INI-INIT Philippine sun-man or god, who each day remakes the sun. Husband of Aponibolinayen.

Also called Aponitolau.

INISFAIL (INISHAIL) Poetic name of Ireland, meaning Isle of Destiny.

INITIATION RITES Anciently elaborate rites accompanied the unfolding of a neophyte into the mysteries of an ancient religion, such as the Eleusinian or primitive Christian baptism, or the admission of boys as full-fledged members of a tribe, including change of name, circumcision, mock death and resurrection, tattooing and other physical markings, and a journey through the underworld, in which boys are made acquainted with the roaring of ghosts. The Kouretes' dance and sword dances originally were connected with initiation rites. Initiation rites have become part of the ceremonial admission into a secret order or society such as a college fraternity or Masonic lodge or at the introduction to any system of esoteric teaching. See bull-roarers, death and resurrection, Kouretes.

INJUSTICE In an Italian icon personified by a man in a spotted white garment. He holds a sword in one hand and a goblet in the other. The broken tablets of the law are on the ground. His right eye is blind and he tramples on scales. In literature injustice in society frequently is typified by ill-health.

INK-CAKE, BRUSH PEN, BRUSH REST AND INK-SLAB In China represents calligraphy, one of the four elegant accomplishments.

Ink-cake, brush pen and Ju-i scepter. In China signifies: May things happen as you desire.

Inkhorn. Learned employments, liberal arts. Christian emblem of Saints Herman and Joseph.

Inkstone. In China called yen, symbol of the scholar. Egyptian emblem of Thoth.

INKLE Hero of a Spectator story by Richard Steele. A young Englishman who is lost in the Spanish main and falls in love with a beautiful Indian maiden, Yarico, with whom he consorts. When a vessel arrives to take him to Barbadoes he sells Yarico as a slave.

INKTONMI Siouan trickster-transformer; hero of cosmogonic events. Parallels Manabozho.

INMAR Finno-Ugric heaven or sky god; son or husband of Kildisin, birth goddess.

INNER TEMPLE See Inns of Court.

INNINI (NINANNA, NININNI, NINSINNA) Sumerian mother goddess. Created by Anu, heaven god, as his female counterpart; mother of Nergal and Ninurta. Her name signifies queen of heaven, and the pictograph first used to write her name was a serpent twining a staff, an earth or fertility symbol. When a virgin goddess of childbirth she is called Nintud, and her husband-son is Dumuzi (Tammuz). She is identified with the morning star, female principle of heaven, and is identical with Belit-ill, queen of the gods; Ereshkigal, underworld goddess; Ishtar or Mah, the mighty goddess.

INNIS Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning from the Island.

INNOCENCE Represented by a daisy, dove, lamb, lily, maiden, white color. Personified by Columbine and by Pierrot wearing a white skull cap. In Christian tradition, represented by the lamb of the Christ Child, by Parsifal, by the saints Agatha, Agnes and Margaret, and by Virgin Mary with the unicorn.

Massacre of the Innocents.

The slaughter of the male children of Bethlehem, two years of age and younger, at the command of Herod the Great at the time Jesus was born, when a prophecy was made that a babe was destined to become King of the Jews. The Feast of Holy Innocents commemorates this event on December 28. The omen received by Herod resembles that received by Acrisius, Laus and Priam.

INNS OF COURT The set of four buildings occupied by the four legal societies of London, i. e. Gray's Inn, Inner Temple, Lincoln's Inn, Middle Temple. These four societies have the privilege of calling law-students to the bar, and the names of the buildings apply to the societies themselves.

INNUMERABLE EYES The night sky, stars. Also typifies the Supreme Deity as watcher.

INO In Greek mythology daughter of Cadmus and Harmonia. For her Athamas, king of Orchomeus, deserted his wife Nephele, and she became the mother of Learchus and Melicertes. She was so cruel to her stepchildren, Phrixus and Helle, that Athamas pursued her. With her sons she fled to the seashore, where in a fit of madness, she killed Learchus and plunged with Melicertes into the sea. The Nereides received her kindly, and she became the sea deity known as Leucothea; Melicertes a deity known as Palaemon. This is a daylight myth; Ino typifying the brilliant lights of dawn for which Athamas deserted Nephele, the mist. See Dionysus.

INOSHISHI Japanese lady boar which chases away vicious snakes; the mere mention of her name is a charm against snakes.

INQUIRY Symbolized by candle, microscope, test-tube.

INQUISITION Roman Catholic Church court or tribunal, commonly called the Holy Office, for the examination and punishment of heretics. Torture as a means of extracting evidence was first authorized by Innocent IV in 1252, and the practice was confirmed by succeeding popes until 1820.

INRI Sacred monogram of Iesus Nazarenus, Rex Iudaeorum (Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews). The sacred tetragram of the Hebrews: Iaminim (water), Nour (fire), Ruach (air), Iebschah (earth). Also the monogram of the Rosicrucians: Igne Natura Renovatur Integra (By fire nature is perfectly renewed).

INSCRUTABLE HEIGHT Cabalistic name of God. See Sephira.

INSECT Typifies short life. See individual insects, such as ant, bee, for further symbolism.

INSPIRATION Typified by an altar with flames, descending dove, dove on shoulder, flame, Pegasus, wind, yellow color. In an Italian icon personified by a glittering ray darting on the breast of a young man who looks up at the star-lighted heavens. His knotted hair is mixed with serpents. He holds a naked sword with the point on the ground and a sun flower. In Irish mythology frequently obtained from a mystic caldron, as that of Cerridwen. See Taliesin.

INSTANTANEOUS GROWTH

Characteristic of a nature deity. Heracles, the sun deity, rapidly acquires great size and strength, as does Hermes the wind god. The might of Zeus closely follows his birth. The three-day old Magni rescues his father Thor, and Vali, when only a night old, avenges the death of Baldur. The divinity of abandoned infants, such as Oedipus, Paris, Romulus and Remus, is recognized by their marvelous growth, as well as by the glow which hovers over them.

INSTRUCTION In an Italian icon personified by a venerable old man in a long robe with a mirror in his hand. The mirror is surrounded with a scroll on which is written, "Inspice, Cautus, Eris," (To cast an eye upon our own faults, so that, finding blemishes in ourselves, we may endeavor to clear ourselves of them).

INTEGRITY Typified by a dog.

INTELLIGENCE (1) Name of one of the Gnostic Aeons. (2) Symbolized by a book, elephant and a horse. In an Italian icon personified by a woman in a gold-colored gown, crowned with a garland, holding a sphere in one hand and a serpent in the other. Angels sometimes are called Intelligences, as are the spirits of the planets. Centaurs are called perfected lower intelligences.

INTEMPERANCE Typified by a bottle, or a whiskey or wine glass.

INTERLACING Symbolizes cooperation, divine providence, mystery of life.

INTERPRETER, MR. A character in Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress representing the Holy Ghost.

INTESTINES In Chinese antiquity believed to be the seat of affection and compassion.

INTU (INTI) Inca sun deity; father of the world; source of light and life.

INUA Eskimoan signifying owner, as a dead man is the inua or owner of his grave, the soul is the inua of a lifeless body. Animals and stones, all things in nature, have an inua, which is separable from the object of which it is the owner. The spirit or power which dominates the forces of nature. Resembles manito, oki, orenda, otgon, wakanda.

INUUS A name of Faunus meaning fertilizer.

INVENTION In an Italian icon personified by a woman in a white robe on which is written, "Non Aluinde." Her head is winged. In one hand she holds an image of nature; on the other she wears a cuff engraved with the motto, "Ad Operam."

INVESTITURE OF A KING In many primitive societies the prosperity of the country is bound to the strength of the king. At Nami, in the worship of Diana, the king was crowned by the prize of single combat; if he lived too long, someone was engaged to murder him, that he might be replaced by a more vigorous man, as crops and weather depended on the state of his health and vigor. In time, kings succeeded in getting the lives of other accepted in place of their own as offerings to the fertility-mother. The death of the king typified the death of a fertility god to reassure resurrection in spring; therefore the substitute had to be invested for the death occasion with the attributes of a divine king. Originally, the king's son was the surrogate, later the most beautiful youths and even maidens of the tribe were used, and still later animals, finally various offerings, clothing, food, symbolizing a blood sacrifice, were proffered. As late as 1591, Shah Abbas the Great of Persia, to avert the danger of an omen made by his astrologers, abdicated his throne and an unbeliever, probably a Christian, named Yusoofee was invested as king. He enjoyed the power for three days and then, to satisfy the decree of the stars, was put to death. When Abbas reascended the throne, his astrologers promised him a long and glorious reign. In Lhasa a temporary king, called King of the Years, painted half white and half black, typifying day and night, summer and winter, was periodically crowned for the purpose of the expulsion of evils, the greatest evils being lack of fertility and lack of abundant herds. Although he was not deliberately killed, the torturous rites he underwent usually killed him. When he died the people accepted his death as an auspicious omen. In India the mantle with which the officiating priest invested a king was called the womb, and the ceremony was regarded as one of rebirth.

INVINCIBLE POWER Represented by a griffin, tornado, whirlwind.

INVISIBLE, THE God. Also a Rosicrucian, as one belonging to a secret fraternity.

I-O As understood by the mystics, I is the Author of the Universe, the Holy One; O is the Regulator of Time and Motion. I typifies the energizing rod or staff, the lingam; O (eau or water) typifies the generative crater or cup, the yoni. The symbolism underlying the Maypole and ring, the rod topped by a ball, or the spear with a broad head.

IO (1) In Greek mythology daughter of Ianchus, king of Argos; beloved by Zeus. To save Io from the jealous intrigues of Hera, Zeus transformed her into a white heifer. Gaining possession of the heifer, Hera placed it under the care of Argus Panoptes. Hermes, at the bidding of Zeus, rescued Io by putting Argus Panoptes to sleep with his flute, whereupon Hera tormented Io with a gadfly, which drove her from land to land. She journeyed through Thrace, across the Bosphorus (heifer's ford), she visited the Graeae (fog) and the Gorgons (night) until she finally reached Ethiopia (land of the well of the sun), where she returned to her original shape and gave birth to her son Epaphus (touch). The metamorphosis of Io is that of the moon, which is subject to changes, suffering and wandering. She is the virgin of heaven upon whom the sky (Zeus) looks with love, but upon whom the queen of daylight (Hera) looks with hate and jealousy; she is placed under the care of the guardian of the night sky (Argus Panoptes), whose eyes (stars) open according to the revolution of the heavens, and he is finally put to sleep by the whisper of the morning breeze (soft tones of the flute of Hermes). The shapes of Io are those from the full moon through those of the various stages of the horned moon and back to the full moon. She is finally released from the watchful eyes of the stars as is the moon each morning as it lingers in the sky after dawn. In art represented as a heifer or as a horned maiden. She is considered to be identical with Isis. (2) A term which appears in the chants and theogonies of many peoples. Among the Mayas of Mexico it implies all which is alive or moves; the Infinite One. Among the New Zealand Maoris it is the First Cause. Akin to Hoh.

IOBATES In Greek mythology king of Lycia. Father of Antaea. When Bellerophon scorned the love of Antaea she accused him of attempting to seduce her, whereupon her husband Proetus asked him to deliver a letter to Iobates. The letter asked that Bellerophon be put to death, but Iobates did not read it until after Bellerophon had eaten a meal. Iobates therefore did not wish to perform the deed for the same reason Proetus had failed to do so; he did not wish to break the laws of hospitality as Zeus became hostile to anyone who did. Instead, Iobates imposed superhuman tasks on Bellerophon. Bellerophon accomplished each mission and won the admiration of Iobates, who then gave the hero another of his daughters as a wife. Lycia was a land of light; Bellerophon being a sun god, he could not be killed by the king of the land of light. Iobates is analogous to Eurysheus.

IOCASTE (IOKASTE) See Jocaste.

IOCAUNA Taino Indian Supreme and Eternal Being. Father Sky. Son of a mother with five names, the most popular of which is Attabeira. The name Iocauna signifies maize or yucca spirit. Also known as Guamaonocon and Yocahuguama.

IOCE Greek abstract deity. Rout.

IOD (YOD) Tenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet, corresponding to the English I, which is found in most words relating to water, as fluid, humid, liquid. According to the mystics, its general meaning is wealth, it represents the principle of creation, and typifies the reflection of the will.

IODAMA Literally, healer of the people. In Greek mythology, a beautiful maiden loved by Zeus, by whom, after the flood, she became the mother of Thebe, a spring nymph. Identical with Europa.

IODHAN MORAN Ancient Celtic breastplate of judgment. Compares with the breastplate of the Jewish high priests.

IODHI In Baltic mythology spirits of the air or souls of the dead. Also called murgi.

IOLAUS In Greek mythology son of Iphicles and Automedusa; nephew of Heracles, to whom he was companion and charioteer. He helped Heracles slay the Hydra by holding a torch to the numerous heads of the serpent as Heracles chopped them off. An aspect of fire which accompanies the sun. See Heracles.

IOLE In Greek mythology daughter of Eurystus, king of Oechalia. Her father promised her in marriage to the suitor successful in an archery contest, but refused to fulfil his agreement when Heracles won because Heracles, in a fit of madness, had killed his children by Megara and Eurystus was afraid the same fate might befall his daughter. Some time later, Heracles sacked Oechalia, killed Eurystus and carried off Iole, whom he gave to his son Hyllus as a wife. Iole personifies dawn, loved by the young sun, who kills darkness (Eurystus) to become reunited with her. The name is from ion (violet) and signifies the violet-tinted clouds frequently seen at sunrise.

ION (1) In Greek mythology descendant of Prometheus, son of Apollo and Creusa. When Creusa gave birth to Ion, fearing the anger of her father she concealed him in a cave, where he was found and placed with the Delphic priestess who raised him. After abandoning her child, Creusa married Xuthus and, when they sought advice at the temple in reference to offspring, the oracle advised them to accept Ion as their son. Creusa, believing Ion to be the son of Xuthus by another woman, attempted to poison him, when trinkets that had been found on him were brought to her, and she recognized Ion as her own child. He became the leader of the Ionic race. Ion is likened to the Hebrew Samuel who likewise was brought up in a temple. His name probably is derived from On, i. e. Sun. (2) In a drama by Thomas M. Talfourd, Ion is a prince of Argos who sacrifices himself to the gods to bring an end to a pestilence.

Ionia. One of the three great divisions of ancient Greece, the other two being the Aeolian and the Dorian. Ionia was noted for its great schools of art and philosophy.

Ionic column. Second order of ancient Greek architecture, falling between the Doric and the Corinthian. Its volutes were formed in imitation of sea shells or the young petals of the honeysuckle before expanding. It also incorporates the egg and spear-head design, typifying the male and female principles.

IOSKEHA (IOUSKEHA, JOUSKEHA) Literally, growing white. Huron sun deity. Virgin born, he married his grandmother At-aentsic. Creator of the universe and of mankind, he drove off his twin brother, Tawiscara, the dark one, and opened a cave from which came animals to inhabit the earth. He instructed men in the art of making fire, which he had learned from the great tortoise; he taught men how to grow maize and how to hunt. His home was in the East. He was a slayer of monsters, including the frog, which swallowed all the waters. Also called Tharonhiawakon. Parallels Heracles.

I-O-W Symbol under which Druids invoked the Omnipotent Power; the Spirit of Creation. Akin to Ioh.

IOWA Flower emblem: wild rose; motto: Our liberties we prize and our rights we maintain; nickname: Hawkeye. Iowa, an Indian name, is akin to ihoah, a Hebrew word which means who is and who will be, and to Ioh. Iowan. Fourth of the North American glacial periods.

IOWAHINE Hawaiian first woman on earth, wife of Tiki and, like him, formed from earth by Tane.

IP (1) Word root. Identical with ap, op and cognate with eye. (2) Among medieval sects I stands for Holy One, P for Parent or All-Parent.

IPHICLES (IPHIKLES) In Greek mythology son of Amphitryon and Alcmene and twin brother of Heracles, who was the son of Zeus and Alcmene. The separate paternity of the twins was ascertained when Hera put serpents into the cradle with the infants and Heracles strangled them, thus proving his divine parentage. Iphicles, who was the owner of cattle (fertile clouds) renowned for their beauty and strength, was the companion of Heracles (sun) in many adventures. See Heracles.

IPHIGENIA (IPHIGENEIA) In Greek mythology daughter of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra. Agamemnon sacrificed Iphigenia to Artemis for a safe voyage to Troy to rescue Helen. As the death blow was about to be struck Artemis seized the maiden, placed a deer on the altar in her place and carried her off to Taurica, where she was installed as priestess of the temple. There she remained offering human sacrifices until rescued by her brother Orestes. Iphigenia typifies the gloaming, which vanishes that dawn (Helen) may return. She is said to be an aspect of Artemis, and Helen was known also as Iphigenia; thus the beautiful lights of twilight return at dawn. Compare Isaac, Jephthah's daughter.

IPHIS In Greek mythology lover of Anaxarete, which see.

IPOMOEIA Herb symbolizing attachment.

I-QONG Literally, night. In Melanesian Banks Islands mythology deity of night, who sold night to Qat for a pig.

IR (1) Monogram frequently used in the middle ages for Jesus Redemptor. (2) In Celtic mythology a son of Miled, brother of Eber and Eremon. All Irish genealogies trace back to the three brothers.

IRA (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning vigilant, watcher. (2) Assyro-Babylonian war god. Also Irra. (3) In Hinduism daughter of Daksha, consort of Kasyapa, mother of vegetation.

IRAGHON KALAM Occult hour of ill omen. Also called Rakalon. Compare Khonlighei Kalam.

IRAN A name of Persia. In old Persian stories Iran, land of light, is in conflict with Turan (Turkey) land of darkness. The word Aryan has been derived from Iran.

IRAQI DESERT Site of desolate sandswept remains of the once glorious city of Ur.

IRA-WARU Polynesian dog deity. Brother-in-law of Maui, who transformed him into a dog for having eaten fish-bait belonging to Maui.

IRELAND Symbolized by Blarney Castle, bog oak, golden harp, green color, green grass, high felt hat with clay pipe in ribbon, shamrock, shillalagh (club). Poetic names for Ireland are Erin, Hibernia, Inisfail, Inish-Faithlenn, Inis-fallen, Isle of Destiny.

Irish apricots. Potatoes.
Irish turkey. Corned beef and cabbage.

Irish wedding. A fight. A person with a black eye is said to have been at an Irish wedding.

IRENA In Spenser's Faerie Queene personification of Ireland. The tyrant Grantorto withholds her inheritance, and Sir Artegal (justice) goes to her aid. Grantorto is slain; Irena is restored to her throne and reigns in peace.

IRENE Literally, peace. In Greek mythology daughter of Themis and Zeus. She is the gayest of the Horae (Seasons). Sometimes portrayed as a companion of Dionysus. Analogue of the Roman Pax.

IRGOLL LOSCENNLOMM

In Celtic mythology Fomorian warrior who aided Bres in the battle against the Tuatha De Danann. Deity of darkness.

IRIS (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning rainbow; also alludes to the flower. Akin to Eros and Osiris. (2) In Greek mythology daughter of Thaumas and Electra. Messenger of the gods, especially of Zeus and Hera, when disunity is intended. Hermes is the messenger of the gods on peaceful missions. The rainbow is the bridge or road let down from heaven to carry her. Like the rainbow, she comes and goes without warning, and she cuts the last thread that binds dying souls to their bodies. Represented in art as a beautiful young woman in a varicolored robe, carrying a herald's staff. She has the wings of a butterfly, sometimes talaria on her feet. On occasions she is seen seated behind the chariot of Hera. (3) September 6 birthday flower. Symbolic of eloquence, hope, light, power, primeval fire, royalty. In the language of flowers: I have a message for you or My compliments. Flower governing Gemini. In Flemish paintings the royal lily of Virgin Mary; in Memling paintings emblem of Christ, also of Saint Barbara to indicate her royal birth; in Spanish paintings symbolizes immaculate conception.

In France called fleur-de-lys (flower of fire). In Germany known as the sword lily, signifying I burn. In ancient Greece dedicated to Hera. In Japan called kakitsubata or shobu; a flower used for felicitous occasions; however prohibited for weddings on account of its purple color which is a color of mourning. Emblem of May, flower of Boy's Doll-day (May 5). Charm against evil spirits.

Iris leaf. In Japan symbolizes a sword.

Yellow iris. Flame, passion.

IRKALLA Assyro-Babylonian underworld. Also the name of the underworld ruler, sometimes said to be a god, sometimes a goddess.

IRMAN (AIRYAMAN) Iranian god of healing.

IRMIN (ERMIN, HERMIN, IRMEN) Saxon deity of wisdom. Probably identical with Er (Ir), war god. In the Dietrich story the ruling god. Irmin is identical with ermine and the source of Ackerman.

Irmin's Way. The Milky Way, also called Bil's Way.

IRMINSUL (HERMINSUL, IRMENS-AULE) Sacred pillar, universe column supporting all things, World Tree. Worshipped among Germanic peoples, especially among the Saxons. Originally revered as the seat of ancestral souls, later as the seat of the gods, and then corrupted into Hangman's Stone, i.e. gallows on which sacrificial fertility victims were hung. See hanging. The name denotes Soul (or Stone) of Irmin. Compare Veralden tshould, Yggdrasil.

IRON Constancy, cruelty, dependability, hardness, patience, strength, stubbornness, tenacity. Charm effective against vampire spells. In Anam used an ankle on a child's foot to frighten the evil eye. In China signifies determination and justice. In Egyptian mythology non-magnetic iron was the metal of black magic and of the evil god Set, who was pursued by the beneficent celestial gods with a magnetic iron, Hebrew symbol of affliction, fortitude, resolution, slavery. Moses compared bondage in Egypt to a furnace for smelting iron. God threatened the perfidious and ungrateful that He would make earth into iron and the heavens into brass, i.e. make earth barren and the heavens rainless. In India and Malaya a talisman which protects the birth chamber from natural and spiritual foes.

Iron Age. Fourth age of man. In Greek mythology age of sin, in which Zeus let loose the deluge which drowned everyone except Deucalion and Pyrrha. The last and most degraded period in the existence of the human race, iron age is used to designate any degenerate, impious or unjust period. See ages of man under age.

Iron Chariot. Anciently, some chariots had arms with iron scythes and spikes, which projected from the wheel hubs and cut down those with whom the chariot came into contact. A murderous chariot.

Iron Cross. A Prussian military decoration awarded for valor in the field of battle.

Iron Crown. The crown of Lombardy; made of a gold circle containing a narrow band of iron supposedly made out of one of the nails of the crucifixion. Used at the coronation of Charlemagne and now in the cathedral at Monza, Italy. It is said to have been given to Theodelinda, wife of the King of Lombardy, by Pope Gregory I about 591 A.D. This date conflicts with the crucifixion story; until the 7th century Christ was worshiped as a hanging god.

Iron Hand. Nickname of Goetz von Berlichingen, 15th century knight, who led many feuds and was twice arrested for robbery. In a battle he lost a hand which he replaced with one of iron. The subject of considerable literature.

Iron hand in a velvet glove. Cruelty or severity cloaked by courtesy.

Iron Maid of Nuremberg. In middle ages, the iron frame in the figure of a human, fitted with spikes pointing inward. Her hinges moved mechanically, and torture victims were placed in her embrace.

Iron tree. Gallows. See gallows and hanging. In China a type of palm that supposedly flowers only once in a hundred years is called the iron tree.

Iron yoke. Bondage, slavery.

Man in the Iron Mask. A mysterious state prisoner held in the Bastille and other prisons in France for forty years during the reign of Louis IV. His identity has never been absolutely ascertained. Many conjectures have been made, and he has become the subject of innumerable dramas.

IRONSIDES A name applied to faithful, valiant warriors. A nickname of Cromwell and to the soldiers who fought under him. The West Saxon king Edmund II was called Ironsides because he used an iron harness. The term Old Ironsides was given to the United States frigate Constitution because of her notable history as a battleship.

IRONWOOD (IARNVID, IARN-VITH, YARNWID) In Norse mythology a black forest of iron trees inhabited by witches. A-bode of Gulweig-Hoder.

IRONY Dramatic irony. A device in which a speaker utters words which convey to the audience information of which he is unconscious. Thus when Oedipus, in the Sophocles drama, calls for the destruction of the slayer of Laius he does not realize he is pouring curses on his own head.

Irony of fate. The curious destiny which turns events and brings about consequences quite the reverse of what might be expected.

Socratic irony. Feigning ignorance as a means of asking questions and leading on and perplexing an antagonist in an argument.

IROQUOIS Literally, real adder. A member of a powerful confederacy of American Indians.

IRPEEL Hebrew masculine name meaning God is healer.

IRRA (GIR, GIRRA, IRA) Assyro-Babylonian devil corresponding to Satan. A fire god, god of pestilence and war; hater of the righteous. Foe of Marduk. In one myth destroyer of the world by flood. A title of Nergal in evil aspect.

IRRESOLUTION In an Italian icon an old woman sitting on a rock, a black cloth wrapped around her head. In each hand she holds a crow which seems to be croaking.

IRRLICHT German name for Will-o'-the-wisp.

IRUS Nickname given to Arnaeus, an Ithacan begger who ran errands for Penelope's suitors. When Odysseus returned home disguised as a begger, Irus, who feared to lose his place, challenged him and with one blow Odysseus broke his jaw. Portrayed as a tall, gluttonous parasite, and so poor he inspired the expressions, "poor as Irus," "poorer than Irus." The name Irus is a play on Iris, messenger of the gods.

IRUWA African sun personified. High god to whom prayers for protection are addressed.

IRVING (ERWIN, IRVIN, IRWIN) Masculine name from a family name and a place name.

IS (1) Medieval monogram signifying Jesus Salvator, promised deliverer. Also written, $ which evolved into the dollar sign. (2) An ancient name for God which means light. Akin to the Hebrew ish (man) and isha (woman). It appears in such names as Esther (vowels being interchangeable), Isabella, Israel, Issi.

Is Temple. Literally, Temple of Light. Temple with a hundred brazen gates; one of the Wonders of Babylon. Probably associated with Belus worship. Also Ish.

ISA Lapland goddess corresponding to Isis. A name related to Isia, a Greek variant of Isis, meaning holy one, intelligence, perception. In Old High German used as a feminine name and meaning ironlike.

ISAAC (YITSHAG) Literally, laughter. In Hebrew tradition he typifies a test of faith. Son of Abraham and Sarah, brother of Ishmael, husband of Rebekah, father of Jacob and Esau. A patriarchal ancestor of the Hebrew nation and of Christ. He was a child of prophecy and promise in the old age of his parents. God tested the faith of Abraham by commanding him to sacrifice Isaac upon Mount Moriah; as Abraham was about to draw the knife, a ram was provided miraculously to take his place. Isaac lived to the age of 180 and was buried in the tomb of Abraham. He was humble, meditative and tranquil; he was devout, full of faith, and submissive to the will of God, but was in conflict with his brother. Isaac represents light, and like other sun heroes, his birth was prophesied, he was provided with omnipotent power, and he underwent many hardships for the benefit of mankind. His deliverance typifies resurrection. He may have been offered as a surrogate for Abraham. See Surrogate. His journey into Mesopotamia, ordered in his 137th year, signifies the wanderings of the sun across the sky. His conflict with Ishmael resembles that of Agamedes and Trophonius, Ham and Shem, Set and Horus. Compare Iphigenia, Jephthah's daughter, Idomeneus's son.

Isaac of York. In Scott's Ivanhoe, Rebecca's father and a friend of Ivanhoe. He is a wealthy Jew from whom Front de Boeuf tries to extort money by placing him in a dungeon where two slaves chain Isaac to the bars of a slow fire. Isaac is rescued and he and his daughter leave England.

ISABEL (BEL, BELLA, BELLE, ISABELLA, ISOBEL) Feminine name, variant of Elizabeth. From the Hebrew, meaning worshiper of God, consecrated to God. Isabella yields beautiful light (Is = light; bella = beautiful), and is a name frequently given to beautiful heroines in literature.

ISAAH (YESHAYAHU) Hebrew

prophet and statesman. Son of Amoz. A visionary with the power to foretell the future, he was regarded a messenger of God.

ISANDROS In Greek mythology, contender against Hippolochos for the throne of Lycia, which was to go to the man able to shoot a ring from the breast of the child Sarpedon without hurting him. A sun myth, the arrows typifying rays. Source of the William Tell story.

ISATPRAGBHARA Jain paradise shaped like an umbrella to which go souls which have been finally perfected. Above it is Sila.

ISENBRAS (SIR ISUMBRAS) In Medieval romance a proud and presumptuous man made humble and penitent by adversity.

ISENGRIN (ISGRIM, YSENGRIM) Literally, surly fellow. In the beast-epic of Reynard the Fox, the wolf who afterwards is created Earl of Pitwood. Isengrin represents the barons, Reynard the church, and the tale shows how Reynard bamboozles his uncle Isengrin.

ISEULT (ISAUDE, ISAULTA, ISOLE, ISOLT, ISOTTA, ISOUDE, ISULTE, YSEULT, YSOLDE)

(1) In Arthurian romance the name of two heroines, both in love with Tristan. Tristan is sent to Ireland to court Iseult the Fair for his uncle King Mark of Cornwall. She becomes the wife of King Mark and the mistress of Tristan. When their love is discovered Tristan is forced to flee and marries Iseult of the White Hands, daughter of Hoel, duke of Brittany. Through the treachery of his wife Tristan dies. Iseult the Fair succumbs in consequence, and Mark has the two buried in one grave over which a rose bush and vine are planted. The branches of the bush and vine intermingle so that no man can separate them. Iseult the Fair typifies the beautiful dawn married to the old king of night, Mark, and in love with the young prince of day, the sun Tristan. Iseult of the White Hands is the gloaming or twilight which causes the death of the sun. The legend resembles that of Brynhild-Gunnar-Sigurd-Gudrun and Guinevere-Lancelot-Arthur-Elaine. (2) In James Joyce's Finnegans Wake, Humphrey C. Earwicker, in one role, is Tristan; his wife and daughter are the two Iseults.

ISH Word root meaning light. It appears in Elisha, Ganesha, Ishah, Ishtar, Krishna, Vishnu.

ISHA Eastern form of Jesus, meaning fish.

ISHADHARA Chinese Buddhist sacred mountains over which Chu-ch'a-Pan-t'o-ka, one of the eighteen Lohan, rules.

ISHAH In Old Testament Eve's name before the fall, because she was taken out of man (ish).

ISHAR Sumerian title of Adad and of Nergal signifying just.

ISHBAH Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning appeaser.

ISHBAK Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning free.

ISHBIBENOB Literally, dweller on the mount. Hebrew giant who was about to kill David in battle but was slain by Abishai.

ISHBOSHETH Literally, man of shame. In the Old Testament, son and successor of Saul. All accepted Ishbosheth except David, who ruled at Hebron over Judah. After a short unsuccessful reign, he was assassinated. In Dryden's satire Absalom and Achitophel, Ishbosheth is meant for Richard Cromwell, whose father Oliver is called Saul. Like Ishbosheth of the Bible, he was the only surviving son, he became king on his father's death and was accepted ruler by all but a few royalists, and after a short and unsuccessful reign, he retired from the throne.

ISHI A name of the Phoenician primeval deity of light.

ISHIDORO Japanese sacred stone lanterns or light receptacles.

I-SHI-KO-RI-DO-ME Japanese goddess assistant of the celestial smith Amatsu-mara. She was charged by him to make the mirror which lured the sun goddess Amaterasu from the cave and restored light to the world.

ISHKUR (IMMER, MER, MIR, MUR) In Sumerian mythology son of Enlil by whom he is given control of winds which issue from the underworld realm of Enlil. Parallels Aeolus.

ISHMAEL Literally, God hears. In Hebrew mythology son of Abraham and Hagar, brother of Isaac. When born he was believed to be the son promised Abraham by God, but when Sarah gave birth to Isaac, he was driven from his father's house. Overcome by heat and thirst and then miraculously relieved, he remained in the wilderness of Paran, took a wife from Egypt, and was the father of twelve sons, who became the heads of Arab tribes. Ishmael, the outcast and wanderer, is described as a belligerent, one whose hand is against every other hand. He typifies darkness, was perhaps an early moon deity. See Isaac.

ISHMAIAH (ISMAIAH) Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah hears.

ISHMERAI Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah is keeper.

ISHOD Hebrew masculine name meaning man of honor.

ISHTAR (ISTAR) Chief goddess in Assyro-Babylonian pantheon, daughter of Sin and Ea, twin sister of Shamash, virgin mother-mistress-sister of Tammuz. Invoked as giver of plenty, deliverer from evil and sickness. She corresponds to the planet Venus; as morning star she was a war deity; as evening star, deity of love and harlotry. Thus she may have been male at sunrise, female at sunset. See Androgynous deities. She was a lucky planet to whom human sacrifice was offered. A sacred king mated with her priestesses, forms of the goddess herself, and was killed at the end of each year, a new mate being chosen to replace him at her festival. Compare investiture of a king, prostitution. In one legend she causes to be sent the sea-serpent that deprives Gilgamesh of immortality, and in other ways she betrays the sun hero. Each year she emasculates and slays her lover-son; then in remorse she descends to Arallu, the underworld, to recover him. For her descent she dons a garment, crown, necklace and ornaments of lapis lazuli (celestial colors). Her sister Ereshkigal (Allatu) admits her to the land of darkness on condition that at each of the seven gates of the kingdom she will relinquish a portion of her queenly apparel (verdure of summer). When ushered into the presence of the queen of Arallu, she is completely nude and Ereshkigal strikes her with blight (decay of vegetation). Her parents, to rescue her, create Uddushu-Namir, who sprinkles Ishtar with the waters of life and escorts her back to the upper world. Ishtar carries Tammuz with her. At each of the seven gates on the return journey various articles of her clothing are restored (thus she germinates), and when she reaches the earth's surface, she is completely clothed. This legend typifies the overpowering desire of a woman for her lover; her desire is so intense, she exposes herself to peril and indignities. The clothing Ishtar loses at each gate of the underworld may also represent the darkening phases of the moon; she sometimes is identified as a moon goddess, who is in daily pursuit of the sun. Also said to be her father are Anu, Enki, and Nannar. In myths in which the universe was held to have had a female origin, she was worshiped as the source of all life. Her name yields Light (Ish) + daughter of (tar), and was written with a character standing for a house with the sign for fish within it, thus a house filled with fertility. As creatrix, she was known as Bau Gula, Mama, Mami, Zerpanitum, all preservers and healers, also destroyers. Her titles were: Minu-anni (Minu-ullu), i.e. she who apportioned unto men sanctions or denial, thus a fate goddess. Qadishtu, Babylonian word for harlot and patroness of temple prostitutes; a spinning goddess. She absorbed the attributes of Nin Ella, great lady of the waters. Her identification with other goddesses has caused her myth to become confused and her name has become a generic term for goddess. The plural of Ishtar for goddesses in general is Ishtarate. Goddesses with whom she has been identified are Anat, Anunit, Aruru, Ashdar, Asherah, As-tarte, Ashtoreth, Athtar, Beltis, Innimi, Kili, Mah, Meni, Nana, Ninharsag, Ninlil, Nintud. Her name is identical with Easter and Esther. The dove, ear of wheat, forked tree, lion and serpent are her emblems. The ornamented cone, pillar or tree stem, typifying a phallus, represent her image. She also is shown as a beautiful woman wearing a turreted crown.

ISHUAH (ISHUAI, ISHVI) Hebrew masculine name meaning self-answering.

ISHULLANU Assyro-Babylonian gardener in the service of Anu. Beloved by Ishtar. A fertility hero. According to one version when she tired of him she smote him so that he was unable to move. In another version when he scorned her love, she turned him into a hog and caused him to live in misery. Compare Circe.

ISHUM Sumerian deity; messenger and mediator of Nergal. Defender of men in the hall of justice; lover of the righteous; allayer of the wrath of Nergal. Probably a beneficent deity of the wind akin to Hermes.

ISIA A Greek variant of Isis signifying holy one, intelligence, perception. Akin to Isa.

ISIAH Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning Jehovah's salvation.

ISIDORE (ISIDOR, IZZY) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning gift of Isis. Feminine form is Isidora.

ISIS Literally, she who weeps. Principal goddess of the Egyptian pantheon. Daughter of Qeb and Nut, sister of Nephtys; sister-wife of Osiris; virgin-mother of Horus, who was conceived after the death of his father Osiris. Thus Isis, the moon, was wife and mother of the sun. A faithful wife, she ruled over Egypt while he traveled abroad. When he was murdered and dismembered by Set she searched the land for the fourteen parts of his body that Set had scattered. She found and buried all the parts except the reproductive organs, and for this reason vegetation ceased to grow. She was doomed to wander cheerlessly on earth for the last fragments of her husband's body. On her search she was accompanied by seven scorpions, which protected her. Her first tears (dew) for the dead Osiris fell into the Nile to begin the inundation which brought about the food supply. In one legend she was a mortal, an enchantress and magician, who wished to become a deity. She obtained some spittle of Ra and mixed it with earth, which she molded into a snake and left in Ra's path. The snake bit Ra and in agony he called for help. Isis refused to help him unless he revealed his sacred or secret name. He tried to deceive her but the pain continued until he yielded to her request. This knowledge gave her the power to demand immortality. See Name. The soul of Isis was believed to reside in Sirius, the dog star. She was revered as the Great Mother; giver of barley and wheat and teacher of agriculture; goddess of medicine and wisdom; lady of the waters, patroness of sailors. Among her many titles were: Lady of the Beginning, Lady of the Emerald, Lady of the Turquoise, Mother of God, Our Lady, Queen of Heaven, Star of the Sea. At Bubastes she was worshiped under the name of Sekhet; at Dendera she absorbed the attributes of Hathor the Cow; at Thebes she was called Mut. Her emblems were the ankh, crescent, disk, ear of wheat, horns of a cow, staff, pear, sistrum, thot, vase. Sacred to her were the duck, scorpion, sow, swallow, white heifer. The hieroglyph of her name was a throne, indicating she originally personified the throne from which the king arose or was born. In art she appears as a mother suckling her son Horus, who is on her lap; with a crown surmounted by a disk and cow's horns; as a queen standing on a crescent moon surrounded by twelve stars; as a hippopotamus; as a white heifer; as a serpent. Isis and Nephthys, the sisters and wives of Osiris, who mourned his death, were represented by two women at actual funeral services in ancient Egypt. The name Isis is from the same root as Ursa, and Plutarch interpreted it to mean knowledge. Isis has been identified with Ash-toreth, Io, Ishtar and other virgin mothers. Milton in Paradise Lost places her among the fallen angels.

Issa. Initiates of the mysteries of Isis.

Veil of Isis. Deep mystery. The inscription, "I am that which is, has been, and shall be, and no one has lifted my veil," was found on one of her statues. Thus to lift the veil of Isis is to penetrate a great mystery.

ISKANDER BEG Name of Alexander the Great in India and the East generally.

ISLAMISM The Mohammedan religion. The word means resignation or submission (to the will of God). According to Moammed, the religious system of the Almighty Potentate Allah into which every child is born and the true faith in which he would continue if not led astray. In contradistinction to Hinduism, all that is necessary to become a member is to state a formula. The observance of it consists of five duties: (1) Bearing witness there is but one god. (2) Reciting daily prayers. (3) Giving legal alms. (4) Observing the Ramadan (a month's fast). (5) Making the pilgrimage to Mecca once in a lifetime.

ISLAND (ISLE) Isolation. Dream significance: abandonment. In mythology gathering place of souls, paradise, supernatural world in which dwell the gods as well as the dead, such as the American Indian Blissful Isle, Brythonic Avalon, Celtic Annwfn, Greek Happy Islands, Maori Aotea-Roa, Roman Fortunate Islands, Blessed Isles (Isles of the Blest). In China the San Hsien Shan. There were three paradisaical realms, Fang-chang, P'eng-lai, Shan, ruled by the fairy queen Hsi Wang Mu, where grew the peach tree of long life. In Western tradition, Isles of the Blest, known to the Greeks as Happy Islands, and to the Romans as Fortunate Islands, were legendary lands in the Western Ocean (lands beyond the sunset) to which the favorites of the gods were conveyed at death to dwell in everlasting joy.

Floating Island. Celestial paradise; Utopia. The term is applied to a collection of debris or alluvial soil found in lakes and rivers.

Island of Fair Women. A paradise in which a mortal is in danger of dying of love by succumbing to the enticements of a beautiful goddess. The theme is world-wide. The mariners who land on these island never escape. Sometimes they are transformed into animals or other shapes, as in the Circe legend.

Island of Joy. A Celtic paradise; those on it laughed continuously. Bran passed it on his way to Tirnam-Ban.

Island of Lanterns. In Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel, an imaginary land inhabited by the Lanternois, pretenders to knowledge, literary charlatans, pedants and the like. Rabelais was ridiculing the divines assembled at the Council of Trent.

Island of Saint Brandan (Brendan). Legendary floating island, which supposedly lay west of the Canaries. So called from the Irish saint who, in the 6th century, went in search of Islands of Paradise. It has been identified as the site of the last retreat of the 8th century hero Roderick, the island from which he did not return, and has appeared on charts dated as late as 1755.

Island of Seven Cities. A paradise or Utopia, supposedly settled by seven bishops driven from Portugal and Spain by 15th century Moorish invaders. Many are said to have visited it, but none have returned.

ISMENE In Greek mythology daughter of Oedipus and his mother-wife Locasta; thus a child of an incestuous union. Ismene is timid and practical, wavering in her loyalty to her father; her character contrasts strongly with that of her sister Antigone. In the end, Ismene asks to share the tragic fate of her sister, who has sacrificed her life in order to provide her brother Polynices proper burial. Probably a goddess of night.

ISODIA Feast of the presentation of Virgin Mary in the Temple. Celebrated November 21.

ISOL Essence of light of god; eroded to form soul.

ISRAEL Literally, contender or striver with God; sometimes said to mean God's champion or who prevails with God. Name given to the patriarch Jacob after wrestling with the Angel-Jehovah at Peniel. Israel has been interpreted to be an extension of Ezra (rising of light); also a personification of the soul wandering in the wilderness, derived from Is (light of) + Ra (wandering sun) + El (first cause). In some accounts, on the marriage of Jacob to Rachel, his name was changed to Israel, i.e. Man (Ish) of Rachel. A royal marriage constituted a symbolic ritual of death and rebirth, in which names were changed. The kingdom of Israel applied to all the seed of Jacob (Israel) and to the descendants of those who returned from Babylonian captivity. Figuratively, the chosen people of God, the elect, thus those dedicated to noble and righteous purpose. See Hebrew tribes. In Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel Israel stands for England.

Israelite. One of a Semitic people whose socio-cultural situation was dominated by the patriarchal father, and therefore by a patriarchal God.

ISRAFIL (ISRAFEL, URIEL) Moslem angel who brings the orders of Allah to their proper destination and puts souls into bodies. He is angel of music as well as messenger, and possesses the most melodious voice of all God's creatures. He is the angel who will sound the trumpet at resurrection. With Gabriel, and Michael, he warned Abraham of Sodom's destruction.

ISSACHAR Literally, hired or recompense, rewarded. Ninth of the twelve sons of Jacob; named by his mother Leah. The name is akin to saker (falcon) and to sacre (French for anointed) and to sacred. His descendants, an agricultural people, were numbered one of the twelve tribes of Israel. The tribe was associated with the zodiacal house Taurus and symbolized by an ass crouching beneath its burden, the color black (or blue) and the gem sapphire. See Hebrew Tribes.

Issachar's ears. The ears of an ass, alluding to the Biblical expression, "Issachar is a strong ass crouching down between two burdens."

ISSEDONES Legendary people evicted from their country by the one-eyed Arimaspians. Presently identified as a Scythian tribe.

ISSI In German legend the Devil, coming upon a man molding buttons, asks him what he may be doing. When told eyes are being made, the Devil asks if the man will give him a new pair, and he consents to being tied to a bench to get them. He asks the man his name and is told that it is Issi (self). Molten lead is then poured into the sockets of the Devil's eyes, he rushes about in his agony carrying the bench with him, crying "Issi teggi" (self did it); whereupon he is told to lie on the bed he has made for himself. The story is borrowed from that of Odysseus (Ulysses), where the syllable isse (ysse) also is found, and where no doubt it means self (soul) or fire (light).

ISSLAND In Niebelungenlied Kingdom of Brunhild.

ISTHMIAN GAMES Greek

games consisting of boxing, chariot races, running, wrestling, etc. held on the Isthmus of Corinth every alternate spring. The races in which horses and chariots competed were the main events and held to honor Poseidon for his gift of the horse to mankind. Pine wreaths were awarded to event winners. Epsom and other racing events have been called Isthmian in allusion to the Greek festival.

ISSUNBOSHI (ISSUNHOSHI) Dwarf in Japanese mythology; name means One-inch-boy. Corresponds to Tom Thumb.

ISUM Assyrian fire god.

ISVARA Hindu Supreme Being, the lord, master. An epithet of Brahma, Vishnu and Siva. Sometimes applied to Durga and other sakti (goddesses).

ITALUS Legendary king of Oenotrians, Pelasgians or Sicilians. He married the daughter of Latinus. Italy supposedly was named after him. An agricultural hero.

Italy. In an Italian icon personified by a comely woman in a sumptuous robe and a mantle. She sits on a globe. She is crowned with a tower and holds a spear and a cornucopia. A bright star shines above her head.

ITCHING PALM Inordinate desire for money; willingness to accept bribes. According to a superstition, one whose right palm itches will receive money.

ITH (IATH, IR) In Irish mythology son of Bregon, uncle or brother of Miled, brother of Bile. In some versions said to be a son of Miled. With ninety followers he sailed from Iberia (Spain) to Ireland, where he was asked to arbitrate an argument by three Tuatha De Danann kings, who were unable to partition the country satisfactorily. "Act according to the laws of justice," Ith advised them, and then spoke enthusiastically about the climate and fertility of Ireland. The three kings thought he might take the country from them so they killed him. Ith's companions brought his body back to Iberia, the Irish Hades. Miled set out to avenge his death and became the legendary ancestor of the Irish Celts. All Irish geneologies trace back to Miled or Ith. The name is also applied to a goddess, otherwise known as Eire or Eo-Anu, and is said to mean hunger, i. e. desire for fecundity.

ITHACA Home of Odysseus, land of light or of the sunrise.

ITHAMAR Hebrew place name meaning land of palms.

ITHAVOLL (IDAVOLL) Norse great plain in the center of Asgarth. It withstands the destruction of Ragnarok, and there the surviving gods rebuild the universe.

ITHEL Hebrew masculine name meaning God is.

ITHRA Hebrew masculine name meaning eminence, excellence.

ITHREAM Hebrew masculine name meaning remnant of the people.

ITHURIEL (1) Name from the Hebrew, meaning discovery of God. (2) In Milton's Paradise Lost angel sent with Zephon by Gabriel to search for Satan, who had entered into Paradise. Ithuriel was armed with a spear which exposed deceit, thus, when Satan squatted like a toad close to Eve's ear, Ithuriel forced him to resume his proper shape.

ITHYPHALLUS Phallus shaped amulet. Anciently used in fertility rites.

ITJE Siberian hero. His parents were devoured by the giant Punegusse. Itje kept slaying the monster, which kept being re-born; he finally burnt the carcass. From the ashes mosquitoes were born. A frost myth; when the giant of snow or winter was conclusively overcome by heat, the season for mosquitoes had arrived.

ITOKI Nicaraguan mother-scorpion dwelling at the end of the Milky Way. She sends forth the souls of the newly born and receives the souls of the dead. She has many paps for suckling infants.

ITONIA Surname of Athena; referring to her shrine at Iton in Thessaly.

ITSHI Siberian invisible nature god ruling the air, forests, skies or articles, such as spinning wheels, vessels and especially weapons or tools with which one may harm oneself.

ITSUKU-SHIMA Japanese god of the sea.

ITTAI Hebrew masculine name meaning being, living.

ITTAKAZIN Hebrew masculine name meaning kindred of the extremity.

ITYLUS (ITALOS) In Greek mythology son of Aedon, queen of Thebes. Aedon intended to slay the eldest son of Niobe and by mistake killed her own son. She died of grief and was given the form of a nightingale to sing her plaintive songs of mourning for Itylus. A light myth.

ITYS In Greek mythology son of Tereus and Procne. When Tereus raped Philomela, sister of Procne, the two sisters to punish him, killed Itys and served him to his father. The unhappy trio were changed by the gods into birds; Tereus into a hoopoe, Procne into a swallow, Philomela into a nightingale. A sun hero killed by wind spirits.

ITZAMNA (CHICKEN ITZA, ZAMNA) Mayan culture hero, serpent god of the East, who led his people into Yucatan and who instructed them in agriculture and letters. He was the giver of names to all places he passed and to trees and herbs and fruits, and he taught the people which were to be eaten, which were to be used as medicine and which were poisonous. He was civilizer, deviser of the calendar, law maker. He was a dew bringer, and the deity who ruled the sky, sun, wind and rain. In art he is portrayed as a white-bearded man resembling Wotan. His name contains the same radicals as the words for dawn and morning, also that which trickles in drops as rain from the sky, milk from teats, or semen, thus the name may mean milk of the mother of dawn or son of the mother of morning. Other names by which he was invoked were: Kabil, He-of-the-Lucky-Hand, curer of the ill; Kin-ich-ahau, Lord-of-the-Sun's-Face; Kin-ich-ahau-haban, Lord-of-the-Sun's-Face-the-Hunter, whose rites were sanguinary.

ITZCUINAN Aztec divinity whose name means bitch-mother.

An aspect of Xochiquetzal, most fecund of the divinities. Patroness of childbirth and sexual pleasure.

ITZPAPALOTL Aztec butterfly deity. An aspect of Ciuacoatl. Occasionally shown as a deer. A female demon, a form of fire.

ITZTLACOLIUHQUI One of the four divine brothers of Aztec legend; god of cold and dryness. Probably an aspect of Quetzalcoatl.

ITZTLI Toltec stone-knife god; ruler of the second hour of night. God of blood-letting penance and of human sacrifice.

IUCHAR (IUCHAIR) In Irish mythology a Tuatha De Danann wind deity. Son of Buan-Ann or Danu. Brother of Brian and Iucharba. The three brothers, called the three gods of Danu (fate or knowledge) were married to Banbha, Eire, and Fodhla, the three princesses who owned Ireland. Iuchar and his two brothers and Cian and his two brothers were enemies. See Cian for the conflict.

IUCHARBA (IUCHURBA) In Irish mythology, a Tuatha De Danann wind deity. Brother of Brian and Iuchar, which see. Also see Cian.

IUTURNA Ancient Italian spirit of springs and streams. A kindly goddess gifted with prophecy and song. A wife of Janus and mother of Fons (Fountain).

IVALDE Norse watchman of the Hvergelmer and the rivers Elivagar at the root of the Yggdrasil. By his first wife Sol he was the father of Idun and the swan maids. By his second wife Greip, he was the father of Bil and the wonder-smiths, Egil-Orvandel, Ide, and Thjasse-Volund (Hyuki). With his sons, the elf-smiths, he made false golden locks to replace those Loki had cut from the head of Sif. He and his sons also constructed chariots of gold for the sun and moon, the ship Skidbladner for Frey, and the sword Gunger for Odin. The many treasures constructed by these marvelous artificers had a curse placed upon them, which doomed anyone who became possessed of them; thus the golden chariots brought death to the sun and the moon in the west; the gifts associated with fertility brought death to the things which grew. As Father of Hyuki and Bil, Ivalde was known as Vidfinner. He sent his son and daughter to fetch the song mead from the fountain spring Byrger. When Hyuki and Bil were carried up to the moon with the mead Vidfinner followed them, stole some to drink, and for this he was condemned to dwell in the moon in a state of eternal drunkenness and called Svigdur (champion drinker). He also was known as Slagfin and, by the Saxons, called Hengest, a name sometimes applied to his son. Ivalde and his family appear anciently to have been associated with star worship, and perhaps he and his sons dominated pre-Odin mythology. Compare Sindre.

IVAN Masculine name; Russian equivalent of John; identical with Evan.

Ivan Ivanovich. Literally, son of Ivan. Used to designate a typical Russian, as John Bull is used to designate a typical Englishman. The Russian people.

Ivan the Terrible. Sixteenth century Russian czar. A man of great energy infamous for his cruelties.

IVANDER Hebrew masculine name meaning divine man.

IVANHOE Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning from the ivy cliff.

IVITHJAR Norse wood giantesses, of which Hyndla was one.

IVOR (IVER) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning uncertain, and from Old Scandinavian, meaning archer, bowman.

IVORY Firmness, purity, strength, wealth. Christian symbol of moral fortitude; the immaculate purity of Mary.

Ivory gate. In the Aeneid, gate through which pass dreams which elude mortals. Prophetic dreams pass through the horn gate.

Ivory tower. A place withdrawn from worldly acts and attitudes; a retreat. To live in an ivory tower is to close one's eyes to the facts of life. Christian emblem of Virgin Mary.

IVY (1) Feminine name alluding to the plant. (2) March 13 birthday flower. Symbolic of ambition, constraint, fidelity, memory, obscurity, sadness, tenacity, that in want of support, wedded love. A burial flower because it symbolizes immortality; an evil omen because it kills that which it embraces. In the language of flowers: I die where I cling.

In heraldry typifies strong and lasting friendship. The word is from the root av and is akin to alive, life, love. In Celtic druidic tree alphabet associated with the consonant gort (g), and tree of the eleventh druidic month, October 1 to October 28 in the modern calendar. Because it grows spirally, it was dedicated to resurrection. Ivy ale was a highly intoxicating medieval drink, and it still is brewed at Trinity College, Oxford. In Britain an ivy bush is the sign of a wine tavern; hence the proverb, "Good wine needs no bush." Christian symbol of attachment, death, undying affection.

Ivy Girl. Kentish name for Kernababy (Cornbaby) used in harvest ceremonies. As the ivy plant does not enter into the ceremonies, the name no doubt equates with Eve (mother of all living things) or with Ave. In Scotland Ivy Girl consists of a handful of corn set out in the form of a cross.

Ivy sprig. September 24 birthday flower. Symbolic of longings. In the language of flowers: I desire to please.

Ivy wreath. In Greek antiquity emblem of Thalia, muse of comedy and idyllic poetry, also of Bacchus and Dionysus.

IWERIDD Brythonic earth-mother. Wife of the sea god Llyr, by whom she is the mother of a son, Bran, and a daughter, Branwen. Name signifies Ireland.

IX Greek monogram for Iesus Christos (Jesus Christ).

IX-CHEL Mayan rainbow goddess. Giver of fecundity, guardian of women in childbirth, patron of the art of medicine, sender of fertilizing showers. Wife of Izamna, light god; mother of the Bacabab. Also called Chibillas.

IXCOCAUHQUI Nahuas Indian yellow-visaged god of fire; destructive lightning.

IXCUIN Meztitlan (Aztec) deity. One of the four primeval quadruplets; four guardians of the directions or winds. Name signifies He-who-has-four-faces; the derivation is from ixtli (face) + cui (to take) + na (four). See Four divine brothers; Hueytonantzin.

IXCUINA Aztec goddess of pleasure.

IXION In Greek mythology the scorching midday sun. Son of Phlegyas or an aspect of Phlegyas; father of Pirithous. King of Lapithae in Thessaly, he married Dia, daughter of Hesioneus, to whom he promised rich gifts for his bride, but once married Ixion failed to send them, whereupon Hesioneus stole the immortal horses which bore the flaming chariot of Ixion across the sky. To regain his horses Ixion invited Hesioneus to visit him and select his gifts. When Ixion opened the door of the treasure house Hesioneus, bending over the pit, fell in and was consumed by fire. Famine followed the crime as the dead Hesioneus, a river deity, was unable to supply fertilizing waters. Zeus purified Ixion and invited him to a banquet. He made love to Hera, and Zeus, to protect her, substituted a cloud in her shape, by which Ixion became the father of the Centaurs. For his crimes Zeus ordered Hermes to bind him to an eternally revolving four-spoked wheel, i.e. a fiery cross throwing rays into the four directions. The Centaurs typify vapours which expand from a cloud. In his attempt to reach Hera, the highest point in heaven, he was bound to fail. His myth resembles that of Sisyphus and Tantalos, and, like Tantalos, he belonged to a religion superseded by Olympianism, and priests of Zeus gave him an odious character. His name is akin to axis.

IXQUINA Aztec goddess of love. Identical with Tlacolteotl, which see.

IXTAB Yucatec goddess of paradise-abode of those who hanged themselves. See hanging.

IXTLILTON Literally, little-black-face. Aztec god of darkness.

IX TUB TUN Mayan goddess who spits out precious stones (rain). Her form is that of a snake.

IYJAR Hebrew month corresponding to May in the Gregorian calendar. Also known as Zif.

IYNGE A love potion.

IYNX A magic wheel.

IZ Word root meaning life or light. Same as is.

IZA Feminine name from Old Teutonic, meaning iron.

IZAMNA (IZONA) Mayan deity who made men and all things. Light god. By Ixchel, the rainbow, he was the father of four sons, the Bacabab. Also called Canil, meaning he-who-gives-gifts or serpent, strong one, or yellow one; Kinich-ahau, eye-of-the-day (sun); Uac-metun-ahau, lord-of-the-wheel-of-time; and Xax-coc-ahmut, first-to-know-and-hear-events.

IZANAGI AND IZANAMI Literally, He-Who-Invites and She-Who-Invites. In Japanese mythology a pair of the Seven Divine Generations, deities born without parents. The last primal pair so born. They are the Yo-In, male-female principle, brother-sister, husband-wife, father-mother. They viewed chaos from Ama-no-uki-hasi, floating bridge of heaven (Milky Way or Rainbow), churned the primeval sea with their jewel-spear (phallus) and, with drops from the spear, created the island of Onogoro, where they settled, copulated, the first divine pair to do so, and begat elemental deities, forests, islands, water, winds, etc. Hirugo, their first born after copulating, had the shape of a jelly-fish or leech, which displeased them. They set him adrift on a raft, but he was saved and became a deity of fishermen. When giving birth to Kagu-tsuchi, the fire-god, Izanami's vagina was burned and she died. Izanagi visited his wife in Ne-nokata-tsu-kuni, the underworld, where she informed him that she had partaken of food and therefore was unable to return to earth (myth paralleling that of Demeter and Persephone, Orpheus and Eurydice). Her monstrous shape frightened him and he fled. Humiliated and angry, accompanied by demons (spirits of storm), she pursued him, but he tossed peaches, a fruit of phallic significance, to those who followed and in this way slowed up their pace (myth paralleling that of Atalanta). Upon leaving the underworld he performed purifying ablutions and Amaterasu, the sun-goddess, was born from his left eye; Tsukiyomi, the moon god, was born as he washed his right eye; Susanowo, sea-god, came from his nose (births resembling those of Dionysus and Athena). By sowing the teeth of a comb he created the human race. Compare Cadmus. The pair resemble the Chinese creator pair, Si-Wang-Mu and Tung-Wang-Kung.

Izanami. Goddess of marriage and of the underworld, or instant at which breath fails at coming of death. In the underworld without Izanagi, she produced deities from her feces, urine and vomit.

IZAR (1) Long veil-like garment worn by Moslem women.
(2) The name of a star in Bootes.

IZAYEMON In Japan old man feared by snakes. The mere mention of his name was a charm that supposedly drove them away.

IZDUBAR Chaldean sun hero; probably a deified king. In a Babylonian text hero of twelve labors. Considered a prototype of Nimrod; may be the same as Gilgamesh.

IZEDS (IZEDI) (1) In Zoroastrianism the thirty arch-angels of Ormuz. They presided as guardian spirits over the thirty days (dies, or lights) of the month. Ized, Persian for fair, is akin to the Celtic izod, also meaning fair. (2) An Izedi (or Yezdi) is a member of an Oriental sect which, in the Occident, is said to worship the devil.

IZEHNE (IASSEN, IZASHINE)
A religious book of the Parsees.

IZHAR Masculine Hebrew name meaning shining.

IZLUCOCO Tree of life on which Mexicans supposedly subsisted during the third age of man.

IZOLTA Same as Iseult.

IZRAHIAH Masculine Hebrew name meaning Jah is appearing.

IZTAC CIUATL Aztec giantess; the White Woman. Mountain seat of Tlaloc, the rain god, and holy mountain on which he was worshiped.

IZTAC MIXCOATL In Aztec mythology father of the seven sons from whom all the seven tribes speaking the Nahuatl language descended and who were the founders of the seven cities. The seven sons emerged from seven caves in the north or northwest land of Aztlan. According to one tradition he was the father of Quetzalcoatl by Chimamatl. While in some accounts given as the father of Tezcatlipoca, Mixcoatl is another name for Tezcatlipoca. Iztac Mixcoatl signifies white serpent of the clouds or white cloud twin. See Tona-catecutle.

IZUSHIO-TOME In Japanese mythology girl loved by two brothers, Aki-yama-no-Shitabi-onoko (autumn), the elder, and Haruyama-no-Kasumi-onoko (spring), the younger. When she married the younger, the older brother failed to give them a gift. Their mother (nature) became angry and laid a curse upon Aki-yama and he withered.

J

J Tenth in a class or series, from its position as tenth letter of the English alphabet. Historically, a variation of I. Medieval writers treated the two as one letter, using them interchangeably. They were separated in recent times. In archaic use signified the final i (one) in Roman numerals, as xiiij = 13. On rare occasions still appears for one in medical prescriptions. Y also has been given the same value as J. In divination its numerical value is one or ten. Occult significance: leadership, an elevated station in life; its period is for one year. Character traits: energetic, originality in action and thought, pioneering. Physical weak spot: lungs. Planetary or zodiacal correspondence: Virgo (or Capricorn). Symbolic cor-response: wealth. Tarot correspondence: wheel. Parallels the Hebrew Jod (Yod). See I for additional symbolism. Also see Alphabet Affiliations.

JA Word root meaning ever-existent as in Jah, Jehovah. Interchangeable with ia, ya. All vowels are interchangeable.

JAAKAN (JABIN) Hebrew masculine name meaning intelligent.

JAAKOBAB Hebrew masculine name meaning to Jacob.

JAALA Hebrew name meaning elevation.

JAANAL Hebrew masculine name meaning answerer.

JAAREOREGIM Hebrew masculine name meaning forester.

JAASIEL Hebrew masculine name meaning God is master.

JAAZANIAH Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah is hearing.

JAAZER Hebrew masculine name meaning He will help.

JAAZIAH Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah is determining.

JAAZIEL Hebrew masculine name meaning God is determining.

JABAL Literally, moving. In Old Testament son of Lamech and Adah, a descendant of Cain. Supposedly he is the first to have chosen the nomadic mode of life and to have invented portable tents, perhaps of skins. He was a patron of flocks and tents.

JABARITE Literally, necessity. One of an extremely fatalistic sect of Moslems.

JABBERWOCK In Lewis Carroll's Through the Looking Glass, a dragon-like monster, thus any terrifying apparition, animal, or creature.

JABBOK Literally, flowing, running. In the Old Testament Peniel, where Jacob wrestled with the Angel, was a fording place of the river Jabbok.

JABESH Hebrew name meaning dry place.

JABEZ Hebrew masculine name meaning He will cause pain. In the Old Testament the name is given to a descendant of Judah, whose distinction appears to have been owing to his prevalence in prayer.

JABIN In the Old Testament a powerful king who organized a league to crush Joshua and brought about his own ruin.

JACHIN AND BOAZ Twin pillars in the porch of King Solomon's Temple typifying the gateway to eternity. Phallic pillars of beauty and strength. Jachin is said to mean Foundling, God confirms, He shall establish; Boaz is said to mean His strength. Jachin popularly is believed to have been the right-hand pillar as one faces east; Boaz the left-hand pillar. According to Robert Graves, a glass dish of the Seleucid epoch establishes that the pillars originally were known as Boaz and Jachin; that Boaz was the pillar on the right hand or lucky side, it was spirally fluted, a symbol of blessing, growth and waxing sun, and corresponded to Gerizim; that Jachin was the pillar on the left or unlucky side, it was vertically fluted and symbolic of cursing, decay and waning sun, and corresponded to Ebal. Later, when the New Year was made to correspond with the autumn vintage festival, the symbolism became confused.

JACINTH Modesty. Dream significance: success. Another name for the hyacinth.

JACK A nickname of John; also of the Knave in the tarot deck, signifying son. A lover, any man. A buffoon, a rustic (thus the clumsy jack), a sailor, a saucy fellow, a trade or attendant of a trade (thus a boot-jack). The male of an ass, hence jackass. As used by Shakespeare in his sonnets, key of a virginal.

Colonel Jack. A Defoe hero. Born a gentleman and bred a pickpocket, he goes to Virginia, where he climbs through all stages of colonial life, from that of a slave to that of an owner of a plantation and slaves.

Every man Jack. Every man without exception.

Jack Adams. A blockhead, fool.

Jack-a-dandy. A fop.

Jack-a-mend-all. In English history, a nickname of John Cade, 15th century rebel who promised to remedy all abuses.

Jack Brag. Hero in Theodore Hook's novel of the same name; a snob who fails in his attempts to enter into wealthy society.

Jack Drum's entertainment.

A dismissal, sending one about one's own business, turning out of doors. Compare dine with Duke Humphrey under Humphrey.

Jack Frost. Frost personified.

Jack gentleman. Parvenu, upstart.

Jack Hamlin. A reckless gallant and gambler who appears in Bret Hart stories.

Jack Horner. Hero of a nursery rhyme. He puts his thumb in a pie and pulls out the plum. The allusion is to an historical event in which Jack Horner, steward to the Abbot of Glastonbury during the dissolution of monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII, was carrying to the king a pie, in which was concealed the deeds of the Manor of Mells. On the road, he lifted the crust (put his thumb in the pie), extracted the deed, and became lord of the property.

Jack in Green. A boy covered with leaves in a May-day game. Derived from old fertility celebrations.

Jack in office. A contemptuous or overbearing official.

Jack-in-the-box. A cheat or rogue, from the toy in which a grotesque figure springs up unexpectedly when a box top is released.

Jack and Jill. Fairy tale name of Hyuki and Bil, twin children accompanying Mani, driver of the chariot of the moon, in Norse mythology. Lunar pair and, by extension, any boy and any girl, lovers, any man and his sweetheart or wife. In mythology, Hyuki and Bil (Jack and Jill) account for the dark spots on the moon. From them is derived the expression a good Jack makes a good Jill, i. e. a good husband makes a good wife, a good master makes a good servant.

Jack Ketch. Executioner during the reign of James II, notorious for his barbarity. His name has become a synonym for executioner or hangman.

Jack-o'-clock. A figure in old clocks which tolls the hour by striking on a bell.

Jack-o'-Lantern. A wandering fire; a pale bluish light seen over graveyards and swamps. A deceptive attraction, a delusion. Also known as Corpse candle, Jack-o'-wisp, Will-o'-wisp. In France called Feu Follet. In the United States a lantern formed out of a hollow pumpkin but cutting holes to represent eyes, ears, nose and mouth and carried on Halloween to suggest a ghost or witch.

Jack-o'-Lent. A stuffed figure once carried in processions in England during Lent. It was pelted by the populace. The figure is said to have typified either the Devil or Judas Iscariot. The rite is related to one associated with old pagan fertility festivals in which the deity of darkness (or winter), who robbed the earth of verdure, was drowned or stoned or in other ways destroyed to assure the return of the spirit of growth.

Jack Robinson. One whose stay is brief. From a legend about an eccentric man who was in the habit of calling on his neighbors. His visits were so short, he was gone before his name was uttered, hence the expression, "Before you can say Jack Robinson."

Jack Sheppard. Notorious outlaw and thief.

Jack Sprat. A dwarf or exceedingly thin man; hero of a well-known nursery rhyme.

Jack Straw. A nickname given to one of the leaders of the Peasants' Revolt of 1381. The name also was applied to a revolutionist against England in the 19th century; hence a rebel, especially one who destroys property by burning it like straw. Chaucer refers to Jack Straw in the Nun's Prologue and from his reference the name became attached to worthless persons. A straw figure or scarecrow is called Jack Straw, hence a man without influence, position or resources.

Jack Tar. A sailor, probably alluding to the fact that his clothes and hands are tarred by ship tacking, or Tar may be short for tarpaulin. Also simply Tar.

Jack and the Beanstalk. A nursery tale in which a lad is sent by his mother to sell a cow and parts with it for a bag of beans. The angry mother spills the beans on the ground. During the night one takes root and reaches into the sky. Jack climbs the beanstalk and discovers a giant whom he robs of a red hen which lays golden eggs (sun), money bags (rain), and a harp (wind-maker). The giant chases the fleeing Jack, who escapes with his plunder by cutting down the stalk, causing the giant to fall to earth in a death plunge. This tale is derived from a Norse myth, in which man (Jack) receives gifts from a giant (All-Father), which provide him with great wealth (verdure). The beanstalk typifies the Yggdrasil or World Tree. Similar stories appear in all parts of the world. See beanstalk, Jack the Giant Killer.

Jack the Giant Killer. Hero of a legend, which in similar form appears among peoples in all parts of the world. Jack is the owner of a magic cap (wisdom), coat (invisibility), shoes (swiftness) and sword (rays) which never fails to pierce that at which it is aimed. He is the slayer of many giants. In the European version he is said to have been derived from Corineus the Trojan, companion of the Trojan Brutus, a good-humored giant who killed only local giants to become king of Cornwall; or from Jalk, name assumed by Odin when he killed evil giants. Jack typifies light, the giants typify darkness.

Jack-the-Ripper. A notorious undetected criminal who in 1888-1889 committed a series of brutal murders and mutilations on women, especially prostitutes, in the East End of London. A name applied to any brutal and mysterious murderer.

Yellow Jack. Yellow fever; the quarantine flag.

JACKAL Carrion-eater. Figuratively, one who acts basely or cowardly to serve another's purpose, from the mistaken idea that the jackal finds prey for the lion. In western zodiacs animal carrying the sun through Taurus. Among African tribes it appears in folktales as a hero embodying benevolence and shrewdness. It is believed to have stolen divine knowledge and given it to mankind. Associated with Christ as a guide of souls. In Egyptian mythology the maker of paths or tracks, corresponding to the European fox, and called Up-uat (opener of ways). Sometimes confused with the dog. Symbolic of logic and wisdom. In early Christian religion a power of darkness or death; the animal which drew the bark of the sun during the night.

Jackal-headed man. Typifies astuteness, discernment, discrimination, intellect, keen sense of smell. In Egyptian mythology Anubis, the pathfinder, and the crucified Osiris. The gnostics used as a figure for Christ in a riddle.

Jackanapes. Absurdity, conceit, impertinence; the term supposedly meaning jack-of-apes or one who exhibits performing apes. Jackanapes was applied as a derisive nickname for William de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk (murdered in 1450), whose emblem was a clog and chain such as those used for tame apes. The name also is said to be derived from Jack (monkey) of Naples (Napes) as, in the 15th and 16th centuries, England imported apes or monkeys from Italy.

Jackdaw. Empty conceit, vain assumption, also imitativeness, inasmuch as it can be trained to imitate human speech.

JACOB (JAH-ACEB, YA'AGOB) Literally, heel-god or heel-holder; sometimes said to mean supplanter. In the Old Testament younger son of Isaac and Rebekah. Progenitor of the Israelites. While still in his mother's womb, as he and his older twin, Esau, were about to be born, he clutched the heel of Esau; in intimation of the future, in which, coming from behind, he would supplant Esau. Isaac loved his elder son Esau, Rebekah loved Jacob. When the twins grew into young men Jacob, meek and peaceable, lived at home tending the farm lands; Esau, fierce and turbulent, passionately followed the hunt. Returning home hungry one night after hunting, Esau sold his birthright to Jacob for a bowl of pottage. Later the smooth-skinned Jacob, disguised by Rebekah to feel like the hairy (wooded) Esau, received from his blind father the blessing of primogeniture. The anger of Esau forced Jacob to flee for his life. On his travels he stopped to sleep and dreamed of a ladder reaching from earth to heaven; when he awoke, he called the stone he had used as his pillow, Beth El (House of God). At Peniel he was forced to wrestle with a man all through the night. Jacob's opponent, unable to vanquish him, smote his thigh and it became disjointed. At daybreak the man wished to depart, but Jacob refused to let him go until he revealed his identity, whereupon the man asked for Jacob's name. When Jacob gave it, the man informed him that in the future Jacob was to be known as Israel (strives with El), as he was El. The emasculated hero went on to toil in the fields of his uncle Laban; he worked for seven years to obtain Rachel as his wife, but he was given Leah, her elder sister, instead; he toiled for another seven years and was given Rachel. For twenty years he remained in the service of Laban, and by his two wives and their handmaidens Bilhah and Zilpah he became the father of twelve sons, who became the ancestors of the twelve tribes of Israel. Jacob is regarded as a sun-deity, and, like sun deities, was forced to wander (across the sky), he had an injured thigh, which caused him to have a sacred heel or toe that did not touch the ground; he served others as a menial for the benefit of mankind (tilled the soil); he was in conflict with the deity of darkness, Esau, the moon-deity, whom he outwitted, he was associated with stone worship. Leah typifies the dawn; Rachel the moon; his children the stars. In cabalistic tradition Jacob was under luna influence and Esau under solar domination and, for this reason, Jacob was destined to rule over nations here on earth, whereas Esau was destined to rule in the world to come. See Beth-Hoglah, Heel, Hobbling, Lame king.

Jacob's ladder. Typifies soul's approach to perfection. A universal axis or World Tree. Equates with Ama-no-Hashidate, the Beanstalk, Lug's chain, stem of Jesse, Yggdrasil. A rope ladder used on ships or any steep, ladderlike ascent is called Jacob's ladder.

Jacob's shell. The palmer's or pilgrim's shell, alluding to the shell of Saint James the Great, and worn as a talisman by pilgrims to his shrine at Compostella in Spain. Jacobus is the Latin form of James.

Jacob's staff. Phallus, pilgrimage. The allusion is to the wanderings of Jacob. The name is applied to three bright stars in Orio.

Jacob's stone. Another name for Lia Fail, sacred stone of Scotland.

Jacob's voice, but the hands of Esau. Pious utterance combined with unscrupulous action, in allusion to the incident in which Jacob appears before his father disguised as Esau.

JACQUELIN (JACQUETTE)
Feminine name, diminutive of masculine Jacques.

JACQUES (1) Masculine name, French form of James, equivalent of Latin Jacobus. (2) Generic term for a poor artisan in France. From a rough, sleeved waistcoat, reaching almost to the knees, which they formerly wore. The name also is given to an absent lover. A Swiss girl was brought to the miniature Swiss village Marie Antoinette had ordered constructed at the Little Trianon in Paris. The girl sighed so for her Jacques, she became a source of amusement at court; her lover was sent for and their marriage arranged. (3) In Shakespeare's As You Like It, a cynical melancholy, philosophic lord.

Jacquerie. Insurrection of French peasants in 1358, when the French King John (Jean II) was a prisoner in England; hence any revolt of peasants. The nobles, in contempt, called the peasants Jacques Bonhomme (Goodman Jack).

JADATSKY Northern Siberian rain-maker. Shaman who offers prayers to the rain gods.

JADDUA Hebrew masculine name meaning very knowing.

JADE July birthstone. Symbolic of power and purity. In the language of gems: Unloved but remembered. Held to bring the wearer good luck, and a favorite of racing men. Health talisman. By the Aztecs revered above gold. Symbolic of immortality. In China revered above all other gems. It is said to embody the five cardinal virtues: charity, courage, justice, modesty and wisdom. It symbolizes harmonious living, intelligence, longevity and strength, and has the power to inspire bravery and prevent harm; presented to the first wife; the second wife wears diamonds. As a talisman its harmlessness equals virtuous action; its high polish, knowledge; its spotlessness, purity; its smoothness, benevolence; its sweet notes, music; its unbending firmness, righteousness; its way of exposing every flaw, ingenuousness; its way of passing from hand to hand without being sullied, moral conduct; its hardness, eternity. It supposedly is imbued with the energy derived from the yang (male) element or the divine energy of heaven. It prevents decomposition of the dead and is placed in the mouths of the dead to afford them protection on their journey and assure them long life in the next world. It is used for religious purposes in the form of altar objects, ritual vessels, etc. Because of its holiness, no woman is permitted to approach a lapidary cutting the stone.

Ground Jade. Used in mixtures by Chinese mystics; said to contain the draught of immortality and the philosopher's stone.

Jade Emperor. In China, Yu Huang; also called Lao-t'ien or Shang-ti. Supreme ruler of Taoist heaven and the universe. His palace is the fathomless immaculate jade palace situated in the constellation Ta Wei (Ursa Major). He is forgiver, giver of life, judge, vitalizing power of nature. Also called Pearly Emperor.

Jade gong. In China called Te ch'ing; symbolic of discrimination.

Jade links. In China symbolizes everlasting friendship.

Jade ring. Chinese Buddhist emblem of Mo-li-Ch'ing.

Six jade objects. In China placed in coffins as homage to heaven, earth and the four cardinal points. They are: chang (red jade) at the head to honor the south; hu (white jade) on the right side to honor the west; huang (black jade) at the feet to honor the north; kwei (green jade) on the left side to honor the east; pi (green jade) at the back to honor heaven; tsung (yellow jade) on the abdomen to honor earth.

White jade with a hole. In China represents heaven. The emperor, son of heaven, communicated with heaven through its magical qualities.

JADEITE In Mexico worn as a talisman to prolong life, protect the warrior in battle, restore youth.

JADON Hebrew masculine name meaning judging.

JAEL Literally, chamois. In Old Testament wife of Heber the Kenite. In the song of Deborah celebrated as a great heroine. She offered Sisera, the Canaanite general, refuge and while he was sleeping killed him with a tent-pin. Sisera's death was the more disgraceful because it was brought about by a woman.

JAFNHAR Literally, equally high. A name of Odin.

JAGUAR Bloodthirstiness, ferocity. Dream significance; bad omen. Animal sacred to the Inca creator deity. Among Mexican Indians called ocelotl. It symbolizes learning, skill, and is feared as a self-transformer, sorcerer, soul-eater. It typifies the nocturnal heavens dotted with stars and is an aspect of Tepeyotl.

JAH (AU, IAH, JE, YA, YAH, YA'U, YHWH) Jehovah or Yahweh in contracted form; often used in proper nouns. Hebrew Supreme Being. The Ever-Existent, God, Lord. Interchangeable with El as a name for God. In cabalism God when producing the miracle of the Red Sea. Probable source of awe, and the names Haw and Hay.

JAHAD (JEHAD, JIHAD) A religious war; war of the Moslems against the enemies of Islam. Resembles the crusades.

JAHANNAM (JEHANNUM) Moslem Hell; identical with the Hebrew Gehenna.

JAHATH Hebrew name meaning comfort, revival.

JAHAZIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah sees; sometimes expresses opposition.

JAHAZIEL Hebrew name meaning Jah reveals.

JAHDAI Hebrew name meaning guide, leader.

JAHDIEL Hebrew name meaning Jah gives joy.

JAHI In the Avesta a malicious fiend, a harlot. She embodied the spirit of whoredome destructive to mankind. She aroused Angra Mainyu from his long sleep and induced him to pour poison on the body of Gaya Maretan and caused conflict in the world. The poison of Angra Mainyu was frost.

JAHIEEL Hebrew name meaning Jah waits.

JAHMAI Hebrew name meaning Jah protects.

JAHRZEIT Anniversary of the death of a parent among Jews. Observed with prayers for the dead and other ceremonies.

JAHVEH (JAHWEH) A form of Jehovah meaning Ever-Existent fire or life. In early times an androgynous deity, Jah being a male syllable; Havvah, female.

JAHZEEL Hebrew name meaning Jah apportions.

JAİK-KHAN Literally, flood prince. Hero in Siberian flood tales. Prayed to as intervener between Over-god and man. Sacrifices to him are offered on a high mountain. Called Jajutshi (Orderer), he sends messengers with souls for new-born children. As one of the Kudai he deserts the realm of his father Over-god for the underworld, where, as prince of floods, he escorts souls bound for hell.

JAIRUS Literally, enlightener. A leader of a synagogue, whose deceased twelve-year-old daughter Jesus is said to have raised from the dead and restored to health.

JAJPUR A place of pilgrimage in Bengal, India.

JAJUTSI Altaic god or fate of the heavens. Ruler of providence; also decreer of birth. Writer of man's good deeds, opposed to Kormos who writes a man's evil deeds. Resembles Dzajaga, Kaba, Norms, Tien-ming, Zajan.

JAKEH Hebrew name meaning harkening.

JAKES FARMER A privy cleaner. In colloquial English, jakes is an expression for filth, untidiness.

JAKIM Hebrew name meaning a setter-up.

JAKIS Japanese malignant air spirits which cause illness.

JALK (JALKR) Name assumed by Odin when he brought judgment upon an evil-doer and when he killed the giant Vafthrudnir. Origin of Jack the Giant-Killer.

JALOUSIE A blind which admits light but excludes rain and sun. Symbolic of jealousy and of secrecy. Jalousie is French for jealousy and the name was chosen because it prevents others from seeing in.

JALYOGINI Panjab spirit which lives in streams and wells and casts spells on children and women which cause death and sickness.

JAMAICA An island in the Greater Antilles symbolized by a black crocodile.

JAMBHALA Buddhist Yidam or tutelary deity; a form of Kubera. In some localities and manifestations worshiped as a wealth god. His emblems are: jambhara (lemon), nakula (mongoose), sankha (conch shell), trisula (trident). His vahana (mount) is a horse dragon. Color: black or white. Ornaments: Bodhisattva. In Tibet called Dsam-bha-la.

JAMBHARA Buddhist non-tantric symbol, a lemon.

JAMBRES AND JANNES Two of the principal Egyptian magicians who opposed Aaron and Moses by attempting to imitate the miracles which they exhibited. They are called sons of Balaam.

JAMBU Hindu tree of life. Universe or World Tree over which Siva is lord and which yields the soma, drink of immortality. Its roots are in Yama's underworld, its trunk is the sustaining axis of the universe, it crowns Mount Meru, its tips are in heaven and it casts its shadow on the moon. Identical with the Jambutri-shring; resembles Parijata and Yggdrasil.

JAMBUDVIPA (JAMBUDWIPA) In Buddhism the world. Chinese Buddhist realm presided over by Pa-no-ka. In Hinduism island of the Jambu tree. In Jainism continent on which we live.

JAMBUTRI-SHRING Tibetan Buddhist tree of knowledge with roots in Lamayin and fruit in Lhayul. Identical with the Jambu.

JAMES (JAMIE, JEM, JIM, JIMMIE) Masculine name; a variant of Jacob. In Latin rendered Jacobus. Usually interpreted to mean supplanter.

James the Great (or Elder). Christian apostle. Son of Zebedee and Salome, a follower of Jesus; brother of John. Zebedee and his two sons were fishermen. By Jesus, because of their energy and zeal, the brothers were nicknamed Boanerges (sons of thunder). James, put to death by Herod Agrippa, was the first Christian martyr. He is identified with the constellation Sagittarius. Symbolized by a scallop shell or staff because he was a pilgrim.

James the Just. Sometimes identified as a brother of Jesus, and identical with James the Less. He supposedly was stoned to death about 62 A.D.

James the Less (or Younger).

One of the twelve Christian apostles. Son of Alphaeus or Cleophas and Mary. He is called the less or younger to distinguish him from James, son of Zebedee. First bishop of Jerusalem. Identified with the constellation Gemini. Symbolized by a fuller's pole as he was killed by a blow on the head by Simeon the fuller, with a pole.

JAMIN Hebrew name meaning right hand, prosperity.

JAMSHID (GIAMSCHID, JAM-SHYD) Legendary king of the Peris. In punishment for his boast of immortality, he was compelled to assume mortal form and dwell on earth, where he became a mighty king of Iran and ruled for 700 years, 300 of which were extraordinarily happy and prosperous. He had the Deevs, or Genii, as his slaves. He possessed a seven-ringed golden cup, which was filled with the elixir of life, which predicted the future, and which surveyed the whole world. Jamshid was the material and spiritual educator of mankind. He taught men the arts of weaving, the cultivation of the soil, healing, the use of iron and wine-making, and he introduced the solar year. He was ruler during the golden age, which was followed by the reign of Azhi Dahaka, who destroyed him. In the Avesta, he is the son of Vivanghvant, and the first to offer haoma to Ahura Mazda. He is said to be the mortal form of Yima Khshaeta, a sun hero. After his reign as a mortal he became sovereign of the abode of the blessed dead, in which role he compares with the Hindu Yama. Because of his wisdom, he is likened to Solomon. His cup of plenty resembles the cornucopia and Sangraal.

Jewel of Jamshid. Famous ruby. Called torch of night and cup of the sun because of its splendor.

JAN Sun nat of the Burmese Kachins. With Shitta (moon) worshiped once each year by the chief.

JANARDANA Hindu god, who takes the name of Brahma, Vishnu or Siva, accordingly as he creates, preserves or destroys.

JANE (JANET, JANICE, JEAN, JEANNE, JEANNETTE, JENNY, NETTI) Feminine name corresponding to masculine John.

Jane Eyre. Heroine of a novel of the same name by Charlotte Bronte. Jane is intense and timid with a deeply rooted sense of duty; she is strong in adversity.

JANI City gates of Rome; after Janus.

JANICOT Basque oak god. Identical with Janus.

JANIZARY A member of a brutal and violent military corps recruited from young prisoners. For centuries it furnished the bodyguard of the Turkish sultan and became very influential in the government. Mahmoud II in 1826 suppressed the organization by ordering thousands of its members massacred. The term is still applied to a Turkish soldier.

JANN Arabian demon of the lowest order. In some accounts the name Jann is given as the father of the jinn.

JANNES See Jambres.

JANOAH Hebrew name meaning resting place.

JANUARY Period of winter. Personified by a man seated at a table set with wine glasses. Symbolized by the azalea, cardinal bird, garnet, snow drops and Waterbearer, emblems of Aquarius. The name is derived from Janus, Roman god of all beginnings. Yule celebrations extend from about December 25 into the first days of January. December is designated the former yule, January the after yule, because one comes before the sun turns itself about (at winter solstice) and one after.

January First. Among most peoples day celebrating the conclusion of the festival of rejoicing because of the return of the sun. Christian Feast of Circumcision or Feast of Fools.

January Seventh. Japanese festive day on which rice gruel cooked with seven kinds of herbs is eaten as a charm against bad luck and disease. Noble families attend the Grey-Black Horse Ceremony at the palace. Those who see it supposedly escape disaster for a year.

JANUS (DIANUS, IANUS, JANUS BIFRONS) Ancient Italic sun and supreme deity. His wife's name is given as Jana, and he is said to have been the lover of Cardea, goddess of hinges (on which the year swings). In later mythology he ranked second to Jupiter, the sky god. Janus opened and closed the gates of heaven morning and evening. Doorkeeper of heaven, he was revered as divinity presiding over entrances, gates, etc. After him, city gates were called Jani. When Jupiter supplanted him as the leading deity, he was appealed to as mediator through whom petitions and prayers were transmitted to the other gods. The first hour of each day, the calends of each month and the first month after the winter solstice were all sacred to him. Sacrifices consisting of barley, cake and wine were offered to him. His special feast was the agonium celebrated January 9. Under his archway, supplemented by a temple, which was open in times of war, closed in times of peace, Roman warriors, to whom he gave special protection, marched off to war. In 700 years these gates and temple were closed three times. He usually is portrayed with two faces, one facing east, one facing west, said to symbolize beginnings and endings, his knowledge of past and future events, light (or good) and darkness (or evil), the two sides of a door, or his post, which was at the turn, or doorway, of the year. He carried a key in one hand and a rod or scepter in the other. In rare instances he was portrayed as four-faced, typifying the four directions, and his temple was of quadruple design, all four sides being equal. Occasionally represented by cattle or rams with two horns pointing fore and aft respectively. His usual aspect has made Janus-faced a synonym for deceit, misleading, two-faced. In one legend Janus was king of Italy. He received exiled deities with great kindness and shared his throne with the exiled Cronus, whose name became Saturn. Their joint reign was so peaceful and prosperous, it was called the golden age. His name is the source of janitor and January; it yields ever-existent one light or sunlight; it is akin to Hans, Johns, Jonas, Jones. A surname of Janus is Quirinius. Compare Aker, Brahma, El of Gebal.

JAO (IA, JA) Gnostic variation for the hidden name of Jah (Jehovah). The letters themselves carried because of their talismanic power. Akin to Abraxas, Ao, Aum, Jaoth, JHVH, Tao. See name.

JAOTH Designation used by Babylonians meaning god or lord. Compare El, Jao.

JAPHETH (JAPHET) Literally, enlargement or extender. In Hebrew tradition eldest of Noah's three sons, born 100 years before the flood. He was the ruler of the cold north, and his seven sons with their posterity are said to have been the ancestors of the Aryans or Indo-Europeans as distinguished from the Hamitic or Semitic peoples. According to one legend Japheth was the father of Histon, from whom descended the British, French, German and Italian peoples, and the "enlargement" has now reached into the United States. In an old Irish legend the father of Magog, ancient ancestress of the people of Ireland. He is said to be identical with Iapetus, the Greek Titan, represented as progenitor of the Greek race.

JAPHIA Hebrew name meaning high.

JAPONICA December 21 birthday flower symbolic of excellence. In China the love tree, symbolic of married happiness.

JAQUENETTA In Shakespeare's Love's Labour Lost a country wench.

JAR A burial place. A rain charm and source of plenty. A jar carries the same symbolism as a vase, which see.

Bottomless jar. In ancient Greece placed on the graves of unmarried women, thirsty ones, who supposedly put an end to drought when their own thirsts were quenched.

Canopic jar. Used by Egyptians of antiquity for the burial of the viscera removed from bodies in process of mummification. Four jars were used and placed under the special protection of the four gods of the dead: Amset, lord of the north, who had a human head, and protected the large intestines and stomach; Duamutef, lord of the east, who had a jackal's head, and protected the heart and lungs; Horus Hapi, lord of the south, who had the head of a baboon or dog, and protected the small intestines; Kebeh, lord of the west, who had a hawk's head, and protected the gall-bladder and liver. The four were the sons of Horus.

JARASANDHA In Hinduism one of miraculous birth, having been born of two mothers. He was of remarkable strength and increased daily as the moon does in its first phase. Probably a moon deity. His birth compares with that of Huitzilopochtli and Osiris.

JAREB Hebrew name meaning avenger.

JARED Hebrew name meaning descent.

JARESI AH Hebrew name meaning Jah gives a couch.

JARIB Hebrew name meaning striving.

JARL (RIG-JARL) In Norse mythology son of Heimdal in his human form known as Rig Mothir. Ancestor of the jarls or earls (noblemen). Taught runes by Heimdal. In Scandinavia a jarl is a chieftain or leader next to a king. See Churl, Heimdal, Thrall.

JARLEY, MRS. In Dickens' Old Curiosity Shop the kind-hearted owner of a traveling wax-works show. She befriends Little Nell. Mrs. Jarley is often applied to an entertainment in which the actors assume the poses of wax figures.

JARMUTH Hebrew masculine name meaning height.

JARNDYCE, JOHN In Dickens' Bleak House guardian of Esther Summerson. A shrewd and amiable philanthropist; a constant litigant in Chancery in the case of Jarndyce v. Jarndyce, which Dickens intended as a satire upon the English court of Chancery and its dilatory methods.

JARNSAXA In Norse mythology by Thor the mother of Magni (Night) and Modi (Wrath). She was one of the Vana-mothers of Heimdal, and she crushed iron which came from clay and the sea in the World Mill. A personification of the waves. See Vana-mothers.

JARNVID (JARNVITHR) Literally, Ironwood. Norse forest east of Midgard. The leaves of its trees were of iron, and it was the abode of a race of giant witches, the Jarnvids (Jarnvidthiur), one of which was the dam of many wolf-shaped giant sons (frost and storm demons).

JAROA Hebrew name meaning new moon.

JARPHOONK Hypnotism as practiced by conjurers in India.

JAR-SUB Siberian earth deity; name signifying land-water.

JARVIS (GERVAIS, JERVIS) Masculine name; first element from the Germanic through Norman French, meaning spear; second element from the Celtic, meaning vassel.

JASHEN Hebrew name meaning shining.

JASHER Hebrew name meaning upright, noble-minded.

JASHOBEAM Hebrew name meaning the people return.

JASHUB Hebrew name meaning turning back.

JASMINE (JESSAMINE) Amiability, beauty, delicacy, folly, fragrance, love. Emblem of the morning star and of North Carolina. Sacred flower in Ceylon and Persia. In China typifies feminine beauty and sweetness. Attribute of Virgin Mary, and because of its star-shaped blossom, symbolic of divine hope, grace and heavenly felicity.

Cape jasmine. Joy.

Carolina jasmine. Separation.

Indian jasmine. In the language of flowers: I attach myself to you.

Night blooming jasmine.

Love's vigil.

Spanish jasmine. Sensuality.

White jasmine. Amiability.

Variety usually referred to in poetry.

Yellow jasmine. April 22 birthday flower; symbolic of elegance and grace.

JASON (IASON) (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning healer. Probably a Greek form of the Hebrew name Joshua. (2) In Greek mythology son of Aeson, king of Iolcus, who was dethroned by his brother Pelias. To save the life of his ten-year-old son, Aeson placed him in the care of the Centaur Chiron, where Jason remained for ten years and then returned to demand the kingdom which his uncle had usurped. Pelias agreed to surrender the throne if Jason obtained the Golden Fleece (sunlit clouds) from Colchis. Jason assembled a group of about fifty heroes, the Argonauts, built the ship Argo, and set out on the perilous expedition. After many strange and dangerous adventures, including a visit to the land of the Amazons and passage through the treacherous Symplegades, he reached Colchis, where the king demanded he plough fields with a fire-breathing, brazen-hoofed bull and sow them with dragon's teeth, from which an army of warriors sprang. With the assistance of the king's daughter Medea, a sorceress, he accomplished the tasks, destroyed the warriors, gained possession of the treasure, and, accompanied by Medea, fled in his ship the Argo. Jason deserted Medea for Creusa (or Glauce), whom Medea killed. Jason typifies the sun, which is carried across the sky in a ship to the land of night, where he is aided by the dawn (Medea), whom he deserts for the gloaming (Creusa). The adventures of Jason resemble those of Cadmus, Heracles, Odysseus and Theseus. See animal nurse under nurse, Argo, Argonauts.

JASPER (GASPARD, KASPER)

(1) Masculine name from the Persian, meaning treasure-master. (2) Courage, joy, praise, pride of strength, wisdom. It supposedly provides constancy. Dream significance: love returned. One of the stones in the breastplate of the Hebrew high-priest and one of the foundation stones of the wall of the New Jerusalem. The Biblical stone may have resembled green chalcedony. The name comes from the Hebrew jaspeh or yashpteh. It yields ever-existent light.

Jasper seal. Used by Roman emperors as a charm.

Opal jasper. Humility.

Ribbard or striped jasper. Despair.

JASTONI Fish on which Saint Brendan and Irish monks who accompanied him on his seven-year journey in search of the Islands of Paradise held Easter Mass. Analogue of Jhasa.

JATAKA One of the legends relating to the successive existence of Buddha. It contains the birth story and other doctrinal material and is one of the sources of Aesop's Fables and innumerable fairy tales, folk legends and songs.

JATHNIEL Hebrew name meaning God is giving.

JAVELIN Carries the same symbolism as spear, which see.

JAVERT In Victor Hugo's Les Miserables personification of relentless law. He pursues the ex-convict Jean Valjean, but finally commits suicide rather than arrest his prey.

JAVERZAHARSES Nymphs of Armenian legend. Probably female kaches. They were invisible and endowed with an imperishable knowledge. They could learn nothing new, nor could they forget what they knew. They loved rejoicings, singings and weddings. Although their name means perpetual bride, they were held to be mortal.

JAY (1) Masculine name derived from a family and a place name. (2) Because of its noisy, restless character, bird symbolic of chatterbox, coarse or loud woman, poor actor, simpleton, unscrupulous windbag. Colloquial for nag, scold. In United States a country bumpkin, dupe for sharpers, greenhorn. Thus a jay walker is one who crosses the street without observing traffic regulations, one who, like a country jake or jay, is unfamiliar with the ways of the city.

Jayhawker. In United States a free-booter, guerilla, particularly one of the border ruffians, in the free-soil conflict in Kansas during the Civil War, who combined pillage with guerilla fighting in neighboring states, especially Missouri. Hence a designation for a native of Kansas.

Jayhawk State. Kansas.

JAZER Hebrew name meaning fortified.

JC Jesus Christos; Jesus Christ.

JE (1) A symbol noting that portion of Pentateuch which bears traces of Jehovistic and Elohistic origin. (2) French form of the pronoun I. Je yields ever-existent, and appears in Jehovah, Jimmu, Jove, Jumala, Jupiter, vowels being interchangeable.

JEALOUSY Typified by a crouching leopard, green color, green eyes. In an Italian icon personified by a winged woman in a program gown covered with ears and eyes. A cock sits on her arm, and she carries a bundle of thorns.

JEAN Used as both a feminine and masculine name; a form of Joan and of John. Feminine form is usually written Jeanne.

Jean Baptiste. Nickname given to Canada or the typical Canadian peasant.

Jean Crapaud. Sobriquet for a Frenchman. Also Johnny Crapaud.

JEBEL MUSA (MOUSA) Formerly called Abyla; one of the Pillars of Heracles. Also known as Ape's Hill. Jebel Musa is Arabic for Mountain of Moses.

JEBERECHIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah is blessing.

JEBUS Hebrew name meaning trodden down. The name of Jerusalem before the time of David.

JEBUSITES In Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel the Roman Catholics, alluding to the fact that England was Roman Catholic before the Reformation.

JECHOLIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah is able.

JECHONIAH Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah is establishing.

JED A symbol noting that portion of Pentateuch bearing traces of Johovistic, Elohistic and Deuteronomist origin.

JEDIAH (JED) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning Jehovah is knowing.

JEDDLER, DR. One who looks upon the world as a great practical joke, too absurd to be regarded seriously by a rational man. From the character in Dickens' Battle of Life.

JEDEDIAH (JEDIDIAH) Hebrew masculine name meaning Beloved by Jah. A name given to Solomon at his birth by Nathan the prophet.

JEDIAEL Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah knows.

JEDWOOD JUSTICE Putting an undesirable person to death and then placing him on trial. Along the border of England and Scotland meted to mosstroopers. Also known as Jeburgh or Jeddart justice. From the name of a borough in Scotland.

JEFFERSON BRICK An impulsive loud politician. From the character in Dickens' Martin Chuzzlewit.

JEFFREY (JEFF) Masculine name, variant of Geoffrey.

JEFFREYS, GEORGE English judge, 1st Baron Jeffreys of Wem. Notorious for his brutality and injustice.

JEGAR-SAHADUTHA Heap of stones erected to mark the scene of the covenant between Jacob and Laban. The name is from the Aramean signifying heap of testimony or witness.

JEHANNUM Same as Jahan-nam, which see.

JEHDEIAH Hebrew name meaning union of Jah.

JEHEZEKEL Hebrew name meaning God strengthens.

JEHIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah is living.

JEHIEL Hebrew name meaning God lives.

JEHIZKIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah is strong.

JEHOADAH Hebrew name meaning Jah unveils.

JEHOADDAN Hebrew name meaning Jah gives delight.

JEHOAHAZ Hebrew name meaning Jah upholds.

JEHOHANAN Hebrew name meaning Jah is gracious.

JEHOIACHIN Hebrew name meaning God establishes.

JEHOIADA Hebrew name meaning Jah knows.

Jehoiada box. A box with a slot to receive coins used as a child's saving bank or a box in which donations are received.

JEHOIAKIM Hebrew name meaning Jah sets up.

JEHOIAKIN Hebrew name meaning Jah's appointed.

JEHOIARIB Hebrew name meaning Jah contends.

JEHONADAB Hebrew name meaning Jah is liberal.

JEHONATHAN Hebrew name meaning Jah gives.

JEHORAM (JORAM) Literally, Jah is high. A wicked Hebrew king who departed from his faith and worshiped false gods. In some accounts he was murdered by Jehu, one of his generals, and his body was left to rot in a field; in some accounts he died of an incurable disease, which gave his body a loathsome smell. His manner of death is said to have been a punishment for heresy. Compare Asa.

JEHOSHABEATH (JEHOSHEBA) Hebrew name meaning Jah makes oath.

JEHOSHAPHAT Hebrew name meaning Jah is Judge. In the Old Testament the name of the valley of the judgment of God. Metaphorical name of a place where, at the sound of the last trumpet on Judgment Day, all souls in heaven and hell will meet and listen to their eternal sentence, after which they will return to their respective places. In attempts to apply the name to an actual place it is said to have been where the great battle was waged by King Jehoshaphat, and that souls, while on earth, resumed their bodies to listen to their sentences. Since the third century the name has been applied to a deep and narrow glen east of Jerusalem.

JEHOSHUA Hebrew name meaning Jah saves.

JEHOVAH (IAH, IAO, IAW, IE, IEU, IEUE, JAH, JAHVE, JAHWEH, JALDABAOth, JAO, JEHOVA, JHVH, YAHWEH, YAHOWAH, YAW, YHWH) Among the Hebrews signifies He is or I am, the eternal and self-existent. In English version generally rendered Lord. Since the time of Moses a name which designates the covenant God of the Hebrew people. It never has the article before it, nor does it appear in plural form. Jews do not pronounce the name, and in scripture readings substitute Adonai (Lord) or Elohim (God) except in the expression Adonai Jehovah, for which is said Adonai Elohim (Lord God). His abode is in heaven, He is all powerful, most wise, and without equal. He created the universe in six days and established the Sabbath as the seventh day of the week. He fashioned man and He formed woman out of the rib of man. He fructified the earth and He healed the sick. He is the Aleph-Tau (Beginning and End), the Logos, the Universal Mind, the Word. He is the all-knowing and all-seeing; when man became wicked, He sent a flood, saving two of all seed that life on earth might be revived. He appeared to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Moses. In early worship he appears to have been God of the south and of the noonday sun, and the original deity of the Passover was, according to some, like Dionysus Sabazius, preeminently a protector of barley and the vine. His early rituals also corresponded to those of Dionysus, incorporating barley-sheaves and new wine, animal sacrifices, ecstatic dances, libations and love-making. The serpent, the antagonist of Jehovah, probably in early rites was associated with Him or was one of His aspects as an earth or fertility deity. He is symbolized by a hand emerging from clouds, a seven-branched candlestick, and His name in Hebrew characters inscribed within a nimbed equilateral triangle is used as a talisman. His symbolic colors are blue for glory, purple for dignity and splendor, red for love and sacrifice, white for joy and supreme purity. Chavah, an alternative name of Eve, is akin to Jehovah, which yields Ever-existent (Je or Ya) fire or living A (hovah). Other forms in which His name appears on papyri and in the cabala are Astaphaios, Eloaios, Lord of Sabaoth, Oraios, Q're. He resembles Ea and Enlil. Compare Adonai, Elath-Iahu, Elohim, Iahu, Jephthah.

Jehovah Elohim. In the cabala a name of the third Sefhira, Binah. See Sefhira.

Jehovahjireh. Hebrew name meaning Jehovah will provide. The name was given by Abraham to the place where he had been about to sacrifice his son Isaac, and alludes to incident in which God provided a substitute offering.

Jehovahnissi. Hebrew name meaning Jehovah is my banner.

Jehovahshalom. Hebrew name meaning Jehovah is peace or prosperity, and given by Gideon to an altar which he built where the Angel-Jehovah had appeared to him and saluted him by saying, "Peace be unto thee."

Jehovah Tzabaoth. In the cabala a name of Netzach, the seventh Sephira, signifying Lord of Armies. See Sephira.

Jehovahtzidkenu. Hebrew name meaning Jehovah our righteousness. A name given to Christ.

JEHOZABAD Hebrew name meaning Jah endows.

JEHOZADAK Hebrew name meaning Jah is just.

JEHU Literally, Jah is he. In Old Testament son of Jehoshaphat. A general in Jehoram's army, he used his chariots in a furious attack and killed Jehoram, Ahaziah and their issue, and became king of Judah. From his name has come Jehu, meaning a fast or furious driver, a reckless driver, or, humorously, a coachman or driver.

JEHUBBAH Hebrew name meaning Jah conceals.

JEHUCAL Hebrew name meaning Jah is able.

JEHUD Hebrew name meaning honorable.

JEHUDI Hebrew name meaning a Jew.

JEIEL Hebrew name meaning God snatches away.

JEJAMO-KARPO Tibetan Buddhist princess of the Yaksas. Also called Pho-zem-na-po.

JEKABZEEL Hebrew name meaning God gathers.

JEKAMEAM Hebrew name meaning standing of the people.

JEKAMIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah avenges.

JEKUTHIEL Hebrew name meaning Jah is mighty.

JEKYLL, DOCTOR Hero with a dual personality in Robert Louis Stevenson's The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Doctor Jekyll, a kindly physician, discovers a drug that transforms him into a brutal criminal who becomes known as Mr. Hyde. By the use of another drug, he returns to his own kindly personality. After committing a murder, he resolves to have nothing more to do with his evil self, but the effects of the drug are too strong and he lapses into Mr. Hyde unwillingly. When he is unable to procure an ingredient by which he can recover the form of Dr. Jekyll, he commits suicide. He typifies the dual aspects of good and evil within one man, the desires of the body, which war against the rules of the mind.

JELLYBY, MRS. In Dickens' Bleak House an untidy woman who, in her devotion to foreign missions, neglects her household and forgets charity begins at home. Her children are shamefully neglected and a poor beggar dying of starvation is ordered from her door.

JELLY FISH A weakling. In Japanese mythology a form of Hirugo (see), a merry patron of good fortune.

JEMIMA (JEMIMAH) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning a dove, fortunate, pure.

JEMINY (JIMMINY) A corruption of Gemini or of Jesu Domine (Jesus Lord). Used in mild oaths.

JEMSHID See Jamshid.

JEMUEL Hebrew name meaning God is light.

JEN Lightning god of the Ziryen, a Finno-Ugric people. He slings lightning against Kul (devil).

JENGHIS KHAN (CHINGISKAN, GENGHIS KHAN) A Mongol conqueror, a military genius and ruthless plunderer. A title signifying greatest lord. His original name was Temudjin.

JENGK-TONGK (KUL-JUNGK) Finno-Ugric water spirit. Fishermen sacrifice to him.

JENKIN In English folk custom, the roughest and tallest village lad was chosen to play the part of Jenkin each year in the performance of the Merry-Men Masque. Jenkin (or Little John) was one of Robin Hood's deputies or lieutenants and noted for his skill with the bow. Probably a frost spirit. Root of the names Jackson, Jenkinson, Johnson.

JENKINS Colloquialism for one who is a flatterer of persons in high official or social position or of the society reporter of a newspaper. A contemptuous term.

Jenkins, Mrs. Winifred. In Smollett's Humphry Clinker a lady's maid noted for her bad spelling and ludicrous mistakes in English. Probably the original of Mrs. Malaprop.

JENNIFER Feminine name; variant of Guinevere.

JENNY L'OUVIERE A fanciful name for the typical hard-working Parisian seamstress.

JENNY WREN Regarded as sacred by the druids who drew auguries from her chirpings, i.e. from the wisdom of her speech. In nursery rhyme, the sweetheart of Cock Robin (Robin Redbreast), who promises she shall feed on cherry pie and have currant wine to drink, but she replies she must wear her "plain brown gown," and "never go too fine."

JEPHTHAH (JEPHTE) Literally, opposer. In the Old Testament son of Gilead and a harlot, probably a sacred prostitute. His father's legitimate sons cast him out, and he became a robber chief noted as an able and courageous fighter. The Ammonites invaded their territory, and his brothers called upon him to lead them. He consented provided he was to remain their leader after the war, as well, and his brothers agreed to appoint him judge. Thus an outlaw, he became judge. For his success, he vowed to sacrifice the first person he met on his return home; that person was his only child, a virgin daughter. The sacrifice was thought to have taken place at the winter solstice and, in the belief that wells were unfit for use during this period, they were said to be poisoned by the blood of Jephthah's daughter. As one who sacrificed his daughter, Jephthah typifies one who placed his devotion to God above all else. It may represent a surrogate. See surrogate. Interpreters state his daughter was saved, as were Isaac and Iphigenia. The suggestion that his mother was a prostitute connected with the temple indicates that early worship of Jehovah was orgiastic. Jephthah may have been a sun deity. Paul numbers Jephthah among the saints of the Old Testament.

16546

FOR REFERENCE

NOT TO BE TAKEN FROM THE ROOM

 23 012

PRINTED IN U.S.A.

Dictionary of Mythology Folklore and Symbols

by

Gertrude Jobs

The Scarecrow Press, Inc.

William Jessup University Library
333 Sunset Blvd.
Rocklin, Ca 95765

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2022 with funding from Kahle/Austin Foundation

2591

Dictionary of Mythology Folklore and Symbols

by

Gertrude Jobs

Part 2

The Scarecrow Press, Inc.
New York 1962

JEPHUNEH Hebrew name meaning appearing.

JERAHMEEL Hebrew name meaning God is merciful.

JERBA An island in the Gulf of Cebes on which are Roman remains and ruins. Legendary home of the lotus-eaters.

JERED (JARED) Hebrew name meaning flowing, low.

JEREMIAH (JEREMIAS, JEREMY, JERRY) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning Jah is high. (2) In the Old Testament one of the chief prophets. Born of the race of priests, he was destined of God to be a prophet, and consecrated for that object before his birth. His prophecies caused him to suffer a life filled with afflictions and persecutions. Jehoiakim threw his prophetic roll into the fire and sought his life. Zedekiah ignored his warning that the Jews would suffer seventy years captivity for their sins. He was in prison when Jerusalem was taken by Nebuchadnezzar, who offered to release him and give him a home in Babylon, but Jeremiah chose to remain with the remnant of Jews that carried him to Egypt, where he died. Naturally mild, retiring and sensitive, ill-usage could not alienate him and he never shrank from danger; threats were unable to silence him. In art shown with a scroll, staff or wand in his hand.

Jeremiad. A lament over degeneracy or wickedness. A complaint or tale of despair, disappointment, sorrow or woe. So called from the book of Lamentations in the Old Testament attributed to Jeremiah.

JEREMOTH (JERIMUTH) Hebrew name meaning elevation.

JEREMY DIDDLE Protagonist in Kenny's Raising of the Wind. A clever, impetuous swindler. He lives on others, borrows from them, and never repays them.

JERIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah is foundation.

JERIBAI Hebrew name meaning Jah contends.

JERICO Ancient Palestinian city. It was the first city taken in Canaan by Joshua, who had miraculous aid in its destruction when, after the priests circumambulated the city for seven days, God answered his trumpets by the crumbling of the walls. Only Rahab and her household escaped. Thus the first city captured in the Promised Land. Joshua pronounced a curse upon the person who should rebuild it, and the curse fell on Hiel. All his children died, but the reconstructed city flourished, to become second in importance to Jerusalem. At Jericho, Christ is said to have healed two blind men and to have forgiven Zaccheus; it contained a school of prophets; it was the residence of Elisha who used salt to sweeten (heal) its waters. Jericho was situated in a valley of dreary limestone hills, one of which, the Quarantana, derives its name from the tradition that it was the scene of Christ's forty days fast and temptation. Anciently, the plain close by the city was well watered and fruitful; in modern times it has been known as a wasteland. The road from Jericho to Jerusalem, through narrow and rocky passes abounding with ravines and precipices, was infested with bandits and robbers, as mentioned in the story of the good Samaritan.

Proverbially Jericho has become the name of some indefinite place and it appears in many phrases.

Gone to Jericho. Gone no one knows where. Also gone to a house of pleasure, the allusion being to a house of pleasure kept by Henry VIII near Chelmsford. When he absented himself there, the expression used was, "He has gone to Jericho."

Go to Jericho. Get going, Go to the devil, Go and hang yourself, or something more offensive.

Stay in Jericho. Wait until you are older and wiser. Stay in retirement in a place of obscurity or waiting, stay in an out-of-the-way place, the allusion being to the statement in which David bids his servants who have had their beards cut off to tarry at Jericho until they have grown in again. The phrase usually is used contemptuously.

JERMYN Masculine name from the German, meaning bright, glittering.

JEROBOAM Literally, enlarger. (1) In Old Testament Jeroboam I was the son of Nebat, an Ephraimite. While an officer in Solomon's army he plotted against Solomon and was obliged to flee to Egypt. After Solomon's death he was summoned by the ten tribes to return and present their demands to Rehoboam; when the demands were refused, he led a revolt and became the first king of Israel, reigning from 937 to 915 B.C. He introduced idolatry and its attendant priesthood, with priests selected from the lowest classes to supersede the sons of Aaron. While the measure was effective, it revealed his weakness. He was the object of divine denunciation through Ahijah and the unknown prophet. He remained at war with Judah all his life, and after the brief reign of his son Nadab his family was doomed to extinction. His name has become a byword for wickedness. (2) Jeroboam II, son and successor of Joash, in 825 B.C. He was the thirteenth king of Israel and he ruled for forty-one years. In his long reign Israel reached the peak of prosperity, but his reign was marked by luxury, oppression and vice. (3) In proverbial English a cup or goblet of great size, the name being derived from Jeroboam II.

JEROHAM Hebrew name meaning loved.

JEROME (JERRY) Masculine name from the Greek through the Latin, meaning holy name.

JERONIMO A character appearing in the plays of Thomas Kyd. He uses extravagant language and his expressions have become street slang. On making an ill-timed statement about the king, he says to himself, "Go by, Jeronimo." This expression appears in many literary works.

JERRY Masculine name; diminutive of Gerald, Gerard, Jeremiah, Jerome.

Jerry builder. A speculator who erects a building in a mean or unsubstantial manner, employing materials and work that are fraudulent or inferior. Probably from Jeremiah, the prophet of decay and ruin.

Jerry Sneak. In Samuel Foote's The Mayor of Garratt, a hen-pecked husband.

JERSEYAN First of the North American glacial periods.

JERSEY LIGHTNING Any strong intoxicating liquor; named for the potent apple brandy formerly made in New Jersey.

JERUBBAAL Hebrew name meaning contender with Baal.

JERUBBESHETH Hebrew name meaning contender with the idol.

JERUEL Hebrew name meaning foundation of God.

JERUSALEM Chief city of the Holy Land, where man communes with God. Its site on elevated ground was early hallowed by God's trial of Abraham's faith. The most ancient name of the city was Salem; later it was called Jebus. It was reckoned as a city belonging to Judah until it was stormed and captured by David, after which it was called the city of David or Jerusalem, and it became the political center of the kingdom. It was taken and retaken many times; it was twice destroyed. It was destroyed by the Babylonians, and captured by Alexander of Macedon. Ptolemy of Egypt took it by assault on the Sabbath, when the Jews scrupled to fight. The tyrant Antiochus Epiphanes set up an image of Jupiter in the temple, using every means to force the people into idolatrous worship. Under the Maccabees, the Jews once again recovered their independence, but a century later it was conquered by the Romans. Herod the Great spent vast sums embellishing the city and to it came Jesus. Titus again destroyed the city. Adrian planted a Roman colony on the site, banished all Christians and Jews, prohibiting their return on pain of death, and called the place Aelia Capitolina, which he consecrated to heathen deities. In the time of Constantine it resumed its ancient name of Jerusalem, which it has retained since. Chosroes, king of Persia, slew 90,000 of its men and demolished the Christian churches. Subsequently Christians and Moslems have fought for it. At the present time, it stands as the holy city of Christians, Jews and Moslems, and symbolizes a center of religious associations and hopes. Jews assemble on Fridays, and more or less on other days, at the wall believed to have formed part of their ancient temple, where they weep and wail, taking up the lamentations of Jeremiah, and pray for the coming of the Messiah. In medieval Europe, Jerusalem was thought to be the center or navel of the earth, a place held by Troy in pre-Christian thought. Daniel saw it thriving, destroyed and rebuilt; thus life of the universe in miniature. Arabs call modern Jerusalem El-Kuds, the holy. When David named the city Jerusalem, he may merely have been reviving an ancient name; Urusalem (Jerusalem). Etymologically Urusalem yields light-essence-of-the-sun-god, or city of Eros or Horus (sun lord). City of Lament, the Harlot, Holy City, the Virgin, are epithets applied to it. It compares with Lassa (Lhassa) and Peiping (Peking).

Jerusalem pony. A donkey.

New Jerusalem. Celestial city described in the Revelation of Saint John. Future abode of the redeemed, where there are fountains and beautiful palaces, and the glory of heaven. A paradise.

JERUSHA Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning married, possessed.

JESHIMON Hebrew name meaning a waste.

JESHOHAIAH Hebrew name meaning humbled by Jah.

JESHU Jesus, which see. A name cognate with Hou Chi.

JESHUA Hebrew name meaning God is salvation.

JESHURUN Hebrew name meaning the upright one. A term applied to Israel.

JESIMIEL Hebrew name meaning God places.

JESSAMINE (JESHAMY, JESSAMIN) The jasmine, which see. A spelling used to distinguish certain species found in the United States.

JESSE (JESS) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning Jehovah exists; the Lord is. Feminine form is Jessica (Jessie). (2) Grandson of Ruth the Moabitess; son of Obed, and father of eight sons, the youngest of whom was David. In Christian tradition ancestor of Jesus. Representations of the geneology as given by Matthew are shown in embroideries, glass windows and sculpture with Jesse portrayed in a recumbent position, a vine or tree growing from his loins and showing the personages of the royal and prophetic house upon its branches, while at the top is the Virgin and Child or a cross. Sometimes a tree springs from the bowels, breast and mouth of Jesse, the symbolic trunk spreading to the left and right, with branches bearing the kings of Judah said to be the ancestors of Christ. At the top, on a throne or on the chalice of a gigantic flower columbine, is Christ. Around him are seven doves, which adorn him like a cruciform nimbus, typifying the seven gifts of the spirit: counsel, fear, knowledge, piety, strength, understanding, wisdom. Jesse thus typifies an ancestor of a Messiah. Jesse is identical with Issi and from the same root as Isaiah (Jesaiah); it yields ever-existent light. (3) A branched candlestick representing the geneological tree of Jesse, and, for this reason, any branched candelabrum used in religious services. The term likewise applies to the embroideries, glass windows, sculptures and other works of art with representations of the tree of Jesse, showing the geneology of Jesus as given by Matthew.

Jesse's rod (stem). The animating and energizing force or light of Jesse; a geneological tree; a phallus. Sometimes represented by a vine, thus equating with the beanstalk, Jacob's ladder, or Lugh's chain. To castigate or scold is to give one a particular jesse; probably a pun on the rod.

JESSE JAMES Bad-man, notorious bandit, outlaw. The most feared and one of the most reckless bandits in the history of the United States. In ballads and stories he has been given a Robin Hood character, and his exploits follow the pattern of robbing the rich to give to the poor. His death was brought about by betrayal for the reward money on his head.

JESSIS Slavic ancient supreme god; benefactor and protector.

JESTER A buffoon or court fool kept in medieval noble houses. The traditional costume was a parti-colored suit and a cap with bells at the end of two horns, a cockscomb, and the ears of an ass. Members of the Catholic Church claimed that jesters and troubadours disseminated doctrines that scoffed at the mysteries and ritual of Rome; thus they were heretics disguised as singers and story tellers. The bells, symbolic of freedom and warning; the cockscomb symbolic of awakening; the horns symbolic of light or seeing, probably typified their calling as preachers. The ears of an ass symbolized the part they played as fools or jesters.

JESUS (1) Christian Messiah. Second person of the Trinity. Divinely born of Mary, the incarnate of God. Mystics hailed Jesus as the Divine culmination of all preceding deities and referred to Him as Rabbi Ben Panther (Son of Panther). This is assumed to be a play upon the Greek pan and theos, meaning all the gods, and appears to be connected with the superstition that the breath of the panther was so sweetly fragrant that it allured beasts and men. Jesus was a carpenter; thus, in servile position, he served those meaner than himself, a way of life typical of sun heroes for the benefit of mankind. Like other saviors or fertility deities, He was mutilated and hung on a tree, in later tradition nailed to a cross; after His death, He rose from the dead to bring renewed life back with Him. In Holy Communion, His living flesh is torn and eaten symbolically. As one who descended into hell and rose from the dead after three days, He is compared to a lion. Metaphors applied to him are Light, Logos, Well. He gave waters of salvation, which opened blind eyes. One of his epithets was Good-Beetle, thus Good-Sun. He has been represented as an infant, as bread, conquering hero, dolphin, fish, griffin, lamb, rock, shepherd, sun, vine, wine, winged serpent. The daisy is emblematic of His innocence. The name in Hebrew, Jehoshuah or Joshua, signifies Jehovah saves or Savior. Jesus was His common name, whereas Christ, meaning Anointed One, was his official name. Both names are used separately or together. The appellation Jesus Christ denotes His twofold mission. As Jesus (Savior) He atones for the sins of the world; as Christ (Messiah or Anointed King) He establishes the kingdom of God on earth. Early Christians, as a password to express His name, used the first three letters of ichthus (fish). His name has been written variously as G, Gesu, I, Iesus Christos, Iesu, Jeshu, Jesous, Jesu, Jesus, Jesus Christ, Jesus Christos Theos, Y, Yesha. See Christ's monograms for additional forms. His sacred number is 888. (2) A size of paper. Probably traces back to the middle ages when watermarks in papers were the secret codes or emblems by which Christian heretics communicated.

JET Gem symbolizing austerity, loneliness, mourning, sad remembrance, wisdom. Dream significance: sorrow.

JETHER Hebrew name meaning subjection.

JETHRO (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning preeminence. (2) In the Old Testament, the father-in-law of Moses, a shepherd-prince or priest. He visited Moses in the wilderness and gave him counsel. Jethro was a worshiper of God, and he is thought to have descended from Abraham through Midian, Abraham's fourth son.

JEW (YEHUDAH) Originally a member of the tribe of Judah; in modern usage the term applies loosely to one of the Hebrew race. Symbolic of a person of a minority unjustly persecuted; in certain countries prohibited from owning land or engaging in various professions; frequently used as a scapegoat. See Hebrew.

Wandering Jew. In a medieval legend the shoemaker Ahasuerus, who was condemned to wander over the earth until the end of time because he refused to permit Christ to rest at his door; hence a restless wanderer.

JEWEL Inexhaustible wealth, ostentation, pride, wisdom. Typifies dew, fertilizing moisture, the male or female principle, the Om or Divine Eye, omnipotence. Worn as an amulet to preserve health and protect against evil. Dream significance: money affairs. In Freemasonry the jewel of the Ancient Grand Master is a stone engraved with a builder's square and compass, the letters AG between them. See gem, precious stone or under each individual gem. In Buddhism symbolic of courage and endurance. Buddha, His Word. Emblem of non-tantric manifestations of Buddhist deities. See cintamani, mani, ratna, triratna. In China called chu; chief possession of the dragon king Ryujim. One of the three insignia of the Japanese royal family. Two jewels represented the ebb and the flow of the tide. See Empress Jingo, Hiko-hohodemi, Hojo-no-Tama, Ninigi.

Imitation Jewel. Bad luck, vanity.

Jewel crunching. Symbol of the life force. Amaterasu and Susa-no-wo were Japanese jewel crunchers; Kochipilli and Kochiquetzal were Aztec jewel crunchers.

Jewel goddesses. The Buddhist jewel goddesses number twelve and accompany Sridevi. They ride various animals or sit on clouds, are specific forms, and wear Bodhisattva ornaments.

Jewel in the lotus. A Buddhist symbol. In the beginning of the world, Adibuddha manifested himself in a flame (jewel) rising from a lotus flower. Phallic symbol typifying male and female, union of fire and water, spirit and matter, conjunction of the divine pair. The jewel represents fire and spirit, the lotus, water and matter.

Jewels of Eriphyle. In Greek mythology jewels which brought unhappiness and death to the one who possessed them. They typified fertility, which accompanied death every harvest season. Also called jewels of Harmonia. See Alcmaeon, Amphiaras, Harmonia.

Jewel spear. Phallus.

Jewel stalk. Phallus.

Jewel string. Charm with which to ward off evil or illness.

Six jewels. Jewels of Freemasonry, three of which are immovable, inasmuch as they belong to a specific place in the lodge, and three of which are movable. The three immovable jewels are the level, set in the west, and symbolizing equality; the plumb, set in the south, and symbolizing rectitude of life and conduct; the square, set in the east, and symbolizing morality. No jewel is placed in the north because that is the realm of darkness. The three movable jewels are the perfect ashlar, which typifies the perfected or polished state of nature; the rough ashlar, which typifies the rude or imperfect state of nature; trestle-board, representing the board on which God laid down his design of the world.

Twelve jewels. Jewels of the breastplate of the Jewish high priest. See under Gems.

Two jewels. Worn on shoulders of Hebrew high priests as amulets which obtained Supernatural intervention without any action on the part of the bearer.

JEZANIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah determines.

JEZEBEL A Phoenician princess who became the wife of Ahab, king of Israel. She was notorious for her cruelty, heathen fanaticism and profligacy. She instigated the murder of Habeth and by perjury secured his vineyards for Ahab, who was a puppet in her hands. Her murder, which concluded her bloody life, took place according to the prediction of Elijah, whom she had persecuted. Her name has come to stand for a bold, abandoned and vicious woman, especially one given to painting her face.

JEZIEL Hebrew name meaning God unites.

JEZINKY (JAGA-BABA, JENDZIBABA, JENDZYNA, JEZENKY, JEZIBABA) In Czech tradition creatures living in caves. They have the faces of women, the bodies of sows and the legs of horses. They put out the eyes of human beings and kidnap children, on whom they feed.

JEZRAHIAH Jah is shining.

JEZREEL God sows.

JEZZAR AHMED An 18th century pasha of Acra and Syria. Notorious for his cruelty and blood-thirstiness, he was nicknamed Butcher.

JHASA In Hindu mythology the greatest of all fish. Compares with Jastoni of Irish tradition. See Manu.

JHOTING Hindu ghost of a man of low caste who has died dissatisfied. He remains in his own house or in a well or river. In the Dekkan district the spirit of a young man who died unmarried and left no relatives. He lives in burial grounds, ruins, or trees, and personifies absent husbands. He leads wayfarers astray, luring them into pools where they drown. He delights especially in attacking postmen, who remain safe only as long as they hold onto their bags.

JHS (IHS) Monogram signifying Jesus Christ.

JHVH (JHWH, YHVH, YHWH) Tetragrammation representing the ineffably holy name of the Supreme Being (Jehovah) in the Old Testament and other Hebrew texts. See Jao, Jehovah.

JIG Originally a sacred dance in honor of the sun deity. Compare hey, reel.

JIGAI In Japanese tradition suicide performed by women as a moral obligation to atone for the disgraceful behavior of a husband.

JIGOKU Japanese hells, eight hot and eight freezing, with sixteen sub-hells. Compare Gokuraku.

JIKOKU-TEN Japanese Buddhist guardian of the East; Land-bearer. Parallels Sanscrit Dhtarastra.

JILL Feminine name, diminutive of Gillian. Jill is a generic term for a sweetheart or young woman. See Hyuki, Jack and Jill.

JIMME The white horse, usually an albino, kept at Shinto shrines in Japan for purposes of divination.

JIMMU TENNU First legendary mortal sovereign of Japan, founder of the dynasty of mikados. A descendant of Amaterasu, sun-goddess, and of Toyo-tama-hime, daughter of the sea-god Wata-tsu-mi; great-grandson of Ninigi; grandson of Hiko-hohodemi. Warrior, conqueror. Jimmu signifies son-of-heaven and is the Japanese equivalent of Jimmy, diminutive for James, which etymologically yields everlasting sunlight. Also called Kamu-yamato-ihare-biko.

JIMMY GRANT An Australian colloquialism for an immigrant.

JIMNA Hebrew name meaning prosperity.

JIMSON WEED Used by gamblers, especially by Indians of Mexico and Southern California, to bring good luck. As a trance-producing drug it was used by ancient Mexicans to discover a thief.

JINA An epithet of Buddha; in Jainism a conqueror.

JINGLE, ALFRED In Dickens' Pickwick Papers, a chattering, impertinent, sharp-witted actor.

JINGO In the 17th century a word of meaningless jargon used by conjurers as hocus-pocus was used. In 19th century England the name was applied to those who favored a strong foreign policy; hence, in any country, a blustering patriot itching for war.

JINGU (JINGO, JINGO-KOGO) Legendary Japanese empress, consort of Chuai, which see. Warrior empress who invaded and captured Korea. She was aided by two jewels, Kanji the pearl of ebb and Manji the pearl of flood, given to her as a gift by the sea-god. This power to control the ebb and flow of water helped her to cross the sea safely. At the time of the invasion she was pregnant with Ojin, whose birth she delayed until after the battle; thus a woman who practiced birth control. Also called Okinaga-tarashi.

JINN Arabian demons of the wilderness or of deserted places. Demons of hostile and unsubdued forces of nature led by Suleyman. They inherited earth before man and cohabited with human beings, producing invisible offspring. They are described as half-wolf, half-hyena. In Mohammedan belief children of Jann led by Azazel (Eblis). Supernatural rational but intangible beings, subject to magic control, especially that of Solomon, who possessed a magic ring which gave him power over them. They are grouped as good or evil, helpful or harmful, and are said to be born of fire with the power of assuming the forms of animals, giants, snakes, etc. They usually are invisible to men but an ass brays and a cock crows upon seeing one. They roam by night and disappear at dawn, riding abroad on foxes, ostriches or other beasts. The name, meaning hidden, is plural or genie, genius, jinnee, jinni. They correspond to Rephain.

Jinnistan. Arab Fairyland.

Jinniyeh. Arabian female jinnee or spirit of the desert or wilderness.

JIU Japanese god of longevity. A long-headed man attended by a crane.

JIVA In India conscious and individual soul or spirit as distinguished from the All-spirit or Universal-soul.

JIVATMA Sanscrit individual self or soul in its essence. The same as the Paramatma or Supreme-soul but separated from it by avidya or nescience.

JIZO (JIZO BOSATSU) Japanese god of mercy, guardian of children, persons suffering from toothache, pregnant women, and travelers. Playmate of infant ghosts, roadside savior. He is gentle, kind and mild, although sometimes mischievous. Bake-Jizo, his statue, like the hermae, is placed at crossroads, and presumably has the power to move around and confuse a traveler. He tells fortunes and gives prophecies and helps sufferers on earth or in the hells, especially children. Commonly, six Jizo characters are worshiped: Emmei (long life), Hosho (treasure place), Hoshu (treasure hand), Jichi (land possessor), Hoin (treasure seal), Kengoi (strong determination). When protector of children called Kosodate-Jizo (children-raising Jizo). He carries a pilgrim's staff at the top of which bells jingle to drive demons away. Wherever he steps, lotus flowers grow. Japanese aspect of the Sanscrit Bosatsu, who is entrusted with the task of saving people after the death of a Buddha until another Buddha appears. He also corresponds to the Hindu Kshiti-garbha and, in some ways, resembles Hermes.

JNANA In Sanscrit theosophy knowledge.

Jnana-marga. Path to God through the acquisition of knowledge; path of wisdom.

Jnana-Sakti. The creative power of wisdom, power of the higher mind. Pure consciousness is represented by a straight line; pure knowledge appears in the form of a sword and is called the sword of pure knowledge.

Jnana-Yoga. The path to God through knowledge.

JNO CITIZEN An epithet of Kevin Earwicker in James Joyce's Finnegans Wake.

JO Scottish lover of either sex, a sweetheart. Jo is a form of joy. Also joe.

JOAB Literally, Jehovah is father. In the Old Testament the nephew of David and a mighty captain in his army. He was an able general and valiant warrior, but he was imperious, revengeful, and unscrupulous. He slew Absalom, conspired with David in the matter of Uriah's death, and treacherously assassinated Abner and his cousin Amasa. For his conspiracy against Solomon he was put to death.

JOACHIM (JOCHIM) Hebrew masculine name meaning Lord will judge.

JOAH Hebrew name meaning Jah is brother.

JOHAZ Hebrew name meaning Jah helps.

JOAN Hebrew feminine name meaning Lord's grace. Corresponds to the masculine John. Joan resolves into Jo or Ja (ever-existent) + an or on (one or sun).

Joan of Arc. A French heroine and martyr, surnamed La Pucelle. The daughter of poor country folk in the village of Domrémy. She was a military genius and, while still in her teens, she forced the British to raise the siege of Orleans. After crowning the Dauphin Charles VII, she was taken prisoner by the English and burned as a witch.

She was beatified by Pius X in 1909, and also is called Maid of Orleans. Her tragic story has been the subject of many dramas. Her name is often applied to a country wench.

Pope Joan. A legendary female pope, fabled to have succeeded Leo IV in the 9th century. Joan conceived a passion for the monk Folda and in order to see him donned the monastic habit. Because of a deep admiration for her learning she was elected pope and her sex was discovered only because she gave birth to a child during her enthronization. In another version she died in childbirth in the street during a public procession and was buried where she expired. The legend probably is based on a Roman tradition concerning a statue which disappeared. It probably was of a priest of Mithra and a child mistaken to represent a woman and a child. The inscription on it was unintelligible and was interpreted to be the epitaph of a female pope.

JOASH Hebrew name meaning Jah supports.

JOB (JOBUS) In the Old Testament one distinguished for his domestic happiness, honors, integrity, piety and wealth, whom God permitted, for the trial of his faith, to be deprived of friends, health and property, and plunged into deep affliction. The afflicted Job is a personification of patience and poverty. Although filled with complaints, his belief in God remained steadfast. As he sat on a dunghill suffering from boils (probably black leprosy or elephantiasis), neither his upbraiding wife nor his three false friends were able to shake his faith. His longevity places him among the patriarchs; he survived his trial one hundred and forty years and was an old man before it began. As God gave Satan permission to test Job, he is described variously as a man tested by God or tested by Satan. Job realized he had sinned with inner pride, confessed, and received the renewed blessings of God. Thus the Book of Job teaches that apparent adversity may be only a means of increased spiritual prosperity and typifies a form of rebirth. He is honored by Moslems as well as by Jews.

Job's Coffin. A constellation also known as Delphinus.

Job's Comforter. One who, while pretending to sympathize in a misfortune, will say, "You have brought it on yourself;" hence a false or tactless comforter or friend.

Job's news. Bad news, a disagreeable report, evil tidings, unfavorable intelligence.

Job's post. A bringer of bad news.

JOBAB Hebrew name meaning howling.

JOCASTA (IOCASTE, JOCASTE) In Greek mythology wife of Laius, mother-wife of Oedipus. By Oedipus the mother of two sons, Eteocles and Polynices, and two daughters, Antigone and Ismene. Laius, upon being told that the son being born to him and Jocasta will take his life, orders the infant slain. The shepherd commissioned to do the deed instead leaves the child, Oedipus, exposed on a mountain. The child is rescued and years later fulfils the prophecy, and marries the widowed Jocasta thus becoming king of Thebes and husband of his mother. When Jocasta learns she has married her own child, she commits suicide. This is a dawn myth, Jocasta being the dawn who gives birth to and then marries the sun.

JOCELYN Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning of the race of Goths.

JOCHEBED Literally, Jah is honor. In the Old Testament daughter of Levi, wife of her cousin Amram, mother of Aaron, Miriam, and Moses. Her name was used as a talisman. By its constant repetition it was reputed to reveal hidden secrets, uncover treachery and evil doing, unfasten locked doors.

JOCHGRIMM Tyrolian mountain on which three maidens brew the winds.

JOD (YOD) Tenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet meaning hand; sometimes interpreted as first finger. Its numerical value is ten, which corresponds to wealth. Jod is the first letter in the name of God, Jah or Jehovah. Typifying a hand with the first finger extended, it represents the pointer or reading of Scriptures, indicates the directing power and all which serves to manifest it, and corresponds to the phallus of Egyptians. It symbolizes dexterity rather than actual activity, direction, potential power, skill. According to mystics, its color is yellow, its correspondence in the tarot deck is the Wheel, its planetary or zodiacal correspondence is Capricorn (according to some mystics, Virgo). Its direction on the cube of space is north, representing destruction of error; its function is digestion; its intelligence is that of will; the organs governed by it are the intestines, and it rules the sense of touch. In white magic, designates Adonay-Melech or God-King, whose attributes are the Empire, the Kingdom, and the Temple. It gives power to the name Jah. Its influences extend to the Issim, blessed, happy and strong men located in the sphere of the spirit. By their ministry, industry, intelligence and the knowledge of divine things descend as an influx to embodied humanity.

JOD-HEH-VAV-HEH (JHVH, JHWH) Tetragrammation used for the ineffable name of Jehovah. According to mystics the symbolism of the letters is: Jod, the phallus or pointing finger; heh (he), the clitoris, opening or window; vav, the hook or nail, signifying capture.

JODO Japanese Buddhist pure land; Western Paradise presided over by the Buddha Amita. Analogue of Ching-tu of Chinese Buddhism.

JOE In the United States, a name used for a fellow, as "Hey, Joe." Australian term of contempt for a policeman or official on the gold fields. A drawer of water or a woodcutter is called a joe, and an up-country cook's assistant is called a wood-and-water joe.

JOEL Literally, Jehovah is God. One of the minor prophets of the Old Testament. He describes a plague of locusts and the land parched with drought and stripped of verdure; he summons the stricken people to fasting and penitence and encourages them by promising the removal of divine judgments and the return of fertility. His plague of locusts has been interpreted to mean hostile legions, and many understood the locusts to be invading Chaldeans, Greeks, Persians or Romans. He is portrayed holding a scroll with a lion near him.

JOELAH Hebrew name meaning God is snatching.

JOE MILLER An 18th century comic actor whose name appears as the author of a book of jests. As he had the reputation of never writing a joke, his name has become a household word for a stale or worn-out joke; also for a jestbook.

JOEZER Hebrew name meaning Jah is help.

JOGAOH Iroquois dwarf people, of which there are three tribes; Gahonga of rocks and rivers, stone throwers; Gandayah, who care for the fruitfulness of the land; Ohodowas, underground people.

JOGBEHAH Hebrew name meaning height.

JOHA Hebrew name meaning Jah is living.

JOHANAN Hebrew name meaning Jah is gracious.

JOHANNA (JOANNA) Feminine name, a form of Joan, which see.

JOHANNES A form of John. Identical with Iannes (Oannes).

JOHN (GIOVANNI, HANS, IAN, ION, IVAN, JACK, JACKIE, JAN, JOCK, JOHANN, JOHANNES, JOHNNY) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning Jehovah is gracious, gift of God. The name yields ever-existent one (or sun). (2) In Old Testament the name of several members of the Macbean family, especially the son of Simon and brother of Judas. In the New Testament, three important Johns are named: 1-John the Baptist, forerunner of Christ. Son of Zacharias and Elizabeth. See under Saints. 2- The apostle and evangelist. Son of Zebedee and Salome. See under Saints. 3- Nephew of Barnabas, surnamed Mark, and regarded as the author of the Gospel of Mark. See under Saint Mark.

Friar John. In Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel a happy-go-lucky outspoken friar.

John-a-dreams. A dreaming stupid fellow.

John-a-Nokes and John-a-Stiles. Same as John Doe and Richard Roe, which see.

John Barleycorn. Personification of intoxicating liquors; sometimes used to designate an inn-keeper.

John Bull. A plump middle-aged man wearing a silk hat, coat, pantaloons and boots of the early 19th century, with a Union Jack as a waistcoat; personification of Great Britain. A name used to designate a typical Englishman as Ivan Ivanovich is used to designate a typical Russian and Johnny Crapaud a typical Frenchman.

John Burley. In Scott's Old Mortality, a fierce, fanatical man.

John Chinaman. A Chinaman or the Chinese in general.

John Doe and Richard Roe. In law the fictitious plaintiff in writs of ejectment is John Doe; the fictitious defendant being Richard Roe. Also used in grand jury investigations as an alias when the name of the parties under investigation are unknown. Hence the names stand for merely anyone.

John Drum's entertainment. Turning an unwelcome guest out of doors.

John Falstaff, Sir. A fat, cowardly but humorous braggart in Shakespearean dramas.

John o'Groat's House. A small knoll on Duncansby Head at the extreme northeast point of Scotland. Upon it in the 16th century stood the house of John o'Groat (Jan Groot). The term has become a popular expression for the northern limit of Great Britain or Scotland. From John o'Groat's house to Land's End is from one end of Great Britain to the other, Land's End being the southwestern point of England. The expression is an analogue of from Dan to Beersheba.

John Peel. An old English hunting song.

John Tamson's man. In Scotland a husband unduly ruled by his wife. Also called John Thomson's man.

John Thomas. In England a liveried servant.

Little John. In the Robin Hood cycle a semi-legendary character. He was a huge man known as John Nailor who encountered Robin Hood, who gave him a thrashing. After the incident he was rechristened and called Little John. Robin Hood acted as godfather at the christening. Probably personifies the wind.

Pope John. According to Dante, Pope John XXII was notorious for his love of money. The image of Saint John the Baptist had been stamped on the Florentine Florin, and Dante represents Pope John XXII as being so devoted to this coin that he forsook Paul and Peter.

Prester John. In medieval legend a Christian priest and king of a great empire in Africa or Asia. He first appeared in tales of the 12th century.

JOHNNY A diminutive of the name John. One whose mannerisms and style of dress is designed to captivate receptive young women. A fellow, a person.

Johnny Appleseed. Nickname given to a New England eccentric who settled in the Ohio Valley about 1800 and went about the countryside planting apple seeds and tending the growing trees. He became the hero of folktales and poems.

Johnny cake. A thin cornmeal cake. Corrupted from journey-cake, because it was made in haste for a journey.

Johnny Crapaud. A popular nickname for a Frenchman; literally, John Toad. Three toads, erect, saltant, appeared on the ancient crests of France. Or it may have come from the contemptuous epithet frog-eaters, in allusion to the once exclusively French custom of eating frogs' legs.

Johnny-raw. A beginner, novice.

Johnny Reb. During the Civil War a nickname, short for Johnny Rebel, by the soldiers of the northern army.

JOKER A playing card that usually is rejected, but, when used, dominates the pack. A word related to juck, a bird cry of exultation. Derived from the Fool of the tarot deck. In some sections of Pennsylvania called bauer (peasant) or bower (youngster). In some parts of England called knave child.

JOKSHAN Hebrew name meaning fowler.

JOKTAN Hebrew name meaning small.

JOKTHEEL Hebrew name meaning God's reward of victory.

JOKWA Mythical Japanese empress; royal lady of the West; friend of mankind. She waged war against the demons and giants who caused the deluge and then she set the world in order.

Identified with the Chinese Nu Kwa.

JOLLY ROGER A black flag on which is a design of a white skull and crossbones. Traditional banner of pirates.

JONADAB Hebrew name meaning God is liberal.

JONAH (JONAS, YONATH) Literally dove. In the Old Testament a Galilean, son of Amittal. One of the minor prophets, his book records that, in his efforts to escape the divine command to go to Nineveh and preach repentance, he embarked for Tarshish, which was in the opposite direction. At sea God raised a storm which threatened the vessel, and Jonah was thrown overboard. Jonah was miraculously preserved by being swallowed by a whale. After three days Jonah was vomited up and cast upon the shore. Hearing the words of God a second time, Jonah obeyed them. While awaiting the destruction of Nineveh, he sat outside the city's walls, where God caused a gourd to grow up in the night to shade him. The people of Nineveh meanwhile repented and God spared the city. Seeing his predictions unfulfilled, Jonah reproached God, who then sent a great worm to destroy the gourd, and Jonah increased his reproaches, whereupon God asked Jonah why the people of Nineveh, who had repented, should not be spared when Jonah had so much pity for a gourd for which he had not toiled. As one resurrected, one who has been swallowed and released by darkness or death (belly of the whale), Jonah resembles Christ, Daire, Daniel, Fionn, Orpheus, Ra. Jonah is usually portrayed as being cast upon dry land by a whale or seated under a gourd-vine with a whale and a ship in the distance. His character is said to be stubborn. In allusion to the Biblical story any person causing disaster, grief or ill-luck, especially on shipboard, is called a Jonah.

Jonah's ship. The Christian Church. See Church.

JONAKR Norse lord of winterland, who marries Gudrun after she has been rescued from the sea. Their children are Erp, Hamdir and Sorli. See Gudrun.

JONATHAN Hebrew name meaning Gift of Jehovah. In the Old Testament a generous and valiant prince noted for his great friendship with David. Jocularly in the United States a typical American; from Jonathan Trumbull, a confidant of George Washington. Later called Uncle Sam. Also known as Brother Jonathan. See under Brother Jonathan. Compare John Bull.

Jonathan's arrows. Arrows shot to give warning but not to hurt; alluding to the arrows of the Biblical Jonathan.

Jonathan Wild. A notorious outlaw and thief. In various legends depicted as a coward, hypocrite, traitor, tyrant, never lapsing into a good or kind action.

JONATH-ELEM-RECHOKIM Literally, dove of the distant terebinths. Caption to the fifth Psalm, probably alluding to the mode in which it was sung.

JONES, TOM Protagonist of Fielding's History of Tom Jones. A foundling, later discovered to be the nephew of his patron, Squire Allworthy, whose heir he becomes. Tom is a generous dissipated fellow who finally settles down to marry the beautiful Sophia Western.

JONGLEUR In middle ages one of a class of Anglo-Norman, French, Provençal minstrels who visited castles and courts composing and reciting fabliaux, poems and songs, finally becoming mere story-tellers and buffoons. During one period the Catholic Church claimed they were heretics in disguise, disseminating doctrines that scoffed at the mysteries and ritual of Rome. Compare jester, troubadour.

JONKHEER A Danish knight; a member of the nobility.

JONQUIL September 12 birthday flower, symbolic of desire, evening fragrance, longings. In the language of flowers: I desire the return of affection.

JOPHIEL Hebrew name meaning beauty of God. One of the seven holy angels mentioned in the apocryphal book of Enoch.

JOPPA (JOPPE) Ancient Hebrew name of the city of Jaffa (Yafa), meaning beauty. Peter had his vision of tolerance at Joppa. Here Jonah embarked for Tarshish. It remains a great landing place of pilgrims.

JORD (FJORGYN, HLODYN, JORDH, JORTH) Literally, earth. Norse earth goddess. Daughter of Nat or Nacht (Night) and Annar (Water). One of the wives of Odin and, by him, mother of Thor. Also described as a daughter of Odin. Jord personifies the primitive uncultivated and unpopulated earth, and is an analogue of the Roman Terra. A husband of Frigga is also called Fjorgyn, which is one of the names by which Jord is known.

JORDAN (YARDEN) Literally, descend. A sacred river in Palestine. Worshiped as life-renewing, its water is collected in a bottle called Jordan.

JORDEGUMMA Swedish old woman of the earth. Counterpart of Madderakka. Name now means midwife.

JORMUNGANDR (IORMUNGANDR) Literally, earth's monster. In Norse mythology the Midgard serpent. Offspring of Loki, spirit of evil, brother of Fenris and Hela. It lay at the root of the Yggdrasil until Odin cast it into the sea. It grew until it encircled the earth, biting its own tail. Its writhings caused tempests until it was finally killed by Thor's hammer. The flood of its venom drowned Thor. Also called Midgardsormen.

JORMUNREK In the Volsung Saga king of the Gauts. Father of Randver, husband of Svanhild. When Bikki, his counselor, informs him that Randver and Svanhild have spoken words of love, Jormunrek hangs his son on a gallows tree and orders Svanhild trodden to death by horses. In the Dietrich legend Jormunrek is called Ermenrich and Bikki is called Sibeche. This story reveals the great tragedy of the year, Randver, spring sun, Svanhild, the summer-maid, being killed by Jormunrek, old king of winter. The betrayal incident resembles that of Bellerophon and Antaea, Joseph and Potiphar's wife, Theseus and Phaedra.

JORO In Japan a woman in public life. One of the terms for a courtesan and also for one of the ladies of the ancient Japanese court. She was expected to possess Dana, power of giving; Ksanti, forbearance or tolerance; Sila, proper conduct; Upsaya, skillful means; Virya, heroic quality. Compare Bodhisattva.

JOSE, DON In Byron's Don Juan, Juan's father. He is the henpecked husband of Donna Inez and worried to death by his wife's propinities.

JOSEPH (GIUSEPPE, JOE, JOEY, JOSE, JOSEPHUS, JOZEF) Literally, addition or increaser. In the Old Testament son of Jacob by his favorite wife Rachel. He was Jacob's eleventh son. Joseph's boast of future greatness made his brothers angry, and, when their father made Joseph a coat of many colors, indicating that he, unlike the others who were workmen, was to have special privileges, their hatred became so intense they stole the coat, threw him into a pit, and finally sold him into slavery for twenty pieces of silver. Dipping Joseph's coat in blood, they showed it to their father, saying he had been killed. Joseph was taken to Egypt where he was sold to Potiphar. When he rejected the advances of Potiphar's wife, she accused him falsely and he was thrown into prison. There, his ability to interpret dreams made him famous. The Pharaoh's dream of seven lean cattle swallowing up seven fat cattle and seven lean ears of corn devouring seven full ears of corn was repeated to him, whereupon he said the dream portended a famine, and he was made food administrator. During the famine his brothers came to Egypt for grain, and, in this manner, Joseph became reunited with them and met Benjamin (see), the full brother born after he had been sold into slavery.

Joseph has the attributes of a sun hero; the blood on his coat representing sunset, the pit into which he had been thrown, darkness. His stay in the pit, as well as his imprisonment, is an analogue of Daniel's stay in the lion's den, Jonah's in the belly of the whale, Ra's nightly trip through the body of the serpent, and the descent of other sun heroes into the underworld and their resurrection. Like sun heroes such as Apollo and Heracles, he serves those meaner than himself; thus the sun serves man, providing him with fertility, light and warmth. Like Christ he was a companion of criminals. One tempted by a woman and falsely accused, he resembles Art son of Conn, Bata, Bellerephon, Gunasarman, Hippolytus. In the Joseph story are found many familiar folktale motifs: a best loved son despised and betrayed by his brothers, bloody coat, compassionate executioner, cup in sack, dream interpreter (riddle solver), dreamer of future greatness which causes banishment, hero thrown into pit, one exposed to and resisting temptation, one unfairly accused, one who overcomes adversity, poor boy who becomes great and rich and thus fulfils a prophecy. Joseph was one who began life narcissistically and, by the treatment he received from society, he awakened and became aware of his guilt of pride and his place as brother and man in society. In art usually represented as turning away from Potiphar's wife who holds his mantle. In the Koran he is called Yusuf, whereas Potiphar is called Kitfeer and his wife Zuleika. A long coat with a cape formerly worn by men, in allusion to Joseph's coat of many colors, is called a joseph. A jacket for women is called a josey. Resembles Gunasarman.

Joseph K. Bourgeois hero of Franz Kafka's The Trial. He is a bank clerk charged with a crime, the nature of which is never revealed to him. His attempts to defend himself against the unknown charges are interpreted as being a symbolic quest for divine justice. See K.

Joseph of Arimathea. A wealthy Israelite who believed Jesus was the Messiah. After the death of Jesus, he went to Pilate to claim the body. As the Sabbath was at hand, with the aid of Nicodemus, he wrapped the body in spices and laid it in his own tomb. In later legends he was imprisoned for forty-two years, during which time he received nourishment from the Sangraal, in which he had caught the blood which had dropped from the side of Jesus. After his release he traveled into northern Europe with the Grail and the spear with which Linginus had wounded the crucified Christ. In Britain, he founded the abbey of Glastonbury and there commenced the conversion of the British. In another version his bones with the sacred relics are preserved in a monastery on an island in the interior of Norway, where he became patron saint. In an ancient tale he is identified as the Fisher King (which see) who slays the pagan king of Norway and marries his daughter. God punishes him for this sin and the land becomes sterile. He typifies a hero in transit through the seasons.

Joseph Prudhomme. In Henri Monnier's Grandeur et Decadance de Joseph Prudhomme, a serene, self-important man of experience, who deals in absurd metaphors and wordy platitudes.

Joseph's coat of many colors. Light, sign of many blessings.

Joseph the carpenter. In the New Testament, husband of Virgin Mary. His genealogy traces back to David, Judah and Abraham, and he is portrayed as an honorable pious man.

Josephine (Jo, Josepha, Josie, Pheny). Feminine name corresponding to the masculine Joseph. In French history, a credulous, ignorant and superstitious woman born in the West Indies, who became Empress of France as wife of Napoleon Bonaparte.

JOSHAPHAT Hebrew name meaning Jah is judge.

JOSHAVIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah is equality.

JOSHUA (JESHUA, JOSH, YE-HOSHUA) Literally, Jehovah is salvation or Jehovah the Savior. In the Old Testament son of Nun. One of the twelve spies appointed to survey Canaan. As he and Caleb were the only two to report favorably, they alone of their generation were permitted to enter the Promised Land. He was a valiant fighter and a great hero, and in the battle being fought on a Friday at his request the sun, moon, and stars stood still for thirty-six hours that the Jews might continue the fight against the Amorites without desecrating the Sabbath. In one account he was swallowed by a whale as an infant and spit out on a distant shore. Kind people reared him, but he grew up to be called a fool and followed the trade of public hangman. It thus fell to his lot to hang his father and marry his mother, who was offered as part of his hangman's fee. As he was about to have intercourse with her, her breasts spouted milk. Joshua knew this was a warning, and he discovered the story of his parentage. He became the lieutenant of Moses and, after the death of Moses, the leader of the Israelites through the parted waters of the Jordan. He appears to be the hero of a sun myth. Like Oedipus, Joshua is an exposed child who returns to his people and marries his mother (the dawn); like Christ, Heracles and others, he is the long-suffering one, the fool, who eventually is victorious; like Christ, Daniel, Jonah, Orpheus, Ra, he is resurrected after passing through the realm of darkness or death (belly of the whale or realm in which sun and stars stood still); he is the young sun or new year hanging the old sun or old year. Joshua is described as a great military leader with a fearless optimism. Originally his name was Oshea; in the New Testament he is called Jesus. See Fool, Hanging.

JOSIAH (JOSIAS) Masculine name from the Hebrew meaning Jehovah supports or given to Jehovah.

JOSIBIAH Masculine name from the Hebrew meaning Jah causes to dwell.

JOSS A Chinese household deity or idol. Pidgin English for deos (god).

Joss house. A Chinese temple or shrine.

Joss paper. Gold or silver cut into the form of a coin and burned by the Chinese at funerals. Probably typifies the coin which pays the fare of the dead.

Joss pidgin-man. A priest.

Joss stick. A stick of scented wood burned as incense in a joss-house; also used to measure time at night.

JOTHAM Literally, Jah is perfect. In the Old Testament youngest son of Gideon. He escaped the massacre of his seventy brothers at Shechem by Abimelech, his half-brother, a son of Gideon by a concubine. In a parable of the bramble and other trees, he prophetically denounced the Shechemites over whom Abimelech ruled, and he lived to see his prophecies fulfilled. A time myth. See Abimelech.

JOTI Hindu astronomer or astrologer who foretells fortunes. Also applies to an inferior order of Brahmans.

JOTUN In Norse mythology one of the race of giants who personified the hostile powers of nature and plotted the downfall of the gods and the corruption of the world. The Jotuns were conquered by Odin as the Titans were conquered by Zeus. The three giant maids or thrice-born giantess, the mother of evil, known as Aurboda, Gulveig-Hoder, and Hag of Iarnvid, counted as one of the Jotuns.

Jotunheim. Abode of the Jotuns, a race of giants. Situated on earth's outer rim. A dark mountainous region in the extreme east, north or north-east. One of the nine worlds. A root of the Yggdrasil extends into it. Also called Utgard.

JOUAKEHA Same as Ioskeha, which see.

JOURDAIN, MONSIEUR Hero of Moliere's Bourgeois Gentilhomme. An elderly tradesman who has become wealthy, he makes himself ridiculous by his endeavors to acquire the accomplishments of those with whom he finds himself associating. He engages dancing, fencing and language tutors, but continues to cut an awkward figure.

JOURNEY Hazardous enterprise. Among the Jews a journey made on the Sabbath was not to exceed the distance between the ark and the extreme end of the camp, about seven-eighths of a mile. A Hindu, upon returning after a trip abroad, was required to pass through a rite of regeneration. For the purpose, an image of the female power of nature in the shape of a cow, a woman or a yoni was sculptured, and the person to be regenerated was pulled through it. Among the Sufis the ascetic and spiritual meditations of the mystics consisted of a journey of eight mansils or stages. In West Africa, before a man is allowed to visit his wife after a long journey, he must wash with a particular liquid and have the sorcerer place a certain mark on his forehead, to counteract any magic spell or curse which a strange woman might have cast on him. Other African tribesmen cleanse or purify themselves in various ways; the Bechuanas do it by shaving their heads.

JOVE Roman thunder god. Another name of Jupiter, which signifies Jovis pater or father Jove. Jove is the Roman equivalent of Jehovah and Zeus. In Milton's Paradise Lost Jove is placed among the fallen angels. In alchemy Jove is the metal tin; in astronomy another name for the planet Jupiter.

JOVIAL FRIARS Brethren of the lay order of Beata Maria, who were not required to lead an ascetic life.

Jovialness. In an Italian icon personified by a woman with wandering eyes although composed. She is scantily dressed, her crown is of amaranth. She holds fruit and an olive branch, on the top of which is a honeycomb with bees.

JOVINIAN A 4th century Christian monk. He opposed celibacy, fasting, etc., and twice was banished.

JOY Represented by a bell, lark, orange color, sun, tambourine, yellow.

Heavenly joy. Represented by a golden harp, a wreath of roses.

JOYCE A feminine and masculine name from the Latin, meaning joyful.

JOYEUSE A miraculous sword which appears in several romances of chivalry. The sword buried with Charlemagne was called Joyeuse. Typifies light rays.

JOZABAD Hebrew name meaning Jah endows.

JOZADAK Hebrew name meaning Jah is great.

JOZON Cornish masculine name which yields ever-existent sunlight. The same meaning underlies Hans, Janus, Johns, Jonas, Jones.

JUANITA (NITA) Feminine name, Spanish diminutive of Juana, feminine form of Juan (John).

JUBA A Negro dance which originated on the plantations of Southern United States.

JUBAL Literally, blast of trumpets or music. In Old Testament a descendant of Cain, son of Lamech and Adah. He invented the harp and shepherd's pipe or lyre and flute. Probably a wind and nature deity similar to Hermes or Pan.

JUBILEE (HOBEL) Literally, blast of a trumpet, flowing, or sounding. In Jewish history a season of rejoicing celebrated every fiftieth year from the entrance of the Hebrews into the Promised Land of Canaan. During the year no one sowed or reaped; all were satisfied with what the earth and trees produced spontaneously; Hebrew slaves were set free with their wives and children; all lands or other possessions of inheritance that had been alienated or mortgaged reverted to their former owners or heirs of former owners. This law had been designed to prevent the rich from oppressing the poor and to remind all that Jehovah was the great proprietor and dispenser. In modern times, a Jubilee is the celebration of any fiftieth anniversary, as the founding of a church or city.

JUDAH (JUDA, JUDAS, JUDE, YEHUDAH) Literally, praise. In the Old Testament fourth son of Jacob and Leah. Ancestor of David, Solomon, and Christ. Founder of the tribe of Judah. The dying benediction of Jacob foretells the superior power and prosperity of the family of Judah and their continuance as chief of the Jewish race. Though not the first born, Judah came to be considered as the chief of Jacob's children, and his tribe the most numerous and powerful. After the death of Solomon, King of Israel, ten tribes under Jeroboam seceded and the remaining kingdom, consisting of the tribes of Benjamin and Judah, was known as Judah. Those of the seceded tribes were known as Israelites. In Judah, it is said, the true religion was preserved; whereas in Israel the people reverted to the worship of idols. The capital of Judah was Jerusalem. The word Jew derives from Judah. The tribe of Judah was symbolized by a lion and the color scarlet; it was associated with the zodiacal house Sagittarius.

JUDAS (JUDAH, JUDE) (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning praise. (2) In the New Testament, one of the apostles. Son of Alpheus and Mary, brother of James the Less. Identified with the zodiacal Aquarius. Also called Jude, Lebbeus and Thaddeus. (3) Judas Iscariot, one of the apostles. The name means man of Kerioth, and he was the only non-Galilean among the disciples. He is depicted as one who betrayed Christ with a kiss for the price of thirty pieces of silver and, after the crucifixion of Jesus, hanged himself. The pieces of silver were used to purchase Aeldama, a potter's field or graveyard for strangers. Thus he is said to be one who betrays another under the guise of friendship; one who betrays with a kiss; one who will betray for money but who fails to enjoy the fruits of his crime; one who is destroyed by a guilty conscience. In Central Europe, particularly in Germany, a straw image of Judas is burned in Easter bonfires. The ashes are planted on May Day as a preventive against blight. In various parts of the world images of Judas are hung in churches, and Judas candles are lighted. See icon, idol, image. Scholars state that with the kiss Judas attempted to place Jesus in a situation where his identity as Messiah would be unmistakably shown. They maintain that Judas stands in relation to Christ as deities of darkness or winter stand in relation to sun-heroes in fertility myths, that Judas understood that the death of Christ was necessary for regeneration (i.e., the return of verdure in the spring) and that the death of Judas had to follow that of Christ to fulfil the yearly as well as the daily cycle of light and darkness. The time of Judas sacrifices invariably coincides with the lighting of ancient fires connected with fertility rites. Judas is identified with the zodiacal house Pisces. See Cain 2, Christ, crucifixion, hanging.

Judas colored. Red; pertains especially to the hair, from the tradition Judas Iscariot had red hair.

Judas eye. Among United States Southerners the evil eye is called Judas eye.

Judas kiss. Kiss of betrayal or treachery.

Judas Maccabees. In Hebrew tradition the most heroic of the Maccabees. He rose in revolt against Antiochus Epiphanes who tried to abolish the Jewish religion by substituting a Greek cult in the 2d century B.C., and delivered his people from tyranny.

Judas priest. A minced oath.

Judas tree. The rosebud tree on which Judas supposedly hanged himself, symbolic of guilt, remorse, resurrection. The flowers of the tree bloom before its leaves are fully out, typifying emotion outrunning reason.

JUDGMENT In an Italian icon personified by a naked man attempting to sit on the rainbow. He holds the compass, pendulum, rule and square.

God's judgment. Trial by ordeal, by single combat or the like, in which God supposedly interferes to vindicate the innocent.

Judgment Day. In Hebraic-Christian tradition day of word of final judgment of mankind at the end of the world; the final trial of mankind by God; Doomsday. Analogue of Ragnarok.

Judgment of Paris. A judgment which precipitates war or defeat, alluding to the award of the golden apple by Paris, which brought about the Trojan War.

Judgment Weather. Severe weather, suggesting divine displeasure or judgment.

Last Judgment. Card in tarot deck illustrated by a man, woman, and a child, the human ternary, rising from their graves as the Archangel blows the trumpet, signifying rebirth. Typifies the stage of spiritual unfoldment in which personal consciousness is on the verge of blending with the universal. Instrument of Pluto and all gods of the netherworld; ruler of internal life. Attainment: transformation. In divination corresponds to the number twenty-one and the Hebrew letter shin. Denotes: awakening, change of position, decision, motion, readjustment, rebirth, regeneration, renewal, travel; also loss through lawsuits. When card is in reverse: decision, pusillanimity, sentence, simplicity, weakness. Also called The Judgment.

JUDICA In Christian tradition Passion Sunday. So called from the opening words of the introit for that day, Judica me Deus.

JUDITH (YEHUDITH) Literally, praised. A Jewish widow who rescued her countrymen when they were besieged by the Assyrians. She gained the affections of their general Holofernes and, when he was intoxicated with wine, she cut off his head. Probably a light myth.

JUDY (1) A diminutive of Judith. (2) The wife of Punch in the Punch and Judy puppet show, thus any woman who excites ridicule. (3) Name given by English-speaking foreigners to a courtesan in China. (4) One of a class of Macedonian fairies who destroy those they induce to dance with them. A personification of storm or wind.

JUG (JUGGUL) An act of worship by which Brahmans expect to acquire supernatural power.

From the Sanscrit jagata (world).

JUG Drink, libations. Carries the same general symbolism as cup or vase, which see. As a colloquial expression, signifies a jail, prison or woman of low character. One of the eight familiar Buddhist symbols. It gives no sound when full, hence a man full of knowledge.

Empty Jug. Lack of knowledge.

Full Jug. Full of knowledge.

JUGGLER The name of a card in the tarot deck also called Magician, which see.

JUGGERNAUT (JAGADNATHA, JAGANNATH, JAGGURNATH) Hindu Lord of the World. A title of Krishna or Vishnu of the eighth avatar, or an idol of the deity. Worshiped as a remover of sin. Annually, on the occasion of his principal festival, the god is washed, at which time he presumably contracts a cold and is carried in his great car to the temple. When days later the car is dragged back, the multitude rejoices; thus the festival is one of regeneration. The erroneous idea once was held that, in a religious frenzy, many of his worshippers cast themselves under the wheels of the car. Actually, such immolation is opposed to the worship of Vishnu, as death pollutes the temple offerings. Because of this mistaken notion, a Juggernaut has come to signify that which ruthlessly and unnecessarily crushes whatever is in its path, or that which demands blind devotion or self-sacrifice, or causes infatuation, as the Juggernaut of fashion. The Sanscrit Jagannath resolves into jagat (all that moves) + natha (protector).

JU-I Chinese scepter with fungus-shaped head and curved stem. Primarily a diviner's wand; later emblem of power.

JUJU (1) Priest-king in Nigeria in West Africa. He is elected for a term of seven years and the prosperity of the town, especially the fruitfulness of the crops and the marriage-bed, are linked to his life. Should he become ill, famine and disaster would fall upon the people. At the slightest sign of infirmity he is apt to be put to death and for this reason the Juju rarely ventures to leave his compound. Compare King of the Wood. (2) In West Africa the brass idol typifying the Juju or containing the soul or spirit of the Juju, or worshiped as a fetish. Used as a talisman. An object of awe or religious veneration; hence anything inexplicably magical or mysterious. Compare joss.

Juju house. House in which fetishes are kept.

JUJUBE (JUJUBA) Spiny shrub plaited to make the crown of thorns with which Christ was crowned. Typifies sorrow, sacrifice. Also known as spina christi.

JUKSAKKA Lapp goddess of birth. Daughter of Maderakka. Her most important function was to change the girl child in a womb into a boy child and to make good hunters of the boys. Name signifying Bow Old Woman.

JULBOCK (YULE BUCK) In Scandinavian form of the Mumming Play a man dressed in skins. After a dramatic dance he is killed and revived; thus one who is resurrected.

JULIA (JULIE, JULIET) Feminine form of Julius.

JULIAN (JULE) Masculine name from a Roman family name; meaning sprung from or belonging to Julius.

JULIET The heroine of Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet. A Capulet, she loves and secretly marries Romeo, a Montague. The lovers suffer a tragic death because of a feud between their families.

JULIUS (JULES) Masculine name from a Roman family name and meaning soft-haired. In feminine form Juliana (Juliane, Julienne).

JULY Seventh month of the year named in honor of Julius Caesar. Its birthstone is the carnelian or ruby; its color is dark yellow; its flower is the daisy. The sun enters the zodiacal house of Leo about July 23. In China its emblems are the dragon and the lotus. In the West generally personified by mowers in the field.

July fourteenth. In France, Bastille Day.

July Fourth. In United States, Independence Day.

JUMALA Ancient Finnish All-Father. An air or sky god. Said to be invisible without attributes or distinguishing qualities. The Finnish name for God is still Jumala, which resolves into Jum (ever-existent sun) + ala (Allah or God who has existed forever). Also called Ilmarinen, which see, and Sangke (Light).

JUMART French fabled animal said to be the offspring of a bull and a mare or a she-ass, or of a horse or ass and a cow.

JUMNA Hindu river goddess; consort of Varuna.

Jumna River. Mythological river which normally was deep and treacherous, but which only rose to the knees of Vasudeva when he carried the infant Krishna. Compare Red Sea.

JUNAK In a Slavic tale, redeemer. Hero prince, the spirit of the steppes. Clad in gold armor, he rescues Princess Sudolisa, a sleeping beauty, from the spell cast over her by the ogre Kostey. Junak typifies the sun; Sudolisa, the summer-maid; Kostey, the demon of winter.

JUNE Sixth month of the year. From Junius, name of a Roman gens, which had been derived from Juno, the queen of heaven. Its birthstone is moonstone or pearl; its color is orange yellow; its flower is the orchid or rose. The sun enters the zodiacal house of Cancer the Crab about June 21. In China its emblems are the hare and pomegranate. In the West generally personified by horsemen galloping in chase. In Rome the month was dedicated to Vesta.

JUNIPER October 2 birthday flower, symbolic of asylum, fecundity, longevity, protection, remembrance, succor. Anciently, smoke of its green branches was the incense offered to infernal gods; its berries were burned at funerals to keep off evil spirits. In the Old Testament referred to as a ministering spirit.

JUNIUS Masculine name from a Roman gens name which had been derived from Juno.

JUNO (IUNO) Ancient Etruscan Great-mother. Personification of the procreative powers of each woman. In Roman times she became the wife of Jupiter and, like him, a deity of light and sky. As queen of heaven and genius of womanhood watching over the female sex, she is the counterpart of the Greek Hera. In later Roman mythology she is represented as the passive productive principle and as an earth goddess with attributes of both Ceres and Cybele. As Cinxia, Domiduca, Huga or Jugalis, Matrona, Pronuba, or Unxia, she led womankind through the marriage rites and punished those who violated its duties. As Juno Callestis, she was a moon goddess resembling Astarte, and the kalends were sacred to her. As Juno Curitis (Quiritis) she was a war goddess, protectress of cities. As Juno Lucina, goddess of childbirth, protectress of women in labor, and portrayed with one hand empty waiting to receive the coming infant and in the other a lighted torch, symbol of life. As Juno Moneta, the warning one, the one who caused to remember. Her shrine on Capitoline hill was next to the public mint and this gave rise to the erroneous conclusion that she presided over the state's finances. In this manner Moneta became the source of mint, a place where coins are minted, and money. Moneta probably derives from the same root as Minerva. As Juno Regina, she was sovereign queen, sharing with Jupiter and Minerva the Capitoline temple and the dominant state cult. As Juno Sospita, she was savior. As Virginensis, she was a virgin goddess, protectress of the chastity of maidens. Juno is akin to Diana, a feminine form of Dianus or Janus, and answers to a Greek form Zenon (Zeus), a name which traces back to the Sanscrit Varuna. She usually is shown as a woman of imposing figure, beautiful and stately, holding in one hand a scepter, which sometimes has a cuckoo at the top, and in the other hand, a pomegranate. The cuckoo, goose, lamb, and peacock were sacred to her. Also sacred to her were the dittany, lily, pomegranate and willow.

Junones. In Roman belief protectors of women. Souls of deceased mothers that became dispensers of fate. Parallel the Norse Disirs.

Junonian. A woman who is haughty, queenly, regal, stately, and possesses self-esteem.

JUPITER (IUPPITER, JUPPITER)
(1) Ancient Italian Father or Lord of Heaven, provider of fertilizing rains. Supreme tutelary god of the Romans who gradually became identified with the Greek Zeus. Lord of life, light, and aerial phenomena; ruler of the Silver Age. See under age. Son of Saturn, whom he dethroned, and Rhea; mate of Juno; father of Minerva. With Juno and Minerva, he shared the Capitoline temple and the dominant state cult. His titles were numerous; he was: Jupiter Capitolinus or Jupiter Tarpeius, protector of Rome, worshiped in a temple dedicated to him by the Tarquins and erected on the lofty Capitoline hill. As Capitolinus he presided over the Roman games. Jupiter Elicius, giver of lightning. Jupiter Fidius, guardian of law, defender of truth, protector of justice and virtue. Jupiter Fulgurator or Fulminator, deity of lightning. Jupiter Imperator (ruler), Invictus (unconquerable), Opitulus (helper), Praedator (giver of booty), Stator (supporter), Triumphator (giver of triumph), or Victor (conqueror), to whom consuls appealed on assuming office and to whom victorious generals offered thanks in the solemn processions to his temple which marked their triumphs. Jupiter Latialis or Latiaris, presiding over the Feriae Latinae. Jupiter Lucerius or Lucsius, whose habitation was in the bright shining firmament. Lucerius corresponds to Lycius, an epithet of Apollo or Phoebus meaning light. Jupiter Optimus Maximus, the all-powerful, the best and most high. Jupiter Pluvius, rain giver, analogue of the Greek Zeus Ombrios. Jupiter Serenator, serene skies. Jupiter Terminus, protector of boundaries and enclosures, resembling the Greek Hermes and Zeus Horios. Jupiter Tonans or Tonitrualis, lord of thunder. As Dius Fidius he was witness of men's fidelity to their oaths. He was called Jove, especially in poetry. The name Jupiter is a contraction of Divis pater or Diespiter, which is derived from the Hindu dyaus, i. e. bright heaven. The Jovis or Ju in Jupiter is identical with the Greek Zeus, with the Anglo-Saxon Tiw, and the Old High German Zio. Etymologically Jupiter yields Ju (Ever-existent) + piter (Father).

Although, like Zeus, he was lord of life and death, unlike Zeus he was not controlled by the Fates or Moirae, and he never visited mankind on earth. Nevertheless, he determined the course of human affairs and made known the future through the flight of birds and other signs in the heavens. His name, like Aum and Jao, was used as a talisman. As prince of light, white was sacred to him; among medieval alchemists, Jupiter designated tin; in heraldry it stands for azure, the blue of the heavens. Sacred to him were the eagle and the ox. He usually is portrayed on a throne of ivory holding a sheaf of thunderbolts and a scepter; beside him stands an eagle. In Christianity, Jupiter and his thunderbolts became the Christus crucifixus.

(2) Greatest of the planets; largest body in the solar system except the sun. Fifth in order from the sun; the royal planet; ruler of the zodiacal mansion Sagittarius; lord of Thursday. In astro-mythology shepherd of the stars connected with the productive power of nature and giver of abundance. According to mystics it symbolizes ethereal absorption into cosmic being and controls the generous and noble traits of human nature, such as goodwill, hope, spirituality, veneration. It is the great authority and provides those born under its influence with frankness, straightforwardness, uprightness and controls the solar-plexus system or nerves, producing bankers, dignitaries and judges. Its intelligence is that of conciliation. Astrologists assign the royal color, purple, to it, and the musical note B flat or A sharp. It is pictured by three suns, symbolic of earthly fire maintained by heavenly fire and rising out of the waters in the form of steam, which falls back as beneficent rain. These three suns are united by lines forming a kind of 4, which explains the hieroglyphic simplification. The symbol is placed at the head of medical prescriptions. In Mohammedanism planet presiding over magistrates and religious officials.

Jupiter Ammon. Name given by the Romans to the Egyptian god Ammon.

Jupiter's beard. House leek, which is used as a charm against evil spirits and lightning. At one time in Europe it was grown on the thatch of houses.

Jupiter Scapin. A nickname of Napoleon. In Moliere's Les Fourberies de Scapin, Scapin is a valet famous for his knavery.

Jupiter Tonans. The thundering Jupiter. A nickname of the London Times in the days of its greatness in the middle of the 19th century.

Malus Jupiter. Latin expression for bad weather.

JURISPRUDENCE Symbolized by the color scarlet. Personified by a man or woman in the robe of a doctor of law, holding a scroll of the law. Allegorical figures of Justice and Truth and tables of law stand in the background.

JUROJIN In Japanese mythology one of the Shichi Fukujin, the seven deities of good fortune. God of longevity, controller of good health. The South Pole incarnate. Short of stature with a big head, he holds a stick to the top of which is tied a book, which contains the life limit of every individual in the world. He is accompanied by a black deer, signifying an age of over 2,000 years.

JURUPARI Brazilian persecutor and killer of men. Chief deity of a cult pertaining to men's initiation rites. Virgin-born of beer and a fish-bite, his sacred relics were made from trees that grew out of his ashes. Women were not permitted to gaze upon his images; those who saw them became poisoned.

JUSTICE (1) Symbolized by balanced scales, blue color, coronal of stars, palm, the perpendicular, square. Typified by health, which is associated with proper living. In Christian tradition one of the four cardinal virtues and symbolized by a plumb line and triangle. The other virtues are fortitude, prudence, temperance. In Egyptian mythology the goddess Maat. In Europe of the middle ages personified by a woman brandishing a drawn sword, attacking a man (Everyman). In Greek antiquity the goddess Themis, portrayed as a blindfolded woman holding balanced scales in her right hand and a sword in her left. Her inability to see indicates impartiality. In an Italian icon personified by a blindfolded virgin in white carrying a fasces in one hand and a flame in the other. An ostrich stands beside her. Also personified by a man in a long somber robe wearing a human heart as a jewel. The heart is engraved with the female image of truth or justice. The man looks down at open law books on the ground; to denote integrity in a judge he must never take his eyes off the justice of the laws and the contemplation of naked truth. In Roman mythology the goddess Justitia. (2) Card in tarot deck illustrated by the goddess Themis with her sword and a pair of scales. Instrument of the deities of justice. Lover of harmony and order. Attainment: active administration of law. In divination corresponds to the number twelve and the Hebrew letter lamedh. Denotes: accuracy, balance, conscientiousness, equity, exactitude, impartiality, poise, probity, rebirth; also law suits relating to material affairs and strength or force, which is arrested. When card is in reverse: bigotry, legal complications.

Jedwood (Jedburgh, Jeddart) justice. The hanging of a suspected criminal and the holding of a trial afterward. From the name of a Scotch town on the border, where raiders were subjected to this type of justice.

Poetic justice. In dramas and other literary works the reward of the virtuous and the punishment of the guilty, sometimes accomplished accidentally.

JUSTIN (JUSTUS) Masculine name from a Roman family name, meaning just. Feminine form is Justina or Justine.

JUSTITIA Roman goddess of justice. Portrayed as a blind-folded woman, inasmuch as justice is impartial, not swayed by what she sees. She holds evenly balanced scales and a sword.

JUVENTAS Roman goddess of youth. Her attributes also applied to the imperishable vigor and immortal glory of Rome. Identified with the Greek Hebe.

JUZU Japanese rosary.

K

K Eleventh of a class or series; tenth if the letter J is not counted. Occult significance: nervousness; its period is for two years. It denotes magnetic, vivid individuality. Character traits: bluntness, dreamer, generosity, idealism, talent. In divination, its numerical value is eleven or two. Physical weak spot: nerves. Symbolic correspondence: strength. Tarot correspondence: Strength. Zodiacal correspondence: Leo or Mars. Among Hebrew cabalists, character traits are: forcefulness, renown, studiousness, talent. In low form: abuse of power, arrogance, dissipation. In Roman numeral notation, 250; with a dash over the letter, 250,000. Parallels the Arabic kaf (k) and kha (kh); the Egyptian hieroglyph throne, which corresponds to g or k; Greek kappa; Hebrew kaph (palm of hand), which more correctly corresponds to kf. Compare Alphabet Affiliations. K.

K. Protagonist of Franz Kafka's The Castle. He is a land surveyor, whose story is interpreted to be symbolic of mankind's search for divine grace. His search sometimes is compared to that of John Bunyan's Christian. See Joseph K.

KA (1) In Burmese belief a name of Chinun Way Shun, the primordial creator of all nats and sender of good harvests. (2) In Egyptian antiquity, the double or second self. The spirit or astral body, the vital force. At birth every living thing, animals, men, objects, plants, was believed to have two forms, the visible and invisible or double, which lived on after death in the body of an animal, in an image, or in the mummified form in the tomb. It retained consciousness and prepared the afterworld to receive the body. The double of the Delta region (Aalu or heaven), which the soul reached after a long journey beset with perils was called Ka. Food for a person's ka was buried with the body which had to remain intact that the ba might return to it. As an alter-ego or guardian spirit, kings had many kas. Ka-Khu-Khat was an Egyptian triad representing spirit-soul-body. Akin to the Roman genius. See ba, haibet, khu. (3) In Hinduism the unknown god. An epithet of Brahma, Daksha, and Prajapati. Based on a hymn of the Rig-Veda, an independent abstract deity revered as a supreme god. (4) In Japanese ka signifies a poem or song.

KAABA (CAABA, KAABEH) Mohammedan shrine at Mecca. According to tradition, it was built by Abraham and Ishmael on the site where Adam first worshiped after his expulsion from the Garden of Eden, and where, after having wandered across the earth for two hundred years, he received forgiveness. All Moslems face it when praying. It contains the sacred stone Hajar al Aswad, which is said to have been a ruby brought from heaven by the angel Gabriel and made black by the sins of those who have touched it. The stone, about seven inches long, apparently a meteorite, is in the northeast corner at a height convenient for pilgrims to kiss. From Arabic kabah (square house), and a name akin to Cuba, cube.

KAAN (CAAN) Mexican for heaven; kan or can is Mexican for four (as the directions or winds) and a title for the being the creator had authorized to guard the pillar or pillars that support the sky. Kan also means yellow, the color of fire. It resolves into ak-an, i.e. great-one.

KAARE Norse giant of the wind; son of Fornjot (storm), father of Iokul (icicle), grandfather of Snaer (snow).

KABA (KAVA) Finno-Ugric spirit of fate or providence. Father of Pulah, which see. Among Russians called Chuvash. Corresponds to Dzajaga, Moira.

KABAH Prehistoric sacred ruins in South America. A name akin to Kaaba and Kaba.

KABAKA Emperor; title of Uganda sovereigns.

KABANDHA A Hindu rakshasa (goblin or evil spirit) with an enormous eye in his breast. Slain by Rama.

KABEIROI See Cabiri.

KABIBONOKKA Algonquin hero of the north. One of the quadruplets born of the primordial mother who died in bringing them to life. The others are Kabun, west; Shawano, south; Wabun, east.

KABIL Mayan deity whose name signifies He-of-the-lucky-hand. He cured the sick merely by touching them. An aspect of Itzamna.

