

School of Theology at Claremont

1001 1425062

Dictionary of Mythology Folklore and Symbols

by

Gertrude Jobes

The Scarecrow Press, Inc.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY
CLAREMONT, CALIF.

Theology Library

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY AT CLAREMONT
California

Dictionary of Mythology
Folklore and Symbols

Ref
GR
35
J6
v.1

by

Gertrude Jobses

The Scarecrow Press, Inc.
New York 1961

Dictionary of Mythology
Folklore and Symbols

Copyright 1961
by Gertrude Jobs

The Seabury Press, Inc.
New York 1961

Dedicated with appreciation for his patience and understanding to my husband
James Addison Jobes

Introduction

This work developed from an interest in symbols. But what is a symbol? Anything that comes into existence, that which is or was. Ever since, "In the beginning was The Word," perhaps before The Word appeared in this particular phrase, man has been trying to understand it. Primordial man decided The Word came from the Sun, Water, or Water-Sun, revered as a culture hero or deity of wisdom, and sounds to indicate the life force have come down to us as names for God and, as such, word roots. One example is El, a component of many words including electricity; another is Ab, which is found in Abraham, Abernathy, abbreviation. And so, in "the beginning" language, a vital tool of man's power to communicate, had been symbolic. Early, man developed visual signs to interpret The Word, and created drawings, implements, and mounds, which have survived although his bones have disintegrated. Those who understood the symbolism comprehended whether it related to a deity or revealed what meat might be slain in the vicinity or the quality of the grain. A favorite subject connected death (chaos)-birth-life to the changing lights of night-dawn-day and to the changing season of winter-spring-autumn, and the trinity was accepted as a fertility or life-cycle symbol in many religions.

Fear, inspired by the various forces for good and evil in natural phenomena, caused man to become superstition-ridden, and he dared not utter deity names or address them directly. To discover whether the time was propitious to embark on a journey, engage in enterprise, or start a war, he cloaked pleas, prayers, and thanks in deliberate corporeal or verbal symbols. Even a priest lacked the audacity to talk to the gods; to communicate with them he tossed a bundle of arrows into the air. When in its fall the bundle ripped apart, the arrows, which carried the message, scattered in all directions, like double talk, a double talk only a priest was bold enough to decipher. Usually he passed on his interpretations in symbolic form. Unearthed, many of these symbols have become skeletons on which buried civilizations have been reconstructed. Into our own times one race or sect, to survive in a world with another race or sect which annihilates deists, heretics, infidels, pagans, anti-believers, believers-tied-to-the-past, stand-patters, or believers-looking-forward, have dropped into an underground of symbols.

Cabalists, diviners, metaphysicians, occultists are aided by symbols when explaining life and foretelling the future. Writers, architects, painters, sculptors, designers in all fields, even industrial, resort to symbols, without properly understanding them, in efforts to rise above the mundane. A fashion exists at this time among art groups to visit graveyards and rub onto tracing papers the winged serpents and other carvings of old tombstones. One artist said to me, "Although chiseled by primitives they are beautiful." The sculptor, could he hear, might be inclined to shout on the wind, "You who have copied our designs are the primitives. We knew what we were doing. Every line we drew had a meaning." A few years ago a Broadway play, Harvey, made quite a hit with a symbolic character - a rabbit. Many playgoers who enjoyed it said, "Delightful, but utterly fantastic." A rabbit, however, played an important part in the life of American Plains Indians; in fact the rabbit released the primeval race which climbed up out of the underground world to people the earth.

Without a key to conventional symbols used throughout the ages, communication between generation and generation, even between persons living at the same time, must be lost. Keys do exist; inasmuch as they are widely scattered, some deeply hidden, in a mass of religious, scholarly, superstitious, and romantic works, they exist for the diligent researcher.

At the outset a dictionary of symbols might seem to be an impossibility; actually this work came into existence accidentally. To understand certain dramas, epics, poems, vase paintings, and other works, and for use in my own creative writings, I began exploring. The deeper I dug the more clearly I saw in symbols and in the symbolic situations of legends and myths that which unites all peoples. Despite the fact that the names of the gods in one religion may have become the names of the demons in another, replacement titles continued to keep all men brothers under the skin. Where the symbolism of a name may have been given a different interpretation, the symbolism of the situation remained the same. Frequently names have carried over from one culture to another in a puzzling manner. A Peruvian Indian name for maize, saramama, contains that of the Egyptian sun god Ra. Saramama, which yields fire-Ra-mama, was worshiped as a symbol of the staff of life, one of the virtues of the deity. The word rice is derived from a Persian word which means increase and is related to Eros, god of fertility and love; thus when rice is thrown at a bride and groom they are being wished a large brood. Gestures found on pre-historic steles are identical to those found on fairly modern works of art, and carry the same meaning. From a beano, a bean feast honoring fairies, came the present-day fair. The emblems of Christian saints frequently are identical to Pagan fertility, light, or time symbols. However, no attempt has been made to place the same interpretations because in Christian tradition they are said to be instruments of martyrdom or tools of a trade.

When I comprehended that a greater insight into the inner knowledge of the symbolic significance of the customs and beliefs of our common ancestors might lead to universal understanding, might help us all to realize that so called inferior or superior peoples are kin, I organized my notes for publication. I am of the opinion that conflicts are most easily stimulated by means of fear, and fear is most easily aroused by that which is mysterious or unknown. Thus symbolism is not merely a universal heritage, it is a universal language, a means of wider communication. If this dictionary serves the practical purpose of helping people to understand they have a common or related background, something will be accomplished. I must confess that as the work progressed it served me more and more in another way; it opened a vast expanse for flight, a boundless space for contemplation.

This dictionary cannot hope to solve the problems of the scholars who spend years arguing over the meaning of this or this. It can only offer what has been drawn from explanations already provided by men dedicated to knowledge and enquiry with a few original interpretations added as a sort of passkey which will open doors for others as it has for me. In treating deities, wherever possible the information given is: genealogy, function, explanation of activities and behavior, attributes or emblems, steeds, how depicted in art, and parallel deities. The pattern of more general items, such as animals, gems, plants, etc., where possible follows this form:

- Universal and popular symbolism
- Dream significance
- Significance in Freemasonry
- Heraldic significance
- Occult significance
- Word explanation
- Cognates or comparisons
- Mythological and religious significance
 - listed alphabetically under the culture

I wish to take this opportunity to acknowledge my indebtedness to Mr. Robert Bierman, Miss Helen Bilkie, Mrs. Augusta Cantor, Mr. Jack Donohue, Mr. Joseph Gregoritch, Mr. Harold Isaacson, Miss Harriet Kalk, Mr. Arthur Middleton, Mrs. Rose Oertly, Mr. George Plunkett, Mr. Charles Reizenstein, and many others who have helped me in one way or another. I also wish to thank Miss Virginia Walters and her staff at Taylor Library, Milford, Connecticut; the members of the various departments of the New York Public Library at 5th Avenue and 42nd Street, New York City, where I did much research, and my publishers, Mr. Albert Daub, President of Scarecrow Press, Dr. Ralph R. Shaw, Editor of Scarecrow Press, and their associates.

Gertrude Jobes

Milford, Conn.
Dec. 1, 1959

A Primal cause. Cone, mountain, one, pyramid, sun, three beams of light (trinity). The Aged-Unaging, Unchangeable First Cause. Aditi, Akra, Arka, Aum (Om), Christ, Kristina. Cadi, caliph, which mean Great A (One) or Aleph.

Occult significance: dominates activity; its period is one year. Character traits: agreeableness, candidness, creative power, energy, originality, wit. Numerical value: one. Physical weakspot: lungs. Planetary correspondence: sun. Symbolical correspondence: will power. Tarot correspondence: the Magus. Zodiacal correspondence: Ram.

Musical tone for spring. Sixth tone in the scale of C Major and first tone in the relative scale of A Minor. In Christian tradition with a v-shaped cross stroke implies 'Ave,' and when mounted on a cross expresses Ave Millenarium, 'Thy Kingdom come.' Colonial New England mark of an adulterer or adulteress; branded on the guilty. Ancient Greek letter of bad omen; with it magicians began threats in the name of the gods. Among Hebrew cabalists: love of art and science, sagacity, will. In low form: cunning, will applied to evil ends. Norse term for river. In Roman notation 50 or 500; with a dash over it 50,000 or 500,000. Sumerian moon (also Aa, Ai) and water sign. In Triest Christian family names concluded with 'a'; Jewish family names ended in 'o.'

Root of age, ayus (Sanskrit for life); also of names such as Aaron, Ahab, Ahaz, Hawes, Hayes, etc. Source of awe, Cay, gay, Jah, kay (Teutonic for rejoicing), Yah. Cognate with ay, tau. Interchangeable with all vowels.

Parallels Arabic alif, Egyptian ahom (eagle, to which it is traced), Greek alpha, Hebrew aleph (ox), Irish ailm (silver fir). In Mayan alphabet represented by three alternative signs: diamond-shaped square; dot within a circle; peak. See Alphabet Affiliations, Dominical letter.

A of Charlemagne. First of a series of twenty-four richly jeweled reliquaries modeled after the alphabet letters and presented, it is believed, by Charlemagne to various abbeys in France. Each letter depicts Christian scenes.

AA (1) Chaldean god of life; also called Aos. (2) Sumerian moon goddess, consort of Shamash, sun god. Usually with determinative prefix nin (lady) to denote sex. Also A, Ai. (3) Ahans or Asvins, Dioscuri, Gemini, Heavenly Twins. In art one A frequently is dark, the other light, signifying night and day, winter and summer. (4) Egyptian word root meaning great. (5) Of the same root as aqua. Name of several European rivers; from this usage has become an element of the names of cities, towns, and villages.

AABA Sumerian great salt sea, primeval waters. Also Ab.

AAC (1) A the Great, son of King Can of Mexico. Prince of darkness; slayer of his brother Coh. Parallels story of Cain and Abel. (2) In the year before Christ, from Latin anno ante Christian.

AANI In Egyptian mythology, dog-headed ape sacred to the god Thoth.

AARON (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew meaning light, lofty, mountain. (2) In Shakespeare's Andronicus, Moorish lover of Queen Tamora. A cruel and ruthless villain. (3) First Jewish high priest. Brother of Miraim and Moses. He succeeded in getting the Israelites out of Egypt by surpassing the performance of Egyptian magicians. As a magician he compares with Padmasambhava. Self-sacrificing in the duties of a high priest, he remained meek when his sons Nadab and Abihu were slain by God. However, while accompanying Moses on the exodus from Egypt, he offended God by making the golden calf, intended as a sun idol, which the Israelites worshiped in the wilderness while Moses received the Ten Commandments. He is depicted as the traditional religious representative of Jehovah, whereas Moses is portrayed as the secular representative, comparing with the Tashi Lama and Dalai Lama. In his office Aaron was a type of Christ, being called 'of God' and anointed. He bore the names of the tribes on his breast, communicated God's will by Urim and Thumin, entered the Most Holy Place on the Day of Atonement 'not without blood,' and interceded for and blessed the people of God. At death, Aaron as a sun king was probably dismembered on a hill-top, as Dionysus was at Delphi, with a promise of resurrection. Traditionally, he entered a cave on Mount Hor, lay on a couch and died, leaving his vestments and office to his son Eleazar. He then ascended to Paradise, where he sits beneath the Tree of Life. The Arabs venerate his tomb, which they still pretend to show on the mount. High priest, idol maker, magician, snake charmer (see Aaron's rod), sun king, in art he usually is shown in the vestments of a high priest with censer and rod.

Aaronic. Of the second or lesser order of priests in the Mormon Church, ecclesiastic, Levitical.

Aaron's rod. Emblem of fertility, a phallus, resurrection. In Old Testament rod with which Aaron surpassed the performance of Egyptian magicians and persuaded Pharaoh to permit the Israelites to leave Egypt. When he threw his cataleptic serpent (rod) upon the floor, it devoured the serpents (rods) of Egyptian magicians. The three plagues, the rivers of blood, of frogs, and of lice, were brought upon Egypt by Aaron's rod. Later, one of the twelve rods of the twelve tribes of Israel, representing the tribe of Levi and, as it was the only one which sprouted, budded, flowered, and bore almonds, it was accepted as a sign of endowment of the priesthood upon Aaron and his descendants. In Christian tradition it became part of Christ's cross. Cognate Asherah, rod of Jesse.

Aaron's serpent. That which is so powerful it eliminates minor powers.

AARU (AALU) Egyptian abode of the blessed dead and of gods and goddesses. The ka (double) of the Delta region, situated in the west. It was reached after a long journey beset with perils, and had either 15 or 21 gates, each guarded by evil demons armed with knives. A kind of Elysium where fields were cultivated for food for the dead.

AARVAK In Norse mythology one of the horses of the sun, dawn. The companion steed is Alsvid, scorching heat. Compares with Pegasus.

AB (1) In Egyptian mythology the heart, which at death was thought to leave the body of its owner for a future world where it testified for or against him. Typifies desire, will. Compare ka. (2) God, Father, an element in Hebrew names such as Abner, meaning father of light. Also Ad, Aada. In other Semitic languages likewise a title of God. Compare Ahi, Amm. In cabalistic system a name of the Sefhira Chokmah, the Father. Also Abba. (3) Fifth month of Hebrew sacred year, equivalent to July-August; eleventh month of the civil year (except in leap years, when it is twelfth). A sad month; on its first day a feast is observed for the death of Aaron, on its ninth day a feast is held in memory of divine edicts which excluded so many that came out of Egypt from entering the promised land. Twelfth month of the Syrian year, last month of summer. (4) Orb, interchangeable with ap and Ob (see Ob). Root of happy. (5) See Aabba.

ABA (1) Choctaw Indian Great Spirit. (2) In Greek mythology, Aba or Abae is a town famous for an oracle of Apollo. Cognate with Abu, mountain site of cave-temples of the Jains.

ABAANGUI AND ZAGUAGUAYU Culture hero brothers of Guarayo Indians.

ABABINILI Chickasaw Indian supreme being, manifested in fire and in the sun. Giver of life, light, and warmth. Sitting-Above deity.

ABADDON In Old Testament angel of the bottomless pit, death angel. From Hebrew abad, 'he perished.' Milton uses the name for the pit itself; hence depth of Hell, place of destruction. Also Dom-daniel, Mammondon, Pandemonium. In Greek, Apollyon.

ABAEUS (ABAIOS) In Greek mythology Apollo as worshiped at Aba.

ABAFON In Philippine Islands a fish feast held on the evening of the day after a funeral. A rite in ancestor worship.

ABAIA In Melanesian mythology a magic eel which lived in a lake. Becoming angry when an old woman caught fish in the lake, he caused a deluge. Only an old woman who had eaten of the magic fish escaped. Compare Aokeu and Ake.

ABAKAN-KHAN Siberian rain god.

ABANA In the Old Testament a clear, cold, swift mountain stream; a perennial river fertilizing the valley through which it flows.

ABANDONMENT Dream significance: misfortunes, quarrels. Abandoned Children. Children are abandoned or driven away for the following reasons: alleged ungratefulness, destitution, disease, disobedience, famine, fear of a prophecy, illegitimacy, incestuous parentage, jealousy of a guardian or relative, stupidity, supernatural parentage or birth, unfitness to survive. The abandoned children are fed by birds, fostered by supernatural beings, nourished by celestial animals, reared by kings, or in other ways delivered. They usually attain power and wealth, develop into brave hunters and warriors, fulfil the prophecy, or return to rescue their parents or relatives. Frequently the abandonment is related to a sun or time myth, the infant sun being left exposed on a mountain top and recognized as divine by the halo or glow radiating from it. Examples of abandoned children are: Abraham, Cyrus, Hirugo, Joseph, Moses, Oedipus, Orestes, Perseus, Romulus and Remus. Compare cista, exposed children, fatal children.

Abandoned wife. A seasonal or time motif world-wide in folklore. Because of intrigues of evil sisters or in-laws, jealousy, rivals, or slander, a wife is blinded, her hands are cut off, or she is forced to suffer some other disability, and then is cast off. The wife usually comes upon a magic lake, stream, or well (water-of-life motif), which restores her afflicted parts and her beauty. She wins back her husband and the guilty are punished.

ABANS Persian spirit of iron mines.

ABARIS Greek legendary sage of the 6th century B.C., to whom Apollo gave a magic arrow which rendered him invisible, stayed a pestilence, gave oracles, made it possible for him to live without food, and on which he was able to ride through the air. Thus, the dart of Abaris. Sometimes called the Hyperborean. Also the name of an Egyptian city.

ABASED In heraldry to point downward, as the wings of an eagle on a shield, or to be depressed below the shield's center, as an armorial figure. To debase, degrade, dishonor, humble, lower.

ABASY In Yakut belief, spirits of the long-ago deceased who dwell beside graves or in deserted places and who wander about causing destruction. They serve Arson-Duolai, ruler of the dead and swallower of people's souls, giver of disease, etc. They are appeased only by blood sacrifices.

ABATEMENT In heraldry a mark of dishonor across a coat of arms; mark of illegitimate descent.

ABATINA Fickleness.

ABATOS A sacred Egyptian island in the Nile. Paradise, universal navel.

ABATWA In African tribal legends the smallest people. They wander under grass and sleep in ant hills. They shoot those who despise them with poisoned arrows.

ABBA (1) An invocation of God. A title of bishops, the heads of monasteries, and patriarchs in Eastern churches. Title of Mishnaic teachers. In Syriac expresses the confidence, familiarity, and tenderness between parent and child. (2) In cabalism Supernal Father. A name of Chokmah, Supreme Wisdom. Abba and Aima are the Father in Supernal Wisdom and Mother of Supernal Understanding (also called Binah).

ABBADONA In Klopstock's Messaiah a fallen angel who later regrets his part in the rebellion of Satan and reproves him for blasphemy.

ABBA SALAMA In Abyssinian literally Father of Peace. Title of the head of the church.

ABBAS THE GREAT Shah of Persia. In 1591, warned by astrologers that he was threatened by death, he abdicated. An unbeliever, probably a Christian, named Yusoofee, was crowned, and at the end of three days was put to death. Thus the prophecy of the stars was fulfilled, and Abbas reascended the throne with the promise of a long and illustrious life. Compare king, sacred; surrogate.

ABBEY Dream significance: consolation for worries.

ABBEYLAIRD An insolvent debtor who cannot be prosecuted on Sunday, and therefore mingles with others on that day.

ABBOTT Masculine name from the Aramaic, meaning father.

ABBOTT OF UNREASON King of Saturnalia, which see.

ABBY Feminine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning sweet refuge. Also a diminutive of Abigail.

A-B-C A primer, principles of the alphabet. Basic or main facts, beginning, first steps.

A-B-C Powers. Argentina-Brazil-Chile.

A-B-C Process. Making fertilizer from alum, blood, and clay.

ABCHASES Shepherds of the Caucasus. These pastoral tribes sometimes are obliged to sell herds to strangers who may handle the bones disrespectfully. Seeking to avert the dangers which such a sacrilege entails, they consecrate one of the herd as an object of worship and eat it sacramentally in the family circle. Afterwards they treat the bones with ceremonious respect.

ABD An element in Arabic names, meaning servant; as Abdel-kader, servant of the Mighty One. Slave.

ABDAL Mohammedan devotee, hermit, saint.

ABDEMON In Old Testament, a riddle maker. A Tyrian who solved the riddles propounded by King Solomon to Hiram, king of Tyre, and invented others which the Israelite king could not solve.

ABDERIAN (ABDERITAN) One who laughs or scoffs. From Democritus, the laughing or scoffing philosopher who lived in Abdera, seaport of ancient Thrace. Also a stupid person.

ABDERUS In Greek mythology armor-bearer of Heracles.

ABDEST Mohammedan rite of ablution before prayer.

ABDEVENHAM In astrology lord of the 12th Celestial house.

ABDIAS Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning servant of God.

ABDIEL (ABDEEL) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning servant of God. In Milton's Paradise Lost a faithful seraph who opposed Satan's revolt.

ABDOMINAL BIRTH Children brought into the world by abdominal section, according to a world-wide superstition, will develop into heroes, as Asclepius, Macduff.

ABDUCTION Dream significance: success. A world-wide folktale motif in which the usual theme is the carrying off or detention of a beautiful young woman by a supernatural creature (animal, dwarf, giant, ogre, water-sprite, etc.), personifying a whirlwind or some other force of nature. Another theme in abduction myths is that of the youth who steals the feather-dress of the swan-maid as she bathes and thus makes it impossible for her to return to her heavenly abode. The Rape of the Sabine Women by the Romans is a famous mass-abduction story. The psychology of marriage by abduction is so deeply rooted in some cultures, marriage celebrations frequently include a mock capture of the bride and mock resistance by relatives. Still another theme is that of the devil carrying off scolding women, usurers, and others designated for Hell. Compare beauty and the beast, divine-mortal marriages.

ABECEDARIANS German Anabaptist sect of the 16th century which rejected all learning as a hindrance to religion.

ABEDNEGO A Chaldean masculine name meaning servant of Negro. Given to Azariah, who, with Meshach, Shadrach, and Daniel, was carried as a captive to the court of the Babylonian king. The virtue and wisdom of these men as well as their steadfast belief in God won the admiration of the king, but aroused the jealousy of others at court. During the absence of Daniel the other three were placed in a fiery furnace from which they were miraculously delivered unharmed by Jehovah. The descent into and return from Hell theme. Compare Jonah.

ABEL (ABELUS, HABEL) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning breath, love, son, transitoriness, vanity. In place names signifies he who weeps, lamentation, mourning; also grassy place, meadow, as Abel-Beth-Maachah means meadow of the house of Maachah. Name also suggests one who lives in continence after the alleged manner of Abel. (2) In Hebrew and Moslem tradition, second son of Adam and Eve. Possessor of a fatal spot. A shepherd slain by his agriculturist brother Cain; hence the death of ignorance at the hands of learning (see shepherd). For generations Abel has been considered the prototype of the innocent victim of murder, but one meaning of his name, vanity, points to a different moral. Other meanings, breath, transitoriness, refer to the brevity of life. The name also may be written Obel, which resolves into the Ball O. Murdered by Cain, the Great One A, suggests one phase of light murdered by another phase, or Primal Cause (A), the Great Abyss, realm of darkness, murdering the Orb of the Sun. Compare Cain.

ABELARD (1) Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning nobly resolute. (2) A medieval Christian philosopher and theologian whose love for his pupil Heloise led to his castration.

ABEL DRUGGER A credulous superstitious character in Johnson's The Alchemist.

ABELE The white poplar, symbolic of time.

ABELIAN (ABELITE, ABELONIAN, ABELONITE) One of an African sect of the 4th century A. D. After the alleged example of Abel, members of the sect married but lived in continence in order not to perpetuate sin.

ABELLA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning beautiful.

ABELMAIM Hebrew masculine name meaning meadow on the waters.

ABELMEHOLAH Hebrew place name meaning meadow of the dance.

ABEL-MIZRAIM From the Hebrew, meaning meadow of the Egyptians. So called from the floor of Atad, east of the Jordan, where for seven days Joseph and his brothers lamented on bringing up the body of their father Jacob from Egypt for burial; hence a place of mourning.

ABEONA Roman goddess. Guardian of children in their first efforts to run about, also of travelers.

ABER Word element of names of British origin signifying a confluence of waters. Appears in such names as Aberdeen, Aberystwyth, etc.

ABERFRAW In Celtic mythology site of the wedding feast of Branwen and Matholwyth.

ABESSA Personification of abbeys and convents; a character in Spenser's Faerie Queen.

ABGAR (ABGARUS) Appellation of kings of Edessa. Equivalent of the Egyptian Pharaoh and Ptolemy and the Roman Caesar.

ABGAR V Leper king of Edessa. He wrote a letter to Christ in which he asked Jesus to cure him. Also called Ucomo or Ukkama, meaning black.

ABHEDA In Buddhism deified mortal, sixteenth arhat. Name meaning steadfast. His emblems are caitya, stupa. In Tibet called Mi-che-pa or Mi-p'yed. Parallels Christian saint.

ABHJNARAJA One of the seven-tent Medicine Buddhas. See Medicine Buddhas.

ABHORSON Executioner in Shakespeare's Measure for Measure.

ABIA (ABIAH, ABLJAH) (1) Masculine Hebrew name meaning Jehovah is father. (2) Second son of Samuel, a judge whose corruption and injustice led to the establishment of the kingdom.

ABIATHAR (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning father of excellence. (2) In Old Testament, a friend who deserted David in his old age, for which act he was removed from his office as the eleventh Jewish high priest.

ABIB Literally, ear of corn, and signifying fresh fruit. Ancient Hebrew name for the first month of the ecclesiastical calendar; later called Nisan. Equivalent of March-April.

ABIDAN Hebrew masculine name meaning father of judgment.

ABIEL (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning father of strength, strong. (2) In the Old Testament grandfather of Saul, one of David's thirty mighty men.

ABIEZER Hebrew masculine name meaning father of help.

ABIGAIL (ABBY, GAIL, NABBY) (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning my father's joy or source of joy. (2) In the Old Testament wife of Nabal. When he died, she discovered his ingratitude to David, and by offering to make amends, she won the love of David, who made her his wife. (3) A lady's maid or waiting woman, from the character in Beaumont and Fletcher's play, The Scornful Lady.

ABIGOR Medieval demon of high degree. Grand duke of the infernal regions with sixty legions at his command. An authority on war. Portrayed as a knight carrying a lance, scepter or standard.

ABIHAIL Hebrew masculine name meaning mighty.

ABIHU (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning God is father. (2) In Old Testament second son of Aaron. He and his brother Nadab were priests who transgressed by becoming intoxicated and were consumed by fire for burning incense with common fire instead of with the fire kept perpetually on the altar of burnt-offering.

ABIJAH (BIGE, BLJAH) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning Jehovah is my father. (2) In Old Testament son of Rehoboam. First king of Judah. Like his father, he reigned as a despot.

ABIKARIB Masculine name from the Arabic, meaning my father is gracious.

ABIKU Evil spirits of the Yoruba tribe of West Africa. They always are hungry and thirsty and prey especially on children.

ABIMELECH (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning father of a king. (2) In Old Testament a Philistine who took Sarah into his harem, but being warned in a dream, he restored her to Abraham and gave Abraham 1,000 pieces of silver as an atoning gift. (3) Another Philistine who befriended Isaac, son of Abraham. (4) Son of Gideon by a concubine. He made himself king of Shechem after his father's death, and slew his father's seventy sons. Only Jotham, the youngest, escaped.

Three years later the people killed Abimelech.

ABINADAB (AMINADAB) (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning princely father. (2) Second son of Jesse, older brother of David. He followed Saul in war against the Philistines. (3) A son of Saul who died with his father in battle.

ABIPON A savage and wandering tribe of Paraguayan Indians now extinct. As a death custom they abolished certain words, which constantly transformed their language.

ABIRAM (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning father exalted. (2) A prince of Reuben who unsuccessfully conspired with Dathan and Korah to overthrow the authority of Aaron and Moses in the wilderness.

ABISHA Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning my father is the Lord.

ABISHAG (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning author of error. (2) In Old Testament a beautiful Shunammite virgin, who chose to marry and cherish David in his old age.

ABISHAI (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning father of a gift. (2) A Hebrew general, nephew of David and one of the bravest of David's might men. Slayer of Ishbi-benob, a giant who was about to slay David.

ABISHALOM See Absalom.

ABISHUA Hebrew masculine meaning father of safety.

ABITAL Hebrew feminine name meaning whose father is dew.

ABIZENDEGANI Eastern fountain of youth. love of man is love of God.

ABLUTION A ceremonial or symbolic washing.

ABNAKI A confederacy of Indian tribes which frequently attacked colonists of New England. The name became synonymous with savagery, and they were called Tarrateens.

ABNER (AB) (1) Hebrew masculine name, meaning of light, my father is a lamp. (2) In Old Testament a blood relative of Saul and commander-in-chief of Saul's army. Defeated by David, he slew Asahel, who had pursued him; in turn he was killed by Asahel's brother Joab.

ABNET Band or girdle of fine linen worn by Jewish priests.

ABOKAS Melanesian home of the dead.

ABOMINATION In Christianity a term applied to the standards of the Roman army, which bore the images of Roman emperors and gods. In Egyptian antiquity applied to Jews and to shepherds. In Old Testament applied to idols and their worship.

ABONSAM Evil spirit of the negroes of Guinea, who annually beat about in every corner with brooms and sticks, scour their utensils and vessels, and scream loudly to frighten this devil.

ABOSOM Minor tutelary spirits of the African Ashanti.

ABOU (ABU) An element in Arabic names meaning father.

ABOU-BEN-ADHEM A character in Leigh Hunt's poem of the same name. He discovers that ABOUCHE In heraldry having a notch in the upper right hand corner; said of a shield.

ABOUHANNES Sacred ibis of northern Africa. Its mummies are found in ancient temples.

ABRA Feminine name from the Hebrew, equivalent of Abraham, hence mother of a multitude. In Old Testament favorite concubine of Solomon.

ABRACADABRA A cabalistic word written in triangular form and worn as a curative charm against all diseases, enemies, and pains. Also recited to break spells. In some accounts said to be made up from the initials of Ab (Father), Ben (Son), and Ruach Acadsch (Holy Spirit). In other accounts said to be coined from the root abraxas, the mystery equivalent of Mithras, which expresses mathematically the unspeakable name of the Supreme Spirit.

ABRACALAM A cabalistic word used as a charm.

ABRAHAM (ABE, ABRAM) (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning father of a multitude. (2) In Hebrew and Moslem tradition a descendant of Noah, born secretly in a cave to escape Nimrod's order to kill all males at birth. He sucked milk from his little finger and, at the end of ten days, was a full grown man. He was so wise his father introduced him at the court of Nimrod, where with his first born son Ishmael, traditional ancestor of the Arabs, he rebuilt for the fourth time the Kaaba over the sacred stone at Mecca. Receiving Gabriel's message from God, he bent down and worshiped Jehovah. He was kept in prison for a year without food, and survived; then, like Abednego, he was consigned to fire, which failed to burn him. He fled, a cloud hid him from Nimrod's army, and Gabriel carried him to Babylon, where he destroyed Nimrod's image and other idols. He spent the remainder of his life as a pilgrim known as the far-traveler. His name originally was Abram (cognate Hindu Brahm) until Jehovah, to test his faith, in a vision called on him to offer his son Isaac as a burnt offering. As he was about to draw his knife a ram was miraculously provided to take the place of Isaac, but Abraham had proved himself one who places his faith in God above all else. For his willingness to sacrifice his son God called him Abraham. He established the covenant of circumcision, which is called his seal. He is deemed to be the ancestor of Christ and worshiped by Christians as well as Jews and Moslems. As a fatal child, he resembles Oedipus and Zeus; as a prototype of absolute and unquestioning faith in the face of despair and misfortune, his vows resemble those of Agamemnon, Idomeneus, and Jephthah; as one whose growth was miraculous and who remained a wanderer who cared for flocks, he resembles Heracles and other sun heroes. See Abimelech.

Abraham's balm. Aromatic flower of the Sicilian chaste-tree, tree which supposedly preserves chastity.

Abraham's bosom. Repose of the happy in death, paradise, state of bliss. Frequently represented by a feast. To lie on one's bosom refers to the oriental mode of reclining at table.

Abraham's eye. A charm which supposedly possesses the magic power to deprive of eyesight the thief who refused to confess his guilt.

Abraham's seal. Rite of circumcision, divine token, God's covenant.

Abraham's tent. Vicissitudes of a pilgrim's life; eternal promise, faith, hope.

Abraham's vision. Test of faith.

ABRAHAMIC COVENANT Covenant made by God with Abraham that the Messiah should spring from his seed. Also the rite of circumcision.

ABRAHAMITE Christian gnostic of the 9th century School of Abraham at Antioch, which denied the divinity of Christ.

ABRAHAMMAN In the 16th and 17th centuries, on certain days, patients of the Abraham ward of London's Bethlehem (Bedlam) Hospital were permitted to go out onto the streets to beg. A badge identified them. Their success as beggars led others to wear the badge and feign lunacy, and the term came to mean an imposter or sham who sought alms under the pretense of madness. The term to 'sham Abraham,' meaning to pretend illness, derived from this usage.

ABRAHAM NEWLAND A banknote, from a signature which appeared on late 18th century English banknotes.

ABRAM (ABE) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning a high father.

ABRASA Mystical Egyptian word meaning hurt me not. The Greeks used it on amulets believing evil spirits were more familiar with the Egyptian language.

ABRAXAS (1) Gnostic name invented to express the unspeakable name of the Supreme Being, the source of 365 emanations, and portrayed with the head of a cock (Phronesis), the body of a man, legs formed from serpents (Logus and Nous), in his left hand holding a whip (emblem of Dynamis) and in his right a shield (emblem of Sophia). Solar-power name; talisman with power for vigilance, and name which may be compounded of two ancient words, i.e. abir (bull) and axis (pole), and indicating the motion of the earth, commonly called the alteration of the poles, resulted in the vernal equinox taking place at one time in Taurus, the celestial bull, over the North Pole. Four white horses draw the chariot of Abraxas, symbolizing the four ethers by means of which the solar power (Abraxas) is circulated through the universe. The seven letters signify the seven creative powers or planetary angels recognized by the ancients or the seven-rayed power of Abraxas. Compare Aum, Jao. (2) A medical talisman, especially potent against malarial fevers. An amulet or gem inscribed with a mystic figure or word, such as abraxas, which in numerology expresses 365 (alpha = 1, beta = 2, rho = 100, alpha = 1, xi = 60, alpha = 1, sigma = 200), and relates to the number of days and the number of eons ruling the year. Gnostic mystic word denoting the destroyer of giants (darkness, evil); also the 365 order of spirits occupying the 365 heavens. Mystery equivalent of Mithras because the numerical value of the two names work out to the number 365. Cognate with abrasa, root of abracadabra.

ABRUZZI CARNIVAL Carnival in which a pasteboard figure is carried by four grave diggers with pipes in their mouths and bottles of wine slung over their shoulders. The pasteboard figure represents the emasculated fertility god.

ABSALOM (ABISHALOM) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning father of peace. (2) In Old Testament rebellious son of David, typifying one who is ambitious, lawless, possessed of filial disobedience, vanity. He killed his brother and attempted to usurp the throne of his father. When pursued by David's troops in the oak wood of Ephraim, his long hair was caught in a tree, and he was slain. This situation parallels many in mythology, where the old sacred king (old year or sun) is in conflict with the new sacred king; also where the hero is emasculated and his sacred heel is saved from touching the ground by his hair. Compare hobbling; Jacob; king, lame; Llew Llaws. (3) Nick-name applied to the Duke of Monmouth, illegitimate son of Charles II of England. (4) In Chaucer's The Miller's Tale, a priggish but amorous parish clerk who comes to grief by flirting with a young wife of a wealthy aged carpenter.

ABSAROKA Name meaning crow or sparrow-hawk, and applied to Indians of the Siouan linguistic family.

ABSINTHE Absence, heartache, separation. Dream significance: illness, sorrow.

ABSOLUTE, THE God and the universe; the infinite; perfection unaltered by place or time; the permanently finished; the unknowable; the unlimited and perfect Being, free from admixture or impurity. Thirty-three, number of perfect unity.

ABSTEMII Persons of the early Christian church who would not partake of the eucharist cup.

ABSYRTUS (APSYRTOS) In Greek mythology son of King Aetes of Colchis, brother of Medea. In Medea's flight with Jason she killed her brother, dismembered his body, and one by one dropped the pieces into the Adriatic Sea (whence Absyrtides Islands) so that her father, stopping to pick up the pieces, might be delayed. A personification of the rays of the sun on the sea. As an aspect of the sun destroyed by or because of the moon, the Absyrtus myth resembles that of Adonis.

ABTAGIGI (ABSUSU) Sumerian harlot goddess. Evil spirit bringing woe to men. Name signifies she who sends messages or she who loiters about. Parallels Kilili.

ABTI Egyptian for east, place of beginnings. Cognate with apt.

ABU (ABOU) (1) Arabic prefix which means father. Cognate with aba, boa. (2) A sacred mountain in Rajputana, India; noted for old cave-temples of the Jains. (3) In ancient Sumer, lord of vegetation.

ABU BEKR In Mohammedanism father of Ayesha, Mohammed's wife; thus father of a virgin. A merchant, he became Mohammed's successor as prophet. Also called Abdallah and Al Siddick.

ABUDA In Japanese Buddhism the eight cold hells. Compare To-Kwatsu.

ABU-HASSAN In Arabian Nights a prodigal in the story of The Sleeper Awakened, who was made to believe himself calif.

ABU NUWAS The jester of Bagdad; like Baron Munchausen a man of marvelous adventures. One who always has a ready answer.

ABURY (AVEBURY) Ancient holy site, site of druid temple, megalithic remains in the form of a serpent. Cognate boa. See Ave, Ophis.

ABYDOS (1) In ancient Egypt burial place of kings. A sacred city. Also the cradle of spring of life, the entrance and source of the Abyss. (2) In Greek mythology, home of Leander who swam the Hellespont nightly to visit Hero.

ABYLA (ABILA) A mountain in Morocco (now called Jebel Musa or Ape's Hill) opposite Calpe (modern Gibraltar). One of the pillars of Heracles, a universal axis or sky support.

ABYRGA Central Asian sea-monster or snake which dwells in the lake of milk at the foot of the tree of life. Continuously attacked by the Garuda bird, which lives in the crown of the tree. Compare Yggdrasil.

ABYSS Anything immeasurable, profound, unfathomable. The bottomless pit, the dark place, Hell. A great cavity once believed to exist in the bowels of the earth. Chaos in which the universe was formed. Dream significance: (if falling into one) danger; (if on top of one) approaching danger; (if seeing one) warning. In heraldry the center of an escutcheon. In medieval Europe the abode of departed spirits, especially of the wicked; abode of the devouring beast. Word which resolves into ab-is, a term for God. Babylonian form was abzu, signifying fire or light of Ab (Father) or orb of Day. Root of Abyssinia.

ABYZU A primitive Christian demoness who caused the milk of women to be cold and frightened children in their sleep until Saint Michael forced her to reveal her forty names, and this broke her spell. See name.

AC (AG, AK) Word root from the Sanscrit meaning great or mighty.

ACACIA September 14 birthday flower signifying friendship, love which is platonic. In the language of flowers: You have elegance and grace. Symbol of fecundity, immortality of the soul, reproductivity. Menstrous blood symbolized by its gum. As a tree with thorns emblematic of divine power to repel evil. Appears frequently as a design in the capital of Egyptian and Greek columns. Related to the Greek word akis, i.e. a point or to pierce. In Egyptian tradition the supposed habitation of the mother goddess Neith. In Hebraic-Moslem tradition the burn-in bush. A superstition still prevails in Arabic Deserta that anyone who break off a twig of the sacred tree will die within the year.

Acacia, rose or white. September 15 birthday flower, signifying elegance.

Acacia, yellow. Typifies secret love.

ACACIUS Masculine name from the Greek, meaning the guileless.

ACADEME (ACADEMY) The ancient Academy of Athens; any place of learning. Named after the hero Academus, giver of knowledge. In an Italian icon represented by a woman of manly heroic aspect in a gown of many colors to indicate the various aspects of learning. She wears a gold crown and carries a file in her right hand and a garland in her left. Her masculine countenance denotes profound judgment.

ACADEMUS In Greek mythology Attic hero who revealed to Castor and Pollux the whereabouts of their sister Helen, who had been concealed by Theseus at Aphidnae. Probably an aspect of light. The gymnasium where Plato taught was named after him and called Academe.

ACADIA A fertile land; old name for Nova Scotia.

ACAGCHEMEM A California tribe of Indians who adored and sacrificed the buzzard, or great buzzard, once a year at a festival called Panes.

ACAILL Sacred book of ancient Celts. According to the Book of Acaill any king who was afflicted with a personal blemish might not reign over Ireland at Tara. Therefore, when King Cormac MacArt lost one eye, he abdicated.

ACALA (ACARA) In Buddhism the four-headed manifestation of the Bodhisattva Vajrapani. Tibetan name K'ro-bo-mi-gyo-ba. In Japan god of fire.

ACAMAS (AKAMAS) One of the great heroes of Greek mythology. Son of Theseus and Phaedra.

ACAN Chaldean Great Serpent; name signifying Great One. Mayan god of intoxicating wine. Word akin to khan.

ACANTHUS Artifice as one of the fine arts, felicity. Signifies love of art, nothing will separate the giver and the receiver. In early Christian art the plant of heaven, typifying garden of heaven. In Greek antiquity a funeral leaf. Also a design characteristic of Corinthian temples, probably signifying immortality.

ACANTUM Mayan name of each of the four Bacabs, meaning a stone erected and painted the color sacred to the cardinal point represented by the Bacab. Fertility symbol of the gods of harvest and rain. The word acan meant mead and also erected.

ACARDIACUS Fetal monstrosity without a heart; a parasite.

ACARNAN AND AMPHOTERUS In Greek mythology sons of Alcmaeon and Callirrhoe. Their mother, hearing of her husband's murder by Phegeus and his sons, asks Zeus, who loves her, to transform her boys into men to avenge their father. The prayers of Callirrhoe answered, Acarnan and Amphoterus (light heroes) kill Phegeus (darkness) and his sons and acquire the necklace and veil of Harmonia (fertility). However, because of the curse of death upon them, they refuse to give the gifts to their mother, and instead hang them at Delphi as an offering to Apollo. The curse thus broken, the brothers founded Acarnania, as Cadmus, husband of Harmonia, had founded Thebus.

ACARYAVAJRAPANI In Buddhism second celestial Bodhisattva; bearer of the thunderbolt as spiritual guide. Vajrapani in one of his Dharmapala or Defender manifestations. Guardian of the amrta which the Rahu stole. When he recovered the amrta, he drank it and his golden complexion turned dark blue. Attributes: noose, thunderbolt. In Tibet called Chak-dor-u-tsa-rya or P'yag-rdor-au-tsa-rya.

ACASTUS In Greek legend son of Pelias, husband of Astydamia. Against his father's wishes he became an Argonaut; also took part in the Calydonian boar hunt. At his father's death, he celebrated funeral games which became the theme of ancient poets and artists and in which Peleus participated. When Astydamia falsely accused Peleus, Acastus stole his magic sword, nevertheless Peleus killed him. Resembles Potiphar.

ACATHISTHUS In Greek Orthodox Church a hymn of thanksgiving to the Virgin. It is sung on Saturday of the fifth week of Lent to celebrate the repulse of the Avars from Constantinople A. D. 625.

ACCAD (1) One of the ancient Accadian people. (2) A language of early Babylon, antedating the language of the cuneiform inscriptions. Held by some to be a cryptogram. (3) A great city of Nimrod's kingdom, now a ruin. (4) Hebrew word meaning fortress.

ACCA LARENTIA In Roman mythology mother and queen of the Lares. Earth goddess to whom seed corn and the dead were entrusted. According to popular legend, wife of the herdsman Faustulus, and nurse to Romulus and Remus. Her nickname was Lupa (she-wolf or courtesan), being perhaps the source of the story they were raised by a wolf. In another account a beautiful woman, wife of Tarutius, a rich Etruscan who in gambling lost her to Mercury. The wealth of Tarutius she bequeathed to Romulus or to the Roman people. In still another legend she is said to have had twelve sons, with whom she sacrificed once a year to the fertilizing of the arva (fields) and for this reason they are known as the Arval Brothers. One of them died and Romulus took his place, founding the Arval priesthood. Her feast, the Larentalia was held on December 23rd.

ACCENSI In Roman antiquity warriors of the lowest class. They followed the army in their usual clothes, unarmed and unprotected. When armed soldiers fell they filled the gaps by picking up the weapons of those who had fallen. They also acted as orderlies.

ACCCHO Ancient Canaanite city which still survives and now is known as Acca or Acre. A heathen city; the last fortified place wrested from the Christians by the Turks. Crusaders who defended it through many sieges called it Acre, which see.

ACCIDENT Dream significance: danger; (to the head) danger to one's self or father; (to left foot) danger to a servant; (to left hand) danger to one's children; (to right foot) danger to one's brother or sister; (to right hand) danger to one's mother.

ACCIDENTAL GODS Among primitive Lapps the first object, whether a stone, stump, or tree, on which a glance falls on leaving the hut or tent in the morning, is worshiped.

ACCIPITER Latin for hawk, containing the 'piter' of Jupiter and resolvable into ak-se-pitar, Great Light Father. Compare hawk, hierax, pa.

ACCOLLE In heraldry collared, gorged, as an animal in an escutcheon. The overlapping or touching as two profile heads on coins, escutcheons, or shields; thus close alliance, matrimony, united.

ACCOLON Character in Mort d'Arthur. King Arthur fought him to regain his enchanted sword and scabbard (light rays), which Accolon had obtained through the aid of Morgan le Fay.

ACCUSED Dream significance: (by a man) good news; (by a woman) bad news.

ACE One, a minute particle, a unit. The best, highest, most perfect; also the basest, lowest, worst; hence good or bad luck. In games a scoring point. An aviator. In tarot divination all aces symbolize strength; that of clubs represents action, of diamonds represents money, of hearts represents family, of spades represents death struggle. See Tarot.

ACELDAMA Potter's field near Jerusalem, said to have been purchased with the bribe Judas took for betraying Jesus, whence the meaning, from the Aramaic, of field of blood. By extension any place of bloody or murderous association, or a burying place for paupers or for strangers.

ACEPHALI (1) In Libya a fabled nation of men without heads. (2) Any body of people not having an acknowledged head or leader.

ACEPHALUS A headless monstrosity; a tape worm.

ACERBAS (AKERBAS, SICARBAS) (1) In classical legend uncle and husband of Elissa. A powerful Tyrian noble, high priest of the god Melkarth. (2) In Virgil's Aeneid husband of Dido (Elissa), murdered by her brother Pygmalion for his riches (fertility).

ACERRA In Greek antiquity an incense box used in sacrifices.

ACESTES In Greek legend son of the Sicilian river-god Crimissus and the dew-nymph Segesta. A Trojan war hero. He discharged his arrow (lightning) with such force it took fire from the friction of the air. Also figured in Virgil's Aeneid.

ACHACHILA Bolivian spirits who send frost, hail, or rain.

ACHAEA (ACHAIA) Ancient Greek priestess of Earth, who drank the fresh blood of a bull before descending into a cave to prophesy.

ACHAEMENES (AKHAMANISH) Semi mythical Persian patriarch; founder of the Achaemenidae dynasty. He was reputed to have been an abandoned child, fed and protected by an eagle.

ACHAEANS (ACHAEI, ACHAIANS, ACHIEVI) One of the four peoples of ancient Greece. A name applied by Homer to all Greeks.

ACHAEUS Mythical culture hero; eponym of the Achaeans. Descendant of Prometheus, grandson of Hellen (eponym of Hellenic race), son of Xuthus.

ACHAM In occult science demon of Thursday.

ACHAMOTH In gnostic belief the lower or imperfect Wisdom, the weakest eon, the form under which spirit surrenders to matter and becomes the foundation of the real world.

ACHAN (ACHAR) In Old Testament a plunderer, whose act of stealing some of the spoils of Jericho, things tabu and doomed to destruction or to dedication to God, brought on the curse which caused the defeat of his people, who stoned him to death.

ACHAR (1) Religious observance of the Hindus, the mysteries as taught by the acharya, holy teacher or perceptor. (2) The pickled shoots of the bamboo, a sacred plant.

ACHATES In Virgil's Aeneid the ever faithful companion and friend of Aeneas. Called fidus Achates, hence a follower, loyal friend.

ACHELOUS (ACHELOOS) Greek river god, personification of the sacred river Achelous. Capable of form changing, in a struggle with Heracles over Deianira, he first appeared with the body of a bull and the head of a bearded and horned man, then as a snake. In the fight one of his horn's was broken off; it became the cornucopia. In snake form he was a bestower of fertility. His name denotes any running water, probably contains the same root as the Latin aqua or ak (ach) meaning great. See Acheron.

ACHERON In Greek mythology one of the five rivers surrounding Hades. The fabled abode of evil spirits into which the Cocytus and Phlegethon flowed. The river of sorrows or woe over which the dead were ferried or through which they had to battle. Later synonymous with the lower world itself. Possibly another form of Achelous. Identical with the Celtic Achren.

Food for Acheron. Dead bodies.

ACHERUSIA (ACHERUSIAN BOG)

In Greek mythology the name of several small lakes or marshes, supposedly connected with the underworld. Most important underworld lake through which the Acheron flowed. Sacred lake over which the dead were conveyed to the place of burial.

ACHILLEA Disputes, quarrels, war. As a form of the aster, the sun.

ACHILLES The greatest, most beautiful, and strongest of the heroes of Greek mythology, and one of the most renowned heroes of all time. In Greek legend the grandson of Aeacus, chief of the Myrmidons (ant clan); son of Peleus, sun hero and co-king of Ioclus, and the sea or moon goddess Thetis. Thetis bore seven sons, six of whom, as surrogates for Peleus, she burned to death and placed as immortals in heaven. To render Achilles immortal Thetis dipped him in the river Styx, holding him by the heel. Although the son of a sun hero and himself an aspect or personification of the sun, he was not immortal; he had not passed through the burning process and his heel, where held by his mother, remained vulnerable. Thetis disguised him as a girl to save him from serving as a warrior, an incident suggesting androgyny. He was discovered, and served in the Trojan war on the side of the Greeks. In an argument over Briseis he withdrew from the war, but returned to avenge the death of his friend Patroclus. He vanquished several heroes in single combat. Likewise in single combat, he killed Hector; Paris, aiming at his vulnerable heel, killed him and fulfilled a prophecy. Achilles, which means without lips, a name given to him because his lips did not touch his mother's breast inasmuch as he had been brought up by his tutor Chiron, embodies ak (ach), meaning great. He typifies beauty, disputes, a dodger, faithful friend, manly valor, one who hides in woman's skirts, quarrels, strength with one fatal weakness, sulkiness, vulnerability, war, wrathfulness. He exemplifies one of the horrors of war, the death of the young. The Achilleis is a solar epic: the sun is separated early from the darkness or twilight of dawn (Thetis), is hidden by clouds (woman's clothes), from which he emerges in glory. His affair with Briseis may be related to the Vedic myth of Aharya and Brisaya. His various combats are battles of light; the sun (Achilles) eventually tramples on darkness (Hector). Soon after victory the sun sets, so Achilles' death follows that of Hector. His vulnerable heel compares with Balor's eye and Balder's mistletoe. Also resembles Abel, Bran, Diarmuid, Harpocrates, Krishna, Llew Llaw, Math, Mopsus, Talus. See crucifixion; heel; hobbling; king, lame; surrogate.

Achilles argument. Sophism to prove that motion is impossible.

Achilles heel. A single vulnerable or weak spot in a man's or a nation's character.

Achilles of England. Sir Arthur Wellesley (Duke of Wellington), who crushed Napoleon at Waterloo. Also known as the Iron Duke.

Achilles spear. A magic spear which has the power to cure the wounds it makes.

Achilles wrath. Wrath which affects the progress of an enterprise or war.

ACHISH In Old Testament a Philistine king who befriended David when David was at war with Saul.

ACHITOPHEL (ACHITHOPHEL, AHITHOPHEL) Literally, foolish brother. (1) In Old Testament treacherous friend of David who deserted to Absalom. (2) In Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel satirical sobriquet of the Earl of Shaftesbury.

ACHIYALATOPA In Zuni legend knife-feather monster with celestial powers.

ACHOR Literally, trouble. In Old Testament a valley north of Jericho, which suffered troubles caused by the sins of Achan, who was here put to death. The prophets alluded to it with promises of hope and joy to come.

ACHREN (ACHERON, OCHREN) In Brythonic legend a name for the otherworld. See Battle of Trees.

ACHSA (ACHSAH) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning anklet.

ACHUAS A tribe of pigmies in the Belgian Congo.

ACIM Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning the world will judge.

ACIS In Greek mythology a handsome shepherd, son of Pan and the Naiad Symaethis, killed by Polyphemus, chief of the Cyclops, over the love of Galatea. Acis blood formed the stream which bears his name.

ACKAWOI Member of a warlike Caribbean tribe; a warrior.

ACKMAN An outlaw, a river thief.

ACLIS A club studded with spikes, thrown from the hand and drawn back by a leather thong. Roman writers called it a barbarian club. Compare Acontium.

ACME Perfection, the highest point of attainment. Resolves into ak-ome, i.e. great sun. Cognate with akhoom (ahom), Egyptian name for the letter A.

ACOEMETI Literally, sleepless. An Eastern order of 5th century Christian monks and nuns who kept praying night and day.

ACOKOTTAMASRI One of the seventeen Medicine Buddhas, which see.

ACOLYTE An altar attendant of minor rank, hence an assistant or follower. In astronomy a satellite or companion star.

ACONCAGUA Highest peak in the Andes, dedicate to and named after the Great Sun (Ac = great; on = sun).

ACONITE Deadliness, illicit love, remorse, vendetta. In the language of flowers: Your disdain will kill me. A witch's flower.

Crowfoot aconite. False security.

Winter aconite. Lustre.

Wolfsbane aconite. Misanthropy.

ACONTIUM (1) In the games of Greek antiquity one of the exercises of the pentathlon. The game of hurling a dart or javelin attached to a leather thong. Compare aclis. (2) One of certain cord-like organs of various sea-anemones, which are thrust out when the animals are irritated.

ACONTIUS AND CYDIPPE A favorite love story of ancient Greece. Cydippe was worshipping Artemis in the temple at Delos, when Acontius threw at her feet an apple inscribed with the words, "I swear by the sanctuary of Artemis that I will wed Acontius." Cydippe read the inscription aloud and then tossed the apple away. The reading bound her by oath, and Artemis compelled the marriage.

ACORN Androgyny, the lingam and yoni; a combination of I, the Holy One, and O, the generative orator or cup. Also simply the lingam or male principle. Fruit of the oak, holy tree of Jupiter, Thor, and Zeus, and a fertilizing power, a kernel of life. In heraldry symbolizes strength.

ACORUS Used as an ingredient of the sacred oil of the Jews of the Tabernacle.

ACOTZENTLI Tree on which Mexicans subsisted during the second age of man, thus a tree of life. See Ages of Man.

ACRASIA Enchantress in Spenser's Faerie Queene; intemperance personified.

ACRATES Personification of incontinence in Spenser's Faerie Queene. From the Greek akrates (powerless). In Greek antiquity a potent spirit of unmixed wine was called Acratus (Akratos).

ACRE (ACCA, ACRA) Ancient Palestinian city; its kings next in importance to those of Sidon and Tyre. Name means Great Sun (Ac = great; Ra = sun). See Acho.

ACREA An appellation of Rhea, the great mother. Resolves into ac-er-es, i.e. great fire essence or resplendent mother.

ACRES, BOB A coward, a swaggerer; from the character in Sheridan's comedy.

ACRISIUS In Greek mythology king of Argo, descendant of the Danaides, father of Danae, and grandfather of Perseus. When an oracle told him that Danae's son would slay him, he imprisoned his daughter in a tower. Zeus, however, descended into her bower in the form of a shower of gold (sunrays), and the child Perseus was born of this union. Acrisius had mother and son set adrift on the sea in a chest, which floated safely to the island of Seriphos, where they were rescued by a fisherman. Years later Perseus fulfilled the prophecy; thus the old year (or sun) was slain by the new year (or sun). His death resembles that of Balor.

ACROPOLIS Citadel of an ancient Greek city, usually higher than the city. The most noted is the Acropolis of Athens. Figuratively, height affording refuge in case of attack.

Acropolis statues. A number of draped statues, probably representatives of ancient Athenian priestesses, unearthed during the 19th century on the Acropolis at Athens. Probably buried after the battle of Salamis in 480 B. C.

ACT

Act of God. An inevitable action of natural forces, such as may not have been foreseen and could not have been prevented. Also called act of Providence.

Act of Truth. At a Tokyo Buddhist temple believers who meet with difficulties, such as lovers who are unable to obtain the consent of parents to marry, will jump from the roof of the temple believing that those who do so without flinching and land without injury will obtain success. en by God to enlighten the mind and strengthen the will to do good and avoid evil.

ACTAEON In Greek mythology son of Aristaeus and Autonoe. A hunter who, having surprised Artemis, the moon goddess, bathing, was changed by her into a stag, whereupon he was immediately torn to pieces and devoured by his own dogs. A stag being a horned animal, Actaeon became prototype of men whose wives are unfaithful. The horns typify the rays of the sun killed as a result of the presence of the moon. Actaeon is a personification of the strong plant growth of the heat of summer. Religious repasts, called omophagi, consisting of the raw flesh of sacred animals, Actaeon personifying the sacred stag, were held in ancient Greece. As one who was slain for trespassing in a woman's realm, he resembles Endymion and Pentheus.

ACTION GAMES An ancient Greek festival held in honor of Apollo.

ACTION Masculine principle; the feminine principle is passivity. Principle of the devil, as action commits one in full. Also the sun, which usually in mythology is personified by a male deity.

Action's death. Total eclipse of the sun.

ACTIUM A Greek promontory where Octavius Caesar defeated Anthony; hence a field of defeat (or victory).

ACTOR Dream significance: deceit, falseness. From the Greek, meaning to drive, lead. Resolves into ak-tor, i.e. great tor, eternal author of the universe. Cognate auctor (Latin for author), crater, Hector.

ACTUAL GRACE In Roman Catholic Church supernatural help giv-

Actual sin. In theology the sin of an individual as contrasted with original sin.

ACUECUEYOTL Aztec personification of water-making waves. An aspect of Chalchiuhtlicue.

A. D. (1) After date; ante diem (before the day). (2) Anno Domini (in the year of our Lord).

AD (1) Word root signifying father (dad). Identical with at. Source of Adon, Adonis. (2) Literary suffix used in titles imitating Iliad, as in Dunciad. (3) In Moslem tradition a descendant of Noah, progenitor of an idolatrous and powerful Arabian tribe, the Adites. Founder of the city of Ad, which was destroyed by a mighty wind (voice of God) when his descendant Shedad mocked the prophets who warned him of his pride.

ADA (1) Occult magic word used to dispel back luck. (2) Feminine name from the German, meaning noble and from the Hebrew, meaning happy. Sometimes confused with Hebrew adah, meaning ornament. Also Adela, Adele, and used as deminutive for Adelaide.

ADAD (1) Aramaean god of storm and wind, god of retributive justice, designated as roaring-one or thunderer. Deity concerned with divination and omens. As rain god, giver of waters, he was revered; as storm god, he was greatly feared; as war god, he was invoked to destroy enemies with drought, thunderbolt or whirlwind. At the request of Ishtar he sent the deluge. In art his mount is a bull and he hurls forked lightning and a thunderbolt.

Other names by which he is known are Addu, Bardad, Balshameme, Bir, Birque, Dadu, Hadad, Iluwir, Rammanu. Cognate Yahveh, Zeus. (2) Syrian sun god, whose wife was Adargyns, the earth. Between them the sun's rays became creative. Identified as Martu by the Amorites.

ADAD-EA Babylonian ferryman across the waters of death to Ut-Napishtim's immortal abode. Gilgamesh was ferried by him. Parallels Charon.

ADAEMONIST One who denies the existence of a personal devil.

ADAH (1) Hebrew feminine name meaning ornament. (2) In Old Testament the wife of Cain, hence the wife of a murderer. Also the name of the first of the two wives of Lamech, a descendant of Cain, killer of a man in self-defense, and the first polygamist on record.

ADAI AH Hebrew feminine name meaning whom Jehovah adorns.

ADAL Masculine name from Middle High German, meaning noble.

ADALBERT Masculine name from Middle High German, meaning nobly bright.

ADAM (ADAMAH, ADE, EDIE, EDOM, ODEM) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning earth, man, red, red earth. Cognate Adon, Adonai. (2) In old Arabian, Hebrew, and Syrian tales, progenitor of the human race. Formed by God in His own image in the Garden of Eden with dust that the angel Michael had collected from the center and the four quarters of the earth and given life by the Creator's breath. From Adam's rib God created Eve. Because they succumbed to temptation they were expelled from the Garden of Eden, and brought the curse of mortality upon the human race. See mortality. In a medieval tale God gathered the materials from the eight directions and made Adam's blood of water, his bones of stone, his eyes of the sun, his flesh of the earth, his ligaments of roots, his spirit of wind, his thoughts of clouds, his warmth of fire (compare Ymir, whose body gave these things to the world). Adam's head was buried allegedly at the northern approach to Jerusalem to protect the city from invasion, a burial paralleling that of Bran and Eurystheus. Etymologically Adam derives from a Babylonian term meaning man in the general sense. Adam may therefore be taken to refer to both mankind and to the particular individual who was the first man. According to the Bible, although Adam is not of the substance of God, he as man is capable of communication with God, of moral judgement and reason, all of which qualities are possessed by no other living thing. Like Christ, Adam was created by God and therefore with Christ he is supreme in wisdom, according to Christian tradition. In Arabic, Christian, and Hebrew tradition, God's image of Himself, first man, motherless man. The last act of creation. Before his fall from grace, Adam typifies primitive innocence; after his fall, penitence. Like Buddha, his footprint became his emblem. In his various aspects he parallels Adapa, Alulim, Manu, Prometheus, Tagtug, Tii, Torongoi, Vere. (3) In Shakespeare's As You Like It an old and faithful servant. (4) A jailer.

Adam's ale. Water, because the first man had nothing else to drink.

Adam's footprint. Cavity on a mountain in Ceylon, said by Moslems to be the footprint of Adam, by the people of India to be the footprint of Buddha or Siva. See Adam's Peak.

Adam's jewel. Jewel which lights the way to the underworld; a divination jewel.

Adam's Peak. Mountain in Ceylon said to contain Adam's footprint. According to Moslem tradition Adam had been compelled to stand there for 1,000 years on one foot as a penance for eating the apple in the Garden of Eden. See Adam's footprint.

Old Adam. Depraved human nature, evil inherent in man, unregenerate nature in man.

Second Adam. Jesus Christ.

ADAMANT Alternative name of diamond. Derived from Greek adamas, meaning unconquerable. A symbol of the tranquility of the soul.

ADAMASTOR In Camoens's Lusiad the Spirit of the Cape, a hideous phantom which supposedly appeared to Vasco da Gama while on a voyage to the East Indies.

ADAM BELL An archer and outlaw of Percy's Reliques. He is noted for his great skill and, like Robin Hood and William of Cloudelee, he never misses his mark. He is interpreted to be a sun hero, as the sun strikes with deadly precision. The name of William Tell is said to have been derived from the given name of William of Cloudelee and the last name of Adam Bell.

ADAMINA Feminine name corresponding to masculine Adam. Hebrew: earth woman, red earth.

ADAMITE (1) One descended from Adam, hence a human being. According to preadamites men existed before Adam. (2) A North African sect which originated in the 2nd century A. D. They spurned marriage, assembled in paradises in the nude and derived their beliefs from a gnostic espousal of sensualism as a path to mystic revelation. The sect appeared in various places in Europe during periods of political unrest until the middle of the 19th century. Hence a member of a religious group which meets in the nude in imitation of Adam and Eve, to prove return to primitive innocence. (3) Member of a nudist colony.

ADAM KADMON (ADAM KAIMON) In Cabalism the archetypal man. The second divine principle and personification of the ten Sephiroth, which are direct emanations of God. The awakened or regenerate Adam; primordial man.

ADAPA In Assyrian and Babylonian mythology son of Ea (Enki) or created by Ea. Personification of the spring sun which defeats winter storms. In legend he is the first man. One day, while Adapa was fishing, Shutu, the south wind, upset his boat; enraged he turned on Shutu and broke her wings, and for seven days no wind blew. He was summoned to the court of Anu, the encircling sky. Ea, jealous that his son would see the glories of heaven, advised him to refuse the bread and water that would be offered to him, implying if he consumed them he would not be able to return to earth (suggesting the Persephone motif). Adapa appeared penitent before Anu and was forgiven, and Anu offered him the bread and water of life, which would have made him immortal. He refused them and lost immortality. This illustrates the doctrine of original sin in which ignorance on the part of the great ancestor and trickery by a jealous god bring mortality to mankind. Probably the prototype of Adam. See mortality.

ADAR (1) Second brightest star in Canis Major, situated in the Great Dog's thigh. (2) Twelfth month of the Babylonian calendar, answering to February-March. Adopted by the Jews as the 6th month of the civil and 12th month of the ecclesiastical year. In leap years a seventh month appears in the civil calendar called Adar Shemi.

ADDA Masculine name from the Anglo Saxon, meaning noble cheer.

ADDA-NARI Hindu goddess of nature, religion, and truth, identified with Isis. She carries emblems identical to Mercury's, a circle (or coin), cup, magician's rod, sword.

ADDEPHAGIA Roman goddess of good-cheer. Portrayed as a smiling matron surrounded by emblems of eating and drinking.

ADDER That which has a deadly bite and darts up on the unwary. See serpent for further symbolism. In Christian tradition an aspect of the devil. In Greek mythology an attribute of Eris, goddess of discord.

Addar stone. A perforated rounded stone found in Great Britain, which is believed to cure the bite of an adder. Also called adder bead; adder gem; serpent stone; and druid stone, because of the supposition that druids wore them as charms.

Adder's tongue (blossom). Jealousy.

ADORSSED (ADORSED) In heraldry animals, fish, etc., turned back to back on an escutcheon.

ADDU A name of Adad, Aramaean storm and thunder god. Later merged with Marduk.

ADEKAGAGWAA In Iroquois mythology the sun who rests in southern skies during the winter.

ADELAIDE Feminine name from the German through the French, meaning nobility or princess.

ADELAR Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning noble eagle.

ADELBERTA Feminine name corresponding to masculine Adelbert. From Old Teutonic, meaning nobly bright.

ADELGARD Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning noble guard.

ADELINDA Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning noble snake.

ADELINE (ADALINE, ADDIE, ADDY, ADELA, ADELAIDE, ADELE, ADELHEID, ADELICIA, ADELINA, ELSE, ILSE) Feminine name from Old Teutonic, meaning of noble birth, a princess.

ADELPHIA A monstrosity in which two distinct organisms are united, as the Siamese twins. In medicine the resemblance or relationship between certain diseases. A section of London built in the 19th century by two brothers. Word from the Greek meaning brothers.

ADELPHIARCHAL Among various North American Indians tribal control by a group of leading men in the capacity of brothers.

ADELPHOGAMY Polyandry, which see. A custom in which brothers have a wife or wives in common.

ADERYN Y CORPH In Welsh folklore supernatural bird which foretells death.

ADESSENARIAN A member of a 16th century Christian sect holding that the body of Christ was present in the eucharist but not by transubstantiation.

ADEVISM Hindu atheism; denial of the devas.

ADHARMA Personification of Brahma as the destroyer of all things. Name from the Sanscrit, meaning injustice, unrighteousness.

ADHVARYU A Hindu priest whose duty it is to assist in reciting the prayers of the Yajur-Veda and to perform manual labor at sacrifices.

ADHYATMAN (ADHYATMA) Hindu Supreme Spirit, soul of the universe, source of life.

ADIBUDDHA (ADHIBUDDHA) Author of the universe; supreme primordial Buddha. Saint of the wheel of time. All things are emanations or manifestations of Him. He was believed to be infinite, omniscient, and self-existent, manifested from the syllable Aum, and by the exercise of the five Meditations to have evolved out of himself the five Dhyani Buddhas.

ADICIA In Spenser's Faerie Queene wife of the Soldan. An unrighteous woman transformed into a raging tigress.

ADI-DAIVATA In Sanscrit occultism the Supreme Spirit as dwelling in the solar orb or when fully manifest in man; lord of all the gods.

ADIEL Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning an ornament of God.

ADIM Sanscrit for first. Cognate with Adam, Adon, Adonai.

ADIN Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning the voluptuous, and from the Persian, meaning the luxurious. Feminine form Adina.

ADIRI Kiwai (Melanesian) land of the dead. Afterworld where life is easier than on earth.

ADIRONDACKS Iroquoian name of the Algonquins, signifying he eats bark.

ADISSECHEN In Hinduisim world-sustaining serpent.

ADITI Originally an abstract Vedic deity; sky, the visible infinite. Later the daughter of Daksha and wife of Kasyapa, by whom she was the mother of Indra, Vishnu, the Aditya, and other deities. She also is said to be the daughter of Vasus, mother of the Rudras, sister of the Aditya, and wife of Vishnu. With Mitra and Varuna she is implored for freedom from disease and forgiveness from sin. Sometimes she is hailed as a cow, in which form she is the great primal mother. She is known variously as mother of the gods, mother of the world, supporter of the sky, sustainer of earth. Aditi in Sanscrit is used as an adjective to mean boundless, infinite, and as a noun to mean freedom, infinity, security, particularly that of heaven.

Aditya. Literally, sons of Aditi. A designation of the sun applied to seven of Aditi's sons: Ansa, Aryaman, Bhaga, Daksha, Mitra, Surya, Varuna. Each name had at one time or another been that of the sun. Gods of celestial light, later increased to twelve, and intended to be the aspects of the sun during the twelve months or journey through the houses of the zodiac. Included when increased to twelve: Dhatri, Indra, Marttanda, Savitri, Vishnu.

ADITYABANDHU A name of Buddha relative to the sun.

ADLAI Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning justice of Jah.

ADLEY Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning the just.

ADMAH (1) Hebrew word meaning fortress. (2) Ancient city near Sodom. One of the four sinful cities on the fruitful plain of Siddim; destroyed by fire from heaven and covered by the Dead Sea.

ADMETUS (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning tameless. (2) In Greek mythology a king served by a god. Son of Pheres, husband of Alcestis. King of Thessaly. Apollo, for slaying the Cyclopes, was sentenced by Zeus to serve a mortal for a year and directed to tend the flocks of Admetus. Because Admetus was kind to him Apollo rewarded the king by increasing his flocks and giving him never-ending life, if when the time came for him to die, another substituted for him. Neither his parents nor his slaves would take his place, but his faithful wife Alcestis sacrificed herself. Hercules, touched by this noble act, descended into Hades and rescued Alcestis. Admetus was an Argonaut; he also took part in the Calydonian boar hunt.

ADOLESCENCE CEREMONIES

A world wide practice among primitive peoples. They are regarded as necessary for both the welfare of the individual and the tribe. Beatings, circumcision, mock-burials, tattooing, and tests of endurance and strength are frequently associated with the rites.

ADOLPHUS (ADOLFO, ADOLPH, ADOLPHE, DOLF, ODULF, UDOLFO) Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning noble hero, noble wolf.

ADON (1) In France, a dandy. (2) Great deity of the Phoenicians. Brother-husband-son of Astarte. Literally, lord or master, from the root ad or dad, signifying father. Cognate with Adam, adim, Adonai, Adonis. Deity identical with Eshmun, Kemosh, Melkart.

ADONAI (ADONAY) (1) Old Testament name for God. Name substituted by the Hebrews in place of the ineffable name YHWH. (2) A Semitic title which was bestowed on the sun or warm sunlight. (3) In cabalism a name of Malkuth, the tenth Sephira. A glyph of existence capable of twelve transpositions, all meaning 'to be.' (4) Among occultists the Great Spirit. Mystic and poetic term for the Supreme Being, spoken of as the Monad, and used in Bulwer-Lytton's mystic novel Zanoni. (5) Among present day mystics a symbol of faith. (6) Word cognate with Adam, adim, Adon, Adoni.

ADONI Designation meaning my lord. In Syro-Macedonian tradition a superior and nameless lord of life under whose protection the year was placed. Compare Adonai, Adonis.

ADONI-BEZEK A Canaanite tyrant of Bezek, who defeated seventy neighboring chiefs and cut off their thumbs and great toes and fed them like dogs. When he in turn was defeated, the same treatment was meted out to him.

ADONIA A yearly mourning festival in honor of Adonis observed by the Greeks and Phoenicians and later by other peoples.

ADONICA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning sweet.

ADONIAH In Old Testament fourth son of David. He aspired to the throne and near the end of David's reign plotted to obtain succession in place of Solomon. On the death of his father he applied for the hand of Abishag, the young virgin who was married to David in his old age. The throne was given to Solomon and Adonijah was put to death.

ADONIRAM (ADORAM, HADORAM) Chief of the receivers of tribute under David and Solomon; director of the 30,000 workers sent to Lebanon to cut lumber for the Temple. Believed to have been married to a sister of Hiram, builder of the Temple. He was stoned to death when he tried to gather taxes. In art shown with carpenter's tools.

ADONIS (1) September 16 birthday flower. Symbolizes sad memories. In Japan called fukujuso and represents fertility, good fortune, and health. (2) A young man of rare beauty; ironically a beau or dandy, a fop. A handsome but conceited young man. A form of wig. (3) A fish known to ancient Semites was called Adonis. It probably represented the god Tammuz after he had been thrown into the sea at the harvest ceremony. (4) Greek adaptation of Semitic form of address, Adonai; also applied to the Babylonian fertility god Tammuz. In the most popular version of the legend a Syrian king named Theias engaged in unnatural love with his daughter Myrrha (Smyrna). Repenting, he was about to kill her when the gods in pity transformed her into a tree. Ten months later the tree burst asunder and Adonis emerged. Charmed by his beauty, Aphrodite hid the infant in a chest and gave him to the care of Persephone, goddess of the underworld, who became enamoured of him and later refused to give him up. An appeal was made to Zeus who ruled Adonis was to spend one-third of the year with Aphrodite, one-third of the year with Persephone, the remaining third at his own disposal. While hunting he was fatally wounded in the thigh by a wild boar, which in one version was Ares, who loved Aphrodite; in another version an animal of the herd of the malevolent Artemis. Adonis was mortal, and with his untimely death barrenness fell upon the earth. Aphrodite's grief was so great the gods gave him divine attributes and the world was saved by his yearly resurrection corresponding to the yearly vegetation cycle. In one interpretation he was sacrificed because he had trespassed into a woman's realm (that of Aphrodite and/or Artemis). In some accounts of the Adonis myth, Aphrodite changed his blood into the anemone.

The swine was sacred to him. Adonis, as a beautiful youth, child of incestuous birth, deserted infant, fertility god, lover-son, trespasser, one who has been mutilated, one who has visited and returned from the underworld, is identical to or has features in common with: Absyrtus, Attis (Atys), Christ, Endymion, Hylas, Hypistos, Mithra, Moses, Narcissus, Odysseus, Pentheus, Ra, Tammuz. Name cognate with Adam, adim, Adonai. See Mutilation, Trespassing in a Woman's Realm.

Adonis Garden. A garden of short-lived flowers, a flower show, a worthless toy. Allusion to quick-growing plants, tended for eight days, allowed to wither, and then in fertility rites thrown into the sea with images of the dead Adonis.

Adonis River. River in Lebanon which each spring, due to the red earth which is washed down from the mountain, turns red. The crimson strain is said to be the blood of Adonis.

ADONIST One of the party of Hebraists who maintain that the vowels of the word Jehovah are not those really belonging to the Hebrew word JHVH, but those belonging to Adonai or Elohim.

ADOPTION (1) In theology the act of divine grace by which believers in Christ are received into the family of God. (2) A practice among primitive peoples in which a woman will take a child she intends to raise and push or pull him through her clothes; afterward the child is looked upon as her very own.

Adoptionist. In Christian history one of an 8th century Spanish sect which maintained that Christ was the son of God by adoption only.

Adoptive arms. In heraldry arms of one family marshaled with those of another as a condition by which one enjoys the inherited estate.

ADORATION In Christian tradition the act of adoring as pertaining to the Deity, worship of God or reverence given to some inferior person or object related to God, as the cross, host, saints, Virgin Mary. Formerly a method of electing a pope by an act of homage from two-thirds of the cardinals present, now the homage is given by cardinals after the election.

ADORATORY A place of sacrifice or worship, especially one of pagan character.

ADRAMMELECH (ADRAMELECH, ADRAMELEK) (1) Cabalistic arch-demon. See Samael. (2) In Old Testament parricide victim. The Assyrian king who, returning from a fatal expedition against Hezeliiah, was murdered by his two sons when they learned he was about to sacrifice them to his idol Nisroch. (3) Sun god of Sepharvaim. The children of his worshipers were made to pass through fire in his honor. Sometimes confused with Anammelech, moon deity.

ADRANUS (ADRANOS) Ancient Sicilian deity.

ADRASTEIA In Greek mythology: (1) goddess of inevitable fate; later called Nemesis. Also a name of Rhea. (2) Cretan nymph, daughter of Melisseus, to whom Rhea entrusted the infant Zeus to be reared in the Dictaeon grotto.

ADRASTUS (ADRASTOS) In Greek legendary history king of Argos, father of Argia, who was the wife of Polynices, exiled king of Thebes. To regain the throne for his son-in-law, Adrastus led the Seven Against Thebes. Due to the fleetness of his horse Arion, he was the only survivor. Ten years later he persuaded his own son and the sons of the slain heroes to attack Thebes, which was razed. His son died in the attack and Adrastus grieved to death. A light hero.

ADRIAN (HADRIAN) (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning of the Adriatic Sea; original meaning black. The name of Roman emperors and of several popes; Pope Adrian IV being the only pope of English blood. (2) Of or pertaining to a type of human race with short head, long face, and tall of stature, as the Albanians.

Adrianite. An Anabaptist follower of Adrian Hamstedius (16th century), who held that Christ was formed solely from the substance of his mother.

Adrianopolis. Name by which the Romans designated Tadmor (Thadmor), city of palms, founded by Solomon at a remote oasis. Alexander conquered the city and called it Palmyra.

ADRIEL (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning flock of god. (2) In Old Testament son-in-law of Saul. His five sons were put to death to avenge the cruelties of Saul, their grandfather.

ADRIENNE Feminine name corresponding to the masculine Adrian.

ADROP The philosopher's stone or substance from which it supposedly was derived.

ADSCRIPT A serf attached to a feudal estate and subject to transfer with it, thus one bound to the soil.

ADULLAM In Old Testament cave in which David hid from King Saul; hence a shelter against death. Also the name of an ancient city in Judea.

ADULTERY Symbolized by a viper and lamprey entwined. In early Britain portrayed by a stork. Indigenous tribes of Sarawak believe that, if wives commit adultery while husbands are in the jungle searching for camphor, the camphor will evaporate. In Bengal adultery undetected and unexpiated supposedly will cause an epidemic.

ADUMMIM Scene of Christ's parable, the Good Samaritan. In ancient times famous as a lurking place for robbers.

ADVENT In Christian tradition a religious season commemorating the first and second coming of Christ. Season of conception. It encompasses the four Sundays before Christmas and begins with the Sunday closest to November 30th. Instituted as a preparation for the Feast of the Nativity.

ADVERSARY, THE The devil, Satan.

ADVOCATE, THE Jesus Christ as the Advocate or Intercessor with the Father; thus anyone who pleads on behalf of another.

ADYTUM The innermost or secret shrine in temples, open only to priests. Hence a secret chamber or anything hidden and profound. From Greek adyton, meaning not to be entered.

ADZAN Moslem call to prayer. According to tradition it was sung to a faithful Moslem by a Stranger in Green Rainment and will signal the last hour, the end of time, when it shall be sung by Imam Mahdi.

AEACUS (AIAKOS) In Greek mythology demigod king of Aegina. A fertility lord. Son of Zeus and Aegina, father of Peleus, Phokos, and Telamon, grandfather of Achilles and Ajax. Peleus and Telamon, in a jealous rage, killed Phokos, and the land of Aeacus was stricken by plague. Zeus, to give his son subject over whom to rule, created a populous out of ants, the Myrmidons. Aeacus, renowned throughout all Greece for his justice and piety, at death was made one of the three judges of the underworld. In another version Aeacus was the son of Zeus and Europa. See Field of Truth.

AEAEA Island abode, between Italy and Sicily, of Eos; also of Circe. A name of Circe. May denote the changing, restless sky.

AEANTEUM A promontory and town of ancient Thessaly which supposedly contained the temple and tomb of Ajax.

AEBH (AOBH) In Irish mythology foster daughter of Bodb Dearg. Wife of Ler, to whom she bore four children who were changed into swans by her sister Aeife. Personification of mist. See Aeife, Ler.

AED (AEDH, AODH) A name of several tragic kings and legendary heroes in Irish mythology. Aed, son of Dagda, was slain by Conchean for seducing Conchean's wife. Aed (also called Hugh), son of Ler, was changed into a swan by his jealous aunt and step-mother Aeife. Typifies cloud or mist. Aed Ruad had companions who took sureties of firmament, sea, sun, and wind, against him, so the sun's heat caused him to bathe and the rising sea and wind drowned him.

AEDES (1) Literally, unpleasant. In ancient Greece a mosquito which transmitted dengue and yellow fever. (2) In Roman antiquity a building set apart for the worship of some divinity without formal consecration by the augurs.

AEDICULA In Roman antiquity a small house or shrine or a votive offering representing a temple. A niche for an image or an urn.

AEDON In Greek legend a daughter of Pandareus of Epheus and wife of Zethus, king of Thebes, by whom she was mother of Itylus. Envious of Niobe, wife of her husband's brother Amphion, who had six sons and six daughters, she attempted to kill Niobe's eldest son. By mistake she killed Itylus. To relieve her grief Zeus changed her into a nightingale, and she sings her plaintive song. Compares with the story of Procne and Itys.

AETES (AEETA) In Greek mythology son of Helios, the sun, and Perseis, a river-goddess. King of Colchis and custodian of the Golden Fleece, sacred herds of the sun guarded by brazen-footed bulls which breathed flames. A power of darkness, whose life depended on the safe-keeping of the fleece (power of light). Father of Absyrtus, an aspect of the sun, and Medea, moon-goddess. Medea, using magic, helped Jason to obtain the Golden Fleece and then fled with the hero. Pursued by her father and brother, she trapped and killed Absyrtus, dismembered his body, and one by one dropped the pieces into the Adriatic Sea. Aetes, stopping to pick up the pieces, was delayed in his pursuit, and Medea escaped.

AEGEON (1) In Greek mythology the third Uranid. Giant monster with 100 arms and 50 heads. With his brothers Cottus and Gyges he conquered the Titans by hurling 300 stones at once. Personification of the hurricane or violent sea. Possibly an aspect of Poseidon, whose sea residence was at Aegea in Euboea. Also called Briareus.

AEGEUS (AIGEUS) Legendary king of Athens. Father of Theseus by Aethra, daughter of Pittheus of Troezen. Before Aegeus left Aethra he placed his sword and sandals under a great rock, and told her that, when their child was able to lift the rock, he was to bring the articles with him to Athens as identification (resembling Arthur lifting his magic sword from a rock). At fifteen Theseus removed the sword and sandals and made his way to his father's court, where Medea, now wife of Aegeus, tried to slay him. Thus the moon as wife of the sea tried to destroy the sun. Medea was unsuccessful, and Theseus set out to destroy the Minotaur, promising to display a white flag on his ship if he were unharmed. On his return Theseus forgot to replace his black flag (night) with a white one (day) and Aegeus, believing his son dead, jumped into the sea and was drowned. The sea was called Aegean, another name for Poseidon. Aegeus means dash of waves on the shore and probably is akin to aisso, i.e. to move quickly.

AEGINA (AIGINA) In Greek mythology a river nymph; daughter of Asopus, river god. Mother of Aeacus. She was beloved by Zeus, who carried her off to the island, which he called Aegina to honor her. Zeus changed men into ants to give her son subjects over which to rule.

AEGIPAN In Greek mythology variously identified as the son of Zeus and the nymph Aega, as the father of Pan, as the wife of Pan, and as Pan himself. The name means goat-Pan.

AEGIR (AEGER) In Norse mythology son of Fornjot. Ocean giant whose hall is located in the depths of the western sea of Vanaheim. Kindly, he represents the peaceful sea; a stiller of storms. He is the father of nine daughters, personification of the waves, who are the mothers of Heimdal. He is the brewer of the gods, and his servants are Eldir and Fimafeng. Portrayed as an aged giant with a long foam-white beard, wearing a black helmet, or as a dragon which surrounds the worlds. Also called Gymir, Hler.

AEGIS (EGIS) In Greek mythology the storm cloud which surrounded the thunderbolt of Zeus. In later legends described as the skin of the goat which acted as Zeus's foster mother and, by Hephaestus, made into an invulnerable breastplate or shield for Zeus. Zeus lent it to other deities and finally gave it to Athena. When Perseus cut off the head of the Gorgon Medusa, he presented the head to Athena and she affixed it to her aegis. Each year a goat was sacrificed on Acropolis and the skin placed on the statue of Athena as an aegis. Because it had been the breastplate of Zeus the name came to be applied to the breastplate of emperors. It typifies the nutritive principle of nature inasmuch as it was made of a goatskin, covered with dragon scales, bordered by serpents, and had the head of the Medusa attached to it, all symbols of fertility and growth. Also symbolic of invulnerability, protection, sponsorship.

ÆGISTHUS (AIGISTHUS) In Greek mythology son of Thyestes by his own daughter, who abandoned the infant. See abandoned children. Aegisthus was suckled by a goat, carried on a feud with his father, murdered his uncle Atreus, father of Agamemnon, and during Agamemnon's absence seduced Clytemnestra, Agamemnon's wife. Upon Agamemnon's return he murdered the warrior, and in turn was murdered by Agamemnon's son Orestes. Prince of darkness, he slew the aging suns and was slain by the young or rising sun. One who slays to obtain power. A murderer, seducer, traitor; also one who has been banished (deserted) and returns to claim his rights.

ÆGLE (AIGLE) Literally, radiance. In Greek mythology the name of several nymphs. Among them was one of the daughters of Helios and sisters of Phaethon. When Phaethon was burned while driving the chariot of the sun the Heliades were changed into poplars for favoring his rash act, and their tears became amber. This nymph also is called Phoebe. Another was one of the Hesperides, famous for their brightness and splendor, and for this reason used as a term to denote brightness of color or light in art. The nymph for whom Theseus (sun) deserted Ariadne (dawn) was named Aegle (glaring day).

ÆGYPTUS (AIGYPTOS; EGYPT-US) In Greek mythology father of fifty sons who pursued and married the fifty daughters of his twin brother Danaus. At the request of Danaus all the Danaides except Hypermnestra, who married Lynceus, murdered their husbands on their wedding night, burying their heads in marshlands and their bodies at the gates of the city. In one account Aegyptus is said to have received from his father Belus sovereignty over Arabia, and he conquered Egypt, which was named after him; or his name may refer to Aegean, Aigialos, etc., words associated with Poseidon. See Danaides.

A-E-H-I-O-Y-Ω Seven Greek vowels, symbols of the seven heavens or planets whose harmony keeps the universe in existence.

ÆIFE (AOIFE) A cruel stepmother. In Irish mythology foster daughter of Bodb Dearg. When her sister Aebh, Ler's wife died, she became the wife of Ler. Jealous of Aebh's children she turned them into swans. For this Bodb transformed her into a demon of the air. The jealousy of Aeiife represents the jealousy of the glaring day for the mist (Aebh); she therefore is the natural enemy of the children of mist.

A. E. I. O. U. (1) Alles Erdreich ist Oesterreich unterthan (All earth's domain is subject to Austria). (2) Austraiæ est imperare orbi universe (Austria rules the world).

ÆELFGIFU (ELGIVA) Anglo-Saxon feminine name meaning elf-gift. The name of several 10th and 11th century English queens.

ÆELFRIC Anglo-Saxon masculine name meaning elf-ruler.

ÆELFTHRYTH Anglo-Saxon feminine name meaning elf-strength. The name of a daughter of King Alfred.

AELIA LAELIA An insoluble riddle. From an inscription in Latin discovered at Bologna.

AELLO In Greek mythology one of the Harpies which carried away human beings. Personification of whirlwind. In early accounts described as a winged beautiful maiden whose flight was swifter than that of a bird.

Later depicted with the body of a bird, claws of a lion, and the pale emaciated face of a woman.

AELWINE Anglo-Saxon masculine name meaning elf-darling. The name of a bishop at the famous monastery of Winchester, England, who was the subject of 11th century legends.

AEMILIA In Roman mythology the name of two vestal virgins. In Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors the wife of Aegeon, an abbe-bess.

AENEAS (AINEIAS) (1) Masculine name from the Greek meaning praised. (2) Sun hero of Virgil's Aeneid. The son of Anchises and Venus, he was born on sacred Mount Ida, and escaped from Troy in the excitement following the siege, carrying his father and a flame of sacred fire. He traveled from east to west, the natural direction of the sun, and experienced many adventures, including the death of his father, the loss of his companions, and a romance with Dido (see). He obtained permission from the gods to visit his father in the underworld. To assure his return to earth he was required to take with him a sacred branch or Golden Bough (see). After slaying his rival Turnus (darkness) he married Lavinia, daughter of King Latinus, and became king of the combined aborigines and early Italians, and founded the reputedly deified family into which Julius Caesar was born. Thus he was adventurer, ancestral hero, founder of a new dynasty, model of filial devotion. As one who visited the infernal regions and returned, he resembles Hercules, Izanagi, Orpheus. (2) A paralytic miraculously healed by Peter.

AENEID An epic poem by Virgil in twelve books corresponding to the transit of the sun (Aeneas) through the twelve houses of the Zodiac, including the period of darkness (winter) when the sun passes through the underworld.

AENEZI A nomadic tribe; migratory Bedouins.

AENGUS Celtic god or spirit of love. One of the Tuatha de Danann. In the story of Diarmuid and Grainne the supernatural foster-father of Diarmuid. He was accompanied by white birds with blood-dappled wings. Kisses sometimes are called the birds of Aengus.

AEOLIAN HARP The winds.

AEOLUS In Greek mythology great grandson of Prometheus, grandson of Deucalion, son of Hellen and the nymph Orseis, father of Zephyr. Zeus appointed him steward of the winds, which he kept shut in a cave and released at his pleasure or at the command of the gods. Personification of the mobility and variability of the winds. As legendary founder of the Aeolians he was king of Aeolia, a floating island (cloud), and was a member of one of the three great divisions of the ancient Hellenic or Greek race. In Homer's Odyssey, Odysseus (sun) was entertained by Aeolus, who presented the wanderer with a bag containing contrary winds with the caution that the bag was not to be opened. When Odysseus fell asleep his companions, believing he had a bag of treasures, opened it, and the winds tossed them about until they reached the land of the Laestrygonians.

Breath of Aeolus. Scandal.

AEON (AION, EON) (1) Age of the universe, an immeasurable length of time, infinity. Personification of an age. A deity or any being that is immortal. (2) In gnostic tradition one of a class of beings or powers performing various functions in the operations of the universe. Personifications of divine attribute or virtue, whose substantial powers embraced in divine essence constitute the divine plenitude. The thirty Aeons are: Beatitude, Charity, Church, Comforter, Depth, Eternal, Eucharistic, Faith, Fatherly, Hope, Immovable, Intelligence, Life, Light, Man, Mind, Mixture, Motherly, Only Begotten, Pleasure, Profundity, Reason, Self-born, Silence, Temperance, Truth, Unfading, Union, Unity, Wisdom. These are fifteen pairs and represent the sacred number five repeated three times. (3) In Greek mysteries a period when a new era of happiness should replace the mortal age of sorrow.

AEPYTUS Greek sun deity. Son of Cresphontes and Merope.

AER (AIR) In Greek mythology offspring of Uranus. The lowest region of the sky.

AERACURA In Celtic mythology probably an earth goddess; later displaced by Dispatēr.

AERARIAN A Roman citizen of the lowest rank, who had no right to vote and who paid only a poll-tax.

AERIAN In Christian history a member of a reforming sect in Asia Minor of the 4th century. Named for Aeriū, who maintained the parity of the ministry, rejected fasts, prayers for the dead, etc.

AERIE (AERY, EYRIE) The nest of any predatory bird perched upon a crag. Figuratively, any human dwelling or place situated on a crag or height. Poetically, something ethereal, lofty, spiritual.

AEROLITE Revered in most primitive religions as a healing or purification stone; sacred stone.

AEROPLANE Dream significance: ambition, success.

AESACUS In Greek mythology seer who foretold that Paris would cause the destruction of Troy.

AESAR In Irish mythology Supreme God. Fire intelligence, creator and destroyer. Spouse of Eire, the first Ith. The name means to kindle fire. Also known as Dia or Logh (spiritual flame). By Romans called Aesus.

AESCHERE In Beowulf, warrior comrade of King Hrothgar. Devoured by Grendel's dam (sea monster). Probably personifies fertility.

AESCULAPIUS See Asclepius.

AESHMA (AESM) Zoroastrian

fiend of anger, lust, outrage, and violence. Aid of Angra Mainyu. Defeated eventually by Yazata Sraosha. Identified with Asmodeus of the Book of Tobit.

AESIR In Norse mythology the twelve gods who dwell in Asgard (heaven): Odin, All Father, the chief, mate of Frigga; Balder, son of Odin, sun god, mate of Nanna; Bragi, god of poetry and eloquence, mate of Iduna; Herm-oder, Odin's son and messenger, divine intelligence; Hodar, the blind, deity of darkness; Hoenir, creator god; Loki, god of mischief; Svipdag, the shiner, mate of Freya; Thor, eldest son of Odin, thunderer; Tyr, son of Odin, god of wisdom; Vali, Odin's youngest son; Vidar, god of silence. In some accounts Forseti, Frey, Heimdal, Njord are substituted for one of the above. Odin, Hoenir, and Loki compose a trinity. The Aesir are sky gods as distinguished from the Vanir, sea gods. They personify powers of good and live under the shadow of Ragnarok. In medieval etymology connected with Asia and have been referred to as men of Asia. The singular form of the name, Asa (Aes, As, Ass), is probably connected with Sanscrit anas, i.e. breath, wind; hence animistic beings or souls. Name also cognate with Asar (a form of Osiris), Asari (Babylonian), Assur (Assyrian), Azur (Hebrew), Esar (Turkish), and Sire (Persian).

AESON (AISON) In Greek mythology son of Cretheus and Tyro. His younger half brother Pelias usurped Iolcus, his kingdom. To save the life of his ten-year old son Jason, he said the boy was dead, and sent him to the Centaur Chiron to be educated. When, years later, Jason appeared at the court of his uncle with only one sandal, Pelias, who had been warned to beware of a one-legged man, sent Jason after the Golden Fleece (fleece of the herds of the sun). Medea returned with Jason, restored Aeson's youth by magic, and prevailed upon the daughters of Pelias to cut up the body of their father and place the limbs in a caldron, saying that she would again restore him to life as a young man. Thus the prophecy was fulfilled. This belongs to the brothers-in-conflict motif of folklore.

AES SIDHE In Irish legend the fairy clan, god or fairies of the mounds.

AETHRE (AETHER, AITHRE, ETHER) In Greek mythology personification of all permeating atmosphere, the highest region, abode of Zeus. In one version daughter of Uranus, in another of Nyx and Erebus. Also said to be the daughter of Pitheus, king of Troezen, and by Aegeus (sea), who deserted her, the mother of Theseus (sun). This last belongs to a group of dawn myths in which the sun is born of pure air and the sea. In Roman mythology a primal deity or force. By Dies (day) parent of Coelus, Roman equivalent of Uranus. Name cognate with Aud, Arthr (Arthur), and with Uther of Uther Pendragon.

AETIUS In Christian history a 4th century theologian who preached that Christ was a created being, hence essentially unlike God. He was called the Atheist or Ungodly, and was banished from the church.

AETNA See Etna.

AF-AB Word root meaning living orb, signifying the sun. Root of affable.

- AFAR A nomadic dark Mohammedan people of East Africa.
- AFER The southwest wind.
- AFERVENTUS Ancient Italian deity of the southwest wind.
- AFFEC Word root meaning great life; root of affect, affection, etc.
- AFFECTION Symbolized by a ring. In an Italian icon personified by a winged mature woman holding a woodcock. A lizard is at her feet.
- AFFLICTION Mortification, self-inflicted religious discipline.
In astrology a planet unfortunately situated in the horoscope.
- AFGHANISTAN RECEPTION The traveler before he enters a village frequently is met with fire and incense, sometimes a tray of embers is thrown under the hoofs of his horse with a greeting of welcome, sometimes goats are killed and the blood of the animals sprinkled on the road. A purification rite intended to drive away the evil spirits of strangers who are greatly feared.
- AFGOD An effigy, a false god.
- AFHUS A small structure adjoining a Norse temple in which altars, idols, etc. were placed.
- AFIFI A tribe of pigmies supposedly inhabiting equatorial Africa, a legendary people.
- AFIKOMEN In the Sedar service of the Jewish Passover feast one-half of the middle of three matzoths which represent the three tribes: Cohen, Levi, and Israel. Usually the youngest child 'steals' the afikomen early in the evening and keeps it until it is ransomed with a gift, thus the full tribe of Levi is restored.
- AFITI In African folklore wizards who knock on peoples' doors at night, hypnotize those who open them, lure them into the forest, and kill them. Their most usual function is to feed on the bodies of the dead to obtain a cumulative supply of courage, strength, wit, and other desirable qualities. Their messengers are the hyena, jackal, leopard, owl, snake, and wild cat, and sometimes the baboon and lion. All these animals rob graves for them.
- AFRA Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning house of dust.
- AF-RA In Egyptian mythology
the name assumed by Ra, sun deity, during his daily journey through the regions of Tuat (Hades) and the body of the serpent Ankh-Neteru, whence he emerged as Khepera.
- AFRASIYAB In Iranian legend arch-unbeliever, leader of Tur-anian hordes (evil) which invade Iran, and by witchcraft prevent rain; hence a drought demon.
His abode is a subterranean cavern, suggesting that he is an earth divinity. In one poem he is a demon king who claims the khvarenah (glory) of Kavi Usan as his price for driving out Zainigav, Arabian demon who overran Iran when it was neglected by the frivolous Kavi Usan. Iran later is saved from the abuses of Afrasiyab by the hero Rustam; in another legend he is overcome by Uzava Tumas-pana, and in still another by Haorsavah. Also known as Frangrasyan and Frasiyav.
- AFRICA One of the four corners of the world. Symbolized by the bust of a woman in allusion to the undiscovered portions of the continent, by an elephant, an Ethiopian, a lion, a negro in war panoply, a tiger. In an Italian icon portrayed as a negress, almost naked, wearing a coral necklace and earrings and an elephant's head as a crown. She holds a cornucopia filled with corn and a scorpion. A fierce lion is on one side of her and a serpent and a viper on the other.

African deer. Emblem of the Hebrew tribe Naphtali.

AFRICUS The southwest wind.

AFRIT (AFFREET, AFREET, IFRIT) In Arabian legend one of a class of evil genii, ghouls, or demons. By extension any monstrous evil, political or social.

AFTERBIRTH Universally in folklore the placenta is believed to control the fate of the infant. It is preserved by people who believe that if it is properly cared for the child will prosper; if injured or lost, the child will suffer.

AFTERNOON Figuratively, the latter part of life, passed middle-age. To be afternoony is to be worn out, languorous, sleepy. In occult science: autumn, the musical tone G.

AFTONIAN Earliest of the interglacial ages in North America.

AG See AC

AGABUS Prophet and martyr of the early Christian church; identified as one of the seventy disciples of Christ. He foretold the famine of the days of Claudius and the sufferings of Paul.

AGACELLA In heraldry an antelope resembling a tiger but having horns and hoofs.

AGAG In Old Testament a general name for Amalekite kings. The last mentioned appears to compare with Heracles of Oeta as a sun hero.

AGA KHAN I Head of an important sect of Indian Moham-medans. For checking frontier rebellious tribes in the 19th century, the British government granted him a large pension and the title His Highness the Aga Khan. One who sells out his own people.

AGALMA In antiquity an offering to please a deity, especially a work of art so used. Statue of a deity as distinguished from one of a mortal.

AGAMEDES In Greek legend brother of Trophonius. The brothers built a treasury for King Hyrieus. They left one stone loose in the building that they might enter at will to steal the king's gold. Agamedes was caught in a trap set by the king, and Trophonius cut off his head and removed it so the king would not be able to identify the slain man. Agamedes typifies the pole or axis god trapped in the world of darkness, i.e. underworld vault which contains the wealth of the world. Compare Baba, Cassim; Rhampsinitos.

AGAMEMNON In Greek mythology king of Mycenae, son of Atreus. He was commander-in-chief of the Greeks in the war to recover Helen, wife of his brother Menelaus, from the Trojans. Inasmuch as the Greek warriors were sun heroes a passage from west to east, the direction in which Troy lay, was unnatural. To obtain from Artemis a wind which would carry their ships Troyward, Agamemnon sacrificed his daughter Iphigenia (see). Upon returning with his captive Cassandra sharing his chariot, his wife Clytemnestra, aided by her lover Aegisthus, killed him as he bathed. In time his son Orestes murdered his mother and her paramour. Thus the prince of darkness (Aegisthus) and the moon (Clytemnestra), slay the aged sun (Agamemnon) and the gloaming (Cassandra), and in time are slain by the young or rising sun (Orestes).

AGANIPPE In Greek mythology the fountain of the Muses at the foot of sacred Mount Helicon in Boeotia; also the nymph of the fountain.

AGAPE (1) Love feast which accompanied the celebration of the Lord's Supper of primitive Christians. A funeral feast of sacrifice and resurrection. (2) In Spenser's Faerie Queene of fay or fairy.

AGAPEMONE (1) A religious Christian community of men and women. (2) A 19th century Communistic establishment of men and women in England suspected of free love, thus any free-love institution.

AGAPETI (AGAPETAE) Monks and virgins of early Christian church who dwelt together in a state of professed celibacy and spiritual love.

AGASTYA In Hindu mythology (1) a dwarf who drank the sea dry when insulted by Ocean. (2) Seer who, in an argument with Nahusa who had permitted a drought to wither the earth, hurled Nahusa from heaven and caused him to dwell in snake form for 10,000 years. (3) Leader of the Maruts who, by his tact, gets Indra to accept the Maruts as sacrifices when the god is angered because they failed to support him in his conflict with the dragon Vrtra.

AGAS XENAS XENA Evening star deity of Chinook Indians.

AGATE Bringer of calmness, courage, eloquence, health, longevity, virtue, wealth. When cut, if an eye is revealed, regarded a charm against the evil eye. If applied to a serpent bite or other poison, supposedly averts death. Worn as an amulet to save wearer from contagious diseases and infections. Because it is held to bring success it is used by business men as paper weights. Dream significance: a journey. Used in second place of the third row on breastplates of Hebrew high priests. Moslems powdered and drank it in apple cider to cure delirium and lunacy and relieve melancholy. Romans believed it assured good crops, gave strength to warriors and protected sea travelers; if applied to the skin it gave the skin a satiny texture; it reduced fevers and inflammation and relieved eye pain.

Black agate. Defends against envy, makes athletes courageous and invincible.

Moss agate. Prized by adventurers and explorers as an aid in discovering the unknown. Prized by European gypsies above all other stones as assuring good luck to wearer. In middle ages its sentiment was early death. Orientals believed the wearer would be assured the ability to sway audiences, and that it enabled lawyers to interpret legacies and wills. Romans held it in special reverence as they believed it held some rare occult power for good fortune.

Rainbow agate. Candor.

Red Agate. Bringer of calm.

AGATHA (AGATE, AGATHE, AGGIE) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning good, kind.

AGATHADAEMON (AGATHODAIMON, AGATHOS DAIMON) In Greek antiquity a spirit in the shape of a serpent or a shepherd to whom a libation was made at the end of a meal. Bringer of good fortune, health, and life; oracle of future events; teacher of wisdom. Mate of Tyche Agathe. Agatha, Greek for good, resolves into Mighty A-Tau, Author, or Ether (Uther); full name resolves into Mighty Author or Ether, Resplendent Sole One, i. e. the Sun. Identified with the Egyptian Shay (Fate).

AGATHOCLES A cruel and unscrupulous tyrant of Syracuse (361-289 B. C.). The son of a potter, he rose from the ranks to become general of the army. To prevent his troops from retreating he burned his ships behind him. He died of poison administered by his grandson.

Agathocles' pot. Poor relation.

AGAVE (1) In Greek mythology daughter of Cadmus, wife of Echion, mother of Pentheus. Although Pentheus, king of Thebes, forbade the worship of Dionysus, he was smitten with a mad desire to witness the orgies of women who congregated by themselves, allowing no man to witness their worship. He hid in a tree and, in the wild frenzy of the rites, Agave mistaking him for a wild beast tore him to pieces. A story which reveals the introduction of a foreign ritual that is strongly resisted and established by violence. Typifies a fanatic, one obsessed by religious frenzy. Compare Endymion, Hylas, Trespassing in a woman's realm. (2) Sacred Mexican tree which yields a drink from its juice, food from its roots, needles from its thorns, paper and thatch from its leaves, thread from its fiber. A tree of life. Also called Maguey. 'Gave' cognate with cave.

AGBE In Dahomey religion (Haiti) chief god of thunder.

AGDISTIS In Greek mythology hermaphrodite offspring of the seed of Zeus. Dropped upon earth in his sleep. In Pausanias legend Agdistis drove Attis mad so that he castrated himself. A story which explains the self-emasculatation of priests of Attis during orgiastic rituals. See emasculatation, androgynous deities.

AGE In an Italian icon typified as a woman in a robe of several colors holding up her arms. In one hand is the moon, in the other the sun; a basilisk is at her feet. The different colors denote the changing mind and purpose of different ages. Among North American Indians relative rank as determined (1) by superior individual or tribal force; (2) by a system of assigning a place to captives under which he shall remain the slave of all persons in the family of his captor born before his coming, but not of later-born children.

Ages of Man. The career of Fate which coincides with man's fall from perfection and with the advance in human responsibility. In Aztec tradition, called ages of suns or of the world, the ages are five and four suns already have undergone destruction: (1) Age of Coniztal (White Head) in which man ate only a certain wild maize called Alzitiutil. Water reigned until it destroyed the sun with a great flood. (2) Age of Coneuztuque (Golden Age) in which mankind ate only forest fruits called Acotzintli. Age brought to an end by violent winds. All human beings were changed into apes except a man and a woman who found a shelter in a stone (cavern). (3) Red age in which men lived on the fruit of the Iz-lucoco, and the world was destroyed by conflagration. (4) Age of Black Hair, age of wickedness, in which earthquakes, a great famine and wild beasts prevailed and many people, but not all, were destroyed. (5) Age to be brought about by Tezcatlipoca, who will steal the sun and bring eternal light. The Babylonian four destructions of the human race were accomplished by: (1) flood, (2) wild beasts, (3) famine, (4) pestilence. In Greek legend the ages are five: (1) Golden age, when men lived like gods under the rule of Cronus and never grew old; (2) Silver age in which man lived 100 years; (3) Bronze age in which mankind sprang from ashes, had great strength, and worked in bronze; (4) Homeric age, age of heroes who, at the end of their lives went to dwell in happy abodes at the limits of the earth; (5) Iron or present age in which the lot of people is labor and vexation.

In Hesiod the ages are identified as: (1) Golden or patriarchal, ruled by Cronus; (2) Silver or voluptuous, ruled by Zeus; (3) Brazen or warlike, ruled by Poseidon; (4) Heroic or renais-sant, ruled by Ares; (5) Iron or present, ruled by Hades. In Hinduism, called yugas, the ages of man are: (1) Krita (white) yuga, which lasted 4,800 divine years; (2) Treta (red) yuga, which lasted 3,600 divine years; (3) Dwapara (yellow) yuga, which lasted 2,400 divine years; (4) Kali (black) yuga, which lasted 1,200 divine years. The four yugas total 12,000 divine years; as one divine day is equal to one mortal year (360 days), the total is 4,320,000 mortal years. In Iranian tradition the ages of human history are three: (1) Golden ruled by Yima; (2) Evil, ruled by Dahhak; (3) age of the Prophet, ruled by Zarathustra. In Navaho genesis: (1) Period in which Atse Hastin and Atse Etsan, progenitors of the human race, ascended from the underworld. (2) Age of heroes in which the earth was set in order and illuminated by heavenly bodies. (3) Age of gods in which giants and other wicked monsters were slain. During this period Etsanatilehi departed for the west. (4) Patriarchal age in which the Navaho nation grew and wandered and its prophets brought back rites from abodes of the gods. In Roman tradition the ages are four and symbolized by a cross. (1) Golden, reign of Saturn. Fortunate time in which evil did not exist. The bee, cornucopia, and olive are emblems of this time. (2) Silver, ruled by Jupiter. Age in which man acquired knowledge of evil, earth ceased to produce spontaneously, and agriculture was introduced. Barn, granary, plow, and wheat symbolize the age. (3) Copper, ruled by Mars. Evil increased, man became savage and violent. War came to earth. Helmet, shield, thorn, and weapons are its symbols. (4) Iron, ruled by Pluto, age of decadence of man and morals. A complete suit of armor, helmet surrounded by the head of a wolf, a shield, and spear, are the symbols. In Tualati (Indians of Oregon) tradition four creations of mankind have undergone destruction. At the end of the first age all human beings were turned into stars; at the end of the second age they became stones; at the end of the third age they turned into fish; at the end of the fourth they disappeared and gave place to the tribes which now inhabit the earth.

Dark Age. Age characterized by a decay of civilization or learning.

Golden Age. A mythical period in which happiness, innocence, and peace reigned. In Roman literature the period of the finest classical writers, thus the period of literature in any country most closely corresponding to this.

Heroic Age. Mythical age in which heroes and demi-gods lived on earth.

AGEB In Egyptian mythology deity of the abyss or watery depth.

AGELAUS In Greek mythology servant of Priam who exposed the infant Paris on Mount Ida.

AGENOR In Greek mythology (1) King of Phoenicia. In the most popular version son of Poseidon and Libya, twin brother of Belus, husband of Telephassa; his sons were Cadmus, Cilix, and Phoenix, his daughter Europa. Also said to be the son of Epaphus and Libya, or of Poseidon and Eurynome, also of the Argive Phoroneus (identical with the Vedic Bhuranyu, god of fire). Likewise he is identified as a brother of Europa (dawn). Agenor is a fire deity, and his name is a general term for one of high rank and great power, as is that of Belus, with whom he sometimes is confused. When Europa was carried away by Zeus, the heartbroken Agenor sent his sons to search for her, and Telephassa, the far-reaching lunar rays, accompanied them. (2) A Trojan hero, son of Antenor. He appears in the Iliad as a leader in the attack on the Greek fortifications. He wounds Achilles; Apollo, to lure Achilles from pursuing the retreating Trojans, assumes the form of Agenor. This identification with the sun suggests that Agenor is a fire or solar hero.

AGERATUM BLOSSOM Confidence.

AGESIPOLIS A lame Spartan king of the 4th century B.C. noted for his incorruptibility and his simplicity.

AGGEUS Tenth of the minor Hebrew Prophets; a book of the Bible; Apochrypha. Also called Haggai.

AGGLESTONE (HAGGLESTON) Inverted cone of indurated rock in Dorsetshire, England. The Eagle of Mighty God Stone.

AGGRESSIVENESS Typified by a crab.

AGHA Sanscrit for lord, master.

AGHANEE Second and principal rice crop of Hindustan.

AGHORA One of a Sivite Hindu sect given to the practice of ob-scene rites.

AGIB In the Arabian Nights a calendar who lost his right eye as a punishment for curiosity.

AGILARD Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning formidable.

AGLAIA In Greek mythology one of the Three Graces. Goddess who presided over the banquet and dance, the elegant arts and social entertainments. Name meaning brightness or splendor.

AGLAOS In Greek legend a poor Arcadian peasant, by the Delphic oracle called happier than King Gyges of Lydia because he was content.

AGLET BABY A doll or person bedecked with fancy ribbons or lace or spangles.

AGLI-BEL (AGLI-BOL) Moon god of Palmyra.

AG-MENA (HAGMENA) Great Mena, traditional prehistoric ancestor of Egyptian royalty.

AGNAR In Norse mythology, brother of Geirrod, with whom while fishing he was saved from a storm at sea by Odin and Frigga. Odin befriended Geirrod; Agnar became a fosterling of Frigga. When Geirrod attempted to drown him, Hlin, Frigga's maidservant, protected him. Later, when Odin instructed Brynhild to choose him for Valhalla, she was struck by his beauty and youth and selected Helm Gunnar in his place. Agnar and Geirrod typify the brothers-in-conflict motif, Agnar the hero of light or summer, Geirrod of darkness or winter.

AGNES (AGGIE, AGNESE) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning chaste, sacred. Cognate with Agnus and Anna. From Agni, Aryan fire god. (2) A Christian martyr in the reign of Diocletian, 304 A. D. (3) One who is naive and innocent or pretends to be as the ingenuous woman in Moliere's L'Ecole des Femmes.

AGNI (AGNI YAVISHTA) In Hinduism ancient Aryan fire god. Fire on earth, lightning in the air, sun in heaven. Various versions of his birth are given: He is born in wood, the embryo of plants and distributed in plants. He springs newly to life whenever fire is kindled; puny at birth, like a spark he grows strong and terrible as a devouring flame. He also is of heavenly origin, son of Dyaus (sky god) and brought down to earth by Matarisvan, a reminiscence of conflagrations caused by lightning. He is born in waters of atmosphere and thus identified with Apam Napat. Vishnu and Indra beget him or Indra generates him between two stones. On earth he is produced by fire sticks, his father the upper, his mother the lower, or the sticks are his two mothers. Ten maidens (fingers) generate him. He is son of Strength. He is worshiped as a domestic fire god or god of the hearth, in which aspect he is called Grhapati. When worshiped as lightning called Trita; when worshiped as the sun called Surya. All three forms are called Tryambaka (three-mothered). He is the earliest form of a triad. As a god who has three births he has three bodies: born of water he is a calf (young sun), which grows into a bull that sharpens its horns (rays); born of two sticks he is a glutton with a fiery tongue; born of the highest heaven he is an eagle. In his triple character he has three dwellings, earth, heaven, and water. He is creator of worlds, ender of them. He is seer and omniscient immortal who has taken his abode among mortals and knows all generations. He is supporter of the sky, namely the pillar of cloud that rises when fires are lighted in his honor. As altar fire he is carrier of oblations; he is eater of the raw flesh of the dead. He is the sacrifice, and his wife Agnaya or Svaha is the call uttered at the sacrifice. He roars like a bull when demons threaten to attack the gods. Although born of water he fears water, which quenches him, and he causes water (rain). His triple birth is symbolized by three heads and three legs; he has seven arms to represent the rays of light. Sometimes he is given two faces to indicate he is creative and destructive heat, a deity looking into the past and into the future. His color is red, and although his appearance is brilliant his track is black. In one account of his birth Prajapati by Usas had a son who cried and demanded a name; Prajapati therefore called him: Asani (lightning), Bhava (existent), Isana (ruler), Mahadeva (great god), Pasupati (lord of cattle), Rudra (roarer), Sarva (all), Ugra (dread), constituting eight forms of Agni. Mystically he is Mitra in the morning, Varuna in the evening, Indra as he illumines the sky, Savitra as he traverses the sky. Bearing the title Grhapati he is Lord of the House, protector of the home. He is Jatavedas, the all-knowing. He is Narasamsa, praise of men, and Tanunapat, son of self, and Vaisvanara Agni, the internal fire within all men or fire in all its aspects. Rain and riches are his gifts. He forgives sins, averts the wrath of Varuna, makes men guiltless before Aditi. His main feat is the burning of the Rakshases who infest the sacrifice. His steed is the ram. Agni is the source of agile and ignis (ignite); Montagne is radically Mount Fire. Agni is the source of Agnes and Agnus. He is the counterpart of Christ as Agnus Dei, Light of the World, and his emblem is the earliest form of the cross, the swastika. As a god who descends from heaven to earth and enters plants and drives away disease, he resembles Heimdal and Tammuz. As god of the hearth he resembles Hestia.

AGNUS Masculine name from the Latin, meaning lamb. From Sanscrit Agni. In feminine form

Agnes, which see.

Agnus bell. Bell rung while Agnus Dei is being recited.

Agnus cactus blossom. Coldness, command, indifference.

Agnus Dei. In Christian tradition the Host, Lamb of God. The figure of a lamb as emblematic of Christ as light of the world, counterpart of Hindu Agni. Also applied to John the Baptist. A prayer beginning with these words used in celebrating the mass. Often shown with a banner and a cross on a cloth used to cover elements of the eucharist. A cake of wax or medallion blessed by the Pope on which this emblem is stamped or otherwise impressed. Talisman believed to possess the virtue of preserving its wearer from danger of accidents, pestilence, and tempests.

AGOHYA In Hindu mythology a name of Pusan, meaning not to be concealed.

AGOMEN A fourth name given by the Romans to a person as a recognition of some achievement or accomplishment. A nickname.

AGONEUS Hermes as patron of gymnastic exercises.

AGONIUM Any one of the four Roman festivals at which the chief priest offered sacrifices. They were celebrated as follows: January 9 dedicated to Janus, March 17 to Mars, May 21 to Vejovis, December 11 to the Seven Hills.

AGORA In ancient Greece market place where political assembly was held; an assembly for political purposes.

AGRANIA In Greek mythology a Theban nocturnal festival observed by women, a priest, and an attendant. The rites consisted of destroying an effigy made of or covered with ivy, and then over-running the mountains in search of Dionysus.

AGRAS Finno-Ugric deity of turnips or twin grains. A god of twins in general.

AGRASANDHARI Hindu book of judgement.

AGRAULD In Greek mythology the three daughters of Cecrops, Agraulos, Herse, Pandrosos. Athene, as Atthis, gives birth to Erichthonios. She places her son in a chest which she gives to the three sisters with instructions it is not to be opened. They disobey and find the coils of a snake folded around the body of the infant. Frightened, they throw themselves down the precipice of the Acropolis, and the snake-bound or snakebodied Erichthonios (an aspect of earth's fertility) lives on under the protection of Athene.

AGRAULOS In Greek mythology goddess presiding over agricultural fertility. In one version one of the Agraulid (see) turned to stone because she is envious of her sister Herse. In another account she is the wife of Cecrops and the mother of three daughters named Agraulos (thus becoming her own daughter), Herse, and Pandrosos, and a son Erichthonios.

AGRIMONY BLOSSOM Gratitude.

AGRIPPA Masculine name from the Latin, meaning born feet foremost. In Christian history one of the rulers before whom Paul was tried.

AGRIPPINA (1) Feminine form of Agrippa. (2) Name of two famous Roman women, mother and daughter; one courageous and noble, the other ignoble. Agrippina, wife of Germanicus Caesar, accompanied her husband on all his campaigns. On his death she was banished and died of starvation under suspicious circumstances. She was the mother of Caligula and Agrippina the younger. The younger was the mother of Nero. She poisoned several persons in her schemes to place her son on the throne, and he put her to death.

AGRIVAIN (AGRAIVAIN, AGRAWAIN) Nephew of King Arthur and one of his knights. Brother of Gawain. The free-speaking knight. He spied upon Lancelot, who murdered him after he revealed to Arthur the love of Guinevere and Lancelot.

AGUECHEEK, SIR ANDREW In Shakespeare's Twelfth Night a silly old man who is overfond of eating. A glutton.

AGUSAYA Babylonian goddess, the loud-crying. Sent by Ishtar to subdue Saltu (discord). Also identified as an aspect of Ishtar.

AGYIEUS In Greek mythology a name of Apollo. So called from boundary marks and sign posts which were erected in public places and dedicated to him. From agyia (street).

A.H. (1) Anno Hegirae, i.e. In the year of the flight of Mohammed from Mecca. (2) In Freemasonry Anno Hebraico, i.e. in the Hebrew year, 3,760 years before the Christian era.

AH (AAH) In Egyptian mythology the moon as a male principle. Developed into Khonsu, who became associated with Thoth. Cognate with A.

AHAB Israel's seventh ruler. Son of King Omri, husband of Jezebel. Although an astute diplomat who brought Israel to its peak of power and united adjoining realms by war, he is most famous as the husband of the dissolute Jezebel, who prevailed upon him to introduce idolatry with the worship of Ashtoreth and Baal. Ahab murdered Naboth on false charges of blasphemy and confiscated his vineyards. Elijah denounced the king and queen. A famine visited the land with three years of drought, prophets of Baal were slain, and Ahab killed in battle. His name has become a byword for wickedness.

Ahab II. A false prophet who was slain by Nebuchadnezzar.

Ahab, Captain. In Herman Melville's Moby Dick a whaler who relentlessly pursues the whale Moby Dick; one who is violent in his quest for revenge.

AHALYA In Hindu mythology seduced by Indra.

AHAM Sanscrit 'I am,' ever-existent light. Compare, I, Je, O.

AHANS In Hinduism the Asvins. Cognate with Gemini. Symbolized by spectacles (two eyes), two circles, or two wheels.

AHARYU Vedic solar hero. He conquers Brisaya, the power of darkness, perhaps a moon goddess, before he is able to recover the treasure stolen by the Panis (air demons). Compare Achilles.

AHASUERUS (1) In Old Testament a great ruler of Persia, husband of Esther, probably identical with Xerxes I. Sometimes identified as Artaxerxes. (2) Name sometimes given to the legendary Wandering Jew.

AHAT (AHET, AHIT, EHAT, EHET) In Egyptian antiquity the cosmic cow as nurse and protector of the sun god.

AHAU-CHAMAHEZ Mayapan medicine god, Lord-of-the-Magic-Tooth.

AHAVANIYA Hindu fire of the sky, fire of Surya. One of the three sacred fires.

AHAYUTA ACHI In Zuni mythology twin culture heroes, inventors who provided mankind with implements. Deities protecting gamblers and mischief-makers, destroying adventurous travelers, monsters, and rapers.

AHAZ Twelfth king of Judah; worshiper of idols he forced his children, in purification rites, to pass through fire. Many of the prophecies of Isaiah are directed against him. Because of his worship of Pagan gods he was refused burial with his ancestors.

AHHAZU (ACH-CHAZU) Sumerian demon causing death, disease, pestilence. Name signifies seizer.

AHI (1) In Egyptian mythology the day, daughter of Pa-hra. Compares with Eos. (2) Evil dragon with whom Indra battles. He imprisons the seven great rivers of India and, when Indra pierces him with the thunderbolt, precious waters (rain) flow from his belly. A strangling snake, a cloud demon capable of retaining waters and causing drought. Name meaning snake; also called Vrtra (obstruction). (3) In early Semitic religions a title of god, meaning brother. Also Ahu. Compare Ab, Amm.

Ahi Budhnya. In Hinduism serpent of the deep. Born in primeval waters he sits in the bottom of streams in space. He is besought not to give his worshippers over to injury. Probably the beneficent aspect of Vrtra (Ahi).

AHI-EZER Hebrew masculine name meaning my brother is help.

AHLJAH Hebrew prophet.

Ahijah's garment. A garment divided into twelve pieces, typifying the twelve tribes of Israel; also the twelve houses of the zodiac.

AHIMELECH In Old Testament a high priest at Nob, father of Abiathar, friend of David. He protected David, who was fleeing from Saul, and gave him the sacred bread and sword of Goliath from the temple. For his treason Saul had him slain. Some scholars say his brother was Ahijah, also slain by Saul; some say both names belong to the same person.

AHITHOPHEL Literally, bother of foolishness. In Old Testament grandfather of Bathsheba. Originally an intimate of David, he became one of David's most bitter enemies and the evil genius of Absalom's discontent. A false counselor.

AHI-YAH Hebrew masculine name meaning my brother is Yah.

AH-KIUC Mayan deity who furnished all things necessary for man's comfort. Master of the market, god of merchants and plantation owners. He formed a triad with Chac, rain god, and Hobnel, another god of food supply. Also called Echauc.

AHL AT-TRAL Moslem spirits inhabiting the world below the Sahara desert. They trip camels and drink springs dry just before caravans arrive. Sometimes they take the shape of a whirling sandstorm.

AHLMAKOH Vancouver Island demoniac wood spirit. He dispenses amulets, and his nasal mucus is valued as an amulet for invulnerability.

AHMED, PRINCE In Arabian Nights owner of the apple of Samarkand, which could cure all diseases, and the tent (cloud), which could cover a whole army but which might be folded into one's pocket.

AHNFRAU In German belief the ancestress of a noble family. Her spirit warns of approaching death.

AHOLAH AND AHOLIBAH In Old Testament symbolical names for Samaria and Jerusalem adopted by Ezekiel in an allegory of two sisters, personifications of prostitution, signifying religious adultery or running after false faiths.

AHOLIBAMAH A proud, ambitious, queen-like beauty, from a character in Byron's poem Heaven and Earth.

AHOM First letter of the Egyptian alphabet, meaning eagle.

AH PUCH (AH PUCHAH) Mayan despoiler or destroyer. Demon slayer of the Bacabab. Lord of death and in one of his aspects deity presiding over the ninth layer of the underworld. Also called Eopuco.

AHRIMAN (AHRIMANES) Zoroastrian author of evil, prince of the kingdom of darkness. Power of death, creator of sin and suffering. Spiritual enemy of mankind. Under him are marshalled:

Aeshma (violence, wrath), Aka Manah (evil mind), Apaosha (drought), Bushyasta (sloth), Daevas (demons), Nasus (corpses), Pairikas (spirits of seduction), Yatus (sorcerers). In one version he sprang from eternity; in another he is the offspring of a moment of doubt on the part of Ormazd (light). In later Persian dualism he is the elder twin of Ormazd and holds equal sway over the world with him, each presiding 6,000 years, thus paralleling Castor and Pollux. From Ahriman is derived the expression 'Old Harry,' meaning the devil. Identical with Angra-Mainyu; also called Druj (deception). Symbolized by a giant lizard. Parallels Satan.

A. H. S. Anno Humanae Salutis, i. e. in the year of human salvation.

AHSONNUTLI Navaho creator deity. Turquoise man-woman; maker of the earth, heaven, and twelve supports of the heavens. See androgynous deities.

AHTI (AHTO) Finnish great god of the waters. Spouse of Wellamo, his mansion is in the deep chasm Ahtola. Possessor of the treasure Sampo, he is helpful to fishermen. A name of Lemmin-kainen.

AHUEHUETE Aztec tree of life. By climbing it a man and a woman escaped the deluge and their children reseeded the world. A fir.

AHUILUM Semitic masculine name meaning El is brother.

AHUITZOTL Chief who brought Aztec power to its zenith; predecessor of Montezuma II.

AHURA MAZDA (AURAMAZDA)

Zoroastrian Supreme God. Deity living eternally in the region of infinite light, opposed to Angra Mainyu, whose abode is the abyss of endless darkness. He produced creatures which remained 3,000 years in a spiritual state, unmoving, unthinking, with intangible bodies. He also created the earth, moon, stars, sun, waters, and the vegetable kingdom. His name, meaning wise lord, equates with Assura. In art he is represented as a bearded man with a winged disc and sacred tree. He is identical with Ormazd, and his myth compares with that of Indra, Marduk, Ningirsu, Ninurta, Yahveh.

AI (1) Esthonian old man, thunder god, (2) In Old Testament second city taken by the Israelites in Canaan. Also called Hai, which in Hebrew means heap of ruins. (3) Sumerian moon goddess. See Aa. (4) Greek letters which supposedly mark the foliage of the hyacinth plant, signifying woe.

AIAH Hebrew masculine name meaning clamor.

AIAPAEC Peruvian Indian supreme deity.

AIAUH An aspect of the Aztec deity Chalchiuhtlicue typifying mist or spray.

AIDA (1) Feminine name from the Italian, meaning the first. (2) In Verdi's opera of the same name an Ethiopian princess, enslaved in Egypt. She voluntarily dies with her entombed lover. Resembles Juliet.

AIDE In Irish mythology wife of Enna. She and her family were drowned when Dub, Enna's other wife, chanted spells over the sea.

AIDEEN In Irish mythology daughter of Angus of Ben Edar, wife of Oscar. She died for love of her husband when he was slain in battle. Resembles Aida, Juliet.

AIDENN Paradise; Anglicized form of the Hebrew Eden.

AIDES (AIDONEUS, AIS, HADES) In Greek mythology offspring of Cronus and Rhea. One of the three Cronids or sovereign gods; the other two being Poseidon and Zeus. Ruler of the lower world, land of immeasurable wealth, storehouse of the germs of future harvests. The cypress and maidenhair fern are sacred to him. His emblems are an antique key, signifying no escape or return; the helmet of invisibility; a staff for gathering the herds of souls of the dead; a veil, typifying secrecy. In art he is shown on a rock or throne with his wife Persephone. His sacrifice is a black bull or black sheep killed at night. Comparable gods are Pluto, Sama, Serapis.

AIDNE In Irish mythology he created fire for the Milesians by wringing his hands together. Resembles legends of light and fire obtained from saints' hands.

AIDO HWEDO Dahomey great rainbow serpent which transports Mawu, creator goddess of the universe. Excrement left by Aido Hwedo created mountains.

AIGAMUCHAB Hottentot cannibal ogre with eyes on top of his feet.

AIGUISE In heraldry pointed obtusely, as the four ends of a cross.

AJALON (AJALON) Literally, place of deer. In Old Testament valley where at the command of Joshua the sun and the moon stood still. The name of a city in Palestine.

AILANTHUS Chinese paradise tree, tree of heaven, tree of life. Virtue growing out of but unsullied by sin, as it is a graceful tree with a beautiful flower that grows on rubbish heaps. Compare lotus. Symbol of longevity. Typifies temptation as its beautiful flower is sterile (staminate) and has an offensive odor, and tenacity as it continues to grow in spite of adverse conditions.

AILE In heraldry having wings like birds or sails like windmills.

AILEEN (EILEEN) Feminine name; Irish form of Helen.

AILILL (AILELL) In Irish mythology vassal king governing Connaught under Eochaid Airem. Lover of Etain, wife of Eochaid and formerly queen of the underworld. When Medb left Conchobar, king of Ulster, for love of him, Ailill became her husband. Owner of the White-horned Bull of Connaught (see), one of the causes of the battle in which Cuchulainn was slain. See Medb.

AILINN (AILLINN) In Irish legend daughter of Lewy or of Owen; beloved by Baile. She was forcibly detained by the youths of Leinster as she was on her way to meet Baile and deceived into believing Baile was dead. Baile on the other hand was told that she was dead. Both lovers thereupon grieved to death. Memorial tablets for them, made from trees, sprang together and could not be separated. Compare Shite and Tsure.

AILIVE Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning elf darling.

AILLEN MAC MIDHNA In Irish mythology one of the Tuatha De Danann. In love with Manannan's wife Uchtdelbh, whereas his sister Aine loved Manannan. When Aine became the mistress of Manannan, Uchtdelbh became the mistress of Aillen. He comes out of his sid every year to burn Tara.

AILLY, PIERRE  French Cardinal, prominent at Council of Constance which granted Huss protection and then condemned him and burned him at the stake. Called the 'Hammer of Heretics.'

AILO One of the names of Lilith in Hebrew mythology. Identified with the Sumerian demon Alu.

AIMA Cabalistic mother in transcendence. Compares with Norse Freyja.

AIN (AION, OIN) (1) Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning one's own. In second ascending chain of Irish gods, god of fire and magic. Spouse of Ea-Anu. Also called Molc, Mollac, Molloch, Mulac, all meaning fire, and On or Onn, meaning solar heat. (2) Eighteenth letter of the Arabic alphabet with a numerical value of seventy. Sixteenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet with a numerical value of seventy, meaning eye or fountain or spring, and signifying the external superficial appearance of things. According to mystics its tarot deck correspondence is the Devil or Tower Struck by Lightning; its significance is ruin; its intelligence is mirthful. In white magic analogous to the Ninth Heaven, sphere of the moon, governed by the messenger-intelligence Gabriel. Also known as ayin, hain.

AINE In Irish mythology, worshiped in South Munster as a fairy queen providing abundance and prosperity. Daughter of Eogabal, sister of Aillen. Her dwelling was Cnoc Aine (Knockainy or Aine's Hill), where she supposedly is still seen. The best hearted woman who ever lived she was a giver of fertility. Sometimes worshiped as a moon goddess and giver of scent to blossoms. Captured by Lord Desmond, who married her, and to whom she bore a son. Following the pattern of divine-mortal marriages she took her son and left her husband, but reappeared from time to time, the son eventually becoming Earl of Desmond. Once, when her son complained of the barrenness of the soil, she planted peas during the night. She was propitiated by magic ritual every Midsummer Eve (Saint John's Eve) to ensure fertility for the following year. Claimed as first ancestress by half a dozen famous Irish families. Some scholars identify her with Danu (Anu).

AINENT In heraldry, running, as animals.

AINLE In Irish legend second son of Usnach, brother of Naoise. See Deirdre.

AIN SHAMS In ancient Egypt Sun's Well, in which the sun was believed either to bathe himself or to have been born and from which he rose at the beginning of the world, thus a remnant of the primeval flood legend.

AIN SOPH Cabalistic Supreme Being. The inaccessible god, the unmanifest deity. A being absolute, boundless, infinite, self-identical without attributes. Primary cause. Represented by the number one.

AINU A people among whom all are equal and who recognize no social differentiation in their occupations. They live in northern Japan.

AIR Element of the universe and of man, typifying contemplation, eternity, heaven, the immaterial, infinity, life, memory, soul, supreme deity. In tarot divination an element of the spade suit, the divine link between atmosphere and ether of space, hence bearer of divine messages. Character traits: dreaming, inspiration, love of freedom. Signifies mentality and denotes the thinking or reasonable person. In Chinese and Japanese Buddhism represented by the crescent, and rules the east. See elements. By ancient Greeks, Hebrews, and Romans, associated with the color yellow (sun); by Leonardo da Vinci associated with the color blue. In Hebraic-Christian tradition the realm of Satan, prince of the power of air, thus jurisdiction of invisible powers, mansion of devils. In India typified by the bee, and in Persian art portrayed as a naked vigorous youth holding the heads of the four winds.

Air castle. Day dream, visionary scheme.

Air pump. The constellation Antlia.

Beat the air. Speak without judgement or understanding or to no purpose.

Powers of air. Demons, devils.

Walk on air. Feel elated or happy.

AIRAVATA In Hinduism Indra's elephant with four tusks, carrier of the sacred jewel of the law. Rain cloud.

AIRMED In Irish mythology, sister of Miach, which see.

AIRYA (IRAJ) In Iranian mythology son of Thraetaona. Ancestor of the Aryans or Iranians. Younger brother of Cairima and Tura, who killed him because he was braver and better loved by their father. His grandson Manushcithra succeeded him. In another account, he appears as a settled agriculturist, and the everlasting quarrel between husbandman and shepherd causes a conflict between him and Tura; thus resemble Cain and Abel, Ham and Shem.

AIRYANO VAEJO Iranian Happy Land, where neither cold nor heat, decay nor death, nor malice existed. Father and son walked together and both were young in appearance until Ahri-man (Angra-Mainyu) entered the realm and brought ten months of winter each year. Correlative of Eden.

AIRY HORSE In Buddhism carrier of the cintamani (flaming pearl). Also known as Lung-ta or Vayuarvat, which see.

AITHERNE In Irish lore an avaricious poet who stole Mithr's three cranes of denial and churlishness (personifications of inhospitality), which advised those who approached the door not to enter. See Mithr.

AITHUIA In Greek mythology title of Athene as diver-bird.

AIX Greek for goat. Resolves into great fire of A. Frequently appears in place names.

AIZENMYO-O (AIZENMYO-WO)

Japanese Shinto deity of love. Portrayed as red with three faces and three pairs of arms, which are interpreted to signify coquettishness or the facilities for better and wiser selection. As a Buddhist deity, the Great Passion, a deity of agitation that leads to enlightenment and to loving compassion of all things, fighter of avarice, destroyer of evil. In his six hands he holds a stick with which to strike the wicked, a bow and arrow with which to attack human passions, a vajra (thunderbolt) with which to strike down the wicked, a bell to awaken sentient beings, and a lotus, signifying truth.

AJ Word root meaning aged. The 'j' is interchangeable with ch, g, and y.

AJA EKAPADA Hindu lightning god. Name signifying one-footed goat. Symbolizes the swift movement of the flash; the single foot the one spot it strikes on earth.

AJAX (AIAS) Masculine name from the Greek meaning eagle. The name has become a synonym for impetuous warrior.

Ajax the Great. In Greek mythology a man of giant stature, son of Telamon. King of Salamis. Except for Achilles the bravest of all the Greeks who besieged Troy. When the armor of Achilles was awarded to Odysseus instead of to him, he turned mad from vexation and slew the sheep of the Greeks believing them to be enemies. In shame he committed suicide. Compare Cuchulainn. In other accounts he was murdered and from his blood sprang up a purple flower, the hyacinth, bearing the letters AI, the first letters of his name and an exclamation of woe. He typifies brute strength and courage without reason.

Ajax the Lesser. In Greek mythology son of Oileus. King of Locris. Except for Achilles the swiftest of all the Greeks who besieged Troy. The night Troy was taken he violated Cassandra, a priestess of Athena and, in consequence, was shipwrecked by Athena while on his journey home. He succeeded in saving himself by clinging to a rock and boasted that he did not need the help of the gods to be saved, whereupon Poseidon, enraged by this audacity, split the rock with his trident and Ajax was drowned. In another version he stole the Palladium from the temple at Troy and for this blasphemy was shipwrecked. As a penance for his sins a curse of 1,000 years was imposed on his city and two virgins of his clan were sacrificed every year. He typifies a valiant fighter but of rude character.

AJITA In Buddhism deified mortal; second arhat. The unconquered. Usually shown in meditation with head covered. In China the invincible, one of the eighteen lohan. Also called Ashih, Mi-li. In Tibet called Ma-p'am-pa or Me-phem-pa.

AJOURE In heraldry having the central part removed; said of a bearing or ordinary.

AJYSIT (AJY-KHOTON, AJYSIT-LJAKSIT, AJYSIT-KHOTUN, LJAKSIT-KHOTUN) Siberian birthgiver, nourisher. Goddess who brings the soul from heaven to the child being born, and who writes down the child's fate. She also helps ameliorate the pains of childbirth. Identical with Khotun.

AJY-TANGARA (AI-TOJON) Yakut creator heaven god.

AK see AC

AKA-KANET (AKANET, ALGUE) Chilean Indian deity who sends flowers and fruits to earth. Deity of grain, protector capable of ill will if vexed. Resides in the Pleiades.

AKA MANAH In Mazdaism evil mind created by Angra Mainyu. Opposed to Vohi Manah, good thought.

AKAMBOU AND YRIS Among Carib Indians a pair of beneficent spirits.

AKANO JEWEL Japanese kami (god) of famine time.

AKASA In Hinduism the fifth element, generally understood to be ether. Vehicle of sound. In Theosophy the primary plastic matter from which all things are solved, ether of space.

AKASAGARBHA In Buddhism sky womb, the void above. A Bodhi-sattva but not associated with the five Celestial Buddhas. His emblem is the surya (sun). In Tibet called Nam-mk-a-i-snin-po or Nem-khe-nying-po.

AKAWI-KO In Japanese legend a faithful woman. When Emperor Yu-Riyaku passed through her village he saw her washing clothes by the river. Succumbing to her beauty, he commanded her not to marry and said he would send for her. She waited eighty years, and then made her way to the palace, where she reminded the emperor of his command, but her wrinkled face revolted him, and he sent her away.

AKBAL A name of the Aztec god Huecomitl, which see.

AKEDAH Literally, binding. In Hebrew tradition the binding of Isaac. A substitutionary atonement. See shofar.

AKER (AKAR AKERU) Early Egyptian earth lion or lord. Symbolized by the sphinx, frequently with two human heads facing in opposite directions. Compare Janus. One mouth swallows the sun goddess in the evening, the other emits her in the morning; thus she passes through the body of Aker as in later mythology Ra passes through Apep in the underworld. Later identified with Qeb or as the black god of the lower regions. Also shown as two lions or mountains between which the sun rises.

AKETHOR In Norse mythology a title of Thor, a corruption of Ukko-Thor, Ukko being the Finnish thunder god.

AKHENATEN (AKHNATON, IK-NATON) First monotheistic Egyptian king. His name originally was Amenhotep (Amenophis). A religious revolutionary, in the 14th century B.C., in opposition to the priests of Amen, he introduced the cult of worship of the visible emblem of Ra (Aten, the sun) upon the Egyptians. His name was changed to Akhenaten, meaning Aten is satisfied.

AKHTAR In Mazdaism collective name for the twelve constellations of the zodiac. They comprise the generals of Ahura Mazda's army.

AKHTHOES A legendary Egyptian despot who went mad and was devoured by a crocodile. Also known as Abmerira and Kheti.

AKIBABEN, JOSEPH Jewish

teacher of the 1st and 2nd century A.D., who was flayed alive by Romans. One of the ten martyrs mentioned in Jewish penitential prayers.

AKINDO In Japan the merchant class.

AKI-YAMA NO SHITABI-ONOKO Japanese kami (god); frost man of the autumn mountain. Elder brother of Haru-yama-no-Kasumi-onoko (spring). See Izushio-tome.

AKKAD (ACCAD) Greek name for Babylon. One of the four cities of Nimrod's country.

AKKRUVA (AVFRUVVA, HAVFRU) Finno-Ugric fish goddess, half fish, half woman. Makes rivers plentiful.

AKOP (APAK) Circular form in which Christian churches are sometimes built. Yields great eye and is cognate with mark, the bull's eye.

AKRA Greek for mountain peak. Yields great sun. Symbolized by A.

AKRABBIM (MAALEHAKRABBIM) In Old Testament a place in the promised land infested with scorpions and serpents. Name meaning scorpion.

AKRA NUX Ancient Greek term for dawn. Resolves into ak-ura-nux (great A onyx or onyx or one great fire).

AKSAK Chaco Indian creator beetle, who made man and woman from clay.

AKSOBHYA Second Celestial Buddha; a Dhyani-buddha (meditative Buddha). Unagitated, his right hand is usually in a bhumisparsa mudra; his left hand in dhyana mudra, holding a vajra (thunderbolt). His vahana (mount) is an elephant. His Sakti is Locana. In wrathful manifestation (Herukabuddha) he is blue and called Vajraheruka. His emblems are the ghanta (bell) and the vajra.

AKTAIOS A title of Zeus.

AKU Sumerian measurer; the moon.

AKUPARA Hindu tortoise on which the earth rests.

AL (1) Article and word root meaning god; equates with El, eel. Root of Albany, Albury, etc. (2) One of a class of Armenian and Persian demons, formerly of disease, now of childbirth. They steal infants or cause them to have defects. Iron weapons are hung in the room of a woman in childbirth as talismans against their evil influence. Their appearance is half human, half beast; they are gruesome and may be male or female. They live in damp or sandy places. Parallel Babylonian alu.

ALA (1) In Sumer one of a class of bisexual demons or spirits impregnated by humans. (2) Moslem 'God who has existed forever.' Also Allah. See I, Je, O.

ALABAMA Emblem: golden rod; motto: Here We Rest; nicknames: Cotton, Lizard, Yellow-hammer.

ALABASTER A sort of stone having the color of the human nail; used for sacred vessels to hold perfumes and unguents.

ALAD In Babylonian mythology one of a class of demons, originally a bovine protective guard or spirit. In sculpture represented by colossal winged bulls. Identical with sedim. Sometimes a title applied to Nergal, lord of the dead.

ALADDIN (1) Masculine name from the Arabic, meaning height plus faith. (2) In the Arabian Nights the disobedient, indolent, licentious, mischievous, and obstinate son of Mustafa, a poor tailor. He obtains a magic lamp and ring from an African magician, who intends to trap him.

Aladdinist. A Mohammedan free-thinker.

Aladdin's lamp. Source of wealth and good fortune; abode of a good genius.

Aladdin's ring. Protector against evil or misfortune.

Aladdin's window. To attempt to complete something begun by a genius but left unfinished, alluding to the palace built by the genius of Aladdin's lamp. The palace had 24 windows, all but one set with precious stones. The last was left for the sultan to finish, but he exhausted his treasury without being able to do so.

ALAGHOM NAOM Among Tzენტals of Mexico, mother of mind, goddess of thought or wisdom. Consort of the chief deity. Also called Iztat Ix.

ALAKE The alake or king of Abeokutta, West Africa, who has just died, is decapitated. That the new sovereign may inherit the magical and other virtues of the royal line he is required to eat a piece of his royal predecessor, usually the tongue. The head is presented to him as a gift.

ALALKOMENEUS In Greek mythology Boeotian first man who came out of the waters. Compare Cecrops.

ALALLU In Babylonian epic of Gilgamesh a bird which suffered from the malice of Ishtar.

ALAMO Scene of a siege and massacre in San Antonio, Texas.

ALAN (1) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning cheerful, harmonious; from the Slavic, meaning hound. Also Allan, Allen. (2) In heraldry a short-eared mastiff, a wolfhound. (3) In Philippine mythology one of a class of deformed spirits which have fingers pointing backwards and toes at the back of their feet; a wind demon.

AL ARAF In Arabic tradition the region between paradise and hell (Jahannam) for those who are neither morally good nor bad, as idiots, infants. A limbo. In Sufism an exalted state.

ALARIC (1) Masculine name from Old High German, meaning all rich, noble ruler. Also Alarich, Alarico, Alarius, Alarik. (2) Gothic king who invaded and plundered Greece and Rome, hence a plunderer. Voltaire gave Frederick the Great the nickname Alaric Cotin, combining Alaric (plunderer) and Cotin (Charles Cotin was a poet of small merit).

ALASKA Emblem: forget-me-not; nickname: The Last Frontier.

ALASNAM'S MIRROR A touchstone of virtue; from the mirror used by Alasnam in Arabian Nights. When he saw a beautiful girl he looked at her in his mirror; if it remained unsullied the girl was pure; if the glass clouded, the girl was impure in body and mind.

ALASTAIR Masculine name from the Greek, meaning avenger.

ALASTOR An evil genius; Nemesis, which haunts and torments a family. In Greek mythology originally a surname of Zeus, later any avenging, relentless deity or demon. The name of a Lycean slain by Odysseus; alluded to by Homer and Ovid. In medieval demonology a spirit of evil that carries out the sentences of the king of Hell. Shelley uses the name as the title of a poem to mean spirit of solitude. A Greek word resolving into forget not; source of Alastair.

ALB (ALBE) A Christian priest's white linen robe; garment of baptism and of death. Alludes to the robe of mockery with which Herod caused Christ to be clothed. Signifies chastity, eternal joy, purity. Identical to costume worn by ancient pagan priests who, when worshiping female deities, assumed feminine attire.

ALBADDARA The first joint of the great toe, which in Arab superstition is the nucleus for the resurrection of the body.

ALBA LONGA The most powerful city of ancient Latium, site of the mythical story of the birth of Romulus and Remus. Founded, according to legendary accounts, by Ascanius, son of Aeneas; destroyed under Tullus Hostilius, third king of Rome.

ALBAN (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning white and signifying men of Alba. (2) Giant, eponymous ancestor of the people who invaded prehistoric Britain.

Alban kings. Legendary kings invented by the Romans to fill the gap between the Trojan Anchises and Romulus and Remus.

ALBASTA Tatar evil spirit dwelling in bogs, chasms, and deserts. It sometimes takes human shape and kills people by suffocating them. Sometimes conceived as a woman with breasts reaching to her knees and long sharp nails.

ALBATROSS A bird of tireless flight; because it frequents the waters off Cape Hope sailors call it Cape Sheep. It supposedly brings bad weather but, according to a superstition, it is fatal to shoot. Symbolic of long sea voyages and distant seas. Name from the Greek, meaning bucket, in the belief it carries water in its pouch.

ALBERIA In heraldry a shield destitute of amorial bearing or ornament.

ALBERICH (ELBERIC) (1) Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning elf ring. (2) In Teutonic legend: (a) Dwarf in the Dietrich Saga who forged the magic sword Naglering for the fire giants Grim and Hilde, and then stole it from them to give to Dietrich on condition that Dietrich spare his life. Parallels Andvari. (b) In Nibelungen Lied, king of dwarfs, vassal of the Nibelung kings, guardian of the Nibelung hoard, a power of darkness or of the wealth-laden underworld. When he comes in conflict with Siegfried, the power of light, Siegfried, demands and obtains from him the cloak of darkness, which makes the wearer invisible, and the magic sword, which never misses its mark (lightning). Also called Auberon, Oberon. (c) In Volung Saga the power of darkness, who has in his subterranean palace a belt of strength; Draupner, magic ring of fertility; Tarnkappe, cloak of invisibility; and Tyrping, the invincible sword which fights by itself. His subjects, the artisan dwarfs, are master craftsmen who produced these as well as Freya's necklace, Sif's golden hair, and other wondrous things for gods and heroes. Also called Aelfrich.

(d) In Wagner's Ring of the Nibelung a dwarf, principle of darkness or evil, who robs the Rhine maidens of the Rhinegold (sun on the water), which he causes to be fashioned into a magic ring (fertility). He places a curse on it so that when he is deprived of its possession it brings ill fortune (wintry death) to the one who has it. (3) A friar who invited his brother and nephew to a feast, where he killed them. The murder signal was, "Bring in the fruit." Dante consigned him to the Inferno of treacherous murderers.

ALBERT (Adelbert, Al, Albertus, Bert, Bertie, Eb, Elbert) Masculine name from the German through the French or Latin, meaning noble and bright, illustrious. Feminine form Alberta, Alberten, Albertine.

AL BEZE In Arabic lore the despised one.

ALBIGEOIS (ALBIGENSES) Gnostics. A pre-reformation Protestant sect in France. Heretics or reformers who considered marriage sinful, opposed church authority, and rejected sacraments. They disseminated their doctrines disguised as jesters or troubadors and were exterminated by the crusades and the Inquisition.

ALBIN (1) Masculine name from Albinus, a Roman family name from the Latin, meaning white. (2) Mongol steppe master. He leads people astray by lighting will-o'-the-wisps.

Albina. (1) Feminine of Albin. (2) In Greek mythology the eldest of the Danaids; the white goddess, originally a barley (pearl barley) or white sow goddess, paralleling the Celtic Cerridwen.

ALBION (1) In Greek mythology a giant son of Poseidon. Slain by Heracles. Probably the white caps of the sea. (2) Poetical name for Great Britain, undoubtedly because of the white cliffs. A name related to Albin.

AL BORAK (ALBORAC, ALBORACH) Literally, lightning. Winged white steed, each of whose strides were equal to the furthest range of human vision, on which Mohammed supposedly went to heaven. In Moslem tradition one of the ten animals of heaven. Variouslly called an ass, horse, or mule. Compare horse, white.

ALBORS (ALBURZ) Parsee sacred mountain, navel of the earth, around which the sun and moon revolve. Mithras' dwelling is on it, and from there he observes the world. Light shines out from it and returns to it.

ALCAHEST The fabled universal solvent in medieval alchemy.

ALCE Greek abstract deity. Night.

ALCESTIS (ALCESTE, ALKESTIS) In Greek mythology a devoted bride who dies to save her husband. She was daughter of Pelias and wife of Admetus, king of Pherae in Thessaly. Apollo offered Admetus immortality if, when he was on the point of death, he could find someone to take his place. Alcestis offered to act as his substitute. As Alcestis faded Admetus revived. In one account Heracles rescued her from the underworld and restored her to Admetus; in another account Persephone released her. A myth which resembles that of Persephone and suggests death in autumn, rebirth in spring.

ALCHEMIST (1) One who seeks to discover the elixir of life or the philosopher's stone or who seeks to transform a base metal into gold. One who is cunning, mysterious, or who changes the appearance or structure of things. (2) Card in the tarot deck illustrated by a veiled winged woman pouring wine from one jug to another, signifying initiative, perpetual movement of life. Another name for the card is Temperance. Typifies agencies and laws. Attainment: mastery of ideas. In divination corresponds to the number 15 and the Hebrew letter samekh. Denotes: corporeal and individual existence, economy, fruition, health, production, temperance, and harmonizes the psychic and material natures. When the card appears in reverse it suggests things connected with churches, religions, and sects; also competing interests and disunion.

ALCHERA (ALCHERINGA) In Australian mythology the mythical past in which totemic ancestors lived.

ALCHOCHODEN In astrology the planet that is said to indicate by its position at a person's birth the length of his life. From the Arabic.

ALCIBIADES Ancient Greek arch-demagogue. Athenian general and intriguer of 5th century B.C. A brilliant but traitorous general.

ALCIDES Masculine name from the Greek, meaning strong. A name of Heracles as the son of Alcmena.

ALCINA In Italian epics carnal pleasure personified. In Ariosto's Orlando Furioso a Circe type, whose garden is a place of enchantment. She enjoys her lovers for a season; then converts them into beasts, stones, trees, etc. In Boiardo's Orlando Innamorato a sorceress who carries off Astolpho.

ALCINOUS (ALKINOOS) In Homer's Odyssey, husband of Arete, father of Nausicaa. King of the Phaeacians on the island paradise of Scheria, onto which Odysseus is tossed. Alcinous provides Odysseus with a ship (cloud) laden with gifts (fertility) to take him home because the form of Odysseus (sun) gleams and has an air of kingly majesty. Agricultural hero, perhaps a fertilizing aspect of the heavens.

ALCIPPE In Greek mythology daughter of Ares. When Halirrhothius, a water deity, carried her off, Ares killed him.

ALCIS In Teutonic mythology two brother deities whom Tacitus compares to Castor and Pollux. They were worshiped in the grove of the Nahanarvali, an East German tribe, and served by a priest dressed in woman's clothing. See androgynous deities.

ALCITHOE In Greek mythology daughter of Minyas, sister of Leucippe. Alcithoe and Leucippe were changed into bats for refusing to join the women of Boeotia in the worship of Dionysus, a myth probably reflecting the struggle over the introduction of a foreign ritual which is finally established by violence. This probably belongs to the same cycle of myths as that of Agave.

ALCMAEON (ALKMAION) In Greek mythology son of Amphiaraus, one of the Seven Against Thebes, and Eriphyle. Alcmaeon led the Epigoni, the sons of the first Seven, in a successful expedition against Thebes. Although he had promised his father to avenge his death by killing his mother, he hesitated doing so. Finally in obedience to an oracle he slew her. For this murder he was pursued by the Furies and driven mad. He fled to Psophis in Arcadia, where King Phegeus purged him of his affliction and gave him his daughter Arsinoe in marriage. Alcmaeon gave his bride the fatal necklace and veil of Harmonia, which he had inherited from his mother. He later deserted Arsinoe and married Calirrhoe, the daughter of a river god. Under false pretenses he returned to claim the necklace and veil, and was waylaid and slain by the brothers of Arsinoe. Thus he was the avenger of his father's death, heroic warrior, matricide, and the vehicle by which a fatal curse was fulfilled. His story resembles that of Orestes and relates to the course of the sun.

ALCMENE (ALCMENA, ALKMENE) In Greek mythology daughter of Electryon, king of Mycenae; wife of her cousin Amphytrion; mother of twins, Heracles by Zeus and Iphicles by Amphytrion. At the birth of Heracles, fearful of the hatred of Hera, she exposed her son in an open field. Hera, attracted by the baby's cries, and not knowing who he was, fed him from her breast, which he bit. She dropped the baby, which was brought back to Alcmene and Amphytrion, who placed Heracles with the Centaur Chiron to be educated. Alcmene as an unfaithful wife appears frequently in later literature. See Amphytrion.

ALCOVE Womankind, as place of entrance and emergence, whence new life issues into the world. Compare doorway, qubbah.

ALCYONE In Greek mythology: (1) daughter of Aeolus, wife of Ceyx. In grief when Ceyx was drowned she cast herself into the sea and was changed into a kingfisher. Personification of a rain cloud. (2) A Pleiad, daughter of Atlas and Pleione. When pursued by Orion, to save them, Zeus transformed them into doves (clouds), later placed in the sky as stars.

ALCYONEUS In Greek mythology, a giant killed by Heracles. An evil monster. Probably a rain-withholding cloud.

ALDA Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning rich.

ALDEBARAN One of the brightest stars in the sky, orange in color. One of the four royal stars. The ancients divided the heavens into four parts, each watched over by one of the four stars. The eye of the Hyades, a cluster in the constellation Taurus. It stands for follower because it follows the Pleiades.

ALDEGONDE (ADELGONDE) Feminine name from the Flemish, meaning noble war.

ALDEN (ALDWIN) Masculine name from Old English, meaning old friend.

John Alden. A young man who courts a young woman for a friend and wins her for himself.

ALDER (1) In Celtic mythology tree of resurrection, marking the emergence of the solar year. Still held sacred in some sections of Ireland, where the felling of one is held to be followed by the burning down of one's house. In druidic tree alphabet tree of the fourth consonant, Fearn (F). In the druidic calendar the fourth or alder month extends from March 19th to April 15th, and includes the spring equinox. Tree of Bran and of Gwern. (2) In the Odyssey also a tree of resurrection. (3) Tree typifying fire from the red in its trunk, water from its green flowers, and earth from the brown of its bark; principally a tree of fire and, as a resister of the corruption of water, of the power of fire to free earth from water. 'Der' equates with 'dur' of enduring, hence enduring god. Also called alnus, i.e. only light or only god (al or el).

ALDRICH Masculine name from Middle English, meaning old king.

ALE In Norse mythology divine fluid.

ALEARDA Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning nobly stern.

ALECTO In Greek mythology the relentless one, one of the three Furies.

ALEIAN PLAIN In Greek mythology the plain in Cilicia (sky) over which Bellerophon (sun) roamed alone and on which he died.

ALEMBIC A distilling glass; figuratively anything that purifies or transforms a character.

ALEPH First letter of the Hebrew alphabet, meaning bull or ox. Its numerical value is one. According to the mystics its correspondence in the tarot deck is the Fool (some say the Magus); its physical correspondence is breath; its planetary or zodiacal correspondence is the sun; its symbolic correspondence is will power. Its color is pale yellow; its direction on the cube of space (see) is above to below, signifying superior human consciousness which is dependent, obedient or subordinate to a higher control; its intelligence is fiery or scintillating and it is associated with the nomadic life of a herdsman. In white magic it is in correspondence with Eheieh, fontal name of God, interpreted as Divine Essence. Its seat is in the world of Ensoph (infinity), its attribute is Keter, the Crown. Ruler over angels called Haioth-ha-Kodesch or Living Creatures of Holiness, who also are the Seraphim and constitute the first or supreme choir. Letter yields al-ef, i.e. good life. Akin to alive and elf. Cadi, caliph, calipha, all mean great A or aleph. Identical with 'eleph' of elephant, the greatest and most powerful of all beasts.

Aleph-tau (tav) Beginning and end, eternity, first and last. Author of the universe, the whole compass of things. Parallels A-Z, alpha-omega.

ALERION Heraldic eagle without beak or claws. Probably signifies one lamed or maimed in war.

ALETHEA (ALETEA, ALITIA) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning truth.

ALEUS In Greek mythology, deity of blind night. Grandfather of Telephus.

ALEXANDER (ALASTAIR, ALECK, ALEXIS, ALISTER, ELLICK, SANDER, SANDY) (1) Masculine line name from the Greek, meaning defender or helper of men.

(2) A wealthy and corrupt pope, Alexander VI, whose original name was Rodrigo Lanzol y Borgia. He had many mistresses and became the father of Cesare Borgia and Lucrezia Borgia among others. He was involved in wars and executions, including Savonarola's. He instituted censorship of books, but also sponsored Bramante, Michelangelo and Raphael. (3)

In Greek tradition, name by which the shepherds who raised Paris, son of Priam, called him. (4)

The greatest warrior of all time. Various versions of his divine ancestry are given; he is said to have been a descendant of Dionysus, a reincarnation of Heracles, and a son of Zeus (or Ammon) who approached Olympias, his mother, in the form of a serpent (phallus). His birth was accompanied by earthquakes, lightning, and thunder, proving him to be divine. One eye was black as night, one as blue as daylight heavens; his hair, teeth, and spirit resembled those of a lion. He inherited the throne of Philip, his putative father. He was impatient and impetuous and, when he could not untie the Gordian knot, he cut it with a cord and, in accordance with the prophecy connected with the knot, conquered the world.

In one account of his death he ascended to heaven to take his place among the gods; in another he was carried into the skies by two eagles but fell back to earth before he reached the abode of the gods. This is the Etana myth attached to Alexander. In historical tradition he led a life of wild dissipation until his death, which occurred at the height of his glory. He is alluded to in the Bible under the figures of a leopard with four wings and a one-horned he-goat, suggesting the swiftness of his conquests and his great strength, as appointed by God to destroy the Persian empire and substitute the Greek.

In the statue seen by Nebuchadnezzar in his dreams the belly of brass was the emblem of Alexander. As Alexander proclaimed himself to be the son of Ammon ram-horns appeared on his head on his coins. (4) Alexander III of Russia, who ascended to the throne when his father was assassinated, was a ruler who resented foreign influence, yet himself interfered in Balkan affairs and countenanced invasion and persecution.

ALEXANDRA (ALEJANDRA, ALEXANDRINA, ALEXANDRINE, ALEXIA) Feminine form of Alexander.

ALEXANDRITE Because its colors are green and red the national stone of Russia. Typifies undying devotion.

ALEXIS In Virgil's poetry a beautiful youth beloved by the shepherd Corydon.

ALEYN (ALAIN, ALAIN LE GROS) In Grail legends twelfth son of Bron, brother-in-law of Arimathea, who selected Aleyn as keeper of the Holy Grail.

ALFADIR (ALFADUR) In Norse mythology All-Father; a name for Odin or for the unknown Supreme Being who replaced Odin after Ragnarok.

ALFAMA Moorish name for Lisbon; cognate Alif, i.e. Sun A.

ALFAR In Norse mythology the dwarfs who live in Alfheim, where they are ruled by Frey. They possess supernatural powers and are wonderful artisans. Once thought to be the souls of the dead. In Prose Edda divided into two classes, the Liosalfar, light elves who dwell in Alfheim (heaven), and the Dockalfar, dark elves who live underground. Also called huldu folk (hidden folk) and liuflinger (darlings). Identical with alvor, brownie, elf, ra.

ALFET In early Britain a vat of boiling water into which an accused person was compelled to plunge his arm as a test of guilt or innocence. The ordeal itself.

ALFHEIM One of the Norse heavenly mansions. Abode of Frey, king of the alfar. Located in the east near the sacred well of the Norns at the root of Yggdrasil. Elf land, fairyland; also called Ljosalfaheim.

ALFRED (ALF) Masculine name from Old English, meaning elf and counselor. Feminine form Alfreda (Freda).

Alfred Jingle. In Dickens' Pickwick Papers a strolling actor and swindler.

Alfred Lammle. In Dickens' Our Mutual Friends a man who marries for money and finds his wife has none.

ALGAE In Japan its sentiment is long life and it is used at New Year festivals and sent with gifts.

ALGEA (ALGIA) In Greek mythology a descendant of Eris. Name meaning pain.

ALGER Masculine name from the Anglo Saxon, meaning noble spearman.

ALGERNON (ALGY) Masculine name from the Norman French, meaning whiskered.

ALGOL The variable star Beta in the constellation Perseus which grows alternately brighter and paler. Also called the Demon Star.

ALGONQUIN (ALGONKIN) The name of a North American Indian tribe meaning on the other side of the river.

Algonquin gods. Five in all: Michabo, supreme deity, has the form of a hare or rabbit. The other four, all without visible shape, are: Kabibonokka, north wind; Kabun, west wind; Shawano, south wind; Wabun, east wind.

ALHET The 'longer confession of sin' of the Jews. Arranged like an acrostic, it is chanted repeatedly by the congregation and reader on the Day of Atonement.

ALI BABA See under Baba.

ALICE (ALICIA, ALINE, ELSA, ELSE, ELSJE) Variant through Old French of Adelaide, from Teutonic meaning cheer, noble. Also from the Greek, meaning nobility, truth.

ALIF Arabic equivalent of al-eph, alpha. The chief, first, foremost. Title of the Arabic great father spirit. Resolves into Great A, Living A, Lord Life. Same word as English alive, a-loof; akin to elf, fairy.

ALILAH Arabian Supreme God, later Allah. Mate of Allat.

ALILAT (ALILTA, HALITTA) In Northern Arabia an earth and mother goddess; also a war goddess resembling Athena. Another name of Ilat, early Arabian mother goddess paralleling Aphrodite.

ALISON Feminine name from Gaelic, meaning famous war.

AL JASSASA Literally, the spy. In Mohammedanism beast which is to rise out of the earth as one of the signs of the approaching day of judgement.

AL KADR In Mohammedanism the night on which the complete Koran (divine decrees) came down to the lowest heaven, whence Gabriel revealed it as occasion required to Mohammed.

ALKHA (ARAKHO) Dragon or beast which swallows the sun and moon, thus causing the world to grow dark. Angry at this, the gods cut his body in two. Now each time he swallows the sun or moon they soon appear again as he cannot retain them in his body. An eclipse myth identical with Rahu.

ALKUNTAM In Bella Coola Indian legends deity who helped Senx (sun) create man. His mother was a cannibal (mosquito) who inserted her long snout into the ears of men and sucked out their brains.

ALLAH (ALA) In Mohammedanism the Supreme Being. Derived from the pagan Arab god Alilah. Corresponds to El, Il, Ilah, Jehovah.

ALLALA BIRD In Babylonian mythology loved by Ishtar. When she tired of him she broke his wings. A seasonal myth.

ALLAT Nabataean mother goddess. Defender of cities, a fate deity, morning and evening star. As morning star, a war goddess; as evening star, patroness of love and harlotry. Lucky planet to which human sacrifices were offered. Addressed as Queen of Heaven. Her attributes were a cornucopia and a turreted crown. In masculine form called Sa'd.

See androgynous deities. Pagan Arabs adopted her, and she became the mate of Alilah (later Allah). Her idol was destroyed on Mohammed's orders. She resembles Allat, Anat, Ilat, Ishtar, Kore, Tyche, Venus.

ALLATU Babylonian queen of Aralu, the underworld. Wife of Nergal, her messenger is Namtaru. Also called Erishgal (Erishkigal). Parallels Persephone. See Ishtar.

ALLELUIA (HALLELUJAH) Song of praise and joy to the Lord.

ALLEN-A-DALE (ALLAN-A-DALE) In Robin Hood tales a brave, musical youth who dressed gaily. Aided by his friend Robin Hood he broke up the wedding of his sweetheart to a wealthy old knight (winter) and was married to her on the spot by Little John. Typifies spring or summer breezes.

ALLERION In heraldry an eagle or eaglet without feet and beak or without feet and wings.

ALL-FATHER The indescribable Supreme Deity.

ALL FOOL'S DAY April 1, feast of vernal equinox. Various explanations are given for the festivities: March 25 used to be New Year's Day, and April 1 the octave on which the rites ended in gay ceremonies. The day is said to be a rite marking the mockery of the trial of Christ. It is said to mock the uncertainty of the weather of the season. Others claim it is a relic of the Cerealia, held in Rome early in April, when Ceres heard the scream of Proserpina as she was abducted by Pluto, and her search of 'the voice' was a fool's errand. Corresponds to the feast of Huli celebrated in India.

ALL-HALLOW DAY See All Saints' Day.

All-hallow E'en. Druid festival which celebrated the autumn equinox with Belinian fires. One of the quarter days on which witches celebrated their Sabbaths. It marked the dying of the year.

All-hallow summer. Indian summer; Saint Martin's summer.

ALLIGATOR Sacred animal of South American Indians, among whom it is known as cayman. In Korea known as ake, i.e. mighty A. Ake is related to Sanscrit naga (serpent), and in Hinduism naga gods are worshiped. Alligator resolves into el-agatha, i.e. mighty Ether, and is related to Agathadaemon. Anglicized corruption of Spanish el lagart (great lizard). Compare crocodile, lizard.

ALLISON Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning holy fame.

ALLISTER Masculine name from the Greek, meaning helper of mankind.

ALL SAINTS' DAY Christian festival on November 1, commemorating all saints and martyrs. Formerly called All-hallow Day, All-hallowmas. In Greek Orthodox Church observed on the first Sunday after Pentecost.

ALL SOULS' DAY Originally a Pagan feast honoring the dead. In Roman Catholic Church celebrated on November 2nd with solemn prayers for the souls still in Purgatory.

ALLSPICE March 25 birthday flower. Sentiment: compassion, languishing.

ALLUMEE In heraldry to glisten, glow, red; the eyes of a beast so represented on an escutcheon.

ALMA (1) Feminine name from the German, alluding to the battle of Alma in the Crimea; identified with the Latin cheerful, fostering, king nourishing. (2) In Spenser's Faerie Queene a 'virgin bright.'

ALMERIC Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning elm and ruler.

ALMIDA Feminine name from the Byzantine, meaning power of love.

ALMINGA Amazon water plant which Indians rubbed on virile members for development and fertility.

ALMIRA Feminine name from the Arabic, meaning lofty, a princess.

AL MOAKKIBAT In Mohammedanism the two angel guardians who attend every man to observe and record his actions. They change every day.

ALMON Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning the forsaken.

ALMOND April 8 birthday flower. Sentiment: heedlessness, indiscretion, stupidity. The awaker, and as the first tree to awake to life in winter, a symbol of fruitfulness, haste, hope, self-protection, vigilance, virginity. Called the womb of the world. Word yields almonde, i.e. lord of the world, sole resplendent lord (sun). Sacred to Hermes, Jehovah, Mercury, Nabu, Thoth. Emblem of Virgin Mary. In Hebrew the name signifies watcher and typifies divine approval. Its blossoms, which appear in January, are compared to a hoary head because of their snowy whiteness and winter blossoming. Tree from which Aaron took his magic rod. In Italy candied almonds are distributed at wedding feasts. Phrygian tree of life. Amygdalus, Phrygian for almond tree, means 'Father of all,' and is associated with Aegmond, a proper name meaning protecting eye (sun).

Almond flowering. Hope.

Almond and mulberry. The middle way between hastiness and slowness; the first flourishing early, the second late.

Laurel almond. Perfidy.

ALMS Dream significance: (giving) joy; (received) loss of employment.

ALNASCHER In Arabian Nights the barber's fifth brother, who buys a basket of glassware. He dreams the sale of his merchandise will prove a source of great wealth and furnish him with sufficient means to marry the vizier's daughter. He kicks the basket, destroying its contents and the means of realizing his hopes. Thus, one given to day dreaming.