KABOI Ancestral god in Bolivia and Brazil. He led the people from the lower to the upper world by bird call.

KABUN Algonquin hero of the west. One of the quadruplets born of the primordial mother who died in bringing them to life. See Kabibonokka.

KACHES Literally, brave ones. Armenian fairies or supernatural beings. Spirits usually good in themselves, but often used by God to execute penalties. Sometimes they are mischievous and steal grain and wine or kidnap and torture men, holding captive those who descend from their stock. The kaches are musicians heard singing at night, thus wind spirits.

KACHINAS Zuni masked gods, happy and comradely supernaturals who live at the bottom of a lake in an empty desert. They are spirits of dead Zuni, are always dancing, and participate in sacred ceremonies along with the living.

Kachina priest. Masked Zuni priest, chief of the supernatural world; impersonator of a masked god. When wearing the mask of a god, the priest becomes for the time being the supernatural himself and must assume the obligations of anyone who for the time being is sacred. He is taboo, he dances, he observes esoteric retreat, and he plants prayer-sticks. He is called the daylight child of a kachina.

KA-DAM-PA Reformed Red Cap Sect of Tibetan Buddhism. Founded by Atisa. Later reforms were made by Tsong-kha-pa and the name became Ge-lug-pa (Yellow Cap Sect). Vajrasattva was worshiped as Adibuddha.

KADDISH (KADISH) Among the Jews a form of prayer and thanksgiving, particularly referring to the sanctification of God's name used on occasions of commemoration and mourning; an act of invocation. In death anniversary and mourning rites, the name of the deceased is recited, i.e. kept alive. To call out the name gives the deceased fresh life and vigor, the name being identical with the person. Kaddish means holy.

KADEIN Ladies of the Turkish palace; inmates of the harem of the sultan as distinguished from the odalisk, who are under the kadein as servants, but who may act as concubines to the sultan.

KADESH Literally, holy. In the Old Testament a camping place in the wilderness, whence the Israelites were turned back to begin their long wandering, after their presumptuous effort to enter Canaan by the pass Zephath immediately north of Kadesh shortly after they left Mount Sinai. They returned thirty-eight years later, and soon after entered the Promised Land. Also Kades, Kadesh-barnea. (2) Ancient Hittite goddess; a form of Astarte. The holy one or mistress of the gods, she was the patroness of prostitutes, and sacred prostitution was practiced in her rites. Also Qadesh.

KADESHOTH Women devoted to the Moabite god Baal-peor. They offered themselves in sacred prostitution in a small tent called a quibbah. See prostitution.

KADMIEL Hebrew name meaning God the primeval.

KADOSH Literally, holy one. In Jewish martyrology a saint; title given to persons who have died for their faith.

KADR, AL Night on which the angel Gabriel is said to have given the Koran to Mahomet. It is supposed to fall on the seventh of the last ten nights of Ramadan, or the night which comes between the 23rd and 24th days of the month.

KADRU In Hinduism the father of Sesa, the cosmic snake, also the mother of the nagas (snakes). Probably a primordial bi-sexual deity or deity of undetermined sex. See Androgynous deities.

KAF Moslem mountain consisting of a single emerald, believed to surround the earth. In it genii or giants dwell, and its reflection gives the azure hue to the sky.

From Kaf to Kaf. From one end of the world to the other. The sun supposedly rises from one of the peaks of Kaf and sets on an opposite one.

KAFIR (KAFFIR) Literally, infidel. An Arabic term of contempt applied to all who reject Islam, especially unbelievers in Africa. From this application the name has been applied to a group of South African tribes of the Bantu family. A Kafir is noted for his fine physique. The Kafirs are socially well organized, possess agricultural skill, and a warlike character.

KAFKA, FRANZ Twentieth century novelist who dealt with the theme that man is punished; then he seeks to discover what he is guilty of. This is opposed to Dante, in whose works punishment fits the crime.

KAGAMI (YATA-KAYAMI) In Japanese mythology sacred octagonal mirror which lured Amaterasu, the sun-goddess, out of the cave of darkness. Probably signifies the eight directions and the light shining in each.

KAGUHANA In Japanese Buddhism deity of the double-faced head, who smells all evil doing. He is at the left of the throne of Emma. Resembles Janus. See Mirume.

KAGURA The laughter-producing obscene dance performed by Ame-no-Uzume to lure Amaterasu, the Japanese sun-goddess, from the cave of darkness. Ceremonial dance relating to the three episodes of early Shinto religion: the sun-goddess leaving the cave of darkness; the beginning of life on earth; the ebb and flow of the tide controlled by Hiko-hohodemi.

KAGUTSUCHI Japanese god of destructive and purifying fire. Deity of summer heat, his birth burned the vagina of Izanami, his mother, and caused her death, whereupon his father Izanagi cut him into five pieces, and five mountain gods sprang up from his blood. Invoked against conflagrations. His name signifies shining-elder; also called Hino-haya-yagi-wono-kami and Homusubi.

KAHIT Wind deity of the Wintun tribe of Copehan (California) Indians. See Olelbis.

KAHUNA Hawaiian medicine man or shaman; a high priest who employs charms and incantations.

KAIF Arabian state of bliss; a condition of voluptuous and dreamy repose.

KAIKA In Hindu legend the cruel stepmother of the god Rama.

KAILASA Holy mountain, paradise. Hindu Olympus. Twin of Mount Meru.

KAINGANG An overly aggressive, self-destructive Indian tribe of the Brazilian highland. Also called Botocudo.

KAIRA-KHAN Altai-Tatar heaven or Over-god. Name meaning merciful khan (lord). His abode is placed in the seventeenth heaven. Identical with Bai Ylgon.

KAISER Title of Austrian and German emperors. Derived from the Roman Caesar, family name of first Roman emperors.

KAITABHA Hindu danava (demon) who sprang from the ear of Vishnu. With Madhu, he stole the Vedas from Brahma and, with them, entered the sea. Vishnu, assuming the head of a horse, rescued the Vedas and slew Kaitabha and Madhu.

KAITO Japanese legendary general and warrior hero.

KAIWAN Ethiopian earth-mother, goddess of plenty. Name akin to the Chinese Kwanyin, European Queen, Hebrew Chiun, Hindu Kun, Japanese Kwannon.

KAKAITCH Makah Indian thunderbird. His tongue makes fire (lightning), thus he is invested with a twofold character. He feeds on whales. Also called Hahness, T'hlu-kluts, Tu-tutsh. Compare Too-lux.

KA-KHU-KHAT Egyptian triad representing spirit-soul-body. See Ka.

KAKURE-KIRISHITAN In Japan, Christians who keep their faith a secret, pretending not to be Christians.

KALA Literally, Black One. Brahman personification of death, destiny, or time. A supreme deity, creator and destroyer (swallower) of the universe. After each destruction the universe is reborn, but the wise who understand all things attain union with the creator and are not reborn. At different periods identified with Brahma, Siva, Vishnu, etc. (2) Bali evil spirit appeased by sacrifice. One of a class of demons.

KALACHAKRA (KALACAKRA) Buddhist Wheel of Time, represented as a wheel in motion. Also the name of the lord of the Wheel of Time. Usually shown with four faces, typifying the four winds, and twenty-four arms. Color, blue; emblems, khadga (sword) and vajra (thunderbolt); ornaments, Bodhisattva and a belt of vajra. In Tibet called Pal-du-chi-khor-lo or dPal-dus-kyi-korlo.

KALAIS In Greek mythology son of Boreas. He drives the Harpies away. Wind deity.

KALAMAHAKALA Buddhist Great Black Lord or Black Mahakala. A Dharmapala; protector of science. Emblem: a rosary of skulls. In Tibet called Gom-po-na-chhem-po or mGon-po-nag-po-ch'en-po.

KALASA A Buddhist vase or ewer for holding amrita (ambrosia). Non-tantric symbol of Amitayus, Cumda, Kubera, Maityeya, Manla, Padmapani, Vasudhara. In China the vase which holds the water of life, emblem of Kwan-yin.

KALA-SIVA In Hinduism an aspect of Siva, Kala meaning black and signifying death or time. Lord of the whole world, impartial to the young, mature, and old. Beginner as well as destroyer, as each time the world is destroyed (swallowed by him) it is reborn. See Kali 2.

KALAVATRI A fierce Hindu deity.

KALCHAS (CALCHAS) A Greek soothsayer.

KALEVALA Literally, land of heroes. Finnish collection of epics. The great hero of the work is Wainamoinen, and much of the action is developed around Sampo, an object that provides one with anything he wishes. The name is derived from Kaleva, i.e. father of heroes.

KALI In Hinduism: (1) Personification of the ace on a die. An evil spirit who causes Nala, the lover of Damayanti, to lose his kingdom in gambling. Thus the ace is a symbol of ill-luck. (2) The Black One, consort of Siva. A blood-thirsty avenger goddess; one of the two flickering tongues of the black-pathed Agni, the other being Karali. The supreme mother goddess Durga in destructive aspect. In her dual role, she is benefactress and universal mother on her right side, on her left side she is fury and ogress; thus she devours or takes back the life she has produced. She invented the Sanskrit alphabet, each letter of which is one of the skulls on her necklace. Sacrifices to her are bloody; bulls and goats are offered to her in the Dussera, an autumn (death-season) festival. She is portrayed as black or dark blue with the insides of her hands red. She wears a necklace of human heads and a belt of blood-stained hands. Her protruding tongue is marked with blood. She stands on the body of Siva. In other forms, she is Chandī, Parvati, Sati, and Uma. The name of the city of Calcutta probably represents the ghat or landing place of Kali, the steps by which her worshipers descend into the waters of the Ganges.

KA-LI-HA (KALA, KALIKA) In Chinese Buddhism one of the eighteen Lohan. Like Tan-mo-lo-Po-t'o, assigned to Ceylon with a retinue of a thousand arhats. His station or sphere of influence was supposed to be the lion region. He is portrayed with long eyebrows, which he holds up from the ground.

KALIKA In Buddhism the fourth arhat, who went as a missionary to Tamradripa in Bengal. He holds two golden trinkets. His name means the timely. In Tibet called Du-den-dorje or Dus-ldanrdo-rje.

KALINAGO Ancestor of the Carib Indians. When he was killed by his sons, his soul found an avatar in a terrible fish, Atraioman, who pursued his slayers.

KALINAK (KALIYA) Hindu black dragon or snake which had a thousand heads and withheld the waters. Drought demon slain by Krishna.

KALIVINKA Japanese celestial nightingale; heavenly singer.

KALI-YUGA In Hindu theosophy the fourth and present age of the world, the black age, in which man has degenerated and turned to wickedness; spirituality is at its lowest point and materialism is strong. The other three ages are Krita, Treta, Dvapara. See Kalki, yuga.

KALKI (KALKIN) Literally, white horse. In Hinduism the tenth and last avatar or incarnation of Vishnu; yet to come. He will appear at the end of the Kali age seated on a white horse carrying a drawn sword blazing like a comet for the final destruction of the wicked, the renewal of creation, the restoration of purity. Compare Ragnarok.

KALLAH In Hebrew a bride.

KALLAI Hebrew name meaning Jah is light.

KALLAN Member of a tribe in Southern India notorious as thieves.

KALLYNTERIA In Greek antiquity a festival celebrated at Athens on the 19th of the month of Thargelion (May), when the statue of Athena was freshly beautified.

KALMA Finnish god of the tombs.

KALPA In Hindu cosmogony an aeon; 4,320,000,000 solar years. A day and night of Brahma. A cycle, the interval of time between the creation and destruction of the world. Identical with Brahma-kalpa.

KALSERU Rainbow serpent of northern and western Australia; bringer of rain and fertility.

KALUK Generic term for spirits among Burma Buddhists. Also called nat.

KALU KUMARA YAKA Sinhalese demon who causes fever, prevents conception, and delays childbirth. Originally a Buddhist saint who was able to travel through the air. When he fell in love with a mortal princess he lost his superhuman power, died, and transformed into a fallen angel.

KALUNGA Angola (Africa) death god.

KALYB In the Saint George legend the Lady of the Woods stole him from his nurse, raised him as her own child, and endowed him with supernatural gifts. When she was torn to pieces by demons, he enclosed her in a rock. Probably a sun hero.

KALYDONIAN BOAR (CALYDONIAN BOAR) In Greek mythology sent by Artemis to ravage the land of Oineus when he slighted her by failing to offer sacrifices of the first fruits of the harvest. Famine monster.

KALYPSO (CALYPSO, KALYPSO) In Greek mythology daughter of Atlas the sky pillar or support. She resided on Ogygia (Ogugia), the navel of the earth, and detained Odysseus on her island paradise. An aspect of the moon.

KALYPTRA In Greek antiquity veil which women wore over their faces and as a head-dress.

KAMA (CAMA, KAMADEVA) Literally, desire. In Buddhism a form of Mara, tempter of Buddha. In the Puranas, god of love; in later Hindu literature, god of impure sensual desire. His wife is Rati (voluptuousness). He is represented as a beautiful youth attended by nymphs. He carries a bow of sugar cane with a bowstring of bees; each of his five arrows (i.e. five senses) is tipped with a distinct flower to inspire love. On one occasion, while Siva was in deep meditation, Kama interrupted him. Angered by this rash action Siva with his glance burned Kama to ashes and he lost his corporeal shape, whence he is called Ananga (bodiless). He also is known as Kandarpa (proud), Madana (intoxicating), Manmatha (confusing). Sacred to Kama are the cuckoo, dolphin, parrot, and sparrow. Cupid and Eros resemble him.

KAMAAINA Literally, child of the land. In Hawaii designation of one residing in the place of his birth. Compare kanaka.

KAMADHENU (KAMDHAIN, KAMDHENU) Hindu fabulous wish-cow. Goddess of plenty produced by the churning of the sea. Also called Nandini, Surabhi. Analogue of Audhumla.

KAMADO HARAI Japanese kitchen-range-expulsion dance. Performed the last day of each month to expel evil spirits from the stove. It includes the ringing of bells by a priest or priestess wearing carved lion-headress before a kitchen range or at Kojin shrine. See Kojin.

KAMAIMA Among Carib (Honduras) Indians a term which embodies all forms of black magic. It causes mysterious ailments, sudden death. A kamaima is an avenger who relentlessly follows a victim until the opportunity arrives to murder him secretly. The term also is applied to a disgrace or misfortune or the irrepressible lust for revenge which forces a person to commit murder or some other terrible act.

KAMAK Iranian drought demon. Gigantic bird which overshadowed the earth and held back the rain until the rivers dried up. It ate animals and men as if they were grains of corn. Drought demon killed by Keresaspa.

KAMALAMITRA Hero of the Hindu tale Descent of the Sun. His wife was so beautiful, Kamalamitra grew boastful, whereupon the gods separated the lovers, who were doomed to wander over the terrifying sea of mortality before being reunited. This is a light myth, in which the sun Kamalamitra and the dawn are separated. Kamalamitra makes his pilgrimage across the sky and both die (i.e. experience mortality) before they are reborn and reunited in the morning. His name yields Lover (Kama) + the sun (la Mithra).

KAMA-LOKA (KAMA-LOKIC, KAMA-RUPA) Buddhist world of the senses, in which sensual desire prevails. The lowest of the worlds of sentient creatures, it extends from Avichi (world of evil) to the lowest of the hells, and thus embraces eleven lokas. Above it are the Arupa-loka (formless world) and Rupa-loka (world of form).

KAMEN Slavonic word for stone, a sun emblem or image. It yields great (ka) Amon (men), and is akin to Kami, ancient name for Egypt, and Khama, Hebrew for sun.

KAMI (KAMIT) (1) Early name for Egypt meaning land of the hot great sun. From the same source as kamen and khama. (2) Shinto title for deity. Japanese word for that which is divine or miraculous, applied to the gods, their descendants, the mikados, and deified heroes. Equal to lord, cognate with khan. The Japanese Protestant name for God is Kami.

Kamidama. Japanese God or spirit shelf. Shelf of unpainted white wood on which small sacred images are placed in a Shinto household.

Kamiless month. See Kamimashi-tsuki.

Kami-no-kuni. Land of gods.

Kami-yo. Age of the gods.

Way of Kami. Way of Gods of Shinto religion.

KAMINARISAN (RAJIN) Japanese thunder god; he lives on summer clouds and is always naked. He has horns on his head and tusks in his wide mouth; he carries a circle of twelve round flat drums which he beats with sticks. He comes to earth and eats oheso (human navels), and that is why children are clothed.

KAMI-NASHI-TSUKI Japanese kamiless month. In the tenth lunar month (October), all the gods assemble at Kitsuki, shrine of Susa-no-wo in Izumo, to arrange all marriages that are to occur in the country during the coming year. Thus it is the month without gods, and verdure begins to die, except in Izumo, where it is called Kami-ari-tsuki (kami-present-month). Regarded as inauspicious for weddings.

KAMI-NO-TSUKAI Shinto deity messengers. Usually they are animals, birds, fish, or insects.

KAMISHIMO A ceremonial costume formerly worn by the Samurai in Japan.

KAMLAT Tartar evocation of the devil by means of magic drums.

KAMPOS TANC Hungarian shepherd's dance. Performed by men with a shepherd's hat and crook. Probably the outgrowth of the ancient leap dance performed for the welfare of the flock.

KAMSA (KANSA) In Hindu mythology an Asura; cousin or uncle of Krishna. King of Mathura, he was warned by a prophet that a child of Devaki, in most accounts said to be his cousin, would slay him and usurp his throne. Kamsa murdered the first six of Devaki's children, but the seventh, Balarama, was smuggled away (compare Achilles), and when Krishna was born, Devaki and her husband fled, carrying the infant with them. This incident compares with the flight of Joseph and Mary to Egypt with the infant Jesus. Kamsa eventually was slain by Krishna. Thus the light (Krishna) escaped the darkness (Kamsa) and returned to fulfill the prophecy. The struggle symbolizes the defeat of the old and the victory of the new spirit of vegetation. It compares with the Arthur-Modred and Moses-Pharaoh legends.

KAMUI YUKAR Version of the Oina, Ainu book of teachings, as related by the ill-natured gods.

KAMU-MIMUSUBI (KAMI-MIMASUBI) Japanese female principle, the In. Divine producing goddess. See Taka Mimusubi.

KAN (1) Signifies water in the Chinese Pa Kua (Eight Diagrams) used for purposes of divination.

(2) See Kaan.

KANAAN In the Old Testament son of Ham, grandson of Noah. Founder of the land of Kanaan (Canaan), or Promised Land. See Canaan.

KANAKA Literally, man. In Hawaii, Polynesia, etc., a native. Compare kamaaina.

KANAKABHARADVAJA In Buddhism the eighth arhat, who went as a missionary to Aparagohana. Name meaning bearer of the golden banner. Usually shown holding a banner in meditation mudra. In Tibetan, Dha-ra-dhva-dsa-ger-chen.

KANAKAMUNI In Buddhism second Manusibuddha. Mudra: right hand in abhaya, left hand in dhyana. Asana: dhyana on lotus. In Tibetan, Ser-thup or gSer-thub.

KANAKAVATSA In Buddhism seventh arhat; he went as a missionary to the Saffron Peak in Kashmir. Name meaning golden calf. He holds a pasa (jeweled noose). In Tibetan, Ser-beu or gSer be'u.

KANASZ TANC Hungarian sword dance derived from Pagan dances which celebrated vegetation rites and victory.

KANCHENJUNA In Tibetan Buddhism the five brothers who became the spirits of deified mountains. See under mountain.

KANDE YAKE In Ceylon deified spirit (yaka) of a mighty hunter named Kande Wanniya. Invoked for success in hunting. The recent dead go to the land of Kande Yake.

KANE (1) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning bright, tribute. (2) Polynesian chief deity; creator of the first human couple, fashioner of earth and the two heavens, one for the gods and one for man. His name signifies sun-light. He also is known as Tangaloa (Lord of light) and is the equivalent of Tane.

KANG In the Chinese zodiac the Neck, four stars in the form of a bent bow, Iota, Kappa, Lambda, Rho, in the feet of Virgo. In the eastern quadrant, spring season. Represented by the sky dragon, element metal. A very unfortunate time.

KANGAROO Emblem of Australia; colloquially, an Australian. Symbolic of a boon companion, gregariousness, peacefulness, sky-larking, sportiveness, unintelligence. Typifies a leaper, long-footedness, pouch-carrier, romper.

KANJI In Japanese mythology pearl of ebb. See Manji.

KANJUR With the Tanjur, Tibetan sacred book. Corresponds to the Tripitaka.

KANNUSHI A Shinto priest or god-master who, like the gods, never winks.

KANOKAFATSO In Chinese Buddhism one of the eighteen lohans. He is said to have understood all systems, good and bad, and was stationed in Kasmir. Identical with the Sanscrit Kana-kavatsa.

KANOOK Evil principle in the mythology of Alaskan Indians. He was the deity of darkness and had a wolf form. He controlled the water, which he would not release, and which Yehl, his brother, the beneficent spirit of light who had the form of a raven, obtained from him by cunning and deception for the benefit of mankind.

KANSAN Second of the North American glacial periods.

KANSAS Emblem; sunflower. Motto: Ad Astra Per Aspera (To the Stars Through Difficulties). Nickname: Jayhawk. Also called Bleeding Kansas because of its many fights over the slavery question.

KANTHA In Hinduism a great gem which illumines the underworld.

KANTHAKA Great White horse of Buddha.

KANTHAROS See cantharus.

KA-NUB (KANOBUS) In Egyptian mythology bull typifying Ptah. Resolves into ak-an-obus, i.e. great sun, eye of light.

KANVA Vedic blind seer who restored the sight of Agni after he lost it. Hindu eclipse myth.

KAO HSN Chinese legendary child; conceived miraculously. His mother, to make away with him, left him exposed in a lane, where he was nourished by sheep and cattle. She then placed him in a forest, where he was cared for by a woodcutter. Then she laid him on an ice-covered river, where a bird covered him with feathers. Finally the mother cared for him and called him Ch'i, i.e. castaway. He grew up to become the ancestor of Wu Wang, founder of the Chou (Chow) dynasty. Probably a sun hero. Compare Oedipus, Romulus, Zeus.

KAORU In Genji Tales son of Prince Genji. Name signifying the fragrant. Faithful friend, quiet, reserved, tender-hearted.

KAPALA Human skull cup; Buddhist altar object and tantric symbol used when offering libations to the gods. Emblem of Buddhasaktis, Dakinis, Dharmapala, Ekajata, Yi-dam. In Tibet called t'od-p'or.

KAPH (CAF, CAPH) Eleventh letter of the Hebrew alphabet with a numerical value of twenty. Meaning palm of hand or grasping hand, signifying to hold or master. According to mystics its correspondence in the tarot deck is The Strength; its planetary or zodiacal correspondence is Mars or Leo; its symbolic correspondence is power. Its color is violet; its direction on the cube of space is west signifying completion, mastery; its intelligence is conciliatory, the intelligence of those who seek, associated with accomplishment, concord, tranquility. In white magic it is in correspondence with Metatron, who belongs to the first heaven of the astronomic world, and by his magic the sensible world receives deific virtues. Kaph also corresponds to the heaven of fixed stars, especially the zodiacal signs, where the supreme chief is Raziel.

KAPPA (1) Tenth letter of the Greek alphabet with a numerical value of twenty. Equivalent of English k but often represented by c; also equivalent of Hebrew kaph. Kappa absorbed koppa of the original Greek alphabet, which corresponded to English q. It resolves into ak-ap-a, i.e. great primal sun.

(2) Japanese malicious water monster who drags children to the bottom of a lake or river.

It has the body of a tortoise, the head of a monkey, the limbs of a frog; also described as a dwarf. Parallels the bogey.

KAPPARAH Animal which orthodox Jews sacrifice as a vicarious offering on the day preceding the Day of Atonement. The usual sacrifice is a cock by a man, a hen by a woman. Fish, geese, or plants may be substituted.

KAPUT Iranian storm or wind demon whose form is that of a wolf. Slain by Keresaspa. Also called Pehin.

KARA In Norse legend a Valkyrie, also said to be a swan-maiden. See Sigrun.

KARA-KHAN In Central Asian mythology son of Bai Ylgon. The Black Prince or Star. A star god who deserted his heavenly father for the underworld. Compares Jaik-Khan, Satan.

KARALI Literally, the terrific. In Hinduism one of the two flickering tongues of the black-pathed Agni. A name of Durga, wife of Siva.

KARAMAZOV, FYODOR PAVLOVICH In Dostoyevsky's The Brothers Karamazov, a crafty, miserly, scheming sensualist; father of the three brothers who typify the three national psychological types of 19th century Russia. The sons are: Alexey Fyodorovich or Alyosha, the youngest of the three, a religious mystic; Dmitry Fyodorovich or Mitya, the eldest, a boisterous, extravagant, violent soldier; Ivan Fyodorovich or Vanya, the middle brother, an intellectual.

KARAMNASA Hindu river of ill-fortune. People of low caste make a livelihood ferrying more scrupulous people across it, as to touch its waters destroys the merit of good deeds.

KARAO Among the lowest castes of Hindus the marriage of a widow to the brother of her deceased husband. Compare chalitza.

KARASHISHI In Japan the Chinese lions; lion statue-guardians at shrines.

KARATY-KHAN Mongol hero who killed a man-eating demon. From the carcass of the monster, mosquitoes were born. Compare Pungeusse.

KARE Norse tempest giant and lord of storm giants. One of the Jotnar.

KAREAH Hebrew name meaning bald.

KAREI (KARI) Thunder god of the Semanga, a people of the Malay Peninsula. Giant size, invisible, omnipotent. Creator of man, soul-giver. Punisher and recorder of sins, especially those of familiarity with a mother-in-law, the killing of tabooed birds, or the mocking of tame and helpless animals.

KAR-FISH In Iranian mythology fish created by Ahura Mazda to keep the lizard created by Angra Mainyu from injuring the haoma plant Gaokerena. It possesses wonderful eyesight and can measure a ripple no thicker than a hair.

KAR-GYU-PA Lama Buddhist sect whose chief apostle was Mila-re-pa, Mighty Saint. Sect of the Mahamudra School.

KARKOR Hebrew name meaning deep ground.

KARLIKI Slavic dwarfs. As domovii they are domestic or house elves; as lyeshie they are fauns or satyrs; as vodyanui, water sprites; as vozdushnuie, riders of storm and whirlwind.

KARMA Literally, action. That which remains when a man dies, his doing, the consequence or effect of his actions, speech, and thought. The law of ethical causation regulating future life; inevitable retribution. A Brahmanic belief adopted by the Buddhists.

KARMADAKINI A Buddhist feminine deity of the air capable of conferring supernatural powers. Her color is green; her emblems are a kapala (skull cup), khadga (sword), khatvanga (ritual wand). Compare Dakinis. In Tibet called Las-kyi-mkhah-hgro.

KARMAHERUKA The Green Herukabuddha. Also called Amoghasiddhi.

KARN See cairn.

KARNA In Hindu legend son of the sun god Surya and the princess Pritha. To conceal her shame Pritha set him adrift in a basket. He was found by the charioteer Shatananda and his wife Radha, who raised him. In time he became a great warrior and was crowned king of Anga. This is an agricultural myth, Karna typifying a fertility or sun hero. His story resembles that of Moses and Sargon.

KARNAC (KARNAK) Ancient Egyptian temple in ruins. Probably devoted to sun worship as was Carnac, the cairn or stone temple in ancient Brittany. The name resolves into Karn-ak, i. e. Great Karn (carn or cairn), generic term for the barrow or heap of stones anciently used in sun worship. See cairn.

KARNU Assyrian sky or sun god. Name akin to cairn (karn), Cronus (Kronos), Karnac.

KAROON (KARUN) According to the Moslems the greatest and richest of all the Israelites. The doors of his palace were said to have been of solid gold, the rest inlaid with gold. He was the Croesus of the Mohammedans, and his wealth was stored in a labyrinth. Karoon is the Arabic form of the Biblical Korah.

KAROSS Zulu lucky leopard skin cloak. The leopard or panther symbolizes the many-eyed watcher (sky deity). Word identical with cross.

KARPO (CARPO) The name of one of the Greek Horae, signifying autumn or fruitage.

KARPOPHOROS (KOUROTROPHOS) Greek goddess of wild things; child-rearer. Mother earth. A name of Hera.

KARSHIPTA (KARSHIPTAR) Iranian marvelous bird which possessed the gift of speech. A deity messenger sent to spread the religion of Ahura Mazda in the enclosure ruled by the primeval king Yima and to protect the people gathered there from the scourging winter which was about to attack them. Typifies sun rays.

KARTTIKEYA In Hinduism six-faced son of Siva, born without a mother. God of war. He was brought up by the Kritika (six Pleiades), hence the six faces. His mount was a peacock. Also associated with the planet Mars and in this aspect usually called Skanda. Prototype of Cam-srin.

KARTTRKA (KARTTRIKA) Chopper; Buddhist altar object and tantric symbol. Emblem of Buddhasaktis, Dakinis, Dharmapala.

KARU Japanese legendary king and tragic lover. He married his sister. His younger brother revolted, was successful, and banished him. His sister-wife followed him into exile and together they committed suicide. A light or seasonal myth.

KARUNA In Buddhism compassion, personified by Heruka, which see.

KARWAR Figure carved from a tree by the Papuans as a progenitor spirit which will protect them from malevolent spirits. A talisman against evil.

KASA-NAGI In Japanese mythology, magic sword of Susa-no-wo.

KASEEM Circular stone temple in Arabia resembling Stonehenge. Probably used in sun worship, and Kaseem probably means Great Sun.

KASENKO A Japanese goddess who fed on mother-of-pearl, which made her move as swiftly as a bird. Identified with Chinese Ho-Sien-Ku.

KASHIEL Hebrew name meaning God's stubborn one.

KASHIKO-DOKORO In Japan a place of awe, private shrine where members of the court worship imperial ancestors, thus the temple of imperial ancestors.

KASHMIR Sacred Buddhist mountain; station of Kanakavatsa.

KASIARA PALM Rigidity, uprightness, from the fact that it stands erect in a storm that bends all other trees.

KASTOR AND POLYDEUKES In Greek mythology, excellers in athletic sports and feats of arms; outstanding exponents of valor and virtue, typifying fraternal affection. Gemini. Also Castor and Pollus, which see.

KASWA, AL Mahomet's favorite camel; one of the dumb animals admitted into the Moslem heaven.

KASYAPA (KASYAPA MARICA, KESAVA) (1) In Brahmanism tortoise form of Prajapati. Progenitor of all things on earth. Ira, daughter of Daksha, is his consort and mother of vegetation. In the Atharva-Veda he sprang from Time coincident with Vishnu; in the Mahabharata, he is the grandson of Brahma. He marries the thirteen daughters of Daksha. By Aditi he is the father of the Adityas and Vivasvant, whose son Manu is the progenitor of the human race. In the Vishnu Purana, Vishnu in dwarf form is their son. By Diti he is the father of the Asuras, and by his other eleven wives, he became the father of all kinds of living things, including Garuda, the Nagas, Pisachas, Rakshasas, and Yakshas. He and his wives lived happily in the Krta age until they were seized with a desire to attain immortality. To obtain the ambrosia of the Milky Ocean, they made the serpent Vasuki into a churning rope and used Mount Mandara as the churning stick. For a thousand years they churned, and the hundred heads of Vasuki spit venom from which sprang the deadly poison Halahala, which burned all creation, gods and men, and Asuras alike. Mount Mandara slipped into hell and, to remedy the disaster, Vishnu took the form of a turtle and lifted it onto his back. The destruction of the world compares with Ragnarok. (2) In Buddhism, Buddha of the second world cycle; the third Manusibuddha, the luminous protector. One of the five disciples of Buddha. Asana: dhyana on lion or lotus; color: yellow; mudra: right hand in varada, left hand holds folds of robe in vitarka. In Tibet called Hod-srun or O-sung.

KATAKI-UCHI Japanese vendetta, rite of placing an enemy's head on the tomb of the person avenged.

KATCINAS Spirits of ancestors of Pueblo Indians. The magic powers or medicine of the sun.

KATERFELTO Generic term for a charlatan or quack. From Gustav Katerfelto, a quack who became celebrated during the influenza epidemic of 1782 in London. He was a tall man and wore a long black robe and square cap, and claimed to be the greatest philosopher since the time of Sir Isaac Newton.

KATHARINA The shrew in Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew. Petruchio marries and tames her. Characterization probably derived from Brunhild in Nibelungenlied.

KATHATAKANAVE In Walapai legend he emerged from the Grand Canyon with his friend the coyote, who instructed him how to create mankind.

KATHENOTHEISM Form of polytheism in which one god is honored above all others. Resembles henotheism.

KATHERINE (CATHARINE, CATHERINE, CATHLEEN, CATHY, KAREN, KATE, KATHARINA, KATHLEEN, KATHY, KATINE, KAY, KIT, KITTY) Feminine name from the Greek meaning good, immaculate, pure, undefiled bride. A name variant of Cinderella.

KATIPUNERO Originally, an insurrectionist or insurgent; later any worthless character or murderer. From the Katipunun, a secret revolutionary society organized in the Philippine Islands toward the end of the 19th century. Katipunun signifies very select society of the sons of the people.

KATMIR (KRATIM, KRATIMER) In the Koran, dog which watched over the Seven Sleepers. Endowed with the gift of prophecy and with a human voice. To the young men who wanted to drive it out of the cave, it said, "I love those who love God. Go to sleep, masters, and I will guard you." Without eating or sleeping the dog kept guard over them for 309 years. At death, it was taken up to heaven and is one of the ten animals in the Moslem Paradise. An Arabic proverb applying to a niggardly man is, "He wouldn't throw a bone to Katmir."

KATONDA African Uganda creator deity.

KATO-SAEMON Japanese legendary warrior who could not tolerate jealousy. When he saw the shadows of his wife and his concubine on a paper screen, their hair was transformed into serpents which fought one another. This exposure of jealousy caused him to renounce active life and become a monk.

KATSURA Japanese celestial laurel which lives on the moon and is visible in the dark spots on its surface. When the moon is bright the Katsura leaves are supposed to be red as the maple's.

KATYDID Insect named from its call, which generally is interpreted to be a weather oracle. In certain sections of the United States, it is believed to be first heard six weeks before frost; in Kentucky, dog days supposedly begin with its first call; in Missouri, it is a warning to plant the corn; in New England, its chirping inside the house is said to be an omen of death.

KATYUFONG Philippine Islands mud hut in which the poor live.

KATZENJAMMER KIDS Two mischievous young boys; imps of a comic strip invented by the cartoonist Rudolph Dirks.

KAUA Polynesian hero of great strength. He could uproot trees. In combat he was able to stretch himself until he was as thin as a spider's web. He vanquished Kapipikauila, who lived on a mountain top (heaven). He tore down the cliff and hurled great pieces of it into the sea, which to this day are called the Rocks of Kaua. An aspect of the wind or the moon. Resembles Hercules, Samson.

KAUKABHTA Syrian goddess identified with Astarte.

KAUKAS Lithuanian household dwarf spirits. Resemble the pukys.

KAURAVAS In the Hindu epic the Mahabharata the descendants of Kuru, sons of Dhritarashtra. Enemies of the Pandavas, which see. Spirits of darkness or winter.

KAUSIMA Among Choroti Indians of the Gran Chaco of South America a girl's puberty dance. Performed with rattles by the mother, other women, and medicine men, to exorcise demons.

KAUSTUBHA In Hindu mythology the greatest of gems; created when Kasyapa churned the Milky Ocean. The sun.

KAVAH Literally, blacksmith. In Persian legend the intrepid patriot who marches against the cruel tyrant Zohak, using his apron as a banner.

KAVI (KAI, KAVAN, KAVYA) Indo-Iranian seers endowed with supernatural foresight. In later Persian legend a title applied to a line of kings.

KAVI USAN (KAI KAUS) In Iranian legend the frivolous king. He was married to a Turanian woman named Sudabah who approached Syavarshan, his son by a previous marriage. The youth rejected her love, and she calumniated him to Kavi Usan. The youth fled and was put to death by King Afrasiyab. A light myth which resembles that of Theseus and Hippolytus. Kavi Usan as agricultural or underworld lord was the owner of a wonderful ox, to whose judgment all disputes were referred as to the boundary between Iran and Turan. He also had a wise administrator, Aoshnara, but becoming weary of the wisdom of his sage, he put him to death. Usan was not only fickle but presumptuous. He attempted to restrain the Mazainyon demons only to be led into a trap by them. They made him discontented with his earthly sovereignty and flattered him into aiming at the sovereignty of heavenly regions. Usan attempted the flight by fastening four eagles to the corners of his throne and attaching raw meat to four spears just out of reach of the eagles. Compare Etana. He failed in his attempt, his troops were beaten by the Mazainyon, and he lost his khvarenanh (glory) to Afrasiyab. Nairyosangha, messenger of Ahura Mazda, was about to slay him when the fravashi of Haosravah, his grandson yet unborn, implored that his grandfather be spared on account of the virtues that he would possess. See Kavya Usanas.

KAVYA USANAS In the Vedas sage renowned for his wisdom. He drove the cows (clouds) on the path of the sun and fashioned the thunderbolt with which Indra slew Vrtra. He also aided Indra in destroying Susna, the drought demon. The name is identical to that of Kavi Usan of Iranian legend; the difference in the characters of the two is due to the antagonism which existed between the religious systems of the Avestas and the Vedas; angels in one became devils in the other.

KAY Masculine name; Welsh form of Caius, Roman name probably meaning rejoiced in.

Sir Kay (Kai, Kee, Queux). In the Arthurian cycle son of Sir Ector and foster-brother of King Arthur, who appointed him seneschal. A magician, he could hold his breath under water for nine days; he could make himself as tall as a tree; his natural heat was so great, on the coldest day he was like a glowing fuel and warmed his companions; when it rained, wherever he was remained dry, indicating he was a personification of fire. In later Arthurian legends he degenerated into a buffoon and chief of cooks. He became boastful and rude; the first to attempt an achievement at which he rarely was successful; malicious and treacherous, he murdered Arthur's son Llacheu and attempted the abduction of Arthur's wife Guinevere.

KAYANU-HIME-NO-KAMI

Shinto goddess of grasses and herbs. One of the separated spirits of Toyo-uke-bime, goddess of food.

KAYURANKUBA Zulu storm spirit.

K'DAAI MAQSIN In Yakut mythology chief blacksmith in the underworld who provides human blacksmiths with their skill.

KEANE Masculine name from Middle English, meaning the bold or sharp.

KEB Same as Seb, which see.

KEBEHSENUF (KEBHNSNAUF, QEBHNSNAUF) In Egyptian mythology one of the four sons of Horus who assisted in funerary embalming rites. He represented the west and, on canopic vases, guarded the liver and gall bladder. He was portrayed as hawk-headed.

KEBLAH An object of devotion or passionate desire. The direction of the Kaaba in Mecca toward which Moslem worshipers turn in prayer, marked on the interior wall of a mosque by a mihrab or niche.

KEDAR Literally, powerful. In the Old Testament son of Ishmael; ancestor of a tribe of nomadic Arabs noted as desert brigands. Their tents are of black camel's hair, and Kedar's tents is a phrase meaning houses in the wilderness.

KEEL Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Carina. Keel is the keel of Argo.

KEEN Irish lament for the dead. Said to have been invented by Brigit. Always sung by women, frequently professional mourners. An expression of grief, which originally may have been intended as a howl to call the soul back from the dead.

KEH Primeval Egyptian god represented with the head of a frog.

KEHAMA In Southey's The Curse of Kehama, the Hindu raja who drinks the amreeta, or draught of immortality, which he thinks will bring him immortal happiness, but which brings him immortal death and he is forced to bend his proud neck and become the fourth support of the throne on which sits Yamen, the lord of death. Kehama pronounces a curse which becomes a blessing to Ladurlad, the man against whom it is directed.

KEIDOMOS Greek demon of battle noises; companion of Ares.

KEI-KUNG Taoist thunder god; mate of T'ien Mu, goddess of lightning.

KEITH Masculine name from a Scotch family and place name, and from the Gaelic, meaning the wind.

KEK (KEKU, KEKUI) Egyptian primeval deity of darkness. With Keket (Kekut), his mate, the third pair of the Egyptian ogdoad. Sometimes called Emen (Hidden).

KEKEKO Indonesian wonder bird who speaks and provides food for orphans.

KEKRI Finno-Ugric god who multiplied cattle. At the Kekri feast, which corresponds with the Catholic All Saints Day, fires are burned for the purpose of driving away evil spirits.

KEKUI Primeval Egyptian god. With his consort Kekuit, phases of light and darkness, the active and passive principles of nature.

KELAIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah is light.

KELLY (1) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning warrior. (2) A high silk hat worn by the Irish in Saint Patrick's Day parades in the United States.

KELP Used by the Kwakiutl Indians of the Pacific north coast as a charm to summon the wind.

KELPI (KELPY) Scotch water sprite. Frequently mischievous. He sometimes appears in the form of a horse grazing on the bank of a lake or river, lures travelers into mounting him, and then plunges into the water and drowns them. To see him portends death. At night, he sometimes helps millers by turning the mill-wheel. Compare nix.

KELVIN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning warrior friend.

KEM An ancient title of the land of Egypt. Yields Great-sun and is cognate with Rem (Fire of the sun).

KEMIAH An amulet carried for good luck by superstitious Jews.

KEMOSH Ancient Moabite god of thunder and lightning.

KEMP Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning champion, warrior.

KEMUEL Hebrew name meaning God stands.

KEN (1) In the Chinese Pa Kua (Eight Diagrams) used for purposes of divination, signifies hill. (2) In England a low resort, a boozing-place.

KENAIMA Among Carib Indians a member of a class with the power of bringing death; avenger of murder.

KENAZ Hebrew name meaning side.

KENDRICK Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning royal king.

KENELM Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning defender of kin, faithful.

KENEU In Iroquois tradition the golden eagle which assists Hino, the thunderbird.

KENGIU In Japanese mythology the Herdsman (see), lover of Weaver Damsel. Also called Hikoboshi. In China called Ch'ien Niu; in Korea called Ching Yuh.

KENNAQUHAIR Literally, know not where. In Scotland any imaginary place; no man's land.

KENNEBEC The name of a river in Maine, from the Indian meaning snake.

KENNEDY Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning clan chief.

KENNEDYA (KENNEDIA)

Herb symbolizing mental beauty.

KENNETH Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning handsome, leader.

KENNICK The lingo spoken in England by wandering tinkers among themselves.

KENNO In Scotland a type of cheese prepared for the feast given at the time a birth occurs.

KENSON Japanese elaborate ritual observed at every meeting or visit.

KENT Masculine name from a family and county name in England; from the Celtic meaning chief; from the Cymric meaning the radiant.

Kentish cousins. People who are distantly related.

Kentish fire. Din, noise, especially the loud applause or derision at political and public meetings.

KENTAUROS See Centaur.

KENTUCKY Emblem; trumpet wine. Motto: United We Stand; Divided We Fall. Nicknames: Blue grass; Dark and bloody ground. Nickname of natives: corncracker.

KENYON Masculine name from the Cymric, meaning white or blonde-haired.

KEOUT Irish expression for a sharp-tongued cur; hence any man who is contemptible and vulgar.

KER Greek death demon, a ghost or spirit which carries off the soul. Dreaded as a source of evil and eater of the flesh of the dead. A source of corruption in man; bringer of blindness, disease, madness, old age, and death. Each individual presumably had a divinity called Ker appointed at the moment of birth. This Ker developed with the individual and, when the ultimate fate of a mortal was about to be decided, the Ker was weighed to determine whether the individual should die or be permitted to live, inferring each person had the power to prolong or shorten his own existence. Homer refers to the Keres as goddesses who delighted in the slaughter of the battlefield. The Keres probably originally were underground fructifiers who became malevolent spirits in later myths. Compare Harpy.

KERANA In Persia a long trumpet which signals sunset and midnight.

KERAUNIA A title given to Semele in allusion to her death by the lightning of Zeus.

KERAUNOS A title of Zeus meaning thunderbolt.

KERBELA BEADS Talisman against thieves. Hung on the necks of horses to protect them from stumbling. Kerbela is a holy city in Asiatic Turkey.

KERE Tibetan for unicorn; also known as serou and as tsopo. Kere resolves into ak-ur, i.e. great fire.

KEREMET (1) In Finno-Ugric mythology place where a hero, who will continue to direct his people although dead, had lost his life, and where sacrifices are offered to him. Compare Arthur, Bran. (2) In Russian and Siberian tales a devil, brother of God. Resembles Lucifer, Satan.

KERENHAPPUCH Hebrew name meaning horn of paint. Keren, Hebrew for horn is cognate with Cernunnos, corne, Cronus (Kronos), Karnac.

KERESASPA (GARSHASP) Literally, with slender horses. The name also signifies manly-minded. One of the great heroes of Iranian legend. Son of Thritha Athwya, who was the father of Thraetaona, of whom Keresaspa seems to have been a doublet. Youthful and godlike, he purged the roads of highwaymen and killed evil monsters, especially drought and storm demons; among them: Arezoshamana, Gandarewa, Hitaspa and his nine sons, Kamak, Kaput, Pitaona, Srvara, Vareslava. His conquests were possible because, when for the third time the Khvarenanh (Glory) departed from Yima, he seized it and was protected by its strength. He was conquered by a woman, the witch Khnathaiti, who became his wife. Under her influence, he neglected to maintain the sacred fire; for this sin Ahura Mazda permitted him to be wounded in his sleep. He remained in a state of lethargy, protected by the third part of the Khvarenanh he had taken from Yima. In this state he will remain until the end of time, when Azhi Dahaka, fettered on Mount Damavand, will be released by the powers of evil. Azhi Dahaka will devour a third of mankind and commit all possible abuses. Then Ahura Mazda will send the angel Sraosha to arouse Keresaspa. He will call three times, and at the fourth summons the hero will rise and with his monstrous club slay Azhi Dahaka. At the same time he will kill Angra Mainyu (Evil Creation) and Druji (Falsehood). The death of these fiends will inaugurate the era of happiness. On the plea of Zarathushtra, the soul of Keresaspa was admitted to Garotman (Paradise). In early literature he was called Sama Keresaspa Naire-manah; later his name was split to account for several different personalities. As Sama, he became the grandfather and, as Nariman, the great grandfather of Rustam. His legend is an agricultural myth; Keresaspa, is the sun who brings fertility and who sleeps during the winter months, when the demons of evil become free to destroy the world. The conflict in which he engages at the end of time resembles Ragnarok.

KERESAVAZDAH (GARSIVAZ) In Iranian legend brother of Afrasiyab. Jealous of the honors Afrasiyab had conferred on his son-in-law Syavarshan, he falsely accused Syavarshan, and Afrasiyab had his son-in-law put to death. Afrasiyab and Keresavazdah represent demons of drought who destroy the bestower of fertilizing rains.

KERETH Literally, the smooth. Name under which the serpent was worshiped at Piton in ancient Egypt.

KERH Early Egyptian god. With his consort Kerhet phases of light and darkness, the active and passive forces of nature.

KERIMAS (KEYURI) Tibetan Buddhist eight cemetary goddesses. They are of human form; each carries a different part of the human body.

KERIOTH Hebrew name meaning cities.

KERKIOS Driver of the chariot of Castor and Pollux. Name, like Kerkuon, suggests turning to the left.

KERKUON In Greek mythology son of Agamedes. An Impeller or Axis god. Inventor of wrestling. He wrestled with Theseus at the pole or axis and bent down the tops of trees or the overarching branches of the Universe Tree. His name suggests turning to the left, whereas Theseus, the heavens-god, fought for the right order of the Universe.

KERLAUG (KERLAUNG, KERLOGAR) In Norse mythology rivers of the dead. Two of the four rivers through which Thor is obliged daily to wade to attend the Thingstead of the gods. He may not travel over the Asa bridge (Bifrost) for he would shatter it.

KERMESS (KERMIS) In the Low Countries of Europe originally a church festival or mass on the feast day of a patron saint; later an annual outdoor festival, a fair.

KERMIT Masculine name from the Celtic, probably meaning the dark or free.

KERM SCARLET Color worn by Jesus during his triumphal entry into Jerusalem to fulfill a messianic prophecy.

KERNABABY (CORNBABY, KERNBABY) In England and Scotland the Maiden; a rude corn image made from the last gleamings from the last field and adorned with flowers. Carried as a charm for fertility to a kern supper celebrating the harvest gathering and treasured from autumn to the following spring, when frequently it is tossed into a river or stream. Probably derived from ancient fertility rites in which the doll or image typified the earth goddess. Baby is from baba, i.e. parent of parents. See Cora, Ivy Girl.

KERNEL Symbolic of deep knowledge; the meat or secret. Word akin to Cora, ker, kerna-baby.

KERNOS A winnowing fan used in the Eleusinian mysteries. Also the name of a vessel formed of several cups used in the mysteries.

KEROS Hebrew name meaning bent.

KERRES Italian mother goddess worshiped in a sacred grove. Probably an early form of Ceres.

KERYKEION In Greek mythology a herald's staff. Attribute of Hermes and those who performed ceremonies of purification.

KESAVA Name by which Vishnu was hailed in boar form.

KESIL Name understood to mean fool or giant. In Semitic lore associated with the constellation Orion. Probably Nimrod, the mighty hunter who rebelled against God. Kesil tried to reach heaven and was seized by God who placed him there in fetters as a sign to other rebels. As he must also serve a term in Sheol, he disappears from the horizon every autumn. His flight compares with those of Etana and Kavi Usan.

KETCH, JACK See under Jack.

KETHER In the cabala omnipotent father of the universe. The supreme crown or head of the Tree of Life. Typifies both male and female principles in nature. Jehovah manifest with Shekinah; never separated from Chokmah (Wisdom). See Androgynous deities, Sephira.

KETTLE For general symbolism see caldron. The Mandan (Siouan) Indians have two kettles which are tribal fetishes. When drought threatens a feast is held and the two kettles are used in prayers for rain. In Norse mythology symbolizes the rock basins or shores which contain the sea.

Nice (or pretty) kettle of fish. An awkward, confused, or perplexing state of affairs.

The pot calls the kettle black. One person reproaches another for an error common to both.

KETTLEDROM Carries the same general symbolism as drum, which see. An informal afternoon tea party for ladies is called kettledrum; the term originated in India, where drum-heads served for tables. In ancient Sumer the instrument with which the festival of Sin, the moon god, was celebrated on the 15th day of each month, the day of the full moon. Also the festal days of the moon's quarters were celebrated on it.

KETTU (KITTU) Literally, justice or truth. In Babylonian mythology son of Shamash, brother of Misor. Typifies the spring sun and waxing moon. Also called Sydyk.

KETU In Hindu mythology tail of the dragon of which Rahu is the head, thus headlessness. Moon in descending node, demon of disease. With Rahu, who eclipses the sun, he interrupts the regular order of the zodiac. Usually depicted riding an owl.

KETURAH Hebrew name meaning fragrance, incense.

KEU WOO Chinese typhoon deity, sex undetermined, although frequently called typhoon mother in allusion to being the gale which gives birth to numerous offspring, which blow from every direction.

KEV In James Joyce's Finnegans Wake, the good little boy, as opposed to Dolph, the bad little boy.

KEVALINS In Jainism single-ones or those possessed of the highest knowledge, sages.

KEWPIE One of a good-natured race of quaint and impish fairy babies. The kewpies were invented by the artist Rose O'Neill and appeared as drawings and dolls.

KEY Authority, fidelity, knowledge, life, orderliness, phallus, release, secrecy, wardenship. That which displaces a difficulty or solves the unintelligible, as the key of a code, military position, or riddle; that which opens or prepares a way to other objects or steps and renders possible further progress; that which permits or hinders passage, therefore controls. A talisman, worn for prudence and remembrance of things past. Dream significance: appointment missed. In Freemasonry circumspection and silence. In heraldry dominion, guardianship. In medical superstition a key slipped down the back will stop a nose bleed. Universally in religion opener of the doors of heaven and hell; attribute of many divinities. Ancient priests and priestesses carried keys as a token of their authority. In China given to an only son to lock him into life. In Christianity possesses the power to absolve the contrite sinner; symbolic of the authority of the pope as successor of Saint Peter. Emblem of Saints Benno, Genevieve, Martha of Bethany, Peter, Petronilla. In Europe of the middle ages delivering up the keys of a castle or fortress was a symbol of surrender. In Gaul a woman laid her keys on the corpse of her husband in token of relinquishment or freedom from obligation, as where a widow lacked the means to meet the debts of the deceased. In Germany a key in a cradle keeps fairies from stealing the child. Hebrew symbol of power and trust. The iron keys of a synagogue placed under the pillow of a dying child supposedly will release it from the agonies of death. In rabbinical lore three keys are mentioned: key of rain; key for the resurrection of the dead; key of the womb, which opens the way to the birth of a child. In Ionian Islands an iron key is placed on the breast of the dead; iron to keep off evil; key to open the doors of the underworld. In Japan symbolizes happiness, love, wealth. In Mediterranean countries a charm against the evil eye. In Morocco used as an amulet to stop impotence. In Serbia, to prevent pregnancy, a woman would lay a lock and key on the floor and walk between them uttering magic words.

Bunch of keys. Saint Peter.

Crossed keys. Knowledge and love. In Freemasonry: in Encampments of Knight Templars and in Symbolic Lodges, silver jewel of the treasurer (jewels are of gold in Grand Lodges and of silver in subordinate Symbolic Lodges). Two keys crossed and with a trowel enclosed by an equilateral triangle, is the silver jewel of the treasurer in Royal and Scarlet Councils.

Gold (or yellow) keys. Authority, power, purification, superconsciousness.

Keyhole. The yoni. The keyhole is believed to be the place of entrance for demons, devils, nightmare hags and witches. Keys are left in the hole or it is stuffed with something to prevent its use by evil spirits, especially those who are apt to substitute changelings. Blowing through the church keyhole on Good Friday is recommended as a cure for urinary disorders common to children. On New Year's night looking through the keyhole into a church reveals the persons at the altar who are doomed to die during the coming year. On Saint Valentine's morning in England maidens peek through the keyhole into the barnyard; if a cock and a hen are seen strutting together, the sign is one of their own marriages inside the year.

Key pattern. Meander design symbolizing eternity, that which is without beginning or end. In China symbolic of thunder.

Silver (or white) key. Discernment. Powers of subconsciousness. For use in Freemasonry see above under crossed keys.

Two keys. Heaven and Hell.

KEYSTONE Firmness and stability. Outline of the head of the Sphinx, hence silence. Emblem of the state of Pennsylvania. Figuratively, the basic or essential element, as of a doctrine or science.

KEZER-TSHINGIS-KAIRA-KHAN A Tartar ancestor of man and flood hero. He taught man how to prepare strong drinks. Resembles Jaik-Khan, Noah, Noj, Pairekse.

KEZIZ Hebrew name meaning border.

KH Word terminal anciently signifying majesty. Thus Sutekh, Syrian demon, was identical with Set, the Egyptian demon, as vowels are interchangeable.

KHADAGA Sword with thunder-bolt handle used in Buddhist services against demons and evil spirits. Tantric symbol of Avalokitesvara, Cunda, Karmadakinī, Mahamayuri, Mahasahasrapramardani, and Manjusri.

KHADLJAH In the Koran Mahomet's first wife. One of the four perfect women, the others being Asia, Fatima, Mary.

KHAFRA Egyptian despot and tyrant, successor to Khufu, builder of the great pyramid at Giza. Builder of the second largest pyramid. He and Khufu were so hated, Egyptians refused to call the pyramids by their names and called them by the name of Philitis, a shepherd who grazed his flocks near them.

KHAIRA-KHAN Tartar heaven-spirit dwelling in the highest heavens at the pole-star. Supreme deity.

KHAKI A dull yellowish color symbolizing higher mental development, hidden potencies, sophistication, subtlety (as used in modern warfare).

KHAKKHARA Buddhist long wooden alarm staff with a metal top. Non-tantric symbol of Ksitigarbha, Maudgalyayana, Sariputra. Compare danda.

KHALDI Urartian (pre Armenian) sky god. A supreme god; one of a triad with Artinis, sun god, and Theispas, weather god. Urartians believed themselves to be Khaldi's children and called themselves Khaldians (Chaldeans).

Identified with Bag-Mashtu.

KHAM (KAM) Small replica of a hand used as a charm by the Arabs. In Arabic signifies five fingers; in Hebrew means heat.

KHAMA Hebrew for sun. Akin to kamen, Slavic for stone; Kami, ancient name for Egypt; kham, Hebrew for heat.

KHAMBABA Old Persian royal name; probably originally the name of a sun god. The name yields Great Sun (Kham) + father of fathers (baba).

KHAMMURABI Same as Hammurabi.

KHAMSA The number five in Arabic. Regarded so powerful and mystic, it is believed to bring back luck if mentioned and for this reason it is not pronounced; Arabs say two-three instead.

KHAM SIN A hot wind in Egypt that comes from the Sahara. It carries particles of sand and prevails for about fifty days before the vernal equinox. A dust or sand storm, simoon.

KHAN In Mongol, Tartar, and Turkish tribes, sovereign ruler, as successor of Genghis Khan. In Persia an important civil officer or a nomadic chief. Word signifies lord or prince. In Sanscrit the word means sun, and it is related to Can, name of the Mayan serpent god. Possibly the root of or allied to king.

KHANDAVA (KHANDAVAPRASTHA) In Hindu legend country and forest awarded to the Pandavas when Dhritarashtra divided his kingdom.

- KHAN-IKI Ostiak earth-watching man. Youngest son of Over-god. Name signifying Prince Old Man.
- KHANSAMAH (KHANSUMA) Anglo-Indian house servant; a butler.
- KHANUM In Tartar countries a woman of distinction or rank; feminine form of khan.
- KHARA (KHAR) Iranian primeval fish corresponding to Leviathan. Described as a gigantic three-legged ass with six eyes, nine mouths, and one horn, which stands in the middle of the sea Vourukasha. With the aid of his sharp eyes he overcomes evils and assists in the orderly management of the world.
- KHARIF Rainy season in the Egyptian Sudan; autumn.
- KHAT Egyptian for body. See ka-khu-khat.
- KHATVANGA Buddhist ritual wand with a thunderbolt (vajra) top; flame (trisola), skull, and two heads above it. Symbol of Dakinis and Padmasambhava.
- KHAYBET In Egyptian mythology a manifestation of the ka.
Khaybet-ba-sahu. Egyptian triad representing shadow-soul-mummy.
- KHEM Occult generative power in nature.
- KHENEN-SU City of ancient Egypt; by the Greeks called Heracleopolis. The bennu or phoenix lived there; its patron deity was Hershef. Scene of the great creation myth of sun worshippers.
- KHEN-PA Tibetan Old Father. In control of sky demons. He is shown with white hair and is dressed in white. He rides the white dog of the sky and carries a crystal wand. Compare Khonma.
- KHENSU (CHONS, CHUNSU, KHONSU) In Egyptian mythology son of Amon-Ra and Mut, and at Thebes worshiped with them as one of a trinity. He was the sailor or wanderer, a moon god. In later belief he was a healing god. He was an architect, measurer of months; divine physician; hunter and messenger of the gods; love deity. He made crops to ripen, and his oracle was consulted by those who desired offspring or wished to increase flocks and herds. As a wind god he gave the air of life to the newly born. In the Unas hymn he slaughters the souls (stars) of gods and men, a myth which explains why the stars vanish before the moon. As Khensu-Hor or Khensu-Ra he typified the spring rain. Depicted as a young man wearing the horned disk, as a youth with sidelocks standing on a crocodile, or as a hawk-headed young man with lunar attributes; sometimes shown as a child. His emblems are an ankh and staff. Occasionally he is equated with Thoth as god of wisdom, but Thoth usually is shown with an ibis head. By Greeks identified with Heracles.
- KHENTAMENTI (KHENTAMEN-TIU) Literally, he who is in the west. In Egyptian antiquity a jackal-god of the dead. God of the cemetery at Abydos. Later called Ophois or Up-uaut, and still later identified with Osiris.

KHEPERA (CHEPERA, KHEP-RER, KHEPRI) Egyptian infant or morning sun. Born of the Abyss, he was lifted over the horizon by Hehu and Hehut. He was self-created, and by saying his name, he made a solid place on which to stand. Then he masturbated, that is, he copulated with his own shadow and ejaculated Shu, the air, and Tefenet, moisture. Both names are derived from roots meaning to spit. Daily he lost one eye, which wandered abroad as the sun and which was brought back to him by Shu and Tefenet.

The roving eye constantly quarreled with the other eye. This quarrel compares with those of twin brothers of light and darkness. From the tears (rays) of Khepera man was created. Compare Izanagi. The Abyss from which Khepera emerged was filled with dragons, serpents, and other monsters. Nightly, in the form of a scarab, he warred against these abysmal powers, and each morning he returned to the upper world, bringing light with him. Thus, like Ra, he was resurrected or reborn each morning. He usually is portrayed as a man with a scarab for a head or as a scarab rolling his egg (sun) across the sky. When shown with two eggs, they represent the morning and evening sun, but he usually represents only the weaker sun as it appears in the morning when the solar egg is being formed. Identical with Mentu and Tum.

KHI-DIMME-AZAGA Literally, child of the renowned spirit. In Babylonian mythology daughter of Ea, god of the deep. Great mother goddess. She may be identical with Belit-Sheri.

KHIDR (EL KHIDR) The green-one; a figure of Arabic folklore.

He is the only man to have tasted of the Fountain of Immortal Youth, far in the east. He is identified with Elijah of Jewish lore and their legends are almost identical, thus is revered as a sun deity, the sun renewing his youth each morning in the seas to the east. Among Arabs of modern Syria he is worshiped as a sea-spirit and called he who walks on the sea. As Khidr Khwaja he is a Moslem saint and, on a river, his followers launch small boats filled with offerings in his honor to rid themselves of threatening misfortunes or sins.

KHIDV A Moslem spiritual and supernatural prophet, who was endowed with omniscience while on earth. He is revered as the coming Mahdi or Mohammedan Messiah.

KHIN-ORT Northern Ostiaks prince of sickness. His son steers the boat of the dead.

KHNEMU (CHNEMU, CHNOUMES, EF, KHNUMU, KNEPH, KUEPH) Literally, builder or joiner. Egyptian Great Father. At the First Cataract he was worshiped in a triad with two wives, Anqet and Satet, as master of Hades and guardian of the waters coming from the lower world. The sun was lost at night in his dark realm. Later he was transformed from a cataract god to a creator and he was the mate of Heqet. From the primeval river's mud he shaped a cosmic egg, from which he formed the universe. On his potter's wheel he molded men and gods; sometimes he was called the Potter. He was merged with the ram god Min and usually portrayed as ram-headed, although he sometimes was given serpent form. His name was incorporated into the Egyptian name of Khufu (Chufu) as Khnumu-Khufu, by the Greeks called Cheops. In later myths Khnumu was the name given to the seven (or nine) architects who assisted Ptah. They had the form of elves and were believed to have the power to reconstruct the decaying bodies of the dead. The city which was the scene of the beginning of creation also was called Khnumu. Compare Amen-Khnum, Hu.

KHODA Persian supreme deity.

KHOJA A title of respect given in the East to persons of distinction and wealthy merchants. Also applied to a Hindu converted to a Mohammedan sect but retaining many Hindu customs.

KHOLUMOLUMO Bantu cannibal monster that swallows cattle, fowl, people, etc.

KHONLIGHEI KALAM Sanscrit hour of good omen. Compare Iraghon Kalam.

KHON-MA Tibetan Old Mother. In control of earth demons. She rides on a ram holding a golden pasa (noose). Her face has eight wrinkles. Compare Khenpa.

KHONSU (KHONS) Identical with Khensu, which see.

KHORSAN Iranian desert. Literally, region of the sun.

KHOSODAM Cannibalistic demon woman of Northern Siberians. Creator of mosquitoes, female ruler of the dead.

KHOTUN (KUBAI-KHOTUN) Yakut goddess of birth living in the lake of milk under the tree of life, nourisher with breasts as large as leather sacks. The plenteousness of her milk being the origin of the Milky Way.

Identical with Ajysit. Compare Ardisura Anahita, Hera, Manzan Gormo.

KHRUT Heraldic bird of the Burmese whose appearance at the Thagyan (New Year) festival indicates a season of high winds. Another name for Galon. Corresponds to the Garuda.

KHSHATHRA VAIRYA Literally, desirable sovereignty. One of the Amesha Spentas or six angels of Zoroastrianism. Aid and attribute of Ahura Mazda; personification of Ahura Mazda's might and sovereignty, triumph of his power over evil on earth. Guardian of metals. His flower emblem is the royal basil. In the court of heaven, his auxiliaries are Aniran, Asman, and Mithra; his antagonist is Sauru.

KHU (KHOU) (1) Egyptian god of light. Name signifying glorious, shining; akin to Dyhu (Dy-aus), Hu, Taou. (2) The soul, a form of the ka, which was the double of the intellect and represented intention or will. Sometimes conceived as a crested bird now known as the hoopoo or pupu. See ba, ka.

KHUBILGAN Buriat soul animal; protector of a shaman in the form of an animal or bird which becomes taboo to the clan. Compare ija-kyl, utkha.

KHUBUR Babylonian river which had to be crossed to reach Aralu, underworld of the dead. Parallels the Styx.

KHUDJANA Among the natives of North Transvaal, Africa, son of the sky-god Ribimbi. Maker of the earth.

KHUFU (CHUFU) Egyptian who seized the throne and became first king of the Fourth Dynasty. The burden of taxes he imposed was intolerable, and he forced hundreds of thousands into slave labor. The hatred for him as oppressor and tyrant lasted for several centuries, until his tomb was raided and his mummy torn to pieces. Egyptians refused to call the pyramid he built by his name, and called it by the name of Philitis, a shepherd who grazed flocks near it. He supposedly composed a religious work called the Sacred Book, which is used by mystics. Also called Khnumu-Khufu, suggesting he descended from the god Khnumu. By Greeks called Cheops.

KHULATER Among North Siberian tribes ruler of the dead.

KHUNS Same as Khensu, which see.

KHURAN-NOJON Buriat lord of rain. He is believed to have nine barrels of rain; when he opens one, rain falls for three days.

KHURI EDZHIN Buriat master or spirit of musical instruments. He teaches men to be skillful musicians.

KHVARENANH Literally, glory, light, luster. In Iranian mythology the emanation or divine essence of kings. Element which made gods and the souls of the dead powerful; it gave the sun, moon, stars, and water their benign influences and endowed humans with the power to overcome evil demons. According to the Avesta, this glory is found in cosmic space, milk, or reeds, or swims in the sea. When Yima spoke falsely the Khvarenanh deserted him and passed in turn to Mithra, Thraetaona, and Keresaspa, and finally sought shelter in the world ocean. It attaches itself to monarchs as long as they are worthy representatives of divine power. Also called Farro.

KHWAI-HEMM In Bushman folklore the all-devourer, father of the porcupine.

KI Sumerian earth mother. Her mate was An, the sky god, and both were produced by Nammu. They were joined physically and separated by Enlil, air god. From the union of Ki and her son Enlil came the living things of earth. Identical with Ki are Ninhursag, Ninmah, Nintu.

KIAKLO Zuni culture hero who visited Pautiwa in the underworld in search of the breath of life. His story resembles that of Orpheus and Persephone. See Ashiwi.

KIAORA Literally, may you live. Maori salutation used throughout Australasia.

KIARA African Wankonde Father, the supreme god. Also called Mbamba.

KIA-T'ANG Chinese household shrine or tabernacle for ancestor worship. Compare Ts'i-t'ang.

KIBLA (KIBLAH) (1) Direction toward which Moslem worshipers turn their faces. Also keblah. (2) Trumpet used by Jews in ceremonial observances.

KIBROTH-HATTA AVAH Literally, grave of lust. Encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness, where they desired of God flesh for their sustenance, declaring they were tired of manna. Quail was sent in great quantities, but while the meat was still in their mouths, many of them were attacked by a deadly plague. The bird, sacred to Melkarth and tabu to his worshippers, was believed to have brought the affliction.

KIBU Mabuiag (Melanesian) land of the dead; island far to the west.

KICHELL A holy bread. A cake godfathers and godmothers used to give to their godchildren when they asked a blessing. Compare cake.

KICHIGONAI Genii of light, maker of the day, of the Kiche (Quiche) Indians of Guatemala.

KICVA In Brythonic mythology wife of Pryderi. Because of the curse on the land of Dyfed, she is forced to become a saddler, shield-maker, and shoe-maker successively. Probably a fertility goddess who changed with the seasons.

KID Playfulness, youthfulness. In Astronomy the triangle formed by small stars near Capella in Auriga; their rising was regarded as a portent of hurricanes. In Greek mythology form into which Zeus changed Dionysus to save him from the wrath of Hera.

KIDD, CAPTAIN William Kidd, a British sea-captain, who was sent to suppress piracy in the Indian Ocean in 1696 and turned pirate. He was treated as treacherously as he had lived, as on a promise of pardon he surrendered for trial and was sentenced to be hanged. His life has become the subject of many legends, and his treasures are said to be buried in various parts of the world, especially on Long Island.

KIDNEYS In Chinese Buddhism one of the eight sacred organs; seat of emotional feelings.

KIEHTAN Maker of all things of Massachusetts Indians.

KIEN NIU Same as Ch'ien Niu, which see.

KI-GULLA In Babylonian mythology son of Ea, god of the deep. World destroyer.

KIHUNAI In California Hupa Indian mythology beings who inhabited the world before the Hupa. They still live to the east, west, south, and above the Hupa.

KIKIMORAS Slavic Russian female genii which play the role of household gods. They live in ovens and make noises which disturb sleeping people. They are invisible and do not grow old, but manifestations of their presence portend trouble.

KIKU-JIDO In Japanese legend Chrysanthemum Boy, who resides in the fountain of youth; eternal boy.

KIL (KILL) Literally, cell. Celtic church or churchyard.

KILDARE Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning in battle array.

KILDISIN (KUGU-SHOTSHEN-AVA) Finno-Ugric birth goddess. Mother or wife of Inmar, god of heaven or sky. Prayed to for husbands and children. Name signifying procreating heaven. In Christian times merged into Virgin Mary.

KILHWCH Same as Kulhwch, which see.

KILILI In Assyrian and Baby-

Ionian mythology Ishtar in the aspect of a harlot. Queen of windows, evil spirit which brings woe to men. Analogue of Abtagigi.

KILIN (KIRIN, KYLIN) Chinese mythical auspicious animal, a unicorn; fabled to have appeared at the birth of Confucius.

KILKENNY CATS In Irish legend two cats which fought until nothing remained but their tails; probably a parable of a local destructive contest between Kilkenny and Irishtown. Thus to fight like Kilkenny cats is to fight to the point of mutual destruction.

KILLIAN Masculine name from Old Teutonic, meaning well tried.

KILROY A phantom figure of World War II, which led to the expression Kilroy was here.

KIMIDINS Hindu goblins who traveled in pairs and were hostile to mankind.

KI-MON In Japan, demon-gate; garden shrines which face north, the direction from which evil comes, to protect the home.

KIMPURUSHAS A class of Hindu spirits. Servants and followers of Kubera. They have human heads on horse bodies. Often identified with the kinnaras, also servants of Kubera, who have horse heads on human bodies.

K'I-MU Chinese mystic bag containing the essences of life.

KINA Among Yahgan Indians of South America dance of masked men led by a shaman. They perform before women to remind them, with threats of a horrible fate, to be submissive to men.

According to one myth, in former times, women, led by Moon, terrified men in the same manner. Sun discovered their secret, killed all women except small girls, and adopted the kina festival to insure male supremacy. Compare Kloketen.

KINCHIN-COVE An inexperienced young thief who robs children.

KINE-KINE-BORO In Indonesian tales an ogre who lassoed his victims with his plaited hair.

KINEUN In Menominee legend the Golden Eagle, chief of thunderbirds.

KING (1) Symbolized by a castle, crown, eagle, lion, orb, scepter, sword, throne; in Egypt, by a male sphinx. Early rulers, believed to have been descendants or reincarnations of divinities, were priest kings. A king's word was the law by divine right; he could do no wrong; his judgment was infallible and above the law; his promises were irrevocable. A dead king was looked upon as a celestial benefactor of the people. The word king is from Anglo-Saxon cyng (tribe); is allied to khan, and also may be a corruption of saint. In primitive ceremonies the king played the role of a god, as in Babylon, where he acted the part of Tammuz in the mysteries which contained a rite in which the king actually was sacrificed; in later times a surrogate was offered. See Fertility rites, Investiture of a king. For the five Buddhist kings of Tibet see Mahapancaraja. In Egyptian antiquity the king walked around the walls of a temple in a ceremony intended to keep the sun on its course and assist it in moving across the sky. In Japan the king or emperor is

Son of the sun. In Scriptures the word king does not always imply a high degree of power or great amount of land. Pre-Israelite kings were no doubt like the sheikhs of Arab tribes in modern times. The Israelites had no king before Saul, having first been governed by elders, as in Egypt; then by rulers appointed by God, as Moses and Joshua; then by judges, as Ehud, Gideon, and Samuel. When kings finally became the rulers, they were anointed by a prophet or high priest, who placed the crown upon the king's head and the scepter in his hand. Thus the Israelites had both a temporal and sacred leader comparable to the Dalai and Tashi Lamas of Tibet. (2) Card in the tarot deck typifying father, symbolizing spirit, essential self in man. The king of clubs represents the idea of spirit; of hearts, the pattern of spirit; of spades, the processes requisite to the manifestation of spirit; of diamonds, the actualized manifestation of spirit.

King Arthur. Dragon slayer, liberator of the enchanted, protector of women. He and his knights gathered around a round table, i.e. circle of the sun or perfection. See under Arthur for his legend.

King asleep. In various legends a king is said to be asleep, awaiting a call to rise and save his country from defeat. Among those who are prepared for a call are: Arthur, British king. Barbarossa of Germany (Frederick I, probably confused with Frederick II). Charlemagne, king of the Franks. Dobocz, Carpathian robber king. Don Sebastian of Portugal. Earl Gerald of Ireland. Fionn of Ireland. Meher of Armenia. Mucukunda, Hindu king. Olaf Tryggvesson of Norway. Robert Bruce of Scotland. Wenzel, king of Bohemia.

King Brown. King Bruin, a title of King Lud, a British sun deity alternately known as Immanuence.

King cup (buttercup). March 10 birthday flower symbolizing brilliancy. In the language of flowers: I wish I were rich.

King Fisher. Christ. Also see fisher king.

King George. A corruption of Saint George.

King Goldemar. German folklore house spirit. Although invisible, he could be felt and touched. He was talkative, fond of playing at dice and on the harp, and was a great revealer of secrets. In one tale a person who tried to find him was cut to pieces by an unseen hand. Probably a wind demon. Also known as King Vollmar.

King Horn. In early English and French romances, an exiled prince who during his travels abroad falls in love. After many hardships he wins his bride.

King Lear judgment. Short-sighted judgment. For the legend of King Lear, see under Lear.

King Log. In Aesop's Fables when the frogs asked for a king, Zeus gave them a log; when they objected that the log was too spiritless, Zeus replaced their king by King Stork, who devoured them. Thus one who rules in peace without making his power felt.

King Lud. British sun deity. Alternately known as King Brown or Bruin. London was known to the Welsh as Caerlud, i.e. seat of Lud.

King Noble (or Nobel). Lion in medieval satirical beast epic, Reynard the Fox. Typifies royalty. Compare Reynard.

King of Bath. Title of Beau Nash.

King of beasts. The lion.

King of beggars. Bampfyde Moore Carew, famous 18th century English adventurer and vagabond who joined a band of gypsies and was elected king.

King of birds. The eagle.

King of Cows. In China an ugly image frequently found at wayside shrines. Worshiped by cowherders for protection from evil spirits and disease.

King of Horses. Image frequently found at Chinese wayside shrines; worshiped by horsebreeders to protect horses from evil spirits. The image is an ugly monster with three eyes and four hands in which it bears weapons of war.

King of Ireland's Son. A legendary Irish character. A type of romantic youth invariably lured away to the lands of the immortals by fairy-women.

King of Kings. God or Christ. Also a title assumed by several Oriental rulers.

King of metals. Gold.

King of Misrule. Officer who, in the middle ages was attached to English aristocratic households. He presided over Christmas revels, and he and his attendants, grotesquely attired, provided with dragons, hobbyhorses, and musicians, created a great din. At the end of the ceremonies the king suffered a mock death to the feigned grief or genuine delight of the populace. Also called Abbot of Unreason, Bishop of Fools, King of the Bean on Twelfth Night, Lord of Misrule, Master of Unreason. Direct descendant of the King of Saturnalia.

King of Saturnalia (King Saturn). In Roman antiquity king who impersonated the god of the sprouting seed. After five days of glory and dissipation he was slain in a fertility rite. See fertility god, King of the Wood.

King of Tenedos. Ancient

Italian king who passed a law that anyone who committed adultery should be beheaded with an ax and did not spare his own son.

King of terrors. Death.

King of the Bean on Twelfth Night. See King of Saturnalia.

King of the forest. The oak

King of the jungle. The tiger.

King of the May. Medieval European vegetation spirit. In festivals in his honor the king is represented by a person who, like his attendants, is dressed in bark and decked with garlands of flowers. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the king is allowed a short start; then is pursued by the armed attendants. If overtaken, he suffers a mock decapitation, and the pretended corpse is borne on a bier to the next village. This ceremonial death is followed by a resuscitation. See fertility rites.

King of the Wood. In Roman antiquity priest-king of the grove of Diana at Nemi, where grew a sacred oak. Only a runaway slave was permitted to attempt to break off one of its golden boughs. Success entitled him to fight the incumbent in single combat; if he killed the reigning priest, the office of King of the Wood or Rex Nemorensis passed on to him, and he became the mate of Diana. His soul became embodied in the sacred oak, a form of Jupiter the oak god. He thus was an incarnation of the oak spirit, the king intended to be ritually slain after his reign like the King of Saturnalia. His death was necessary before he became decrepit to keep the full power of fertility preserved by passing it to a more vigorous king. If the priest held office too long, a husky slave was sent to slay him. The shrine of the goddess supposedly had been founded at Aricia on Lake Nemi in Sicily by Orestes who, with his sister Iphigenia, had fled from Tauri with the image of the Tauric Diana (Artemis). The first priest-king of the grove was Virbius. The bloody ritual of the Tauric Diana was modified, and a surrogate in the form of a slave was permitted. The flight of the slave typifies the flight of Orestes; his combat with the priest suggests the human sacrifices which once were offered to the Tauric Diana. See Golden bough, Nemi Wood.

King Pecheur. In Holy Grail romances a celebrated angler, uncle of Percivale and possessor of the Holy Grail and sacred lance.

King Petaud. One only nominally a king; one whose imaginary subjects ignore his authority. From the French phrase, King Petaud's court, meaning confusion, disorder.

King Sacripant. In Tassoni's poem, the Rape of the Bucket, a brave but boastful and boisterous man.

King's Castle (Kingly Castle). Another name for Revolving Castle. See Caer Sidi.

King's evil. Scrofula; from the belief which once prevailed that the disease could be cured by the royal touch.

Lame (or maimed) king. Holy kings acquired lameness either as a penalty for victory or in imitation of a dislocation suffered in a wrestling match. Anciently legs were forced widely apart causing a hip dislocation. Jacob, who wrestled all night with an angel, was so lamed. The gait may have been the result of injury to the phallus of the fertility king, so maimed after his mating with the queen; a rite of sympathetic magic, i.e. harvest crops must be cut, the earth made barren or pass through a winter season before regrowth in spring. Adonis was such a king. The priest of a holy king wore a heeled buskin, which gave him a lame gait, to protect his sacred heel from the serpent, i.e. when the heel of the sun (or moon) touches the earth-serpent the whole body is soon swallowed. Sometimes the lame king was connected with the mysteries of smithcraft, as Hephaestus, or he was ruler of a diseased kingdom to which drought or winter had come, the land's health being tied to the king's health, as that of the Fisher King in Grail legends. See Emasculation, Hobbling, Partridge.

Sacred king. Anciently the king was deified during his reign; he was believed to possess magical powers and the prosperity of his land was coupled with his strength. He frequently was not permitted to die a natural death; such a death might have brought the world to an end. His term of office usually expired with the harvest or death season. To maintain his post the sacred king had to observe certain taboos, he had to meet any challenger to his office, his body had to be unblemished, he had to be young and virile. In Egypt the sacred king (pharaoh), after a thirty year reign, was devoured at the Heb-Seb festival so that his spirit might enter his successor and the land and the people have prosperity. This gave way to a mock sacrifice, as in the Saturnalia, at which the king supposedly was reborn. Still later, animals were substituted to represent the sacred king or nature god. Mexican Indians treated a prisoner as a king for a time, giving him every comfort, luxury, and pleasure, before sacrificing him as the king's surrogate, indicating that riches and pleasure may turn to poverty and death. Compare El Bugat, Fertility rite, Fisher king, Oak king.

Unblemished king. Typifies spring sun, the ruler of a flourishing kingdom. Compare Lame king above.

KINGFISHER Calm. Ancient Sicilians believed the kingfisher laid its eggs and incubated for fourteen days before the winter solstice on the surface of the sea, during which time Thetis kept the waters placid. Another name for the bird is halcyon, compounded of hals (sea) and kuo (to brood on). Some believe its dried body averts thunderbolts; if kept in a wardrobe, it preserves woolens from moths; if hung by a thread from a ceiling, it points with its bill to the direction of the wind. In China symbolic of beauty, also of gaudy raiment.

KINGSLEY Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the king's lea.

KINGU (KINGUGU) In Babylonian mythology offspring and mate of Tiamat after the death of Apsu. Keeper of her books of fate and leader of her flocks (demons of wind and other destructive nature spirits). Marduk bound him in the underworld and took the tablets of fate; then he burned Kingu and used his blood for the creation of man. Compare Ymir, Zu.

KINHARIGAN Dusun (Borneo) creator god; maker of the world and of mankind. With his wife Munsumundok, he killed one of his children, cut it into pieces, which he planted in the earth. From these grew animals and plants to feed mankind. Compare Ymir.

KINICH-AHAU (KINISH-KAKIMO) Mexican deity; an aspect of Itzamna in the form of the red macaw. Name signified Lord of the Sun's Face or Lord Eye of the Day.

KINMONT, WILLIE A notorious 16th century Scottish marauder, whose full name was William Armstrong of Kinmont. His rescue from a prison in Carlisle became a ballad subject.

KINNARAS A class of Hindu spirits. Heavenly musicians, said to be the sons of Kasyapa and followers of Kubera. Also said to have sprung from the toe of Brahma. They had the heads of horses and bodies of men. Probably spirits of wind. Usually shown playing vina (lutes). Compare kimpurushas.

KINNUI The secular name of a Jew as distinguished from his synagogal name.

KINTARO (KINTOKI) In Japanese legend a child of nature, son of Yama-uba, the mountain woman. Sturdy and courageous, he fears nothing and plays with wild animals. A Japanese Siegfried.

KINTU In African Uganda mythology first man, mate of Nambi, the daughter of heaven.

KIOSK In Persia and Turkey an ornamental summer house or open pavilion. Imitated in other countries in gardens and parks, especially for use as a display booth or refreshment counter.

KIOUSA Among Indians of Florida and Virginia idol which kept watch over the dead. Also Oki.

KIOWA Literally, human being. The name of a North American Indian tribe.

- KIRI Flower sacred to the mi-kado. Japanese symbol for December. The kirinomom (kirimom) is one of the two imperial crests. It consists of three flowers and three leaves of the paulownia or kiri. The other crest is the kikunomom (kikumom) consisting of an open crysanthemum flower.
- KIRJATHHUZOTH Hebrew name meaning city of outplaces.
- KIRJATHJEARIM Hebrew name meaning city of forests.
- KIRK North English and Scottish for church; word akin to cherub. Compare kil.
Kirkgarth (kirkshot). Churchyard or graveyard.
- KIRKE Sorceress. Same as Circe, which see.
- KIRKRAPINE In Spenser's Faerie Queene lover of Abessa (Superstition) and robber of churches. Personification of the plundering of the Church by clergy. Kirkrapine is torn to pieces by the lion of Corceca (the Reformation).
- KIRSTEN Feminine name from the Scandinavian; corresponds to the masculine Christian.
- KIRTTIMUKHA In Hindu mythology lion-headed monster which survived self-destruction. It was produced by Siva when he was challenged by Jalandhara, and embodied the destructive power of the god. The ravenous monster, deprived of his legitimate prey, Rahu, fed on the flesh of his own body, starting with his feet until only his face remained. Siva then declared that henceforth the face would be known as Kirttimukha (Face of Glory) and would be worshiped as a symbol of protective wrath. The face was placed on temple lintels as a guardian. Probable source of the gargoyle.
- KISANI Navaho underworld people with whom the descendants of the Atse Estsan and Atse Hastin intermarried and populated the earth.
- KISH Early Mesopotamian urban community; flourished about 3,500 to 3,000 B.C. Supposedly first city founded after the flood. In Hebrew the name means bow.
- KISHAR (KISSARE) In Babylonian mythology with her mate Anshar, second pair born to the chaos deities Apsu and Tiamat, or grandchildren of Apsu and Tiamat and children of Lachmu and Lachamu. A primeval female deity. With Anshar she represented the entire cosmos, the heavens, earth, and lower world, and by him begetter of Anu, male creative energy.
- KISHIBOJIN (KISHIMOGIN) Japanese goddess of babies and children. Demon woman who devoured children; later protected them from disease. Derived from Hariti, Hindu she-devil, eater of children. Usually portrayed holding a child.
- KISHION (KISHON) A river in Palestine; scene of the defeat of the Canaanites by Sisera. Name from the Hebrew meaning hard.
- KISI Among Indians of southwest United States a shelter or temporary dwelling for the watchers of growing crops.
- KISMET (KISMAT) From the Turkish, appointed fate or lot.
- KISS Affection, allegiance, peace, salutation. An act of adoration or prayer; anciently kisses were thrown to statues of deities or the feet of the statues were kissed. Gamblers kiss cards for luck. Dream significance: betrayal, deceit. In amorous correspondence symbolized by X; a hug is symbolized by O. Children who hurt themselves have the place kissed to make it well. In certain sections of the world kisses are classified according to the part of the body kissed and the use of arms, hands, tongue, etc. In folk legends a kiss brings forgetfulness, causes awakening, disenchanting one bewitched, re-suscitates, or transports into another world. By Chinese and Japanese looked upon as an erotic exercise. In early Christian church a pledge of charity and peace. The practice of kissing a corpse farewell was forbidden by medieval Jews inasmuch as the act was believed to cause death by contamination to the kisser. Kissing the Torah is a reverential act controlled by certain tabus; it must not be kissed by a man after he has kissed his wife or child, or after intercourse.

Kiss away. Lose through amorous dissipations; squander in pleasures.

Kiss hands. Be endowed with high office by the sovereign, whose hand or hands are kissed on the occasion of the presentation of the seals of office. Also an act of appreciation, humility, submission.

Kiss of Judas. Betrayal.

Kiss the book. Take an oath as by pressing the lips to the Bible.

Kiss the dust (or ground). Be conquered or killed; be defeated or humiliated. Bow in defeat or reverence.

Kiss the rod. Humble oneself before correction; submit to punishment.

KISSOS In Greek mythology, Dionysus as god of ivy.

KISSYBION In Greek antiquity a wine cup of ivy wood or cup adorned with ivy leaves. It probably had one handle.

KIT-CAT A convivial association founded in London in 1688. Named from Christopher Cat, proprietor of the house near Temple Bar, where the members, composed of Addison, Congreve, Steele, Walpole, and leading Whigs, ate mutton pies.

KITCHIE BOY A male Cinderella in Scottish ballad. He is a kitchen boy with whom the lord's daughter falls in love. Afraid of her advances, she outfits him with a ship. As its captain he marries her.

KITE (1) Bird of prey; flesh-eater. (2) A device symbolizing experiment, theory, venture. In colloquial usage, to go with great rapidity. A shrewd bargainer, a sharper who exchanges checks for the purpose of gaining time, or who obtains credit or money by using commercial paper of doubtful value.

Kite-flying. In China believed to lengthen human life. A kite-flying festival, called Chung Yang, is celebrated on the 9th day of the 9th moon. According to one legend this festival goes back more than 2,000 years, when Huan Ching, a pupil of the magician Fei-Ch'ang-fang was warned by the magician to take himself and his family into the mountains to escape a calamity which was about to overtake the district in which he lived. Huan Ching went into the mountains, wiled away the day flying kites, and escaped an overwhelming catastrophe.

Huan Ching compares with Noah.
Higher than Gilderoy's kite.

Exceedingly high; an allusion to a notorious robber named Gilderoy who had been hanged in Edinburgh in 1636 on an unusually high gallows.

KITHLISH Hebrew name meaning separation.

KITMIL AND MAGIGI In Pelew Islands mythology survivors of the deluge.

KITRON Hebrew name meaning little.

KITSHI MANITOU (GITCHE, GITCHY MONEDO, KITCHI MANITO) Literally, Great Good Spirit. Chippewa Supreme Being, creator of the world. Symbolized by the sun. In conflict with Mitsi-Manitou or Mudje-Monedo (Great Bad Spirit), who is symbolized by the serpent.

KITSUKI Shinto shrine of Susano-wo in Izumo, where all deities assemble in the tenth lunar month to arrange all marriages that are to occur during the coming year. See Kami-nashitsuki.

KITSUME Japanese bewitching fox which plays mischief on human beings and has the ability to change its shape to that of a mortal, plant, or other animal. Messenger of Inari-sama (Ukano-kami), deity of rice. He sees that farmers pay due offerings to the shrine and protects the farms of the pious.

KITTEL A long coat worn by Polish Jews. The grave coat worn by married orthodox Jews in special ceremonies on Rosh Hashana, Yom Kippur, and at burials.

KITTEN Childishness, playfulness.

KIUSHIU Japanese island famous for its pirates.

KIVA Sacred circular ceremonial room and lounging chamber of the Hopi Indians. Devoted to secret rites, it is built beneath Pueblo dwellings, and is entered through the roof.

KIYAMAT-TORA Finno Ugric prince or judge of death. Also called Tamek-vui, Tuoni. His assistant is Kiyamat-saus.

KIYOMORI In Japanese mythology usurper, warrior.

K. K. K. Monogram of the Ku Klux Klan.

KLABOTERMAN (KLABAUTERMANN) The kobold or spirit of the phantom ship Carmilhan. Also one of a class of helpful beings that dwelt in the wooden masts of ships. A sapling would be cut in order to pass a sickly child through it. If the child died, the soul remained in the tree which then was used in a ship mast, as the soul presumably became a klaboterman.

KLAFT Headdress worn by Isis. It supposedly endowed the wearer with divine wisdom and discernment. Compare horse-hair wigs.

KLAUS German masculine name meaning people's victory. Same as Nicholas (Nicolaus). Source of Santa Claus.

Peter Klaus. German legendary figure; prototype of Rip Van Winkle. Klaus, a goat-herd, follows a young man into a dell, where twelve silent men play skittles. Seeing a keg of wine, he drinks some, and is overpowered with sleep. When he awakes and returns to his village, he is startled to discover twenty-years have passed.

KLEHANOAI Navaho moon-carrier; husband of Yolka Est-san. His abode is in the east. Also called Bekotshidi.

KLEO In Greek mythology a woman who remained pregnant for five years until she came as a suppliant to Asclepius, the god of medicine. She lay down in his sacred chamber and slept. As soon as she left the sanctuary she gave birth to a son. When the baby was born he washed himself in the fountain and crept around his mother. Earth-mother of the sun. Compare Jingu.

KLEPHT Brigand, resistance worker, robber. Alluding to the Greek (Epirote) nationalists who, from the 16th century until independence was won, fought Turkish rule. They went into the mountains and lived as bandits, plundering the valleys. Their pyrrhic dance has become one of the open rounds danced in Europe. Those who were employed to guard the valleys against their attacks were called armatoles. Their name is from kleptes (thief) and klepto (steal).

KLIEG LIGHT Bright arc light used in the filming of motion pictures. Klieg eyes are eyes inflamed and tearing from excessive exposure to intense light.

KLIENG Warrior and trans-former hero of the Borneo Dyaks. He was born from a knot in a tree, and his greatest exploit was the war he waged against the sky.

KLINGSOR (KLINGSHOR), NICOLAUS A 13th century minnesinger credited with the powers of magic. Wagner introduces him in Parsifal, where in revenge for being excluded from the knight-hood of the Grail, he attempts to corrupt the knights by his art. After failing with Parsifal, he and his enchanted castle are destroyed.

KLINGSOR VON UNGERLAND Said to have lived in the 13th century and to have been the author of the Nibelungenlied. Like Homer believed to have been a legendary figure.

KLOKETEN Ona (South American) Indian initiation rite. Young boys are gathered in a hut where, for several months, they are exposed to many ordeals. At night, men, masked and painted, impersonate demons to frighten the youths and women. The secrets of the tribe are eventually revealed to the boys but are withheld from the women, who are kept in subjection. Compare kina.

KLONDIKE Gold fields, wealth; alluding to the mines in the Yukon Territory of Canada.

KLU-DBAN (LU-VANG) One of the five Tibetan Buddhist great kings. King of speech. Color, red; emblems, ankusa (elephant goad) and gada (mace); vahana, blue crocodile or blue mule. Also called gSun-gi-rgyal-po. See Mahapancharaja.

KLYTAIMNESTRA Same as Clytemnestra, which see.

K'MUKAMTCH Klamath Indian Old Man; creator who is tricky rather than edifying in character.

KNANINJA Mystic name of Australian totem ancestors living as spirits in the sky.

KNAVE Originally signified boy, subsequently servant, and finally applied to a rogue or trickster, one deceitful, dishonest, fraudulent. A card in the tarot deck, also called jack and page. See page. The word knave is cognate with Kneph.

KNECHT CLOBES German for Santa Claus. Knecht signifies knight, and Clobes, identical with Globes, yields Great-orb-of-God. Knecht Clobes equates with Oberon, fairy king.

Knecht Ruprecht. A hobgoblin who appears to children at Christmas, striking with a switch those who have been naughty and rewarding those who have been good with nuts he carries in a bag.

KNEES Anatomical denomination governed by Capricornus. Among primitive peoples, knees drawn up signifies circumcision or a boy about to pass through the initiation rite which will make him a full-fledged member of a tribe.

Kneeling. Conscience, humility, prayer, submission.

KNEIPE A social assemblage of German university students characterized by drinking bouts.

KNEPH (CNUPHIS, KNEPHIS, KNEPTH) Literally, breath, spirit, wind. Egyptian deity of primeval darkness. Probably an atmospheric deity. Kneph is cognate with knave and probably is the source of nave and navel. He is usually represented with the body of a man and the head of a ram. The colors black and blue are associated with him. In some portrayals he is blue with a girdle around his loins, a scepter in his hand, and a plume of feathers on his head. Also known as Khnemu, which see.

Knephaios. Darkness, inscrutability.

KNIFE Death, martyrdom, sacrifice, threat. Figuratively to strike a blow that will end in another's defeat or ruin; to ruin another by secret underhand methods, thus to knife in the back. Dream significance: danger, peril. Buddhist tantric symbol called churi. In China called tso tao; used in worship. In Christian tradition typifies flaying. Emblem of saints Bartholomew, Ebba, James the Great, and William of Norwich. In Eastern mythologies typifies a flame or fire. In Hebrew tradition an attribute of Abraham.

Knife accompanied by an ear. Saint Peter.

Knife, flint or stone. American Indians used in sacrifices made to prolong the lives of the gods. Symbol of birth and fecundity. In Aztec mythology, 1,600 earth gods sprang from the knife of Citlalinicue. Compare Cadmus.

Knife-pierced pot or wine-bag. Mexican Indian blood or life-giver.

KNIGHT (1) Chivalry. One of gentle birth bred to the profession of arms, especially in single combat in defense of a cause, ideal, or woman. Probably derived from the Roman Salii. In medieval legend one who questions the fisher king on the meaning of the Grail and the Lance. In some tales the mere questioning restores fertility to the king and to the land; in others, the knight must go through various ordeals. Probably a Christianized version of a soldier of light or a protector of fertility deities; also of the youth in primitive puberty rituals who passes through a series of ordeals. See Initiation rites. Like knave, the original meaning of the word was boy, then servant. (2) Card in the tarot deck; typifies a bachelor. Symbol of focus of energies, of the personal sense in selfhood which constitutes the ego. The knight of clubs is the idea of personal energies; of hearts, the pattern of personal energies; of spades, the processes requisite for the manifestation of personal energies; of diamonds, the actualized manifestation of personal energies.

Carpet knight. A civilian knight; one who earned his honors at court, kneeling upon a carpet before his sovereign, rather than on the battlefield.

Knight errant. In medieval times a wandering knight in search of adventure.

Knight of La Mancha. Don Quixote. Also called Knight of the Lions and Knight of the Rueful Countenance.

Knight of Saint Crispin. A shoemaker.

Knight of the Ku Klux Klan. Member of a lawless, violent secret society organized in the United States. Its emblem is a burning cross, which constitutes a threat of death or violence.

Knight of the post. An offender who has experienced the pillory or whipping post. One prepared to bear false witness for a consideration; a sharper.

Knight of the Swan. A figure which appears in Germanic folklore. A swan, which turns into a knight and jumps ashore from a skiff. The knight marries, has children, and then, usually after seven years, disappears. The origin is explained in the story of a queen who bore seven children, each with a silver chain around its neck at birth. Through the enmity of the king's mother, the children are set adrift in a skiff and saved by a hermit. The grandmother pursues and attempts to slay them, but succeeds only in getting the necklaces of six, one, Helyas, being absent. With the necklaces gone, the children turn into swans, and Helyas guards them. Later five recover their necklaces and return to human form, but one remains a swan as his necklace had been melted to make a goblet. Typify clouds or mist. See Lohingren, Swan Maiden.

Knights of Labor. A secret society formed in the late 19th century in the United States for the protection of laboring men. Forerunner of American Federation of Labor.

Knights of the Golden Circle. A secret organization formed in the United States before the Civil War to overthrow the government.

Knights of the Rosy Cross. Rosicrucians.

Knights of the Round Table. Stars. The members of King Arthur's court who seek the Holy Grail. Their numbers vary; sometimes represented as twelve to typify the signs of the zodiac. The table is round to typify the sun. In an erroneous interpretation the table is said to be round in token of perfect equality, where no one seated has preference of place.

Knight who has never sinned. Spring sun which has not yet scorched earth.

KNOCK ON THE DOOR Death.

KNOT Agreement, endlessness, immortality, marriage; also difficulty, entanglement, worry. Emblem of love; to tie the knot is to get married. Likewise a charm with which an enchanter might render a bridegroom impotent, causing grooms to fear wearing anything requiring a knot. By primitive peoples used as a talisman to protect a tribe from evil spirits. A symbol of seafarers. Dream significance: difficulties, embarrassment. One of the eight glorious Buddhist emblems or auspicious signs on the sole of Buddha's foot. Mystic diagram, symbol of endless cycle of rebirths. In China, called p'an-ch'ang; also known as sacred intestines. Symbol of destiny, talisman for good luck and longevity. Marriage emblem or lover's knot. However, knots must not be used at childbirth or at death to hinder the coming or going of the soul. In Hebrew tradition symbol of the tribe of Judah. Hindu emblem of Vishnu. Tibetan talisman for longevity and for averting the evil eye; protector of the blind.

Cut the knot. Overcome an obstacle by a bold stroke and in an unexpected manner. The allusion is to the way Alexander the Great severed the Gordian knot. See Gordius.

Gordian knot. Conundrum, perplexity. The inextricable. See Gordius.

Knotty club. Difficulties, pilgrimage, weariness.

Lover's knot. A double knot of ribbon with two bows and two ends; symbolic of fidelity and love.

Solomon's knot. Labyrinthine design of swastikas typifying inscrutability.

KNOWLEDGE Symbolized by the head of Apollo, Athena or Minerva, a lighted lamp, open book, orange-yellow color, salmon. By gnostics typified by a fish. In an Italian icon personified by a woman holding a flambeau in one hand while she points to an open book with the other. In Japanese mythology symbolized by the mirror of Amaterasu, the sun goddess.

KNOX Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from the hill or knob.

KNUCKLE BONE In Greek antiquity a fertility charm.

KOBE-NO-KAMI Shinto god of the saucepan. Also called Okitsuhime.

KOBETSU In Japanese tradition imperial clans, families claiming descent from the sun-goddess Amaterasu. Divine clans, or families claiming descent from terrestrial or celestial deities other than the sun-goddess, are called Shinbetsu. Foreign clans, families represented by the mass of people, are called Bambetsu.

KOBO DAISHI Japanese Buddhist priest. He rewarded those who gave him hospitality by striking the ground with his pilgrim's staff and causing a fountain of water to spring up. The same power ascribed to Yoshi-iyé.

KOBOLD German folklore earth spirit. Mischievous, it haunts houses and frequently renders valuable service to occupants. Also a spirit of caves and mines. It resembles the brownie and gnome, but is distinct from the salamander (fire-sprite), sylph (air-sprite), and undine (water sprite). Compare Klaboterman.

K'O-CHU In Chinese Buddhism habitable mountain, sacred region ruled over by Fa-na-p'o-ssu, one of the eighteen Lohan.

KO-DAMA Japanese echo god. Soul of trees which give back echoes.

KODOJEZA Esthonian god, ruler of the home. A corner of the garden was kept sacred to him, and a woman was permitted to enter it only once during her life, which was immediately after her wedding ceremony.

KOEN Australian evil spirit. His wife, Mailkun or Tippakaleum, kidnaps adults in a net and spears children.

KOGI An aboriginal tribe of Columbian Indians. The boys are taught by priests that women are evil, but necessary because they supply food. They are initiated into sex life by a sixty-year old woman, and then sent out to seek wives. A man and a wife occupy separate conical houses and only by threatening not to work the fields and cook his food is she able to lure him into the fields at night to lie down with her. The men prefer to gather nightly in a big ceremonial house where they chew coca leaves that dispel sexual hunger.

KOHATH Literally, assembly. In Old Testament father of the Kohathites, who carried the furniture belonging to the tabernacle during wanderings in the wilderness.

KOHELETH Literally, preacher. Hebrew name applied to the Book of Ecclesiastes, and the name of Solomon in the book.

KOHIN Australian deity who dwells in the Milky Way (Kuling). Sender of lightning and thunder.

KOH-I-NOOR (KOH-I-NUR) Literally, mountain of light. The most famous diamond in the world. It supposedly was discovered 2,000 years ago, but its known history starts in 1304, when it was taken by force from the Rajah of Malwa by the Sultan Al-eddin. It passed from one ruler to another in the East, until Aurungzebe, a 17th century

Mogul emperor, used it for the eye of a peacock in his famous peacock throne at Delhi. It was given the name Koh-i-noor by the Persian Nadir Shah in 1739.

Runjit Singh, of the Punjab, received it as the fee for assisting Shah Sujah of Afghanistan in his fight to recover his throne. When the Punjab was annexed to the British Crown in 1849, it was placed by Queen Victoria among the British Crown Jewels, and she stipulated it was to descend to those who became royal consorts of English kings. At one time it was valued at one-half the daily expense of the world, thus anything of great value. It carries a tradition that disaster will come to the person who owns it. Compare diamond.

KOJIN (KOJIN-SAMA) In Japanese mythology originally a double deity, Prince-of-Inside and Princess-of-Inside. Deity of the kitchen or cooking range, his duty was to see that the kitchen was always full and food well cooked. He had three faces and four arms and was a terror to evil-doers. Old or worn dolls were dedicated to him; the enoki tree was sacred to him. See Androgynous deities, Kamado Harai.

KOKKO The entire group of Zuni anthropomorphic gods, headed by Koloowisi (Palulukon).

KOKUZO Literally, sky-womb. Japanese Buddhist deity. Union of compassion and wisdom, virtues as comprehensive and indestructible as the sky.

KOKYANWUQTI Pueblo Indian spider-woman. Sometimes called Mana (maid).

KOL (1) A primitive race retaining savage customs and religions inhabiting parts of Bengal.

(2) In Icelandic mythology father of Bjorn the Blue-toothed and Harek Ironhand. First owner of the marvelous sword Angervadil. A frost or storm giant.

KOLBOK In Tibetan Buddhism cushion symbolizing comfort and wealth.

KOLEDA Russian name for Christmas festival. Its ceremonies reveal traces of the worship of penates who were believed to exercise a profound influence on the household. A badnjak, log dressed in a new shirt or adorned with ribbons and flowers, is invited to join the diners as a symbol of the genius of the house or penate. The kutiya, the special dish served at the festival, is also served at funeral feasts and on All Soul's Day.

KOLNIDRE Opening words of a prayer recited by Jews on the eve of the Atonement fast.

KOLOOWISI Zuni plumed serpent with both celestial (rain) and subterranean (earth) powers. Supreme deity, god of lightning and fertility. Chief of the Kokko. Called Palulukon by the Hopi.

KO LUNG Chinese emperor deified as god of the soil and called T'u-ti Shen.

KOMBU In Japan sea-weed joy; sacred rope which brings happiness and joy.

KOMOKOA In legends of the Indians of western United States the Rich-One, protector of seals. He lives at the bottom of the sea, and the drowned go to him. Those who have penetrated his abode and return, pass on his crest to their descendants.

KOMOKU-TEN In Japanese Buddhism one of the four guardian kings; the wide-gazing guardian of the West. Identified with the Sanscrit Virupaksa.

KOMPIRA Japanese kami (god) of ships and voyages. Demon converted to Buddhism, he became a god of happiness and a patron of sailors. Identified with the Sanscrit Kubera.

KOMPOLOGY From the Greek meaning boastful speech or tale.

KONISTRA In Greek antiquity dancing place or orchestra of a Greek theatre; located below the auditorium and surrounded by it. So called from its floor of beaten earth and ashes.

KONKARA (KINKARA) In Japanese Buddhism boyish manifestation of Fudo representing sustaining virtue.

KONO-HANA-SAKUYA-HIME In Japanese mythology, Lady-Who-Makes-Trees-Bloom. Fairy of cherry and plum blossoms. Wife of Ninigi, her descendants were as short lived as cherry blossoms. Sister of Iha-naga-hime, Rock-long-Princess. Also called Sakuya-hime and Sengen Sama.

KONOSHIRO In Japan a small fish similar to the sardine. When a person is ill a funeral is held for the konoshiro. The fish is dressed in a white costume and placed in a coffin. A funeral feast is held by the friends of the patient, the fish is buried and thus dies in place of the one whose death is not desired.

KOOMKIE In India a female elephant trained to decoy wild male elephants.

KOORI Among Siberian Golde tribes a mystic bird which protects a shaman when he travels to the other world. Compare Bucu, kbubilgan.

KOOTAMOINEN (KUN) Finnish moon god.

KOPH Nineteenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet. Equivalent to English k or q. Also qoph, which see.

KOPI A peasant or poor man of Uganda. The children of the Mtesa are called balangira (princes); below them are only the kopi.

KOPPA Letter of original Greek alphabet absorbed by kappa, but retaining its numerical value of ninety, which has not been given to any subsequently added letter. It corresponds to Hebrew qoph (koph) and English q; akin to the word copper (policeman).

KORADJI Medicine man, shaman, sorcerer of Australian aborigines.

KORAH Literally, baldness. In Old Testament a Levite, son of Izhar. Jealous of the authority and priestly dignity conferred by God upon his cousins Moses and Aaron, he conspired with Abiram and Dathan to overthrow them. The revolt was unsuccessful; his followers were destroyed by fire; Abiram, Dathan, and Korah were swallowed up by a miraculous opening of the earth. Korah typifies one who is ruined by his ambition and pride. He appears to have been a sun hero. Compare Amphiarius. His sons, said to be eleven in number, escaped his fate, and his descendants became celebrated as poets and singers in the time of David;

to them are inscribed several Psalms.

KORAN Literally, reading. Mohammedan sacred book professing to be the revelations of Allah (God) to Mohammed. Its subject matter is of Hebrew and to a lesser extent of Christian origin. Fanatical devotion to the words of the Koran is called Koranolatry. The book is also known as Alcoran.

KORE (CORA) Literally, daughter or maid. Name under which Persephone was honored in Eleusinian mysteries.

KORE-TE-WHIWHIA Polynesian primeval deity, the void. Name signifies did-not-possess. Offspring of Ao-tu-roa, begetter of Kore-te-rawea. Compare Te Kore-whiwhia.

Kore-te-rawea. A primeval deity; name signifies not-pleased-with. Offspring of Kore-to-whiwhia. Compare Te Kore-rawea.

Kore-te-tamaua. A primeval deity. Name signifies without-parent. Offspring of Kore-te-rawea; begetter of Maku. Compare Te-Kore-tamaua.

KORI An individual belonging to a low Hindu caste.

KORIAK A member of a race residing in northeast Siberia. The men are noted for the high regard they have for women and children.

KORKA-MURT (KORKA-KUZO) Finno-Ugric house man; god living under the floor. When he shows himself he is forewarning death or misfortune, and he resembles the master of the house. Generally he is a useful spirit protecting the members of the household, but when annoyed, he causes nightmares. Little children are never left alone in a house as, like the Muntsomurt, he has the power to substitute changlings for rightful infants. He is appeased by sacrifice, usually a black sheep. Identical with Domovoy.

KORMET In Norse mythology one of the rivers through which the dead pass in Helheim and through which Thor wades when he goes to the Lower Thingstead. Compare Kerlaug.

KORMOS Altaic evil spirit which accompanies a man through life. As Jajutsi writes down a man's good deeds, Kormos writes his evil deeds.

KOROTANGI A greenstone pigeon which the Maoris have carried about with them for unknown centuries on their wanderings. It used to be set up on a hill shrine and invoked as an oracle. The name yields Great-fire-hot-Sun, Ever-Existent.

KORRIGANS In Breton folklore nine fairies. They change shape and move as quickly as thought. Although their breath is deadly, they cure disease and heal wounds. They are spirits of the wind and portrayed as never more than two feet high, with long hair, which they are fond of combing. They wear only a white veil; their favorite haunt is beside a fountain, where they can be heard singing. At the sound of a bell or benediction they flee.

KORYBANTES (CORYBANTES) Phrygian male maenads attached to Cybele, the great earth-mother. Their dance was a wild orgiastic whirl, resembling that of modern dervishes, accompanied by an unrhymic clash of weapons intended to drown out the cries of sacrificial victims. During the dance self-mutilation was practised as a rite to advance vegetation and to free those participating from eternal death by mystic union with the immortal earth-mother. Parallels the Kouretes.

KOSHCHEI Slavic evil spirit who devours beautiful women. Immortal, except for a secret weakness, he is killed when a hero throws a magic death-egg at him. He resembles Koshi, the Midgard snake, and the Minotaur. James Branch Cabell borrowed him, and in Jurgen, he gives the hero a year of youth because Jurgen speaks well of the Devil.

KOSHER A Hebrew word signifying that which is permitted or that which fulfills the requirements of the law; that which is clean, purified, as food. Also used to designate a market where kosher food is sold. Opposed to tref (trefa).

KOSHI Japanese eight-forked serpent (the tides) which devoured people. Slain by Susa-no-wo. Also called Uwabami and Yawata-no-orochi. Compare Koshchei, Minotaur.

KOSHIN (KOSHIN-SAMA) In Japanese mythology god of roads, protector of highways, star which guides travelers. Also name by which the three monkeys, See-No-Evil (Mizaru), Hear-No-Evil (Kikazaru), Speak-No-Evil (Iwazaru), are known.

KOSLA-KUGUZA AND KOSLA-KUVA Old Man and Old Woman of the forest of whom Finno-Ugrics ask protection when they send cattle into the forest in the spring. They also are appealed to when a person is lost in a forest or is spending a night in one.

KOSTEY Slavic ogre who desired the Princess Sudolisa and cast a spell over her attendants, sending them to sleep. He was defeated by Junak, who rescued the princess from the palace in which she had locked herself. Demon of darkness or winter.

KOTAN-SHORAI (KYOTAN) Literally, inhospitality. In Japanese legend Kotan-Shorai, a wealthy man, seeing Susa-no-wo in rags and not recognizing him to be a god, refused to give him lodging during a storm. Because of this inhospitality, Susa-no-wo (Buto) cut Kotan in five pieces, which he offered as a sacrifice. Shorai means future. See Somin-Shorai.

KOTHLUWALAWA Mountain home of the Kokko, Zuni ancestral gods. Also the place where the dance-house of the gods is located. See Kotikili.

KOTIKILI Zuni society of men and women who may impersonate in masks the Kokko or entire group of anthropic gods. Only those who are members are admitted into Kothluwalawa (dance house of the gods) after death.

KOTOBUKI Japanese lute, symbolic of happiness and long life.

KOTOW (KO TAO) Chinese custom of kneeling and touching the ground with the forehead before a superior or as a token of worship, thus obsequiousness.

KOTYS Great mother goddess also known as Cotytto, which see.

KOUANTUN Chinese sacred mountain, navel of the earth.

KOUPAI Evil spirit of Peruvian Indians.

KOURETES (CURETES) In Greek mythology semi-divine youths associated with the goddess Rhea. To protect her infant son Zeus from destruction by his father Cronus, they danced their famous Sword Dance around the child, drowning out his cries by the clash of their weapons. The dance was an initiation dance designed to promote fertility rather than a warlike exercise. It resembled the sacrificial dance of the Korybantes, but was more restrained. Compare Maruts.

KOURTOROPHOS A name of Hera as goddess of suckling children.

KOWWITUMA AND WATSUSI In Zuni legend twin gods of war, the Sun and Foam.

KOYOROWEN Australian cannibalistic (storm) male monster. He dwells in mountain tops and can turn his feet in any direction so that his tracks cannot be traced. His cannibal wife Kurriwilban has an upright horn on each shoulder for piercing victims, but she does not kill women; that is done by Koyorowen. Also called Yaho.

KRA (KLA) Among Gold Coast tribes one of a class of vital spirits.

KRAKE In Volsung Saga nickname meaning crow and given to Aslog by her foster parents, who treated her as a menial.

KRAKEN (KRAAKEN) Fabulous sea monster in the Norwegian seas. Said to be a mile and a half in circumference and to cause a whirlpool when it dives. The word kraken is identical with dragon.

KRAKUCCHANDA In Buddhism first Manusibuddha. Both hands are in dhyana mudra; his asana is dhyana. In Tibet called Khor-ba-hjigs or Kor-wa-ji.

KRAUT A German. From sauerkraut, a German dish.

KREES In the East a sword which in ceremonial dances is waved like a flame. It typifies the rays of the sun. See sword.

KREMLIN Citadel of a Russian town; when a proper name, the citadel of Moscow, which formerly contained the palace of the Czar.

KRIEMHILD (KRIMHILT) In the Nibelungenlied daughter of the king of Burgundy and Queen Uta. Sister of Gunther, later king of Burgundy, and of Germot and Diselher. She marries Siegfried. Commissioned by Gunther, Hagen murders Siegfried and robs Kriemhild of a large part of the Nibelung's treasure, which she had inherited from her murdered husband. Gunther and Hagen bury the treasure in the Rhine. Kriemhild marries Etzel and by him has a son Ortlieb. She prevails upon Etzel to entertain her brothers and their knights. At the festival, with the portion of the fortune she has retained, she bribes Etzel's brother Bloedel to slay their guests. In the foray which follows, Hagen kills Ortlieb; Kriemhild kills Hagen; Kriemhild is slain by a knight. Thus Siegfried, the sun, who had obtained the treasure (fertility) from underworld spirits, is slain by Hagen (darkness or mist), one of the knights of Gunther (winter), who robs Kriemhild (gloaming or harvest) and, with Gunther returns the treasure to the underground. Kriemhild, married to Etzel (autumn) urges Bloedel (the blooming) to destroy the dark forces. In the Volsung Saga Kriemhild is known as Gudrun and, in Wagner's Nibelungenlied as Gutrune.

KRISA In Greek mythology shore to which Apollo guided Cretan mariners to safety and where they established a shrine which became the chief seat of Apollo worship. Krisa is akin to Christ, cross, krasa (Russian for beauty), and Krishna.

KRISHNA (KISTNA, KRISTNA, KRSNA) Literally, black. Hindu deity usually regarded as the eighth avatar of Vishnu. His physical character suggests fire, heaven, lightning, storm, sun. He was joyous and voluptuous; in epics, a hero invincible in love and war; although brave, also crafty.

King Kamsa of Mathura warned that the eighth child born to his virgin cousin Devaki and her husband Vasudeva would bring about his death had each of her first six children killed at birth. The seventh Balarama was saved by the goddess Bhavani, who removed him from Devaki's womb to that of Rohini, another wife of Vasudeva. Krishna was saved by Vasudeva, who carried the infant across the Jumna River, normally deep and dangerous, but which receded to his knees as he carried the child. He deposited the infant as well as Balarama in the land of cows (clouds) with the cowherd Nanda and his wife Yasoda and took in exchange their infant daughter. The tiny girl was slain by Kamsa, who, when he discovered he had been deceived, issued an order to destroy all male children. In contrast to the order given by Pharaoh, the order was ineffectual.

At an early age Krishna and Balarama displayed marvelous strength. They sported with the gopis (herdmaids), and the Rasa or Hallisa dances performed in honor of Krishna down to the present day celebrate their gambols. When they grew to manhood they put Kamsa to death and placed a new king on the throne. Krishna then established his capital at Dvaraka (City-of-gates), organized his own people, the Yadavas, and set out to destroy evil demons and impious kings. At the request of Indra, he visited Naraka Loka, the underworld to get the earrings (light) of Aditi, which had been stolen. By Rukmini he became the father of Pradyumna (love) and grandfather of Aniruddha (egotism). Satyabhama, one of his 16,100 wives (stars), requested him to bring back the Parijata tree. To obtain this, he had to battle Indra. After a fierce struggle Indra permitted him to have the tree. However, catastrophe overtook his people; his brother was slain, the Yadavas killed one another to the last man. Krishna outlived them all and finally perished when he was wounded in the heel by the stray arrow of a hunter.

Krishna was four-armed at birth, suggesting the four directions or winds. The color assigned to him usually was blue; his name means black, suggesting wisdom and eternity; the white of Balarama signifying time. In one legend relating to his birth, Kamsa, the demon-king, having ravaged the land, Brahma prayed to Vishnu to send relief; whereupon Vishnu plucked off two hairs, one white, Balarama, the other black, Krishna, and placed them in the womb of the virgin. In another interpretation, Balarama was torn from his mother in the form of a white hair, Krishna in in the form of a black hair. This legend is explained by the fact that in early phases of the waxing moon (Devaki being a moon goddess), a thin arc of light, which may be likened to a white hair, appears to the right, and when the moon begins to wane, a thin rim of shadow appears, which may be likened to a single black hair. Krishna's struggle with Kamsa symbolizes the defeat of the old and the victory of the new spirit of vegetation. Like Vishnu, Krishna took three steps, i.e. his going down, his period of darkness, his rising again, and his name incorporates the syllable ish, meaning light.

In characteristic pose, Krishna stands playing his flute known as Call-of-the-Infinite, which bid the gopis (fertile rain clouds) follow him; a possible source of the Pied Piper of Hamelin legend. Frequently compared with Adonis, Balder, Christ, Heimdal, Hercules, Osiris. See Heel, Kalinak, Putana.

KRISKY Russian hag who torments children by night.

KRISS KRINGLE Santa Claus, Saint Nicholas; the good genius of Christmas. A corruption by the Pennsylvania Dutch of the High German Christkindlein, i.e. Christ child.

KRITA YUGA (KRTA) In Hinduism the perfect age, the first of the four ages of man. Period in which only one religion existed; all men were so saintly they were not required to perform religious ceremonies, work was not necessary, anything man needed was obtained by power of will, and they lived to be four hundred years of age. The universal soul was white. The names of the other ages are: Dwapara, Kali, Treta. See Yuga.

KRIYA SAKTI In Hinduism manifestation of space and time.

KRONOS Unending time; father who devours his children. See Cronus. Name from the same root as Karnu.

KRSANU In Hindu mythology archer who shot the eagle Gayatri, which carried the soma to earth.

KRSNIK (KARSNİK, KRESNIK) Slavic good genius who protects a family from the vlkodlak (vampire or werewolf).

KRUPSIS In Christology the doctrine that Christ, in his state of humiliation, continued to possess in a concealed manner the divine attributes of omnipotence.

KSETRASYA Hindu lord of the field.

KSHATRIYA (SHATRIYA) In Hinduism the warrior caste; one of the original four castes, the others being Brahman, Sudra, Vaisya.

KSHITI GARBHA Hindu patron of travelers and protector of children. Parallels the Japanese Jizo. Kshi (akishi) is a Sanscrit root meaning to rule.

KSITIGARBHA Buddhist Dhyani-bodhisattva; earth womb. Emblems: cintamani, khakkhara. In Tibet called Sahi snin-po or Sai nying-po.

KU One of the three great creator gods of Hawaiian mythology. With the other two, Lono and Tane, he formed man of red clay and spittle, shaping him in the image of Tane and breathing into the form to give it life. Compare Taaroa.

KUALA (KUDO) Among Finno-Ugrics, sanctuary of family gods; a prayer house, a temple, hut in which blood offerings are made to the spirits of dead ancestors. In the kuala are kept the implements of the chase.

KUAN-DE Indo-Chinese Buddhist supreme architect of the universe; a dragon god.

KUANG CH'ENG-TZU In Taoism he controls evil spirits and gives victory in war. His abode is Yu Hsu Kung (capital of silence) on the K'ung-t'ung Mountain.

KUANG-HSIEH Chinese Buddhist sacred mountain; region ruled over by Yin-Chieh-t'o, one of the eighteen Lohan.

KUAN-TI (KUAN YU) Chinese historical general of third century, A.D., who was deified as the god of war or god to prevent war, and credited with acting as a medium and oracle, breaking evil spells, and slaying demons. Also worshiped as patron saint of professions and trades. His festival is May 13. Portrayed as a bearded man in armour carrying a sword. His avatar is awaited as the restorer of Chinese supremacy.

KUBAIKO Tatar heroine. When the head of her brother Komdei-Mirgan had been cut off by the monster Yebege, Kubaiko visited the realm of Erlik-Khan to plead for it. She fulfilled tasks set by Erlik-Khan and was given the head together with the water of life and then permitted to return to earth. On the voyage through the underworld, she saw strange things; one being that of an old woman pouring milk from one vessel to another without ceasing, a punishment for having mixed water with the milk she served on earth. Her story bears resemblance to those of Heracles, Orpheus, and Sisyphus.

KUBERA (Kuvera) A Brahman greedy for grain, he deserted his wife. She formed a connection with a Sudra, and to them was born a son named Duhsaha. He grew up to be a wicked youth and broke into the temple of Siva to plunder it. The wick of his lamp failed before he obtained a flame. He lit ten lamps, thus unconsciously honoring the god. A sleeper in the temple awoke and killed him. Because he had honored Siva, he was reborn an evil king named Sudurmukha. However he maintained lamps in Siva's temple and, when he finally was slain by foes, the judge of the dead decreed his piety wiped out his evil deeds, and he was reborn as Kubera, demon of darkness and king of gnomes who hid jewels and metals in the earth. He also was the great Golden King of Noijin (mountain deities), a fertility god. Eventually he became lord of the Yaksas in the North (realm of darkness), a deity of wealth. Probably a counterpart of the Greek Cabiri and an analogue of Pluto. In Buddhism he was adopted as the sole mild Dharmapala; also a Lokapala. Guardian of the law as well as god of wealth. His color is yellow, his emblems are: caitya (reliquary), dhvaja (banner), kalasa (vase), kolbok (cushion), nakula (mongoose), roaring lion, and vomiting cintamani (pearl); his vahana (steed) is a dragon or white horse. In Tibeta called Nam-tho-se-serchen or rNam-t'os-sras-gsir-ch'en.

KUBLAI KHAN Grand Khan of the Mongols, grandson of Genghis Khan. He conquered China and founded the Yuen dynasty. A ruthless warrior who was humane toward those he conquered once peace was established.

KUDA Jewish demon of disease which attacks women in childbirth.

KUDAI Siberian name meaning god, applied to the seven sons who assist Over-god or god of heaven. They reside in a tent in the third storey of heaven called Suro. Before the tent is a golden tethering post (North Pole). Fate deities and watchmen of heaven, their duty is to control human life and the heavenly laws of nature. Also tutelary genii of horses. Probably refer to the five planets and the sun and moon. Their names vary according to the tribe. Parallel the Amesha Spentas, Pairekse, Puleh, Satta-Kuro-Dzusagai-Ai.

KUDAI-BAKSHY Yakut tutelary genius of blacksmiths. He dwells in the underworld, which becomes the afterworld abode of blacksmiths.

KUDAI-JAJUTSHI Altaic god of the fifth storey; a star god.

KUDARI RYU Japanese descending dragon. Compare Nobori Ryu.

KUD-AVA (JURT-AVA, KUD-AZERAVA) Finno-Ugric house mother or spirit.

KUDO-NO-KAMI Shinto god of the caldron. Also called Okitsuhiko.

KUDU A totem animal of the Barolong, a Bantu tribe.

KUEI (KWEI) (1) Chinese for tortoise. Emblematic of earth, the four quarters of the universe, longevity, sagacity, self-protection, and time. Used in divination. See Kuei Shen. (2) In the Chinese zodiac: (A) the Imp, four stars, Delta, Eta, Gamma, Theta, in Cancer, in southern quadrant, summer season. Represented by the sheep; element, metal. Unlucky period in which to build; appropriate time for burying the dead. (B) Astride, 16 stars, said to be like a person astride, in Andromeda and Pisces, in western quadrant, autumn season. Represented by the wolf; element, wood. An evil day for weddings.

KUEI LUNG Chinese mythical animal with one leg, which lives in the east. It shines like the sun and moon and has a voice like thunder. When it enters the water it causes storm and rain. Identified with the alligator.

KUEI SHEN In Chinese mythology the Black Tortoise or Somber Warrior, guardian of the North. As one of the Ssu Fang, the four benevolent creatures guarding the four cardinal points, third in rank. Presided over the destiny of the Chinese empire, consulted in divination.

KUEI-SING In Chinese mythology assistant to Wen Ch'ang, god of literature. Distributor of literary grades; god of the four stars of the chariot of Great Bear.

KUEN-LUEN (KUN-LUN) Chinese sacred mountain on whose slopes grew the peach trees of life of the terrestrial paradise presided over by Si Wang Mu.

KUEPH Khnemu, which see.

K'UE YU-CHEN T'IEN-TSUN
In the Chinese San Ch'ing (trinity), the heavenly ruler to come. Name signifies dawn of jade of the golden gate. Compares with the Hebrew Messiah.

KUGE In Japan descendants of emperors and gods. Nobles, many of whom live in proud poverty, devoted to literature and the arts.

KUHU Hindu abstract goddess who, with Sinivali, presided over the new moon.

KUI In Maori mythology a blind ogress; a female cannibal. Probably an aspect of hurricanes or storms, or Kui may refer to ancient wars.

KUILA-MOKU Hawaiian deity of medicine. Prayers are offered to him by the kahunas (medicine men).

KUINYO Australian evil spirit; personification of death recognized by his unpleasant odor.

KUI-GYAL-PO (sKUI-RGYAL-PO) One of the Pancamaharaja or five great astrologers of Tibetan Buddhism. King of the body, who rides a white lion.

KU KLUX KLAN A secret society formed in southern United States after the Civil War as a move against carpet-baggers from the North. It also aimed at the suppression of the newly acquired powers of Negroes. It was suppressed in 1871, but was revived in 1915 as a lawless violent mob that expels, murders, warns, whips, and engages in other acts of terrorism against those it regards as enemies, maintaining that pure Americanism and white supremacy are its ideals. Its symbol of warning is a burning cross. The name is derived from the Greek cyclos (circle) and corrupted to achieve an alliterative effect and the monogram K. K. K.

KUKNOS (KYKNOS) Same as Cyncus, which see.

KUKULCAN (COCOLCAN, GUCUMATZ) Yucatec culture hero who arrived from the West and succeeded Itzamna. He was a celibate rain and vegetation deity, introduced the rites of confession and writing, and was related to the formation of the calendar. Each day he appeared as chief of twenty men (the Mayan or Yucatec month constituted twenty days) each of which brought either good or bad luck, and sometimes Kukulcan brought agues and fevers. His form was that of a feathered-serpent. In one myth he and three brothers arrived from the four directions and ruled justly until one died; the other two became tyrannical and were put to death. Kukulcan alone remained and to atone for the acts of his brothers directed the minds of the people to the arts of peace and founded the city of Mayapan, where a circular temple with four doors was erected in his honor. Under his leadership harvests became abundant and days were peaceful and prosperous. This is a time myth. The brother who died probably represented summer; the tyrants probably were autumn and winter; whereas Kukulcan was the deity of spring which provided fertilizing rains, rebirths, and eventually harvests. His name is said to mean feathered-serpent, god of mighty speech, mighty serpent. As a bird deity appearing in auspicious times, he resembles the phoenix; he also has characteristics in common with Quetzalcoatl and Votan.

KUKUMATZ AND TOCHIPA In

the Yuman legend twin sons of Earth and Sky who raised the heavens from the earth, set the cardinal points, defined land, and created mankind. Also called Hokomata and Tochopa. Kukumatz is identified with the Mexican culture hero Kukulcan.

KUKUNOCHI-NO-KAMI Shinto god of tree trunks, one of the divided spirits of Toyo-uke-bime (goddess of food). Compare Hamori, Kayanu-hime-no-kami.

KUKURI-HIME-NO-KAMI Japanese god of the underworld.

KUL Finno-Ugric evil being living in deep waters. He appears as a man, woman, or as a child. Sometimes identified as living under the earth and connected with the dead. Also called Vasa (water dweller) or Vodyanoy.

KULACHARYA (KAULA) In Japan the Kundini Yoga, a religious rite in which an even number of men and women participate. Although they must not be married, they refer to each other as husband and wife and meet on the night of the full moon to embrace the five principles (Panchattva), i.e. coition, fish, flesh, grain, wine.

KULAK Formerly in Russia a tightfisted person; a hardfisted merchant or village usurer. In Soviet Russia any person who employs hard labor and possesses machinery.

KULAKARAS In Jainism the first law givers of whom the first was Nabhi.

KULHWCH (KILHWCH) Hero of a Welsh tale, Kulhwch and Olwen. The victim of a stepmother's hatred. She had laid a curse upon Kulhwch that he should never have a wife unless he could win Olwen, daughter of Yspaddaden Penkawr (Hawthorn, Chief of Giants). Yspaddaden, who had received a prophecy that he would die when his daughter married, set Kulhwch to many tasks. In these Kulhwch was assisted by his cousin King Arthur and the deities Gwyn, Llwhch, Mabon, Manawydan, Modron, and others, taken over from the Celtic Continental and Irish pantheon, as well as the steed Du and the whelp Drudwyn. He captured the supernatural boar Twrch Trwyth (Porcus Troit) to obtain the comb, razor, and scissors between its ears, which Yspaddaden desired; he killed giants; he sought caldrons of inspiration and wealth; he engaged in other adventures and quests. The poems belong to the Jason-Medusa type and the seeming impossibility of the tasks resemble those of the Argonauts and of Hercules. Twrch Trwyth resembles the Calydonian boar, a drought monster. Kulhwch wins Olwen by overcoming obstacles, not because of any difficulty in obtaining her consent and, like most women of medieval romances, she takes the place of gems and gold in a modern treasure-hunt story. Kulhwch typifies the sun or spring, Olwen vegetation, Yspaddaden is darkness or winter.

KULILU In Babylonian mythology the Fish-man; destructive spirit in the train of Tiamat. Identified with the constellation Aquarius. Compare Kusariqqu.

KUMARA Literally, the youthful. Epithet of the Hindu war-god Karttikeya.

KUMBHANDAS Buddhist and Hindu goblins; giant demons and gnomes. In Buddhism ruled by Virudhaka.

KUME-NO-SENNIN In Japanese mythology a fallen immortal. In succumbing to the allurements of a mortal woman, whom he married, he lost his supernatural power. Parallels Lucifer. See Divine-Mortal marriages.

KUMISS Fermented camel's or mare's milk, from which nomads of northern Asia distil an intoxicating drink.

KUMQUAT (CUMQUOT) In China symbolizes good fortune and immortality.

KUMUSH In Modoc Indian legend the man of the beautiful blue (sky), whose life was the sun's golden disk. He made ten dresses for his daughter: the first for a young girl, the second for puberty rites, the third to the ninth were festal and work garments, the tenth and most beautiful was a burial shroud. When she entered the sweat-house to dance (a puberty custom), she fell asleep and dreamed of death. On awakening, she demanded her shroud. Kumush would not let her go alone and accompanied her to the caverns of the dead. There they danced at night as spirits becoming skeletons by day. Life on earth died with them. After a while Kumush wearied of the way he was living and, with a basket of bones, he set out for the world above. He sowed the bones and mankind sprang up. The return of Kumush typifies the return of fertilizing sun in spring; his daughter personifies the summer. Their story resembles that of Cadmus, Orpheus, and Persephone.

KUN Hindu mother or earth goddess of plenty. Her name compares with Chinese Kwanyin, Ethiopian Kaiwan, European queen, and Hebrew Chiun.

K'UN In Chinese Pa Kua (Eight Diagrams), used for purposes of divination, signifies earth or the terrestrial principle.

KUNDALINI Literally, curled up woman. Hindu serpent power.

KUNDRY In Wagner's Parsifal an enchantress who, at the instigation of Klingstor, tempts Amfortas into the sin that brings on his terrible wound. She is doomed to eternal laughter when she laughs at Christ on the cross. Parsifal frees her from the curse.

KUNG Note of the Chinese pentatonic scale which represents the emperor.

KUNHILD In Germanic legend fertility maid carried off by Laurin to his underground dwelling. Analogue of Persephone.

KUNIGUNDE In German legend a woman who treated her lovers with cruelty and scorn. In one tale she threw her glove to lions to test her lover's devotion.

KUNI-TOKO-TACHI (KUNI-NO-TOKO-TACHI-NO-KAMI) In Japanese mythology the one-who-stands-perpetually-over-the-world. Sky or space. Probably another name for Ame-no-ninaki-nushi. One of the Seven Divine Generations, deities born without parents. The sky represents the yo or male principle.

K'UN-LUN Chinese sacred mountain, realm of immortals and abode of Hsi Wang Mu, western queen. In its pure waters, the source of the Hoang Ho (Yellow River), the phoenix bathes.

KUNOPIS An epithet of Helen. The name is associated with light; a false etymology associates it with dog.

KUNTI In Hinduism wife of Surya and mother of the Pandavas.

KUO SHANG One of the nine legendary Chinese heroes; celebrated as a warrior who died for his country.

KUO TZU-I An 8th century A. D. Chinese warrior deified and worshiped as a god of happiness, longevity and wealth.

KUPAI Peruvian devil.

KURA In Mangaia mythology wife of Eneene. While she was gathering flowers she slipped and fell into the underworld, where she was held captive. Her husband, aided by his guardian deity, discovered her whereabouts and rescued her. A time myth resembling that of Persephone.

KURA-OKAMI Literally, valley-dweller. In Japanese mythology one of the two dragons of rain and snow. Compare Taka-okami.

KURDAITCHA Australian invisible spirits or sorcerers who hover around medicine men and cause the death of the ill.

KURIBU (KARIBU, KARUBU) In Sumerian mythology an aspect of Ea as protecting angel. Title signifying one who is benign or one who intercedes for. A word which appears in Hebrew mythology as kerub (cherub). Identical with the zodiacal Capricorn.

KURMA Literally, tortoise. In Hinduism the second avatar of Vishnu. In the shape of a tortoise he helped the gods and the asuras recover the amrita and other precious things lost during the deluge. He went to the bottom of the Milky Ocean, where his back served as the base and pivot for Mount Mandara. In the Satapatha Brahmana, one of the transformations of Prajapati, creator and progenitor. Compare Kasyapa, Matsya.

KUROZAEMON In Japanese legend retainer of Fukuro, the owl.

KURRIWILBAN Australian cannibal spirit, wife of Koyorowen.

KURU In Hinduism the northern quarter or Dwipa of the world, said to be located between the most northern range of snowy mountains and the polar sea. Also the most northern of the nine Varshas or regions of the world, the season of rain and snow. A prince of the lunar race is called Kuru. He is the ancestor of the Kauravas and the Pandavas who war with each other.

KURUKULLA Tibetan Buddhist goddess of wealth; closely connected with Kubera. With her help great wealth was obtained for the first Dalai Lama. She is the Red Tara, wife of Kama-deva, and probably identical with Rati, Hindu goddess of love. Emblems: asoka (red flower), capa (bow), nakula (mongoose), sara (arrow). Her asana is ardha-paryanka.

KURURUMANY Brazilian creator of all good. When he found man corrupt, he took away everlasting life and placed lizards, serpents, etc., among them.

KUSA Grass used for sprinkling nectar in Buddhist rites. See mayurapichcha.

KUSA KAP Torres Strait fabulous bird which brings a burning stick (fire) to mankind. Resembles the phoenix.

KUSANAGI In Japanese mythology the magic sword which Susano-wo extracted from the tail of Koshi, the eight-forked dragon, and from which Amaterasu created deities; hence a phallus, giver of fertility. Later the sword of Yamato-Takeru, warrior-hero. With it he hacked down the burning bushes in which he was ambushed, whence its name, which means Herb-Queller. Also called Ame-no-Murokumo-no-tsurugi, i.e. sword-of-black-clouded-heavens. Compares with Excalibur.

KUSARIQQU In Babylonian mythology the fish-man, destructive spirit in the train of Tiamat. Identified with the constellation Capricorn. Compare Kulilu.

KUSHALIAH Hebrew masculine name meaning bow of Jah.

KU SHEN Chinese spirits of the valley, who live in an abode of vacuity and silence, the great void out of which came heaven and earth.

KUSHI-NADA-HIME Japanese rice goddess; daughter of the earth-deity Ashi-nadzu-chi. She was rescued by Susano-wo as she was about to be offered to the eight-headed dragon Koshi to whom seven of her sisters had been sacrificed. The dragon demanded one each year. Susano-wo transformed her into a comb which he wore in his hair until he killed the dragon, but putting its heads to sleep with an intoxicating brew. After the killing of the dragon she became the wife of Susano-wo. Name signifies Princess-Comb-Ricefield. Parallels Andromeda.

KUSINARA In Chinese Buddhism place where Buddha, with his face to the south, stood upon a stone and left his footprints to posterity. These imprints contain the Eight Auspicious Signs: canopy, conch-shell, endless knot, holy wheel, lotus, pair of fish, state umbrella, vase with cover.

KUSIUNEK Among the Eskimos, witchcraft. Mystic agency that causes death and sickness.

KUSKI-BANDA In Babylonian mythology aspect of Ea or Oannes as god of goldsmiths.

KUSOTO Finno-Ugric sacrifice grove where, during famine, periods of trouble, or war, the people under the direction of a priest or seer assemble for a great sacrifice feast to nature gods. The festivals, which sometimes last a week or two, are called Mer.

KUSTI Sacred and symbolic girdle of the Parsees. Composed of seventy-two threads to represent the chapters of the Yacna comprised in the Zend-Avesta.

KUTKU Among the Kamchadales, god of heaven. He brought earth down from the sky and placed it on the surface of the ocean. In another tale his wife bore a son moving on the cosmic ocean and out of the child's body, Kutku created earth.

KUTSA Vedic sage to whom Indra gave aid in his constant struggle with Susna, drought demon. Indra stopped the sun and tore off its wheel, which he gave to Kutsa for driving. In some passages, Kutsa is hostile to Indra.

KUWAI Japanese water weed. Amulet against conflagrations; symbolic of power and victory.

KU-YU Majove Indian name meaning shooting star. Culture hero deified. Brother of the goddess Cathena. His shape was that of a shark.

KUYUTA Mohammedan bull supporting the rock on which stands the angel who holds the earth steady. Kuyuta stands on Bahamut, fabulous whale or fish.

KUZIMU Bantu underground abode of the dead, where ghost mass movements cause earthquakes.

KUZU-NO-HA In Japanese legend female fox who fell in love with a human warrior and married him.

KVASER (KVASIR) In Norse mythology a being formed of the saliva of the Aesir (air or heavenly deities) and the Vanir (sea deities), which commemorated the treaty between them. He was slain by Fjalar and Galar, who mingled his blood with honey and composed the mead of the poets in the Odroerer kettle. For this reason, poetry is called Kvaser's blood, and Kvaser was said to be the one who was so wise, he could give the proper answer to any question. Kvaser's blood originally may have been intended to give immortal youth. Compare Bodn and Son.

KVELDRIDA Literally, night-rider. Norse sorcerer or witch.

KWA Same as Pa-Kwa, which see.

KWALJITSU In Japanese mythology a warrior monk.

KWAKIUTL Bargainer for position, trader among Indians of the Pacific northwest. The name is understood to mean beach at the north side of the river or, in native folk etymology, smoke of the world.

KWAMMANG-A African rainbow lord.

KWAN Siamese Buddhist evil spirit. Mystic spirit which hovers over the newly born until date fixed by astrologers, when the child is established as a full human being. While under the mystic presence the child is not safe from spiritual evil. In a benediction ceremony a tuft of the child's hair, which protects the kwan, is sheared off.

KWANNON Japanese Buddhist goddess of mercy. Personification of compassion. Prayer answerer. Name signifies yoni or yonus, mother goddess. Originally a male deity, accounted a manifestation of Avalokitesvara. Identical with Chinese Kwan-yin. See Androgynous deities. As Bato-Kwannon, horse-headed Kwannon, she has a fearful countenance, signifying Kwannon doing away with evil as the horse does away with food. If blue-headed, Bato-Kwannon stands for destruction of the sinful; if white-headed, represents purity. Her emblems are a fish and a willow. She sometimes is seated on a buffalo carrying an ax. As Juichimen-Kwannon, she has eleven faces (usually shown with twelve faces). As Senju-Kwannon, she has one thousand hands, each hand with an eye (star) on it and holding an object, thus Kwannon who beholds with a thousand earthly blessings.

KWAN-YIN (KUAN-YIN) Chinese goddess of infinite mercy and compassion; daughter of Chong-Wang, phallus king residing in the Southern Sea. Worshipped as protector of women and appealed to as giver of children, especially sons, and of wealth. Originally a male deity, she is the Chinese aspect of Avalokitesvara, the young disciple who sprang from the tears of Buddha. Portrayed with a thousand arms; she sometimes rides a mythical animal, the hou, which resembles the Buddhist lion, to symbolize her power over the forces of nature. Her emblems are the vase and the willow branch, with which she sprinkles the waters of life. Although of Buddhist origin, she is so beloved, her image is found in both Buddhist and Taoist temples. Analogue of the Japanese Kwannon; frequently compared with Virgin Mary. Name equivalent of Chiun (Kiun) of Hebrews and of Gwen and queen of Europeans.

KWASIND In Longfellow's Hia-watha the strongest man of all mortals; the Heracles of North American Indians. Only the blue cone of a fir tree was able to injure him. This secret was known to Little-folk, who were jealous of him. One day, finding him asleep in a boat, they pelted him with the cones until he died. Probably personifies the fertile sun. His vulnerability compares with that of Achilles, Balder, Bran.

KWAZOKU (KUAZOKU) A class of Japanese nobles including both the kuge (court nobles) and daimios.

KW'EN Chinese miraculous fish which lives in the pool of heaven.

KWISTGOED In Denmark a person who spends money freely and foolishly; a spendthrift.

KYANITE In the language of gems: Death preferred to parting.

KYBAI-KHOTUN Among the Yakuts, goddess of birth and fate. Spirit dwelling in the Zambu tree. By Ar-tojon, the heaven god, mother of Ar-soghotoch, the lonely or first man.

KYBELE Same as Cybele, which see.

KYFFHAUSER A peak in Thuringia in the Harz mountains. Supposedly the site of the legendary sleep of Frederick Barbarossa. Compare Berchtesgaden.

KYNDDELIG In Arthurian romances a knight of the Round Table who was as good a guide in a strange country as in his own. A light hero.

KYNEDYR WYLLT In Brythonic legend a huntsman more wild than the wildest beast on the mountains. A storm or wind spirit.

KYODE-JIELLE Russian-Lapland household spirit. Literally, the one who dwells in the tent. Compare Korka-murt, Kud-ava.

KYOHIME In Japanese legend a maiden who avenged herself by changing into a serpent and destroying her faithless lover.

KYRIE ELEISON In the Anglican, Eastern, and Western churches, the first words of a brief petition used in the services; also the musical setting for these words. From the Greek, meaning Lord have mercy (upon us).

KYSAN-TENGERE Altaic god of the ninth heaven. The corresponding god of the Mongols is Kisangan-Tengri, who is a god of war, procurer of victory, protector of the army.

L

L Twelfth of a class or series; eleventh if the letter J is not counted. Something, such as a building, having the shape of the letter. As understood by gnostics, God (El) or Power. Occult significance: it produces travel, especially small journeys; its period is for three years. Character traits: intuitive, prophetic dreamer, traveler, and given to self-sacrifice. It denotes beauty, social popularity and versatility. In divination, its numerical value is twelve or three. Physical weak spot: throat. Planetary or zodiacal correspondence: Libra or Uranus. Symbolic correspondence: violent death. Tarot correspondence: Hanged Man. Among Hebrew cabalists it dominates dreams, and the traits are: spirituality, sweet manners. In low form: passion for opposite sex, selfishness. In medieval symbology probably stood for Logos. In Roman numeral notation, 50; with a line drawn over it, 50,000. Parallels Anglo-Saxon lagu (lake), Celtic luis (rowan), Egyptian hieroglyph recumbent lioness, Greek lambda, Hebrew and Phoenician lamed (ox goad). Mayans represented L by a dot within a circle and by an acute angle; in Mexico, the hieroglyph of a beetle also signified the letter L. Compare Alphabet Affiliations.

LA (1) Word root meaning that which has existed forever. In Mayan sacred mysteries signifies Eternal Truth. As vowels are interchangeable, identical with El (God) also identified with the Semitic Ra, meaning Ancient of Days or Time. (2) Syllable used to sound the 6th tone in singing any diatonic scale. According to mystics its quality is knowledge; its rank is things.

LAADAH Hebrew name meaning festival.

LA'A-MAOMAO Polynesian god of the winds.

LABAN Literally, glorious or white. In the Old Testament a rich herdsman of Mesopotamia. Son of Bethuel; father of Leah and Rachel; brother of Rebekah. He was a lover of wealth and demanding of those who served him. When his nephew Jacob asked for the hand of Rachel, he imposed seven years of service on the youth; when the requirements were fulfilled, he gave Leah to Jacob as a bride and demanded seven more years of service for Rachel; thus he was deceitful and tyrannical. Corresponds to an underworld deity controlling fertility.

LABARTU Assyrian female demon, daughter of Anu. She haunted marshes and mountains and afflicted or kidnaped children, who wore amulets for protection. Later the name labartu was applied to a class of supernatural beings, and a good labartu might protect a household, thus resembles a brownie, fairy, or kobold.

LABARUM Roman cavalry banner borne before Roman emperors. It consisted of a gilded spear topped by an eagle, was adorned with precious stones, and from its cross-staff hung a purple streamer with gold fringe. Constantine substituted a crown for the eagle and inscribed the banner with the Chi-Rho monogram to commemorate the miraculous vision of the cross in the sky which he saw on his march to Rome. The labarum has become an ecclesiastical banner carried in processions, thus, figuratively, a standard of conduct or a moral guide. Labarum resolves into la-bar-um, i.e. everlasting Father Sun.

LABASU A Semitic demon or ghoul.

LABBU (LABU) Accadian chaos dragon, despoiler of lands, enemy of the gods. Slain by Tishpak. Name meaning raging one; used to signify lion or serpent offspring of Tiamat.

LABE Sorceress queen of the Island of Enchantments of the Arabian Nights' story Beder. Like Circe, she possessed the power of changing men into animals.

LABEL In heraldry a charge or mark, which consists of a bar, usually with three pendants or points, placed across the shield in chief, and borne by the eldest son to distinguish his arms from those of his father. Removed on the death of the father.

LABHAR In Celtic mythology leech who healed the wounds of the Fenians after their battle with the Tuatha De Dannan.

LABISMINA In versions of the Cinderella legend a sea-serpent, godmother of Cinderella. Probably a corruption of L'Abysme, French superlative of Abyss.

LABOR In India typified by a golden hand. In the United States personified by a man with arms bare to the elbow. The word equates with Liber, Roman deity, giver of all good and riches.

Laborer. Dream significance: prosperity, wealth.

Laborers of months. During the middle ages, the months were symbolized in art by laborers. Some panels also assigned the Greek deity (variations appeared) and zodiacal house.

Month and Zodiacal House	Labor England	Labor France	Labor Germany	Labor Italy	Labor Spain	Greek Deity
January Aquarius	feasting	feasting, seated facing right, usually with round loaf and knife	feasting, hunting hares	feasting, warming	feasting	Hera with knobbed scepter or peacock
February Pisces	warming	warming	cutting wood	cutting wood, digging, pruning, warming	warming	Dionysus with scepter or Poseidon with two dolphins
March Aries	blowing horn, digging, pruning	pruning	digging, pruning	blowing horn, digging	pruning	Athena with owl, spear, or tipped staff
April Taurus	bearing flowers, knights taking vows	bearing flowers	bearing flowers, cultivating vines	bearing flowers, shearing sheep	bearing flowers, knights taking vows	Aphrodite with dove or Zeus with thunderbolt
May Gemini	hunting with falcon, riding	riding toward right, sometimes with sickle	hunting birds, making music	gathering fruit, riding	gathering fruit, riding	Aphrodite and Cupid with knobbed scepter or Apollo with tripod
June Cancer	weeding	mowing	mowing, plowing	mowing, reaping	mowing, reaping	Ares with helmet or Hermes with torse

Month and Zodiacal House	Labor England	Labor France	Labor Germany	Labor Italy	Labor Spain	Greek Deity
July Leo	mowing	reaping	mowing, reaping	threshing	threshing and storing grain	Artemis with quiver or Zeus with eagle
August Virgo	reaping	threshing	reaping	gathering grapes	repose	Apollo (no attribute) or Demeter with cist
September Libra	gathering grapes, threshing	treading grapes	treading grapes	treading grapes	treading grapes	Demeter (no attribute) or Hephaestus with helmet
October Scorpio	feeding hogs, filling casks	fattening hogs with acorns	sowing	feeding hogs, plowing, sowing	feeding hogs, filling casks	Ares with she-wolf or Hermes with caduceus
November Sagittarius	killing hogs	feeding oxen	killing oxen, threshing	killing hogs	killing hogs	Artemis with hounds or Hephaestus with knobbed scepter
December Capricorn	cutting wood, feasting	feasting, seated frontally	killing hogs	cutting wood, feasting	feasting	Hestia with lamp or Poseidon with trident

Labors of Heracles. In Greek mythology course of the fates or cycle of time. Inasmuch as they required supernatural ability and power, the phrase is applied figuratively to work demanding a giant's strength. See under zodiac Girdle for the labors.

LABRADORITE Gem symbolizing capricious love.

LABRAID LONGSECH Legendary Irish king. Brother of Fand, brother-husband of Liban. He is said to be the husband of Becuma of the Fair Skin, who also is known as the wife of Conn. An agricultural hero. In his battles against supernatural foes, he receives the aid of Cuchulainn and, in appreciation, gives the hero his sister Fand as a mistress. Called Labraid of the Quick Hand on Sword.

LABURNUM January 8 birthday flower symbolizing forsaken, pensive beauty.

LABYNETUS (LABYNETOS) Appellation of several Babylonian kings. No doubt a title rather than a proper name.

LABYRINTH A building or mass of buildings containing involved tortuous passageways; a maze, hence any involved or perplexing circumstance or problem. A realm of torture. Dream significance: mystery revealed. In mythology typifies the infernal regions; path followed by the dead in their progress to resurrection. The labyrinth at Crete is the realm of darkness or course through which Ariadne, dawn or moon, directs Theseus, the sun, during the night. In medieval churches the complicated or labyrinthine pathways were emblematic of the progress of Christ from Jerusalem to Calvary. The principal labyrinths of antiquity and legend are: Clusium, built by Lars Porsena, king of Etruria, for his tomb. Cretan conduit, which had 1,000 lanes or turnings. Cretan prison of the Minotaur. Egyptian, near Lake Moeris. It contained 3,000 apartments, half of which were underground. Lemnian, which had 150 columns adjusted so that a child was able to turn them. Samian, built by Theodorus in the 6th century B.C. Woodstock, built by Henry II to protect his mistress the Fair Rosamond from the queen.

LACE Luxury, wealth. Dream significance: frivolity.

LACEDAEMON In Greek mythology son of Zeus and Taygete, husband of Sparta. An agricultural or fertility king. A country of ancient Greece and its capital were named after him. Later the country was called Laconia and the capital was called Sparta. Laconia is the source of laconic (sparing of words), a characteristic attributed to the people.

LACERTA Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as the Lizard.

LACHESIS In Greek mythology the second of the three Moirai (Parcae) or Fates. She is the allotter, the one who determines the duration of life and spins its thread, and is portrayed as bearer of the rod or distaff with two masks at her feet, one comic, the other tragic, to indicate that to a divinity of fate the happiest and saddest events of earthly existence are alike indifferent and that she pursues her occupation regardless of human weal or woe. Her sisters are Clotho, Atropos.

LACHISH Hebrew name meaning height.

LACHMU (LACHE) In Babylonian mythology, with his mate Lachamu (Lachos), the first children of the chaos deities Ap-su and Tiamat, and parents of Anshar and Kishar. They personified darkness as a reproducing and sustaining power.

LACHRYMA CHRISTI Literally, tear of Christ. A rich Neapolitan wine, once probably used for religious purposes.

LADA Name for Cinderella in a Slav version of the fairytale. She is portrayed as a princess with a gold star on her brow. The name is probably either a feminine or diminutive form of Ladon, the fertility serpent; it may be equated with Leda and Leto.

LADDER Aspiration, danger, divine realms, dreams, good fortune, knowledge, sanctity, underworld, virtues, wealth. Path of ascent to paradise or perfection; path of descent to the dark depths or degradation. A form worn as an amulet to ward off evil. Dream significance: (falling off) failure; (going down) doubtful success or ill luck; (going up) patience, success. According to Sigmund Freud, dreams of ladders, stairs, and steep inclines are symbolic of the sexual act. According to American Indians the human race climbed up from the underworld on a ladder or rope. In some Buddhist accounts Sakyamuni is said to have descended from Tushita heaven by a ladder brought to him by Indra. In Christianity one of the thirteen crucifixion symbols; used in descent from the cross. Emblems of saints Alexis, Perpetua, Romualdo. Egyptian symbol of surmounting difficulties in the material world; worn as a protective talisman. Small ladders were placed in Egyptian tombs. The Pyramids contained ladders or steps to provide dead kings with the stairs on which to reach the land of immortality. In Hebrew tradition the ladder in the dream of Jacob typifies the omnipresent providence of God, an assurance that a way always is open from earth to heaven and from heaven to earth. The rungs of the ladder supposedly were infinite, but the Essences reduced them to seven called Sephiroth (Sephira), with the names Beauty, Eternity, the Foundation, Glory, the Kingdom, Mercy, Strength. Freemasons adopted the latter and reduced the steps to three, Faith, Hope, and Charity. In Persian mysteries of Mithra the ladder has seven rungs or gates of metal of increasing purity, each protected by a planet, by which souls ascend or descend, thus the ladder symbolizes the passage of souls. The superstition that walking under a ladder brings bad luck goes back to this ancient belief, typifying the refusal to climb, one who dodges or ignores the true way to salvation. The seven rungs are: Lead - Saturn, first world. Quicksilver - Mercury, world of pre-existence. Copper - Venus, heaven. Tin - Jupiter, middle world. Iron - Mars, world of births. Silver - Moon, mansion of the blessed. Gold - Sun, mansion of truth.

Luminous ladder. Path or stars to heaven.

Scaling ladder. Heraldic meaning bravery, one fearless in attack.

LADO AND LADA Slavic sun god and goddess of spring; lover and mistress; bridegroom and bride; husband and wife. They personify, light, mirth, pleasure, and happiness. Lada later venerated as the Virgin Mary.

LADON In Greek mythology the name of the ever-watchful dragon or serpent that, with three nymphs, guarded the Garden of the Hesperides. Dragon of fertility. Actaeon's dog was named Ladon. It also was the name of Daphne's father, a river god killed by Heracles, the sun hero. Ladon is the source of lad; the root of the name is found in la.

LADRONE ISLAND A name given to the Marianas by the Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan because the inhabitants had robbed him. Ladrone is from the Spanish meaning brigand, rascal, thief.

LADY CHAPEL Chapel dedicated to Virgin Mary; in large churches situated east of the altar.

LADY DAY March 25 observed to commemorate the day on which the angel told Virgin Mary she would be the mother of the Messiah. Also called Day of Annunciation. In the middle ages, feasts of Conception and Nativity were celebrated on the same day. Until 1752 in the English calendar the day marked the beginning of the civil year. In Greek antiquity March 25 was the day on which the miraculous conception of Hera, queen of heaven, was celebrated. In Rome Juno was honored similarly.

LADY FLOWER In Japan called ominameshi, which means depending on wind or little field. Symbolizes autumn, submissiveness, tenderness.

LADY-IN-THE-CHAIR Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Cassiopeia.

LADY MING Chinese hell goddess who gives the broth of oblivion preparatory to new birth.

LADY OF ALL MERCIES Virgin Mary.

LADY OF BABYLON The scarlet woman; applied to the papacy as a term of abuse from the description in Revelation. Also Lady of Rome.

LADY OF SHALOTT A Tennysonian heroine who dies through a magic curse, which falls in consequence of her looking on Lancelot as he rides toward Camelot. In Arthurian romances Elaine, lily maid of Astolat, suffers a fate substantially the same. Probably personifies the moon.

LADY OF T'AI-SHAN In Chinese mythology goddess of the whirlwind. Daughter of Tung Hai (Eastern Sea), wife of Hsi Hai (Western Sea).

LADY OF THE ABYSS Wisdom. In Babylonian cosmogony the Abyss or Depth was regarded as symbolic of Unfathomable Wisdom; she was the wife of the Supreme Creator. Likewise known as Voice of the Abyss.

LADY OF THE EMERALD A title of Chalchiutlicue (Aztec) and of Isis (Egyptian).

LADY OF THE LAKE In Arthurian romances a water nymph, bestower of the sword Excalibur upon King Arthur, hence a guardian spirit. In early English poems she is called Vivien, a sorceress and mistress of Merlin, and she lives in a palace in the middle of a lake. In Malory she is called Nimue and, under this name, she magically puts Merlin away. In one version she steals the baby Lancelot and nurtures him for King Arthur's service, thus he is called Lancelot du Lac. She probably is a later aspect of the Cymric goddess Rhiannon, as the names Nimue and Vivien appear to be disguises of Rhiannon. She likewise seems to be associated with the three queens who aided King Arthur. Her arms are extended to form a cross. Her emblems are a censer, sword, and fish. James Branch Cabell introduces her in Jurgen as Anatis. In a poem by Scott, she is introduced as Ellen Douglas, a favorite of King James.

LADY OF THE ROCKS A title of Virgin Mary.

LADY OF TURQUOISE A title of Isis.

LADY POVERTY In Christian allegory a queen of virtue who converses with Saint Francis. She is the bestower of the blessings of sweetness on those who leave the Vale of Tears to climb the Mount of Light.

LADY'S DELIGHT February 26 birthday flower carrying the symbolism forget-me-not.

LADY'S MANTLE Flower symbolizing fashion.

LADY'S SLIPPER April 23 birthday flower symbolizing capricious beauty, fickleness. In the language of flowers: Win and wear me. In Korea typifies headache cure because of the medicine made from its bulb.

LADY'S TRESSES Flower symbolizing bewitching grace.

LAEGAIRE (LAEG) In Irish legend driver of Cuchulainn's chariot. Personification of the sun's rays. See Loegaire.

LAELAPS (LAILAPS) Literally, storm. In Greek mythology furious wind typified by the dog given by Artemis to Procris, who in turn gave it to Cephalus. While pursuing wild boar (drought), it was metamorphosed into a stone. It likewise was the name of one of Actaeon's fifty dogs.

LAERAD (LAERATH) Norse tree of life which overshadows Valhalla and upon which the goat Heidrun, which supplies milk to immortalized heroes, feeds.

LAERTES In the Odyssey king of Ithaca, father of Odysseus. Aged sun.

LAESTRYGONES In the Odyssey a race of fierce gigantic cannibals governed by Antiphates. Storm giants. The twelve ships of Odysseus sailed into their land, and they hurled huge rocks at the fleet, sinking eleven of the ships with all hands on board. Only the vessel under the command of Odysseus, sun hero, escaped.

LAET Among the Anglo-Saxons one who occupied the position between a freeman and a slave.

LAETI A class of barbarians who paid tribute to the Romans for land they cultivated within the Roman empire. From the Latin laetus, i.e. foreign bondsman.

LAFITTE, JEAN A French buccaneer in the Gulf of Mexico. Known as the pirate of the gulf. He offered his services to Andrew Jackson, in 1815 commanded a detachment at the Battle of New Orleans, and was pardoned by President Madison.

LAG Old Saxon word for law.

Cognate with Llew, probably derived from Lug.

LAGADO Capital of Balnibari in Swift's Gulliver's Travels. The land is ruled over by the king of Laputa and, at its celebrated academy, scholars spend their time in converting ice into gunpowder, extracting sunbeams from cucumbers, making pin-cushions from softened rocks.

LAGASH One of the great cities of the Sumerian empire; founded by the legendary queen Azag-Bau. Its chief deities appear to have been Bel, Ea, and Enlil. Site of the temple in which the deified Babylonian king Gimel Sin (about 2,500 B.C.) was worshipped.

LAGERSTROEMIA Shrub symbolizing eloquence.

LAGHLAGHGHI-GAR A designation of Nebo as illuminator.

LAHAD Hebrew name meaning dark-colored.

LAHAIROI Hebrew name meaning the living and seeing one.

LAHAR Sumerian goddess of sheep.

LAHMAN Hebrew name meaning place of light.

LAHMU AND LAHAMU In Babylonian mythology chaos serpents personifying calamity. In primeval cosmology preceded by Apsu and Tiamat, followed by Anshar and Kishar. Lahmu later identified as a name of Ea.

LAHU Fertility spirit of the city of Kengtung, Burma. Worshipped at a spring festival. Until recent times a human being's heart and lungs were offered to him. For the last century the votive offering has been a dog. The festival suggests phallic worship. Lahu was a dying god, which see.

LAICA Peruvian good fairy.

LA'I-LA'I Polynesian first woman, begotten by Po (Chaos). The mother of mankind by the King who opens the Heavens.

LAIMOS Pestilence. Greek abstract divinity of a state of the body.

LAIS A courtesan, alluding to the name of two Greek courtesans. One, reputed to have the most beautiful figure of her day, lived at Corinth about 420 B.C. The other, daughter of Timandra, lived about 340 B.C. She was a rival of Phryne, and the women of Thessaly, jealous of her beauty, pricked her to death with their bodkins.

LAISH Literally, lion. In Old Testament, name of a city in the north of the Promised Land, afterward called Dan.

LAIUS (LAIOS) In Greek mythology father of Oedipus, who unwittingly killed him. According to a prophecy he was destined to be slain by his son. The story of his death symbolizes the destruction of the old year or winter (darkness) by the new year or spring (sun), and compares with the death of Acrisius by Perseus and Balor by Lug.

LAJNAN In Micronesian mythology the primordial worm, a creator deity. Name meaning cliff or rock.

LAKA Hawaiian nature goddess, particularly giver of fertilizing rains. Feminine counterpart of Rata, wind god.

LAKE (LAC, LOC) In primitive societies lakes usually have been held sacred givers of fertility, the realm from which the sun rises and into which it sinks, and lake names frequently perpetuate the memory of their original sanctity. The sacred lake of the Zuni Indians is said to be in the center of an empty desert. On the bottom of it the kachina, masked gods, are always dancing. See kachina.

Lake Avernus. An Italian lake which, because of its mephitic and sulphurous vapors, was thought by the Greeks and Romans to be the entrance to the infernal regions. Through it Odysseus and later Aeneas were said to have entered the lower world. Synonymous with hell.

Lake State. Nickname of Michigan.

LAKH A very great number or multitude expressed indefinitely. From the name of an Anglo-Indian sum of 100,000 rupees, formerly equivalent of $48,500. Also used to express 100,000 objects of any kind.

LAKI OI Bornean culture hero who invented fire by pulling a strip of rattan back and forth under a piece of wood.

LAKI TENENGAN Kayan (Borneo) chief deity who presides over the realm of spirits and assigns souls to their places in the afterworld.

LAKSANAS The thirty-two auspicious or superior marks of a Buddha.

LAKSHMI (LAKSMI) In Hinduism one of the consorts of Vishnu, and by him mother of Kama. In one version she was born at the churning of the ocean; in another, she was born from the lotus which sprang from the forehead of Vishnu. Goddess of beauty, good fortune, and wealth, and patroness of small children. As the spouse of Vishnu, she was his life-giving energy. Her emblem was the lotus. As one who sprang from the waters she was an analogue of Aphrodite. Other names by which she is known are Maha Lakshmi and Sri. In Siam called Phra Naret.

LALAGE Heroine of an ode by Horace. Name from the Greek meaning prattle.

LAMA A Tibetan monk, a superior one who guards Tibetans from dangers and evil spirits, and who aids them in obtaining the blessings of long life and wealth; an astrologer. From Bla-ma (Superior one). The priest ruler is called Dalai Lama or Grand Lama; the ecclesiastical potentate of the country is known as Tashi Lama. Dalai Lama is believed to be a reincarnation of the Bodhisattva Avalokitesvara, and his position compares with that of Moses, law-giver of Jehovah; whereas that of Tashi Lama may be compared with that of Aaron, spiritual representative of Jehovah.

Lama deity. Divine being who uses the lama as a medium of communication.

Lamaism. Tibetan religion, which is a fusion of Mahayana Buddhism and Pan, ancient sacrificial religion of Tibet.

LAMANITE According to the Book of Mormon, one of the descendants of Laman, a brother of Nephi. The descendants of Laman fell into sin and were cursed by God with a red skin.

LAMASTU (LAMSHTU, LAMME) Sumerian demoness, destroyer of children with plague; tormentor of women in childbirth. Probably originally a protective spirit portrayed as a winged cow (rain-giving cloud). Later one of a class of evil spirits called lamastu or lamassu. They were depicted as winged bulls or lions with human heads, which destroyed people but protected palaces. Their statues usually flanked the entrances of state buildings.

LAMAYIN On the Tibetan Buddhist Sipa Khorlo or Wheel of Life the realm of titanic demigods; also the name of the super-beings, who are a little more powerful than ordinary human beings. They are ambitious, discontented, warlike, and envious of the happiness of those in Lhayul, the celestial region. They are warriors in flight, as attested by broken weapons, which had been used against those of the Lhayul. The Jambustri-shring (Tree of Knowledge) grows here, but the branches bearing fruit are in the Lhayul region for the beings there to enjoy.

LAMB Innocence, mercy, passiveness, peace, self-sacrifice, truth, weakness. One young and helpless; a term of endearment. A sacrificial animal. Dream significance: (carrying) satisfaction; (killing) serious menace; (mad) wealth and worries; (nearing) marriage. In Freemasonry, in encampments of Knights Templars, the Paschal surmounting a square. In heraldry gentleness and patience under suffering. In China attribute of Hou Chi. Symbol of filial piety because it kneels respectfully when taking its mother's milk. In Christian art Christ the Redeemer. An attribute of saints Agnes, Catharine, Genevieve, John the Baptist, and Regina. Symbolizes apostle, early Christian, follower of Christ, good child, pure thought. Compare Agnus Dei. In Dionysiac rites sacrificed each spring to placate the warder of the underworld gate when Dionysus reawakened and returned to earth. Typified the celestial ram or deliverer. In Hebrew tradition a lamb was understood to be either the young of sheep or the kid of a goat. It symbolized the Messiah, the Paschal, the Word. The sacrifices were an ordained and perpetual foreshadowing of spotless holiness. In Rome sacred to Juno.

As well be hanged for a sheep as for a lamb. Formerly in England, sheep stealing was punishable by hanging; thus one committing an offense subject to punishment need not hesitate committing further offenses which will invoke no greater penalty.

Black lamb. Sinner.

Counting lamb. Insomnia.

Holy lamb. In the Eastern Church the large square of unleavened bread which stands upon the patten at mass. Others stand with it, but it alone is consecrated.

Kirke's lambs. Mounted British soldiers who helped suppress Monmouth's rebellion in 1685. Notorious for their cruelty.

Lamb and lion. Peace. Also with dove overhead.

Temper the wind to the shorn lamb. Give assistance to or show special consideration for the weak.

White lamb. Innocence and purity. Anciently offered in sacrifice to the Dioscuri.

LAMBDA Eleventh letter and seventh consonant of the Greek alphabet. Equivalent of English L (1). Its numerical value is thirty.

LAMBERT Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning land and bright; powerful in land.

LAMBSKIN APRON Worn by Freemasons. Symbolic of purity, sacrifice, simplicity.

LAMECH Literally, overthrower. (1) In the Old Testament a descendant of Cain. Father of Jabal, Jubal, and Tubal-Cain. A culture hero noted for his skill in agriculture, the mechanical arts, and music. He was the first polygamist on record, his two wives being Adah and Zillah. Like Cain, he killed a man. The fragment relating the incident is interpreted to mean he killed the man accidentally or in self-defense, but was exposed to the vengeance of "the avenger of blood." (2) A son of Methuselah and father of Noah. He lived to an age of 777 years, and died only five years before the flood. Lamech corresponds to Lumha, a title of the Babylonian god Ea.

LAMED (LAMEDH) Twelfth letter of the Hebrew alphabet with a numerical value of thirty. Meaning ox goad. According to mystics it designates extended arm, that which is displayed or raised, the expansive power and movement as applied to action or occupation. Its planetary correspondence is Uranus; its symbolic correspondence is violent death; its tarot deck correspondence is Hanged Man; its zodiacal correspondence is Libra. Its color is green, its direction is northwest, signifying love of harmony, justice; its intelligence is that of the faithful, associated with teaching, urging, including capacity for self-direction and inward urge or drive. In white magic it is in correspondence with the Intelligences of third heaven, who preside in the sphere of the planet Saturn. Their lord is Schebtaiel, whose attribute is the Hidden God. See Alphabet Affiliations.

LAMENESS Mark of the sacred king. See under king. Also symbolic of beggary. Figuratively, to be lame is to be not smooth or sound, to be halting, ineffectual, as a lame excuse, a lame stanza. In Japan to meet a lame person is an unlucky omen for a traveler.

Lame duck. In United States politics an officeholder who has not been reelected and who fails to apply himself to his work during the remaining tenure of his term. Also anyone who is unable to meet his financial obligations, especially relating to stock exchange transactions, or play his part in the world.

LAMEROCK (LAMORACKE), SIR In Arthurian cycle a knight of the Round Table. Son of Pellinore, brother of Percival. He had an amour with the wife of King Lot who was his own aunt.

LAMFADA Epithet of the Celtic god Lug, meaning of the long hand.

LAMIA (LAMIAE) In Greek mythology a beautiful Libyan queen betrayed by Zeus. Robbed of her children by Hera, she became a demoness child-snatcher. A class of female Lamia developed who enervated, seduced, and sucked the blood of youths; hence an evil seductive woman, a sorceress. A Lamia had the face and breast of a beautiful woman and the body of a serpent. Probably originally orgiastic priestesses of the Libyan snake goddess Lamia, who had been adopted by the Greeks. In Aristophanes's time, they were emissaries of Hecate. In the middle ages a witch was called a lamia. Lamia resembles Gallu (Gello) and Lamme.

LAMINAK Basque dwarf underground folk. They despise churchbells; sometimes they enter a house to change a fairy child for a human one. Usually they bring good luck with them. All have the name Guillen (William). Resemble the gnomes and kobolds.

LAMMAS Festival on August 1 commemorating the imprisonment of the Apostle Peter. In Celtic tradition a first fruit festival or loaf-mass (wheat-mass), which the early English church misconstrued as lamb-mass and associated with Saint Peter's chains. When observed as a pagan harvest festival, Lug's funeral feast (Lug's mass or wake) was celebrated. Compare fertility rite, mourning festival. It was one of the quarter days for paying rent, and on it witches celebrated their Sabbaths, the others being Candlemas, Beltane (May Day), Hallowmas.

Lammas flood. A wet season which supposedly recurs each year in England about August 1.

Lammas land. Cultivated land thrown open after the harvest in England to common pasturage until sowing time.

Lammas wheat. Winter wheat sown at Lammas-tide.

LAMME (LABASI, LAMASHTU, LAMMEA) Sumerian female vampire who slew children, ate human flesh and drank the blood of young men. Portrayed as a lion-headed demoness holding a double-headed serpent in each hand. A dog sucks at her right breast, a pig at her left. She evolved into seven she-devils who bound men, caused fever, murdered maidens, and snatched children at birth. Analogue of Gallu and Lamia.

LAMMIKIN (LAMBKIN) In Scottish ballads a murderer whose house was the scene of his bloody crimes. He has become the bogey-man of the nursery. Resembles Bluebeard.

LAMONT Masculine name from the Scandinavian, meaning lawyer.

LAMP (DARK) Death, despair. Dream significance: doped.

LAMP (LIGHTED) Deity presence, enlightenment, eternity, guidance, hope, life, piety, protection, purity, reverence, sanctuary, truth, vigilance, vision, wisdom. Active religious life; a flame or lighted lamp appears in a holy place in practically all religions. In connection with mourning rites, symbolic of the soul which, when placed before the image or tomb of the deceased, helps recreate the spirit. The funeral lamp or torch lights the way, protects against the demons of darkness as light cripples the power of evil, purifies and relieves the gloominess of the underworld as well as facilitates the visits which the friendly dead make to kinsman still alive. In antiquity lanterns or torches were carried at night in the cities, the streets of which were not lighted. Dream significance: clear business. Emblem of Nusku, Assyrian god of fire. Buddhist ritual object called dipa; kept lighted as a symbol of everlasting fire. The custom of carrying lanterns was observed by Celts on Halloween. In China and Japan a Feast of Lanterns is celebrated on the 15th of the first month to honor the year's first full moon (lamp of the heavens). Christian illuminanator of the Holy Spirit; emblem of Saint Nilus. Attribute of the Greek goddess Hestia (Roman Vesta). Hebrews of antiquity kept the lamp (or flame) burning all through the night. This custom, which still prevails in certain parts of the East, was regarded as essential to comfort and health, and signified perpetuity and prosperity. The Jewish feast of Channukah is a dedication of lights.

Aladdin's lamp. Source of good fortune and wealth.

Diogenes' lamp. Search for an honest man.

Lampad. Seven lampads, flames or torches, symbolizing the seven spirits of God, are said, in Revelations, to burn before the throne. Probably typify the five planets, sun, and moon.

Lampadedromy. In Greek antiquity torch race in honor of Artemis, Athena, Hephaestus, Pan, or Prometheus, in which the contestant who arrived first at the goal with his torch still burning won the prize.

Seven lamps of architecture. The seven guiding principles of architecture as given by John Ruskin, i. e. beauty, life, memory, obedience, power, sacrifice, truth.

Smell of the lamp. Be bookish or scholarly; show signs of careful preparation. The allusion is to the burning of the midnight oil.

LAMPETIA (LAMPETIE) Literally, brightness. In Greek mythology one of the Heliades, daughters of Helios and Clymene; though some call the Heliades daughters of Helios and the nymph Neaera. Sister of Phaethon. With Phaethusa, she fed the cattle (clouds) of Helios.

LAMPETUS In Greek mythology one of the two horses of Eos.

Typifies dawn light.

LAMPREY Parasite.

Lamprey and viper entwined. Adultery.

LAMUS In Greek mythology son of Poseidon. A king of the Laestrygones, ocean storm demons.

LAMYROI In Greek mythology devourers, ghosts. Analogue of Roman Lemures.

LANCE Chivalry, creation, fertility, knighthood, phallus, scepter, truth, universal axis, wand; also killing, war. Expresses the faculty of distinguishing right from wrong and the sagacity, strength, and vivacity of this faculty. In heraldry devotion to honor, martial readiness. Anciently a suit in the tarot deck; displaced by diamond. See spear. An attribute of Bellona and other deities of war. In Christian art, one of the thirteen crucifixion symbols. Emblem of saints Hippolytus, Longinus, and Thomas the Apostle. In Japanese mythology, implement of Izanagi.

Broken lance. In Christianity emblem of Saint George who, when his lance broke, slew the dragon with his sword. In Holy Grail legends a broken relic, which, if fully restored by the Questor (Knight), or if properly queried by the Quester, will bring back fertility to the Fisher King, which in turn will bring back fertility to the waste land. A broken phallus.

LANCELOT (LANCE, LANCILOTT, LAUNCE, LAUNCELOT)

(1) Masculine name from the Latin through the Germanic, meaning the land, servant, warrior. (2) In the Arthurian cycle the bravest and most famous of the knights of the Round Table. Son of King Ban of Brittany, he is stolen in infancy by Vivien, the Lady of the Lake. With him she plunges into the water and thereafter he is known as Lancelot du Lac. Sir Lancelot goes in search of the Grail and twice catches sight of it, but he lacks the virtue to fully succeed in the quest. A model of bravery and chivalry, he is an adulterous lover. Guinevere, wife of Arthur, his friend and king, is abducted by Meliagrance. She is rescued by Lancelot, who falls in love with her. Elaine, Lily Maid of Astolat, dies for love of Lancelot, another Elaine through magic takes the form of Guinevere, and by her Lancelot unwittingly becomes the father of Sir Galahad. Lancelot's passion for the queen leads to events that result in the war that breaks up the Round Table. Arthur is killed, Guinevere enters a convent, and the repentant Lancelot becomes a monk. Thus, Lancelot, the sun, rises from water and rescues the dawn or spring maid, wife of the fertility spirit (Arthur) from the underworld lord (Meliagrance). He is the wanderer across the sky, faithless to the moon (Maid of Astolat), and by the phase of the moon which appears in the dawn, father of another sun (Galahad). In one poem he is Lancelot Knight of the Cart because, when he first appears, lacking a horse, he rides for a while on a cart used to transport criminals. A sword bridge at the entrance to the abode of Meliagrance and a perilous bed equipped with knives are among his trials. Much of the material appears to be derived from the legend of Pluto and Proserpina.

LAND Concrete physical manifestation.

Bad lands. Desolate regions.

First Lady of the Land. Wife of the President of the United States.

Forbidden Land. Tibet, inasmuch as it excludes strangers.

From John o'Groat's to Land's End. From one extremity of Great Britain to another; John o'Groat's being the northeastern tip of Scotland; Land's End being the southwestern point of England.

Jack's land. In medieval England anybody's land, unapportioned land, unclaimed or debatable land. Also no man's land.

Land flowing with milk and honey. A land of plenty and prosperity, milk suggesting pasturage and honey suggesting gardens. From a biblical description of Canaan.

Land of Beulah. In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress a land of peace and quiet where pilgrims tarry until they are summoned to cross the Stream of Death and enter Celestial City. Symbolic of a Christian's peace of mind.

Land of bondage. Egypt. So called by the Israelites from the oppression they suffered there.

Land of Cakes. Scotland. The allusion is to the widespread consumption of oatmeal cakes.

Land of Cockaigne. Land of ease, luxury, and sensual pleasure; lotus land of poetry. From a poem popular in the 14th century. Also London and its suburbs, residence of the cockneys.

Land of Life. In Celtic mythology, land of immortality, fairyland. In Celtic, Tir-na-mBeo.

Land of Midnight Sun. Norway and Sweden. Far north.

Land of Nod. Dreamland, sleep. In Genesis, land of the east of Eden in which Cain wandered after he fled from the presence of the Lord.

Land of Promise. Canaan, so called because it was promised to the Israelites by God; hence any country or situation which offers one the expectation of a better way of life.

Land of steady habits. Connecticut, in allusion to its rigid laws.

Land of the Rising Sun. Japan.

Land of the Rose. England.

Land of the Shamrock. Ireland.

Land of the Thistle. Scotland.

Land of the Yellow Spring. Chinese netherworld.

Land of Youth. Celtic paradise in which Ossian lived with Manannan's daughter, Niamh of the Golden Hair for 300 years. In Celtic Tir-na-nOg.

Land shark. A boarding-house keeper in a seaport town who preys on seaman. Also a land grabber, an unprincipled speculator in real estate.

Live on the fat of the land. Have every luxury at one's call; possess the best the land affords.

LANDRY Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning rich in land, land ruler.

LANDSKNECHT Literally, land servant. In Germanic countries a mercenary foot soldier of the 15th through the 17th centuries. Although loyal to their leaders, they fought for booty, never for ideals or principles. In France, lansquenet.

LANDVAETTIR One of a class of Scandinavian spirits who guard the land. When they leave a locality the soil fails to produce and other troubles follow.

LANDVIDE (LANDVITHI) In Norse mythology the impenetrable, indestructible forest-abode of Vidar.

LANGLEY Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the long lea.

LANG-PO-TOP-GYE Buddhist

Great Fortune banner, showing elephants, garudas, peacocks, vajras, and other symbols and sacred texts.

LANGSUYAR Malayan flying demoness; a storm and wind genius. A woman who has died in childbirth and returns as a shrieking ghost flinging her arms about and opening and shutting her hands. See bead chain.

LANO OF SIENA A notorious spendthrift mentioned in Dante's Inferno.

LANTANA Symbolic of rigour. In the language of flowers: I am inflexible.

LANTERN Knowledge, search for that which is lost, search for truth, signal, spiritual light. Emblem of Halloween. See lamp for further symbolism. In China and Japan signifies festivity. A feast of Lanterns is celebrated on the 15th of the first month to honor the first full moon of the year. In one legend, the daughter of a famous mandarin (probably a moon goddess) fell into a lake. A search with lanterns was conducted, she was found, and a festival was established to commemorate the event. In Christianity attribute of Saints Gudula and Hugh of Grenoble. In Japan a white lantern at graves and a colored one at house gates lights the way for the coming of the ancestral dead on their visits to the world of the living.

Lantern Land. In Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel, a land inhabited by the Lanternois, literary charlatans, ridiculous pedants, and prelates.

LAN TS'AI-HO In Chinese mythology one of the Pa Kung (Eight Immortals). Usually represented as a youth, sometimes as a woman. His robe is blue and he has one foot in a shoe and one foot bare. Also portrayed wandering through streets begging and waving a wand; more often shown playing cymbals or a flute and carrying a basket of flowers, his emblem, as he is bestower of delusive pleasures and patron of florists.

LAN TSAO In China a fragrant grass which gives off its perfume to everything with which it comes in contact, thus the influence of a good man can be felt even after one leaves him.

LANVAL A Brythonic knight who fell in love with a fairy and rode off with her on a horse to Avalon, a paradise where death does not exist. Story parallels that of Connla. See divine-human marriages.

LAN-YEIN AND A-MONG Brother and sister who descended from the skies and became the ancestors of the Karens of Burma. They were given a magic drum by Sek-ya, lord of supernatural weapons, which, when beaten, drove enemies away.

LAOCOON In Virgil's Aeneid a son of Priam and priest of Apollo. He warned his fellow Trojans against the colossal wooden horse left by the Greeks on the plains outside the wall of the city. The fall of Troy had been decreed by the gods and, in consequence of his eloquence, as he and his sons were about to offer a sacrifice to Apollo, two enormous serpents rose from the sea and strangled the three. The Trojans interpreted their fate as punishment. The wooden horse, they decided, was consecrated, admitted it to their city, and were destroyed.

LAODAMAS In Greek mythology: (1) Son of Alcinous whose challenge to a wrestling match was declined by Odysseus. (2) Son of Eteocles. King and commander of the Thebans in the attack by the Epigoni. Killed by Alcmaeon. A prince of darkness or winter.

LAODAMIA In Greek mythology: (1) Daughter of Acastus, wife of Protesilaus, the first Greek killed in the siege of Troy. She besought the gods to let her speak to him and was granted three hours. Hermes led him from the underworld and, when the time came for her husband to return, she accompanied him. A time myth. (2) Daughter of Bellerophon; by Zeus the mother of Sarpedon. When Isandros and Hippolochos contended for the Lycian throne, it was decided the throne should go to the man able to shoot a ring from the breast of a child without hurting him. Laodamia offered Sarpedon for the contest. Source of the William Tell story.

LAODICE In Greek legend daughter of Priam and Hecuba; wife of Telephus. In the Iliad, daughter of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra. By the tragic poets called Electra, which see.

LAODICEAN One who is indifferent or lukewarm to religion, in allusion to a statement in Revelation; hence, indecision, without definite character. A threatening indecisive day is a Laodicean day.

LAOMEDON In Greek mythology king of Troy, father of Priam. His chief sin was ingratitude. During a period in which Apollo and Poseidon were condemned to temporary servitude on earth, they built the Walls of Troy. When the work was finished, Laomedon treacherously refused to give them the covenanted rewards. Apollo sent a pestilence on the city; Poseidon sent a sea monster to which Laomedon was instructed to sacrifice his daughter Hesione. Laomedon called upon Heracles, promising him the immortal steeds that had been a gift of Zeus, but once Hesione was rescued, Laomedon cheated Heracles by giving him mortal horses. For his failure to keep his pledge, Heracles carried off Hesione, slew all the sons of Laomedon with the exception of Priam, and destroyed the city.

LAON Hero of Shelley's Revolt of Islam; a champion of political and religious liberty.

LAO TZE (LAOTSE, LAO TZU) Chinese sage, founder of Taoism, deified as Shen Pao, sovereign of the highest heaven. Third of the San Ch'ing, the Three Pure Ones, or Taoist trinity, the other two being Tao Chun and Yu Huang. Sometimes represented as Cheou-lao, god of longevity.

LAPAGERIA In the language of flowers: There is no unalloyed good.

LAPIS LAZULI December birthstone, zodiacal sign Capricorn, house of the goat. Symbol of ability, cheerfulness, nobility, truth. Valued as bringer of happiness, love, and prosperity. Held to protect the wearer from malign influences and, if placed against the skin, to draw out evil which is dissipated in the air. It supposedly developed fearlessness in timid children, dispelled melancholia in elders, and fortified their fidelity to friends and principles. The sapphire of the Greeks, Hebrews, and Romans. From lapis, Latin for stone, and lazuli, Arabic for heaven. In Asia believed to be the essence of gold. In China one of the Seven Precious Things. Water into which it is dipped is used in cases of fever and inflamed eyes. Christian emblem of chastity worn in episcopal rings. Sacred to Virgin Mary. In Egyptian antiquity Osiris was referred to as God of Lapis Lazuli and Turquoise. Engraved with an eye and a heart held to protect wearer from demonic influences. In Hebrew tradition stone on which the laws supposedly were written. Symbol of success in which the blue of the heavens and the gold of the sun were captured. In ancient Rome sacred to Venus and protector of lovers and married couples.

False lapis lazuli. Jealousy.

LAPITHAE In Greek mythology a wild Thessalian people who invited the Centaurs to the marriage feast of their king to Hippodamia. Inflamed with wine, the Centaurs endeavored to kidnap the bride and other maidens, but were defeated. A fertility or time myth.

LAPSI Among early Christians, apostates.

LAPUTA The flying island in Swift's Gulliver's Travels. It is inhabited by philosophers and scientific quacks who devote themselves to mathematics, music, and impractical schemes. They are so absorbed in their speculations, they employ attendants called flappers, to flap them on the ears or mouth with an inflated bladder to bring them from the realm of high thought down to mundane affairs. Laputa resembles Rabelais' Lantern Land.

LAPWING Artfulness, deceit. In Celtic mythology animal of Bran, underworld ruler. Its poetic meaning as understood by the Bards was disguise the secret; whereas that of the dog was guard the secret, and that of the white roebuck was hide the secret. According to a Christian legend a handmaid of Virgin Mary purloined one of her mistress's dresses, for which reason she was turned into a lapwing and condemned forever to cry: "Tyvit! Tyvit!" (I stole it! I stole it!). In the Koran the lapwing is respected as a prophetic bird and is mentioned as the repository of King Solomon's secrets. The lapwing of Balkis is one of the ten animals of the Moslem heaven.

LAR (LARS) Title in Etruria meaning lord. Commonly prefixed to a name. See Lares.

LARCH October 26 birthday flower. Symbol of audacity, boldness, impregnability, independence, stability.

LARENTALIA Roman festival held December 23, in which offerings were made at the shrine of Acca Larentia, great earth goddess, foster mother of Romulus and Remus, mother of the Lares, and benefactress of the Romans.

LARES Etruscan tutelary gods adopted by the Romans. Spirits of virtuous ancestors or heroes exalted to the rank of protectors. In some accounts descendants of Acca Larentia. They hover beneficently over their old homes guarding the family to which they belong from danger and evil influences. The Lar Familiaris, Lar of the family, was believed to be contained in an object, such as a statue, which was venerated, a portion of each meal being laid before it. Before starting out on a journey, the master of a house saluted his Lar; on his return, he offered thanksgiving to it and crowned it with flowers. The dog was sacred to them. Figuratively, something highly prized in a family is called a lar. Lares fall into various categories: Lares compitales - Guardians of crossroads or separate sections of the city. Lares permarini - Guardians of travelers. Lares Praestites - Guardians of the city or commonwealth. Lares rurales - Guardians of the country. Also called Lares publici. Lares vicorum (viales) - Guardians of streets. Compare Lemures, Manes, Penates.

LARIAT Capture, death, law, mob rule, slaughter. In Sanscrit called pasa, and with it Buddhists and Hindus capture non-believers. In the United States signifies cowboys, herds.

LARK Cheerfulness, recklessness, song. Dream significance: (caught) loss of money; (flying) coming wealth; (singing) pleasant news. In Christian tradition typifies humility in priesthood.

LARKSPUR Levity, lightness.
Pink larkspur. Fickleness.
Purple larkspur. Haughtiness.

LARVAE (LARVA) Roman maleficent ghost of the dead. One of a class known as Larve, which also are called Lemures.

LASE Tibetan benignant spirit.

LASSO See lariat.

LAST THINGS Death, heaven, hell, judgment.

Last Assize. Last Judgment.
Last buried. In Brittany and Ireland the person last buried in a churchyard does not have any repose, but must guard the others. At Kilmurry the last buried is compelled to carry water to moisten the lips of souls in purgatory.

Last day of the year. In Japan demon-ousting day. The house is given a thorough cleaning and sweeping to disperse all demons and evil spirits.

Last Judgment. The last trial by God, when mankind receives the final award or sentence. Also known as Judgment Day.

LASYA (1) One of the Eight Mothers in Buddhism. Peaceful in aspect. She is white, has two or four arms, and holds a mirror. Usually arhaparyankasana (dancing). Tibetan name, sGeg-mo-ma. (2) In India female dance which, with the Than-dava (masculine dance), brings fame, happiness, knowledge, and prosperity, and makes one enlightened, generous, and steady, as well as wards off covetousness, jealousy, and misery. It supposedly was taught by Parvati, mountain goddess, to Usha through whom it passed on to the people.

LATAH (LATA) A religious hysteria known among Southeastern Asiatics. It is characterized by a continued utterance of unintelligible sounds, mental aberrations, nervous muscular movements, sexual delusions, and an uncontrollable tendency to imitate others. Primarily a condition among females.

LATAWIEC Polish spirit which sometimes assumes the form of a man, sometimes that of a woman. Latawiec beguiles travelers and causes them to lose their way. When he wishes to gratify his lust, he visits witches in the form of a fiery flying serpent.

LATHAM Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from the storehouse.

LATHROP Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from the village storehouse.

LATINUS In Roman mythology grandson of Saturn, son of Faunus. Culture hero and eponymous ancestor of the Latini, ancient inhabitants of Latium. He at first opposes the landing of Aeneas, but subsequently forms an alliance with him and gives his daughter Lavinia to him in marriage.

LATITUDINARIAN One who departs in views from the strict standards of religious orthodoxy; hence, one not attached to any firm belief or opinion. From a group of English churchmen, in the time of Charles II, who tried to inculcate a more liberal spirit into the English church in an effort to reunite dissenters.

LATMUS (LATMOS) In Greek mythology mountain where Endymion pastured his flocks and fell asleep. Selene, falling in love with his beauty, came down and kissed him. Latmus is the land of forgetfulness, the dark or night land.

LATONA Roman moon goddess. By Jupiter mother of Apollo and Diana. Personification of darkness, identical with the Greek Leto, which see.

Latona's children. Apollo and Diana, the sun and the moon. At dawn and at sunset at the vernal equinox, the sun and the moon are exactly balanced for an instant on opposite sides of the horizon.

LATRINA GODS In Japan the gods who first taught men how to fertilize the fields.

LATURA Nias (Indonesia) lord of the dead; brother of Lowalangi, who ruled the sky.

LAUDANUM Probably the philosopher's stone of alchemists.

LAUFEY Literally, leafy isle. In Norse mythology a giantess. In a 13th century poem, she is the wife of the peasant Farbauti and mother of Lopter (Loki). She is so thin, she is called Nal, i.e. needle (fir) tree.

LAUGHTER Disdain, enigma, fatefulness, good humor, irony, joy, malice, mystery, scorn, trickery, triumph. Dream significance: coming sorrow.

LAUMA In Motu (New Guinea) belief, the soul or spirit which separates from a man at death and goes on to lead an independent existence.

LAUNCELOT See Lancelot.

LAUNFAL, SIR In Arthurian romances a knight of the Round Table and King Arthur's steward. His lady-love Tryamour supplied him with a never-failing purse and told him that she would appear to him whenever he retired to a private room. Queen Gwenivere (Guinevere) fell in love with him and, when he told her she was unworthy to kiss the feet of his lady-love, she accused him of insulting her. King Arthur thereupon imprisoned him with the threat of death at the stake unless he produced Tryamour. Tryamour appeared in his cell and Launfal was freed. With his mistress, he retired to the Isle of Orelon (Avalon) and never was seen again. The love of Launfal and Tryamour is that of a divine and a mortal; their retirement to Orelon is to a paradise. The incident with Queen Gwennere resembles that of Joseph and Potiphar's wife. See Divine-human marriages. In a later poem Sir Launfal, in a dream, goes in search of the Holy Grail. He meets a leper to whom he tosses a gold coin and discovers the leper is Christ.

LAURA (LAURETTA, LAURETTE, LAURINDA, LOLLY, LORETTA, LORINDA) Feminine name corresponding to masculine Laurence (Lawrence), from the Latin signifying laurel. The name Laura has been made immortal in poetry. It was the name of the woman who inspired Petrarch, generally believed to have been Laure de Noves of Avignon, who died of the plague in 1348, the wife of Huges de Sede and the mother of eleven children. In emulation of Petrarch numerous poets have addressed their works to Laura.

LAUREL November 17 birthday flower. Symbolic of achievement, courage, elegance, eminence (hence laureate), immortality, incorruptible love, purity, renown, reward, victory; also perfidy, treachery. Dream significance: contentment, marriage, success; (being crowned with) vanity; (picking) triumph. Resolves into la-ur-el, i.e. everlasting fire god. Christian symbol of chastity, eternity, heavenly bliss, triumph. Once hung in churches as an emblem of hospitality or sign of welcome to elves and fairies at Christmas. Virgin saints were crowned with laurel. In Greek antiquity called daphne, and revered as effective against evil and disease. The green laurel of Apollo was believed to have the ability to confer knowledge. Berry-bearing twigs of it were wound around the forehead of victorious heroes and poets, thus the source of baccalaureate (berried laurel).

Laurel in flower. Perfidy.

Ground laurel. Perseverance.

Mountain laurel. November 16 birthday flower symbolizing ambition, glory. Emblem of the states of Connecticut and Pennsylvania.

LAURESTINE November 15 birthday flower symbolizing a token. In the language of flowers: I die if neglected.

LAURIN In German folk legend a dwarf king who receives power and strength from his possessions, a magic cap, girdle, and ring. He leads Dietrich von Bern and his friends into hills made brighter than the sun by gems. He lures women and then deserts them. He carries Kunhild, the summer or fertility maid, to his underground dwelling as queen. She is rescued by her brother Dietlieb, Dietrich von Bern, and other knights, but returns to Laurin. Thus verdure, abducted by the king of darkness, is rescued by the knights of sun and spring, but again returns to her lover, who is the possessor of great wealth in his underworld abode. Laurin's magic possessions are providers of fertility and strength.

LAUTU Feather headdress of Peruvian Indians. Worn as a sign of royalty.

LAVA Faithfulness.

LAVAINÉ, SIR In Arthurian romance a knight who accompanies Sir Lancelot. Brother of Elaine, lily maid of Astolat. He is described as brave and true.

LAVENDER (1) January 9 birthday flower symbolizing acknowledgment, assiduity, distrust.

(2) The color and scent carry the following personality traits: dilettante, expert in social ways, grandiosity, lack of meticulousness, self-centeredness, showiness. See purple.

LAVÉR Vessel made of brass mirrors contributed by Hebrew women. It held water for the use of priests of Solomon's temple. The lavers symbolized clouds, the great celestial reservoirs.

LAVERNA Roman goddess who presided over thieves.

LAVERNE (LAVERNA) Feminine name, variant of Verna.

LA VEVE DAME In Grail legends wife of the Fisher King.

LAVINIA In Virgil's Aeneid daughter of Latinus. She was betrothed to Turnus, king of Rutuli, but when Aeneas landed in Italy, Latinus made an alliance with the Trojan hero and promised him his daughter in marriage. Turnus challenged Aeneas to settle the issue by single combat. In the duel Turnus was killed; Lavinia became the wife of Aeneas and, by him, ancestress of Romulus and Remus, legendary founders of Rome. This is a time myth, in which Aeneas, the light hero, defeated Turnus, lord of darkness. Lavinia, whose name represents the feminine form of Latium, personified earth's fertility.

LAW Symbolized by a black robe, book, bridle, court room, hedge or enclosure, mallet, prison, wig, yoke. Personified by a young woman draped, carrying books and a short rod, or by the goddesses Dice or Themis. In Buddhism called dharma, and in the East the law or rule of the universe is symbolized by an eight-spoked wheel. In China the jewel of the law is a disc bound with cords or ribbons. Roman jurisprudence was symbolized by the fasces. The word law is related to low, a burial mound.

In Ireland and Scotland a barrow (burial mound) is called law.

Broken law tablets. Injustice.
Lawyer. Dream significance: lawsuit, poverty.

LAWRENCE (LARRY, LAURENCE, LAURIE, LAWRIE)
Masculine name from the Latin, meaning crowned with laurel.

LAZARUS Literally, God will help. In New Testament brother of Martha and Mary, uncle of Jesus. After he had been dead four days, Jesus raised him from the grave by saying, "Lazarus come forth." Thus one who dies twice. As one risen from the realm of the dead, resembles Persephone. Also the name given by Jesus to the afflicted beggar in the parable of the rich man and the poor man.

Lazar. A beggar, leper, a poor man infected with a loathsome disease. From Lazarus.

Lazaret (lazaretto). A hospital for contagious diseases; a pest-house; a prison hospital.

Lazzarone. In Naples, Italy, a homeless person who lives by begging and odd jobs. Named from the hospital of Saint Lazarus, the lazzaroni place of refuge.

LEAD Firmness, ignorance, stubbornness, torture. Cloaks of lead were put on malefactors by Frederick II of Sicily as a form of torture. Used in destructive charms with curses written on them. In Asia metal used against demons and sorcerers; in Europe witches, wizards, and such were invulnerable to lead bullets, only silver was able to kill them. Among medieval alchemists metal of Saturn, presiding over death. Among Hebrews of antiquity symbolized preservation of records, and leaden tablets were used in recording events.

Leads of Venice. Cells in the attic of the Doges' palace in Venice, where political prisoners once were confined. Destroyed in 1797.

LEAF Blossoming and withering, life and death, nudity, loss of innocence, shame. A medicinal charm in poultices. Talisman against evil, especially the Canadian maple and Irish shamrock. Basis of the playing card spade design. Word identical with life and love. In China one of the Eight Ordinary Symbols. In Japan the front of the leaf is classified as masculine, the back as feminine.

Budding leaf. Birth, youth.
Green leaf. Nobility, sound judgment.

Leafless tree. Barrenness, sterility, winter.

Leaf skeleton. Beautiful in death.

Leaf withered (faded or dead). January 10 birthday flower. Symbol of depraved manners, sorrow, ruin, weak judgment. In the language of flowers: My love is ended. If in a room where a baby is christened, supposedly will cause the baby to fade away. Dream significance: serious illness.

LEAGUE In an Italian icon personified by two women in helmets embracing each other. Each holds a spear; on one is a crow, on the other a heron. Foxes are at their feet.

LEAH Literally, weary. In Old Testament elder daughter of Laban, first wife of Jacob, less beloved than her sister Rachel, the victim of the deceit her father imposed on Jacob. She was the mother of seven children, among whom were Reuben, Jacob's first born, and Judah, ancestor of the leading tribe among the Jews and of the royal line which included David and Jesus. She is a personification of the active life, whereas Rachel is a personification of the contemplative life.

LEANDER Literally, lion-man or courageous one. In Greek mythology lover of Hero. See Hero and Leander, ill-fated lovers.

LEANING TOWER OF PISA One of the seven wonders of the middle ages.

LEANNESS Poverty, remorse, want.

LEANTIO A cuckold. From the clerk in Thomas Middleton's play, a Game of Chess. He is married to a vain Venetian noblewoman, Bianca, who is seduced by the Duke of Florence.

LEAPING Ecstasy, exultation, release, wild excitement; in primitive societies, extreme grief.

Leap candle. A fecundity dance performed in Europe by young girls. A candlestick is set in the center of a room and they dance back and forth over it. An act of suggestive magic comparable to the use of the lingam in India.

Leap dance. In many parts of Europe, formerly performed to make crops grow high or protect the flocks. See kampos tanc. Leap dances over bonfires or embers were performed, especially on Walpurgis night, to dispel witches. The fire consumed the effigy of a witch. Leaps, accompanied by songs, were made also to ensure plentiful harvests, to procure a happy marriage within a year, or as a means of guarding against colic.

LEAR (LEIR) A victim of flattery, one with short-sighted judgment. In a tragedy by Shakespeare, king of Britain, son of Bladud. When eighty years of age he decides to relinquish the reins of government and divide his kingdom among his three daughters in proportion to their public declaration of love for him. He disinherits his youngest daughter, Cordelia, wife of the king of France, who speaks truthfully to him, and is made insane by the ingratitude of his two elder daughters, Goneril and Regan, between whom he divides the kingdom when they, with obvious insincerity, profess love for him. He is the mortal form of the Irish sea-god Ler and the Welsh sea-god Llŷr; Cordelia is the mortal form of Creudylad.

LEARNING In an Italian icon personified by a mature woman sitting with her arms open as if she would embrace something. She holds a scepter topped by a sun. An open book is on her lap. Rain drops fall from the sky.

LEATHER Material which supposedly scares demons away. Figuratively, lack of sympathy, stupidity, thrashing; also power of resistance, as he has a hide of leather. A soldier is so called by sailors because they once wore leather stocks.

Leather medal. An imaginary award for inferiority or stupidity; used satirically.

LEAVEN Fermented or sour dough, which Hebrews of antiquity kept from one baking to another, in order to lighten or raise new dough. It was forbidden during the seven days of Passover, in memory of the trials suffered in the wilderness, when they were obliged to eat unleavened bread. Their houses were cleaned from it before the feast began. God forbade either leaven or honey to be offered to him in his temple. Leaven, because of its pervading and transforming effects, is a term applied to anything that by exerting a silent but strong influence works a general change, as the leaven of perfidy.

LEBANON Literally, white. In Babylonian mythology forest of cedars, forest of death; abode of Humbaba.

LEBBAEUS A name of the apostle Jude; from the Greek meaning praise.

LEBERMEER In medieval German legend world of the dead; gathering place of ghosts, sorcerers, and witches.

LECANOMANCY Divination by the inspection of a bowl of water.

LECH Literally, flat stone. The crowning stone of a cromlech or similar sacred stone structure.

LECHERY Portrayed by a goat.

LEDA In Greek mythology daughter of Thestius, king of Aetolia, wife of Tyndareus, king of Sparta. Zeus, assuming the form of a swan, deceived her and, as a result of this amour, she produced two eggs; from one emerged Castor and Clytemnestra, from the other came Pollux and Helen. Her name, denoting the oblivion of night, equates with Lada, Latmos, Lethe, and Leto.

LEDING In Norse mythology the first chain which bound the Fenrir wolf and from which he broke free. Thus the expression, "I must get free from Leding." See Dromi, Gleipner.

LEE Masculine name, equivalent of the family name Lea, from the Celtic, meaning gentle being.

LEECH That which holds fast to whatever it attaches itself, a drinker of blood; thus one who absorbs or filches the wealth of others, one who gets all he can out of another. Formerly a common name for physician.

LEEK February 9 birthday flower symbolizing liveliness. National emblem of Wales; probably from the custom in which farmers contributed leek to the common repast which commemorated reciprocal assistance in ploughing.

LEES Dregs, hence the grosser part of anything. To drink to exhaustion. In Hebrew tradition to suffer God's wrath without mitigation or end.

Settle upon the lees. To become satisfied with attainment or state of affairs; cease to aspire. Wines that stand a long time on the sediment acquire a superior color and flavor; Hebrew symbol of superior blessings, also the luxuriousness that comes to nations that have long settled in carnal security.

LEFT The inferior or unlucky side, symbolizing age, decay, weakness. Dances to the moon for the purpose of causing damage or death are made counterclockwise or to the left. Thus the left-handed fire wheel or swastika adopted by the Nazis is a destructive or unlucky emblem. In augury birds seen on the left hand portend ill luck. In heraldry the sinister side. In cabalistic thought the feminine side, the side of severity; as it is the side in which the heart is located, understanding. See crown.

LEG Conveyor, energy, expedition, motion, stability, strength, support, victory. Ray of the sun. See triskelion. Dream significance: (aching) cares, sorrow; (cut off) sad news; (long) magnanimity; (muscular) audacity, firmness; (short and fat) cruelty, bad temper; (soft) impotence; (thin) timidity, weakness; (twisted or deformed) evilness, sordidness; (wooden) support lost. Occult significance: if unusually developed, corresponds to a desire for frequent change, love of excitement, stirring emotions. Zodiacal significance: anatomical denomination governed by Aquarius.

The meanings of gestures involving the leg or legs are: Footless - crime; in middle ages, the foot of a criminal was cut off. Knees drawn up - circumcision or a boy about to pass through the initiation rite which would make him a full-fledged member of a tribe. Starting left foot first - Attacks against drought demons and evil. In Greek antiquity to start with the left foot was regarded as unlucky. In Java the rice spirit is offended if one enters a rice store left foot first. Starting right foot first - a Moslem enters a house or mosque right foot first to show he enters in peace. See asanas, foot signs, gestures.

Legs crossed right over left. Customary posture in art of the middle ages of crusader, king, knight, knight templar, nobleman. Prayer by a dead man, as the position of Christ's legs on Calvary.

Leg stump. Aztec symbol of Mictlantecutli and of the North (North Pole or Polar Star).

Short legs. Typifies a sun or moon deity. Sometimes these deities are described as legless, but are said, when they sit, to have a noble presence. Gareth, Odysseus, and Shortshanks are heroes so described.

LEGER Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning people's spear.

LEGREE, SIMON Exemplification of brutality. From the cold-blooded villain in Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin, who is brutalized by slave-trading.

LEHI Literally, jaw-bone. A place in Judah where Samson slew a thousand Philistines with the jaw-bone of an ass and where, in answer to his prayer, a fountain sprang up to quench his thirst. He called the spring En-hakkore (fountain of him who prayed). Among Jews, Lehi represents a place where God answers the cry of his people.

LEHUA Tree symbolizing Hawaii.

LEI Garland symbolizing Hawaii.

LEIBETHRIADES In Greek mythology cave of the nymphs.

LEIB-OLMAI Lapp forest spirit. Alder-man honored that he might give luck in hunting. Protector of bears.

LEIFNER'S FLAMES In Norse mythology drink given to Hadding by Odin. It gave Hadding courage and strength beyond that of all other men.

LEIGH Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning wayside beauty. Also a variant of Lee.

LEI-KUNG Chinese thunder god. A hideous, beaked, blue-bodied, winged, half-human figure. Father of a large family of little thunderers. His wife is Tienmu (Lightning).

LEILA Feminine name from the Arabic, meaning dark as night.

LEILAH In Persian legend typifies feminine beauty, chastity, and fervent affection. Her love for Mejnoun compares with that of the bride for the bridegroom in The Song of Solomon or that of Psyche for Cupid.

LEIMONIADES (LIMONIADES) In Greek mythology nymphs of flowers and meadows.

LEIPTER In Norse mythology holy river by which men swore.

LELEX In Greek mythology first man and first king of Laconia. An autochthonous man; ancestor of Hyacinthus. In some accounts legendary Egyptian ancestor of the Leleges, an ancient race which once inhabited the islands of the Aegean Sea.

LEMMINIKAINEN In the Finnish epic Kalevala son of Ilmatar, brother of Ilmarinen and Wainamoinen. He is a wanderer and, while on his adventures, his body is hacked up. His mother rescues the pieces from the dark river Tuonela and, with Ilmarinen's magic rake and her own magic song, she induces a bee to bring from Jumala the honey salve that restores him to life. Personification of rays on water. Compare Absyrtus.

LEMNISCATE The figure eight; emblem of God.

LEMNOS Island of women warriors. In Greek mythology an island inhabited entirely by women except for one man. In a fit of jealousy the women had killed all the male population of the island with the exception of the aged father of their queen Hypsipyle and, as a result, had to become warriors to defend the island. Jason and his men rested on the island. An afterworld or realm into which the sun journeyed. See Hypsipyle.

LEMON January 11 birthday flower. Symbolic of discretion, pleasant thoughts, zest. Sometimes depicted as the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. A gullible person, one from whom anything is readily obtained, is called a lemon, in allusion to squeezing the juice from the fruit. An unpleasant or worthless person or thing is said to be a lemon; to be cheated is to be handed a lemon. A Buddhist non-tantric symbol called jambhara. In Christian art an attribute of Virgin Mary.

Lemon blossom. January 12 birthday flower symbolizing fidelity.

LEMPO Finnish love-deity. Identical with Hiisi, the devil, suggesting love frenzy. His female counterpart is Sukkamielli.

LEMUEL (LEM) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning created by God, devoted to God. In the Old Testament an author of Proverbs, which some suppose is an enigmatical name for Solomon.

LEMURES Roman spirits of those who died in sin, who had met a violent death, or whose friends had not paid proper funeral observances. They haunted previous abodes, appearing at night in hideous forms, alarming former relatives and friends and, on occasions, inflicting injuries to the living. To expel or propitiate them a festival called the Lemuralia or Lemuria was celebrated on the 9th to the 13th of May, when temples were closed. Probably the origin of ghosts and haunted houses. In singular form, Lemur. Also called Larve. Compare Lamyroi, Lares, Manes, Penates.

LEMURIA A lost land. A hypothetical continent thought by some to have existed long ago, now supposedly covered by the Indian Ocean. So called because it was believed to be the home of primates known as lemurs. Anciently believed to have been the home of the third root race of humanity, whose descendants became the Negro peoples; thus a birthplace of man. Compare Atlantis, Mu.

LENA Feminine name, diminutive of Helen.

LENAEA Athenian festival held at the winter solstice at which the death and rebirth of the harvest infant Dionysus was dramatized. Lenaea means festival of wild women, and in early presentations nine female representatives of Hera as moon goddess tore the child to pieces and ate him. Later a yearling kid was used as surrogate. In a Stone Age Lenaea cave painting a young exhausted Dionysus with huge genitals is surrounded by a crescent composed of nine women. The ages of the women increase clockwise, their faces representing phases of the moon. Dionysus is naked except for a pair of close-fitting boots, probably to protect the sacred heel. See under heel. On the back of a fleeing fawn the soul of the doomed Dionysus in the form of an imp escapes. The ceremonies were accompanied by dithyrams and choruses, from which sprang tragedy.

LENGTH Denotes fullness, quality, statistics, thought. Compare breadth.

LENNIE In John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men, a half-wit of great size possessing extraordinary strength. He is fond of small, soft things; because of his strength, he kills what he attempts to caress.

LENORE (1) Feminine name, same as Helen. (2) Heroine of Burger's ballad. Her dead lover carries her away on horseback and their nuptials are celebrated among specters in the graveyard.

LENT Annual spring season of fasting and penitence in preparation for Easter. Begins on Ash Wednesday and includes the forty weekdays following. In Roman Catholic Church known popularly as Clean Lent because of the preceding confession and absolution. In middle ages a period from Martinmas (November 11) to Christmas and known as Saint Martin's Lent. The word is from Old English meaning spring.

LEO (LEON, LIONEL) (1) Masculine name from the Greek through the Latin signifying lion. Like Pius, a conventional name assumed by popes. (2) The lion, fifth sign of the zodiac. The sun enters about July 23. In early astronomical era, sign in which the sun appeared at the summer solstice, therefore symbolizes destructive heat. Its color is dark-yellow, its element is fire; it is dry, hot, masculine; its quality is fortunate; it is ruled by the sun. Subjects born under this sign have a fair mind, firm will, unbending dignity, steadfast in love, and attain a position of honor and trust. It is the sign of spiritual beginnings in man and governs the heart. Its tarot significance is the Hierophant. Its sign typifies the sun, ruler of the sign, followed by a tail, phallic principles of reproduction or vital forces. According to legend it is the lion of the Nemean forest; in the middle ages it was said to be one of the lions to which Daniel had been thrown. Sign of the tribe of Judah. Corresponds to the Chinese zodiacal horse and the Peruvian puma in the act of leaping on a victim. (3) A constellation in the Northern Sky, formerly in the sign of Leo, now in the sign of Virgo. Also called Lion.

LEODOGRANCE OF CAMILIARD In Arthurian legend father of Guinevere. He once received from Uther Pendragon the famous Round Table around which 150 knights were able to sit. When Arthur became the husband of Guinevere, Leodogrance gave him the table and 100 knights (stars) as a wedding gift. Probably a later form of Bran, the fertility lord.

LEOFRIC (1) Name from the Teutonic, meaning beloved rule. (2) Eleventh century Earl of Mercia and Lord of Coventry. He prevented civil war in England by mediation. His wife was Godiva.

LEOFWINE Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning beloved friend.

LEO MINOR Constellation in the Northern Sky between the Great Bear and Leo also known as Lesser Lion.

LEON (LEO) Masculine name from the Greek through the Latin, meaning lion. Feminine form is Leonie.

LEONARD (LEN) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning lion-strong.

LEONESSE Same as Lyonnesse, which see.

LEONIDAS (1) Masculine name from the Greek, signifying lion-bold. (2) Spartan hero who resisted the Persians at Thermopylae with only three hundred men.

LEONORA (ELEANOR, LENORE, LEONARDO, LEONORE, NARDA, NORA) Feminine name, Italian form of Eleanor, from the Greek meaning light.

LEONTES Iranian men celebrants at the Mithras orgies at which a bull was sacrificed and eaten raw. Name meaning lions. Compare Hyaenae.

LEOPARD Bravery, night, swiftness, triumph. Also carnivorousness, ferocity, fraud, lust, one who strikes an unexpected blow, sin, stealth. Because of its eye-like spots, the Supreme Deity or Watcher. In some mythologies a devouring beast from whom the hero emerges regenerated, thus resurrection. Said to allure beasts, cattle, and men with the sweetness of its breath. In heraldry a hardy and valiant warrior who has engaged in hazardous enterprises. Early heralds confounded the lion with the leopard and the names merely designated the attitude of the beast. When rampant, he was a lion or leopard-lionne; in any other attitude, he was a leopard or a lion-leopard. Its name is formed from leo (lion) + pard (panther). In Africa totem of several tribes; messenger of witches, and the butt of smaller animals which by cunning outwit him. In China called pao. Represents Chi and is one of the four animals of power. Typifies martial ferocity. In Christianity typifies Antichrist, sin. In representations of the Adoration of the Magi, indicates the incarnation of Christ was necessary for redemption from sin. In Greece sacred to Dionysus. In the Old Testament symbolic of changeableness, cruelty, deceit, fleetness.

Four-winged leopard. The four winds. Typifies Alexander the Great.

Leopard blood. Bushmen drink it believing it gives courage and strength.

Leopard crouching. Jealousy. In Egyptian art an aspect of Osiris, the great watcher.

Leopard and goat. Steeds which draw the car of Dionysus, signifying destroyer accompanied by generator.

Leopard heart. Eaten by Bushmen to obtain courage and strength.

LEOPOLD Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning peopled, people's champion.

LEPER (LAZAR) In Old Testament judgment from God, moral corruption, uncleanness. In New Testament beggary.

LEPIDOLITE In the language of gems: I live in the present.

LEPREA Greek goddess of lepers.

LEPRECHAUN (LEPRACHAUN, LEPRECAWN, LEPRECHAWN, LEPRICAUNE, LUBRICAN) Irish dwarf or fairy who supposedly knows the secret of wealth, which he must reveal if captured, although his purse never contains more than a single shilling at a time. The cluricaune, Irish fairy shoemaker who always is seen working on a single shoe, sometimes is called leprechaun. Corresponds to German kobold and Scandinavian elf or troll.

LEPUS Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Hare, an animal which the great hunter Orion delighted to chase.

LER (LIR) Irish god of the sea, one of the Tuatha De Danann. By his first wife, Aebh, he had four children, Fionguala, a daughter, and three sons, Aed and the twins Conn and Fiachra. When his wife died, he married her sister Aeife. The jealous stepmother-aunt turned his children into swans. Ler was also the father of Manannan and the grandfather of Sinann. He is the equivalent of the Brythonic Llyr and the Greek Poseidon, and is said to have been one of the sources of Shakespeare's King Lear. The story of Ler and his wives resembles that of Athamas and his wives Nephele and Ino in Greek mythology.

LERNAEAN HYDRA In Greek mythology a nine-headed drought dragon hiding in the swamps of Lerna in Argolis; killed by Hercules as one of his twelve labors.

LEROY Masculine name from Old French, meaning the king.

LESBOS In Greek mythology great grandson of Aeolus. Eponymous ancestors and king of the people of the island of Lesbos, now known as Mitylene. Birthplace of the poets Alcaeus, Arion, Sappho, Terpander, and others of the so-called amatory school.

Lesbianism. A term applied to the sexual desire of women for women. The term now carries the meaning debauchery. Also called sapphism; an allusion to Sappho.

Lesbian kiss. A sensual kiss.

Lesbian rule. A rule used by ancient Greek masons. It was made of lead so as to bend in and around the curves of molding; hence, figuratively, a complaisant, flexible, or pliant principle of conduct.

LESCHÉ Literally, speak. Greek public meeting place for talk; generally a sheltered colonnade. Also a place in which beggars and travelers might pass the night. At Delphi the lesche was adorned with celebrated paintings.

LESHALOM (LESHOLOM)

Yiddish toast meaning to your welfare or peace.

LESIY (LESHY, LESIYE, LESOVIK) Russian spirit; master of the forest. In fields he is no taller than grass; in forests he is as tall as the trees. A personification of the wind. Identical with Miechts-hozjin.

LESLIE Masculine name from the Anglo Saxon, meaning a lessee. Feminine form is Lesley.

LESNI ZENKA Slavic sylvan spirit whose love is dangerous to mortals. Corresponds to Meschamaat.

LESSER CHARIOT Babylonian name for Little Bear.

LESSER DOG Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Canis Minor. Variousy described as Actaeon's hound; the dog loved by Diana; the faithful dog of Icarus.

LESSER LION Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Leo Minor.

LESTER Masculine name from the Anglo Saxon, meaning lustrous; also a variant of the English place name Leicester.

LETHE Literally, Oblivion. In Greek mythology: (1) Daughter of Eris (Strife). (2) One of the five rivers of Hades. Souls drank from it before passing into Elysium that they might forget all earthly sorrows. Opposed to Mnemosyne, the stream of memory. (3) A river in the Divine Forest in Purgatorio is supernaturally replenished by two fountains; the one which obliterates the memory of sin, Dante calls Lethe; the other he calls Eunoe.

Lethean dew. Dreamy forgetfulness.

LETITIA (LETTY) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning gladness, happiness.

LETO In Greek mythology personification of darkness. Daughter of the Titans Coeus and Phoebe. According to Hesiod the wife of Zeus before Hera. In later legend the mistress of Zeus, by him mother of Apollo and Artemis. Hera sent the serpent Python to torment her. To escape Hera's cruelty Leto, pregnant with her twin children of light, wandered in solitude and in dark places seeking a refuge, where she might be delivered. All lands rejected her until she reached Delos, which was a mere rock borne about by the waves, and which permitted her to stay only after she had promised that, with the birth of Apollo, its barren ground would become fertile and that worshipers from all parts of the world would honor the coming sun deity and bring fame and inexhaustible treasures to Delos. Zeus, in appreciation, fixed the bottom of the island to the sea, so that it was no longer tossed about. In one version, Zeus transformed Leto into a quail (migratory bird of resurrection) that she might elude the vigilance of Hera until she reached the island of Delos. After the birth of her children, she was forced once more to flee and left them in the care of Themis. Thus darkness (Leto) flees when the lights of the sun (Apollo) and the moon (Artemis) appear. She probably originally was a fertility and birth goddess; her wandering, symbolic of her advancing or retarding birth at will. Compare Io, Jingu. A title of Hera, Kourotrophos (rearer of youth), is sometimes applied to her. Her name signifying oblivion is akin to Lada, Latmos, Leda, Lethe. The Romans call her Latona.

Leto's children. Apollo and Artemis, the sun and moon. At dawn and at sunset at the vernal equinox, they are exactly balanced for an instant on opposite sides of the horizon.

LETTER Communication, news. Also betrayal, death. See letter of death. Dream significance: (anonymous) worries; (illegible) crooked business; (received) news coming; (sent) neglect of friendship; (torn) break. Anciently letters were in scroll form and were wrapped in an envelope, sometimes sealed in a bag of costly materials. To send an open letter expressed contempt.

Letter of death. Letter which contains the bearer's death warrant. Such betrayal letters were carried by Bellerophon, Mutalammis, Tarafah, and Uriah. The letter of Bellerophon instead of bringing about his death made him famous. This motif appears in a changed version in Hamlet. It brings death not to Hamlet, as intended, but to the bearers, Guildenstern and Rosencrantz. Ambition, desire, and jealousy are the most frequent causes of the betrayal letter. Compare offensive breath.

LETTUCE March 20 birthday flower, symbolic of cold-heartedness, temperance. Hebrew symbol of the coming spring, suggesting the perpetual renewal of life and ever sustaining hope of human redemption. Characteristic side dish of feasts, especially that of the Passover. Compare parsley.

LETUSHIM Hebrew name meaning oppressed.

LE-TWIN MINGALA Ploughing festival at Mandalay. Bamboo trellis works are erected during the feast, as these are believed to be efficacious against evil spirits. Compare Feast of Tabernacles.

LEUCADIA (LEUCAS) Literally, white. Island in the Ionian Sea with white chalk hills. Noted for its temple of Apollo, built on a promontory from which criminals were cast. Sappho is said to have leaped from this cliff because of her love for Phaon.

LEUCIPPUS In Greek mythology son of Oenomaus. He loved Daphne and in order to win her disguised himself as a maiden. He was discovered by Apollo and slain by the companions of Daphne. Like that of Achilles, his disguise probably indicates androgyny. See Androgynous deities.

LEUCOSIA A name meaning whiteness; one of the three sirens of Greek mythology; hence a dangerously alluring woman.

LEUCOTHEA (LEUCOTHEE, LEUCOTHOE, LEUKOTHEA) Literally, white-goddess. In Greek mythology: (1) the name of Ino after she became a sea-goddess, in which form she rescued Odysseus when his raft was torn apart by the waves. (2) Daughter of Orchamus, king of Babylon, the Eastern land. She was dishonored by Helios, and Orchamus buried her alive. Unable to restore her to life Helios sprinkled her grave with heavenly nectar and frankincense sprang from the spot. A sea nymph, her myth typifies the action of sun on water.

LEVANA Literally, to raise. Roman goddess who watched over new-born infants after the father had raised them from the ground.

LEVANDER Masculine name from Old French, meaning from the East or Levant, hence rising sun.

LEVANT AND PONENT WINDS East and west wind; levant, the east wind, is from the Latin lavare (to raise) and denotes sunrise; ponent, the west wind, is from ponere (to set) and denotes sunset.

LEVARCHAM Celtic prophetess. She was so swift she traversed Ireland in a day. Her feet, shins, and knees were reversed in her body, implying strength and swiftness. A wind spirit.

LEVEL One of the six jewels of Freemasonry. It represents the west, and is the instrument which serves as a reminder that man travels upon the level of time by which he is borne to the other world. Symbolic of equality. In Encampments of Knights Templars, surmounted by a cock, silver jewel of Captain General.

In Royal Arch chapters, surmounted by a crown and suspended in equilateral triangle, gold jewel of King. In Royal and Select Councils, with trowel enclosed within an equalateral triangle, silver jewel of the Illustrious Hiram of Tyre. In Symbolic Lodges, gold or silver jewel of Senior Warden.

LEVI Literally, adhesion, joining. (1) In Old Testament third son of Jacob by his wife Leah. Father of three sons and of Jochebed, the mother of Moses. Because he shared in the treacherous massacre of the Shechemites, Jacob foretold evil to his posterity, and the tribe of Levi was scattered all over Israel, having no share in the distribution of Canaan. When Levi and his sons repented Moses was charged by God to bless them, and the tribe of Levi was chosen to serve the priesthood and the temple. All first fruits, tithes, as well as parts of all sacrificial animals belonged to the tribe of Levi. Thus the name signifies joined to an altar. With the tribe of Simeon, ruler of the house of Gemin and symbolized by a sword and water pitcher. See Hebrew tribes. (2) In New Testament, a name for Matthew.

Levi, Isaac. In Reade's It Is Never Too Late to Mend, a kindly wise Jew.

Levite. (1) Generally understood to be a priest of the Levi family or tribe. Levites actually were those employed in lower services in the temple as distinguished from priests, who were of the race of Levi by Aaron. In the wilderness the Levites conveyed the tabernacle from place to place, each of three families having a separate portion. After the building of the temple they became guardians of the gates and the sacred vessels, arranged the singing and instrumental music, and prepared the show-bread and other offerings. (2) A hypocrite, in allusion to the conduct of the Levite in the parable of the Good Samaritan.

LEVIATHAN The giant aquatic animal in Scriptures. It returns each year to be killed anew, thus a spirit of a seasonal or vegetation myth. Originally male and female, dual with Behemoth, land monster. It is the great fish that bears the foundation of the earth, and, at the end of the world, the Messiah will catch it and divide it with Behemoth among the faithful as food. It remains unidentified, perhaps a huge crocodile or serpent. The name is applied to anything colossal, as a ship of unusual size, a whale, or to an enormous undertaking. The name means to cleave and to bend, whence the twisting or coiling of a serpent. Analogue of the Persian Khara.

LEVIR The ancient custom of marriage between a man and the widow of his brother. Required by Mosaic law when the first marriage had produced no male issue. Later the custom of chalitza (see) was introduced, and the levirate became the exception. A form of this tradition is still practiced among a number of peoples, including the Hindus.

LEWIS Masculine name; Anglicization of Louis. Akin to the Gaelic Llew, meaning light.

LEZA (REZA, REZHA) High god of Bantu tribes. Among the Anyanja a lightning or rain god; as creator deity called Lubumba. In Luyi legend first man.

LEZGINKA Caucasian wooing dance. Performed as a wild saber dance by a man alone or as a leaping whirling dance by a man around a passive woman.

LHA-K'A (KU-T'EM-BA) Tibetan sorcerer consulted for relief of pain.

LHA-MO-KAR-PO Tibetan Buddhist Glorious Goddess. In her train are the five Long-Life Goddesses and the twelve Jewel Goddesses. A defender deity, destroyer of non-believers, sender of diseases, and usually shown in fierce aspect. Only female deity among the defenders of the faith or Dharmapala. Also a manifestation of time, symbolized by the goddess of the four seasons emerging from her hair. In mild aspect called Ma-cig-dpal-Lhomo. Sanscrit name is Shri-devi.

LHASA (LASSA) Literally, seat of the gods. The forbidden city; sacred city of Lamaist Buddhists; capital of Tibet.

LHAYUL Celestial region on the Tibetan Buddhist Sipa Khorlo or Wheel of Life. Realm of contentment and happiness in the cycle of rebirths. Being on the way to Buddhahood, they possess knowledge concerning everlasting beauty, freedom from suffering, and longevity. If they fail to live meritoriously, ignorance gains the upper hand, they become confused, their beauty fades, they grow repulsive and are reborn in lower regions where they are miserable. The scene depicts Indra's palace, godly warriors, and branches of the Jambustri-shring, as here the fruits of the tree which has roots in Lamayin are enjoyed.

LI In Chinese mythology abstract right, cosmic law or order, divine intelligence. Equivalent to Huang Tien (Imperial Heaven), Shang Ti (Supreme Ruler), or Tien (Heaven). In the Pa Kua (Eight Diagrams) signifies fire.

LIA FAIL (FAL STONE) Irish stone of destiny. Stone which Jacob had supposedly used for a pillow. It was brought to Ireland from Palestine by the Milesians or Gaels and is still on Tara. As the Tara Stone it is the original coronation stone of Irish kings, and roars under every king who would conquer Ireland. In some accounts identified as the stone brought to Scotland where, as the Stone of Scone, it became the venerated stone on which Scotch kings were crowned.

LIAO Literally, a furnace. Chinese altar on which sacrifices were made to Shang-ti (Supreme Ruler).

LIAR Liars fall into different categories. The artistic liar lies cheerfully for the fun and satisfaction of invention. He may relate a lucky or wonderful fishing excursion or hunt, or he may have news that comes from a mysterious stranger, sent by a long lost friend; a means of shifting the burden of proof. He may report wondrous experiences in distant lands; travel making him immune to verification. The boastful liar is one who has pride in what he enjoys, the life prolonging climate of his home, the marvels of its soil and weather, the size of its buildings, flowers and fruits. This form is related to the Old World story motif of the great cabbage and the caldron that held it. The entertaining liar has stories of freaks, frightening critters, insect invasions. There is the prankster, and the liar who would teach the young the verities, whose tales usually involve a monster or mechanical contraption, as the buckskin harness in Bunyan's Rawhide Railroad. Liar clubs and contests are known over the world. Yarn spinners gather in barber shops, bunkhouses, crossroad stores, courthouses, post offices, taverns, etc., all symbolized by an actual or mythological liar's bench, akin to the proverbial cracker barrel.

Black lie. Malicious falsehood intended to harm another or profit oneself.

Father of lies. Satan.

White lie. Conventional lie uttered in the interests of courtesy, or to save the feelings of another.

LIAT MACA In Irish mythology the Gray of Macha, Cuchulainn's wonderful gray horse. It rose out of the Gray Loch of Sliab Fuait. With the Dub Sanglainn (Black Sanglain) given to Cuchulainn by Macha or possibly Morrighu, Cuchulainn tamed them both. Liat Maca got his death wound defending the hero in his last fight, and both horses went back to their respective lakes after his death. Day and night symbolism, in which the day sank with the sun.

LIBAN Irish goddess who sometimes appeared in the form of a bird. Sister of Fand; sister and wife of Labraid. Probably a wind spirit.

LIBBY Feminine name, diminutive of Elizabeth.

LIBER Ancient Italian god of fructification. Originally Jupiter Liber, designating the productive powers of Jupiter. When the two names were separated, Liber was identified with Bacchus and appointed protector of the vine. His wife was Libera, identified as Demeter or Kore. Their festival, the Liberalia, celebrated March 17, was to honor the first fruits of the vintage. Liber equates with labor; is Latin for free, whence liberty.

LIBERALITY In an Italian icon personified by a woman in a white veil with a square forehead on which an eagle is perched. She holds two cornucopias, one upside down from which jewels and precious items fall, the other filled with flowers and fruits.

LIBERTY Symbolized by bird, eagle, Liberty Bell, Phrygian cap, red. Personified by a youth wearing a Phrygian cap and accompanied by an eagle.

LIBITINA Ancient Italian goddess of earth. Later she presided over funerals. At one time identified with Venus, as Romans believed that the power of love extended even to realms of the dead, but later identified with Proserpine. Her temple contained all the requisites for a funeral, which were available for hire or purchase.

LIBRA (1) The Balance or Scales, seventh sign of the zodiac. The sun enters about September 23. Gate to the third of the Astrological Ages, period of slaying, typified by the chrysalis. Day and night weighed at this time would be found equal. Its color is yellow-green; its element is air; it is hot, moist, masculine; its quality is fortunati; it is ruled by the planet Venus. Subjects born under this sign are amorous, humane, intellectual, pleasure loving and also love lawsuits. It is the period of consciousness, in which the relation of self with not-self or outer world is contracted, and it governs the reins. Its sign typifies equilibrium. Its tarot significance is the Chariot. Also called Jugum, or the yoke of Balance. In early Chinese zodiacs called the Dragon. In Egypt pictured as two feathers. In Hindu mythology represented by an arrow touching an eye. (2) A constellation formerly in this sign but now in this sign of Scorpio.

LIBU Babylonian deity of ague.

LIBYA Ancient Greek earth or mother goddess. Daughter of Epaphus and Memphis. By Poseidon, mother of the twins Agenor and Belus. North Africa is called Libya after her. The Greeks applied the name to Africa in general.

LICHAS In Greek mythology attendant of Heracles who carried the poisoned tunic from Deianira. As punishment he was thrown into the sea. Probably a personification of cloud.

LICHEN Plant symbolizing dejection, refusal, solitude.

LI CH'UN Chinese movable feast marking the beginning of spring; corresponds to Easter.

LICINIA A Roman vestal virgin condemned for incest.

LICORICE, WILD In the language of flowers: I declare against you.

LIEBFRAUENMILCH Literally, Milk of our Lady, the Virgin Mary. Name of a Rhine wine probably once used for religious purposes.

LIEKKIO Literally, flaming one. Among the Finns the spirit of a child who had been killed. The liekkios rule over grass, roots, and trees, and are homeless, restless forest spirits which have been denied the opportunity of resting in a grave. They appear as elf lights or jack-o-lanterns. Compare apparas, patshak.

LIF In Norse mythology the golden-haired female survivor, who with her husband Lifthrasir created the new human race after Ragnarok. Lif and Lifthrasir survive the mighty frost at the Doom of the Gods by hiding in Hoddmimir's wood, where they also survive the destructive fires of Surt. Thus they survive winter and summer. Lif was created from an alder log; Lifthrasir from an ash log; their names mean Life and Desiring Life. Their reign was one of a golden age. Compare Embla.

LIFE (1) One of the gnostic Aeons. (2) Symbolized by an acorn, ankh, crux ansata, Demeter, goat, Greek cross, green color, lingam, swastika, tai-kih, tau cross, yoni. In Freemasonry human life is typified by the mosaic pavement of the lodge.

Game of life. Typified by a chess board.

Life and death. Typified by interlacings, spiral.

Life token. Widespread in African, Asiatic, and European belief is an animal, object, plant, etc., which in some way manifests that the person with whom it is associated is in danger or is dead. A brilliant gem or ring grows dull, a fruit changes color or rots, a garment turns black, a pot boils over, a shrub withers or dies, a stick or stone breaks, a sword or knife rusts or sweats blood, when its affinity is in peril. Thus the life of the hero or heroine is coexistent with the life token. In Brittany the fisherman's wife puts a candle at the altar; if it burns well, all goes well with him; if it flickers, he is in trouble; if it goes out, he is drowned. This is employed by families of aviators. Meleager's life was bound to a burning brand. Panj Phul was never without her necklace because it contained the core of her life.

In Ireland the token is called comsaogal (contemporaneous life). In Northern Nigeria a house snake is said to be born simultaneously with every human being.

Shortness of life. Represented by an hour glass.

Tree of life. See under tree.

Womb of life. Typified by a fig.

LIFTHRASIR (LIFTHRASER)

Literally, he who holds fast to life. With his wife Lif (see) he was concealed in Mimer's Hill, and together they survived Ragnarok. They were nourished by morning dew and from them came those who peopled the renewed earth. Compare Ask, Noah, Yima.

LIGEA (LIGEIA) A name meaning sweet-voiced or shrill. One of the sirens of Greek mythology, hence a dangerously alluring woman.

LIGHT (1) Name of one of the gnostic Aeons. (2) Beneficence, cheerfulness, life, glory, knowledge, past, prosperity, purity, revelation, sanctity, spiritual joy, summer, wisdom. It is effective against vampire spells, and in mythology typifies the masculine, good, or positive principle. Symbolized by candle, cross, diamond, flame, fleur-de-lys, lamp, lantern, radiating lines, star, sun, Urim. In Buddhism the upward path. In Christian tradition belief, charity, grace. The Bible is light bringer and Christ is called light of the world. In Maori mythology typifies Atea or Rangi, the primal father.

Altar lights. Celestial or heavenly lights.

Five rays of light. School of Pythagoras. Five bosses or knobs, symbolizing lights, are found on Celtic crosses.

Green light. Safety, pass.

Key of Light. According to gnostics the letter E.

Light-darkness myths. A folklore motif in which the sun, impregnator of the world, portrayed as a blond hero, is pitted against a brunette hero, bulls, dragons, serpents, or monsters which represent night or the dark days of winter.

Light hero. Among all races of the world the light hero has blond hair, blue eyes, and a gleaming face. He is abandoned at birth (exposed), cared for by wild beasts, grows miraculously, wears impenetrable mail (clouds), has weapons (rays) which never miss their mark, possesses dogs, herds, or other animals (air currents, brilliant lights), and travels in a horse-drawn (breeze-drawn) chariot or ship (sun vessel). He sacrifices comfort and ease to undertake difficult tasks for one meaner than himself in the interest of his native land (fertile aspect). This bright start is clouded by a change which shows him capricious, indolent, insane, malignant, sullen (scorching aspect). He loves maidens as radiant as himself (dawn, gloaming, moon, sparkling dew), and either forsakes or slays them and wanders off. When the hero is absent from the fight his companions or countrymen (agricultural kings, rays, etc.) are powerless. He usually is invulnerable except for one weakness, most often a spot on the body, which dooms him to an early death at the hands of night or the dark days of winter assisted by the earth or sea serpent. His death is preceded by glorious victory (sunburst at sunset or glorious autumnal colors). He is reborn. Thus he visits the underworld and returns (sets and rises).

Lighthouse. Danger, warning. Dream significance: good advice, protection.

Red light. Danger, warning.

White light. Safety, a signal, warning.

LIGHTNING Electricity, fecundation, glimpse of truth, inspiration, nutrition, phallus, swiftness, unlimited power. Also danger, destructive force, vengeance, wrath. Bringer of madness. Form of Hermes, Mercury, Nebo, and other divine messengers. Weapon of Baal, Enlil, Jove, Jupiter, Mero-dach, Zeus. As a deity weapon symbolized by an ax, branch, hammer, pitchfork, sword, trident, zig-zag line. These emblems also represent thunder. Dream significance: (to the left) family discord; (to the right) happy omen. In heraldry celerity, force. Among Altaic Tatars arrow of a mighty hero whose bow is the rainbow. Central American Indians' begetter of sickness (cough, rheumatism, etc.), destroyer. In China the dragon's tongue, fire of heaven. Because of its red color, it is believed to contain brilliance, heat, moisture, substance, and to possess curative qualities. In Chinese Buddhism Lightning God flashes so Thunder God may take accurate aim and kill the wicked. In Greek and other European mythologies lightning is the arrow capable of opening a mountain side (cloud mass) and displaying for an instant a wondrous display of gems and gold.

Lightning flash through clouds. Mythology.

LIGOAPUP In Micronesian mythology daughter of Luk. First woman, ancestress of the human race. Resembles Embla, Eve.

LIGOBUND Micronesian creation goddess. Fruits and plants grew at her mere command.

LI HUN In Chinese mythology one of the nine celebrated legendary heroes. Worshiped on account of his perseverance in correct observation of ceremony even at the cost of his life.

LIKHO Slavic evil one-eyed goddess. Personification of extreme malevolence.

LIKNON In Greek antiquity basket-shaped winnowing-fan used as a cradle and harvest receptacle. Symbolic of beneficence, fruitfulness, purification, rebirth. Emblem of Demeter and Dionysus. Carried at marriages as a fertility charm and as a symbol of spiritual grace.

Liknites. Epithet applied to Dionysus as an infant, i.e. child in the liknon or harvest basket. At Delphi he was worshiped as a resurrected child under this name.

Liknophoria. Ceremony of carrying the liknon. A fertility and purification rite; part of the Eleusinian ritual.

LIL Sumerian deity. Husbandson of Aruru, a virgin-goddess, signifying that he was the feeble or dying one, the yearly sacrificed and resurrected deity. After emasculation he was imprisoned in Arallu, from which he was restored to the world by magic ritual. In some texts his mother is named Ninhursag and his sister-wife Egime. An aspect of Enlil; also called Nesu. Lil is related to lilu, meaning decrepit, feeble; later signifying man. Analogue of Tammuz.

LILAC Emblem of the state of New Hampshire.

Field lilac. Forsaken, humility.

Purple lilac. July 25 birthday flower, symbolizing fastidiousness, first love. In the language of flowers: Do you still love me?

White lilac. July 24 birthday flower, symbolizing modesty, purity, youthful innocence.

LILIAN (LILLIAN, LILY) Feminine name, probably a diminutive of Elizabeth; also alludes to the lily flower.

LILINAU In American Indian legend a woman courted by a phantom; she followed his green plume through the forest and was seen no more. Thus the summer maid of fertility disappears with the green leaves. Longfellow mentions her in Evangeline.

LILITH (LILIS) Literally, night monster or screech owl. Old Testament nocturnal specter, spirit of the air, who assumed the form of a beautiful woman in order to beguile and destroy. She haunted desolate places in stormy weather and was especially dangerous to children and pregnant women. In Talmudic lore she was the wife of Adam before Eve. Rather than submit to him she left Paradise for the regions of the air. In Rabbinical literature of the middle ages she is described as a hairy spirit who roams about at night seducing men and slaying children, especially the newly born. In one legend, by Adam, she is the mother of all sheddim (demons). Her children, called lilim, are described as ass-haunched. In the cabala she is the archfiend of the Gamaliel. In Arabic legend her husband is the Devil, and she is the mother of the jinn. Occultists connect her with Nahema, and she is the bride (prepuce) of Samael, the serpent. Superstitious Jews put in rooms occupied by their wives four coins engraved with the names of Adam and Eve and the phrase, "Avaunt thee, Lilith." A beautiful but cruel woman is called Lilith. She is identical with the Sumerian Lilithu and, in owl form, the counterpart of Athena, Annis, and Blodeuwedd.

LILITHU (LILITU, LILLI)

Babylonian and Sumerian demoness who enticed men in their sleep. A nocturnal specter of the wind, the counterpart of the male Lilu, she passed into Hebrew mythology as Lilith. Also known as Ardat Lili, which means belonging to night.

LILIUM Flower emblem of Virgin Mary, lily of the Annunciation.

LILLIPUT In Swift's Gulliver's Travels a fictitious kingdom inhabited by a race of pygmies six inches tall, to whom Lemuel Gulliver seemed a giant. Satirizes the life and manners of England under George I.

LILU (LILA, LILLU) Babylonian wind demon. A lascivious night specter, he caused death, disease, and pestilence, and attacked women in their sleep. He evolved from the Sumerian Lil, and was a counterpart of the female Lilithu.

LILY (1) Feminine name, diminutive of Lilian, also signifies the flower. (2) Bashfulness, beauty, celestial beatitude, chastity, divine nuptials, eternal love, grace, heavenly bliss, queenliness, showiness, sinlessness. Heraldic emblem of purity. In China symbolizes short-lived beauty which fades at night. Believed to be favorable in child-birth and worn by women in the hope that a son may be born. As an antidote for sorrow called, 'forget-grief herb.' In Christian art takes precedence over all flowers. Easter flower and flower of the age of the spirit to come, when men will live in the plentitude of love. Typifies announcement, good works, innocence, the joyful mysteries of the rosary. Attribute of Christ and of Virgin Mary, and of saints Anthony of Padua, Catherine of Siena, Clara, Isabella, Kenelm, Nicholas of Tolentino, and Othilia. The staff of Saint Joseph blossomed with lilies to indicate that his wife Mary was a virgin. Emblem of Upper Egypt. Badge of the city of Florence, which is called the city of lilies. Emblem of France (fleur-de-lys). In Greek mythology formed the couch of Zeus and Hera. In Hebrew tradition attribute of the archangel Gabriel; emblem of the tribe of Judah. Symbolic of trust in God. The lily sprang from the repentant tears of Eve as she went forth from Eden. The lotus may have been the flower called lily in the Old Testament. In cabalism symbolizes resurrection.

Cala lily. February 28 birthday flower symbolic of purity.

Day lily. Coquetry.

Field lily. November 13 birthday flower signifying humility.

Imperial lily. January 13 birthday flower signifying majesty.

Lily and dove. Western symbol for annunciation. Corresponds to the lotus and white swan of the East.

Lily-of-the-valley. September 7 birthday flower symbolic of humility, purity, return of happiness, sweetness. Herald of spring. An attribute of Virgin Mary typifying the advent of Christ. A name variant of Virgin Mary taken from the Song of Solomon where it is an epithet of Shulamite, the bride. Emblem of Israel. In Korea typifies temple bells.

Lily, persimmon, and orange. In China carries the message: Bringing the wishes of great luck in everything.

Pink lily. In Korea resurrection flower.

Purple lily. In Christian tradition chastity, humble souls.

Red lily. Christian symbol of divine love.

Reed, lily, and oak leaf. In Christian and Japanese tradition, man's weakness (reed), transformed through resurrection (lily) into strength (oak leaf).

Sego lily. Emblem of the state of Utah.

Tiger lily. Pride, wealth.

Water lily. May 23 birthday flower, symbolic of eloquence, purity rising out of mire. Same as lotus.

White lily. Heavenly bliss, integrity, majesty, purity, sweetness, virginity. Dedicated to Hera and to Virgin Mary.

Yellow (gold) lily. November 14 birthday flower, signifying coquetry, falsehood, playful beauty. In Christian art divine light.

LIMB Celestial deity or a ray of light. In Chinese mythology the four limbs and five extremities of P'an Ku become the four quarters of the globe and the five sacred mountains.

Limb, fore or arm. Indicator. According to the mystics if undeveloped, denotes weakness in intellectual performance; if well developed, denotes strength in intellectual performance.

Limb, hind or leg. Conveyor. According to the mystics, if undeveloped, corresponds to a desire for frequent change, love of excitement, stirring emotions.

Limbless body. In Indonesian cosmogonic tales born from chaos egg in the primordial sea. By will alone it becomes the parent of a man and a woman who in turn become the ancestors of the human race.

LIMBO (LIMBUS) Literally, border, edge, fringe. In Roman Catholic theology the indefinite region which borders on Heaven or Hell according to the class of souls there detained. By extension a real or imaginary place to which persons or things are relegated when cast aside, forgotten, or out-of-date.

Limbo of Fathers. Limbo near Heaven where the patriarchs and prophets, pre-Christian saints, reside until Judgment Day. Some hold this is the Hell into which Christ descended after He gave up the ghost on the cross. In Latin called Limbus Patrum. Shakespeare uses for prison.

Limbo of Fools. A fool's paradise, a state of contentment that rests on a fanciful foundation. In Christian belief idiots are not responsible for their deeds and therefore are not to be punished in Purgatory. In Latin, Limbus Fatuorum.

Limbo of Infants. Resting place of the departed souls of unbaptized children. In Latin, Limbus Puerorum.

Limbo of the Moon. Ariosto in Orlando Furioso says that in the Moon are stored counsel disregarded, court services, death bed alms, desires that lead nowhere, flattery, precious time misspent in play, promises of men in high places, vain efforts, vanity of titles, vows never met.

LIME Conjugal love, fidelity. In Japan called bodaiju and revered by diabetics, as it is believed to have the power to cure the disease.

LIMNIADES Greek nymphs of lakes and marshes.

LIMONIADES Greek meadow nymphs. Resemble the naiades. In art usually portrayed as dancing hand in hand in a circle.

LIMOS Greek personification of Famine. Descendant of Eris.

LIN Chinese unicorn. The spiritual beast. Said to be twelve feet in height and of five colors (colors of the four directions and center of the universe). Its horn is an emblem of light (goodness). It appears when a sage is born. It is the Messiah to come, a revealer of divine and supernatural mysteries and a great lover of mankind.

LINCHEN November 12 birthday flower, symbol of sadness.

LINCOLN Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning from the pool.

Abraham Lincoln. One who rose from poverty, life in a log cabin, to become the sixteenth president of the United States, one who with little schooling became a noted lecturer and wit. Great emancipator.

Lincoln's Inn. See Inns of Court.

LINDA Feminine name, diminutive for names ending in 'inda,' as Belinda.

LINDABRIDES A courtesan, a loose woman, from the heroine of The Mirror of Knighthood, one of the Spanish romances in the library of Don Quixote.

LINDEN February 7 birthday flower. Symbolic of conjugal love, gentleness, hospitality, modesty, pliancy, sweetness. Inasmuch as it separates into several stems at the ground, symbolic of a capacity for several simultaneous lines of thought. The Greek dryades or wood nymphs were wedded to the linden tree. In Roman antiquity garlands were tied with a bark of linden and worn at feasts to prevent intoxication.

LINE Division, infinity.

Cross-hatched line. In Japan signifies harmonious or rhythmic relations between persons.

Curved line. Beauty, creation, formation. A double curve bending in two directions suggests a forward, restless drive. In India a form of ankusa (elephant goad). Emblem of Iccha-sakti pregnant with desire for manifestation. Movement which leads from the pure transcendent being to the embodiment in matter.

Dancette line. In heraldry a deeply indented line symbolic of fire or fortress parapet.

Dot over a line. American Indian hieroglyph for above.

Dot under a line. American hieroglyph for below.

Embattled line. In heraldry embattlement, fire, fortress, town.

Engrailed line. In heraldry denotes earth, land.

Indented line. In heraldry a serrated border line, toothed like a saw; denotes fire.

Invected line. In heraldry denotes earth, land.

Mound on a line. American Indian hieroglyph for death.

Parallel lines. Harmony.

Quivering line. Fire

Ragulee (raguly) line. In heraldry difficulties encountered.

Spiral curve. Infinity.

Straight line. Infinity. In China the yang; strength. In India represents Jnana-sakti, direct perception of pure consciousness.

Straight line, broken. In China, the yin (female principle) produced when the yang (male principle) moved. Weakness.

Two lines on either side of a point within a circle. In Freemasonry represents Moses and Solomon or Saint John the Baptist and Saint John the Evangelist.

Two semi-circles below a line, joined to it. American Indian hieroglyph meaning welcome.

Wavy line. Hieroglyph of several nations for water or the waves of the sea. Sometimes it terminated in the head of a snake. Also typifies pure effluence from the everlasting light. Among Christians of the middle ages it symbolized the regenerative sacrament, representing spiritual cleansing and rebirth. See barry wave of six.

Wavy line and eyes. Weeping.

LINEN Purity, virtuous women; whereas silk stands for loose women. Dream significance: (changed) a visit; (clean) legacy; (soiled) death, illness; (washed) difficulty, disorder; (white) happiness, marriage; (worn out) ruin.

LING See Ssu ling.

LINGAM (LINGA) Sanscrit deity emblem. The active regenerating power in nature, the sun; the male principle, stem of life. In Buddhism symbolic triangle containing mantras; used in horoscope divination; also in services against evil spirits. Worshiped in India as the herm was in ancient Greece. Village girls, anxious for husbands, rubbed themselves against the emblem entreating the deity to make them fruitful mothers. Among Arabs and Hebrews of antiquity member on which oaths were sworn. Parallels Chinese Yang, English phallus, Japanese yo.

Lingam-yoni (lingyoni). Male and female principles; union of positive and negative forces. Parallels the caduceus of ancient Greece and Rome and the crux ansata of Egypt.

LING-KUAN (WANG) Chinese porter and doorkeeper of the celestial palace of the Jade Emperor. He slays the guilty.

LING PAO (TAO CHUN) Second of the Chinese Taoist trinity (San Ch'ing), the others being Shen Pao (Lao Tzu) and T'ien Pao (Yu Huang). Sovereign of the superior heaven. Warrior of the Shang dynasty deified. He is said to control the Yang and the Yin. Represented as wearing a richly brocaded red garment and riding a lin.

LINK Bondage, marriage, unity. The influence which binds minds of similar taste into kinship, that which hitches earth and heaven; the mystic tie, spirit. See chain.

LINSEY-WOOLSEY A coarse cloth emblematic of that which is ill-assorted, malice, nonsense.

LINUS (LINOS) In Greek mythology son of Apollo and the Argive princess Psamathe. Exposed by his mother, who feared her father, he was found and raised by a herdsman who tended lambs, but the king's dogs located him and tore him to pieces. Angered by his son's death, Apollo sent the monster Poiné (Punishment) to tear children from the wombs of women of Argos. When the people killed the monster Apollo sent a plague. The Arnis, festival of lambs at which dogs were slain at the time of the constellation Sirius, was held in his honor, signifying the tender beauty of spring destroyed by summer. In another legend he is the son of Apollo and Calliope, and personifies the dirge-like sound of the wind. He becomes the music teacher of Heracles who, when Linus corrects him with blows, kills his teacher. In a third account Amphimarus and Urania are his parents. He presumed to enter into a musical contest with Apollo, and for his temerity the god destroyed him. The Linus song, which honored him, was a lamentation which probably was sung at the harvest to express regret for the passing of summer.

LŪOA A Solomon Islands ghost of a deceased chief of the reigning house or of a warrior. A ghost of power. The ghost of an ordinary person is called akalo. Both are called upon for success and for aid to the sick. These ghosts, when incarnate in gropers, sharks, or swordfish, are known as pa'ewa.

LION (LEO) (1) Fifth sign of the zodiac. A constellation in the Northern Sky. See Leo. (2) King of beasts, symbolic of action, agility, authority, beastliness, divine strength, ferocity, fever, fire, haughtiness, light of the sun, majesty, mind, nobility, power, pride, reason, righteousness, spirit of life, strength of soul, stealth, summer, superhuman and subhuman (divine and animal) forces, sun's heat, triumph, valor, vigilance. On talismans a symbol of health. Dream significance: powerful adversary. In heraldry deathless courage, a soldier's emblem. In the occult sciences stands for calmness, firmness, generosity, greatness, prudence. In art a conventional solar face because of its flaming eyes, the remarkable size of its head, and the tawny, yellow mane, which are like rays. The lion is a form of Aker, Atalanta and Hippomenes, and an attribute of Artemis of Ephesus, Cybele, Hecate, Ops, Rhea, thus typifies the earth's fertility. A face half goat, half lion, represents Pan, Mon, or Tum. Its double nature typifies love and destruction, good and evil, mild benevolence and violent preying. Figuratively a lion is a man of conspicuous courage. Any object, person or sight much sought by society or the general public, thus the famous, powerful, and rich sought by the lion-hunter, a use said to be derived from the lions which formerly adorned the Tower of London.

In African lore, like the elephant, the butt of smaller animals, which by cunning outwit him. The Babylonian and Sumerian chaos demons Ugallu and Uridimmu were lions. The steed or throne of the earth goddess was a lion, whereas that of the rain and thunder god was a bull, and that of the sun god was a horse. Later, as steed of Nergal, god of the scorching sun, the lion became a symbol of war. In Buddhism called simha. Mount of Avalokitesvara, Maitreya, Manjusri, Simhanada, Vairocana. In China called shih, it is one of the four animals symbolic of power. Revered as the dog of Fo, guardian of temple gates, and protector of crops. Early Christian symbol of the Devil, later symbolized contemplation, a hermit, solitude. Emblem of Christ, inasmuch as (1) the lion covers its tracks by means of its tail, and Jesus covered his heavenly tracks when he came to earth; (2) it presumably sleeps with its eyes open, and Jesus is ever-seeing; (3) the young supposedly born in a state of stupor come to life after three days by the breath of its sire, and Jesus rose from the dead in the same period. An emblem of Saint Mark because he represented the dignity and power of Christ, and of saints Adrian, Euphemia, Ignatius, Jerome, Joel, Prisca, William the Lion. At the feet of crusaders or martyrs signifies that they died for their magnanimity. In Egyptian antiquity an emblem of Sef (Yesterday) and Tuau (Today). The south wind sometimes portrayed as a four-headed lion, usually winged. Emblem of England, shown as golden passant gardant on a field of gules. Ancient Greek water symbol which appeared on fountains. Heracles wore the skin of the Nemean lion, and the personification of terror was arrayed in a lionskin. One of its Hebrew names is ari, also meaning fire, Ariel being fire or lion of God; another of its names is iblia signifying heart, soul, or lbe, signifying flame, heart. Emblem of the tribe of Judah symbolizing sovereignty. Its head represents care and vigilance; its hinder parts represent strength. In Japanese art companion of the peony. With the sun the national emblem of Persia, indicating that power abides in the sun. In Rome the male represented majesty, the female protection. When an emblem of Scotland, crimson rampant on a field of or.

Aged lion. Emblem of Saint Jerome typifying gratitude. According to tradition the saint removed a thorn from the paw of the beast.

Ass in a lion's skin. A coward who pretends to be brave. The allusion is to the fable of the ass who dons a lion's skin, but is recognized when he brays.

Hawk-headed lion. Power and might of the sun.

Lion-dog. The Pekingese. In China sign of energy and valor.

Lioness. Maternity, sexual desire. An aspect of the Sphinx. Lion-headed eagle. Spring god of fertility and war.

Lion head and shoulders. Force, vigilance.

Lion head with sun disc and asp. Emblem of Tefnut, Egyptian goddess of rain.

Lion heart. Giver of courage and strength; eaten by primitive tribes.

Lion in the path. A danger or fancied danger ahead.

Lion and lamb together. Peace. Also with dove above.

Lion laughing. Principle of good. In Chinese legend a royal princess curled the long mane of her pet lion and then led him to a lake where he saw his reflection in the water and on beholding his beauty he burst into laughter.

Lion of Judah. The lion of the tribe of Judah signifies Jesus Christ, who had sprung from the tribe, and as such it is a symbol of the Logos, Mind, Reason, the Word.

Lion of Saint Mark. A winged lion sejant holding an open book of the Gospels of Saint Mark. Emblem of the city of Venice.

Lion position. On the right side facing south, presumably the position of a lion in sleep; position given to Buddha in death.

Lion pulpit supports. Guardianship.

Lion raging. Principle of evil. Overcome by Mithras.

Lion recumbent. Egyptian hieroglyph for letter L.

Lion roaring. In Buddhism mount of Kubera, Simhanadamanjusri, Simhanadavolokitesvara, Tara.

Lion's blood. Giver of courage and strength; drunk by primitive tribes.

Lion's den. Otherworld, place of danger. See Daniel.

Lion seated. Courage.

Lion skin. Courage, strength of mind. Emblem of Heracles.

Lion's mouth. Otherworld, place of danger. Same as lion's den.

Lion's paw grip. In Freemasonry the grip which supposedly raised to life the spirit in man, long buried in material existence. It entitled the builder or mason to become a master mason. In Egyptian Mysteries the priest who offered the lion's paw grip wore the mask of the lion.

Lion's share. All or most. In allusion to the lion in Aesop's Fable who, while hunting with three other beasts, in the division of the spoils claimed all four quarters.

Lion supporting a column. In Christian art Satan or animal nature subjugated to the service of the church.

Lion throne. Buddhist sacred throne called Simhasana, seat of Maitreya.

Pair of lions. Protection, watchfulness; guardians of doorways, gates, temples, trees of life or sacred trees. In ancient Egypt guardians of the gates of morning and evening, strength and intellect. In Japan, dogs of Foo, placed east and west to symbolize yo and in.

Winged lion. On Babylonian steles a form of the chaos or storm monster. Sometimes with the head of an eagle. Compare Mushussu, scorpion-man. In Christian art Saint Mark and an emblem of the city of Venice.

Winged lion belching flames. In Sumerian art steed of the sun god who battles the chaos or storm monsters.

LIONEL Masculine name from Old French, meaning a young lion.

LI PO (LI TAI-PEH, LI T'AI-PO)

One of the greatest of Chinese poets. He lived in the 8th century A.D. and led a dissipated life at court and in exile. He was nicknamed Banished Angel and roamed the roads as one of the eight hard-drinking boon companions, the Eight Immortals of the Wine Cup. In legend he drowned when, from a boat, he tried to embrace the moon reflected in the water.

LIPS Desire for knowledge, word of God. In art typifies the wind, especially the southwest wind. Dream significance: frankness, security.

The six uses of the lips in the Hindu Lasya and Thandava dances are: 1- Kampana - trembling lips. Depicts anger, cold, fear, victory. 2- Samdasta - biting the lips. Depicts rage. 3- Samudgaka - round lips. Depicts thinking. 4- Vikaratana - drooping lips. Depicts envy, uneasiness. 5- Vinighana - folding in lips. Depicts difficulty. 6- Visarga - protruding lips. Depicts charm, irrelevance, kissing.

Curled lips. Sneer.

Firm lips. Energy.

Fleshy lips. Passion, sensuality.

Thick lips. Voluptuousness, vulgarity.

Thin lips. Cruelty, peevishness.

Tight lips. Coolness, order.

LIQUIDAMBAR Affability. The name of this tree is derived from its amber-like sap, used in the manufacture of medicine and perfume.

LIR See Ler.

LISA (1) Diminutive of Elizabeth. (2) Male aspect of the Dahomean androgynous deity Maw-Lisa. In native belief Lisa is identified with the sun; Mawa is identified with the moon. In missionary writings Lisa is equated with Jesus Christ. See Androgynous deities.

LITAE (LITAI) Prayers, abstract Greek divinity of social institutions.

LI T'IEH-KUAI One of the eight Chinese Immortals (Pa Kung). From the sage Lao Tzu Li, an ascetic and magician, he learned the vanity of all earthly things. While he was on a visit to Lao Tzu in heaven, his disciple cremated his body. Left without an abode, he entered the body of a lame beggar, who had just died, and accepted it as his astral body. To support himself in this form, he used an iron staff and thus came to be called Li T'ieh-kuai or Li of the Iron Crutch. He aided the needy and poor, especially in matters of health. From his bottle-gourd clouds of vapor rise, denoting his power to free his spirit from his body. Sometimes he stands on a crab or beside a deer.

LITTLE Little bear. Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Ursa Minor, which see.

Little Birar Rose. English name for Sleeping Beauty, folk form of Brynhild.

Little Endians. One who disputes over trifles. From the members of the political party in Lilliput in Swift's Gulliver's Travels, who maintained that eggs should be broken at the little end; opposed to Big Endians. The Big Endians represented the Catholics, the Little Endians the Protestants.

Little Fox. A constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Fox with the Goose and as Vulpecula.

Little gentleman in velvet.

Nickname of the mole which was a favorite in toasts during the reign of Queen Anne. A mole supposedly raised a hill against which the horse of William III stumbled, causing the death of the king.

Little Gude. Scottish for the Devil.

Little Horse. Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Equuleus and as Lesser Horse.

Little John. One of Robin Hood's lieutenants, noted for his skill with the bow. Traveled at his leader's right, thus western rays, evening or winter sun, or evening breeze. Also known as Jenkin.

Little Lord Fauntleroy. Effeminacy; a spoiled boy. From the beautiful seven year old boy who appears as the hero of Frances Hodgson Burnett's novel of the same name. Also the type of clothes worn by the boy.

Little Nell. In Dickens' Old Curiosity Shop a child who retains her purity of character although among those who are foul and filled with vice.

Little Orphant Annie. Heroine of a dialect poem by James Whitcomb Riley. Orphant Annie relates hair-raising stories about goblins and eventually is carried off by one. She inspired a comic strip known as Little Orphan Annie.

Little Pedlington. An imaginary village in John Poole's story of the same name. A place of cant and humbug.

Little people. Diminutive spirits of the fields, forests, rivers, and wild, including the dwarf, fairy, gnome, goblin, kobold, leprechaun, and others which, in origin, are animistic. They are tricky, sometimes malevolent, most often helpful to mankind if approached at night. They are amoral and unreliable and like to kidnap human babies, but react well to kindness.

Little Red Ridinghood. Fairy tale heroine. She is a little girl in a red cloak who, on her way to visit her sick grandmother, meets a wolf. He learns her destination, runs before her, devours her grandmother and, when Red Ridinghood, mistaking him for her grandmother, climbs into bed next to him, he devours her. In the German version a hunter kills the wolf, slits it open, and restores Red Ridinghood and her grandmother to life. This nursery tale echoes the mythological story of Helge 3, which see.

Little Vehicle. In Buddhism the Hinayana.

LITUR (LIT, LITER, LITR)
In Norse mythology a dwarf who at the funeral of Balder ran before Thor who kicked him onto the funeral pyre.

LITUUS A twisted wand used by augurs for purposes of divination. Something like a bishop's crosier. In art frequently depicted in the form of a spiral.

LITYERSES In Greek mythology son of Midas. He challenged wayfarers to reaping contests. On achieving victory he scourged them and cut off their heads, which he bound into his grain-sheaves. He was finally defeated by Heracles, who threw his body into a river. The scourging is an allusion to the primitive practice of whipping laggard mowers to insure successful reaping on the following day. The disposal of the body of the prince in a river seems to be a fanciful portrayal of a magic rite to produce dew.

LIU In Chinese zodiac the Willow; eight stars, Delta, Epsilon, Eta, Omega, Rho, Sigma, Theta, and Zeta, in Hydra, southern quadrant, summer season. Represented by the muntjak; element earth. Lucky period for herds and flocks.

LIU-HAI In Chinese mythology immortal harbinger of wealth. Portrayed as a boy swinging a string of gold cash over his head with a large three-footed money-distributing toad biting into the string.

LIU PEI Chinese god of basket-makers and straw-shoe-sellers.

LIU TSUNG In Chinese mythology the Six Honored Ones, spirits of heaven, earth, and the four directions, the sun, moon, stars, air, rivers, and sea. Masters of rain and wind; arbiters of cosmic space and fate.

LIVE-EVERLASTING August 26 birthday flower, symbolic of continued happiness.

LIVE OAK Liberty.

LIVER Among primitive peoples believed to be the seat of courage, desire, intelligence, love, soul; also of the natural virtues. Animal liver was eaten in the belief that the god of which the animal was the living representative was being eaten. The liver and heart of a slain enemy were eaten by victors to acquire the strength of the foe and prevent him from rising from the dead. Dissected for purposes of divination. See lungs.

LIVERWORT January 29 birthday flower, symbolic of confidence, constancy.

LIVING BUDDHA Dalai Lama, Grand Lama. God-king of Tibet; chief pontiff and government ruler of Tibet.

LIVINGSTON Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from Leif's place.

LIVING WATERS Fairytale name for source of water capable of miraculous healing. A Fountain or Stream of Life.

LIWA One of a class of water-dwelling evil spirits of Honduras and Nicaraguan Indians.

LIZARD (1) Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Lacerta. (2) Good will, health, military art, piety, regeneration, security, spring. Talisman against weak eyesight. The lizard supposedly conceives through the ear and brings forth its young through the mouth, hence generation of the word, i.e. Logos or Divine Wisdom. Dream significance: distrust. Attribute of Athena, Minerva, Virgin Mary. Emblem of the state of Alabama. In African mythology the embodiment of departed souls. In Christian tradition illuminating influence of the gospel, alluding to the belief that in old age it loses its sight, creeps into a crevice of a wall looking toward the East, and has its sight restored by the sun. In Egyptian antiquity symbolized fecundity, devouring heat. Compare crocodile. In Japanese legend revengeful spirit with supernatural powers. In Mazdaism animal created by Angra Mainyu to destroy the Gaokerena. Worshipped by the Slavs.

Lizard drawing car. Hermes, Mercury.

LJOD In Norse mythology daughter of the frost giant Hrimnir. Angerboda in her form as maid-servant to Freyja. The East Wind. When Rerir prayed for a child, Freyja sent Ljod in the form of a crow to earth with an apple, which made Rerir's wife fertile. Rerir died before the child, which his wife carried for seven years, was born. The child was Volsung. In time Volsung married Ljod and they became the parents of Sigmund and Signy.

LJOSALFAHEIM One of the nine worlds of Norse mythology; home of the ljosalfar.

LJOSALFAR Norse light elves. Fairer than the sun, they inhabited light places and the sky. Compare Alfar.

LLACHEU In Brythonic legend son of Arthur. One of the three men to whom the nature of every object was known. The other two were Gwalchmai and Riwallawn Walth Banhadlen. Llacheu was murdered by Kay. May have personified dew.

LLAGDIGUA Among Paraguayan Indians tree which the dead climb to reach heaven.

LLAMA Beast of burden typifying sure-footedness, trustworthiness.

LLAN Circle for Druidic worship.

LLEU Masculine Gaelic name meaning light. Usually said to be a form of Llew and Lugh.

LLEVELYS In British mythology son of Beli; brother and adviser to Ludd, which see. King of France, a man of great counsel and wisdom. Legendary kings are understood to be agricultural or earth deities.

LLEW Masculine Gaelic name meaning lion, also light. Generally interpreted as identical with Lleu. Some scholars hold Llew does not imply lion as Llew does.

LLEWELLYN (1) Welsh masculine name meaning lightning. (2) Thirteenth century leader of North Wales. Prince who was crowned king after his death. After his defeat by the English, his head was brought to London, exhibited on Tower Hill, and crowned with an ivy wreath in mock allusion to the Welsh prophecy he should be crowned there.

LLEW (LLEU) LLAWGYFFES Literally, Lion with the Steady Hand. Cymric solar deity; also a corn divinity. Son of Gwydion and Arianrhod, twin of Dylan. Nephew of Govannan, the smith. Arianrhod aspired to be the foot-holder of Math, but carrying the twins, she failed to pass the test of virginity required. For this reason she resented her twin sons and dropped Dylan into the sea, where he became a water god. Gwydion saved Llew, whose growth from infancy, like that of all sun deities, was marvelous. Arianrhod placed the curse of namelessness on her son. Gwydion tricked her into calling him Llew Llaw. Infuriated, she placed other curses on him, saying he should never bear arms until she gave them to him, and he must never marry a woman of the people of the earth. Again Gwydion tricked her, and she gave her son arms. Then Gwydion and Math made him a wife out of the blossoms of broom, meadow sweet, and oak, called Blodeuwedd. Although a great beauty Blodeuwedd was without a soul, and she wormed out of her husband the secret of his vulnerability. He could be injured only when he stood on one foot on a caldron (earth) and one on a buck (fertility) with his hair tied to an oak branch (sky). Thus the sun could be injured only as he was about to set. Blodeuwedd revealed the proper moment to her lover Gronw Pebyr, lord of darkness, and he hurled his spear into Llew Llaw's groin. Llew Llaw did not fall and touch the ground with his sacred heel because his hair was tied to a sacred oak. After receiving his wound he transformed into an eagle, in which form Gwydion located him. Gwydion healed the poisoned injury and magically restored Llew to his own shape. Llew then returned to his home, where he in turn killed Gronw. Dylan is sometimes understood to be another form of Llew Llaw, and the transformations of Llew began at the Winter Solstice. His seasonal names and shapes are: Dylan, fish shape, spring season. Llew Llaw, lion shape, summer season, starting at the Vernal Equinox. Name withheld, transitional form, autumnal season, starting at the Summer Solstice. Nant y Llew, eagle shape, winter season, starting at the Autumnal Equinox. Llew is the counterpart of the Irish sun god Lug (Lugh). Gyffes, a form of gyves (fettters), probably originally meant long, alluding to the long rays of the sun.

LLEWYD (LLWYD) In Brythonic legend friend and avenger of Gwawl. He casts a charm over Dyfed, causes it to become a desert, and by magic spirits away Pryderi and Rhiannon, the son and wife of Pwyll, to punish Pwyll for tricking Gwawl. LlewYd is a power of light.

LLOYD (FLOYD) Masculine name from the Welsh, meaning gray.

LLUDD (LUDD, NODENS, NUDD) Brythonic sky god and mighty warrior. Son of Beli, husband of Gwyar, father of Gwyn. Mortalized as Lud, king of Britain, he rebuilt the walls of Caer Ludd (Ludd's Fort) or London. He was giver of food and drink, and was worshiped on high places. A triad represents Ludd as one of the three notable prisoners of Britain, the other two being Greit and Mabon. In early myths he is said to be the father of Creudylad; later myths make her the daughter of Llyr. In Morte d'Arthur he appears as Lot, king of Orkney. Ludd is portrayed as a youthful deity, haloed like the sun and driving a four-horsed chariot (chariot of the four directions). Spirits, typifying the winds, fly along with him. His power over the sea is symbolized by attendant spirits of the sea. His epithet Llaw Ereint, meaning hand of silver, identifies him with the Irish god Nuada, and he is said to be identical with Emrys and Myrddin. As a conqueror of dragons hostile to man and fertility he is an analogue of Indra and Mithras.

LLWCH LLAWWYNNAWC
Welsh counterpart of the Irish Lug (Lugh). Prominent among the warriors of Arthur. Name meaning white hand.

LLYR (LLYR MARINI) Brythonic sea god. The tribe of Llyr, symbolizing the sea, darkness, and death, was in constant conflict with the tribes of Don and Lludd, symbolizing the sky, light, and life. His wives were Penardun, by whom he had a son Manawydden, who ruled the underworld, and Iweridd (Ireland) by whom he was the father of a son Bran and a daughter Branwen. He also was the father of Evnisseyen and Nisseyen. A triad represents him as one of the three notable prisoners of Britain, the other two being Gweir and Mabon. In late myths he is said to be the father of Creudylad, who, in earlier myths is said to be the daughter of Lludd. He becomes the King Leir of Geoffrey of Monmouth, and the King Lear of Shakespeare; Creudylad appears in later literature as Cordelia. The chief seat of his worship is still called Leicester (Llyr-cestre or Caer Llyr). He is the Brythonic equivalent of the Gaelic Ler.

LO In Chinese mythology with Ho a sacred river.

LOA In mythology of Marshall Islands creator deity who created by mere command, thus resembling Jehovah and Ligobund.

LOADSTONE See lodestone.

LOAF In Oriental rites corresponds to the wafer in Occidental rites. Represents wounds inflicted on the divine victim. Originally a fertility emblem.

LOBELIA Flower symbolizing arrogance, malevolence.

LOBOLA In Zulu tradition bride-wealth, such as cattle, goods, or anything that may comprise the dowry of a bride.

LOBSANGMA In Tibetan Buddhism one of the five Long Life Sisters which accompanied Sri-devi. Her emblems are a bowl of jewels and a mongoose; her vahana is a tiger.

LOBSTER Bigotry, chaos. A contemptuous term of reproach, a clumsy or stupid person. Identified with the crab, Cancer of the Zodiac. In Japan called ebi, signifies longevity.

LOCANA (BUDDHALOCANA)
Buddhist Dhyanibuddhasakti; sakti

of Aksobhya. Her asana is lalita; her color is blue; her emblems the kapala (skull cup) and vajra (thunderbolt); her mudras are varada and vitarka.

LOCHIA An epithet of Artemis when she aided women in childbirth.

LO CHIN CHA Siamese swing festival; a harvest feast. In the ceremony, four Nak dancers are hoisted on a swing from which they are expected to catch in their mouths money bags suspended from a bar. The prosperity of the year depends upon rapid success in obtaining the money bags. Going high on the swing is a form of sympathetic magic, and the ascent is intended to help the sun as a provider of fertility.

LOCHINVAR A bold, impulsive lover. From Scott's poem Marion, in which a young Highlander snatches his ladylove away from her spiritless bridegroom.

LOCHLANN In Irish legendary history a mythical country under the sea, whose men were the most common antagonists of the Fenians or of the Tuatha de Danann. The Lochlannach, men of Lochlann, were the giant Fomors, ruled by Tethra. They sometimes are identified as Vikings which through several centuries descended on the shores of Ireland.

LOCH RIACH In Irish legend a lake or well formed to quell a fierce battle between fairy folk. White sheep cast into it every seventh year at the proper hour turn crimson.

LOCKET Talisman worn as a protection against disease. See bull.

LOCKIT Inhumanly brutal jailer in Gay's Beggar's Opera. He relieves his prisoners of fetters in proportion to the fees they pay him, ranging from one to ten guineas.

LOCRINE Same as Logris.

LOCUST (INSECT) Destruction, divine chastisement, famine. In early Near Eastern mythologies an emblem of the moon-goddess representing destruction, later an emblem of the sun-god. According to the Old Testament one of the plagues of Egypt was a swarm of locusts, which also typified invading armies.

LOCUST (TREE) Affection beyond the grave, elegance, vicissitude. Believed to possess the power of shutting out danger or evil.

LOCUSTA One who murders those she is engaged to nurse. From a professional poisoner who was executed in Rome about 54 A. D.

LODDFAFNIR In Norse mythology one to whom Odin gave magic.

LODER (LODUR, LOTHER) Literally, Fire-bringer. In Norse mythology brother of Odin and Hoener, and with them he composed the trinity which made the world from Ymir's body, ruled heaven and earth, and formed the first man, Ask, and the first woman, Embla. He was the giver of blood and a ruddy complexion to the first human pair. Loder typifies vital heat and was a name of Loki before he became devilish. His is also called Vili and sometimes identified with Mundilfare.

LODESTAR Literally, way-star. Any guiding star, especially the pole-star. Anything that strongly attracts or influences.

LODESTONE Attraction, love, magnetism. Sacred stone instinct with divinity. Emblem of the sun. Revealer of the quarters (as when on a compass). Magnet with which Chinese, Egyptian and other celestial deities pursued black magic or evil gods (evil gods associated with non-magnetic iron). Stone of Gypsy horoscopes because of its erotic virtues. Stone of smugglers because it supposedly contains the power to cause dust to rise which conceals them from pursuing police.

LODGE In Masonic tradition a microcosm or picture of the universe. A word akin to logic, hence reason, wisdom.

LOEGAIRE (LAEG, LAEGAIRE BAUDAC) In the second cycle of Irish legend a Red Branch of Ulster hero. Personification of the sun's rays, he was the charioteer of Cuchulainn, the sun hero. One of the three great heroes of Ulster, he contended with the other two, Conall Cearnac and Cuchulainn, for the champion's portion of Bricriu's feast; thus he sometimes was companion, sometimes rival of Cuchulainn who won the contest. He visited Mag Mell, land of everlasting life, to discover if a visit there would be safe for Cuchulainn, and returned to report the wonders of the divine land and the beauty of the goddess Fand. Cuchulainn on his advice became the lover of the goddess. Upon receiving an appeal from the divine Fiachna for aid he and fifty warriors plunged into a lake to join Fiachna on the field of Mag Mell. They won the release of Fiachna's wife, who had been abducted, and as a reward Loegaire was given Sun Tear, Fiachna's daughter as a wife. Wives were also given to the fifty warriors. Loegaire remained in the divine land for a year and, becoming homesick, Fiachna gave him a horse on which to visit his former home on earth. However, Loegaire did not dismount for on the visit he realized how much more he preferred life on the field of Mag Mell. See Foot. In another legend he had been killed by Cuchulainn's spear, which had been hurled by Lugaid. Loegaire signifies Leary the triumphant. His legend is a fertility or seasonal myth; Mag Mell is the land where verdure lives on after frost covers the earth. As the rays of the sun he is not as great a champion as the sun itself.

LOEGRIA (LOGRES) Name of England as given by Geoffrey of Monmouth. From Loctrine, son of the mythical king Brut or Brutus.

LOFN In Norse mythology goddess attendant of Frigg. She possessed the power to remove for those who invoked her aid every obstacle to the marriage of true lovers. From her name is derived the word love (lof).

LOG Icelandic for law; a word cognate with Llew and Lug.

LOGAN Rocking stone or tilting rock; stone altar consulted by the bards as a giver of battle oracles. A celebrated logan still stands near Treen in Cornwall.

LOGE (LOGI) Finnish fire giant or god of the flame. Son of Fornjot. Identified with Loki.

LOGEION Name given by Philo to the twelve precious stones set in the breastplate of the Jewish high priest. They were arranged in four rows to indicate the four seasons and symbolized, "That Reason which holds together and regulates the universe." Josephus called them Essene, which resolves into One Essence or One Light.

LOG, KING See King Log.

LOGOS Divine Creative Word. Symbolized by the lizard, which see. In Christian tradition Son of God; Christ, both in his pre-existent and in his incarnate condition. Early Christians identified Logos with Attis, whom they regarded identical with Christ. In gnosticism a being intermediate between God and the world, one of the sons of God; the understanding which emanates from Nous. The cock typifies vigilance and the serpent intelligence which emanate from Logos. See Abraxas. In Greek mythology the abstract deity Fable, descendant of Eris. Platonic conception of reason as a manifestation of the Divine Being. According to Plutarch, the rational principle that governs and develops the universe; that which orders all things.

LOGRIS (LOCRIS) Legendary hero-king after whom Loegria (England) was named. Eldest son of Brut (Brutus); father of Sabrina. Also called Locrin or Locrine. Probably an agricultural deity.

LOHAN In Chinese Buddhism one of the eighteen worthies or supernatural guardians of Sakyamuni's system of religion and its adherents, lay and clerical. Sixteen are of Hindu origin, two have been added by the Chinese. A lohan supposedly has the power to raise the dead, become invisible, change whatever he touches into gold, and effect other wonderful transmutations. Each is stationed in a different part of the world and has a retinue of 500 or more arhats or subordinates. The lohan are seen in fixed attitudes, each with his own badge or symbol, and it is said when the Messiah returns they will collect all the relics of Sakyamuni (Buddha), and build a splendid pagoda over them, after which they will vanish in a fiery cataleptic trance in Nirvana, free of all memories. The lohan parallels the arhat of Sanscrit Buddhism, the Christian saint, and resembles the Roman genius.

LOHENGRIN In German legend the Knight of the Swan. Son of Parsifal (Percival). A knight of the Holy Grail, he was sent by King Arthur to champion the cause of Elsa, princess of Barbant, accused of murdering her brother, who had disappeared. He arrived at Antwerp in a boat drawn by a swan and vindicated the lady. On condition that she would never ask his name or lineage he became her husband. She was prevailed upon to break her promise on her wedding night. By his vows to the Grail he was obliged to disclose his identity if asked, but at the same time to disappear, and the swan boat returned for him. Before leaving his bride he restored her brother Gottfried, who by the sorceress Ortrude had been transformed into the swan of the boat. This appears to have been an independent tale linked to Arthurian romances. The motif of the broken promise resembles that in the story of Eros and Psyche. See Eros. It also is linked to name magic. As in most divine-human marriages that of Lohengrin and Elsa had an early separation. Lohengrin was the sun carried by mist or a cloud (swan).

LO-HU-LO In Chinese Buddhism Buddha's son. One of the eighteen lohan, he was assigned to Pryangu-dvipa, a land of chestnuts and herbs. He is to die and be reborn many times. Portrayed with a large dome-shaped head, heavy eyebrows, and a hooked nose. Also known as Rahula.

LOI HSAO MONG Burmese and Indo-Chinese sacred mountain; dwelling place of the gods. Analogue of Meru, Olympus.

LOIN The physical or generative powers.

LOIS Feminine name from the Greek, meaning desirable.

LOKA Literally, a world. In Tibetan Buddhism one of the three regions or divisions of the universe. See Bardo Thodol. The Hindus speak of three Lokas, heaven, earth, and hell, and in a fuller description mention fourteen, seven rising from earth and seven descending from it, one above the other.

LOKAPALAS Buddhist and Hindu world-guardians. In Buddhism the Four Great Kings who dwell around Mount Meru, where they guard the entrance to Sukhavati, Buddhist paradise, and the four cardinal points, are: Dhrtarastra, lord of the Gandharvas in the east; Vaisravana, lord of the Yaksas in the north; Virudhaka, lord of the Kumbhandas in the south; Virupaksa, lord of the Nagas in the west. They wear warrior's garments, boots, coats of mail, and a headdress or crown. In Tibet called Jig-rten-skyon. The four Hindu regents of the quarters are: Agni, north; Indra, east; Varuna, west; Yama, south. In one version, Kubera is substituted for Agni in the north. Ravana claims that he, himself, is the fifth world guardian, in the center.

LOKI (LODER, LOKE, LOKKJU, LOPTER, LOPTI) In Norse mythology brother of Odin and Hoener. With them he composed the trinity which made the world from Ymir's body, ruled heaven and earth, and formed the first man, Ask, and the first woman, Embla. His gifts to the first human pair were desires, longings, passions. Originally, he was a fire-demon, later a storm or lightning god. Handsome and beguiling, he was cunning, fickle, foul-mouthed, jealous, a mischief-maker, slanderous, and a thief. By Angerboda he was the father of the Fenrir wolf; Hel, queen of the dead; the Midgard serpent. By Sigin his son was Narfi. He was an instrument of destruction among gods and men, and his evil ways led the gods into troubles, from which he extricated them by cunning, thus, though destructive, he also exercised his powers to set things right. For eight winters he had a female form, gave birth to a sea-serpent, and milked a cow. This legend signifies subterranean fire produced vegetation. The eight winters represented the eight months of frost in the north, during which warmth retreats into the earth and works in secret. See Androgynous deities. The cows he milked were warm springs. He also transformed himself into a bird, flea, fly, giantess, mare, milkmaid, salmon, seal, to work his cunning. Except for Freyja, he was the only Asa god able to assume bird guise, and he assumed it by stealing the feathers of Freyja.

By directing the hand of the blind Hoder, who held the mistletoe dart, he became the slayer of Balder. He further angered the gods with evil speech, and to escape them transformed himself into a salmon and plunged into the Fraanangerforce. He was caught behind the waterfall and bound to a rock with the bowels of his son Narfi, which turned into iron. Skade, hating him because he had caused the death of her father Thjasse, placed a snake over his head which dropped venom on him. Sigyn, remaining faithful, held a goblet over him to catch the poison. When the cup was full she emptied it and, during those moments, Loki, writhing under the burning poison, shook his bonds and caused earthquakes. At Ragnarok he freed himself, and he and Heimdal battled until both were dead. He is known as Asa-Loki as distinguished from Utgard-Loki. The same evil principle was manifested in both, but Asa-Loki was seductive and handsome, whereas Utgard-Loki was hideous. One tortured on a rock, Loki resembles Prometheus; a celestial deity who invented mischief and destruction, he resembles Lucifer and Mephistopheles. His slaying of Balder is analogous to that of Cain slaying Abel and Set slaying Horus. His name means allure, fire, or to close.

LOLA (LOLITA) Feminine name; Spanish diminutive of Carlotta (Charlotte) and Dolores.

LOLJERSKOR In Teutonic mythology, grove or lund folk; invisible spirits of the forests and groves. Also called lundjungfrur.

LOMBARD A banker, financiers collectively, a pawn-broker. The name meaning long-beard is derived from Longobardi, a Teutonic race of people who migrated in the 6th century to what is now Italy. Their kingdom was called Lombardy. They are the first known bankers. In the middle ages they set up quarters for business in London, and Lombard Street is named after them. The most celebrated of them was the Medici family, from whose coat of arms the insignia of three golden balls has been derived. The Lombards exercised a monopoly in pawn-broking until the time of Queen Elizabeth.

Lombard fever. Laziness. The habit of pawning anything rather than settling down to work. Staking Lombard Street against a Chinese orange. Long odds. Staking the great center of banking and mercantile transactions or the Bank of England against something of small value.

L'OMBRE Italian name for The Man; a game of divination or fortune telling.

LONDON-PRIDE July 27 birthday flower symbolizing frivolity.

LONE STAR STATE Texas, from the single star in its coat of arms.

LONG-DO Indo-Chinese guardian spirit of Thanh-long, sacred City of the Dragon.

LONGEVITY Symbolized by agate, cedar, evergreens, turtle. In China symbolized by bats, Jui-scepter, peach, peh-knot, stream of rice wine, tortoise. In Japan by bamboo, crane, deer, gourd, kotobuki, lobster, peach, pine needles, pine tree, stork, tortoise with tail of weeds.

LONGINUS (LONGIUS) Traditional name of the Roman soldier who smote Jesus with his lance at the crucifixion. In Arthurian legend the lance is brought by Joseph of Arimathea to Listenise when he visits King Pellam. Sir Balim, the savage, in want of a weapon, seizes the lance and wounds King Pellam, and three whole countries are destroyed by the one stroke, i.e. winter attacks them.

LONG JOHN SILVER Pirate.

LONG LIFE Typified in an Italian icon by an old woman holding a crow and laying her hand on the head of a stag with large antlers.

LONG LIFE SISTER In Tibetan Buddhism the five Long Life Sisters who accompanied Sridevi are: Dinsangma, Dongsangma, Lobsangma, Tashitsheringma, Thinggishalsangma.

LONG MEG Old English giantess; demon of disease and plague. Famous as a thrower of boulders and other gigantic missiles. Mother of the giant Long Tom. As Momey Meg, she gave her name to big guns.

LONO In Hawaiian mythology one of the three great creator gods. With Kane and Ku, he formed man of red earth and spittle, shaping him in the likeness of Kane (Tane) and breathing into the form to give it life. Compare Taaroa.

LOOKING GLASS See mirror.
Looking tabu. A widespread motif in folk literature. Looking at an object or person causes its loss or subjects the looker to punishment. Actaeon and Semele looked on deities and perished. The Blue Beard story has a forbidden chamber. Hiko-hohodemi lost his wife for looking upon her as she gave birth to their son. Lot's wife turned into a pillar of salt because she looked back at destruction of Sodom and Gomor-rah. Orpheus looked back at Eurydice and lost her forever to Hades. Pandora loosed evil on the world when she looked into a box. Psyche broke a prohibition and lost her husband Eros (Cupid). Tiresias examined two snakes copulating and was stricken blind. Tom of Coventry was blinded after he peeped at the naked Lady Godiva. The tabu usually is related to seasonal myths, darkness (winter) being prohibited from seeing light (summer) or vice versa.

LOOM (1) Feminine industry, mystery of life, span of life, textile manufacture. Insignia of Chih Nu, Clotho, Neith, Orihime, Penelope, Saint Gudula. (2) Among Siberians the wandering soul of a dead shaman, which appears in a dream or during hysteria to a descendant to indicate that he has inherited the gifts to become the new shaman.

LOPON (sLOB-DPON) Literally, teacher. Tibetan name for Padmasambhava, Buddhist monk, who was invited to Tibet by King Thi-srong-de-tsan to organize a Buddhist sect.

LOPTER (LOPT, LOPTR) Literally, airy-one or lightning. In Norse mythology a name of Loki. Under this name he is said to have given man the fire of the veins, the passions, and the senses. His brothers are Byleist and Helblindi. In a 13th century version he is the son of Farbauti and Laufey, peasants, and becomes Odin's serving man.

LOQUACITY In an Italian icon typified by a gaping young woman in a gown decorated with crickets and tongues. A swallow is on her head and a magpie in her hand. A duck is at her feet. The swallow indicates that too much talk disturbs the mind.

LORBRULGRUD In Swift's Gulliver's Travels the capital of Brobdingnag, a country of giants. The word is said to mean humorously, "Pride of the Universe"

LORD (1) Supreme Being, Jehovah. Also applied to Jesus Christ. (2) A title of respect applied to a political or religious superior, a nobleman, a proprietor. Humorously, a husband, as formerly a husband was the master of his wife.

Lord de Ros. Cheater at cards.

Lord Emperor. God.

Lord Jim. Hero of a novel of the same name by Joseph Conrad. He spends the greater part of his life trying to atone for an act of cowardice in which hundreds of natives on a ship were left to drown. He returns to live a useful life among natives and finally is executed by them for an act he did not commit.

Lord of Fire. Lord of the Underworld; Satan.

Lord of Misrule. In the middle ages the master of revels attached to English aristocratic and royal households. He presided over the Christmas festivities, reigning from All-hallow eve to Candlemas day. The position is directly derived from that of King of Saturnalia (see) and traces back to an exceedingly ancient custom. At the Babylonian feast of the Goddess Dorchetha, masters were under the domain of their servants, one of which was set over the rest, royally clothed, and called Gogan (Great Prince).

Lord of Sesennu. A title of Thoth.

Lord Uye-Minu. In Japanese legend the fearless, jealous eagle. Name signifies Never-Looking-Upward. See Fukuro.

LORELEI (LURLEI) German water nymph. She sits on a rock in the Rhine combing her long golden hair. Fishermen and sailors enticed by her wild song are led to destruction. A siren. A huge rock on the right of the Rhine in Hesse Nassau, noted for its echo, is called Lorelei.

LORENZO Masculine name, variant of Lawrence.

LORNA Feminine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning love lost.

LOST ARTICLE A motif which appears frequently in folk literature. In the Japanese legend of Hiko-hohodemi the article is a fish hook; it frequently is a spear or other implement typifying fertility. Sometimes it is carried away by a deity in the form of an animal at whom it has been thrown because he has been robbing herds or destroying a garden. The search leads to the underworld, where it is found, and involves a divine-human marriage. Thus it usually is connected with a seasonal myth.

Loss of the little finger (or little toe). In folktales the loss usually is suffered by an ogre's daughter. The hero finds it and thus wins permission to marry the girl. The little finger is the ear finger, the divinatory finger, as anciently used by seers to stop the ear as an aid to inspiration.

LOS Y Mongol evil giant snake whose home is in the ocean under the earth. He tried to kill men and animals by squirting up poison. At the request of the sky god the hero Otshirvani engaged the sea-monster in battle. The hero was about to be overcome when he changed himself into a Garuda bird, in which form he killed Losy. Thus the hero of light overcame the demon of darkness. Compares with the Midgard snake.

LOT (LOTH) (1) In Arthurian legend king of Orkney (Norway), husband of Margawse, father of Agrawain, Gaheris, Gareth, and Gawain. He led the twelve rebellious knights subdued by Arthur. His wife was the mistress of her nephew Lamerock, a situation analogous to that of Arthur and Modred. He is said to be the mortalized Ludd, degenerated into a spirit of darkness. (2) In Old Testament nephew of Abraham. A migrant shepherd, a wanderer in search of green pastures, he followed his uncle into Canaan. When it became necessary for the two to part, because their shepherds were constantly quarreling, Abraham gave Lot the choice of lands for grazing; Lot chose the richer land and on it met with disaster. His ungodly neighbors marauded his flocks, in the city of Sodon his property was burned, his son-in-laws were destroyed, and his wife, disobeying instructions not to look back as they left the city, looked back regretfully at the wealth they were leaving behind, and was turned into a pillar of salt. Thus the richest land is not always the most fruitful. His sojourn in Sodom represents the soul of a pious man beset by the seductions of the flesh.

LOTAN Hebrew name meaning covering.

LOTHAR Masculine name from Old Teutonic, meaning famous warrior.

LOTHARIO In Rowe's drama, The Fair Penitent, a debauchee, a gallant, a seducer of women, hence a gay Lothario.

LOTIS In Greek mythology daughter of Poseidon. She was pursued by Priapus. To escape him, she was changed into a lotus tree. Her story is analogous with that of Daphne. See Lotus tree.

LOTOPHAGI Literally, lotus-eaters. In Homeric legend a people on the north coast of Africa visited by Odysseus. They supposedly ate the lotus-tree, which caused them to live in careless ease and forgetfulness. The name subsequently has been applied to a North African people.

LOT SAP SAGO A typical Yankee, such as Brother Jonathan.

LOTTERY Dream significance: bad luck.

LOTUS Androgyny, concord, creation, dreaminess, exaltation, fecundity, forgetfulness, immortality, life, light, peace, prosperity, purity, resurrection, the self-created and self-existent, silence, steadfastness, sun. The five petals typify birth, initiation, marriage, rest from labor, death. A conjunction of the male and female, it symbolizes the union of opposing forces as well as internal conflict. A flower which follows the course of the sun, it stands for the highest and purest of spiritual conceptions. In several religions bloom from which the sun god emerged, or which served the sun as an ark with which to traverse the underworld on its nightly voyage from west to east. It is the basis of rosettes found in architectural designs. In the East used as a good luck amulet. In the West, November 9 birthday flower, and in the language of flowers: Our love is estranged. Compare foam. In Buddhist art adopted from the Hindus, it takes precedence over all flowers, is Buddha's throne, is one of the Eight Precious Emblems, and symbolic of a non-tantric (mild) manifestation of Buddhist deities. Inasmuch as the seed pods, open flowers, and buds are found at the same time, it denotes the three stages of existence, past, present, and future. Although it grows out of mud, it is not defiled; neither its flower nor its leaf is made wet by the water on which it rests; thus it exemplifies spirit rising above worldliness or adverse surroundings, and suggests the future possibilities of the human soul. When the open flower rests on the water facing the sun it stands for meditation and Nirvana, the ultimate repose of the soul. It is cognate with the wheel of life, the petals representing the spokes, the whole typifying the perpetual cycle of births and deaths. Its animal counterpart is the swan. In Sanscrit called padma. In China called ho-hua or lien-hua. Emblem of Ho-Hsien-Ku and of the summer season. Symbolic of continuity, enlightenment, female beauty, harmony in marriage, progeny. Frequently shown with ribbons which represent the sacred rays emanating from the sun (blossom). In Christian art dedicated to Virgin Mary; superseded by the lily. In Egyptian mythology flower from which Horus, the new-born sun, rose as it was expanding its leaves on the breast of the primeval deep; thus fire and water interacted and created the world. Throne of Isis, Nephys, Osiris. Flower of royalty, emblem of Upper Egypt, whereas the papyrus was the emblem of Lower Egypt. In Greek mythology sacred couch of Hera (Juno), boat of Heracles; obnoxious to Aphrodite (Venus). In Hinduism Brahma sprang from the lotus rising from the navel of Vishnu. In Hindu cosmogony the world is likened to a lotus floating in the center of a shallow vessel which rests on the back of an elephant which in turn stands on the back of a tortoise, symbolizing renascence. The many petaled spread denotes spacial expanse and, since its movements correspond with the dawn, it is connected with the sun. As it is on water it is the primary metaphysical symbol of potentiality and universal supply. In Japan flower of death and truth. A flower of the dead, it is not used as a decoration at festive gatherings. In flower arrangements past time is represented by a partly decayed or worm-eaten leaf or by a wide open leaf and seeds; present time is represented by a handsome open leaf, called mirror-leaf, or by a half open leaf and the flower; future time is represented by a curled leaf not fully open or by a closed leaf and a bud. In Korea called Daughter of the Sun or the Flower that Speaks. In Tibet "Om mani padme hum" (Om, the jewel is in the lotus, amen) is a mystic formula used as a charm, as a prayer in certain rites, and as a pledge of salvation. The lotus signifies the universal being of the worshiper; the jewel, the individual being.

Blue lotus. In Sanscrit called utpala and symbolizes celestial and earthly love; that which produces and that which is produced.

Lotus blossom. Yoni. Numerous and happy descendants.

Lotus bud. Lingam. Love.

Lotus-eater. One who is languorous and forgetful of friends or home; one who leads a life of dreamy, indolent ease, indifferent to the busy world. See Loto-phagi.

Lotus and flame. In Buddhism union of fire and water. Form in which Adi-Buddha first revealed himself on Mount Sumeru.

In Mazdaism emblem of the tree of life.

Lotus and jewel. A conjunction of the divine pair in the East as the egg and dart are in Greek art.

Lotus leaf. Recantation. In China a lotus or palm leaf and scroll or roundbox represent the twin genii or mirth and harmony.

Lotus opening or rising. Sexual act.

Lotus seed pod. In China called lien peng, symbolic of fruitfulness, offspring.

Lotus shrub. In Europe and the West, November 10 birthday plant symbolic of mere display.

Lotus stalk. In Egyptian art insignia of a female deity.

Lotus stalk breaking seed pod. In Buddhism eternal essence of material life.

Lotus tree. In Europe and the West, November 11 birthday plant symbolic of affection beyond the grave. In Greek antiquity typified vigor and youth. According to legend Dryope of Oechalia one day plucked a lotus flower for the amusement of her infant son. Blood fell from the stem, as the tree was really the nymph Lotis, who had been transformed into a lotus tree to save her from the pursuit of Priapus. Terrified, Dryope tried to flee, but her feet were rooted to the ground. The gods to punish her for injuring a sacred plant turned her into a lotus tree alongside Lotis. In Mohammedanism a lotus tree stands in the seventh heaven on the right hand of God's throne.

Lotus and white swan. Eastern symbol for annunciation comparable to the lily and dove of the West.

Red lotus. Emblem of India.

LOU In the Chinese zodiac the Mound, three stars, Alpha, Beta, and Gamma, in the shape of an isosceles triangle in the head of Ares in western quadrant, autumn season. Represented by a dog; element, metal. Lucky period for building.

LOUHI Crafty hostess of Lapland who drives hard bargains with the wooers of her daughters, fertility goddesses. She is the sorceress mistress of Pohjola, lord of Northland, and she commands fog and wind and sends diseases and wild beasts. Once she captured the sun and the moon and hid them until she was captured by Vainamoinen. Louhi personifies the forces of darkness and winter.

LOUIS (LEW, LEWIS, LOU) Masculine name from the Germanic through the French, meaning famous and fight, famous warrior. As akin to Llew, it also means light and lion. Feminine form is Louisa (Lou, Louise, Lui, Lulu).

LOUISIANA Emblem: magnolia; motto: Union, Justice, and Confidence; nicknames: Creole, Pelican.

LOUP-GAROU French werewolf. In legend one who transforms himself into a wolf at night and runs about the countryside devouring animals and people. In Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel, a leader of the giants. Pantagruel picks him up by the ankles and uses him like a quarter-staff.

LOUQUO Carib first man who came down from the sky. Other men were born from his body, and after his death he ascended into the heavens. Compare Ymir.

LOUSE Filth, obscenity, parasite, pestilence. Contemptible, foul, mean, vulgar. It is derived from a Teutonic word meaning to set free, also to permit to perish.

In one version of the Cinderella story, Cinderella's mantle was made of louse skins to typify humility. According to the Old Testament the third plague of Egypt was one of lice. The priests shaved and washed their bodies every third day to avoid carrying the vermin into the temples.

LOVE Symbolized by crimson color, dove, heart, heart pierced by arrow, lodestone, red color, rose. Personified by cherubim, Cupid, Eros. According to the Greeks love (Eros) issued from the egg of night floating on Chaos. In former times magicians and sorcerers became famous for their love philters. The superstitious still drink special preparations or eat certain foods, such as oysters, in the belief they excite love. The word is akin to alive, ivy, leaf.

Dead love. Typified by Cupid quenching a torch.

Deep love. Symbolized by an amethyst or ruby.

Divine love. Symbolized by crimson color, dianthus, flaming heart.

Illicit love. Symbolized by aconite.

Love charms. A common charm in various parts of the world is the melting of the image of a loved one; as the image melts coldness supposedly melts into love. Throwing an article of a loved one's clothing into a fire is said to cause an absent lover to burn with desire. Anciently in Denmark lovers pledged fidelity by each lover sprinkling blood into the footprint of the other. In an old Slavic tradition the earth of a sweetheart's footprint was dug up and a marigold planted in it. The marigold flourished until the love of one of the sweetheart's faded. Gems, rings, and other jewels are worn or used to reveal unfaithfulness on the part of a lover as well as to bring good fortune in love.

Love chase. The right to the hand of a princess was sometimes determined by a chase. In Greek mythology the Hippomenes-Atalanta and Pelops-Hippodameia contests were love chases. Among the Kirghiz the maiden was placed on a horse and armed with a whip; she had the right to use the whip on her pursuers as well as on her horse, but she was awarded to the man who caught her. In ancient Prussia candidates raced on horseback to a king; the winner was awarded nobility as well as a bride.

Love dance. In innumerable parts of the world the marriageable of either sex devote the season of love to dancing, sometimes one sex dances, sometimes the other, sometimes both together, in a valiant effort to display the beauty and grace, energy and force, endurance and skill that underlie the courtship. In the Fiji Islands the dance is carried on in a seated position and connected with a sacred drink called ava. In Java and Madagascar the dance is carried out with the arms and hands exclusively. In Tunisia the dance is one of the hair; all night long until they fall exhausted, marriageable girls move their heads to the rhythm of a song, maintaining their hair in perpetual balance and sway.

Love gage. Glove, knot of ribbon.

Love-in-a-mist. September 13 birthday flower symbolizing embarrassment, perplexity. Also called fennel-flower or love-in-a-puzzle.

Love-lies-bleeding. March 31 birthday flower symbolic of desertion. In the language of flowers: Hopeless but not heartless.

Love of one's country. In an Italian icon represented by a vigorous young warrior standing upright between flame and smoke on which he looks with a resolute countenance. He carries one crown of grass and one of oak in each hand and, although on the side of a precipice, he tramples without faltering on spears and swords.

Love of truth. Purple.

Love of virtue. In an Italian icon personified by a naked winged youth with four garlands of laurel, one on his head, the others in his hands, because virtue surpasses all other loves.

Love orgies. Among ancient tribes held silently in dark caves by oak-priests and priestesses. No one knew who lay with whom nor who was the father of any child born. A boy thus born was raised to be king and was said to be of virgin mother, his unknown father presumed to be a god. Vestal Virgins were believed to engage in these practices at the summer and winter solstice until the 6th century B. C., when King Tarquin introduced burial alive as a punishment for any Vestal who broke the rule of perpetual virginity because he wished to prevent the breeding of claimants to the throne. See Silvia.

Love reconciled. In an Italian icon represented by a young woman wearing a large sapphire at her neck. She holds a cup with one hand and two cupids with the other.

Love tamed. In an Italian icon typified by a sitting cupid. His flambeau is burnt out; he tramples on his bow and arrows; in his right hand he holds an hour glass, and in his left, a dying dabchick. These last two items indicate that time and poverty are the most capable of extinguishing love.

Loving cup. A cup with several handles, designed to be passed around a circle of friends that all might drink to the love or memory of one absent. Also a parting cup.

Married love. Typified by Hy-men.

Platonic love. Symbolized by acacia.

Sacred and profane. Typified by Aphrodite Urania and Aphrodite Pandemos; a maid enthroned wearing a richly ornamented robe of sumptuous weave; a woman wearing a profusion of jewels.

LOVELACE (1) Masculine name from Old English, meaning a love token. (2) The protagonist in Richardson's novel Clarissa Harlowe. He is an unscrupulous but polished libertine. Gay, handsome, and rich, his sole ambition is to seduce young women.

LOVELL (LOWELL) Masculine name from the French meaning wolf; also diminutive of love.

LOVER Card in the tarot deck illustrated by a young man between two women (virtue and vice) standing at the crossing of two roads, thus he hesitates between good and evil. He typifies personal magnetism, the disposing intelligence, and is the instrument of the gods of love. Attainment: union of opposite but complimentary modes of existence. Power and potency: receptivity of the senses for caressing, human love. In divination corresponds to the number seven and the Hebrew letter zayin. Denotes: affection; attraction; beauty; beneficent, gratifying vibrations as well as disturbing, maliferous, and painful vibrations; charity; conjugal faith; friendship; harmony of inner and outer life. When the card is in reverse: failure, foolish designs, frustrated marriage.

Divine and mortal lovers. See under divine-human marriages.

Ill-fated lovers. This theme appears frequently in seasonal and fertility myths, where a lover, such as a sun-hero, is separated from or unwittingly slays his sweetheart, the dawn or summer maid. In later legends ambition, feuds, jealousy, or war, destroy or separate the lovers. Some famous unhappy lovers of fiction and history are: Abelard and Heloise (French), Abradatus and Panthea (Persian), Baile and Ailinn (Irish), Haemon and Antigone (Greek), Leander and Hero (Greek), Romeo and Juliet (English), Tristan and Isolde (Brythonic), Troilus and Cressida (English).

Lovers. An early symbol for Gemini.

Mother-son lovers. This theme in mythology invariably typifies fertility and resurrection as in the Adonis, Attis, Bata, Tammuz stories. The son-lover is slain by the mother-wife, who mourns him, and then brings him back to life.

Lovers turned to swine. This motif is a modification of the slaying of the lover by the sated goddess (or god), frequently a mother (or father), and probably originated in the myth of Ishtar, who slew her lovers when she was sated with them. A fertility theme.

LOW In Britain, a barrow, a burial mound. A corruption of El Hu; akin to law.

LOW HEELS AND HIGH HEELS In Swift's Gulliver's Travels two factions in Lilliput. The High Heels were opposed to the emperor, who wore low heels. Swift satirized the pretension of the High-Church and Low-Church parties.

LOYALTY Symbolized by blue, purple, violet colors, and by a sword. In an Italian icon personified by a woman in a thin garment. In one hand she holds a lighted lantern; in the other a patched mask. Her face is toward the lantern, which represents light or sincerity, and is away from the mask, which represents deceit or falsehood. The thin garment indicates that she reveals herself.

LOZENGE In heraldry a diamond-shaped figure on a bearing or shield indicating constancy, honesty, noble birth. Also appears on the escutcheon of an unmarried woman or a widow. The word is from the Latin losenge, meaning flattery, and is related to laus, meaning praise, and lausa meaning gravestone. In China called fang sheng and symbolizes victory. In Chinese Buddhism an obsolete musical instrument and a metal mirror, two of the Eight Glorious Things, are symbolized by a lozenge.

LU Chinese character for riches.

LUA (LUA MATER, LUA SATURNI) Literally, calamity, plague, war. Ancient Italian goddess to whom arms taken in battle were dedicated before they were destroyed. Probably to forestall a like calamity or to avoid possible punishment.

LUAGNI In Celtic mythology founder of the Luagni clan. Aided by the Morna clan and the Uirgreann, he battled the Baoisgne, the clan of Cumhal, father of Fionn, to determine the leadership of the Fianna (light deities), and lost.

LUBBERLAND A ridiculous or mocking name for a Utopia; a land of idleness. Identical with Cockaigne.

LUBIN Masculine name from Old High German, meaning beloved friend.

LUBUMBA The Bantu god Leza as creator.

LUCERNE Herb symbolizing life.

LUCHORPAIN In Irish legend, sea dwarfs.

LUCHTA (LUCHTAINE, LUCHTINE) Irish celestial carpenter who supplied the javelin shafts (light rays) and shields (clouds) which the Tuatha De Danann required for the battle of Mag Tured. With these weapons the Fomors were defeated. He was aided in making them by Credne and Goibniu. See hazel.

LUCIA (LUCILLA, LUCILLE, LUCINA, LUCINDA, LUCY) Feminine name corresponding to the masculine Lucius, from the Latin meaning light, born at daybreak.

LUCIAN (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning belonging to, or spring from, Lucius. (2) The protagonist of The Golden Ass by Apuleius. Lucian metamorphosed into an ass typifies the follies and vices of his age.

LUCIFER (1) Literally, light-bearer. Latin name of the morning-star. Under the mistaken impression that the passage in Isaiah, "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning," had reference to Satan instead of to Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, church fathers applied the name to the prince of darkness, who since has been called Lucifer. Thus a son who desires to occupy the throne of his father, a proud and rebellious archangel; the inventor of pride. Deity of fire, fallen angel. Twin brother of Michael, later his opponent. As the morning star, identified with Heosphorus, Phosphorus, Venus, as one tossed from heaven, he resembles Hephaestus, Jaik-Khan, Kara-Khan, Susa-no-wo.

Luciferians. Fallen angels. Proud as Lucifer. Haughty, overbearing. In this expression Lucifer usually refers to Nebuchadnezzar.

LUCIFERA In Spenser's Faerie Queene personification of pride, luxury, and worldliness. Her splendid palace is built on sand.

LUCIFUGE In the cabala archdemon.

LUCINA Roman goddess presiding over childbirth; invoked by midwives, who sometimes are called Lucina. Her name is used poetically for the moon. She is an aspect of Diana and sometimes erroneously identified with Juno. Her Greek counterpart is Ilithyia.

LUCIUS (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning light, born at daybreak. (2) Legendary king of Britain. Said to be the first Christian king, the date of his death is given as 192.

LUCK In an Italian icon personified by a woman in varicolored gown carrying a cord, gold crown, purse. Word originally meant decoy, entice, entreat, rather than blind chance, which is root of chancery. Cognaté (lux) light.

Good luck. Symbolized by amulets, carnelian, dexter side, four-leaf clover, horse shoe, elephant, coin, swastika. In art Fortuna balances Cupid on wheel; dove, jewels, sword in foreground. In Japan by Fujiyama.

Ill luck. Symbols: broken dish raven, sinister side, white elephant, wild bird indoors. In art Cupid fallen from Fortuna's wheel, her back toward him. In foreground crow, fool's bauble, thistle, withered leaves.

Luck of Edenhall. Venetian 10th century goblet owned by the Musgrave family of Eden Hall, Cumberland. Said to have come from fairies and to have assured family's wealth until broken. Thus a vessel of plenty.

Lucky diagram. Tibetan talisman for longevity.

LUCRETIA (LUCRECE, LUCREZIA) In Roman legend the wife of Collatinus. Violated by Sextus, the son of Tarquinius, she killed herself. Her death resulted in the overthrow of the monarchy, the expulsion of the Tarquins, and the establishment of the republic under consuls. Proverbially, she is the ideal housekeeper and an example of immaculate chastity. Cinderella is sometimes called Lucrezia.

LUCULLUS False friend; from the deceitful friend of Timon of Athens.

Lucullian feast. A luxurious feast. From Lucinius Lucullus, Roman consul and epicure noted for his banquets.

LUCY Feminine name derived from the same radical as Lucifer (light-bringer) and Luna (moon). It means shining child or born at daybreak, and is akin to light (lux). Jutland name for Cinderella.

LUD (1) Legendary king of Britain; founder of London. He supposedly was buried in what is still known as Ludgate. English judges are addressed as M^r Lud; thus Lud may have been a generic term of judge. Lud O is a lamentation. Root of Ludgan, Ludwig, Lydney, and of ludicrousness as celebrated on April 1. Alternative title of Lord Hu. Mortal form of Lludd, which see. (2) Finno-Ugric sacred grove or forest where the spirits of ancient heroes are worshiped. Each family group has its own lud. Women and children are not permitted to enter a sacred grove, and any animal that wanders into it is protected from the hunter. Sometimes used as the title for the ancestor or hero worshiped and to whom black animals are sacrificed. When desiring a sacrifice, the spirit appears in dreams dressed as a Tartar. Compare kuala.

General Lud. Name given to the leader of the Luddites, an organization composed of distressed and riotous artisans and laborers, who, early in the 19th century, went into the manufacturing districts of England smashing machinery in the belief it caused the unemployment they suffered. Ned Lud, from whom General Lud was derived, is said to have been an idiot.

Ludgate Hill. Site of the temple of Lludd, Brythonic sky deity.

LUDI APOLLINARES Games held in Roman antiquity in honor of Apollo.

LUDI MAXIMI Great games of ancient Rome; festival in honor of Jupiter, Juno, Minerva, the three divinities worshiped in the capitol.

LUDKI Serbian dwarfs. Elfin in character, they are especially fond of dancing and singing, and are endowed with the art of prophecy. Word meaning little people. By the Hungarians called Lutky, and by the Poles called Krasnoludi.

LUETE-MUOR Among the Lapps a sacrifice tree; a tree cut down and smeared with the blood of a sacrifice animal as an offering to the god being asked for assistance.

LUFU (LIRUFU) Basumbwa (African) god of death. Men who die herd his cattle for him.

LUG (LUGH) In Celtic mythology grandson of Balor and of Diancecht; son of Cian and Ethne; nephew of Gavida, the celestial smith; brother of Dagda and Ogma. Deity of light, the sky or sun. After the fall of the war god Balor, Lug became the chief of the Celtic pantheon, revered by continental Celts as well as by the Irish. He was the first to use the horse in warfare thus the inventor of horsemanship. His horse Enbarr, a gift from Manannan, was as fleet as the spring wind. He had a hound named Failinis, and a boat (cloud) which knew his thoughts and traveled accordingly without direction. He was the owner of a magic spear (lightning), which flashed fire, roared aloud in battle, thirsted for blood, and had once belonged to Pisear, king of Persia; three apples from the garden of Hesperides, which fulfilled any wish; the pig-skin (holder of winds) taken from King Tuis of Greece, which turned water into wine; all demanded by him of Brian, Iuchar, and Iucharba (wind deities) for having killed Cian (a lesser solar deity, probably gloaming). Other of his possessions were a breastplate which no weapon could pierce and a corselet which preserved him from wounds. He was raised to be a great champion by his foster-father, the sea-god Manannan (the sun rises from the sea). When the Tuatha De Danann were oppressed by the Fomors, he appeared at the palace of Nuada to offer his services. He was accompanied by his army composed of a fairy cavalcade from the Land of Promise and by sons of Manannan. However, he was admitted only because he recited his many accomplishments: brazier, carpenter, cup-bearer, hero, leech, magician, poet, smith; also harper (lord of the winds), who played three strains, laughter strain, sleep strain, wail strain. He then demonstrated his strength by hurling a flagstone which normally required eighty heads of oxen to move. Because of his great strength, he was acknowledged the deliverer of the Tuatha De Danann, and became their leader in the slaughter of the Fomors (deities of darkness) at the Battle of Mag Tured. Fulfilling a prophecy, he killed his grandfather with a sling stone. The stone went into Balor's eye, passed through his head, and killed twenty-seven men behind him. This story exemplifies the New Year or Spring slaying the Old Year or Winter, or a round stone (sun) killing the evil-eyed (night) and parallels the myths of Hermes Argeiphontes as slayer of Argus and Perseus as slayer of Acrisius. As an inventor Lug parallels Mercury. His counterparts in Welsh literature are Llew Llaw and Llwch Llawwynnawc. In a late legend Lug is described as a supernatural horseman who appears before King Conn at his palace claiming to be the son who has risen from the dead to foretell the names of the rulers of Tara. At the end of his prophecy he disappears. His countenance was likened to the glories of the setting sun; his splendor so brilliant, no one could look at him. He is known as: Lug Ioldanach - Light, master of all arts. Lug Lamhfhada (Lamfada) - Light the long-handed, the far-shooter. Lug Lonnbemnech - Light of the many blows. Lug Samildanach - Light of many gifts. His death on the first Sunday in August, typifying the death of the summer or fertile sun, was celebrated with a festival called Lugnasad or Lug's Mass (Lammas). Stonehenge probably was a seat of his worship. Lug is akin to Ilu, lag, Llew, log, Loki, luck, Lugus, Luke, lux, and is the root of slug. He gave his name to fourteen towns called Lugdunum. Cuchulainn, hero of the second cycle of Irish legends, is said to be an incarnation of Lug.

Lug's chain. The Milky Way, chain by which Lug raised men to heaven, and the rod-sling with which he shot the stone into Balar's eye. An auspicious sign and accounts for the expression, "Extraordinary chain of good luck." Sometimes identified as the rainbow. Equated with Bifrost, Jacob's ladder, stem of Jesse, Watling Street.

Lug's Mass. See Lugnasad.

LUGAID In the second or heroic cycle of Irish legend son of Curoi and Blathnat. Warrior of Queen Medb; slayer of the sun-hero Cuchulainn, whose death was avenged by Conall. Also called Lugaid Lamfada, Lugaid the Long-handed, and Mac na Tri Con, i. e. Son of Three Dogs, because it was believed that Blathnat also had loved Cuchulainn and Conall. Thus when Lugaid killed Cuchulainn, he killed one of his reputed fathers, and when Conall avenged Cuchulainn's death, Lugaid was killed by one of his reputed fathers. Probably not the same as Lugaid Red-Stripes who also was the son of three fathers. May personify gloaming.

LUGAID RED STRIPES In Irish legend son of Clothru by her three brothers, Bres, Lothar, and Nar, who were known as the Three Finns, or White Ones, of Emuin. Red circles on his neck and belly marked off the parts of his body begotten by each father. Because of his birth, Lugaid the Red was called Mac na Tri Con, i. e. Son of Three Dogs, but he probably is not the same hero as Lugaid, son of Blathnat. See Three Finns of Emuin.

LUGALBANDA In Sumerian mythology son of Enlil, or perhaps a deified king, also identified with Ninurta. Aided by the wine goddess Ninkasi, he conquered the dragon Zu. In other texts, Gilgamesh battles Zu. Thus the storm god Zu was not killed; he was merely defeated from time to time.

LUGAL-IDA In Babylonian mythology, Ea as river king.

LUGAL-ZAGGISI In ancient Sumer a patesi (priest-king) of the city of Umma, who sacked and burned the flourishing city of Lagash. A vengeful destroyer.

LUGDUNENSIS (LUGUDUNUM) Ancient name of Lyonesse (now known as Brittany and Normandy), which was a country divided into four equal parts like a Saint George cross, the parts being called Lugdunensis Prima, Secunda, Tertia, and Quarta. The name Lyonesse also was that of a legendary land, a paradise such as Atlantis, which has disappeared, and supposedly was located in the British Isles, with an alternate name of Logris. Lugdunensis is derived from Lug, Logris was the name of a mythical British king.

LUGGNAGG In Swift's Gulliver's

Travels an island on which people never die. Swift illustrates the evil of such a destiny unless it is accompanied by eternal youth. The inhabitants are called Struldbrugs.

LUGH See Lug.

LUGNASAD (LUGNASSAD)

Literally, Lug's mass. Celtic festival held about August 1, old calendar (August 12, new calendar). Supposedly instituted by Lug, the sun-deity himself, to commemorate his death. Lugnasad was its Irish name; the Manx called it Lla Lluanys, and the Welsh Gwyl Awst (August Feast). It indicated that the turning point of the sun's course had been reached. Its pagan significance merged into the Christian feast of Saint John. Later called Lammass, which see.

LUGUS Gaelic sun-deity.

Name identical with the Greek Logos, Divine Word or Reason, and akin to Lug and Lugdunensis.

LUH-KA In ancient Sumer the cleansing of the mouth, ceremony for purification.

LUIPA In Buddhism one of the better known Mahasiddhas (eighty-four Great Sorcerers). He is shown seated, has long hair, and a knot on the front of his head. He holds a kapala (skull cup), and has the meditation rope around him. A robe is thrown over his left shoulder; his right shoulder is bare.

LUKA-KANE Hawaiian god of the hula and varied sports.

LUKE (LUCAS) (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning light. (2) Christian apostle likened to a calf. See under Saints. (3) In Massinger's comedy The City Madam the hypocritical hero. He is a man who, with the sudden acquisition of wealth, reveals his meanness and other evil qualities.

LUKELANG (LUK) Caroline Islands primordial deity, creator of heaven and earth. The highest deity, he desired man to remain immortal, but he was opposed by his son Olofat, who gave man disease and death. Father of Ligoapup, ancestress of the human race. Compare Obagat.

LULAB (LULABA, LULAV)

Green palm branch carried at the Jewish Feast of Tabernacles (Sukkot). A token of fruition and triumph. Usually carried in the right hand, the etrog being carried in the left. As an instrument of ritual or worship it differs from sacred objects in other religions in that it is not something to which homage must be paid, but is something to use.

LUMAWIG Principal deity of the Igorot, a tribe of the Philippine Islands. Great sky spirit. A creator, he formed a pair of reeds and then commanded them to marry. They became ancestors of the human race. He is invoked for crops and health and success generally.

LUMBINI Sacred grove where Buddha was born.

LUMIMU-UT Indonesian female deity born of the sweat of a rock. Advised by the crane, also born of the rock, where to find soil, she obtained two handfuls with which she covered the stone, planted seeds of plants and trees, and thus created the earth. She climbed a mountain which she had created, was made fruitful by the west wind, and bore a son, whose wife she became. By her son she became the mother of many gods. See rock.

LUMPENPROLETARIAT Literally from the German, proletariat of scamps. In the Communist Manifesto used to designate the social scum, those of the lowest level of the old society, who would rather act as the bribed tools of capitalists than join the workers' world.

LUMPKIN, TONY In Goldsmith's She Stoops to Conquer an idle, mischievous, sly bumpkin, who is fond of low company, but gives himself the airs of a young squire.

LUNA Roman goddess of the moon and of the months; patroness of races. Poetically, the moon personified. In alchemy, its color is silver; in heraldry, its color is argent (silver or white), as in the blazonry of princes. Corresponds to the Greek Selene; identified with Diana.

Lunatic. One influenced by Luna, the moon, which is believed to have a mysterious and occult influence over the destinies of mankind, and causes especially the disease of madness.

LUNG Chinese great dragon. It possessed the power of transformation; in the spring with his correlative, the sun, he ascended to heaven; in the autumn, he descended to hibernate on earth. A beneficent spirit associated with the sky god Tien. The great spirit of light, lung has become a generic term for dragon. See dragon.

LUNGS According to occultists, the breast and lungs are influenced by the zodiacal house of Cancer, and no surgery should be performed on these parts of the body during this period before a diviner has been consulted to determine when the position of the moon in the house is auspicious. The Bantus say that the color of the first human beings were determined by the distribution of the meat of the first ox slaughtered. Those who ate the lungs and blood became parents of the Nana, a red-skinned tribe; whereas those who ate the liver became the parents of the Hereros, black-skinned people. In China the lungs are counted one of the five viscera. They are the seat of righteousness and correspond to the element metal.

LUNG-TA In Buddhism, the Airy-horse, which carried the cintamani (flaming pearl). A deity of non-human form. Also the name of the good luck flag, about four inches by six inches in size, on which is the Airy-horse carrying the cintamani and sacred texts.

LUNG-WANG Chinese dragon king. Master of rain. His hosts of scaly monsters are able to rise to the skies, dive below the water, shrink or extend themselves, and assume human shape. He and his followers ascend from deep water to become clouds that issue rain.

LUNYU Legendary bird in Confucian literature.

LUONNOTAR (LUOJATAR) Finnish name meaning nature; the three goddesses or norns of birth. They sometimes are called Synnytar, meaning birth. A name applied to Virgin Mary who, as the goddess of birth, is described as having a thousand breasts, her prototype being the Ephesian Artemis, and her sweet milk being a cure for sickness.

LUOT-HOZJIK Lapp female forest spirit looking after reindeer. She cannot, however, protect reindeer from the hunter. Her home is among lichen trees. Identical with Pots-hozjik.

LUPERCUS A very ancient Italian rustic deity; god of fertility identified with Faunus. The name means one who wards off the wolves. Resembles Pan.

Lupercalia. Roman festival celebrated on February 15 to honor Lupercus. As a conculsion to their rites, the Luperci (priests of Lupercus), clad in goatskins, ran about Palatine Hill striking those they encountered, particularly women, with goatskin thongs. This was believed to insure fertility and easy delivery.

LUPINE November 8 birthday flower, symbolic of voraciousness.

Lupine, rosy. Fancifulness.

Lupine, white. Always happy.

LUPUS Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Wolf.

LUST In an Italian icon personified by a handsome woman with coarse black hair plaited about her temples. She has sparkling wanton eyes, her nose turns upward, she leans on her elbow, and holds a scorpion. A he-goat climbs on her legs. Grapes are beside her.

LUSTRAL BATH From earliest times a method of purification and expiation, frequently attended by sacrifices. Kings take a lustral bath at coronation. Also typifies death, and a familiar incident in mythological stories is the murder of the sacred king or sun hero in his bath. Agamemnon went to his death in this manner, symbolizing the setting of the sun in the sea.

LUTE Instrument for divine praise. A Buddhist non-tantric symbol called vina. In China called ch'in. Symbolizes matrimonial harmony and suppression of lust. One of the four signs of a scholar. In France and Spain of the middle ages emblem of the troubadour.

LUTHER (LOOT, LOTHAIR) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning famous warrior.

LU TUNG-PIN (LU TSU, LU YEN) In Chinese legend one of the Eight Immortals (Pa Kung). A magistrate and sage, he learned the secrets of Taoism from Chun-li Ch'uan and attained immortality at the age of fifty. He was tempted ten times and, as he resisted each time, the fire dragon gave him a magic sword with which he rid the earth of evil monsters for four hundred years. In his search for an unselfish person, he found only one old woman, and threw rice in her well. Her water turned to wine, the sale of which made her wealthy. He is the patron saint of barbers and worshiped by the sick. In art he is shown with his magic sword on his back and a fly whisk of horsehair in his hand.

LUX CROSS Light.

LUXURY Typified by gems, a panther, silk, velvet, wolfhound. In an Italian icon personified by a young woman with her hair curled. She is partially naked, sits on a crocodile, and pets a partridge. Her nakedness indicates luxury squanders.

LUZ (LUEZ) Hebrew word meaning bending or light. Rabbinical writers gave the name to a bone that was supposed to be indestructible; perhaps the sacrament. In rabbinical legend it was the nucleus or seed of the resurrection of man's body. The original name of Beth-el was Luz, thus City of Light.

LYADA Slavic god of war identified with Ares (Mars).

LYBICA One of the Roman Sibyls.

LYCAEUS (LYKAIOS) Mountain sacred to the worship of Pan and Zeus. Name signifies realm of light. In modern times called Tetrageion.

LYCAON (LYKAON) In Greek mythology king of Arcadia. Son of Pelasgus, husband of Nonacris, the nine-fold goddess, father of Callisto, and many sons (sometimes said to be twenty, sometimes fifty), known as the Lycaonids. Disguised as a poor man, Zeus sought their hospitality. When human flesh was set before the god, he indignantly punished the impious offenders by changing them into wolves. In another version, when Zeus appeared in Arcadia, Lycaon doubted his divinity and, to test it, placed a dish containing human flesh, that of his own son Nyctimus or his grandson Arcas, before the god. The angry god upset the table, turned Lycaon into a wolf, and with a flash of lightning killed all the sons with the exception of Nyctimus, who was restored to health by the intervention of Gaea, the earth-mother (typifying resurrection). Callisto was changed into the constellation Great Bear, whence it is also called Lycaonis Arctos. In a third account Zeus in his wrath caused the deluge which devastated the earth, permitting only Deucalion and Pyrrha to be saved. According to some Ly-caon was the local oak or lightning god, later identified with Zeus. The Greek words for wolf and light are similar in sound and closely allied in origin, thus the sons of Lycaon were easily transformed from lights to wolves. The name probably originally denoted brightness or splendor. Historically, the clan of Lycaon may have practiced cannibalism; it being a wolf-clan, Lycaon the wolf-king (or werewolf). He is described as the first man to bring civilization to Arcadia, and thus resembles Cadmus. As the number nine appears to have been sacred to him, he probably reigned for nine years, at the end of which time, the choice of a new king was settled at a cannibalistic feast. Compare Tantalus.

LYCEUS A surname of Apollo, meaning light or splendor.

LYCHNIS Herb symbolizing religious enthusiasm.

Meadow Lychnis. Wit.

Scarlet lychnis. Sun-beamed eyes.

LYCIA (LYKIA) In Greek mythology the region of sunlit clouds. The white, shining land, and, like Delos, said to be the land where Apollo was born. A district in southwest Asia Minor was called Lycia and sometimes is confused with the legendary land.

LYCOMEDES In Greek mythology king of Scyros. When the reigns of power were seized from the aged Theseus, he sought refuge on the islands of Scyros, where Lycomedes feigned to receive him as a friend and led him to the summit of a high rock, from which he pushed the exiled king over the cliff. Lycomedes was the guardian of Achilles. Thetis, mother of Achilles, did not want her son to go to war. Disguising him as a girl, she entrusted him to the care of Lycomedes, who placed the youth in the quarters of his daughters, where he seduced Deidama. Probably personifies gloaming.

LYCURGUS (1) Masculine name from the Greek interpreted to mean light bringer and wolf hunter. The Greek words for light and wolf are similar in sound and closely allied in origin. (2) Semimythical Spartan lawgiver. Worshiped as a deity after his death. See Delphi.

(3) King of Thrace who disapproved of Dionysian revels and drove the nymphs of Nysa, attendants of Dionysus, from the sacred mountain. Distraught, Dionysus cast himself into the sea, where he was received in the arms of the ocean nymph Thetis. Because of his sacrilegious conduct, Dionysus punished Lycurgus with the loss of his reason, and in a fit of madness, Lycurgus killed his son Dryas, whom he mistook for a vine. After killing his son, he mutilated the body, and the land withheld fruits. An oracle advised the people this state of affairs would prevail until they brought about the death of Lycurgus, whereupon he was seized and torn apart by horses. This is a fertility or seasonal legend to which that of the fisher king (see) appears to be related.

LYCUS In Greek mythology usurper of Thebes. Son of Hyrieus. He held his niece Antiope (dawn) a prisoner, and he exposed her twin sons Amphion and Zethus on Mount Cithaeron. Years later the twins, discovering their identity, came to rescue their mother who was about to be put to death by Lycus (light). Thus light destroys the dawn, and in time is destroyed.

LYDIA (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning uncertain. Also a place name. (2) A woman of Thyatira, residing in Macedonia, who was not a Jewess by birth, but who became a proselyte to Judaism. She was famous as a dealer in purple cloths.

Lydian mode. One of the four principal modes of music in Greek antiquity. A minor scale appropriate to soft pathos. The other three modes are Dorian, Myxolydian, Phrygian.

LYESHY Slavic malicious quarrelsome spirit haunting forests. He appears in different shapes, but mostly in that of a devil with horns and goat's feet that have finger claws. He abducts beautiful women, but protects all forest beasts and birds, especially the bear. His female counterpart is Lisunki.

LYFIR Literally, the shining-one. In Norse mythology Heimdal in human disguise, sent by Odin to protect Hadding in battle.

LYGIA In Quo Vadis by Sienkiewicz a beautiful Christian who undergoes many trials for her faith.

LYLE Masculine name from a family name equivalent of the noun isle.

LYMAN (LYME) Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning purity.

LYMPHAE (LYMPHA) Latin nature goddess, typifying the fructifying and healing powers of water. Resembles a Greek nymph.

LYNCEUS A Greek masculine name meaning lynx. In Greek mythology, the name of two heroes: (1) King of Argos. Of the fifty sons of Aegyptus, he was the only one whose life was spared by his bride Hypermnestra. See Danaides. (2) With his twin brother Idas, one of the Argonauts. Pilot of the ship, he was noted for his keen sight, which penetrated the earth and was able to see objects a distance of nine miles away. He was slain by Pollux, suggesting he was the light slain by darkness.

LYNGE (LYNGI) In the Volung Saga son of Hunding. Suit-or of Hjordis, he became enraged at her marriage to Sig-mund and attacked and slew all the Volsungs. Hjordis escaped and bore Sigmund's son Sigurd, who, when he was grown, slew Lyngge. This is a time or sea-sonal myth, in which the forces of light and growth battle those of darkness and decay.

LYNN Masculine name from a family and a place name.

LYNN FEIC In Irish mythology salmon which fed on the hazel-nuts of wisdom and which provided Finn mac Coul with all knowledge.

LYNX (1) Acute vision, domi-nation, ferocity, furtiveness, in-tense individualism, surliness, suspicious vigilance. One who is capable of inflicting pain when will is opposed; whose external appearance is beautiful and de-ceiving; who is fierce but not courageous; who hides in se-creted haunts and rarely shows itself; who makes long leaps with accurate aim; who loves to rule but resists being ruled; and who rules with fierceness and malev-olence. In Greek mythology one of the steeds of Bacchus or Di-onysus. (2) Minor constellation in the Northern Sky. This group is said to be so inconspicuous only a lynx-eyed person is able to discern it.

LYONNESSE (LEONES, LEON-NAIS, LEONNOYS, LIONES, LYONNOYS) A lost land. Myth-ical region where Sir Tristram was born and where the battle between Arthur and Sir Modred was fought. Like Atlantis it has disappeared into the sea. Alter-nately known as Logris and Lug-dunensis.

LYONORS (LIONES) Heroine of Arthurian legend who is held cap-tive in Castle Perilous and res-cued by Gareth. See Gareth.

LYRA Constellation in the Northern Sky representing the lyre of Hermes or the harp of Or-pheus. In Japan, Ori-hime the Weaver Princess.

LYRE Concert, song. Used for purposes of divination. In-strument used by the White Lady on a White Horse (Wisdom) in Mother Goose rhymes. In my-thology instrument of the wind; when in divine hands it is able to move stones by its song alone. Dream significance: hope. In heraldry typifies contemplation. Source of the term lyrical. At-tribute of Amphion, Apollo, Erato, Hermes, Orpheus, Terpsichore.

LYTHRAD Flower symbolizing pretension.

LYULF Teutonic masculine name meaning savage wolf.

M

M Thirteen of a class or se-ries; twelfth if the letter J is not counted. As understood by gnos-tics, when angular, twin mountain peaks, thus the goal of ascent; when cursive, undulations of a serpent or waves of the sea, thus fertility. Occult significance: it produces change, dangerous if more than one in a name; its period is for four years. Character traits; affection, faithfulness, one who makes frequent changes and therefore enjoys many experiences, sociability, standing firmly on two feet, strength of character. It denotes cumulative and concentrative powers, thus the ability to study, an orderly mind. In divination, its numerical value is thirteen or four. Physical weak spot; blood. Planetary or zodiacal correspondence: Saturn. Symbolic correspondence: transformation. Tarot correspondence: Death. In logic, the middle term of a syllogism. Stands for mare, the sea; the Great Mother; Maat, goddess of truth, when in association with scales; Mithra, when in association with a bull or sun. In Christian tradition typifies the millennium, the thousand years of the kingdom of Christ, based on Revelation; thus, by extension, any period of beneficial government or happiness. Placed on gems as a talisman. Symbolists sometimes constructed the letter from two esses placed back to back to indicate Sanctus Spiritus. In Old English law branded on the thumb of one convicted of manslaughter and given the benefit of clergy. Among Hebrew cabalists its usual meaning is woman (mother), and the character traits are: conjugal faithfulness, friendship, learning with ease. In low form: brings about one's own undoing. In Roman notation 1,000; with a line drawn over it, 1,000,000. Parallels Celtic muin (vine); Egyptian hieroglyph owl (called ma and meaning country, universe, the idea of earth or Great Mother);

Greek mu; Hebrew and Phoenician mem (the waters). Compare Alphabet Affiliations, Aum.

MA (1) Word root meaning mater, mother. In the East, a respectful appellation for a woman; in English, a child's abbreviation of mama (mother). (2) A shortening of the Sumerian Ama, and in ancient Babylon, the self-created virgin mother goddess with a fatherless son. In one form, half woman and half serpent, with a babe suckling her breast. Also the Great Mother of Cappadocia in Asia Minor. Her temple, with its periodic festivals, sacred prostitutes and temple attendants, was of great renown in the ancient world. As an earth and fertility goddess her characteristics are similar to those of Anu, Aphrodite, Astarte, Bau, Cailleach, Cybele, Isis, Neheb-Kau, Nephthys, Nintu, Uazit. (3) In India a name of Parvati.

MAA Egyptian sense deity; personification of sight.

MAACAH Hebrew name meaning depression.

MAADAIH Hebrew name meaning Jah is ornament.

MAA-EMAE (MAAN-EMO) Finnish earth-mother, consort of Ukka.

MAAHSET In Finno-Ugric belief small anthropomorphic beings living under the earth. They cause skin diseases to those who sit on their abode. Offerings are made to them at ant hills. Also called alva, alv-myror, maa-alused.

MAAI Hebrew name meaning Jah is compassionate.

MAALEHACRABBIM Hebrew name meaning ascent of Akkrabbim. Akkrabbim, meaning scorpion, was the name of a pass in ancient Palestine.

MAANE Literally, moon. In Norse mythology son of the giant Mundifare; brother of the girl Sol. Placed in the heavens to guide the moon in its course and to regulate its waxing and waning.

MAANEGARM (MANAGARME) Literally, moon swallower. In Norse mythology wolf offspring of Loki and a giantess in Ironwood. He devours the moon and feeds on the blood of dying men. A myth of eclipse. Also known as Hati.

MAARATH Hebrew name meaning bare place.

MAASAI Hebrew name meaning work of Jah.

MAASEWE AND UYUUYEWE Twin warriors of Sia Indian mythology. Sons of Sun and a virgin. They visited their father, and he armed them to slay monsters inhabiting the earth. Probably rays.

MAAT (MAET, MAHT, MAUT) Egyptian goddess of justice and truth. Daughter of Ra. Personification of original and celestial reason, she determined divine harmony, justice, law and order. Great mother who led departed souls to Osiris for judgment, standing by while the weighing of the heart took place and sharing in the decision. Her emblems are five rays and the feather which, in judgment scenes, appears on the scales balanced against a heart. Female counterpart of Thoth: the principle which governed the good kings of ancient Egypt. Her name is the root of magistrate, major, mare, mayor and cognate with moot.

MAAU (MAU) Cat form of Atet, Egyptian mother goddess.

MAAZIAH Hebrew name meaning strength of Jah.

MAB (MADB, MAEVE) In English folklore queen of fairies. In later legend the honor is given to Titanis. In Shakespeare a midwife to men's fancies, i.e. she delivers men's brains of dreams. In Welsh mab means baby or child. Probably derived from Medb.

MA-BANDA-ANNA In Babylonian mythology Shamash as the boat of the sky.

MABEL (ANABEL, MAB) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning lovable.

MABON Welsh sun god. Son of Urien and Modron. Brother of Owain, which may be another name for Mabon. He was one of the three notable prisoners of Britain. The chase of the boar Twrch Trwyth could not take place without him, but he was confined in prison (suggesting an underground confinement of the sun). Arthur, to obtain his aid in overcoming the boar (famine or winter), attacked the stronghold and released him. In a Gaulish inscription called Maponos, who is equated with Apollo. Mabon signifies youth; Maponos signifies divine or great youth. He is an analogue of the Cymric Llew Llew Gyffes.

MABOYA (MAPOIA) Carib Indian Great Snake. Tutelary of snakes and sender of hurricanes.

MAC (MACK) Masculine name, abstracted from Irish or Scotch family names, written as M', Mac, or Mc, and meaning son.

MACABRE Dance of death. See Dance Macabre.

MACAIRE, ROBERT Conventional villain of French dramas. An audacious brigand, a bold and shameless rogue.

MACARENA Arab princess, whose name has been given to the statue of the Virgin of Seville (Macarena Virgin). The statue carved in the 7th century is elaborately dressed and wears gems valued at almost five million dollars lent by a Sevillian brotherhood which celebrates her as its divine saint.

MACARONI A coxcomb, a fop. From the Macaroni Club, an organization formed in London about 1760 by a set of flashy men who had a reputation for drinking, dueling, gambling, who were insolent and vicious and who introduced the Italian dish macaroni to the English table. A colonial regiment raised in Maryland during the War of Independence was called the Macaronies because of its showy uniform. This may explain the allusion in the song Yankee Doodle:

Yankee Doodle went to town
A-riding on a pony
Stuck a feather in his hat
And called it macaroni.

MACAULAY'S SCHOOLBOY
An imaginary schoolboy. Thomas Babington Macaulay used the term, "Every schoolboy knows" so often to refute and put to shame his opponents, the boy became proverbial.

Macaulay's New Zealander.
An imaginary man from "down under" described by Macaulay as visiting London in the distant future when it is a ruined city.

MACAW Yucatec symbol of the sun.

MACBETH (1) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning son of life. (2) Eleventh century king of Scotland who, as the hero of a Shakespearean tragedy, desires to be good, but also desires the fruits of evil. His inner conflict, which often caused him to vacillate and had made him appear weak, is actually an indication of his awareness of possible consequences and, when he is finally forced to face death, he does so with dignity. The Macbeth story contains several mythological themes, including that of the fatal child (Fleance, son of Banquo), prophecy fulfilled, unnatural birth (that of Macduff).

Lady Macbeth. Unlike her vacillating husband, she is devoid of apology for her desires; as a rationalist, she does not probe into possible consequences. Her ambitions lead her to prompt her husband to commit murder but, when this in turn leads to more and more murders and an insecure position, she becomes insane and dies from fear and remorse.

MACCABEES Rebels; fighters for a religious ideal. A family of Jewish patriots. When Antiochus Epiphanes endeavored to abolish the Jewish religion and substitute that of a Greek cult, the priest Mattathias and his five sons, Eleazar (surnamed Avaran), Jonathan (Apphus), John (Gaddis), Judas (Maccabeus), Simon (Thassi), rose in revolt. As he was the most heroic, the surname of Judas was applied to all who took part in the insurrection.

MACCEBA In the Old Testament consecrated stones. A mark of high places. Jacob set one up.

MAC CECHT (MAC CEACHT)

Literally, Son of the Plough. Legendary Irish agricultural hero. Brother of MacCool; husband of Eriu. Slayer of the son of the Morrighu, who had three hearts with the shapes of serpents through them. If Mac-Cecht had not slain him, the serpents (drought) would have grown and destroyed all other animals. When the heart was burned the ashes were cast into a stream, whereupon its rapids stopped and all creatures in it died.

MAC COOL (MAC COLL, MAC CUILL)

Literally Son of the Hazel. Brother of MacCecht and of MacGreine. The three brothers celebrated a triple marriage with the triple goddess of Ireland, Banbha, Eriu and Fotla; Banbha usually given as the name of Mac Cool's wife. The three brothers, as kings of Ireland, fought the three sons of Miled; Mac Cecht fought Eremon, Mac Cool fought Eber, Mac Greine fought Amergin. The Milesians won and Mac Cool and his brothers retreated from the surface of the earth. This a time myth, in which Mac Cool and his brothers, fertility deities, retreated underground when defeated by the deities of darkness and winter.

MAC CUMHAL, FUIN The same as Finn Mac Coul, which see.

MAC DATHO In Irish legend owner of a dog which encircled Leinster in a day. Coveted by Ailill, husband of Medb, and by Conchobar, Mac Datho promised it to both, and then invited them to a feast, knowing they would battle for the dog. Mac Datho and his dog typify fertility over which the opposing forces of winter and summer battle, neither being a conclusive winner.

MAC DOWELL, GERTY In James Joyce's Ulysses a lame girl. Her exhibitionism on the beach excites Leopold Bloom to sexual desire. She corresponds to Nausicaa in Homer's Odyssey.

MAC DUFF In Shakespeare's Macbeth, thane of Fife. He avenges the murder of his wife and sons by killing Macbeth, whom witches had promised none born of a woman should kill. Mac-duff had been taken unnaturally from the abdomen of his mother. In mythology children of sorrow and children brought into the world by abdominal section develop into heroes.

MACE Authority, royalty. Probably had its origin in the strong man's club. Parallels the baton, scepter, wand. A Buddhist tantric symbol called gada; weapon used by deities against infidels. In China called chuan chang. Symbolic of power. In Iran typifies the thunderbolt.

MACEDONIAN CRY An appeal from a strange and helpless people. From the words Paul heard in his dream, "Come over into Macedonia and help us."

MAC GREINE Literally, son of the sun. Fertility hero in Irish mythology. Husband of Eriu. Brother of Mac Cecht and of Mac Cool. See Mac Cool.

MACHA Literally, raven. Irish war goddess. A Tuatha De Danann. With Babd and Morrigan, she produced fogs, a rain of fire and streams of blood in the Tuatha De Danann war against the Firbolgs. Heads cut off by the victors in a battle were called Macha's acorn crop. She was killed by Balor. Personification of storms.

MACHAI Greek abstract deity of battle. Descendant of Eris.

MACHAON In Greek mythology son of Asclepius, brother of Hygeia, Panacea, and Podalirius. Hero and physician at the siege of Troy; fatally wounded by Paris.

MACHBANAI Hebrew name meaning thick.

MACHBENAH Hebrew name meaning lump.

MACHCHAEL Same as Maro-cael, which see.

MACHEATH, CAPTAIN In Gay's Beggar's Opera a highwayman. He is a dissolute and gay ruffian who is betrayed by eight women at a drinking bout, but he dies courageously and promises to remain faithful to his wife Polly "in the future."

MACHI Japanese streets where commoners live as distinct from yashiki, where the estates of daimyos are located.

MACHIAVELLI One who has an aptitude for intrigue, cunning, unscrupulous politics. From Niccolo Machiavelli who, in his treatise Il Principe (The Prince), explains unscrupulous principles.

MACHI-PAL LHA-MO (MAC-IG-dPAL) Tibetan Buddhist goddess; chief of the five Long-Life Sisters. See Sridevi.

MACHNADEBAI Hebrew name meaning gift of the noble.

MACHPELAH Literally, winding. Hebrew oracular cave cut from rock. Sepulchre of Abraham. Caleb went into the cave to consult the shade of Abraham. The cave is named after the man who sold it to Abraham as a burial place.

MAC LEOD Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning bold leader.

MAC LUGACH Literally, son of the terrible hand. In Irish mythology a Fenian warrior.

MAC MOINEANTA In Celtic mythology, after the flight of Mannannan to Scotland, king of Irish fairies. Later deposed by Finvarra (Fionnbharr).

MAC NA TRI CON Same as Lugaid Red Stripes, which see.

MAC OG Literally, son of the young or young god. Same as Angus, which see.

MACREONS Island in Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel. The name is from the Greek and means long-lived. Pantagruel and his fleet are tossed about in a terrible storm at sea, but contrive to land on the island, which is given its name because no one on it is put to death for his religious opinions. The island has many ruins, which are believed to symbolize decayed Popery and ancient superstitions. The storm is believed to symbolize the persecutions of the Reformers.

MACROCOSM The great world, the cosmos composed of four elements and four qualities. See universe. The universe exterior to man as opposed to microcosm, man, the little world.

MACROPROSOPUS Name from the Greek, meaning great face. In the cabala a name of Kether, the Supreme Crown, the first Sephira, Father of all. The Vast Countenance, the manifestation of the Divine Being after His term of concealment in eternity. See Microprosopus, Sephira.

MACUILXOCHITL Aztec god of five blossoms. Deity of music and dancing.

MACUSI A member of a wild tribe of Carib Indians of British Guiana. Noted for their poisoned arrows.

MACY Masculine name from Old English, meaning mace bearer.

MADA Hindu fearful demon of drought created by Chyavana, which see.

MADAI Hebrew masculine name meaning middle.

MADALI WI-HSA-KYUNG Indo-Chinese and Burmese powerful nat or spirit.

MADDER September 8 birthday flower symbolizing backbiting, calumny, talkativeness.

MADDERAKKA Lapp goddess of birth. Mother of three daughters, Juksakka, Sarakka, and Uksakka, with whom she lived in the earth. She created the body of the infant and rendered women fruitful and, with her daughters, helped women in childbirth. Name meaning old woman and corresponding to the Finnish word mantere, meaning earth. Counterpart of Swedish Jordegumma.

MADDOCK Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning the beneficent.

MADELEINE Feminine name; French form of Magdalene.

MADHAVI Hindu earth goddess.

MADHI (MEDHI) Mohammedan Messiah. Also a title of Mohammed and his immediate successors.

MADHU A Hindu danava (demon) which sprang from the ear of Vishnu. With Kaitabha, it stole Vedas from Brahma and entered the sea. Vishnu, assuming the form of a horse's head, rescued the Vedas and slew the danavas.

MADHUPAMANJARI One of the names used by the heroine of the Hindu Cinderella story, A Heifer of the Dawn. Name meaning a cluster of blossoms for the honey drinkers.

MADHYAMAKA (MADHYAMIKA) Literally, middle way. Buddhist school founded in Tibet by Tsongkha-pa. It is the Yellow Cap sect headed by the Dalai Lama or king-priest and also is known as Ge-lug-pa or Nying-ma-pa.

MADNESS An epithet frequently given to sun deities. It applies to the hot, scorching sun, and serves as an apology for the brutal behavior of heroes usually portrayed as beneficent or courageous. Thus Cuchulainn and Heracles, when they were burning midday or midsummer suns were afflicted with madness and killed their offspring, the morning or spring suns. One who opposes his contemporaries also is called crazy or mad. Christ was so called, and Dionysus was called crazy when he wandered about the world teaching its inhabitants the arts of cultivation of the vine, and other elements of civilization. In Japan madness peculiar to women is symbolized by a fan attached to a long bamboo stem carried in the hand.

Mad as a hatter. Properly, mad as an adder or atter; atter from the Anglo-Saxon meaning poison. Thus mad in the sense of being hurtful. A well-known expression further popularized by Lewis Carroll in Alice in Wonderland.

Mad as a March hare. Erratic, freakish, in allusion to the actions of the hare in March, its breeding season.

Midsummer madness. Madness caused by rabies, which is supposed to be especially prevalent about midsummer.

MADOC (MADOG AB OWAIN GWYNEDD) A legendary Welsh prince who supposedly sailed westward and discovered America in the 12th century. Paragon of a hero in a poem by Southey.

MADONNA The Virgin Mary, or a picture or statue of her, usually with the infant Christ. By extension, a virgin or virtuous woman. From the Italian, meaning my lady.

MADUMBA Creator deity, fashioner of the universe of the Pomo Indians of California. Sky deity and younger brother of Coyote, the trickster who created human beings and stole sun (fire) for them.

MADWORT Flower symbolizing tranquility.

MAELCEN In the third cycle of Irish legend, druid who, in revenge for an attempt by Cormac to put down druidism in Ireland, sent an evil spirit to place a salmon-bone crossways in the king's throat and so caused his death.

MAELDUIN (MAELDUNE, MAILDUN) Gaelic hero who went on a quest for his father's murderers and met with strange adventures.

He and his companions arrived at an island where seventeen girls were preparing to bathe. A warrior appeared who, on bathing, proved to be the queen. She gave a splendid feast and invited each man to take whichever girl he desired, reserving herself for Maelduin. In the morning she begged them all to remain, promising them everlasting youth, excessive love and perpetual feasting without toil. They remained for three months and, when they were about to leave, she snared them back for another three months. As they were about to escape, she threw a rope to draw their ship back, but as she pulled it toward her, one of the men cut off her hand. This legend exemplifies the desire of goddesses for the love of mortal men. The island, which resembles Lemnos, was an underworld paradise, into which Maelduin, the sun, wandered. Compare with Jason and Odysseus.

MAELSTROM A famous current or whirlpool off the coast of Norway, fabled to suck in and swallow ships, whales, etc. By extension, any resistless or overpowering force, influence or movement.

MAENAD Greek bacchante; female attendant of Bacchus or Dionysus. One of the host of sanctified women who, in ecstatic exaltation bordering on madness, girdled with snakes and hissing like snakes, tore living animals and devoured the flesh and engaged in sexual and wine-drinking orgies during the Dionysia, a fertility festival. They carried the thyrsus, emblem of the god of the vine and the satyrs. Orpheus, after his second loss of Eurydice, crossed the path of some Thracian maenads. When he refused to join their wild rites they tore him to pieces; thus logic suffered at the hands of emotion. Usually understood to be spirits of fertilizing storms. By extension, any woman beside herself with excitement or frenzy. Also known as Bacchae, bassarides.

MAENAWR PENARDD Celtic fertility deity and magician. Legendary king of Arvon. Only his carrion-eating sow was able to remain free of his magic rod. The sow was Cerridwen, the goddess, in disguise.

MAENWYN Literally, sacred stone. A native name in Wales for Saint Patrick, said to be the son of Mawon. In Welsh maen, mayon, myin, all mean stone, and local modifications vary into the monosyllabic man or men.

MAERA In Greek mythology dog of Icarus. Placed in the heavens as the star Procyon, which rises shortly before the Dog Star.

MAEVE See Medb.

MAFIA Secret Sicilian society, originally political, which executed vengeance on anyone who injured any of its members. It degenerated into an organization of blackmailers, murderers and outlaws, and its members emigrated to various parts of the world. Thus those who are hostile to the law.

MAFUIKE Polynesian Old Woman who was the owner of the underworld and goddess of fire. An ancestress of Maui. When he asked her for fire she gave him one of her fingers, which Maui quenched in a stream. He kept demanding more fire until she gave him all her fingers and toes, and then in anger set the world ablaze. Rain, snow, and sleet came to the aid of Maui and saved the world. A seasonal myth. In some versions Maui threw germs of fire into the trees and that is why fire can now be brought forth by friction of wood. In some accounts the fire god is male and destroyed by Maui, who later miraculously restores life to the god.

MAGAR (MA, MAGULA-ANNA) Title of Sin, Sumerian moon god, as the great boat of heaven.

MAGATAMA In Japanese Buddhism and Shintoism a gem made of a pear-shaped piece of agate, crystal, jasper, shell or similar stone, used in religious worship. A white stone symbolizes the yang; a black one the yin.

MAGA-TSUMI Wicked Japanese demons or spirits, whose chief is Oh-maga-tsumi. Attendants of Susa-no-wo as storm god.

MAGDALENE (MADELEINE, MAGDA, MAGDALEN, MAGDALENA, MAUD, MAUN) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning of Magdala, a town by Galilee. In the Bible a prostitute who repented and became a devoted disciple of Jesus is called Mary Magdalene or simply Magdalene.

MAGEN DAVID (DAWID) Literally, David's shield. Symbol of Judaism. Mystic device formed by two equilateral triangles implying divine protection. Used as a talisman to ward off danger or evil. See hexagram.

MAGI Among ancient Persians the learned or priestly caste. Astrologers, augurs, keepers of sacred things, philosophers, sages, and tutors of kings among the Medes. Zoroastrian priests, they lived on a vegetable diet, and in all respects were much like the Brahmins and Druids. In the Bible the Magi are the three Oriental sages, the wise men from the East who came to worship the infant Jesus, namely: Balthazar, Gaspar, Melchior. Greek and Roman writers described them as veiling dissolute habits under a cloak of austerity, and they lost their high repute as a caste to become known as strolling enchanters, fortune tellers, jugglers and wizards. Source of the word magic. See Three Wise Men.

MAGIA Italian evil-eye. Word meaning magic enchantment.

MAGIC The science of primitive man, the means by which he believed he controlled the forces of nature or obtained the assistance of supernatural beings. Divination, enchantment, incantation, necromancy, sorcery, thaumaturgy, witchcraft. Sir James George Frazer classifies sorcery as positive magic and taboo as negative magic. Symbols of magic are: amulet, bat, black cat, boot, broomstick, caldron steaming, circle, cone, crescent moon, square, star, talisman, triangle, tulip, wishing hat or lamp, witch, and zodiacal signs. Magic stands for accomplishment, achievement, acquisition. It is also practiced to prove or disprove a claim of chastity. Various types are: Black - Evocation of demons for maleficent purposes. Demonistic - Operating with the aid of supernatural beings. Matriarchal - Women who assault men, especially men who wander into their domain, sexually or in a murderous way, are performing magic in connection with the fertility rite of rebirth. Agave, Circe, Dryope, Maenads exemplify this type of magic. Mutilation -

Practiced by fertility kings. See under mutilation. Natural - Working through the hidden powers of nature as by hypnotism and mind reading. Necromancy - Evocation of the souls of the dead. Patriarchal - The male magician, capable of shape-changes, pursues a female and gains her maidenhead. Connected with fertility magic, pursuers of this type are Apollo, Poseidon, Zeus. Religious - Regulated by the cult and the priesthood; accomplished by meditation and purification. Sacred prostitution - Practiced in sacred caves or at temples by both men and women in the services of a deity. A form of evocation and sympathetic magic to assure the people good crops and herds. See love orgies; prostitution, sacred. White - Evocation of angels and spirits of the elements. Also the aid of evil spirits who will make a compact with the Devil is invoked. Some occult scientists profess to produce supernatural results by the aid of the gifts or powers peculiar to the human soul.

Magic caldron. Typifies earth, which, when supplied with sun and water, provides an inexhaustible supply of food, gems, metals and other treasures.

Magic carpet. Carpet which appears worthless, but which transports anyone who sits on it wherever he wishes to go. A conventional prop of Eastern stories, and sometimes is called Prince Houssain's carpet because of the popular incident in the Arabian Nights. Symbolizes a cloud.

Magic chain or ring. Fertility. See Andvari.

Magic Flight. A motif worldwide in folk literature. Fugitives from a cannibal, giant monster, ogre, witch or evil moon, toss behind them magic objects which transform into death-dealing or time-consuming obstacles. Insects or objects will answer the ogre's call for the fugitive and thus misdirect the pursuer. A comb thrown behind becomes a forest; a mirror or drop of oil or water becomes a sea; a stone or bit of earth becomes a mountain; a thorn becomes a fire to help the fugitive. Sometimes obstacles are tossed by the pursuer in front of the fleeing hero, making escape difficult. In some tales the hero or pursuer or both transform into an animal or bird or other form, as in the Cerridwen and Gwion Bach story. Still another type of magic flight is that in which a treasure is thrown back, tempts the ogre, and delays the pursuit, as in the Atalanta type tale. The flight usually represents one season pursuing another or darkness pursuing light.

Magic food and drink. In Celtic lore holly berries promote longevity, renew life, and are the source of supernatural knowledge; the salmon provides divine wisdom. See Finn Mac Coul, Fraoch. In China the divine fungus and sacred peach are fruits of immortality, a food of genii, and a symbol of all that is bright and good. The Greek gods were nourished by ambrosia and nectar. In India the gods were provided with soma; in Persia with homa. Apples, broth, figs, grapes and pomegranates are mentioned as divinely provided. In Norse mythology Fenja and Menja grind out fertility. Magical food is a theme that appears in almost all literatures of the world, and almost every religion has a Tree of Life.

Magic hammer or ax. Implementation of lightning and thunder gods, such as of Thor and Zeus.

Magic ship. Vessel in which the sun makes his nightly journey through the realm of darkness.

It has various forms, including that of an ark, cup, and lotus.

Magic steed or vehicle. Enchanted animal or vehicle which carries its rider in an unbroken career of victory during his lifetime. Defeat and death come when the sun reaches its zenith; thus they belong to light heroes or aspects of the sun. Dubsain-glend; the Golden Fleece; Pegasus, the horse of Bellerophon; the wings of Icarus were such vehicles.

Magic sword. Sword which never misses its mark, i.e. lightning; rays of the sun or moon. Some famous swords of folk literature are the Durandal, Excalibur, Gai Bolga, Gram, Morglay, and the sword which Theseus left with a pair of sandals for his son.

MAGICIAN Card in tarot deck illustrated by a man with black hair (ignorance) wearing a white crown (knowledge). His emblem is a serpent with its tail in its mouth, sign of eternal life. He is a manifestation of the Emperor before his union with the High Priestess, a union which transforms her into the Empress. He typifies superconsciousness as master of subconsciousness, and is an enquirer into the wishes of the gods. Power and potency: concentration, divine motivation in man, will. Attainment: a fertile and productive garden. In divination corresponds to the number two and the Hebrew letter beth. Denotes: constructive power, craft, occult power and wisdom, skill, subtlety; also pain, snare of enemies. When card is in reverse: disgrace, mental disorders. Also known as Bagattel, Bagatoo, Juggler, Magus, and Pagat.

MAGINOT LINE A series of forts built in France which supposedly was an impregnable defense against German invasion and, when World War II commenced, the French settled behind it to fight an easy defensive war. Their attitude became known as the Maginot mentality. Neither the line nor the point of view proved adequate for modern warfare, and France was overrun by the Germans. Compare Great Wall of China.

MAGLIABECCHI A bookworm; one with a phenomenal memory. From the 17th century scholar Antonio Magliabecchi, who never forgot what he once had read and was able to turn at once to the exact page of any reference.

MAG MEL (MAG MELL) Literally, Pleasant Plain. Gaelic Elysium; land of everlasting life, where the inhabitants enjoyed continual feasting and pleasure without toil. It was ruled by Labraid and visited by Cuchulainn.

MAG MOR Literally, Great Plain. In Irish legend a marvelous land of the gods, where music was heard constantly. Its people were graceful and nothing was called "mine" or "thine." Its ale was more intoxicating than that of Ireland, and conception was without sin. Although its people were invisible, they were able to see, and never grew old.