ALNATH The first star in the horns of Aries, therefore the first mansion of the moon.

ALOCER Demon in astrology.

ALOE January 4 birthday flower. Sentiment: affliction, bitterness, contempt, grief, misplaced devotion, sorrow. Word equating with olive. Greek for aloe (or agave) is alon, which may be Anglicised into alone.

ALODAE (ALODAE, ALOADAI) In Greek mythology twin sons (or twins joined in body with two heads, four hands, and four feet) of Poseidon (sea) and Iphimedia (shore) the wife of Aloeus (planter), who was the son of Poseidon and putative father of the twins. Their names were Otus (pusher or wind) and Ephialtes (leaper or hurricane), and they lived on the grain they bruised or crushed. They imprisoned Ares (war) in a vase for thirteen months before he was released by Hermes. This is interpreted as an expression of the antagonism between agriculture and war; also as the storm clad heaven serving as the battlefield of raging tempests. In one account these giants seek to lay hands, the one on Artemis (moon), the other on Hera (sky), but Artemis, the fleet huntress, so runs between them that they, aiming at her, kill each other; thus storm clouds destroy each other. In a more popular version, while striving to attack Olympus by piling Mount Pelion on Mount Ossa, they are killed by Apollo or Heracles (sun), and are consigned to Hades, where they are bound by serpents to two great columns (world supports). Aloidae is from the root aloe (threshing floor).

ALOYSIUS (ALOYS) Masculine name, Latin variant of Louis, meaning grace.

ALP A high mountain, a universal pole, a world support.

ALPHA First letter of Greek alphabet, signifying beginning, leadership. In astronomy the brightest star in a constellation. A later form of aleph. Cognate A.

Alpha-mu-omega. Beginning, middle, end; past, present, future.

Alpha-omega. Same as Aliph-tau.

ALPHABET AFFILIATIONS

Arabic	Arabic Numerical Value	Egyptian Hieroglyph	Greek	Greek Numerical Value
1 alif	(a) 1	eagle (a)	alpha (a)	1
2 ba	(b) 2	crane (b)	beta (b)	2
3 ta	(t) 400	throne (g or k)	gamma (g)	3
4 tha	(th) 500	hand (d)	delta (d)	4
5 jim	(j) 3	meander (h)	epsilon (e)	5
6 hha	(h) 8	cerastes (f)	zeta (z)	7
7 kha	(kh) 600	duck (e)	eta (e)	8
8 dal	(d) 4	sieve (kh)	theta (th)	0
9 dhal	(dh) 700	tongs (th)	iota (i)	10
10 ra	(r) 200	parallels (i)
11 zay	(z) 7	bowl (k)	kappa (k)	20
12 sin	(s) 60	lioness (l)	lambda (l)	30
13 shin	(sh) 300	owl (m)	mu (m)	40
14 cad	(s) 90	water (n)	nu (n)	50
15 dad	(dz) 800	chairback (s)	xi (x)	60
16 ta	(tt or th) 9	shutter (p)	omicron (o)	70
17 za	(z) 900	snake (ts)	pi (p)	80
18 ain	(a) 70	angle (q)	rho (r)	100
19 ghain	(gh) 1,000	mouth (r)	sigma (s)	200
20 fa	(fa) 80	flood (sh)	tau (t)	300
21 qaf	(q) 100	lasso (t)	upsilon (u)	400
22 kaf	(k) 20		phi (ph)	500
23 lam	(l) 30		chi (ch)	700
24 mim	(m) 40		psi (ps)	700
25 nun	(n) 50		omega (o)	800
26 ha	(h) 5
27 waw	(w) 6
28 ya	(y) 10

Note: Letters in brackets represent English equivalents. Tarot Equivalents and Zodiacal Correspondence vary in Occult works. Those which appear to be the most commonly accepted have been listed.

ALPHABET AFFILIATIONS (continued)

Hebrew		Hebrew Numerical Value	Hebrew Meaning
aleph	(a)	1	ox
beth	(b)	2	house
gimel	(g)	3	camel
daleth	(d)	4	door
he	(h)	5	window
vau	(v or w)	6	nail (peg)
zayin	(z)	7	sword
cheth	(ch)	8	fence
teth	(t)	9	serpent
yod	(i)	10	hand
kaph	(kf)	20	hand palm lamed	(l)	30	ox goad
mem	(m)	40	water
nun	(n)	50	fish
samekh	(s)	60	prop
ayin	(o)	70	eye
pe	(p)	80	mouth
tsade	(ss or ts)	90	javelin
qoph	(q)	100	back of head resh	(r)	200	head
sin	(s)	300	tooth
shin	(sh)	300
tav	(t or th)	400	cross or mark

Note: Letters in brackets represent English Equivalents. Tarot Equivalents and Zodiacal Correspondence vary in Occult works. Those which appear to be the most commonly accepted have been listed.

ALPHABET AFFILIATIONS (continued)

Roman Numerical Value	Tarot Equivalent	Zodiacal Correspondence
A 50, 500	Magus	Sun
B 300	High Priestess	Moon
C 100	Empress	Venus or Earth
D 500	Emperor	Jupiter
E 250	High Priest	Aries or Mercury
F 40	Lovers	Taurus or Virgo
G 400	Chariot	Gemini or Sagittarius
H 200	Justice	Cancer or Libra
I 1	Hermit	Leo or Neptune
J	Wheel	Virgo or Capricorn
K 250	Strength	Mars or Leo
L 50	Hanged Man	Libra or Uranus
M 1,000	Death	Without or Saturn
N 90	Temperance	Scorpio or Saturn
O 11	Devil	Sagittarius or Aquarius
P 400	Tower of Babel	Capricorn or Mars
Q 90, 500	Star	Mercury or Ram
R 80	Moon	Aquarius or Venus
S 7, 70	Sun	Pisces or Cancer
T 160	Judgment	Saturn or Gemini
U 5	World	Without or Pisces
V 5
W	Fool
X 10
Y 150
Z 2,000

ALPHABET, DRUIDIC

The Beithe-Luis-Nion alphabet, used for purposes of divination, consisting of five vowels and thirteen consonants. Each letter is related to the name of a shrub or tree. The letters form a calendar of seasonal tree-magic. All the trees figure prominently in European folk literature. See Battle of Trees.

Numerical Value	Irish Letter	English Equivalent	Tree English Name	Tree Latin Name	Season or Month of 28 Days
1	ailm	a	silver fir (later elm)	abies	New Year
4	onn	o	furze (later broom)	genista	Spring equinox
0	ur	u	heather	erix or erica	Summer solstice
2	eadha	e	white poplar (aspen)	tremula	Autumn equinox
3	idho	i	yew	taxus	Winter solstice
5	beithe (beth)	b	birch	betulla	Dec. 24 - Jan. 21
14	luis	l	rowan (quick-beam)	ornus	Jan. 22 - Feb. 18
13	nion	n	ash	fraxinus	Feb. 19 - Mar. 18
8	fearn	f	alder	alnus	Mar. 19 - Apr. 15
16	saille	s	willow	salix	Apr. 16 - May 13
0	uath (huath)	h	white thorn	oxiancanthus	May 14 - June 10
12	duir	d	oak	ilex	June 11 - July 8
11	tinne	t	holly (later gorse)	genist spin	July 9 - Aug. 5
9	coll	c	hazel	corylus	Aug. 6 - Sept. 2
6	muin (min)	m	vine	vitis	Sept. 3 - Sept. 30
10	gort	g	ivy	hedera	Oct. 1 - Oct. 28
7	pethboc (pethbhog)	p	reed (or dwarf elder)	beite	Oct. 29 - Nov. 25
15	ruis	r	elder	sambucus	Nov. 26 - Dec. 22

Note: For the missing day, December 23rd, the plant is the mistletoe. (As this is the New Year holiday, it shares the day with silver fir).

ALPHARD Masculine name from the Latin, meaning the solitary.

ALPHEUS (ALPHAÆUS, ALPHEE, ALPHEIOS) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning substitute. (2) In Christianity the father of James the Less. (3) In Greek mythology son of Oceanus and Tethys. A hunter, he fell in love with the nymph Arethusa, who fled from him, calling on Artemis to help her. Artemis wrapped her in a blanket of clouds which transformed her into a fountain. In despair Alpheus became a river and made his way under the sea until he mingled with the waters of the fountain and caused it to become a stream. A myth explaining the swelling of the stream in wet seasons. In one version Artemis herself is pursued by Alpheus and to escape him she takes the form of a fish. See Aphaea. Heracles accomplished his task of cleaning the stables of Augeas by diverting the river Alpheus, thus the sun as controller of waters.

ALPHITO Ancient Greek barley goddess, probably identical with Dione as woodland deity.

ALPHONSO (ALFONS, ALFONSO, ALONSO, ALONZO, ALPHONSE, ALPHONSUS) Masculine name from the German through the Spanish, meaning noble and ready; in Teutonic meaning eager for battle, willing.

ALQUIFE A famous enchanter appearing in old romances.

AL-RAKIM In the Koran the watchdog of the Seven Sleepers; guardian of documents in Paradise. Also the valley in which the seven slept or the tablets on which their names were written.

ALRINACH Demon of shipwrecks in Eastern mythology. When visible appears in the form of an old woman.

ALRUNA-WIFE Ancient Germanic priestess. A household idol of ancient tribes of northern Europe.

ALSATIA Whitefriars, London; formerly a sanctuary for criminals and insolvent debtors, described by Sir Walter Scott in Fortunes of Nigel. Any sanctuary for criminals. See Bermudas.

ALSIRAT (al Sirat) In Mussulman belief the bridge which is finer than a hair, sharper than a razor blade, and is the only road over the abyss of Hell into Paradise. The sin-burdened fall from it into Hell. The narrow road or correct way of religion. Compare Pul Chinavad.

ALSVID (ALSVINN, ALSVID) See Aarvak.

ALTA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning high, tall.

ALTAIR Star of first magnitude in constellation Aquila. The Cowherd or Herdsman of Eastern mythologies. In China called Ch'ien Niu; in Japan called Hiko-boshi (Kengiu), which see.

ALTAR Devotion, sacrifice, worship. Table of the gods. Modified form of pillar, symbol of the Creator. Typifies the navel of the earth. Anciently burnt-offering (sun) altars faced the east. In some cultures regarded as so sacred any malefactor who reached it was safe from his pursuers. Dream significance: consolation, joy. The constellation Ara. In Greek antiquity the gods of the lower world had no altars; ditches or trenches were dug to receive the blood of sacrifices offered to them. In Hebrew tradition a movable altar of incense and one of show bread stood in the Holy place before the Holy of Holies. Solomon's altar was called the brazen altar. In the Old Testament numerous allusions to altars of twelve stones appear. Word resolves into el-tur (dur, tor), i.e. enduring God. Compare hearthstone, hill, stone.

Abraham's altar. Steadfast faith.

Altar cloth. Shroud of Christ.

Noah's altar. Faith.

ALTCANALS In Aztec tradition male form of Chalchiuhtlicue (see); a blue god with yellow hair and purple face.

ALTHEA (ALTHAEA, ALTHAIA)

(1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning healer, nourisher, wholesome, wild mallow. (2) In Greek mythology daughter of Thestius, wife of Oeneus, king of Calydon, and mother of Meleager, whose life is tied up with the burning brand. When Meleager is born the three Fates prophesy that he will live only as long as a brand on the hearth burns (the sun dies when his light disappears below the horizon). Althea seizes the brand, quenches it of its fire, and preserves it. When Meleager slays her two brothers, Althea casts the brand onto a flame, and Meleager dies. Artemis, pitying this house, turns its members into birds. Althea is generally understood to be mother-earth, which gives birth to the sun and also causes his death or setting. Althea is also identified as the mother of Atabyrius, the pagan god worshiped in the form of a golden calf by the Israelites, who credited him with having brought them out of Egypt, and of Deianeira, wife of Heracles.

(3) December 8 birthday flower with the sentiment persuasion. In the language of flowers: Consumed by love. In Korea the everlasting flower, that which though cut down rises again.

ALTHEMENES In Greek mythology a parricide. Son of Catreus, king of Crete, whom he killed.

ALTIS In Greek antiquity grove at Olympia sacred to Zeus and Hera. Site of the Herae, races performed every fourth year by young women in honor of the goddess.

ALTJIRRA Australian sky god whose voice is thunder and whose feet are like the emu's.

ALU Sumerian wicked demon or ghost which covers a man like a garment.

ALUKAH Bloodsucker or vampire of Jewish superstitions.

ALULIM Sumerian antediluvian ruler who descended from heaven. A first man corresponding to Adam. His reign lasted, according to one text, 28,000 years; according to another, 67,200. By the Greeks called Aloros.

AL USSA Angel of pagan Arabs. Her idol was destroyed on Mohammed's orders.

ALV (ALF) In Volsung Saga, a viking, son of Hjaalprek, king of Denmark. After the death of Sigmund he rescued Hjordis and married her. Probably a deity of darkness or winter.

ALVAH (ALVA) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning wickedness.

ALVAN Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning the elevated.

ALVIN (AL, ALWIN) Masculine name from Old English, meaning elf and friend, beloved by all, bright, joyous. Feminine form, Alvina.

ALVISS (ALVIS) In Norse mythology a spirit of darkness, probably dew. Dwarf suitor of Thrud, Thor's daughter. He is frustrated by Thor, who plies him with questions until daybreak, which is fatal to him. Name signifies all wise.

ALVOR In Swedish folklore the hog-folk who dwell in hills or mounds. They are more refined and slender than humans, and are ruled by a king and queen. They dance in meadows and woods, but must return underground by cockcrow. A form of elf.

ALYSSUM Its sentiment is exemplary modesty. In the language of flowers: Worth beyond beauty.

ALYSSUS Arcadian fountain where madness was cured.

ALZITZIUTIL Aztec maize on which Mexicans subsisted during the first age of man.

AM Ancient Eastern word for mother.

AMA (MAMA, MAMI) Sumerian mother goddess. Creatrix of the seed of mankind, mother of all things. Derived from Ana. Base of Ariadne, Arianrhod, Athena, Marian, Marianna, ma.

AMABEL (MABEL) Feminine name from the Latin meaning lovable.

AMADIS (1) Spanish masculine name meaning love of God. (2) Hero of medieval romances. Known as lion knight, from the device on his shield, and dark knight or darkly beautiful knight, from his appearance. He was a love child and cast away at birth, and was called child of the sea, having been found at sea. In the tradition of the myth motif of abandoned children he becomes a great hero, wars with giants, whom he conquers, and wins the woman he loves.

AMAETHON (AMATHAON) (1) Welsh masculine name meaning laborer or ploughman. (2) In Brythonic legend a god of agriculture, a farmer-god able to till fields which others are unable to till. Son of Don, brother of Gwydion. He steals a wondrous dog, lapwing, and white roebuck from Arawn, Lord of Annwfn (bottomless pit, underworld of wealth), and brings them up to earth's surface. As bringer of animals and secrets of fertility from the underworld he is a culture hero and benevolent trickster. His thievery parallels that of Heracles. The stealing of the three animals, in which he was aided by his brother Gwydion, the sun, led to the Battle of Cath Godeu or Battle of Trees (see). In later mythology he plows for Arthur.

AMAGAT Yakut shaman spirit which advises and protects a shaman through life. Pictured on the costume of a shaman as a little man-like figure.

AMAGOI Rain prayers offered to Ryugin, Japanese rain god.

AMAH (AMA) In India a wet nurse.

AMAIMON One of the chief devils in medieval demonology; king of the eastern portion of Hell.

AMA-INU Heavenly dog guarding Japanese temples. Credited with the power of driving away demons.

AMAIRGEN Celtic singer of spells and giver of judgements. Slayer of the three-headed bird which came from Cruachan's Cave and wasted Ireland.

AMALA In myths of Tsimshian (Chimmesyan) Indians of British Columbia, hero who supports the world on the end of a long pole, which revolves in duck grease on his chest. Parallels Atlas.

AMALEKITES Anciently, a marauding band of nomads who preyed on fatigued or weak migrants in the desert between the Dead and the Red Seas. They supposedly were destroyed at the command of Jehovah for having attacked the Israelites.

AMALTHEA (AMALTHAEA) In Greek mythology sacred goat which fed milk to Zeus when he was in hiding on Mount Ida in Crete. When Amalthea died Zeus honored her by making one of her horns a wonder. Whoever had it might immediately have anything he wished to eat or drink.

Amalthea's horn. Cornucopia, symbolizing peace and prosperity.

AMAN (AMEN, AMMON, HAMAN) Ancient name of Egypt, so called from its fertility. Compounded of Am (life) + an (land).

AMANDUS Masculine name from the Latin, meaning worthy of love. Feminine form, Amanda (Mandy).

AMANGONS In Brythonic legend a king and leader of knights who outraged a maiden who supplied passing travelers with drink and food. Following his example, his knights robbed the fairest of their cups of gold (virgin fertility). As a result springs dried up, the land became waste, and the court of the rich Fisher or Fisher King disappeared, suggesting Amangons and his knights were drought demons. For over a thousand years, until the days of King Arthur, the land was a wasteland. The knights of King Arthur came upon maidens wandering in the woods, each attended by a knight. One of them, Blihos-Blikeris, vanquished by Gawain, appeared before King Arthur and related that these maidens descended from those ravished by Amangons' men, and that, if the court of the Fisher King were to be found, fertility would return to the world. King Arthur authorized the search and this in turn led to the quest of the Holy Grail. See Fisher King, Grail.

AMANKI Babylonian water god.

AMA-NO (AME-NO) In Japanese mythology the sky, the empyrean.

AMA-NO-HASHIDATE In Japanese mythology stairway between heaven and earth used by the gods. Parallels Jacob's ladder.

AMANO-IWATO In Japanese mythology cave of darkness into which Amaterasu (sun goddess) retreated and from which she was lured by the ribald dances of Ameno-uzune-no-mikoto and her own reflection in a mirror.

AMA-NO-KAWA In Japanese mythology Heaven's river (Milky Way or rainbow). Also called Ama-no-yase-kawa, Ame-no-yasu-no-kawa, or Yasu. See Herdsman, Weaver Damsel.

AMA-NO-MA-HITOTSU Japanese deity; eye of heaven.

AMA-NO-MINAKA-NUSHI Japanese primeval deity who stood motionless in the center of cosmos; Pole-star god who sprouted like a reed out of chaos. He shares his abode, the axis-of-heaven, with Taka-Mimusubi and Kamu-Mimusubi, thus one of a trinity. May be identical with Kuni-toko-tachi, sky or space, the heavens representing the male principle. Compares with Chinese Tai-Ki. See Takama-no-hara.

AMANORO Armenian spring goddess.

AMA (AME)-NO-UKI-HASHI (UKIBASHI) In Japanese mythology the Floating-Bridge-of-Heaven, uniting heaven and earth. On it Izanagi and Izanami stood while creating earth. May be the rainbow or the Milky Way. Also called Ame-no-ih-fune (Heavenly-Rock-Boat) and Ama-no-Hashidate (Heavenly Stairs).

AMARANTH December 29 birthday flower with the sentiment of faith, unfading love. Symbolic of cheerfulness, merriment, stability. Dream significance: constancy. The name of an imaginary flower said never to fade, hence continuance, immortality, incorruptibility.

Coxcomb amaranth. Foppery.
Foliage of amaranth. Everlastingness, incorruptibility.
Globe amaranth. Unchangeableness.

AMARANTHA Mountain range in Asia, navel of the earth. Name meaning immortal and unfading. Also known as Amanus (derived from Manu) and as Taurus (Celestial Bull).

AMARAVATI Hindu land of bliss. It has a thousand gates, yields the fruit of every season, and anger, covetousness, despondency, grief, and weakness are unknown here. Fatigue, fear, and old age are forgotten. It is the abode of those who meet death as warrior heroes or of those who perform penance and sacrifice. Parallels Valhalla.

AMARGA Babylonian divine calf; offspring of Sun, the moon.

AMARIAH Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning who God has promised.

AMARUD (AMARUDU) A name of Nimrod, also a synonym of Marduk.

AMARUDUK An early form of Marduk. Source of amour.

AMARUM Formidable demon of the Quichas of Equador. Its shape is that of the water-boa. Father of witchcraft. The souls of sorcerers join the legions of Amarum.

AMARYLLIS (1) February 22 birthday flower with the sentiment beauty, pride, timidity, vanity. (2) Feminine name from the Latin alluding to the flower and meaning a country girl, rustic sweetheart, shepherdess.

AMASA Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning burden-bearer, he who amasses.

AMASIS' RING A ring of doom. Polycrates, tyrant of Samos, was fortunate in everything. Amasis, king of Egypt, advised him to relinquish something he greatly prized before his good fortune failed, whereupon Polycrates threw a ring of great value into the sea. A few days afterwards a fish was sent to Polycrates as a gift, and the ring was found in its belly. Shortly afterwards a satrap put the too fortunate despot to death by crucifixion. Also called Polycrates' ring.

AMATERASU (AMATERASU-OHOMI-KAMI) Japanese sun goddess. Name signifying Heaven-Shining-Great-August-Deity. Born of the left eye of Izanagi. Chief deity, ruler of the plain of high heaven, grandmother of Ninigi, who descended from heaven to rule over Japan and became the great grandfather of Jimmu tenno, first mortal sovereign of Japan, thus divine ancestress of the Japanese people. Elder sister of the mischievous storm-god Susa-no-wo. Before leaving for his underworld domain he visited his sister. They faced each other as they stood on opposite shores of the Yasu River (Milky Way or rainbow), and from his sabre she created deities while he created deities from her jewels (beads or necklace) called Mi-kura-tana-nokami. Their meeting resembles that of Weaver Damsel and Herdsman. When Susa-no-wo insulted his sister-wife by desecrating her rice fields with excrement, she retreated into Ame-no-Iwato (Cave Rock) and eternal night prevailed over the world (suggesting an eclipse of the sun). Ame-no-uzume-no-nikoto (Heavenly Alarming Female), ugly divinity of mirth, performed a ribald dance outside the cave, causing the assembled deities to laugh. Amaterasu's curiosity raised, she peeped out of the cave door, and Kagami, an octagonal mirror, was thrust before her. Astonished by the beauty of the face in the mirror, she stepped outside, and Tajikaroo (Prince Mighty Power) placed Shiri-kume-na-nawa (Don't-Retreat-Rope) across the cave's entrance, thus bringing light back into the world. She is known also as Shimmei and Tenshoko-Daijin. Later identified as an aspect of Amitabha.

AMATHAOUNTA Aegean sea goddess. Worshipped in Samaria as Ashima.

AMAUROTE From the Greek, meaning shadowy or unknown place. Chief city of Utopia, mentioned by Sir Thomas More and Rabelais.

AMAZE In Japan title of respect for a Buddhist nun.

AMAZIAH I In Old Testament a man who did good but not with a perfect heart. For setting up idols he was destroyed by a prophet of Jehovah.

Amaziah II. A priest of the golden calf; sun worshiper.

AMAZON (1) In Greek legend one of a race of female warriors who supposedly dwelt off the coast of the Black Sea and in the Caucasus mountains. Men were excluded from their state and they devoted themselves to war and hunting. Thus a woman of masculine habits. The name means deprived of breasts, and they supposedly cut off their breasts to use the bow more effectively. (2) One of a fabled tribe of female warriors said to have existed in South America with habits similar to those of the old world Amazons. (3) Dream significance: mysterious woman.

Amazon stone. Friendship.

AMBER (AMBRE) Sun emblem. In the language of gems: disdain. Dream significance: voyage. Because of its electrical properties a talisman capable of preserving or restoring strength and vitality, especially prevents goiter, lunacy (caused by the moon), skin troubles, and throat ailments. Protects the living from evil and speeds the dead on their journey. Worn by brides to insure happiness and long life, by children to protect them against convulsions, and by warriors for protection in battle. As a necklace it supposedly chokes the wearer who tells an untruth. Cognate ambrosia (fabled drink of immortality), ambrotos (Greek for immortal), ember, and umber. Source of Ambrose, Ames, etc. Resolves into am-ber, i.e. Sun Father. In Baltic countries held to prevent pain in joints and rheumatism. In China soul of the tiger, symbol of courage. In Christian tradition sign of the presence of God. In a Cornish megalith the central pillar representing the sun as Lord of Time. Eskimos and Tibetans wear it in the belief it will bring good fishing and hunting. In Greek legend sacred to Apollo and Helios. The crystalized tears of the Heliades, shed at the time of Phaethon's death. In Norse mythology formed when the gold tears of Freya fell into the sea as she searched for Svipdag. In Old Testament gem of the tribe of Benjamin. Prized by the Romans, who levied it as a tribute on the Britons. In Tibet an emblem of good fortune, good health, and success. In Turkey used as a mouthpiece for pipes passed from hand to hand in the belief it prevents the transmission of infection.

Amber axe. In ancient Scandinavia placed in tombs as a symbol of immortality. A prehistoric symbol of the cross, cognate with the Egyptian crux ansata.

AMBITION Personified in an Italian icon as a winged young woman with ivy branches. Although blindfolded she appears as if she would leap over a mountainous rock at the top of which are crowns and scepters. She is attended by a lion lifting his head.

AMBREE, MARY An English heroine who donned man's attire and participated at the siege of Ghent to avenge her lover's death. Because of her valor she has been immortalized, hence a woman of heroic spirit.

AMBRES Celtic sun father. Parallels Jupiter. Word cognate with aumbre (amber), embers, umber.

AMBROSE Masculine name from the Greek meaning ambrosial, divine, immortal.

AMBROSIA (1) December 30 birthday flower with the sentiment love returned, mutual love. (2) In Greek mythology the immortality-giving food of the gods, also represented as a drink; sometimes supposed to be used as an unguent. Hence any delicious drink or food; anything ministering to enjoyment or life. In Greek ambrotos means immortal and is a word cognate with amber. Parallels homa, soma.

AMBSACE The double ace, the lowest throw in dice, hence bad luck, misfortune.

AMBULANCE Dream significance: illness, injury, wound.

ÂME French for soul, from Hindu aum.

AMELES In Greek mythology river of unmindfulness, the Lethe.

AMELIA (AMELIE, AMELITA, EMILY, EMMELINE) Feminine

name from Old Teutonic, meaning busy, energetic, industrious.

AMEL-MARDUK A king of Babylon, notorious because of his dissipations. In the Bible called 'evil Merodach.'

AMELUS A monster congenitally destitute of one or more limbs.

AMEN (AMAN, AMMON, AMON, AMUN, HAMMON) (1) Anciently a name for Egypt, signifying fountain of life, compounded of Am (life) + en or ain (fountain). Aman resolves into Am (life) + an (land); probably related to Sanscrit Aum. (2) Originally a local deity at Thebes, perhaps at first of the air, then of the reproductive forces. Later he was united with the sun god Ra and called Amen-Ra, rising to the position of Supreme God of Egypt. As Amen-Ra he displaced Osiris for a short time as judge of the dead. Also worshiped as a god of war. One of a triad with Mut (mother goddess), his wife, and Khonsu (moon), his son. His first wife was Ament, shown either with the head of a cat, serpent, or sheep, all earth forms. His priests wielded greater power than the pharaohs. As a god of reproduction represented with a ram's head; as Amen-Ra portrayed as a bearded man of blue color with an animal's tail, wearing a sleeveless tunic and a cap surmounted by the solar disk between two large ostrich plumes. He holds the ankh (life force) in one hand and a scepter (supreme authority) in the other. Also depicted as the solar goose or with the head of an ape, frog, or lion. Identified as the hidden one, probably meaning hidden sun, or the one who hides his name. Parallels Jupiter, Zeus. (3) Used at the close of a prayer or in a solemn assent or to give ejaculatory emphasis to religious convictions. Signifies, 'so be it.' From the Hebrew, meaning certainly or to strengthen.

AMEN-HOTEP (AMENOPHIS)

First monotheistic Egyptian king. He changed his name to Akhenaten (Akhaton), which see.

AMEN-KHNUM (AMUN-KNEPH)

Egyptian deity worshiped in the Great Oasis (El Khargeh) in the form of a man with ram's horns or with a ram's head. Personification of the unknown darkness transcending all intellectual perception; primeval darkness; unmanifest divine wisdom. From his mouth the perfect and true Serpent, Ptah, lord of truth, emerged. Identified with Amen and with Khnum or Kneph.

AME-NO-IHA-KURA In Japanese mythology throne of god.

AME-NO-IHA-YA In Japanese mythology Heaven's Rock dwelling, the northern celestial center wherein the axis is fixed. The Pole Star.

AME-NO-IWATO In Japanese mythology Sky-Rock-Cave or Celestial-Rock-Door. Cave in which Amaterasu, sun goddess, hid, throwing the world into darkness.

AME-NO-KO-YA-NE-NO-MIKOTO In Japanese mythology Heavenly-Beckoning-Ancestor.

AME-NO-MIMAKA-NUSHI See Ama-No-Minaka-Nushi.

AME-NO-TOKO-TACHI-NO-KAMI Japanese primeval deity born without progenitor. The female principle. See Takama-no-hara.

AME-NO-UZUME-NO-MIKOTO

(UDZUME, UZUME) Japanese Sky-frightening-female, ancestress of clan chieftans. Supplicated for honors, longevity, posterity, and protection from evil. Ugly goddess of mirth and dancing. Originator of the Kagura, a laughter-producing obscene dance, which lured Amaterasu, the sun goddess, from the cave in which she was hiding. Popular name Otafuku, meaning big breasts.

AME-NO-WO-HA-BARI Japanese sacred sword with which Izanagi cut off the head of his son, the fire god, whose birth caused the death of Izanami. From the blood and body of the slain god sixteen deities sprang. Name signifying Heavenly-point-blade-extended. Also called Itsu-no-wo-ha-bari.

AME-NO-YASU-KAHA In Japanese mythology the Milky Way. Name meaning heavenly river of eight currents or broad river.

AMENT In Egyptian mythology consort of Amen. An earth mother portrayed with the head of a cat, a sheep, or a serpent.

AMENTI (AMENTET) In Egyptian mythology the hidden land in the west, where the sun sets and the dead come in contact with the gods and invoke the amulets with which they are connected. First-hour division of night, where those who repeat the magical passwords enter the bark of Amen-Ra and dwell in eternal light. Sometimes used as the name of Ament or of Anubis, conductor of souls to the tribunal of Osiris.

Amenti genii. Tutelaries or demons represented on the four canopic vases in Egyptian antiquity: (1) ape-head Taumatef; (2) dog-headed Hapi; (3) hawk-headed Kebhsnauf, (4) man-headed Amset. See Horus's four sons.

AMERETAT Zoroastrian Ameshaspenta or archangel, which in the moral sphere presides over immortality and in material nature presides over plants. Deity of vegetation.

AMERGIN In Irish legend a son of Miled. A druid who landed in Ireland with his father, he prophesied the conquest by Miled. Like the Cymric bard Taliesin, he was able to change his shape. See shape changing.

AMERICA Shown in art as a 17th century young warrior or as an Indian woman; also as a young woman gazing into the future. The Italian icon is an almost naked Indian woman, a veil folded over her shoulders, a crown of feathers on her head. In one hand she holds an arrow, in the other a bow. At her feet is a human head pierced by an arrow and a lizard.

American elm. Patriotism.
American linden. Matrimony.
American star-wort. Welcome to a stranger.

AMERICAS, THE Represented by an Indian or Anglo-Saxon woman; sometimes only by the bust or head. One of the four quarters of the world.

AMES English surname meaning sunlight.

AMESHA SPENTAS (AMESHO SPEND) Literally, immortal holy ones. Zoroastrian archangels acting as aids of Ahura Mazda. They have two aspects. In the moral sphere they embody the essential attainment of religious life; in their material nature they preside over the whole world as guardians. They compose the court of Ahura Mazda and through them he governs the world and brings men to sanctity. They parallel the Adityas and Kudai. See Spantar-amet.

AMESTRIS Favorite wife of the Persian king Xerxes. Her crimes and cruelties made her infamous. By some scholars believed to be the Vashti of the Book of Esther.

AMETHYST February birthstone. Symbolizes deep love, happiness, humility, sincerity, wealth.

Dream significance: freedom from harm. In heraldry the color on a nobleman's escutcheon. Valued as a bringer of courage, freedom from temptation, happiness, love, and peace of mind. Protects from theft. In medical superstitions worn to cure nervous diseases, to dispel dangers of contagious diseases, to prevent intoxication. It supposedly induces a meditative state and insures pleasant dreams. Rarely uniform in color it is associated with the color purple and the flower primrose and carries some of their symbolism. ♀ governs the zodiacal house Pisces (according to some, Aquarius), and its occult powers are believed to be intensified if worn by one born under its sign. Those born under its sign supposedly will attain fame in the arts and will consecrate their lives to the highest altruism. In Christian tradition gem of the episcopacy, symbolizing absolution, earthly suffering, exorcism, fidelity, holy unction. In Egyptian antiquity held to protect its wearer from harm in peace or in war, and a favorite talisman of warriors. Ancient Hebrews believed it endowed its possessor with excellent judgment.

AME-WAKA-HIKO In Japanese mythology Heavenly-young-prince.

Celestial messenger sent to report on conditions on earth. He fell in love with a mortal, Shita-teru-hime, and desiring to gain control of earth, he failed to make a report. A pheasant, sent from heaven to question him, he killed with the magic arrow given to him before he descended to earth. The arrow passed through the pheasant's body and landed in the skies, whereupon Taka-mi-musubi (High-august-growth) sent it back to earth and pierced the body of Ame-waka-hiko as he slept after the feast of first-fruits, suggesting he was a vegetation or dying god. See dying god. Haya-ji, the whirlwind, was sent to bring his body back to heaven. This myth is the origin of the proverb, "Beware of the returning arrow."

AMFORTAS In Parsifal keeper of the Holy Grail. Grandson of Titurel, from whom he receives the sacred charge. For his neglect he is wounded by the lance of Longinus (winter). Only a guileless fool who asks the cause of his pain will cure him. Parsifal (sun) asks the question and Amfortas is cured. A fertility legend, in which the sun renews verdure. Compare Fisher King.

AMICE (1) A mass vestment alluding to the cloth which covered the face of Christ when the soldiers mocked Him. (2) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning beloved.

AMIDA (AMITABHA) Japanese Buddha of Infinite Light and Life, whose western paradise is called Gokuraku-Jodo (Nirvana in Sanscrit). Highest of all Buddhas, and one of the five of the present kalpa. Savior who gives the opportunity for rebirth in Gokuraku-Jodo. A manifestation of Amaterasu. Also known as Kanro-o, Muryoju, Muryoka.

AMIDAH In Hebrew tradition the collection of nineteen benedictions recited morning, afternoon, and evening. Originally eighteen in number. Also called Shemoneh Esreh.

AMIEL Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning whose occupation is God.

AMILIAS In Norse mythology brother of Wieland Smith the celestial smith. He was cut through by a sword made by his brother, and the cut was so fine he was unaware that he was wounded until he attempted to move and then fell into two pieces.

AMINE (AMINA) In Arabian Nights a ghoulish hardhearted, she leads her three sisters like a leash of hounds. In Bellini's opera a somnambulist.

AMITABHA (AMITA) Buddha of the Mahayana School; present world Celestial Buddha; Buddha of Boundless Light. The Great Vehicle who vowed to create a pure land and to save all having faith in his vows. For Nirvana he substituted redemption by faith for annihilation. Probably a solar myth. A Dhyani Buddha (meditative Buddha). Same as Amitayus. In usual form he sits on a lotus, both hands in dhyana mudra, his head surrounded by a nimbus. His emblems are a ghanta (bell) and a patra (begging bowl), his mount is the maura (peacock), his sakti is Pandara. In wrathful manifestation he is Padmaheruka, the red Heruka-buddha. His Tibetan name is Hod-dpag-med or O-pa-me. He is the most popular Buddha in China, where he dwells in Hsi T'ien (Nirvana or Western Heaven), and is called Omīto-fu. In Japan he is called Amida.

AMITAYUS Buddha form of Dharmakara; Buddha of Infinite Life or Glory. Celestial Buddha, his paradise is Sukhavati. He carries kalasa (vase) filled with amṛta (water of life). Same as Amitabha. In Tibet called Tse-dpag-med or Tshe-pa-me.

AMLETH In Danish legend he feigned madness when Feng, his uncle, murdered his father Horwendil and married his mother Gerutha until he was able to avenge his father's death. Source of the Hamlet legend. Name signifies insane. See Amlode.

AMLODE Icelandic name of Hamlet, son of Egil. Guardian of the World Mill or mill of storms. See Amleth.

AMM Ancient Semitic word for uncle or ancestor; title of gods, especially the moon god. See Ab, Shahar.

AMMA (AMA) (1) In Greece and Syria a spiritual mother, an abbess. (2) In Norse mythology mortal woman who by Rig (Heimdall) bore Karl, who became the first of the karls (churls) or yeomen.

AMMA-ANA-KI In Babylonian mythology Ea as lord of heaven and earth.

AMMIT (AMMUT) In Egyptian mythology crocodile-hippopotamus-lion goddess, who devoured those dead whose hearts were heavy with misdeeds. An underworld monster stationed in the judgment hall of Osiris.

AMMON (1) In Egyptian mythology the same as Amen, which see. (2) In Old Testament epo-nymic ancestor of the Ammonites. A son of Lot, also called Ben-Ammi. The Ammonites were worshipers of Moloch, and destroyed an ancient race of giants called Zamzummim. They oppressed the Israelites, but finally were subdued.

AMNON A son of David. For violating his sister Tamar his brother Absalom caused him to be slain.

AMOGHAPASA The eight-armed Buddha who is concerned or skillful with the lasso, by which he captures non-believers. Lord of mercy, a manifestation of Avalokitesarva. His emblems are the pasa (noose) and visvavajra (double thunderbolt). In Tibet called Don-yod-shags-pa or Don-yo-sha-pa.

AMOGHASIDDHI Fifth Celestial Buddha; infallible power. A Dhyanibuddha (meditative Buddha). In usual form his asana is dhyana, his right hand mudra is abhaya and his left hand is dhyana; his vahana is a dwarf or garuda. His emblems are a ghanta (bell), khadga (sword), and a visvavajra (double thunderbolt). His sakti is Tara. In wrathful manifestation his is Kamaheruka, the green Herukabuddha. His Tibetan name is Don-yod-grub-pa or Don-yo-dup-pa.

AMON Same as Amen, which see.

AMOR Roman god of love. Cupid. In drama personifies epilogue. Word equating with Egyptian mer, meaning love.

AMORET In Spenser's Faerie Queene a woman who falls prey to sensual passion but is rescued.

AMORINI Small cupids or love gods.

AMORITES In Old Testament a war-like people in Canaan; Canaanites in general. From the Hebrew meaning dwellers on summits, hence mountaineers.

AMOS (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning burden-bearer, courageous, strong. (2) In Old Testament herdsman prophet who reproved and exhorted those who in prosperity were corrupt and unjust, hence one who pleads for social righteousness. Author of the book bearing his name. Portrayed as a shepherd with scroll, with sheep, and shepherd's crook.

AMPHIARAUS (AMPHIARAOS) In Greek mythology a seer and hero of Argos. As an infant his ears were cleansed by a serpent (wisdom) and he was able therefore to catch the utterances of birds. He took part in the Argonaut expedition and the Calydonian boar hunt, but refused to take part in the conflict against Thebes. His wife Eriphyle, bribed by Harmonia's necklace and veil, betrayed his hiding place, and he was forced to become one of the Seven Against Thebes. When in the fight he saw his position to be hopeless, he commanded his son Alcmaeon to avenge his death by killing Eriphyle, and prayed to Zeus, who caused the earth to open and swallow him and his chariot. Thus earth swallowed light. Amphiareion, his sanctuary and oracle, was built at the spot where the earth had opened to receive him.

AMPHICTYON In Greek mythology king of Attica and founder of the Amphictyonic League or League of Neighbors, a federation of twelve tribes. He was the grandson of Pasiphae, Cretan moon goddess, the son of Deucalion (sweet wine) and Pyrrha (red one), and was the first man to mix water and wine. Name meaning neighbor (amphi = around + ktizo = people).

AMPHIDROMIA Festival in which early Greeks carried an infant around a fire in order to dedicate him to the gods.

AMPHILOCHUS In Greek legend son of Amphiaraus, brother of Alcmaeon. One of the Epigoni, who were descendants of the Seven Against Thebes, and who finally captured the city. Like his father, a seer.

AMPHILOGEAI In Greek mythology a descendant of Eris

AMPHION AND ZETHUS In Greek mythology twin sons of Antiope, daughter of Nycteus. In one account Zeus was their father; in another it was Lycus, brother of Nycteus. Lycus had the twins left on Mount Cithaeron where they were raised by a shepherd. Amphion grew up to be a musician of such great skill, Apollo presented him with a lyre; Zethos became noted for his strength. When they discovered their identity they rescued their mother, condemned to death by Dirce, wife of Lycus. They then took possession of Thebes, which they fortified. With the melodious music of his lyre, Amphion charmed the stones so that they danced into the wall which formed the fortress. Personify winds.

AMPHITRITE In Greek mythology granddaughter of Oceanus, daughter of Nereus and Doris, wife of Poseidon. Queen of the moaning sea, she sends sea monsters and drives waves against the rocks. In art depicted as a Nereid of queenly mien and with moist flowing hair bound in a net. Her name means wearing away (shore) on all sides.

AMPHITRYON (AMPHITRUO) In Greek mythology hero who led an attack against the Taphians but was unable to overcome them as long as their chief, Pterelaus, who was rendered immortal by one golden hair, continued to live. Comaetho, daughter of Pterelaus, for love of Amphitryon, cut off the hair and her father perished. A myth resembling that of Samson. To win Alcmena, Amphitryon undertook to catch for his uncle Creon a ravaging fox (famine) which, by decree of fate, could not be captured. He was aided by a dog which, also by decree of fate, was to catch every animal it pursued. The conflict was resolved when both were turned to stone; thus each season lost the ability to function at the proper time. Zeus, disguised as Amphitryon, visited Alcmena, and she gave birth to Heracles at the same time she gave birth to Iphicles, Amphitryon's son. In later literature Amphitryon is treated as a cuckold. In a Moliere play, while visiting Alcmena, Zeus gives a feast which is interrupted by the returning Amphitryon, who claims the honor of being master in his own house. The guests and servants decide that he who gives the feast is host.

AMPHORA Two-handled vase; prize in Panathenaic games.

AMPULLA Christian vessel containing holy oil, symbolizing consecration.

AMPUTATION Dream significance: disappointments, injustice, wounds.

AMRTA (AMRATA, AMRITA)
Hindu beverage of immortality, bread of life. Variously represented as the cream of the ocean churned by the gods or as the fruit of a tree. Corresponds to ambrosia, nectar.

AMRTADHARA AND SAKTI
In Buddhism doorkeeper of the north of the Bardo Thodol Mandala.

AMSET In Egyptian mythology son of Horus. He appears on funeral urns with a human face as one of the four gods of the dead. He represents the North, and guards the stomach and large intestines. He assists Horus in rites of embalming.

AMSVARTNER In Norse mythology sea surrounding the island on which Fenrir wolf is chained. Name means black grief.

AMULET An object of art or nature believed to possess magical power of removing or warding off disease or evil influences and of bringing good luck. A form of prayer, used to maintain contact with gods. Must be kept about the person to be effective. Frequently amulets bear the figure of the thing against which they are expected to exert their virtue. Source of the signet used in sealing documents.

AMUND Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning awful protector.

AMURRU Lord of the mountains in Babylonian mythology.

AMY (AIMEE) Feminine name from Old French, meaning beloved.

AMYAS (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning love

God. (2) In Spenser's Faerie Queene captive lover of Aemilia; a squire of low degree.

AMYCLAE A town in ancient Greece. According to legend the inhabitants so often had been alarmed by false reports of the approach of hostile Spartans that a decree was passed forbidding the inhabitants to mention the subject. When the Spartans finally came no one dared announce the fact and the town was taken. 'Amyclaeen silence' thus became a proverb. The birthplace of Castor and Pollux, who sometimes are called the Amyclaeen brothers.

AMYCUS (AMYKOS) In Greek mythology giant king of the Bebryces. Famous as a pugilist, when the Argonauts stopped in his land, he challenged the bravest to a boxing match and was killed in the contest by Pollux. A drought demon.

AMYGDALUS Phrygian sacred almond tree. Womb of life. Gnostic symbol of All-Father. See almond.

AMYLION A man who sacrifices his children to save his friend, from the 13th century French romance Amys and Amylion.

AMYMONE In Greek mythology a river goddess. A descendant of Poseidon, daughter of Danaus. Arriving in Argos during a drought she was sent in search of water. A Satyr attacked her, but she was rescued by Poseidon, who then instructed her to draw his trident (a fertility symbol) from a rock. She did so, and a spring gushed forth.

AN (ANA) (1) Word root meaning one. Variant of Aun (sun) and On. (2) Sumerian god of the sky to whom Nammu, the sea, gave birth. By Ki, earth goddess, father of Enlil, air god.

ANA (ANU) (1) In Babylonia mythology spirit of heaven. (2) In Irish mythology goddess of abundance and prosperity, and name signifying plenty. Two mountains are named after her and called Paps of Anu. She also is called Anan and is identical with Danu. She has a malevolent side and as such is a member of a fate or war trinity composed of Badb and Macha or Morrigan. (3) In Sanscrit signifies mother. (4) Source of Anna.

ANACONDA A giant serpent that crushes its prey. In mythology connected with the sea. Its name resolves into anak (giant) + onda (waves).

ANACREON OF THE GUILLOTINE Bertrand Barere de Vieuzac, president of the French National Convention. He was so called from the flowery language and convivial jests with which he sent his victims to the guillotine, in allusion to the Greek lyric poet.

ANADYOMENE Aphrodite as the goddess who rises from the waters.

ANAHIT (ANA-HID, ANAHITA)

(1) In Armenian mythology daughter of Aramazd, sister of Mihr and Nane. One of the seven chief deities. As goddess of fecundity and guardian of childbirth she was the most popular of all and in importance second to Aramazd. She also watched over animals and the ill. She was characterized as the Glory, Golden Mother, Great Lady or Queen, One Born to Gold. The 19th of every month was consecrated to her, at which time a heifer was sacrificed. Prostitution was connected with her worship. Her emblem was a torch. Identical with Anahita of the Persians, the Ephesian Artemis, and Ishtar. Also known as Ardivisura Anahita. (2) In the Persian Avesta one of the venerable ones serving Ahura Mazda. Mother goddess, helper of women in childbirth, and provider of strong companions for men. Anciently a water genius whose lover was Apam Napat, and as a water goddess purifier of the seeds in the earth and in the animal kingdom. Also a war deity as defender of cities. Her name signifies without a blemish, and she was worshiped as a virgin. The Greeks called her Anaitis and identified her with Artemis, Athene, Aphrodite, and Cybele. She also resembles Astarte, Anat, Nana.

ANAHUAC Ancient name of Mexico, from the word huaca, meaning sacred or sacred mound. Incorporates hu (sun god) and ac (great).

ANAITIS (ANAIT, ANTA) Syrian war goddess, whose worship was introduced into Egypt in the 15th century B.C. She usually is portrayed with a battle ax, helmet, and shield. Identified by the Greeks with Athena; also parallels Anat. See Anahit.

ANAKES A term meaning one great light applied by ancient Greeks to the twins Castor and Pollux. Sometimes instead of two they were identified with the Cabiri and invoked as four, known as Axieros, Axiocersa, Axio-cersos, and Cadmilus (or Casmilus), and worshiped as the ever youthful conquerors of darkness, possessed of profound wisdom, and swift as thought.

ANAKHAI Among the Mongols spirit or soul of the dead, which haunts its old home; especially dangerous to infants.

ANAKIM (ANAQIM) In Old Testament a race or tribe of giants living in southern Palestine, whose progenitor was Anak. They excelled in crime and violence; thus when driven out by Caleb they became monuments of divine justice. Name means long-necked men. Also called Rephaim.

ANALA In Hinduism daughter of Surabhi. Mother of the coconut, date, nut, palm, and tali.

ANAMAQTIU Malignant spirit of the Menominee Indians. He dragged Moqwais, the wolf, under the sea and created the flood.

ANAMMELECH (ANAMELECH) Moon god of the Sepharvaim. Occultist demon of bad news. Sometimes confused with Adramelech, sun deity.

ANAMNESIS In Greek mythology river of remembering again. Cognate Mnemosyne.

ANANDA Cousin and favorite of the five disciples of Buddha. He is believed to have persuaded Buddha to accept women as nuns. Noted for his memory. His usual pose is earth touching.

ANANEAS (ANANIAS) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning grace of the Lord. (2) A liar in Christian legend. (3) A Christian of Damascus who restored the sight of Paul after his vision of Jesus. (4) Jewish high priest and friend of the Romans before whom Paul was tried. The apostle's denunciation of him was fulfilled; his house was burned and he was slain. (5) In Ben Johnson's The Alchemist a hypocritical Puritan deacon.

ANANGA Hindu god of love. Bodiless; so called because he was consumed by the fire of Siva's eye when he interrupted Siva's devotions with thoughts of Parvati.

ANANIZAPTA Mystic word meaning, "Have mercy on us, O Judge," anciently engraved inside rings as a talisman against disease, epilepsy, lunacy, and intoxication.

ANANKE In Greek mythology personification of the irresistible power of the immutable laws of nature. She is represented with a hammer and chain, the fetters of destiny she forges for man. Identified with Themis and with the Roman Necessitas.

ANANSI (ANNANCY) The spider figuring in folk stories of the Gold Coast and elsewhere in Africa. Clever and malignant, without redeeming traits.

ANANTA Hindu serpent which holds up the earth at Brahma's command and bears up slumbering gods. Cosmic serpent which floats on the cosmic ocean. Name meaning infinite and applied to Vishnu and others. Also called Sesa.

ANASTASIA (1) Feminine name from the Greek meaning lively, who restores life, of the resurrection. (2) A martyred saint.

ANASTASIUS Masculine form of Anastasia.

ANAT (ANATA, ANATH, HAN-ATA) A northern Semitic name of Allat as the morning and evening star and war goddess (defender of cities). Among western Semites the name of Astarte (Ishtar) as war goddess. Queen of heaven, mistress of the gods.

Her cult was introduced into Egypt. Portrayed with battle ax, helmet, and shield. Identical with Anaitis. Compares with Aphrodite and Athena, which probably is an inversion of Anath.

ANAT-BETHEL (ANAT-YAW) Early Hebrew male-female deity. Identical with Allat as morning and evening star. In the morning god of war; in the evening goddess of love and harlotry. See Androgynous deities.

ANATHA BAETYL Armenian lion-goddess. By a 5th century B. C. cult in Egypt identified with Ashima Baetyl, wife of Jehovah.

ANATHEMA A curse executed by God, a denunciation. From the Greek word meaning a thing devoted (to the gods) as the crutches of cured cripples or the wet clothes of a man saved from shipwreck; later understood to be an accursed thing, something devoted to evil.

ANATOLE Masculine name from the Greek, meaning sunrise, the East.

ANATOMICAL PARTS Anciently a belief prevailed that each internal anatomical part was governed by a zodiacal mansion, and a part was medically treated according to the position of the moon in its house. In China parts were governed by gods of the directions; the heart and intestines were sacred to the south, kidneys and bladder to the north, liver and gall to the east, lungs and small intestines to the west. Finno-Ugrians believed each limb and organ, each hair, tooth, etc., had its separate soul, and when a foe cut off one's hair he was cutting off some of one's soul. See arm, leg, etc.

ANATU Sumerian primeval deity, granddaughter of Apsu, primordial deep, and Tiamat, chaos, and daughter of Anshar and Kishar, who composed the entire cosmos. An earth deity, sister-wife of Anu. Also identified as the female counterpart of Anu, sky. In Babylonia called Anatum.

ANAXARETE In Greek legend a noble Cyprus woman who treated her lover Iphis with such haughtiness he hanged himself at her door. As punishment the gods turned her into stone.

ANAYE In Navaho Indian legend alien gods or man destroyers. Beasts, bogies, giants, monsters.

ANCAEUS In Greek mythology: (1) son of Lycurgus. One of the Argonauts, killed in the Calydonian boar hunt. (2) Son of Poseidon. He was told by a seer that he would not live to enjoy wine from a vineyard he had planted. He made wine from his grapes and, with a scornful remark to the prophet, raised the cup to his lips. The seer answered, "There is many a slip between the cup and the lip," and at that instant a tumult arose over a boar appearing in the courtyard. Ancaeus put down the cup and was killed in an attempt to destroy the animal. A fertility legend, the boar typifying frost or famine.

ANCESTOR WORSHIP Perhaps the most widespread of all religious forms, implying animistic belief and linked with totemism. Based on a belief in continuing souls and the effect they have on the world of the living. A newly born child may have the spirit of a departed ancestor, thus the naming of children for revered dead. A clan frequently claims descent from a common ancestor, and deifies the ancestor or makes him the totem animal.

ANCHIMALLEN Among the Arcaucanian, South American Indians, moon-woman, wife of the sun. She is implored in adversity and praised in prosperity.

ANCHISES In Roman legend husband of the love goddess Aphrodite (Venus), by whom he was the father of Aeneas. Recipient of filial devotion. A light deity. Noted for his beauty.

ANCHOR Hope, patience, safety, steadfastness, support, tranquility. Emblem of Cape Colony. A form of the cross. In Freemasonry hope, paradise, peace. In heraldry succor in extremity.

Anchor, serpent entwined.

Crescent moon (ark, boat, nave, vulva, yoni, or female principle) in which is placed the mast (linga, phallus, or male principle) around which the serpent (life) entwines itself. The cross-beam completes the mystic four, symbolic of both sun (or four quarters) and androgeneity. The whole is the union which results in fecundity.

ANCIENT OF DAYS (ANCIENT, ANCIENT ONE) A title of God. See Sephira.

ANCILE (ANCILIA) In Roman tradition sacred shield of Mars which fell from heaven in Numa's reign. With its safety the destiny of Rome was bound. To avoid its theft, eleven identical shields were placed beside it in the temple of Mars and entrusted to the care of priests called Salii.

ANCREE In heraldry to be furnished with anchor-like appendages; to be turned back like anchor flukes. Said of the ends of a cross. Symbolizes hope.

ANDA Feminine name from the Norse, meaning breath.

ANDALMA-MUUS Tatar man-eating sea monster created by the evil Erlik. He finally was slain by the virgin-born hero Tyurun-Muzykay, and from his carcass mosquitoes were born.

ANDARTA Celtic bear goddess.

ANDEVO In Madagascar, a slave as distinguished from the andriana (nobles) and hovas (middle class).

ANDHAKA Hindu demon with a thousand heads and two thousand hands and feet. Called Andhaka because he walked like a blind man although he had perfect vision. When he tried to carry off the tree of paradise from heaven he was slain by Siva. An aspect of famine.

ANDHRIMNER In Norse mythology cook in Valhall, producer of hoar-frost.

ANDRAS Occult demon of discord.

ANDREA (ANDRIETTA) Feminine name corresponding to Andrew.

ANDREA FERRARA A sword. So called from a famous 16th century sword maker. Also called Andrew or Ferrara.

ANDRET In medieval romance a dishonorable knight who spied upon Tristram and Ysolde and informed King Mark of their love for one another.

ANDREW (ANDRE, ANDREAS, ANDY) (1) Masculine name from the Greek meaning manly, strong. (2) In Christian tradition one of the apostles, a brother of Peter. Guardian of the zodiacal house Cancer. He suffered martyrdom on a cross formed like an X, hence Saint Andrew's Cross.

ANDRIANA In the social system of Madagascar the nobles as distinguished from the anevo (slaves) and the hovas (middle class).

ANDROCLUS (ANDROCLES) Roman slave of the 1st century A. D., spared in arena by a lion from whose foot he had extracted a thorn years before in Africa.

ANDROGEOS Greek light hero. Son of Minos slain by the Athenians. For this crime Minos demanded seven maidens and seven youths every nine years as tribute to be fed to the Minotaur.

ANDROGYNE Another name for the Fool in the tarot deck. All-Father and All-Mother; Bride and Bridegroom. Typifies extinction of the sense of separate personality.

ANDROGYNOUS DEITIES Primitive man saw the universe as a conjunction of man and woman; he worshiped androgynous symbols of life, the bearded Aphrodite, Baal-Peor, etc., as typifying the generative and productive powers of nature. In ceremonies priests assumed both parts by wearing women's clothing. Rites often included prostitution by men and women to magically induce fertility of crops and herds. The dual nature of Christ is given in the form of a mermaid. Symbolizes the beginning of all, procreation without aid of another, harmony, also inner or self-conflict.

Androgynous emblems. Anchor, arrow and target, beetle, cross, dot within a circle, fleur-de-lys, lotus, navel, palm tree, pillar or sacred tree at well, plow and furrow, scarabaeus, serpent and staff, spade and trench, spear and shield, sword and sheath, thumb between two fingers or grasped by a hand, tortoise, Y.

ANDROKTASIAI In Greek mythology descendants of Eris. Slaughterers.

ANDROMACHE In Greek legend daughter of the king of Thebae in Cilicia, wife of Hector. Noted as a model wife and as a woman of strong character and feeling. According to Euripides after the fall of Troy, she became the wife and widow of Achilles' son Neoptolemus. According to Virgil she was married to Helenus, Hector's brother.

ANDROMEDA In Greek mythology daughter of Cepheus and Cassiopeia, king and queen of Ethiopia. Cassiopeia boasted her daughter's beauty was greater than that of the Nereids and, to punish her for this sacrilege, Poseidon sent a sea monster (innundation). To appease the monster Andromeda (mother earth or dawn) was chained to a rock and offered as a sacrifice. Perseus (sun) slew the dragon, released Andromeda from the rock, and claimed her as his bride. After her death Andromeda was placed in the heavens as the constellation Chained Lady. Analogous to Ariadne, Hesione, Medea, and other brides of sun heroes.

ANDRONICUS Masculine name from the Greek, meaning conqueror of men.

ANDROSPHINX The body of a lion with human head and hands; symbolizes the union of intellectual and physical powers.

ANDURUNA In Babylonian mythology a name of the underworld.

ANDVARI (ANDVARE) In Norse mythology the fish-shaped dwarf who owned a great treasure, the horde of the Niebelungs, of which he was robbed by Loki. The miraculous pike, whose most precious possession was the golden ring Andvarinaut from which other golden rings constantly dropped. Andvari placed a curse on this treasure to bring ill fortune on anyone who became its possessor. A common motif in folklore; it typifies the cycle of the seasons, the period of growth and the period of non-growth. Identical with Alberich.

Andvari Force (Foss). Cascade in which the dwarf Andvari dwelt in the shape of a pike.

Andvarinaut (Andvarenaut). In Norse mythology the ring or seal of betrothal given by Sigurd to Brynhild. He later takes it from her and gives it to his wife Gudrun. A seasonal myth in which Sigurd, the sun, gives the Andvarinaut, fertility, to Brynhild, summer maid; then takes it from her to give to a later love, Gudrun.

ANGAJA In Buddhism the first Arhat. Name meaning limb born. He usually holds a fan and incense burner. In Tibet called Yang-le-jang or Yan-lag-byan.

ANGAKOK Eskimo medicine man who derives from the bear his power to heal wounds and restore life. He has entree to the other world and transforms himself at will.

ANGANTYR In Norse mythology

owner of the sword Tyrting. Father of Hervor, who rode through fire around Angantyr's burial mound to obtain the sword (light rays), even though her father had warned her it would bring destruction with it (darkness or winter).

ANGEBURGA In German legend a swan maiden loved by Wieland (Voland).

ANGEL One of an order of spiritual beings forming a connection between the seen and unseen worlds, promoting the welfare of the human race, and concerned in man's salvation. Hence a carrier of divine grace and disperser of evil. Dream significance: happiness, protection. In heraldry: dignity, high position. In the occult: a thought of God passing to man. The name of an old English coin bearing the image of Saint Michael fighting the dragon. Word from the Greek and Hebrew, meaning messenger. May have originated in Assyria, Babylonia, or in Mazdaism. See anunaki. Compares with Sanscrit apsara. In Hebrew-Christian tradition three hierarchies, each including three orders which usually are given as follows: 1st hierarchy - Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones; 2nd - Dominations, Virtues, Powers; 3rd - Principalities, Archangels, Angels. In the Book of Enoch given the nature of fire. Job identifies them as stars. In the Cabala seven are mentioned, each corresponding to one of the five planets, the sun, and the moon. In Mohammedanism angels are created from pure gems (genii created from fire, man formed of clay); they are sexless and require no food. Adoring companions and servants of Allah, they approach his throne and act as his messengers, on occasions interceding for men.

Angel's bread. Sacred knowledge.

Fallen angel. A devil. A deity superseded by another; a personified season replaced by another. In Old Testament one of a group of angels who lusted after beautiful daughters of men and bred a race of cannibalistic giants called Enim. They taught men astrology and augury; women charms, conjuring and ornamentation. One who joined Satan in his rebellion against God.

ANGELICA (ANGELA, ANGELINA, ANGELIQUE, ANGIE) (1) Feminine name from the Greek through the Latin, meaning angelic. (2) July 11 birthday flower with the sentiment ecstasy, inspiration, magic.

ANGELUS In Roman Catholic tradition the bell tolled to indicate when the angelus is to be recited. The prayer. Dream significance: great joy.

ANGER Dream significance: reconciliation. In an Italian icon personified by a round shouldered youth with sparkling eyes, a round brow, a sharp nose, and wide nostrils. He is armed; his crest is a boar's head from which issues fire and smoke. He holds a drawn sword and lighted torch.

ANGERBODA (ANGRBODHA, AURBODA) In Norse mythology giantess of Utgard. East wind hag, enemy of the gods of Asgard. In Iarnvid (Ironwood) she reared her monster progeny by Loki, the Fenrir wolf, Hel, Jormungandr, and Midgard serpent, to bring destruction to the gods. In the guise of one fair and young, she called herself Ljod, deceived Freyja, and became her maid-servant. Her name means anguish-brooding. Also known as Gulweig-Hoder. Parallels the Babylonian Tiamat.

ANGERONA Ancient Italian goddess, probably of suppressed anguish or silence or of the winter solstice. Her statue stood in the temple of Volupta with her finger at her closed lips.

ANGERVADIL (ANGURVADEL) Literally, stream of anguish. In Norse mythology Frithiof's sword. It was inscribed with runic letters which blazed in time of war and gleamed with a dim light in time of peace.

ANGEYJA In Norse mythology Vana-mother of Heimdal. With Eyrgjafa she mixed mould in the World Mill. A personification of the waves.

ANGIDA In Chinese Buddhism one of the eighteen lohan. Also called Yin-Chieh-t'o, which see.

ANGIRASES Hindu family of fire priests which supposedly sprang directly from Agni. Messengers of Agni; his flame.

ANGLE, RIGHT In Freemasonry signifies the builder's square. Among Pythagoreans signifies justice and morality. When bisected represents the female principle.

ANGOI Borneo god who provided mankind with breath and mortality. Another deity, wishing to make man immortal, cut Angoi up, and from the pieces, serpents, tigers, and other noxious animals grew.

ANGORA CAT Expensiveness, luxury. One who is pampered or spoiled.

ANGRA MAINYU (ANGRO MAINYUS) In Mazdaism personification of darkness. Spirit of evil and ignorance. Serpent creator of the serpent Azhi Dahaka. Also creator of bark and thorns on plants and poisons in them. Fire was all light until he marred it with smoke. Maker of the planets, which are evil inasmuch as they do not follow the regular course of the stars. At the behest of Jahi, a female demon, he burdened Gaya Maretan, the first man, with disease, hunger, need, and suffering. He formed dwarfs, humpbacks, lepers, and maimed. With the aid of other demons he brought winter to Airyano Vaejo. He is the opponent of Ahura-Mazda, spirit of light. At the end of the world he will be destroyed. Compare Ragnarok. Identical with Ahri-man.

ANGUS (AENGUS, OENGUS)

(1) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning excellence, virtue.
(2) In Celtic mythology a Tuatha De Danann, natural son of Dagda by Boann. Deity of caresses, fertility, and spring. His harp was gold; anyone who heard him play was lured into following its sweet music. His kisses became birds; although they remained invisible they whispered thoughts of love to young people. He was beautiful and ever-young, sleeping through the winter, awaking each spring. He and his wife Caer were able to transform themselves into swans. He was the abductor of his brother Mithr's wife Etain. His abode was a fairy palace along the banks of the Boyne. The pig was sacred to him. He also was called Mac Og. As musician his myth parallels that of Amphion and Orepheus and is a motif which has echoes in the Pied Piper of Hamelin. As a dying god he resembles Adonis, Attis, Tammuz.

ANGUTA Literally, man with something to cut. In Eskimo lore father of Sedna (Nerrivik). He cut off her fingers when she was fleeing from the petrel, which accounts for his name.

ANHORET (ANHER, ANHERT, ANHUR, ONOURIS) Egyptian sun god. Also a warrior god and a guide of the dead. He is depicted in human form with a scepter or spear. His mummy is said to be at Thinis in Upper Egypt. Later identified with Shu.

ANICET Masculine name from the Greek, meaning unconquered.

ANIMAL Frequently in mythology an animal acts as a sky or world support, or leads men from an underworld abode to become the first inhabitants of the surface of the earth. See chariot, also individual animals. In various religions four great beasts guard the four directions. See four. In China each of the twelve months and corresponding twelve double-hours of the day has an animal to rule it. The double-hours star with 11 P.M. to 1 A.M. and end with 9 P.M. to 11 P.M.; the months start with the zodiac house of Aries. The animals are respectively: rat, ox, tiger, hare, dragon, serpent, horse, goat, monkey, cock, dog, boar. In Europe the animals or articles which support the sun through each of the twelve terrestrial branches are believed to be: ram, bull, lovers, crab, lion, virgin, scales, scorpion, centaur, goat, waterman, fish (ship). In ancient Greece the conductors of the sun were: cat, dog, snake, crab, ass, lion, goat, ox, hawk, monkey, ibis, crocodile. Among the Mongols the carriers through the double hours and the months are: mouse, cow, tiger, hare, dragon, snake, horse, sheep, monkey, cock, dog, sow; among the Soyots: dragon, tiger, cow, sow, monkey, mouse, dog, frog, snake, cock, horse, hare. The Moslems raised ten animals to heaven: Abraham's ram, Balaam's ass, Balkis' lapwing, Jonah's whale, Mohammed's steed Al Borak, Moses' ox, Noah's dove, Saleh's camel, the Seven Sleeper's dog Katmir, Solomon's ant. The primeval animals in the Old Testament, behemoth, the giant ox; leviathan, the giant fish; and ziz, giant bird; correspond to three Persian monsters, hadhayosh, khar, caena-maergha respectively. In Tibet animals living under water symbolize bondage; those out of it symbolize free beings. In Tlingit Indian tradition the wicked are all reborn in animal form, whereas according to the Mohaves all the dead are reincarnated in a series of animal forms until they finally disappear.

Animal advice. A theme popular in folklore is that of a hero or heroine who suffers misfortune and fails to follow the advice of a friendly animal. Those who forget the advice or wilfully disregard it offend the animal and lose everything.

Animal entrails. Used by primitive peoples for purposes of divination.

Animal herd. Dream significance: prosperity.

Animal nurse. In abandoned children myths the child invariably is nourished by an animal. See abandoned children.

Animal paramour. See beauty and the beast.

Animal sacrifice. Deity offering; originally offered as a substitute for human sacrifice to appease a god, to implore fertility, or as a rebirth oblation. Examples of animals sacrificed are: To Apollo, the crow, griffon, wolf; to Asclepius, cock, serpent; to Bacchus, dragon, panther; to Diana, stag; to Isis, heifer; to Juno, lamb, peacock; to Jupiter, eagle; to Lares, dog; to Mars, horse, vulture; to Mercury, cock; to Minerva, owl; to Neptune, bull; to Tethys, the halcyon; to Venus, dove, sparrow, swan; to Vulcan, lion.

Grateful animal. A universal motif in mythology is the animal, a supernatural being in disguise, who has been saved or sheltered by someone and returns the compliment when the person is in danger.

Horned animal. Sun emblem, the horns representing rays. Symbolic of power.

Three-horned animal. Trinity or divine strength.

ANIMIKI In Ojibway mythology thunder, creator of the west wind.

ANIMISM Belief in the existence of a soul as distinct from matter. Belief in the existence of spiritual beings, angels, deities, demons, etc., and of a spiritual world.

ANIR In Brythonic legend son of King Arthur. His grave is supposedly in the neighborhood of Wye, and its length changes every time it is measured.

ANIRUDDHA In Hindu mythology grandson of Krishna, son of Pradyumna and Mayadevi. Egotism. He fell under the influence of Bana by the magic of Usha and was liberated by Krishna.

ANUS High priest of Delos. Name connected with An, Anu.

ANJEA Queensland deity who fashions babies from mud and places them in a mother's womb. Compare cho-i.

ANKH (1) Egyptian emblem of generation, symbol of life. Its origin has been identified variously as the Egyptian loin-cloth, mirror in which deities contemplated their own images, the phallus, the winged globe. Probably originally simply a crossed pole to measure the degree of rise in Nile waters during the flood period, it developed into a tau cross with a loop on top. In a later period interpreted as Typhon (Set) chained, and as such suspended from the neck of the sick as an amulet for renewing vitality. Attached to wrappings of mummies as it supposedly bridled the powers of the enemy and assured immortality. Also called crux ansata. (2) Literally, he who lives. A name of Tum, personification of the setting sun. Worshiped at Piton in ancient Egypt.

Ankh Neteru. Serpent through whose gigantic body Ra's boatload of souls was safely drawn by twelve gods, the final barrier in the journey through the underworld from which Ra emerged as Khepera.

ANKLE BONE By occultists used for purposes of divination. Probably related to the motif of the sacred heel. See hobbling.

ANKLET In Buddhism Bodhisattva and Dharmapala ornament; sometimes in the form of a snake.

ANKOU In Brittany folklore the last person to have died in a parish and who becomes the driver of the spectral cart which stops at the house at which death is to occur.

ANKUSA (ANKAUSA) Sanscrit for elephant goad. Buddhist tantric manifestation.

ANNA (AMA, ANA, ANITA, ANN, ANNE, ANNETTE, ANNIE, HANNAH, NAN, NANANNE, NANCY, NANETTE, NANNY, NINA) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning grace. Also derived from An (Sun), and from Ana, Chaldean for heaven, Sanscrit for mother, and from Anu, Assyrian for All-Father. Used to signify mother or queen, and related to Anath, Ariadne, Arianrhod, Athena, Urania. (2) In Christian tradition: (a) wife of Joachim, mother of Mary; thus mother of a daughter conceived by divine intervention. (b) Prophetess known for her piety. (3) In Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Britonum daughter of Uther Pendragon and Igera, wife of Gorlois, sister of Arthur. A later form of Arianrhod. (4) In Roman mythology sister of Dido, queen of Carthage. She fled to Italy after Dido's suicide. (5) Mother Anna (Ann Lee 1736-1784), founder and spiritual mother of the Shakers.

Anna Livia Plurabelle. Heroine of James Joyce's Finnegans Wake. On a local level the personification of the River Liffey which flows through Dublin; on a broader scale the female principle in nature, the Great Mother.

Anna Matilda. A name associated with nämby-pämby verse and ultra-sentimental fiction, from the pseudonym of Mrs. Hannah Cowley.

Anna Perenna. Roman goddess of springtime, whose festival was celebrated on the ides of March. Giver of plenty. By Virgil confused with Anna, sister of Dido. In one version an old woman to whom Mars confided his love for Nerio. Disguising herself as the maiden she went through the ceremony of marriage with Mars. In this character a representative of the old year and female counterpart of Mamrius Veturius. Her name is related to that of Apnapurna, Hindu goddess. Also identified with Io, Minerva, Themis.

ANNABELLA (ANNABEL, HANNIBAL) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning graceful, beautiful. Literally, grace of Baal (Bal, Bel).

ANNAR (ANAR, ONARR) In Norse mythology second husband of Nacht (night). Father of Jord (earth). Name signifying water; paralleling Amor.

ANNAS Masculine name from the feminine Anna.

ANNEMOR Anna-mother, Anna-darling. A title of Cinderella.

ANNE, SISTER In the Bluebeard story Fatima's sister. She watches for the arrival of her brothers to save Fatima's life; hence any anxious watcher. See Bluebeard.

ANNIS In Brythonic lore the blue hag who assumes the form of an owl and sucks the blood of children. Owl counterpart of Athena, Blodeuwedd, Lilith.

ANNO LUCIS In Freemasonry the era when light was created by the Supreme Being.

ANNULET In Heraldry a ring used to designate the fifth son of a family, hence indicator of rank. Also fidelity.

ANNUNCIATION Christian feast celebrated March 25. Day on which Archangel Gabriel announced to Virgin Mary that she was to be the mother of the Messiah. Also called Lady Day.

ANNWFN (ANNWN) Literally, bottomless place or not world. Brythonic otherworld; paradise in elfydd (beneath the world). Located in the north it was a place of continual brightness and feasting, of everlasting pleasure, where neither disease nor death existed, although sometimes the gods warred here (signifying the conflict of growth and decay). Its folk were skilled in magic, it had wondrous animals, a well of miraculous water, and a caldron, which produced an inexhaustible supply of food and was gifted with a power which caused it to refuse to boil the food of a coward. It was open to favored human beings who thus were made immortal. In its realms deities sometimes married mortals. Also called Land-across-the-sea, Land-under-the-waves, Revolving Castle (Caer Sidi). Parallels Avalon, Elysium, Isle of the Blest, Isle of Joy, Paradise, Tir na m Ban.

ANOBRET In Phoenician mythology son of El. Sacrificed when dangers beset the land. Compares Attis, Tammuz. See dying god.

ANOINTING Anciently a mark of respect to guests and of rejoicing. The oil was thought to be a miraculous cure and a preservative against corruption, hence the anointing of the dead, high priests, and kings. To omit anointing was a sign of mourning.

ANPU Literally, one father. In Egyptian mythology alternate name for Anubis. Brother of Bata, which see. Generic term for jackal.

ANQET Name of Isis as the Egyptian goddess of fertile waters.

ANRTA (ANRITA) In Hinduism disorder as opposed to Rita (order).

ANSA (AMSA) In Hinduism the apportioner, the bountiful. Aspect of the sun. An Aditya.

ANSAR One of the people of Medina who aided Mohammed in his flight from Mecca; thus an auxiliary, helper.

ANSATE CROSS (CRUX ANSATA) The ankh, which see.

ANSELM (ANSE, ANSEL) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning divine helmet, helmeted companion, protection of god.

ANSHAR (ASSORORS, SHAR) Babylonian chief god, father of all gods. With Kishar, his spouse, the second pair born to the chaos deities Apsu and Tiamat, or their grandchildren. Parents of Anu and Anatu, Ea, and Enlil, and grandparents of Marduk. With Kishar he represented the entire cosmos. He stood for the male creative energy that is above, the night sky and Polaris, where he danced as a goat or satyr (probable source of Greek satyrs), surrounded by his six assistants, the other stars of the Dipper. In creation myth he commanded Ea and Anu to war against Tiamat, who wished to destroy all the gods. When they refused Marduk was sent to slay her and regained for Anshar much of his lost power.

ANT Community spirit, diligence, economy, fierce warrior, forethought, frugality, industry, intelligence, knowledge, labor, orderliness, prevision, prudence, smallness which survives because it is astute, society, thrift, tiny murderer, wisdom. Dream significance: activity, health. In China signifies righteousness. In Greek mythology the Myrmidon race, family of Achilles, was created by Zeus from ants. In Hebrew the word for ant, nmle, is formed from the verb nml, meaning to circumscribe, i.e. cut off the ear to get the grain out. Because it taught Solomon humility and modesty, it is one of the ten animals in the Moslem heaven. See animal.

Ant hill. Finno-Ugric offerings to the forest spirits called Maahiset are made at ant hills.

Ant lion. Ethiopian symbol of avarice, savagery. It is supposedly the shape and size of a dog, digs for gold, and devours those who attempt to rob it. Resembles the fertility myth of the gold of Andvari (see). Also called Ethiopian ant.

White ant. Destruction. In Buddhism typifies meekness and moral restraint through fear of worldly contamination because, when it goes in search of food, it covers itself with a leaf.

ANTAEA (ANTEIA) In Greek mythology daughter of Iobates, wife of Proetus. False accuser of Bellerophon. Personification of the light flushing the sky as the sun sinks; hence that which destroys or attempts to destroy the sun. Compare Phaedra, Potiphar's wife.

ANTAEUS In Greek mythology giant son of Gaea (earth) and Poseidon (sea). A Libyan wrestler, invincible as long as he touched his mother, he compelled strangers to his country to wrestle with him, and built a temple to Poseidon of their skulls. Heracles (sun), who discovered the source of his strength, lifted him into the air and strangled him. Typifies darkness.

ANTAKA In Hinduism the ender, demon of death.

ANTARES Giant star of first magnitude in Scorpio, the Scor-pion's heart. One of the four royal stars. Ancients divided the heavens into four parts, each guarded by one of the four stars. Name from the Greek meaning opposed to Ares.

ANTELOPE Swiftmess. Emblem of Nebraska. In the Congo antelope horns and skins are used as amulets. In Hinduism associated with Chandra, the moon; also a steed of Vayu, wind deity. Among some in Southern United States a belief prevails that spirits hide in antelope horns.

ANTENOR In Greek legend a Trojan who, according to Homer, was the wisest of the elders and advised the Trojans to surrender Helen. His friendliness to the Greeks caused the Trojans to look upon him as a traitor. Dante named the second concentric ring of the ninth circle in the Inferno, which contained those who betrayed their country, Antenora.

ANTE-PURGATORY Slope of mountain with a precipitous face where Dante placed those who died excommunicated though repenting at death. Rulers who neglected their duty and delayed repentance also were placed there, where all were doomed to a long period of wandering. Located in the 'southern hemisphere,' it received the sun from the opposite direction, and its spirits cast no shadows.

ANTEROS In Greek mythology son of Ares and Aphrodite. In some accounts Hephaestus is mentioned as the father. Twin and opponent of Eros. Personification of unhappy and unrequited love, avenger of unrequited love.

ANTERO WIPUNEN Finnish giant whose wisdom Wainamoi-en sought. Wainamoi-en entered Antero's body and worked magic until the giant gave up three lost words of magic.

ANTHAT (ANTA) Ancient mother goddess of Asia Minor.
Sometimes depicted as a goddess of battle. Associated with the horse.

ANTHEA Feminine name from the Greek meaning, flowery.

ANTHESTERIA Ancient Greek three-day spring festival. The first day, Pithoegia (jar opening), was celebrated with the tasting of new wine matured from the previous vintage. The second day, Choes (pitcher feast), celebrated the marriage of the chief archon's wife to the god Baachus with much merry making. The third day, Chytroi (feast of pots) was solemnly observed as a season of mourning to honor departed souls or expel or placate ghosts to promote fertility. A festival incorporating the birth-growth-death theme.

ANTHONY (ANTONIO, ANTONY, TONY) Masculine name from Roman family name Antonius, meaning worthy of praise.

ANTICHRIST Enemy or opponent of Christ; a false Christ, specifically an enthroned antagonist foretold in Scriptures, the Man of Sin who is to precede the second coming of Christ. He will destroy the world, but will be destroyed by Christ. In historical times he has been designated as Caligula, Nero, Napoleon, William II of Germany, Hitler; thus those who disturb the peace of the world. Saint Paul applied the term to the Roman Empire. Mahomet also has been so designated. The Moslems have a legend that Christ will slay the Antichrist at the gate of the church of Lydda in Palestine.

ANTICLEIA (ANTIKLEIA) In Greek mythology daughter of Autolycus, wife of Laertes, mother of Odysseus, mistress of Sisyphus. She probably was a personification of the light which flushes the sky when the sun sinks to rest. As she tried to return to earth with Odysseus, when he visited the underworld, some identify her as an aspect of dawn.

ANTIGONE In Greek mythology daughter of Oedipus by Jocasta. Famous as a faithful and self-sacrificing daughter and devoted sister. She accompanied her father on his self-imposed exile. When Creon forbade her to bury her brother Polynices, who had been killed in the siege of the Seven Against Thebes, she disregarded the order and performed the funeral rites. For this she was condemned to be immured alive. When her lover Haemon found her dead he hung himself. Thus we have the dawn, Jocasta, married to her son, the sun, Oedipus; their daughter is Antigone, the beautiful light in late afternoon, which accompanies the sun to his death. Some identify Antigone as the dawn. She typifies a child of an incestuous marriage, with the sorrow brought about by such a union. See Creon, Haemon, Oedipus.

ANTIGONUS A Macedonian general under Alexander the Great who became king of Asia. Two kings of Judea had the name; one was slain as a result of court intrigue, the other put to death by the Romans. In Shakespeare's Winter's Tale a Sicilian lord who was commanded by King Leontes to take his infant daughter to a desert and leave her to perish.

ANTILIA A mythical island west of Atlantis; a blessed realm. Columbus applied the name in plural form to the archipelago in the Caribbean Sea.

ANTILOCHUS (ANTILOCHOS) In Greek legend son of Nestor, friend of Achilles. When Memnon killed him, Achilles avenged his death. The three friends Achilles, Antilochus, and Patroclus were buried in the same mound and in the underworld they walk together.

ANTINOUS (1) In Greek legend the most arrogant and shameless of Penelope's suitors, thus a shamelessly ambitious but hopeless suitor. (2) Page and favorite of Emperor Hadrian. A model of manly beauty, he drowned himself in the Nile and was carried aloft by an eagle and placed in the skies as the constellation Aquila.

ANTIOCH A city in the ancient world. At one time a place of great wealth and refinement, it ranked as the third city in the Roman Empire. Later celebrated for luxury and vice. Here disciples of Jesus were first called Christians.

ANTIOCHUS Name of a Syrian dynasty composed of thirteen kings, who engaged in intrigue, and waged constant war. Thus a family which lived by violence.

ANTIOPE In Greek mythology daughter of Nycteus, king of Thebes. She was loved by Zeus, who appeared to her in the form of a satyr. To escape the wrath of her father she fled to Sicyon, where King Epopeus, enraptured by her beauty, married her, whereupon Nycteus warred against him. At his death Nycteus instructed his brother Lycus to take command of the war. Lycus killed Epopeus, made Antiope his prisoner, and exposed her twin sons Amphion and Zethus, who were rescued by a shepherd. As Antiope was about to be dragged to her death by a bull, she was rescued by her sons, who had discovered their true identity. In some versions Lycus was the father of the twins. Antiope, personification of the dawn, was the daughter of night (Nycteus) and the mistress of light (Lycus or Zeus). Also a name sometimes given to Hippolyta, the Amazon wife of Theseus.

ANTIPATER Gnostic term for God.

ANTIPHATES In Greek mythology king of the Laestrygonians, a race of fierce giant cannibals (storm demons).

ANTLERS Intelligence, rays of the sun. Also cuckoldry. In heraldry armed strength, fortitude. The antlered or horned king appears frequently in mythology; his fate is death, the antlers signifying the sun's rays, which must die daily. In the legend of Artemis, Actaeon is metamorphosed into a stag because of the intelligence he receives in watching Artemis (moon) bathe, and he (sun) is hunted to death by her dogs. The betrayed stagking continues to appear in mummer parades. Perhaps his being pursued has led to the cuckold interpretation. See horn.

ANTLIA The constellation Air Pump; the suck proboscis of an insect.

ANTOINETTE (ANTONIA, NETTIE, NETTY, TONY) Feminine form of Anthony.

ANTONY, MARC (MARCUS ANTONIUS) Roman general whose downfall was due to his love for Cleopatra, hence one who sacrifices position for love.

ANU (AN, ANA, ANOS, DANA, DANU, NANU) (1) In Assyrian, Babylonia, Sumerian, etc. mythology, descendant of Apsu, primordial deep, and Tiamat, chaos; son of Anshar, night sky, and Kishar, earth. Anu, whose name signifies high one, was worshiped as All-Father, day sky; his mate Anatu was his female counterpart or an earth goddess. He was chief of a triad variously given as Anu (sky), Enlil (sea), and Ea (storms or war), or as Anu, Ea (sea), and Bel (war). His messengers were beneficent angels; however, he once was identical with Ea and had seven stormy or demon messengers, and at creation spawned demons of cold, darkness, and rain. When identified with Ea, god of the waters above heaven. He was male creative principle and keeper in high heaven of the plant of birth. He created star spirits, governed the gods, ruled destiny, and was the ancestor of kings. El and Zeus have absorbed many of his characteristics. (2) In Irish mythology the most ancient of the Tuatha De Danann, although sometimes said to be the daughter of Dagda or of Delbaeth. Wife of Bile. Universal mother, her offspring were life, light and wisdom. She had the attributes of a wind goddess; also those of earth and its fruitfulness. Two mountains near Killarney were called Paps of Anu, and still are called The Paps. She is called the ancestress of the Feini, first Irish settlers. As a personification of Ireland she is known as Iath n'Anann and identified with Eire. She also is identified with Brigit, and thus mother of Brian, Iuchair, and Iucharbar, who sometimes are called the three sons of Danu (Anu). She is said to be identical with the Black Annis of Leicestershire, who required human sacrifice. She parallels the Roman Anna Perenna.

ANUBIS In early pyramid age of Egyptian mythology god of the underworld. Later replaced by Osiris, and with his brother Apuat he became a son and attendant of Osiris. Pathfinder, he was 'Opener of the Ways,' who nightly preceded Ra into Duat (underworld). With Thoth he shared the office of conductor of the dead to the judgement hall in Amenti, where for Osiris he weighed the hearts of the dead against the feather of truth. He was worshiped as guardian of tombs and patron of embalmers. In one account he swallowed the body of Osiris, his father; in another he embalmed it until it was resuscitated by Isis. In some versions his mother is given as Isis, in others as Nephthys. He is portrayed with a dog or jackal head on a human body. By the Greeks identified with Hermes, by the Romans with Mercury.

ANUKT (ANUKIT, ANUQET) Egyptian negroid goddess wearing a crown of feathers. Wife of Khnemu, great mother of the Elephantine triad. Probably originally Libyan.

ANUMATI Hind abstract goddess. With Raka presides over the full moon.

ANUNAKI (ANUNNAKI, ENNUKI) (1) In Babylonian mythology three-hundred earth demons or genii, servitors of the gods. Star gods who sank below the horizon and became earth (or underworld) deities and judged the newly dead. With Igigi, heavenly spirits, they constitute the hosts of heaven and earth, subordinate to Anu and other higher gods. Probable source of the conception of angels. (2) In Sumerian mythology the Anunnaki were dreaded judges of the underworld; source of the Babylonian Anunaki.

ANUNIT Babylonian war goddess. An aspect of Ishtar.

ANUSH In Armenian mythology the first queen of Azdahak, mother of dragons.

ANVIL (1) The primal furnace on which the celestial artisan or heavenly smith hammered out the universe. A sword (lightning) provider. Attribute of Hephaestus, Ptah, Vulcan, Wieland Smith. (2) Wisdom. In metaphor the brain is likened to an anvil or forge; thought, to the hammer. (3) Implement of martyrdom. (4) Dream significance: fruitful perseverance. (5) From the Greek anafalz, which resolves into an-a-fal-z, i.e. the one A or one great fire.

Anvil with cross or sword sticking from it. Forge of the universe, primal furnace, male and female principles. The same symbolism holds for an anvil and hammer.

ANY-ANY-ANY-AH Same as Queenah, which see.

A-O (1) Alpha-Omega; beginning and end. Deity symbol. In Christianity the nature of God. (2) AO is Polynesian for sunrise; basis of aloha meaning benevolence, friendship, gratitude, love. Cognate with Heigho, Iao, Tao. See Aos, Hoa.

AOBH Same as Aebh, which see.

AOIFE In Irish mythology: (1) rival of the Amazon queen Scathach, who had the hero Cuchulainn in her service. As one of his labors while in Scathach's service Cuchulainn by trickery conquered Aoife. After her submission to Cuchulainn, Aoife bore him a son called Conlaoch. Jealous when her lover married Emer, Aoife sent her son to avenge her slight. In the combat Cuchulainn did not recognize his son and Conlaoch was killed. (2) Same as Aeife, which see.

AO-JUN In Chinese mythology one of the dragon kings of the four seas. Ruler of the Western Sea; increaser of favor.

Ao-K'in. Ruler of the Southern Sea; increaser of good.

Ao Kuang. Ruler of the Eastern Sea; increaser of virtue.

Ao Shun. Ruler of the Northern Sea; increaser of generosity.

AOKEU AND AKE Polynesian deluge deities. In a contest Ao-keu made the rains fall, Ake made the waters rise. When Rongo forced the contestants to cease their display of power the deluge subsided. Compare Abala.

AO-MARAMA Polynesian primeval deity of daylight. Offspring of Po-begat-Te-ao, deity of light; parent of Ao-tu-roa, long standing light.

AONIA Region in ancient Boeotia where the Muses supposedly lived.

Anian fount. Fountain of Aganippe at the foot of Mount Helicon in Boeotia.

AO-POURI Polynesian primordial world, realm of darkness.

AOS Chaldean god of light. Also known as Hoa, and in dual aspect as Aa, Ao, Oa. Probably connected with ayus, Sanscrit for life, with chaos, and with Eos, Greek dawn. Cognate Iao, Tao.

AOSHNARA In Iranian legend while still in his mother's womb, he taught many marvels and at birth answered questions and riddles of Fracih, the unbeliever. He became the wise administrator of King Kavi Usan, who eventually tired of his wisdom and put him to death.

AOTEA-ROA Literally, long bright daylight or long bright land. Maori name for New Zealand. Ancient name for the island of Tahiti, the Hawaiika or Maori gathering place of souls.

AO-TU-ROA Polynesian primeval deity. Long-standing light; offspring of Ao-Marama, daylight; begetter of Kore-te-whiwhia, the void.

AP (1) Word root cognate with eye (sun). Root of Apepi, Egyptian great serpent slain by the sun, Apis, apple, Hap, happy, map, snap. Interchangeable with ab, ip, ob (orb), up. Equates with op, root of optimum, i.e. the best or faith in the highest. (2) Sanctuary where Amen-Ra was worshiped under the guise of a ram. From Ap along with the feminine article tap, the Greeks derived the name Thebes. See Apet. (3) Hindu primal deity of waters. Also called Apas.

APAHARAVARMAN Hindu legendary hero who plunders the rich to give to the poor and who aids separated lovers. Proto-type of Robin Hood.

APA-HAU Polynesian storm demon.

APAM NAPAT In Hindu and Indo-Iranian mythology the son of Vourukasha, heavenly sea. Fire above; lightning worshiped as 'child of the waters,' because he is born of a cloud. His name means grandson of waters. Lover of Anahite, who parallels Aphrodite, and identified with Agni. As a dying god resembles Adonis.

APAOSHA Literally, concealer or cover. Zoroastrian demon of drought. He rides a hideous black bald horse and is defeated by Tishtrya (dog-star).

APAPPUS Giant, probably a drought demon, in Egyptian mythology.

APASON AND TAUTHE Babylonian primeval couple. Father and mother of Moymis.

APATE In Greek mythology Deceit, an abstract deity.

APAUKKYIT LOK In Burmese religion an old man who lived on Majoi Shingra Pum. Nine times he grew old, and nine times he renewed his youth. Each time he aged he aroused the anger of Lord of Sun by pretending to be dead. Lord of Sun finally punished him by causing him to die; thus he brought death into the world.

APE One who is befooled, a mimic. Symbolic of devilry, docility, hairiness, hypocrisy, indecency, sexual desire, thievery, ugliness, uncleanness. In mysticism typifies melancholy and sadness when the moon wanes, gaiety and joyfulness when the moon is waxing. In Chinese mythology represents Shen.

In Christian art typifies cunning, greed, hatred, lust, malice, sin. The slothful soul of man, spiritual blindness, Satan. According to a medieval tradition women who have married neither man nor Christ will be given to apes in the next world. In Egyptian mythology an aspect of Thoth in the underworld. Typifies the soul traversing the circle of purification before entering the field of truth. In funeral rites represented seated on scale for judging souls. Symbolizes regeneration, passage from the state of animal to that of man, from death to eternal life. In a sitting posture represents equilibrium between light and darkness, truth and error. In Hinduism symbolizes a rain cloud. In Philippine mythology a trickster hero which arouses enmity and pursuit, but succeeds in escaping his pursuers.

Ape's Hill. A promitory in northwest Africa formerly called Abyla. One of the Pillars of Heracles. By the Arabs called Jebel Musa (Mountain of Moses).

APEP (APAP, APEPI, APOP, APOPHIS) Great worm of Egyptian mythology. Dragon of darkness which Ra, sun god, battles every night in the underworld. Apep loses the battle every morning. The spirit of evil; storm demon which devours the dead. Represented as a crocodile or as a serpent with many coils or as a snake with a human head. Name cognate with ophis, papa, pope.

APET (EPET) Egyptian mother goddess at Thebes. Water deity depicted with the body of a hippopotamus. Ultimately fused with Hathor. Thebes is believed to be derived by transposing the T in her name; Tap or Tape being pronounced Thebai by the Greeks.

APEX Acme, peak, pyramid. Resolves into ap-ek-se, i.e. great fiery eye (sun).

APHAEA (APHAIA) In Greek mythology Artemis as a chaste mermaid. Pursued by Alpheus, a river god, for nine months, that is from the early flood to the winnowing season. She was rescued by fishermen who carried her to Aegina, where she was named Aphaea and worshiped in fish form. This myth explains fish tails on some statues of the goddess in Crete and elsewhere. Identical with Arethusa, Britomartis. A tale resembling that of Daphne.

APHEK Literally, strength. In Old Testament: (1) a city in Lebanon assigned to the Hebrew tribe of Asher, which could not be subdued by those who attacked it. (2) A city near the sea of Galilee, the walls of which fell on 27,000 Syrians when they were fighting the Israelites.

APHRODITE Greek goddess of beauty and love. She was fabled to have been born of the sea's foam, signifying immaculate birth, or to have been the daughter of Uranus (heaven) and Hemera (day). According to Hesiod, Uranus was castrated by Cronus and, when the parts came in contact with the sea, Aphrodite sprang up from them; then standing on a scallop shell she was washed ashore at Cyprus or Cythera. The drops of water that fell from her formed pearls. The Horae (hours or seasons) draped her in garments of immortal fabric and escorted her to Olympus. According to Homer she was the daughter of Zeus and Dione. Variousy worshiped as earth mother, goddess of fruitfulness and vegetation, goddess of the moon, the sea, the underworld, or of war. Probably originally she was an Oriental goddess of vegetation and of the reproductive forces of nature. She presided over April the germinating month. In the Iliad the wife of Hephaestus is Aphrodite; in the Odyssey his wife is Charis; both are names for glistening light, thus the two are substantially the same. She personified dawn, and as she was as unmoral as the dawn itself, she became the mother of countless children. As mistress of Poseidon her office was to modify the god's power and calm the sea. She was mistress and mother (adopted) of Adonis, the fruitfulness of the earth. She had Atalanta and Hippomenes changed into lions; she consoled Ariadne by giving her Dionysus as a husband; she gave her daughter Harmonia a fertile though fatal necklace and veil; she gave beauty to Pandora, the first created woman; and she competed against Athena and Hera for the apple of discord and was awarded the prize by Paris, leading him in turn to the beautiful Helen, thus bringing about the Trojan War. In some localities regarded as the embodiment of both feminine and masculine principles and called Hermaphrodite, a blending of Hermes, the male principle, with Aphrodite, the female principle. See androgynous deities. Some of her titles are: Anadyomene, she who rises out of the waters; Areia, goddess of war; Argynnis, gleaming one; Libitina, underworld goddess identified with Persephone; Pandemos, sensuality; Pontia, goddess of the tranquil sea, lady of navigation, who possesses a dove to indicate the direction of land; Urania, daughter of Uranus, celestial love, queen of heaven identified as a moon goddess. She was represented in the heavens by the morning and evening stars. Aphrodite is popularly interpreted to mean foam born. In archaic art fully clothed, generally with a head cloth and veil. In later art partially or fully nude.

Sometimes she is shown with Eros as mother and child. Hellenistic sculptors made her sensuous and conscious of her charm. Botticelli's Birth of Venus is an exact icon. Her attributes are: apple, armor, cestus, cone, coronal of gold leaves or myrtle, diadem, dice, dolphin, dove, fillet, flowers, hare, iynx, laurel, lime tree, mirror, moon, murex, myrrh, myrtle, palm tree, polos, pomegranate, poppy, rose, scallop shell, swallow, swan, torch, tortoise, veil, and the colors blue, green, and scarlet. Goats and rams were sacred to her; incense and garlands of flowers were offered to her; her libations were honey, milk, and wine. She parallels Anahita, Arjuni, Astarte, Atargatis, Benten, Lakshmi, Ushas, Venus, etc.

Aphrodite's girdle. The cestus. Whoever wore it immediately became the object of love.

Bearded Aphrodite. A bisexual deity, Hermaphrodite. The Evening and Morning Star.

APICIUS In Roman legend an epicure.

APIS In Egyptian mythology sacred bull or ox of Memphis. Begotten by a ray of generative light flowing from the moon. Most important of the numerous animals worshiped by ancient Egyptians. His birthday was one of public rejoicing and on his death (after 25 years the sacred bull was sacrificed and buried with pomp) disconsolate believers shaved their heads. Mourning continued until the new Apis was discovered by the markings by which the god was recognized.

The markings were a white triangle on the forehead of a black bull, an eagle form on its back, a lump in the shape of a scarabaeus under its tongue. The black of the bull symbolized night (eternity) and the white symbolized day (time), the eagle and the scarabaeus represented the sun. The finding of the new bull characterized resurrection, and he was the animal to which the soul of Osiris migrated. Also said to incorporate Bacis, Mnevis, Ptah, and Ra. Sometimes identified with Hapi. In Greek called Serapis (Asar-Hapi or Osiris-Hapi). Apis equates with ophis, Greek for asp or serpent, and resolves into ap (=op or hoop or eye) + is (= es or essence or light), thus hoop of light, the Sun. II is identical with Roman apsis, meaning bow or solar wheel, and source of apse (bow of the chancel).

APISIRAHTS Blackfeet Indians' morning star deity. Son of Sun, he married a mortal, Feather Woman. Their son was Poia.

APNAPURNA Hindu goddess who gives substance and is bent by the weight of her full breasts in which all good is united. Apna means to nourish by water and purna appears to mean to produce. A name related to that of Anna Perenna.

APO Persian water genius. As rain, heaven born. Beneficent male spirit shaping men and protecting royal glory.

APOCALYPTIC NUMBER Mystic number 666. Number of blasphemous Beast with seven heads and ten horns identified with Antichrist.

APOCATEQUIL Peruvian god of evil. Twin brother of Piguero.

The twins were sons of the first man Guamansuri. They released the progenitors of the Peruvians from their underworld abode by turning the soil with an implement of gold. They were identified as night and day respectively and associated with the thunder-god; hence all Inca twins are regarded sacred to the thunder god.

APOCONALLOTL Literally, foam of water. Aztec deity; an aspect of Chalchiuhtlicue.

APOCYNUM Deceit, falsehood. In the language of flowers: I don't believe you.

APOLLINAX, MR. Hero of a T. S. Eliot poem symbolizing a European man of letters who is being lionized by an American dowager and a supercilious professor. One who is cynical, insensitive, uninhibited.

APOLLO (APOLLON) In Greek mythology son of Zeus (sky) and Leto (night). One of the twelve great gods of Olympus and twin brother of Artemis (moon). He was born on the island of Delos, land of the rising sun, where his mother fled to escape the jealous wrath of Hera. Personification of the sun in its light and life-giving as well as its destroying or pestilence-inflicting power. In his wisdom is seen the searching light from which nothing is hidden. His arrows (rays) are all powerful to heal or consume. He is attended by the Muses; is the celestial musician, deity of eloquence, fine arts, poetry, and science; is the divine guide of navigators, expert archer, and with his bow and arrow makes known to mankind the will of Zeus; he is physician, bestowing his knowledge of medicine on his son Asclepius, is protector of crops from ravages of destructive animals, especially the mice known as Smintheus (one of his own titles), is provider of rich pastures, and watcher of earthly as well as heavenly flocks (clouds). He is the god who takes three steps, i. e. goes down, treads in darkness, rises again. He is the principle of agelessness, earnestness, orderliness, purity, reasonableness, resurrection, simplicity, youthful death. He is a dying god. He inherits his functions from Helios, with whom he is identified. In some legends Ortygia, land of spring and morning, is the land of his birth. Like all sun deities his growth is miraculous, and he bursts the bonds of his swaddling clothes (mists) and becomes proficient in the use of his irresistible weapons (rays) soon after birth. Although he is the eternal youth noted for his manly beauty, he is one whose love is repulsed or whose love meets fatal consequences. He married the nymph Coronis who, by him, became the mother of Asclepius. With information given to him by a crow he discovered she was unfaithful, whereupon he killed Coronis and changed the crow from white to black. By Calliope, in another short-lived romance, he was the father of Orpheus. He also loved two youths, Hyacinthus and Cyparissus. One day as the former and Apollo were throwing the discus Hyacinthus was struck on the head with it and killed on the spot, and the broken-hearted god changed him into the hyacinth. Cyparissus accidentally killed one of Apollo's favorite stags and grieved over the accident until he died. Apollo changed him into a cypress tree. Apollo kills the strangling Python. This legend, which has parallels in practically every ancient religion, treats the destruction of the drought monster which hordes water by the fertilizing sun. In the form of a dolphin Apollo agitates the waters of the Corinthian gulf and then leads Cretan mariners of a ship in distress to the safety of the shore where he departs in the form of a brilliant star. The mariners follow him to Delphi, found a temple in his honor, and become priests devoted to his worship. This far-famed oracle became the only shrine in the world not exclusively national; it was consulted by Etruscans, Lydians, Phrygians, Romans, etc. The story of his guiding the mariners parallels that of Vishnu guiding the ark. In reprisal for the slaying of his son Asclepius by Zeus, Apollo slew the Cyclops, celestial smiths who provided Zeus with thunder and lightning (the sun is naturally the enemy of storms). For this act Apollo had to make expiation by serving Admetos, a mortal, for a year as a slave. Titles of Apollo are: Agyieus, god of streets and ways; Delphinus, the dolphin god; Euraylus, god of the broad sea; Helios, the sun; Muses, leader of the Muses; Nomios, lute player; Paeon, healer; Phoebus, shiner; Pythius, killer of Python; Smintheus, plague sender; Tortor, tower of towers; Tyrxis, well-keeper.

His sacred number originally was four, at later dates, five and seven. Also sacred to him were the apple, bay, bow and arrow, chariot, cicada, cithara, cock, conical pillar, crow, dolphin, griffin, hawk, laurel, lyre, mouse under foot, obelisk, raven, serpent, shepherd's crook, swan, tamarisk, white mouse, wolf. His name resolves into Ap-ol-lo, i. e. Orb (ap = ob) of the Lord (ol = el) Everlasting (lo = la), and into Greal Paul. It is related to such words as appall, appeal, apple. In art he is portrayed as a beautiful youth with flowing golden hair, standing, striding, or in a chariot drawn by four horses. Sometimes he wears a flowing cloak or tunic and is shown with one of his sacred attributes. A laurel twig almost always is in his hair. As an agent of Zeus he appears with a double-handled battle ax. His temple was built as an enclosed circle. Compare Stonehenge. He resembles such deities as Baal, Christ, Cuchulainn, Horus the Younger, Indra, Ra, Resphiph-Mical, Sigurd, Surya, Vishnu. Apollo also was worshipped by the Romans, who borrowed him from the Greeks in the 5th century B. C. in the hope of averting a plague.

Apollonian. A personality that is moderate, not going to excess, self-effacing, not aggressive or boastful. Opposed to Dionysian.

Apollonianism. Soul conceived as a cosmos ordered in a group of excellent parts.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA First century A. D. magician and miracle worker.

APOLLYON Greek rendering of Abaddon, Hebrew term which originally meant the bottomless pit. The angel of the bottomless pit, angel of destruction. In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress the antagonist of Christian.

APONE Healing fountain in Padua, Italy.

APONIBOLINAYEN In Philippine mythology a female beauty carried to the sun by a vine that wound itself around her. Probably a personification of dawn. She secretly entered the house where Sun slept at night, but was discovered because her beauty shone like fire, and the sun married her. Also called Tinguian.

APOSTATE One who forsakes his cause, church, or party; a renegade.

APOSTLE Literally, one sent forth. A pioneer of any great moral reform. In Christian tradition they number twelve and also are called fishers of men. They and their badges are: Andrew, an X cross, instrument of his crucifixion; Bartholomew, a knife, because he was flayed with one; James the Great, scallop shell or staff, because he was a pilgrim; James the Less, a fuller's pole, instrument of his death; John, a cup with a winged serpent flying out of it, alluding to the cup of poison offered to him; Judas Iscariot, a bag; because he bare what was put in one; Jude, a club, implement of his martyrdom; Matthew (or Levi), a halbred or hatchet because he was martyred with one; Peter, a bunch of keys and a cock, because Christ gave him the keys to the kingdom of heaven, and he went out and wept bitterly when he heard the cock crow; Philip, a long staff surmounted with a cross because he suffered death by being suspended by the neck to a tall pillar; Simon, a saw, inasmuch as he was sawed to death; Thomas, a lance because he was pierced through the body with one. Sometimes Matthias, whose badge is a battle-ax, replaces Judas, and sometimes Paul, whose badge is a sword, replaces Jude. Twelve bunches of grapes, twelve columns, twelve sheep, all symbolize the apostles. In Mohammedanism the apostles are six: Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus, Mohammed, in the order given. Parallels Sanscrit arhat, Chinese lohan.

Apostolic Fathers. In Christianity the authors born in the 1st century when the Apostles lived. The most famous five are: Barnabas, Clement of Rome, Hermas, Ignatius, Polycarp.

APOYAN TACHU In Zuni legend the All-covering Father created by Awonawilona; the sky. With his spouse Tsita he created terrestrial life.

APPARAS Among the Lapps spirits of small children who had been killed. They are restless forest spirits, who rule over grass, roots, and trees. Compare liekkio, patshak.

APPIUS CLAUDIUS In Roman legend a decemvir who fell in love with Virginia, a beautiful plebian. By mock trial he made her his slave and her father killed her in the forum. Subject of innumerable dramas and novels.

APPLAUSE Dream significance: reproach. A word which resolves into op-laus, a laus or lauding of the hoop (sun).

APPLE Fruitfulness, health, knowledge, love, wisdom; also death, discord, evil, lust, temptation. Of phallic significance. In witchcraft food of the oracular dead. In fairytales the giver of immortal youth; in the Swiss tale of William Tell typifies danger. In folklore the fruit is the symbol of consummation as the egg is of initiation. Word from the root ap (ab or ball). The ending le (ala) is apparently a diminutive form. As used in Northern Europe, yields ap (ab or ball or eye) + ple (pol or Baldur), thus eye of Baldur, sun god. French pomme yields eye of sun. Greek for apple is melon, i.e. one god; Welsh is aval, thus Avalon, the isle of rest, is Apple Island. It equates with Apollo and is the source of Appleby, Appuldurcomb, Appold, etc. In Celtic tradition one of the two sacred trees of ancient Ireland. In China symbolizes peace. In Christian-Hebraic-Moslem tradition earthly happiness, fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. Cause of the fall of man and of original sin, death-dealer, destroyer. In the hands of Adam, weakness; in the hands of Eve, damnation. In the hands of Jesus, the new Adam; in the hands of Mary, the new Eve, redemption or salvation. Attribute of Saint Dorothea. Neither early Hebrew nor Mohammedan works clearly identify the fruit, and some believe an ear of wheat, a fig, or fruit of the vine may have been intended. Some believe a Semitic word for fruit was translated into Old High German opaz (fruit) or Anglo-Saxon ofet (fruit), both of which are rendered as apple. In Greek mythology the apple symbolizes discord, love, victory. Attribute of Aphrodite (Venus), Eris, Atalanta. The golden apples of Aphrodite caused even the frigid Atalanta to yield to love. In Norse mythology a symbol of immortality.

Apple blossom. December 31 birthday flower signifying preference. In the language of flowers: He prefers you; also Fame called him great and good. Herald of May; appropriate to brides. Emblem of Arkansas and Michigan.

Apple howling. In England salute given in apple orchards on Christmas Eve invoking fruitfulness.

Apple of discord. In Greek mythology gold apple inscribed 'For the Fairest,' and thrown onto a table by Eris, goddess of discord, at the marriage feast of Thetis and Peleus, to which all deities except Eris had been invited. Aphrodite, Athena, Hera, each claimed the apple. Called upon to act as judge, Paris awarded the apple to Aphrodite. The vengeance of Athena and Hera was directed against Paris, and they brought about the fall of Troy. Thus any cause of dispute.

Apples of Hesperides. The apples the color of burnished gold with the taste of honey. When eaten they did not diminish in any way, and whoever cast one of them hit anything he wished, and the apple came back into his hand. They also had the power of healing, and were symbolic of happiness, love, and wisdom. They were given to Hera as a wedding gift when she married Zeus. She placed them under the guardianship of a dragon (earth spirit) in the Garden of the Hesperides (Garden in the North). The apple tossed by Eris was stolen from this garden. One of the labors of Heracles was to get an apple. In Celtic lore demanded by Lugh as a blood fine from the murderers of his father, the sons of Tuirenn. Probably identical with the apple tree of Manannan. According to some scholars, oranges or persimmons were intended.

Apples of Istakhar. All sweetness on one side; all bitterness on the other.

Apples of paradise. Apples with a bite on one side to indicate the bite given by Eve.

Apples of perpetual youth. In Scandinavian mythology the golden apples in the keeping of Idhunn, daughter of Svold and wife of Bragi. By tasting them the gods preserved their youth.

Apples of Pyban. In the travels of Sir John Mandeville, pigmies fed on their scent alone.

Apples of Samarkand. In the Arabian Nights a cure for any disorder.

Apples of Sodom. A poisonous Dead Sea fruit; a lovely fruit which, when plucked, turns to ashes; hence anything deceptive or disappearing. Typifies sin.

Apple tree. Useful beauty. Frequently figures as a tree of everlasting youth. A tree of knowledge or of life. In Baltic mythology, when the tree has nine branches, typifies the rays of the sun.

Thorn apple. Deceitful charms.

Wild apple. When Celtic tree alphabet was increased to fifteen consonants, tree of the eleventh consonant, quert (Q or CC), which shared the month of the hazel, August 6 to September 2.

APPOMATTOX A place of surrender or defeat, alluding to the town in Virginia, where General Lee surrendered to General Grant on April 9, 1865.

APPREHENSION In an Italian icon personified by a young woman of middle stature dressed in white; brisk and active, disposed to listen when another speaks. She stands on tip-toe and holds a camelion in one hand and a mirror in the other.

APPROVAL OF GOD In Christianity shown with a rod blossoming, usually with lilies. In Hebrew tradition the rod blossoms with almond flowers.

APRICOT Nympha, vulva. Dream significance: health, pleasure. In China typifies a beautiful woman.

Apricot flower. Timid love.

APRIES King of Egypt who aided Jews in revolt against Babylon. His army of mercenaries was overthrown by native Egyptian forces and he was dethroned. In Bible known as Pharaoh Hophra.

APRIL Derived from aperio, Latin verb meaning to open. So called because it is the month when the earth opens to produce new fruits. A period or state of emotional inconstancy from the frequent alternation of sunshine and showers attributed to the month. Month of Lord Apur, spring. Its birthstone is the diamond, its colors are green and yellow, its zodiacal sign is Taurus, the bull. In China its emblems are the cherry blossom and serpent. In ancient Greece sacred to Aphrodite (Venus) and Hygeia. In Persia typified by a vine dresser trimming his vine.

April first. All Fool's Day of April Fool's Day; feast of the Vernal Equinox. A period of reawakening, or rejuvenescence, of unbound hilarity. Day of the bull, that is day of commemoration for bull worshipers. Feast of Lord Hu, lord of wit and humor, in his alternative title of Lud (root of ludicrous). Observed by playing jokes on unsuspecting people, festivities Gwydion is credited with originating. Corresponds to Hindustan Huli Festival, celebrated on March 31.

April Fish. French equivalent of April Fool.

April Fool. A victim of April Fool's Day (April 1) jokes.

Aprilists. Adorers or worshipers of the Bull; ancients opened the year with the Bull or on April 1.

APRILE A poet in Robert Browning's Paracelsus who exalts love as Paracelsus exalts knowledge.

APRON OF HUMAN BONES In Buddhism a Dharmapala ornament called narasthyabharna.

Apron strings. The influence of a mother, wife, or any female.

Apron of white lambskin. In Freemasonry, purity of life and conduct.

APSARAS Buddhist angel or fairy. Usually shown flying through the clouds. In Hinduism celestial dancer or water nymph of Indra's heaven. In later myths referred to in the plural as apsarases (or 'es') and represented as beautiful and voluptuous courtesans of the sky (sportive clouds or mists) who consorted with gandharvas or were the reward of heroes slain in battle. They supposedly resided in fig trees and were asked to bless wedding processions that passed them. On their evil side they caused madness, having been sent by the gods to disturb and tempt brooding ascetics lest they acquired too great a power. Also local Tibetan deities.

APSE In Christian churches the bow of a chancel. In ancient churches bishop's seat in eastern or altar end of church. Word paralleling apis, which see.

APSU (ABZU, APASON, APSU RISHTU) Babylonian great abyss, primordial fertile sea. Nether sea of fresh water. First husband of Tiamat, chaos. Father of all the gods, whom, with the assistance of his mate, he was resolved to destroy because they desired to set the world in order. When he became the archenemy of the gods his son Ea castrated him, severed his sinews, and tore off his crown. Ea then took the fresh water as his own abode. This situation parallels that of Uranus-Cronus, Cronus-Zeus.

The pieces of Apsu were imprisoned in a house (earth) built around his body. In Sumerian mythology man was formed from the clay of Apsu, paralleling Nu, Ymir. Apsu and Tiamat constitute the primeval pair, the male and female principle. The first pair to issue from them was Lahmu and Lahamu, the next was Anshar and Kishar, then Anu and Anatu. Ea follows Anu, and sometimes is identified as Anu's son.

APUAT In Egyptian mythology brother of Anubis. First man to open the way or discover the road to the underworld. Compares with Tezcatlipoca, Yama.

APUS Constellation also called Bird of Paradise. A monster with no hind limbs.

AQUAMARINE March birthstone with the virtue of ensuring constant happiness. Symbol of health, hope in misfortune, and youth. It supposedly assures constancy in love, prevents quarrels between husband and wife, protects from slander, thus suitable in anniversary and engagement rings. Believed to stimulate intellect and intuition and to make wearer quick witted, and so worn by students. Preserves wearer against poison administered by enemies. Medicinally endowed with power to cure ailments involving jaw and throat, liver and stomach, also toothaches. Sacred to Neptune, thus a talisman of sailors and sea travelers. Worn by land travelers to protect them from hazards and to aid them in finding hidden objects for which they may be searching. Its occult powers intensified if worn by one born under its sign. Dream significance: new friend.

AQUARIUS Water Bearer, eleventh sign of the Zodiac. Sun enters about January 20. Anciently the location of the winter solstice. Astrologers equate with cold, darkness, floods, rains, storms. It is a diurnal sign, fixed, airy, hot, moist, and sanguine in nature; its quality is fortunate; it is ruled by Uranus. Its character trait is tolerance; it governs the legs. Its tarot significance is the Strength. Usually represented as a man with his left hand raised and his right pouring a stream of water from a pitcher into the mouth of the Southern Fish. Sometimes portrayed as an urn. By Babylonians called Gu (overflowing-water-jar) and associated with the deluge, curse of water. First sign in old Chinese zodiac; the Rat, bringer of water. In Christianity associated with John the Baptist and Judas Thaddaeus. Egyptians equated with Hapi or Khnum, water gods. Greeks identified with Zeus, symbolizing creation; later associated with Deucalion or Ganymede. Pictorial symbol two wavy lines, the alchemical symbol for dissolution.

AQUILA (1) Northern constellation in the Milky Way containing the bright star Altair. In Chinese and Japanese mythology the Cowherd or Herdsman, which see. In Roman legend the youth Antinous of Bithynia in Asia Minor was drowned in the Nile and his death was mourned by Emperor Hadrian. Antinous was borne into the skies by an eagle and the constellation supposedly represents an eagle carrying Antinous in its talons. (2) In Roman mythology the north wind; parallel of the Greek Boreas. (3) A Jew converted to Christianity. With his wife, Priscilla, he became a helper of Paul.

AR (ARO) Word root from the Latin related to plowing. Appears in arable, Arishis, Arthur, Aryan, etc.

ARA (ARAE) (1) A constellation also called the Altar. (2) In Armenian mythology son of Armenak, husband of Nvard. A youth famous for his beauty. When he rejected the love of Semiramis she waged war against him and he was wounded and died. Semiramis appealed to her gods and they restored him to life. A sun myth cognate Attis, Gilgamesh. See dying god. (3) In Greek mythology goddess of destruction and retribution; sometimes her name is applied to the Furies. Once invoked by the longing heart, later a curse with which the weak imprecated tyrants.

ARABELLA (BEL, BELLA, BELLE) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning a fair altar.

ARABIA DESERTA Desert inhabited by wandering tribes with no fixed habitation and living in tents.

Arabia Felix. The happy, rich land where the Queen of Sheba ruled. Site of Mecca.

Arabia Petraea. Region in which Moses saw the burning bush and Elijah heard the 'still small voice.' The vast and terrible wilderness from Mount Sinai to the promised land, where the Jews spent forty years wandering.

ARACHNE In Greek mythology a Lydian maiden who challenged Athena to a contest in weaving and won. Athena angered metamorphosed Arachne into a spider. Thus one who is ambitious or presumptuous; a victim of conceit or pride. Compare Penelope and Weaving Damsel.

Arachne's labors. Spinning and weaving.

ARAD-EA (ARDI-EA) In Babylonian mythology servant of Ea, ferryman on Khubur, river of death in Aralu. Correlative of Charon.

ARAFAT A mountain southeast of Mecca where, according to Mohammedan tradition, Adam met Eve after a punitive separation of 200 years. He was conducted to its summits by Gabriel.

ARAH Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning lion's whelp.

ARAHITO-GAMI Japanese mikado, deity incarnate.

ARALU (ARALLU) In Babylonian mythology the Great City, the lowerworld, abode of the dead. A vast seven-walled gloomy cavern in the midst of the earth, ruled over by Nergal and his stern and sullen consort Allatu with demon attendants from the summer solstice to the winter solstice. Here the dead lead a feeble existence in the form of shadows with no hope of return to a better life. The evil dead sometimes rise to torment mankind. Also called Cutha.

ARAM In Armenian mythology son of Harma, who is sometimes said to be an aspect of Aram. He fought and vanquished the Syrian god Baal Shamin. Identified with Arame, a king of Urartu.

ARAMA Light god of the Moxos Indians of South America. His wife, goddess of waters, refreshed the soil, parched by the glare of his eye.

ARAMATI Literally, devotion. Vedic abstract goddess.

ARAMAZD Armenian Supreme

God. Creator of heaven and earth; giver of abundance. Characterized as benign, brave, manly, peace-loving, and wise. One of the seven chief deities, and of a triad with Anahit and Vahagn. He presided over the Navasard (New Year festival), which probably was a spring festival or agricultural celebration connected with commemorating the dead and praying for the increase of rain and harvests. Armenian corruption of the Persian Auramazda (Ormazd).

ARANE A Beaumont and Fletcher character; a mother who would overthrow her son.

ARANYANI Hindu goddess of the jungle; mother of beasts and rich in food without tillage.

ARAPAHO American Indians; nomads.

ARARAT Sacred mountain, resting place of Noah's ark. Second cradle of the human race. Universal navel.

ARA-TIATIA Polynesian whirlwind deity who cuts the road to the upperworld on occasions.

ARATIS Vedic spirits hostile to mankind.

ARAWN Literally, silver-tongue (eloquence). King of Annwfn, Brythonic underworld, world of wealth. He was owner of all the animals ascribed to otherworlds and of the magic caldron, giver of plenty, which Arthur coveted. His gate was guarded by three cranes which warned travelers not to enter. He fought and defeated Amaethon at the battle of Cath Godeu, and he exchanged shapes and reign with Pwyll (see) to overcome Havgan, a rival. His name later was corrupted to Anguissance (anguish) or Augusel, and he was mortalized as a king of Scotland in the Arthurian cycle.

ARBACES Villainous priest in Bulwer-Lytton's novel, The Last Days of Pompeii.

ARBA-KONFUS Hebrew prayer box; symbolizes the four directions or four corners of the earth.

ARBA KOSOT The four cups of wine consumed during the Seder service of the Hebrew Passover festival, to recall the four expressions of freedom in the Bible: "I will bring forth," "I will redeem," "I will deliver," "I will take you unto me as a nation."

ARBOR-VITAE December 28 birthday flower with the sentiment unchanging friendship and symbolizing immortality. In the language of flowers: I never change, live for me.

ARBUDA Vedic serpent demon; keeper of the cows of fertility (rain clouds). Indra trod him under foot and deprived him of his cows, i. e. released them for the benefit of mankind. Invoked in battle. Probably a form of Vala.

ARBUTUS In the language of flowers: I love only you. Emblem of Massachusetts and of the Pilgrims. Also called mayflower.

ARCADIA (ARCADY, ARKADIA)
(1) In Greek antiquity the happy land of Pan, who led the celestial dance and song. Bright land, the East. (2) A mountainous district in ancient Greece noted for the contented pastoral simplicity of its people, hence a land proverbial for its picturesque peacefulness, for its rural simplicity. A setting for a pastoral romance, a shepherd's paradise. Name which resolves into resplendent might A (Sun).

Arcadian. Dunce, simpleton.

ARCANUM One of the great secrets the alchemists sought to discover; a mystery; something hidden from the mass of men. An elixir, panacea, secret remedy.

ARCAS In Greek mythology grandson of Lycaon; son of Zeus. Lycaon served Zeus the flesh of Arcas. The angered god destroyed the house of Lycaon by turning Lycaon and his sons into wolves, but restored life to Arcas, who became the eponymous ancestor of the Arcadians. Subsequently, while hunting, Arcas chanced to pursue his mother Callisto, who had been changed into a bear by the jealous Hera. To prevent the crime of matricide Zeus transformed his son into a bear and transported both to heaven, Callisto as the Great Bear, Arcas as the Little Bear. The enraged Hera persuaded Poseidon to forbid the Bears to descend into the ocean like other stars. They alone of the constellations never set below the horizon. According to some Arcas was identical with Bootes and he became the constellation Bootes (Not Ursa Minor); according to others Arcas became the bright star Arcturus in Bootes.

ARCASIA In Spenser's Faerie Queene personification of intemperance, dwelling in the Bower of Bliss. She is conquered by Guyon (temperance).

ARCH Femal principle, heaven, sanctuary, secret place.

ARCHAGATHUS In Roman legendary history son of Lysanias. Reputed to be the first physician to practice at Rome. At first held in esteem and called Vulnerarius (one who cures wounds) but, because of the cruelty he displayed in cutting and searing his patients, he brought the art of medicine and surgery and physicians in general into disrepute.

ARCHANGEL A chief or principal angel. Among occultists an emanation of the Deity. In Christianity four are mentioned: Gabriel, Michael, Raphael, and Uriel. They correspond to the four directions. The Koran also has four: Gabriel, Michael, Azrael, Israfel. In Old Testament a title applied to Michael, chief opponent of Satan, and sometimes identified as the Messiah.

ARCHBISHOP TURPIN A Paladin of Charlemagne, hence a notable hero. Personifies light.

ARCHER Ninth sign of the zodiac, symbol of Sagittarius. Portrayed as a man shooting a three-headed arrow, which is an aspect of the Babylonian deity Ashur. Word parallels arcus, Latin for bow. Also called Centaur.

ARCHIBALD (ARCHIE, BALDIE) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning distinguished and bold. Nickname for an anti-aircraft gun.

ARCHILOCHUS Greek satirist of 8th century B.C. responsible for the term Archilochian, meaning bitterness, ill-natured satire.

ARCHIMAGO Enchanter in Spenser's Faerie Queene typifying false religion and hypocrisy.

ARCHON (1) Gnostic heavenly creator and ruler, subordinate to the Supreme Deity. (2) In Greek antiquity after the 7th century B.C. one of the nine chief magistrates at Athens. Name resolves into great one, and 'arch' of Archon appears in such names as Arcas, Archelaus, Archidamus, and survives in archangel, monarch, etc. Probably equates with the guttural 'ach' of Gwrnach the Giant. Allied to Haakon, which means high kin.

ARCITE In Chaucer an unsuccessful lover.

ARCITENUS A double-headed centaur in Babylonian mythology.

ARCTOS (ARCTUS) Collective name of Ursa Major and Ursa Minor. From the Greek, meaning bear. See Arcas.

ARCTURUS Literally, bear's tail. Star of first magnitude in the tail of Bootes. See Arcas. Finno-Ugric archer of the sky. They believe that when he shoots down the Boahje-naste (North Star) the heavens will fall, bringing about the end of the world.

ARDAD A Persian demon which led travelers astray.

ARDAN In Irish legend one of the three sons of Usnach. Brother of Naoise, the husband of Deirdre, on whose account the three men were treacherously slain. See Deirdre.

ARDAT LILI Sumerian demon or ghost who married human men. Compares with mermaids, Nereids, Ganga.

ARDDHA-NARI (ARDHA-NARI) In Hinduism Siva and his sakti Parvati joined, the right side being male, the left side female. See androgynous deities.

ARDOKSHO Iranian goddess modeled on Greek Tyche (Fortune). Name signifies augmenting righteousness. Probably identical with Ameretat.

ARAVISURA ANAHITA Iranian celestial lake of milk (mist) which gleams under the Haoma, sacred tree of life on Hara Bezaiti, located in the air of Vurukash (Airanyavaeja). From the lake four celestial rivers flow toward the cardinal points. Also the virgin daughter of Ormuzd. She is the wet and strong spotless one; she is the life-increasing, seed-increasing goddess who makes prosperity. She makes the seeds of all males pure and sound; she purifies the womb of all females, and causes them to bring forth in safety, and puts milk in their breasts. She is invoked in battle as she gives strength to warriors. She is opposed by Apaosha, drought demon. She parallels Anahit, Ish-tar, and Nin Ella.

AREITOS (AREYTOS) Ceremonial dances of mysteries performed by Taino Indians, marking birth, death, marriage, or climaxes in the course of the seasons, cures for the sick, elegies in praise of heroes, the going to war, national crises, puberty rites. Performed chiefly to honor the earth-goddess.

AREOPAGUS A court of justice from the traditional name of the highest tribunal of ancient Athens, famous for its just and wise decisions. Hill to the west of the Acropolis, where the council or judicial body met, and which gave the tribunal its name. Later a court for homicide and murder trials only. Its origin is ascribed to a trial of Ares by the gods. Halirrhothius, son of Poseidon, ravished Alcippe, daughter of Ares, whereupon Ares killed the youth. Poseidon summoned Ares to appear before the tribunal of the gods. Ares was acquitted and the place the gods had held their court thereafter was known as Hill of Ares (Ares + pagos).

AREOP-ENAP In Nauru Island mythology the ancient Spider which floated above in endless space. Creator deity. He made a small snail into the moon, a large snail into the sun; he made the earth from a snail's shell, and from his salt sweat he made the primordial sea; he turned stones into men who held up the sky.

AREOP-IT-EONIN In Nauru Island mythology the young Spider, bringer of fire to mankind. Miraculously born from a boil upon Dabage, the tortoise.

ARES In Greek mythology son of Zeus and Hera. In one account unfathered son of Hera. His twin sister and companion is Eris (strife); another companion is Enyo (war cry). His steeds are Deimos (panic) and Phobos (fear). By Aphrodite the father of Harmonia. He also fathered the Amazons and the Theban dragon (drought). He is the wind, a wild ungovernable bloodthirsty warrior, delighting in strife for its own sake, completely devoid of benevolent aspects, and loved only by Aphrodite, wife of Hephaestus. In early myths he typifies raging tempests; later he is a personification of wild tumult and war. He is fickle and blustering and in the Trojan War, sometimes favors one side, sometimes the other. He kills Halirrhothius, son of Poseidon, for ravishing his daughter, and is tried by the gods, but acquitted. See Areopagus. In one legend he is imprisoned by Otos and Ephialtes (wind and hurricane). In art he appears variously as a bearded warrior or as a youth carrying a sword or lance in his right hand and a shield in his left. In the so called Borghese Ares he is a nude youth wearing a helmet. His emblems are buckler, burning torch, dry grass, helmet, lance, spear, shield, sword. Sacrificed to him were humans, the cock, horse, ram, and the scourges of the battlefield, dog, raven, vulture, wolf. His name sometimes is interpreted to mean curse. He parallels the Hindu Maruts and the Roman Mars.

ARESKOUI (AGRESKOUI, AGRIS-KOUE, AIRESKOUI, AREKOI) Iroquois Indian invisible Great Spirit. Maker of all things. Called on for aid in hunting, shipwrecks, and war, and to whom the first catches of the hunt or of victory were offered.

ARETA (ARETE) Literally, virtuous rule. Greek abstract divinity of virtue. In Homer's Odyssey the wife of Alcinous, king of the Phaeacians, who entertained Odysseus. She was renowned as a model housewife.

ARETHUSA In Greek mythology one of the Nereids. Guardian of the fountain of Arethusa, whose waters were so pure they lengthened the lives of cattle and men. Loved by Alpheus, which see. Also the name of one of the Hesperides. By some said to be an aspect of Artemis.

ARGALAN-ZON In Central Asian mythology the prince of animals. He was so large he refused to go into the ark built by Noj when the flood came, boasting he would not drown. When the flood subsided only his bones were found. Thus one over-confident.

ARGAN In Moliere's Le Malade Imaginaire a hypochondriac who is torn between a desire to have his diseases treated and a desire to reduce his apothecary's bills.

ARGANTE In Arthurian legend fairy queen of Avalon; a form of Morgain Le Fay. In Spenser's Faerie Queene a giantess personifying lust.

ARGEIPHONTES (ARGIPHONTES) In Greek mythology surname of Hermes in his character as dawn god. Slayer of Argus, the many-eyed night, with a round stone (sun). Usually shown with a harpe at his side.

ARGES (ARGIS) Literally, stream of light. In Greek mythology one of the Cyclops. Personification of flame.

ARGHA Moorish sacrificial bowl, represents the yoni.

ARGO Literally, swift. (1) A minor constellation, also known as the Ship Argo or Argo Navis. Now generally divided into four parts: Carina, Puppis, Pyxis, Vela. (2) In Greek mythology the magic ship of the Argonauts, which was endowed with the power of understanding, thought, and speech, and which needed no man to steer it. Ship of a solar allegory. It refused to descend into the water on the expedition for the Golden Fleece until charmed by the lyre of Orpheus (voice of the wind). Like the Ark and the ship supplied Odysseus by Alcinous, symbolic of the nourishing forces of nature, as the ship contained the germ of all living things, thus the Argonauts returned from their adventure with renewed vigor. See Argosy. (3) Ship of adventure, ship used in search of wealth. A merchant ship, a ship of war.

ARGONAUTS (1) In Greek mythology the members of the expedition headed by Jason (sun), which sailed from Greece to Colchis in quest of the Golden Fleece (sun-lit clouds). After many strange and dangerous adventures the Argonauts reached Colchis, where the king promised to give Jason the Fleece if he would yoke to a plough two fire-breathing bulls and sow the dragon's teeth left by Cadmus in Thebes. With the help of Medea (moon) Jason fulfilled these conditions and became master of the Fleece, and with Medea, who had fallen in love with him, quitted Colchis. See Golden Fleece, Jason, Medea, Phryxus. (2) Those who emigrated to California in 1848 in search of gold. An adventurer, fortune-seeker, gold-seeker.

ARGOS See Argus.

ARGOSY In Greek mythology the adventure of the Argonauts, a band of about fifty, who sailed on the ship Argo under the leadership of Jason to obtain the Golden Fleece. The acquisition of the Fleece by Jason was the culminating episode in the vicissitudes of a branch of the Aeolos family. Athamas, son of Aeolos, was the father of Phryxus and Helle, whose jealous stepmother Ino plotted their death. As Athamas was about to sacrifice Phryxus to Zeus, the child's mother Nephele (cloud), let loose a ram with golden fleece (sun-lit cloud), which lifted Phryxus and Helle into the air. Helle fell into the sea and was drowned but Phryxus was borne to Colchis, where King Aetes sacrificed the ram to Zeus (sky) and hung its fleece on an oak (tree sacred to Zeus), where it was guarded by dragons until seized by Jason. Jason and his companions were sun heroes, and their journey, usually presented in two series of twelve adventures, one covering the outbound passage, the other the return voyage, related to the transit of the sun through the twelve houses of the zodiac.

ARGUS (ARGOS) (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning vigilant; also brightness or splendor. (2) In Greek mythology son of Phryxus. Builder of the ship Argo for Jason's expedition. (3) Faithful dog of Odysseus. When Odysseus returned after an absence of twenty years, although people of the court failed to recognize him, the dog did, and in his joy at seeing his master again, died. An aspect of gloaming. (4) Son of Zeus and Niobe; father of Peiras, from whom Io descended, and of Ecbasus, and grandfather of Agenor, great-grandfather of Argus Panoptes. Third king of Argos and namer of the city.

Argus Panoptes. In Greek mythology said to be the son of Agenor or of Inachus, both river gods. At times confused with his great-grandfather Argus. He was the all-seeing, having one hundred eyes (star-lit sky). He conquered Echidna, a dragon which crushed its victims with its coils. Hera made Argus Panoptes guardian over the cow into which Io had been metamorphosed. Hermes (wind), commanded by Zeus (day sky) put Argus to sleep with sweet notes of his lute (song of the wind), and then cut off his head, freeing Io (moon). Hera transplanted the eyes of Argus to the tail of the peacock, her favorite bird. In another account Hermes, as dawn, slays Argus with a round stone (sun). The name Argus yields ar-goose or fire spirit; Panoptes contains the word roots pa and op, which yield father-eye or all-seeing. Argus compares with argunas, Sanskrit for shining. To be Argus-eyed is to be keen-eyed, jealously watchful, observant, vigilant.

ARGYNNIS In Greek mythology personification of the brilliancy of early morning. Loved by Agamemnon (sun). Name cognate with Arjuni.

ARHAT In Buddhism a saint. One of the sixteen, later eighteen, apostles whose duty was to go into different parts of India and beyond to spread Buddha's teachings. They have passed the different stages of the Eight-fold Excellent Way and have advanced so far along the path to Nirvana they are subject to no more rebirths. Also called Sthavira. In China called lohan. In Tibet called gnas-brtan or neten.

ARIADNE In Greek mythology daughter of Minos, king of Crete, and Pasiphae, moon goddess. She appears to be a dawn goddess, although some identify her as a moon goddess. She also has been termed barley queen and serpent (earth) goddess. She gave Theseus (sun) the thread (light ray) which enabled him to find his way out of the labyrinth (other-world of darkness which the sun traverses throughout the night). She fled with Theseus, who abandoned her on the island of Naxos, where she was discovered by Dionysus, whose wife she became. Her desertion symbolizes the separation of the sun from the lights of dawn (or from the moon). Thus she suffered the fate of those who love the sun, abandoned as the sun continues his westward journey. Her marriage to Dionysus is that of a fruitful mother. The thread she gave to Theseus compares with Clotho's thread of life. The rites of Ariadne were orgiastic and males were sacrificed to her. The Ariadne myth is Athenian, corresponding to the Argive Andromeda myth, the Colchian Medea myth, and the Niebelungenlied Brynhild. Her name is related to Ana, Anna, Arianrhod, and yields Ar-ri-an (high fruitful mother) + de (barley).

Ariadne's thread. Aid, guide, light.

ARIANA Feminine name from the Welsh, meaning silvery.

ARIANRHOD In Brythonic mythology daughter of Don and Beli, sister of Gwydion (sun). Her husband is Nwyvre (waning heaven or space). A moon goddess, her name signifies silver wheel or circle. She also is universal mother, goddess of birth. Her castle is Corona Borealis (Northern Crown), which, as the home of lost souls, is a purgatory. Although called one of the three blessed or white ladies of Britain, she consents to the fraud of being introduced to Math son of Mathonwy as a virgin after being seduced by her brother. When she steps over the magic rod of Math, used to discover if she is still a maiden, the twin powers of light and darkness drop from her. As she no longer is a maiden Math will not have her as his foot-holder. Furious at losing this place of honor she tosses one son, Dylan, the power of darkness into the sea; the other she refuses to give a name or weapons (both conferred by the mother) until she is tricked into doing so by Gwydion. Gwydion in the disguise of a shoemaker holds her foot while the boy shoots a wren. When he hits it, she exclaims, "The lion aimed with a steady hand." Gwydion accepts the name lion (Llew Llaw) for the boy. The shoe incident reveals a shoe fetish or the magical power of feet, i. e. once he holds her foot Gwydion is able to obtain that which he wishes. This incident compares with the slipper incident in the Cinderella story. When Arianrhod, in revenge, destines that her son never shall marry a mortal, Gwydion aided by Math constructs Blodeuwedd, a bride of flowers for him. Some interpret her name as high fruitful mother (Ar-ri-an) who turns the wheel of heaven. Name related to Ana, Anna, Ariadne. Compare Dechtere, Nana.

ARIEL (1) Masculine and feminine name from the Hebrew meaning lion (lioness) of God. Also interpreted to mean altar. Used symbolically to indicate Jerusalem. (2) In cabalistic demonology one of the seven angels, princes, or spirits presiding over the waters under the leadership of the archangel Michael. (3) In medieval European folklore a spirit of air or water. (4) In Milton's Paradise Lost one of the fallen angels. (5) In Shakespeare's The Tempest a miraculous child and spirit of the air imprisoned by Sycorax. He uses magic to help Prospero. Resembles Gwion.

ARIES Celestial ram; first sign of the zodiac. Constellation in which the sun, about March 21, starts his zodiacal journey each year. Thus symbolic of the birth of new thought or the dawn of a new era. Gate to the first of the four astrological ages. It is a dry, fiery, masculine sign; its quality is fortunate; it is ruled by Mars. Its character trait is impulsiveness, and those born under its sign, being endowed with a violent temper, are apt to come to physical harm or violent death. Its tarot significance is the Magician. Early astrologers identified with Ammon and Zeus. Represented by a ram, its pictorial symbol being a ram's horns. In China third sign of the old zodiac, originally the dog, later the white sheep, opening the way to renewed life. In India represented by a horse. Word identical with Eros, Horus, Uras.

ARIK ANPIN Cabalistic Lesser Countenance. Compares with Thor.

ARIKUTE AND ARICONTE Brazilian primeval twins. Their quarrel brought about the flood in which all perished except the brothers and their wives. After the flood these couples became the parents of the two tribes which perpetually feuded and warred with each other.

ARIMANS Persian god of darkness, death, evil, falsehood, frost, north, snow. Also Ahri-man, which see.

ARIMASPIANS In Greek legend a race of one-eyed, semi-blind men. The Scythians, who were fabled to have taken a hoard of gold which the griffins were guarding. In Greek art shown in Oriental dress.

ARIOCH In Milton's Paradise Lost one of the fallen angels overthrown by Abdiel.

ARIOI In the Society Islands strolling players who flourished in pre-missionary times. Their performances were dedicated to the god Oro to stimulate the fertility of man and nature and ended in sexual orgies. Believed to be the origin of the Hula dance.

ARION (AREION) (1) In Greek legend a poet and musician said, in some accounts, to be the son of Poseidon (sea). Although his harp produced wonderful music (songs of the wind) he failed to charm seamen with whom he was sailing. They robbed him of his harp (wind), and to save his life he jumped into the sea. His song charmed a dolphin which carried him to Corinth. There the seamen were punished and Arion regained his harp. He and the harp (or cithara) have a place among the stars. He is credited with having invented the dithyramb. (2) Fabulous horse said to be the offspring of Poseidon by Demeter, who to escape Poseidon had herself metamorphosed into a mare. In other accounts the offspring of Gaea or a harpy. It possessed power of speech; its feet were those of a man; and its fleetness saved the life of Adrastus in the siege of the Seven Against Thebes.

ARISHIS Probably the original form of Rishis, which see. Signifies Great Bear or Plough Lights. The syllable ar (Irish for plough) is the root of many terms relating to ploughing, as arable, Aryan, etc.

ARISTAEUS In Greek mythology son of Apollo and Cyrene, a water nymph, half-brother of Orpheus, husband of Autonoe, a daughter of Cadmus. An agricultural deity; probably a personification of the cooling Etesian wind which relieves beasts and men during the dog days. He is said to have learned the art of healing from the centaur Chiron. According to Virgil he accidentally caused the death of Eurydice, and the nymphs punished him by destroying his swarm of bees. He appealed to his mother for help, and she instructed him to seize and chain Proteus, old man of the sea. Although Proteus had the power to change his shape Aristaëus captured and bound him (thus the wind binds the sea) and Proteus advised him to sacrifice to the gods. After a penitential offering his bees were restored to him.

ARISTARCH A learned and severe critic, such as Aristarchus of Alexander.

ARISTEAS Greek legendary magician and poet, who continued to appear and disappear for four hundred years, and who visited all the mythical nations of the world. His soul could occupy or abandon his body at will. When not in human form he had the form of a stag. Sometimes called Wandering Jew.

ARISTIDES Masculine name from the Greek, meaning the best made. A 6th century B. C. Athenian statesman and general surnamed The Just, hence any impartial judge.

ARISTIPPUS A student of Socrates and founder of a school at Cyrene of hedonists, thus any advocate of self-indulgence and luxury.

ARISTOBULUS One involved in family intrigues, alluding to Aristobulus who, in 6 B. C., was put to death by Herod.

ARISTOCRACY Pride of blood. Word which resolves into order of Eros, Horus, or Iris. The Italian icon typifies with a mature woman splendidly robed, sitting majestically in a sumptuous chair. She wears a gold crown, holds a bundle of rods in her right hand and in her left a helmet. At her right side is an ax, at her left a purse of gold.

ARISTOGITON One who will fight to his death for his principles, as Aristogiton, a 6th century B. C. Athenian who, with his friend Harmodius, conspired unsuccessfully against the tyrants Hipparchus and Hippias.

ARISTOLOCHUS Occult word for tyrant.

ARISTOPHANES One who dares to satirize his contemporaries, alluding to the 4th century B. C. writer of comedies.

ARISTOTLE Philosopher, scientist, thinker, alluding to the 4th century B. C. Greek philosopher.

Aristotle of China. Tehuhe, 12th century A. D. philosopher called the prince of science.

Aristotle of Christianity.
Saint Thomas Aquinas.

ARISUGAWA One of the two princely families of Japan to which succession passed if the mikado failed to have direct issue. The other family was Fushimi.

ARITHMETIC In medieval art personified by a man counting on his fingers or a woman holding an abacus. On the hem of her robe are the words Par, Impar (even, odd).

ARIZONA Its emblem is a sahuaro cactus; its motto is Ditat Deus (God enriches); its nicknames are Apache and Sunset. A name akin to horizon.

ARJ (RAJ) Word root from the Sanscrit, denoting brilliance or light. Appears in Argeiphontes, argent, Bragi, rajah, and is the source of the Latin rex.

ARJUNA The brave, chivalrous, and generous hero of the Mahabharata. He typifies man's higher impulse struggling against evil. He receives a divine revelation from Krishna and, like the Greek Odysseus, he hits a target to win his bride. A light hero. His brother is Yudhisthira.

ARJUNI Hindu light deity whose name signifies brilliancy of the morning or early day. He is a son of Indra, third of the five Pandavas.

ARK Abode, asylum, church, female principle, holy place, hope, pilgrimage, protection, rebirth, refuge, salvation, sanctuary, secret place, shelter, stronghold, soul, survival, womb. Also exile, flood, tempest, tribulations. Instrument of rebirth and preventer of complete massacre. Frequently constructed by command of the Deity with a little window at the top into which light (divine knowledge) might shine. Place in which the seed of every living kind was saved from deluge; vehicle by which heroes, such as Hirugo, Moses, Perseus, Sargon I, Taliesin, had been saved from murder. Cognate with arch, Argo, Arka. Compare basket, boat, chest, cista, ship; also flood tales, mountain, Noah, Vishnu. In Christian tradition the church, Mary as mother of Jesus. In Hebrew tradition the sacred chest for holding the tables of the law, etc., and called Ark of the Covenant, ark of Noah, ark of the deluge.

Ark and anchor. In Freemasonry a well spent life and well-grounded hope.

Ark of the Covenant. In Hebrew tradition a rectangular box or coffer of wood holding the blossoming rod of Aaron, Book of Laws (Torah), a golden vase holding manna gathered in the wilderness, and the tables of laws written by the hand of God. The most sacred object of the Jews. Before it the Jordan divided and after it the waters flowed again. The lid of the Ark, all gold, was called Mercy Seat, and upon it were two gold cherubim facing each other with outstretched wings and kneeling in prayer.

Ark of the deluge. In Hebrew tradition the ark which Noah constructed in accordance with a command from God, and in which he, his family, and all kinds of living things sailed during the deluge until it came to rest on Mount Ararat. The only light in the vessel was that which came from precious gems. It symbolizes God's covenant with man, survival of the human race.

ARKA (1) Sanscrit hymn of praise. Literally, sun. Cognate with Arcadia, arch, ark. (2) Ancient Phoenician city now in ruins.

ARKANSAS Emblem: the apple-blossom. Motto: Regnant Populi (The People Rule). Nicknames: Bear, Bowie.

ARLES (1) Earnest money; money paid in advance to confirm a pledge, especially the hiring of a servant. (2) In Dante's Inferno an ancient burying ground thought to be filled with the bodies of Christian heroes who had fallen in battle with the Saracens.

ARLETH Masculine name from the Greek, meaning forgetful.

ARLEZ (ARALEZ, JARALEZ) In Armenian mythology one of a class of spirits that restores life to those slain in battle.

ARM (anatomical) Light, ray of the sun. Column or pillar, might, power. In heraldry an industrious person who will labor. Among occultists corresponds to the expression of intellectual faculties in deeds and works; if undeveloped denotes intellectual weakness; if well developed denotes intellectual strength. For weapons see under arms.

Arm curved; love of money; hairless; meanness, revenge; hairy: brazenness, curiosity, dissoluteness; long: bravery, generosity; muscular: hard work; naked: readiness, that which is divested of all interest, hence generosity without hope of receiving anything in exchange; short: dissoluteness, meanness. Arms and shoulders: anatomical denominations governed by Gemini; arms open: communication, welcome; arms, soft and fleshy: idleness, luxury.

ARMADA Fleet sent by Spain against England in 1588 and destroyed by storms; hence any large or strong fleet; also a destructive force doomed by the gods.

ARMAGEDDON (HAR-MAGEDON) In Old Testament place where the battle between the forces of good and evil took place. Any crucial armed conflict. Compares with Ragnarok. Name probably means Mountains of Megiddo.

ARMAIS In Armenian mythology father of Shara, the glutton.

ARMAITI Sanscrit Great Mother; mother of the beneficent goddess Ashi.

ARMAND Masculine name; French form of Herman.

ARMANTEN Feminine name from the French, meaning public spirited.

ARMENAK Eponymous hero of the Armenians. Son of Hayk, father of Ara (Er). Originally a sky god. Probably a duplicate of Aram.

ARMIDA In Tasso's Jerusalem Delivered a beautiful sorceress who lures her lover into voluptuous and wasteful pleasures. Also appears in Gluck and Rossini operas.

Armida's garden. Exquisite luxury.

Armida's girdle. An enchanted girdle, which in beauty and price surpassed her other ornaments; it even surpassed the cestus of Venus. She wore it when she would be loved.

ARMINIUS (HERMAN) German chieftain of the 1st century. He was trained in Rome, became a Roman citizen, and then organized a revolt of the German people against Rome. He crushed the Romans and was himself assassinated in a conspiracy of allied chiefs. He survives in legend and song.

ARMLET In Buddhism Bodhisattva ornament. Compares circle, which see.

ARMOR Chivalry, crusade, knighthood, protection. Also arrogance, bigotry, cruelty, death, destruction, fanaticism, force, pillage, strength, threat, war. The oldest form of body protection in war. In Christian art the Archangel Michael and Saint George are shown in armor. Also an emblem of God. In classical art attributes of Athena and Minerva.

ARMOREL Feminine name from the Latin, meaning stately.

ARMS (weapons) Arrogance, fear, force, fury, protection, revenge, strength, threat, war; also trophies of war. For further symbolism see under individual weapons.

Arms and the man. Any military hero; from the opening phrase in Virgil's Aeneid.

Arms reversed. Death, mourning.

ARMSTRONG, JOHNNIE Sixteenth century leader of a gang of highwaymen. When he appeared before James V of Scotland, and offered to aid in suppressing border marauders, he was seized with all his followers and hung by order of the king. The unjust cruelty with which he was treated became the subject of many ballads.

ARMY Defense, war. Dream significance: (when marching) a great event is coming.

Army of the sky. The stars. Represented on earth by geese (those filled with divine spirit), oxen (the enduring and toiling, especially on behalf of man), and by sheep (the innocent and pure).

ARNOLD Masculine name from Old High German, meaning strong as an eagle. Feminine form Arnolden.

Arnold, Benedict. In United States history, a traitor.

AROHI-ROHI In Maori mythology creator deity. Creator of Ma-riko-riko (Glimmer), the first woman, from the sun's warmth; also created Echo. Name signifies mirage.

ARONDIGHT In medieval legend sword of Sir Lancelot of the Lake.

ARPACANAMANJUSRI (ARPA-CANA) In Buddhism the god of wisdom; a manifestation of Manjusri. Tibetan name Jam-pa-i-dbyans or Jam-pe-yang.

ARPHAXAD In Old Testament a descendant of Noah. He was born two years after the flood, lived for 428 years, was an ancestor of Abraham, and lived to see the settlement of Abraham in the land of promise.

ARRIA A devoted and faithful wife. Her husband, Caecina Paetus, was condemned to death for conspiracy against the emperor Claudius. Rather than survive him she stabbed herself, and then handed him the dagger, saying, "Paetus, it doesn't hurt."

ARROGANCE In an Italian icon personified by a woman with the ears of an ass in a green garment. She holds a peacock, extends her right arm, and points her finger.

ARROW Divine judgment, fertility, hunting, lightning, love, phallus, rain, ray of sun or moon, sleet, swiftness, thunderbolt, wind. Also bitter and deceitful words, death, enemy, famine, martyrdom, pain, plague, sudden calamity, suffering, war. In mythology an instrument of the creator deity, the moon deity, the sun god, and the creator god. Implement of diviners; also of the wicked. When in the hands of mythological heroes, whether intended as lightning, light ray, thunderbolt, or wind, it never fails to hit that at which it is aimed. In heraldry typifies avengement, martial readiness. Zodiacal emblem of Sagittarius, the Archer or Centaur. In English arrow originally was arewe (light of Ewe); in Greek antiquity, terms were: belos (light of Bel), ios (light of the One), and tox-euma (resplendent great light of Solar A); in Zend, ishu (light of Hu). Related to arcus, Latin for bow; ark; and arvan, Sanscrit for horse, implying speed. Compare claw, hammer, rod, sara. Among American Indians the Algonquin clan believed trees were formed from the arrows shot into the soil by Michabo, giant rabbit creator. The Siouans believed it was a talisman which protected horses from magpies. In Christianity an emblem of Saint George and an instrument of martyrdom.

Arrow and bow. Lingam-yoni, male-female principles.

Arrow and cross. In Christian tradition, affliction.

Arrow and horseshoe framed. Lingam-yoni, male-female principles, cohabitation.

Arrow chain. In Oceanic mythology ladder to the sky. A legendary hero tossed a spear or arrow into the atmosphere, then another, and another, each sticking to the butt of the one before it. By climbing the magic chain a fugitive hero made his escape to heaven.

Arrow, divining. In Buddhism bound with five colors and used in demon worship, especially in Tibet, where it is called dah-dar.

Arrow fire. In Christianity purification from lust.

Arrowhead. Chief, divine being, god; also avengement, bravery, martial readiness, prowess. In Europe believed to be the product of elves and called elf-shoots or fairy weapons. Talisman against disease and the evil eye. In Japan thought to have been dropped by flying spirits or to have been rained from heaven.

Arrow of Apollo. Sun ray.

Arrow of Artemis. Moon ray.

Arrow of Azrael. Death.

Arrow of Cupid (or Eros)

Love.

Arrow shooting at husk bundles.

Among Hopi Indians symbolic of lightning striking corn fields. Practiced in fertility and rain rites. Sex symbol of cohabitation.

ARSA Syrian name of Rusa, a mother and fate goddess. Also the evening star, identifying her with Venus.

ARSAN-DUOLAI In Yakut belief the evil prince, ruler of the dead. His mouth is in his forehead and his eyes are at his temples. He devours souls. His abode is in the north, where he is assisted by Abasy.

ARSAPHES Greek name for the Egyptian deity Hershef. Identified with Heracles.

ARSENIUS Masculine name from the Greek, meaning energetic, mighty man.

ARSINOE In Greek legendary history: (1) mother of Ptolemy I of Egypt, concubine of Philip of Macedon. (2) Sister and wife of Ptolemy IV by whom she was put to death. (3) In Greek mythology daughter of Phegeus, king of Psophis. Wife of Alcmaeon, who deserted her and who then was killed by her brothers. When Arsinoe reproached them, they accused her of the murder, and she was put to death. See Alcmaeon. (4) In Moliere's Le Misanthrope a woman whose advancing age and ugliness force her to give up expecting the admiration of men, and who assumes a hypocritical and prudish piety.

AR-SOGHOTCH Literally, lonely man. In Yakut mythology the first man. His father is the heaven god Ar-tojon and his mother is Kybai-khotun. He is the progenitor of the human race and dwells next to the Zambu, the tree of life which gives him nourishment.

ART (1) Personified by a man or woman wearing a smock and a beret, holding a palette, or by a nude youth with the attributes of Apollo. Also personified by an attractive woman in a green gown carrying an engraving tool, a hammer, and a pencil in her left hand; her right hand supports a vine. Acanthus and bay leaves, maulstick and palette with brushes thrust through the thumb hole also represent art. (2) In the second cycle of Irish legend the 'Lonely' king of Tara. While he was still a prince, his stepmother Becuma demanded his banishment. He challenged her to a game of chess to decide which was to go, and he won. Father of Cormac.

ARTAVAZD In Armenian mythology an unfilial son. He is chained in a cave. If he escapes he will destroy the world, so blacksmiths strike their hammers every day to prevent him from breaking loose. He parallels Loki.

ARTA VIRAF A wise and virtuous Mazdean who visited the other world and returned.

ARTAXERXES III Fourth century B. C. king of Persia. After a reign marked by great cruelty he was slain by a eunuch.

ARTEGAL (SIR ARTHEGAL) (1) Personifies justice in Spenser's Faerie Queene. (2) See Elidure.

ARTEMAS Masculine name from the Greek, meaning gift of Artemis.

ARTEMIS In Greek mythology daughter of Zeus (day sky) and Leto (night), twin sister of Apollo. The birthplace of the twins usually is given as Delos, the bright land, the East, land of the rising sun, where Leto fled to escape the jealous wrath of Hera. In some legends the land of their birth is Ortygia, land of the quail, earliest bird of spring, hence land of spring or morning or rising light. Artemis is a moon goddess, virgin of the hunt, protectress of maidens. She is mistress of wild life and vegetation. Although a virgin, unmoved by love, she is patroness of marriage and childbirth, expediting the delivery of women. Her primeval functions are two: giver and protectress of life and destroyer of life. She is invoked for a happy old age and wealth. Young women who wish to marry sacrifice hair to her. She is protectress of travelers and heals snake bites as well as diseases. However in Galatia she wanders with demons in a forest at midday, tormenting to death those whom she meets. She is said to cause madness, and women who die a sudden but peaceful death are said to be victims of her swift arrows. She kills her lover Orion and changes Actaeon into a stag for discovering her as she bathes naked in a pool. Like her brother Apollo, she delights in song and she destroys a monster, i. e. Tityus, who attempts to violate her mother (in some versions Apollo is the slayer). With Apollo she kills the children of Niobe, who insulted her mother. Her hounds, her constant companions, are gifts from Pan, wind god. Her favorite abode and hunting ground is the mountain Taygetus. She is able to change her shape into that of any of the animals sacred to her, also into that of a tree. As a fig tree she has many breasts, thus typifies her role of nourisher. As a shape-changer she flees from Alpheus (river deity) and to escape him she throws herself into the sea and assumes a mermaid or fish form. She is rescued and carried by fishermen to Aegina, where as Aphaea she is worshiped in fish form. In fish form also known as Atergatis and Dictynna. When Britomartis flees from Minos, Britomartis is said to be another name for Artemis. These myths of flight resemble Daphne's flight from Apollo. The Maenads are the attendants of Artemis; her priestesses take vows of celibacy.

With the title: Agrotera, she is protectress of young, healer, and purifier, punishing with sudden death those who offend her; Arcadian, she is chaste huntress and goddess of nymphs, with no association with Apollo; Brauronian, she is goddess of the chase, identified with the bear, and a deity with the rites of human sacrifice; Caryotis, she is a tree goddess of healing and inspiration. As Ephesian, probably derived from an ancient Persian divinity called Metra (by Greeks Anaitis), she is the love which penetrates everywhere and is present in the realm of shades. Her temple at Ephesus in Asia Minor was ranked among the seven wonders of the world. The interior contained 127 columns, each 60 feet high and each placed by a different king. Her statue with many breasts was of ebony, with lions on her arms and turrets on her head. As Meleagrian she is a huntress of members, probably a disease demon, especially leprosy, which devours members of the body.

As Taurian, she is the goddess to whom all strangers tossed on to the coast of Tauris are sacrificed, a rite intended to protect the purity of her followers. The Taurian Artemis rescued Iphigenia from the sacrificial fire and carried her off to the temple at Tauris to perform the sacrificial rites on strangers. Some make Artemis and Iphigenia one and the same. Tauropos is her title as fertility goddess, identified with bulls, and she is Trivia as goddess of crossways.

Artemis was Christianized as Saint Artemidos. Her attributes are: bow and arrow, crescent moon, fig tree, laurel, palm tree, torch. Her sacred animals are: bear, bee, boar, bull, deer, fish, guinea-fowl, hare, hind, hound, leopard, lion, partridge, quail, stag, swallow. She loaths the eagle, which preys on earth. In Welsh 'art' means bear, and in mythology she is associated with the she-bear. In early art shown with spreading wings holding a lion or two lions. Later shown as a young huntress, austere, beautiful, stately, in a short tunic with bow and arrow, followed by her dogs, or as a goddess of the moon in flowing robes and veiled face. Sometimes portrayed with three heads, that of a boar, dog, and horse, or as being drawn by two harts or by four stags with golden antlers. When three-headed identified with Hecate. She is identified with the High Priestess of the tarot deck and with Anahita, Astarte, Atargatis, Bendis, Diana, Mayauel, and Selene.

ARTEMISIA (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning healthy. (2) A 5th century B. C. queen of Halicarnassus in Asia Minor, reputed to have shown great bravery and skill in battle.

Artemisia leaf. In Buddhism

one of the eight precious things, typifies good luck. In China called ai-yeh, emblem of learned men; symbolic of felicity and healing.

ARTHUR (ART, ARTIE) (1) Masculine name, probably from Artorius, a Roman and Etruscan family name; also from the Celtic, meaning admirable, high, marvelous, noble. (2) In Brythonic legend, a sun and agricultural hero. Son of Uther Pendragon and Igerna, wife of Gorlois. Born at Tintagel Castle. He was an exposed child found by Merlin (darkness), and delivered to Sir Ector, whose wife nursed him. By drawing the miraculous sword Excalibur from a rock he proved his right to the throne of England. In early versions he marries three times, each wife having the name Gwynhwyvar. In later romances his wife is Guinevere, who brings him the Round Table (earth's fertility) as a wedding gift. He is father-uncle of his sister's son Mordred. Warned that he will be destroyed by a child born on May Day, he orders all children born on that day set adrift. Mordred is miraculously saved. Arthur also is said to be father-uncle to Gawain. Arthur hunts the fabulous boar Troit or Twrch Trwyth (famine), kills the demon Cat of Losanne (evil), slays various giants, and fights off twelve Anglo-Saxon invasions (suggesting the labors of the sun in the twelve houses of the zodiac). In his ship Prydwyn he sails to Annwfn (otherworld), where he releases Sir Gweir (light) and steals the caldron of inspiration (earth's fertility). He makes an unsuccessful trip into the underworld, where he is shut up in the bone prison Oeth and Anoeth until rescued by Goreu, thus typifying the delivery of fertility from the underworld. As one spotlessly pure the Sangraal, vessel of plenty, appears in connection with the Round Table. His marvelous hound is Cabal. In his absence Mordred usurps his throne and seduces Guinevere (a light-darkness-dawn myth). In later versions Guinevere is guilty of an amour with Meliagrance and with Lancelot. Arthur's sister Morgan Le Fay steals the sheath of Excalibur and weakens Arthur so that at Camlan, while battling Mordred, he is mortally wounded. Thus the prophecy of destruction of the sun god by his son is fulfilled. He is borne in a barge (sun ship) steered by three Matres (Fates), who take him to Avalon to sleep in the care of Morgan Le Fay until such time as he shall again be called upon to wake and serve Britain. In one episode Arthur journeys to Sicily where he lives in the dark depths of Mount Etna, thus presenting him as a chthonian deity. In a 12th century mosaic he is depicted as a dwarf astride a goat, and folklore of that period conceived the king of subterranean realms as a dwarf on a goat. In another tradition he lives in the form of a bird. His name, sometimes interpreted to mean ploughman, making him divine instructor of agriculture, is identified with that of Arcturus and Arctus, is cognate with Aether, author, Hathor, and sometimes is spelled Athur. Arthur as a brave and noble king, a heroic warrior, just ruler, slayer of monsters, with a vulnerability and a fair and unfaithful wife, resembles Achilles, Agamemnon, Bran, Cuchulainn, Llew Llaw, Saint George, Sigurd, and other heroes.

Arthur's cloak. A cloak of poison sent to King Arthur by Morgan Le Fay in an attempt to kill him that she might present his sword to her lover Sir Accolon, whom she desired to make king of England. Arthur tells the messenger to try it on that he may see it; when the messenger does, he is burnt to a cinder. Cloak resembling the robe Medea sent to her rival.

ARTIFICE In an Italian icon typified by a mature man in an embroidered robe. One hand points to a hive of bees, the other is on a screw of perpetual motion.

ARTINIS Sun god of ancient Urtians.

ARTIO Celtic bear goddess. May be akin to Artorius.

AR-TOJON Yakut high lord of heaven; father by Kybai-khotun of Ar-soghotch.

ARTORIOUS Celtic god equated with Mercury in Gaul. May be akin to Artio.

ARUM BLOSSOM Symbol of ardor, soul.

ARUNA In Hinduism the dawn. Charioteer of the chariot drawn by seven horses which Surya, sun god, rides. His color is red and his name means ruddy. Brother of Garuda, steed of Vishnu.

ARUNS THE ETRUSCAN Soothsayer of Caesar's time.

ARURU Sumerian earth goddess, virgin mother. Her brother-lover was Enlil. Her husband-son was Lil (Nesu). She created man from clay; among those created were Eabani and Gilgamesh. She also was a messenger of the gods. At Sippar she was worshipped with Merodach as creator of the seed of animals and man. Also called Mami; resembled Bau, Belit-ilani, Gula, Ishtar, Ninhursag, Nintud.

ARUSHA Hindu god of the rising sun; portrayed as a small child.

ARUSHI In Hinduism horses of Surya, the sun.

ARUSYAK One of the seven chief deities of the Armenians. Mistress of Vahagn, her temple was known as Vahagn's chamber. A love goddess corresponding to Venus. Name signifies little bride or little star.

ARVAD Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning wanderer.

ARVAK AND ALSVID (AARVAK AND ALSVINN) In Norse mythology steeds of Sol, the sun. Names signify early dawn and scorching heat respectively. In Icelandic Ar (early) + vak (awake); Al (all) + svid (strong).

ARVIN Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning a friend of the people.

ARYAJANGULITARA In Buddhism a form of the white Tara. Her emblems are the naga (serpent) and vina (lute).

ARYAMAN In Hinduism an Aditya, an aspect of the sun. The bosom friend, the comrade, wooer of maidens.

ARYAN (ARIAN) Mysterious ancestors from whom most modern races claim descent and who supposedly were a beneficent or peaceful people. From the Sanskrit term arya, meaning excellent, honorable, noble, and related to the root ar, connected with plowing.

ARYAVALOKITESVARA In Buddhism fourth Bodhisattva. The Merciful Lord, he occupies the center of an eight-petaled lotus. The great compassionate one of eleven faces and 1,000 hands. He had worked a long time for the salvation of mankind; finally he saw the hills open and his head split. Buddha Amita formed ten heads from the pieces and placed his own as the eleventh. In Tibet called Tugje-ch'en-po-bcu-gc-ig-shal-pyan-ston.

ARYUPUTRA In The Heifer of the Dawn, Hindu version of the Cinderella story, heart-broken, woman-hating king who succumbs to Madhupamanjari.

ASA (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning healer, physician. (2) In the Bible brother of Rehoboam. After ascending the throne he swept away the idols of his brother and deposed his queen-mother Maachah because she made a miphletzeth (phallic idol to an Asherah or Asharim, i.e. grove). His reign was prosperous and happy as a whole, but he was condemned for consulting physicians when he contracted a disease of the feet instead of having recourse to God. Because of his virtuous life his death bed was filled with sweet odors. Also Asha. Compare Jehoram. (3) In Norse mythology singular of Aesir, the children of Bure. Any one of the gods who dwelt in Asgard (heaven) in contradistinction to the Van (Vanir), who dwelt in Vanaheim (sea); thus a member of one of the two principal races of gods.

ASAHEIM See Asgard.

ASAHEL In Old Testament a hero extremely swift of foot.

Nephew of David and one of David's thirty heroes. Slain by Abner in self-defense, but his death was avenged by his brother Joab, who slew Abner.

ASAKKU In Babylonian mythology primeval dragon and plague demon in the train of Tiamat. Probably represents a cyclone.

ASAMA Sacred Japanese volcano. Name related to Somma, a peak of Mount Vesuvius, and Zuma, Egyptian pyramid.

ASANA (1) In Buddhism symbolic sitting or standing position on a mount. Compare mudra, vahana. They are: Alidhasana - standing, stepping to the left, right leg straight, left leg bent, attitude of drawing the bow. Position of Dakinis, Kurukulla, Yidam. Ardhaparyankasana - dancing, standing on one foot, other foot lifted. Position of Dakinis. Bhadrasana - both legs pendant; position of Maitreya. Dhyanasana meditative pose, legs closely locked, both soles visible. Position of all Buddhas; also called vajrasana or vajraparyankasana. Lalitasana - one leg pendant, sometimes supported by lotus. Other leg in position of a Buddha. Position of Green Tara, Manjusri. Pratyalidhasana - standing, stepping to right, right leg bent, left straight. Position of Hevajra, Kalacakra. Rajalilasana - royal ease, right knee raised, left leg in usual position of a Buddha, right arm hanging loosely over right knee. Position of Avalokitesvara, Manjusri. Sattvasana - legs loosely locked, soles of feet visible. Position of some Bodhisattvas. Yab-Yum (Tibetan) - sitting or standing. A deity in the embrace of his female energy or sakti. Position of Dhyani-buddhas, Yidam. (2) In Hinduism the small pile rug upon which Hindus kneel when praying.

ASANO In Japanese legend commanded to commit hara kiri after attacking Kira Kotosuki-no-suke. His death was avenged when the forty-seven ronin, the samurai attached to his court, beheaded Kotosuke-no-suke. See Forty-seven ronin.

ASAN-SAGAN-TENGERI Mongolian thunder god who fights evil spirits with his fiery arrow.

ASAPH (1) Masculine Hebrew name meaning assembler, gatherer. (2) In Old Testament a celebrated musician and seer at David's court. His name is prefixed to twelve psalms. (3) In Persian mythology a keeper of forests.

ASAR (ASIR) In Egyptian mythology an early form of the name Osiris. Related to Assyrian Assur (God); Babylonian Asari (title of Marduk); Hebrew Azur (He who assists); Norse Aesir (Gods); Persian Sire (God); Turkish Esar (God); and azure (sky blue).

Asar-Hapi. United souls of Osiris and Apis after death. Serapis, god of infernal regions.

ASARI In Babylonian mythology an appellation of Marduk, the young steer (sun) of the day. Introducer of agriculture. Name related to Asar.

ASCALABUS In Greek mythology transformed by Demeter into a water newt when he mocked her as she drank from a fountain.

ASCALAPHUS In Greek mythology son of Acheron and Orphne. An inhabitant of the underworld, he saw Persephone partake of pomegranate seeds and revealed her secret. In revenge Demeter, Persephone's mother, turned him into an owl.

ASCALON Sword of Saint George, patron saint of England. Compares with Excalibur.

ASCANIUS In Roman legend son of Aeneas. He escaped with his father from Troy and accompanied him to Italy. Later Ascanius built the city of Alba Longa, and ruled over the kingdom his father had secured.

ASCAPART Legendary giant who stood thirty feet high with a twelve inch space between his eyes. His effigy may be seen on the city gates of Southampton, England.

ASCAROTH Mystic demon of spies and informers.

ASCENSION DAY In Christian tradition the fortieth day after Easter, when the sun reaches its highest point, commemorating the ascension of Christ after his resurrection. Holy Thursday. Corresponds to pagan spring fertility festivals. Symbolized by an eagle.