MAGNA CHARTA Literally, the Great Charter. The charter which the English barons forced on King John at Runnymede on June 15, 1215; the foundation of personal liberty in England. By extension, any constitution safeguarding civil rights and personal liberty.

MAGNA MATER Literally, Great Mother. The Phrygian goddess Cybele, whose worship was carried into Greece and Rome. The mother of a god, she emasculates him, at the same time regarding him as the object of her love. She typifies fertile earth or nature, and in Roman art is usually shown seated on a throne drawn by lions. She wears the mural crown, which identifies her as a goddess of war, a protector of cities or fortifications. She parallels Astarte, Aphrodite, Ishtar, Isis, Mary, Venus. See Cybele.

MAGNANIMITY In an Italian icon personified by a robust young man with a lofty aspect. He holds the tongue of a lion.

MAGNET Attraction, love. Good luck charm. Sacred metal charged with divinity. Also called lodestone, which see for further symbolism.

MAGNI (MAGNE) Literally, might. In Norse mythology son of Thor and Jarnsaxa. Personification of the warm breeze. When only three nights old he removed the frost-giant Hrungir's foot from Thor's neck and saved his father's life. With his brother Modi, he shared possession of Thor's magic hammer after Ragnarok.

MAGNIFICENCE Typified by gems, orchid, peacock, silk, spirals, velvet, wolfhound.

MAGNOLIA July 26 birthday flower, symbolizing beauty, lofty soul, ornamentation, refinement, sensuousness. In the language of flowers: You are a lover of nature. Emblem of Louisiana and of Mississippi. In China called mu-lan. Flower of May, welcomer of spring. Known as the secretly-smiling flower; emblematic of feminine beauty and sweetness.

Swamp magnolia. Perseverance.

MAGNUS Masculine name from the Latin, meaning great.

MAGOG (1) In British tradition Gog and Magog, brothers, were the quarrelsome last survivors of a race of giants. They were forced to serve as porters at the gates of an old palace on the site of the Guildhall. See under Gog and Magog. (2) Hebrew name which was applied to an unknown tribe or tribes beyond the Caucasus. Symbolic of enemies of the Kingdom of God. See Gog and Magog. (3) In Irish mythology granddaughter of Noah, daughter of Japheth. She and her followers set out to settle Ireland. A moon goddess. Also known as Cessair, which see. In Genesis a son of Japheth is called Magog.

MAGOMBE Uganda (Africa) realm of the dead.

MAGPIE Garrulity, mischievousness, noisiness. An oracular bird. A bishop; so called from his black and white robes. Dream significance: bad omen. Chinese bird of good omen, bringer of joy. Love bird; magpies build the bridge on which Ch'ien Niu meets Chih Nu each year. In Europe of the middle ages its chatter in a tree indicated the visit of a stranger. In Greek antiquity a bird of Bacchus. In Iran enemy of the locust, which it destroys.

Four magpies. Chinese emblem of the four great delights: many-colored wedding-night candles; rain after drought; success in imperial examinations; unexpected meeting with an old friend.

MAG SLECHT Literally, plain of adoration. Celtic plain on which human sacrifices were made to Cromm Cruaich. Also the plain on which Tigernmas disappeared.

MAG-TURED (MAG TUIREADH) In Irish mythology the two battles fought on the plain of Moytura. The first was fought by the Tuatha De Danann against the Firbolgs, the other against the Fomors. When the Tuatha De Danann deities of light arrived on a May 1, they burned their boats, thus insuring that they would not flee from Ireland. They demanded the kingship from the Firbolgs, deities of darkness, who instead engaged them in battle. They were aided by Badb, Macha and Morrigan, war goddesses, who spread druidically-formed fog and caused a rain of fire and streams of blood to fall on the Firbolgs, until by counter spells the Firbolgs were able to clear the air. Each army sent out a warrior to parley. The envoy of the Firbolgs admired the slender sharp-pointed spear (shaft of light) of his adversary and the envoy of the Tuatha De Danann admired the thick rounded lance (night sky) of the Firbolgs, and they recommended that peace be declared and the country divided between the two peoples; thus light and darkness would equally share the land. King Eochaid of the Firbolgs would not agree to the peace terms. In the battle that followed he was killed, and the hand of Nuada, King of the Tuatha De Danann, was severed. When peace finally was declared, the Firbolgs accepted one-fifth of Ireland and settled in Connaught; thus the deities of light received the greater share. Having begun their battle on May 1 the deities of light naturally won.

Nuada, being maimed, was forced to abdicate, and the kingship was given to Bres. The Tuatha De Danann hoped he would win the goodwill of the Fomors, deities of darkness and the sea, and bring peace to the land. Instead Bres levied taxes and set the sky deities to perform menial tasks. Bres was forced to abdicate. He called upon the Fomors for an army and waged war to take Ireland away from the Tuatha De Danann and put it under the sea. Thus the second battle between deities of light and darkness was fought and again victory went to the Tuatha De Danann. These mythological battles mirror the warfare of the Gaels in which single combat figured largely.

MAGUA A bold, cruel Indian. From Cooper's Last of the Mohicans.

MAGUS (1) Talisman containing the beginnings and ends of the five verses of Genesis and representations of the creation of the world. It supposedly frees a man from all mischief, if he firmly believes in God, and brings him good fortune. (2) In a Slav fairytale the magic horse with a golden mane of Prince Slugobyl, thus a sun steed.

MAH (1) In Persian mythology fish which holds up the universe. A popular expression is, "From Mah to Mahi," meaning from the fish to the moon. The name means great. (2) Ancient Semitic great earth mother, virgin queen of the gods. Creator of man from clay, increaser and protector of animal life. She usually is portrayed holding an infant. Identical with Belit-ili, Gula, Innini, Ishtar. Other names by which she is known are: Ninhursag, queen of earth mountain; Ninmah, mighty queen; Ninsikilla, pure queen, virgin-wife of her son Nesu; Nintur, queen of the womb; Nunusesmea, queen who allots the fates.

MAH ABAD Literally, Great City (or People). In Persian mythology Mah Abad and his wife were the only two persons left on earth after the great cycle. Azer Abad, the last of their dynasty, left the earth because all flesh was corrupt. A period of anarchy followed him.

MAHA-BEN-ACH Ancient Eastern sun deity. Name means great son of light.

MAHABHARATA An account of rivalry. One of the two chief epics of ancient India, the other being the Ramayana. It deals with the war between the Kuravas and the Pandavas. Among its heroes are Rishyacranga and Yudhishthira. One of the well known episodes of the work is the story of Nala and Damayanta. With the Puranas and the Vedas, it is ascribed to the mythical author Vyasa. The name signifies great descendant of a king or tribe named Bharata.

MAHADEVA Literally, great god. In Hinduism a title applied to Agni, Brahma, Surya, Vayu and other deities, but used especially when referring to Siva, the destroyer. Devi, the great goddess, is called Mahadevi. The Title is usually applied to Durga or Purvati, wife of Siva.

MAHAGIRI Indo-Chinese nat, household or nature spirit. Mate of Shwe Na Be, he invariably is worshiped with her, with his sister Shwe Myet-hna, or with his niece Shin Ne Mi. In his honor the coconut is hung on the porch of every house. He is the deified form of a blacksmith named Nga Tin De who, with his sister who had become queen, was burned to death by the king. His festival is celebrated with dancing and plays. Formerly animals were sacrificed to him and offerings of alcoholic liquor were made to him. Also called Magari, Magaye, Maung Tin De.

MAHAITIAC Hidatsa (Siouan) name meaning Big-spring. One of two birds who were transformed into men. Their supernatural powers made them heroes of the tribe. The other bird-man was Tsakakaitiac.

MAHAKALA Literally, the great kala. Hindu god of death and of the underworld (realm of wealth). Later a god of war and fortune. Identified with the Japanese Daikoku. In Buddhism a title applied to two deities: Dharmapala Kalamahakala, the black protector, patron of tents and science; Dharmapala Sitamahakala, the white protector, patron of science, also a Brahmin. In some manifestations worshiped as a wealth god.

MAHAKALPA From the Sanscrit meaning the great kalpa; the unit of which past and future time is said to be computed by Hindu gods.

MAHALAH Hebrew name meaning tenderness.

MAHALALEEL Hebrew name meaning God is splendor.

MAHALATH Hebrew name meaning mild. Title of Psalms 53 and 88; conjectured to refer to the tune or the instrument used in chanting these psalms or to the spiritual malady which they lament.

MAHAMANTRANUSARINI In Buddhism one of the Pancaraksa, a Five-Spell goddess, Great Lady of mysteries. Invoked against disease. Her color is blue; her emblems, the pasa (noose) and vajra (thunderbolt); her location is east; her mudra is varada.

MAHAMAYA Buddhist Yidam or tutelary deity. Color, blue; emblem, kapala (skull cup); ornaments, Bodhisattva.

MAHAMAYURI In Buddhism the Great Peacock Lady, feminine Bodhisattva, one of the Pancaraksa or Five-Spell goddesses. Invoked against snake bite. Her color is green or yellow; her emblems are kalasa (amrita vase), khadga (sword), mayurapichcha (peacock feather), ratna (jewel), sara (arrow); her location is north; her mudra is varada.

MAHAMUDRA Tibetan Buddhist school founded by Mila-repa. Adherents are known as the Kargyupas (semi-reformed).

MAHANAIM Hebrew name meaning two camps or two hosts. Place where a host of angels met the host of Jacob. David took refuge there during Absalom's rebellion.

MAHANEHDAN Hebrew name meaning camp of Dan.

MAHAPANCARAJA The Five Great Kings of Tibetan Buddhism. Astrologers and magicians, protectors of monasteries and state oracles. They are: Bi-har, king of deeds; Chos-skyon, king of magic; dGra-lha, king of the body; Klu-dban, king of speech; Thok-chho, king of accomplishments. Shown with broadbrimmed hats and flowing garments. Compare Pancamaharaja.

MAHA PRALAYA In Hindu belief total destruction of all things at the end of a kalpa (a day and a night of Brahma or 4, 320, 000, 000 years), when the seven Lokas (worlds) and their inhabitants, arhats, gods and Brahma himself, are reabsorbed in the primeval chaos.

MAHAPRATISARA In Buddhism one of the Pancaraksa or Five-Spell goddesses. Invoked in spells against dangers, illness, and sins. Her color is yellow, her emblem is a cakra (wheel) at breast, her location is south.

MAHAPURUSA The Great Male whose marks appear on Buddha. A term also applied to Narayana, a form of Vishnu.

MAHARAI Hebrew name meaning hasty.

MAHARAJA (MAHARAJAH) Literally, Great King. Title applied to the high priest of Buddhism in Tibet. The costume and colors of his rank are yellow robe and red leather slippers. When mounted on his sacred elephant and cutting branches from trees with his jeweled sword symbolizes conquest over the forces of evil (Kali). The title is given to Hindu princes and to some native rulers.

MAHARSHIS Vedic holy sages or rishis.

MAHASAHASRAPRAMARDANI One of the Buddhist Pancaraksa, or Five-Spell goddesses. Invoked against earthquakes, evil spirits, and storms. Great lady of the void; her location is center. Her color is white, her emblems are the khadga (sword) and pasa (noose), and her mudra is varada.

MAHASIDDHAS The eighty-four great sorcerers of Buddhism. Usually shown on thang-kas (banners). Sometimes clad as monks, sometimes as yogis, often nude with meditation strap. Frequently shown flying and doing other supernatural feats. The best known are: Luipa, Naropa, Saraha, Tailopa.

MAHASITAVATI In Buddhism one of the Pancaraksa or Five-Spell goddesses. The Great Lady of cool grove, invoked in spells against ferocious beasts, poisonous insects, and plants. Her color is red; her emblem, pustaka (book), her location, west.

MAHASTHAMAPRATA (MAHASTHAMA) A Buddhist Dhyani-bodhisattva; he who has attained great strength. One of the two chief Bodhisattvas to occupy thrones in the heaven of Amitabha. With Avalokitesvara, he aids those who invoke Amitabha's name to obtain salvation. His emblems are khadga (sword) and sara (arrow).

MAHASUKKA In Buddhism eternal bliss. Nirvana, which see.

MAHAT In Hinduism the great-one or primal intelligence; first production of nature; first product of Pradhana.

MAHATH Hebrew name meaning dissolution.

MAHATMA Literally, great-souled one. In esoteric Buddhism and by Theosophists an adept of the highest order, one who has reached perfection intellectually, physically and spiritually. As his knowledge is perfect he produces effects which appear miraculous. One who has retired from the world and, by means of long ascetic discipline, has subdued the passions; he is able to perform startling feats and suffer the most terrible tortures.

MAHAVIRA (1) In Hinduism caldron of strength. See gharma. (2) In Jainism the last of the Tirthakara. He descended from his divine abode in the form of a lion and became an embryo in the womb of Devananda, wife of the Brahman Rsabhadatta. Indra, dissatisfied to have Mahavira born of a poor Brahmanical family, exchanged the embryo in the womb of Devananda with one in the womb of Trisala, wife of the Ksatriya Siddhartha. Gods in great number attended the birth and nativity rites, and the prosperity of the house increased so the baby was called Vardhamana (He that increases). At the age of thirty he gave himself over to a prolonged life of asceticism and religious teaching. The gods descended at his death as at his birth, and in the shape of a heap of ashes, a great comet appeared. His birth parallels that of Krishna; his life bears a resemblance to that of Christ.

MAHAYANA The Great Vehicle of Buddhism; the salvation for the masses. Doctrine of northern Buddhists after the schism which took place about 100 A. D., based on Nagarjuna's teachings. Buddha was deified as the Supreme Being and worshiped with other divinities, especially the Bodhisattvas who refused to enter Nirvana until all suffering humanity is saved. The Little Vehicle is called Hinayana, which see. Also see Tantric, Yuga.

MAHAYUGA From the Sanscrit meaning Great Yuga. See Yuga.

MAHDI Literally, God-directed. Mohammedan Messiah; the last of the Imams. The Moslems believe he will reign in the last days and convert the world to Islam. The Sunnis believe that he is still to appear. The Shiah's believe that the Mahdi has lived already; certain of them say that he is in hiding and will reappear. Many have claimed to be the Mahdi, among them Mohammed Ahmed, (1843-1885), who raised an insurrection in Egypt in 1883.

MAHER-SHALAL-HASH-BAZ

From the Hebrew, meaning make haste to the prey or fall upon the spoils. Isaiah gave the name to one of his sons for a prophetic intimation of the speedy victory of the Assyrians over Israel and Syria. In Freemasonry signifies readiness for action.

MAHISHA (MAHESHASURA, MAHISHASURA) In Hinduism Buffalo-headed monster of evil killed by Durga in her battle with the Asuras. In the Mahabharata monster killed by Skanda. In other accounts said to have been slain by Bhavani. The modern form of Mahisha is Bhainsasura, who lives in the fields and tramples corn unless he is appeased by the offering of a pig or is worshiped when the rice is ripening. Also the name of the harvest festival, at which there is much rejoicing, held in his honor in October.

MAHOL Hebrew name meaning dancer.

MAHOMET See Mohammed.

MAHO-PENETA Iroquoian Great-Spirit. Akin to the Greek Pan and the Welsh Mawr-Pen-Aethir.

MAHORA-NUI-A-TEA Polynesian primeval goddess. Name signifying great spreading light. Spouse of Maku and, by him, mother of Rangī. In New Zealand mythology called Mahora-nui-a-rangī.

MAHOUND (MAHOUN) Name of contempt for Mohammed, particularly in romances of the crusaders. The name implies an evil spirit, a pagan god or idol, a monster, Satan.

MAHR Germanic nightmare demon. Its form varied, sometimes an animal, a dwarf, a giant, or a human. Usually the soul of a person which had left its body; a specter from the realm of the dead.

MAHRKUSHA Literally, destroyer or devastator. Iranian demon who will destroy mankind by frost and snow. Later confused with Malqos, meaning autumnal rain.

MAHT Same as Maat, which see.

MAHU Scottish devil; demon who instigates theft. In Shakespeare's King Lear a fiend. Derived from Mahound.

MAHUIKA (MAFUIKE) Polynesian underworld goddess of earthquakes or fire. Mother of Pere (Pele).

MAIA Originally a Greek mountain nymph; later identified as one of the daughters of Atlas and Pleione. She was the most beautiful of the Pleiades and, by Zeus, mother of Hermes. Her name means grandmother or increaser. She was a great mother goddess paralleling the Hindu Maya. The Romans identified her with an old Italian goddess of spring called Maia Majesta. Her festival was celebrated on May 1, and the month is named after her.

MAIDEN Dawn, gentleness, grace, innocence, promise, spring, virginity.

Maidenhair fern. March 22 birthday flower. Symbolic of discretion, secrecy. Dedicated to Pluto (Dis, Hades).

Maiden of the White Mule. In Grail legend maiden who meets Percival after he has been overtaken by a storm in a forest. She tells him the mysterious light he beheld proceeded from the Grail, but refuses to tell him what the Grail may be.

Maid Marian. A corrupt form of Mad Morion, a character in May Day games, morris dances, and other ancient sports. So called from the helmet (morion) worn. Generally the character was a boy dressed in girl's clothing; thus an impudent, masculine, or unchaste woman. The name became attached to the May queen and, in morris dances, coupled with Friar Tuck. Since Tudor times the greenwood sweetheart of Robin Hood. She dressed as a page and shared his fortunes. In all characterizations she appears to be a fertility mother or symbol. In early rites she may have represented a bi-sexual deity. See Androgynous deities.

Maid of Kent. Joan Bocher, executed in 1550 for her views as to Christ's nativity, thus a religious martyr.

Maid of Orleans. Joan of Arc, which see.

Maid of Saragossa. Augustina Zaragoza, famous for her heroism during the siege of Saragossa, Spain, by the French in 1808 and 1809.

MAIDERE Tatar god adopted from the Buddhist Maitreya. Sent by Ulgen, over-god, to convert mankind and teach man to fear God. Erlik resisted him, and the Devil, coming to Erlik's assistance, attacked Maidere with a sword. Maidere's blood took fire, and in the world conflagration which followed Erlick and all wicked people were destroyed.

MAIDHYOI-MAONGHA Cousin of Zoroaster, for ten years his only disciple.

MAIL Chivalry, conflict, crusade, war.

Mailed fist. Aggressiveness, military might, threat of war.

MAIMAKTES In Greek mythology he who rages and thirsts for blood. Another face of Zeus Meilichios the gentle. Zeus of the stormy sky.

MAIMED KING See Lame king under king.

MAINE Emblem: pine cone and tassel; motto: Dirigo (I direct); nicknames: Lumber, Old Dirigo, Pine Tree.

MAIN STREET Typical name of the principal thoroughfare in a small town; thus the typical people of such a town.

MAIRA In Greek mythology dog of Icarus.

MAIRA-MONAN Creator-transformer culture hero of the South American Tupinamba Indians. Beneficent originator of agriculture, giver of laws.

MAIRE (MAIRIN) Irish for Mary; used to designate the Virgin Mary.

MAISO Stone woman; first human being of the Paressi tribe of the Matto Grosso Indians of Brazil. Darukavaitere, the stone man, was her first son.

MAITREYA The loving one; fourth or coming Buddha. The fifth mortal or coming Manusibuddha. He will manifest himself 5,000 years after Gautama's death. Also worshiped as a Dhyani-bodhisattva. His asana is bhadra or dhyaana; his color is yellow; his emblems are caitya, cakra, campa, kalasa, padma, stupa, his mudra is dharmacakra; his vahanas are a lion or a lion throne, a white elephant. In China he is called Pou-T'ai; in Japan, Miroku (Hotei); in Tibet, Byamspa or Chem-pa. By Tartars adopted as Maidere.

MAIZE American Indian symbol of fertility, staff of life. In Peru called saramama (i. e. fire-Ramama) and worshiped as a symbol of sustenance. Compare potato.

MAJOI (MAJAW) SHINGRA PUM Burmese sacred mountain; site of the home of the first ancestor. Parallels Garden of Eden.

MAJOK Among the Dinkas of Africa sacred ox which heads the herd of cattle. Its horns have been trained so that one points fore and one aft. The custom has been borrowed from the ancient Egyptians, an idea which the Latins preserved in the worship of Janus, and the majok probably carries the same symbolism of east and west, light and darkness, morning and night, summer and winter. Maj of majok is akin to mage, ok to ox, thus wise ox.

MAKARA From the Sanscrit meaning sea-monster. Steed of Varuna, the water-god. Wonder-dragon, half fish, half goat. Compare Ea. Represents Carpi-corn in the Hindu zodiac. In Buddhism the lion, as steed or throne, and a makara-headed goddess typifies peace.

MAKARAVAKTRA A Buddhist dakini or feminine deity of the air capable of conferring supernatural powers on those who invoke her.

Lion-headed goddess, acolyte of Sridevi. Her asana is standing; her color is green; her emblems are kapala, karttrka, khatvanga. In Tibet called Chu-srin-mo. Compare Dakinis.

MAKEBATE Plant also known as Jacob's ladder. Typifies ascent to heaven. Parallels the beanstalk.

MAKH (MAH) Assyrian-Babylonian virgin goddess of fecundity and procreation. Spouse of Marduk. Name under which Belit-itani was worshiped at Nin-tud.

MAKHA Vedic demon of darkness overcome by Bhrguis.

MAKSAMERI Esthonian world of the dead; gathering place for sorcerers, witches, etc. In medieval German legend called Lebermeer.

MA-KU In Chinese mythology favorite companion and handmaid of Hsi Wang Mu.

MAKU Literally, damp. Polynesian primeval deity. Husband of Mahora-nui-a-tea, father of Rangi. In New Zealand a male existence without shape, formed in Whai-tua (Space) with the female shapeless existence, Mahora-nui-a-rangi (Great Spreading Light). They became the parents of Rangipotiki (Heavens).

MAKUTU Maori cannibal giant who consumed the hero Wahieroa. An aspect of storm. Rata, Wahieroa's posthumous son, after a long and perilous journey, found the giant's cave and, promising him warm food, threw red hot coals in the giant's mouth, and then killed him. A tale comparable to that of Odysseus and Polyphemus.

MALA (1) One of the Eight Mothers in Buddhism. Peaceful in aspect. Her color is yellow, she has two or four arms, and holds a rosary. Usually shown arhaparyankasana (dancing). In Tibet called hPhren-ba-ma. (2) Buddhist rosary, made of beads, bones, seeds. A skull rosary is used in demon worship. Emblem of Avalokitesvara, Prajnaparamita, and the Yellow Tara.

MALACHI The last of the minor prophets of the Old Testament. Little is known of him; his name is said to be a general term meaning angel of the lord or messenger, a prophet, rather than a proper name. He was the prophet of the Restoration and foretold the coming of Elijah. In art he is shown holding a scroll with an angel near him.

MALACHITE Stone with strong talismanic potency; provider of health, prosperity, and success in love. In Egyptian antiquity engraved to represent the sun, which as the source of light dispelled the evil machinations of demons and sorcerers. In Russia tied to cribs as a charm against the evil eye.

MALAGIGI In Carolingian legend one of Charlemagne's paladins. He was brought up by the fairy Orianda and became a famous enchanter. Italian form of the French Maugis.

MALAGROWTHER, SIR MUNGO In Scott's Fortunes of Nigel, a discontented old courtier, made bitter by infirmities and misfortune he tries to make everyone about him ill-tempered.

MALAK-BEL Ancient Semitic sun god; messenger of Bel. Worshiped in the city of Palmyrene. Comparable to El and Rakkab.

MALALEEL Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning shining of God.

MALA LITH Literally, grey eyebrows. Wind hag in the Irish epic Fingal. Also a corn spirit. She appears to be identical with Black Annis and Cailleach.

MALAMBRUNO In Cervantes' Don Quixote giant who enchants Antonomasia and her husband. Don Quixote breaks the enchantment by mounting the wooden horse Clavigo.

MALAPROP, MRS. In Sheridan's The Rivals, a woman who uses words inappropriately; thus one noted for grotesquely humorous blunders. The name is taken from the French mal a propos, i.e. inappropriate, out of place, unsuitable; the character is borrowed from Mrs. Winifred Jenkins in Smollett's Humphry Clinker.

MALBECCO In Spenser's Faerie Queene a miserly old man, personification of self-inflicted torments. When his young wife Helenore sets fire to their house and elopes with Sir Paridel, Malbecco casts himself from a rock and his ghost is metamorphosed into jealousy.

MALCA Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning the worker.

MALCANDROS (MALCANDER) Semitic god El as god of the underworld. Also Malk-addir (Malk, the mighty).

MALCHAM Hebrew name meaning their king.

MALCHEDIEL Hebrew name meaning God's counsel-king.

MALCHIAH Hebrew name meaning Jah is king.

MALCHIEL Hebrew name meaning God is king.

MALCHUS Hebrew name meaning counselor. In the New Testament the servant of the high priest. His ear was cut off by Peter and miraculously restored by Christ, thus manifesting His divinity.

MALCOLM Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning kingly.

MALE Identified as the active principle in nature; impregnator of the egg of life. The originating, active, positive, upright principles. First human form in Hebrew, Hindu, Iranian and other cosmogonies. Symbolized by anything that is fiery, long, straight, or upright, and by animals that are prolific or strong. Various symbols are: Aaron's rod, ankh, arrow, bull, column, crozier, crux ansata, cylinder, dart, fig leaf or tree, fire, firestone, flint, forefinger, goat, hare, herma, horse, ivy, Jesse's rod, lightning flash, mandrake, oak, obelisk, palm, phallus, pillar, pinnacle, pine cone or tree, plough, point within a circle, pyramid, ram, red color, rock, rod, sign post, sky, spade, spear, staff, sun, sword, Taekeih (China), thumb, tower, tri-form leaf, wild goose. Typified by the lingam (Sanskrit), penis (Latin), phallus (Greek), yang (Chinese), yo (Japanese). Personified by giants, heroes, and creator or fertility deities, such as: Amun-Ra, Ares, Bacchus, Baal-Peor, Bel, Cronus, Cuchulainn, Dionysus, Faunus, Finn mac Coul, Gwydion, Iao, Izanagi, Jehovah, Jupiter, Krishna, Mars, Neptune, Odin, Osiris, Pan, Poseidon, Priapus, Quetzalcoatl, Saturn, satyrs, Sigurd, Tezcatlipoca, Triton, Uranus, Zeus. See man.

Male-female. In China yang-yin; in India lingam-yoni (ling-yoni), in Japan yo-in; in Tibet yab-yum; all representing father-mother, husband-wife, or active and inactive or positive and negative principles in nature.

Male figure. Typifies science.

MALEBOLGE The eighth circle of Dante's Inferno. The name is from the Italian meaning evil trenches, and is so called on account of the ten rock-circled rings or evil chasms each with its separate kind of fraud. By extension any cesspool of filth or iniquity.

MALECASTA In Spenser's Faerie Queene mistress of Castle Joyous. Personification of lust.

MALEGER In Spenser's Faerie Queene typifies debased passions.

MALENGIN In Spenser's Faerie Queene personification of guile.

MALICE Represented by a goblin or monkey. In an Italian icon personified by an ugly old woman. Instead of hair, she has a thick covering of snakes. She wears a yellow garment decorated with spiders and holds a knife and a purse. A peacock stands on one side of her, a raging bear on the other.

MALKIEL Hebrew name meaning God is my king.

MALKOSH Iranian deity who caused devastation by rain.

MALKUTH In the cabala tenth Sephira. The indwelling glory, the throne of justice. Malkuth is the fire which rises or issues from Yesod, the organ of generation. Name signifies kingdom.

MALLET Miracle worker, possessor of the power of magic. Corresponds to gavel, hammer, wand. In Japanese mythology attribute of Daikoku.

Mallet and chisel. Sculptor.

MALLOW Flower symbolizing beneficence, mildness. In China called kwei hua; emblem of September. In the East a food for the poor.

Syrian mallow. Consumed by love.

Ventian mallow. Delicate beauty.

MALLUCH Hebrew name meaning counselor.

MALONE Masculine name from the Greek through the Celtic, meaning the dark.

MALSUM In Abnaki (Algonquin) legend evil (non-productive) and stupid brother of Gluskap. A marten or wolf deity. See Gluskap.

MALTESE CROSS Eight pointed cross in token of the Knights of Malta. Its design refers to the cardinal directions. According to mystics it typifies the design of the Great Pyramid and is symbolic of divine or heavenly illumination.

MALUS The mast of the constellation the Ship in the Southern Sky.

MALVIN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning chief and from the Teutonic, meaning work friend. Feminine form, Malvina, which also is said to mean smooth snow.

MAMA (MAMI) Sumerian great goddess, mother-womb (earth). After the flood Ea commanded the great gods to destroy a lesser god that Mama might mingle clay with the slain god's blood and make a man, thus giving the created being both divine and mortal elements or an immortal soul in a temporary body. Compare P'an Ku, Ymir. Mama was adopted by the Chaldeans and worshiped as the Lady of the Gods, creatrix of all things. In some accounts mentioned as the mother-wife of Shulpae, the name of Marduk as the planet Jupiter. Identical with Ama, Mah, Ninhursag.

MAMA ALLPA Peruvian mother-earth or harvest goddess. Her image has many breasts.

MAMA COCHA Peruvian primeval ocean-mother. Oldest of the goddesses. Worshiped by fishermen.

MAMA CORA Peruvian maize goddess. Daughter of Pirua. Name equating with care, core, coeur, Kore, Mother Carey.

MAMAKI In Buddhism sakti of the Dhyani-buddha Ratnasambhava; thus a Dhyani-buddhasaktis. Her asana is lalita; her color, yellow; her emblems are kapala, karttrka, mayurapichha, ratna; her mudras, varanda and vitarka. She holds a stem of flowers supporting three mayurapichha at shoulder level.

MAMAMOUCI A Turkish title invented by Moliere in his comedy Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme and conferred as a mock honor.

MAMA OGLLO (OELLA) Peruvian first woman. Sister-wife of Manco Capac. With him, she sprang from the Sun and the Moon. She and her husband descended from heaven to found a colony at the spot where they could sink into the ground the wedge given to them by their parents. They founded Cuzco and became the founders of the Inca royal line. She invented spinning, which she taught to women. The pair resemble Izanagi and Izanami.

MAMA QUILLA Peruvian moon goddess.

MAMBRINO Legendary Moorish king whose golden helmet rendered the wearer invisible. In medieval romances it was sought by knights. In Cervantes' Don Quixote the hero believes that the brass basin, which the barber when caught in a rain storm claps on his head, is the enchanted helmet of Mambrino.

MAMELUKE One of a body of Circassian slaves sold by Genghis Khan to the sultan of Egypt as a standing army. In 1254 the mamelukes placed one of their members as ruler of Egypt, and they continued to have a voice in the government until 1811, when they were annihilated by wholesale massacre. The term is applied figuratively to an aggressive champion of the pope, as the Jesuits are called the pope's mamelukes.

MAMIT (MAMITUM) Sumerian curse demoness. Goddess of destiny.

MAMMON Syrian god of riches and worldliness. In Hebraic-Christian tradition god of unrighteousness. Ben Johnson in the Alchemist gives the name Sir Epicure Mammon to a worldly sensualist. In Milton's Paradise Lost Mammon is one of the fallen angels, and in Spenser's Faerie Queene the incarnation of the evils of wealth and miserliness. The word mammon is used to indicate avarice.

MAMMOTH Among Northeastern Siberians believed standing in the cosmic ocean holding up the world. When it moves it causes earthquakes.

MA-MO One of the eight classes of indigenous Tibetan gods; black-she-devils; disease mistresses who often are spouses of malignant demons.

MAMONA Same as Attabeira.

MAMPES In Menek Kaien (Malay peninsula) folklore guardian of Balan Bacham, the bridge of the dead, which spans the sea to Belet, the afterworld. Flowers grow on both sides of the bridge. Mampes conducts only good souls across it. Resembles Al Sirat, Gjolbridge, Pul Chinavad.

MAMRE Hebrew name meaning firmness. The cave of Machpelah, in which Abraham was buried, was adjacent to the town of Mamre, which was named after an Amorite prince who aided Abraham in the rescue of Lot from the burning Sodom.

MAMURIUS VETURIUS Roman celestial smith who executed the copies of the ancilia, the shield of Mars. A representative of the old year. Also portrayed as a shepherd god. His female counterpart was Anna Perenna. March 14 was the date of his celebration.

MAMZER In Jewish antiquity child of a union forbidden by Mosaic law.

MAMZRAUMANA Pueblo earth goddess. Identical with Tuwa-pontumsi.

MAN (1) Name of a gnostic Aeon. (2) Typifies the active principle in nature. Brain, fe-cundator, human race, knowledge, majesty, mystery, strength, sun, unity, wisdom. Symbolized by the color red, whatever is fiery, long, pointed, straight, or upright, as an arrow, dart, column, rod, shaft, spear, sword. In the West, personified by Adam. In Freemasonry an educated, purified, and restrained man is symbolized by a perfect or polished ashlar; a naked, ignorant, vicious man is symbolized by a rough ashlar. According to occultists, self-consciousness as opposed to woman, subconsciousness, and to the child, regenerated personality. A just man is typified by a cypress, a prosperous man by a green tree, a righteous man by a palm tree. Word akin to Min, Pan. See male. In early mythologies man typified order. Woman, chaos, without man's help, created the world; then out of nowhere man appeared, took control, and established order; thus out of chaos comes order. In Ainu tradition man represents cleanliness; because he is clean, his business is to make offerings to the gods. In Buddhism a mount of Yama, who stands on a man, a bull, or a woman. Christian emblem of Saint Matthew inasmuch as he represented the human side of Christ. See Evangelists. In Egyptian antiquity a man was carved on funeral urns to guard the stomach and large intestines. See Horus's four sons. In Hebraic-Christian tradition image of God. Woman came after man and caused him to be driven from Paradise, but he retained nobility and loftiness of soul. In Hinduism, spark of the Oversoul or vital fire known as Brahm.

Brass man. Manual worker. In Greek mythology Talus, creature fashioned by Hephaestus to guard Crete. He traversed the island twice a year; coming upon any strange wayfarer, he made himself hot and embraced the stranger to death. Typifies the sun's scorching heat.

Black man. Satan.

Deformed man. In many cultures typifies an evil man; one who carries defeat in his body for all to see.

Eating a man. See cannibalism.

Man betrayed. A mythological motif is the betrayal of the sun hero by an earth, gloaming, or moon goddess in the interest of night or winter. Heroes so betrayed were Gilgamesh, Llew Llaw, Samson.

Man disguised. See man passing as a woman.

Man ferrying another across a stream. In Buddhism self-consciousness. See Sipa Khorlo.

Man Friday. A faithful and useful servant. From the savage in Daniel Defoe's Robinson Crusoe.

Man in an iron mask. Man of mystery. From the French state prisoner buried in 1703 under the name of Marchiali, whose identity never has been conclusively established. In modern fiction criminals are sometimes so portrayed.

Man in the moon. See Face in the moon.

Man of Belial. An evil man. The word Belial means wicked or worthless; the ungodly are called children or sons of Belial.

Man of blood. Any man of violence.

Man of blood and iron. Otto Prince von Bismarck; "blood" because of his policies; "iron" because of his will.

Man of gold. A man of wealth. According to Plato a guardian.

Man of iron. One with an indomitable will. According to Plato a manual worker.

Man of silver. According to Plato a soldier.

Man of Sorrows. The Messiah. Applied to Christ.

Man of wax. A model man, a fashion plate.

Man on horseback. The solar horseman; god of the sun crossing the sky. In some religions typifies death. Also symbolizes a man of authority or power, a conqueror, military dictator, unexpected leader. The appellation was given to General Ernest Boulanger, who rose to rank unexpectedly, and who frequently appeared on the streets of Paris mounted on a horse.

Man passing as a woman. A mythological theme suggesting that the young sun is under female tutelage until old enough to bear arms. In some tales the hero does not merely disguise himself as a woman but actually becomes a woman for a period of time. The belief that the sun was under female tutelage during certain stages is apparent in the Celtic stories. Cuchulainn goes to Scathach to learn the warrior craft and Gwydion tricks Arianrhod into giving their son arms. Greek heroes such as Achilles, Dionysus, Heracles, and others lived for a time disguised as girls in women's quarters of a palace and plied the distaff.

Man plucking fruit. In Buddhism indulgence or sensual enthrallment. See Sipa Khorlo.

Man and prostrate horse. In Buddhism mounts of Beg-tse, who stands on them.

Man scalped. In Pawnee tradition a man slain in battle and scalped is believed to become a ghost or magic being. Such men dwell in caves or haunt the wilds for shame keeps them from returning to their own people.

Man seated. Zeus, alluding to his immutable essence.

Man sexually assaulted. See Sexual assault.

Man's eye pierced with an arrow. In Buddhism mental and physical pain. See Sipa Khorlo.

Man with club (or sword). God, healer, savior. He appears in Christianity as a warrior saint.

Man working at forge. Celestial artisan, forger of the universe, master workman. Goibniu, Hephaestus, Ptah, Regin, Vulcan.

Old man. Old year, death, final conqueror, winter.

White man. An aspect of the sun or supreme deity. In almost all parts of the world deities of lights are conceived as white or with blond hair and blue eyes.

Winged man. Angel, Saint Matthew.

MANA (MANIA) Roman goddess about whom little is known. Probably a queen of the Manes, gentle and kind spirits of the dead.

MANABHOZHO (MANIBOZHO, MINABOZHO) In Algonquin mythology grandson of Nokomis, earth mother; son of West Wind. Elder brother or twin of Chibiabos. Sun god. Incarnation of vital energy, creator and restorer of earth, giver of animal food, elder brother or lord of beasts and birds. A healing divinity, he instituted the Mide-wiwin, sacred medicine feast. He was a warrior and a master of guile, thus a beneficent trickster. Among the Chippewas, he was the servant of Dzhe Manito, the good spirit. Originally worshiped in the form of a serpent, later as the Great Hare. He probably owes his important place in Algonquin legend to his prolific reproductive powers, his usefulness as a food, his speed. His ability to change his coat with the seasons enhanced his reputation as a magician. Although a benefactor of mankind, he was vain and sometimes stupid. Prototype of Michabo, Nanaboojoo, Nenaboj, Wabasso.

Manabozho and Chibiabos. Brothers in conflict; typifying prey and carnivore. Manabozho was author of life; Chibiabos, lord of the ghost world. Usually represented as hare, coyote, or rabbit and lynx, marten, or wolf, or as duck and buzzard, according to the section of the country. Among the Abnaki and Micmacs called Gluscap and Malsum; among the Menominee, Manabush (fire) and Wolf; among the Montagnais and Potawatomi called Messou and Lynx. Identical with the Iroquoian twins Yoskeha (Ioskeha) and Tawiscara.

MANABUSH Menominee analogue of Manabozho.

MANA-GARME See Maanegarm.

MANAH Arabic angelic goddess. Probably a giver of fertility. Her idol, the oldest known to the Arabs, was an unhewn stone. It was destroyed by Mohammed's orders.

MANALA Finno-Ugric underground world or world of the dead. Also called Tuonela. Compare Maksameri, Radien-aimo, Rut-aimo, Yabmeaimo.

MANALAN-RAKKI Finno-Ugric underground hound which barks furiously. Resembles Cerebus.

MANAMA Chief deity of the Bagobo tribes of the Philippine Islands.

MANANNAN (MANANNAN MAC LIR) In Irish mythology a Tuatha De Danann deity. Son of Lir, mate of Fand and of Uchtdelbh. Father of Mongan and Niamh. Sea god and lord of Tir na nOg, land of eternal youth (realm of the dead). Lug, the sun deity, was given to his care (the sun sinks into the sea); he trained his foster son in athletic feats and gave him a breastplate, which no weapon could pierce; a corselet, which preserved the wearer from wounds; the horse Enbarr, fleet as the spring wind; and a sword, the wound of which no one could survive. His wife Fand deserted him for the sun hero Cuchulainn. To win the love of Fiachna's wife, by whom he became the father of Mongan, he assumed the form of Fiachna; a legend which echoes that of Zeus and Alcmene. To peasants he gave good crops. He was the special guardian of Irishmen in foreign parts or at sea. Sailors invoked him as God of Headlands. His paradise consisted of thrice fifty islands, but his favorite haunts were the Isle of Man, to which he gave his name (he probably originated as a local god of the island), and the Isle of Arran, where he had a palace called Emhain of the Apple Trees. He endowed other gods with a mantle which made them invisible (thus the sun, moon, light and land are hidden by the sea). At his banquets, he fed deities from his pigs, which, like the boar Saehrimnir in Norse mythology, renewed themselves as soon as they were eaten (typifying the evolution of the seasons). Those who ate his pigs (fertility) never grew old. He gave the Tuatha De Danann immortality with Goibniu's brew. Capable of shape changes he frequently assumed the form of a bird. He had three legs and made great speed by using them in the manner of the spokes of a wheel. His possessions included a bag made of a crane's skin, in which he carried the treasure of the sea (eloquence of sea folk); a boat called Wave-sweeper, which propelled and guided itself; a cup which broke in pieces if three lies were told and reunited when three truths were uttered; a horse named Splendid Mane, swifter than the wind; and many famous weapons (waves), which never failed to slay. The apple and the hazel were sacred to him. When Christianity reached Ireland, he fled to Scotland. In a 16th century story he was portrayed as a serving man in the home of a noble. His music was such as men never had heard before; he bewitched people to slumber; was a conjurer, producing from his magic bag a boy, dog, hog, and lady, who climbed a silken thread which he tossed up to a cloud. He healed miraculously, took off a man's head, put it on again, and went from place to place, suddenly disappearing from each. His prototype in Welsh mythology is Manawyddan.

MANASSA Hindu snake goddess, sister of the serpent king Sessa. From the Sanscrit manas, meaning mind, origin of thought, the ego or individualizing principle sometimes called the rational or human soul.

MANASSEH Literally, causing forgetfulness. In Old Testament older son of Joseph. His descendants constituted one of the twelve tribes of Israel. Its sacred animal was the unicorn; its colors black, red, white; its gem amethyst or agate; its plant palm tree or vine. It ruled the zodiacal house Libra. Manasseh was also the name of a cruel tyrant of Judah until taken a prisoner by the Assyrians. When restored to his throne he devoted himself to undoing his former evils and, after a reign of fifty-five years, longer than that of any other king of Judah, he died in peace.

MANAT (MANATUM) Nabataean goddess of fate and death. Mother goddess who fixed the destinies of mankind, cities, and nations. Represented by rectangular stones. In plural form Manawatu. Identical with Meni.

MANAWYDDAN Brythonic sea god, lord of the realm of the dead. Son of Llyr and Penardun; brother of Bran. Master of magic and useful crafts. After the battle with the sun deity Matholwych he was one of the seven to escape. In the war Bran was killed. Manawyddan lamented that the death of Bran left him landless, and Pryderi, son of Pwyll, gave him land in Dyfed (Annwfn), and he became ruler of Caer Sidi. Pryderi also gave him his mother Rhiannon as a wife. The land was cursed by Llewyl, a friend of Gwawl, to avenge an insult to Gwawl by Pwyll. Manawyddan instructed Pryderi and broke the curse. The land became fruitful, and Manawyddan became warder of the marvelous caldron of inspiration, which in later legend became famous as the Holy Grail. This is a fertility or time myth, in which Manawyddan, as lord of the underworld, is custodian of its wealth. Manawyddan probably was derived from the Irish god Manannan.

MANCHINEEL Tree symbolizing falsehood, hypocrisy.

MANCO CAPAC Inca god of the north. With Mama Oglo, he was an offspring of the Sun and Moon, and with her descended from heaven to found a colony at the spot where they could sink the wedge their parents had given them into the ground. They founded Cuzco and became the progenitors of the Inca royal line. He became the planet Pirua (Jupiter), from which Peru derived its name. Probably identical with Ayar Manco. Resembles Izanagi.

MANDALA Buddhist magic circle used in invoking deities. In the center Buddha is portrayed within a lotus. The outer section is divided into four equal parts to represent air, earth, fire, water, and typifies the elements of circular motion. A ritual altar object is a rice mandala, symbolic offering of the universe. It is made of rice to represent all the continents of the Buddhist universe and is offered daily. Compares with the Christian wafer.

MANDARA Hindu sacred mountain. Used as a churning stick by Kasyapa when trying to obtain the ambrosia of the Milky Ocean. The mountain slipped into the underworld and, to remedy the disaster, Vishnu, in the form of a turtle, lifted it on his back.

MANDARANGAN In the mythology of the Bagobo people of the Philippines, evil being who, with his wife Darago, lives in sulphur fumes of a volcano. Together they control the fortunes of warriors and must be appeased by human sacrifice once a year.

MANDARAVA In Buddhism incarnation of a Dakini. She accompanies Padmasambhava on his wanderings, in human form, with a cat's head, or in other shapes.

MANDARIN A Chinese official; a title applied indiscriminately by strangers to one of the nine higher classes which had been entitled to wear a button (jewel) on his hat. The word was first used by Portuguese colonists at Macao and is from the Malay mantri, counsellor, which is related to the Sanscrit mantra, counsel (man, to think). The jewels of the nine ranks were: 1, ruby; 2, coral (red opaque); 3, sapphire, 4, lapis lazuli (blue opaque); 5, crystal; 6, opalescent shell (white opaque); 7, burnished gold (yellow brilliant); 8, wrought gold (yellow opaque); 9, wrought silver. The whole body of mandarins were appointed for: 1, imperial birth; 2, long service; 3, illustrious deeds; 4, knowledge; 5, ability; 6, zeal; 7, nobility; 8, aristocratic birth. The word is frequently applied to over-pompous officials.

Mandarin duck. Conjugal fidelity.

MANDEVILLE, SIR JOHN One who relates an exaggerated story. From the Travels related by Sir John.

MANDISHIRE In Siberian mythology he controls the ropes by which the three great fish who support the earth are tied to the pillars of heaven. He thus can raise or lower the earth. The shifting of the fish causes earthquakes. In central Asian mythology a creator god who changes himself into a turtle to support the earth he has made on the surface of the cosmic ocean. Adopted from Manjusri. Compare Mandara, Manzashiri.

MANDORLA Almond-shaped deity frame. Frequently given to Christ in pictures of the Last Judgment and to the Virgin Mary in representations of the Assumption. In the catacombs symbolic of perfect blessedness.

MANDRABUL'S OFFERING From

gold to nothing. When Mandrabul found a goldmine in Samos, he offered Juno a golden ram; the next year he gave her one of silver; then one of brass. The fourth year, he gave her nothing.

MANDRAKE (MANDRAGORA)

November 6 birthday flower. Symbolic of delirium, invulnerability, the male principle, rarity, umbilical cord. In the language of flowers: An uncommon thing; also I wound to soothe. Images carved from a mandrake were revered as good luck charms. Alchemists believed it was a lucky plant. It was thought to be an aphrodisiac, as well as pain destroyer and, in the middle ages, because of its medicinal qualities, was called witches' flower. Because of its narcotic properties a sleepy man is said to have eaten mandrake. The roots resemble the lower part of a man's body, its fruit, called love-apple, is said to provoke venery. Small doses supposedly make one vain of his beauty, a large dose makes one an idiot. The root is fabled to weep when pulled up and, anyone hearing the cry, dies. To satisfy the tree's desire for blood a dog formerly was tied to the bark and chased as the roots were about to come up, causing the dog to choke to death. Virgin Mary is likened to the healing mandrake root. Jews of antiquity believed it had the power of rendering barren women fruitful.

MANE Symbolic of wisdom. Akin to Sanscrit manas (mind).

MANEKO NOKO Japanese good-luck charm. The beckoning cat image used by shopkeepers to lure customers into their shops.

MANEROS Egyptian god of agriculture.

MANES Roman spirits of the dead, especially of dead ancestors and friends. Revered as beneficent and protecting ghosts to whom food and drink were offered. The mane is applied to the infernal region and to the punishments there inflicted. See Lares, Lemures.

MANFRED Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning man of peace.

MANGER In Christian tradition ignorance from which wisdom rises. Compare lotus. In Egyptian antiquity the Theban type bullpen or manger for herds of cattle was the hieroglyph for the city of Thebes and symbol of Amon-Ra, light god. Hebrew symbol of revelation.

MANI (1) Brazilian deity of food and medicine. (2) In Norse mythology son of Mundilfore, brother of Sol. Driver of the moon. He raised the two children, Hyuki and Bil, from the earth as they came from the well Byrgir, where they had obtained the magic song mead, and they became his companions on his moon journey. (3) Magic jewel of the Hindus; the jewel in the cobra's head obtained at the churning of the ocean. Amulet against all evils. Identified as the thunderbolt which Indra used against Vritra. Adopted by the Buddhists as the wish-granting or flaming pearl. Also a name of the mantra or six syllable prayer, "om, mani, padme, hum." So called from its most prominent word. In China symbolic of the trinity, Buddha, his word, and the priesthood. Used in making rosaries. Emblem of benefaction and wealth. Also called chintamani, cintamani. See Mantra.

Mani chho-khor. Tibetan

Buddhist prayer wheel.

MANIA (MANIAE) (1) From man, to think, or from the Sanscrit manas, mind. (2) Greek abstract deity of a state of the body. (3) Etruscan underworld goddess, consort of Mantus. Also Mana.

MANIBOZHO Algonquin Great Hare or Rabbit. The common ancestor. Same as Manabhozho.

MANICHAEISM Religious concept of Persian teacher Manichaeus, the principal feature being a dualistic theology which represented a conflict between light (good) and darkness (evil) and included belief in the inherent sinfulness of matter. Devil co-eternal with God.

MANIPLE In Anglican and Roman Catholic churches band of silk worn on the left arm. It alludes to the rope which bound Christ as he was led to Calvary. Symbolic of good works, penitence, and vigilance.

MA NISHTANA Literally, Wherefore is this night different: The first words of the four questions asked at the opening of the Jewish Seder service. The whole Seder (Passover dinner) service is intended as an answer to these questions. The replies explain the origin and significance of the Passover.

MANITO (MANIDO, MANITOU) Among Algonquin Indians an indweller, owner or power of a person or thing; spirit which dominates a force of nature. The full meaning of the word includes magic, medicine, mystery, power, spirit. When a manito relates to a good supernatural power, it is called Gitche-Manito; when to an evil, it is called Matche-Manito.

The good spirit is symbolized by an egg; the evil by a serpent. An amulet or fetish is also a manito, as is a tutelary spirit whose aid is sought in times of distress. Resembles inua, oki, orenda, otgon, wakanda.

MANJI Japanese pearl of flood. The pearl of ebb is called Kanji, and together they symbolize divine authority and life force. The jewels were the possessions of Hiko-hohodemi. The Manji, sometimes known as the Japanese swastika, is a word identical with Monji, personification of transcendental wisdom.

MANJUSRI In Buddhism a Bodhisattva of miraculous birth. Born out of a lotus without father or mother; a tortoise sprang from his face. God of learning and wisdom, he is a benevolent deity associated with good fortune and happiness. Name meaning enchanter, pleasing splendor. Probably the most ancient of his numerous names is Manjughosa, which means pleasant voice. Widely worshiped as a Dhyani-bodhisattva of a group of eight, he is better known in China and Tibet than in India, and grouped with Avalokita and Vajradhara in a triad. His sakti is Sarasvati, who is also the wife of Brahma. In his fierce form known as Yamantaka or Yamari (foe of Yama), celebrating his conquest over the death demon, who was depopulating the earth. His manifestations are four: 1) Dharmacakramanjusri, the soft-voiced lord of speech; 2) Sid-dhaikaviramanjughosa, white one with soft voice; 3) Simhanadamanjusri, lion-voiced charming splendor; 4) Tiksnamanjusri, charming splendor. He cleaves a sword and sits on a lion surrounded by clouds of ignorance. Sometimes he has a feminine appearance, explained by the fact that gods can change their sex. See Androgynous deities. His emblems are padma, prajnaparamita, pustaka, simhasana. In China called Wen-shu; in Japan, Monju; in Tibet, hJamdpal or Jam-pol or rNam-snan-mnon-byan. Siberian tribes adopted him as Mandishire.

MANKIND Created out of clay, stones, trees, or brought up from rivers, seas, or the underworld by the gods as a creature necessary for their happiness and to bring about the redemption of fallen gods by sacrifice. In some mythologies the descendant of a deity and a mortal, whose birth remains unexplained. Usually created pure and faultless and by degrees falls into an unworthy condition, to which the metals are ascribed. In the golden age, men were pure; in the silver age less pure; then followed the bronze age; when finally debased, the iron or present age came into being. According to medieval medical thought, like the universe (macrocosm), man (microcosm) was composed of four elements: air, earth, fire, water; four qualities: heat, cold, moistness, dryness; four temperaments: cholera, melancholy, phlegmatism, sanguineness. A predominance of one of the four temperaments was caused by a predominance of one of his four vital fluids; thus excessive cholera was caused by excessive yellow bile; melancholy, black bile; phlegmatism, phlegm; sanguineness, blood. Man's physical make-up was said to have a sympathetic relationship to the celestial spheres; the outermost belt of the zodiac governing his external anatomy; the inner circle of planets dominating his viscera. The moon, the closest to the center of the anthropocentric scheme and governing terrestrial fluids, such as tides, supposedly caused the decrease or increase of the humoral fluids in man.

MAN-LA A name of Bhaisajyaguru, the medicine Buddha. His eight special ritual objects are: bezoar, curdled milk, fruit, herbs, mercury, mirror, red lead, shell. His emblems are: kalasa, myrobalan, patra.

MANNA (MAN) Food from heaven; hence spiritual nourishment. The miraculous food supplied by God to the Israelites during their journey through the wilderness. Called angels' food, corn of heaven, true bread, it sprang every morning from the dew. It came in small round seeds, like pearls, was honey-sweet, and had to be gathered before melted by the rays of the sun. Thus life, sustenance, immortality; also honeyed words. Cognate Haoma, Soma. Interpreters believe the name is derived from the question repeated over and over by the Israelites when they first saw it, "Man-hu" (What is it?).

MANNAHEIM (MANAHEIM) In Norse mythology earth, the home of man. Located between Muspelheim and Niflheim. Also called Midgard (Midgaard).

MANNEKIN-PIS The small bronze statue of a urinating Eros, which fills a fountain in the center of Brussels.

MANNUS In Norse mythology a name of the wolf-eyed hero Halfdan. Roman references represent him as the first man, who with his father Tuisco issued from the earth. Sons of Mannus, Hermanones, Ingvaeones, and Istaevones, are mentioned as progenitors of tribes. Name related to Manu.

MANOA A fabulous land of unbounded wealth. Fifteenth century adventurers searched for it between the Orinoco and Amazon rivers, and many died. Its ruler, El Dorado, was said to be powdered daily with gold dust. The fable of El Dorado probably arose from an Indian ceremony. The name of the king was finally given to the legendary empire. See El Dorado.

MANOAH Hebrew name meaning rest. In Old Testament name of Samson's father.

MANON LESCAUT Heroine of a novel by the Abbe Prevost. She typifies one who prefers luxury to faithful love, and the Chevalier des Grieux, who is fatally intoxicated by her, follows her into a dissolute life.

MANTALINI A husband supported by a wife. The exquisite husband of Madame Mantalini, originally Muntle, in Dickens' Nicholas Nickleby.

MANTELLETTA In Roman Catholic Church sleeveless garment worn by bishops and other church dignitaries to signify limited jurisdiction or authority. When worn by cardinals and prelates of the papal court, made of red silk, except in penitential seasons, when the color is violet.

MANTICORE (MANTICHORA) Monster with the head of a man with a mustache and a triple row of shark's teeth. The body, that of a lion, had great power and speed; its poisonous tail was that of a serpent, the spikes of which could be thrown great distances with fearful accuracy. Its voice was a blend of trumpets and panpipes, and it preferred humans to any other food. Probably a storm demon. Ctesias, a physician of ancient Greece, claimed to have seen the monster and described it as blood-red in color. It appeared on heraldic bearings of warriors. The word is from the Persian mardkhora meaning man-eater.

MANTIS An insect widely revered in Africa. Some tribes believe it brings good luck when it creeps on a person, and will not permit it to be killed. Among the Baronga believed to be a form of an ancestral spirit. The Thonga people consider it an emissary of the ancestor-gods. Used by the Zulus for divination. In Japan a symbol of courage. Called praying mantis from the manner in which it holds its fore legs while waiting for its insect prey.

MANTLE When enveloping a deity symbolizes the eternal, infinite, self-contained, unrevealed. It usually typifies a cloud, vapour, wind. In the East the mantle with which the officiating priest invests a king is called the womb, and the ceremony is regarded as one of rebirth.

Mantle of Elijah. Cloak thrown by Elijah over the shoulders of Elisha to indicate that he was invested with the prophet's office in Elijah's stead. Thus a prophet's cloak, any heritage of privilege or responsibility.

Mantle of fidelity. In an old ballad in Percy's Reliques a garment which does not become an unfaithful wife. When Guinevere tries it on it changes from green to red and from red to black and appears to be rent into shreds. Sir Kay's lady has as little success. Only Sir Cradock's wife is able to wear it.

This theme, common in old tales, was used by Spenser in the incident of Florimel's girdle.

MANTO Daughter of Tiresias of Thebes. Probably a moon goddess. After the fall of the city, being homeless, she went from place to place, and ended her long wanderings on the spot where Mantua, Virgil's birthplace, was afterwards built.

MANTRA Six syllable Buddhist prayer or formula, "Om, mani, padme, hum," signifying the jewel (of creation) is in the lotus. Used in yoga system to express the union of the two parts, spirit and matter, male and female, or the conjunction of the divine pair. See Mani.

Mantrayana. Buddhist spell vehicle.

MANTUS Etruscan underworld deity, mate of Mania.

MANU Literally, man, thinker. In Hinduism one of a series of fourteen progenitors of the human race and authors of human wisdom. Each is to rule for a Manvantara (4,320,000 years or a Mahayuga), which is to be wiped out by a deluge. The present, Manu Vaivasvata, is the seventh. He is the reputed author of the code known as the Laws of Manu, which tells the story of the creation of the world and the state of the soul after death as well as all that pertains to caste, religious duties, etc. Manu is fabled to have sprung from the self-existing god Brahma or to have been the son of Vivasvant, and the brother of Yama. One day as he washed his hands, a small fish, an avatar of Vishnu, was in the water. At its request, he spared its life in return for a promise to be saved by the fish in the deluge, fated to come. When the fish grew to a great size, Manu put it in the ocean, and it instructed Manu to build a ship. When the flood came the fish towed the ship until it rested on Mount Himalaya. When the waters subsided Manu went down from the heights with Ila (personification of sacrifice) and renewed the human race. He was the originator of the cult of Agni (fire) and of soma (ambrosial wine), and to him soma was brought by a bird. Thus he was first man, first law giver, inventor of the sacrifice, and survivor of a deluge. Parallels Deucalion, Mena, Minos, Noah. See Manvantara.

MANUAI Admiralty Islands first man, who is himself a creator. He cuts down a tree with an ax and commands the trunk, which he has shaped, to become a woman. When the image comes to life, he takes her as his wife.

MANUSHCITHRA (MINUCIHR) Iranian hero descendant and successor of Thraetaoma. A great culture hero and shah, during his reign he built canals. Sama, the grandfather of Rustam, was his most prominent vassal, and aided him in his conquests. In Pahlavi literature his name signifies born on Mount Manush. It also is interpreted to mean offspring of Manu. Sacred kings usually are construed to be fertility deities.

MANUSIBUDDHA A mortal Buddha, manifestation of a Dhyani-bodhisattva. They are five and for a short time live on earth in Nirmanakaya, the ascetic and mortal body, to teach the doctrine. Buddhas of compassion who, to assist suffering humanity, refuse the heaven life in order to return to incarnation more quickly. They are bareheaded, wear monastic garments without ornaments, and generally have long-lobed ears, the urna, and usnisa. They are: 1) Krakucchanda, 2) Kanakamuni, 3) Kasyapa, 4) Sakyamuni, 5) Maitreya (future Buddha).

MANVANTARA In Hinduism a Manu period consisting of 72 divine Yugas, each ruled over by a Manu. The present is the seventh Manvantara and ruled over by Manu Vaivasvata. It is the outbreaking of the creative principle, the period of cosmic life which lies between two pralayas (4,320,000 years). See Manu, Yuga.

MANY-BREADED GODDESS Cosmic milk provider. The E-phesian Artemis was such a goddess.

MANYU Literally, wrath. Vedic abstract god. He is of irresistible might and self-existent. He glows like fire, slays Vritra, grants victory to Indra, bestows wealth, protects his worshipers, and slays his foes.

MAN-ZAI (BAN-ZAI) Japanese dance of long life. Name means ten thousand years. Ancient dance in which a dancer-singer and a drummer call at all homes wishing everyone a life of ten thousand years, good health and good fortune. A New Year's (Shin-yen) performance.

MANZAN GORMO Buriat mother goddess. Her milk was so plentiful it overflowed and formed the Milky Way. Compare Hera, Khotun.

MANZASHIRI According to the Kalmucks the world was formed from the body of Manzashiri, earth from his body, fire from the warmth of his interior organs, grass from his hair, iron from his bones, the seven planets from his teeth, the stars from his back, the sun and moon from his eyes, trees from his blood vessels, water from his blood. He was adopted from the Buddhist Manjusri. Compare Pan-ku, Purusa, Ymir.

MANZET Egyptian bark of dawn; ship of Ra. Compare Menkhet.

MAO In the Chinese zodiac seven stars in the Pleiades, the western quadrant, autumn season. Represented by the cock; element, sun. A period of success in government.

MAON A Hebrew place name meaning habitation. Radically ma-on, which yields one-mother; moon.

MAP Exploration, geography, travel. Dream significance: long journey.

MAPLE March 13 birthday flower, symbolic of conjugal love, earthly happiness, reserve, retirement. Its bright autumnal colors typify past happiness. Because it fades early, it suggests transitoriness. The word is akin to maypole, and formerly was spelled mapul or maypol. In Japan called Momiji; also dokugesō or poison-dispelling plant, because of the idea that it absorbs all infection from the air.

Maple leaf. Emblem of Canada. In Japan symbolizes jilted.

Maple tree and deer. In Japan autumn. The crimson of the maple leaf is associated with the melancholy whining of the deer; also with the bright moon of autumn. If a torii is in the background of a picture, the animal is the deer of Nara.

Red or yellow maple leaf. Autumn, the waning year.

MAPONOS A Gaulish sun-god. In Wales called Mabon; a follower of Arthur.

MARA (1) Buddhist spirit of evil, assailer or tempter of Sakyamuni. Demon who, with his daughters, carnal desire, sexual pleasure, and thirst, as temptresses, sought to divert Buddha's attention. On the Hill of the Vulture Cavern, in the form of a vulture, he sought to interrupt the meditation of Ananda, disciple of Buddha. Also known as Kama, Namuci; identical with the Hindu Mrtyu. Resembles Satan and the tempter of Saint Anthony. (2) Virgin Mary. (3) In Old Testament the well of bitter waters (spirit), which were miraculously sweetened when Moses tossed the branch of a tree into the spring. Also Marah, meaning bitterness. (4) Scandinavian hag of nightmare, which tried to smother sleepers. (5) Serbian name of Cinderella, suggesting the phosphoric flashing of the surface of the sea.

MARABOUT Mohammedan hermit or recluse; a holy man or saint. Also the desert hut of a religious recluse, or his tomb.

MARAKAYIKAS (MA) Japanese goblins.

MARAKI-HAU Half human, half monster of ancient Maori carvings.

MARANATHA Derived from two Syriac words meaning the Lord cometh, it has been commonly understood to mean the Lord will come and execute the curse of condemning those who do not love him; at the same time the opposite is implied, that is, the Lord will come to reward those who love him. The Jews have taken it as a form of anathematizing.

MARARISVAN Literally, he that grows in his mother. Hindu lightning-god, thundercloud. Messenger of Vivasvant. Bringer of fire to men. Resembles Prometheus.

MARATHON BULL In Greek mythology bull (scorching sun or drought), which ravaged crops and men. Killed by Theseus (fertile sun).

MARAWA Melanesian spider, creator of life and death; enemy of Qat. When Marawa saw Qat create men and women, he did likewise, and then buried his creations for seven days. When he dug up the bodies they were lifeless and decomposed, this being the origin of death among men.

MARBLE Authority, cold beauty, death, deity, inflexibility, power, worship. Figuratively, one who is unmoved. Typifies government buildings, mausoleums, palaces, temples. Dream significance: unfeeling friend.

MARCH (MARHAUS) In Brythonic legend son of Meirchion. A deformed deity with animal features; god of the underworld; opponent of King Arthur, Sir Gawain, and other sun deities. Arthur desired his swine (fertility held under ground during the winter months). Although Arthur resorted to deceit and even attempted theft, he was unsuccessful. In later romances March appears as the cowardly and treacherous King Mark, husband of Iseult and uncle of Tristan. Equates with Math and Morc; also with Hades and Pluto.

MARCH In ancient zodiacs, the sun entered Aries, the first month of the year, on a date corresponding approximately to March 21 of modern calendars. Name derived from the Roman god of war, Mars. The wind-rejoicing month. Its birthstone is the aquamarine or bloodstone; its color is red; its zodiac sign the Ram. In China its emblems are the tree peony and dragon. In the Occident generally personified by a man digging in a vineyard.

Ides of March. March 15. Fatal day. From the warning received by Julius Caesar from a soothsayer that the day would be one of disaster and fatal to him. Caesar was assassinated as predicted.

Mad as a March hare. Erratic, freakish. From the actions of the hare in the breeding season.

March fifteenth and twenty-seventh. Roman feast days in honor of Attis and Cybele.

March fourteenth. Day on which the Roman deity Mamurius Veturius was honored. A man dressed in skins, supposedly representing the celestial smith who also was the god of the old year, was led through the streets and beaten by the Salii, who then thrust him out of the city.

March mad. Greatly excited, rash. The allusion is to the type of weather of the season.

March twenty-fifth. Lady Day; day for worship of Virgin Mary, the Queen of Heaven. In Rome the miraculous conception of the Blessed Virgin Juno (Hera in Greek mythology) was celebrated.

MARCIA Feminine name from a Roman family name; also feminine form of Mars.

MARCO POLO Adventurer, traveler. One who spends years in the service of a foreign monarch. Relating to the Venetian who became a member of the diplomatic staff of Kublai Khan.

MARCUS (MARCELLUS, MARK) Masculine name from the Latin, probably from the Roman god Mars. Feminine form Marcella.

MARDI GRAS The last day of the Lent carnival celebrated in Paris, Rome, etc. with great merrymaking and revelry. Shrove Tuesday. Formerly in Paris a fat ox was paraded through the streets, crowned with a fillet, and accompanied by mock priests and a band playing on tin instruments in imitation of a Roman sacrificial procession. Also known as Big Tuesday, Fat Tuesday, Festive Tuesday. In the United States, New Orleans is famed for its Mardi Gras carnival, which includes a month of festivities.

MARDOLL (MARDAL, MOERTHOLL) An aspect of Freyja. Name means shining over the sea, and suggests the Norse sun goddess sinking into the sea, the golden shimmer on the water appearing like gold.

Mardoll's tears. Gold.

MARDUK (BEL MARDUK, BELOS, MERODACH) Originally a local city of Babylon god of the spring sun associated with compassion and healing. When Hammurabi came into power and organized the city states of Accad and Sum-mer, Marduk became the supreme god of the Assyrian and Babylonian pantheons, and was invested with prerogatives as well as the name of Bel (Lord). He was accounted the mortal (the sun dies daily) son of Ea (sea) and Damkina (sky). In one version his birth was marvelous; he was created in Apsu of Ea. From his infancy he was the wisest of the wise, and Damkina caused him to be nourished at the breasts of several goddesses. The wife of Marduk was Zerp-anitum.

The Marduk epic has been preserved in seven tablets, corresponding to the six days of creation and the day of rest as given in the Bible. They are: 1- Creation from the vast slimy waste of primordial gods headed by Apsu, Tiamat, and Mummu. The destruction of Apsu and Mummu by Ea. 2- Tiamat creates eleven monsters that spit out poison (darkness, drought, winter) to attack the gods Anu, Bel, and Ea, who ask Marduk to undertake the task of slaying Tiamat. Marduk agrees to do so if granted immortality. 3- Anu, Bel, and Ea hold a feast and select Marduk to lead the forces against Tiamat. 4- Marduk is made immortal. He seizes the tablets of fate from Kingu. From the body of Tiamat he creates heaven and earth and the sea. 5- Marduk places the eleven monsters in heaven along with his own star Sirius (or Jupiter), chief light of the firmament, to make the twelve mansions of the zodiac. 6- Gods pay homage to Marduk with a hymn of praise and ask for someone to pay them honor, so Marduk brings Kingu before Ea, who slays Kingu and makes a man from his blood. 7- Marduk absorbs fifty-one names and assumes the form of each of the deities.

Marduk was lord of many existences. He invented the calendar; he was mediator between gods and men; he was the avenging sun, which descended into the realms of darkness, thus a resurrected god; he was thunder and sky, the creator which fashioned the Euphrates and Tigris as well as plant life; he was the wind which gave the air of life, and he molded seven destructive winds with which he attacked Tiamat. He changed his form with that of Ishtar; in January and February, she was Iku (Capella, the she-goat); in May and June, he was Iku (see Androgynous deities); each month he was a different star. He was two-headed, four-eyed and four-eared, with fire blazing from his mouth, suggesting he was the sky of morning and evening which extended into the four directions with the blazing sun. He pastured the gods like sheep. His name resolved from amarud, youth of the sun, and passed into Accadian as Amaruduku, whence Amaraduk, then Marduk. In an ancient pantheon he was called Asar, meaning unknown, then Asaru, bestower of husbandry. In the Old Testament, Bel (Lord) frequently meant Marduk. He also was known as Tutu, He who set the universe in order and created all things anew. The spring sun, his great festival was begun at the Spring equinox. It was a resurrection or New Year feast and the ceremonies were based largely on episodes of the epic of creation. His attributes are: a cedar cone, dog; the dragon Tiamat; eagle or falcon perched on a forked pole; goat; lance on a throne; lightning trident and thunderstone; lion; spade, tablets of fate; two thrones with tiaras resting on them and another on which lies an unknown scaled monster. Prototype of Heracles, Mithras, Tammuz, Zeus. Marduk probably meant bold; odach of Merodach also appears in Odakon, the name of a Philistine sun-deity. Merodach is undoubtedly the source of Meriadek, name of the patron saint of Brittany.

MARE A word for the sea; suggesting its glittering light. Used as a name or source for the name of the great mother or virgin goddess: Maia, Mari, Maria, Mary, Miriam, Myrrha. The mare (female horse) form was given to fertility goddesses or earth mothers: Demeter, Epona, Isis. Earth, like the mare, carries food and people. The hag or hobgoblin, especially the one producing nightmares; the nightmare itself.

Go on Shank's mare. Walk; go afoot.

Gray mare. A wife who rules her husband; from the proverb which states the gray mare is a better horse.

Mare's nest. An imaginary discovery that brings ridicule on the claimant.

MAREMMA A wild and swampy region, especially one noted for malaria. From the marshy unhealthy region near the seashore in Tuscany mentioned by Dante in the Inferno.

MARGARET (GRETA, GRETCHEN, MADGE, MAE, MAG, MAGGIE, MAISIE, MAMIE, MARGARITA, MARGARITE, MARGOT, MARGUERITE, MAY, MEG, PEG, PEGGY, RITA) Feminine name from the Greek through the Latin, meaning pearl.

MARGUERITE Flower symbolizing innocence. Sun emblem. See gorsedd.

MARI Ancient goddess who ruled at Amari in Minoan Crete and at Mari on the Euphrates, and for whom the Egyptians called the island of Cyprus Ay-mari. Name meaning fruitful mother; from ma (mother) and rim(to bear), and related to Marian, Marienna, Miriam, which are derived from Ama or Anna, thus in turn related to such names as Ariadne, Arianrhod, Athena.

MARIA (MARIE) Feminine name; Italian and Spanish form of Mary. In some localities a designation of Cinderella.

Black Maria. A patrol wagon. In the early days of the motion picture industry, the name given to the first revolving stage.

Maria Wainscot. A name variant of Cinderella. Also Maria Wood. Wood is symbolic of healing.

MARIA-KWANNON Japanese combination of Mary and Kwannon.

MARIAMMA (MARAMMA, MARI MATA) A goddess worshiped near Madras. A malignant-disease bringer, she personifies cholera, smallpox, and other fatal diseases. Feared more than loved, her worship consists of propitiatory sacrifices. She is of recent origin and is said to be named after Virgin Mary.

MARIANNE (MARIAN, MARIANA, MARIANNA, MARIENNA, RENA) Feminine name; Mary plus Anna, meaning fruitful mother. The name is given to the personification of the French Republic on coins, etc.

MARICI (MARICHI) Buddhist feminine Bodhisattva. Emanation of Vairocana. Goddess of dawn. Her name signifies she who radiates light or she with the rays of light. Her color is red, white, or yellow; her emblems are the asoka (red flower), capa (bow), pasa (noose), surya (sun). In Tibet called O-zer-chem-ma or Thod-zer-c'an-ma.

MARIE ANTOINETTE A beautiful, extravagant, frivolous, naive woman with much personal charm. From the queen of France, executed during the French Revolution.

MARIETTA In some localities a designation of Cinderella.

MARIGOLD January 15 birthday flower. Symbolic of cares, cruelty in love, grief, pain. A sun emblem; emblem of Virgin Mary. In heraldry typifies devotion, piety.

African or French marigold. Avarice, jealousy, vulgar-mindedness.

MA-RIKO-RIKO In Maori mythology the first woman. She was created by Arohi-rohi (Mirage) from the Sun's warmth and also of Echo. Name signifies glimmer.

MARINA In Elizabethan drama the daughter of Pericles, born at sea and believed murdered by those in whose charge she was left. When a grown woman, she is miraculously restored to her father. Thus one who returns to life transfigured and transformed. The name is from the Latin, signifying from the sea.

MARINER'S COMPASS Constellation in the Southern Sky, also known as Nautical Box and Pyxis.

MARINE SERVICE In the United States symbolized by an anchor crossed by two service rifles.

MARION Masculine and feminine name; equivalent of Mary.

MARISHITEN Japanese Buddhist god of war; inspector of the four worlds (North-South-East-West). Protector of those faithful to the teachings of Buddha.

MARITCHI In Chinese Buddhism mother-of-the-bushel. She dwells in the stars that form the Dipper in Ursa Major, and is worshiped by sailors. Represented with eight arms, which hold various weapons and religious insignia.

MARIUCELLA In some localities a designation of Cinderella, interpreted to be a derivative of the glittering light of the sea.

MARJATTA In the Kalevala virgin mother of the child who supplants Vainamoinen. She conceived by eating a cranberry which called out to her to eat it, "before the slug comes." When the hour of birth came she was turned out of doors and sought refuge in a stable, where the child was born. Marja is a Finnish word for berry. The legend combines elements of the Cybele-Attis and Mary-Christ tales.

MARJORAM June 1 birthday flower symbolizing blushes.

MARJORIE (MARGE, MARGERY) Feminine name; variant of Margaret.

MARK (MARCUS) (1) In the New Testament one of the four apostles. Evangelist who converted Egyptians to Christianity. Likened to a lion. See evangelists. (2) In Arthurian romances the cowardly and treacherous king of Cornwall (in some versions king of the whole of Britain). Husband of Iseult-the-Fair and uncle of Tristan. He supposedly had horse's ears and often is called the Brythonic Midas. Derived from March, son of Meirchion, an underworld god of earlier legend. See Iseult.

MARKA Hindu demon.

MARK OF THE BEAST Originally, the brand 666 of a pagan. Used metaphorically for one who bears signs of being devoted to an unworthy cause.

MARKO KRALJEVIC Literally, Marko son of the king. Serbian national hero who also has a prominent place in Bulgarian and Rumanian legend. He supposedly lived 300 years, fighting foreign oppressors, especially the Turks, all his life.

MARMADUKE (DUKE) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning servant of Madoc.

MAROCAEL (MACHCHAEL) Taino Indian watchman who at night guarded the cave from which the human race came forth. Once, delaying his return into the cave until after dawn, the sun transformed him into a stone. His metamorphosis represents the first race being refused entrance into the cave when the sun rose because the individuals sought to sin.

MAROCCO (MOROCCO) Marvelous horse said to belong to a man named Banks. Frequently mentioned in Elizabethan literature, Marocco supposedly climbed Saint Paul's steeple.

MAROON Color which carries the personality traits of a martyr; those favoring maroon are steadier and more temperate than the red type. See red.

MAROR A dish of ground horse-radish served at the Jewish Passover feast or Seder. Symbolic of the bitterness which the Egyptians inflicted upon the Jews.

MAR-PA In Tibetan Buddhism disciple of Atisa; predecessor and teacher of Mila-re-pa. Founder of Kargyu-pa Sect, whose chief apostle was Mila-re-pa. An historical person deified. His emblems are a kapala and pustaka.

MARPESSA In Greek mythology beautiful maiden courted by Apollo and by the mortal Idas. Fearing the god would forsake her when she lost her youth, she decided in favor of Idas.

MARQUIS OF CARABAS In Perrault's Puss in the Boots a penniless young miller who, aided by his cat, obtains a great fortune. In a song by Beranger a typical aristocrat, who believes the world exists solely for his pleasure.

MARRIAGE Symbolized by clasped hands, orange blossoms, orange-yellow color, myrtle, plain gold band ring, pair of doves, pair of linked rings. In Japan by a black and red pine tree, wild goose. In Russia by a horse. See Matrimony.

Left hand marriage. A morganatic marriage. So called because the parties pledge their troth by taking each other by the left hand.

Marriage ceremony. Fertility ritual; originally intended as sympathetic magic to bring fertility to the land as well as to those married. In some religions a royal marriage constituted a symbolic ritual of death and birth in which names were changed. See Israel.

Marriage of a god and goddess. Anciently believed to bring about the fertility of the soil and increase in crops.

Marriage of a man to the arm or foot of a father-in-law. To the ambitious man of the Kwakiutl Indians of North America who sought to accumulate titles and wealth, marriage to the daughter of an important chief was desirable. If such a chief had no marriageable daughter, alliances were made by the prospective son-in-law marrying the right arm or left foot of a chief. In these pretended marriages privileges were transferred and ceremonies were performed as in a real marriage.

Marriage of mortals and divinities. Marriages to celestial spirits account for the divine heritage of man. Compare Beauty and the beast; Divine-human marriages.

Marriage with unseen groom. A theme which appears in light myths. The bride is usually the dawn, who is instructed not to gaze upon her husband, the sun. Curiosity or jealousy prompts her to disobey instructions; his unveiled splendor is too dazzling for her, and he disappears from her sight or the fire of his light kills her. This motif appears in the story of Eros and Psyche; the story of Zeus and Semele has something of this element.

MARROW In Chinese mythology the marrow in the bones of P'an Ku (see) became pearls and precious stones.

MARS (MAMERS, MAVORS)

(1) Originally Italian farmers worshiped Mars as a deity of spring growth and vegetation who vanquished the powers of winter, in which character he was called Sylvanus. Later, as strider, Roman war god, he was the second most important deity in the pantheon, eclipsed only by Jupiter. In this character his surname was Gradivus. He also was the protecting deity who watched over the welfare of the state, in which role he was called Quirinus. As Father Mars or Marspiter (Maspiter), he was the father of Romulus and Remus and founder of cities. His sister-wife was the goddess Bellona; Venus was his mistress. His shield or ancile was sent to him from heaven. The destiny of Rome was bound to its safety. To avoid its theft, eleven identical shields were placed beside it in his temple and entrusted to the care of his twelve priests, the Salii. His festivals, the Agonium Martiale, Equiria, Tubilstrum held in March, the month named after him, and the Armilustrum and Equus October, held in October, marked the opening and closing of the campaign season. At the Equus October, chariot races were held, after which the right hand horse of the winning team was sacrificed to him. In ancient times humans, especially prisoners of war, were sacrificed to placate him. A lustrum, ceremony of expiation and purification of the entire Roman people, was made by one of the census in the Campus Martius at the conclusion of the quinquennial census. Among medieval alchemists Mars designated tin. The color red, a helmet, shield and spear were his attributes. Animals consecrated to him were the horse, vulture, wolf, and woodpecker. The name is related to Mark, martial, smart, and to Mrnati, Sanscrit for he crushes or destroys. Counterpart of Greek Ares. (2) Martial planet; fourth in order from the sun, ruler of the zodiacal houses Aries and Scorpio; lord of Tuesday. In astro-mythology the hostile planet, responsible for unchaining catastrophes, such as earthquakes, tempests, wars. Star of brutality and wrath, the fast destroyer, and of initiative and will; protector of soldiers and warmakers. Those born under its influence are mockers, night walkers, thieves, and persons inclined to violent sensuality. It represents an intelligence of excitement. Astrologists assign the color red and the musical note C natural to it. It is pictured by a ray shooting from the sun like an arrow (of heat), said to typify the shield and spear of the god. In Mohammedanism planet presiding over executioners and all other blood shedders.

MARSDEN Masculine name from Old English, meaning from marsh valley.

MARSENA Hebrew name meaning worthy.

MARSHAL Masculine name, special use of the noun in the sense of farrier.

MARSHMALLOW February 5 birthday flower, symbolic of beneficence, consent, bachelorhood.

MARSK STIG Hero of Danish ballads. Like Robin Hood, a champion of the people against a tyrannous king. Probably a light hero.

MARSTON Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the place by the water.

MARSYAS Probably originally a Phrygian wind or nature god resembling Pan. In Greek mythology a satyr, said to be the son of Hyagnis, a lightning god. Famous for his flute playing, he challenged Apollo to a musical contest. Apollo added his voice to the strings of his lyre and won, but for Marsyas's presumption, Apollo flayed him alive. The river Marsyas was formed from his blood. As one mutilated, Marsyas is a fertility god of the type of Attis.

MARTANO In Ariosto's Orlando Furioso a braggart and coward.

MARTELLO Italian watch tower, originally a defense against pirates. So called for the reason watchmen rang the alarm by striking a bell with a martello or hammer. In medieval water marks the battlement of a martello was formed of three M's, for the three Marys or for the three truths, good thought, good deed, good word.

MARTHA (MATTY, PATTY)

Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning ruler of the house. In New Testament sister of Lazarus and Mary of Bethany, disciple of Jesus. See under saints.

MARTIN Masculine name from the Latin, meaning of Mars, warlike.

MARTINMAS (MARTILMAS, MARTLEMAS) Feast of Saint Martin or Martle, which took the place of the Vinalia or feast of Bacchus, a pagan harvest festival celebrated on November 11. The custom of the feast was to lay in provisions or sustenance (food with names derived from the radical sus) for the long winter months. In Germany, the festivities included a feast of sausages, and in many sections of Europe the sow was eaten. In winter called Martin Mass to distinguish it from the feast of Saint Martin on July 4.

MARTLET In Heraldry a footless swallow which typifies a younger brother who subsists by the wings of merit and virtue.

MARTTANDA Vedic sun deity. Eighth son of Aditi by the sun; brother of the Adityas. Aditi cast him from her, and then brought him back to the gods, suggesting the setting of the sun at night and its return in the morning.

MARTYR Literally, witness.

Applied to one who submits to or witnesses death rather than forswear his beliefs, specifically the early Christians who suffered torture and death for their religion.

By extension, one who suffers from ill-health or a misfortune.

Martyred saint. One who dies, rises again, and becomes a god. A dying god, which see. Symbols of Christian martyrdom are: banner, cross, crown, crown of thorns, fire, ladder, lantern, nails, palm leaf, purple or red color, red rose, scourge, spear, sword, whipping post.

MARUTS Hindu storm and wind deities. Sons of Rudra and Prsni; husbands of Rodasi, who goes in their car; also associated with the goddess Indrani. They are said to number thrice seven (21) or thrice sixty (180). Faithful henchmen of Indra, they help him in his fights against Vritra and other adversaries, are givers of abundant food and life, and are included in the sacrifice offered in Indra's honor. They are armed youths, who perform the sword dance as a fertility ritual. When not associated with Indra evil is said to come from them. They are cloud shakers, roar like lions, sway mountains, uproot forests, and are swift as thought. They can be heard crackling their whips as they go on their way. After their mightiest exploits, they resume the form of the newly born, thus they are fierce, yet playful as calves. They sometimes are identified as souls of the dead who have gone into the wind; in later legends, they are said to be the celestial counterparts of the Vaisyas, the commonfolk of earth. They are described as black-backed swans or four-tusked boars. Under the name of Rudras they are companions of their father. As sword dancers and noise makers, they probably are the prototype of the Curetes; as warriors they are the prototype of Ares and Mars.

MARVEL OF PERU November

7 birthday flower, symbolic of timidity.

MARVIN (MERLIN, MERVIN) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning sea and hill, and from the French, meaning more wine.

MARY (MARA, MARIA, MARIAN, MARIANNE, MARIE, MARIETTA, MARION, MAURA, MAUREEN, MAY, MINNIE, MIRIAM, MOLLY)

(1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning bitter, rebellion. According to some interpreters derived from Mara; according to others, from Miriam. In occult teachings derived from Mare, the sea, symbolizing the changefulness and charm of woman, her illusiveness and mysteriousness. (2) Name of the Virgin, which see under saints. (3) a Jewess who, during the siege of Jerusalem, to keep her child from becoming captive, devoured him. A legend which suggests a fertility myth of the Cybele-Attis, Ishtar-Tammuz type. (4) According to the Koran the daughter of Imran, and one of the four perfect women. (5) In some localities a designation of Cinderella.

MARYLAND Emblem: black-eyed Susan; motto: Fatti Maschi Parole Femine (Manly Deeds and Womanly Words); Scuto Bonae Voluntatis Tuae Coronasti Nos (With the Shield of Thy Good-will Hast Thou Covered Us); nicknames: Cockade, Old Line.

MARZUCCO One who pardoned the murderer of his son; mentioned in Dante's Inferno.

MARZYANA Slavic grain goddess or earth mother; identified with Ceres (Demeter).

MASABO African ghost house of bee-hive style, source of structure for the omphalos shrine of Apollo.

MASAN Hindu ghost who comes from the ashes of the funeral pyre. He is a hideous black demon and afflicts children with disease, especially consumption by throwing funeral ashes over them. The Masan usually wanders about in the form of a child, but sometimes takes the shape of a bear.

MASAUWU Hopi Indian god of death, fire, might, and war.

MASCULINE COUNTENANCE ON A WOMAN In Italy typifies solid and profound judgment. Probably related to ancient conception of androgynous deities.

MASHALLAH Literally, as God wills or God is great. An exclamation among Mohammedans; also worn as a talisman for protection against all calamities.

MASHENOMAK (MISIKINEBIK) In Menominee legend aquatic monster who devoured fishermen; eventually destroyed by Manabush.

MASHU AND MASHTU Babylonian twin brother and sister. Children of Nannar. Lunar boy and girl corresponding to the Teutonic pair called Hyuki and Bil.

Mashu Mountains. In Gilgamesh epic, land in the far west; land of the setting sun; other-world.

MASHYA AND MASHYOI (MASHA AND MASHYOI) Iranian first human pair. They sprang from gold, the seed of Gaya Maretan, primeval man, which had been planted in the earth. They were fifteen years of age, in the East regarded the perfect age, when they were born. Their children were Siyakmak and Nashak.

Mashya and Mashoyi were the first king and queen of Iranians. They were born in the form of a tree with one stem and fifteen leaves, indicating they were ancestors of the fifteen races of mankind. When changed into the shape of human beings they received souls. While still a tree they brought forth fruit representing the varieties of mythical primitive men. Their myth is duplicated by that of Yima and Yimak.

MASK Deception, hypocrisy. According to the facial expression, typifies comedy, fright, terror, tragedy. Anciently, a prophylactic face to frighten away disease demons, evil spirits, or profane eyes. Dream significance: betrayal, lies. In Borneo and Sarawak an aspect of a ghost; worn in dances. In Chinese drama a black face typifies a rough honest person; a red face, a sacred person; a white face, a cunning and treacherous but dignified person; a white nose, a comedian. By Finno-Ugrics worn at bear feasts to prevent the dead bear from recognizing the frolicers and casting a spell of death on them. In primitive Greek religion used to inspire terror. An ugly female face or bogey was an aspect of Praxidike, and worn by a priest or priestess when performing the ceremony of striking Underground Folk (death demons) with rods. Later, in Greek drama, a comic mask represented Thalia, a tragic mask represented Melpomene. In Lamaism, to instill into the minds of the laity the terrible aspects of punishments in Nyalwa, Tibetan priests wear weird masks during religious dances. Among Melanesians worn in dances to represent ghosts of ancestors. Among the Pueblo nations masks typify the shields hiding the manlike beings of the sun and moon and the clouds or screens concealing the manlike rain beings.

MASON Masculine name from a family name; also special use of noun.

MASONIC LODGE Typifies a microcosm; the world in miniature.

MASS DROWNING OF WOMEN Refers to the conquest of priestesses by a priesthood. In the Celtic tale of Blodeuwedd, when she is being pursued by Gwydion, her maidens jump into the sea. In Greek mythology the curing of the mad daughters of Proetus by Melampus, who washed away their madness, and the death of the fifty Pallantid priestesses at Athens, may be interpreted in this sense.

MASSACHUSETTS Emblem: the mayflower bloom; motto Ense Petit Placidam Sub Libertate Quietem (With the Sword She Seeks Quiet Peace Under Liberty); nicknames: Bay, Cod, Old Colony.

MASTER LEONARD In medieval demonology grand master of the witches' Sabbath. His body was that of a goat; he had a black human face and three horns, with which he marked the initiated.

MASTER MASON In ancient art represented as an old man leaning on a staff, his long white beard upon his chest, his deep piercing eyes sheltered by heavy brows. In Freemasonry one who has completed his labors and works on the spiritual plane of esoteric learning.

MASTER THIEF In mythology usually the wind. He is portrayed as a youth, despised for what appears to be his timidity and weakness. No human eye can trace the path by which he flees with his booty. When his work is done he again appears meek and no one suspects him. Sometimes the master thief is a drought demon. Some famous legendary thieves are the architects of the treasury of King Rhampsinitos, Autolycus, Cacus, the forty thieves in Arabian Nights, Hermes, Mercury, Shifty Lad in the Scotch Highland story.

MASTIPHAL In demonology a prince of darkness.

MASTODON Among the Mayas venerated as an image of the supreme deity on earth, probably because it was the largest and most powerful of creatures.

MASUBI Shinto god of growth.

MATA In Irish mythology four-headed and hundred-legged monster captured single-handed by Dagda. Dagda dragged him to the Stone of Benn, where he killed his captive. Personifies drought or winter.

MATA HARI Courtesan, espionage agent. From the dancer on the French stage executed by the French as a spy for the Germans in 1917. Her real name was Gertrude Margarete Zelle. The Malayan word matahari, meaning sun, probably suggested her stage name; thus, she was the eye of the morning.

MATALI In Hindu mythology charioteer, councilor, and friend of Indra. His daughter Gumatkesi by Sudharma was so beautiful, neither among gods, demons, men, nor seers was Matali able to find a husband worthy of her. He therefore went to the world of Nagas, where he betrothed her to the handsome Sumukha.

MATAORA Polynesian hero who married Nuvarahu, one of the Turehu or underworld people. When out of jealousy he beat her, she returned to Po, the underworld. Mataora went in search of her. When he returned with her to the upper world he also brought the young of the bat, the fantail, the owl, and the rail. The guardian at the entrance to Po discovered that Nuvarahu had with her a sacred garment made in the underworld. He took it from her and allowed her to pass, but once Mataora and she were through the door, he shut it and never again permitted a living person to descend to the world below. A fertility and time myth suggesting the transit of the season. Resembles the Demeter-Persephone legend.

MATARISVAN In Hindu mythology he brings Agni (lightning fire) down to earth from the sky. Later a wind god unconnected with fire. See Bhrgu.

MATCH Dream significance: (burning) honor, success; (unlighted) misunderstood affection.

MATE In Banks Islands mythology death. Compare Tagaro the foolish.

MATER DOLOROSA Virgin Mary represented as the sorrowing mother. Sometimes seven words are on her heart, in allusion to the seven sorrows she endured.

MATER MATUTA Ancient Italian goddess of dawn and birth, patroness of sailors. Originally associated with Janus. Her festival, the Matralia, was celebrated on June 11.

MATERNITY Typified by a hen, mother and child, stork.

MATH (MATH HEN) In Cymric mythology son of Mathonwy; brother of Don; uncle of Arianrhod, Gilvaethwy, and Gwydion. King of Gwynedd (sky), to whom the winds brought the least whisper, so that he heard the slightest sounds of the world (a trait of omniscience). He was pre-eminent for his goodness to those who suffered and for his justice without vengeance upon wrongdoers (showing a high ideal of divinity). Math Hen is said to mean Old Math or Ancient; as Math signifies mowing or that obtained by mowing, his name is said to mean Old Treasure, and some interpreters identify him as a benevolent god of the underworld, lord of the treasures in the vaults of the earth, but this interpretation appears to be incorrect. On his behalf, Gilvaethwy, an agricultural deity, and Gwydion, a sky deity, descended into the lower world and stole the sacred pigs (fertility) from Pryderi. The virtues of Math were resident in his foot. Except when he was obliged to ride to battle, his foot was kept in the lap of a virgin, suggesting it was held to protect one vulnerable spot, the heel. See crucifixion, foot, heel. Goewin, one of his foot-holders, was outraged by Gilvaethwy; Arianrhod, whom Math wished to marry, was outraged by her brother Gwydion. A magician with shape-shifting powers (suggesting different aspects of the sky), Math punished his nephews by turning them first into deer, then into swine, then into wolves, before permitting them to return to human form (seasonal changes). When identified as an underworld deity Math is said to be identical with March, son of Meirchion. As a sky god with a sacred heel he compares with Achilles, Diarmuid, Harpocrates, Mopsus, Talus.

MATHEMATICS In an Italian icon personified by a middle-aged woman wearing a transparent veil; her head winged. A celestial globe is at her feet; beside her is a child she seems to be instructing by pointing a pair of compasses at a tablet she holds on which is engraved a six-pointed star.

Mathematical signs:

\sphericalangle angle
 \lrcorner angle, right
 \frown arc
 \because because \circ circle, circumference
 $^\circ$ degree
 \sim difference — : difference, excess
 \nmid or \div divisible by $=$ equals
 \therefore equals when used between ratios \doteq equivalence
 \prime foot
 \doteq geometrical proportion $>$ greater than " inch ∞ infinity
 \int integration
 $<$ less than $-$ minus
 \prime minute
 \times multiplied by or \perp perpendicular
 $+$ plus
 \pm plus or minus
 \therefore proportion
 $\sqrt{\quad}$ radical \square rectangle
" second
 \square square
 Σ sum of \therefore therefore \triangle triangle
 \times varies

MATHOLWYCH (MATHOLWCH)
Welsh sun hero, king of Ireland. He sought the hand of Branwen, daughter of the sea god Llyr. When he arrived in Wales at the court of Llyr, Branwen's half brother Evnissyen, a wind deity, mutilated his steeds. To pacify Matholwyth, Bran, Branwen's brother the fertility lord, gave him gifts which included a caldron which restored life to the dead. To retaliate for Evnissyen's conduct, when Matholwyth returned to Ireland, he struck Branwen every morning (dispelled the moon). Eventually he and Branwen were reconciled until their son Gwern was tossed into a fire by the mischievous Evnissyen. In the battle that followed the Irish were winning because they restored their dead in the caldron until Evnissyen smashed it. A time myth.

MATHONWY Welsh sky deity. Father of Math; ancestor of the house of Don.

MATILDA (MATTA, MATTIE, TILDA, TILLY) (1) Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning mighty battle-maid, and from Old High German, meaning heroine. (2) In Dante's Purgatorio, the countess of Tuscany (1046-1115), a supporter of Pope Gregory VII. She represents the active life and guides Dante toward Beatrice, who represents the contemplative life.

MATLALCUEJE Literally, Lady of the Blue Robe. Aztec rain goddess, who resided on a mountain. Companion of Chalchiuhtlicue.

MATRES (MATRES BRITANNE)
Roman name for Celtic earth mothers or fertility goddesses. Three Matres prophesied Arthur's birth, suggesting they were fate goddesses.

MATRI Hebrew name meaning Jah watches.

MATRIMONY In an Italian icon personified by a young man richly clothed, a yoke on his neck, a quince in his hand, stocks on his legs, a viper on the ground. See marriage.

MATRS Hindu mothers; spirits who dwell in cemeteries, at crossroads, and on mountains, and practice witchcraft. Disease demons.

MATSYA In Hinduism first avatar of Vishnu, fish incarnation which kept the ship of Manu afloat during the deluge. In later legends the fish is Brahma Pradjapati. See Kurma.

MATTER Represents disorder, femininity, multiplicity. Compare spirit.

MATTHEW (MATHIEU, MATT, MATTHAEUS, MATTHIEU)
(1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning gift of Jehovah, gift of the Lord. (2) One of the four Christian evangelists to whom the gospels are ascribed. Likened to a man because he expresses the human side of Christ. Ruler of the zodiacal house Capricorn. See evangelists and under saints.

MATTHIAS Christian apostle chosen by lot to replace Judas Iscariot. His badge is a battle-axe, because after being stoned he was beheaded with one.

MATUTA (MATER MATUTA)
Roman mother goddess of birth and increase. Sometimes identified as a dawn goddess equated with the Greek Leucothea.

MATU-'U-TA'U-TA'UA

In Tahitian mythology a giant bird which swallows men.

MATY-TAPIRE Lame dwarf of Hindu legend.

MATZOTH (MATZOH) Typifies exodus. Unleavened bread eaten by the Jews during the eight days of Passover as a reminder of the unleavened bread eaten by Jews when they left Egypt. Three cakes are used during the Seder ritual. The first is known as Cohen, the second as Levite, after the priestly castes, the third is known as Israelite to represent the twelve tribes before separation under Rehoboam. The threefold symbolism of the matzoth is: bread of poverty; haste with which Israelites left Egypt; period in which they lived simply in the desert before settling and prospering in Canaan.

MAU See Maau.

MAUD (MAUDE) Feminine name. Diminutive of Magdalene and Matilda.

MAUDGALYAYANA In Buddhism one of the two best beloved of the five disciples of Sakyamuni. He and Sariputra are known as the model pair. His emblem is a khakkhara (alarm staff).

MAUGIS (MAL-GIST) One of Charlemagne's paladins. A champion and magician. In the French version a son of Duke Bevis d'Aygrement, stolen by a female slave. In her flight she rested under a white thorn and was devoured by a leopard and a lion, which killed each other in a fight for the infant. The fairy Oriande, attracted by the child's cries, exclaimed, "By the powers above the child is mal gist (badly nursed)." When grown he obtained the enchanted horse Bayard and took from Anthenor the Sacra-cen the sword Flamberge. He gave both to his cousin Renaud. In the Italian version known as Malagigi.

MAUI (MOWEE) Chief culture hero of the Polynesians. He was an aborted child, which his mother wrapped in her apron and abandoned, which explains his small stature. He was raised by sea gods and educated by his sky ancestor, Tama-nui-ki-to-rangi. When he returned to earth his mother recognized him and acknowledged him to be her youngest and favorite child. He was a benevolent trickster, who played pranks on his stupid and older brothers. He raised the sky in three heavens. In connection with this incident he is called Tiitii, and is identical with Tane. He brought up land from the bottom of the sea. A name for New Zealand is Te-ika-a-maui (Fish of Maui). He warned his brothers not to cut the fish (land), but they would not listen to him, and for this reason it became islands of mountainous character. To provide dry days for his mother's wash he snared the sun with a lasso made from hair taken from Hina, his sister-wife, and forced the sun to agree to slacken its pace before he released it. He captured the winds and imprisoned them all in caves, except West Wind, which eluded him. He conquered his ancestress Mafuike, fire deity, and brought fire to mankind. He had the power of shape changing (suggesting seasonal changes), and in the guise of a bird he followed his mother. He uttered magic words which opened a cave through which she descended to the underworld, where Maui found her with his father Tangaroa, who gave Maui a name, but made an omission.

In the underworld he entered the body of his ancestress Hine-mi-te-po. According to a decree, if he emerged, i. e. were born again after having passed through the world of darkness, he and mankind would become immortal and the goddess would die. Once he entered the ogress the flaw in his name was discovered and jealous gods saw that he could not free himself from the monster's body. Thus he died and man remained mortal.

MAUL In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress a giant who mars the innocence of young pilgrims with sophistry. When he attacks Mr. Greatheart with a club the virtuous hero slays him.

MAULE, MATTHEW In Hawthorne's House of Seven Gables, Maule is executed for witchcraft by the machinations of Colonel Pyncheon, who desires to confiscate his property.

MAULI Mashonaland Great Spirit.

MAURA (MAUREEN, MOIRA) Feminine name; Irish form of Mary.

MAURICE (MORRIS) Masculine name from the Latin through the French, meaning the Moor, dark colored.

MAUSOLEUM AT HALICARNASSUS One of the seven wonders of the ancient world. Tomb of Mausolus, 4th century B.C. king of Caria. The name mausoleum now is applied to any sepulchral monument of architectural beauty or of great size. See Grave.

MAUT See Maat.

MAUTHE Spectral dog which haunted Peel Castle on the Isle of Man. Probably a spirit of wind.

MAVERICK In the middle 19th century a Texas rancher named Samuel Maverick let his cattle run at large unbranded; later all unbranded cattle in his locality became known as Maverick's. By extension, a stray or unbranded animal, a man without a party, one who is homeless or motherless, an unclassed individual.

Maverick brand. Brand used by cattlemen who make a practice of appropriating and branding stray, unbranded cattle. By extension, an animal or piece of land claimed by the one first branding it; something dishonestly or illegally appropriated.

MA-VIEN Despot deified as a protector-deity. Ma-vien, a Chinese general, invaded Tonking, Indo-China, and reduced the people to slavery. After his death he displaced Cao-bien as protector deity. Also called Bach-ma (White Horse) because a celestial white horse supposedly aided him.

MAVIN Feminine name; special use of an obsolete noun meaning thrush.

MAWA (MAWU) In African folklore a child of God who visited earth during a famine. Among Dahomean tribes a moon goddess; feminine aspect of Mawa-Lisa.

MAWA-LISA (MAWU-LISA) Dahomean androgynous deity. Mawa is the moon, the feminine element; Lisa is the sun, the male element. See Androgynous deities.

MAWON In ancient ecclesiastical Welsh records the father of Maenwyn (i. e. sacred stone), which was the native name of Saint Patrick.

MAWR PEN AETHIR Welsh term for the supreme deity. Akin to the Greek names Pan and Aether and to the Iroquoian name Maho-Peneta.

MAWWORM A cheat, hypocrite, sanctimonious pretender. From the character so named in Isaac Bickerstaffe's The Hypocrite.

MAXIMILIAN (MAX) Masculine name, Germanic blend of the Roman Maximus and Aemilianus, meaning greatest Aemilianus. In feminine form, Maxine.

MAXWELL Masculine name from the Anglo Saxon, meaning great well.

MAY (MAE) (1) Feminine name; diminutive of Mary or Margaret. (2) In ancient zodiacs the sun enters Gemini, third month of the year, on a date corresponding to May 21 of modern calendars. A period of blooming. Figuratively spring-time of life, youth. Its birthstone is the emerald, its color is orange, its zodiac sign is the Twins or Lovers. Symbolized by apple-blossoms, fleur-de-lys, and robin. In China its emblems are the horse and marigold. Dedicated to Virgin Mary. Previously dedicated to Pagan virgin mothers. Anciently in Europe an unlucky month, in which people went about in old clothes, a sign of mourning, and abstained from sexual intercourse; hence specifically an unlucky month for marriage. In Greece dedicated to the goddess Maia, who gave the month its name. In Rome month in which purification ceremonies were performed; later an orgiastic month associated with the cult of Flora.

May Day. In Europe, May 1. Festival celebrating the awakening of Earth from her winter sleep. The renewal of life and vegetation. Day of rustic rejoicing, when May Queen is crowned and Maypole erected. Famous for orgiastic revels. In Britain one of the quarter days; Beltane Day, opposite of Samhain Day. Once dedicated to Robin Hood and the Maid Marion, and celebrated with archery, morris dances, and other festivities. Christian festival of Saint James the Less. In Japan day for boys. Dolls representing legendary heroes are set up in the home and miniature flags and weapons are set up outside. Observed the 5th day of the 5th lunar month, now regularly on May 5. Roman festival of Bona Dea celebrated May 1.

May Day Eve. Druid festival which celebrated the spring equinox with a Belenian or Beltane fire.

May dew. Dew of May 1. Formerly believed to possess magical properties, which preserved beauty, whitened linen, etc.

May morn. Life and vigor.
Maypole. Life, generative power, rebirth, reproductive powers of nature, spring. The pole and ring signify the union of fire and water, the male and female principles, spirit and matter. The pole typifies the creator; the circle, the regulator of time and motion. Ancient believed the Maypole imparted a fertilizing influence over cattle, vegetation, and women. Descendants of the sacred trunk-ids of Pagan and early Christian rites. Allied to the axis or universe tree. Modern substitute of the mystic palm tree. Akin to the ashera, daikoku-bashira. Word equated with maple. The 'pole' compares with the Latin pales, a word related to the Greek phallus. Compare Christmas tree, Yggdrasil.

Maypole dance. Reverence of creation.

Maypole streamers. All-radiant, streaming sunshine; the joy and fruit of the marriage of the pole and the ring or male and female principles.

May Queen. According to a superstition the girl chosen queen of the May will not live another year; i.e. the spring maid descends into the underworld with the coming of winter.

May thirteenth. Day on which Hermes led Persephone back to earth and to her mother Demeter. Resurrection.

MAYA (MAIA) (1) Buddhist virgin mother of God, mother of a savior. Wife of the Sakya king, Suddhodana, and mother of Gautama Siddhartha or Sakyamuni, who became Buddha. While she slept Buddha entered her womb in the guise of a six-tusked elephant. Four celestial beings (quarter gods) guarded him before birth, and he saw light in the Lumbini Grove while Maya held a branch of the sal-tree. Maya died seven days after the birth of Buddha. Story parallels that of Leto. Death of the mother in childbirth is an interpretation based on a theory of the sun myth, in which Dawn, mother of Sun, dies with the sun's birth. In Tibet called sGrol-ma or Tara. See Holy Ghost. (2) Hindu mother of the world, personified active will of the creator. In union with the supreme spirit she produced the waters and in them deposited a productive seed, which became a golden egg (sun), which produced the supreme being in the form of Brahma, ancestor of all beings. She is illusion personified as a celestial maiden, taking the place of the older Avidya or Nescience. The name is from the Sanscrit meaning one of magic, power of obscuring, state producing illusion and error, or evil covering reality, and is related to Mary. (3) Extinct civilization which probably settled in the Yucatan about the 5th century. Renowned for its remarkable culture. The Mayans were an agricultural race and displayed great ingenuity in architecture and textiles. The name as used is assumed to mean Mother-of-the-Waters or Teats-of-the-Waters, and possibly relates to the mother from whom sprang the Assyrian or Egyptian civilizations. The Mayans worshiped a long-nosed god called Maya, who was a bringer of rain, and greatly resembles Ganesha, Hindu rain-bringer. Their capital was Mayapan, a name composed of Maya and Pan.

Mayan triad. Ah-Kiuic, Chac, and Hobnel.

MAYAUEL (MAYAHUEL) Mexican many (or 400) breasted mother goddess. Milk provider. Because of her fruitfulness she was transformed into the maguey (agave) plant, a vine which yields a milky juice that ferments and intoxicates. A white animal with the head of a coyote or fox and long tail is associated with her. She suckles a fish.

MAYER Masculine name from the Latin, meaning the nobler.

MAYFLOWER (1) Flower emblem of Massachusetts, symbolic of Pilgrim Fathers. (2) Ship which sailed from England for the New World with Pilgrims. Symbolizes Pilgrim Fathers as well as colonization, early settlers. Frequently used to denote the snobbery of Americans of old family, one whose ancestors supposedly came over on the Mayflower.

MAYNARD Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning strong and hardy.

MAYPOP Fruit of the passion flower; emblem of Tennessee.

MAYURA Sanscrit for peacock; a Buddhist non-tantric symbol.

Mayurapiccha. Sanscrit for peacock feather. Emblem of Mahamayuri, Mamaki, Saraddevi, and Sridevi. In Buddhist ritual a vessel filled with lustral water which has kusa grass or a peacock feather for sprinkling holy water is an altar object. A non-tantric symbol.

MAZAINYON Iranian evil demons.

MAZDAISM Dualism. Doctrine of two creators and two creations. Ahura Mazda, with his host of Amesha Spentas and Yazatas, presides over the good creation and wages an incessant war against Ahriman and his army of evil spirits, including the Div and Druj. Also called Zoroastrianism.

Mazda. Creator of the world. Identical with Ahura Mazda, which see.

MAZIQIM (MAZIKEEN, SHE-DEEM) Jewish folklore spirits resembling the brownie or jinn. Sometimes identified as the children of Adam. According to the Talmud, during the 130 years of Adam's excommunication, he begat demons and specters, "children in his own image."

MBAMBA (MBAMBE, MPAMBE) In African Wankonde (Nyasaland) mythology the supreme god addressed as Father. He is of human form, white and shining, and lives above the sky. Also called Kiara. Mbamba is a word for god.

MBERE Creator god of the Fans, a western Bantu tribe.

MBIR Creator worm of the Guarayu, South American Indians. He took human form, was called Miracucha, and shaped the world.

MEAD Norse drink of the gods. The poetry mead or dwarf's drink was made by Fjalar and Galar.

MEADOW SAFFRON April 3 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: My best days are past.

MEADOW SWEET May 27 birthday flower symbolizing uselessness.

MEAN Etruscan deity of destiny. Probably the same as Mania.

MEANDER (1) In ancient geography a river of Asia Minor. In modern times called Menderes. According to legend it dried up when Phaethon drove the sun chariot. Its proverbial windings are compared to the labyrinth of Minos. (2) A pattern without beginning or end. Symbolic of eternity. In China called hui-hui chin. Symbolizes reincarnation and thunder. Compare key pattern.

MEASURING SQUARE Balance, equilibrium, limitations, limits of every dominion.

MEAT Many primitive tribes observe a strict rule of diet, eating only the meat of birds and swift-footed or strong animals, believing they absorb from the meat the characteristics of the animal. The Namaquas abstain from eating the flesh of hares because they believe it would make them faint-hearted. Bushmen eat the flesh of slow-footed animals, imagining the game they pursue will be sympathetically influenced by the food in their bodies. In East Africa the heart of a lion is eaten for courage, the heart of a hen is taboo. In Central Africa the liver is the seat of the soul; to enlarge his soul a man eats an animal's liver. Women have no soul and therefore are not permitted to eat liver. According to occultists to dream of meat signifies gaiety, profit.

MECCA (MEKKA) The end of a pilgrimage, a long-relished goal. From the sacred city of the Moslems, center of their universe. Birthplace of Mohammed, to which all pious Moslems make the hadj (pilgrimage) at least once in a lifetime, and toward which they turn their faces for prayer. Site of the Kaaba, holy shrine.

MEDAL Award or decoration for merit; commemoration of an event. Dream significance: success, vanity.

Leather medal. An imaginary award for inferiority or stupidity; used satirically.

MEDAMOTHI In Rabelais' Pantagruel, island at which the fleet of Pantagruel lands to buy the atoms of Epicurus, an echo drawn to life, a picture of a man's voice, Plato's ideas, samples of Philomela's needlework, and other objects of virtue. The word is from the Greek and, like Butler's Erewhon and More's Utopia, means nowhere.

MEDAN Hebrew masculine name meaning judgment.

MEDB (MAEVE, MEADHBH, MEAVE) In Brythonic mythology queen of Connaught. Originally the wife of Conchobar, whom she left for Ailill. Findabair was her daughter. She coveted the Brown Bull of Ulster owned by Daire. When Daire refused to lend her the bull she appointed Fergus, an Ulsterman who had quarrelled with Conchobar, to lead her forces in an attack against Ulster. Her army was defeated, but with the aid of Lugaid, Ailill, and others, she attacked a second time, planning her campaign to coincide with the season when the men of Ulster were under the magic of a weak spell (winter). By the sorcery of the daughters of Calatin she enticed Cuchulainn (sun) into single combat against her whole army (darkness). In this second battle Cuchulainn was killed and the Brown Bull (fertility) became the property of Medb, who usually is interpreted to be a moon goddess or queen of darkness. Probably the original of the fairy queen Mab.

MEDEA (MEDEIA) In Greek mythology granddaughter of Helios, daughter of Aetes. A prophetess and sorceress as well as a dawn goddess, she is the heroine of a light myth. She helped Jason (sun) obtain the golden fleece (sunlit clouds) in the custody of her father (darkness), and then fled with Jason. Pursued by her father and her brother Absyrtus (sun's rays), she trapped and killed Absyrtus, dismembered his body, and dropped the pieces into the Adriatic Sea to delay her father, who stopped to pick them up. When Jason deserted her for Glauce (dawn), she sent her rival as a wedding gift a mantle of gold thread she had inherited from Helios. Trying it on Glauce was burned to death. Medea killed her sons by Jason and fled to Athens, where she became the wife of Aegeus, by whom she became the mother of Medeus, eponymous ancestor of the Medes.

For plotting against Aegeus's son Theseus, she was driven from Athens. Because she repulsed the advances of Zeus, Hera gave her immortality and in Elysium she married Achilles. The mantle she inherited was the sun's wisdom, capable of giving and destroying life. Eventually it was interpreted to be an article of witchcraft, an evil character was assigned to Medea, and she appeared in her role of a fallen deity. As one who aided her lover she is an analogue of Ariadne and Gunlad; as one who killed her sons she is an analogue of Gudrun, Procne, and Signy. Her name suggests counsel or providence and is akin to Maia, Medusa, Metis.

Medea's kettle. A magic vessel of rejuvenation; restorer of lost youth. A world pot, the underworld, realm of rebirth.

MEDEBA Hebrew place name meaning full waters.

MEDICINE Symbolized by a caduceus, serpent, or group composed of bay leaves, flask, an open book, pen, and skull. The ancient color of the academic gown of physicians was green. Among American Indians the term applied to objects and practices, such as an article, dance, song, or spell, which supposedly controlled the animistic powers of nature; hence a private magical property.

Medicine bag. Sacred bundle of wonders carried by every male American Indian. To it he paid the greatest homage and to it he looked for safety throughout his life. It was made from human or reptile skin or the skin of a creature which had appeared in a dream inspired by the Great Spirit during the puberty fast, the time an Indian learns which animal is to be his guardian. Called manito (manitou) by Algonquins; oki by the Iroquois; teotl by Aztecs; all words meaning serpent.

Medicine Buddhas. In Buddhist Tibet especially revered in two groups, one of eight and one of nine. They are seated dhyanasana or in meditative pose, wear monastic garments, no ornaments, and usually have long-lobed ears, urna, and usnisa.

Medicine man. Among American Indians one to whom the nature of every object was known. One who employed naturalistic methods of healing, as the use of crude surgery, herbs, sweat-baths, etc. In many tribes he played the role of a god and was accredited with the powers of the god he impersonated, employing magic for healing. Medicine men had three distinct roles; they were medical practitioners, practitioners at night orgies, prophets or seers. The modern doctor is the equivalent of the ancient fertility spirit, healer, medicine man, priest.

Medicine show. An entertainment, especially in rural areas of the United States, designed to advertise patent medicines or cure-alls. They were given from a traveling wagon and included comics, freaks, and song and dance teams. The Indian medicine-man invariably was impersonated.

MEDINA In Spenser's Faerie Queene personification of the golden mean. Stepsister of Perissa (excess) and Elissa (deficiency). (2) Holy Mohammedan city in Arabia. Burial place of Mohammed.

MEDITATION Symbolized by a mountain, owl. Personified by a person with hand supporting head, deep in thought.

MEDR (BEHR) Ancient south

Arabian death god.

MEDRAWD Same as Modred, which see.

MEDUSA (MEDOUSA) In Greek mythology one of the three Gorgons; sister of Euryale and Stheno. Queen of darkness and generation. Although her sisters are immortal Medusa is mortal. When she offends Athena her fair countenance is changed, she becomes an object of horror with snakes on her head instead of hair. Slain by Perseus (sun), who fixes her head, which turns those who gaze upon it into stone, on the aegis of Athena (dawn). Poseidon (sea) is her lover, and the moment she is slain Chrysaor and Pegasus spring from her blood. Thus the beautiful night is loved by the sea; her countenance changes in a storm, vapors stream across her face like snakes; she is mortal inasmuch as the sun dispels the night; and in giving birth she produces powers or rays of the sun (Chrysaor) and vapors or morning mist (Pegasus). She also is mortal because growth (generation) is capable of death. Her sisters do not die because they are absolute darkness. Medusa also exemplifies any hideous or ugly woman.

Medusa head. Fear, frightfulness, horror, terror. The snakes typify fecundation and hiss of wind as well as vapors. An amulet worn to safeguard against incantations.

MEDYR A follower of King Arthur noted for his speed. An aspect of wind.

ME'EMZET Egyptian ship which draws the sun during the day.

MEG Old English giantess; demoneſs of disease and plague.

Notorious as thrower of boulders and other gigantic missiles. Big guns once were named after her. Also known as Long Meg, Mons Meg.

MEGAERA In Greek mythology the grim one. One of the Eumenides, which see.

MEGIDDO In Old Testament site of many conflicts. See Armageddon.

MEHETABEL (MEHITABEL) Hebrew feminine name meaning benefitted of God.

MEHREM Ancient south Arabian creator god.

MEHT-UERET Literally, great flood. Ancient Egyptian divinity. The sun frequently is said to be born on or of Meht-ueret, or to have climbed on her back or between her horns on the day of creation. The same process may be said to take place every morning, for daily and cosmogonic processes are parallel.

MEIBOIA Ancient Greek heaven bee-goddess. Daughter of Oceanus or of Pelagus.

MEIDO Japanese world of the dead. Land of gloom, nether-regions. Also called Yomotsukuni.

MEILICHIOS Literally, gracious, mild. Greek underworld snake god. Originally ruler of the Meilichians, spirits worshiped in nocturnal ceremonies in an imprecation rite. Later Zeus was superimposed on Meilichios and worshiped in a period of chilly gloom as a purification from guilt of kindred blood. A magical fleece was used in the purification services. Another face of Maimaktes, who thirsts for blood. By Euripi-des called Zeus-Hades.

MEKALA Siamese lightning goddess. Shown with a bolt of light.

MEKKA Same as Mecca.

MEKONAH Hebrew name meaning foundation.

MELAMPUS Literally, black-foot. In Greek mythology the first mortal seer; ancestor of a family of seers. He was the first mortal to practice the art of healing and the first to worship Dionysus. He understood the language of beasts and birds, and the gift of prophecy had been given to him by serpents he had saved from death at the hands of his servants. He was a hard bargainer. To cure the daughters of Proetus of madness he demanded one-third of the kingdom; this Proetus refused to pay. When they grew worse Melampus demanded two-thirds of the kingdom. The curing of the daughters suggests the absorption of one cult by another or the absorption of one aspect of nature or one season by another.

MELANIE Feminine name from the Greek, meaning black.

MELANIPPE In Greek mythology a daughter of Chiron transformed by Artemis into a mare and placed among the constellations.

MELBOURNE Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the mill stream.

MELCHI Masculine name from the Hebrew through the Greek, meaning my king.

MELCHIOR Literally, king of light. One of the three kings or wise men of the East who brought offerings to the infant Jesus. He offered gold, emblem of royalty.

MELCHIZEDEK (MELCHISEDEC) Literally, king of righteousness. In the Old Testament king of Salem (Jerusalem), and priest who blessed Abraham and received tithes at his hand. He claimed to rule, not by right of inheritance but by will of God, and he stands alone without predecessor or successor. He is said to be a type of Christ, and a 3rd century sect paid divine honors to him as superior to Christ. He has been variously identified as an angel, Enoch, the Holy Spirit, a messenger of God, Shem, a Son of God. In art he is shown as king and priest holding a chalice reverently. He is a priest whose origin, consecration, life, and death are unknown, as opposed to Aaron, about whom all is known.

MELEAGER (MELEAGROS) In Greek mythology heroic son of Oeneus, king of Calydon, and Althea. At his birth the Fates inform his mother that he will live as long as a log burning on the hearth remains unconsumed, whereupon Althea snatches the brand from the fire and extinguishes it. Famous as a javelin (ray) thrower, Meleager becomes one of the Argonauts and leader in the hunt for the Calydonian boar (drought), which ravages the crops of his father. Because of his love for Atalanta he slays his maternal uncles in a quarrel over the dead boar. His mother, in revenge, throws the log into the flames and causes his death. His character and career appear to symbolize the course of the sun on a cloudy day, when he sometimes flashes splendidly and sometimes is shrouded in gloom, sinking in flames in the west. His exploits resemble those of Perseus, Sigurd, and other sun heroes.

MELEK TAOS (KING TAOS)

The image of a peacock supported on a candlestick or pillar. Symbol of the sun god. Name signifies great shining light.

MELIADES Greek nymphs who presided over flocks and fruit trees.

MELIAE Greek ash or oak nymphs which sprang from the blood of Uranus when Cronus castrated him. Shafts for spears, which typify rays, were made from ash or oak. Compare Medusa for the birth of Chrysaor and Pegasus.

MELIAGRAUNCE, SIR (MELEAGANT, MELIAGAUNCE) In Arthurian romances king of death. Deity who abducts Gwynhwyvar (Guinevere) to a castle on an island whence no traveler returns. In one version she is rescued by Gawain; in another by Lancelot. Identical with Melwas.

MELICERTES (MELIKERTES)

In Greek mythology grandson of Cadmus, son of Athamas and Ino. Ino, fleeing from her frantic husband with Melicertes in her arms, plunged from a cliff into the sea. Compassionate gods transformed her into a sea goddess and Melicertes into a sea god under the name Palaemon. Both were invoked against shipwreck. He had jurisdiction over ports and shores. His steed was the dolphin. He was a sun deity, who at the end of the day plunged into the sea. The Isthmian games were held in his honor, and children once were sacrificed to him. Melicertes had been borrowed from the Phoenician Melkarth.

MELISSA (MELISSE, MELITA, MELITE, MELUSINE) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning bee. Source of Malta. (2) In Greek mythology a daughter of Melissus, Cretan king. A honey priestess, she fed milk and honey to the infant Zeus. (3) In legendary history the second wife of Periander, tyrant of Corinth. She was unjustly accused of infidelity and killed by her husband. Prototype of Desdemona.

MELKARTH (MELCARTH, MELKART, MELQART) Literally, city king. Phoenician sun deity, who was god of the underworld until days began to lengthen at the winter solstice; thus a dying god resembling Attis and Tammuz. Patron deity of the seaport Tyre; revered by seafarers. Children were sacrificed to him in a fire. Sacred to him were the oak and quail, and when the quail arrived each March, the oak began to leaf to celebrate Melkarth's resurrection and royal marriage to his sister-mother Ashtart. Egyptians portrayed him with a gazelle's head. He passed into Greek mythology as Melicertes, and in later myths is called Hercules, the primeval father. In the Old Testament he is called Baal, his worship having been introduced by Jezebel. In steles he brandishes an ax or spear and carries a shield. Frequently represented riding a sea horse. Identical with Moloch.

Melk-Ashtart. Phoenician father-mother deity. Equates with Anat-Bethel, Eshmun-Astarte. See Androgynous deities.

MELMOTH, SEBASTIAN Name used by Oscar Wilde after his release from prison. In Melmoth the Wanderer, a novel by Charles Maturin, who was related to Wilde's mother, Melmoth is a man who sells his soul to the Devil in return for everlasting life.

MELON See gourd for symbolism. Word from the Latin malum, which resolves into al-um, i.e. one god.

ME-LONG Tibetan metal mirror. One of the eight objects used in Man-la worship.

MELPOMENE Literally, to sing. Greek muse of tragedy. Shown with a tragic mask; sometimes with a lyre or scroll. Her crown may be of cypress, fig, ivy, mulberry, olive, or vine leaves. See Muses.

MELU Indonesian creator god.

MELUSINA (MELISANDE) In medieval French romances a fairy, daughter of Elimas, king of Albania, and the fairy Presina. For offending her mother she sealed her father in a mountain and, for this sin, she was condemned to become a serpent from the waist down every Saturday. When she married Raymond, count of Poitiers, she made him vow not to visit her on that day. Excited by jealousy he broke his promise; whereupon she was obliged to leave her husband and wander about as a specter until the day of doom. In one version she was locked up in a dungeon of the count's castle. Many noble French families claim her as their ancestress, and she is said to appear occasionally to warn her descendants of approaching danger. Ginger cakes in the form of a beautiful woman with a serpent's tail are still sold at the May fair in Poitiers and called Melusines. She was adopted by Spenser as Melissa. Compare Tyo-tamahime.

Un cri de Melusine. A sudden cry; in allusion to the cry of despair uttered by Melusina when she was discovered by her husband.

MELUZINA Bohemian spirit of winds.

MELVILLE Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from the chief's town.

MELWAS British lord of the underworld. In Arthurian legend god of darkness who, for a year, lay in ambush and finally abducted Guinevere to his palace in Avalon. Arthur besieged the stronghold and Melwas was obliged to restore Guinevere to Arthur. In other versions Arthur's rival is Meliagraunce or Modred, and Gawain or Lancelot rescues the queen. Cornish equivalent of the Welsh Gwyn. Mortalized as Malvasius, king of Iceland.

MEM Thirteenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet meaning water. Its numerical value is forty or, if a final letter, six hundred. According to mystics it symbolizes mother, seed and root of all things, hence fertility, formation, regeneration. Its planetary correspondence is Saturn; its symbolic correspondence is transformation; its tarot correspondence is Death. Its color is pale blue; its direction on the cube of space is east to west, signifying the inner axis which connects the center of the eastern face with the center of the western face, thus that which is companionable. In white magic it is in correspondence with the fourth heaven or sphere of Jupiter. The sovereign intelligence governing this planet is called Tsadkiel. When mem is a final letter it is analogous to the fifth heaven or sphere of Mars, which has Camael for its supreme intelligence. He is the fire and strength of the gods, and presides over many princes. See Alphabet Affiliations.

MEMING (MIMING) In Norse legend satyr who guards the sword of victory.

MEM LOIMIS In the mythology of the Wintun tribe of Copehan Indians the waters. Aid of Olelbis, which see.

MEMNON In Greek mythology son of Tithonus and Eos; nephew of Priam, whom he assisted in the Trojan War. He was the darkness which came from a bright land (Ethiopia), killed Antilochus, the afternoon sun, and was slain by Achilles, the morning sun. Ancients believed dew was the tears of his mother, who wept every morning over his loss, or the tears of his comrades, who were so plunged into grief the gods changed them into birds which visited his tomb to weep. The more easterly of the two statues of Amenophis III at Thebes, Egypt, the Greeks called that of Memnon. At the break of day the statue was said to give forth music like that of a lyre when the first sunrays touched it. Thus when Eos kissed her son at daybreak the hero acknowledged the salutation with a musical murmur. Like those of Bran and Mimir his head was said to have retained its prophetic power after his death.

MEMORIAL DAY In the United States a day set apart for decorating the graves of those who gave their lives in wars. In most states celebrated on May 30. In Alabama, Florida, Georgia, and Mississippi celebrated on April 26, and in Louisiana and Tennessee on June 3. Symbolized by blue and gray, the colors of the uniforms in the Northern and Southern armies during the Civil War; flowers; national flag at half mast; soldiers' graves; wreaths. Also called Decoration Day.

Memorial feast. Among Finno-Ugrians a hen, horse, or other domestic animal is killed for a feast in honor of the dead, for without bloodshed a memorial feast cannot be celebrated.

Memorial monument. In China and Japan composed of a gem to symbolize ether, crescent for air, triangle for fire, circle for water, square for earth. It suggests the body of the dead has been resolved into its original elements and absorbed in the All, the source of life.

MEMPHIS Great commercial center of ancient Egypt; sole capital until the rise of Thebes. Now in ruins. City of pyramid builders, its theology was based upon earth worship, revering the god Ptah. Its name, meaning white walls, suggests its fortress was constructed of limestone. In Old Testament called Noph, and referred to as the place where Joseph was prisoner and ruler. Prophets foretold its doom, which they said would come through the worship of idols.

MENAKA Hindu apsaras who married a mortal and became the ancestor of the human race.

MENALCAS In Roman poetry a rustic or shepherd. Spenser borrowed the name, and in his Shepherd's Calendar he is the enemy of the countryman Colin Clout.

MENAT Whip amulet of ancient Egyptians. Talisman for conjugal happiness as it gave strength to the reproductive organs, promoted fruitfulness and health, and drove away evil.

MENE LAUS In Greek mythology husband of Helen. By reason of his marriage to her he became king of Sparta, thus a king by matrilineal descent. The abduction of Helen by Paris precipitated the Trojan War. After the war Menelaus and Helen were reconciled; thus he was a cuckold.

MENES (MEN, MENA) First king of the Thinite, the first dynasty of united Egypt. Formerly held to be legendary; now accepted as the king who united the north and south kingdoms. He is believed to have built the city of Memphis. His reign is placed variously between 5000 B.C. to 3400 B.C. He is described as a great unifier; also as a lustful drunkard. His name was a generic term for the golden or white sun bull of Osiris.

MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN According to the Old Testament three Chaldee words meaning respectively, he is numbered, he is weighed, they are dividing, and unusually translated, "Weighed in the balance and found wanting." They were supernaturally traced on the wall at Belshazzar's impious feast and indicated his impending doom. Court astrologers either could not or dared not read them. Only Daniel had the courage to reveal their awful meaning, and the same night witnessed their fulfilment.

MENGK Finno-Ugric evil forest spirit.

MENGLOD Literally, necklace glad. In Norse mythology an aspect of Freyja as spouse of Svipdag.

MENG-PO NIANG-NIANG Chinese goddess of the netherworld. Her broth of oblivion drives out all memory of the netherworld preparatory to rebirth.

MENHIR Literally, long stone. A prehistoric monument consisting of a single tall stone left rough or partly shaped. Placed upright in Britain as a deity image or battle or sepulchral memorial.

MENI (MINU) Assyrian mother goddess who fixed the fates of men, cities, and nations. Probably a moon deity. Sometimes interpreted to be the planet Venus, a goddess of good fortune. Originally the name was masculine. Identical with Manat; associated with Gad.

MENJA See Fenja and Menja.

MENOECEUS (MENOIKEUS) In Greek mythology son of Creon. When the seer Tiresias declared that the city of Thebes would be saved only if the youngest scion of the royal house offered himself voluntarily to Ares, Menoeceus mounted the walls of the city as the Seven Against Thebes were preparing to attack it and plunged a dagger into his heart. Probably an aspect of dawn. Equates with Protesilaus.

MENORAH (MANORAH, MEMORAH) Seven-branched candlestick; characterizes a site where a Jew worships God or the grave of a pious Jew, and suggests the unquenchable and illuminating spirit of Judaism. It stood on the western end of the sanctuary in front of the Holy of Holies. In popular tradition it symbolizes the presence of God, the Shekinah within the Temple. This light never was extinguished until the Shekinah voluntarily departed from the Temple in anticipation of its destruction. Originally it may have represented the Tree of Life with fruits or lights hanging on the branches. It probably stands for the five planets, the sun, and the moon, the eternal lights brightening the paths of the dead, and sometimes called the seven eyes of Yahweh. The menorah is the light of the law by which a Jew hopes to be saved and, as a grave symbol, infers that the departed soul will shine as a star forever. Its seven branches also typify the six days of creation and the Sabbath. Used as a talisman for averting evil. It became the hall-mark of Judaism as the cross became the mark of Christianity, and at one time the seven-branched menorah was forbidden in the home as imitating the Temple, and an eight-armed candelabrum was used.

MENRFA (MENRVA) Etruscan goddess of wisdom. Identical with Minerva.

MENSA (MONS MENSÆ) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Table Mountain.

MENSES A period regarded as unclean by many primitive peoples. Widespread is the belief that, if a menstrous woman mounts a horse, it will become disabled or die; if she passes between two men, one will die; if she touches a flower, plant, or purple cloth, it will fade; if she washes linen, it will turn black. Among certain tribes, if a wife menstruates on the day on which a new hut is built, the hut is torn down. However, a menstruating woman standing naked on a field before sunrise will rid it of pests; also by exposing her genitals, she will calm a storm at sea. Among California Indians a first menstruation is marked by severe tabus for the girl involved, and a dance is given when the period has passed. Carrier Indians seclude girls at puberty in a wilderness; to catch a glimpse of her is a threat to one's safety; her mere footstep defiles a path or river. Her period of segregation is called the burying alive; thus she experiences rebirth. Apache Indians look upon the menses as a source of blessing, and priests pass on their knees before a row of young girls having their first menstruation to receive their benediction. A magical connection of the moon with menstruation is widely believed. The baleful moon-dew of Thessalian witches was a girl's first menstrual blood, taken during an eclipse.

MEN SHEN Ch'en Chi and Chen Lung, two bird guardians of the portals of Chinese Buddhist temples. Worshipped during the New Year festival. They are shown in warrior dress and are reputed to ward off evil influences. Various ancient warriors are identified with the pair.

MENTU (MENTHU) Egyptian god of the rising sun. Represents the morning aspect of Ra as opposed to Atum, who represents the setting sun. The male principle, also god of war. Shown as a bull symbolizing the heat and power of the orb of day, or as hawk-headed. In time he completely overshadowed Amon as Mentu-Ra.

MENU Same as Manu, which see.

MENW In Arthurian romances a knight of the Round Table. He could take the shape and speak the language of birds, and he had the power to render himself and his companions invisible at will.

Probably an aspect of wind.

MEPHAATH Hebrew name meaning height.

MEPHIBOSHETH Hebrew name meaning utterance of Baal.

MEPHISTOPHELES (MEPHOSTOPHILUS, MEPHOSTOPILIS) In an old demonology one of the seven chief devils; ranks next to Satan as a fallen angel. The name is manufactured from three Greek words meaning not light loving. He appears in many literary works as a crafty, cynical, sardonic tempter. In Goethe's Faust his form sometimes is that of a man, sometimes that of a woman, thus an hermaphrodite.

MER (ISHKUR, MERMER, MIR, MUR) In Sumerian mythology son of Enlil, by whom he is given control of the winds. God of lightning. He is known by the title Bir, and is a prototype of Adad and Yahweh.

MERIAIAH Hebrew name meaning revelation of Jah.

MERIAIOTH Hebrew name meaning revelations.

MERIAIOTH Feminine name from the Spanish, meaning Our Lady of Mercies.

MERCURY (MERCURIUS) (1) Roman wind deity, messenger of the gods. Conductor of souls to the underworld; deity of commerce, eloquence, and science; patron of merchants, rogues, thieves, travelers, and vagabonds. A name used to denote a bearer of news, a clever or nimble person, a hawker, a skillful thief. His festival was celebrated on May 15, at which time merchants sprinkled themselves and their wares with holy water to insure large profits. Portrayed as a young man standing on tip-toe, suggesting he had a sacred or vulnerable heel (see heel) as well as indicating speed; wearing a winged hat and winged sandals or heels; bearing a caduceus. Sometimes he is shown with coins or a purse, his emblems as protector of commerce, or with a gold chain hanging from his lips to indicate his eloquence. Other attributes are a cup or chalice, a harpe or sword, and the color green. In early statues represented with a branch, and probably he originally was a grain or fertility deity. His statues are made of boxwood as the box tree was sacred to him. He was derived from the Greek Hermes and Christianized as Saint Mercurios. Mercury is the source of words such as market, merchandise, merchant, merciful. (2) In medieval theosophy the Holy Ghost in the Godhead; in man, the conscience, sometimes the intelligence; also the male principle. (3) The smallest planet, and the one nearest the sun; ruler of the zodiacal houses Gemini and Virgo; lord of Wednesday. In astrology the messenger, being the intermediary between the four elements, air, earth, fire, water, and the phenomena produced by them. Star of intelligence and free will, protector of merchants and thieves. Those born under Mercury's influence are eloquent, inventive, mentally and physically active. Represents an intelligence of transparency, typifying faulty observation and superficial reasoning. Astrologists assign the color green or yellow and the musical note D natural to the planet. It is pictured by a cross surmounted by a circle, which in turn is surmounted by a lunar crescent or wings. In Mohammedanism planet presiding over authors and scribes. (4) Metal supposedly carried by the god Mercury, which changed color and consistency according to circumstances. Symbolic of adaptability, inconstancy, speed. Also called quicksilver. In Tibetan Buddhism one of the eight articles used in Man-la ritual.

Mercury fig. The first fig taken from a tree was offered to Mercury. A proverbial saying applied to all first fruits or first works.

MERCY Personified in an Italian icon by a pale woman with a Roman nose. Crowned with olives, she carries a cedar branch. A crow is at her feet.

Corporeal works of mercy.

In Christian tradition they are seven: 1- to feed the hungry and give drink to the thirsty; 2- to clothe the naked; 3- to shelter the stranger and needy; 4- to visit the sick; 5- to minister unto prisoners and captives; 6- to visit the fatherless and husbandless; 7- to bury the dead.

Mercy seat. Golden lid of the ark of the covenant whence God gave his oracles to the high priest, upon which was sprinkled the blood of the yearly atonement, and place where the covering or forgiving of sins was dispensed. In Christian tradition the blood of atonement showed that divine mercy can be granted only through the blood of Christ. According to Josephus the mercy seat was only a lid; New Testament writers state the term implied propitiation. Figuratively, throne of grace.

Spiritual works of mercy. In Christian tradition they are seven: 1- to instruct the ignorant; 2- to correct offenders; 3- to counsel the doubtful; 4- to comfort the afflicted; 5- to suffer injuries with patience; 6- to forgive offenses and wrongs; 7- to pray for others.

MEREDITH Masculine name from the Welsh, meaning sea protector.

MER FEAST Finno-Ugric great sacrificial feast to the nature gods. Held during a famine, war, or any period of trouble under the direction of a priest or seer in the kus-oto (sacred grove). The festival lasts for a week, sometimes two.

MERGEN TENGERE Altaic god who lives in the seventh heaven with the sun. The sharpshooter god, suggesting a god of lightning.

MERIADEK God anciently venerated by Breton peasants. He appears to have been identical with Merodach.

MERIT In an Italian icon personified by an old man in rich apparel on the summit of a rock. One arm, naked, supports a book; the other, armed, holds a scepter.

MERLIN (MERDDIN, MYRDDIN) Literally, sparrow hawk. Sky deity who first appeared as Ambrosius in Nennius. In Geoffrey of Monmouth's account he appears as Myrddin, ruler of heaven; deity of battle, conqueror of dragons hostile to mankind and fertility; shape-shifter. He passed into Norman-French romances as Merlin and eventually was called Merlin in English versions. In the Arthurian cycle he is the son of a Welsh princess seduced by a fiend. Blaise baptises him to rescue him from Satan. An enchanter and prophet, he hears everything in the world, even the slightest sound, and he builds the Round Table, giver of fertility in the shape of the world, which becomes Guinevere's wedding gift to Arthur. His wife is Elen Lwyddawg, a battle (storm) goddess. He is beguiled by the siren Nimuë, who encloses him in a rock; thus the sky is imprisoned in darkness. In later legends he is seduced by Vivien, Lady of the Lake, exemplifying the susceptibility of a wise old man to the charms of a young woman. Worn out by her, he reveals his secret of imprisoning a man in a wall-less tower. She entraps him in a hawthorn bush or oak tree, where he perishes; sleep is the chain by which he is bound. In the Triads he and nine bards go to sea and are lost or sail to Bardsey Island, a paradise. Thus the sky disappears in a dark forest, at sea, or on a far-off island. With him he took the thirteen treasures of Britain, henceforth lost to the human race. In some versions he is not dead, but merely sleeps, and his voice is heard on occasions, thus a prototype of Arthur and Bran. A shape-changer, his powers are similar to those of Atabyrius, Dionysus, Llew Llaw, Lludd, Periclymenus, Proteus, Zeus. One of his epithets is Emrys. Deity of the light sky, he was worshiped on high places, and Stonehenge probably was one of his temples. In legends connected with early struggles for freedom in Wales, he is a prominent character, and his history is interwoven with that of a 5th century bard named Merlin. An early name of Britain was Clas Myrddin (Myrddin's Enclosure).

MERMAID Sea nymph; a lovely woman to the waist, the tail of a fish below. She often appears above the surface of the water combing her long hair with one hand, holding a mirror in the other. She resembles the siren of Greek mythology, but probably originally was a Celtic deity.

Some legends of the mermaids sprang from sailor's tales, in which a mermaid is associated with human calamity. In popular tradition typifies beauty, generation, sea, sea mother, seduction, wisdom. In heraldry signifies eloquence. The mirror probably represents the moon disk, and the long hair sea weed or rays on the water. In the middle ages a mermaid denoted the dual nature of Christ. The name is from the Anglo-Saxon mere (sea).

MERODACH Hebrew masculine name meaning bold. Same as Marduk, which see.

MEROPE In Greek mythology: (1) daughter of Oenopion, king of Chios. Her overly-eager lover Orion was blinded because of the way in which he treated her. Probably a dawn goddess. (2) A Pleiade, who lost her place because she married Sisyphus, a mortal. Some call the lost Pleiade Electra. (3) Wife of Cresphontes, king of Messenia; mother of Aepytus. Polyphontes, the man who murdered her husband, took her as his wife. Aepytus escaped and Polyphontes offered a reward for his murder. Years later, unrecognized, Aepytus returned under the pretext of claiming the reward, and his mother planned to kill him for murdering her son. He revealed his true identity to her, together they killed Polyphontes, and Aepytus became king. This is a light myth, in which Cresphontes, the aged sun is slain by Polyphontes, night sky, who in turn is slain by the young sun. Merope typifies the moon or dawn, and her position is much like that of Gertrude, the mother of Hamlet, and of Gerutha and Groa of Norse mythology. (4) Wife of Polybus, king of Corinth. Moon goddess. Foster mother to Oedipus, sun hero.

MERRY ANDREW Clown, jester, especially the buffoon who attends a traveling quack. The name is said to be derived from Andrew Borde, eccentric physician to Henry VIII. In old plays Andrew is a popular name for a man-servant, as Abigail is for a waiting-woman.

MERSEKHNET A name of Atet, which see.

MERTVAYA VODA Literally, dead water. In Slavic mythology water which heals the wounds of a corpse. Carried by birds, hail, thunder, and whirlwind. Compare Shivaya voda.

MERU (SUMERU) Hindu sacred mountain. Dwelling place or pleasure ground of the gods. Sunrise mountain, which shines like the morning sun, is of gold, and round as a ball. The birds on it have golden feathers. It is the pillar separating heaven and earth, the spine which sustains the world. Its twin is Kailasa. Buddhist navel of the universe. Resembles Olympus.

MERVEILLEUSE Literally, marvelous or wonderful. Magic sword of Doolin of Mayence.

MESCA In Irish mythology daughter of Bodb. Garman, a mortal, took her from her divine sid and seduced her, and she died of shame. Probably a fertility goddess. See Divine-human marriages.

MESCAL Narcotic of the cactus plant. Prized by Mexican Indians, who use it ceremonially to obtain the blessed state which to them is supremely religious. The top called mescal button is eaten in the manner of the sacrament; first the mescal button, then water, accompanied by prayer and songs.

MESCHAMAAT Slavic forest goddess whose love is dangerous to mortals. Corresponds to Lesni Zenka.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM Symbolizes idleness, rejection. Popularly called ice plant.

MESENKTET Egyptian bark of dusk, ship in which Ra travels throughout the night. The bark of dawn is Manzet.

MESGEGRA Irish vassal monarch ruling over Leinster under Eochaid Airem. A fertility deity.

MESHA Hebrew name meaning freedom.

MESHACH (MESHECH) In Old Testament, with Abednego and Shadrach, for refusing to worship the god of Nebuchadnezzar, he was thrown into a fiery furnace, from which he was miraculously delivered by Jehovah. See Abednego.

MESHARU In Babylonian mythology an attendant of Shamash. Name signifying righteousness.

MESHELEMIAM Hebrew name meaning Jah recompenses.

MESHEZABEEL Hebrew name meaning God is deliverer.

MESHILLEMOTH Hebrew name meaning recompenses.

MESHOBAB Hebrew name meaning returned.

MESHKHENET (MESKHENT) Egyptian goddess of the birth seat or cradle. A fate deity who watches the beginning of the second life in the realm of Osiris. She wears on her head an ornament resembling two bent antennae of insects. Her attribute is a brick on which Egyptian women of antiquity lay while giving birth.

MESLAM Sumerian underworld chamber where the sun god Nergal (Ninurta) remained during the night.

MESSALA A false friend. From the character in the Lew Wallace novel Ben Hur.

MESSALINA An intemperate, licentious woman. From the wife of the Roman emperor Claudius, executed by order of her husband in 48 A.D. Catherine II of Russia has been called the modern Messalina.

MESSBUACHALLA In Irish mythology child of incest; daughter of Eochaid and Ess. Mother of the hero Conaire. Probably a fertility deity.

MESSIAH From the Greek Mesias, the Hebrew Mashiakh, the Mohammedan Masih, meaning anointed. In Christian churches Jesus, called Christ, the deliverer. Among Hebrews the awaited savior or deliverer of mankind. The Hebrew word contains the same number of letters as the word for the serpent form in which Satan seduced Eve; this is interpreted to mean the Messiah will bruise the head of the serpent and banish death and sin from the world. Symbolized by a fish and also called Dag, Hebrew for fish and preserver. The Messiah will distribute to the faithful the flesh of Behemoth, the land monster, and that of Leviathan, the sea monster. Figuratively, any great national savior or hoped-for liberator of a country or people.

MESSIDOR Tenth and harvest month in the calendar of the French Revolution.

MESSON Same as Michabo.

MESSOR Roman divinity of harvest.

MESSOU In Potawatomi legend the great restorer. Rabbit who brought back the world when it was lost in the deluge. Prototype of Manabozho.

MESU (MES) Sacred Sumerian tree with roots in the cosmic sea in the depths of Arallu and with branches in heaven. Prototype of Yggdrasil.

METAKORAB In Melanesian mythology one of the dogai. A female bogey queen.

METAL Element of the underworld. Typifies eternity, war, wealth. Represented by the color white. According to mystics it is the sensory element of understanding in the body; its action is to destroy and produce, resist and yield; its quality is to be hard and soft; its cycle is to conquer wood and produce water, exemplifying hardness over softness. In China represented by the color yellow. Principle element of the west, typifying autumn. In Chinese zodiac element of Kang, eastern quadrant; Kuei, southern quadrant; Lou, western quadrant; Niu, northern quadrant. Medieval alchemists believed in seven metals, which corresponded to the seven movable planets, and which they indicated by the symbols for the planets. Copper was called Venus; gold was called Sol; iron, Mars; lead, Saturn; quicksilver, Mercury; silver, Luna; tin, Jupiter.

Heated metal. In Japanese tradition confession abstractor, determiner of guilt or innocence.

Heraldic metals. Argent (silver) shown by a plain surface; or (gold) shown by spots or by light closely set dots; sable (iron) shown by a black surface.

Metal musical instruments. In China the clanging sound of metal typifies war.

Metal-pin tree. Ainu axis or world tree. Against it the swords of the gods break. It extends into the underworld and reaches into heaven. Parallels the Mesu and Yggdrasil trees.

Metal strips. In Japan used as deity offerings to ward off evil. Called gohei.

Metal worker. In antiquity inspired fear. This fear may have been the root of many of the stories connected with dwarf artisans, such as Hephaestus, Voland, Wayland, and other legendary smiths.

METAMORPHOSIS In folklore usually for the purpose of accomplishing good or evil. Achieved by the use of articles which possess magic qualities or by magic words, thus change of structure or substance by witchcraft. When voluntary called shape-shifting, which see.

METATRON In the cabala angel of the Presence. World-prince corresponding to Kether.

METEOR Dazzlement, holy power, swiftness. A good-luck light. A wish expressed while watching the light of a meteor supposedly will be fulfilled. According to American Indians a forerunner of death. In Australian mythology a rope ladder by which the dead climb up to the sky. In Finno-Ugric belief a form in which souls of the dead or the sleeping travel. Called fire-serpent.

Meteorite. Talisman. Weapon of the gods. The Kaaba. In China to find one is bad luck.

METHUSELAH In Old Testament son of Enoch. He lived 969 years, and died a year before the deluge. According to the Bible he lived longer than any other man in the world.

METIS In Greek mythology one of the Oceanides. Personification of prudence, endowed with the gift of prophecy. In Hesiodic tradition the first wife of Zeus. When he received a warning that his child by Metis would be more powerful than he, he swallowed the sea nymph, who was assimilated into his own being, and Athena, goddess of dawn and wisdom, was born from his brain. In one legend Metis aided Zeus in his rebellion against Cronus by administering to Cronus a draught which caused him to disgorge his children, which he had swallowed. Her name signifies counsel or constructive thought. See Swallowing.

METRA (1) Ancient Persian goddess twofold in character; in one phase, all pervading love, a fertility mother; in the other, the light of heaven, a moon goddess. Source of the Ephesian Artemis. (2) In Greek mythology daughter of Eresichthon, who had been punished by Demeter with an insatiable hunger. Metra possessed the power of transforming herself into a variety of different animals. By this means she contrived to support Eresichthon. This is a time myth; the changing shapes of Metra represent the changing seasons.

METSANHALTIA Baltic Finn forest ruler who grows taller as he is approached, until he becomes the height of a great tree. Personification of shadow. Also called Skogsradare.

METSANNETTSYT Finnish forest virgin. In front she is beautiful, behind she is like a bundle of twigs or a rotted stump with a tail. She causes men to cohabit with her. Also called Skogsjungfru.

METS-HALDIJAS Esthonian forest ruler. A wind deity. When his cry is heard something special is about to happen, perhaps a death.

METSMEES Literally, forestman. Esthonian wind god.

METZLI Aztec moon goddess. She sacrificed herself on a pyre with a leper in order to bring back sunlight.

MEULEN Araucanian, South American, spirit of the whirlwind; devourer of children.

MEXITLI (MEXTLI) Chief deity of ancient Aztecs, whence the name of Mexico. Stupendous human sacrifices, sometimes running into many thousands of persons at one time, were offered to him. Also called Huitzilopochtli.

MEZENTIUS One proverbially cruel or impious. The allusion is to the legendary king of Etruria, who put his subjects to death by tying a living man to a dead one. When driven from his throne he fled to Rutuli, where he allied himself with King Turnus against Aeneas, who eventually killed him.

MEZEREON In the language of flowers: I desire to please. Symbol of coquetry.

MEZUZAH Jewish talisman. Parchment carried in a small case or placed in the lintel of doors.

MEZZORAMIA Legendary oasis of happiness in the African desert.

MI Musical note to which mystics assign the quality worship and the rank of subject.

MIACH In Celtic mythology son of Diancecht. Like his father he was a celestial musician. He cast a spell over the silver hand made by Diancecht and Creidne for Nuada, skin grew over it, and it moved. In another account he made a new hand from a swineherd's arm-bone. In envy his father struck him four times; three times he healed his wounds, but the fourth was fatal. On his grave grew 365 stalks of grass, one for each of his joints and sinews, and each was a cure for any of the illnesses that attacked the 365 nerves in a man's body. His sister Airmid arranged them carefully, but their envious father confused their order so that none may know their properties. Miach personifies fertility; the four wounds represent the four seasons, the season of winter being the season of death. The incidents reflect belief in magico-medical skill; also in divine jealousy of man's knowledge. Miach resembles Asclepius.

MICAH Literally, like Jehovah. One of the minor prophets of the Old Testament. His prophecies relate to the sins and judgments of Israel and Judah, the destruction of Jerusalem and Samaria, the return of the Jews from captivity, the punishment of their enemies, and the coming of the Messiah, specifying Bethlehem as the place where He was to be born of a woman. Thus one who foretold the coming of a deity.

MICAHIAH Hebrew masculine name meaning who is like Jehovah. In the Old Testament a faithful and fearless prophet. He was imprisoned for one of his prophecies until its fulfilment; symbolic of the imprisonment and release of light.

MICAWBER, MR. WILKINS

One who is half-clever, impractical, a great letter-writer and speechifier, a projector of bubble schemes, one who is forever certain that something will 'turn up' to make his fortune. An incurable optimist is called a Micawber. From the character in Dicken's David Copperfield.

MICHABO (MESSIBIZI, MESSON, MISSABOS, MISSIWABUN)

The Great Hare or Giant Rabbit of several Algonquin tribes. Spirit of eastern light; dispeller of darkness. Lord of winds, prince of the air, his voice was thunder, his weapon was lightning. Among some tribes his grandmother was the moon; his father the west wind; his mother, who had been fecundated by the passing breeze, was the virgin dawn, who died at the moment of his birth. He was born fully grown, mighty in strength, with all the knowledge possible to obtain, characteristics common to sun heroes. He remained in constant conflict with Kabun, his father, whose abode was in the realm of darkness. Among some tribes his antagonist was his brother Chokanipok, the flint stone (storm clouds), whom he broke in pieces, which he scattered over the land, turning the entrails into fruitful vines. Other antagonists were the prince of serpents, whose home in the deep waters of a lake was guarded by fiery serpents, and the king of fishes, both symbols of atmospheric waters, typifying wars of the elements. Michabo, who opened the doors to send forth the luminaries on their journeys, was the captain of the raft (sun) which floated on the boundless waters in the beginning. He married Muskrat, whom he sent to the bottom of the primal sea. She returned with a speck of mud which Michabo molded into the earth; then he and Muskrat cohabited and became the parents of the human race. Thus from mud dried by sunlight formed solid earth; later soil warmed by sunlight became fertile. Michabo was the imparteur of religious rites, interpreter of dreams, inventor of picture writing. He was the founder of the medicine hunt in which, after ceremonies and incantations, he put men to sleep and appeared to them in their dreams to instruct them how and where to hunt and fish. Provider of fire and food plants, especially the maize, he was the active, quickening power of life. As Michabo Ovisaketchak (Great Hare who created Earth) he was the beneficent highest deity. His messengers were the Gijigouai (rays). Singing birds, clouds, and winds, all sky symbols, were sacred to him. In a corrupt version, half simpleton, half wizard, he was a magician envious of the powers of others and constantly strove to outdo their accomplishments. He was a prankster and abused his superhuman powers for ignoble and selfish ends. His name is compounded from missi or mitchi, meaning great, and wabos, meaning rabbit. Wabos is related to waban, the east or daylight; wabi, he sees; wabish, white; wasseia, light. A name probably given to him because, in northern winters, the animal's fur becomes white. By some tribes, with slight variations in his legend, he is called Ioskeha, Manabozho, Wabasso. He is the prototype of Brer Rabbit in Uncle Remus stories.

MICHAEL (MICKEY, MICKY, MIKE, MITCHELL) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning who is like the Lord. In Christianity the name of one of the archangels. See under saints. Mohammedan angel of protection.

Michaelmas. Celebration of the Feast of All Saints and of Saint Michael on September 29. Commemorates autumn, harvest. In England one of the quarterly rent days. Magistrates are elected on Michaelmas, and the customary food is goose.

Michaelmas daisy. Typifies cheerfulness in old age.

Michaelmas moon. Harvest moon.

MICHAL Hebrew feminine name meaning who is like God. In the Old Testament a daughter of Saul who was the wife of David. Her hatred of religious zeal was stronger than her love for her husband.

MICHEL Generic term for a German. Also called Cousin Michael.

MICHIGAN Emblem: apple-blossom; motto: Si Quaeris Peninsulam Amoenam Circumspice (If thou Seek a Beautiful Peninsula, Behold it Here); nickname: Auto, Lake, Wolverine.

MICROCOSM Man viewed as an epitome of the universe; according to Pythagoras the intelligence and soul of man.

MICROPROSOPUS In the cabala the sixth Sefhira; Tipherath, the Lesser Countenance. Also applied to the six Sefhira from five to ten, composed of Tipherath, Netzach, Hod, Yesod, Malkuth.

MICROSCOPIUM Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Microscope. Symbolizes investigation.

MICTLANTECUTLI Aztec skeleton god of death. Lord of the midnight hour and of the north. Ruler of those who died of disease. His mate was Mictlanciuatl. The dog and the owl were sacred to him. An aspect of Tezcatlipoca. Also called Tzontemoc, i.e. He of the Falling Hair.

Mictlan (Mictla, Mictlancalco). Aztec house of darkness, abode of Mictlantecutli. Though windowless it was large enough to hold the whole world. Opposed to Tlalocan, paradise.

MIDAS In Greek mythology son of Gordius and Cybele. King of Phrygia. In a musical contest between Apollo and Marsyas (or Pan) he was asked to act as judge. For awarding the prize to Marsyas, Apollo gave him the ears of an ass. Midas hid them under a Phrygian cap, but his barber discovered them. Fearful to tell anyone the secret he was unable to contain, the barber whispered it to the earth, and the rushes kept murmuring to the wind, "Midas has the ears of an ass." Midas was an agricultural king and, in early or Eastern versions of his myth, the ass's ears undoubtedly symbolized wisdom and therefore his glory rather than his disgrace. In another legend Silenus strayed into his garden in an intoxicated condition. Midas entertained him hospitably and then led Silenus to his friend Dionysus, who offered to grant Midas any favor he chose to ask. Midas asked that everything he touch turn to gold. His request was granted; the moment he touched his food, it turned to gold, whereupon Midas begged for deliverance. He was instructed to bathe in the Pactolus River, which thereafter ran over golden sands. Although Midas now denotes one who is avaricious, fabulously rich, or successful in all financial transactions, the gold originally was that of dawn, which became too powerful at midday, and was quenched when the sun came in contact with water at sunset.

MIDEWIWIN Secret religious organization among the Ojibway Indians, which received its mysteries from Manabozho. Its purpose was to prolong life by the use of herbs and magic.

MIDGARD (MIDGAARD, MID-GARTH) Literally, mid-ward or mid-yard. In Norse mythology earth, abode of mankind; distinguished from Asgard, abode of deities, and Utgard, abode of giants. United with Asgard by Bifrost, the rainbow bridge. Created by Odin out of Ymir's eyebrows. Also called Mannaheim (home of man).

Midgard serpent. World serpent, which lay hidden in the sea. Its tail was in its mouth, and it girded the earth, squirting poison (darkness) over air and land. Personification of the ocean, which was believed to encircle the earth. Also called Midgard-sormen. Identical with Jormungandr. Analogue of Losy.

MIDIANTIE Marauder. From the nomadic tribe mentioned in the Old Testament. Descendants of Midian, fourth son of Abraham, the Midianites were idol worshipers who roamed the Moabite desert, swarming like locusts during the harvest season to kill and rob the Jews of their fruits and herds. Gideon finally delivered the Jews from their oppression. The name is from the Hebrew, meaning strife.

MIDIR (MITHR) Gaelic fate deity. A Tuartha De Danann god; husband of Fuamnach; father of Blathnat. His stronghold was the Isle of Man, where he kept three wonderful cows and a magic caldron. An underworld deity, he was a possessor of wealth, the fertility in the ground. He also owned three inhospitable cranes, who stood at his door shouting, "Do not come!" "Go away!" "Go past the house!" Thus he warned men from entering the realm of the dead. In the form of Ailell, Etain's lover, Midir visited Etain. For seducing her he was compelled to perform four tasks: build a causeway across the moor of Lamrach, clear the plains of Meath, cut down the forest of Breag, remove rushes from the land. In one legend he won Etain from her husband Eochaid in a game of chess. Both versions are fertility legends, in which Etain, the summer maid, must spend part of her life underground. Midir is a counterpart of Hades and Pluto.

MIDNIGHT Hour of bewitchment, gloom, mortification, plots, secrecy. According to the cabala moment at which Presence (God) appears and disperses evil spirits. Likewise the moment at which God entered the Garden of Eden. Midnight sometimes is used as an appellation of God. Romans divided night into four watches: the second watch ended at midnight; the third, or cock-crowing watch, began at midnight.

MIDSUMMER DAY Anciently the time of the summer solstice festival; about June 21. Now generally celebrated on June 24 with the feast of John the Baptist. Day on which the oak king was sacrificially burned, when the Eye of the year (sun) was blinded with a mistletoe stake, which appeared in Norse mythology as the slaying of Balder by the mistletoe. In Celtic mythology day on which the goddess Danu took Ireland from its inhabitants, the Fir Bolgs, thus the festival marking the triumph of sunshine and vegetation. In Pagan Europe it was celebrated as a fire festival, honoring sun deities, such as Gwion and Heracles. In Christian Europe it appears as a water festival honoring Saint John. In England one of the quarter days.

Midsummer Eve. Druidic festival which celebrated the summer solstice with Belenian fires. Witches rode abroad; hen eggs were broken to see what one's fortune would be. In Christian times called Saint John's eve.

Midsummer fires. According to ancient superstitions cattle driven through them will be cured of disease; dances and prayers around them will cause rain to cease and hemp to grow; girls who dance around nine midsummer fires will marry within the year.

Midsummer men. A stone-crop plant used by girls on Midsummer Eve to test their lover's fidelity.

MIEHTS-HOZJIN Lapp master of the forest. He is a good spirit unless offended; then he will bewilder a culprit so that he cannot find his way out of a forest. Also called Vare-jielle (forest dweller). Identical with Lesiy.

MIELIKKI Finnish forest spirit with dual attributes, either favoring hunters with game or no game. Spouse of Tapio.

MIGGS, MISS An ill-tempered, shrewish maid. From the comforter of Mrs. Varden in Dickens' Barnaby Rudge, who ultimately becomes a turnkey at Bridewell jail.

MIGNON (MIGNONNE) Feminine name from the French; meaning dainty, little. A term of contempt applied to Henry III of France and his effeminate favorites.

MIGNONETTE January 30 birthday flower, symbolic of health. In the language of flowers: You are better than handsome; Your qualities surpass your charm.

MIHR Armenian fire god. One of the seven chief deities of the pantheon. Brother of Anahit and Nane. His festival was a fire celebration in February, month in which new fires were kindled. His functions resemble those of Hephaestus; his name is identical with Mithra.

MIKADO Japanese deity incarnate, god-king, heavenly sovereign, priest-ruler, spiritual emperor. Descendant of Amaterasu, sun goddess. One whose duty is to mediate between his heavenly ancestors and subjects, leaving worldly affairs to the shogun and samurai. Until recent times his face was unseen except by his consort and his chief ministers. His emblem is the dragon. The three insignia of the royal family are a jewel, mirror, sword. Title rarely used by the Japanese, except in poetry. Also called Arahito-gami.

MIKE Like Pat, a common name for an Irishman. In English colloquial usage, mike means to be lazy, shirk work.

MIKETSU-OHO-KAMI Japanese deity of food.

MIKO Shinto priestess, bride of the gods. Parallels a Greek pythoness.

MIKUJI Japanese written oracles given to those who request them at Shinto shrines. Also called omikuji.

MIKURA-TANA-NO-KAMI

Amaterasu, Japanese sun goddess, as owner of the necklace bestowed on her by her father Izanagi. The necklace, provider of fertility, was so precious it was kept by the goddess on a shelf in her storehouse. Name signifying August-storehouse-shelf-deity.

MIKVEH Bath for ritual purification among orthodox Jews.

MILANION Roman name of the Greek Hippomenes, which see.

MILA-RE-PA (MILA, MILA-RAS-PA) Literally, the cotton clad. Chief apostle of Kar-gyu-pa or Mahamudra School, Tibetan Buddhist sect. The mighty saint. An historical person deified. Disciple of Mar-pa. He was hermit, monk, poet, yogi; thus the Great Yoga. Usually portrayed on lotus throne on a gazelle skin. In paintings he wears monastic robes and no headdress; his hair falls in ringlets over his shoulders. He holds his right hand cupped behind his ear to indicate he is listening (to sounds of solitude). His emblem is the patra. In Tibet called Je-tshun-mi-la or rJe-tsun-Mila.

MILCOM Ammonite god identified with Moloch. His principle offerings were human sacrifices. Solomon permitted his worship in Jerusalem, hence any pernicious influence or system which causes loss of life or sacrifice of principles.

MILDRED (MILLY) Feminine name from Old English, meaning mild and strong; gentle counselor.

MILED (MILEDH) Legendary conqueror of Ireland; eponymous ancestor of the Milesians. Son of Bile and grandson of Bregon, who supposedly descended from Sythian nobles who had been expelled from Egypt and settled in Iberia (Spain). From Iberia Miled sailed to Ireland to avenge the murder of Ith. The Tuatha De Danann made a magic mist to make the island appear like a hog's back, so he called it Muic Inis (Pig Island). He willed the country to his sons Eber and Eremon; after his death they fought for the sole kingship, and Eber was killed. All Irish genealogies trace back to Miled. Name derived from the Latin Miles.

Milesians. Deities who came from the Celtic underworld, Iberia. Ancestors of the Gaels.

MILES (MYLES) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning soldier.

Miles Standish. One who sends another to court the girl he loves and loses her to the man who carries the message. From the bluff, middle-aged soldier in Longfellow's poem, the Courtship of Miles Standish.

MILFOIL War. In China plant used for the purposes of divination.

MI-LI In Chinese Buddhism the coming Buddha. Also known as the laughing Buddha. Sometimes called Ajita, the invincible. He was the principal Bodhisattva of Shakyamuni's retinue, and appointed his successor, to appear as Buddha after 5,000 years. The expected messiah. A tutelary deity. Represented as stout with breasts and upper abdomen exposed. Identical with Pou-tai and with the Sanscrit Maitreya.

MILI Zuni medicine man's fetish of a perfect ear of corn decorated with macaw feathers. De-nuded of the feathers, it is buried with the owner to symbolize the ending of a man's life.

MILIGMA Offering to infernal deities in Greek antiquity.

MILITARY ARCHITECT In an Italian icon personified by a mature woman in a garment of many colors. A gold chain from which hangs a diamond is around her neck. In one hand she holds the mariner's compass, in the other are the plans for a hexagon fortification. A swallow sits on the plans. At her feet are a pickax and a spade.

MILK Widely revered as the elixir of life, heavenly nourishment, lava of regeneration. Symbolic of the foam from which deities spring. Dream significance: (drinking) peaceful happiness; (upsetting) unrealizable plans. One of the four libations offered by the ancient Greeks, the others being honey, oil, and water. Jews of antiquity used milk as a symbol of pure, simple, and wholesome truth. In India offerings of the first milk from cows were made to Naga. The Parsees believe in its cleaning efficacy and carry a small bottle in their pockets with which to purify themselves from an unhallowed contact. In Siberia, during a thunderstorm, milk offerings are poured on the ground to appease the gods.

Curdled milk. One of the eight articles used in Man-la ritual.

Milk flowing from a woman's breast. Abundance. Two streams signify fertility and wisdom, love and knowledge.

Milk and honey. Heavly food. Anciently given to newborn children, hence a symbol of birth and rebirth. Formerly used in baptismal rites. The fertility and plenty promised to the Jews in the land of Canaan.

Milk kinship. Degree of relationship existing between foster-children.

Milk Lake. Widely worshiped as the sacred lake situated in heaven and shaded by the Tree of Life. Nourisher, source of all life. Frequently personified as a female deity. In Iranian mythology called Ardivisura Anahita; in Siberian mythology called Khotun.

Milk pail. Dairy products. In gnostic tradition the spiritual nourishment derived from Christ, the Good Shepherd.

Milk pot. In Egyptian, Hindu, Iranian, etc. mythologies fused with the water pot when the cow mother was accepted as the originator of the source of life.

Milksop. A term of contempt for an effeminate or weak man.

Milk and water. Devoid of character, namby-pamby, tasteless, vacillating and weak, as a milk and water political policy.

Milk vetch. Comfort.

Milkwort. Hermitage.

MILKY WAY Heavenly river formed by the milk of the great mother goddess, smoke or ashes of sacred fires, sperma of the gods. Path by which souls ascend to their homes in the sky. By American Indians designated the Ashen Road or White River; first path of the sun and moon; path of birds, of ghosts on their way to the palace of Thunder God; path of the Morning Star. Also sacred cord of life. Aztecs revered it as Mixcoatl, the cloud serpent; the Mosetena Indians of Bolivia revered it as a huge worm bristling with arrows shot at him; the Pawnees called it wolf tail or short cut. In Brythonic legend it was the castle of Gwydion or track made by Gwydion when he sought his son Llew Llaw. Ancient Celts called it Lug's chain, the band or bridge uniting heaven and earth. Compare cable tow. In China called T'ien-ho (Heaven's river), source of the Hoang Ho (Yellow River). Stream over which magpies made a bridge once a year so the lovers Chi'en Niu and Chih Nu were able to meet. In Egyptian antiquity said to be the nourishing milk of Hathor or the road marked by ears of corn dropped by Isis in her flight from Set. Christian Way of Saint James. In Piers Plowman the heavenly road to Virgin Mary, lady of Walsyngham. In Greek mythology milk of the goddess Rhea of Crete, sprouted into the sky after the birth of Zeus; also the milk of Hera. Sometimes called scars of Phaethon's ride; track to the palaces of the gods. In Hindu legend the head of the serpent king Naga is held by the gods who dwell on Mount Meru, the tail is held by the Asuras, who use the body to churn the Milky Way. In Japanese tradition it is a floating bridge as well as a celestial river. On the bridge Amaterasu and Susa-no-wo meet once each year during the Tanabata festival; from the bridge Izanagi and Izanami churned the primal waters until they curdled and land was formed. As a river it is called Ama-no-Yasu-no-gawa, Ama(Ame)-no-kawa, Ginja, or Tenga, and in it the kami fish. By Moslems called pilgrims way to Mecca. Mongol's call it Burkhan's Road. In Norse mythology, Bifrost. In Persian mythology the straw thief's track, from the tale of the man who stole hay or straw, intending to hide the booty in the sky, but dropping so much on the way, he left a path. In Armenian and Bulgarian legend the straw thief is called Vahagn. In Roman antiquity milk of Juno. Residence of heroes who merited celestial bliss. There, their souls disengaged from corporeal ties, they led a life of undisturbed felicity, and rejoiced in contemplation of the universe. In German and Russian folklore the path of the wild hunt. Saxons called it Irman's Way or Waetlinga Street, i. e. path of the sons of Waecla from the Eastern to the Western Sea. In Siam called Way of the White Elephant. Among Siberian tribes a stitched seam in the roof of the sky. When a god wants to see what is happening on earth he peeks through the stitches. At such times a light (meteor) is seen through the crack. The god grants everything desired of him while the crack is open. To the Teutons it was Odin's or Holde's Way. Among Truco-Tatars it is bird's or duck's road. Yakuts call it God's footprint, the ski track of Tungk-Pok, son of God, or the milk stream of Khotun.

MILL Fertility. Dream significance: (stopped) useless efforts, sorrows; (watermill) difficult undertakings; (windmill) journey; (working) joy, wealth. In Europe of the middle ages typified the gospel. In Norse mythology universe motion or whirling heavens, suggested by the revolving millstone. The Grotte, friction machine operated by Fenja and Menja, who ground out gold (fertility) and peace (harmony) until they were digrunted, and then they ground out fire (war) and salt (drought or frost).

Mill of God grinds slowly.
Fate is inexorable.

Millstone. Heavy burden, miller, milling industry, that which crushes or pulverizes. Dream significance: enormous effort. In heraldry a pair of millstones typifies mutual converse of human society. In Christian tradition martyrdom. Emblem of saints

Christian, Florian, and Victor of Marseilles as instruments of their death.

MILLARD Masculine name from the Latin, meaning grinder.

MILLENNIUM The thousand years of the kingdom of Christ on earth. In one version a final and desperate conflict between Christianity and Paganism will take place; in another it will be a period of gradual enlightenment; both result in Christ's reign. Commonly understood to be a future golden age, and by extension any period of auspicious government, prosperity, righteousness, and universal happiness.

MILLICENT (MELICENT, MILICENT) Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning work and strong.

MILTON Masculine name from the Greek, meaning colored red.

MILU Hawaiian god of the underworld.

MIMAMEITHR (MIMAMEIDER) Literally, Mimir's tree. The Yggdrasil.

MIMAS In Greek mythology one of the Gigantes, earth-born giants. Personification of volcanic fire. Enemy of Zeus, and killed by lightning in the Gigantomachia.

MIMI In Wagner's Ring of the Nibelung dwarf-smith (underworld spirit) who helps Siegfried (sun hero) attain the golden hoard (wealth in the earth) and reveals the secret of the magic ring (cycle of fertility), but finally is slain by Siegfried for his treachery.

MIMIDZUKU In Japan the ear monument. Marks the spot at Nara, where 30,000 pairs of foreign ears, cut from the pickled heads of those slain in the 16th century war with Korea, were buried.

MIMING (MIMINGUS) In Norse mythology son of Mimir. Satyr, spirit of the forest and keeper of the Sword of Victory (light ray) which Svipdag stole while Miming slept.

MIMIR (HODDMIMER, MIM, MIME, MIMER, MIMER-NIDHAD) Literally, memory or mind. (1) In Norse mythology son of Ymir, formed from the sweat in the pit of Ymir's left arm. Gigantic god of the primal sea, owner of the hill in which Lif and Lifthrasir survived Fimbul-winter. His abode in Helheim was at the roots of the Mimameithr, which was watered by his spring of knowledge. Every morning with the Gjallar-horn he drank a draught of the mead in his well, which made him the wisest of men. In return for the secret knowledge of the spring, Odin paid the price of one eye, which was cast into the well; thenceforth Mimir took his morning drink from the eye. The pledge of the eye is the reflection of the sun in water, where in the morning it formed a golden cup. Part of the knowledge imparted to Odin by Mimir was the making of runes. The Vanagods, incensed when they discovered that Hoener, whom the Aesir had sent as hostage, was a fool and depended on Mimir's advice, cut off Mimir's head and sent it to Odin, to whom it continued to impart knowledge. His prophetic powers resemble those of Arthur and Bran, who like him were fertility gods. (2) In Nibelungenlied the wonder smith who forged the sword of Siegfried and provided him with the horse Grane. Underworld fertility dragon.

Mimis-brunnen. In Norse mythology Mimir's well of wisdom.

MIMOSA November 5 birthday flower symbolic of exquisiteness, fastidiousness, sensitiveness. Emblem of Australia and South Africa.

MIN Egyptian god of procreation, personification of the male principle. Chief deity of Coptos, Mendes, and Panopolis, and known as the Egyptian Pan; sometimes represented by the phallus, usually known as ram-headed. Merged with Khnumu, a corn god, and honored at harvest festivals. Min and Pan are generic terms for mountain.

MINA Feminine name, diminutive of Wilhemina.

MINAMOTO Powerful Japanese family, a warrior clan. Its strength depended on weapons as opposed to that of the Fujiwara, whose strength depended on marital alliances.

MINCE-PIE At Christmas festivals typifies the gifts of the Three Magi.

MIND One of the Gnostic Aeons. In Egyptian antiquity a crocodile symbolized the mind.

MINDI Australian great snake, which sent disease, especially smallpox, which was called Mindi's dust; the scars were called Mindi's scales.

MINERALS In Chinese mythology the bones and teeth of P'an Ku, which see.

MINERVA Ancient Italian goddess of dawn and rustic life. Daughter of Pallas, a giant, whom she kills on his offering her sexual violence. Thus dawn kills the darkness from which it is born. In later legends, her history borrowed from that of the Greek Athena, she is the daughter of Jupiter, from whose head she springs fully armed uttering a tremendous battle-cry. Thus dawn bursts from the head of the sky. She was revered as the goddess of wisdom (light typifying knowledge), guider of heroes in war, patroness of arts, crafts, guilds, and medicine, and worshiped jointly with Jupiter and Juno by the Romans in the triple Capitoline temple. The Ludi Maximi (Great Games) were held in their joint honor. She was nature as the mind which directs the creative impulse and wielder of the thunderbolt for Jupiter, thus the great fertilizer. The last five days of the Quinquatrus, festival she shared with Mars in March, were devoted to the purification of musical instruments, which she supposedly invented. During the festival gifts were given to schoolmasters called the Minerval. Among her various surnames are Capita or Capta (head), Medica (grass), Nautia (ship). She is represented in art as grave and majestic, wearing a long robe, bearing the aegis on her breast, armed with helmet and spear. The owl and serpent were sacred to her. Her name is from the Latin root mane (morning) or men (think).

MINK Love of lasciviousness; luxuriousness.

MIN KYAWZWA In Indo-Chinese mythology a nat or spirit corresponding to Dionysus. His festival is celebrated with cock fights, dancing, drinking, and fireworks.

MINNA Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning love, memory, small.

MINNESOTA Emblem: moccasin flower; motto: Etoile du Nord (Star of the North); nicknames: Gopher, North Star.

MINNIE Feminine name, Scotch diminutive of Mary; also means mother, remembrance.

MINO Japanese straw raincoat worn by peasants who were not permitted to carry an umbrella, a mark of nobility.

MINOS In Greek mythology son of Zeus and Europa or of Lycastus and Ida. Father of Ariadne. A sun deity and king of Crete, he went every ninth year to Mount Ida to confer with Zeus, who provided him with a code of laws; an incident comparable to that of Jehovah and Moses. Cruel and harsh as a warrior, he was just and moderate as a ruler. Poseidon gave him a bull for the purpose of sacrifice, but he sacrificed an inferior animal. As punishment Poseidon caused his wife Pasiphae (moon goddess) to fall in love with the bull from the sea, and by it she became the mother of the Minotaur (deity of darkness), which Minos imprisoned in the labyrinth built by Daedalus. Minos was killed in a bath at Agrigentum in Sicily by a priestess of Cocalus (blind gloom of night) and Daedalus, who had become her lover. See bath. After his death, with Aeacus and Rhadamanthus, he was appointed a judge of souls, a role similar to that of Osiris. Deucalion, who survived the deluge, was his descendant. In name and attributes he corresponds to the Hindu Manu, that is man the measurer or thinker; his name also equates with Menes, and from it comes the adjective Minoan, pertaining to Crete. The Minoan period was the Cretan bronze age, about 2500 to 1200 B. C. The name appears to have been a dynastic title.

MINOTAUR (MINOTAURUS)

Literally, bull of Minos. In Greek mythology offspring of Pasiphae and the bull given as a gift by Poseidon to her husband Minos. Monster with the body of a man and the head of a bull or vice versa. A deity of darkness, death, winter, which Minos enclosed in the labyrinth (infernal regions) and fed on the flesh of seven maidens and seven youths, extracted every nine years as a tribute from Aegeus, king of Athens, for the slaying of Minos' son Androgeos, a light deity. Aided by Ariadne, Theseus killed the Minotaur. A devourer of human victims, the Minotaur was a god of cannibalistic sacrifices. See cannibalism. By extension, any devouring or destroying agency. In some accounts an offspring of Europa, mother of Minos. The devouring bull may have been adopted from Moloch to whom humans were sacrificed.

MINT Virtue. In the language of flowers, Let us be friends again. Attribute of Virgin Mary.

MINTHA Greek nymph loved by Aides. Persephone, jealous, changed her into the plant which bears her name (mint).

MINYAS Greek legendary king and eponymous ancestor of the Minyans in Boeotia. Agricultural deity famous for his wealth. His three daughters considered themselves superior to the ecstasies of the Bacchic revelers. Eventually the frenzy possessed them and they craved human flesh and cast lots to decide whose child was to be sacrificed. This is the basis for the assumption that in Boeotia the human sacrifice was chosen from the royal family. An identical story is told of the daughters of Proetus.

MIOLNIR (MJOLNIR) In Norse mythology the magic weapon of Thor. Short-handled hammer (smasher), which he used in peace and war, either to bless or shatter. It never missed that at which it was thrown, returned to its owner of its own accord, and became so small when not in use it fit into Thor's pocket. Lightning or thunderbolt symbolized by the swastika, and used as an amulet for healing and to keep demons away.

MIOTO-SEKI In Japanese mythology husband-wife rocks which rise out of the sea. Celestial doorway. They are joined by a straw rope used as a talisman against disease and ill luck. Compare Pillars of Heracles, Scylla and Charybdis.

MIOYA-NO-KAMI Japanese ancestor god; an itinerant deity. See Fuji, Tsukuba.

MIPHLETZETH (MIPLECETH) Emblem of Asherah, Canaanite mother goddess. Oval figure or altar (sun or vulva); doorway whence issued life to the world. A protective power comparable to the palladium of Athena at Troy. Semitic women wove hangings for the miphletseth as Athenian women embroidered the peplos for the ship presented to Athena at the Dionysian festival; idolatrous kings used it as an emblem, and it was an idol for worship in the Asharim (grove of Asherah). A giver of fertility and wealth, it compares with the budding thyrsus of Dionysus, the rod of Hermes, the seistron of Egyptian priests. The word is related to palatz (to be broken) or phalash (break, go through, open a way), and is cognate with the Greek phallus.

MIQTU Babylonian deity. Name signifying prostration by heat.

MIRABELLA In Spenser's Faerie Queene a beautiful but scornful woman. She suffers a punishment as hopeless as that of Sisyphus.

MIRABEN Literally, sister Mira. A Rajput princess who gave up all worldly possessions to follow Krishna, the Hindu god. Madeleine Slade, daughter of a British admiral, who left England in 1925 to become a follower of Mahatma Gandhi took the name.

MIRACULOUS BIRTH A worldwide mythological theme is the birth of beings from the arm, head, thigh, or other parts of the body of a man or woman. The sun and moon burst from the eyes, deities of wisdom from the head. Sun deities have virgin mothers. Miraculous birth implies either a divine child or a divine parent, and is a celestial sign to indicate the child will become a great hero, usually fulfil a prophecy, and beneficently serve mankind. In ancient Sumer kings usually proclaimed themselves to be the sons of virgin goddesses and assumed terms for gods as titles. Each claimed to have been set adrift on a river or otherwise exposed, found and recognized as wonderful, favored by the gods, and appointed a divine servant among men. See Exposed child, Virgin mother.