ASCENT OF MOUNT CARMEL By Saint John regarded the active way of purgation. Compare dark night.

ASCLEPIAS BLOSSOM Sentiment: sorrowful remembrance. Said to cure heartaches.

ASCLEPIUS (ASKLEPIOS) In Greek mythology deity of healing, and an aspect of the sun as healer. His mother was the virgin Coronis (dawn), who was seduced by Apollo (sun). Sometimes Arsinoe is given as the name of his mother. Coronis fell in love with an Acadian youth named Ischys (strength), and Apollo in a jealous rage directed Artemis to slay her with a thunderbolt.

From the body of Coronis on the funeral pyre Apollo rescued his unborn child, Asclepius (dawn cannot survive the birth of the sun). In one version Apollo neglected his son and left him exposed on Mount Titthion (nipple), where he was discovered by the radiance that surrounded him. He was guarded by a dog until rescued by the goatherd Ares-thanas, who called him Aiglaer (shiner). In another account Apollo gave him to the care of the Centaur Chiron, who taught Asclepius the art of using herbs in healing. In still another legend Hermes snatched the infant from the flames of the funeral pyre. Renowned as healer, Asclepius raised Galucus, son of Sisyphus, and Hippolytus, son of Theseus, and others from the dead. Either because Hades complained that his underworld kingdom would be left desolate or because Zeus feared that man might conquer death altogether, Asclepius was slain. Apollo was so overcome by this tragedy he wandered over the land of the Hyperboreans and shed tears of gold. At Apollo's request Asclepius was placed in the heavens as the constellation Ophiuchus (serpent-bearer). His daughters were Hygeia (health) and Panacea (all-healing), and his sons were Machaon and Podalirius, physicians, who accompanied Agamemnon to the Trojan war. Asclepius, himself, accompanied the Argonauts. His shrines were invariably located at health resorts, on hills near springs. His chief seat of worship was at Epidaurus, where he supposedly was conceived. He usually is portrayed as a bearded old man with a dog and a staff around which twine healing or oracular serpents, and he is attended by priests devoted to medicine and surgery. He sometimes is represented as a serpent. At Cos the cypress tree was worshiped and preserved in his name. Other attributes are: cock, herb, mixing bowl, pineapple. Resembles Aswiculapa, Ningishzida. His Roman counterpart is Aesculapius.

Asclepian. Health resort, sanatorium.

ASDENTE In Dante's Inferno a poor cobbler of Parma well-known as a prophet.

ASE Mother of a wayward hero in Ibsen's Peer Gynt.

ASFANDUJAR (ASPANDIYAR, ISFENDIYAR) Hero in the Zoroastrian epic Shahnamah. He engages in seven perilous adventures and finally conquers a demon king. Compares Heracles.

ASGARD (ASAHEIM) Norse heaven, garden of light, abode of the Aesir, mansion of heroes slain in battle. Realm of gold and silver palaces which stand on an island in the river which flows from the vapors that rise from Hvergelmer through the branches of Yggdrasil (world tree). Connected with Midgard (earth) by the bridge Bifrost (rainbow). One of the nine Norse worlds; among its regions were Gladshheim, Valaskjalf, Valhalla, Vingolf, Ydalir. The name yields As (God) + gardhr (yard), and is cognate Esther. Compares with Olympus.

ASGAUT Masculine name from the Norwegian, meaning divine good.

ASGAYA GIGAGEI Androgynous thunder god of the Cherokee.

ASGRIM Masculine name from the Icelandic, meaning divine wrath.

ASH (AISH, AS, ES, ESH, ESSE) December 27 birthday flower with the sentiment of grandeur, prudence. In the language of flowers: With me you are safe. Symbolic of adaptability, flexibility, modesty, nobility. Tree of good omen. Emblem of fire and man. Anciently typified the Divine or Great Spirit. Ancients believed the ash possessed magical powers which averted the evil eye, and cured rupture and serpent stings. Currently used as a charm against drowning and believed to have power over the sea, for which reason oars are made from it. Its cruelty lies in its harmfulness to corn and grass; its roots strangle those of other trees. In middle ages looked upon as a cross. Icelandic for ash is askr (blaze of the Great Fire); Latin is fraxinus (great firelight); Lithuanian is asis (Isis). In Scotland it is called rowan (one A), cognate with rhododendron. The five magic trees whose fall in medieval poetry symbolized the triumph of Christianity over paganism were ash trees. In the druidic tree alphabet, tree of Nion (N), the third consonant. The third or ash month in the druidic calendar was a wet or flood month, extending from February 19 to March 18. The tree was sacred to Gwydion and was his steed in the Battle of Trees. In Greek mythology the magical spear which Chiron gave to Peleus was made of ash. Sacred to Ares and Poseidon, and tree from which sprang one of the races of men. According to Hesiod it sprang from the blood of Uranus when Cronus castrated him. In Norse mythology a tree of life; called Yggdrasil. Typified All-Father, especially the mountain ash, by reason of the 'fructifying honey-dew' scattered over the tree in red clusters. It was Odin's steed and Odin's gallows; also Thor's helper. Under it justice was dispensed. According to the Edda the whole human race sprang from the ash and elm, Askr the man from the ash; Embla the woman from the elm.

Ash staff. In China carried when in mourning for a father.

Ash worshipers. Fire worshipers.

ASHA (ASHA-VAHISTA) In the Avestas an Amesha Spenta or archangel which, in the moral sphere, presides over righteousness and, in the material sphere, is the spirit of fire. Fate, justice. Also called Ardabahist and Arta. Compares with Dzajaga, Kaba, Moira, Norns, Tien-ming.

ASHDAR (ASDAR, ASHTAR) Abyssinian mother goddess. Mother-sister-wife of Tammuz. Identified with the morning star (Venus). Identical with Asherah, Ashtoreth, Athtar.

ASHER (ASSHER) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning fortunate, happy, straight, strong. (2) Eighth son of Jacob, founder of one of the twelve tribes of Israel and guardian of the zodiacal house Virgo. Tribe symbolized with an olive branch.

ASHERAH (ASHERAH) (1) In Old Testament male symbol, phallus. Used in Baal worship, especially in rites associated with Ashtoreth. Sometimes consisted of multiple phallai, of which the branch carried by Assyrian priests is a conventional form. Also typified by an upright pole or stem answering symbolically to Maypole. A mystic palm tree, tree of life. Asherim, plural form, also meant grove, where Asherah, Semitic love goddess, was worshiped in orgiastic rites. Also called tamar. Compares with daikoku-bashira. Identical with Greek phoenix (date palm), rod of Aaron, and rod of Jesse. (2) Canaanite goddess, female counterpart of Baal. Female star of fortune, the planet Venus, deity of fertility, love, and reproduction. Public prostitutes of both sexes were consecrated to her. Her emblem was a sacred tree or wooden pillar representing the phallus of Baal or the tree image of the goddess as nourisher. Another image for her was an oval figure or altar, a miphletzeth (sun or vulva), the doorway whence life issued to the world. Identical with Astarte, Beltis, Ishtar.

ASHES Bad tidings, bereavement, death, fear, fire, goods destroyed, hopelessness, humility, loss, passion burned out, penitence, repentance, ruins, shortness of life, spiritual medicine. External sign of grief or sin; probably the first ashes used were those of the burned body of one deceased. In China the ashes of religious texts or of yellow paper strips on which a Chinese character or idol has been painted in red or black, mixed with tea or hot water, are swallowed to ward off evil spirits. In ancient Hebrew ceremonial purification the ashes of a red heifer were used, and in Hebrew literature often associated with sackcloth. Sprinkled on bridegroom in marriage ceremony to remind him of the destruction of Jerusalem. In funerals a mark of grief, humiliation, and submission, equivalent to the sprinkling of dust.

ASHI In Sanscrit literature daughter of Armaiti, the Great Mother. Her function was to pass between earth and heaven and bring heavenly wisdom to mankind. The Sanscrit syllables A-si are the equivalent of the Hebrew Jah (Yah) and mean to throw out; they also yield Fire of A, i. e. Fire of the First One.

A-SHIH (AJITA, ASITA, ATZUTA) In Chinese Buddhism one of the eighteen lohan. He is portrayed as a very ancient seer with long eyebrows seated on a rock in deep meditation, nursing his right knee and holding a bamboo rod. He sometimes is said to be a reincarnation of Maitreya Buddha, but according to the religious system of Shakyamuni this could not be.

ASHIMA (1) Syrian fate goddess. Identified with Seimia, Shimti. (2) A deity of the people of Hamath in Samaria, resembling Pan.

ASHIM-BETHEL (ASHIMA-BAETYLE) Father-mother deity worshiped by Aramaic speaking Jews in ancient Egypt. By a 5th century B. C. cult identified with Anatha Baetyl, a lioness deity, and worshiped as a wife of Jehovah. In Greek inscriptions called Symbetylos.

ASHI-NADZU-CHI In Japanese mythology earth deity, father of Kushi-nada-hime, rice goddess.

ASHIWANNI Zuni rain priests. From Shiwanni, deity of the netherworld, who created the stars.

ASHIWI Zuni beings who were the first inhabitants of this earth. They had long ears and tails, web feet, and were covered with moss. Kiaklo, a culture hero, visited Pautiwa, lord of the dead, and returned to the Ashiwi to advise them of the coming of the gods with the breath of life so that after death they might dance at the house of Kothluwalawa before proceeding to the underworld from which they had emerged.

ASHLAR, PERFECT OR POLISHED In Freemasonry man educated, purified, and restrained.

Ashlar, rough. Man in his natural state, ignorant, uncultivated, vicious.

ASHMEDAI (ASHMADAI) In Hebrew mythology a demon king who visited heaven daily to learn the fate of human beings.

ASHMODEL Mystic destroyer of God.

ASHNAN Sumerian grain goddess.

ASHO-ZUSHTA Persian bird which frightens away demons by reciting the Avesta. When the nails of a faithful Zoroastrian are cut he must dedicate the parings to Asho-zushta. If the recital makes the Mazainyan demons tremble they do not take up the parings, but, if the parings have no spell uttered over them, the fiends use them for arrows with which to kill Asho-zushta. Probably a theological name for the owl.

ASHPENAZ In Old Testament chief of the eunuchs of Nebuchadnezzar into whose care Daniel and his kinsmen were committed and who showed them favors at his own peril.

ASHTART Identical with Astarte, which see.

ASHTORETH Identical with Astarte, which see.

ASHURA (ASURA) (1) Japanese god who is king of Ashura, land of punishment, where those who die fostering angry thoughts descend. Portrayed as a huge god forever hungry and quarrelsome. Stands for cruelty, meanness, misery, wickedness. Also the furious spirits, arrogant and cruel, which are more powerful than the Gaki (hungry spirits). They are the reborn spirits of those killed in battle; eager for revenge they hover in the sky fighting among themselves or attacking human beings. (2) Tenth day of Muharram, a Mohammedan fast day. On this day Adam and Eve, heaven and hell, life and death, fate and the pen, supposedly were created.

ASHURBANIPAL Descendant of Sargon II. A prophecy that the 'bloody city,' Nineveh, where Sennacherib had built the first aqueduct, would become a dry waste, came true with the death of Ashurbanipal. He became a deified king.

ASHURNASIRPAL Assyrian emperor. Cruel and boastful, for propaganda purposes, he recorded his atrocities in sculpture and writing.

ASH WEDNESDAY First day of Lent, on which begins a period of humility. Ashes are sprinkled on the heads of penitents. Originally a fire festival in connection with Woden's (Odin's) sacred tree, the Yggdrasil.

ASI In Hinduism the sword born from the sacrifice of Brahma to protect the gods and given by Brahma to Rudra, who in turn gave it to Vishnu. Vishnu gave it to Marici, who gave it to the seers, whence Vasava received it.

Then it went to the world guardians, and from them to Manu, first man, in the shape of the law.

ASIA (1) One of the four corners of the world. The largest continent. Symbolized by a camel or an elephant. Personified by a woman dressed as an odalisque reclining under a palm tree. Also shown as a woman in jeweled robes or as a woman crowned with fruits and flowers, wearing an embroidered gown and holding branches of cassia, pepper, and cloves in one hand, and a smoking censor in the other; a camel on its knees is beside her. (2) In Greek mythology one of the Oceanides, usually said to be the wife of Iapetus and mother of Prometheus. (3) In the Koran the wife of the Pharaoh who brought up Moses. She was tortured for believing in Moses and was taken alive to Paradise. Mohammed places her among the four perfect women.

ASIANI (ASII) A legendary fair-haired people who dwelt in the land between Oghuzland (land of plunderers and destroyers) and Airyano Vaejo (earthly paradise). Also called Wusuns.

ASINARII Worshipers of the ass. A nickname originally given to the Jews, later to early Christians.

ASITA In Buddhism an old man who hears of the birth of a child and worships it. He realizes he must die before things he foresees will come to pass. His story parallels that of Simon.

ASKEFRUER Literally, ask-nymphs. Danish forest spirits endowed with occult powers. In beneficent aspect they cure diseases.

ASKENAZIM Northern Jews, Jews of Germany, Poland, and Russia, as distinguished from the Sephardim, Jews of Portugal and Spain. Said to be descendants of Japheth.

ASKR (ASK) In Norse mythology the first man, created from an ash tree. Odin gave him a soul, Hoenir gave him motion and the senses, Loki gave him blood. His wife, the first woman, was Embla. Askr and Embla compare with Adam and Eve. Askr resolves into as-ak-ur, yielding light or essence of the great light. Askr Yggdrasil. Same as Yggdrasil; the ash which was the steed of Ygg (Odin).

ASLOG (ASLAUG) In Norse mythology the daughter of Sigurd and Brynhild. The last of the Vol-sungs to descend from Odin. By Brynhild she was placed in the care of Heimer, the husband of Baenkchild, Brynhild's sister. After the killing of Sigurd and the death of Brynhild, Heimer, fearing vengeance, fled to Norway with his charge, hiding her and her treasure in a harp, indicating he was a wind or air spirit. Peasants discovered his secret, killed him, and made a menial of Aslog, calling her Krake (Crow). She was rescued by Ragnar Lodbrog, who married her. By him she had two sons Ingvar and Ubbe, said to be historic persons. She thus was the link between the gods and Norse kings.

ASMEGIR In Norse mythology spirits of Hela with whom Balder dwelt.

ASMODEUS (ASMODAEUS) In Jewish demonology: (1) an evil spirit who caused men to be unfaithful, who plotted against the newly married, and who wasted the beauty of virgins. (2) Female spirit of lust, born of the fallen angels Shamdon and Naa-mah. Beautiful sister of Tubal-Cain.

ASMUND AND ASVITUS In Norse legend two friends who vowed to die together. Asvitus died first and Asmund was buried alive with him. Soon after the barrow was broken open and Asmund emerged bleeding for the spirit of Asvitus had attacked him. A light myth; the sun bleeds as it rises.

ASOGWE In Dahomean (West African) cult the rattle used to summon the gods.

ASOKA Buddhist non-tantric symbol; a red flower with small jagged leaves. Emblem of Kurukulla and Marici.

ASP Solar emblem; that which kills the moment it strikes. Word resolving into as-pe, i. e. light father. Typifies Christian faith. In Egyptian mythology power and royalty. Emblem of solar gods, symbolizing the hissing, seething sun heat. Described as the sun's eye, also the moon's. In Greek antiquity revered as a protective or benevolent power.

Asp's head. Ready to strike, defense.

ASPASIA (PASIA) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning welcome, winsome. (2) In 5th century B. C. Athens a courtesan, mistress of Pericles, noted for her beauty, learning, and wit. Her house was a great intellectual and literary center; hence a cultured and fascinating courtesan.

ASPEN Excessive sensibility, fear, alluding to the quivering of its leaves. Lamentation, scandal. In Christian tradition a tree of mourning, pride, and sinful arrogance. According to a legend the cross was made of aspen wood and thereafter the aspen trembled.

ASPERGES In Roman Catholic rites the sprinkling of the altar, clergy, and people with holy water before mass on Sunday. The anthem sung by priests performing this rite. The vessel used for sprinkling the holy water. Symbolic of holiness, purity. Exorcism, expulsion of evil. Emblem of Saint Aignan.

Aspergillum (Aspergillum). Brush used for sprinkling holy water, symbolic of holiness, purification.

ASPHODEL July 13 birthday flower with the sentiment memorial sorrow. In the language of flowers: My regrets follow you to the grave. Symbol of death, eternity. Dedicated to Virgin Mary. In Greek mythology a flower which formed a couch for Zeus and Hera; also a flower of death which grew in Hades.

Asphodel meadows. In Greek mythology, meadows in Hades, where those, who during their lives had been neither distinguished by virtue nor vice, were sentenced to a monotonous joyless existence.

ASPHYXIA Dream significance: warning of asthma.

ASPIRATES (OR BREATHINGS) The creative element, the soul or spirit. Wind deities.

ASROFIL In Islam the angel who will announce the last judgement.

ASS Hatred, humility, ignobility, ignorance, lack of dignity, lowliness, lust, patience, power to serve, stubbornness, sobriety, sure-footedness. Animal governing the zodiacal sign Leo. In Buddhism austerity and humiliation. Sacred animal of Christ. In Egyptian mythology a form of the sun god (growth); also a form of Set or Typhon (destroyer). Symbolic of material life, stupidity, and violence. Among Hebrews of antiquity typified peace and salvation. Sacred animal of judges, kings, and prophets.

Ass ears. Ears of a fool. Anciently a symbol of wisdom; see Midas. In Italy typifies a cuckold.

Ass feast. Feast of fools, Saturnalia. In middle ages festival honoring the ass on which Jesus made his triumphant entry into Jerusalem. The rites became a travesty with the ass an essential feature. Imitation braying replaced 'Amen.'

Ass god. Animal connected with the mid-winter Saturnalia. At the conclusion of the festival the ass god, later the Christmas fool, was killed by his rival. A fertility god. See dying god.

Ass hide. In Cinderella stories a mantle of humility.

Ass of Balaam. In Old Testament animal endowed with human speech; voice of Jehovah. One of the ten animals in Moslem heaven.

Ass of Silenus. Ass which carried the beverage of eternal youth and exchanged it for a few mouthfuls of water, i.e. preferred knowledge of the world to divine springs.

Ass, ox, and sheep. Christmas festivities, nativity.

Ass rider. Soul, spirit.

Brown ass. Vicious ignorance.

White ass. Ignorance united to candor and goodness.

Wild ass. Jealousy, from the belief the male will cut off the organs of any male foal born. A father who dominates or stifles his family. At the time of the equinox it supposedly brays twelve times at noon and twelve times at midnight and devours those around him, thus day and night which devours time.

ASSARAC Assyrian deity worshipped in the Temple of Seven Spheres built on the summit of a pyramidal mound called Birs.

ASSASSIN One of an order of Mohammedan fanatics, whose chief object was to murder crusaders. Thus one who murders from fanaticism or for reward. Represented in art by a dagger, stiletto, or poison.

ASSEGAI A slender throwing-spear of the Kaffirs. See spear for symbolism.

ASSEMBLY OF MEN Dream significance: trickery.

Assembly of women. Dream significance: gossip.

ASSHUR (ASHIR, ASHSHUR, ASHUR, ASSUR, ASUR, AZUR)

(1) Principal city of Assyrians, named after their principal deity. Situated on the Tigris, it was a military city, the first to employ cavalry, horse-drawn chariots, and siege machinery, and the first to equip soldiers with iron weapons. (2) Chief deity of the Assyrians. Creator-preserver-destroyer, self-power, world soul. Solar deity, dragon fighter, warrior. He appears also to have been a god of commerce, culture, fertility, and law. He was a polar god and monarch of the Emyrean. He came closest to crystallizing the principle of a single-god concept, taking over the feasts and festivals of Anu, Enlil, and Marduk. He may have been derived from the Babylonian Anu. He had many points in common with Yahveh. In one aspect he was consortless; in another his mate was Ashuritu (or Belit) the Lady. He was a god of four faces, bull (or ox), eagle, lion, and man, signifying he was lord of the four cardinal points. The animals are the same as the four holy Christian animals. His emblems are the bow and arrow, fir cone, winged disk. In art he wears a horned cap, one hand is extended, the other holds a bow; all surrounded by a winged disk. He also appears as an eagle-headed winged deity of immense height and of muscular body wearing bracelets displaying the solar emblem of a many-petaled flower or wheel, and carrying arrows and a basket. He sometimes stands above a bull or simply appears as a winged circle. His name is related to Aesir, Asar (Osiris), azure, Esar, Sire. Correlative of Ahura Mazda.

ASSIAH In cabalistic system world of action corresponding to the number ten; world into which Adam descended in the fall; world of manifestation above the abode of evil spirits.

ASSIDEAN A sect of Jews zealous for the law; the 'pious ones.'

ASSIDUITY In an Italian icon personified by an old woman holding an hour glass with both hands. At her side is a rock surrounded with an ivy branch.

ASSISTANCE In an Italian icon personified by an old man in a white robe over which is a purple cape. He is crowned with olives, a halo is above his head. Around his neck is a chain from which hangs a heart-shaped pendant. His right hand is open; his left extended with a stork standing under it. In his left hand he holds a staff around which a vine is entwined.

ASSUMPTION, FEAST OF

Christian feast celebrated August 15 in honor of Virgin Mary who supposedly was taken to heaven that day in her corporeal form at the age of 75.

ASSYRIANS First people to employ cavalry and horse-drawn chariots in war, to equip soldiers with iron weapons and battering rams, to use fighting towers and various metal machines.

ASTA-MANGALA The eight glorious emblems of Buddhism.

ASTAROTH In cabala, an archdemon.

ASTARTE (ASHTART, ASHTORETH, ASTORETH) Phoenician great mother. Goddess of fertility and water. Some say she has been erroneously identified as a moon goddess, that her horns are not those of a crescent moon, but of a cow, indicating fruitfulness, generation, productiveness. She was identical with Ishtar as the evening and morning star; as evening star, goddess of love and harlotry; as morning star, goddess of war. As a deity of sexual love her rites were orgiastic, and public prostitutes of both sexes were consecrated to her. She became the center of the Phoenician cult of Adonis, for whom women wept at the winter festival and for whom they rejoiced in the spring when he rose again. Hot cross buns were eaten in her honor. In Old Testament she appears as Asharah, Asharoth, Asherah, translated in Septuagint and Latin Vulgate as a tree or grove. Thus she may have been worshiped as a tree or nourisher or the reference may have been to a wooden statue which became a burnt offering.

Her name yields resplendent tower of light or splendid lasting light, and is an amplified form of Ast, Egyptian name for the goddess worshiped by the Greeks as Isis. At Memphis in Egypt she was worshiped as Ah, a nature goddess. First born children, first fruits, newborn animals, and the virginity of maidens were sacrificed to her for the increase of fertility. Sacred to her were the dove, gazelle, and myrtle. Usually shown with the head of a bull or cow. At Arabella she appeared as robed in flames, armed with a sword and bow. In Assyrian-Babylonian art she was pictured as blessing or caressing a child which she holds. She parallels Anahita, Aphrodite, Atargatis Baalath, Bau, Cybele, Hathor, Mylitta, Ninhurag, Nintud.

ASTER Daintiness, light, truth. It signifies star and is a symbol of the solar wheel. The word yields as-tur, i.e. enduring light. In China its sentiment is afterthoughts. In Japan it is an emblem of autumn.

ASTERIA Gem symbolizing maternal love.

ASTERODIA In Greek mythology a title of Selene, the moon, as queen of the heavens, because her path is among the stars.

ASTOLPHO In medieval romances one of Charlemagne's twelve paladins. He was an English duke known to be a great boaster, but courteous, gay, generous, and handsome. In Ariosto's Orlando Furioso he is carried to Alcina's Isle on the back of a whale. When she tires of him she turns him into a myrtle tree, but Melissa disenchant him (suggesting the Circe legend). He also makes a trip to the moon to bring back Orlando's lost wits.

Astolpho's book. A gift of the fairy Logistilla, who directed Astolpho on his magic journeys.

Astolpho's horn. A gift of Logistilla. Any man or beast that heard it was seized with panic and became an easy captive.

ASTO-VIDHOTU Iranian plague demon.

ASTRAEA (ASTERIA) In Greek mythology daughter of Zeus and Themis. Virgin goddess of justice, personification of innocence and purity. In the Golden Age she refused to unite with the Titans against Zeus and came to dwell on earth. In the Silver Age, she left her mountain home only in the evening, and in the Bronze Age left the abodes of men forever. She was the last of the immortals to linger on earth, and Zeus placed her in the heavens as Virgo. Sometimes identified with the Horae. In another version she was the daughter of Astraeus and Eos, and in a third account her parents were Coeus and Phoebe. To escape the attentions of Zeus she fled in the form of a quail, first bird of spring, and was transformed into the island of Ortygia (Quail), where Leto sometimes is said to have given birth to the twin deities of light. Her name, meaning starry night, was applied to Queen Elizabeth I. A 17th century woman dramatist, Aphra Behn, noted for her lax morals, assumed the name.

ASTRAEUS Literally, star-like or starry heavens. In Greek mythology son of the Titan Crius and Eurybia, a Nereide. First husband of Eos, by whom he was the father of the winds Argestes, Boreas, Notus, and Zephyrus.

ASTRID Feminine name from the Scandinavian meaning beauty and grace.

ASTRILD Norse god of love; a northern Cupid.

ASTROID In heraldry a star of more than five points.

ASTRONOE Phoenician great mother. Reputed to have turned Eshmun into a god by generative heat.

ASTRONOMY Symbolized by a compass, globe of the heavens, stars. Personified by the nine Muses and by Urania. In an Italian icon typified by a woman in a star-studded garment. Her eyes look to heaven. In her left hand she holds a table of astronomical figures and in her right an astrolabe.

ASTVAT-ERETA In Zoroastrianism one of the three future sons of Zarathushtra. The Saoshyat par excellence. Coming savior, messiah.

ASTYANAX In Greek mythology son of Hector and Andromache. In one version he was hurled from the walls of Troy that he might not restore the kingdom as had been prophesied. In another version he was carried away from Troy by his mother and became king of Epirus. Also known as Scamandrius.

ASTYDAMIA In Greek mythology wife of Acastus. She fell in love with Peleus and falsely accused him to her husband. In the duel which followed Acastus was killed. A light myth. She resembles Phaedra and Potiphar's wife.

ASUANG Philippine Islands demon which supposedly attacks parturient women and sucks the fetus from them at the moment of birth; degenerate god of fertility.

ASUNITI In the Vedas goddess besought to prolong life. Name meaning spirit life.

ASURA (ASSURA) In Hinduism originally a title of Varuna meaning deity; later one of a class of demons or evil spirits; an enemy of the gods. The Asuras sacrificed to themselves whereas the gods sacrificed to one another; the Asuras resorted to falsehood, whereas the gods spoke only truth. Resemble afrit or Titan. Adopted by the Buddhists as a region of demi-gods or demon giants. See Gati. In Tibetan Buddhism called Lha-ma-yin. In Persian mythology an angel or heavenly spirit paralleling a deva. Word equating with Aesir, Ahura-Mazda.

ASURALOKA Region of demi-gods in Tibetan Bardo Thodol.

ASU-SU-NAMIR In Babylonian mythology a beautiful eunuch created by Ea to dazzle Ereshkigal and rescue Ishtar from Arallu (lower world) to restore growth to the earth's crust. Name signifying his coming forth is brilliant.

ASVAGHOSA A deified human being. In some Buddhist sects he is regarded as the founder of the Mahayanist system in the first century. Shown in monk's garments.

ASVAMEDHA (ASWA-MEDHA) Vedic horse sacrifice. Originally a fertility rite in which the king's wives passed the night with the sacrificial horse and performed certain sexual rites. Later a ritual statement of the sovereignty and aspirations of great kings. In the spring a horse was selected, symbolically tethered to a sacrificial post, and then released to roam at will for a year. If the horse traveled into the territory of another king, that king might submit to invasion and thus acknowledge the horse's owner as his superior, or he might fight. After another year the horse was sacrificed. During the ceremonies the chief queen performed the ritual act under the horse's robe, thus taking to herself the animal's fertility power. The horse was then offered to Prajapati. An additional idea of atonement or expiation was involved in the sacrifice.

ASVID In Norse mythology a maker of runes for giants.

ASVINS (AHANS) Vedic deities of light, dawn and gloaming, morning and evening star. Twin sons of Pusan (or Vivasvant), the sun, and the celestial mare Saranyu. They are beautiful young horsemen, one light, one dark, who drive the sun's chariot; they also are the swift steeds of the chariot. Their cart or chariot has three seats and three wheels. They are said to be married to the daughter of the sun, and probably the third seat and wheel are for her. Their color is red and their path is red or golden. They are heavenly physicians, benefactors of mankind, and confer honey on their worshipers. They cause barren cows to yield milk, give a eunuch's wife children, grant husbands to old maids, ward off death. They are invoked in the marriage rite to conduct the bride home on their chariot and make her fertile. They are called Dasra (wonder workers), after the name of the elder; the younger twin is Nasatya. Their name also are Nakula and Saha-deva. In later legends they appear degenerated into a demon called Naonghaithya. They are symbolized by two circles, two eyes (spectacles), two wheels, and two mountain peaks. Asvin is derived from asva, a word for mare. They are identical with the Harits and aparallel the Dioscuri and zodiacal Gemini. As healers they resemble Asclepius. See Chyavana.

ASVORA Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning divine prudence.

ASVOTHA A tree of life in India.

ASWICULAPA Hindu health and life restorer. Chief of the race of horses. Parallels the Asvins.

ASYNJUR Norse goddesses of Asgard. Feminine counterpart of the Aesir. Although included in the Aesir their specific term is Asynjur. Asynja (Asynje) is the singular form.

ASZ Lithuanian sky deity. Word yields 'I myself,' or 'light of the strong light.' Compare I, Je, O.

A-T Aelph-Tau (first and last letters of the Hebrew alphabet). Beginning and end.

AT Word root signifying father (tat); identical with ad (dad). Source of Attis, eternal, Ethir (vowels being interchangeable); basis of Arthur, author, etc.; occurs persistently in words relative to heat or things hot.

ATA Japanese legendary woman warrior. Wife of a rebellious prince, she led the left wing of his army.

ATABYRIUS In Greek mythology a son of Althea, and a god who had the power of shape-changing. A skilled worker in metal, useful arts, and the soil. Probably originally a Kassite god whose cult spread to Egypt and Greece. Israelities worshiped him as the golden calf (sun), which they credited with bringing them out of Egypt. As a sun hero with shape-changing powers he equates with Gwydion, Llew Llaw, Periclymenus, Proteus. As a white bull god he equates with Dionysus.

ATAENTSIC (ATAENSIC, ATAEUSIC) In Huron tradition sky woman, first mother. Grandmother, mother, and wife of Ioskeha, the sun. Her daughter was breath-of-life (gust of wind). She was worshiped as the dawn, moon, or earth, and to her were ascribed the care of souls and the cutting off of human existence. As a death goddess she was regarded as malevolent. The Seneca Indians called her Eagentci. Generally she was worshiped as Ataentsic, the great mother, by the Iroquois.

ATAGO-SAMA Japanese fire deity. Sama is akin to Samas, Babylonish sun deity. Atago is akin to Utuki, another name of Samas.

ATAGUJU (ATAGUCHU) Creator of all things of the Huamachuco Peruvian Indians.

ATAHOCAN Algonquin Great Spirit. Maker of all things.

ATAHUALPA Son of Huayna Capac, chief who brought Inca power to its zenith. Under Atahualpa the empire fell to the Spanish, thus the last king of a great civilization. He was killed by strangulation by Pizarro on refusing to become a Christian.

ATALA Borneo supreme divinity.

ATALANTA (ATALANTE)

(1) Feminine name from the Greek meaning equal. It contains the same root as Atlas and Tantalus and denotes power of endurance. (2) In Greek dawn myth the daughter of Schoeneus, who left her to perish on the Parthenian Hill at her birth because he desired a son. She was nursed by a she-bear until found by hunters who reared her. Swift of foot and famous for her courage, she became a heroine of the Calydonian boar hunt as the first to wound the boar. Thus hunt symbolizes the overcoming of the destructive forces of nature (darkness or winter) by the productive forces (light or spring), the dawn light being the first to break through. With her fame her father acknowledged her to be his daughter. She refused the suitors he chose for her, stating she would marry only one who could defeat her in a foot race. Hippomenes (sun) vanquished her when she stooped to pick up three golden apples from the garden of Hesperides, given to him by Aphrodite, and which he dropped as he ran. Thus she typifies one who cannot resist temptation. In some legends her father is said to be Iasus or Zeus; her suitor Milanion.

ATALANTIS A scandalous narrative. From the title of a romance published in 1709 by Mrs. Manley.

ATALAYA Feminine name from the Spanish, meaning watchtower.

AT'AM Mordvin thunder god. A derivative of at'a, meaning grandfather or old man. Source of At'amjonks, the rainbow.

ATAMAN A Cossack chief; a hetman (headman).

ATANUA In Society Islands mythology primeval deity. Dawn, evolved from the struggles of Atea, and Ono, she became the wife of Atea (light). Together they created heaven and earth and a host of deities.

ATAPATRA A parasol; non-tantric Buddhist symbol.

ATAR (ADAR, ATARSH) In Zoroastrianism a fire god, son of Ahura Mazda and conqueror of the evil dragon Azi Dahaka. Chief of the Yazatas or Venerable Ones serving Ahura Mazda. Sometimes classed as an Amesha Spenta, archangel.

ATARGATIS (ATARATE, ATARGATE, ATHARATE) Mother goddess of Hittite origin. Fertility deity, sometimes worshiped as a moon goddess or as bisexual. Probably a fusion of the god Athar and the goddess Ate. She was born of an egg which the sacred fish found in the Euphrates and thrust ashore. A defender of cities, she fixed the fates of mankind and nations, in which role she wore a turreted crown. As fertility queen she was shown as a mother nursing a child and with a cornucopia. Doves and fish were sacred to her; at Hierapolis, her principal seat of worship, her temple included a pond of sacred fish. Sometimes confused with Astarte. Originally Derketo, but the Greeks corrupted to Tar-ata, which led to Atargatis. Worshiped in Rome as Dea Syria. In inscriptions her name has been translated Venus, whom as sea-born she resembles. See Androgynous Deities.

ATARHASIS (ATRAMHASIS) Babylonian-Assyrian name meaning 'he who knows exceedingly much.' The god or person who appealed to the god Ea to allay the wrath of the gods. He survived each of the five world catastrophes of drought, famine, fire, flood, and pestilence.

ATATARHO Onondaga Indian mighty warrior. Demigod, wizard in snake form and provider of snake bravery for warriors.

ATE (1) Aramaic and Cilician great mother goddess. Identified with Atargatis. Her steed was a lion; the dove was sacred to her. Also known as Ata, Ateh, Atta. (2) In Greek mythology a daughter of Zeus and Eris. Like her mother she was a goddess of mischief and vengeance. Personification of the fatal blindness or recklessness which produces crime and the divine punishment which follows it. Zeus expelled her from heaven because she caused Eurystheus to be born before Heracles, and she wandered among men inciting them to infatuation and quarrels. (3) In Spenser's Faerie Queene a misshapen lying and scandalous hag.

ATEA Society Islands primeval deity. Light. Evolved from Tanaoa (darkness), which he destroyed. In time Ono (sound) evolved from Atea and destroyed Mutuhei (silence). Atanua (dawn) became Atea's wife, and they created heaven, earth, and a host of deities. In Marquesan mythology Tii descended from Atea and Atanua. Identical with Vatea, Wakea.

ATEN (ADON, ATON, ETON)

In Egyptian mythology the solar disk, the one and only god. First cause, father of all mankind, provider, manifested by the sun. Forerunner of later monotheist religions. Represented as a sun disk with ten rays terminating in fingers, an ankh below the disk.

It became the white crown with plumes, the visible emblem of Ra, and the crown of Osiris as god of death. Word equating with Odin. It originally meant hot one.

ATESH-GA Literally, place of fire. A place of pilgrimage for fire-worshippers located west of the Caspian Sea, where flames issue from the bituminous soil.

ATET Egyptian mother goddess, worshiped at Heracleopolis. Consort of Her-shef. Slayer of the demon serpent Apep, a myth later absorbed by Ra. She had a cat form, in which aspect she was called Maau. Also called Mersekhnet.

ATHALIAH In Old Testament daughter of Ahab and Jezebel and wife of Jephoram, king of Judah. Her influence drew her husband and son into crime and idolatry. After their premature death she usurped the throne and massacred all who were left of the house of Judah except her grandson Joash, who escaped. Six years later he returned, was proclaimed king, and she was put to death by the mob.

ATHAMAS In a Greek sun myth king of Thessaly. His first wife was Nephele, the mist, by whom he had two children, Phrixos and Helle. When Nephele discovered her husband was in love with Ino, dawn, she disappeared. By Ino, Athamas also had two children, Learchus and Melicertes. Ino mistreated her stepchildren and sought their death. To save them Nephele sent the ram with the golden fleece (sun-drenched cloud) to carry them away. Athamas went mad, killed Learchus and pursued Ino until, with Melicertes, she threw herself into the sea. In another legend, on the death of Semele, Ino's sister, Athamas and Ino undertook the raising of Dionysus. In a jealous rage Hera struck Athamas with madness, which caused him to chase his wife and son into the sea. The marriage of Athamas and Nephele symbolizes the sun absorbing or dispelling the mists; when they disappear the sun marries the glaring day or dawn (Ino).

ATHANASIUS Masculine name from the Greek, meaning deathless, immortal.

ATHAR In Syrian mythology lover-son of Ate. Parallels Adonis, Tammuz. See Atargatis.

ATHARNA Legendary Irish king whose son was slain by the people of the Liffey Valley. He continued denouncing them from Ben Edar for a full year until all the crops and cattle of Leinster became blighted and diseased. Fertility lord of a time myth.

ATHARVAN Member of an ancient Iranian priestly family, sometimes regarded as the basis of the present Brahman caste. A churner of fire or fire priest.

ATHARVA VEDA Sanscrit Veda of charms, hymns, prayers, spells. Fourth and last of the Vedas. Its verses are used as invocations and magic spells. It denotes emotion and bestows salvation.

ATHELSTAN (ATHELSTANE) Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning noble stone.

ATHELWOLD Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning noble power.

ATHENA (ATHENAIA, ATHENE) In Greek mythology one of the twelve Olympian deities. The river goddess Metis was made pregnant by Zeus. Upon receiving a prophecy that the child would be greater than himself, Zeus swallowed Metis, that is absorbed her into himself, and Athena, fully grown, burst from his head with a mighty cry. Thus the virgin dawn sprang from the sky's forehead, the seat of knowledge. To wake is to know, and she became the goddess of wisdom. She also is spoken of as the daughter of Hephaestus, Poseidon, and the Titan Pallas. As the daughter of Hephaestus she became the mistress of Prometheus and the mother of the sun god Phoebus Apollo, who usually is said to be the son of Leto, night, rather than Athena, dawn. Another legend makes her the mother of Lychnus, who reappears elsewhere as Phaethon, son of Helios. Although Zeus loved the child of his brain more than his other children, she conspired against him and aided Prometheus in stealing fire from heaven to give to man. With Perseus she was the inventor of the lute which imitated the dirge-like song of the snakes on Medusa's head, which Perseus had placed on her aegis. She was called all-bedewing, indicating she was a goddess of moisture, and her festivals were celebrated in damp months. When Zeus ceased visiting earth she acted as his deputy. She encouraged law and order, presided over agricultural inventions, and showed mankind how to use the ox for farming. When Prometheus fashioned people out of clay, she breathed a soul into them. She was brave, chaste, dauntless, and the essence of all that is noble. She was born in armor to signify her purity and virtue were unassailable. Some of her titles are: Akria, topmost; Atthis, earth's fertility; Ergane, industry; Glaukopis, gleaming countenance (other titles denoting her brightness are Ophthalmitis, Oxyderkes); Koryphasia, summit; Pallas, interpreted 'I swing' from the swinging of her aegis, and also as a man's name, suggesting she had an androgynous aspect; Parthenos, the maiden; Polias, protectress of the state; Tritogeneia, lady of the winds. The first of her duties was to arouse men from slumber; for this reason the cock and owl, birds of morning and night, were sacred to her; as earth mother, the snake was sacred. Oxen that never had been yoked were sacrificed to her, also cattle, lamb, ram, sheep. Her attributes were the aegis, anointing oil, distaff, helmet, lamp, laurel, olive, palladium, scroll. In art usually shown fully draped, majestic, slightly masculine in appearance, or in armor with a helmet from which a large plume waves. She carries her aegis and a golden staff which possessed the gifts of dignity and youth. The Medusa head on her aegis typifies the starlit night, fearful in beauty, doomed to die with the arrival of dawn. When in danger she swung around and around with her aegis, that is dawn battled storms in the dark. As guardian of Athens her most celebrated temple was the Parthenon; her principal festival was the Panathenaea. In owl form she is the counterpart of Annis, Blodeuwedd, Lilith. Her Roman counterpart is Minerva. She also resembles Anatha, Nana, Neith, Ushas.

ATHENS City in Greece renowned for its beauty and ancient schools of art and philosophy. In legendary account Athena and Poseidon disputed as to which should rename the city, then called Cecropia. The gods decidated the honor was to go to the one which gave mankind the most useful gift. Athena created the olive tree, Poseidon the horse. The award was given to Athena as the deity who had given mankind a gift of plenty and a symbol of peace. The horse was deemed symbolic of war and bloodshed. The name has been applied as an honorary title on several cities: Athens of Germany, Saxe Weimar; of Ireland, Belfast; of the New World, Boston; of the North, Copenhagen; of Switzerland, Zurich; of the West, Cordova, Spain; modern Athens, Edinburgh; Mohammedan Athens, Bagdad.

ATHI Burmese equivalent of Hindu Brahma.

ATHIR Celtic for father, related to Arthur, author.

ATHRA (AETHRA) In Greek mythology mother of Theseus; probably a dawn goddess.

ATHTAR (ASTAR) (1) Abyssinian queen of heaven, the morning star. (2) Male form of Ashtoreth worshiped by Pagan Arabs as a god of love and fecundity. In a triad with Shahar and Shamshu.

ATHWYA Primeval Iranian hero. Priest of the haoma sacrifices. Second man to prepare haoma.

ATIRA (H'URARU) Pawnee earth mother. Spouse of Tirawa, sky-vault.

ATISA (JOBBO-ATISA) An historical person deified. Indian Buddhist priest who founded the Ka-dampa, reformed Red Cap sect, in Tibet. He stressed meditation and discipline. Shown in monk's garments and high-peaked cap. His mudra is the dharma-cakra, his emblem the caitya.

ATIUS TIRAWA See under Tirawa.

ATLACAMANI Aztec sea storm deity, an aspect of Chalchiuhtlicue.

ATLANTEANS In Greek mythology a people supposedly instructed in the secret powers of nature.

ATLANTES Figures of men used in Greek architecture as pillars, so called from Atlas. Female figures are called Caryatides.

ATLANTIDES In Greek mythology: (1) celestial nymphs, children of Atlas and Pleione, the Pleiades; (2) inhabitants of Atlantis; (3) another name for the Hesperides.

ATLANTIS In Greek mythology a mythical land in the Atlantic ocean, where men and civilization mysteriously originated. A happier place of man's existence, which is said to have sunk into the sea. Also called Mu.

ATLAS (HYAS) In Greek mythology son of Iapetus and Clymene or of Uranus and Gaea; brother of Prometheus; father of the Hesperides, Hyades, and Pleiades; grandfather of Hermes. Because of the part Atlas played in the Titanomachia he was condemned to stand forever supporting the heavens on his shoulders; hence the endurer, a mainstay, a sufferer, one who supports a heavy burden. As axis god, a pillar, thus a phallus. He was also the father of Calypso, who dwelt on the island of Ogygia or navel of the sea. In later legends identified with mountains as supporting the heavens, and in one version he was a teacher of astronomy and navigation. As he supposedly stood at the extreme west of the world, probably northwest Africa, the Atlantic Ocean was named after him.

ATLI (ATLE, ATTILA) In Norse mythology king of Hunaland. Son of Budli, brother of Brynhild. A fierce, grim, greedy king, he forces Gudrun, widow of Sigurd, to become his wife that he may claim her fortune as his. Because her brothers Gunnar and Hogni had kept the greater part of the Andvari hoard which Sigurd had willed to Gudrun, Atli slays them. With the murder he avenges the death of Brynhild and his uncles killed by them. Gudrun to avenge the death of her two brothers slays her two sons by Atli and then kills Atli. Thus one who lives by the sword dies by the sword. The marriage of Gudrun and Atli is that of fertility and autumn (or gloaming). The slaying of the kinsmen of Atli by the kinsfolk of Gudrun represents the slaying of dark forces by light. Atli, a character probably developed from the historic Attila, king of the Huns, corresponds to Etzel in the Niebelungenlied.

ATMAN (ATMA) Sanscrit spirit of highest principle of the universe. Brahma, the supreme Self or Ego. Having created the world he entered into it as the soul from which all individual souls derive and to which they return as the supreme goal of existence. Atman became the Greek atmos, root of atmosphere and German athem.

ATNATU Australian self-created deity in the heavens. Angry at some of his children, he threw them down to earth through a hole in the sky, and they became the ancestors of a northern tribe.

ATOAKWATJE Australian water men; demigods who control the supply of water from clouds in which they dwell.

ATON Aztec sun god. Cognate with Aten, which see.

ATOTARHO Iroquois magician. He frustrated Hiawatha's dream for a union between Iroquois and Algonquin Indians to insure peace.

ATRA-CHASIS In Babylonian mythology the man saved from the flood. Also called Pir-na-pishtim, which see.

ATRAIOMAN In Carib Indian tradition the reincarnation of Kalinago in the form of a fish pursued by the slayers of Kalinago. See pursuit.

ATREUS Legendary king of Mycenae. Grandson of Tantalus, son of Pelops and Hippodamia, brother of Thyestes, husband of Aerope, father of Pleisthenes, grandfather of Agamemnon and Menelaus. He promised to sacrifice the most beautiful animal in his flock to Artemis. When he discovered a golden lamb (sunlit cloud) he strangled it but greedily hid the fleece in a chest. Aerope, seduced by Thyestes, gave the fleece to her lover, who then usurped the throne. (He who controlled the sunlit cloud was sun king.) Atreus made a pact with his brother that he was to regain the throne when the sun reversed itself. One morning the sun was in total eclipse. Interpreted as the sun setting in the east, Atreus regained his throne. Thyestes aroused Pleisthenes against his father, and the youth set out to kill Atreus. Unwittingly Atreus slew his son. Feigning reconciliation with Thyestes, Atreus killed three of his brother's sons and served them at a banquet to their father, whereupon Thyestes cursed the house of Atreus, who finally was slain by Aegisthus, son of Thyestes. This legend deals with the various phases of light which destroy the phases of light they succeed; it also typifies fraternal hatred. As slayer of his son he resembles Cuchulainn, as server of human flesh he resembles Tantalus.

ATRI Vedic sage and seer saved from burning in a deep pit by the Asvins, who restored him with a refreshing draught. He rescued the sun hidden by the demon Svarbhanu and replaced it in the sky (reappearance of the sun after an eclipse), a deed also ascribed to the Atris as a family. The name denotes eater.

ATROPOS One of the three Fates or Moira in Greek mythology. Bearer of the shears, she is the inflexible one who cuts the thread of human life, which is prepared by her sister Clotho and spun by Lachesis. Identified with the Roman Morta.

ATSE HASTIN (ATSEATSINE) In Navaho legend the first man, created from an ear of white maize in the lower world by the four winds. With his spouse Atse Etsan he led the human race up from below. He and his wife had five pairs of twins, the first of which were hermaphrodites and were the inventors of pottery and wicker water bottles. The others all intermarried with mirage people, who dwelt in this world, and with Kisani, underworld people, and populated the earth. Atse Hastin and his wife were accompanied by the coyote.

Atse Etsan (Atseatsan). First woman, wife of Atse Hastin. Created from an ear of yellow maize of by the four winds. A fertility mother.

ATTABEIRA (ATABEI) Mother of Iocauna, supreme and eternal being of Taino Indians. First in being. Mother earth. Also called Guacarapita, Guimazoa, Iella, Mamona.

ATTACONI A legendary people dwelling beyond the Himalayas, resembling the Hyperboreans.

ATTALICA A cloth of gold which supposedly was introduced by Attalus, king of Pergamum. Hence the wealth of Attalus.

ATTHIS An aspect of Athena as dawn goddess in Greek mythology. On a visit to Hephaestus, Erichthonios is born to her. She places her son in a casket which she gives to the Agraulid with instructions it is not to be opened. They disobey and find the coils of a snake or a snake-bodied infant (an aspect of earth's fertility).

ATTIC (1) Delicate wit, incisive intelligence, simple elegance. From the people of Attica in ancient Greece. (2) The head, alluding to the highest story in a house. Rats in the attic is to be queer, to have something exotic in the head.

Attic bird. Nightingale.

Attic boy. Cephalus, beloved by Aurora and passionately fond of hunting.

Attic faith. Inviolable faith; opposite of Punic faith.

Attic Muse. Xenophon, 4th century B. C. historian, so called because of the excellence of his style of composition.

Attic salt. Delicate and elegant wit; a sparkling thought well expressed.

Attic school. In sculpture the Athenian school noted for refinement and sensuous delicacy of form.

ATTILA (AZZILLO, EZZILA)

(1) Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning fatherlike.

(2) Fifth century A. D. king of the Huns. Known as the scourge of God. An invader who exacted large tributes and caused great destruction and devastation. He was slain by his bride Ildico on the night of their marriage. He appears in the Volsung Saga as Atli and in the Nibelungenlied as Etzel.

ATTIS (ATYS) A Phrygian deity of vegetation, his myth appears in countless versions. He is a youth of great beauty conceived when Cybele puts in her bosom a pomegranate sprung from the genitals of the man-monster Agdistis, a sort of double of Attis. He is born of the daughter of the River Sangarius, who descended from the hermaphroditic Agdistis. Agdistis became enamoured of Attis and when Attis was about to marry a king's daughter, in his frenzy he deprived Attis of his manhood with the result Attis dies. In repentance Agdistis prevails upon Zeus to grant that the body shall never decay. Zeus grants the petition, and permits the hair (foliage) of Adonis to grow and the little finger (phallus) to move. A princess is the mother and carnal lover of Attis, and when the king, her father, discovers her fault, he kills Attis and she roams over the earth in wild grief. A legend paralleling that of Isis and Osiris. He is born of an almond tree, and thus resembles Adonis. He is the impotent son of the Phrygian Calaus, and he goes to Lydia to institute the worship of the Great Mother. There he is slain by a boar (famine) sent by Zeus. His mother Cybele is inspired with chaste love for her son, which he pledges to reciprocate. On his proving unfaithful, the Great Mother kills the nymph with whom he has sinned, whereupon he in madness mutilates himself. In another version he is unfaithful to his mother-lover and when he is about to marry the beautiful nymph Sagaris, Cybele bursts in on the feast, causing him to go mad. He runs off into the mountains, maims himself, and dies. In all versions he appears as young and handsome, beloved by a great goddess, usually his mother, and is the victim of a brutal and untimely death which brings disaster into the world because things cease to grow with his death. In several versions he dies beside a pine tree; his spirit enters the tree and from his blood violets grow. Because of the barrenness which falls upon earth with his death, the gods resurrect him each spring to save the world. In one rite, priests unmanned themselves beside a pine and then hung a wreath of violets on the sacred tree. This was an act of sympathetic magic, aimed at stimulating growth. In another rite an effigy was hung on a pine tree where it was kept for one year and then burned. This was intended to maintain the spirit of vegetation, perhaps that of a corn or tree spirit, in life throughout the year. In self-mutilation, death, and resurrection, he represents the cycle of the year, which is cut in the autumn (harvest), dies in the winter, and is reborn in the spring. Much mourning attended his death; women lamented, accompanied by the shrill wailing notes of the flute; disconsolate believers shaved their heads; women who could not bring themselves to sacrifice their beautiful hair gave themselves to strange men at the festival and dedicated to Cybele and Attis any money they received. In the spring his rebirth was celebrated with song. His sacred tree, the pine, was bled (for turpentine) at the Vernal equinox. The boar was his sacred animal. The self-castration of Attis explains the eunuchised priests of Cybele. He is the analogue of Adonis, Christ, Mithra, and Tammuz. See Agdistis, dying god.

Attis mysteries. Feast at which drink and food of life were served in the sacred cymbal and tympanum. It was influenced by earlier Mithra ceremonies and in turn influenced Christian ceremonies.

ATUA NOTO-WHARE Polynesian house-dwelling spirits. Deities of the germs of unborn human children.

ATUM (ATMU, ATUM-RA, ATUM-RE, ATUMU, TEM, TUM) Egyptian deity of the setting sun. A creator god. In some accounts self created, in others created by four frogs and four snakes, which existed in the abyss or primeval sea. By masturbating or spitting he created Shu and Tefnut. He is portrayed as a bearded man wearing the double crown of Lower and Upper Egypt. Mentu was the rising sun and Ra the noonday sun.

ATZILOTH Archetypal world in the cabala. World of unity where the union of God and His Shekinah takes place; world of emanation without separation. Also called world of Sephira.

AU-AA Semitic deity identifying Jau (Au) with Ea (Aa).

AUBREY Masculine name from the French; a variation of the Old High German Alberich, meaning elf and ruler.

AUCASSIN AND NICOLETTE In medieval romances lovers who suffer many hardships and separations before they are finally united.

AUCHTHON Phoenician sky deity. By Greeks called Uranus.

AUD (AUDR) Literally, bounteous riches. In Norse mythology son of Nagelfare of the stars and Nat (night). A name paralleling Aether and Authr (Arthur). Feminine form is Auda.

AUDHUMLA Literally, nourisher. Cosmic cow of Norse mythology. Great mother formed from the frozen mists of Niflheim melted by the heat of Muspellsheim in Ginnungagap (primeval abyss). From her teats ran four streams of milk, the four primordial rivers of the cardinal points, and with these she fed Ymir, who was created at the same time as Audhumla, and out of whom the earth was shaped. She fed herself from the salty hoar frost, licking it until it formed Buri, whose son Bor was the father of the gods Odin, Ve, and Vili. In some versions she was created by Surtr. The parallelism of Audhumla and Ymir exists in Iranian cosmogony with the primeval ox Geush Urvan and the primeval man Gaya Maretan.

AUDREY Feminine name from Old High English Etheldreth, meaning noble, strength, and from the Celtic, meaning golden.

AUDWIN Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning rich friend.

AUGE In Greek mythology an Arcadian princess and priestess of Athena. She became the mother of Telephus by Heracles. Because Telephus was born to a priestess who was required to remain a virgin, Athena sent a plague to afflict the land. Auge and her son were set adrift in a chest, and were washed ashore at Mysia, where King Theuthras made Auge his queen. A myth which resembles that of Danae. In another version Auge (dawn) was the mother of Telephus (sun) by Aleos (night). Telephus was left on Mount Parthenion and suckled by a doe. When he grew to manhood his mother was promised to him as a wife. She refused to marry him, and he was about to slay her when Heracles revealed her identity and Telephus led her back to her own land. This version resembles the Antiope legend.

AUGEAN STABLES In Greek mythology the stables in which King Augeas of Elis kept 3,000 oxen. The stalls had not been cleaned for thirty years and, as his fifth labor, Heracles (sun) was ordered to clean them. He accomplished the task in one day by diverting the river Alpheus through them. Thus, to clear away an accumulated mass of corruption by one stroke. Heracles accomplished his task in the month governed by Leo.

AUGMUND Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning awful protection.

AUGUR One of a body of Roman officials charged with observing and interpreting omens for guidance in public affairs, hence a diviner, prognosticator, soothsayer.

AUGUST Eighth month of the year, a period or state of candor. Its name is derived from Augustus, and so called because it is the crowned period of the year, month in which grains are ripe enough for harvesting. Its birthstone is the peridot or sardonyx, its colors are crimson and yellow, its zodiacal sign is Virgo, the Virgin. In China its emblems are the cock and pear blossom. In Greek antiquity sacred to Demeter. In the West generally personified by harvesters, reapers in cornfields, and symbolized by goldenrod and humming bird.

AUGUSTUS (AUGUST, AUGUSTINE, AUSTIN, GUS, GUSTUS)

(1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning exalted, majestic, venerable. Feminine form, Augusta (Gus, Gussie, Gusta).

(2) Acknowledged to be the most peaceful emperor of Rome. Patron of arts and literature, an Augustan Age has become the term for an age that is the highest point in the literature of any nation; reformer. He instituted the enrollment which obliged Joseph and Mary to go to Bethlehem, where Jesus was born.

AULD HORNIE (AULD ANE, AULD CLOOTIE, AULD HANGIE, AULD NICK) In Scotland a devil.

Pan with crooked nose, goat's beard and feet, horns, and pointed ears, transformed into Satan. The use of auld implies that Satan is always old.

AULNE A German devil.

AUM In Brahmanism and Buddhism monosyllable which is potent because it is a symbol of Supreme Deity. Lord of created beings. The Sun. All oblations, rites, and sacrifices will pass away, but Aum will not. Mystical utterance cognate with amen or aye. Used as a talisman. A represents the viga-mantra of the male Buddha, the male generative power, the state of waking consciousness together with its world of gross experience; U represents the female productive power, the state of dreaming consciousness together with its experience of subtle shapes of dreams; M represents the conjunction or union of the essences of both, the state of dreamless sleep, natural condition of quiescent undifferentiated consciousness wherein every experience is dissolved into a blissful non-experience. Aum stands for the three precious triratna (jewels): Buddha, intelligence, soul; Dharma, body, matter; Shangha, union of the two. In Hinduism the trinity: Aditi, Varuna, Mitra. Dweller in the Infinite, symbolized by the equilateral triangle and by A. In the Malay Peninsula, mystery name permutations: A-U-M, i.e. thy Mother's Son; M-U-A, Maker of these Waters; U-A-M, I am the Male Creator. Egyptian, Hebrew, and Moslem secret name for God. Used as a password. Among Moslems an omnific syllable whose efficacy cures serpent bites and restored the blind, lame, and maimed. It eroded into âme, French for soul. Compare Aun, Jao, Om.

Aum-na-ni-padme-hum. Jewel in the lotus. In Buddhism talisman for the greatest happiness, prosperity, knowledge, and the means of deliverance from enemies and all evil on earth.

AUN (AN, ON) (1) Ancient Semitic fish god. The Phoenician Sidon (Sid-on) was the ship of On (Aun). Aun is found again in Dagon (Dag-aun), the great fish enlightener and teacher. It also is the root of Oannes. In Syrian mythology Aun is the husband of the fish goddess Derketo. (2) In ancient Egypt, like Aunan, a name for Heliopolis, city of the sun; thus a title for the sun. (3) In Coptic tradition the city where Mary washed the swaddling of the infant Jesus in the spring Ain-esh-Shems, which formerly had been sacred to Ra, Egyptian sun deity. The sacred Balsam tree sprang from the string drip-pings.

AUR Hebrew for light. Root from which Romans took their noun aurum (gold).

AURA (AURAE) (1) One of the Greek nymphs of the air personifying gentle wind. A sylph. (2) An emanation or influence supposedly issuing from the human body; invisible to ordinary eyes, it is believed to be a pervasive psychic force which conveys or receives mesmeric impressions or messages.

AURANGZEB Mogul emperor of India who was a religious bigot. He usurped the throne by rebelling against his father, whom he kept in prison; he caused the death of three brothers; he assumed the title Alamgir (conquerer of the world).

AURBODA (ANGERBODA, GULVEIG-HODER, ORBODA) In Norse mythology the hag of Iarnvid, a mountain wind giantess. Wife of Gymer, likewise of Loki; mother of Beli, howler, and Gerd, illuminator. Also mother of the wolves that pursued the sun and moon, and as such the hag of eastern winds. In a disguise which hid her angry aspect she dwelt among the Aesir as lady-in-waiting to Freyja and lured Freyja away from her seat under the Yggdrasil tree. When beneficent she was the crow which conferred fertility, thus an aspect of gentle winds.

AUREA VIRGA In Roman mythology the golden-leaved rod given by Apollo to Mercury. Caduceus, phallic symbol.

AURELIA Feminine name derived from a Roman family name, probably from the Latin aurum (gold).

AURELIUS Semi-mythical king of Britain. He supposedly instructed Merlin to construct Stonehenge with boulders of miraculous virtue brought from Ireland.

AUREROLE Symbol of glory, the solar disk. In Christianity, divinity, field of radiance and splendor, supreme power. A blue aureole suggests celestial glory. In Hebrew tradition the aureole of Moses was double rayed, representing justice and truth.

AURGELMIR A name of Ymir, which see.

AURICULA Symbolic of avarice. In the language of flowers: Wealth is not always happiness.

AURIGA Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as the Charioteer or Wagoner. Identified with Erichthonius who, being crippled and unable to walk, invented the chariot. This achievement entitled him to a place in heaven.

AURORA (1) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning beginning, freshness. (2) Roman goddess of dawn. The rosy-fingered deity who leads the way for the rising sun. Herald of day. Usually shown flying before the horse-drawn chariot of the sun surrounded by dew and carrying flowers and a torch. Word derived from Hindu Ushas, which became Ausera in Lithuania, Aarvak in Norse mythology, and Eos in Greek mythology. Parallels Chinese Chih Nu and Japanese Ori-hime.

Aurora Australis. Southern lights. In American Indian tradition dance of the gods across the star-lit Southern Sky.

Aurora Borealis. Northern lights. By American Indians called the merry dancers; dance of the gods across the star-lit Northern Sky. Among the Chukchee the home of those who died a violent death. Eskimos called it the dance of the dead; the spirits of ancestors disporting in white raiment while the sun is away. Among Esthonians it was a heavenly war. To the Finns it was the fire of the Arctic Ocean associated with Rutja's Rapids, the flaming river of the dead. Finno-Lapps who had died in battle and continued fighting one another in the air. Russian-Lapps declared it to be the spirits of the murdered, who continued to stab one another and spill blood and were afraid of the sun. In Norse mythology the Valkyrie. In northern Siberia the track of the White horse of Earth-watching Man.

AUSERA Lithuanian dawn goddess. See Aurora 2.

AUSTER In Roman mythology personification of the south wind.

AUSTERITY Typified by an ascetic or by a straight upright line. In India represented by an ass.

AUSTRALIA Emblems: Emu, kangaroo, Mimosa (yellow wattle tree), Southern Cross. A black man symbolizes western Australia.

AUSTRIAN LIP The thick underlip of the Hapsburg family.

AUTEB (AUTYEB) In Egyptian mythology female personification of joy.

AUTEM TRANSIENS PER MEDIUM ILLORUM IBAT Appears on

charms which serve against dangers of travel, especially against robbers. Means Jesus passing through their midst went His way.

AUTHOR The Great Tor or Eternal Creator of the universe. Deity, god. When used to indicate a literary person symbolized by a goose quill, pen, typewriter. Word derived from Latin auctor (one who makes things to grow), and related to actor (which in Greek antiquity signified chief), and to athir (Celtic for father), ether (all pervading), Hathor, and Hector.

AUTHORITY Symbolized by crown, ecclesiastical crosier, fasces, hastate, key, mace, military standard, scepter. In Italian icon personified by a mature woman seated on a throne. Her garment is gold, richly embroidered. She holds a sword. Books and weapons are at her side.

AUTODAFE Literally, act of faith. The public declaration of judgement passed on persons in the trials of the Spanish Inquisition, followed by execution of the sentences imposed.

AUTOLYCUS (1) In Greek mythology son of Hermes, father of Anticlea, grandfather of Odysseus. The craftiest of thieves, Autolycus appears to have been a wind deity, but he may have been a drought aspect of the sun. He stole the flocks of his neighbors and changed their marks or rendered them invisible. Sisyphus outwitted him by marking his sheep under their feet. He was a great boxer and wrestler and taught Heracles these arts as well as stealing. (2) In Shakespeare's Winter's Tale a light-fingered rogue who snaps up trifles.

AUTOMEDON In Homer the charioteer and companion of Achilles; in Virgil the brother-in-arms of Achilles' son Pyrrhus. A coachman.

AUTOMOBILE Symbolic of the city of Detroit; travel.

AUTUMN In Europe and the United States understood to be from September 22 to December 20 inclusive, and comprising the zodiacal signs Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius. Period of chill, of fruitfulness, and harvest, of incipient decay, maturity, middle-age (some say old-age), of perpetuation, of ripeness. The passing into decline, as the autumn of life. The twilight of the year, hence afternoon. Occultists state the organs most strongly acted upon are the lungs; its action is the cooling off; its color is white; its direction west and the left half of the body; its element is metal; its principal flavor is acid; its musical tone is G. Its symbols are: autumn grains and leaves; the colors brown, dark red, reddish brown; harvests; ripe fruits. Its female representation: a mature woman clothed except for her arms and carrying fruit, grain, or a vine branch. She rides a bull. Also personified by Ceres, Demeter, Pomona, Vertumnus. Male representations: mature man reaping, his sickle in his girdle; or binding a sheaf of wheat. Also a mature man wearing a star-studded girdle, in one hand fruits and grapes, in the other a pair of scales equally poised with a globe on each side. In Buddhism, with winter, the white season, the season of Zen. In China presided over by the White Tiger, indicated by the Western Quadrant, symbolized by the chry-anthemum. In Japan symbolized by maple leaves and wild geese.

Autumn equinox. Hunters' and reapers' festivals.

AUUENAU Australian ghoulish storm spirits. They are thin and hairy; from their wrists, elbows, knees, and ankles hang human bones, taken from the dead they devour. A tail hangs from their backs, which is the summer lightning and which warns when they are present.

AUXO Literally, increaser. Worshiped by early Athenians as one of the Graces.

AV (AF) Word root signifying life. Equates with Eve and is found in Aphrodite, Avon, ivy.

AVA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning bird.

AVAGDDU (AFAGDDU) In Celtic mythology ill-fated son of Tegid the Bald. The ugliest boy in the world; brother of Creirwy, the most beautiful girl in the world. A storm deity and spirit of decay. Compare Morvran.

AVAIKI Polynesian underworld, abode of Miru.

AVALLON (AVALLACH, AVILION) British god of the underworld, whose paradise was called Avallon's Island. It was a land of perpetual spring or summer identical with Avalon.

AVALOKITESVARA (AVALOKITA)
Fourth Celestial Bodhisattva; Buddhist Lord of Mercy. Lord-who-sees-sound; one whose essence is perfect knowledge. A Buddha-elect, future savior of the world, a messiah. Sage who decided to remain a Bodhisattva (Buddha-to-be) until such time as he obtained deliverance for all mankind. His face is turned in every direction in order to see everyone. Lover of mankind. Patron of those who are attacked by robbers and those who are shipwrecked. Fetters drop when he is invoked; the sword of the executioner is arrested by those who call his name; a woman who desires a fair daughter or son need only pray to him to have her desires fulfilled. First minister and spiritual son of Amitabha. He is believed to have built the present world and his special mission is to look after the welfare of Buddhists. Most popular of the Lamaist deities, patron saint of Tibet. Dalai Lamas are believed to be incarnations of him. He manifests himself in 108 different forms, usually shown four-armed. His emblems are the khadga, mala, padma, patra, simhasana. His expression is one of benevolence; he bears the lotus in his hand. Also called Amoghapasa, Sadaksari. In China called Kwanyin, in Japan, Kwanon. In Tibet known as S' Pyanras-gzigs-pyag-bshpa. Compare Chenresi.

AVALON (AVILION) Gaelic terrestrial paradise. Land of concord, peace, and eternal spring, where people are forever young, and grief and disease are unknown. An island of apples (avalls), where nature is so abundant the labor of cultivating the soil is unnecessary. Abode and burial place of King Arthur, Oberon, and Morgan Le Fay. Nine sisters, of whom Morgan is chief and who can take the shape of birds, rule. In some legends Morgan is described as the daughter of Avallon (see), in others she is Arthur's sister, and she and Arthur dwell together happily in Avalon. Also known as Isle of Souls, Island of Apples, Land of the Blessed. Parallels Annwn, Boiuca, Elysium, Hesperides, San Hsien Shan, Tir-nan-og.

AVARICE Personified by a man with a muck rake; an old man holding a money bag; a woman storing her money in a safe. In an Italian icon personified by a pale-faced woman, lean and melancholy. Pain causes her to keep one hand on her belly; at the same time she devours a purse with her eyes closed. She is accompanied by a starved wolf.

AVATAR (AVATARA) (1) In Hinduism the descent of a deity to earth and his incarnation as an animal or man to save the world. The ten avatars of Vishnu are the most celebrated: 1- Matsya in fish form; 2- Kurma in tortoise form; 3- Varaha as a boar; 4- Narasinha, half lion, half man; 5- Vamana, a dwarf; 6- Parashurama, human form as Rama with an ax; 7- Ramachandra, also as Rama; 8- Krishna; 9- Buddha; all forms in the past; 10- Kalki, the white horse with wings to appear at the end of the four ages to destroy the earth. (2) In Tibetan Buddhism a monk of the highest grade. Incarnate Lamas. See Dalai Lama, Tasi Lama. (3) Used metaphorically to denote an embodiment or manifestation of some idea.

AVE (1) Latin wish of good health. Literally, hail, it is used as welcome, farewell. Probably originally a beatific shout to the Great God. Akin to av, bravo, Eva. (2) In Christian tradition time for the recitation of the Angelus. So called because Ave Maria is thrice repeated in it.

Ave Maria (Ave Mary, Av Mary, Av Maria). 'Hail Mary,' prayer in the Roman Catholic church based on the salutation of the angel Gabriel to Virgin Mary.

AVEBURY In Britain site of Silbury, an ancient barrow or burying ground. Resolves into bury of A or Awe (Ave), the chief god or sun.

AVELINE (AV'VIE) Feminine name from the French, meaning hazel, and from Old French, meaning charming, pleasant.

AVENUE A means of access for attainment or escape. Dream significance: easy and happy life.

AVERIL (AVERY) Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning boar and favor. Also a feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning battle maid, wild boar.

AVERNUS Roman infernal regions. Sometimes identified as Lake Averno because of the belief its sulphurous vapors were deadly to the birds which inhaled them. Ancients also believed the lake was the entrance to the infernal regions. Any pestilential bog, an underworld.

Avernal. An inhabitant of Avernus; a fiend; underworld nymph.

AVERUNCUS The averter in Roman mythology. Title under which Robigus, in opposition to Flora, was a worker of evil and destroyer of tender herbs by mildew. He was invoked by those who wished to avert his wrath.

AVESTA Book of wisdom; sacred book of Zoroastrianism.

AVEZUHA Rumanian demoness who sought to harm Virgin Mary before the birth of Jesus.

AVICI Buddhist hell.

AVIDYA In Hinduism the primary cause of all that seems to exist. Spirit of ignorance, non-knowledge. Equivalent of the Magician in the tarot deck.

AVIS (AVICE, AVICIA) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning war refuge. A word meaning bird, yielding essence of life (av). In French signifies judgement.

AVO Norse great elfin archer. Another name for Orvandel, which see.

AVON Generic term for river. All rivers are regarded as manifestations of Av (life) + on (one), thus the regenerative one life or great one.

AWAJI Island where the original Japanese twin deities descended upon earth. Akin to Havilah, Hawaii.

AWAR In Mohammedanism son of Eblis. Demon of evasion and shiftiness.

AWITELIN TSITA Zuni great mother. Earth goddess created by Shivanokia from spittle. With her mate Apoyan Tachu, sky, she formed terrestrial life. Also said to be created by Awonawilona.

AWONAWILONA Zuni primeval deity, supreme life giver. In the beginning he created himself and thought outward in space, thus the blue vault of heaven. Also worshiped as the sun father who fecundated the sea by scattering his own flesh on the waters. From the scum he formed the sky father Apoyan Tachu and the earth mother Awitelin Tsita before they were separated. With his breath he created clouds. His color is that of smoke; he sometimes takes bird form. Referred to as He-She, the initiator. See androgynous deities.

AX (AXE) Chastisement, execution, retribution, suffering. As a deity weapon, lightning, thunder; as blazer of the trail, cleaver (clever-one) of the way, symbolic of the sun. Self-motivation, thus the expression, 'have an ax to grind.' Dream significance: strength of character. Talisman for strength. Hieroglyph for god. In various mythologies implement on whose edge the sky rests. Emblem of the serpent-destroying bird. Equates with ash (fraxinus), a sacred tree. Anglo-Saxon for ax is acus, which yields great light. Breton name is bouc'hal, and a phallic symbol. In Brittany stone axes are built in chimneys to ward off lightning. Buddhist tantric symbol, instrument with which the gods attack non-believers. Sanscrit name is parasu. In China emblem of the god of carpenters and a marriage go-between. Christian emblem of martyrdom. Among gnostics a power of light. The Dinkas of Africa have a Great Chief of the Hammer and a House of the Ax. In Egyptian mythology Ptah, cleaver of the way, is represented by an ax, which symbolizes power, rank, war. The Mayans worship a God of the Ax, who also is known as Great Seer of the Hammer.

Battle ax. Divinity attribute, sacred weapon. Symbolic of fertility, guardianship, power, protection, war. Cognate with cross, fish, tail, hammer, sword.

Double ax. Divinity, fertility, lightning, power, sacrifice, sun, thunder, war, word of god.

Ax, erect. Divinity, phallus.

Ax and trident. Fire (sun) and water.

AXEL Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning divine reward.

AXIEROS A name of the Dioscuri when invoked as four; yields great fire Eros.

AXINITE Gem typifying mystery of life.

AXIOCERSA (AXIOCERSUS, AXIOKERSA) A name of the Dioscuri when invoked as four; yields great fire or great Ursa. See anakes.

AXIS (AXLE) Phallus, pivot of life, tree of life, trunk of universe tree. That which separates heaven and earth. Polaris. Shafts on which Caer Sidi revolved. The universal axis is variously conceived as an axle tree, a backbone, fiery column, nail, pal, pike, pillar, pole, pole star, rod, spear, spike, spindle, spine, staff, tree trunk, torso. Axle is from the Icelandic oxl meaning shoulder.

Axle tree. Axis of the universe. See cista.

AYAH Hindu lady's maid or nurse.

AYA-KASHIKO-NE-NO-KAMI

In Japanese mythology Oh-Awful (or Venerable)-Lady-Deity. Younger sister and wife of Omodaruno-kami. Together they were a pair of the seven divine generations. They signify the completion of the august persons of the deities and represent the gradual progress of creation.

AYAR CACHI In Inca mythology one of the Tahuantín-Suyukapac (Lords of the Four Quarters). Oldest of the four sons of Sun, and with his brothers born at Paccari-tampu. Ruler of the east. His name signifies he who causes or he who gives being. He was buried by his brothers but reappeared in the form of a brilliantly plumed bird (dawn), whose ears were pierced and who wore round gold earrings which became a sign of his worshippers. Thus he was a dying and resurrected god. He was an aspect of Viracocha and also called Tokay.

Ayar Auca. Brother of Ayar Cachi. Ruler of the south. His name signifies enemy. Also called Colla.

Ayar Manco. Youngest brother of Ayar Cachi. Lord of the North. He married his four sisters and founded the Inca race.

Ayar Uchu. Brother of Ayar Cachi. Ruler of the West. Also called Pinahua.

AYESHA (AISHA) Mohammed's favorite wife, hence favorite of a harem. She was the daughter of Abu Bekr, merchant who became a prophet, and she is revered as the virgin of Mohammedanism.

AYIN Same as Ain, which see.

AYLLU Among the Incas soul or essence of the descendants of the pacarina (dead ancestors); lineage. Also descendants in the male line of Incas, which formed a special hereditary kinship group and were responsible for the upkeep of their royal ancestor's palace and maintenance of his cult.

AYLMER Masculine name from Old English, meaning noble and famous.

A-Z Beginning and end, from first to last. Parallels Greek alpha-omega, Hebrew aleph-tau.

AZA Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning noble.

AZA AND AZAEL In the cabala pair who became enamored of Cain's daughter or sister Naa-mah. They were among the angels cast from heaven for falling in love with the daughters of men, and imprisoned on earth where they still teach the forbidden art of magic. In another account sons of Cain. In Hebrew tradition Azael was one of the last angels to rebel, and he is to be chained up until the Last Judgement.

AZAG-BAU In Sumerian legendary history the keeper of a wine shop who became the founder and queen of Kish. She supposedly enjoyed a prosperous reign for 100 years. Appears to have been a spouse of Sargon I.

AZALEA Fragile and ephemeral passion, living fire. Barren regrets, fatal gift. Dream significance: expensive flattery. Word cognate with the last of Yggdrasil. In China emblematic of a beautiful but deadly woman. In Japan herald of spring and used in ceremonies celebrating Buddha's birthday, eighth day of the fourth month. In Korea the fly-catcher, because the sticky substance which exudes from the plant is used to catch flies.

AZALIAH Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning ennobled by God.

AZAM Masculine name from the Aramaic, meaning greatest.

AZAN Mohammedan call to prayer. Proclaimed by the muezzin from the minaret of a mosque five times daily.

AZARIAH (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning helped by Jehovah. (2) King of Judah who began his reign at sixteen years of age. At first the land was happy and prosperous. After he offered incense to God conditions changed and he was smitten with leprosy. The change was attributed to idolatrous worship. (3) Name by which Abednego, companion of Daniel, was known originally. One unhurt by fire.

AZARIEL Hebrew angel of the waters of earth; invoked by fishermen.

AZAZEL (1) Scapegoat which the Hebrews sent into the wilderness and pushed off a chalk cliff, representing the purging of sins in ritual for Day of Atone-ment. Probably originally a primitive Semitic genius or satyr of flocks, leader of the hairy race to which propitiation was made with a goat. The offsprings of this race were the giants who became demons of the wilderness. (2) Leader of the rebellious sons of God who entered into sexual relations with the daughters of men and were cast out of heaven. These fallen angels taught men personal adornment, warfare, and witchcraft, and at God's command were chained by Raphael in the wilderness. (3) In Mohammedanism angel cast out of heaven when he refused to worship Adam. His name was changed to Eblis (Iblis), meaning despair. He became a demon of the elements or a jinn of the desert. Probably a de-graded Babylonian deity. (4) In Milton's Paradise Lost a standard bearer of Satan.

AZDAHAH In Armenian mythology husband of Tigranuki. He intended to kill her brother Ti-granes, whom she warned, so Azdahah killed her. A demon of darkness. See Tigranes.

AZE Literally, trail or my dear. In Japanese legend the devoted wife of Nase, which see. Also known as Unakami-aze (trail on the sea).

AZHI DAHAKA (AZHDAK, ZAH-HAK DAHHAK) In the Avesta three-headed, six-eyed destructive dragon which ruled the second millenium of human history. In the Bundahesh the son of An-gra Mainyu by Autak with whom he had committed incest. In the Shahnamah he is a man with two serpents growing from his shoulders, created by Angra Mainyu to destroy those faithful to Ahura Mazda. Throughout Iranian mythology he appeared as the destroying serpent (drought and storm demon) which over-came Yima and brought about an end to the golden age. Cold, dis-ease, and death were the pro-ducts of his evil. After replac-ing Yima as king, with demons to assist him, he ruled for 1,000 years; then he was conquered by Thraetaona and bound on Mount Demavand. He will break his fetters before the coming of Keresaspa at the end of the world, but will be destroyed by Keresaspa. He is a coward who lives in constant terror because his death has been predicted. Barbarous and tyrannical, he per-haps is a personification of a thousand years of Iranian oppres-sion by the Babylonian empire. Azhi yields blazing A, suggesting the gnawing or scorching sun; Dahaka means man with a sar-castic laugh. Parallels Ahi, Fenrir.

AZI Persian demon who ravished beautiful women. Demon of age or time.

AZIEL Masculine Hebrew name meaning God strengthens.

AZILUTH Cabalistic term for universe.

AZIZA Among African Ewes, chimpanzee-like hunter gods or forest demons. Spirits who give magic and the knowledge or worship of the gods to men. Name signifies little people of the forest.

AZIZOS (AZIZU) In Arabian lore the powerful morning star, companion of the sun. The evening star is Monimos.

AZRAEL Hebrew and Mohammedan angel of death; angel who watches over the dying and separates the soul from the body at the moment of death. At Judgement Day he will be the last to die, but will do so at the second blast of the Archangel. Name signifying help of God

Azrael's wings. Signs of approaching death.

AZTEC Sun worshiper. Member of an American Indian people noted as astute traders.

AZTLAN Mythical land from which the Aztecs believed they had migrated. It was a bright or white land of seven cities where the seven sons of Iztac Mixcoatl, who had founded the seven tribes, emerged from seven caves. It was located in the north or northwest and in its midst was a sacred mountain, Colhuacan or Teoculhuacan, in which Chimomoztoc (Seven Caves) was located.

AZUCENA An old gypsy who steals an infant; from the character in Verdi's opera Il Trovatore.

AZUNMA In Japanese legend the dance of the swan-maiden in her plea for the recovery of her robe of feathers.

AZURE Sky. See blue for symbolism. Word derived from the name Ashur. In Chinese art color of rain. Worn by emperor when worshiping heaven. In Greek mythology the color of Zeus. In Roman mythology the color of Jupiter.

Azure Dragon. Ch'ing Lung, one of the supernatural creatures of China produced when P'an Ku called to Chaos for assistance in putting the universe in order.
With tortoise and phoenix a progenitor of the animal kingdom.
Guardian of the east, home of rain. Symbolizes spring rain and growing warmth. In China and Japan one of the four good spirits. See Ssu Ling.

AZYM (AZYME) Jewish paschal loaf. Unleavened bread; unfermented.

B

B Inferior to the best, second in any series, secondary. Among gnostics, Brahma, being of beings, breath of life, feeder, gem of the sky, lord of stars, savior. Occult significance:
dominates spiritual condition of body and mind; its period is two years. Character traits:
dreamer, falls in love easily, gentle, idealistic, introspective, quick thinking, willing to cooperate. Numerical value: two.
Physical weakspot: head. Planetary correspondence: moon.
Symbolic correspondence: science.
Tarot correspondence: High
Priestess or Door to the Temple.

In music seventh note or tone in scale of C Major or second note in scale of A minor. In old law badge of a convicted blasphemer, on whose head B was stamped.

Among Hebrew cabalists character traits: agreeable, passion for the opposite sex, scientific, wise. In low form conceited, ignorant, superficial, unskilled.
Symbol of Chac, Mayan long-nosed (elephant or tapir-nosed) rain god. Roman notation for 300; with a dash over it 300,000.

Parallels Arabic ba, Celtic beithe or beorc (birch tree), Egyptian hieroglyph crane, Greek beta, Hebrew beth (house or mouth). Interchangeable with P. See Alphabet Affiliations, Dominical Letter.

BA (1) In Egyptian mythology the soul, depicted as a bird which sometimes is shown with a human head. It abandons the body at death and hovers over the sahu (mummy) until able to reenter the body and protect it from decay. After the body is buried it flits about the cemetery at night. Cakes are left for it, and it is cared for by the goddess of the sycamore tree (tree of life). In some accounts the ba is a star lit by its own flame. Some say the ba is formed when the ka and khu are united. The distinction between ba, haibet (shadow), ka (second self), and khu (luminous ba) has not been clearly deciphered. (2) Mayan for father. (3) Pa, 'B' being interchangeable with 'P.'

BAAL (BAL, BEL, BELU) Any of the numerous local deities among ancient Semitic peoples, typifying the productive forces of nature and worshiped with orgiastic rites. Nameless deities are oldest, and Baal simply meant lord. An atmosphere or wind deity, also a heaven or sun deity. His worshipers believed he was the originator of life, the soul of the world. He brought earthquakes, fire, and storms; he was the generative principle in nature, originator of good and evil, provider of food. Among Egyptian sects worshiped as a god of the burning destroying sun. The Hebrews applied the name to any false god. As a Phoenician sun deity he was the male productive power. In Syria worshiped as a lunar god, lord of heaven, creator. Controlling fertility, rain, and thunder, he ultimately acquired solar attributes. He was accompanied by Baalath. Probable source of ball, Beal, Blaise.

Baalath. In Semitic worship the female reflection of Baal; lady or spouse of Baal. Female energy identified with earth. Identical with Baalti, Beltu.

Baalbec (Baalbek). Ancient city in East Lebanon where a temple of the sun was located. Now in ruins.

Baalim. Secondary divinities into which the great god Baal was subdivided. Plural form of Baal. Usually refers to the idols of Baal.

BAALBERITH In Old Testament Shechemite god who aided Abimelech to become king.

BAAL CHANAN Cabalistic arch demon. Compare Hareb Serap.

BAAL-LEBANON Ancient Semitic god of lightning, rain, and thunder.

BAAL-PEOR A Moabite deity; so called from Mount Peor, the seat of worship. A double-sexed deity of the generative and productive powers. Worshiped under the form of a phallus; sometimes a cone, ornamented pillar, or tree stem represented the deity's image. Maidens and youths of high birth prostituted themselves in his service. Men wore women's garments and women wore men's garments and brandished weapons. Each of the deity's male names had a female counterpart. As a male usually addressed as Baal, meaning Lord, or as Asherim, referring to his generative powers. His female counterpart was addressed as Ashtaroth, Ashtarte, Baalath, Beltu, etc. When in male form usually worshiped as a sun deity; when in female form worshiped as a moon goddess. See androgynous deities, Belphegor.

BAAL SHAMIN In Armenian mythology one of the seven chief deities. Lord of heaven. A giant noted for his valorous deeds. Imported from Phoenicia he became a god in conflict with the local Vahagn. In one myth Vahagn stole straw from him on a cold winter night, and the straws that dropped as he hurried away formed the Milky Way. In another myth he is identified as a Syrian god vanquished by the Armenian god Aram.

BAAL TAMAR Phoenician lord of the palm tree of life. Tamar yields resplendent sun fire. Compare Tamara Pua.

BAALTI (BELTI) Phoenician mother goddess. Name signifying my lady and used in addressing Astarte, Ishtar, and Zarbanit, etc. Identical with Baalath, Beltu.

BAALZEBUB Philistine deity. Lord of flies. A devil.

BAAU (BAU) Phoenician and Sumerian great mother. Virgin goddess of watery depths. Also an earth and fate goddess, and a war deity with solar attributes. Consort of Ningirsu. As creatrix identified with Gula, the healer, who cured all diseases and prolonged life. She superseded Tiamat, serpent mother, in beneficent form. Also worshiped in heifer shape. As queen of heaven, wife-mother of her dying son, absorbed by Ishtar, wife-mother of Tammuz. In Phoenician tradition she was mother of the first man. Her festival opened the New Year.

Identical with Aruru, Belit-ilani, Ma, Nintu.

BAB (BAL, BALA, BELA) Literally, gate. In Persia signifies father, house or temple, top. Title of the founder of Babism, a Persian sect which recognizes the equality of the sexes and forbids polygamy.

BABA Literally, parent of parents, father. An Eastern title of respect; a royal name in Egypt. Cognate with Khambaba, pope; source of baby.

BABA, ALI In the Arabian Nights tales a poor woodcutter who uses the magic words, 'Open Sesame,' and opens the door to fabulous wealth in the cave of the forty thieves. He typifies the spring sun who releases wealth from the underworld.

Baba, Cassim. Like his brother Ali he enters the cave of the forty thieves, but forgets the magic password, and is trapped inside, where he is found by the robbers, who cut him into four pieces, which they disburse in the four directions. He probably typifies a light or wind spirit. Compare Agamedes, Rhampsinitus.

Baba, Mustapha. Cobbler who sewed together the four pieces of the body of Cassim Baba and made him whole again (for his morning appearance).

BABA YAGA (BABA JAGA) Russian death or storm witch. Cannibalistic ogress who kidnaps and cooks her victims, preferring children. The fence pickets around her abode are tipped with skulls. She rides abroad in a mortar steered by a pestle and sweeps away all traces of her flight with her broom. Grandmother of the devil. Analogous to the German Berchta.

BABBAR Literally, shining one. Sumerian sun god. A name of Shamash, which see. Also identical with Utu. clerks or merchants who write English or to those who affect English culture, especially with a ludicrous effect.

BABBITT A narrow, self-important person who conforms to middle-class ideals and ideas, especially those relating to business. One bound by the conventions of his class. A character created by Sinclair Lewis.

BABEL Literally, gate of God. According to Old Testament the children of men attempted to build a tower that would reach to heaven. Jehovah, to prevent its completion, confounded their language so they were unable to understand one another. Thus a building impossibly high, a confusion, an impractical dream, the incomprehensible, noise, tumult. Source of babble. In Christian Science a symbol of the false knowledge and self-destructive errors founded on the deceptions of the corporeal senses.

BABES IN THE WOODS (1) Characters in old ballads and nursery tales who symbolize the light lost during an eclipse. A fairytale version of the Celestial Twins, Castor and Pollux, Gemini, etc. In some accounts the boy grows up to play the role of Perseus or Siegfried, sun heroes. (2) a term applied humorously to easily gulled, never suspicious folks; the insurrectionary hordes which infested the mountains of Wicklow and the woods of Enniscorthy, Ireland, late in the 18th century; men in the pillory or stocks.

BABINA Feminine name from old Italian, meaning stammerer.

BABOO (BABU) A Hindu gentleman; a polite form of address, such as sir or mister, often applied disparagingly to native

BABOON A stupid person. Totem of several African tribes. Ancestor of the Wachaga tribe of the Bantu people. A messenger of witches. In Egyptian mythology typifies wisdom because of its serious expression and human ways. Sacred to Thoth, god of learning. In judgement scene sits on the standard of the scales and warns Thoth when the pointer reaches the middle of the beam. Also an aspect of Thoth. Its habit of chattering at sunrise led to its being revered as the hailer of dawn. Compare dog-faced and ibis-faced ape. In Europe animal governing Capricornus.

Baboon with uplifted paws.
In Egyptian art, wisdom saluting dawn.

BABY (BABE) Diminutive, infantile, New Year, spring season. Dream significance: luck in home. Word derived from baba, i.e. parent of parents. In Roman mythology protected by: Cuba, goddess who looked after infants as they lay in their cots; Domiduca, who guarded them when they were out of their parents' sight; Fabulinus, who presided over their speech; Vagtanus, who caused them to utter their first cry.

Baby blue eyes. Innocence.

BABYLON (BABILU) One of the great metropolises of the ancient world. A luxury-loving city of great wealth; hence any city regarded as a seat of luxury and vice; also a place of captivity, exile, idolatry, persecution, tyranny, usurpation, in allusion to the Israelitish captivity. The Israelites also called it a city of lamentation. In Christian tradition the scarlet woman of the Apocalypse, the city of Antichrist. Puritans called the papacy Whore of Babylon.

BACA Place of tears or weeping, alluding to the valley mentioned in the Psalms, the name probably being used metaphorically. Baca trees are either balsam or mulberry trees.

BACAB In Mayan mythology son of Itzamna and Ixchel. He was slain at birth, and after three days rose to heaven as a rain god. In plural form, Bacabab or Bacabs, four giant sons of Itzamna and Ixchel, and the directions who supported the four corners of the firmament. They blew the four winds, provided fertilizing waters, presided over the calendar, and protected the jars containing the internal organs of mummies. Each season one Bacab died and another was reborn. The first, of blue color, was lord of the south and guardian of the belly. The augury of his year was propitious and he never sinned against his brothers. The next, red, was lord of the east, and guardian of the phallus, the serpent organ. The third, king of the north, was guardian of the white being. The fourth, black, assigned to the west, guarded the disembowled. The Bacabab were also gods of wine; see Acantum. They are identical with the Chacs and Tlalocs, and resemble to Maruts, Rudras, and four sons of Horus.

BACBUC An Assyrian or Chaldean word for an earthenware jar or pitcher. Used by Rabelais as the name of the Oracle of the Holy Bottle and of its priestess, to which Pantagrue and his companions make a famous voyage to enquire whether Panurge ought to marry. The Holy Bottle answers with a click like the noise made when glass is snapped. Bacbus tells Panurge the click means drink, and this is the most direct response ever given by the oracle. Panurge may interpret it as he likes; obscurity always saving the oracle.

BACCHANALIA Ancient Greek and Roman mysteries held in the spring. Naked women, wrought into a frenzy by music and dance, were driven across fields and through forests by priests in rites which endeavored to awaken the dead fertility god into action. In Greece usually called Dionysia. Degenerated to mean a drunken revel, licentious orgy, an unbridled indulgence of passions.

Bacchant. A priest of Bacchus. A drunken reveler.

Bacchantes (Bacchae). Originally the priestesses of Bacchus, wanton, wild and free. Also storm spirits; Maenads. Degenerated to mean women given to debauchery and drunken revels; women beside themselves with frenzy.

BACCHUS (BAKCHOS, LAKCHOS)

Greek and Roman god of fertility and wine. Personification of the blessings of nature. In Greece his worship merged with that of Dionysus. In Rome he was identical with Liber. Probably originally adopted by the Greeks from a Phoenician or Semitic fertility god. He frequently appeared as a goat, and choral odes sung in his honor were called tragodical (goat songs). His rites were orgiastic. Sacred to him were the dragon, goat, grape, ivy, leopard, magpie, ox, palm tree, panther, thyrsus. In peace his robes were purple and in war he was covered by a panther skin and panthers drew his chariot. He was attended by bacchantes and satyrs. His name is related to bacca (berry), and one of his titles was Evan, a name related to heaven. Another title was Bromius. An Egyptian bull known as Bacis, i.e. great light, appears to be related to him.

Priest of Bacchus. A drunk, a toper.

Son of Bacchus. A drunk, a toper.

BACHELOR'S BUTTON February 27 birthday flower with the sentiment celibacy. In the language of flowers: I have often made sport with love. Symbolic of hope in love, single wretchedness.

BACH-MA Indo-Chinese despot deified as a protector deity.

Name signifies white horse. Identical with Ma-vien, which see.

BACIS (BAKH) The Egyptian sun god Ra incarnate as a bull.

BACK The symbolism is: if broad, a conciliating mind; if humped, intelligence, jealousy; if medium, good balance; if narrow, quibbling, small mind.

Back door. Clandestine, secret.

Back stairs. Indirect, underhanded.

Backwater. A place or state of stagnant backwardness; to retreat from an opinion.

BACK BAY A fashionable residential section of Boston; used satirically as a place of snobs.

BACKBONE Universal axis. Courage, firmness, preservation, stability, strength of character.

Backbone of Osiris. In Egyptian mythology universal axis or pillar.

BACON Profit, prize, wealth.

BADB Irish storm goddess. Lady of the battle cry. She prophesied the destruction of the world because of evil. With Ana and Macha (or Macha and Morrigan) she produced fogs, a rain of fire, and streams of blood for the Tuatha De Danann in the war against the Firbolgs. With Ana and Macha she composed a fate trinity known as Morrigan. A name meaning boiling probably referring to the caldron of life.

Badb also means furies and is used as a joint title of Badb, Fea, Macha, and Nemon. In later mythology she deteriorated into a banshee who wailed over death not necessarily found in battle. Her spirit supposedly survived for centuries in crow form.

BADEBEC In Rabelais Gargantua and Pantagruel wife of Gargantua and mother of Pantagruel. In giving birth she dies, owing to the fact that she gives birth at the same time to 7 camels laden with eels, 9 dromedaries laden with hams and smoked tongue, 68 mules and their drivers, and 25 wagons full of garlic, leeks, onions, and shallots. Rabelais alludes to mother earth, who dies each year after supplying the world with provisions.

BADGE Emblem or token of achievement, allegiance, authority, membership.

BADGER One who burrows, harasses, torments; one who is clumsy or offensive. Emblem of Wisconsin. In China represents Ti in eastern quadrant, the spring season. In Japan called tanuki and regarded a practical joker and a man-eater with a malicious supernatural power. It symbolizes deceit and witchcraft.

Badger tooth. Talisman for good luck at card playing.

- BADOURA In the Arabian Nights a Chinese princess, "the most beautiful woman ever seen on earth." By fairy influence she falls in love and exchanges rings with a prince in a dream; eventually she marries the prince.
- BADUHENNA (1) Ancient northern European storm goddess; the war-mad one. The first part of her name connects with Anglo-Saxon beadu and Old High German batu (war); the second part with Gothic and Middle High German winno (to rage) and Old High German winna (quarrel). (2) Sacred Teutonic grove where, in 28 A. D., the Romans met defeat and 900 of them were slain.
- BAETYLUS (BAITULOS, BETYLUS) Sacred pillar or stone serving in place of a statue of a divinity. Stone in which a deity resides. Originally a meteorite or rude stone worshiped as of divine origin. It seems to be connected with the Semitic Bethel (House of God); also related to beetle.
- BAG Fertility, riches, travel, winds. Dream significance: (empty) care, laziness; (full) abundance, produce. Compare purse. In China called k'i-mu, holder of essences of life. In Greek mythology holder of winds. In Japanese mythology holds wealth and winds; attribute of Daikoku, Fu-jin, Hotei.
- Bag of bones. Death, emaciation.
- BAGATTEL (BAGATTO) The Juggler or Magician in the tarot deck. Name means cobbler. See Magician.
- BAGAVAN Armenian 'town of gods,' where priests were buried.
- BAGGAGE A contemptuous term for women, either because soldiers once sent their wives in baggage wagons or from the Italian bagascia (harlot).
- BAGH Islamic magic knot which prevents consummation of marriage.
- BAGISTANE (BEHISTOON) Persian peaked rock which was the Holy of Holies.
- BAG-MASHTU (BAG-MAZDA) Iranian sky god; an older form of Ahura Mazda. Identified with Khaldi.
- BAGOS PAPAIOS Phrygian sky god.
- BAGPIPES Breath, wind. Attribute of Pan, a wind deity. Compare pipes, crossed.
- BAGRADA Valley of defeat (or victory), from the valley where Hannibal was defeated by Scipio.
- BAGWYN Literally, big one or holy buck. Welsh for yale, which see.
- BAHAMUT Arabic fabulous whale or fish on which stands the bull Kuyuta supporting the rock on which stands the angel who holds the earth steady.
- BAHET Egyptian female personification of abundance.
- BAHRAM (BEREZISAVANH) Sacred fire of Iran, which shoots up before Ahura Mazda. The essence or soul of all fires, it is composed of sixteen different kinds of fire. Earthly representative of the divine essence, it appears in great temples in a vase in the sacred room which is vaulted like a dome (heaven), and maintained by six logs of sandalwood. Five times a day a mobed (priest), his face covered by a veil, to prevent his breath from polluting the fire, and wearing gloves, places a log as he recites words to repel evil thoughts, evil words, and evil deeds. Resembles Vestal fires.

BAHRAM YASHT In Varenjana legend a miraculous bird. One feather of the bird had so great an effect on demons, Zarathursta, to render himself invincible to the powers of darkness, stroked his body with it. A bird of fire or light. Comparable to the phoenix.

BAIAME Australian great spirit. A beneficent deity who rules everything and lives in eternal brightness up in the sky. In some tribes he is worshiped as an old man in the east or north, sitting with legs under him. From his shoulders extend two great quartz crystals which hold up the sky. In other tribes he is asleep. Once he awakened, turned over, and thus caused the flood. He will awake again and eat up the world.

BAIDRAMA (VAYBRAMA)
Taino Indian deity; strength giver.

BAILE In Irish legend lover who died from false tidings. Heir to Ulster, he was called Baile of honeyed speech. He set out to meet Ailinn, and on the way was approached by a stranger who informed him she had been held back by the men of Leinster and as a result had died of grief. On receiving this news Baile died on the spot. The stranger, a ghostly enemy of Baile, then went to Ailinn and told her Baile was dead, and she in turn died on receiving the news. A yew, which bore the appearance of Ailinn, grew from the grave of Baile; an apple tree, bearing the likeness of Baile, grew on Ailinn's grave. Wands made from the trees sprang together and could not be separated. Their legends resemble that of Romeo and Juliet and of Shite and Tsure.

BAILEY Masculine name from the Latin, meaning deliverer, keeper.

BAILOS AND XANTHOS In Greek mythology horses which Poseidon gave to Pelops to drive his chariot over land and sea. Probably winds.

BAI-ULGON (BAI-YLGON, KUD-AI BAI-ULGON) Literally, great and rich. Altai-Tatar over god. His abode is in the sixteenth heaven on a golden mountain. He and his three sons, Pyrshak-khan, Tos-khan, and Sulap, and two grandsons, Kyrgys-khan and Sary-khan bring happiness to men. White horses are sacrificed to him as sky god, brown horses to the others as earth deities. Grain is sacrificed to all. His sons and grandsons inhabit storeys in heaven below his, his messengers inhabit the second storey, men live in the bottom or first storey. One son, Kara-khan, the black prince, deserted him for the underworld.

BAIYUHIBI Indonesian father of Cloud and Fog, which he caused to rain for three days. From the rushing waters he created mountains and valleys.

BAJANAI Yakut forest master. He calls and weeps (wind and rain) as he goes through the forest, and he leads wanderers astray. Sometimes he takes human or animal form, and he is the owner of valuable game called Bai-Bajanai (rich Bajani), which he provides for hunters.

BAJANG (BADJANG) Malayan malignant spirit whose presence foretells disaster. It takes the form of a polecat and is especially dangerous to children.

BAKE (INANGI-I-BAKE) Ogress in Indonesian tales.

BAKEMONO Goblin in Japanese folklore.

BAKHU (1) In ancient Egypt the mountain of sunrise. (2) Japanese eater of dreams. A fabulous animal whose picture is hung at the bedside so that it will eat bad dreams and the dreamer will escape their evil effects. Corresponds to the bagwyn (yale).

BAKULA Ninth Buddhist arhat. He holds a mongoose vomiting jewels (fertility).

BAL Appears frequently in Irish place names. Identical with Baal and Bel.

BALAAM A celebrated diviner of the city of Pethor on the Euphrates. He was bribed by Balak, king of Moab, to prophesy against the Israelites. On the way to utter the curse his ass stopped short in a narrow pass and could not be forced to move; instead it reproached him. The miracle of an ass speaking he interpreted as the voice of Jehovah, and he blessed the Israelites, who became victorious.

BALAGAN ISHITA Yakut dwelling master. Usually the spirit of a home's original occupant or builder, and he appears in the shape of a former dweller.

BALAHA Buddhist winged horse; magic steed. Typifies light ray or sunlit cloud. Parallels Pegasus.

BALAN In medieval romances a dangerous and strong knight. In the Arthurian cycle he is a personification of darkness and a brother of Balin, whom he kills. In the Sowdan of Babylon he is the father of Fierabras, ultimately conquered by Charlemagne. See Balin and Balan.

BALANCE Fair dealing, justice. Emblem of the zodiacal sign Libra. In Egyptian mythology, death. Souls are weighed in the underworld of Osiris. In Greek tradition attribute of Nemesis. In Old Testament, famine, scarcity; a period when the need for measuring food stuff arises.

BALARAMA Literally, Rama the strong. In Hinduism the convivial fair-skinned elder brother of Krishna or, according to the Vaishnavas, Krishna's avatar. In other accounts incarnation of Vishnu. He was torn from his mother in the form of a single hair, explained by the fact that in the transition of the moon from dark to light phases, a thin arc of light, which may be likened to a white hair, appears to the right. A drunkard.

BALAWN Masculine name from the Latin, meaning the strong.

BALBO Masculine name from the Latin, meaning stammerer.

BALCONY Love, serenade; also authority, rule, totalitarianism. Dream significance: ephemeral honors, (if collapsing) catastrophe.

BALDEMAR Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning of princely fame.

BALDER (BAELDAEG, BALDAG, BALDR, BALDUR, BELDEG, PALTAR) In Norse mythology son of Odin and Frigga. God of summer sunlight, incarnation of the life principle. Mild and wise, he is called The Good. Runes engraved on his tongue provide him with great eloquence. By order of Odin everything that springs from air, earth, fire, and water is asked to promise not to injure Balder. Only the mistletoe is not asked because it seems too insignificant. At the winter solstice he is slain by the blind Hoder (darkness or winter) at the instigation of Loki, who supplies Hoder with an arrow made of the mistletoe. Thus light is overcome by darkness, summer by winter, good by evil. In the Saxo version he is slain by Hotherus in a quarrel for the hand of the virgin moon Nanna, by whom Balder becomes the father of Forseti (justice). His legends suggest he also is a tree god, his soul being in the mistletoe, and as a tree-will he courts Nanna. Likewise he is associated with well worship. Wells spring up from his horse's hoofmarks; he finds water for his soldiers; water defends his burial mound or ship; it reflects Nanna's image. His death is avenged by his half-brother Vali, the sun's scorching heat. The ring Draupnir (fertility) is placed on his ship and burial pyre Hringhorn (sunlit clouds or the fiery sun as it sets), which carries him to Hela, where he gives Hermod Draupnir to take back to earth's surface. The conflict with Loki suggests the death of love by learning; Loki being a form of logos. Balder's death portends the approach of Ragnarok, when he and Hoder are reborn and live together in the battlehall of Hropt (Odin). With his resurrection comes the golden age of man. He is portrayed as a beautiful youth with a mistletoe sprig. His name is interpreted to mean shining or white one; it also yields bold prince. Some identify him as Odin's horse. He resembles Adonis, Bjelbog, Lugh, Sarpedon. His conflict with Loki parallels that of Cain and Abel, Set and Horus, Typhon and Osiris.

Baldershage. Sacred grove of Balder.

BALDNESS Open, plain, undisguised. Among ancient Jews and Romans a form of deformity. A form of self-mutilation practiced by ancient Semites as a means of lamenting for the dead. See hair-shearing.

BALDWIN (1) Masculine name from the German, meaning bold friend. (2) In Charlemagne romances nephew of Roland and the handsomest and youngest of Charlemagne's paladins. (3) In Tasso's Jerusalem Delivered he figures as the restless and ambitious Duke of Bologna, a victorious warrior.

BALEARIDES Three islands, Ivica, Majorca, Minorca, off the east coast of Spain, which in Greek mythology were ruled by Geryon, giant with three bodies and one soul.

BALI (BALY) In Hinduism an asura. Originally a righteous spirit who became proud and wicked and attained sovereignty of the three worlds, earth, air, and sky. Indra appealed to Vishnu who, in dwarf form, approached Bali and asked for a boon of as much land as he could measure in three strides. When Bali granted the boon, Vishnu resumed his giant form, and his three steps encompassed the three worlds, which he gave to Indra to rule, banishing Bali to the underworld, where he became lord.

BALIN AND BALAN In Malory's Morte d'Arthur, two brothers,

Northumberland knights, who meet without recognizing each other and joust until both are killed. Balin appears to be identical with the Gallo-British sun god Belinus; Balan with Bran, deity of darkness. Geoffrey of Monmouth also refers to the brothers under the names Belinus (sun) and Brennius (darkness). When mortally wounded they discover their relationship and request to be buried in one grave, thus both light and darkness rest in the afterworld.

BALISARDA In Ariosto's Orlando Furioso a miraculous sword made by the sorceress Falerina in the garden of Orgagna. It was able to cut through enchanted substances and was given to Rogero for the purpose of dealing Orlando his death blow.

BALKIS Mohammedan name for the Queen of Sheba.

BALL Celestial body, earth, eternity, perfection. War, alluding to a cannon ball or projectile. A ballot or vote. Dream significance: (playing) opportunity to seize; (rolling) success delayed. Word related to Baal. Compare circle, globe, orb. In Buddhism called tama and represents the pearl, symbolic of sacred emanations of the deities. Sometimes surmounted by a flame and called the flaming jewel, i.e. sun. Third eye of Buddha; transcendent wisdom. In Greek mythology chance, fickleness. An attribute of Nike and Tyche. In Japan denotes ether, wisdom.

Ball and chain. Imprisonment, restraint.

Ball and compass. Measure, proportion.

Ball and cross. In Christianity gradual enlightenment spreading to the four quarters of the world.

Black ball. An adverse vote, rejection.

Three golden balls. Triple perfection: good thought, good word, good deed. In the coat of arms of the Lombard family of the Medici. Inasmuch as they were noted money lenders, pawnbrokers adopted the design. Emblem of Saint Nicholas of Myra.

BALMARCODES Phoenician lord of dance and revelry. Identical with Hadad.

BALM OF GILEAD December 26 birthday flower with the sentiment cure, relief. It symbolizes social intercourse, sympathy.

BALMUNG Literally, grief. In Norse mythology sword of Siegfried. Obtained from the dwarfs of the land of the Nibelungs (land of mist), and with which he slays them. Thus the sun obtains his rays from the mist and with the rays slays the mist. Identical with Gram.

BALOO In mythology of New South Wales, the moon. When two men refused to carry his dogs (snakes) across a stream he punished mankind with death, taking away the immortality they enjoyed.

BALOR Celtic demon of night, whose abode was under the sea. Grandson of Net, son of Buarainech, husband of Cathlionn, who prophesied that his grandson Lugh would kill him. He secretly looked into the window of his father's house where sorcerers were preparing a magic potion. Poisonous fumes infected his eye with their own deadly nature, causing the instantaneous death of anyone on whom it glanced. Neither gods nor men were exempt, and Balor was permitted to live on condition he kept his evil eye closed. However in the battle of Mag Tured he was placed opposite the Tuatha De Danann, and the lid was raised by his four attendants (winds) to cause the death of those who faced him. The sun deity Lugh threw Tathlum, a magic round stone (sun), it pierced Balor's evil eye, fell out the back of his head, and destroyed three times nine of the Fomors behind him as well as Balor himself. His battle account with his grandson is classified as a conflict of the Old Year or Winter against the New Year or Spring. In a ballad Lugh beheads Balor, who advises Lugh to set the severed head on his own and earn Balor's blessing. Lugh sets it on a hazel tree which splits in two and becomes the abode of ravens and vultures. He resembles Acrisius, Hawthorn, Laius; his name is related to Baal.

Balor's eye. Evil eye; vulnerability.

BALSAM April 9 birthday flower with the sentiment ardent love. In the language of flowers: You are cold or You have offended me. Symbol of impatience.

BALSHAMEME (BAALSAMAME, BALSAMEM, BALSHAMIN, BELSHIM) Semitic beneficent lord of heavens. Thunder deity. Parallels Zeus. Probably originally a title for Adad or Shamash.

BALTHAZAR Masculine name meaning lord of treasure. One of the three Magi. See Balthazar under saints.

BALUNGWANA Among the Baronga of Africa, small apparitions which descend from the sky during thunderstorms. Slaves of Mungu.

BALWHIDDER, REV. MICAH
A pious clergyman with old fashioned prejudices, yet kind-hearted and sincere. From the pastor in Galt's Annals of the Parish, one of the most famous pastors in fiction.

BAMBETSU In Japanese tradition foreign clans; families represented by the mass of people. Those without deity ancestors.

BAMBOO In China and Japan abundant life, culture, fastidiousness, fidelity, gentleness, gracefulness, long life, modesty, open-mindedness, peace, refinement, straightforwardness, tranquility, uprightness, winter, yielding but enduring strength. Bearer of adversity, protector against defilement. In China called chu, one of the three friends. See bamboo, pine, and plum. In art associated with the tiger. In Japan called sho and used in New Year decorations. When used at wedding feasts the cut must be hidden by leaves as the sight of it suggests severed love. Associated with the sparrow.

Bamboo and crane. In Japan longevity and happiness.

Bamboo culms. In China thrown into open fires to explode and drive away evil spirits.

Bamboo grove. In Japan symbolizes a family of princes; also the everyday world.

Bamboo musical instruments. In China symbolizes gathering of people; the sounds typify the rush of flowing water.

Bamboo, pine and plum. The three friends of the cold season, suggesting that those who encounter hardships should never falter for these three flourish despite adverse conditions. Emblematic of Buddha-Confucius-Lao Tze. In Japan auspicious New Year's decoration, expressing enduring happiness and long life.

Bamboo, plum. In China husband and wife, two-fold happiness.

Bamboo sprig. Used for purposes of divination in China; in Japan signifies madness.

Bamboo staff. In China carried when in mourning for a father.

Bamboo, tiger. In China and India signifies safety.

Bamboo tube drum. In China emblem of Chang Kuo-lao.

BANA Hindu evil giant. Father of Usha. Krishna cut off his thousand arms to liberate Aniruddha. Storm demon.

BANANA Bountifulness, endogeny, phallus, prolificness. In Japan, where the plant is fruitless, evanescence, frailty, shyness.

Banana bud. Life out of death, the bud emerging from a poisonous flower.

Banana leaf. Symbol of all that is in a Buddhist sutra text.

Banana tree. Self-propagation, ever-continuing life.

BANBA (BANBHA) In Irish legend a queen of the Tuatha De Danann; goddess of death. Her name, as well as those of her sisters Eriu and Fotla, was anciently applied to the country. Together they formed a triple goddess.

BANDAGE OVER EYES Blindness, ignorance, slavery. Also impartiality, justice. Themis is portrayed blind, as justice is not swayed by appearance.

BANDICOOT In Austrial mythology the sole owner of fire until it was stolen from him by the pigeon and the hawk.

BANDWAGON Procession, parade. In United States connected with elections, and "to climb the bandwagon," is to shift one's vote to aid an apparently successful candidate or cause, to travel with the crowd.

BANEB-DED (BANEB-TETTU) Egyptian great father deity. Pillar and ruler of the sky and wind of life, he caused fertilizing Nile floods, made the earth fertile, and originated the passion of love. As a fertility deity the ram was sacred to him. Later linked with Her-shef, Khnufu, Osiris, Ptah, and Ra.

BANGMA A marvelous bird in India which uttered oracular speech. Its feminine counterpart was Bangmi.

BANIAN A Hindu merchant or trader of a caste which abstains from eating flesh. The English navy is said to have one banian day each week, a day of poor fare, when no meat is served.

BANISHING EVIL THOUGHT

Personified in an Italian icon by a man holding a baby by its legs as if about to dash it against a rock. Dead babies are on the ground, as evil thoughts should be killed when they are young.

dBAN-MGON (WANG-GON) In Tibetan Buddhism Lord of Night.

BANNER Triumph, victory. When waving, disperser of evil spirits. Dream significance: good luck, glory, honors. Word identical with bonheur, which means happiness. In Buddhism one of the eight glorious emblems and symbolic of breath of life. See dhvaja, lang-po-top-gye, lung-ta. In Christian tradition the body of Christ. Triumph over persecution and death. Frequently shown with the cross.

Banneret. A knight who was permitted to bring a company into the field under his own banner.

BANNIK Russian household spirit that lives in the bathroom.

BANQUO In Shakespeare's Macbeth a thane and general who is killed by order of Macbeth because witches prophesied that Banquo's descendants would reign over Scotland. Macbeth's plans to kill the seed of Banquo are frustrated when Fleance, son of Banquo, escapes. The ghost of Banquo appears to taunt Macbeth.

BANSCHI In Irish mythology the white lady, queen of elves.

BANSHEE (BANSHIE, BANSITH) Irish fairy, a bean-sidhe (woman of the hill). Priestess of the great dead, she wailed in prophetic anticipation when one of royal blood was about to die. Later a family spirit which, by its wails, warned of an approaching death in a family. A spirit of the wind.

BANTAM A small plucky fowl, hence a small resolute or quarrelsome person.

BANTU A feuding African tribe. Also called Bechuana, which see.

BANZAI Literally, ten thousand years. Japanese salutation or patriotic shout meaning long life, to the emperor. A fanatical battle cry expressing recklessness, suicide.

BAOBAB African tree sacred to the sun deity. Cognate with Hebrew word hobab, meaning beloved.

BAPHOMET (BAP) An idol, spiritual illumination, or symbol connected with the mystic rites of medieval Templars. Frequently represented as a small human figure with two heads, one male and one female, the body being female. Medieval French form of Mahomet.

BAPTES Priests of the mysteries of the Thracian mother goddess Cotytto, whose rites were orgiastic. The name derived from the Greek verb bapto, to wash, because of the so called ceremonies of purification connected with her rites.

BAPTISM A ceremonial immersion, usually in water, or a sprinkling of water, symbolizing admission to a religious sect, cleansing of the soul, dedication, purification, rebirth, regeneration, sanctification, washing away of sin. A longevity rite. A symbol of primeval waters. In some societies the initiate runs through fire. Dream significance: desire fulfilled. Compare circumcision, drunkenness of children, initiation. In Christianity admission to a church, usually a name-giving ceremony. Redemption from original sin; spiritual cleansing. Represented by a baptismal font, cross, scallop shell, fish, head of Christ and two fish, two fish crossed, water. In the Near East, an ancient fertility ritual in which immersion was an enactment of a symbolic death and resurrection. In medieval Europe an exorcism causing the devil to go out of a person and permitting the holy spirit to enter. In Old Testament coincides with the passage of the Red Sea, thus death and resurrection. In Zoroastrianism remission of sins by water. Compare Baptes.

Baptism by fire. A crucial test, any severe ordeal. The first battle in which a soldier participates.

BAPTIST (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning purifier. (2) A member of a Christian denomination maintaining that baptism should follow upon a profession of faith.

BAQUAINA A Bechuanaland feuding tribe. The name resolves into children of the quaina (crocodile). The tribes siboko or tribal object of veneration is the crocodile, an animal they never touch or kill. Compare Bechuana.

BAR In heraldry same as fess except narrower. The bearing of one who sets the 'bar' of conscience, honor, and religion against evil passions and temptations. In still narrower form called barrulet.

Bar sinister. In heraldry popularly a mark of illegitimate birth, probably confused with bend sinister. See baton.

BARA (BARAGULLA) In Babylonian mythology son of Ea. An oracular or revealer god.

BARABBAS (1) Masculine name from the Aramaic meaning son of the Abbas or son of the father. (2) In New Testament a condemned insurrectionist or robber who was released by the mob in place of Jesus. According to custom one prisoner was released by popular demand at the spring festival.

BARAK Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning lightning.

BARATARIA City in which one gets nothing to eat, alluding to the island city in Cervantes' Don Quixote, over which Sancho Panza was appointed governor. Every dish set before the governor was whisked away without being tasted, some because the blood was heated, others because the blood was cold, so that Sancho was allowed to eat nothing. Compare Barmecide feast.

BARBAGIA A wild district in Sardinia, notorious because of its dissolute women.

BARBARA Feminine name from the Greek, meaning barbarian, foreign, strange.

BARBAROSSA (1) Masculine name from the Italian meaning red beard. (2) Surname of Frederick I, 12th century German emperor. According to legend he sleeps in a cave at Berchtesgaden or in the Kyffhauser in Thuringia, sitting around a stone table with his six knights, awaiting the "fullness of time," when he will emerge to rescue Germany from bondage and lead her to rule the world. His beard has grown through the table slab, but it must wind itself thrice around the table before he appears again. His sleep resembles that of Arthur, Charlemagne, Tannhauser, and other sleeping heroes. See Sleepers.

BARBARY COAST A district notorious for its dance halls and gambling resorts, from a once widely known district in San Francisco.

BARBER Originally a butcher-priest at the sacrificial post, who cut the hair (strength) of victims whose blood he let in expiatory rites. Later a hair cutter and surgeon. Typified by a shaving basin. In ancient Rome, as in modern times, the barber's shop was a center for the dissemination of scandal and gossip, hence, "every barber knows that."

Barber's pole. In 19th century United States a barber's trade mark was a pole of red and white peppermint stripes topped by a gilt knob. The pole represented the bandage with blood on it, the white stripes clean bandage. Blue sometimes was substituted for red, because venous blood is somewhat bluish. The knob typified the basin that protected the patient's clothes from being soiled.

BARBERO (BARBELO) Christian gnostic name meaning wisdom.

BARBERRY April 10 birthday plant with the sentiment ill-temper, sharpness of temper, sourness.

BARBMO-AKKA Lapp old woman who brings back the birds in the spring. Also known as Loddis-edne (bird-mother).

BARCHIEL Hebrew masculine name meaning God's blessed one.

BARD In druidic order master of wisdom, depositary of noble knowledge. Second step in the initiation of a druid. The color blue was assigned to a bard inasmuch as they supposedly had the power of obtaining great truths from the blue or heaven. The triad of the bard was: 1- make the country habitable; 2- civilize the people; 3- promote science. They recited druidic precepts that were unlawful to set down; they lauded the deeds of gods and heroes, acted as heralds, sang at royal and other celebrations, and incited men to battle. Bard is now applied to any poet. See druid, troubador.

BARDO Tibetan Buddhism after-death state; transition between death and rebirth.

Bardo goddesses. In Tibetan Buddhism the four female Door-keepers, the eight Htamenmas, the eight Kerimas, the twenty-eight Wang-chug-ma.

Bardo Thodol. In Tibetan Buddhism liberation by hearing on the after-death plane. It lasts forty-nine days. The first period, Chikha, lasts three to four days and is the transitional state at the moment of death; the second period, Chonyid, lasts fourteen days and is the transitional state of experiencing reality; the third state, Sidpa Bardo, is the transitional state of seeking rebirth and ends when the deceased has found rebirth in one of the six regions or lokas.

BARDOLF Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning fierce boar.

BARDSEY ISLAND In Brythonic legend island on which Merlin disappeared with nine bards and thirteen treasures of Britain, which thus were lost to mankind. In another account he was imprisoned on the island, where sleep was the chain by which he was bound.

BAREFEET Hardship, poverty, rusticity, self-denial.

BARGE Word which yields great bear or pere (father). Its symbolism is identical with that of ark, which see.

BARGHEST (BARQUEST) A goblin of frightful appearance portending misfortune. It often appears as a large dog. A word sometimes confused with barfly.

BARIEL Hebrew masculine name meaning God's pure one.

BARK (of a dog) In Icelandic tradition voice of the protecting barkja, i.e. great father, ever-existent one. Dream significance: beware.

Barker. Anciently the guardian or watcher at the door of heaven during the night, protector against evil. Usually portrayed as a dog, which barked at day-break. Popularly understood as the guardian of a house against thieves. Also used to describe one who advertises a circus or outdoor show. In some mythologies the animal is a cock, which crows.

BARLEY KING In ancient fertility rites, like the oak and other vegetation kings, castrated and ritually murdered at the end of office, or the harvest feast. The bearded firelike spike is the cause of the name barley, originally baerlic, i.e. bear-like or bur-like (father-of-fire like). Thus the barley was a sun emblem or source of life. To dream of barley was interpreted as a sign of health and joy. Compare dying god, reaping, resurrection myth.

Sir John Barleycorn. Humorous personification of barley for its use in intoxicating liquors. In a song by Robert Burns, Sir John is buried by his neighbors, but he rises again. He bears no malice toward those who attempted to kill him; instead he tries to cheer them. A legend which echoes Dionysus. Because Sir John tries to cheer people with liquor his name is applied to bar and innkeepers; also to those who overdrink intoxicants.

BARMECIDE FEAST An illusion, especially one involving disappointment, alluding to a story in Arabian Nights, in which a member of a noble Persian family of Bagdad gives a beggar an imaginary feast on magnificent dishes. See Barataria.

BAR MITZVAH Literally, son of command. Jewish initiation rite, acknowledgement of sexual maturity, a puberty celebration.

The thirteenth birthday of a boy, when he is acknowledged to be a man and acquires religious duties and responsibilities. Mitzvah signifies command of God, thus the fulfillment of a religious function regarded as a special privilege in God's service. Parallels shiocka.

BARN Battle, farming, rural life. Dream significance: poverty. Barndoor fowl. In Japanese mythology the long-singing bird of eternal night. See cock.

BARNABAS (BARNABY, BARNEY) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning son of exhortation.

BARNACLE A person or thing that clings tenaciously, a hanger-on, a persistent follower.

BARNETT Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning commander.

BARON In English history, a feudal vassal who held his lands directly from the king. In Britain and elsewhere the lowest grade of nobility. In United States applied sarcastically to a powerful banker, financier, or industrialist.

Baronet. A member of a British hereditary order of honor, ranking below barons and made up of commoners who are designated by 'sir' before the name.

BARREL Beer, the poor man's drink. To illustrate poverty or one victimized by politicians, a man is shown to be nude except for the covering of a barrel. Dream significance: (full) abundance, prosperity; (empty) poverty.

Barrel-house. A cheap drinking establishment, where barrels are in evidence.

Cracker-barrel. Free speech, gossip, idleness. Alluding to rural areas in the United States, where men formerly met at the country store to exchange opinions, often dipping their hands in the store's cracker-barrel as they talked.

BARRETT Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning bear rule.

BARRI (BARI) In Norse mythology, forest in which the earth goddess Gerd married the sun deity Frey.

BARROW Ancient burial mound, abode where the dead feasted and occupied themselves with the affairs of their kindred. A heap of sacred stones, a pyramid, a sacred hill; also a beacon shrine, judgement seat, stronghold. In some parts of England termed howe or low, corruption of Hew or El Hu, and symbolic of immutable Father Hu, sky deity. In medieval times spelled berw, thus related to bear or pero, probably once meant bear or pere Hu. In Mexico a group of seven pyramids are arranged in the form of the Seven Stars or Great Bear. Fires were lit on the summits of barrows (hills), and in lieu of fires, fir trees were planted in sun worship. In present day common usage a castrated mule; also a pushcart used by hawkers. A word related to burrough. Also known as mottes. See burial, cairn, hill, Stonehenge.

Barrow wight. In Norse mythology a barrow dweller, ghost of the dead, frequently troublesome to the living.

BARRY (BARRIE) Masculine Irish name meaning spear.

BARRY WAVE OF SIX In heraldry waves of the sea corresponding to the six attributes of deity: justice, love, majesty, mercy, power, wisdom.

BARTHOLOMEW (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew meaning warrior son or son of furrows. (2) One of the twelve Christian disciples. Guardian of the zodiacal house Libra. His day is August 24 (at Rome, August 25) in western churches and June 11 in eastern churches. He seems to be the same person John calls Nathaniel, which may be his real name, Bar-tholomew (son of Tolmai) his patronymic name, and one identical to the Celtic Partholan. See also under saints.

Bartholomew doll. An overdressed woman, alluding to the bespangled doll offered for sale at the Bartholomew Fair.

Bartholomew Fair. Held for centuries in England to celebrate Saint Bartholomew's Day. Gradually it degenerated into orgies and riots, until it finally was abolished in 1855. Ben Jonson, in a comedy, satirized the Puritans under this name.

Bartholomew Massacre. Instigated by Catherine de Medici on the day dedicated to Saint Bartholomew. Thirty thousand French Protestants are said to have been slaughtered.

Bartholomew pig. A fat person, alluding to one of the chief attractions at the Bartholomew Fair, which was a pig, roasted whole and sold piping hot.

BARTRAM (BARTHRAM) Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning fortunate farmer, also barn.

BARU An occult magician.

BARUCH Hebrew masculine name meaning blessed. According to the Old Testament he was the faithful friend and scribe of Jeremiah. He shared the persecutions of the prophet, was imprisoned with him, and forced into exile in Egypt. An apocryphal book is ascribed to him. In art he is shown with a knotted staff and script.

BASEMENT Dream significance: anguish, torment.

BASHAN A fertile region east of the Jordan in ancient Palestine, famous for its cattle and sheep.

BASHAW In Turkey a bigwig, a personage. Variant of pasha.

BASHFULNESS In art personified as a virgin in white, veiled, holding a lily, a tortoise at her feet. In an Italian icon represented as a modest-looking girl with her eyes cast down, her cheeks cherry color. Her robe is red and she wears an elephant's head as a headdress. In her right hand is a falcon, in her left a scroll inscribed with 'Dysapia Procul.'

BASHIBAZOUK An irregular soldier, from the irregular mounted troops in Turkish service.

BASIL (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning kingly, royal. (2) July 12th birthday flower with the sentiment hatred for the other sex. Symbolic of poverty.

Sweet basil. Carries the sentiment, good wishes.

BASILISK In classical and medieval tradition a fabulous dragon or lizard which killed with its breath or look, and whose hissing drove away all other creatures. In some accounts born of an egg laid by a toad. Shown with the body and wings of a dragon, the head of a serpent, its tail in its mouth. Sometimes shown as half cock, half snake. Although only a foot long, it was king of all dragons and serpents. Ancients believed it had a white mark on its head, but medieval mystics elaborated this into a gold crown. A brave man could dispose of one by backing up to it, holding his breath, and placing a mirror in front of its horrible face so that, confronted by its own hideous image, the creature would expire; hence evil devouring or recognizing itself. The tail in its serpent mouth suggests the cycle of the year or time devouring itself. In Christian tradition typifies Antichrist, the Devil, evil. Name from the Greek, meaning little king. Identified with the cockatrice. Old-fashioned cannons, decorated with serpents, were called basilisks.

BASIN Celestial reservoir, clouds. Cleanliness, barber.

BASKET Fertility, scrotum, vulva. Typifies the seasons, the contents of the basket indicating the season. The coracle in which ancient sun gods made their New Year voyage to their virgin mothers, dawn, earth, or moon goddesses, who greeted them on a bank, that is received them as they left the horizon. Usually shown as a shovel-shaped basket of rush and osier, anciently used as a harvest cradle, manger, or winnowing-fan for tossing grain up in the air against the wind to separate it from the chaff. As the crib of the sacred human infant an instrument of rebirth or preventer of massacre, and as such the cradle of Hirugo, Kuknos, Moses, Perseus, Sargon I, Taliesin, etc. Compares with ark, cista. Dream significance: (empty) passing worries, warning; (full) economy, pleasant visitation, success. Among American Indians a conveyance in which escape is made to heaven.

Braided basket. In ancient Egypt indicated a lord or master.

Basket with flowers or fruit. Fertility, gift, opportunity, reward. Also a deity offering. In China a basket of flowers is an emblem of Hua Hsien and of Ts' si-ho. A basket of peaches is the emblem of Hsi Wang Mu.

BASMU Sumerian chaos viper; ally of Tiamat. Compare Mushshussu.

BASSARID (BASARID) Literally, fox. In Greek mythology a bacchant, a reveler. Companion of Dionysus and carrier of the budding thyrsus, symbol of revivification. Resembles the Maenad.

BAST Egyptian goddess who watched over childbirth. Personification of life and fruitfulness. Although essentially mild, she also was worshiped as a war goddess, protector of cities. She was represented: as a cat-headed woman bearing a sistrum, in which form she also was called Pasht; as a lion-headed woman with solar disk and uraeus, the uraeus identifying her as an earth mother. Her chief seats of worship were Babastis (Pa-Bast or Pi-beseth) and Memphis. Sometimes confounded with Mut, sometimes with Sekhet.

BASTARD An illegitimate child; hence that which is false, irregular, not genuine. Word resolves into bast (middle English for pack-saddle) + ard (through), meaning of a mule.

BASTILLE Prison, especially one conducted tyrannically, alluding to the notorious fortress of Paris.

BAT (1) Ancient Egyptian mother deity of Diospolis Parva, as-simulated by Hathor. (2) Winged mammal symbolizing black magic, darkness, madness, rapacity. Dream significance: peril and torment. Babylonian evil spirit; a ghost. In Bohemia the right eye of a bat carried on a person supposedly makes one invisible. In China called pien fu and represents Nu. Courier of heavenly blessings; bringer of good fortune and long life, as it supposedly lives to be 1,000 years of age. Symbolic of nocturnal activities and transmigrations.

It flies with its head down because its brain is heavy. In art shown with the peach. In Egyptian mythology the power of the sun. Sebek has his abode in the east on the Hill of Bat, on which the heaven rests. In medieval Europe typified death, misfortune, witchcraft. In Finno-Ugric belief one of the forms the soul takes during sleep. They are not seen during the day because people are awake and their souls have returned to them. A bat which approaches anyone is accepted as the soul of an acquaintance or kinsman. In Japan called komori; symbolic of happiness and prosperity.

Bat and coins. In China suggests, May you always see good fortune.

Bat flying about a house. Death warning.

Bat, peach, chrysanthemum, and endless knot. In China suggests, May good fortune and a long life be everlasting.

Bat wings. Power of darkness.

Five bats. In China and Japan the five blessings: health and peace, love of virtue, natural death, old age, riches.

Two bats. In China good wishes.

BATA Literally, young inferior person, servant. In Egyptian legend a servant who became king. Younger brother and shepherd of Anpu he was falsely accused by Anpu's wife. Warned by the bulls he tended, he fled. To prove his innocence he mutilated himself and his soul took shelter in a tree. The gods provided him with a beautiful wife (moon or dawn goddess), whom the king desired. She revealed where Bata's soul was hidden, and the king had the tree cut down, causing Bata to die. Anpu, who had learned the truth about his brother, nourished the seed containing Bata's soul and thus restored his life. In bull form Bata was accepted as the sacred palace animal, where his wife caused him to be slain. His blood turned into two trees which she had cut down. During the cutting a chip of wood entered her mouth, creating within her a son called Bata (lover-son theme). The reborn Bata revealed his history and the queen was executed. Thus the sun finally was victor in his contest with the moon. Bata was made king and reigned until sacrificed at the Sed festival. To early Egyptians each king was an Osiris, whose symbols of power were the flail and shepherd's staff. The bull, mutilation, resurrection, and tree were attributes of the fertility-sun god. Bata resembles Adonis, Heracles, Hippolytus.

BATARA GURU (BHATTARA GURU) Sky god, creator of the Dairi Battak (Sumatra).

BATH Initiation, purification. Many religions provide bathing or washing facilities outside a temple for ceremonial use before worship. In mythology the bath in which sacred sun kings, such as Agamemnon, Minos, meet their death typifies the sun setting in water and also refers to a lustral bath or bath of anointment before sacrifice. The bath given to a king at coronation has the same significance.

Knight of the Bath. Order created from the ceremony of bathing, which was practiced by a knight at inauguration as a symbol of purity.

BATH CHORIM (BAT HORIN)

Ancient Semitic evil spirit of night. It brought disease, especially to those who failed to wash their hands after meals.

BATHSHEBA (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning daughter of an oath. (2) In Old Testament wife of Uriah with whom David committed adultery. David then caused her husband to be slain and took her as his wife. She was the mother of Solomon, whose succession to the throne she maneuvered. Because of his love for her David was punished by Jehovah. (3) In Dryden's Ab-salom and Achitophel, Bathsheba alludes to Louise de K roualle, duchess of Portsmouth, a favorite of Charles II.

BATMAN Soldier servant to a British army officer.

BATO-KWANNON In Japanese mythology protector of the horses of peasants.

BATON Authority, leadership. Compares with wand, which see. In heraldry a sinisterwise bar cut off at each end; in England a mark of bastardy. When of royal descent bars from succession to the throne. Compare bar sinister, bend sinister.

BATRACHOMYOMACHIA The Battle of Frogs and Mice, an ancient parody on the Iliad.

BATTLEFIELD Death. Dream

significance: illness. In Bhagavad Gita the soul, where man has his struggle.

Battle ax. See under ax.

BATTLE OF TREES In Brythonic mythology a war also called Battle of Cath Godeau or of Acheron, both names for the underworld. It was started by Gwydion, a light deity, to obtain three boons for mankind, the deer, dog, and lapwing, all creatures possessed by the underworld gods. Gwydion was aided by his brother Amaethon, god of agriculture, and his son Llew Llaw, sun deity. The magic of Gwydion turned trees and grasses into fighting battalions. The underworld army was composed of serpents and monsters which fought the plants. The outcome of the battle could not be decided until a fighter in the ranks of one side guessed the name of a fighter in the ranks of the other side; to possess the name of another was to control him. Amaethon revealed the name of Bran, king of the underworld, to Gwydion. Thus the power of the dark gods was broken and they were forced to surrender the precious animals. The conflict typifies the cycle of the seasons. The battle is also one of letters, each letter representing a sacred tree. The alphabet was the secret of the druids who used it for purposes of divination as well as for writing. See druidic alphabet under alphabet.

BAUBO In Greek mythology an Eleusian slave woman to whom Demeter went while seeking Persephone. Baubo, sometimes represented as Demeter's nurse, tried to cheer up her guest with ribaldry. In other accounts a male who, by exposing himself, cured the grief-stricken Demeter. Analogue of Ame-no-uzume.

BAUCIS See under Philemon and Baucis.

BAUGE (BAUGI) In Norse mythology brother of Suttung. Under the name of Bolverk, Odin once toiled for him, doing the work of nine men. For his wages Bolverk asked for a draught of Suttung's poetic mead. Suttung refused the drink and Bauge helped Bolverk to gain admission into Suttung's domain. A fertility legend.

BAUR German surname meaning ever existent. Cognate with French berger (shepherd) and Sanscrit payu (shepherd).

BAXTER Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning baker.

BAY July 14 birthday flower with the sentiment fadeless affection. In medieval churches hung as a sign of welcome to elves and fairies at Christmas. Name equating with that of the Bo tree.

Bay berry. Discipline, instruction.

Bay leaf. In the language of flowers: I change only in death. Used in crowns and garlands bestowed for poetic elegance or victory in battle, hence fame, renown. Attribute of Apollo. Crushed by lovers because its crackling sound supposedly reveals the truth.

Bay wreath. Reward of merit.

BAYARD (BAJARDO, BAYARDO)

(1) Masculine name from a French family name, signifying brown plus the suffix ard, probably meaning ruddy or red-haired. (2) In medieval chivalric romances a magical horse of incredible speed. He belonged to Amadis de Gaul and was captured by Maugis, wizard and paladin of Charlemagne, in a cave guarded by a dragon. Maugis gave Bayard to Renaud, who gave the horse to Charlemagne, who gave it to the four sons of Aymon (name equating with Ammon). If only one son mounted, the horse was of ordinary size; if all four mounted, it elongated to accommodate them. One of its footprints supposedly can still be seen in the forest of Soignes and another on a rock near Dinant. It also is said to be still alive and heard neighing in the Ardennes on Midsummer Day. The horse typifies a cloud, the four sons of Aymon being the four winds. (3) A mock-heroic name for any horse or person, and applied to those who are ignorant and presumptuous. Also used to designate a man of heroic courage and unstained honor, as the Bayard of the Confederate Army was Robert E. Lee. This use alludes to Chevalier Pierre du Terrail de Bayard, French knight and national hero.

B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, K.
Mystic letters associated with the nine qualities: glorious, good, great, lasting, powerful, ready, true, virtuous, wise.

BEACON Any person or thing, especially a light, that serves as a guide or warning.

BEAD CHAIN Memory, prayer, rosary. Also children, female principle, sexual intercourse. See Amaterasu. In an old superstition beads are a charm against malevolent spirits; blue beads especially potent against the evil eye. Malays place beads in the mouth of a woman who has died in childbirth to prevent her from returning as a lansuyar (ghost). To prevent her from shrinking hen's eggs are placed under her arm pits and needles in her hand. Beads frequently simulate gems, for the symbolism see under the gem imitated.

Beadhouse (Bedehouse). Alms-house whose beneficiaries are required to pray for the founder.

Beadman. One who prays for another when paid for doing so; an inmate of a poorhouse.

Beadroll. In Roman Catholic Church a list or roll of persons to be prayed for.

BE'AL Early British supreme deity; a fire god. Name cognate with Baal.

BEAN Universally associated with ghosts, supernatural spirits, and witches. Dream significance: (black) grave danger imminent; (white) hateful omen. Chinese symbol of good luck and calendar indicator. In legendary times a bean was said to have grown to indicate the day of the month. Ancient Egyptians looked upon it as an unclean food. The name was a term of contempt applied to nomads and shepherds, who were regarded an abomination, and who depended on their flocks, which were fed beans. The Hebrew name 'gre' also meant to become furious or to make war. In spite of being a people largely dependent upon flocks, the Hebrews carried over from the Egyptians the terms expressive of contempt for beans and for nomads. In Europe bean radically means good, being related to the Latin bonus; thus the beanstalk which saved Jack in the fairytale. An ancient Greek and Roman homeopathic remedy against ghosts was to spit beans at them. Pliny recorded the souls of the dead resided in beans. At the Roman festival Lemuria, each householder threw beans behind his back for the ghost, saying, "With these I redeem myself and my family." In Japan beans also were used to dispel evil spirits, and scattered around the house on the last day of winter. Roasted beans were buried to prevent toothaches and smallpox. If they sprouted the diseases would occur. In Scotland a belief prevailed that witches rode on beanstalks to their sabbaths.

Beano. Celtic bean feast honoring fairies, forerunner of the modern fair.

Beansidhe. An Irish banshee, a fairy woman. Abode or hill of a fairy.

Beanstalk. Universe tree of fairytales; ladder or road to the heavens. It appears in stories in all parts of the world. In Jack and the Beanstalk, tale of Teutonic origin, Jack climbs the stalk and steals three treasures of a giant (All-Father), a bag of riches (rain), a hen that lays the golden egg (sun), and a harp (wind maker). Jack typifies man who avails himself of the treasures of the supreme deity. In a New Guinea myth a man and his mother climb the beanstalk to destroy Tauni-kapi-kapi, a man-eating giant (storms). The rope trick of India is related to the belief in a stairway to heaven. Analogue of Jacob's ladder, Lug's chain, stem of Jesse.

BEAR Bravery, endurance, strength; also brutality, clumsiness, gruffness, ill-temper, misanthropy, moroseness, uncouthness. In business affairs one who sells short, expecting to recover at lower prices, especially on the stock exchange; opposed to bull. Dream significance: awkward friend. In heraldry signifies ferocity in protection of kindred. In astronomy either of two constellations in the northern hemisphere, Great Bear or Little Bear. A word cognate with boar. Ainu mountain deity. Among American Indians, immortality, the self-existent, as it supposedly dies and rises again, a belief which arose from the fact it hibernates during the winter and subsists on its own fat. Owasse Indian underworld chief, and Seneca Indian spirit of the north wind called Ya-o-gah or Ga-oh. In China represents Shih. A yang symbol, bringer of blessings, universal preserver. In Christian tradition typifies evil; on Norman churches represent Satan. By Finno-Ugrics called master-of-the-forest, holy hound of God, honey-paw, wise man, fur man. They never call the animal by its name for fear it will become insulted. See name. Hunters give their equipment holy titles, and before the sacred animal, which allows itself to provide food, is killed, its forgiveness is asked, and after the killing it is thanked for the little trouble it gave the hunters. One does not laugh even near a dead bear, and its eyes are covered to keep it from seeing and casting a spell on those around his body. At bear feasts masks are worn to keep the bear from recognizing those present, prayers are offered to honor the race of bears, and after the feast the bones are buried that the animal may come to life again for the next hunting season. See skeleton. Finns call a bear feast a wedding; everyone dresses in festive colors. Because it is holy, women must eat their portion away from the men, and may not eat all parts of the animal. Considered more intelligent and stronger than man it sometimes is offered as a sacrifice to the forest god. Oaths are sworn by the bear. In Greece sacred to Artemis; Atalanta was nursed by a she-bear. To Aristotle however it symbolized greed and silliness. In the Old Testament the bear typifies the kingdom of Persia, which brought death and destruction into the world. In Persia the bear symbolized a foolhardy, powerful, and rich enemy. Emblem of Russia, and in Russia a friend of man. Zuni beast god; supernatural patron of the medicine society.

Bear breech. December 23 birthday flower with the sentiment misery.

Bear dance. Mimetic dance in imitation of the bear, usually performed for curative purposes among North American Indians.

Bear Driver. The constellation Bootes.

Bear garden. In Elizabethan and Stuart England, gardens where bears were kept and baited for public amusement were famous as places of riotous disorder; hence a place full of confusion, noise, quarrels, tumult.

Bear leader. In the 18th century nickname of the traveling companion or tutor to a wealthy youth on the 'Grand Tour,' alluding to the custom of leading a muzzled bear about the streets and showing him off in order to attract attention and money.

Bear state. Nickname of Arkansas.

BEARD Deity, rays of light, supreme spirit. Age, manly dignity, perfection, ripe experience, venerability, wisdom. In the cabala the vestment of Macroprosopus, God. In China the beard of P'an Ku became the light of the stars.

Bearded crepis. Protection.

Beardlessness. Inexperience, youth.

Black beard. Dream significance: betrayal.

Blue beard. Evil; see Blue-beard. Attribute of the moon god Sin.

Cut beard. Dream significance: danger of illness. A token of disgrace among ancient Japanese.

Fair beard. Dream significance: good counsel. Attribute of sun deities.

Gold beard. Rays of the sun.

Gray beard. Old age, venerability. Rays of the moon.

Red beard. In Norse mythology, Thor.

BEAST Brutality, carnality, coarseness, excessive indulgence, filth, lack of spirituality, repulsiveness, sexual perversity. In Freemasonry the lower nature each Freemason goes forth to master. In Christianity the blasphemous beast with seven heads and ten horns. Its mystical number is 666, and it is identified with Antichrist in the person of Nero. In Old Testament destroyer, enemy, malice, monarchy, persecution, savagery, tyranny. In the United States a name applied to the members of the entering class at West Point.

Beast marriage. A ballad and folktale motif. In primitive tales a human being is married to a beast; in later versions the beast transforms into a mortal; its original shape, upon receiving the love of a human. Probably developed from fertility myths in which virgins and youths were sacrificed to appease the appetite and win the favor of a drought monster, such as the Minotaur. See Beauty and the Beast.

Beast of burden. Ass, camel, donkey, horse, ox, or any animal employed for carrying loads and primitive transportation; hence commerce. Also applied to humans engaged in carrying loads.

Beast region. In Sanscrit Buddhism, Tiryak, and in Tibetan, Dud-hgro.

Four beasts. See four animals under four.

Wild beast. Angry theologian, evil, human depravity, untamed power.

BEATING A procedure to produce fruitfulness in fertility rites. Burns in his poem John Barley-corn gives a jocular account of the custom. An old observance, still practiced in some British parishes, is called beating the bounds. Children, accompanied by parish officers, walk from end to end of their parish on Ascension Day. The boys are switched with willow wands along the lines of the boundary. This has been interpreted to be a lesson in teaching them to know the bounds of their parish, but probably developed from some ancient fertility rite. In England the day is called gang-day; in Scotland it is called riding the marches (bounds).

BEATITUDE Name of one of the gnostic Aeons.

BEATRICE (BEA, BEATRIX, BEATTIE, BEE, TRIXIE) (1) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning one who makes happy, blesses. (2) One of Dante's guides, and a symbolic figure in the Divine Comedy and in Vita Nuova drawn from Dante's love of Beatrice Portinari during her short lifetime, thus representing a transformation from physical to spiritual love, and symbolic of divine revelation, heavenly wisdom. (3) The beautiful and high-spirited heroine in Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing.

BEAU BRUMMEL An exquisite who sets fashions in men's dress; a dandy, a fop. From George Bryan Brummel, friend of the English King George IV. He died insane and in poverty.

BEAU FEILDING A notorious rake. From Robert Feilding, who died in Scotland Yard, London, in 1712, after having been convicted of bigamously marrying the Duchess of Cleveland, a former mistress of Charles II. He figures as Orlando in Steele's Tatler.

BEAU NASH A notorious diner-out. From Richard Nash, an impoverished Welsh gentleman. He was finally given the management of the bathrooms at Bath, and in the 18th century he conducted the public baths with such decorum and splendor, he was known as King of Bath. Also inventor of games of chance which evaded gambling laws.

BEAU TIBBS One noted for his finery, poverty, and vanity. From the character in Goldsmith's Citizen of the World.

BEAUTY Aristocracy, art, charity, charm, knowledge, nobility, virtue. Typified by a chrysanthemum, lily, rose, maiden, or woman. In an Italian icon represented by a nude woman with her head in the clouds, light rays radiating from her body. Her hands reach into the light, and in one hand she holds a lily, in the other a ball and compass.

Line of beauty. The curve, personified by Aphrodite.

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST A world-wide cohabitation or marriage motif, in which a handsome prince in the guise of a beast or monster can be delivered from the spell cast upon him only by the love and devotion of a woman. Sometimes the handsome prince is a supernatural being metamorphosed into an animal, bird, or monster. In many stories the beast typifies the sun, an unsightly monster at night, who, in the morning, appears to his love, the dawn maid, as a dazzling youth. The marriage usually is temporary and the goal of the mortal is to achieve immortality, typifying the striving for something higher or finer than one possesses. Swan maiden stories fall into this category. The theme accounts for the divine heritage of man, and it probably developed from fertility rites in which virgins and youths were sacrificed to appease the appetite and win the favor of a drought dragon or serpent, such as in the Ina and Minotaur legends. Compare Dawn.

BEAVER Engineering, industriousness, ingenuity, inventiveness, perseverance. Also gentleness, wisdom. In art frequently represented in the act of self-mutilation, thus self-sacrifice. According to legend, when about to be captured by hunters for the medicinal qualities believed to be in its genitals, it bites off those members and tosses them to the hunter, thus in Christian tradition, represents those who will toss to the devil (hunter) the sins of adultery and fornication. In middle ages associated with Germany. Emblem of the state of Oregon, also of the Astor family, alluding to the original member of the family, who was a trapper.

BEBHIONN In Celtic mythology dawn or gloaming. She came from Maiden's Land, a paradise in the west, and sought protection from Fionn (sun). Her giant husband (storm or wind), who lived on the Isle of Men (Isle of Man), traced and killed her. When Fionn pursued him he fled in a boat (cloud) and vanished.

BECHARD Occult demon of tempests.

BECHUANA A Bantu feuding tribe, which worships the crocodile. A corruption of the name

Baquaina. 'Huana' equates with the South American iguana and the West Indian yuana, meaning crocodile or lizard. 'Bech' is identical with Bauk (Father Great Hu or One A) and with Obek (Great Eye or Sun).

BECKY SHARP An amiable, good-looking, unprincipled young woman, who by cunning, hypocrisy, and scheming, raises herself from obscurity and poverty to a position in higher society, alluding to the principal character in Thackeray's Vanity Fair.

BECUMA In Irish mythology the wife of Labraid (sun). Discovered in an intrigue with Gaiar (underworld sea), she is banished from the Land of Promise (sky). In the land of mortals she cast a spell over Conn, high king of Ireland. While in dalliance with him she became jealous of his son Art and demanded his banishment. Art and she played a game of chess to see which one must go, and she lost. The year she remained away from the sky, Ireland was without corn and milk, signifying she was a moon or dawn goddess, with whom fertilizing dewes were associated. The legend is said to illustrate that divine punishment for an evil king's reign is marked by destruction and famine. Becuma resembles Phaedra and Potiphar's wife.

BED Cohabitation, rest, sleep; also grief, illness. Dream significance: (empty) appointment, disappointment; (occupied) indisposition, illness; (unmade) disorder, mistake; (well made) cleanliness, rest. In Old Testament when used as an instrument for punishment symbolizes anguish of body and mind, torment, tribulation.

Bed of Procrustes. Bed of torture.

BEBE Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning a prayer.

BEDIKAT CHAMETZ The search for leavened bread made by the master of a Jewish home the night before the first Seder (Pass-over feast). Any leavened food discovered during the search is put aside until morning and burned (biur chametz). In this manner the home is purified and made ready for the feast.

BEDIVERE (BEDVER, BEDWYR)

In Arthurian romances a knight of the Round Table. Known as The Accomplished and swiftest of men. A spirit of wind. Butler and staunch adherent of King Arthur. At the request of the dying king, he threw Excalibur, Arthur's sword, into the lake and then bore Arthur's body to the three ladies of the barge waiting to take Arthur to Avalon. Excalibur was thrown into water, because it stands for the sun's rays, which sink into the sea when the sun sets.

BEDLAM Confusion, hysteria, or wild uproar; a place where the crazy are kept, alluding to the nickname of the insane asylum of Saint Mary of Bethlehem in south-east London. A corruption of Bethelhem and, ironically, Christ was called mad by his contemporaries.

BEDREDDIN HASSAN In the Arabian Nights a prince who is kidnapped by a gnome and becomes a pastry cook.

BEE Assiduity, cenobitic chastity, communistic industry, eloquence, fertilization, happiness, nourishment, obedience, prosperity, sweetness, wisdom. Also immortality, alluding to the smearing of dead bodies with honey, and a form of the soul. Dream significance: successful work, thoughtfulness; (dead) loss of money; (stinging) disturbance. In heraldry well-governed industry. The word is equal to beo, byw, etc. (to be living), and Apis is the name of a bee as well as that of the Egyptian bull or fertility deity. Bumble of bumble bee is equal to beadle (herald or noise), and the German for beadle is betel, equal to beetle, a sun symbol. In China emblem of thrift. In Christian art appears in the catacombs to typify Christ risen, hence resurrection or immortality. In Egypt it symbolizes regal power. In Europe bees are not permitted to be made the means of barter; the bees supposedly will take offense and crops and flocks will suffer. The superstitious invite bees to funerals in the families to which they are attached and their hives are decorated with crepe. In primitive Greece the form of the priestess of Delphi; emblem of Aphrodite and Mylitta. In Hebrew tradition to govern, to put in order. In Hinduism Krishna, in the form of a bee, hovers over the head of Vishnu. Symbolic of ether and of blue (sky). In Italy signifies flattery, i.e. honey-carrier with a secret sting. In Japan, gratitude.

Bee carrying honey. False-ness, flattery, temptation.

Beehive. Eloquence, industry, orderliness, a place bustling with activity and people, thrift, wisdom. Emblem of Utah. Attribute of Saints Ambrose and Bernard.

Bee in one's bonnet (or head). An obsession; a slightly crazy attitude; fad, idea, notion.

Bee queen. Sovereignty. Fertility and mother goddess. Emblem of Virgin Mary.

Bee swarming in a house.

Prosperity.

BEECH April 11 birthday plant with the sentiment grandeur, prosperity. Symbolic of literature for the reason that the earliest runes of Northern Europe were written on a beechen board, whence the Anglo-Saxon boc or book. Also a symbol of honor and victory; beech, laurel, or palm branches were awarded at Pythian games.

Beech nymphs. In Greek mythology the dryades wedded to the beech tree. Represented as sturdy, full of joyous vitality.

BEELPEOR (BAAL-PEOR) Old Testament Moabite deity, thus a demon or devil.

BEELZEBUB (BAALZEBUB, BEELZEBUL) Any person or creature of diabolical nature, alluding to Beelzebub in the Old Testament. Originally a Philistine deity worshiped as a destroyer of flies. His name Baalzebul meant lord of the high house, which the Jews interpreted to be Solomon's Temple. Misunderstanding his name, they called him Beelzebub, i. e. fly lord, and looking upon him as the chief representative of false gods, he was placed among the demons. In the New Testament he is referred to as the prince of devils. He appears in Mumming plays, and in Milton's works is next in rank to Satan.

BEE-ORCHIS Error, industry.

BEER Literally, well. A station in Moab, where God gave the Jews water.

BEERSHEBA In Old Testament land of promise, town at the southern extremity of Biblical Palestine. Dan being at the northern extremity, the phrase from Dan to Beersheba signifies from beginning to end, from one end of the world to the other.

BEETLE Androgynety, sun. As male and female, union of opposing forces; internal conflict. A stupid person, one who is blind. To kill one brings unwanted rain. One flying through the house is an omen of unexpected news. To hear the death-watch (wood-boring) beetle portends death. To turn one over on its feet that has fallen on its back prevents toothaches. Among American Indians: The Hopi brewed in emetic drinks, and carried as a war talisman, as they are helpful spirits, covering up one's tracks. In Sia legends Utset, mother of the Indians, gave Ishits (beetle) a sack of stars to carry from the underworld to the world above. Tired under the weight he stopped to rest, and the stars flew out. For this offense Utset blinded him, and arranged the few stars left to suit herself, placing seven to make the Great Bear, etc. In legends of South American Indians the beetle created the world and from the grains of earth left over he created man and woman. In Zuni legend, when Coyote marked off a strip of restricted land between clans, he buried a beetle and a poisonous spider. Whoever tried to cultivate the restricted land for himself went blind like the beetle or died of poison. When anyone had been struck by lightning the Zunis fed him a beetle as an antidote against drying up. A Christian drama of initiation. The excrement ball from which the new beetle is to emerge represents the body of corruption buried in the earth which comes to life and rebirth in baptismal waters, hence death and rebirth. The dung ball typifies the world, the beetle typifies man, a symbolism borrowed from the Egyptians. In their accounts, the beetle has no female and to reproduce forms a ball (image of the world) of ox-dung, which it rolls from east to west while looking eastward. It buries the ball in earth for 28 days, and on the 29th throws it into water, from which it emerges as a beetle. Sacred to Khepera and Ptah, symbolic of generation and the sun. Among Finno Ugrics believed to be the soul of one dead, which maidens consult to learn when they may expect to marry. If it flies into a graveyard the omen is death. Like the Egyptians, ancient Hebrews believed it procreated as it walked backwards toward the west, the region of darkness, thus symbolic of darkness, obscurity, shadows. In Ireland a symbol of corruption. In Mexico the hieroglyph for the letter L.

Beetle-browed. Scowling, sullen.

Beetlehead. A blockhead, fool, stupid person; one who is hard-headed.

Beetle with spread wings. New birth, sun.

BEFANA The ugly but good fairy of Italian children. She fills their stockings with toys when they go to bed on Twelfth Night. In a Christian legend she was too busy with household affairs to look after the Magi when they went to offer their gifts to the Christ Child, saying she would see them on their return. However, they went another way, and Befana watches every Twelfth Night for them. The name is a corruption of Epiphania, and she is a personification of Epiphany. Also called Saint Befana, la Strega, or la Vecchia. Compare Berchta.

BEFIND In Celtic folklore one of the three fairies present at the birth of every child, predicting its future and endowing it with good or evil gifts. Cognate with Roman Parcae.

BEGGAR Care, human misery, indigence, sorrow. When used playfully, a mischievous person, a rogue or wretch. In Christianity typifies Saints Edith, Elizabeth of Hungary, Elizabeth of Portugal, Lorenzo, Martin of Tours.

Beggar on horseback. Social upstart, one suddenly rich.

Beggar's wash day. Rainy weather.

Haughty beggar. In an Italian icon portrayed as a blind young woman with a lofty countenance in a red tunic adorned with jewels under which is a ragged petticoat. She carries a peacock in her right arm, her left she holds up. With one foot on a ball, she balances herself with the other, revealing her precarious position. The ragged petticoat indicates, though haughty, at bottom she has nothing worthy of esteem.

BEGHARD A member of one of the Christian religious communities of men which rose in Flanders in the 13th century and lived in the manner of the Beguines.

BEGINNING In an Italian icon portrayed with rays from a starry sky lighting the earth on which an almost naked youth is standing. He holds the figure of nature and a square marked with the letter alpha.

BEGOE (BERGOIA) Nymph who revealed the Etruscan sacred laws to the people.

BEGONIA Symbolizes cordiality, deformity.

BEGTSE In Buddhism a Dharma-pala of red color; brother-sister; a war deity. Emblems are a sword (khadya) and a man and prostrate horse. In Tibet called Cam-Srin.

BEGUINE (1) One of various communities of Roman Catholic women who devote themselves to religious life but retain private properties. They may withdraw from their orders at any time. The name is said to come from the middle English begyne through middle Flemish, meaning mendicant (friar), or from Lambert la Begue (Lambert the Stammerer), 12th century priest of Liege who founded the order. (2) A South American dance in bolero rhythm. Probably derived from a fertility rite.

BEGUM In India a Mohammedan woman ruler, a woman of high rank, a princess or queen, frequently a widow.

BEHEMOTH A huge and powerful beast or man or institution, alluding to the land monster mentioned in the Old Testament, which battled the sea monster Leviathan. In Hebrew tradition the flesh of both are to be distributed by the Messiah to the faithful. Corresponds to Persian Hadhayosh.

BEHR (MEDR) Ancient South Arabian earth god.

BE-JE See Gopaka.

BEKOTSHIDI In Navaho legend an old man who created domestic animals and large game. Another name is Klehanoai, the moon carrier.

BEL (1) One of the three supreme deities of Assyrian-Babylonian mythology. In a triad with Anu and Ea. Son of Ea and Damkina. Mate of Belit. God of light, creator, counsellor and warrior of the gods, sender of the deluge. A dragon slayer, having battled Tiamat the chaos monster. Bel was tried, condemned, mutilated, slain, and imprisoned in a tomb in the underworld, from which he rose in the spring, thus a fertility god resembling Tammuz. See dying god. Sometimes identified as Enlil (Bel Enlil), the elder Bel; sometimes as Marduk (Bel-Marduk), the younger Bel. As Bel-Marduk lord of the planet Jupiter, which in astrol-mythology is associated with the productive powers of nature. The story of Bel and the dragon, in which Daniel convinces the Babylonian king that Bel is not a living god but only an image, appears in the Old Testament. Bel parallels Jehovah, Jupiter, and Zeus, and is the source of ball, bell, Blaise, Blase, blitz. (2) Chalden supreme god, a form of Baal, and like Baal a name which means lord or owner.

BELA (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning destruction. (2) An evil city destined to be consumed by fire until Lot interceded, calling attention to the smallness of the place, and asking God's permission to take refuge in it. The city was saved, and its name changed to Zoar, signifying small.

BELBOGH Slavic god of light. Name means white god.

BELDAM (BELDAME) A hag, an ugly old woman. Etymologically the sense of the word is fair lady.

BELEEK Irish place name meaning great sun; probably originally a shrine dedicated to Belenus.

BEL ENLIL Chief god at Nipur in Babylonia. Lord of heaven and earth, deity of tempests and war. A giant. His name is said to mean lord of demons, lord of mists, or lord of night. He had a bull form, and as such was worshiped as a fertility deity. Sometimes called older Bel (Lord); also known as Enlil or Illilios. He resembles Ramman.

BELENUS (BELENOS, BELINUS)

Gaulish sun and health deity, whose culture passed over to Britain, where he appears as a legendary king and brother of Brennius, mortal form of the underworld Bran. Together they conquered Rome. Belenus supposedly built the gate along the Thames which is still in his honor called Billingsgate. After his death Gurgiunt Brabtruc (Gargantua) became king. His name, inscribed by druids on the left horizontal branch of their sacred oak, is a Latinized form of Beli, whose mortal form he represents. It is identical with Baal and Balin. Deity resembling Apollo, Balder, Belbogh.

BELGRAVIA An exclusive section in London's West End, thus a type name for aristocratic fashion.

BELI (BEL, HELI) (1) Brythonic sun god and legendary king of England. Son of Ana; husband of Don; father of Caswallawn, Llevelys, Lludd, and Nynnyaw. Mortalized as Belenus. He has characteristics in common with the Gaelic Bile, god of the dead to whom human sacrifices were made. (2) In Norse mythology the howler. Storm giant. Son of Gymir and Aurboda; brother of Gerd; father of Grep to whom he carried Freyja. During the winter war between the gods and the frost giants, Beli held Frey, harvest god, prisoner. Frey finally killed Beli with his fist, i.e. growth forced its way through the frozen ground.

BELIAL (1) Hebrew personification of the devil. Enemy of God, chief of fallen angels. (2) In the cabala an archdemon identical with Beelzebub. (3) In Milton a very high and distinguished prince of darkness.

Sons of Belial. Evil, lawless, rebellious people.

BELILI Sumerian moon and love goddess, also a goddess of springs, wells, and the willow. In the Babylonian pantheon mistress and sister of Du'uzu (Tammuz) and, inasmuch as she descends into the lower world to bring Du'uzu (growth) back to earth, a goddess of the underworld identical with Ishtar. From her name the expression sons of Belial (Beli ya'al, i.e. from which one comes up not again), signifying sons of destruction or of the devil, may have been derived. Her name is the source of English billet (firewood), Latin bellus (beautiful), Slavonic beli (white).

BELINDA Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning uncertain, and from the Italian, meaning serpent.

BELISAMA Gaelic river goddess, identified by the Romans with Minerva.

BELIT (BELTIS) In Assyrian-Babylonian mythology consort of Assur or of Bel. A mother goddess, she probably is the same as Astarte, Belilil, or Ishtar. Belit is an honorary title of many goddesses meaning lady as Bel means lord.

BELIT-ILANI (BALTHI) Sumerian queen of the gods, virgin goddess of procreation. Identical with Aruru, Bau, Gula, Nin-hursag, Nintud, Venus.

BELIT-ITANI Assyrian-Babylonian queen of the gods, virgin goddess of fecundity. Identical with Makh.

BELIT-SHERI Assyrian goddess, sister-lover of Tammuz in the abyss. Scribe of the underworld, keeper of the records of men's deeds. Two sisters may have lamented for Tammuz, Belit-sheri and Ishtar. Probably a form of Nina.

BELL Alarm, freedom, invitation, joy, preacher, warning. Male and female principle, seed vessel. Acute and insistent preaching. Call to worship, and used by ancients to summon the Supreme Spirit. Talisman to terrify demons and drive away plagues, spells, thunder, and lightning. Dream significance: good news; (alarm) fears justified. In heraldry invocation of guardian angels and saints. Buddhist ritual object, the ghanta. Among Celts emblem of godhead. In China called chung, object of respect and veneration, signifies obedience. Worn by children to avert the evil eye and preserve the teeth. Christian significance is call of Christ. Whenever the faith was in jeopardy a bell supposedly rang in the temple of Sangraal; at the sounding a knight set out with his sword. Emblem of Saint Anthony, who went among ruined Pagan temples and rang a bell to rout out the devils infesting them. Used to announce the age of a deceased; a toll of the bell signifying a year. The Incas sounded a bell to accompany rites of human sacrifice. In Japan bell ringing is symbolic of wind. In the Orient and in Biblical times an emblem of virginity worn by unmarried women. Word akin to Bel (Baal) and ball.

Ban (or curse) by bell, book, and candle. A form of excommunication in the medieval church.

Bear the bell. Be the first, be the winner. Before cups were presented to contest winners a small gold or silver bell was the prize.

Bell rubbed by a priest. In Japan symbolic of perseverance and yearning after improvement.

Bell the cat. Risk one's life for others, encounter great personal hazard for the sake of others, alluding to the fable of the cunning old mouse who suggested that one mouse volunteer to hang a bell on the cat's neck so that all mice might be warned when the cat approached.

Liberty Bell. Freedom, independence, alluding to the bell rung in Philadelphia on July 4, 1776 to announce the independence of the American colonies.

Passing bell. Church bell tolled to announce a death; formerly tolled when a person was dying to drive away the evil spirits waiting for the soul.

BELLAC French place name meaning great sun, probably originally a shrine dedicated to Baal or Belenus.

BELLADONNA (1) In Eliot's Waste Land, the Lady of the Rocks, personification of lack of fertility and at the same time the Madonna, carrying out a principle of the mother earth-goddess, as a giver and taker of life. (2) July 15th birthday flower with the sentiment fatal gift. Symbol of loneliness and silence.

BELLAMY Masculine name from the Latin, meaning beautiful friend.

BELLASTON, LADY A dissolute and fashionable woman; type of 18th century court beauty. In Fielding's Tom Jones, a woman with whom Tom has an intrigue and from whom he accepts support.

BELLE Feminine name from the French, meaning beautiful, fair.

BELLEAU WOOD Scene of a costly victory, alluding to the forest tract where American troops stopped the German offensive in 1918. The American men, killed, missing, or wounded numbered 7,870.

BELLEFONTAINE, BENEDICT

A wealthy farmer and father of Evangeline in Longfellow's poem. When the inhabitants of his village are driven to exile he dies of a broken heart as he is about to leave.

BELLEROPHON Greek sun hero.

Grandson of Sisyphus, son of Glaucus or of Poseidon and Eurynome. Having accidentally committed murder he was obliged to be purified from the blood stain and entered the service of King Proetus. When he scorned the love of Antaea (or Sthenoboea), wife of Proetus, she accused him of attempting to seduce her, whereupon Proetus sent Bellerophon to Iobates, father of his wife and king of Lycia, with a letter in which he praised the hero as a valiant warrior, but concluded with a prayer that Bellerophon might be put to death. Iobates did not wish to kill Bellerophon for the same reason Proetus had avoided such a killing; Zeus became hostile to anyone who broke the bond between host and guest, and Bellerophon had eaten at Iobates' table. To fulfil his son-in-law's request without jeopardizing his own position Iobates sent Bellerophon to kill the Chi-maera, to battle the Solymi and the Amazons, and on other dangerous missions. With the aid of the winged horse Pegasus, a gift from Athena, he accomplished each mission. As a reward he was given a daughter of Iobates as his wife and made Iobates' heir. Intoxicated with success, he tried to ride Pegasus to heaven, but Zeus sent a gadfly to sting the horse and Bellerophon was tossed to earth. Broken in spirit he wandered alone on the Aleian plain, and finally died. The false accusation places him with Hippolytus and Joseph.

Lycia was a land of light; thus a light king could not kill a sun hero. The tasks imposed on Bellerophon parallel those of Heracles, Perseus, Theseus, and other sun heroes, and like them, he wins a wife after battling deadly and fierce monsters. His attempt to ride into high heaven compares with that of Phaethon. The gadfly which stings Pegasus appears in the Io myth. The fall of Bellerophon is the rapid late afternoon descent of the sun on the plain or broad expanse of somber twilight. As a culture hero, with the bridling of Pegasus, Bellerophon taught the art of governing horses with the bridle. Also called Deophontes, Leophontes, or Hipponoos. Bellerophon means bane or slayer of Belleros. See Belleros.

Bellerophontic letter. A death warrant; a letter which asks for the bearer's death, but instead makes him famous. See letter of death.

BELLEROS (BELLERUS) (1) Celtic giant, tutelary divinity of Land's End, England. (2) In Greek mythology a Corinthian noble. Hairy monster, demon of winter, slain by Bellerophon. Name akin to Vrtra, and both spring from the root var, i. e.

to cover or hide. As Vrtra was Indra's enemy, Belleros was Bellerophon's enemy.

BELFLOWER July 16 birthday flower with the sentiment constancy, gratitude. Japanese symbol of autumn.

BELLIN In the tale Reynard the Fox, the ram. His wife is Olewey.

BELLONA Roman war goddess, sister and wife of Mars. Portrayed in full armor with dishevelled hair, bearing a lance in one hand, a scourge in the other. Parallels Enyo.

Bellona's bridegroom. Mars, hence war.

Bellona's handmaids. Blood, famine, fire.

BELLOWS Symbolic of the heavenly fire-blower. Emblem of Cinderella. In Italy symbolizes loud speech, praise.