Miraculous growth. In mythology characteristics of moon, storm, sun, wind, fertility deities.

MIRAGE Disappointment, illusion; in religions, insufficient revelation.

MIRANDA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning to be admired, miraculous.

MIRANDOISA Magic sword of King Arthur. Usually called Excalibur. Name resolves into miraculous or wonderful A (sun).

MIRIAM (1) Hebrew feminine name, usually interpreted to mean star of the sea. Old form of Mary. (2) Sister of Aaron and Moses. A prophetess. She dreamed of a babe cast on the waters who would redeem Israel, and watched from the bulrushes as Pharaoh's daughter rescued Moses. She persuaded the princess to engage Jochebed, Moses' mother, as nurse.

MIROKU (MIROKU-BOSATSU) Japanese future Buddha, whose heaven is in Tosotsa-Ten. Savior-to-be, a messiah to come, full of blessings and mercy. He is to appear 5,670 million years after the present Buddha enters Nirvana. Probably identical with Hotei. Japanese form of the Sanscrit Maitreya and Chinese Mi-li.

MIRROR Courtesan, destiny, heavens, imagination, imitation, light, message conveyer, prophecy, reflection, retrospection, self-examination, self-realization, truth, vanity, vision. Flame lighter, fire or sun symbol. Frequently of octagonal shape to signify the light of the eight directions. Believed to be a shield which evil dare not face, thus wisdom which is undefiled and has the brightness of everlasting life, i.e. deity image, and carried as a talisman to ward off evil. Dream significance: gallantry. The practice of covering a mirror in a room with a corpse is to prevent the corpse from 'looking out' a comrade for itself from among those present. Emblem of divination, tool of crystal gazers, revealer of past, present, and future. Badge of goddesses of beauty. With the comb an attribute of mermaids. In folk tales reveals the face of one dying a great distance away or is the tester of chastity, as Alasnam's mirror. In Altaic mythology emblem of the sun and moon, magic instrument of the shaman, instrument of sorcery. In Buddhism called me-long. One of the eight articles used in Manla ritual. An altar object. Symbolizes sight. Compare nutmeg, shell, sugar, yellow silk. Implement which helps Shinjichho-gyal decide whether a soul has lived virtuously or sinfully, hence a reflection of life. In China called ching. Symbolic of unbroken conjugal happiness. One who has been made mad by the sight of a demon will be healed upon glancing in the mirror. Christian emblem of Virgin Mary, signifying spotlessness. Greek fertility charm. In Japan allurements, conscience, divine offering, history, knowledge, a woman's soul. Attribute of Amaterasu, Emma-O. Emblem of divine authority and imperial power. Represents presence on earth.

Concave bronze mirror. By Taoists called t'ung chien. Used in the belief that in it evil recognizes and destroys itself.

Mirror, jewel, and sword. Insignia of the Japanese imperial family typifying wisdom, technique, and strength. Inherited from Ninigi.

Mirror of Narcissus. Water.

Mirror of the dead. Mirror which reflects to every spirit the misdeeds of life in the body.

Seven mirrors. In cabalism the seven planets, corresponding to the seven metals, and consulted on appropriate astrological day: Sun mirror, made of gold, consulted on Sundays as to great persons on earth. Moon mirror of silver, consulted on Mondays as to dreams and plans. Mars mirror of iron, consulted on Tuesdays as to enmities and lawsuits. Mercury mirror of crystal filled with quicksilver, consulted on Wednesdays as to questions of money. Jupiter mirror of tin, consulted on Thursdays as to probable success. Venus mirror of copper, consulted on Fridays as to questions of love. Saturn mirror of lead, consulted on Saturdays as to lost articles and secrets.

Smoking mirror. Fire and water, war. Object of crystal gazers, which is supposed to cloud or become misty before revealing anything.

MIRSI (MIRSU) A title of Tammuz as god of irrigation.

MIRTH In an Italian icon personified by a jolly youth with plump cheeks, white raiment painted with green branches and red and yellow flowers. He wears a garland of several flowers, carries a crystal glass of claret in one hand and a gold cup in the other. Dances in a flowery meadow.

MIRU Hawaiian lord of the dead, guard of the underworld.

MIRUME Japanese Buddhist woman with a double-faced head. She is at the right of the throne of Emma; her eyes behold all secret sins. See Kaguhana.

MIRYEK Korean huge, half-length human figure in stone. If with a round hat, represents heaven, the male element; if with a square hat, represents earth, the female element. Name signifies stone-male.

MISASAGI Japanese sepulchre mounds in which emperors are buried.

MISCANTHUS Japanese symbol of autumn. Signifies eternal devotion. Used for the full moon festival in the 9th lunar month when puddings are offered to O-Tsuki-Sama (Mr. Moon). See Patrinia.

MISCHIEF Typified by a monkey.

MISERICORDE (1) Small medieval dagger used to give a fallen knight the death blow through a joint in his armor or to force him to beg for mercy. The blow was called the mercy or pity stroke. (2) In church history an indulgence of dress or food granted to a monk; the apartment serving monks permitted special allowances of food and drink.

MISFORTUNE Symbolized by a bat, black cat crossing one's path, shipwreck, walking under a ladder. In Japan, by croaking crows.

MISGAB Hebrew name meaning high land.

MISHAEL (MISAEL, MISHAL) Hebrew name meaning who is what God is. In Old Testament one unhurt by fire, also known as Meshach.

MISHARU Literally, rectitude. Phoenician deity of righteousness. Attendant and son of Shamash. Twin of Kittu, justice. Personification of autumn sun and waning moon. Also known as Misor, brother of Sydyk.

MISHNA The first part of the Talmud, the holy summing up of rabbinical labors. Its six parts or Sedarim are: 1- Zaraim (seeds), agriculture, prayers, tithes; 2- Moed (festivals), fasts, feasts, Sabbaths; 3- Nashim (women), marriage and divorce; 4- Nezikin (injuries) civil and criminal law and idolatry; 5- Kodashim (holy things), oblations and sacrifices; 6- Tohorot (purifications), pure and impure persons and things. The Gemara, second part of the Talmud, explains the Mishna.

MIS-KHUM Finno-Ugric spirit as tall as a tree, which leads wanderers away in a forest.

MISSIBIZI Same as Michabo.

MISSISSIPPI Emblem: magnolia; motto: Virtue et Armis (Virtue and Arms); nicknames: Bayou, Eagle, Magnolia.

MISSOURI Emblem: Ozark Mountains; motto: Salus Populi Suprema Lex Esto (The Welfare of the People is the Supreme Law); nicknames: Bullion, Iron Mountain, Ozark, Show Me.

MIST In the cabala rising mist signifies the female principle of nature desiring the male. In Polynesian belief the sighs of Papa (earth) for Rangi (sky), from whom she has been separated by their offspring Tane-mahuta (forests). Widely believed to be the veil of the supreme deity.

MISTLETOE February 6 birthday flower symbolic of difficulties. In the language of flowers: You are a parasite. I surmount all obstacles. Dream significance: happy omen. Emblem of Oklahoma. The twin leaves and twin berries, symbolic of celestial twins, are of sexual significance. As a parasite symbolic of that which becomes one with another; perpetuity; that which first enhances, then kills. The conjunction of mistletoe and oak refers to the whole course of the sun from its infancy at the winter solstice to its prime at the summer solstice and back. The mistletoe rules during the waning part of the year. Sacred plant of the druids. In the tree calendar plant of December 23. See alphabet, druidic. Herb of power, healer which fell from heaven, used as an aphrodisiac and as a protection against witches. Worshiped as imperishable because it grew without ground roots and remained green when the oak was barren, thus immortality emblem. Sacred and gathered only for befitting ceremonies. The yearly lopping with a gold (sun metal) sickle (moon implement) demonstrated the progressive principle, the fulfilment of the prophecy of emasculation of the father or oak tree god by his successor or son, the mistletoe, in the interest of fecundity. See Emasculation. Flower of the Christmas festival, its berries called the kissing bunch. The kiss under it, a survival of belief in its phallic powers, typifies the pledge of atonement, good will, and reconciliation. In Norse mythology plant fatal to the sun or oak god, Balder; thus the winter flower which killed the sun. In Roman mythology revered as containing the seed of fire. Carried by Aeneas as the golden bough which lighted the way on his visit through Hades. Thus the winter bloom which sustained him until he returned to the upper regions in the spring.

Misteltein. Sword of mistletoe with which Hoder killed Balder.

Mistletoe berries. By druids worshiped as the fertilizing dew of the supreme spirit.

MITAMA Literally, dragon-pearl. In Japan the soul of a god.

Mitama-san-no-tana. Japanese deity shelf which holds the mitamaya.

Mitama-shiro. Japanese Shinto mortuary tablets. Spirit substitutes or ghost-sticks. Tablets inscribed with the religious and posthumous (not the real) names of the dead and placed in the mitamaya. See name.

Mitamaya. Japanese Shinto ghost house or spirit dwelling. Tiny shrine for home use which contains the mitama-shiro. Also called miya and yashiro. Parallels the butsudan.

MITHRA (MITHRAS) Iranian deity of sunlight and fertility. Mediator between Ahura-Mazda and man; chief aid of Ahura-Mazda in his struggles with Angra-Mainyu, and next to him, holder of the highest place in heaven. He was earth-born or rock-born, giver of fertile rain, omniscient, a valiant warrior. He killed the primeval ox Geusha Urvan, from whose body sprang all animals and plants beneficial to mankind. He was the relentless enemy of sterility, suffering and vice. Guardian of the law, he was assisted by Rashu (justice) and Sraosha (discipline). He aided man against adverse nature and was transplanted to heaven to watch over and aid the faithful until the day of his second coming. Initiates practiced strict chastity. The last work of his ritual was the secret of being reborn spiritually or from above, i.e. the divinizing of man. His birthday was celebrated December 25. He was worshiped in underground caverns, where twelve zodiacal images formed part of the furniture. The ceremonies included anointing with honey, baptism, and a repast of bread, water, and consecrated wine. Sacred to him were the bull, cock, lion, mace, ox, raven, and sunflower. In Roman times his cult spread into Europe and continued in an unbroken tradition through secret societies until medieval times. His name, meaning friend, is akin to Metra, Midir. Identical with Mitra. See Abraxas.

MITOSH-NO-KAMI (MITOSHINO) Japanese kami of agriculture, god of the harvest, protector of farmers. A white boar, white cock, and white horse were sacrificed to him.

MITOTHIN (MJOTUDR-INN) Norse deity famous for chicanery and deception. During Odin's absence he impersonated the sky god; when Odin returned he fled to Finland, where he was slain. Sometimes regarded as a form of Loki. Probably refers to a local deity who was superseded by Odin.

MITRA (1) Babylonian sun and fertility deity. An aspect of Shamash. (2) Hindu solar deity. Twin of Varuna, with whom he lives in the highest heaven. When ruling over departed souls he is an aspect of Yama. Identical with Mithra and, like his Persian counterpart, his name means friend. Generally understood to mean friend of the water lily, which expands her petals at the rising of the sun and closes them at the setting.

MITRE Christian and Hebrew official headdress, thus a symbol of authority. The design of a bishop's cap resembles that of the fish-head mask of the Assyrian god Ea-Oannes. The two horns of a bishop's or pope's mitre allude to the two rays of light that issued from the head of Moses when he received the ten commandments, also to the Old and New Testaments.

MITTSOTSOZINI In African Pokomo legend the one who taught Vere, the first man, how to make fire. In some legends the first man.

MITSU-DOMOE In Japanese tradition triple form representing air, fire, and water, as the source of life. Worn as an amulet for protection against fire, flood, and theft.

MITSUMINE Japanese sacred dog. Talisman for protection against robbers.

MITYS' STATUE Retaliation. In Greek legendary history Mitys' statue at Argos killed the man who had murdered him by falling upon the murderer.

MITZVAH In Jewish tradition a command of God. By extension, the fulfilment of such a command regarded as a special privilege; a good deed for a good life.

MIWI-NO-KAMI Japanese deity who makes springs and wells flow.

MIXCOATL Aztec cloud-serpent; god of hunting, whose weapon is the lightning arrow. Another name for Tezcatlipoca. Also called Iztac Mixcoatl.

MIXTURE One of the gnostic Aeons.

MIYA-JIMA (1) Japanese paradise, celestial land on which neither birth nor death takes place. (2) Isle of the Temple on which stands a shrine to Benten and to Itsuku-shima.

Miya. Shinto shrine or temple.

Residence of the Mikado. Title of the children of the Mikado.

MIYUL Tibetan Buddhist world of mankind on the Sipa Khorlo or Wheel of Life. The realm offering opportunities for study and devotion. This realm is the most desirable state of rebirth because here life is balanced between joy and pain.

MIZRAH Literally, rising of the sun. A picture hung in a synagogue or Jewish home symbolic of Palestine, toward which the Jews turn in prayer.

MIZRAIM Hebrew name signifying all the fires of heaven. Grandson of Noah, son of Ham. Ancestor of African races, especially the Egyptians. In the Bible, Mizraim is a name for Egypt; the Arabs call it Misr.

MIZUHIKI Japanese ornamental tape used in tying up gift packages. Symbol of felicitation and good will.

MIZUNONI Literally, water-drinkers. Japanese farmers who own no land.

MJOLNIR (MJOLLNER) See Miolnir.

MMOATIA Little people of the forest or fairies of the African Gold Coast.

MNEMOSYNE In Greek mythology daughter of Uranus (sky) and Gaea (earth). Goddess of memory. By Zeus (sky) mother of the nine Muses.

MNEVIS (MENUR) The Egyptian sun god Ra incarnate as a bull. Worshipped at Heliopolis.

MOBOG Literally, beating. Religious rite performed in Borneo to expel evil spirits assembled during the year. A small pig carried in a procession on the back of a woman is beaten so that its squeaks will attract spirits to the river, where they are enticed onto a raft covered with models of animals and people and supplied with food.

MOCCASIN FLOWER Emblem of Minnesota.

MOCCUS (MOCCO) Roman name of a Celtic swine god.

MOCKING BIRD In Hopi mythology people emerged from the underworld through Sipapu Lake. As they reached the surface a mocking bird assigned each to a tribe and language. When his songs were exhausted those who were unassigned fell back into the nether gloom.

MOCK-ORANGE Bloom symbolizing counterfeit.

MODEL PAIR Maudgalyayama and Sariputra, the two favorite disciples of Buddha. Usually seen one on each side of Gautama. They are shown in monk's garments, have shaven heads, and their emblems are: khakkhara and patra. Their hands most often are in devotional mudra.

MODESTY Symbolized by a lamb, violet, veiled woman. In an Italian icon personified by a young woman holding a scepter which is topped by a glistening eye. She wears a gold girdle. Her head hangs down.

MODGUDUR In Norse mythology maiden who guards the golden bridge over Gjøl, river of the dead.

MODI (MODE) In Norse mythology son of Thor by Jarnsaxa.

Probably a wind deity. His name signifies courage or wrath. With his brother Magni he shares possession of Thor's hammer Mjolnir after Ragnarok. With Vale and Vidar, Modi and Magni are destined to survive Ragnarok.

MODO In Shakespeare's King Lear the fiend who urges to murder.

MODRED See Mordred.

MODRON (MATRONAE) In Brythonic mythology wife of Urien, underworld lord, and mother of Mabon, sun deity. Probably an earth mother.

MODSOGNIR In Norse mythology Mimir as king of dwarfs.

MOGEN DAVID See Magen David.

MOGTHRASER (MOGDRASIR) Literally, he who desires sons. Probably a name of Lif, first man in Norse mythology.

MOHAMMED (MAHOMET, MUHAMMAD) Apostle of Allah; camel driver who became prophet and founder of Mohammedanism (Al-Islam). Supreme prince of temporal affairs.

Mohammed's coffin. A coffin which remained suspended in space; held by four angels of the cardinal points. Compare Confucius.

MOHOCKS In 18th century London street ruffians, usually members of aristocratic families who committed outrages. The name is derived from Mohawks. Parisian toughs were called Apaches.

MOIRAI (MOERAE) In Greek mythology the Fates, which see.

MOKKURKALFI Literally, mist-wader. Norse clay giant made to protect Hrungrnir (frost giant) in his fight with Thor. Destroyed by Thjalfi (lightning).

MOKSHA In Brahmanical writings synonymous with Nirvana.

MOLC (MOLLAC, MOLLOCH, MULAC) Literally, consume or devour. Irish sun god. Name parallels that of Moloch, Ammonite sun deity, and Hebrew mlk, meaning to burn or consume. Also known as Ain.

MOLE (1) Animal symbolizing blindness, mental or physical; materialism; obtuseness; profanity; superficiality. A frequenter of burial places and ruins; one who burrows or works underground, hence a miner. (2) Skin mark. If it appears above the right eye of a woman, signifies happy fortune by marriage; if on a woman's nose, signifies rivals; if on a woman's breast, signifies wealth to her husband. Called beauty spots.

MO-LI CH'ING In Chinese Buddhism eldest of the four Heavenly Kings. Land-bearer, guardian of the east. He carries a jade ring, spear, and sword.

Mo-Li Hai. Guardian of the west. Far gazer. He carries a four-stringed guitar.

Mo-Li Shou. (1) The well-famed guardian of the north. He carries two whips and a panther bag in which he carries a white rat; sometimes he has a snake or other animal to carry out his commands. (2) Guardian of the south, god of growth. He carries the umbrella of chaos, formed of pearls possessing spiritual qualities. When the umbrella is opened, darkness comes; when it is closed, earthquakes and thunderstorms come.

MOLLUSK In Japanese mythology the purple mist it releases when opening its shell creates a vision of Horai, elf land where the Dragon King's palace is located.

MOLLY (MOL, MOLL) (1) Feminine name; diminutive of Mary. (2) Gangster's sweetheart or a prostitute.

Moll Blood. In Scotland the gallows.

Molly Maguires. Password of a subversive group in Ireland; later adopted by a terrorist society in the coal regions of Pennsylvania.

MOLOCH (MAKKAL, MALIK, MIKAL, MILCOM, MOLECH, MUKAL) Literally, god or king. (1) In the Old Testament deity called the abomination of the Ammonites. Sun god, emphasizing the savage aspects of the sun's heat. Plague bringer. His rites included human sacrifice, especially of first born infants, or deals by fire, and self-mutilation. A fire kindled in the belly of his brazen image, a bull-headed colossus with extraordinarily long arms, received the sacrifices. Greek identified him as a Carthaginian god of the male principle, which they compared with Cronus as a devourer of his own children. By extension his name is applied to cruel doctrines and evil practices. Identified with Baal, Melicertes, Melkarth. See Gehenna. (2) In the cabala, with Satan, arch demon.

MOLY In Homeric legend herb given to Odysseus to break the enchantments of Circe and return to human form the men the sorceress had turned into swine. Thus an antidote.

MOMMUR Capital of the fairy land empire of Oberon.

MOMUS In Greek mythology son of Nyx and Erebus. God of rail-lery, reproach, and ridicule. He delighted in criticizing gods and men with bitter sarcasm. He complained that the human form made by Hephaestus lacked doors and windows in its breast so that its intentions and thoughts might be read. Unable to find a flaw in the beauty of Aphrodite, he criticized the noise her sandals made. He finally was driven from Olympus. Figuratively, a critic, fault finder. No ancient statues of him exist; in modern art he is depicted as a king's jester.

Child of Momus. A facetious or satirical humorist; a caustic wit.

MONA (MONNA) Feminine name from the Irish meaning noble, variant of Dona, Teutonic for one.

MONA CATARINA Literally, the lone pure one. Name of Cinderella in an Italian version.

MONAD In Bruno's pantheistic system a minute element that is corporeal and soul-like as well as eternal, a microcosm or mirror of the Deity. Generally understood to possess the principles of form and substance, which combined constitute the universe and govern its changes. In China the chaos egg, dual principle of nature, the yang and yin. Usually called the Great Monad, its form is a circle enclosing a black and a white comma. When united from above called the Tai-kih or Great Ultimate Principle, the generator of the two regulating powers, yang and yin, which by their cooperation create all that takes place in nature. In Japan called tomoe (tomoye). See Pa Kwa, Tai-kih.

MONAN Chief god of Brazilian Indians. He sent a fire to destroy the wicked inhabitants of the world. To extinguish the flames a magician caused so much rain to fall, the earth was flooded.

MONARCH Constellation in the Northern Sky known also as Cepheus.

Monarchy. A form of government portrayed as maculine, typifying the rule of one who is positive, strong. Opposed to democracy, which is portrayed as feminine. In an Italian icon typified by a crowned man in armor. A lion and a serpent are on the ground on one side, a prostrate royal prisoner on the other.

MONARDA In the language of flowers: Your whims are unbearable.

MONASTARY Asceticism, seclusion, self-abnegation. In India called sangha or vihara.

MONDAMIN Chippewa corn spirit. A heaven-sent youth who is conquered and buried by a mortal spirit. From his grave springs the gift of maize.

MONDAY Day governed by the moon.

MONDORO (BONDORO) In Mashonaland, Africa, a spiritual lion which supposedly appears only in time of danger and fights for the men. All good men of the tribe pass into the lion form when they die and reappear to fight for their friends and kin. Deceased ancestors who intercede between Maui and descendants.

MONENEQUI Aztec name signifying he who demands prayers. A name of Tezcatlipoca.

MONEY Banking, betrayal, boastfulness, bribery, charity, commerce, greed, miserliness, vaingloriousness, wealth. Dream significance: (counting) important gain; (finding) trouble threatening; (lost) unhopd for success; (spent) ruin. When a bribe, called covering of the eyes. According to an old belief, money turned at sight of a new moon increases. Anciently placed in the coffin or grave to provide the dead with the means of buying a place beyond the tomb.

Counterfeit money. In China tossed about at a funeral to buy for the spirit of the dead person the way to paradise.

Money sword. Chinese talisman against ill-luck. Attracts cash.

MONGAN Manannan, the Irish sea god, deceived Fiachna's wife by appearing to her in the form of her husband, and as a result of the union Mongan was born. The deity revealed his true identity, claimed his son, and taught him magic and the art of metamorphosis. Eventually Mongan became king of Ulster. He is regarded the reincarnation of Finn macCoul, and like Finn probably personifies an aspect of the sun as well as appearing as a fertility hero. At death he passed into a divine land.

MONG HSANG Burmese heaven. Abode of Hkun Hsan Long, creator spirit.

MONGOOSE In India devourer of the serpent, appropriator of its jewels (water). In Sanscrit called nakula.

MONICA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning adviser.

MONIMOS Arabic beneficent evening star, companion of the sun. The morning star is Azi-zos.

MONJU (MONJU-BOSATSU)

In Japanese Buddhism personification of transcendental wisdom. Paired with Fugen among the Bodhisattvas. Identical with the Sanscrit Manjusri.

MONKER AND NAKIR Mohammeden terrifying angels who command the dead to sit upright in the grave for examination in the faith. Those who give the right answers are refreshed by air from paradise; the others feel the pressure of the earth and gnawing or stinging by dragon-like beasts until resurrection day.

MONKEY Flattery, imitiveness, lasciviousness, maliciousness, petty theft, ugliness. Dream significance: mockery. An epithet applied to a child in a slight derision. Among Central American Indians an auspicious animal; indicates successful contest with obstacles, difficulties surmounted. In China called hou. Animal governing Shen (Sagittarius), ninth zodiacal mansion. Guardian of the direction west-southwest-south and of the hours 3 to 5 P.M. Controls elves and witches and drives away evil spirits. Emblem of Tzu. In Japan regarded as unlucky to gamblers as its name also means to go away. Gamblers call the monkey etc, as they believe the mere mention of its name, saru, will cause good luck to leave. If the name is used at a wedding, the bride will run away. It has the power of dispelling evil, and for this reason saru dolls are given to children as charms. A saru doll also brings an easy delivery to a pregnant woman. In Tibetan Buddhism, on the Sipa Khorlo, the monkeys collecting fruit typify association.

Three monkeys. In Japan collectively called Koshin-sama or Koshin-zuka, the star which guides people, and which sees no evil, hears no evil, speaks no evil. Individually they are Mi-saru (no see) with hands over his eyes; Kika-saru (no hear) with hands over his ears; Iwa-saru (no talk) with hands over his mouth.

MONK'S HOOD Buddhist monastic garment signifying historical personage deified. Attribute of Asvaghosa, Atisa, Nagarjuna, Santaraksit, Tsong-kha-pa, the deified Dalai and Tashi Lamas, and some of the arhats.

Monk's hood bloom. September 9 birthday flower symbolizing chivalry.

MONOCEROS Constellation in the Southern Sky also called the Unicorn.

MONOLITH Altar, sacred stone. Masculine principle.

MONOTARO Literally, peaching boy. In Japanese legend animal lover, slayer of demons and monsters. Culture hero born from a peach (vulva) an old woman found floating down a stream. When he grew up he visited the Isle of Devils. On the way he gave dumplings supplied by the old woman (earth) to a dog, a monkey, and a pheasant, and they followed him and aided him in attacking the demon stronghold and subjugating the monsters in it. Gathering the treasures of the stronghold, he returned to the old woman. A time myth in which Momotaro represents a fertile season.

MONROE Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning morass and red.

MONS MEG Same as Meg, which see.

MONSOON In Indonesia season of the annual mating of heaven and earth.

MONSTER In legend typifies death, difficulties, drought, storm, winter; also resurrection, as Ra passes nightly through the body of a monster of darkness. Monsters swallow the moon or sun and disgorge them, signifying an eclipse or the effects of time. Among primitive peoples rebirth into adulthood is a rite in which the boy or girl is swallowed by a mythical monster (house of initiation, whose jaw the doorway). The word is from the same root as minister and monastery.

Green-eyed monster. Jealousy.

MONSTRANCE Faith.

MONTAGUE Masculine name from a family name after Mont Aigu in Normandy.

MONTANA Emblem: bitter root; motto: Oro y Plata (Gold and Silver); nicknames: Bonanza, Stub Toe, Treasure.

MONTEZUMA II A man destroyed by his religious belief. King who brought the Aztec power to its zenith. When the Spaniards arrived he believed Quetzalcoatl, the white sun god, had returned according to prophecy, with his celestial retinue, and freely turned over to the invaders the gold they demanded. The gold in time led to the downfall of the Spanish nation, which used it to build a great armada.

MONTGOLFIERE Aeronautics.

MONTHS For the sentiments of the months, see zodiac.

MONTSALVAT Mountain of salvation where the Holy Grail was preserved.

MOO (MU) In Mayan mythology daughter of Can. Fire goddess. Probably derived from the Chinese Hsi Wang Mu.

MOON (1) The female principle or passive power of nature. Heaven, nobility, romance, wisdom; also evil, folly, revolt. Changeableness, fickleness, irresolution, inasmuch as it constantly changes its shape. Because it waxes and wanes symbolic of increase and decrease. Dream significance: (full) delay; (increasing) deceit at home; (misty) illness; (pale) sorrow. Calendar guide or measurer of time; the primitive husbandman regulated his plowing and other agricultural labors by the position of the moon among the stars. Ruler of memory and of the soul or subconscious; ruler of the zodiacal house Cancer and of Monday. Believed to have a mysterious and occult influence over the destinies of mankind, and epilepsy and lunacy are said to be derived from the moon. Magical ceremonies are performed to ward off its ill effects. Sign of danger for surgery when in zodiac sign governing parts involved. When reflected in water a remedy for nervous hysteria. Thus, the power of healing and destroying. Planet with greatest influence on terrestrial fluids (tides) and on humoral fluids (man). To see the new moon over the right shoulder is a sign of good luck. Giver of radiant joy and purity no matter how dark the night or difficult the circumstance; also giver of apathy, dreams, hallucinations, indecision, listlessness. Astrologists have assigned to the moon a cold, moist nature, the color white, the metal silver, an opal or pearl, the poppy, a correspondence to the musical tone D sharp or E flat, and a united intelligence, which causes memories to be carried from one incarnation to another by the subconscious mind. The moon is called triform because it appears round or with horns toward the east (waxing) or with horns toward the west (waning). Early races believed it preceded the sun and worshiped with human sacrifices. In countries where the sun scorches revered as the higher power. It is the awakener and assembler of the stars, the cup which contains the ambrosia or mead of the gods, the eye of a deity. Some worship it as male, others as bisexual. In art usually portrayed as a crescent, frequently with a profile. American Indians believed souls of the pious went to the moon to enjoy the company of the gods. The Babylonian moon-god Sin was the regulator of human life and transactions. Tanit was virgin queen of the moon at Carthage. Buddhist symbol for ultimate truth. By Central Asians called Father Moon or Old Man Moon, and believed to be a mirror reflecting everything in the world. In China symbolized by the guitar, silver candle, and silver sickle. Emblem of Chang, southern quadrant; Hsin, eastern quadrant; Pi, western quadrant; Wei, northern quadrant. The greatest of all Chinese festivals is the Moon Festival celebrated on the 15th day of 8th month, when the moon is brightest. Offerings are made to departed spirits, after which time is given to enjoyment to reward the moon, worshiped as a benign goddess. Christian emblem of Virgin Mary. By gnostics conceived as a celestial ship carrying departed souls; the moon waxing and waning as it filled with souls or delivered them back to the sun. In Egyptian antiquity called Ah (Aah), representative of the male principle, which developed into Khonsu, who became associated with Thoth, awakener and pathfinder. Also the left eye of Horus, the sun being his right. In European legend, on it were treasures wasted on earth, such as broken vows, fruitless tears, misspent time and wealth, unanswered prayers, thus limbus of the moon. Finno-Ugric worship the moon as an old man with an evil eye to whom sacrifices are made in July. To Greeks of antiquity the moon was the abode of the good, where the dead enjoyed perfect tranquility and furnished oracles for mortals on earth. A terrifying face scared away those who tried to force their way onto the planet. See Face in the moon. The moon goddess was known as Hecate before she had risen and after she had set, as Artemis (Cynthia, Diana, Phoebe) when in the open vault of heaven, the sister of the sun hunting clouds; as Selene (Luna) when the moonlight on the fields kissing the sleeping Endymion. Hebrew symbol of faith reflecting truth and wisdom. In India called candra, the light of ancestors and dwelling place of the righteous dead. Destroyer of foes. Nature of Soma. In Norse mythology sprayed from Muspelheim, world of fire, into the heavens. Queensland creator of the first man and woman. Slavic abode of sinful souls. In Sumer a goddess known as Ai (A, Aa). (2) Tarot deck card illustrated by a crab rising from water, a moon in the sky, falling dew, a path with drops of blood disappearing over the horizon, two dogs howling, and two towers. The crab denotes the zodiac sign Cancer, ruled by the moon; the rest signifies a moonlit scene filled with the howlings of enemies of mankind, and the dread of bloodshed or imprisonment. Symbolizes the reflected light of subconsciousness, the stage of spiritual enfoldment wherein knowledge is gained by meditation. In divination corresponds to the number 19 and the Hebrew letter koph (qoph). Denotes calumny, darkness, hidden enemies, terror; also covetousness, gambling, self-indulgence. When card is in reverse: inconstancy, instability, silence.

Bark at the moon. Labor in vain. Speak ill of one's superiors.

Crescent moon. Sleep, virginity, womanhood. Badge of sin.

Cry for the moon. Desire the unattainable.

Eighteenth moon. Date in China on which men 'thank their lucky stars.'

Full moon. Harvest. See moon goddess.

Harvest moon. Moon near the full about the time of the autumn equinox, which for several days rises about sunset time.

Hunter's moon. Full moon after the middle of October, which marks the beginning of the hunting season.

It's all moonshine. A tale told by an idiot; nonsense. In the United States whiskey or other merchandise made, smuggled, or traded illicitly at night to escape detection.

Man in the moon. See under Man.

Moonbeams. Fairy food. Provider of immortality.

Moonflower (Moonwort). July 28 birthday flower, symbolic of bad fortune, forgetfulness. In the language of flowers: I only dream of love. Supposedly will open the locks of any door if put in a keyhole, thus can open any closed heart. Also called honesty or lunaria.

Moon goddess. Enchantress. Widely worshiped as mother-sister-wife of the sun king who returns to her at death and whom she imprisons in the far north (realm of darkness). When a new moon, she is revered as the white goddess of birth and growth; when full, she is the red goddess of love and war; when old, she is the black goddess of death and divination. Her virginity is renewed each month; frequently she plays the part of the earth mother. Her most common attributes are a cow, dove, and sickle.

Moon and hare. In China and Japan typifies power and immortality; also the passive principle and female sacrifice.

Moonlight. Evil light, sorcerer's rays. Bringer of dreams, melancholy, recollections.

Moon markings. Interpreted to be those of an animal or face of a man; frequently a man or woman sent to the moon as punishment. In Cambodia the face of Pajan Yan, healing goddess, who was banished from earth before she was able to heal and bring to life all the dead. Chinese inhabitants of the moon are: Ch'ang O, who stole the elixir of life and was transformed into a three-legged toad; hare, who pounds out the drug of immortality; Wu Kang, condemned to cut down the cinnamon trees which grow as fast as he cuts them. To Eskimos the marks are tell-tale ashes. When Moon crept into the bed of his sister, Sun, one night, she marked him with ashes, and ever since pursues him in the skies. In Europe said to be Cain, Endymion, Judas, or a man who sinned on the Sabbath. In India, Japan, Mexico, and Tibet the spots are those of a hare. Buddha, in one of his early incarnations, offered himself as a hare to be sacrificed to Sakra, who painted the hare on the moon as a memorial. In Malaya a hunchback sits on the moon under a banyan tree making a fish line. A rat eats the line as fast as it is made. This is good for mankind, as the hunchback intends to use the line to fish up everything on earth. The Mohammedan god Shahar, who presides over spies and thieves. In New Guinea the marks are those of mischievous boys who opened a jar in which Old Woman kept the moon and were pulled up when they tried to grab it as it escaped. In Norse mythology the chariot driven by Mani, who is accompanied by Hyuki and Bill carrying a pail of poetic mead.

Moon's child. Cat.

Moon and stars. Hosts of the supreme deity.

Moonstone. June birthstone denoting pensiveness, intelligence. Its sentiment is good luck. During a waxing moon it is held to be an efficacious love charm; during a waning moon it supposedly enables the wearer to foretell the future. Worn to aid memory. Medicinally endowed. Revered by sea travelers. Gem governing the zodiacal house Cancer. Dream significance: impending danger. American Indian amulet placed with the dead to assure a safe journey. Indians believed it was washed up on the shore when the sun and moon reached a position in relation to each other which occurs about once in twenty-one years, hence, "Once in a blue moon."

Moon with five-pointed zigzags. Light of the moon, the number five being sacred to light deities, the lines typifying rays.

New moon. Virginity. See Moon goddess.

Old moon. See Moon goddess.

MOOSE Seneca Indian god of the east wind called O-yan-do-ne.

Moose equates with mouse and muse.

MOOT In Anglo-Saxon history a hill of justice or debate, especially between cultivators and freemen; a place where village affairs were settled. By extension, argument or discussion; a mock court held by students for practice in legal procedure. Originally the site of a fire altar to a sun deity.

MOPSUS (MOPSOS) (1) In Greek mythology seer of Apollo with great prophetic powers. He disputed with Ampilochous over the possession of Mailos, a city in Cilicia, and they slew each other. A light myth. (2) Soothsayer son of Ampyx and Chloris. He participated in the battle of the Centaurs with the Lapithae, in the Calydonian boar hunt, and he accompanied Jason on the Argonautic expedition. He died when stung in the heel by the black snake of Libya. Personification of light. See heel.

MOQUEQUELOA Aztec name signifying mocker. An aspect of Tezcatlipoca.

MOQWAIO In Menominee Indian mythology the wolf. Brother of Manabush, the sun deity. Pulled under the sea by Anamaqkiu, Moqwaio drowned and was placed in charge of souls of the dead.

MORA (KIKIMORA) In Slavic belief a body with two souls, the body's own and a vjedogonja, which may pass at night from one body to another. One who is a mora from birth will probably have bushy eyebrows which meet above the nose. The mora genii usually are vicious females. They frighten people, especially children, with nightmares, suck their blood, or suffocate them.

MORANA Slavic goddess of winter and death.

MORAVAYA PANNA Literally, black woman. In Slavic countries a frequent disguise of the demon of pestilence.

MORC In Irish mythology son of Dela. King of the Fomors. A plague and underworld deity, who taxed the Nemedians in two-thirds of their children, corn, and milk each November eve. Probably identical with March.

MORDAINS In Grail romances a wounded fertility king, a Fisher King.

MORDECAI In Old Testament a Jew who saved his people from the plots of Haman by means of his wise counsel to his niece Esther when she became the queen of the Persian Ahasuerus. Haman was hanged on the high gallows he had constructed for Mordecai.

MORDO-KHAN Siberian rain god.

MORDRED (MEDRAUT, MEDRAWD, MODRED) In Brythonic legends his mother is Arthur's half sister Morgause (or Anne), with whom Arthur engages in unconscious incest. He is the brother and enemy of Gwalchmei. The enchanter Merlin warned Arthur the child scheduled to be born on May Day would bring disaster, and Arthur ordered all newly born sons of nobles set adrift. Mordred was found floating in his cradle by fishermen who, by his silk swaddling, recognized him to be of high birth, and saved him. Later he was accepted as a knight of the Round Table. Rebellious and traitorous, whenever he went he ate everything in sight and left the land bare, thus a drought or winter demon. When Arthur (sun) departed for the campaign against Rome, he placed his kingdom and queen in Mordred's care. Mordred seduced Guinevere (spring maid), the queen, and seized the throne. Arthur returned, drove Mordred out of his kingdom, and met him on the field of Camlan, in Cornwall, where father-uncle and son-nephew dealt each other mortal blows. Both were buried on Avalon, an island paradise. Mordred is a later form of Dylan. See Exposed child, Fatal child.

MORDU In Brythonic mythology blind helper of Cerridwen. Deity of darkness or decay. Name from the root mar (mal or mor), meaning to grind or destroy.

MORDVINIAN Finnish agricultural tribe which professes Christianity, but offers animal sacrifices and engages in other Pagan practices.

MORGAN Masculine name from the Welsh, meaning mariner, sea dweller.

MORGAN LE FAY The Celtic war goddess Morrigan evolved into a medieval enchantress with characteristics of both Irish-Welsh fairies and Breton-Welsh mermaids. In Geoffrey of Monmouth's account she dwells in Avalon, an island paradise, with her eight sisters and uses her skills in herbs to heal the wounded sun hero Arthur. According to Chretien de Troyes she is Arthur's sister and mistress of Guingamor, lord of Avalon. In later romances she is Arthur's sister, wife of Uriens, king of Gore, mistress of Sir Accolon, and a great necromancer. She is big-mouthed, lame, swarthy, swift, and with a cast in her left eye, a description identical with one aspect of Morrigan, suggesting a wind or storm hag. She treacherously tries to bring about the death of her brother, and she attempts to slay her sleeping husband. She tries to steal Arthur's sword (rays) for Accolon and, when she is unable to take it from the grasp of the sleeping Arthur, she tosses its sheath into the lake, thus weakening her brother and making him vulnerable. She reveals the intrigues of Arthur's queen Guinevere and Lancelot to Arthur, and makes assaults on the virtues of other knights. When Arthur is wounded by Mordred she is one of the three queens who conducts him to Avalon. Inconsistencies in her character are due partly to Christian interpretation. In the romance of Ogier the Dane, as Morgue la Faye, she receives Ogier after he is a hundred years of age, restores his youth, and marries him. Thus she is a fertility queen, whose love reflects that of Eos for Tithonos and that of Horsesberg for Tanhauser. Morgan is from the Breton meaning sea-born, and it is akin to morning. Le Fay means fairy. She is identical with Fata Morgana. Also called Argante.

MORGAUSE (MARGAWSE) In Malory's Morte d'Arthur wife of King Lot and by him mother of Agravain, Gaheris, Gareth, and Gawain (Gwalchmei). By her brother, King Arthur, she is the mother of Mordred. She is a moon goddess, a later form of Arianrhod, who was a sister of Gwydion, an earlier form of Arthur.

MORGIANA Clever, faithful female slave in the story of Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, who marries her master's son.

MORGLAY Literally, great sword. Magic sword of Sir Bevis of Hamtoun (Hampton).

MORIAH Mountain sacred to Jehovah in Jerusalem. The temple was built on it, and it seems to have been the place where Abraham was about to offer up Isaac and where David interceded for his people at the threshing-floor of Araunah.

MORMO (MORMOLYCE) A lamia-like female spirit with which Greek mothers of antiquity frightened their children; a bogey. Name may mean werewolf.

MORNA (1) Celtic feminine name meaning beloved. (2) Legendary eponymous ancestor of Morna clan. With Luagni and the Uirgreann clans, his people, under his leadership, battled the Clan Baoisgne, led by Cumhal. A deity of darkness, in combat he killed Cumhal. Also called Goll Mac Morna.

MORNING Childhood, infancy, youth. A fortunate or propitious time; said to bring health and wealth. By mystics, early morning is associated with the musical tone A; late morning with the tone C. In mythology bringer of health and wealth; releaser of treasures locked in darkness.

Morning glory. August 4 birthday flower symbolizing affection. In the language of flowers: She loved you. Chinese symbol of love and marriage. In Japan, on account of its beauty, typifies joy, on account of its short life, typifies mortality. Associated with Korea because of its Japanese name meaning morning calm. In Korea, inasmuch as it opens at dawn and closes at sunset, symbolic of the superficial man and woman living in luxury and lacking character which makes for the permanency of a people.

Morning star. Forerunner; one who announces or guides. In the west known as Heosphorus, Lucifer, Phosphorus, Venus. In Aztec tradition the heart of Quetzalcoatl. In Christianity the star of Bethlehem, emblem of Christ; also typifies Christ ascending to heaven. John Wycliffe is called the Morning Star of Protestantism. In Norse mythology Orvandel's toe. When it became frost bitten and fell off, Thor tossed it into the sky, where it glitters ever since. Among North American Indians symbolized by an equi-armed red cross. Pawnee Indian source of life, fruitfulness, and strength. In ceremonies to the Morning Star a man was painted red (life color) all over, he was clad in leggings and wrapped in a robe. A downy eagle feather, painted red, was put on his head. The feather represented soft light clouds, the red a touch of the ray of the coming sun. A hymn was sung and a captive virgin was sacrificed, the body used to fertilize the fields of maize. In European mythologies the Morning and Evening (Hesperus or Vesper) Stars typify twins of light and darkness. In Lithuanian folk song they are servitors of Sun, Morning Star kindling the light, Evening Star preparing the bed.

Morning twilight. In an Italian icon personified by a naked youth of carnation brown color, indicating it is doubtful whether he belongs to morning or night. His wings indicate this interval soon passes. His posture is that of one about to rise. A star shines at his head. In his left hand he holds an inverted urn from which water (dew) drops. In his right hand he holds a lighted torch. A sparrow flutters above him.

MOROROMA Yuracare Indians of Bolivia thunder god.

MOROS Greek abstract deity; all-controlling destiny.

MORPHEUS Literally, form. In Greek mythology son of Hypnos (sleep). Personification of dreams. Attended by Icelos (dreams that appear real), Phantasos (false, strange dreams), Phobetor (alarming dreams). He is portrayed as winged, sometimes young, sometimes old, carrying a cluster of poppies and scattering the flower's sleep-producing seeds. Morpheus is the source of morphine. Compare Oneiros.

MORRIGAN (MORRIGU) Celtic great queen. A war goddess, she was present at every battle either in her own shape or in her favorite disguise of a carrion crow (death) accompanied by her four maids, Badb, Fea, Macha, and Nemon, inspiring warriors with the madness of battle. Her battle cry was as loud as that of a thousand men. With Badb and Macha she produced fogs, a rain of fire, and streams of blood to aid the Tuatha De Danann in the first battle of Mag Tured, when they defeated the Firbolgs. After the second battle she proclaimed the victory of the Tuatha De Danann over the Fomors to the fairies, the chief waters, and the river-mouths (personalization of nature). Then she sang of the world's end and of evils to come. Because the sun-hero Cuchulainn rejected her love, during his combat with Loch, she appeared as an eel, which tried to make him slip; as a heifer, which tried to throw him down; as a wolf, which tried to seize his right arm. He overcame all the animals, killed Loch, and Morrigan offered him her friendship.

See Shape-changing. Usually she is interpreted to be a moon goddess, which was deemed to have preceded the sun and worshiped with cruel and magical rites much like those of the fierce Scythian Diana. She also is identified as a storm goddess, and portrayed with red eyebrows and wearing a red dress, a long red coat, and fully armed, carrying two spears. Her chariot is drawn by red horses. She deteriorated into a banshee who wailed over the dead not necessarily found in battle. In Arthurian romances she appeared as Morgan le Fay.

MORRIS Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning hope.

Morris Dance. A mumming dance formerly performed in England on May Day. It celebrated the return of verdure and the performers, who danced as couples, acted the part of Robin Hood, Maid Marion, and other fertility characters in English folklore. Its origin was identical to that of the Sword Dance, but with the dramatic element discarded. It came directly from the Moors, or Moriscos, who performed it as a single dance; hence its name. Compare Mumming Play.

MORS Roman deity of the underworld; personification of death. Twin brother of Somnus (sleep). Identical with the Greek Thanatos.

MORSKOI TZAR Slavic sea king; father of swan maidens.

MORTALITY Various causes are given for death: An evil deity opposed to a benevolent one reaches man before the benevolent god is able to present his gift of immortality. A creator, who wishes to confer immortality goes off in search of breath and, while he is gone, the wind vivifies the form molded by the creator and makes it as unstable as wind. A man does not hear a deity's offer of immortality and therefore does not go to take the gift for mankind; a man is cynical or fearful (Adapa) or disobedient (Adam). In consequence of mortals choosing perishable foods they decay. In a Bushman legend the hare is responsible for man's death; in Melanesian mythology To-Karvuvu is responsible. Some death symbols are: cypress, draped urn, graveyard, mausoleum, ruins, skull, tombstone, weeping willow.

MORTAR Vessel symbolizing the female principle. Also typifies bondage, cruelty. The Turks used giant iron mortars in the execution of criminals as well as for the pounding of grain. The name has been given to devices used for hurling bombs and shells; also life lines.

Mortar and pestle. The male and female principle, thus universal love and wisdom. Apothecary's or pharmacist's symbol, thus ill-health, medicine. Emblems of saints Cosmos and Damian.

MORTIMER (MORT) Masculine name from the French, meaning ever living.

MORTON (MORT) Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning unsatisfied.

MORTUARY STATUES In Egyptian antiquity a pharaoh's or noble's servants were buried with him that the great dignitary might live in the same luxury in Paradise he had enjoyed on earth. In later periods the shedding of blood was rendered unnecessary by substitutions provided by painters and sculptors. See Ushebtiu.

MORVRAN Literally, sea crow. In Arthurian romances the demon at whom none struck in the battle of Camlan on account of his ugliness. Probably a storm deity derived from or identical with Avagddu.

MOSAIC PAVEMENT In Freemasonry represents the floor of Solomon's Temple and is symbolic of human life checkered with good and evil. The blazing star of the floor typifies the source of eternal good; the tessellated border typifies surrounding blessings.

MOSCHATEL Herb symbolizing weakness.

MOSES (MOE, MOSE, MOSS, MOUSES) (1) Masculine name, probably derived from two Egyptian words, i.e. mo (water) and use (saved). Modified by Hebrews to Moshe (Moses), meaning to draw. Some hold it is derived from an Egyptian word meaning unfathered son of a princess. (2) In Old Testament the lawgiver, liberator, and prophet who led the Jews from bondage in Egypt to the borders of the promised land. Son of Amram and Jochebed of the tribe of Levi. Younger brother of Aaron and Miriam. He lived three periods of forty years each. The first extended from his infancy, when he was found in a basket in the bulrushes of the Nile and adopted by the daughter of Pharaoh, to his flight to Midian. During that time he became noted as mighty in deed and word. The second period was from his flight to his return to Egypt. He married Zipporah, daughter of the pious Jethro, and became familiar with a nomadic life in the desert. Here he was prepared by God to be the instrument of deliverance to His people. The third period was from the exodus out of Egypt to his death, without an earthly burial place, on Mount Nebo of the Pisgah range. During this period the Lord saw him face to face and gave him the ten commandments on Mount Sinai, and Moses molded the Hebrews from a group of shepherds into a nation of people with a fixed residence and agricultural habits. He is revered as king of kings, commander of the Hebrew confederacy, conqueror, inventor of religious rites, leader of an exodus, warrior. He typifies disinterested patriotism, freedom, honor and obedience to God, intelligence, justice, love of humanity, purity. He stands as the traditional secular representative of Jehovah, whereas Aaron appears as the religious representative (corresponding to the Dalai Lama and Tashi Lama). He is said to have been one miraculously born, an unfathered divine child taken from his virgin mother in the manner of Krishna, Pryderi, Romulus, Sargon. The incident of Pharaoh ordering all children killed, said to be the reason Moses was placed in the water, places him among exposed children. See Exposed child, Fatal child. He was saved from water or by water in the manner of sun heroes, who rise from water. He had a harvest basket to serve as his cradle, giving him the attributes of a fertility deity. Like Taliesin, he is said to have had two horns (shafts of fire or light) rising from his forehead; sun-deity attributes. As a messenger of God, he resembles Hermes the wind. His having no earthly burial place hints at his having been a dismembered fertility king scattered about the earth with the promise of eventual resurrection, and he is said to have returned to dictate or write the Book of Joshua. Usually portrayed as bearded with two horns or an aureole forming two red rays of light above his temples. His garb is Eastern; he holds a staff around which is coiled the brazen serpent or the tablets of law. Sometimes shown striking the rock from which water gushed at his command. Those who identify his life with the zodiac give the twelve episodes as follows: 1- Rescue. 2- Moses and the Midianites. 3- Moses and the burning bush. 4- Plagues of Egypt. 5- Passage of the Red Sea. 6- Destruction of Pharaoh and his army. 7- Gathering of manna. 8- Moses and the rock of Horeb. 9- Moses receiving the ten commandments. 10- Moses and the golden calf. 11- Moses and the brazen serpent. 12- Death of Moses.

MOSHANYANA Bantu hero who slays monsters. Also called Litaolane.

MOSQUE OF SAINT SOPHIA Mosque at Constantinople. One of the seven wonders of the middle ages.

MOSQUITO Annoyance, carrier of discomfort and disease, minor troubles of life. Humorously used as an emblem of New Jersey, alluding to its mosquito infested swamps. Among Bella Coola Indians the mother of Alkuntam. Chinese symbol of rebellion and wickedness. By Finno-Ugrics believed to be the flesh of evil spirits.

MOSS February 16 birthday flower symbolic of ennui, friendship, maternal love, a servant. Dream significance: small task. Japanese symbol of old age.

Icelandic moss. Health.

Moss agate. June birth gem in eastern Europe. Symbolic of early death. Dream significance:

unsuccessful journey.

Moss (or wood) opal. In the language of gems: I value your approval.

MOTH AND FLAME One tempted and the tempter.

MOTHER (1) Name of one of the gnostic Aeons. (2) Canal by which a human being is conducted from one world to another. Personification of the life principle; bringer-forth, maintainer, nourisher, rearer. Anciently her symbol was a water pot, emblem of the primeval deep, the inexhaustible womb of nature.

Mother Carey's chickens (or geese). Sailors term for falling snow and for strong-wind petrels. Mother Carey equates with Mama Cora and with mata cara (dear mother).

Mother Chuber. A title of Tiamat as creator of all things including monsters for the purpose of destroying Ea and other gods.

Mother cult. Worship in which the male god is husband or lover of the chief deity.

Mother goddess. Triple deity of birth-growth-death or birth-death-rebirth. When a chthonic goddess, her three aspects correspond to the seasons of greenness, decay, death, her virginity renewed each spring. Thus, although a producer of life, she is unable to maintain it. Cybele, great mother of the Mediterranean region, influenced the concept of mother goddesses in neighboring states, such as Cotytto, Demeter, Isis, Magna Mater, Maia, Rhea. When a lunar goddess her three aspects correspond to the new, full, and old moons; her virginity renewed with each new moon. She has appeared as a sole or supreme deity, as in a Stone Age monotheism, and as the mother-sister-mistress, who slays the fertility king, her lover, when sated with him, thus causing winter. In the Circe motif men are turned into beasts instead of being killed. The mother goddess appears as a war deity, protectress of the cities she founded or protectress of the sun deity in his battle with the forces of darkness, drought, or winter. Her attribute in this aspect is a turreted crown. Ana, Anna Perenna, and Antha are among the goddesses who appeared in this role. Early mother goddesses were worshiped in orgiastic rites including castration, mutilation, prostitution, all intended as forms of sympathetic magic.

Mother Hubbard. In nursery rhyme an old woman whose time is devoted completely to her dog.

Mother of God. Title of Virgin Mary.

Mother-of-pearl. In China fairy food of Ho Hsien-Ku, symbolizing longevity.

Mother of presidents. State of Virginia.

Motherwort. January 25 birthday flower symbolizing concealed love.

MOTION Sound. Repose symbolizes silence. By Central American Indians motion is believed to bring about debility.

MOUND (1) Anciently used for burials, dwellings, fortifications, observations, religious rites. Frequently built in a sacred form, such as that of a divine animal. In Irish legend called sid (sidh); retreat of the Tuatha De Danann, abode of fairies. Word derived from Old English mund, meaning hand or protection, or from Teutonic mundi, meaning jutting out. (2) In heraldry a jeweled ball or globe surmounted by a cross; emblem of sovereignty. This form of mound is derived from the Latin mundus, meaning world.

MOUNT Steed of a deity. In Sanscrit called vahana.

MOUNTAIN Aspiration, attainment, celestial realm, climbing, difficulty, empire, life of man, pregnancy, retreat, tranquility, wisdom, woman. As a screen for the setting and rising sun, resurrection. Dream significance: (climbing) improvement; (descending) opposition. In allegory implies meditation. Mystical realm, in contrast to flat land realm of reality; light, opposed to valley, which is darkness or tears. Primitive peoples believed it was an entrance into the otherworld and buried their dead in caves or on slopes. In cosmological legends the stick with which the sky deity churns the primordial ocean to bring up land from the bottom or, after the deluge, to bring up land for a new world, thus the holy harbor of the ark. In some legends the ark on which deluge survivors lived still exists on a mountain top, but death comes to those who climb up to it. Almost every mythology has a sacred mountain called the earth's navel, and it was looked upon not only as the center of the habitable world, but thought to be connected with the umbilical cord attached to the foetus through which Earth drew her increase. It appears as the home of dwarfs, fairies, and giants, the heaven's vault, the ladder to heaven, the mansion of throne of the creator god, the world pillar supporting heaven. This appears to be related to the idea of a tree of life or world tree. The summit is the scene of eternal youth, joyous repose, place for worship, site of waters of health, trysting spot of men and gods, thus typifies heavenly communion. In emblems a mountain usually is represented with three, five, or six levels or peaks, three being most common. By gnostics symbolized by A.

In Babylonian mythology place of judgment. In Brythonic legend the Holy Grail was preserved on Montsalvat (mountain of salvation). In China called shan. Symbolic of constancy, longevity. The head of P'an Ku (see). Christian delectable mountains or holy hills drop sweet wine, typifying celestial love, salvation. The Egyptian realm of the dead was called mountain of the west. In Hebrew tradition revelation, witness of the eternal power and faithfulness of God. Japanese source of food and life. Navaho Indians believed the Black or Northern Mountains covered the earth in darkness, the Blue or Southern Mountains created dawn, the White or Eastern Mountains caused day, the Yellow or Western Mountains brought brilliant sunlight. In Norse mythology, Valhalla, abode of the dead, was located in a mountain. In Siberia revered as the bed or birthplace of the winds. In Tibet spirits of deified mountains usually are shown in warrior costume riding a lion or horse and holding a banner of victory. Such mountains are: Ha-wo-gang-zang, west; Kul-lha-sha-ri, south; Thang-lha, north; Yar-lha-shang-Po, east. Tse-ring chhe-nga (Five Sisters of Mount Everest) are usually shown in a temple enclosure. The sister in the center holds a bowl of jewels and a golden staff. The others hold jewels, a spear, and a sun. All wear flowing robes. The Five Brothers of Kanchenjunga are deified mountain spirits. They ride horses or lions, wear high helmets and warrior costumes, carry banners and flags, and are guardians of divine repositories.

Barren mountain. Sterility.
Mountain ash. November 2 birthday flower symbolizing prudence, quietness. Tree of good omen which wards off the evil eye. In Norse mythology Thor's helper.

Mountain chant. Navaho Indian rite characterized by a nocturnal masque of the gods depicting the ascent of a hero to the world above, where the people are eagles. With the aid of Spider Woman's magic, the hero defeats the enemies of the eagles. As a reward he is given the sacred mountain chant, which is designed to bring physical and spiritual health. Thus a therapeutic.

Mountain climbing. Joy in hardship and privation, a pilgrimage; renunciation of the world.

Mountain covered with snow. Abstract thought, nobility.

Mountain peak. Achievement, coldness, isolated abstraction. Altar or fire of the sun.

Mountain range. Emblem of West Virginia.

Sacred mountains are:

Mount Ararat. In Old Testament memorial of the deluge typifying man's sin, God's justice, God's mercy.

Mount Carmel. Old Testament symbol of faithfulness and fruitfulness.

Mount Caucasus. In Greek mythology where Prometheus was chained to a rock.

Mount Cithaeron. In Greek mythology place where Heracles pastures the flock of Amphitryon and slays the lion whose skin he later wears. Scene of Bacchic festival at which Pentheus, king of Thebes, is torn to pieces by his frenzied mother and aunts. Site where Oedipus is left to perish by his parents, and where the usurper Lycus of Thebes exposes Amphion and Zethus.

Mount Damarvand. Iranian mountain on which Azhi Dahaka will desolate the world by having his fetters broken. He will be killed by the hero Keresaspa at the very instant the Saoshyant appears with khvarenanh (kingly glory). Keresaspa will also slay Druji and Angra Mainyu. The destruction resembles that at Ragnarok.

Mount Ebal. Old Testament mountain echoing blessings and curses solemnly pronounced on it. Compare Mount Gerizim.

Mount Etna. In Greek mythology workshop of artisan giants. Its volcano is the fire which supplies the torches Demeter uses in searching for Persephone. When the Titans lose their war against the gods they are tossed into the pit of Mount Etna.

Mount Everest. Sacred Buddhist mountain. Abode of gods.

Mount Gerizim. Old Testament mountain echoing blessings and curses solemnly pronounced on it. Compare Mount Ebal.

Mount Ida. Sacred Greek mountain where Zeus is kept concealed from his father.

Mount Kirishima. In Japanese mythology where heavenly grandchildren descend to earth.

Mount Meru. Hindu holy mountain with three peaks composed of gold, silver, and iron; venerated as the dwelling place of the trinity Brahma, Vishnu, and Siva. Also called Sumeru.

Mount Moriah. In Old Testament where David met and appeased the destroying angel. Site of Solomon's temple at Jerusalem.

Mount Nissa. Mountain in Ethiopia where Osiris was born.

Mount Nysa. Greek mountain on which Dionysus was born and entrusted to the care of the nymphs, and where Silenus became his guardian. Nysa means light.

Mount Olivet. Three-peaked holy mountain of the Hebrews, venerated as the residence of Jehovah.

Mount Olympus. Greek home of the gods; site of the court of Zeus.

Mount Othrys. In Greek mythology place where Cronus prepares for his battle against Zeus, who has taken possession of Mount Olympus. The ark of Deucalion grounds here. In some versions the ark lands on Mount Parnassus.

Mount Parnassus. In Greek mythology the center of the world and, in some accounts, harbor of the ark of Deucalion. Site of a temple of Apollo and the Muses, hence to "climb Parnassus," is to write poetry. Also the site of a temple of Dionysus.

Mount Sinai. Divine law, in allusion to Old Testament account that here Jehovah revealed himself to Moses and gave him the ten commandments. Alternately known as Choreb or Horeb.

Mount Zion. Site of the royal residence of David; hence ancient Hebrew theocracy or modern Christian church. In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, celestial city.

MOURNING Symbolized by ashes; colors black, grey, lavender, purple, white; cypress; draped urn; flag at half mast; lamp or candle burning; rue, weapons reversed, weeping willow.

Mourning bride. Herb symbolizing unfortunate attachment. In the language of flowers: I have lost all.

Mourning rites. In some cultures mourning incorporates joy because departed enters realm of immortals as well as sorrow over personal loss, and wailing and weeping coincide with flute playing, in which a dead persons deeds are sung and his piety recounted. Those who sang a man's (in many societies a woman remains a nonentity in death as she did in life) praises during his lifetime continue to do so after he is dead if they desire the dead man to use his influence in their behalf. Mourning rites include blood-letting, burning a candle or flame, cutting hair and placing it with the dead, expressing fear of the world of no return, fasting, placing food and transportation for the dead, removal of shoes, self-mutilation, sprinkling mourners with ashes, tattooing, wearing haircloth or sackcloth or clothes of mourning colors. Mourning rites also are connected with the harvest solemnizing the death of vegetation.

MOUSE Death, destruction, fecundity, impending evil, petty thievery, poverty, prowling, timidity, untidiness. As the meanest and smallest animal symbolic of humble position. Many mice signify war. Dream significance: loss of lent money. Mouse is used as a term of endearment. Sacred to Apollo, one of whose titles was Smintheus, meaning mouse; to Ganesa; Horus, Isis, who took the shape during her flight from Set; and to the Devil, who sometimes took its form. In some Cinderella tales her cloak is made of a mouse or louse skin to signify humility. In Finno-Ugric belief one of the forms taken by the soul after death.

Black and white mice. Night and day.

Gray mice. Minor troubles, poverty, silent activity. Emblem of Saint Gertrude of Nivelles.

Mouse-deer. In Borneo, Java, and Sumatra the trickster-hero. Called kantijil or pelanduk. He arouses enmity and pursuit, but succeeds in escaping.

Mouse-eared chickweed. April 5 birthday flower, symbolic of simplicity.

Mouse Tower. A structure despised and feared, alluding to the watchtower on the Rhine, where Archbishop Hatto of Mainz was devoured by mice because of his cruelty to the poor during a famine. Actually, the tower, built two hundred years after the death of Hatto, was a tollhouse for the collection of duties from passing shipping. The tradition grew from the similarity of maus (mouse) and maut (toll) and the unpopularity of the toll.

MOUTH Divine duality, the male and female principles. When closed, a line, the male principle; when open, a circle, the female principle; or the tongue represents the line, the lips represent the circle. Fountain or well of life, speech, thought. According to Dante, where love ends; the eyes being where love begins. In Christian tradition, place of issue of creative breath. As such it is located below the other features because creation, coming from the Highest, is downward in direction. In Egyptian and Hebrew tradition a door or portal.

Boar's mouth. Vedic sacrificial altar.

Born with a silver spoon in one's mouth. Born to good luck or inherited wealth.

Demon's mouth. Hell.

From hand to mouth. Live thriftlessly, in the manner of one who consumes all available food as soon as he receives it.

Large mouth. Strong assertions.

Make the mouth water. Cause to desire ardently, from the increase of saliva in the mouth at the expectation or sight of appetizing food.

Muzzled mouth. Silence.

Open mouth. Disseminating a doctrine or heresy, hence a preacher or scoffer. In medieval art a jester shown with an open mouth symbolizes one fanning fires against Rome.

Put one's head in a lion's mouth. Enter a situation of great peril.

Small mouth. Weak assertions.

Stag's mouth. Gnostic symbol of a fountain or well of righteousness.

MOVEMENT See motion.

MOWING Death, destruction, slaughter.

MOWIS In American Indian legends a bridegroom constructed of snow. When morning comes, Mowis leaves the wigwam of his beautiful bride and melts. She hunts him throughout the forest, but never sees him again. Echoes the Eros-Psyche legend.

MOYA In Japan house where mourning rites are performed prior to interment of a body.

MOYMIS In Babylonian mythology the intelligible world, the only begotten of Apason and Tauthe. Later identified as Mummu, the Logos or Word, or Life.

MOYOCOYATZIN Literally, determined doer. Aztec god who could do as he pleased. An aspect of Tezcatlipoca.

MOYTURA A name of Mag Tured, which see.

MRTYU Hindu death demon; Yama's messenger. Identical with the Buddhist Mara.

MSURA KWIVIRE-VIRE African magic syllables. Used as a charm.

MU (1) Fabled continent on which man and civilization mysteriously originated. It supposedly sank in the Atlantic Ocean. Also known as Atlantis. Prototype of the Garden of Eden. (2) Twelfth letter of the Greek alphabet with a numerical value of forty. Equivalent of English M.

MUALI Among the Mashonaland peoples of Africa god who lives in heaven.

MUCALINDA Buddhist serpent king who spread his hood as a canopy over Buddha to shelter him from the elements during the period preceding enlightenment and to celebrate Buddha's victory over the demon-tempter Mara.

MUCKLE-MOUTH MEG A fearsome female, the subject of 19th century English ballads and poems, in which an English trespasser across the Scots border is given the choice of marrying Meg or hanging on the gallows. Muckle Meg was the name of a 15th century artillery cannon. Probably identical with Meg.

MUC-THAIUY In Indo-China revered as an example for all men to follow. He was a legendary fisherman who captured a tiger in his net at the moment the beast was attacking the king.

MUCUS OF THE NOSE In Japanese mythology food, life force. Purification offering.

MUD Lowest stratum of anything, pollution, worthlessness. Dream significance: serious worry; (to get on one's self) coming danger.

Mud Cat State. Mississippi; from the large number of catfish in the Mississippi River.

MUDGEONG In Australian mythology an evil spirit created by Baiame. He caused all of Baiame's children to turn into animals except two who became the ancestors of mankind.

MUDJEKEEWIS In Longfellow's Hiawatha deity of the west wind. Father of Hiawatha and other sons. Slayer of the great bear Mishe-Mokwa.

MUDOR WEDDING Volga-Finn moving feast in which Vorsud, luck-protector, is carried to the new home like a bride in a sleigh with horses and bells.

MUDRAS Buddhist symbolic poses. Compare Asana, Buddha poses, gestures, hands, vahana.

Abhaya: right arm elevated, slightly bent, hand level with shoulder all fingers extended, palm outward. Signifies blessing of fearlessness, protection. Mudra of Buddha and Dipankara.

Anjali: both arms stretched upward above head, palms turned up and fingers extended. Signifies salutation, sometimes prayer. Mudra of tantric form of Avalokitesvara.

Bhvacakra: fingers indicating a wheel and signifying Wheel of Life.

Bhumisparsa: right arm pendant over right knee, hand and palm inward, all fingers down touching lotus throne. Signifies witness, earth bear witness, as when Buddha called earth to witness that He had attained Buddhahood. Mudra of Aksobhya and Gautama.

Bhutadamara: wrists crossed in front of breasts, no symbols in hands. Signifies awe inspiring. Mudra of Bhutadmaravjrapani. Also called trailokyaviya.

Buddhasramana: right hand level with head, palm up, all fingers extended outward. Signifies salutation. Mudra of Usnisavijava, Vasudhara.

Dharmacakra: both hands against breast, left hand covering the right. Signifies preaching turning the Wheel of Law. Mudra of Gautama, Maitreya, and Vairocana.

Dhyana: hands in lap, right hand on left hand with fingers extended, palms up. Signifies meditation. Mudra of Amitabha, Gautama, Manjusri, and Man-la. Also called samadhi.

Karana: hand stretched out, index finger and little finger stretched out, thumb presses the other two against palm. Signifies fascination. Mudra of Ekajata and Yama.

Ksepana: hands joined palm to palm with tips of fingers touching and turned down into kalasa containing amrita. Signifies sprinkling body with amrita. Mudra of Namasangiti.

Namaskara: hands at breast in attitude of prayer. Signifies prayer. Mudra of tantric form of Avalokitesvara and Yama. Compare Anjali.

Tarjani: fingers doubled in fist, except index finger which is raised in menacing attitude. Signifies menacing. Mudra of Marici.

Tarpana: arm or arms bent, raised on level with shoulders, palms turned in and fingers slightly bent and pointing toward shoulders. Signifies homage to departed fathers. Mudra of Namasangiti.

Uttarabodhi: all fingers locked, palms upward, thumbs and index fingers touching at tips, fingers extending upward. Signifies best protection. Mudra of Gautama as liberator of the nagas and of Namasangiti.

Vajrahumkara: wrists crossed at breast, holding ghanta and vajra. Signifies Buddha supreme and eternal. Mudra of Samvara, Trailokyavijaya, Vajradhara, and Yidam forms of Dhyani Buddhas with Saktis.

Varada (vara): arm pendant, all fingers extended downward, palm turned outward. Signifies charity or gift bestowing. Mudra of Gautama, Man-la, Green Tara, White Tara.

Vitarka: arm bent, all fingers extended upward, except index finger which touches tip of thumb, palm turned outward. Signifies argument. Mudra of Akasagarbha, Gautama, Ksitigarbha, Maitreya, Taras.

MUDWORT Seashore flower symbolizing happiness, peace.

MUEZZIN Mohammedan crier who calls the faithful to prayer at the appointed hours five times daily by intoning loudly. Chanter of the Adzan.

MUGWORT November 3 birthday flower symbolizing happiness. Worn as a charm against ague; if carried in the hand, said to cure a wanderer of fatigue. Among Aztecs emblem of Chalchitlicue as mother goddess. Fungus of immortality; provider of life substance. Mugwort grass is the flower of the Japanese Boys' Dolls Day, celebrated 5th day of 5th moon.

MUGWUMP Algonquin chief or leader. At one time applied by the Republican Party to those members who claimed the right to vote independently, thus the member of a political party whose vote cannot be relied on; by extension a conceited or self-consequential person.

MUIC INISH An early name of Ireland meaning Pig Island. See Miled.

MUT (MUUT) Literally, water flood or watery one. In Egyptian mythology a mate of Hapi (Nile).

MUKASA Probably a human being who, because of his benevolence, came to be worshiped as a god by the people of Uganda, Africa. In one account son of Musisi, god who caused earthquakes; in another, son of Warena. His mother was a mortal. Unlike other Uganda gods he did not require human sacrifice. A canoe paddle was his sacred emblem.

MUKTI (MOSKA) Highest goal of Hindu philosophy, final beatitude, release from the bonds of existence. Right apprehension of truth, which, if one acquires, confers final emancipation on the soul. Also called Nirvana, a name adopted by the Buddhists as their supreme good.

MU KWA Consort of Fu-shi, founder of China. Represented as a serpent entwined with Fushi.

MULA DYADI In Toba Battak mythology creator deity, dweller in the uppermost of the seven heavens.

MULBERRY June 19 birthday flower symbolizing kindness offset by sharpness; wisdom. Inasmuch as it flourishes late symbolic of slowness. In China symbolizes fertility and scholarship. As an attribute of the silk goddess it brings comforts and industry into the home, but if planted in front of the house will bring sorrow. Hebrew oracular tree. It was consulted by David before his attack on the Philistines and in it God revealed His will to David, hence the word of God. Japanese charm for protection against lightning.

Black mulberry. June 20 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: I shall not survive you.

Mulberry leaf. In Japan called kaji; flower of Herdboy Prince and Weaver Princess Day Festival.

Mulberry staff. In China carried when in mourning for a mother.

MULCIBER Literally, softener. A surname of the Roman celestial smith Vulcan as softener or heater of iron. Name from the Aryan root mal or mar, which originally meant crushing, destroying, and later meant decaying, softening.

MULE Bastardy, frugality, hardihood, humility, longevity, obstinacy, patience, poverty, stupidity, sure-footedness, toil. Dream significance: business difficulties. In Buddhism steed of Sridevi. In Mohammedanism Al Borak, which see.

MULLA (MULA MULLO) (1) Gaulish mule god. (2) Sumerian evil spirit; a wandering fire or deceptive light. Sometimes interpreted to be a will-o'-the-wisp, but probably referred to moving stars.

MULLEN (MULLEIN) January 22 birthday flower symbolic of good nature. In the language of flowers: take courage. Supposedly used by old English witches, and for this reason called hag taper.

MULLET In heraldry a five-pointed star symbolizing divine grace, learning, virtue. In cadency mark of the third son.

MUL-LIL Accadian storm god. Originally lord (mul) of dust (lil), husband of earth, phallic father or great snake.

MULUNGU (MTANGA) Among

African tribes the high-dwelling thunder god. Those who die go up to heaven and become his slaves. Identical with their word umlungu, meaning white man.

MUMBA'AN Indonesian god who dried up earth after the deluge.

MUMBO JUMBO West African demon or grotesque idol greatly feared, especially by women, hence any object of superstitious homage or unreasoning worship.

MUMMIFICATION Immortality. About 3,000 B.C., as a result of a revolt against decapitation after death, bodies were mummified in the belief that ka (see) would return to the body and cause the dead to live again, or in the belief the soul in the nether world depended upon the existence of the body on earth.

MUMMING PLAY A play with masked figures containing a dance with a mock fight; originally a fertility ritual. Origin probably the same as that of the Sword Dance. In Christian countries performed at Christmas time. Father Christmas is stage manager and introduces the characters, chief of whom is Saint George. Other characters are Beelzebub, Big-Head-and-Little-Wit, Doctor, Humpty Jack, a Turkish Knight and his mother Moll Finney. The action is a symbolic representation of the death and rebirth of the year, and the object of the ceremony is to restore the spirit of vegetation to life. Compare Morris Dance.

MUMMU Literally, intelligence. In Sumerian mythology the creative word of Ea personified; the Logos or Life. In Babylonian mythology evil counselor and son of Apsu. Destroyed by Ea, force of good. Derived from Moymis.

Mummu Tiamat. Tiamat as chaos or confusion giantess in the Babylonian creation epic.

MUMMY Figuratively, any person or thing whose characteristics are dried up or shriveled. A dummy.

MU-MONTO Buriat hero who visits the world of the dead and discovers how the virtuous are rewarded and the sinners are punished. Hero of a time myth relating to the cycle of the seasons and to fertility, and as such resembles Mataora, Orpheus.

MUNCHAUSEN, BARON Hero of marvelous adventures. From the fantastic stories related by Hieronymous Karl Friedrich von Munchhausen, a German officer in the Russian army.

MUNDI In Roman mythology opening in the ground through which spirits of the dead returned from time to time to the upper world.

MUNDILFORE (MUNDILARE, MUNDILFARI) In Norse mythology giant father of Sol and Mani. The gods, angry at his ambitious pride in his children, took them from him and placed them in the heavens to drive the chariots of the sun and moon. He was the caretaker of the World Mill to which Bergelmer retreated.

MUNGO Typical name for a black slave, by extension any Negro. In Scotland the name means dear one, and Saint Mungo became the popular designation of Kentigern, a 6th century monk, who founded a community called Glasgu, meaning dear family, whence Glasgow, of which city he is patron saint.

MUNIN AND HUGIN Literally, memory and reflection. In Norse mythology the ravens of Odin. See under Hugin and Munin.

MUNKAR AND NAKIR Literally, unknown. In Mohammedanism the two black angels with blue eyes who interrogated the dead as to their faith in the Prophet. They are hideous of aspect and have thunderous voices. Those who answer properly have their souls drawn out through their lips and their bodies are left to repose in peace; those who do not give a satisfactory answer are beaten about the head with clubs half iron and half flame, and the soul is wrenched from them by rack-ing torments.

MUNTALOG Indonesian deity who pulled out some bristles standing in the hair of Mumbonang, his father, and brought them down to earth as fire for man.

MUNTSO-MURT (MOTSAOZA, MUNTSO-KUZO) Finno-Ugric spirit which lives in a dark corner of the bathhouse. He appears to human beings only before a misfortune. Sometimes he plays pranks on the bathers by hiding their clothes. Like Korkamurt he has the power to substitute changlings for rightful infants. Identical with Pyvsamaika.

MUPPIN Hebrew name meaning obscurities.

MURDER Anciently, especially among the Jews, the deliberate killing of another person was grounds for the death penalty because human beings were regarded as sacred children of the Creator, who alone had the right to determine when death should occur. In some societies, neither the city of refuge nor the altar could shield such a criminal. Among Semitic peoples, if a corpse were found in the open fields and the murderer could not be discovered, the town nearest the spot was obliged to purge itself by solemn ceremony. In English law murder is a disturbance of the king's peace. Figuratively to murder is to bungle, mar, ruin.

Ritual murder. Among primitive peoples the object is to obtain parts of the human body with which to make 'medicines' prescribed by witch doctors for political and social needs. Some are hung around the neck in little bags or bottles as health amulets, some are placed in the home to ward off evil. The victim usually is chosen at a feast at which enormous quantities of a potent beer or wine are drunk. Compare cannibalism.

MURDOCK Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning sea man.

MURDUK See Marduk.

MURETSU The Japanese Nero. Fifth century tyrant who loved to witness the agony of his fellows. One without mercy or remorse.

MURGI In Baltic mythology souls of the dead. Spirits of the air. Also called iohdi.

MURIAS In Irish mythology one of the four cities whence the Tuatha De Danann were said to have come, and from which they brought the caldron of plenty.

MURIEL Feminine name from the Greek masculine name Myron, signifying myrrh or fragrant.

MURPHY (MORAN) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning sea warrior. In Ireland a mурphy is a potato. In Scotland the name equivalent is Murray.

MURRAIN Fifth Egyptian plague wrought by a miraculous agency among the cattle. It became an Elizabethan invective as, "a murrain on you." Ultimately related to murder.

MURRAY Masculine name; Scotch variant of the Irish Murphy.

MURTAZNU (MURTAIMU) Babylonian god of rain, lightning, and thunder. Cognate with Rammon.

MUSAGETES Apollo as the god of music (earth awakening with jubilant sounds) and as leader of the nine Muses. He wears a laurel wreath and plays the lyre.

MUSCA BOREALIS Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Fly. Identified as the gadfly which stung Bellerophon when he attempted to fly to heaven on his winged horse and as the gadfly sent by Hera to torment Io. In the middle ages identified with Beelzebub.

MUSCAS (MASHTI) Mountain at the edge of the world. In a legendary history visited by Alexander the Great in his search for the waters of life.

MUSCLES Manliness, strength. In China the muscles and veins of P'an Ku became the strata of the earth.

MUSES Greek goddesses presiding over music, poetry, and science. Originally nymphs of the inspiring springs of dawn and nurses of Apollo, whose body was wrapped in pure white linen (morning mists). In one version they were created by Zeus at the request of the victorious deities after the war with the Titans in order to commemorate their deeds in song. In another tradition they were the four daughters of Zeus and Plusia: Arche (beginning), Aoide (song), Melete (meditation), Theixinoe (heart delighter). In still another account they were the three daughters of Zeus and Mnemosyne: Aoide, Melete, Mneme (memory). Finally they were fixed as nine as listed below. They were known as Pierides inasmuch as they supposedly first saw the light of day at Pieria, a Thracian district famous for its rivulets which produced sweet soothing songs. The Pierides also are identified as daughters of Pierus, king of Emathia. They were jealous of their divine power and punished any mortal vain enough to believe he could rival them. When Thamyris challenged them to a music contest they afflicted him with blindness and deprived him of the power of singing. For similar cause they changed the daughters of Pierus into birds. As attendants of Apollo (Musagetes) their favorite haunts were the sacred springs of Castalia at the foot of Mount Parnassus and Aganippe and Hippocrene on Helicon. Symbolic of the light of day they are beautiful and harmonious. Mystics say they represent the nine months of labor when Egypt in antiquity was safe from water. Their libations consisted of honey, milk, and water; never wine. Romans identified them with the Camenae; they probably correspond to the seven sisters who, in Hindu mythology, nurse the infant Arusha. The word muse is akin to mesha (Hebrew for freedom), moose, and mouse. When identified as nine:

Name	Sphere	Attribute
Calliope, sweet-voiced	epic poetry	writing tablet and stylus; sometimes a scroll
Clio, proclaimer or praise	history	open chest of books or scroll
Erato, loveliness	love poetry	lyre or zither
Euterpe, charm or delight	lyric poetry	flute
Melpomene, singer	tragedy	tragic mask
Polyhymnia, lover of song	sacred song	no definite attribute
Terpsichore, delight in dancing	choral song and dance	lyre and plectrum
Thalia, the joyous	comedy and idyllic poetry	comic mask, shepherd's staff, or wreath of ivy
Urania, heavenly	astronomy	globe

MUSHROOM November 4 birthday flower symbolic of bad news, suspicion, wanderer. Dream significance: long life, protection. Because it is sudden in growth and rapid in decay typifies that which is ephemeral, short-lived, an upstart.

MUSHTARI Persian name for Jupiter.

MUSHUSSU Sumerian chaos monster, power of darkness and evil. Serpent-dragon, cohort in the hosts of Tiamat overcome by Marduk. Portrayed as part eagle, part lion, part serpent, or as an ostrich. When a raging serpent subdued by Ninurta, identified with the constellation Hydra. Compare Basmu, Zu.

MUSIC Celestial realms, charm, flattery, happiness, love, sadness. Dream significance: (discordant) slander; (pleasant) good omen.

Musical instrument. In China symbolizes one of the four elegant accomplishments. A stringed instrument typifies joy. In Christian and Hebrew traditions suggests praise of God.

Musical notes. Color and planet correspondences: C - orange, sun; D - Indigo, Saturn; E - Blue, mercury; F - green, moon; G - Red, Mars; A - yellow, Venus; B - Violet, Jupiter. Season correspondences: D - Winter and darkness; A - Spring and dawn; C - Summer and noon; G - Autumn and gloaming. According to Western mystics the Chinese pentatonic scale resolves as follows:

Note	Chinese name	Quality	Rank
Dō (C)	kung	faithfulness	prince
Re (D)	shang	righteousness	minister
Mi (E)	chiao	love	people
So (G)	chi	worship	state affairs
La (A)	yu	knowledge	things

MUSISI African Uganda god who causes earthquakes. symbolizing caprice. In the language of flowers: Be bolder. Attribute of Virgin Mary.

MUSK April 24 birthday flower

MUSKRAT In Algonquin mythology animal which dived to the bottom of the primal sea and returned after a day and a night with a speck of mud, from which the giant rabbit Michabo fashioned earth. Michabo (sun) married Muskrat (virgin mother earth), and they became the parents of the human race. Thus from wet earth, dried by sunlight, solid earth was formed, and in damp soil, warmed and fertilized by sunlight, organic life was formed. In Algonquin muskrat is wajashk, which is allied to the word for mud, ajishki.

MUSO-BYOYE Literally dream-vision-man. A Japanese Gulliver who, on a kite made from a bamboo fishing rod and line given to him by Urashima, husband of the dragon princess, traveled into many strange lands: Land of Children, Land of Concupiscence, Land of Delight, Land of Greed, Land of Liars, Land of Never-Satisfied-Passions, Land of Perpetual Drinking. His kite compares with the magic carpet and typifies a cloud.

MUSPELHEIM (MUSPEL, MUSPELLHEIM, MUSPELLSHEIM) Norse light and glowing land to the south, ruled over by Surt, who guards it with a flaming sword. Sparks from the land became the sun, moon, and stars. Here the Elivagar melted and took the form of Ymir. The men of Muspel are to appear at Ragnarok and destroy the world by fire. The realm, the highest of all nine Norse worlds, is at the extreme opposite of Niflheim.

MUSTAMHO Mohave Indian creator of mankind.

MUSTARD SEED June 18 birthday flower symbolizing abundance, faith, fertility, growth; also indifference. In the language of flowers: I smart. Dream significance: bad sign. A grain of mustard is used proverbially to denote anything exceedingly small which develops into something large and useful.

MUSUBI (MUSUBU-NO-KAMI) Japanese god who unites lovers and to whom rags are hung on roadside trees as offerings.

MUT (MUUT) Egyptian lady of the sky, queen of the gods, great mother who gave birth to all that exists. Wife of Amon-Ra (sun) and mother of Khensu (moon). At Thebes worshiped with them as a trinity. The female counterpart of Amon-Ra, she wears the united crowns of north and south and holds an ankh, cross, and papyrus scepter. She sometimes appears with the head of a man and a phallus, thus she was worshiped as androgynous or self-produced. See Androgynous deities. In other aspects she appears as a lioness or as a vulture. Variously identified as identical with Apet, Hathor, Maat, Nekhebet. Also called Amaune.

MUTA Roman silent goddess of the underworld and mother of the Lares. Also called Larunda.

MUTABRIQU Babylonian deity. Lightning maker.

MUTALAMMIS (AL-MUTALAMMIS) A 6th century A. D. Arab poet noted for his debauchery and gambling. For making advances to King Al-Hira's sister the king gave him a letter to deliver to the governor of Hajar. The curious poet opened it and discovered it contained a request to maim and bury him alive. The carrier of a betrayal letter he resembles Bellerophon and Uriah.

MUTILATION The young sun or vegetation spirit, aware that his death and descent to the lower world are inevitable, rejects the love of the earth mother and castrates himself. This act dramatizes the partial destruction of the sun before it sinks, grain falling before the sickle, the withering of nature in autumn. Mutilated gods are called wanderers, inasmuch as during their period of absence or death they wander in the world of darkness until the time comes for resurrection, most commonly placed at the winter solstice. Their priests, in acts of sympathetic magic to stimulate regrowth, emulate the gods, and in orgiastic rituals sacrifice sexual organs. Various parts of the body are cut for various purposes. Australian medicine men make holes in their tongues. One tribe sprinkles its members with blood to bring rain. Australian Bushmen cut off their finger tips or knock out a tooth as an offering to the deity of misfortune, that is sacrifice a part to safeguard the rest of the body. In the worship of Aphrodite a Syrian woman cut off her breast to affirm her devotion to the great mother goddess. In some mythologies a male (sun hero) trespasses into a woman's realm (dawn or moonlight) and is assaulted in a murderous way. This was reenacted in punishments when men intruded into the mysteries celebrated by women, a serious offense in primitive tribes. Some mutilated gods are Adonis, Attis, Bata, Christ, Endymion, Eshmun, Hylas, Hypistos, Mithra, Narcissus, Osiris, Pentheus, Ra, Tammuz.

In time the sacrifice developed into a mourning rite, and a part of the body was mutilated to serve as a covenant between mourner and dead. Hair cutting or tattooing served as a substitute for blood letting and, among later Jews, a black rag or piece of clothing was cut symbolically. In time of war people in magico-religious intensity mutilate themselves while cursing an enemy. Young men have sometimes lamed themselves as a means of escaping military service. In Central Australia cuts are made on the back and neck in remembrance of the early history of the tribe. Mutilation has been practiced for the purpose of obtaining vital organs, such as eyes, hands, liver, etc., for use in divination, or for use with incantations as charms against evil demons or for obtaining the vital powers of the young. Mutilation, such as circumcision (see), may be practiced in puberty rites. Binding to produce small feet was practiced in China and elsewhere as a mark of aristocracy and beauty; in the Occident girdles are worn to distort the abdomen and emphasize the breasts. During the early 20th century German youths proudly displayed cuts received during a duel. In England and the United States schools substituted the wearing of letters; the ceremony survives in hazings and Hell weeks. Other relics of the rites are preserved in initiations into secret societies. Covenants may be sealed with blood. In law mutilation is used as a punishment for offenses against civil or social custom. In France during World War II, women who fraternized with the Nazis had their heads shaved. Whether ritualistic or social, the practice usually typifies a desire to achieve power over a supernatural force, pride, punishment, revenge, or vanity.

MUTUHEI Society Islands primeval deity of silence. With Tanaoa (darkness) he ruled in Po (void). Destroyed by Ono (sound).

- MUTUNUS Roman deity of fruitfulness and protector of flocks. Equivalent of the Greek Priapus.
- MUYINEWUMANA Pueblo Goddess. Mother of gems.
- MUY'INGWA Hopi underworld lord, giver of maize.
- MWENEMBAGO Uzaramo demon, ghost lord of the forest.
- MYIAGROS A momentary god. Created solely for the purpose of chasing flies away during sacrifices to Athena and Zeus.
- MYIMMO TAUNG Burmese mystical mountain. Revered as the navel of the world. Parallels Meru, Phra Men.
- MYLITTA Chaldean mother goddess; helper or giver of birth. Identical with Belit.
- MYNHEER CLOSH Dutch for Santa Claus. Literally, mynheer is my lord or master, and used in Holland as a title of address, such as for mister. By extension any Dutchman.
- MYOJO-TENSHI Japanese morning star angel. A handsome boy clad as a prince. He appears to wise and virtuous men and guides them on their journeys.
- MYRA Feminine name from the Greek, meaning she who laments. Alludes to the myrrh.
- MYRDDIN Same as Merlin, which see.
- MYRKRIDA Literally, dark-rider. Norse sorcerer or witch.
- MYRMIDON One of a warlike people of ancient Thessaly noted for their savagery. Subjects of Achilles, they were his followers
- in the Trojan War. By extension a faithful follower. Also applied to the underling of a desperate or rought character, who executes the commands of his master without question or scruple, or to a petty officer of the law. The Myrmidons have been described as a people created from ants because the word has been given mistaken etymological association with the Greek myrmex (ant). In the Iliad they are compared with wolves, and the Greek words for light and wolf are nearly the same. As they disappear from the battlefield when Achilles (sun) hangs up his shield and spear in his tent, they may typify the sun's death-dealing scorching rays.
- MYROBALAN Symbolizes privation. Fruit emblem of Man-la, the medicine Buddha.
- MYRON Masculine name from the Greek, alluding to myrrh.
- MYRRH April 6 birthday flower symbolic of consecrated wealth, sorrow, and of chastity because it is used as an anti-love philter. Gift of Balthazar, one of the Magi, to the infant Jesus, in prophetic allusion to the persecution which awaited Him. In Christian art an emblem of natural good and wisdom, and assigned to Virgin Mary. In Hebrew antiquity an ingredient of the sacred ointment. Used in embalming to preserve the body.
- MYRRHA (SMYRNA) In Greek mythology daughter of the Syrian king Theias. Inspired by Aphrodite her father engaged with her in unnatural love. Repenting for what he had done, he was about to kill Myrrha when the gods, in pity, changed her into a tree. After ten months the tree burst asunder and Adonis emerged.

MYRTILUS In Greek mythology son of Hermes and Cleobula. Charioteer to Oenomaus, king of Elis. He pulled the linchpin from the king's chariot and caused his death in December. Pelops, who married Oenomaus's widow, was ungrateful and threw Myrtilus into the sea. Before he drowned Myrtilus placed a curse on the house of Pelops. Like Oenomaus, Pelops and his descendants died in December. Thus Myrtilus personified frost which caused the death of agricultural or sun deities. Myrtilus was placed by the gods in the Northern Sky as the constellation Auriga, the Charioteer.

MYRTIUM Mountain on which Apollo left his infant son Asclepius. In some accounts the mountain is called Titthium.

MYRTLE May 4 birthday flower symbolic of amiability, love in absence, maidenhood, pleasure, victory. Used in nuptial coronals. In Arabic belief chief of the sweet scented flowers of this world and one of the three things taken out of Eden by Adam, the other two being dates, chief of fruits, and a wheat ear, chief of foods. Christian symbol of conversion, of the purity of Virgin Mary, and of her influence over the unruly impulses of the human soul. In Greek mythology sacred to Aphrodite (Venus) and odious to Hera (Juno) and Athena (Minerva) because Aphrodite was adorned with it when Paris decided she was the most beautiful woman. Emblem of initiation into Bacchic rites. Revered as a tree of the dead or, as an evergreen, a tree symbolic of life-in-death, hence immortality or rebirth. Myrtle bows were carried by Greek emigrants when they sailed to found a new colony to indicate the ending of an old cycle, the beginning of a new one, which they hoped would be favored by Aphrodite, who ruled the sea, myrtle being related etymologically to mer (sea) and mere (mother). Among ancient Hebrews symbolic of fertility, happiness, joy, peace, prosperity. As a bridal garland it was worn by virgins, never by divorced women or widows. The tents of the Feast of Booths (see) are erected of cypress and myrtle branches. In the feast it corresponds to the eye. In the habdalah used to dispel the odor of the fire of hell. After the spirit of the Sabbath departs all are refreshed by myrtle. Roman symbol of beauty, marriage, triumph, victory, and youth. Emblem of the union of the Roman and Sabine peoples. A plant sacred to Venus, it was excluded from the Bona Dea Festival.

MYSING (MYSINGER) Icelandic sea-king who commanded Fenja and Menja to grind out salt (ice) from Frothi's Mill (World Mill located on the ocean floor), which killed Frothi and ended Frothi's Peace. When they had ground out sufficient salt to hold up his ship, greed compelled him to command them to keep on grinding and they did so until his ship was covered. The giant maids continue grinding for they have no one to tell them to stop.

MYSTERY Symbolized by black color, clouds, veil. The mystery of life and death is symbolized by a sphinx, spiral. The term mystery has been applied to certain Pagan religious rites to which only selected worshipers were admitted after initiation and after vows of secrecy had been imposed. Although their exact nature is not known, the candidate probably went through a symbolic rite of death and resurrection, thus the mystery served as a gate of the otherworld. The ceremonies, in which various sacred articles, frequently in the form of sex symbols, were exhibited, were essentially those of purification, and the articles could not have been safely seen by the worshiper until he had been initiated into certain esoteric doctrines. Such mysteries are known to have been connected with the worship of Attis, Bacchus, Cybele, Demeter, Dionysus, Isis, Mithras, Orpheus, Tammuz, etc. In Christian belief Pagan mysteries were full of abominations. In the New Testament the word denotes truths of religion, the mystery of the kingdom of heaven, which, without a revelation from God, would have remained unknown to man. Thus, something which before had been concealed from human knowledge, but which now has been brought to light. In ritualistic churches, especially in early times, the term applied to a sacrament, particularly the eucharist. The plan of redemption, as having been hidden in God and still incomprehensible by the mere understanding, is called a mystery. See Naassenes.

Mysterious horseman. Death.
Mystery play. A Biblical drama dealing with incidents from the Gospels. Originally they were simple pageants of the Christmas or Easter legends. Gradually they assumed a secular aspect and were acted by members of trade guilds. The stages were movable and had three stories to represent Heaven, Earth, and Hell. Eventually comic elements were introduced, and one stock character was Noah's wife, who stubbornly refused to board the Ark. Mystery plays sometimes are called miracle plays but, properly speaking a miracle play deals with the miracles of the saints. The word mystery as used is not clearly defined. Mysterie during the middle ages meant skilled workmanship, a trade, and the name may have been applied when the dramas were acted by craftsmen. It may have been derived from the Greek muein or myo (close the eyes or lips), source of the Latin mysterium (secret).

MYSTIC KNOT Endlessness, immortality, infinity. One of the signs on the sole of Buddha's foot. Said to have been developed from the swastika.

MYSTIC MEAL Food of life; meal provided by the Holy Grail.

MYTHIC DANCE DRAMA Pueblo ceremony pertaining to birth, pubescence, death. Parallels the mysteries of Pagan Asia and Europe.

MYTYL In Maeterlinck's Blue Bird the girl. With Tylyl, the boy, she goes in search of the blue bird of happiness.

N

N Fourteenth of a class or series; thirteenth if the letter J is not counted. Designates north or north pole. According to mystics it possesses magnetic qualities and is constantly alert. Occult significance: it dominates the physical body and its period is for five years. Character traits: cleverness, energy, impulsiveness, love of justice, speaking ability. In divination its numerical value is five or fourteen. Physical weak spots: liver and nerves. Planetary or zodiacal correspondence: Aquarius or Scorpio. Symbolic correspondence: initiative. Tarot correspondence: Temperance.

Among Hebrew cabalists its usual meaning is fish, and its character traits are: justice, liberty, truth. In low form: disunion, false testimony. In medieval Roman notation 90 or 900; with a line drawn over it 9,000 or 90,000. Parallels Celtic nion (ash), Egyptian hieroglyph water, Greek nu, Hebrew and Phoenician nun (fish). See Alphabet Affiliations.

NAAMAH According to the cabala sister born from the side of Cain. Seducer of men and spirits, including Aza and Azael. Mother of demons, she excited men, especially in dreams. Identified with Lilith.

NAAMAN Literally, pleasantness. In the Old Testament a highly esteemed general of the Syrian king Ben-hadad. Miraculously cured of leprosy by the prophet Elisha on washing in the river Jordan. He yielded to the worship of Jehovah, but accepted the prophet's silence as permission to worship the god Rimmon when in the presence of Ben-hadad. Thus one who succumbs to expediency.

NAAS Semitic for serpent. Akin to Nachash, Nazarene, and to nazar, which means to protect.

Naase. Place in Kildare, Ireland, whence, according to legend, came the stones of Stonehenge, which had been brought to Naase from the remotest parts of Africa. Derived from the Hebrew naas and resolving into naes, which yields one essence or one light.

Naaseni. Gnostic term for Jesus of Nazareth worshiped in the form of a serpent.

Naassenes. Christian sect of the 2nd century, whose doctrines and practices were based on the mystery of generation adopted from Phrygian mysteries, and who identified Attis with the presiding deity of all other mysteries. Saint Hippolytus exposed the sect as one which adopted the fertility cult of the Magna Mater to Christian ceremonies, and which taught that the good news of Christ was precisely the consummation of the inner doctrine of the mystery institutions of all peoples; the end of all being the revelation of the mystery of man; that the gnosis of man is the beginning of the possibility of knowing God. See Mystery.

Naasson. Name of an ancestor of David, which suggests he belonged to a family or tribe which had a serpent totem.

NAASTRAND (NASTROND) Literally, strand of the dead. One of the nine Norse afterworlds. Place of torment, where serpents dropped burning venom on sinners from a high wall. Abode to which murderers and perjurers were doomed forever. Naastrand and Gimle (abode of the righteous) refer to the state of things after Ragnarok; Helheim and Valhal refer to the state of things between death and Ragnarok. Parallels Hell, Tartarus.

NABAA Tree from which Arabian divining arrows are made.

NABAL Literally, fool. In Old Testament a rich sheep owner, whom David protected from robbers in the desert; yet, when David, in an hour of need, made a modest request for provisions for his hungry troops, Nabal turned him away.

NABHANEDISTHA In Hinduism son of Manu. Like Joseph in the Old Testament, he was deprived of the fair share of his father's estate by his brothers.

NABHI Jain culture hero, first of the Kulakaras (law-givers). He taught arithmetic, the reading of omens, and trades. He preached the discontinuance of yugalin (brother-sister marriage). To his wife was born a son called Rsabha (bull, hero) when she dreamed of a lion. After bestowing kingdoms on his sons he passed into the ascetic life. Resembles the Greek Cadmus.

NABIS Tyrant of Sparta who invented tortures. Murdered.

NABOB An Anglo-Indian who has amassed great wealth and lives in splendor; by extension any rich man who lives luxuriously.

NABOTH Literally, prominence. In the Old Testament, when he refused to sell his ancestral vineyards, he was stoned to death on false charges of blasphemy contrived by Jezebel the queen. After his murder Ahab, the king, and Jezebel confiscated his estate. Thus Naboth's vineyard is the possession of one coveted by another able to possess himself of it unjustly.

NABU (NABUG, NEBO) Literally, announcer or proclaimer. In Babylonian mythology messenger of Bel. In early accounts superior to Marduk; in some texts the son of Marduk. Spouse of Tashmetu (hearing, mercy). Writer of fate, deity of wisdom, teacher of agriculture and letters. Sun god of the autumn equinox, thus sun when the days are shortest. Ruler of Wednesday, his planetary correspondence is Mercury, whom he resembles. Also resembles Malak-Bel, Pairekse, Thoth. His shrine was veiled at the New Year in memory of his descent into the underworld. His emblems are a mason's chisel, measuring rod, stylus, writing tablet. Appeared in Hebrew mythology as Nebo, an angel, keeper of the tablets of fate.

NACHASH (NCHSH) According to mystics the serpent which tempted Eve. From the Hebrew meaning snake, also to become wise. Allied to naga, resolves into an-ach-ash, i.e. one great light or mighty ash. Compare naas, ophis.

NACHON (NACON) Hebrew name meaning stroke.

NACH-UN Chief oracle and sorcerer of the Tibetan government. Incarnation of Pe-har, deity brought to Tibet by Padma-sambhava and made guardian of the first monastery.

NACIEN In Malory's Morte d'Arthur a hermit who introduces Sir Galahad to the Round Table. Probably an agricultural hero.

NACON Mayan war god.

NADA Feminine name from the Slavic, meaning hope.

NADAB In Old Testament the oldest son of Aaron. Slain by God for presumptuously offering strange fire on the altar of burnt offering. See Abihu. In Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel a profligate who pretends to possess great piety. The character is meant for Lord Howard of Esrick who, while imprisoned in the Tower, is said to have mixed the consecrated wafer with a compound of roasted apples and sugar called lamb's wool.

NADIMMUD A name of Ea as god of everything.

NADINE Feminine name from the Russian through the French, meaning hope.

NADIR A word from the Arabic, meaning opposite to (zenith), thus signifying the part of the celestial sphere directly beneath the place where one stands, the inferior pole of the horizon, lowest possible point. Figuratively, time of the deepest degradation or depression. In Pueblo belief the heart or navel of the world from which mankind first emerged; abode of life generators; place where the dead are reborn. Its color is black.

NADUSHU-NAMIR In Babylonian and Chaldean mythology man-lion created by Ea to rescue Ishtar from the underworld.

NAEGLING Magic sword with which Beowulf killed the dragon which attacked his people. Typifies light rays.

NAGA (NAIA, NAJA, NAJE) Buddhist and Hindu deified dragon or serpent. The nagas are guardians of treasures, especially pearls (dew or rain drops), they are beneficent or venomous, and are enemies of the garudas, who force them to release the rains they frequently withhold. They appear in three forms: fully human with snakes on their heads and emerging from their necks; the upper parts of the body human shape, the lower snake form; as common snakes. The females are seductive. Their homes, variously called Nagaloka, Niraya, or Patala, are located in the air, earth, waters, celestial regions, or on Mount Meru. Attribute of Buddha as liberator of the nagas, and of Arvajangulitara, Dharmapala, Nagarjuna, Ugratara, Vajrapani. Hindu guardians of the sea usually are shown with the body of a serpent. The naga is associated with Indra, the rain-bringer. The name has been given to a cult of serpent worshipers who go about naked or nearly so. Naga yields mighty one, it is allied to nachash, and is cognate with the brazen serpent.

NAGAITCHO (NAGAICHO) Literally, great traveler. Athapascan Indians of California deity. With Thunder he created a world which was destroyed by a great deluge. He created a second world, conceived as a large horned animal, which floundered southward through the primal waters. Nagaitcho stood on his head steering the world until it came to rest and served as a home for mankind. Also known as Kyoi.

NAGA MIN Burmese serpent-king. He usually decorates temple balustrades.

NAGARAJA Buddhist serpent-king. Also called Nanda. In Tibet called Klu-rgyal. Compare Raudalo, Virupaksa.

NAGARJUNA Historical person of the 2nd century A.D. deified. Buddhist apostate; disciple of Asvaghosa. Founder of Mahayana doctrine, he claimed to have received sacred books and teaching of the Mahayana from Gautama. In art wears monastic garments like those of a Buddha and has urna and usnisa. He is white, his hands are in dharmacakra mudra, and he has an aureole of seven nagas. His emblems are caitya and naga. In Tibet called Klu-sgrub or Lu-dup.

NAGASENA Fourteenth Buddhist arhat. He went as a missionary to Urumunda and became king of the mountain. Name signifies of the race of nagas. His attributes are an alms-staff and a vase. In Tibet called Klu-i-sde or Luidede.

NAGASVARAJA Buddha as liberator of the nagas or animal beings.

NA-GATES In Norse mythology gates separating Niflheim from Helheim. Those who pass through the gates suffer a second death.

NAGELFARE Norse star deity. Husband of Nat (night); by her father of Aud (bounteous riches).

NAGLFAR (NAGLEFAR, NAGLEFARE, NAGLFARI) Literally, nail made. Norse ship of death made of the nail parings of the wicked dead. It is located in the Gulf of Black Grief in the outer regions of Niflheim. Held fast to a dark island, it will not move until Ragnarok. When it breaks loose, Hrymir will pilot it and mark the beginning of the battle between the giants (evil) and gods(good), which will occur on the last day of the world.

NAG-PA Tibetan sorcerer not admitted in monasteries. He is a devil-dancer, one who performs to battle demons.

NAGUAL (NAGUA) Central American Indian guardian spirit in the form of a beast or bird. Assigned to each person under a compact made by drawing blood.

NAHALIEL Hebrew name meaning inheritance of God.

NAHALLAL Hebrew name meaning pasture.

NAHAMANI Hebrew name meaning comforter.

NAHBI Hebrew name meaning

Jah protects.

NAHEMA Occult demon of impurity. Identical with Lilith.

NAHUM (NACHHUM) Hebrew masculine name meaning consolation.

NAHURAK Pawnee deity with animal powers who dwells in the west.

NAHUSA Literally, usurper. In Hindu mythology, when Indra fled, rain ceased to fall, the world became desolate, and the gods asked Nahusa to take over the kingship of earth. Instead of setting things in order he abandoned himself to idle enjoyment. When he kicked the seer Agastya on the head, the seer hurled him from heaven to dwell in snake form for 10,000 years. Indra then was prevailed to return to his kingship. A seasonal myth, Indra ruling during the season of fertility.

NAIADES Greek nymphs who dwelled in and gave life and perpetuity to fountains, lakes, rivers, springs, and wells. Sometimes identified as the daughters of Oceanus and Tethys. Attendants of Athena they were nurses of Adonis, Dionysus, and Zeus, whom they anointed with spring-time dew. Like the Nereides, Oceanides, and other nymphs they possessed the gift of prophecy and inspired those mortals who drank of their waters with the power of foretelling the future. In art represented as maidens in the bloom of youth with a crown of flowers or water weeds in their hair, carrying water in an urn or drawing it. Naiades, denoting dweller in water, is from the Sanscrit sna (washing) and the Greek nao (flowing). By extension, a young woman swimmer is called a naiad.

NAIL (ANATOMICAL) Evil genius, seductress. In some cultures a long nail indicates aristocracy, leisure; a short nail indicates toil. Dream significance: (bitten) pain; (cut) quarrel, worry.

Nail marks. If left on a woman's body, at her breast, navel, or thigh, in the form of a peacock's foot, tiger's claw, etc., expresses the intensity of a man's love.

Nail parings. Useful in contagious magic. One supposedly has only to injure them to hurt or cause injury to the person from whose body they have been cut. In Norse mythology the nails of those who were hated for their evil deeds were not pared at death. Thus unpared nails were a sign of uncleanness. In Niflhel used to build the ship Naglfar.

Nails with white markings. Betoken something pleasant is about to happen. In German and Norse folklore children with such nails are said to be lucky.

NAIL (IMPLEMENT) Axis of the universe, phallus. Firm support, incontrovertible fact, tenacity. Dream significance: unexpected news; (twisted) great difficulties. In heraldry suffering. Anciently the sacred king sacrificed annually in crucifixion received a wound from a nail in his holy foot, thus symbolic of the arrow which pierces the sacred foot of sun heroes. See sacred foot under foot, lame king under king. In Christianity one of the thirteen symbols of the Crucifixion. When typifying the passion of Christ sometimes shown as three bent nails. In Hebrew tradition divine promise, promise of Isaiah, who said, "I will fasten him as a nail in a sure place; and he shall be for a glorious throne to his father's house. And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house." Among the Lapps the Pole Star. In Norse tradition an iron nail with a piece of flint in it, typifying the weapon or stone (sun) which lodged in Thor's head as a result of his battle with Hrungir, was used to produce sacred fires.

Go off the nail. Become irrational.

Hard as nails. In good physical condition; also without mercy.

Hit the nail on the head. Define accurately, speak to the point.

Nail of Crucifixion. Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as the Arrow or Sagitta.

Nail one's colors to the mast. Remain steadfast; the allusion is to the fact that a flag nailed to a man-of-war's mast cannot be lowered in submission.

Nail to the counter. Expose a falsehood publicly. Formerly a counterfeit coin taken in trade was nailed to the counter.

Old coffin nail fashioned into a ring. Talisman for the cure of cramps and epileptic fits.

NAIN ROUGE Literally, red dwarf. A goblin or house spirit of Normandy kind to fishermen. Another elf is called le petit homme rouge (little red man).

NAIOTH Hebrew place name meaning habitations. Abode of Samuel and his pupils, thus place of a school of prophets. David sought refuge at Naioth.

NAIRATMA In Buddhism compassion. Sakti of Heruka. In Yogacara (esoteric doctrine) a personification of prajna (knowledge). The yoga (union) of compassion and knowledge leads to the realization of the nothingness of existence, which results in Mahasukha or Nirvana (eternal bliss). In Tibet called mKa-spyod-sems-med-ma.

NAIRYOSANGHA Iranian god of fire, messenger of Ahura Mazda. He dwells with kings inasmuch as they are endowed with divine majesty, and he brings to the gods the sacrificial offerings of men. In the Avesta associated with Atar. Parallels Narasamsa.

NAITH In Irish mythology mate of Nath. Naith means combat and is cognate with Neith.

NAK Dragon headpiece worn by dancers in the Indo-Chinese harvest festival Lo Chin Cha.

NAKA-HSI-NA (NAGASENA) In Chinese Buddhism one of the eighteen lohan. He had a keen wit and an impressive presence and ruled over Pandava Mountain in Nagadha. He is shown seated in the mountains.

NAKEDNESS Candor, distress, inability to provide for one's self, innocence, poverty, purity, truth, void of self-interest and vaingloriousness. Dream significance: (to be) poverty; (to see another) scandal, slander.

NAKIR (NAKARMKIR) Islam spirit of repentance. A black angel with blue eyes who, with Monker, questions the dead on their faith. See Monker and Nakir.

NAKI-SAHA-ME-NO-KAMI Japanese goddess of the marsh or stream. Born from the tears of Izanagi when he wept at the death of Izanami. Name signifying Crying-Weeping-Female-Deity.

NAKK (NACKEN, NEKKE, NIK) Evil spirit of the Baltic Finns. The Nakks entice humans with their songs. Their appearance portends disaster. Females are called Nakineiu (Nakk's maid).

NAKSATRAS In Hinduism the twenty-seven lunar mansions. Wives of Soma.

NAKULA Mongoose, a non-tantric Buddhist symbol. Emblem of Arhat Bakula, Jambhala, Kubera, Vaisravana.

NAKULA AND SADHADIVA In Hinduism twin sons of the Asvins and counted as two of the five Pandavas. They are famous for wisdom and beauty respectively.

NAL (NAAL) Literally, needle or needle-tree (fir tree). In Norse mythology nickname of Laufey, personification of the pine needle or tree.

NALA Legendary king of India who had the power of making stones float on water, and built a bridge of them from India to Ceylon. A monkey deity, lord of the sky, the bridge probably was the rainbow or Milky Way.

NALA AND DAMAYANTI In the Bhagavadgita tragic lovers. The gods jealous that Damayanti, daughter of King Bhima, had chosen to marry the mortal Nala, set Kali to cause him to be worsted by his younger brother in a game of dice in which Nala loses his kingdom, his wife, and even his raiment, in consequence of which he becomes an exile. He has many adventures and troubles and finally becomes a hermit in a forest. Eventually Kali departs out of Nala, and he wins back his kingdom and his wife. Probably a light or sun deity who travels through space or time, his stay in the forest typifying the period of darkness or drought. The lovers parallel Yudhi-shthira and Draupadi.

NAMAMAHAY Tagalog term for a Filipino serf. Members of this class formerly lived in their own dwellings, paying their lords in agricultural services, construction work, etc.

NAMAZU Japanese primeval fish which lived under the earth and caused earthquakes by shaking its tail.

NAMBI In African Uganda mythology the first woman. Daughter of Gulu, heaven; spouse of Kinto, first man.

NAME In primitive societies the soul, source of power and strength. If a magician desires to work evil against an individual he repeats the name when uttering potent magical formulae. To guard against wizards who are able to cripple or destroy by cursing or mentioning a name, a true or big name and a good or little name are given, the big name kept secret by the parents, the individual called by his little or nickname. The true name also is the grave name, and the dead may be conjured up when their names are spoken in invocations. Everytime the name is mentioned the deceased is recreated and, death, therefore, does not make an end to his existence. Thus one is able to summon supernatural aid when necessary. Among some the prowess of a hero depends on his receiving his name and weapons from his mother. Gods and heroes force demons to reveal their names which they use in incantations to break the demons' power. A charm against a demon, especially a child-stealing witch, is to write his or her name on a house. Even in the 20th century certain persons are charged with lack of courtesy when they refuse to give their names to strangers. See Isis, Llew Llaw, Maui. Some African villages have a true name, known only to elders, and a public name. American Indians believed that individuals renamed after a dead person kept the character and traits of the departed from being lost. In China babies were given unpleasant names that would not tempt the envy of the gods. The names of spirits friendly to man were cut in stone or written on paper or silk and placed to frighten off evil spirits. Finno-Ugrians believe that an infant who cries a great deal has received a wrong name, and perform rites to give the child the name of an ancestor who has appeared in dreams as a guardian spirit. Greenlandic Eskimos do not mention a dead person's name until it is given to a child. Thus reborn, the dead person's soul is free to leave the corpse for the afterworld. In the Old Testament compound names are frequent, especially those which embody a term for God. A whole phrase is formed into a name, as Elioenai, i.e. to Jehovah are mine eyes. Ancient Hebrews changed names for the slightest cause. Kings gave names to those to whom they gave office, thus honor and privilege were implied in the new name. The name Abraham, conferred by God, was the final stage of a mystic achievement of true wisdom. The child named after a dead ancestor presumably kept the ancestor alive. Children were not named after a living ancestor because the child then took over the life of the older person. Marriage constituting rebirth names were changed. The cabalists believed that to invoke the divine name meant to invoke the assistance of God.

Namesake. Among primitive peoples to eat an animal or anything else bearing one's name or the name of one's tribe is taboo.

Put out one's name. Extinguish one's family; be a family's last surviving member.

NAMO (NAMI) In Carolingian romances the Duke of Bavaria, one of Charlemagne's noted paladins. A light or agricultural hero.

NAMTARU (NAMTAR) Assyrio-Babylonian plague demon, chief of seven devils. With sixty diseases under his charge he was the messenger of Ereshkigal and bringer of death to mankind. He also was a fate deity, and his wife Hushbishag kept the tablets on which the hour of each person's death was recorded. For those who prayed Namtaru kept the wicked demons in bondage.

NAMUCI Literally, he who will not let go. Hindu demon vanquished by Indra with the foam of the sea. His story parallels that of Vrtra, of whom he probably is a form. He appears in Buddhism as the demon tempter of Buddha. Also called Kama or Mara, and identical with Mrtyu.

NAN (NANANNE, NANCY, NANETTE, NANNY) Feminine name diminutive of Anna.

gNAN Malignant Tibetan spirits who cause pestilential diseases. They infect certain rocks, springs, and trees.

NANA (ANNA-NIN) Sumerian virgin mother; an earth goddess. Wife of Nebo, sister of Tammuz. Also a moon goddess associated with flocks and rivers and protectress of cities. She conceived by the magic use of an almond or pomegranate. Her worship eventually merged into that of Ishtar. Identical with Ana-hita, Nanai, Ningal, Ninsun; prototype of Arianrhod, Cybele, Dechtere.

NANABOOJOO (NANABOZHO, NANIBOJON) Potawatomi friend of the human race. Mediator between the Great Spirit and man. Identical with Manabozho, Michabo.

NANACATL Meztitlan (Aztec) mushroom which intoxicated Nanacatlzatzti.

Nanacatlzatzti. One of the four primeval quadruplets or directions. Name signifies he-who-speaks-when-intoxicated-with-the-poisonous-mushroom. See Hueytonantzin.

NANAI Babylonian early goddess of Ur and Uruk. Daughter of Anu identified with the planet Venus as mistress of the heavens. Later merged with Ishtar and identified with Nana and with Nane.

NANCY (1) Diminutive of Ann. (2) An effeminate and precise youth. (3) In Dickens' Oliver Twist a girl of depraved life who has some fine instincts and protects Oliver. (4) A fable of fairies and witches as told by African Gold Coast tribes. From ananse (spider).

NANDA Hindu king of serpents. Shepherd who raised Krishna. Usually has one head and two arms, is human to the waist, where his body becomes that of a serpent. He wears a serpent's crown and holds a serpent. In another form he has four heads and six arms, two hands drawing a bow. This form controls rain clouds. By Buddhists called Nagaraja.

NANDI Hindu sacred bull, steed of Siva. A fertility emblem identified with the serpent.

NANDINA In the language of flowers: My love will grow warmer. In Japan symbolizes improving fortunes.

NANE (HANEA) One of the seven chief deities of the Armenians. Daughter of Aramazd. At first her rites were of orgiastic nature; later she was a wise, austere war-like goddess, who protected those who worshiped her. Identical with Nanai.

NANE CHAHA Original ancestors of the Choctaw Indians. The name signifies high hill, from which they were believed to have come.

Nane Waiyah. Choctaw sacred mountain. Abode of gods. Name signifies bent or curved mountain, and as the hill of heaven it curved down on all sides to the horizon.

NA-NEFER-KA-PTAH Egyptian destroyer of the deathless snake.

NANGA Polynesian great thief who could work only when the rays of the sun were clouded. Deity of darkness or death.

NANG PYEK-KHA YEH-KHI In Burmese and Indo-Chinese mythology daughter of Ta-hsek-khi and Ya-hsek-khi. A great mother goddess. She was born with the ears and legs of a tigress, and her parents made over to her the expanse of earth and water and the two gourds of life and death. Only a man able to split these gourds was to become her husband. They were cut open by Khun Hsang L'rong; animals and people poured out of them, and she became his wife.

NANIGOES A secret society that terrorized Cuba under Spanish rule.

NANIHEHECATLI Aztec lord of the four winds, who swept the roads before the gods of rain. A name of Quetzalcoatl.

NANIWA Japanese tomb figures made of baked clay and placed in a circle on top of a burial mound. They represent servants who in ancient times were buried alive in the graves of their masters.

NANKILSTLAS In Haida Indian legend identical with Nascakiyetl.

NAN-LHA (NANG-LHA) Tibetan Buddhist house god. Resembles a lar.

NANNA In Norse mythology granddaughter of Odin, the beautiful wife of Balder, mother of Forseti. She was a flower goddess, noted for her purity and fidelity. On Balder's death she sent her gold ring (fertility) to Fulla and her kerchief (beauty) to Frigg, and threw herself on her husband's funeral pyre, where she burnt to death. Thus the flower or summer maid withers with the yearly death of the sun. In the Eddas she is identified as the moon maid, wife of Balder with whom she fights light battles, and sister of Summa, the sun maid. In Saxo she is the wife of Hoder.

NANNAR Literally, light producer. Babylonian moon deity, bull of heaven, friend of man. Son of Enlil. Supreme ruler at Ur in Chaldea, where he was worshiped as a father and mother deity combined, or where he ruled with the goddess Nanai. He controlled nature as a fertilizer and was increaser of flocks and of human offspring. When a male deity his consort sometimes was Nin-uruwa, and he was the father of the lunar twins Mashu, the boy, and Mashtu, the girl. His name is identical with the feminine Ninanna (Innini). Also known as Sin. See Androgynous deities.

NAN-T'I-MITOLO-CH'ING-YU

In Chinese Buddhism one of the eighteen lohan. Presides over Kuru country. He usually is portrayed sitting with a sacred book in his left hand, while he snaps the fingers of his right to show how rapidly he acquired spiritual knowledge. Also known as Nandimitra or Subhinda.

NANZO-BO (NANSO-BO) Japanese Buddhist monk who, by divine guidance, became a serpent (almost immortal) that he might live long enough to hear the prophecies of the future Buddha Miroku (Maitreya). In serpent form he married and to protect his wife he fought an eight-headed serpent with his nine-forked head, i.e. his own head and the eight rolls of the holy scriptures which had become heads on his shoulders. Thus a pious man who in reality is a beast.

NAOISE (NAEISE) In Irish mythology son of Usnach, brother of Ainle and Ardan, tragic lover of Deirdre. Sun deity; recipient of a gift from Manannan (sea lord) of a sword (light rays) that leaves no trace of its blows behind it. Accompanied by his brothers (sunlit clouds), he flees with Deirdre to Alba (Scotland), land of light. When he returns to Ireland, a magic spell is cast over him and he is captured by Conchobar (sky deity), foster-father and would be husband of Deirdre (dawn). He thereupon throws his magic sword to the executioner that with one blow the three brothers may be destroyed.

NAOMI Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning pleasant. In the Bible the name of Ruth's mother-in-law, who bade her son's widow to remarry and returned with her to Judea, that she might do so.

NAONGHAITHYA Zoroastrian archdemon inspiring ingratitude, obstinacy, pride. Opposed to Spenta Armaiti (harmony). In post-Vedic mythology a degenerate form of the Asvins. See Nasatya and Dasra.

NAPAEAE Greek nymphs of dells, glens, and wooded vales. Frequently in the train of Artemis. Although shy they are frolicsome.

NAPHTALI Literally, wrestling. In the Old Testament sixth son of Jacob, fifth by Leah. His descendants, composing one of the twelve tribes of Israel, were an agricultural people. They attended the coronation of David, and are mentioned with honor in the war of the Judges. The tribe is symbolized by an African deer, the color wine, and the gem amethyst. In zodiacal lore associated with the house of Capricornus. See gems, Hebrew tribes.

NAPIER'S BONES Abacus. From John Napier, famous Scottish mathematician.

NAPKIN OF SAINT VERONICA Passion of Christ. One of the thirteen symbols of the crucifixion.

NAPOLEON (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning lion of the forest dell. (2) A military genius whose dreams of world conquest led to his defeat.

NAQBU In Babylonian mythology Ea as god of the deep.

NARA One of the six Buddhist paths or conditions of existence. Region of man, where human misery is divided into eight classes: birth, old age, sickness, death, misfortunes and punishments, offensive objects and sensations, separation from loved ones, ungratified wishes and struggle for existence. On the Bardo Thodol called Naraloka. In Tibet called Mi. See Gati.

NARAKA Personification of the wicked Hindu giant of darkness. Also the Hindu Hell, abode of goblins and sorcerers. It has twenty-eight divisions, in some of which men eat men, suggesting retribution; victims are doomed to swallow burning hot cakes or walk over burning coals, others are mangled by owls or ravens. Each division has a name: Rodha (obstruction) for those who kill a cow, plunder a town, or strangle a man; Rurava (fearful) for liars and those who bear false witness; Sukara (swine) for drunkards and stealers of gold, etc. Adopted by Buddhists it became one of the six paths or conditions of existence. Region of the wicked. On the Bardo Thodol called Narakloka. In Tibet called Dmyal-wa. See Gati. In Japan spirits of the infernal regions, subjects of the devil Oni, are called naraka.

NARASAMSA Literally, praise of men. Hindu god of sacrificial fire; messenger which brings to the gods the offerings of men. An epithet of Agni. Parallels Nairyosangha.

NARASIMHA Fourth avatar of Vishnu; half man, half lion.

NARASTHYABHARNA Human bones apron. Buddhist tantric symbol. In Tibet called Mi-rup-ge-yan or Mi-rus-pa'i-rgyan.

NARAYANA Hindu Supreme Spirit floating on the primeval waters. The Universal Soul. Mystic name of Vishnu, in which form he recalls Purusa, the primordial being from whom the world was created and the spirit which is eternal and unique. Later a name identified with Buddha.

NARCISSUS (1) In Greek mythology son of Cephisus and Liriope. For failing to return the love of Echo, Aphrodite caused him to fall in love with his own image, which he beheld in fountains and streams. Consumed by unrequited love he wasted away and was changed into the flower bearing his name which signifies made numb or put to sleep. Narcissus typifies a male who had trespassed into a woman's realm, the spring of Echo, and therefore was assaulted in a murderous way, suggesting a fertility sacrifice similar to that of Adonis, Endymion, Hylas, Pentheus. See mutilation. (2) January 28 birthday flower symbolic of coldness, self-love, stupidity; one who constantly gazes at his own image. In the language of flowers: You love yourself too well. Its painfully sweet scent believed to cause madness. In China used at New Year celebrations for good fortune for the coming year. Emblem of the vulnerable genii of the Taoist heaven. Christian symbol of the triumph of divine love over sin, eternal life over death, sacrifice over selfishness. In Greek mythology dedicated to Hades or Pluto, thus death of beautiful youth, decay that precedes new life. Worn in wreaths by the Fates. In Japan called inyo-so or suisen, flower of a hundred heads, plant of the two sexes, symbolic of festive occasions, formality, grace, joyousness, mirth, purity, spring. In Rome dedicated to Dis.

NARDAC In Swift's Gulliver's Travels title of the highest honor in the realm of Lilliput. Conferred on Gulliver for carrying off the whole fleet of the Blefuscudians.

NAREAU In the mythology of the Gilbert Islands highest deity. Born of a rock. With his daughter Kobine he made heaven and earth. Creator of the first pair, Debabou and De-ai.

NARFI (NARE, NARFE, NARI, NARVE) Literally, binder. In Norse mythology son of Lodi and Sigyn. His intestines, used to bind Loki, turned into iron.

NARI-KAMI (NARU-KAMI) Japanese thunder and lightning god. Also known as thunder woman. Patron of craftsmen, protector of trees. A tree struck by lightning becomes holy.

NARI MARIAMA (MARIANA) Hindu mother of perpetual fecundity.

NAROKHACHOMA In Buddhism one of a pair of Dakinis, the other being Simhavaktra. Sky-god goddess. Deity of the four seasons. Also known as Naro-mka-spyod-ma. In Tibet called Sarvabuddhadakini.

NAROPA In Buddhism one of the better known mahasiddhas (eighty-four great sorcerers). Shown seated, the lower part of his body covered by a tiger skin; his hair is long in a usnisa; he holds a kapala in his right hand and a patra in his left.

NARUCNICI Literally, destiny. In Bulgarian mythology deceased mothers who have become fate genii. Also called orisnici, udelnici, uresici, urisnici. Compare rodjenice.

NARWOJE In Papuan mythology cloud spirit that carries off children.

NASARGIEL Hebrew ruler of the place of torment or Hell. A fallen angel.

NASATYA AND DASRA The Asvins. Nasatya originally was an epithet applied to either of the twins as the physicians of Svarga. They apparently were born from the nose of their mother, whence Nasatya, or they may have been long-nosed (elephant) deities. In post-Vedic mythology they degenerated into the demon Naonghaitya.

NASCAKIYETL Raven creator deity of the Tlingit Indians. Uncle of the raven Yetl, of whom he is jealous and whom he desires to kill. Yetl is as hard as a rock and, when his uncle sees he cannot be killed, he places him in charge of the human race.

NASE AND AZE Japanese legendary lovers who, to avoid being separated, metamorphosed into twin pine trees. Nase means dear one or be not jealous. Another of his names is Naka-Samuta (Middle-Cool Field).

NASNAS Arabian monster who, in the form of an old man, pleads to be carried across a stream; in midstream he drowns his helper.

NASTURTIUM November 1 birth-

- day flower symbolic of patriotism. Scarlet nasturtium. Splendor.
- NASU Mazdian corpse demoness. She corrupts dead bodies.
- NASU-NO Japanese death stone. Refuge of Tamano-no-maye, fox witch, when pursued by warriors of the mirror which exposed her hideousness. Until exorcised by a virtuous monk anyone who touched the stone died instantly.
- NAT (1) Norse beneficent night goddess. Mimir's daughter, Urd's sister. Driver of the jewelled chariot (star-studded sky) drawn by Hrim Faxi. Refreshment and inspiration bringer; care and worry remover. Her first husband was Nagelfare, star deity, by whom she was the mother of Aud (riches). Her second husband was Annar, water deity, by whom she was the mother of Jord (earth). Her third husband was Delling, dawn deity, by whom she was the mother of Dagr (day). Also Nacht. (2) Genii worshiped in Burma and Siam.
- NATA Hero of the deluge myth of the Nahua Indians of Mexico. He and his wife Nena, harvest spirits, are warned by a god and escape destruction in a flood.
- NATALIE (NATHALIE) Feminine name from the Latin through the French, meaning birthday, Christmas.
- NATESA Buddhist lord of the dance.
- NATH Irish goddess of wisdom. Spouse of Naith. Gaelic word for science in general. Cognate with Neith.
- NATHAN (NAT, NATE) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning given, a gift.
- NATHANIEL (NAT, NATE, NATHANAEL) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning gift of God. (2) One of the twelve disciples of Jesus, also known as Bartholomew.
- NATIVITY The nativity of a divine (deity made) child is a common mythological incident. The child, unwanted, is exposed in an ark, chest, or harvest basket, recognized as divine by a radiant glow which surrounds him, and is guarded by a beast, bird, or peasant. See fatal child. In Christian tradition the Nativity refers to the birth of Christ at midnight on December 25 in a manger in Bethlehem. Symbols of the event are: box holly, Christmas rose (poinsettia), Christmas starwort, Christmas torch or Mary taper, Holy Family, Holy Infant in Manger, Holy Thorn of Glastonbury, rosemary, star-cross, star of Bethlehem, three Magi. In painting the setting is a stable with Joseph and Mary near the child, angels keeping guard, an ass and ox and sometimes three Magi in the background. A radiant glow surrounds the infant.
- NATROLITE Gem symbolizing feminine friendship.
- NATURE In an Italian icon typified by a naked woman with milk pouring from her breasts holding a vulture.
- Natural day. In an Italian icon typified by a winged boy in a chariot above clouds. It is drawn by four horses, one white, one black, two bay, signifying the four parts of a natural day, the rising and setting sun, noon and midnight. He carries an orb and a torch.
- NAU Egyptian primeval deity with the head of a frog.

NAUBANDHANA In Hinduism the harbor on Mount Himavat where the ark of Manu landed after the deluge.

NAUPLIUS In Greek legendary history the son of Amymone, the river goddess. A navigator who founded the town of Nauplia.

NAUSICAA In Greek mythology daughter of Alcinoos and Arete. Nausicaa (probably dawn) finds the shipwrecked Odysseus (sun) and guides him to her father's palace, where he is loaded with gifts (fertility) and provided with a ship (cloud) and equipment for his return to Ithaca. The name is from the Greek naus (ship), which equates with nous (mind, reason). In James Joyce's Ulysses, Gerty MacDowell corresponds to Nausicaa.

NAUTICAL BOX Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Mariner's Compass or Pyxis.

NAVAGVAS Hindu seers who aided Indra in the recovery of lost kine (fertile rain clouds). The name implies they won nine cows in the exploit.

NAVASARD (NAUROZ) Ancient Armenian New Year festival, which probably was celebrated in the spring with agricultural rites which commemorated the dead and aimed at an increase of rain and harvest. Later a Christian rite celebrating the harvest.

NAVE Main part of Christian churches, section west of the choir and chancel in which the general congregation assembles. Name derived from Kneph and cognate with navis (Latin for ship). The German word for nave is nachen (a skiff). Formerly the Christian Church was likened to a ship tossed by waves.

NAVEL Humanity (a ghost has no navel). Because of its shape androgyneity. Anciently the universe navel held the axis or support of the world, it was the root of the cosmic mountain or mountain on which the ark landed after the deluge. People deemed it important to discover the earth's center. See mountain. American Indians sought it as the source of the four winds. Byzantine mystics contemplated their navels, 'circles of the sun,' hoping to witness a refraction of the light streaming from sacred Mount Tabor. In Greek mythology Zeus had two eagles fly in opposite directions at the same speed to discover earth's exact center. They met at Delphi, where in Apollo's temple an omphalos guarded by two golden eagles was set up. Boundary stones in southern India of similar shape are called navel stones. The Jews designated Jerusalem the earth's center, and their sacred shield was given a navel shape. In Turkish legend the Devil, at sight of the first man created by Allah, spat at his stomach. Allah snatched out the polluted spot, and the navel is the scar.

Navel string. Controller of destiny. In primitive belief a child's spirit stays in the after-birth. If it is properly preserved, the child will prosper; if injured or lost, the child will suffer. Cherokee Indians buried a girl's navel string under a corn mortar that she might become a good baker. The Maoris, to make a woman fruitful, hung the string of a mythical ancestor on the branch of a sacred tree. In Western Australia a boy's string was dipped in water to make him a good hunter.

NAVKEY One of a class of Slavic spirits said to be souls of children who died unbaptized or born to mothers who had met a violent death. They bewitched people into drowning or attacked women in childbirth. Eventually they became water nymphs. Also called majky, mavje, navi, nejky, novjaci.

NAVY Symbolized by two anchors opposed, marine, sailor, warship.

NAYANEZGANI AND THOBADZISTSHINI Twin brothers of Navaho legend. Of the second generation of deities, their names signify Slayer of Alien Gods and Child of the Waters respectively. In a series of labors rivaling those of Heracles they cleansed the world of the man-devouring giants of the first generation, except those of cold, hunger, old age, and poverty. Their home is on a mountain in the center of Navaho country (navel of the world), where warriors pay for prowess and success in war. Probably a sun and a sea deity.

NAZARENE (NASAREE, NAZARITE) A Jew who made vows of abstinence, hence to separate oneself, consecrate oneself. Probably the worshiper of a deity named Nazarya. In later usage the term was applied disparagingly to Christ as an inhabitant of Nazareth, hence a Christian.

NAZARETH A Hebrew place name meaning flower. Here Jesus learned the carpenter's trade.

NAZI Sumerian deity who healed the phallus.

NAZIBUGASH A man of humble origin chosen as Elamite king. He was nicknamed 'son of nobody.'

NAZIT Winged serpent goddess worshiped in the region of the Nile Delta.

NDENGEI In Fiji mythology great serpent which hatched the two eggs laid by a great bird. A boy came from one, a girl from the other, and they were the parents of the human race.

NE Word root meaning born of, as in naissance, natal, new, Noel (birth of God), nucleus. Vowels are interchangeable.

NEAGO Seneca sky deity. A fawn who, when returning with its doe, waits the south wind. See Ga-oh.

NEAMHUAIN CLANN In Celtic mythology trackers for the Fenians. Probably light rays or dawn heroes.

NEBO In Old Testament sacred mountain in Moab from which Moses saw the Promised Land and where Jeremiah hid the Ark of the Covenant. (2) See Nabu.

NEBRASKA Emblem: golden-rod; motto: Equality before the Law; Nicknames: Antelope, Black Water; nickname of natives: Cornhusker.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR Conqueror who carried the Jews into captivity. King who rebuilt Babylon on such a lavish scale the Greeks numbered it glories, which included the Tower of Babel and the Hanging Gardens, among the seven wonders of the ancient world. Name signifies Nebu protect my boundaries.

NEBULE Literally, mist. A design of tooth-like projections which are separated by curved lines. Used in heraldry to denote clouds or air, night excellence.

NECESSITAS Roman goddess. Personification of the power of the immutable laws of nature. Identical with the Greek Ananke.

NECHTAN (NECHTAIN) Celtic water deity. When his wife Boann, after adultery, endeavored to prove her chastity by walking three times around Nechtan's well, three waves rose and mutilated her. When she fled she was drowned in the pursuing waters.

NECK Anatomical denomination governed by Taurus. In the Hindu Thandava and Lasya dances the nine uses of the neck are: 1- Sama, natural position, depicting prayer, meditation; 2- Nata, bringing down, depicts getting decked with ornaments, looking down; 3- Unnata, stretching up, depicts wearing ornaments, looking up; 4- Tryasra, bending to one side, depicts placing something on shoulders, sadness; 5- Rechita, shifting sideways gracefully, depicts charm; 6- Kunchita, contracting, depicts carrying a load on the head; 7- Anchita, pushing forward, depicts eagerness, combing hair; 8- Valita, turning back, depicts looking for something behind; 9- Nivrutta, pushing forward and backward, depicts looking for something ahead, the movement of birds.

NECKLACE Light, durability, excellence, riches. Dream significance: ephemeral feeling. In mythology typifies dawn, female principle, fruitfulness, moon, morning or evening star setting in the sea, the rainbow. Attribute of Amaterasu, Brisingamen, and other sky goddesses. In Buddhism a Bodhisattva ornament. When a Dharmapala ornament usually of snakes or human bones.

Broad necklace. Placed on figures in Egyptian tombs to denote royalty to distinguish them from slaves who wore cords around their necks. Also denoted submission to the gods.

NECROMANCY Evocation of the souls of the dead, black magic.

NECROPOLIS In Egyptian mythology the west, realm of the dead, hence a burying ground.

NECTAR Wine of the Greek gods, hence any delicious beverage; honey. Provider of immortality.

NEED FIRE Obtained by friction or other primitive methods and supposedly possessed peculiar virtues, especially for purging demons from cattle and horses, which were driven through the fires.

NEEDLE Feminine industry. Dream significance: spite, slander; (broken) loss of work; (falling) lawsuit, worries; (packet of) cares. In Malaya placed in the hands of a woman who has died in childbirth to prevent her from returning as a langsuvar (shrieking ghost) with open hands.

Needle, thimble, and thread.
Attribute of Saint Rosa de Lima.

NEFER-TEM Egyptian deity, nocturnal sun. Son of Ptah. God of generation worshiped at Heliopolis. Crowned with a pschent or a lotus-flame. His image was worn as a good-luck talisman.

NEHAN In Japanese Buddhism synonymous with Nirvana, which see.

NEHEB-KAU Egyptian mother goddess worshiped at the plowing festival. She supplied the souls of the dead with celestial food and drink. Portrayed as a flying serpent or as a serpent with human head, arms, and legs. Identified with Ma.

NEHES Egyptian god of wakefulness. Probably a dawn deity. Like Heka he accompanied the sun god's ship in its nightly withdrawal from earth.

NEHUSHTAN (NE-ESTHAN)
In Old Testament a therapeutic serpent or seraph. Brazen serpent set up by Moses in the wilderness to avert a plague. It was named by King Hezekiah, who contemptuously called it, "a piece of brass," when idolatrously worshiped by his subjects. Hebrew parody on the Greek neosthenios meaning with new strength.

NEIKEA Greek abstract deity. Quarrel. Descendant of Eris.

NEIL (NEAL) Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning champion, chief.

NEITH (NIT) Libyan snake goddess identical with Lamia. A self-begotten virgin earth mother adopted by the Egyptians, who identified her as mother of the sun god Ra. She supposedly lived in the thorn bush or acacia tree. Later a goddess of war and the loom. Depicted with green face and hands to typify earth. Her attributes are two arrows, a bow, a shield, a shuttle, and weaving equipment, the crown of lower Egypt. Merged into Isis and by the Greeks identified with Athena.

NEKEDZALTARA Nature powers of the Tinne Indians. Servants of Tena-ranide, the death bringer.

NEKHEBET (NECHBET) Vulture goddess of upper Egypt. Protector of the king. Sister-wife of Uazit. Portrayed as a white vulture holding a ring or other royal symbols. By Greeks identified with Eileithyia.

NE-KILST-LUSS Northwest Indian creator of the world. A beneficent raven, who obtained the sun and moon from Settin-kijash by fraud and deception for the benefit of mankind.

NEKUSIA Ancient Athenian festival of the dead, at which sacrifices were made to the great earth mother.

NEKYOMANTEION Greek oracle of the dead.

NELEUS In Greek mythology son of Poseidon and Tyro. With his twin Pelias he was left to die by his putative father Salmoneus, but lived to fulfil the prophecy that their birth would bring disaster to Salmoneus. See Exposed child. Because he refused to purify Heracles for the murder of Iphitus he was punished by the loss of all his sons except Nestor, who became a hero of the Trojan war. With Nestor he restored the Olympian Games.

NELL (NELLY) Feminine name, diminutive of Helen and its derivatives.

NELUMBO Egyptian sacred lotus. Said to be the inspiration for the Doric column.

NEMAIN (NEMAN) Irish war goddess.

NEMDA PRINCE Finno-Ugric god called old man of the hill; also northern hero. A spirit who rises again after death to lead his people when they need him in time of war. When sickness is rife among the cattle, the people say, "Northern hero has sent his warriors to cut down our cattle."

NEMEAN LION In Greek mythology offspring of the Chimera. A drought or winter demon; destroyer of herds. His killing was the first of the twelve labors assigned to Heracles in the mansion of Aries. Invulnerable to arrows, Heracles strangled him to death. Thus the rays of the spring sun (arrows) were not strong enough to kill him.

Nemean festival. Originally funeral games in honor of Archemoros; later celebrated the slaying of the Nemean lion. Parsley wreaths were awarded.

NEMED In Celtic legendary history eponymous hero of the Nemedians, early settlers of Ireland. Like Cessair, a descendant of Noah. They are said to have followed the Partholan to Ireland, and to have carried on their work and traditions. They were light and fertility deities who warred with the Fomors, darkness and drought deities, and defeated them in four consecutive battles (a seasonal myth). Then Nemed and 2,000 of his people died from a plague (fertility withered), and the remaining members were oppressed by the Fomors, who demanded as a tax two thirds of the children born to the Nemed each year to be delivered on Samhain (autumn festival). The remaining Nemedians revolted. Those who were not slain returned to the old world from which they had come. Probably indicating the return of the gods to the otherworld, or the myth may echo an early invasion of Ireland. The children delivered on Samhain suggest rites of human sacrifice and is related to the tale of the Cretan Minotaur.

NEMESIS In Greek mythology daughter of Nyx. Goddess of retributive justice. She rewarded as well as punished, but she found the world so full of sin, she came to be looked upon as an avenging power. Attended by Dice, Erinyes, Poena. To avoid the pursuit of Zeus, she assumed the form of a swan; taking the same form Zeus deceived her. The egg hatched from their union was given to Leda, and from it Helen emerged. She is portrayed as a regal woman, sometimes seated in a chariot drawn by griffins. Her attributes are: apple bough, balance and cubit, diadem, rudder, scourge, sword, weights and measures, wheel. Sometimes called Adrastia or Rhamnusia from Rhamnus in Attica, chief seat of her worship. Her name, which appears to have first been used as an epithet of Artemis while presiding over childbirth or dispensing fate, is from the Greek nemos (grove), and connotes divine vengeance for breach of a taboo. Worshiped by the Romans.

NEMETONA Brythonic goddess of war. Identical with the Gaelic Nemon.

NEMI WOOD In Roman mythology sacred wood, scene of bloody ritual, where the old priest was slain by a younger one, who succeeded as both king and priest until he was slain. Concept of fertility always dying and reborn, also the death and resurrection of the human spirit. See Golden Bough, Grove, King of the Wood.

NEMON Gaelic war goddess. The venomous. A storm deity. Identical with the Brythonic Nemetona. See Badb, Morrighu.

NENABOJ Great Father of the Wetucks Indians of New England.

The Cheat, beneficent trickster who provided mankind with beans and maize, and taught the art of the chase. His work frequently was disturbed by enemies, among whom were his brothers. Resembles Manabozho, Michabo, Nanabojoo, Napiw.

NENOKATATSU-KUNI (NENO-KUNI) Japanese land of night, land of the dead, land of roots. Nether-distant-land to which Izanami retired. Also called Yomotsu-kuni.

NEOPTOLEMUS In Greek mythology son of Achilles and Deidamia. His name means new soldier, and he was so called because he entered the Trojan war after the death of his father. Neoptolemus killed Priam, king of Troy, as he knelt in prayer, and took the Palladium, necessary for the fall of Troy. As a prize he was given Andromache, widow of Hector. He married Hermione, daughter of Helen, and was murdered by Orestes at Delphi. He was a light hero. Also called Pyrrhus because of his red hair. See Pyrrhus.

NEPALESE Enigrant monks who introduced Buddhism into Tibet.

NEPELLE In Australian mythology ruler of the heavens.

NEPHELE Greek cloud nymph. First wife of Athamas, king of Boeotia, and mother of Helle and Phryxus. Athamas, tired of her wandering nature, divorced her and married Ino, who planned the destruction of Helle and Phryxus. To circumvent the design, Nephele placed the children on the back of a winged ram with golden fleece (sun-lit cloud), given to her by Hermes. Helle fell into the sea; Phryxus reached Colchis safely. Prototype of Aebh.

Nephelae. Clouds, the restless, wandering daughters of Uranus.

NEPHESH In the cabala the animal spirit of the unjust dead which suffers for twelve months. In the occult sciences animal life and desires, the third and lowest degree of the soul.

NEPHILIM In Hebrew lore a race of demon giants. Born of fallen angels who had cohabited with daughters of men.

NEPHTHYS (NEBT-HOT, NEPTE) In Egyptian mythology daughter of Seb and Nut, sister of Isis, sister-wife of Osiris, sister-wife of Set. By Osiris mother of Anubis. Queen of night, protectress of the dead, she typified the coming into existence of the life which springs from death. Her tears for Osiris caused the inundation of the Nile. Sometimes identified with Hathor and solarized. In serpent form identified with Ma. Portrayed with horns and a solar disc. Nurse of Isis, of whom she may be a double, and of the infant Horus.

NEPRI Egyptian god of grain. Usually pictured as a fat man with ears of grain. Female form Nepret identified with Renenetet.

NEPTUNE (NEPTUNUS) (1) Ancient Italian divinity of moisture, provider of the perpetuity of springs and streams. Later a son of Saturn and Ops, husband of Salacia, and a deity of equestrian accomplishments identical with Poseidon as chief god of the sea. Portrayed as a stately elderly bearded man carrying a trident, sometimes astride a dolphin or horse. The bull was sacred to him. Name akin to Nephelē. (2) Planet eighth in order from the sun, ruler of the bronze age and of Pisces. In astro-mythology star of regeneration, bestower of intuition. Connected with cosmic consciousness, its colors are iridescent to indicate wholeness. Red typifies the father's power, the life and the fire which reappear in the lower world; blue the mother element or substance into which life enters; yellow stands for the child or new birth. Corresponds to the musical tone B flat. Pictured by a trident.

NEREID In Greek mythology any of the fifty sea-nymph daughters of Nereus and Doris. The best known are Amphitrite, Galatea, and Thetis. The Nereids personify the ripples and waves of a calm sea, specifically of the Aegean and Mediterranean seas. Attendants upon Poseidon. In art shown as lightly clad, sometimes with the lower parts of their bodies like fish, or they ride dolphins, sea horses, or other sea animals. The name is akin to Naiad.

NEREUS In Greek mythology ancient of the sea, spouse of Doris, father of the Nereids. Personification of placid waters. Kind and benevolent, he possessed the gift of prophecy and foretold that Paris would bring ill fortune upon the Trojans. Patron of distressed mariners. He is shown with seaweeds instead of hair, his great age marked by the hoary foam of breaking waves. From the word root nao, i. e. to flow.

NERGAL (NERIGAL) Assyrian and Babylonian solar deity. Husband of Eresh-kigal. From the summer solstice to the winter solstice, lord of the fires of the underworld and judge of the souls of the dead. When he returns to the upper world, he is at first benevolent; when god of the burning summer sun, he is the agent of pestilence and war. Also god of the chase. He represented the planet Mars. His titles are Girunugal (mighty one) and Lugal-meslam (king of Meslam). He appears in lion form or as a man holding a sword in one hand and a head cut off from a body in the other. His temple was red and blood stained garments were offered to him, probably a human sacrifice. The name resolves into ur-ig-al, i. e. one fire.

NERIG (NIRIG) A title of the Assyrian fire god Ninib. Also known as Uras.

NERIO In Roman mythology maiden loved by Mars. Bride of the New Year, who replaced Anna Perenna, which see.

NERO Any blood-thirsty evildoer or tyrant of extraordinary savagery. From the Roman emperor, Claudius Caesar Nero, who loved to witness the agony of his fellows. Called Antichrist.

Nero of the North. Christian II, 16th century king of Denmark.

NERRIVIK Literally, food dish. Greenland Eskimo sovereign over the souls of the dead as well as over the food of the living. She was a mortal woman carried off by a petrel. When relatives tried to save her the petrel attacked them, so they cast her into the sea. She clung to their boat and they cut off her hands. Her severed fingers transformed into whales and seals, and she sank to the bottom, where she dwells as ruler. Patroness of fishermen. Mainland Eskimos call her Sedna.

NERTHUS (HERTHA) Literally, benefactor. Teutonic goddess of fertility and peace. Her principal seat of worship was the Danish island of Zealand. By Romans identified with Terra Mater. See Njord.

NESAN First month of the Babylonian year. Sacred to Marduk and Nabu.

NESARU Caddoan Indian Great Creator. From an ear of corn he created Mother Corn, who led the human race into the light of day from the underworld. Echoes the Ishtar and Persephone descents into the lower world.

NESHAMAH In the cabala the first or highest degree of the soul; reason.

NESKEPER-AVA (NASKEPER-AVA) Finno-Ugric bee-garden mother. Also known as Muksort (bee-soul) and Neske-pas (beehive-god).

NESRECA Serbian evil fate genius. The good genius is called sreca.

NESSA In Irish legend mother of Conchobar. In one account he was her natural son by Cathbad. In another, Cathbad forced her to drink the water she had brought from the river Conchobar because it contained two worms, and the drink made her pregnant. In a third account Conchobar was her son by Factna Fathach. When Fergus mac Roich wished to marry her, she agreed provided he would resign his throne for one year to her son. He consented and, when the year passed, Conchobar had Fergus dethroned. Nessa typifies a fertility queen whose son supplanted winter. Cognate with Nissa.

NESSUS In Greek mythology centaur who, when shot with a poisoned arrow by Heracles for trying to carry off the latter's wife Deianira, avenged himself by giving Deianira his shirt dipped in the blood of his wound, telling her it would act as a love charm. Deianira gave her husband the shirt, and it caused his death. The blood-red mantle represents the angry crimson clouds in which the sun so often dies. In Dante's Inferno Nessus guides Dante and Virgil across part of the Phlegethon River.

Shirt of Nessus. Source of misfortune from which there is no escape.

NEST Chief early form of building. According to one theory, nests have arisen as an accidental result of the ecstatic dance of birds. Figuratively, any cozy place or small abode, a snugger or retreat; also a den, haunt, resort. Dream significance: (full) good-luck omen; (full of serpents) worry; (seen from the outside) birth, profit.

NESTOR Legendary king of Pylos. Son of Neleus. Oldest and most experienced of the warrior chieftains who joined the Greeks in the siege of Troy. Thus the oldest and wisest man of a class or company, a counselor.

NET (1) In Celtic mythology Fomorian war god; grandfather of Balor. (2) Snare, that which entangles mentally or morally. Emblem of the constellation Reticulum. Dream significance: (empty) poverty; (full) wealth; (torn) disappointments. In Babylonian mythology implement with which Marduk ensnared Tiamat and other chaos demons.

NETTIE (NETTA) Feminine name, Scotch diminutive of Janet.

NETTLE October 31 birthday flower with the sentiment cruelty. Symbolic of courage, envy. In the language of flowers: You are spiteful.

Burning nettle. January 27 birthday flower. Symbolic of slander.

Nettle, hellebore, and cyclamen. Composition for love philters.

NETZACH In the cabala the seventh Sephira, signifying victory or firmness.

NEVADA Emblem: sage brush; motto: All for Our Country; nicknames: Battle born, Sage Brush, Silver.

NEVILLE (NEVIL) Masculine name after a place name in Normandy and from the Latin, meaning new town.

NEVIN Masculine name from the Latin, meaning snow, and from the Teutonic, meaning nephew.

NEVISON Outlaw, thief.

NEW HAMPSHIRE Emblem: purple lilac; nickname: Granite.

NEW JERSEY Emblem: violet; motto: Liberty and Prosperity; nickname: Garden State, Jersey Blue, Mosquito State, New Spain.

NEW JERUSALEM Christian paradise, heavenly city, abode of God and his angels.

NEW MEXICO Emblem: cactus; motto: Crescit Eundo (It Increases by Going); nicknames: Sunshine, Spanish.

NEW TESTAMENT Divine knowledge.

NEWTON Masculine name after a place name, meaning new town.

NEW YEAR Personified by a naked infant boy. Universally celebrated to commemorate the completion of one cycle of life and the birth of a new cycle. Observed with regret or rejoicing, according to ethnic factors. The Babylonian feast, called Zagmuk, was held in the month of Nesan, March-April in modern calendars, to honor gods who assembled to decree the fates for the coming year. Marduk rose from his tomb, and a ram was sacrificed in expiation of the sins of the nation. In China doors and windows are decorated with paper scrolls containing mottoes and religious quotations which are expected to act as wealth charms. It is the most important festival of the year and lasts for fifteen days, beginning with the presentation of rice to heaven and earth. The procession of the cow (passing year) is held, and the festival ends with the parade of the dragon. Christians, who deplored the license of the Romans, made it a period of prayer. In Egypt the celebration coincided with the Nile flood, and the people became drunk in imitation of Hathor, whose drunkenness presumably caused the flood. In India only new foods, such as new grain, are eaten. The festival marks the turning of the sun at the winter solstice, and a great pilgrimage is made to the Ganges for purification in the sacred river. In Bengal people put on new clothes on this day in the belief that will keep them from want during the coming year. In Japan special foods are customary; a male cake is offered to the sun, a female cake to the moon. Pilgrimages are made to shrines to pray to Amaterasu for a bright and happy new year. In Islam it is the day God returns Solomon's ring, the Devil brings him fine gifts, and swallows sprinkle water on him, i. e. a day of rejoicing for the sun's return. In northern Europe cakes in boar form are made from the first sheaf. Headless spirits wander abroad. Some Occidental countries mark with elaborate balls and orgiastic behavior; bells are rung, horns are blown, toasts are made; thus sorrow for the passing year is merged into a joyous greeting for the new one.

NEW YORK Emblem: rose; motto: Excelsior; nicknames: Empire, Excelsior.

NEZAUALPILLI Literally, lord of fasts. An aspect of the Aztec deity Tezcatlipoca.

NGA-HLUT PWE Burmese Buddhist festival of purification. In some localities part of the New Year festival, in others celebrated at the end of hot weather in April. Fish, which have been stranded, are set free. This is a form of asking for pardon for sins committed during the year. Probably an inversion of sacrificial offerings, condemned by Buddhism.

NGAI Supreme deity of the Masai people of Africa.

NGAWN-WA MAGAM In Burmese religion son of Chanum and Woi-shun. With a hammer he gave the world shape and made it habitable for human beings.

NGOYAMA Burmese human-like devils with tails; they will turn on a benefactor and eat him up.

NGUYEN-HU'U-DO In Indo-China a viceroy of Tongking deified before his death as a protector and god of wisdom.

NGUYEN-QUAN Indo-Chinese greatest of spirits. Also called Huyen-thien and Tran-vu.

NHANGS Armenian monster spirits. Evil river demons. Sometimes they appear as mermaids.

NIAMH In Celtic mythology golden haired daughter of Manannan. She married Oisin and for three centuries they resided in Tir na nOg. Personification of the radiant beauty of the sea. See Divine-human marriages.

NIANG NIANG Chinese goddess of the mountain T'ai-shan.

NIBELUNG Norse subterranean dwarf, brother of Schilbung, with whom he quarreled over a just division of the estate (earth's fertility) of their father. Siegfried (sun) settled the quarrel and received from the brothers the sword Balmung (rays), with which he slayed them when they treated him treacherously.

Nibelungen (Niflungar). Folk of the mist, descendants of Nibelung, who robbed and hid earth's treasures underground until compelled to yield them to those more powerful than themselves. After Siegfried wrested their treasure he and his followers were called Nibelungen, and after the death of Siegfried the name fell to his slayers, who had taken possession of the hoard.

Ring of the Nibelungen. Ring of fertility made from the Nibelungen gold. It carried the curse of death.

NIBHAZ (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, generally understood to mean dog. (2) Avite god of darkness with the shape of a dog. Probably an evil planetary demon.

NICHOLAS (NICK, NICOL, NICOLAS) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning having a victorious army, victory of the people. In feminine form, Nicolette.

Father Nicholas. Santa Claus. Old Nick. The Devil. Perhaps an abraded form of Nicor or connected with Nickel, a German goblin. In Scotland called Nickle Ben.

NICKARD German water-monster who entered the bed chamber at night to steal the newborn child, leaving in its place a monster who usually was dumb. The remedy for the mother to get her child back was to whip the monster.

NICKNAME A contemptuous or familiar name; originally used to hide a given name. See Name. Some humorous or popular personifications of nations are: Antonio or Tony (Italian); Biddy (Irish female servant); Brother Jonathan (United States); Colin Tampon (Swiss); Fritz (German); Ivan Ivanovitch (Russian); Jacques Bonhomme, Jean or Johnny Crapaud (French); Jean Baptiste (Canadian); John Bull (English); Michel or Cousin Michael (German); Mynheer Closh or Nic Frog (Dutch); Nick the Bear (Russian); Paddy (Irish); Robert Macaire (French); Sawney (Scotch); Uncle Sam (United States).

NICODEMUS A proselyte who feared to reveal his beliefs. A Pharisee who visited Jesus by night. After the crucifixion he brought myrrh and aloes and aided Joseph of Arimathaea with the burial in the sepulchre.

NICOLO Musical instrument symbolizing youthful precocity.

NICOR Old English water god whose offspring are the Nixes or water sprites. As rain giver resembles Hnikar.

NIDABA Sumerian corn or grain goddess. Scribe of the gods, patroness of letters, originator of civilization. Sometimes represented as a forked tree or as an ear of wheat. A form of Ishtar as harvest goddess. Analogue of the Hebrew Shabboleth.

NIDANAS In Buddhist doctrine the casual nexus, sequence of events, or twelve links of the chain which bind man to the endless round of suffering of finite existence: 1- ignorance; 2- form dependent on previous behavior, 3- consciousness, 4- corporeality as an individual; 5- sensuous organism; 6- objective contact; and 7- the resulting sensation; 8- desire; 9- clinging to the pleasures of life; 10- ceaseless becoming, 11- birth and rebirth; and 12- through all inescapable misery. The whirling on the wheel of life.

NIDDHOGGE (NIDHOGGR, NIDHUG, NITHHOGG, NIGHHOGGR) Norse serpent of the underworld; corpse eater that gnaws at the roots of Yggdrasil. Symbolizes decay in nature.

NIDDLE Scandinavian song of malediction.

NIEZGUINEK Literally, imperishable. In a Slav fairy tale a plougher with twelve yoke of oxen and a magic horse of gold with eyes that flash as lightning and has the power to leap up into the clouds, the next moment descending into the middle of a field. The oxen probably typify animals of the zodiac, the horse the sun, the plougher, the supreme deity.

NIFLHEIM (HEL, NIFELHEIM, NIFLHEL) Literally, fog home. In Norse mythology the lowest of the nine worlds; underworld of misty darkness and freezing cold. Northern abode of those who died of old age or disease. Ruled over by Hela. Site of the well Hvergelmir, from which flowed the Elivagar. Opposite of Muspelheim. Cognate with Cuthah, Hades, Hell.

NIFLUNGS Norse children of mists. See Nibelungen.

NIGEL Masculine name from Nigellus, a Latinization of Neil, and meaning black.

NIGHT Synonymous with darkness, death, evil, winter. Dream significance: (clear) happiness, success; (dark) bad luck. Symbolized by bat, black, black mice, crescent moon, poppy, the musical tone d, stars. Personified by Artemis, Diana, Morpheus, Somnus, woman draped in dark blue powdered with stars. In light-darkness myths portrayed as a lustful female who overcomes or ravishes the sun. Among Central American Indians a place of repose. In Egyptian mythology the mother of all things. Sun worshipers believed the soul of the dead passed into a division of night where the privileged rode on the ship of Ra. In Hebrew lore symbolizes adversity, uncertainty, tumult. According to the Spanish mystic, Saint John of the Cross, condition of the soul where one attains union with God.

Night blooming cereus. Transient beauty.

Nightmare. In folklore evil spirit which oppresses people during sleep. Frequently described as a female who attacks men.

Night owl. Prowler.

Night raven. Solitude.

Nightshade. January 23 birthday flower. Symbolic of death, obscurity, skepticism, sorcery, witchcraft. In the language of flowers: Your thoughts are dark.

NIGHTINGALE Anticipated happiness, sweetness; also a bad omen, forlornness, unrequited love. See Philomela. In Japan called uguisu. Gay singer, herald of spring. Its note is said to repeat, "Hokke-kyo," Japanese name of the Buddhist scriptures, Lotus of Truth. In art associated with the plum blossom.

NIHANCAN American Plains Indian trickster hero of cosmogonic events.

NIHON In Japanese mythology the birthplace of Amaterasu, the sun-goddess. Name used as a charm against evil.

NIKE Greek goddess of victory. Daughter of Pallas and Styx. She is winged, holds a laurel and palm branch, and stands on a ball. A temple to her still remains on the Acropolis. Corresponds to the Roman Victoria.

NIKKO Famous Japanese temple where three snow white horses are kept for purposes of divination.

NIKKO-ZEN Japanese peasant ware. Tray of the cheapest lacquer, which the law compelled peasants to use.

NIKOLAI Russian saint, miracle worker. Worshiped by Siberian tribes as a protective spirit of those who travel by water.

NIKUR (NIK) Scandinavian water spirit, who in the middle ages became Saint Nicholas, patron of sailors.

NILE Egyptian celestial river; bestower of fertility and increase. River in which the dead were buried. See water burial. Its god Hapi is depicted as a man with female breasts. In later myths its inundation is said to be caused by the tears of Isis, or the river is said to be an emanation from Osiris, who visited Isis (earth) annually in the form of an inundation; thus a productive and destructive power. Personified by a hermaphrodite crowned with papyrus, wearing a girle of sailors and fishermen, carrying a tray on which are vases of water and lotus buds. Behind the tray are staves, i.e. pillars of Shu (heaven). According to the Greeks Nilus, son of Oceanus and Tethys was the river's god. See Androgynous deities.

Nile vase. Canopic jar. Filtering jar of Kneph; purification of the soul.

NILTSI In Navaho tradition the wind who saves many heroes by whispering advice in their ears. Giver of the breath of life to mankind.

NIMBU Tree of good omen in India; wards off the evil eye.

NIMBUS Authority, dignity, divinity, glory, martyrdom, sanctity. Typifies celestial light. Represented as a circle, hexagonal, square, or triangle, and placed behind the heads of deities or sacred personages. The square, symbolizing earth, usually distinguishes mortals. As a symbol of power assigned by the Byzantines to Satan. See halo.

Nimbus with three rays or bars upon a field. God the Father.

NIMROD (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning impiety, rebellion, strong. (2) King of Babel, deified and identified with Mar-duk. According to the Old Testament a grandson of Ham and son of Cush, who gave him the garments which God had furnished Adam and Eve on leaving the Garden of Eden. These clothes rendered the wearer invincible, and Nimrod became the first mortal ruler of the whole world. He set up idols and enthroned himself for worship as the supreme deity. To display his power he ordered the building of the Tower of Babel, which caused God to reveal his strength. Proverbial from earliest times as a mighty hunter, his name has become a synonym for any daring or outstanding hunter.

NIMUE Enchantress in Malory's Morte d'Arthur; fairy who imprisoned Merlin and who became the wife of Pelleas after Ettarre had scorned him. A later aspect of Rhiannon; another form of Vivien, Lady of the Lake.

NINA (NINETTA) (1) Feminine name, Russian diminutive of Anna. A variant for Cinderella. (2) Babylonian fish goddess. A fertility mother. Perhaps identical with Belit-sheri and Damkina; later identified with Ishtar.

NINAMASKUG Sumerian lord of the cattle stall; shepherd demon. The goat upon which sin was poured out was sacred to him. Parallels Azazel.

NINAZU Sumerian god of healing. A sun deity in decline and lord of Arallu, the underworld. Consort of Ereshkigal. Also a name of Ereshkigal as mother goddess in the underworld.

NIN-BUBU Sumerian god of sailors. An aspect of Ea.

NINDUBARRA Sumerian god of shipmenders. An aspect of Ea.

NINE The absolute, completeness, end of a cycle, perfection (being the cube of three). Also symbolic of immutable truth inasmuch as it contains the peculiar property of ever producing itself, viz: twice $9 = 18$, and $1 + 8 = 9$; $3 \times 9 = 27$, and $2 + 7 = 9$, ad infinitum. Mystical number; from earliest times the number of heavens, hells, rings of fertility (reincarnations), etc. By mystics called the metaphysician. It is a lucky number, governs the arts, and establishes the balance of spiritual and material things. It contains the synthesis of all colors, and corresponds to the Hebrew letter teth and the zodiacal Sagittarius, house of higher thought or philosophy. Its planetary equivalent is Neptune, denoting the hidden or mysterious. Its rhythm suggests attainment, goal of existence, seed of a fresh beginning. Character traits: artistic expression, geniality, integrity, steadfastness, universal love. According to the Pythagoreans number of lunar increase or wisdom, eight being the number of solar increase. The universe of American Indians contains nine storeys, four above, four below, and earth in the center, suggesting the eight directions and center. Quiche Indian diviners, whose months consisted of twenty days each, divided them into nine good, nine bad, two indifferent. In Celtic lore the number of the mothers of Heimdal. The Christian choir of angels in heaven is nine; Hell has a corresponding hierarchy, and its gates are three of brass, three of iron, and three of adamantine rock. A novena is an act of worship continued through nine days; ecclesiastical architects recognize nine crosses: altar, consecration, marking, pectoral, pendent over altar, processional, reliquary, roods in lofts, spire. Early Egyptian astronomers identified nine celestial spheres. The Greek archons and Muses numbered nine. In the deluge Deucalion's ark tossed about for nine days before it landed on the top of Mount Parnassus. Hebrew number of going forth, premonition, regeneration, spirituality, voyaging. In the cabala, device with which He sealed the North when He contemplated it on His right; equivalent of the name VIII. The nine Norse worlds are: Muspelheim, fire world, highest world, located in the south; Asaheim, abode of celestial deities; Ljosalfaheim, realm of light elves in the east; Vanaheim, mansion of ocean deities; Mannaheim or Midgard, home of man; Jotunheim, underworld of giants; Svartalfaheim, realm of dark elves in the west; Helheim, realm of the dead; Niflheim, the lowest of all, world of mist and ice in the far north. In Roman legendary history Lars Porsena swore by nine gods: Hercules, Juno, Mars, Minerva, Saturn, Summanus, Tinia, Vediovis, Vulcan. The nine gods of the Sabines were: Aeneas, Aesculapius, Bacchus, Fides, Fortuna, Hercules, Romulus, Santa, Vesta.

Nine of diamonds. The curse of Scotland; perhaps because of its likeness to the Stair coat of arms, as the first earl was hated for his connection with the Glencoe massacre. In one account the order for the massacre was written on the card.

Nine tripod caldrons. In China caldrons made from tribute metal sent from the nine provinces to the Yellow Emperor Yu. Symbolic of authority, represented control of the country by the holder.

Nine worthies, The. Three Christians: King Arthur, Charlemagne, Godfrey of Bouillon; three Jews: David, Joshua, Judas Maccabaeus; three Pagans: Alexander, Hector, Julius Caesar; all heroes of romances.

Ninth chasm, eighth circle. In Dante's Inferno where schismatics are punished with fearful mutilations, surpassing the horrors of war.

Ninth circle. In Dante's Inferno formed by the frozen waters of Cicytus, into which all the rivers of Hell pour. Those who have done violence to their kin and those who have betrayed their country are punished here. It is at the center of the whole material universe, where Dis, or Lucifer, is confined.

Ninth day of the month. Among American Indians chosen by malicious witches as the one on which evil designs would be most effective. In Babylon and Sumer a day of mourning and wailing, day on which sackcloth was worn.

Possession is nine points of the law. The nine points, which give a person every advantage short of actual right, are: 1- a good cause; 2- good counsel; 3- a good deal of money; 4- good patience; 5- a good judge; 6- a good jury; 7- a good lawyer; 8- a good witness; and 9- good luck.

NINE HUNDRED NINETY NINE
In cabalism symbolizes intuitive wisdom.

NIN ELLA In Babylonian mythology consort of Ea. Great lady of the waters; a virgin mother.

NINETEEN Lucky, because it consists of one and nine, both lucky numbers. Golden number; to close a nineteen year cycle reconciling solar and lunar time, Apollo visited earth during the season from the vernal equinox until the rising of the Pleiades, was newly married and crowned, and played on his harp and danced every night. The Greeks called this cycle, in which the stars return to the same point, the Great Year. The number is commemorated at Stonehenge in a semi-circle of nineteen socket-holes, perhaps representing twelve months plus seven days. In Sumer the nineteenth day was that of the wrath of Gulu, one of mourning, supplication, and wailing.

NINEVEH Literally, dwelling of Ninus. Great metropolis of the ancient world, called bloody city, city of thieves, mistress of the East. Because of her great luxury and wickedness, the prophet Jonah warned that the city would become a dry waste, a prophecy which came true at the death of Ashurbanipal.

NINGAL Literally, great lady. Assyriac-Babylonian moon goddess, wife of the moon god Sin. Worshiped especially at Ur. Identical with Nana.

NINGIRSU Sumerian agricultural deity; son-husband of Bau. Later a war god fighting Yamutbal and other drought monsters. Probably identical with the solar Ninib or Ninurta. Also called En-Mersi, which appears to be a name of Tammuz. Depicted as a goat, as a lion-headed eagle, or as a lion with a bough in his front claws. Analogue of Ahura-Mazda, Indra, Marduk.

NINGISHZIDA (GISHZIDA)
Sumerian beneficent vegetation deity. Later a serpent-dragon in the train of Tiamat. With Ninsubur a guardian of the gate of Anu. Patron of medicine. His emblem, a snake coiled around a staff remains the emblem of doctors. Like his mother, Ereshkigal, he is identified with the constellation Hydra. Prototype of Asclepius.

NING SANG Same as Nphan Wa, which see.

NINGYO In Japanese legend, fisher-woman, mermaid, denizen of the sea. Any woman who eats her flesh gains perpetual youth and beauty.

NINHURSAG (NINHARSAG, NINKHURSAG) Sumerian virgin mother; lady of the mountain; goddess of childbirth. Also worshiped as Aruru, Belit-ilani, Mama, Nintud.

NINI-ANTEH In Indonesian mythology the little girl in the moon. Analogue of Bil.

NINIB (NERIG, NINEB, NIN-IP, NIRIG) Assyriac-Babylonian solar deity. First born of Ea. In early myths the morning and spring sun, beneficent deity of agriculture. Later a god of the fiery noon-day sun, a drought and war deity, lord of the south. His planetary significance corresponds to Saturn as ruler of the winter solstice. At Nippur worshiped as son of Bel.

NINIGI (NINIGI-NO-MIKOTO) In Japanese mythology founder of the imperial house. The prosperity man. Grandson of Amaterasu, sun-goddess, he descended from heaven and defeated O-kuni-nushi, ruler of Idzumo, and became divine ruler of Japan. Father of Hiko-hohodemi and great grandfather of Jimmu Tenno, the first human sovereign of Japan. The members of the royal family are mortal because his wife was Konohana-sakuya-hime, goddess of blossoming trees, whose gift was beauty but short life. His three insignia of power were the mirror, jewel, and sword (wisdom, technique, and strength), which became the insignia of his descendants.

NINKARNUNNA Sumerian god; barber of Ninurta.

NINKARRAKA Babylonian goddess of childbirth and healing. Invoked against slanderers. The dog, as defender of homes, is associated with her. Identified with Gula.

NINKASI Sumerian wine goddess. She aided Lugalbanda in rescuing the tablets of fate from the demon Zu. Sometimes described as a god corresponding to Dionysus.

NIN-KI An aspect of the Babylonian goddess Damkina as lady of the earth.

NINLIL Sumerian virgin mother. Sister-wife of Enlil. Ruler of Margidda (Ursa Major), the wagon star or rope of heaven. Frequently shown with a child. Identical with Aruru, Ishtar.

NINMAH Literally, mighty queen. Babylonian virgin mother. Her attribute is a dove. Identical with Mah, Mama.

NIN-SHACH Babylonian war god. Personification of the destructive influences of the sun.

NINSUBUR Sumerian underworld deity. Messenger of Ishtar. With Ningishzida guards the gate of Anu. Like Tammuz, identified with the constellation Orion, faithful shepherd of the heavens. Identical with Ili-abrat, Papukkal.

NINSUN Babylonian goddess of maternity. Mother of Gilgamesh. Depicted as a cow. Identified with Nana.

NINSU-UTUD Sumerian goddess who heals toothaches.

NINTOKU Legendary Japanese emperor noted for his wisdom and benevolence. Deified after his death. Son of Ojin. When the people of Japan suffered poverty, for three years he remitted all taxes and forced labor, although during that time the palace became dilapidated and rain leaked through the roof.

NINTU (NINKU, NINTUD, NINTUR) Sumerian great mother. Earth goddess. Deity of childbirth. Mate of Enki, mother of Tagtug. Shown with a suckling child. Sometimes depicted as half serpent with a horn on her head, sometimes as a mermaid. Identical with Bau, Ishtar, Nin-hursag, Ninkarraka.

NIN-UR (NIN-GALA) Babylonian mother goddess. Lady of Ur; consort of Nannar.

NINURTA (NIMURTA, NINURASH) Sumerian solar deity. Son of Enlil or Bel and Innini. God of the spring and morning sun, creator of the world. In later texts a mighty hunter and war god, who slays the chaos dragon Mushussu and the storm eagle Zu, whose rapacious claws become his emblem. As a war god called Zamama and identified with the constellation Aquila. His weapons were the eagle-headed Sharur and the panther-headed Shargaz, cyclones. As a twin-god who opens the morning gates he is called Etalak and Latarak and identified with Nin-girsu and Ninsubur. Called Sakut as god of sunrise and Nikilim (Ninkilim) as lord of swine, whose meat was tabu to his worshipers except at his festival. As a deity who dies each year with perishing vegetation he was supplanted by Tammuz. Probably the origin of the name Nimrod. Identical with Lugalbanda, Nergal, Tishpak.

NINUS According to the Greeks the legendary founder of Nineveh. Husband of Semiramis. Probably male form of Nina.

Ninus' tomb. In a poem by Ovid place where Pyramus and Thisbe, lovers, agreed to meet. Thisbe arrived first and was frightened away by a lioness which had killed an ox. In fleeing she dropped her veil. When Pyramus came and found only the bloody garment he killed himself in despair. Thisbe returned, found his dead body under a mulberry tree, and died of grief. Since then the mulberry bears red fruit. A time myth.

NIOBE In Greek mythology the daughter of Tantalus and wife of Amphion of Thebes. Her pride in her seven sons and seven daughters led her to taunt Leto, who had only two children, Apollo and Artemis, who, to avenge the insult to their mother, killed all Niobe's offspring. In pity Zeus changed Niobe into stone, in which form she continued to weep. A personification of maternal sorrow. She represents winter, the slain children are the snowdrifts and icicles vanishing before the warmth of summer. The tears of Niobe may symbolize the melting ice and snow. The name may be traced to snu (to flow), which appears in the Sanskrit Nyava.

NIO-SAN In Japanese Buddhism two guiding kings or spirits. Usually fierce looking, one red, one green. They guard the sacred enclosure of a shrine, one on each side of the gate Nio-mon (Two-deva-gate). Individually they are called Sadaijin (left minister) and Udaijin (right minister). Sadaijin also is called Yadaijin (arrow minister) because he holds a bow and arrow. In pre-Buddhist Japan they were revered as powerful court guardians. Identified with the Sanscrit Vajrapani.

NIOU The scented malicious rival of the tender-hearted Kaoru in the Genji Monogatari.

NIPA Algonquin moon goddess; lady of night, death, cold, and sleep.

NIPINOUKHE AND PIPOUNOUKHE (NIPIN AND PIPOUN)

In Algonquin mythology two brothers who shared the world between them. When their period of stay expired, each went over to the locality of the other. Nipinoukhe was accompanied by birds, heat, verdure, and he restored beauty to the world; Pipounoukhe, accompanied by cold winds, ice, snow, laid waste. Personifications of summer and winter. Resemble Castor and Pollux.

NIPPON Native name of Japan. In modern Japanese understood to mean fountain or source of light.

NIRA An obscure Babylonian deity. Son of Ea, god of the deep.

NIRITU Phoenician form of the great mother goddess Baau. Depicted as half woman, half serpent.

NIRMANAKAYA Earthly level of Buddhist manifestation; the ascetic body of a Buddha; home of Manusibuddhas. Compare Dharmakaya, Sambhogakaya.

NIRRTI Literally, de cease or dissolution. Vedic goddess presiding over death. A wife who has been degraded in position is regarded as her representative. Dice, sleep, and evil things are associated with her.

NIRVANA Literally, blowing out. Oblivion to care, external reality, or pain induced by intoxication or joy; ecstasy or that which induces such a state. From the Hindu belief of final emancipation, extinction of the flame of life; absorption into the absolute. In Buddhism the union of Heruka (compassion) and Nairatma (knowledge), which leads to the realization of the nothingness of existence, results in Nirvana or Mahasukha. Eternal bliss, extinction through enlightenment. The dying out in the heart of the threefold fire of dosa (hatred), moha (delusion), and raga (passion). Thus, arriving at perfection, the human soul is blown out like a lamp, freed from the necessity of future transmigrations. Ideal and goal of all religious effort. In theosophy the third plane of the solar system; liberated soul, non-individual being.

NISAN First month of the Hebrew sacred year; seventh month of the civil year. Approximates April. Called Abib before the captivity.

NISHAPUR (NISHAPOOR) Moslem beloved city. The perfumer of souls, where the Adzan was chanted for the destruction of Genghis Khan by hordes.

NISHTIGRI Hindu earth mother; wife of Dyaus.

NISROCH The name of Asshur when in eagle form.

NISSA A nymph in Greek legend who was the mother of the sun. Cognate with Nessa.

NISSE Danish household spirits. They are described as infants with the faces of old men wearing grey dress and pointed cap. Usually favorably disposed to members of a household.

NISSYEN Literally, lover of peace. In Brythonic legend son of Penardun. Brother of Evnis-syen, lover of strife. Half brother of Bran, fertility lord.

NISUS (NISOS) (1) In Greek legend king of Megara. He had one purple (or golden) hair, on which his life depended. When King Minos of Crete attacked his city, Scylla, daughter of Nisus, fell in love with the invader and cut the lock. Nisus was transformed into a sea-eagle, which incessantly pursued the bird Ciris, into which Scylla had been changed. Hero of a time and fertility myth resembling Panemerios, Q're, Samson. (2) In Virgil's Aeneid son of Hyrtacus. Companion of Aeneas. With his friend Euryalus he enters the enemy's camp at night, but is detected by the Rutulians. Nisus is slain when he unsuccessfully tries to save Euryalus who has been captured. Hero of a light myth.

NITHHOGGR (NIDHOGGR) Scandinavian underworld serpent demon. Typifies darkness or winter.

NITHUD Legendary king of Sweden who captured the fairy-smith Voland. An agricultural lord.

NITNE KAMUI Ainu evil spirits, devils. Compare Wen kamui.

NITSIR In Babylonian mythology the mountain on which the ark of Pir-na-pishtim landed after the deluge.

NIU (1) In the Chinese zodiac the Ox, six stars in the head of Aries and the hinder part of Sagittarius in northern quadrant, winter season. Represented by the ox and the element metal. A day of bad omen. (2) In Egyptian mythology the sultry air. With his mate Nit the fourth pair of the Egyptian ogdoad.

NIU LANG Shepherd boy of Chinese legend, lover of Weaving Damsel. See Ch'ien Niu.

NIX In Teutonic mythology a water sprite able to assume human form; sometimes appears as half human, half fish. Possesses the gift of prophecy, is fond of music, and sometimes joins the dances of mortals. Usually malevolent, frequently abducting humans, but capable of being appeased by presents. Feminine form usually nixe, nixie, nixy.

NJORD (NIORD, NJORTH, NOR-DUR) Norse ruler of the winds and summer sea whose abode was Noatun. Dispenser of riches, hence the expression, "Rich as Njord." A Vanagod. After the war with the Aesir he, his son Frey, and his daughter Freya were given as hostages to the Aesir in exchange for Hoenir and Mimir. In Asgard Skade chose him for her husband by his feet. When she was with him she wearied of the sea and longed for the forests and mountains where she might hunt. For a while husband and wife spent nine days and nights in the mountains and an equal time at the sea until finally they separated, probably reflecting a separation of summer and winter or an historical fact, the uncongenial association of a tribe of seafarers with a tribe of huntsmen. In one adventure he rescues Frey, who has been captured by the giants of Jotunheim, thus water releases growth. Probably worshiped originally as a female deity (Nerthus). Source of the word north. Some state the name means dancer (from the Sanscrit nart), and that the priests and priestesses who represented Njord and Skade carved out their ritual with bare feet. The name also is interpreted to mean benefactor.

NOACHITE A Freemason, from the Scottish rite in which one who has taken the 21st degree is said to be of the "very ancient Order of Noachites," which supposedly originated with Peleg, chief architect of the tower of Babel.