BELLWETHER A person others follow blindly; a term applied facetiously to the leader of a movement or party, alluding to the wether which leads the flock with a bell hanging from its neck.

BELLWORT Symbolizes hopelessness.

BELLY Gluttony, gormandizing. Physical body, that which is destructible. According to the ancient seat of carnal affections, seat of sensuality and sin. According to mystics anatomical part governed by Virgo. In Christian tradition typifies the family and riches of man. In Mayan mythology denotes life, subsistence. In Old Testament, as in the Book of Job, expressive of mind and understanding.

Belly of brass. Alexander the Great. See Alexander.

BEL-MARDUK (BEL-MERODACH)

Bel and Marduk merged into one deity or name. See Bel, also Marduk.

BELPHEGOR (1) Assyrian form of Baal-Peor, a double-sexed Moabite deity of the generative and productive powers, worshiped under the form of a phallus. (2) In cabalism the archdemon of the Togarini (Wranglers). (3) In a medieval legend the demon sent from the infernal regions to investigate rumors concerning the happiness and unhappiness of married persons on earth. After imitating all the intimacies experienced by men Belphegor fled in horror and returned to the lower regions quite content that female companionship did not exist there. Thus the term is applied to licentious, obscene men, and to misanthropes.

BELPHOEBE In Spenser's Faerie Queene sister of Amoret, with whom she is contrasted. Belphoebe, a huntress goddess, is brought up by Diana. She is like a moonbeam, has light without warmth, and is passionless.

BELT Power, strength, virtue. An attribute of Thor. Dream significance: faithful love.

Belt of skulls. In Buddhism, princely or Dharmapala garment.

BELTANE (BALTEIN, BEALTUINN, BELTAIN, BELTAN)
An ancient Celtic festival marking the opening of summer and honoring the sun. One of the quarter days. Celebrated on May 1 of the old calendar with bonfires and other rites. Druids drove cattle between two needfires to which miraculous virtues were ascribed to prevent the murrain; dances were performed, and the day was filled with gaiety, which culminated in the sacrifice by fire of a man representing the oak king. Parallels the fire-cleansing ceremonies of ancient Babylonians. In Celtic legendary history Partholon and his people arrived in Ireland on a Beltane or May Day and on a May Day three hundred years later returned whence they came. On a Beltane Day the Tuatha De Danann and, after them, the Gaelic men first set foot on Irish soil. Pryderi was lost and found on this day; on this day Gwyn fought Gwrthur for Creudylad, and Sir Meliagraunce captured Guinevere. On Isle of Man called Shennda Boaldyn, in Wales called Galan-Mai (Calends of May). Beltane also is the name of the fire itself. Tane is fundamentally shining and is identical with the Chinese tien, meaning day, god, sky.

BELTIS (BELIT, BELTU) Babylonian mother goddess, who shared dignity and power equally with her consort Bel or Bel-Enlil. A harlot goddess, whose rites were orgiastic. Name signifies lady. As the wife of Marduk called Zarbanit. Identical with Ashuritu, Astarte, Ishtar, Nana, Nin-harsag, Zer-panitum.

BELTRAM Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning fortune and handsome.

BELUN A White Russian field spirit who guides those who have lost their way. He helps reapers and bestows presents upon them.

BELUS (1) Babylonian deity identical with Baal. His great temple at Babylon, dedicated to the sun, moon, and planets, had no statue. It contained only a golden couch, upon which a chosen female was visited nightly by the god. (2) In Greek mythology one of great power. Son of Poseidon and Libya, twin brother of Agenor, with whom he sometimes is confused, father of Aegyptus, Cepheus, Danaus, and Phineus. (3) A term widely used among Eastern people, applied to persons of high rank.

Belus Temple. Temple of light. It had a hundred brazen gates which, like the hundred gates of the holy city of Thebes, were passageways to heaven. One of the wonders of Babylon.

BELVEDERE Summer cypress with the sentiment, I declare against you.

BENASSIS, DR. Kindly country doctor. From the hero of Balzac's Country Doctor.

BEND In heraldry a diagonal band extending from dexter chief to sinister base. It represents the scarf or shield-suspender or sword-belt of a knight. Signifies defense, protection.

Bend dexter. A diminutive bend. In still narrower size called cost or cottise. Badge of honor for a commander.

Bend sinister. A diagonal band running across the shield from sinister chief to dexter base. A badge of honor for a commander; erroneously identified as a mark of illegitimacy. The popular belief that it is an indication of bastardy has led to the phrase "He has a bend sinister." See abatement.

BENDEGEIT VRAN Literally, Blessed Vran. Bran, Brythonic sea and underworld god, as a Christian saint. Supposedly one of the three kings of Prydain who brought Christianity to the Cymric people.

BENDIS Thracian goddess identified by the Greeks as a counterpart of Artemis.

BEN EDAR Early name of Hill of Howth in Dublin. Sacred burial ground of Irish kings and queens.

BENEDICT (BENNETT) (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning blessed. Feminine form Benedicta. (2) A bachelor of marriageable age, not necessarily pledged to celibacy, from Saint Benedict, an uncompromising stickler for celibacy. Also a confirmed bachelor caught in the snares of matrimony. By Shakespeare spelled Benedick.

BENEVOLENCE Symbolized by a fire on the hearth; hand with a gift; orange-yellow color. In an Italian icon typified by a cheerful young man, almost naked, holding the three graces in his up-lifted right hand. On the wrist of his left hand, in which he holds a gold chain (fertility provider) are two wings. The chain also is interpreted to mean that benevolence (charity) ties as well as obliges.

Benevolent trickster. A character common in folklore. He deceives those who would destroy, rob from, or otherwise do ill to man, especially the demon forces of nature. He aids mankind in general or certain individuals. Frequently the trickster is an animal, as in American Indian and African tales. See escaping one's fate.

BENJAMIN (BEN, BENNETT, BENNY) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning son of my right hand. (2) A favorite, pet, or youngest child, alluding to Benjamin, the son of Jacob and Rachel. Rachel died immediately after his birth; with her last breath she called him Ben-oni, i.e. son of my sorrow, but Jacob renamed him Benjamin, as the child comforted him for the loss of Joseph. Feeling too old to leave Canaan, Jacob sent his sons to buy wheat, but he refused to permit Benjamin to accompany them, fearful lest harm befall him. Thus Benjamin was the most helpless as well as the most beloved son. Joseph, Jacob's long lost son, was in charge of graneries in Egypt, and when his brothers appeared, without revealing his identity, he demanded that Benjamin join them. When they all left for home, Joseph sent word to them that his silver cup was missing. It was found in Benjamin's sack, where Joseph had placed it. Jacob came to Egypt to ransom his son, thus he and Joseph were united before he died. Benjamin was the eponymous ancestor of one of the twelve tribes of Israel, he was ruler of the zodiacal house Cancer, and was symbolized by a wolf.

BENKEI Japanese legendary monk who attacked the boy Yoshitsune. When he could not overcome him he became the boy's faithful retainer, fighting at his side until he died. Typifies cloud or wind.

BENNU (BENU) (1) Babylonian plague deity, probably a scorching sun. (2) Arabian and Egyptian bright bird of the sun. In Egyptian tradition the size of an eagle with gold and red wings. He appeared once in about every five hundred years, at which time he deposited at the temple of the sun at Heliopolis the body of Osiris embalmed in an egg-shaped ball of myrrh. Symbolic of regeneration, resurrection. Resembles feng-huang, phoenix.

BENONI Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning son of my sorrow.

BENTEN (BENZAI-TEN) One of the Shichi Fukujin, seven Japanese deities of happiness. Goddess of love, amiability, eloquence, music, and beauty. Giver of fruitfulness to women. Also noted for her jealousy. Daughter of Ryu-wo, sea-king, she rose from the waves. As Zeniarai Benten (coin washing Benten), she increases the wealth of those who toss coins into her well. She carries a biwa and her messenger is a white snake. Her image is worn as a talisman. Anciently called Ichiki-Shima-hime. Identical with Sarasvati, resembles Aphrodite.

BENZAIBEN Occult god of beauty and grace, a good-luck talisman.

BEOR Hebrew masculine name meaning a torch.

BEOWULF (1) Masculine Teutonic name, meaning harvest wolf, wolf tamer. (2) Sun hero of an ancient Anglo-Saxon epic. Son of Ecgtheow, he was the bravest and strongest of the Swedish tribe, and when Heorot, palace of the Danish king Hrothgar, was raided nightly by Grendel (darkness), which destroyed those sleeping (knights of light) in the palace hall, Beowulf undertook the beast's destruction. When Grendel's dam attempted to avenge her son's death, Beowulf pursued her to her cave under the sea, and killed her with the magic sword Hrunting (sun rays on water), which he found there. He then returned to his own people and ruled as king for fifty years, at the end of which time he was attacked by a dragon (winter), which possessed an immense hoard of wealth (riches underground). With his magic sword Naegling (rays) Beowulf killed the dragon, but was sprayed with its poisonous venom. He was deserted by all his tribe, except Wiglaf (gloaming), and in his death agony, he gazed upon the treasures he had won for his people (budding verdure). He resembles Bellerophon, Heracles, Indra. See sun deity.

BER (BIR, BIRQU) A title of Mer, Assyrian fire god.

BERACHAH (BERAKAH) (1) A benediction, blessing, or grace, recited by the Hebrews during divine service. (2) A follower of David; also a valley where the Jews were victorious and where they blessed God for victory.

BERCHTA (BERKTA, BERTHA, FRAU BERCHTA, PERCHT, PERCHTA, PRECHT) Literally, white lady. In South German folklore the spirit who wore a genial mantle of snow and watched over spinners. In Christian lore she became an ugly, unkempt cannibalistic ogress who kidnaps naughty children and lazy youths; a hag or hobgoblin. Her feast is Twelfth Night (Epiphany), when food must be set out for her. Her feet are large and she has an iron nose. Her North German counterpart is Holde. Identified with the Russian Baba Yaga. Compare Befana.

BERCHTESGADEN In German folklore mountain on which is located the cave in which the emperor Frederick Barbarossa awaits the day when he is destined to awake and leave his resting place to restore peace, power, and unity to Germany. See Barbarossa.

BERECINTHIA (BERECYNTHIA)
A variant of Cybele or Ops.
Name suggesting fire or light.

BEREJYA Iranian spirit who sends the bird Camrosh to save the people when they are attacked.

BERENICE (BERENIKE, BERENISE, BERNICE) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning bringer of victory. (2) Sister-wife of Ptolemy Euergetes or Ptolemy Soter. She vowed to sacrifice her hair to the goddess of beauty if her husband were brought home safely from the war against the Assyrians. Upon his return she suspended her hair in the temple of Arsinoë at Zephyrium, and when the locks disappeared from the temple, the king was informed winds had lifted them to heaven, where they form the Coma Berenices. (3) A ruined city in Egypt on the Red Sea. (4) Fabled site of the Garden of Hesperides, alternately called Pherenice. (5) In Hebrew legend daughter of Agrippa I, wife of her uncle Herod of Chalcis, mistress of her brother, the younger Agrippa. Later mistress of Titus and Vespasian.

Berenice's Locks. The constellation Coma Berenices.

BERGAMASK One who is clownish, uncultured, alluding to a rustic dance, which is so named in ridicule of the natives of Bergano, an Italian mountain village.

BERGBUI Teutonic evil giant. The root 'berg' means an eminence, high pointed rock, mountain; also tower.

BERGELMIR (BERGELMER) In Norse mythology son of Ymir and one of the Hrimthursar. With his wife he took refuge in the World Mill, and when Ymir was slain these two were the only members of the frost giant race to escape being drowned in Ymir's blood. He became the progenitor of the second dynasty of giants, from whom the Jotuns descended.

BERKSHIRE Name derived from barruc or berroc, meaning polled oak, under which shire moots once were held.

BERLIC Swiss mischievous spirit.

BERLIN Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning of the bear.

BERMOOTHES In Shakespeare's Tempest in enchanted island, inhabited by devils and witches. Shakespeare is said to have had in mind the then recently discovered island of Bermuda or the island Lampedusa near Malta.

BERMUDAS Old English term for a London district of narrow alleys in the neighborhood of Convent Garden, where residents had certain privileges against arrest. Thus, 'to live in the Bermudas' was to skulk in some out-of-the-way place which was cheap and safe. See Alsatia.

BERNARD (BARNARD, BARNEY) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning bear and hardy, bold as a bear. Feminine equivalent is Bernardette, Bernardine.

BERROC (BARRUC) Anglo-Saxon sacred tree, the polled oak, symbol of Pere Ok, i.e. Great Father. See Berkshire.

BERRY Fruit of marriage. Cognate with dewdrop and seed, with which see.

BERSERKER (BARESARK, BERSERK) Norse warrior of great courage and strength. The origin of the term is doubtful; in one interpretation it was applied to fierce warriors who were able to assume animal form, especially that of the bear or wolf, in the frenzy of battles, i.e. personifications of wild aspects of nature. In another interpretation, a nickname of the grandson of Starkath and Alfilde was boerserce (bare of mail) because he went into battle without armor. Popularly applied to a bold, furious fighter, one given to fits of wild violence.

BERTHA (BERCHTA, BERTIE, BERTY) (1) Feminine name from Old High German, meaning modest, and from the Germanic, meaning beautiful, bright. Originally Perchta. (2) German fairy corresponding to the Italian Befana. See Berchta. (3) Mother of Charlemagne, called Berthe au grand pied, i.e. Berthe with the big foot, so called because of her club foot. Her thriftiness was proverbial. (4) Frankish princess, first English Christian queen. Wife of Ethelbert, king of Kent, she converted him to Christianity. Santed. (5) A type of collar, so called because it protects a woman's modesty.

BERTOLDO Famous 16th century Italian clown, whose son and grandson succeeded to his post of court jester. He became the source of the expression, "Imperturbable as Bertoldo," i.e. never to be disconcerted or thrown off guard.

BERTRAM (BERT, BERTIE, BERTRAND) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning bright raven.

BERUTH Phoenician queen-mother goddess. Wife of Elioun or Hypsistus; mother of Epigeus or Aucthon.

BERYL Gem symbolizing everlasting youth, happiness, hope.

Worn as an amulet to protect owner from death and to prevent seasickness, eye ailments, and swelling of the throat. Talisman of warriors. Dream significance: happiness in store. Highly prized by crystal gazers for foretelling the future. Held to have the power to call up the dead and receive answers to puzzling questions. Its occult powers intensified if worn by one born under Scorpic, the zodiacal sign it governs. In Hebrew lore endows the wearer with amiability and good fortune. Gem of the High Priests; adornment of King Tyrus. In the Orient a bridal gift assuring congeniality and symbolizing purity.

BERZAKH In Mohammedanism state of soul between death and resurrection.

BES Egyptian merry-maker, player of the harp, fond of drinking and laughter, he was deity of feasting and love, patron of cosmetics, of the dance and of music. Protector of children and women in childbirth. Also a god of war, and as such a strangler of antelopes, bears, lions, and serpents, thus a deity who destroyed primal powers hostile to man. In early myths he was a lord of the underworld who threatened to cut out the hearts of the wicked. When absorbed by sun worshipers he became a nurse of Horus, whom he amused and nourished; also said to be a primary form of Horus. He was a dwarf or embryo-like god with a tail, a broad flat nose and ears like those of a cat; his arms were long, his legs crooked, symbolizing the beginning of all things. His image was a talisman against sorcery and was hung on headrests to keep evil spirits away from sleepers. He probably was imported from Nu-bia or Punt and worshiped by the common people. Later he was given a handsome body and powerful face and called Sepd. His wife usually is called Beset, but sometimes said to be Epet. Prototype of Gorgo, Satyr, and Silenus; resembles Xototl.

BESSIE (BETSEY) Feminine name, diminutive of Elizabeth.

BESTLA (BETTLA) Norse primeval goddess, mother of deities. Daughter of the giant Bolthorn, wife of Bor, mother of Odin, Vili, and Ve. According to another tradition born of Ymir and twin sister of Mimir. Resembles Rhea.

BETA Second letter of the Greek alphabet. In astronomy the second brightest star in a constellation. See B.

BETEIGEUSE A giant reddish star of first magnitude in the constellation Orion. Arabic name meaning giant's shoulder.

BETE NOIRE Someone or something one dislikes or dreads. A bugbear, goblin, believed to bear the devil's mark. From the French meaning black beast.

BETH (1) Second letter of the Hebrew alphabet, meaning house. Its numerical value is two, and it symbolizes the mouth or tongue, first step in a series of creative activities. According to mystics its symbolic correspondence is science; its tarot deck correspondence is the Magician (or the Priestess); its direction on the cube of space is above, signifying superior term of human consciousness; its intelligence is transparency, letting light shine through, and associated with creation. As one of the seven double letters (letters with both hard and soft pronunciation), symbolic of the opposites life and death. In white magic the divine name which corresponds to Bachour. It is the sign of the Ophanim, who are the angels of the second order, the Cherubim of exoteric theology. By their ministry Jehovah unfolded and cleared primordial chaos. The attribute of Bachour is Hocmah or Divine Wisdom. (2) In the Irish Beth-Luis-Nion alphabet the birth or inception letter with a numerical value of five. It represents the birch tree and is guardian of the period December 24 to January 21. Also spelled beithe. See Alphabet, Druidic.

BETHEL (BETHUL) (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning house of God. (2) A hallowed spot, a church. A chapel for seamen, frequently afloat in a harbor. A dissenter's chapel or meeting place. In ancient Semitic tradition a deity-box or magnet or sacred stone instinct with divinity, thus abode of a god or living stone. See baetylus, stone.

BETHESDA A pool or spring in Jerusalem which supposedly possessed healing powers to cure the sinner as well as the ill. Here Jesus is said to have cured a sick man who had waited thirty-eight years, because during that time he always had been set aside by others. Bethesda, which means house of mercy, had five porches around the pool, five being the number associated with healing.

BETH-HOGLAH Place mentioned in Old Testament; name probably meaning house or shrine of the hobler, and may have been a shrine dedicated to Jacob (Jah Aceb) as heel-deity. A famous grove and threshing floor were located at Beth-Hoglah, where a round dance was performed in honor of the sun. See hobbling, Jacob.

BETHLEHEM Literally, house of bread. Holy city, town in Judea famous as the birthplace of Christ and David. Its ancient name was Ephrath, meaning fruitful.

BETH-SHEMESH Literally, house of the sun. An ancient city in Judea. Also one of the names of the Egyptian city Heliopolis, which in the Bible is called On.

BETONY Flower symbolizing surprise.

BETZAH Roasted egg served at the Passover feast or Seder to symbolize the haggish or Hebrew festival sacrifice which always was brought to the Temple on festive occasions and which on Pesach (Passover) supplemented the paschel lamb.

BEULAH Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning married. Applied to Israel as married to God. Also an Irish name, meaning land of fay. Cognate with Bali.

BEVAN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning a young archer.

BEVERLY Feminine and masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning from the beaver's lea.

BEVIS OF HAMPTON Hero of medieval English chivalric romance. His father was slain by his mother and, when Bevis tried to avenge the murder, his mother sold him to Eastern merchants as a slave. He was the victim of a treacherous letter which ordered his death, he was subjected by the man he served to the most terrible dangers, and he escaped from an ambushade set up for his destruction. With the aid of the magic word Morglay and the horse Arundel, given to him by Josian, daughter of the king of Armenia, he became a match for all who assailed him. He slayed a dragon and other demons and, with Josian as his wife, he returned to England, where he conquered the giant Ascapart and got his revenge. An effigy of the giant may still be seen on the city gates of Southampton. A sun hero, his legend resembles that of Bellerophon, Jason and Odysseus.

BEYLA Norse earth goddess, wife of Byggvir.

BEZOAR In Tibetan Buddhism one of the eight objects used in Man-la ritual.

BHADRA (1) In Hinduism daughter of Soma, wife of Utathya. Varuna abducted her, and Utathya dried up the rivers and caused the earth to become a desert, whereupon Varuna repented of his action and restored Bhadra to her husband. A fertility legend, in which Bhadra typifies spring growth. (2) Month of the Hindu calendar in the rainy season; month in which Krishna was born. (3) Sixth Buddhist arhat. The thoroughly good, the noble. His emblem is a book, his mudras are the dhyanana and vitarka. In Tibet called Zen-po or bZan-po.

BHADRAKALI Hindu death goddess.

BHAGA In Hinduism one of the Aditya. Younger brother of Varuna. He was the bountiful, the liberal friend, revered as a god of good-luck, a giver of fortune and ruler of marriages. Associated with Purandhi, goddess of plenty. His eyes were destroyed by Siva, thus the sun was blinded by storms.

BHAGAVAD-GITA From the Sanscrit meaning celestial song or song of the blessed one. Hindu sacred book.

BHAGAVAN From the Sanscrit meaning blessed lord. In India, Supreme Being, epithet for the Buddha.

BHAIRAVA From the Sanscrit, meaning the terrible. An epithet for Siva.

BHAISAJYAGURU The fifth Buddha, supreme physician. Also a Bodhisattva. His worshipers rub the parts of their bodies afflicted by disease against his effigy. His right hand, in varada mudra, holds myrobalan (medicinal plant or fruit), and his left hand, in dhyana mudra, holds a patra. His color is blue, his asana is dhyana. Commonly known as king of Beryl; also called Man-la. In Tibet called Sang-gyeman-gyila-bedurye-o-chi-gyal-po.

BHALU Sanscrit masculine name meaning bear.

BHARADVAJA Hindu sage. When Vishnu disturbed him at prayer, he threw water at the god; as a result Vishnu bears the vatsa (calf) mark on his breast.

BHARATA (BHARATHA, BHARATI)

(1) Literally, the cherisher.
(2) In Ramayana one of the four sons of King Dasaratha; elder brother of Rama. Bharata's mother brought about the exile of Rama, who had been appointed heir to the throne, but Bharata sought out Rama to induce him to return. Rama refused until the period of his exile had ended. A light myth in which Rama, the sun, permits Bharata, darkness, to rule for a period without a contest. (3) Legendary ancestor of the Kauravas and Pandavas. Son of the Rajah Dushyanta and Sakuntala, he established his first kingdom in India, and India still is known as Bharata-varsha (country of Bharata). See Lasya, Thandava.

BHARUNDAS In Hinduism birds which carry away the dead.

BHAVA Literally, the existent. Hindu lord of cattle. A name of Rudra and Siva.

BHAVA AND BHAVANI Hindu life and producing powers of nature. Becoming as distinguished from being.

BHAVACAKRAMUDRA Buddhist wheel of life, wheel of transmigration. Painting representing the samsara or transmigratory existence. In Tibet called Sridpaikor-loi-pyags-rgya.

BHAVANI In Nepal wife of Siva; identical with Vajravahni. Resembles the Greek Eileithya.

BHEKI In Hinduism the sun resting on the horizon. Sometimes shown as a frog which squats by the waterside. In a legend Bheki is a maiden who marries a king on condition he will never show her a drop of water. The sun sets in water, thus water would cause her death. A Frog Prince has become popular in German folk literature.

BHIKKU Buddhist monk to whom food is supplied by the people. His only possessions are the begging bowl, rosary of 108 beads, and in Ceylon an umbrella against the sun and a fan against the heat.

BHIMA In Hindu mythology one of the Pandavas. Giant son of Vayu, wind deity. Celebrated for his coarse appetite, fiery temper, and strength. In one adventure he journeys to the northeastern celestial region in search of Lake Kubera, where the life-giving lotus grows. He slays the Yakshas which guard the lotuses and drinks of the waters of the lake, which give him strength and youth.

BHRAMA Sanscrit word meaning whirling, leaping flame; identical with the divine name Brahma and Brahm.

BHRIGU (BHRGU) Literally, the bright. In Vedic mythology one of the maharshis or rishis (seers). Founder of the race of Bhrigus or Bhargavas. Bhrigu (dawn) was generated from the heart of Brahma or from the seed of Prajapati, which had been cast into the fire by the gods. He was adopted by Varuna. According to the Puranas the rishis were undecided about which god to worship so they sent Bhrigu to test their characters. Bhrigu found Brahma too much engrossed in himself and Siva too much engrossed in his wife. Vishnu was asleep so Bhrigu kicked his sole. Upon awaking Vishnu stroked his foot (rays) and thanked the sage for the unusual method of awaking him. Bhrigu chose Vishnu for worship. In another account Bhrigu with Matarisvan (wind deity) found Agni (fire) in water (light rays seem to float on water or to be part of water); together they kindled Agni by friction, diffused and established his use on earth, and prayed to him. With Matarisvan, Bhrigu also overcame Makha, demon of darkness.

BHRKUTI In Buddhism the Yellow Tara, she who frowns. She is four handed, one right hand is in varada mudra, one holds a mala; one left hand holds a danda, the other holds a padma. Her asana is standing. In Tibet called Khro-gner-can-ma.

BHUMIDEVI Hindu earth goddess. Wife of Vishnu. The avatar Vahara rescued her from the ocean depths.

BHUMISPARSA Earth-touching mudra, signifying witness, earth bear witness, as when Buddha called on earth to witness that he had attained Buddhahood. Mudra of Aksobhya and Gautama. An alms bowl usually accompanies this mudra.

BHUMIYA Earth deity of aborigines in India. Later incorporated into the Hindu pantheon.

BHURANYU Hindu fire god. Equates with Phoroneus.

BHUT (BHUTA) Hindu malignant ghost of the dead, especially the spirit of one who has died by accident, capital punishment, suicide, or other violent means, and had been denied funeral rite. A spirit left without a body. Compare jinn.

B - I First and last. Boibel-Jaichim of the ancient Irish alphabet and Beth-Idho of the Irish tree alphabet. Dedicated to inception and death respectively, also to the birch and yew trees.

BIA Literally, force of strength. In Greek mythology offspring of the Titan Pallas and the river goddess Styx.

BIANCA (1) In Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew, the gentle and meek sister of Katherine, the shrew. (2) In Thomas Middleton's A Game of Chess a woman moved by vanity. She is a Venetian noblewoman, wife of the clerk Leantio, and while her mother-in-law engages in a game of chess, she is seduced by the Duke of Florence.

BIAS One of the seven sages of the 6th century B. C. Greece, famous for his justice.

BIBLE Symbol of salvation. Sacred writings of the Hebrews (Old Testament) and Christians (New Testament). Often called the Good Book. Term used to denote the sacred writings of any religion or any book accepted as authoritative. In Freemasonry a guide of faith and one of the three great lights.

BICORNE In Old French satire a fabulous beast that became fat by eating patient husbands. See Chichivache.

BICYCLE Adventure, travel. Dream significance: early success.

BIDDULPH Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning commanding wolf.

BIDENT Divine quality, life force, male and female principles.

B'IDI Word element meaning my help, which frequently appears in Semitic deity names.

BIDUCHT Persian goddess of love. Resembles Aphrodite.

BIFROST (BILROST) Literally, tremble-path. In Norse mythology bridge connecting Asgard (heaven) and Midgard (earth). Probably the rainbow, its various colors the reflection of its precious stones. It is guarded by Heimdall, who prevents it from falling into the hands of frost and mountain giants. The gods ride over it daily to their tribunal at Urd's well under the Yggdrasil tree. The Valkyrie ride over it to choose slain heroes for Valhalla, thus a bridge over which dead heroes travel. At Ragnarok it will collapse under the weight of the onrushing sons of Muspelheim or it will be destroyed by Surt's fire. Also called Asbru (Aesir bridge) and Vindhjalsbrú (wind-helmet bridge).

BIG BEAR (GREAT BEAR) Constellation also called Big Dipper and Ursa Major. See Ursa Major.

BIG BEN Famous clock in Saint Stephen's Tower at the House of Parliament, London. Named after Sir Benjamin Hall, Chief Commissioner of Works when it was cast. Big Ben has become a trade name for alarm clocks.

BIG BERTHA A large gun used by the Germans in World War I. So called from Frau Berta of the Krupp family which manufactured it.

BIG DIPPER Constellation also called Big Bear and Ursa Major. See Ursa Major.

BIG-ENDIANS In Swift's Gulliver's Travels a party in the empire of the Lilliput, who consider it a matter of conscience to break their eggs at the big end. They are looked upon as heretics by the orthodox party, whose members break their eggs at the little end. Big-endians typify Catholics, Little-endians typify Protestants.

BIGGARROO Great Australian snake coiled around a mountainous quartz ledge. Through his body the souls of men reach happy spirit-land. The alternative choice is Goonnear, evil snake. Resembles Apep.

BIGOT Typified by a lobster.

BIGWIG A nob, an important person, one in authority. The term arises from the large wigs worn by bishops, judges, and others.

BI-HAR (PE-HAR) King of deeds, one of the five great kings of Buddhism, a Mahapancaraja. His color is white, his vahana is a white lion or red tiger. He has three heads, six eyes in each, and six arms. His emblems are the capa (bow), churi (knife), danda (staff), gada (elephant), khada (sword), sara (arrow). In Tibet called hPhrin-las-rgyal-po or Tin-le-gyal-po.

BIJA In Sanscrit seed. See Gahu.

BIKKI In German legend when scorned by Svanhild, he falsely accuses her of misconduct with her stepson, the son of King Jormunrek, and the prince and Svanhild are both condemned to death by the king. This story is the theme of Phaedra and Hippolytus and Potiphar's wife and Joseph in reverse. Bikki is also called Si-bech.

BIL In Norse mythology a little girl, who with Hyuki (Jack) accompanies Mani as he drives the chariot of the moon. A sweetheart. Called Jill in nursery rhymes. The Milky Way is given her name and called Bil's Way (another name is Irmin's Way). See Hyuki and Bil.

BILBERRY July 17 birthday flower with the sentiment deceit, treachery.

BILDAD (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning son of contention.

(2) In Old Testament the Shuhite who entered into controversy with Job. His chief topics were the suddenness, swiftness, and terribleness of God's wrath upon hypocrites and oppressors.

BILE (1) Ill nature, peevishness. (2) In Irish mythology husband of Danu, father of Miled. A first man, thus Bile is the father of the human race. His abode is the underworld, where he rules as a death deity. His rites consisted of human sacrifices. The Britains adopted him as Beli and transformed him into a sun deity. Resembles Dis Pater.

BILLIKEN In the United States a grotesque figure used as a talisman; god of things as they ought to be.

BILLING Norse elf-guardian of the west; god of twilight. Father of Rind and guardian of the forest of the Varns.

BILLINGSGATE Abusive, coarse, vulgar language, in allusion to the language heard at Billingsgate fishmarket in London, where the fishwomen are notorious for scurrility.

BILL SIKES Outlaw, thief.

BILSKIRNER In Norse mythology Thor's heavenly abode, a mansion of 540 halls and a roof of silver. Name signifies moment serene or shining moment.

BILU A Burmese ogre which feeds on human flesh and may be recognized by the fact that he casts no shadow.

BIMBOGAMI Japanese god of poverty. The glowing bamboo tube used to blow the household fire is thrown away to exorcise him.

BIMINI A legendary island believed to be in the Bahamas and said to contain the fountain of youth sought by Ponce de Leon. The name has been assigned to an actual island. Also called Boicua.

BINAH In the cabala the third Sefhira. Heavenly intelligence and understanding which pervades, animates, and governs the boundless universe.

BINDWEED April 12 birthday flower with the sentiment obstinacy.

Great bindweed. Insinuation.
Small bindweed. Humility.

BINOCULARS Dream significance: You are being deceived.

BINZURU First Japanese disciple of Buddha. Talisman against illness. Devotees seek cures by rubbing diseased parts against a corresponding part of his statue.

BIR (BER, BIRQU) Title of the Assyrian Mer, the father, great feeder, fire. Also known as Adad, Addu, Dadu, Rammanu. Root of birk, Gypsy term for breasts.

BIRCH April 14 birthday plant with the sentiment grace and meekness. In the language of flowers: You may begin. Given by a young girl to a young man as a sign of encouragement. Compare hazel. Symbol of self-propagation. Tree of inception, its rods were used ritualistically to drive out the spirits of the old year, hence a tree of cradles. Used for flogging of delinquents and of lunatics to drive out evil spirits. In the druidic tree alphabet tree of the first consonant, beth (B). The first or birch month in the druidic calendar extended from December 24 to January 21. Used by Romans during the installation of the consuls as a tree of inception. In Scotland associated with the dead, more especially with the wraiths of those who appear to the living after death. Siberian tree of life.

Birch nymphs. In Greek mythology the dryads or wood nymphs wedded to the birch were represented as melancholy fragile young women with floating hair.

Birch rod. Inception, punishment, purification.

BIRD Aspiration, child, cloud, divine essence, fecundity, freedom, growth, haste, immortality, inspiration, prophecy, sky, spirit of air, spirit of life, sun, wind. Transmigration of the soul. Proclaimer of omens, revealer of secrets of deities, hence, "A little bird told me."

Guardian of the tree of knowledge and of life; serpent (rain withholder) slayer. Dream significance: good news. Originally brid, i.e. a thing bred; cognate with breed. In American Indian lore represents soul in paradise; also rain and thunder and lightning. Carrier of the dead to paradise. Inasmuch as water as well as air had to be traversed by the dead, the burial object sometimes was a bird-shaped boat. In Australia natives believe that birds were the original gods. In a Baining of New Britain legend a bird and stone were offsprings of the sun and moon. The stone turned into a man and the bird transformed into a woman, and the pair became the parents of the human race. In Buddhism, the garuda, which see. In China a wind deity. Typifies red, south, summer, yang principle. In Celtic, Finno-Ugric, and Greek Paganism a form in which the dead appear. In Iran, as transmitters of revelation, identified with supreme wisdom. Incarnations of clouds, fire, sun, thunderbolt. In Polynesian mythology form in which the deity descended onto the water and laid the egg from which Hawaii emerged. Also sent out from heaven by the creator god to locate land after the deluge, a legend which resembles that of Noah. In other Pacific Island myths the bird has a prominent place in creation, acting as the supreme deity's messenger for fructifying a stone or tree from which beings emerge. Siberian thunder god; also a form of the virtuous dead who live in the cosmic tree. In some cosmological myths a diver bird goes to the bottom of the primordial sea and returns with mud in its beak from which the great father or great mother shapes the world. In other Siberian myths a raven or other bird is sent out to see how large the earth that has been created has grown. In Sumerian mythology the form in which the dead exist in the underworld.

Arabian bird. Phoenix.

Birdcage. Imprisonment.

Dream significance: serious slander.

Bird claw or leg. In heraldry an eagle and signifies one who will prey.

Bird eating grapes. In ancient Greek and Hebrew tradition a devotee obtaining mystic union with the saving god; eternal life.

Bird feather. Light, literature, writing.

Bird flying. Flight of soul to heaven; source of omens. In China phallic symbol. Erection.

Bird footprint. Source of alphabet and of omens.

Bird foot trefoil. Revenge.

Bird in bush. That which is desired but still uncaught.

Bird in hand. Possession.

Bird in vine. Soul partaking of celestial food.

Bird language. A folklore motif; medium of advice, prophecy, warning.

Bird of Aengus. Kiss.

Bird of Athene. Owl.

Bird of Diomedes. Swan.

Bird of freedom. Eagle.

Bird of France. Cock.

Bird of Holland and Japan. Stork.

Bird of ill omen. Raven.

Bird of Juno. Peacock.

Bird of paradise. Constellation Apus.

Bird of passage. Carrier pigeon, swallow, wild goose, etc.

Bird of United States. Eagle.

Bird on pedestal. Union of spirit and matter; sun supported by the universal axis. Authority, royalty, scepter.

Bird released from cage.

Soul taking flight to heaven.

Bird-serpent (or dragon).

Good and evil, air and earth, sky and underworld. Forces that control the elements in conflict, resulting in the slaying of the serpent by the bird to release the fertilizing moisture (jewel) or waters of life. A world-wide legend relates to a sacred tree or tree of life in the branches of which sits a bird, the source of supernatural hearing and vision. The tree is located along the edge of a pool in which dwells a dragon, fish, serpent, or toad withholding the water for which the bird from time to time battles. Sun battling storm clouds. See winged serpent.

Bird-shaped boat. Carrier of the dead. Compare water burial.

Bird-tipped staff. Authority, royalty. Emblematic of the holy one.

Bird and tortoise. Union of opposing forces.

Bird wings. Wind.

Black bird. Wicked soul.

Blue bird. Happiness.

Brilliantly plumed bird. Devouring flame shot from the sun; rays.

Caged bird. One overly sheltered. Deity in womb of mother goddess.

Golden-eyed bird. Deity.

Human-headed bird. Soul.

Long-legged bird. Longevity.

Love-bird. Dove.

Vermilion bird. In China and Japan one of the four good spirits. See under Vermilion.

White bird. Soul of the righteous.

Wild bird. Indoors regarded as an omen of ill-luck.

BIRD CHERRY Flower symbolizing hope.

BIRTHDAY FLOWERS

January

- 1 oak geranium
- 2 multiflora rose
- 3 cactus
- 4 aloe
- 5 hydrangea
- 6 ice plant
- 7 Japanese rose
- 8 laburnum
- 9 lavender
- 10 withered leaf
- 11 lemon
- 12 lemon blossom
- 13 imperial lily
- 14 hyssop
- 15 marigold
- 16 yarrow plant
- 17 rosemary
- 18 rue
- 19 ~~sage~~
- 20 snowdrop
- 21 southern wood
- 22 mullen
- 23 nightshade
- 24 oak leaf
- 25 motherwort
- 26 orange blossom
- 27 burning nettle
- 28 narcissus
- 29 liverwort
- 30 mignonette
- 31 periwinkle

February

- 1 sweetpea

- 2 yellow rose
- 3 saffron
- 4 pansy
- 5 marsh mallow
- 6 mistletoe
- 7 linden
- 8 pineapple
- 9 leek
- 10 hawthorn
- 11 cypress
- 12 dew plant
- 13 clematis
- 14 gillyflower
- 15 hemlock
- 16 moss
- 17 pea
- 18 rye grass
- 19 spruce
- 20 yew
- 21 veronica
- 22 amaryllis
- 23 tansy
- 24 straw
- 25 spearmint
- 26 lady's delight
- 27 bachelor's button
- 28 calla lily
- 29 grass

March

- 1 heliotrope
- 2 thorn
- 3 red pink
- 4 rose geranium
- 5 holly
- 6 dogbane
- 7 hyacinth
- 8 olive
- 9 anemone
- 10 kingcup
- 11 blue violet
- 12 maple
- 13 ivy
- 14 white violet
- 15 walnut
- 16 valerian
- 17 sorrel
- 18 shamrock
- 19 snake's root
- 20 lettuce
- 21 pine
- 22 maidenhair
- 23 woodbine
- 24 fern

Birthdays flowers (cont.)

March

- 25 allspice
- 26 pitch pine
- 27 fir
- 28 sweet briar
- 29 elder
- 30 hoarhound
- 31 love-lies-bleeding

April

- 1 columbine
- 2 rush
- 3 meadow saffron
- 4 reed
- 5 mouse-ear chickweed
- 6 myrrh
- 7 hop
- 8 almond tree
- 9 balsam
- 10 barberry
- 11 beech
- 12 bindweed
- 13 cinquefoil
- 14 birch
- 15 china aster
- 16 crocus blossom
- 17 daisy
- 18 wild grape
- 19 honey flower
- 20 withered rose
- 21 wild honeysuckle
- 22 yellow jasmine
- 23 lady's slipper
- 24 musk plant
- 25 peach blossom
- 26 bridal rose
- 27 broken straw
- 28 yellow violet
- 29 wormwood plant
- 30 vernal grass

May

- 1 American starwort
- 2 chickweed
- 3 May rose
- 4 myrtle
- 5 ophrys
- 6 quince
- 7 primrose
- 8 white poppy
- 9 snowball
- 10 red poppy
- 11 sensitive plant

- 12 Star of Bethlehem
- 13 strawberry
- 14 sumac
- 15 sweet William
- 16 syringa
- 17 thistle
- 18 vervain
- 19 wake robin
- 20 wallflower
- 21 weeping willow
- 22 willow
- 23 water lily
- 24 wolf's bane
- 25 rhubarb
- 26 phlox
- 27 meadow sweet
- 28 oleander
- 29 French marigold
- 30 Carolina rose
- 31 pink

June

- 1 marjoram
- 2 double red pink
- 3 yellow pink
- 4 daily rose
- 5 Lancaster rose
- 6 thorn apple
- 7 red tulip
- 8 variegated tulip
- 9 thyme
- 10 pomegranate
- 11 black poplar
- 12 prickly pear
- 13 potato blossom
- 14 mountain pink
- 15 wild plum
- 16 fly orchis
- 17 palm
- 18 mustard seed
- 19 mulberry tree
- 20 black mulberry
- 21 peony
- 22 passion flower
- 23 pasque flower
- 24 hemp
- 25 hollyhock
- 26 sweet scabious
- 27 schinus
- 28 snapdragon
- 29 St. John's wort
- 30 sunflower

Birthdays flowers (cont.)

July

- 1 sycamore
- 2 xanthium
- 3 wood sorrel
- 4 water willow
- 5 crown of roses
- 6 white rose bud
- 7 red rose bud
- 8 white rose
- 9 dog rose
- 10 fig tree
- 11 angelica
- 12 basil
- 13 asphodel
- 14 bay
- 15 belladonna
- 16 bell flower
- 17 bilberry
- 18 bittersweet
- 19 bramble
- 20 bulrush
- 21 canterbury bell
- 22 celandine
- 23 Indian plum
- 24 white lilac
- 25 lilac
- 26 magnolia
- 27 London pride
- 28 moonwort
- 29 verbena
- 30 patagonian mint
- 31 osier

August

- 1 Burgandy rose
- 2 damask rose
- 3 moss rose
- 4 morning glory
- 5 hundred-leaved rose
- 6 sardony
- 7 saintfoin
- 8 scabious
- 9 witch hazel
- 10 whortleberry
- 11 willow herb
- 12 vine
- 13 vetch
- 14 thrift
- 15 throatwort
- 16 butterfly orchis
- 17 pear
- 18 blue periwinkle
- 19 pimpernel

- 20 crow foot
- 21 cuckoo flower
- 22 bunch of currants
- 23 daffodil
- 24 dahlia
- 25 sweet flag
- 26 live everlasting
- 27 filbert
- 28 flax
- 29 flower-of-an-hour
- 30 flowering reed
- 31 fox glove

September

- 1 fumitory
- 2 helenium
- 3 hepatica
- 4 hoyo
- 5 humble plant
- 6 iris
- 7 lily-of-the-valley
- 8 madder
- 9 monkshood
- 10 tear drop
- 11 cranberry
- 12 jonquil
- 13 love-in-a-snail
- 14 acacia
- 15 rose acacia
- 16 adonis
- 17 box
- 18 buttercup
- 19 cabbage
- 20 China pink
- 21 corn
- 22 cowslip
- 23 ivy sprig
- 24 cress
- 25 crocus
- 26 dock
- 27 dandelion
- 28 gooseberry
- 29 guelder rose
- 30 blue bell

October

- 1 horse chestnut
- 2 juniper
- 3 wheat
- 4 Venus's looking glass
- 5 turnip
- 6 tuberose
- 7 traveler's joy
- 8 tamerisk

Brithday flowers (cont.)

October

- 9 swallow wort
- 10 stock
- 11 rudbeckia
- 12 mundi rose
- 13 red rose
- 14 China rose
- 15 raspberry
- 16 split reed
- 17 single reed
- 18 rhododendron
- 19 Austrian rose
- 20 rose campion
- 21 ranunculus
- 22 red primrose
- 23 polyanthus
- 24 plane tree
- 25 Indian pink
- 26 larch
- 27 peppermint
- 28 osmunda
- 29 oeyedaisy
- 30 parsley
- 31 common nettle

November

- 1 nasturtium
- 2 mountain ash
- 3 mugwort
- 4 mushroom
- 5 mimosa
- 6 mandrake
- 7 marvel of Peru
- 8 lupine
- 9 lotus flower
- 10 lotus
- 11 lotus tree
- 12 linchen
- 13 field lily
- 14 yellow lily
- 15 laurestine
- 16 mountain laurel
- 17 laurel
- 18 houstonia
- 19 hornbeam tree
- 20 honeysuckle
- 21 hawkweed
- 22 gourd
- 23 fushia
- 24 dark geranium
- 25 nutmeg geranium
- 26 silver leaf geranium
- 27 gentian

- 28 gorse
- 29 goldylocks
- 30 goldenrod

December

- 1 scarlet geranium
- 2 teazel
- 3 French willow
- 4 flower de luce
- 5 fennel
- 6 dragon plant
- 7 diomosa
- 8 althea
- 9 creeper
- 10 coronella
- 11 cockle
- 12 coreander
- 13 citron
- 14 coxcomb
- 15 coreopsis
- 16 rock rose
- 17 chamomile
- 18 cedar of Lebanon
- 19 carnation
- 20 cardinal flower
- 21 japonica
- 22 petunia
- 23 bear's breach
- 24 chrysanthemum
- 25 Christmas rose
- 26 balm of Gilead
- 27 ash tree
- 28 arbor vitae
- 29 amaranth
- 30 ambrosia
- 31 apple blossom

For symbolism, see under individual flower names.

BIRTHSTONES

The gem identified with a particular month supposedly brings good-luck when worn by a person whose birthday falls in that month. For further symbolism on the stones, see under gems or under the name of each jewel.

Month	1912 Jewelers' Convention		18th to 20th Century		Arabian
	Babylonian	Hebrew	Hindu	Isidorus, Bishop of Seville
Jan.	crystal or onyx	garnet	serpent stone	hyacinth	garnet
Feb.	amber, coral	amethyst	chandrakanta	amethyst	amethyst
Mar.	amethyst or bloodstone	jasper	gold Siva linga	jasper	bloodstone
Apr.	carnelian or emerald	sapphire	diamond	sapphire	sapphire
May	aquamarine or hematite	agate, carnelian or chalcedony	emerald	agate	emerald
June	moonstone or pearl	emerald	pearl	emerald	chalcedony or agate
July	jade or ruby	onyx	sapphire	onyx	carnelian
Aug.	beryl or tourmaline	carnelian	ruby	carnelian	carnelian
Sept.	opal or sapphire	chrysolite	zircon	chrysolite	chrysolite
Oct.	agate or malachite	aquamarine or beryl	coral	aquamarine or beryl	aquamarine or beryl
Nov.	lapis lazuli or topaz	topaz	cat's eye	topaz	topaz
Dec.	garnet or turquoise	ruby	topaz	ruby	ruby

Birthstones (cont.)

Month	Italian	Polish	Roman	Russian
Jan.	garnet or jacinth	garnet	garnet	garnet or hyacinth
Feb.	amethyst	amethyst	amethyst	amethyst
Mar.	jasper	bloodstone	bloodstone	jasper
Apr.	sapphire	diamond	sapphire	sapphire
May	agate	emerald	agate	emerald
June	emerald	agate or chalcedony	emerald	agate or chal- cedony
July	onyx	ruby	onyx	ruby or sardonyx
Aug.	carnelian	sardonyx	carnelian	alexandrite
Sept.	chrysolite	sapphire	sardonyx	chrysolite
Oct.	beryl	aquamarine or beryl	aquamarine or beryl	beryl
Nov.	topaz	topaz	topaz	topaz
Dec.	ruby	turquoise	ruby	chrysoprase or turquoise

Note: anciently the stones related to signs of the zodiac, thus the crystal or onyx was a birthstone in ancient Babylon for Aquarius, the period beginning January 20th and ending February 19th.

BI-SEXUAL DEITIES See Androgynous deities, Man passing as a woman.

BISHAMON (BISHAMONTEN)

One of the Schichi Fukujin, the seven Japanese deities of good fortune. The wide-hearing, guardian of the north, subjugator of evil, protector of the righteous. God of happiness, wealth, and war. As a guardian Buddha who fights non-believers shown in helmet and armor holding a halberd; as a god of wealth he holds a tower of treasure and is accompanied by a centipede. Identical with Vaisramana.

BISHOP OF CHESTER In the 15th century the wealth of the bishopric of Chester was proverbial and became the source of a satiric expression, "As poor as the bishop of Chester."

Bishop of Feltro. A Bishop who gave up to execution a number of Ferrarese who had taken shelter with him; mentioned by Dante.

Bishop of Fools. King of Saturnalia, which see.

Bishop Luc Garic. Noted occultist. He foretold to Henry II that he would be killed in a duel, to the Duc de Guise that he would be murdered, to M. d'Escars that his head would be broken by the kick of a horse.

BISON Resurrection. After devouring a bison American Indians arranged their bones in natural order on the prairie that the animal might come to life again in the next hunting season. See skeleton.

BISSAT Tatar hero who burned out the eye of a one-eyed man-eating giant. Parallels Odysseus as sun hero; the giant parallels the Cyclops as terrifying storms.

BITCH Dream significance: joy, satisfaction.

Spaded bitch. A good animal to have in a home as it supposedly keeps evil spirits from haunting a house.

BITE Dream significance: hatred, jealousy.

BITHIA Scythian witch who cast under a spell or killed with a look: spirit of the evil eye.

BITON AND CLEOBIS In Greek legend sons of Cydippe, priestess of Hera. Personifications of filial piety. Cydippe planned to ride her oxcart to Heraion, but the oxen were not at hand. Her sons put the yoke across their necks and drew her to the temple, where they arrived so exhausted they fell asleep. Their mother prayed, asking Hera to bestow upon the youths the greatest boon that man could have, whereupon the goddess put them to death in their sleep.

BITSITSI Zuni jester and musician to the sun father.

BITTER HERB Affliction, misery, servitude. See Hazereth, Maror.

Bitter-root. State flower of Montana.

Bitter Sea. In Babylonian mythology sea of death which Sargon and Utnapishtim crossed to immortality.

Bittersweet. July 18 birthday flower with the sentiment truth.

BJELBOG (BALBOG) Slavonic sun god. The pale or white shining god, bringer of days. Parallels Balder.

BJORN In Icelandic sagas son of the ugly giant Kol and foster brother of Frithiof. His blue tooth, an ell and a half long, killed enemies in battle. An aspect of winter.

BJORNO-HODER In Norse mythology a name by which the blind archer Hoder, an aspect of darkness or winter, was known.

BJORT In Norse mythology the shining one. A handmaid of Freyja, personification of brilliant lights of day.

BLACK The absolute, constancy, eternity, sleep, wisdom, womb. Contrariwise it symbolizes condemnation, death, deceit, desolation, despair, disaster, fear, gloom, grief, hatred, hideousness, ignorance, inferiority, lower world, mystery, silence, sin, the sinister, stubbornness, sullenness, superstition, tragedy, the unchanging, the unholy, the unknowable, vengeance, witchcraft, worldly knowledge. Lack of moral goodness or light. Universally in mythology color assigned to earth and underworld deities. To primitive man: peril, phantoms, trulls. To the savage expresses a range from despair to revolt; to the modern European from grief to sorrow. A color of the devil; Satan worshipers hold 'black masses.' Witchery is the 'black art,' and witches appear as black cats. In some cultures color of the west, land of the setting sun; in others color of the north, direction of winter. At the north pole, seat of cosmic justice, the judges of the dead wear black caps and robes. In astrology dedicated to Saturn. In heraldry called sable and typifies constancy, prudence, wisdom. Represented by lines forming squares or by deep black. In industry signifies solvency, as 'in the black.' In metal represented by lead. Its mourning use probably derives from ancient Semitic custom of blackening one's face with ashes or dirt, a means of imparting fertility and vitality; also a disguise against being recognized by the malignant dead, as well as a mark of grief and submission. In precious stones represented by diamond, gadolinite, garnet, jet, quartz, and tourmaline. In symbology two shades of black are considered, one opposing red and signifying ignorance arising from passions; one opposing white and signifying ignorance of mind not necessarily confirmed by wickedness of heart. The personality traits of those who lean toward black are: (female color) mystery; (male color) acceptance of the challenge of mystery.

In China color of north, water, and yin, with influences over the bladder and kidneys. In Christian churches color of Good Friday. In ancient Egypt color of west influencing the gall and liver. Emblematic of Kneph, the creative mind. Color of Osiris at funeral rites; Thoth as conductor of souls has the head of a black ibis. In England signifies a menial. Servants who perform mean tasks are dressed in black and called royal blackguards. Milton uses the color for the great mother, i.e. night from which everything rises. Finno-Ugrics sacrificed black animals to water deities. In ancient Greece a symbol of sacrifice, and black sails were the mark of the vessel that embarked with Athenian maidens and youths destined as a tribute to the Minotaur. The mother of all things, wearing a starry veil, was portrayed holding two children, one black (eternity), one white (time). The Hindus used black in sympathetic magic, suggesting the blackness of clouds, to cause rain. Pueblo Indian nadir color. In Rome the toga pulla (black garb of mourning) was worn by men who desired to express sympathy for a fallen political leader.

Black angels. Fallen angels.

Black animals. In ancient Egypt the power of darkness, devourer of the sun and moon. In most cultures the sacrifice of black animals pointed to worship of the dead, as they were sacrificed to underworld deities.

Black Annis of Leicester. In British folklore a wind hag. Witch with a hower in the Dane or Danu hills, where she devoured children. Identified with Ana, also with the Blue hag in Milton's Paradise Lost.

Black Arky. Celtic demon of of darkness; slayer of Finn's father Coul.

Black art. Magical assistance of evil powers. Witchcraft.

Blackball. Exclusion, ostracism, rejection.

Black beast. Bugbear; any object or person one dislikes intensely.

Blackberry. Celtic fairy fruit. In the tree alphabet substituted for the grape of southern Europe, and for this reason a taboo food.

Blackbird. Bad luck, evil, temptation. Typifies the devil or an underworld deity.

Black and blue. Bruised.

Black book. Previously symbolized disgrace or to be out of favor; the names of those who merited punishment were kept in a black book. In modern times typifies harlotry; the book in which a record of the addresses of a prostitute's customers are kept.

Black cap. Emblem of a judge who condemns murderers.

Black cat. Necromancer, witch.

Black cloak. Ignorance.

Black cloth on head. In Italy, senseless thought.

Black clouds. In Chinese art floods.

Black death. Boubonic plague which swept Asia and Europe in the 14th century.

Black deuce. Playing card under which there is luck, thus the proverb, "There's luck under the black deuce."

Black dog. Melancholy; the 'blues.

Black eye. Shame, dishonor, slander.

Black face. In Chinese drama represents a rough, honest person. In modern western drama one who entertains with songs, jokes, buffoonery, etc., originally a minstrel, a singer of Negro melodies.

Black-faced Madonna. In Byzantium art sadness, sorrow, sympathy for men.

Black-faced virgin and child. Design on old coins representing night, when the creatrix is most attentive to her duties.

Black fast. Fasting against a person; fasting for the purpose of compelling a stronger or superior person to grant a request, pay a debt, yield a point. Believed to be potent in casting spells.

Black flag. Piracy, decorated with skull and crossbones. In Greek mythology death, sacrifice.

Black Friday. Day of ill-luck. Several financial panics occurred on Fridays. Also a name for Good Friday on account of the black vestments worn in the Roman Catholic Church.

Black and gold. In heraldry wealth.

Black gown. A collegian, judge, parson, in allusion to their uniforms.

Blackguard. In England a menial, a scullion in the kitchen clothed in black. Also a scoundrel.

Blackhand. Death, the supernatural, winter. See Brangemore. Emblem of a secret Italian society whose members engaged in blackmail and other criminal activities. In the 19th century a Black Hand society flourished in Spain which had anarchistic aims.

Black hats. Sorcerers; priests of Pon, a primitive Tibetan religion.

Black Hawk. An American Indian chief who led the Fox and Sac Indians in a war against the United States.

Black heart. Evil person.

Black hen (or rooster). Used for purposes of divination.

Black hole. In military barracks, the lock-up, alluding to the Black Hole of Calcutta, a dark, small, suffocating cell into which 146 British prisoners were thrown by Suraja Dowlah in 1756, and from which only 23 emerged alive.

Blackjack. Pirate's black flag. The card game also called Twenty-one. A short leather-covered wooden club used by gangsters.

Black lambs. Sacrificed in witchcraft. Sacrificed to Hecate at crossroads.

Blackleg. A gambling or racing swindler. A scab, strikebreaker.

Black-letter day. A day to be recalled with regret, an unlucky day, referring to the Roman habit of marking unlucky days with black charcoal; lucky days were marked with white chalk.

Black lie. Lie with malignant purpose; opposed to a white or harmless lie.

Black list. A list of bankrupts for the private guidance of those in a mercantile community; a list of persons in disfavor or under suspicion. A list of those to be ostracized.

Black magic. Necromancy practiced to raise the dead; witchcraft practiced for evil purposes.

Black man. Deity of darkness or of the underworld; Satan.

Black Maria. Police van. According to an unsupported legend

Maria Lee, a woman of great size and strength, kept a boarding house in Boston for sailors. When she was unable to control them the constables came in a wagon, which they nicknamed Black Maria, to take the men to the lockup. The name was attached to the first motion picture stage in the United States, and to German shells in World War I, which sent up a dense black smoke.

Black Monday. Monday after Easter. So called because of the defeat suffered by Edward III, who was leading English forces against Paris.

Black Mountains. In Navaho Indian mythology northern mountains which covered the earth nightly in darkness.

Black poodle. Evil. An aspect of Mephistopheles in Faust.

Black Roger. A pirate.

Black rose. Silence. Symbolic of the silence of an initiate.

Black sails. In Greek mythology death, hopelessness, sacrifice. The vessel which carried maidens and youths destined to be offered as a tribute to the Minotaur had black sails.

Black School. In Moslem tradition the school in which the Sufis pondered on the mysteries of God and "learnt wisdom thereby."

Black serpent. In China, north.

Black sheep. A disreputable member of a family or of a society, inasmuch as a black sheep does not conform to the conventional color of the flock.

Black shirt. Fascistic followers of Mussolini in Italy.

Black swan. Something rare.

Black tortoise. In Chinese mythology the Sombèr Warrior, guardian of the North and of water. Presided over divination. Called Kuei Shen, which see.

Black and white. Evil and goodness, pollution and purity. Darkness and light, night and day. Sleep and wakefulness. Also something clearly written, the black representing ink and the white, paper. In Christian tradition humility and purity, colors of Good Friday. In heraldry fairness, fame.

BLACKEYED SUSAN Flower emblem of the state of Maryland.

BLACKSMITH, HAMMERING Thought. This symbolism is perpetuated in metaphors such as 'flash of genius,' 'scorching wit,' 'striking thought.' An anvil or forge symbolizes the brain.

BLACKTHORN Symbolic of difficulty and ill luck. In Britain its rod, carried by witches, was believed to cause miscarriages. When witches were burned, blackthorn staffs were burned with them as their chief instrument of sorcery. When the Celtic alphabet was increased to fifteen consonants, the blackthorn was the tree of the sixth consonant, straih (S), and it shared the month of the willow from April 16 to May 13, month in which Good Friday falls. The crown of thorns sometimes was said to have been the blackthorn, and a reason given by monks for the unluckiness of the tree.

BLADDER SENNA Blossom symbolizing frivolous amusements.

BLADE OF A KNIFE Dream significance: betrayal.

BLADUD Legendary king of Britain. Father of King Lear. Reputed founder of Bath. Like Icarus, he perished as a result of an accident with a flying machine of his own invention.

BLAEBERRY Typifies ingenuous simplicity.

BLAI In Celtic legend a deer. A fertility goddess, mother of Oisín. Also called Saar or Sabia.

BLAISE (1) Masculine proper name derived from Baal or Bel. Signifies blaze or brand. (2) In Arthurian romances monk who baptised Merlin and transformed him into a Christian saint.

BLAKE Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning to bleach or whiten.

BLANAI Ancient Irish enchantress. No one was able to enter her magic fortress because it turned round and round, suggesting it was a cosmological omphalos (revolving or wind-swept skies) resembling the Caer Sidi of Arthurian legend and the spinning wheel at which Hercules labored.

BLANCHE (BIANCA) Feminine name from the French and Italian, meaning pure, shining, white.

BLANK Name of a mare belonging to Cinderella in one version of her story. It means white and signifies loss of memory.

BLANKETEERS Bodies of unemployed. The allusion is to the 5,000 unemployed men who started to march from Manchester to London in 1817, and were provided with blankets.

BLARNEY STONE A stone in Blarney Castle, near Cork, Ireland, said to give those who kiss it a cajoling tongue.

BLASTIE A dwarf in Scottish lore.

BLATANT BEAST In Spenser's Faerie Queene a monster with a hundred tongues and a sting. Personification of calumny or slander. Spenser appears to have derived the word from blate, meaning to bellow or roar. Blatant now is understood to mean noisy.

BLATHNAT (BLATHINE) Literally, little flower. In Gaelic mythology the beautiful daughter of Midir; wife of Curoi Mac Daire, by whom she is the mother of Lugaid. For love of Cuchulainn she extracted from her husband the secret of his vulnerability and gave the information to Cuchulainn, who killed Curoi. In time Lugaid avenged his father's murder by killing Cuchulainn. This is a time myth: Blathnat, daughter of darkness, is a May fertility goddess, who betrays her storm demon husband to the sun hero. She is the analogue of Blodeuwedd, Clytemnestra, Deianeira, Delilah, Guinevere, etc.

BLAZE See flame for symbolism.

BLAZON Heraldic banner or shield; a coat of arms; hence outward show, pompous display.

BLEFUSCU In Swift's Gulliver's Travels, an island inhabited by pigmies; it supposedly represents France.

BLEMYES (BLEMMYAE) In Greek mythology a warlike tribe which supposedly inhabited Ethiopia. Pliny described them as a race of headless people with eyes and mouth in their breasts, a description sometimes applied to storm demons.

BLID In Norse mythology handmaid of Freyja. Name meaning blithe one.

BLIFIL A hypocritical villain who pretends to be a friend. From the character in Fielding's Tom Jones.

BLIHOS-BLIHERIS Story-teller at the court of King Arthur. See Amangons.

BLINDFOLD Darkness, defeat, error, lost understanding, secrecy. Heedlessness, rashness, as blindfold fury. Typifies both justice and injustice. Goddesses of justice are portrayed with a blindfold to indicate that justice is impartial, not swayed by what they seem to see.

Blind alley. A position or situation offering no hope of improvement.

Blind boy. Cupid, Eros, inasmuch as love supposedly is blind.

Blindman's buff. A game in which a blindfolded player tries to catch and identify others; hence one who tries to solve something without sufficient knowledge.

Blindman's holiday. Hour of dusk, which is too late for work and too early for artificial lighting.

Blindness. Dream significance: betrayal, deceit. In an Italian icon typified by a woman in green in a meadow covered with fading flowers. Her head is inclined toward the flowers, a mole is at her side. In Japan the meeting of a blind person is an unlucky omen for travelers.

Blind woman. In Buddhism typifies ignorance. Unconscious will, representing the dual play of the mind; the active consciousness at work during wakefulness, the passive during sleepfulness; while the subconscious is always at work. See Sipa Khorlo, outer circle.

BLISSFUL ISLE American Indian land of the dead. Land without danger, hunger, pain, sorrow, or want. Parallels Annwn, Avalon. See island.

BLODEUWEDD (BLODENWEDD)

Literally, flower-aspect or flower-maiden. In Cymric mythology maiden created out of flowers by Gwydion and Math as a wife for the sun deity Llew Llaw Gyffe. A May bride, a love goddess. A great beauty without a soul, she wormed out of Llew Llaw the secret of his vulnerability and exposed him at the right moment to her lover Gronw Pebyr, prince of darkness, who hurled a spear at Llew's foot, which transformed him into an eagle. Gwydion, Llew's father, by magic, turned Llew back into his natural shape, turned Blodeuwedd into an owl, the bird that hates the day, and killed Gronw. As that of Cybele, the creation of the spring maid Blodeuwedd is independent of cohabitation. She also parallels Blathnat, Deianeira, Delilah and Ishtar. In owl form, called Twyll Huan, she is a counterpart of Annis, Athena, and Lilith. See mass drowning of women.

BLODUGHOFI In Norse mythology horse of Frey, which could travel through the dark and through flickering flames. Typifies rays of the sun. Compare Pegasus.

BLOEDEL In Nibelungenlied brother of Etzel. For part of the Nibelungian treasure (earth's fertility), promised to him by Kriemhild, widow of Siegfried and wife of Etzel, he agrees to kill Hagen, Siegfried's slayer. Bloedel kills a great number of Hagen's men, but before he kills Hagen he is slain. This myth relates the tragedy of time. Kriemhild, widow of the sun-hero Siegfried, persuades Bloedel, a light hero, to kill Hagen, mist or darkness, for the treasures he had taken from Siegfried. Bloedel, however, is slain before he is able to completely destroy the mist.

BLOOD A covenant, deity offering imploring protection, family descent or connection, purification, race, sacrifice, salvation, wine (liquor of life). Guilt, mortality, murder, war. In primitive societies believed to contain the soul and explains why the liver, thought to be a mass of coagulated blood, became synonymous with life. Animal or human blood was smeared on sacred posts, shrines, trees, etc., as a deity offering. After the abolition of blood sacrifices red paint was substituted. Dream significance: illness, wound. In Babylon drunk for prophetic inspiration. In Christian tradition martyrdom, Christ. Ancient Hebrews believed it was the seat of life sacred to God, and for this reason taboo as food. In India goat blood was drunk by magicians to enable them to prophecy. In Melanesian creation myth after drawing the figures of two men upon the ground, the creator covered the figures with leaves, cut himself with a knife, and let his blood flow down, and in this manner gave life to To-Kabinana and To-Karvuvu. Among Mexican Indians the jewel-water or precious moisture that drops from heaven; life substance offered in sacrifice to bring rain. Human blood, with seeds, gold, silver, pearls, and precious stones, offered to Mexican gods, who in turn were expected to give large crops, riches, and victory. In Norse mythology waters of earth were created from the blood of Ymir. The coloring of runes with the blood of slaughtered victims supposedly increased the power of the runes.

Bad blood. Inferior family background, long-standing enmity.

Blood-bag shooting. Ritualistically the shooting of a deity to subdue him. The ceremony may also have been connected with animal sacrifices.

Blood and iron policy. Relentlessness, usually applied to war. Otto von Bismarck, who popularized the phrase, has been known as the man of blood and iron.

Bloodless. Cold-hearted, free from bloodshed, spiritless.

Blood letting. Atonement, brotherhood, expiation. When drawn from ears and tongue signifies penance for having heard and said evil things. An expression of love for a deity or for another person. In funeral rites a covenant between the mourner and the dead. By allowing some of his blood to flow over a dead body a mourner is vivifying it for life in the afterworld or for rebirth. Substitute for animal or human sacrifice. In Arabia a man entreats the protection of another by drawing his blood and wiping it on the doorpost of the man whose favor he seeks.

Blood money. Compensation paid to the survivors of one who is murdered. Fee paid to a hired murderer.

Blood of beheaded criminals. Anciently in China gathered on a cloth as a charm against evil influences or drunk to provide courage.

Blood of the Grograms. Pretended aristocratic blood, alluding to gogram, a coarse silk taffeta stiffened with gum. Sometimes called taffeta gentility.

Blood of a murderer. In the middle ages the tasting of the blood of a murderer was believed to act as a cure in cases of epilepsy.

Blood of warriors. Drunk by victors that their bravery and skill might be imparted to the drinkers. See cannibalism.

Blood sucking. In primitive societies a form of blood brothers. In Gaelic mythology Cuchulainn was not able to marry Devorgilla because he had drunk her blood while sucking a wound. An extortioner is called a blood sucker.

Blood thirsty. Eager for blood.

Blood and thunder. Cheap sensationalism and violence, such as is seen in melodrama.

Bloody Mary. Daughter of Henry VIII and Catherine of Aragon. So called because of her bloody persecution of Protestants.

Blue blood. See under blue.

Cold blooded. Act deliberately without excitement.

Field of blood. Battlefield.

Royal blood. Denotes those who have descended from kings. Haemophilia, because so many descendants of Queen Victoria carried this germ in their blood.

White blood. In Taoism the elixir of life. See ginseng.

BLOODHOUND A dog or person with an acute sense of smell; one who tracks fugitives or game.

BLOODSTONE March birthstone with the virtue of endowing courage, wisdom, and vitality. Stone of the zodiacal house Aries, its occult powers believed to be intensified if worn by one born under its sign, and those born under its sign supposedly are audacious, brilliant, courageous, generous, obedient, have a capacity for commanding, unaffected simple manners, but suffer sudden and short-lived love affairs. Wearer assured mental and physical health. In medieval times a favorite talisman of agriculturists and cattle breeders. Also called heliotrope. American Indians wore to ward off the evil eye. In Hebrew tradition assigned to the tribe of Ephraim and to twelfth position on the Breastplate. Favorite stone of Roman athletes, who ascribed to it the power to stop bleeding. According to Pliny it has the power to bring success to the wearer who maintains a calm mind when engaged in hard combat, to give the wearer the good will of companions, make the wearer invisible, reveal the plots of an enemy.

BLOOM, LEOPOLD Hero of Ulysses by James Joyce. An advertising solicitor of Jewish origin living in Dublin, he is half-educated, sensual, sentimental, but possessed of a questing, searching intelligence, and a deep-rooted love for a son who died in infancy, whom he believes he has refound in the person of Stephen Dedalus, who rejects him. Like Ulysses he is a stranger among people, i. e. the sun which wanders throughout the course of a day. The rejection of Stephen is that of the young for the old. The infidelity of his wife matches that suffered by other sun heroes, such as Llew Llaw, Samson. Bloom resembles Christ and the Wandering Jew as well as Ulysses.

Molly Bloom. Wife of Leopold, to whom she is unfaithful. She is an elemental, sardonic, sensual counterpart of Penelope, who was surrounded by lovers in the absence of Ulysses.

BLOSSOM In Japan a blossom fully opened is classified as masculine, whereas a bud is classified as a female virgin, and an overblown blossom as a mature woman.

BLUDGEON Weapon of peasants; opposed to sword, the weapon of chivalry.

BLUE All Father; air, heaven, sea, thus abode of gods, eternity, illusion, immensity. Aristocracy, candor, contemplation, constancy, coolness, courage, fairness, freedom, glory, happiness, hope, love, meditation, moisture, philosophy (color of ancient gowns of philosophy), piety, serenity, sublimity, tenderness, tranquility, truth, unrestraint, youth. Contrariwise: coldness, cruelty, despair, destruction, inconstancy (inasmuch as it resembles the changing sea and skies), merciless justice.

The circle has been assigned to blue because the great expanse is without corners. In art the garment of angels for faith and fidelity and the garment of virgin goddesses for modesty. In astrology assigned to Jupiter and Venus. In Freemasonry typifies benevolence and universal friendship and is one of the four symbolic colors. In heraldry called azure and symbolic of chastity, loyalty, and a spotless reputation. Represented by horizontal lines. Merchants have designated blue to signify the birth of a boy. In metals represented by tin. As a mortuary color used in covering the coffins of young persons. Its musical tone correspondence is G natural. In precious stones represented by the beryl, diamond, iolite, lapis lazuli, sapphire, topaz, tourmaline, turquoise. In symbolism a negative color, assigned to the moon. The personality traits of those who lean toward blue are: conservativeness, introversion, money-making abilities, sober-mindedness, opinionated. It represents subconsciousness as opposed to red which represents consciousness. In therapeutics sedatives often are blue in color, alluding to the color's ability to soothe the spirit. Color of Amon, Celtic bards, Hathor, Hebrew high priests, Isis, Kneph, Moses, Odin, Osiris, Pallas Athena, Virgin Mary, Zeus. Early Britons were tattooed in blue as are present day Maoris; both considered it a sacrificial color, and Britons daubed themselves with blue (woad) as a war paint (to go to war was to sacrifice oneself).

The word resolves into bel Hu, beautiful Hu or Bel hue. Arabs place blue beads around the necks of their children and donkeys to ward off the evil eye. Buddhist color of religious devotion sacred to the moon and dispeller of evil thoughts. Chaldean mourning color typifying the joy in the Fields of Peace. In China emblematic of east and of the dragon. With green influenced the gall and liver. Half-mourning. In Christian art God the Father in the Trinity. In church decoration blue and green are used interchangeably for ordinary Sundays, and blue for all weekdays after Trinity Sunday. Symbolic of divine contemplation, expiation, humility, piety. Egyptian gods were painted blue to indicate their heavenly origin, and mummies were shrouded in blue to indicate they had been united with the soul of Truth. The Great Serpent, eternal wisdom, was blue with yellow stripes. By Hebrews color assigned to Eden, paradise of the forever young. Color of the two stones on which the Commandments were written, thus Divine Word. As a mystic power one of the colors of Urim and Thummin. In Japan the wind. Mexican and Navaho Indian color of the south; North Dakota Indian color of the moon, thunder, water, and the west.

Blue beard. Rays of the moon. The Assyrian moon god Sin, honored for his wisdom and worshiped as a friend of man, was portrayed with a blue beard. Occultists erroneously attribute the blue beard to his sinfulness. See Bluebeard below.

Blue blood. Aristocracy, hereditary exclusiveness. The idea originated from the belief that divine blood is blue and, the nearer one's kinship to the divine, the bluer the blood.

Blue cap. Sea.

Blue devils. Delirium tremens, low spirits.

Blue eyes and light hair. The bringer of light and sight, of knowledge and life. Attributes of daylight sky deities and of the good fairy or heroine in folk tales.

Blue flame of a candle. In Old English tradition sign that a devil or ghost is in the room and responsible either for illness or fits of despondency, hence having the blues.

Blue flower. Spiritual happiness.

Blue gentian. Flower governing Scorpio.

Blue lotus. Celestial love. Egyptian symbol of the ocean in which the sun grows, the vessel of the sun's primeval and daily bath.

Blue Monday. The Monday before Lent, spent in dissipation. The day back to work after a weekend devoted to pleasure.

Blue moon. Rarity, something exceptional.

Blue Mountains. In Navaho Indian tradition the southern celestial mountains which create dawn. Compare Black Mountains.

Blue pencil. Abridge, delete.

Blue ribbon. Badge of honor and worth. First prize, highest award. Badge indicating a pledge of abstinence from alcohol. Order of the Garter of British knighthood.

Blue sedan chairs. In China high officials used blue sedan chairs; lower officials used green.

Blue stocking. Aristocrat, snob. Originally the badge of a literary society, later used humorously to indicate a woman of too bookish taste.

Blue streak. Something moving exceedingly fast.

Blues. Despondency, melancholy. A type of jazz song, usually for a lost sweetheart.

Blue woman. A woman whose presence chills or dismays men.

Dark blue. Discouragement. Emblem of husbandmen. In Tibetan Buddhism ferocious deity aspect, destroyer of enemies of the faith.

Out of the blue. Of unknown source, unforeseen.

BLUEBEARD A murderous polygamist, alluding to the famous ogre in Charles Perrault's Contes du Temps. The Chevalier Raoul left the keys of his castle with his young wife Fatima, forbidding her to open the door of a certain room. Curiosity led her to disobey, and she found the remains of six of Bluebeard's former wives. Terrified, she dropped the key, which became blood-stained. When she rubbed one side, blood appeared on the other. Upon his return Bluebeard commanded her to prepare for death. Fatima's sister Anne kept watch and, upon seeing a cloud of dust, knew her brothers were arriving in time to save Fatima's life. Bluebeard was slain by the brothers. A perversion of the blue-bearded god Sin. Bluebeard represents the scorching death-dealing sun, his wife, the moon, is saved by darkness (dust). The wives slain represent dawns killed by the sun.

Bluebeard's key. Extravagance overcome will appear in the form of meanness, or over fond friends may become enemies.

BLUEBELL September 30 birthday flower symbolizing constancy, solitude, sorrowful regret.

BLUEBIRD Happiness, spiritual truth. Chinook Indian trickster totem bird. Brother of Ioi.

BLUEBONNET Emblem of the state of Texas.

BLUEBOTTLE Symbol of delicacy.

BLUEGRASS STATE Nickname for the state of Kentucky.

BLUET Blossom symbolizing timidity.

BO (BODHI) Buddhist tree of enlightenment under which Sakya-muni meditated and attained spiritual awakening. Usually pictured as a fig tree; symbolized by a canopy. A branch of the original tree supposedly was planted by King Tissi in the 3rd Century B. C. in Ceylon and is said to still flourish as the oldest tree in the world. Hosts of pilgrims visit it. Bo equates with bay and with byw, and is the probable source of Bous.

BOA A serpent noted for its size and power to crush to death. A snake-shaped scarf of feathers, worn by women. Portuguese word for good. Resolves into bo-a, i. e. Father A. See serpent.

BOADICEA Feminine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning queenly, regal.

BOAHJE-NASTE Among Finno-Ugrics the North Star or nail of the sky around which the heavens move. When Arcturus, the archer of the heavens, shoots it down, the heavens will fall and bring about the end of the world. Compare Veralden Tshuold, Veraldan Nagli.

BOANERGES Masculine name from the Aramaic, meaning son of thunder, and applied by Jesus to his disciples James and John. Applied to a loud-voiced, passionate orator or preacher.

BOANN Irish river nymph. Wife of Nechtan (or Ecmarr). After adultery with Dagda, an oak-god, she endeavored to prove her chastity by walking around Nechtan's well (or Connla's well). Three waves rose and attacked her and when she fled she was drowned in the pursuing waters, which became the river Boyne. Aengus, the son born as a result of her union with Dagda was given to Midir, underworld-king, who raised him.

BOAR Brutality, hunting, impetuosity, rudeness, sensuality, vulgarity. A phallic symbol. A fire symbol, on account of its bristly and prickly hide, which typifies flame flashes or rays of the sun. In spring, at sowing, when it renders service by clearing the soil of weeds, symbolizes growth; at harvest, when it routs or destroys the corn, a symbol of decay. Eaten to give man strength and courage. Typifies October, the boar-hunting season and beginning of autumn, which ushers in death. Slayer of Adonis, Ancaeus, Diarmuid, and Osiris. As ravisher of crops and slayer of the sun typifies winter. Disguise of Apollo, Finn MacCool, and Set; i. e. sun's scorching aspect. Sacred to Ares, Artemis, Diana, Mercury, Neptune, Poseidon. Dream significance: violent enemies. In heraldry, signifies a fierce combatant who will fight to the bitter end. In Assyrian and Babylonian mythology a divine messenger called Nin-shakh or Papsukal. Sacred to Nebo. Its flesh was taboo on certain days; the probable source of the taboo among the Jews. In Brythonic mythology Twrch Trwyth and in Celtic mythology Gulban's boar typify winter, the death season. In China called shih. It carries the sun through Pisces, the twelfth mansion of the zodiac, and through the hours 9:00 to 11:00 P.M. each day, and is guardian of the direction north-northwest. In churches in Normandy symbolizes sin. In Hinduism cosmogonic power. In the form of a black boar with a hundred arms Prajapati raised the earth. An incarnation of Brahma, Marut, Rudra, Vishnu, and Vritra. In Norse mythology the steed of Frey, god of plenty, was a boar called Gullinbursti. At Frey's festival, held at the winter solstice, a boar was sacrificed to him for the purpose of asking him to be favorable to the New Year. The head, an apple in its mouth, was carried into the banquet hall, decked with bays and rosemary on a gold or silver dish, to the sound of trumpets and the songs of the minstrels. The custom survives in the serving of boar at Christmas feasts and in Yuletide boar-shaped cakes. The boar was a form of Ottarr as lover of Freya; heroes in Valhalla feasted on boar's meat. Zend for boar is hu, and Hu is the name of a sun-deity.

Black Boar. Decay, night, winter. A form of Set.

Boar Bristles. Light rays. A Yuletide Norse custom was to lead a boar into the hall of the king, where men laid their hands upon its bristles and made their vows; then the boar was sacrificed for atonement.

Boar's head. Hospitality and, as such, used as a tavern sign. In middle-ages fee to a king or lord. Christmas festivities; Norse Yuletide holidays.

Boar's tusk. Placed in ancient British graves as a symbol of immortality; a prehistoric sign of the cross.

White boar. In Japanese mythology sacrificed to Mi-Tosh-no-kami for a good harvest.

Wild boar. In China symbol of wealth of the forest. Japanese talisman against snakes. The mere mention of the word, especially that of Inoshishi (lady boar) is a charm that drives a snake away.

BOASTING In an Italian icon typified by a woman covered with peacock feathers, her right hand in the air, a trumpet in her left hand.

BOAT Adventure, difficulty, misfortune, venture. Cradle, haven, home, nest. Womb of the mother-goddess. Sun or moon sailing through the skies. Used by those who escaped the flood. Transporter of souls across the river of death, hence eternity (alluding to a deity), immortality (alluding to a human). Primitive peoples send the dead adrift in a boat. Vessel of Charon, Styx, and the saints Athanasius, Julian, Maccald, Marcella, Torpe. Dream significance: (entering harbor) fruitful labor; (sailing) fortunate journey; (stationary) good news, joy; (upset) serious worries. Word originally meant stem of a tree, akin to bat. A bateau is akin to the Latin beatus, meaning happy. In China symbolizes heredity; in Japan transitoriness.

Boatman. Carrier of spirits destined for the other world.

BOAZ (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning manly or strong. (2) In Old Testament a descendant of Judah and a man of integrity. A wealthy Bethlehemite, when Ruth, a poor gleaner, as a kinswoman, placed a claim upon him under Levitical law, he admitted the claim and became her second husband. By her he became the ancestor of the regular succession of Jewish kings. (3) The left-hand pillar of Solomon's Temple, dedicated to growth and the waxing sun. It was one of two pillars, the other being called Jachin. In some accounts Boaz is identified as the right hand pillar. See Jachin and Boaz.

BOBETTE Feminine equivalent of Bob, diminutive of masculine Robert.

BOCHE An insulting name for a German which came into use in World War I. A contemptuous nickname given by French printers to Germans in the same trade in the 1860's. A worthless person, a blockhead.

BOCHICA In the myths of Muyscas (Bogata Indians). Son of the sun. A dawn-god, hence enlightener. He came from the East and wandered across Columbia instructing the people in essential arts and morals. He cut a chasm in the mountains with his golden scepter and thus opened a passage for waters to flow into the valley below. He regulated the calendar, established festivals, and vanished. He is portrayed as a white bearded man. Also called Chimizapagua and Zuhe. Sometimes he was referred to as Sua, the sun, a supreme male deity whose consort was Cuchaviva.

BOCHIM Literally, weepings. In Old Testament, a place near Gilgal, where the angel of the Lord reproved the Israelites for their remissness.

BODB (BODB DEARG, BODB DERG, BOV) In Irish mythology son or brother of Dagda. After Dagda retired as commander of the Tautha De Danann, Bodb became warrior-king of the gods. He punished his daughter Aoife for turning her stepchildren into swans by transforming her into a wind demon. As fairy-king of Munster he was corn or oak god, and his famous underground palace was at Lough Dearg; Dearg meaning red. His devoted swineherd Friuch, who constantly fought the swineherd of Bodb's enemy Ochall Ochne, was finally transformed into the Brown Bull, which see.

BODHIDHARMA In Chinese Buddhism blue-eyed Brahmin. Reputed Discoverer of tea plant.

BODHISATTVA (BODHISAT, BODISAT, BODISATVA) A future or potential Buddha; one whose essence is perfect knowledge and who will in a future birth, not necessarily the next, attain to Buddhahood. One self-created and self-existent, supported by a lotus to typify divine birth. Spiritual son of the Dhyani-Buddha. One who has supreme qualities which give him supreme power, and whose five virtues are: Dana, giving or donating; Ksanti, forbearance, tolerance; Sila, proper conduct; Upaya, skillful means; Virya, no revulsion toward any. The task assigned to a Bodhisattva is the saving of people after the death of a Buddha until another Buddha appears. The symbol of the Bodhisattva state is an elephant fording a river. Princely garments and ornaments are worn; the manifestations usually are mild. Non-tantric forms have one head and two arms; Tantric forms have one head and more than two arms; also shown in Yab-Yum (father-mother embrace). In China called Pu-sa.

Bodhisattva garments and ornaments. Anklets, armlets, bracelets, earrings, five-leaved crown, garland to navel, garland to thigh, girdle, necklace, sash, scarf for upper body, shawl for lower limbs, wristlets. These are also garments and ornaments of Buddhist princely nature.

Bodhisattva trinity. Avalokitesvara, Manjusri, Vajrapani. See Dhyani-bodhisattvas.

BODILIS Breton fountain of virginity.

BODN AND SON Literally, offering and expiation. The two cups which contained Odin's poetic mead, hence poetry. Compare Odrerer.

BODY In poetry and theology symbolizes a garden over which the human will is the gardener. In Vedantic doctrine, called kaya, and is the sheath of food, the realm of matter.

Body marks. Scratches, tooth-bites, etc. on a human body, typify brutality, fighting, illicit love.

Body passing through a serpent. Universally typifies the purifying transit of the soul through wisdom, the progress of the soul from the bondage of ignorance to the liberty of knowledge, passage from darkness to light, rebirth, resurrection. Story of Jonah a garbled account of this idea. Ra passed through a serpent nightly.

BOEOTIAN A dull, rude, uneducated person. A blockhead. An allusion to the shepherds of ancient Boeotia as seen by the Athenians.

Boeotian ears. Ears unable to appreciate music, poetry, or rhetoric.

BOER A peasant, a rustic, alluding to the South Africans of Dutch extraction. Cognate with boar, boor.

BOGART Masculine name from the Danish, meaning a bowman, archer.

BOGEY (BOGEYMAN, BOGGART, BOGIE, BOGY) Evil spirit, hobgoblin. In golf originally a term which meant standard score or par for each hole, assumed to be the score of an imaginary skillful player named Colonel Bogey, against whom the players competed instead of against each other. In recent years the term has changed to mean one over par on each hole.

BOG TROTTER A rural Irishman.

BOHEMIAN A gypsy; also a person with artistic or intellectual tendencies free from the conventions of social life.

Bohemian diamond. Carries the sentiment: forever yours.

Bohemian garnet. Carries the sentiment: energy in adversity.

Bohemian topaz. Carries the sentiment: mysterious memories.

BOILED SHIRT United States expression for a white dress-shirt; the shirt of a snob.

BOIUCA (BIMINI) Caribbean Indians Island of the Blest, believed to contain the Fountain of Youth. Compares Avalon.

BOJABI African tree of life.

BOL BENDO Character who represents Saint George in English version of the Mummung Play. He fights with Golishan.

BOLLUX Expression meaning disarrange, mix up. Derived from Pollux.

BOLOGNA An old Italian city. Dante, in the Inferno, identifies it as a city notorious for panders.

BOLTHORN Norse primeval giant, father of Bestla, grandfather of Odin.

BOLVERKIN (BOLVERK, BOLVERKR) In Norse mythology name given to Odin by the giants in Muspelheim, Surtur's realm, when Odin stole the song mead from Suttung, Surtur's son, and returned it to the moon. The name Bolverkin means he who is capable of working terrible things. Gunlad aided Bolverkin as Ariadne aided Theseus and Medea aided Jason.

BON (1) One of the ritualistic religions of Tibet; coexistent with Llamaism, a mixture of Buddhism and Shamanism. (2) A festival observed by the Buddhists of Japan.

BONA DEA Literally, the good goddess. Roman virgin who, out of modesty, never left her bower. She guarded the chastity of women, provided fertility and fruitfulness, and was a deity of prophecy, revealing her oracles only to women. Wife-sister-daughter of Faunus, and identified as Fauna, Maia, or Ops. Her festival was celebrated on May 1st. Usually represented with a coronal of grapevine leaves, a black cock, and a serpent under foot. Resembles Cybele.

BONE Contention, death. Act without flattery or hesitation, hence make no bones about a situation. Gambling, alluding to dice. Among American Indians bones of the dead were powerful fetishes; in Iroquois tradition, the soul is within the bones. Human bones are ferocious manifestations of Buddhist deities and are a Buddhist tantric symbol used for purposes of divination.

Bone of an old cow or old horse. In Japanese legend the goblin fox supposedly transforms an old cow or old horse bone into a pretty woman to deceive men, hence a wanton witch.

BONFIRE Fertility, purification, resurrection, warning. Used for purposes of divination and fortune telling. In fertility rites a straw figure placed on fire represents the fertility god or an offering to the god, probably associated with the girdle of straw belief. See girdle of straw. As a resurrection rite, the figure represents the old king (sun) losing his old age (life) and in exchange receiving youth (rebirth). To pass through fire is to be purified or resurrected or to revive the life of the dying world. Animals are passed between two fires in a mock offering. In many parts of the world children and adults pass through fire in initiation and other ceremonies, hence baptism by fire. In Europe, bonfires were burned on Mayday Eve (Beltane festival), Midsummer's Eve (festival of Saint John or Saint Vitus), and on All Hallow E'en (harvest or witches' festival). The burning of the yule log is the winter equivalent of a bonfire. Bonfires are also burned as a means of indicating a position in a wilderness. In Japan a bonfire is a welcome to divine spirit or kami.

BONGABONG Indonesian supreme god.

BONIFACE (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning good face. (2) Landlord or inn keeper in Farqhar's Beaux Stratagem. He is a jolly publican in league with highwaymen. A common term for a publican or tavern keeper.

BONNY (BONNIE) Feminine name, special use of adjective, meaning comely.

BON-ODORI Japanese dances of the Festival of the Dead.

BONTURO DATI Notorious grafter; boss of Lucca. Mentioned in Dante's Inferno.

BOOK Arts, consultation, enquiry, fate, gospel, law, learning, power, records, wisdom. Also escape from actuality, melancholy (from the belief, melancholy men are addicted to study). A Buddhist ritual object; in Sanscrit called pustaka. Emblem of Manjusri. A non-tantric symbol typifying transcendental wisdom. Two books constitute one of the eight precious things, symbolizing learning and wisdom. In China called shu. One of the eight ordinary symbols typifying scholarship and representing one of the four elegant accomplishments. Indicates a life of leisure enjoyed in peace and tranquility. A talisman which wards off evil spirits. In Christian tradition divine knowledge and gospel. Emblem of saints Ambrose, Boniface, Confessor, Creadda, Edgar, Edward, Matthew, Modwenna, Othilia, Paul, Philip Neri. In catacombs, symbol of the apostles to denote their fuller knowledge. Typifies the New Testament, symbolic of divine knowledge, and the Old Testament, symbolic of destiny, dignity, and law. Emblem of Clio, Greek muse of history.

Book of Books. The Bible, also called the Good Book.

Book of the Dead. Ancient Egyptian collection of magic incantations which were believed to serve as a guide to the life hereafter. Reproduced and worn as a talisman. from him.

Book of Thoth. The tarot deck, which see. Words of wisdom supposedly written by Thoth or Thoth Hermes, Trismegistus, the three times great, who enclosed the book in a box of gold, which he placed in a box of silver, which then went into a box of ivory and ebony that was placed in a box of bronze, which went into one of iron, that was tossed into the Nile. The finder of the box became the possessor of vast knowledge and power, able to charm heaven and earth, but in the end it brought misfortune to the possessor. Also called Book of the Writer.

Open Book. Intellectual attainment.

BOORALA Australian good spirit who created all, and to whom the spirits of good men go after death.

BOOTES (BOUTES) Literally, ploughman. (1) In Greek mythology son of Pandion, brother of Erechtheus, secular founder of a priestly line at Athens. He supposedly invented the plough, to which he yoked two oxen, and at death he was lifted into the heavens as the constellation. In other versions, Arcas or Icarus became the constellation Bootes which also is known as the Herdsman.

BOOTY Anciently spoils taken in war shared equally by those who fought and those who guarded the camp after the deity's portion was first deducted from the whole. Later the king or leader appropriated the deity's part to himself.

BOR (BORR) Primeval Norse deity. Son of Bure. By Bestla father of the Triad Odin, Vill, and Ve. Priests claimed descent

BORAGE Blossom symbolizing bluntness, talent. Its sentiment is roughness of manner.

BORAK See Al Borak.

BORDER In Freemasonry an indented or tessellated border represents the border design in Solomon's Temple, and symbolizes the blessings and comforts which surround people and which await people in Paradise. In heraldry called bordure; used to signify a difference between relatives bearing the same arms.

BOREAS Greek god of the north wind. Son of Astraeus, starry-night, and Eos, morning; brother of Eurus, east wind, Notus, south wind, and Zephyrus, west wind. He lived in a cave on Mount Haemus in Thrace. Blustering, cold, cruel, lustful, thievish and uncouth, he fell in love with Orithyia, whom he beheld on the banks of a river. When he tried to be gentle with her, he had difficulty breathing, whereupon he mustered his full strength and carried her off. Their sons were Calais and Zetes, winged warriors who accompanied the Argonauts. Jealous of Pan, the soft breeze of summer and lover of Pitys, gentle pine nymph, Boreas hurled her from a rock and transformed her into a pine tree. In the form of a horse he begat the Boreadae. Usually portrayed as heavy-browed and shaggy-haired with wings on shoulders and feet. Equivalent of the Roman Aquilo; his name is akin to Ares.

Boreadae. Offspring of Boreas by the mares of Erichthonius. Twelve foals (winds) that raced over the sea without sinking and over the land without leaving a footprint. Resemble the Maruts.

BORGHILD In Volsung Saga wife of Signmund by whom she is the mother of Hamund and Helgi. She is later cast out by Sigmund for poisoning his son Sinfjotle. The murder of Sinfjotle is a sun myth, in which Borghild, evening mist or perhaps the moon, kills a light of the sun.

BORGIA, CESARE A 15th century Italian cardinal and military leader. Son of Pope Alexander VI (Rodrigo Borgia). Notorious for his crimes and his ruthlessness, he is believed to be the model of the leader depicted by Machiavelli in The Prince (II Principe).

Borgia, Lucrezia. Daughter of Pope Alexander VI and, like her brother, notorious for her crimes. The dupe of her father and brother, she married three times to serve them politically. Her first marriage was annulled; her second husband was murdered, probably by her brother Cesare. She had a son, Gennaro, out of marriage. He was brought up by a fisherman, and when he became an adult, he declaimed freely against the vices of Lucrezia di Borgia. On one occasion he mutilated her escutcheon, knocking off the B, converting Borgio to Orgio. She insisted that the perpetrator of this insult suffer death by poison, but when she discovered Gennaro was her son, she had him liberated. However, he was poisoned at a banquet given by the Princess Negroni soon after his release from prison.

BORIS Masculine name from the Russian, meaning fighter.

BORS In Byrthonic mythology: (1) A king of Gaul, uncle of Sir Lancelot. He supported King Arthur on his accession to the throne of Britain. (2) A knight of the Round Table, a nephew of Sir Lancelot, and one of the few permitted to see the vision of the Grail. Also called Sir Bohort. (3) Another name for Emrys or Myrddin, a local British sun-god.

BORTO Buriat household image of Khorton, a shaman, said to be the forefather of the Khangin clan.

BOSATSU In Japanese Buddhism a future or potential Buddha, a Bodhisattva.

BOSHINTOI Siberian god of blacksmiths living in the sky. He taught men how to prepare iron and he and his nine sons made a horse post of the North Star. Thus an axis deity.

BOSWELL Masculine name from the Latin and Anglo-Saxon, meaning cow's well.

BOTOCUDO Overly aggressive, self-destructive tribe of Brazilian highlands. Also called Kaingang.

BOTTLE Refreshment, salvation. Intemperance. Various industries use bottles as trademarks, a golden bottle is used as a banker's or goldsmith's sign; one containing colored liquids originally was a pharmaceutical sign, later adopted by confectioners and grocers; beer, whiskey, and wine bottles are used as tavern signs. Pilgrims usually carry a gourd-shaped bottle, which formerly was called water-bug or bug, and the word bottle is cognate with beetle. Dream significance: (broken) great quarrel; (empty) disappointment, illness; (full) joy, pleasure.

Bottle gourd. In Japanese tradition glory of the evening, symbolizing magic and mystery. Supposedly filled with the secret elixir of immortality and purity.

See gourd.

Bottle-shaped vase. In China the female form.

Bottlestone. Gem carrying the sentiment suspicion.

BOTTOM In Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream an ignorant but conceited weaver. He fancies he can do anything better than anyone else and Puck places an ass's head on his neck. Titania, queen of the fairies, under a spell, caresses him as an Adonis.

BOUGH For symbolism see branch.

BOUNTY In an Italian icon represented by a woman in a sky-colored gown studded with stars of gold. She presses her breasts, from which flows milk, which several animals drink. At her side is an altar in which a fire is burning.

BOUQUET OF FLOWERS Expression of admiration or love; tribute. Dream significance: disappointment.

BOUS (BOE) In Beowulf son of Odin and Rinda. Avenger of the death of his half-brother Balder, but wounded to death by his antagonist Hother (Hoder). Personification of spring. Identical with Vali.

BOW (GESTURE) Humility, Obedience, submission, yielding.

BOW (WEAPON) Conquest, hunting, war, worldly power. The female principle. When carried by deities of light, a dispeller of darkness and evil; as a divine weapon, the rainbow, which clears away storms. Frequently the bow is typified by the horns of a buffalo, bull, or ox to signify fertility, strength, vitality. In Buddhism, called capa; a dispeller of demons. Christian emblem of Saint George.

Bow and Arrow. Acuteness and inquisitiveness. Fire and lightning. The male and female principles, love, and as such the weapon of Cupid and Eros. Used for purposes of divination, and as such an attribute of Apollo. As an emblem of hunters, an attribute of the Archer of the Zodiac, and of the goddesses Artemis and Diana. In Buddhism carried by the deities to attack human passions.

Broken bow. Defeat.

Draw a bow. In Chinese mythology, the five stars in the second coil of Hydra in southern quadrant, summer season. Unlucky period for enterprise. Called chang.

BOWA Tibetan demons. Fearful looking creatures which appear in a dance around the spirits of the dead.

BOWELS In astronomy anatomical part governed by Virgo. In ancient Hebrew tradition seat of compassion, mercy, and tenderness.

BOWIE KNIFE Emblem of the state of Arkansas.

BOWL Begging, charity, fruitfulness, plenty. Also sacrifice. Universally an emblem of the earth or world mother. Compare cauldron, water pot. Probably derived from the fish basin, emblem of old Assyrian fish god. To American Indians a wooden bowl symbolized heaven. In Buddhism called patra, a begging bowl; emblem of Sakyamuni and an altar ritual object. In Egyptian hieroglyphics a water bowl stands for the female principle.

Bowl of water. Among Northeastern Europeans and Northwestern Asians a bowl of water is placed on the windowsill of a death chamber so that the soul of the dead person will be able to cleanse itself.

BOX Death, rebirth, secrets, stoicism, treasure. Carries the same symbolism as ark and boat. In China typifies concord and harmony. In Christian tradition attribute of Mary Magdelene and Saint Gasper, symbolizing anointing. Formerly in Britain, a box or vessel (wassail) containing two dolls, representing the Virgin and Child, and decorated with apples, evergreens, flowers, and ribbons, was carried about from house to house at Christmas time, accompanied by the singing of carols. It resembled the chest or ark in which sacred sun or fertility children have been saved. In Greek mythology an attribute of Pandora, symbolizing curiosity, woe.

BOXING In ancient Greece a feature of mystic worship.

BOX TREE September 17 birthday plant with the sentiment tattling. Its tell-tale leaves, when crushed in the hand, will, with its crackling sound, reveal the truth to a lover. Symbol of grace, prosperity, and stoicism. In ancient Greece a funeral and shrine tree. In ancient Rome sacred to Mercury.

BOY In China typifies the rishis, Taoist sages who discovered the secret of perpetual youth. In India the Kumaras, mind-born sons of Brahma, intelligence and knowledge remaining immortal, forever fresh and young. In Roman mythology typifies Cupid.

Boy judge. A folk tale motif; a hero who renders wise decisions made by the boy while acting as judge in a children's game based on an actual problem the king faces. Usually related to a fertility or time myth as in the Chandragupta story.

Boy's day. Japanese spring festival celebrated May 5th. Also called Boy's Doll Day. Warrior dolls are displayed as well as toy spears, swords, and other weapons, and myrtle branches. These are charms against poisonous bites and evil spirits for the year.

BOYD Masculine name from a family name from the Celtic, meaning light.

BOYG An invisible, mysterious, and powerful animistic force which appears in Norwegian folklore. Found in Ibsen's Peer Gynt.

BOYNNÉ In Celtic mythology river formed by the river-nymph Boann. A magic hazel tree dropped nuts of knowledge into the water for a salmon. Finn MacCoul fished in the waters, caught, and ate the salmon of knowledge. See Connla's Well.

BOZALOSHTSH Slav messenger of death. She is a little woman with long hair who wails like a child under the window of a house in which someone is about to die. A wind spirit.

BRACAN In Celtic mythology warrior of the Tuatha DeDanann. Grandfather of Finn MacCoul.

BRACELET A bracelet carries the same symbolism as a circle or ring, which see. A Buddhist Bodhisattva ornament. Among ancient Semites worn as a badge of royalty. Women of Syria and Arabia wore them on their legs, sometimes with small bells attached, to serve as a warning that they were approaching.

BRACIACA Gaelic goddess of braccat or cuirm (ale).

BRAGGADOCHIO A braggart, swaggerer, a vain boaster; one who is pretentious and who speaks of his valor but is a coward at heart, alluding to the character in Spenser's Faerie Queene. A name derived from Bragi, which in turn sprang from the root raj.

BRAGI (BRAGE) In Norse mythology son of Odin and Frigga, husband of Iduna. One of the original Aesir. Brilliant, gleaming lord of the sky and day. God of music and poetry, patron of bards. With Hermod welcomer to Valhalla of all heroes who fell in battle. Portrayed as an old man with a long white beard carrying a harp. Name from the Sanscrit root raj, denoting brilliance or light. It became the source of Bragr-Karla, denoting an eloquent man, and degenerated into braggart and braggadochio.

Bragi's apples. Magic apples which instantly cured ill health, ill temper, loss of strength, weariness. The supply was inexhaustible; immediately one was eaten another replaced it.

Bragi's cup. The cup by which each new king made his pledges; once the pledges were made, the king drained the cup.

Bragi's story. A long but interesting tale.

BRAHM In Hinduism the absolute divine primordial essence, supreme soul of the universe, self-existent and eternal, from which all things emanate and to which all return. The active force in creation. Abstract and impersonal conception of the vital fire (sun), the origin of all fire of which man is a spark; cloud of unknowing, invisible oversoul, mighty breath, all manifested in Brahma. Name resolving into bur-aum, i.e. fiery sun or solar fire; identical with Brahma and Abram; source of Abraham, Barker, Barr, Baruch, Bram, Brougham.

BRAHMA (1) In Buddhism the Sitabrahma or White Brahma, a Dharmapala. In Tibet called Ts'ana-pa. Emblems: dragon, horse. (2) In Hinduism, Supreme Deity. Atman, the world-soul; breath of life. Bliss, intelligence. His attributes, creation, preservation, and destruction, are represented in later Hinduism by three-fold personification under the names Brahma (creation), Vishnu (preservation), and Siva (destruction). First member of the Trimurti or Hindu trinity. Creator of the world, which endures for 2,160,000,000 years and then is destroyed by fire, to be rescued by Brahma after a period of like duration. These periods each constitute a day and a night of Brahma. After a hundred such days, he, like all things else, is absorbed into the Absolute. Of future or other universes there will be or are other Brahmas. The Buddhas, on the contrary, come into being only at irregular intervals, when a cause for their presence exists, and they depart when they have fulfilled the purpose for which they came. As deity of the later Brahmanas, assuming the creator role of the Vedic Hiranyagarbha and Prajapati, he sprang from the Golden Egg, the great mundane egg laid by the Supreme First Cause in which Brahma produced himself. In the Ramayana he rose self-existent and, becoming a boar, created the universe and raised the earth. According to the Mahabharata he sprang from the navel of Vishnu or from the lotus growing from Vishnu's navel. He had four faces, which are said to have come into existence from his desire to behold his daughter Saravati, who sought in vain to escape his amorous gaze. He controlled a quarter of the universe with each face. Compare Janus. He also had four arms. Thus a sky deity controlling the four winds. The ancestor of all beings, his intercourse with Saravati was incestuous. He was the father of Daksha, the capable, and of the four Kumaras, the mind-born sons who remained forever boys. Compare birth of Athena. He was the inventor of Hindu letters, having taken the patterns mainly from seams in the human skull, and his consort, the goddess of speech, is called Brahmi. His chariot, swift as thought, was drawn by a goose or swan. He had a fish form, and frequently was portrayed as floating on waters supported by a lotus leaf. His assembly hall stood on Mount Meru and surpassed in splendor the sun, moon, and fire. His altar was called Samantapancaka, and from his sacrifice the sword Asi (sun's ray) was born. His emblem is a silver rose. In Tibet called Tshans-pa.

Brahman (Brahmin). The Hindu priestly caste, which lived on a vegetable diet; hence a vegetarian, also a person of great culture and intellect, satirically, one intellectually aloof, a snob. One of India's four original castes, the others being Kshatriya, Sudra, and Vaishya. Compares with druid and magi.

Brahmanda. The mundane egg, division of the infinite space and time. Egg of Brahma.

BRAIN Universally believed to be the seat of the animate spirit. In Norse mythology clouds were made from the brain of Ymir.

BRAITES A title of Dionysus derived from a cereal intoxicant. See Bromius.

BRAMBLE July 19 birthday flower. Symbol of death, envy, grief, lowliness, pain, remorse, weariness, wickedness. Riches which destroy the soul, that which holds the rose, beauty of soul, from answering the call of the deity. Emblem of Christ and the Virgin Mary. Hebrew symbol of divine love, the Voice of God. The burning bush in which the angel of the Lord appeared to Moses was a bramble bush.

BRAN (1) In Irish mythology one of Finn MacCoul's two wonderful dogs. The other dog was Sgeolan. Both were born to Tuiren, wife of Iollan, a Fianna chief. (2) In Norse mythology favorite dog of Frithiof. (3) In Welsh mythology son of Llyr, sea deity, and Iweridd (Ireland). A fertility god and lord of the dead, his abode was located under the sea, but it was not a gloomy place; it was a paradise in which was located his caldron of regeneration, which contained an endless supply of fruitfulness. Also a god of war, he delighted in battle and carnage, i.e. each winter he laid waste the earth. He was a patron of bards, minstrels and musicians, and by them called Bendigeid Vran, blessed Bran. At the feast celebrating the betrothal of his sister Branwen to Matholwych, Irish king, Bran's half-brother, the storm god Ebnissyen, mutilated the steeds of Matholwych. Matholwych, incensed, left (the sun left when storm became active) and returned only after Bran gave him gifts, including a caldron which restored life to the dead. Matholwych took his bride to Ireland. Branwen sent a starling to Bran with a letter relating that Matholwych caused her to receive a blow each day. Bran waded the strait between Great Britain and Ireland to rescue his sister. At his approach the swineherds (oracular priests) of Matholwych warned the king that Bran was coming. The Irish king built a house for his brother-in-law on alder piles, and in it hung bags in which warriors (winds) were concealed. Ebnissyen felt the bags and crushed the men in them, but Bran, a giant was unable to fit in the house. At a feast the sovereignty of Ireland was conferred on Branwen's son Gwern. The mischievous Ebnissyen again stirred up trouble by throwing the child in the fire. This led to a fierce struggle in which warriors of Ireland were renewed in Matholwych's caldron. Ebnissyen seeing this and repenting of what he had done destroyed the caldron, losing his life in doing so. Only seven of Bran's followers escaped, and Branwen went with them. In the battle, Bran was wounded in his vulnerable heel by a poisoned dart. Before he died he instructed his men to cut off his head, called Uther Ben (Wonderful Head) and Urdawl Ben (Venerable Head), and bury it in the White Hills of London, facing France, that it might forever protect the country from invasion. The head was kept uninterred for almost a century, during which time it discoursed wisdom; then it was buried as Bran had bidden. King Arthur, who did not wish to owe the defense of Britain to the head had it disinterred, whereupon ensued the disastrous invasions by the Saxons.

Bran means crow or raven, also alder. As a crow deity he was a god of death; and an alder deity he was a god of fertility or grain. The meaning alder explains why he could not fit into the house Matholwych had built on alder pilings; i.e. a house cannot contain its pilings. As Gwern also means alder, his nephew, tossed into the fire by Ebnissyen, is a namesake or form of Bran. Gwern may have been offered as a surrogate for Bran or for Matholwych. See child-killing, surrogate. After Bran's death his lands were usurped by Caswallawn, son of Beli, and as a result his brother Manawydden was left landless. See Manawydden. Bran became the mysterious helper of Arawn in his battle against Amaethon. Gwydion, brother of Amaethon was able to turn the course of the battle in Amaethon's favor when he discovered Bran's name. A mythic instance of the power of a hidden name. See Godeu, Name. Although Bran was a god of the underworld, some of the legends about him have been borrowed from sun myths. His killing amounts to a crucifixion; he is the prototype of the maimed-king; his vulnerability parallels that of Achilles, Chiron, Diarmuid, Harpocrates, Math, Mopsus, Talus, etc. The prophesying of his dead head parallels that of Orpheus; its burial parallels that of the head of Adam and of Eurytheus. He is the Brythonic prototype of the Celtic Cernunnos. The wading by Bran of the strait between Great Britain and Ireland compares with Orion wading the Aegean. His cult may have been imported from the Aegean, and remarkable resemblances exist between Bran and Asclepius. Asclepius restored the dead to life and was destroyed by Zeus in a fit of jealousy; Bran likewise was destroyed by his jealous enemy, Matholwych, to whom he had given a caldron in which dead warriors were resurrected. Asclepius laid with fifty amorous women in one night; Bran had a similar jaunt on a visit to Tir na m Ban. He was transfigured into a British king, confused with Brennius, and transformed into conqueror of Gaul and Rome. In Morte D'Arthur, he survives as King Brandegore or Brandegoris who opposed Arthur. He also appears as Sir Brandel or Brandiles, a valiant knight of the Round Table. He figures as a saint called Bran the Blessed, and with his son Caradawc (historic Caractacus) he was held as hostage at Rome for seven years. Finally he brought Christianity to the Cymry. As Uther Pendragon (Uther Ben or Bran) he is King Arthur's father, and as King Ban of Benwyck (Square Enclosure) he is a foreign monarch and ally of Arthur; as Ogyrvran he is Guinevere's father, and as Uriens of Gower (underworld) he is father of Mabon, a sun-god. He also appears as Balan, who fights with his brother Balin until they kill one another.

BRANCH Offspring of a great man or prince (tree). Phallus, scourge. See ashera.

Branch of thorns. Rigor, severity, tribulation. Christian emblem of martyrdom.

Branch with berries. Friendship.

Branch with green leaves. Friendship, hospitality, protection. Frequently used as a tavern sign. Christian emblem of Saints Alcantara, Bridget, Onofrio, Peter.

BRANDEGORE (BRANDEGORIS)

In Malory's Morte d'Arthur a king, who with five thousand mounted men opposes Arthur. Name signifies Bran of Gower (Bran of the Underworld). A later form of the Brythonic god Bran.

BRANDEL, SIR (SIR BRANDILES)

In Malory's Morte d'Arthur a valiant knight of the Round Table, who dies fighting in Arthur's service. His name signifies Bran of Gwales, and he is a later form of the Brythonic god Bran.

BRANGEMORE In the Grail Legend queen of Cornwall. She built a chapel and was later murdered by her son Espinogres, who buried her beneath its altar. The chapel became Perilous Chapel where a mysterious Black Hand murders many knights until Percival overcomes the Black Hand and breaks the evil spell of the castle. This is a fertility myth, in which the Black Hand represents evil or winter.

BRANGWAINE In the Tristan legend waiting woman of Iseult and confident of Tristan and Iseult. A later form of Branwen, Welsh goddess of love.

BRANSTOCK In the Volsung Saga oak tree planted by Volsung. At the wedding of Siggeir and Signy, Sigmund's sister, Odin plunged the magic sword Gram into the tree. It was to become the gift of the man who could remove it from the tree. It defied all men except Sigmund. Sigmund thus assured victory in his undertakings aroused the envy of King Siggeir, who became his mortal enemy.

BRANWEN Daughter of Llyr, Welsh sea-god, and Iweridd (Ireland); sister of Bran. A moon goddess and goddess of love and, like the Greek Aphrodite, a child of the sea. Wife of Matholwych and mother of Gwern. After the death of Bran, she died of a broken heart. See Bran for the myth. Her name signifies white crow, or white-breast, or fair-bosom. In later legends called Brangwaine, the confident of Tristan and Iseult. Under the name Brynwyn or Dwynwen, she was sainted by the Christians and made a patron saint of lovers. Love draughts were sold by the monks at her sacred well.

BRASS Boldness, effrontery, shamelessness, strength. Ancient Greeks sounded to drive away keres or evil spirits. In Hebrew tradition invented by Tubal-Cain, first worker in metals, and symbolized baseness, drought, insensibility, sin. In the United States nickname of high-ranking military officer.

Brazen age. Period of violence and war when Neptune reigned; distinguished from bronze age.

Brazen head. In Eastern and in European legend a wonderful head of brass which could speak. In English legend the great Roger Bacon was said to have made such a head. It spoke three times, saying, "Time is," "Time was," and "Time's past," and fell down and broke into atoms.

Brazen serpent. Erected in the wilderness by Moses after a visitation by fiery serpents. On looking upon it those Israelites who had been bitten were healed. Thus a talisman against disease and evil. When the serpent became an object of sun worship, it was destroyed.

BRAVE-SWIFT-IMPETUOUS-MALE Japanese mischievous sea, storm, and underworld deity. Susa-no-wo, which see.

BRAWLEY Masculine name from Middle English, meaning he who quarrels.

BRAZIL Masculine name from Old French, meaning the glowing.

BREA Irish culture hero. The first man to make a caldron or build a house.

BREAD Deity offering, a form of ceremonial cake used as a burial gift, mystic food for participating in divine power. Food for the poor, hospitality, staff of life. Dream significance: (brown or stale) fatigue, worry; (white) good-luck coming. See cake, round objects. Christian symbol of the sacrifice of Christ on the cross, also the hermit's life, solitude. With fish and wine, an element of the sacramental meal. In ancient Greece and Rome communion, gods eating with sacrificants, and in Greece the first loaf of newly harvested crop was dedicated to Demeter. In Hebrew tradition the eating brings divine life or salvation, consisting of escape from the body or sharing divine nature. Miraculous food which the Israelites were fed in the wilderness. The feast of Unleavened Bread in the month of Abib, ultimately merged into the Passover feast, at which a sheaf of wheat of the new grain or a loaf made from it was offered to the Lord.

Bread breaking. Hospitality, a custom which evolved from the ancient funeral rite of breaking bread for the dead as an offering to the lord of death.

Bread and butter. Actuated by need, to be mercenary, as bread and butter candidates; immature, uninformed, youthful, as a bread and butter miss; means of support, as how does he earn his bread and butter.

Bread and salt. Russian symbol of hospitality.

Bread and wine. Gift to the dead, which lead to the custom of breaking bread and drinking wine as a consolation. In Christian tradition the body and blood of Christ.

Heavenly bread. Fruit of the tree of life.

Show bread. In Hebrew tradition bread of presence. Twelve round cakes of unleavened bread, representing the twelve tribes, were placed in a holy place and offered with frankincense and salt every Sabbath. Only priests ate the old bread in the holy place. See round objects.

BREADTH Action, dynamics, quantity, value. Compare length.

BREAKING OBJECTS A burial practice among Finno-Ugrics is the breaking of articles which belonged to the dead, such as spoons. They are 'killed' to release their souls to follow the soul of the deceased into the world of shadows.

BREASTS Abundance, communication, love, maturity, motherhood, protection, sustenance. Anatomical denomination governed by Cancer. Dream significance: abundance, wealth. To the ancient Greeks a seat of wisdom. In Hebrew tradition prudence. Persian symbol of long life, riches, and victory.

Bare breasts. Candidness, frankness.

Breast beating. Despair, extreme grief.

Breastplates. Courage, heroism; also destruction, terror, war. Hebrew symbol of judgment, reason which holds together and regulates the universe. Worn anciently by high priests. A piece of embroidery having a front and a lining forming a kind of bag in which the Urim and Thummin (Light and Perfection) were enclosed. On the front were twelve precious stones, each engraved with the name of one of the tribes, placed in four rows of three and divided by gold squares or partitions. At each corner was a gold ring, answering to the four rings on the ephod. The rings, holding the strings with which the breastplate was tied around the priest, symbolized the four quarters of the world. The arrangement of four rows represented the seasons. By Philo called, "Logic," and by Josephus called, "Essence" or "One Light." See under gems for the stones of the breastplate.

Breasts on a platter. Typifies Saint Agatha, who in martyrdom had her breasts torn off.

Breasts and serpent. Worldly troubles and vexations gnawing at the heart.

Flagging breasts. Lack of vigor, old age, scarcity.

Numerous breasts. Abundance, fertility.

Squeezing breasts. Bounty, generosity.

BREATH Creator deity, divine and immortal element in man, life force, soul, spirit. In China cloud and wind were created from the breath of P'an Ku. In Egypt symbolized Kneph, spirit or wind of life. In Finno-Ugric belief a soul which can release itself from the body. "Breath's departure," is a common synonym for death. In India in death supposedly goes to the wind, whereas the eyes go to the sun. Maori priests have a hymn called haha (breath), which invokes the mystic wind on the initiation of young men into the tribal mysteries.

BREDI (BREDE) In Volsung Saga thrall of Skadi, slain and buried in a snow drift by Sigi, who was jealous of Bredi's skill as a hunter. For this reason snow drifts are called Bredi's Drifts. Bredi was a river or water god buried under snow by the winter sky.

BREECHES Symbolic of the supremacy that supposedly is represented by male characteristics. For this reason worn by feminists.

BREEZE Fertility, messenger or voice of the gods.

BREGON Legendary Irish ancestor; descendant of Scythian nobles who were expelled from Egypt and settled in Spain. From his watch tower, his sons Bile and Ith saw a land never seen before. Ith sailed and reached Ireland. When he praised its climate and riches, he was killed by the people, who feared he would rob them of their wealth. Miled, son of Bile, set out to avenge his uncle's death and captured the land.

BREIDABLIK Literally, wide-shining splendor. Norse heavenly abode of Balder. It had golden pillars and a silver roof, nothing unclean was able to enter it. A place free of all crimes.

BREIT-HUT Literally, broad hat. In Norse mythology a name of Odin, and signifying the broad-hat (cloud) which blinded or covered one of his eyes.

BRENDA Feminine name from the Scandinavian, meaning flame or sword.

BRENNIUS Mythical British king, mortal form of Bran, god of the underworld. He and his elder brother Belenus, mortal form of the sun-god Beli, had divided Britain between them and together conquered Rome.

BRER RABBIT (BER RABBIT)

Principal animal character in Uncle Remus stories who, with witty trickery overcomes the superior strength of Brer Fox and Brer Wolf and other stronger animals. The rabbit as a symbol of trickery appears in African, American Indian, and Negro folklore. Brer Fox probably developed from the hyena of African tales. Brer B'ar (Bear) probably is a substitute for the African elephant.

BRES (BRESS) Literally, beautiful. Irish sun deity, son of the Fomor sea king Elatha and his sister Eri, air goddess, who counted of the Tuatha De Danann. In a war against the Firbolgs, Bres was maimed and killed by Eochaid, thereafter he was called Eochaid Bres. The Tuatha De Danann, who thought he might be useful to them offered him Brigit, a light-goddess, as a bride. He was made king to replace the maimed Nuada, inasmuch as no one with a blemish was permitted to rule. They hoped he would win the good-will of the Firbolgs, giants with whom they were constantly at war. Instead he oppressed his subjects with excessive taxes. He asked for the produce of those cows which were brown and hairless; then he passed all cattle in Ireland between two fires so that their hair was singed off and they became brown. A legend probably inspired by the fertility rite in which animals passed between fires. See bonfire. Thus Bres obtained monopoly of the main source of food and all the gods were now reduced to working for him, and he failed to provide them with ale. When he insulted Caibre, the poet, Caibre recited a satire relating that Bres was mean and stingy. Anciently a satire was recited to cast an evil spell over an enemy as well as to insult him. Thus Bres was considered to have a blemish and he was forced to abdicate. He incited his father to lead the Fomors in a war against the gods, who once again were led by Nuada, who had been healed. Bres typifies the sun which scorches, burns up cattle and does not permit the flow of rain (ale).

BRHASPATI Hindu primeval deity. Son of Dyaus and Prthivi. Also said to have been created by Tvastr and to have been born of a great light in the highest heavens. He drives away darkness, i. e. is the dawn, and is the father of the gods. Closely connect with Agni, with whom he at times appears to be identical. He also appropriated deeds of Indra, for he opened cow stalls and let waters loose (dawn releases mist). In some versions a teacher of Indra. He is 'Lord of Devotion,' protects his worshipers, prolongs life, and removes disease. He is portrayed as seven-mouthed, seven-rayed, and hundred-winged (clouds), with a beautiful tongue, a blue back (heavens), and sharp horns (rays).

BRIAH Cabalistic world of creation where Shekinah is the sacrifice. The other three worlds are: Assiah, Atziluth, Yetzirah.

BRIAN (BRYAN, BRYANT)

(1) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning strong. (2) In Irish mythology grandson of Ogma, son of Tuirenn and Danu or Buan-ann. His father also is said to be Dagda. Brother of Iuchar and Iuchurba. The three brothers, wind deities, are called the three fates or three gods of Danu. They married the three princesses Banbha, Eire, and Fodhla, who together owned Ireland, and became rulers of the land. The three brothers were at enmity with Cian, Cethe, and Cu. See Cian for their conflict.

BRIAR Death, grief, major sin, rejection, tribulation. See thistle, thorn.

Briar Rose. In fairytales the sleeping beauty. A beautiful maiden (light or dawn), who is imprisoned in a fastness and released by a brave warrior (sun), who with a spear (ray) penetrates the fortress in which the maiden is imprisoned.

BRIAREUS (BRIAREOS) In Greek mythology son of Uranus and Gaea. Also said to be the son of Pontus and Gaea. He was a hurricane deity, one of the Hecatoncheires, a monstrous giant with fifty heads and a hundred hands. His wife was Cympoleia. According to Homer, he was called Aegeon by men, Briareus by the gods. The name Aegeon suggests the violent sea. He was an ally of Zeus in the sky-god's war against the Titans. In Homer Briareus appears as an enemy of Zeus, and he was punished by being hurled under Mount Etna, where he fumes as a volcano.

BRICE Masculine name, probably a variant of Price, from the Welsh, signifying son of Rhys.

BRICK Hardened physical nature, that which is dependable, permanent, substantial. Man, alluding to Adam who, like a brick, was made of clay; thus to be 'a regular brick' is to be a jolly or reliable man. Intoxicating liquor, hence to have 'a brick under one's hat,' is to be under the influence of liquor. Babylonian emblem of Mami, goddess who created mankind from clay. Talisman for women in childbirth. Egyptian emblem of Meskhenet, and typified a birth-bed, as women bore children on bricks. Hebrew symbol of bondage, cruelty, transitoriness, alluding to the labor into which Hebrews were forced while in Egypt. Anciently bricks were made with straw mixed in the clay, and from the demands made upon the Hebrews by their taskmasters, came 'make bricks without straw,'

i. e. attempt to do something without having the necessary materials or tools.

BRICRIU In Irish mythology warrior and mischief-maker. Storm deity. He incited the first three champions of Ulster, Conall, Cuchulainn, and Loegaire, into a quarrel to determine which was the champion, and incited the wives of the men by telling each in turn to claim the right of first entry into a room where a feast was to be given, hence Bricriu's Feast. He then bade the heroes to go to Cu Roi mac Daire, renowned for his justice, to have the question settled. On the way Conall and Loegaire encountered a repulsive giant who beat them and forced them to return without their horses. Cuchulainn alone overcame the giant, Bricriu, and Cuchulainn thereupon became champion. However, he refused the honor of first place, preferring the goodwill of his companions. This is a sun myth in which Cuchulainn is the only sun strong enough to overcome a storm giant. Also called Bricrius Nemtenga, i. e. Bricriu of the bitter tongue.

BRIDE The Christian church, a nun, as bride of Christ. In Hebrew tradition symbolic of fertility and wisdom. In the Song of Solomon, Shulamite, she is the counterpart, double, image, sister, and echo of the bridegroom; she is despised, smitten, wounded, yet the daughter of a prince and beautifully shod (thus resembling Cinderella); she is awakener of those who sleep, keeper of the vineyard, shepherdess, and giver of peace. She appears as an apple tree, a lily among thorns, a lily of the valley, the rose of Sharon, as an enclosed garden, a fountain, a spring, a well; all fertility emblems.

Bride imprisoned. Summer-child of the great earth-mother, shut up in the abode of winter. Examples in Greek mythology are Danae, imprisoned in a tower, and Persephone, abducted by Hades. The incident is quite a popular one in Eastern legends.

Bride's knot. According to an old superstition, a knot anywhere in a bride's clothes makes her barren.

BRIDEGROOM In Hebrew tradition personifies fertility. In the Song of Solomon, probably alludes to Solomon himself as well as to a mythological hero. The counterpart of the bride, which see. He is a shepherd and feeds among the lilies.

Bridegroom's knot. A knot anywhere in a bridegroom's clothes supposedly will make him impotent.

Bridegroom unseen. See under marriage with unseen groom.

BRIDGE Medium for spanning a difficulty or time. In mythology usually typifies the rainbow; sometimes the Milky Way. Dream significance: (broken) difficult position; (crossed) happy solution. In heraldry, signifies assault, cares, patience, stability.

Bridge of the dead. Among some American Indians believed to be formed by a tree or by a snake. Among Christians, Moslems, Persians, in fact almost universally in Asia and Europe, a bridge no broader than a thread, as sharp as the edge of a blade, over which the dead must pass. The good will be able to walk over it with ease, the wicked will fall into the abyss below. Al Sirat, Gjolbridge, and Pul Chinavad are such bridges.

Bridge of sighs. Bridge which connects the palace of the doge with the state prisons of Venice. Prisoners pass across it from the judgement hall to the execution place. Nickname of Waterloo Bridge in London because suicides frequently jump from it.

BRIDGET (BIDDY, BRIDIE, BRIGET) Feminine name from the Celtic, meaning strength.

BRIDLE Wisdom. In folklore article with magical properties. It has medical powers that obviate sterility, it holds a person in a prescribed state until removed, and it aids metamorphosis.

BRIGHT COLORED SILKS AND GAUDY JEWELS In Chinese drama, gay women.

Bright light. In Malay and Indonesian tales, a beautiful woman.

BRIGHU Son of Brahma, discoverer of fire.

BRIGIT (BRID, BRIDE, BRIDGET, BRIGANTIA, BRIGHT, BRIGINDO)

In Irish mythology daughter of Dagda of the Tuatha De Danann; wife of Bres. Her name signifies High One, and she was a sky goddess or deity of light or fire. A culture goddess, she was referred to as the Presiding Care, and worshiped as protectress of cattle, crops, fertility, household arts, knowledge, poetry, and wisdom. When her son Rusdan was killed, she bewailed him with the first keening heard in Ireland. She invented a whistle for night signaling. As goddess of the hearth she resembles the Roman Vesta, and in some aspects resembles Minerva. In one account, identified as Danu and wife of Dagda. She was adopted by the Christians, canonized as Saint Bridget, and called the patroness of Ireland or the Mary of Gael.

Brigit's fire (Saint Brigit's fire). At Kildare a sacred eternally burning fire. Nineteen nuns attended it for nineteen consecutive days; on the twentieth day it was attended by the dead saint. The fire was tabu to males.

Brigit and Patrick. Two legendary pillars supporting Ireland.

BRIHASPATI Hindu divine mediator. Developed into Brahma of the later triad. Name resolves into Brihas (fire light) and pati (shining father).

BRIMER Norse giant who has an ale-hall in Okolner, a realm where no frost exists.

BRIMO A Scythic and Tauric virgin-mother goddess. She carried the mighty Brimos, the holy child; perhaps an aspect of Dionysus. She also was a destroyer appeased by human sacrifice. Resembles Astarte, Ishtar.

BRIMSTONE In Hebrew tradition, catastrophe, destruction, perpetual torment.

BRISAYA Vedic deity of darkness, a moon goddess. She is captured by the solar hero Aharyu, who must capture her before he is able to recover the treasures (morning dew) stolen by the Panis. The name Brisaya corresponds with that of Briseis, and the name of Aharyu with that of Achilles.

BRISEIS In Greek mythology captive of the Trojan war allotted to Achilles. When Agamemnon was forced to give up his prize, Chryseis, who had been ransomed by her father, the Achaian general demanded Briseis. This conduct on the part of Agamemnon caused Achilles to withdraw for a time from active service in the war. A moon goddess over whom two aspects of the sun, Achilles and Agamemnon, quarreled. Name related to Vedic Brisaya.

BRISINGAMEN In Norse mythology the splendid necklace made by the dwarfs of Svartalfaheim, for which Freyja paid the price of surrendering herself to them. It sparkled like fire and was Freyja's most precious possession. Loki stole it and Heimdall recovered it for Freyja. Various explanations as dawn, fruitfulness, moon, the morning or evening star setting in the sea, the rainbow. Some hold the necklace originally belonged to Frigg. 'Brisingr,' means fire, 'men' means necklace. Compare Amaterasu's necklace under Amaterasu.

BRISTLES Sun's rays, fire. Compare boar bristles, Muntalog.

BRITANNIA Personification of the British Empire. A female figure sitting on a globe, leaning on a shield with one hand and grasping a spear with the other.

BRITOMART In Spenser's Faerie Queene a female knight, personifying chastity. Name from the Greek, meaning sweet maid.

BRITOMARTIS In Greek mythology daughter of Zeus and Karne or Zeus and Leto. Chaste Cretan goddess of fishers, hunters, and sailors. A moon and great-mother goddess, sometimes identified with Artemis or Dictyanna. In one legend she was pursued by Minos for nine months, from the early flood season to the winnowing season; she finally threw herself into a fisherman's net in the sea, was rescued and made a deity by Artemis. The myth, explaining the fish or mermaid form of the moon goddess in Crete, resembles those of Arethusa fleeing from Alpheios and Daphne fleeing from Apollo.

BRITTIA Mythical island described by Procopius, a Byzantine historian. It was divided by a wall running north and south. West of the wall the air was so foul only vipers and evil could survive. In its inhabited east, the Angles, Britons, and Frisians lived. Fishermen on the European continent were exempt from taxes because it was their duty to ferry souls of the dead over to Brittia. Although the fishermen never saw their passengers or those who received them, they heard the questions put on arrival and the answers in which the souls gave their names and that of their native countries. Procopius undoubtedly referred to Britain and the Roman wall.

BRIZO Aegean moon goddess, an enchantress.

BROADBLINK Literally, vast splendor. In Norse mythology the mansion of Balder.

BROBDINGNAG A country of giants to whom Gulliver appears as a pigmy in Swift's Gulliver's Travels. Hence the adjective, brobdingnagian, meaning colossal, gigantic, strong.

BROCADE In Japan typifies splendor.

BROCELIANDE Enchanted forest in Brittany where Merlin lived. Vivian bewitched Merlin in the forest.

BROCH (BERK, BUROK) In Scotland the remains of a round tower. Stronghold, sanctuary from wandering marauders. Believed to have connection with sun worship. Ancient name for badger, Cornish for yew-tree. Word identical with Bark, Berk, or burg as they appear in names.

Also called Pictish tower.

BROCKEN (BLOCKSBERG, BRUCKTERUS) Highest peak in the Harz mountains. Meeting place of German witches and site of Walpurgis Night festivals.

Brocken specter. An optical illusion, alluding to the natural phenomenon observed on the Brocken in which shadows of those on the mountain are greatly magnified when projected on the mists about the summit of the mountain opposite.

BROIEFORT Marvelous horse of Ogier in medieval legends.

BROK In Norse mythology brother of Sindre. He blew the bellows for Sindre's artisan elf-sons while Loki, in fly form, tormented him. Hence one who does not succumb to hardship or inconvenience.

BROMIUS A title of Dionysus, meaning roarer or he who makes a confused sound. He was a Greek thunder-god, a god of mysterious voices and orgiastic music, and his name, derived from a cereal intoxicant, seems to have sprung from brahma. See Braités.

BRONS In Grail legends brother-in-law of Joseph of Arimathea. While wandering with Joseph and companions in the wilderness certain of the company fell into sin. Brons, commanded by God, caught a fish, which with the Grail provided a mystic meal of which the unworthy were not permitted to partake, thus sinners were separated from the righteous. Afterward Brons was known as the Rich Fisher or Fisher King, who suffered not from death but from extreme old age. When the proper questions were asked his youth was restored, but he lived only three days after the restoration. A resurrection myth.

BRONTE (BRONTES) Literally, thunder. One of the Cyclops, which see.

BRONZE Metal which ancients believed had the power to purify and drive off pollutions. In China used in altar articles, censers, libation cups, ritual vessels, etc. In ancient Greece a bronze gong was sounded at eclipses of the moon or when a king died.

Bronze age. Third age of man. Age of a powerful race of humans, who were cruel, hard, obdurate. Their tools and weapons were of metal, they lived in constant contention and strife. Like those of the silver age the people of the bronze age were condemned to wander in Hades. The wheel supposedly was invented in this period. See ages of man.

Bronze dish. Buddhist ritual altar object; symbol of Mount Meru.

BROOCH If received as a gift, an omen of broken friendship or love unless a coin is given with it to dispel bad luck.

BROOM (1) Shrub symbolizing humility, neatness, servility. From the root bhram, and so named because of its flame-like flowers. In heraldry insignia of knighthood; emblem of the Plantagenet family. (2) Instrument of cleanliness and housewifery. Symbol of insight and wisdom. Steed of witches. Dream significance: (sweeping) bother discovered. Among Central American Indians, inasmuch as it sweeps away, typifies that which is evanescent, lost, transitory. In China the power to brush away evil spirits and trouble. Japanese emblem of Fugen, deity of compassion, sweeper of pine needles.

BROTHER JONATHAN Generic name for a shrewd Yankee or New Englander which developed into a familiar name for the United States and resolved into Uncle Sam. Personified by a middle-aged man with chin whiskers, wearing a high silk hat, a formal coat and pantaloons with stars and stripes, in the style of the 19th century.

BROTHERS, COUPLINGS, OR TWINS A universal folkloric motif in which correlative deities sometimes are in close harmony, representing culture or light heroes beneficent to mankind; sometimes they are in conflict. When antagonistic they represent opposing forces of good and evil, light and darkness, love and reason, summer and winter, and one usually is killed by the other, or they kill each other. Almost always the dead deities are resurrected, thus the deity of darkness is reborn each evening, the deity of light is reborn each morning, or winter returns each year, and the conflict resumes. Some examples are Achilles and Patroclus, the Asvins, Balder and Loki, Cain and Abel, Castor and Pollux, dawn and evening breezes, Michael and Satan, Prometheus and Epimetheus, Romulus and Remus, Set and Horus, Typhon and Osiris. The Melanesian culture hero is hampered in his beneficent, creative, or tutelary activities by one or more antagonistic, lazy, or stupid brothers. Examples are Kabinana, Karuvu, Qat, Tagaro, Warochunuga.

BROWN Autumn, earth, monasticism, penitence, sorrow; also barrenness, poverty, renunciation. In precious stones represented by andalusite, diamond, garnet, hyacinth, smoky quartz, and tourmaline. In symbology the personality traits of those who lean toward brown are: calmness, conventionalism, dependability, earthly, lacking in curiosity, law abiding, lazy, looked upon as wise by friends through actions rather than because of knowledge, as they are not impulsive or showy, but are oblivious to external facts, observant rather than a participant, satisfied, slow thinking but sure, views definite but unrevealed, worldly wise. The color so called after the skin of a bruin (bear). In Christianity typifies renunciation of the world, spiritual death.

BROWN BULL OF CUALGNE Celtic bull of fairy descent owned by Daire of Cualgne and coveted by Queen Medb, who was jealous of her husband, who owned the White-horned Bull. Determined to obtain the Brown Bull, which was able to carry 150 children and protect a hundred warriors from heat or by his shelter from cold, Medb sent her army against that of Daire. A bull-fertility cult replaced an earlier goat cult in Ireland, and the life of the sun hero Cuchulainn was tied to that of the Brown Bull, which was worshiped as Cuchulainn's external soul. In the war of the Bulls, the Brown Bull killed his rival the White-horned Bull; then going mad with pride, dashed out its brains against a rock. With the death of the Brown Bull the death of Cuchulainn becomes possible. The Brown Bull was succeeded by its calf, and so another sun hero appeared to take the place of the dead Cuchulainn in the march of the seasons. See Friuch.

BROWNIE German guardian spirit which usually lived in woods. In Scotland a homely good-natured sprite which haunted farmhouses and did useful work around a house at night, churning, sweeping, etc. A fairy or pixy. Identical with alfar, alvor, elf, tomte.

BRUCE Masculine name from the Norman family name de Bruce, after the name Brieuse, signifying of the brush.

BRUGH NA BOINNE (BRUG NA BOINNE) In Celtic mythology the neighborhood or region of the Boyne, famous as the dwelling or burial place of the Tuatha De Danann, ancient Irish gods, and of the kings of Tara. Site of a fairy palace; site of a royal cemetery. A tumulus, sidh or mound of Dagda, later of Oengus.

BRUMMAGEM A gaudy, inferior, or worthless article which imitates a better one. The word is derived from the name Birmingham, a great mart and manufacturing center in England of cheap jewelry, gilt toys, imitation gems, etc.

BRUN In Norse mythology counsellor to Harald. Said to be Odin disguised as a war god.

BRUNHILDE See Brynhild.

BRUNO Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning brown.

BRUSH Art, painting. In China called pi; emblem of a scholar.

Brush, gilded ink-cake, scepter. In China called pi, ting, ju I. A rebus signifying, May your wish be fulfilled.

Brush in thumb of a palette. Art, painting.

Brush pot. In China called pi t'ung or hsi chiao (horn cup); emblematic of scholarly attainment.

BRUTE (BRUT, BRUTUS) In a legendary history the grandson of Ascanius and great-grandson of Aeneas. Accidentally killing his father Sylvius he fled to Greece and from there went on to Britain, where he became the first British king, calling his capital Troynovant, in honor of his native city Troy. Subsequently the city was renamed London. He captured the giants Gog and Magog, and kept them chained at his palace, where they served him as porters.

BRUTUS (1) Disorderly hair. In fancied imitation of the hair of Lucius Junius Brutus, a semi-mythical Roman patriot. (2) An assassin, conspirator against a friend, a patriot, in allusion to Marcus Brutus, who joined conspirators to murder his friend Caesar. Shakespeare, in his drama Julius Caesar, endows Brutus with the qualities of a real patriot, saying, "He loves Caesar much, but he loves Rome more." "Et tu Brute," the cry of Julius Caesar when he saw his friend among the assassins, has become a popular exclamation of those whose friends have turned against them. The name Brutus in Latin means heavy or stupid.

Brutus, Lucius Junius. Legendary first Roman consul, fabled to have held office about 509 B. C. He condemned his two sons to death for joining a conspiracy to restore the throne to the banished Tarquin.

BRYNHILD (BRUNHILD, BRUNHILDA, BRUNHILDE) (1) Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning breastplate and battle. (2) In Volsung Saga daughter of Budle. Chief of the Valkyrie or fire maidens. Her marvelous horse Vingskornir carried her to victory. When she disobeyed Odin, he pricked her with a thorn (winter), and she fell into an enchanted sleep on Hlymdale, surrounded by seven hedges of fire (coils of the dragon Fafnir, demon of the underworld, who guarded her treasures, earth's verdure). Sigurd, the sun, killed the dragon, became possessed of the treasure, and aroused the sleeping dawn or spring maid. She plighted her troth to Sigurd and gave him magic runes. He gave her an Andvari-loom ring (ring of fertility), but Brynhild, a seer, predicted he would desert her. He rode off, and at the house of Giuki, the Niflung, he married Gudrun, gloaming or autumn. Brynhild bore their daughter Aslog. Gunnar, brother of Gudrun and prince of darkness, unable to penetrate the flames protecting Brynhild, prevailed upon Sigurd to assume his form and win Brynhild for him. Disguised as Gunnar, Sigurd gave her a ring from the Fafnir hoard, taking in exchange the Andvari ring, and Brynhild became the wife of Gunnar. When Brynhild saw the Andvari ring on Gudrun's finger she realized she had been deceived, and urged her husband to slay Sigurd. Gunnar had sworn not to lay hands on his brother-in-law, but desiring his wealth he prevailed upon his younger brother Guttorm to perform the deed. In remorse Brynhild threw herself on Sigurd's funeral pyre, thus verdure died with the sun, whose mistress she had been on his early journey. Her gift of prophecy and vengefulness resemble Medea's; as one deserted she resembles Ariadne.

Brynhild becomes Briar Rose or Sleeping Beauty in fairytales. As Brunhild her lover is Siegfried in the Nibelungenlied and her husband is King Gunther. As the wife of Gunther she is so obstreperous, Siegfried deprives her of her girdle and ring of strength (fertility), after which she becomes a submissive wife. When she discovers she has been deceived she persuades Gunther's brother Hagen to murder Siegfried, and then dies on Siegfried's grave. As an unmanageable wife Brunhild appears in the role of Katharina in Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew. In Wagner's Ring of the Nibelungen Brunhild is a Valkyrie who aids Siegmund against the will of Wotan. The god places her on a high rock surrounded by fire to sleep until awakened by Siegfried.

BRYONY Herb symbolizing prosperity.

BU In Melanesian mythology the man who shot and killed Metakorab, a female bogey. Star group known as the Dolphin.

BUAN-ANN Celtic Good-Mother, goddess of plenty. Mother of Brian, Iuchar, and Iuchurba. She nursed and suckled them so well her name became Ana (plenty) or Danu.

BUARAINECH Celtic cow-faced god. While his assistants were preparing a magic potion, the poisonous smoke from the caldron infected the eye of his son Balor. A fertility deity, providing nourishment and death; a sorcerer.

BUBASTIS Egyptian cat-headed or lion-headed goddess who watched over childbirth. Also called Bast, Pasht, Sekhet.

BUCKBEAN Herb symbolizing calmness, repose.

BUCKEYE The horse (Horus)-chestnut. Symbol of darting, piercing, radiating fire. Emblem of the state of Ohio, which is called the Buckeye State. As its wood is used for artificial limbs, symbolic of dependence and inferiority. The narcotic properties of the tree have been used to intoxicate fish.

BUCKLE Aristocracy, eminence, fidelity in authority. Protective amulet or talisman. In heraldry a knight preparing for action. In ancient Egypt symbolized the good will and protection of Isis. A buckle, dipped in water in which ankh flowers had lain and which represented the goddess's blood or her power and strength, was hung around the mummy's neck to safeguard it in the nether world.

BUCKTHORN Cares, evil, sin, trial, tribulation. Christian symbol of martyrdom. The crown of thorns worn by Christ was formed of buckthorn. In ancient Greece a plant of purgative properties, which was chewed in the belief it had the power of keeping off evil spirits and ghosts.

BUCON Occult demon of hatred.

BUCU Among the Golde of Siberia a mystic bird which assists a shaman when he travels to the otherworld. Compare Koori.

BUD Latent or undeveloped power; virginity. In Japan classified as feminine. A blossom opened is classified as masculine, and a blossom overblown is classified as a mature woman.

BUDDHA (BOODH, BOODHA, BOUDDHA, BUDDH) Literally, the enlightened or wise. Buddhist incarnation of a divine intelligence or wisdom. Preacher of asceticism and karma, of the Eight-fold Path, the Four Noble Truths, and the Six Cardinal Virtues. Deified human.

Gautama, called Sakyamuni (sage of the Sakya family) or Siddhartha (he who gains his ends), was a 6th Century B. C. prince whose putative father, Suddhodana, wishing him to become a sovereign, kept him guarded to prevent him from seeing the four sights: a dead man, a decrepit man, a diseased man, a religious ascetic. Despite his guards, Gautama saw the four sights, and realizing the impermanence of earthly things, in his 29th year, renounced a life of luxury and pleasure for a life of poverty as a religious ascetic. He was aided by the gods, who showed him the way in the dead of night and who prevented his horse's hoofs from touching the ground, so that his escape was noiseless. See magic steed. Accompanied by five ascetics, he entered a life of discipline, but at the end of six years he decided asceticism is not the road to truth, and he became a beggar. While sitting under a Bo Tree, Mara and his evil daughters tried to dissuade him from his purpose, but the darts and stones they threw transformed into flowers as they hit Gautama. Thus he attained Buddhahood, and the serpent king Mucalinda celebrated the victory by covering Buddha's head with his hood in the storm that followed. He wandered from place to place, basing his teachings on the principle that all is fleeting, impermanent, with the one exception, cause and effect, i. e. that all living things, god, man, beast, are what they are as the result of deeds done during a previous existence.

When he realized he was about to die, he lay under two Sala trees, which blossomed out of season, and went into a series of trances from which he entered the realm of infinity, passing through perception and non-perception until he finally reached Nirvana; his divine character attested by the transfiguration by which his body became brilliant at death. Son of the Spirit (Holy Ghost) in the form of a white elephant and of Maya, a human mother, thus miraculous. He had many earlier existences, and his final birth was accompanied by earthquakes, miracles, and the sweetening of the ocean. According to prophecy, he was to become either a Chakravartin (universal monarch) or a Buddha enlightened for the salvation of mankind. While in Tusita heaven, he chose the family, mother, and time of his birth. At birth he bore thirty-two primary and eighty secondary marks, which are called those of Mahapurusa (Great Male). Among his marks are those of Chakravartin, described as one of his aspects in an earlier birth. His feet are covered by wheels; his hands have fingers united by membranes; a circle of soft white hair (urna) emitting marvelous rays of light is between his eyebrows; his spine is so rigid, he cannot turn his head; he has a marvelous tongue which can reach into the world of Brahma (all sun or sun-ray symbols). Other of his emblems are the circle, elephant, footprint, lotus, naga (serpent), simhasana (lion throne), swastika, trikona (triangle), triratna (three jewels), urna (divine third eye), vajrasana (diamond throne), and white horse. In art shown with cropped curly hair, seated on a lotus. Sometimes wears a serpent's hood or appears as a pillar of fire, supernatural sun, or tree of life. At the moment of his birth the Bo-Tree, his future wife, his charioteer, his elephant, and his horse were born. He passed through the world unaffected by the world. He was the Fisherman (an epithet of Christ) who drew fish from the ocean of Samsara to the light of salvation. In some accounts said to have been born eleven times as a deer and to have preached his first sermon in a deer park. He was supported by a lotus to attest his divine birth. His characteristics are those of a sun deity; Brahmanical believers regard him as the ninth incarnation of Vishnu, and worship him in two aspects, preacher and omnipotent being. The four crucial moments of his life were: 1- Birth from the side of his mother. See caesarean section. 2- Instant of becoming a Buddha with the mudra calling earth to bear witness. 3- Holding discourse in a deer park. 4- Entering Nirvana, his right side facing south (lion position).

Buddhas number more than one, and each may have an earthly life, but not more than one may appear in the world at any time. A Buddha comes into existence at irregular intervals, when the cause for a Buddha exists. Brahma comes into the world at regular intervals. A Buddha is the Absolute, Essence of Fire and of Mind, Eternal Principle, the One Reality. As an ascetic called nirmanakaya; as an abstract body, dharmakaya; as a heavenly body, sambhogakaya; as a meditative body, dhyani-buddha; as a mortal, manusi-buddha. Celestial Buddhas are five: 1- Dipamkara, enlightener; 2- Kasyapa, luminous protector; 3- Sakyamuni (Gautama), the enlightened; 4- Maitreya, loving one; 5- Bhaisajyaguru, master of healing. Usually they are shown without headdress. Confession Buddhas number thirty-five. Sakyamuni is the chief; usually the others are grouped around him, seated dhyanasana. They are of five different colors and wear monastic garments, most often without headdress. See Dhyani-buddhas for crowned Buddhas. See Adam's Peak.

Buddha paradises. Kshetra, abode of past Buddhas. Tusita, heaven of contentment of the future Buddha Maitreya, situated high in the sky. Sukhavati, realm of bliss of Amitabha, Buddha of infinite light and life, situated in the west. Grdhra-kuta, world-to-be-realized, realm where Sakyamuni preached the Lotus of Truth, situated on Vulture Peak.

Buddha poses. The pointing finger is a necromantic or bewitching gesture. The chief mudras or poses are: 1- Best Bestowing, signifying charity. Arm fully extended, hand points downward with outstretched palm to the front. 2- Blessing or Fearlessness. Arm lifted and slightly bent, hand elevated with palm to front and fingers pointing upwards. 3- Earth-touching or Earth-bear-witness. It alludes to the time Sakyamuni called the earth as his witness. Earth bore fruit to show it had heard. Thus a fertility symbol. 4- Meditative or Imperial. The figure is seated with one hand resting on the other in the lap in the middle line of the body with palms upward. 5- Perfection. Index finger and thumb of each hand are joined and held almost in contact with the breast at the level of the heart. 6- Preaching. Same as Blessing, except thumb is bent. 7- Protecting or Refuge-giving. The arm is bent, palm to the front with fingers pointing downwards. 8- Triangular. Same as Preaching, except thumb touches the ring finger. 9- Turning the Wheel-of-the-Law. Dogmatic attitude with right index finger turning down the fingers of the left hand.

Buddhasaktis. Consorts of Buddhas; their emblems are kapala (skull cup) and karttrka (chopper).

BUDDHADAKINI Femal Buddhist deity of the air, capable of conferring supernatural powers. Her color is white, and her emblems are cakra (wheel), kapala (skull cup), khatvanga (ritual wand). Tibetan name Sans-rgyas-mkhah-gro. See Dakinis.

BUDDHALOCANA (LOCANA)

A Dhyani-buddhasakti; consort of Aksobhya.

BUDDHA'S HAND In China called fo shou; a citrus fruit symbolizing good fortune. Used as an offering at the lunar year and for scenting clothing and rooms. The ten or more finger-like segments of the fruit resemble a classic position of Buddha's hand. Also illustrates the gesture of grasping money. When pictured with a butterfly, expresses, "attain old age." When pictured with a peach and pomegranate, suggests good fortune, long life, and many sons.

BUDDHISM Originally a code of ethics. Founded by Gautama Siddhartha. The introduction of deities entered later, and like Judaism, originally a religion which opposed images. It contains the doctrine of Four Truths (Realities) and the Eight-fold Path. Detachment from worldly things; spiritual life. Buddhism, based on karma, reincarnation, the transmigration of the soul, the delivery of the soul from torment, was the first universal religion. It embodies a future life with many heavens, including the Pure Land of the West, which holds eternal joy for the good, and a hell, filled with terrible punishments for those who deviated from the five precepts: 1- Slay not that which has life; 2- Steal not; 3- Be not lustful; 4- Be not light in conversation; 5- Drink not wine. The ritual of Buddhism has been borrowed by the principal religions of the world. Incorporated in Catholicism are its Goddess of Mercy, hell, incense, liturgy, use of holy water, worship of idols, images, and relics. The pope resembles the Dalai Lama.

Buddhist cross. The swastika; Union of four phalli.

Buddhist form. Square broken on one side by a square alcove representing the flowing out from within, as opposed to the Christian form of dot in a circle, which takes in and is therefore enclosed.

Buddhist goddesses of the four seasons. Vasantadevi, spring; Grismadevi, summer; Saraddevi, autumn; Hemantadevi, winter. These are portrayed with animal heads and usually accompany Sri-devi.

Buddhist transmigration. The six stages: 1- heavenly world, which is subject to decay; 2- human life, period of discipline, of virtue and vices; 3- bestial life, period of greed and base instincts; 4- hungry ghosts, life of never satiated appetite and constant agony; 5- furious spirits, realm of raging hatred and combat; 6- purgatories, where imperfect beings create their own punishment and are at last purged from their brutal vices.

BUFFALO In Pawnee Indian tradition great gift of heavenly powers.

Buffalo Bill. The nickname of a daredevil pony-express rider named William F. Cody, who attained fame in dime-novels and stories of the wild west.

BUFONITE Talisman for health, emblem of witchcraft. The word derives from bufon, Latin for toad.

BUG A bogey, ghost, hobgoblin. Also a term for insects, originally applied to the beetle because it is round-shaped like ob-ug, i. e. the mighty orb or sun; hence a sun emblem. Root of bugle and the name Bugge.

BUGA A Trans-Baikal heaven-god, creator of man from earth, fire, iron, and water collected from the four corners of the earth.

BUGAKU Japanese butterfly dance, signifying the fluttering from flower to flower. Performed at court and other sacred places on ceremonial occasions.

BUGAN Philippine Island perfect woman. Wife of Wigan, her brother, with whom she survived the deluge. Prayers for women are addressed to her, although no petitions are made to her images.

BUGBEAR A goblin that eats little children. A bugaboo, any object of dislike or dread.

BUGIMAMUSI In African Uganda legend place where heaven touches earth.

BUGLE Call to action. Horn of salvation. From the root bug.

BUGLOSS Plant symbolizing falsehood.

BUHUITIHU Taino name for medicine man or priest.

BUILDER'S SQUARE Truth.

BUILDING In China a two-story building, or any which overshadows its neighbor, is thought to deprive the smaller one of Heaven's guardianship. When the main beam of a new building is erected firecrackers are set off invoking the spirit of the ground for protection.

BUIINNE In second or heroic cycle of Irish legend son of Fergus. The 'Ruthless Red,' he betrays Naeise to Conchubar and is given a large tract of land which turns barren the very night he receives it in indignation at being owned by a traitor. Buinne typifies winter.

BUJURUKTSI Tatar god or fate of the heavens; commander or ruler of providence, decreer of birth. Compares with Dzajaga, Jajutsi, Kaba, Moira, Norns, Tien-ming, Zajan.

BUKE Japanese military house or military class. Also called monofufu, samurai, wasarau.

BULICAME Hot spring in central Italy mentioned by Dante in the Inferno. It was frequented as a bath, and its stream was divided so that prostitutes, who were compelled to stay away from others, had a section.

BULL Universally worshiped as the fecundity of nature, fertility of earth, generative and reproductive force, heat and light of the sun, luminous and impregnating father of all things. Symbolic of energy, fury, lasciviousness, life-power, lordship, virility, wealth. At one time, symbol of humid or passive power, while the lion symbolized the active generative power; later typified the sky and fecundating sun, portrayed with four horns to represent the cardinal points, the four legs typifying supporting pillars, and identified with the deity in his male aspect of creator. The celestial bow, with which sun deities shot their arrows or rays, was designed in the shape of the horns of a bull. As a generative force worshiped as a corn spirit. At sacrificial feasts, eaten to give men strength. Represents the zodiacal sign Taurus, which the sun enters about April 20, in the East, the season for plowing with a bull or ox. On the stock exchange one who favors a rising market; opposed to bear, which see. In heraldry typifies magnanimity and valor. In one version of the Cinderella story a bull butts an oak tree until it opens, and Cinderella finds within it everything she needs to satisfy her hunger. The 'oc' of bull-ock (bull) is radically the same as 'ac,' and the Anglo-Saxon ac-tree is an oak-tree. Bull is akin to Bel. In Assyrian mythology a winged beneficent genius, protector. In Buddhism Yama stands on a bull, a man, or a woman. In Christianity typifies brute strength. In Egypt, when a new bull was installed in the temple, women exposed their sexual parts to the sacred animal as a fertility rite. Princesses were buried with sacred bulls, a custom interpreted as a symbolic marriage for fertility. The north wind was portrayed as a bull, sometimes with four heads and usually winged. In Hebrew tradition emblem of a chief or prince, symbol of fruitfulness, and one of the principal forms by which the sun deity of early Israelites was worshiped. Typified an invader, i.e. a fierce foe which tramples under foot. A bull-shaped Prince of Death is mentioned. In early Semitic myths, mount or steed of the rain and thunder god; whereas the steed of the earth goddess was a lion, and that of the sun god a horse. In Indo-Iranian tradition a rain and storm deity, an allusion to the violence of storms and to the fertility which water brings to the world. In Ireland bulls were the reincarnation of divinities. See Brown Bull, White-horned Bull. Moslem earth support called Kuyuta. See Bahamut. In Japanese mythology breaker of the egg of chaos. The ancient Romans ornamented the pages of their books with a bull which they regarded a favorable sign. In Siberian and Finno-Ugrian mythology a bull stands on a crab, fish, or stone in the cosmic ocean and supports the earth on his horns. When his horns break, the world will come to an end. See fish, frog, mammoth.

Brown Bull. See under Brown.

Bull's blood. Universally used for purposes of divination.

Bull deities. Fertility, sun, and thunder deities, among them: Agni, Apis, Athena, Bacis, Dionysus, Dyaus, Heracles, Indra, Jupiter, Kali, Marduk, Mentu, Minerva, Minotaur, Mithras, Mnevis, Nebo, Neptune, Osiris, Poseidon, Sin, Siva, Tantalus, Telamon, Thor, Zeus.

Bull-foot. (1) The reward of the victorious matador. (2) In ancient mysteries the foot of the sacred king, caused by the dislocation of the thigh, typifying the emasculation in fertility rites. See dance with a limp, foot, heel, hobbling, partridge.

Bull horns. Male potency, sun's rays. In Babylonian art, deity emblem. On ancient Semitic steles the god of thunder and lightning has bull's horns. He also wears a conical crown with two flowing ribbons signifying rays of light.

Bull roarer. Probably the most ancient sacred symbol in the world. Used universally to evoke the Supreme Spirit. Typifies the voice of thunder and of the wind. Also called boomer, buzzer, rhombus, swish, tundun, whizzer, etc. In New Guinea called tipperu; used in initiation ceremonies to create weird noises in the jungle to acquaint the initiate with the voices of ancestors or ghosts and suggests a visit to the underworld and resurrection therefrom. Compare circumcision, initiation.

Bull tied to a wild fig tree. Lascivious fury appeased; a man cured of incontinence, the fig tree signifying marriage.

Sea-born bull. In Greek mythology the sun.

White bull. Sacred to Zeus; form in which Zeus appeared to Europa. The seed of Israel.

White-horned bull. See under White.

BULLA A heart-shaped amulet worn around the neck as a pendant in ancient Rome. Badge of free-born children; boys ceased to wear it on attaining manhood, girls on marriage. A decoration of victorious generals; also worn as a talisman against the evil-eye.

BULLDOG Pertinacity.

BULLFINCH In Japan called Uso-dori, a liar bird. See Fuku-kuro.

BULRUSH July 20 birthday flower, symbolizing independence. In Christian tradition, symbol of the multitude of the faithful and humble. In Hebrew tradition, salvation. The infant Moses was found among the bulrushes.

BUMBA African Bushongo High God. The creator and first ancestor, who appointed the chief, assigned totems to men, and then rose into the air and disappeared. Portrayed as a gigantic white being in human shape. Also called Chembe, Jambé, Nyambe, Nzambi.

BUMBLE In Dickson's Oliver Twist, beadle of the workhouse in which Oliver Twist was born and raised. A fussy, hard-hearted official, impressed with his own importance. The word bumbledom, meaning arrogance, conceit, pomposity, and stupidity, especially when exhibited by petty officials, has sprung from the name.

BUN A round sacrificial cake, body of the deity. Compare pie, wafer. In Christian tradition body of Christ. The Egyptian word was boun; the Greek word was bous, which also meant ox, and sometimes the bun was made in the shape of an ox-head.

BUNINKA A Mongolian devil.

BUNJEL Primitive Australian deity who sliced earth into creeks and valleys with a knife.

BUNYIP Australian man-eating supernatural animal which lives in deep pools and streams.

BURBANK T.S. Eliot character; impotent embodiment of creative arts.

BURDOCK Weed carrying the sentiment importunity. In the language of flowers: Touch me not.

BURE (BURI) In Norse mythology the original All-Father, licked into life by Audhumla. Father of Bor, grandfather of Odin, Vili, and Ve, and thus first of the Aesir. His descendants slew the primeval giants and created celestial spheres. The root bur means fire and accounts for burn and burnished; also brass, brazier, breeze (cinders), bright, brilliant, burly, Burbank, and Burdock; it equates with bear and Brahm, and the shout bravo originally was buravo or Bur ave (Hail Bur).

BURIAL Consummation, honoring the dead, misery, resurrection, sorrow. Dream significance (another's burial) early marriage; (one's own) serious illness. Among most nations the idea of burial seems to have been to return the body to some primal parent. A barrow, grave, low, palisade, pile, pyramid, tomb, tor, tower, tumulus were all vehicles which carried the body on its way. To inter is to consign to terre (earth). Compare cremation, exposed dead. American Indians who were buried walked to paradise, crossing a river on the way; those who were cremated were transported by the fire god. In India ground burial was preferred by the Varuna cult, cremation by the Agni cult. Norsemen consigned their dead to Mother Sea.

Mock burial. In primitive societies initiation into adulthood, the initiate being placed in a coffin or grave pit and asked questions. The answers he gives supposedly come from a deity. The grip used in raising the initiate from the coffin is the grip of resurrection. In New Guinea rebirth into adulthood is a rite in which the boy or girl is swallowed by a mythical monster, i.e. house or tomb of initiation whose jaw is the doorway.

BURKE Masculine name from Teutonic, meaning of the castle.

BURKHAN (BURKHAN-BAKSHI) Siberian creator. Inasmuch as the devil Sholmo brought up the mud from the cosmic sea with which Burkhan created the world, he was given a piece large enough on which to plant his staff. As soon as Sholmo pushed his staff into the soil, snakes, reptiles and harmful creatures came into life. With mud he had secretly held out from Burkhan he made Burkhan's smooth earth mountainous. A god adopted from Buddha.

BURNING BUSH Oracular tree in which Jehovah appeared to Moses, thus presence of God, trial by fire, will and word of God. Epiphany by fire. Adopted by the Presbyterian Church of Scotland as its emblem.

Burning cross. A symbol of battle. Clansmen of the Scottish Highlands used to be summoned to battle by means of a cross, the tips of which had been lighted (extinguished by being dipped in blood) and sent from village to village. Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, borrowed the symbol to inform those the organization found obnoxious that they were to be expelled, murdered, tarred, or whipped; hence the emblem of a bloodthirsty lawless mob. Also called fiery cross.

Burning lamp and smoking furnace. Jehovah.

Burning seeds. Fecundity.

BURNUNTA-SA Literally broad-ear. Babylonian deity, son of the sea god Ea.

BURZHIN MITRO In Iranian legend fire on Mount Revand. One of the three fires that protected the land, the others being Frohbach and Gushasp.

BUSH CLOVER Japanese symbol of autumn.

BUSHEL Chinese name for the seven principal stars in Ursa Major, commonly called Big Dipper in English. See Ursa Major.

BUSHYASTA Zoroastrian yellow demon of laziness and plague. Evil demon which causes men to sleep and neglect their religious duties.

BUSIRANE In Spenser's Faerie Queene an enchanter typifying unrestrained amorous passion.

BUSIRIS Mythical king of Egypt. To avert famine he sacrificed all strangers who landed on his shores to the gods. He seized Heracles, who broke his chain, and killed the inhospitable king.

BUSK Among Muskogean Creek Indians a festival at the maturing of the maize and beginning of the New Year, hence a rejuvenation or resurrection rite. First fruits are cast into the fire as offerings, old utensils are destroyed, dances and purificatory ceremonies are performed. All crimes, except murder, are forgiven. During the celebration the sexes are taboo to one another and all fast until the festival ends with a bathing, feast, and merry-making, the brewing of medicine, and the offering of tobacco to the four cardinal points, suggesting the death of the old year and the birth of the new throughout the world's quarters. A corruption of puskita, meaning fast.

BUSKIN Anciently worn by noblemen, thus denotes decency of behavior and gesture. Worn by classical Greek tragic actors with heels attached to elevate their stature, and called cothurnus; thus symbolic of drama and tragedy. In ancient Rome used in the sanctification of kings. Byzantine emperors wore purple buskins when crowned; the Celts wore gold; the Spanish wore crimson. To be crimson-stained was to be a sacred or oak king, i. e. maimed king as Adonis or Tammuz. The color crimson or scarlet came from the kern oak; gold symbolized the sun-deity; purple was emblematic of royalty. The buskin served to protect the sacred foot of a maimed-god, that is the god forced to limp because of emasculation. See emasculation, hobbling.

BUSO Philippine one-eyed evil spirit who eats the dead.

BUTES (1) In Greek mythology an Argonaut who could not resist the sirens and jumped from the ship Argo into the water; thus a man who cannot resist an alluring woman. (2) Roman bee-master, son of the North Wind.

BUTO (BOUTO) (1) Egyptian deity of primal darkness. Nurse of Bubastis and of Horus. A serpent-goddess, chief goddess of the north; sometimes portrayed as a human figure with a hawk head. By the Greeks identified with Leto. (2) Japanese ox-headed king who passed through three cycles of existence. When ruler of the stars he traversed earth to descend to the undersea dragon palace in search of a wife. On his journey he asked shelter of Kotan, king of Southern India, who closed his gates to him. Returning from his marriage Buto made war on Kotan, cutting his body into five pieces and slaughtering his people. An aspect of Susa-no-wo, sea and storm god. As plague-protector called Gozu-Tenwo. Parallels Gava-Griva.

BUTSUDAN Japanese Buddhist household shrine containing the ihai or list of household dead. Parallels the Mitamaya.

BUTTER Dream significance, excellent omen for material success. Smear on doors by the Lapps after the darkness of winter to honor the first rays of the sun as it appears on the horizon. A fertility rite.

BUTTERCUP September 18 birthday flower symbolizing childishness, ingratitude, mockery, riches, spite. In occult sciences the sun plant; supposedly acts against stomach troubles and calms frantic and melancholy persons.

BUTTERFLY Psyche, soul, in contrast to the worm, which typifies the body. Symbol of felicity, frivolity, gaiety, love, pleasure, resurrection. Ascent to immortality. Dream significance: inconstancy. Originally, flutter-by. Compare chrysalis, egg. Algonquin creator of the south wind. See Michabo. In Buddhism symbol of Sakyamuni, the all-wise. In China called hu tieh, symbol of conjugal felicity and joy. Expresses hope for an old age, as its name suggests that of one who has lived to be over eighty. Compare cat. Among Chippewa Indians signifies south. In Christianity typifies Easter Day, resurrection of Christ. In Japan typifies tiny fairies; emblematic of fragile beauty, gratitude, lover of flowers. Crest of the Taira clan. Compare Bugaku. In Mexico soul of the dead; emblem of the fluttering flame. Siberian form of witches. Ancient Scottish fire-god. Scotch names are teine-de (fire of god) and deadlan-de (brightness of god).

Black butterfly in flight.
Flight of melancholy.

Gray butterfly. Finno-Ugric soul-fly. One of the forms the soul of a dead or sleeping person takes when it leaves the body. Compare bat.

BUTTERFLY- ORCHIS August 16 birthday flower with sentiment domestic quiet; gaiety.

BUTTERFLY-WEED In the language of flowers: Let me go.

BUZUR-KURGALA In Babylonian mythology sailor appointed by Pir-na-pisitim to be captain of the ark that weathered the deluge.

BUZZARD In American Indian lore death. See Hus brothers.

BWANA In African stories boss or master.

BWBACHOD Scotch household sprites.

BYAMEE New South Wales creator deity. In a drought myth Byamee's benevolence is shown. Two water monsters swallowed his two wives and consumed all the water in the water hole (world-pool) in which the women had been bathing. Byamee spared the monsters when they released the water and the women.

BYAT TA Indo-Chinese royal runner famed for his speed. A wind spirit. Father of one of the deified Shwe Pyin Nyi-naung, which see.

BYBLIS Roman water nymph in love with her brother. After pursuing him unsuccessfully through many lands she hung herself. According to Ovid's Metamorphoses she transformed into a well.

BYBLUS (BYBLOS) Ancient Phoenician city; once principal center for the worship of Adonis, who supposedly was born there.

BYELBOG Slavic white or beneficent god; giver of light. He travels only by day, leads wanderers out of dark forests, bestows wealth and fertility, and helps the reapers at harvest.

BYGGVIR (BEYGGVIR) In Norse mythology servant of Frey. A barley god related to Pekko, Finno-Ugric barley god.

BYLEIPT (BYLEIPTER, BYLEIST)
In Norse mythology brother of Lopter (Loki). Name meaning dwelling destroyer or raging flame.

BYRGIR (BYRGER) In Norse mythology well at which Hyuki and Bil (see) received the song mead.

BYRLE Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning cup bearer.

BYRON Masculine name from a family and place name in Britain, and from the Celtic, meaning clear discerner.

BYRR In Norse mythology a name of Thjasse signifying wind.

C

C Third rate, third of a series. Among gnostics the crescent moon, the great sea-mother, and phonetically identical with sea. Occult significance: a vivifying force denoting intellectual qualities and self-expression; its period is for three years. Character traits: energetic, excellent mimics, inclined toward exaggeration, musical, visionary. Numerical value three. Physical weak spot: throat. Planetary correspondence: Venus or Earth. Symbolic correspondence: action. Tarot correspondence: Empress.

Musical tone of summer, first or key note of the natural or C major scale, third note in the A minor scale. In ancient Egypt emblem of Sin. Among Hebrew cabalists character trait is active. In low form traits are: inactive, lacking in concentration, vacillating. Roman notation 100; with a dash over it 100,000. Originally encircled dot; when changed to C regarded initial of Latin centum. Parallels Egyptian hieroglyph throne (also related to G), Greek gamma, Hebrew gimel (camel), Irish coll (hazel tree). See Alphabet Affiliations; Dominical Letters.

CABALL (CABAL, CAVALL)

Hound which aided King Arthur in his capture of the boar Twrch Trwyth (Porcus Troit). The hound is said to have left a mark of its foot on a stone near Builth (probably Builth-Wells in Wales). The horse of King Arthur also was called Cavall.

CABBAGE September 19 birthday flower symbolizing gain, profit. Emblem of the self-willed. Resolves into ac-ab-aj, i. e. mighty orb or sun. Also called cole, which resolves into ak-ol, i. e. great god.

CABHA Hebrew name for Cinderella, meaning Aurora.

CABIRI (CABEIRI, KABEIROI)

Literally, mighty ones. Seven Phrygian deities corresponding to the seven heavenly bodies worshiped by ancients, i. e. sun, moon, and planets. The Cabiri were sons of Sydyk and brothers of Esmun, and worshiped as fertility deities. They were spared in the deluge, but separated from Esmun. The Greeks adopted them as agricultural gods, connecting their rites with fire and worshiping them as a group of three or four, identifying them as sons of Hephaestus and master workers in metal as well as nature deities. Mariners called upon them for protection at sea. Also identified with the Corybantes, Curetes, and Dioscuri, as well as with Demeter, Hecate, Persephone, and Rhea. The Cabiria or Cabiric mysteries at Samothrace were second only to the Eleusian mysteries. Roman antiquarians identify them with Penates. Probably a counterpart of Hindu Kubera.

CABLE TOW In Freemasonry band of affection uniting the whole fraternity. Equates with Lug's chain and the threefold cord worn by priests in the East and West.

CACCE-JIELLE Russo-Lapp water dweller. Evil spirit who drags people to death. Sometimes appears as a man, sometimes as a woman. Also called Vodyanoy.

CACCE-OLMAI Lapp water man; god of fishing who brings fish to the net or line. ■ he does not receive proper sacrifice, he harms the fisherman.

CACHIMANA Among Orinoco Indians great good spirit of harvest and seasons; opposes Iolokiamo, an evil deity.

CACHOLONG Gem with the sentiment: I am not ambitious.

CACIA Greek abstract divinity of vice; opposed to Areta, virtue.

CACIQUE A chief or king among Taino Indians.

CACODAEMON Occult evil spirit. A name given to the twelfth house of heaven, from which only evil prognostics proceed.

CACTUS January 3 birthday flower with the sentiment ardent love. In the language of flowers: I burn. Symbolizes grandeur, warmth. Emblem of the state of New Mexico.

Cactus beer. Used ceremonially by Mexican Indians to obtain the blessed state which to them was supremely religious.

Cactus and eagle. Emblem of modern Mexican republic.

Sahuaro cactus. Emblem of the state of Arizona.

CACUS (CAECIUS, KAKIOS, KAKOS) Roman robber giant, son of Vulcan. Three-headed and flame-breathing, he lived on the Aventine, where Rome now stands. When Heracles passed with the cattle of Geryon, Cacus stole several, dragging them down to his cave by their tails backwards. Heracles was unable to trace them and was about to go on his way when he heard their lowing. He entered the cave and slew Cacus with his club. Thus the sun (Heracles) released clouds or fertile rain (cows) from the dark skies (cave). The flames sent off by Cacus were flashes of lightning preceding a storm. Contrary currents blow at different elevations, thus clouds (cows) appear to be going against the wind or backwards. Cacus and a sister Caca were a pair of aboriginal Italian fire gods worshiped somewhat like Vesta to whom a Greek story became attached. Dante made Cacus a centaur. Cacus resembles the Hindu Sarama.

CADELL Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning war defense.

CADI Eastern title meaning great A or aleph.

CADMUS (KADMOS) (1) Greek masculine name from the Semitic word Kedem (East), signifying man from the East, also who adorns. (2) In Greek mythology son of Agenor and Telephassa, brother of Cilix, Europê, and Phoenix. He went in search of his sister Europê, who had been abducted by Zeus, and discovered her at Delphi, but there an oracle instructed him to follow a heifer outside the shrine and establish a city on the spot where it lay down to rest. Thus Cadmus, a sun hero, must travel on across the sky. The cow chose the site of Thebes in Boeotia. Before Cadmus was able to sacrifice the animal to Athene, he was forced to fight a dragon offspring of Ares (drought). He killed the dragon and a storm followed. Cadmus sowed the earth with the dragon's teeth, and a harvest of armed men, the Spartoi (clouds of gloom), ancestors of the Spartans, sprang up. The men killed one another, leaving five to become the ancestors of the Thebans. For slaying the descendant of a god Cadmus was forced to become a bondman. After eight years of servitude Ares forgave him, and Cadmus became king of Thebes. He introduced the sixteen-letter Phoenician alphabet to his people, and married Harmonia, a daughter of Ares and Aphrodite. The jealous Hephaestus fashioned a beautiful necklace and veil, coveted by all who saw it, fatal to all who owned it, and presented it as a wedding gift to Harmonia. Cadmus and Harmonia had one son, Polydorous, and four daughters, Agave, Autonoe, Ino, Semele. Pentheus, a grandson, revolted and deprived Cadmus of his throne, whereupon he and Harmonia were changed into dragons (earth deities) and carried off to Elysian fields. The revolt of Pentheus fulfilled the prophecy connected with the wedding gifts, which typified the course of the seasons; the beautiful verdure forged by Hephaestus was doomed to decay and die. As a sun deity Cadmus was a giver of letters, giver of the light by which we see and learn. An inventor of letters he resembles Fuh-hi and Palamedes. A first man and founder of a people, he resembles Deucalion. A sower of dragon's teeth, he resembles Susa-no-wo.

Cadmean letters. Greek alphabet.

Cadmean victory. A costly victory; victory which ruins or is fatal to the victor.

CADUCEUS Herald's staff or wand, which magically aids or brings about birth, commerce, eloquence, good conduct, industry, healing, medicine, peace, power, speed, truce. A phallic symbol, comparable to the crux ansata and the lingyoni. An attribute of divine messengers, emblematic of ambassadors. In middle ages instrument of the fool or jester. Developed from the scarab and associated with the trisula. Probably an early representation of serpent-tree-water symbolism. Commonly represented as a rod surmounted by wings with two serpent's twined about it. The two serpents represent the male and female in amatory mood, the posture of generation, thus a symbol of copulation and conception. The rod also is understood to symbolize power; the serpent, wisdom; the wings, activity and dispatch. As a bident typified divine duality, the male-female principles, the life force. Compare trident. In the tarot deck represented by the club suit. The word resolves into ca (great A) + duce (the leading light). In Assyria and Babylon symbol of fertility and life; emblem of Ea, Ishum, Ningishzidda. Attribute of the Egyptian Serapis and Thoth. In ancient Greece, the caduceus of Asclepius was a staff to symbolize the physician moving from house to house. That of Hermes was a wonder-working scepter or wand, as was that of Iris. Hermes' wand originally was an olive branch, the gift of Apollo, which he received in exchange for the seven-stringed lyre. Hermes' caduceus magically caused stones to move, produced wealth, made friends of enemies and lulled the tired to slumber or roused the sleeping. In Roman mythology, emblem of Mercury, god of commerce and thievery.

Caduceator. Mercury as messenger of the Roman gods with the caduceus or magician's rod.

CADWALLADER Masculine name from the Welsh, meaning arranger of battles.

CAEL In third of Finian cycle of Gaelic legends husband of Credhe, whose lament for the champion after his death in the battle of Ventry, is one of the most beautiful passages of ancient Irish literature.

CAELESTIS Roman tutelary goddess of Carthage, whose worship as Dea Caelestis, Septimius Severus introduced. Also worshipped as Juno Caelestis and Tanit.

CAELIAN One of the seven hills on which Rome is built.

CAELUM Constellation known as the Graving Tool or Sculptor's Tool.

CAENA-MAERGH Persian monster of evil. Corresponds to Ziz.

CAER (1) In Irish legend a daughter of Ethal Ambuel of Uaman in Connaught. She appeared to Oengus in dreams until he became sick for love of her. He had the country searched, but when he found her home she had disappeared. Then the discovery was made that every year as soon as summer was over she became a swan maiden and with attendant swans she lived on a lake called Dragon Mouth. Oengus pursued her, and she agreed to marry him if he too would become a swan. They lived in his sid when in human shape and on Dragon-Mouth Lake when in swan form. Typifies the changing seasons. See swan maidens, also beast marriages. (2) In Britain a city or fortress; seat of a ruler. Word yields ak-ar, i. e. Great Fire.

CAER BEDOIN Brythonic sacred fire kept burning continually in a temple at Caer Bedoin (City or Seat of Bath), hence a site of fire or sun worship.

CAER GWYDION Literally, Seat-of-Gwydion, i. e. the tracks he left in the heavens, the Milky Way.

CAERLEON (CAERLLEON)

A town in what is now Monmouthshire, England, on the river Usk. The seat of King Arthur's Round Table. From the Latin, the name means Heart-of-Leon (Lion); from the Welsh, it means city or seat-of-Legions. Also known as Carduel (Cardoil), which resolves into care, heart, or hinge of God.

CAERLUD Seat of Lud; early Welsh name for London.

CAERMEMPHRIC Seat of Mem; original name of the city of Oxford.

CAER SIDI One of the names of the Brythonic otherworld. The wind-swirled heavens, a delightful realm of the dead and of gods. A strong-doored, four-square lofty castle or fortress of glass, manned by dumb, ghostly sentinels; abode of the Perfect One. It spun around so that no one might find its entrance, which was a dark door on the side of a slope. The castle was pitch dark except for the twilight made by the lamp burning before its circling gate. Feasting and revelry went on inside, and it contained the choicest of riches, the pearl-rimmed caldron of nine British pythonesses, so that oracles might be sent forth. The castle turned with greater speed than the swiftest wind, and its walls were lined by archers who shot so vigorously no armor could withstand their unfalling arrows (spikes or spokes of the zodiac, spears of kindling lights of the Sun). A region in Annwfn paralleling Avalon. Sometimes identified as an island paradise or as Corona Borealis, to which the souls of dead kings retired. In Grail legends, described as the Sacred Chalice or Holy Grail. A universal Axis or Omphalos equating with the Round Table. Caer Sidi resolves into ak-ar-si-di, i. e. seat of resplendent fire (sun). The word sidi compares with sidyll, i. e. spinning-wheel or omphalos. Caer Sidi or Revolving Castle survives in modern Britain in Easter maze dances. In England called Troy Town Dances; in Wales called caer-droia. Compare cherub, chakra, churning.

Other names of Caer Sidi (Revolving Castle) are: Caer Colur (Gloomy Castle); Caer Golud (Castle of Riches); Caer Ochren (Castle of Shelving Side, referring to its door); Caer Pedryvan (Four-cornered Castle or Four-times Revolving); Caer Rigor (Kingly Castle); Caer Vandwy (Castle-on-High); Caer Vedwyd (Castle of Revelry or Castle of Perfect Ones); Caer Wydyr or Wydr (Glass Castle). Arthur's soul was housed in a glass castle, and the glass castles of Irish, Manx, and Welsh legend are either island shrines surrounded by glassy water or star-island shrines in the night sky.

CAESAR (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning born with hair. (2) Roman general and administrator, assassinated by a group of nobles headed by his friend Brutus. The name survives in Czar and Kaiser.

Caesar's wife must be above suspicion. An expression alluding to the divorce by Caesar of his wife. The name of Pompeia became linked with that of P. Claudius, who was accused of treason. Caesar divorced her, not because he believed her guilty, but because the wife of Caesar must not have suspicion attached to it.

Caesarean section. Children so born are said to possess great strength, the power to find hidden treasures, to see spirits, and the ability to accomplish great feats. Various deities and heroes have been born miraculously from a slit under the arm, in the head, side, or thigh. Among those born in this manner are Athena, Buddha, and Dionysus. The name alludes to the birth of Julius Caesar, who was said to have been cut out of his mother's abdomen.

Caesarine. In Brittany, a name variant of Cinderella.

CAGE Imprisonment. Dream significance (empty) broken marriage; (full) cares passed away.

CAGN (KANG) Bushman creator deity, who made all things. Sometimes he had the form of a mantis, sometimes that of a caterpillar.

CAGOT In the middle ages descendants of the Visigoths, shunned as loathsome; hence an outcast. In modern France a hypocrite or an ultra-devout person is called a cagot.

CAGOULARD A member of a French secret terroristic society. From cagoule, a sort of hood.

CAHORS A town in southern France notorious as a nest of usurers. Dante in Paradiso calls John XXII, whom he regarded an ambitious, avaricious and venal pope, Cahorsins.

CAILLEACH (CAILLIACH) Literally, hag, old wife. Scottish self-created virgin. Great-Mother goddess with a fatherless son. She let loose the rivers, shaped the hills, and waved her hammer over the growing grass.

Personification of the corn spirit. The last sheaf of the harvest was regarded as an embodiment of the corn or field spirit, and was offered to her. With characteristics similar to those of Anu and Ma she imparted power and valuable secrets to men.

CAILLEACH MOR Literally, big old wife. In Scottish tradition ferocious mother-goddess. Sender of south-westerly gales. Storm brewer associated with the first week in April, which is called Cailleach, thus the April hag. Her sons were giants, but she was more powerful than they. Also called Cailleach Bheur, i. e. Old Woman of Beare or Black-faced Mother.

CAIN (1) In Arabic, Christian, and Hebrew tradition eldest son of Adam and Eve, first born of the human race; brother of Abel. In Old Testament account having no recognition of sin and therefore no need for atonement, he offered the fruits of the ground, or the fruits of his labors, to God. Enraged when the Lord accepted the offering of his younger brother, the shepherd Abel, in preference to his own, he murdered Abel, from whom he had learned the art of killing as he watched Abel prepare his sacrifice. Thus Abel was the first to kill, Cain was the first to kill a man. Their quarrel represents the eternal quarrel between husbandman and nomad, death of ignorance at the hands of learning. In the Koran, the brothers are called Kabil (Cain) and Habil (Abel). Kabil was born with a twin sister named Aclima; Habil's twin sister was Jumella. Adam proposed that Kabil marry Jumella and Habil marry Aclima. Kabil objected to this arrangement and Adam proposed the question be referred to God by means of a sacrifice. When God rejected Kabil's sacrifice, He signified His disapproval of Kabil's marriage to his own twin sister, and in a jealous rage Kabil killed Habil.

For his crime Cain was banished from society; he suffered physical hardships and privation and became a fugitive. He withdrew to the land of Nod, East of Eden. There he eventually founded a city called Enoch, after his son. With the invention of boundaries and measures and the building of walls, the freedom of mankind was destroyed. The killing of Abel suggests the seasonal death of the fertility king; the soil is barren when the king is dead. Although Cain is variously described as the first jealous man, the first traitor to his kin, the first fratricide, the first fugitive, the first founder of a city, his legend incorporates the elements of a light or season myth. When told that he must wander across the earth, Cain's statement, "... it shall come to pass that everyone that findeth me shall slay me," suggests the recurring death of phases of light (or darkness) which are condemned to perpetual movement across the sky. The name Cain yields Great One A. A as primal cause may mean the abyss, darkness, or sun. Abel yields Ball A. Thus the conflict may have been between the morning and evening sun or the spring and winter sun, or it may have been between light and darkness. The descendants of Cain are acknowledged to be the first of a line of great culture heroes, including Jabal, Jubal, Tubal-Cain. As the builder of the first city, Cain resembles Romulus. See Abel, shepherd.

(2) In Christian history a 2nd Century gnostic sect which venerated Cain, who, they claimed derived his existence from the superior power, whereas Abel derived his from the inferior power. The sect interpreted the action of Judas as that of one who sacrificed that which was dear to himself (Jesus) for the benefit of mankind, one who recognized what had to be done if the world were to survive. Thus the crucifixion of Christ was necessary for the course of the seasons, the maiming of the fertility king, i.e. cutting of crops being necessary for rebirth.

Brand of Cain. The stigma of a fugitive or outlaw.

Caina. In Dante's Inferno, the abode of traitors to kindred. It is the first concentric ring of the Ninth Circle, and Dante places here those who have done violence to their kin, also called Cain's place.

Cain-colored beard. A dull yellow or sandy-red beard. In Christian art used to symbolize traitor, as the beards of Cain and Judas were supposedly of such a color. Shakespeare uses the expression, but sometimes it is printed cane-colored.

Curse of Cain. Eternal wandering.

CAINTIGERN Feminine name from the Erse, meaning fair lady.

CAIPORA Brazilian Indian gigantic spirit of the forests; bringer of ill-luck.

CAIRBE (CAIRPE) (1) In Irish legend son of Ogma. Bard of the Tuatha De Danann, he called on Bres, who insulted him by giving him lodgings in a small dark hut without fire and furniture, except for a mean table, on which he was supplied three cakes of dry bread for dinner. The next morning, instead of uttering a panegyric on his host, he recited a satire, the first written in Ireland, relating how he had been received. This constituted a blemish, and Bres was forced to abdicate. In the war against the Fomors brought on by the abdication of Bres, Cairbe sang satires which had the effect of curses, and brought about the defeat of Bres. Probably a wind deity. (2) Son of Cormac mac Art. One of the great heroes of Irish legend. He exterminated the Fianna at the battle of Gabhra, where he killed Oscar, Fionn's grandson, and was killed by him. Like Arthur and other legendary heroes, he presumably will rise again.

CAIRIMA In Persian epic brother of Airya and Tura. Legendary progenitor of the Sarmatians, an ancient people of southern Russia from whom the modern Slavs have sprung. Also called Salm.

CAIRN (CARN, KARN) Literally, heap. In ancient Britain a heap of stones or mound erected as an altar for sun worship, to indicate a cache, or as a tomb. Sometimes chambered. Often found to contain implements, etc. Word yields ak-ar-en, i.e. great fire one. A generic term for a barrow or hill. Carnac, the ruins of a rock-temple in Brittany, appear to be older and more primitive than the temple of Karnac in Egypt.

Cairngorm. A stone popular in Scotland, usually set in silver. It carries the sentiment home-sickness.

CAITYA Buddhist reliquary or shrine. The supa which contains sacred relics. A non-tantric symbol of Abhedha, Kubera, Maityeya, Nagarjuna.

CAIUS Masculine name from the Latin, meaning rejoiced in. In Shakespeare's King Lear, Caius is the assumed name of the Earl of Kent when attending King Lear, after Goneril and Regan refused to entertain their aged father, hence a faithful follower. In Merry Wives of Windsor, the French physician. Shakespeare probably alluded to John Caius, a noted 16th Century English physician, founder of Caius College, Cambridge.

CAKE Anciently a deity offering, a form of ceremonial food used as a burial gift, mystic food for participating in divine power. A sweet, a festive food, eaten at birthday, wedding and other celebrations. Compare bread. Dream significance: family festivity or pleasant surprise. A Buddhist holy food called tormā. In Christian tradition, the host, the body of Christ, as hot-cross bun. Martyrdom, sacrifice. Among ancient Egyptians, Hebrews and others, a burial and deity offering. In Hebrew tradition, the eating brings divine life or salvation. See shewbread. In Lithuania, used for prophecy.

Bride cake. In medieval England, the bridegroom was not permitted to kiss the bride until after he had eaten a bride cake. A fertility rite.

Cakes and ales. Same as skittles and beer. Luxuries.

Cake idol. Substitution for human sacrifice. Eaten usually at rites celebrating fertility to signify the eating of the body of the deity. Source of ginger and other cakes in the form of animals and humans eaten especially at yule festivals.

Land of cakes. Scotland, because of its oatmeal cakes.

Salt cake. Ancient Greek sacrificial food.

Take the cake. Carry off the award or prize. Anciently cakes were given as prizes, but the expression probably alludes to the cake-walk which originated in southern United States. Compares with the expression bring home the bacon.

You can't eat your cake and have it too. You cannot serve God and Mammon; You cannot spend your money and keep it.

Your cake is dough. Your expectation or plans miscarried; your project failed.

CAKRA Buddhist disk or wheel representing the cycle of existence or time, the eternal law, the evolution of the year. A non-tantric symbol of Maitreya, San-dui, Sitatapatra, Tshans-pa, Vairocana, Yama. In Tibet called k-or-lo. See bhavackramudra.

CAKRASAMVARA In Buddhism, sublime happiness; he who adds luster to the cycle of existence. His sakti is Vajravahari. In Tibet called bDe-mch-og-dpal-kor-lo-dom-pa or Dem-chho-pal-khor-lo-dom-pa.

CAKRAVARTIN (CHAKRAVARTI)

In Buddhism universal monarch, a description sometimes applied to Sakyamuni as an aspect of an earlier birth.

CALABASH A gourd symbolizing the creative power of nature; storage place for elixir of life.

CALADBOLG In Irish legend magic sword of Fergus; forged in fairyland. Name signifies hard-belly or that which is capable of consuming anything. Compares with Excalibur and with the sword of Susa-no-wo.

CALAIS AND ZETES Heroic twin sons of the wind deity Boreas, and the river nymph Oreithya. They accompanied the Argonautic expedition, i.e. were the winds that helped the magic ship traverse the sky.

CALAKOMANAS Two Pueblo Indian corn-maids or goddesses.

CALAMITY In many parts of the world symbolized by a comet.

CALAMUS Anciently a reed used for arrows, for musical instruments, such as the Pipes of Pan, and for writing implements. In Uncle Remus stories frequently mentioned for its medicinal properties.

CALANDRINO In Boccaccio's Decameron a simpleton who is frequently fooled and made ridiculous.

CALAS One unjustly condemned, alluding to Jean Calas, an 18th Century Calvinist of Toulouse, who was cruelly executed by being broken on the wheel on false murder charges.

CALATHUS A lily-shaped work basket placed by ancient Greeks on monuments as a symbol of maidenhood.

CALATINE Irish legendary wizard who with his twenty-seven sons and all his grandchildren fought Cuchulainn at one time. All were killed. Spirits of darkness. The three sorceress daughters of Calatine avenged these deaths by luring Cuchulainn into battle with Lugaid, who killed Cuchulainn with his own sword.

CALCHAS Priest of Apollo who aided the Greeks in the Trojan war; a seer, a soothsayer, who advised Agamemnon to sacrifice his favorite daughter, Iphigenia to appease Artemis. In some versions of the Troilus legend the father of Cressida.

CALCULUS Literally, pebble. As a mathematical term alludes to the fact that reckoning once was done by means of pebbles. Used as a medical term for stone, as in biliary calculi.

CALDER Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning stony river.

CALDRON (CAULDRON) Pot of the world-mother; container of earth's fertility, provider of re-birth. In middle ages, symbol of witchcraft. In Brythonic and Celtic mythology the caldron usually was located in a land surrounded by sea or in other ways difficult to reach, where wine was plentiful and inhabitants spent their time feasting, playing music, and singing. The caldron, a revealer of oracles, a source of poetic inspiration, as well as a source of regeneration and sacred foods and meads, frequently had a rim of pearls around its edge. The fire beneath it was fanned by the breaths of nine virgins, and it would not cook the food of a coward or a perjurer. Guarded by an underworld deity; a light deity tried to steal it. Thus growth has its inception underground and the sun draws it out. Some noted vessels are: Bran's caldron of renovation; Cerridwen's of knowledge; Gwyddneu's basket, which fed the world; Dagda's undry, giver of plenty; Ogyrfran's caldron, provider of poetic inspiration. Pryderi was the warder a caldron which in later legend became famous as the Grail. See Annwfn, Bran. In Christian tradition, symbol of martyrdom and emblem of Saint Vitus.

CALEB (CAL, CALE) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning bold, a dog. (2) In Old Testament son of Jephunneh, of the tribe of Judah, who was sent with one man from each of the tribes to investigate the land of Canaan. Of the twelve spies sent, only Caleb and Joshua reported favorably and therefore were the only two males of their generation permitted into the Promised Land, the others all perishing in the crossing of the Red Sea. Probably a personification of the Heavenly Dog (Sirius), and implies the necessity of intelligence to the successful quest of salvation. (3) Dryden in Absalom and Achitophel uses the name to stand for Lord Grey of Wark (Northumberland), one of the adherents of the Duke of Monmouth.

CALEDVWLCH The name in the Mabinogion for the sword of King Arthur. Symbolizes the rays of the sun.

CALENDAR A method of dividing time. The alternations of light and darkness gave the solar day, the moon's cyclic changes gave the lunar month, and the periodic motion of the earth around the sun, evidenced by the seasons, gave the solar year. Name derived from Latin kalends, i. e. the first day of every month.

Day: The day has been divided into 24 hours from the earliest times, but different nations adopted different methods both as regards starting and the counting of the hours. The Babylonians began the day at sunrise; the Egyptians and Romans at midnight, a method adopted by most modern peoples; the Jews at sunset. The civil day in most countries is divided into two portions, each of 12 hours, thus the abbreviations A. M. (ante meridiem) and P. M. (post meridiem) to denote the hours before and after noon. Week: A period of 7 days, possibly due originally to the number of planets known to the ancients. Month: Originally meant the time of one revolution of the moon, but has become an arbitrary division of the year, on account of the difference of about 11 days between lunations and the solar year. Year: Time in which the seasons go through their changes or in which the earth completes a revolution around the sun. Length is 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, 46 seconds. The Romans, during the reign of Julius Caesar, taking the astronomical year as 365-1/4 days, invented the Julian calendar, which was altered by Augustus, and the month Sextilis was renamed after him, i. e. August. The Julian calendar continued in use until 1582, when the cumulative error of approximately 11-1/4 minutes amounted to 10 days. The correction was made while Gregory XIII was pope, hence Gregorian calendar. If the present value of the solar year be correct, the error of the Gregorian calendar will amount to only one day in about 3320 years. Before 1752, in England, the legal year began March 25th, the historic year began January 1st. In 1751, Parliament enacted the legal year should begin with January 1, 1752. The astronomical (equinoctial, solar, or tropical) year is the period between two passages of the sun through the same equinox, determining the changing seasons. The Platonic year is a cycle imagined by early Greek and Hindu astronomers, at the end of which all the planets supposedly come into conjunction; identified by some as a complete revolution of the equinoxes, or about 26,000 years. The sidereal year is a period of 365 days, 6 hours, 19 minutes, 9 seconds, in which the sun apparently returns to the same stars. This is 20 minutes, 23 seconds longer than the astronomical (tropical) year, owing to the procession of the equinoxes among the stars. Sothic year was a fixed solar year of ancient Egyptians which consisted of 365 days; so called because it was determined by the heliacal rising of the dog-star. Wandering year; either the lunar or that of 365 days; so called because in the course of time, it will begin successively at each one of the seasons.

The ancient Assyrian calendar consisted of 365 days (366 in leap year), and was composed of 12 months, each of 30 days: Mas-karram, the first day of which corresponds to about modern September 10th, Tekmet, Hadaz, Tahsas, Tarr, Yekatit, Magawit, Miaziat, Genbot, Sanni, Hamle, Nashi, with an additional 5 days known as Pagmen or Quaggimi, observed as holidays. In style, 7 years and 8 months behind the Gregorian, and Easter falls a week later.

For Celtic tree calendar see druidic alphabet under alphabet.

The Chinese calendar is a year composed of 12 months, each having about 29 or 30 days, with an intercalary month added every 30 years, and with New Year falling between January 21st and February 19th, or on the first moon after the sun enters Aquarius.

In the French Revolution, the National Convention began a new era with September 22, 1792, the date of the foundation of the Republic. The year was made of 12 months of thirty days each, Vendemiaire, Brumaire, Frimaire, Nivose, Pluviose, Ventose, Germinal, Floreal, Prairial, Messidor, Thermidor, Fructidor, with five festival days, called Sansculottedes, at the end, consecrated to Virtue, Genius, Labor, Opinion, Rewards. Revolutionary Day was added every fourth year. Napoleon restored the Gregorian calendar in 1806.

In ancient Greece, each state followed its own system, but the year generally was based on lunar notions and alterations were made from time to time to adjust the lunar and solar year. The Attic months were:

Month	No. of days	Approximating to
Gamellion	30	January
Anthesterion	29	February
Elaphebolion	30	March
Munychion	29	April
Thargelion	30	May
Scirophorion	29	June
Hekatombaion	30	July
Metageitnion	29	August
Boedromion	30	September
Pyanepsion	29	October
Maimakterion	30	November
Poseideon	29	December

The Julian calendar is used in modern Greece, as it is in Russia.

The Gregorian calendar, now in use in all Christian countries, except Greece and Russia, consists of 12 months:

Month	Days
January	31
February*	28
March	31
April	30
May	31
June	30
July	31
August	31
September	30
October	31
November	30
December	31

*In leap year, February has 29 days.

The Hebrew calendar is reckoned to start 3760 years and 3 months before the birth of Christ. It consists of 12 months, an additional month intercalated in embolismic years, containing 30 days intercalated, of which 29 belong to Ve-adar. The month Adar, which in ordinary years has 29 days, has 30 days in embolismic years. Each cycle contains 7 embolismic years. The comparison with the Gregorian calendar is only approximate:

No. of month taken in Babylonian Captivity	Month Name	Number of days		Approximate Gregorian Calendar Correspondence
		Ordinary Year	Embolismic Year
1	Nisan or Abib	30	30	April
2	Iyyar or Zif	29	29	May
3	Sivan	30	30	June
4	Tammuz or Tamuz	29	29	July
5	Ab	30	30	August
6	Elul	29	29	September
7	Tisri or Ethanim	30	30	October
8	Hesvan, Marchesvan, or Bul	29*	29*	November
9	Kisleu or Chisleu	30†	30†	December
10	Tebet or Tebeth	29	29	January
11	Sebat	30	30	February
12	Adar	29	30	March
--	Ve-adar 	--	29	--

*One day more if required; † One day fewer if required;

 Additional Adar or intercalary month.

The Hindu calendar divided the year into six seasons: Vasanta, spring or flowery; Grishna, hot; Varsha, rainy; Sarada, sultry, Hemanta, frosty; Sisira, dewy. In time, subdivided in honor of the Lunar and Solar Dynasties. The months begin with Baisakh, which corresponds to the latter part of April and the opening week of May. The others are: Jeth, Asarh, Sravana, Bhadra, Kuar, Kartika, Aghan, Pus, Magh, Phagun or Phalguna, and Chaitra. The intercalary month takes the name of the month after which it is inserted. Bhadra is the month of the birth of Krishna, to whom Sravana and Kartika are also sacred. Phagun is a month of rejoicing, and from Phag, its 8th day, to Poonini, its last day, the festivities resemble the Saturnalia of ancient Rome.

The Mexicans and Yucatan combined an astrological and solar calendar; the first consisting of 13 and the second of 18 periods of 20 days each, or 260 and 360 days respectively. To the latter were added 5 days, making a year of 365 days. Each of the 360 days was dedicated to a deity, the last 5 were not and consequently deemed unlucky. The days of the astrological calendar bore the names of objects. Probably used at votive offerings.

The Moslem calendar reckons time from June 16, 622 A. D., the day following Mohammed's flight from Mecca to Medina. The year consists of 12 lunar months of a mean duration of 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes. A cycle consists of 30 years of which 19 are ordinary years of 354 days each, and 11 are embolismic years with 355 days. The months are:

Month	Days
Muharram	30
Safar	29
Rabiul Awwal	30

Month	Days
Rabiziul Akhir	29
Jumadalula	30
Jumadal Ukhra	29
Rajab	30
Shaban	29
Ramadan	30
Shawwal	29
Zul Qadah	30
Zul Hijjah	29*

*In embolismic years, 30 days.

The earliest form of the Roman calendar is attributed to Romulus. It supposedly was a lunar calendar based on a year of 10 months, totaling 304 days: The ten months were adjusted by intercalation to correct differences between lunar and solar years. Numa intercalated with a month called Mercedinus, which consisted of 22 or 23 days alternately, and inserted every second year. Other changes were made by decemviral legislation. Numa also added two months, February and January, which were inserted between Decemvirs and Martius, but in 452 B. C., the Decemvirs reversed the position of the two months to January and February. That calendar is as follows:

Month	Days
Martius	31
Aprilis	30
Maius	31
Junius	30
Quintilis	31
Sextilis*	30
September	30
October	31
November	30
Decemvirs	30
Januarius	31
Februarius	30

* Later called August.

In 46 B. C., Julius Caesar approved the Julian calendar, by which time was measured by most western nations until the accumulation of error necessitated the establishment of the Gregorian calendar.

CALENDULA Herb symbolizing disquietude.

CALF Childhood, immaturity, innocence; also cowardice. Calf a contraction of ac-al-if, i.e. great lord of life, or ac-aleph, i.e. great or mighty or enduring A, is from the same root as Alps, caliph, calvary. Gothic for calf is kalbo, meaning great lord father. In Chinese New Year festival symbolic of the New Year, the cow symbolizing the Old Year. In Christian art the calf or ox is appropriate to Saint Luke. One of the four celestial animals. Ancient Hebrews looked upon the calf as a clean animal. It was much used in sacrifice. Hindu symbol of early spring, when the floodgates open and fruitful rains (celestial milk) pour down.

Calf love. Youthful fancy or attachment.

Calf skin. A fool, inasmuch as fools and jesters once wore calf-skin coats.

Fatted calf. The best of everything, the choicest animal food.

Golden calf. Worshiped by Jews at Mount Sinai, while Moses was absent on the mount. It had been cast by Aaron from the earrings of the people. Because the idol represented Mammon, a fertility and sun deity of the Syrians, and its worship was attended by orgiastic fertility rites forbidden to the Jews, Jehovah is said to have punished the Israelites with the death of three thousand men. Jeroboam erected two golden calves, sun symbols, one at each extreme of his kingdom, that the ten tribes of Israel might be prevented from going to Jerusalem to worship, and thus coalescing with the men of Judah. Jeroboam is mentioned in the Bible with the brand upon him, "who made Israel to sin."

CALHOUN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning warrior.

CALIBAN One who is fierce, ignorant, low, rude, uncouth, as Caliban in Shakespeare's The Tempest, the deformed, half-human son of the witch Sycorax and slave to Prospero. As ugliest boy in the world, parallels Avagddu.

CALIBURNUS In Brythonic legend sword of King Arthur which had been made in Ireland.

CALIDORE, SIR In Spenser's Faerie Queene the most courteous of all knights. He typifies Sir Philip Sidney. His adventure is against the Blatant Beast, whom he muzzles, chains, and drags to Faerie Land. The name is from the Greek and signifies beautiful, gifted.

CALIFORNIA Emblem: golden poppy; motto: Eureka; nicknames: El Dorado, Golden, Grizzly Bear. Name said to have been taken from the Spanish 'calida formax' (hot furnace).

CALIGA Roman hob-nailed boot worn by the common soldier. Also a bishop's stocking.

Caligate. A soldier wearing caligae; also a coward.

Caligula. The nickname of the Roman Emperor Gaius Caesar, who ruled from 37-41 A.D. In his youth he wore heavy military shoes called caligae, which brought about his nickname. He was a cruel and incestuous epileptic, and is said to have wished the Roman people had one head, that he might decapitate it at one blow. He was assassinated before his thirtieth birthday.

CALIPH (CALEPH, CALIPHA, KHALIF) Eastern title meaning great chief. Word contracts into calf (see), and yields Great A or Aleph.

CALLA-LILY February 28 birthday flower with the sentiment magnificent beauty. Symbol of beauty and maidenly modesty. See lily for further symbolism.

CALLI Mexican for house; regarded as a symbol for fire, perhaps because a house or hut is warm. Resolves into ac-al-li, i.e. great god everlasting.

CALLIOPE (KALLIOPE) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning beautiful voice. (2) Greek Muse loved by Apollo, and by him the mother of Orpheus. The most honored of the Muses she presided over epic poetry and heroic song. Usually represented holding a stylus with a slate or wax tablet on her knee. (3) One of the nine daughters of King Pieros, who challenged the Muses to a contest and were worsted. Calliope became so insolent the Pierides were changed to magpies. (4) A musical instrument consisting of a set of steam whistles played from a keyboard. It has a harsh sound.

CALLIRHOE, (KALLIRHOE)

In Greek mythology wife of Chrysaor, mother of Geryon. A beautiful nymph who was the mother of a monster.

CALLISTO Literally, fairest. In Greek mythology daughter of Lycaon, King of Arcadia; huntress in the train of Artemis. As an attendant of the virgin-goddess she was forbidden to marry, but Zeus in the form of the huntress-goddess Artemis won her affection, and she became the mother of Arcas. Hera, jealous, changed Callisto into a bear and Artemis, not recognizing her, killed her. Zeus thereupon placed her among the stars as the Great Bear (Ursa Major). In another version Arcas, her son, grown into a huntsman, was about to slay her, when Zeus lifted them both into the sky as Arctos (collective name of Ursa Major and Ursa Minor). Probably an early or local form of Artemis.

CALPE Ancient name of Gibraltar, one of the Pillars of Heracles, the other being the promontory opposite in Africa, anciently called Abyla. In one legend, the two were originally one mountain, which Heracles tore in two; in another legend, Heracles piled up each mountain separately and poured the sea between them.

CALUMET North American Indians ceremonial pipe used for sacrificial tobacco in ritual directed to the four quarters, to heaven and to earth, and in other religious and magical ceremonies. Smoked in the ratification of solemn engagements and treaties; sometimes called peace pipe. A stranger was offered the pipe as a mark of hospitality and goodwill; to refuse it was an act of hostile defiance. Also smoked to symbolize war. Name applied by French Canadians, from the Latin calamus (reed).

CALVARY Latin translation of the Greek Golgotha, derived from the Hebrew Gulgolet, meaning skull or place of a skull. The name given to the place of Jesus' crucifixion; hence a place of martyrdom. According to one legend, the skull of Adam was preserved here. The word calvary probably derives from the same root as Alps, calf, caliph.

CALVIN Masculine name from a Roman name Calvus, meaning bald.

CALYCANTHUS Shrub symbolizing benevolence, compassion.

CALYDONIAN BOAR HUNT In Greek mythology when Oeneus, king of Calydonia, failed to sacrifice to Artemis, the goddess punished him by sending a savage boar to destroy his crops and ravage his lands. A band of heroes collected to hunt the boar, which was wounded by Atalanta and killed by Meleager. The boar typifies drought killed by fertilizing sun.

CALYPSO (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning I conceal. (2) In Greek mythology daughter of Atlas, goddess of the island Ogygia. Falling in love with Odysseus, she offered him immortality and eternal youth if he would remain with her. He stayed with her for seven years and then, yearning for home, left on a raft. The island represents a paradise on which Odysseus, the sun, was shipwrecked on his journey through the sky. Analogue of Avalon. Those who attempt to identify Ogygia as an actual island, say it is Gozo, near Malta. (3) In Ulysses by James Joyce she is represented by Martha Clifford. (4) A rambling topical song, originated in Trinidad.

CAM (CAN, KEM) Gypsy for sun. Cognate with Kama, kami, khama, khan.

CAMACHO In Cervantes' Don Quixote the richest of men. He makes elaborate preparations for his wedding with Quiteria, the fairest of women, but as the bridal party is on its way, Basilius cheats him of his bride. Thus Camacho's wedding has become an aphorism for a vast but futile expenditure of money and time.

CAMAEAN SIBYL The most famous of all Greek prophetesses. Granted by Apollo a life of as many years as she had grains of sand in her hand, she failed to ask for eternal youth and shrivelled to nothing. In her hideous agony, she prayed for death; thus one who wishes for death.

CAMARA Fly-whisk; Buddhist emblem of authority. Symbol of tantric manifestations. Emblem of arhats, Vajriputra, Vanavasi.

CAMARINA A lake in Sicily, which was a source of malaria to the inhabitants. When they consulted Apollo about draining it, they received the answer, "Do not disturb." In spite of this, the lake was drained, and the enemy marched over the bed of the lake and plundered the city. The proverb Don't meddle with Camarina (Ne moveas Camarinam), applies to those who remove one evil and, in doing so, give place to a greater evil. Compares with: let well enough alone; Don't kill the small birds or you will be devoured by insects; one pest may be a safeguard against a greater one. A similar Latin phrase is Anagrin movere.

CAMAXTLI Mexican thunder, tornado, and war god. A name of Tezcatlipoca. In this form he is represented as the father of Quetzalcoatl by Chimalman. Also called Yoamaxtli, i.e. the garb or mantle of night.

CAMAZOTZ Mexican and Guatemalian malignant deity. Dreaded and propitiated; worshiped in vampire form. A death-bat.

CAMBALO'S RING In Chaucer's Squire's Tale Cambalo was the second son of Cambuscan. The ring, a gift from his sister Canace, had the virtue of healing wounds. Typifies fertility.

CAMBEL In Spenser's Faerie Queene challenger of every suitor to his sister's hand. He overthrows all except Triamond, who marries her. Character adopted by Spenser from Cambalo in Chaucer's Squire's Tale.

CAMBER In British legend the second son of Brute. Wales became his portion. Probably connected with its ancient name of Cambria.

CAMBREMER, MME. DE In Proust's Remembrance of Things Past, a fashionable woman who makes an elaborate show of her interests in art, literature, and music.

CAMBRIA The land of the Cimbri or Cymry; an ancient name of Wales.

CAMBUSCAN In Chaucer's Squire's Tale, King of Sarra in Tartary. Model of all royal virtues. His wife is Elfeta; his two sons are Algarsife and Cambalo; his daughter is Canace. The King of Arabia and India sends Cambuscan a magic steed of brass. If the owner whispers the name of the place to which he wishes to go in the horse's ear, mounts the horse, and turns a pin set in the ear, the horse carries him to any spot on earth between sunrise and sunset. In the evening the horse vanishes until it is again required; suggesting the horse is the sun.

CAMBYSES Persian king who is said to have slain the sacred bull of Memphis (Apis) and to have turned mad as a consequence. In drama, he appears as pompous and ranting; his name has become proverbial for bombastic language.

CAMEL Docility, indefatigable perseverance, prudence, salaciousness, slyness, sobriety, stupidity, submission, transportation. Dream significance: hard work; (black) murder or violent death. Cognate with Camelot and with Carmel. In Arabia, a term of endearment. Buddhist animal of the goddess of winter. In Christianity, symbolizes temperance. In the East a carrier, beast-of-burden called the land-ship, ship-of-the-desert. An emblem of dignity and royalty. Hebrew for camel is gimel, which is also the third letter of the Hebrew alphabet. Represents the three-fold or holy mount.

Camel-driver of Mecca. Mahomet.

Camel's hair dress. Christian robe of penitence and royalty; dress of John the Baptist.

Camel of Saleh. One of the ten animals in the Moslem heaven.

Camel through the needle's eye. The impossible, alluding to the proverb, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of needle." In the Talmud, an elephant is substituted for the camel.

CAMELLIA (1) Feminine name alluding to the flower. (2) Excellence, fragility, loveliness. In Japan, an unlucky flower, signifying a beautiful life brought suddenly to an end, from the manner in which the flower drops bodily from its stem. Also likened to the falling of a human head under the sword. Korean symbol of steadfastness. A wedding flower.

Red camellia. Innate worth.

White camellia. Perfect loveliness.

CAMELOPARDALIS Constellation known as the Giraffe and also as Noah's Ark. So called because the giraffe is formed like a camel and spotted like a pard.

CAMELOT (1) A faker, hawker, newsboy; formerly a thief. (2) Wonder-city of King Arthur. A city of spires, located on the slopes of a steep mountain. From the gate-tower of its magic portal an arm extended with a sword, which was as high and as upright as the castle itself (rays of the sun). Here, Arthur held his court. In attempts to identify it as an actual place, it is said to have been located in Brittany, Cornwall, Scotland, and Wales. A name cognate with camel and Carmel.

CAMENAE (CARMENAE, CARMENTES, CASMENAE) Roman prophetic nymphs of fountains and springs, particularly of the springs near Porta Capena, where vestal virgins drew water. Their leader was Carmenta, who sang a child's destiny at birth. Egeria, one of their number, also was well-known. Sometimes identified with the Greek Muses. Name in the form Carmenae connects with carmen (song).

CAMEO Originally carved to show the head of a chosen deity and to act as a charm. A cameo ring carved with two or more profiles supposedly will bring wealth through inheritance or uncover a buried treasure or long-hidden will. A pope's insignia.

CAMERON Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning crook-nose.

CAMILLA (1) Feminine name from the Latin, signifying attendant at a sacrifice. (2) Roman virgin-queen of the Volscians; one of the swift-footed attendants of Diana. In Virgil's Aeneid, she is described as so swift, she runs over a field of corn without bending a blade or she makes her way over the sea without wetting her feet, suggesting she either personified the rays of the moon, or was an aspect of breeze. In the conflict between Aeneas and Turnus she aided Turnus and was killed by Aruns. (3) In Dante's Inferno a warrior virgin who fought against the Trojans. (4) In Cervantes' Don Quixote the wife of Anseimo, who tests her fidelity. (5) An order of priests founded by Romulus.

CAMILLE Heroine of the Lady of the Camellias (Dame aux Camellias) by Alexander Dumas fils, when produced on the stage in the United States. A character drawn from the well-known French courtesan Madeleine du Plessis. In the drama she is a beautiful courtesan who gives up the man she has come to love genuinely and goes back to her old round of frivolity because she does not want to ruin the life of Armand Duval, her lover. In Verdi's opera she is also known as Camille; in the novel she was known as Marguerite Gauthier.

CAMILLO In Shakespeare's Winter's Tale a Sicilian lord who unites the lovers Florizel and Perdita. He is commanded by King Leontes to poison Polixenes; instead of doing so he warns Polixenes and flees with him to Bohemia.

CAMLAN Battlefield on which King Arthur received his wounds at the hands of his nephew Mo-

dred, and on which Modred was slain. Only four survived the battle, which put an end to the Knights of the Round Table. One survived because he was so ugly, he was believed to be a devil and no one would touch him; the second survived because he was so beautiful, he was taken for an angel; the strength of the third was so great, no one could resist it; Arthur, himself, was the fourth. After killing Modred, Arthur went to Avalon to be healed; there he fell into a long sleep, awaiting the sound of the trumpet which will warn him that Britain is in danger, and he must rise to save her.

CAMOMILE Flower symbolizing energy in adversity.

CAMORRA A lawless, secret society, organized in Naples, Italy. So called after the blouse worn by its members. Term used for any secret society with lawless or revolutionary aims.

CAMPA White flower with yellow center; in Buddhism emblem of Maitreya. A non-tantric symbol.

CAMPANULA Flower symbolizing adulation. Also called blue-bell.

CAMPASPE In Greek semi-legendary history a beautiful woman, favorite concubine of Alexander the Great. Apelles supposedly modeled his Aphrodite Anadyomene after her; he fell in love with her while reproducing her likeness, and Alexander presented her to him.

CAMPBELL Masculine name from Old French, meaning beautiful field.

CAMPHOR Talisman against disease. In Chinese mythology dispenser of vital power and never-failing source of energy. Attribute of Virgin Mary.

CAMPUS ESQUILINUS In Roman antiquity burial place for the lowest classes just outside the Servian Wall.

CAMPUS MARTIUS Literally, field of Mars. A field on the right bank of the Tiber, where anciently the Romans held elections, games, military drills, etc., hence any field of action. In Old English law the campus was the ground marked out for the combatants in a trial by battle.

CAMROSH Iranian mythic bird which collects the seeds shed from the Gaokerena tree by Simurgh. He conveys the seeds to the place where Tishtrya seizes the water and lets the water with the seeds rain on the world. When Iranians are attacked, the spirit Berejya sends Camrosh to save them. He does so by picking up all non-Iranians as a bird does corn. Compares with Garuda, Phoenix.

CAM-SRIN Tibetan Buddhist war-god; in Sanskrit called Begtse. The Hindu prototype is Karttikeya, son of Siva.

CAMULUS (CAMULOS) Celtic war-god. He possessed an invincible sword, one of the chief treasures of the Tuatha De Danaann. He appears in Gaelic mythology as Cumhal, father of Fionn (Finn), and in British myological history as Coel (Cole), who seized the crown of Britain and spent a short reign in a series of battles. 'Old King Cole,' of the popular ballad, represents the last faint tradition of the Celtic god. He equates with Mars.

CAN Mayan serpent-god. Father of three sons: Aac, a turtle; Cay, a fish; Coh, a leopard; and two daughters: Moo, a macow; and Nieta, a flower. He was founder of the cities Chicken-Itza and Uxmal. His name yields Ac-an, i.e. Great One. Acon was Chaldean for serpent. Allied to khan.

CANAAN In Old Testament the Promised Land, rich with giant grapes, overflowing with milk and honey. Used to indicate any promised land or land of wealth.

Canaanite. The zealous, alluding to those in the Bible who entered the Promised Land.

CANACE In Chaucer's unfinished Squire's Tale a paragon of women; daughter of Cambuscan. The King of Arabia sent her as a birthday present (October 15) a magic mirror and ring. The mirror revealed if any man, on whom she set her heart, would prove true or false; the ring, worn on the thumb, enabled her to understand the language of birds and to converse with them. It also gave the wearer perfect knowledge of the medicinal properties of all roots. Spenser in Faerie Queene continued the story. In his version, Canace was courted by many suitors, but her brother Cambel (Cambalo in Chaucer) challenged each suitor to single combat, until finally Triamond, son of the fairy Agape, emerges the victor, and marries Canace.

CANADA Symbolized by the maple-leaf.

CANAM-LUM Yucatec Serpent-of-the Earth. Successor to Votan. Cognate Can.

CANARY-BIRD A jail-bird. At one time desperate convicts were dressed in yellow; their jails were called cages.

CANARY GRASS Perseverance.

CANATHUS In Greek mythology spring in which Hera bathed each year and became a virgin. See Inachus.

CANCAN Originally a frenzied sun-dance. In 19th century an alluring and daring dance popular in France.

CANCER The Crab, fourth sign of the zodiac. Sun enters when it has reached its highest northern limit, about June 21, and remains until about July 23, when it turns toward the south, and like the crab, the return is sideways. Gate to the second of the Four Astrological Ages, which see. According to astrologists, when the sun is in Cancer, storms are catastrophic and bring famine and locusts. The end of the world by water supposedly will occur when all planets are in Cancer. It is a summer sign, feminine and cold; its quality is unfortunate and wet; it is ruled by the moon. In the cycle of the spiritual in man, the sign of man's memory. Its character traits are mediocrity and reserved; it governs the chest, breast and lungs. Its tarot significance is the Emperor. Represented by two horizontal nines, joined or disjoined, which is considered to be a phallic symbol. According to legend, Juno sent Cancer against Hercules when he combated the Hydra of Lerne. It bit the hero's foot, Hercules killed it, and Juno placed it in the heavens.

CANDACE Greek name of several legendary Ethiopian queens who were ruling sovereigns. The section was not that of Ethiopia at the present time, but located in the region of Upper Nubia, and by the Greeks called Meroe.

CANDAULES In Greek legend, 7th century B. C. king of Lydia, who exposed his naked wife to his officer Gyges, whereupon she induced the latter to murder Candaules. She then married Gyges and he reigned as king. Probably a time myth, the king typifying the sun, Candaules the moon, Gyges a lord of darkness.

CANDELABRUM (CANDELABRA)

The Hebrew candelabrum was probably at one time related to the Egyptian sky-supporting pillars.

Seven-branched candelabrum.

In Christian tradition the seven gifts of the Holy Spirit: counsel, knowledge, peace, piety, strength, understanding, wisdom. In Hebrew tradition the Menorah, typifying the seven celestial bodies, the seven archangels before the throne, i. e. Cassiel (Saturn), keeper of secrets; Gabriel (Moon), spirit of strength; Haniel (Venus), spirit of splendor; Madimial (Mars), spirit of those who make red; Michael (Sun), who is like unto God; Raphael (Mercury), spirit of healing; Zadkiel (Jupiter), spirit of justice. In the Old Testament the six days of creation and the day of rest.

Three-branched candelabrum.

Trinity.

Two-branched candelabrum.

Presence of God; Christ and the church; the two natures of Christ, divine and human.

CANDID Masculine name from the Latin, meaning gleaming white. In Feminine form, Candida.

CANDLE Festivities, inquiry, light, religious devotion, romance, salute to the dead, study. Typifies life and also the stars. Used in fire worship and other sacred rites. As a funeral torch, light of the way, means of purification, protector against demons and evil, the soul. In past times, placed in various parts of the childbirth chamber to cleanse the mother who, after birth, was considered unclean. Used in charms and in divination. The families of many aviators burn candles, believing that as long as the flame does not blow out the aviator is safe. Dream significance: (lighted) birth; (out) death; (wax) birth. See red, white, or yellow candle under the color names.

Christian symbol of sanctuary. The eucharistic candle typifies the coming of Christ; the paschal candle typifies Christ risen. If the large candle formerly used at Christmas Eve festivities blew out before the evening was at an end, the omen was an evil one. The remnants of the candle were kept and used at the celebrator's funeral obsequies.

Burn the candle at both ends.

To overdo in the expenditure of money or time; to waste energy.

He is not fit to hold the candle to another. One who is inferior, alluding to the link-boys who held candles in theatres and other places of amusement.

Seven candles. The seven Christian sacraments.

Three candles. Trinity. In Freemasonry three burning candles, called the Three Lesser Lights, are placed around the altar; one to the east to represent the sun, ruler of the day; one to the west to represent the moon, ruler of the night; one to the south to represent the master of the lodge. North remains the realm of darkness.

Vow a candle to the devil. To propitiate the devil by a bribe as some seek to propitiate the saints in glory by a votive candle.

CANDLEMAS A Celtic festival, which celebrated the quickening of the year, adopted to Christian rites. One of the quarter days on which witches celebrated their sabbaths. In Ireland and Scotland one of the four fire-feast days; Day on which Brigit was honored, celebrating the return of Spring on February 2, which in the United States is called ground-hog or wood-chuck day. See ground-hog day. Christian feast of the Purification of Virgin Mary, when Christ was presented to her in the Temple. In Roman Catholic churches all candles which will be required during the year are consecrated on Candlemas Day. They symbolize Christ as the light of the world or as the light to lead the Gentiles. In ancient Rome candles were burned to scare away evil spirits.

CANDLESTICK See candelabrum.

Candlestick with female form.

Light of wisdom or wisdom in light. Mother goddess in beneficent aspect.

CANDRA (CANDRAMAS) (1) Early Hindu moon god. Portrayed as four-armed in a chariot drawn by numerous horses. (2) A non-tantric Buddhist symbol; the moon. Emblem of Sarvanivaraviskambhin. In crescent form emblem of Nilakantharyavalokitesvara, Samvara, and Simhanadavalokitesvara.

CANDYTUFT Flower symbolizing indifference.

CANE Begardom, lameness, old-age. See rod, staff for additional symbolism.

Gold-headed cane. A mystic wand. Early in United States history, practically every doctor considered a gold-headed cane an important part of a medical outfit, probably a relic of conjuring paraphernalia. The gold head was an emblem of medicinal virtues, frequently hollow to hold something, such as ammonia. The ammonia was held to the doctor's nose when he approached a patient to protect him from noxious exhalations, a relic of the idea that a spirit existed in the head of the cane which provided the owner with extraordinary power. See caduceus, Paracelsus.

CANENTE (CANENS) In Roman mythology daughter of Janus and Venilia. An ocean nymph, wife of Picus. When Circe changed him into a picus (wood-pecker), Canente faded away in grief and became only a singing voice. In some account said to be the wife of Neptune. Also called Salacia.

CANEPHOROS Literally, basket-bearer. In ancient Greece one of the Athenian maidens selected to carry the baskets of sacred utensils in the processions of Athena, Bacchus, Demeter, etc. A frequent subject in Greek art.

CANES VENATICI Constellation the Hunting Dogs held in the leash of Bootes.

CANIDIA Sorceress who casts spells by means of wax dolls. The allusion is to a Neapolitan beloved by the poet Horace. When she deserted him, he held her up to contempt as a sorceress who could by a rhomb or other means unsphere the moon. In time her name meant any witch.

CANIS MAJOR Constellation the Greater Dog containing Sirius, dog of Orion. Dog given to Cephalus by Aurora; the swiftest of his species. Name probably derived from the fact that canine madness is prevalent in the summer season.

Canis Minor. Constellation the Lesser Dog. Dog loved by Diana, goddess of the chase. Faithful dog of Icarus, who revealed to Erigone, daughter of Icarus, the burial place of her father. Also the hound of Actaeon.

CANNE (CANNAE) The village where Hannibal defeated the Romans under L. Aemilius Paulus in 216 B. C. with great slaughter. Called the "field of blood," because of the heavy losses of the Romans. Term used to denote any battle that is the turning point of a great general's prosperity; thus Moscow was the Canne of Napoleon.

CANNEL COAL In Navaho legend jewel of the North.

CANNIBALISM Among primitive peoples kings or tribal chiefs are sacrificed and devoured for the purpose of allowing the tribal members to derive from the flesh and blood the powers and virtues which made the leader great. In ancient Egypt this type of cannibalism was part of the Sed festival. In some societies the warriors captured in battle are eaten. The underlying idea being that, by consuming a part of an adversary, his virtues will be acquired; thus a tribute to the superior courage or mentality of an adversary. Whether the man eaten be a king, priest, or an enemy, the rite is a form of contagious magic, and from the victim's death struggles omens are taken.

Cannibal deity. A man-eating god; cyclone, hurricane, tidal wave, tornado, volcano, whirlwind.

CANNON Destruction, military authority, war. Dream significance: hope unfulfilled. Word derived from canon, Greek and Latin name for a carpenter's rule, hence a decree, law, standard of rule.

CANOE American Indian conveyance of the goddess who had her origin in water.

Canoe paddle. Sacred emblem of the African deity Mukasa.

CANOPIC JAR See under jar.

CANOPUS Second brightest star of the heavens. Located in the constellation Carina.

CANOPY Celestial realm, heaven, paradise, sovereignty. In Buddhism typifies sacred tree under which Buddha received enlightenment; breath of life; sacred lungs of Buddha. The canopy or standard (banner) is one of the Eight Glorious Emblems of Buddhism.

Canopy studded with stars. Deity abode, the heavens, sky.

CANTERBURY BELLS July 21 birthday flower with the sentiment gratitude. Symbol of constancy in adversity.

CANTHARUS A two-handed dish-like libation cup used by the ancient Greeks in Dionysian and other ceremonies. In the Christian church used as a candle holder. The word is from the Greek, meaning drinking cup or sea-fish.

CANTON (1) Heraldic reward for the performance of eminent service. (2) City of rams, from the Chinese legend which relates that five ancient magicians, dressed in garments of five different colors, representing the five directions, and riding rams of five different colors, each bearing in its mouth a stalk of grain having six ears, met in the city of Canton and presented the grain to the people saying, "May famine and dearth never visit your markets."

CANUTE Legendary Danish king who commands the sea to halt as a proof of his power. Possible personification of the sun. See Xerxes.

CAO-BIEN Legendary general, first governor, and later king of Annam, Indo-China. Worshipped as a protector-spirit. Later displaced by Ma-vien, a deluded despot.

CAOILTE MAC RONAN In Irish legend, a bard and warrior. A spirit of wind renowned as the Thin Man, he was so swift of foot, he could overtake the March wind. As an incentive to heroes to hunt a wild boar, a fairy in disguise that was devastating the land, Fionn offered a choice of the women of the land as a prize to the boar's slayer. Caoilte "got the beast killed," and Fionn covered the heads of the women lest Caoilte should choose his wife; the ruse failed.

CAP Protection against the sun. Head covering of a peasant, seaman, sportsman. In mythology frequently described as making a deity invisible, thus a cloud which hides the sun.

Blue cap. The sea.

Cap and bells. Traditional part of a medieval jester's costume; hence a fool's cap. Fool's cap has become the name of a paper which originally was water-marked with the jester's cap and bells. A Christian symbol of martyrs determined to suffer martyrdom gaily or gladly, i. e. "Fools for Christ's sake."

Cap and gown. Scholarship, alluding to the academical costume of a university professor or student.

Cap of Hades. In Greek mythology dog-skin cap obtained by Perseus from the Graiai and worn by him when he slew Medusa. It rendered him invisible. Typifies darkness.

Cap with vary-colored feathers. Fancy, seat of unaccountable actions. Childhood is called cap and feather days.

Considering cap. Judgment, thinking, weighing a problem. In the expression, "I will put on my considering cap," the allusion is to the official cap of a judge, formerly donned when passing any sentence; now worn only when passing a death sentence.

Feather in one's cap. A creditable achievement; something to be proud of.

Horned cap. Sumerian emblem of the war-god. With the horns turned up a Babylonian emblem of divine power. The world mountain; symbol of the triad Anu, Ea, Enlil.

Maintenance cap. A cap of dignity, which anciently in England belonged to the rank of duke. In modern times the fur cap worn by the Lord Mayor of London on days of state. Also the cap carried before British sovereigns at their coronation.

Military cap. Armed authority, war. Dream significance: (putting on) triumph; (taking off) disappointments.

Phrygian cap. Freedom, independence, liberty. The cap was worn by Byzantine soldiers and by the doges of Venice. It appeared on the statue of Athena at Troy, and was an attribute of Mithra. In ancient Rome, when a slave was freed, a small Phrygian cap, usually of red felt, called pilæus, was placed on his head, and he was termed libertinus (freedman). When Saturninus, in 100 B.C., captured the capitol, he hoisted a Phrygian cap on his spear to indicate that all slaves who joined his standard should be free. Marius used the same symbol against Sulla, and when Caesar was assassinated, the conspirators marched forth in a body with a cap elevated on a spear in token of liberty. In the French Revolution it was adopted by the revolutionists as an emblem of their freedom from royal authority and called bonnet rouge.

Pointed cap. In Buddhism the snake's hood cap, alluding to the protection and veneration given Gautama, when he reached Buddhahood, by the serpent. In Hinduism an attribute of Brahma as divine royalty.

Setting her cap for him. A young woman trying to ensnare a young man into becoming her husband, alluding to the days when women habitually wore caps or bonnets, and put on the most attractive to win the admiration of the favored gentleman.

Winged cap. Dispatch, speed, wind. Attribute of Hermes and Mercury.

CAPA Sanscrit for bow, used with sara (arrow) in Buddhist services against demons and evil spirits. Emblem of Kurukulla, Marici, Mayajalakramaryavalokitesvara, and Raktalokesvara.

CAPAC Peruvian sun deity. Later capac became an adjective meaning great, powerful. From the root ac (ak).

CAPANÆUS In Greek mythology nephew of Adrastus, king of Argos. A fierce rebellious spirit, he was one of the seven heroes, and leader of a detachment in the battle against Thebes. He scaled the walls of the city, and when his gigantic shadow frightened the people, he mocked the gods and challenged Zeus by declaring that the great god himself would not prevent him from leaping over the walls and dropping into Thebes. For this blasphemy Zeus struck him dead with a thunderbolt. Evadne, the wife of Capaneus, threw herself into the flames while his body was burning. A light or sun deity.

CAPE COLONY Symbolized by an anchor; also by a woman leaning on a rock.

CAPE JASMINE In the language of flowers: I am too happy.

CAPITOLINE The smallest of the seven hills on which Rome is located. Famous for the temples of Jupiter and Juno.

CAPON A cock or rabbit castrated to improve the taste of its flesh. In humorous usage, a eunuch.

CAPRICORN (CAPRICORNUS)

The Goat, tenth sign of the zodiac. The sun enters at the winter solstice about December 21 and remains until about January 20. Gate to the fourth of the Four Astrological Ages, which see. It is a winter sign, feminine and cold; its quality is unfortunate and dry; it is ruled by Saturn. It symbolizes mourning. Its character traits are ambition, persistence, and thoughtlessness; it governs the knees. Its tarot significance is the Wheel of Fortune. In Buddhist zodiacs the sign is an elephant. In Greek mythology Capricorn was Pan, who, from fear of the great Typhon, changed himself into a goat, and by Zeus was made one of the signs of the zodiac.

CAPUA One of the most luxurious cities in Italy; hence any city of luxury. Hannibal is said to have been corrupted by the city. Everywhere he was victorious over the Romans until he took up his winter quarters at Capua. There, his star began to wane; Carthage soon was in ruins, and Hannibal an exile. Hence, "Capua corrupted Hannibal" means luxury and self-indulgence ruin anyone.

CAPULET (CAPPELLETTI)

A proud, noble family of Verona in northern Italy at feudal enmity with the Montagues (Montecchi). They are mentioned in many literary works, including Dante's Purgatorio and Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet. Juliet is of the Capulet family.

CAPUT MORTUUM Literally, dead head. An alchemist's term for the worthless remainder of an experiment; hence anything from which all that rendered it valuable has been taken away.

CAR The sun. Its symbolism is that of the chariot, which see.

CARA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning dear one.

CARABAS, MARQUIS DE A pretentious, conservative, and vain nobleman, with a Fortunatus' purse which is never empty, who desires to restore the absurdity and ostentation of the court of Louis XIV. From the character drawn by Perrault in Puss in Boots, where he is the master of Puss. Disraeli uses the name in his novel Vivian Grey, where he intends it for the Marquis of Clanricarde.

CARACALLA Nickname given to the cruel and treacherous Roman emperor Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, in allusion to the long hooded tunic worn by the Gauls which he introduced. He was assassinated.

CARADAWC (CARADOC, CRA-DOC) In Welsh mythology son of Bran. His name signifies great arms or prince of combat. In Arthurian romance a son of Llyr and a knight of the Round Table, distinguished for valiant deeds. He was surnamed Brief-Bras, and was the victim of a serpent. In the ballad, Boy and the Mantle, a boy arrived at King Arthur's court with a mantle which could not be worn by an unchaste woman. Of all the ladies at court, Caradawc's wife was the only one able to wear it. He was later confounded with the historical Caractacus, who was a king of the Silures, a tribe in South Wales, and who withstood the Roman armies for nine years, but was finally betrayed by Carthismandu, queen of the Brigantes, and taken to Rome a captive in 51 A. D.

CARADOC (CAREY) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning beloved.

CARANA Footprint of a Buddha.

CARAVEL A light, fleet ship, the type of vessel sailed by Columbus to the New World; hence a ship of adventure or exploration.

CARBONARI Literally, charcoal burners. The name of a secret Italian political society organized in 1808. The members called their place of meeting a hut; its inside was the place for selling charcoal; the outside was the forest; their political opponents were wolves. The object was to convert the kingdom of Naples into a republic.

CARBONEK In Brythonic legend the four-cornered castle, guarded by King Pelles, in which the Grail was kept. The name signifies square. Also called Caer Pedryvan. See Caer Sidi.

CARBUNCLE Gem symbolizing constancy, energy, self-confidence, strength. Also blood, suffering, war. Dream significance: acquirement of wisdom. In heraldry: the red tincture of a nobleman's escutcheon, symbolizing assurance. Christian symbol of blood and suffering, martyrdom. Five carbuncles typify the five wounds of Christ or Christ's Passion.

CARD Divination, gambling, games. See sung-ta. Dream significance: (reading) dangerous undertaking; (playing) loss of money, useless expenditure; (to see played) cheating, deceit. See tarot.

CARDAMINE Flower symbolizing paternal error.

CARDEA (CARDO, CARNA) Two-headed Roman goddess of hinges, i.e. (hinges on which the year swings in ancient Latin calendar). Mistress of Janus. Inasmuch as the celestial hinges were located at the back of the North Wind, where the millstones of the universe revolved, she held the keys to the otherworld. Compare Fenja and Menja. She held the power to shut that which was open and open that which was shut. She also was guardian of family life. Her emblem was a white thorn, with which she banished evil from doorways. Source of cardinal, which refers to the four main directions or winds.

Cardinal. December 20 birthday flower, symbolizing distinction.

Cardinal points of the compass. So called because intermediate directions, such as N.E., N.N.E., etc. hang or hinge on them. In Latin the poles upon which the earth turns are called cardines, and the cardinal points are those which lie in the direction of the poles (north and south) and of sunrise and sunset (east and west). The winds which blow due north, south, east and west, are called the cardinal winds. Like the cardinal points, the cardinal humors, virtues, etc. are four in number. Among Zuni Indians the directions or points of the compass number six, i.e. north, south, east, west, up, and down.

Cardinal signs of the Zodiac. The gates to the four seasons: Aries, spring equinox; Cancer, summer solstice; Libra, autumn equinox; Capricorn, winter solstice.

Cardinal virtues. Fortitude, justice, prudence, and temperance, on which all other virtues depend or hinge. A term which distinguishes the natural virtues from the theological virtues (faith, hope and charity).

CARIB A mirthless, savage, and cannibalistic linguistic family of American Indians, which practices couvade. A variant name is Galibi.

CARINA The constellation known as the Keel (of Argo). Its formation is that of the ridge-shape on a bird's breast.

CARLA (CARLOTTA) Feminine name corresponding to the masculine Carlo or Charles.

CARLISLE Masculine name from middle English, meaning from the loyal stronghold.

CARMEL (CARMELA, CARMELITA) (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning garden or park. (2) Sacred mountain in Palestine. Scene of the conflict between Elijah and the prophets of Baal. Nabal, the Carmelite, husband of Abigail, dwelt on the mountain. Saul, returning from his expedition against Amalek, erected a trophy on the mountain. In the Old Testament coupled with the fruitful rod or staff of life. The meanings of the word are various, including circumcised lamb, harvest, vine of God, or orchard full of ears of corn, and it is cognate with camel, Camelot.

CARMEN (1) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning song. (2) A deceitful, fascinating flirt. Drawn from the gypsy coquette in Georges Bizet's opera of the same name based on Merimee's novel. For unfaithfulness her lover Don Jose stabs her to death.

CARMENTA Roman goddess of springs. Later goddess of women in childbirth, in which aspect she was invoked as Postverta or Prorsa, depending on whether the child was born facing backwards or forwards. For this reason she was conceived as two goddesses called Carmentes. Leader of the Camenae, she sang a child's destiny at birth, her name meaning song. Her feast, the Carmentalia, was celebrated January 11 and January 15. Her cult survives in modern Italy where she is invoked for aid in childbirth. Evander, worshiped in both ancient Greece and Roman, was said to have been the child of Carmenta by Hermes.

CARMICHAEL Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning Michael's friend.

CARMILHAN A Phantom ship in the Baltic Sea. The captain of the ship swore he would double the cape, whether or not God willed it. Because of his blasphemy he was doomed to abide forever as captain of the same vessel, which eternally appears near the Cape, but never doubles it. Klaboterman, the spirit of the phantom ship, helps sailors at their work, but beats those who are idle. When a ship is doomed, Klaboterman appears dressed in yellow, wearing a night-cap and smoking a pipe. Analogue of the Flying Dutchman.

CARNAL PASSION Symbolized by a crimson cyclamen, by the color red, by Sodom and Gomorrah. Personified by the devil dressed as a woman, by Aphrodite Pandemos.

CARNATION December 19 birthday flower with the sentiment admiration. Symbol of divine love, fascination, woman's love. Emblem of the state of Indiana. Christian emblem of marriage, pure love.

Scarlet carnation. Emblem of the state of Ohio.

Striped carnation. Refusal.

Yellow carnation. Disdain.

CARNELIAN (CORNELIAN) July birthstone with the virtue of dispersing evil thoughts and sorrow. Symbolic of courage, friendship, joy, peace. Talisman to animate colorless personalities, to calm anger, to prevent misfortune, to strengthen self-confidence. Held to be medicinally endowed. A toothpick of carnelian supposedly prevents bleeding gums. Jewel governing Leo, its occult powers intensified if worn by one born under its sign. Dream significance: impending misfortune. From Latin cornu (horn) or Italian carne (flesh). Previously called sardius. Arabs wear to preserve them against envy; Moslems call it the Mecca stone which fulfills all desires and brings happiness and peace to the owner. Australian Bushmen value it as an emblem of good hunting and do not permit women to approach the spot where it is being carved. In the East worn as an amulet against sorcery as well as against plague. Ancient Egyptians wore it to become serene and preserve dignity in argument. Greeks wore it the first day of the week, because they believed it had the power to grant every wish. Israelites prized it during their wanderings in the wilderness as an emblem of hope and patience. It had first position in Aaron's breastplate and represented the tribe of Reuben. Persians buried it with the dead. Romans attributed to it the power to protect them against disasters of nature, such as earthquakes, floods, storms.

Carnelian onyx. In the language of gems: Distinction lies before you.

CARNIVAL Modern survival of the Saturnalia, in which the carnival spirit is personified by one in fantastic dress, a Columbine, Harlequin, Pantaloon, and Pierrot, etc. See Saturnalia.

CAROL (CAROLA, CAROLE, KAROL) Feminine name from Old French, meaning song of joy.

CAROLE Name given by troubadours to a pre-Christian sun dance or ballet, in which the performers moved in a circle. Source of carol, choir, choral.

CAROLINE (CADDIE, CAROLINA, CAROLYN, CARRIE, LINA) Feminine name corresponding to Charles; from Old Teutonic meaning noble-spirited.

CAROLINGIANS (CARLOVINGIANS, KARLINGS) The dynasty of ruling family of France and Germany to which Charlemagne belonged and which was named for him. Charles Martel (Charles the Hammer) was the first powerful leader of the Carolingians. His grandson, Charlemagne, was constantly at war, and the death of his paladin Roland in 778, gave rise to a great body of medieval legend, the Carlovingian cycle. The name means pertaining to or descendants of Karl the Great (Charlemagne).

CAROU (KARO) Cornish for deer or stag. Equates with Italian caro (beloved). See deer for symbolism.

CARP Endurance, pluck, voracity. It carries the general symbolism of fish, which see. Also called bream, which equates with Brahm. Root of carpo, a fruit seed, and of carpenter. In China and Japan a sacred fish because of its red color, symbolizing courage and strength. Inasmuch as it struggles against currents, typifies perseverance and war. It is a masculine talisman, and kites frequently are sent up on festive days in the shape of a carp.

CARPENTER Creator. The Zend word for carpenter is tashan, which also means creator. Christ was the son of a carpenter. In a Rig-Veda poem a carpenter is a man of trade in search of gain.

CARPET Luxury, sovereignty. A red carpet is rolled out to protect visiting royalty from touching the ground; this is related to the mythological belief that the foot is sacred. See heel, hobbling. In Oriental legend a magic carpet (cloud) carries one into enchanted lands. Buddha is carried through the skies on a carpet. In the Koran King Solomon's throne was placed on a carpet of green silk when he wished to travel. It carried all his forces, men and women at his right, spirits at his left. Solomon told the wind where he wished to go, the carpet (cloud) rose in the air. To screen the party from the sun, birds with outspread wings formed a canopy over it.

Be on the carpet. Be reprimanded.

Bring a question onto the carpet. Bring a subject up for consideration. Adopted from the French expression, sur le tapis (on the tablecloth).

Carpetbagger. Originally applied to a wandering wildcat banker who traveled into the Western United States and decamped with funds entrusted to him; later applied to northern political adventurers seeking profit in the south after the Civil War.

Carpet knight. One dubbed at court by favor, not having won his spurs by military service; alluding to those who are knighted as they kneeled on a carpet in contradistinction to those who were knighted on a battlefield.

CARPO Worshiped in some parts of ancient Greece as one of the Horae. Goddess of the corn or fruit-bearing season.

CARRYING WATER IN A SIEVE

Folktale motif signifying escape or punishment.

CARSON, KIT A famous trapper and guide of the 19th Century American West. His adventures appear in dime novel thrillers.

CARTAPHILUS One of the names of the Wandering Jew.

CARTHAGE A famous city of the ancient world in North Africa, which stood as a threat to Rome. Cato the Elder concluded every speech in the Roman Senate with,

"Carthage must be destroyed." The words have become proverbial and mean, "That which stands in the way of our expansion must be removed at all costs."

Carthaginian faith. Treachery.
Carthaginian peace. A peace treaty which implies the virtual annihilation of the vanquished.

CARTOUCHE In Egyptian antiquity an oblong figure with rounded ends containing the name of a deity, king, or queen. When placed in a grave or on a monument, served as an amulet which gave magical protection to those whose names it contained and prevented demons from devouring the name of the dead. Also worn as a talisman to obtain a deity's favor, recognition, and remembrance, and to prevent the name of the wearer from being blotted out in the next world. See Name.

CARVARA (SARVARA) Hindu guard at the gates of the other-world. Compares with Cerberus.

CARYATIDES Figures of women used in Greek architecture as pillars. Caryae, in Laconia, sided with the Persians at Thermopylae, and as a consequence, the victorious Greeks destroyed the city, slew the men and made slaves of the women. Praxiteles, to perpetuate the disgrace, employed figures of these women instead of columns. A male figure is called Atlas.

CASCA In Shakespeare's Julius Caesar, a cruel, violent conspirator: Referring to the dead Caesar, Antony says, "See what a rent the envious Casca made."

CASH A round Chinese coin with a square hole, expressing, "Before your eyes." Good fortune, wealth. Compare coin.

CASIMIR Masculine name from the Slavic, meaning show forth peace, master in his own house.

CASKET See box.

CASPER (GASPER) Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning dutiful.

CASSANDRA (CASS, CASSIE)

(1) Feminine name from the Greek, alluding to the prophetess.
(2) Prophetess fated to be heard by those who would not believe her. Daughter of Priam, King of Troy, and Hecuba. Loved by Apollo, she promised to marry him if he would confer on her the gift of prophecy. Once he had given her the gift, she refused to marry him. Incensed, Apollo rendered the gift useless by causing all who heard her predictions to fail to believe them. Thus she was one given the experience of vision, but whose gift from the gods was useless. Awarded to Agamemnon as a prize when Troy fell to the Greeks, she warned him that his wife Clytemnestra and her lover Aegisthus would slay him, but like everyone else he ignored her prophecy. In the same way nature reveals phenomena to come, but few comprehend the signs.

CASSIA A cinnamon symbolic of longevity in China.

CASSIDY Masculine name from Celtic, meaning the ingenious.

CASSIM BABA See under Baba.

CASSIOPEIA (CASSIEPEIA, CASSIOPEA, KESSIEPEIA) In Greek mythology wife of Cepheus, king of Ethiopia, and mother of Andromeda. A deity of night. Having aroused the displeasure of the Nereides by boasting of the superior beauty of her daughter, an innundation and sea-monster were sent by Poseidon to lay waste the country. To appease the sea-monster, Andromeda, dawn, was offered as a sacrifice. She was saved by Perseus, the sun, who slew the monster, darkness.

This may be a flood myth, in which an earth-goddess is saved by the sun from innundation. Cassiopeia was placed in the northern sky as a constellation, also known as the Lady in the Chair or She of the Throne. Religious astronomers of the 17th century identified the constellation with Bathsheba and with Mary Magdalene.

CASSIUS In Shakespeare's Julius Caesar instigator of the conspiracy against Julius Caesar.

CASSOCK Christian clergyman's everyday dress signifying devotion to the church.

CASTALIA (CASTALY) A fountain on Mount Parnassus near Delphi, in which Pythia used to bathe. Sacred to Apollo and the Muses. Its waters were said to have the power of inspiring with the gift of poetry those who drank from it.

CASTANETS Accompaniment to song and dance. So called for their resemblance to chestnuts. In China called bo. Attribute of Ts'ao Kuo-chiu, one of the Eight Immortals.

CASTE One of the hereditary classes into which Hindu society is divided according to the religious laws of Brahmanism; hence any hereditary or class system. The four great Hindu castes are: Brahmins (priests), Kshatriyas or Shatriyas (warriors and rulers), Vaisyas (husband-men and merchants), Sudras (laborers and mechanics).

The first issued from the mouth of Brahma, the second from his arms, the third from his thighs, and the fourth from his feet. Below the four castes come the Pariahs (outcasts). The Vedas are sealed to them and they are held cursed in this world and without hope.

Lose caste. Lose a position in society. To get degraded from one social standing to a lesser one.

CASTLE Authority, dominance, impregnability, power, romance, safety, sovereignty, wealth. Dream significance: happy event; (in ruins) distress. In heraldry, grandeur, nobility, solidity, strategy. A triple-towered castle on a rock with a key pendant hanging from the central gateway symbolizes Gibraltar. Castle, identical with Castile, yields Great Light, resplendent God.

Castle Dangerous. In a novel of the same name by Sir Walter Scott the scene of repeated battles.

Castle Garden. Large circular building built as a fort at the Battery, New York City. Successively a place of entertainment, an immigration center, an aquarium.

Castle in the air. Baseless vision, day dream, splendid imagining. In fairy tales castles in the air frequently appear at a word and vanish as rapidly. Also called castle in Spain.

Castle of Corbenic. In medieval legend castle where the dwellers have all the heart desires with the additional prestige of being the guardians of the Grail (fertility).

Castle of Indolence. In a poem by James Thompson situated in the land of Drowsiness. Its owner, an enchanter, enticed passers-by that he might engage them in sensual pleasures.

Castle of Revelry. Another name for Revolving Castle. Also called Castle of Riches. See Caer Sidi.

Castle of Wonders. Grail Castle. See Caer Sidi.

Castle Perilous. See Caer Sidi.

CASTOR A bean used as a purgative. Oil with which the poor in Korea anoint their hair.

CASTOR AND POLLUX (KASTOR AND POLYDEUCES) In Greek mythology Zeus or Tyndareus (Zeus as thunderer) visited Leda in the form of a swan. She produced two eggs, from one Castor and Clytemnestra sprang, from the other Pollux and Helen. Castor and Pollux, the Dioscuri, were twins renowned for their attachment to each other; also for their physical accomplishments, Castor being the greatest chariot-eer of his time, Pollux the greatest pugilist; their outstanding virtues were heroism and valor. They were heroes of the Argonaut expedition and other adventures. Castor taught Heracles the art of armed warfare. When Castor was killed in a battle Zeus offered Pollux immortality, but he refused to accept the gift unless allowed to share it with Castor. Zeus granted the wish, but decreed they were to live on alternate days and placed them in the heavens as two stars in Gemini; sometimes they are identified as the constellation Gemini. Famous for their protection of sailors, their names were given by sailors to Saint Elmo's fire. If one flame showed itself, they said it portended the worst of the storm was yet to come; if two or more luminous flames appeared, they called them Castor and Pollux and said the flames indicated the termination of the storm. Castor and Pollux were honored as athletes, for their brotherly love, and as guardian deities, war dancers, and warriors. Their death and rebirth typifies the alternate motions of light and darkness. Pollux appeared in the east in the morning, Castor in the west in the evening to usher in light and darkness. They were dusk and dawn, morning and evening stars, night and day, sun and moon, riding white horses. Their emblems are: a burning fire; conical helmets (representing their births from an egg or a sailor's cap); long lances (rays of light); Saint Elmo's Fire; stars; two parallel bars joined by cross pieces (each bar representing a plank of wood or tree as a symbol of deity). The name Castor is possible source of castrate (see); it means crocus, which is akin to the Sanscrit kasturi, which means musk. Pollux is identical with bollox or bollix meaning to mix up. The Romans borrowed Castor and Pollux from the Greeks and worshiped as bringers of victory, powers which help in time of need. They compare to Hindu Asvins. Also called Anakes, which see.

CASTORP, HANS Hero of Thomas Mann's The Magic Mountain. He has been interpreted to be the gradual yielding to the excesses of pure aestheticism.

CASTRATION Universally in mythology the fertility hero or vegetation god, knowing his death and descent into the lower world are inevitable, rejects the love of the earth goddess, and castrates himself in the supreme sacrifice for the life of mankind. The offering of the phallus is a form of sympathetic magic. The castrated priest was in the service of the earth-mother and her fertility-lover-son, and later emerged as the eunuch who guards the women (mothers) of a harem. The castrated deity also represents one who trespassed into a woman's realm, as Actaeon, the sun, entered the realm of Artemis, the moon. Word possibly derived from Castor. See Adonis, Cain 2, circumcision, Cottito, reaping.

CASWALLAWN (CASSIBELLAWN, CASSIVELAUNUS) In Welsh mythology son of Beli. His sister was Penardun, wife of the sea-god Llyr, and his brothers were Llevelys, Lludd, Nynnyaw, and Peibaw. Little remains of the Caswallawn myths. He appears as hostile to Llyr and Llyr's descendants. After the death of Lludd, he destroyed the heroes of Britain, usurped the kingdom and left Manawyddan, the son of Llyr, landless. He supposedly reigned during the period that Julius Caesar first invaded Britain. In the poem fragments which exist history and mythology are interwoven. He probably was an agricultural or earth deity.

CAT Cleanliness, diligence, domesticity, freedom, maternity; also cruelty, egotism, flattery, infidelity, love of ease and luxury, perversity, prowling, slyness, sorcery, thievery, treachery, witchery. One who is calculating, false, fierce, graceful, nervous, ornamental, proud, sensitive, subtle, useful. Seer in the dark; torturer, who will play with a wounded prey. If ill-treated, a bringer of bad luck. Dream significance: perfidy, treason; (angry) quarrels; (killing) danger escaped; (mewing) petty slanders; (purring) hypocrisy; (scratching) deceit; (walking alone) journey by water. In heraldry courage, liberty, vigilance. Object of worship in ancient religions. In China called

mao. Protector of silkworms; disperser of evil spirits. A symbol of love. In art shown reaching for a butterfly to express hope of an old age, as the cat's name as well as the butterfly's is similar to that of persons who live to be over eighty. The coming of a strange cat into the house is an omen of approaching poverty, as a cat is believed to be able to foresee where mice and rats are apt to be found. To steal a cat from a house is unlucky. One washing its face portends the arrival of strangers. Christian symbol of laziness and lust. In ancient Egypt called mau, which also denoted light, and which is cognate with ma (mother). Symbol of sexual desire. A form of the mother-goddess Bast (Bubastis), personification of the life-giving solar heat, probably because of its habit of basking in the sun. Whoever killed a cat, even accidentally, was sentenced to die. Because of its nocturnal habits, its fecundity, and because its eyes enlarge and contract, typified the waxing and waning of the moon, and sacred to Isis, the moon-goddess. Thus expressed the splendor of light and maternity. In Europe feared as an animal that takes away the life of a child by sucking its breath as it sleeps; the form of a vampire. In France identified with the corn spirit; the last portion of grain reaped was called the cat's tail. Hecate, Greek sorceress changed herself into a cat. In India steed of Sasthi, goddess worshiped to avert smallpox. In Japan signifies maliciousness, supernatural power. The pinkish-brown or red cat, called golden flower, is believed to have the greatest magical powers. Tri-colored cats are worshiped as bringers of good-luck to families, fishermen, and seafarers. A cat is believed to be innocent as a kitten, devilish in old age. In Norse mythology a form of the Midgard serpent. In ancient Rome symbol of liberty.

Black cat. Bad-luck, death, sorcery, witchery. Called a 'familiar' from the medieval superstition that Satan and witches assumed the form of a black cat. In China harbinger of misfortune, poverty, sickness. In some European countries said to be a fortunate mascot, and worn as a talisman. In Japan believed to cure spasms if placed on the stomach of the ill person; also cures melancholia and betrays thieves. A black cat supposedly foretells the weather and for this reason a pet of sailors.

Black cat with a gold piece. According to a medieval witch remedy, if you would always have money, bury a black cat with a gold piece and close the eyes with two black beans.

Cat and dog. Enemies.

Cat-eyed. Acute vision.

Cat-skins. A Cinderella mantle; a brilliant robe, the light of the sun. Cinderella as Hearth Cat, an aspect which probably corresponds to the Roman conception of Vesta. Compare louse-skin. A name applied to the ruffled appearance of the sea caused by a catspaw breeze on the water.

Fat cat. One who contributes generously to a political campaign.

Fight like Kilkenny cats. Fight until both sides have lost everything.

Grin like a Cheshire cat. An old simile popularized by Lewis Carroll, applied to persons who show their teeth and gums when they laugh.

Make a cat's paw of. Make a fool of another; cause another to do one's dirty work.

Play cat and mouse. Dangle someone on a string, the one with power pretending to let the victim go, but actually not doing so.

Wait for the cat to die. Wait for a swinging rope to come to a gradual standstill.

CATACLOTHERS Greek spinners; fate deities. Resemble the Harpies and Keres.

CATACOMB Subterranean gallery of alcoves and recesses in which persons are buried. The Alexandrian catacomb was one of the seven wonders of the middle ages.

CATAIAN A native of Cathay or China; intended to mean a liar, scoundrel, thief, as, in the middle ages they had such a reputation. Used by Shakespeare in the Merry Wives of Windsor.

CATALPA Symbol of showiness; in the language of flowers: Beware of the coquette.

CATCHFLY Pretended love, snare, youthful love. A white catchfly is a symbol of betrayal.

CATCITEPULZ Literally, the mountain which speaks. In Aztec mythology mountain from which Xipe Totic calls on the people to do penance on account of their sins.

CATERPILLAR Rebirth, transmigration of the soul, alluding to the change from its insect shape to that of a butterfly or moth. Dream significance: betrayal. In Japan god of the everlasting world, the world of the dead.

CATFISH Japanese gigantic primeval catfish which causes earthquakes.

CATHA Etruscan sun deity.

CATHARI Gnostics, purifiers, reformers; alluding to a pre-

Reformation Protestant sect in Italy, which aimed at or claimed a purity of doctrine and life. Also called the Pure Ones.

CATHBAD In Irish legend druid of Emain Macha at the court of Conchobar, king of Ulster. His curse caused the head of the Ulster chieftan Sualtam, mortal father of Cuchulainn, to be cut off. According to one version, Conchobar was the natural son of Cathbad by Nessa, which see. Cathbad cured Cuchulainn of madness. A spirit of decay.

CATHEDRA The chair or seat of one in authority. Root of the word cathedral. Christian throne of a bishop in the sanctuary.

CATHENA Mojave Indian virgin-mother goddess. Adopted sister of Ku-yu. Name signifies First Woman, the goddess's title as a virgin. Also called Quakuinaha, Old Woman of the West. The name appears to be related to Kwannon. The Mojave Venus.

CATHERINE (CATHARINA, CATHY) (1) Feminine name. See Katherine. (2) Catherine de Medicis. Daughter of Lorenzo de Medici, an immoral and tyrannical ruler, she became queen of France and the mother of three kings. She provoked civil and religious wars and is held responsible for the Massacre of Saint Bartholomew in 1572. (3) Catherine of Russia. Deposed her husband with the aid of her paramour Grigori Orlov and became sovereign queen of Russia. Misery and serfdom among the peasants increased during her reign, but she was successful in foreign wars and extended Russia's boundaries. Called the Semiramis of the North.

Catherine wheel. An emblem of the sun, either five or sixrayed. Displayed at festivals as a rotating firework or as a pinwheel. The pinwheel has developed into a child's toy, and the toothed-wheel has been adopted as a window-wheel to create a breeze. In Christian tradition typifies execution, martyrdom; the legendary instrument of Saint Catherine's martyrdom.

CATH GODEU (CAD GODDEU)

In Brythonic mythology the battle fought between Arawn, Lord of the underworld Annwn, and Amaethon, fertility deity. Fought to bring the riches of Arawn up to man. During the course of the battle Amaethon stole the deer and the lapwing. Also called the Battle of Trees.

CATO (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning cautious. (2) Cato the Elder. A man of blunt speech, severe morals, simple life, and a fervent patriot, who concluded all his speeches before the Roman Senate with, "Carthage must be destroyed." (3) Cato the Younger. Grandson of the Elder. A Roman patriot; disgusted with Caesar, he set up a small republic. When it was overthrown by Caesar Cato killed himself.

CAT-O-NINE-TAILS A flogging instrument with nine lashes said to scratch the back like a cat. Formerly used to punish offenders in the United States Army and Navy.

CAT'S EYE Gem symbolizing long life and platonic love. Believed to warn its owner of approaching danger and to protect against spells and the evil-eye. Dream significance: treachery.

Cat's-eye sapphire. Courtesy.

CATTLE Agriculture, dairy products, prosperity. In mythology typifies clouds, the herds of the sun, which provide man with nourishing milk (fertilizing rains) In some parts of the world the cow remains a sacred animal. The African Dinkas train horns of the leader of their herds to point fore and aft. This animal is called a majok (probably mage-wise one, and ok=ox). The Kafirs train the horns of their cattle to form a perfect circle, and sometimes into one horn (ein-horn or unicorn), or into fire-like spirals, all sun emblems. In Greek mythology certain followers of Odysseus were punished because they violated the herds (rain-giving clouds) of Apollo.

CATTLEYA Blossom symbolizing nature charms, matronly grace.

CATURMASYA Hindu feasts which heralded commencement of the three seasons into which the Indian year was divided, corresponding to the hot, cool, and wet seasons.

CAUCASUS Sacred Greek mountain to which Prometheus was chained, and where a vulture gnawed his liver, which grew as fast as it was devoured. An allusion to the constant consumption and reproduction which goes on in nature.

CAUCHON, PETER Bishop of Beauvis who sent Joan of Arc to the stake. Thus a bishop who created a sainted-martyr.

CAUL An apron-like fold or sac enveloping the child in the uterus, and sometimes enveloping the head of a newly born child. To be born with a caul is supposed to be lucky, giving the child second-sight, the caul itself regarded as a preventive against drowning.

See hamingja.

CAULD-LAD A house-spirit, which moves furniture about during the night.

CAULINE, SIR (CAWLINE) In Percy's Reliques the hero of one of the ballads. He served the wine in the palace of the king of Ireland and fell in love with Christabelle, the king's daughter. The king banished him, but he returned in time to slay a soldain (sultan) applying for Christabelle's hand. He died of wounds received in the combat and the fair Christabelle died of grief. A love story which resembles that of Romeo and Juliet.

CAUT AND CAUTOPAT (CAUTES AND CAUTOPATHES) In Persian mythology the torch bearers, the rising and setting sun. The names mean burner and he who lets his burner (torch) fall. Parallels Castor and Pollux.

CAVANAGH (CAVANAUGH) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning handsome.

CAVE (CAVERN) Symbol of darkness and ignorance. Dream significance: anguish. Emblem of the female principle in nature, the womb. One of man's first homes (others were holes and trees), hence a refuge. Oracular altar. Sacred burial site or tomb. A fairy mansion, otherworld entrance, sanctuary of underworld beings. Abode of the winds. Prison of rain, hence typifies clouds which do not release fertilizing rains. World-wide hiding place of the sun, which is to rise again. Cinderella, a light or fire goddess, in some versions of her story, was imprisoned in a cave. Word identical with cove; cognate with gave and agave, Mexican tree of life. In African and American Indian mythology source of the human race, the first man having climbed up from the underworld through a cave. Frequently represented by an inverted U, (U being the symbol of the world pot). See Giovava, Marocael, Nane Chaha. In Brythonic lore, King Arthur while awaiting his call to return and save Britain, rested in a cave on Avalon. In Hebrew tradition the only land Abraham ever owned was the cave of Machpelah, in which he was buried. David took refuge in the Cave of Adullum, hence a sanctuary. Lot resided in a cave after the destruction of Sodom. In Japanese mythology retreat of the sun goddess Amaterasu, and called Ame-no-Iwato.

CAVELL, EDITH Heroic English nurse. During World War I, while stationed in Belgium, she gave succor to Belgian, English, French, and German soldiers, as well as to others in distress. For aiding English soldiers to escape, she was executed by the Germans. Her code was "Patriotism is not enough." Her story has been incorporated into several dramas.

CAVENDISH Pseudonym of Henry Jones, an English gambler and writer on Whist; hence the Cavendish hand. Used frequently as the name of card-playing clubs.

CAY Mayan high pontiff. Resolves into ac-ay, the Great A (Sun).

CAZOTTE Occultist who prophesied the death of several in the French Revolution.

CC The celestial twins, twin children or deities of light. Sometimes in designs clasped in embrace, one light and one dark, to indicate day and night, the sun and moon.

CE ACATL Aztec surname meaning one reed. A name of Quetzalcoatl (light) as son of Tezcatlipoca (darkness). A person born under the sign of Ce Acatl was doomed to failure, as his plans and passions would be blown away by the wind. Also known as Chimalman, the virile member.

CEACHT Irish goddess of medicine.

CEARAS An Irish fire god. One of the third ascending chain of deities. As Daghdae-Cearas, a form of Dagda. Other of his names are Crom-eocha, the good Crom; Rad or Ruad, the strong or powerful; and Daghdae or Dogdha, fire.

CECA TO MECCA One end of the world to another; pillar to post, alluding to the two places visited by Moslem pilgrims. Comparable expressions are Dan to Beersheba, Land's End to John O'Groat's.

CECIL Masculine name from Caecilius, a Roman family name, meaning blind, dim sighted. In feminine form: Cecilia (Cecile), Cecily, Cicely, Cis, Sis, Sisley).

CECROPS (KEKROPS) In Greek legendary history first king of Attica and founder of Cecropis, later called Athens. He sprang out of the ground, half man-half dragon, and introduced the institutions of marriage and burial among his descendants. He also invented an alphabet and taught writing. He had one son, Ery-sichthon, and three daughters, known collectively as the Agrauid, and individually as Agraulos, Herse, and Pandrosos. Cecrops may have been an aspect of Poseidon as earth deity. He resembles Adam, Alalkomeneus, and Cadmus.

CEDAR Beauty, constancy, health restorer, immortality, incorruptibility, majesty, mercy, pride, prosperity, strength. 'Dar' equates with 'dur' of enduring. American Indians believed the cedar had supernatural powers and burned its leaves to propitiate gods. In Assyria symbolized the king. In Babylon was under the protection of Ea. An emblem of Christ. In Hebrew tradition a symbol of empire, fragrance, nobility.

Cedar cone. Life charm.

Cedar leaf. In the language of flowers: Think of me; I live only for you.

Cedar of Lebanon. December 18 birthday flower with the sentiment incorruptibility. A name variant of Virgin Mary, borrowed from the Song of Solomon. Hebrew symbol of dignity and exaltation. The religious meaning of the cedar remains obscure. Solomon raised three temples, in which he used cedar and fir, to honor a Trinity composed of Jehovah and two birth or fertility goddesses.

CEDRELA TREE In China health, longevity. Emblem of father of the family.

CEDRIC Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning chief-tan.

CEILING Shelter, sky. 'Ceil' compares with the 'Sil' of Silbury, an ancient burial mound. Sil meant primarily the Fir or Light of God. 'Ceil' also compares with Seel of Seeley, seal, silly, zeal.

CELAENO (CELENO) In Greek mythology the third of the Harpies;

one of the seven Pleiades.

CELANDINE July 22 birthday flower with the sentiment joys to come. Carried on the person with a mole's heart as a talisman to make one invincible against enemies and law suits. Also called pilewort.

CELERITY In an Italian icon personified by a woman with a dolphin by her side, a hawk flying in the air, and a thunderbolt in her right hand.

CELESTE (CELESTINE) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning heavenly.

CELESTIAL CITY Heaven. A name applied to Peking, China. Celestial Empire. Imperial China. Translated from Tien Chao (Heavenly Dynasty), alluding to the belief that the emperors were in direct descent from the gods. The Chinese sometimes are spoken of as Celestials.

Celestial fruit. Apple, fig, orange, pomegranate.

Celestial Twins. Twins of Light, day and night, light and darkness. Hope and fear, knowledge and ignorance, love and logic, religion and science. Symbolized by two children, two circles, two eyes, two pillars. Some Celestial Twins are: the Ahans (Asvins), Ahriman and Ormuz, Babes in the Wood, Cain and Abel, the Dioscuri, Gemini, Iroh, Siegmund and Sieglinde. In Vedic hymns the Twins are venerated as able to heal sickness and restore youthfulness to the aged.

CELEUS King of Eleusis, husband of Metaneira. As Demeter roamed the earth seeking Persephone, Celeus offered her hospitality. Not realizing she was a goddess, she was made nurse of the infant Demophoon. Under her care the baby thrived marvelously, and Demeter, intending to make him immortal, anointed him with ambrosia and dipped him in a bath of fire. Metaneira, seeing her son in the flames screamed. In one account, the frustrated goddess pulled the child from the flames before he had achieved immortality, certain parts of his body remaining vulnerable; in another account, Demeter permitted the child to be consumed by the flames. Demeter taught Triptolemus, another son of Celeus, how to plow the earth and sow wheat and gave him a chariot drawn by winged dragons to atone for the death of Demophoon. She appointed Celeus, an agricultural deity, high priest of the temple which he built under her instructions, and he became the first high-priest of the Eleusinian Mysteries.

CELIA Feminine name from a Roman family name, meaning heavenly one. In English lyric poetry used as a poetic name for any lady-love, as "Would you know my Celia's charms?"

CELMENE A coquette courted by Alceste in Moliere's Misanthrope, thus any coquette.

CENCI, BEATRICE The daughter of a 16th century Roman nobleman. From a famous portrait in the Barberini Palace at Rome attributed to Guido Reni, she is known as the Beautiful Parricide. For plotting the death of her cruel, dissipated father, at the trial accused of attempting incest, she was sentenced to death in 1599, in her 22nd year. Her story has been a favorite in art and poetry.

CENDRILLOT Name of the masculine version of Cinderella.

CENN CRUAICH See Crom Cruaich.

CENSER Incense pot symbolizing flattery, homage, sacrifice, veneration. In Brythonic legend an attribute of the Lady-of-the-Lake. In Christian tradition symbolizes the plea of the worshiper asking that his prayer be acceptable to God. The censer for daily Hebrew offerings was made of copper, and frequently contained a perpetual fire. The censer used on the day of atonement, and perhaps on other holy days, was made of pure gold.

CENTAUR (KENTAUR, KENTAUROS) In Classical mythology one of a group of beings with the head, arms, and torso of a man, the body and legs of a horse, to personify speed, vitality, and wisdom as well as beastliness, cruelty, cunning, and lust. Thus the two natures of man. Figuratively a person or thing viewed as the incongruous union of diverse forces. In heraldry those who have been eminent in battle. In zodiacal charts, Sagittarius, the Archer shooting an arrow. The origin of the name is uncertain; probably derived from kenteo, Greek for goad or spear. In some Babylonian charts of the heavens the Centaur is shown as double-headed. Christian symbol of savage passions; adultery, brute force, heresy, man divided against himself. Sometimes said to be the dual nature of Jesus. In Greek mythology they represent celestial horses or cloud masses, of which the heads were lit up by the sun and the rest in the shade, corresponding to the Hindu gandharvas. They may have been inspired by early Thessalians, a savage people who hunted the bull and went to war on horseback. The primitives they attacked imagined them to be half man, half beast. In legend Ixion, the sun, desired Hera. Zeus to protect his wife gave a cloud her likeness. In this manner Ixion became the father of the Centaurs (mists), who became educators and protectors of man, imparting knowledge and wisdom. Chiron, musician, physician, and prophet, was the instructor of Achilles, Asclepius, Heracles, and other heroes. Pholos was renowned for hospitality. However, on the other side, they fought with the Lapithae at the marriage feast of Pirithous, and Nessos, one of their number, outraged Deianeira, the wife of Heracles. When they were expelled from their country, they took refuge on Mount Pindus. Also called Hippocentaur.

Centaurus. Constellation, the Archer or Centaur. Personified by a Centaur shooting an arrow.

CENTAURY Flower symbolizing delicacy, felicity.

CENTIMANI A name for the Hecatoncheires, which see.

CEOS (COEUS) One of the most powerful of the Greek Titans; a deity of night. He was the Begetter, hence a personification of the mysterious source whence issued new creations. By Phoebe he fathered Astraea, by Leta he fathered Mnemosyne.

CEPHALUS In Greek mythology a hunter, the husband of Procis. He was loved by Eos, and Procis, jealous, fled from him. While searching for her he stopped to rest under a tree. Procis, seeing him, crept through some bushes to see if Eos were with him. Mistaking the noise for that of a wild beast, Cephalus hurled his javelin, a gift from Diana, only to discover he had killed his wife. Cephalus killed himself. This is a solar myth, in which Procis, the dew child, is slain by Cephalus, rising sun, who is lured by Eos, the dawn. The javelin is a ray of the sun. The search of Cephalus takes him across the sky and ends in his death at the end of the day.

CEPHAS Masculine name from the Aramaic, meaning stone.

CEPHEUS King of Ethiopia, husband of Cassiopeia, father of Andromeda. In his youth one of the heroes of the Argonautic expedition. When old and weak he was lifted into the sky as the constellation also known as King or Monarch. Being of the royal family at the North Pole, Cepheus never sets.

CEPHISSUS Greek river god, father of Echo by the nymph Liriope.

CERASTES Horned viper sacred to Egyptians and Mayans containing attributes of the bull and the serpent. In Greek mythology, the title Cerastes (Kerastes) was applied to Zeus as a horned deity. 'Ceras' is the equivalent of cross and of the Greek keras, meaning horned or shining. It resolves into keras-tes, i.e. shining light or Essence. 'Tes' (tez) occurs in Tezpi, Mexican title for Coxcox, the Great Ancestor.

CERBERUS (KERBEROS) In Greek mythology offspring of Echidna and Typhon. The vigilant but formidable and surly dog which guarded the entrance of the Infernal Regions on the River Styx, hence any grim, watchful guard, houseporter, etc. As his twelfth labor, Heracles was commanded to bring up the dog from the underworld. Brought out of Hades, Cerberus spat upon the ground, whence sprang the deadly aconite. Orpheus lulled Cerberus to sleep with his lyre that he might visit the world of the dead. In Roman mythology the Sibyl who conducted Aeneas through the Inferno threw the dog into a profound sleep with a cake seasoned with poppies and honey. In Dante's Inferno the tormenting genius of the Third Circle, where gluttonous and incontinent souls were found. Usually portrayed as a three-headed dog out of whose jaws poison drips, with hair formed of venomous snakes, and with a body which terminates in the tail of a dragon. Also said to be a dog with the head of a lion, lioness, lynx, or sow, or to have fifty or more heads. Compares with Carvara, Manalan-rakki, Orthros. From same root as cherub and Kraken; akin to Cimmerii (Dark People or People of the Dark).

Give a sop to Cerberus. Give a bribe; quiet a troublesome customer. The Greeks and Romans placed a cake in the hands of the dead as a payment or sop to Cerberus to permit them to pass without molestation.

CERCOPE (KERKOPES) In Greek mythology a race of ape-like but human dwarfs. Following their thievish nature, they tried to steal the weapons of Heracles. He caught them and tied them upside down on a pole, but their jesting amused him, and he released them. Zeus turned them into apes or stones when they tried to trick him. Probably earth spirits.

CERREALIA Roman games or festival in honor of Ceres, which began about April 12 and lasted for several days. Solemnized exclusively by women, who dressed in white garments and carried torches to dramatize the search for Proserpine. Parallels Eleusian Mysteries.

CERES In Roman mythology daughter of Saturn and Ops, sister of Jupiter, mother of Proserpine, mother-in-law of the king to the dead. Goddess of corn and harvests. Roman name applied to the Greek Demeter, who supplanted Tellus Mater, ancient Italian goddess of agriculture. Female counterpart of Cerus, she was susceptible to offense and prompt to punish offenders with lack of fertility. Her legend is identical with that of Demeter. She is symbolized by a wheat ear. Her name is the source of cereal and of crescere (to grow or increase), and compares with Cora and cross. It resolves into ac-Eros (ac Horus or across), i.e. Great Firelight. A botanic term for the maple is acer, the first two syllables of Ceres and Cora, the vowel being understood.

Cereus. A creeping plant supposedly born by the touch of Ceres, symbolizing modest genius.

CERIMON In Shakespeare's Pericles a physician of Epheus who restores life to Thaisa, wife of Pericles.

CERMAIT A name of the Irish god Ogma, meaning honey-mouthed.

CERNA In Irish legend evil beast pursued by Conaire. In the pursuit, Conaire broke a taboo.

CERNOBOG (ZCERNOBOCH) Slavic black or evil deity; lord of the powers of darkness; bringer of calamities. By later sources associated with the three-headed idol Triglav. Analogue of Cernunnos.

CERNUNNOS Gaelic triple-headed deity of the underworld. Sometimes represented as an old man from whose head branched the horns of a stag. The three heads gave triple power to his apotropaic virtues. Analogue of Cernobog.

CERRIDWEN (CERIDWEN) Brythonic grain and nature goddess. Daughter of Ogyrven. Wife of Tegid Voel (Tegid the Bald), and by him mother of Creirwy, the most beautiful girl in the world, and Avagddu, the ugliest boy in the world. Cerridwen, the goddess, who dwelt in a lake, wished to compensate her son for his handicap of ugliness by giving him knowledge. She prepared a caldron of inspiration to boil for a year. While she went to gather herbs of virtue (fertility), she set the blind Mordu to tend the fire and Gwion Bach to stir the pot. Three drops fell from the broth onto Gwion's finger, which he put in his mouth and became master of the knowledge intended for her son. His knowledge advised him to flee from Cerridwen's rage. He changed himself into a hare and she pursued him in the form of a greynound; the pair became fish and otter, bird and hawk, wheat grain and hen. Cerridwen the hen swallowed the grain and gave birth to a beautiful child, whom she cast into the sea in a harvest basket. He was rescued by Elphin and called Taliesin. Nurtured by Elphin, Taliesin became a great bard. In the form of a white sow called Hen Wen, Cerridwen went about Wales distributing gifts of bees, grain, and her own young. The destructive side of her nature was displayed in the form of a savage kitten which grew up to be the Palug Cat, one of the Three Plagues of Anglesey. Thus Cerridwen was a great nature goddess who gave verdure and who took it away and, as such, was called the White Lady of inspiration and death. Her caldron was the underworld pot from which life and plenty emerged. As the enemy of Gwion, she performed ritual murder on him. Their chase and changing forms typify the changing seasons. Her name is composed of cerdd (pig) and wen (white). She resembles Albina, Ceres, Demeter.

CERYNEAN STAG (CERUNITIS, KERYNEIAN STAG) In Greek mythology the golden-antlered stag or hound sacred to Artemis, which lurked in Cerynea, and whose capture was assigned to Heracles as his third labor. A stag of Artemis (moon), it was a stag of night; thus Heracles, the sun, was assigned to capture the night. Gold appears to be an incorrect metaphor, silver is usually the color assigned to the moon; it may refer to the early morning glow conquered by the sun.

CESSAIR In Celtic mythology Noah's granddaughter. Probably a moon goddess. Being refused a chamber for herself on the ark, she fled to the western borders of the world, Ireland. With her when she left were two men, her husband Finntain (Fintan) and Ladru, and fifty women. All perished with the exception of Finntain, who lived for six centuries and witnessed the arrival of Partholon, the giant, in Ireland.

CESTUS (1) Belt or girdle of Aphrodite, made by her husband Hephaestus. When she sported with Ares it fell off. It supposedly possessed a potent power to excite love. Poetically all women of irresistible charm wear Aphrodite's girdle or the cestus. Spenser in the Faerie Queene places it on Florimel, and gives virtue and chaste love to those who wear it. If a woman not chaste or faithful puts it on, it falls off or tears apart. (2) Among Greek and Roman boxers a device of heavy leather thongs, often loaded with iron or lead, which were wrapped around the hands as gloves. The girdle and the gloves are not etymologically related.

CETHE (CET) In Irish mythology son of Dianecht and Scathach, warrior goddess, from whom he learned the arts of war. A light deity. Brother of Cian and Cu. The three brothers were enemies of Brian, Iuchar, and Iucharba. See Brian, Cian.

CETHLIONN (CETHLENN) Literally, the crooked-tooth. In Celtic mythology wife of Balor. She told him of the prophecy that he would be killed by his grandson Lug.

CETO One of the Greek Nereides. Daughter of Nereus and Doris, wife of her brother Phorcys. Together they personified the hidden perils of the sea, and were the parents of the Gorgons, the Graea, and the dragon which guarded the apples of the Hesperides.

CETUS Constellation also known as the Sea Monster or Whale. Despised by mariners, who look upon it as an enemy. In Greek mythology the sea monster which was sent to devour Andromeda, but which turned to stone when it encountered the gaze of the Medusa head on the shield of Perseus.

CEYLON Site of Adam's Peak, which see. Also the station of Ka-li-ha, one of the Eighteen Chinese Buddhist Lohan. 'Ceyl' is cognate with silly, i. e. innocent or blessed.

CEYX In Greek mythology husband of Halcyone, which see.

CHA Word root meaning a yawning abyss. Root of chaos, Charon.

CHAABU Aramaic virgin-goddess. Earth-mother of Dusura. The cult of Chaabu and Dusura parallels that of Demeter and Persephone. Identified with Kore (Core).

CHAAC (CHAC) Mayan rain and thunder god. Creator and fertility deity, who with Ah-Kiuic and Hobnel formed a triad. God of the four quarters. Related to Tlaloc and, like him, he had four rain assistants or Chaacs as well as other assistants. He was elephant-headed or tapir-nosed, and identified as 'B' in Mayan manuscripts. Name signifies red one.

Chaacs (Chacs). Mayan rain gods of the four quarters whose leader was Chaac. Worshipped under the symbol of the cross, the four arms representing the cardinal points. They appear to be identical to or may have been assistants of the Bacabab. See Bacab. Birds, as wind symbols, were sacrificed to them. A name also applied to the four old men chosen annually to assist the priests.

CHADBURN Masculine name from Old English, signifying the fighting cat burn or stream, a place name, probably commemorating a spot where wildcat's drank.

CHAFER A beetle, which see for symbolism. Derived from Egyptian Chepera (sun deity), and related to French chevre (goat) and chevron (badge), and German schafher (shepherd). Chafter primarily meant ever-existing fire (sun).

CHAGAN-SHUKUTY Siberian deity, assistant to Otshirvani, creator god.

CHAGIGAH Offerings made by Jews along with the paschal sacrifice.

CHAIGIDIEL In the cabala an impediment of the heavenly influx. Corresponds to Chokmah. Cleaves to illusory or material appearances in opposition to those of reality and wisdom.

CHAIN Conjunction, ladder to heaven, matrimony, obligation, security, strength, union. Also bondage, conquest, crime, fetter, hopeless misfortune, imprisonment, link, slavery. Dream significance: sorrow, suffering. In heraldry, when on an animal, symbolizes acceptable but weighty service; when with collar and crown, symbolic of accepting obligation to bravely serve a sovereign. Compare stalk, thread, threefold cord. In Celtic mythology Lugh's chain was the Milky Way. Christian symbol of martyrdom. Emblem of Saints Balbina, George, Leonard, and Rade-gunde. In Greek mythology Zeus drew men up to heaven by a chain tied to his Olympian throne. Attribute of the goddess Ananke. In Norse mythology a chain of seven hundred links, fashioned by Volund, had the power to fetter the wind.

Chained Lady. The constellation Andromeda.

Chain of gold. Durability, excellence, wealth.

Chief's chain. In Gaelic legend chain hanging in the great hall of a chief or king. Anyone who wanted a hearing shook the chain, hence chain of justice.

CHAIR Authority, pause, rest, sovereignty. When a throne, typifies the navel of the earth. In Chinese drama represents a bridge. In Greek mythology Hades has a chair of forgetfulness.

Vacant chair. Death, honor, respect. In Hebrew tradition the Elijah chair. See Elijah.

CHAKDOR Tibetan Buddhist god in Yidak, miserable realm of thirst and hunger.

CHAK-DOR-DON-PA In Buddhism second celestial Bodhisattva.

CHAKEKENAPOK Potawatomi Indian man of flint or fire stone who, on coming into the world, caused the death of his mother. Prototype of Chibiabos.

CHAKRA (CHACKRA, CHAKKAR) From the Sanscrit meaning a circle, a cycle of years. A discus or weapon used by the Sikhas and commonly placed in the hands of Hindu gods. The circle of perfection, the revolving universe (compare Caer Sidi) or the wheel of the sun usually held by Vishnu. Chakra resolves into ever-existent great Ra (or ur A, i. e. fire A, the sun). Compare circle, wheel. Wheel symbolizing the dogmas of Buddhism, the dharmachakra, the circle of the law, the endless revolutions of births and deaths, the eternity of truth, the progressive character of faith, universal sovereignty. Among esoteric astrologists seven chakras correspond to seven interior stars, to seven metals and govern seven parts of the body:

Chakra	Planet	Metal	Anatomical Part
Muladhara	Saturn	lead	sacral plexus
Svadhithana	Mars	iron	prostatic ganglion
Manipura	Jupiter	tin	solar plexus
Anahata	Sun	gold	cardiac plexus
Vishuddhi	Venus	copper (or brass)	pharyngeal plexus
Ajna	Moon	silver	pituitary ganglion
Sahasrara	Mercury	quicksilver	pineal gland

Chakravarti. From the Sanscrit meaning emperor or ruler. In Buddhism and Hinduism signifies sovereign of the world. The term applied to Indian rajas under the assumption that the wheels of their chariots could revolve everywhere without obstruction.

CHALCEDONY Disperser of melancholy; secret prayer and open righteousness. Dream significance: friends rejoined.

CHALCHIUTLICUE (CHALCHI-HUILICUE, CHALCHIUHTLICUE)

Literally, she of the emerald skirt. In Aztec mythology, sister-wife of Tlaloc. Goddess of flowing brooks, rivers, and streams; also of lakes. She probably represents the limpid waters. A virgin mother, intimately connected with marsh plants as well as with water. A manifestation of the life principle, ruler of the West, she dwells on Yauqueme Mountain, which is covered with mugwort. When a sky deity, she is a lunar goddess, mother of the stars of the northern hemisphere, ruler of the sixth hour of the night, and associated with the jaguar (American tiger). When an earth-mother she assumes a snake or frog form which again connects her with water, is ruler of the third hour of the day. The great mother, she presides at birth and washes away sin, including original sin, and provides healing herbs. To male children she gives the bow and arrow and shield; to female children she gives the distaff, spindle, and weaving implements. Especially venerated by fishermen, seafarers, and water sellers. During the quarrels of Quetzalcoatl and Tezcatlipoca, she was placed in the sky as the sun, and caused a great flood in which all humans died. She was the woman who survived the deluge, thus mother of the human race, comparable to Eve. Children, bedecked with jewels to provide the jewel moisture, were sacrificed to her. Her priests were celibates who fasted and did penance, comparable to the eunuchs who served Eastern goddesses and to Roman Catholic priests. She generally is depicted with a yellow face and blue forehead, wearing turquoise earrings. A virgin mother, she is portrayed suckling a child. Her emblems are jadeite, mugwort, and shells. Some of her titles are: Acuecuyotl (water-making waves); Aiauh (mist or spray); Apoconallotl (foam of water); Atlacamani (sea-storm); Xixiquiphilui (rising and falling waves). In male form she is called Alt-canals, and thus compares to Hermaphrodite. See Androgynous deities.

CHALCHIUTZLI (CHALCHIHUTL, CHALCHIHUITZLI) Aztec precious stone of sacrifice. Jade and thorn used to pierce ears, tongue, and penis in sacrifices. Title of Chimalman, mother of Citlallatonac (Quetzalcoatl) in heaven.

CHALCIOPE In Greek mythology daughter of Aetes, king of Colchis; wife of Phryxus; sister of Medea. Her four sons, whom she believed to be lost, sailed to Colchis with Jason, and all were reunited. A dawn goddess.

CHALDEAN One of an ancient Semitic people who were noted naturalists and philosophers. The Romans believed all Chaldeans were versed in occult learning and for this reason the name has become attached to astrologers, enchanters, magicians, soothsayers.

CHALICE Faith, intuition, prudence, redemption, sacrament, sacrifice, salvation, suffering, wisdom. Fertility; a female sex symbol representing the reproductive energy. As holder of water, source of life. As holder of wine, provider of insight. Poetically any drinking cup. Compare vase. Christian consecrated cup used in celebration of the Lord's Supper, in the eucharist or mass.

CHALITZA A Jewish ceremony used on renouncing the obligation to marry a deceased brother's widow.

CHALK, CHARCOAL, AND CLAY Apprentice in Freemasonry.

CHALLENGE Exemplified by hat in ring or by tilted ellipse, in allusion to an old custom of prize fighters.

CHALMECACIUATL Aztec children's paradise. The tree of milk, which nourishes those who die before attaining the use of reason, is located here. When the abode of Tlaloc, called Tlalocan. Compare Mictlan.

CHAM Anciently the title of a Mogul or Tatar ruler. Now written khan.

CHAMBERLAIN Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning a keeper of the household.

CHAMELEON (CHAMAELEON)

(1) Because it is a lizard which has the power of changing its shape at will by inflating itself with air and also of changing its color, typifies any person of changeable disposition. Its name means lion on the ground. In African lore an unlucky animal, the embodiment of departed spirits and associated with the entry of death into the world. (2) Constellation located near the South Pole.

CHAMOIS Christian pastors of the Vaudois sect. The Vaudois regarded Christ as a chamois; their pastors supposedly leaped from virtue to virtue.

CHAMOMILE December 17 birthday flower, with the sentiment energy in adversity, love in austerity.

CHAMPIGNON A mushroom symbolizing suspicion.

CHAMPION A name of the constellation Perseus.

Champion's portion. Among ancient Celts the choicest portion of meat, assigned to the bravest warrior at a feast. Cuchulainn won the portion at the feast of Bricriu.

CHAMPS ELYSEES Literally, Elysian Fields. The name of a famous avenue in Paris.

CHAMUEL One of the seven holy angels of the third hierarchy mentioned in the apocryphal book of Enoch. The other six are: Gabriel, Jophiel, Michael, Raphael, Uriel, Zadkiel.

CHAMUNDI A Hindu protective goddess.

CHAN Yucatan serpent race from which Votan descended.

CHANCE Originally meant that which falls out favorably, especially popular in dice-playing. Root of chancel and chancery, and the Lord Chancellor represents Supreme Law (God).

CHANCHU God of war of the Yuracare Indians of South America.

CHANDALA In India one of mixed class, therefore an out-cast. Originally one with a Sudra father and Brahman mother. Chandalas are scavengers and executioners. Word used as an abusive epithet.

CHANDRA Hindu moon-god. Source of fertility and growth as bringer of dew to crops, which ripen under the harvest moon. Giver of sap to all vegetation. Soma was a moon mead. Chandra swayed human life from birth until death. Rites to obtain offspring were performed during certain phases of the moon. The steed of Chandra was an antelope. The moon-gem is called chandrakanta.

CHANDRAGUPTA In Hindu legend, a mother. To save her son from a chief who had slain her husband, she places him in a vase and leaves him at the entrance of a cattle-pen. A bull named Chando guards the infant, and a herdsman, noting the wonder, rears him as his own child and names him. While playing games, he takes the part of a king, and has the hands and feet of his companions struck off with axes, which have blades made of goat's horns and handles shaped from sticks. The lopped limbs are restored whole when at Chandragupta's word the games are over. This is a fertility legend, following the pattern of abandoned children, which see. Chandra-gupta is the young sun, saved from the darkness which has slain his father, the mature sun. The hands and feet of the children are the stalks cut down in the harvest, which grow again when the sun so wills in the spring. See Boy judge.

CHANG In Chinese mythology the glorious. Father of the Chinese Twins, Fat the Flasher and Tan (Dan) the Dawn. Chang's holiday name was Man or Wan, meaning the colored or spotted or perhaps the tattooed. Chang literally is 'To Draw a Bow,' and refers to the five stars, Kappa, Lambda, Mim, Nun, Pi, in the shape of a drawn bow in the second coil of Hydra, in southern quadrant, summer season. Represented by the deer, his element is the moon. Regarded as unlucky in any enterprise.

CHANGELING In folklore a huge-headed, ill-favored, or imbecilic infant, believed to be the offspring of mischievous fairies, underground gnomes, or of demons and witches, is substituted by its malicious parents for a beautiful and normal infant which has been left unguarded, especially before baptism. Compare Exchange of children.

Change of sex. A folktale motif appearing in stories all over the world. The switching of roles is resorted to as a counter to the evil eye, as a form of atonement, a form of deception, a means of escape from a dangerous situation, also as a form of punishment visited by a deity. The most famous change-of-sex story is that of Tiresias. The myth of Callisto, seduced by Zeus in the form of Artemis, is akin to this theme. Related also are the beast marriage and disguised suit-or themes. A change of clothes suggesting change of sex still occurs at certain holiday festivals (Christmas, Hallowe'en, and Thanksgiving, in the United States). Probably the source of masquerade balls. See Androgynous deities.

CHANG HSIEN (CHANG YUANG-HSIAO) A deified Chinese recluse, who gave those who invoked him male offspring and protected all children from the celestial dog T'ien Kou. He warded off calamities and was a guardian deity.

CHANG KUO (CHANG-KUO-LAO) One of the Eight Chinese Immortals (Pa Kung). He refused the patronage of the emperor and lived instead as a recluse. He was a renowned magician and rode a mule (cloud), sometimes backwards, on which he traveled great distances. When not in use the mule was folded up and placed in his wallet. Compare Skidbladmir. He possessed the power of invisibility. He usually carries a phoenix feather, a peach of immortality or a bamboo tube drum. The drum (thunder) announced his arrival and attracted a crowd.

CH'ANG-O (HENG-O) Chinese moon goddess. For drinking some of the stolen elixir of life she was transformed into a three-legged toad and forced to stay on the moon, midway to the heavens. In some accounts referred to as a male deity.

CHANG SIEN Chinese deity worshiped by women desirous of offspring.

CHANG TAO-LING Chinese heavenly teacher, alchemist, maker of pill of immortality, master of wizardry and secrets of healing.

CHANNA In Buddhism charioteer of Gautama. He explains that all things die and causes Gautama to give up his life of pleasure.

CHANNUKAH (CHANUCA, HANUKKAH) Chief post-Biblical Jewish festival. Celebrated in memory of the restoration of the temple service during the time of the Maccabeans 164 B. C. The main feature of the festival is the burning of the Channukah Light, and for this reason it also is known as the Feast of Lights or Feast of Dedication. The ceremonies, which last eight days, begin on Chisleu 25 which falls close to December 25 of the Gregorian calendar. The burning of the Channukah light parallels the burning of the Yule log.

CHA-NO-YU Traditional Japanese tea ceremony.

CHANTICLEER In medieval beast-epic Reynard the Fox and in Chaucer's Nun's Priest's Tale (Nonne Prestes), cock of the walk, lord of the barnyard, master spirit, hailer of dawn. His crimson comb represents the zig-zagged effulgence of the day and the fiery-pointed beams of the morning. Name resolves into chant and eclair, singer of the light or sing clear. In Chaucer, he falls into a trap set by Fox by succumbing to flattery. He escapes Fox by outwitting him, thus one who is weak and escapes ill-fortune by trickery.

Chantecler. The hero of a drama by Rostand. The lord of the barnyard, who believes that his cock-a-doodle-doo brings Dawn. A hen-pheasant, stirred to jealousy by his enemies, the cat and the owl, covers his eyes, and discovers Dawn comes without his call.

CHANUN AND WOI-SHUN In

Burmese religion creators of all things on heaven and earth. Offspring of Hkrip Hkrawp and Sik Sawp; parents of Ngawn-wa Magam, who with a hammer gave the world its shape. First ancestors. Compare Shippawn Ayawng.

CHAO-FENG Chinese dragon, lover of danger.

CHAOMANCY The telling of fortunes by aerial apparitions.

CHAOS First state of the universe. The Great Abyss. Infinite Space, whence gods, men, and all things arose. Eternity, opposed to the world, which is not eternal. Pre-existing empty space, conceived as a primordial sea. Hence any vast chasm or gulf or unfathomable abyss. By alchemists held to be the expanse of the atmosphere. In philosophy a condition in which chance rules and uniformity and all evidence of law or of ideal ends are lacking; ontological anarchy. Vulgarized to mean confusion, disorder. From the root cha. In Babylonian mythology a feminine principle, mother of all the gods. See Neith, Tiamat. In Chinese mythology Ch'i and Tien Li were formed in Chaos. In Greek mythology male principle in which evolved Gaea (Earth), Tartarus (Lower World), Nyx (night), Erebus (Darkness), Eros (Love). In later Orphic belief Chaos, Erebus, and Nyx existed at the beginning. In Hesiod Chaos mated with Divine Principle. Chaos also is represented as the husband of Gaea. In Norse mythology Chaos is conceived as a gulf, bound on the north by the cold, dark Niflheim, and on the south by the warm, bright Muspelheim.

Chaos Gander. Fertilizer of the Golden Egg laid by Chaos Goose. The Egg, laid in Chaos or Void, was the source of all life. It usually is conceived as the sun.

Chaos Goose. Layer of the Egg of Life, the sun. It cackled loudly to Chaos Gander when the egg was laid.

CHAO SAN NIANG In Chinese mythology a woman who sold her hair to provide coffins for her husband's parents. Deified as the goddess of wig makers.

CHAPELIZOD Chapelle d'Iseult; chapel of romance.

CHAPLET In heraldry a crown or garland awarded for valor or victory. In the Roman Catholic Church a rosary; more strictly the third part of a rosary or fifty-five beads. Derived from the chaplet of roses placed on statues of Virgin Mary. Vulgarized to mean a string of beads.

CHAPULTEPEC Sacred Aztec mountain. Ancient residence of the kings of Mexico.

CHARADRIUS A plover symbolizing greed. Anciently used to determine the prospects of the ill. If the bird turned away, the patient died, if destined to live, the bird looked at the patient. The marrow of the bone supposedly restored sight to the blind. The Greeks believed the sight of one cured jaundice.

CHARCOAL In ancient Crete, Egypt, etc., used for fires in tombs to warm the dead. According to another theory, early burials took place at night and the torches were thrown into the graves. In Japan typifies changeableness, prosperity.

CHAREYA Among the Chahrocs of California the Old Man Above who appears to evil spirits and sorcerers.

CHARIDOTES Title of Hermes as a young god of fertility, flocks, and herds.

CHARIOT (1) Achievement, authority, conquest, litigation, military might, organization, providence, riot, sovereignty, succor, triumph, vengeance, war. Deity vehicle, cloud, roar of the wind, wheel of the sun. Dream significance: sure reward. In gnostic tradition, vision of Adonai (Sun). The Catholic Church. In Greek mythology car of Apollo, Bacchus, Cybele, Dionysus, Eos, Hera, Helios, Ops, Phoebus, Rhea, and Zeus. In Hebraic-Christian tradition the car of God; thousands of angels ride the skies in chariots. Typifies channel of expression; Solomon is said to have made himself a chariot, thus man is the maker of his own fate and controller of his own destiny. Also a symbol of terror, alluding to Canaanite chariots of iron, armed with scythes or hooks which projected from the ends of the axletrees. Joshua was engaged in a battle in which such chariots rushed in among his men and created havoc and riot. In India, the light and lustre of Indra and the Immortals. In ancient Sumer, chariots were placed beside dead kings for use in Aralu. (2) Card in tarot deck signifying potency, power, and triumph. Illustrated by a conqueror, the master-power, in a chariot (experience or human personality) drawn by a white and black sphinx (forces of good and evil). Typifies the house or evolutionary cycle in which self to self-not (outerworld) is contracted. Instrument of Mercury as messenger of Mars. Attainment: King in his triumph; triumph in his mind. In divination corresponds to number 8 and Hebrew letter cheth. (Some diviners correspond to number 7 and Hebrew letter sayin). Denotes: defense, dispute, kingship, mental triumph, protection, providence. When card is in reverse: defeat, litigation, riot.

Chariot drawn by animals. A chariot drawn by asses, typifies Silenus; by bears, the firmament; by cats, Freya; by cocks, night; by deer, Artemis; by dogs, Hephaestus; by dolphins, Amphitrite, Galatea, Poseidon, and Tetys; by doves, Aphrodite; by dragons, Medea; by eagles, Jupiter, Zeus; by elephants, Cronus; by goats, Pan, Thor; by horses, Aides, Apollo, Ares, Death, Dis Pater, Helios, Luna, Phoebus, Pluto, Sun; by leopards, Bacchus, Dionysus; by lions, Cybele; by lizards, Hermes; by lynxes, Bacchus, Dionysus; by owls, Athena; by oxen, Saturn; by panthers Bacchus, Dionysus; by peacocks, Hera; by rams, Hermes; by sea horses, Poseidon; by serpents, Ceres, Demeter; by sparrows, Aphrodite, Venus; by storks, Hermes; by swans, Aphrodite; by tigers, Bacchus, Dionysus; by unicorns, Chastity; by whales, Oceanus; by wolves, Ares.

Chariot drawn by four black horses. Aides (Hades), Pluto.

Charioteer. Deity, especially the Sun. The constellation Auriga, also called Wagoner and Charioteer.

Charioteer driving four horses. Sun, lord of the four quarters of the earth. An idea which originated in Babylon.

Two-wheeled chariot. The Great Vehicle, Solar Car, Divinity in dual aspect as Ahans, Aevins, Dioscuri, Gemini.

CHARIS In the Iliad wife of Hephaestus, whose palace gleams with the splendor of a thousand stars. In the Odyssey, Aphrodite is the wife of Hephaestus. Both names mean glistening dawn.

Charis is the personification of beauty and grace, and in the Odyssey, she is expanded into the three Charites (Graces).

CHARITES In Greek mythology daughters of Zeus and Eurynome. Generally represented as three in number: Algia (Algea), splendor; Euphrosyne, good cheer, and Thalia, luxuriant beauty. Their special function was to act, in conjunction with the Seasons, as attendants upon Aphrodite, whom they adorned with wreaths of flowers and perfumed with the scents of blossoms as the Queen of Spring. Thus they were givers of increase. They attended other deities, such as Apollo, Dionysus, or Eros, and accompanied the Muses. Their name derived from Charis. Later called the Graces.

CHARITY (1) Feminine name from the Latin meaning love, kindness. Diminutive form, Cherry.

(2) One of the Gnostic Aeons.

(3) Symbolized by a blue water lily and a saffron. In an Italian icon represented by a woman in red wearing a flaming crown. One infant sucks her breast, two stand beside her. The three children represent the triple power of charity, i.e. charity, faith, hope.

CHARLEMAGNE Charles the First, King of the Franks and Emperor of the West, crowned by Pope Leo III. A brutal warrior, his realm, at the end of his conquests, was called the beginning of the Holy Roman Empire. Son of Pepin the Short, he was a historical person, born in 742 and died in 814. In a campaign against the Arabs in Spain, the death of his chief paladin, Roland, gave rise to a cycle of romances attributing heroic deeds to Charlemagne and his twelve paladins, which appear to be lifted from the Odyssey or from Gaelic and Norse mythology. Charlemagne has been sainted.

CHARLES (CAREY, CARL, CAROL, CAROLUS, CHARLIE, CHARLEY, KARL) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning manly, noble-spirited. In feminine form Charlotte (Carlots, Carlotta, Lotta, Lottie, Lotty).

Charles's Wain. The seven brightest stars in Ursa Major (Great Bear). Formerly a popular name for the constellation itself. The seven stars form the rough outline of a rustic wagon or wheelbarrow and are known as Big Dipper or Plow.

CHARM An object of art or nature believed to possess magical properties for removing or warding off evil. A relic of stone worship. Animals too are believed to possess qualities particularly useful to man. Thus primitive peoples wear a live ferret, because the animal is tenacious of life; others wear insects which are difficult to find and kill. So called civilized persons, hoping to escape death or evil, to have many offspring, or to obtain wealth, wear the hair of a horse (for speed), of a hornless oxen (for strength), of a rat (for nimbleness), wear an article made from the horn of cattle or other prolific animals, or the paw or tail of a rabbit (wealth, speed, or nimbleness), the skin of a boar (strength), or of a frog (its slipperiness being a protection). Gems are popular as bringers of good health, love, and wealth. In China and Japan paper charms are popular. See paper charms.

CHARMIAN Feminine name from the Greek, meaning little joy.

CHARMIDES In Plato's Dialogs, a young man, a model of temperance. With Socrates and two others, he holds a conversation on abstinence.

CHARON In Greek mythology son of Erebus and Nyx. Dark, grim, silent ferryman, who bears the souls of the dead across the River Styx to the judgment seat of Aea-cus, Rhadamanthys, and Minos in Hades. Usually represented as an old man with a long gray beard in ragged garments. His name signifies eagle and lion, and is from the root cha (abyss or devourer). Probably so named because he had bright eagle-like eyes or was the howling wind at cavernous entrances. In early myths he appeared as an ogre with gaping jaws always hungering for prey within his reach. He parallels Adad-Ea. Humorously, any ferryman.

Charon's toll. In Greek mythology fee paid to Charon to ferry the dead across the river Styx to Elysian Fields. This led to the custom of placing a coin in the hand or mouth of the dead. Humorously any ferry fare.

Charon's staircase. The flight of steps from mid-stage to the orchestra in an ancient Greek theater.

CHAROPS In Greek mythology father of Oiagros, grandfather of Orpheus. Having given help to Dionysus, the god instructed him in the orgies of his rites. He passed these instructions on to his son Oiagros, who in turn passed them on to his son Orpheus.

CHAROS (CHARONTAS) In Greek folklore an angel of death. He is an alarming figure, who rides a horse and carries off the dead. A modern version of Charon. Analogue of the headless horseman.

CHARUN Ancient Etruscan god of death. He finished his victims with a hammer, which he carried as he accompanied Mars into battle.

CHARYBDIS AND SCYLLA In Greek mythology witches of the shoals. If a mariner goes near Scylla (reefs), he will lose six of his men to her six mouths; if he goes near Charybdis (whirlpool), he will lose his entire ship. Charybdis was a ravenous woman transformed by the gods into one who swallows her prey; her companion Scylla tears her prey. Thus to be between them is to be between two dangers or evils, either one of which can be safely avoided only by risking the other, or by seeking to avoid one pitfall one falls into another. Compare Mioto-Seki.

CHASCA Inca goddess of dawn, created by Viracocha. She was a virgin-mother, and her messengers were the clouds which drop the dew.

CHASTISEMENT In an Italian icon portrayed as a fellow holding an ax as if to strike a blow. Beside him is a lion which torments a bear.

CHASTITY (1) Exemplified by a unicorn and a virgin. In an Italian icon personified by a modest, honest-faced woman holding a whip as if she would correct herself. She wears a white robe and on her girdle is written, "Castigo Corpus Meum" (I chastise my body). Cupid, his eyes blindfolded, his bow broken, lies at her feet to show that concupiscent does not have dominion over her. Cenobitic chastity is typified by a bee, circle of fire, myrrh, naked sword. (2) In folklore nothing is unattainable to a chaste woman. Tests of chastity are made to prove faithfulness and stability. The proof frequently brings with it the fulfillment of a wish; whereas the proof of infidelity often brings death.

CHASUBLE Literally, little house. In Christian tradition alludes to the dress Pilate ordered placed on Christ; also alludes to the seamless garment which Christ wore and for which the soldiers in Calvary cast lots. Symbolic of charity and protection. Identical to vesica piscis, a yoni emblem.

CHATAKA An occult bird which drinks no water except rain water. A good-luck omen.

CHAUCER Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning shoemaker.

CHAUNCEY Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning silent praise.

CHAUS In the Grail legend son of Yvain the Bastard, squire of King Arthur. Arthur agrees to take him on the perilous adventure to the Chapel of Saint Austin. Fearful of oversleeping the youth does not undress the night before the journey. He dreams that the king has left without him, rises, and believing that he is following Arthur, rides into a forest where he sees a chapel set in a graveyard. He enters and over the body of a knight sees tapers burning in golden candlesticks. He takes one of the tapers and leaves. In the forest he meets a man armed with a large two-edged knife who calls him a thief and traitor, and stabs him in the thigh. With a loud cry, the youth awakes and finds himself in the hall at Cardoil, wounded to death, the knife in his side, the golden candlestick in his hand. This is a light myth, in which Chaus, the moon's ray is slain by a knight of darkness. A traitor because he enlisted with Arthur, the sun.

CHAUVIN A character in several French dramas drawn from the life of Nicholas Chauvin, a soldier in Napoleon's forces who acquired notoriety through his exaggerated devotion to the emperor and the imperial cause. Chauvinism has come to mean the mischievousness worked by irascible, unreasonable and vainglorious patriots. The name is applied to those who are absurdly jealous of their country's honor and puffed up with an exaggerated sense of national glory, thus an extravagant glorifier of his country.

CHAVAH (CHAVVA) In Hebrew tradition an alternative form of Eve, signifying mother of all that lives. Chavah, which resolves into Ever-existent Living A, is closely akin to Jehovah, which resolves into Ever-existent Hovah (Eva) or Living A.

CHAYIM Literally, life. A toast among the Jews, signifying, "For life." Equivalent of "To your health."

CHEAPSIDE A street in London formerly noted for its shops. Anciently called The Cheap. Cheap is from the Anglo-Saxon ceap, meaning trade, and is identical with Cheop and keep. Thus the street may be said to have been on the side of the 'keep,' i.e. the famous prison (bailey or tower), once located in its vicinity.

CHECKER BOARD Field of battle. Vicissitudes of human life; good and evil, light and darkness, plenty and famine. In China, checkers are called wei chi and symbolize the scholar.

CHEEK In the Lasya and Than-dava dances of India, the cheeks have six uses: 1- Kampita, tremor of the cheeks, depicting horripilation. 2- Kshama, dropping cheeks, depicting sadness. 3- Kunchita, sunken cheeks, depicting chills, fear, fever. 4- Phulla, blooming cheeks, depicting happiness. 5- Purna, raised cheeks, depicting joy and pride. 6- Sama, natural cheeks, depicting natural state.

CHEELA (CHELA) East Indian crested serpent-eagle. A disciple. See winged serpent.

CHEESE Dream significance: gain, profit.

CHEKA Soviet secret police acting against counter-revolutionary movements. From che and ka, Russian initial letters for the words signifying extraordinary commission. The Gay-Pay-Oo (Ogpu) supplanted the Cheka in 1922.

CHELM In Jewish folklore a town in Poland, the inhabitants of which were traditional fools.

CHELONE Greek nymph who not only refused to attend the wedding of Zeus and Hera, but who ridiculed it. For the insult Hermes dragged her from her home and threw her into a river, turning her into a turtle or one who carries its house on its back.

CHEMARIM Hebrew idolatrous priests. The word supposedly is derived from a root signifying to burn, and may have denoted fire-priests who worshiped the sun.

CHEMIN Sky-god of the Carib Indians.

CHEMOSH National god of the Moabites. Also worshiped by the Ammonites and under Solomon at Jerusalem. He appears to have been a fertility or sun deity to whom living persons were sacrificed. Sometimes erroneously identified with Ammon.

CHEM-PA See Maitreya.

CHEN Literally, crossbar of a carriage. In the Chinese Zodiac, four stars, Beta, Gamma, Delta, Epsilon; all in Corvus, in southern quadrant, summer season. Represented by the worm; element water; lucky period in every way. In the eight diagrams (Pa Kwa) represents thunder.

CH'EN CH'I In Chinese Buddhism one of the Men Shen, the two guardians of the portals of Buddhist temples. A puffer or blower. From his mouth he blows streams of yellow gas which destroy evil influences. His companion is Cheng Lung. Also called Ha.

CH'ENG HUANG Chinese god of city walls, ditches, moats, and ramparts. Spiritual magistrate of the people. He gets a monthly report from Tsao Shen, god of the hearth, on all mortals, and reports evil deeds to Yen Lo, Judge of Hell, and to Shang Ti, Supreme Being. Protector against disease and evil spirits. Sometimes identified as Shui Jung, as both names mean city moat.

CHENG LUNG (HENG) In Chinese Buddhism one of the Men Shen, the two guardians of the portals of Buddhist temples. He is a snorter from whose nostrils streaks a white light which destroys the body and soul of evil influences. His companion is Ch'en Ch'i.

CHENG WU (CHEN WU) Chinese deity of the north with residence at the North Pole. Ruler of the abode of darkness. Reincarnation of T'ien Pao (Yuan Shih). Also called Pei-chi-Chen Chun (God of the North Pole) and Hsuan T'ien Shang Ti.

CHENRESI In Tibetan Buddhism spiritual son of the God of Western Paradise; he gazes down on Yidak, realm of thirst and hunger. He refused to become a Buddha although qualified as he preferred to remain outside Nirvana, that he might show dwellers of Miyul and Gholson the true path of salvation. Reincarnated as Shinje-chho-gyal. Compare Avalokitesvara, Dalai Lama.

CHEN TSUNG Chinese creator of a deity. A deceitful and cowardly emperor, who, to justify a disgraceful peace, invented an ancestor, Yu Huang (see). He claimed Yu Huang visited him in dreams and instructed him. In time Yu Huang was identified with Shang Ti and worshiped as the Supreme Deity.

CHEOP (CHEAPE, CHEPE, CHEPERA) Ancient Egyptian deity of the rising sun. A name which yields Ever-existent Eye. At Onuphis, which resolves into Onup-is and yields One Eye of Light, Cheop was identified as a crocodile. He was known in early Britain as Ludd (Lud). Cognate with Cheap, Sheep, Ship, and also with 'chepe,' which appears in names such as Goodchepe.

CHEOPS (CHUFU) First king of the fourth dynasty of Egypt; about 3,000 B. C. Builder of the Great Pyramid at Gizeh. The shape of the pyramid is a cone or fire symbol. Chufu compares with Fuji, the cone-like sacred fire-mountain of Japan.

CHEOU-LAO Chinese god of longevity. Sometimes identified with Lao Tzu.

CHEPERA (CHAFURA, KHEP-

ERI Ancient Egyptian deity. Father of the gods. Deity of the rising sun, a creator god. Represented by the scarabaeus and sometimes shown with a scarabaeus for his head. Cognate with English cafer (beetle) and shepherd and with German schäfer (shepherd).

CHERETHITES (CHERETHIM)

Philistines who served as mercenaries. With the Pelethites, they served as runners (messengers) in David's army. They appear also to have been executioners, which some interpret as the meaning of their name.

CHERRY Delights of the blessed, increase, merry-making, virginity, yoni. Typifies the generative power of nature. Dream significance: (sour) sorrow, suffering; (sweet) joy in love. From the same root as cherub. A corruption of cheris (later cheri); identical with Greek Charis (Grace), with charity and cherish, and with Hebrew cheres, meaning orb of the sun; also with caress and church. In Christian tradition delight of the blessed, fruit of paradise. In Roman mythology one of the fruits of Ceres.

Cherry blossom. Spiritual beauty. In the language of flowers: Do me justice. Single blossom: education; double blossom: false hopes. In China called ying hua. Emblem of April. Symbol of feminine beauty, also of one who willingly sheds his blood for a noble cause. In Japan called sakura. A national flower and herald of spring. Symbolizes beauty, blamelessness, courtesy, gentility, modesty, a short but beautiful career, hence transience. Talisman used as power against plague.

Cherry fair. A passing show, a pleasant occasion that will not last.

Cherry tree. Great Divine Spirit, education. Truth (relating to the George Washington legend).

White cherry tree. Deception.
Winter cherry. Deception.

CHERSAD A plant of a dry waste.

CHERUB (CHOREB, KERUB, PLURAL CHERUBIM) In the Bible an order of celestial beings or symbolic representations. The Cherubim discern and rule all things and execute, with the speed of thought, the will of God, and thus are messengers representing Divine Wisdom. They are benign and powerful transporters of the Deity, they are the pale from the wind-driven storm clouds which serve as God's chariot, or they themselves are the storm-clouds serving as the chariot. They are the angels guarding the tree of life, the swirlers of the flaming sword in the Garden of Eden after the expulsion of Adam and Eve. The flaming sword may be interpreted as lightning. As Swirlers, the Cherubim are the winds and resemble Caer Sidi. The legend attached to the Grail castle, which only those who are holy and perfect may enter resembles that of the Garden of Eden. The Hebrew Ark was surmounted by Cherubim, symbolic of the power and protection of God, and the union of the heavenly with the earthly. When shown as two, Cherubim are said to symbolize the realms heaven and earth; or the two names of God, Elohim and Jehovah. When shown as four, they are said to represent the four directions or winds. A Cherub is of blue or golden yellow color, has the form of a winged man with a fourfold head, that of an eagle, lion, man, and ox, and stands on wheels. Their eyes represent universal knowledge and omniscience; their wings divine nature and speed. The ox stands for the world of cattle; the lion, beasts of the jungle or wild; man, for thinking creatures, and the eagle for winged creatures. The four are identical to those assigned to the evangelists of Christ. In the hierarchy of the Christian monk Dionysius, Cherubim represented an order of angelic beings second to the Seraphim and excelled in knowledge. In modern art and poetry portrayed as a beautiful woman. Typifies eternal youth and innocence. In heraldry a cherub symbolizes dignity, glory, high position, honor. The name, which in Hebrew is K'rubh, appears to be borrowed from the Sumerian Karubu, a title of Ea. It is cognate with Cerberus; cherry; ker (or car), Celtic for fortress; and kirk, Scotch for church. Choreb is an alternative name of Mount Sinai. The Cherubim are akin to other fabulous winged creatures, such as the griffon, the winged bull of Assyria, the Sphinx. Compare angel.

CHERYL Feminine name; a blend of Cherry and Beryl.

CHESED In cabalism the fourth Sephira. Mercy or Love. Also called Gedulah, Magnificence. The divine name for Chesed is El, the Mighty One.

CHESSE BOARD Battlefield, game of life, vicissitudes of life. Good and evil, light and darkness, plenty and famine. In China the game of chess is one of the four elegant accomplishments. It typifies a life of leisure enjoyed in peace and tranquility. Compare book.

CHEST Ark or boat in which the virgin goddess's son is set adrift by enemies, as in the legends of Adonis, Attis, Moses, Perseus, Sargon, Scyld, Tammuz. The chest appears in Tales which probably have a historical situation, such as the emigrating or fleeing of tribes, or with a natural phenomenon, as the sailing of the sun or moon across the skies. Among ancients, the chest or coffin, in which the dead were laid, had ambivalent significance, i.e. death and rebirth.

CHEST (ANATOMICAL) Among mystics, a chest if broad, typifies daring, strength; if hairy, voluptuousness; if hollow, degeneracy; if narrow, weakness; if smooth, prudence, wisdom.

CHESTER Masculine name from the Latin, meaning a camp, warlike.

CHESTNUT Luxury. In the language of flowers: Render me justice. Charm with which to keep off rheumatism. Dream significance: (cooking) dreamer will be exploited; (eating) difficult business situation. In Christian tradition symbolizes chastity, the triumph of virtue over temptations of the flesh. In Japan typifies haughtiness.

Dried chestnut. In Japan success.

CHETAH (CHEETAH) Guile, wile. A beautiful creature capable of inflicting pain. The name resolves into ac-et-a, which yields ever-existent, brilliant A (sun), and is cognate with cheater.

CHETH (HETH) Eighth letter of the Hebrew alphabet meaning fence or enclosure; sometimes interpreted as field. Its numerical value is eight, which corresponds to balance. It symbolizes cultivation, defense, refuge, specific location. According to the mystics, its color is orange-yellow, its correspondence in the tarot deck is Justice; its zodiacal or planetary correspondence is Cancer (in some occult works, Libra). Its direction on the cube of space is east-below, which intimates that though self-conscious elements are involved, mental activities are carried on at the subconscious level; its intelligence is of the house of influence; its function is speech; its psychological attribute, receptivity, will; and it is associated with labor in the field. In white magic, designates Chasid and corresponds to the angels of the 8th choir, the Bene-Elohim or sons of God, who are identical with the archangel host. By their ministry animal creation was developed by Elohim-Sabaoth, whose attribute is Hod, i.e. praise. Cheth is equivalent to the German ch, and appears to have derived its name from the resemblance of its oldest form to a fence or wall.

CHEVRON Emblem of rank. Award, heroism, honor. Its wavy lines represent the sea, hence an emblem of Aquarius, symbolizing fertility. The lines, coming to a sharp point represent the rafters in a gable-roof that meet at the ridge, and in middle ages, a chevron was awarded to those who built churches and fortresses. The word is derived from chevre, French for goat, and perhaps the chevron originally was made of goatskin. Chevre is the equivalent of the Anglo-Saxon chafer (bettle), a sun symbol. In heraldry symbolizes protection. Chevrons, small chevrons, are awarded to sailors and soldiers. In Christian tradition a chevron was granted to a crusader who achieved some notable enterprise.

CHEW THE CUD To ruminate; figuratively to meditate.

CHI (1) Twenty-second letter of the Greek alphabet, transliterated into English, German, and Latin by chu or X. As X it represents the cross of lux (light). It is the initial letter of Christ and part of the sacred monogram Chi-Rho. (2) Note of the Chinese pentatonic scale. Said to represent the affairs of state. (3) The four stars in the shape of a sieve in the Chinese zodiac: Beta, Delta, Epsilon, Gamma, in the hand of Sagittarius, eastern quadrant, spring season. Represented by the leopard. Element, water. Lucky in almost any way. Also the name of a spirit of grain.

CH'I In Chinese mythology the Immortal Principle. Combined with Tien Li, the Celestial Principle, and produced Chih, Matter.

CHIA Moon goddess of Colombian Indians. Once, in a temper, she flooded the world.

CHIAK Literally, the Horn. In Chinese Zodiac the four stars, Spica, Zeta, Theta, Iota, in the shape of a cross in the skirt of Virgo. In the Eastern quadrant, spring season. Represented by the earth dragon; element, wood. Unlucky for buying land or building houses. Good time to marry off daughters.

CHIANG TZU-YA Chinese god of fishermen.

CHIAO Note in the Chinese pentatonic scale. Said to represent the people.

CHIBIABOS (CHAKEKENAPOK, CHIPIAPOOS) In Algonquin Indian tradition companion and younger brother of the Hare, Manabozho. Lord of the ghost world. A carnivorous animal, a lynx or wolf. Longfellow used the name in Hiawatha for the musician who personified the harmony of nature.

signifies seven flowers. Also called Tonacatecutli.

CHICHEN IZTA A name of Itzamna (see), a Mayan deity. Also the name of a sacred Yucatan city. Well-preserved ruins, including a pyramid and a building 450 feet long, which date back to the 6th century A. D., still exist on the site.

CHICORY Frugality.

CHICUNAUHMICTLAN In Aztec mythology ninth pit over which the lords of night prevail for nine hours and regulate the affairs of men.

CHICHIVACHE A fabulous animal that lived only on virtuous women, and for this reason was all skin and bone, because its food was extremely scarce. Chaucer introduced the word into English, meaning lean or meager-looking cow, thus the animal appeared as a bovine monstrosity. He had borrowed the word from the French chichifache, meaning thin or ugly-faced. Antitype to Bicorné, which see.

CHIE Chibcha (Colombian) Indian goddess of sensual pleasure. She was turned into an owl or the moon by Bochica.

CHIEF Supreme authority. Among certain tribes, the chief plays the role of a god, and is accredited with the powers of the god he impersonates. In heraldry the upper third section of a shield.

CHICK A term of affection, suggesting something delicate, small or young. Also chickadee.

Chick breaking shell. Birth, Easter.

CHIEH KUEI In Chinese legend an intolerable tyrant. He brought the reign of the Hsia dynasty, founded by Yu, to a close. At the request of the gods, he was superseded by T'ang.

CHICKEN Cowardice, effeminacy, fear.

CHIEH-PO-KA Deified human. One of the Eighteen Chinese Buddhist Lohan. He had a retinue of nine hundred arhats, and his station was the Gandhamadana Mountains. He is portrayed in deep contemplation with a fan in his hand. Also known as Gobaka, the Protector.

Chicken feed. Small change, something cheap or small; hence, "Working for chicken feed."

CHICKWEED May 2 birthday flower, symbolizing rendezvous. In the language of flowers: Will you meet me?

CH'IEN In Chinese mythology in the Eight Diagrams, heaven. The celestial principle.

CHICOMECOATL Aztec Indian maize goddess. Her name means seven snakes. She is a red goddess of nourishment, the female counterpart of Cinteotl. Her attribute is an ear of corn. Also known as Xilonen.

CH-IEN NIU (KIEN NIU) Chinese celestial Cowherd who married Chih Nu, Spinning or Weaving Maid, while visiting earth. When they returned to heaven, they were so happy they neglected their work, which displeased the king and queen of heaven. The queen, with one stroke of her great silver hair-pin, made a line across the heavens and created the heavenly river (Milky Way), which separated the lovers. The king, sorry for their intense grief, gave them permission to visit each other once a year on the 7th Day of the 7th Moon. The magpies gathered and, placing themselves wing to wing, built a bridge over the celestial river, and on this bridge the lovers met. An astral deity, he is the star Altair in the constellation Aquilla. He typifies unending longing of love; his flocks are the clouds. Also known as Niu Lang. In Japan called Kengiu.

CHICOMEXOCHIT Aztec Indian creator god. Food giver and divider of the world. His name

CHIH In Chinese mythology, matter, substance produced by Tien Li, the Celestial Principle, and Chi, the Immortal Principle.

CHIH NU Chinese Spinning or Weaving Maid, for whom magpies once a year made a bridge that she might cross the celestial river (Milky Way) and meet her cowherd husband, Ch'ien Niu (which see). An astral deity, she is the star Vega in the constellation Lyra, patroness of marriage, typifying the unending longing of love. She is a dawn maiden, comparable to Aurora, and she weaves together or harmonizes the forces of night and day. Chih Nu is the prototype of Ori-hime. Other celestial weavers are Arachne and Penelope.

CHIH-WEN Chinese dragon. Because of his fondness for water, he is carved on bridges and on roofs of buildings to ward off fire; sometimes represented by the figure of a fish with an uplifted tail.

CH'IH YEO Chinese Satan. Chief of eighty-one beast-bodied, dust-eating, iron-browed, man-voiced brothers. Huang-Ti pursued him with a magnet and cut up his corpse.

CHIKHA BARDO Tibetan Buddhist, transitional state of moment of death; lasts three to four days. See Bardo Thodol.

CHIKISANTI Ainu earth or elm goddess. Name means wood with which we strike fire, a form of the elm, which the Ainu believed to be the first tree in the world of men. She was chosen by the gods to rule earth. By Okikurumi (land-burner), fire or sun, she became the mother of Pon Okikurumi (Smaller Okikurumi), the first ancestor of mankind.

CHILBLAINS Dream significance: indiscretion, worry.

CHILD Beginning, forgetfulness, innocence, promise, purity, spring, young image of birth and decay. State in which a person is not able to see through appearance to reality. Dream significance: (beautiful) satisfaction; (ill) heart trouble; (punished) injustice; (ugly) contrariness. In Zululand, children are adored as rain-bringers. A mother will bury her child in the ground up to the neck; then retire a short distance and howl dismally. The sky-god is supposed to be touched by the sight and send rain shortly after the child has been released.

Childbirth. Beginning, hope, labor, promise, travail. According to the superstitious a child brought into the world by caesarian section, will develop into a hero, as Asclepius, Macduff. Mystics believe a child will develop to have the attributes of the god of the planet in ascent at the time of birth, thus those born when Mars is in ascent, will develop into warriors. Primitive peoples consider the moment of birth perilous, and various magic practices are resorted to in an effort to drive away evil spirits or ghosts. Childbirth, as well as menstruation, is believed to pollute a woman; being unclean, she is not permitted to cohabit or touch certain articles. In Greenland a woman in childbed and for a period thereafter is thought to control the wind. She has only to go out of doors, breathe air into her mouth, go back into the house and expel it, to cause a storm. The Lapps and others think that a lying-in woman should be without knots on her person; knots supposedly have the effect of making delivery difficult and painful. Also with the intention of relieving the woman, all door and window locks are left open. In Lithuania, Poland, and other parts of Europe, mock childbirth rites are celebrated with the harvest. The pretended baby is wrapped in the last sheaf; he then cries to indicate he has been born alive and is carried to the barn. A new crop thus is provided with life and growth.

Child judge. See Boy judge.

Child killing. Universally in mythology the sun deity is doomed to periodic death, corresponding to night or winter. The sun-king frequently escapes this fate by finding a surrogate. The substitute, usually a child, is then crowned, feasted and honored for a period, and slain. Thus, in the Greek myth of Heracles, his life is prolonged. The Greeks explain the child-killings by Heracles as accidents or fits of madness. Gwern, nephew of Bran in Brythonic lore, is tossed into the fire as a surrogate after serving one day as king. Icarus, who flew too near the sun, may have been a surrogate for his father. Peleus had a term of office that extended for seven or eight years provided a surrogate was offered every winter solstice until the term was completed. Thetis, his wife, killed each of their sons as the child reached the winter solstice. Peleus, himself saved the last child, Achilles, perhaps because his term of office was about to expire. The temporary investiture as king before the sacrifice, supposedly was a means of conferring immortality, for this placed the sacrificed child among immortals as a sun deity.

Child's tooth. In a world-wide belief a child's tooth must not be cast away because if found and gnawed by an animal such as a dog or hog, the tooth of a dog or hog will grow in the child. In some parts of the world, a child's teeth are placed where they are apt to be found by a mouse or rat that the child may acquire teeth as strong as those of rodents. The original reason unknown, parents still save their children's teeth as good-luck talismans.

Fatal children. See under fatal.

Newly-born child. Infant time, New Year. Symbolizes infant fertility or the sun god resurrected.

CHILDE Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning a young knight. The name is used as a title in much the same way as the Spanish infante (or infanta). In times of chivalry, youths of noble birth who were candidates for knighthood were, during their probation period called bacheliers, childe, damoysels, infans, valets. Childe appears frequently in titles, as Childe Harold, Childe Tristram, etc.

Childe Harold. In Byron's poem Childe Harold roams from country to country in an effort to flee from himself. Childe Harold is the poet himself.

Childe Roland (Rowland). Hero of an ancient Scotch supernatural ballad. Guided by Merlin he rescues his sister from the dark tower of elf-land. Thus one who visited the underworld and returned. Probably developed from a sun myth.

CHILDERMAS Name in England of the Holy Innocent's Festival commemorating Herod's slaughter of children. Observed December 28 (December 29 in the Greek Church). The day is looked upon as unlucky; any undertaking begun on this day is doomed to failure. In Ireland called Cross Day.

CH'I-LIN (K'I-LIN, LIN, LU)

Chinese fabulous creature, so holy and harmless, it would not even tread on an insect. Spiritual beast which appears when a sage is born and when a king's rule is auspicious. A unicorn, comprising male (ch'i) and female (lin). Composite idealism, signifying perfect and happy married bliss. Fourth of the four benevolent sacred animals, and composed of five primordial elements: earth, fire, metal, water, wood. Primarily symbolic of heat, later of fertility. Emblem of the scholar, signifying ideal of highest attainment. Compare Androgynous deities.

CHILLING BREATH Death.

CHIMALMAN Aztec earth-born virgin, who, by Tonacatecutli, was the mother of Citlallatonac, the Morning (a name of Quetzalcoatl). She perished in childbirth and was placed in heaven with the title Chalchihuitzli, Precious Stone of Sacrifice. In another legend she was the mother of Quetzalcoatl by Camaxtle (Tezcatlipoca). In still another version, she was the wife of Iztac Mixcoatl. Also called Chimalmatl, meaning green shield.

CHIMBORAZO Sacred volcanic mountain in Mexico. Name resolves into Ever-Existent Sun, Orb of Fire, or Blazing O.

CHIMERA (CHIMAERA, CHIMAIRA) In Greek mythology a fearful, fire-belching monster with the forepart of its body a lion, the center a goat, and the hind part dragon, which destroyed the crops and devastated the land of Lycia. Slain by Bellerophon. Chimera, means she-goat, and the monster was the daughter of Typhon, a destructive storm god, and Echidne, a winter-snake goddess. She was the mother of the Nemean Lion and Greek Sphinx, like herself, destructive forces of nature, conquered by sun-heroes for the benefit of mankind. The term chimera is now used to describe an absurdity, a creation of the imagination, a grotesque and incongruous structure or work, a groundless or impractical conception, a horrible and fear-arousing phantasm, a wild scheme doomed to destruction.

CHIMIZIGAGUA Chibcha Indian supreme-being. Ruler of the light in his house and creator of black-birds that distributed light over the world. He formed the sun and the moon.

CHIN Character traits as understood by the chin are as follows: if cleft, signifies composure; dimpled, amiability, discretion; fleshy (double chin) sensuality; pointed, bad temper; prominent, firmness; receding, weakness; square, harshness. In the Lasya and Thandava dances of India, the seven uses of the chin are: 1- Chikita, opening mouth wide to denote yawning. 2- Chinna, biting jaws together to depict fear of cold or fear of disease. 3- Dasta, biting lips to depict anger. 4- Khandana, with teeth separated to depict coming, meals, sadness, prayer. 5- Kutana, gnashing teeth together to depict cold, fever, fright, illness. 6- Lehana, lapping or licking with tongue to depict surprise. 7- Sama, licking tongue slightly to depict natural state.

CHINA ASTER April 15 birthday flower, with the sentiment true. If double, it carries the message, I partake of your sentiments; if single, I will think of it (or you).

CHING Literally, the Well. In the Chinese Zodiac eight stars, four in the feet and four in the knees of Gemini, in southern quadrant, summer season. Represented by the tapir; element, wood. Fortunate time for buying land. Happiness to those who marry under it.

CH'ING MING Literally, clear and bright. Chinese festival of tombs. Day early in April set aside to honor the dead.

CHING-TU Chinese Buddhist Western Paradise; the Pure-Land, where those who attain salvation will live in unalloyed happiness. Compare Jodo.

CH'IN-KUANG Lord of the first Ten Taoist hells. He receives all souls and decides the body a soul must next inhabit to atone for its sins. He controls the span of life, hence a fate deity. To wicked souls he shows in a mirror the sins of which they were guilty, and he metes out punishments.

CHINNIGCHINICH The Almighty of California Indians. He appeared without parents, made man and woman out of clay of the lake, and taught them medicine.

CH'IN SHU-PAO Chinese military door-god. With Yu ch'ih Ching-te, he stood at night outside the bedroom door of Emperor T'ai Tsung of the T'an dynasty to protect the emperor from demons and spirits. Both gods were armed and wore armour. Each carried a battle-ax, bow and arrow, chain, and whip. Their hair stood on end to give them a frightening appearance.

CHINVATPERETU (CHINVAT BRIDGE) Parsi bridge of death which stretches from the Peak of Judgment to Alburz. Bridge of the Decider. The bridge is a many-sided beam with edges of varying thickness. When a righteous soul arrives, the beam turns to a wide side, when the soul of a sinner appears, the beam turns to a side that is as thin and sharp as a razor blade, and the soul drops from the bridge to the hell below. Prototype of Al-Sirat.

CHIONE In Greek mythology daughter of Boreas, mother of Emolpus, whom she threw into the sea. Chione, a snowcloud, offended Artemis, the moon, who slays the snow-goddess.

CHIPIAPOOS Potawatomi Indian man-of-the-dead. He was dragged under the ice by demons and became ruler over dead souls. Brother of Nanaboojoo. Prototype of Chibiabos.

CH'I PO In Chinese legendary history, assistant to Huang-ti (Yellow Emperor). Founder of the art of healing.

CHI-RHO  Monogram which has become a sacred Christian emblem, supposedly the celestial sign seen by Constantine on the eve of the defeat of Maxentius, and as such called the Labarum or seal of Constantine. Also known as the monogram of Christ or the Chrismon. The two Greek letters are assumed to read Chr, a contraction for the name Christ, or as the first two letters of XP[̄]̄TOE (Christos). However, the symbol was in use long before Christianity, and X (Chi) probably stood for Great Fire or Sun, and P (Rho) probably stood for Pater or Patah (Father). The word labarum (la-bar-um) yields everlasting Father Sun.

CHIRIDION Fish talisman of love.

CHIRON (CHEIRON, KIRON)

In Greek mythology son of Cronus and the sea nymph Philyra, thus a brother of Zeus. To prevent his wife Rhea from recognizing him when he visited Philyra, Cronus changed himself into a horse, and for this reason Chiron was born a monster whose figure above the waist was that of a man, below the waist that of a horse. Chiron became renowned as a beneficent and a wise centaur, and was made tutor to great sun heroes, such as Achilles, Actaeon, Asclepius, Heracles, and Jason, whom he instructed in the art of gymnastics, hunting, medicine, and music. Chiron was a skillful herbalist and pharmacist and was proficient in divination and in playing the lyre. He lived in a cave on Mount Pelian, where he obtained the ashen spear he gave to Peleus. He was accidentally hit by an arrow of Heracles in the foot and, he was in such pain he exchanged his immortality for the mortality of Prometheus; thus he was one who died voluntarily. After his death he was lifted into the heavens by Zeus and transformed into the constellation Archer or Sagittarius. As a celestial horse, he was a cloud mass, of which the head was lit up by the sun, the rear in the shade. The origin of the name Chiron is uncertain; it has been interpreted to mean city-of-sun, and one who suffered a foot wound. See Centaur; sacred foot under foot.

CHIRUWI African half-man spir- its, benevolent or malevolent. Their half-bodies contain one eye, one ear, one arm, one leg.

CHISEL In Freemasonry sym- bolizes effect of education on the human mind. When a mallet ac- companies the chisel, sculptor is added to the art of architecture as a means of educating mankind.

CHISLEU Ninth month of the He- brews; begins with the new moon of December.

CHITON Tunic worn by ancient Greeks. The Dorian, a girdled garment, usually was worn by men; the Ionian, a loose linen gown, usually was worn by wo- men.

CHITRAGUPTA Hindu recorder of the vices and virtues of men; judge who sends men to heaven or hell. Compares Rhadamanthus, Thoth.

CHIUN (KIUN) Ancient Hebrew goddess of plenty. Compares with Kaiwan, Kwanyin. Also the name of the idol worshiped by the Isra- elites in the desert. Probably the planet Saturn, worshiped by East- ern nations as an evil spirit which was propitiated by sacrifices. Al- so called Remphan.

CH'IU SHE Chinese Taoist au- tumn snake-charm. Paper charm used by nuns and priests for ex- orcising serious illness.

CHIVIM In Yucatec Indian my- thology, serpent of the race of Chan, from whom Votan took orig- in.

CHLAMYS Cloak of Zeus. Also the short mantle worn by ancient Greek horsemen, hunters, and soldiers. Later worn as an outdoor garment by young men about town.

CHLEVNIK (CHLVNIK) Russian spirit of the cattle shed. Its good will is needed for success in cattle raising.

CHLOE (CHLOETTE) (1) Feminine name from the Greek meaning green shoot or herb; blooming. (2) Athenian surname of Demeter. Longus, in his pastoral romance, Daphnis and Chloe, used the name for his heroine and it has since become a generic name for rustic maidens, who are not always artless. Pope in Moral Essays uses the name for Lady Suffolk, mistress of George II, and Matthew Prior uses the name for Mrs. Centlivre.

CHLORIS In Greek mythology daughter of Amphion and Niobe, wife of Zephyrus, the west wind. Goddess of flowers. Her name means green or verdure. Compares with the Roman Flora.

CHLOROPHANE Gem symbolizing silent expression.

CHNOUBIS Egyptian legendary creature, part lion, part serpent, and crowned with rays. Probably identical with Chnoumis.

CHNOUMIS Ancient Egyptian ram-headed deity. Probably the criosphinx and identical with Khnemu. See Chnoubis.