NOAH (NOE) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning peace, rest, radiance. (2) In Old Testament second founder of the human race. Patriarch. Born a shining child (sun) and so perfect, he came from the womb circumcised (mature). His grandfather Methuselah warned Lamech his father to keep the infant's real name a secret to prevent evil magicians from doing him harm. Until after the flood he was called Menachem the comforter. In his 600th year he was delivered from death in the deluge because of his righteousness. Directed by God he built an ark of gopher wood, on which he sheltered his family and a pair of every living thing. In Priestly version the flood lasted a solar year; in Jehovist version it lasted forty days and forty nights. Noah sent a white raven to see if land were exposed anywhere. The raven found a corpse floating on the water; it began to eat the body, and its plumage turned black. Then Noah sent forth a dove, which returned with an olive branch, so Noah knew the waters had abated. Again he sent forth a dove, which did not return, and Noah knew it had found land. (Into the middle ages seamen released birds to determine in which direction land lay.) Mount Ararat in the Caucasus usually is given as the resting place of the ark. Upon landing (a form of rebirth) Noah offered the Thanksgiving sacrifice. He invented agricultural implements and became a husbandman (fertility deity). When he discovered the vine he became drunk on the juice. In his drunken condition he visited his wife's tent. His youngest son Ham told Japheth and Shem about the nakedness (brilliance) of their father, and they turned their heads and respectfully covered him (Conveyed him to the land of night. Thus Japheth and Shem typify the gloaming, probably sunlit clouds.) Noah cursed Ham for his disrespect and made him a servant to his brothers (deity of darkness). He divided the earth by lot among his three sons. To Ham went the rule of the hot south, Africa; to Japheth the cold north, Europe; to Shem the temperate middle, Asia. The Noah-Ham myth may echo the mutilation motif, as in the Uranus-Cronus story. In the original version Noah may have been made drunk by his viniculture son, and then castrated. In Moslem tradition the ass was slow in boarding the ark, and Noah called, "Hurry even though Satan be with you." The Devil accepted this as an invitation and was saved. God removed two of the Pleiades and water spilled from heaven. Later, to fill the holes, He took two stars from the Great Bear. For this reason the Bear chases the Pleiades, but the stars will not be recovered until Judgment Day. The waters that arose from earth were hot because God passed them through Gehenna. Except for those on the ark, the giant Og, the monster reem, and the fishes only survived the flood. Once, while Noah fed the lion who was seasick, the animal bit and lamed Noah. See lame king under king. A book encased in a jeweled box (starlit sky holding the book of fate) which had once belonged to Adam was on board. In the darkness the jewels became brilliant and illuminated the ship. The box sometimes is identified as the philosopher's stone. Noah died in his 950th year. His symbols are the ark, crow, dove with olive twig in beak, raven, vine. His story is related to the flood story in the Gilgamesh epic, which has been borrowed from an early Sumerian account in which Ziusudra is the hero. Other flood heroes resembling Noah are: Deucalion, Jaik-Khan, Kezer-Tshingis, Lif, Manu, Noj, Pairekse, Schal-Jime, Utnapish-tim. In English mystery-play pageants Noah and his wife are popular characters. Noah, the convivial toper fights with the Devil in the ark and beats him. Noah's wife is a sharp-tongued, ill-tempered shrew, who makes Noah's life on the ark miserable.

Noah's Ark (Noetic Ark). (1) House, retreat, sanctuary. Vessel which carries the sun through the period of darkness. According to the cabala a means of transmitting the true knowledge concerning the mystery of sex. The bride, wife, mistress, who, with the consent of God, sheltered Noah. See Ark, Church.

(2) Constellation Camelopardalis, also known as the Giraffe, in the Northern Sky. (3) A cloud formation shaped like the hull of a ship; if it extends east and west dry weather is expected; if it extends north and south, wet weather is expected.

Noah's Dove. Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Columba.

Noah's Goblet. Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Crater.

Noah's Raven. Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Corvus.

NOATUN Literally, place of ships. In Norse mythology the heavenly mansion of the Vanagod Njord.

NOBEL Lion in a medieval beast epic. Typifies royalty.

NOBILITY Symbolized by frankincense. In an Italian icon personified by a woman gravely dressed carrying a spear and a miniature Minerva.

NOBLE PATH In Buddhism the eightfold excellent way: right conduct, right contemplation, right effort, right faith, right occupation, right resolve, right speech, right self-concentration.

NOBORI RYU Japanese ascending dragon. Compare Kudari Ryu. Nobori. Japanese festival banners.

NOBUNAGA Japanese liberator. He involved Japan in civil war out of patriotism and freed the nation from the despotism of warrior priests and shoguns without any desire for the title of shogun for himself.

NO CHA Chinese hero who was six feet high when seven years of age. He performed miraculous deeds with his magic bracelet, which he was able to increase in size and use as a weapon of attack. Probably a personification of storm.

NOCNITZ Night hags of Russian folklore. They torment children by tickling them, sucking their blood, or simply by disturbing their sleep.

NODONS Brythonic deity identified with the Irish Nuada. Probably identical with the Roman Mars.

NCEL (1) A masculine and feminine name from the Latin through Old French meaning natal or birthday, Christmas Day, born on Christmas Day. (2) A shout of joy at Christmas time signifying the birth of God.

NOH EK Mayan Venus or great star.

NOIDDE (NOITA) Among the Lapps a shaman and sacrificing priest. Necessary medium in the consultation of spirits. Provided with reindeer and looked after in every way, as it is believed he might bring about misfortune if he were not served. A seer, whose tutelary genius is called a sueje (shadow).

NOLJIN Buddhist mountain deities whose king is Kubera.

NOJ Builder of the ark in Central Asian flood story. Identical with Noah. See Argalan-Zon.

NOKOMIS Algonquin earth goddess. Grandmother of Chibiabos and Manabozho. Prototype of Ataentsic. In Longfellow's poem Hiawatha, the daughter of the Moon. She falls to earth and becomes the grandmother of the hero Hiawatha.

NOMAN A name used by Odysseus to effect his escape from Polyphemus. In Greek, Ouis.

NOMI NO SUKUNE Japanese legendary wrestler, revered as the patron of wrestlers. Because he prevailed upon the emperor to substitute clay figures for human sacrifices at the tumulus of imperial personages, he was renamed Hashi-ne-Omi and worshiped as the patron of clay workers.

NOMOS Greek abstract divinity of social institutions; law.

NONA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning ninth.

NONAE CAPROTINAE In Roman antiquity the feast which women held in honor of Juno on July 7th.

NO-NO-KAMI Japanese god of the fields and plant life.

NON-TANTRIC BUDDHIST FORM Deity in mild manifestation; one head and two arms.

Non-tantric symbols. Asoka (red flower), atapatra (parasol), cakra (wheel), campa (white flower), candra (moon), cintamani (flaming pearl), dhvaja (banner of victory), ghanta (bell), jambhara (lemon), kalasa (vase), khakkhara (alarm staff) khatvanga (wand), kolbok (cushion), lungta (airy horse), mala (rosary), mayurapiccha (vessel with peacock feather), myrobalan (fruit), naga (snake), nakula (mongoose), padma (lotus), pasa (noose), patra (begging bowl), pustaka (book), ratna (jewel), sankh (conch shell), surya (sun), swastika, trikona (triangle), triratna (three jewels), Utpala (blue lotus), vina (lute).

NONURAGAMI Sun deity of the Tarahumara Indians of Mexico.

NOODLES Confusion, longevity.

NOOGUMEE In Micmac legend the great whale who is Glooscap's servant and on whose back Glooscap travels.

NOON Symbolizes middle age, summer; symbolized by the musical tone C.

NOOSE Hanging, trap. Buddhist non-tantric symbol called pasa; used to gather the unconverted into the fold. In Hinduism the fetter with which sinners are bound. Symbolic of disease.

NOPH Old Testament name for the city of Memphis.

NOR (NORVE) Norse giant, father of night. Probably an aspect of Mimir. Nor is identical with Nox (night).

NORA (NOREEN, NORENE) Feminine name, diminutive of Eleanor, Honora, Leonora.

NORAGHE One of a type of prehistoric complex circular or elliptical stone structures found on the island of Sardinia. They have been identified as dwellings, forts, sun temples, tombs.

NORBERT Masculine name from the French, meaning brightness.

NORDRE In Norse mythology the dwarf presiding over the northern region; one of the four appointed by the gods to support the sky.

NORITO In Shinto ritual prayers to deities.

NORMA (1) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning pattern, normal, the rule. (2) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Level, Rule, Square.

NORMAN (NORM) Masculine name from Old English Northman, alluding to native of Normandy.

NORN (IN PLURAL FORM NOR-NIR) In Norse mythology one of the three giantesses who presided over the destinies of gods and men. Their abode was under the Yggdrasil beside Urdar's well, from which they drew water to sprinkle the tree and keep it from decay. Originally only one existed, by the Norse called Urth, by the Anglo Saxons called Wyrd. She was feared as the goddess of doom. When two others were added their names were: Urth (past) who bestowed evils upon the world; Verdandi (present), a bestower of blessings; Skuld (future), to bestow future blessings. Like the Fates of classical mythology they were conceived to be spinners of the thread of life. Probably the source of the three weird sisters in Macbeth. The term has been extended to include women who supposedly possess the powers of magic and second sight. See Disir.

NORNA (NYRNA) Feminine name from the Swedish, meaning to tell secretly, warn or forewarn. From Norn (fate).

NORNAGEST In a Norse legend a stranger in Norway related to King Olaf, a Christian, that three prophetic women had visited his cradle; two said he would be greater than any of his kindred; the third said he would live only as long as a candle burning beside him was unconsumed. His father extinguished the candle and hid it until Nornagest became a grown man, then he gave it to his son. Olaf persuaded Norna-gest to be baptised. Nornagest agreed and lit the candle, saying he was 300 years old. After his baptism the candle flickered out and he died. Probably a pre-Christian sun hero. Compare Meleager.

NORRIS Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning horseman.

NORTH The inauspicious quarter; realm of darkness, night. Symbolizes the mysterious, the unknown. Mansion of frost and storm deities. In occult sciences signifies winter, the lower half of the body, death and war, the musical tone D. Symbolized by an arrow with ornamental head crossed below by perpendicular lines. In an Italian icon represented by a mature man of proud aspect, ruddy complexioned with fair hair, blue eyes, white armor. He is about to draw his sword. The sky is cloudy and there is frost and snow. Universally in mythology the location of the pole star or world axis. Also the abode of evil powers. For the colors assigned to the direction see under color. In Celtic mythology land where the moon, the universal mother or white goddess, imprisons the dead sun-king, thus from this quarter the sun never shines or returns. In China ruled by the Tortoise or Dark Warrior; symbolic of yin, the negative principle, and the element water. Controls the kidney and bladder. Seat of the Shih, constellations Hsu, Niu, Nu, Pi, Tou, Wei. In Christianity assigned to Satan. Typifies barbarianism, lack of faith, spiritual darkness. The part of the church which is to the left of a person facing the principal altar. Direction which Hawaiian medicine men and Hindu diviners face when observing the heavens or flight of birds for omens. Illustrated by Kubera with elephant. In Japan guarded by the far-hearing Bishamon. Among Zuni Indians the left, source of strength.

North Carolina. Emblem: dogwood; motto: Esse Quam Videri (To Be Rather Than To Seem); nicknames: Old North, Tar Heel, Turpentine.

North Dakota. Emblem: wild prairie rose; motto: Liberty and Union Now and Forever, One and Inseparable; nicknames: Flickertail, Sioux.

Northeast. In China and Japan regarded an unlucky direction in which to move one's home, as it is the direction of the stone home of the devil. When one is moving a place in another direction should be chosen. In India illustrated by Isana with bull.

Northern Cross. (1) In Christian tradition the cross of Calvary. (2) Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Cygnus or the Swan.

Northern Crown. Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Corona Borealis or Crown of Seven Stars.

Northern Bear. Russia.

Northern Gate of the Sun. The sign of Cancer, or summer solstice; so called because it marks the northern tropic.

Northern lights. Aurora Borealis.

Northern Wagoner. Genius presiding over Charles' Wain or the Great Bear.

North pole. In Siberian mythology the universe pillar where the profane may not put their feet. Navel of the world. Seat of cosmic justice where sit judges of the dead.

North star. Widely revered as the cosmic throne of the supreme, upright, unbiased, unwavering divine judge. The great male principle. Eye of heaven, accurate pivot of the universe, hence, "constant as the north star." Nickname of the state of Minnesota. In Babylonian mythology the pole about which the firmament revolves. Among Finno-Ugrics called Boahje-naste, nail of the sky. Also called Veralden-tshuold, pillar of the world. By Siberians designated golden pillar, iron pillar, lone post, etc., and held to be sky-supporting. Animal sacrifices were made to it, and pillars were erected which were worshipped as the representation of the deity.

Northwest. In India illustrated by Marut or Vayu with gazelle.

North wind. In Algonquin tradition the blowing from the land of cold and darkness; created by the owl. In Egyptian antiquity depicted as a ram or bull with four heads.

NORTIA (NURZIA, NURTIA)
Etruscan goddess of fortune.

NOSE Interference, perception, sagacity, snobbery, spying. According to occultists: (arched at top) overbearing; (large) arrogance, good heart, pride; (long and rounded) disloyalty; (pointed) cruelty, dishonesty; (small) fine feelings; (small and thin) alertness; (thick, rounded), virtue; (thick, small) evil; (well-shaped) nobility. In Christianity, vertical exterior symbolizes Divine Unity; individuality, the I Am of man. Interiorly symbolizes Divine Duality, power of breath and spirit. In Hindu Thandava and Lasya dances the six uses are: 1- Natha, closing nostrils intermittently; sadness. 2- Manda, holding firm; anxiety, dislike, thought; 3- Vikrishta, widening nostrils; anger, breathing, fear, foul-smell; 4- Sochvasa, narrowing nostrils; deep breathing, perfume; 5- Vikrunita, twisting the nose; disgust, jealousy, joking; 6- Swabhaviki, natural position; used in all situations.

Nose ornament. Symbolizes breath of life, moisture of life, the water pot or source of plenty, the yoni. Equivalent of the U sign. A nose ring is a sign of covenant; it indicates that a child's blood has been offered to a deity as an expression of love or as a plea for protection. See blood letting. It likewise is a sign of enslavement.

Nose signs. Finger pinching nose indicates displeasure, obnoxious odor. Thumbing nose signifies arrogance, challenge, contempt, insult. A red or yellow nose indicates intoxication. These signs are universal and are traced back to ancient steles. See gestures.

Nostrils. Duality. In the cabala the nostrils of God are the doors through which His breath or spirit goes forth over all things.

To hold a person's nose to the grindstone. To subject to drudgery.

To lead by the nose. To make another submissive; in allusion to the leading and guiding of oxen by means of rings inserted in their noses.

To pay through the nose. To pay excessively. The allusion is to a 9th century tax imposed by the Danes on the Irish, with nose slitting as a penalty for non-payment.

To poke one's nose into. Interfere, display curiosity in an affair with which one has no business.

To put another's nose out of joint. To supplant one in another's good graces.

To turn up one's nose. Be disdainful.

NOSEGAY Gallantry.

NOSTRADAMUS, MICHEL Sixteenth century French astrologer, prophet, sorcerer. His prophecies are in ambiguous language, hence the expression, "as good a prophet as Nostradamus," i. e. so obscure no one can make out the true meaning.

NOTUS (NOTOS) In Greek mythology son of Eos and Astraeus. Deity of the south or southwest wind, which comes in autumn and winter. His beard is heavy with clouds; his gray pole drips moisture. From his wings a mist falls over the land. He makes men and beasts sluggish and sickly and spreads a dense fog over the sea. Frequently applied to any wind. In Latin called Auster.

NOUGHT Symbol of infinity; the boundless universe, all powerful before creation.

NOUS From the Greek, meaning mind, perception. Diogenes of Apollonia held it to be identical with air, which acts upon organic bodies. Plato made it a purely immaterial rational principle whence emanated all ideas; thus a high form of intuitive reason, the divine mind, which became the gnostic Logos or unbegotten Son of the Father; where as in Plato, logos was held to be discursive reason, while the nous attained to ideas. Aristotle conceived the nous as the unmoved mover, or God, the transcendent power working to definite ends through thinking, in man assuming the double form of the passive intellect, the source of intuitions, and the active intellect, fed from the senses. Arabian philosophers of the middle ages shared the view that the nous is the active principle of the divine intelligence. Modern Christian philosophers hold the view that it is a spiritual faculty of the soul being replaced by sensationalism. Gnostics believe it to be the first creation of Abraxas (God), from which Logos emanated.

Nous and Logos. Gnostic symbols of inner sense and understanding; words with talismanic powers.

NOVA A blaze star, one which flares up suddenly and fades away; hence short life.

Nova Solyma. Literally, New Salem (New Jerusalem). Paradise, city of the sun. Symbolized by the Temple of Solomon.

Novus homo. A parvenu, upstart. The term was applied to the first of an ancient Roman family who obtained curule, became a newly created noble.

NOVEMBER A period of cold and gloom; called month of the dead. So named because it was the ninth month according to the primitive Roman calendar. Eleventh month of the Gregorian calendar. Its birth gem is the topaz, its color is blue, its zodiacal sign is Sagittarius, the Archer, which the sun enters about November 21st. In Chinese art its emblems are the gardenia and rat. On zodiac charts frequently represented by the monkey. In the Occident personified by an aged crone at a meager fire or a middle-aged sage storing fagots.

November eleventh. Feast of Bacchus, feast of Vinalia, Saint Martin's Day.

NOWED In heraldry twisted or knotted as a serpent or an animal's tail.

NOWUTSET In Sia Indian legend the mother of men other than Indians. See Sussistinnako.

NOX Latin name of Nyx, goddess of night.

NPHAN WA (NING SANG) In Burmese Buddhism the All-Supreme Being.

NRTYA One of the eight mothers of Buddhism, peaceful in aspect. Her color is green, she has two or four arms, and usually is arhaparyankasana (dancing). In Tibet called Gar-ma.

NU (1) In the Chinese zodiac the Girl, four stars, Epsilon, Mim, Nin, and Nine, in the shape of a sieve in the left hand of Aquarius, in northern quadrant, winter season. Represented by the bat; element, earth. A fortunate period in all ways. (2) Chinese virgin, patroness of marriage, later identified as Chih Nu (see), the weaving damsel. (3) Self-creating Egyptian deity. Chaos. The primeval deep on which Khepera first appeared as a shining egg (sun). Sometimes depicted as male, the consort of Nut, sometimes with a frog's head and obese to represent fertility, sometimes as a virgin goddess. See Androgynous deities. Resolves into On-Hu, i.e. One Hu, the oversoul or unfathomable mind. Also Nun, Nunu, Nuu; later identified with Sebek. (4) Another name for the sacred city of Thebes.

NUADA (NUADA ARGENTLAM) In Celtic mythology son of Danu. Supreme deity of the Tuatha De Danann, light deities. His wives were the five war goddesses: Badb, the fury; Fea, the hateful; Macha, battle; Morrigan, great queen; Nemon, the venomous. Fighting the Firbolgs in the battle of Mag Tured, Nuada's hand (rays) was severed. Diancecht, assisted by Credne, fitted him with a silver hand with fingers that moved, but no maimed person was permitted to rule, and he was forced to abdicate. See Sacred king under King. The kingship went to Bres. When Miach fashioned a perfect hand for him he regained his kingdom. In some accounts he was killed in a second battle by Balor; in others he again abdicated on the arrival of Lug. A heaven god resembling Zeus. One-handed, he compares with Savitar, Tyr. Identified with the British Nodons, Nudd.

NU-BOKO In Japan the jewel-stalk, the male pillar, phallus, root of coition. Symbol of the earth-axis.

NUCLEOLUS Divine nucleus; an appellation under which the Holy Spirit was known among mystics.

Nucleus. Kernel, figuratively a center of essential existence, as the nucleus of a political party.

NUDD The same as Ludd, which see.

NUDIMMUD In Babylonian mythology son of Anu. The begetter, creator of man. Mighty in strength. Wide-eared, thus all-hearing, wise. Identified with Ea and Enki.

NUDITY Innocence, meekness, poverty, truth. In societies where nudity is not a form of life, rituals performed in the nude are expected to bring rain, cure sterility, or are a part of orgiastic worship. In modern times used as a device to protest against social injustice. Saint Francis of Assisi, on being rebuked by his bishop, snatched off his clothes and walked naked in the street.

Nudity of criminals. In Christian tradition typifies lust, sinfulness, vanity.

NU KUA (NU KWA) Chinese creator of human beings when earth emerged from chaos. Sometimes represented as the sister-wife of Fu Hsi, her half-serpent body entwined with his; sometimes represented as a serpent with a human (male or female) or ox head. The name also is separated, Nu, the brother, Kua, the sister, the first human pair. As sister-wife of Fu Hsi, Nu Kua ruled after his death. Kung-Kung, a giant demon, in revolt against her, struck his head against the Pu-chou Mountains and raised them off the ground, destroying the corners of the earth supporting heaven. To repair the damage Nu Kua cut off the feet of the tortoise and used them as heaven-supporting pillars. As well as fighting demons (drought) Nu Kua caused the deluge and later set the world in order and created jade. Referred to as the royal lady, friend of mankind. Prototype of Japanese Jokwa. See Androgynous deities.

NULES-MURT Finno-Ugric forest spirit. He has a human form, but is one-eyed, and is believed to have the power of lengthening and shortening his body at will. Generally he remains the height of a tall tree. He is called great uncle, has many treasures, including gold, silver, and cattle, and he moves from place to place in whirlwind form. He entices flocks and people, especially children, into his power.

NUM Samoyed sky or thunder god.

NUMA POMPILIUS Legendary second king of Rome. After instructions from the nymph Egeria, he consecrated fire, ordered it to be maintained unceasingly as an image of divine power and worshiped as the first principle of things; thus founder of Rome's religious system. Desiring to inculcate respect for property rights he had Terminus stones used to mark dividing lines, thus a law maker. Probably an agricultural deity.

NUMBER Universally believed to contain a magic power or sacred attribute. For symbolism see individual numbers.

NUMBER NIP Same as Rubezahl.

NUMINA Literally, powers of the will. Roman deities before the Greek gods were adopted. They were abstract deities; no myths were told about them; they usually were not distinguished as male or female. The most revered were the lares and penates. Among those connected with family life were: Pales, strengthener of cattle; Priapus, cause of fertility; Sylvanus, helper of plowmen and woodcutters; Terminus, guardian of boundaries. Later they were worshiped as spirits of rivers and springs, and portrayed as benevolent old men.

NUMITOR AND AMULIUS Roman demigods, personifications of light and darkness. Brothers in conflict. Amulius deposed Numitor as king of Alba. The grandsons of Numitor, Remus and Romulus, restored him to the throne.

NUMI-TOREM (NUM-TOREM) Vogul creator god dwelling in the top or seventh heaven. He let down an earth disk from heaven as a dwelling place for the people he had made. Resembles Tiermes.

NUN (1) Egyptian deity, the Eternal. See Nu 3. (2) A woman devoted to a religious life, and usually living in a convent under vows of chastity, obedience, and poverty. The marriage of a nun to Christ resembles an ancient fertility rite. Compare Anthesteria. (3) Fourteenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet, equivalent of the English N. As a noun it means fish, as a verb it means to grow or sprout. Its numerical value is fifty. According to mystics its symbolic correspondence is initiative; its tarot deck correspondence is Temperance; its planetary correspondence is Mars; its zodiacal correspondence is Scorpio. Its color is greenish-blue; its direction on the cube of space is southwest, signifying motion; its intelligence is imaginative, and it is associated with fecundity. In white magic it is in correspondence with the Sun, which is in the sixth heaven. Raphael of the House of God is the sovereign intelligence which governs the luminary Nun in its aspect as a final correspondence to the sphere of Venus in the seventh house, which has Haniel, who is the grace, justice, and love of God, for its sovereign lord.

NUNKY Used to indicate uncle, especially for Uncle Sam or applied to a pawnbroker. When a professional jester addresses his master the term in nuncle.

NUNNE CHAHA Literally, high hill. Apalachian Indians sacred mountain. Also called Nunne Hamgeh (bending hill).

NUN-URA (NURRA) In Babylonian mythology the name of Ea as god of potters.

NUREMBURG A Bavarian city famous for its gambling; especially card playing, and for war trials.

NURRUDERE (NURUNDERI) Creator god in Australian mythology. He taught men how to make weapons and worship. At the command of the Great Spirit, he called all tribal heads to gather around a tree which lightning had split and revealed a great tongue which demonstrated the Great Spirit's presence in all things.

NURSE In the literature of peoples in many parts of the world an abandoned, kidnaped, or lost child, fated to be a hero, is discovered, nursed, and provided with shelter by one who recognizes the child's virtue. Most often the child is a light hero or other nature power, the nurse a personification of a natural phenomenon, such as earth, dawn, cloud, river. The nurse appears as the wife of a peasant, shepherd, or king, who has found the child or to whom the child has been brought, or as an animal which provides assistance or nourishment to humans, such as a cow, goat, or mare, or it may resemble a milk-giving animal or one which is capable of surviving in the wilds, such as a bear, buffalo, doe, panther, or it may be one whose function is hidden in more abstract symbolism, such as bird, snake, or swan. A totemic meaning might exist in a tale, thus the name of the hero resembles that of the nurse. Cycnus is fed by a swan; Lugaid Mac na Tri Con means Lugaid son of three dogs. A royal child is nursed or raised by an eagle or lion that he may absorb the creature's noble qualities. Aegisthus, Asclepius, Philandrus, Phylacides, and Zeus were suckled by a she-goat; Achilles, Heracles, and Jason were instructed by Chiron; Atalanta was cared for by a she-bear; Cyrus was suckled by a dog; Iamus was fed honey by serpents; Paris was nursed by a she-bear and Ptolemy I by an eagle; Ymir drank the milk of Audhumbla, a cow. See Exposed child.

NUSA In Japan, paper offerings to the gods. Also called gohei.

NUSKU Babylonian fire god, especially the midday sun. As a messenger of the gods the sun's rays. Symbolized by a lamp.

NUT (1) Egyptian celestial cow, goddess of the nocturnal sky. The great female principle. Counterpart of Nu. By Seb, mother of Isis, Nephtys, Osiris, Set, and others. Hathor, in cow form, displaced her as giver of liquid life. Depicted in human form as a dark skinned woman covered with stars bending over Seb, the earth god, as he reclines on his back. She is shown with her head emerging from the sycamore, Egyptian tree of life, the branches forming her limbs, which hold a water vase. In funerary pictures she receives the souls of the dead into her star-decked bosom, arms, and wings. Also Neyet, Nuet, Nuit, Nunet, Nutpe. (2) Symbolic of the mysterious inasmuch as the shell so completely hides that which it contains, and of concentrated wisdom, inasmuch as it is something compact, delicious, and sustaining enclosed in a single shell; whence the expression, "the situation in a nutshell." Dream significance: difficulties can be overcome. Compare Almond, Hazel.

NUTER DUA In Egyptian mythology the rising god, the morning star. Nocturnal representative of the hidden sun deity, the soul of Osiris, or the one who ferries Osiris.

NUTMEG (1) Buddhist symbol of smell. Compare mirror, sugar. (2) Nickname of the state of Connecticut, from a humorous story that peddlars in the state sold wooden nutmegs.

NUYE Fabulous bird of Japan with the head of a monkey, body of a racoon-faced dog, tail of a serpent, feet of a tiger, and with a loud mournful cry. Bird of night. Its flesh supposedly cures hiccoughs.

NWALI (NYALI) Banyai (Africa) creator deity.

NWYVRE In Brythonic mythology husband of Arianrhod. God of the waning heavens. Name signifies space.

NYAKANG Semi-divine hero who settled the Shilluk tribe on the banks of the White Nile. Rain-giver and provider of fertility. The kings of the tribe are regarded as reincarnations of Nyakang. After death all Shilluk monarchs are revered as semi-divine.

NYALWA Infernal world on the Sipa Khorlo, Tibetan Buddhist wheel of life. Realm of sixteen houses of torture, eight hot and eight cold, presided over by Shinje-chho-gyal, who passes sentence on those who have sinned, and who remain in a purgatory or house until the evil causes have played themselves out.

NYAMBE Same as Bumba.

NYANKOPONG (ONYANKOPONG) Ashantis (Africa) high god. Creator.

NYCTIMUS In Greek mythology son of Lycaon. When his father offered Nyctimus as a dish to Zeus, the angry god upset the table and turned Lycaon and his other forty-nine sons into wolves. At the intervention of Gaea, Zeus restored Nyctimus to life. A resurrection myth. Although the Lycaon clan appears to have been one of light deities, Nyctimus was probably one of darkness or scorched earth. The name signifies night bat. Compare Pelops.

NYING-MA-PA Adi-Yoga or Red Cap Sect of Tibetan Buddhists, who worshiped Samantabhadra as Adibuddha. Compare Ka-dam-pa.

NYJA Slavic underworld god. Analogue of Pluto.

NYM A coward. From the companion of Falstaff in Shakespeare's Henry V.

NYMPH Literally, veiled one, interpreted to mean bride. In Greek mythology a beautiful semi-divine maid renowned for singing and dancing. Nymphs attended Apollo, Artemis, Dionysus, Hermes, Pan, Poseidon, Zeus, and others. Well disposed to mortals they acted as tutelary deities. They presided over various aspects of nature and were divided into dryades, who dwelled in forests; hamadryades in oak trees; hyades in clouds, limniades in marshes; limoniades in meadows; meliades, who also guarded flocks, dwelt in fruit trees; naiades in brooks and fountains; nereides and oceanides in the sea; oreades in mountains. Noble families claimed descent from the nymphs, who cohabited with gods and men. By extension a lovely maid or fashionable woman. The name is akin to nebula, nuptial.

Nymphaeum. A nymph sanctuary or shrine. Magnificent structures where ancient Greeks celebrated marriages.

Nympholepsy. The frenzy which supposedly seizes a person after bewitchment by a nymph.

NYNNYAW AND PEIBAW In Irish legend sons of Beli. Transformed into oxen for their sins. The transformation typifies a seasonal change, perhaps into winter.

NYOIRIN In Japanese Buddhism a form of Bodhisattva.

NYSA Sacred Greek mountain or valley in which Zeus placed Dionysus to hide him from the jealous Hera. A land of marvelous fertility, where Dionysus was cared for by nymphs.

NYX (NOX) Greek goddess of night. Daughter of Chaos. Sister-wife of Erebus, with whom she ruled the nether region of gloom. Mother of Hypnos (sleep), Morpheus and Oneiros (dreams), Thanatos (death). In Orphic tradition she appeared as a great black winged bird hovering over the vast darkness or void where she laid the egg from which Eros (love) emerged. Others represent her as vague and shadowy, by Erebus or Uranus the mother of Aether (ether), Eos (dawn), Eris (strife), Hemera (day), Nemesis (conscience). A black sheep and a cock were sacred to her.

NZAMBI (NZAMBI-MPUNGU) Supreme deity of Congo tribes; a sky god. In a Fiote myth described as naked, probably under Christian influence. To the Fjort a mother-creator or mother earth, who controls all things. To the Barotse he is Nyambe, a sun deity; to the Fan, Nzame the creator; to the Mpongwe, Njambi, father-creator.

O

O Fifteenth of a class; fourteenth when J is not counted. Symbolic of chaos, cosmos, female principle or generative cup, Pearl of Price, perfect One (Deity), Primal Egg, Sun or Eye of the universe, Water (eau). Occult significance: dominates financial situations; its period is six years. Character traits: brilliant, cautious, modest, musically talented. Numerical value: six or fifteen. Physical weakspots: heart, liver. Planetary or zodiacal correspondence: Virgo. Symbolic correspondence: trial. Tarot correspondence: Two Roads.

The mathematical zero sometimes was used by ancients for 11; with a dash over it for 11,000. In medieval music triple rhythm or tempus perfectum; in modern music a null.

Among Hebrew cabalists; love of science, purity; in low form: craftiness. Patronymic prefix in Irish names. Japanese name for the phoenix; also called Foo. In Trieste, where Christian names concluded in 'a,' the mark of a Jew. Parallels Anglo-Saxon oedhel (home); early Greek \diamond , later omicron and omega; Hebrew ayin (eye); Irish onn (furze); Latin O. See Alphabet Affiliations.

OA Same as Aos.

OAF A changeling; a misshapen child left in place of a human child stolen by fairies. By extension a simpleton. Scandinavian variant of elf.

OAK Courage, endurance, faith, fire, glory, hospitality, honor, independence, longevity, masculine principle, reward, royalty, stability, strength, triumph, virtue. One of the oldest modes of divination was that of interpreting the voice of the supreme deity in its rustling. Door (to heaven) and thunderer appear as synonyms for oak and, widely in mythology, perhaps because it attracts lightning more than other trees, it is sacred to the sky or thunder god. Among those associated with the oak are Allah, Balder, Dagda, Heracles, Jehovah, Jupiter, Melkarth, Perkunas, Thor, Zeus. Worshiped as the first tree created; from it sprang the human race. Kings, as descendants of sky deities, have been crowned under it; oaths have been made under it, hence tree of witness; public affairs have been transacted under it because of its auspicious qualities; sacrifices were offered under it. Inasmuch as its roots extend deep into the ground and its branches rise into the air, it is emblematic of a god whose law governs both celestial and underground regions. It appears as the gallows of the emasculated fertility or sun god, thus signifies rebirth. The conjunction of the mistletoe and oak refers to the whole course of the sun from its infancy at the winter solstice to its prime at the summer solstice and back; the oak being ruler during the waxing part of the year. In Celtic lore Merlin worked his enchantments under the oak. Seventh consonant (duir) in the druidic tree alphabet; in the calendar the seventh or oak month extended from June 11 to July 9. On June 24, Saint John's Day, the oak king was burned alive sacrificially. See Gawain. Early Christians used hollowed oak trunks to serve as coffins. To resanctify an oak from Thor to Christ, northern Christians carved crosses in oak trunks. Emblem of Christ as the tree from which His cross was made. In Greek mythology the oak mast of the Argo warned the Argonauts of any danger. In Athens the boy who pronounced the Eleusinian wedding formula was crowned with oak and thorn. An oak revealed the devotion and hospitality of Philemon and Baucis. God or one of His angels most frequently revealed himself in an oak to the Jews, hence the will and word of God. Absalom was caught in its branches. Oak in the Bible may refer to the terebinth. In Iceland the blood oak is unlucky; ships made from it are doomed to be lost. In Lithuania an oak struck by lightning is a lucky sign; elsewhere it usually is a messenger of disaster. Norsemen met in council under the oak, the tree which served as the abode for their departed spirits. In Rome carried in wedding processions as a symbol of fecundity. The golden bough, an oak covered with mistletoe, branch of the winter season, was assigned to the Cumaean Sibyl. Aeneas carried it with him into the underworld to assure his return to the upperworld, i. e. rebirth.

Oak ashes. In southeastern Europe, when mixed with water, formerly given as a medicine containing the magic of the gods.

Oak club. Hard-heartedness, savageness. Frequently the instrument of sky and sun deities typifying thunder and light flashes or rays.

Oak crown. Power, strength, valor.

Oak geranium. January 1 birthday flower symbolizing true friendship.

Oak king. Sacred king. Like the barley king, castrated and ritually murdered at the end of office, usually at the harvest, that verdure may reappear in the spring. Thus a resurrected deity. Symbol of the defeat of the old and the victory of the new spirit of vegetation. See Dying God,

King of the Wood.

Oak leaf. January 24 birthday flower symbolizing bravery, flame, humanity, welcome. An oak leaf wreath is an attribute of Jupiter, Zeus, and other sky gods.

Oak leaf, reed, and lily. See Reed, lily, and oak leaf.

Oak log. Sacred log. The hewing and burning of the oak at midsummer fires represented the emasculation and burning of the fertility hero, whose ashes then were used to fertilize the fields. Fuel of need and Vestal (everlasting) fires. Burned in yule fires as a resurrection symbol. Frequently a branch covered with mistletoe, a golden bough, was used.

Oak nymph. Dryades and hamadryades.

Sport one's oak. Close the outer heavy oak doors of a student's apartment at an English university to exclude visitors, thus inhospitality.

Winged oak. Sacred to Zeus. Over it he threw a veil on which earth, ocean, and stars were represented. An axis or world tree. Sometimes called willow of Zeus.

OANNES (ON, ONNES) Babylonian, Chaldean, Phoenician, etc. fertility deity. Part man, part fish, he lived among men during the day and at night retired into the depths of the sea. Lord of wisdom, he revealed the arts of agriculture, healing, and writing. Each night and each year at the winter solstice he was swallowed by Tiamat, chaos demon, but reappeared each morning and each spring. Thus a dying god, which see. The constellation Aquarius. Thought to be identical with Ea. Prototype of Dagon, Danwantaree, Jonah.

OAR Capacity for adaptability to move smoothly among others.

See paddles.

OASIS Haven, refuge. Figuratively, a place or source of joy in monotony or gloom.

OAT In the language of flowers: I love your music. Alluding to the shepherd's pipe made from the stem, a pastoral poem or song.

Feel one's oats. Be frisky, as a colt that has been fed oats; be conceited, self-important.

Wild oats. Dissipation, youthful follies.

OB (1) Word root meaning hub, orb. Root of such names as Hobbs, Hobday, Job, Obadiah, Oben. As vowels are interchangeable, identical with ab, ub; also identical with op. (2) Among ancient Hebrews a necromancer, necromancer's familiar spirit, or the object in which the spirit supposedly resided. Thus the Witch of Endor was baalat ob (possessor of an ob). In Hebrew tradition the python who spoke from his armpits was an ob, the one who spoke with his mouth was a yiddeoni. Inasmuch as ob and ab (father) are identical, the ob was believed to have been an ancestral spirit, perhaps a mummy, or a mummy's head. Eventually equated with a skull, and medieval conjurers utilized skulls in their spells. Oboth in plural form. (3) A river in northwestern Siberia. The Ostiaks believe the entrance to the underworld is at its mouth.

OBADIAH (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning servant of Jehovah. Applied as a nickname to a Quaker. (2) Minor Hebrew prophet, and the name of the book in which his prophecy is recorded. (3) In Sterne's Tristram Shandy a faithful servant.

OBAGAT In myth of Pelew Islands creator deity who wished to keep man immortal. Rail opposed him and gave man disease and death. Compare Lukelang. In myth of Caroline Islands lord of fire.

OBAL Hebrew name meaning bare.

OBASSI Supreme deity of the Ekoi and Ibibio peoples of the Niger Delta.

OBASUTEYAMA Japanese legendary mountain where old parents were left to die and where they frequently were rescued by some deity.

OBEAH (OBE, OBI) In West African folklore a gigantic animal which carries girls to witches. An obeah also is something bewitched which has been put into the ground to cause death, sickness, or other disaster. Obeahism is a sorcery or witchcraft which appears in the West Indies as well as in Africa.

OBED Hebrew masculine name meaning servant. In the Bible a son of Boaz and Ruth; grandfather of David; ancestor of Christ.

OBEDIENCE In an Italian icon personified by a pious virgin submitting to a yoke inscribed, "Suave," which an angel places on her.

OBELISK (1) Eternal life, fertility, finger of god, phallus, regeneration, strength, sun's rays. Protection against evil influences. Stone pillar honoring the sun. Form in which primitive man worshiped the creator. Sky prop. In Egyptian antiquity its four sides and pyramidal point expressed dominion over the four quarters of the world and the zenith.

Commemorative of a king. (2) A dagger sign used as a mark of reference. From the mark in Roman Catholic service books where it originally was used to direct a priest to make the sign of the cross. Afterwards employed to denote passages of doubtful genuineness; now used to indicate a footnote. Also called obelus.

OBERON (AUBERON) (1) Masculine name from the Frankish, meaning the obedient. (2) In Brythonic lore king of fairies. Husband of Titania. In medieval French literature he is the son of Julius Caesar and Morgan Le Fay. At his birth fairies bestow upon him gifts of insight into men's thoughts and the power of transporting himself anywhere instantaneously. He is described as three feet high, with an angelic face, and lord of Mommur. His horn, which summons fairy hosts, also is a horn of plenty. In Spenser's poems the equivalent of the German elf-kling Alberich. Equates with Knecht Clobes.

OBI Siberian water spirit.

OBIDICUT In Shakespeare's King Lear a fiend of lust.

OBIN-MURT (IDEM-KUGUZA) Finno-Ugric threshing barn spirit. Animal sacrifices are made to him in the autumn so that he will protect the barn from fire and storm. Identical with Rynysaika.

O-BINZURU In Japanese Buddhism one of the sixteen rakwan, which correspond to the Sanscrit arhats. He was entrusted with saving mankind when Buddha left the mortal world. Giver of courage and strength. Identical with Pindola.

OBLIGATION In an Italian icon personified by a two-headed, four-armed man in armor. Obligation presents a double problem, to care for oneself, to satisfy another.

OBLONG SQUARE In Freemasonry form of the lodge room. In length from east to west; in breadth from north to south. Denotes universality; its ceiling symbolizing heaven; its floor, earth. Commemorates Solomon's Temple and the Tabernacle erected by Moses to honor the miraculous east wind which wrought deliverance of the Jews.

OBOE Masculine principle, pastoral or plaintive music, wind. Carries the same symbolism as flute and horn.

OBOL (OBOLUS) Coin placed in the mouth of the dead by ancient Greeks as a fee to the boatman Charon.

OBROK Tax or fine a Russian peasant formerly paid when absent from his village.

OBSIDIAN Gem symbolizing mutual affection. Mexican lucky stone. Divine rock called 'smoking mirror.' With the aid of the sun it produced fire; to magicians it revealed the will of the gods.

OBSTINACY Symbolized by a balking horse, mule. Personified in an Italian icon by a woman in black with clouds instead of hair. She holds the head of an ass.

OBYDA Chuvash evil forest spirits, which wander about nude with long hair, large nipples, and feet pointed in the wrong direction. They cause men to lose their way, and dance or tickle their victims to death. Wind demons. Also called Ar-sori (half-human) as they sometimes have only half a body with one arm, one leg, one eye.

OC Word root; radically the same as ac, ak. Appears in oak, Ockbrook.

OCCASION In Spenser's Faerie Queene a lame old hag. She symbolizes the cause of anger.

OCEAN Empty desolation. An unbounded expanse or indefinite quantity, as 'an ocean of doubts.' Anciently feared as the abode of chaos monsters or thought to be the primordial waters from which the golden egg (sun), the ancestor of all things, emerged. In Greek antiquity said to be the great stream or river which encompasses the earth.

Ocean greyhound. A fast ocean liner of slender or graceful lines.

Ocean palace. A luxuriously furnished ship.

OCEANIA (OCEANICA) Islands of Central Pacific Ocean. Typified by Polynesian or other natives holding primitive weapons; native animals; native vegetation.

OCEANUS In Greek mythology Titan son of Uranus and Gaea. Personification of the great stream which encircled the earth. Husband-brother of Tethys, by whom he was the father of the Oceanides and all brook and river deities. His realm was located along the outer boundary of the upper world, separating the nether world and heaven. Only one of the primeval deities who did not take part in the Titanomachy against Zeus, and for this reason he was permitted to retain his dominion under the new dynasty. In art shown reclining; his attributes are his steering oar and sea animals. Compare Nereus, Pontus, Poseidon.

Oceanid. Sea nymph endowed with the gift of prophecy. Any of the 3,000 daughters of Oceanus and Tethys. Personification of the mists rising from the sea.

OCELOTL (OCELOT) In Aztec mythology the jaguar or tiger, typifying the nocturnal heavens dotted with stars. Destroyer of the subjects of Quetzalcoatl (light of day).

OCHALL OCHNE (OCHALL OICHNI) Fairy king of Connaught. A fertility spirit. His devoted swineherd Rucht constantly fought the swineherd of Ochall's enemy Bodg. Rucht was turned into a bull known as the White Horned Bull of Connaught, his foe into the Brown Bull of Ulster, in which form their battles continued. The conflict was one of the seasons.

OCNUS In Greek mythology personification of delay and fruitless effort. In the underworld he continually plaits a rope of straw which is eaten by his ass as fast as he makes it, suggesting the constant growth and decay of nature. Sometimes he is depicted as trying to load an ass with sticks which fall off the other side as he places them on the animal. Probably a light or time myth, suggesting that when the sun reaches its zenith it drops.

Rope of Ocnus. Profitless labor.

OCTAGON Regeneration. Carries the same symbolism as eight. A form frequently used for baptismal fonts and fire altars.

OCTANS Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Octant.

OCTAVIUS (OCTAVIANUS, OCTAVUS) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning eight, eighth born.

Octavia. (1) Feminine form of Octavius. (2) Half-sister of Emperor Augustus; wife of Marc Antony, who divorced her for love of Cleopatra. Thus a woman divorced because of her husband's love for another. (3) Roman empress. Daughter of Claudius; wife of Nero, who had her slain.

OCTOBER Represents autumn, harvest. So named because it was the eighth month of the Roman calendar. Tenth month of the Gregorian calendar. Its birth gem is opal or tourmaline; its color is green-blue; its flower carnation, fringed gentian, or autumn leaves; its zodiacal sign is Scorpio, which the sun enters about October 22. In Chinese art its emblems are the chrysanthemum and wild boar. On Chinese zodiacs represented by the goat. In the Occident personified by a cloaked and hooded woman; men filling measures with oil. In Japan the kamiless (godless) month. See Kamimashi-tsuki. Month in which the negative principle is uppermost, as the child leaves the womb in the tenth month. Period of suspension of temporal affairs.

OCTOPUS Entanglement; that which is grasping, rapacious. An organized power regarded as many-armed with a far-reaching capacity for harm; a monopoly, a powerful industrial combine. In Polynesian mythology primeval animal whose children are fire and water. Between their descendants a mighty conflict arises, water wins and the world is destroyed by flood, to be recreated by Tangaloa. In a Samoa myth the sea rises when the primeval octopus breaks its ink sack.

OCTRIALLACH In Celtic mythology a son of Indech. Fomorian warrior who aided Bres in the war against the Tuatha De Danann. Finding the Tuatha De Danann spring of health, where all warriors slain in battle were brought back to life, he filled it with stones and built a cairn around it. A deity of darkness or death.

OCYPETE Literally, rapidity. In Greek mythology daughter of Thaumias and Electra. One of the Harpies. Personification of whirlwind. Portrayed with the face of a maiden, pale and emaciated, and the body of a vulture. Those she wished to punish she robbed of food, or else defiled it.

OD (1) A euphemism for God; used in oaths to avoid open profanity. (2) In Norse mythology a personification of sunshine. After he left his wife Freya, she shed tears of gold. Thus after the sun sets the brilliance of gloaming lingers in the sky. An aspect of Svipdag. Also called Oder, Odur, Odnir, Othur.

ODAKON Same as Dagon. Etymology of Odakon uncertain. It resolves into Ak-on, i. e. Great sun.

ODATIS In Iranian legend daughter of King Omartes. Most beautiful woman of her time, she elopes with Zairivairi, the most handsome hero. A dawn goddess.

ODD NUMBERS Celestial, good, masculine. Equates with the left or dexter side.

ODEON (ODEUM) In Greek antiquity a building in which trial performances and poetic and musical contests were held. In modern times a theater or music hall. Name derived from ode.

ODERIC In Ariosto's Orlando Furioso the evil knight who, pretending to escort Isabella, sells her into slavery.

ODIN (ODHINN, OTHINUS, OUVIN, VOTAN, WODAN, WODEN, WOTAN) Chief Norse god in aristocratic circles; Thor being the favorite among the folk. Eventually chief god of all the people. Probably originally an isolated tribal god or deified sacrificial king. Creator, ruler of Asgard, whose mansion was Gladsheim, wielder of the thunderbolt or war god who held court at Valhalla for dead heroes, giver of fertility, lord of wisdom, teacher of poetry. Son of Bor; mate of Jord, Frigg, by whom he fathered Balder, and Rind, by whom he fathered Vali. With his brothers Hoener (Ve) and Loki (Vili) he composed a trinity which slayed Ymir, from whose body the world was made, and fashioned the first man, Ask, and woman, Embla. Lord of the air, his gift to the pair was breath or spirit. In return for runes, which made him all wise, Odin left an eye in the well of Mimir. Thus wisdom and power is obtained by self-sacrifice. The pledge is the reflection of sun in water; when Odin passed away from the water the second eye no longer was visible, thus he became one-eyed and wore a slouch hat (cloud) to cover his deformity. One-eyed, he equates with the Cyclops. He spent three nights with Gunlad in the underworld, fathered Bragi, and robbed the three jugs, Bodn, Odrorir, and Son, which belonged to her father Suttung of their poetic mead (wind), and in the form of an eagle flew back to Asgard, where he spat out the mead into vats. Thus he typifies the yearly (or daily) escape of light from the realm of darkness. Yearly he was mutilated and hung on the Yggdrasil, sometimes called his steed. A resurrected deity, he equates with Adonis, Christ, Osiris, etc. He wore a cape (vapor, cloud gatherer) and possessed the ring Draupnir (fertility). He assumed various forms including that of a ferryman to transport the heroic dead, that of a peasant or servant who served Bauge to obtain fertility for mankind, that of a snake or squirrel to enter the earth. His two ravens, which reported everything going on in the world, were Hugin and Munin, his ships were Naglfar and Skidbladnir, his spear was Gungnir, his steed was Sleipnir, his throne was Hlidskjalf, the wolves with which he hunted were Freke and Gere. At Ragnarok the Fenrir wolf swallowed him; a storm myth in which he equates with Talmurath. He is portrayed as tall and venerable, one-eyed, with a long white beard, and he appears to be contemplating. His name is preserved in Wednesday, a day believed to be favorable for sowing. When Gylfe asked who he was, he answered, 'Har (high), Jafnhar (equally high), Thridi (third). Other names by which he was known are: All-fadir, all father; Biblindi, drinker; Biflindi, spear brandisher; Bolverkin, cunning deceiver, stealer of mead-song; Breit-hut, broad hat; Farma-Tyr, god of cargoes; Fjolnir, many-shaped; Galgaval-dyr, gallows or steed; Gangler, traveler; Grimmr, stern; Hackeberg or Hakol-berend, mantle-wearer; Hanga-tyr, god of the hanged; Harbard, high beard; Herfadir, father of hosts (warrior dead); Hertyr, god of hosts; Heryan, leader of hosts, Hnikar, spear lord, giver of rain; Hrafna or Rafnagud, raven god; Hropt, arranger of runes; Karlafberge, man of the mountain; Omi, noisy one; Oski, will or wish; Sidhottr, with broad hat; Sigfadir, victory father; Sigtyr, shiner god; Skidskegg, long beard; Vafud or Vegtam, wanderer; Valfadir, father of the brave who dwell in Valhalla; Valkjosandi, chooser of the slain (for Valhalla); Viator-indefessus, unwearied traveller; Vidforull, far-traveller; Ygg, Uggerus or Yggr, the terrible, god of the mighty Yggdrasil, which holds the world together. He appears in later folk literature as the Stranger with a Slouch Hat and Spotted cloak and as the Wild Huntsman. The man who resided in the mountain (sky), numerous mountains bear his name: Gudenenberg, Odensberg or Othensberg, Wodenesberg, Wodnesbeorh. He parallels Gwydion, Indra Parjanya, Jupiter Pluvius, Nicor, Zeus Ombrios. By Romans identified with Mars and Mercury. Odin is the source of Edinburgh. See Brynhild.

Odin oath. A Norseman's most binding oath. The hand was passed through a massive sacred silver ring or through a sacrificial stone.

Odin's tree. The gallows; Yggdrasil.

Odin's wagon. The howling wind.

ODIUM THEOLOGICUM The bitter hatred peculiar to rival theologians.

ODOR OF SANCTITY The sweet and delightful odor which, during the middle ages, was believed to be given off the bodies of saints at their death or when their bodies were translated after death. Thus to die in the odor of sanctity is to die a saint.

ODRERER (ODHROERIR, ODORRIR, ODROVIR, OTHREVIR, OTHROERIR) Norse kettle of inspiration. With the two jugs, Son (expiation) and Bodn (offering), contained the poetic mead (wind) which had been compounded from honey and Kvasir's blood. Whoever drank of this brew became a poet. The three vessels were stolen by Suttung. When Odin seduced Suttung's daughter Gunlad, she permitted the god to sip from each vessel, but he drained all three. Later in Asgard he disgorged the mead into vats for the gods. A few drops fell to earth; thus a poet sprang up here and there, but only a god could obtain enough to be a great poet. Also the name of the mead, which sometimes is called dwarf's mead. See Fjalar.

ODRUS (ODRAS) In Celtic mythology hero changed by Morrighu, war goddess (storms), into a pool of water.

ODYSSEUS Warrior hero of the Odyssey, Greek epic attributed to Homer. Personification of the toiling, wandering sun. King of Ithaca, son of Laertes, husband of Penelope, father of Telemachus. For ten years he fought with the Greeks at Troy, and then with twelve ships (mansions of the zodiac) richly laden with spoils he left for home. He was one of the Greeks who had stolen the palladium, statue of Athena, the dawn, which act led to the downfall of Troy. For this and for the later sin of slaying Polyphemus, son of Poseidon, he was harassed and suffered perilous adventures for ten years. They are related in twenty-four books which equate with the transit of the sun through the hours of the day. His most notable experiences were: 1- Leading his men from the land of lotus-eaters (fairylane of dreams), where they had become oblivious of their past. 2- Escape by calling himself Noman from the country of the Cyclops, pastoral giants (storms), where he had been trapped in the cave of Polyphemus. See Issi, Noman. 3- On the island of Aeolus he was provided with winds. 4- In the land of the cannibal Laestrygonians, who destroyed all the ships of the fleet save one, Odysseus and some of his followers escaped. 5- On the island of Aeaëa the moon-goddess Circe cast enchantments which turned his men into swine. Odysseus avoided their fate and by Circe became the father of Agrius and Telegonus. He caused his men to be returned to their former shape. 6- He descended into Hades to discover from Tiresias his way home. There he conversed with dead heroes and with his mother Anticlea. 7- He escaped the sirens. 8- His ship passed between Scylla and Charybdis. 9- On the island of Thrinacia his surviving companions slew the sacred cattle (fertile clouds) of the skies, and all but Odysseus was killed. 10- On Ogygia, a paradise, he remained for seven years with Calypso. 11- The raft on which he left was wrecked on the island of Scheria, where he was found by Nausicaa (dawn), who led him to her father Alcinous, who loaded him with gifts (fertility) and provided him with ships (clouds) and equipment (wind) for his return to Ithaca. 12- Disguised as a beggar he remained unrecognized except by his dog Argos and his old nurse, who identified him by a wound. When a child he had been bitten on his leg by a boar. Telemachus, the young sun, was absent, searching for him. He found Penelope surrounded by suitors. In a bow and arrow contest he rewon his wife and killed all his rivals, an incident which probably incorporates a sacred king's refusal to die at the end of his term of office. Compare Arjuna.

Odysseus was a resurrected god, one who had visited the underworld and returned. He served those meaner than himself, he was the owner of poisoned arrows (scorching, death-dealing rays), he had a leg wound, his dog Argos was white and shining, his face when washed after his travails was gleaming, all sun attributes. He was the universal man, cowardly, crafty, cruel, generous, mean, mocking, naive, thinking, valiant; he was truly Noman, a personification of the soul, the Light or God within man. He was one long absent from his native land and, while longing for that land, lingering to enjoy his adventures. His return may incorporate the refusal of a sacred king or priest to die at the end of his term of office. Under the circumstances he would return in disguise and dispose of the candidates for his office (wife's suitors) at the time of his customary abdication or sacrifice. See Sacred king under King. In the Circe incident he may have been a male who trespassed into a woman's realm. Compare Endymion, Hylas. The incident in which he outwitted Polyphemus equates with that of David and Goliath. In Latin the name is Ulixes (Ulysses).

Odyssey. A long and perilous journey. A name formed from Odysseus. It means adventures or things of Odysseus. James Joyce adapted the Homeric epic as the framework of his Ulysses, which presents the events taking place in the lives of the three leading characters, Leopold Bloom, his wife Molly, and Stephen Dedalus, during an average twenty-four hours in Dublin.

OEDIPUS (OIDIPODES, OIDIPOUS) Literally, swollen feet or man who knew the riddle of the feet. In Greek mythology son of Laius, king of Thebes, and Jocasta. When an oracle predicts he will slay his father the child is left to die on Mount Cithaeron. A Corinthian shepherd finds him with his feet pierced and bound. In some accounts he is set adrift in a chest. He is adopted by Polybus and Merope, king and queen of Corinth. Hearing the prophecy and believing Polybus to be his father, he leaves Corinth. On the road, in a quarrel, he kills a stranger, who is Laius. He then solves the riddle about the feet of man propounded by the Sphinx which is devastating Thebes and breaks the Sphinx's power. As a reward he is given Jocasta for his bride and made king of Thebes. By Jocasta he fathers Antigone, Eteolcus, Ismene, Polynices. A plague ravages Thebes, and an oracle declares that the city can be cured only with the banishment of Laius's murderer. Oedipus searches for the killer until the seer Tiresias reveals the truth. Jocasta commits suicide, Oedipus puts out his eyes and, accompanied by the faithful Antigone, roams about in misery until one day at crossroads in the sacred groves of the Eumenides at Colonus he disappears from earth at the sound of a thunderclap. Oedipus, the fatal child, is hero of a time myth which traces the daily or yearly career of the sun. He kills his father, the old year, and marries the dawn from which he had sprung. In youthful, beneficent aspect (morning, spring) he brings fertility; in deadly aspect (midday, summer) he causes drought; his daughter, gloaming, accompanies him after his eyes are blinded, i.e. shrouded by clouds or darkness (late afternoon, autumn). Oedipus Colonus may be an axis deity, a universe pillar, which disappears at the world navel (crossroads). The nails driven into his feet to keep him from crawling correspond to a crucifixion and provide him with a sacred foot. He is one unable to escape the mandates of fate, one who explores the truth which will shatter the structure of his social position and prosperity, who achieves his position by wit, party to incest, patricide, a victim of self-imposed punishment. He resembles Aoshnara, Hercules, Kao Hsin, Krishna, Perseus. The episode with the Sphinx parallels that of Vararuchi and the Rakshasha and is related to medieval tales of ogres, such as Rumpelstiltskin and other supernaturals defeated by the discovery of a secret. His riddle solving typifies release of withheld rain. See Exposed child, Foot, Hobbling, Incest of mother and son, Sphinx.

OEGIR Norse sea deity. Name connected with Ogyes, a variant of Oceanus, degraded into ogre.

OEGISHIALM In Norse mythology helmet of dread worn by Fafnir. Darkness.

OENEUS (OINEUS) Greek agricultural deity, planter of the vine. King of Calydon, husband of Althaea, father of Deianira, Meleager, Tydeus. Because he neglected a sacrifice Artemis sent a boar (winter) to ravage his crops. Meleager (sun) was one of the heroes who killed the boar.

OENGUS (AENGUS, ANGUS, MAC OG) In Irish mythology son of Dagda by Boann or by Elcmar's wife. Deity of love and spring. His harp (wind) was of gold; all who heard him play followed his sweet music. During the winter Dagda apportioned the sid among the Tuatha De Danann. At the time Oengus was visiting his foster-father Midir (underworld deity), and a mansion for him was omitted. When he returned his father pointed out that all the sid had been given away, whereupon Oengus asked for lodgings. Dagda consented to this; when he reminded Oengus the time was up, Oengus refused to leave, saying he had been granted a day and a night of which time and eternity are composed, and called his mound Brug Maic Ind Oc. In the underworld Oengus had abducted Midir's wife Etain (fertility). The beautiful Caer appeared to him in dreams until he became sick for love of her. He discovered that at the end of each summer she became a swan. He agreed to do likewise, she became his wife, and when in swan form they lived in Dragon-mouth Lake. The pig and birds were sacred to him. Gaelic equivalent of Eros, analogue of the Pied Piper of Hamelin. His conflict with Dagda resembles that of Zeus with Cronus.

OENOMAUUS In Greek mythology son of Ares; husband of the Pleiad Sterope; father of Hippodamia. King of Pisa in Elis. Warned by an oracle that he would perish by the hand of his son-in-law, he demanded that each suitor should overcome him in a chariot race. Having the magic steeds Phylla and Harpina all suitors lost or were put to death until Pelops raced him. In that race Hippodamia bribed Oenomaus's charioteer to remove a spoke from it. Agricultural lord, especially of the vine, defeated by scorched earth. Resembles Acrisius.

OENONE (OINONE) In Greek mythology nymph of Mount Ida who was married to Paris of Troy (sun). A vine spirit, daughter of the river god Cebren. She had the gift of prophecy and warned her husband against going to Sparta. When Paris pleaded with her to heal his wounds, jealous of Helen for whom Paris had deserted her, she refused, and relented too late. On the death of Paris she stabbed herself.

OENOPIION (OENOPIAN, OINOPIION) In Greek mythology father of Merope. When Orion became overly eager in his courtship of Merope, Oenopion put out the giant's eyes. Probably a deity of darkness.

OETAEUS Constellation in the Northern Sky. Named from the mountain on which Hercules died. Also called Hercules.

OETH AND ANOETH Brythonic underworld mansion located in Gower. Site of the bone prison in which Manawyddan imprisoned King Arthur until he was rescued by his cousin Goreu.

OFFENSE In an Italian icon personified by a brutish woman in a rust colored dress covered with tongues. She aims at two dogs which worry a hedgehog.

Offensive breath. Folk legend motif in which an envious courtier tells someone at court his breath offends the king and that, when in the king's presence, he should turn his head away. He tells the king the official or servant turns away because he cannot stand the king's odor; whereupon the king sends a letter to his kiln master ordering him to toss into the fire the first person to arrive and on a pretext sends his servant to the kiln. The servant lingers or is detained. The caluminator, anxious to see the burning, rushes to the kiln and is slain.

OFFERING In Hebrew a minchah, which is bloodless, as distinguished from a zebah (sacrifice). Cakes baked in an oven, cakes cooked on a frying-pan or griddle, fine flour or meal, first fruits of new corn, honey, incense, salt, unleavened bread, wine, also clothing or rags, which replaced blood sacrifices, were offerings. A portion of everything except the incense was retained by the priest as minister of the Lord.

OG (1) Name interpreted by ancient Hebrews to mean gigantic, long-necked, or he-who-goes-in-a-circle. (2) In the Old Testament king of Bashan defeated by the Israelites under Moses. In rabbinical lore an antediluvian giant saved from the flood by climbing on the roof of the ark. He lived for 500 years before he was slain by Moses. Power of darkness or evil. (2) Name given by Dryden in his Absalom and Achitophel to the poet Thomas Shadwell, who was tall and fat.

OGDOAD (1) The original Egyptian gods worshiped as the fathers and mothers of the world. See under Eight. (2) In gnostic system a group of eight divine beings or eons, also the celestial regions.

OGHUZ Plunderer and destroyer in legends of the Kshaeta, an ancient Airyano Vaejo (Aryan) kingdom in central Asia. Probably northern tribes which broke up happy settlements (earthly paradises) of early Aryans and drove them into China, Persia, and India; later immortalized as a demon. Parallels Azhi Dahaka.

OGIER THE DANE (HOLGER DANSKE, OLGER) Legendary Danish hero. Son of King Geofrey. Fairies, among them Morgan Le Fay, attended his birth and bestowed gifts upon him. When a hundred years of age he boarded a ship for Avalon, where his youth was restored, and he became one of King Arthur's knights. Ariosto in Orlando Furioso introduces him as a paladin of Charlemagne in which role he defended France from Heathens. After early exploits in the East he returned with a firebrand, on which his life depended. He entered Kronenberg mountain, where he will sleep until his country's hour of need. Compare Arthur, Meleager.

OGMA (OGHAM) (1) Irish sun deity. God of eloquence, fertility, healing, poetry, prophecy, and war. Son of Dagda; husband of Etain; father of Cairbe, Mac Cecht, MacCool, MacGreine, and Tuirenn. He was made to carry firewood by Bres, a period of darkness in which he served one meaner than himself, but in the battle of Mag-Tured he commanded the Tuatha De Danann and killed Indech of the Fomors. Inventor of Oghma or Ogham characters. Wearer of a lion skin. On coins a nail (ray) projects from one of his eyes. He was called sunny-faced or shining faced and honey-mouthed (Cermait). See Light-hero. (2) Ancient Irish alphabet said to have been invented by Oghma to provide a secret speech for the learned which the uneducated might not read. Used for divination, inscriptions on upright pillar-stones or wands (axis or sun emblems), and for other religious purposes. Each letter, probably constructed from tree runes, was identified as a tree in the forest (alphabet). See Alphabet, druidic.

OGMIOS (OGMIUS) Gaulish god of eloquence. Worshiped in the 2nd century. Represented as an old man followed by a multitude, which he leads by an almost invisible gold chain fastened from his lips to their ears. His countenance, turned toward his captives, is smiling. He wears a lion skin and carries a club and bow, a sheath hangs from his shoulders. Eloquence is the strength through which he accomplishes his feats; he is old because speech shows itself best in old age; the chain represents the bond between an orator's tongue and enraptured listeners. Counterpart of Ogma. His appearance suggests that of Hercules.

OGRE (OGER) In fairy tales a monster which devours a mortal. A human being likened to such a monster. In central Europe probably originally a northern or foreign deity. A name probably borrowed from the Spanish ogro and related to the Italian orco (demon) and Latin orcus (abode of the dead). It may be a debased form of Oegir.

Ogre mask. In China called T'ao T'ieh. It represents a water-buffalo head and symbolizes avarice, gluttony.

OGYGLIA (OGUGLIA) In Greek mythology island of Calypso. The forest around her cave was composed of three trees of resurrection, alder, cypress, and white poplar. Magic island on which Odysseus was shipwrecked; a paradise; navel of the universe. Parallels Avalon.

OGYGUS (OGYGES, OGYGOS) Legendary king of Attica or Boeotia. Sometimes said to be the father of Dionysus. During his reign a destructive flood took place. Name related to Oegir.

Ogygian flood. Prehistoric, primeval, the very aged.

OGYRVAN (OGYRVEN, OGYRVREN) Brythonic underworld deity. Father of Cerridwen and Gwynhwyvar (Guinevere). He was a giant and owner of a caldron out of which three muses were born. Perhaps an eponymous deity of language, poetry, and the alphabet (ogyrvens). He was a patron of bards, and his name breaks down into ocurvan, meaning evil bran or raven, the bird of death. Also called Leodegrance.

OHARAI A purification ceremony held in Japan in December.

O-HIGAN Japanese ceremony held at the spring and autumn equinoxes. Visits are made to family cemeteries to honor ancestors. Higan means other shore and suggests the river dividing the world of the living from that of the dead.

OHIO Flower emblem: Scarlet carnation; motto: Imperium in Imperio (Government within Government); nickname: Buckeye. Ohio, from the Indian word for beautiful, is cognate with Io, Iowa.

OH-MAGA-TSUMI Japanese great evil spirit, chief of the maga-tsumi, wicked spirits who comprise the hosts of Susa-no-wo as storm deity.

OHNIVAK Slavic bird of fire. Resembles the phoenix.

OHOBARAI Japanese ceremony for the expiation of offenses by casting off or drowning clothes or clothed figures or rags as substittes for humans. Compare Taschlikh.

OHODOWAS Iroquois johaoh or dwarfs who lived in the earth and kept underworld creatures in their proper place.

OHO-GE-TSU-HIME Japanese food goddess; one of the faces of Futa-na Island.

OHO-IWA-DAIMYOJIN Japanese god of the rock. Venerated as helper of women in labor.

OHO-TO-NO-JI-NO-KAMI and OHO-TO-NO-BE-NO-KAMI Japanese Elder-of-the-Great-Place-Deity and his younger sister-wife Elder-Lady-of-the-Great-Place-Deity. A pair of the seven divine generations, primal deities born without progenitor. Personifications of incipient earth.

OHO-USU Literally, Great-Foot-Pestle. Son of the legendary Japanese Emperor Kei-Ko; twin brother of Wo-usu (Little-Foot-Pestle). Oho-usu was sent by his father to bring Ye-hime and Oto-hime, sister of great beauty, to the capital. Instead he married them himself and sent two other girls to court, giving them his wives' names. The emperor, aware of the substitution, would not marry them, and they died of sorrow. Probably a spring earth deity in a fertility legend.

OH-YAMA-TSUMI In Japanese mythology Great-Mountain-Possessor, father of Sengen Sama, goddess of Fuji-yama.

OIAGROS Greek river god. Generally said to be the father of Orpheus.

OIL Consecration, gladness, light, peace, plenty, property, prosperity. That which is cunning, shrewd, smooth, soft. Anciently used for anointing the living and the dead. Christian emblem of the grace of God. Attribute of Saint Walburga. One of the four libations offered by the Greeks, the others being honey, milk, water.

Burn the midnight oil. Study late at night, overstudy.

Oil lamp. Philosophy.

Oil of birch. A flogging; supposedly a lubricant to good conduct.

Oil with wick. Hospitality, light, study.

Pour oil upon troubled waters. Mollify; from the tranquilizing effects of oil upon rough waters.

Strike oil. Attain sudden riches or success.

OILEUS In Greek mythology an Argonaut. Father of Ajax the Lesser.

OILIOIL (OLUM) In Irish mythology: (1) Same as Ailill. (2) Second century legendary king of Munster; a poet. Husband of Sadhbh. Agricultural hero. From his stock is traced all leading Munster families.

OIN Same as Ain.

OINTMENT Cohabitation, heroism, hospitality, love, luxury, medication, perfume, valor.

OISIN (OSSIAN) Literally, little deer. Third century Irish hero. Son of Fionn and the deer-goddess Sadhbh; brother of Fergus; father of Oscar. Bard who narrated the adventures of the Fianna. Except for his cousin Caolite, the swift footed, he was the only great Fenian to survive the battle of Gabhra, and he survived because, while the battle was being fought, he permitted Niamh to lure him to Tir na nOg, a paradise. Although he thought he had remained but a short time, when he returned to his home, his old comrades were dead, for he had been gone three centuries. Christianity had come to the land. Niamh had provided him with a steed for the journey and had made him swear not to let his feet touch soil. While trying to help a man his foot slipped and touched the ground, and he turned into a blind old man, whom Saint Patrick aided. At the end of his life he saw in a vision a stag pursued over waters by a white hound with red ears. The stag was his soul, the hound was death. A sun hero, he visited the underworld (set) and returned (rose). See Divine-human marriages, Light heroes.

OIZYS Corroding care. Greek abstract deity.

OJIN Legendary emperor of Japan, posthumous son of Chiu-ai by Jingu. He conquered Korea while an unborn infant. Deified first as a Shinto god of war, then as a Buddhist god of war under the title Hachiman Daibosatsu. Also called Homuda.

O. K. All correct. Possibly from the humorous spelling oll korrekt, from Choktaw Indian okeh (it is so), or from Middle English hoacky (last load of the harvest).

O-KAMA-SAMA Shinto god of the rice pot.

OKAME AND HYOTTOKO In Japanese legend a homely but good woman, a woman with a puffed-up face, and a man with one eye smaller than the other and other features that give him a comic appearance. To be called Okame and Hyottoko is an insult in a good-natured sense. Masks of these figures are used as good-luck charms.

OKAS Algonquin for mother. Allied to ohke, meaning earth. Both are from a root signifying to come out of. See Osh.

OKI Huron Indian indweller; owner or power of an animal, person, or thing. Spirit which dominates the forces of nature. Likewise the idol which keeps watch over the dead. Also called Kioussa. Cognate with Inua, Manitou.

OKIKURUMI Ainu first ancestor of mankind. Differs from Adam in that he descended from heaven, his mother being the earth or elm goddess Chikisani and his father the sun-god, younger of two brothers who ruled heaven, and also called Okikurumi. Other names by which he is known are: Ainurak-kur (man smelling of the Ainu), Aeoina Kamui (our hereditary god), Pon Okikurumi (younger or smaller Okikurumi).

OKITSUHIKO Shinto god of the caldron. Also called Kudo-no-kami.

OKITSUHIME Shinto god of the saucepan. Also called Kobe-no-kami.

OKKIS North American Indian amulets; aspects of tutelary spirits appealed to in times of disaster.

OKLAHOMA Flower emblem: mistletoe; motto: Labor Omnia Vincit (Labor Ever Conquers); nickname: Sooner.

OKOLNER Literally, not cool. Norse region where no frost exists and where, after Ragnarok, the giants have an ale hall called Brimer. Presumably a volcano in frost regions.

OKOZE In Japan small fish carried by hunters and fishermen as good luck charms.

O-KUNI-NUSHI (OHO-KUNI-NUSHI-NO KAMI) Japanese earth ruler, protector against smallpox, thunder god. He rides a bronze horse once a year and any humans he meets while on the journey will turn into dogs. When Susa-no-wo descended into the land of roots O-Kuni became ruler of Idzumo. Ninigi dispossessed him; O-Kuni, becoming a god of medical arts and sorcery, dispossessed Susa-no-wo. A myth typifying the birth-death cycle. While ruler of the hidden world he was lord of the Ujikami (ghosts of old rulers), and he prevented evil spirits from harming living persons. While Susa-no-wo was asleep he tied Susa's beard, kidnaped Suseri-bime, Susa's daughter, and made off with Susa's three great possessions, a bow and arrow, harp, and sword. As punishment he was placed in the snake house, but his bride supplied him with a scarf with which he kept the snakes from biting him. He also went to accomplish various labors which correspond to those of Apollo, Heracles, and Theseus. In one legend he was burned when he caught a scorched stone his brothers rolled to him. Nursed by two goddesses he returned to life as a beautiful youth, exempting death of the earth in winter and rebirth in spring. With the name Yachihokono-kami (god-of-eight-thousand-spears) he was a male equivalent of Cinderella and famous for his amours. He acted as porter to his brothers when they went wooing. His beauty, honesty, and modesty charmed a maiden who rejected all the brothers and expressed a desire to marry him. Thus he was a deity of love and marriage. He combined with Daikoku to become a god of wealth and one of the Shichi Fekujin (seven gods of happiness).

OKU-THOR Literally, wagon Thor. In Norse mythology, Thor who journeyed in thunder storms.

OL In Arthurian romance clever companion of Arthur. He possessed marvelous powers of tracking and accompanied Arthur on the hunt for the boar Twrch Trwyth. Perhaps the wind.

OLAF (OLAV, OOLAF) Masculine name from the Scandinavian meaning forefather, offspring, or heirloom.

OLAG In the Philippine Islands among the Bontoc Igorots a dormitory of unmarried girls; a trial-marriage house.

OLDNESS Malice, venerability, winter.

Old Adam. Evil inherent in man.

Old Bailey. English criminal court. The bailey of a feudal castle was the wall of defense, or main tower, donjon or keep. Resolves into ba-li, i.e. everlasting father; identical with bail, i.e. security.

Old Dog Tray. Proverbial dog in song who is over faithful. Applied to a well-trying but rather tiresome companion.

Old Dominion. Popular name of the state of Virginia.

Old Ephraim. A grizzly bear.
Old flame. A former sweetheart.

Old Glory. Flag of the United States.

Old Grimes. A commonplace old-fashioned gentleman in easy circumstances.

Old Harry. The Devil. Also called Old Bendy, Old Boy, Old Clottie, Old Driver, Old Gentleman, Old Gooseberry, Old Horny, Old Ned, Old Nick, Old One, Old Poker, Old Scratch, Old Serpent, Old Simmie.

Old Ironsides. One notable in battle. From the sobriquet applied to the United States frigate Constitution.

Old Lady of Threadneedle Street. Bank of England.

Old Line state. Maryland.

Old man. Old year. In fertility processions the representative of the vegetation deity in an unproductive state. Dream significance: happiness in family.

Old Man Coyote. Crow Indian creator deity; trickster-transformer.

Old man of Crete. A statue representing humanity in its successive stages. Dante describes it as having a head of gold, arms and chest of silver, torso of molten brass, legs of iron, and a right foot, on which it places its weight, of clay. Inasmuch as mankind since the golden age has been imperfect the statue, except for the head, is split by cracks from which flow the tears of the sinful generations of men. The tears descend into Hades to make the streams Acheron, Cocytus, Phlegethon, and Styx.

Old man of the mountains (Sheikh-al-Jebal). Sobriquet of Hassan ben Sabbah, founder of the order of Assassins, who made the mountain fastness of Lebanon his stronghold.

Old man of the sea. In Arabian Nights story of Sinbad the Sailor an old man who asked Sinbad to carry him across a brook. Once mounted on Sinbad's shoulders he clung until Sinbad contrived to make him drunk. Thus an incubus, any burden or person from which it is difficult to free oneself.

Old Moore. Oracle, prophet, seer.

Old Mortality. An itinerant antiquary. From the character in the novel of this name by Sir Walter Scott. Said to be a portrayal of Robert Patterson, who cleared the moss from the tombstones of the Covenanters.

Old North state. North Carolina.

Old Probabilities. The weather bureau personified, because its forecasts so often contain the word probable.

Old Sol. Humorously, the sun.

Old Testament. Book of the Bible symbolic of destiny, dignity, law.

Old wives' tales. Gossip, unconvincing stories.

Old woman. In fertility processions female counterpart or wife of the old man, the vegetation deity in an unfruitful state. An expression applied to an effeminate, fussy, or timid man.

Old Woman Who Never Dies. Among Mandan (Siouan) Indians the grandmother, earth goddess, giver of two kettles, bowls of earth and sky, which are tribal fetishes.

OLEANDER May 28 birthday flower symbolizing beware. In China symbolic of beauty and grace. In Italian tradition staff of Saint Joseph.

OLELBIS Literally, he who sits above. Among the Copehan tribe of Wintun Indians, by sitting in his sweat house in the sky he escaped the conflagration caused by the theft of flint (lightning). On the advice of his grandmothers he sent the eagle and the humming bird to prop up the sky, and he called upon Kahit, the wind, and Mem Loimis, the waters, and they helped him to quench the fire.

OLGA Feminine name from the Scandinavian through the Russian, meaning holy, gracious queen.

OLIVE March 8 birthday flower symbolic of faith, fecundity, good tidings, honor, hope, long life, liberty, mercy, mirth, peace, perception of divine love, preservation, prosperity, reconciliation, security, supplication, victory, wisdom. Also obesity.

Word equating with agave, alive, aloe, Jolyffe, love, Olaf, Olyffe. In China symbolizes autumn, nobility. Award of literary merit. In Christianity sacred to the saints Bernard of Tolomei and Pantaleon. Olive land was one of the names of Egypt and Horus was called child of the olive tree. In Greek mythology Athena struck the ground and an olive tree sprang up. This was adjudged to be a greater gift to mankind than Poseidon's gift of the horse, and the city of Athens was named after her. Sacred to Apollo and Heracles. An olive branch was the highest award to a citizen and the highest prize in the Olympic Games. By Jews an ingredient in the sacred oil of the Tabernacle. An olive branch, symbolic of the drying up of winter floods by the spring sun, appeared in the mouth of the dove sent forth by Noah. In Rome sacred to Jupiter and Minerva.

Olive oil mixed with betony water. Supposedly avoids drunkenness.

OLIVER (OLIVIER) (1) Masculine name from the Latin, alluding to the olive tree. In feminine form, Olivia, Olive. (2) One of the great heroes of Carolingian legend. A favorite paladin of Charlemagne, with Roland he rode by the king's side. His horse was Ferrant d'Espagne and his sword was Hauteclair.

A life full of notable adventure he perished with his great friend Roland in the battle of Roncesvalles.

A Roland for an Oliver. See Roland.

OLIVINE Gem symbolizing innocent pleasures. Its virtues are modesty and simplicity.

OLLERUS Same as Ull.

OLOFAT (OLIFAT) Caroline Islands god of death. He opposed his father Lukelang, who desired man to be immortal. Mischievous and malicious he gave teeth to the shark. Lord of the deceitful and evil. Parallels Rail.

OLWEN Brythonic May queen, goddess of love and vegetation. Daughter of Yspaddaden Penkawr (Hawthorn); loved by Kulhwch. Associated with the wild apple. Her name signifies she of the white track. See Kulhwch.

OLYMPUS By early Greek poets sacred mountain abode in Thessaly of the gods; later placed in the sky. A wall of clouds protected the palaces on the summit from mortal eyes; its gates were guarded by the Horae. The name is used for any pantheon. See Omphalos.

Olympia. Sacred vale near Elis, Peloponnesus, Greece, with statues and temples of the gods. Site of the Olympic games.

Olympiad. The interval of four years between two successive celebrations of the Olympic games. Time was reckoned by the festival, which was held in a month corresponding to July.

Olympian. Godlike, majestic. The allusion is to the great gods of Olympus, from whom came benefits to mankind. In contradistinction to the gods of earth and the lower world they were worshiped in the daytime and their sacrifices were shared with worshipers in a sort of eucharistic feast. Their temples faced the east or rising sun. Generally considered to be twelve; Zeus (Jupiter), the sky and ruler of all the gods; Hera (Juno), his wife; Aphrodite (Venus), love; Apollo, sun; Ares (Mars), war; Artemis (Diana), moon; Athena (Minerva), wisdom; Demeter (Ceres), earth; Hephaestus (Vulcan), metal worker; Hermes (Mercury), wind; Hestia (Vesta), hearth; Poseidon (Neptune), sea. Demeter, Hestia, and Poseidon sometimes are excluded, and Asclepius (Aesculapius), healer; Dionysus (Bacchus), vine; and Heracles (Hercules), strength, are included. Demeter, Hephaestus, and Poseidon, who also had abodes in nether regions, were worshiped at night and their sacrifices were entirely consumed, no part went to the priest.

Olympic Games. Greatest of four sacred festivals in ancient Greece. All differences were forgotten and all states united in the festivities, which commenced with sacrifices and included racing, wrestling, and other contests. It lasted for five days, and concluded with processions, sacrifices, and banquets to the victors, who were garlanded with olive leaves.

OM (AUM) (1) Word root meaning sun. Appears in home, homo, etc. (2) A mystic ejaculation representing the name of the supreme being; uttered by Hindus on solemn occasions of invocation to Brahm. Used as a talisman. See Aum. (3) In modern occultism the spiritual essence; absolute good and truth.

Om mani padme hum. Literally, Om, the jewel (of creation) is in the lotus, amen. Famous six syllable formula. Most powerful mantra known to northern Buddhists. Charm for religious purposes. First words taught to a child, the last uttered on the death bed. It is addressed to Padmapani (Avalokita), and its utterance is believed to convey the reciter directly to paradise ending the cycle of rebirths. It has many meanings; its most popular is that the lotus signifies universal being and the jewel the individual being of the worshiper. Used in yoga system to express the union of spirit and matter, of the male and female. Followers of Bon repeat it in reverse.

OMACATL The Aztec god Tezcatlipoca as god of good cheer and lord of banquets.

OMADHAWN (OMADAWN, OMA-DHAUN) A term of abuse signifying madman, simpleton, from Old Irish. The first two syllables yield sun struck; the last equates with the Old English awen (frenzy).

OMAMORI Japanese Buddhist good luck charm; amulet giving divine protection. Usually made of white paper on which a few words of blessing are printed.

OMAR Masculine name from the Arabic, meaning the better. Akin to amor and Homer.

OMBROPHORE Greek soothsayer who foretold rain.

OMECIUATL (CITLALINICUE) Aztec twofold lady. Female power of generation. With Ometecutli she dwells in Omeyocan, place of the twofold.

OMEGA Twenty-fourth and last letter of the Greek alphabet. Figuratively, the end, the last. Symbolizes the cosmic rope which holds all things together. The great O or world egg of Orphic mysteries. Equivalent of English long O.

Alpha and Omega. Beginning and end, the first and last.

OMER Hebrew measure of capacity; also the sheaf brought to the tabernacle on the second day of Passover.

OMETECUTLI (CITLALLATONAC) Aztec twofold lord. Male power of generation. With Omeciuatl he dwells in Omeyocan, place of the twofold. In Toltec belief ruler of heaven and earth and procreator of all life.

OMETOCHTLI Literally two rabbits. Aztec pulque god killed by Tezcatlipoca, thus a resurrected god. He was an agent of the drunken man's mischief. Parallels Bacchus.

OMEYOCAN Aztec place of the twofold. Abode of Ometecutli and Omeciuatl. From here the souls of babies, carrying the fates assigned to them, descended to mortal birth.

OMIT' O-FO Chinese Buddhist name for Amitabha. Name recited as the beads of the rosary are counted. For Nirvana, Omít'o-fo substituted redemption by faith and immortality in a blessed realm where souls are born again. He dwells in Hsi T'ien.

OMO-DARU-NO-KAMI In Japanese mythology older brother and husband of Aya-kashiko-ne-no-kami (awful or venerable-lady-deity). His name means perfect-exterior (or face) deity. Together they were a pair of the seven divine generations and represented the gradual progress of creation.

OMOHI-KANE-NO-KAMI Japanese deity thought-includer.

OMORKA (OMOROKA) Babylonian female ruler of primeval monsters. Identical with Tiamat.

OMPHALE In Greek mythology the Lydian queen whom Heracles served for three years to expiate for the murder of Iphitus. While her slave he wore female garb, spun wool, and performed other menial female tasks. She wore his lion's skin and wielded the club. The attractive masculine queen and Heracles were lovers. See Androgynous deities.

OMPHALOS Deity throne, especially of the earth mother. Hub, navel, yoni. Symbolizes divinity, order, peace, tranquility. Altar of conical stone in the temple at Delphi supposedly marking the navel of the earth. The spinning wheel at which Heracles labored was an omphalos, as was the sanctuary where Orestes took refuge. Resolves into om-phallus, i.e. the resistless shafts or arrows of enkindling light. Olympus is a corruption of omphalos, which is derived from the Egyptian Ompha-el, sacred mountain, oracle of the sun god. See Caer Sidi.

OMUMBOROMBONGO Tree out of which, according to Bushman tradition, came the first man and woman and first oxen.

ON (AUN) (1) Word root meaning one, sun. Appears in Haakon, Oannes, Solomon. Vowels are interchangeable. (2) Sacred city in ancient Egypt. Seat of solar worship. Also known as Eun, Un. Called Heliopolis by the Greeks.

ONAN In the cabala his sin corrupted the earth as well as man and caused the deluge.

ONATAH Iroquois corn spirit. Daughter of Eithinoha, earth. When she went in search of refreshing dew she was seized by the spirit of evil and imprisoned until Sun discovered her and guided her back to the fields. Analogue of Persephone.

ONCHESTUS Greek sea and fertility god; son of Poseidon.

ONDOUTAETE Huron Indian deity called on for aid in war. During the chase called Aireskou Soutanditemr.

ONE The Absolute, cosmos, creation, godhead, infinite, masculinity, supreme deity, synthesis, unity. Typifies the primal will which eternally creates and sustains the universe. By mystics called the pioneer and assigned to the First Great Cause. It corresponds to the color red, which incites to action; the Hebrew letter aleph; the planet Sun; the zodiacal house Aries, mansion of new life. Its rhythm suggests egotism (destructive aspect), individualism (constructive aspect). It typifies the hidden intelligence. In a cycle or name it denotes change; when not used for achievement its nature becomes ruthless. Its character inclinations are boldness, consciousness, energy, isolation, originality, self-centeredness. In the cabala the world of essence, the Crown, the first Sephira, Eternal Voice, the I Am, Spirit and Word. Among Pythagoreans, being unchangeable, its attribute is reason.

One-eyed. Divine omniscience. An aspect of sun, sky, and sun deities. Horus, Odin, Siva, Zeus have been so portrayed. In sky gods typifies the all-seeing sun. Man-eating giants and monsters, personifying a death-dealing sun, are frequently portrayed as one-eyed. In fable a one-eyed race of ogres, called Arimaspians after Ahrimanes, endeavors to filch hoarded gold (fertility or wisdom) guarded by griffins. To dream of a one-eyed person is a troublesome omen.

One-horse. Minor, small, of inferior capacity or resources.

One way road. Death. Also one way ticket.

ONE HUNDRED Perfection.

One hundred eight. Buddhist number of sins of the flesh.

ONEIROS Greek personification of dreams. Descendant of Nyx. Portrayed as a middle-aged man with two large wings on his back, two small wings on his head.

ONEIS Nymph sometimes said to be the mother of Pan.

ONESIMUS Masculine name from the Greek, meaning helpful, profitable.

ONE THOUSAND Absolute perfection as the cube of ten. In cabalism the conqueror.

ONGON Buriat household spirit worshiped by a family. Images, in animal, bird or human form, which serve an individual, are destroyed on the possessor's death. A famous one, in the form of a human head with hair and beard and rattle around its neck, which supposedly embodies the spirit of a Genghis Khan ancestor, has not been destroyed. By the Altai called kurmes, by certain Turks called tyus. Resemble lares.

ONI (1) Demon of Japanese folklore. Nether world being manifested in disease and wickedness on earth. He may be the spirit of a dead man. Represented in art with a flat face, a mouth that stretches from ear to ear, three eyes, and horns. An oni has three toes, three fingers, wears a tiger skin loin cloth, and carries a rod of sharp spikes. He is fond of interfering in human affairs, but is easily baffled by simple incantations or charms, which bring on a display of irritation that makes him look ridiculously comic. When his horns are cut off he becomes tame. (2) Leader of the onis; ruler in Naraka.

Oni-bi, Japanese demon fire.

ONION Oneness, primal cause, unity. Eternity, immortality, the universe, suggested by its veil after veil. To dream of one is good luck. An onion under the pillow on Saint Thomas's eve is said to bring dreams of one's future spouse. A crop of thick-skinned onions is a sign of a severe winter. Among the druids and ancient Egyptians a deity emblem. In early England used for divining purposes. In southern United States carried on the left side to ward off disease and burned in a fire to bring good luck.

ONITSU-NU Japanese beach-field-master. Grandson of Susanowo, sea and storm god. He enlarged the province of Idzumo by pulling with a rope land from Korea.

ONK (ONKH) Same as Ankh.

ONLY BEGOTTEN Epithet of Christ. Name of one of the gnostic Aeons.

ONNIONT Huron great serpent. It had a sharp horn or magical jewel head which, when cut off, brought good luck to the possessor.

ONO Society Islands primeval deity. Sound, which evolved from Atea, light. Destroyer of Mutuhei, silence. See Tanaoa.

ONOGORO (ONOKORO) In Japanese mythology the self-curdling or self-condensed. Island formed by Izanagi and Izanami when they stirred the primeval brine with the jewel-spear. Compares with Delos.

ONO-NO-KOMACHI In Japanese legend one punished with solitary years for pride; also one exemplifying the transitoriness of physical beauty and the futility of pride. A beautiful flower maiden, she was so vain, she met with ill fortune in love. She left the court and lived as a recluse. When she died no one buried her, and her corpse remained exposed to the weather.

ONO-NO-YORIKAZE In Japanese legend a lover whose mistress believed he had abandoned her and committed suicide. Yori-kaze grieved so bitterly for his mistress he committed suicide and was buried beside her. Out of her grave patrina grew; out of his grew miscanthus, and ever since the two grasses, symbolizing eternal devotion, are rarely found apart.

ONTO AND BONTO Finno-Ugric husband and wife gods of evil. See Staka Pas.

ONYX August birthstone. Symbolic of clearness, dignity. Its sentiment: conjugal felicity. Dream significance: happy marriage. Ancient lapidaries cut to reveal an eye as a charm to protect wearer from all dangers. Dispeller of nightmares. Provider of fearlessness. Adorned breastplates of travelers and warriors. On the breastplate of the Hebrew high priest assigned to the tribe of Ephraim (or Joseph).

By occultists assigned to the tribe of Dan.

Black onyx. Valued for roses as it was believed to restrain the passions, strengthen spiritual impulses, and inspire deep devotion.

Carnelian onyx. In the language of gems: Distinction lies before you.

OOP Word root meaning disk, eye, or hoop. Root of sloop.

OOROORAKE Cry of the fiends of Hell to hail Lucifer on Walpurgis night. Cognate with eureka, hurrah, hurray, all of which may be resolved into fire of the great A (sun).

OP Word root meaning eye. Interchangeable with ap, ip, ob. Appears in Ethiopia, Europe, hope, optics.

OPAL October birthstone governing Libra. Symbolic of confidence, happiness, hope, innocence, prayer, tender love. Sentiment: pure thoughts; virtue: increases faithfulness. Dream significance: provides great possessions. Ancients believed it brought success to the wearer, giving prophetic ability as long as it was used for unselfish ends; any attempt to use it to injure another doomed the wearer. Its occult powers intensified if worn by one born under its sign; otherwise it causes ill luck. Those born under its sign are said to be adventurous, poets, and will be prolific in progeny.

Fire opal. In the language of gems: Adversity cannot crush you.

Jasper opal. Symbolizes humility.

Moss or wood opal. In the language of gems: I value your approval.

OPE Norse torture demon. Personification of hysteria.

OPEN BOOK Intellectual attainment.

Opening of Mouth and Eyes. Name of a burial ceremony performed in the tombs of kings in ancient Egypt to enable the dead monarchs to see and taste and enjoy the offerings buried with them and to recite the correct formulas on their underworld journeys. The rite was part of a general reenactment of the Osiris myth of death and regeneration, and the dead were believed to be brought to life again by it.

Open Sesame. A key to a mystery or that which acts like magic in obtaining admission, a favor, or recognition. From the magical conjunction which opened the robber's cave in the story of Ali Baba in Arabian Nights.

OPHANIM In the Old Testament the wheels of the cherubim. Also a class of angels in the Book of Enoch. In the cabala the celestial wheel.

OPHEL Hebrew name meaning hill. Anciently a quarter of Jerusalem adjacent to the temple. It appears to have been enclosed by a wall and fortified.

OPHELIA (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning serpent marsh. (2) In Shakespeare's Hamlet one who is innocent and lacks the ability to cope with life's problems.

OPHIOGENES A legendary race of ancient Troy whose touch supposedly cured snake-bite. The founder of the race was said to have been transformed from a serpent into a man. Snake charmers. Compare Psylli.

OPHION In Greek mythology

king of the Titans. Great cosmic snake, parent of the Orphic world-egg. With his wife Eury-nome ruler of Olympus until de-throned by Saturn and Rhea. From Ophion's teeth the Pelasgi-ans were born.

OPHIR The country from which King Solomon obtained gold and precious stones. Its location is not known, and it variously is located in Ceylon, Ethiopia, India, or Malacca. By extension any land of fabulous wealth.

OPHIS (OPIS) Greek for snake. Equates with Apis, sacred Egyptian bull; with apse, altar end of a church, and with aves. Root of Ophelia, Sophia, sophos.

Ophite (Ophitae). One of a 2nd century gnostic Christian sect which worshiped the serpent as a symbol of divine wisdom.

OPHIUCHUS Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Serpens, Serpentarius, Serpent Holder. Depicted as a man grasping the serpent. By ancient Greeks revered as Asclepius, the healer.

OPHRYS May 5 birthday flower symbolizing disgust.

OPINION In an Italian icon portrayed as a well dressed woman appearing to be daring and bold. Wings on her wrists and shoulders help her to fly to express herself.

OPOCHTLI Mexican god of fishing and bird catching.

OPPOSITION Symbolized by a rectangle.

OPS Ancient Italian goddess of plenty. In early times associated with Consus; later the consort of Saturn. Represented as a matron crowned with towers, seated in a chariot drawn by lions. Her festival, the Opalia, was celebrated December 19. As Ops Consivia her festival was August 25. Also known as Berecinthia. Identified with Magna-Mater, Rhea.

OR In heraldry the metal or tincture gold. Represented by a white surface powdered with dots. Symbolic of honor, light, loyalty.

ORACLE Seat of worship of a special divinity who issued commands or revelations; the priest or priestess who supposedly interpreted the words of a deity and gave knowledge of the future. Hence a person of great knowledge or wisdom; a wise saying. Oracles in ancient times were oral; of deities; by dreams, as connected with the sanctuaries of Aesculapius at Rome; of the dead; by signs, as the rustling of leaves at Dodona. Those interpreted by shrine attendants usually were capable of two opposite meanings, thus ambiguity, double talk.

ORANGE (1) Celestial fruit. Symbolic of feminine principle, generosity, infinity, perfection. Eaten as a cure for dispepsia. Word resolving into or-an-je, i.e. golden ever-existent one or golden everlasting sun. In China and Japan fruit of the timeless tree, bringer of good fortune and immortality. See Tajima-mori. In Christian art an attribute of Virgin Mary. In England and Italy oranges were used in witchcraft to symbolize a victim's heart. The victim's name on a paper was pinned to an orange, which was kept in the chimney until the victim died. (2) Color symbolizing fire, flame, health, heat, lust, vigor, wholesomeness. In heraldry called tenne or tawney and represented by lines from sinister chief to dexter base crossed by horizontal lines. Symbolic of endurance, strength, worthy ambition. Corresponds to the musical tone D natural. By modern astrologists assigned to the sun. The personality traits of those who lean toward orange are: amiability eagerness to attract, gourmet, shallowness, zest for life. In symbology represents the red of passion tempered by the yellow of wisdom.

Orange blossom. January 26 birthday flower signifying chastity, eternal love, fertility. A nuptial flower which must be discarded before it withers or it will bring barrenness. In the language of flowers: You are pure and worthy. Emblem of Florida.

Orange tree. Southern countries.

ORANT In ancient Greek art a female worshiper represented with uplifted arm, palm held as if in prayer. Christian symbol of the church, communication with saints, prayer. In the catacombs a male or female figure represented with hands in the Eastern attitude of prayer. Also typifies the soul of the dead. As the soul is feminine even in a masculine body, painted figures of the dead of either sex were draped in female garments.

ORB Completeness, perfection. Emblem of the earth, sun. Carries the same symbolism as ball and globe, which see.

Crowned orb. Power, royalty.
Orb and scepter. Dominion over the world.

Orb surmounted by cross. Christian dominion over the world.

ORC In Ariosto's Orlando Furioso a sea monster that devours mortals.

ORCHID Beauty, charm, femininity, grace, luxury. In the language of flowers: You are a belle; you flatter me. Flower governing the zodiacal Cancer. In China known as lan-hua. Emblem of friendship, harmony, love, numerous progeny, refinement. It is compared to the breath of a beautiful woman and the fame of a great man, and called the ancestor of all fragrance. Japanese flower of summer.

Orchid in a pot. Chinese symbol of friendship with great men.

ORCUS Ancient Italian deity of death. A man dressed as Orcus carried dead gladiators from the Roman arena. Identical with Dis Pater, Pluto. Perhaps the original of ogre of fairy tales. Cognate with the Spanish Huergo. Also the name of the underworld realm of the dead, an impenetrable dark cavity in the center of the earth.

ORDINARIES (HONORABLE ORDINARIES) In heraldry the painted ornaments representing the fastenings or strengthening parts of the shield. The number usually is given as nine: chief, pale, fess, chevron, bend, cross, saltire, pile, quarter.

OREADES (OREADS) Greek mountain nymphs. Fearless hunters they spared no animal. Represented as tall, graceful, and dressed in hunting costume. Echo was an Oread.

OREGON Emblem: grape; motto: The Union; nickname: Beaver, nickname of native: Web-foot.

OREITHYIA (ORITHYIA) Daughter of Erechtheus, king of Athens, the dawn city. Probably a personification of morning mist. She was carried from the banks of the Ilissus River by Boreas, the north wind, who ravished her, and she became the mother of Calais and Zetes.

ORENDA Iroquois all pervasive spirit. Indweller, potency, or marvelous companion of each animal, person, or thing. Power which dominates the forces of nature. Likewise the idol which keeps watch over the dead. When maleficent called Otgon. Cognate with Inua, Manitou, Oki.

ORENDIL (AURENTIL) Norse wind deity. See Orvandel.

ORESTES In Greek mythology son of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra; brother of Electra and Iphigenia. To save him from death at the hands of Clytemnestra (moon goddess) and her lover Aegisthus (darkness), Electra placed Orestes (spring sun) in the care of his uncle Strophius, at whose court Orestes and his cousin Pylades became fast friends. When Orestes grew to manhood he returned to Mycenae, where he murdered his mother and her paramour to avenge their murder of his father. For the crime of matricide he was pursued by the furies until he finally landed on the Taurian coast, where all strangers were sacrificed to Artemis by the priestess, his sister Iphigenia. Pylades volunteered to die in his place, but Iphigenia, discovering Orestes to be her brother, fled with them. Eventually Orestes was purged of his sin by Apollo, and became king of Mycenae. His flight typifies the descent of the sun each night into the underworld to be reborn (cleansed). Compare Alcmaeon, Light hero.

Orestes and Pylades. Inseparable friends, probably with a romantic attachment. Heroes of a light myth. Cognate with Damon and Pythias.

ORGAN A musical instrument which, in Christian tradition, typifies praise of God.

ORGIA In Greek antiquity nocturnal secret rites which honored various deities, especially Dionysus. A winter festival in which the maenads engaged in ecstatic dances to magically stimulate spring growth. At first intoxication by wine was not a part of the ritual; later it lost its solemn connotation and became synonymous with licentious mass intoxication. By extension a debauch, any wild or wanton revelry.

ORGOGLIO In Spenser's Faerie Queene the arrogant giant or man of sin who beat the Red Cross Knight and cast him into prison. Arthur rescued the knight and killed the giant. Orgoglio typifies the tyrannical power of the Roman church. First Arthur cut off his left arm, i.e. Bohemia; then he cut off the giant's right leg, i.e. England.

ORGON In Moliere's Tartufe a credulous man imposed upon by Tartufe, a religious hypocrite.

ORIANA (1) Feminine name from the Latin through Old French, meaning rise. (2) Frequently given to heroines of English literature. In Beaumont and Fletcher's The Woman Hater a tantalizing woman. In madrigals a sobriquet of Queen Elizabeth I extolling her loveliness and purity.

ORIFLAMME (ORIFLAMB, ORIFLAMBE) Literally, gold flame. A royal flag or glorious symbol, usually of red and gold. In heraldry a blue banner charged with gold fleur-de-lis. The early royal ensign of France and the banner of the Abbey of Saint Denis were so called.

ORIGEN An Alexandrian Greek church father of the 3rd century. He coupled woman with the deadly temptations and became a self-made eunuch. By some called a heretic.

ORIGINAL SIN In Adam typifies disobedience which brought death into the world. In Roman Catholicism the innate depravity considered to be mankind's heritage from Adam.

ORIGIN OF LOVE In an Italian icon personified by a young beauty holding a mirror exposed to the sun and setting fire to a flambeau in the other hand. A winged cupid stands beside her. A ribbon with the motto, "Sic in Corde Facit Amor Incendium," floats from the mirror.

ORI-HIME (WAKAHIRUME) Japanese dawn maiden who harmonizes the day. Weaver damsel, whose lover is Kengiu. Analogue of Aurora, Chih Nu, Penelope.

ORILLO In Ariosto's Orlando Furioso a magician whose life depends on a single hair.

ORIOLE Happiness. In China called huang-ch'iao and, in art, associated with the chrysanthemum.

ORION (OARION, URION) (1) Greek sun hero. Hyrieus, king of Hyria in Boeotia, was without an heir when visited by Zeus, Poseidon, and Hermes. In return for his hospitality, when he requested a son, the three gods urinated on an oxhide, which they instructed Hyrieus to bury. At the end of ten months the child Orion was brought up from the earth. In other legends he was the son of Dionysus and Demeter. Orion grew into a giant of great beauty. He offered violence to Merope (or Aero), daughter of King Oenopion, who blinded him. An oracle told him to regain his sight he must travel eastward, and he waded the Aegean Sea (entered the underworld for the night), guided by the blacksmith Cedalion, supplied by Hephaestus. Regaining his sight (rising at dawn) he lived as Artemis' huntsman. When he made love to Eos, he was slain by Artemis and transformed into a constellation. In another version he boasted he could conquer any animal and, to punish him, a scorpion sprang out of the earth and bit his foot, causing his death (sinking). His hound was Sirius, who marked the time of yearly drought. He wore a lion's skin, emblem of the wild beasts he slew, and carried a club, his weapon. (2) The most magnificent of all constellations. Represented on charts by the figure of a man wearing a belt formed by three bright stars and a sword formed by three bright stars. Also called Giant or Great Hunter. The Babylonians called the constellation the faithful shepherd of the heavens and identified it with Tammuz. Among the Buriats he was a hunter born of a cow with a human head. He pursued three stags and as he shot his arrow the heaven god lifted him into the sky, placing his arrow below him. Appealed to by hunters.

ORLANDO A Christian hero in medieval romances. Italian form of Roland, the most celebrated of Charlemagne's paladins.

Orlando's horse. Brigliadoro (golden bridle).

Orlando's ivory horn. Olifant, once the horn of Alexander the Great. It could be heard for twenty miles.

Orlando's sword. Durandana or Durindana. It once belonged to Hector.

ORLE In heraldry a bearing classed as a subordinate consisting of a narrow border close to the edge of a shield. In Scotland an emblem of preservation or protection. Also called tressure.

ORM Word root. From the Hebrew meaning prudent, ready-witted, wise, and from Teutonic for serpent. Appears in Ormsby, worm, etc.

ORMET In Norse mythology a river in Helheim. One of the rivers through which the dead pass and through which Thor wades when he goes to the lower Thingstead.

ORMOND Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning ship's ornament.

ORMUZD (AHURA MAZDA, ORMAZD, ORMUZ, OROMAZDEZ) Zoroastrian wise creator of all good things. Supreme being, deity of light, guardian of mankind. Opposed to Ahriman, the evil or dark principle. With Ahriman he sprang from eternity. In another version Ahriman was the offspring of a moment of doubt on the part of Ormuzd, in whom coexisted the polar opposite principles, Spenta Mainyu (positive good) and Ahriman (negative evil). Ormuzd presided over the world for 6,000 years and Ahriman for 6,000 years alternately in the manner of Castor and Pollux. Represented as a bearded man attended by angels; enclosed in a circle. Sacred to him were the bull, cock, dog, and number seven.

Wealth of Ormuz. Diamonds. The island Ormuz, in the Persian Gulf, is a mart for precious stones.

ORNAMENT Amulet which protects from disease and evil; badge of honor. Ear and nose rings indicate blood has been offered to a deity for protection; if of gold, emblematic of sun worship; if of silver, of moon worship. In Mexico ear ornaments were talismans connected with the eye and soul, lip ornaments with the heart.

ORO Chief god of the Tahiti. His emblem is a conch trumpet.

ORPHEUS Greek legendary hero with solar and wind attributes. Son of Apollo or the Thracian river deity Oïagros and the muse Calliope. He was a musician, poet, seer, theologian, and reformed the rites of Dionysus Zagreus. With the golden tones of the lyre he invented he tamed wild beasts and birds and moved stones and trees (rain clouds). An Argonaut, he saved his shipmates by playing on his magic lyre as they passed the island of sirens and drowned out the siren's song. When Eurydice, his wife, died Orpheus moved Aides to pity with his music, and the underworld deity consented to release Eurydice on condition Orpheus should not look upon her until they reached the upper world. Just before he stepped out of Hades he glanced back, and she vanished, thus dawn disappears with the full emergence of the sun. The prolonged grief of Orpheus (failure to provide fertility) enraged the Thracian maenads and, while engaged in a Dionysiac orgy, they tore him to pieces, a fate also suffered by Pentheus. The fragments of his body were collected by the muses and buried at the foot of Mount Olympus; his head they threw into the Hebrus River, whence it drifted into the sea, by which it was carried to Lesbos, where it continued to sing and prophesy. His dismemberment probably derives from the Osiris legend. His discoursing head is an analogue of those of Bran and Mimir, and the conception probably had its origin in the ancient practice of skull divination. His irresistible music corresponds to the music of Amphion, Angus, Krishna, and the Pied Piper of Hamelin. His descent into the world of darkness and return parallels that of Izanagi. One who lost his wife because he agreed to conditions he did not fulfil, he resembles Lot's wife, Psyche. His name answers to the Vedic Ribhu.

Lyre of Orpheus. Voice of the wind.

Orpheus of Highwaymen. Sir John Gay, on account of his Beggar's Opera.

Orphic hymns. Songs in praise of the gods attributed to Orpheus. No ancient songs, considered to possess rare merit, have survived. Those extant are 4th century forgeries.

Orphic Mysteries. Esoteric rites practiced by worshipers of Dionysus Zagreus, who claimed Orpheus as their founder. The doctrines incorporated the immortality of the soul and a symbolic incorporation with the deity effected by initiation, which freed the initiate from a cycle of rebirths and transported him immediately upon death to the Islands of the Blessed.

Orphic tablets. Eight funerary tablets of gold inscribed with the tenets of Orphism.

ORSON Masculine name from the Latin, meaning a bear.

ORT In Finno-Ugric belief the soul or shadow, which leaves the body in death or sleep.

ORTHROS (ORTHRUS) Literally, dawn. In Greek mythology offspring of Typhon and Echidna. Hound of Hell; two-headed dog which guarded the oxen (clouds) of Geryon. With Cerberus guarded the gates of Hades. Greek form of the Vedic Vritra.

ORTLIEB In Nibelungenlied son of Etzel and Kriemhild. Killed by Hagen, an enemy of Kriemhild. A light deity, probably spring sun.

ORTYGIA In Greek legends sometimes mentioned as the birth-place of Apollo and Artemis. Land of the quail, the earliest bird of spring, thus land of light.

ORVANDEL (AURVANDIL, EGIL-ORVANDEL, ORENDIL) Norse hero with solar and wind attributes. Known as the valiant and sea-wanderer. Mate of Groa, who bore him two sons, Hadding and Svipdag. After the death of Groa, mate of Sith, who bore him Ull. Also the father of Roskva and Thjalfi. His abode was on the borders of Jotunheim, and Thor frequently rested there after his battles with the giants. Orvandel's toe became frozen, and Thor snapped it off and tossed it into the heavens, where it became the constellation Orvandel's Toe (Orion). The Anglo-Saxon's called the constellation Earendel. Possibly identical with Horvendilus, father of Amleth (Hamlet).

ORVILLE Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning serenity.

O-RYU In Japanese legend the spirit of an old willow tree, which was married to a warrior and was parted from him when the tree was cut down.

OSBERT Masculine name from Old English, meaning god and bright.

OSCAR (1) Masculine name from Old English, meaning god and spear, warrior. (2) In Celtic mythology son of Ossian. Slayer of a gigantic terrifying boar, which ravaged fertility. The strongest of all Fenians, his banner, Terrible Broom, was the center of every battle, and never retreated a foot until the battle of Gabhra, at which Oscar slew Cairbre and was slain by him. Probably a sun deity.

OSH Algonquin for father. Allied to ohke, meaning earth. Both from a root signifying to come out of. See Okas.

OSHADAGEA Iroquois dew eagle. Assistant to Hino, his abode is in the western sky.

OSHALA Supreme deity of the Yoruba (Africa).

OSHOSSI Yoruban deity of the forest and chase. His rites have been carried to the New World, and he is worshiped in Brazil and Cuba.

OSHUN Yoruban fresh water goddess. Her cult has been carried into Cuba and Trinidad, where her devotees wear amber beads in her honor.

OSHUNMARE Rainbow serpent of the Yoruba. Also worshiped in Brazil. Counterpart of the Dahomean Aido Hwedo.

OSIER July 30 birthday flower symbolizing frankness.

OSIR Phoenician masculine name meaning husband or lord. Identical with Osiris.

OSIRIS Literally, many-eyed. One of the chief gods of Egyptian antiquity. Lord of Nile vegetation and the autumnal or setting sun; watcher. Son of Qeb and Nut or Hathor; also said to be son-brother-husband of Isis, whom he visited in the form of an inundation, and son-brother of Nephthys, both being celestial cows. Likewise revered as the self-generating one, whose eyes were the sun and moon, with air issuing from his nostrils, and the Nile from his mouth, thus the great male power. Foe of his brother (or son) Set, who yearly slew him, cut up his body into fourteen pieces, which he scattered. Isis recovered all but the phallus, which a fish ate. Binding the pieces with linen (mummy form), she breathed life into his nostrils. In other versions she buried each piece where she found it to distribute his fertilizing powers, or she placed the parts in a coffin that floated down the Nile. Annually he underwent reincarnation in the black bull Apis, thus a resurrected god, an opener of the way. An Abydos inscription refers to Osiris as a moon deity. In the underworld he was located in the seventh division of night, where he was judge of the dead, before whom souls were weighed, and king who governed the increase of crops. Also revered as an axis god, one whose body was placed in or crucified to a tree which denoted his fructifying powers. Born on the right side of the universe (east), he perished on the left. His death was avenged by his son Horus, and Isis and Nephthys lamented for him at the harvest. His worshipers, in annual festivals, also lamented for him at the autumnal close of the productive season. Probably originally a deified king whose worship was associated with agriculture. Later identified with Khentamenti, Ptah, Seker, Serapis. His cult dealt principally with life, death, rebirth, and a future life. Represented as a human with green or black flesh, bearded and wearing the atef crown of Upper Egypt. He was swathed like a mummy with his hands projecting from the wrappings. Also portrayed as a bull. His emblems: ankh, black bull of Apis (night growth or eternity), flail, leopard, open eye, ox, pine cone or tree, shepherd's crook, white pig (day growth or time), wolf. Designated God of Turquoise and Lapis Lazuli. A god torn to pieces, he corresponds to Dionysus; a fecundator of nature, he corresponds to Mithra and Tammuz. See Asar, Bata, Mutilated deity.

Osiris-Apis. A title of Apis in the afterworld. Osiris as judge was called Rhot-amenti.

Ptah-Seker-Osiris. All-father.

OSKI (OSCI) In Norse mythology the wish or will of Odin. Odin as wunsch (wish) god.

Oska-byrr. The wish-winds of Odin. Parallel the winds of Odysseus.

Oska-stein. Wishing stone giving power to Odin. Parallels the Blarney stone.

Osk-mayjar. The wishing maidens or Valkyrie.

OSMOND (OSMUND) Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning protection of Jehovah.

OSMUNDA October 28 birthday flower symbolizing dreams.

O-SOMAE Japanese rice cake symbolizing the sacred mirror of Amaterasu, sun-goddess.

OSRIC In Shakespeare's Hamlet a court dandy despised for his affectation.

OSSA (1) In Greek mythology sacred mountain in Thessaly. Separated from Olympus by the Vale of Tempe. (2) Greek deity of Rumor.

To pile Ossa on Pelion. To add difficulty to difficulty; in allusion to the fable that the Titans piled one mountain on the other and rolled both toward Olympus to enable them to scale the abode of the gods, their enemies.

OSSIAN Same as Oisín.

OSTENTATION Symbolized by a bird with borrowed plumes, peacock, turkey.

OSTOWEGOWA Great feather dance of Iroquois Indians offering thanks to the Creator for all gifts, especially crops.

OSTRICH Forgetfulness, good digestion, hard-heartedness, stupidity, timidity. In Arabian and Babylonian art associated with demons, a form of the chaos dragon. In Christian tradition symbolizes one who lays his trust in god, from the bird's supposed habit of burying its eggs in sand and leaving them to hatch themselves.

Ostrich feather. Symbolic of justice, space, truth. Emblem of Maat and Shu.

Ostrich policy. A short-sighted policy, the closing of one's eyes to conditions or dangers to persuade oneself they do not exist; in allusion to the practice attributed to the ostrich of hiding its head in danger, thinking it has concealed its entire body.

OSWALD (OSWOLD) Masculine name from Old English, meaning god and power.

OT Word root meaning hot. Correlative of at, et, which occur persistently in words relating to heat. Appears in hotel.

OTAFUKU Literally, big breasts.

Japanese joyful goddess. Popular name of Ame-no-Uzu-me, which see.

OTAVA AND OTSO In Finnish legend Otava is the bear-god of the Great Bear constellation and Otso, the bear, was born on his shoulders. Otso was given no teeth or claws until he pledged not to commit bloody deeds or violence. Because he did not keep his pledge he may be hunted.

OTGON (OTKON) Iroquois maleficent indwelling power. Beneficent powers are called Orenda, which see.

OTHELLO One who is magnanimous and credulous, but fiery and inflexible; in allusion to the Moor in Shakespeare's Othello, who kills his wife in a jealous rage cunningly instilled into his mind by the deceitful Iago.

OTHERWORLD World to which the soul departs without the body; world of darkness which the sun traverses throughout the night (or winter). In the Occident the otherworlds generally are understood to be Heaven or Paradise, realm of the righteous dead; Hell, realm of eternal punishment; Limbo, eternal abode of those who never had an opportunity to accept the Christian faith; Purgatory, intermediate realm where souls are made fit for Heaven or Paradise by expiatory suffering; also Fairyland, land of magic. Fairylands, which lie at the bottom of wells, beneath rivers, under the sea, deep in forests, inside mountains, on the moon, sun, or constellations, in the clouds, probably have been derived from ancient Pagan lands ruled by a goddess queen.

OTHINUS Odin in a Danish account. Chief of the gods, whose rule extended over Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, but who usually sojourned in Sweden.

OTHRYS In Greek mythology a sacred mountain; seat of the Titans.

OTO-HIME In Japanese mythology youngest daughter of the sea-dragon king. Wife of Urashima-Taro, a mortal. Their marriage ends in separation. See Divine-human marriages, Hiko-hohodemi.

OTRIGGER, SIR LUCIUS An aggressive fortune-hunter, always spoiling for a fight. From the character in Sheridan's The Rivals.

OTSHIRVANI Mongol hero who, in the form of a Garuda bird, killed the giant and evil sea-monster Losy. In Siberian mythology a creator god. Identified with the Buddhist Bodhisattva Vairapani.

O-TSUKI-SAMA Mr. Moon of Japanese mythology. The misanthus is his emblem.

OTTAR (OTER, OTTARR, OTTER, OTR) In Norse mythology son of Hreidmar; brother of Fafnir and Regin. He was a cunning fisherman who took the form of an otter to rob the sea of salmon and other fish. Loki, while in the company of Odin and Hoener, killed Ottar in his animal form. As a blood penalty Hreidmar exacted from the gods enough Andvarinaut gold to completely cover an otter skin. The famed gold carried the curse of death, and Fafnir murdered Hreidmar for it. The otter skin was a skin of snow; the gold was the sun's rays, which would melt every inch of the covering of winter and permit spring growth to come up from the earth. The gold brings death because in time fertility dies, i.e. is carried by demons underground. Poetically gold is called Ottar-ransom. Ottar in the form of a boar or horse called Hildisivini was a lover of Freyja.

OTTO Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning rich, and from Old Teutonic, meaning mountain.

OTUKAN Central Asian earth spirit. The country of old Turks worshiped as a deity. Marco Polo called the god Natigai; probably a corruption of the name.

OTUS (OTOS) Literally, pusher. In Greek mythology giant son of Poseidon and Iphimedia; twin brother of Ephialtes. With his brother he attempted to scale Olympus and dethrone Zeus, but was destroyed by Apollo. A wind deity. Together the brothers were called the Aloidae, which see.

OTYGEN Mongolian earth mother.

OURANOS Same as Uranus.

OURE Sacred Greek mountains which Gaea produced by her own inherent power. Sky pillars. In later myths their caves and streams became instinct with nymph life.

OUTIS Literally, nobody or noman. Name assumed by Odysseus to effect an escape from the cave of Polyphemus.

OVAKURU Ancestral spirits of the African Ashanti.

OVAL FORM Symbolizes the earth, the passive principle, the Chinese yin, Greek cteis, Hindu yonis, Japanese in. The miph- letzeth image for an Asherah.

OVDA Finno-Ugric evil spirit which dwells in chasms, forests, and ruins of old castles. It appears as either a man or a woman with feet backwards. It can be heard to laugh and clap its hands. It entices people to wrestle and then tickles them to death. If touched under the left arm it becomes powerless. A wind demon. Also called Alvasta, Surali.

OVEN Hospitality, warmth. Dream significance: (alight) ease, abundance; (fire out) distress.

OVERCOMING ONE'S FATE An incident universal in folklore in which fate is overcome by a person's wit in obtaining divine aid or by tricking the deity into giving aid.

OVID Masculine name from the Latin, meaning ram.

OVILLUS Literally, pertaining to sheep. An occasional name for the constellation Hercules, in allusion to his theft of the golden-fleeced sheep (sun-lit clouds) of Hesperides.

OWAIN (SIR OWAIN) In Brythonic legend son of the underworld god Urien and Modron. A light deity. A brother of Mabon the sun god; perhaps another name for Mabon. In Saltry's Descent of Owain called Sir Henry Owain, a knight of King Stephen of Ireland who passed through Saint Patrick's purgatory as a penance.

OWASSE In Menominee Indian legend the bear, chief of underground people, a matche-manito or malignant spirit, no doubt because of his cave-dwelling and hibernating habits coupled with his formidable strength.

OWEN Masculine name through the Welsh from the Latin Eugenius. Welsh meaning lamb, young warrior.

OWL Meditation, night, silence, wisdom. All-seeing, flesh-eater. Typifies a ghost, messenger of witches. The owl's cry in the vicinity of a house forebodes calamity, death, sickness. Unlucky to shoot. The owl is without known pedigree, thus lacks nobility. Dream significance: ill-luck. In heraldry one who is vigilant and of acute wit. Occult significance: moderation, non-docility, orderliness, unimaginativeness. Attribute of dawn deities. Sacred to Asclepius, Athena, Ketu, Minerva. Algonquin creator of the north wind. Central American Indian master of evil, bringer of infirmities. In Babylonian tradition the owl's voice at night was the spirit of a woman who had died in childbirth crying for her child. Buddhist foe of ignorance, lover of darkness and seclusion for meditation and reflection. Messenger of Yama. In China typifies lack of filial respect. Its voice is that of demons. In Christian crucifixion scenes an attribute of Christ, who sacrificed himself to give light to those in darkness. In scenes of hermits at prayer symbolizes solitude and wisdom. An attribute of Satan, prince of darkness, typifies deception. Egyptian symbol of death. In England typifies smuggling. In Japan, filial ingratitude. A form of Fukuro, the itinerant monk. Among the Ainu god of villages. In Malay a langsuvar (ghost). In Zoroastrianism the Asho-zushta.

Night-owl. A person who habitually keeps late hours.

Owl-eyed. Purlblind.

Owl in an ivy bush. Stupid blunder.

Owl-light. Dusk, twilight.

OX The celestial eye, creator, great heat and light of the sun (interchangeable with bull). Agriculture, conscientiousness, creative energy, endurance, fecundity, fertility, labor, life-power, patience, strength, toil, usefulness, wealth. Also apathy, carelessness, pride, stupidity. Dream significance: (fat) abundance; (mad) quarrel; (stopping) fatal indecision; (thin) bad harvest, failure; (yoked) quiet happiness. In heraldry, magnanimity, valor. Counterpart on earth of Taurus, the heavenly bull, because of its service in the cultivation of the ground. Attribute of the corn spirit. Emblem of the sun, because, like the sun, it toils for the benefit of others. In symbolic illustrations frequently represented as domed (d'ome = resplendent sun). Emblem of Damona, Jupiter, Merodach, Mithra, Osiris, Susa-no-wo, Thoth. Word cognate with axis (deer). Also called bos, majok. Among Asiatic plains people the animal which dug into the parched primordial earth with its horns until it reached water, from which lakes and rivers formed. In China second of the animals which carry the sun through the twelve terrestrial branches; guardian of the direction north-northeast-east; the hours 1 A.M. to 3 A.M.; the sign Taurus (Ch'ou). Represents Niu. Symbolic of spring; anciently a clay ox was beaten to stimulate the revival of spring. One of the attributes of Christ, who was born among oxen in the stable at Bethlehem, typifying his indefatigable service for mankind, necessary for the Ways of Ascent and the search for Sangraal. Symbolic of those who recognize their masters. Emblem of the evangelist Luke and the saints Sebold and Sylvester. In England called mart and slaughtered at Martinmas. Greek incarnation of the generative powers of Dionysus, the eating of the ox (or bull) being part of the god's cult. Among ancient Hebrews a sacrificial animal. In Iranian mythology a form of Geusha Urvan and of Sarsaok. Symbolic of cloud, rain, storm. In Japan called ushi; second zodiacal animal; Buddhist Zen sect emblem.

Dumb ox. Thomas Aquinas; so called because he was taciturn.

Have the black ox tread on one's foot. Know the meaning of misfortune or sorrow. Be visited by death, in allusion to the sacrifice to Pluto.

Lion-headed ox. Earthly power and abundance.

Moses' ox. One of the ten animals of the Moslem heaven.

Muzzle the ox that treads the corn. Give scant reward for labor, in allusion to a primitive method of threshing.

Ox-god. Apis.

Oxherd. In the East lover of Weaver Damsel. In China called Ch'ien Niu, in Japan called Kingiu, in Korea called Ching Yuh. Also known as cowherd, herdsman. See Ch'ien Niu.

Ox Leg. Name for Ursa Major in ancient Egypt. An ill-omened constellation; monster of the Northern Sky.

Ox skull. Death, mortality. When horned and festooned with flowers used at certain feasts as a reminder of mortality.

Ox yoke. Spiritual authority; also restraint, slavery.

White ox. By Arabs dedicated to the sun. A drove of white oxen frequently attached to the white sun tower.

Winged ox. Saint Luke.

Yoked oxen. Attached to a rick, agriculture; attached to a prairie schooner, emigration. See Ox yoke.

OXEYE DAISY October 29 birthday flower symbolizing an obstacle, disappointment. In the language of flowers: Be patient.

OXOMUCO Aztec first mortal woman created by Quetzalcoatl and Tezatlipoca. Spouse of Cixtli. Name derived from xomitl (foot). Probably the same as Xmukane, mother of the human race, a name which appears to be Mayan in origin.

OXYLUS In Greek mythology leader of the Heraclidae in their fifth and successful invasion of the Peloponnesus. He had three eyes. Probably a sun deity who felled his enemies with scorching heat. See Third-eye under Eye.

OYAN-DO-NE Seneca Indian east wind deity.

OYSTER Valued as an aphrodisiac. Dream significance: sure and easy profit.

OZEM Hebrew name meaning strength.

OZNI Hebrew name meaning Jah hears.

P

P Sixteenth of a class or series, fifteenth if the letter J is not counted. As understood by mystics the pastoral staff or shepherd's crook. Stands for Pa, Parent or Father, Shepherd of all souls. Denotes precaution, symbol of law of preservation; indicates clarity of vision. Occult significance: dominates success followed by ruin; its period is for seven years. Character traits: artistic, brave, candid, determined, loyal. Numerical value seven or sixteen. Physical weak spot: brain. Planetary correspondence: Mars. Zodiacal correspondence: Capricorn. Symbolic correspondence: hope. Tarot correspondence: Tower of Babel. Among Hebrew cabalists character traits are: agreeable, brave, honorable. In low form, mind blasted by astral fluid. In medieval Roman notation, 400; with a dash over it, 400,000. Parallels Anglo-Saxon rune peordh, Egyptian hieroglyph for shutter, Greek pi (also related to rho), Hebrew pe (mouth or tongue), Irish pethboc (reed or dwarf elder tree). Interchangeable with b, f, and v. See Alphabet Affiliations, F.

P surmounting twin V's. The labarum.

P surmounting X. The labarum.

PA (1) Primitive word root meaning father. Vowels are interchangeable. Appears in Italian padre, Latin pater, Maori pata, Persian pidar, Sanscrit pitar, etc. (2) Originally meant feeder and protector, not begetter.

PACARINA In Inca mythology dead ancestors, who might intercede with Viracocha for the fulfilment of prayers. Fathers of the Ayllu. Similar to angels.

PACCARI-TAMPU Inca place of birth of Ayar Auca, Ayar Cachi, Ayar Manco, Ayar Uchu, the four sons (winds) of Sun. Mythical cave from which the first humans emerged. The name means house of morning or mansion of dawn.

PA CHA Chinese god who protects against locusts. Associated with the rites for calling and destroying locusts. He is portrayed with a bird's beak and, in his clawed right hand, holds a magic gourd containing insecticide. He also has a bell. His color is blue-green, his hair red.

PACHACAMAC Literally, earth-maker or world animator. Inca supreme god, a wind deity. Son of Sun and Moon; brother of Con, whom he drove from the land. He changed those created by Con into animals and brutes, and created ancestors of the Inca race, to whom he taught the arts of peace and war.

PACHAD Literally, fear. In cabalistic system a name of Geburah, the fifth Sefira.

PACHAMAMA Inca earth mother. Her festivals, still celebrated in the highlands of Bolivia, Ecuador, Peru, and western Argentina, coincide with the beginning and end of the agricultural cycle.

PACOLET A dwarf in the romance of Valentine and Orson. He owns a winged horse of incredible swiftness, i.e. the wind.

PACTOLUS A stream in Lydia, Asia Minor, known as the river of gold. See Midas.

PADALON Hindu realm of departed spirits. It has eight gates, each of which is guarded by a supernatural.

PADDLES Hard-worker, self-reliance, sturdiness.

Paddles crossed. One whose service to mankind dominated his existence.

Paddles with heart-shaped blades. Large-hearted, sympathetic, with fellow feeling.

PADISHAH (PADSHAH, PADSHAW) and pure, spiritual son of Amitabha, born from a lotus to be the son of the childless blind king Indrabhuti. After founding Lamaism and building bSam-Yas, oldest monastery in Tibet, he changed himself into a horse in order to convert people of other lands. He subdued demon kings and she-devils (Tan-ma). Usually shown on a lotus with the khatvanga (magic ritual wand) he invented and a patra (begging bowl). He wears red garments and a peaked cap ending in a vajra (thunderbolt); lappets are over his ears. Frequently shown with his two wives. In Tibet called Chags-med-skyon-brol-ad-ma-dpal or Chha-me-chyon-dol-pe-me-pal.

PADLOCKS Inhospitability, possessions, secret, security. In China, when made of peach stones or wood, brass, and silver, symbols of good luck, longevity. Tied to children as amulets to chain them to existence. Emblem of Saint Raymond.

PADMA Buddhist non-tantric symbol, the lotus, which see. The blue lotus is called utpala. Emblem of Avalokitesvara, Manjusri, Padmadakini, Padmaheruka, Padmapani, Padmasambhava, Pandara, Sitatara.

PADMADAKINI Buddhist feminine deity of the air, capable of conferring supernatural powers. Her color is red, her emblems are a khatvanga (ritual wand), padma (lotus), rapala (skull cup). In Tibet called Padma-mkhah-Ngro. See Dakinis.

PADMAHERUKA In Buddhism the Red Herukabuddha, an aspect of Amitabha.

PADMAPANI Buddhist Bodhisattva, whose name signifies lotus bearer, and whose emblems are the kalasa (amrita vase) and padma (lotus).

PADMASAMBHAVA Literally, lotus born. Historical person deified. Sorcerer who defeated the magicians of Tibet and converted Tibet to Buddhism. Compare Aaron. In the 8th century A.D. he left India to found the Nying-ma-pa (Red Cap) sect or Adi-Yoga (tantric yoga) school of Buddhism, which was a fusion of Mahayana and Pon. In legendary account he was self-propagated PAEIVAE (PAIVA) Finnish sun god.

PAEON (PAEAN, PAIAN, PAIEON, PAION, PEAN) (1) Greek god of healing. Used as a surname of Asclepius; sometimes of Apollo. (2) Choral ode originally sung in honor of Apollo as healer or averter of evil, later in honor of Dionysus and other gods. When addressed to Ares sung on going into battle. By extension, any song of joy, praise, or triumph.

PAGAN In Christian conception a heathen, hence one ungodly, irreligious. Represented by a broken column, Pan, satyr, swine.

PAGE Card in the tarot deck symbolizing the body, personal vehicle of a human being. Page of clubs represents the idea of body; of hearts, the pattern of the body; of spades, the processes requisite to the manifestation of the body; of diamonds, the actualized manifestation of the body. Also known as Jack, Knave, Squire.

PAGLIACCI Personifies prologue.

PAGODA Sacred building in countries of the Far East; usually pyramidal in shape and connected with a temple. Anciently built for observation and to mark where sacred relics were interred. Corresponds to Western church tower. Symbolic of hope, inspiration, treasure. In miniature used as a talisman. In China called pao-t'a, in Sanscrit called stupa.

PAH Pawnee Indian moon deity. Appointed by Tirawa to a station in the west to illumine the night. From his union with Sakuru, the sun, a son was born who mated with the daughter of the Morning and Evening Stars and became the father of the human race.

PA-HRA Egyptian primeval deity, probably of chaos or darkness. Father of Ahi.

PA-HSIEN In China the Eight Immortals, legendary protectors of Taoism. Originally identified as rebels against the conventions of the court of the Sung dynasty and, in time, their nonsense became construed as wisdom in that if defied man-made codes. They became recluses and eventually visited the paradise of Hsi Wang Mu, fairy queen in the Western Sea. Miraculously endowed, they had the power to change whatever they touched into gold, become invisible or visible, raise the dead, and effect other wonderful transmutations. Resemble genii lohans, saints. Their names are: Chang Kuo-lao, Chung-li Ch'uan, Han Hsian-tzu, Ho Hsien-ku, Lan Ts'ai-ho, Li T'ieh-kuai, Lu-Tung-pin, Ts'ao Kuo-chiu.

PAI HU The Chinese white tiger, guardian of the west. One of the four fabulous creatures guarding the four cardinal points, the others being Ch'ing Lung (azure dragon), Chu Ch'ieh (vermillion bird), Kuei Shen (black tortoise or somber warrior). Also called Bach-ho.

PAIN (PAYNE) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning of the country, a rustic; also a pagan.

PAINTED CUP Flower emblem of Wyoming.

PAINTER'S EASEL Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Pictor.

PAINTING In China called hua; one of the four emblems of a scholar.

Painting of the Chinese god of Longevity. Called Shao t'u. Talisman.

PAIREKSE Ostiak flood hero. Son of the heaven god, ancestor of man. The writer-man who, in heaven, writes at the direction of the gods in the book of fate. A heavenly messenger and spy, he comes to earth on reconnaissances and is called traveling man or man of many lands. In folktales called the goose spirit because he makes his journeys in the shape of a goose or other animal. Analogue of Nabu, Noah, Noj, Puleh, Thout.

PAIRIKA Zoroastrian female spirit of seduction. The Pairikas cast evil spells on stars.

PA KWA (PA KUA) Chinese book of changes, eight diagrams or eight trigrams, standing for first cause, heaven-earth, light-darkness, yang-yin. The design is composed of solid lines symbolizing the yang or active principle of the universe, and broken lines, symbolizing the yin or passive principle, arranged in a circle. It supposedly first appeared on the back of the unicorn, and from it the written Chinese alphabet was devised. It is used for interpretation of omens and as an amulet for longevity. When the Tai Kih, the Great Monad, appears in the center it stands for the graphic representation of the origin of all things from the Absolute, and is placed over doorways as a talisman against evil. Its symbolism reading clockwise is: 1- ☰ K'un or Khwan, north, zodiacal ox, earth, yin or passive principle, submission. 2- ☱ Ch'en, northeast, dragon, thunder, movement. 3- ☲ Li, east, pheasant, sun brightness, creation, fire. 4- ☴ Sun, southeast, goat, still water, pleasure. 5- ☵ Khien, south, horse, heaven, yang or active principle, power. 6- ☶ Tui, southwest, cock, wind, wood, breath, flexibility. 7- ☷ K'an or Khan, west, boar, moving water, moon, peril. 8- ☰ Ken, northwest, dog, hills, hindering, resting. The sacred disk, Shen Mien represents the Ka Kwa in motion and symbolizes heavenly perfection.

PAL Syllable in divine names signifying the blade of creation, earth's axis. As a blade or spear indicates to brandish, drive, hurl, or wield a pal or pole. In palace the tent pillar or pole, suggesting impregnability. See spear stirring.

PALACE Authority, royalty. Dream significance: (see it) distress, sorrow; (inhabit it) pride in the wrong place.

PALADIN Any of the twelve peers of Charlemagne, hence a champion, knight. The names vary greatly. Among those called upon to make up the twelve were: Anseis, Archbishop Turpin, Astolpho, Berengier, Engelier, Fierabras or Ferumbras, Florismart, Ganelon, Gerard de Rousillon, Gerier, Gerin, Ivon, Ivory, Malagigi or Maugis, Namor or Nami, Ogier the Dane, Oliver, Orlando (Italian form) or Roland (French form), Otton, Rinaldo or Renauld, Salomon or Solomon, Samson.

PALAEEMON (PALAEMON, PALAMON) (1) In Greek mythology surname of Melicertes as sea god helpful to the shipwrecked. Also renowned as a wrestler. (2) In Virgil's third Eclogue a shepherd, umpire in music.

PALAMEDES Greek culture hero. Son of Nauplius, king of Euboea. Reputed inventor of dice, discus, lighthouses, weights, some of the letters of the alphabet, etc. During the siege of Troy he incurred the enmity of Odysseus by exposing his feigned madness. In revenge Odysseus concealed money and forged letters in Palamedes's tent, whereupon Palamedes was put to death for treason. An ingenious man is called, "quite a Palamedes," in allusion to this hero. Resembles Cadmus, Fuh-hi.

PALATIUM (PALATINE) Sacred hill in ancient Rome. Navel of heaven, pillar or vault of the universe, world axis. Romulus and Remus were placed on Palatium by Faustulus.

PALATO (PALANTA, PALANTO, PALATIA) In Roman mythology daughter of Hyperboreas (northwind), consort of Latinus (agricultural hero). Her abode was in the extreme north, where the axis-pole (pal) is located.

PALE In heraldry an ordinary consisting of vertical bands occupying one third the width and running through the middle of a shield. Bestowed on those who impaled or defended cities. Symbolizes fortitude, military strength. Its diminutives are endorse and pallet.

PALENESS Compassion, fear, illness, pining, suspicion.

Pale Horse. Death.

PALES Ancient Italian deity. When worshiped as a male, deity of flocks and shepherds; when female, she presided over agriculture and the fruitfulness of flocks. The name Palatine, originally signifying pastoral colony, is derived from this divinity, to whom cakes and milk were offered. Pales, meaning protector, is derived from the Sanscrit pala, i.e. one who feeds and protects.

Palilia (Parilia). Pales' festival. Celebrated on April 21, date of the traditional anniversary of the founding of Rome as the former abode of shepherds. Rites include bonfires of straw through which the flocks are driven for purification.

PALESMURT (AR ZORI) Finno-Ugric forest spirit. A wind demon. Half-man, with half a body, containing one eye, one arm, one breast, one foot. He is very strong, and with his one hand easily crushes a human. In the twilight he frightens lonely travelers with his shrieks.

PALETTE, MAULSTICK, AND BRUSH Artist, art, painting.

PALICI Beneficent twins; protector agricultural deities worshiped in Sicily. Sons of Jupiter and Thalia or Aetna. Also said to be the sons of Adramus. Their mother, pregnant of them, was at her own prayer swallowed by Earth, whence came the twins in proper time. Called gods of the breakless oath, and oaths in legal actions were taken beside their sacred springs. Their shrine served as an oracle and sanctuary for runaway slaves.

PALINURUS Pilot of Aeneas. He fell asleep at the helm, fell into the sea, and was drowned. Palinurus has become a generic term for a pilot or steersman, sometimes for a chief minister.

PALL (PALLIUM) Christian coronation robe, death garment, and ecclesiastical vestment symbolizing authority, union, yoke, and shroud of Christ. In heraldry a Y-shaped bearing charged with crosses patté fitché, and suggesting an archbishop's pallium. Appears in Canterbury arms. The Y-shape symbolizes the crucifixion.

PALLADIUM Sacred image of Pallas Athena (dawn). It was said to have been made from the shoulder blade of Pelops and to have fallen from heaven. According to tradition, as long as the statue remained within the city, Troy (abode of Hector, prince of darkness) would be safe. When it was stolen by Diomedes and Odysseus (sun heroes) the citadel fell. Aeneas carried it to Rome, where the Palladium was worshiped as an image of Aeneas. Probably a phallic figure comparable to the Miphletzeth. The name is applied to any protection or safeguard, especially an institution which guards something precious to a community. Compare stone of Scone.

PALLANTIOS (PALLANTIUS) A title of Zeus.

PALLAS (1) In Greek and Roman mythology a name of several gods, all of the monster type. Titan son of Crius and Eurybia; spouse of Styx, and by her father of Bia (strength), Cratos (power), Nike (victory), Zelus (zeal). Giant son of Lycaon; slain by Athena. Son of Evander; an ally of Aeneas, he has been equated with Saturn. (2) Another name for Athena, probably identifying her as the slayer of Lycaon's son. The giant killed by Athena is also known as Palleneos, and probably personifies darkness.

PALM BRANCH June 17 birthday flower with the sentiment spirituality. Symbol of conquest, creative force, endogeny, faith, joy, peace, preeminence, reward, salute, victory. In heraldry denotes justice, royal honor, triumph. Sacred to orgiastic goddesses. Used as a royal fan. Named from its flat spreading leaves, which resemble an open hand spread out. In China called chiao yeh and typifies harmony, mirth, self-education. In Christian art martyrdom, purity. Token of one who visited the Holy Land. Talisman for victory over temptation. In Greek a word identical with phoenix. Sacred to Nike. Awarded at Pythian Games. By Jews called lulab. Carried at the Feast of Tabernacles (see). Corresponds to the human spine. Roman emblem of public games. Sacred to Mercury, Venus.

Bear the palm. Be victorious; in allusion to the Roman custom of awarding a palm branch to the triumphant gladiator.

Itching palm. Greatly desire money, accept bribes. By tradition the itching right hand palm is a sign one is about to receive money.

Palm branch on coins or seals.

Worldly authority or power.

Palm branch encircled by seven or twelve stars. Virgin Mary's victory over sin.

Palm crown. Virgin saint.

Palmer. A pilgrim to the Holy Land, who returns with the palm branch as a token of the pilgrimage. Also a cheat or swindler, one who palms something, as a card.

Palmer's staff. Staff of a pilgrim to the Holy Land.

Palmer-worm. A caterpillar so called because it wanders about like a palmer or pilgrim.

Palm grease. Money paid as a bribe, a tip.

Palm off. Dispose of fraudulently; in allusion to jugglers who conceal in the palm of the hand articles they pretend to pass off in another way.

Palm Sunday. Sunday immediately before Easter, commemorative of Jesus's triumphant entry into Jerusalem. Parallels the Pagan rite of blessing fields; probably the outgrowth of an ancient phallic feast.

Palm tree. Beauty, conjunction of opposing forces, fruitfulness, internal conflict, immortality, nature of deity, phallic pillar issuing flames, self-creation. Androgynous and solar emblem, of which the Maypole is a modern substitute. Assyrian, Babylonian, Chaldean, Egyptian, Phoenician tree of life. Sometimes portrayed with seven branches as a fertility symbol. In Christian art sometimes appears as the tree of life. Typifies a righteous man because its roots are in the earth, its head is lifted toward heaven. Emblem of Saint Ambrose. Egyptian symbol of the year, the branch symbolizing the month, as the nature of the tree is to produce a branch each month. In Hebrew called tamar. Tree by which God sometimes made known his will, hence word of God. Typifies the soul aspiring toward heaven. Emblem of the tribe of Menassah.

Palmy days. Joyous, prosperous days, as were those of a triumphant gladiator when he received the reward of the palm branch.

Yield the palm. Suffer or admit defeat.

PALMETTO Emblem of South Carolina.

PALSGRAVE (PALGRAVE)
Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning a mounted officer.

PALUC CAT (PALUG CAT)
A creature born of a pig and hunted by Arthur. Because of a prophecy that the cat would cause the land to become sterile Coll, its guardian tossed it into the sea, where it was found and nourished by Paluc's children until it became one of the three plagues of Anglesey. Demon form of Cerridwen, which compares with monsters of drought and darkness (winter) fought by sun heroes.

PALULUKON Hopi plumed serpent with both subterranean and celestial powers. God of fertility and lightning. By the Zuni Indians called Koloowisi. See Kokko.

PAMELA Feminine invented name. It appears in English literature as the name of a simple country girl, whose chastity and modesty win her a noble husband.

PAN Greek woodland spirit. God of flocks, hills, pastures, and wild life. Lusty deity of weather or wind insofar as weather affected crops and herds. Chief of satyrs, he presided over rural occupations, was patron of fishermen, hunters, and shepherds, and created mirages and other pitfalls for travelers. Son of Hermes and Dryope, Hermes and Penelope, Odysseus and Penelope, of Penelope and all her suitors, or of Zeus and Callisto. Lover of Pitys and Syrinx. When Syrinx fled from him, the gods to help her turned her into a reed. Pan joined seven pieces of the reed together and named the musical instrument in her honor. He was the author and director of dances to the gods, and wandered through the forests attended by nymphs playing the syrinx or Pan's pipes. He is said to have caused groundless fear, hence the word panic. Because, with his own raucous voice, he supposedly created panic among the Persians at Marathon, Athenians worshiped him on the Acropolis. In later times a special deity of the Orphics, who interpreted his name, probably originally Paon (feeder), to be Pan (all) and revered him as a pantheistic nature god. Plutarch relates that Thamus, passing the island of Paxos, heard a mighty voice commanding Thamus to proclaim, "Pan is dead." Probably a misunderstanding of the lament for the mutilated Tammuz. In Christian mythology made to coincide with the nativity or crucifixion to mark the end of Paganism. He usually is portrayed with the head, chest, and arms of a man, a crooked nose, the legs, horns, tail, and sometimes the ears of a goat to typify his fertile powers. He is said also to personify the sensual (animal) as well as the spiritual (godly) attributes in mortals. By gnostics he is represented seated in the center of the zodiac playing on his pipes. Milk and honey were offered to him, cows, lambs, rams were sacrificed to him. Pan is the root of panis, Latin for bread, and pensée, French for idea or thought, and is a generic term for mountain. His type has been multiplied into a plurality called panes. Identified with Anshar, Faunus, Inuus, Lupercus, Min.

Pandean. A strolling performer on Pan's pipes.

Pan's pipes. The syrinx, flute of seven reeds invented by Pan. The wind. Pan's skill on the pipes is reminiscent of the primitive magical practice of endeavoring to control winds by whistling or playing on wind instruments.

PANACEA Literally, all healing. Greek goddess of health. Daughter of Asclepius, god of medicine. Her name is applied to any cure-all for diseases or misfortunes. Figuratively that which cures is the daughter of the healing art. Medieval alchemists searched for a panacea. Some famous panaceas of fable are: Achilles' spear, Aladdin's ring, Fierabras' balsam, Medea's kettle, Prince Ahmed's apple, Promethean unguent.

PANACHE A plume or bunch of feathers used as a headdress on a helmet to symbolize knightly honor or daring.

PANATHENAEA The most important of Athenian festivals. Celebrated in honor of Athena, and held in midsummer. The lesser Panathenaea was held annually; the greater was held every five years, at which time a peplos embroidered in gold for Athena's statue was carried through the city spread on a mast like sails. The design depicted the victory of the goddess over the giants.

PANCAMAHARAJA The five great astrologers or kings of Tibetan Buddhism. Identical with the Mahapancharaja. In Tibet called sKu-lna-rgyal-po or Kunga-gyal-po. They are: sKu-irgyal-po, king of the body; Pringlas-gyi-rgyala-po, king of magic; gSun-gi-rgyal, king of speech; Tsun-gyi-rgyal-po, king of accomplishments; Yon-tan-rgyal-po, king of deeds.

PANCARAKSA (PANCHARAKSHA) Five Buddhist spell goddesses or great protectresses. They are worshiped as a group and also independently. In usual form they are peaceful, wear Bodhisattva ornaments, and have images of their Dhyani-buddhas in their crowns. Their emblem is a white parasol. They are: Mahamantranusarini, east, spell against disease; Mahamayuri, north, spell against snake bite; Mahapratisara, south, spell against physical dangers and sin; Mahasahasrapramardani, center, spell against earthquakes and storms; Mahasitavati, west, spell against ferocious animals and plants.

PANCHALI A name of Draupadi, the common wife of the five brothers in the Hindu epic Mahabharata.

PANCHATTVA In Japan the five principles of Kulacharya, i.e. wine, grain, flesh, fish, coition. Also known as the five M's.

PAN CHHEN RIN-PO CHHE The first Tashi Lama; spiritual head of Tibet. Historical person of the 17th century deified as an incarnation of Buddha Amitabha (Buddha of Infinite light).

PANCRACE A bore who attempts to apply involved logical analysis to trivial matters. From the character in Moliere's Mariage Forcé.

PANCRATIUM In Greek antiquity a contest of athletes, including boxing and wrestling, which formed a part of religious festivals to call into play all the powers of the contestants, who continued until one was killed or acknowledged defeat.

PANDARA In Buddhism a sakti of Amitabha. A Dhyani-buddha-sakti whose asana is lalita, color is rose, emblems are the cakra, kapala, kattrka, padma, utpala, and whose mudras are the varada and vitarka.

PANDAREOS In Greek mythology a dog which guarded the infant Zeus in the cave of Dicta.

PANDARUS In Homer's Iliad a renowned archer. During an armistice with the Greeks he broke the truce by shooting an arrow which wounded Menelaus. He was killed by Diomed, and Troy was destroyed. Hero of a time myth; truce violator. In Chaucer's Troilus and Creseide he procures Creseide for Troilus. His name is the source of pander.

PANDAVAS In the Hindu epic Mahabharata the five sons of Pandu. Inasmuch as Pandu had not consorted with his wives Kunti and Madri, mothers of the five, they were virgin born or sons of deities, acknowledged by Pandu to be his heirs. Yudhishtira, the eldest, was the son of Dharma and celebrated for his integrity; Bhima, a giant with a fiery temper, was the son of Vayu the wind; Arjuna, the chivalrous one, was son of Indra; Nakula and Sahadeva, famous for wisdom and beauty respectively, were the twins of the Asvins. The five were guardians of crops and fought their cousins the Kauravas, sons of the blind King Dhritarashtra, for possession of the kingdom whose capital was Hastinapura. At a public trial of strength the princess Draupadi is won by Arjuna and becomes the wife of all the Pandavas. In a gambling match the Kauravas cheat the Pandavas and drive them into exile. After thirteen years the Pandavas overthrow the Kauravas but, in remorse, abdicate and set out for Indra's heaven, all falling by the wayside except Yudhishtira, who arrives to find his brothers and Draupadi there to receive him. This is a time myth, in which the Pandavas provide fertility; Draupadi is the spring maid; the Kauravas typify drought or winter. During the period of the Pandavas' exile earth is without fruitfulness. All represent various social aspects as the poem is also rich in ethical discourse. Compare Bharata.

PANDEMONIUM Literally, from the Greek, all the demons. Milton used the name for the palace in Hell built by Mulciber under Satan's orders, hence an abode of demons, any place or gathering remarkable for disorder and uproar.

PANDION Legendary king of Athens. Son of Erichthonius and Pasithea; father of Butes, Erechtheus, Philomela, Procne. An agricultural hero. Pandion II, the great grandson of the above, was the grandfather of Theseus. Also an agricultural hero.

PANDORA In Greek mythology the first woman. At the request of Zeus created by Hephaestus. Athena taught her the use of the loom, Aphrodite bestowed beauty upon her, Hermes gave her a crafty and thievish disposition. She became the wife of Epimetheus, who instructed her not to raise the lid of a chest in his house.

She disobeyed him, and sickness, war, and other evils fell upon mankind. When she hastily replaced the cover hope alone remained in the box. Thus she heightened man's misery by withholding hope. In one version Epimetheus, afterthinker, was forewarned by his brother Prometheus, forethinker, not to marry Pandora. He was keeper of a chest containing all the blessings of mankind and, upon marrying Pandora, she opened the box, and all the blessings except hope escaped before she replaced the lid; thus she saved only hope for mankind. She typifies a beautiful but dangerous woman. Her name means all-gifted, i.e. gift of all the gods, and suggests her origin was a form of the earth goddess, i.e. giver of all gifts, including death and disease. Also called Anesidora, which means she who sends up gifts.

Pandora's box. A gift which seems valuable, but which actually is a curse.

PANDROSOS Literally, all-bedewing. In Greek mythology the daughter of Cecrops; sister of Agraulos and Herse. The three sisters were entrusted with a box by Athena, who instructed them not to open it. They disobeyed and found the snake entwined body of the infant Erichthonius (earth's fertility). In fright they threw themselves over the precipice of the Acropolis. Dew disappears as the morning advances.

PANEMERIOS In Greek mythology a title of Zeus meaning of the livelong day. In this aspect he appears to have been a god of the solar year, who annually was shorn of his hair and power by the moon goddess. His male attendants or priests, the curetes, dedicated their forelocks to him in the morning. Compare Nisus, Samson.

PANEROS Stone which supposedly made barren women fruitful.

PANGGU Melanesian creator deity. Parallels Chinese P'an Ku.

PANGLOSS Literally, from the Greek, speaking all tongues. In Voltaire's Candide a pedantic philosopher and incurable optimist, who causes all sorts of misfortune.

PANIS Literally, niggardly. Hindu marauders, air and drought demons. Foe of Indra, they stole his cows (fertile rain clouds), which they hid in a cave beyond the river Rasa, where Indra battled them and released his herd. In some poems the Panis appear to be gloomy powers of darkness and the cows typify the bright clouds of day.

PANISC (PANISCI, PANISK) A forest godling, half man, half goat, attendant upon Pan.

PANJANDRUM (GRAND PANJANDRUM) A word coined by the comic dramatist Samuel Foote. Used for one who is pompous, a minor official, village squire, or unknown or mysterious person who exalts his position.

P'AN KU Chinese great architect and creator produced from the interactions of the Greater and Lesser, subdivisions of the Yang-Yin. In some versions he emerged from the cosmic egg, in others his father was Heaven, his mother Earth. In one myth he is androgynous. He was the first of all living things, and first ruler of the world. From granite blocks floating in space he hewed the sun, moon, and stars, and became a light giver. Azure Dragon, Phoenix, and Tortoise, which came out of chaos, assisted him. He worked for 18,000 years and died; in dying he completed the universe. His blood became rivers, his bone marrow gems and pearls, his bones and teeth metals and minerals, his beard the light of stars, his breath clouds and winds, his left eye the light of the sun, his right eye the light of the moon, his flesh soil, his hair trees and plants, his head mountains, his limbs the four quarters of the world, his muscles the earth's strata, his sweat descended as rain, his voice as thunder, and the parasites which infested his body, impregnated by the wind, became the human race. In art shown as a horned dwarf dressed in bearskin and leaves, holding a hammer and chisel or a sun and moon; or portrayed as a giant brandishing an ax. Analogue of Izanagi, Manzashiri, Panggu, Purusa, Ymir. See Tai-kih.

PANOI In Banks Islands mythology entrance to the underworld.

PANO-KA (PAKU-LA, P^U-CHU-LO) Literally, mongoose bearer. One of the eighteen lohan of Chinese Buddhism. He was converted to Buddhism in his 120th year and became young again. He lived free of illness and carried a mongoose around with him, whence his name. He is pictured with a small boy at his side and a rosary of 108 beads, over which he meditates. Also known as Nakula or Vakula.

PANOPTES See Argus Panoptes.

PANQUETZALITZTLI Aztec life-giving and war goddess.

PANSY February 4 birthday flower. Symbolic of heartease, kind thoughts, meditation, remembrance, trinity, unity. In the language of flowers: You occupy my thoughts; think of me.

PANTAGRUEL Literally, all thirsty. In Rabelais' Pantagruel giant son of Gargantua and Badebec, who dies at his birth. Last of a giant race. A buffoon, a jovial drunkard with satirical humor. He holds cities in his mouth; his tongue is large enough to protect armies from rain. His name indicates the period of drought during which he was born. Pantagruelion. Plant invented by Rabelais. A humorous appellation for hemp from which the hangman's noose is made.

PANTALOOON In Italian comedies an absurd emaciated old man who wears slippers; a dotard. Name derived from Pantaleon, patron saint of Venice.

P^AN-TAO (FAN T[']AO) Chinese peach tree of the gods; bearer of the fruit of immortality. It blossoms every 3,000 years and yields its fruit 3,000 years later. Located on the Isles of the Blest called Shen-t'ao.

PANTECATLE One of the four divine brothers in Aztec legend. Probably a title of Tezcatlipoca.

PANTHAKA In Buddhism the thirteenth arhat. He taught the way to salvation; then ascended to the heavens of the thirty-three gods. His emblem is a patra. In Tibet called Lam-bstan or Lam-ten.

PANTHEON Literally, from the Greek, all the gods. A temple dedicated to all the gods of a people; specifically that erected at Rome by Agrippa. By extension a shrine to a country's heroes, a building where famous dead are interred.

PANTHER Bloodthirstiness, deadliness, ferocity, irritability, knavery, lack of sensitiveness, luxury, one who strikes an unexpected blow without warning. Because of its eye-like spots the watcher or supreme deity in many religions. Typifies summer. Dream significance: fatal omen. In heraldry signifies a beautiful woman who can be fierce or tender, defending her young at the hazard of her life. Sacred to Bacchus, Dionysus, Ninurta, Osiris. In Christian tradition it supposedly sleeps for three days, and then emerges from its den with a roar which is heard throughout the countryside. From its mouth issues sweet scents which lure followers. Thus an aspect of Christ. Seneca Indian west wind spirit called Dajoji.

Panther's breath. Holy spirit, life. Charm against disease.

Panther with head between his legs. One showing only his fine fur, hence deceit.

PAN-T'O-KA (PANTHAK) One of the eighteen Chinese Buddhist lohans. One of Buddha's greatest disciples, he ruled Trayastrimsat heaven and had the magical power to pass through solids, to produce fire and water at will, to reduce his size until he disappeared. Portrayed seated on a rock reading from a scroll. Elder brother of Chu-Ch'a-Pant'o-ka. Also known as Pantha, the Elder.

PANURGE Literally, all-worker or all-doer. In Rabelais's Pantagruel the cowardly but jovial favorite of the hero. He will 'do' anything or anyone.

PANZA, SANCHO See Sancho Panza.

PAOLO AND FRANCESCA Tragic lovers. See Francesca Da Rimini.

PAPA (PAPA-TU-A-NUKU) Polynesian primeval deity; earth. Wife of Rangi (heaven). In some versions she developed out of Tangaroa (primeval sea); in others Tangaroa was her husband, whom she deserted to become the wife of Rangi, by whom she became mother of Rehua, Rongo, Ru, Tane, Tu, and other deities. In Hervey Island myths daughter of Tima-te-kore (nothing more), wife of Vatea (light), and mother of Rongo, Tane, Tangaroa, Tangiia, Tonga-iti.

PAPACHTIC Literally, he of the flowing locks. Aztec personification of the sun's rays or aureole of light. An aspect of Quetzalcoatl.

PAPAEUS A title of Jupiter.

PAPA PURUSHA Hindu man of sin. A human form made up of all wickedness; the head is brahmanicide, the nose woman-murderer, the arm cow-killer, etc.

PAPA STOUR Most famous form surviving of Sword Dance. Performed by seven dancers representing the seven champions of Christendom. The leader, Saint George, performs a solo dance. He then presents his comrades one by one and finally all dance in unison.

PAPER Flimsiness, lack of durability.

Paper money schemes. Pleasure gardens, from the use in Goethe's Faust.

Paper strips. In China, Japan, and Tibet talismans against evil.

In China usually of yellow paper with an idol or Chinese character painted on it in red or black. In Japan called gohei. Usually white and blue, the white representing the spittle of Susa-no-wo, the blue his nose mucus, to expiate the faults for which he had been exiled to the underworld. Tibet Buddhists inscribe with religious symbols and swallow to cure disease. They also wear as a protection against dog, eagles, and evil spirits.

PAPHNUTIUS In Anatole France's Thais the young monk who succeeds in converting Thais and then falls lustfully in love with her.

PAPHOS Town in Cyprus famous for its temple of Aphrodite, where rites were orgiastic.

Paphian. A votary of Aphrodite, hence a lewd woman, a prostitute. Also called Cyprian.

PAPIMANY In Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel the country of the Papimanes, a people who had a mania for the Pope; thus any priest-ridden country.

PAPPAS Hittite great father. Known to the Egyptians as Sutekh and identified by them with Set.

PAPS Adequacy, fertility, life force.

PAP-SUKAL Assyrian messenger of the gods.

PAPUKKAL Sumerian chief messenger of Anu. A winged angel carrying a wand or staff in his right hand. In Babylonian myths called Ili-abrat. Identical with Ninsubur.

PAPYRUS Emblem of Lower Egypt; also of Amon. Symbol of love and of the occult or hidden.

In Egyptian belief a protection from crocodiles, and said to be the material of the cradle in which Moses was found in the bulrushes.

PARA (BJARA) Literally, bearer. Finno-Ugric thieving spirit. Resembles a cat and assists men in carrying items from other people's larders. Identical with Puuk.

PARABRAHMA Hindu air spirit. Appears in five evolutionary forms: 1- Akasa tatwa, essence of subtle ether; 2- Vayu, wind; 3- Taijas, fire; 4- Apas, water; 5- Prthivi, earth.

PARACELSUS One who exalts knowledge, from Browning's poem of this name. Browning's hero was a portrait of Philippus Aureolus Paracelsus, a 16th century alchemist and physician, who had been forced to leave the university because he defied tradition. He was a spendthrift, tavern roisterer, untidy dresser, but remained a tireless experimenter, combining the mysteries of the cabala with facts of science, and has influenced science and occultism to the present day. He supposedly had contact with the devil, and a small demon in the shape of a bird lived in the hilt of his sword.

PARACLETE Greek word meaning helper, intercessor. Applied to the Holy Spirit in the sense of comforter.

PARADISE A Greek word, borrowed from the Persians, meaning a garden or pleasure park. Abode of the deceased faithful; place of bliss; region, state, or condition of surpassing delight. In Arabian belief where the deceased are attended by the houris. In Buddhism any of the numerous realms where Buddha receives his believers. Christian heaven. In Jewish teaching the Garden of Eden, home of Adam and Eve; the part of Sheol where dwell souls of the disembodied just. In Japanese tradition heavenly worlds are a result of transmigration and subject to decay; paradise remains unchanged.

PARADIXION TREE Tree in India, in which dwell doves (virtue) which are able to slay the dragon (sin). Those who dwell in the tree or within its shadows have nothing to fear as the dragon lives at the base of the tree, outside the ever-present shadow. In Christian interpretation the tree is the Father, its leaves the Son, the shadow the Holy Ghost.

PARAMITA In Buddhism, virtue.

PARASOL Typifies the radiant solar wheel, world or universe tree. Symbolic of divinity, halo, power, royalty. In Buddhism called atapatra and is one of the eight glorious or precious things typifying authority. Emblem of Buddha, Pancaraksa, Sitatapatra, Usnisasita.

Parasol tree. In Chinese called wu-t'ung shu. According to legend it is the only tree on which the phoenix will alight, an event which glorifies a peaceful reign. It supposedly puts forth twelve new leaves each year, except in leap year, when a smaller thirteenth leaf grows, thus represents the year. Compare Palm tree.

White parasol. In Tibetan Buddhism one of the eight glorious emblems. Typifies official authority; also protection against the heat of evil desires.

PARASU Sanscrit for ax. Buddhist symbol of tantric manifestation. Emblem of the Dharmapalas.

PARAVATAKSHA Naga king of India, who dwelled under a lake overshadowed by a solitary ashoka (holy tree). His sword caused earthquakes and brought clouds. When he appeared his eyes flashed fire (lightning) and he roared (thunder). He attacked anyone who plucked the tree's berries, which renewed youth, promoted longevity, and were a source of supernatural knowledge. The tree also contained the life substance of Paravataksha. Compare Fraoch.

PARCAE See Fates.

PARENTALIA Babylonian feast for dead souls to which the ghosts (souls) returned to partake.

PARI (1) Melanesian charm song. (2) Tatar evil spirit.

PARIA Caribbean American Indian sacred mountain; navel of the earth.

PARIACACA Peruvian creator of all things. Hatched in the shape of a falcon on Condorcoto mountain. From four other eggs falcons emerged which were the winds. By magic the five transformed themselves into men.

PARIAH A member of a low caste in Southern India; often agricultural laborers. The name is from a native word meaning drum, and they were so called because they were the drummers at certain festivals. By extension a social outcast. One who pollutes other castes but is polluted by none.

PARIJATA Hindu universe tree yielding all the objects of desire.

PARI-NIRVANA Buddhist state when extinction of life is achieved, state at which there can be no rebirth. Death of a Buddha, entrance to Nirvana. Escape from the Sipa Khorlo (wheel of life).

PARIS (1) In Greek mythology son of Priam, king of Troy, by Hecuba, who dreamed she was to bear a fire-brand. Told by a seer that the child would cause the destruction of Troy, she left him on the slopes of Mount Ida to die. Suckled by a she-bear until rescued by shepherds, he became noted for his beauty, and because of his success in warding off flock robbers he was sur-named Alexander (helper of men). When he awarded the apple of discord tossed by Eris to Aphrodite as the fairest of the goddesses, he created two enemies, Athena and Hera. Shortly after he was reconciled to his parents, and sent on a mission to Greece. Although his wife Oenone pleaded with him not to go, he sailed for Sparta, where, aided by Aphrodite, who had promised him the most beautiful of women, he abducted Helen, wife of King Menelaus. The abduction led to the Trojan War in which Paris killed Achilles and was slain by Philoctetes. Menelaus emasculated the body before giving it to the Trojans for burial. Because of their hatred for Paris, Athena and Hera sided with the Greeks, and the city of Troy was destroyed. Thus the prophecy was fulfilled. Paris is portrayed as a youth wearing a Phrygian cap and presenting an apple to Aphrodite. A beauty contest judge, he was a sun hero who abducted the moon or dawn goddess. The Greeks mostly were light heroes; the Trojans mostly those of darkness. The Achilles-

Paris-Philoctetes conflict represents one phase of the sun destroying another. In the tradition of sun heroes Paris was exposed, suckled by an animal, a far-traveler, unfaithful, and emasculated. Compare Heracles, Sigurd, Sun hero. (2) A gay city, alluding to the French capital, which is noted for its brilliant social life and Bohemianism.

Judgment of Paris. A judgment which leads to conflict.

Parisian wedding. A massacre, in allusion to the Saint Bartholomew massacre which took place during the festivities of the marriage of Henri of Navarre and Margaret of France.

PARISII A fire worshiping Gaelic tribe, after which the city of Paris was named.

PARJANYA Hindu rain bringer, giver of increase. Personification of a cloud. Portrayed as a bull or a cow. In later myths a form of Indra. See Androgynous deities.

PARK Beauty, fertility, paradise, recreation, wealth. Dream significance: melancholy, pain.

Park Avenue. Wealth and luxury contrasted to poverty and squalor, in allusion to the avenue in New York City, one end of which is occupied by fashionable residences, the other by slums.

PARNASABARI Buddhist female Bodhisattva, whose name signifies savage clad with leaves. Six-armed goddess who cleanses disease. Lady of all wild aboriginal tribes of India. Her color is yellow; her emblems are the pasa (noose) and sara (arrow); her mudra is tarjani. Also called Gandhari, Pisaci, Pukkasi. In Tibet called Lo-ma-gyon-ma.

PARNASSUS (PARNASSOS) A mountain near Delphi, Greece. One of its two peaks was sacred to Dionysus, one to Apollo and the Muses, hence the seat of inspiration, music, and poetry. Mountain on which the ship bearing Deucalion and Pyrrha landed after the deluge, thus a haven. A name akin to the Persian pari meaning radiant.

Climb Parnassus. Write poetry.

PARNE Finno-Ugric evil forest spirit. It has three fingers on each hand and three toes on each foot with sharp clawing nails.

PARPARA In Kei Islands creation myth Parpara lost the fishhook of his elder brother Hian. Hian demanded the hook, which eventually was returned by the fish who had found it. In revenge Parpara caused Hian to spill some palm liquor, and then demanded that Hian return it to him. Hian dug so deeply he made a hole in the sky. Hian, Parpara, another brother and sister (unnamed) and four dogs, descended on a rope, discovered earth and became one of the ancestors of mortals.

PARRICIDE A folklore and mythological theme dramatizing the death of the old day or year by the new day or year. Examples are found in the tales of Oedipus, Perseus, Saint Julian.

PARROT Chatterer, gossip, greed, irritability, mocking verbosity, prophecy. Dream significance: indiscretion, slander. In Chinese tradition the bird warns women to be faithful to their husbands. The Hindu man-eating Rasshases supposedly kept their souls in parrots.

PARSEE (PARSI) Adherent of a Zororastrian sect of fire worshippers, who expose their dead on structures called towers of silence that they may be dissipated without polluting the earth. To escape persecution in Persia they fled to India, hence refugees.

PARSIFAL (PARZIFAL, PARZIVAL) Hero of medieval German romance who is identical with the English Perceval and the Welsh Peredur. According to prophecy only a guileless fool (innocent man) who asks the proper questions will heal the thigh wound of Amfortas, guardian of the Grail kept in the temple of Montsalvat (bring fertility back to earth by curing the king's impotence). Parsifal, who has grown up in a forest, becomes attached to King Arthur's court, and is the only knight of the Round Table pure enough to accomplish a partial cure, and fertility is restored for a season. Personification of the spring sun. See Fisher king, Galahad.

PARSIMONY In an Italian icon personified by a virgin modestly dressed with a pair of compasses and a purse full of money tightly closed. She carries the motto "Servat In Melius."

PARSLEY October 30 birthday flower. Symbolic of death, feasting, fickleness, useful knowledge, victory. Charm to ward off evil. In some localities considered unlucky to transplant from an old home to a new one as the Devil takes his tithe of it. In Greek antiquity awarded at Nemean games. Hebrew symbol of coming spring, suggesting the perpetual renewal of life and ever sustaining hope of human redemption. Characteristic side dish of ancient banquets, especially the Passover feast. Compare lettuce.

Parsley around a carrot.
Fecundity.

PARSON'S PENNY In medieval Britain each mourner placed a piece of money on the table at a funeral as a token of respect to the deceased. It incidentally compensated the clergyman for praying for the soul of the dead. In Wales called spade money.

PARTAKING OF FOOD See Eating.

PARTHENON A celebrated temple. Erected by the Athenians for the worship of Athena Parthenos on the Acropolis. Called the Maiden's Chamber. On two sides the structure had eight pillars, typifying the directions; on the other two sides it had thirty pillars, typifying the course of the moon.

PARTHENOPAEUS In Aeschylus's Seven Against Thebes one of the six light heroes killed at the siege of that city.

PARTHENOPE Literally, virgin face. In Greek mythology one of the sirens. Unable to charm Odysseus with her song she threw herself into the sea. Anciently the name of the city of Naples because she supposedly had been cast up on its shore. A name sometimes applied to a dangerously alluring woman.

PARTHENOS Literally, the virgin. An epithet applied by the Greeks to Artemis, Athena, and other goddesses.

Parthenion. A grave and modest choral ode sung by virgins.

PARTHIAN SHOT (OR SHAFT) A parting thrust or last retort; in allusion to the ancient Parthians, who fought on horseback and after each shot appeared to retreat.

PARTHOLAN (PARTHOLON) Leader of the first legendary settlers of Ireland. They supposedly arrived on a May 1, Beltaine Day. They fought the Fomors, powers of darkness, and increased the plains, lakes, and fertility of the island, and on a May 1 three hundred years later returned whence they came. In one legend they were attacked by a plague. Having a premonition of their end the Partholans gathered on the Sen Mag and disappeared, probably indicating the return of light deities to the otherworld. A name identical with Bartholomew.

PARTINGTON, MRS. (1) One who stands in the way of progress or attempts the impossible. In allusion to an anecdotal character, who attempted to wipe up with a mop the Atlantic Ocean tide which swept into her house during a gale in 1824. (2) A B. P. Shillaber character noted for her misuse of words. Probably suggested by the above.

PARTRIDGE Deception, filth, lasciviousness, luxury, mischievousness, trickery, war. One easily caught or trapped. The male supposedly practices sodomy when the female sits on her eggs. A spring migrant sacred to fertility and sun deities, and to love goddesses because of its carnal passions. The hen, according to tradition, can become impregnated by the sound of the cock's voice or his scent blown into her by the wind. Its dance is an orgiastic war dance performed by cocks for the hen. They hobble on one foot, keeping the other in readiness to strike a rival. The males become so absorbed in their dance, if a man comes close and kills some of the dancers, the others continue undeterred. The quail's erotic reputation has a similar background. Into the present a partridge is lamed and caged. Its love call attracts other cocks, who are attacked by hunters. The more rivals the caged cock sees fall, the more gleeful its cry. In Ecclesiasticus the caged partridge is likened to the proud man who rejoices at the disasters into which he has decoyed his neighbors. As a bird which sits on eggs it does not hatch it is a Christian symbol of deceit, the Devil, and theft. Sometimes a symbol of the church and truth. Iroquois bird which advised Ioskeha that Tawiscara was drying up the earth, thus one who gives a warning, a fertility or life symbol. Compare Foot, Hobbling, Lame king, under King.

PARTURITION HOUSE A practice common in primitive societies is the retirement of women to a one-room windowless hut for the purpose of delivering her child unseen. Frequently the woman builds the hut herself. She remains in it until she has been purified. The legend of Toyotama-hime indicates this rite.

PARVATI (BAGAVATI) Hindu great virgin. Queen of hills, womb of all time, consort of Siva. Worshipped in various forms, especially as Durga or Kali.

PASA Sanscrit for noose. Buddhist non-tantric symbol. Emblem of Amoghapasa, Marici, Vajrapani, Yamantaka.

PASCH Hebrew Passover feast; also Easter.

Paschal (Pascal). Masculine name from the Hebrew of Passover lamb. In English the name honors Good Friday.

Paschal candle. In the Roman Catholic Church candle blessed on Holy Saturday, placed in the sanctuary, and kept there until Ascension. Symbol of the resurrection.

Paschal lamb. Eaten by the Jews at the Passover feast. Symbol of atonement, redemption, sacrifice. A memorial. Christian symbol of Christ. In heraldry a white lamb passant carrying the Saint George red cross banner; device of Knights Templars.

Paschal moon. New moon of the spring equinox.

PASEAH Hebrew name meaning lame.

PASHA Egyptian and Turkish title meaning head or sovereign. Usually given to military officers; sometimes given to high civil functionaries. A variant of bashaw.

PASHT Same as Bast.

PASIPHAE Literally, all shine. Cretan moon goddess. Daughter of Helios and Perseis; wife of Minos; mother of Ariadne and Deucalion. She conceived a passion for the white bull given to Minos by Poseidon, and by the bull became the mother of the Minotaur, which Minos imprisoned in the labyrinth (realm of darkness). Thus she was mistress and mother of a bull (sun).

PASITHEA Same as Aglaia.

PASQUE FLOWER June 23 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: You have no claims; I have no claims. Emblem of South Dakota; also of Easter.

PASSANT Walking and looking toward dexter side; dexter forepaw raised as if walking; said of an animal in heraldry. Typifies passing, surpassing, transitoriness; being in circulation, current.

PASSE-VARA Holy mountain abode of the seides (stone gods) of the Lapps. Game on the mountain is not shot.

PASSION Symbolized by a flaming heart, nightingale, red, red rose, wild beast.

Christ's passion. Symbolized by a cross, crown of thorns, hammer, I. R. N. I., ladder, pincers, reed, seamless garment, spear, sponge, three dice, three nails.

Passion flower. June 22 birthday flower symbolizing holy love, religious fervor, susceptibility. Emblem of Tennessee. Its five petals and purple color symbolize Christ's wounds and suffering; its spear-shaped leaves, the sacrifice in the final act of redemption.

PASS ON THE TORCH Transmit an inheritance, tradition, or wisdom; in allusion to the relay torch race of the Greeks.

The passing bell. Church bell tolled to announce a death; formerly rung when a person was dying to drive away evil spirits waiting for the soul.

PASSOVER Hebrew festival commemorating the coming forth out of Egypt, when the angel of death that slew the first born of the Egyptians passed over their houses, which had been marked with lamb's blood. Held during the full moon of Nisan (March-April). The feast (seder) consisted of the bitter herbs betzah, carpas, haroseth, hazereth, maror, zeroa; four glasses of unfermented wine; paschal lamb; unleavened bread (matzoth). Before and after drinking the first glass of wine, the hands were washed, i. e. purified. The lamb was roasted whole, no bones were broken, and all that remained uneaten was placed in a fire as an offering. The unleavened bread is a reenactment of the trials of the exodus. In Hebrew called Pesach, which is derived from the root PSCH, which means to dance with a limp. Originally a barley or spring planting dance; later a commemoration of the escape of the Israelites from Egypt. It is synchronized to Pagan spring festivals; to it the Christian Easter is synchronized. In the Easter feast the lamb represents Christ's body.

PAST Personified by a pensive woman beside a broken column. She contemplates a skull, which she holds.

PASTORAL STAFF Emblem of the good shepherd of all souls, i. e. supreme deity. Christian symbol of ecclesiastical authority; crosier borne by an abbot, bishop, etc.

PATAGONIAN MINT July 30 birthday flower symbolizing virtue.

PATAIKOI Figures of dwarfs carried by Phoenician sailors as talismans. They resemble images of the Egyptian god Ptah. The word is related to pehti, Egyptian for strength, and to patu, Maori for father.

PATALA The series of seven (or eight) Hindu underworlds inhabited by semi-divine beings who are provided with every kind of sensuous beauty and hold continual revels.

PATARA (1) City famous for an oracle of Apollo. Sometimes said to be the birthplace of Saint Nicholas (Santa Claus). (2) In Hinduism disk held by Vishnu, the wheel of the sun or circle of perfection.

PATECATL Aztec lord and discoverer of the ocpatli (peyote) liquor. Parallels Dionysus.

PATELIN An artful cheat, a crafty man. From the character in French comedy.

PATEN In Christian churches dish used for the eucharistic bread. Of gold or silver-gilt, the host rests on it during mass.

PATERA Roman votive bowl. A shallow round vessel of earthenware or silver. Resolves into pater-A, i.e. father A or father Sun; also pa-ter, i.e. father enduring.

PATERNOSTER From the Latin, meaning our Father. The Lord's prayer, from the opening words in the Latin version. Every eleventh rosary bead, which is connected with the prayer's repetition; hence a rosary.

Paternoster Row. Street on which prayer books and rosaries are sold; from the street in London. In one account the street received its name because funeral processions on their way to Saint Paul's began their paternoster at the beginning of the Row.

Paternoster-while. A short time; the time it takes to say a paternoster.

PATESI Babylonian prince-priest, ruler of a town subject to a more powerful city; servant of a king or chief deity.

PATH Experience, knowledge, learning. The way leading from the land of the living to that of the dead, universally regarded as perilous. Buddhist doctrine has an eight-fold path or noble way; also six paths (gati) or conditions of existence.

Lion in the path. Danger ahead, especially a fancied danger. Pathfinder. Symbolized by a dog, fox, Indian, wolf, or a galley or ship with eyes at the prow.

Pathway of souls. Milky Way. Primrose path. The pleasant road; path pursued for pleasure rather than for virtue.

PATIENCE Symbolized by an anchor, ass, elephant, ox, violet. Personified by Griselda (patient Grisel or Grizel), a Boccaccio heroine. In an Italian icon portrayed as a mature woman sitting on a stone. Her naked feet are on thorns, a heavy yoke is on her shoulders.

PATOLLUS (PATOLLO) Ancient Baltic god of the underworld; one of a triad consisting of Perkunas and Potrympus. Prussian god sacred to one of the three divisions of the holy oak. Before his image were the heads of a cow, a horse, a man.

PATRA Begging bowl, Buddhist non-tantric symbol. Emblem of Amitabha, Avalokitesvara, Gautama, Man-la.

PATRICK (PATRICIUS) (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning noble, patrician. It resolves into Pa-ter-ick, Father enduring (or brilliant) fire. In feminine form, Patricia (Pat, Patsy, Patty). (2) See under Saints.

PATRINIA Japanese symbol of autumn, eternal devotion. In legend the mistress of Ono-no-Yori-kaze believing herself to be abandoned by him committed suicide by drowning. When she was buried patrinia grass grew on her grave. The unhappy lover likewise drowned himself and was buried beside his mistress. Out of his grave miscanthus grew, and ever since the two grasses rarely are found apart.

PATROCLUS (PATROKLOS)

In Homer's Iliad the loyal friend of Achilles. When Achilles, because of an argument with Agamemnon, refused to fight for the Greeks in the Trojan War, Patroclus pleaded to be permitted to take his place. Achilles, finally persuaded, lent Patroclus his armor, strictly cautioning him how to use it. Patroclus disregarded Achilles's warning and was killed by Hector. Patroclus was a reflection of or the rays of the sun (Achilles); when he took the form of the sun he was killed by darkness. Like Icarus and Phaethon he ignored instructions and therefore was doomed to die.

PATRONYMIC PREFIXES OR SUFFIXES In Anglo-Saxon names sen or son; Gaelic mac; German sohn; Greek ides (plural idae); Hebrew ben; Irish Ó, Norman fitz; Russian vitch.

PATSHAK Among the Ostiaks spirits of small children who had been killed. Homeless, restless spirits denied the opportunity of resting in a grave, they rule over grass, roots, and trees. Resemble apparas, liekkio.

PAUL (PAULINUS, PAULUS)

- (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning little. In feminine form Paula (Paulina, Pauline).
- (2) See under Saints.

Paul Bunyan. Giant logger and super-lumberjack; legendary hero of the woods and patron saint of the American lumber industry. Resembles folktale giants and retains traces of Gargantua and Finn mac Cool. Also a comic demigod or trickster hero famous for highly exaggerated exploits. May originally have been a French Canadian hero.

Paul Pry. An inquisitive meddler, news gatherer, squirrel; in allusion to the hero of John Poole's play by that name.

Rob Peter to pay Paul. Benefit one at the expense of another; take from one in order to give to another; shift a debt. The saints Peter and Paul are thought of as having access to a common purse, thus to transfer from one pocket to another, in reality leave a situation unchanged.

PAULOWNIA Japanese symbol of rectitude. With five petals the badge of the imperial family, with seven petals badge of the emperor.

PAU-PUK-KEEWIS Mischief-maker, sorcerer in Longfellow's Hiawatha. He teaches the Indians the game of hazard; then strips them of their possessions by his winnings. He eludes the angry Hiawatha by changing into a beaver. After many adventures he changes into an eagle. Typifies wind or winter.

PAUTIWA Zuni lord of the underworld. Visited by Kiaklo for the breath of life. See Ashiwi.

PAVEMENT Civilization, travel. Anciently a judgment place.

Broken pavement. A broken life.

PAVO Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Peacock.

PAVOR Roman abstract divinity of panic.

PAWNBROKER Symbolized by three golden balls, a design borrowed from the coat-of-arms of the Medici family, the first pawnbrokers. See Lombard.

PAX (1) Roman abstract divinity of peace. (2) A circular or square plaque containing a representation of the crucifixion, the Lamb, Virgin, or other sacred image, and kissed at certain Roman Catholic masses to symbolize the kiss of peace.

PAXTON Masculine name from the Latin, meaning peace town.

PAYATAMU Zuni diminutive flower-crowned god who plays his flute in the fields, cautioning flowers to grow and butterflies to follow him. A breeze deity. Parallels Pan and the Pied Piper of Hamelin.

PAYETOME Brazilian agricultural god. He has a white beard and resembles Sume.

PAYNAL (LITTLE PAYNAL, PAYNALTON) Literally, hurried or swift. Aztec deputy god; substitute for Huitzilopochtli when he was in a state of suspended animation for part of the year (in Hades). Winter sun deity.