CHNUPHIS Gnostic lion-headed, maned serpent with seven or twelve-rayed coronal. A solar emblem and good genius. When seven-rayed, typifies the sun, moon, and five planets known to the ancient world; when twelve-rayed, typifies the twelve mansions of the zodiac.

CHOCOLATE Dream significance: satisfaction.

Chocolate Soldier. A soldier more remarkable for his handsome appearance than for his fighting ability, in allusion to the character in Shaw's Arms and the Man and the comic opera by Oscar Straus, which was founded on the drama.

CHO-I In Queensland belief that part of a child's spirit or soul-substance which remains in the afterbirth and from which Anjea, creator deity, makes another baby.

CHOJA Richest member of a Japanese community.

CH'O-JE (CH-O-KYON) Tibetan sorcerers. Na-ch'un, the highest of these, is the necromancer-in-ordinary to Tibetan rulers.

CHOKANIPOK In Algonquin tradition the Flint-Stone. Storm cloud. Antagonist of his brother Michabo, which see.

CHOKMAH (CHOCHMAH) Cabalistic Logos or Creative Wisdom. Second aspect of the Deity, sphere of the zodiac, highway of the stars. Second Sefhira or Hypostasis; otherwise called Man or Abba (Ab), the Father. Also said to be the Sister (Sekinah) and the Daughter and Mother, the beginning of all. Divine names Yah and Yahveh assigned to Chokmah.

CHOLER In an Italian icon personified by a nude sallow youth with a haughty expression. He holds a drawn sword. A shield with a flame in the middle is on the ground. A fierce lion runs beside the youth.

CHOLULA Aztec pyramid erected in Mexico to the sun or fire-deity. It rose so near heaven the chalcuitl, a precious stone, fell from heaven and destroyed it. 'La' in the Mayan language means that which has existed forever, thus Cholula signifies ever-existent, everlasting Truth of Truths, i.e. the Eternal Truth. Compare Chimborazo.

CHONG-WANG In Chinese mythology Chong, the Phallus or king of phallic worshippers. Father of Kwanyin.

CHONI In Tibetan Buddhism skeleton dancer.

CHONYID BARDO In Tibetan Buddhism the second stage of the Bardo Thodol (which see). Transitional state, lasting fourteen days, of the experiencing of reality. State in which symbolic visions occur, some in the form of the eight Htamenmas, animal or bird-headed goddesses; the eight Kerimas or Cemetary goddesses; the Wang-chug-mas, animal or bird-headed mighty goddesses; or the four Yoginis, the animal or bird-headed doorkeepers.

CHO-PEN In Buddhism the long, narrow good-luck flag with sacred texts. Also the five-leaf crown used by monks for services for Amitayus, Eternal Life Buddha. In Tibet, called Cod-pan.

CHOPPER-KNIFE Buddhist symbol of tantric manifestation. Symbolizes the cleaving or cutting down of the unfaithful. Emblem of Vajravarahi, of the Buddhasaktis, Dakinis, and Dharmapala. In Sanscrit called karttrka.

CHOPSTICK In Japan culture.

CHOREB Alternate name for Mount Sinai. Identical with cherub.

CHORI Japanese who are below the three classes of commoners (hyakusho, farmers; shokunin, artisans; akindo, merchants); scarcely counted as human beings and referred to not as persons (hito) but as things (mono). Pariah people, outcasts, assigned to defiling duties and not permitted to associate with those above their class no matter how wealthy they become. Also called eta.

CHOROGRAPHY Personified in an Italian icon by a young woman in a short (denoting briefness) multi-colored dress (denoting variability). In her right hand she holds a measuring square; in her left hand, a compass. She looks at a glove on the ground.

CHOROSTASIA Early Christian dance. An all-night festival in imitation of the Angelic Dance and ceaseless hymnody of the Creator.

CHORS (CHERS, CHROS, CHURS, KHORS) Slavic sun deity; may be merely an idol erected to Dazbog.

CHORUS In ancient Greek drama a band of singers and dancers which interpreted the play. The Greek choros actually meant dancing and singing within an enclosure. The word yields achorus, i.e. Great Horus, and is allied to Kuros or Cyrus, meaning Sun.

CHOSII Japanese palace of long abode, mansion of the dead.

CHOS-RGYAL PHYI-SGRUB
Tibetan Buddhist god of death. Identical with the Sanscrit Yama.

CHOS-SKYON (CHO-CHUNG, CHO-CHYONG) A Mahapancaraja or one of the five Tibetan Buddhist Great Kings. King of Magic. His color is blue, his vahana (mount) is a white elephant or yellow lion.

He has one head and two arms. His emblems are a churi (knife) and a pasa (noose). Also called Thun-gyl-gyal-po or Thun-gyirgyal-po. Compare Dharmapala.

CHOU HSIN Semi-legendary Chinese emperor. Last of the Shang dynasty. He was influenced by his debauched consort, Ta-chi, and the dynasty fell because of his cruelty. He ordered the sage Pi Kan executed and then had the sage's heart cut out. Resembles Herod.

CHOWRIE In India used to anoint an emblem of royalty.

CHRISM Holy unction. Consecrated oil used for anointing in Greek and Roman Catholic churches.

CHRIST Literally, anointed; a Greek word answering to the Hebrew messiah, the consecrated or anointed one. Applied preeminently to the second divine spirit of the Christian Trinity composed of God, Son, and Holy Ghost. Son and likeness of the Father, Christ reigns from Christmas to Ascension, i.e. period in which the sun is in ascent, a period of growth. He is Prince of the House of David, born of virginal innocence as foretold in prophecy. With Adam, Christ was created directly by God; therefore with Adam, superior in wisdom. Adam was the first universal man, Christ the second. He is called the Alpha, Alpha and Omega (Beginning and End) Bread of Life, Ideal Man, Light of the World, Morning Star, Perfected Humanity, Redeemer, Savior, Sun of Righteousness. He was born at the winter solstice, when the sun begins its ascent; he was rejected at birth, i.e. forced into a manger; a brilliant light, Star of Bethlehem, and halo were signs by which his divine birth was made known; He stands for one in whom divine and human natures are miraculously united; He was a charmer of beasts and birds with the golden tones of his music; He was healer; He was made to serve those less noble than himself; He preached a sermon on a mount; He walked on water; He was charged with being crazy or a fool; He was betrayed by one, Judas, who understood that His sacrifice was necessary for the welfare of mankind; He was crucified and resurrected, thereby fulfilling the destiny or yearly as well as daily voyage of the sun, i.e. birth, death, re-birth.

To Matthew He is king; to Mark He is servant; to Luke He is perfect man; to John he is God. He is said to have a four-fold body, i.e. earthly, glorified, mystical, sacramental. A spirit of God, His faculties are said to be seven in number: counsel, fear, knowledge, piety, strength, understanding, wisdom. Mystics of the middle ages worshiping Sophia, identified Christ with her, gave him a serpent form (form of an earth deity), and the title Naaseni. Followers of Christ believe they must suffer for His sake, which may be compared with those who willingly became eunuchs in pagan fertility rites. A companion of criminals on the cross, He is compared with Joseph; a hung man, He is compared with Odin; the nail in his foot is compared with the arrow in the vulnerable heel of Achilles. In his role of guide of souls Christ sometimes is portrayed as jackal-headed, a form of Anubis. He is portrayed as Lion of Judah, who, on death, descended into hell and rose on the third day. A belief once prevailed that the lion was born dead or in a state of stupor, but in three days endowed with life by the breath of its sire. The Thrice Great, i.e. the life, the truth, the way, He may be compared with Hermes Trismegistus. The second coming of Christ, like that of Vishnu, is said to be on a white horse. His legend parallels that of Krishna and of sun and fertility heroes such as Adonis, Apollo, Attis, Balder, Buddha, Dionysus, Heracles, Llew Llaw, Orpheus, Osiris, Tammuz, To Mo, Xipe Totic. At first Christ was used merely as a title, i.e. Jesus the Savior; later it was used as if part of a proper name. A nourisher and sustainer of the world He is given the form of a fish; He is likened to a swift young hart or roe. He is denoted the Piper (breath or harmonious spirit) or Great Papa, and symbolized by crossed pipes. Mystics assign number 8, number of regeneration and the twin circles of lover and knowledge, to Him. The crown symbolizes His glory; the door His salvation; the pastoral crook His role as good shepherd; the sword His justice. His dual nature is represented by a mermaid. He is Hound of Heaven. Other of His emblems are: A , apple, altar lights, ass, basket, bleeding heart, book, bread, bull, chalice, Chi-Rho, Chi-Rho-Sigma, club, cross, crown of thorns, crucifixion, cup, dolphin, dove, eagle, ewer, fleur de lys, fountain, grape, hand, iris, lamb, lantern, lion, nail, nimbus, oak branch, ox, pelican, pillar, pomegranate, reed, rope, rose, scarlet robe, scourge, sheep, stable, stag, thorn, throne, tiger, tree, tulip, unicorn, vine, water, wheat ear, yoke. Christ is from the same root as cross.

Mystics have assigned twenty-four chapters to His life, accounting for the twenty-four hours of the day: Nativity, Annunciation to the Shepherds, Circumcision, the Magi, Flight to Egypt, Return from Egypt, Dispute in the Temple, Baptism by John the Baptist, Temptation by Satan, Making Simon (Peter) and Andrew fishers of men (apostles), Tribute money, Sermon on the Mount, Supper in the house of Simon, Supper in the house of Levi, Driving money-lenders from the Temple, the Woman of Samaria, Woman in adultery (casting the first stone), Parable of Good Samaritan, Parable of the Prodigal Son, Marriage at Cana, Healing at the pool of Bethesda, Walking on Water, Raising of Lazarus, Transfiguration. His Passion is given in twelve chapters, answering to the twelve mansions of the zodiac: Entry into Jerusalem, Washing feet of disciples, Last Supper, Betrayal, Christ before Caiaphas, Denial of Peter, Christ before Pilate, Mocking of Christ, Road to Calvary, Crucifixion, Descent from Cross, Resurrection. See Cain 2, Cross, Crucifixion, Fool, Sacred foot under foot, Judas.

Christ and His mystic Bride.
Marriage of Heaven and Earth.
 Identical with Christ and His theological marriage with church on Earth. Symbolized by two linked circles.

Christ monograms. IHS, commonly believed to be Jesus Hominum Salvator, but actually an abbreviation of $\Sigma\text{IH}\Sigma\text{OY}$ (Jesus). INRI for Iesus Nazarenus Rex Judaeorum (Jesus of Nazareth, king of the Jews) IS, the first and last letters of Jesus. N Greek monogram with Latin N for Nazarenus added. Chi-Rho $\frac{\text{P}}{\text{X}}$ for Christ. X modified into T in the form $\frac{\text{P}}{\text{T}}$. No public use of His monogram existed until the time of Constantine; $\frac{\text{P}}{\text{X}}$ or $\frac{\text{P}}{\text{T}}$ were the first and regarded as symbolic of the cross. I . an abbreviation for Jesus developed into I.H. Σ . and evolved into I.H.S. X X X appear in the catacombs. X.P. is an abbreviation of the Greek XPI TO (Christ).

Monograms of Christ and Mary appear in the catacombs as ICXC and MPOY. Alpha and omega also is a Christ monogram.

Christ nail and spear marks.

Interpreted as follows: left hand, well of grace; right hand, well of mercy; left foot, well of comfort; right foot, well of pity; spear mark, well of love. The nail in the foot is said to be identical to the arrow which wounded Achilles, i. e. the injuring of the sacred foot of the sun as it sets.

CHRISTABEL (CHRIS) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning beautiful and from the Greek, meaning fair Christian.

CHRISTIAN (CHRIS, CHRISTIE, CHRISTY) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning belonging to or believing in Christ. In feminine form Christiana (Chrissie, Christina, Tina, Xina).

CHRISTIANITY An Eastern religion which became a Western religion. Long in conflict with Mithraism, it triumphed over it by incorporating into its festivals and rites elements of Mithraic fertility, mysteries, especially that of death and resurrection. Christianity is typified by  an encircled dot, representing the taking in and therefore the enclosed, as opposed to Buddhism which is represented by a square to which is attached a square alcove , representing the flowing out. As a creed Christianity is symbolized by the Latin cross; as a way of life by the Maltese cross.

Christian church. In Japan symbolizes ambition.

CHRISTMAS Literally, mass of Christ. Festival celebrating the physical birth of Christ, which in some localities is celebrated December 25 and in others on January 6. Where Christmas is celebrated on December 25, Epiphany, the baptism of spiritual birth of Christ, is celebrated on January 6. Christmas is a winter solstice festival, developed from the Saturnalia, which celebrated the yearly rebirth of the sun, and the rite therefore is a relic of solstitial worship. The holiday was lifted directly from the rite which celebrated the birthday of Mithra on December 25. When obdurate worshipers of the pagan deity refused to relinquish their cherished festival, called the Birthday of the Solar Disc, Christian Rome, in 400 A. D., incorporated the holiday by fixing the date as the birthday of Christ. The Saturnalia was concluded with the slaying of an ass-eared god by his rival. The ass-eared god developed into the Christmas Fool. According to superstition a white (snowy) Christmas presages a prosperous year to follow; a cloudy, green, or hot Christmas fills the churchyard; the sun shining through trees on Christmas Day brings much fruit. Emblems of the festival are: angels, boar's head with an apple in the mouth, bells, candles, Christmas rose, Christmas tree, the colors green, red, and white, frost, goose, heralds, holly, infant in manger, mince pie, mistletoe, nativity of Christ, ox, Santa Claus (Saint Nicholas), sheep, shepherds, snow, star of Bethlehem, three Wise Men or Magi, yule log. The day also is known as Noel (Nollagh by druids). See winter solstice.

Christmas Eve. Night of lights, on which Santa Claus travels abroad. Night before the rebirth of the sun (light). Compare Channukah.

Christmas Fool. Character in old Christmas Play who is beheaded and restored to life. Personifies resurrection. In Scotland called Abbot of Unreason.

Christmas Lord (King or Prince). Officer attached to a royal or noble household in medieval England. He presided over the Christmas revels, reigning from All-hallow Eve to Candlemas Day.

Christmas people. Lapp spirits which walk abroad at Christmas. If they are not treated well, they suck the brain out of a man's head, destroy the water in a well, etc. As a protection food and water are set out for any spirits that may be around.

Christmas play. Drama in which the Christmas Fool is beheaded by a rival, but rises up again unhurt, i.e. the triumphant rebirth of the sun at the winter solstice. The play is probably to honor the ass on which Christ made his triumphant entry into Jerusalem. The beheading of the Fool is a survival of the Saturnalia, in which an ass-eared god was slain. Compare Eriphos, Lenaea.

Christmas rose. Emblem of the nativity of Christ.

Christmas starwort. Emblem of the nativity of Christ.

Christmas torch (or brand). Emblem of the nativity of Christ. Blue and red candles, trimmed with greenery, are carried by a young woman named Mary. They are burned at the Christmas and Epiphany seasons. Parallels the brand of Meleager.

Christmas tree. Tree which is decorated with lights to celebrate the nativity of Christ and on which offerings are made to Him. A survival of pagan tree worship and of early Christian rites which celebrated the winter solstice with tree and lights. Early representations of the crucifixion placed Christ on a tree; the cross was not introduced until 608 A. D. Winter equivalent of the May tree (Maypole), a fertility symbol.

Compare Sakaki, Yggdrasil.

CHRISTOPHER (CHRIS, KESTER, KIT) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning Christ believer.

CHRYSALE A simple-minded hen-pecked tradesman in Moliere's comedy Les Femmes Savantes, whose wife Philaminte neglects him and her house for the study of languages and women's rights to develop an aristocratic mind.

CHRYSALIS Any undeveloped object. Symbolic of the soul veiled in flesh, when typifying man's life by that of insects, or state in which the soul is clothed in terrestrial matter.

CHRYSANTHEMUM December 24 birthday flower, emblem of the solar wheel. Symbol of abundance, cheerfulness in adversity, loveliness, regal beauty, wealth. Flower governing Sagittarius. Typifies the Orient as the rose typifies the Occident. In China called chu hua (golden flower) or chiu hua (ninth moon flower). Emblem of mid-autumn, symbolizing joviality, life of ease and retirement from public office, also that which is enduring, luxurious, whole. One who shows her beauty late. In Japan called choju-so. Flower of autumn, emblem of the mikado. Signifies purity and a future of well deserved ease. Bringer of blessings from the fountain of youth where Kiku-Jido resides. Dipped in saki beer the leaves and petals supposedly confer grace, health, and longevity. In art associated with the crane, royal bird of Japan.

Chrysanthemum and oriole. In China carries the sentiment, may the whole house be happy.

Red chrysanthemum. Its sentiment is I love.

White chrysanthemum. Its sentiment is truth.

Yellow chrysanthemum. Its sentiment is dejection, slighted love.

CHRYSAOR (1) Greek giant who, with Pegasus, sprang from the blood of Medusa at the moment she was slain by Perseus. Husband of the ocean-nymph Callirrhoe, daughter of Oceanus, father of Geryon. His name signifies he wielded a golden sword or sword of light, and he personifies the fierce power of the sun, born at the moment his mother the moon is slain by Perseus the sun. (2) In Edmund Spenser's Faerie Queene a sword representing justice.

CHRYSEIS In Homer's Iliad the beautiful daughter of Chryses, priest of Apollo. During the Trojan War she was captured by the Greeks and allotted to Agamemnon. She was a prophetess, and when Agamemnon refused to accept ransom for her, she called upon Apollo to send down a plague, so that Agamemnon was forced to let her go.

CHRYSELEPHANTINE Statues of ancient Greeks in which ivory was used for flesh and gold for hair and clothing. The statues also were painted. Name developed from Greek words for gold and ivory.

CHRYSIPPOS In Greek mythology offspring of Pelops and Hippodamia. Name signifying golden horse, suggesting he was a steed of the sun. His brothers were Hippalcos (bold horse) and Nicippe (victorious mare). All became clan names.

CHRYSOBERYL Gem symbolizing patience in sorrow. Dream significance: a time of need.

CHRYSOLITE Gem symbolizing disappointed love, wisdom. Worn as a talisman for protection against gout and madness. Dream significance: necessary caution.

CHRYSOMALLUS In Greek mythology winged ram with golden fleece. Typifies sun-lit cloud. See golden fleece.

CHRYSOPRASE Gem symbolizing eloquence, gaiety. Tenth of the precious stones which adorned the foundation of the heavenly Jerusalem as seen by John the Evangelist.

CHRYSOSTOM Masculine name from the Greek, meaning mouth of gold.

CHRYSOR Phoenician deity, inventor of bait, fishing hook, and line, and small fishing boats. The first who sailed. Also known as Diamichlus.

CHTHONIC DEITIES Earth or underworld deities, ghosts of ancestors, gods of wealth as the earth contains many riches. They appear as dragon or snake gods, dwarfs, fallen angels, giants, lame deities, and frequently are the smiths of sky deities.

CHTHONIUS Hermes (Mercury) as he who leads the dead. He is shown with the cup of fortune, symbolic of his presiding at birth or leading souls into the unknown regions; also of his role as cup-bearer of the gods and as their messenger, who holds to the lips of mortals the seven-ringed cup of joy or sorrow. The cup parallels the caldron of fertility of Bran, which evolved into the Grail.

CHU Chinese Taoist jewel of omnipotence. Chief possession of the dragon king Ryujin, and held in its throat. It issues the nebulae filling surrounding space. Adopted by Buddhists. In Japan called hoju no-tama.

CHUAI Literally, sad middle son. Japanese legendary emperor. Husband of Jingo, who tried to induce him to invade Korea by saying it was the wish of the gods. He refused to believe that such a country existed, and the gods punished him with death, whereupon Jingo successfully invaded Korea.

CH'UANG HUA Chinese red paper flowers pasted on doors and windows at the Lunar New Year and other festivals as talismans for good fortune.

CH'UANG-KUNG AND CH'UANG-MU Chinese god and goddess of the bedchamber, personifications of the marriage bed of progeny. Invoked to save the bedchamber from quarrels and to insure pregnancy. The lord of the bed enjoys tea, his lady enjoys wine.

CHUAN HOU Chinese goddess of streams. Identical with T'ien Hou.

CHUAN-LUN WANG Ruler of the tenth and last of the Chinese hells, where he directs the transmigration of souls. Those who have expiated their crimes by sufficient punishment and are to be reincarnated pass over one of the six bridges where the Spirit of Wind takes them to the Flower of Forgetfulness. The bridges resemble Al Sirat. See Lady Ming, Ts'in-Kuan-Wang.

CHU-CH'A-PAN-T'O-KA Deified mortal. One of the eighteen lohans of Chinese Buddhism. He developed his otherwise dull faculties to a marked degree, gained the power to assume any form at will, and had the ability to fly through the air. Portrayed as an old man seated beneath a tree. He holds a fan in one hand; the other he holds as if demonstrating his teachings. Younger brother of Pan-t'o-ka, and sometimes called Chota-Panthaka or Pantha the younger.

CH'U CHIANG King of the second of the Taoist hells, where thieves and murderers are sent. It is composed of a large lake of ice.

CHU CH'IEH Chinese Vermillion Bird. Chief of all birds, a sun symbol, and guardian of the south and summer season. One of the four fabulous creatures guarding the four cardinal points. An auspicious sign. Resembles the phoenix.

CHU-DIEU In Chinese mythology the red sparrow, spirit of the south.

CHUDO-YUDO Slavic giant snake deity.

CHUFU Another name for Cheops, builder of the great pyramid at Gizeh, in Egypt. Chufu compares with Fuji, cone-like sacred mountain of Japan.

CH'U HSIEH YUAN Taoist ministers of exorcism, who expel demons from houses and otherwise control them. The chief great spiritual chaser of demons is Chung K'uei.

CHU I Assistant to Wen Ch'ang, Chinese god of literature. He makes poor students pass their examinations by sheer luck.

CH'UI-NIU Chinese dragon of music, carved on screws of fiddles.

CHU JUNG Chinese furnace and hearth god; ruler of the fourth month.

CHUKU Supreme deity of the Ibo people of Africa.

CHUNG CH'IU Chinese mid-autumn harvest festival-of-the-moon. Celebrated the 15th day of the 8th moon.

CHUNG K'UEI Chinese legendary giant which drives out demons and dispels evil. Leader of the Ch'u Hsieh Yuan. Identical with the Japanese Shoki-san.

CHUNG-LI-CH'UAN Chief of the eight Chinese Immortals (Pa Kung). Said to have lived under the Chow dynasty or as a warrior of the Han dynasty, when he was converted to an escetic life. He became a mountain recluse and spent his days searching for the elixir of life. He is represented as a fat bearded man, sometimes fully clothed, more often with a bare belly. He carries a fan with a horsehair tassel, with which he supposedly revives the dead, and the peach of immortality.

CHUNG-LIU Chinese household god. Also called Tse Shen.

CHUNG YANG Chinese kite-flying festival.

CHUNUHLUK Eskimo grass stalk that wished itself into a man and finally became a wolverine.

CHUR In Persian theology the Ized entrusted with the care of the sun disc. Cognate with Cher, as in Cherbourg; Chera, sacred cobra of India, and cherry.

CHURCH A house of worship, popularly understood to be a Christian house of worship. Early churches were built in the form of a circle; in modern times they are built in the shape of a cross. The sections are: Aisle, from French aisle, wing. Apse, from Greek hapsis, wheel; anciently a bishop's seat. Chancel, from Italian cancello, barrier or rail; choir or eastern end of church. Crypt, from Greek kryptos, hidden; underground cell or chapel. Galilee, from the galley of a ship; applied to porches on the north side; considered less sacred than other parts of the building and used for teaching purposes or as a place for women. Nave, from Latin navis, ship; the main body of the church. Porch, from Latin portico; place where the font is kept, and where the censured and uninitiated may assemble. In early days a place of burial for the privileged. Sanctuary, from Latin sanctuarium, holy place; the most retired and sacred place, the part nearest the altar. The aisles, nave and sanctuary typify the sensible world; the upper parts typify the intelligible cosmos; the vaults typify heaven. The altar is raised three steps to signify the Trinity or seven steps to signify the Holy Spirit. Symbolic representation began with Noah's Ark, passing to the Ship of Souls, the ship of Jonah in the storm. Thus a ship in full sail symbolizes the Christian church. The church spire is a phallic or fertility symbol. The towers connected with churches appear to be derived from the fire or sun towers of pagan worship. The church itself is a symbol of religious zeal. The church and her congregation are symbolized by a pomegranate, the fruit containing many fertile seeds. The colors most sacred to the church are blue for candor, chastity, and innocence; and white for the Supreme Being and eternal truth as well as charity, loving kindness, virginity. Church is cognate with the German kirche, Scotch kirk, Greek kupiakov, all meaning lord's house, and with cherry and cherub.

The Church. (1) Name of one of the gnostic Aeons. (2) A particular division of Christians united by doctrine, form of worship, and history, as the Methodist Church. (3) The entire body of Christian believers, also called the bride or spouse of Christ. (4) In Japan typifies ambition.

CHURI Knife which is an emblem of Buddhist trantic manifestations. Used to cut away evil.

CHURINGA (TJURINGA) Australian sacred objects made of wood or stone containing the spirits of totem ancestors and used as talismans.

CHURL In Norse mythology son of Heimdal by an earth mother. Ancestor of churls (freemen), karls, or yeoman. In human form known as Rig Amma. Compare Jarl, Thrall.

CHURNING A world-wide creation and fertility motif. Deities in heaven churn a primordial sea with a high mountain, with the Pole Star, or with a spear (divine phallus) to create lands, rocks, etc. In Celtic legend a caldron churned by an earth-deity provides poetic inspiration as well as animals and grain. Caer Sidi, a revolving castle, typifies a churning or spinning heaven which is a source of feast or famine, depending on the virtue (season) of the knight who approaches it. The Japanese Izanagi and Izanami churned the primeval sea with their jewel-spear and created the island of Onogoro, where they copulated. In Norse mythology a world-mill grinds out flowers or snow. Perhaps the most famous churning myth is that of the Hindus, which is called the churning of the sea of milk (ocean). Mount Mandara was the churn-dasher, the Great Serpent was used as a rope to twist it; the gods standing at one end, the demons at the other. Kurma, Vishnu's tortoise avatar, served as a pivot, and churning continued for over a thousand years. From the churning came such treasures as Chandra, the moon, the sacred cow, nymphs, Paradise Tree, prototype of the elephant and horse, the beautiful Shi (Lakshmi), snake poison, and lastly the priceless amrita, beverage of immortality, in a cup held by the physician of the gods. Compare caldron, mill, Pole Star, wheel.

CHU-U In Japanese Buddhism the disembodied condition between death and rebirth.

CH'U YUAN Chinese legendary poet who had risen to high office and was impeached on trivial grounds. He committed suicide on the 5th day of the 5th moon, and was deified. The Dragon Boat Festival or Fifth Moon Feast is celebrated in his honor.

CHYAVANA (CYAVANA) Hindu sage shrieved with age. Son of Bhrigu. When the Asvins tried to seduce his young wife Sukanya, who was faithful to him, she taunted the twins with being incomplete. She promised to explain her taunt if they would make her husband young again. They told him where to bathe, and she in turn explained they had wandered too much among humans to be pure, and that is why they had been excluded from the god's sacrifice, i. e. remained incomplete. Chyavana, in gratitude, created the fearful demon Mada (thought), with which he threatened to devour Indra unless the Asvins were included in soma ceremonial.

CIACCO Literally, pig. Glutton consigned by Dante to the third circle of the Inferno, where gluttons suffered endless woe.

CIAN In Celtic mythology son of Diancecht. One of the lesser sun deities, Cian was a shepherd who allowed Gavidjeen Go's cow (fertile cloud) to escape and return to its former owner, Balor. With the help of the sea god Manannan, Cian reached Balor's underworld, i. e. sank into the ocean, and there discovered Ethne, Balor's daughter the moon goddess, locked in a tower because of the prophecy that her son would slay Balor. Cian stayed with her until their son Lugh was born and then fled with the cow and the infant. Manannan again came to his rescue but this time demanded payment, and Cian gave him the child, which Manannan raised to become the sun hero which fulfilled the prophecy and killed his grandfather. Cian's visit to Ethne resembles that of Zeus to Danae. Cian and his brothers Cethe and Cu were at enmity with Brian, Iuchar, and Iucharba, wind deities. While alone on an errand one day he noticed his three enemies approaching and changed himself into a pig. His three enemies transformed into greyhounds, pursued and killed him, and then buried his body seven times before the earth would accept it. All typifying atmospheric changes during storms. Earth told Cian's son what had happened, and Lugh avenged his father's death, i. e. sun overcame darkness or storm.

CIBAS White shells which Taino Indians use as talismans.

CIBORIUM Container used in Christian churches symbolizing the ark of the Covenant, the Eucharist, the Last Supper.

CICADA Garrulity, melody, nobility, resurrection, worldly grandeur. In China called ch'an, symbolic of continuity of life between man, his ancestors, and his descendants. Emblem of eternal youth, happiness, immortality, and restraint of cupidity and vice. In Greek mythology attribute of Apollo, Aurora, Tithonos. Typifies discarded lover. In Japan the cicada song is a wail over the vanities of earthly existence.

CICERO Masculine name from the Latin, meaning vetch.

Cicerone. A glib and loquacious guide who explains antiques and curiosities to a sightseer; hence any guide. Alludes to the proverbial talkativeness of guides, an ironical reminder of the Roman orator. Also called a Cicero.

Ciceronian. A classical, eloquent, polished style in the manner of Cicero.

CICHOL THE FOOTLESS Irish demon giant; leader of the Fomors, powers of darkness, death, evil, and winter, in the battle with the Partholon people.

CID Spanish title which is a corruption of the Arabic seyid (lord), and used to signify chief or commander. It was applied to Rodrigo or Ruy Diaz de Bivar, 11th century Christian champion against the Moors. His exploits, like those of Arthur and Charlemagne, have been romanticized, and he has become the ideal Spanish hero. His marvelous steed was Babieca, his magic sword was Colada, giving him sun attributes. Also called Cid Campeador, i. e. The Champion.

CIDER Rural festivities. Dream significance: gaiety, joy.

CILIX In Greek mythology son of Agenor, brother of Cadmus, Europa, and Phoenix. He accompanied his brothers in the search for Europa, when she was abducted by Zeus, and finally settled in the country called Cilicia in his honor. A fertility lord.

CIMMERII (CIMMERIANS, KIMMERIANS, KIMMERIOI) In Greek mythology a people who lived in perpetual darkness, shrouded in clouds or gloom, never looking upon the face of the sun. Via their land Odysseus entered Hades to visit the dead. Homer places their land beyond Oceanus, Pliny places it near Lake Avernus in Italy. The name was given to an ancient nomadic people of the Crimea and contiguous region.

CIN-AN-EV (CIN-AU-AV) Ute Indian ancient of wolves. A wolf culture hero and trickster.

CINCINNATUS Legendary Roman hero, farmer, patrician, patriot, and dictator. The name has been assumed as a pen name by political writers, especially in Europe.

CINDER Light or sun symbol. It corresponds to the Dutch Sindel, German Sinter, Old Norse Sintel, and signifies the brilliant sparks that are driven off when white-hot iron is beaten on the anvil as well as the black scales to which they turn when cold and the slag or dross of iron of which they are composed. Its origin probably is the Old Norse Sindra, to sparkle or throw sparks.

CINDERELLA (1) Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning Ella or elf of cinders. See cinder. The name is related to that of Sin, moon deity, and to Sindbad. (2) The beautiful heroine of an ancient fairy tale of Eastern origin which appears in folk literature all over the world. The most popular version is that by Perrault, in which Cinderella is assigned to the most menial tasks of the household, whereas her stepsisters attend fine balls. Aided by her fairy godmother, who turns mice into horses, a pumpkin into a fine carriage, and who provides Cinderella with a beautiful gown, she goes to a ball, where the prince falls in love with her. At the bewitching hour of twelve she flees, and the prince finally finds her by means of a glass slipper which she dropped and which fits no foot but her own. Cinderella is a fire, moon, or sun goddess; she is the personification of the soul or light or fire within, a symbol of rebirth, truth, wisdom. She is the bright and shining one, the hearth-maid who keeps the fire lit. She resembles her star-crowned mother (godmother), and her story is related to the famous mother-daughter stories of mythology; her relationship to her godmother is that of the ego to the Oversoul, the rivulet to the sea, the spark to the fire. She is the personification of the Holy Spirit dwelling unhonored among the smoldering ashes of divinity and by patient care fanning them into flame from time to time. She is a variant of Ishtar when deprived of her beautiful robes (brilliance, verdure) by Allatu in the underworld; of Isis, the long-suffering, whose prince is Osiris; and of Psyche, whose prince is Cupid and whose vindictive stepmother is the jealous Venus. In some versions, Cinderella (wisdom) is hidden in a silver candlestick and is found by the prince who purchases it. In Denmark and Jutland she is the 'King's Daughter in the Mound,' a role which relates her to Nut, early mistress of the mountain. In Portuguese and Sicilian versions she is placed at the bottom of a well. The well is a conventional location for Truth. The Scandinavian version is called 'Princess in the Cave,' and she emerges from the cave naked. Truth is beautiful and naked. In the Slav version she shines like the sun. In various parts of Europe she is the heroine in a tale known as 'The Brother and Sister,' and her difficulties arise from her refusal to entertain her brother's proposal that she be his bride. Here again she echoes Isis, sister of Osiris, and Shulmanite, called Solomon's sister. The title of the story sometimes is One-Eye, Two-Eyes, and Three-Eyes, all light (sun, moon, or star) metaphors. Name variants in different localities are: Annemor, Caesarine, Catarina, Catherine, Gold Betheli, Lada, L'Isabelluccia, Mara, Maria, Marietta, Mariucella, Mary, Mona Catarina, Nina. When an oak log is hallowed out to make her petticoat, she is Maria Wainscot, Maria Wood, or Princess Woodencloak, and on emerging from her wooden sheath (blossoming), she is observed by a prince who marries her. Wood symbolizes celestial goodness in its lowest corporeal plane. Her emergence suggests light emerging from darkness or spring from winter. Cinderella is said to typify one whose desire to be helpful is the source of her good fortune; one who tends her innocent ideas or cherishes spirituality. She is a mental whose dream comes true. Animals connected with the various Cinderella tales are the ass, bull, cat, horse, mare, and mouse. The rose also is her emblem.

Cinderella garments. Robes of glory, supernatural raiment. She is said to have worn a diamond dress, i. e. knowledge; dress of gold chimes, awakener; dress of flame, enlightenment; a pearl dress without seams or slit, wisdom; a dress bespangled with sparkling color, universal love or truth. Her mantles are made of the skins of an ass, cat, or mouse, all symbolic of humility. Her protean changes of raiment are symbolic of the awakening, growth and final apotheosis of wisdom within the mind, and of her elusive and contradictory characteristics, as well as of the recurring changes of nature during the cycle of the year.

Cinderella's sisters. Cruelty, haughtiness, pride, selfishness, vanity.

Cinderella's slippers. Described as of blue grass, of glass, of gold. They are said to be pearl-embroidered, spangled, or sun shoes. These miraculous slippers, which clothe the lowest of natural things, cause the sole to be beautifully shod, symbolize the love of making one's self useful and correspond to the sun in the service of those meaner than himself, i. e. mankind. They reveal a shoe fetish or the magic power of feet; once the prince has Cinderella's shoe (foot) in his hand he is able to obtain that which he wishes. Compare Arianrhod, Foot.

Cindrillot (Cendrillot). Masculine version of Cinderella. A reversal of the Cinderella legend appears in the story in which King Solomon is robbed of his magic ring, becomes a humble kitchen scullion, and finally the lover of a king's daughter. Apollo and Heracles are sun heroes assigned to mental tasks. Sargon becomes a gardner's boy.

CINERARIA Flower carrying the sentiment always delightful. Also symbolizes sorrow.

CINNABAR In China, collector of immortal elixir, symbol of longevity.

CINNAMON By Christians assigned to Virgin Mary. By Hebrews used as an ingredient of the sacred oil in the tabernacle, the others being acorus, myrrh, olives.

CINQUEFOIL April 13 birthday flower, symbolizing maternal affection. Emblem of the dead.

As a talisman used to close wounds and soothe toothaches. In heraldry typifies hope, joy.

CINTAMANI Buddhist wish-granting or flaming pearl. A non-tantric symbol. Carried by Vayuvrat, the airy horse. Emblem of Ksitigarbha, Mahakala, Ratnapani, Ratnasambhava, Samantabhadra. See Ratna, Lung-ta.

CINTEOTL (CENTEATL, CENTEOTL, CEXOCHITL, CHIUTCOATL)

Literally, one flower. Toltec Indian maize god, ruler of the fourth hour of the night. Mate of Chicomecoatl. Among Nahuatl Indians identified as a goddess of earth and love, an aspect of Tlacoteotl. Also known as Tonacajohua (she who sustains us) and Tzintotl (original goddess), both forms of the divine mother.

CINVAT (CHINVAT) Zoroastrian bridge of the Divider. All souls cross it into the other world. Bridge between heaven and earth, where the dead are judged. It appears wide to the righteous, but so narrow to the sinful they fall into the yawning abyss of hell below. Identical with Al Sirat.

CIPACTONAL AND OROMUCO (CIPACTLI AND OXOMUCO) Aztec first pair; although mortal they represent heaven and earth. Created by Quetzalcoatl and Tezatlipoca.

CIPANGO (ZIPANGO) A marvelous island described by Marco

Polo. He placed it 1,500 miles from land, and it became the object of search by Columbus and other navigators. It probably belongs to legend along with Atlantis, El Dorado, Erewhon, Laputa, Utopia. Those who insist it is an actual place identify it as Japan.

CIPHER Figuratively, a person or thing of no importance or value. Word from the Arabic cifr (empty) and from the Hebrew sephar (number).

CIRCE (KIRKE) In Greek mythology daughter of Helios, the sun, and the sea-nymph Perse; sister of Aetes. For murdering her husband she was exiled to the island of Aeaea, where as moon goddess, enchantress, and sorceress, she surrounded herself with wild beasts she had transformed from men. Odysseus and his companions visited her island, where she turned all except Odysseus into swine by giving them a fruit to eat. Odysseus was saved by a herb given to him by Hermes. Although she was unable to entice Odysseus, the sun who was traveling homeward, from his purpose, he was willing to linger and avail himself of temporary pleasures. As an aftermath of his stay Agrius and Telegonus were born. Thus the subtle beauty of the moon worked a spell fatal to energy and turned men into swine, that is made them sensual, slothful, and lacking in wisdom. The enchanted realm was the realm of slumber, where the moon's enchantment degraded but finally purified. Circe's palace of indolence compares with that of Tara Bai, Hindu star-maiden. Like Kerkios and Kerkuon, Circe is a name which suggests turning to the left. Odysseus, as sun god, fought for the right order of the universe, and finally overcame Circe. His stay with her was during the period of winter or darkness. Her name also means she-falcon, a bird of omen, and is connected with circle and circus. She exemplifies a dangerously or irresistibly fascinating woman. Compare Ishullanu.

Circe of the Revolution. Madame Roland in recognition of her power over the Girondist leaders in the French Revolution.

CIRCINUS Constellation in the Southern Hemisphere also known as the Pair of Compasses.

CIRCLE Cosmos, deity, solar eye, sun. The all, ideal form, infinity, primordium, universe. The eternal I am, eternal law, eternal perfection, eternity; thus time has come to be reckoned on circlets or beads or eggs of time. Completeness, continuity, cycle of existence, that which devours its own beginning, a return to one's self. Coin, female principle; Pearl of Price. The element water. Represented by the color blue, because the circle being without corners represents the calm, indwelling blue. Emblem of Adda-Nari, Assur, Mercury, Ormuzd. Compare carole, stone circle, Stonehenge. Babylonian insignia of royal power. In Christian art typifies heavenly existence as opposed to the square which represents early existence. In Pawnee Indian hako ceremony drawn in imitation of the bird, messenger between heaven and earth, building its nest. The priest draws the circle with his toe because the eagle builds its nest with its claws. Also symbolizes the enclosure Tirawaatius made for his people, i. e. on all sides of the oval the sky touches the earth and within it people live. The main purpose of the ceremony, which may be held in any season except winter, is to pray for children in order that the tribe may increase and be strong.

Circle belted and topped by patriarchal cross. Earth with equatorial and polar circumferences as well as diameter measurements; the year's cycle; the path described by earth around the sun.

Circle and bow string. In Assyrian art the ever-present sovereignty with power of life and death.

Circle and cross. The center and four directions of the universe. Gradual enlightenment, the millennium. A circle with a cross on four sides signifies Christianity spreading to the four quarters of the globe.

Circle, cross, and mountain. Christian emblem signifying that the church shall be exalted above the hills in the four quarters of the earth.

Circle divided in two. Day and night, summer and winter. In China called Tae-Keih, symbol of the male and female principles of nature.

Circle filled with flowers. Emblems of the lotus.

Circle and Mongolian characters. Happiness, frequently appears in rugs.

Circle nine feet in circumference. In white magic fort or shield from which a magician dare not depart at the peril of his life until he has dismissed the spirit with which he is in contact.

Circle of fire. Fire or sun worship. Magician's emblem.

Circle surrounding a dot. Eternity surrounding the deity. Christianity. Mayan symbol of the primal cause, equivalent of English A. Original form of the Roman notation 100, later changed to C.

Circle surrounding E. Eye of light, sun.

Circle surrounding three yods and one kamet or tau. Hebrew symbol of God.

Circle and two asps with spread wings. In Egyptian art the ever-present sovereignty with power of life and death.

Circle within a circle. Androgyny.

Circle winged. Deity, divine spirit.

Five circles. The center and four directions of the universe; the five planets known to the ancient world. In Egyptian and Mayan art daylight and splendor.

Nine concentric circles. In ancient Semitic tradition the earth surrounded by the seven planets and fixed stars.

Quartered circle. Four quarters of the universe. In Siouan tradition two quarters, or the sky half, represent the masculine principle sacred to spirits of air and fire, and are on the side of war; two quarters, or the earth half, represent the female principle sacred to earth and water, and are on the side of peace.

Three circles. Love, perfect power, trinity, wisdom.

Three circles interlaced. Essential unity in one being; the never-beginning, never-ending unity; trinity.

Two circles. The Asvins, Discuri, Gemini, twins.

Two circles linked. Marriage of heaven and earth. Christ and his mystic bride; Christ and his marriage with church on earth.

CIRCULAR MOTION Faultless activity. The churning of the universe. See churning.

Circular mark on forehead. Caste mark worn by followers of Vishnu. Usually red or white. See chakra, patara.

Circumambulation. Ceremonial dancing or walking around an altar, object, person, or site with the right hand extended toward it. Called holy round or sunwise turning. Used as a talisman to blot out sin, bring good-luck, cure disease, fend off evil. Among primitive peoples used as cosmic magic to insure continuation of the sun in its course. If counter sunwise, the dance is expected to bring bad-luck.

CIRCUMCISION A rite practiced by Assyrians, Christian sects, Jews, Mohammedans, and most native tribes of East and South Africa. Among primitives a brotherhood rite performed at initiation ceremonies at which a boy is accepted as a full-fledged member of a tribe and prepared for the responsibilities of maturity. Among some tribes the internal labia of females is cut in initiation rites. Circumcision precedes marriage. Sometimes the operation is made painful to test a boy's ability to withstand pain, bravery being a mark of social distinction. Circumcision signifies the sanctity of the phallus and the rite is an offering to the deity, usually the great-mother or fertility goddess, to safeguard the other members of the tribe against want. In many cultures ground on which human blood has been shed is accursed and will remain barren forever; for this reason boys who are to be circumcised are placed on a platform composed of the living bodies of tribesmen, who catch any blood that spills. In advanced cultures circumcision is looked upon as a form of spiritual purification; in modern times it is performed mainly for remedial and hygienic purposes. See ant, blood offering, eunuch, knees drawn up, mutilation. The Christian festival of the circumcision of Jesus is observed on January 1. Priests who conducted ancient Egyptian mysteries were circumcised. Among Jews circumcision is a strong tribal badge, a mark of consecration enjoined by Mosaic law. It is known as Abraham's seal, and was the covenant between Abraham and his invisible guide Jehovah. Among tribes of New Guinea the tribal initiation, of which circumcision is the central feature, is conceived as a process of being swallowed and disgorged by a mythical monster, whose voice is heard in the humming sound of the bull-roarer. To complete the ceremony, those who have joined the ranks of full grown men are presented with dancing belts and henceforth are permitted to take part in ceremonial dances.

CIRCUMSPECTION Symbolized by a key.

CIREIN CROIN A monstrous sea serpent of Scottish folklore. Said to be the largest animal in the world. It ate seven whales at one meal. Parallels the Leviathan.

CIRIS In Greek mythology bird into which Scylla was transformed after causing the death of her father Nisus, who, in the form of a sea-eagle constantly pursued her. Storm myth, typifying atmospheric changes.

CIRRHA Another name for Delphi, Apollo's abode.

CISTA (CIST, KISTE) Receptacle for holding sacred utensils used in religious ceremonies and processions. Especially understood as the sacred basket used for carrying corn and articles pertaining to worship in the Eleusinian mysteries, and therefore sacrosanct to Demeter (Ceres) and Dionysus. Also the cradle or crib in which an abandoned divine child is found on a sacred river (Milky Way). It invariably is made of the sacred wood of an axis or world tree. As a cradle it is an instrument of rebirth, the medium by which a prophecy is fulfilled, and symbolizes the prevention of infanticide. Among children saved in such a cradle were Hirugo, Kuknos, Moses, Perseus, Sargon I, Taliesin. See abandoned children.

CISTERN Dream significance: serious peril.

CISTUS Flower symbolizing popular favor. Also called rock rose.

CITALLICUE Literally, star-skirted. In Aztec mythology, the Milky Way. A name of Tonacacihuatl.

CITAPATI (CITIPATI) Buddhist dancing skeletons. Two skeletons with arms interlaced dancing on corpses. Both carry wands with skull tops; one holds the kalasa (vase), the other holds the kapala (skull cup). They usually accompany Narokhachoma or Yama, king of the dead. In Tibet called Dur-krod-bdag-po.

CIT-BOLON-TUM Mayapan medicine god. His name is interpreted to mean boar with nine tusks or nine precious stones.

CITHAERON (CITHERON) Mountain site of the Bacchanal at which King Pentheus of Thebes was torn to pieces by his frenzied mother and aunts. The usurping King Lycus of Thebes exposed Amphion and Zethus on this mountain.

CITLALATONAC (CITLALLATONAC, OMETECUTLI) Literally, star of the warms or morning. In Aztec mythology a name of Quetzalcoatl who, in this aspect, is son of Tonacatecutli, All-Father, and the earth-born virgin Chimalman. Also a name of Tonaca cihuatl. Mate of Citlalincue.

CITLALINICUE (OMECIUATL)

In Aztec mythology spouse of Citlalatónac. Mother goddess. Dweller in thirteenth heaven. She gave birth to a stone knife which her sons threw to earth and from which 1,600 earth gods came into being. When Xolotl, a servant, brought them a bone from the underworld, they placed it in the water or mother-pot, sprinkled their blood on it, and a boy and a girl emerged who became the parents of the human race.

CITRAGUPTA In Hinduism spy for Dharma as judge of the dead.

CITRON December 13 birthday flower with the sentiment estrangement, ill-natured beauty. In China called Fo-shou or Buddha's hand, and symbolizes conjugal felicity, happiness, wealth. In Japan called yuzu, and is the court tree of good fortune.

CITY Anciently a citadel or central section used by dwellers in a district as a market place, refuge in time of invasion, or as a place for worship and festivities. In the Bible, a walled-town entered through a gate. In England, strictly speaking a bishop's seat, loosely any large municipality. London's financial district is called The City. Any of the ancient Greek republics. Formerly it was a maternal symbol, probably in allusion to its serving as a place of refuge, and it was symbolized by a machinated or turreted crown, key, or a tower, and personified by a woman wearing a gown embroidered to indicate things for which cities are noted. Most moderns regard the city as a place where one is cut off from natural and spiritual life, and writers frequently depict loneliness through aspects of city life. Kafka regarded the city as a place where the individual loses his identify.

City of Bells. Strassburg.

City of Brotherly Love. Philadelphia.

City of Churches. Brooklyn, New York, which formerly was a city.

City of David. Jerusalem.

City of the dead. Burial ground.

City of destruction. In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, world of the unconverted. Christian flees from it to the Celestial City (Death).

City of Elms. New Haven.

City of God. The whole body of Christian believers.

City of the Golden Gate. San Francisco.

City of Lanterns. Fanciful cloud city in Lucian's Veræ Historiæ.

City of Legions. Caerleon-on-Usk, where King Arthur held his court of the Round Table.

City of Palaces. Calcutta, Rome.

Cities of the Plain. Sodom and Gomorrah.

City of refuge. At the command of God, Moses set three cities, Bezer, Golan, and Ramoth, on the east of the Jordan, and Joshua added three, Hebron, Kedesh, Shechem, on the west of the Jordan, as places to which those who had accidentally killed another might flee for safety. Medina, in Arabia, to which Mohamet fled when pursued by conspirators, is a city of refuge. As he entered Medina in triumph it is known also as city of the Prophet.

City of Seven Hills. Rome.

City of the Sun. Baalbec, Heliopolis, Rhodes, which had the sun for tutelary deity.

City of Three Kings. Cologne, reputed to be the burial place of the Magi.

City of the Violated Treaty. Limerick, because of the manner in which England kept violating her treaty.

City of the Violet Crown. Athens.

Empire City. New York City.

Eternal City. Rome.

Nameless City. Ancient Rome, alluding to a superstition that anyone who uttered its mystical name would perish.

Puritan City. Boston.

Quaker City. Philadelphia.

Smoky City. Pittsburgh.

Twin Cities. Minneapolis and Saint Paul.

Windy City. Chicago.

CIUATEOTL (CIUACOATL) Aztec snake-woman. An earth and moon goddess; divine mother, deity of adversity, poverty, and toil. Her roaring voice betokened war. At her festivals her priests wore phallic emblems, by which they hoped to induce her to provide good crops. Also called Ilamatecutli, old goddess; Itzpa-papalotl, obsidian butterfly; Tem-azcalteci, grandmother of the sweat bath; Teteoninnan, mother of the gods; Tonantzin, our mother.

CIUATETEO (CIUAPIPILTIN) Aztec ghostly women who at certain seasons of the year left Tamoanchan, paradise of the west, in the form of eagles and struck children with epilepsy and inspired men with lust. They were the souls of women who had died in childbirth. Dreaded and propitiated as bringers of infant maladies.

CLACHABRATH Altar stones of the Caledonian druids. Battle oracles. They were rocking or tilting stones, spheres of enormous size, balanced with such nicety the slightest touch caused them to vibrate.

CLAM One who is closed-mouth or stupidly silent. In Japan a life restorer, phallic nourisher.

CLARCHEN Goethe heroine noted for her constancy and devotion.

CLARENCE Masculine name from the Latin, meaning bright, clear, illustrious. In feminine form Clara (Claire, Clare, Clarice, Clarissa, Clarisse). In Finland Cinderella is known as Beautiful Clara. Nuns of an order founded by the sister of Saint Francis of Assisi are known as Poor Clares or Clarisses.

CLARIBEL (CLARABEL, CLARINDA) An invented feminine name modeled on Clara and Christabel or Linda.

CLARK (CLARKE) Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning clerk or learned man. Related to cleric and clergyman.

CLASSICAL Servius divided the Romans into five classes. The citizens belonging to the highest class were called classicus, the rest were infra classem (below the classicus). Authors belonging to the first rank were called classici auctores (classical authors). The best or first class authors were those whose works expressed technical precision over emotional expressiveness; clarity, rationality, and restraint over bombast, imaginative excesses, and wildness.

CLATHRUS Form which embodies the figures of all the letters of the alphabet and numerals. Frequently used by Greeks on buildings, medals, and vases.

CLAUDE (CLAUD, CLAUDIUS) Masculine name from a Roman family name, meaning lame. In feminine form Claudette (Claudia, Claudine).

Claude Duval. Famous outlaw and thief famed in ballad and legend.

CLAUDIO In Shakespeare's Measure for Measure brother of Isabella, lover of Juliet. For seducing Juliet he is condemned to death. A coward, he begs his sister to become the mistress of the judge to save his life.

CLAUDIUS In Shakespeare's Hamlet, murderer of his brother, Hamlet's father; usurper of the throne of Denmark after marrying Gertrude, his brother's widow.

CLAVILENO ALIEGERO Literally wooden key, the winged. Wooden horse of Don Quixote. It resembles the horse of Cambuscan and other magical horses.

CLAW Clutch, ferocity, greediness, materialism. Debasement in sensuality, misuse of reproductive power. Also construction and usefulness (the eagle builds his nest with his claws). A brand, also called the three-fingered broad-arrow. In England placed on the clothing of criminals or those who fall into the 'clutches' of the law. Resolves into ac-el-aw, i.e. great god A or Aw. In medieval England claw was called cliver, which is cognate with cleaver, clever, clover.

CLAY Adam, creation, life, man. The potter's art. Fire destroyer. In creation myths flesh frequently is made of clay or earth. A clay picture is burned in magic to bring about the drying away of the illness of the person who bears the likeness or name of the picture.

CLAYTON Masculine name from a family and place name.

CLEAN Clean and unclean are terms used in the Bible in a ceremonial sense. To be clean is to be ceremonially pure, conforming to ceremonial law; said of animals, persons, things, etc. Persons unclean are made clean by bathing or fasting. Anciently sacrificial offerings were required.

CLEARNESS In an Italian icon personified by a naked youth with a noble aspect surrounded by splendor. The sun is in his hand.

CLEMENT (CLEM) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning gracious, merciful, mild-tempered. In feminine form Clementine (Clementina, Clemmie)

Clement V. Dante in the Inferno calls him the shepherd without law. Pope noted for his greed and licentiousness. He became the unscrupulous tool of Philip the Fair of France.

CLEMATIS February 13 birthday flower symbolizing artfulness, mental beauty. Emblem of Virgin Mary's bower. In Korea, because it is hardy, called the turtle flower and symbolic of longevity. Associated with genii.

Evergreen clematis. Symbolizes poverty.

CLEOPATRA (CLEO) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning celebrated, fatherland, glorious. The name resolves into Ac (Great) + leo (lion) + Patara (a seat of sun worship). (2) Greek goddess of twilight, wife of Meleagros, the sun. Soon after the death of her husband she died, as the twilight cannot long survive the sun. (3) Wife of Phineus, daughter of Boreas, the wind. (4) Egyptian queen of the 1st century B.C. whose charms so captivated Antony, he repudiated his wife Octavia to live with the fascinating Egyptian, and brought about his ruin. After the battle of Actium Cleopatra killed herself with an asp. Thus an enchantress, seductress, who could not endure defeat.

Cleopatra's needle. An obelisk or stone pillar honoring the sun. A phallus, sky prop, universal axis. Cleopatra has no connection with the monuments bearing her name, except as the symbolic recipient of the phallus. See On.

Cleopatra's pearl. Extravagance. According to legend the costliness of a banquet at which Cleopatra entertained Antony caused him to express astonishment. To further impress him she dissolved a pearl in a strong acid and toasted him with the drink.

CLEOPHAS (CLEO) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning friendship.

CLERESTORY (CLEARSTORY)

The highest story of the nave and choir of a church or cathedral; designed to give light. The upper part of any structure perforated with windows which supply the chief source of light for the building. Opposed to blind-story.

CLETA Worshipped by the Spartans as one of the Graces. Name signifying sound.

CLIACH Irish legendary mortal harper who sought the divine hand of Conchenn, Bodb's daughter. For a year Bodb's magic kept the lover from Conchenn. Cliach harped until the earth opened up and a dragon issued forth which caused him to die in terror. This dragon is scheduled to rise again at the end of the world. Cliach probably personifies the wind.

CLIANTHUS Self-seeking, worldliness. Name meaning flame-flower.

CLIFFORD Masculine name from a place name in Yorkshire, and from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning valorous.

Martha Clifford. In James Joyce's Ulysses a stenographer with whom Leopold Bloom carries on a clandestine affair limited to a secret exchange of letters. Her corresponding character in the Odyssey is Calypso.

CLIMBER Vine symbolizing one who aspires to a higher social position. One who attaches one's self to something or uses another for support in order to rise to a higher position.

CLINTON (CLINT) Masculine name from that of a British parish and from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning nobly descended.

CLIO (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning famous. (2) Greek Muse presiding over heroic poetry and history. Her emblem is a scroll or an open book. She wears a laurel wreath. (3) Pseudonym of Addison, probably derived from the initial letters of Chelsea, London, Islington, Office.

CLIVE Masculine name from a family name; equivalent of cliff.

CLOAK Concealment, infamy, mystery, protection, villainy.

CLOCK (1) The ticking away or death of time, also time renewing itself, hence symbolic of death and rebirth. Typifies motion and time. Dream significance: important business. Origin of the word is disputed, but it undoubtedly is related to the Gaelic clog, Latin clocca, and Welsh cloch, all meaning bell, and anciently time was tolled by a bell. The word compares with clack. See temple, time. (2) A constellation in the Southern Hemisphere also known as Horologium.

Clock striking. Approaching death warning.

CLOELIA (CLELIA) Legendary Roman maiden who swam the Tiber to escape from being held hostage by Porsena, the Etruscan. Porsena set her at liberty because of her courage.

CLOISTER Retreat, seclusion. Dream significance: despair, peace.

CLOOTIE Scottish name for the devil alluding to the cleft hoof.

CLOPAS Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning glorious.

CLOSED MAN First Pawnee chief. Son of Sakuru (sun) and Pah (moon).

CLOTH Cloth strips. Hung on sacred trees by primitive peoples as deity offerings. A kind of scapegoat, substitute for clothed figures which, in turn, were substitutes for mortals.

Gold cloth. Excellence, sunlight, virtue.

CLOTHBUR Weed symbolizing rudeness.

CLOTEN A vindictive lout who has occasional gleams of good sense. From the rejected lover of Imogen in Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

CLOTHING Hiding that which is naked, as clothing a body, an idea, or a scheme. Revelation of rank, as a uniform. That which is saluted; a salute is to a uniform, which represents rank. A kind of scapegoat in sacrifice rites; hung on sacred trees in deity offerings as substitutes for mortals. See cloth strips, golden fleece.

CLOTHO (KLOTHO) In Greek mythology the youngest of the three Moirai (Fates). She prepares the thread of life which Lachesis spins and Atropos cuts off. Sometimes she is described as the spinner of the thread. As preparer of the thread she presides at births. Her emblem is a distaff. She resembles Arachne, Ariadne, Chih Nu, Penelope, Vurdh.

CLOTHRU Irish fertility goddess. Sister of Medb and Ethne. When Medb left Conchobar, Clothru and Ethne became his wives. By her three brothers, Bres, Lothar, and Nar, called the Three Finns of Emuin, she became the mother of Lugaid the Red; and by Lugaid, she became the mother of Crimthann Nia Nair.

CLOTILDA (CLOTHILDE, CLO-TILDE) Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning battle, loud, and from Old High German, meaning fair-minded, just.

CLOUD Benignity, providence, sanctity, wisdom, i.e. protectors against the scorching heat of the sun. Also dreariness, ignorance, mystery, rain, short-sightedness, trouble. Dream significance: squabble. In mythology, celestial cattle, fleece, sheep; deity aspect; divine ship or steed, genii vehicle, magic carpet. Horses, mules, and other marvelous mounts usually typify clouds. Contrary currents blow at different elevations, thus the animals sometimes are said to be walking backwards. See Cacus, Chang Kuo, Skidbladnir. Buddhist emblem of Manjusri. In China a symbol of good fortune and high aims. A boy pictured flying his kite toward the clouds indicates he will soon reach his goal. Breath of P'an Ku, which see. In Christianity typifies the unseen God. In Old Testament, dust of Jehovah's feet, God's power and presence. Also symbolic of armies and multitudes.

Black cloud. In China typifies floods.

Cloud and rain. In Japan cohabitation. The phrase for the act is "To be in cloud and rain."

Cloud screen. In Japan marital relations.

Green cloud. In China a plague of insects.

Pillar of cloud. In Old Testament miraculous token of divine presence and care. Direction provided by God.

Red cloud. In China calamity and warfare.

Showery cloud. Fructification, provider of beauty, wisdom.

Waterless cloud. In Hebrew tradition a false teacher.

White cloud. Success.

Yellow cloud. In China symbol of prosperity.

CLOVEN FOOTED (OR HOOFED)

Bearing the mark of an evil one. Devilish, Satanic; thus cloven-footed treachery. Probably derived from the maiming of fertility gods. See emasculation, hobbling.

CLOVER Flower carrying the sentiment, I promise. Fertility symbol; to be "in clover," is to be in comfort or luxury. Also symbolizes vengeance. Clover resolves into ac-el-ov-er, which yields great god fire (sun) or great lover (god). Cognate with cleaver (of the way) and with clever.

Clover leaf. Emblem of spring, season of renewal. Abundance, growth. The trefoil, a trinity symbol. In magic said to ward off the evil eye. Its center, bearing the form of a horseshoe, carries the same symbolism. Irish national emblem called shamrock. Attribute of Saint Patrick. In Japan typifies July.

Crimson clover. In the language of flowers: Not only gay, but good.

Four-leaf clover. Good fortune. In the language of flowers: Be mine. Emblem of the cross. Pattern of highway intersection designed for safety and speed.

Purple clover. Prudent, watchful.

Red clover. Emblem of the state of Vermont. Symbol of industry.

White clover. In the language of flowers: Think of me.

CLOVES Dignity.

CLOVIS Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning holy fame.

CLUB (1) Brutality, force, martyrdom, power. If knotty, signifies difficulties. Christian symbol of betrayal; emblem of saints Apollonaris, Fabian, James the Less, Jude, Nicomede, Simon Zelotes. Weapon of Greek sun heroes, such as Heracles and Zeus, symbolizing the sun's rays. (2) Suit in the tarot deck replacing the caduceus, scepter, or wand of ancient decks. Of black color, its pattern is three leaves or triangles on a stem, symbolizing trinity. It typifies the plant kingdom and represents the spring season, thus symbolizes birth or creation. The detached part of a tree it corresponds to the archetypal world, the world of pure ideas, the element fire, the I in IHVH, the magician's divining staff or wand, and To Will. Insignia of superior will-power or supervision. Instrument of command by reason, as opposed to physical force by the sword. Heraldic emblem of Mercury the caduceator and of Thoth. Used to render chastity. When a majority appear in a deal signifies activity, authority, creation, energy, glory; also opposition and quarrels. See tarot.

CLUD In Brythonic mythology mother of Gwawl. Probably goddess of the river Clyde.

CLURACAN (CLURICAUNE) Irish fairy of the wine cellar. A diminutive old man associated with the leprechaun. He takes care that beer barrels and wine casks are not left running, and for a reward he is given his supper. He also knows where hidden treasures are buried, and he is a fairies' shoemaker. He corresponds to the English puck or German kobold.

CLYDE Masculine name from a fairy name, from the River Clyde, and from the Greek, meaning afar, the glorious.

CLYMENE Greek river nymph. Daughter of Oceanus and Tethys, wife of Iapetus, mother of Atlas and Prometheus. Beloved by Helios by whom she bore Phaethon.

CLYM OF THE CLOUGH Literally, Clement of the cliff. One of the three famous archers in Percy's Reliques. He was an outlaw who roamed Englewood Forest in the north of England. He never missed his mark, and robbed the rich to give to the poor. He is interpreted to be a sun-hero, his rays never missing their mark and distributing their golden light on the poor as well as on the rich. The exploits of Clym and his companions Adam Bell and William of Cloudesles were as famous in northern England as those of Robin Hood and Little John in the middle country.

CLYPEUS A round convex shield of antiquity, usually of bronze, carried by soldiers. Also the shield-like memorial plate hung in a dwelling or temple.

Clypeus Sobieski. Constellation in the Southern Hemisphere. Also called Scutum and Shield of Sobieski.

CLYTEMNESTRA (KLYTAIMNESTRA) In Greek mythology daughter of Leda by Tyndareos (Zeus as Thunderer), wife of Agamemnon, mother of Electra, Iphigenia, and Orestes. During her husband's absence as commander of the Greeks at the siege of Troy she formed an alliance with his cousin Aegisthus. In revenge for Agamemnon's sacrifice of their daughter Iphigenia, Clytemnestra, assisted by Aegisthus who aspired to take Agamemnon's place as king of Mycenae, killed Agamemnon and his retainers on their return from Troy. Orestes avenged the murder of his father by killing Clytemnestra and her paramour. Clytemnestra, a dawn goddess, with her lover the prince of darkness, killed her husband, the aged sun as he was in his bath. They also killed his retainers, the lights which accompany the sinking sun. In turn they were killed by the young sun. Clytemnestra is drawn from Klutos (noble) + mnaomai (to woo for a wife).

CLYTIE Greek sea nymph. Daughter of Oceanus, in love with Helios, when he transferred his affections to Leucothea, Clytie informed Leucothea's father Orchamus of his daughter's attachment. The enraged king buried his daughter alive. Helios did not return to Clytie and, inconsolable, she remained on the ground facing the sun, refusing all sustenance, and at the end of nine days she became a heliotrope constantly turned toward the sun to follow him in his daily course. Legend typifying the action of sun on water.

CNOC MIODHCHAOIN Sacred hill of Miodhchaoin and his sons. On it they permitted no shouting, i. e. winds met with disaster.

COAL That which gives out the flame by which it is overcome. Symbol of the hearth and of fire or sun worship.

Burning coals. Ordeal by fire. Emblems of saints Apollonaris and Britius. In Old Testament symbolizes anger, purgation. The words of God in anger, thus "coals of fire from God's mouth." At the feet of God typify the disobedient trod upon by destroying fire. When scattered by a high priest a declaration that Jerusalem after the execution of judgment should be purified and restored to favor. In Cabalism typifies Shekinah (God) as protector Carried by rabbis on Yom Kipper and placed in the Holy of Holies that the smoke might screen them when behind the curtain, that is act as a protecting cloud against the Shekinah in the inner room, whose brilliance otherwise might cause the rabbis to die. See incense.

Carry coals to Newcastle. Do that which is superfluous; waste one's labors; referring to Newcastle, a large coal-shipping center in Britain.

Coalsack. One of the black spaces in the Milky Way.

Haul over the coals. Bring to task for a shortcoming; scold; alluding to the ancient form of torture in which victims were hauled over the coals of a slow fire.

Heap coals of fire on one's head. Melt down animosity by deeds of kindness; put to shame by repaying good for evil.

COAT Protection, secretive-ness. See clothing. In Old Testament a coat of skins typifies redemption, sacrifice.

COATLICUE Literally, lady of the serpent skirt. Aztec serpent goddess. Earth lady. The magically impregnated virgin-mother of Huitzilopochtli. One of the wives of Mixcoatl, cloud serpent of the Milky Way. Also called Tlazoltoetli, Tonantzin.

COATRISCHIC Taino Indian tempest raiser. Probably twin of Guatauva. Subordinate of Guabancex.

COBA In Irish legend son of Miled. Divine hunter. He was the first to prepare a trap in Ireland and, putting his leg in to test it, his shin-bone and arms were fractured and he died.

COBAEA Vine symbolizing gossip.

COBBLER'S TOOLS Emblems of saints Crispianus and Crispus.

COBLYNAU Brythonic gnome of the mines. Resembles German kobold.

COBRA Deadliness, venom. Also carries the general symbolism of serpent, which see. In Buddhism provided Buddha with a protective hood. In Egypt typified supreme power. See uraeus. In India the sacred cobra or naga is known as Chera, and worshipers call themselves Cheras, Cherus, Keralas, Kiras, Seras, all of which are cognate with cherry and cherub.

COBWEB Danger, decay, desolation, entanglement, rubbish. Also that which is fine-spun, frail. Emblem of spinning. If placed on a cut supposedly stops bleeding.

COCIDIUS Ancient British war god. Also worshiped under the names Alator, Belatucador, Camulus, Condates, Coritiacus, Loucetius, Rigisamos, and Toutates.

COCK Alertness, diligence, energy, exultation, haste, resurrection, victory, vigilance, wakefulness, warning. Also defiance, egotism, fame, jealousy, lust. The male principle. Herald of the day, warner of ghosts. Talisman against the evil eye. Dream significance: (crowing) early success; (quiet) quarrels, rivalries. In heraldry signifies courage, always prepared for battles. Emblem of France, and on United States ballots, the Democratic Party. Sacred to Apollo, Asclepius, Amaterasu, Athena, Hermes, Mercury, Mithra, Ormuzd, Zs, and to dawn and sun deities of practically all nations. By Australian aborigines called Gourgougahgah, i.e. bird which laughs at dawn. In China called kung-chi. Herald of mortal existence and symbol of honors, merit, and the west. Animal carrying the sun through the tenth house of the Chinese zodiac (Capricornus) and through the hours 5 to 7 P.M. It supposedly has the power to change into human form and inflict good or evil on mankind. Associated with the underworld and used at funerals to dissipate the power of evil. Attribute of Mao. In Christian belief represents evolving humanity, man as he was, is, and may be when he had fully realized the divinity latent within him, thus past, present, and future. Typifies faithful preachers of the gospel and man battling in life's constant warfare. Emblem of Saint Peter symbolizing repentance. A church talisman because Christ supposedly rose at the hour at which the cock crowed, and placed on spires; later on roofs and towers as weather vanes. When on a lamp, Christ the light; on a tomb, resurrection; on a tower, preaching. In orthodox belief regarded as the devil's messenger, having crowed at Saint Peter's denial. Among gnostics represents Phronesis, the foresight or intelligence and vigilance which emanated from the Logos. In ancient Greece a chthonic bird. When sacrificed to Asclepius signified death was welcome as a cure for evil; also thanks for recovery from an illness. In Japan preparer of the heart of the pious for purification or worship. Called Tokoyo-naganaki-dori (long-singing bird-of-the-eternal-land). Among the Parsees a sacred bird never killed. Many ancients would not sacrifice a cock because it represents health, time, and wisdom, none of which should be sacrificed. In ancient Rome, as in Germany and Hungary of recent times, a bird of auguries, and consulted as a weather prophet. In ancient Scotland sacrificed for the cure of epilepsy. A Slavic fertility symbol.

Black cock. Death, judgement of God.

Cock and bull. Highly improbable; expression used especially in stories relating to miraculous escapes.

Cock crowing. Call of dawn; disperser of evil spirits. Christian trumpet of resurrection. Hebrew symbol of the third watch of the night, hours from midnight until morning.

Cock crowing and a peony. In Chinese art success and honors.

Cock and dog. Union of two opposing forces.

Cock flapping wings. Christian symbol of mortification; emblem of Saint Peter.

Cock in a circle. The sun.

Cock of the walk. The dominant bully; one who had overcome all opposition and has become chief or leader.

Cock perched on a pillar.

Cock of Abraxas, gnostic mystery word coined to express mathematically the unspeakable name of the Supreme Spirit.

Coxcomb (Cock's comb, Cock's crest). Dawn, lightning, singularity. An affected man, a vain fellow. Emblem of a jester's cap. Christian warrior crowned with success.

Feel like a fighting cock. Feel exuberantly equal to one's task.

Live like a fighting cock. Be fed and housed luxuriously.

Red cock. In China, picture pasted on a house as a talisman against fire.

Ride a cock horse to Banbury cross. A child sitting astride the toe of an adult's foot and being swung up and down. A cross stood in Banbury, Oxford, England, until the time of Queen Elizabeth.

White cock. Man of holy life. In China, picture pasted in coffins to frighten away demons. With a white boar and a white horse sacrificed in Japan to Mitosh-no-kami for a good harvest.

COCKADE Emblem of the state of Maryland.

Blue and red cockade. Badge of the city of Paris.

Green cockade. Emblem of French revolutionists.

White cockade. Emblem of French royalists.

COCKAIGNE (COCAGNE, CO-KAYNE) Lotus land of poetry, imaginary region of luxury. In mock-serious poetry of the middle ages a Utopia made of pastry, where goods are supplied without the payment of money. London and its suburbs so called as the abode of cockneys; also cockneydom. The name has been applied to Paris. In James Branch Cabell's Jurgen a land over which Anaitis presides.

Cockney. Word believed to have developed from cock's eggs, a term applied to small yolkless eggs occasionally laid by hens; thence a young cock, a young cook, a cook's scullion. Probably related to the Welsh coegnaidd, meaning conceited, coxcomb, foppish, and to coax, meaning deceive. In middle English it applied to a foolish child or a mother's darling, hence an effeminate man or an affected woman, and by country people applied to all city dwellers. Finally it became restricted to its present meaning, one born within the sound of Bow Bells, i. e. one born in London and possessing peculiarities of speech.

COCKATRICE Fabulous monster with a cock's head, wings of a fowl, dragon's tail, and said to be hatched by a reptile from a cock's egg. Deadly to those who feel its breath or meet its glance. Thus any crawling venomous creature, a person who is insidious or treacherous and bent on mischief. The Devil, a prostitute. In heraldry used to excite terror. Compare basilisk.

COCKLE December 11 birthday flower signifying absence. In Christian belief wickedness (weed) invading the goodness (garden) of the church. In Japan honored as a life restorer, phallus nourisher.

COCKLESHELL Attribute of Aphrodite (Venus). See shell for symbolism.

COCKROACH Filth. Totem of the African Nandi clan. In France and Russia regarded as lucky; its leaving a house portends bad luck, as the cockroach knows where good things are to be had.

COCK ROBIN In nursery rhymes pet name of the male robin. Term applied to a soft easy fellow; also to the reflection of sun from a pail of water, and to a small cheap printing office.

COCONUT Hung on porches in Burma to honor Mahagiri, the household spirit, and to protect the family from illness. Probably reminiscent of skulls collected in the days of head hunting. In Polynesia spun like a teetotum to discover a thief.

COCYTUS (KOKYTUS) One of the five rivers of Hades. River of lamentation, which echoed with the groans of the dead. The unburied were doomed to wander along its banks for one hundred years. It flowed into the Acheron. Dante placed it at the bottom of his Inferno and called it a frozen river.

CODFISH Emblem of Massachusetts. Codfish aristocracy applies to those who have acquired wealth without culture, especially those who gained their fortune in the fisheries of Massachusetts.

COEL Celtic god of sky and war. Probably original Old King Cole.

COELUS Roman sky god. Son of Aether and Dies. Identified with Greek Uranus.

COFFEE Dream significance: (beans) bad omen; (drinking it) care, fatigue; (upsetting it) upsets. Coffee grounds are used by diviners for purposes of prophecy.

COFFIN Ancient mysteries, death, resurrection. For additional symbolism see burial, chest, cist, punt, sleigh. Dream significance: joy, recovery; (to see a living woman on a bier) her early marriage; (to see oneself in alive in a coffin) omen of death. In Freemasonry symbolizes death and rebirth.

COG WHEEL Fate, industry, mechanics. See wheel for further symbolism.

COH, PRINCE Son of King Can of Mexico. Light deity slain by his brother Prince Aac, lord of darkness. Coh resolves into Acoh (Great O or Orb, i.e. sun); Aac resolves into A-ac (A the great or primal cause).

COHABITATION An ancient ritual performed by a man and a woman in a field about to be sown to inspire Earth to engage in cohabitation for fertilization that she may bring forth her increase and confer wealth and happiness on mankind. In some cultures the act supposedly fertilizes Earth.

COHEN Name of a Hebrew priestly caste. Its members are subject to certain privileges and disabilities.

Bella Cohen. In James Joyce's Ulysses a procuress operating a house of prostitution in Dublin. She corresponds to Circe in the Odyssey, inasmuch as men under her influence turn to swine.

CO-HON Anamese (Indo-Chinese) souls who had met a violent death and had not had proper burial. They attack travelers at night and cause misfortune to those who forget them.

COHUACAN Aztec holy mountain located in the land of eternal youth. Abode of gods. Name signifies bent or curved mountain, the hill of heaven curving down on all sides to the horizon.

COIN Bribery, disbursement, stinginess, trade, wealth. A good-luck charm. Placed on the eyes of the dead to keep them closed, lest they open and indicate by a glance who is to follow. Emblem of Adda-Nari, Judas, Mercury, Saint Nicholas. In Buddhism one of the eight precious things. In China called ch'ien (cash). Amulet against illness and influences of demons, especially of those who inhabit tombs. Ancient Greeks placed a coin called the danace or obolus in the mouth of the dead as a fee for the boatman Charon.

COLCHIS In Greek mythology land of the Golden Fleece, thus a land whose clouds were sunlit. Ruled by King Aetes.

COLE Masculine name from the Latin, meaning dove. In feminine form Colette, which also is a feminine diminutive of Nicholas.

COLHUATZINCATL Literally, winged. Aztec god who is an agent of a drunken man's mischief.

COLIMA Mexican holy mountain and volcano. Name resolves into Ac-ol-im-a, and yields Great God Sun A.

COLIN Scottish variant of the Latin masculine name Colun, meaning dove; also from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning a peasant.

Colin Clout. A countryman or shepherd in pastoral poetry. Spenser uses the name to describe himself in the Shepherd's Calendar.

COLLA Inca deity, guardian of the South. Also called Ayar Auca.

COLLAR Aristocracy, modesty, ownership, shackle. Sun emblem. Insignia of office. Egyptian funeral amulet. Worn by the goddess Isis to provide her with protection and strength.

COLLEEN Feminine name from the Irish, meaning girl.

COLLEGE HAT Quadrature carrying the symbolism of both the circle and the square.

COLOR Cheer, honor, hope, optimism, truth. Also falsehood, pallor or flush. Badge, emblem, rank. See individual colors for further symbolism.

Colorless. Darkness, dullness.

Colors. Changeableness, deception, diversity, enthusiasm, fickleness, open-mindedness, revelation, stubbornness, surrender, uncertainty, varied luck. In American Indian tradition many hues represent the upper world or zenith.

Colors, ages of man: *

People	First	Second
	Age	Age
Celtic	white	red
Greek	yellow	white
Hindu(early)	white	red
Hindu(later)	white	yellow
Mexican	white	yellow

People	Third	Fourth
	Age	Age
Celtic	yellow	black
Greek	red	black
Hindu(early)	yellow	black
Hindu(later)	red	black
Mexican	red	black

*Yellow is the equivalent of gold; white of silver; red of copper or bronze; black of iron.

Colors, art of the Occident.

Pure or auspicious colors are black: grim determination; blue: constancy, deity, justice, sky, truth; green: fruitfulness, hope, immortality, life, prosperity, vegetation; orange or gold: benevolence, earthly wisdom, fire, holy spirit, hospitality, marriage; purple: love of truth, loyalty, martyrdom, royalty; red: blood, love, patriotism, valor; white: day, innocence, perfection, purity; yellow or gold: divinity, highest values, sun, supreme wisdom. 1644) yellow, the Ts'ing (1644-1911).

Impure or sinister colors are black: death, despair, evil, night, sin; blue: discouragement, doubt; brown: barrenness, penitence, renunciation, unfruitfulness, winter; gray: barrenness, death, despair, penitence, renunciation, winter; green: envy, jealousy; orange: devil, evil, malevolence; purple: mourning, regret; red: passion, war; silver: night, moon; white: ghost, hypocrisy.

Colors, Chinese art. They have symbolic meaning only when in combination with one another. Black on red: happiness, used on wedding invitations; black on yellow: religiousness; blue on black: evil spirit; blue on green: first class, woman's colors; blue on white: devil's colors; blue on yellow: old mourning; gold on black: old man's death; gold on red: special happiness; gold on white: aristocracy; gold on yellow: imperialism; red on blue: old mourning; red on green: happiness; red on white: important notice; red on yellow; loyalty; white on black: history, lower class, mourning; white on blue: lower class, mourning; white on red: good luck; white on yellow: Buddhism; yellow on black: death of an old man; yellow on blue: divine nature; yellow on green: first class; yellow on white: holiness.

Colors, Chinese drama. The five colors are black: evil; blue-green: officials; red: festivities, joy, yang principle; white: mourning; yellow: royal family and yin principle. Black face typifies a rough honest man; red face, a sacred person; white face, a cunning and treacherous although dignified man; white nose, a comedian.

Colors, Chinese dynasties. Brown, the Sung dynasty (960-1127); green, the Ming (1368-

Colors, Christian. Generally observed in the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches of the United States. Black: death, Good Friday; green: hope and peace, used on ordinary Sundays, from the octave of Epiphany to Septuagesima, and from Trinity Sunday until Advent unless a saint's day intervenes; purple or violet: mourning and penitence, used at Advent, Ash Wednesday, ember days, Holy Innocents Day unless it is a Sunday, in which case red is used, Lent, Quinquagesima, rogation days, and Septuagesima; red: blood and fire, used at Exaltation and Invention of Cross, on Holy Innocents Day, at martyrs' and apostles' feasts, from Pentecost to Trinity Sunday, and at Whitsuntide; white: chastity and purity, used at festivals of angels, confessors, and virgins, color of Ascension, Christmas, Circumcision, Easter, Epiphany, and other chief feasts. Blue and yellow are non-canonical. Old church calendars record high days in red; ordinary, inferior or unpropitious, days in black. For black days red is the color for martyrs, except within octaves of greater festivals; white is the color for bishops, confessors, doctors, priests, virgins. The red day colors appear above.

Colors, Christian orders. Augustine - black; Brigittines: black; Order of Mercy: white, badge of arms of kings of Aragon; Premonstratensians: black or brown, white cloak; Servi: black; Trinitarians: white; blue and red cross on breast. Benedictine - black; Camaldolesi, Cathusians, Cistercians, and Olivetani: white; Oratorians: black; Poor Clares: brown or gray, knotted cord; Vallombrosans: pale gray. Carmelite - dark brown long scapulary, white cloak; Scalzi: barefooted. Dominican - white with long black hooded cloak. Franciscan- brown or gray, knotted cord; Capuchins: dark brown, long pointed hood; Cordeliers: brown; Minimes: brown short scapulary with rounded ends and knotted cord; Observants: gray with knotted cord. Jesuits - black cassock, biretta. Visitation of Saint Mary- black, black veil, white wimple, knotted cord.

Colors, Christian Trinity.

Blue, God, the Father, heaven and the spirit of man; red, the Holy Ghost, hell, and the body of man; yellow, the Son, earth, and the mind of man.

Colors, form. The circle, without corners, represents the calm indwelling blue; the hexagon, although with angles, approaches the circle, and represents the energy yet peacefulness of yellow; the triangle, with sharp corners, approximates the energizing fiery red.

Colors, elements:

	China	Greek and Roman	Hebrew	Leonardo Da Vinci
air		yellow	yellow	blue earth	white	blue	white	yellow fire	red	red	red	red metals	yellow
water	black	green	purple	green
wood	green

Colors, four directions. The colors of the points of the compass usually are determined by local phenomena, the direction of deadly or dry winds indicated by black.

People or

Nation	North	South	East	West
Aztec	red	white	yellow	blue
Celtic	black	white	purple or red	dun
Ceylon	yellow	blue	white	red
China	black	red or yellow	blue or green	white
Egypt	red	white	gold or green	black
India	white	black	red	blue
Japan	blue	white	green	red
Java	black	red	white	yellow
Maya	white	yellow	red	black
Navajo	black*	blue	white	yellow†
Siberia	yellow	blue	white	red
Tibet	green	yellow	white	red
Yucatan	white	red	yellow	black

* Interchangeable with yellow

† Interchangeable with black

Colors, Freemasonry. Blue, purple, scarlet, white.
Colors, Hebrew tribes.

Tribe	Color	Tribe	Color	Tribe	Color
Asher	purple	Gad	white	Naphtali	blue
Benjamin	green	Issachar	blue	Reuben	red
Dan	green	Judah	scarlet	Simeon	yellow
Ephraim	green	Manasseh	flesh	Zebulon	purple

Blue, purple, red, and white collectively are a symbol of Jehovah: blue for glory; purple for dignity and splendor; red for love and sacrifice; white for joy and supreme purity.

Colors, music. The three primary colors are related to the 1st, 3rd, and 5th intervals of which the so called first perfect chord is composed: to the vibrational power of the key of C, red is assigned; yellow vibrates to E; blue vibrates to G.

Colors, planets.

Roman Planet Name	Babylonian Planet Name	Color	Color, Early Astrologists
Saturn	Ninip	black	black*
Jupiter	Marduk	orange	purple
Mars	Nergal	red	red
Sun	Shamosh	gold	gold
Venus	Ishtar	yellow	blue †
Mercury	Nebo	blue	green
Moon	Sin	silver	silver ††

* Sometimes black with orange or yellow flecks.

 Sometimes lapis lazuli.

 Sometimes yellow.

† Sometimes lapis lazuli or turquois.

†† Sometimes white.

Colors, Roman deities. Jupiter, white; Mars, red, Venus, yellow. Ceres is given green in spring, brown in winter. Mercury carries a color determined by the changing circumstances which govern his existence.

COLORADO Flower emblem:

Colors, national. See under Flag.

Colors, Persian schools. The color schools of Persian Sufis are four in number: Gold, where they ponder on the beauty and majesty of the inner symbolism of the sun color, which is to glorify their souls; Green, where they ponder on immortality and the need of ever serving the Creator; Black, where they ponder on the mysteries of God and learn wisdom; White, where as full initiates they know the joy of God.

columbine; motto: Nil Sine Numine (Nothing Without God); nicknames: Centennial, Silver.

COLOSSEUM (COLISEUM) The great Flavian amphitheatre; greatest architectural monument left by the Romans. Said to be named from the colossal statue of Nero that stood close by it. Name applied to large amusement places.

Colossus (Colossos). A gigantic statue of Apollo set up in 280 B.C. on the shore of the harbor at Rhodes; reputed to have stood astride the entrance of the harbor. One of the seven wonders of the ancient world.

COLTSFOOT In the language of flowers: Justice shall be done. Symbolizes maternal care.

COLUMBA (COLOMBE) (1) Dove-shaped receptacle used for sacrament in medieval churches. (2) Constellation in the Southern Hemisphere also called Dove, Noah's Dove, or Columba Noae.

COLUMBIA Poetic name for the United States of America. Usually personified as a beautiful woman in white flowing garments draped with a flag.

COLUMBINE (1) A character which first appeared in Italian pantomime about 1560. She is the daughter of Pantaloon, the sweetheart of Harlequin, and like him is supposedly invisible to human eyes. Columbine is a pet name in Italian for lady-love and means dove-like. She typifies girlish innocence and inexperience; her French counterpart is Pierrette. (2) April 1 birthday flower symbolizing desertion, folly, inconstancy. Emblem of the state of Colorado. In Christian art shown with seven blooms instead of its usual five to typify the seven gifts of the Holy Spirit: counsel, fear, knowledge, piety, strength, understanding, wisdom. An attribute of both Christ and the Holy Ghost.

Purple columbine. Resolution.

Red columbine. Anxiety and trembling.

COLUMBUS, CHRISTOPHER Adventurer, discoverer of lands, explorer, navigator. His adventures frequently are used as literary incidents; his convictions, courage, fortitude, and perseverance are offered as ideals of human behavior; cities, countries, and rivers perpetuate his name.

COLUMN Life stem, phallus, steadfastness, strength, support, tree trunk, universal axis, world spine or support. Whipping post. In heraldry constancy, fortitude. Christian symbol of crucifixion and martyrdom. Emblem of saints Athanasius, Bartholomew, Simeon Stylites. Hebrew symbol of foundation, truth. In ancient Rome a column ornamented by the prow of a vessel typified victory.

Broken column. Death, destroyed works, frustrated hopes, unfinished works. In Freemasonry the fall of one of the chief supporters of the craft. In Christian belief typifies paganism conquered or shattered by Christianity.

Five columns. The five orders of Freemasonry: Corinthian typifies beauty; Doric, strength; Ionic, wisdom; Tuscan, simplicity and solidity; Composite (sometimes called Roman), coordinating the characteristics of the others.

Golden column. A member of the Templar order of Freemasons.

Horizontal column. Inertia.

Three columns. The three supports of a Masonic lodge; north has none as that is the world of the dead. The columns are: Ionic for elegance and wisdom; situated in the east, where the Ward- en Master opens and governs the lodge; represents worship. Doric for strength, situated in the west, where the Senior Warden assists; represents labor. Corinthian for peace, situated in the south, where the Junior Warden offers refreshment; represents rest.

Two columns. In Freemasonry, each surmounted by a sphere and standing one on each side of the entrance door, the celestial and terrestrial worlds. In Hebrew tradition the cloud of fire, which lighted the way out of bondage in Egypt, and the cloud of smoke, which shielded the Israelites from the sight of Pharaoh.

Vertical column. Activity, male fecundity, phallus.

COLVIN Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning black-haired friend.

COMA BERENICES Constellation in the Northern Hemisphere also known as Berenice's Hair.

COMB (1) Animal crest symbolizing the rays of the sun. Dominance, masculinity. In Icelandic kambr (crest) resolves into ak-amber, which yields great sun father. (2) Implement symbolizing rays of the sun or rain and, as either, a fertility symbol. Also typifies enticement, fingers, heartlessness, vanity, and as such an attribute of mermaids and of Venus. Compare mirror. Protection against danger, from the world-wide folktale incident in which a comb is tossed away by a fugitive pursued by an ogre. The comb grows into a forest or thicket impeding the pursued. See Magic flight. Combs are found in prehistoric graves, and probably were grave gifts to bring light to the deceased. American Indian murderers were not allowed to comb their hair for a given period lest bad luck descend on the tribe. Natchez brave who took his first scalp was not permitted to comb his hair for six months lest the soul of the dead man inflict him. Christian symbol of martyrdom. Iron combs were used as instruments of torture to tear the flesh. Emblem of saints Blaise and Hippolytus. In Greece originally a plectrum for plucking lyre-strings, hence emblematic of music. In Sarawak, if used by a wife while her husband is out collecting camphor, he will have bad luck.

COMBALUS Syrian fertility god. Incarnation of vegetation. Aware of his inevitable death and descent into the lower world he rejects the love of the earth goddess and castrates himself for the welfare of mankind. Resembles Adonis, Tammuz. See castration, mutilation.

COME AND GO An expression describing the daily movements of the sun. Come resolves into ac-ome (mighty one or sun) and go into ak-o (mighty O or sun). In popular use it means appear and disappear.

COMEDY A drama with a happy ending, typified by buskins or with the mask of a human face with a grin or expression of mirth. Personified by Thalia, the comic muse. Dream significance: the dreamer is being laughed at.

COMELINESS In an Italian icon personified by a graceful nymph in changeable silk. A cupid is embroidered on her girdle; also a Mercury rod. She holds corn-marigold and a wagtail bird.

COMET Evil omen. Believed to bring or portend war, the downfall of kings, earthquakes, end of the world, famine, plague, universal darkness. An expression used to describe the course of a brilliant career, as, "He rose like a comet." In Christian art one of the emblems of Christmas.

COMFORTER An epithet of the Holy Ghost. Name of one of the gnostic Aeons. In Hebrew tradition one who professed to comfort Job; thus a Job's comforter is one who professes to comfort an afflicted person, but does the reverse.

COMHAL See Cumhal.

COMING-OUT-PARTY Debutante ball to signify that a young woman is of marriageable age; a puberty festival.

COMITATUS In Roman and medieval history the retinue of a chieftain or prince. A band acting as companions and warriors in return for maintenance. They had important influence on later feudalism. This way of life is illustrated in the epic Beowulf.

COMIZAHUAL Honduras flying tigress. Sorceress who introduced civilization and bore three sons who were the first men and ruled the kingdom she established.

COMMANDMENT An authoritative mandate, especially a deity's commands. Buddhist commandments are five. See under five. Hebraic-Christian commandments are ten. See under ten. Roman Catholic Church commandments are six. See under six.

COMMERCE Symbolized by an airplane, automobile, beast of burden, factory, globe, machinery, money-bag, office, railroad train, ship, telephone or telegraph pole and wires, truck, typewriter, by Hermes, Mercury, or Vulcan. In an Italian icon personified by a man who points to two millstones which represent action and commerce. A stork is carried by the man, a buck is at his feet.

COMMONWEALTH Personified in an Italian icon by a woman resembling Minerva. She holds a javelin, olive branch, and shield. She wears a helmet.

COMMUNION MEAL Meal in which Christian worshipers partake of and become one with their God, receiving thereby the assurance of immortal life. Opposed to the Eleusinian Mysteries and other Greek rites in which gods and men were differentiated.

COMMUNITY SPIRIT Typified by the ant and the bee.

COMPANIONS OF AENEAS

Those who drop out of an expedition when the going becomes difficult. In the Aeneid understood to be the various lights and other phenomena which accompany the sun (Aeneas).

Companions of Odysseus.

Those who offend the gods and in consequence are drowned, slain, or otherwise destroyed while journeying homeward. In the Odyssey understood to be the various clouds, lights, and other phenomena which accompany the sun (Odysseus).

COMPASS (1) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Circinus or as Pair of Compasses. (2) Guidance, ingenuity, knowledge, measurement, order, reason, right conduct. Architecture, astronomy, geometry, masonry, science. In Freemasonry typifies circumscribed desires, restraint. One of the three great lights. See under three. In China consulted to determine a desirable location for the site of a residence or a grave. In Hebraic-Christian tradition God, "He who fixed the earth and sky and measured out the firmament."

Compass flower. Faith.

Compass and square. Skilled craftsman. God the Creator.

Two points of the compass. Life and form, spirit and matter. From these two points are produced the circle, shape of the universe, containing the ever-changing pattern of life, hence the boundary of a deity's system.

COMPASSION In an Italian icon personified by a woman holding a pelican next to her left breast. The pelican appears to be piercing herself to suckle her young with her blood. See pelican. The woman drops coins with her left hand.

COMPETITION Symbolized by a hat in a circle, ring, or tilted ellipse.

COMPLAINT TO GOD In an Italian icon personified by a woman veiled in white with a sorrowful expression looking upward toward heaven. She holds one hand to her breast, the other is being bitten by a serpent.

COMPLETION Symbolized by a circle, copestone, number 7; in printer's usage the number 30.

COMPLEXION In mythology a dark complexion is used to typify underworld deities, and exemplifies death, darkness, evil, ignorance, night, sleep. In melodrama, the villain. A light complexion typifies sky deities, and exemplifies beneficence, insight, knowledge, light, peace, prosperity, wisdom. In melodrama, the hero or heroine.

COMPULSION Symbolized by a birch rod, whip, windlass.

COMSTOCK, ANTHONY A social reformer who died in 1915. His efforts to suppress that which he classified as pornographic or sinful were so impassioned his name continues as a synonym for a strait-laced and narrow-minded Puritan.

COMSTOKE LODE One of the richest gold and silver veins ever discovered.

COMUS (KOMOS) (1) Late Roman god of drunkenness, mirth, and revelry. Presiding genius of banquets, festivities, and reckless pleasures. Portrayed as a drunken winged youth bearing a torch. His name appears to be derived from the Greek kome (village) or komos (carousal, festive ode).

(2) In Milton's masque of the same name, son of Bacchus and Circe. Deity of sensual pleasure and wicked enchanter. Disguised as a screech-owl he sucked children's blood at night and had other characteristics much like those of Ana.

CON Inca deity of the south wind. Son of Sun and Moon, father or brother of Pachacamac, who drove him to the north. Con took rain with him and left Peru arid. He had the power of running with infinite swiftness, of leveling mountains, filling up valleys, and of giving or taking away the rain. His name means I give or the giver.

CONAIRE Legendary high king of Ireland. Son of Messbuachalla. Surnamed the Great. He died because the gods compelled him to break his taboos. His reign was a golden age, blessed with peace and prosperity, until Midir's vengeance overtook him. The last heard of the god Dagda was as chief cook (giver of fertility) to Conaire, an agricultural hero.

CONALL CERNACH (CONAILL CEARNACH) Literally, victorious. In the second cycle of Irish legend son of the virgin Findchoem. He preceded Cuchulainn as the great hero of the Red Branch military order of Ulster, and he never passed a day without killing a Connaughtman or slept without one of their heads under his pillow. After Cuchulainn appeared at the court of Conchobar of Ulster, Conall and Loegaire were sometimes the companions, sometimes the rivals of Cuchulainn, and at the feast of Bricriu, the three heroes contended for the champion's portion, which Cuchulainn won. See Bricriu. Conall sucked the entire dog of MacDatho in his mouth. See MacDatho. In his old age he retired to the court of Médb, who prevailed upon him to kill her husband Ailill, king of Connaught. Conall appears to be the early morning sun, which has not the strength of the sun in his full glory, i. e. Cuchulainn. He battles the forces of darkness, Connaughtmen. Christians place him among those at the crucifixion of Christ.

CONAN (CONANN) (1) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning wisdom. (2) In Irish mythology, son of Febar. King of the Fomors. A fertility or underworld deity.

CONAN MAOL (CONAN MAEL)

In the third cycle of Irish legend a hero of the Fianna. Although one of them, he constantly rejoiced at their misfortunes. Through his bold and reckless bravery he was frequently in trouble. He descended into the infernal regions, where the arch fiend gave him a cuff. Making a vow never to take a blow without returning one, he struck back saying, "Claw for claw," the source of the expression, "Blow for Blow." He mounted Gilla Decair's horse in a desire to ride it to death. The horse carried him to the Land of Promise, where he remained until rescued by Fionn. The horse and Conan appear to be aspects of wind. In later accounts he appears as a comic character, mischief-maker, and butt, who is a bald old man, vain, irritable, and a braggart with a foul tongue, although once shamed into activity, he emerged as a true friend. He resembles the Greek Thersites.

CONCAVE SURFACE Typifies collapse, indrawing energy, reabsorption, regression.

CONCH (1) Shell used as a talisman for learning, oratory, and wealth. A mariner's charm. Also called murex. Compare spiral. In the Bank Islands blown to drive ghosts away. One of the eight glorious Buddhist emblems. Voice or preaching of Buddha. Throne of Jambhala. The yoni. In Sanscrit the name is sankha. In China called lo. Because the swirls move from left to right symbolic of a prosperous journey. Insignia of royalty. Horn with which the Greek deity Triton controlled the sea. Hindu talisman taken from Panchajana, a sea demon, by Krishna, who used it for a horn to animate the gods and annihilate unrighteousness. (2) A native of the Bahamas, the Florida Keys, or along the coast of the Carolinas; one of the lower class of whites called "poor white." So called from their alleged use of the conch as food.

CONCHEAN In early Irish legend he slew Dagda's son Aed, who had seduced his wife. For this crime Dagda made Conchean carry the corpse of Aed until he found a stone as long as the dead deity to place on the grave.

CONCHENN In Irish mythology daughter of Bodb. Loved by Cliach, a mortal. See Cliach.

CONCHITTA (CONCEPCION) Feminine name from the Spanish, alluding to the Immaculate Conception.

CONCHOBAR MAC NESSA (CONCHUBHAR) A hero of the second cycle of Gaelic legends and generally given the attributes of a sky god, although in the Book of the Dun Cow he is called a terrestrial god. Son of Nessa by virgin birth. Cathbad and Fachtna Fathach both are said to be his father. He was vassal monarch under Eochaid Airem, ruling at Emain Macha over the Red Branch Champions of Ulster, of which Cuchulainn was the greatest hero. His mother secured his throne for him. When Fergus mac Roich asked Nessa to marry him she consented provided he would resign his title of king for one year in favor of Conchobar. Fergus consented, but at the end of the year Conchobar had Fergus permanently dethroned. See Fergus, surrogate. In one version he was the father of Cuchulainn by his sister Dechtere, in another he was Cuchulainn's uncle. He was the husband of Medb; when she left him for Ailill, he took her sisters Clothru and Ethne as wives. He wished to marry his ward Deirdre, but she fled to Scotland with the sons of Usnach. Conchobar promised to forgive them, but when they returned he slew the clan of Usnach. Deirdre died of a broken heart. The great deeds of his court were attributed to his warriors (natural phenomena of the sky) rather than to himself. Among the trophies at Emain Macha was a sling ball made of the brain of Megegra, king of Leinster, slain by Conall. It had hit the forehead of Conchobar and lodged there. When the ball (sun) was removed, he died, i.e. when the sun leaves, the sky fades. Conchobar resembles Arthur.

CONCISION From the Latin, meaning to cut off. A term of reproach applied to certain Judaizing teachers at Philippi, as mere cutters of the flesh in contrast to the true circumcision.

CONCLAMATIO In ancient Rome the loud cry raised by those about the death-bed at the moment of death. It probably was intended to call back the departed spirit and was similar to the Irish keening. One 'not wailed over' meant one still alive; one 'wailed for' was one past all hope. In the Aeneid the palace resounds with wails when Dido burns herself to death.

CONCORDIA Roman abstract divinity of harmony.

CONDON Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning wise, black-haired chief.

CONDOR Inca lord of mankind; creator deity.

CONDORCANQUI, JOSE GABRIEL Inca chieftan; last of a male line. He offered no opposition to the Spanish, believing them to be light-complexioned deities or celestial gods. He was seized and beheaded in 1571. His original name was Tupac Amaru. See complexion.

CONDORCOTO Peruvian mountain on which there were five eggs from which emerged five falcons, Pariacaca, creator of all things, and his four brothers, the winds, who by magic transformed themselves into men.

CONE Fertility, mountain. A lingam or phallic symbol comparable to a pillar and tree-stem. Anciently a fire symbol. One of the mysterious forms of the universe. Compare pyramid. Occult solar emblem, symbol of fatherhood and sky, representing day, cult of life, emanation, outer activity, inner stability, a worldly or practical (family) life, evolution, discursiveness, help from without, deliverance by grace, belief in the human quality of God. Compare hemisphere. By ancient Greeks carried as a fertility and virility charm. Gnostic letter A. Word cognate with Icona.

Ornamented cone. Form under which Asherah, Baal-peor, Ishtar, Priapus, and other deities was worshipped.

Truncated cone. Broad end downward symbolizes earthbound immobility, gravitation, stability; standing on narrow end symbolizes light, mobility.

CONEY Feebleness, gregariousness, pathfinder, skepticism, suspicion, timidity, wisdom. In heraldry one who enjoys a peaceful and retired life. Occult symbol of those who trust in their own impressions and not in those of others; egotism, perversity. The name of Spain is said to have been given to it by Phoenician voyagers who, seeing its western coast overrun with animals resembling the shaphan (coney), called it Hispania or Coney Island. In Tudor, England, wat was a colloquial name for the coney, and was the source of Watling Street in London.

CONFARREATIO Ancient Roman custom of alternate drinking of wine by the bride and groom from the same vessel at the wedding ceremony.

CONFESSION BUDDHAS They number thirty-five and usually are shown without headdress. In Tibet called Tum-bsaga-kyi-sans-rgyas-so-lna.

CONFINEMENT Among primitive peoples regarded as a period of uncleanness or pollution. Birth is followed by a period of vigorous taboo; mother and child are sometimes subjected to fire or water purification to drive off dangerous spirits. Dream significance: joy, prosperity.

CONFIRMATION An ecclesiastical rite implying the confirming or strengthening of the soul of the deity. In Christian churches rite or sacrament by which baptized persons are received into full membership. The making into a militant Christian soldier.

CONFLAGRATION Like the deluge a form of world destruction. Death and rebirth. Typifies the daily death of the sun.

CONFLICTING BROTHERS See brothers, couplings, twins.

CONFUCIUS (KANG-FU-TSE, K'UNG CH'IU) Chinese deified sage, honored as wisdom incarnate and as the father of ancestor worship. Although he professed disbelief in a supernatural being he became the god of Chinese official religion. He was worshiped as the Lin (the Alone, the One God). His tomb supposedly remained suspended in space supported by the four deities of the quarters. Compare Mohamet's coffin. He was one of the three friends, the other two being Laotse and Buddha. Virtuous and wise, he was concerned with the five relationships of life, i. e. that of prince and subject, husband and wife, parent and child, brother and brother, friend and friend. He was symbolized by five sacred books: Yih King, Shu King, Shi King, Le King, Chun-tseu. The pine tree was sacred to him. (Also called Chin-sheng Sien-shi (Perfectly Holy Ancient Master)).

CONFUSION OF TONGUES A widespread mythological motif. Supposedly, people all spoke one language. In punishment for breaking a taboo, impudence or disobedience to a deity, or for some other sin, the separation of languages, which isolated people, was imposed.

CONJUGAL FELICITY Symbolized by clasped hands, a double wedding-ring, orange blossoms and fruit, a pair of fish, mandarin ducks, or turtle doves. In an Italian icon personified by a man to the right of a woman, both wearing purple. One gold chain encircles both their necks; a heart hangs as a pendant from the chain. Each supports the heart with one hand.

CONLAOCH (CONLA CONNLOCH)

In Irish mythology son of Cuchulainn and Aoife. His father left a ring for him and asked that his son seek him out when he reached seven years of age. At the marriage of Cuchulainn to Emer, the jealousy of Aoife was so great she taught her son the craft of arms so that he might avenge her slight. When she sent him to Ireland she laid three taboos on him; he was not to turn back, he was never to refuse a challenge, he was never to tell his name. Cuchulainn demanded his name, and he refused to give it, whereupon Cuchulainn challenged him to combat. Conlaoch realized his opponent was his father and flung his sword slantwise and was killed. When Cuchulainn saw the ring he knew he had killed his son. The story, a Celtic version of the tale of Rustan and Sohrab, may be interpreted as the mature sun killing the morning or immature sun, or the death of the external soul of Cuchulainn.

CONN In Irish mythology: (1) One of the tragic sons of Ler, twin brother of Fiachra. Changed into a swan by his jealous step-mother. See Ler. (2) High king of Ireland, husband of Becuma of the fair skin, father of Art and Connla. A fertility lord. Also known as the Hundred-fighter. See Becuma.

CONNECTICUT Emblem: mountain laurel; motto: Qui Transtulit Sustinet (He who transplants still sustains); nickname: Blue Law, Freestone, Land of Steady Habits, Nutmeg.

CONNLA (CONLA) In the third or Fenian cycle of Irish legend a participant in a divine-mortal marriage. He fell in love with a woman from Tir na mBeo, where death does not exist, and went off with her in a boat. His story parallels that of Lanval. See divine-mortal marriages.

Connla's well. Source of magic wisdom. Well under the sea in the Land of Promise or Youth, which was shaded by nine hazels of poetic art, which bore crimson nuts, and which flowered and bore fruit at the same time, i.e. bore beauty and wisdom. Celtic conception of the Hebrew Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. Only the divine salmon which lived in the well had the privilege of eating the nuts as they dropped into the water. Whoever ate the nuts or the salmon or drank the water would be endowed with miraculous poetic inspiration, but even the gods were forbidden to approach the well. Boann disobeyed, and as she approached it the waters rose in a rushing flood to drive her away. The waters engulfed her and she became the river Boyne. Sinend suffered a similar fate, forming the river Shannon. In all seven springs of wisdom sprang from the well. Fionn mac Coul who accidentally tasted the salmon became endowed with the hazel's wisdom. Modern name for the well is Trinity Well.

CONRAD (CON, CONNIE) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning bold and wise counsel.

CONSCIENCE In an Italian icon personified by a woman looking at a heart she is holding. She also holds a streamer on which is written OIKEIA ΞΥΝΕΞΙΣ (One's own conscience). She stands between a flowery meadow and a field of briars and thorns.

CONSECRATION Symbolized by corn of nourishment for health, wine of refreshment for plenty, oil of joy for peace.

CONSONANTS By reason of their mobility and their substantial sounds creating the body of words represent mobile material, substance, energy; also by reason of their comparative passiveness, correspond to the female.

CONSTABLE An officer whose duty is to maintain peace. From the Latin comes stabuli (count of the stable), a title applied in the middle ages to the chief groom, later to the chief official in the army, palace, etc.

CONSTANCY Symbolized by a blue garnet, diamond, flaming heart, ring. In China typified by a mountain. In an Italian icon personified by a woman embracing a pillar with her right hand and holding a sword in her left over a fire on an altar. Neither fire nor sword terrify courage armed by constancy.

CONSTANTINE Masculine name from the Latin, meaning constant, steadfast. In feminine form Constance (Connie, Constantia).

Constantine the Great. Roman conqueror who became sole emperor of the West in 312. According to legend a cross bearing the words "In hoc signo vinces" (By this sign thou shalt conquer) appeared to him in the sky, and he adopted Christianity. He continued his conquests and in 323 became sole emperor of the Roman world. In 330 he moved his capital to Byzantium, renaming it Constantinople after himself.

CONSTELLATION Abode of heroes who rule the sky and influence the course of human destinies. Sun's resting place. In China the sphere was divided into twenty-eight constellations, or mansions for both the sun and moon in their revolutions around the earth.

CONSUELO Feminine name from the Spanish, signifying consolation, Our Lady of Consolation.

CONSUS Early Italian god of the earth, of good counsel, secret deliberation, of stored harvests, and of the underworld. Horse and chariot races were held in the Circus Maximus on his festival the Consulia, celebrated August 18.

CONTENTMENT In an Italian icon personified by a pompously dressed youth wearing a sword at his side. On his hat are plumes, he is jeweled. In one hand he carries a looking glass, in the other a silver basin filled with jewels and money.

Contentment in poverty. Symbolized by a swallow.

CONTICI Inca thunder vase.

CONTINH Anamese malevolent spirits of maidens who died prematurely. They attack and rob wayfarers at night and drive them mad.

CONTRADANCE Dance symbolizing sexual attraction, exemplified by approach, separation, uniting.

CONVECTOR Roman deity of grainaries or grain gatherers.

CONVERSATION In an Italian icon personified by a smiling young man dressed in green, a laurel wreath on his head. He carries a mercury rod, twisted about with myrtle and pomegranate and ending in a human tongue at the top. A scroll reads: "Vae Soli" (Woe to him that is alone). The myrtle and the pomegranate show mutual amity.

CONVERSION In an Italian icon personified by a mature woman holding a green ribbon on which is written, "In Te Domine Speravi." Beautiful clothes are on the ground, she looks up to heaven from which rays come down. Tears flow from her eyes, her hands are crossed. A gasping hydra is at her feet.

CONVEX SURFACE Expresses expansion, fullness, growth, progression, radiation of energy from within.

CONVEYANCES Symbolic of doctors. Ancient quacks peramulated on the back of a cow, living on her milk as they went along. Early English and United States' doctors visited on horseback. In United States for many years doctors used a four-wheeled phaeton, later a two-wheeler. In modern times they use the automobile.

CONVOLVULUS Extinguished hope, humility, uncertainty.

Great convolvulus. Despondency.

Minor convolvulus. Darkness, night.

Pink convolvulus. Worth sustained by affection.

COOKING SPIT OF FIANCHUIVE

In Irish legend magic spit on the Island of Fianchuive, located at the bottom of the sea. Demanded by Lugh as a blood fine for the murder of his father from the sons of Tuirenn. Underworld provider of fertility. Probably the same spit made by Goibniu at Tara and used by Dagda and Morrigan.

COOT In some sections symbolizes beauty, courtliness, understanding, wisdom, from its manner of living in water among rocks in the sea and living on fish without stirring; in other sections the bird's manner of life typifies a common or stupid fellow, a thing of small value, hence a poor coot.

COP Saxon word for top, meaning mountain or summit. In popular usage applied to a policeman, also to one who pilfers. Cognate with kopje, Dutch for hill, which resolves into ak-opje, i.e. great eye ever-existent (sun).

COPE Ecclesiastical vestment representing the arch of the sky and as such signifying dignity, innocence, purity.

COPESTONE Contemplation.

COPHETUA One who marries far beneath his own station. From an African king who marries Penelophon, a slave, in Percy's Reliques.

COPPER As the color of autumn symbolizes decay and fruition. American Indians used copper beads as a medium of exchange, hence money. Among the Incas it was the metal of the common people. In Greek and Roman tradition the metal representing the third age of man and associated with Aphrodite (Venus). See ages of man under age. In India worn as a charm against cholera.

Copper flageolet. Buddhist ritual object.

Copper's nark. Informer, spy for the police (copper).

COPPERHEAD In United States history a Northerner sympathizing with the Confederates; so called by Unionists during the Civil War because they were looked upon as attacking the Union in the rear without warning, alluding to the manner in which the snake attacks. A term of reproach applied by early colonists to the Indians and later to the Dutch.

COPULATION Among Finno-Ugrics avoided during bear hunts and fishing expeditions as causing ill-luck. Most peoples have certain festivals or periods in which copulation is regarded dangerous or sinful.

COQUETRY Symbolized by a fan.

CORA (CORINNA, CORINNE, KORA, KORE) (1) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning maiden, and from the Irish meaning care. It equates with cor, French for horn; core, center of the universe; coeur, French for heart; cur, dog. (2) A name by which Persephone was called affectionately. Cora figures in British harvest ceremonies under the name Cornaby, Kirnababy, or the Maiden. A Peruvian maize goddess is called Mama Cora.

CORAL In the language of gems: Your heart is your choicest jewel. Symbolizes attachment and peril at sea; as an autumn shade, decay and fruition. Dream significance: recovery from illness. Supposedly turns pale when a loved one is about to die. Amulet against disasters of nature, disease, fire, ill-fortune, jealous friends, sorcery, and believed to have the power to make a girl beautiful. If carved into a serpent protects against physical handicaps and poisonous bites. In China called shang-hu; emblem of longevity and promotion. In Egyptian antiquity scattered over fields under cultivation to fertilize the land and protect crops from insects and storms. A Gaulish talisman of warriors. In Greek legend formed from the blood of the Medusa head on marine vegetation. Japanese symbol of rarity. In India a talisman to protect the dead from evil spirits. In Italy a protection against the evil eye. In Russia new born babies are provided with coral amulets.

CORANIANS British dwarfs or mischievous fairies who could hear every whisper; they plagued the people of Lludd at Beltane.

CORCECA In Spenser's Faerie Queene a blind old woman, mother of Abessa (Superstition), typifying blindness of heart. Often regarded as a personification of Romanism.

CORCHORUS Symbolizes impatience of absence. In the language of flowers: Return quickly.

CORCORAN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning ruddy.

CORD Security, union; also binding, bondage, despair, force, persuasion. Equates with the beanstalk and chain as a ladder to heaven. A cord cut from a hanged man carried as a good luck talisman. A knotted cord, magic words being repeated as each knot is tied, is used as a charm against the evil eye. In Freemasonry one of the working tools of a past master, symbolizing moral rectitude. The cord which Dante gives to Virgil, who throws it into the pit of the Eighth Circle of the Inferno, stands for something upon which Dante at one time had placed false hopes but, at the command of reason, discards. By Christians worn around the waist in allusion to the rope which bound Christ. Symbolizes chastity, self-restraint, temperance. The Incas used a quipus (knotted cord) as a memory helper. The Yucatan Indians drew a barbed cord through the tongue as penance.

CORDELIA (CORDEILLA, CORDELIE, CORDULA) (1) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning intelligence, warm-heart. (2) Mortal form of the Brythonic goddess Creudylad. In early legends daughter of Lludd, in later legends daughter of Llyr. Spring maid, borrowed by Shakespeare, who placed her as the youngest daughter of King Lear. For her truthfulness she was disinherited by her father. When she came to the rescue of her father, who had been driven mad by her sisters, she was imprisoned by them. The expression Cordelia's gift, alludes to a voice gentle and low, but firm with truthfulness.

CORDON A cord or ribbon worn as a badge, especially of an order of chivalry. When a line of sentries enclosing a military position symbolizes imprisonment, protection.

Cordon bleu. Blue ribbon of the order of the Holy Ghost, highest order of old French monarchy, thus a person regarded as entitled to a badge of eminent distinction. Facetiously applied as a title to a first class cook. The Blue (Bleu) Ribbon Army is one of teetotalers.

CORDONAZO Violent autumn storm along the west coast of Mexico. The full name is cordonazo de San Francisco, i.e. a lashing with the rope girdle of Saint Francis.

COREOPSIS December 15 birthday flower symbolizing cheerfulness.

Coreopsis of Arkansas. Love at first sight.

CORIANDEUR December 12 birthday flower symbolizing concealed merit, hidden worth.

CORINEUS Gaelic giant killer. Slayer of the giants of Cornwall, including Goemagot, the most powerful of all. A sun or fertility hero. Parallels Siegfried.

CORINTHIAN A libertine, alluding to the men of Corinth, a city noted in antiquity for its immorality, luxury, and licentiousness. The name is applied also to a gentleman sportsman, one who rides his own horses on the turf or sails his own yacht.

Corinthian column. Elegance, luxury.

CORMAC CONLINGAS In Irish mythology son of Conchobar, whom he deserted after the treacherous murder of the sons of Ushna. He was killed in Connaught by the harper Cravetheen, whose wife he had estranged. A light or fertility hero.

CORMAC MAC ART (CORMAC MAC AIRT) In the third cycle of Irish legend king of Ireland. Grandson of Conn, son of Art, father of Grainne. Called the Gaelic Solomon, the Great, the Magnificent. He appointed Finn mac Coul chief of the Fianna Eirinn (Fenians), and during his reign the Fenians talked, walked, and intermarried with the ancient gods, and performed marvels that made them famous. Cormac himself visited the Land of Promise, where only truth was spoken. Ler, god of the sea, gave him a magic branch which bore golden apples, and when it was shaken, it made music so sweet, the sick forgot their pains and fell into a deep sleep. After the death of Cormac this branch was returned to the gods. In one account his death was caused by the druid Maelcen when he attempted to put down druidism in Ireland. Maelcen sent an evil spirit to place a salmon bone crossways in his throat. An agricultural or fertility lord. Some scholars believed he was a deified historical person who ruled in Tara for forty years in the 3rd century B.C. during a prosperous time.

Cormac's cup. Cup given to Cormac mac Art by Ler or Mannannan. If three lies were said over it, it broke in three; three truths restored the cup. Cormac used it to distinguish falsehood from truth; probably exemplifying that wine releases the truth from a tongue.

CORMORAN In nursery tale the Cornish giant who fell into the pit which Jack the Giant-killer had dug.

CORMORANT Greed.

CORN September 21 birthday plant; portends a quarrel. Symbol of abundance, harvest. Universally worshiped as the staff of life. Emblem of agriculture and of autumn. The last sheaf harvested is retained and hung on rafters in the belief that it contains the corn spirit. Corn is cognate with Cernunos and is the same word as the French corne (horn). Cornish for corn was iz or izik, i. e. light. Emblem of Ceres and Demeter. In Pawnee Hako ceremony represents the supernatural powers which reside in h'Uraru (earth). Called h'Atira (mother of breathing life). In the United States emblem of Thanksgiving Day.

Corn-baby. Star image of the corn spirit adorned with flowers and ears of corn. Carried by reapers as a fertility charm. Same as kernababy.

Corn blossom. Riches.

Cornbottle. Delicacy.

Corn-cockle. Peerless, proud.

Corn ears. Emblem of the sacrifice of Christ.

Corn flower. Delicacy; refinement. Dweller in heavenly spaces. Flower governing Libra.

Cornmeal. Fertility, growth. American Indians scattered black cornmeal to darken the road of the dead so they would not be able to find their way back.

Corn mill. Revolving heavens. See World-mill.

Corn and sickle. Emblem of the corn god, who dies yearly before the sickle for the benefit of mankind. See mutilation.

CORNA A magic word used to turn aside the curse of an evil eye.

CORNALINE In the language of flowers: You are formed to guide.

CORN-CRACKER STATE Kentucky, alluding to the corn-cracker birds. 'Poor Whites' of the South are called crackers or corn-crackers.

CORNE French for horn. The cornucopia or horn of salvation. Responsible for such names as Cornwall (Cornouaille) and Saint Cornely in Brittany. The worship of Saint Cornely replaced the worship of the ox.

CORNEL In the language of flowers: May success crown you.

CORNELIA (CON, CONNIE)

(1) Feminine name from the Latin, corresponding to the masculine Cornelius, meaning horn.

(2) A woman idolized by the Roman people. Wife of Titus Sempronius Gracchus, mother of Caius and Tiberius. According to legend a woman from Campania called on her one day and displayed her jewels, asking Cornelia to display hers. Cornelia sent for her two sons and said, "These are my jewels," hence the expression Cornelia's jewels.

CORNEMUSE The bagpipe, a form of the pipes of Pan.

CORNERSTONE Figuratively something fundamental, of primary importance. The ceremonies connected with the laying of a corner stone survive from the ancient belief that the dead are guardians. Sacrificed humans were buried under foundations, later animals were placed there; in recent times the custom has been to place coins and documents in foundation stones. Among gnostics the corner stone symbolizes Christ.

CORNHUSKER STATE Nebraska.

CORNUCOPIA A fabulous horn filled with flowers and fruits, symbol of peace and prosperity. Disposer of riches, provider of increase. In Freemasonry jewel of the Steward. Its marvelous powers are identical with those of the caldrons of Bran and Cerridwen, Dionysiac horn, the Grail, Round Table, Table of the Ethiopians, and other providers of plenty. In Greek mythology, when Amalthea died, Zeus honored her by making one of her horns a wonder. Whoever had it might immediately have anything he wished to eat or drink. Emblem of Tyche. Roman emblem of Fortuna.

Empty cornucopia. Sign of poverty.

CORONA AUSTRALIS (AUSTRINA)
Constellation in the Southern

Sky also known as Southern Crown.

CORONA BOREALIS Constellation in the Northern Sky also called Northern Crown. In Arabian mythology known as Al Fak-hah, the dish; in Australian as Woomera, the boomerang; in Brythonic as Caer Arianrhod, a-bode of lost souls, a purgatory; in Celtic, Caer Sidi, castle of souls of dead kings; in Christian, Crown of Thorns; in early Greek, the Wreath; in later Greek, Crown of Ariadne; in North American Indian, cave into which the Great Bear went in his flight from the world; in Shawnee Indian, twelve dancing maidens, one of whom was the wife of Arcturus or White Hawk.

CORONAL Carries the same symbolism as crown, halo, and wreath, which see. The symbolism of and some deities denoted by coronals are:

Coronal of	Connotation acorns	earth
cypress	death, Thanatos
ebony	Pluto
elm and grapevine leaves	benevolence
fennel	Faunus
figs	Melpomene, Pan
flowers	Flora, spring
flowers and fruit	Pomona, riches and fertility flowers and jewels	Virgin Mary grapes	bacchante, Bacchus, Dionysus, September, Vertumnus
grapevine leaves	Bona Dea
" leaves and ivy	Bacchus, Dionysus iron	tyranny
ivy	Bacchus, Dionysus, Thalia
ivy and laurel	poetry
ivy, mulberry, and olive	Mercury

Coronal of laurel	Connotation
	Apollo, Calliope, Clio, Hygeia, Melpomene, peace, providence, triumphal honors, victory lilies	Juno, virgin saints
myrtle	minor or bloodless victories, Rome
myrtle and roses	Erato
oak leaves	defender of cities, Hecate, Jupiter, Zeus, and other sky deities.
olive	Athene, Zeus
palm	Muses
pearls	Polymnia
pine twigs	Cybele, Pan
poplar leaves	Faunus, Heracles
poppies	Morpheus, night
quince blossoms and leaves	Juno rays	Apollo, Aurora, God the Father
roses	Asia, love, virtue roses, red and white	virginity, Virgin Mary rushes	river gods, winter
stars	astronomy, justice, Thor, Urania, Virgin Mary sweet majoram and roses	Hymen thorns	Christ, St. Louis, faith, penitence waterlilies and rushes	Faunus, Undine, water-nymph
wheat ears	abundance, agriculture, peace, Demeter, Vertumnus wool and narcissi interwoven	Three Fates

CORONELLA December 10 birthday flower with the sentiment:
 You will succeed.

CORONIS (KORONIS) Greek nymph loved by Apollo, and by him the mother of Asclepius. In one version the child was born unknown to her father Phlegyas, and to escape his wrath she exposed the infant on Mount Titthion (Nipple), where he was suckled by a goat and guarded by a dog until rescued by the goatherd Aresthanas. In a more popular version Coronis was unfaithful to Apollo with a Thessalian youth named Ischys (strength). A crow brought Apollo news of her infidelity, whereupon Apollo killed her and, while she lay on a flaming bier, tore his infant son Asclepius from her and gave the child to Chiron to raise. This story reflects the countless instances in which the sun is faithless to his love or she faithless to him, i.e. they meet as lovers for a moment at break of day and then separate. Asclepius is born at the moment of his mother's flaming death inasmuch as dawn cannot survive the birth of the infant sun. The name Coronis, which means sea gull as well as dawn, is related to crow. The bird which spied on her was the constellation Corvus.

CORPORAL, THE LITTLE
 Nickname applied to Napoleon Bonaparte after the battle of Lodi in 1796. Used facetiously to describe a tyrant of small size or an ineffectual pompous leader who regards himself over-seriously. Also Little King.

CORPOSANT Another name for Saint Elmo's fire, which see. Word derived from corpo santo, Spanish for holy body. Also called comazant.

CORPRE Irish poet of the gods; inventor of satire in Ireland. Satire supposedly placed a curse on the person to whom it was addressed.

CORPSE Demon or ghost abode. Among ancestor worshipers a malevolent corpse goes about at night spreading epidemics and otherwise injuring the living. However they are powerless when day breaks. A corpse suspected of being dangerous is burned or cut in pieces. A corpse is watched to prevent it from taking along the souls of the living to the kingdom of the dead.

Corpse bleeding. The wound of a murdered person supposedly will open and bleed at the approach of the murderer.

CORPUS CHRISTI Roman Catholic festival in honor of the Eucharist or Lord's Supper, celebrated on the first Thursday after Trinity Sunday. Dedicated to the body of Christ in the form of the Host. Religious dramas were performed by trade guilds of the middle ages on this holiday.

CORRECTION In an Italian icon personified by an old woman sitting. In one hand she holds a whip, in the other a pen with which she corrects a book.

CORRELATIVE DEITIES A universal motif in folklore is the birth of twins. The twins may be in harmony, twin deities of light, beneficent to mankind, building cities, teachings the art of agriculture or the yoking of oxen; they may be antagonistic to one another, one a deity of light, friendly to man, the other a deity of darkness, bringer of death and in other ways unfriendly to man. They may represent dawn and gloaming, day and night, drought and rain, sun in fertile and scorching aspects, sun and moon, winter and summer. Some examples are: (Greek) Apollo and Artemis, Eros and Anteros, Heracles and Iphicles, Theseus and Perithous; (Hebrew) Cain and Abel, Jacob and Esau; (Hindu) Rama and Luxman, Varuna and Mithra; (Icelandic) Grettir and Illuga; (Ottawa Indian) Iskehî and Tawiseara.

CORRIGAN In the folklore of Brittany a female fairy. The corrigans are said to have been ancient druidesses. They are malicious toward Christian priests, kidnap pretty human children, substitute changelings.

CORSAIR A pirate or privateer, especially a Saracen or Turkish robber authorized to harry Christian commerce. From the Latin cursus, meaning to chase or to run.

CORTEZ Spanish conqueror whose greed brought about the downfall of Mexico and Spain. In Mexico he was accepted as the man of destiny, whose rule over Mexico had been prophesied. Because of his white skin, the color of daybreak, he was accepted as the reincarnated Quetzalcoatl, and when he demanded the gold, revered as sacred to the god, it was turned over to him. He subjugated the Aztecs and other Indians before they realized that the representatives of the king of Spain were enemies and not the resurrected Quetzalcoatl and his retinue. The gold, which made the great armaments of Spain possible, led to that country's downfall.

CORUNDUM In the language of gems: Mind alone is valuable.

CORUS (CAURUS) Roman god of the northwest wind. A storm deity.

CORVUS Constellation in the Southern Sky also called the Crow. A storm bird. Coronaeus, daughter of the king of Phocis, was transformed into the Crow and placed in the heavens by Athena to save her from the pursuit of Poseidon. Apollo sent the Crow to watch Coronis, whom he loved and who loved Ischys. In Chinese lore it is the Crossbar or Threshold over which the chariot of the year must pass before entering the new year.

CORYBANTES In ancient Phrygia attendants or priests of Cybele, whose rites were celebrated with loud, wild music and orgiastic dances. The term is applied to those who indulge in revels wild with excitement, in orgiastic dancing; a lunatic. Compare Curetes.

CORYDON A conventional name in pastoral poetry for a brainless love-sick youth, a rustic or shepherd.

CORYPHEUS Leader of the chorus in ancient Greek drama; hence leader of any chorus, a leader.

Coryphee. A ballerina. In American colloquial usage a chorus girl.

COS In Greek mythology island on which Poseidon destroyed Polybotes; thus a place where a giant or powerful figure is destroyed.

COSETTE Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning pet lamb.

COSMO Masculine name from the Greek through the Italian, meaning adornment, order.

COSMOGRAPHY In an Italian icon personified by a mature woman in a sky-colored tunic studded with stars under which is an earth-colored skirt. She stands between two globes, the celestial on her right, the terrestrial on her left. She carries an astrolabe and a Roman radius.

COSMOS The universe as a manifestation of law and order; the opposite of Chaos. The All, Supernal Mother. That which is doomed to undergo a catastrophe, deluge or fire, storms or winter, the results of which will not be final destruction, but new birth, revivification. The term microcosm, small cosmos, is applied to the human individual in contrast to the macrocosm, large world.

Cosmic currents. Controlled by the dead for the benefit of the living.

Cosmic Tree. Tree which provides ambrosia, inspiration, wisdom, or supports the earth, skies, or universe. Also called World Tree. In Hebrew lore, the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil or Tree of Life; in India, the Soma; in Norse mythology, the Yggdrasil; in Zoroastrianism, the Homa.

COTHURNUS A high boot or buskin worn by ancient Greek and Roman tragic actors, thus a symbol of tragedy. Originally worn by noblemen to distinguish them from peasants, and as such a symbol of lofty behavior. See Sacred king under King.

COTOPAXI Sacred volcano in Ecuador. Name yields Great Hot Eye or Great Fire.

COTTAGE A happy, rural, simple life.

COTTONWOOD LOG According to Kiowa legend the human race first emerged from a hollow cottonwood log; when a pregnant woman tried to come through she was held fast. This accounts for the small number of the tribe.

COTTUS (COTTYS) Literally, volcano. In Greek mythology one of the Hecatoncheires, three giants personifying the violent forces of nature. They each had fifty heads and a hundred hands. In the Titanic War they fought on the side of Zeus.

COTYTTO (COTYS) Greek great-mother of Thracian origin. Her nocturnal festival, the Cotyttia, celebrated with licentious and mystic rites in Athens and Corinth, was much like those of Cybele and Demeter. Orgiastic dances were performed and, in Cotytt's honor, young men castrated themselves. Her mystagogues were called Baptes or Baptists. Whether the devotees were baptized (washed) before the orgies or whether they engaged in ritual dipping (dyeing) of clothes or hair has not been determined.

COUATLICUE Mayan earth mother, goddess of death and of war. Mother of Mexico's great war god. Worshiped by flower dealers.

COUPLINGS See Brothers, Correlative Deities, Twins.

COURAGE Typified by an armed woman, the jasper, a lion, mastiff, nettle, poplar, red badge, turquoise, warrior. In Japan symbolized by praying mantis.

COURT CARDS In tarot divination the royal cards of the four suits: king, queen, knave, page. When a majority appear in a deal the significance is the meeting of many persons, society gatherings.

COURTESAN Represented by the yellow crocus.

COURTESY In an Italian icon personified by an old man holding a cap and bowing in a humble manner. He leads a lion and a tiger, which he has tied together to show that courtesy has the power to tame.

COVENTRY Black-listing, exclusion, place of exile. To send to Coventry is to banish from social intercourse. Its citizens had such a dislike for soldiers any woman seen speaking to one was ostracized; hence to send a soldier to Coventry was to cut him off from society.

COW Abundance, dairy products, gentility, innocence, productivity; also clumsiness, stupidity. Animal governing Scorpio. Chaos, Mother-of-all-things. Frequently a bull is the form of a terrestrial being who detains the rain and is in contest with the sun deity; whereas a bossy is a giver of rain. Dream significance: (fat) abundance; (lean) famine. Sacred to Athena, Brigit, Hathor, Hera, Isis, Nephthys, Nut, Taurt, Saint Perpetua, and Thoth. In the Chinese New Year festival symbolic of the passing year, the calf symbolizing the coming year. In Egyptian mythology the sky, its four legs representing the four supporting pillars of the universe or the quarters of the earth. At evening the sun entered the mouth of the cow and in the morning was reborn from her womb. Thus by mouth-conception the sun begot himself and was called the bull of the mother, i.e. his own father. Also identified as the dawn, Egyptians decorating the horns of a sacred cow with gloves to represent the digits of dawn's rosy fingers. Typified sexual desire. The skull of a cow was nailed over the entrance of a temple to ward off evil spirits. In India the sacred cow is worshiped as the cloud whose milk refreshes earth. A form of Aditi and of Ila. In various legends the gods fight the demons for control of cows (rain clouds). In Iran the form of the storm god who gives rain. In Japan typifies gratitude. In Norse mythology Audhumla.

Cow and calf. Mother and child.

Cowherd. (1) In early Britain and Egypt scorned as ignorant and inferior. Source of the word coward, which means a man who shows or turns his tail. A respected class in classical Greek life. (2) In Chinese mythology Chi'en Niu, which see. Also called Herdsman.

Cowhide. In nuptial ceremonies a symbol of abundance. Used during pregnancy as an augury of happy birth.

Cow horns. Prophecy, wisdom. Moon or sun emblem.

Cow Milking. In Aryan mythology usually interpreted to be rain; sometimes said to be the shining of the sun.

Cow reins. Anciently sacrificed at funerals; given as a viaticum to the dead to contribute toward resurrection.

White cow. A form of Io.

COWRIE (COWRY) Shell used as money in Africa and parts of Asia. In Japan a symbol of wealth. In Melanesian mythology the first woman sprang from a cowrie shell. Compare Aphrodite. CR Christus Redemptor.

COWSLIP September 22 birthday flower symbolizing comeliness, pensiveness, rusticity, winning grace. In the language of flowers: You are my divinity.

COXCOMB (1) December 14 birthday flower symbolizing singularity. (2) A cloth notched like a cock's comb, formerly part of a jester's cap; also the cap itself; thus a fool's cap. (3) See under cock.

COXCOX Supreme deity, great ancestor of Mexicans. Name resolves into ack-ock-se ack-ock-se, i. e. great-great-light great-great-light. Also known as Tezpi.

COYOLXAUHQUI Aztec moon goddess. Sister of Huitzilopochtli.

COYOTE Demiurge of Indians of the Northwest. Creator and mischief-maker, opener of the way, he scratches away the soil and releases the primeval race from an underground city, teaches men how to fish and hunt, and then brings them death. Hero, trickster, and dupe by turns, he appears as bestial, contemptible, cowardly, crafty, deceitful, greedy, small, ungrateful, nevertheless a mighty magician who brings order into the world. His counterpart is the dog, hare, rabbit, or wolf. In Wintun legend he is Sedit, the tempter, and many of his characteristics resemble those of the Devil in medieval lore.

COZENING In an Italian icon personified by a young woman in a changeable colored garment on which there is a design of several sorts of masks and tongues. She has one wooden leg and holds a wisp of lighted straw.

CRAB Agressiveness, chaos, irresolution, obesity, peevishness. Dream significance: disunion, separation. Animal carrying the sun through the fourth sign of the zodiac, Cancer, and opening the gate of summer. In Japan longevity. In legend Heike warriors, when defeated by the Minamoto (Genji) jumped into the sea and were turned into crabs, their faces impressed on the backs of the shells.

Dried crab. In Japan hung over doorways to drive away evil spirits and insure happiness and prosperity.

CRABAPPLE BLOSSOM Irritability. In China feminine beauty.

Crabapple tree. In China perpetual peace.

CRACKER BARREL In United States free debate, gossip, yarn spinning, alluding to country-store comradery. Called liar's barrel.

Cracker State. Georgia. Poor whites are called crackers.

CRADLE Primary existence, protection, rebirth, shelter. Its symbolism parallels that of ark and cist, which see. Dream significance: Hope realized.

Cradle rocking. Human life with its ups and downs.

CRANBERRY September 11 birthday flower. Signifies hardiness. Charm for the cure of headaches.

CRANDALL Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the crane's dell or valley.

CRANE Chatterer, high-flyer, inquisitiveness, longevity, prudence, purity, vigilance. Haughty and imposing in appearance, among themselves amiable and sociable, but suspicious and wary of others, cranes correspond to persons in fashionable society who are distant to those outside their set, vying within their set in display and presumptuousness, and scornful of underlings to whom they express themselves loudly and vehemently. Bird of augury and alphabet, from whose V formation the angular form of letters was taken. Typifies morning because, standing in water, it is the first to welcome Dawn as she rises. Messenger of fertility-bringing rain. Sacred to Arawn, Artemis, Athena, Fuku-roku-ju, Hermes, Kwannon, Manannan, Perseus, Thoth. Buddhist symbol of winter. In China called hsien ho and after the phoenix the most celebrated bird. Aerial steed of the Immortals, guide of the deceased, and displayed at funeral processions. The black crane, which lives the longest, supposedly attains an age of 1,000 years. In art associated with the cypress and pine to symbolize longevity. Christian symbol of good life and works, loyalty, monastic life. In Indonesian mythology born from a rock washed by the primordial sea. Advised by Lumimu-ut, goddess born from the sweat of the rock, where to find land. In Japan called tsuru, a royal bird, the spirit of Prince Yamato-dake, honored for his loyalty and valor. In art associated with the chrysanthemum and pine.

Crane-dance. Traditionally the crane takes nine steps before taking off the ground; sacred crane dances consisted of nine steps and a leap. Dance which Theseus and his companions performed on landing at Delos after killing the Minotaur. Its complicated movements imitate the windings of the labyrinth, hence a dance to the sun.

Crane's bill. Flower symbolizing envy.

CRAPE Mourning, recent death.

CRASSUS, MARCUS LICINIUS

With Caesar and Pompey triumvir of Rome. Surnamed Dives (the rich). Dante refers to his greed and wealth.

CRATER Constellation in the Southern Sky also called the Cup. Symbolizes the vault of heaven, wherein clouds, rain, and winds are mixed. Said to be the cup of Dionysus. A word cognate with actor and creator.

CRATOS Literally, power. In Greek mythology offspring of the Titan Pallas and the river goddess Styx. He aided Zeus when the sky god rebelled against Cronus.

CRAWFORD Masculine name from Old English, meaning the crow's ford.

CRAZY Epithet applied to Christ, Dionysus, Heracles, and other deities. In sun myths applied to the sun in its scorching aspect. Crazy resolves into ac-era-zy, and yields great Era's (Hera's) fire; era signifies a period of time. Compare fool.

CREATION In most creation myths night is parent of day, out of darkness and death comes life; water is parent of earth, when primordial waters become troubled or stir earth forms or life begins; thus out of confusion comes order. Various elements out of which man has been created or which had an active part in his creation are: clay, coyote, dog, Devil, earth, golden egg, hand of a deity, spirit of a deity upon land or water, stone, tree. The Babylonian creation legend is based on the triumph of the vernal sun and spring equinox. In Hebraic-Christian tradition creation took six days, the seventh day which completes the week, was designated the Sabbath and set aside for worship. As described by Dante in the Inferno land and sea were not separated at the time of creation. After Satan fell all land shrank away from the surface of the side at which he descended. This left a vast empty bed which was filled by the sea. The ground which he traversed in fleeing apparently formed the island of Purgatory.

Creative heat. Symbolized by the bull and the ram.

Creative Word. According to mystics composed of three syllables, the first of which signifies light, the second rhythmic motion, the third color.

Creator. God, Supreme Being; one who has the power to originate. Word cognate with author and crater.

CREDIT In an Italian icon personified by a man in a senator's gown with a gold chain about his neck. He holds a merchant's book of accounts, which has embossed on the cover, "Solutus Omni Foenore" (Free from all interest). A griffin is on the ground.

CREDNE (CREIDNE) In Irish mythology one of the Tuatha De Danann. Divine bronze worker who, with the aid of Goibniu and Luchtaine, forged the weapons which conquered the Fomors and provided all rivets for the hilts and lances of the swords used in the war against the Fomors. He assisted Diancecht in making a silver arm and hand for Nuada. Celestial smith who forged implements (light) for producing fertility. Resembles Hephaestus, Vulcan.

CREEPER December 9 birthday flower with the sentiment protection. Probably the Virginia creeper is intended.

Creeping cereus. Horror.

CREIRWY In Celtic mythology daughter of Tegid Voel and Ceridwen. The most beautiful girl in the world, sister of Avagddu, the ugliest boy. Spirit of growth.

CREMATION A world-wide religious rite. Performed to destroy the body of witches, to free it of animal spirits or ghost and enable it to enter the society of souls, to carry the spirit to heavenly abodes, to keep the bones from coming back to life, or to protect the body against molestation by enemies. The burning symbolized sacrifice by fire and, as such, probably a carry-over from ancient human immolation practices. It was a sham sacrifice of the sun-hero to provide immortality through resurrection,

i. e. the sun dies a burning death in order that it may rise again the next day. In ancient Britain, central Europe, and Sweden, it was a mark of noble birth. In India the Agni cult preferred cremation, the Varuna cult burial in the ground.

CREON In Greek legend brother of Laius, king of Thebes, and husband of Eurydice. Creon seized the throne when Laius was slain. His son was devoured by the Sphinx and Creon issued a proclamation that whoever succeeded in solving the riddle of the Sphinx would be awarded the hand of Laius's widow Jocasta and the throne of Thebes. Oedipus solved the riddle and became king. After the abdication of Oedipus, his two sons Eteocles and Polynices, killed each other in a battle for the throne, and Creon once more assumed the rank of king. He forbade anyone to bury Polynices. Antigone, daughter of Oedipus, disregarded his order, and was entombed alive. Creon's son Hæmon, betrothed to Antigone, committed suicide by hanging, and Eurydice killed herself. Creon represents the powers of darkness; he usurped the throne of light powers and entombed Antigone, the gloaming. See Oedipus.

CRESCENT The new and old moon; hence birth and death. Boat of the slumbering. The letter C. The female principle. Emblem of the virgin goddess, of moon deities, of the Celestial twins, and of prophetic powers. Animal horns were used in later symbolism. In heraldry one honored by the sovereign or hope of greater glory. Compare horn, moon. American Indians used to mark time, as a crescent with three marks represented the third month. Christian land of heaven. Badge of the city of Constantinople. Symbolic of growth in body, mind, and spirit; social usefulness. In Egyptian mythology typifies the pure soul. In Japan denotes air. Worn by Roman women on shoes as a talisman to prevent lunacy and safeguard them from witchcraft. Probable source of horseshoe symbol.

Crescent and star. Typifies Virgin Mary. Emblem of Mohammed, Mohammedanism, and the national emblem of Turkey; hence the power of Turkey and the Mohammedan religion.

Crescent and stars. In Hebraic-Christian tradition the Heavenly Host marshalled by the God of Light. The geese or oxen which never sleep and which at the command of the Holy One stand untiring in their watches. The stars wait upon the moon as a reward for the light she gives during the hours of darkness.

CRESS September 24 birthday flower symbolizing power, stability. Also symbolic of a small thing, hence the expression, Not worth a kerse (old spelling, which has led to the expression, Not worth a curse).

CRESSET Typifies a meteor; emblematic of Ceres. Cresset is from the same root as cross, and resolves into ac-ur-es-et, which yields great fire, essence of light.

CRESSIDA (CRESSID, CRISEYDE)

A character developed in medieval redactions of the stories of Briseis and Chryseis as they appeared in Homer's Iliad. Cressida, daughter of the Trojan priest Calchas, and Troilus vow eternal fidelity, but when Cressida is given as a prisoner of war to the Greek Diomedes, although Troilus swears to rescue her, she soon sees that Troy will lose the war and gives all her affection to Diomedes. Thus her name has become a by-word for infidelity, one who places her welfare above love.

CRESSWELL, MADAME A woman of nefarious character. She bequeathed £10 for a funeral service with the request that nothing ill be said of her. The Duke of Buckingham wrote the sermon, which went, "She was born well, she married well, lived well, and died well; for she was born at Shadwell, married Cresswell, lived at Clerken-well, and died in Bridewell.

CREST Symbol of deeds and rank. In heraldry a war emblem, sign worn by a chief on the top of his helmet. Once indicated courage, pride, spirit. Crest is akin to Christ.

CRETAN BULL In Greek mythology Minos, king of Crete, vowed to sacrifice to Poseidon any animal which should first emerge from the sea, whereupon Poseidon caused a magnificent bull to appear. Charmed by the animal's splendor and not wishing to part with it, Minos substituted one of his own bulls in sacrifice. The angered sea god inflamed the bull to madness, and it caused havoc at Crete. Pasiphae, wife of Minos, fell in love with the bull, and by it became the mother of the Minotaur. Heracles, as his seventh labor, was commanded to capture the bull. In the house of Libra he accomplished this task, but as it exhaled from its nostrils, Eurystheus, master of Heracles, refused to accept it, so Heracles released it. The bull roamed until it finally settled at Marathon. The sea-born bull, which spit fire, was the sun. Also called Pasiphae's bull.

Cretan labyrinth. In Greek antiquity orchestra of solar pattern, presumably made for the mimetic dance. The dancer imitated the sun masquerading in the labyrinth as a bull.

CRETIN A mentally deficient person. From a French dialectal term for Christian, which became synonymous with human being and later with poor creature.

CREUDYLAD (CREIDYLAD, CREUDILAD) In Brythonic mythology daughter of Lludd, affianced to Gwyrthur, abducted by Gwyn. Goddess of spring, over whom Gwyrthur, solar deity and ruler of summer, and Gwyn, god of death and the underworld and ruler of winter, fought each May Day. Her legend parallels that of Persephone. In later mythological versions a daughter of Llyr, sea god, and by Shakespeare called Cordelia, daughter of King Lear.

CREUSA (KREOUSA) In Greek mythology the name of three heroines. Creusa of Attica was the daughter of Erechtheus, king of Athens, and Praxithea. Seduced by Apollo, she became the mother of Ion. She tried to kill her son, but did not succeed, and he became the founder of the Ionic race. Subsequently she married Xuthus by whom she became the mother of Achaeus. Creusa of Corinth was the daughter of Creon, the king. When Jason tired of his wife Medea, he planned to marry Creusa. As a wedding gift Medea sent a robe of gold, which caused Creusa to die in burning convulsions. In some accounts Creon's daughter is called Glauce. Dante lists her with the victims of passionate love. The third heroine was the daughter of Priam, wife of Aeneas, killed or lost at the capture of Troy. All three personify gloaming or the moon.

CRICKET Emblem of summer; weather prognosticator. In the chimney a good-luck sign; bad-luck if it leaves the chimney. In China called hsi so, symbolic of courage. To hear a cricket chirp on Christmas Eve in Ireland portends good-luck. In Japanese legend the cricket warns men with its song to prepare for the coming of winter. Silesian theft warning or the warning of death in the house, ill-luck.

CRIDEVI In Buddhism spouse of Yama. Protector of Lhasa (Lassa). Tibetan name Lha-mo.

CRIME Dream significance: (seeing it) exaggerated fear; (committing it) victory.

CRIMSON August, love. Color of nobility, mark of a sacred king. Arthur and Llew Llaw were crimson-stained kings of Britain. At Rome, a triumphant general had his face and hands stained crimson as a sign of temporary royalty. In ancient Greece, as the color of blood, ordained in the service of the dead to appease the gods.

CRIMTHANN NIA NAIR In Irish legend son of Lugaid Red Stripes by Clothru. He had a splendid adventure with a goddess or witch called Nar, hence his name which means Nar's man. He went to her celestial land where he remained with her for a month and a half. At his departure she give him many love tokens, including a horse, which he was not to dismount if he wished to return to her. At his arrival home he fell from his horse and died. This incident, which deprived him of immortality, appears to be related to the notion of a vulnerable spot or sacred foot of moon and sun deities. See sacred foot, under foot.

CRIOPHORUS Literally, one who carries a ram. Name applied to Heracles when he saved the people of Tanagra from plague by carrying a ram three times around the town.

CRIOS Greek Titan. Son of Uranus and Gaea, husband of Eurybia, father of Perses. His name means ruler, and he was the embodiment of the perfect adjustment of the universe resulting from controlled forces and powers.

CRIOSPHINX The body of a lion with the head of a ram; probably symbolized Chnoumis, Egyptian ram-headed deity. An earth or fertility symbol. Compare androsphinx, hieracosphinx.

CRISPIN (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning curly or with curly hair. (2) Shoemaker, in allusion to Saint Crispin, patron of shoemakers. (3) A witty and intriguing valet, who cheats his master. A stock character in French comedy, probably copied from the Italian.

CROCODILE Death, devil, falsehood, greediness, insensibility, lust, marshes, power of evil, rivers. Hell, inasmuch as it supposedly will swallow a man whole; persecution, inasmuch as it pursues fish smaller and weaker than itself. Dweller on land and in water. A sophism which draws an opponent into a snare by asking unfair questions is called a crocodile. Among some African tribes, feared as a spirit of evil; among others worshiped as the abode of dead ancestors, and among the Ba-quaina an object of tribal veneration and never killed. In Arabia venerated as a judge with oracular powers. Egyptian symbol of Divine Reason. According to Plu-tarch so worshiped because it has no tongue, and Divine Reason needs none, and its eyes are veiled with a transparent membrane so that it sees with its eyes closed, also a deity aspect. In Egyptian art its eyes symbolize the east, light; its tail, the west, darkness. It is associated with the corn or fertility god, and in one myth recovers the body of Osiris from the Nile. Consecrated to Cheop, Sebek, Set. As a form of Typhon typifies fecundity, fury, malice, wickedness. It is the animal, i.e. evil passion, with which the deceased combat, and as an animal of the world of the dead is sacred to Buto. As a time symbol it is worn as a headpiece. Among Jews an unclean animal, symbol of mischief. Venerated in ancient Mexico, and an object of taboo.

Black crocodile. Emblem of Jamaica.

Crocodile dung. Youth restorer. Anciently old women smeared themselves with it as an ointment to smooth out wrinkles.

Crocodile, lily, and papyrus. In Egypt designated the land of the dead.

Crocodile tears. Hypocritical grief, from the ancient belief that a crocodile weeps over those he devours.

CROCUS (1) Greek youth enamored of the nymph Smilax, who did not respond to his love. To ease his pain the gods changed him into the flower. Smilax was changed into a yew. (2) September 25 birthday flower with the sentiment cheerfulness, smiles. Symbolic of courtesan, illicit love. Dedicated to Virgin Mary. Formed the couch of Zeus and Hera.

Crocus blossom. April 16 birthday flower, symbolic of youthful gladness.

CROM CRUAICH (CROM CHRU-ACH, CROM CROICH, CROMM CRUAC, CROMM CRUACH)

Gold and silver idol worshiped by Pagan Irish. His original name was believed to have been Cenn Cruaich, i.e. head or lord of the mound, and he probably had been the Gaelic heaven-god worshiped in high places, surrounded by twelve members of a pantheon, who dwelled in bronze images. The firstlings of every issue were sacrificed to him, also the chief scions of every clan. The idol stood on the plain of Mag Slecht (plain of adorations and prostrations) in Ulster, and offerings were fed to him on Hallowe'en so that he would be able to overcome the gods of winter and provide corn and milk to the people of Ireland. He fell from the godhead at the approach of Saint Patrick. The image bent down in obeisance to the Christian, and thenceforth was called Crom Cruaich, Cromm meaning Bowed-one. The earth swallowed the images and the indwelling demons fled to the hills.

CROMHINEACH A huge mythological bird which restored life to dead Gaelic heroes. Probably a fate deity, also a fertility spirit connected with lightning and thunder.

CROMLECH Monument of unhewn stones found in Great Britain and other parts of Europe. Shrine of fire or sun worship. Cromlech resolves into crom (crooked) + lech (stone). Fundamentally crom is ak-ur-om, which yields great fire stone. The word may have denoted crooked because of lightning flashes. It has nothing to do with the form of a cromlech, which is a flat stone supported by pillar-like stones. Compare dolmen, Stonehenge, torii.

CROMMYONIA SOW In Greek mythology an ominous wild boar that roamed the land of Crommyon on the Isthmus of Corinth. Killed by Theseus. Probably a drought demon.

CROMPTON Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the bent or winding farm or town.

CROMWELL Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the bent or winding well.

CRONUS (CRONOS, KRONOS)

In Greek mythology son of Uranus and Gaea, brother-husband of Rhea, by whom he was the father of the Cronids. By Philyra he was father of Chiron. A Titan, deity of time in the sense of eternal duration. Assisted by his brothers and sisters he dethroned his father, and to avenge themselves for the oppression they had suffered, tore Uranus into fourteen pieces. A version of the gradual dismemberment of the moon during its monthly fourteen days of waning. Cronus then treacherously expelled his brothers the Titans to Tartarus. Thus he was patricide, tyrant, usurper. Forewarned that one of his children would depose him, he swallowed each as it was born, hence time devours all things. To save Zeus, Rhea fled to Crete, and instead of feeding the child to Cronus, she gave him a rock wrapped in the baby's swaddling, which caused Cronus to vomit. He disgorged all the others, suggesting the constant consumption and reproduction that goes on in nature. Zeus emasculated his father and banished him to the Western World as ruler of the Hecatoncheires. The emasculation suggests the annual supplanting of the old oak king (sky god) by his successor. Compare harvest, oak king, reaping. His functions were to create and mature all forms of life, to destroy and renew life, to mark the seasons and years, to bring hidden things (plant life or events) to light, to establish the Golden Age. He typifies father of gods, primal cause, supreme deity, time. The Cornia, his festival, was celebrated the 12th of Hecatombaeon, a month comparing to July, suggesting harvests. His emblems are a glass, globe, hook, scythe, serpent, serpent with tail in its mouth (circle of year), sickle. He usually is portrayed as an old man (Father Time) leaning on a scythe (which cuts away days and years) and holding an hour glass. He is shown bound with the cords of Zeus (to prevent irregularity in the movements of heavenly bodies); with wings (swiftness), feet of wool (noiselessness), or he receives a stone from Rhea. His name resolves into Ac-ur-onos, and yields Great-fire-one-light (or essence). Cronus has become another term for old fogey. He is identified with Saturn, and resembles Dyu, Moloch, Odin, Seb.

Cronids. Offspring of Cronus and Rhea. After Cronus was dethroned Zeus became supreme ruler, sharing the government of the universe with his brothers and sisters. The Cronids are: Zeus, king of heaven; Hera, sister-wife of Zeus, queen of heaven; Aides (Hades), underworld ruler; Demeter, earth goddess; Poseidon, sea lord; Hestia, goddess of the hearth.

CROOK Divine leadership, staff of the celestial shepherd. Egyptian symbol of power and sovereignty. Emblem of Anubis, Khnum, Khonsu, Osiris, Sokar.

CROPPY BOY Anciently, Irish peasants subject to the king of England. Peasants wore their hair cropped short, whereas aristocrats wore wigs.

CROPS Harvest, wealth. Figuratively anything that may be likened to a harvest, as a fresh crop of rumors. From the source ops, derived from the Roman deity Ops and meaning riches, or from opus, i. e. work.

CROSBY Masculine name from Old English, meaning from the town crossing.

CROSIER (CROZIER) (1) Ornamented pastoral staff borne before or by an archbishop or bishop on ceremonial occasions in the Christian Church. Sometimes terminates in a cross or a sculptured scene of the crucifixion, or a pendant veil is attached. Symbolizes authority, Bishop of All Souls, jurisdiction, watchfulness. Emblem of saints Benedict or Canterbury, Bernard of Tolmei, Gregory the Great, Hilda, Leonard, Louis of Toulouse, Magnus. Identical with the phallus which early Etruscan augurs consulted. Compare crook, lituus. (2) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Crux or Southern Cross.

CROSS (CROAZ, CROWZ, CRUX, CRUZ, KROIS, KROUZ) Sacred or mystic symbol dating back into remote antiquity. Early in history it typified the four cardinal points or domain of the spirit, source of fertilizing rains, and the four ages of the world. It typified immortality and life, spirit and matter, and was used in sympathetic magic to stir the earth into production. Also emblematic of the male creator, and as a phallic symbol, it degenerated into an instrument of passion and terror. It represented a bird with outstretched wings or a man with outstretched arms, symbolizing the divine potential in bird and man. It was carried as a talisman and considered efficacious in exorcising the devil and treating spells. Kings and nobles who were unable to write used it as a good-luck signature mark on documents, hence illiteracy. By reason of its good-luck qualities, it became a plus sign. As an emblem of immortality placed at crossroads and market-places to commemorate battles and remarkable events. Sometimes corpses on the journey for internment spent a night at one of these memorial crosses. It typified the gallows tree on which the fertility god (see hanging, oak king, sacred king) was hung after emasculation and with whose leaves in spring the god was resurrected. This rite led to the use of the cross as an instrument for punishing criminals, and it became a symbol of blood sacrifice and torture. Its form being that of a crutch it stands for infirmity and support. Dream significance: good-luck, triumph. Cross resolves into ac-er-os and yields great-fire-light (or essence) or great Eros. It is related to such words as ceras or cerastes, another name for the Egyptian and Mayan sacred asp; croch and croich, Gaelic for hang and gallows; kaross, Zulu luck-bringing leopard-skin cloak; krasa, Russian for beauty; Krisa, seat of Apollo worship; kryssat, Cornish for hawk. As an instrument it compares symbolically with the ankh, ax, boar's tusk, caduceus, hammer, number four, stag horn, swastika, sword. Some pre-Christian cross forms are: ansated or crux ansata, emblem of Egyptian deities, symbol of immortality; commissa, patibulata, or tau cross, mystic ancient symbol, probably originally typified the phallus; decussata or oblique cross; commonly called Saint Andrew's cross, found on ancient coins and steles; Greek cross, found on Assyrian, Egyptian, Etruscan, and Persian medals, monuments, and pottery; immissa or Latin cross, found on ancient tablets and other art works.

American Indians scratched crosses on doors to prevent the dead from reentering. In Assyrian and ancient Britain emblem of creative power and eternity. Babylonian attribute of water deities, and probably derived from a water marker. Among Chaldees, Egyptians, and Phoenicians, two fire-making sticks in the form of a cross typified life to come. In China, India, and Scandinavia, the cross represented heaven. In China it stands for the number ten; three crosses stand for thirty or a generation. The cross, in forms numbering almost 300, has become the most outstanding Christian symbol, and the word Christianity and cross have become synonymous. It typifies Christ as Son of God. Although Christ was not represented as a man on a cross until 608 A.D. the cross of the crucifixion is said to have been made of four sorts of wood (cedar, cypress, olive, and palm), to signify the four quarters of the universe. At one time a notion was widespread that the cross of Christianity was a tree, Christ was worshiped as a Hanging God, the tree being his gallows. Belief in the beneficial and saving magic of the Holy Rood still prevails, thus it is an aspect of the world tree or tree of life. As the steed by which Christ rose to heaven it compares with the Yggdrasil, steed of Odin. In Christianity the cross symbolizes Divine Wisdom, Easter, faith, love, redemption of mankind, reparation to God, sacrifice, salvation, service, victory; also burdens, failure, martyrdom, tragedy. The sign of the cross is used in blessings and consecra-tions. It is a substitute for the cock on church steeples. The cocks on medieval churches were so often struck by lightning, the cross was a welcome substitute, its supposed efficacy against evil made it respected as a talisman. During the crusades, it was used to terrorize non-believers. Some of the better known crosses in Christian heraldry and their symbolic meanings are:

Cross	Symbolism
botonné or reflé	Trinity
Calvary or Latin	Crucifixion, 3 steps of atonement: faith, hope, charity
Calvary pointed crosslet	suffering crusader fitché or cleché	missionary fleurie (fleurette)	conqueror
Greek	gospel, victory
humetté or coupé	crusader
lux	light
Maltese	eight beatitudes
moline	crusader
patee	solar light
patonce	ecclesiastical; tribulation
patriarchal, double bar	archbishops and cardinals
"triple "	pope
pectoral	jurisdiction
potent	pensioner of hospitals
Saint Andrew's	humiliation, martyrdom
Saint Benedict's	charm against disease and danger
Saint George's	mountain, triumph over evil (dragon)
saltire	resolution, reward in crusades to those who scaled town walls
tau (tav)	sacrifice, suffering
urde or pointed	crusade, suffering.

In Egypt the crux ansata was the key which opened the portals leading to divine knowledge; the circle signified eternal preserver, the T signified wisdom. Also called ankh. In Greek antiquity a cross was placed on the breast of an initiate after 'new birth' in Dionysiac and Eleusinian mysteries, and as such a symbol of everlasting happiness, love, and power. The tau may have been of Hebrew origin. It was a sign of the expected Messiah and used as a talisman for eschatological protection. Said to be the cross that Moses supposedly raised in the wilderness. The cross was a Magyar symbol of rejuvenescence, freedom from physical suffering. Emblem of the Chaacs. Birds, as spirits of the wind, were sacrificed to it. In Rome the augur's staff with which the heavens were marked out was a cross. It was so commonly used as an instrument of torture, under the Romans afflictions, pains, troubles, etc., were called crosses. The Scandinavians used a cross as a boundary mark, and erected one over a hero's or king's grave. The flyfoot cross or swastika was the form of Thor's hammer, therefore a symbol of lightning and thunder, a weapon of divine power bestowing fertility.

Cross, anchor, heart. Christian symbol of faith, hope, charity.

Cross and ball. Empire, royalty, sovereignty. The cross stands on the ball to signify that spiritual power is above temporal power. When the sphere surmounts the cross, gradual enlightenment is signified.

Cross and circle. Triad and unity, union of male and female. Usually the circle is within the horizontal bar of the cross. Plains Indians place the cross within the circle to represent the four cardinal points within the lodge of heaven. A cross and three circles typifies threefold deity.

Cross and doves. Christians contemplating salvation.

Cross framed by a horseshoe. Male and female principles. Good-luck talisman.

Cross of equal arms. Union of upright (male) and horizontal (female), the originating and duplicating elements, the positive and negative principles. Related to the number four or square of two. Emblem of Hecate, Greek goddess of crossroads. Original form of the Hebrew tau.

Cross of Jerusalem. Blossom symbolizing devotion.

Cross of thunderbolts. Chinese sacred emblem found in the hands of idols, symbolic of the divine force of Buddha's doctrine, which destroys all false belief and mundane wickedness; resolution and tireless proper action.

Double cross. Ancient form of Greek zeta. Symbolizes the parent flame.

Fiery cross. Deity offering, sacrifice, in allusion to the ancient custom of setting fire to a cross as a substitute for a human in fertility sacrifices. As such cognate with the yule log. War, in allusion to the ancient custom of Scottish Highlanders, who sent a flaming cross from village to village to summon clansmen to battle. In United States used by the Ku Klux Klan to threaten physical harm or violent death.

Red Cross. Love, mercy, physical care.

Veiled cross. Typifies period of Christ's repose in the tomb. In Sumer altars and tombs were veiled to commemorate the descent of the sun god into the underworld, (winter season).

CROSSBAR OF CARRIAGE

The Chinese Chen, four stars in Corvus, southern quadrant, summer season. Lucky period in every way.

CROSSED PIPES The awakener or summoner, the supreme deity as piper. Emblem of Christ and of Pan.

CROSSROADS Difficulty, need of guidance, uncertainty. Place at which a man moves from one realm to another. In antiquity the meeting of many roads typified the world's navel at which the statue or emblem of a deity of travelers was placed to direct those in doubt; thus it became a place of worshiping Christ, Hermes, Jizo, Mercury, and other deities. The statue of the Japanese Jizo, like that of the Greek herm, was sometimes mischievous and moved around to confuse a wanderer. In the middle ages a place of rendezvous for demons and witches, and a burial place of suicides. Into modern times the site of a small country settlement. Among Christians it once was a burial place second in sacredness to the consecrated church. Ancient Teutons sacrificed criminals to the gods at crossroads, hence an execution ground.

CROTALUM Anciently used in religious ceremonials.

CROW (1) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Corvus. (2) Cunning, foreknowledge, omnivorousness, speed, tale bearer, thievery. One who lives by his wits, one maintained by the labors of others, one who flies in a straight line. Bird consulted by augurs. In heraldry signifies quiet life and settled habitation. In many legends, originally white and turned black by some god in anger, as in the Apollo-Coronis myth. Attribute of Amaterasu, Apollo, Asclepius, Aurboda, Bran, Cronus, Odin, Saturn, Yama, etc. In China a three-legged crow represents the spirit of the sun. If his voice is heard between 3 and 7

A.M., the hearer will receive presents; if heard between 7 and 11 P.M., rain and wind will come. To the Coos Indians the crow's voice was thunder, his eyes flashed lightning. French and Italian bird of misfortune. In Greece a bearer of ill-tidings, symbol of longevity. Hindu messenger of death. In Iroquois tradition giver of the gift of corn. In Japan called karasu. A messenger and guide of kami. It is a model of filial respect as it has the virtue of caring for its aged parents; also symbolizes cruelty. Its croak foretells death except when heard at 5 A.M. (wealth hour) or at noon (happiness hour); then it is a sign of good luck. Norse symbol of fertility.

Crow's cry. Warning of death or illness.

Crow over. Gloat.

Pair of crows. Egyptian symbol of conjugal fidelity.

White-winged crow. Chinese bird of evil omen.

CROWBAR, PICKAX, AND SHOVEL In Freemasonry, working tools. By them a Royal Arch Mason is admonished to raise (crow-bar) his thoughts above the corrupting influences of worldliness; loose (pickax) from his heart the hold of evil habits; remove (shovel) the rubbish of passions and prejudices, that he may be fitted for the reception of Eternal Truth and Wisdom.

CROWFOOT August 20 birthday flower symbolizing brilliance, ingratitude.

CROWN (1) The Northern Crown, constellation also known as Corona Borealis, or the Southern Crown, constellation also known as Corona Australis. (2) Ambition, beauty, dignity, empire, eternal life, glory, good fortune, history, honor, judgement, perfection, power, prize, renown, riches, royalty, splendor, sun's rays, supremacy, victory. Also false knowledge, oppression, ostentation, pride, tyranny, vanity. The female principle. Anciently a fire or sun emblem, mark of a deity. Dream significance: (of gold) honors, vanity; (of leaves) pleasure. In the middle ages it became so common as a watermark crown has become a generic term among paper makers. In heraldry seigniorial authority. Nine crowns are recognized: celestial, civic, diadem, mural, naval, obsidional, oriental, triumphal or imperial, vallery. Word derived from the Latin corona, a circle of light around a heavenly body. Carries the same symbolism as coronal, garland, halo, stephanos, wheel, wreath.

In Buddhism, if five-leafed, a Bodhisattva ornament; if with five skulls, a Dharmapala ornament. Christian symbol of distinction, martyrdom, sovereignty, victory over death and sin. Emblem of the powers and principalities of Heaven. Attribute of Virgin Mary, queen of heaven. Gnostic symbol of God called Or (light). In Greek antiquity originally part of the costume of a priest, whose crown was of the plant sacred to the god to whom he was sacrificing, as a laurel crown, if the sacrifice were to Apollo. Later worn by Greek and Roman citizens at banquets. Hebrew symbol of righteousness; after death the righteous sat with crowns on their heads and enjoyed the brightness of God. In the cabala, the Crown also is called the Tongue, the center, which creates the equilibrium between Justice and Mercy, between Wisdom, which is on the right, side of benignity, and Understanding, which is on the left, side of severity. In Rome the crowns were: camp, castrenses, or vallar, a gold crown awarded to the first man to force his way into the enemy's camp; civic, made of oak leaves and acorns and awarded to those who saved the life of a Roman citizen or civis in battle; mural, a gold crown resembling a battle-ment and awarded to the soldier who was the first to scale the wall of a besieged town; naval, a gold crown decorated with the prows of a ship, awarded to the hero who led others in boarding an enemy's ship or who was responsible for naval victory; obsidionalis, crown of grass and flowers gathered on the battlefield and presented to a general who liberated a beleaguered army; an olive crown, given to those who distinguished themselves in various ways in battle; ovation, a myrtle crown, presented to generals in lesser victories; triumphal, crown of laurel leaves, presented to a triumphant general; sometimes it was made of gold shaped into laurel leaves.

Conical crown with two ribbons.

On ancient Semitic steles worn by the god of lightning and thunder, hence fertility. Bull horns sometimes replace the ribbons, and the crown also appeared on images of war gods.

Crowned Buddhas. Dhyani-buddhas, which see.

Crown of gold and precious stones. Royalty. Crown of Virgin Mary.

Crown of grass. Honor.

Crown of iron. Crown of ancient Lombard kings. Charlemagne and Napoleon were crowned with it. So called from a narrow strip of iron inside the crown, which is of gold, set with precious stones. According to legend the iron was beaten from one of the nails used at the crucifixion, which Constantine's mother claimed to have found at Jerusalem. Another crown of iron is one called Luke's crown. It was placed red hot on the brow of Gyorgy Dosza, who led a rebellion in Hungary. He was condemned to sit on an iron throne over a fire. His flesh was torn from his body with red hot pincers. Luke appears to be a misreading of Zeck, an abbreviated form of Szekelyfolk, the peasants who aided Dosza in the revolt.

Crown of oak. Courage, valor. Attribute of sky deities.

Crown of roses. July 5 birthday offering symbolizing reward of merit, rejoicing, virtue. Roman emperor's festal crown.

Crown of seven stars. Crown presented by Dionysus to Ariadne. After her death it was placed in the heavens and became the Corona Borealis.

Crown of thorns. Parody of the Roman crown of roses. Crown of Christ, typifying martyrdom, pain, suffering. Source of the tonsure of monks.

Double crown. Union of Upper and Lower Egypt. Combination of the white pointed miter of the southern kingdom and the high pointed red cap of the northern kingdom. Head-dress of pharaohs and called pschent.

Triple crown. Mystic symbol of rulership of the three worlds: spiritual, psychical, physical, or creative, formative, material. Crown of the pope to signify his claim to spiritual, temporal, and purgatorial authority, hence papal dignity. A triple crown with two pillars symbolizes the three worlds over which the pope has authority and the two pillars of the temple.

Turreted crown. Crown of the great mother goddess as war goddess and defender of cities. Attribute of Atargatis, Cybele, Diana of Ephesus, Italia, Ops, Rhea, and others.

gate of hell. From it emerged red birds, which withered everything with their breath; a three headed death-dealing bird; swine, which wandered over the land causing everything to stop growing; and other destructive animals. No one was able to kill these animals, which disappeared when they were shot at, except Amairgen and the men of Ulster (Conchobar's men). The animals typify ice and sleet, drought, the scorching rays of the sun. Only fertility heroes were able to defeat them.

CRUCIFIX Affliction, burden, pain, punishment. In 608 A.D. the cross entered Christianity as a crucifix. Until the 9th century the figure of Christ was not carved, but was engraved on gold, iron, or silver crosses; until the 11th century the figure was represented alive, symbolizing crucial spiritual trial. See cross.

Anciently, especially by Oriental nations and the Romans, a type of capital punishment inflicted upon slaves, thieves, etc., thus symbolic of intense mental and physical suffering. Among Carthaginians a fertility rite, the method by which the sacred king was sacrificed yearly. The nail in the foot was driven between the tendon and anklebone (Achilles' heel). Compare oak-king, sacred foot under foot. The death of Jesus on the cross is a Christian version of the primitive belief of death before rebirth. As interpreted by Dante the crucifixion was the punishment of mankind in the person of Christ for the original sin in the Garden of Eden by Pilate as representative of the Roman Empire. Dante regarded the Roman Empire as a divine institution, and Christ was justly punished as regards his human nature, unjustly as being God. Man could only recover that which he had lost by the Fall either through atoning himself for original sin or through divine mercy. God combined two ways, i.e. mercy and justice. By Christ's incarnation and death man recovered the medium by which to be pardoned and at the same time justice was satisfied. This coincides with the theory that He was betrayed by Judas not for thirty pieces of silver, but because Judas understood His sacrifice (descent of the sun) was necessary for the welfare of mankind. The thirteen symbols of the Crucifixion or Passion of Christ are: cross, crown of thorns, hammer, ladder, lance, nails (usually three), napkin of Saint Veronica, pincers, reed, scourge, seamless garment, sponge, whipping post (column).

CRUACHAN'S CAVE Ireland's

Crucifixion darkness. Two explanations are given of the darkness at the Christian crucifixion; the moon left its course to make an eclipse, the sun hid its own rays, both typifying sorrow.

Crucifixion on a tree. Denotes fructifying powers.

Crucifixion victim. Victim of a foot wound, sacred King sacrificed annually to correspond to the sun's death. Such heroes were Christ, Diarmuid, Llew Llaw, Math, Odin, Talus.

Crucifixion victim, head down. A saint differentiated from Christ.

CRUET Sacrifice vessel. In Christian tradition eucharist, redemption.

CRUSOE A solitary man, one who has been deserted, shipwrecked, or has withdrawn from society, in allusion to Robinson Crusoe, a character in the tale of Daniel Defoe.

CRUTCH Accident, infirmity, misfortune, old age, physical handicap. In China emblem of Li T'ieh-kuai. Christian emblem of Saint Romualdo. Crutched Friars was the name of an order of English monks which existed until the 17th century; members wore the sign of the cross (crutch) on their habits.

CRUX Constellation in the Southern Sky with four bright stars in the form of a cross. Also called Southern Cross.

Crux ansata. Androgyny, union of male and female, spirit and matter. In Egypt the key of deities and sacred kings which opened the portals leading to divine knowledge and provided strength and wisdom. Symbol of life and immortality, the circle and horizontal bar representing the female principle, the eternal preserver; the vertical bar standing for the male principle, the generator of life. A phallic symbol comparable to the caduceus of Greece and Rome and the ling-yoni of India. Also called ankh.

Crux florida, gemmata, or stellata. Richly decorated cross of Christ.

CRYING Despair, sorrow, hypocrisy.

CRYPTOMERIA In Japanese mythology favorite tree abode of tengu folk (goblins). Symbolizes gloomy mystery. Also called sugi.

CRYSTAL (1) Feminine name, special use of the common noun. (2) Purity, simplicity. Talisman against the evil eye. By ancients believed to be a fossil ice or frozen dew. In powdered form taken in wine as a cure for many ills and melancholia. Dream significance: freedom from enemies. American Indians placed by the dead to protect them on their journey. Revered as a stone which assured good hunting. In Australia held to bring rain. In China placed in the mouth to quench thirst. Used by Egyptians for their cartouches. In India wedding bracelets of women were made of crystal; they were broken when the husband died. Italian symbol of good fellowship, used in drinking glasses. Japanese symbol of patience, because of the labor held necessary to produce the crystal ball which they held in deep reverence. Believed to possess the power to make the sea rise and perform other magic. In Scotland crystal set in silver valued as a talisman for the cure of kidney diseases.

Crystal ball. Revealer of the past and future. In ancient Britain, placed in graves as a symbol of immortality. One of the seven cabalistic mirrors. See mirror.

CTEIS (KTEIS) Greek form of the Sanscrit yoni. The passive principle, the earth.

CU One of the lesser sun deities in Irish mythology. Son of Dianecht, brother of Cethe and Cian. See Cian.

CUBA Roman goddess who watched over infants as they lay in their cots. Name derived from the Latin cubo, i.e. to lie down in bed. The name of the island of Cuba is not derived from that of the deity; it comes from the Spanish cuba, meaning vat, and is related to cube.

CUBE Form denoting earth, as opposed to the circle, which denotes heaven, and the pyramid, which denotes mountain. Inert form lacking in dynamic stress, symbolic of firmness, moral rectitude, motionlessness, rigidity, truth. In heraldry constancy, equity, verity, wisdom. Pythagorean symbol of the mind of man purified by piety and devotion. Typifies rest on account of the security of its areas. A form of altars and sacred stones. The New Jerusalem of the Apocalypse is described as being a cube. A shape in which Odin was worshiped. Cognate with Cuba and kaabeh. Mystics interpret space as a cube.

Cube of space:

The cube, representing terrestrial forces, symbolizes earth or material manifestations.

The six faces of the cube and the interior are assigned to the seven double letters of the Hebrew alphabet (letters with hard and soft pronunciation), symbolic of opposites:

Letter and Meaning	Direction
beth, life and death	above
gimel, peace and strife	below
daleth, knowledge and ignorance	east
kaph, wealth and poverty	west
pe, grace and sin	north
resh, fruitfulness and sterility	south
tau, dominion and slavery	center

The three interiors correspond to the three mother letters as follows:

aleph, representing air, the mediate spirit, the temperate season, and the breast, assigned to above to below;
 mem, representing water, earth, the frigid season, and the belly, assigned to east to west;
 shin, representing fire, the heavens, the torrid season, and the head, assigned to north to south.

The twelve boundaries are represented as follows:

Letter	Boundary
he	northeast
vau	southeast
zayin	east above
cheth	east below
teth	north above
yod	north below
lamed	northwest
nun	southwest
samekh	west above
ayin	west below
tsade	south above
qoph	south below

CUHAVIVA Muyscas (Bogota Indians) rainbow goddess. Spouse of Bochica. Guardian of fertility, of fields, of rain waters, of those sick with fever, and of women in childbirth.

CUCHI (KOTTICHE) Australian demon which goes forth at night as a bird or snake and causes sickness. Thunder is the growl of his anger, his breath is composed of whirlwinds; the Aurora Australis is the light of his camp-fire.

CUCHULAINN (CUCHULLIN, CUCULAIN, CUCULLIN) Sun and culture hero of the Red Branch of Ulster or second cycle of Irish legend. An incarnation of the god Lugh of the Tuatha De Danann, who in the form of a May-fly was swallowed by Dechtire. Like others of virgin birth he was provided with a mortal father, in some accounts said to be Sualtam, in others said to be Conchobar, brother of Dechtire. He was of extraordinary beauty and size; his achievements were miraculous. He swam like a trout as soon as he was born. He had seven fingers on each hand, seven toes on each foot, and seven pupils in each eye. At the age of seven he appeared at the court of Conchobar at Emain Macha for training, and he was tutored by the seven greatest heroes and poets of Ulster. He was called Setanta until he was twelve, when in self-defense he killed the hound of Culann (Culainn). Promising to serve as the dog had done until another could be trained, he took the name Cuchulainn. He wooed Emer, daughter of Forgall the Wily, who to be rid of him sent him to the woman warrior Scathach to learn the art of war. To reach her he crossed the plain of Ill-luck, where men's feet stuck while grasses sprang up and cut them; he passed through Perilous Glen, full of devouring beasts; he crossed the Bridge of the Cliff, which shot up like a ship's mast as soon as anyone put foot on it, by making his famous salmon leap to the middle of the bridge and sliding down the other side. To repay Scathach for a knowledge of her craft he agreed to fight Aoife. After conquering Aoife he made love to her and from this union Conlaoch was born. Cuchulainn left a ring and instructed Aoife to send the boy with it to Ireland when he reached seven, under vow that Conlaoch was never to turn back, never to let anyone stop him, never to tell his name. While returning to Ireland, Cuchulainn with his magic spear Gai Bolga slew the Fomors (darkness demons) to whom Devorgilla, a beautiful princess was to be given in tribute. Cuchulainn carried his conquests into dark regions, where he fought monstrous sharp-beaked toads, dragons, and serpents. He carried off three cows of magic qualities (rain clouds) and a caldron which provided an inexhaustible supply of meat and gold and silver. Thus the sun descends to fight the underworld forces and returns with fertility, light, and warmth. He then killed Forgall (darkness or winter on earth) and claimed Emer (dawn or spring) as his bride. When Conlaoch arrived in Ireland, Cuchulainn requested his name. Conlaoch refused to give it, and Cuchulainn challenged him to combat. Realizing his opponent was his father, Conlaoch flung his sword slantwise and was killed. Upon seeing the ring Cuchulainn knew he had killed his son and went mad. Thus the dawn or young sun succumbed to the stronger midday sun. Cathbad, the druid, cured Cuchulainn by causing the waves of the sea to appear as armed men, which Cuchulainn smote with his sword until he fell from exhaustion. A Celtic version of the Rustam-Sohrab story. At the feast of Bricriu (see), Cuchulainn refused the champion's portion because he preferred to keep the good will of his companions. Later however in a beheading wager the champion's portion was awarded to him by a bachlach who visited Emain Macha nightly. Conall and Loegaire accepted the challenge and beheaded the bachlach (storm demon), but refused to permit the bachlach, whose head grew on a gain, to behead them, which was part of the wager. Only Cuchulainn kept faith. When he stretched his neck across the block the bachlach brought the ax down blunt side first and proclaimed Cuchulainn not only fearless but true. After announcing Cuchulainn to be the champion the bachlach, Cu Roi mac Dairi in disguise, vanished. This incident was borrowed for the story of Gawain and the Green Knight. Single-handed Cuchulainn held off the invading armies of Queen Medb (queen of darkness), who fought to obtain the Brown Bull of Ulster. Each year, because of a cruelty they had committed, the men of Ulster had a spell of weakness (winter) put upon them. Only Cuchulainn was immune to the spell. He slew hundreds of Medb's men, including his old friend Ferdiad. Cuchulainn owned three spears, each destined to kill a king. Three druids were charged by Medb to ask for these spears and to refuse the request of a druid was deemed unlucky as a druid might satirize one's kin, and a satire had the efficacy of a curse. When the first druid requested a spear, Cuchulainn killed him. Lugaid picked it up, hurled it back, and killed Laeg, Cuchulainn's charioteer. The second druid Cuchulainn killed in the same manner and Erc picked up the spear and mortally wounded Cuchulainn's horse, the Gray Macha. The third druid was killed by his third spear, which again Lugaid hurled back, mortally wounding Cuchulainn, then in his twenty-seventh year. Under the spell of three sorceress daughters of Calatin, Cuchulainn believed he was facing a great host, but he would not die like a coward; to keep on his feet he tied himself to a stone (the sun stands erect as it sinks). No one realized he had been slain until a raven plucked out his eyes. The death of Cuchulainn was avenged by Conall, who cut off Lugaid's head. Medb obtained the Brown Bull (fertility) and the prosperity of Emain Macha fell with the death of Cuchulainn, i. e. earth became barren with the death of the sun. The life of Cuchulainn was tied up with that of the Brown Bull (a bull-cult once existed in Ireland). Morrighu, the fate-goddess, had prophesied that Cuchulainn would live while the bull (fertility) was still a yearling; the Brown Bull was thus Cuchulainn's other self.

Cuchulainn, the wanderer across the sky, was not faithful to any woman; among those loved by him were Aoife, Blathmat, Emer, Ethne, Fand, Scathach. He may have been a historical person deified. He is called the Achilles of Gaul, but his exploits and labors reflect those of Euphemus, Hercules, Perseus, and Theseus. Like Gawain in the Grail legend, he normally had a golden tongue, but in battle his face became distorted, blazing red lights flashed from his forehead, no one dared look straight at him, the heat of his body melted snow, and when he finally plunged into water he boiled and hissed; thus the sun goes down fighting his enemies, the forces of darkness, eclipse, mist, or storm. The Conchobar-Cuchulainn relationship is repeated in that of Arthur-Gawain, and several exploits similar to his have been incorporated in the Grail romances. Cuchulainn wore a crimson fringed tunic with a gold and silver pin which blinded men. His fringed vest was of silk with a bronze, gold, silver, and russet-colored kilt. His necklace had pendants and his helmet was adorned with a hundred mixed carbuncle jewels. His crimson shield had a pure silver rim. His long sword was gold-hilted. All symbols of light and rays of light. In a Christian account he was raised from the dead by Saint Patrick to convert Loegaire the Second, king of Ireland, to Christianity.

CUCKOLD Husband of an adulterous; a man whose wife has proved unfaithful; in allusion to the female cuckoo's habit of laying her eggs in the nest of other birds. Some say the allusion is to the ancient custom of calling, "Ku-ku," to warn a husband that an adulterer was approaching, and that in time the term was applied to the husband himself. A cuckold frequently is shown with antlers (see).

CUCKOO Adultery, cuckoldom, egoism, insanity, selfishness, usurpation. Also harbinger of spring, bird of prophecy. The sight and sound of the cuckoo is a good omen for marriage, thus a bird of love. In middle ages believed to be one of the forms assumed by the devil. In ancient Greece a rain bird; attribute of Hera. In India bird of Kama, god of love. In Japan called hototogisu; symbolizes unsatisfied love. A guide to Hades. Associated with the scent of orange blossoms. Cuckoo flower. August 21 birthday flower expressing ardor.

CUCULCAN Yucatan legendary ruler who was deified and called Cezalcouati. A culture hero and agricultural deity.

CUCUMBER Criticism. See gourd for further symbolism.

CUD CHEWING Reflection.

CUDOEMUS Greek abstract deity. Tumult.

CUDWEED Unceasing remembrance.

CUERAVAPERI Tarasco Indian mother of the gods and earth; germinator of seeds. She presided over rains, hence over fertility and harvests. Female counterpart of Curicaberis.

CUFFY Nickname for a negro. From Paul Cuffee, who made a fortune at sea and became a well-known philanthropist.

CUICHI SUPAI Rainbow deity of Indians of Ecuador. Causes women to become pregnant.

CULANN (CULAINN) Chief smith at the court of Conchobar. Owner of a fierce hound, which Setanta killed in self-defense. To appease the angry Culann, Setanta promised to guard the smith's abode until another dog of equal strength was trained. Because of this service Setanta was called Cuchulainn.

CULDEES Christian priests in Ireland and Scotland, who during the middle ages chose a solitary service of God in an isolated cell as the highest form of religious life.

CUL-DE-SAC A blind alley, hence an argument, enterprise, etc., that leads to nothing. From the French, meaning bottom of a sack.

CULLINAN DIAMOND Largest uncut diamond ever discovered. Named after Sir T.M. Cullinan, owner of the mine in which it was discovered. Two of the stones cut from it are now part of the English crown jewels.

CULTURE HERO A character regarded as the giver of things beneficial to a race or tribe, as the art of agriculture, fishing, or hunting. He is bringer of fire, he determines the course of rivers, introduces efficacious dances and songs as well as an alphabet, he liberates the fertilizing rains, the spring sun, and regulates the winds, he teaches men to make implements and weapons, in the use of the plow, how to yoke the ox and other beasts of burden. He frequently leads them to victory in war. Prometheus, bringer of fire, is perhaps the greatest culture hero in literature.

CUMAEAN SIBYL A legendary woman of antiquity who wrote her prophecies on loose tree leaves. Her shrine was located at Cumae, the earliest Greek colony in Italy or Sicily. She guided Aeneas through the realms of Hades, and the Romans acknowledged her authority in matters of divination.

CUMHAL (CAMULUS, COMHAL, CUMHAIL) Literally, sky. Irish giant who placed his feet on two mountains and stooped for a drink in a stream in the valley between them. Chief of the Baoisgne clan. Father of Fionn.

CUNDA In Buddhism a female Bodhisattva. Color: red; mudra: dhyana; emblems: kalasa (amrta vase), khadga (sword), mala (rosary), padma (lotus), patra (alms bowl), pushtaka (book).

CUP Friendship, good fellowship, intuition, love, prudence, salvation, temperance, wisdom. Also intemperance. Holder of water and wine, source of eternal life. As a fertility emblem the female reproductive energy. A food-supply talisman. An attribute of priests; holy chalice or goblet; receptacle for the blood of a deity or sacred king. In tarot deck ancient name for the heart suit, signifying passion. A constellation in the Southern Sky is called Cup, also Crater. Compares with other vessels which give man an inexhaustible supply of good things, as: caldron of Bran, Cerridwen, and Huon of Bordeaux, goblet of the sun of Jemshid, horn of Amalthea, lamp of Aladdin, table of Ethiopians, well of Apollo Thyrsis, wishing quern of Frodi. In Babylonian mythology emblem of Adda-Nari. Christian symbol of the destiny of mankind, the Eucharist. Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane. A form of the ciborium and the Sangreal. In Christian, Greek, and Hebrew tradition symbolizes a mystic union with the saving god, eternal life. In Greece an attribute of Asclepius, Bacchus, Chthonius, Dionysus, and Hygeia as a symbol of fertility and health. Also symbolic of the bitter draught of death. In the Hebrew Pesach feast placed in the center of the table for the prophet Elijah, the invisible guest, the promise of the coming of the Messiah. The father of the family pronounces certain blessing over the cup, which then is passed around the table and all present partake of the wine. The cup is said to be filled with the portion given to one by divine providence and to hold blessings of life and grace; it is a thank-offering to God. It also symbolizes the liquor used at idolatrous feasts filled with afflictions and love-potions. In Norse mythology suggests the life-token containing the soul. In Rome symbolized Mercury when presiding at birth or leading the soul to the unknown regions.

Broken cup. Broken life.

Cup of clay. Life.

Cup of gold. The vulva, virginity. The Sangreal.

Cup with key. Christian holy orders.

Cup with serpent flying from it. Saint John the evangelist.

Cup with serpent in it. Poison.

Skull cup. Buddhist tantric symbol. See kapala.

Three-footed cup. Chinese libation cup for those of noble rank.

CUPAY (SUPAY) Peruvian lord of shades in the center of the earth. Souls not entitled to become companions of the sun went to his realm. Personification of the god of the dead and of sin.

CUPID Roman god of first-born love. Son of Vulcan and Venus, lover of Psyche. In art usually shown as a winged unaging boy, naked but armed with a bow and arrow. Sometimes he is blindfolded to indicate he strikes indiscriminately. This aspect is erroneously interpreted to mean egotism, psychological blindness. His broken bow signifies love conquered, his gold arrow virtuous love, his leaden arrow sensual passion. For the legend of Cupid and Psyche see Eros, with whom he is identical. His name is from the Latin cupido, meaning desire, passion. Also called Amour.

CUPPER One who cups, as a physician, sap gatherer. A table indicating the proper season for blood letting and the particular parts of the body to be bled at different seasons; part of medieval calendars.

CURE Symbolized by herbs, holy words, a knife.

CURETES (KOURETES) In Greek mythology the account of their birth varies, they are said to be children of Thalassa and Poseidon, to have sprung from the sides of a volcanic mountain and the first beings to assume human form, to have descended from Hephaestus and created internal noises within volcanoes as they worked in iron, to have been imported from the Semites, to have been the most ancient people of Crete. They accompanied Rhea to Crete when Zeus was born at the winter solstice to drown out his cries with a dance in which they sounded their swords and clapped their shields. After saluting Zeus they became his tutors and Cretan priests in the temples of Rhea; probably identical with the Dactyli. They are said to have been given their names because they were the heavenly dancers who guarded Zeus (the child Kouros). They may have been wind spirits or deified boy priests, who sacrificed their hair trimmings to Zeus, i.e. boys who sacrificed their strength, a form of emasculation. Compare Panemerios, Telchines.

CURFEW BELL Bell rung by medieval police to warn people to put out fires and lights at sunset in summer and at eight o'clock in winter. The original object appears to have been the prevention of destructive fires; later a warning for children or adults to leave the streets. The practice still prevails in certain parts of the world.

CURICABERIS (SURITES) Tarasco Indian hero-god who brought his people out of barbarism, arranged their calendars, and gave them laws. Culture hero who always delivered his instructions at sunrise. His female counterpart was Cueravaperi.

CURIOSITY A world-wide folklore trait, which leads to danger, and from which a heroic character emerges, as in the Apisirafts, Blue Beard, Pandora, Three Calenders. In an Italian icon curiosity is typified by a robe covered with ears and frogs on a woman whose hair stands up on end. She has wings at her shoulders, her hands are uplifted, and her head is thrust into a prying posture.

CURIS Earth's axis, phallus, rod stirring creation. See spear stirring.

CURLYLOCKS Nursery rhyme heroine typifying innocence.

CUROI MAC DAIRE Irish solar deity and storm giant, whose thunder was an ax. Vassal monarch ruling over Munster under Eochaid Airem. He was deceived by his wife Blathnat, who instructed Cuchulainn how to kill him. A seasonal myth, in which the New Year succeeds the Old. Later, disguised as a bachlach, Curoi entered into a beheading wager (also a seasonal myth) with the champions of Ulster and adjudged Cuchulainn the greatest in bravery. The death of Curoi was avenged by his son Lugaid. Resembles Llew Llaw and Samson.

CURRANT August 22 birthday flower with the sentiment: You please all. Dream significance: disputes, squabbles; (if out of season) unfaithfulness.

Currant blossom. In the language of flowers: Your frown will kill me.

CURSE A form of verbal magic. Personified by Ara. Menstruation is referred to as the curse.

Word cognate with Ceres and cress. Curse resolves into acur-es and yields might fire essence.

Curse by bell, book, and candle. A form of excommunication in the Roman Catholic Church. The bell signifies the forthcoming announcement; the book contains the sentence; the candle is extinguished to symbolize spiritual darkness of the one excommunicated.

Curse of Cain. Condemnation to exile with no abiding place; God's punishment on Cain for the murder of Abel.

Curse of Scotland. The nine of diamonds. Three explanations are given: 1- In the game of Pope Joan the card is called the Pope, Antichrist of Scotch reformers. 2- In a card game called comette, it is a winning card. The game was the curse of Scotland because it ruined so many families. 3- The Duke of Cumberland supposedly wrote his sanguinary order after the battle of Culloden on a nine of diamonds.

CURTAIN Concealment, protection, sky. By Hebrews placed before the Torah shrine; the veil before the hidden or inner room of God, which shields the priest from the fire of God, whose brilliance no man could survive.

Curtain lecturer. A nagging wife, who delivers her criticism when she and her husband are in bed or within the curtains.

Curtain raiser. A short preliminary sketch that precedes the main play, hence that which goes before the main or real business.

Ring down the curtain. Bring a situation to an end; in allusion to the bell which rings at the end of a play as a signal to lower the curtain.

CURTANA The sword of Edward the Confessor. Having no point it became an emblem of mercy and was borne before English kings at their coronation.

CURTIS Masculine name from Old French, meaning courteous.

CURTIUS, MARCUS Legendary Roman youth of the 4th century B. C. A chasm was opened in the Forum at Rome by an earthquake, and a soothsayer proclaimed it could be closed only by the sacrifice of Rome's greatest treasure. Believing Rome possessed no greater treasure than a brave man, he leaped on his horse and in full armor rode into the chasm, whereupon it closed. Compare Regulus.

CURUPIRA (KORUPIRA) Brazilian devil. Forest demon given to mischief, but a lover of tobacco for which he was helpful to hunters.

CURVATURE Lines of beauty, grace, movement. That which is bent, crooked. Source of the circle and crown. Word cognate with curb. In Japan curves are symbolic of marriage and carry the sentiment: May they grow old gracefully.

CUSCUTA Flower symbolizing meanness.

CUSHION Comfort, ease, luxury, wealth. In heraldry authority. In Buddhism seat of Kubera.

CUSTODIANSHIP Symbolized by a beneficent dragon, a uniformed or armed guard, a watchdog.

CUSTOM In an Italian icon personified by a bearded old man walking and leaning on a staff on which is written, "Vires Acquirat Eundo." He is burdened by musical instruments and a grindstone.

CUTHAH (NETHER CUTHAH)

Babylonian underworld where worms devour the dead. Cognate Hades, Hell, Niflheim, Put.

CUTHBERT Masculine name from Old English, meaning famous and bright, famed for excellence. In England, during World War II, it was applied contemptuously to healthy men of military age who avoided military service by taking jobs in government office or plants manufacturing war materials. The cartoonist Poy represented these civilians as frightened rabbits.

CUTPURSE, MOLL Nickname applied to Mary Frith, a 17th century thief. A cutpurse, the forerunner of the pickpocket, cut the strings by which a purse was attached to the girdle.

CUZCO Capital of the Inca empire. Supposedly founded by Manco Capac and Mama Oglo, offsprings of Sun and Moon, who had been instructed to found a culture center where their golden wedge sank into the ground. Their wedge disappeared at Cuzco, which has been interpreted to mean navel or hub of the universe.

CWN ANNWN (CWN ANNWFN)

In Brythonic mythology hounds of Annwn (Hell) that sweep along the hillsides on stormy nights. They are known to have white bodies and red ears, because they are spectral they are heard rather than seen, and take part in the kidnappings and raids made on this world by the inhabitants of Annwn. Aspects of wind. In Wales associated with the sound of migrating geese. Also called Gabriel's hounds, ratchets, wish hounds, yell hounds, yeth (heath) hounds.

CYBELE (CYBEBE, CYBELLE, KYBEBE, KYBELE) Great mother goddess of Phrygia and Asia

Minor, whose worship was carried into Greece and Rome. Created independent of cohabitation, she was revered as mother-earth, goddess of forests, mountains, and all reproduction in nature. Her son-lover Attis was unfaithful to her, but when he was metamorphosed into a pine tree, Cybele sat under it mourning, and all growth on earth stopped until Zeus promised the tree should remain evergreen. She was attended by bees and lions, by dactyloi and korybantes, and worshiped in orgiastic rites. In her honor men (priests) castrated themselves. See castration, mutilation. The self-emasculatation of Attis explains the eunchized priests, called galli, of Cybele. Her festival was held at the spring equinox with the ringing of cymbals. She wore a turreted crown, signifying that she was a war goddess and founder of cities. The cypress was sacred to her. Her cult existed in Gaul until the 4th century B. C., where she was known as Berecynthia. Variants of Cybele are: Ashtoreth, Bendis, Cotyto, Ishtar, Isis, Ma, Magna Deum Mater, Maia, Ops, Rhea.

CYCLAMEN Flower symbolizing diffidence, voluptuousness. In the language of flowers: Good-bye. Dream significance: catastrophe. By Christians called bleeding nun and suggests the sorrow bleeding in Mary's heart.

CYCLOPS (CYCLOPES, KYKLOPES, KYKLOPS) Greek storm-demons; monstrous incarnations of the sun disk, powers of the air. Later spirits of the volcano. In Hesiod, as energies of the sky, they are the sons of Uranus and Gaea, and their names are Argis (stream of light or thunderbolt), Brontes (thunder), Steropes (lightning). Pyracmon (fire-anvil) is given as an alternate for Argis. In Homer they are a race of one-eyed shepherds, uncouth savage giants, dwelling in mountain caves in Italy; Polyphemus is their chief, and their parents are Poseidon and Amphitrite. They provided Aides with a helmet of invisibility (clouds), and they made the trident with which Poseidon stirred up the sea. A later tradition makes them assistants of Hephaestus, with Mount Etna as their abode. They invented a form of masonry in which huge blocks are fitted together without mortar. For fashioning the thunderbolt which killed Asclepius they were destroyed by Apollo. They personify cruelty, lawlessness, strength, subterranean fires, and their legend suggests that even the rejected may be productive. A tinker's portable forge is called a cyclops. Their name comes from the Greek kyklos (circle) + ops (eye).

CYCNUS (CYGNUS, KYKNOS)

In Greek mythology: (1) Son of Poseidon, father of Tenes and Hemitheia. King of Calonae. Tenes scorned the love of Philonome, Cycnus's second wife. The angered Philonome accused Tenes of improper advances, whereupon he was placed in a chest with Hemitheia and thrown into the sea. Tenes escaped and became king of Tenedos. Later he and Cycnus were reconciled, they aided the Trojans in the war against the Greeks, and both were slain by Achilles. The legend resembles that of Theseus and Hippolytus. (2) Son of Sthenelus. Faithful friend of Phaethon, he pined and wasted away at Phaethon's tragic death. The gods moved to compassion transformed Cycnus into a swan which forever brooded over the spot where Phaethon fell into the water. Typifies the clouds accompanying the setting sun.

CYDIPPE An Athenian maiden at whose feet Acontius threw an apple bearing the words, "I swear by the sanctuary of Artemis that I will wed Acontius." Because she read the words aloud she was held by Artemis as pledged to Acontius.

CYGNUS Constellation in the Milky Way in the Northern Sky. Also known as Northern Cross or the Swan. By Christians called Cross of Calvary. In Greek mythology the constellation represents Orpheus, who was slain by a priestess of Bacchus and placed in the heavens in the shape of a swan near his beloved harp (Lyra).

CYHIRAETH Welsh spectral female demon, heard rather than seen. Her blood-freezing shriek foretells death. Aspect of storm or wind.

CYLINDER External axis of the universe; the erect lingam of unlimited expansion; supporter of the universe.

CYLIX (KYLIX) In Greek and Roman antiquity a shallow cup on a slender leg with small handles at the sides, which were slightly curved but did not rise above the rim. Used chiefly at banquets.
Cyclix and serpent. Hygiene.

CYLLENIUS In Greek mythology another name for Hermes, who was reputedly born on Mount Cylene. Usually shown holding a purse, through the meshes of which coins can be seen, signifying he is protector of merchants. Inasmuch as he also is patron of thieves, Cyllenian art is thievery.

CYMBAL Musical instrument which plays an important part in orgiastic worship, the clashing metallic sound whipping participants into frenzy. Named for its hollow cup-like shape. Through Greek and Latin derived from the Sanscrit root kubja (hump-backed). In regular Buddhist services large metal cymbals are used; small ones are used to call hungry demons to accept offerings. In Tibet called rol-mo, sil-snan, or si-nen. In early Christian church symbolized the eager soul enamored of Christ. Sacred vessel parallel to the Holy Grail. In Greece used in the Bacchanalia. Played in the theater, but looked upon as effeminate. Associated with Ravana, Hindu king of night demons, and with Vishnu, who clashes them in the dance of the Bhadrakali and Isvara. In Israel at the time of David and Solomon, used in ritual accompaniment, daily service in the Temple, the installation of the ark of the covenant, the prophecies of priests, and upon occasions of public rejoicings. Clashed in the worship of Cybele; it was the sacred vessel from which those attending the mystic meal of Cybele and Attis drank. Compare tympanum.

CYMBELINE Celtic lord of the sun or war.

CYMOCHLES In Spenser's Faerie Queene a man of prodigious strength.

CYMODOCÉ In Virgil a sea nymph and companion of Venus. Name meaning wave-receiving.

CYMOPHANE Gem denoting floating light, symbol of babyhood.

CYNOSURA In Greek mythology one of the nurses of Zeus, who placed her among the stars, forming the constellation Ursa Minor.

CYNOSURE The constellation Ursa Minor in the Northern Skies, which contains Polaris. Also a name for the North Star itself, around which the heavens appear to revolve. Since the pole-star is observed by all, cynosure has become a term expressing general attraction or attention; since it serves as a seaman's guide, it expresses guidance, sometimes contemptuously. The name is from the Greek meaning dog tail.

CYNTHIA Feminine name from the Greek, alluding to Mount Cynthus. An epithet of Artemis, the moon goddess, who supposedly was born on the mountain. English poets applied the name to Queen Elizabeth I.

CYPARISSUS Greek youth loved by Apollo. He accidentally killed one of Apollo's favorite stags. This so preyed on his mind he pined away and died. Apollo transformed him into a cypress tree.

CYPRESS February 11 birthday flower signifying a just man. Symbolic of death, despair, eternal sorrow, immortality, mourning, rebirth. In Asia expresses joy and grace. In China a dispenser of health. In ancient Greece an attribute of Aphrodite and carried in the annual procession in which she lamented over the death of Adonis. Also sacred to Cyparissus and Hades. In the Odyssey a tree of resurrection. With myrtle used by the Jews in erecting tents for the Feast of Tabernacles. In Phoenicia, because of its pyramidal form, sometimes replaced the conical stone of Astarte. In Rome sacred to Dis, Pluto, Silvanus, and Venus.

Cypress chest. Preserver.
Cypress coffin. Immortality, resurrection.

Cypress and marigold. Despair, melancholy.

Cypress of Zion. Attribute of Virgin Mary.

CYPRIAN (CYPRIEN) (1) A masculine personal name, of or pertaining to Cyprus. (2) In allusion to Cyprus, formerly famous for the worship of Aphrodite, one who is lascivious, unchaste, a courtesan, a lewd or profligate man, a prostitute.

CYRANO DE BERGERAC Hero of a drama by Edmond Rostand. Timid in love because of the size of his nose, he wins Roxane, whom he adores, for his handsome but stupid friend Christian. Theme probably borrowed from the legend of Helge.

CYRENE In Greek mythology nymph loved by Apollo.

CYRIL (CY, CYR) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning lordly.

CYRUS (1) Masculine name from the Persian, meaning sun. Word allied to chorus. (2) King of Persia, who conquered Babylon and released the Jews from captivity, permitting them to return to Palestine. His victory was marked by its lack of looting. He was killed in battle. In legend he is portrayed as an abandoned child, grandson of Astygages, who dreamed his daughter gave birth to a deluge which flooded Asia. Because of the dream he exposed the infant at birth. Cyrus was found and cared for by a bitch or a herdsman and, when he grew to manhood, he killed his grandfather. A legend attached to sun heroes. See Abandoned children.

Cyprus to Majorca. One end of the Mediterranean to the other; hence from beginning to end.

CYTHEREA A name for Aphrodite, alluding to the island of Cythera near which she reputedly rose from the sea. As Cytherea, she and Ares had an illicit love affair and were caught by Hephaestus, who held them up to ridicule before the Olympian gods.

D

D Fourth in a class or series; fourth rate. Occult significance: produces movement, usually induces travel; its period is four years. Character traits: argumentative, dictatorial, practical, quick tempered. Numerical value; four. Physical weak spot, blood. Planetary correspondence, Jupiter. Symbolic correspondence, fulfillment. Tarot correspondence, the Emperor. As the letter is completely closed like the geometrical symbol the square, typifies barriers, limitations, restrictions.

In music, tone for darkness and winter. Second note of scale of C Major or fourth note of scale of A Minor.

Among gnostics, the Brilliant, alluding either to Deus (Zeus), Dionysus, or Dominus, as god of day or of the shining path that leads unto the Perfect Day. Among Hebrew cabalists, industrious, powerful, self-developing, thrifty, those who love to travel by water. In low form: cruel, egotistic, evil. Roman notation 500, with a dash over it, 500,000 (sometimes 5,000). Derived from the second half of the Etruscan numeral D (1,000).

Parallels Arabic dal, Egyptian hieroglyph hand, Greek delta, Hebrew dalet (door), Irish dair (oak tree). Interchangeable with t, th, and z. See Alphabet Affiliations, Dominical letter.

DA (1) Dahomey, West African serpent, symbolizing all that is sinuous and living, hence all that slips away. Human beings, tree roots, the umbilical cord, etc., has the quality of Da. (2) Personal enemy-defeating god who sits on the right shoulder of every Tibetan. Also called Dab-lha. (3) Word root signifying to burn. Source of Daphne, day.

DAATH In Cabalistic system, a quasi-emanation. Name signifying Knowledge. See Sephira.

DABCHICK A weak bird, incapable of building its own nest, it hatches in the nests of other birds; hence a sensitive or weak person, a hanger-on.

DA-CHA (DAR-LCH'OG) Tibetan flag inscribed with prayers and used as good-luck charms.

DACTYLI (DACTYLS) Greek legendary beings who lived on Mount Ida. Fabulous smiths who discovered iron and copper, and introduced music into Greece.

Originally three, they were known as the Anvil, the Hammer, the Smelter. When they were increased to five their names corresponded to the five fingers: Heracles, the phallic thumb; Paeonius, lucky fore-finger or deliverer from evil; Epimedes, middle or fool's finger, finger of one who thinks too late; Jasius, the physic or healer finger; Idas, oracular little finger or seat of Rhea (or Cybele). Afterwards increased to five males and five females. Connected with the worship of Cybele in Crete. Identical with the Curetes.

DAD (DADDU, DED, TAT)

In Egyptian antiquity amulet in the shape of a fourfold altar symbolizing the backbone of Osiris. It supposedly gave strength to the body and secured entrance into Paradise.

DADHIKRA (DADHIKRAVAN)

Vedic winged horse. The sun.

Sometimes described as an eagle or as a swan dwelling in light. Name means scattering curdled milk in allusion to the dew appearing at sunrise. Also called Etasa and Tarksyas.

DADHYANC Vedic deity with a horse's head and producer of Agni (fire). With the bones of Dadhyanc, Indra slew ninety-nine Vrtras. Probably a form of lightning, the speed of which is symbolized by the horse's head, the thunder by his neighing, the bolt by his bones. Name means milk-curdling.

DADU Babylonian storm and thunder deity. Also known as Addu, Bir, Birqu, Rammanu. Dadu yields brilliant of brilliants and is from the same root as the Romany dado, meaning father, and the English dad and daddy.

DAEDALUS In Greek mythology a descendant of Erechtheus. King Minos of Crete commissioned him to build the labyrinth to house the Minotaur. When Theseus escaped from the labyrinth, Minos was convinced he did so with the help of Daedalus and so imprisoned Daedalus and his son Icarus in the labyrinth. Daedalus contrived wings which he placed on Icarus and on himself with wax, and they escaped. Icarus was drowned but Daedalus reached Sicily safely. Thus Daedalus was an adventurer, architect, contriver, inventor, wanderer. His name is interpreted to mean both cunning worker and bright one. He was no doubt a sacred sun-king, the sun in its productive aspect, and Icarus was his surrogate (see surrogate). Icarus stands to Daedalus in the relation of Phaethon to Helios. As a craftsman Daedalus compares with Hephaestus.

DAEIRA In Greek mythology daughter of Oceanus. In some accounts said to be the mother of Eleusis. She rose from the sea each year with her virginity renewed. Identified with Aphrodite.

DAEMONS In Greek antiquity spirits of the righteous race which existed in the Golden Age and which watched over mankind, carrying prayers to the gods and also gifts. As such, compare with the Roman genii. In modern usage identical with demon, meaning evil-spirit, ghost, hobgoblin. In philosophy, a daemonist is one who holds the controlling mind or minds of the universe to be not absolutely and necessarily good, but capable of acting according to caprice or will.

DAENN Teutonic dwarf or elf.

DAEVA (DAIVA) Zoroastrian word meaning devil. The daevas of Persian mythology are ferocious deformed gigantic spirits under the sovereignty of Eblis. The word is identical with the Hindu deva, meaning god, and the difference in meaning is a result of the hostile relations between Vedic and Zoroastrian belief.

DAFFODIL August 23 birthday flower symbolizing unrequited love. A flower with narcotic properties, hence deceitful hope. In heraldry, chivalry.

DAG (DAGH) In Hebrew tradition the Messiah. Name meaning fish and preserver. Identical with Dagan and Dagon.

DAG (DAGR) In Norse mythology: (1) Day, son of Nacht (Night) and Delling (Dawn). Driver of the jewelled chariot drawn by the steed Skin Faxi. (2) In the Volung Saga son of Hogni, brother of Sigrun. For love of Sigrun, Helge battles her kinfolk and kills them all with the exception of Dag. When Dag takes vows of fellowship, Helge spares his life, but Dag feels the call of blood vengeance is greater than his oath, and he pierces the spear Gungner, given to him by Odin, into Helge's back. A conflict between light and darkness.

DAGAN Babylonian fish-god symbolizing abundance and fertility. An extremely ancient god identical with Dag and Dagon; thought to be identical with Oannes.

DAGDA (DAGHDA) In Irish mythology one of the chief deities of the Tuatha De Danann. Master of the caldron Undry, which provided everyone with food in proportion to his merit and from which none went away without something. A god of earth's fertility he was worshiped as a corn and oak deity; a god of knowledge and wisdom, he was worshiped as a solar deity. He was famed as a harpist (wind deity) and played on a magic living oak harp, and when he played upon it the seasons came in order, winter, then spring, summer, fall. His mistress was Boann, by whom he was the father of Brigit and Oengus. In one account, his wife was Brigit; in another, his wife was a goddess with three names, Breg, Meng, and Meabel (Lie, Guile, and Disgrace), who bore him three daughters all named Brigit, or Brigit the Triple Goddess. Danu also is said to have been his daughter. Other of his children were Bodb the Red, Ceacht, Midir, and Ogma. He became king of the Tuatha De Danann after their defeat by the Milesians, and apportioned the sid among them. Oengus, being absent, a mansion for him was omitted. When Oengus returned, he dispossessed Dagda from his sid and claimed it. In this conflict between father and son, Dagda is the equivalent of Cronus and Oengus of Zeus. Bres, when king, set Dagda to digging ditches and building castles and forts, and when Bres asked him what payment he desired, he requested a scrawny black-maned heifer named Ocean. Bres laughed at what he thought was Dagda's simplicity, but when Dagda led Ocean away all the other cattle followed as it lowed. The last heard of Dagda he was chief cook to Conaire the Great, legendary Irish king. He is portrayed as venerable of aspect and with simple tastes, his favorite food being porridge. Dagda signifies good god. He is also called Daghdae-Cearas and Eochaid Ollathair.

DAGGER Bloody death, treachery, violence. In Buddhism stabber of demons. Christian symbol of martyrdom.

DAGMAR Feminine name from the Danish, originally masculine, meaning day and famous, and from the Old Teutonic, meaning Dane's joy.

DAGOBA Buddhist dome-shaped memorial or shrine built on a mound and containing sacred relics.

DAGOBERT Masculine name from the French, meaning day bright.

DAGON (DAGAN, DAGUN, DAGUNA) Philistine fertility god, usually represented as half man, half fish. An extremely ancient god, Dagon appears to have been an androgynous creator. His name having resemblance to fish (dag) and to grain (dagan), he is regarded by some as a fish god, by others as a corn and grain god. Because of his fish shape, some believe he first was worshiped as a fish god, later as a god of agriculture. In Assyrian mythology, one of the deities who sat in judgment on the souls of the dead in the lower world. Dagon appears to be the name under which Ea was worshiped at Eridu. He was known as Odakon and On, and was the prototype of the god of agriculture Oannes (Iannes, which is identical with Johannes). Dagon is a word allied to dog, dogma, and tag (German for day).

DAGONET, SIR In Arthurian legend fool or jester at King Arthur's court, knighted by King Arthur.

DAH-DAR Buddhist divining arrow, bound with five colors and used in demon worship, especially in Tibet.

DAHAK (DAHAK) Persian devil. Another name for Azhi Dahaka, meaning man with a sarcastic laugh.

DAHLIA August 24 birthday flower, symbolic of dignity, elegance, instability. In the language of flowers, forever yours.

DAIBOSATSU In Japanese legend the Mikado Ojin who, while an unborn infant, conquered Korea. Deified as a Shinto god of war, later a Buddhist god of war under the title Hachiman Daibosatsu.

DAIBUTSU A colossal image of Buddha.

DAI DALOS A Boeotian Greek maker of statues out of oak which were able to see and walk. This notion is no doubt related to oak-king worship.

DAIKOKU (DAIKOKU SAMA, DAIKOKU TEN) In Japanese mythology the Great-Black-Deity.

He combined with O-kuni-nushi to become the god of wealth, one of the Shichi Fukujin. As god of the great heaven and of the north, his colors are blue and black. He is described as dark-skinned and stout, with a smiling face. He carries a bag on his shoulder and stands on two rice bags to symbolize an inexhaustible source of wealth. Each stroke of a mallet in his right hand is believed to produce anything wished for by his worshipers. He is invoked especially by artisans and merchants. His statue in gold is carried as a talisman for prosperity. The rat usually accompanies him. He is a modification of the Hindu Mahakala.

DAIKOKU-BASHIRA The central pillar or king post of a Japanese house; typifies Yabune, the house god.

DAIMON Demon, which see.

DAIMYO (DAIMIO) A Japanese noble under the old feudal regime, who drew revenue from peasants on his estate. Title signifying great name.

DAINICHI-NYORAI In Japanese Buddhism the great illuminator, beneficent sun deity, variously described as a god or goddess. Sometimes regarded as an incarnation of Amaterasu. Also called Birushana or Tathagata Mahavairokana.

DAINN (DAAIN) In Norse mythology maker of runes for the Alfar. One of the four stags that eat the buds of Yggdrasil, the world-tree.

DAINSLEF In Norse mythology magic sword of Hogni. Made by dwarfs.

DAIRE MAC FIACHNA In Irish legend: (1) A chief of Ulster.

Owner of the Brown Bull of Cualgne, desired by Queen Medb of Connaught. When Daire refused to grant her request she waged war against the people of Ulster. The war is interpreted to be a conflict between forces of light and darkness (underworld) for the wealth of fertility. (2) Son of Fionn. Swallowed by a dragon, he hacked his way out, liberating others as well as himself. A resurrection myth resembling that of Jonah.

DAISY (1) April 17 birthday flower symbolizing adoration, innocence, virginity. In the language of flowers, I share your sentiments. If you fail to tread on the first daisy you see in the spring, daisies will grow over you or a loved one. A love oracle, a time oracle; also used by children to discover if they live east, west, north, or south. Word signifying day's eye or eye of the sun. In Christian tradition, an emblem of Christ and of Virgin Mary. (2) Feminine flower name from Latin Margarita and from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning modesty.

Double daisy. In the language of flowers: I partake of your sentiments.

Fresh as a daisy. Full of health and vigor.

Michaelmas daisy. Farewell.

Ox-eye daisy. The sun, a good-luck talisman. Prior to 1941, emblem of North Carolina.

Parti-colored daisy. Beauty.

Red daisy. Unconsciousness.

White daisy. Innocence.

Wild daisy. In the language of flowers: I will think of you.

DAITYA In India evil spirit, sea giant. In Iranian mythology, legendary land and river.

DAIVA In Hinduism a religious marriage in which a daughter with a dowry is given to a priest at a sacrificial rite; a religious offering. dexterity, skill, strength.

DAJOJI In Iroquois mythology the west wind, supporter of the whirlwind. A panther deity. Even the sun hides his face when Dajoji snarls.

DAKINIS Buddhist female divinities of lesser rank; wanderers in the air. Fairies who confer superhuman powers on those who invoke them, but they are prone to anger and their good will must be won. They compare with European witches. The most important of their number is Vajravahira, incarnate in the priestess who heads the Tibetan monastery bSam-ldin. In Nepal this goddess counts as the wife of Siva in the form of Bhavani. Generally shown nude and in dancing attitude, sometimes with animal heads. Their usual emblems are: kapala, karttka, khatvanga. In Tibet they are called mKa-gro-ma.

DAKSHA In Vedic mythology an Aditya, both father and son of Aditi. An aspect of the sun and a creator god. In the Brahmanas, identified with the creator Prajapati and worshiped as an incarnation or son of Brahma. According to the Mahabharata, he sprang from the right thumb of Brahma. He had many daughters, the number given variously as 24, 50, or 60. Ten of these he gave to Dharma, thirteen to Kasyapa, one to Siva, twenty-seven to Soma. The wives of Dharma and Kasyapa became the mothers of gods, men, and all living things. The wives of Soma became the Naksatras. He excluded Siva, his son-in-law, from the sacrifice. A catastrophe followed when Siva, in rage, showed his power, and Daksha finally propitiated Siva that peace might be restored (storms ended). His name is interpreted to mean DAKSINAGNI Hindu fire of the atmosphere associated with dead ancestors. Fire of Vayu; one of the three sacred fires, the other two being Ahavaniya and Garhapatya.

DALAI LAMA God-king or King-priest of Tibet; temporal ruler of Tibet; head of the Go-lug-pa, with his seat at Lhasa, sacred city. The living Buddha; incarnation of Chenresi or of the Bodhistva Avalokitesvara, the God of Mercy. When the Dalai Lama dies he enters heavenly fields and his soul is reincarnated in the body of a child born within a certain period of time after his death; the child's identity is determined by state oracles and astrologers. Historical figure deified; usually shown with monk's hood. Compare Dharmapala of gNas-c'un and Tashi Lama.

DALETH Fourth letter of the Hebrew alphabet with a numerical value of four, meaning door or curtain, i.e. through which the sun enters each day, thus typifying light. Sometimes the meaning is given as breast, typifying nourishment. According to mystics its correspondence in the tarot deck is the Emperor, its planetary correspondence is Jupiter, its symbolic correspondence is fulfilment. Its color is green, its direction is east on the cube of space, its intelligence is luminous, the subconscious with no power of inductive reasoning but perfect power of deductive reasoning, associated with a life of wisdom and folly, revealing ambition and strong character. In white magic its divine correspondence is Dagoul; it is assigned to angels of the Masmalim or fourth order, who are Dominions of current theology, and by their ministry are elaborated the diverse forms of matter, especially of the human body. Daleth also appears in the Phoenician alphabet as the fourth letter.

DALHAN Arab cannibal who rides an ostrich and feasts on human wrecks along the shore. Wind demon.

DALLAS Masculine name from Teutonic meaning playful, and from Old Irish, meaning skilled.

DALMATIC Bishop's and deacon's vestment worn during the celebration of high mass in the Roman Catholic Church. Symbolizes joy, justice, salvation.

DAMARU Sanscrit for skull drum; a human skull drum used to mark pauses between Buddhist services. A symbol of ferocious or tantric manifestation of the deities. In Tibetan, c'an t'su.

DAMASCUS Celebrated metropolis of Syria; now probably the oldest city in the world, located on a river in a fertile plain surrounded by a vast desert and bounded on all sides by mountains. Under Nero tens of thousands of Jews were martyred at one time in the city. It was the scene of the conversion of Paul to Christianity. Throughout history one of the most beautiful and luxurious regions in the world; although many of its private dwellings appear outwardly mean, they have costly decorations in the interiors. It has been called paradise on earth, and Mohammed supposedly refused to enter it lest he thereby forfeit his heavenly paradise. It has become important as a missionary station for all nations, and remains a stop over for those who would cross the desert. It contains a street named "Straight," referred to in the Bible. It has given its name to damask, a silk, and its steel has played an important part in history.

DAMAYANTI In Hindu legend a wife who searches for her lost husband. See Nala.

DAM-C'AN (DAM-CHEN) Those who have taken Buddhist vows in Tibet; oath bound.

DAM-C'AN-R-DO-RJE-LEGS-PA (DAM-CHEN-DOR-JE-LE-PA, DOR-LE) Tibetan Buddhist demon; chief of demon kings subdued by Padmasambhava. Shown seated on a lion with a green mane, wearing Tibetan costume, carrying kapala and vajra. He is surrounded by kings similar in appearance but with different animals and symbols.

DAME AUX CAMELIAS, LA Title of a novel by Alexander Dumas the Younger. The lady of the camelias is one of easy virtue, who is reformed through her great love for Armand Duval, a sentimentalist. A courtesan, prostitute.

DAME BERTHA AND SIR MARTIN Any Tom, Dick, and Harry; persons chosen at random from a crowd, usually used disparagingly.

DAME CELIA In Spenser's Faerie Queene mother of Faith, Hope, and Charity. She lived in a hospice named Holiness.

DAME DURDEN A country housewife who was served by five man servants and five maid servants. Subject of English comedy.

DAME PARTLET Hen in Reynard the Fox and in Chaucers Nonne Prestes Tale.

DAMIA In Greek mythology goddess of health, worshiped only by women.

DAMIETTA A capital city in lower Egypt representing the ancient Pagan world as Rome stands for the modern Christian world.

DAMKINA (DAUKE, DAWKINA)

In Babylonian mythology a sky deity, queen of the gods; a health goddess invoked by women in labor. Her worship dates back to Sumer, and she is variously said to be the consort of Anu (which identifies her with Anatu) and of Ea. By Ea mother of Bel, lord who created mankind. In some versions Marduk is said to be her son. As queen of the deep, she is known as Nin-ki, and as queen of earth, she is known as Gashan-ki.

DAMNED One condemned to eternal punishment; one who is cursed, evil, or a failure. In Dante's Inferno, those damned are in hell, aware of the past and indistinctly cognizant of the future, but without knowledge of present events on earth. After Judgement Day, when life on earth shall come to an end, the foresight of lost souls will no longer be possible.

DAMOCLES A courtier in the service of the tyrant Dionysus of Syracuse. Because he envied his master for his pleasures, power, and wealth, he was ordered to sit at a sumptuous banquet with a sword suspended by a single hair above his head to make him realize the precariousness of a tyrant's life. Thus Damocles' sword symbolizes evil dreaded or foreboded.

DAMOETAS A herdsman or shepherd. A name used by Theocritus and Virgil in their pastorals.

DAMON A goatherd, a rustic swain, alluding to the goatherd in Virgil's Eclogues.

Damon and Pythias. Inseparable friends. When Pythias was condemned to death by the Syracusan tyrant Dionysus, he asked leave to go home to put his affairs in order, and Damon placed himself as hostage, agreeing to be executed if Pythias did not return. Pythias was delayed on his return journey and arrived just as Damon was about to be executed. Dionysus, overcome by this display of honorable friendship, pardoned them both. The name Pythias is an error; it should be Phintias. Probably a seasonal myth, with spring returning late.

DAMONA Gaulish goddess of cattle. Word cognate with dam (English for mother, Irish for ox), dame, damn, dome, doom, madam.

DAMU In Babylonian mythology a friendly spirit who inspired pleasant dreams and relieved the suffering of the afflicted. A form of Tammuz.

DAN (1) In Assyrian mythology an appellation of the sun god. (2) In Old Testament; (a) fifth son of Jacob, 1st son of Bilhah, a handmaid of Rachel. He was a judge and founded the tribe of Dan, one of the twelve tribes of Israel, and second only to that of Judah in numbers before entering Canaan. The tribe of Dan governed the zodiacal house of Scorpio and is symbolized by a serpent. (b) Town, formerly called Laish, to which members of the tribe of Dan migrated. It was an idolatrous city and later the seat of one of the golden calves (sun idols) of Jeroboam. Dan being the most northerly and Beersheba being the most southerly city in the Holy Land, the phrase from Dan to Beersheba signifies from beginning to end, from one end of the world to the other. (3) A title of honor identical with don or sir. Now obsolete, except in Dan Cupid.

DANACE In Greek mythology obolus or coin placed in the mouth of the dead as a fee for the boatman Charon, who ferried the dead over the river Styx.

DANAE In Greek mythology daughter of Acrisius, king of Argos. Warned by the Delphian oracle that if his daughter had a son, he would be killed by the child, Acrisius locked Danae in a tower. Zeus, in the form of a shower of gold, visited her, and she became the mother of Perseus. Acrisius placed Danae and the child adrift in a chest, which was carried by the waves to Seriphos, where she and Perseus were rescued. When he grew to manhood, Perseus accidentally killed his grandfather, thus fulfilling the prophecy. Danae is a dawn or earth mother, the shower of gold being warm rays.

DANAIDES In Greek mythology the fifty daughters of Danaus, king of Argos. Pursued by their cousins, the fifty sons of Aegyptus, the Danaides finally married them. Warned a son-in-law would kill him, Danaus commanded his daughters on their common wedding night to slay their husbands; all except Hypermnestra, wife of Lynceus, obeyed him, burying their heads in marsh land and their bodies at the gates of the city. For this they were thrown into Tartarus and condemned to fill sieves with water from leaky jars for eternity. In time Lynceus fulfilled the prophecy and killed Danaus to avenge the deaths of his brothers. According to one interpretation, the Danaides were fountains or springs which dried up in summer. The pursuit of the sons of Aegyptus was the rushing of mountain streams, which swelled during the rainy season and overwhelmed the fountains. After a time the torrential streams became more scanty than the fountains, thus the streams had been slain by their wives, who had cut off the waters from their source. The heads were in marsh lands, whereas the bodies (river beds) were exposed naked to all. Lynceus was probably another name for Lyrceios or Inachos, a river which did not dry up. In another interpretation, the emasculation and murder by the Danaides represents the harvest ritual in which grain is hewed down and a sacred king is sacrificed. Lynceus is saved because a surrogate is offered. The task of filling a bottomless jar (heaven) with water drawn in leaky vessels (clouds) typifies that which is impossible of achievement and purposeless. It has several explanations. Probably the fifty daughters were originally priestesses of the agricultural or barley goddess Danae, earth-mother of Perseus, and the pouring of the water was a rain-bringing charm. Or the water-carriers in Tartarus were unintiated, therefore polluted or unclean and were condemned to everlasting labor. From this myth developed a rain-charm associated with the cult of the dead. Bottomless jars were placed on the graves of young or unmarried women, thirsty-ones, who would put an end to drought when their own thirst was quenched. The fifty children of Danaus and Aegyptus compare with those of Asterodia, Endymion, Nereus.

DANAUS In Greek mythology king of Argos. Son of Belus, brother of Aegyptus, father of the Danaides. The Argives and eventually the Greeks collectively were called Danaï. For his legend, see Danaides.

DANAVAS Hindu devils, evil spirits, sea giants; monsters.

DANCE Dedication, exaltation, festivity, prayer, religious ritual, vitality; also debauchery, licentiousness, sensuality, sociability, war. In ancient mysteries imitation of the sun on its course. Probably originally a dance was suited to the worship of each season. In the Middle Ages, a curse was laid by dancing nine times counter to the passage of the sun, around a house, object, or person. Among certain tribes, when someone has died, dancing goes on all through the day and night to the accompaniment of drums to keep evil spirits and witches away. Among some primitive people, when a man is too old to perform a ceremonial dance, he passes it on to one younger and ceases to exist socially. The can-can was originally a frenzied sun-dance; the waltz appears to have been a whorl or whirl which honored the sun. Dream significance: (dancing) gaiety, (seeing it) bad omen. Mystics believe dancing is the merging of self-consciousness with subconsciousness and the blending of the super-consciousness. Symbols of the dance are cymbals, flutes, music, pipes of Pan, thrysus. Compare Orchesis.

Among American Indians dancing was a dramatic prayer addressed to nature powers, givers of food and game, rain-bringers, etc. California Indians had a nocturnal dance variously known as the burning or the cry, in which the dancing was accompanied by wailing and various articles were burned to supply the ghosts of the dead with their needs (the souls of burned articles went off to meet the dead). The rite coincided with the death of nature. The Indians had a bean dance for fertility, a snake dance for rain-bringing; they had medicine dances, war dances, etc. Ancient Britons had dance stones. On festive occasions, men dyed themselves blue in honor of the sky, and with their wives and children danced in circles, bowing to the stone altar. Caer Sidi or Revolving Castle typifies a dance of the heavens. In Chinese antiquity after the first plowing of the year, at the ceremonial worship of earth, the emperor only was permitted to perform the dance. It was as solemn as the Christian Easter ceremonies, performed at the same time of the year and in exactly the same way as the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. The emperor turned to the east, then to the west. The music played was similar to a Gregorian chant, bells were rung, censers swung before the altar, three grains of rice (equivalent of the Christian wafer) were laid on the emperor's tongue and he drank rice wine. Early Christianity mentions a circular dance called Orchesis and a sacred all-night festival called Chorostasia in imitation of the Angelic Dance and ceaseless hymnody of the Creator. The Christian carol, choir or chorale are survivals of pre-Christian rites of troubadours in which singers moved slowly in a circle as they sang. In Greece dances were performed at sacrificial ceremonies accompanied by hymns, generally composed in honor of a deity and containing an account of the deity's most noted actions. Dances accompanied the Bacchanals, Eleusinian mysteries, etc. Terpsichore personified the dance. The word for dancing in Hebrew signified to leap for joy, and dances were expressive of religious gratitude and joy or of domestic joy, but only by one of the sexes and usually in the daytime in the open air. David led men in the dance; Miriam led the women of Israel. Dances never were held for amusement, except by vain sinners. In Hinduism, Pund-jel, creator god, danced to inspire life. In Madagascar sisters and wives dance day and night, never ceasing, while men are at war to impart courage, good fortune, and strength to the warriors. In New Guinea, a dance was performed and a dancing belt was given as an insignia of adulthood or exalted rank. Compare circumcision, initiation. In ancient Rome, dancing became associated with drinking, feasting, and orgies.

Dance macabre. Dance of death; a popular subject in various arts in the Middle Ages. Also called macaberesque. The origin of the name is in doubt. It has been guessed that Macaber was the name of a painter who first arranged a series illustrating the dance of death, or the word may be derived from makbara, Arabic for funeral chamber, or it may mean dance of the Maccabees.

Dance of Saint Vitus. Chorea.

Dance on nothing. Be hanged (one's feet being in the air).

Dance on a volcano. Be recklessly gay in the presence of danger.

Dancing girl. Carnal devotion, fascination, festivity, grace, revelry, sexual appetite.

DANCETTE In heraldry, with deep indentations, toothed.

DANDA Buddhist staff surmounted by a skeleton or a vajra (thunderbolt). Emblem of Ekajata, Hayagriva, Yama. Compare khakkhara.

DANDELION September 27 birthday flower, symbol of bitterness, coquetry, grief. Sun emblem. Flower governing Leo. When in seed, blown on by lovers; if all seeds fly off at once the blower is loved passionately, a few seeds remaining indicates some unfaithfulness; many remaining indicates indifference. Also a time oracle. Symbolic of Christ's Passion as a bitter herb.

DANE JOHN A tumulus within the precincts of Canterbury; sun altar. This may be equated with donjon or dungeon, i.e. tower or main keep of a castle. Its meaning is don or dun (fort, hill, or stronghold) of Jon or Geon.

DANGER Symbolized by a dagger, skull and crossbones, the color red, red flag, red light, etc. In an Italian icon, personified by a young man treading on a snake which bites his leg. To his right is a precipice, to his left is a torrent. Lightning flashes. His staff is weak.

DANIEL (DAN) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning the Lord is judge. (2) Hebrew prophet. With three companions, Azariah, Hananiah, and Mishael, he was taken as a hostage to Babylon. He declined to pollute himself by eating provisions from the king's table, or to be defiled by connection with idol-worship. However his dream interpretations won him a promotion to higher office, and the envy of others at court caused him to be cast into a den of lions for continuing to pray to his own God while in captivity. Like his three companions, who had been thrown into a fiery furnace, he emerged from the lion's den unhurt, and was restored to his high position. He was terrified by the apparition of the hand which wrote upon the wall, and that night was slain. Daniel is regarded as one of the most spotless characters on record. Throughout his life he maintained his integrity. In the lion's den he parallels Ra passing nightly through the body of a serpent, i. e. the sun sets, passes through the monstrous dark, and rises again to its exalted position high in the sky. As one resurrected he resembles Christ, Jonah, Orpheus, etc. He also is referred to as a dragon (lion-monster) slayer and compared with Saint George. He usually is represented in a lion's den or between two lions praying.

DANTE (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning the enduring. (2) Poet in whose works punishments fit the crimes. As one who visits the underworld and returns, Dante is one resurrected, and compares with mythological heroes, such as Aeneas, Hercules, Izanagi, Orpheus.

DANTON, GEORGES JACQUES

French revolutionary leader. Victim of the Reign of Terror, which he helped to create.

DANU (1) See Anu 2. (2) In Vedic mythology the parent of Vrtra, demon serpent.

DANWANTAREE Hindu god of physic, who rose from the sea to confer inestimable benefits on the human race. Compares with Asclepius.

DAONUS (DAOS) Legendary shepherd who ruled one of the mythical ages of Babylonia for 36,000 years and then departed for the abyss. A fertility deity identical with Tammuz.

DAPHNE (1) In Greek mythology daughter of Peneus, river god. In fleeing from Apollo, who was enamored of her, she became so exhausted she called upon the gods to come to her rescue. As Apollo was about to embrace her, the gods transformed her into a laurel tree. The sun loves the dawn; because Apollo (sun) cannot be faithful but is impelled to move on, Daphne (dawn) flees from him. He pursues her, but the sun's embrace is fatal; dawn must die. The name Daphne is from the root da, meaning to burn. Her legend resembles that of Britomartis, Derketo, and Artemis in her flight from Alpheios. (2) A shrub symbolizing fame, glory. In the language of flowers: Sweets to the sweet.

Daphnephoria. A festival celebrated every ninth year at Thebes in ancient Greece in honor of Apollo.

DAPHNIS In Greek mythology son of Hermes and a Sicilian nymph. He was protected by Artemis and taught by Pan and the Muses. A shepherd, he supposedly invented bucolic poetry.

DAPPLE The donkey ridden by Sancho Panza in Cervantes' Don Quixote.

DARAGO In Philippine mythology evil wife of the evil spirit Mandarangan. They control the fortunes of warriors and must be appeased with human sacrifice each year.

DARAMULUM (THUREMLIN)

Chief god of the Yuin (Australia). Son of Baiame. He lived ages ago on earth with his mother Ngallalbal and planted trees on bare stone-like land before man appeared on earth. After the flood that left only a few people he crawled to a mountain-top; from there he climbed into the sky, where he remains watching over men. He is the giver of laws and his voice is heard in the thunder (bull-roarer). He meets the shadow (tulugal) when a man dies and takes care of it. His name is unknown to women. He plays an important part in the initiation rites of the Wonghi of New South Wales. A group of boys approaching manhood are initiated in a ceremony which only men may witness; women forbidden to see it under penalty of death. The youths are taken before Daramulum and pretended to be cut up. He restores them to life and knocks a tooth out of the mouth of each. While the teeth are being knocked out a bull-roarer is swung around to produce a loud humming sound. The uninitiated are not allowed to see the bull-roarer.

DARBY Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning a freeman.

DARBY AND JOAN A virtuous couple celebrated for their conjugal felicity in a ballad attributed to Henry Woodfall.

DARCY Masculine name from Old French, meaning from the ark or stronghold.

DARDANUS In Greek mythology son of Zeus and Electra. Husband of Batea. Fertility deity. Legendary ancestor of the Trojan line. He founded Dardania at the foot of Mount Ida, and received as a gift from Zeus the Palladium, the capture of which was necessary for the fall of Troy.

DARIUS (DARIAN) (1) Masculine name through the Greek from the Persian dara (king) and the Sanscrit darj (maintainer), meaning possessing wealth. (2) The name of several Persian kings. Darius

III or Darius Codomanus was the last king of Persia to be defeated by Alexander the Great; he finally was killed by his own generals, thus verifying the prophecies of Daniel, who had foretold of the enlargement of the Persian monarchy under the symbol of the ram, butting with its horns northward, southward, and westward, which nothing could resist, and its destruction by a goat having a large horn between its eyes (Alexander the Great) coming from the west and overrunning the world without touching the earth. According to one legend, Alexander asked Darius for a tribute of golden eggs. The king answered, "The bird that laid them has flown to the other world, where Darius must seek them." He then sent Alexander a ball and bat to ridicule the general's youth, but Alexander informed the messengers that, with the bat, he would beat the ball of power from the hands of Darius. Darius then sent Alexander a bitter melon to signify the grief that awaited the general; whereupon Alexander declared that Darius would eat his own fruit.

DARKNESS Evil, female principle, future, gloom, ignorance, mystery, obscurity, secrecy, somberness, the unknown, winter. In most parts of the world dark colors at weddings are regarded as unlucky. In mythology a dark complexion is that of a deity of death, night, sleep, storms, or of the underworld. According to mystics, subconscious field of divine operation. In Buddhism the downward path. In Christianity spiritual need. In Old Testament adversity; suggests the absence of stars, hence the fall of chief men and national convulsions.

Dark ages. Period between the fall of the Roman Empire (476 A. D.) and the beginning of the 13th century; so called on account of its supposed intellectual inferiority.

Dark and Bloody Ground. A nickname for the state of Kentucky, either because of its Indian warfare or because it is a translation of the Indian name for the state.

Dark continent. Africa. So called either because the character of the continent remained unknown until very recent years or because of the dark races predominating there.

Dark Warriors. In China serpent and tortoise, who together symbolized the north. In Japan the tortoise is the Dark Warrior.

Egyptian darkness. The plague in Egypt as described in the Bible.
Prince of Darkness. Satan.

DARLEEN Feminine invented name, probably after darling and Eileen.

DARNEL Vice.

DARONWY Celtic thunderer; an oak deity.

DART Hunting, killing, swiftness. The phallus; also male destructive power. Ray of the sun. Implement of the god of love and of evil kings. In divination, word of the deity; by extension gossip, rumor.

DARUMA Japanese legless tumbling doll, which, when thrown down, bounces back, symbolizing undaunted spirit. A good-luck charm. A name related to Sanscrit dharma (law).

DARWIN Masculine name from Teutonic, meaning darling friend, from Cymric, meaning oak, and from Anglo-Saxon meaning deer's friend.

DARYL Feminine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning dearly loved.

DASAGVAS In Hinduism seers who aided Indra in the recovery of the kine (fertile rain). A name which implies they won ten cows in the exploit.

DASARA Hindu festival celebrated at the end of the monsoon (roughly the beginning of October). It lasts for ten days and commemorates the destruction of the demon Mahesh-asura by Bhavani and also the great war between the Pandavas and the Kauravas. The tenth day, on which weapons are hallowed, has been held as an auspicious day for the beginning of military enterprises. In Bengal called Durgapuja.

DASAS (DASYUS) Vedic demons, enemies of mankind, withholders of sun and of water. In later usage the word denoted slaves. Compare with the Greek Laus. Dasa is a name sometimes applied to Vrtra as the enemy of Indra.

DASCYLUS In Greek mythology king of the Mariandynians, who presided at the games at which Heracles killed Titias. He was both father and son of Lycus (wolf), and appears to have been an oak deity or king, the wolf being closely connected with the oak cult. The name means little pointer and, at athletic festivals, the king or president used the pointer-finger for warning against foul play.

DASIM Mohammedan demon of discord. Son of Eblis.

DASRA AND NASATYA The Hindu Asvins.

DASSE Wife of the Mantis in Bushman folklore.

DATE According to occultists the lucky dates of a month are 1, 3, 7, 9, 10, 12, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28; the unlucky dates or days are 2, 5, 11, 13, 15, 18, 30. The remaining dates, which are neither lucky nor unlucky are 4, 6, 8, 14, 23, 24, 25, 26, 29.

DATE PALM Desert food. Sumerian tree of life, probably because it is a tree of two sexes, also because its fruit bears resemblance to the human hand. It is the tree of Anu's heaven, and in art shown growing out of a spring of water in much the same manner that the Yggdrasil grows in Teutonic mythology. It is called Manu in Sumerian, which is the probable source of the manna of the Israelites. In China signifies progeny. Christian emblem of Saint Aniano. In Moslem tradition when Adam was driven out of Eden, he took three things with him: dates, chief of fruits; ear of wheat, chief of all kinds of food; myrtle, chief of all sweet-scented flowers in the world.

DATHAN With Abiram and Korah, he conspired to overthrow the authority of Aaron and Moses in the wilderness.

DATURA An ill-smelling weed used as a narcotic to get luck in gambling, especially by Mexican and Southern Californian Indians. As a trance producer used by ancient Mexicans to discover a thief; also was used in religious ceremonies.

DAUGAWA In Baltic mythology the Great Water. It flows back at evening because it is full of the souls of the departed. At midnight a star descends to the house of the dead.

DAUPNER In Norse mythology the magic gold ring which grew into a chain without end. Constructed by the kinsmen of Sindre. An emblem of fertility and fruitfulness.

DAVID (DAVE, DAVEY, DAVY, TAFFY) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning well beloved. (2) King of Israel. The son of Jesse of Bethlehem, he was set to watch sheep thus, having been made a shepherd, he was a despised son who rose to an exalted rank. He battled the giant Goliath, a conflict typifying light overcoming darkness, wisdom overcoming ignorance, and placing David in the ranks with other demon-killers, such as Indra, Marduk, Odysseus, Perseus. He was anointed by Samuel and, with his harp, he relieved the mind of King Saul, who was oppressed by melancholy. Saul, however, became jealous of him, and he was forced to flee for his life. After the death of Saul, fulfilling the prophecy of Samuel, David became king of all Israel. He provided Uriah with a letter of death, which brought Uriah into the first ranks of battle where he was killed. David then married Bathsheba, Uriah's widow. On the mythological level, David, the sun, caused Uriah, night or winter, to be slain, and married Bathsheba, the dawn or spring. As the writer of a death-letter David parallels Proetus. As a sun-hero, the weapons of David were magical and never missed their mark. David was the father of Amnon, who violated his sister, David's daughter Tamar; he was the father of Absalom, who revolted against him, and of Adonijah who revolted against Solomon, the son who inherited David's throne. David was musician, poet, statesman, and warrior. He led the men of Israel in the joyous dance which honored the sun. He is worshiped as the ancestor of a Messiah, Christ supposedly descending from David. He is usually portrayed as a shepherd boy with a sling and the head of Goliath or in royal robes with a rayed diadem and harp.

DAVUS An uncouth menial. A name of slaves in Greek and Roman plays.

DAVY JONES Humorous name for the personification or spirit of the sea; hence Davy Jones' locker is the bottom of the sea, especially the grave of those drowned. Davy appears to be a corruption of Duffy or Duppy, West Indies Negro name for a ghost; Jones is a corruption of Jonah.

DAWEN Irish sacred cow. Cognate with dawn. Frequently the dawn goddesses is the guardian of the herds (cows or nourishing clouds) of heaven, and provides the earth with nourishing liquid in the form of dew.

DAWN Awakening, brightness unfolding, to begin to expand or give promise. Driver away of ghosts, overcomer of darkness, resurrection. Universally a dawn goddess is pursued and overcome by the god of the morning sun. She is thus mother (dawn gives birth to the sun) and wife of the sun whose embrace is fatal to her. The sun goes on his way, unfaithful to the dawn, but at the end of the day is reunited with her resurrected glow (gloaming). The glance or touch of the dawn is as fatal as that of the sun; when she gazes on the dew, the sparkling drops vanish, and in the evening, as gloaming, she kills the sun, lingering to watch him sink below the horizon. Beauty and the beast marriages are usually dawn myths. The beautiful dawn maiden is married to an unsightly monster (darkness, night, or winter), who by reason of her love becomes beautiful, transforms into the morning sun or spring growth. The dawn-maiden is also the spring-maid bringing the return of light and warmth.

DAWNS MEN Literally, dance stones. A Cornish name for stone circles. Ancient Britons dyed themselves blue and danced in circles, bowing to a stone altar in a rite honoring or welcoming the sun. See dance, Orchestis.

DAY Enlightenment, growth, principle of good, prosperity, surety, wisdom. Symbols of day are the morning star, sun, white; Mau, the Egyptian cat-god. Day and night are symbolized by white and black. The word is derived through the Latin dies from the Sanscrit Dyaus. Dianus, a form of the Latin deity Janus, derives from the same root. The word day is related to dagh (Hebrew for fish), dog, and tag (German for day).

The day is measured as natural, civil, and artificial. A natural day is one revolution of the earth on its axis; the civil day is determined by the custom of a nation; the artificial day is the time of the sun's continuance above the horizon, which is unequal according to each season on account of the obliquity of the equator. Sacred writers usually divide the day into twelve hours. In most Asiatic countries, an animal is assigned to carry each of the twelve two-hour periods of the day (see under animal). The Babylonians began their civil day at sunrise; the Greeks and Hebrews began theirs at sunset; the Romans began their day at midnight, a practice continued in the modern world; and Umbrians began their day at noon. If the moon is used as a reference point, the term is lunar day; if a star is used, sidereal day; if the sun is used, solar day. The word is often used for an indeterminate period. The prophetic day usually is understood to be a year. In speaking of a year as a day, it is composed of four periods: midnight to sunrise (spring), sunrise to noon (summer), noon to sunset (autumn), sunset to midnight (winter). Frequently a comparison is made to the four stages of man: childhood, adolescence, maturity, old age. Compare year. According to the mystics, Sunday, a day of joy and repose, is unlucky for any undertaking; Monday is a day of calm and sweetness; Tuesday is a day of failures, quarrels, and struggles; Wednesday is a day of success; Thursday is a day which requires courage and will-power; Friday is a day of passion (the Roman Senate did not sit on Friday); Saturday is a day of danger and death; day of finalities.

The days of the week and their attributes according to a medieval chart:

Day	Color of Robe of High Priest	Robe Gems	Talismanic Gems
Sunday, day of works of light	purple	topaz, diamond	pearl
Monday, day of works of divination and mystery	white and silver	pearl, crystal	emerald
Tuesday, day of works of wrath	red	emerald, topaz	ruby
Wednesday, day of works of science	green	amethyst, lodestone	turquoise
Thursday, day of works of politics or religion	scarlet	carnelian, sapphire	sapphire
Friday, day of works of love	sky-blue	cat's-eye, emerald	ruby
Saturday, day of works of mourning	black and orange	diamond, turquoise	amethyst

According to a Roman chart, the planets and gems assigned to the days are:

Day	Governing Planet	Zodiacal Sign	Gem
Sunday	Sol	Sun	diamond
Monday	Luna (Diana)	Cancer or Moon	moonstone
Tuesday	Mars	Scorpio	jasper
Wednesday	Mercury	Gemini	rock crystals
Thursday	Jupiter	Sagittarius	carnelian
Friday	Venus	Taurus	emerald
Saturday	Saturn	Capricornus	turquoise

Day after the fair. Too late to see anything.

Day of Atonement. Yom Kippur. Among Jews the most solemn season of the year; a period of penitence from sunset on the 9th of the month of Tishri to sunset on the 10th day.

Day of Judgment. Last day of the life of the world; day on which all men will be judged.

Day of the new moon. Rosh Chodesh, which literally is head of the month. First day of the Jewish month.

Day of the sun. In China the 4th, 11th, 18th, and 25th of each moon or 28 days; equivalent to Christian sabbaths.

Day of Wrath. Last day of the life of the world; day on which divine wrath will be kindled against the wicked.

Every dog has his day. A day or time of action or influence comes to everyone.

Fish day. Among Roman Catholics Friday or any other feast day on which meat is not eaten.

Guy Fawkes Day. In England day commemorating the execution of Guy Fawkes, a Roman Catholic who had undertaken to kill James I by means of gunpowder on November 5, 1605. Guy Fawkes was betrayed.

Inauguration Day. In the United States, day on which the president assumes office. Formerly March 4th, currently the January 1st following election.

Lady Day. March 25, day of the Annunciation of Virgin Mary.

Palmy days. Happy or prosperous days, alluding to those of a gladiator when he went to receive the palm branch as a reward of his prowess.

Quarter days. In England, the days celebrating each season of the year; also rent days. Lady Day, March 25; Midsummer Day, June 24; Michaelmas Day, September 29; Christmas Day, December 25.

Red-letter day. A fortunate or lucky day; in allusion to the practice of printing holy days (holidays) in red in medieval almanacs and calendars.

DAZBOG (DAZBBOG) In Russian mythology the giving-god. Son of Svarog, brother of Svarozic. Czar Sun, identical with the Greek Helios. Grandfather of the Russians. In Pagan Siberia, god of life, prosperity, and sunshine. In a Serbian fairytale called Dajbog (Dabog) and treated as an evil being opposed to God. In early Christian times Pagan deities were looked upon as devils.

dBAN-MGON Listed as if spelt Ban-mgon.

DEAD, THE In some traditions, daimons of fertility, guardian spirits, providers of wealth; in others vengeful spirits. Primitive people, in homeopathic magic, render enemies blind, deaf, or dumb by the use of dead man's bones or anything tainted by the infection of death. Mirrors are covered or turned to the wall while a dead body is in the house because the soul of a living person, projected out of the body in the shape of his reflection in the mirror, may be carried off by a ghost of the dead body. The custom of refusing to sleep in the house with a corpse relates to the fear that the ghost may lure the soul of the living. To prevent the ghost from walking abroad, the corpse is usually guarded by a death-watcher. Compare corner stone. Ancient Chinese believed the departed good and great lived in heaven, subordinate to Shang-ti, but were able to come and go at will, carrying out the commands of the Supreme Ruler. They assisted in the affairs of their descendants on earth, showing no partiality and administering chastisement to those who did evil. No hell existed, nor any punishment in another world. The only punishment for the evil in the spirit world was one of negation and privation, the lack of and the craving for things formerly enjoyed on earth. Trees were planted on graves to strengthen the soul and save the body from decay. Evergreens were chosen for their vitality. Thus trees on graves were identified with the souls of the dead; sometimes the souls of the dead took up their abode in the trees. The Christian Feast of All Souls at the beginning of November has been borrowed from an ancient pagan festival connected with the death of fertility. In Japanese Buddhism death symbolizes hope. The dead, for whom prayers are said, are on their way to a higher state. In Shintoism the dead are givers of life and of welath, protectors of their descendants, representatives of the past; they are ghosts or world rulers who cause decay, rain, ripenings, tides, wind.

Dead leaves. Autumn or winter; sadness.

Deadly sins. The seven Christian deadly sins are: anger, covetousness, envy, gluttony, lust, pride, sloth.

Dead Sea. Sea which occupies the deepest depression in the earth's surface; so called because it contains such a great amount of salt no living thing can survive in it.

Dead Sea apple. A beautiful fruit mentioned in the Old Testament as growing near the Dead Sea. When bitten it turned to ashes. Hence any empty pleasure; that which tempts the eyes and brings no other reward. Also called apple of Sodom and Dead Sea fruit.

Pay for a dead horse. Pay for something after it has lost its value.

The king is dead! Long live the king! A formula for asserting the unbroken functioning of government, alluding to the ceremony during the reign of French kings in which one truncheon or staff was broken and another flourished.

Unburied dead. Anciently a terrible curse inflicted on criminals, paupers, and those who offended the state. Wandering souls, eaters of offal and drinkers of impure water.

Wait for dead men's shoes. Wait for an inheritance or an advantage.

DEAN (DEANE) Masculine name from Middle English, meaning valley.

DEATH (1) Card in the tarot deck illustrated by a skeleton cutting off feet, hands, and heads, signifying the dividing period of a mortal's life. Attainment: change, progress (death and re-birth). In divination corresponds to number 14 and the Hebrew letter nun. Denotes: ascent of the spirit into divine spheres; creation, destruction, recreation; the natural transit of man; perpetual movement; also contrarities, corruption, mortality, sudden change. When reversed, hope destroyed, inertia. Generally a bad-luck card. (2) Ancients believed death was a great awakener. See wakes. In most religions the means of passing from one life to another. Sometimes interpreted as spiritual decay. Various mythologies attribute death to: anger of an offended deity because of man's disobedience or sins; displeasure of one already dead who causes a survivor to follow; mischievousness or mistake of a deity. Dream significance: (another's death agony) good omen for patient; (one's own) flourishing health; (one's own agony) warning. Symbols of death are: bat, broken column, coffin, cypress, draped urn, dust and ashes, ivy wreath, reversed torch, reversed weapons, ruins, skeleton, skull, skull and crossbones, weeping willow, wheat-sheaf and sickle. In classical tradition personified by a white youth accompanied by his brother sleep, a black youth, both reclining with legs crossed. Medieval icons represent death as a bat-winged woman with streaming hair and claws instead of nails, swinging a scythe; as a skeleton covered with a rich mantle embroidered with gold and holding a mask representing the many faces of death: gentleness, indifference, odiousness, terror; or as a skeleton mounted on a horse brandishing a scythe. Compare mortality, mourning. In Bohemia on the fourth Sunday in Lent young folk used to throw a puppet called Death into the water; then, with a branch or a freshly-hewed young tree attached to a doll dressed as a bride, would walk from house to house singing they had tossed death out of the village and were bringing Summer (the spirit of vegetation typified by the bride and the tree, which represented the phallus or revived fertility god) into the village. The May-pole dance seems to be related to this rite. The custom of abstaining from the mention of the name of one dead was and is observed by many races. The chief reason appears to be the fear of evoking the ghost coupled with the natural unwillingness to revive past sorrows. In China a natural death is regarded as one of the five blessings. In Christian tradition death by martyrdom cancels all sins. Death also is used figuratively to denote the insensibility of Christians to the temptations of a sinful world. In Hebrew tradition death was the penalty affixed to Adam's transgression. In Indonesian mythology immortality was offered to man by a god, but he failed to hear and did not get the gift. In Japan, typified by a lotus blossom. The Kwakiutl Indians of North America look upon death as a shame and an insult. In Melanesian mythology death came into the world because the gods decided men with wrinkled skin were too ugly to live. In Sumer, death was the freezer of all human affections, turning love to hate for the living in the hearts of ghosts.

Death angel. Azrael.

Death and resurrection rites.

Initiation into adulthood. See burial, mock.

DE-BABOU AND DE-AI In Gilbert Islands mythology the first pair, created by Na Reau who warned them against having children. When they bore three, Na Reau came to punish them, but they pleaded that their three children were the sun, the moon, and the sea, which provided light and food, so Na Reau forgave them.

DEBAUCHERY Symbolized by the color saffron yellow, by dancing and singing, licentious revels, orgies. Personified by Bacchus astride a wine cask, holding cup and grapes.

DEBORAH (DEB, DEBBY)

(1) Feminine name from the Hebrew meaning bee. (2) In Old Testament wife of Lapidoth. A prophetess, who dwelt under a palm tree. She sent for Barak and promised him victory if he would attack Sisera. He refused to undertake the expedition unless she accompanied him. She agreed to do this, but warned him the expedition would be imputed to a woman, and she is spoken of as the prophetess who helped to free the Israelites from the Canaanites. The triumphal song she composed still exists. (3) Nurse of Rebekah, whom she accompanied from Aram into Canaan. She is honored for her life of humble usefulness.

DEBT In an Italian icon, personified by a melancholy young man wearing a green bonnet. His legs and neck are bound by iron. In his mouth he holds a basket and in his hand a scourge. A hare is at his feet.

DEBUTANTE BALL In modern society, a coming-out party; a ball to signify that a young woman is of marriageable age and to introduce her to eligible bachelors; a puberty festival.

DECAPITATION AFTER DEATH Practiced in various parts of the world to rid the body of its ghost or spirit, which in ancient Egypt was called the Ka. Compare ka, mummification.

DECEIT In an Italian icon personified by a man clothed in a goat skin. Instead of legs, he has two werpent tails. In one hand he holds fish-hooks, in the other a fish-net filled with fish. Besides him a panther hides its head between his legs to show only its fine skin.

DECEMBER Twelfth month of the Gregorian calendar. Name from the Latin combining form decem, meaning ten, and December was the tenth month in ancient Rome. It suggests cheerlessness, chilliness, gloom, winter festivities. The sun enters Capricornus, the Goat, about December 22, which answers to the winter solstice. December is symbolized by evergreens, firs, holly, lapis-lazuli, mistletoe, owl, poinsettia, turquoise. Personified by a crone crouching over a fire; the killing of the fattened pig; a minstrel. In China represented by a bullock.

Decemberist. In Russian history, one of those who in December of 1828 conspired against Czar Nicholas.

December and May. An old husband and a young wife or vice versa.

December 25. Date of a pagan festival widely celebrated in which the image of a babe was taken from a temple sanctuary and greeted with loud acclamation by worshipers saying, "The Virgin has begotten." The date answers roughly to the winter solstice. The virgin mother is mother earth, who gives birth to the sun, who immediately starts to grow, bringing with him longer daytime hours. In China birthday of Zao; in Egypt birthdays of Horus and Osiris; in Greece of Dionysus and Heracles; in India birthday of Vishnu; in Persia of Mithra; in Syria of Tammuz. In the Fifth Century fixed as Christmas Day, the birthday of Christ.

December 31. In Japan demon-ousting day, when peach-wood rods (phallic rods) are used to rid the house of demons.

DECHTIRE (DECHTERE) In Irish mythology daughter of Maga. Half-sister of Conchobar, king of Ulster. Mother of Cuchulainn; Conchobar, Lugh, and Sualtam, are all said to be the father. Dechtire was affianced to Sualtam. While celebrating her wedding feast she swallowed a May-fly. The god Lugh, in a dream, informed her she had swallowed and bore him within her. He ordered her and her fifty attendant maidens to accompany him and transformed them all into the shapes of birds that they might leave without being seen. At the end of three years, she and her attendants returned in their bird shape and devoured everything at her brother's palace. Conchobar organized a hunt and he came upon a magic dwelling in which a man (Lugh) and a woman (Dechtire) resided. Believing them to be his vassals, Conchobar demanded the right to sleep with the woman.

The next morning the woman gave birth to a child which resembled Conchobar. The infant was called Setanta; later Cuchulainn. After the birth of Cuchulainn, Dechtire returned to the court of Conchobar and married Sualtam. Dechtire is a moon goddess; Lugh, a sun deity; Conchobar, an earth god; Cuchulainn, the infant sun. In the May-fly season, trout throw themselves out of the water and catch the flies. The Irish legend of 'singing trout' refers to an erotic spring dance in the moon-goddess' honor by water-nymphs, who mimicked the leaping, squeaking trout. Dechtire conceived her son by swallowing a May-fly, and he, a reincarnation of his father Lugh, was able to swim like a trout as soon as he was born (the sun leaps and swims on water). As a virgin goddess Dechtire compares with Arianrhod, Nana. See virgin birth.

DECK OF PLAYING CARDS Divination, fortune telling, gambling. See Tarot.

DECLUNUS (DECLUNA) Early Italian fertility deity.

DECORUM In an Italian icon, personified by a handsome youth of gentle aspect with a lion's skin on his back. In one hand he holds a cube supporting the Mercury cipher and the motto "Sic Floret Decoro Decus;" in the other hand he holds an amaranth branch. He wears a garland of amaranth. On one foot he has a buskin, on the other a sock.

DEDALUS, STEPHEN The hero of A Portrait of the Artist by James Joyce. He also appears in Ulysses. Believed to represent the author himself. He is a proud, sensitive, and talented youth, embittered by the poverty and narrow-minded orthodoxy of his Roman Catholic family. He doubts everything but longs to find something to believe in. In Ulysses, when he refuses his mother's deathbed request to kneel and pray he develops a sense of guilt, feeling he has acknowledged the religion he had rejected. Estranged from his own father, he finds for a while a spiritual father in Leopold Bloom, whom he finally rejects. The name Dedalus appears to be a play on Daedalus, the ancient Greek worker in arts and crafts. As a son deprived of a father, he corresponds to Telemachus, son of Odysseus.

Dedalus, Simon. The gay, irresponsible father of Stephen. He is fond of drinking and singing.

Dedalus, May Goulding. The sickly mother of Stephen. She believes staunchly in the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church.

DEDEK Penate or guardian genius of ancient Czechs. Resembles the deduska domovoy.

DEDUSKA DOMOVOY Russian ancestral spirit or household guardian. Name signifying grandfather-house-lord. Every house is believed to have its own domovoy, which normally lives behind the oven. These penates fight with one another, each protecting the house with which he is connected. The householder who knows how to gratify his domovoy will meet with success. ■ due honor is not rendered him, he may show a demoniac side. Also called diko.

DEE A Celtic war-goddess, identified with the river of the same name. The river supposedly gave oracles according to its flow.

DEEP (DEPTH) In Scriptures signifies the bottomless pit, hell, the place of punishment; chaos in the beginning of the world; the grave; the sea at its deepest parts.

DEER Autumn, fleetness, gentleness, longevity, swiftness. Among primitive tribes eaten to give a man fleetness of foot. Word resolves into di-ur and yields shining fire, thus typifying the sun. Its horns are symbolic of the rays of the sun. Deer equates with dear (beloved).

One of the forms in which Buddha was born. Symbolic of the teachings of Buddha as Buddha began his discourses in a deer park. In China called lu. Emblematic of Chang; talisman for honor in study and success; symbolic of emolument and longevity. According to Chinese tradition, it is the only animal which has been able to find the sacred fungus of immortality. At the age 1,000, the deer turns blue; when it passes 1,500, it turns white; at the age 2,000 years, it turns black. A man who eats a piece of the meat at any of these stages will live to the age represented by the color. Symbol of the Hebrew tribe Naphthali. In Japanese art, associated with the maple and signifies melancholy. Primitive Japanese practiced divination by scorching the shoulder-blade of a deer over a clear fire and reading omens in the cracks produced by the heat. In Japanese mythology, a dark brown deer was associated with Jurojin, signifying health and long life. In Mexico, a brown deer represented the god of the north, drought; a white deer represented the god of the east, rain and fertility.

DEFENCE Symbolized by a draw-bridge, shield, soldier, sword, tower.

Defence against danger. In an Italian icon personified by a woman in armor holding a sword and a target with a hedge-hog in the middle.

Defence against enemies. In an Italian icon personified by a woman whose headdress is set with precious stones. She holds a sea onion. A ferret with rue in its mouth is at her feet.

DEFIANCE Symbolized by a cock, coiled serpent, head erect.

DEFICIT, MONSIEUR AND MADAM A nickname applied to Louis XVI and his queen Marie Antoinette to whom were ascribed the deficits in the French treasury.

DEGREES IN FREEMASONRY

Symbolic of the three steps. The first degree typifies the entrance of man into the world, groping in darkness for intellectual light; the second degree represents apprenticeship, emergence from darkness, struggle for attainment of truth; the third degree represents contemplation.

DE GUAITA, STANISLAS Noted occultist prophet.

DEIANEIRA (DEIANIRA) In Greek mythology daughter of Oeneus, king of Aetolia, and Athaea; wife of Heracles. When the center Nessus, who was carrying Deianeira across a stream, attempted to run off with her, Heracles shot him with a poisoned arrow. With his dying breath Nessus desiring revenge, instructed Deianeira to preserve some of his blood, as it would always assure the return of her husband's love if he should ever transfer his affections to another. When Deianeira heard that her husband was returning in triumph from Oechalia, accompanied by Iole, Deianeira dipped his white garments in the blood of Nessus and cast them about him. The poison of the blood drove him into such agony, Heracles pleaded to be placed on his funeral pyre. In remorse, Deianeira threw herself into the flames and died with Heracles. This is a daylight myth, in which Heracles, the sun, forsakes Deianeira, the gloaming, for Iole, the dawn. The garments the jealous Deianeira flings about him are the crimson fiery clouds in which the sun dies. Deianeira parallels Blodeuwedd and Delilah.

DEIDAMIA In Greek mythology daughter of King Lycomedes of Scyros, at whose court Achilles, dressed as a woman, remained in hiding. Achilles won the love of Deidamia, who helped to protect him, and to whom he promised to remain faithful. When Odysseus and Diomed discovered his whereabouts, Achilles finally agreed to go off with them to the Trojan War. His promise to Deidamia was forgotten, an incident natural to sun myths. Achilles, as a sun hero, wandered across the sky and did not remain true to any of the loves encountered on his journey.

DEIL In Scotland, a devil; any spirit of mischief.

Deil's dizen. In Scotland, the devil's dozen; thirteen.

DEIMOS In Greek mythology, one of the steeds of Ares; the other steed being Phobos. Name meaning panic or terror. In some accounts said to be the son of Ares and Aphrodite.

DEIPARA Latin form of Greek Theotokos, meaning mother of god or bringing forth a god. A name applied to Virgin Mary.

DEIPHOBUS In Greek mythology son of Priam and Hecuba. After the death of Paris, he married Helen, was betrayed by Helen, and slain by Menelaus. After Hector, the boldest and bravest of the Trojans. A deity of darkness.

DEIPNOSOPHIST A table philosopher; one who talks learnedly at a dinner-table. From Deipnosophistae, a work by Athenaeus.

DEIRDRE (DEIRDRA) In Irish legend a daughter of Fedlimid, harper at the court of king Conchobar of Ulster. Hearing the prophecy that her beauty would bring death to many heroes and sorrow to Ulster, the warriors of Ulster demanded that she be killed, but Conchobar instead gave her to the care of a woman, who was to keep her in a forest hide-out until she was old enough to become the king's wife. Meeting Naoise of the clan of Usnach, she prevailed upon him to take her away. Bewitched by her beauty, he consented, and aided by his brothers Ardan and Ainle, he fled with her to Alba (Scotland). Persuaded by Fergus that Conchobar would forgive them, Deirdre and the Usnach returned to Ireland, where Conchobar treacherously slew the three brothers and caused Deirdre to die of a broken heart. This act of treachery caused Fergus to break with Conchobar, and great numbers of warriors were killed in the ensuing conflict. Thus the prophecy that she would cause death and sorrow was fulfilled. In the Scotch highlands called Darrathray or Darthray. Personification of dawn or the moon. The Usnach are light heroes. She is compared with Helen of Troy.

DEISEAL Procession around the altar from east to west in sun-worship.

DEITY See four-letter deities, gods, theogony.

DEKANS The thirty-six rulers of the ten degrees of the ecliptic, the period which corresponds to the ten days of the Egyptian week. Origin may be Babylonian or Egyptian. Known as divine ones, luminaries, stars, or souls of living gods, who have influence over the destiny of man's soul after death. Their faces usually were those of animals. Somewhat like angels, except angels are never sinister. Later evil personifications of sin and vice.

DELAWARE Emblem: peach blossom; motto: Liberty and Independence; nickname: Diamond; nickname of natives: Blue hen's chickens.

DELBAETH In Irish legend, father of Danu, brother of Bres, Dagda, Ogma.

DELECTABLE MOUNTAIN In Dante's Inferno, hill of virtue. In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, Immanuel's land, whence Celestial City is seen.

DELIA In Greek mythology: (1) A name of Artemis, alluding to Delos, her birthplace, and borrowed by poets to mean any female sweetheart. Virgil gives the name to a shepherdess. Several English poets have used the name in addressing their loves. (2) The quinquennial festival held at Delos in honor of Apollo. (3) The ship on which Theseus traveled to Crete when he slew the Minotaur. In fulfillment of a vow made by Theseus, a delegation went to Delos on this ship to each festival honoring Apollo. During the period of the festival, which lasted thirty days, no Athenian could be executed. Socrates was condemned during this period and his death was deferred until the sacred ship returned.

DELIAN CUBE Problem of finding a cube of which the volume shall be double that of a given cube, alluding to the admonition of the Delian oracle to the Athenians to double the altar of Apollo (which was a cube) in order to stay a pestilence.

DELIBAB A form of mirage common in Hungary.

DELIGHT In an Italian icon personified by a youth in a green suit decorated with various colors. He wears a garland of roses and carries a bow in one hand and a violin in the other. On the ground are a book of Aristotle, a book of music, and two pigeons kissing. A sword is at his waist.

DELILAH (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew signifying delicate, languishing. (2) In the Old Testament the Philistine wife of Samson. She induces him to reveal to her that his strength is in his long hair and then betrays him to her own people, who cut his hair while he is sleeping. Thus a deceitful but fascinating woman, a temptress, a woman who destroys manly vigor. In early Semitic mythology, Samson was a sun-hero; Delilah was either a gloaming or a moon-goddess who caused the sun's death. Delilah parallels Blodeuwedd and Deianeira.

DELLING In Norse mythology red elf of dawn living in the east. A husband of Nat (Night), father of Dagr (Day). His realm is called Heljar-ran.

Delling's Door. Door through which the sun comes each day.

DELOS In Greek mythology a self-formed island, which is said to have suddenly emerged from the sea when churned by the Cyclades. In another account, Poseidon, with one blow of his trident, made it rise from the water's depths. It floated in the Aegean Sea until Zeus chained it down to make it a stationary home for Leto, where she gave birth to the deities of light, Apollo and Artemis. It is called the land of brightness or visible land, supposedly because it sprang suddenly into sight, but more likely because it is in the east, where the sun rises. Apollo made it his favorite retreat and it became the site of an Apollo oracle. No woman was permitted to be confined on it, lest its sacred soil be polluted. Compares with the Japanese Island of Onogoro. See confinement.

DELPHI An ancient city in Phocis at the foot of Mount Parnassus (modern Kastrì) in central Greece. Originally the site of a shrine of Gaea, which was taken from her by Apollo, who shared it with his brother Dionysus. It became renowned for the fountain of Castalia and as the site of the Delphic oracle of Apollo, the most famous oracle of antiquity, and the only shrine that was not exclusively national. It was consulted by Etruscans, Lydians, Phrygians, Romans, etc., as well as by Greeks. Here, every four years, the Pythian games in honor of Apollo's victory over Python were celebrated. Its earlier name was Pytho, under which name it was consulted by Agamemnon, and the shrine at which Orestes was purified after murdering his mother. According to the Greeks Delphi was the earth's navel. The name is from delphin. See dolphin.

Delphicia. A priestess or sibyl who in a frenzied state delivered the oracles of Apollo.

Delphic oracle. That which is ambiguous, capable of double interpretation, mysterious alluding to the oracle rendered by Pythia, the priestess presiding at the Delphic oracle.

Delphinia. Spring festival of Apollo celebrated throughout ancient Greece on the 6th of Munchion (end of March in the modern calendar).

DELPHINUS A constellation in the northern sky also known as the Dolphin and as Job's coffin.

DELTA Fourth letter of the Greek alphabet with a numerical value of four. Corresponds to Latin letter D. Symbolizes the female principle. The alluvial deposit at the mouth of a river is called delta from its frequent resemblance to the letter D. Probably first used in this sense for the delta of the Nile.

DELUGE A catastrophe, ordered by the highest deity, in which a race of men perish, usually a punishment for some unholy deed. Sometimes ordered because of mere jealousy on the part of a deity. Symbolic of death and resurrection; purification. Figuratively any sudden and irresistible calamity, anything that over-spreads, overwhelms, or swallows up. No physical disaster has been more widespread; an inundation appears in the mythology of almost all peoples. In most deluge legends, a man and woman and a pair of each kind of animal and plant are saved. Those who escape usually typify harvest spirits which, as verdure, reappear in the spring.

In Babylonia, the storm sent by the gods raged for six nights and six days. On the seventh day the waters retreated. The only persons saved were Pir-napishtim, his family, his servants, and his field laborers, who had with them on the ark they had built the seeds of every kind of life. After the storm the ship rested on Nitsir Mountain. In Brazil the chief god sent a fire to destroy the world and its wicked inhabitants. To extinguish the flames, a magician caused so much rain to fall the earth was flooded. In a Celtic version Cessair, granddaughter of Noah, with her father, two men, and fifty women, fled to Ireland instead of taking refuge on the ark. In Egyptian antiquity the flood was sent by Ra, the beneficent sun-god, to intoxicate Hathor (Sekhet) so that she would cease destroying mankind. See New Year. In Greece, during the Bronze Age, Deucalion and Pyrrha were saved on Mount Parnassus. Delphi, an oracle to the sun-god Apollo, was located at the foot of Mount Parnassus. In Hebrew tradition the deluge is placed in the time of the tenth patriarch, Noah, about 2348 B. C. Including Noah, eight persons were saved and a pair of each kind of animal and plant. For five months the waters continued to rise before the ark touched ground upon Mount Ararat. When, at length, Noah came from the ark, he erected an altar and sacrificed to God, who displayed the rainbow as a pledge that he would not again destroy mankind with a flood. In India a deluge destroyed the world at the end of each of the four ages. Vishnu (sun) in fish form saved the ark in which Manu, the hero of the flood, was sheltered. The ark landed at Naubandha (the harbor) on Mount Himavat. In Iran the destruction of the world was by cold and frost, sent by Mahrkusha. In Mexico the water-sun discharged moisture drawn up from the earth in the form of vapor and all life was destroyed. Nata and his wife, Nina, warned by a god, escaped destruction. In one Polynesian myth the deluge occurred when Tawhiki stamped on the floor of heaven and his mother wept at his actions. In another, Ruahaku caused the flood. In a third version fire and water, offsprings of the primeval octopus, and their descendants engaged in a mighty conflict. Water won, and the world was destroyed by flood, and finally recreated by Tanga-loa. In Sumer the deluge was placed at the time of the tenth antediluvian king Ziusudra.

DEMAGOGUE A leader who uses the passions or prejudices of the populace for his own interests. An insincere and unprincipled popular agitator, orator, or politician, who appeals to the masses for his own advantage; a mob leader.

DEMETER One of the twelve great Olympian deities. Usually identified as the daughter of Cronus and Rhea; sometimes as the daughter of Uranus and Gaea. Sister of Hades, Hera, Hestia, Poseidon, and Zeus. By Zeus, sky, Demeter, earth, became the mother of the summer child Persephone and Iacchus, fertility. Pursued by Poseidon, who robbed her of her shores, she disguised herself as a mare and hid among the horses of Onchos, but Poseidon became a stallion and covered her, and the horse Arion was born. Her rage against Poseidon accounts for her statue at Onceum called Demeter Erinus, the Fury. By Iason, lover of her choice, she became the mother of Plutus, earth's wealth. A mother goddess, she was protectress of fruitfulness, marriage, and social order. She introduced agriculture to mankind. See Triptolemus. Her favor brought rich harvests, her disfavor caused blight, drought, famine.

Without her knowledge, Zeus plighted Persephone to Hades; a sorrowing mother, she donned mourning and, with two torches lighted in the flames of Mount Etna, she roamed the world seeking her daughter, neglecting the earth. Zeus requested Hades to return Persephone to her mother. Inasmuch as she had eaten of a pomegranate seed (eaten of fertility), Hades was able to detain her, but agreed that she might spend nine months of each year with her mother, if she would spend three with him. With the return of Persephone, Demeter again provided verdure, but each year during her period of sorrow the soil became barren. Thus Demeter exemplifies mother love. Persephone also is interpreted to be Demeter's double, mother and daughter representing two phases of the vegetative powers of the soil, the mother standing for the entire power, active or latent, the daughter representing the vitality of youth manifested in spring growth which dies in summer.

Demeter sometimes was called Ga-mater (earth mother). In Roman mythology she is known as Ceres. Her name corresponds to that of the Hindu Dyava-matar. Her festivals were cereal celebrations; the Eleusinian Mysteries were held in her honor. Anciently she was a goddess of dark caves, whose streams provided fertility, and her emblem was a rude form of horse's head. In the Greek zodiac she was ruler of Virgo. Usually portrayed as tall and matronly with beautiful golden hair, emblematic of ripened corn or grain. Also portrayed seated in a chariot drawn by winged dragons, holding a sheaf of wheat or poppies in one hand, a lighted torch in the other. The first loaves of newly harvested crops were dedicated to her; her emblems were: bowl, cist, crane, liknon, plough, poppy, scepter, sheaf, sickle, torch, wheat. She resembles Cotytto, Cybele, Isis. See Demophoon (2).

Demeter and Persephone.

Mother and daughter, woman and virgin. Physical and spiritual life. In Roman mythology known as Ceres and Proserpine.

DEMIURGE A personality or power that creates a world, imaginary or real. Plato applies the term to the semi-divine architect of the material universe. In gnostic and neo-Platonic philosophy, the chief of the lowest order of eons or spirits inhabiting the pleroma. Subordinate to the Supreme Being, he mingled with chaos and evolved from it the visible world. To him was attributed the entry of evil into the world. Sometimes identified with Jehovah.

DEMOCRACY A form of government portrayed as feminine. Compare monarchy. In an Italian icon, personified by a meanly dressed woman holding a pomegranate in one hand and a serpent in the other. Her garland is of the vine twisted with a branch of elm. Some corn is in sacks, some is scattered on the ground. The dress is meant to represent the condition of the common people.

Democratic Party. In the United States symbolized by a mule; on ballots by a cock.

DEMOCRITUS The laughing philosopher of ancient Greece. A scoffer; one who laughed or scoffed at people's folly and vanity. According to one legend, he put out his eyes that he might think more deeply.

DEMODOCUS In Homer's Odys- sey, a minstrel at the court of Alcinous who sang of the amours of Ares and Aphrodite while Odysseus was a guest at the court.

DEMOGORGON In early Christian Europe a genius of the soil, the life and sustenance of plants. Portrayed as an old man covered with moss; his abode was underground, the realm from which wealth springs. In later legend he became a dreaded and mysterious demon; an inhabitant of Hell. He was a night prowler who haunted graves, walked in human skeletons, bit unwary wanderers in the stomach, and the mere mention of his name brought death. According to Ariosto he was a king of elves who lived in the Himalayas. Milton mentions him as an evil spirit. Spenser places him in the deep abyss, where he lives with three fatal sisters. Shelley gives the name to eternity in Prometheus Unbound.

DEMON Devil, ghost, inferior deity, malignant spirit; hence an exceptionally cruel and fierce person. Universally in mythology, spirits which harass men with sickness and other disasters. They are corporeal and incorporeal, have affinities with chthonic powers, and hate the sun. They appear in dragon, dwarf, human, serpent, and other forms, have superior knowledge and hold the key to magical lore. They haunt caves, forests, houses, mountains, ravines, and stony places; they live in ruins; they roam freely in subterranean realms and over water, and dispose of hidden treasures. They exhibit human appetites, habits, needs, and passions. They are born, grow, and die. They hate, love, marry, and give birth, frequently abducting mates from noble homes. The offsprings of these marriages usually are wicked. They cause insanity, enter and possess a body, and kidnap children. Usually they appear about midnight and disappear before dawn. Female demons in Semitic lore are said to be harlots. In Arabic, Babylonian, Hebrew, and Sumerian mythology, born of heaven gods who had cohabited with mortals or otherwise sinned. In Babylonian tradition, demons are sexless and, having no offspring, they are devoid of compassion and mercy. Buddhist demons support Yamantaka's throne. In Bhavacakramudra paintings demons represent the "hideousness of clinging to life." In Japan, demons are beings of infernal origin, created to chastise the wicked; they are mischievous and frequently comic.

Demons of black magic. The occult satanic monarch or hierarchy of fallen angels is as follows: Grand Dignitaries and Princes: Beelzebub, supreme chief of the Infernal Empire; founder of the Order of the Fly. See Fly. Satan, leader of the opposition. Euronymous, prince of death, grand cross of the Order of the Fly. Moloch, lord of Land of Tears, grand cross of the Order of the Fly. Pluto, lord of fire. Leonard, grand master of the Sabbath, knight of the fly. Baalberith, master of alliances. Prosperpine, archshe-fiend, sovereign princess of perverse spirits. Ministers: Adramaleck, lord high chancellor, grand cross of the Order of the Fly. Astaroth, lord high treasurer. Nergal, chief of secret police. Baal, commander-in-chief of infernal armies, grand cross of the Order of the Fly. Leviathan, lord high admiral, knight of the Fly. Ambassadors: In England, Mammon. In France, Belphegor. In Italy, Hutgin. In Russia, Rimmon. In Spain, Thamuz. In Switzerland, Martinet. In Turkey, Belial. Judges: Lucifer, lord chief justice. Alastor, Commissioner of public works. Royal Household: Verdelet, master of ceremonies. Succor-Benoth, chief of eunuchs. Chamos, grand chamberlain, knight of the Fly. Melchom, paymaster. Misroch, chief steward. Behemoth, steward. Dagon, steward. Mullin, first valet-chamber. Master of Revels: Kobal, stage manager. Asmodeus, superintendent of playhouses. Nybras, director. Antichrist, juggler and necromancer.

DEMOPHOON (DEMOPHON)

In Greek mythology: (1) A king of Athens; husband of Phyllis, a Thracian. Demophoon left his bride to return to his native city; when he remained away too long, Phyllis, believing he had deserted her, killed herself. Thus when Demophoon returned, she was dead. This is a time myth in which the sun returned to find the light or season he had loved dead. (2) Son of Celeus and Metaneira, king and queen of Eleusis, who befriended Demeter as she roamed the world in search of her daughter Persephone. Not realizing Demeter was a goddess and believing her name to be Deo, they appointed her nurse of their infant son Demophoon. Intending to make the child immortal, Demeter appointed him with ambrosia and placed him on a fire each night. Metaneira, seeing this done on one occasion, screamed. The goddess, offended by the mother's lack of faith, withdrew her favor, and the child was killed on the fire. As an atonement for the death of Demophoon, Demeter taught the child's brother Triptolemus how to use the plow and sow grain, and she instructed Celeus in Eleusinian rites, making him the first priest of the Eleusinian Mysteries. Demophoon probably was a surrogate, typifying a child-killing by fire after temporary investiture as king. Demophoon resembles Achilles in that, like him, he almost achieves immortality. Probably a light deity.

DEMOSTHENES One supreme in eloquence and oratory, alluding to the 4th Century B.C. Athenian orator and patriot. The rival of Demosthenes was Aeschines.

DEMPSEY Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning proud.

DENDIN, PETER An old man who settles disputes although he is not a judge, in allusion to the character in Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel. Peter Dendin settled disputes by waiting until the litigants had become exhausted by their arguments and were eager to end their quarrels. His judgments were always acceptable. His son Tenot Dendin, on the other hand, who wished to rival his father as a judge, tried to crush all quarrels before they were well under way. As a result his judgments were never acceptable. The name had been borrowed by Lafontaine and Racine.

DENDRITES Name of Dionysus as a plant god.

DENNIS Masculine name derived from the Greek Dionysus, signifying diviner, god of wine. Feminine form is Denise.

DEO Ancient Arcadian barley planting mother goddess. Later merged into Demeter. Some mythologists identify with Rhea. Shown with a mare's head, holding a porpoise and a black dove.

DEOHAKO Seneca Indian collective name for the three daughters of the earth-mother. Spirits and guardians of beans, corn, and squash. See Hahgwehdaetgah.

DEPTH Name of one of the Gnostic Aeons, meaning unfathomable wisdom.

DERBRENN In Irish mythology, the first love of Oengus (Angus).

DERCETO (DERKETO) Philistine great-mother. Usually represented as a fish-goddess or mermaid; sometimes shown as a dove-goddess. Regarded as the female counterpart of Dagon. Worshiped as a nature deity, the principle of fertility and generation. She was the mother of Semiramis who, though human, was the counterpart of Derceto. Derceto, herself, originally had a human form, and became a fish when pursued by Mopsus or Moxus (compare Britomartis). In her attributes and worship, Derceto corresponds to Artemis, Astarte, Atargatis, Ishtar.

DERMOT (DIARMAID) Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning freeman.

DERVISH A Moslem mendicant friar who professes chastity, humility, poverty, and whose worship rites include dancing, howling, or whirling. Also the name of the whirling dance of these religious devotees.

DESCENT TO THE UNDERWORLD

A motif world-wide in mythology and folklore. These journeys are made to ask a favor of the underworld ruler, to discover a secret, to obtain the answer to a riddle, to rescue a loved one or one unjustly abducted, to satisfy curiosity, to seize a treasure. The success of the trip usually depends on the observance of a tabu, such as, not to eat or drink, not to look back, or speak to or touch the dead. Usually the one who makes the descent is a sky-god or sun-hero, and these stories probably have been borrowed from the ancient belief that the sun journeys into the underworld each night (or each winter) to be reborn each day (or each spring). They are symbolic of death and rebirth, and express the human wish to overcome death or to bring the dead back to life. Some famous descents are those of Dante and Virgil, Dwydion's visit to Pryderi, the trips of Heracles to bring up Cerberus and others, Hermes' trip to rescue Persephone, Hermod's journey to bring Balder back, Ishtar's search for Tammuz, Izanagi's visit to Izanami, the futile attempt of Orpheus to rescue Eurydice.

DESDEMONA Feminine name, probably from the Greek, meaning unhappiness.

DESERT Barrenness, drought, spiritual want, thirst. Abode of hermits, land of wandering tribes. Dream significance: abandonment, disappointment.

DESERTED MAIDENS A motif world-wide in folklore and mythology. The leading actors are usually the dawn deserted by the sun. For a few moments the sun remains in the arms of the dawn, whose radiance has captivated him, but he soon deserts her to go on his way across the sky and leaves her to pine away. Some famous beauties deserted by their lovers were: Ariadne by Theseus, Brynhild by Sigurd, Coronis by Apollo, Iole by Heracles, Procis by Cephalus.

DESIREE Feminine name from the French, meaning desired.

DESMOND Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning man of the world.

DE SOTO, HERNANDO Spanish explorer. When he led a group of Spaniards into Peru, he was received as the resurrected Viracocha, the son of Sun, who was believed to be a bearded white man when in human form. Too late the Inca's realized he was not their resurrected deity.

DESPAIR In an Italian icon, personified by a sorrowful man in rags. With both hands he opens his breast and looks down at his heart, which is surrounded by serpents. His garment is black.

DESPISING PLEASURE Personified in an Italian icon by an armed man with a garland of laurel fighting a serpent. By his side is a stork with many serpents at its feet which it fights with beak and claws.

Despising the world. Personified in an Italian icon by a mature man holding a palm branch in one hand and a spear in the other. His head is turned toward heaven and he tramples on a crown and scepter to signify he does not value honors or riches.

DESPOINA (DESPOINAE) In Greek mythology, Persephone as queen of the underworld. A name sometimes applied to Aphrodite and to Demeter.

DESTROYING ANGEL Angel of death. The Danites, a Christian band or brotherhood, organized for purposes of secret assassination, were also called Destroying Angels. The Danites were unjustly said to have been connected with the early Mormon Church.

DETRACTION Personified in an Italian icon by a woman sitting (sitting denotes idleness), lolling out her tongue. Her rust-colored garment is torn, she has a black cloth over her head, and instead of a necklace, she wears a cord around her neck. She holds a dagger.

DEUCALION AND PYRRHA

In Greek mythology the only human pair to survive the great nine-day deluge sent by Zeus. Deucalion, the son of Prometheus and Clymene (or Pasiphae), was king of Phthia in Thessaly. During the downpour he and his wife lived in the ark which grounded on Mount Parnassus (or Mount Othrys). Deucalion received instructions from an oracle to restore the human race he must cast the bones of his mother behind him. He interpreted 'his mother' to mean mother Earth, and bones to mean stones. The stones Deucalion cast turned into men; those Pyrrha cast turned into women. His name means sweet wine, and he is said to have been a vine deity. Pyrrha is from the root pyr meaning fire. Deucalion resembles Cadmus, Manu, Noah, Pir-na-pishtim.

DEUCE The devil. Used as an oath. In games, signifies two. From deus (god) and identical with duce and dus.

Deuce of clubs. By card players regarded the talisman of the deck; attracts many trumps.

DEUS A form of Zeus. Latin for god is deus; equivalent of Greek theos and Teutonic tius (tiu).

DEV In Amenian legend, a demon. Devs are found in ruins and stony places.

DEVA Bali spirit; intermediary in sacrificial ceremonies. In Buddhism and Hinduism a divine being, a shining one. A celestial inhabitant subject to change and decay (the changes and decay of light). Also the region of the gods. In the Bardo Thodol the region is designated as deva-loka. In Sanscrit originally an adjective meaning bright; brightness or light being one of the most general attributes shared by the various manifestations of the beneficent deity. In Tibetan called lha. In Zoroastrianism a maleficent supernatural being, a demon; usually spelled daeva.

DEVAKI In Hinduism, a cousin or sister of Kansa, king of Mathura; widow of Vasudeva, virgin mother of Krishna (Kristna). Warned that Devaki's son shall deprive him of his throne, Kansa slays all her children at birth. As Krishna, her eighth child, is about to be born, Devaki's prayers are answered, and the baby is saved miraculously.

DEVATAS Hindu female deities; also female genii of fountains and trees. Equivalent of Tennyo.

DEVAYANA Vedic way of the gods. Compare Pitryana.

DEVI In Hinduism: 1) Name signifying goddess, any female divinity. 2) Mother of the gods, supreme female power of the universe, daughter of Himavat (Himalaya Mountains), consort of Siva. She is the Shakti or female energy of Siva, and worshiped under a variety of names representing different aspects. In beneficent and mild form, she is worshiped as Gauri, the brilliant, white, or yellowish; Haimavati, the daughter of Himavat; Parvati, the mountaineer; Uma, light or splendor. In malignant form, she is Chandi, the fierce; Durga, the inaccessible, the yellow woman riding a tiger; Kali, the black, who drips blood and is encircled by snakes and adorned with skulls. In her malignant form she is appeased with bloody and obscene rites, formerly with human sacrifices. She creates, maintains, destroys. Usually she is portrayed with four faces and four arms wearing a diadem of shining colors. Her emblem is the peacock's tail.

DEVIL (1) Adversary of gods and men, archfiend, demon, evil one, imp, a malignant or wicked person. A malicious spirit in a person. An unfortunate person, as the poor devil has hard luck. A rogue or wretched person, used in disdain. A daring, dash-ing, or reckless person. A printer's helper (because they get so black). Used colloquially for annoy or tease. Dream significance: peril, torment. Devil once implied resplendent living god, and fundamentally the word is the same as deva and weevil (beetle).

Gypsy for god. In Hebraic-Christian tradition, a fallen angel, a prince of darkness. Lord of fire, which can burn; lord of vermin, which can poison. Offspring of the sons of Elohim who married mortal women. The chief of apostate angels, prince and ruler of the kingdom of evil, is Satan, frequently called The Devil. Arch-enemy of God, enemy and tempter of man. The redemption of a devil is impossible; his mission is to sow the seeds of sin. An idol or false god; false belief. The dragon or serpent, called the most subtle of all beasts, is a form of the devil. Sometimes the devil appears in female form, and drawing on the Biblical conception, names used in literature are: Apollyon, As-modeus, Astarotte, Auld (Old), Auld Ane, Beelzebub, Belial, Cloodie, Hangie, Hornie, Lucifer, Mephistopheles, Nick, Old Davy, Samael, Satan. His color is black, and the term 'black devil' is a popular one, acknowledging Satan's rule over the realm of darkness; the devil is also portrayed as red to indicate the fiery passion of sin. Usually represented with a cloven foot, because Rabbinical writers called him seirizzin (goat). Portrayed as a goat-like figure, inasmuch as, in medieval Europe the satyr represented a type of uncleanness. As one cloven-hoofed or with a limp resembles Hephaestus. In Japan called Oni. In Siberian tales, blending Christian and Pagan tradition, born of God's shadow or of the reflection which God saw while sitting on a golden pillar in the middle of the primordial sea. Fetcher of mud from the cosmic ocean from which God formed earth. Also despoiler of the works of God. Compare Burkhan, Sholmo, Yrym-Ajy-Tojan. In Sumerian mythology usually portrayed as an animal, bird, or serpent, and probable source of Hebrew conception. In Wales the devil appeared as a gray horse. (2) Card in tarot deck illustrated by a bearded and horned or long-eared man resembling the Magician, except his hands move in a contrary direction and he holds a lighted torch instead of a wand, signifying sin lighting the way. Typifies condition or effect. Instrument of Set, adversary, serpent power, spirit of evil. Attainment: ignorance. In divination corresponds to number 16 and the Hebrew letter ayin. Denotes bondage, chance, destiny, fatality, force, illness, materiality, superstition, temptation, vehemence, violence; when reversed, blindness, evil, pettiness, weakness.

Between the devil and the deep blue sea. Between two evils.

Devil dogs. Name given by the Germans to men of the United States Marine Corps because of their indomitable courage.

Devil may care. Recklessness.

Devil's advocate. A carping critic, in allusion to the advocatus diaboli, official in the Roman Catholic Church whose business is to raise objections to a candidate for canonization.

Devil's apple. The mandrake; thorn apple.

Devil's bible. Divination or playing cards; the tarot deck. Also devil's picture book.

Devil's bones. Dice.

Devil's luck. Unusual good fortune.

Devil's missionary. A nickname given to Voltaire.

Devil take the hindmost. Everyone fight his own battles; everyone for himself.

Devil wagon. Automobile.

Get the blue devils. Get melancholy or morbid.

Pull the devil's tail. Constantly struggle with adversity.

Raise the devil. Create trouble; make a disturbance.

Son of the devil. Ezzelino, noted Ghibelline leader; so called because of his infamous cruelties.

Whip the devil around the stump. Urge excuses in avoidance of blame or responsibility.

DEVIN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning poet.

DEVORGILLA Beautiful legendary Celtic princess. While traveling home to Ireland, Cuchulainn slays the Fomors to whom she was to be given in tribute. An early Celtic version of the story of Perseus and Andromeda, in which Cuchulainn, the sun, saves Devorgilla, dawn, from the monsters of darkness. Unlike Perseus, Cuchulainn does not marry the maiden he rescues; instead he gives her as wife to Lugaid, whereupon Devorgilla and her handmaids in the form of birds attempt to injure Cuchulainn. With his magic spear (rays), he wounds them and their true shapes appear. To heal them Cuchulainn sucks their blood. This made marriage with Devorgilla impossible, as in Pagan Irish tradition, drinking her blood was a rite of blood brotherhood.

DEVUS Old World name for the supreme deity. Identical with Deo, Io, Iouis, Zeus.

DEW Dawn, divine blessings, divine presence, divine protection. Gift of heaven, inspiration, refreshment. Youth, inasmuch as it is suggestive of morning. In mysticism, that in which everything is reflected, from the sun to the most minute object. Associated with the attributes of water, which see. Dew is Cornish for god, cognate with French dieu.

By American Indians believed to be the spittle of stars. Christ is sometimes referred to as a dew-man. In ancient Egypt, baptism, purity, teachings of instructions falling from heaven. In Hebrew tradition, a precious boon of Providence. Healing waters, salvation, truth, wisdom. Called ire, signifying to instruct or teach, to sprinkle; and mure, signifying doctor, professor, and first rain. In Japan, typifies grief, sadness, tears. In Polynesian mythology, the tears Rangī (heaven) sheds when Papa (earth), his wife, is separated from him by their offspring Tane-mahuta (god of the forests).

Dewdrop. Brilliant offering of the sky, enduring eye of god, healer, microcosmos, pearl of great price, tear.

Dew plant. February 12th birthday flower, signifying serenade.

Mountain dew. Moonshine liquor made in the highlands of southern states.

DEWALI (DEVALI) In India autumnal festival which honors Kali or Lakshmi. Celebrated late in October at night with ca-rousing and illumination. Literally, a row of lamps, and a corruption of dipawali. See Festival of Lights.

DEWAT Egyptian underworld. Entered by the west, thus the nightly realm of the sun.

DEWITT Masculine name from the Flemish, meaning white.

DEXTER (1) Masculine name from a family name signifying dyer; also from the Latin, meaning on the right hand, fortunate. (2) In heraldry, the right side of the shield as borne by one carrying it, the left side as viewed by one facing it. The favorable, fortunate, legitimate, lucky, and propitious side.

dGRA-LHA See under listing as if spelt Gra-lha.

DHANUK From the Sanscrit meaning a bowman. Specifically, in India, one of a low caste of hill tribesmen who originally were bowman and are now laborers and menials.

DHAVANTARI In Hinduism, an avatar of Vishnu; healer, physician.

DHAR A large curved knife with a beveled point used by the Burmese as a chopping implement or as a sword.

DHARANI A mystical word or phrase used as an incantation by the Buddhists of Tibet.

DHARMA (1) From the Sanscrit meaning right behavior. In Buddhism, that which underlies and includes the law. Righteousness, truth. Symbolized by trikona (triangle) and triratna (three jewels). Buddha, Dharma, and Sangha (Buddha, the Law, and the Church) form the three ratnas or treasures of Buddhism. (2) In Hinduism, a personification of justice and law. Husband of Sri (see). Supplants Yama as judge of the dead. By Kunti, father of Yudhisthira, chief of the Pandavas. His children are personifications of religious rites and virtues.

DHARMAKAKRA In Buddhism, one of the four manifestations of Manjusri; soft-voiced lord of speech. In Tibetan Jam-nyang-nge-gi-gya-po or Jam-dbyans-nag-gi-rgyal-po.

DHARMADHVAJA First of the actual Panchen Rimpoches or Tashi Lamas of Tibet, who are regarded as incarnations of Buddha Amitabha. Tibetan name Lob-sang-chho-chi-gyal-tshen or bLo-bzan-chos-kyi-rgyal-mtsan.

DHARMAKARA Monk who was determined to become a Buddha to rule a world free of suffering and in which all are saints. Through his resolve he became Amitayus and exists in Sukhavati heaven.

DHARMAKAYA Buddhist abstract body in Nirvana in which Dhyani-buddhas live.

DHARMAPALA A defender deity; defender of the faith or law of Buddhism. The Dharmapalas are also called the Eight Terrible Ones, and generally are ferocious in aspect. Tantric forms have one or more heads, more than two arms, a third eye, and hair in flames, in order to inspire sinners with fear. In non-tantric form they have one head and two arms. Their ornaments and garments are princely. They also appear in Yab-yum form. Kubera, lord of riches, and Sita-brahma, white Brahma, are the only two not ferocious. The only female divinity is Sridevi. The other five are: Beg-Tse, brother-sister; Hayagriva, head-of-a-horse; Mahakala, great black protector; Yama, lord of the dead; Yamantaka, conqueror of death. Their emblems are kapala, karttika, naga, parasu. In Tibet called Chos-skyon.

Dharmapala garments and ornaments. Anklets (sometimes of snakes or human bones), apron of human bones, crown of five skulls, elephant skin, garlands of heads or skulls, girdle of heads or skulls, hair in flames, necklace of snakes or of human bones, third eye, tiger skin, wristlets.

Dharmapala of gNas-c'un. In Tibetan Buddhism diviner, incarnation of the god Pe-har, who identifies the child to become the Dalai Lama. The child supposedly is the recipient of the soul of the dead Dalai Lama.

DHARMARAJA A Buddhist historical person deified. In Tibet called Song-tsen-gam-po.

DHARMATRALA A celebrated doctor of Hinayana Buddhism. The devotee or dharma; an historical person deified. He has long hair, carries a fan and a vase from which incense rises in which is the image of Amitabha. A tiger is at his side.

Sometimes he holds an umbrella. When arhats number eighteen he is included. In this role he wears an elaborate robe, has his hair partly done up in a high chignon, and carries a case of books on his back. Tibetan name dGa-bsnen-dhar-ma or Ge-nyen-dhar-ma.

DHARTARAstra Buddhist lord of the Gandharvas in the east, who feed on incense. A minor Buddhist deity, one of the Lokapalas, four king-guardians who dwell around Mount Meru. His color is white, his emblems are a stringed instrument, a helmet with plumes and ribbons, a lute. Japanese name Jikokuten. In Tibet called Yul-khor-bsrun.

DHARTI MAI (BHUDEVI, DHARTI MATA) Hindu mother who supports; the earth. She is present everywhere in the ground. Fowl, goats, and pigs are sacrificed to her. As a village goddess she is worshiped as a pile of stones or as a pot. Women at childbirth are placed upon her.

DHATR Hindu establisher. Creator. Synonym of Prajapati.

DHISANA Vedic goddess of plenty.

DHOBEE A low caste Hindu, whose occupation is clothes washing; a washerman.

DHONEY Ceylon native name for canoe. Word resolves into mighty god eye or on high. Carries the same symbolism as ark, basket, boat, which see.

DHOTEE Loin-cloth worn by Hindu men. Also the name of a male falcon.

DHRITARASHTRA In the Bhagavad-Gita (Song of God) of the Hindus, the blind ruler. Father of the Kauravas, uncle of the Pandavas. The Kauravas, jealous of their cousins, the Pandavas, remain constantly at war with them. When a magician offers to restore the sight of Dhritarashtra, he refuses the gift because he does not wish to see his kinsmen killed.

DHRUVA The Pole Star in Hindu mythology.

DHU'L KARNEIN Alexander the Great as a warrior in the Moslem cause. See Gog and Magog.

DHUNI Vedic storm or wind hostile to mankind. Name means roarer.

DHUPA One of the Eight Mothers of Buddhism, peaceful in aspect. Her color is yellow, she holds an incense vase, has two or four arms, and is usually ardhaparyankasana (dancing). Tibetan name, bDug-spos-ma.

DHURNA Anglo-Indian method of enforcing a claim or demand for justice by sitting before the door of the person refusing to satisfy the demand and rejecting all food or threatening to injure or kill oneself or one's family to the end that the blood shall be upon the oppressor's head. Used also adverbially as to sit dhurna at a wealthy man's gate.

DHVAJA Buddhist victory banner, breath of life symbol. Emblem of Vaisravana.

DHYANA Buddhist act of ecstatic contemplation; profound religious meditation.

DHYANASANA In Buddhism seated position which forms the trikona. Position of the Dhyani-buddhas.

DHYANIBODHISATTVAS Five Buddhist creators of the universe; evolved by the Dhyanibuddhas. Their mortal manifestations are the Manusibuddhas, who live on earth for a short time to teach mankind. In heaven they live in Sambhogakaya or Body of Supreme Happiness. The five who created the cycles of the world are: Avalokitesvara, Ratnapani, Samantabhadra, Vajrapani, Visvapani. Beside the five, a group of eight, usually seen standing at the side of an important deity in Northern Buddhist temples are called Dhyanibodhisattvas. They wear Bodhisattva ornaments and garments, sometimes have image of their spiritual Father in their headdress or in central leaf of five-leaf crown. They have urna and usnisa. The eight are: Akasagarbha, Avalokitesvara, Ksitigarbha, Mahasthamaprapta, Maitreya, Manjusri, Sarvanivarana-veskambhin, Trailokyavyago. Samantabhadra or Vajrapani sometimes substitute for one of the eight.

Dhyanibuddha	Color	Mudra	Station	Vehicle
Vairocana, Brilliant Light	white	teaching	center	lion
Aksobhya, Unagitated	blue	attestation	east	elephant
Ratnasambhava, Precious Birth	yellow	charity	south	horse
Amitabha, Infinite Light or Amitayus, Infinite Life	red	meditation	west	swan
Amoghasiddhi, Infallible Power	green	fearlessness	north	garuda

DHYANIBUDDHASAKTIS Consorts or saktis of the Dhyanibuddhas. Vajradhatvisvari consort of Vairocana; Buddhacocana (Locana) consort of Aksobhya; Mami consort of Ratnasambhava; Pandara consort of Amitabha; Tara consort of Amoghasiddhi.

DI (DEE) Word root from the Sanscrit, meaning shining. Appears in diamond, Diana, Dios, Deus, Dyaus, Tiu. Vowels are DHYANIBUDDHAS In Buddhism, the five knowledge-holding or meditative Buddhas who evolved the five Dhyanibodhisattvas. Spiritual sons of Adibuddha. They usually wear the urna, usnisa, and long-lobed ears, which are among the laksanas or thirty-two superior marks of a Buddha. Their foreheads are bare with short curly hair, a monastic shawl is worn over one shoulder and arm, leaving the other bare. They wear no ornaments. When in Yab-yum they are seated and wear Bodhisattva garments and ornaments and are called Crowned Buddhas. In this form they belong to the yi-dam group. They live in Nirvana in abstract body called Dharmakaya. Each is the author or creator of a different world cycle and his Dhyanibodhisattva is the actual creator of that cycle. They correspond to Manusibuddhas; also compare Herukabuddhas. The five are:

interchangeable; d, t, th, and z are variables.

DIABOLUS The Devil, Lucifer, Satan. Leader of a host in Bunyan's The Holy War.

DIADEM Godhead, royalty, sovereignty. For further symbolism see crown.

DIAMOND (1) April birthstone, symbolic of brilliance, constancy, dominance, excellence, frankness, hardness, high social position, the indestructible, innocence, invulnerable faith, joy, life, light, love, material success, pride, purity, reconciliation, resistance, unconquerable light, the unyielding, wealth. Dream significance: victory over enemies. It supposedly has the power to avert insanity, drive away vain fears and the wiles of enchanters, preserve peace and prevent storms. To have benefit as a talisman it should be given as a gift with nothing expected in return. Envy of a diamond in another's possession brings hard luck. Diamonds worn as buttons on women's clothing and large diamonds bring disaster. See Kohi-noor. Associated with the daisy and hyacinth. Jewel governing the zodiacal sign Taurus, the Bull. Persons born under the sign are difficult, fickle, inquisitive, jealous, long-lived, proud, rebellious, shrewd, stubborn. In the middle ages an emblem of reconciliation. In China worn by the second wife; the first wife wears jade. Christian symbol of purity; emblem of Christ. Sixth in position in the breastplate of the Hebrew high priest, representing the tribe of Gad. It became brilliant or dark when the high priest wore it, according to the innocence or guilt of an accused person. In Hinduism typifies the vajra (thunderbolt). The Vajrasana is the Diamond Throne. The Romans believed it promoted harmony and for this reason chose the diamond for the engagement ring, and established the tradition that it guarded health and vitality if worn on the left hand. (2) Suit in the tarot deck, replacing the coin, dish, or pentacle of ancient decks. Of red color, it is the square man (lozenge) with soul on ends, one end pointing toward heaven, the other toward earth, and squaring the two within themselves. Corresponds to the material world, world of forms, the element earth, the second H in IHVH, and To be silent. Symbol of the yoni. Typifies the mineral kingdom. Heraldic emblem of Mercury as protector of merchants and of Thoth. Insignia of men of commerce and wealth; also of eternity. When a majority appear in a deal signifies business, money, possessions.

Black diamond. Coal.

Bohemian diamond. Carries the sentiment, forever yours.

Diamond cut diamond. A contest between two well-matched opponents.

Diamond in the rough. An uncultivated genius, a person of exceptional abilities without social graces.

Diamond jousts. Instituted by King Arthur with a diamond as the prize. Arthur found nine diamonds in the crown of a slain knight. Each year for nine successive years he offered one as a prize. Lancelot won them all. He gave them to Guinevere who, when jealous tossed them into the river. They probably typify stars.

Diamond necklace affair. An incident which helped bring about a revolution. Alluding to the diamond necklace bought by the Countess de Lamotte and Cardinal de Rohan by forging the signature of Marie Antoinette.

Diamond-shaped lozenge. In Hinduism emblem of Dyaus.

Diamond state. Delaware, alluding to its small size.

DIANA Ancient Italian sylvan goddess and helper of women in childbirth. Affiliated with the spring nymph Egeria and with Virbius, divinities of childbirth. Later identified as the goddess of the crescent moon, identical with the Greek Artemis. As goddess of light she represented the moon as Dianus (Janus) did the sun. In three-fold aspect, she was goddess of birth and called Lucina; goddess of growth, called Diana; goddess of death and mistress of the unseen world, called Hecate. As goddess of forests and hunting she was chaste, immaculate, but haughty and vindictive; as moon-goddess, she was capricious and wanton; as goddess of the underworld, she was pitiless and sanguinary. As a tripartite goddess, her statues, sometimes with three heads, that of a horse, a dog, and a boar, were erected where three roads met, for which reason she was called Trivia. Her high priest, the King of the Woods, obtained his position by the slaughter of his predecessor and held office until killed by an aspirant to his dignity. The right to fight the presiding high priest was obtained by one who succeeded in breaking off the bough of the sacred oak which grew in a sanctuary at Nemi (see golden bough). This rule of succession by the sword was a reminiscence of human sacrifice once offered to the Tauric Diana. In Galatia, worshiped as a midday demon who, in autumn, haunted crossroads and forests. In astrology, she is the ruler of the head; in the tarot deck, Diana is identified with the High Priestess. The Nemoralia or Grove Festival was celebrated in her honor on August 13th on Lacus Nemonensis (Forest-buried Lake). The name Diana is derived from the Sanscrit root di (shining) and is related to dyaus (day). Her sacred animal is the stag; her color is silver; her emblem is the bow and arrow. In art generally represented as a huntress attended by maidens and hunting dogs.

Diana of Ephesus. Tutelary goddess; great fertility mother. Worshiped with magical and orgiastic rites in which humans were sacrificed. Her temple, 220 years in building, was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. It contained her cult statue which had many breasts as a personification of the fruitfulness of nature. Herostratus burned the temple to immortalize his name; it was rebuilt in greater splendor. Also called Artemis of Ephesus.

Diana's foresters. Highwaymen; gentlemen of the night or shade.

Diana's livery. Chastity.

DIANCECHT In Celtic mythology a Tuatha De Danann. God of leech craft, medicine, and surgery. Father of Airmid, Cethe, Cian, Cu, Etan, and Miach; grandfather of Lugh, the sun deity. Assisted by Creidne he made a silver hand for Nuada which moved in all joints. Resembles Asclepius. See Miach.

DIANTHUS In Christianity symbolic of the Holy Spirit.

DIANUS Same as Janus, which see.

DIAR Odin temple priest; also called Drotnar.

DIARMAID (DERMONT, DIARMAIT, DIARMID, DIARMUID O'DUIBHNE) In Irish mythology hero of the Fianna (Fenians). Son of the sister of Fionn and foster son of Oengus, he killed Searbhan Lochlannach, the giant guarding the berries of immortality, when the giant refused to give him a handful of the fruit. He was irresistible to women because of the love spot on his forehead, and Princess Grainne, betrothed of Fionn, prevailed upon him to elope with her. Fionn pursued them for a year and a day, the lovers concealing themselves in a tree or resting near a dolmen each night, from which Oengus helped them to escape at the approach of Fionn. Fionn finally pretended to forgive his nephew and sent him to hunt the Gulban or green boar. After Diarmaid killed the boar (storm demon), Fionn asked his nephew to measure the beast with his feet. Diarmaid did so and Fionn asked him to verify the measurement by treading it in the opposite direction which was against the lie of the bristles. One of the bristles pierced Diarmid's heel and inflicted a poisoned and fatal wound. Diarmaid has the attributes of a moon-deity; Fionn those of a sun-god, and Diarmaid, the moon, rested in a tree each night until the sun approached. The refuge in a tree is symbolic of grasping the sacred or world-tree (world-axis) for sanctuary. Compare tig-touch-wood. The love story of Diarmaid and Grainne is echoed in the legend of Tristan and Iseult and resembles that of Romeo and Juliet. Diarmaid's vulnerable heel resembles that of Achilles.

DIASIA In Greek antiquity, a chthonic rite, ostensibly in honor of Zeus, but really addressing an underworld snake Meilichios, on whose worship that of Zeus had been superimposed. Characterized by night ceremonies, gloomy in character, potent for purification.

DIABOLO A Calabrian bandit, previously a monk known as Michele Pezza, who had become celebrated in legend and opera. Also called Fra Diavolo (Brother Devil).

DIBBARA Literally, darkening one. Babylonian destroying angel.

Bringer of pestilence and plagues. A serpentine form; probably identical with the dragon combated by Marduk. Also called Lubara.

DICE (DIKE) In Greek mythology one of the Horae (Seasons). She guarded the interests of the individual and represented justice. Goddess who apportioned and divided things mortal; sometimes she lapsed into vengeance. Her emblem was a sword.

DICE Chance, debauchery, fortune, gambling. As cubes, symbolic of matter; as three faces of a die are visible at one time, symbolic of trinity. The dots are so arranged, opposite faces add to seven and represent the symbols of that number. Seven times seven times seven, plus the added value of all dots (one to six inclusive) plus one for the die itself, equals 365, or the cycle of the year. The twelve edges represent the months in a year; the four lateral sides represent the four cardinal directions, and the upper and lower sides represent the earth's polar axis. Dice embody the law of opposites. Used for purposes of divination or sortilege. Dream significance: fatal loss. In heraldry, signify equity. Oldest known implements in games of chance; probably originated in Asia.

DICK'S HATBAND The crown of England, alluding to the short rule of Richard Cromwell, the weak son of Oliver Cromwell.

DICK TURPIN Daring outlaw or thief.

DICTE (DIKTE) In Greek mythology cave in the Cretan mountains where the infant Zeus was born and tended by nymphs. A world navel.

DICTYNNA (DICTYANNA, DIK-TYNNA) Cretan protectress of hunters and seafarers. A title of Artemis as fish-goddess. Later her attributes were combined with those of Britomartis. From Dictya, a word for nets.

DIDO (DIDON, DIDONE) In Virgil's Aeneid daughter of Belus or Mutgo, king of Tyre. Founder of Carthage, she agreed to buy as much land as a bull's hide could cover, and then cut the hide into strips and enclosed a large area with it. She fell in love with Aeneas, when he stopped at Carthage on his wanderings from Troy. When the gods ordered him to continue his journey, Dido committed suicide in a flaming death on a funeral pyre. Dido is a personification of the gloaming; she dies in the flaming fire of the departing sun. As a woman who died for love, a victim of passionate love, she resembles Deirdre, Juliet, Phyllis. Also known as Elissa.

DIDYMUS Surname of the apostle Thomas, from the Greek meaning twin; hence a doubter or sceptic. 'Diddy' is related to daddy (father).

DIES Literally, day. Roman primal or deity or force; by Aether parent of Coelus (Uranus).

Dies Irae. Literally, Day of Wrath. Name of a famous hymn on the last judgement used in the Roman Catholic Church in the mass for the dead and on All Soul's Day.

Dies religiosi. Literally, holy day. In Roman antiquity, anniversaries of great disasters and the days after the Ides, Kalends and Nones. On these days to conduct business or to open the courts was unlawful. Such days were looked upon as unlucky for the inception of any affair or movement. Also called dies atrii (black day) and dies nefasti (day on which a speech is prohibited).

DIETRICH VON BERN (DIDER-ICK) Sun hero of a floating myth, probably incidents of the Sigurd and Siegfried legend attached to the history of Theodoric the Great, king of the Ostrogoths. In the Nibelungenlied depicted as a German warrior king treacherously deprived of his kingdom Amelungs by his uncle Ermenrich, and which he does not regain until the death of his uncle thirty-two years later. He spends much of his exile as one of the liegemen of king Etzel (also known as Atle and Attila). Dietrich is led by Lauren, king of dwarfs, into hills made brighter than the sun by gems. He obtains the sword Naglering from Alberich the dwarf, who had forged it for the fire-giants Grim and Hilde and with the sword slays a man-devouring monster as well as Grim and Hilde. The dwarfs and giants he kills are personifications of drought, storm, and winter. Like Christ, Gwydion, Heracles, and Orpheus, he descends into the underworld (hills), where he discovers great wealth, and returns. Thus the sun descends into the unseen land and returns each morning (or Spring).

DIGAMBARA In India, the sakti of Vajradhara in Yogambara form. Also the name of the oldest Jain sect in India. Name meaning sky-clad, i. e. naked.

DIGESTION In an Italian icon, personified by a woman of strong constitution. She is crowned with penny-royal. In one hand she holds a sprig of chondrilla; the other hand rests on an ostrich.

DIGINI In Navaho legend, half sprite, half wizard, dwelling in formations formed by volcanic fire and eroding water.

DIGITALIS Herb symbolizing ardor.

DIGNAM, PADDY In James Joyce's Ulysses, Leopold Bloom, the hero, attends the funeral of Paddy Dignam. This action is intended to correspond to the visit of Ulysses (Odysseus) to Hades in the Homeric epic; Dignam stands for Elpenor.

DIGNITY In an Italian icon, personified by a richly adorned woman who looks as if she might sink under the burden of a huge gem which is set in a crown of gold decorated with many precious stones. Dignity is a heavy load to support.

DII INDIGETES Roman heroes who after death were ranked among the gods.

DII MANES Latin gods, ghosts of the dead. See genii, lares, manes.

DIKUMARI In India, direction maidens. They number fifty-six and assist at important functions, such as bathing the future Tirthankara when born on earth for his last existence.

DILIGENCE Symbolized by an ant or a bee. In an Italian icon, personified by a woman holding in one hand a sprig of thyme around which a bee buzzes. In the other hand she has a branch of almond and mulberry leaves. A cock, scratching the ground, is at her feet.

DILLON Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning faithful.

DILMUN Sumerian garden of paradise, in which Tagtug resides; primeval land of bliss where Enki and his wife Damkina repose. Resembles Garden of Eden.

DIMME-KUR (DIMMEA) Sumerian demon.

DINAH Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning judgment, vindication. In the Old Testament, the only daughter of Jacob is named Dinah. Her mother is Leah. She fell a victim to the seductive arts of Shechem, a young prince of Canaan, but was perfidiously and savagely avenged by her full brothers Levi and Simeon. In United State literature, the name is a common one for a Negro cook or servant.

DINDYMENE (DINDYMUS)
A name of Cybele, Phrygian mother-goddess, worshiped with orgiastic rites, which included self-mutilation. Identified with the Greek Rhea and the Asiatic Magna Mater. Also a mountain range between Phrygia and Galatia sacred to the goddess.

DÎNERS MAGNY A cafe and restaurant in Paris which was the habitat of writers who formed the 'inner circle.' Among the novelists who met at Dîners Magny were Alphonse Daudet, Gustave Flaubert, Theophile Gautier, Jules de Goncourt, and Ernest Renan. The critic Charles Augustine Sainte-Beuve also met with them.

DINEWAN In Australian mythology an emu. The sun was made when Bralgah, a companion, quarreled with her and tossed one of Dinewan's eggs into the sky.

DINE WITH DUKE HUMPHREY
Go without dinner.

DINO (DEINO) In Greek mythology the terrifier; one of the Graeae. Companion of Ares, the war-god. Name meaning huge, terrible, whirling.

DINSANGMA In Tibetan Buddhism, one of the five Long-Life Sisters who accompanied Sridevi. Her emblems are a mongoose and a vase; her vahana is an antelope.

DIOGENES Cynic. From the Greek philosopher who is said to have lived in a tub and to have sought for an honest man at mid-day with a lantern. Diogenes' life in a tub symbolizes his independence of the ordinary necessities of civilization.

Diogenes-cup. Hollow formed by the palm of the hand and curved fingers.

DIOMEDES (DIOMED, DIO-MEDE) In Greek mythology: (1) King of the Bistonians, a warlike Thracian tribe. A son of Ares, he owned four fire-vomiting horses to which he fed human flesh. As one of his labors, Heracles killed him, fed him to his horses, and then carried the horses to Eurystheus. Thus Heracles, the sun, overpowered the possessor of the fire-flashing storms (thunder and lightning) of the four directions. (2) A prince of Argos. Son of Tydeus. Next to Achilles, the bravest Greek in the Trojan War. When attacked by Ares, aided by Athena, he wounded the war god (storm-clouds), and caused him to bellow from pain. With Odysseus, he stole the horses of Rhesus and carried off the Palladium which led to the downfall of Troy. He survived the siege and returned home to find his wife living in adultery. To save his life he fled and lived as an exile in Italy. Together with Odysseus, Dante places him in Hades to be punished, as in stealing the Palladium on which the fate of Troy depended, he had exposed himself to divine wrath. (3) In medieval literature Cressida deserted Troilus, son of Priam, to become the mistress of Diomedes, when the weakness of Troy became apparent.

Diomedean swap. An exchange or trade in which the advantage is all on one side. Glaucus, grandson of Bellerophon, and Diomedes, son of Ares, meeting on the battlefield and learning of the old guest-fellowship of their sires, refuse to shed each other's blood. Plichting friendship, they exchange armor, Diomedes receiving the gold equipment of Glaucus in exchange for his own, which is of brass. See eating.

DIONE (DIONAE) In Greek mythology a female Titan, most ancient consort of Zeus, by whom, she is said to be the mother of Aphrodite, the goddess of love. Dione apparently was ousted by Hera to become a secondary wife or mistress. The name is a feminine form of Dios (Zeus), which suggests a sky deity, but at Dodona, she was worshiped as productive Earth; in Hesiod, as a river-nymph, nourishing moisture. Sometimes she is identified as Aphrodite herself or as Diana, the moon-goddess or reaper. She also is said to be a resurrected form of Semele. The name is derived from the Sanscrit root di, source of Dyaus (day), and is related to Juno.

DIONYSIAN PERIOD A period of 532 Julian years, employed to compute the date of Easter. In any year of such a period, the full moon occurs on the same day of the month as in the corresponding year of the preceding period. The name refers to Saint Dionysius.

DIONYSUS (DIONUSOS, DIONYSOS, DYANYSOS) Greek deity of vegetation, who appears to be of Semitic or Thracian origin. Later a god of drama and wine. Principle of manifold change and metamorphosis, he embodies the life of nature as it comes and goes with the seasons, is a god who dies and rises again with the fruits of the earth; thus he is twice born. He appears as a sun deity, as a prophetic deity with an oracle on Mount Rhodope in Thrace, as a moisture deity who gives honey and sap as well as wine. In the most popular account Semele conceived Dionysus by Zeus. Hera, jealous, prevailed upon Semele to insist that Zeus appear before her in all his glory. Semele was unable to survive the burning splendor of Zeus's lightning and as she perished Zeus absorbed his unborn son into his own body, and in time Dionysus burst from his leg. The fall of Dionysus with Semele is an aspect of descent into death and rebirth (from the leg of Zeus). Psychologists have interpreted this as a birth which attempts to free man from the umbilical cord; free the possibilities in man. His death by fire may be that of a surrogate, a child killed after temporary investiture as king. See surrogate and compare Demophon, Icarus, Phaethon. According to a local Brasiai legend Semele produced Dionysus naturally, but Cadmus shut her and the infant in a box, which was cast into the sea and carried to Brasiai. When the box was opened, Semele was dead, and the infant was entrusted to the care of Semele's sister Ino and her husband Athamas. Implacable in her vengeance, Hera struck Athamas with madness, and the care of Dionysus was transferred to nymphs on Mount Nysa. There Silenus, son of Pan, became the young god's guardian. Roaming over the mountain, Dionysus tasted the wild vine and extracted its juice. This legend places him among the fatal children. Dionysus also is said to be the son of Zeus and Demeter, Io, or Dione (a barley or corn Dionysus). Called Eleusis, he is said to be the son of Ogygus and Daeira, in whose reign a deluge occurs. In early Eleusinian Mysteries he is the Divine Child, son of Oceanus the wise one of the sea, and presented for adoration in a liknos by mystagogues dressed as shepherds. Thus his birth resembles that of Adonis, Christ, Moses, Llew Llaw, Perseus, Sargon I, Taliesin, etc. See basket, cist, fatal child, liknos.

Dionysus journeys around the world like the revolving seasons and, coming upon Ariadne, who has been abandoned by Theseus at Naxos (night), he consoles and marries her, and places a glittering diadem on her head that she may shine everlastingly among the stars. He travels into Hades, where he releases Semele from bondage in the underworld, suggesting the release of verdure below by the fertility deity, or the power of wine to release the mind from care and worry. In one legend, like Athamas, he is struck crazy by Hera, and wanders about the world teaching people the elements of civilization and the arts of cultivation, a role in which he resembles Christ, who was charged by his contemporaries with being crazy. See crazy. Wherever he goes he is adored by women, who greet him with the clash of cymbals, tympanons, and other musical instruments, and who worship him in such frenzied orgiastic rites he becomes known as the noisy and riotous god, the god of physical and spiritual intoxication. He shared the Eleusinian Mysteries with Demeter, and his rites were of pantomimic character. A feast of raw flesh was a traditional part of the ceremonies. The expression in his rituals of 'render assunder,' and 'tearing limb from limb' were used to describe his manifold changes into animals, earth, plants, stars, water, winds. At his mysteries he was called Night Sun, Impartial Giver, and an account of how various destructions, disappearances, and rebirths came about were recorded. See Agave, Lycurgus, Pentheus. He usually is shown with a wreath of ivy or vine leaves; in one hand holding a thyrsus (phallic symbol), and in the other a drinking cup with two handles. Sometimes he is on a chariot drawn by lions, lynx, panthers, or tigers. He occasionally appears as a sun deity seated on a star-spangled globe. He also is portrayed with horns or is bull headed. He wears the skin of a fawn, goat, leopard, or panther, and those who worship him dress in these skins and imitate satyrs. On Attic vases he generally appears as a bearded man, clothed, holding an ivy or vine branch. In later art he is a youthful god of inspiration, sometimes surrounded by Maenads. After the 4th century B. C. he is depicted with excessive sensuality and effeminacy. His emblems are the letter D, cymbals, the diamond, flute, kantharos, mirror, musical pipes, phallus, rhombus, thyrsus, tympanon. Animals sacred to him are the ass, bull, dolphin, goat, kid, lion, lynx, ox, panther, serpent, tiger. His plants are the asphodel, garland, grape, ivy, laurel, pine cone or tree, vine.

He parallels Dusura, and some identify him as an aspect or form of Liber or of Zeus. His name is derived from the Sanscrit root di and the word dyaus (day); it appears to be related to the Assyrian daian-nisi (or dian-nisi), meaning judge of men, and it survives in the present day form of Dennis. He is known as: Bacchus, god of wine and revelry; Bassareus from the type of dress (bassara) worn by his worshippers; Bromius, the roarer; Dendrites, a tree god; Dithyrambos, associated with the choral ritual in his honor; Eleutherios (Eleusis), name honored in the Eleusinian Mysteries; Evius for cries uttered by his worshippers; Iacchus (Iakchos), originally a call or cry, and his most ancient name; Lenaeus (Lenaios), used in Crete as patron of civilization and cultivation; Liknites, epithet applied to him as a resurrected infant; Sabazius, the wild Thracian barley and corn god represented with bull's horns because he was the first to yoke oxen for the planting of barley. Yearly he was torn into seven pieces by the Titans. Sabazius is an epithet also applied to Zeus. Inasmuch as the Passover originally was a barley feast, and the Jews practiced circumcision (mutilation), Plutarch and others have identified him with Jehovah. Another of his titles is Zagreus, the torn. A drama was performed annually in which the bull god Dionysus Zagreus, a harvest infant, at the orders of Zeus, was killed, boiled in a caldron, eaten by the Titans, and resurrected by Demeter. A live bull, as surrogate, was eaten. The rite appears to have originated in Crete and parallels the Thracian rite of Sabazius, which probably derived from it. At Athens the festival was called Lenaea. As one torn apart, Zagreus resembles Osiris. Other epithets applied to him are:

Anthios, Euios, Isodaites, Kissos (Cissos), Kubebe, Laphystios, Nyktellos, Perikionios, Phytalmios, Puripais, Sykites, Thyoneus.

Dionysia. In Greek antiquity a frenzied May festival, which lasted several days in honor of Dionysus. The Athenian festival, the Greater Dionysia, was a literary contest at which the most celebrated comedies and tragedies were produced. The ritual consisted of dances and songs designed to magically stimulate the growth of plant life. Peasants and shepherds, dressed in animal skins, imitated satyrs until the festival was characterized by convivial orgies, debauchery, drunkenness, and licentiousness; hence a drunken revel, god-possessed, a sacred frenzy. Same as Bacchanalia.

Dionysiac drinking horn. Outgrowth of trumpet blown to awaken and call forth Dionysus in the spring.

Dionysianism. A personality that must enjoy extraordinary experience; one who seeks to escape regular sensory routine by means of drunkenness, excesses, frenzy, licentiousness, violence. The practice of obtaining supernatural power in a dream or vision. Opposed to Apollonian. Blake believed the path of excess leads to the palace of wisdom. Symbolic of fertility, individualism, procreative power.

DIOPSIDE Mineral symbolizing revenge.

DIOS A name of Zeus meaning shining sky. Related to the Sanscrit Dyaus (Day).

DIOSCURI (DIOSKOURI) In Greek mythology the twin brothers Castor and Pollux. Sons of Zeus and Leda, born from an egg. Spartan heroes, also worshiped in Athens, who were outstanding exponents of heroic virtue and valor, with affection for each other so deep they became divine guardians of friendship. Portrayed as athletes, war dancers, warriors, frequently shown riding white horses. They are called the star-browed, and by some said to be the rising and setting sun, by others the morning and evening stars. They are identified with the zodiacal Gemini, and their appearance is looked upon as a favorable omen. White lambs were offered to them. They are symbolized by twin cherubs, twin circles, twin horsemen, twin mountains, twin stars. Dioscuroi resolves into Dios (god or sky) + koros or kouros (lad or youth). Resemble the Asvins, Ch'ang. See Castor and Pollux.

DIOSMA December 7 birthday flower symbolizing uselessness. In the language of flowers: Your simple elegance charms me.

DIOTIMA An Arcadian priestess, probably fictitious, supposedly the teacher of Socrates.

DIOTREPHE An influential member, perhaps a minister, of the early Christian church, censured by John for his snobbery, jealous ambition, and violent rejection of some Christians.

DIPA (1) Buddhist ritual lamp. Kept lighted as a symbol of everlasting fire. (2) One of the eight mothers in Buddhism. Her color is red and she holds a lamp usually ardhaparyanka (dancing). She has two or four arms and is peaceful in aspect. In Tibetan, sNam-gsal-ma.

DIPAMKARA (DIPANKARA) In Buddhism a past Buddha; Buddha of the First World Cycle. He was born on a mystic island in the Ganges. The Enlightener. His name signifies island maker or maker of light.

DIPPER, BIG Ursa Major, which see. Also known as the Big or Great Bear.

Dipper, Little. Ursa Minor, which see. Also known as the Little or Lesser Bear.

DIPSAS In Greek mythology a serpent whose bite was fabled to produce intense thirst.

DIR Persian demon.

DIRCE In Greek antiquity wife of Lycus. Cruel aunt of Antiope. To avenge the cruelty to their mother, Amphion and Zethus bound Dirce by her hair to the horns of a wild bull, which dragged her about until she expired. She was turned into a fountain or spring by Dionysus.

DIRECTIONS Four-fold womb of the world. See under Four directions.

DIRGE Lament, song, tune, wail expressing grief or mourning, and imploring a good passage for the dead. In ancestor worship, a hymn beseeching the dead for favors.

DIS (1) Celtic all-powerful god. He carried a hammer, symbol of creative force, and appeared with a cup, suggesting the magic caldron. The Gauls claimed descent from him. As a god of wealth, possessor of fertility, metals, and minerals, his abode was in the underworld. In poetry, Dis is sometimes used to indicate the underworld or world of the dead. (2) In Norse mythology, a female attendant; any mythic female being. Singular of Disir, which see. (3) In Roman antiquity, the infernal regions.

Also a name under which the god of the underworld was worshiped as a giver of riches; probably related to the Celtic Dis. See Dis Pater. The name may be a shortened form of Dives, popular name of the rich man in the parable of the rich man. Dives is Latin for rich. Dis is Sanscrit and Zend for law, and probably the root of dzhyrna (day), whence the word discern; also akin to Deus (Zeus) and Dyaus.

DISC (DISK) Circle of perfection, sun, wheel of law or life. Symbolism the same as that of the circle, which see. In China, the Pa Kua in motion; heavenly perfection. In Greek antiquity, the sun in its destructive aspects; a weapon. Apollo kills Hyacinthus with a discus or quoit. In Hinduism, called chakra, which see. The revolving universe. Emblem of Vishnu.

Disc, winged. Symbolic of the feathered serpent. See bird and serpent. In Egyptian antiquity the sun supported by two uraei and the expanded wings of a vulture, typifying protection of life.

DISCOBOLUS (DISCOBOLOS)

In Greek and Roman antiquity a thrower of the discus or quoit. An athlete, a contender in the games held in honor of various deities. Discobolus is the name of the copies of the famous statue by Myron in the 5th Century B. C., the original being lost.

DISCORDIA Roman goddess of disagreement and strife. Identified with the Greek Eris.

DISCRETION Symbolized by the color gray. In an Italian Icon personified by an aged woman with a grave expression. Her head is inclined to her left. One hand she holds up in a gesture of pity. In the other hand she holds a plummet. Beside her is a camel.

DISCUS The symbolism is identical with that of the circle and disc, which see.

DISEASE Symbolic of evil. Universally in mythology death and disease are attributed to three great sources: anger of an offended deity; displeasure of the dead; supernatural powers of a human enemy. According to the Old Testament, diseases were introduced into the world by sin and have been increased by the prevalence of corrupt, indolent, and luxurious habits.

DISGUISE The use of paint and other disguises is a practice of most primitive peoples in the performance of sacred mysteries; partly to appear adorned for the sacred occasion, partly to hide from evil spirits. A medicine rite, a purification, a token of initiation. In China clothes were used to deceive evil spirits; boys were dressed as girls or wore rings in their ears to mislead geni.

DISH (CHARGER, PLATTER) Sacred begging implement; implement for sacred offerings and sacrifice. The vulva or yoni. Ancient name of the diamond suit in the tarot deck. A buddhist ritual object; represents Mount Meru. In Christianity associated with martyrdom. Dish bearing eyes, Saint Lucy; dish bearing female breasts, Saint Agatha; dish bearing head, Saint John the Baptist; dish bearing roses or apples, Saint Dorothea.

DISIR Norse female spirits including Norns, Valkyries, and the souls of deceased mothers who have become dispensers of fate. Attendants or maids of Urth.

They are guardian beings who follow a person from birth to death. Word originally meant sister. Dis, the singular form appears in female names as Asdis, Freydis, Vanadis (Lady of the Vanir), a name applied to the goddess Freyja. Probable source of Idisi, which see. They resemble the Croatian Rodjenice and the Roman Junones. See Giptes, Hamingjes.

DISJECTA MEMBRA Latin expression meaning scattered members' or parts, alluding to the Maenads dismembering Pentheus. Used in literature to describe the literary remains of a poet or other writer.

DISMAS (DYSMAS) In New Testament the name usually given to the repentant or good thief who was crucified beside Jesus. The impenitent thief is known as Gestas or Gesmas. Longfellow in the Golden Legend, calls the penitent thief Titus, the other one Dumachus.

DIS PATER Roman chief god of the underworld; king of the departed; lord of wealth. His worship was introduced into Rome with that of Proserpina at the time of the struggle with Carthage, about 249 B.C. Also called Dis, which is the name of the underworld. Dis Pater may be the Roman form of a Celtic god. He is shown riding a car drawn by four black horses. He carries keys. The cypress and narcissus are sacred to him. Also called Orcus and Pluto. Corresponds to the Greek Hades and Plutus.

DISSOLUTION In alchemy the fundamental process of the Great Work. The alchemists' symbol for dissolution is identical to the zodiacal symbol for Aquarius.

DISTAFF Industry, linens, textiles. Weaving or spinning; hence woman or her work. The female sex. In Greek mythology an attribute of Clotho, one of the Fates or Moirae.

DISTINCTION OF GOOD AND EVIL In an Italian icon personified by a woman gravely dressed. She carries a sieve in one hand, a rake in the other.

DITCH Obstacle, pitfall. Dream significance: (to fall in) cares at home; (to jump in) joy, success. In ancient Greece the gods of the lower world had no altars; ditches or trenches were dug to receive the blood of sacrifices offered to them.

DITHYRAMBOS A title of Dionysus, meaning double-door. He who entered life by the double-door of the womb of his mother and the thigh of his father or the yearly two-fold aspect of nature. Source of the name Dithyramb, the wild Doric lyrics sung in honor of Dionysus. Traditionally the invention of the music and poetry is ascribed to Arion of Lesbos (about 620 B. C.), who is called the father of dithyrambic poetry.

DITTANY Herb symbolizing birth. It supposedly grew on Mount Dicte in Crete, where Rhea gave birth to Zeus and, for this reason, became sacred to Rhea. Also sacred to Hera.

Dittany, white. Passion.

DIV (DAEVAS) Zoroastrian evil spirits. Archdemons serving Angra Mainyu. Their names are: Aeshma, Aka-Manah, Indra, Nanhathya, Sauru.

DIVES Popularly, the name given to the rich man in Jesus' parable of The Rich Man and Lazarus. The name is from the Latin for rich.

DIVINATION A belief in the influence of supernatural powers and the process of seeking the message of the divine either by artificial or natural means. Artificial divination is effected by the interpretation of acts, phenomena, or rites that reveal omens of air, arrows, astrology, bird flights or songs, cards, charms, clouds, dreams, earth, entrails of sacrificed animals or persons, fire, lots that have been cast, numbers, ordeals, spirits, trances, water, witchcraft, etc. Natural divination depends on the psychic power of the diviner, as represented by crystal gazers, the Delphian oracle, or mediums generally. The Israelites under Moses were forbidden under severe penalties to consult diviners. They were promised the guidance of Jehovah.

DIVINE CHILD See fatal child, nativity.

Divine being destroyed. A world-wide mythological motif is the destruction of a divine being, whose blood is mingled with bark, earth, stone, or some other material to create man. Thus man is partly divine and partly mortal, an explanation for the immortal soul in a temporary body. See dying god, Mami, Ymir, Zagreus.

Divine guidance. Moon, star. In Christian tradition Pentagonal star, Star of Bethlehem.

Divine-human marriages. A universal folktale motif. Usually the lovers are destined to an early separation. Divinities who woo and marry mortals invariably find that, after a short time, the mortals tire of their celestial mates and the celestial land, preferring to seek death on earth rather than immortality in paradise. The mortals who return to old homes, discover they have been away hundreds of years; a hint at the contrast between the evanescent existence of mankind and the endless duration of ideal life. The mortals who seek divine marriages are symbolic of those who seek dreamy ideals without the willingness to make strenuous effort or submit to training to achieve that which they desire. In swan-maiden and other stories, in which divines marry mortals and remain on earth, the celestial beings soon crave the supernatural powers lost to them as earthlings as well as their true element, and fly off, deserting husband (or wife) and children, suggesting that a mortal cannot restrain the divine. See Hiko-hohodemi and Toyotama-hime; also Urashima-Taro and Oto-hime.

Divine-human things joined. In an Italian icon personified by a man prostrate on his knees, his eyes turned up to heaven. He humbly clasps a gold chain which hangs down from a star.

Divine inscrutability. Symbolized by the color black; also by Solomon's knot.

Divine justice. In an Italian icon personified by a woman wearing a gold crown. Her loose hair falls about her shoulders. She holds a balance and a sword. A dove flies in the rays above the clouds. A globe of the world is under her foot.