PAY ZUME Paraguayan god who came from the east (dawn). A sun deity. Diviner, magician, priest, he instructed his people in the arts of agriculture and hunting. Identical with Zume.

PAZUZU In Sumerian mythology son of Hanpa. Demon of the winds, bringer of fever and cold. A monster, he had four wings; a head half human, half canine with a grinning mouth; hands of a savage; legs which terminated in the talons of a bird of prey; a scorpion's tail. His body was covered with scales or feathers.

PE (PEH, PHE) Seventeenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet, equivalent of English P, and at times Ph or F. Its meaning is mouth or tongue; its numerical value is eighty. According to mystics its symbolic correspondence is fate; its tarot deck correspondence is Star; its planetary correspondence is Mercury; its zodiacal correspondence is Aries. Its color is scarlet; its direction on the cube of space is north, realm of darkness and mystery, signifying the period of the sun's annual death; its intelligence is active or exciting. In white magic refers to the first of the mystical elements, held to be fire. Its sovereign intelligence is Seraphim. In correspondence with the air, which is the abode of sylphs, whose lord is Ariel.

PEA February 17 birthday flower, symbolic of respect. Dream significance: (dry) coming marriage; (green) perfect happiness.

Black pea. Symbolizes health, strength.

Everlasting pea. Symbolizes lasting pleasure. In the language of flowers: Appoint a meeting.

Sweet pea. February 1 birthday flower symbolizing delicacy, departure. In the language of flowers: Remember me.

PEACE Symbolized by a dove, emerald, olive, P. Personified by Eirene (Irene), Pax, or by a draped maiden, crowned with wheat-ears, holding a sheaf of wheat and a statuette of abundance. In an Italian icon represented by a young winged woman crowned with olives and corn ears. A lion and a lamb sit together on one side of her; weapons burn on the other.

Peace and forgiveness. Symbolized by a dove and olive branch.

PEACH Femininity, velvety skin, yoni. In China called t'ao and symbolizes good fortune, happiness, longevity, marriage.

A fairy fruit. In Chinese art associated with the bat. Frequently takes the place of the character shou (long life). In Christian art symbolizes salvation, silence of virtue. An attribute of Virgin Mary. In Japan an emblem of immortality and a charm against plague. An attribute of Izanagi.

Peach and bat. Chinese symbol of happiness and long life.

Peach blossom. April 25 birthday flower symbolizing spring. In the language of flowers: I am your captive. Emblem of a bride and the state of Delaware. In China called t'ao hua. Emblem of February, charm against evil. In Japan chief flower associated with Girl's Doll Festival. Symbolizes fecundity, In (female principle), and marriage. Like the fruit, a charm against plague.

Peach rods. Japanese demon dispeller. Used to oust evil spirits in ceremony which takes place the last day of the year.

Peach stone. Padlocks made of the stone and wood are tied to children as amulets to bind them to life and ward off evil. If mingled with the ashes of a mulberry tree supposedly confers immortality.

Peach tree. In China p'an t'ao or fan t'ao, tree of life. The Shen t'ao grows on the Isles of the Blest, over which Hsi Wang Mu rules. It blossoms every 3,000 years, its fruits appearing 3,000 years later and conferring immortality on those who eat it. It coils up its leaves to a height of 3,000 miles and a golden cock sits upon it at dawn. Emblem of Chung-li Ch'uan, Han Hsiang-tzu, Ho Hsien-ku, Shu Yu, and Yu Lei. Tree planted at inaccessible Buddhist shrines to signify the moral, "He who is satisfied with the first fruits of Chinese learning will never know the profound beauty of its hidden mysteries." Korean emblem of Buddhism; planted at temples and shrines.

Three peaches. Chinese emblem of Tung Fang So, the thief.

PEACHUM In Gay's Beggar's Opera a rascal and receiver of stolen goods. His house is the resort of pickpockets, thieves, and all sorts of villains. For his own benefit he betrays Captain Macheath, husband of his daughter Polly, to the police.

PEACOCK (1) The all-seeing, arrogance, beauty, court life, dignity, immortality, luxury, magnificence, ornamentation, pompousness, regality, resurrection, worldly pride. Dream significance: pride misplaced; (with full tail) rich marriage. By ancients believed to be a destroyer of serpents, thus a releaser of fertilizing moisture. In some localities worshiped as the phoenix. Bird by which blasphemous oaths were made. Mount of the Etruscan Uni, Greek Hera, Hindu Maya, Japanese Benten, Roman Juno. In Buddhism called mayura; mount of Amitabha, Mahamayuri, Sarasvati. Emblem of a Byzantine empress. In Chinese and Japanese art a companion of the peony. In Christian art the ever-vigilant church. Attribute of Christ, Saint Barbara. Symbolizes grace of sacrament, heavenly glory. Badge of the Egyptian city Heliopolis. (2) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Pavo.

Peacock atop a candlestick or pillar. By Arabs called Melek Taos; symbolizes the sun god supported by the universal axis.

Peacock feathers. In a literary style refers to borrowed ornamentation; in allusion to the jay who decked herself in peacock's feathers and became an object of ridicule. In Buddhism called mayurapiccha; ritual altar object used for sprinkling. A non-tantric symbol. In China called ling; in the drama worn in a headdress to signify a warrior. In the east a mark of rank. In Egypt and Rome unlucky, emblem of the evil eye.

Peacock feeding on grapes.

Symbol of the Christian eucharist.

Peacock tail. Star-studded sky; the ever-watchful evil eye.

In Greek mythology created by Hera from the eyes of Argus Panoptes.

Peacock tail folded. Remorse.

Peacock with dragon. Sky and earth. Carries the same symbolism as bird and serpent, winged serpent.

Peacock with olive leaf. Christian church bringing peace.

PEAK Mayan hieroglyph for A. Contains the notion of great father. For symbolism see Hill, Mountain.

Center Peak. In China called Ts'ung Shan, one of the five sacred mountains; color yellow, element earth.

East Peak. Tai Shan; color green; element wood.

North Peak. Hêng Shan; color black; element water.

South Peak. Hêng Shan; color red; element fire.

West Peak. Hua Shan; color white; element metal.

PEANUT Pettiness, small change, valuelessness.

Peanut gallery. In the United States the top gallery of cheap seats. Formerly those who sat there ate peanuts and tossed the shells onto the stage. In Europe the gallery is called Olympus.

PEAR The human heart. Word from the same root as pair, pere, pere, pyramid, pyre. Probably so named because it is formed like a pyramid or pyre. Old Anglo-Saxon for pear was peru (pere Hu). In China called li; symbolic of justice, longevity, purity, wise and benevolent administration. In Christianity typifies Christ's love for mankind. In Egyptian antiquity sacred to Isis.

Pear blossom. August 17 birthday flower symbolizing affection. In the language of flowers: Not altogether lovely. In China called li hua; symbolizes wisdom. Emblem of August. In Korea typifies grace, nobility, purity.

Pear tree. Comfort. In China symbolic of longevity. In many parts of the world held sacred because of its pyramidal form.

Prickly pear. June 12 birthday flower symbolizing satire. In the language of flowers: Do not forget.

PEARL June birthstone symbolizing beauty, faithfulness, humility, innocence, integrity, modest splendor, moonlight, purity, rarity, refinement, reward of patience, self-sacrifice, sorrow, tears, virginity, wealth, wisdom. Dream significance: disillusion, sorrow. Charm against fire. Powdered and mixed with water to cure lunacy and stomach ailments. It is associated with the color white and the flower honeysuckle, and carries some of their symbolism. It governs the zodiacal house Cancer, and its occult powers are said to be intensified if worn by one born under its sign. Those born under its sign will be creative and taciturn, and will lead an agitated existence, but a life of power. Attribute of love and moon goddesses. Typifies O of the gnostic alphabet. Of disputed etymology the word seems to be from the Latin and means little pear or little ball.

It resolves into per-le, and contains the notion of father (light) everlasting. In Buddhism called tama. Third eye of Buddha. In China created from the bones of P'an Ku. Symbolizes perfection, riches. Protector of chastity, health, longevity. Christian symbol of salvation. A particle of the consecrated eucharist wafer. Attribute of Christ and Virgin Mary. In the East divine essence which controls the ebb and flow of tides. See Kanji, Manji. Placed in the mouth of a dead noble to preserve the body and assure long life in the next world. In England formerly called margaret. In medieval Europe believed to bring ill luck to those who did not have it as an ancestral gem. Hindus attribute its creation to Vishnu. In Iran known as the child of light.

Black pearl. Rejection.

Casting pearls before swine.

Giving that which is precious to those who are base, unappreciative, or unable to comprehend its value.

Flaming pearl. In Buddhism the cintamani; the jewel in the lotus, one of the eight precious things. In China called chu and symbolizes feminine beauty, genius in obscurity, the heart of Buddha, pure intentions.

Mother of pearl. Chinese fairy food providing longevity.

Pearl of Asia. Largest pearl in the world; given by the Shah Jahan to his wife Mumtaz Mahal, for whom he had built Taj Mahal.

Pearl of great price. A designation of wisdom.

Pearly Emperor. Yu Huang.

Pearly gate. Gate of Heaven. When twelve in number, gates to New Jerusalem.

Red pearl. Sun.

PEBBLE Justice, law. Among Anglo-Saxons a white pebble was a charm of the dead and placed as a grave gift. In Greek antiquity a black pebble signified guilt or rejection, a white pebble approbation or acquittal.

PECAN Self-restraint.

PECK MEASURE In China ten cattles of rice; symbolic of a full measure of justice, mercy, and virtue.

PECKSNIFF A canting humbug, a hypocrite. From the character in Dickens' Martin Chuzzlewit.

PEEL Prison, refuge, stronghold. A circular tower of a type found along the Scotch-English border; probably used for sun worship.

PEEPUL (PIPPUL) Chinese name for the bo or bodhi tree, Sanscrit Buddhist fig tree of life.

PEGASUS (1) Imagination, inspiration, intellect, knowledge, poetry, science, understanding, wisdom. In heraldry activity, energy, enterprise whereby one may mount to honor. Badge of Inner Temple of Inns of Court. In Greek mythology winged horse offspring of the sea foam of Poseidon and the blood of the slaughtered Medusa. Chrysaor was his twin. At the request of Athena (wisdom) he became the steed of Bellerophon (sun), and the mount of Bellerophon when he overcame the Chimera (drought). When Bellerophon attempted to fly into the heavens Pegasus threw him and ascended alone into the skies to become the constellation and bearer of thunder and lightning for Zeus. The name signifies springs of water, and he typifies morning clouds or vapors which rise from the sea. When the Muses contended with the daughters of Pieros, Mount Helicon rose heavenward in delight, and to stop its ascent Pegasus gave it a kick. His hoofs released the fountain Hippocrene, and in its sacred waters the Muses quaffed their richest draughts of inspiration. Compare Aarvak, Blodughofi, Zu. (2) Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as the Flying Horse. Known to the Chinese as Pik, the partition, wall between the old and new years.

Break Pegasus's neck. Write halting poetry.

PEGGY Feminine name, diminutive of Margaret or Marguerite.

PE-HAR See Nach'un.

PEI-CHI CHEN CHUN Chinese god of the North Pole. Reincarnation of T'ien Pao.

PEINE FORTE ET DURE A form of punishment used into the 18th century, which consisted of placing heavy weights on the naked body and withholding sustenance until an accused admitted guilt or perished. Used figuratively to express great emotional distress.

PEITHO Greek goddess of persuasion, specifically persuasion of love. Worshiped variously as one of the three Graces, as an attendant of Aphrodite, as an aspect of Aphrodite. By the Romans called Suadela.

PEKAH In Old Testament general of the army of Pekahiah, king of Israel. He conspired against the king, whom he killed, and usurped the throne. His evil reign was filled with terror.

PEKINGESE Chinese imperial dog. Once its removal from a palace was punishable by death. A lion-dog symbolic of energy, even disposition, intelligence, love of comfort, valor.

PEKKO (PEKO, PELLON-PEK-KO) Finno-Ugric barley god. Name related to Beyggvir (Byggvir), servant of Frey.

PEKLO Slavic underworld.

PEKOD Hebrew masculine name meaning visitation.

PELALAH Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah distinguishes.

PELARGONIUM Thoughts.

PELASGUS (PELASGOS) In Greek mythology grandson of the river god Inachus; son of a mother, Niobe an earth goddess, but without a father. Sometimes Zeus is said to be his father. Father of Lycaon. Founder of the Pelasgic division of the Greek people. Arcadian first man, teacher of civilization.

PELE Polynesian fire goddess of volcanoes, inhabiting the crater of Kilauea in Hawaii. Her eruptions are caused by jealous rages.

PELEG Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning division.

PELE KOLESE Finno-Ugric water spirit. Half dead, it floats on the water with its face turned toward the sky. Anyone who tries to rescue it becomes its victim.

PELET Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning deliverance.

PELETHITES AND CHERETHITES In the Old Testament body guards or messengers of the king, especially of David. They appear to have been Philistines, thus mercenaries. Their names mean runners and executioners respectively.

PELEUS In Greek mythology son of Aeacus; brother of Telamon. King of Thessaly, he won his bride, the sea-nymph Thetis, by holding her while she changed her shapes until she returned to her proper form. Their wedding became a beauty contest when Paris awarded the apple of Eris to Aphrodite as the fairest of goddesses. His wife bore him seven children, six of whom she burned to death, the seventh, Achilles, Peleus rescued and presented with the Pelian spear (rays). The changes of Thetis, suggest seasonal changes. A sun and fertility hero, Peleus was fated to be castrated and slain. His first six sons were offered as surrogates in his place; the rescue of Achilles indicates Peleus could no longer escape his destiny. See Sacred king under King.

Pelian spear. So called because it was cut from an ash growing on Mount Pelion or because it had belonged to Peleus. It was so huge none but Achilles could wield it, and it had the power of healing those it wounded, thus the sun's rays cure and wound.

PELIAS In Greek mythology son of Poseidon and Tyro. Father of Alcestis. With his twin Neleus he was left exposed to die. One was suckled by a mare, the other by a bitch, and they lived to avenge the wrongs done their mother by Salmeoneus, thus fulfilling a prophecy. The brothers usurped the throne of the co-kings Cretheus and Aeson. After a time Pelias exiled Neleus. Pelias had been warned to beware of a one-legged man. When Jason, son of Aeson, wearing one shoe, claimed the throne, Pelias agreed to abdicate if Jason would bring him the golden fleece, but Pelias refused to fulfill his agreement. Medea, sorceress wife of Jason, thereupon tricked Pelias's daughters into slaying him, but cutting up his body and casting the pieces into a caldron to boil. Pelias is a light hero; his severed body shimmers on water as he sinks. He and Neleus are counterparts of Eteoclus and Polynices. See Exposed child.

PELICAN Benevolence, charity, parental love. From an erroneous notion that the mother, when food is scarce, feeds her brood with her own blood. According to fable, when the young begin to grow they rebel against the father, who kills them; then in remorse, after three days, he will give them his blood and revive them; thus a symbol of resurrection. Also symbolic of dullness, gregariousness, indolence, melancholy, migration. Emblem of Louisiana. In heraldry represented as standing above its nest with wings adorsed, nourishing its young. It is said to be blazoned in its piety, piety having the classical meaning of filial devotion. In Christian art symbolizes atonement and crucifixion. When used as an emblem of Christ a pelican is vulning herself.

PELION Sacred Greek mountain. See Ossa.

PELLEAN (PELLAM) In Grail romances son of Pelles. With his father a keeper of the Grail. Both are called Fisher King. An underworld deity; later form of Pryderi.

PELLEAS In Arthurian romances a knight of the Round Table. Because of his innocence he is treated with scorn by Lady Ettarre, whom he loves. In Spenser's Faerie Queene one of the pursuers of the Blatant Beast after its escape from captivity. Thus a light and fertility hero.

PELLENORE (PELLINORE)

In Arthurian romances a king and knight. Father of Sir Percivale and Sir Tor. Slayer of the King of Orkney. A slayer of winter. In some versions of the Grail story a maimed king, custodian of the Grail.

PELLES (PELEUR) In Grail romances father of Elaine and Pellean. Grandfather of Galahad. In some tales a foreign king related to Joseph of Arimathea, and guardian of the Grail, which he kept in his castle of Carbonec. An underworld deity.

PELOPS Literally, dark-eyed or dusky-faced. In Greek mythology grandson of Zeus, son of Tantalus, father of Atreus and Thyestes. Tantalus served his body as a stew for the gods. His shoulder had been eaten by Demeter before the gods discovered the nature of their dish. Hermes restored him to life and supplied him with an ivory shoulder. He was therefore a dark-skinned youth with a white shoulder blade, or a porpoise, which has a dark exterior and a white shoulder blade, which was sacred to priestesses of earth or mother goddesses. The slaying by his father symbolizes the burning of fruits and flowers by too great heat of the sun, his restoration symbolizes the freshness of earth after draught. For the crime a curse was placed upon the family, and for generations many of its members met with tragic fate, i.e. one season was overcome by another. To win Hippodamia for his wife Pelops defeated her father Oenomaus in a race; thus scorched earth defeated the agricultural lord, whose horses were winds. Poseidon is said to have fallen in love with Pelops and to have carried him off to be his cup-bearer as Zeus with Ganymede. Peloponnesus was the 'island of Pelops.' Compare Nyctimus.

Pelops's ivory shoulder. A mark of identification.

PEN Authorship, correction, immortality, intellect, learned employments, liberal arts. In art frequently appears with ink horn or blotter.

PENANCE Typified by a hair shirt, scourge, skull.

PEN ANNWFN In Welsh legend a title of Pwyll, which see.

PENARDUN Brythonic sky goddess married to a sea god. Daughter of Don, wife of Llyr, mother of Manawyddan.

PENATES Old Roman household guardians of the welfare of a family. Probably originally gods of the larder or penus (inmost), their images being kept in the penetralia, i.e. center of the house. They had a place at the hearth of every home, the family table was sacred to them, and a perpetual fire was maintained in their honor. Rome, conceived as a larger family, had its Penates, whose images Aeneas supposedly brought from Troy. They were preserved in the temple of Vesta. First fruits were offered to them. Compare Lares.

PENCIL Correction, immortality, phallus. Instrument of arts or imitation. Emblem of Calliope.

PENDRAGON A title which carried dictatorial powers conferred in times of grave danger on early British chieftains. King Arthur's father was called Uther Pendragon. The word is from the Welsh pen (head) and dragon.

PENDULUM Judgment, time.

PENELOPE (PENNY) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning bobbin, weaver. (2) In Greek mythology wife of Odysseus, mother of Telemachus. In the absence of Odysseus she was harassed by numerous suitors. She promised to make her choice as soon as she finished weaving a shroud for the aged Laertes, her father-in-law. To gain time she secretly ripped at night the weaving she had done during the day. In popular accounts pictured as a model wife; by some considered a woman of wavering affections, a flirt who wove a web for her suitors. The weaving symbolizes the harmonizing of the day; the web of clouds cannot be completed until the setting sun (Odysseus) appears. Compare Arachne, Chih Nu, Oc-nus, Orihime.

Penelope's fabric or web.

Procrastination, a trap.

Penelopeize. To undo a work again and again to stall for time. Fruitless effort.

Penelops. A sacred purple-striped bird; perhaps an aspect of Penelope.

PENELOPHON In Percy's Reliques a beggar-maid loved by a king. By Shakespeare called Zenelophon.

PENELVA A knight of Spanish romances.

PENEUS Greek river god. Father of Daphne. Also known as Ladon.

P'ENG NIAO Chinese roc or fabulous bird. It has wings like clouds, causes winds, and bears the sky on its shoulder blades. Its flight is symbolic of rapid advancement and success.

PENG TSU A Chinese Methuselah.

PENIEL (PENUEL) Literally, face of God. In the Old Testament a fortified town where Jacob wrestled with the Angel Jehovah face to face.

PENINSULA STATE Nickname of Florida.

PENIS Chief symbol of the Roman god Fascinus. Form of a herm.

PENITENCE Symbolized by brown, grey, violet.

PENKNIFE Dream significance: squabble, unfaithfulness.

PENNSYLVANIA Emblem: key-stone; motto: Virtue, Liberty, and Independence; nicknames: Coal, Steel.

PENNYROYAL Fleeing. In the language of flowers: You had better go.

PENTACLE (PENTANGLE, PENTAGON) (1) Eternity, perfection, universe. Worn as a health amulet; used as a door-mark to keep out witches. In invocations and spells used as a generator; opposed to a talisman, which is an intermediary. Emblem of Gawain, Mercury, Quetzalcoatl, and Thoth. Totem of American Indians. In Christian art typifies the five wounds suffered by Christ, hence a form Devils fear. By German writers called drudenfuss, meaning wizard's foot, probably a corruption of druid's foot; worn as a symbol of deity on their sandals.

Greek Christians used it as a sign of the cross. Among Jews a good-luck mark. Famous legendary key of Solomon. Japanese insignia of high station.

(2) Tarot deck card. When a majority appeared in a deal signified business, money, possessions. A diamond has replaced the pentacle in modern decks.

Pentacle on coin. Emblematic of commerce.

PENTATEUCH Literally, five tools or books. The books of Moses or the first five books of the Bible, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, taken collectively.

PENTECOST Literally, the fiftieth. A joyful Jewish harvest festival at which first-fruits of wheat were offered. Also called Feast of Weeks because it was celebrated on the fiftieth day or seven weeks after the second day of Passover. In later times ceased to be thought of as a harvest festival and considered a celebration of the gift of the Law to Moses on Mount Sinai. By Christians adopted as the feast of Whitsunday to commemorate the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles. Celebrated with green colors to suggest the life and growth of the Holy Spirit within man.

Pentecostals. Gifts to the priest by parishioners or by inferior churches to the mother church at Pentecost.

PENTHESILEA In Greek mythology daughter of Ares. Amazon queen who, after the death of Hector, took the part of the Trojans and engaged Achilles in single combat. Her beauty and courage caused Achilles, who mortally wounded her, to lament.

PENTHEUS In Greek mythology grandson of Cadmus and son of Agave. King of Thebes. He prohibited his people from taking part in Dionysian rites. Nevertheless his mother and sister went to Mount Cithaeron to join a group taking part in a Dionysia. Smitten with a fierce desire to witness the orgies which no male was permitted to see, he hid in a tree. Agave, maddened by the frenzy of the revels, mistook him for a wild beast and tore him to pieces. The legend reveals the introduction of a foreign ritual that had been strongly resisted and established by violence. As a male who trespassed into a woman's realm Pentheus resembles Actaeon, Endymion, Hylas, Orpheus.

PENURY In an Italian icon personified by a lean old woman pitifully dressed. She holds a willow branch and a pumice stone. A lean cow is at her side.

PEONY (PAEONY) June 21 birthday flower symbolizing anger, bashfulness, indignation, lowliness, shame. Emblem of spring. Word which resolves into pa-ony, i. e. only father. In China called mu tan. The queen of flowers, emblem of March. Symbolizes affection, feminine loveliness, good fortune, honor, love, spring, wealth. Also called lo-yang, the king of flowers, flower of the yang principle believed to possess curative powers, thus symbolic of longevity. In art associated with the peacock, pheasant, and phoenix. By the Japanese called botan or fuki-gusa, herald of summer. Symbolic of brightness, enchanting beauty, high rank, virility, wealth. Also called the flower of twenty days and an emblem of aristocracy. Its companions in art are the Chinese lion and the peacock.

Peony and crowing cock. In China honors and success.

Peony tree. In China the hua-chung wang, king of trees. Symbolizes brightness, distinction, good luck, masculinity, riches.

PEPEZU Yuracari, South American Indian, god who carries people off to the forest.

PEPHREDO In Greek mythology one of the Graeae. The horrier or watcher.

PEPI A name of Egyptian kings meaning father. Word akin to pope.

PEPITA Feminine name corresponding to masculine Pepe (Joseph).

PEPPER FLOWER Satirical thoughts.

PEPPERMINT October 27 birthday sprig symbolizing cordiality, warmth. In Korea signifies mother's blessing.

PER Scandinavian masculine name meaning fire or light. Akin to Ber and to the roots of Perceval, Persephone, Perseus.

PERAA Alternate title of Pharaoh. Literally, great house.

PERCHTA See Berchta.

PERCIVAL (PERCEVAL, PERCIVALE, PERSE, PERSIVAL)

(1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning courteous, and from the French, meaning pierce and valley. (2) Knight of the Round Table. Son of Sir Pellinore or Sir Evelake; brother of Sir Lamerock. In one version he is brought up in a forest ignorant of the outside world. As quester of the Grail his task is that of healing the Fisher King whose disability causes the wasting of the land. He fails to solder the broken sword (phallus), but he asks concerning the Grail and this frees the waters which partially restore the land. Thus, like Gawain whom he supplanted, he has partial success. In Perilous Chapel he slays the Black Hand. In another version he catches sight of the Grail, but Sir Galahad wins the quest. He typifies a solar deity endowed with the restorative powers of a medicine man. Identical with Parsifal and Peredur. Compare Rishyacrings.

PERCY (1) Masculine name from a Norman French family name after Perci, a place in Normandy. (2) A term used to suggest effeminacy.

PERDIX Literally, partridge. Greek sun deity. Nephew and pupil of the inventor Daedalus. Variously called Kalos or Talus. To save him, when his uncle made jealous by his invention of the saw and a pair of compasses tried to kill him, Athena transformed him into a partridge. Sometimes identified as female, mother-mistress of Talus, inferring he was virgin born inasmuch as the hen-partridge supposedly can become impregnated by the scent or voice of the cock. The partridge, a spring migrant, was sacred to fertility, love, and sun deities.

PEREDUR (PEREDOR PALADRHIR) Knight of the Round Table. A later form of Llew Llaw, a sun god. Oldest and most primitive of the Grail seekers, in his tale a platter bearing a man's head appears instead of the chalice or grail of later legends. The severed head is the form of the Fisher King's mutilation. Peredur causes the head to be restored, the king is made well, and with the recovered health of the king, earth becomes fertile, i.e. spring returns. Welsh equivalent of Parsifal and Percival. His name signifies spearman with the long shaft, i.e. sun with rays. See Fisher King.

PEREGRINE (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning stranger, traveler. It resolves into per-eg-ur-un, i.e. fire of one great power or fire of the sun. (2) A type of falcon symbolizing hunting, pilgrimage, sojourner in foreign lands. In ancient Rome a resident without rights of citizenship.

PEREZ (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning breach or darkness, and from the Latin, meaning indolent. (2) In the Old Testament son of Judah by Tamar; ancestor of David and Christ. A spirit of night.

PERFECTION Symbolized by circle, lotus blossom or bud, lily, pearl, quatrefoil, seven, white. In an Italian icon personified by a woman in a gold gauze vest revealing her breasts. She leans on a zodiac ring and draws a perfect circle.

Perfect work. In an Italian icon personified by a woman sitting on the points of triangular blocks holding compass, mirror, and square.

Way of perfection. Typified by holy cities, ladder, sacred mountains, Thummin.

PERGRUBRIUS Baltic god of return or renewal.

PERI (1) Word root from the Greek, meaning about; here, there, and everywhere. From the Sanscrit para. (2) Persian name meaning radiant or winged. In Persian mythology a beautiful malevolent sprite of a class which caused comets, eclipses, crop failure, etc. In later myths a fairy descendant of disobedient angels doing earthly penance until readmitted into paradise. The peri directed with a wand the way to heaven to the pure in mind.

PERICLYMENUS In Greek mythology son of Neleus and Chloris. Sun hero with shape-changing powers similar to those of Atabyrius, Llew Lllaws, Proteus.

PERIDOT August birthstone symbolizing happiness. Thunderbolt emblem. Its virtue; it dispels female betrayal and encourages friendship and marriage.

PERIKIONIOS A title of Dionysus meaning he about the pillar or axis.

PERILLUS In Greek mythology builder of a bronze bull for Phalaris the tyrant of Agrigentum. When victims were burned in it the bull sounded like the bellowing of a real animal. Phalaris tested it on Perillus. Thus one who was the victim of the trap he set for others.

PERILOUS BIRTH A worldwide mythological episode in which a king is warned that his death will follow the birth of a son or grandson. He arranges to have the infant exposed on a mountain, murdered, set adrift, or faced with another peril. The infant invariably is saved and returns to fulfil the prophecy. Involved is the death of an old and the victory of the new vegetation spirit. Krishna, Oedipus, Perseus were victims of perilous birth.

Perilous Castle (Dangerous Castle). During the reign of Edward I the name was attached to the castle of Lord Douglas, who destroyed several English garrisons stationed there, and who vowed to destroy anyone who dared take possession of it. In Grail romances the castle in which Liones was held prisoner, hence an underworld or winter realm.

Perilous Cemetery. Cemetery in the forest surrounding Perilous Chapel. Every day a marble tomb appeared bearing the name of a victim of the Black Hand which struck knights who entered the chapel. Ghosts haunted the cemetery because the ground remained unconsecrated until Sir Gawain wounded the Black Hand.

Perilous Chapel. Built by Queen Brangemore, who was slain by her son Espinogres. She was buried beneath its altar and thereafter a Black Hand every night murdered any knight (sun or light ray) who entered the chapel until the hand was struck by Gawain (or Percival). Only the most pure of knights (spring or innocent sun) was able to break the spell of the hand (winter or darkness).

Perilous passage. A worldwide mythological motif exemplifying death and rebirth, frustrated redemption, passage of the moon or sun through clouds or storms, quest for waters of life, the vagina-dentata concept. A cave or underworld gate opens and shuts. In Bushman legend the deity Lizard is pinched in two by mountains he tries to pass. Among Eskimos, Kayak's stern is injured by icebergs. In Greek mythology the Symplegades are twin rocks which crush those who would pass between them.

PERIOD See point.

PERIPHETES In Greek mythology robber giant who killed travelers with an iron club. Slain by Theseus. Storm giant slain by the sun.

PERISCII From the Greek meaning throwing a shadow all around. The inhabitants of polar circles whose shadows during a summer day move around them.

PERISSA In Spenser's Faerie Queene the mistress of Sansloy and a step-sister of Elissa. Personification of excessive exuberance of spirit.

PERITHOUS Greek light hero. An Argonaut.

PERIWINKLE January 31 birthday flower symbolizing tender recollections. In magic powered with earthworms and eaten in meat as an aphrodisiac.

Blue periwinkle. August 18 birthday flower symbolizing early friendship.

White periwinkle. Symbolic of the pleasures of memory.

PERIZADA Feminine name from the Persian, meaning perfect.

PERKELE Finnish Devil. From the same root as Perkunas and Purgine.

PERKUNAS (PEHRKON, PERKUN) Baltic great deity. Sky god whose voice was thunder; with it he revealed his will to men. He sent fertilizing rains and, like Indra, when he smote the Devil with his lightning bolt he did not kill him but merely sent his opponent down to hell for seven years. When Moon fell in love with Morning Star who thereupon left her husband, Perkunas, Sun, cut the star in two with his sword. With his hammer he destroyed the dungeon (underworld of winter) in which fertility was imprisoned. One of a triad with Patollus and Potrympus. In Prussian legend god sacred to one of the three divisions of the romove or holy oak. A perpetual fire burned before his image. His name is akin to Perkins and radically is Per-ak-un-as, i.e. One great fire. He equates with Erkir, Perun, Thor.

PERKUNE TETE Baltic mother of lightning and thunder who, at night, receives the sun, which she sends forth the next day bathed and shining. Identified with the planet Venus.

PERNELLE Feminine name from the Celtic, meaning young woman. Derived from Peter.

Madame Pernelle. In Moliere's Tartuffe a vixen who interrupts everyone.

PERPENDICULAR, THE Fortitude, justice, prudence, temperance.

PERRAN ROUND Stone amphitheatre in Cornwall; used in stone worship.

PERSE Greek sea nymph. Wife of Helios, mother of Aeetes, Circe, Pasiphae, and Perses.

PERSEA Egyptian tree of fate. Held sacred because its fruit resembles a heart and its leaf a tongue.

PERSECUTION In an Italian icon personified by a winged woman dressed in green and rust colors. She shoots an arrow; a crocodile is at her feet.

PERSEPHONE In Greek mythology daughter of Zeus or Poseidon and Demeter. Spring maid or summer child, goddess of flowers. Abducted by Aides while sporting on Enna meadows. Her mother sought her with such grief earth failed to produce so Zeus dispatched Hermes to the underworld to obtain her release.

Since she had eaten a pomegranate seed she was magically bound to return to her husband periodically and reign as underworld queen. The seed eaten (or sown) transforms into its germ and is endowed with the power to again appear as fruit, but it must return to seed. Her life exemplifies the cycle of the seasons, thus she is goddess of death and resurrection. Probably a duplicate of Demeter, mother and daughter representing two phases of the vegetative powers of the soil, the mother standing for the entire power, latent or active, at all seasons, the daughter for the potency in its youthful aspect. Her emblems are the calathus, flame, key, liknon, narcissus, pomegranate, poppy, scepter, stars, veil (mysterious processes of buried seed), wheat ears. In Eleusinian Mysteries called Kore; also known as the Maiden. Her name resolves into Pertho (destroy) + phonos (death). By Romans called Proserpine. Analogue of Allatu, Creudylad, Dornroschen, Ereshkigal. The Persephone-Demeter cult parallels that of Dusura-Chaabu. Compare Adapa, Food sharing.

PERSEPOLIS Ancient capital of Persia, one of the wonders of the ancient world. Name signifies city of lights.

PERSES In Greek mythology son of Crios and Eurybia or of Helios and Perse; brother of Pallas. Name means destroyer, thus the sun in destructive aspect.

PERSEUS (PTERSEUS) (1) In Greek mythology son of Danae by Zeus, who visited her in the form of a shower of gold. Acrisius, father of Danae, being advised by an oracle that Danae's son would kill him, set his daughter adrift with her son. They were rescued by fishermen of Seriphus. Desiring to marry Danae, Polydectes, king of the island, sent Perseus on the hopeless task of obtaining the Medusa head. With the help of the gods, who provided him with winged sandals, a magic wallet, and a helmet which made the wearer invisible, Perseus cut off the Medusa head. On his return journey he rescued Andromeda from a sea monster which was about to devour her. He returned home with Andromeda as his bride, turned Polydectes into stone by showing him the Medusa head, and released Danae from the prison into which she had been placed. At Larissa he took part in some funeral games and accidentally hit his grandfather, who was visiting there, with a discus. Unwilling to occupy the throne of the man he had killed he exchanged Argos for Tiryns and eventually founded the cities of Midea and Mycenae. The Medusa head he presented to his patroness, Athena. Many great heroes descended from Perseus and Andromeda, the most renowned being Heracles, their great grandson. Perseus's labors symbolize the career of the sun. He is parted from his mother, the dawn, in the morning; in the evening he finds her imprisoned by darkness. His career is that of a fatal child, which see; also see Exposed child. His expulsion in a chest represents the fleeing of tribes who worshiped him and Danae from enemies as well as the flight of the sun across the sky. Analogue of Karna, Moses, Oedipus, Sargon, Theseus. (2) Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as the Champion or Legendary Hero.

PERSEVERANCE Typified by a carp or salmon leaping up a waterfall, a web with a spider in the center. In the East by a bell rubbed by a priest.

PERSICA (1) Flower symbolizing restoration. Also called lady's thumb. The peach likewise is called persica. (2) Gnostic sacred rite, the initiates of which were called keepers of the fruits and symbolized the power of keeping or preserving.

PERSIANS Anciently feared as dominion seekers, plunderers; later regarded as exquisites.

PERSIMMON Poise, skepticism, efforts to attain worldly knowledge and to build up new theories or objections. Sometimes thought to be the golden apple that grew in the Garden of Hesperides. Also called Jove's apple. In China the shih-tzu, symbolic of business, comradeship, joy. Bringer of the hope that all affairs will be realized according to one's wishes. In Japan dried persimmons are used as New Year decorations to bring health and success. Because the fruit is prepossessing although the flower is not, Koreans say, "Don't be high-minded, be humble, and like the persimmon yours will be a beautiful life."

Persimmon blossom. In the language of flowers: Bury me amid nature's beauties; also I shall surprise you by and by.

PERSIS Feminine name from the Greek, meaning Persian woman.

PERSUASION In an Italian icon personified by a woman with a tongue topped by an eye and fastened to her head. A cord is wrapped around her and she holds an animal with three heads on a rope.

PERUN (PERON, PROVEN) Slavic chief god, fabricator of lightning and thunder. He is portrayed with three heads with fiery-red faces surrounded by flames. A perpetual fire was maintained in his honor; if extinguished it was rekindled by sparks struck from a stone held in his image. The oak or ro-move tree was sacred to him; the hammer was his emblem. His name yields solar fire. Identical with Baltic Perkunas, Bohemian Peranu, Lettish Perkons, Polish Piorun, Serbian Pe-roon. Resembles Svarog and Thor.

PESACH See Passover.

PESTILENCE Typified by a veiled winged skeleton with a scythe or by Laimos.

PESTLE Symbol of obstetrical import. In Egypt an implement for grinding corn. By Romans deified under the names Picumnus and Pilumnus.

Pestle and mortar. Yoni and lingam.

PETALON Gold leaf that adorned the Jewish high priest's miter. In Christian tradition Saint James wore it on his forehead.

PETASUS (PETASOS) Broad-brimmed flat hat, sometimes a winged cap, given by Zeus to Hermes. Emblem of a herald or traveler, symbolizes safety, speed.

PETER (PETE, PETERKIN, PIERRE) (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning rock, stone. Cognate with Patrick. (2) See Saint Peter.

Peter Bell. A Wordsworthian character. A hard-hearted tinker who was taught humanity by a faithful donkey.

Peter Funk. Conductor of a mock auction; one who makes fictitious bids at auctions.

Peter Klaus. German legendary goatherd of Sittendorf. His adventures resemble those of Rip Van Winkle.

Peter man. A fisherman; originally one who fished with nets. In thieves' cant one who robs vehicles or drugs his victims.

Peter Pan. A J.M. Barrie hero. A little boy who never grows up; he protects children who are lost.

Peter Rugg. In New England legend a man who swears that a thunderstorm shall not hinder him from reaching home. For his blasphemy he is forced to roam about for eternity between Boston and Hartford in a phantom chaise with a thunderstorm in his wake. Compare Flying Dutchman.

Peter Schlemihl. A Chamisso hero; one who sells his shadow to a gray stranger in return for Fortunatus's purse. The name from Yiddish meaning fool has become a synonym for anyone who makes a desperate and senseless bargain.

Rob Peter to pay Paul. See under Paul.

PETHAHIAH Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah opens.

PETHUEL Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah delivers.

PETREL Small sea-bird; name from Italian petrello (little Peter). During storms it flies low and seems to walk on water; thus named after St. Peter, who "walked on water." Symbolizes trouble; one who 'raises Cain.' Sailors call Mother Carey's chicken.

PETRUCHIO A man who tames a shrew. From the husband of the haughty Katharina in Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

He has spirit, vigor, wit, and has his own way whatever the consequences.

PETUNIA December 22 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: You soothe me; You are not as proud as you are pretty.

PEYOTE Narcotic of the cactus plant; prized by Mexican Indians, who use it ceremonially to obtain the blessed state which to them is supremely religious. The cult has spread to United States Indians and incorporates aspects of Christianity. The plant is eaten in the manner of the sacrament, first the peyote button, then water with prayers and songs.

PFINGST MONTAG Whitsun Monday; observed by Germans as a holiday of merrymaking and outdoor sports.

PHAEACIANS (PHAEAECES) In Homeric legend a gay seafaring people who served as mariners of the dead. They inhabited the island paradise of Phaeacia or Scheria over which Alcinous was king. His daughter Nausicaa (dawn) welcomed Odysseus (sun) to this land in the east (sunrise).

PHAEDRA (PHAIDRE) In Greek mythology daughter of King Minos of Crete; wife of Theseus. She fell in love with her step-son Hippolytus; when he scorned her she falsely accused him, and Theseus had his son put to death. In remorse she strangled herself. Personification of gloaming or the moon, which causes the sun's destruction. Resembles Antaea, Sudabah.

PHAEDRIA Seductress in Spenser's Faerie Queene.

PHAENNA Literally, brightness. One of the two Graces worshiped by the Spartans.

PHAETHON (PHAETON) Literally, gleaming or shining one. Originally an epithet of the Greek sun god; later identified as the son of Helios and Clymene. He prevailed upon his father to let him drive the sun chariot. His lack of skill set heaven afire, made Lybia a desert, and scorched the skin of the Ethiopians. To save the world Zeus struck him with lightning. The Heliades, his sisters, weeping over his body, were turned into poplars, and their tears became amber (golden light). A story which probably has roots in an ancient festival in which the summer death of vegetation was celebrated by mourning. Phaethon may have been a child surrogate given temporary investiture as the sacred king and then sacrificed on a fire. His fall has been interpreted to be the sun's approach to earth at sunset as well as the scorching caused by a hot sun. He typifies one who lacks power and wisdom; a reckless driver; one who in vanity believes he can conquer the world, thus the expression, "Set the world on fire." He resembles Icarus and the maddened Heracles. Phaethon also is said to be a son of Eos and one of the two horses yoked to her chariot, thus rays of dawn.

Phaethon's bird. The swan. Cygnus, Phaethon's friend grieved so at his death the gods, moved to compassion, transformed him into a swan and placed him among the constellations.

PHAETHOUSA In Greek mythology a light nymph who, with Lampetie, fed the cattle (clouds) of Helios.

PHALAND Same as Volund.

PHALARIS One who delights in cruelty. The allusion is to the tyrant of Agrigentum, who had a bronze bull constructed so that the cries of victims burned alive in it sounded like the bellowing of a real bull. Phalaris tried it first on its builder, Perillus.

PHALERA A metallic boss, disk, or stud. By ancient Greeks used as a helmet ornament or on horse trappings. A similar ornament was worn by Roman soldiers. Also the identification mark on slaves.

PHALLUS (PHALLOS) (1) Symbol of self-worship and virility; also of nature's generative powers. Usually worshiped in fertility rites. Emblem of the sun and axis deities typifying shafts of enkindling light. Frequently adorned with bells. Talisman against evil and illness, especially malignancy. Member on which oaths were sworn. In ancient Greece and Rome borne in Bacchi processions. Chief symbol of the Roman deity Fascinus. In Pompeii used as a street sign over lupanars. Compare Herm, Lingam, Miphletzeth. (2) Inferior Greek divinity; companion of Bacchus. His image, typified by his phallus, was carved from the fig tree. The name is from the same root as Pallas.

Phallic dances and rites. Performed as acts of sympathetic magic for the multiplication of crops, herds, and humans. In Japan performed by Ama-no-Uzume to entice the sun goddess Amaterasu from her cave.

Phallic fruits. Apple, fig, grape, peach, pomegranate, trifoliate leaf, wheat ears.

Phallic statues. Set up in fields and offered berries and fruits for a good harvest. Placed before Mongol monasteries to frighten away female demons.

Phallic symbols. Used in rites to induce fertility goddesses to provide crops and herds. Ankh, arrow, bow, bull, caduceus, clitoris, club, cross, crosier, cup, embryonic organism, fire, knobbed stick, Maypole, minaret, omphalos, phallus, pole, ram, scepter, serpent, spear, spire, stake, stump, sword, T, tau, thrysus, torch, tower, tree that is tall or with short branches, upright stone.

PHANES (1) In Orphic Greek religion first born of the gods. He had four eyes corresponding to his fourfold nature, i.e. spring, summer, autumn, winter, or to the four directions, east, west, north, south. He had golden wings and the heads of a ram, bull, snake, and lion. His name is from phaino (I appear). Identical with Iao. (2) Ancient Irish god of fire. Creator-preserver-destroyer. Also called Fan.

PHANTASOS In Greek mythology personification of strange, false dreams. Attendant of Morpheus.

PHANTOM SHIPS In legend they sail against the wind or where there is no wind; masts penetrate the clouds, or bend over to let the sun or moon pass; they are without crews, or manned by ghostly crews; the captains are doomed to sail eternally because of a blasphemy, or they play dice with the Devil for their souls. The Carmilhan, the Flying Dutchman, and the Alice Marr, which comes halfway into the Gloucester, Massachusetts, harbor and then disappears, are phantom ships. Portend bad luck.

PHAON (1) In Greek legend the ugly old ferryman of Mytilene.

When he ferried Aphrodite, who was disguised as a poverty-stricken old woman, across the sea without payment, she turned him into a handsome youth. Sappho, the poetess, fell in love with him and is fabled to have leaped from the Leucadian rock when he rejected her advances. (2) In Spenser's Faerie Queene the personification of intemperate revenge.

PHARAMOND A knight of the Round Table said to have been the first king of France in the 5th century. In one legend he abdicates to marry a humble maiden.

PHARAOH (PERAA) Literally, great house. Title of ancient Egyptian rulers. They were revered as incarnations of the sun god who caused fruitfulness, and for this reason wore the uraeus. In Scriptures used as a proper name; the ruler under whom Joseph flourished, and the line under whom the oppression of the Israelites and the Exodus took place. Thus a taskmaster or tyrant.

Pharaoh's chicken. The vulture, so called because it often appears in Egyptian hieroglyphics.

Pharaoh's corn. Wheat grains found in mummy cases.

PHARISEE Literally, separated. One of the Jewish party whose members strictly observed all external forms and ceremonies of the law, and in so doing were led by a sense of superior sanctity to separate themselves from other Jews. By extension one who pays scrupulous regard to tradition rather than to the spirit of religion, one self-righteous, a hypocrite.

PHAROS Ancient lighthouse of white marble built on the island of Pharos in the 3rd century B. C. and accounted one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. By extension any beacon, conspicuous light, or watch tower.

PHEASANT Beauty, gormandizing, luxury, mother love. Dream significance: happy event. In China the yeh chi, symbol of beauty and good fortune. In art associated with the peony. Represents Wei. In Japan called kiji or kigisu, the weeping woman, a bird of mourning; also a messenger of the gods.

Pheasant's eye. In the language of flowers: I cannot forget you.

PHELM Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning good.

PHEMIOS In Homeric legend one who with his music lulls to sleep the sorrows of men who are about to die. Probably the gentle breeze.

PHENACITE Mineral symbolizing superstition.

PHEON In heraldry the barbed head of a dart or arrow, or the broad English arrow borne as a badge of office.

PHILAMMON In Greek mythology a son of Apollo and Chione. The first musician to celebrate the birth of Leto's twins. Typifies breeze.

PHILANDRUS (PHILANDROS) Literally, man loving. In Greek mythology, with Phylacides, abandoned and suckled by a she-goat. Probably twins of light and darkness. Source of philander, i. e. to make licentious love to a woman. In Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, Philander is the name of a Dutch knight who is a male coquet.

PHILEMON AND BAUCIS

Personifications of hospitality and devotion. From the Roman legend of the humble cottagers who shared their meager meal with a stranger, who developed to be Jupiter in disguise. When the god promised to grant any wish they made they expressed a desire to die at the same time. Jupiter granted their wish and transformed Philemon into an oak and Baucis into a linden tree with their top branches entwined. Prototype of Darby and Joan.

PHILETUS Masculine name from the Greek, meaning love.

PHILIP (PHIL, PHILLIP, PIP) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning lover of horses. In feminine form Philippa.

PHILISTINE Early Palestinian foe of the Jews. In modern usage one who is devoted to low aims, materialistic, narrow-minded, ruthless. Matthew Arnold applied the term to middle class English, which he called ignorant and obstructive.

PHILITIS Because Khufu and his successor Khafre, despots who had built the two great pyramids, had become so hateful to Egyptians, they called the pyramids Philitis after a shepherd who grazed his flocks near them.

PHILOCTETES Greek sun hero; archer to whom Heracles, at death, gave his poisoned arrows (violet-tinted morning rays). Philoctetes was an Argonaut, and in the Trojan War sided with the Greeks. His foot was bitten by a serpent (earth, i.e. he set) on the island of Lemnos, and the Greeks abandoned him. An oracle declared Troy could not be taken without his arrows, so in the tenth year of the war he was sent for. In combat he killed Paris.

PHILOMELA Literally, love of song. In Greek mythology daughter of an Athenian king; sister of Procne, whose husband, the Thracian king Tereus, ravished Philomela, and then cut off her tongue that she might not reveal his conduct. Tereus told his wife that Philomela was dead, but Philomela embroidered her fate into a peplum and sent it to her sister. In another version Tereus cut off Procne's tongue and married Philomela, saying Procne was dead. When the sisters discovered his guilt they killed Itys, son of Tereus and Procne, and served the flesh to his father. The gods changed Philomela into a nightingale, Procne into a swallow, Tereus into a hoopoe. In early myths Philomela and Procne probably were identical; Philomela a lover of celestial herds (golden-tinted morning clouds), Procne a dew nymph, Tereus the sun which cut off their tongues (dew drops), Itys a personification of dawn, the birds representing spring. The legend was attached to a series of religious pictures found at the temple of Daulis, which may have been instructional scenes showing different methods of taking oracles. In which case the tongue really was a laurel leaf which an attendant handed to the priestess; the chewing of the leaf sent the priestess into a trance in which her face was contorted with ecstasy, not pain; the letters on the peplum were oracular sticks on a cloth; the Itys eating was the taking of omens from a sacrificed child's entrails by a priest; the birds were disguises in which priestesses and priest read flight auguries.

PHILONOME In Greek mythology second wife of Cynus. She falsely accused her stepson Tenedos, whereupon Cycnus placed him in a chest and tossed him into the sea. Thus the moon caused the sun to set. Resembles Phaedra, Potiphar's wife.

PHILOSOPHY Symbolized by blue, the color of ancient academic robes. Personified by a classical figure contemplating a skull; he holds a scroll and pen; an owl (Athena) and a heron are near him. In an Italian icon personified by an old woman with sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks, who appears to be vigorous.

Philosopher's stone. An imaginary stone; an element, mixture, or solid, which alchemists sought as they thought it contained the property of converting baser metals into gold or the cure for various ills. Thus that which is able to separate the gross from the spiritual, the pure from the base.

PHILOTES Greek abstract deity. Desire. Descendant of Eris.

PHILOXIA Feminine name from the Greek, meaning loving strangers.

PHILTER Mystic drink used for inspiring courage, hate, love, etc. Related to aphrodisiacs.

PHILYRA Greek sea nymph. Daughter of Oceanus. Mother of the centaur Chiron by Cronus. Transformed by Zeus into a linden tree.

PHINEAS (PHINEHAS) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning a serpent's mouth or oracle; brazen mouthed.

PHINEUS In Greek mythology son of Agenor or of Belus. Soothsayer, he was blinded by the gods when he abused the gift of prophecy. When his second wife Ideaea accused her stepsons Orythus and Crambis (or Polydectus and Polydorous) of improper conduct Phineus put out their eyes. For this the Harpies tormented him by defiling his food. When the Argonauts stopped at Bithynia, Zetes and Calais rescued him from the Harpies. In appreciation he told them how to pass the Symplegades. Probably a light hero who passed through the underworld of night or winter, where growth decays. Legendary prophets are often portrayed as blind, the blindness preventing them from being deceived by appearances.

PHLACCUS, MRS. An insensitive American dowager, mistress of a palace in Europe; her aristocracy is wealth only. A T.S. Eliot character.

PHLEGETHON (PYRIPHLEGETHON) In Greek mythology river of fire in Hades. It flows into the Acheron. Site of the judgment hall of Rhadamanthus, who sentences guilty shades to tortures in Tartarus. Dante places those who had been violent against others in it.

PHLEGM According to an ancient theory one of the four humors. Caused sluggishness. From this word came phlegmatic, meaning coolness of temperament, sluggishness. See humor.

PHLEGRA Place of burning. In Greek mythology Thessalian valley where Zeus battled the giants. Suggests the sky at sunset.

PHLEGYAS King of the Lapithae; father of Coronis. Personification of flame. In a frenzy against Apollo for violating his daughter, Phlegyas set fire to the Delphi temple, and was slain by the god. In Hades a huge stone hung over him. In Dante's Inferno he is a boatman of the Styx, guardian of the fifth circle.

PHLOX May 26 birthday flower symbolizing unanimity. In the language of flowers: Trying to please you.

PHOBETOR In Greek mythology personification of alarming dreams. Attendant of Morpheus.

PHOBOS Greek abstract divinity. Fear. Son of Ares and Aphrodite. Attendant or steed of Ares in war. Source of the word phobia.

PHOCIS Ancient Greek state in which the Delphic shrine of Apollo was located. Regarded as the center or navel of the earth. Word identical with focus. Originally called Pytho.

Phocensian despair. When the men of Phocis presumed to plough the sacred field of Delphi they were forced to defend themselves single-handed against the other Greeks. The conflict looked hopeless, and a huge pile was built on which men, women, and children were to join in one vast human sacrifice. Before mounting the pile the men rushed in desperation against the foe and obtained victory.

PHOEBUS (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning brightness, light, to shine; also probably denotes life and the power of creation. (2) In Greek mythology an epithet of Apollo, sun god, as a healer.

Phoebe. (1) Feminine form of Phoebus. (2) A Greek Titan, daughter of Uranus and Gaea; wife of Coeus; mother of Astraea. She likewise is said to be the mother of Latona and grandmother of Apollo and Artemis. Generally she is understood to be the moon in the open vault of heaven, thus an aspect of Artemis and a sister of Phoebus Apollo.

PHOENICIA (PHENICIA, PHENICE) (1) In Greek mythology the purple land from which Zeus in the form of a white bull abducted Europa. In another legend land founded by Phoenix, Europa's brother, while searching for her. The name denotes brightness or splendor; it was a celestial realm. (2) A Mediterranean country, whose people were noted colonists, navigators, and traders. The Phoenicians were the chief rivals of the Greeks and Romans for mastery of the ancient world.

PHOENIX (1) Fabulous Arabian bird. Emblem of solar or fire worship. It supposedly lives to a great age, at which time it burns itself to ashes, and after three days comes to life again; thus symbolic of immortality, rejuvenation, resurrection, self-immolation. Also symbolic of storms. It appears alone, without mate or companion. Figuratively, a person of singular or superlative excellence, a prodigy. Because alchemists employed it to symbolize their vocation it is used as a chemist's shop sign. Badge of Lord Mountbatten's Southeastern Asia command in World War II. Purple-red, its most prevalent color, supposedly was invented by the Phoenicians, from whom it receives its name. The word resolves into fo-en-ix, i.e. one great fire. The bird evolved from the conception of bennu, Egyptian bird of the rising sun. Compare Garuda, Griffin, Rukh. In China called feng-huang. Empress emblem. Its advent heralds an auspicious event; its departure foretells calamity. When the world is peaceful its note will be heard. Symbolic of abundance, beauty, prosperity. Also identified with Chu Ch'ieh, Vermilion Bird, ruler of southern quadrant, indicating summer. In art associated with the peony. In Christianity typifies Christ. In Japan called Ho-wo. It typifies the entire world, its back the crescent moon, its wings the wind, its feet earth, its tail trees and plants. (2) In Greece the date-palm tree over which Baachus was lord. Symbol of rebirth. Cognate with phenice, Hebrew for date-palm. Identical with the Ashera. (3) Greek light deity. Son of Agenor; brother of Europa. While searching for his sister he settled in the country named after him, Phoenicia, a celestial realm of purple light. (4) Constellation in the Southern Sky.

Phoenix cycle or period. The time of reappearance of the phoenix is usually given as every 500 years, but sometimes it is said to appear every 250, 1000, or 7000 years.

Phoenix Park. A public park in Dublin, which James Joyce mentions in Finnegans Wake to symbolize the Garden of Eden. It is the site of the secret crime of H. C. Earwicker.

PHOL In Norse mythology Odin's horse; also a name of Balder. Thus the sun or sun's rays.

PHOLUS (PHOLOS) Greek centaur renowned for hospitality.

PHONOI Greek abstract deity. Murder. Descendant of Eris.

PHORCYS (PHORCOS, PHORCUS, PHORKUS, PHORKYS) Greek sea god. Son of Nereus and Doris, husband of Ceto, by whom he was the father of the Gorgons and Graeae. By Hecate he was father of Scylla, by Sterope of the Sirens. He fathered Ladon, dragon which guarded the Hesperides, and other monsters. Identical with Orcus, Roman underworld god. His name is the same word as porcus (pig). In one aspect Goethe calls Mephistopheles Phorcys.

Phorcides. The Graeae, which see.

PHORONEUS Literally, discoverer of fire. In Greek mythology ruler of Argos. Son of Inachus and Melia; husband of Cerdo and Telodice. The first of men and ruler of all mortals. A fire deity who provided the comforts of life. Equates with Bhuranyu.

PHOSPHORUS (PHOSPHOR, PHOSPHOROS) Greek name signifying light bringer. Used as an epithet of Artemis and Hecate as lunar deities, but usually understood to be the title of the morning star when it shines in the east before sunrise. In one legend Aphrodite asked him to act as night-watcher in her temple, explaining his absence from the heavens until just before daybreak. He supposedly had the power of fructifying crops. In art portrayed in the company of other divinities of light or as a youthful rider bearing a torch. Also called Heosphorus or Eosphoros, i.e. dawn-bearer. Identical with Lucifer, Venus. Compare Hesperus.

PHRA IN Siamese equivalent of Indra. If, when he appears in the Songkran festival, he carries warlike weapons, the year will be troubled. A lantern or torch portends a severely hot season, a watering pot implies abundant rain, a wand prophesies peace.

PHRA IN SUEN Siamese equivalent lent of Siva.

PHRA MEN Siamese sacred mountain; navel of the universe. Compare Meru, Myimmo Taung.

PHRA NARAI Siamese equivalent of Vishnu.

PHRA NARET Siamese equivalent of Lakshmi.

PHRIXUS (PHRYXUS) In Greek mythology son of Athamas and Nephele. To rescue him from the jealousy of his stepmother Ino, Nephele placed Phrixus and his sister Helle on the back of a winged ram. Helle fell into the sea and was drowned, but Phrixus reached Colchis, where he married Chalciopé, daughter of King Aetes. After sacrificing the ram to Zeus, Phrixus presented its golden fleece to Aetes, and an oracle predicted that the king's life depended on the safe-keeping of the fleece, which became the goal of the quest of the Argonauts. Helle, the light warm air, fell from the sunlit clouds (fleece), while Phrixus, the cold air, could not be destroyed.

PHRYGIAN CAP Emblem of liberty, wisdom. Worn by dealers in black magic. Midas hid his ass ears under such a cap.

PHRYNE (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning frog or toadlike, probably signifying pallid. (2) A famous hetaera; in antiquity an ugly child who developed into one of the most famous beauties of all time.

PHTAH See Ptah.

PHUOM-OMRI In the occult sciences a priest of Apis.

PHUPLANS (FUF LUNS) Etruscan deity equating with Bacchus.

PHUR-BU (P^rUR-BU) Tibetan Buddhist ceremonial dagger; three-edged magic dagger on which appears the three faces of Haya-griva. Used to dispel evil spirits.

PHUT (PUT) Grandson of Noah, son of Ham. His posterity served in Egyptian armies and in the hosts of Gog; in several Bible passages translated Libyans.

PHYLACIDES (PILACIDES)
See Philandrus.

PHYLACTERIES A protection against demons, a reminder, talisman for peace and long life. Among the Jews strips of cowhide parchment inscribed with Scripture passages enclosed in a black calfskin case with a thong by which it was bound on the forehead or around the left arm, the end strapped around the third finger three times. It was worn in memory of the early history of the race and of the duty to observe the law; also as a charm. Early Christians borrowed it. The case held relics of the dead, a scroll inscribed with mottoes, texts, or legends. In medieval art shown held or issuing from the mouths of angels. By some called hypocritical, ostentatious piety and wisdom; hence a border or fringe used for display. The word is from the Greek meaning guard or watch.

PHYLLA AND HARPINNA The swift horses of Oenomaus, king of Elis, Greece. Typify wind.

PHYLLIS (PHILLIDA, PHILLIS)
(1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning green leaf or bough. (2) In Greek mythology a Thracian princess. Believing herself to be deserted by Demophoon, she committed suicide. The gods transformed her into an almond tree. Personification of dawn or spring, who died when the sun moved on. (3) A country girl in Virgil's Eclogues; hence a poetic name for a shepherdess or rustic maiden.

PHYSICIAN Symbolized by caduceus, cane, conveyance, horse, serpent, staff, surgeon's implements.

Physic. In an Italian icon shown as an old woman crowned with laurel. She holds a cock and a knotty staff, around which a serpent is twisted, to typify the practice of medicine.

Physician's ring. In the middle ages worn on the third finger of the right hand; viewed as an amulet. The stone indicated the disease against which the ring was a protection; carnelian or a red stone was a charm against hemorrhage, coral was believed to cure nervous disorders, sapphire or a blue stone preserved from infection and pestilential diseases, etc.

PHYTALMIOS Greek epithet for a fertility deity. Applied to Dionysus as god of growth, and to Poseidon at Eleusis as god of plants.

PI (1) Sixteenth letter of the Greek alphabet with a numerical value of eighty. Equivalent of the English P. (2) Word root corresponding to pa, which see. (3) A mathematical formula representing the relation of the circumference to the diameter of a circle, formerly a sacred secret; a number no one has been able to work out and which goes on eternally as 22 to 7. (4) Two constellations or resting places of the sun in the Chinese zodiac: a- the End, six stars in Hyades, western quadrant, autumn season.

Represented by the moon. Unlucky time for building, propitious time for funerals. b- The Wall, two stars in a straight line, Gamma in the tip of Pegasus and Alpha in the head of Andromeda. Represented by the porcupine, element water. An evil time for weddings.

PIACHE (PEAI-MAN) Central and South American medicine man, witch doctor.

PIA DE' TOLOMEI Sieneese woman, wife of Nello della Pietra who, when he wanted to marry another woman, shut her up in a tower in his castle, where she died. Immortalized in Dante's Divina Commedia.

PIAGNONE Mourner; particularly the followers of Savonarola from their dejected appearance.

PIAO (POH) A Chinese term for unicorn. Also called Lin or Lu.

PIBROCH Literally, pipe-man. A battle type of bagpipe music used by Scottish clans.

PICADOR In bull-fighting the horseman with a lance who irritates or wounds the bull before the matador enters the ring; hence a clever debater, one of ready wit.

PICCARDA A woman who had taken religious vows, but is forced by her family to break them and marry a nobleman. Dante finds her in the sphere of the moon, where are those who had imperfectly performed their vows.

PICKAX Carries the symbolism of ax.

PICROCHOLE A fire-eater in Rabelais' Gargantua who satirically personifies mankind's quarrelsome nature and lust for conquest and power. He may be a portrait of Charles V or Ferdinand of Aragon.

PICT A woman who paints her face. From the custom of the ancient Picts who painted their bodies.

PICTOR Constellation in the Southern Sky also called Painter's Easel.

PICTURE See image for interpretation, also icon. Dream significance: pleasure to come.

Picture playing cards. The picture being double suggests the dual law expressed in all phenomena; light and darkness, male and female, summer and winter.

PICUMNUS Roman rustic deity. Grinder of corn. With his twin Pilumnus, tiller of earth, a companion of Mars. The brothers, tutelary gods of childbirth, may have been aspects of Saturn. The woodpecker personified and deified.

PICUS Roman augur. Son of Saturn, husband of the nymph Canens, father of Fauna and Faunus. He appears to have been an axis, forest, and horse deity, as well as a first man and earliest king of Latium. When he repulsed the advances of Circe, she changed him into a woodpecker, under which form he retained his prophetic powers. His transformation hints at a change of season.

PIE Round sacrificial cake; body of the deity. See bun, wafer. The book or ordinal in Church services.

Eat humble pie. Be obsequious. At hunting banquets during the middle ages the venison numbles (heart, liver, etc.) were made into pies and given to the servants, thus one who ate the numble pie (later corrupted into humble pie) was a menial.

PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN Hero of a German legend, Bunting by name. He appeared at Hamelin, which was visited by a plague of rats, and offered to rid the town of the pests for a sum of money. With his pipes he charmed them into the Weser, where they were drowned. Refused his payment and called sorcerer, he reappeared the following Saint John's Day and lured all the children, who followed him to the Koppelberg Hill, where all save two, one blind, one dumb, were swallowed up. A fairy tale probably inspired by stories of flute or harp-playing divinities, who frequently spent half a year (winter) in the underworld. Some of those he resembles are Angus, Krishna, Nules-murt, a trumpet-blowing angel, Payatamu.

PIERCE (PEARCE) Masculine name. Variant of Peter through Norman-French Piers.

PIERIA A Macedonian coast district at the base of Mount Olympus; fabled as the birthplace of Orpheus and the Muses.

Pierian spring. Fountain of the Muses in Pieria; it supposedly gave poetic inspiration to all who drank of it; hence any source of inspiration.

PIERIDES In Greek mythology daughters of Pierus, king of Emathia, who challenged the Muses to a music contest. For their vanity the Muses transformed them into wrynecks. Air or fountain nymphs. The name also is applied to the Muses because they were born in Pieria.

PIERPONT Masculine name from the Greek and Latin through the French, meaning from Peter's; also stone bridge.

PIERROT Literally, little Peter. White-faced and white-clad buffoon. In early pantomime he usually was the tallest and thinnest man, his costume was large and loose with long sleeves. He personified the male principle; while still in a state of innocence he wore a white cap; after his fall or attainment of the knowledge of good and evil he wore a black cap. His sweetheart, the female principle, was Pierrette, sometimes Columbine. From the simple figure a more romantic artist-lover has evolved, one of lofty imagination, who hides his true feelings behind a comic mask.

PIERS PLOWMAN Chief character in the poem The Vision of Piers Plowman, who in early parts is a simple pious English laborer, in later parts, Christ himself. Thus he personifies the poor man's Christ.

PIETA A work of art showing the dead Christ with Virgin Mary or sorrowing women.

PIETRA Feminine name from the Italian, meaning stone.

PIETY Symbolized by a cross, flaming heart, heart, lamp. In an Italian icon personified by a pale winged woman with a Roman nose. She has flames instead of hair. Her left hand is over her heart; in her right she holds a cornucopia from which flow fruits and grains.

Piety and religious aspiration.
Typified by a heart and hind.

PIG Filth, greed, gluttony, lethargy, lack of tenderness, mental darkness, obstinacy, sensualism. Dream significance: damage, difficulties. Anciently substituted for humans in sacrifices to death deities. According to a proverb a pig coming into the house betokens poverty and the advent of a dog riches, on the theory a pig eats and sleeps and a dog protects. Buddhist symbol of ignorance, one of the three cardinal sins. In China the shih, a good luck talisman. The yang principle, animal guarding the hours 9 to 11 P.M., carrier of the sun into the twelfth house of the Zodiac. In Egyptian antiquity held unclean and supposedly caused leprosy if eaten except at the mid-winter mysteries, when it was served at sacrificial rites. At sowing time it possessed the spirit of Osiris, at harvest time the spirit of Set.

Black Pig. Devil, Satan.

Buy a pig in a poke. Purchase a bargain without examining it; in allusion to a trick of placing a cat in a bag and selling it for a suckling pig. Those who opened the sack, "let the cat out of the bag." The French say, "buy a cat in a pocket."

Pigs in clover. Newly rich who retain low tastes.

Pigskin of Tuis. In Irish legend the pigskin of the king of Greece, which had two virtues, the power of healing and the power of turning water into wine. Demanded by Lugh as part of the blood fine from the sons of Tuirenn, who had murdered Lugh's father. Probably a holder of winds.

Pigs of Anthony. Degenerate monks of the order of Saint Anthony, who generally is represented with a hog at his feet.

Pigs of Easal. In Irish legend the seven pigs which, though killed every night, were alive the next day. Anyone who ate a part of them never was afflicted with disease. Demanded by Lugh as part of the blood fine from the sons of Tuirenn. Typify earth's renewing fertility. Probably the same swine Manannan owned and served at the Feast of Ages.

PIGEON Constancy, gentleness. Also cowardice, thus pigeon-livered. A dupe or simpleton. Deity messenger. Dream significance: sincere love. Radically, pi-ge-on, i.e. father great one. See dove. In Australian myths bringer of babies. A pigeon appeared at the baptism of Christ; typifies Holy Ghost. In Greek mythology a form of Zeus. In Hinduism herald of Yama, death god. A green stone pigeon invoked by Maoris as an oracle is called Korotangi.

PIGMY Figuratively, a person of small understanding. In classical legend a race fabled to have been destroyed in a war with cranes. See dwarf.

PI KAN Chinese legendary sage who reproved the tyrant Chou Hsin for debauchery at court, whereupon the emperor ordered the sage's heart cut out to see if it had seven orifices as the heart of a man of superior virtue was said to have. Ts'ai Shen Yeh, god of wealth, is his deified spirit.

PIKE (1) Fish used in heraldic bearings to signify Christ or Christian. In Welsh called pig. Both words yield great father. (2) Metal pointed shaft used in war; superseded by the bayonet. In middle ages a badge of rank. Symbol of creation, earth's axis, phallus. See spear.

Pikestaff. Pilgrimage.

Plain as a pikestaff. Obvious. The unostentatious staff carried by pilgrims clearly revealed their devotion.

PIKER Esthonian thunder god.

PILATE (PONTIUS PILATE) A Roman soldier appointed procurator of Judea. Hated for his cruelty. He delivered Christ to be crucified. Later he committed suicide. Figuratively, an unprincipled person; especially one whose cruelty leads to his downfall.

Pilate's voice. A rough voice. In mystery plays all despots spoke in a loud, ranting manner.

PILE In heraldry represents the large pieces of wood used by engineers in bridge building. Denotes construction, difference.

Make one's pile. Accumulate a fortune; in allusion to the coin piles that are stacked before a winner at the gambling table.

PILGRIM Colonizer, seeker, stranger, wanderer. In Royal Arch chapters of Freemasonry inscribed on a triangular plate; gold jewel of principal Sojourner. In Christian tradition Everyman journeying toward heaven. In allegory he is equipped with the Holy Ghost's spectacles, undertakes a pilgrimage over places where he had previously gone astray, and achieves rebirth.

Pilgrimage. Symbolizes conviction, devotion, life, search. Symbolized by scallop shell, palmer's robe, sandals, shell, or staff.

Pilgrim fathers. Symbolized in the United States by Puritans, ship Mayflower, Thanksgiving Day festival, turkey.

PILLAN Supreme essence of the Araucanian Indians of southern Chile. Deity manifesting thunder god attributes.

PILLAR Confidence, constancy, creator, earth support, firmness, memorial, North Pole, phallus, Pole Star, security, sky prop, steadfast resolution, trunk of the world tree, world axis or spine.

Element of tree worship. Bearer of messages from or to a deity. In heraldry typifies fortitude. Form in which Bacchus was worshipped by Theban Greeks. Hebrew symbol of truth. Emblem of Samson. According to the Zohar the means by which the soul ascends. In Japan a deity presumably inhabits each pillar, hence good-luck if upright, bad-luck if upside down. It is called wo-bashira, meaning male pillar. A pillar of heaven (male) is called Ame-no-mi-Hashira; a pillar of earth (female) is called Kuni-no-mi-Hashira. The end pillar of any fence represents the phallus. Siberians worshiped as the image of the North Star deity or as that of the world tree.

Black pillar. Exclusion, negation.

Four pillars. The four directions or winds. Stability. In Egyptian mythology the backbone of Osiris; also typifies Tat.

From pillar to post. Form one predicament to another. Originally from bad to worse, i.e. from pillory to whipping post.

Ornamented pillar. From under which Asherah, Baal-peor, Ishtar, Priapus, and other fertility and love deities were worshiped.

Pillar of fire (cloud or smoke). Knowledge, light of God, word of God. That which guided the Hebrews through the wilderness.

Pillar of salt. Lot's wife; perpetual monument of God's judgment.

Pillar saints. Stylites; ascetics, chiefly those in Syria, who separated themselves from mankind by living on the tops of pillars.

Pillars of Heracles. Two promontories, one on each side of the Straits of Gibraltar. Torn apart by Heracles from a single mountain and placed as a monument of his perilous expedition to obtain the oxen of Geryon. Ancients believed they marked the end of the world; thus the expression, "I will follow you even to the pillars of Heracles."

Pillar topped by a bird. Same as Bird on pedestal.

Pillar topped by a cock. See Cock perched on a pillar.

Pillar topped by a nail. Among Lapps represents the sacrificial or world tree which holds up the sky. The nail typifies the Pole Star or universal navel. When with seven branches it is the world tree on which sacrificial victims are hung. Parallels Yggdrasil.

Shattered pillar. Death.

Three pillars. Beauty (or goodness), power, wisdom. The triune deity.

Twelve pillars. Ancients believed twelve pillars supported the universe; also separated the constellations, thus the path of the Fates. Temples frequently had twelve pillars of unhewn stone or twelve windows.

Two pillars. Gateway of dawn, eternity, life. Guardians. Birth and death. Twins of beauty and strength, light and darkness, north and south, order and chaos. In chariot races the goals were two pillars or stones. Ancient Babylonians believed the sun re-entered each morning between two pillars, hence gateway of the horizon. In gnostic tradition the letter H, aged immutable door, portal of eternity. In Hebrew tradition priestly and kingly power; justice and mercy. The porch of Solomon's temple, thus door of heaven. The pillar on the right was Jachin, the first principle, God's will established, the stabilizer; the pillar on the left was Boaz, the Voice or Spirit, strength. In Nyasaland circumcision rites the boy or girl passes between two pillars suggesting passage through the gate of rebirth into adulthood. Symbolical-ly the child dies and is reborn as an adult.

Two pillars entwined. Celestial twins.

Universe pillar. Center of the universe, where the profane may not tread.

White pillar. Acceptance, af-firmation.

PILLOW Talisman for preven-tion against pain, sickness, suf-fering. Placed with the dead as a protection against violation of the tomb. Symbolic of comfort, luxury.

PILTZINTECUTLI-TONATIUH Toltec Indian sun god; in the un-derworld ruler of the third hour of the night.

PILUMNUS Roman pestle god; tiller of earth. Brother of Pi-cumnus, which see.

PIMENTOLA Swedish gloomy and dark place; home of the dead. Also called Sarajas. Resembles Manala, Tuonela, Yabmeaimo.

PIMPERNEL August 19 birth-day flower symbolizing assigna-tion, change, childhood, faithful-ness. Because it closes at the approach of bad weather called poor man's weather-glass; typi-fies one who functions in the dark.

PIN Figuratively, to restrain. Dream significance: wounded pride.

Not a pin to choose between them. Exactly alike.

Not worth a row of pins. Val-ueless.

On pins and needles. Nervous, physically or mentally uneasy.

Pincushion. One who accepts abuse without fighting back.

Pin money. A lady's allow-ance for personal expenditures. At one time pins were expensive.

Pin one's faith to. Repose confidence in.

Policy of pin pricks. Policy of continual annoyances.

PINAHUA Inca god of the west. Also called Ayar Uchu.

PINAKA Trident held by Siva. See trident.

PINCERS Christian symbol of martyrdom. One of the thirteen symbols of the crucifixion. At-tribute of saints Apollonia, Dun-stan, Lieven.

PINDOLABHARADVAJA Bud-dhist twelfth arhat; missionary to Eastern Videka. He who guards the banner entrusted to him. He holds a patra (begging bowl) and pushtaka (book). In Japan called O-Binzuru; in Tibet called Bha-ra-dhva-so-myo-len.

PINE March 21 birthday flower. Symbolic of boldness, endurance, fidelity, fire, health, immortal-ity, wisdom. Its vitality is be-lieved to have the power to strengthen the soul of the de-ceased and to preserve the body from corruption. A phallic sym-bol sacred to Attis, Bacchus, Cybele, Dionysus, Neptune, Osiris, Pan, Poseidon, and other ferti-lity deities. In China the sung; symbolic of leadership, prosper-ity, steadfast friendship, vener-able old age, winter, and person-al control because of its power to withstand frost and snow. Most widely worshiped of flowerless trees in Japan. Its symbolism is the same as in China, and for this reason appropriate at New Year, wedding, and old age celebrations. In art associated with the crane and tortoise.

Black pine. Pity. The mascu-line principle.

Black and red pine. Marriage, the masculine and feminine principle.

Pine, bamboo, and prunus.

In China and Japan the three friends of the cold season. Suggests that those who encounter hardships should learn never to falter for these three flourish despite adverse conditions. In Japan called sho-chiku-bai; an offering expressing strength, abundance, beauty, and used in New Year celebrations. If the pine branch is displayed alone during the three-day New Year celebration it is used on the first day.

Pine cone. Abundance, fecundity, fire, good luck, life, phallic principle, regeneration. Typifies the reproductive organ or fire. Charm against witchcraft. Sacred to love goddesses. As a fertility and prosperity symbol survives as an ornament on iron railings. In India the disk of the cone was replaced by an inverted triangle above the tau, and in this form appears on the foot of Buddha. Semitic life symbol, typifying existence united yet distinct or the union of negative and positive forces.

Pine cone and tassel. Emblem of Maine.

Pine pitch. Philosophy, time.

Pine tree. A world tree. A sexual symbol where the palm does not flourish. Attis mutilated himself under a pine, and it was bled (cut for turpentine) at the vernal equinox. When cut down it was adorned with ribbons and carried with pomp to the mother goddess's sanctuary, where it was decorated by fleeces, violets, and in other ways.

Pine twigs. Victory in Isthmic games.

Twin pine trees. Fidelity, passionate love. In Japanese legend Nase and Aze wished to remain together apart from the rest of the world. When they wept and embraced they were metamorphosed into pine trees entwined with each other.

PINEAPPLE February 8 birthday flower. Symbolic of delicacy, luxury, perfection, tropics.

PINK (1) Color signifying the birth of a girl. Symbolic of joy and youth. Associated with the number five, mystic number for healing. Esoteric meaning: one who wishes to devote his life to healing others. Debased meaning: Sentimentality, hue that lacks vitality. (2) May 31 birthday flower symbolizing amiability, divine love, morning light, timidity, welcomeness. In heraldry typifies admiration. In Japan classified as feminine. In Korea typifies ill fortune.

China pink. September 20 birthday flower symbolizing aversion.

Double red pink. June 2 birthday flower. Ardent love.

Indian pink. October 25 birthday flower. Always lovely.

Mountain pink. June 14 birthday flower. Aspiration.

Red pink. March 3 birthday flower. Pure love.

Variegated pink. Refusal.

White pink. Fascination, talent.

Yellow pink. June 3 birthday flower. Disdain.

PINTO-LO-PO-LO-T' O-SHE

(PINDOLA, PO-LO-T' O-SHE)

Pindola, the Bharadvaja, one of the eighteen Chinese Buddhist Lohan. Ruler in Purva-Videha or Godhanga, region in the west. His voice is like that of a lion, he is able to rise into the air like a bird, suggesting he is an aspect of wind. His mount is a tiger, which typifies his power over wild beasts and his ability to overcome evil. Usually shown seated with an open book on one knee and a mendicant's staff resting on his arm.

PIPE (1) For smoking. Portable sacrifice altar. Dream significance: small satisfaction; (broken) quarrel. Among American Indians symbolic of peace. In Great Lakes Indian legend a pipe, when smoked by the hero, produces clouds of pigeons and turkeys, when smoked by the villain, who enchants or robs the hero, gives off beetles, dung, and mosquitoes; suggesting seasons controlled by deities of fertility or drought. (2) For music. Allurement, the wind. Instrument of Pan, Pied Piper of Hamelin.

Crossed Pipes. Typify Christ, Pan.

Piper. Charmer, sorcerer.

PIPOUNOUKHE Algonquin spirit of winter. See Nipinoukhe and Pipounoukhe.

PIPRU Literally, resister. Vedic demon hostile to mankind. Overcome by Indra.

PIRACY Symbolized by black; crows; Jolly Roger, i.e. white skull and crossbones on a black field.

PIRHUA AND MANCA Literally, son of the sun or revealer of light. Peruvian solar hero.

PIRITHOUS (PEIRITHOOS) In Greek mythology son of Zeus and Dia. Ixion is given as his putative father. King of the Lapithae in Thessaly. An Argonaut. At his wedding feast his bride Hippodamia was attacked by Centaurs, and the celebration turned into a battle. After Hippodamia's death he aspired to marry Persephone. Theseus, his boon companion, aided him in the rash adventure, and both were fastened to a rock in Hades by Aides. Heracles rescued Theseus, but Pirithous remained under ground. Thus the sun brought back the sun to upper regions while fertility remained below. The battle was one of seasons.

Pirithean wedding. A brawl.

PIR-NA-PISHTIM Babylonian deluge survivor. Son of Umbara Tutu. Hut dweller in Shurippah. In a dream he was warned by Enki, and saved his family, field laborers, and servants, and appointed Buzur-Kurgala captain of the ark, which after seven nights and seven days rested on Nitsir. After the flood he and his wife were made deities and placed on the Island of the Blessed in the midst of the Sea of Death. There Gilgamesh visited him. Also called Atra-chasis, Utnapishtim, Ziusudra. Prototype of Noah.

PIROGONIA Maoris sacred hill. Fiery mountain on which fairies (paiarehe) dwell, i.e. on which sun sets.

PIRUA (1) Inca name for the planet Jupiter. Heavenly form of Manco Capac. (2) Mother of Mama Cora, Peruvian maize goddess. Name akin to Peru.

PISACAS Hindu demons who drink human blood and eat human flesh. They cause the living to die and devour corpses. Especially foes of fathers, they dwell in the water of villages. Indra crushed a yellow-peaked Pisaci. Their appearance is revolting. Resemble the Raksas.

PISCES Twelfth sign of the zodiac. Typified by twin fish or the ship Argo. The sun enters about February 19 and remains until about March 20. It is a winter sign, called the zodiac's hell, feminine and cold; its quality is unfortunate and moist. It symbolizes hypocrisy, violent death. Its character trait is treachery; it governs the feet and toes. Its tarot significance is the Hanged Man. It is ruled by Neptune. As the fish typifies sexual love and ideas, it is the station for the planet Venus, and is the mansion where divine contemplation is sacrificed to the world of appearances. Babylonians called it Fish of Ea.

PISCIS AUSTRALIS (PISCIS AUSTRINUS) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Southern Fish.

PISCIS VOLANS (VOLANS) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Flying Fish.

PISGAH Mountain range on which was located the summit Nebo, from which Moses beheld the Promised Land.

PISON Literally, freely flowing. One of the four rivers of the Garden of Eden. Said to be a stream of gold. Typifies fertility. By Christians associated with Saint John. Also called Halys or Phasis.

PISO'S JUDGMENT Legally right, ethically wrong. On circumstantial evidence Piso, a Roman judge, sentenced a man to death for murder. At the place of execution another man confessed to the crime, and the centurion returned the condemned man to Piso; whereupon he condemned all three to death, saying, "Let justice be done though the heavens should fall." The first man was executed because he had been condemned, the centurion because he disobeyed orders, the guilty man because he had been the cause of the death of the other two.

PIT Darkness, death, evil, imprisonment. As a trap for wild beasts likened to the plots of designing persons. Dream significance: (to fall into) fatal omen.

PITA Brahman creator-preservedestroyer deity.

PITAKA Buddhist receptacle for religious writings.

PITCHER Fertility, nourishment, rain. Emblem of Aquarius.

PITCHFORK Harvest. A weapon of the gods typifying lightning. When three-pronged denotes a triad. Dream significance: sterile labor.

PITCH PINE March 26 birthday flower symbolizing philosophy.

PITHOM Egyptian sanctuary city. Contained a treasury. Built by the Israelites during their servitude. Name means house of Tum; akin to Pytho, Python.

PITKOMONEN (PITKAINEN) Literally, long man. Finnish thunder god.

PITRI Literally, father. In Hinduism: 1- Deceased ancestors, semi-divine fathers to whom the service of srad'ha is offered; 2- the sons of gods; 3- the ten Prajapati, mythical progenitors of the human race.

Pitripati. Literally, lord of Fathers. A name of Yama as first man.

Pitryana. Literally, way of the fathers. Way of the dead. Compare Devayana.

PITYS Greek nymph of the pine tree. She was loved by Pan, benignant breeze. The jealous north wind Boreas hurled her from a rock and metamorphosed her into the tree.

PIUS Masculine name from the Latin, meaning filial, pious. Radically, light of pa. Like Leo and Urban a conventional papal name. Cognate with picus.

PIXY (PIXIE) In English folklore an elf or fairy, especially one who dances. Compare Puck.

PLACENTA Among Finno-Ugrics and other peoples hung on a tree in a forest, where sacrifices are offered to it as the nourishing mother of the child.

PLAGUE Expression of a deity's wrath, punishment, salvation through destruction.

PLAIN Land of reality in contrast to the mountain, mystical realm. Nickname of the Girondists in the French Revolutionary National Convention, because they sat on the level of plain floor of the hall.

PLANET From the Greek, meaning wanderer. So named because ancients believed planets, watchmen of the heavens, wandered among the stars. They were aspects of the gods whose names they bore, and in their travels prepared occurrences on earth. Alchemists and astrologers recognized seven planets, which influenced the course of human destinies, and which they consulted for forecasts in divination:

Roman Name	Babylonian Name	Greek Name	Angel	Cabalistic Intelligence	Cabalistic Spirit
Sun (Apollo)	Shamash	Apollo	Raphael	Nagiel	Smeliel
Moon (Diana)	Sin	Artemis	Gabriel	Elimiel	Lamaneal
Mars	Nergal	Ares	Chamael	Graphael	Modiniel
Mercury	Nebo	Hermes	Michael	Tiriël	Cochabiel
Jupiter	Marduk	Zeus	Zadkiel	Sophiel	Zadkiel
Venus	Ishtar	Aphrodite	Hamiel	Hagiel	Noguel
Saturn	Ninib	Cronus	Zapkiel	Agiel	Sabathiel

Properties of the planets:

Planet	Color	Day	Metal	Gift	Sin	Virtue	Organ Ruled
Apollo	White or gold Silver	Sunday Monday	Gold Silver	Luck, domination, leadership Imagination, carelessness, travel	Pride Laziness	Science Intelligence	Heart, arteries Brain, nerves, stomach
Mars	Red	Tuesday	Iron	Strength	Temper	Courage	Face, muscles
Mercury	Green or blue	Wednesday	Quick- silver	Business ability	Envy	Ingenuous- ness	Limbs, lungs
Jupiter	Purple or orange	Thursday	Brass	Wisdom	Greed	Integrity	liver, veins
Venus	Yellow or blue	Friday	Copper	Beauty	Luxury	Love	Stomach, genitals
Saturn	Black	Saturday	Lead	Curse, bad luck, sorcery	Avarice, hypocrisy	Prudence	Bones, bile, bladder

PLANE TREE October 24 birthday plant. Symbolizes friendliness, genius, magnificence, ornamentation, shelter. Christian symbol of charity, moral superiority. By Greeks dedicated to Zeus and by Romans to Jupiter, who poured libations of wine over its roots.

PLANT Symbolic of the life cycle; death in winter, rebirth in spring.

Plant with purgative properties. Chewed by primitive peoples in the belief they have the power of keeping off evil spirits or ghosts.

PLANTAIN Christian symbol of the multitude seeking salvation. In India tied to a tree with flowers to signify joy and fertility; used at marriage and other festivals.

PLATE Female principle; sacrifice.

PLAT-EYE Evil ghost of West Indies. Usually appears along with the new moon. It has the shape of a dog with fiery eyes; the longer one stares at the eyes the bigger they get until nothing can be seen but the eyes.

PLATO (PLATON) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning broad-shouldered.

PLEASURE (1) Symbolized by butterfly, dancers, dolphin, grapes, musical instruments, pomegranate, ribbons waving. By seaweed in Japan. Personified in an Italian icon by a winged half-clothed youth crowned with myrtle. He carries a harp and wears buskins. (2) One of the gnostic Aeons.

PLEIADES The seven daughters of Atlas and Pleione (or Aethra); sisters of the Hyades. They killed themselves for grief when the Hyades were placed in the heavens by Zeus, and like their sisters were placed in the sky. In one account they were changed to doves when they appealed to Zeus to save them from Orion, who constantly pursued them, and became a cluster of stars known as the Seven Sisters or Seven Doves. The names of the seven were Alcyone, Celaeno, Electra, Merope, Maia, Sterope, Taygeta. The lost Pleiad is Electra or Merope. Rain-cloud nymphs. The name is said to mean weeper; also sailing, because navigation was considered safe when the cluster appeared. By extension it is applied to any group of seven illustrious persons or brilliant things. In Blackfoot Indian tradition the stars were lost children, driven by poverty to take refuge in the sky. By Siberian Yakuts called Urgel, i. e. air hole, through which streams of cold draught come from the upper heavens.

PLENTY In an Italian icon personified by a garlanded beautiful woman in a green gown carrying a cornucopia.

PLEURISY ROOT Heartache cure.

PLINY Masculine name from the Latin, meaning of the rock.

PLOW Fertility, laboriousness, pioneering.

King's hand on plow. Consecration, dignity, power.

Heated plowshare. Trial by fire, instrument of martyrdom. Emblem of Saint Cunigunda.

Plowshare scrap. In China worn as an amulet to dispel evil soil spirits.

Two wheeled plow. Divine vehicle, supreme deity in dual aspect.

PLUMBAGO BLOSSOM Holy wishes.

PLUMB BLOSSOM January 15 birthday flower symbolizing fidelity. In the language of flowers: Keep your promises. Chinese emblem of spring signifying courage, more abundant life, valor breaking through obstacles. In Japan called eldest brother of flowers because it is the first each spring. Symbolizes beauty, chastity, gentility, hardiness, loveliness, modesty. In art associated with the nightingale.

Indian plum. July 23 birthday flower symbolizing privation.

Plum, bamboo, and pine branch. Chinese and Japanese floral triad expressing strength, abundance, beauty. Used in New Year decorations. If the plum branch is used alone during the celebration, it is used on the third day.

Plum tree. In China the mei. Emblem of January, symbolic of longevity and winter. The contrast between its knotty trunk and green shoots is symbolic of age and youth, suggesting that in spite of age, youth can rise anew, hence hope. In art associated with the magpie, bird of joy.

Three plums. Emblem of Lao-Tse.

Wild plum. Independence.

Withered plum tree. Bastard.

PLUMB RULE One of the six jewels of Freemasonry. Represents south. Symbolic of rectitude. In Encampment of Knights Templars, surmounted by a banner, silver jewel of standard bearer. In Royal and Secret Councils, with trowel enclosed in an equilateral triangle, silver jewel of principal conductor of the works. In Royal Arch chapters, surmounted by a turban, suspended in an equilateral triangle, gold jewel of the scribe.

In Symbolic Lodges, gold or silver jewel of junior warden.

PLUME See feather.

Plumed Snake. Pueblo Indian genius of rain clouds and water.

PLUMMET Discretion, justice, perfection. In heraldry uprightness.

PLUTO (1) In Roman mythology son of Saturn, husband of Proserpina. King of Orcus, lord of the dead, giver of wealth. Ruler of the iron age. Identical with Dis Pater; corresponds to Greek Hades and Plutus. (2) Greek river nymph; daughter of Oceanus and Tethys. (3) Ninth and outermost planet from the sun.

PLUTUS (PLOUTON, PLOUTOS) In Greek mythology son of Iasion and Demeter. Underworld guardian of earth's treasures. Zeus blinded him that he might distribute his gifts without discrimination. Because he bestowed his gifts without regard to merit he sometimes was called Fool, an epithet of Christ. In some accounts revered as beneficent; in others men dared not address him as the unseen ruler of the dead, and with averted faces offered sacrifices to Plutus, the wealthy. In art he is represented as lame when he makes his appearance, winged when he takes his departure. Also portrayed as an infant in the arms of Eirene (peace). At Athens and Thebes associated with Tyche (chance). His emblems are the dog Cerberus, cornucopia, key, two-pronged fork. His name is the source of the phrase, 'rich as Plutus,' and the term 'plutocrat.' Identical with Aides, Hades, Pylartes. By Romans called Pluto.

PNEUMA Soul or spirit. In ancient philosophies the universal spirit; hence the divine and immortal element in man. In New Testament the spiritual, the Holy Ghost or act by which he proceeds from the Father or from the Son.

PNYX Literally, crowded. Place in ancient Athens where people deliberated and voted upon public affairs; also the assemblage of people.

PO (1) Polynesian chaos mother; she enveloped everything over which Tanava (darkness) and Mutuhei (silence) ruled. She typified a debris which brought about creation, and was the beggetter of La'i-La'i, the first female, who became the mother of mankind. Name also used for the underworld, from which came all life. Compare Te Kore. (2) Tagalog term of respect. (3) River in Italy, alternately known as Padus, which yields parent of resplendent light.

POCHARD In Russian and Siberian tales the deity is a white pochard, the devil a black one.

PODALIRIUS In Greek mythology son of Asclepius, brother of Hygeia, Machaon, Panacea. Hero and physician in the army of Agememnon during the Trojan war.

PODARGE In Greek mythology mother of storm wind; also of the fabulous horses Balius and Xanthus, which probably represent clouds.

PODOGA Slavic air god.

PODSNAP In Dickens' Our Mutual Friend a pompous, respectable, self-satisfied middle-class man. The designs of Providence coincide with his own. Hence the noun podsnappery.

POEAS (POIAS) Greek shepherd who lights Heracles' funeral pyre. Slayer of Talus, bronze sun man. Thus the spirit of darkness or winter. Father of Philoctetes, light deity who inherited Heracles' arrows (rays).

POET In Dante's Divina Commedia typifies human wisdom.

Poetry. Symbolized by a crown of ivy and laurel, a harp, lyre, pen and scroll. Personified by the Muses. In an Italian icon represented by a woman in a sky-colored dress decorated with stars; her head is winged, she wears a laurel crown, and holds a harp; a swan stands beside her. Also represented by a ruddy complexioned young man laurel crowned and girded with ivy; he is writing, but his head is turned toward heaven, as his ideas are of a supernatural quality.

POHJOLA Finnish northern home, world of the dead through which a gloomy river flows. It is a village of man-eating spirits who breed sickness. Pohjanakka is the ruler. Also called Tuonela.

POIA Literally, scarface. In Blackfoot legend star boy, whose face was scarred. Son of the Morning Star and So-at-sa-ki (feather woman), a mortal.

POINAE (POENA, POINE) Greek abstract avenging goddess. Punishment. Probably a vindictive ghost. Attendant of Nemesis.

POINSETTA Symbolic of Yule festivities, nativity of Christ. Also called Christmas rose.

POINT (DOT, PERIOD) End, finality.

Point within a circle. Deity surrounded by eternity, fecundity, heavens and their omphalos or chaos egg, male and female principles, sun, universe axle and hub. In Freemasonry the individual brother (point) and the boundary of his conduct or destiny (circle); also Supreme Power, Architect of the universe. Mayan hieroglyph for A. Pythagorean symbol for the universe.

Three points with radiating lines. Hebrew symbol for the sovereignty of God.

POINTING A means of killing among North American Indians. Believed to be as fatal as the glance of an evil eye.

POISON In time myths symbolizes the cold or darkness with which night or winter deities put to sleep or kill light or summer divinities. On the other hand, sun deities carry poisoned swords, i.e. scorching rays, which devastate the earth. The Hamlet legend is one in which poison plays a large part. Heracles had poisoned arrows.

Poison dogwood. Symbolizes contemptuousness, cynicism.

Poison ivy. Symbolizes caustic ridicule.

POISSON D'AVRIL Literally, April fish. French April fool.

POKO-HA-RUA-TE-PO In Polynesian mythology wife of Rangī. Pit of the breath of night.

POKUNT Soshonean spirit which dominates the forces of nature. Equivalent of Manito.

POL (PHOL) A name of Baldur. Sometimes said to be the horse of Odin. The sun's rays. Related to Baal and Paul.

POLE Creation, phallus, sky prop, universal axis. Compare spear. Finno-Ugrics furnish the deceased with a pole which serves as a bridge in the otherworld, an idea inherited from Iranians, whose dead cross a bridge.

Pole-star. North star or Polaris. Cosmic throne, eye of heaven, heavenly axis. Constancy, the male principle. That which directs, governs, guides. An ideal for action. An attractive or controlling principle. Epithet of Jesus. By Hindus called Dhurva. In Japanese mythology the needle of Weaving Damsel. Abode of Ame-no-Minaka-Nushi, lord of heaven's center; of Kamu Mimusubi, female principle; of Taka Mimusubi, male principle. In Lapp tradition the nail which holds the sky in place and around which the heavens revolve. In Norse mythology called Veraldar ngli (world spike).

Pole striped red and white. Anciently a sacrificial post; if the patient of the barber (bleeder) grasped the pole, he was chosen the sacrificial victim. Later topped by a gilt knob and a surgeon's symbol. During certain periods the barber performed surgical duties, and it became the barber's emblem. The pole symbolized the stick held by a pain-racked patient; the red and white spiral stripes represented bandages, one with blood on it. Blue sometimes was substituted for red inasmuch as venous blood is bluish. The knob represented the basin into which blood poured. Probably derived from the caduceus or Asclepian wand.

Surgeon's (Chirurgian's) pole. See above.

Telegraph pole and wires. Commerce, electricity, messages. In commercial art shown with Mercury.

Totem pole. Image of a sacred spirit; widely revered by American Indians. Typifies a sacred tree; a tree of life or cross. Symbol of authority and tribal unity. Grave memorial. Central object in the sun-dance, during which it is adorned with sun symbols and talismans. Also addressed as the four winds, the rain, or waters, all bringers of fertility.

POLEVIK (POLEVOY) Russian malevolent field spirit, withholder of vegetation.

POLICHINELLE In French pantomime the equivalent of the Italian Punchinello.

A secret of Polichinelle. A secret known to everyone, but of which some make a needless mystery.

POLLENTE In Spenser's Faerie Queene a personification of might. He stands on Bridge Perilous and attacks everyone who crosses it, bestowing the spoils upon his daughter Munera. He represents Charles IX of France, who slaughtered Protestants on Saint Bartholomew's Eve.

POLLICE VERSO Literally, with turned thumb. In ancient Rome the public condemned a gladiator participating in the games to death by holding out their hands with the thumbs pointing downward. Hence the phrase 'thumbs down' or 'thumbs up.'

POLLUX (POLYDEUCES) In Greek mythology immortal twin of the mortal Castor. Placed as a fixed star in Gemini. See under Castor and Pollux.

POLLY Feminine name, variant of Molly, diminutive of Mary.

POLLYANNA (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, combining forms of Mary and Hannah, thus bitter grace. (2) A fatuous optimist, from the character created by Eleanor H. Porter.

POLOZNI TSA Finno-Ugrian goddess who punished those who harmed rye during its flowering. Equivalent of Poludnica.

POLUDNICA (POLEDNICA, PREZ-POLUDNICA) Russian female field spirit. Whomever she touches will die a sudden death. Her favorite victims are children left alone in the fields and women who have recently borne children and go out at midday. Her name signifies midday spirit; probably a personification of sunstroke.

POLYANTHUS October 23 birthday flower symbolizing pride of riches.

Crimson polyanthus. Heart's mystery.

Lilac polyanthus. Confidence.

POLYBOTES In Greek mythology giant whom Poseidon destroyed by hurling him upon the island of Cos. Perhaps a personification of storm.

POLYBUS (POLYBOS) In Greek mythology king of Corinth, husband of Merope, foster father to Oedipus. Ruler of a realm of darkness.

POLYDECTES In Greek mythology king of Seriphus, where Danae and Perseus were provided with shelter. Polydectes sent Perseus to slay the Medusa, and while he was gone Polydectes tried to force Danae into marriage. When she refused he treated her with great unkindness. Upon his return Perseus showed Polydectes the Medusa head, the king turned to stone, and Danae was rescued from the prison in which her unwelcome admirer had placed her. Polydectes was an underworld king who had imprisoned dawn. He parallels Eurystheus who also sent a sun hero on perilous adventures.

POLYDEGMON An epithet of Hades. The name signifies grayness or gray man.

POLYDORUS In Greek mythology the youngest son of Priam and Hecuba. In one account slain by Achilles at the siege of Troy; in another, placed in the care of Polymnestor, king of Thrace, who treacherously slew him. Prince of a realm of darkness or winter. Also the name of a son of Cadmus and Harmonia.

POLYHYMNIA (POLYMNIA) Greek Muse of sacred hymns. Shown crowned with laurel.

POLYIDUS (POLYIDOS) Literally, many-shaped. In Greek mythology soothsayer consulted by Bellerophon. He probably was a performer in sacred or shape-shifting dances, i. e. dances typifying the change of lights or seasons. In one legend, when Glaucus, son of King Minos fell into a jug of honey and smothered to death, the Cretan king shut Polyidus up with the body and commanded him to bring the child back to life. A serpent approached the corpse, and Polyidus killed it with a stone. Another serpent approached the dead reptile and covered it with grass, whereupon it crawled away. Polyidus put some of the grass on the infant's body and restored the child to life. A lord of an underworld realm of fertility.

POLYMETIS An epithet of Odysseus.

POLYNICES (POLYNEIKES) In Greek mythology son of Oedipus by his mother Jocasta; thus a child of incestuous union. Husband of Argia. Brother of Eteocles and Antigone. After the voluntary abdication of Oedipus his sons became joint rulers, agreeing to govern in alternate years (seasons). Eteocles became ambitious and seized the throne. The expedition of the Seven Against Thebes was to restore Polynices to his rightful place, but in the battle the brothers killed each other. Polynices personifies spring or fertility; Eteocles winter or barrenness. As brothers in conflict their story resembles that of Cain and Abel, Eber and Eremon.

POLYPHEMUS Literally, many-voiced. (1) In Greek mythology son of Poseidon and Thoosa. Jealous lover of Galatea. Personification of storm. One-eyed chief of the Cyclops; devourer of human flesh. He lived in a cave in which he imprisoned Odysseus and his companions. After he had eaten six of the company Odysseus made him drunk and blinded him. Odysseus and his remaining six companions escaped from the cave (realm of darkness) by clinging to the bellies of sheep (clouds); thus sun (Odysseus) and fertile lights or months outwitted darkness or winter. Poseidon never forgave Odysseus for this insult and sent storms to plague the sun hero. As a powerful giant outwitted by a small man Polyphemus resembles Goliath. He personifies brute force; his name is applied to a one-eyed animal or man. (2) One of the Argonauts. When Hylas was drawn into the water by a fountain nymph, Polyphemus heard his cry. With Heracles he searched for the youth but never found him. While they searched the Argo sailed without them. Heracles returned to Argos; Poly-phemus remained with the Mysians and became their king.

Probably a personification of the wind that accompanies sun.

POMEGRANATE Concord, fecundity, female principle, hope, immortality, love (pomegranate roots, if separated, twist together again), resurrection, union, virginity. Sometimes thought to be the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge. In heraldry emblem of Henry IV, Moorish king of Grenada, who used it with the motto, 'Sour, yet sweet,' to intimate that a good king should temper severity with mildness. In China the shih liu. Favorable influence, numerous progeny, prosperity. Carries the wish that high honors may be hereditary. The Christian church and congregation; gift which Christ carried down from heaven, hence God's blessing. Emblem of Virgin Mary. In Greek antiquity said to have sprung from the blood of Dionysus. Attribute of Hera. Fruit of the underworld eaten by Persephone, hence death, deity food, hope in immortality. Tabu at Eleusinian Mysteries. On the blue robes of Hebrew high priests typifies faithfulness. In Hinduism an appeal for God's blessing. Bringer of health. Korean food for the gods; sacrificed to dead ancestors. Because the fruit is beautiful at a distance but will not bear close inspection a synonym for persons of fine appearance but of indifferent character.

Pomegranate and bells. On the robes of Hebrew high priests symbolizes lightning and thunder.

Pomegranate blossom. June 10 birthday flower. Signifies foolishness, mature elegance. In China called tan tsao; emblem of June.

Pomegranate, peach, and Buddha's hand. Chinese Buddhist trinity wishing many sons, long life, and good luck.

Pomegranate, peach, and citron in Buddha's hand. In Chinese Buddhism wish of abundance of sons, years, and happiness.

POMONA Roman fruit tree goddess. Loved by Silvanus, woodland deity; Picus, tiller of the ground; and Vertumnus, god of changing seasons. Divinity typifying autumn, she was portrayed as a youthful maiden in a short tunic and cloak, bearing pruning hook and fruit.

POMONUS Early Italian creator deity. He bore the epithet Pupdike (decider). Name associated with Vesuna, probably as consort.

PON A primitive Tibetan religion. A form of nature worship. Demonolatry with human and animal sacrifices. Later fused with Mahayana Buddhism into the Nying-ma-pa (Red Cap) Sect or Tantric Yoga School. The White Pon was much like Buddhism, whereas Black Pon priests were feared as sorcerers.

PONDWEED In China the tsao, spirit of waters.

PONIARD Vendetta.

PONOS Greek abstract deity. Toil. Descendant of Eris.

PONTIFEX Literally, bridge or path maker. In ancient Rome originally guardian of the Sublucian bridge; later a member of the highest priestly college, which had supreme jurisdiction in religious matters, the regulation of the calendar, and superintendence of burial and marriage rites; hence one who directs the path to the gods, leads a procession.

Pontifex Maximus. High priest of the Vestal temple. If by misfortune or negligence the fire went out he stripped and scourged the erring virgin for permitting the procreative energy of the god to forsake mankind. He was personally responsible for the chastity of the Vestals. In Christianity Pontifex Maximus emerged as the pope.

PONTUS (PONTOS) Greek deity of the salt unproductive sea. Sea as pathway from one land to another. Offspring of Gaea, also mate by whom he was father of Nereus. Source of pontoon.

PONY Typifies diminutiveness. Word akin to Epona.

POOKA (PHOOKA) Irish goblin who appears as an ass, horse, or mule. Mischievous, he lies in wait for belated travelers in desolate sections, especially near marshes, and suddenly rises between the legs of pedestrians and carries them off, holding them until the first cock's crow, and then tosses them into the mud. Puck in Shakespeare.

POOKONGHOYA AND BALONGAHOYA Hopi warrior brothers; monster (drought) slayers.

POOL OF WATER Reservoir of cosmic knowledge; universal consciousness.

POOP Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Puppis and the Stern (of Argo).

POPE Spiritual guide. Symbolized by cope, globe surmounted by triple cross, papal tiara, pectoral cross and ring, white robes. Word akin to Baba, papa, pepi. See Pontifex Maximus.

Pope Joan. See under Joan.

POPLAR Courage, immortality. In heraldry aspiration; emblem of Lombardy. Armenian sacred tree, consulted in divination. Christian symbol of the holy rood. In Greek mythology Heracles was crowned with poplar leaves during his descent into Hades. Those next to his brow whitened to signify his triumph.

Black poplar. June 11 birthday flower symbolizing courage. A funeral tree. In ancient Greece used for purposes of divination; stands for loss of hope.

White poplar. Female principle, resurrection, time, waters. Also called aspen. In druidic tree alphabet tree of the fourth vowel, eadha (E), and in the druidic calendar tree of the autumn equinox, symbolizing old age. Emblem of shield-makers. Coffin builders in Ireland use the wood for the measuring rod, presumably as a reminder to the souls of the dead that death is not the end. In Greek mythology, when Phaethon died, his sisters, the Heliades, who wept for him were metamorphosed into white poplars by Zeus.

POPOCATEPETL Literally, smoking mountain. Aztec sacred mountain where Tlaloc was worshiped.

POPOCONALTEPETL Literally, mountain of foam. Mexican mountain on which the art of making pulque from the agave (maguey) was discovered. The wine was used in baptisms and other religious rites. See Drunkenness of children.

POPPY Consolation, enchantment, evanescent pleasure, laziness, night, oblivion, sleep, solace, witchcraft. Dream significance: amusement, pleasure. Word akin to papa, pope. In China the a-fu jung; symbolizes December. Christian symbol of extravagance, fertility, ignorance, indifference. In Greek mythology an attribute of Aphrodite, Demeter, Hera, Hypnus, Morpheus. Identified by some as the Sumerian tree of life instead of the date palm.

Golden poppy. Emblem of California.

Poppy head. Symbolizes sleep, Hypnus or Somnus. In Christian church architecture it appears at the termination of a bench or pew; signifies heavenly sleep.

Poppy leaves. Tell-tale leaves, because when crushed in the hand they make a crackling sound from which a lover learns the truth.

Red poppy. May 10 birthday flower symbolizing consolation.

Scarlet poppy. Fantastic extravagance.

Variegated poppy. Flirtation.

White poppy. May 8 birthday flower symbolizing forgetfulness, sleep.

POPUL VUH Mayan sacred scriptures.

PORCELAIN TOWER OF ANKING One of the seven wonders of the middle ages.

PORCH Figuratively, the beginning or early part. In primitive churches called narthex; place where penitents were admitted.

PORCUPINE Light rays. In some American Indian mythologies a form assumed by the sun; in others a form assumed by the moon. Buriat inventor of fire. When he told his secret to his wife a hawk overheard him and told the gods, who in turn passed the secret on to man. In China symbolizes Li. Among Turco-Tatars inventory of fire and teacher of agriculture.

PORPHYRION In Greek mythology a serpent-legged giant; an underworld force of upheaval. One of the Gigantes. He attempted to ravish Hera and was slain by Zeus.

PORPHYRY Literally, purple. Stone symbolizing royalty. Dream significance: death.

Porphyrogene. Born in the purple, said of a child of a royal sovereign. In Byzantium the empress's bedroom was lined with porphyry, and her children were born in the room. Figuratively, one born to wealth.

PORPOISE Literally, hog fish. Forecaster, inasmuch as by its frisking it portends storms. Sacred to earth and mother goddesses. In Greek mythology, because it is a dark sea beast with a white shoulder blade, it is emblematic of Pelops.

PORTABLE SPITTOON See under spittoon.

PORT-HOZJIN (ORT-HOZJIN, PORT-KUGUZA, PORT-KUVA, PORT-OZA) Russian-Lapland household soul or ruler. He lives in a fireplace and appears in the shape of a dog.

PORTIA Feminine name from the Latin, probably referring to the porcupine or famous Porcii clan who were breeders of pigs. In Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice an heiress who acts as a barrister; hence a female advocate. In Shakespeare's Julius Caesar the faithful and noble wife of Brutus. She kills herself by swallowing fire (probably poison) when she learns of her husband's defeat.

PORTUNUS (PORTUMNUS) Roman sea god, protector of harbors. Identical with Palaemon.

POSEIDON In Greek mythology son of Cronus and Rhea; husband of Amphitrite; brother of Zeus. Probably originally a horse deity; later sea-ruler, particularly of the Mediterranean. His disposition was variable; he provided fertilizing waters, protected navigators and commerce between nations, or sent earthquakes and storms. He pursued the earth goddess Demeter; when she fled from him in the shape of a mare he assumed that of a stallion and covered her, thus the sea covered the shore. In a quarrel with Athena over a city's name, Zeus decided it should be called after the deity who conferred the best gift on mankind. Poseidon produced the horse, symbol of war and wretchedness, and lost to Athena who produced the olive tree, symbol of peace and prosperity, and the city was called Athens. In the battle of Zeus against the giants he aided Zeus by slaying Polybotes. Another time he tried to dethrone Zeus, and for this sin was compelled to do the work of a bondman. With Apollo he built the indestructible walls of Troy; because Laomedon refused to pay him the covenanted recompense he sided with the Greeks in the war which led to Troy's downfall. His abodes were on Mount Olympus and at the bottom of the Aegean Sea. He governed the zodiacal house Pisces. He fell in love with Pelops and made the youth his cup-bearer. He inspired heroes with physical courage, but had no power over the mind. Sacrificed to him were black bulls, boars, galls of victims, rams. Also sacred were the ash tree, dolphin, horse, pine tree, water plants. His emblems were the anchor, chariot, shell, ship prow or tiller, two-handed vase. The Isthmian games were held in his honor. Usually portrayed as bearded, his head covered with heavy locks (sea weeds), nude or scantily clad, his muscular body seated on a rock or in a chariot drawn over water by sea horses. His name may have once denoted lordship. Among his surnames are: Asphalaios, builder; Enosichthon, earthshaker; Gaieochos, guardian of the world; Hippios, horse, the mare tamer; Phytalmois, plant giver; Pylaochos, gate keeper. By Romans called Neptune. Equates with Shui-Shen, Sid-on. Compare Nereus, Oceanus, Pontus.

POSHAIYANNE (POSHAIYANKI) Pueblo Indian culture hero. Son of a virgin. He grew up an outcast, became a magician, and gambled with the chief. The winner, he ruled the tribe and used his power beneficently, becoming a potent bringer of wealth and game. When he died he promised to return. A northern version of the Quetzalcoatl myth.

POST See pillar.

POSTVERTA Same as Carmenta.

POT Fertility, hospitality, nourishment. See Water pot, World pot.

Gone to pot. Ruined, in allusion to the pot into which refuse metal is thrown to be remelted or discarded as waste.

Keep the pot boiling. Keep in action with unabated energy, keep in business.

Pot boiler. That which is done merely for the sake of money; applied especially to artistic or literary work of small merit.

Pot companion. An ale knight, drinking companion.

Pot luck. Unceremonious hospitality; a meal composed of whatever food is on hand.

Pot valiant. Courageous in consequence of alcoholic stimulation.

Take pot shots at. Shoot at anything within easy range, make a shot which demands no skill; originally to shoot at game within range in order to fill the pot with food for a meal.

The pot calls the kettle black. One person chides another for a blunder of which he is equally guilty.

POTAMEIDES (POTAMIDES) Greek river nymphs. Each river was known by the name of its ruler or rulers, as the Ache-loides were nymphs of the Ache-lous.

POTATO Poverty, sustenance. In Peru called acumama, i.e. great snow mama or great life mama.

Potato blossom. June 13 birthday flower symbolizing benevolence.

Small potatoes. An inferior, insignificant, or mean person.

Small potatoes and few in the hills. Anything trifling.

Stolen potato. Charm which keeps off rheumatism.

POTENTILLA In the language of flowers: I claim at least your esteem.

POTHOS Greek abstract deity. Anxiety of love. Attendant on Aphrodite.

POTIPHAR In the Bible and Koran a high officer of Pharaoh, who purchased Joseph of the Midianites and made him master of his house. When his wife falsely accused his steward he imprisoned Joseph; then, as captain of the guard, he promoted Joseph in prison. A deity of darkness, who imprisoned the sun during the winter (or night). Parallels Proetus.

Potiphar's wife. One who because of jealousy or pique makes false accusations. When Joseph fled from her advances, leaving his coat behind him, she accused him falsely and Potiphar placed Joseph in prison. A gloaming or moon goddess. By Arab writers called Rahil or Zuleika. Parallels Anpu's wife, Antaea, Phaedra, Philonome.

POTLATCH A gift which must be returned. Among Pacific northwest Indians a winter festival celebrated by dancing and feasting, at which a chieftain or man of means, in a competitive show of wealth, distributes gifts and destroys property. Recipients of the gifts are bound to return them with interest, and frequently are ruined in doing so. Hence an Indian giver.

POTOMAC River symbolizing the United States Civil War.

All quiet on the Potomac. Nothing eventful happening; in allusion to a bulletin frequently issued during the Civil War.

POTRYMPUS (POTRIMPO) Ancient Baltic god of rivers and springs, hence of vegetation and good fortune. One of a triad with Perkunas and Patollus. His emblem is a pot containing a serpent, representing the cult of harmless ringed household snakes. In Prussian legend god sacred to one of the three divisions of the remove or sacred oak tree. A snake guarded his body or image in the tree.

POTS-HOZJIN Russian reindeer master.

Pots-hozjik. Reindeer mistress; identical with Luot-hozjik.

POTTAGE Peasant's food.

Sell one's birthright for a mess of pottage. Exchange something of permanent value for a temporary pleasure; in allusion to the transaction between Esau and Jacob.

POTTER Creator deity, sovereignty of God. In Buddhism, when at work, typifies consciousness. See Sipa Khorlo.

Clay in the hands of the potter. That which is easily influenced or molded.

Pottery broken. Precious things of the past. Emblem of saints Justa and Rufina.

POUCH See purse.

POURBOIRE From the French, meaning for drinking. A small gift of money, a tip.

POURUSHASPA Iranian primeval hero. Priest of the haoma sacrifice. Divine father of Zoroaster.

POU-T'AI Chinese god of contentment; a corpulent deity. Identical with Mi-li. Parallels Japanese Hotei and Sanscrit Maitreya.

POVERTY Dream significance: profitable change. Symbolized by begging bowl, brown, frayed gown, mouse, rope girdle. Personified by an angel clad in a frayed brown gown with a rope girdle, by a beggar, monk, Poor Clare sister. In an Italian icon shown as a poorly dressed woman, her right hand fastened to a stone, on her left hand expanded wings as if she would fly.

POWAMU Hopi Indian bean-planting dance. Fertility rite.

POWELL Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning of the spirit.

POWER Symbolized by a double-bladed battle-ax, elephant, mace, steam, weapons. Personified by a giant, Heracles, a warrior in armor.

Regal power. Typified by a scepter; in Japan by a peony.

PRADHANA In Hinduism primary matter out of which the material world is evolved.

PRADYUMNA Hindu god of love; a resurrected deity. Son of Krishna. When six days old he was stolen by the demon Sambara, who foresaw his death was to be caused by the child. Sambara cast him into the water where he was swallowed by a fish, which was caught and given to Sambara's queen Mayadevi. Finding the boy inside, she raised him, and when he reached manhood she confessed she was not his mother and manifested her love for him. He thereupon killed Sambara and carried Mayadevi off to Dvaraka, his father's capital. By her he was the father of Aniruddha. Compare Attis, Jonah, Perseus.

PRAEPATES Favorable augurs in ancient Rome.

PRAIRIE STATE Nickname of Illinois.

PRAISE In an Italian icon personified by a woman in white wearing a jasper at her breast and a crown of roses. She blows a trumpet out of which comes splendor (rays) and she points to the three Graces.

PRAJAPATI Literally, lord of offspring. In Hinduism originally a title applied to several gods, among them Brahma, Hiranyagarbha, Indra, Rishis, Savitri, Soma, Varuna, etc. Later the name of the cosmic principle or lord of light, born of the golden egg produced by the waters by means of tapas (heat). After a year he uttered three sounds, "Bhuh," which became earth; "Bhuvah," which became atmosphere; "Svar," which became sky. He produced creatures who were made divinities by reaching the sky; when he created man he created death. He took the form of a deer to pursue his daughter Rohini, who had the form of an antelope. To punish him Rudra pierced his thigh and Prajapati fled to the sky where he became the constellation Mrga (wild animal). See Mutilation. In the form of a fish who saved Manu from the deluge he was called Matsya; in the form of a tortoise called Kasyapa or Kurma he held the world on his back. He was an androgynous deity; when he entered the material (female) form he was called Prakriti. See Androgynous deities.

PRAJNA In Buddhism knowledge. See Nairatma.

Prajnaparamita. (1) Wisdom that has gone to the other shore; chief sutra of the Mahayana school. (2) A female Bodhisattva. The superior wisdom, sakti of Vajradhara. Her color is white or yellow; her emblems are the mala, pustaka, utpala; her mudra is dharmacakra. In Tibet called Ses-rab-kyi-pha-rol-ta-phyin-pa.

PRAKASA Buddhist principle of light; symbolized by a triangle.

PRAKRITI (PRAKRITI) Hindu great womb or supreme goddess. Primitive matter, material force, opposed to Purusa, spirit or creative force. Equivalent of Maya or Sakti as the inherent power of manifestation. See Prajapati.

PRAMANTHA Hindu fire god. Analogue of the Greek Prometheus.

PRANA Hindu personification of breath; individual life-principle in contrast to the jiva, the personal soul.

PRASE Gem symbolizing self-love.

PRAVUIL (VRETIL) In Hebrew lore wise angel who writes down the Lord's works.

PRAXIDICE (PRAXIDIKE) In primitive Greek religion an exactress of vengeance. Her image was a head (mask) only, and heads were sacrificed to her. In later myths, a triple form called the Praxidikae was assigned to her. The three goddesses were monstrous and were slain by heroes. They were mistresses of wild things and resembled the Gorgons.

PRAYER Symbolized by hands with palms together, incense, kneeling figure, litae. In an Italian icon personified by an old woman in a white mantle looking heavenward. She kneels and holds a fuming censer and a flaming heart. A cock is beside her.

Prayer sticks. Zuni deity

Prayer wheel. (1) A cylinder which holds the formula 'om mani padmé hum.' Employed by Tibetan Buddhists as an aid to or a substitute for prayer. Each revolution represents one repetition of the prayer. Its use is founded on a misinterpretation of Buddha's instructions that his followers should 'turn the wheel of the law,' i.e. incessantly preach Buddhism. (2) In medieval times a wheel attached to a chapel's ceiling. Rotated like a wheel of fortune to divine answers to prayers.

Praying mantis. Courage.

PRECEDENCE In an Italian icon personified by a majestic woman wearing a wren as a crown. She opposes an eagle with her hand to prevent him from attacking the wren.

PRECIOUS METALS AND STONES

Prophylactics and talismans against disease and malign influences. Rain charms. Symbolic of knowledge and spiritual truth. In various parts of the world placed in the mouth of the dead to pay for transportation into the other world or to preserve the body from decay and assure immortality. See under Birth-stones, Gems, individual metals and stones, Manji.

PRECIPICE Danger.

PRESCOTT Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning from the priest's cottage.

PRESENT Personified by a youth on a winged wheel holding the distaff of the Fates. Before him is a winged genius with a torch.

PRESERVATION In an Italian icon personified by a woman in a cloth of gold. She wears an olive wreath; in one hand she carries a millet sheaf, in the other a gold circle.

PRESTER JOHN Legendary Christian king and priest who supposedly ruled over an immense empire somewhere in Asia in the 12th century. He was called Prester because he had converted the natives.

PRETA Literally, hungry ghost. Hindu demon, self-doomed by an error in a former life to the circle of perpetual hunger. Bringer of pestilence. Identical with Gaki, Yaksa.

Pretaloka. Buddhist region of tortured spirits. One of the six conditions or paths of existence. In Tibet called Yi-dvag.

PRETORIAN GUARD Bodyguard or household troops of Roman emperors. Ultimately they obtained the power of deciding the succession to the throne.

PRIAM (PRIAMOS) In Greek legend last king of Troy. Husband of Hecuba; father of fifty children, among whom were Cassandra, Hector, Helenus, Paris, Polydorus. His name originally was Podarces (swift foot). When Heracles captured his father Laomedon, Hesione was permitted to ransom one of the prisoners. She chose her brother Podarces, who thereafter bore the name Priam (ransomed one). When Hector in the Trojan war was killed Priam begged Achilles to ransom the body; thus the lord of darkness was humbled before the morning sun. In one legend, when Troy fell, Priam was killed by Neoptolemus (light); in another he was killed by Pyrrhus (fire).

PRIAMOND In Spenser's Faerie Queene a personification of courage and daring.

PRIAPUS (PRIAPOS) Greek personification of the male generative power. Protector of bee keepers, farmers, fishermen, goat and sheep breeders, vine growers. His father is given variously as Adonis, Dionysus, Hermes, or Pan; his mother was Aphrodite or the Naiad Chione. He was ugly at birth, and Aphrodite was so horrified she left him exposed on a mountain to perish. He was raised by shepherds who found him. Asses and geese were sacrificed to him; he received first fruits with libations of honey and milk. His emblems were the cornucopia, phallus, pruning knife. Mismatched, his statue was used as a scarecrow as well as for worship. Sometimes portrayed as a rude herm painted red.

PRIDE Typified by cedar, cock, turkey, peacock. In medieval art personified by a rider splendidly equipped encountering a hurricane. Fire, rain, and wind are belched from the mouths of three dragons which drive the rider toward Hell.

Pride of China. Bloom symbolizing dissension.

PRIEST Typifies divination, expiation for sin, mediation between divinities and men, religious rites and sacrifices. Among primitive societies one who struggles with spirits that are demanding and jealous. His calling is recognized by convulsions, dreams, fits, etc. Among the Zuni Indians the 'one who knows how' in gambling, healing, etc.

Priestly robes. Sacred clothing stemmed from the belief that certain articles contained magical influences. In primordial societies deities were clad in the skins of animals from which they derived their powers; their priests were similarly clad to receive inspiration from their coverings. See Ephod.

Priest of Nemi. See King of the Wood.

PRIMROSE May 7 birthday flower symbolizing early youth, inconstancy, innocence, lover's doubts, sadness. In the language of flowers: Believe me. A key which supposedly has the power of opening treasure caves. In heraldry a four-lobed ornament used as a bearing, quarter-foil. Flower governing Aquarius. In England typifies wantonness. In Ireland and Wales a fairy flower. In Japan called tsukimiso (grass that looks at the moon), hence friend of the moon.

Primrose path. Road of pleasure without regard to virtue.

Red primrose. October 22 birthday flower symbolizing neglected merit.

PRIMUM MOBILE From the Latin, meaning the first moving thing. In Ptolemaic astronomy the ninth (later tenth) or outermost sphere. It contained the fixed stars and revolved diurnally, giving motion to the inner spheres with the planets. It was the boundary of creation, above it was the empyrean or deity's throne. Figuratively, any main-spring of action.

PRINCE From the Latin, meaning chief, leader. Title formerly applied to a sovereign; now usually limited to the sons of a sovereign and their sons. Signifies one who is lordly, magnificent. Used figuratively to indicate one of the highest rank, as a prince of philosophers. In feminine form, princess.

Prince Charming. In folk literature the sun as lover. He awakens the sleeping princess and the whole world to love and light.

Princedons. Angels who are dispensers of the fates of nations.

Prince Kuramochi. In Japanese legend a counterfeiter.

Prince of darkness. Satan. Also called Prince of the power of the air; Prince of this world.

Prince of light. Christ. Also called Prince of peace.

Prince's feather. In the language of flowers: I blush for you.

Princess Woodencloak. A name variant of Cinderella; wood being symbolic of healing.

Princess Volupine. A T.S. Eliot character who suggests the foxy and sensual, a decayed aristocrat turned adventuress.

PRIN-LAS-GYI-RGYLA-PO (TIN-LE-GYI-GYAL-PO) In Tibetan Buddhism one of the Pancamaharaja, the five great astrologers. King of religious services, i.e. state oracle. Usually shown with three faces and six arms riding a lion.

PRINTING Symbolized by book, ink ball, ink roller, papyrus, printing press. In an Italian icon personified by a woman in a checkered dress with letters of the alphabet on it. She holds a trumpet around which is a scroll inscribed, "Ubique," and a houseleek with the word "Semper" on it. A printing press is near her.

Printer's devil. A printer's errand boy, who becomes smeared with printer's ink. In allusion to the medieval notion that Satan is black.

PRIPEGALA Slavic fertility god; identified with Priapus.

PRISCIAN Sixth century Latin Grammarian; hence any typical grammarian. In the Inferno, Dante places him in the seventh circle as one who was violent against nature.

Break Priscian's head. Break grammatical rules.

Scratch Priscian. Make a slip in grammar.

PRISCILLA (PRIS) (1) Feminine name from the Greek corresponding to the Roman Priscus, probably meaning former; hence somewhat ancient or old fashioned. (2) A Puritan; from the character in Longfellow's Courtship of Miles Standish. (3) A female disciple; wife of Aquila, converted by Paul.

PRISON Confinement, crime. Dream significance: fatigue; (coming out) recovery from illness; (entering) oppression.

PRITHIVI See Prthivi.

PRIVET Flower symbolizing prohibition.

PROCNE (PROKNE) In Greek mythology daughter of the Athenian king Pandion and Zeuxippe; wife of Tereus. When her husband cut out her tongue and raped her sister Philomela, she wove her story into a tapestry, which she sent to Philomela. Together the sisters killed Procne's son Itys and served him to his father. Upon discovering what he had eaten Tereus pursued the sisters, and for their sins the gods turned them all into birds: Procne into a swallow, Philomela into a nightingale, Tereus into a hoopoe. Procne and Philomela are aspects of dew or mist, who are abused by Tereus, the sun. Compare Aedon, Medea.

PROCRIS (PROKRIS) In Greek mythology daughter of Erechtheus and Praxithea or Herse. Personification of dewdrop. In accordance with an oracle, her father when about to undertake an expedition against Eleusis sacrificed her to assure victory. Compare Iphigenia. In another legend she appears as the wife of Cephalus, a hunter, to whom she gave a gift of a spear. Overhearing him call upon a breeze to cool him and thinking it was the name of a loved one, she spied on him. Cephalus, seeing a movement in the bushes, threw his spear at what he believed to be a wild beast, and accidentally killed his wife. In both legends the dew is destroyed by the sun.

PROCRUSTES (PROKROUSTES) Literally, the stretcher. In Greek mythology a robber giant who placed his captives on an iron bed. He cut off the limbs of those who were longer than the bed and stretched the limbs of those who were shorter until they fitted. He was finally killed by Theseus in the same manner he killed his victims. He was a god of death, fitting all who came his way to the grave. Figuratively, one who forces others into conformity. Also called Damastes (subduer).

PRODIGALITY In an Italian icon personified by a blindfolded smiling woman, who scatters gold coins from a cornucopia.

PROETUS (POETOS, PROITOS) In Greek mythology king of Tiryns. Probably a deity of darkness. Brother of Acrisius, with whom he was in conflict. His wife Antaea bore him three daughters, who became mad due to the ecstasy of Dionysiac rites. See Minyas. When Antaea falsely accused Bellerophon, Proetus made him the bearer of a death letter. Analogue of Potiphar.

PROFESSOR CHANNING-CHEETAH A supercilious professor in the poetry of T.S. Eliot. He is secure in his feeling of superiority, a humbug, insensitive, pretentious.

PROFUNDITY Name of one of the gnostic Aeons.

PROMENADE Dream significance: joy, security, tranquillity.

PROMETHEUS Literally, forethought. Greek Titan. Son of Iapetus and Clymene, Gaea, or Themis; brother of Atlas and Epimetheus. His wife is given as Asia, Celaeno, Hesione, or Pyrrha, all epithets of the earth goddess. He helped Zeus overthrow Cronus, manifesting his sympathy for law and order. Athene breathed a soul into the man Prometheus fashioned out of clay, thus he was the father of the human race, which he taught the alphabet, astronomy, mathematics, the cure of diseases, and the art of divination. When Zeus denied mankind the use of fire Prometheus stole it from the sky and conveyed it to earth in a hollow reed (lightning). In revenge Zeus commanded Hephaestus to mold Pandora to bring misery to mankind, and he chained Prometheus to a rock on Mount Caucasus. Possessing prophetic power Prometheus knew the source from which Zeus eventually was to be overthrown. To obtain this knowledge Zeus offered to release him. Rather than perpetuate a reign he regarded as unjust he refused the offer, whereupon Zeus sent a vulture each day to gnaw away Prometheus's liver, which grew back every night. Thirteen generations passed before he came to an agreement with Zeus, who sent Hercules (sun) to kill the vulture (storm). The devouring and regrowth of his liver refers to the effects of time, the consumption and reproduction perpetually going on in nature. Prometheus typifies intellect and nobility, a victim of ingratitude. His life exemplifies: championship of man by an immortal and punishment of the champion for breaking the traditions of his class; displeasure of a ruler incurred by a subject; man free, yet subject to a supreme ruler; suffering on the part of one who voluntarily sacrifices himself for others; final adjustment which resolves in compromise, harmony, justice, mercy, and righteousness. Prometheus equates with Parmantha; as a chained fire deity resembles Loki.

Promethean fire. The vital principle; so called from the divine flame which Prometheus gave to man to save him from annihilation. Figuratively, inspiration.

Prometheans. The earliest safety matches. Made in 1805.

Promethean unguent. Made from a herb upon which blood of Prometheus had fallen, it rendered the body invulnerable. Medea gave some to Jason to protect him against fire and weapons.

PRONOA Greek abstract deity. Foreknowledge.

PROPHECY FULFILMENT A common mythological theme which suggests the normal cycle of a phenomenon. Exemplified in the Acrisius-Perseus and Laius-Oedipus stories.

Prophet's mantle. Privilege, succession to an important office; in allusion to the mantle cast on Elisha by Elijah.

PRORSA An epithet of Carmenta as goddess of childbirth.

PROSERPINA (PROSERPINE)

In Roman mythology a daughter of Jupiter and Ceres; kidnaped by Pluto to be his wife and queen of the lower world, but allowed to return to the upper world each spring. A personification of spring or of seasonal changes. In later legend goddess of sleep or death. Counterpart of the Greek Persephone.

PROSPER Masculine name from the Latin, meaning fortunate.

PROSPERITY Symbolized by agate, bees, cedar, cornucopia, green, olive, turquoise. In Japan by charcoal, ferns. Personified in an Italian icon by a richly dressed woman holding a cornucopia filled with coins and an oak branch with acorns; she also holds violets.

PROSPERO In Shakespeare's Tempest the banished duke of Milan. Father of Miranda, the most beautiful girl in the world. He is shipwrecked on a magic island where he works enchantments. After sixteen years of exile he raises a storm to shipwreck his brother Antonio, who usurped his throne. On the island with Prospero and Miranda were Sycorax and her son Caliban, the ugliest man in the world. Sycorax imprisons Ariel; Caliban attempts to rape Miranda. The dramatis personae in the Tempest duplicates that of an old myth, which has been lost in which Prospero was lord of the world under the sea; Miranda the dawn or spring maid; Sycorax the earth mother; Caliban storm demon, Ariel the miraculous child. Prospero equates with Tegid Voel, Sycorax with Cerridwen, Miranda with Ceirwy, Caliban with Avagddu, Ariel with Gwion Bach.

PROSTITUTION A temple ritual which prevailed especially in early religions of Western Asia and Eastern Europe. Sacred prostitution was not regarded as an orgy of lust but was performed by daughters of noble families in the service of the great earth mother, whose name varied from place to place.

The rite was one of sympathetic magic to provide plentiful crops and herds as well as children. At Byblus women shaved their hair in annual mourning for Adonis; those who refused to sacrifice their beauty gave themselves up to strangers, and the money so earned was donated to the goddess. Children born as a result of these unions were regarded as sacred, virgin born, and brought up by the temple. Compare Love orgies, Maenad.

PROTAGONIST Chief person in a drama or novel; by extension the leader in any contest, enterprise, or given cause.

PROTESILAUS (PROTESILAOS) In Greek mythology husband of Laodamia. When the Greek troops arrived at the coast of Troy all hesitated setting foot on shore as it had been predicted the first to do so would die. Protesilaus leaped on land and was felled by Hector. Because of his great heroism he was permitted to return from Hades and visit his wife for a few hours. When the time came for them to part she committed suicide. He typifies a phase of light, probably gloaming. As a hero equates with Menoeceus.

PROTEUS (PROETEUS) In Greek mythology son of Poseidon, whose flocks he tended. King of the island of Pharos. Nicknamed Old Man of the Sea, he was fickle and yielded only to force. He possessed the gift of prophecy, and to escape foretelling the future, he assumed various terrifying forms, but, if his questioner maintained his hold through the transformations, Proteus at last told what he knew. Thus one who easily changes his appearance or principles. Personification of the shifting winds and moods of the sea. His name, related to Pallas in the sense of monstrous, is an earlier spelling of the Greek word for early man. As a shape changer equates with Taliesin.

Protean. Changeable, given to aliases, variable; also a sophisticated and dissimulating mind. An actor who plays different parts.

PROTOGENIA (PROTOGENEIA) Greek dawn goddess; mistress of Zeus; ancestress of Endymion.

PROTOGONOS In Greek mythology an egg-born, wind-born bisexual cosmic potency. Archetypal man in Orphic worship; Eros considered as the creator of the universe. See Androgynous deities.

PROVIDENCE Symbolized by angel, ant, hand of God emerging from clouds, hen, inscribed star, squirrel. In medieval art personified by a woman in a tunic and cloak; she wears a coronal of laurel and carries a scepter and cornucopia.

PROWESS IN A CHILD In mythology indicates a personification of sea, sun, wind, or other phenomenon. The hero grows miraculously and accomplished marvelous feats while still an infant. Heracles and Vali were heroes of this type.

PRSNĪ In Hindu mythology mother of Maruts by Rudra. Perhaps a storm cloud.

PRTHĪVĪ (PRĪTHĪVĪ) Hindu mother goddess. The broad flat earth. Wife of Dyaus (sky). Shown as a variegated cow. The name transliterated into Greek becomes Plateia (plateau). Equates with Gaea. See Dyavaprthivi.

PRTHU (PRITHU) Hindu hero born when saints rubbed the right arm of Vena, who they had slain for his wickedness. When told that Prthivi had suspended fertility Prthu went forth to punish her. At his approach she took the form of a cow and fled, but he pursued her and, unable to escape, she promised that a harvest never again should fail. Probably a personification of spring or fertility.

PRUDENCE (PRUE) (1) Feminine name from the noun. (2) Symbolized by an ant, crane, serpent, service tree, the perpendicular. In India by an elephant with a howdah. Personified by Apollo with four eyes and four hands (control of the four directions), Janus, Metis. In an Italian icon by a two-faced woman in a gilt helmet looking in a mirror. She holds an arrow around which a remora fish twists. A stag is by her.

PRUFROCK, J. ALFRED Protagonist of a poem by T.S. Eliot. Typifies spiritual stagnation. Inhibited, timid, unromantic, torn by self-pity and self-disgust, terrified of social and sexual activity, he seeks a haven where his inner universe will not be disturbed by tormenting problems, and associates with those who like himself are mean.

PRUNING KNIFE (OR HOOK) That which clears away waste, thus allowing that which is good to fructify.

PRUNUS BLOSSOM Generally understood to be the plum blossom, which see.

PRYDERI (PHYDERI) Literally, anxiety. In Cymric mythology son of king Pwyll and Rhiannon, a mare goddess. He was born on May eve, and the same night Teyrnon's foal was born. A black hand kidnaped the foal and put Pryderi in his place. He was raised by the herdsman until his identity was discovered; then he inherited Dyfed, the realm of his father. Kicva became his queen. He accompanied Bran to Ireland to war against Matholwych, and was one of the seven champions to escape. When Manawyddan, Bran's brother, complained the war had left him landless, Pryderi gave him land in Dyfed and also gave him Rhiannon as wife. Lack of food in Dyfed forced Pryderi, Manawydden, and their wives to seek employment as saddlers, shield-makers, and shoe-makers successively, as at each occupation they were expelled by regular craftsmen. An incident which hints at the course of the seasons. One day Pryderi and Rhiannon disappeared. The starving Manawyddan and Kicva attempted to sow a field, but an army of mice ate the grain. He caught a mouse and was about to hang it when Llewyl, a light deity and mortal enemy of Pryderi, appeared and bargained to give up Rhiannon and her son if the mouse, one of Llewyl's messengers (rays), were released. As joint rulers of Dyfed, Pryderi and Manawyddan were warders of the magic caldron of inspiration (earth's wealth) from which Gwydion, another light deity, stole sacred swine (fertility) for Math. Afterwards the caldron became famous as the Holy Grail. Pryderi was originally a fertility lord, later ruler of the dead. He also was called Guri (Gwri), the golden-haired, suggesting in certain seasons he was a sun or grain hero. As a divine child taken from his mother he resembles Moses, Romulus, Zeus.

PRYDWN (PRIDWEN, PRY-TWENN) In Brythonic mythology ship in which Arthur, fertility king, went a long distance in the twinkling of an eye, and in which he made the trip to Caer Sidi for the spoils of Annwfn, the magic caldron of Pwyll, and also to release Gweir, who was imprisoned there. A cloud. According to Geoffrey of Monmouth, Arthur's shield.

PRYTANEUM In Greek antiquity the common hall in which government members had their meals at the expense of the state. Emigrants customarily took with them some of the sacred fire from the Hestia (public hearth) of the Prytaneum.

PSAMATHE In Greek mythology by Apollo the mother of Linus. A river nymph.

PSAPHON'S BIRDS In Roman legend, to attract attention, Psaphon raised a multitude of birds, taught them to pronounce his name, and let them loose. Typify flattery, vanity.

PSCHENT Double crown of ancient Egypt. Worn to commemorate the union of the north and south kingdoms by Menes. It was a combination of the white pointed miter of lower Egypt and the red square crown of upper Egypt.

PSI Twenty-third letter of the Greek alphabet, with a numerical value of 700. Equivalent to English ps.

PSILAS A title of Bacchus. From the Greek, meaning bare.

PSYCHE Literally, breath, hence life. Greek personification of the human soul. Portrayed as a butterfly or as a tiny winged being. In later legend a beautiful mortal, spouse of Eros. He warned her not to gaze upon him. Overcome by curiosity she held a lamp over his sleeping form. When a drop of oil fell on his shoulder he awakened and flew away. In her search for him she became a slave of the jealous Aphrodite and descended into the underworld. Eros relented, and they were reunited. Thus the sun fled from dawn, and after her descent into nether regions (suffered death for a day) he returned to her, and she was made immortal. In Christian interpretation the allegory signifies the soul, before it can be united to its original divine essence, must be purified by suffering.

Psyche's task. Grain sorting; in allusion to a task imposed upon Psyche in the underworld.

PSYCHOPOMPUS Title of Hermes as conductor of souls of the dead.

PSYLLI (PSYLLE) An African race, which supposedly has the power to cure by a touch persons suffering from snake-bite. Snake charmers. See Ophiogenes.

PT (PTH) (1) English transliteration of an Egyptian ideogram placed above the heads of deities or sovereigns to signify sky or heaven, suggesting their place of abode or divine character. (2) Word root meaning to open.

PTAH (PTHAH) Egyptian creator. He emerged from an egg laid by the chaos goose or which came from the mouth of Amen-Kneph. Mate of Sekhet; father of Nefer-tem. Chief deity at Memphis. Father of the beginning; architect of the universe; cleaver of the way; healer; teacher. In one tradition he shaped everything from mud; in another he called into existence each thing he willed to create, thus the embodiment of mind from which all emerges. He was chief of seven (or nine) earth spirits called Khnumu (molders). Patron of artisans. Described as a lame dwarf resembling a European elf. Later merged with Tanen, given a giant form and adored as a mountain and wind deity who supported the sky with his feet on earth, thus an axis deity resembling Atlas. He also was called Ptah-Apis, the sacred bull; Ptah-Osiris, ruler of the destiny of souls; Ptah-Seker, a hawk or sky god. Usually shown in human form as a mummy holding the triple-barred scepter. His images closely resembled the pataikoi, small figures carried by Phoenician sailors, and were used as talismans. His emblems were the ankh, ax, green color, hammer, staff, tat, uraeus. Parallels Hari, Hephaestus, Pan Ku, Vulcan.

Ptah and his seven sons. The creator and his assistants, the sun, moon, and five planets. Identified with the Cabiri.

PTOLOMEA Third ring, ninth circle, Dante's Inferno. From Ptolemy, whose treacherous act of murder is related in the Book of Maccabees. The ring of traitors. Men sometimes are brought into it while still alive, a demon being left in the body on earth, as in the case of Friar Alberic.

PUBERTY RITES Among primordial peoples period at which boys are initiated into tribal mysteries. The initiated form a kind of medicine (magic) society. Magic dances are performed to foster the creative life of nature. In most societies the first signs of puberty in a girl are regarded as unclean, the result of a demon which has wounded her. Her first menstruation is marked by severe tabus. Among American Indians, during the puberty fast, a male learns which animal is to be his guardian or totem from the Great Spirit who appears in a dream. See Circumcision, Coming-out-party, Initiation, Menses.

PUCK In English folk tales a mischievous goblin; pixie leader; originally an evil sprite, but transformed by Shakespeare into a merry-making wanderer of the night. Also called Robin Goodfellow. By the Irish called Pooka, by the Welsh pwcca.

PUERARIA Japanese symbol of autumn.

P^U HSIEN Chinese Buddhist patron saint. Identical with the Sanscrit Samantabhadra, the all gracious.

PUKWUDJIES Fairies of North American Indians.

PUL (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning strong. Used for elephant and for king. (2) An Assyrian king who invaded Israel. With a bribe he was induced to retire.

PUL CHINAVAD (CHINAVAR) Magian bridge no broader than a thread over which on the last day all mankind must pass. On the middle of it angels appointed by God will ask of each one a strict account of his life and weigh the good and evil. The good will be permitted to pass on to a paradise, the wicked will fall into the hell beneath the bridge. Compare Al Sirat.

PULEH In Volga tradition the son and messenger of Kaba. Traveling man, writer of fate. Identical with Pairekse. Resembles Nabu, Thoth.

PULQUE Mexican fermented drink derived from the maguey plant. Indians once believed it contained magical properties and used it to celebrate baptisms, harvests and other sacred rites. A celestial drink which inspired men to prophecy and deeds of valor, and which provided longevity.

PUMA Among the Incas animal sacred to the creator.

PUMICE Italian symbol of penury.

PUMPERNICKLE Peasant's bread. Nickname applied to petty German nobles. The word originally meant blockhead, dolt, and resolves into pumper (sound of a fall) + nickle (Nicolaus). A story, which is incorrect, relates that a Napoleonic soldier gave the name to this coarse bread when he refused it as only "bon pour Nickel" (good enough for the dog Nickel).

PUMPKIN Autumn, harvest. Charm to avert evil influences. In the Cinderella story transformed into a crystal coach. The people of Burma and Indo-China supposedly sprang from a pumpkin or gourd. In the United States emblem of Hallowe'en and Thanksgiving Day. Used figuratively for someone or something of great excellence or desirability; also applied to a stupid self-important person.

PUNCH AND JUDY Mock hero and heroine; in allusion to the chief characters in a miniature puppet show performed in the streets in England. Punch usually is represented as a hunchback with an enormous hooked nose; Judy is his wife, hence any woman who provokes ridicule. They are of Italian origin; Punch is a contraction of Punchinello; Judy is derived from Judith. In the original play Punch triumphs over Disease in the disguise of a doctor, Ennui in the shape of a dog, the Devil by outwitting him, and Death by beating him until he dies.

Pleased as Punch. Cheerful, delighted; in allusion to the marionette, who constantly sings and laughs at his own pranks. His self-satisfaction is contagious.

Suffolk punch. A short fat man. A name originally applied to a breed of pigs.

PUNCHINELLO Buffoon in Italian burlesque or marionette shows; original of the English Punch. A short thick fellow, hence any grotesque person. The name is a diminutive of pulcino (young chicken). In popular tradition it is said to be derived from Puccio d'Aniello, an ugly low comedian. Compare Pierrot.

PUNCHKIN Hindu giant who had no heat in his body. Frost demon.

PUNDIT Buddhist monk.

PUNDJEL (PUNDJIL) Australian creator god who shaped humans out of bark filled with clay and danced life into them. His form was that of an eagle-hawk.

PUNEGUSSE Siberian man-eating giant. Itje, whose parents had been devoured by the monster, kept slaying him, but he was reborn each time he was killed until Itje burnt the carcass. From the ashes mosquitoes were born. A frost myth, in which ice finally is overcome by sun.

Compare Karaty-Khan.

PUNIC FAITH Perfidy, treachery, violation of trust. Opposite of Attic faith. Applied by the Romans to the Carthaginians, who were of Punic descent. An instance of the "pot calling the kettle black," as the Romans were equally perfidious.

PUNISHMENT Symbolized by chains, demons, fire, scourge, vulture.

PUNT (1) Supplied by Finno-Ugrians as a coffin that the dead might have the means by which to procure an existence (fishing) in the next world. Resolves into op-un-te, i.e. eye of the brilliant one. Word akin to point, pontiff, pontoon. (2) Semi-divine land. Persistent tradition associates immigrants from the East who settled in ancient Egypt as coming from Punt, a land connected with ancient deities. In one legend the original home of the Ethiopians, whose chief was Memnon; in another legend descendants of Ham dwelt in Punt.

PUPPIS Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Poop or Stern (of Argo).

PUPPY In the spring red puppies were sacrificed by the Romans to avert the baleful influence of the Dog-star on their grain. In modern times stands for a conceited or empty-headed youth, a silly fop.

PUPU Crested bird which spends its time in trees, rarely coming to the ground. Symbol of the primal cause or creative brain. Also called hoopoe or hoopoo. See Khu.

PURANAS Literally, old tales. The ancient tales serving as Hindu scriptures. They contain the history and legends of the deities.

PURANDHI Hindu goddess of plenty. Associated with Bhaga. By Iranians called Parendi.

PUR DIOS (PYR DIOS) Literally, fire of Dios (Zeus). Lightning.

PURE AIR In an Italian icon personified by a beautiful and serene woman dressed in gold. She holds a white dove and the motto, "Spirat Levis Aura Favoni." Zephyrus in the clouds blows down on her.

PURE LAND OF THE WEST Heaven in Chinese Buddhism; state of bliss in after-life.

PURGATORY (1) Intermediary state or place where souls are made fit for paradise or heaven by expiatory suffering; hence any place of banishment or condemnation, any condition of misery. The Christian doctrine of Purgatory was held in a modified form by early Jews, who believed that for twelve months after death the soul was permitted to visit its body and return to places or persons it loved. This intermediate state was called 'bosom of Abraham,' 'garden of Eden,' 'upper Gehenna,' etc. (2) Part Two of Dante's Divina Commedia. Situated at the antipodes of Jerusalem, i.e. under side of the earth. The time of morning on earth is that of evening on Purgatory. Here people strive for purification to regain free will.

Purgatory hammer. A stone weapon found in prehistoric Irish graves. Formerly believed to be the hammer with which the soul knocked at the gate of Purgatory.

Saint Patrick's Purgatory. A cave on an island in Lough Derg, in Donegal County, Ireland. Fabled entrance to the other world. Here Saint Patrick is said to have shown purgatorial suffering to those to whom he preached. In later times a place of pilgrimage.

PURGINE An Altaic thunder god. Parallels Perkunas.

PURIFICATION Symbolized by emetics, fire, flame, hyssop, number eight, water. Sacrifices of burnt-offerings of cattle, doves, sheep, other sacred animals or articles. Anciently strangers were purified by shaman for the purpose of exorcising harmful influences. A man returning from a journey underwent a bath, had his head shaved, or was otherwise cleansed.

Hunters and fishermen in some societies observed abstinence or submitted to various purification rites to appease the souls of creatures killed. Taboos were laid on manslaughter in dread of angry ghosts; they underwent certain ceremonies, were isolated, or placed in bondage. Even deities were not exempt; when Apollo murdered the Cyclops he was forced to make expiation by serving a mortal as a slave for a year. The after-birth purification of women appears to be related symbolically to the covering of fields with verdure after inundation.

PURIM Jewish festival instituted to commemorate the deliverance of the Jews from destruction in Persia. Observed annually about March 1. Name signifying lot alludes to the lot which was cast in the presence of the Persian Haman every day from the first of the month to the twelfth to discover which was auspicious for the destruction. Esther, wife of King Ahasuerus, instructed in wisdom and tact by Mordecai, exposed Haman's superstitions, and he fell in disgrace.

PURIPAIS A surname of Dionysus meaning son of fire.

PURITANS Symbolized by Pilgrim Fathers, Thanksgiving Day, turkeys.

PURITY Symbolized by alabaster, crystal, diamond, dove, hart, hind, lily, maiden with unicorn, pearl, snow, swan, white rose. In the East by chrysanthemum, flames, lotus blossom, water lily. In an Italian icon personified by a woman in white holding a tulip and scattering corn to a white cock. A sun is on her breast.

PURPLE Authority, dignity, empire, glory, honor, intelligence, knowledge, law, loyalty, martyrdom, mourning, patience, perseverance, poise, politeness, royalty, seclusion, self-sacrifice, somberness, splendor, tragedy, trust, wisdom. Debased meanings: arrogance, gloom, ostentation, overweening pride, temporal power, vanity. In astrology dedicated to Jupiter. In Freemasonry one of the four symbolic colors; as a combination of red and blue the union of love and truth. In heraldry called purple and symbolic of justice and sovereign majesty. Represented by lines from the chief sinister to the dexter base of shield. Used in the robe and vestment of ancient mysteries because of its supposed power of vibration, which helped unfold man's higher nature. In white magic used only for altruistic purposes; in black magic used in attempts to dominate the mighty forces of nature for selfish and destructive ends. Personality traits of those who lean toward purple are: ability to be long suffering, artful, materialistic, meditative, mysterious, proud, self-satisfied, slow to anger, subtle. One who is rich without love for the poor. In precious stones represented by the amethyst. In China designates the educated, the literati. Christian emblem of God, the Father; episcopal dignity; martyrs. Color of Advent and Lent symbolizing absolution, faith, fast, penitence, sorrow. In Egypt color of earth at evening. Worn as a talisman by soldiers. In the Finnish epic Kalevala, Wainomoinen sails until he reaches the purple harbors of the next world. In Hebrew tradition the color of Solomon's chariot. A color of Urim and Thummim, probably to discover the will of Yahweh. Assigned to water. Symbolic of pomp and power. In Iran attributes of red and blue, masculine and feminine forces, spirit and body. In Japan purple flowers are classified as masculine and symbolize love of truth. Prohibited at weddings because it represents mourning.

Assume the purple. Attain to imperial dignity; in allusion to the official color of Roman emperors.

Born in (or of) the purple. Of imperial or royal birth.

Purple patch. A brilliant or highly colored passage in a literary work which otherwise is undistinguished. Also applied to a weighty enterprise which professes great objectives.

PURSE Avarice, commerce, finance, philanthropy. Emblem of almoner, banker, Fortunatus, Hermes, merchant, Mercury, pilgrim, Priapus, saints Judas, Matthew, Nicholas. Dream significance: (empty) unexpected profit; (full) loss of money. In heraldry signifies liberal blessings, treasury.

Three purses (or balls). Gift of money which Saint Nicholas threw to an impoverished man as dowries for his three daughters.

You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. You can't expect refinement from a boor.

PURSUIT A mythological theme which usually involves shape changing. It alludes to the revolving seasons (or hours), the various shapes representing the growth, lights, weather of each season. Examples are Atraioman, Dionysus, Taliesin. Allegories in which women pursue men suggest a matriarchy. The Dryope-Hylas and Cerridwen-Gwion Bach legends are of this type. In patriarchal societies the pursuer is male, as in the Apollo-Daphne story. In modern works the correct seasonal (or hourly) order is broken because the original context has been forgotten.

PURTUPITA AND HULA (PURTUPITUS AND HULUS) Early Italian deities, probably of vegetation, one representing fertility above ground, the other below.

PURURAVAS Literally, gleaming one. In Hindu mythology an aspect of sun. A mortal king (the sun suffers death daily) he married Urvasi, a heavenly nymph, on condition she was never to see him unclothed. A flash of lightning revealed his splendor, which was too dazzling for Urvasi (dawn or spring maid), and she vanished. Inconsolable, Pururavas searched everywhere for her, and finally found her on the last day of the year. Their story re- sembles that of Eros and Psyche. In cosmological myths the daily duplicates the yearly cycle.

- PURUSA (PURUSHA) Literally, man. In the Vedas the deity, being desirous to create the world, meditated; as he did so Purusa issued from his mouth. Primal and eternal male, source of creation, thus an epithet applied to any of the greater deities. Giant who differentiated himself into two beings, male and female. See Androgynous deities. He was sacrificed by the gods to create the world. His head became the sky, his mind the moon, his eyes the sun, his breath wind, his navel air, his feet the earth; Agni and Soma came from his mouth, and from his limbs came the four castes. The title Narayana is applied to him. In Sankhya philosophy Purusa represents the spiritual force, the soul of the universe which is neither a production nor productive, opposed to but working with Prakriti, material force. Frequently identified with Prajapati. Compare Gaya Maretan, Manzashiri, Pan-Ku, Ymir.
- PURUSHOTTAMA Sanscrit supreme being, the unmanifested in the aspect of a creator; logos.
- PURVA-VIDEHA Chinese Buddhist sacred region ruled over by Pin-to-lo-Po-to-she; located in the west. A paradise.
- P'USA (P'U-T'I-SA-TO) Chinese Bodhisattva.
- PUSAN (PUSHAN) Hindu sun god. Celestial shepherd, conductor of souls of the dead, guardian of cattle and roads, nourisher; thus sun as beneficent. He wears braided hair and a beard; he carries an awl or goad and a spear; his car is drawn by goats; his food is gruel. Surya as god of pastoral life.
- PUSKARA In Hindu mythology the handsome and clever son of Varuna. Husband of Jyotsnakali.
- PUSONG In Philippine Island comedy the buffoon; hence a person who runs amuck.
- PUSPA One of the eight mothers of Buddhism. Peaceful in aspect. Her color is white, she holds a flower, has two or four arms, and usually is ardhaparyankasana (dancing). In Tibet called Me-to-g-ma.
- PUSS IN BOOTS Marvelous animal which appears in folklore. He has a ready wit, and by ingenious tricks helps the one to whom he is attached. In an Italian tale called Constantine's Cat.
- PUSSY WILLOW Emblem of spring. In Korea typifies social climbers.
- PUSTAKA Sanscrit for book. Buddhist non-tantric symbol. Made of long, narrow palm leaves, and tied with a string. Emblem of Avalokitesvara, Manjusri, Prajnaparamita, and some arhats.
- PUT Hindu land of the dead who had been childless.
- PUTANA Hindu ogress who killed infants by giving them to suck. She was killed by the infant Krishna.
- PUTTI Little nude children or figures resembling Cupids used in Italian painting and sculpture. In singular form, putto.
- PUUK (PUHKIS, PUK) Esthonian thieving spirit. Identical with Para, which see.

PUVAH (PUAH) Hebrew name meaning utterance.

PWAN-CHOO Chinese legendary first man. Born 96,000,000 years before Christ, he separated the heavens from earth. Equates with Adam.

PWYLL Literally, prudence. King of Dyfed, Cymric earthly paradise in which was located a magic caldron (fertility). He sat on Arbeth, a marvelous mound, and a beautiful woman appeared. He pursued her, but she kept the same distance between them until he said he loved her. Then she revealed she was the fairy Rhiannon, betrothed to Gwawl. In a contest Pwyll outwitted Gwawl and Rhiannon became his wife. On May eve their son Pryderi was born, and six women were set to watch over the infant. They fell asleep, Gwawl kidnaped the child, and placed him in the manger of Teyrnnon, whose foal born the same night was stolen by a black hand. The six terrified nurses accused Rhiannon of devouring her child, and Pwyll condemned her to sit at the horse-block at his gate and carry his visitors to the castle on her back. Eventually Teyrnnon heard the story, and restored the child to his parents. This legend contains the folk tale formulae of rival suitors (opposing lights), an abandoned wife (time myth), animal born the same night as a hero (external soul), black hand (winter). On a hunting trip Pwyll met Arawn, king of Annwfn (underworld) pursuing a stag (soul of Pwyll). The two kings became friends, exchanged shapes, and agreed that each should rule the others kingdom for a year (season). Pwyll defeated Havgan (summer growth), saved Annwfn for Arawn, and thereafter was called Pen Annwfn (head of Ann-wfn) This visit of a mortal to the underworld exemplifies the course of the seasons; it also exemplifies a mortal aiding a deity. Pwyll appears to be a semi-legendary king, deified as a deity of darkness after his death. In later legends he appears as Pelles, keeper of the Holy Grail.

PYATNITSA PRASCOVIA Russian harvest goddess. She required that on her ceremonial day women should not sew, spin, or weave, lest the dust injure her eyes and bring on the sore-eye plague. Identical with Seewa, Slavic Mother Friday.

PYGMALION (1) In Greek mythology, Cyprian king and misogynist, who carved a statue of Aphrodite and fell in love with his work. At his prayer the goddess imparted life to the statue and he married it. In modern literature the statue is called Galatea. The myth refers to Aphrodite breathing the life of spring into the cold earth. In another interpretation love awakens life. (2) King of Tyre. Son of Belus, brother of Dido, and murderer of her husband Sichaeus. Deity of darkness.

PYGMY See dwarf.

PYLADES In Greek mythology son of Strophius; husband of Electra; faithful and self-sacrificing cousin of Orestes. Pylades and Orestes are names which have become proverbial for friendship, like those of Damon and Pythias, David and Jonathon.

PYLAOCHOS Epithet of Poseidon as keeper of the keys to the prison-house under the sea.

PYLARTES In Greek mythology gatekeeper of the underworld. As guardian of its wealth called Plouton.

PYLOS (PILOS) Pointed cap, which in ancient Greece was a badge of an artisan or fisherman. Hephaestus wore one.

PYRACMON (PYRAKMON) In Greek mythology one of the Cyclops. Giant aid of Hephaestus. Personification of the fire-anvil or flames.

PYRAMID Fire, firmness, glory, immortality, male principle, prosperity, royalty, stability. Emblem of heaven, sacred mountain, sun. It expresses domination over the four quarters of the earth and the zenith. Gnostics symbolized by the letter A. According to Plutarch the first of all forms, and form in which primitive man worshiped the creator. Originally an altar of ever-burning fires dedicated to the sky or sun; later a tomb. Sometimes twin obelisks or a deity image appeared on the summit. In Chaldea a form of palaces and temples. According to mystics the measurements of the Egyptian pyramids coincided with astrological data and their secrets were translated into the tarot deck.

PYRAMUS (PYRAMOS) In Ovid's poetry a Greek youth in love with the Babylonian Thisbe. Because of parental opposition the lovers made the tomb of Ninus a trysting place. Thisbe arrived first and was frightened away by a lioness which had killed an ox. In flight she dropped her veil. Pyramus, finding the blood-stained veil, believed Thisbe was dead and committed suicide. Thisbe returned, found his dead body under a mulberry tree, and died of grief. Since the mulberry bears red fruit. A time myth, Pyramus being a personification of sun, Thisbe of dawn. Prototype of Romeo and Juliet. Burlesqued by Shakespeare in A Midsummer Night's Dream.

PYRE A funeral pile; hence any burning pile. With pur, pyr, pyra, a word root signifying fire or flame.

PYRIPHLEGETHON (PHLEGETHON) In Greek mythology river of flame and rage. One of the five rivers of Hades.

PYROBLI Firestone, which see.

PYROCLES In Spenser's Faerie Queene the personification of fiery anger.

Pyrocles and Musidorus. In Sidney's Arcadia two heroes famed for their friendship. They are shipwrecked in Arcadia, a paradise. Equate with Damon and Pythias.

PYRRHA Literally, fiery or red earth. In Greek mythology daughter of Epimetheus and Pandora. She and her husband Deucalion were the sole survivors of the deluge sent by Zeus. The repopulated the world by casting stones behind them. Analogue of Eve, Harmonia.

PYRRHIC DANCE War dance of ancient Greeks. So called after Pyrrichos, a Dorian, said to be its inventor. In other accounts first performed by Athene in honor of her victory over the Giants. It was performed in full armor to the flute. The Romaika, danced in modern Greece, is its relic.

PYRRHUS Literally, red haired. King of Epirus. An epithet of Neoptolemus, son of Achilles. He gained a victory over the Romans at Asculum at too great a cost, hence Pyrrhic victory.

Pyrrhic victory. A ruinous victory; victory won with great loss of life.

PYTHIAS See Damon and Pythias.

PYTHON In Greek mythology serpent hatched from the slime of the deluge. He withheld for himself the treasures of fertility. In a prophecy he was warned that he was doomed to die at the hands of Leto's son. He tried to kill Leto but was frustrated by Zeus. Apollo fulfilled the prophecy by killing him near Delphi at the foot of Mount Parnassus. Typifies that which crushes its prey. In symbolism the serpent has been confounded with rivers; hence Apollo (sun) may have destroyed a death-dealing river. Apollo's victory exemplified the triumph of divinity over earthly nature. Totem of several African tribes. From putho, to rot, probably from the rotting of the carcass after the slaying. Equates with Fafnir.

Pythia (Pythoness). Priestess of the Pythian Apollo at Delphi. When she sat on the god's throne she uttered the oracles he inspired. A prophetess, seer; one who goes into ecstasies or frenzies, as the priestess, thus a fortune teller, ventriloquist, witch. The priest is Python.

Pythian Games. Funeral games celebrated every four years to commemorate Apollo's triumph. Victors of the races were crowned with beech, laurel, or palm leaves.

Pytho. Earth's navel. Ancient name of Delphi; site of the Delphic or Pythian oracle.

PYVSAN-AIKA Russian spirit of the bathhouse. Identical with Muntso-murt.

PYX (PIX) (1) In Christian tradition casket which holds the consecrated Host. Word akin to pie (see) and Pius. (2) Chest in which coins to be tested by the British mint are kept.

Ciborium pyx. Symbolizes the mystery of the Last Supper. Emblem of saints Bonaventure and Hyacinth.

PYXIE (PIXY) Flower symbolizing life is sweet.

PYXIS Constellation in the Southern Sky also called Mariner's Compass (of Argo) or Nautical Box.

Q

Q Seventeenth of a class or series, sixteenth if the letter J is not counted. Typifies the wheel and rod, thus the world axis and revolving universe; the All, production, renewal, eternity. Letter of perpetual questioning. According to mystics a good omen for business and health. Occult significance: dominates speech and writing; its period is for eight years. Character traits: love of science and travel. Numerical value eight or seventeen. Physical weak spots: digestive organs. Correspondences: planetary, Mercury; symbolic, happiness; tarot, star; zodiacal, Aries. In Egyptian antiquity inscription with which royal names entered into immortality. Among Hebrew cabalists character traits are: insight; love of music, philosophy, and poetry. In low form, uncertainty. In medieval Roman notation, 500; with a dash over it 500,000. By Anglo-Saxons written cw, Arabic qaf, Egyptian hieroglyph angle, Hebrew qoph (back of head). See Alphabet Affiliations.

QABAUIL Literally heart of heaven. Sky deity of the Kiche Indians of Guatemala. With Gucumatz he created Hurakan, the first man.

QAF (CAF, KAF) (1) Twenty-first letter of the Arabic alphabet. (2) Moslem-Arabic sacred mountain range made of emerald. It encircles the world outside the ocean ring. Generic term for mountain, as the English Alps.

QAHU Egyptian city of gods.

QAISAR-L-HIND Anglo-Indian title for the caesar of India; official title of the English sovereign as India's ruler.

QAMATE Supreme god of the Amoxosa Kiffir Africans. Honored with huge burial mounds on which passersby deposit stones.

QAT Melanesian culture hero. He carved three men and three women and gave them life by beating his drum and dancing before them. His enemy Marawa gave them death. He had eleven foolish brothers who endeavored to kill them but he always outwitted them. Reminiscent of Joseph and Maui. With his brothers he lived in perpetual light. He heard of night (I-Qong), and went in quest of it. Successful, he instructed his brothers to sit still and, when they felt something in their eyes, to take no notice of it, whereupon they fell asleep. With a slab of red obsidian Qat cut the night and dawn came. A tradition resembling that of the nursery 'dustman' and 'sandman.'

QEB (GEB, KEB, QEBEB, QEBK, SEB) Egyptian god of primeval earth. Mate of Nut (sky), and father of Isis, Nephthys, Osiris, Set. Portrayed with a goose head or a goose on his head and called the great cackler or gander who laid the solar egg. Sometimes shown resting on his back or side with plants growing from his body, or as a snake master with a serpent head. He holds the ankh or a scepter. In later accounts said to be created by Ra (sun) out of Nu (chaos). Erroneously identified with Set. By Greeks identified with Cronus.

QETEBH MERIRI Spirit of poisonous pestilence in Jewish folklore.

QOLUNCOTUN Creator god of the Indians of Washington state.

QOPH (COPH, KOPH, ZOPH) Nineteenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet, meaning back of head. Its numerical value is one hundred. Corresponds to English Q. According to mystics its meaning is ax or defensive weapon. Its correspondences are: planetary, Mercury or Neptune; symbolic, happiness; tarot deck, light or sun; zodiacal, Gemini or Pisces. Its color is violet-red; its direction on the cube of space is south below, with the function of sleep, period of physiological repair; its intelligence is corporeal or body consciousness. In white magic it typifies Earth, gnomes' sphere, with Ariel for its presiding intelligence. In another interpretation it is the sphere of cherubim.

Q'RE Early Massoretic name of Jehovah. Equates with Carios and Karu, titles of Zeus, and with curetes, priests of Zeus, and quirites, Roman citizens. Until the reformation during the exile hair was sacrificed to him. Compare Panemerios.

QUAGGA Symbolizes lightning. Yields Khu-ag, i.e. Hu, the great.

QUAIL Resurrection, also lasciviousness. Dream significance: difficulties. Form of dawn and spring deities. Sacred to Apollo and Melkarth. Chinese symbol of courage, poverty, pugnacity. In Old Testament, heaven-sent food.

Quail bone. Among ancient Egyptians and Jews safety, solidity, stability, strength.

QUAKING GRASS In the language of flowers: My heart is agitated.

QUAMOCLIT BLOOM Busybody.

QUARRELING In an Italian icon personified by an armed man in fighting posture. His face is fierce. A cat and dog are at his heels.

Quarrel with one's bread and butter. Foolishly give up a pursuit by which one earns a livelihood.

QUARTER In heraldry one of the four divisions into which a shield is divided by an upright and a horizontal line. Indicates reward for brilliant military service.

Blow from one quarter to another. Shift; a nautical expression.

Latin Quarter. A region populated by artists, Bohemians, and students; from the section in Paris.

Quadrature of the circle. An impossibility, the insoluble.

Quadrifoil (Quatrefoil). Cardinal points, divinity, good luck, perfection, winds. In Christianity the four evangelists. In heraldry good tidings, spring.

Quadrivium. The fourfold way to knowledge in the Pythagorean system; the four sciences, arithmetic, astronomy, geometry, music. In medieval universities combined with the trivium or threefold way to eloquence, grammar, logic, and rhetoric.

Quarter Day. Day that begins or ends a year's quarter. In the British Isles day on which rents are paid. Celebrated as follows:

Ancient Pagan	Celtic	Christian	England	Scotland
Winter solstice (yule fire to commemorate rebirth)	Candlemas, about February 2	Christmas, December 25	Christmas	Candlemas
Spring equinox (rejoicing for growth)	Beltane, May 1	Easter	Lady Day, about March 25	Whitsunday about May 15
Midsummer eve (bonfires honoring maturity)	Lammas or First Fruits, about August 1	Saint John's Eve, June 24	Midsummer Day, June 24	Lammas
Autumn equinox (harvest feast, a mourning rite)	Hallowmas, November 1	Michaelmas, September 29	Michaelmas	Martinmas, November 11

Quaternary number. Ten, made up of the first four numbers, i. e. 1 + 2 + 3 + 4. Pythagorean oath number.

Quaternity. A union of four in one; correlative of trinity. Symbolic of integration; the four quarters of the world bound by divinity.

Quattro Coronati. Four Christian brothers, saints Carpophorus, Severianus, Severus, and Victorinus of Rome. Sculptors and architects who refused to adorn pagan temples. They suffered martyrdom on the same day, November 8, 304. Emblems: implements of architecture and the arts, axes, cages, iron, scourges. Generally associated with the Cinque Martiri, five artists, who suffered the same fate.

QUARTZ Integrity.

QUBBAH (QOBBAH) Small tent in which Kadeshoth women, who prostituted themselves in religious rites, offered themselves to worshippers of Baal-peor. Also the name of the female sexual parts. In Hebrew it means something hollow or arched, whence English alcove. See Prostitution.

QUCUMATZ Lord of darkness of the Kiche Indians of Guatemala. With Qabauil he created Hurakan, the first man.

QUDLIVUN (QUDLIPARMUIT) Happy spirit land in the sky of Central Eskimo Indians. Those who have been miserable in life go there and find joy.

QUEEN (1) Dignity, fertility, motherhood, noble birth, stateliness, wealth. Figuratively, a gifted woman, a woman leader. From the root gan, meaning to produce or germinate. Word akin to Kwanyin. (2) Card in the tarot deck symbolizing the soul, inner pattern of a particular human personality. Queen of clubs signifies the idea of souls; of hearts, model of soul; of spades, processes requisite to the manifestation of soul; of diamonds, actualized manifestation.

Queen Anne is dead. A retort made to one who brings stale news.

Queen Dick. To say something occurred in the reign of Queen Dick means it never occurred. An epithet applied to Richard Cromwell.

Queenie. Feminine name, diminutive of Queen.

Queen Mab. Fairy Queen.

Queen Mother. Widow of a king, mother of his reigning heir.

Queen of heaven. Egyptian Isis; Greek Hera; Phoenician Astarte; Roman Juno. Ancient Semites gave the title to moon goddesses, to the morning star as goddess of war, and to the evening star as goddess of love and harlotry. Among those so called are Allat, Ashtaroth, Ish-tar, Rusa. Virgin Mary also has been given the title, and as such she stands on the moon, clothed with the sun, and crowned with the twelve stars of Assumption.

Queen of love. The fertility mother. Aphrodite, Astarte, Benten, Sarasvati, Venus.

Queen of Sheba. A great woman dignitary, a haughty woman; also used ironically. In Biblical history she called on Solomon with the intention of impressing him with her wealth; captivated by him she became his wife. By Arabs called Balkis.

Queen of the May. A village lass who presides over the May Day festivities. She symbolizes the spring maid.

Queen of Virtue. In Christian tradition, poverty.

Queen's rocket. Fashion. In the language of flowers: You are the queen of coquettes.

To the queen's taste. Equal to the most discriminating requirements.

QUEENAH Evil deity of the Cowichian Indians of Queen Charlotte Island. A lord of darkness he possessed the sun, moon, and stars, for which the beneficent deity Spaul killed him. He had a duck form. By the Haida Indians called Any-any-any-ah from its cry.

QUENTIN (QUINTIN) Masculine name from the Latin through the French, meaning fifth.

QUERN See millstone, wheel for symbolism.

QUEST An incident world-wide in folklore is the search by a hero or heroine for something or someone. The search may be to fulfil a condition (attend nature), obtain the tree of life or waters of youth (bring fertility and prosperity back to the land), seek a beautiful maiden (dawn or spring), a handsome youth (sun), a treasure or holy relic, such as the Grail (giver of nourishment); it may be to preserve a life, serve a clan, test courage and strength, or win a mate. Frequently the quester has super-human helpers, an animal or bird, capable of hearing and seeing extraordinary distances and capable of speaking (wind or other aspect of nature) or penetrating into other worlds. Sometimes the quester transforms into another form, such as that of a beast, insect, or plant (seasonal changes). The final quest may be accomplished only after a series of quests (cycle of the day or year). An underworld quest relates to resurrection, light or growth being imprisoned underground during the dark or winter season. The pilgrim's staff is the quester's emblem. In Christian tradition the roads are given symbolic names such as Aspiration, Charity, Hope, Humility, Justice, Purity. Some legendary questers are: Fraoch, Galahad, Gawain, Heracles, Izanagi, Mataora, Orpheus, Percival, Psyche.

QUETZAL Symbol of rain and vegetation. Royal bird of Central American nations; only chiefs were permitted to wear its plumes. Emblem of Guatemala.

QUETZALCOATL (TOPLITZIN QUETZALCOATL) Literally, green-feather snake. Legendary king and nature deity of the Aztecs and Toltecs. Said to be the son of Iztacmixcoatl and his virgin wife Chimamatl; son or twin brother of Tezcatlipoca; one of the four divine sons of Tonacatecutli and Tzinteotl, or of the chaos deity Tonacatecutli by breath alone, who sent his white son forth to reform the world. With his brothers he made Cipactonal, the first man, and Oxo-muco, the first woman. From the hair of their divine mother (earth) they created Xochiquetzal as wife for the son of the first mortal couple. With Tezcatlipoca he made fire, the heavens, and Cipactli, a great fish, from whose flesh they made earth. He welcomed the sun, introduced the calendar and taught agriculture, the art of government, engraving, and stone cutting, and the crafts of gem setting, goldsmith, and silversmith. He lived a chaste life, did penance, and drew blood from his ears and tongue because of sinful things he heard and uttered. He opposed war and human sacrifice and offered the gods bread, flowers, incense, and perfume. He was ruler of the ninth hour of the day, deity of fire, protector of the reproductive principle, giver of children. His evil brother Tezcatlipoca made him intoxicated with the pulque, and he wandered into the eastern ocean, whence he came, promising to return. Cortez was accepted as the returned white Quetzalcoatl, and thus triumphed over the Mexicans. In another account he died from a foot wound, thus a crucified or mutilated deity; and in a third account his followers cremated his body when he reached the sea (sun setting in flames), and his heart, which escaped the fire, rose to become the Morning Star, thus a resurrected deity. Also known as Ceacatl, one reed, a name also given to his birthday; Citlalatonic, the morning; Nanihecatli, ruler of the east, rain bringer; Papachtic, the day or sun's rays; Yahuallichecatl, lord of the four winds whose abode was in the west and whose emblem was an equi-armed cross or a yoe, wheel inscribed with five angles (four directions and the center). His temple was divided into four apartments, one toward the east, yellow with gold; west, blue with turquoise and jade; south, white with pearls and shells; north, red with bloodstones. Portrayed as a plumed serpent, a bearded white man, or as a butterfly. He left his handprint in stone; reminiscent of the footprints of Adam and Buddha. Equates with Gucumatz, Kukulcan, Saramayas.

Quetzalcoatl and Tezcatlipoca.
Twin brothers in conflict, day and night.

QUETZALPETLATL Aztec fertility goddess. Sister of Quetzalcoatl. Dweller on sacred Mount Nonalco.

QUETZALVEIXOCHITL Aztec

great tree; one of the pillars of the sky. Name interpreted to mean beautiful rose tree, flowery earth, or plumed earth.

QUICKEN Irish tree of life and immortality. Also called mountain ash, quickbeam, rowan.

QUICKSILVER Adaptability, inconstancy, speed, uncertainty. Metal associated with Mercury. In Tibetan Buddhism one of the eight articles of Man-la ritual.

QUIKINNA'QU (KUTKINNAKU)
Literally, big raven or big grandfather. Benevolent creator of the Koriak tribes of Siberia. Called Kutq by the Kamchadal; Kurkil by the Chukchi.

QUIMBY Masculine name from the Scandinavian, meaning from the woman's cottage.

QUINCE May 6 birthday flower symbolizing fruitfulness, love; also bitterness, disagreeableness, disappointment, scornful beauty, temptation. Resolves into ak-Hu-ince, i.e. great Hu, the one fire. Attribute of Christ; sometimes given as the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. In ancient Greece sacred to Aphrodite. A bride was required to eat it. Norse fruit of redemption.

QUINN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning the wise.

QUINTESENCE In Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel queen of Entelechy (literally, world of two meanings), country of speculative science visited by Pantagruel in his search for the oracle of the Holy Bottle. Also called Queen Whims.

Quintessence motif. In folklore, deduction. A means by which a hero saves himself from an unfortunate fate. Also used to reveal fastidiousness.

QUIPPU (QUIPU) Inca device. Knotty cord used for recording and conveying information. Memory helper.

QUIRIN Stone found in nests of lapwings. Valued by witches and magic makers for its marvelous qualities of discovering secrets.

QUIRINUS Sabine god of agriculture and war. Later a surname of Janus and Mars. Ultimately a sobriquet of Romulus.

Quirinal. Hill in Rome dedicated to Quirinus (Romulus). On it stands the palace of Italian kings. Figuratively a secular ruler's residence, as distinguished from the Vatican.

Quirinalia. Roman festival honoring Quirinus (Romulus). Celebrated February 17.

QUISLING (QUISLER) Traitor. Alluding to Vidkun Quisling, Norwegian official who collaborated with the Germans in the conquest of Norway in 1940.

QUIVER Deity implement, holder of fire and lightning. Emblem of Amor, Cupid, Eros.

QUIVIRA A legendary city; site of a fabulous treasure sought by Coronado and other explorers.

QUIXOTE See Don Quixote.

Quixotic. Having extravagant schemes; foolish, impractical, sentimental.

QUOIT Carries the same symbolism as circle and disc.

QUOOTS-HOOI In Chinook Indian mythology giantess who ate the eggs of the raven Hahness, the thunder-bird, and thus created mankind. See Too-lux.

QVASIR Same as Kvaser.

R

R Eighteenth of a class or series, seventeenth if the letter J is not counted. Like P derived from the shepherd's crook. In Freemasonry represents the right hand and denotes fidelity. In law used as a brand on criminals to signify rogue. According to mystics it has powerful vibrations with potential destructive force. Occult significance: rapidity of action; its period is for nine years. Character traits: counselor, healer, lover of home but unfortunate in that direction; melancholic. Numerical value nine or eighteen. Physical weak spot: heart. Planetary correspondence: Venus. Tarot deck correspondence: moon. Zodiacal correspondence: Aquarius.

Christian symbol of regeneration, hence salvation. In art frequently shown on a mountain top or capping a staff. Among Hebrew cabalists, traits are: faith, innocence, justice. In low form: false sense of security. In medieval Roman notation 80; with a dash over it 80,000. Equates with the Anglo-Saxon raed (counsel), Arabic ra, Celtic ruis (elder tree), Egyptian hieroglyph mouth, Greek rho, Hebrew resh (head). See Alphabet Affiliations.

Three R's. Reading, 'riting, 'rithmetic; hence the essential elements of primary education. Rum, Romanism, rebellion; election cry during the campaign of 1884 in the United States.

RA (RE) (1) Supreme deity of ancient Egyptians. Son of Nu and Nut, or a god who formed himself. The midday sun; a triad with Mentu, rising sun, and Atum or Sokar, setting sun. Believed to have bones of silver, flesh of gold, hair of lapis lazuli. His tears fall as rays. From spittle or by masturbation he created Shu (air) and Tefenet (rain). He castrated himself and with the blood drops created man, thus androgynous or the universal navel and axle. He lived on earth; when man became wicked he ascended to the sky and sent Hathor to cause a deluge. The pharaohs maintained he was their ancestor. At Heliopolis, where his sacred tree and the pool in which he bathed (sank) were located, he was incarnate in the Mnevis bull; at Hermonthis in the Bacis bull. Each night he descended into the underworld Duat, where he battled the serpent Apep. He had human weaknesses, one of which was growing old. He feared to die, and to save himself confided his secret name Ran to Isis. When aged, the cow Nut carried him across the sky or he traveled in one of his barks. His symbols were the celestial eye, crux ansata, hieroglyph, ram's horns, scarab, scepter, serpent, vulture wings. Represented as a cat, falcon, lion, but usually depicted as a hawk-headed man crowned with the solar disk and uraeus. In early art shown sailing across the sky in his ship Manzet (morning bark) or stepping aboard Mesenkhet (bark of dusk). Merged with Amen and, when merged with Horus, called Hor-akhi, Horus of the horizons. Basically his name is Ur-A, i.e. Fiery one. See Androgynous deities, Aten, Harmachis, Khepera, Name, Tum. (2) Word root, source of Greek rho, and such words as Archon, radiant, rajah, Rex, Wray. (3) Semitic Time or Ancient of Days; the great aged one. Probable source of the Egyptian sun deity. Identical with Mayan La. (4) In Teutonic mythology a harmless elf heard in houses and workshops, but silent when anyone seeks the cause of the noise. The sound when he works is a good omen, but his lamentations betoken an accident. In Sweden called Radare. Resembles the Haltia.

RAAMAH (RAAMA) Hebrew masculine name meaning trembling.

RAB (1) Hebrew word meaning chief, master, teacher. In the Old Testament used in the sense of venerable. (2) A faithful dog; a character invented by Dr. John Brown.

Rabban (Rabbon, Rabboni). Hebrew title of honor; superior to that of rabbi; given only to seven men celebrated for learning.

Rabbi. Literally, my master. Hebrew doctor or interpreter of the law, especially one ordained to deal with questions of law and ritual. In modern times applied to one who holds a pastoral relation to the congregation. Jesus has been called Rabbi Ben (son of) Panther.

RABB Arabic term for Lord; equivalent in Moslem countries to the Hebrew Jehovah.

RABBIT Fecundity, fleet-footedness, gregariousness, lacking fixed principles, a lively but desultory love of learning, long-eared listener, mildness, nibbler, vagabondage, vegetarianism, wanton destruction, watchfulness. Dream significance: (black) lies, reverses; (eating) recovery from illness; (gray) marriage; (killing) danger of betrayal; (white) friendship, success. In China and Japan animal in the moon which pounds out the elixir of life. Christian symbol of the poor and lowly. North American Indian holy animal which burrowed away the soil and released the primeval race from the underworld. Giver of luck in the chase. In dreams he warned of danger, thus symbolic of lucky escape. Called Ioskeha by the Hurons, Messou by Potawatomi tribes, Michabo by Algonquins. By the Nahuatl Indians called Totochtin, god of drunkenness and idleness.

Rabbit hunt. Zuni fertility ceremonial. Children conceived on the night of the hunt supposedly would be exceptionally vigorous.

Rabbit's foot. Good luck.

RABI Feminine name from the Arabic, meaning the spring.

RABICAN Fabulous horse of Carolingian legend. He fed on air and was unsurpassed for speed, hence wind. His owner was Argalia; later he was owned by Rinaldo.

RABISU Literally, spy. Babylonian demon; ghost which set bodies on end.

RABMAG Hebrew title meaning chief of the Magi.

RABOURDIN A government official in Balzac stories. His honesty and industry cause his downfall.

RABSACES (RABSARIS) Hebrew title meaning eunuch chief.

RABSHAKEH From the Hebrew meaning chief butler or cupbearer.

RACA Epithet from the Hebrew meaning beggarly, brainless, contemptible, vain, worthless.

RACHEL (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning ewe. (2) In the Old Testament daughter of Laban. For love of her Jacob served her father fourteen years, and she became Jacob's favorite wife. Mother of Joseph and Benjamin. The prophecy representing her as mourning over her posterity has been interpreted in the New Testament to refer to Herod's massacre at Bethlehem. According to Dante she represents the contemplative life.

RACK Formerly an instrument of torture.

On the rack. Extreme bodily or mental anguish.

Rack and ruin. Utter destitution or destruction.

RADDAI Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah subdues.

RADGOST (RADEGOST) Chief deity of the Obotrites, an ancient Danish tribe. A goose deity.

RADIEN-AIMO Among Lapp Christians heaven, abode of God. Opposed to Rut-aimo.

RADIGAST (REDIGAST) Slavic deity, maker of thunder and lightning. Probably identical with Radgost and Svarozic.

RADIGUND In Spenser's Faerie Queene, Amazon queen who, getting the better of Sir Artegall in single combat, compelled him to dress in woman's robes and spin flax. A tale reminiscent of Omphale and Heracles.

RADISH Among Jews a characteristic banquet side dish, especially at the Passover feast. Symbolic of the coming of spring, suggesting the perpetual renewal of life and ever-sustaining hope of human redemption. In Japan typifies flourishing prosperity.

RADKNIGHT A feudal tenant obliged to serve his lord with cavalry service; later a freeman owing commutable service.

RAFFLES A gay well-bred thief. From the character invented by E.W. Hornung.

RAFNAGUD The name of Odin as raven god.

RAFT OF FOUR STICKS Among Algonquin, Siouan, and other Indians cruciform symbol of the world's quarters; palladium of the tribe. Supporter of the Father or creator. From the raft an animal or duck dived into primal waters to bring up the mud from which the earth was shaped.

RAFUSEN Literally, bouyant subtlety. Japanese fairy of the floating veil. She appears at night among plum blossoms to scatter perfume.

RAG Despair, idleness, poverty, self-depreciation. In legend typifies fog, hoar-frost, mist.

Chew the rag. Talk incessantly or tiresomely, especially in a quarrelsome manner.

Rag bush. Bush on which pilgrims hang rag offerings.

Rag cut. In Jewish funeral rites a covenant between mourner and dead. Substitute for self-mutilation or a blood covenant.

Ragged-robin. Flower symbolizing ardor, wit.

Rag money. Paper money, especially when not convertible into coin.

Rag offering. In Asia and Northeastern Europe votive offering hung on a bush or tree sacred to a deity. A substitute for a garment or clothed image, which in turn is a substitute for a mortal or blood sacrifice;

hence a scapegoat. When cast into water symbolizes offenses cast off; also a substitute for humans. A custom called ohobarai by the Japanese, taschlekh by the Jews. See garment, golden fleece, hanging.

Rag on every bush. A young man who courts many girls and never proposes.

Rag, tail, and bobtail. Lower social classes, vagabonds in rags.

Ragweed. Steed of witches.

Rag well. Sacred spring or well into which offerings are dropped or where deity offerings are hung on the well wall.

Ragwort. A bitter herb which in Korea is eaten at the time of ancestral sacrifices much in the way Hebrew's eat bitter herbs; hence the proverb: For the faithful, after the bitter comes the sweet.

RAGAMOFFYN A middle English demon. Source of ragamuffin.

RAGNAR LODBROG (LODBROK) Norse sun hero. Originally called Ragnar, but after killing serpents (winter) in the land of King Heroth, the king added Lodbrog (shaggy breeches). He married Heroth's daughter Thora and, saddened by her death, became a seafarer, looting many lands (sun in scorching aspect). By Aslog he became the father of Ingvar and Ubbe, said to be historic men; thus his story is a mixture of legend and fact. He was one whose death could be accomplished only by a viper. As one immortal except for a single vulnerability he ranks with Achilles, Balder, Llew Llaw, Siegfried.

RAGNAROK (RAGNAROKR) From the Icelandic, meaning judgment of the gods. Usually called twilight of the gods; in German, Gotterdammerung. The gods strive in vain to prevent their doom by evil giants (violent forces of nature, especially winter) on the battlefield of Vigrid. After the conflict new lands spring up and bear fruit; Lif and Lifthraser, a human couple who survived the cataclysm, repeople the new world for whom an unnamed great father establishes immutable laws in a golden age of prosperity (return of verdure). Compare Armageddon, Doom of the gods.

RAGNFRID Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning queen of peace.

RAHAB (RAHABH) (1) A feminine name which represents two different Hebrew words, one meaning wide or spacious, the other meaning pride, insolence, and used as a symbolic name for Egypt. (2) Ancient Hebrew darkness dragon or sea demon. (3) Harlot of Jericho who repented, became a worshiper of Jehovah, and sheltered two spies of Joshua. Salmon, a prince of Judah, married the repentant sinner, and she became an ancestress of David and Jesus. Salmon may have been a marriage-name of Joshua. A royal marriage constituted a symbolic ritual of death and rebirth, in which names were changed. They had only fifty daughters (probably prophetic priestesses). The marriage may have been Joshua's (sun's) marriage with the sea goddess. Dante places her in paradise.

RAHAKATITTU Feathered and painted stem used in the Pawnee Indian hako ceremony. Symbolized the female or protective principle. A companion piece is the Rahaktakaru, the male or war principle.

RAHIL Same as Zuleika.

RAHKONEN In Northern Finland the man in the moon.

RAHU Hindu demon who interrupted the regular order. He quaffed some of the nectar of immortality and was discovered by Soma, the moon, and Surya, the sun, who informed against him. Vishnu cut off his head, inasmuch as he had the nectar in his mouth, it remained immortal, and he pursued his enemies, swallowing them from time to time, thus causing eclipses. Ketus was the tail of his bodiless head. Portrayed riding an owl or on a divan. Identified with a star in Draco, analogue of Alkho. The name is derived from the verb to abandon, void; hence blackness, having no body, the umbra of astronomers. In Buddhism demon with nine heads and four arms on a dragon body, which stole amrita, waters of life, thus drought. See Acaryavajrapani. A crow is above the ninth head. He holds a capa, dhvaja, pasa, sara, vajra; he wears Dharmapala ornaments, an aureole of flames, and belts of heads. Eyes on his arms and body.

RAHULA Tenth Buddhist arhat. Son of Gautama Siddhartha and Yasodhara. In Tibet called sGrac'an dsin or Da-chen-dsin.

RAI (RAJ) Slavic heaven, a happy place. Mystic land where everything in nature goes in autumn and remains until spring.

RAIJIN (RAIDEN) Japanese genius of thunder. Colored red. Behind his back is a round frame to which is attached his drums. Frequently portrayed as a drunkard. Associated with Kamanari, thunder woman, Raicho, thunder bird, Raitaro, thunder child, Raziu, thunder animal.

RAIL In the Pelew Islands evil deity. Bird which gave man disease and death in opposition to the wishes of Obagat, creator god. Parallels Olofat.

RAIN Blessing, divine protection, fertility, truth, wisdom; also destruction, disease, gloom. Symbolized by jewels, tears. Dream significance: despotism, tyranny; (fine) difficulty, worry; (heavy) abundance, accident. According to American Indians a form in which ancestors appeared. In China caused by the tears of Cowherd and Spinning Maid when they separated each year. Sweat of P'an Ku. Japanese symbol for November.

Rain bird. A cuckoo or other bird, which supposedly foretells rain.

Rainbow. Divine presence, hope, peace, resurrection, victory. That which comes and goes without warning. Synthesis of all colors, hence compromise. Promise, the unattainable; a brilliant but illusive attraction or a deceptive allurements. Dream significance: end of troubles. Universally in mythology the bow with which a sky deity fights storm demons, or a bridge between heaven and earth; sometimes a serpent bringer of rain. Among Altai Tatars bow of a mighty hero whose arrow is lightning. In Christianity the seven rays of the rainbow are likened to the Holy Spirit's seven gifts (fourfold nature of man's perfection - body, mind, soul, spirit; and the threefold nature of Trinity). The three main rays (red, yellow, blue) stand for Trinity. In art yellow sometimes shown as green: red signifying highest heaven, full perception of the Lord's love; blue, middle heaven, delight of receiving wisdom from the Lord; green, lowest heaven, love of good but obscure perception of truth. In Greek mythology, Iris, messenger of the gods. Among Hebrews symbolizes blessings, God's covenant, end of troubles, pardon, rebirth, reconciliation, union. Sign of the presence of God's love as manifested in Joseph's coat of many colors. In Irish mythology the sling of Lug. In Japan the bridge from which Izanagi and Izanami thrust the spear which created land. Among the Ostiaks bow of thunder god. In Roman mythology the conferring of blessings on those Juno loved; release of the suffering soul of Dido. In Scandinavian called Bifrost; across it the souls of heroes marched in triumph to the great wassil in Valhalla. By Yakuts and Buriats called the wine of a she-fox.

Rainbow agate. Candor.

Rainbow chase. A hopeless quest; from the fable of the pot of gold buried where the rainbow touches earth.

Rain doctor (Rain maker).

One who supposedly brings on rain by charms or incantations. Common among primitive races. In certain Abyssinian districts people engaged in murderous conflicts with each other for the purpose of procuring rain. In other districts a priest who failed to make rain was stoned to death.

Rain saints. Gervais, Godelieve, Martin of Bullions, Medard, Swithin.

RAISIN Festivities, preservation. Word akin to reason. Dream significance: (eating) slight drunkenness; (ripe) covetousness, enjoyment.

RAI-TUBU Hawaiian sky-producer. Son of Taaroa, the primeval creator god.

RAJ Word root from the Sanscrit denoting brilliant, light. Appears in argent, Bragi, rajah; source of the Latin rex.

RAJAGRHA Buddhist sacred city where the discipline, doctrines, and rules of Gautama Siddhartha were formulated. Equates with Jerusalem.

RAJAH (RAJA, RAJAN) Hindu prince or chief; often a title of mere distinction. Maharajah means great rajah.

Raja Kidar. Hindu deity of boatmen. He haunts market places early mornings and fixes the price of grain, which he protects from the evil eye. Also called Bir Badr.

Rajah Vesali. A great and kind king who pardoned the man who murdered his wife and children.

RAKA (1) In Hervey Island mythology, trouble, born of the primeval female deity Vari-mate-takere. (2) Hindu abstract goddess who with Anumati presided over the full moon.

RAKE Avarice, harvest, thrift. To gather; to investigate, as political and social conditions. To separate good from bad grain, hence perfect wisdom. A variant of the three-pronged spear or trident, a deity emblem signifying light rays. Attribute of Saint Isadore.

RAKSH (RAKHUSH) Steed of Rustam in Iranian mythology.

RAKIB EL (RAKKAB) Ancient Semitic sun god. Aramaic name signifying chariot of El or rider.

RAKSHASA (RAKSA) (1) Literally, destroyer. One of a class of evil spirits who guard the treasures of Kubera. The Rakshasas assume animal, human, or vulture shape at will; their strength increases as the day declines, and the rising sun dispels them. Some are ugly with large bellies, matted hair, five feet with fingers set on backward (suggesting wind demons); others, especially the females (Rakshasis), allure by their beauty. In the form of a brother, husband, or lover they attack women; they prowl around the bride on her wedding night, eat humans, and haunt cemeteries. Agni is invoked to destroy them, thus her title, Slayer of Rakshasas. Also called Yatudhanas or Yatus (sorcerers). (2) Ancient custom of marriage by capture.

RALEIGH Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the roe's lea.

RALPH (RAOUL) Masculine name from the Scandinavian, meaning counsel and wolf.

RAM Creative heat, endurance, fertility, gentleness, knowledge, meekness, peace, procreation, strength, sun. Animal carrying the sun through the first sign of the zodiac, beginning about March 21, thus symbolic of the birth of new thought, dawn of a new era. In heraldry signifies duke or leader. In mythology ram gods are identical with bull gods. Word resolves into ur-am, i.e. solar fire. Root of Rameses. Belus, Latin for ram, is akin to Belenus. Offered by Babylonians as a sacrifice at their New Year's feast in expiation of the sins of the nation; an emblem of Ea. In Christianity the deliverer or leader Christ. In Egyptian antiquity typified soul. The four gods of the elements (Amen-Ra, fire or sun; Osiris, water; Qeb, earth; Shu, air) sometimes appeared as rams. The four winds had a ram head or shape. Min was a ram deity. In Greek mythology savior of Odysseus and Phrixus, and decorated the head of Jason. Sacrificed to Athena, Poseidon, Zeus. Minoan god of the waxing year; opposed to the goat, god of the waning year. Hebrew symbol of sacrifice, alluding to the sacrifice of Abraham. In Hebrew ram means high, ramah is a lofty place. In Hinduism a steed of Agni. Ram or rama means husband, man, in Sanscrit. Iranian symbol of virility; emblem of the Persian empire. One of the ten animals in the Moslem heaven. Attribute of Khon-ma, Tibetan old mother earth.

Ram's horn. Creation, ray, violence, war. The Jewish shofar.

Ram with one horn pointing fore, the other aft. The Roman god Janus.

RAMA (RAMACHANDRA) Hindu sun hero. The gods feared Ravana, demon gifted with invulnerability unless killed by a mortal. Vishnu, in his seventh avatar, came to life as Rama, son of Dasaratha by Kausalya. Kaikeyi and Sumitra, other wives of Dasaratha, meanwhile gave birth to Bharata and the twins Lakshmana and Satrugna respectively. Because he was able to bend Siva's bow, Rama won the hand of Sita, who had sprung up from the earth when King Janaka ploughed the ground. When Dasaratha indicated he intended to proclaim Rama his heir, Kaikeyi reminded him of his promise to name her son. The monarch felt compelled to keep his word, and Rama was banished for fourteen years. When Dasaratha died Bharata invited Rama to return as ruler; Rama refused and Bharata regarded himself no more than his half brother's regent. In Dandaka forest Ravana kidnaped Sita. Aided by his twin half-brothers and the ape gods Hanuman and Sugriva, Rama rescued Sita. A light myth, in which Rama permits Bharata, darkness, to rule for a period without contest. His story also suggests the intrigues troubling royal families; that of Rama and Sita suggests an agricultural myth, in which Sita's capture parallels the capture of cows (fertility) by Panis and that of Persephone by Aides. His exile equates with that of Odysseus. Two other Ramas, Parasa-rama and Bala-rama, are known in legendary history, but Ramachandra is meant when Rama is mentioned. Shown carrying a bow.

RAMADAN (RAMAZAN) Mohammedan holy fast commemorating Mohammed's receiving the first part of his revelation. A harvest rite. Word implies consuming fire, and resolves into San-rama, i.e. holy man or sun. Akin to ram, Rameses, Ramman.

RAMASOON Siamese thunder god. Shown with ax-like weapons.

RAMESES Literally, son of the sun. Name or title of thirteen Egyptian monarchs, hence a ruler.

Rameses II. Miser who built a tower to hold his fortune.

Rameseum. Monument to a king of the Rameside dynasty; specifically an important temple or treasury ruin near Thebes believed to be the tomb of Rameses II. By extension any great monument or treasury building.

RAMINAGROBIS Poet in Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel; satirical account of Guillaume Cretin, 16th century court poet. In La Fontaine's fables the name is given to a great cat chosen to judge between the weasel and the rabbit.

RAMMAN (RAGIMU, RAIMIMU, RAMMANU) Literally, raging one. Babylonian storm and wind god whose weapon is the thunder-bolt. He symbolizes retributive justice. Identical with Adad, Bir, Murtaznu.

RAMONA Feminine name corresponding to masculine Ramon (Raymond).

RAMPANT In heraldry standing on sinister hind leg with one foreleg raised above the other, face in profile. Said of a beast of prey. Ready for battle, fear inspiring.

Rampant gardant. Facing the beholder.

Rampant regardant. Facing backward.

RAM-RAM Literally, Rama-Rama. A Hindu salutation or benediction in meeting or parting; an invocation of Rama. Also used to express disgust.

RAMSEY Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from the ram's island.

RAN (1) In Egyptian antiquity the true or big name, a manifestation of Ka. Inasmuch as a magician might work evil against a person by uttering his true name, it was kept secret, and a person was called by a little or nickname. The ran was also a grave or death name, and the dead were conjured when their names were spoken in invocations. (2) Norse sea giantess. Wife of Aegir, mother of nine daughters (waves), who were the mothers of Heimdal. The sea in fearful aspect, she broke men's ships, and then in her great net caught the seafarers, thus the expression, "drowned to Ran." In later legends portrayed as a mermaid. Her name, also spelt Rana, signifies robber.

RANA Hindu title meaning prince; frequently applied to chiefs.

RANA-NEIDDA Lapp virgin goddess who lived in heaven and ruled over the mountains which were the first to become green in spring and provide moss for reindeer. The spinning wheel was sacred to her. Equates with Frigg.

RANDAL (RANDOLPH, RANDULF) Masculine name from Old English, meaning shield and wolf.

RANDVER In Norse mythology son of Jormunrek. Falsely accused by Bikki of adultery with Swanhild, his stepmother, Randver is condemned to the gallows. A light myth resembling that of Theseus and Hippolytus.

RANEE (RANI) Hindu queen or princess; wife of a rajah.

RANGI (RAKI) Polynesian sky father. Son of Maku. He had many wives, the first four being Poko-ha-rua-te-po, Papa, Hekeheke-i-pap, Hotu-papa. In one legend Papa had previously been married to Tangaroa, sea god. Jealous when Papa deserted him Tangaroa wounded Rangi in the thigh with a spear, suggesting a fertility myth equating with that of Adonis.

Rangi and Papa. Heaven and earth deities. Universal parents at first joined in constant copulation; later separated by the forest god Tane-mahuta, one of their children.

RANUNCULUS October 21 birthday flower symbolizing fascination. In the language of flowers: Dazzled by your charms.

Wild ranunculus. Ingratitude.

RAPHAEL (RAFFAEL) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning God is healer. (2) In Jewish angelology spirit of the air, divine physician, patron of pilgrims. In his special province of guardian of men's souls he defeated Asmodeus. When shown in a traveler's robe, wearing sandals, a wallet tied to his belt, his hair bound with a diadem, and carrying a fish, staff, or water gourd, he usually is accompanied by Tobias. When portrayed as a guardian angel he is richly dressed, a casket or wallet held by a gold belt is slung over his shoulder, and he carries a sword, or he is shown in armor. On early Christian amulets his name appeared, sometimes the first and last letters only (RL) were used. According to the gnostic sect of Ophites he had a head resembling that of a reptile, he typified the superconsciousness, and resided in the eastern quarter of the heavens. He corresponds to the Cabalistic Hod and is identical with the Moslem Azrael. Also called Suriel. (2) In Milton's Paradise Lost angel who is sent to teach Adam and advise him of danger.

RASHNU Zoroastrian guardian of justice. With Mithras and Sraosha passed judgment on souls of the dead.

RASIEL In the Talmud angel who taught Adam. Probably confused by John Milton with Raphael, which see.

RASPBERRY The human heart. Resolves into berry of eraspe (Father Eros).

Raspberry blossom. October

15 birthday flower. Symbolizes envy, misery, remorse.

RAT Death, desertion, destruction, enmity, informing, major troubles, renegade, sneak. Dream significance: hidden enemies. In China called shu and symbolizes industry, prosperity; also meanness, timidity. In ancient zodiacs animal of Aquarius, bringer of water. In modern Chinese zodiacs carries the sun through Aries, the first sign, and the hours 11 P.M. to 1 A.M. Guardian of the north and of Hsu. Christian symbol of evil; attribute of Saint Fina. In India vehicle of Ganesa, whose sacredness made the extermination of plague-bearing rats difficult. In Japan called nazumi. Messenger of Daikoku, deity of wealth. The gnawing of New Year cakes by rats foretells a good harvest, especially if the cakes eaten are those of the kamidana (family shrine). Roman good luck symbol. Rat's hair is worn as a charm by South Africans, who believe they will have as many chances of avoiding an enemy's spear as the nimble rat has avoiding things thrown at it.

Rats. Of unsound mind, queer; hence rats in the attic or belfry (head).

Rat vomiting jewels. Buddhist and Hindu rain symbol. Emblem of Vinayaka.

Smell a rat. Suspect something is wrong.

RATA Maori sun hero. Grandson of Tawhaki, posthumous son of Wahieroa, who was killed by Makutu, a cannibal giant (storm). Rata, with companions, went on a long and perilous journey (crossed the sky), found the giant's cave (underworld of night), and lured Makutu with the promise of warm food, whereupon he threw hot coals in his mouth, killed him, and recovered his father's bones. Equates with Odysseus.

RATATOSK (RATATOSKR)

In Norse mythology the rabbit or squirrel which runs up and down the Yggdrasil trying to foment strife between the wise eagle at the top and the serpent Nidhogg gnawing at the roots. Exemplifies seasonal change.

RATH Irish fertility hero. He was lured to sleep by mermaids' songs and was torn limb from limb by them. Thus one season or one aspect of nature destroys another. Rath equates with Tammuz.

RATHAYATRA (RATHYATRA)

Hindu chariot festival, during which the Juggernaut procession takes place.

RATI (1) Hindu goddess of love. Later identified with Kuru-kulla, Buddhist goddess of wealth. (2) In Norse mythology, Heimdal as gnawer or traveler. He bore a narrow tunnel through a mountain to permit Odin to escape in eagle form from the underworld realm of Surtur.

RATNA Sanscrit for jewel. Typifies purity, rain. Buddhist non-tantric symbol. See cintamani.

RATNADAKINI Buddhist feminine deity of the air capable of conferring supernatural powers on those who invoke her. Her color is yellow; her emblems are kapala, khatvanga, ratna. In Tibet called Rin-chen-mkhahngro.

RATNAPANI Buddhist Dhyani-bodhisattva, the jewel bearer, with the cintamani (pearl) as an emblem. In Tibet called Chak-na-rin-chhen or Phyag-na-rin-chen.

RATNASAMBHAVA Third celestial Buddha; Buddha of precious birth. A Dhyani-buddha. His sakti is Mamaki. In usual form his asana is dhyana; color, yellow; emblems: cintamani, ghanta, ratna; mudra: right hand in varada, left hand in dhyana; his vahana is a horse. Also known as Ratnaheruka (Yellow Heruka-buddha). In Tibet called Rin-chen-bhyun-ldan.

RATRI Hindu goddess of the starlit night.

RATTLE Birth, fecundity. American Indian symbol of rain, thunder, wind. Pawnee emblem of the garden of the evening star. With blue lines typifies sky.

RATTLESNAKE American Indian god of fruitfulness, bringer of lightning and rain. From the fact that it seems never to die but annually renews its youth the Algonquins called it grandfather. They believed it could grant prosperous breezes or raise disastrous tempests. Crowned with the lunar crescent it was the life symbol in their picture writing. Its worship may have been inspired by fear. Chippewa emblem of Michabo. Among desert and mountain Indians a counselor to heroes.

Coiled rattlesnake. Emblem of Texas.

RAUDALO In New Guinea mythology king of snakes. With his forked tongue he touched the flood waters and caused them to recede.

RAVANA (RAVANNA) Hindu night demon. He had ten faces and twenty hands. In the epic Ramayana he abducts Rama's wife Sita, thus he resembles Aides, who abducted Persephone, or Paris, who abducted Helen.

RAVEN Cleverness, cruelty, death, devil, disease, falseness, foreknowledge, foulness, greed, ill-omen, impudence, rapaciousness, war, wickedness. To plunder or prey. Soul of a wicked person. Dream significance: (to left) danger of death; (to right) disappointment, sorrow. In heraldry typifies one who derived little from his ancestors and became the architect of his own fortunes. Sacred to Asclepius, Apollo, Cronus, Elijah, Noah, Odin, Saturn, and other light heroes. Among American Indians of the Northwest a demiurge, half-clown trickster and transformer. He was selfish and treacherous, gluttony his prevailing vice, but he was a seer, and all he prophesied came to pass. Celtic bird of death, attribute of Bran. In China, if his voice is heard between 3 A.M. and 7 A.M., the hearer will receive gifts; if between 7 A.M. and 11 A.M., wind and rain will follow. Represents Pi. In Christian art appropriated to saints Anthony, Apollonaris, Benedict, and Vincent, because a raven guarded them or provided them with food when they lived as hermits; thus God's providence. Also typifies the Devil or sin. Emblem of the Danes; if the Danes were to be defeated, the bird hung his wings; if they were to be victorious, he stood erect. In Hebrew lore it was a white bird, but turned black because it failed to return to the ark. Symbolizes corruption, morbidity, restlessness. Iranian messenger of the sun typifying virility. In Japan called karasu. Its croak foretells death, except when heard at 6 A.M. (wealth hour) or at noon (happiness hour), when it is an omen of good luck. See Gyu-o. In Norse mythology Odin had two ravens, Hugin (thought) and Munin (memory).

RAVGGA Finno-Ugric fish god. It has a human form and voice which foretells tempests and shipwrecks. Also called Meriraukka. Equates with Draugr, Triton.

RAY (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning radiant, and from the French, meaning king. (2) Concentration, force, light, radiation. Evidence of heaven, grace of God, power of good, principle of generation.

Buddha's rays. Apparent radiations from the sun when low on the horizon, actually the shadows of mountains and clouds; symbolized in the nimbus in a figure of Buddha or of another sun god.

Ray grass. Vice.

Rayonant. In heraldry to be adorned with rays.

Rays behind sun. Badge of Japan.

Twin rays. Emanations from the godhead. V in gnostic alphabet.

RAYBURN Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the roe's or deer's brook.

RAYMI (HATUN RAYMI) Peruvian thanksgiving harvest feast at summer solstice.

RAYMOND (RAY, RAYMUND) (1) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning wise protection. (2) In French romance the count of Lusignan, who lost his wife Melusina because he agreed to conditions he did not fulfil. Equates with Hiko-Hohodemi, Orpheus.

RAYNER Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning warrior of judgment.

RAZ In Breton tradition bay of souls located in Armorica (Brittany).

RAZEKA Ancient Arabian god worshiped as food provider.

RAZIEL In the cabala a herald of the Deity. Corresponds to Chokmah.

RAZOR Quarrel, sharpness, treachery, violence.

RBHUS From the Sanscrit, meaning dexterous, shining. In Hinduism three seasonal supernatural beings; artificers, magicians.

RE Musical note to which mystics assign the quality righteousness and the rank of minister.

REALA Hebrew masculine name meaning Jehovah sees.

REALM OF DARKNESS In mythology night, winter. Underworld abode of dead souls. Where the realm's lord keeps fertility and wealth imprisoned until they are rescued by a light hero.

REAPER Death deity. The sickle being moon shaped, moon goddesses also are considered reapers.

Reap as one sows. Enjoy or suffer the consequences of one's actions.

Reaping. Destruction, harvest, slaughter. Castration, hence the emasculation of old oak gods (such as Cronus) by a successor (such as Zeus).

Reaping hook. Badge of Cronus, Father Time, Saturn. Warriors of Abyssinia carry miniature sickles into battle as charms and to castrate enemies.

Sow the wind and reap the whirlwind. Behave recklessly and suffer the consequences.

REASON Name of a gnostic Aeon. In an Italian icon personified by an armed woman, a crown of gold on her helmet, a drawn sword in her right hand, on her girdle numeral ciphers; she holds a lion's bridle.

Feast of reason. A social entertainment of intellectuals and wits. During the French Revolution various feasts were held in the cathedral of Notre Dame to crown Goddesses of Reason.

Goddess of Reason. An imaginary divinity set up by atheistic French revolutionists. The role was conferred on various young women of questionable repute, who were crowned in turn in rites symbolizing the divine supremacy of wisdom, and designed to displace church rites.

Reason of State. In an Italian icon shown as a warlike woman wearing a helmet, a corselet, and a green petticoat sprinkled with ears and eyes. She carries a club and holds her right hand on a lion's head.

REBECCA (BECK, BECKY, REBA, REBECCA, REBEKAH) (1) Hebrew feminine name meaning charmer, ensnarer, noose. (2) In the Old Testament, wife of Isaac; mother of Jacob and Esau. She typifies a woman who deceived her husband and one son because of her partiality for Jacob. Probably an ancient earth goddess or priestess in orgiastic rites, who favored a light hero, who frequently in mythology plays the part of a trickster. The meeting of Abraham's servant with Rebecca at the well is a celebrated pastoral love story.

REBELLION In an Italian icon shown as a man armed with a javelin wearing a corselet. A cat is the crest on his helmet; he tramples on a yoke and a crown.

REBIRTH See Resurrection.

RECARANUS (GARANUS) Roman creator or recreator. Sun slayer of the robber Cacus. His exploits duplicate those of Hercules (Hercules). Probably an aspect of Jupiter.

RECHABITE Member of an ancient Jewish family, descendants of Rechab. They abstained from wine and the planting of vineyards; hence a teetotaler, a total abstainer.

RECTANGLE Opposition. Among Navaho Indians a female form. See face.

RED Action, anarchy, anger, blood, blush, brilliance, charity, cheerfulness, courage, danger, death, devotion, earth, energy, excitement, fertility, fire, force, fortune, fury, happiness, health, heart, heat, hunting, inspiration, joy, leadership, liberty, life, lightning, love, martyrdom, masculine gender, movement, patriotism, power, primitiveness, revolt, sacrifice, sin, slaughter, stimulation, suffering, sympathy, valor, vigor, war, wildness, wrath, zeal. Debased symbolism: carnal passion, crime, dissipation, lust, vengeance. Typifies first awareness of spiritual love. In art assigned to dawn, love, storm, war deities, to the Devil, and to kings. Represented by the triangle. In astrology dedicated to Mars. Efficacious against evil spirits and ill omens. A health charm, red strings are tied around children's necks to protect them, especially against scarlet fever. Color of magic in folklore, hence worn by fairies. In heraldry called gules, indicated by parallel vertical lines, symbolic of magnanimity and martial fortitude. In music corresponds to the tone C natural. In precious stones represented by carnelian, coral, ruby. In traffic lore signifies stop. The personality traits of those who lean toward red are: crudeness, flirtatiousness, impulsiveness, optimism, thrill seeking. In symbolism a positive color, assigned to the sun. It represents consciousness; opposed to blue. Chinese color of the south influencing the heart and intestines. Typifies Manchuria. Worn by Chinese emperor when worshiping sun. Used for festivities, especially weddings. Christian symbol of Divine love, passion of Christ. Represents the body of man, Hell, Holy Ghost. A cardinal color. Worn in honor of martyrs on Ash Wednesday, the remaining days of Holy Week, and on Pentecost. Egyptian color of north influencing the small viscera. Assigned to men. In England of the middle ages red was applied to gold. The usage survives in thieves' cant, a gold chain being red tackle, a watch being a red kettle. Alchemists called the philosopher's stone the red tincture because, with its help, they hoped to transmute base metals into gold. Hebrew earth symbol; Adam meaning red and earth. Japanese symbol of thunder and virtue. Mayan color of the serpent being. Among North Dakota Indians symbolized stone. Roman emblem of a general.

Caught red-handed. Caught in the act (of committing a crime); originally said of murderers caught with the blood of victims on their hands.

Paint the town red. Create a disturbance, indulge in a spree.
Red badge. Courage.

Red bag. Chinese good-luck bag filled with amulets to drive away evil.

Red ball. Frozen water; used to indicate to skaters the ice is safe.

Red ball express. One-way, high-speed column of trucks which, during World War II, moved supplies of the Allies from Cherbourg to the front.

Red bay. Plant symbolizing love, memory.

Red berries. Sacred seeds, fructifiers. In Baltic mythology the dried tears of the sun. In the East efficacious for healing.

Red bird. In China the Fenghwang or Vermilion Bird, lord of the south, where the fiery element and yang principle predominate. Emblem of summer.

Red blooded. Healthy.

Red Book. In England a book listing all persons in state offices. Originally a royal calendar, a peerage list.

Red Branch champions. In Irish legend sun heroes of Ulster. So called after a room in Conchobar's palace of Emain Macha. Their greatest hero was Cuchulainn.

Red button. In the Chinese empire an emblem of honor which a mandarin wore in his cap.

Red Cap. Badge of fairies in folklore. The Red Cap Sect is the Nying-ma-pa of Tibetan Buddhists.

Red carpet. Auspicious guest, royal welcome.

Red city. City of fallen angels; Hell. In Dante's Inferno abiding place of those whose sins were beastly and malicious, the result of envy and pride.

Red cloth. Talisman to promote abundant harvests and felicity.

Red cloud. In China calamity and warfare.

Red cloud herb. A herb which springs up in China during thunderstorms, thus a gift of dragon (water) gods; life-giver.

Red clover. Emblem of Vermont.

Red cock. In Norse mythology cock in Helheim and of the south, whose fire purifies what is good and destroys what is evil, and who each morning answers the call of Goldcomb, cock of the north, perched on Yggdrasil.

Red Crescent. Moslem badge of military hospital units.

Red Cross. Love and mercy; physical care. Cross of Saint George. Carried by Christian crusaders. Adopted by all, except Moslem, nations as the badge of military hospital services. Emblem of Greece. Also known as Geneva Cross.

Red Cross knight. In Spenser's Faerie Queene a personification of Saint George typifying Christian holiness. In the manner of sun-heroes he married Una, whom he rescued from a dragon (evil).

Red Cross nurse. Heroism, great mother of the world.

Red Devil Tiger. Tibetan Buddhist demon, originally a Pondeity. Shown with a horse's head on a human body. He steps to the left, wears a tiger skin, has a flame aureole, and carries a star in the right hand, a trisula in the left.

Red dragon. In Christian allegory the destroyer, who seeks to conquer the woman (soul) clothed in the sun (righteousness), but is frustrated by Michael (like unto God), signifying what is noble must never yield to the ignoble.

Red face. In a Chinese play represents a sacred person.

Red flag. Anarchy, auction sale, danger, lawlessness, liberty, revolution. In ancient Rome it signified war and a call to arms.

Red flowers. In Japan typify the male.

Red garment. Ambition, indicating heat of blood.

Red hand. Badge of the Red Branch champions and of Ulster.

Red hat. Worn by cardinals, princes of the Roman church, signifies royalty.

Red horse-headed goddess. Tibetan Buddhist goddess of delight.

Red kangaroo skin. In Australian mythology robe in which the sun makes its morning appearance.

Red land. Paradise in Aztec and Egyptian mythologies.

Red lead. One of the eight objects used in Buddhist Man-laritual.

Red letter day. A lucky day, day recalled with delight; in allusion to the printing of holidays in red in almanacs.

Red paper strips. Chinese charm against evil.

Red rag. Cause of irritation, as the red rag to a bull.

Red Riding Hood. See under Little Red Riding Hood.

Red robe. In France conferred on a judge; an honor based on the number of convictions.

Red rose. Motherhood. Emblem of the house of Lancaster.

Red Sea. Salvation, spiritual deliverance; in allusion to the Biblical story in which Jehovah parted the sea to permit the Israelites pursued by Egyptians to pass, and closed the sea on the Egyptians, who drowned. The safe passage of the Israelites coincides with baptism, purification, rebirth. Compare Jumna River, Vitanguhaiti.

Red shirt. Anarchist, revolutionist. From the red shirts worn by Garibaldi's brigade in Italy's struggle for independence.

Red sparrow. In Chinese mythology, Chu-dieu, spirit of the south.

Red speckled by yellow. Life.

Red speckles on yellow. Fire.

Red tape. Excessive adherence to detail or precedent. The allusion is to the red tape with which official documents are tied.

Red, White, and Blue. The United States flag; also the British.

REDEEMER Soul doctor; character in medieval mysteries, who supplanted the medicine man of earlier fertility dramas.

Redemption. In Christian tradition a gradual and progressive process, a slow growth and expansion of man's spiritual faculties.

REDMOND Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning ambition.

REECE Masculine name from the Welsh, meaning a chief.

REED Authority, frailty, instability, literature, marsh, music, slenderness, weakness. Anciently a measuring instrument, hence irrigation, also to acquire, possess, or rule. Used for purposes of divination. A frequent transformation incident in folklore is the tossing away by a fugitive of a reed which grows into a forest and impedes the pursuers, hence divine protection. In African and Indonesian cosmogonic legends the first human pair was made from reeds. In the Celtic tree alphabet the letter pethboc (p). Tree of the twelfth druidic month, from October 29 to November 25. In November the reed was ready for cutting; twelve signified established power; as the reed was used for thatching it signified establishing the house. Central American Indian emblem of Itztlacolihqui. Symbolic of drought, loss of vital warmth and youth. Christian symbol of humility, justice. In Egypt and the eastern Mediterranean an emblem of royalty. In Greek mythology, Prometheus brought fire to mankind in a hollow reed, thus lightning, life. Among ancient Hebrews symbolized fecundity, field, woman, sprinkling.

Broken reed. An untrustworthy support. Isaiah so called the Egyptians.

Bruised reed. Hebrew symbol of a soul crushed and ready to sink in despair.

Golden reed. Glorious possession or rule; permanency.

Reed bouquet. April 4 birthday flower symbolizing fickleness, musical voice. In Egyptian hieroglyphs stands for woman, as the names of women, except those of the queen, were terminated or accompanied by flowers. Also symbolized green things, the woman loved.

Reed circlets. Female principle.

Reed flowering. August 30 birthday flower symbolizing confidence in heaven.

Reed, lily, and oak leaf. In Oriental Christian tradition, man's weakness (reed) transformed through resurrection (lily) into strength (oak leaf).

Reed musical instruments. In China called sheng and symbolizes leaders who gather the people together. Emblem of the phoenix.

Reed shaken by the wind. A person moved by any passing influence.

Reed split. October 16 birthday flower symbolizing folly, indiscretion.

Reed staff. That which will not long support or lend assistance.

Single reed. October 17 birthday flower symbolizing blessedness, complacency, writing.

Thinking reed. Man.

REEL Dance originally performed in honor of the sun. Resolves into ur-eel, i.e. fire lord.

REEM Animal which appeared in crests of ancient kings of Israel; probably a unicorn. Resolves into ur-eem, i.e. sun light.

REFORMATION In an Italian icon a matron plainly dressed holding a pruning hook and a book.

REFRESHMENT Symbolized by a cursive or zig-zag line to represent water, or a fountain, pool, river, sea, well.

REGENERATION See Resurrection.

REGIN (REGINN) Norse celestial smith. In the Volsung Saga son of Hreidmar, brother of Fafnir the strong and Ottar the cunning. He shaped weapons of iron and ornaments of gold and silver. Fosterer of Sigurd. When Fafnir cheated him of his share of the Andvari treasure, he repaired the magic sword Gram (rays) for Sigurd on condition that Sigurd would slay Fafnir. When Sigurd (sun) discovered that Regin (darkness) intended that Sigurd should be killed by Fafnir's poison (frost) so that the treasure need not be shared, Sigurd killed Regin. Regin had both a dwarf and giant form. Usually shown with a forge. In the Nibelungenlied a wonder smith transformed into a dragon because of his evil deeds. With his poisonous venom he tried to kill Siegfried; instead was slain by Siegfried. Equates with Hephaestus, Vulcan.

REGINA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning queen.

REGINALD (REGGIE, REYNOLD) Masculine name from Old English, meaning counsel and rule, strong ruler.

REGION OF BEASTS In Sanscrit Buddhism called Tiryak. In Tibet, Dud-hgro.

Region of demi-gods or titans. In Sanscrit Buddhism, Asura. In Tibet, Lha-ma-yin.

Region of gods. In Sanscrit Buddhism, Deva. In Tibet, Lha.

Region of Hell. In Sanscrit Buddhism, Naraka. In Tibet, Dmyal-wa.

Region of man. In Sanscrit Buddhism, Nara. In Tibet, Mi.

Region of tortured souls. In Sanscrit Buddhism, Preta. In Tibet, Yi-dvag.

REGULUS Literally, little king. Rome hero. Because he had made the supreme sacrifice for his country the gods placed him in the constellation Leo as one of the four royal stars. Ancients divided the heavens into four colures, each watched by one of the royal stars. Compare Curtius, Menoeceus.

REHOBAM (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning freer of the people. (2) In the Old Testament son and successor of Solomon by Naamah, an Ammonitess. Brother and enemy of Asa. A victim of pride. Under him the Jews lapsed into idolatry and, when he claimed tyrannical power, Jeroboam with ten tribes revolted successfully, leaving him only the kingdom of Judea.

REHOBOTH Hebrew name meaning enlargement, room.

REHTIA Literally, rectitude or straightness. Early Italian nature goddess; bringer of good fortune.

REHUA Polynesian heaven-propper. Offspring of Rangi (sky) and Papa (earth), he aided his brother Tu in lifting Rangi off Papa.

REIN Control, guidance, restraint.

Give a loose rein. Give liberty or freedom; metaphor from horse driving.

Hold the reins. Exercise control.

Take the reins. Assume the guidance, set the direction.

REINCARNATION In mythology a form of resurrection and of shape-shifting, which see.

REINDEER North, Paleolithic age. Steeds of Santa Claus. Sacred animal of Finno-Ugrics. After a reindeer has been eaten its bones are buried that the animal may come back to life. See skeleton. Among the Lapps reindeer from the herd of a dead man are sacrificed at his grave, where a funeral feast is held. Some of the meat is left for the corpse; the bones are left to act as the dead man's steed.

REINGA Underworld of the Maori of New Zealand.

REINS Formerly thought to be the seat of emotions, hence affections and passions. Anciently used in divination. Anatomical denomination governed by Libra.

REIS (RAS, RAIS) From the Arabic meaning head. A chief of the Turkish empire; captain of a Nile boat; hence one in authority, a chief, governor, or overseer.

REJECTION Symbolized by a black ball.

Rejected son. In folk legend frequently the fate of a hero, especially a sun hero, who is abandoned, exposed to die, is rescued, and eventually returns to claim his rightful place and fulfil a prophecy. See Abandoned children, Exposed child.

REKH Egyptian eagle or phoenix. Same as the Arabian roc, which see.

REK-NA Siamese ploughing festival at which are fixed bamboo trellises believed to be efficacious against evil. During the ceremonies the agricultural minister wears a heavy costume with an insecurely held waist band. If the garment's waist hangs too low, rains will be scanty; if it is girded too high, flood will ruin the harvest.

RELIGION In an Italian icon portrayed as a veiled woman holding fire in one hand, a book and cross in the other. An elephant is at her side.

RELIQUARY Altar or ritual object. A Buddhist or Hindu caitya or stupa.

REM Literally, to weep. Egyptian fish god who wept fertilizing tears. Identical with Remi, an aspect of Sebek, a crocodile god.

REMEMBRANCE Symbolized by forget-me-not, ivy leaf or vine, lock of hair, rosemary.

REMORA Delay, parasite, sucker. Seamen believed, when fastened to a keel, it kept a ship steady. In heraldry found chiefly on modern blazons in place of the serpent and signifies hindrance, obstruction.

REMPHAN (REPHAN) An ancient deity identified with Satan. Also said to be an idol representing Chiun.

REMUS (REMI) (1) Masculine name from the Latin Remigeus, which may mean a changeling, a protector, or of Gaul. (2) One of the legendary founders of Rome. Twin brother of Romulus, which see. A deity of darkness; killed by his brother. (3) See Uncle Remus.

RENA Feminine name, diminutive of Marianna.

RENAULT (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning the reborn. (2) One of Charlemagne's paladins, better known by his Italian name of Rinaldo. Also Renaud of Montauban or Reynold of Montalban.

RENE Masculine name from the French, meaning warrior of judgment. In feminine form, Renee.

RENENUTET (ERNUTET, RAN-NUT, REMUTE) Literally, raising goddess. Egyptian divine nurse, serpent harvest deity. Her festival was held in April.

RENOWN In an Italian icon personified by a pleasant handsome man in a cloth of gold and purple. He wears a gold chain and a red hyacinth crown, and carries a lighted torch and Heracles' club.

REPHAEL Hebrew masculine name meaning God is healer.

REPHAH Hebrew masculine name meaning healing.

REPHALAH Hebrew masculine name meaning Jah heals.

REPHAIM Literally, giants. In the Old Testament it has two distinct significances: 1- Inhabitants of darkness, ghosts. 2- Giant demons who inhabited Canaan and excelled in crime and violence. As they were overcome by Jewish heroes they are monuments of divine justice. Goliath and Og were of the Rephaim. The term originally may have been applied to powerful antagonists, later to the souls of the dead in Sheol. Also called Anakim.

REPHIDIM Literally, plains. In the Old Testament an encampment of the Israelites, where God gave them water from the rock.

REPOSE Dumbness, silence. Compare motion.

REPRODUCTIVE ORGANS Fertility. Anatomical denomination governed by Scorpio. Sacred to love and mother goddesses. See Eunuch.

REPTILE Healing, regeneration, salvation; thus sacred to Apollo and other healing gods. Typifies one who is coldblooded, groveling, morally contemptible.

Treading on reptiles. In Christian tradition crushing false doctrine.

REPUBLICAN PARTY Symbolized by an elephant; on ballots, an eagle.

RERENGA-WAIRUA In Polynesian mythology the spirit-leap entrance to the underworld. Cliff from which the spirit leaps into the sea. In the otherworld it is welcomed by Te-Reinga and advised that it may never return to life if it eats food there. See Eating.

RERIR In Norse legend grandson of Odin; son of Sigi. Warrior, avenger of his father's death. Probably drought aspect of the sun. Being childless he prayed for a son. Freyja sent Ljod in the form of a crow to drop an apple into Rerir's lap. Rerir gave the apple to his wife, who became pregnant. The child, carried by the queen for seven years, was born after Rerir's death, and named Volsung.

RESEDA Herb symbolizing tenderness.

RESH (RESCH) Twentieth letter of the Hebrew alphabet; equivalent of English R. Its meaning is head or countenance; its numerical value is 200. According to mystics its correspondences are: planetary, Saturn; symbolic, rebirth; tarot deck, Judgment; zodiacal, Gemini. Its direction on the cube of space is south, realm of fruitfulness, with a ruling force; its intelligence is collective. In white magic refers to the animal kingdom, including man.

RESHEPH (RESHEF, RESHEP, RESHIPH-MICAL, RESHPU) Phoenician heaven lord of eternity. God of summer heat, pests, pestilence, and plague. Sometimes he was a sun deity, sometimes one of lightning. As a thunder god he was a warrior. His name signifies fiery bolt or to blaze. Identical with Rakib-El and Shalman. In Canaan he was a death deity also called Mot.

REST HARROW Plant symbolizing obstacle.

RESURRECTION (REBIRTH, RE-INCARNATION) In mythology a dramatization of the cycle of the year (or day), in which the sun dies each winter (or night) and is reborn each spring (or dawn). Among deities who experienced resurrection are: Balder, Christ, Fionn, Gwion Bach, Heracles, Jonah, Krishna, Odysseus, Orestes, Orpheus, Ra. It is the theme of the mother goddess (earth), who destroys her husband-son (fertility) at the summer solstice, seeks him in the underworld, and brings him up into the light at the winter solstice. Some such pairs are: Aphrodite-Adonis, Aruru-Nesu, Cybele-Attis, Innini-Dumuzi, Ishtar-Tamuz, Mama-Shulpae. In religion frequently signifies the purifying transit of the soul through wisdom, the progress of the soul from the bondage of ignorance to the liberty of knowledge. Shape-shifting (see) is a form of re-birth. Dream significance: justice to come. Symbols of resurrection are: blooming plant, especially the lily or lotus; butterfly; cleft pomegranate, crucifixion, eight-sided baptismal font; gnostic letter R on a mountain top; lamb with banner; lion; peacock; pelican; phoenix; pilgrim; Psyche (soul); serpent hanging on a tau-cross or staff; tree; twin circles of light and darkness.

Resurrectionist. Grave robber. One who brings to light anything buried in obscurity.

RETICULUM Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Net.

RETORT AND SCALES Chemist.

RETROSPECTION Symbolized by grey, mirror.

REUBEN (RUBE) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning behold a son. (2) In the Old Testament eldest son of Jacob and Leah. Because he defiled his father's concubine Belhah he lost his birthright and all the privileges of primogeniture were given to his brother Judah. He shared his brothers' jealousy of Joseph. His tribe, never numerous, was symbolized by the mandrake or by a sunburst above water, and was associated with Aquarius.

Reubeni. Hebrew masculine name meaning behold my son.

REUEL Hebrew masculine name meaning friend of God.

REVERSAL OF FORTUNE Supremacy of a new season.

REVERSING GARMENTS A folklore incident in which a wayfarer places his right shoe on his left foot, turns his jacket inside out, etc., to break the spell of a forest being, who has caused him to lose his way.

REVIVING CORDIAL Fairytale name for the water capable of miraculous healing. Fountain of youth; water of life.

REVOLVING CASTLE In Arthurian romances the castle housing the Grail, i.e. windswept skies. Also known as Caer Sidi, Castle of Revelry, Castle of Riches, Four-cornered Castle, Glass Castle, Kingly Castle. Equates with the caldron of inspiration and plenty in Celtic mythology and the omphalos in Greek mythology.

REX Masculine name from the Latin, meaning king.

REX NEMORENSIS In Roman antiquity the priest of Diana. To hold his office he was compelled to slay his rival in a duel after having plucked a certain bough, traditionally the golden bough, an oak branch covered with mistletoe. Aeneas carried the bough with him into the underworld to assure his resurrection. See King of the Wood.

REYNARD (RAYNARD) (1) Masculine name from Old High German, meaning hard counsel. (2) Hero of a medieval beast-epic. He personifies carnal appetite, cunning, trickery, and typifies the church. He bamboozles his uncle Isegrim the wolf, who typifies the barons.

Reynard's glass globe. Gift which Reynard claims he sent the queen, but which never arrives because it does not exist. It supposedly reveals to the owner anything he desires to know. Thus a great promise, but no performance.

RGVEDIC Hindu cloud snake; associated with rivers and streams.

RHABDUS (RHABDOS) In Greek mythology an enchanter's wand, which gave the possessor power over the dead. Eventually carried to exorcise evil spirits. Attribute of Circe and Hermes. Source of the king's scepter.

RHADAMANTHUS (RHADAMANTHYS) In Greek mythology son of Zeus and Europa. Rewarded for the justice he exemplified on earth by being made a judge in Hades. He served after death with his brothers Aeacus and Minos, and typifies one relentlessly just. Compare Rhot-Amenti.

RHAMNUS A seat of worship of Nemesis in ancient Attica.

Rhamnusia. An epithet of the goddess.

RHAMPSINITUS (RHAMPSINITOS) In Greek legendary history a king of Egypt who went into Hades, played dice with the deities, and returned with a great wealth. To protect it he had a treasure vault constructed. The builder inserted one stone which was movable, and passed his secret on to his sons, who looted the chamber. The king set a trap and caught one of the brothers. The other cut off the dead man's head to prevent the king from identifying the body. The king set further snares for the remaining thief, but was outwitted; finally he agreed the thief was the wisest of men and offered him the princess as a wife. A time myth; Rhampsinitus, a fertility lord, brought up verdure from the underworld but lost it in the proper season. Probably a mythical account of Rameses III. Compare Hyrieus.

RHE The Egyptian sun god Ra.

RHEA In Greek mythology daughter of Uranus and Gaea; sister-wife of Cronus; mother of Aides, Demeter, Hera, Hestia, and Poseidon. When Zeus was born, to save him from his father who devoured his children as soon as they appeared, she gave her husband a stone wrapped in swaddling, and entrusted the infant to the Curetes in Crete. When the infant cried she ordered a dance (wind) to drown out the sound. As Zeus was nourished by the she-goat Amalthea, Rhea sprouted her milk into the sky and formed the Milky Way. She was revered as the mother of the gods. A great earth mother, she symbolized the annual revival of nature, and her cult was celebrated in the spring with cymbals and drums. Emblems: animals, fruits, globe, key, moon, serpent, sun, thunderbolt, tree branch. Of matronly appearance she wore a crown of turrets or towers (as nourisher or protector of cities). Portrayed enthroned on a lion, in a chariot drawn by lions, or on a throne with a lion at her feet. Her priests, eunuchs, were called the galli. Her name signifies order of sequence or succession. Also called Acrea. Identified with Cybele, Ephesian Artemis, Magna Mater, Ops.

Rhea Silvia. In Roman mythology daughter of Numitor. Forced by her uncle Amulius to become a vestal virgin. By Mars she became the mother of the twins Romulus and Remus. Because she had violated her oath she was condemned to die, and her sons were exposed. They were suckled by a she-wolf, saved, and avenged their mother. Also called Ilia, Rea Silvia.

Rhea with one pap. Scarcity of nourishment.

Rhea with three paps. Nurse, giver of plenty.

RHETORIC In an Italian icon personified by a pretty woman richly dressed, complaisant, her right hand open as if to emphasize what she is saying. She holds a scepter and a book. On her petticoat is written, "Ornatus Persuasi." Her complexion is ruddy; a chimera is at her feet.

RHIANNON Cymric dawn or moon goddess. Daughter of Heveidd Hen. She rode swiftly past Pwyll (darkness) on a white horse. When he caught her, she agreed to marry him if he would confine Gwawl (light) in a sack. By Pwyll she became the mother on Beltane Day of Gwri, later called Pryderi. Her son was kidnaped the night of his birth. Accused of devouring him, she was condemned to carry visitors on her back from the gate to the palace, thus a mare (earth) goddess, which carries people. Eventually the child was recovered and she and Pwyll were reconciled. After Pwyll's death she married another mortal, Manawyddan. She was the owner of birds (seasons) which awoke the dead and made the living sleep. In one romance she appears as a muse, and sweet singing sirens are called birds of Rhiannon. A goddess who evolved into a medieval enchantress, she was the outgrowth of an early fertility mother Rigantona; in later legend she appears as Nimue or Vivien, the Lady of the Lake.

RHINE DAUGHTERS (RHINE-MAIDS) In German legend three water nymphs, Flosshilde, Wellgunde, Woglinde, who guarded the Rhinegold (fertility).

RHINOCEROS Bulk, danger, insensitiveness. One who is aquatic, keeps his nose to the ground, wallows in mud, is shortsighted, strong, tetchy-tempered, thick-skinned, has stamina. A lover of certitude before believing supernatural things, thus one not easily convinced. In heraldry one who does not seek combat but will fight in defense. In African lore the butt of small animals who outwit him by cunning. Typifies a Buddhist recluse.

Rhinoceros horn. Chinese symbol of bravery, happiness, victory. Anciently used as a drinking cup as it supposedly revealed the presence of poison by sweating. One of the eight ordinary symbols of Chinese Buddhism.

RHO Seventeenth letter of the Greek alphabet with a numerical value of 100. Derived from the Egyptian Ra, it has the same form as the Latin P, and is the equivalent of the English R. Part of the Labarum or Chi-Rho monogram. Symbolizes a pilgrim or staff.

RHODA (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning Rose. (2) In Greek mythology daughter of Poseidon and Amphitrite, for whom the island of Rhodes was named.

Rhodes. Chief seat of the worship of Helios. It was the site of the deity's famous statue, the Colossus of Rhodes, one of the seven wonders of the ancient world, which was destroyed by earthquake in 256 B.C., fifty-six years after it had been constructed.

Citizens on the island were forbidden to shave in honor of the god.

RHODE ISLAND Emblem: violet; motto: Hope; nicknames: Little Rhody, Plantation.

RHODODENDRON October 18 birthday flower symbolizing danger, intoxication. In the language of flowers: Beware, I am dangerous. The name contains the notion of den or stronghold of rose (fire).

Great rhododendron. West Virginia.

Pink rhododendron. Washington state.

RHODOPE Literally, rose face. Greek nymph; also a sacred mountain, where an oracle of Dionysus was located.

RHODOPIS Famous courtesan of Greek antiquity. She was a victim of passionate love. In an unfounded tradition she became the mistress of an Egyptian pharaoh and built the third pyramid.

RHOETUS In Greek mythology one of the most valiant of the Gigantes. In one account he sprang to life when blood of Uranus (sky) fell on Gaea (earth), in another the son of Tartarus and Gaea. He had the legs of a serpent, was a personification of fire, and conspired against Zeus.

RHOMBUS (RHOMB) A fertility charm. Emblem of the regenerative power. Whirled in the air to make a roaring noise which supposedly evoked the Supreme Spirit, who manifested himself in blasts of the wind.

RHOT-AMENTI Osiris as judge in the underworld. Source of the name Rhadamanthus.

RHUBARB May 25 birthday flower symbolizing advice.

RIB Source of womankind, from the Old Testament story of Eve's creation. Humorously, a wife.

RIBBON Award, distinction. Ray of the sun, as when on a Maypole or tambourine. In heraldry a diminutive bend, one-eighth its width; originally bestowed to tournament victors; denotes honor. In Buddhism the sacred ray emanating from the lotus blossom. In China signifies union.

Brightly colored ribbon. Talisman against the evil eye.

Waving ribbon. Pleasure.

RIBHUS (ARBHU, RBHUS, RIBHU) Early Vedic sun deity, later a wind deity, and still later the three skilled artisans of the gods, who individually were Ribhus or Ribhuksan, Vaja, Vibhvan. They were sons of Sudhanvan, dwelt in the solar sphere, and fashioned Indra's chariot and horses (sun and winds), rejuvenated their parents (sky and earth), created a milk-giving cow from a hide (cloud), and divided into four (phases) the drinking cup (moon) of Tvastr. Akin to the European elves; source of the name Orpheus.

RIBIMBI Supreme god of the natives of North Transvaal, Africa. First man; father of Khudjana.

RIBLAH Hebrew place name meaning bare.

RICE Happiness, nourishment. An emblem of fecundity thrown as a benediction upon newlyweds.

Word akin to Eros and rose. In China called fen mi, a monetary standard of trade, symbol of prosperity. In Japan a sacred food received as a gift of the kami; dispeller of evil spirits. In feudal Japan samurai were paid in rice.

Rice cake. In India offered as a substitute for the five-fold human sacrifice. The dry rice typified hair; with water on it, skin; when mixed it became flesh; baked it became bone; off the fire, marrow.

Rice castle. In Japan a hasty construction; to raise a rice castle is to be on the defensive.

Rice Christian. One who converts to Christianity for personal benefits; in allusion to the doles of rice given to converts in India.

Rice mandala. Buddhist ritual altar object used in invoking deities. Offered daily. The rice symbolizes all the continents of the Buddhist universe.

Rice wine. Sacramental wine, wine of salvation.

Three grains of rice. Used in Chinese earth-worship dance to represent the rising, rousing, and increasing sap.

RICHARD (DICK, DICKIE, DICKON, RICH, RITCHIE)
Masculine name from the Germanic through Norman French, meaning powerful and hard, stern ruler.

Richard Roe. An imaginary person or straw man. See under John Doe.

RICHELIEU, CARDINAL (OR DUC DE) Chief minister of France in the reign of Louis XIII. Organizer of espionage. Called Eminence Rouge.

RICH FISHER See Brone, Fisher King.

RICHMOND Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning king protector.

RIDDLE SOLVING A mythological incident typifying the release of fertile waters by a sun deity, as in the Oedipus story. Any difficulty overcome.

RIDGLEY Masculine name from Old English, meaning of the ridge lea.

RIDIJA Ancient Semitic spirit of force, a powerful angel, controller of life-giving rains. Conceived as a calf.

RIDING Accomplishment, adventure, supremacy, triumph.

Joy ride. A pleasure excursion. Suggests impropriety.

Ride a hobby horse. Talk incessantly about one's favorite concern or pursuit.

Ride for (or to) a fall. Ride recklessly; pursue a course which is certain to end disastrously.

Ride not a free horse to death. Don't take unreasonable advantage of favors.

Ride roughshod. Proceed without regard of another's feelings.

Rider upon a horse-fish (half-horse, half-fish). Lord of all knowledge on land and sea.

Rider upon a white horse. Deity messenger; word of God.

RIFLE Hunting, war.

RIG (RIGIR) The Norse god Heimdal in the form of a mortal. He appeared as a wise old man, bold and brave, and a robust walker.

RIGANTONA Early Celtic fertility goddess or great queen; later identified with the Cymric Rhiannon.

RIGHT SIDE Good luck, growth, strength. Dances to the sun or moon were made clockwise, or to the right, to induce prosperity. The right-handed fire-wheel or swastika is a lucky emblem; when left-handed, unlucky. In the cabala the side of benignity, masculinity, wisdom. In politics the conservative part is to the right; the term arose in 1791 in France, and since in continental chambers the conservatives sit to the right of the speaker.

Right foot foremost. Assurance, auspiciousness. To enter a room with the left foot is still considered unlucky. In Roman antiquity a boy was stationed at a mansion's door to caution visitors not to cross the threshold with the left foot, which would constitute an ill-omen.

Right hand. Allegiance, benediction, efficiency, fraternal love, honor, hostility, oath, power. To Hebrews denoted the south.

Right hand man. A confidential and invaluable assistant. Formerly in warfare the cavalryman at the right of the line had duties of grave responsibility.

RIGI Micronesian primordial deity. Born of a rock in the shape of a butterfly. Separator of land and water. Equates with Areop-Enap.

RIGS-BU-MO (RI-BU-MO) Literally, maiden of caste. Rigs-bu-mo and Srog-bdag are Tibetan brother and sister demons.

RIG-VEDA (RIGA-VEDA) Literally, hymns to celebrate or praise. Hindu songs and prayers of dramatic ritual designed to obtain from the gods that which will ensure the well being of the people and the fertility of the land.

RIIHTONTTU Finno-Ugric spirit which steals grain from a neighbor's field and carries it to the threshing barn of the family under its protection. In Swedish, Ritomte.

RIMMON (1) Hebrew for pomegranate, symbol of fertility and life. (2) Babylonian storm and wind deity. God of retributive justice and war. Bringer of corn. His attributes were the hammer and wild boar. Probably a castrated god equating with Adonis. Identical with Adad, Ramman.

Bow to Rimmon. Conform to local customs, palter with one's conscience, succumb to expediency. The allusion is to Naaman, who, in the presence of Ben-hadad, worshiped Rimmon.

RINAGGON Borneo creator bird. With Iri he fashioned animals and plants, and made man from the kumpang, a tree with red sap.

RINALDO One who is ingenious, power hungry, rapacious, unscrupulous, and valiant. From one of the great heroes of medieval Italian romance. Cousin and rival of Orlando, a paladin of Charlemagne, and owner of the marvelous horse Bayardo. In France called Renault.

RIND (RHIND, RINDA, RINDE) In Norse mythology earth's winter queen. One of Odin's wives; mother of Vali. Personification of frost covered earth. In some versions described as a giantess, in others as a mortal.

RING Betrothal, dignity, endlessness, enslavement, eternity, friendship, justice, marriage, mourning, pledge, rank, rectitude, reminder, secrecy, signet. A talisman. In heraldry indicates rank, symbolic of fidelity. In folklore effective in magic to preserve the owner's youth or provide him with marvelous castles, steeds, and other useful things or wealth. In Christianity marriage to the church, badge of ecclesiastical office and of Saint Catherine of Siena.

Ear or nose ring. Indicates that a child's blood has been given in rites to a deity asking for protection.

Fisherman's ring. Pope's ring, because it bears Saint Peter's image.

Gemel ring. A pair or twins. In Mexico a puzzle ring.

Gyges' ring. Talisman conferring the gift of invisibility.

Ring around the moon. In summer an omen of rain, in winter of cold. In Central and Northern Asia the tent with which Moon protects himself from bad weather.

Ring finger. Third finger, especially of the left hand, from the ancient notion that a nerve from this finger ran to the heart.

Ring money. Ring-shaped metal pieces used by ancient Celts as money.

Seal ring. Authority, contract. In Greek and Roman antiquity regarded as a prophylactic charm for maintaining virility. Worn on the thumb, synonym for the phallus and made of iron to compliment Hephaestus (Vulcan), the husband of Aphrodite (Venus).

Seven rings. Emblem of Saint Gertrude of Rodalsdorf.

Signet ring. Identification, seal, trade-mark.

Three rings linked. Emblem of the Oddfellows fraternity; also of Saint Felix of Dunwich.

Thumb ring. Given by the pope to a newly made cardinal; also called papal ring. It contains a sapphire.

Tweed ring. A thieving political combination. From William M. Tweed, political leader in New York City from 1863 to 1871.

Two rings. Chinese emblem of a lohan. Badge of an emperor, who used a perfect one to express his favor, and a defective one, his displeasure.

Two rings linked. The male and female principle, marriage, union. Emblem of Saint Herman-Joseph. Also see Gemel ring.

Wedding ring. Pledge of faith, union. Bondage, reflecting the stone age custom of men binding the ankles and wrists of women and carrying them off, claiming them as wives.

RINGHORN Same as Hringhorn.

RIPHEUS One who is just and noble, in allusion to a Trojan in Virgil's Aeneid.

RIPLEY Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning shouting man's lea.

RIPPLES ON WATER Japanese symbol of the extent of human life.

RIP VAN WINKLE In Washington Irving's Sleepy Hollow a man who, after drinking from a magic keg, falls asleep for twenty years, and awakes to find his wife dead and himself forgotten. Thus one who fails to keep up with his times. Compare Urashima Taro, Years Seem Days.

RISHIS (RSHIS) (1) One of the seven ancient Hindu sages born of Brahma's mind, and who became the seven bright stars of the Great Bear and the husbands of the Pleiades. The constellation is sometimes known as the Seven Ploughing Oxen. (2) Any of the hearers of the eternal voices that communicated the Veda from Brahma to mankind, thus a holy sage or seer. In the epics three types are mentioned: Devarshis, divine rishis, who have acquired perfection on earth; Brahmarshis, sages of the Brahman caste; Rajarsis, sages of the Kshatriya (warrior) caste. In China applied to Taoist sages who had discovered the secret of perpetual youth and remained small or young boys. See Arishis.

RISHYACRINGA An innocent man. From a hero in the Mahabharata. A Brahmin brought up by his father, Vibhandaka, in a lonely forest ignorant of the outside world and even of the existence of human beings other than his father and himself. When a drought falls upon a neighboring kingdom the king learns that so long as Rishyacrinda remains chaste the drought will endure. The boy is abducted and given the king's daughter as a wife. With the consummation of the marriage rains fall and fertility returns to the land. A seasonal myth equated with the story of the Holy Grail and other fertility tales. The forest typifies an after world.

RISS Desolation; third of the four major glacial periods.

RITA (1) Hindu god of cosmic order, ruler of the fundamental and physical law of the universe. A fate deity, ruler of providence. Equates with Dzajaga, Kaba, Moira, Tien-ming. Also Rta. (2) Feminine name, Italian diminutive of Margarita (Margaret, Marguerite).

RITHO In Brythonic legend giant whom Arthur fought. Personification of drought.

RITUAL MURDER See under Murder.

RIVALS In an Italian icon typified by two rams butting one another before a young woman crowned with roses and holding a gold chain.

RIVER Barrier, danger, deluge, divine emissary, feminine principle, fertility, invasion, life, refreshment, peace, succor, terror, wealth. Entrance to the underworld. Rivers, a source of the sun's rising, once were worshiped as sacred symbols of the life-giving sun, and such word roots as exe, iar, isis, ysel, which fundamentally mean fire or light, became generic terms for river. In symbolism the serpent (serpentine) has been confounded with rivers; thus Apollo (sun) may have destroyed at Delphi a harmful or death-dealing river. Small rivers usually were portrayed as youths bearing plants and other fertility emblems; larger rivers were represented as old men. In Pagan Britain rivers were worshiped for their prophetic powers and as bringers of prosperity and victory. Humans were sacrificed to them, later horses were substituted. Christian symbol of saints Christopher and Eustace. In Greek mythology the rivers of Hades are: Acheron, river of stagnant water causing woe; Cocytus, river of ice and lamentation; Lethe, river of oblivion; Pyriphegethon, river of fire and rage; Styx, border river of hate. In the Old Testament the four rivers of Paradise, which symbolize Divine grace, are: Euphrates, Gihon (or Araxes), Hiddekel (or Tigris), Pison (Halys or Phasis). In Zoroastrianism a river of death was formed from the tears which men shed in unlawful lamentation for the departed. Those who during life on earth made an exaggerated and irreligious display of grief were not able to cross it.

River Eridanus. Constellation in the Southern Sky formed by the tears of the Hyades.

River horse. Hippopotamus.

River of heaven. The Milky Way.

River of life. Epithet of Christ.

River thief (or wolf). The pike. Also a pirate who robs river-craft.

RIWALLAUN WALTH BANHAD-LEN In Brythonic legend one of the three men to whom the nature of every object was known. The other two were Gwalchmai and Llacheu. May have personified wind.

RIZPAH Hebrew feminine name meaning variegated. In the Old Testament a concubine of Saul. After Saul's death her two sons, with five others of Saul, were hung and refused burial. Day and night, from May until October, Rizpah watched over their remains, until David gave them an honorable burial. Her story resembles that of Antigone.

RKSAVAKTRADAKINI Buddhist bear-headed witch. Feminine deity of the air capable of conferring superhuman powers on those who invoke her. In usual form yellow with a black bear head. Frequently accompanies Simhavaktra. In Tibet called Dom gdon-can. Compare Dakinis.

ROAD Adventure, difficulty, experience, knowledge, learning, progress. Dream significance: (broad) happiness; (narrow) deceit; (rutty) disagreements. In Christian religious art the road to Calvary or stations of the cross are: 1- Jesus condemned to death; 2- Jesus receives cross; 3- falls under the weight; 4- meets Mary; 5- helped by Simon of Cyrene to carry cross; 6- His face wiped by Veronica; 7- second fall; 8- Jesus speaks to women of Jerusalem; 9- third fall; 10- Jesus stripped of his garments; 11- nailed to the cross; 12- dies.

ROBBER Air or wind deity.

ROBE Concealment, wealth. See garment.

Black robe. Mourning, night, sinisterness.

Flowing robe. Knowledge, peace, wisdom. Stream of consciousness. Costume of beneficent gods typifying firmament, light rays, rivers, winds. Vestment of the Hebrew high priest signifying glory unto the Lord, righteousness.

Robe of gold. Fire of the sun, as the garment which Medea gave to Glauce to bring about her rival's death. In the story of Phrixus and Helle the golden fleece or sun-lit cloud. In Theban story robe smeared with the blood of Nessus to eat into Heracles' flesh.

Robe of gold and blue. Purification, stainlessness. In Freemasonry wedding garment of the spirit.

Robe of velvet and ermine. Rank and glory.

Seamless robe. Infinity, perfection. In Freemasonry the spiral thread of human life. Christian emblem of the Passion.

Somber robe. In Chinese drama a virtuous woman.

The robe. The legal profession. Also the long robe.

White robe. Innocence, virtue.

Yellow robe. Worn by priests of Buddha.

ROBERT (BOB, DOB, DOBBIN, ROB, ROBBIE, ROBIN, RUPERT) Masculine name from the Germanic through Norman French, meaning glory and bright, illustrious in fame. Feminine form, Roberta.

Robert Macaire. Outlaw, thief.

ROBIGUS Roman antagonistic deity. He destroyed herbs with mildew and his wrath could be averted only by prayers and sacrifices when he was invoked under the title Averuncus. Opposed to Flora.

Robigalia. Festival of Robigus, celebrated April 25.

ROBIN Familiar version of Robert. Early meanings of the word were devil and sheep; in Cornwall it means phallus.

Robin Goodfellow. A merry, mischievous sprite; son of Oberon. Each night he does some service for the family under his protection. Later identified with Peck. Inspired by the Roman Faunus. By extension any elf or fairy.

Robin Hood. Legendary English hero; a bold, chivalrous, generous outlaw, who robbed the rich to give to the poor, who brought lovers together, and who generally helped the unfortunate. Originally a beneficent sun or fertility hero, who distributed his gifts to all. He was skilled in archery (his rays always hit their mark), and he and his companions (dew, winds, etc.) haunted Sherwood Forest in Nottinghamshire. According to tradition he was treacherously killed to death (a sun aspect) by a nun at the command of her kinsman, the prior of Kirkless (Churchless). His legend was amalgamated with the May-day revels and morris dances; his sweetheart was Maid Marian. Also called Dikon-Bend-the-Bow and Locksley the archer. Equivalent of Apaharavarman.

Robinhoodism. Community or cultural rebellion; opposed to self-interest, thus opposed to Don Juanism.

Robin Hood's barn. The non-existent; hence 'to go round Robin Hood's barn,' is to attain one's desired ends or arrive at a right conclusion by a circuitous method.

Robin Hood's pennyworth. Sell things at a bargain. As his wares were stolen he could sell them at half their value.

Robin Hood wind. A cold-thaw wind, the only wind he could not bear.

Robin of Bagshot. One with a number of aliases, from the highwayman in Gay's Beggar's opera.

Robin redbreast. Confiding trust, triumph. In British folklore a New Year spirit, who sets out with a birch rod to kill his predecessor, the gold crest wren, which hides in an ivy bush. The Christmas Eve custom of hunting the wren, Old Year spirit, with a birch rod was practiced in ancient Greece and Rome. The robin is called murderer of its father, which accounts for its red breast. In Christian tradition a robin picked a thorn from Christ's crown, and blood fell on its breast.

ROBINSON CRUSOE A shipwrecked man, a solitary man, who shows great ingenuity in providing himself with the necessities of life. From the Defoe hero.

ROB ROY Literally, Robert the red. Nickname of Robert Macgregor, a Scottish freebooter. Called the Robin Hood of Scotland.

ROC (ROCK, RUC, RUKH) Arabian and Persian fabulous bird of the sun; mortal enemy of serpents. Of enormous size and marvelous strength. Same as the Rekh.

ROCK Altar, pillar or axis of heaven, pole star, primal cause, sacrificial table. Aridity, barrenness, determination, difficulty, durability, foundation, immobility, longevity, solidity, sterility. Grinder, weapon of thunder deities; also a primitive weapon, thus symbolizes a civilization which is menacing and destructive. In some mythologies the first mortals were fashioned from a rock. See Lumimu-ut. In heraldry typifies protection, refuge. In China and Japan the positive or male principle. Rock and water (female principle) are blended in gardens. In Christianity typifies Christ. In Hebrew tradition, God, alluding to the rock which sent out water for the people when struck by Moses. In Pacific Island myths earth and deities emerged from a rock thrown from sky into primordial sea. In Persia identified with fire. Mithra is said to have been born on a rock, wedded to a rock, parent of a rock.

Rock crystal. Childlike purity; revealer of the future; talisman against wasting diseases. In Navaho legend jewel of east.

Rock crystal boy. Navaho mind giver to mankind; seer.

Rock of Gibraltar. Hardness, protection, stability.

Rock seat. Center or navel of the universe, omphalos, deity throne, hence used for the crowning of kings as deity descendants.

ROCKET Herb symbolizing rivalry. Sacred to Priapus as god of garden produce.

ROCKING HORSE A journey leading nowhere; folly. The modern toy traces back to the expulsion by a priest, of the Sumerian child-snatching demoness Lamme from the bed of a woman in child-birth. The vampire fled on a galloping ass, which was supported by a serpent shaped into a boat, and carried the witch into the underworld.

ROD Command, correction, light, measurement, phallus, pilgrimage, protection, sovereignty, support. Axis of the universe, pole star. Instrument of divination. The sun's primal energizing and animating force.

Double rod. In China the fang sheng, a demon dispeller.

Flowering rod. Divine will, fecundity. Attribute of Aaron, Jess, Saint Anne, Saint Joseph. Appears as the miphletzeth of the Jews, Hermes' staff of wealth, thyrsus of Dionysus, and with the oval emblem the ankh of Osiris.

Rod-sling. Weapon with which the Irish sun-god Lug performed his feats.

Rod supporting a vine. Defective nature.

ROD AND ROZANICE Russian male and female ancestors; genii of fate; penates. In later belief only the female form, rozanice, survived.

RODERICK (RODERIGO, RODRIGO) (1) Masculine name from Old High German, meaning rich in fame, famous king. (2) Spanish hero, called the last of the Visigoths. He disappeared on a battlefield, but will come again in time of his country's need, thus a sun hero, who does not die, but disappears for a time. Equates with Arthur, Barbarossa. (3) See Cid.

RODJENICE (ROJENICE) Croatian deceased mothers who have become fate genii. Usually three attend the birth of a child and, like the Greek Fates, one spins, one measures, one cuts, the thread of life. Remnants of the christening feast are left for them to win their good favor. Slavic names are sojenice, sudice, sudicky, sudjenice, sudzenici. Equates with Narucnici, Rozanice.

RODNEY Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning standing fair.

ROE Fleetness, gentleness. An epithet of Christ.

White roebuck. Chasing one through an enchanted forest is a favorite theme of fairy tales. Usually a prince in disguise or so transformed by a magician. Its poetic meaning is 'hide the secret' (of life).

ROGER (HODGE, HODGKIN)

(1) Masculine name from the Germanic through Norman French, meaning spear of fame. (2) Circle made with thumb and first finger, meaning everything okay.

Jolly Roger. Pirates' flag of white skull and cross-bones on black.

Roger Bontemps. A fat cheerful companion, always optimistic. From a character in early 19th century popular songs.

Roger de Coverley, Sir. (1) A kind-hearted English country gentleman with simple eccentricities; member of the imaginary Spectator Club; originated by Addison and Steele. (2) English country dance, usually performed to conclude a ball.

ROHINA (ROHINI) Hindu divinity of cows. Daughter of Surabhi. Her color is red to signify health.

ROHITS In Hinduism steeds of the sun. Name suggesting gleaming brown hue. Identical with the Harits.

ROI MEHAIGNE Literally, maimed king. In Grail romances the fisher king. Also called Roi Pescheur (royal fisher).

RO-KU Japanese god of wealth.

ROKURO-KUBI In Japanese legend a neck which extends when a person is asleep to allow a head to turn about in any direction and devour anything it wants, or a neck which permits the head to detach itself and rejoin the body later. The head's bad habit is to drink the night lamp's oil. Usually conceived as female.

ROLAND (1) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning famous in land. (2) A Christian hero in medieval French legend. Nephew of Charlemagne and his greatest paladin. Most famous for his five days' combat with Oliver, another paladin, in which neither gained advantage. He was described as eight feet high, brave, loyal, and simple. He slayed giants (evil, darkness), and while commanding the rear guard he perished. His attributes are those of a sun hero, and he is called Achilles of the West, Christian Theseus. In Italy called Orlando.

A Roland for an Oliver. Blow for blow, matching one impossible story for another, in allusion to the exploits of Roland and Oliver as related by their respective admirers.

Roland's horn. The marvelous Olivant, won from the giant Jutmundus. Symbolic of awakening, warning. In the middle ages an instrument of heresy.

Roland's sword. Durandal or Durindana. It once belonged to Hector; Roland took it from Jutmundus. In its hilt it had a drop of Saint Basil's blood, a hair of Saint Denis, thread of Virgin Mary's cloak, a tooth of Saint Peter. It was unbreakable and, when he knew he was doomed, Roland cast it into a poisoned stream, where it disappeared (thus heaven's light vanished). Equates with Ex-calibur.

ROLF (ROLLO, ROLPH, RUDOLPH) Masculine name from the Scandinavian, meaning glorious wolf.

ROLL Prophecy, wisdom.

ROMA Roman goddess of strength. Daughter of Evander, sister of Dyne.

ROMAN NUMERALS I = 1, V = 5, X = 10, L = 50, C = 100, D = 500, M = 1000. A bar over the letter multiplies it by 1000. For medieval Roman notation see under the letters of the English alphabet.

ROME Holy city, greatest city of the ancient world; according to some named after Roma, according to others, after Romulus. Seat of a secular (king) and religious (pope) chief. Name akin to ram (man). Stands for the modern Christian world. See Damietta. In an Italian icon personified by a helmeted woman holding a spear with a triangular head and a globe on which a long-beaked phoenix stands. A shield and serpent in a circle are at her feet.

All roads lead to Rome. Many are the ways of accomplishment; large or important matters bring other things into relation with them.

At Rome do as the Romans do. Abide by local customs.

Fiddle while Rome burns. Interest oneself in trivialities while great events are taking place.

Roman holiday. Enjoyment whereby others suffer; the allusion is to the gladiatorial sports.

Rome fee. Tax formerly collected in England and sent to Rome, now voluntary. Also alms fee, Peter's pence, Rome penny, Rome shot.

Rome was not built in a day. Great achievements take time and perseverance.

To sit at Rome and strive with the pope is ill. Don't tread on the corns of one with whom you are in close association, especially if he is powerful.

ROMEO Masculine name from the Italian Roma and Romulus. Shakespeare made the name synonymous for lover.

Romeo and Juliet. Legendary tragic lovers who resemble Nase and Aze, Pyramus and Thisbe.

ROMOLA Feminine name corresponding to the Italian Romolo or Romulus.

ROMOVE TREE In Prussian mythology the holy oak sacred to three gods; Perkunas, sky god, before whose division a perpetual fire burned; Potrimp, river god, before whose division was a snake; Patollo, underworld god, before whose division were the heads of a cow, horse, and man.

ROMULUS In Roman mythology born at Alba Longa, the son of Mars and Rhea Silvia. Because her uncle Amulius had been warned his death would come at the hands of her sons, Romulus and his twin brother Remus were set adrift on the Tiber. They were suckled by a she-wolf, fostered by Faustulus, a shepherd, and lived to fulfil the prophecy and restore their grandfather Numitor to his throne. The brothers founded Rome. When Remus contemptuously leaped over the city's walls, Romulus killed him and remained the solitary ruler of Rome until he vanished in a storm, was taken to the heavens by his father, and worshiped under the name Quirinus.

Romulus personified light, Remus darkness. Doublets of the Palici and of Pelias and Neleus. See Exposed child.

We need no Romulus to account for Rome. We need no mythical person to account for a plain fact.

RONA In Maori mythology a girl who went to fetch water and was carried off by the moon. The tree she held onto was torn up by its roots, and Rona, her water gourd, basket, and tree are in the moon. In another version Rona is a man who reached the moon in pursuit of his wife. He causes the moon to wane by eating it, in turn being devoured by the moon, both being restored to life from time to time. Compare Hyuki and Bil.

RONALD Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning joyous, and from the Scandinavian, meaning counsel.

RONGO (RONG-MA-TANE) Polynesian deity, offspring of Rangi and Papa. An agricultural god. In Mangaian myth his three sons and their wives are said to be the ancestors of mankind.

RONGOTEUS (RUNKATEIVAS) Finno-Ugric rye god. Later, as Rukotivo, he appeared beside Saint Stephen as ruler of horses.

RONIN See under Forty-seven Ronin.

ROOD Christian symbol of affliction.

ROOF Heaven, shelter. See house.

ROOK Egyptian symbol of marriage. When dead symbolized sunset, the natural end.

ROOSTER See cock.

ROOT Foundation, producer and bearer.

Root of Jesse. See under Jesse.

ROPE Betrayal, bondage, despair, force, persuasion. Cosmic band, divine power, ray, uniter of all things. Road or ladder to heaven paralleling the spider's thread. Dream significance: fetter; if on a person typifies subject condition. Ursa Major is the rope of heaven. In Buddhism typifies meditation. In Japan called shinenaka and sanctifies a place, alluding to Shiri-kumena-nawa (don't-retreat-rope). Hung at the New Year to avert evil. See Sacred thread.

Rope of Ocnus. See under Ocnus.

Rope with noose. Remorse, threat of hanging. Emblem of Saint Charles Borromeo.

RORIK In Danish legend son of Hrothgar. Personification of dew.

RORY Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning red.

ROSABEL Feminine name, invented from rose, modeled on Christobel, meaning beautiful rose.

ROSALIE (ROSALIA) Feminine name from the Latin through the French, meaning festival of roses. Also a combination of rose and lily.

ROSALIND Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning horse and serpent.

ROSALINE Feminine name, meaning rose alone.

ROSAMOND (ROSAMUND) Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning horse and protection, famed protection.

ROSARY Book of the unlettered, devotions, meditations, perfection, time reckoner. Buddhist non-tantric symbol. Called mala, and made of coral, human bones, holy lama bones, seeds, skulls, snake vertebrae, turquoise, etc.

ROSCOE (ROSS) Masculine name from a family name, from a place name, and from the Teutonic, meaning swift horse.

ROSE (1) Feminine name alluding to the flower, likewise from the Germanic, meaning horse. Also Rosa, Rosetta, Rosina, Rosita. (2) Beauty, bliss, elegance, flame, fragrance, frailty, joy, life, love, pleasure, pomp, praise, prayer, pride, secrecy (hence sub rosa), silence, star, sun, wine, wisdom, woman. The number five inasmuch as the wild rose has five petals. Dream significance: (given) sympathy bestowed; (received) worldly success. Badge of the Occident as the chrysanthemum is of the Orient. Emblem of England and the Tudors. Word equating with Eros, Horus, iris, rhoss (horse), urus (great bull), and yielding fire essence. Arabian masculine symbol. Christian symbol of charity, divine love, forgiveness, martyrdom, mercy, victory. In medieval art supplants the lily in signifying heavenly bliss. Supplies the three chaplets of the rosary, the green for joy; the thorn, sorrow; the rose itself, glory. On tombs of martyrs symbolizes resurrection. Attribute of Christ, Mary, Sophia, and saints Catherine, Dorothea, George, Herman-Joseph, Rosa di Viterbo, Rosalia of Palermo, Rosaline of Provence, Rose de Lima, Therese, Vincent. In the Hebrew cabala, unity. In Italy, Cinderella is called Rosina (Little Rose). Roman symbol of victory.

American Beauty rose. District of Columbia.

Austrian rose. October 19 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: You are all that is lovely.

Bridal rose. April 26 birthday flower symbolizing happy love.

Burgundy rose. August 1 birthday flower symbolizing simplicity, unconscious beauty.

Cabbage rose. Ambassador of love.

Carolina rose. May 30 birthday flower symbolizing love is dangerous.

Celestial rose. Dante's rose of paradise. Angels flit in and out of the flower like bees. The flower is divided down the middle and across; on one side the male, on the other side, female saints. Below the horizontal division are the souls of beatified children.

Cherokee rose. Emblem of Georgia.

China rose. October 14 birthday flower symbolizing grace, beauty always new.

Christmas rose. December 25 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: relieve my anxiety. Also called poinsettia.

Daily rose. June 4 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: I aspire to your smile.

Damask rose. August 2 birthday flower symbolizing bashful love. In the language of flowers: You are young and brilliant.

Dog rose. Pleasure and plain.

Falling rose. Divine love.

Full blown rose. Beauty, engagement.

Golden rose. A rose blessed by the pope and sent by him on the 4th Sunday in Lent to a church, community, philanthropist, or ruler; thus symbolizes joy, church blessing. In Hungary, Cinderella is traced by a golden rose on the gatepost of the house she entered.

Guelder rose. September 29 birthday flower symbolizing age, winter, young though old. Also called love rose.

Hundred-leaved rose. August 5 birthday flower symbolizing dignity, pride.

Jacqueminot rose. In the language of flowers: I am true.

Japanese rose. January 7 birthday flower. Beauty is your only attraction.

Lancaster rose. June 5 birthday flower. Marriage, union.

Little black rose. Ireland.

Maiden blush rose. If you love me you will discover it.

Maréchal Niel rose. Yours, heart and soul.

May rose. May 3 birthday flower. Precocity, vigor.

Moss rose. August 3 birthday flower. Superior merit, voluptuous love.

Moss rosebud. Love confession.

Multiflora rose. January 2 birthday flower symbolizing grace.

Mundi rose. October 12 birthday flower symbolizing variety, stating: You are merry.

Musk rose. Capricious beauty.

Pompon rose. Gentility, prettiness.

Red and white rose. Unity.

Red-leafed rose. Beauty, prosperity.

Red rose. October 13 birthday flower. Admiration, blushing, death, desire, embarrassment, martyrdom, motherhood, passion, shame. Badge of the house of Lancaster. Emblem of Adonis, Aphrodite, Sappho, Venus. Christian symbol of vanities of this world.

Red rosebud. July 7 birthday flower. Pure, inclined to love. You are young and beautiful.

Rock rose. December 16 birthday flower. Security.

Rose arbor. Shelter.

Rose between two thorns.

A beautiful woman between two men.

Rosebud. Hope, promise, youthful beauty.

Rose bush. Deity abode, home.

Rose colored spectacles. Favorably disposed; optimistic.

Rose crown. Reward of virtue.

Rose followed by a cross. Secret of immortality.

Rose garden. New Jerusalem.

Rose garland. Blissful soul, heavenly joy, rejoicing in Christian faith. Angel wreath. Attribute of Saint Cecilia, also of Cupid and Eros.

Rose in full bloom over two buds. Secrecy.

Rose leaf. You may hope. Devotional beads originally were made of rose leaves, hence rosary.

Rose of Sharon. Fertility, heavenly bride, Israel, bride of Solomon. Name applied to Virgin Mary; a mystical epithet of Christ. See Androgynous deities.

Rose on a cross. Death of Christ.

Rose quartz. Remembrance in prayer.

Rose Red. Heroine of German folklore akin to the mythological dawn goddess. Compare Snow White.

Rose rosette. Star, wheel of the universe. In Buddhism, knowledge, law, path of order, the three together signifying truth. Typifies the lotus. In Mohammedanism sign of the seven names of Allah.

Rose thorn. Death, pain. Christian symbol of sin.

Rose window. Eternity. A wheel window; see wheel.

Rose wreath. Heavenly joy.

Rosy fingers. Dawn. Eos.
Silver rose. Abode of the Hindu Brahma.

Thornless rose. Early attachment, ingratitude.

Unique rose. Call me not beautiful.

White rose. July 8 birthday flower. Abstract thought, purity, silence, spirituality, virginity. I am worthy of you. Badge of the house of York.

White rosebud. July 6 birthday flower. A heart ignorant of love.

White rose dried. Death preferred to loss of innocence.

White rose withered. Transient impression. I am in despair.

Wild rose. Charming simplicity. Emblem of Iowa, New York, North Dakota.

Withered rose. April 20 birthday flower. Departed loveliness.

Yellow rose. February 2 birthday flower. Infidelity, jealousy. Let us forget.

York and Lancaster rose. A red and white rose. Conflict. Civil War.

ROSEANNA Feminine invented name combining Rose and Anna, hence rose of grace.

ROSEBAY Beware.

Rosebay willow herb. Celi-bacy.

ROSE CAMPION October 20 birthday flower symbolizing gentleness.

ROSEMARY (1) Feminine name alluding to the flower. (2) January 17 birthday flower symbolizing affectionate remembrance. Hung in Christian churches as an emblem of hospitality to welcome elves and fairies at Christmas. Nativity of Christ, healing.

ROSH CHODESH Literally, head of the month. First day of every Jewish month; day of the new moon. Also the last day of each month containing 30 days.

ROSH HASHANAH Jewish New Year. Commemorates the sacrifice of Isaac, birth of Judaism. Its emblem is the shofar.

ROSICRUCIAN Member of a secret society of religious reformers who supposedly had knowledge of the philosopher's stone, the prolongation of life, the transmutation of metals, the art of magic, and the ability to discover what was passing in distant places. Symbolized by a cross formed of roses. Name used as a talisman.

ROSINANTE (ROCINANTE, ROZINANTE) Raw-boned steed of Don Quixote, hence any ill-looking riding horse. Its name implies it had risen from a low state to a high one, for it once was a cart-horse and became the charger of a knight-errant.

ROSKVA Literally, the vivacious. With Thjalfi a servant of Thor. She was the daughter of Orvandel, a husbandman. An aspect of wind.

ROTARIAN Member of the Association of Rotary Clubs, which endeavors to promote friendliness and civic interest. Frequently satirized.

ROUNDNESS Heaven, joyousness, voluptuousness. Compare Miryek.

Round-barrow burial. Fertility rite.

Round bread or cake. Fertility, light. Form of the Christian eucharistic wafer. Egyptian ceremonial food provided to the dead; offering to the sun deity.

The Hebrew mazzoth or sacred bread, which was symbolized by a round object. See cake.

Round dance. Performed in honor of the sun, the fertility power, or to help lead the sun on its way. A form of sympathetic magic.

Round face. Among Navaho Indians represents a male deity.

Round figure. The earth, the passive principle. The Greek cteis, Hindu yoni, miphletzeth of Asherah.

Round Table. Fabled to have been made by Merlin for Uther Pendragon, father of Arthur, who gave it to King Leodegrance, who gave it to Arthur when the latter married Guinevere, the king's daughter, typifying the cycle of the seasons. It seated 150 knights (stars). All but twelve of the seats were filled by Leodegrance and Merlin. The vacant twelve were left for those who proved worthy. One seat, siege perilous, brought death to any knight who sat upon it unless he was spotlessly pure and his achievement of the Grail was certain. The pure knight was the spring (innocent) sun which brought about regrowth. The table was round because, as earth nourished by an impartial sun, it provided fertility to all alike, the just and unjust. Some held it was created round to prevent quarrels about precedence, thus perfect equality. Equates with Caer Sidi, Omphalos, and reflects the Sangraal.

Round table conference. A conference held by political parties in which each has equal authority.

Round Table knights. Knights of King Arthur's court. Twelve held positions of honor, typifying the stations of the zodiac. They are given as: Galahad the chaste; Gareth the big-handed; Gawain the courteous; Kay the boastful and rude; Lamoracke, Lancelot, Tristram, the three bravest; Mark the dastard; Modred the traitor; Palomides the unbaptized Saracen; Tor the first made. The twelfth may be any of the following: Sirs Acolon, Ballamore Beleobus, Belvoare, Bersunt, Bors, Ector de Maris, Ewain, Floll, Gaheris, Galohalt, Grislet, Lionell, Marhaus, Paginet, Pelleas, Percival, Sagris, Superabilis, Turquine.

Round towers. Celtic belfries which summoned to prayer, were burial monuments for the illustrious, pillars for keeping sacred fires alive, strongholds, watch towers. Symbolic of creative force, immortality, phallus, protection, refuge, shrine.

ROWAN (1) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning the famed. (2) Tree symbolizing beauty, hospitality, protection. Also called mountain ash, quickbeam, quicken. Irish tree of life. Charm against bewitchment, thus used for horse whips. Consulted in divination. Kindled by druids to summon spirits to take part in battle. In the tree alphabet, tree of luis (L) and of the second month, January 22 to February 18. It marked the quickening of the year, the first of the quarter days on which British witches celebrated their sabbaths. According to the Finno-Ugrics it repels evil spirits, thus anyone lost in a forest sleeps under a rowan. In Norse legend called Thor's deliverer, because he pulled himself from the flooding Vimur by clutching a rowan branch.

ROWENA Feminine name from the Celtic, meaning white-maned.

ROWING Ambition, contest, endeavor. Dream significance: aim attained.

ROXANA (ROXANE, ROXY)

Feminine name from the Persian, meaning dawn of day.

ROY Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning red. Often confused with French roi, meaning king.

ROYALTY Symbolized by crown, ermine, fleur-de-lis, lily, lion, orb, purple scepter, seal, throne.

Royal disease. Hemophilia, so called because it was transmitted by Queen Victoria of England.

Royal marriage. Ritual death and rebirth in which names are changed, as when Jacob married Rachel he became Ish-Rachel or Israel, i. e. Rachel's man.

ROYCE Masculine name from the French and Latin, meaning king's son.

ROZANICE See Rod and Rozanice.

RSABHA In Jainism the first tirthakara. He lived in the first age, when land was level, men were all good and strong and lived to be very old, receiving from wishing trees whatever they needed.

RSIS Same as Rishis.

RTUS Hindu deities of the seasons. Equate with the Horae.

RU (RUU) Polynesian deity. Offspring of Rangi and Papa. A heaven-proper. Compare Tu.

RUACH (RVCH) (1) In the cabala the second degree of the soul, the mind, seat of the knowledge of good and evil. Associated with the number five. Hebrew word signifying life principle, breath, equivalent of English spirit, Greek pneuma, Sanscrit prana. (2) In Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel the isle of winds, where the people live on winds of flattery, hope, and promises. The poor are the ill-fed.

RUADAN In Irish mythology son of Bres and Brigit. Half giant and half god. He was sent as a messenger by the Fomors to spy on the Tuatha De Danann and was killed by Goibniu. To mourn him his father and mother invented the keening. Probably a wind deity.

RUAHAKU Society Islands sea god, who was asleep when a fisherman entangled his hook in the god's hair. In revenge the god caused the flood.

RUAUMOKO Polynesian malevolent still-born deity. Now and then he struggles for light and air and causes earthquakes and volcanoes.

RUBBER BALL One who is tossed about and lacks the power or the will to resist.

Rubber on water. Rubber being a milk-yielding tree, rubber on water symbolizes foam or celestial milk.

RUBEZAH German mountain sprite. Usually assumed the form of a grey monk. Helpful to the needy, dangerous to the proud and rich. In Britain called Number Nip.

RUBICON River which separated Cisalpine Gaul, province allotted to Julius Caesar, from Italy. By crossing it under arms Caesar became an invader of Rome. By extension any border or limit.

Cross the Rubicon. Take a decided step or irrevocable course of action.

RUBY July birthstone. Beauty, Emblem of Tyche.

charity, daintiness, dignity, happiness, light, love, passion, power, rashness, royalty. Dream significance: unexpected guest. Emblem of summer. Health charm, and placed by primitive peoples under a warrior's skin. It supposedly dispels discord and sadness, preserves from false friendships, and fades to warn wearer of approaching danger. Associated with the holly flower; governs the zodiacal Leo. Called the lampstone, pigeon's blood. Ruby resolves into ur-ube, which yields fiery orb. Christian symbol of divine love. In Egyptian antiquity placed in the Pharaoh's scepter to represent the uraeus.

Star ruby. Success in danger.

RUCHT In Irish legend the devoted swineherd of the fairy king Ochall Ochne. Believing the false gossip of those who desired to stir them into a quarrel, he and Friuch became enemies. He was able to change his shape at will, and in each form battled Friuch, who also changed his shape. In the form of a worm, Rucht advised Queen Medb to wed Ailill; the next day Medb's kine swallowed the worm and as a result bore Findbennach (White-horn bull), who joined the herds of Ailill. The Findbennach and the Donn, the brown-bull form of Friuch, caused the War of the Bulls in Ireland. The changes were those of the seasons, which battle each other.

RUDBECKIA October 11 birthday flower symbolizing impartiality, a pure mind.

RUDDER Authority, guide, moderation, prudence, wisdom. Divine will, universe pilot. At-tribute of Nemesis.

Rudder with wheel. Chance.

RUDIGER In the Nibelungenlied, Etzel's vassal margrave. He dies fighting while carrying out a promise unwillingly made to Etzel's queen Kriemhild. Probably a light deity. Sur-named the Good.

RUDIOBUS Celtic horse god.

RUDOLPH (DOLPH, RALPH, RANDAL, RANDOLPH, RODOLPHUS, ROLLO, ROLPH, RUDOLPHUS) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning famous wolf.

RUDRA Literally, to weep and run. Hindu storm and lightning god. By Prsni father of the Maruts or Rudras. Other consorts are Ambika, Durga, Parvati, Rudrani, Uma Haimavati. His abode is in the north where he is chief of dead spirits. In fierce aspect he is feared as a deceiver, master thief, and for his death-dealing tempestuousness. When appeased he becomes healer and provider of fertility. In late myths identified with Siva. Under the name Mrgavyadha (piercer of Mrga), he mutilates Prajapati. He also bears the name Tryambaka (three-eyed), denoting a descent from three mothers, presumably the triple division of the universe. Portrayed with braided hair and a brown color. Prototype of Hermes, Typhon.

Rudrani. Storm goddess; spreader of disease, fright, and death.

RUDYARD Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning of harsh fame.

RUE January 18 birthday flower symbolizing grace, mercy, pity, purification; also bitterness, changeable disposition, disdain. Talisman against evil; antidote against madness.

RUFUS Masculine name from the Latin, meaning red-haired.

RUINS Death, destruction, mortality. Ancient greatness. Course by which time is measured.

RUKH Same as Roc.

RUKMINI In Hinduism the wife of Krishna. She refused to survive his death and perished by fire beside him. Personifies gloaming.

RUKSH (RUKUSH) Marvelous horse of the Persian hero Rostum.

RULE (1) Measuring device symbolizing choice, knowledge, quantity, reason, standard. In Freemasonry a working tool of a past master, symbolic of observance of duty and virtue, view of eternity. (2) Constellation in the Southern Sky also called Level, Norma, Square.

RULER For titles of rulers see under Titles.

Co-rulers. In legend usually represent twins who personify light and darkness, different phases of light, or different seasons. See Eteocles-Polynices, Pelias-Neleus, Romulus-Remus.

RUMOR In an Italian icon personified by a man in a coat of mail of various colors throwing darts.

RUMPELSTILTSKIN (RUMPELSTILZCHEN) A deformed dwarf who made an agreement with the bride of a king to spin straw into gold, required of her by the king. In return she was to give her first child to the dwarf unless she guessed his name within a month. She succeeded and the dwarf disappeared. A fertility myth, the bride typifying the spring maid, the gold verdure, over which the dwarf was lord. See Name.

RUNE Literally, secret, whisper. Anglo-Saxon and early Germanic peoples used as a talisman to bring success in love, protect a warrior, still storms, ward off evil. Placed under a dead man's tongue to give him the power to speak prophecies. Odin hung runes on the Yggdrasil tree to search out universe secrets.

Runic knot. Interlaced ornament placed as a charm on jewels.

Runic letters and their prophecies: Fehe: love; feoh: good luck; gilch: wealth; hagale: misfortune; kinda: fire; minna: admiration; tac: death; tyr: fidelity.

RUOTTA Among the Lapps an evil spirit who pierced the womb of a woman if proper sacrifices were not made to him.

RUPE In New Zealand mythology a pigeon which aided Maui in fishing up land from the bottom of the sea.

RUPERT (1) Masculine name. Variant of Robert through the Germanic. (2) In German folklore a masked man in high buskins, white robe and wig, who distributes Christmas presents. The name has been given to the horseman in the May Day pageant. Also Knecht Ruprecht.

RUSA Ancient Arabian fate and mother goddess. A title of Al-lat; identical with Arsa.

RUSALKA (RUSALKY) One of a class of Russian water nymphs that love men and entice them to her. The Rusalkas are said to be the souls of children who had died unbaptized. They have long wavy green hair. By Lapps called Saiva-neida (sea-maid).

RUSH April 2 birthday flower symbolizing docility, quietness.

Friar Rush. Mischievous spirit in German folklore. He led friars and monks into wickedness. Also Bruder Rausch, i.e. intoxication. Resembles Robin-Goodfellow.

RUSSELL Masculine name derived from the French roux (red) and the Latin, meaning rusty-haired. In early England the red fox was called russel.

Russell Square. A residential square in London, in the 19th century noted for its homes of the wealthy.

RUSSET Earth, filth, gluttony, heat, oppression, violence. Color of Set or Typhon.

Russet garment. Corrosion of a good reputation.

RUSTAM (RAODHATAKHMA, RUSTEM, RUSTUM) Legendary Persian hero. Son of Zal, from whom he received Sam's club (mace of Keresaspa). Even in childhood his exploits were marvelous. He wore impenetrable mail, and his weapons never missed their mark. Only a thorn could slay him. In his old age in single combat he killed his son, whose birth had been concealed from him. Thus a noon-day sun, which killed the morning sun, paralleling the story of Cuchulainn and Conlaoch. His steed was Rakhsh. In the Avesta known as Frangrasyan.

RUT-AIMO (RUTA-AIMO) Among
1355

Lapp Christians, Hell, abode of Rutu, torturer of the dead. Opposed to Radien-aimo. Compare Manala, Tuonela, Yabmeaimo.

RUTH (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning beauty, female friend. (2) In the Old Testament widow noted for her devotion to her mother-in-law, whose kinsman Boaz she married to become the ancestress of David and Jesus.

RUTHERFORD Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning high-spirited.

RUTJA'S (TURJA'S) RAPIDS Finnish river of the dead which swallows up all rivers. Its nature is that of a flaming vortex or maelstrom.

RUTU (ROTA) Lapp spirit of plague to whom offerings were made during epidemics. His hound was a wolf. After Christian times the Devil.

R.W.M. Masonic designation for Right Worshipful Master, the sun in the solar system and the heart in every living body.

R.W.G.M. Right Worshipful Grand Master.

RYE GRASS February 18 birthday flower symbolizing vice.

RYENCE King of Ireland, knight of the Round Table. In some accounts father of Guinevere. Also described as a Welsh king, an enemy of Arthur. A deity of darkness or winter.

RYMENHILD Fairytale princess beloved by King Horn.

RYNYS-AIKA Russian threshing-barn spirit. Identical with Obinmurt.

RYOJUSEN In Japanese Buddhism, Vulture Peak where Sakyamuni preached. A paradise. In Sanscrit, Grdhra-Kuta.

RYO-TO-BIN Japanese sage of the middle heaven.

RYU-WO (RINJIN, RYUGIN, RYUGIN SAMA, RYUO KYO) Japanese sea dragon, ruler in Ryugu. King of rain and storms. A noble being whose benevolence is often frustrated by the ignorance of those around him and he is led into war with the heavenly gods. His chief messenger is Hakuja or Ryuja. Portrayed with a human body, a serpent in his crown. Compare Wata-tsu-mi. Parallels Sagara.

S

S Nineteenth of a class or series; eighteenth if the letter J is not counted. The rising sun; Sanitas (health); Spiritus (Holy Spirit); the twisted serpent of wisdom; the wheel of fortune. Talisman against fire, usually in swastika form. Occult significance: protects or cures; its period is for one year. Character traits: amiability, courage in adversity, modesty, thoughtfulness. Numerical value one or nineteen, the one and nine being digit extremes typifies beginning a new cycle, man's striving toward highest aspirations. Physical weak spot: lungs. Tarot deck correspondence: sun. Zodiacal correspondence: Pisces or Cancer. Among Hebrew cabalists the traits are: cheerfulness, intelligence, love of home. In low form: debauchery, despair, failure. In medieval Roman notation 70; with a dash over it 70,000. Equates with Arabic sin, Celtic saille (willow tree), Egyptian hieroglyph chair-back(s) or flood (sh), Greek sigma, Hebrew samech (prop). See Alphabet Affiliations.

SS. Sanctus Spiritus.

SSS. Sanctus! Sanctus! Sanctus! Corresponds to triple rays. Called S knots or three Solomons. When traversed by a straight line the Holy One, and corresponds to the zizzag of effulgence.

S traversed by T. Christian symbol of Spiritus and cross. Deteriorated into the dollar sign.

SAALAH Arabian demon who entices people into forests for the purpose of tormenting them. His form is hideous.

SABAGA Yakut mother of fire, spouse of Ulakhany.

SABAOTH Title of Jehovah as Lord of Hosts. His festival was the Sabbath.

SABAZIUS (SABAZIOS) Phrygian or Thracian god of moisture and vegetation. His symbol was a snake. Name derived from words for beer and health. In later myths identified with Dionysus and less frequently with Zeus. Probably identical with Sabaoth.

Sabazia. Nocturnal orgiastic mysteries, in which the raw flesh of a bull, goat, or human was eaten. The rites honored Sabazius.

Sabazian Dionysus. Represented with bull's horns because he was the first to yoke oxen for agriculture.

SABBAT In medieval demonology a witches' Sabbath. A nocturnal assembly in which demons and sorcerers celebrated their orgies. Convoled by Satan and held in remote regions, as on the Broken in Germany.

SABBATH Festival of Jehovah Sabaoth. Celebrated every seventh day. Designates completion (of creation), rest from work. It appears to have originated in moon worship connected with the god Sin and was a day of danger, hence a cessation from activities. The term now is applied to any day or period of rest.

Sabbath day's journey. About one mile. Among ancient Jews no journey was permitted on the Sabbath longer than the distance from the ark to the camp's border.

Sabbatical pool or river. A well or stream which flowed only on the Sabbath. According to some it rested on the Sabbath.

Sabbatical year. Among ancient Jews every seventh year, in which lands were allowed to remain fallow.

SA-BDAG Tibetan spirits. Earth-movers, who inhabited houses, lakes, the soil, springs.

SABER See sword.

SABINA Feminine name from the Latin, signifying Sabine woman. The Sabines were an ancient Italian people conquered by the Romans. In legendary history Romulus instigated the rape of the women. He needed wives for his men, and solved his problem by luring the male population away and telling the soldiers to help themselves to virgins.

SABITU Babylonian sea lady, who ruled the land along the sea of death.

SABRA (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning to rest. (2) Legendary daughter of the Egyptian king Ptolemy. Saint George rescued her from a dragon and married her. She is described as a perfect citizen, daughter, and wife, saintly in character. She gave birth to triplets named Alexander, David, and Guy. She died from pricks of a thorny brake.

SABRINA Poetical name of the Severn River. In British legend the daughter of Lochrine and Estrildis. Lochrine's jealous queen Guendolen got an army together and overthrew her husband. Sabrina fled and jumped into the Severn. Nereus took pity on her and made her goddess of the river.

SACAEA Ancient five-day Babylonian New Year festival associated with Anaitis, and taken over by the Persians. It was characterized by license and mockery, also a reversal of usual customs. Slaves ruled their masters for the period of the festival, and a mock king was chosen from criminals. They were feasted and honored for five days; then executed, a substitute for the sacred king, who was supposed to die each New Year, when a new king was born. See Surrogate.

SACAJAWEA A woman guide, alluding to the Shoshone Indian woman who guided Lewis and Clark in their northwest expedition.

SACAR Hebrew name meaning hired.

SACCO BENEDETTO (SAN BENITO) From the Spanish, meaning blessed sack or cloak. A yellow linen robe with a design of two crosses painted over with flames and devils. Supplied by the Spanish Inquisition to those who went to the stake. Persons who expressed repentance wore the robe for a stated period with the flames pointing downward. The robes worn by Jews, renegades, and sorcerers had a Saint Andrew's cross in red on back and front.

SACHEM Hereditary chief in a North American Indian tribe. By extension a governor or leader. Sometimes grand sachem.

SACI Brazilian Negro woodland dwarf spirit. A trickster hero.

SACK Pilgrimage, plunder, riches, spoils of war, treasures. Holder of winds. Emblem of Aeolus, Saint Felix of Cantalicio.

Sackcloth. Affliction, bereavement, death, penitence, sorrow. Among Jews of antiquity an act of ancestor worship, worn as a mourning costume to atone for the dead or to symbolize attachment to the dead, who then are expected to exercise influence to aid the mourner. Prophets were often clothed in sackcloth; later associated with false prophets or deceivers. See Fasting, Self-mutilation, Shoe removal.

Toy sack. Emblem of Hotel, Santa Claus.

Wheat sack. Intelligence, prudence, wealth.

SACRAMENT Originally a Roman oath taken by soldiers not to abandon their general, desert their standard, or turn their back on the enemy. Early Christians used the word to signify sacred mystery. The seven sacraments are: baptism, initiation into the church, washing away previous sins, symbolized by water; confirmation, which enables the baptized to assume greater responsibility, symbolized by chrism; eucharist, enactment of Christ's last meal and symbolized by bread and wine; matrimony, sanctification of human love, symbolized by crown or ring; ordination, admittance to holy orders, symbolized by robes; penance, shedding of sins, confounded of confession and absolution; unction, blessing of the ill, administered on danger of death. The two sacraments of Protestant churches are baptism and the Lord's supper.

SACRED ANIMALS Those which are associated with divinities as attributes, those which in themselves have acquired sacredness. Animals which are deity attributes are associated with supernatural beings in their adventures, as the hounds of Artemis, or are a form into which a deity transforms, as the shape of the bull assumed by Zeus to abduct Europa. The second classification is represented by the sacred cow in India.

Sacred chalice. See Holy Grail.

Sacred foot. See under Foot.

Sacred grove. See Grove, Nemi Wood.

Sacred heart. Emblem of Jesus.

Sacred Isle (Holy Island). Ireland, because of its many saints; Guernsey because of its many monks. Thomas Moore gave the name to Scattery, to which Saint Senanus retired, vowing no woman should set foot on its soil.

Sacred king. See under King.

Sacred nine. The Muses.

Sacred prostitution. See under Prostitution.

Sacred thread. Ray which guides a hero from a labyrinth. The umbilical cord. In some parts of the world a thread is conferred on a boy in an initiation ceremony. In Hinduism it is ninety-six times the breadth of his four fingers, and represents the four states he will experience, i.e. waking, dreaming, dreamless sleep, and state of absolute Brahma. The thread has three qualities, that of reality, passion, and darkness, or the three states of the body, that of birth, growth, death. In Zoroastrianism the thread, a badge of faith, united the initiate to Ahura Mazda.

Sacred tree. See under Tree.

Sacring bell. A small bell rung at the elevation of the Host in the Roman Catholic mass.

SACRIFICE Literally, make sacred. Appeasement, atonement of sin, devotion to a deity or ancestral spirit, petition, propitiation, thanksgiving. An attempt to bring fertility or other favor, or save a deity from old age. A magical rite to bend a divine will to that of a mortal, or to bring immortality to the worshiper or clan. A meal which a worshiper shares with a supernatural being. In cannibalism an attempt to obtain the strength and wisdom contained in the victim. The two main kinds of sacrifice are thank offerings and sin offerings, which may take the form of animals, flowers, foods, humans, incense, tobacco (American Indian), vegetables, wine, or the offering of the celebrant's own body or self-torture. The prerogative of a sacrifice rests with a family-head, first-born, or priest. Figuratively to give up something for the sake of another person or thing. The Celts sacrificed one-third of their healthy children every year to bribe nature deities. Ancient Greeks offered black animals and blood to infernal deities, white animals and fire sacrifices to Olympian divinities.

Burnt-offering or holocaust. Contained the notion of the death of a sun-hero, and supposedly provided immortality through resurrection. Children were burned after temporary investiture as king as a means of achieving immortality or assuring the return of light or verdure. In Hebrew law every burnt-offering contained an acknowledgement of guilt and expiation. The burning of a whole victim signified, on the part of the offerer, complete devotion of himself and all his substance to God; on the part of the victim, the completeness of expiation.

Peace sacrifice. By Hebrews offered in the fulfilment of vows to return thanks to God for benefits or to satisfy private devotion (free-will offerings). The poor offered meal sprinkled with frankincense, the wealthy offered a goat, ox, or sheep. Offerings were accompanied by salt and wine, and half belonged to the priest.

Sacrifice of a king. A fertility rite. Usually performed in mid-summer when grass is withered and soil is dry or at the harvest. A sacrifice by the people to assure the return of verdure in the spring, thus for the benefit of the tribe. In later times a child surrogate was offered. See Sacred king under King.

Sacrifice of a prince. Sacrifice on the part of the king for the people, either to assure peace or the return of verdure.

Sacrifice of maidens and youths to monsters. The appeasement of drought dragons, such as the Minotaur. In later legends maidens were married to beasts (drought or winter) who turned into handsome youths after the marriage (spring or verdure).

Sacrifice of the eucharist (or mass). Sacrifice of the blood of Christ under the appearance of bread and wine; by some churches held to be an unbloody or mystical renewal of the sacrifice on the cross.

Sacrifice to the dead. Gratitude conferred by a dutiful son or a petition for favors.

Sin or trespassing sacrifice.
Among Jews a whole offering; no part was retained by the priest as in peace sacrifices.

SACY-PERERE Cheerful spirit of Brazilian forests.

SA'D Arabian fate god; worshipped as a baetyl. In feminine form Sa'dan, and identical with Allat.

Sa'd and Sa'dan. The morning and evening star.

SADAKARI The fourth celestial Buddha.

SADB (SADHBH) Celtic moon or dawn goddess. Daughter of Bodb the Red. By Fionn mother of Ossian. By a rival changed into a fawn. See Shape-changing.

SADDLE In heraldry signifies pressing onward.

SADHADIVA AND NAKULA Hindu twins who are sons of the Asvins and counted as two of the Pandavas. Famous for beauty and wisdom respectively.

SADHANA Buddhist invocation.

SADHYAS In Hinduism the kindly dead.

SAEGR In Norse mythology bucket in which Hyuki and Bil carried the magic song mead.

SAHRIMNER (SAHRIMNIR) In Norse mythology boar which gods and heroes in Valhalla devoured every morning; whole again every night. Typified darkness.

SAE-NO-KAMI Japanese gods of highways who protect travelers. Also Dosojin.

SAETER Norse deity. Represented as an old man, from whom Saturday takes its name. Borrowed from the Latin Saturn.

SAFA In Moslem tradition hill in Arabia on which Adam and Eve met after having been parted for 200 years, during which they wandered homeless over the earth.

SAFFRON (1) February 3 birthday flower symbolizing marriage. In the language of flowers: beware of excess. Christian symbol of charity; assigned to Virgin Mary. (2) For the color see yellow.

Meadow saffron. April 3 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: My happy days are past.

SAG Egyptian chimera. Creature with a lioness body, a hawk head, and a tail ending in a lotus blossom. Drought demon.

SAGA Norse goddess of history, who dwelled in Sokvabek (sinking stream or waterfall). With Odin she quaffed from golden beakers (sun cups). Her name signifies she who sees and knows all.

SAGARA Hindu sea god. Prototype of Rytu-wo.

SAGARIS Greek nymph loved by Attis.

SAGE (1) One who through asceticism and sacrifice seeks to become divine; by extension one with calm, far-seeing wisdom. In Hindu belief frequently as powerful as gods; by sacrifice they control the gods. (2) January 19 birthday flower symbolizing domestic virtue, mutual love.

Sage brush. Emblem of Nevada.

Sage hens. Nickname for inhabitants of Nevada.

SAGITTA Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as the Arrow.

SAGITTARIUS (1) In heraldry a bearing representing a centaur with a drawn bow to signify martial readiness. (2) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Archer. (3) Celestial archer, ninth sign of the zodiac, which the sun enters about November 21. Period of death; season of hunting. Its color is blue; its element fire. It is a dry, hot, masculine sign; its quality is fortunate; it is ruled by the planet Jupiter. Subjects born under the sign are ambitious, candid, impatient, magnetic. It is a period of thought manifestation, and governs the thighs. Its tarot significance is the Hermit. Its pictorial symbol is a centaur or a man drawing a bow, simplified into an arrow. In Babylonian charts represented as a double-headed centaur or as an archer shooting a three-headed arrow.

SAGRAMOUR LE DESIRUS
Knight of King Arthur's Round Table.

SAGUARO Emblem of Arizona.

SAHE NO KAMI Japanese preventive deities. They ward off diseases caused by demons.

SAHIB (SAHEB) Hindu and Moslem title equivalent to lord; used in India and Persia as an equivalent, when addressing Europeans, to the English mister.

SAHO (SAHO-BIME, SAHO-HIME)
In Japanese legend a faithful sister and rebellious wife. Sister of Sahobiko, consort of Suinin. She destroys herself in a conflict between filial piety and conjugal loyalty.

SAHO-YAMA-HIME Japanese goddess of spring.

SAHU (BA-SAHU) Egyptian mummy. See Ba.

SAIL Breath, celestial spirit, venture, wind. Dream significance: danger, uncertainty.

Sailing. Symbolized by anchor, islands, merchant marine, navy, open sea, sea-gull, yacht.

The Sails (of Argo). Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Vela.

SAINFOIN August 7 birthday flower symbolizing trust in God. In the language of flowers: You confuse me.

SAI-NO-KAWARA Japanese abode of dead children. Name signifies river-basin-of-offering.

SAINT (SAN, SANTA) A canonized Christian, by extension one who is consecrated, generous, made divine or holy, patient; one willing to give his life for his convictions. A miracle worker. Parallels the Buddhist arhat, Chinese lohan. Many of the legends of saints, such as Saint George in the Mumming Play, resemble Pagan myths connected with the death and rebirth of the year, or with the resurrection of the dead vegetation spirit. The symbols represent the instrument of martyrdom or incidents in the saint's life. See martyred saints under Martyr, pillar saints under Pillar.

Adalbert (Adelbert). Martyred 994 A.D. Prussian apostle. Bohemian nobleman who became bishop of Prague and incurred the dislike of powerful nobles. While engaged in missionary work he was assassinated by an agent of non-Christian Poles.

Adrian. Martyred date unknown. Patron of Flemish brewers and soldiers. His limbs were cut off on a smith's anvil; then he was beheaded. Portrayed in armor; an anvil, ax, lion and sword at his feet.

Agatha. Martyred 251. The Roman governor Quintianus ordered her breasts torn off when she refused his love. Patron of Catania and Malta. Invoked for protection from fire and by nurses. Her veil deposited in a Sicilian church is revered as a protection against the eruptions of Mount Etna. Portrayed with a pair of shears, the palm of martyrdom, and a dish on which are her breasts.

Agnes (Inez). Martyred 304. Child virgin, said to have been thrown into a brothel and beheaded before she was thirteen years of age. Patron of young maidens. Her day is January 21. According to tradition, on Saint Agnes's Eve (January 20) a girl who performs certain forms of divination discovers the visage of her future husband. In art shown with a book, lamb, palm branch and sword.

Aidan. Died 651. Monk of Iona. In art shown calming a storm, extinguishing a fire, giving his horse to a beggar, or holding a lighted torch with a stag crouching at his feet.

Alban. Died 304. The first martyred Christian in Great Britain. The town of Saint Albans is believed to stand on the site of his martyrdom. Generally shown with a cross on long staff, a fountain, palm branch, a sword, instrument of his martyrdom.

Alexander. Pope from 105 to 115. Martyred on Via Nomentana at Rome. Shown trampling on a Pagan altar before the emperor or trampling on an idol. In English version of the Mumming Play, the stage manager (in place of Father Christmas) who demands that the Doctor restore life to Golishan.

Alexis. Patron of beggars and hermits. Shown as a beggar with a cross, dish, ladder, palm branch.

Alphage (Aelpheah, Alphege, Elphege). Anglo-Saxon archbishop who obtained a peace promise from the Danes in 994, but was slain by them in 1012. Depicted with a battle ax and chasuble full of stones. His day is April 19.

Ambrose. Died 397. One of the four fathers of the Roman church. Patron of Milan. When he was an infant bees supposedly lighted on his lips without stinging him, prognosticating his future eloquence. In art shown in full pontifical costume next to a bee hive and with a triple scourge in commemoration of his excommunication of the cruel Emperor Theodosius.

Andrew. Martyred 70. One of the twelve Apostles and one of the seven champions of Christendom. Brother of Simon Peter. Patron saint of Russia and of Scotland. Ruler of the zodiacal Cancer. Depicted as an old man with frizzled white hair and beard. He holds a cross and a scroll of the gospel. He is tied to a Y or X cross, termed Saint Andrew's cross, and the instrument of his martyrdom. The crux decussata or Saint Andrew's cross, was the cross used by the imperial Russian navy.

Angelus the Carmelite. Died 1225. Martyr shown in a white over brown habit. Roses and lilies fall from his mouth, a sword plunged in his breast, another across his head. He holds a palm and a book with three crowns on it. His day is May 25.

Anne (Anna). Wife of Saint Joachim; mother of Virgin Mary. Patron saint of Brittany and of cabinet makers. She helps those who wish riches obtain them, and prayers to recover lost goods are addressed to her. In art she is shown as a veiled matron, usually instructing Virgin Mary. She holds a flowering rod. Sometimes she is shown meeting Joachim at the Golden Gate in Jerusalem. Her chief emblems are a green mantle and red dress, symbolizing immortality and divine love. Her day is July 26. Saint Anne's Chapel, London, was resorted to by barren women, as it was of great repute for opening the womb.

Anno. (Hanno). Eleventh century archbishop of Cologne, he headed a revolt, kidnaped a king, usurped the regency, and became pope.

Ansano (Ansanus). Martyred about 303. Patron saint of Siena. In art shown as a youth richly clad. His emblems are a banner with cross, a cluster of dates on a palm, a fountain on a baptismal cup. His day is December 1.

Anselm. Eleventh century archbishop of Canterbury. In art he holds the model of a ship. The Virgin Mary holding the infant Jesus appears to him in a vision. His day is April 21.

Anthony the Great. Flourished in the 3rd or 4th centuries. Patron saint of pork butchers. He was born in middle Egypt and was the first Christian monk. He became an ascetic at the age of twenty and withdrew to solitude on a height near the Nile, where he was tormented by demons. His temptations, which resemble those of Buddha, have been a favorite theme in art and literature. He emerged into society twice, once to encourage martyrs, once shortly before his death to attack Arianism. He is appealed to as assuager of erysipelas also called Saint Anthony's fire or sacred fire. In art he is shown as a hermit in a cell tormented by devils, sometimes in the form of beautiful women. On his left shoulder is a blue T (tau or Saint Anthony's cross, the first letter of Theos). He bears a crutch to signify his great age and carries a bell, symbolizing the ability of the saint to exorcise demons and evil spirits. Flames of desire or the tau-cross piercing the devil can be seen at his feet. He is accompanied by a hog to symbolize the gluttony and sensuality over which he triumphed. In allusion to his being patron of swineherds, the smallest pig of a litter is called Saint Anthony's pig, and the term is also applied to a hanger-on or sponger. His day is January 17.

Anthony of Padua. 13th century Franciscan monk. One of the seven champions of Christendom. His powers of oratory were so great, an ass is said to have kneeled before the sacrament he carried. Portrayed wearing a Franciscan robe with a kneeling ass. His attributes are a book, fish, fire, flowered cross, lily, red wine in a flask.

Apollinaris. Martyred 79. Portrayed in a white robe with black cross embroidered on it. Holds a club; stands on hot coals. An angel brings him a crown; a raven is at his side. His day is July 23.

Apollonia. Martyred 250. Virgin. Patron of dentists and protector from toothache because all her teeth supposedly were pulled out before she was burned alive. Her emblems are the palm and pincers holding teeth. Her day is February 29.

Artemidos. The goddess Artemis Christianized.

Athanasius. Died about 373. Portrayed as a Greek archbishop in pallium. Stands in a shrine or between two columns, a book of gospels in his hand. His day is May 2.

Audrey (Etheldreda). Died

679. Canonized queen. She was married twice but disowned marriage duties to remain a virgin. The word tawdry is a contraction of Audrey. Her day is October 17.

Augustine. Died 430. Bishop of Hippo. One of the four Latin fathers of the Roman church. The son of a Pagan father and Christian mother, his early life was one of promiscuous pleasure seeking. After his conversion to Christianity, he wrote his most important work, the Confessions, and became a preacher of asceticism. He typifies one slowly converted. In art he holds a flaming heart, in allusion to his burning love for the Christian faith, or pierced with arrows, in allusion to his repentance of early sins. Shown in bishop's robes washing the feet of Christ or as a pilgrim. Frequently accompanied by his mother, Saint Monica. His day is May 28.

Augustine. Died 604. A Roman monk, he headed a group of missionaries that landed in England. He converted the English to Christianity and became the first archbishop of Canterbury. His day is May 26.

Balbine. Died 130. In art shown with chain and fetters in her hand; kissing a captive's chains.

Balthazar. First century. One of the three magi. Represented as bearded and wearing a robe trimmed with ermine and regal devices. He offers myrrh in a jeweled cup to the Holy Infant, in prophetic allusion to the persecutions unto death which awaited Christ. He represents Africa, Ham, and consecrated wealth. His days are January 11 and December 25.

Barachiel. Archangel. Portrayed with lap of his coat filled with white roses.

Barbara. Died 303. Patron

saint of firework makers, fortifications, gunsmiths and soldiers. Her legend resembles that of Danae. Her father, a king, confined her in a tower with two windows. There she became enamored of the love of God and had a third window cut into the tower to admit the full light of the Christian trinity. Her father delivered her up for execution for embracing Christianity, and as her head was about to be cut off he was struck dead by lightning. Thus she is invoked against lightning, tempests and sudden death. Her emblems are a peacock and a tower with three windows. She carries the sacramental cup and wafer, and is the only female saint with these attributes. Her day is December 4.

Barnabas. Martyred about 53. An apostle. Companion of Paul. Portrayed in pilgrim's robes, wears a staff and wallet, holds the gospel of Saint Matthew. Three stones and a fire are near him. His day is June 11.

Bartholomew. Crucified about 50. One of the twelve disciples of Jesus. Patron saint of tailors. Ruler of the zodiacal Libra. He is shown bound to a pillar. His emblem is an Oriental type knife, instrument of his martyrdom, and he bears a human skin over his arm to represent his flaying. His day is August 24. Also see under Bartholomew.

Basil the Great. Died 379. One of the four Greek fathers of the Church. Wears Byzantine bishop's robes. A dove is perched on his arm; a hand gives him a scroll. His day is June 14.

Bede. Died 735. Monk. Called the Venerable Bede and known as the father of English learning. Patron saint of students.

Benedict. Died about 543. Founder of the monastery on Mount Cassino after he had converted worshippers of Apollo. According to Dante he lived to condemn and bewail the corruption of the monks of the Benedictine Order. He was one upon whom martyrdom was attempted, and in art he is shown with a cup and a serpent or bread with a serpent in it, alluding to the poison. Others of his emblems are a blackbird, broken glass with wine running from it, a broken sieve, dove, luminous ladder, raven. He has a flowing white beard and is dressed in a Benedictine abbot's habit holding an aspergillum, his index finger across his lips, or as a naked youth rolling in a thorny bush (to punish himself for the sin of lust). His day is March 21.

Bernard of Clairvaux. Died 1153. Founder of Cistercian order of Benedictines. Organized second crusade. In art shown in a white habit with cowl and large sleeves. He kneels and receives Christ from the cross or is with a demon in chains (as victor over heretics). A beehive symbolizes his eloquence. Other emblems are book, inkhorn, paper and pen. His day is August 20.

Bernard of Menthon. Died 1008. Founder of hospices on Great and Little Saint Bernard. Patron saint of mountain climbers. In art shown binding an evil spirit, escaping through a window from his father's mansion, or as a prisoner in a castle from which he is being delivered by Saint Nicholas. The large dogs bred at the Hospice at Great Saint Bernard Pass, Switzerland, and trained to find travelers lost in the snow are called Great Saint Bernards. His day is June 15.

Bernardino. Died 1444. Franciscan monk tried for heresy by Pope Martin V. Portrayed in Franciscan habit bearing a tablet or sun inscribed with IHS or a heart. In some paintings shown with three mitres representing the three bishoprics he refused.

Blaise (Blasius). Martyred 316. Physician turned Christian, he became a hermit and a healer of wild animals, and took over the attributes of Volos, Pagan flock deity. He is said to have walked upon the waters to preach. He was tortured with an iron comb tearing his flesh. Invoked as a healer of cattle's diseases, children's diseases, sore throat and toothache. Patron of weavers and woolcombers. His festival is observed by the lighting of bonfires and tapers. In art shown as an old man with a white beard attired as a bishop, holding an iron comb and a lighted candle. His day is February 3.

Bonaventura. Died 1274. Celebrated Franciscan mystic and writer. Noted for humility, he appears as a saint in Dante's Paradiso. Portrayed as a friar or a cardinal in Franciscan habit. His cardinal's hat hangs on the limb of a tree, where he had instructed the pope's emissaries to hang it until he was ready to receive it. Or he is shown with an angel bringing the sacrificial wafer to him as he was too humble to go to the altar to receive sacrament. His day is July 14.

Boniface. Murdered by peasants in 750. An Anglo-Saxon, he was made apostle of Germany. Patron of wheelwrights. Portrayed in bishop's robes over Benedictine habit, three kings before him; on two of them he has placed a crown. His emblem is a book transfixed by a sword. His day is June 5.

Brandan (Brendan). Said to have been buried in 577. Semi-legendary Irish monk and missionary, a Christianization of Bran. A paradise seeker, he made a seven year voyage in the 6th century seeking the land of bliss believed to be located beyond the Canaries. The land appeared on maps up to the time of Columbus and foreshadowed the discovery of America. With the monks who accompanied him on the prolonged wanderings he celebrated Easter mass on the back of a great fish. His day is May 16.

Bridget (Bride, Brigit) of Kildare. Patroness of Ireland. A Christian saint who has retained her attributes as a Pagan goddess of fire and poetry. She was said to have been born at sunrise. The house in which she dwelt blazed into a flame which reached to heaven; a pillar of fire rose from her head when she took her veil; her breath gave life to the dead. In art, she is shown with the branch of a tree, corn, or a pan of milk in her hand, a cow at her side. Sometimes she holds a cross and tosses out devils. Her day, said to celebrate the beginning of spring, is given variously as February 1, 2, or 21.

Britius. Died 444. Bishop of Tours and confessors. In portraiture usually shown in crimson bishop's robes carrying coals. In legend he proved himself innocent of false charges by carrying blazing coals without sustaining injury. His day is November 13.

Caemhoc. Christian who supposedly fed the children of Ler, who had been turned into swans. He then brought them into his church, preached the Christian faith, and converted them. This broke the Pagan spell and, when the baptismal waters were sprinkled on them, they returned to human form. Being very old they died, and Caemhoc buried them all in one grave.

Casimir. Died 1483. Prince of Poland. Patron saint of tailors. In art shown crowned, holding a lily, praying at church door at night. His day is March 4.

Catherine of Alexandria. Martyred 307. Virgin of royal descent. For publicly confessing the Christian faith at a pagan sacrificial feast the Emperor Maximinus ordered her tortured to death by the rolling of an engine with four spiked wheels over her body. Heaven rescued her by sending a flash of lightning which destroyed the wheel. She then was beheaded. Before her torture fifty philosophers were sent to win her back to paganism; instead, she converted them to Christianity. Thus she is regarded as patroness of philosophers and invoked against diseases of the tongue. Her symbol is a toothed or four- or six-rayed solar wheel. A sort of fireworks is called a Catherine-wheel. A rose window with radiating divisions is called a Catherine-wheeled window. To braid Saint Catherine's tresses is to live a virgin. Her day is November 25.

Catherine of Siena. Died 1380. Worshiped as greatest female saint of the Dominican order. Invoked by spinsters for husbands. Shown in Dominican habit, wearing a crown of thorns and a wedding ring, bearing the stigmata, holding a heart or lily. Her day is April 30.

Cecilia. Martyred 280. A sister-in-law of Tibertius, she asked her husband Valerian to respect her vows of chastity. Through love of her, Valerian became a Christian. She was a fine musician and is said to have invented the organ. An angel fell in love with her for her musical skill and visited her nightly. Valerian also saw the visitant, who gave to both a crown of martyrdom which he had brought from heaven. Being blind, Cecilia is patroness of the blind as well as of ecclesiastical music. She is shown with organ pipes or a harp and a coronal of red and white roses. Three wounds are in her neck, as she was stabbed three times before she died. Her day is November 22.

Christopher. Died 364. Giant who carried a child across a stream, and then discovered the child was Christ. Patron of ferrymen and sailors. Invoked for protection from bad dreams, earthquakes, fires and floods. In the middle ages, those who gazed on his image believed they were protected from sudden death. Generally painted wading through water bearing the infant Jesus on his shoulders. Sometimes represented with the head of a dog. Name means Christ-bearer. His day is July 25.

Clement. Martyred 100. Third bishop of Rome. According to legend, his persecutors tied an anchor about his neck and hurled him into the waters, which withdrew and revealed a small temple where the body was found. Patron of tanners, having himself been a tanner. Portrayed in bishop's or pope's robes. His symbol is an anchor, alluding to the instrument of his martyrdom and to his steadfast and unwavering faith. His day is November 23.

Columba. Died 597. Irish monk who built a monastery on the island of Iona; missionary to the Picts and called the apostle of the Highlanders. Shown caressing an old white horse; devils fly from him. The Celtic cross is in the distance. His day is June 9.

Constantine. Slain 576. Protomartyr of Scotland. British prince, disciple of Saint Columba; murdered by Picts.

Cosme (Cosmo) and Damian. Martyred 303 or 310. Twin brothers of Arabian birth brought up in Christian faith. Devoted lives to medicine and surgery, of which they are patron saints. Performed healing miracles. Generally shown in physician's long red gown and cap holding ointment, pestle and mortar, and surgical instruments. Patron saints of Medici family. Their day is September 27.

Crispin. Said to have been beheaded in 287. With his brother Crispianos legendary martyr. They were shoemakers and are revered as protectors of shoemakers. They are portrayed at work. The shoemaker's awl and knife are their emblems. Their day is October 25.

Cuthbert. Scotch monk of 6th or 7th century. According to legend, he sits on a rock in the Holy Land forging beads from the stems of encrinites. A rock opposite him serves for an anvil. In art he appears in bishop's robes, an otter and a swan by his side. Pillars of light are above him. His day is March 20.

Damian. See Cosme and Damian, under Saints.

David (Dewi). Died 601? Patron saint of Wales. One of the seven champions of Christendom. According to legend, he was the son of a prince, and the waters of Bath owe their warmth and healthful properties to his benediction. He is portrayed preaching on a hill, a dove on his shoulder. His day is March 1.

Denys (Denis). Martyred 272. Patron saint of France. One of the seven champions of Christendom. He is said to have been beheaded and, after martyrdom, to have carried his head in his hands for six miles and laid it on the spot where the cathedral which bears his name stands.

Dionysius the Areopagite. In legend, first century member of the court at Athens. Converted to Christianity by Paul. Said to be the authority for the order of angels used by Dante in Paradiso. After many labors and trials suffered martyrdom by fire. According to some, the god Dionysus Christianized. In art stretched upon a gridiron, or one in his hand. His day is October 3.

Dismas. Penitent thief. Patron of burglars, protector from thievery. Shown with a tall cross by his side; an angel receiving his soul. His day is March 25.

Dominic. Died 1221. Confessor. Born of a noble family, he founded the Dominican Order and adopted a vow of poverty. According to tradition, during his mother's pregnancy she dreamed she had given birth to a black and white dog which lighted the world with a burning torch; in another legend, the Devil appeared to him in the form of a sparrow. In art shown in the habit of the Dominican Order with a cross, lily, rosary or star. Sometimes with a dog carrying a torch in its mouth, symbol of the spreading of the gospel. His day is August 4.

Donatus. Fourth century. Miracle performer. Foster brother of Emperor Julian, who persecuted Christians and caused Donatus to flee. Generally painted in bishop's robes with a broken communion cup.

Dorothea. Virgin martyred about 303. Famous for her beauty and piety. In legend, Theophilus, the judge's secretary, taunted her as she was going to execution with, "Dorothea, send me fruits and roses when you get to Paradise." While she was being executed Theophilus was at dinner, and immediately after her death a young angel brought him a basket of apples and roses, saying, "From Dorothea in Paradise." From that moment Theophilus became a convert. In art her attributes are a basket of three apples and three roses held by an attendant angel. She sometimes offers apples or roses to the Infant Christ or to the Virgin Mary, or is shown tied to the stake, a burning torch at her side. Her day is February 6.

Dubric. A legendary primate of Britain. Said to have crowned King Arthur.

Dunstan. Died 988. Archbishop of Canterbury. Patron saint of goldsmiths and musicians, having been a skillful metal worker and a talented musician. In legend, when the Devil tempted him, he seized him by the nose with a pair of red-hot pincers and refused to release the fiend until he promised not to tempt him again. His emblems are a harp and a pair of tongs. His day is May 19.

Dymphna. In legend she was the daughter of a 7th century Irish prince who, at Gheel in Belgium, murdered her when she resisted his incestuous passion. She protects against insanity.

Ebba. Martyred about 874 (or 683). First abbess of Goldingham. Besieged in her abbey by Danes, she and her nuns mutilated their faces before surrendering. Her emblems are a knife and palm.

Edmund. Martyred 870. King of East Anglia, he gave himself up to the Danes in the hope of saving his people. He was bound to a tree, scourged and shot with arrows before his head was cut off. According to legend his head was guarded by a wolf until it was properly buried. The Cathedral of Saint Edmundsbury (Bury Saint Edmund) was erected on the site of his grave. His emblems are arrows and short darts. His day is November 20. Also called the English Saint Sebastian.

Edward. Martyred 979. King murdered at Corfe Castle. Attributes, cup and dagger and such emblems of royalty as the falcon and short sword. His day is March 18.

Elias. Greek saint. Helios, the sun god, Christianized.

Eligius (Eloi, Eloy). Died 655 or 659. Patron saint of farriers and gold and silver-smiths. Shown in bishop's vestments or blacksmith's garb. His emblems are an anvil, crosier, hammer and horseshoe. He presents a casket or shrine of gold to King Dagobert. His day is day is December 1.

Elizabeth of Hungary. Queen who died in 1231 at twenty-four years of age as a result of her sacrifices. Patron saint of queens. She gave so generously to the poor that she starved her own household. One day, as she was going out with her apron filled with something heavy, her husband asked what she was carrying. She answered, "Flowers, my lord." To save her from lying God converted the bread into flowers. Her husband died while on a crusade. Her children were taken from her and she was turned out of the castle. She sought the protection of a priest, and died as a result of her fasts. Painted as a Franciscan nun, or in an apron filled with roses. She is sometimes shown with three crowns to symbolize her royal birth, her royal marriage, and her glorification in heaven. Her day is November 19.

Erasmus. Martyred about 303. Patron of sailors. Relieves colic. In art, shown near a windlass, a ship in the distance.

Fechin of Fore. Reputed to have power over horses. When one of his chariot horses died on a journey he compelled a water horse to take its place, later permitting it to return to the water.

Felicita. Widow martyred in 173, with her seven sons. Protector of infants, especially of male heirs. Portrayed as a veiled matron surrounded by seven youths with their heads on blades.

Fiacre. Died about 630. Hermit monk. Patron of gardeners. Portrayed preaching to birds or digging in garden.

Florian. Martyred about 230. A millstone around his neck, he was drowned. Patron of Poland. A miracle worker invoked for protection from fire. Revered by brewers and mercers. Shown pouring water on a burning house or city, or with a millstone around his neck.

Francis. Died 1226. Lay name, Giovanni Bernardone. At twenty-four, he renounced a life of gaiety and wealth for one of poverty, founded the Franciscan order, and became one of the most beloved of saints. He fasted for forty days to expel the devils tempting him, and experienced the miracle of stigmata. Generally shown tonsured in the dark brown habit of his order. His symbolic marriage to poverty, and his receiving the infant Christ from Mary, or his preaching to birds and animals, are shown in art. His principal emblems are the crucifix, lamb, lily, skull, stigmata, wolf. To suffer Saint Francis' distemper is to be penniless. His day is October 4.

Frideswide. Early 8th century English abbess; patroness of the city and university of Oxford. In legend she was a royal princess who fled from the advances of her lover to Oxford, where she founded a monastery which, in time, became Christ Church College.

Gabriel. Archangel. Chief

messenger of God. Angel of mercy and redemption. Guardian of the celestial treasury. He is portrayed as a majestic crowned figure, richly robed. His wings are of many colors. He carries a lily or a scepter in one hand, a scroll in the other. (See under Gabriel.)

Gaspar (Caspar, Jaspas).

One of the three Magi, who came from the East bringing gifts to the infant Savior. His offering was frankincense in a jeweled flask, in token of His divinity. Representative of Asia (Shem) and of the consecrated wisdom of experience. His days are December 25 and January 1.

Geminianus. Fifth century.

Noted for driving out evil dragon spirits and for healing. Portrayed with demon he drove from the daughter of a Byzantine emperor, or with a mirror in which is a reflection of the Virgin Mary.

Genevieve. Died 509. She helped avert an attack on Paris by Attila the Hun, and became the patroness of the city. In art shown with the keys of Paris on her arm. A demon blows out her candle; an angel re-lights it; or she is shown guarding her father's sheep or restoring sight to her blind mother. Her day is January 3.

George. Martyred 303. One of the seven champions of Christendom. In Georgia, Russia, revered as a deity of good fortune. His worship is related to moon worship, and he occupies a position similar to that of Christ as mediator and intercessor. Adopted by Edward III, he became patron saint of England. In legend, he killed a dragon to save Cleodolinda, daughter of the King of Lydia, or Sabra, daughter of Ptolemy, in much the same manner that Perseus and Susa-no-wo killed dragons to save maidens. The legend is an allegory expressing the triumph of Christianity over evil. He is called the everlasting green one, inasmuch as his conflict with evil is eternal. Again and again he was slain, but he kept returning to life until he was mutilated, cut into small parts and burned, his ashes scattered in the wind, attributes of a fertility lord.

Protector of horsemen, knights and warriors. Chief character in Mumming Play; leader of the Papa Stour dance. He is usually portrayed in armor standing near to or mounted on a horse. His emblems are a dragon, hot cross bun, rose, shield, spear supporting a banner of a red cross on a white field, a sword. By Arabs called Djirdjis, by Mussulmans called El Kouadr. His day is April 23.

Germain. If a mother offers him a white loaf and a pot of ale, he will administer to her ill child.

Gertrude. Died about 664. Founder of hospices for pilgrims, thus patron saint of travelers; said to shelter souls on the first night of their three-day journey to heaven. Destroyer of vermin and patron saint of mice and rat catchers. In art she kneels by the sea holding a lily; two mice climb her crosier. If portrayed spinning, mice run up and down her distaff. Her day is March 17.

Gertrude the Great. Died about 1292. Famed for supernatural visions, thus one divinely instructed. Shown with seven rings on her right hand; a figure of Christ in her left. Her day is November 16.

Gervais (Gervasius) and Protasius. Protomartyrs of 1st century. Said to be twin brothers. Each in a dalmatic is shown standing on the side of a tree, or Gervais is portrayed kneeling, scourged by executioners, Protasius kneels as an executioner beheads him. Their day is June 19. In some sections of France the belief prevails that if rain falls on Saint Gervais' Day, it will fall for forty days thereafter. Other rainy saints are Godelieve, Medard, and Swithin.

Giles. 7th century. Patron saint of beggars, cripples and lepers. According to legend, he was a hermit accidentally wounded by Childeric, king of France, who was hunting. The hermit refused to be cured that he might mortify the flesh, and he remained a cripple for life. In art he is shown in a Benedictine habit with a hind, in allusion to the legend that, while living as a hermit, he was fed milk by a hind which, later, when chased by hunters, sought refuge in his cave. His day is September 1.

Godelieve. Rainy saint of Flanders. A belief prevails that if rain falls on Saint Godelieve's Day, rain will fall for forty days thereafter. Other rainy saints are Gervais and Swithin.

Gregory. Died 604. One of the four Latin fathers of the Church. Patron saint of choir-men. He established the rule of celibacy and is said to have invented the Gregorian chant. Usually portrayed as a pope holding a crosier or writing at a lectern. A dove is at his shoulder or hovering above him, which refers to the legend that the Holy Ghost came to him in dove form to dictate the words upon which his writings are based. His day is March 12.

Gudula (Gudile). Died 712. Daughter of a noble. Patron saint of Brussels. Portrayed as an angel driving away a devil, and with a lantern, in allusion to the legend that as she was going to church with a lantern it went out, but the Virgin Mary lighted it again with her prayers.

Her day is January 8.

Hilda. Died 680. English abbess, noted for her wisdom. Shown in nun's habit with crosier and holding a model of her abbey. Throned, attended by scholars; Caedmon, a poet of conjectural existence, appears before her. Her day is November 17.

Hubert. Died 727. Patron saint of horsemen and sportsmen. He was so fond of the chase, he neglected his religious duties until one day a stag with a crucifix menaced him with perdition unless he mended his ways. He entered a cloister and eventually became the bishop of Liege. One blast of his horn was sufficient to bring 100,000 warriors to the rescue in an hour of need. In France the Wild Huntsman. Shown with a miniature stag, or kneeling before a stag with a crucifix between its thorns. His day is November 3. This identical history is applied to Saint Eustace, said to have been a monk martyred in 118 by being placed in a brazen bull and burned to death.

Hubert's stag. Solitude.

Ignatius. Martyred 107 by being thrown to lions. An apostolic father. Disciple of Saint John the Evangelist. According to tradition, he was the little child set among His disciples for their example in purity. In art he is shown chained, accompanied by lions or exposed to them. He holds a scroll with musical notations or a heart with the sacred monogram (I. H. S.). His day is February 1.

Ignatius Loyola. Died 1556. Founder of the Society of Jesuits. He is portrayed with the sacred monogram (I. H. S.) on his breast or contemplating it, holding a heart crowned with thorns, his hand on a book. The glory is in the skies, in allusion to his claim that he had a miraculous knowledge of the mystery of the Trinity conferred on him. His day is July 31.

Iliya Gromovnik. Slavic thunder god Gromovit Christianized.

James the Great. Martyred 1st century by Herod. One of the seven champions of Christendom. As liberator of Spain from the Moors, patron saint of the country. Protector of millers, netmakers, and pilgrims. Ruler of the zodiacal Sagittarius. According to legend, his body was placed in a boat of stone in Palestine; the sails were set and it reached the Spanish coast in one day. In another legend, his relics were miraculously conveyed to Spain in a marble ship. The horse of a knight watching the ship sailing into port became frightened and plunged the rider into the sea. The knight was saved by boarding the marble vessel, but his clothes were found to be entirely covered with scallop shells. The body of James the Great was discovered in 840 by divine revelation to Bishop Theodomirus, and a church was built at Compostella as a shrine. His head was buried to miraculously protect Spain; a burial comparable to that of King Arthur. As liberator of Spain, he is shown on horseback bearing a banner. Sometimes he is shown with a sword, the implement of his martyrdom, or as a pilgrim covered with shells. He is also called Santiago (San Diego). His day is July 25.

James the Less. Martyred 62. Patron of hatters. Less stands for his being shorter of stature. He was hurled from a summit, and then beaten to death with a fuller's club, which, with a book, halbert and scroll, are his emblems in art. The Milky Way is called Way of Saint James. Ruler of the zodiacal Gemini. His day is May 1.

Januarius. Martyred 304.

Patron saint of Naples, where his head and two vials of his blood are preserved. The congealed blood is said to bubble and liquefy three times each year, on the Saturday before the first Sunday in May, on September 19 and December 16, or at any time the head is brought near the vials. His day is September 19.

Jerome. Died 420. One of the four Latin fathers of the Church. Founder of monachism in the west. Patron of students. According to tradition, while he was lecturing one day, a lion entered his schoolroom and lifted its paw. His disciples fled, but Jerome, noticing a thorn in the paw, drew it out and dressed the wound. In art he is shown with a lion; when alluding to his solitude and contemplation and lonely study, shown with a pen and book, two angels by him, a skull on a rock or table. A crucifix and owl are also his emblems. His day is September 30.

Joachim. Husband of Anne, father of the Virgin Mary. He is usually portrayed as an old man in Eastern garb meeting Saint Anne at the Golden Gate in Jerusalem. Guards Virgin Mary as a child. He carries in a basket two turtledoves, alluding to the offering made for the purification of his daughter. Other attributes are the lamb and a lily. His day is March 20.

Joan. See under Joan of Arc.

John Chrysostom. Died 407. Patriarch of Constantinople. One of the four Greek fathers of the Church. Called Golden-Tongued. Shown in Byzantine patriarch's costume with beehive, book of gospels, chalice. Saint Paul and an angel near him. His days are January 27 and September 14.

John the Baptist. Beheaded in the 1st century by Herod, thus a holy man martyred by one he scorned. Last prophet of Old Testament and first saint of the New Testament. Baptizer of Jesus. Patron of the city of Florence; protector of cutlers, farriers and freemen. Ruler of the zodiacal Leo. Portrayed as a young herder with long hair in a camel's hair or goatskin tunic, carrying a long staff terminating in a cross or carrying a resurrection cross with a streamer bearing the words, Ecce Agnus Dei, or with a book on which a lamb is seated, or with a platter bearing his head in allusion to his execution. Sometimes he is shown in a sheepskin with locusts and wild honey, in reference to his life in the desert. He also is depicted richly dressed in Paradise, standing or seated on the left hand of Christ, holding a scroll. His day is June 24, day on which in medieval practice the oak king was sacrificially burned, and in effect he took over the rites of Gawain, oak knight. See Salome.

John the Divine. Died 96. Evangelist; one of the twelve apostles; frequently called the beloved disciple or that disciple whom Jesus loved most. Protector of netmakers and printers. His emblem is the eagle, inasmuch as he is said to have soared to heaven to gaze on the light of immortal truth with keen and undazzled eyes. He was present at the Crucifixion with the three Marys. He is shown with a cup from which a serpent issues, in allusion to the legend that, as he was about to drink poisoned wine, the poison left it in the form of a snake; or shown with a caldron, in allusion to the legend that he had been miraculously saved after being tossed into a caldron of hot oil. His day is December 27.

Jophiel. Archangel. Preceptor of the sons of Noah. Protector of the humble-hearted; seekers after truth. Guardian of the Tree of Knowledge. Shown with the flaming sword with which he drove Adam and Eve out of Paradise.

Joseph. Husband of Virgin Mary, putative father of Jesus. Patron of carpenters. To escape Herod's massacre of children, Joseph fled to Egypt with Mary and Jesus, an incident resembling that in which Vasudeva saved Krishna. In art carries Christ and bears a budded staff and two doves in a basket or a carpenter's hatchet, plane and saw. His day is March 19.

Jude. Martyred in Persia. Apostle. Ruler of Aquarius. In art shown with a boat and oar, carpenter's square, halbert, knotted club, or long cross. Also known as Thaddeus. His day is October 28.

Julian. Legendary nobleman who, while hunting, pursued a stag, which said to him, "Thou that pursuest me to death shall cause the death of thy father and mother." To escape the prophecy he journeyed to a distant land where he married. His parents finally located his residence and arrived while he was away from home; his wife Basilissa put them to sleep in her own bed. Returning unexpectedly and finding two persons in his wife's chamber, Julian killed them. In remorse he became a penitent Christian and ferried travelers across a treacherous river which typifies life. Patron of ferrymen, minstrels and travelers. In art shown as a horseman with a stag at his side, or as a ferryman. His day is January 9.

Keyne. 5th century Celtic saint, daughter of a king. If a bridegroom drinks before his bride from Keyne's well near Liskeard, in Cornwall, he will be master of his house; if a bride drinks first, she will rule.

Lawrence (Laurence). Martyred 256 by being broiled to death on a gridiron. Patron of carriers. According to legend, he had charge of the treasures of the church at Rome. When Pope Sixtus II was executed, the Roman prefect asked Laurence for the treasures. Lawrence asked for three days time in which to collect them. During those three days, he distributed the riches of the church among the poor; then, pointing to the sick and poor, he informed the prefect these were the church's treasures. The enraged official had Lawrence roasted on a gridiron. While on the fire he asked to be turned, saying, "That side is quite done." This has been the origin of the phrase "Lazy as Lawrence." Generally shown in deacon's dress, bearing a dish of gold and silver coins, a gridiron and a palm. Occasionally he swings a censer or carries a cross. Sometimes he wears a tunic covered with flames. His day is August 10.

Leonard. Died 559. Patron of fruiterers, green grocers, prisoners and slaves. A convert to Christianity, after his conversion he devoted himself to assisting debtors to escape from prison. Later he lived as a hermit in a forest near Limoges. Portrayed in Benedictine habit or deacon's robes. Sometimes prisoners kneel at his feet. His attributes are an ax, crosier, broken fetters, fruits and vegetables. His day is November 6.

Louis. Died 1270. King of France. Patron of France and of hair dressers. During an illness he vowed to go on a crusade. He returned to France with what he believed was the crown of thorns and a part of the true cross. On a second crusade, he died of the plague. In art shown with the crown of thorns, a king's crown, a cross, a sword and a fleur-de-lis. His day is August 25.

Lucy. Martyred 303. Virgin. Patroness of Syracuse, of candle and lamp makers, and of tailors. Born of a noble family, she was denounced by the man to whom she was betrothed when she became a converted Christian and distributed her wealth among the poor. Her eyes haunted the young man, and fearful they were causing him harm, she tore them from her head and sent them to him; this converted him to Christianity. Shown with her eyes on a dish. Other attributes are a burning lamp, suggesting divine light and wisdom, and a poniard in a neck. Her day is December 13.

Luke (Lucas). Early Christian disciple. Evangelist. Author of one of the four gospels. Patron of painters and surgeons. His chief symbol is the winged ox (or calf) because in his gospel he emphasizes the priesthood of Christ and the ox typifies the sacrificial victim. He usually is portrayed as young with curled hair and a beard. He sometimes is shown painting the Virgin Mary or as a physician. His day is October 18.

Margaret of Antioch. Martyred about 278. Daughter of a Pagan priest, converted to Christianity by her nursemaid. When she refused to marry the governor of Antioch, she was thrown into a dungeon, where the devil in the form of a fire-breathing dragon sought to terrify her. She made the sign of a cross on her breast, but the dragon followed her. The sign of the cross grew until it split the dragon's body, permitting Margaret to escape unharmed. She then was condemned to death, and, on her way to execution, she prayed that women suffering childbirth pains might be aided, and she became the protector of women in labor. In art shown trampling a dragon underfoot. She usually holds a cross, crown, and the palm of martyrdom. Her day is July 20.

Margaret of Cortona. Died 1297. Patron of sinners. Portrayed in checkered habit with Franciscan girdle. Dog at her feet. Her day is February 22.

Mark. Martyred evangelist. Author of one of the four gospels, possibly the earliest written Christian gospel. Patron of Venice, where he was driven by a storm at sea, and of glaziers. Martyred at Alexandria. He is symbolized by a winged lion, presumably because his gospel emphasizes the royal dignity of Christ, the lion of Judah, also the cry in the wilderness. Usually portrayed as gray-haired with a round beard, holding the gospel, a pin or closed scroll. His day is April 25. A winged, seated lion holding an open book, symbol of Saint Mark, is the emblem of the city of Venice.

Martha. Sister of Lazarus and Mary. When Jesus visited their house, as she served him, she complained about her sister, who sat at His feet listening to Him. She is patron of cooks and housewives. Sometimes she is identified as Mary Magdalene; whom, in other accounts, she is said to have converted. Usually shown with a ladle or skimmer in her hand or with a bunch of keys attached to her girdle in token of her housewifely qualities. Sometimes shown with a dragon at her feet, holding the holy water and asperges with which she conquered a drought dragon. Her day is July 29.

Martin (Martle). Died 411. Hungarian converted to Christianity as a child. He ran away to a monastery, but his father, a military tribune, forced him to become a soldier. In midwinter he divided his cloak with a naked beggar, and that night Christ appeared to him in the garment. He later founded a monastery at Liguge, believed to have been the first in France. According to one legend, he was annoyed by a goose, which he therefore ordered killed and served for dinner. He died from the repast, and the goose was sacrificed to him on each anniversary. Patron of drunkards and innkeepers, protector from sudden death. Usually shown as a young mounted soldier dividing his cloak with a beggar, a goose at his feet. His day, Martinmas or Martlemas, is November 11, the date of the celebration of the Roman Vinalia, or feast of Bacchus; thus the phrase "Martin drunk," meaning very drunk or an intoxicated man sobering by drinking more. The blood of the goose, known as Saint Martin's bird, was shed sacrificially on November 11. At one time a great goose feast was held in France on his day. According to one tradition, water, left exposed in vessels on Saint Martin's Eve, turns to wine. Fine weather frequently occurs along the Mediterranean about November 11, and is called Saint Martin's summer.

Martin of Bullions. Like Saint Swithin, a rain saint. His day is July 4 and, in Scotland, if it rains on his day, rain may be expected for the next forty days. The devil is called Saint Martin's running footman as, traditionally, Saint Martin on occasions assigned him to such a task.

Mary. Virgin mother of a deity. Immaculately conceived by her mother, Saint Ann. Free of original sin, she was deemed worthy to be the mother of the Savior, who was "conceived by the Holy Ghost," and then married to Joseph, who is recognized as the putative father of Jesus. Revered as the second universal mother, Eve being the first. Her seven joys are: Annunciation, Visitation, Nativity, Adoration of the Magi, Presentation in the Temple, Finding Christ among the Doctors, Assumption. Her seven sorrows are: Simeon's Prophecy, Flight into Egypt, Christ missing, Betrayal, Crucifixion, Christ lowered from the Cross, Ascension. As the glorified Madonna, she is portrayed with a crown and scepter or a ball and cross. She wears rich robes and is surrounded by angels. As Mater Dolorosa, she is shown as elderly, dressed in mourning, her head draped, weeping over Christ's dead body. As Our Lady of Dolours, she is seated, her breast pierced with seven swords, symbolic of her seven sorrows. As Our Lady of Mercy, she spreads out her mantle, gathering sinners beneath it. As Queen of Glory, her colors in Renaissance art are blue, for constancy, and red, for love. As Queen of Heaven, she stands on a crescent moon crowned with the sun and twelve Assumption stars. To symbolize virginity she has flowing hair. In the 1649 Inquisition the art censor ordained her hair was to be golden, her mantle blue, her robe white. Among her titles are Mater Sapientiae, Our Lady of Wisdom, Stella Maris. Her attributes relating to fertility and the cycle of the seasons are: balsam, blue bells, blue mangle, cedar of Lebanon, closed gate, cypress of Zion, enclosed garden, fennel, flowering almond, fountain sealed, frankincense, fruits, hare, hawthorn, lily, lizard, mandrake, mint, mirror, moon, musk flower, myrtle, nard, pink, red bodice or skirt, snowdrop, sun, tower of David, tree of Jesse, twelve stars, white coif, robe or veil, white rose without thorns, white violet. Mary, as one conceived by divine intervention and as the mother of a god, resembles Alcmena, Devaki, Isis, Maya. Star of the Sea (Stella Maris) was a title of Isis and other Pagan mother goddesses.

Mary Magdalene. 1st century. A penitent sinner, and patron of penitents. With Mary, mother of Saint James the Less, she witnessed the burial of Jesus. On the third day after the Crucifixion, they both appeared at the holy sepulchre to anoint Christ's body, and discovered that it had vanished. The Marys thus were the first to bring news of His resurrection to His weeping disciples. As she stood weeping at his grave, Jesus comforted her. Eventually, she retired into the desert, where she had nothing to eat or drink for thirty years, except celestial food brought by angels. She is believed to be the unnamed woman who anointed the feet of Jesus and wiped them with her hair, mentioned in Luke. Her most common attribute is an alabaster box or vase, supposedly containing ointment. She is variously said to be identical with Martha or Mary, sisters of Lazarus. She is the prototype of Mary of Egypt. Her day is July 22.

Mary of Egypt. Died 433. An Egyptian girl of Alexandria, who lived a life of sin. Patron of anchorites and penitents. She joined a pilgrimage to Jerusalem for the purpose of seducing fellow travelers, but instead was converted to Christianity. In Jerusalem, she purchased three loaves of bread for sustenance, and went into the desert beyond the Jordan to live as a recluse. One day, to obtain Holy Communion from a priest on the other side of the river, aided by supernatural powers, she crossed the water dry shod. The priest visited her a year later, and found her dead. When he tried to bury her, a lion came to his aid and dug her grave with his paws. She is usually shown old and worn, with long flowing hair. Her attributes are an alabaster box or vase of unguents, a desert cell with a book or skull, three loaves of bread. Her life resembles that of Mary Magdalene.

Mathurin. 3d century. Patron of fools and idiots. In France folly, or stupidity, is called the malady of Saint Mathurin. His day is November 1.

Matthew. Martyred 1st century. One of the twelve apostles, and author of one of the four gospels. Ruler of the zodiacal Capricornus. A Roman tax collector, he was converted to Christianity and revered as protector of tax collectors. He is symbolized by a winged man or angel, presumably because his gospel details the account of the incarnation of Christ. He is shown with a bag or purse of money in allusion to his early profession, or with a book and pen. Sometimes an angel holds his inkhorn as he writes his gospel. An ax, instrument of his martyrdom, is one of his attributes. He also is known as Levi. His day is September 21.

Matthias. 1st century. Apostle chosen by the other eleven to take the place of Judas. His day is February 24.

Maurice (Maurus). Died 284. Disciple of Saint Benedict; patron of coppersmiths. He was one who walked on water. His day is January 15.

Medard. 6th century. Founder of the Festival of the Rose at Salency, in which the most virtuous girl in the parish receives a crown of roses and a purse of money. According to a legend, during a sudden shower an eagle spread its wings over him and he remained dry. Since, in France, he has been called master of the rain and, if rain falls on his day, June 8, rain supposedly will fall for forty days. Other rainy saints are Gervais and Swithin.

Melchior. 1st century. One of the three magi. He is shown in royal robes offering gold in a jeweled box or a jeweled crown, symbol of royalty, to the infant Jesus. He represents Europe, Japeth, and consecrated power. His days are December 25 and January 6.

Mercourios. The deity Mercury Christianized.

Meriadek. Patron of Brittany. Bishop of Vannes, accredited with the gift of light. He dissipated the darkness of sightless eyes and shadowed understanding. Name identical with Merodach.

Michael. One of the seven holy angels; archangel of fire or of the sun. His primary function is to lead the hosts of heaven. Twin brother of Satan, later his chief opponent; hence a champion of or fighter for religious faith. He collected the dust from the center and from all the quarters of the earth with which God made Adam, thus an instrument for the creation of man. He was a dragon (Satan) fighter, protector of the Hebrew nation, he announced to Virgin Mary her coming death, and on Judgment Day he is to sound the last trumpet and weigh the souls of the dead. In Milton's Paradise Lost, he is the angel sent to dispossess Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden. He is portrayed as winged, young and beautiful, in dazzling mail with a shield, piercing a dragon (Satan) with a spear or sword, or holding a pair of scales. Sometimes he wears a jeweled crown. According to the cabalists, he corresponds to Tiphereth. In the gnostic sect of Ophites, he is shown with the head of a lion. In the middle ages he was regarded as the presiding spirit of the planet Mercury. As dragon fighter he equates with Perseus; as messenger of death, with Hermes, Mercury and Thoth; as weigher of souls, with Osiris. His day is September 29. He is also commemorated on May 8 in honor of his apparition, which appeared in the year 492 to a herdsman.

Mungo. See under Mungo.

Nicholas of Myra, or Bari.

4th century legendary figure who became one of the most popular of all saints, revered as patron saint of Aberdeen and Russia, of brides, children, merchants, parish clerks, pawnbrokers, sailors, travelers and virgins. He is said to have been born in Asia Minor of Christian parents and, when they died, he distributed their wealth among the poor. On a voyage to the Holy Land, he rebuked the waves, they subsided, and for this miracle he was revered by sailors and travelers. On a visit to Myra, he was the first priest to enter a church after the death of a bishop, whereupon he was elected to take the dead man's place. On a visit to an inn, he discovered that an innkeeper had kidnapped and pickled three children and served them to his guests as meat. He found three little boys cut up in a cask of brine and, making the sign of the cross, he brought the children back to life, whereupon he became patron of little children. On three successive nights, he secretly threw three stockings filled with gold into a neighbor's window to save his virgin daughters from earning their dowers in a sinful way; hence patron of brides and virgins. The stockings turned into three golden balls, which became the emblem of pawnbrokers, who worship Nicholas as their protector. Because his feast falls on December 6, near Christmas, he is the personification of charity and generosity, and his gift of three purses resembles that of the gift to Christ by the three Magi, his legend has been merged with that of the Christmas story, and he has become famous as Saint Nick or Santa Claus (see), bringer of gifts. Usually portrayed as a bishop with three purses, or three balls. Sometimes, with ropes, he draws a ship to shore. An anchor, a small child kissing his hand, and three children in a tub also are his attributes.

Onofrio (Onuphrius). Hermit who lived in the desert outside Thebes in Egypt for sixty years. An angel brought him the Holy Eucharist every Sunday. He went about naked except for long hair and a garland of leaves about his loins. Upon his death two lions appeared and dug his grave with their claws. He is portrayed as wild and unkempt, covered with hair. He wears a girdle of leaves or a tree branch is twisted around his body. Sometimes two lions are shown with him.

Pancras. Martyred 304 at the age of thirteen. Patron of children. Portrayed as a boy bearing the palm of martyrdom, or a banner and a sword, the instrument of his martyrdom. The first church to be consecrated in England was dedicated to him. His feast day is May 12.

Patrick. Died about 464. One of the seven champions of Christendom. Born about 372 of a Roman patrician family, hence Patrick. In an ancient Welsh manuscript, his name is given as Maenwyn, meaning sacred stone. Claimed by England, France, Scotland and Wales as a native. He was carried off by pirates in his sixteenth year and sold as a slave in Ireland, where he tended swine. He escaped to the continent and became a priest, later a bishop, wandering through England and Scotland. He had a supernatural call to preach to the heathens of Ireland. There he put an end forever to the power of the Tuatha De Danann, and the gold and silver image Cenn Cruaich bowed down to him. He is fabled to have opened the eyes of the blind, raised the dead, and to have expelled vermin, including a demon serpent, from Ireland. According to an ancient legend, Christ revealed a cave on a small island in Lough Derg, Ireland, to Patrick and told the saint it was the entrance to an earthly Purgatory and that those who spent a night and a day in it would witness the torments of Hell and the joys of Heaven. It was visited by Fortunatus, Sir Owain, and in the middle ages was a resort of pilgrims who called it Saint Patrick's Purgatory. His feast day is March 17, and on that day shamrock, or trefoil, Saint Patrick's emblem, is worn by all Irishmen to honor him as well as the Trinity.

Paul. Martyred 66. Patron of carpet weavers, preachers, tentmakers and upholsterers. As Saul of Tarsus, he was a bitter persecutor of early Christians. Seeing a vision on the road to Damascus he was converted and, since, has been known as the only quickly converted. After a period as a hermit in the desert he became a missionary, and traveled abroad on journeys described as perilous. For converting one of Nero's favorite concubines he was beheaded. At his execution milk flowed from his veins instead of blood. His name had been changed to Paul in honor of Sergius Paulus, whom he had converted. In art his symbols are an open book or scroll of his Epistles, indicative of the law propagated by him, and a sword, the instrument of his martyrdom. He is portrayed as short of stature, with a bald head and with a gray bushy beard. His feast day is June 30.

Paul the Hermit. Died 341 when 113 years of age. Called the founder of anchorites as he was the first Egyptian hermit and the earliest of all who lived the life of a solitary hermit. He had been preaching at Thebes, Egypt, and fled to the desert to escape persecution. Near the cave in which he found shelter was a date tree and a well. He remained in the desert for 98 years. Each day a raven came to him with a loaf of bread. When he died, Saint Anthony wrapped his body in a cloak and two lions dug his grave. He is shown as an old bearded man, clad only in palm leaves and seated under a palm tree. His emblems are a raven with a loaf of bread, and two lions. His day is January 15.

Peter. Martyred 67. Protector of fishermen, locksmiths and stonemasons. A Galilean fisherman, Simon by name, and noted for his impulsive nature, he was chosen by Jesus to be one of the three most intimate of the apostles, the other two being James and John. Later he was named the chief apostle, or His vicar on earth; by Roman Catholics regarded as the first pope. Jesus called him Peter, meaning rock. At the time of Christ's trial Peter denied that he knew Him three times before the cock crowed, thus one who repented. He walked on the waters to go to Jesus, who gave him the keys to heaven; and the entrance to Heaven is called Saint Peter's Gate. He confuted

Simon Magus, a magician at Nero's court, and was ordered crucified. At his own request he was executed with his head down, saying he was unworthy to suffer the same death as his master. Ruler of the zodiacal Aries. In paintings he is portrayed as an old man with a round beard, holding a fish or fishnet to show him as a fisher of souls. The fingers of a thief are called Saint Peter's fingers, in allusion to the fish he caught with a piece of money in its mouth, and which gave rise to the expression, "A thief has a fishhook on every finger." As the keeper of the door to Heaven, to whom saints and sinners present themselves for admittance, he is depicted with a key. Two keys symbolize the doors to Heaven and Hell, a third key is emblematic of this world. Sometimes a cock is shown near him. His mantle is bright yellow, symbolic of revealed faith. His feast day is June 29.

Peter Martyr. Executed 1252. A member of the Dominican order, he undertook to suppress heresy. He acted so severely, the wrath of the people was aroused against him and he was assassinated. He is portrayed in Dominican habit, pierced by a sword or struck by an ax, blood flowing from his head.

Philip. Martyred 1st century. One of the twelve disciples of Jesus. Ruler of the zodiacal Virgo. At Hieropolis, in Phrygia, he found people worshiping a great serpent. Aided by the cross, he caused the serpent to disappear, but it left behind such a stench that many people died, among them the son of the king. Aided by the cross, Philip brought the youth back to life. Priests of the serpent, enraged, crucified him with his head downward, or stoned him to death while he was bound to a cross. He is usually represented bearing a tau cross fastened to a reed or staff, or shown with a dragon or serpent. He is commemorated on May 1.

Prisca. Martyred 47. Virgin, she was thrown to a lion. It humbly crouched at her feet, and she was beheaded. Her attributes in art are a lion, palm of martyrdom, and a sword. Her day is January 18.

Remigius. Died 533. Baptized King Clovis, Pagan husband of the Christian Clothild, and, for this, is sometimes said to be the founder of the Christian church in France, and called Apostle of France. He is shown baptizing the kneeling king, a dove with a halo hovering near them, or he contemplates the napkin of Saint Veronica. Sometimes birds feed from his hand. His chief symbol is a dove with an oil cruise in its beak, alluding to the legend that at the saint's prayer, a cruise of oil was brought from heaven by a dove for the anointing of Clovis. His feast day is October 1.

Reparata. Martyred virgin, 2d or 3d century. One of the patron saints of the city of Florence. Born of a noble family as a Christian, she was executed when twelve years of age. As she died, her soul was seen rising to heaven in the shape of a dove. In painting, she is shown with a dove flying from her mouth. She wears a crown and a red and white mantle, and carries the palm of martyrdom. Her banner is a red cross on a white field. Her day is October 8.

Roch (Roque). Died 1327. Patron of those afflicted with plague, as he went among those stricken and worked miracles, until he was himself stricken with the great sickness. He retreated to a forest to die alone, but his faithful dog daily brought him a loaf of bread, thus the expression, "Saint Roch et son chien (Saint Roch and his dog)" signifies inseparables. Eventually he recovered and returned to his native town of Montpellier. He had changed so, no one recognized him, and he was arrested as a spy. Five years later he died in prison. Usually shown in pilgrim's habit with a cockleshell, staff and wallet. He lifts his robe to show a plague-spot on his thigh, which an angel is touching. His feast day, August 16, formerly was celebrated in England as a harvest-home, and called the great August festival, or Thanksgiving.

Romuald. Died 1207. To atone for his father's murder of a near relative, he joined the Benedictine order. Later he founded the order of Camaldoli, whose members were pledged to perpetual silence and solitude. His chief attribute is a ladder to heaven; sometimes a devil is at his feet. Usually portrayed as an old man in the white habit of the Camaldoli order. His day is February 7.

Rosalia. Died 1160. Patron of Palermo. She is said to have been carried by angels to an inaccessible mountain top, where she lived for many years in the cleft of the rock, a part of which she wore away with her knees in her devotions. She is portrayed in a cave, with a double Greek cross and skull, or shown with an angel or the Virgin crowning her with roses. Her day is September 4.

Sealtiel. Archangel. Shown in angelic robes praying, hands clasped on his breast.

Sebastian. Martyred 288. Patron of archers, pinmakers, prisoners and, with Roch, invoked against plague. A young nobleman in Gaul, secretly a Christian. When his belief was discovered, he was bound to a stake and shot with arrows until they stuck in his body, thick as pins in a pincushion; hence protector of pinmakers. Although he had been left for dead, he recovered from his wounds, and openly preached the doctrine. He was then put into the arena, and his body afterward was thrown into the great sewer of Rome. Friends recovered it, and he was buried in the catacombs. In art portrayed as a young man, his half-naked body transfixed by arrows. Sometimes bound to a stake or tree, or shown in armor holding cross and two arrows. His day is January 20.

Simeon Stylites. Died 459. A cynic and a Syrian ascetic, who lived on the top of a pillar without shelter to separate himself from the world and mortify the flesh. He spent sixty-eight years on different pillars, each higher and narrower than the previous one, the last being 66 feet high. His feast day is January 5.

Simon Zelotes. Martyred, with Jude, 1st century in Persia. One of the twelve disciples of Jesus. Ruler of the zodiacal Taurus. Shown as an old man, bald, with a round beard. His attributes are an ax, cross, fuller's club, scroll, ship or saw, in allusion to the legend that he had been sawed to death. He sometimes carries a fish because his occupation was said to be that of fishmonger (fisher of souls). His day is October 28.

Stephen. First Christian martyr; scapegoat. Accused of blasphemy and stoned to death, thus to be fed Saint Stephen's bread is to be stoned. Patron of horses and weavers. Portrayed as a young man in a deacon's costume. He bears the palm of martyrdom; stones are on his head and shoulders. Because of the legend that he had been buried later in the coffin of Saint Laurence, the two sometimes are portrayed together. His day is December 26.

Swithin. Died 862. According to legend, he desired to be buried in the churchyard of Winchester, that the "sweet rain of heaven might fall upon his grave," but the monks sought to honor him by placing his body in the choir, and fixed July 15 for the ceremony. It rained for forty consecutive days, and the monks realized Swithin was opposed to their project and abandoned it. Thus he became the rainy saint of Britain, and if rain falls on his day, it is said that it will fall for forty days thereafter. (Compare Ground-Hog Day.)

Thecla. 1st century. Protomartyress converted by Paul, she became his devoted follower. Her rejected lover complained to authorities, and Paul was driven from Iconium. She followed him and survived many tortures, finally retreating into the mountains where she became famous as a healer. Jealous doctors plotted to have her kidnaped. As she fled a rock opened up to receive her, leaving only a piece of her veil in the hands of her pursuers. Generally portrayed in a loose mantle of dark brown or gray, holding a palm and surrounded by wild beasts. Serpents are twisted around her arms. Her day is September 23.

Theophilus. 6th century, in Cilicia. Slander drove him to sell his soul to the Devil on condition that his character be cleared. The thin-skinned saint repented of his bargain and fasted for forty days and nights, after which time Virgin Mary visited him and advised him to confess, which he did. He received absolution, and died three days later of brain fever.

Theresa. A 16th century Spanish nun, renowned for her trances and visions.

Thomas. One of the twelve disciples of Jesus. He refused to believe in the resurrection of Christ until convinced by sight and touch. Thus, a skeptic is called "a doubting Thomas." In one legend, when he refused to go to India to preach the gospel, Christ appeared and sold him as a slave to an Indian prince visiting Jerusalem. He baptized the prince and others, and finally was martyred at Meliapore. In another account Gondoforus, king of the Indies, gave him a sum of money with which to build a temple. He spent the money on the poor, "to erect a palace in heaven." For this reason he is patron of architects and masons, and his symbol is a builders' square. Other attributes are a book pierced by a spear and a scroll. He usually is portrayed as young and beardless. In English rural districts, the custom of soliciting money for drinking on December 21, his feast day, is called Thomasing. An onion under the pillow on Saint Thomas' Eve is said to bring dreams of one's future spouse, because he had received the girdle of Virgin Mary at her death. He is associated with the zodiacal house Scorpio. Also called Didymus.

Thomas à Becket. Murdered 1170. Slain by Henry II because he opposed lay interference in church policies. Patron of the blind. Portrayed with blood flowing from his head. His day is December 29.

Thomas Aquinas. Died 1274. Patron of diviners, parsons, and schools. Of noble birth, as a boy his manners were so dull that his companions called him "Dumb Ox." In time he became famous as a philosopher, and he is called the Angelic Doctor, Aristotle of Christianity, Prince of Scholastics