Divine-mortal marriages. See divine-human marriages.

Divine power. Symbolized by arrows, typifying the sun's rays; drum, for thunder, earthquake; hammer for divine strength, lightning, rays of moon or sun, sea, thunder. Wind issues from the mouth of a cherub.

Divine Principle. In Greek antiquity Divine Principle and Chaos produced Gaea, Tartarus, Nyx, Erebus, and Eros.

Divine right of kings. The doctrine that the right to a throne has been conferred by God, quite apart from the will of the people. The notion is traced to the Old Testament, where kings are said to be "god's anointed," and "god's vicars on earth." In some nations kings trace their ancestry back to a deity. In Japan the king supposedly descends from the sun-goddess Amaterasu.

DIVINITY In an Italian icon personified by a woman in white with a flame on the crown of her head and a blue flaming globe in each hand.

Divinities, abstract. In Greek mythology social institutions: Arai, curses; Demos, the people; Dike, precedent; Eirene, peace; Homonoia, unanimity; Lital, prayers; Nike, victory; Nomos, law; Telete, rite of the Mysteries. Spiritual faculties: Metis, prudence; Mnemosyne, memory; Pronoia, forethought. States of the body: Hygeia, health; Hypnos, sleep; Laimos, pestilence; Limos, famine; Mania, madness; Thanatos, death. States of the mind: Aidos, modesty; Eleos, pity; Eros, Euphrosyne, Himeros, longing; Phobos, fear. Time: Eos, dawn; Geras, old age, Hebe, youth; Hemera, Nyx, night; Kairos, opportunity or psychological moment; Cronos, time. Virtues and vices: Anai-deia, shamelessness; Arete, excellence or virtue; Dikaosyne, righteousness; Hylris, offensive presumption; Sophrosyne, temperance.

Divinities, primal. In Greek mythology - Chaos and Divine Principle followed by Gaea, earth; Tartarus, lower world; Nyx, night; Erebus, utter darkness; Eros, love. Gaea, as a nature-power, created Uranus or Coelus, the heavens; Oure, mountains; Pontus, the salt, unproductive sea. Gaea and Uranus became the parents of the Hecatoncheires, Cyclopes, and Titans, including Cronus and Rhea, who became the parents of Zeus, Hera, Hades, Demeter, Poseidon, and Hestia.

DIVJE DEVOJKE One of the Slovenian 'wild women' or nymphs of the woods and mountains. Storms were believed to be caused by their wild frolicking. They supposedly on occasions substituted their own offsprings for mortal infants. These changlings were called divous (wild brats) and were ugly. Most powerful on Midsummer Night, they flung their long breasts over their shoulders so they would not be hampered in running. Also known as dekle, divozenky, divi-te zeni, dziwuje zony, dziwozony.

DIVJI MOZ One of the Slovenian 'wild men' or spirits of the forest. Storm demons. They had terrible strength and were accompanied by fierce gusts of winds. Often they caused wanderers to lose their way, and sometimes tickled a traveler to death.

DIWATA MAGBABAYA Philippine Islands great spirit which dwells in the sky in a windowless house made of coins. Anyone who looks at him melts into water.

DIWRNACH Celtic guardian of a caldron of riches, which Yspadaden demanded of Kulhwch.

DIXIE (DIXIE LAND) An ideal land, a paradise, a Utopia. The term originally referred to Manhattan Island. A man by the name of Dixie, according to legend, was a slave-holder on Manhattan Island. He moved his slaves to the southern states, where they worked harder and fared so badly, they yearned for their old home, which they called Dixie's land. In the middle of the 19th Century, D. D. Emmett's song Dixie, transferred the paradise from New York to the south.

DJADEK Czech ancestral spirit or household guardian. Also penate or guardian genius of Silesians. Parallels Russian dusky domovoy.

DJAMBU BAROS Batak (Sumatra) tree of life which grows in the topmost heaven. On each leaf a destiny word, such as fruitfulness, wealth, etc., is written. The soul must obtain a leaf before it can depart for earth inasmuch as the age and fortune of each unborn child depends upon what the soul is able to obtain for its future being.

DJIN Slavic giant.

DJINN (DJINNEE) A demon or hobgoblin born of flame. A jinn or jinnee.

DJIRDJIS Arabian name for Saint George.

DO Musical note to which occultists assign the quality of faithfulness, and the rank of prince.

DOBAYA Primeval water goddess of Darian Indians.

DOBUAN A people native of Islands of the South Pacific who are cannibalistic, treacherous, and are believers in magic and sorcery.

DOCK BLOOM September 26th birthday flower symbolizing patience and shrewdness.

DOCTOR Modern equivalent of ancient fertility spirit, healer, medicine man, priest. Dream significance: illness. The character in a Mumming Play who restores to life the Turkish Knight who had been slain. In an English version of the play, Golishan is restored to life. In Whitsuntide and fertility processions, the one who restores procreative powers to the Vegetation Spirit.

Doctor Caufeynon. Famous practitioner of necromancy or black magic.

Doctor Jaf. Famous practitioner of necromancy or black magic.

DODA (DODOLA) Serbian goddess of rain.

DODDER Parasitic herb symbolizing meanness.

Dodder of thyme. Baseness, business care, selfishness.

DODO Bushmen demon, witch.

DODONA The most ancient shrine of Zeus, located in Epirus, Greece, at the foot of Mount Tomarus on Lake Joanina. The priests delivered the oracles by interpreting the rustling of wind in oaks and other trees. Sometimes the divine message was contained in the sounds which came from brazen plates and vessels which were suspended from the branches and struck against one another by the wind. This became the source of the expression Kalkos Dodones (brass of Dodona), meaning a prattler, one who talks an infinite deal about nothing.

Dodona's black pigeon. Two black pigeons left Thebes, in Egypt. One flew to Libya; one flew to Dodona. The temple of Jupiter Ammon was erected in Libya; in Dodona, the temple of Zeus (Jupiter) was established, and there the black pigeon that lived in the groves answered questions put to the oracle. The legend may be based on a pun upon the word peleiad, the usual meaning of which was 'old women,' but in the dialect of the people around Dodona meant pigeons. The name Dodona yields Dad One or One Father.

DODSON AND FROGG, MESSRS.

Names which have become synonymous with dishonest and unscrupulous lawyers or solicitors from the two who appear as characters in Dickens' Pickwick Papers.

DOE The general symbolism of the doe is the same as that of the deer, which see. Dream significance: victory over one's enemies. In California Indian tales, the doe typifies the rain cloud; her fawns typify the thunders.

DOE, JOHN AND RICHARD ROE

Two fictitious names, which prior to 1852 were inserted in English writs of ejection to preserve certain 'niceties of law.' John Doe is now used in the United States in grand jury investigations as an alias when the name of the party under investigation is not known. Hence, any mere imaginary persons or men of straw.

DOEG In Old Testament overseer of Saul's flocks. At Nob he witnessed the food given by Ahimelech, the high-priest, to David, who was fleeing Saul. He carried a malicious and distorted report of the incident to Saul, who ordered the priest executed. The Jews around Saul refused to carry out his orders, whereupon he sent Doeg to put the priest to death. Doeg not only slew Ahimelech and eighty-four other priests, but sacked the town of Nob. Dryden and Tate in their satire, Absalom and Achitophel use the name Doeg for Elkanah Settle, a rival.

DOG Affection, companionship, courage, devotion, fidelity, flat-tery, inquisitiveness, intelligence, protection. Also dirty habits, lowliness, scavengery. Cat-hater; friend of man. As a descendant of jackals and wolves, symbolizes the elevation of lower forms of life. As a product of human adaptation typifies art, and in medieval art placed at the feet of women to symbolize affection and fidelity as a lion, placed at the feet of men, symbolized courage and magnanimity. Crusaders were portrayed with their feet on a dog to show they followed the banner of the Lord as faithfully as a dog follows the footsteps of his master. Universally in mythology symbolizes dawn (the hound of heaven); is an aid, through scratching, to rebirth, a destroyer of evil, guard of the underworld, hunter, pathfinder, savior, smeller-outer. Dream significance: faithful love or friendship; (barking) good news; (gray or black) misfortune; (howling) bad news; (mad) enmity; (red) discord, war; (white) happy omen; (yellow) ruin. They are the companions of Artemis, Asclepius, Bran, Hecate, Hephaestus, Heracles, Indra, Itzcuinan, Melkarth, Mictlantecutle, Ormuz, Thoth, Tobit, Sraoscha, and others. Some immortalized dogs are: Argus, the dog of Odysseus; Beth Gelert, dog of Llewellyn; Boatswain, the dog of the poet Byron; Bob, Son of Battle, the first dog-hero of a novel; Bran, Fingal's dog; Buck, dog-hero of Jack London's Call of the Wild; Burto, dog of Dogedoi; Diamond, a small dog which belonged to Sir Isaac Newton, and which became immortal by upsetting a candle which destroyed papers containing the records of years of experiments; Dormarth, hound of Gwyn; Dragon, the dog of Montargis; Jip, pet dog of David's child wife Dora in Dickens' David Copperfield; Katmir (Kratim), the dog of the seven sleepers in the Koran; the Pandavas' dog in the Mahabharata; Toby, the dog who appears in Punch and Judy puppet-shows. In the zodiac, the dog is represented by Canes Venatici, Canis Minor, Canis Major, and by Sirius. Dog is used to identify the male of a species, as dog ape, dog bee, and in local United States usage applied to assume the changes incident to the breeding season, as 'before the salmon begins to dog.' Colloquially, dog is used to express false dignity or display; thus to put on the dog is to conduct oneself in a conceited or pretentious manner. Dog is allied to the words dagh, dagon, day (tag), doge, dogma, dozy. Latin for dog is canis, which yields one great light, thus typifying the sun. In Gypsy language, chukkal, the word for dog, may be equated with jackel; Spanish for dog is perro, which may be equated with the German bero (bear).

Among American Indians because of its howling at night, connected with the moon, sorcery, and witchcraft. In an eclipse of the sun, Big-dog (moon-goddess) was believed to be swallowing the orb of day. To keep Big-dog from this practice, small dogs were whipped and their howlings supposedly caused Big-dog to desist. Among some tribes the dog was worshiped as opener-of-the-day, which scratched away the soil and released primeval man from the underworld. Thus the dog parallels the coyote and wolf. In Babylonia regarded as a defender of homes, and sacred to Gula (Ninkarraka). In China, called ch'uan; eleventh animal of the twelve terrestrial branches; carrier of the sun through Aquarius. Guardian of the direction west, northeast, west, and of the hours 7-9 P.M. Thus a symbol of night and of the west as well as of the yin principle. It was a sacrificial animal, represented Lou, and typified prosperity. The celestial dog was a lightning and thunder deity. In Christian tradition, the dog usually typifies heresy, paganism, Satan, but in medieval Christian art it was used also to symbolize fidelity and watchfulness and as such appeared with Saints Benignus and Wendelin. A dog is shown at the feet of Saint Bernard, carrying a lighted torch in representations of Saint Dominic, licking the wounds of Saint Roch. In ancient Egypt an assistant and companion of the gods typifying their logic. Probably associated with jackal worship. Mummified as a guide to the dead. On funeral urns the form of Hapi. As a companion of Thoth called Anubis. In Greek mythology Cerberus, guardian of the entrance to Hades. Guard of the infant Asclepius, deserted on Mount Titthiam. Among ancient Hebrews the dog was symbolic of the dumb, an abomination, the unclean, sinner. Among the Hidatsa (Siouan) Indians the dog, believed to be an animal with supernatural powers, was the medicine (fetish) of a magician named Yellow-dog, who was the son of an Indian woman and a wolf. It provided the tribe with wealth by acting as a beast of burden. In Hinduism Sarama, a bitch, aids those who are lost in forests, grottoes, or dark places. Rain bringer. Hill tribes still torture dogs in time of drought so that the 'big dog' may hear and send rain. Also associated with death as they supposedly recognize spirits and bark at them.

In Iran its bark destroys pain; its flesh is a remedy for averting anguish and decay from men. Lapp women sacrifice a dog just before childbirth to the goddess of childbirth. The Mayans associated with death, lightning and thunder, and night. Sometimes dotted to represent stars. Called miserable one, one who suffers hardships, stealer; hence, a dog's life or brought up like a dog. Also honored as an animal which brings success to a master. In Mongolian and western Asiatic creation myths Over-god, after creating the body of a man, left a naked dog to guard it while he returned to heaven to fetch a soul. While the god was gone, the devil bribed the dog with a cloak (hair), and it permitted the devil to approach man and defile him. In Rome, sacred to Lares.

Black dog. In India offered to appease an earth deity. Roman aspect of evil spirits.

Cat and dog life. Life of strife.

Dog bark. In Iceland, voice of the protecting berkja, i.e. Great Father.

Dog biting its tail. Satan.

Dog carrying a lighted torch in its mouth. Saint Dominic and his order spreading the gospel.

Dog days. Hottest period of summer; once thought to be due to the dog star Sirius, brightest star in Canis Major.

Dog howling. Death warning.

Dog in a doublet. A bold, resolute fellow, alluding to the dress once placed on the powerful dogs employed in Flanders and Germany in boar hunts. A friend is called a dog in one's doublet.

Dog in a manger. One who will neither enjoy himself nor permit others to do so. The allusion is to the fable of the dog who slept in the hay in the manger and would not allow the ox to eat.

Dog's hair. In Medical superstition, if applied to the wound caused by the bite of a dog, will cure it.

Dog's life. A homeless, wretched life; a life of debauchery.

Dogs of Foh. In China dogs of Buddha, which guard Buddhist temples. The one to the west of the entrance has a closed mouth; the one to the east has an open mouth. Together they symbolize yang and yin. In Japan called dogs of Foo.

Dog Star. Sirius, brightest fixed star in the heavens; located in Canis Major; herald of the rising Nile waters.

Dog Tail. The polar star; formerly applied to the constellation Ursa Minor.

Go to the dogs. Fall to a very low material or moral level. In the East, the remains of a feast are thrown to the dogs.

Help a lame dog over a stile. Come to the aid of one who is in distress.

Let sleeping dogs lie. Let well enough alone.

Living dogs are better than dead lions. To be alive with the meanest things is better than to be dead with the noblest.

Saint Roch and his dog. Two inseparables.

Three-headed dog. Cerberus; emblem of Hades.

Try it on a dog. Test a plan, remedy, or the like, on an inferior subject or on a subject unable to resist, suggesting that the harm, in case of failure, will be inconsequential.

White dogs with red ears. The hounds of hell in Gaelic folklore; hunters of souls sweeping across the skies, i.e. winds. In British folklore called Gabriel ratches or Gabriel hounds.

Yellow dog. A cur, mongrel. Figuratively, a cowardly, ill-bred, malicious or mean person.

DOGAI In Melanesian mythology female bogeys, of which Metakorab was queen, and which became a group of stars, of which Altair is one.

DOGBANE March 6 birthday flower symbolizing deceit, falsehood.

DOGE A title of princely rank in the republics of Genoa and Venice. Word cognate with dog and duke.

DOGEDOJ In Siberian mythology horseherd or groom of Solbon, the Morning and Evening Star. He teaches mankind how to tend their horses. His dog is Burto. He also is called Toklok.

DOGROSE July 9 birthday flower symbolizing pleasure and pain.

DOGWOOD Beauty, durability, faithfulness, firmness, stability. In the language of flowers: Love undiminished by adversity. Emblem of North Carolina and Virginia.

DOKHMA Tower of silence. Rock wall on which Parsis expose their dead to vultures. The top has three concentric sloping tiers (for men, women, and children) from which the bones are swept into the central pit.

DOKKALFAR In Norse mythology dark elves, dwarfs. Probably the same as svartalfar.

DOLJANG A Hindu goddess with stigmata on her hands and feet like those assigned to Jesus and Francis of Assisi.

DOLL Ancestor or deity image, family or clan protector, soul preserver. In more recent times, a puppet or toy. Dream significance: ephemeral pleasure. Compare daruma, image. In Egyptian antiquity buried as concubines with the dead, that a man might enjoy sexual pleasure and be protected from sexual weakness. A Finno-Ugrian woman, upon the death of her husband, carves a doll which is dressed in the clothes and ornaments of the deceased. Food previously enjoyed by the husband is offered to the doll. It is undressed and taken to bed, where love is made to it, in the belief it contains the soul of the husband. The image is kept anywhere from one to five years and then buried or burned. As family gods or protectors dolls are transported from place to place when a family moves or travels. They are supplied with new clothes of reindeer skins or cloth once a year and sacrifices are made to them, at which time the mouth of the image is smeared with blood and lard. Among Volga-Finns, during a severe illness, a doll is carved that the illness might be removed from the patient to the doll.

DOL-MA A generic name in Tibet for all Taras; as common in Tibet as Mary is in English speaking countries.

DOLMEN Monument of unhewn stones, probably used in sun-worship. In Druidic religion typified the womb of the earth; a burial chamber in which a dead hero was buried in a crouched position, like that of a foetus in a womb, awaiting rebirth. In Melanesia, used as sacred doors through which totem-clan initiates crawl in a ceremony of rebirth. Dolmen resolves into dol (hole or table) + men (stone), and appears to have been a Breton word for altar. Compare cromlech, stone, Stonehenge.

DOLON In Greek legend a Trojan spy killed by Diomedes and Odysseus, who themselves were Greeks spying on the Trojans.

DOLORES (LOLA) Feminine name from the Spanish meaning sorrows, i.e. Our Lady of Sorrows.

DOLOROUS STROKE Stroke which brought about the death of the Grail Knight, whose identity was never revealed to Gawain.

DOLPH In James Joyce's Finnegans Wake, a bad little boy as opposed to Kev, the good boy.

DOLPHIN Typifies the sea; maritime power. Symbolic of freedom, generosity, gentleness, love, pleasure. The most royal of swimmers, by its frisking it warns sailors of an approaching storm. Commonly known to sailors as porpoise. Sailors in the Red Sea believed that disaster would come to them if they wounded a dolphin. Universally a form of the sea-god; bearer of the souls of the departed to the Island of the Blessed; a friend of man; savior of the shipwrecked. In heraldry symbolic of charity and kind affection toward children. In middle ages a favorite cognizance, giving the arms and name to Dauphine, a province in France, and the title to the heir of the French throne. The constellation Delphinus.

Christian Creator and Savior; an aspect of Christ. Symbolic of resurrection and salvation. In early Christian art, the figure of a dolphin symbolized diligence, love, and swiftness. Often worn as a talisman. In Greek antiquity one of the forms under which Apollo was worshiped. The great temple at Delphi supposedly was founded by Apollo, who, in the guise of a dolphin (delphis), led a crew of Cretan mariners there. A title of Python, the serpent guardian of the temple, was Delphin. In another legend Arion was tossed overboard by sailors. His music and poetry charmed a dolphin, which saved him. The dolphin was an aspect of Poseidon (Neptune) and Triton, and an emblem of the Nereides. When on Greek funeral urns and vases represents the soul in transit. In Hinduism a steed of Kama; also sacred to Pradyumna.

Dolphin with an anchor or boat.
The soul of the Christian church.

DOLYA Among Russians the fate which bestows one's destiny at birth. A female genius which may be good or evil. No one will succeed without her help. In Serbia called Sreca.

DOME Destiny, fate, the heavens. Dome yields resplendent sun, cognate with deem, dom (English suffix for rank and Teutonic for law), and doom. Related to Damona, dominion, Dominus, doomsday.

DOMESTICITY Symbolized by a cat, hearth fire. In Russia, by a horse.

DOMIDUCA Roman goddess who guarded young children when out of sight of their parents.

DOMINIC (DOM) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning of the Lord. Feminine form, Dominica.

DOMINICAL LETTER By putting A, B, C, D, E, F, G against the first seven days of January, the dominical or Sunday letter for the year is that corresponding to Sunday.

DOMINICK, FRIAR In Dryden's comedy, the Spanish Friar, an immoral, licentious Dominican, who for money prostitutes the church. He is fat and huge, with gouty legs, and resembles Falstaff.

DOMINION In an Italian icon personified by a man richly dressed, his head surrounded by a serpent; a scepter in his left hand has an eye at the top; his right arm is extended and he points with his forefinger, a common gesture of those who have dominion.

Dominion Day. A legal holiday in Canada, celebrated July 1 as the anniversary of the proclamation of the Dominion in 1867.

Dominion over oneself. In an Italian icon personified by a man sitting on a lion, guiding the bridle in the lion's mouth with one hand while he pricks the animal with the other.

Dominions. In Hebraic-Christian tradition, angels of the second hierarchy. In art they are crowned, carry scepters or orbs as emblems of authority. Represents the power of God.

Old Dominion. Popular name of the State of Virginia.

DOMINOES Gaming. In China, learning, scholarship.

DOMINUS The Lord, from the Latin dominus, meaning master, sir. Word related to dome.

DOMNACH Old Irish for church. Resolves into dom-on-ak, yielding House of the Great One. Allied to dome, Dominus.

DOMNU Ancient Celtic goddess. Name signifies abyss or deep sea, symbol of unfathomable wisdom. Her son was Indech, king of the Fomorians or Domnu's gods. She was in conflict with Danu. Resembles Tiamat.

DOMOVIK (DOMOVQJ, DOMOVOY) Russian household spirit. Ancestral spirit; founder of the family who watches over and protects his descendants. Identical with korka-murt. Resembles the lares. Also called susetka and tsmok. In Poland called iskrychi.

DOMUS AUREA Literally, Golden House. A palace of Nero, located near the site of the Colosseum, in which feasts and orgies were held.

Domus Procerum. From the Latin, meaning House of Lords.

DON (DONNUS) (1) A Brythonic sky goddess. Mother of one of the families of the gods. Mate of Beli and sister of Math. The tribes of Don and Lludd (Nudd), those of heaven, life, and light, were in constant conflict with the tribe of Llyr, those of the sea, darkness, and death. The families of Don and Lludd are actually one, as Beli, Don's mate, was Lludd's father. Thus the Brythonic gods, described as divided into three families, are actually divided into two. Don was the mother of Arianrhod, whose mansion was the Northern Crown, and of Gwydion, whose mansion was the Milky Way. She also was the mother of Amaethon, Gilvaethwy, Govannon, and Penardun, and grandmother of Dylan and Llew. She was the Brythonic equivalent of the Goidelic Danu. Later the name was masculinized and the question of whether she was male or female is thus raised. (2) A title of rank in Spain, an aristocrat. Hence any important person; ironically one affecting importance. In United States university cant, a college instructor or professor. The word is derived from the Latin dominus.

Don's Court. In Brythonic mythology the constellation Cassiopeia.

DONAHUE Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning great brown chief.

DONALD (DON, DONNIE) Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning world might, proud chief.

DONAR Germanic god resembling the Scandinavian Thor. Primitive deity in a trinity composed of Wuotan-Donar-Ziu. Names used as a charm against epilepsy.

DONATIST In church history a follower of Donatus, bishop of Carthage in 313. Head of a body of priests who believed that the church must include only holy members, that the true church was composed only of saints.

DONATUS Popular name for the most famous Latin grammar, hence a grammar. Named after Aelius Donatus, 4th century Roman grammarian who instructed Saint Jerome. Original title Ars grammatica.

DON CARLOS Unhappy lover. The woman he loved for reasons of state married his father, against whom he engaged in a fatal revolt. The subject of several dramas inspired by the son of Philip II of Spain.

DON CESAR DE BAZAN Hero of several French literary works. In Victor Hugo's Ruy Blas, an impoverished Spanish nobleman who aims to restore his fortune by brigandage. He is cheerful and courteous, and is known as the chivalrous bandit chief.

DON CHERUBIM One who mixes in all classes of society and satirizes each in turn, from the hero in Le Sage's Bachelor of Salamanca.

DONJON Principal tower or keep of a medieval castle or fortress; the most strongly fortified section, containing the great hall and rooms of state. It also contained a prison; hence dungeon in its modern restricted sense.

DON JUAN In Spanish legend a depraved nobleman who seduced a lady, killed her father in a duel, visited the dead man's statue in the graveyard, invited it to a feast, and was carried off to hell by the statue. The legend was built around the life of Don Juan Tenorio of Seville, an aristocratic libertine of the 14th century. To put an end to his debaucheries, Franciscan monks enticed him to their monastery and killed him, telling the people he had been carried off to the devil by the statue of the man he had killed, which was in their grounds. Mozart, in his opera, calls him Don Giovanni. He appears in many French works, including pieces of Corneille and Moliere. Byron, the poet, uses the name, but Byron's character is gloomy, morose, restless, and romantic, as distinct from the gallant frivolity of the traditional Don Juan.

Don Juanism. Nymphomaniacism, selfishness, as opposed to Robinhoodism.

DONKEY Foolishness, humility, ignorance, lack of dignity, laziness, obstinacy, self-sufficiency, stubbornness, stupidity. A beast of burden; once a carrier of nobles. Dream significance: a hateful omen; (black) illness of a near relative; (braying) serious troubles; (resting) slander; (running) disappointment, sorrow. Donkey is a variation of Duncan, a masculine name.

Chinese deity mount or steed; in Christian tradition unrighteousness. Symbol of the Hebrew tribe Issachar. In the United States emblem of the Democratic Party.

Donkey's years. British colloquial expression for a long time; parallels a dog's or a coon's age.

DONNA Feminine name from the Italian, meaning lady.

DONNERWETTER Literally, thunderstorm. An exclamation from the German. The Germans to be more emphatic say, "Himmel Herrgott Donnerwetter."

DONNYBROOK FAIR A quarrelsome or riotous meeting, in allusion to the cattle and horse fairs held in Donnybrook Village, now a suburb of Dublin, from the time of King John until 1855, when the fair was abolished on account of the tumults caused by the bacchanalian excesses of its participants.

DON QUIXOTE (DON QUIJOTE)

In Cervantes's novel a kindly simple-minded country gentleman of La Mancha, who believes himself called upon to redress the wrongs of the world. He goes forth to avenge the oppressed, engaging as his squire Sancho Panza, a materialist who sees things in their true light. Don Quixote typifies an impractical dreamer; a knight errant; a reformer; a seer, who sees things in a romantic light.

DONY In Spenser's Faerie Queene Florimel's dwarf.

DONZEL A page or young gallant; a young attendant.

DONZELLA A young girl of southeastern Europe.

DOOLEY, MR. A middle-aged Irish-American, who is the presiding genius of a saloon in Archey Road, Chicago. Mr. Dooley is never at a loss to exercise his wit and common sense. His friends are Mr. Hennessey, the compromiser who always agrees to meet him half way, and Mr. McKenna, the skeptic. Created by F. P. Dunne.

DOOLIN OF MAYENCE Fourteenth and Fifteenth century French romantic hero. His sword is Merveilleuse (marvelous or wonderful). Doolin is the father of Ogier the Dane.

DOOLITTLE In Shaw's Pygmalion the disreputable, picturesque old dustman.

DOOL TREE In Scotland a tree that marks a place of mourning. Mourning garments are called dool weeds.

DOOM Destiny which cannot be changed; destructive fate. Hence to condemn solemnly, consign to destruction, evil, or ruin; to pronounce sentence, especially of death. Word derived from the same source as Damona and dome.

Doombook (Domboc). Saxon code of laws; specifically those of Alfred the Great.

Doom of the Gods. In the Icelandic Eddas, various accounts of the manner in which the end of the world will come are described: Destruction of the world by fire, connected with the scorching heat of summer sun; destruction of the world by its sinking back into the sea from which it emerged, connected with the daily setting of the sun; the swallowing of the earth by the sea, linked to the eclipse myth in which the sun is swallowed by a monster; a long and mighty winter in which nothing can survive, connected with the death of the fertility powers of the sun during the cold months. Compare Ragnarok.

Doom ring. In Scandinavian antiquity, a ring of stones marking the boundaries of a court.

Doomsday. Day of Last Judgment at the end of the world; any day of final and decisive judgment.

DOON BUIDHE Celtic minstrel goddess.

DOOR Beginning and end, defense, guardianship, hospitality, preservation, protection, revelation, safe keeping, shelter. Also barrier, division, frustration, imprisonment, secrets, separation. Passage, ingress and egress. Station of beggars and of serenaders. Dream significance: (when closed) retreat; (when open) hospitality. Compare gate. In Buddhism direction, as the doors of the Chonyid Bardo. In Christianity human soul, salvation. An aspect of Christ, who says, "I am the door." Also martyrdom, suggesting one must pass through much tribulation to enter the kingdom of God. In Druidic lore emblem of the oak-king or thunderer. In Hinduism portal of the east through which comes the morning sun. In Japan concealment, from togakushi (to door).

Closed door. Darkness.

Death's door. Illness.

Door sign. Previously a charm against danger; protection against witches. In modern times, an advertisement to attract attention.

Doorway. Universally sanctified because a doorway appears between two pillars, which represent heaven supports; also because the doorway is symbolic of the yoni, whence life issues to the world. In this latter aspect the pillars typify the phallus. Emblem of the Canaanitish goddess Asherah and called Miphletzeth (Mipleceth).

Lay at one's door. Place a charge or responsibility upon another; as a child deposited upon its alleged father's doorstep.

Open door. Light.'

Throw the door open. Extend hospitality, welcome; also chance admitting one or that which may change a situation, particularly in an unwelcome way.

DOPKALFAR Norse brown elves of darkness, who live in woods, grottoes, or the sea.

DOR Word root from the Greek through the Latin meaning back or spine, implying backbone or axis.

DORADO Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as The Goldfish or Swordfish.

DORANTE A chevalier, a count in love, a courtier devoted to the chase; introduced by Moliere into three of his comedies.

DORCAS (1) Feminine name from the Greek, signifying gazelle. (2) In New Testament, the name of a charitable and pious woman who made coats and garments for poor widows. Peter raised her from the dead. A woman's sewing circle in England, which made clothes for the poor, borrowed the name.

DORIGEN In Chaucer's Franklin's Tales a faithful wife. Chaucer borrowed his character from Boccaccio's Decameron, who in turn had borrowed his from the Hindu Vetala Panchavinsati.

DORIMANT In Etherege's The Man of Mode an aristocratic and witty libertine, said to have been drawn from the Earl of Rochester. The name is now used for any gay, unprincipled fellow.

DORIMENE In Moliere's Le Mariage Forcé a young girl married to a man of sixty-three.

DORIS (1) Feminine name from the Greek signifying a Dorian woman; also the sea. (2) Greek river goddess. Daughter of Oceanus, sister and wife of Nereus, by whom she was the mother of fifty daughters, the Dorides or Nereides, water nymphs. (3) Pertains to one of the three principal divisions of ancient Greece; noted for its pastoral simplicity. The Doric dialect was broad and hard, like that of a rustic. The epithet has been applied to Robert Burns. The Doric order of architecture is the oldest, simplest, and strongest of the three types of Greek architecture. The Doric or Dorian mode of music, one of the four principal modes of ancient Greece, was bold and grave. The Doric reed was pastoral poetry.

DORJE (rDO-RJE) Scepter of the lamas of Tibet. Word means thunderbolt and is identical with the Sanscrit vajra. A talisman against demons of drought and for fruitfulness.

DOR-LE Buddhist demon. See Dam-c'an-rDorje-legspa.

DORMATH In Brythonic mythology the marvelous hound of Gwyn.

DORNOLLA In Celtic mythology the ugly daughter of Domnal. She taught Cuchulainn extraordinary feats of war and offered the sun hero her love, but he rejected her offer. Her feet, shins, and knees were reversed in her body, implying strength and swiftness. She was a storm or wind deity.

DORNROSCHEN German name for the sleeping beauty awakened with a kiss by the knight Rapunze. In English fairytales called Little Briar Rose. Folk form of Brynhild.

DOROTHY (DOLL, DOLLY, DORA, DOREEN, DORINDA, DOROTHEA, DOT, DOTTY) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning gift of God.

DORR-KARING Swedish door woman. A light-fearing spirit which dwells near the door and blows out lighted candles of those coming in and out. Compare Uk-sakka.

DORULAS In Greek mythology Centaur killed by Theseus.

DORUS In Greek mythology son of Hellen, brother of Aeolus and Xuthus. Eponym of the Dorians. In another account son of Xuthus and brother of Achaeus and Ion.

DORYPHORUS Literally, spear-bearer. In Greek antiquity a favorite subject of sculptors. The best known was a nude spear-bearing statue by Polycletus, regarded as his canon or type of the perfect male athlete's figure.

DOSANGMA In Tibetan Buddhism one of the five Long Life Sisters who accompanied Sridevi. Her symbols are a spike of grain and a serpent; her vahana is a dragon.

DOSOJIN Japanese deity who drives away pestilence and evil spirits from the roads, worshiped by wayfarers and by boys, who on January 14 burn decorated bamboo together with writings made on the first day of the year. Rice cakes are cooked on these fires. Compare Jizo.

DOT End, finality. A star.

Dot within a circle. Axis and navel of the universe; the everlasting; lingam-yoni; seed within an egg. Mayan sign for letter corresponding to L.

Dot within a U. In Egyptian antiquity symbolized the sun-god afloat; the sun on the sea.

DOUBLE AX Two sacred axes back to back or crossed are the source of the letter T (tau). More ancient than the symbol of the single ax. See fish tail.

DOUBTING CASTLE In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, the castle of Giant Depair. Christian and Hopeful are thrust into it, but they escape by means of the key called Promise.

DOUCHE Dream significance: charming news.

DOUGHBOY A United States soldier. An old term which became popular in World War I. The term is a corruption of doughbell, a type of boiled dumpling of raised dough served in the navy. Cavalrymen applied the term humorously to soldiers because of the globular buttons on their uniforms.

Doughface. One who is flexible and easily persuaded. A term popular during anti-slavery agitation in the United States. Attached to Northern politicians who were accused of truckling to slave owners.

My cake is dough. An expression meaning my hope is disappointed; my work is a failure.

DOUGLAS (DOUG, DUGALD) Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning dark stream.

It has been popular in Scotch history, legend, and romance. Two branches of the Douglas family came to the fore, the Black Douglases or senior branch and the Red Douglases or younger branch. Sir James, the first Black Douglas ■ the hero of Scott's novel Castle Dangerous. This Douglas was such a terror to the English, women used to frighten their children by saying they would have Black Douglas take them away.

DOVE A departed spirit; herald of heavenly news. Amorous delight, constancy, fruitfulness, gentleness, harmlessness, innocence, love, meekness, purity, sacrifice, sincerity, soul, tenderness, timidity, truth, winged aspiration. A good spirit, a loved one. Sexual emblem sacred to love and mother goddesses. As a fertility symbol of Adonis, Aphrodite, Astarte, Atargatis, Dionysus, Ishtar, Juno, Jupiter, Shulamite, Venus, Zeus, etc., often appears with the fish. In nature worship closely associated with rain clouds. Ancients sometimes substituted a dove for a human when offerings were being made to a deity. Dream significance: happy event. In heraldry loving constancy and peace. With an olive branch, harbinger of good news. A constellation in the Southern Sky, known as Columba and Noah's Dove. In China symbolic of good digestion, impartial filial duty, and long life. In Christian tradition the Holy Ghost. A symbol of the annunciation and baptism. Emblem of an apostle or saint divinely inspired. In Christian art identical with the winged disk of pagan art as a symbol of eternity, immortality, soul, spirit, sun. As a soul symbol issues from the mouth of dying martyrs. Sacred bird of ancient Egypt, Greece and Phoenicia. In Greece the equivalent of alpha-omega because the numerical value of the Greek word for dove, 801, is the same as the numerical value of AO written backwards. In Hebrew tradition the dove was clean according to Mosaic law and sacrificed in rituals of expiation, especially by the poor. It was a symbol of gentleness, peace, and divine guidance, as in the legend of Noah. Among early Semites sacrificed to Jahveh as an atonement for impurity of childbirth; similar offerings were brought by Virgin Mary to the temple at Jerusalem after the birth of Christ. In Hebraic-Christian tradition, the dove compares with the Buddhist white swan. In Japan a good omen symbolizing tender sentiments. Emblem of the warrior deity Hachiman and of the Mine-moto clan. One of the ten animals in the Moslem heaven. In Roman antiquity sacred to Bacchus, Jupiter, and Venus.

Dove dove. Widowhood.

Dove of Christ. Salvation.

Dove of David. Peace.

Dove dung. The chick-pea, so called because of its appearance. A nourishment for those who cross the desert.

Dove egg. In a medical superstition eaten as a small pox preventive.

Dove, gold and silver plumed. Treasures of purity and innocence.

Dove and lily. Christian annunciation. Parallels the white swan and lotus of Eastern religions.

Dove and Nimbus. Christian Holy Ghost.

Dove and olive branch. Good tidings, peace. In Greek mythology emblem of Athena. In middle ages talisman to ensure pilgrims hospitality wherever they traveled. In Old Testament renewed life; sign which informed Noah he could safely leave the Ark.

Dove, ring around its neck.
In Christian art encircling sweetness of the Divine Word.

Holy dove. In Christian art sometimes depicted as a rose.

Seven doves. In Christianity the Holy Spirit in His seven-fold manifestations of grace. In Old Testament the seven gifts of God: counsel, fear of God, knowledge, pity, strength, understanding, wisdom.

Twelve doves. Christian apostles.

Two wings of a dove. Love of God, love of man; active and meditative life.

White dove. A health talisman; eaten as an antidote against infection.

White dove with changeable tints.
In Christian tradition spirit of chastity in conflict with fickle and rebellious passions.

DOWLAS, MR. A generic term for a linen-draper; one who sells dowlas, a course linen or sail-cloth.

DOWNING STREET A short street near the house of Parliament in London. Inasmuch as it contains the foreign office and the residence of the prime minister, it has come to symbolize the British Government.

DOWSABEL (DOWASABELL)
A sweetheart, especially an unsophisticated country maid. Used frequently by Elizabethan poets. From the French douce et belle (sweet and beautiful).

DOXOLOGY An exultant hymn or psalm praising God. Sometimes applied to the closing words of a sermon. The greater doxology is the Gloria in Excelsis; the lesser is the Gloria Patri.

DOYLE Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning black stranger.

DRAC Elfish spirit superstitiously dreaded by French peasants.

DRACHENFELS Literally, dragon's rock. A mountain in the Siebengebirge on the German Rhine. Also the name of a ruined castle on the mountain, where Siegfried supposedly slew the evil dragon.

DRACO (1) Constellation in the Northern Sky, partially encircling the North Pole. Also called the Dragon. It sometimes is referred to as the Crooked Serpent, and symbolized the wisdom of Heaven. The name is from the Greek, meaning to see, and in Greek mythology, Draco, also known as Ladon, is said to be the never-sleeping guard, the guard with the many-eyes, which watches over the apples in the Garden of Hesperides. In medieval art represented as a tortuous serpent, alone or with a tree. (2) Reputed author of the first Athenian written code of laws (7th Century B. C.). Nearly every violation was a capital offense. The laws were so severe, they were said to have been written in blood.

Draconian. Having the characteristics of Draco; hence inflexible, relentless, severe.

DRAG-GS^{ED} (DAG-SHE) In Tibetan Buddhism the nine cruel executioners: Beg-tse, Kubera, Lhama (Sridevi), Mahakala, Mahakala Brahmanarupa, Mahakala the Black, Mahakala the White, Sitambrahma, Yama.

DRAGON Authority, chaos, cloud, cruelty, despotism, drought, enemy of truth, idolatry, ignorance, murder, piracy, power, primordial sea, rain, sin, water. A fabulous monster commonly represented as an immense winged reptile with crested head and terrifying claws which spits fire. The power of the dragon usually resides in its tail, which scourges everything within reach. It figured prominently in ancient and medieval mythologies over the world, inciting gods and men to their most heroic exploits. It was the horror to be overcome, the overcoming of which contained the reward. As an embodiment of the evil principle it has been most feared as a water hoarder. It also has been worshiped as an earth deity and a lord of the underworld guarding hidden treasures. It resided in the pool shaded by the tree of knowledge or life as custodian of the tree. In heraldry it usually is scaled and winged and is symbolic of a valiant defender of the throne or treasures of a ruler. It has appeared on the standards of the Chinese Manchu dynasty, the Phoenicians, the Welsh, West Saxons, and others. It was an aspect of Apep, Hydra, Kraken, Ladon, Leviathan, Lucifer, Tiamat, Vrtra, etc. In the Northern Sky it is the constellation Draco, typifying the wisdom of the heavens. The word is from the Greek Drakon, the looking or seeing one, whose glance is lightning. Dragon resolves into durag-on, i. e. enduring mighty one.

The Anglo-Saxon fire-drake is identical with the flying dragon. In Babylonian mythology Tiamat the dragon embodied the principles of chaos and darkness combated by Marduk. In Buddhism a dragon, or horse, typifying a cloud, is the mount of Brahma the White Jambhala, and in Bhavacakramudra paintings represents the hideousness of clinging to life. The Celtic dragon was the embodiment of powers hostile to fertility and man, and conquered by the gods Ludd, Merlin, and others. In Chinese mythology the dragon has many forms symbolizing clouds, earth, intelligence, power, sovereignty, water. Four beneficent forms are: (1) celestial dragon, upholder of the mansions of the gods; (2) divine dragon, which benefits mankind with wind and rain; (3) earth dragon, which marks out the course of rivers and streams; (4) dragon of hidden treasures, which watches over wealth concealed from mortals. A dragon carries the sun through the fifth of the twelve Terrestrial Branches and is the equivalent of the Western Zodiacal Leo; it is lord of the hours 7 to 9 A.M., and the direction east, southeast, south. The dragon form is worn as a talisman for domestic felicity and longevity. In Christianity the dragon stands for deceiver, evil, Paganism, Satan, uncleanness. Vanquished by Saints George, Margaret, and Martha, and shown with them in art. Among Christian gnostics the dragon is the Absolute, angel of dawn, deliverer, reconciler, spirit of all knowledge. In Greek mythology the custodian of the golden apples of Hesperides. An attribute of Cadmus; sacred to Bacchus. In Scriptures dragon is an indefinite word used to translate the Hebrew tannim, which may be either a land or sea animal, and variously is interpreted to be a crocodile, dragon, jackal, whale, etc., embodying the evil principle. In Japan the dragon is symbolic of infinity and sovereignty; also of human passions. Emblem of the mikado, genius of rain and clouds, messenger of the sea-king, steed of Benteen. When seen in clouds over Fujiyama, success. In Teutonic lore Fafner and Grendel were two fierce dragons.

Blue dragon. Chinese vital spirit of water.

Dragon blood. A war fetish or talisman assuring good luck. Weapons dipped in it are supposed to inflict incurable wounds.

Dragon concealed in clouds. Rain holder.

Dragon crawling and slimy. Destructive, loathsomeness, obstruction.

Dragon creeping. Earth-born spirit.

Dragon flying. Meteor.

Dragon king. Chinese beneficent creature. Genius of clouds, lakes, mountains, rivers, seas, winds, etc., directing all for the benefit of mankind. Lung, one of the four Spiritual Beings, is the chief. Each of the four seas surrounding the earth has a king. Ao Kuang, lord of eastern sea, is increaser of virtue; Ao K'in, southern sea, is increaser of good; Ao Jun, western sea, is increaser of favor; Ao Shun, northern sea, is increaser of generosity. In Japanese mythology Ryu-wo, the maritime god who rises from the sea to attend the assembly of deities in the tenth lunar month at Kitsuki.

Dragon mouth (or jaws). Jaws of Hell.

Dragon and Phoenix. Chinese emblem of perfect marriage.

Dragon slayer. Popular hero in folk literature. The hero (sun) slays the dragon (cloudburst, darkness, drought, ice, scorching sun, sleet, snow, volcano, whirlwind, etc.) to rescue a beautiful maiden (dawn, spring fertility, moon). Sometimes, to release fertilizing rains, the hero is commissioned to slay a dragon by the lord he serves, as in the Heracles legend. In Christianity the dragon slayers are saints attacking Paganism or sin.

Dragon spittle. Poison.

Dragon teeth sown. The fomenting of contention, the stirring up of war, alluding to the Greek legend of Cadmus, in which contending armies sprang up from the teeth of the dragon slain by the hero.

Dragon tooth. A talisman assuring good fortune and good health.

Dragon throne. Emperor's throne in China and Japan.

Dragon and tiger. In China union of opposing forces of nature.

Five-clawed dragon. Chinese good luck talisman.

Three-headed dragon. Indo-European storm monster.

Wantley dragon. Legendary monster, whose mouth alone is vulnerable. Subject of English ballad.

Winged dragon. Cloud. Union of natural enemies, the bird and the serpent. When radiant, the Absolute, angel of dawn, beneficent reconciler, spirit of all knowledge, spiritual deliverer. In Christianity identified with Jesus and Sophia.

Yellow dragon. In China essence of the power of divine manifestation.

DRAGONFLY A lucky talisman in Japan called seiree or toambo. Carried by warriors to bring victory. Symbolizes courage and manliness; the dead returning to their old homes in this world. Emblem of summer and of Japan, which is called the land of the dragonfly.

DRAGONWORT December 6 birthday flower; its sentiment is horror. In the language of flowers: You are a snare.

DRAKE'S DRUM A ghostly or spirit warning. According to a popular legend, the drum of Sir Francis Drake is heard whenever England is in danger.

DRAMA The object of: primitive drama was to encourage or ensure earth's fertility; Greek was religious, social; medieval was religious; modern is amusement, social.

DRAUGA (DURUGH) Zoroastrian demon of falsehood.

DRAUGR Primitive Norse water spirit who has a human voice and foretells shipwrecks and tempests. Compare Ravgga.

DRAUPADI In the Hindu epic Mahabharata the wife won by Arjuna and shared by the five Pandavas. See Arjuna, Pandavas.

DRAUPNER (DRAUPNIR) Literally, drip, drop. In Norse mythology Odin's magic ring made of broad red gold, wrought as a snake with its tail in its mouth. It was a ring of fertility fashioned by the dwarf Sindri, and every ninth night eight rings of the same weight dropped from it. When Baldur, the summer-sun, died, Odin placed it on his funeral pyre, but Baldur returned it from the other world that earth might not be without fruitfulness. Once Frey possessed it, and he offered it to Gerd as a love token.

DRAWCANSIR Braggard, bully, swashbuckler, alluding to the character in George Villiers' The Rehearsal.

DREAM From antiquity believed to be the means of revealing divine will, inspiration of spirits. A means of divination, prophecy. In the middle ages a belief prevailed that a dream occurring just before dawn would come true. In Egyptian antiquity the mysterious messenger of Isis. By Finno-Ugrics called the ort (shadow) wandering. Hebrews believed the Lord made known his will in dreams and enabled persons to explain them. Dreams were distinguished from visions, the former occurred during sleep, the latter during wakefulness. God spoke to Abimelech in a dream, to Abraham by a vision. In Norse mythology the medium through which the dead communicated with the living.

Day dream. Visionary idea or wild scheme.

Dreamer. Idle schemer, visionary. A medicine man or priest who resorts to trances and visions.

Dream gates. Ancient Greeks believed deceptive dreams passed out of Dream Palace in western Oceanus through an ivory gate, prophetic dreams passed through a gate of transparent horn. Ivory in Greek is elephas, the verb eliphairo means to cheat with empty hopes; Greek for horn is keras, the verb karanoo means to accomplish. See Icelos, Oneiros, Phantasos, Phobetor.

Dreamland. Fairyland, land of immortality.

DREBKULS Lettish sea deity, earth shaker. Equivalent of Poseidon.

DREM Arthurian knight known for his supernatural keenness of sight.

DRESS Concealment of reality or truth (nudity); deception; fashion. Expensive or fancy dress and ornaments imply wealth; plain dress, poverty or enemy to luxury. See garment.

Dress of changeable colors. Variable luck.

DREW Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning loved one.

DREYFUS Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning three-footed.

DRIED FLAX Utility.

DRIFTWOOD In mythology of Admiralty Islands raft on which a man and woman floated on the primordial sea while waiting for land to appear.

DRINK Symbolized by bottle, flask, jug.

Drink the cup. Expression symbolizing bear whatever sorrows befall one.

Drinking horn. Eschatological symbol. Various called Fortunate One, Happy One, Peaceful One, Radiant One. In Christianity placed at the foot of the cross to catch the divine blood. In Jewish art appears in vines. Appears also in Pagan art.

Drinking trough. Dream significance: unimportant losses.

DRIZZLECOMBE Site of one of the largest monoliths in England. Resolves into dur-iz-el (Enduring Light God) + ac-om-be (Great Sun Father). Combe (comb, coomb) also meant a hollow in a hillside. Compare hill, mountain.

DROLL Northern European demon which warned of danger. Later a buffoon, jester.

DROMI In Norse mythology the second chain with which Fenrir, the wolf, was bound and from which he broke free. Thus the expression, "I must get loose from Dromi." See Gleipner, Leding.

DRONA Literally, pot born. In India son of an ascetic. He sprang from a water pot into which a seed of life had fallen. This incident compares with one of the functions of the Holy Grail. Drona was noted as the foremost of all wielders of weapons.

DRONE Male bee which gathers no honey. It is stingless and is supported by the neuters, but is driven from the hive when food is scarce. Thus one who lives by the labors of others, an idler.

DROUGHT Universally in mythology an act of judgement or punishment by the good or supreme deity; an act of malice or mischievousness on the part of the evil deity. In Greek mythology the result of the unhappiness of Demeter, who would not provide the earth with fruitfulness as long as her daughter Persephone remained in the underworld as the wife of Hades. In the Old Testament drought is threatened as one of God's sorest judgments, and many allusions to its horrors appear in Scriptures.

DRU (DRY) A dryad or wood nymph.

DRUDENFUSS Literally, wizard's foot. Probably a German corruption of druid's foot. A pentacle worn as a symbol of deity on sandals.

DRUG A Tibetan god. Correlative of the Chinese Lung.

DRUGGER, ABEL One artless, gullible, and superstitious in the extreme. From the seller of tobacco in Ben Johnson's The Alchemist.

DRUHS Vedic spirits hostile to mankind. Name means injurious.

DRUID An ancient British or Gaulish priest. The druids conducted their rites in oak groves and the oak and mistletoe were venerated by them. They lived on vegetable diets as did the Brahmins and Magi. They supposedly possessed magical powers and were augurs, historians, judges, magicians, physicians, scientists, sorcerers. They humored the divinities with human sacrifice upon a scale which seems to have been unsurpassed in horror even by the most savage tribes of Africa or Polynesia. For the purpose wicker-work images of vast size were made, filled with living men, and set on fire. Each chief had his druid, to whom was assigned a guard of thirty men. Ovates were robed in green, to symbolize they were fresh; bards, the second step in the initiation, wore blue inasmuch as they obtained truths from the heavens; the third step in the initiation, which was that of druid, took twenty years of training, and the druid wore white to symbolize that he had labored much and conquered many things to emerge pure. The triad of the druid was: 1) keep his word; 2) keep his secret; 3) keep the peace. The badge of the druid was the serpents' egg. The word is derived from the Welsh derwydd, i. e. oak-seer.

Druid altar. Dolmen; monolith.

Druid egg. A fabulous egg hatched by the joint efforts of several serpents and bouyed into the air by their hissing. Anyone who caught it had to ride off at full speed to avoid being stung to death, but the one who caught it was sure to be successful in every undertaking and to be courted by those in power.

Druid festivals. All-Hallowe'en, Mayday Eve, Midsummer's Eve. Fires and sacrifices were offered to the sun-god on Belenian heights celebrating the equinoxes and the summer solstice.

Druid foot. A five-pointed figure which supposedly had mystical meanings; still used as a talisman in Europe. See drudenfuss.

Druidical temple at Stonehenge.

One of the seven wonders of the middle ages.

Druid stone. Also called adder stone; worn by druids as a charm.

DRUJ (1) In Persian mythology, a name of Ahriman as the principle of deception. Destroyed on Mount Damavand by Keresaspa at the end of the world. (2) A Persian female spirit of deceit and treachery. The drujes served as servants of Ahriman, and the best known is Nasu, who served in the shape of a fly which took possession of dead bodies and spread their contamination. Others are: Azhi-Dahaka, Bushyasta, Drauga.

DRUKH In Hinduism one of a group of malignant beings. They were companions of Vrtra.

DRUM Communication, dispenser of evil spirits, marching, thunder, war, warning. Instrument of shamans, used to invoke a trance and for divination. A medium of excitation. In the 18th century, a popular name for a crowded evening party was drum, probably so called because of the noise and emptiness of the entertainment. Resolves into dur-oon, i. e. enduring sun. Source of Dromore, Drummond, Dundrum, Mindrum. In Africa when someone has died, played night and day to keep witches away until the corpse is buried. Among American Indians instrument which summoned votaries to ritual dances. It also was used to drive evil spirits away from the sick. The sound of drums accompanied the rites of human sacrifice which appeased wrathful gods. Frequently drum skins were flayed from captives in the belief that the sound of such drums would terrify their enemies. In China called t'ao ku. Ritual music.

Emblem of Kuo-lao. In Ireland a summit was called druin (drum), and was the site of druidic rites. In Japan, thunder, the voice of Raijin. At Shinto shrines drums were used to call people to prayer and drive demons away. Sacred instrument of the Lapps when appealing to Leib-olmai before a bear hunt. A magic article believed to possess a soul which is able to express dissatisfaction by threatening or weeping. Desecrated if touched by a woman. Used by noiddle (shaman) to converse with spirits of the other world for the purpose of divination and prophesying. The mount or steed of Siberian shamans. In singing, a shaman calls his drum deer, eagle, horse, etc., and says he is traveling on it.

Drum beat. Thunder.

Drumstick. Phallic symbol.

Human-skull drum. Used to mark pauses between Buddhist services. Called damaru.

DRUNKENNESS Conviviality, debauchery, folly, frenzy, insecurity, madness. Acquisition of riches. Dream significance: (one's own drunkenness) success.

Drunk as a lord. Very drunk, in allusion to the reputed conviviality of the titled or wealthy.

Drunkenness of children. In a Mexican baptism a child was washed in pulque, the wine of maguey. After four years, godparents were selected, the child was passed over fire, its ears were bored, and it was given a drink of pulque 'to make it grow.'

DRUSE One of a fanatical and warlike sect, residing in the Lebanon Mountains of Syria. The religion, established in the 11th century, is drawn from Christian, Hebrew, Moslem, and other sources. Druses offer their devotions in churches and mosques, worship the image of saints and observe the fast of Ramadan.

DRUSILLA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning dew-watered, strengthening.

DRYAD (HAMADRYAD) Greek tree or wood nymph. The nymph, being wedded to the tree she inhabited for life, ceased to exist when the tree died or was felled. Eurydice, the wife of Orpheus, was a dryad. The Roman genii resemble the dryads.

DRYAS In Greek mythology son of Lycurgus. Killed by his father. See Lycurgus.

DRYASDUST, REVEREND DOCTOR A character created by Sir Walter Scott. Used for any dull speaker or writer.

DRY BED OF THE RIVER OF SOULS In Japan, the world of children's ghosts, where they toil under demon surveillance.

DRYOPE In Greek mythology daughter of King Dryops, companion of the Dryads. Beloved by Apollo, she became the ancestor of the Dryopes, a people who inhabited Thessaly. She was turned into a woodpecker, which is the meaning of her name. According to some legends, she was the mother of Pan; in other accounts, she was the water nymph who assaulted Hylas.

DRY ROD BLOSSOMS A widespread mythological motif in which a dry branch puts forth blossoms, flowers, fruits, or green leaves in token of the forgiveness of a sinner, the innocence of someone accused, one favored by a deity, etc. Aaron's rod blossomed as a sign of God's selection of Aaron and his descendants for the priesthood; Joseph won Mary in a suitor contest in which the reward was given to one whose staff bloomed; Tannhauser's staff blossomed to disprove the theory he could no more be forgiven than the dry staff could bloom.

DSOVEAN Armenian sea-born storm god. His female counterpart was Dsovinar.

DU In Welsh mythology steed which aided Kulhwch in the capture of the monster boar Twrch Trwyth. See Magic steed.

DUAD The number two, symbol of the female or passive principle.

Dualism. A belief dividing the universe between two opposing self-existent deities; good and evil, growth and decay, light and darkness, productive and destructive powers. Dualism professedly leaves to men the power of choosing whom they should obey or worship. It also considers two independent and separate natures in man, the bodily and the spiritual. Zoroastrianism exemplifies religious dualism.

DUAMUTEF In Egyptian mythology one of Horus's four sons. He had a jackal's head, represented the East, and on funeral urns guarded the heart and lungs.

DUAT One of the Egyptian underworld abodes of the dead; realm into which the sun was believed to descend at nightfall.

DUB In Irish mythology wife of Enna. She chanted spells over the sea and caused the drowning of Enna's other wife, Aide, and her family. Storm demon.

DUBH LACHA In Irish mythology wife of Mongan. Her putative father was Fiachna the Black; her actual father was the deity Manan-nan. She was born the same night as Mongan. Probably a moon goddess.

DUBSAINGLEND In Irish legend the magic horse which came from Marvelous Valley. See Magic steed.

DUBUQUE, THE OLD LADY FROM A phrase originated by the New Yorker magazine suggesting easily-shocked, unintelligent provincial.

DUCE A title from the Italian, meaning commander, leader. The word yields brilliant or leading light. Cognate with duke, Dus. Appears in caduceus, Polydeuces.

DUCK Deceit, immunity from worry, love of knowledge of external things, talkativeness. The spirit floating on the primeval ocean or abyss. Dream significance: anonymous letter. In heraldry a person of many resources. Word cognate duke.

In China called ya. Symbolic of connubial affection, felicity. Usually pictured with lotus. In Egyptian antiquity associated with Isis in bringing forth the sun. Nessa, Greek for duck, may be equated with Nissa, the name of a nymph who, according to one legend, was the mother of the sun. A Hebrew symbol of immortality. According to the Mandan (Siouan Indian) cycle, the mud out of which the earth was molded was brought to the surface of the primordial sea by a duck. Compare muskrat. In Russian fairy tales, a duck laid the golden egg (sun).

Duckling, Ugly. In legend, an ugly unpromising child, who ultimately surpasses its brothers and sisters.

Lame duck. (1) In United States political cant an office holder who has failed of re-election and displays only half-hearted interest in his work after election day until the expiration of his term in office. (2) On the stock exchange one who cannot fulfill his contracts; hence anyone unable to discharge his obligations or accept his proper place in worldly affairs.

Mandarin duck. In China and Japan a sacred bird, typifying connubial love, undying faithfulness. In Chinese Buddhism Sakyamuni, the All-Wise. In Japan called oshi or oshidori; typifies gratitude.

Play duck and drakes. Throw away one's resources extravagantly or recklessly. The allusion is to the sport of throwing stones to skim over the water in the manner of ducks.

DUD A bomb or bullet that fails to explode, hence a person who fails to make good; a failure.

DUDLEY Masculine name from a place name in Worcestershire, England.

DUDU An early Sumerian deity. The scribe.

DUDUGERA In New Guinea mythology the sun, whose parents were a fish and a maiden. Dudugera was born from the leg of his mother, a birth resembling that of Dionysus.

DUEL Dream significance: discord without results.

DUENDE A goblin or house-spirit. The name is from the Spanish.

DUERGAR In Norse mythology dwarfs dwelling in hills and rocks, and noted for their magical powers, strength, subtlety, and skill in metallurgy. They owe their origin to the maggots in the flesh of the first giant, Ymir.

DUESSA In Spenser's Faerie Queen a foul witch. Her name signifies double-minded or falsehood. Spenser intended her as a characterization of Mary Queen of Scots and the Roman Catholic Church.

DUFF Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning the dark or black-faced.

DUKE An English noble of the highest hereditary rank below a prince; in other European countries, the ruler of a duchy. Formerly the leader of an army, a chieftain, commander.

Duke man. A pickpocket's accomplice, hence one who shields the actions of his confederate.

Duke of Exeter's daughter. A rack-like instrument of torture; said to have been invented by the dukes of Exeter and Suffolk in the reign of Henry VI.

Duke of York's School. Popular name for the Royal Military Asylum in England; a soldier's orphan asylum.

DUKHOBORTSI (DUKHOBORS)

Literally, spirit-wrestlers. A sect of communistic peasants opposed to war and the use of animal labor. The members were driven by persecution from Russia in 1885, and settled in Canada and Cyprus. They deny the divinity of Christ, reject the use of images, ceremonies, and rites, dispense with ordained clergy, and give mystical interpretation to the Scriptures.

DUKUG In Sumerian mythology holy cosmic chamber; divine throne room.

DULACHAN In Irish folk-lore a mischievous sprite who rides about without a head. An aspect of wind. Probable source of the Headless Horseman in Irving's legend of Sleepy Hollow. Resembles Dund.

DULB In Irish legend smith of the Fomors.

DULCAMARA, DOCTOR A wandering physician who is a charlatan and pompous ass, from the character in Donizetti's opera L'Elisir d'Amore.

DULCARNON The horns of a dilemma, a puzzling question. From the Arabic meaning possessor of two horns and alluding to the 47th proposition of the First Book of Euclid because the two squares which contain the right angle roughly represent two horns.

DULCIE (DULCINEA) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning sweet.

DULCIMER A musical instrument shown in Christian art as an attribute to Saints Cecilia and Dunstan.

DULCINEA In Cervante's Don Quixote the name given by the hero to the country wench he makes the lady of his knightly devotion. Humorously, a lady love, a sweet heart.

bdUL-RGYAL Tibetan king of demons.

DUMAH In the cabala prince of Gehinnom, abode of sinners.

DUMPLING In Japan a charm against the perils of waves and floods. A sacred bread; in circular shape, a symbol of the sun.

DUMUZI (DUMUZIABZU, DUMUZIAPSU) Fifth antediluvian king of Sumer; husband-son of Innini. Also son of Ea, god of the deep.

Deity of regeneration, resurrection, and vegetation. Identical with Tammuz. Sometimes called Tammuz of the Abyss.

DUN A fortified eminence, hill or mound, a circular tower or stronghold common in ancient Britain and Ireland. Found as a prefix in names such as Dunbar, Dundagel, Dundee.

DUNCAN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning brown warrior.

DUND (DHUNDH) In India headless, handless, footless ghost who rides about at night with his head tied to his saddle. He calls to people in their houses; those who answer will go mad. An aspect of wind. Resembles Dulachan.

DUNDAGEL Tower or stronghold of King Arthur. Resolves into dun-d-ag-el, i.e. tower of resplendent mighty God. Alternately called Tintagel.

DUNEYRR (DUNEYR) One of the four stags (winds) that eat the buds of the Yggdrasil, the Norse world-tree.

DUNG Offensive to ghosts. In Great Britain, according to superstition, horse dung placed before a house or inside a door brings good luck. In India cow dung is a panacea for all ills; it supposedly cures disease and purifies everything.

DUNGEON Confinement, imprisonment. Dream significance: fatal results.

DUNGI King of Ur in Sumer, conqueror of neighboring city states; introducer of a standard of weights.

DUNKERS (TUNKERS) A religious sect which resembles the Baptists. Properly called Brethren; the name Dunkers was attached to them by reason of their practice of immersion.

DUN SCAITH In Irish mythology shadowy town; realm of Midir, the dark regions. In ancient Ireland a name for the Isle of Falga or Man.

DUNSTAN (DUN) Masculine name from the Old Teutonic, meaning hill stone.

DUPLEX Two-fold nature. A symbol of Christ and of sun-worship.

DURANDAL (DURANDANA, DURENDAL) Magic sword of Roland (Orlando). Reputed to have been given to him by Charlemagne; to have been captured by Roland from the giant Jutmundus; to have been the creation of fairies, who endowed it with such virtue its wielder could split a mountain with it. Compares Excalibur, Gram, Morglay.

DURATHROR (DURAPROR) One of the four stags (winds) that eat the buds of the Yggdrasil, the Norse world-tree.

DURGA In Hindu mythology ten-armed wife of Siva. Active virtue and the guardian of heroes. In her aspect as destroyer she is called Kali and slays Mahishasura (vice). In her honor a ten days' festival is annually celebrated in Bengal. Resembles Ishtar.

DUS Celtic wood demon. Same as Teutonic Scrat. A word identical with deuce, deus, duce.

DUSIO In medieval demonology a mischievous spirit of Gaulish origin, who sought the couches of women out of lust.

DUSSERA Hindu autumn festival.

DUST Death, disintegration, drought, famine. The forgotten, the neglected. A low mean condition; a multitude. Anciently, when flung on the dead, a means of soliciting the protection of the great mother or mother earth for the deceased; when flung on the living, a means of obtaining courage or support from mother earth and of disguising oneself from the malignant dead. One who demanded justice of a criminal threw dust upon him, signifying that he deserved to be cast into the grave. Compare ashes. Among Australian aborigines, ancient Egyptians and Hebrews, symbolic of bereavement, humiliation, mourning, submission. A sign of grief, which probably led to the custom of wearing black in mourning rites. It also typified punishment or a threat of God.

Dust another's jacket. Give another a thrashing.

Dust and ashes. Death, worthlessness. The grave and its contents.

DUSTMAN In nursery lore, the genius of sleep, alluding to the manner in which a child blinks and rubs his eyes as though dust were in them.

DUSURA (DOUSARES) Nabataean sun-god who died and was born each year. Patron of fertility, particularly of the vine. His mother was the virgin goddess Chaabu, and his birthday was celebrated December 25 or at the winter solstice. His emblem is a baetyl, and he has been identified with Dionysus. The cult of Chaabu and Dusura parallels that of Demeter and Persephone, also that of Ishtar and Tammuz.

DUTCH Used adjectively it has a humorous or opprobrious connotation, and traces back to the struggle waged for supremacy of the sea by England against the Netherlands.

Dutch auction. An auction in which the bidders decrease their bid until they arrive at a minimum price; hence no auction at all.

Dutch comfort. The comfort of realizing that things might be worse.

Dutch concert. An uproar, such as that made by a party of drinking Dutchmen, involving quarreling, singing, speechifying, wrangling, etc.; hence no concert.

Dutch courage. Courage aroused by liquor; pot courage.

Dutch gold. No gold at all.

Dutch treat. Pay for oneself when refreshments are served. No treat.

Dutch wife. A cane frame used in bed in hot weather in the East Indies. The arms and legs are placed on it in an effort to keep cool.

Talk like a Dutch uncle. Reprove, talk severely. The Dutch are reputed to exercise severe discipline.

Well, I'm a Dutchman. An exclamation expressing strong incredulity.

DUTCHMAN, THE (FLYING DUTCHMAN) A spectral ship supposed to be seen off the Cape of Good Hope in stormy weather. According to legend, its Dutch skipper, meeting head winds at the Cape, swore blasphemously that he would double the Cape if it took till Judgment Day, and he is doomed to beat against the wind until then. Ominous, ill luck if seen.

DU'UZU Sumerian corn and pomegranate deity. Brother-lover of Belili. Identical with Tammuz.

DUVAL, CLAUDE A romantic highwayman hanged in England in 1670. He is famed in ballad and legend.

DVALIN (DVALINN) In Norse mythology: (1) Dwarf named by Odin as inventor of runes. In some legends, said to be the father of the Norns. (2) One of the four stags (winds) that eats the buds of the world tree Yggdrasil.

DVAPARA (DVAPARAYGUA, DWAPARA) In Hinduism third or bronze age of man, consisting of 2,000 years (or 2,400 years), and in which the bull of justice stands on two feet. As virtue has declined a second quarter or by one half ceremonies increase, disease and sin grow rife, asceticism and sacrifice are performed, not disinterestedly, but in the hope of gain. Men live to be two hundred years of age and marriage laws become necessary. The soul of the world is yellow. See Yuga.

DVERGAR Dwarfs of Scandinavian mythology. Supposedly formed maggots in the flesh of the giant Ymir.

DWALE The deadly nightshade symbolizing delusion, hallucination.

DWARF One of the numerous diminutive beings in mythology. Ancients believed that whatever had great innate power had a diminutive or deformed shape, as Hephaestus. Sometimes in legend dwarfs are wise counselors of men; sometimes they are hostile to men, abduct beautiful maidens, steal corn and bread or in other ways are mischievous. Although commonly said to be forest spirits, offsprings of trees, they call on midwives for help an invariably reward them handsomely from the treasures they control or possess. They are described as the size of a child or the size of a thumb with large heads, sometimes with long beards; occasionally their feet are like those of a goat or goose. Their embryo-like form symbolizes the beginning of all things. They are clad in black, brown, or gray, suggesting they abide in underworld abodes. They live simple lives and in folklore frequently complain of human faithlessness. They are represented as living to a great age, and humans, they say, die of unwholesome food. They dislike agriculture (which disturbs their underground mansions), church bells and the clearings in a forest. Dream significance: enemies, failure. In Norse mythology they dwell in caves, recesses of the earth, rocks, and under water. Probably originally personifications of dew or moisture. They are guardians of gold and other minerals and precious stones (the glitter of sun and moon rays on the water as well as the metals within the earth). They are skilful artisans and ruled by a king who is the most skilled artisan of all. They make magic rings (fertility) and swords (lightning or sun-rays). Among the catalogue of Norse dwarfs can be found: Austre, east; Nordre, north; Sudre, south; Vestre, west. Names by which they are called are: bergsmiedlein, bjergfolk, erdleute, erdmannlein, kleinevolk, stillevolk, unterirdische, unterjordiske.

Black dwarf. A malignant gnome.

DWENDI Gods of the Tagbanuas, Philippine Islands. They are powerful and live in caves.

DWERGMAL Literally dwarf language. In Norse saga an echo, the voice of the dwarfs who supposedly dwell in caverns or rocks.

DWIGHT Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning fair or white.

DYAU Medieval English word for dew; cognate with Sanscrit dyu (brilliant) and dyaus (sky), so named as the brilliant offspring of the brilliant sky.

DYAUS (DIAUS, DYU, DYHU) Primal Vedic sky deity. A prolific bull, his spouse is Prithivi. He is the light and gleaming heavens, father of luminous deities including Ushas, the dawn, who was born from his head as Athena was born from the head of Zeus. He was also the lover of Ushas. Sometimes described as a black steed decked with pearls (dark sky set with stars) and as bearer of the thunderbolt. He was invoked as Dyaus-Pitar and symbolized by a diamond. His name yields ayus (life); it is the source of Diana, Dionysus, Juno, Zas and Zeus, as well as the Latin dies, whence the English day. He is the Hindu equivalent of the Chinese Taou, Greek Zeus, the Latin Diespiter or Jupiter, the Norse Odin and Tiwaz (Tiu), see Dyavaprithivi.

Dyaus and Prithivi. Vedic Primeval parents who make and sustain all things. They are the parents of Brhaspati (lord of devotion) and with the waters and Tvastr (fashioner) they engendered Agni (fire). Their creation is variously attributed to Indra, who is also said to be their offspring, Tvastra, and Visvakaman. They are sky and earth; far-extending; unaging; ghee (butter), milk, and honey yielding. They are wise, promote righteousness, and aid and protect their worshipers. He is a prolific bull; she a variegated cow; both are rich in seed.

DYAVA-MATAR Hindu earth-mother. Compares with Greek Demeter. Another name of Prithivi.

DYAVAPRITHIVI (DYAVAPRTHIVI) Vedic deity of sky and earth, frequently invoked as two separate deities, Dyaus (sky) and Prithivi (earth).

DYFED (DYVED) In Brythonic mythology, an enchanted land ruled by Pwyll. Region on earth above Annwn (Annwn). See Pryderi.

DYING GOD (EMASCULATED GOD)

Deity who dies and rises annually with dying and revivifying vegetation. Widely worshiped as the sun-lover of the mother-earth or fertility goddess; the son who is destroyed by his mother-mistress and descends into the netherworld, from which he is rescued by his mother-mistress or because of her weeping. Thus earth provides, destroys, and re-creates her offspring lover bringing about the trinity. He is the sacred oak king, killed by the hands of the people to satisfy the powers of the underworld that the return of vegetation, after the season of decay and drought, may be ensured, and his death is frequently brought about by crucifixion or hanging on a tree or cross as symbolic of a tree, denoting a tree's fructifying powers. Deified kings were worshiped habitually as husbands of the mother goddess and, in prehistoric times, a king, after a stated period of reign, was put to death as a sacrifice in order to obtain the good will of the deity of vegetation. Later surrogates were used, hence child and, still later, animal sacrifices. He typifies the annual renewal of life on earth, the annual triumph over death. He usually dies at the summer solstice, when days begin to shorten, and is reborn at the winter solstice, about December 25, when days begin to lengthen. Women weep for him at the harvest festival and rejoice when he rises again. His priests emasculate themselves in his honor; his men and women worshipers prostitute themselves at his temples, a form of sympathetic magic. Among the dying gods are Adonis, Attis, Bel, Jesus, Tammuz. Compare Cotyto, golden bough, oak king, resurrection myths, sacred king, surrogates.

DYLAN (DYLAN EIL MOR)

(1) Masculine name from the Cymric, meaning the sea. (2) In Welsh mythology grandson of Don, son of Gwydion and Arianrhod, twin brother of Llew Llaw. At birth he was thrown into the sea by his mother, took to its nature and swam as well as a fish, whereupon he became lord of the sea and a deity of darkness. His brother Llew Llaw was the power of light. In some versions, he is said to be an aspect of Llew Llaw, who changed his name with the seasons, Dylan the Fish being his spring name. In another version of his myth, Math, his mother's uncle had him baptized and then Dylan made for the sea where he became god of the waves. In this account Govannon, an uncle, caused his death with a blow. The waves resented his death and press toward land to avenge it. He corresponds to Modred of later legend.

DYNAMIS In Gnostic tradition, Strength; emanated from Sophia (Wisdom). Its emblem is the whip of power, which it wears for protection from moral and physical ill.

DYNE Literally, power. In Roman mythology, one of the daughters of Evander, the other being Romē.

DYSNOMIE In Greek mythology, lawlessness, a descendant of Er-is.

DYUMANI Hindu gem of the sky, the sun.

DZAJAGA (DZAJAGATSI-TENGRI, DZAJAN) Mongol heavens god. Commander of providence; decreer of birth. Resembles Jajutsi, Kaba, Tien-ming, Zajan.

DZEWANA Slavic moon goddess identified with Diana (Artemis).

DZHE MANITO Chippewa Indian good spirit.

DZIADY A Penate or guardian genius of White Russians. A deceased ancestor whose memory is commemorated four times annually. The autumnal celebrations are connected with the harvest feast, of which dziadys are presumed to partake. The spring commemoration is celebrated at Easter with the rolling of eggs which have been blessed by priests and a feast at the grave. In Bulgaria called zadusnica.

DZOAIVTS Stone giants, which among American Indians usually are cosmogonic in meaning.

DZOKHK (DZOXX) Armenian abyss beneath the earth; a hell. Connected to Paradise by the bridge Maze, which breaks under the weight of sins.

DZYZILELYA Slavic goddess of love identified with Aphrodite.

E

E Fifth rate, fifth of a group or series. Among gnostics the key of light, letter of the Sun inscribed over the oracle at Delphi. Its proper sound in the Greek alphabet was Ei, Thou Art, as addressed to the godhead Apollo, making it the equivalent of the title O On (Living God), given to Jehovah. The five points caused it to be regarded as equivalent to the five-pointed Solomon's Seal. Occult significance: adds eventfulness to either a good or bad condition; its period is five years. Character traits: ability to learn, believer in justice, hopeful, impulsive, possessor of foresight. Numerical value five. Physical weakspot: liver. Planetary or zodiacal correspondence: Aries or Mercury. Symbolic correspondence: excitement and energy. Tarot correspondence: High Priest.

Third tone in the natural scale of C Major, fifth tone in the relative scale of A Minor. In Christian tradition the three rays attached to the Holy One. Among Hebrew cabalists the character traits are: dominates arts, philosophy, and sciences; kindness; learns easily. In low form foolishly generous, weak. In medieval Roman numeral notation: 250; with a dash over it 250,000. Parallels the Celtic eadha (white poplar), Egyptian hieroglyph duck, Greek epsilon or eta, Hebrew and Phoenician he (window). Interchangeable with all vowels. See Alphabet, Dominical Letter, Word roots.

E within a circle. Single eye of light, in allusion to the Delphic E.

EA (HEA, HOA) Deity sacred to Assyrians, Babylonians, Sumerians, etc. At Eridu supreme god, a sky deity. Worshiped as one of a trinity with Anu and Enlil; later with Anu and Bel, he and Enlil being counted one. His eternal spouse Damkina, lady of the deep, also was called Gashan-ki, lady of the earth, and together they were the fourth pair born to Apsu and Tiamat or accounted the children of Anu and Anatu. Ea and Damkina were the parents of Bel, Marduk, and Silik-Mulu-khi. Aware that Apsu and Tiamat were conspiring to destroy the gods, Ea castrated Apsu and took from him the fresh waters beneath the earth, which then became his abode. Fear prevented him from destroying Tiamat. When Bel decreed that a deluge was to destroy all people Ea warned Pir-na-pishtim, who saved his family, his field laborers, his servants, and a seed of every kind of life. Thus Ea was the preserver of the human race he had created and as presiding angel he had the title karubu, borrowed by the Hebrews as kerub (cherub). As a fertility god in serpent form he became the serpent in the Adam legend. He was a deity of purification, sorcerer, patron of magicians, and master of the cedar cone, a life charm, of which his son Marduk became the dispenser. He taught men how to be victorious over the destructive forces of nature. Although a friend of man and savior of mankind, jealousy led him to cause Adapa, one of his sons, to lose immortality (see Adapa), and in his home were bred the seven evil spirits of tempest. In one form he was said to have been son as well as lover of Damkina, in which aspect Adonis and Tammuz resemble him. He corresponds to Capricornus (Goat) in western zodiacs. In one period he may have been a sacred fish as he was portrayed as a merman, then as a goat ending in a fish. He was shown large-eared (all-hearing) and wide-eyed (all-seeing). As the world spine he was symbolized by a column. A throne and a ram also were his emblems.

Other names under which Ea was worshiped: Amma-ana-ki, lord of heaven and earth; Dunga, the singer; Engur, lord of the Euphrates, Tigris, and fountains; Enki, lord of the world; Enti, lord of life; Kushi-banda, goldsmith; Lugal-ida, river king; Lamha, the palmist; Mummu, the Creative Word or Logos; Naqbu, god of the deep; Ninigkug or Nudimmud, creator of man out of clay; Nun-ura, potter; Sa-kalama, ruler of the land; Shar-apsi, god of the deep. Jah (Au) of the Hebrews, Poseidon and Zeus of the Greeks have been identified with Ea.

EABANI In the Gilgamesh epic a wild man created out of clay by Aruru to oppose Gilgamesh (light). By the help of Ukhat, attendant of Ishtar, Ebani is enticed into the service of Gilgamesh. He is depicted as a hairy monster, whom Pan resembles, and like Pan is a storm or wind deity; sometimes he is identified as a deity of darkness. He typifies a dangerous adversary who has been won over. Also called Enkidu. See Gilgamesh.

EADIE (EDDIE) Feminine name from Old English, meaning happy, rich.

EAGLE Ascension, aspiration, empire, faith, fearlessness, fertility, freedom, fortitude, generosity, immortality, inspiration, keenness of vision, majesty, nictitation, omnipotence, power, sovereignty, splendor, strength, swiftness, victory, virtue. Contrariwise symbolize discord, evil, rapacity. Typifies deity, fire, lightning, storm, wind; as king of birds, the element air and the sun as it takes its daily flight across the sky. Supposedly only creature capable of gazing at the sun without being dazzled, interpreted to mean that it is capable of contemplating divine splendor. Bird of prey; enemy of fish and serpent. Dream significance: prosperity; (dead) ruins; (wounded) loss of money. In Freemasonry emblem used in encampments of Knight Templars. In heraldry a man of action, a man of high place and lofty spirit. Judiciousness, speed in apprehension, warlike tendencies. In medieval legend an old eagle flies into the fiery region of the sun; his feathers are burnt off, and he falls into a fountain of water where his youth is renewed; thus typifies physical and spiritual regeneration and resembles the phoenix. The constellation Aquila in the Southern Sky also is known as the Eagle. Because of its claws variously identified in ancient zodiacs with the Crab, the chaos principle, and with Scorpio, the evil principle. In its cruel aspect identified with the Zu bird, a storm demon and worker of disease and evil. Emblem of Austria, Constantine, Mississippi, Rome, Russia, United States, etc.

Among American Indians the eagle is Thunderbird, the supreme deity. In Christian tradition typifies salvation. Appropriated to Saint John inasmuch as he is said to be the evangelist who soared to heaven to gaze on the light of immutable truth with keen and undazzled eyes. Also symbolizes the Lord and Leader of Hosts, the Sevenfold Spirit. In Egyptian antiquity typified the soul. In Greek mythology an eagle brought nectar to Zeus when he was hidden from Cronus, typified Zeus as thunderer, was the steed of Ganymede, and was a Trojan emblem. To ancient Hebrews the careful pains of the eagle in teaching its young to fly exemplified God's providential care over Israel. In India an attribute of the gods of death, fertility, and fire. Identified as the Garuda and as Gayatri. In Indo-European myths bringer of fire (lightning) from heaven to earth. In Iran a form of the storm god which rests on the Gaokerena tree. Emblem of the Persian empire. In Japan called Lord Uye Minu and symbolizes fearlessness. An aspect of Buddha. In Norse legend the wind, form in which Odin flew with song mead to the realm of the gods. In Rome an aspect of Jupiter. In Sumer the eagle was bringer of children and carrier of souls to the netherworld. It was the sun, thus the contest between sun and clouds was a battle between eagles and serpents. When it had rapacious claws it was a form of the storm bird Imgig or Zu, which was subdued by the sun deity Ninurta or Zamama. On ballots in the United States typifies the Republican Party. Insignia of a colonel in the United States army.

Aged eagle. Old man, unpurged condition of the soul.

Eagle and cactus. Emblem of the modern Mexican republic.

Eagle and flaming sword. In Freemasonry the silver jewel of the junior warden.

Eagle-hawk. Emblem of the Egyptian deity Horus.

Eagle-headed figure. Victory of intellect over physical strength.

Eagle killing a serpent or a hare. The great and lofty triumphant over the lowly; light triumphant over darkness. See bird and serpent, winged serpent. In Greek mythology Zeus triumphant over his enemies.

Eagle of many spirits. Eagle in Dante's sixth heaven which speaks with one voice, but is composed of many spirits and explains Divine Justice.

Eagle-plume wand. Pawnee Indian emblem of mother earth.

Eagle stones. In Britain and elsewhere stones found in eagle's nests used as birth talismans.

Eagle surmounting a ladder. In gnostic belief the Way (Scala Perfectionis) and the Goal of Vision.

Fluttering eagle. In Christianity represents the promise, "They that wait upon the Lord shall mount up with wings as eagles."

Golden eagle. With the spread eagle commemorative of the crusades. Formerly emblems of ancient kings of Babylon, the East, and of Egypt.

Imperial eagle. Eagle which followed Aeneas from Troy to Italy and which was carried by Constantine from Rome to Byzantium. It became the device of France, Prussia, Russia, etc. Sometimes portrayed with two heads. See two-headed eagle.

Lion-headed eagle. Conflict between the demon of darkness or underworld (lion) and the deity of light or the heavens (eagle).

Mount Eagle. In Japanese Buddhism mountain in India where Buddha preached.

Spread eagle. See Golden eagle above.

Two-headed eagle. Creative power, omniscience. In Christian tradition the holy spirit of God. Emblem of the joining of the Holy Roman Empire as follows: The German eagle had its head turned toward a viewer's left, the Roman toward the right. Charlemagne, when made Kaiser of the Holy Roman Empire, joined the two heads together, one looking eastward, one looking westward. The Austrian Empire, successor of the Holy Roman Empire, included the two-headed eagle in its coat of arms. In 1472, when Ivan Vasilievitch of Russia married Sophia, niece of Constantine XIV, two eagle heads were joined to symbolize the union of the Byzantine and Roman empires. In Hebrew antiquity typified the spirit of El-isha. Among the Hittites symbolized the deity of whom the king was reincarnation or son.

Winged eagle. Saint John.

EA-OANNES Assyrian fish deity. Originally two distinct deities, Ea and Oannes, which see.

EA-PE Karen (Burma) supreme deity, creator of heaven, earth, E-u, the first woman, Thanai, the first man, and all things. Parallels Jehovah.

EAR Betrayal, desire to know, eaves dropping, gossip, knowledge. Among African tribes believed to be the seat of intelligence.

Ear and knife. Emblem of Saint Peter.

Ear of Dionysius. The tyrant Dionysius of Syracuse had a hole drilled into a cavern where prisoners were kept that he might listen to the conversation. Leonardo da Vinci created such a hole for the same purpose for the tyrant of Milan. The phrase is now used for an ear trumpet.

Ear of wheat. See wheat ear.

Earrings. Amulet or charm. If gold, emblematic of sun worship; if silver, of moon worship. Indicates that a child's blood has been given, blood being a deity offering asking for protection. In Buddhism a Bodhisattva ornament.

Ear throbbing. Enemies contriving, evil gossip.

Flea in an ear. Warning; something irritating to consider.

Hare's ear. Fear, suspicion.

Large or long ears. Prying.

Long ear lobes. Buddhist mark of a sage.

Pierced ears. Preparation for the wearing of gold earrings, a solar symbol, or silver earrings, a moon symbol.

Set by the ears. Stir up, foment a quarrel, alluding to the sporting practice of rubbing the ears of a dog together to make them fight.

EARENDEL (ORENDIL) Constellation known to the Anglo-Saxons. Possibly Orion.

EARL OF CORK Nickname in Ireland for the ace of diamonds, because it was considered the poorest card in the deck and the Earl of Cork was the poorest nobleman.

EARTH (1) Planet third in order from the sun; the healing and soothing planet. (2) Harvest, sowing. Container of life, and wealth; harmonizer and sweetener; nourisher. Also darkness, death, subterranean life. Universally in mythology the yoni or common mother, the passive principle, the recipient of the fertilizing heat of the linga, the all-father, the active principle or heaven, which produces fruitfulness by laying on earth. In creation myths flesh is made of earth or clay. According to mystics the organ of the body most strongly acted upon or aroused by earth is the stomach. Earth is used as a talisman to cure a drunkard, give a child a soul or vitality, and provide strength generally. An eternal element and thus an element of the soul. The character traits assigned to earth are: lover of babies, homes, plants, soil; practical possessiveness. It stands for the cyclic pattern of birth, maturity, decay; is producer of metal (see), destroyer of water. In tarot divination an element of the diamond suit, medium of the material world. Signifies practical sense and denotes a person of the sensation type. Rites of brotherhood and other oaths are connected with the earth. Symbolized by the colors brown, dun, green, red, yellow, and by the cube, globe, and serpent. In American Indian, Oceanic, and other myths primeval man climbs up to the surface from an underground city. In Chinese mythology called k'un, element of Liu, southern quadrant; Nu, northern quadrant; Ti, eastern quadrant; Wei, western quadrant. Represented by the color yellow and by the jade disk with a large hole, or a square hollow tube. In Christian tradition the church. By Finno-Ugrics taken from the old home or village when moving to a new home as a protection from accidents and nostalgia. In Hebrew tradition used to express that which, in a moral sense, is opposed to what is heavenly, holy and spiritual. Adam was formed from earth. In India element which stands in the middle and rules the Middle Kingdom. The other four elements, fire, water, wood, and metal, rule the four directions.

Earth-fetching. In primitive legends the creator-deity commands either an animal, bird, devil, or man to dive into the primordial ocean and bring up some mud from which the earth is molded. Some earth-fetching tales are interwoven with flood stories.

Earth goddess. Universally in mythology the wife of the sky-deity. Frequently the earth and moon-goddess are identical, in which aspect she usually is the wife of the sun-deity, with a god of darkness as her lover.

Earth in marriage with heaven. Christian metaphor signifying the union of Christ and His mystic bride, the Church.

Earthly paradise. Land of beauty, immortality, and rest, believed, in the middle ages, to exist somewhere on earth. This land where death and decay were non-existent supposedly was located far to the east. A 7th century map places it in the ocean east of China; a 9th century map places it in China; in a 13th century map it is shown as a circular island near India from which it is separated by the sea and also by a battlemented wall.

Earthquake. Commonly believed to occur when the animal, deity, or man supporting earth moves. Frequently in mythology earthquakes, thunderstorms and other eruptions occur at the time of divine birth as a sign of the deity's acknowledgement and recognition that the child is divine. See Buddha. An earthquake is also a sign of a deity's anger or represents the vibration necessary to awaken earth in spring. Symbolized by a comet. Dream significance: serious danger. In Hebrew tradition used figuratively to denote God's power and wrath, and as a metaphor of great civil or national catastrophe; hence divine will. Earthquakes were among the calamities foretold as connected with the destruction of Jerusalem.

Earth-sky separation. In myths in many parts of the world, earth and sky originally were joined. In most, the air god separates the two; in some they are separated by a forest or tree deity.

Handful of earth. Death, mortality.

Run to earth. Trace the origin of something; borrowed from the hunting term meaning to chase an animal into its hole.

Salt of the earth. One who is noble or whose influence is wholesome, alluding to the fact that salt preserves from corruption or decay. In Christian tradition applied to the disciples.

Stony earth. Unproductiveness.

EARWICKER, HUMPHREY CHIMPDEN Protagonist in Finnegans Wake by James Joyce. As a Protestant Irishman of Scandinavian descent; he is a stranger in his own land. In general he typifies the masculine principle in nature, and throughout the book wherever HCE appears, whether alone or incorporated into names, words, or phrases, they serve as a leitmotif for him.

Jerry and Kevin Earwicker. Twin sons of HCE. Jerry, also known as Shem (from Seumas) typifies the thinker; Kevin, also known as Shaun (from Sean), typifies the man of action destined for conventional success. They are in constant conflict and appear to represent Cain and Abel and other mythological pairs in conflict, or mankind struggling against itself.

Maggie Earwicker. Wife of HCE. She represents the female principle in nature. HCE and she typify Adam and Eve, parents of the human race, builders of civilization.

EARWIG An insinuating or secret informer.

EASE Symbolized by a cat.

EAST The auspicious quarter where light is born. Infancy, purity. Mansion of the sun and of the dawn; also rain. Direction which crystal gazers and diviners face. In occult sciences signifies spring, the right half of the body, birth and the musical tone A. Symbolized by Oriental figures of men, women, and animals, Eastern flora, etc. The Italian icon represents East as a handsome youth with golden curls, a shining star over his head; his scarlet robe is embroidered with pearls, his girdle is embroidered with Aries, Leo, Sagittarius; he holds budding flowers and a perfuming pot; the sun is rising and plants and birds surround him. Word cognate with Eos, root of Easter. Place of birth of the triumphant hero of American Indian myths; point toward which he returns after he dies and where he lives while waiting the time appointed for his rebirth. In Buddhism a paradise, location of Isle of the Blest. In China ruled by Azure Dragon; symbolic of growing warmth of spring; element, wood. Seat of constellations Chiao, Kang, Ti, Fang, Hsin, Wei, Chi. Symbolized by a mariner's compass. In Chinese Buddhism guarded by Moli-Ch'ing. In Christianity Christ, Sun of the universe. Part of the church in the direction of the altar looking from the nave without regard to the point of the compass. In Egypt ruled by Ra. As the sun often proved deadly, also a seat of evil. Ancient Hebrews, in speaking of the different quarters of the heaven, always presumed the face was turned toward the east. Thus 'before' or 'forward' meant the east; 'behind' meant the west; the right-hand, the south; the left hand, the north. In India paradise of Indra. Illustrated by Indra on an elephant. The foremost or first born, source of prosperity. Direction ruling gall bladder and liver. In Japanese Buddhism guarded by Jikoku-ten. Direction in which Moslems turn their faces in devotion. The Navaho Indians assigned the color white and white shells and rock crystal to the east. In Zuni tradition its color is silver.

East wind. Rain. In Egypt symbolized by a hawk.

EASTER Christian festival in which the resurrection of Christ has been fixed. It incorporates some of the ancient spring equinox ceremonies of sun worship, in which there were phallic rites and spring fires, and in which the deity or offering to the deity was eaten. To eat Christ's flesh, represented by a wafer, and to drink his blood, represented by wine, is to receive him as Savior. The festival is symbolized by an ascension lily, a butterfly emerging from a chrysalis, a chick breaking its shell, the colors white and green, the egg, spring flowers, and the rabbit. The name is related to Astarte, Astothre, Eostre, and Ishtar, goddess who visited and rose from the underworld. Easter yields Enduring Eos (Enduring Dawn). Compare Festival of Tombs.

Easter maze dance. Dance performed in country villages in Britain, inherited from pagan spring festivals, which honored Caer Sidi, the revolving or spiral castle of Arthurian legend. Called Caer-droia in Wales, Troy Town in England. Troy Town is probably a survival of the Roman Troy Games, a labyrinthine dance of Asia Minor, which young noblemen of Rome performed in memory of their Trojan ancestry. In Delos a similar dance, called Crane Dance, was performed, which reenacted the escape of Theseus (sun) from the Labyrinth (underworld).

Easter-Pentecost cycle. Mystery of redemption.

Easter Sunday. Time of resurrection. The first Sunday after the Paschal full moon, i.e. the full moon that occurs on the day of the vernal equinox (about March 21st) or on any of the next 28 days. For this reason, Easter Sunday cannot be earlier than March 22nd, or later than April 25th. The council of Nice in 325 fixed this means of identifying Easter Sunday. Christ, the Day-spring, is said to have ascended on Easter Sunday as the Bright Morning Star. Anciently, in popular belief, the sun danced on Easter Sunday.

EASY CHAIR Comfort, idleness. Dream significance: change of employment.

EATING In ancient Arabia, Greece, Palestine, etc., eating together was an established indication of mutual confidence and friendship, a pledge of friendly relations between families, which descendants were expected to perpetuate. Hence the Diomedean swap, which see. The abuse of hospitality was a great crime and even a fugitive was safe for a time if he gained the shelter of an enemy's tent. See Food Sharing.

Eating an animal. An observance among primitive peoples based on the idea that acquaintance with the language of beasts or supernatural knowledge comes from eating part of an animal. A medicine man frequently is portrayed with a reptile whose tongue is attached to his own. In Celtic lore Fionn, and in Norse lore Sigurd, accidentally eat the burnt flesh of a sacred animal and, as a result, obtain supernatural wisdom.

Eating in a divine world. One who sojourns in a divine world and tastes food (eats fertility) may not return to earth with impunity is a theme found universally in mythology. Persephone, who ate a pomegranate seed while in the underworld realm of Hades, was permitted to return to earth only for a period of each year. Adapa, son of Ea, who refused to eat on his visit to heaven, was permitted to return to earth; thus he lost immortality, a life with the gods above, and died as a mortal on earth. The food eaten represents the sowing of seed, which transforms into a germ endowed with the power to create fruit, which must return to seed.

Eating the god. A world-wide religious custom. Eating the human representative of the corn-spirit was a practice among prehistoric peoples, and is the source of the harvest suppers of European peasants, in which sacramental animals are surrogates. In Sweden, and other countries the last sheaf of the corn, typifying the sheaf which contains the corn-spirit, is eaten. In some countries, the first potato, as the fertility god, is passed around for the family to enjoy. A flattering prayer accompanies the feast, in which the deity is thanked for the nourishment provided. The rite of eating the symbolic god appears to be a purification rite as well as a thanksgiving. Twice each year, in May and December, the Aztecs ate images. In May, the image of Vitzilipuztli was eaten before virgins planted the maize seed; at the winter solstice the Aztecs killed Huitzilopochtli in effigy and then ate him. The king was given the heart, the rest of the image was divided among all the males, who thereby acquired the deity's virtues. Women were not permitted to taste a morsel. See bear. In Christianity to eat Christ's flesh, symbolized by a wafer, and to drink his blood, symbolized by wine, is to receive him as Savior.

EBENEZER (EBEN) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning stone of help.

EBER In Irish legend youngest son of Miled. With his two brothers, Eremon and Amergin, he fought the people of the goddess Danu, who were vanquished. Amergin, a druid, was not interested in a kingship, and Eber and Eramon partitioned Ireland, each taking an equal part. At the end of a year, war broke out between the two ruling brothers; Eber was killed in battle and Eremon became the sole ruler. All Irish genealogies trace through Eber and Eremon to Miled. The war between the brothers resembles that of Eteocles and Poly-nices and typifies a contest between light and darkness.

EBER'S SONS (HEBER'S SONS)

Semite wanderers; Eber being an ancestor of the Hebrews.

EBISU One of the Shichi-Fuku-Jin, seven Japanese deities of happiness. God of plenty, giver of daily food, first angler, patron of fishermen, workers and trades people. Personification of candor. Represented with a rod and line under one arm and a tai fish under the other. He was transformed from a jelly-fish, the form he had as Hirugo. His image is regarded a good luck talisman. Also called Kotoshironushi-nomikoto.

EBLIS (IBLIS) Mohammedan devil, identical with Satan. Two legends are attached to him: Before his fall he was called Azazel. When God created Adam, He commanded all the angels to worship man, but Azazel said, "Me thou hast created of smokeless fire, and shall I reverence a creature made of dust?" Angered by this insolent answer, God turned Azazel into a Sheytan (devil), and he became the father of all evil geni. In the second account, before life was breathed into Adam, all the angels came to look at the shape of clay. Azazel knowing that God intended man to be his superior, vowed never to acknowledge him as such and kicked the figure until it rang. The five sons of Eblis were: Awar, demon of lasciviousness; Dasim, demon of discord; Sut, demon of lies; Tir, demon of fatal accidents; Zalam-bur, demon of mercantile dishonesty.

EBONY Death, night, skepticism. In the language of flowers: You are hard.

ECCE HOMO Literally from the Latin, behold the man. A name given to paintings of Jesus bound with ropes and crowned with thorns as, according to tradition, He was so shown to the people by Pilate, who supposedly said to them, "Ecce homo."

ECHIDNA (ECHIS) In Greek mythology daughter of Tartarus. A blood thirsty monster, half woman, half serpent, which crushes its victims in its coils; thus anything that chokes as anguish or sin. She was finally conquered by Argos Panoptes. By Typhon she was the mother of Cerberus, Chimera, Colchian Dragon, Gorgons, the hundred-headed dragon of the Hesperides, Lernaean Hydra, Nemean Lion, the many-headed dog Orthrus, Scylla, Sphinx, and the vulture that gnawed away the liver of Prometheus. Parallels the Vedic Ahi. Spenser in Faerie Queene, makes her the mother of the Blatant Beast.

ECHO In Greek mythology an Oread or mountain nymph. When Zeus turned his attentions to anyone but Hera, Echo, to divert the attention of Hera, talked incessantly. Hera, discovering how she had been deceived, inflicted Echo with the punishment of never speaking until spoken to and then she might only repeat what she heard. In another legend she wasted away in unrequited love for the youth Narcissus until nothing remained but her voice. In one version of the Narcissus legend the youth accidentally killed her, and she sometimes is shown with the lance that pierced her. In a South Pacific legend Echo, as the bodiless voice, is the earliest of all existence, i. e. "In the beginning was the Word."

ECKE Literally, he who causes fear. In Teutonic mythology a storm demon. See Jochgrimm.

ECKESAX (UOKESAHS) In Norse mythology fearful sword tempered by dwarfs.

ECKHARDT In German folklore a venerable old man who is said to appear on Maundy Thursday evening to warn of the approach of the headless bodies and two-legged horses which traverse the streets on that night or to announce the coming of Frau Holle at the head of the hosts of the dead.

ECLIPSE Disaster, end of the world. In a far-reaching belief, an eclipse is the swallowing of the sun or moon by a monster; some of the monsters are: Alka Buriat, Asura Svarbhanu, Rahu. Figuratively, cast into shadow, darken, hide. Dream significance: death, failure. In American Indian tradition the sun or moon holding his or her child. In Babylonian mythology period of darkness caused by seven devils invading the vault of heaven and surrounding the moon-god. In China caused by a dragon, which appears when an emperor lacks virtue and devours the sun or moon. In Japanese mythology caused when the sun-goddess Amaterasu retreated to escape the brutality of her brother Susa-no-wo, storm-deity.

ECONOMY In an Italian icon personified by a venerable woman wearing an olive crown. A pair of compasses in one hand, a wand in the other. By her side is the rudder of a ship.

ED Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning back or wealth, and from the Hebrew, meaning witness.

EDAN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning fire.

EDDA (1) In Norse mythology the mortal woman by whom Heimdall became the father of his son Thrall, the first of the thralls. (2) Either of two collections of sacred Icelandic literature or the sacred books of the Norsemen. Edda, a genitive of Oddi, meaning great-grandmother, was the name of a homestead in Iceland which was a seat of learning. Another derivation is that Edda is from odhr (or opr), meaning song or poem, hence poetics or treatise of poetry.

EDELWEISS Courage, daring, immortality, noble memories, purity. National emblem of Switzerland, and used for wreaths on Ascension Day. Because it grows in rocks and crevices difficult of access, coveted by tourists as proof of alpine prowess. Name means noble white. Also called Alpine cudweed, lion's foot.

EDEN See Garden of Eden.

EDGAR (ED, EDDIE, NED, NEDDIE) Masculine name from Old English, meaning happy, rich, and spear; a javelin, protector of property.

EDITH Feminine name from Old English, meaning happy, rich, and war.

EDJI Altaic first woman, wife of Torongoi. Like Adam and Eve, she and her husband succumb to temptation and suffer death. Name means mother.

EDMUND (EDMOND) Masculine name from Old English, meaning happy, rich, protection.

EDNA Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning happiness, pleasure. Also Latinized form of the Irish Eithane, meaning fruit, kernel.

EDOM In Old Testament the name by which Esau was called after he sold his birthright; thus a reprobate. The name means red and refers to the food for which he sold his right as well as his coloring.

EDUCATION In an Italian icon personified by a mature woman in a cloth of gold. A ray shining on her shows her turgid breasts. With a rod in one hand she seems to be teaching a child to read. A tender plant is tied to a pale fixed to the ground.

EDWARD (ED, NED, TED)
(1) Masculine name from Old English, meaning happy, rich, protector of property. (2) In an English folk-ballad a youth who has killed his father and who sings of his hatred of his mother for having urged him to the deed.

EDWIN (ED) Masculine name from Old English, meaning friend, gainer of property, happy. Feminine form, Edwina.

EEG Scandinavian for oak. Parallels the word root ac or ak, meaning great.

EEL Elusiveness, slipperiness. Dream significance: (alive) missing success; (dead) revenge accomplished. Word related to El (God). In Japanese mythology called unagi; worshiped as sacred bringer of good fortune.

EF (EEF) (1) In Egyptian antiquity a name sometimes given to the ram-headed form of the sun. Another name for Khnemu. (2) Word root meaning life; appears in alive, Eve, ivy. F and v are interchangeable; all vowels are interchangeable.

EFFIGY An image representing a part or the whole of a deity. Buried in resurrection rites; con-jured with; dipped in water as a rain charm; eaten or sacrificed to provide worshipers with fertility, health, strength, wealth, and success in battles; hung on a door, in a field, or in a village to dispel demons and ghosts; thrown into streams in fertility rites. Compare doll, eating the god. In popular use a stuffed figure or representation of some person who has incurred odium is displayed in a public place, where it is burned or hanged.

EGBERT Masculine name from Old English, meaning bright and sword.

EGDER (EGDIR) Norse storm-eagle that appears at Ragnarok and symbolized the howling wind running through the forest, the noise being made by the music of his harp.

EGERIA In Roman legendary history one of the Camanae or fountain nymphs. She predicted that wherever the ancilia was pre-served the people would be the dominant people on earth. See Sali. As a giver of life, she was invoked by women in child-birth, and identified with Diana. She favored or was the consort of Numa Pompilius, second legendary emperor of Rome, and initiated him in forms of religious worship and instructed him in wise legislation; hence a woman adviser or counselor, a woman who influences a statesman. Often applied satirically.

EGG Chaos, cosmic germ of the universe, creation, germ of life, immortality, sun, triad. In some traditions, heaven and earth were developed from an egg-shaped chaotic mass; in others, earth formed from the egg which floated on the primeval sea; in still others, the sun came into being when an egg, tossed into the sky, burst. Dream significance: (broken) misfortune, quarrel; (red) abundance; (scrambled) discord; (whole) abundance. In the middle ages an egg with the yolk removed and filled with salt was eaten before retiring that one might see in a dream the person one was to marry. In Christian tradition emblem of Easter, symbolic of hope and resurrection. In Egyptian antiquity seat of the soul. The Sun was born of Chaos Goose; Ptah, lord of truth, emerged from an egg. In European folklore symbol of initiation as the apple is of consummation. In Greek mythology Night from which Love issued, sacred to Aphrodite. In Orphic rites held to be the shape of the universe, that which gives birth to all things and in itself contains all things. Used for purification and as offering to the dead. Among primitive Greeks taboo, as being the principle of life, related to the World Egg. In Hebrew tradition a roasted egg, the betzah, was served at the Passover feast or Seder to symbolize the sacrifice which was brought to the Temple on festive occasions. In Polynesian myths the world came from a cosmic egg dropped by a primeval bird into the primordial sea.

Duck egg. In the Finnish epic Kalevala, from the seven eggs, six of gold and one of iron, laid by a duck on the waters came the sun, moon, vault of heaven, the earth, and other parts of the universe. Source of the fairytale the Ugly Duckling, the ugly duckling corresponding to the egg of iron.

Easter egg. An egg dyed, usually red, or decorated, or something of egg shape, as a candy or pastry, and used as an Easter gift. In Egyptian antiquity and among other pagan peoples the egg was regarded as a symbol of the recreation of the sun, and colored in rites in the Sun's honor. The Christians borrowed the tradition as the emblem of resurrection. It frequently is colored red in allusion to the blood shed for man's salvation.

Egg and dart. Greek architectural design typifying conjunction of the divine pair, the female productive and male generative powers. Compares with other architectural motifs developed from the rhythmic use of the circle and upright, as the jewel in lotus.

Egg in serpent's coils. Eternal germ of the universe encircled by Creative Wisdom.

Eggshell. Brittleness, that which is breakable, thin protection.

Emu egg. Australian sun symbol.

Golden egg. Egg laid by the primeval goose, bird of the spirit. The created world, the sun. In Egyptian antiquity the fruit of Isis. In Hinduism egg which grew from the germ deposited on the primordial waters by Maya and from which emerged Brahma, the ancestor of all things.

Nest egg. A glass egg laid in a nest to cause a hen to lay her eggs there, hence something laid by for future use.

Three eggs. In Peruvian mythology three eggs fell from the sky, one of gold from which chiefs were hatched, one of silver from which nobles were hatched, one of copper from which commoners were hatched.

EGIL (EGIL-ORVANDEL, EGILL)

Norse elf artisan. Son of Ivalde and Greip; husband of Groa; brother of Thjasse-Volund. He is the great archer, whose arrows are rain and sleet. As archer he also is called Avo and Orvandel. In the Saga of Thidrik a story relating to his skill as an archer is told; the tale of William Tell and the apple is its exact counterpart.

EGIS (AEGIS) In Greek mythology defensive armor or shield owned by Zeus and given to Apollo and Athena. Instrument by which Zeus created darkness, storms, tempests. It was made of the skin of the goat Amalthea, foster-mother of Zeus. When it became the shield of Athena, it appeared as a scaly cloak bordered with serpents and bearing the Medusa head, which Athena had received as a gift from Perseus. Any protecting influence or power.

EGLANTINE Symbolic of simplicity, poetry, talent. In the language of flowers: I wound to heal.

EGMOND (EGMUND) Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning terrible protector.

EGTHER Norse sword guardian. Same as Aegir, Gymer.

EGYPT (AEGYPT) In antiquity a land of which the people were concerned primarily with life after death. Proverbial for captivity, idolatry, intellectual accomplishment, and tyranny. The Upper kingdom was symbolized by a white crown and flowering rush; the Lower kingdom by a red crown and papyrus. Various sources of the name are given: it is derived from the Greek Aigyptos, a rough translation of the hieroglyphs meaning House of the Spirit of Ptah; it is made up of two words which signify a goad and a vulture, in allusion no doubt to zodiacal signs from the natural desire of men to give splendor to their country. An old name for Egypt was Kami, which appears to be identical with khama, Hebrew for sun and with cam, Gypsy for sun. The word Egypt resolves into Ej-yp-te, yielding Aged Brilliant Eye or Sun.

Egyptian bondage. Distressing servitude, such as that suffered by the Israelites under the Egyptians.

Egyptian cross. The ankh.

Egyptian deities. Ennead at Heliopolis: Ra (sun), Nut (heavens), Shu (air), Seb (earth), Tefnut (rain), Osiris (corn spirit), Isis (Nile or earth goddess), Nephtys (great mother), Set (evil and war). Khepera (rebirth) and Horus (eye of Ra) are substitutes. Gods of the dead: Amset, Duamutef, Horus Hapi, Kebehse-nuf, Osiris. Oracles: Amon, the ram; Apis, the bull; Bes, the dwarf; Sebek, the crocodile; Uazit, the serpent. Trinities: Amon (Amon-Ra)-Mut-Khonsu; Ka (spirit)-Khu (soul)-Khat (body); Khaybet (shadow)-Ba (soul)-Sahu (mummy); Khnemu-Satet-Anuquet; Osiris-Isis-Horus; Osiris-Isis-Set; Osiris-Neith-Horus; Ptah-Hapi-Virgin Cow; Ptah-Sokar-Asar (Osiris); Ra-Khepera-Tum.

Egyptian disposition. A thieving disposition. In this phrase a Gypsy is implied.

Egyptian pebble. Jasper used as a gem and symbolizing resignation.

Fleshpots of Egypt. The good things of this world, especially those that were formerly at one's disposal but no longer are so; in allusion to the complaints of Israelites suffering in the wilderness.

EHEIEH In the cabalistic system a name of God signifying I am or existence. See Sephira.

EHLAUMEL Yuki (California) Indian creator deity. A thunder god.

EHLOSE Zulu guardian spirit. Warns of approaching danger.

EHO Cornish for salmon, fish providing intelligence. See salmon. Cognate with hog.

EI Hebrew form of Jehovah, of which the root is 'to be,' or 'to live.' Pronounced Jah.

EIFFEL TOWER A skeleton tower.

EIGHT Compass directions, division, health, mourning, peace, power, purification, regeneration, revolution, rupture, satisfaction, security, segregation, solidity, sorrows, wealth. Only number except zero which can be rewritten without lifting pen from paper, thus endlessness, infinity. The breaking back of the material to the spiritual. Digit value of the name IHVH (Jehovah); numeration of Jesus in Greek. In antiquity the original idea of the ogdoad, or eight forms of the Lord of Time, appears to have been the seven planets circling the Polar Axis. The division of the zodiac into twelve mansions was a comparatively late conception. Pythagorean number of solar increase or wisdom; nine being the number of lunar increase. As a figure of regeneration the swastika frequently is woven into eight in architectural designs. By mystics called the gleamer, and assigned to the Assyrian Nebo, Christ, Egyptian Thoth, Greek Hermes, Roman Mercury. Because it is formed with links, it represents the mystic tie or spirit. Typifies the perfect intelligence, blend of self-conscious and subconscious. Corresponds to the color rose, Hebrew letter Cheth, planet Mars, zodiacal house Scorpio. Its rhythm suggests alternate or twin circles of action and reaction, evolution and involution, flux and reflux, justice and injustice, knowledge and love. It represents the fact that opposite forms of expression are effects in a single cause. Because it is associated with Mars it denotes unleashed, unrestrained power. In a name or cycle it denotes discipline and discrimination. It endows the power to be used for the improvement of mankind; if diverted brings destruction. Number of magic and science, of material success, and brings endurance, energy, and wealth to those who come under its vibration. Its character traits are aberration, attainment, deflection, domination, eccentricity, madness, material achievement, self-assertiveness.

In the eighth circle of Dante's Inferno those who engaged in serious crimes are punished in a burning flame. American Indians conceived heaven in the form of an eight-spoked wheel called the Wheel of Good Law. Babylonian sun emblem. Buddhist sacred number signifying the eight directions. The eight auspicious or lucky signs on Buddha's foot are: banner or canopy, conch shell, endless knot, two fish, jar or vase, lotus or bell, wheel of the law, white parasol. The eight paths of wisdom are: right conduct, right contemplation, right effort, right faith, right occupation, right resolve, right self-concentration, right speech. The eight precious things are: artemisia leaf, books, coin, jade or stone gong, lozenge (musical instrument), metal mirror, pearl, rhinoceros horn. In China eight magic horses (winds) were attached to the chariot of Mu Wang; the seasons once numbered eight, the holy steps to the North Temple of Heaven at Peking are eight. In Chinese Buddhism the eight precious organs of Buddha's body are: gall bladder, heart, intestines, kidney, liver, lungs, spleen, stomach. In Buddhism and Taoism the Pa (Pao) or eight precious things are: fang-sheng (solid lozenge), fang-shêng (hollow lozenge), shu (double lozenge or two books), ch'ien (cash), chu (pearl), ai-yeh (artemisia leaf), ch'ing (inverted V), chueh (pair of horns). The Pa Kwa (see) from which the written Chinese language was devised, and used for purposes of divination, is formed by placing the yang and yin signs over one another in eight combinations. The Pa Hsien (see) or Eight Chinese Immortals represented different conditions in life and symbolized abstraction, happiness, transmutation. Eight is sacred to Christ in his essential elements, and represents the number of beatitudes in the book of Matthew. Baptismal fonts are octagonal in form to signify that creation was completed in seven days and regeneration occurred on the eighth. In Egyptian antiquity an emblem of Thoth as reformer and regenerator who poured waters of purification on the heads of the initiated. The ogdoad or eight ancestors of the Egyptian gods are: Nuu and Nut, abysmal force; Heh and Hehet, endless space; Kek and Keket, darkness; Niu and Nit, sultry air. In Greek antiquity the tower of winds at Athens was octagonal; the horses (winds) drawing Apollo's chariot were eight. Also a number sacred to Poseidon. In one direction the pillars of the Parthenon are eight. In Hebrew tradition eight persons were saved from the flood. The number typifies atonement or regeneration. In the cabala eight symbolizes splendor as it was the seal with which God sealed the West when he contemplated it behind Him. In Hinduism the Vasus, forms of fire or light, protected the eight regions of the world. The Gayatri, prayer of Hindu sacrifice, consists of eight syllables.

EIGHTEEN Life symbol. According to mystics corresponds to the moon in the tarot deck and reflects the lights of the subconscious. Number of Chinese Lohan. Christian number signifying great reward. In Hebrew tradition an evil number, due to the fact that the captivity of Israel under Egon, king of Moab, lasted 18 years. Cabalists call it the son of error and superstition.

EIGHT HUNDRED Number of Japanese kami (gods). In Norse mythology number of warriors in Valhalla.

EIGHT HUNDRED EIGHTY EIGHT Sacred Christian number. Numerical value of J-e-s-u-s in contrast to 666, number of the Beast. See SSS. Hebrew cabalists identify 888 with the Higher Mind.

EIGHTY Numerical value of Arabic letter fa, Greek pi, Hebrew pe, Roman (Latin) r.

EIGHTY FOUR Number of great Buddhist sorcerers, guardians of wealth.

EIGHTY ONE Fundamental truth of truths. The immutable nine, symbolic of immutable truth, multiplied nine times.

EGIN Celtic fertility goddess; daughter of the underworld god Caradawc, wife of a chief called Sarrlog, lord of Old Sarum. Sainted by the Christians she was the first female saint in Britain.

EIKTHYRNER (EIKTHYRNIR) In Norse mythology oak-thorned or knotty-horned stag which stands over Valhalla. From his antlers fall drops sufficient to fill the thirty-six rivers, of which twelve flow to deity abodes; twelve to human abodes; twelve to Niflheim.

EILEEN (AILEEN) Feminine name from the Celtic of uncertain meaning; probably a form of Helen.

EILEITHYIA Greek goddess who presided over childbirth; venerated by travailing women. In early myths two goddesses appeared with the name, one presiding over easy births, the other prolonging birth pains. Later as a single goddess, the daughter of Zeus and Hera, her functions were said to represent the pleasure or anger of the goddess, who was displeased by unchastity or too frequent childbirth. Still later the name was used as an epithet of Artemis or of Hera instead of as that of an independent goddess.

EING SAUNG NAT Indo-Chinese household spirit.

EINHERI (EINHER JE) One of the great Norse warriors who by their valor were counted worthy of admission to Valhalla after falling in battle. Name from the Danish ein (excellent) + herja (warrior).

EINHERIER (EINHERJAR) In the Norse sagas ghostly or spectral battles; heard but not seen. Thunder storms.

EIR (EIL, EIRA, EYRA) Norse goddess of healing and peace. She appeared late, replacing Odin and Thor as physicians, and was an attendant of Freya. Name signifies to care for or to save.

EIRE Celtic mother of gods. Goddess of earth, darkness, passive principle, water. Eponymous ancestress of Ireland. Her name signifies night and obscurity. Also known as Ama, Anan, Anith, Aonach, Anu, Eadna, Eirean, Eirin, Eirinn, Eoghana, Iath, Ith, Momo, Mumham, Nannan, Nanu, Ops, Sibhol, Tlachgo, Tlacht. See Eriu.

EIRENE (IRENE) Greek goddess of peace.

EIRIK Mighty Norse warrior whom Odin robbed of life in order to fill the halls of Valhalla.

EISTEDDFOD Anciently the meeting of Welsh bards. Now held annually for the encouragement of Welsh literature and music. From the Welsh eistedd (to sit).

EISTLA In Norse sagas a daughter of Aegir and Ran. A Van-mother of Heimdall. One of the operators of the World-mill, i. e. personification of the waves. See Vana Mothers.

EITHINOHA Iroquois name signifying our mother. Mother of Onatah. Earth-goddess.

EKAJATA Buddhist Blue Tara, the angry goddess, ruler of the Tan-ma furies. She has one chignon; her emblems are: danda (staff), kapala (skull cup), sankha (conch shell), sanmudras (ornaments). In Tibet called Ral-gcig-ma.

EKCHUAH Mayapan deity of merchants and travelers. The black god with red lips to whom incense was burned by travelers when they rested for the night.

EKEKO (EKAKO, EQEQO) Aymara (Peru) fertility spirit. A good-luck god. His image as a comic fat little man covered with toy household utensils is kept as a fertility and good-luck charm.

EKERA Ethiopian afterworld, where life after death is lived as a shadow-like existence.

EKIBIOGAMI Japanese god of pestilence.

EKIMMU Babylonian spirit which could find no rest and returned to earth to fasten himself on anyone who had been connected with him during his life on earth. Name signifying the thing which is snatched away.

E-KUR Name of the great temple to Enlil at Nippur, which has become a word for temple.

EKURRA Assyrian underworld. The French ecurie (stable), which yields great-fire-eye, derived from it.

EL (AL, ALLAH, ELAH, ELOAH, ELYON, IL, ILAH, ILU) (1) Ancient Semitic title for God; later the name of a specific deity. El, which probably anciently denoted high or sky-god, is now interpreted to mean power or strength. Il (being), Ilu (eternal) Jaoth (Jehovah) were designations used by Babylonians. The great trinity, Anu, Hea, and Bel, probably emanated from El. El was used by the Phoenicians for the high-one commonly identified as Shamash. Baal (lord) was the title used in Syria. Among Hebrews of northern tribes El or Elohim prehistorically probably was a moon-deity, later a sun deity absorbed by Yaw (Jah or Jehovah), with whom his name became interchangeable. El appears in Hebrew poetry as First Cause, God, Mighty One, principle or beginning of all things. Elohim is the plural form of El, expressing many manifestations and powers, but it is used as singular. Parallels Rakkab-Malak-Bel. In Cabalistic system, a name of Chesed, the fourth Sefira. As a word root, El appears in electricity, Bethel, Daniel, Eli, Elijah. (2) Celtic for angel. Word akin to eel.

El of Gebal. Semitic deity with four wings and four eyes, two in the back of his head, two in front. Two of his eyes remained open while he slept; two of his wings flew while two were at rest. Probably a lord of the four winds, a sky or sun deity. Compare Argus, Janus.

ELAINE (ELAYNE, ELEN) (1) Feminine name; French form of Helen. (2) In Arthurian romances the name of two heroines, both of whom were in love with Lancelot. One was the 'lily maid of Astolat,' who pines and dies for love of Lancelot when she discovers the knight's love is given to Guinevere, Arthur's queen. By her request, her body is placed on a barge, a lily in her right hand, and in her left a letter avowing her love and attesting her innocence for her death. When the barge stopped at the palace Arthur read the letter. He ordered her body brought in and buried like a queen. The other was the daughter of King Pelles. She wanted Lancelot to marry her, and when he refused, by magic she acquired the form of Guinevere and through this deception became the mother of Sir Galahad. Both personify aspects of the moon.

ELAM Literally, lord sun. Name of an ancient country located east of Babylon and north of the Persian Gulf. The Elamites were a fierce, warlike people; plunderers. The Elamites, from the east, with the Amorites, from the west, destroyed the brilliant culture established in Sumer by Ur-Nammu.

ELATHA (ELATHAN) Celtic primitive culture god, king of the Fomorians, deities of the deep. Noted for his beauty, by Eri, his sister-wife, he became the father of the most beautiful of all creatures, Bres. Eri was counted of the Tuatha De Danann; for this reason Bres became king of the Tuatha De Danaan indicating that the custom of the early Celtic peoples was succession through the female line.

ELATH-IAHU Kenite smith-god. Perhaps an early aspect of Jehovah. Iahu, an early title of the Egyptian Set, also was a name for Isis, and is the origin of the Greek name Iacchus (Bacchus).

ELBERICH (ALBERICH) Dwarf king of the Niebelungenlied from whose name the Brythonic Oberon was derived.

ELBERT (ALBERT, BERT, BERTIE, ED) Masculine name from Old English, meaning noble and bright. Feminine form Elberta.

EL-BUGAT Arabic festival of weeping women celebrated in honor of Adonis. In the rites women cut off their hair and wept. Women who hesitated to make the sacrifice of their hair had to offer themselves to strangers, either at the market place or in the temple, and the gold received as the price of their favors was offered to Aphrodite (or Ishtar in Ishtar-Tammuz rites). Priests of Adonis mutilated themselves in imitation of the god.

EL-BURAK Enchanted horse on which Mahomet sprang to heaven. Steed of the soul.

EL CHAI In cabalistic system a name of Yesod, the ninth Sefira, signifying Mighty Living One.

ELCMAR In Irish mythology one of the Tuatha De Danann. Dagda sent him on a journey and then wrought spells surrounding Elcmar in darkness. While Elcmar was away, Dagda assumed his form and visited his wife. Oengus was conceived. Elcmar corresponds to Amphitryon. A cuckold.

ELDER March 29 birthday flower symbolizing compassion, zealousness. Tree of ill-luck; tree connected with death, the unlucky number thirteen, and witches. 'Der' equates with 'dur' of enduring, thus the word yields enduring El (God). Tree on which Judas reputedly hung himself (Piers Plowman). Called crucifixion tree. In English folklore to burn logs of elder is to bring the devil into the house. In the druidic Beithe-Luis-Nion tree alphabet, tree of the thirteenth consonant, ruis (R), corresponding to the month November 26 to December 22, a month without fertility. In Ireland, elder sticks were used by witches as magic horses.

Dwarf elder. Said to grow only where a Dane's blood has been shed, as it flourishes only where Danes have fought. In Celtic druidic tree alphabet, tree of the twelfth consonant, peith (P), and the twelfth druidic month October 29 to November 25. Originally the consonant was called ngetal (NG) and the tree was the ngetal or reed, which became ready for cutting in November. The reed was an ancient symbol of royalty in the Eastern Mediterranean, and typified power in Ireland. The number twelve signified established power and the reed was used for thatching, thus establishing the house in Ireland.

ELDERLINESS God, ability to make a choice, authority, constancy, discretion, experience, knowledge, ripeness, venerability. Also, inactivity, infirmity, malice, need of assistance, stubbornness, vulnerability. Denotes time labors to destroy.

ELDHIMNER Norse kettle in which Saehrimner, the boar, is cooked every morning for heroes in Valhalla. Fertility of the underworld.

ELDIR (ELDER) Norse fire producer, servant of the sea-deity Aegir. Typifies the phosphorescent flashes from the sea at night. Guard who replaced Funafeng at Aegir's door.

EL DORADO Literally, the gilded. Name given to the king of Manoa, who appears to be legendary. He ruled a city of fabulous wealth, placed by early explorers along the Amazon. He supposedly was covered with oil and then powdered with gold dust daily. Expeditions from England and Spain tried in vain to discover the king and finally the name was given to his legendary empire. Hence any rich lode or region abounding in gold, precious stones, or other valuable commodities.

ELDRED Masculine name from Old English, meaning old and counsel.

ELDHIRMNIR In Norse mythology the giant caldron in Valhalla. In it was cooked the boar Saehrimnir, which came to life after each killing. A world pot, which provided vegetation.

ELE Word root from the Greek, meaning giver of light or shiner. Appears in Eleleus, a surname of Apollo and Dionysus; Eleuther, a son of Apollo; in Eleutho, the name of Juno Lucina in her aspect of light-giver; in Helios, the sun, and in Selene, the moon.

ELEANOR (ELEANORA, ELINOR, ELLA, LEONORA, NELL, NELLIE, NORA) Feminine name; a form of Helen. From the Greek, meaning light.

ELEAZER (ELEAZAR) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning to whom God is help.

ELECTION In an Italian icon personified by an old woman who wears a gold chain and a heart. On her right side an oak tree, at which she points; on her left, a serpent. She holds the motto "Virtutem Eligo."

ELECTRA In Greek mythology: (1) Daughter of Atlas, one of the Pleiades, wife of Dardanus. By Zeus, she became the ancestress of the Trojans, and she took the fall of Troy so much to heart, she left her place in the Pleiades that she might not see the actual destruction of her beloved city. In some accounts, she has disappeared completely; in others, she moved over to the Great Bear, where she glimmers as a small star beside the central star of the arch; in a third account she shows herself to the mortal eye occasionally, in the guise of a comet. In the various legends attached to the Pleiades, Merope sometimes is said to be the Lost Pleiade; sometimes Sterope.

(2) The sparkling light of electricity, a daughter of Oceanus, and the wife of Thaumias, god of the surface of the sea, which reflects light. They are the parents of the Harpies and of Iris. Electra had amber-colored hair of rare beauty and, when she wept, her tears, being too precious to be lost, formed drops of amber. (3) Daughter of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra, sister of Orestes and Iphigenia. She incited her brother Orestes to murder their mother Clytemnestra and Aegisthus, to avenge the murder of their father. Electra appears as one whose sexual appetite for her father remains unfulfilled, and who fanatically seeks revenge.

Electra complex. In psychoanalysis, the love of a daughter for her father; female aspect of the Oedipus complex.

ELEGABALUS Name under which the Romans worshiped the sun in the form of a black conical stone, which they believed had fallen from heaven.

ELELEU Greek war-cry, meaning shining light. Cognate Halle-lujah.

ELELEUS Surname of Apollo and Dionysus.

ELEMENTS Agents of creation, destruction, reproduction. Building materials of the universe. In primitive societies, the world is conceived as having come into being by the interaction of fire and water. Among ancients who counted the elements as four - water, fire, air, earth - were the Egyptians, Greeks, Hebrews, and Persians. Hebrews designated the four elements with the sacred tetragram INRI, i.e. Iaminim (water), Nour (fire), Ruach (air), Iebschah (earth). The pearl was worshiped as sacred to water, meteors sacred to fire, the rainbow sacred to air, and the ruby sacred to earth. The animals sacred to the elements were: fish (or dragon) to water, man (or angel) to fire, eagle to air, bull (or lion) to earth. Mystics assigned character traits to the influences of elements. Influenced by: water - the compassionate, healers, kindly, understanding; fire - the emotional, irresistible, mercurial, winning; air - the dreamer, freedom loving, profound; earth - the lover of babies, plants, possessive, practical.

Chinese Taoists worship five elements - water, fire, metal, wood, earth. They influence the ten celestial stems and produce the five atmospheric conditions, the five colors, the five kinds of grain, five metals, five planets, and five tastes. They produce and conquer one another according to a definite and eternal law, large quantities prevailing over smaller ones: water produces wood but destroys metal (spirituality over materiality), fire produces earth but destroys metal (non-substance over substance), metal produces water but destroys wood (hardness over softness), wood produces fire but destroys earth (density conquering incoherence), earth produces metal but destroys water (solidity over insolidity). All misfortunes come from disturbances of the five elements, and for this reason Taoists oppose interference with nature. Chinese and Japanese Buddhists also worship five elements: earth, water, fire, air, ether. Earth, ruler of the middle kingdom, is represented by a square; water, ruler of the north, by a ball or circle; fire, ruler of the south, by a triangle; air, ruler of the east, by a crescent; ether, ruler of the west by a mani or jewel of the lotus. The pattern is used as a memorial pole and as a talisman. The form was adopted by the medieval European alchemists, who considered the two upper symbols of the diagram as one, air. See T'ai I Ching.

The colors assigned by Greeks and Romans were: air, yellow; earth, blue; fire, red; water, green; by Hebrews: air, yellow; earth, white; fire, red; water, purple; by Leonardo da Vinci: air, blue; earth, yellow; fire, red; water, green.

ELENA Feminine name; Italian form of Helen.

ELEN LWYDDAWG In Arthurian legend daughter of Coel (Cole) and wife of Myrddin (Merlin). A war-goddess, her name signifies Elen, Leader of Hosts.

ELEPHANT Awkwardness, caution, cumbersomeness, endurance, gentleness, insensitivity, longevity, masculine phallic principle, memory, modesty, patience, ponderosity, sagacity, self-restraint (the female is said to carry for two years and give birth but once), superhuman power, temperance, wisdom. A deity or royal mount. The male and female supposedly go together into the East and eat the mandrake before the female conceives, an aspect of Adam and Eve. Dream significance: victory. In heraldry symbolizes ambition, courage, sagacity, wit. Cognate with Greek word elaphas (stag), which resolves into elaph-os (light of alif or light of god everlasting), and with Hebrew letter aleph (ox). Totem of several African tribes, and in African folklore the butt of smaller animals who, by cunning, outwit him. Compare lion. In Buddhist zodiacs the elephant takes the place of the goat or Capricorn. A Bodhisattva emblem. Called gaja in Sanscrit. In China called hsiang and revered as one of the four animals of power. In Christian tradition, because of his thick skin, a sinner; whereas his white ivory tusks represent firmness and purity. In Eastern antiquity an elephant was let loose in a city and the first man he lifted into the air with his trunk or sprinkled with water was crowned sacred king (see sacred king), thus an agent of divine choice. Pul, Hebrew for elephant, also means king. In Hinduism stands on a tortoise and supports the vessel which holds the lotus or it holds the world on its back. Bringer of rain, carrier of Indra, who slew the drought demon Vri-tra. An aspect of Ganesha, mount of Samantabhadra, bearer of the patra and the jewel of the law. By Aryo-Indians called hastin, meaning beast having a hand, and also called Varana, the root var signifying water. Another name, mahanaga, means great naga (snake). Thus bringer of fertilizing rains. In the United States emblem of the Republican Party.

Elephant fording a river. In Chinese Buddhism typifies a Bodhisattva.

Elephant goad. Buddhist tantric symbol; symbol of ferocious manifestations of the deities. In Sanscrit called ankausa.

Elephant head. Wisdom. Ganesha and Vinayaka are shown as elephant-headed deities.

Elephant skin. A Dharmapala garment.

Elephant trunk. Lightning, rain.

Six-tusked elephant. A guise of Buddha.

Three-headed elephant with six tusks. In Japanese Buddhism the subjugation of the six sources of temptation, i. e., the five senses and the will.

Trumpeting elephant. English colonies on west coast of Africa.

White elephant. A burdensome or perplexing possession; something difficult to dispose of; a useless possession which is a source of constant expense. Form in which Buddha entered the womb of Maya, his mother, or the form in which he descended to earth. Symbolic of divine wisdom; emblem of the sun. In Siam, called the land of the White Elephant, the king, according to rumors, gives a gift of a white elephant to courtiers he wishes to ruin, thus a ruinous luxury.

ELEUSIS In early Greek mythology the fatherless son of Dæira, daughter of Oceanus. Eleusis was worshiped in a harvest thanksgiving rite. Mystagogues, who were dressed as shepherds produced the sacred child, called Son of the Wise One who came from the sea, seated in a liknos or harvest-baket, and declared they found him on the river bank. The name Eleusis signifies the Advent of the Divine Child. In later tradition Eleusis was the son of Hermes, the Theban king Ogygus his putative father. He became the eponymous ancestor of the Eleusinians, and his descendant Celeus was appointed by Demeter to establish the priesthood for her worship in Eleusinian Mysteries. Dionysus replaced Eleusis as the corn-deity or Divine Child, whose life story was celebrated at the Mysteries. Eleusis is thus counted a name of Dionysus. See Elisha.

Eleusinia. An Athenian festival. The Greater Eleusinia was celebrated between harvest and seed time; the Lesser Eleusinia in early spring. The name was at first applied to the festival alone; later included the mysteries. Secrecy was so strictly enjoined, its violation was punishable by death and, for this reason, many details of the rites are lost. The Greater apparently was based on legends of Demeter and Persephone; the Lesser probably was a counterpart of the Haloa, a festival honoring Demeter and Dionysus. The ceremonies consisted of bathing in the sea, display of sacred phalluses, dancing, fasts, presentation of sacred dramas, processions, etc. The sacred marriage of the virgin Mother-Earth and Heaven, and the birth of the Sacred Child, when enacted, symbolized the renewal of life, physical and spiritual, in the participants. Corn was the supreme symbol, and it conveyed the promise of fruitfulness of the soil, as well as of immortality in a future world. The festival or early mysteries was held every five years and conducted at night in great solemnity. Later the rites became frenzied and orgiastic. Before being absorbed into the Athenian state religion, the ceremonies were held in Eleusis, and may have originated in Thrace, or may have been adopted from ancient Semitic rites. They typify orgiastic worship, religious delirium, secrecy.

ELEVEN Balance, revelation, unity. To dream of the figure eleven means a loss of money, a worry. According to the mystics, eleven corresponds to Justice in the tarot deck.

ELF Norse dwarf with magical powers. Elves were of two kinds; the Dopkalfar, who lived in dark woods or grottoes or in the sea: the Ljosalfar, who inhabited light places or the skies. Predominantly male, they were wonder smiths who provided the gods with indispensable gifts. They gave Frey a boar and a ship; Odin, a spear; Thor, a hammer. They drifted into European folklore with beautiful elf-maids. Their characteristics and shapes varied; mostly they were tiny in human form without a soul, haunting unfrequented places, indulging in dancing and singing, and delighting in tricks, such as leading a traveler astray in forests. Sometimes they were friendly or helpful. They have been identified as lesser divinities, products of a dream or imagination, souls of the dead; mist, tree, wind, or other spirits of nature. Included among elves are: cluricaunes, ellefolk, ellyllon, fairies, fays, incubi, kobolds, leprechauns, mermaids, mermen, nixies, pixies, pucks, succubi, etc. The word is akin to aleph, alif, oaf.

EL HDR Arabian sun-hero of Sinai who befriended both Moses and Alexander.

ELI (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning height. (2) A high-priest and judge of Israel; teacher of Samuel. He was eminent for piety and usefulness, but criminally negligent of family discipline, favoring Samuel against his own sons. Because of this, God punished him.

ELIAKIM Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning whom God sets up.

ELIAS (ELLIS) Masculine name; Greek form of Elijah.

ELIDURE In British legendary history younger brother of Artegal. Believing Artegal to be dead, he advanced to the throne, but when, after an absence of many years, Artegal returned, Elidure resigned. Thus one moderate and noble. Probably a light myth, the sun and moon succeeding each other.

ELIDURUS Legendary British priest who, when a boy, discovered the subterranean land of the dwarfs, a delightful region where the people lived on milk and saffron, swore no oaths, and condemned human ambition and inconstancy. He visited them frequently, until he was persuaded by his mother to steal their gold. The gold was taken from him, after which he was never again able to find his way to fairyland. The gold typifies fertility, which fades in autumn.

ELIHU (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning the Lord is Jehovah; Jehovah is my God. (2) In the Book of Job in the Old Testament the youth who attempts to reason with Job about his plight after the three false comforters have finished speaking.

ELIJAH (1) Masculine name, Hebrew variant of Elihu, meaning God is Jehovah. Eliot, Lige, are derived from Elijah. (2) One who is bold, faithful, self-denying, stern, and zealous for the honor of God. A character marked by moral grandeur. One who bursts onto the scene without previous notice, who bears the appearance of a supernatural messenger of heaven, and who, when his work is finished, disappears by a miracle. The allusion is to Elijah, whose story is told in the Old Testament. His parentage and early history are unknown. He provoked the wrath of Ahab and Jezebel, when he threatened Israel with several years of drought for its sins. When the famine came he took refuge on the banks of the brook Cherith, and was miraculously fed by ravens. In Phoenicia one miracle provided him with sustenance, another restored life to the child of his hostess. In a contest with the prophets of Baal on Mount Carmel, Jehovah answered Elijah by sending fire from heaven; Baal was deaf to the repeated cries of his priests. Forewarned of the approach of his removal from earth, he cast his mantle on Elisha whom he had anointed prophet in his stead, crossed the Jordan miraculously, and was borne to heaven in a fiery chariot by the whirlwind without tasting death. He is worshiped by the Jews as an angel of the covenant, is present whenever the act of circumcision is performed, and a vacant chair, the Elijah chair, is placed near the seat of the grandfather. He is portrayed as a hairy man wearing a leather girdle; in a fiery chariot taking him to heaven; ravens bearing loaves of bread to him; with a sword in his hand and a child near him. His ascent to heaven resembles that of Bellerophon on Pegasus and Phaeton in his father's flaming chariot. The chariot, horse, and raven are all attributes of sun-deities. Compare Enoch.

Elijah's mantle. Succession to any office.

ELIOUN Phoenician deity. The Most High. He dwelt on Byblus (Hebrew Gebal, a name signifying mountain). He was the husband of Beruth, the father of Epigeus (or Auchthon), a heaven-god, and Gaea, the earth-mother. Epigeus is later called Ouranos (Uranus), and with Gaea appears in Greek mythology. Another name is Hypsestus, which is related to Hephaestus; Elioun is related to Elohim.

ELIS Holy land of Greek antiquity, watered by the river Alpheus. The center of peace and religion, it was the site of the Olympic Games. Armies were compelled to lay down their weapons before passing through the sacred land. Name yields Lord of Light.

ELISHA (ELLIS) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning a burning or shining light or light of God; also God is savior. (2) A prophet in the Old Testament. Successor of Elijah, whose mantle he inherited. He was at work ploughing a field with twelve yoke of oxen when Elijah called to him to become a prophet. A worker of miracles, he healed the waters of Jericho, cured the leper Naaman, and brought back to life a Shunammite woman's son who had been overcome by sunstroke. Even after his death he continued to work miracles, and a corpse deposited in his sepulchre was at once restored to life. His driving twelve yoke of oxen suggests that he was a sun-hero driving the zodiacal animals. He was also described as having a choleric disposition, i.e. the sun in its scorching or unfavorable aspect. The incident in the tomb suggests the daily or yearly rebirth of the sun. He is often portrayed with a two-headed eagle on his shoulder. In the New Testament, his name is rendered Elisha, which is related to Elissa, an alternative name of Dido, associated with the setting sun. The name also is akin to Eleusis.

ELISSA (1) Arabian goddess identified with the Persian Mitra. (2) An alternative name of Dido (see), associated with the setting sun. (3) In Spenser's Faerie Queene, step-sister of Medina and Perissa and mistress of Hudibras. She typifies moral deficiency and moroseness.

ELVAGAR In Norse mythology twelve poisonous ice-cold rivers flowing from the spring Hvergelmer in the abyss Ginnunga Gap in Niflheim. When the Elivagar ice, heated by rays from Muspelheim, melted, the drops formed the clay giant Ymir. Abode or mansion of Hymir.

ELIXIR In alchemy and ancient philosophy, a substance, liquid or soluble, by means of which baser metals were supposedly turned into gold. The philosopher's stone. An imaginary cordial which presumably was capable of sustaining life indefinitely, hence any cordial or invigorator. The name is now applied to any leading remedy for disease, especially one that is quack in character. From el-iksir, Arabian for stone of god (el). Also called elixir of life. In China said to have two sources, the Jade Fountain and the waters at the foot of K'un Lun Mountains. Those who drank these waters gained immortality. Also a drink compounded by the gods from a drug mixed by the hare that lives on the moon. Compare ginseng.

ELIZABETH (BABETTE, BESS, BESSIE, BESSY, BETH, BETSY, BETTINA, BETTY, ELISE, ELIZA, ELSPETH, ELSIE, LIBBY, LILLIAN, LILY, LISE, LIZBETH, LIZZY) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning consecrated to God, glorious within, worshiper of God. Also house (beth) of the light (izza) of God (El).

ELK Carries the same symbolism as deer, moose, and stag, which see. Word which resolves into el-uk and yields great god; it compares with El-uk, a Babylonish title for the sun. In Omaha Indian tradition when the earth was covered with water, Elk commanded the winds to blow the waters aside and the rock, which was the kernel of earth, was exposed.

Elk horns. Talisman against evil. See horseshoe.

EL KOUDR (EL KOUDUR) Mussulman name for Saint George, resolving into ak-o-dur, i. e. Great Enduring O.

ELLA Feminine name from the Germanic meaning foreign. Frequently used as a name ending, as Cinderella, Barbarella, Maricuela. Also from the Greek Ele, which means giver of light, shiner.

ELLARD Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning nobly brave.

ELLE-FOLK In Teutonic tradition Adam's children by Lilith, who dwell in mounds or in alder (elle) trees. The males resemble little old men and bask in sunbeams, enticing maidens to join them. The females, who are beautiful but hollow, dance by moonlight. Their ravishing music lures youths. Cattle fed where they danced suffer as a result.

ELLEN Feminine name; form of Helen.

ELLERY Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from the older tree.

ELLI In Norse mythology a great cat, nurse of Utgard-Loki. Typifies old age. In a wrestling match with Thor, she is the victor; thus age or time overcomes a deity.

ELLIOT (ELIOT, ELLIOTT) Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning fancy's flight.

ELLIPSE Typifies the chaos or cosmic egg, whence come all things.

ELLIS ISLAND A small island famous as a landing place for immigrants to the United States.

ELLYLLON British elf or fairy.

ELM Beauty, charm, courtesy, dignity, graciousness, shade, stateliness. Subject to disease. According to the Eddas the whole human race sprang from the ash and the elm, the man Ask, shaped out of the ash, and the woman Embla, shaped out of the elm. Christian symbol of strength.

Elm City. New Haven, noted for its beautiful elm trees.

Elm and vine. Natural sympathy, unity.

Withered elm. Adversity.

ELMER Masculine name, variant of Aylmer, from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning renowned for worth.

ELMO'S FIRE See Saint Elmo's Fire.

ELOAH VA-DAATH (ELOH)
Cabalistic name of the sixth Sefira. See Sefira.

ELOHIM (1) In Hebrew tradition, God; the true God. Creator and ruler of the universe. Divine power. Originally the plural form of Eloah and used to denote the heathen gods collectively, Baal, Chemosh, Dagon, etc.; later used as an intensive singular denoting one deity, God Himself. The singular Eloah has become poetic; El has become archaic. A name interchangeable with Jehovah (Jahveh). Hebraists hold that the Elohistic paragraphs of Scriptures, being more narrative, pastoral, primitive, and simple, are the older; the Jehov-istic paragraphs, revealing a knowledge of geography and history, and which exalt the priestly office and are altogether more elaborate in character, represent later writings. Elohim is a feminine noun with a masculine ending. See Androgynous deities, Tetragrammaton. (2) Cabalistic name of the third Sefira, Bina. God in the work of creation. See El Shaddai, Sefira.

Elohim Tzabaoth. Cabalistic name of Hod, the eighth Sefira. Signifies God of Armies. See Sefira.

ELOISE (HELOISE, LOUISA)
Feminine name through the French from the Germanic, meaning ample, healthy, sound, and from Old High German, meaning warlike.

ELPENOR A member of the crew of Odysseus. He falls from a roof and is killed, preceding the others on their visit to Hades. He appears as Paddy Dignam in Ulysses by James Joyce.

ELPHIN In Celtic mythology rescuer of Taliesin.

ELROY Masculine name from the Latin, meaning the royal.

EL SHADDAI In cabala, God when ordaining the covenant of circumcision.

ELVA Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning elf.

ELVIDNER Norse mythological place of storm; another name for Helheim.

ELVIRA (ALVERA, ALVIRA)
Feminine name from the Latin, meaning bright, joyous, white.

ELYSIUM Greek afterworld abode of the blest; originally a retreat for gods; later a place of reward for heroes and other good men. Placed by Homer on the western margin of the earth, by Hesiod and Pindar in the Western Ocean, and by later Greek poets in the underworld. According to others, it was situated in mid-air, in the sun, in the fortunate Islands off the coast of Africa, on the Island of Luce (Light); Virgil placed the Elysian Fields in Italy. Elysian means relating to Elysium, hence Elysian fields. Elysian and Elysium have come to mean a condition or place of bliss, happiness, supreme delight. Resembles Avalon, Boiuca, Hesperides, San Hsien Shan, Tirnan-og, Zion.

EMAIN MACHA In Irish legend capital of Ulster, seat of Conchobar's palace. Its prosperity was tied up with the life of Cuchulainn, its defender.

EMAKONG In New Britain mythology bringer of crickets, fire, night, and birds who sing at dawn, from an underworld city.

EMASCULATION A mock assassination which replaced life sacrifices. The offering of genitals to the great mother goddess dramatized the drying up of a river, i.e. the cutting off of the water supply, as well as the cutting of grain in harvest thanksgiving and sanctification, and was a form of sympathetic magic to assure rebirth in the spring. The giving of or injury to the sacred phallus caused a lameness which prevented the sacred heel from touching the ground. Circumcision became a substitute for emasculation. The wearing of buskins, which became a substitute for laming, symbolized the protection of the sacred or vulnerable heel by keeping it from touching the ground. In Eleusinian mysteries and other fertility festivals the sacred phallus was hung and prayers offered to it. Compare circumcision, eunuch, lame king, thigh-bone.

EMATHION In Greek mythology: (1) son of Eos and Tithonos; masculine conception of day. (2) Ethiopian king noted for his cruelty to strangers, in consequence of which Heracles killed him. Lord of darkness or storms.

EMBERS Death, residue, smoldering remnants.

Ember Days (Ember Week). In the Angelican and Roman Catholic churches days set aside for fasting and prayer. The belief that these days are so named because penitents sat in embers or on ashes is erroneous. The name comes from Ymbryne, Anglo-Saxon for circuit, alluding to a regular recurring period or season.

EMBLA (EMLA, EMOLA) In Norse mythology the first woman, wife of Ask. She was created from an elm (or elder) tree. Odin gave her life and soul, Hoenir gave her motion and reason, Lodur (Loki) gave her blood, a fair complexion, and senses. In another version, Odin, Vili, and Ve were her creators. She was the mother of the human race before Ragnarok. Parallels Eve, Lif.

EMBRACE Gesture symbolizing affection, concord; also deceit. Embracing under the arms or at the feet is the embrace of an inferior or one seeking favor.

EMBROIDERY Artifice, luxury, preeminence. In China used as talismans to attract wealth, provide longevity, or ward off evil.

EMBRYO Beginning, germination, incipience, rudiments, undevelopment. In early Hindu belief a father became an embryo and was reincarnated in his first-born son. Funeral rites were performed for the father in the fifth month of pregnancy, and after the birth of the child he was remarried.

Embryo interchanged or transferred. A mythological motif, the purpose of which was to protect a child from violence (see Krishna) or to provide a more noble birth (see Mahavira).

EMELINE (EMILY, EMMA)

Feminine name from Old Teutonic, meaning busy, energetic.

EMEN In Egyptian mythology a name for Kek, deity of darkness. Name signifies hidden. His wife is Emenet, also called Ahat.

EMER In Irish mythology daughter of Forgall the Wily. Devoted wife of Cuchulainn. She was noted for her six gifts: beauty, chastity, needlework, sweet speech, voice, wisdom. At seven, Cuchulainn, the sun hero, courted her, but she laughed at him. (Sun heroes arrive at their full growth or maturity with remarkable speed; thus are men very early). To be rid of Cuchulainn, her father Forgall sent the sun-hero to visit Scathach the Amazon to learn her warrior craft, confident that Cuchulainn would meet his death at the hands of Scathach. Cuchulainn accomplished his mission and, when he returned, killed Forgall (darkness) and married Emer (dawn). The dawn is naturally older than the sun. Because of her love for her husband, Emer resembles Andromache; as a needleworker or spinner she resembles Penelope.

EMERALD May birthstone; gem governing the zodiacal sign Gemini.

Symbol of spring and rebirth associated with the hawthorn flower. It endows those born under its sign with an accommodating and pleasing disposition and temper; although quickly irritated, quickly calmed. It promises fame, intellectual success, gives the subject genius, love for science, natural inventiveness, oration, writing ability; its character traits are: fairmindedness, quick vision, reserve, taciturnity except when discussing a favorite subject. It symbolizes clairvoyance, fertility, hope, immortality, peace, quick wit, tranquility; also envy, jealousy. Dream significance: much to look forward to. Held to promote domestic felicity. It supposedly endows a wearer with the ability to foretell the future. In the middle ages believed able to conquer sin and trial, and if placed under the tongue, one was able to call up evil spirits and converse with impunity. Medical practitioners believed the ailment of any part of the body touched by the gem was cured, especially eye ailments. American Indian emblem of green earth. Sacred stone of the Atlanteans. Christian emblem of faith, purity. Pope's gem. In one legend an emerald dropped from Satan's crown when he fell from heaven; because of the purity of its rays the Holy Grail was fashioned from the stone. In the East believed to overcome the transfixing power of a serpent's charm. In Egyptian and Etruscan antiquity used as a talisman to cure disease and avert the evil eye. It supposedly disclosed treachery by turning pale. In fourth position on the breastplate of the Hebrew High Priest, it stands for the tribe of Dan. In Hindu tradition it confers immortality and enables the soul to gain faith. In Roman antiquity dedicated to Venus.

Emerald Isle. Ireland.

Emerald Tablet. Book on the art of making gold attributed by alchemists to Hermes. It supposedly was found by Sara, the wife of Abraham, in the tomb of Hermes on Mount Hebron. In Freemasonry the revelation of God to man.

EMERGENCE Among American Indians a belief prevailed that the first human beings emerged from an underworld city through a cave or hole in the ground. Frequently they were led to the surface of the earth by an animal.

EMERY Masculine name from the Germanic; first element uncertain, second element meaning ruler.

EMILE (EMIL, EMILIUS) Masculine name; French form of Aemilius, Roman family name meaning work. Feminine form Emily (Amelia, Emilia, Emilie).

EMIN In Old Testament giant demons who inhabited Moab.

EMMA Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning protector, grandmother.

EMMA (EMMA-O, EMMA-SAMA, YEMMA) Japanese Buddhist judge of the dead. Jigoku, his domain, lies under the sea and is a hell of burning fire. There, the moja (dead) are subjected to hard labor and torture, except on July 16 when they are given one day of rest. To thank Emma for this day of freedom to ancestors, the living make pilgrimages to his shrine. At the right of his throne is the head of Mirume, which sees all, and at the left the head of Kaguhana, which smells all. In a mirror is reflected all the sins of a suppliant and Emma sentences accordingly. Sometimes identified with Susano-wo. Resembles Acheron, Amenti, Aralu, Pluto, Yama.

EMMANUEL (EMANUEL, IM-MANUEL, MANUEL) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning God with us. In the Old Testament the name of the Messiah in prophecy; in the New Testament a name of Jesus in fulfilment.

EMMAUS Village where Jesus revealed himself to two of his disciples on the afternoon of his resurrection day.

EMMETT Masculine name from Middle English, meaning ant.

EMOKI TREE In Japanese mythology tree sacred to Kojin, god of the cooking range.

EMPEROR (1) Title of a sovereign or supreme ruler, usually by hereditary right, of an empire. Considered superior in dignity to that of king. Temporal guide or savior. In Japanese tradition descendant of the gods, heavenly sovereign. Latin equivalent, imperator, denoted military command. Resolves into om-per-ur, and yields Sun, Father Fire. (2) Card in tarot deck illustrated by a bearded prince seated in profile on a throne with legs crossed and wearing an iron helmet. His emblems are the scepter of generation and a shield on which is an eagle. He is identical with the Magician after the latter's union with the High Priestess has transformed her into the Empress. He typifies the self-consciousness of man engaged in inductive reasoning; law-giver. Power and potency, fatherhood, physical parentage. Instrument of Ammon, Jupiter, Marduk; ruler of the outer world. Attainment: gathering of the harvest of experience. In divination corresponds to the number five and the Hebrew letter heh. Denotes: architect, author, benevolence, begetter, reason, stability, virility; also ambition, confusion, obstruction.

Emperor of believers. Omar, father-in-law of Mohammed.

EMPIRE Symbolized by crown, eagle, lion, purple, imperial regalia, scepter, throne.

Celestial Empire. China, as the first emperors were believed to be of divine origin.

Empire State. New York.

EMPRESS (1) The consort of an emperor; on rare occasions the woman ruling an empire. In Byzantium symbolized by a peacock; in China by a phoenix. Dream significance: fatal pride. (2) Card in tarot deck illustrated by a winged woman enthroned, holding a scepter, with the orb of the world at the tip, and a shield bearing the image of an eagle, symbols of life and soul. Other emblems are the vulture (maternity) and the mouse (fecundity). She is the High Priestess (virgin, potential mother) after union with the Magician. She typifies the generating state of cosmic subconscious; mother of ideas, deductive reasoning, the canal by which a human being is conducted from one world to another. Power and potency: motherhood, spiritual parentage. Instrument of Isis-Hathor and Venus, female ruling power, inspirer of men, ruler of the inner world. Attainment: pregnancy. In divination corresponds to number four and the Hebrew letter daleth. Denotes: beauty, fecundity, friendliness, pleasure, progress, protection; also dissipation, ignorance, luxuriousness, sensuality, vacillation.

EMPUSA (EMPOUSA, EMPUSAE)

Greek spectral monster said to have one leg of brass and one ass's leg. Employed by Hecate to devour human beings and to frighten travelers. Also said to be a title of Hecate meaning she who changed her shape. A form taken by the Rumanian demon Gelu. A hobgoblin, phantom, storm demon.

EMPYREAN The highest heaven, abode of Gods. Ancients believed it was composed of pure fire. According to Dante the heaven within which revolves the swift primum mobile, from which all the rest of the world derives its particular mode of being. Home of all the blessed.

EMRYS Brythonic ruler of heaven, worshiped on high places. Also a god of battle. Identical with Lludd, Myrddin. Resembles Zeus.

EMU Emblem of Australia. In the mythology of Australian aborigines the king of birds. The sun came from one of its eggs. See Dinewan.

ENBARR Celtic steed on which Manannan rode the waves, and which he gave to Lug. Although it was as fleet as the wind, no rider was ever kicked off.

ENCELADUS In Greek mythology conceived when the blood of the mutilated Uranus fell upon Gaea. In other accounts Tartarus is given as his father. The most powerful of the hundred-armed earth-born giants (storm demons). He conspired against Zeus, was defeated, thrown down at Phlegra in Macedonia, and Mount Etna was thrown over him. The flames of the volcano arise from his breath. In the sky accounted a satellite of Saturn. See Gigantes, Typhon.

ENCHANTER'S NIGHT SHADE

Bloom symbolizing witchcraft.

END, THE In an Italian icon personified by an old man (the aim toward which all are directed) with a gray beard. He wears a garland of ivy and holds a pyramid on which are ten M's and a square with the letter omega on it. The sun is setting.

Endless knot. Eternity; immortality. The eight Buddhist warnings. Mystic diagram symbolizing the endless cycle of rebirths. In China called chang. Typifies abundance, longevity; also receiving and forwarding. In China Buddha's entrails.

ENDIVE Herb symbolizing frugality.

ENDREDI Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning superior rider.

ENDURANCE Symbolized by a bear, elephant, ox, pine tree.

ENDYMION In Greek mythology variously said to be the son of Zeus and Calyce; the son of Protophonia (the first or early-born morning); or a mortal described as the king of Ellis, a hunter or shepherd. In one legend he fell asleep on Mount Latmos (forgetfulness), and Selene, the moon-goddess, falling in love with his beauty came down, kissed him and lay beside him. He awoke to find her gone, but the dreams were so vivid and entralling he begged Zeus to let him sleep and never awaken. Zeus granted his wish, making him immortal in sleep. As a result of her visits to him Selene bore him fifty daughters. In another legend Selene, falling in love with his beauty, conveyed him to Mount Latmos in Caria, and threw him into perpetual slumber that she might caress him at will. The name Endymion denotes the sun about to plunge into the sea or the sun as he dips in the sea. The love of Selene for Endymion symbolizes the light of the rising moon falling on the sun as he sinks to sleep. The fifty daughters infer the fruits derived from the mutual attraction of sleeping nature and moonlight. Endymion may also typify a male who trespassed into a woman's realm and was assaulted in a murderous way. Compare Actaeon, Hylas.

ENGINE Industry, invention.

ENGLAND Conquest, empire. A small island kingdom, which became famous as the land on which the sun never sets. Symbolized by the rose.

ENGRAVING TOOL Art, imitation of nature.

ENGUR Babylonian god Ea as lord of the abyss.

ENID Feminine name from the Welsh meaning woodlark. Tennyson uses the name for the faithful wife of Geraint, a knight of the Round Table.

ENIM Cannibalistic race of giants, offsprings of the fallen angels and daughters of men.

ENIPEUS In Greek mythology husband of Tyro who betrayed him for love of Poseidon.

ENKI Deity sacred to the Assyrians, Babylonians, and Sumerians. Name meaning Lord of the Earth. The active principle, he was the gardener whose begetting seeds fertilized the earth. He was a god of lustration and of life-giving fresh waters; patron of artisans, especially carpenters. He overheard Enlil plotting to destroy mankind by flood and warned Utnapishtim (Pir-na-pishtim, Ziusudra) to build an ark. Although a benefactor and patron of man, he became jealous, and denied man immortality. See Adapa. He also is mentioned as a ruler of Sumer, and may be a deified mortal. He is a counterpart of Ki (Nintu) and identical with Ea, which see. Also see Enkidu.

ENKIDU (ENGIDU, ENKIMDU, ENKITA) In the Gilgamesh epic a wild man created to subdue Gilgamesh; instead they became friends, and together they destroyed the Monster Humbaba. He was the wind, who became the friend of the sun; together they destroyed drought. Sometimes he is confused with Enki, and said to be deified as Enki. Enkidu is portrayed as half man, half bull with a long tail, fighting a lion. Also called Eabani. See Gilgamesh.

ENLIGHTENMENT Symbolized by a griffin, lamp, torch in the hand of Liberty, unicorn.

ENLIL (BEL ENLIL, ILLILLOS, LIL) Deity worshiped in Babylonia and Sumer. Probably the ancient name of Bel as originally worshiped at Nippur. He was lord of the upper world, of the earth, of the winds, of the underworld, whence came storms, sun, and winds. He was a war god. He was the father of Iskur, to whom he gave control of the winds, to Nergal, and Ninigirsu. In one account said to be the father of Nebo the scribe. He was lover-brother of Aruru (or Ninlil), a virgin-earth mother goddess, an aspect which Adonis and Tammuz resemble. He was keeper of the tablets of fate, which were stolen from him by Zu. He was invoked as a wrathful god, who sent a series of calamities upon his own people for their sins and upon the enemies of Sumer. The agent of his anger was The Word, which caused exile, famine, fire, hunger, hurricane, pillage, and finally flood. His messengers Gibil, Kengida, Kingaludda, and Uddagubba, were those of destruction, in contradistinction to those of Anu, whose messengers were beneficent angels. In some respects Jehovah resembles him.

ENMENDURANNA (ENMENDURANKI) Seventh Sumerian legendary antediluvian king of Kish. Founder of divination, magic ritual, and medicine. In Greek called Euedorachos. Compares with Hebrew Enoch.

ENMESHARA Sumerian underworld deity of vegetation (vegetation coming from the underworld). A title of Nergal.

ENNA Irish god who had two wives, Aide and Dub. Dub chanted spells over the sea which caused the drowning of Aide and her family.

EN-NO-OZUNA Mythical Japanese hermit credited with magical powers. A bridge builder by magic. Name signifies ascetic master. Also known as Gyoja.

ENNUGI Babylonian governor of the gods.

ENOCH (HENOCH) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning consecrated, dedicated, teacher. (2) A son of Cain, in honor of whom the first city named in the Bible was called Enoch. (3) The seventh from Adam, and the father of Methuselah. Eminent as a patriarch who walked with God. He lived for 365 years; then walked away and was seen no more, thus a sun hero who was translated without seeing death. He resembles Elijah and Enmen-duranna.

Enoch Arden. A husband who returns home after he has been given up for dead to find his wife remarried; from the narrative poem by Tennyson.

ENOS Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning man.

ENTI The Babylonian god Ea as lord of life.

ENTRAILS In antiquity used for purposes of divination. Chinese Buddhist endless knot typifies Buddha's entrails.

ENTRAPPED SUITOR Folklore motif found throughout Asia and Europe. A woman holds her suitors up to ridicule before her townfolk either to convince them of her chastity or to test his love; a suitor is trapped by a husband to prove or disprove his wife's fidelity. Balzac borrows the theme for his story entitled The Mysterious Mansion.

ENYO In early Greek mythology described as a companion of Ares; in later myths, described as the mother of Ares. She was goddess of the war-cry, portrayed with a torch in her left hand, a whip in her right with which she excited the fury of combatants; her hair was dishevelled. Counterpart of Bellona. In Hesiodic theogony she is one of the Graeae.

EN-ZU (ZU-EN) Babylonian moon god; a name of Sin.

EO-ANU Irish goddess, a form of Ith. Wife of Ain. Goddess of darkness and the underworld, paralleling the Greek Persephone. Sometimes surnamed Bidhgoe, i.e. female of illusion (Bithe = female + go = deception). Resembles the Persian Biducht.

EOCHAID AIREM Legendary high king of Ireland. His vassal monarchs were Ailell, Conchobar, Curoi, Mesgegra. His wife was Etain. Midir, underworld deity, challenged Eochaid to a game of chess; Midir lost and Eochaid claimed as his stake a road built through Ireland. He noticed that Midir and his followers yoked their oxen, not by the horns, as the Gaels had been doing, but by the shoulders; he borrowed the practice and won his surname Airem (Ploughman). Midir rechallenged the king and won, claiming Etain as his stake. Instead of yielding Etain, Eochaid waged war against Midir and lost his sid. This story parallels that of Arthur-Guinevere-Modred, Airen, like Arthur, was a divine instructor of agriculture; Etain like Guinevere was a moon goddess. In another story, Eochaid by Etain was the father of a daughter Etain (also called Ess). Mistaking his daughter for his wife, Eochaid by her became the father of Mess-buachallo who became the mother of the hero Conaire the Great. Midir wove the web of fate so that Conaire and all his men died violent deaths (cut down in harvest).

EOCHAID OLLATHAIR Reigning king of the Fir Bolgs when the Tuatha De Danann gods arrived in Ireland. An aspect of Dagda, a god of fertility and wizardry. In a battle with the Tuatha De Danann, gods of light, he killed Bres. Overpowered by thirst, he sought water throughout Ireland, but the Tuatha De Danann people hid all the streams and he died of thirst, thus in the course of the cycle of the seasons earth loses its fruitfulness.

EOGABAL In Irish mythology a Tuatha De Danann fertility deity; father of Aine.

EOGAN In Irish mythology the Stream, a supernatural foe of Labraid.

EOLITH A stone implement of the earliest stages of human culture; an implement shaped by, rather than for, use.

EOLUS (AEOLUS) (1) Greek god of the winds; (2) mythical founder of Eolia (Aeolia).

Eolian (Aeolian) harp. Musical instrument of the winds.

EOS In Greek mythology said to be the daughter of Uranus and Nyx, also of Hyperion and Theia. Sister of Helios and Selene. Wife of Astraeus, a sky deity, and of Strymon, a river god. Her children were Anemoi (Winds), Astra (Stars), Astraea (Constellation Virgo), Heosphorus (Morning Star), Hesperus (Evening Star). Among her lovers were Cephalus, Orion, and Tithonus. Her two horses were Lampetus and Phaethon. Her abode was Aeaëa. She was a goddess of dawn who drove night into the underworld, permitted day to go forth, awakened the sun and morning breeze, and sprayed the dew. She carried Tithonus off to Ethiopia, and begged Zeus to grant him immortality but neglected to ask the boon of eternal youth. When he grew wrinkled and infirm, she shut him in a room from which only the faint cry of his voice emerged. Finally, to end his misery, she turned him into a cicada. She is represented in art as a beautiful young winged woman with rosy fingers and plumage of ever-changing hue. She carries a torch or drives a chariot, a star on her forehead, her hair streaming behind her. Analogue of Ahi, Aos, Aurora, Ushas.

EOSPHOROS (HEOSPHOROS)

In Greek mythology son of Astraeus and Eos. He is the morning star; his name signifies dawn-bearer. Forerunner of the dawn and the sun, speeding before them on a chariot or white horse. The love-smitten Aphrodite called upon him to act as night-watcher in her temple, which explains the absence of his star before day-break. He supposedly had the power of fructifying crops with dew. In art portrayed in the company of other divinities of light and as a youthful rider bearing a torch.

EOSTRE (1) Anglo-Saxon goddess. In antiquity worshiped in a spring festival. Easter takes its name from her. (2) Hot-cross buns, descendants of cakes originally eaten in honor of Eostre and probably Astart and Astoreth. See Easter.

EPAPHUS (EPAPHOS) In Greek mythology son of Zeus and Io. Born in Egypt after the wanderings of his mother. He married Memphis, daughter of Nilus, built the city he named after her, and became king of Egypt and the ancestor of a famous line, including Cadmus, Danaus, Libya. The form of Io at the time of his birth was that of a cow (horned moon); he therefore was a calf-child; probably associated with Apis, the Egyptian calf-god.

EPAULETS A badge of rank, worn by military officers and by attendants such as doorman, footmen, indicating the house served by them. Dream significance: honors, triumph.

EPEIOS In Greek legend fashioner of the Trojan or Wooden Horse. See Trojan Horse.

EPET An early Egyptian beneficent mother goddess and mistress of talismans. She afforded protection against sickness and was helpful in childbirth. She was a female hippopotamus with human breasts, lion's feet, and carrying a crocodile on her back. Later she had a lion's head, and still later she was pictured as a pregnant woman with lion's paws. She was guardian of the malevolent Ox-leg (Ursa Major). Also called Tueret or Ueret (Great One). Subsequently merged into the worship of Nut.

EPHEUS An ancient Ionian city of Asia Minor, famous for its temple of Artemis and the many-breasted statue of the Ephesian Artemis, a fertile mother-goddess. Later famous as a center of Christian worship. The Ephesians were greatly addicted to magic, and Ephesian letters were magic characters burned as books of the devil by Christian converts.

EPHIALTES (1) In Greek mythology giant son of Poseidon and Iphimedia; twin brother of Otus. His putative father was Aloeus. Ephialtes, the hurricane, was feared as the demon who inflicted nightmares; to prevent him from coming, hollow stones were hung as talismans in stables. See Aloidae. (2) Greek traitor who guided the Persian detachment up mountain paths to the rear of the Greek forces defending the pass of Thermopylae in 569 B.C.

EPHKA Syrian god. Genius of the holy fountain of Palmyra. In some murals represented as a maiden.

EPHOD Ceremonial garment worn anciently by Jewish high priests. A garment of prophecy as well as a mark of priesthood, and by the garment David ascertained what Saul intended. At one time it probably was used to encase idols. See priestly robes.

EPHRAIM (EPH) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning doubly fruitful or twofold increase. (2) In Hebrew tradition, he was Joseph's second son, and obtained the birthright of Manasseh, the eldest son. Ephraim was the eponymous ancestor of one of the twelve tribes, symbolized by a bull and a bunch of grapes, and was associated with the zodiacal house of Leo. Ephraim and Manasseh typified fruitfulness and forgetfulness, i.e. summer and winter.

EPHRON Hittite from whom Abraham purchased the cave Machpelah as a family tomb.

EPICLETUS A Greek slave who became a noted stoic philosopher, teaching in Rome until 90 A.D., when he was banished.

EPICURUS Greek philosopher of the 3rd century B.C., whose philosophy was corrupted by his disciples who held that good living or pleasure is the supreme good or chief end in life, hence an epicure is one devoted to sensual pleasures, especially pertaining to good eating and drinking.

EPIGEUS Phoenician deity; son of Elioum (or Hypsistus) and Beruth. Also called Auchthon; later called Ourannus (Uranus), and worshiped by the Greeks as the heaven-deity.

EPIGONI Literally, descendants or later-born. In Greek legend descendants of the Seven Against Thebes, who, ten years after the first attack led by Adrastus, attacked Thebes under the leadership of Alcmaeon. Although the city was deserted when captured, Alcmaeon placed Thersander, son of Polynices, on the throne. They typify successors, especially unworthy successors. Poetically applied to the writers who followed Homer and to any degenerates in art or literature.

EPILEPSY In some periods called the divine or sacred disease and the epileptic during the seizure, was believed to be in communication with a deity. In other periods the epileptic was believed to be possessed by devils. Presently called the falling-sickness.

EPIMELIAN Greek nymphs of flocks and herds.

EPIMENIDES Legendary Cretan poet and philosopher who, while still a boy, in the 7th Century B. C., fell asleep in a cave. He awoke fifty-seven years later to find his soul freed from the burden of flesh and endowed with miraculous wisdom, whereupon he purified Athens from the plague. He sometimes replaces Periander as one of the Seven Wise Men of Greece. He typifies the sun slumbering under the spell of night. Others who slept and did not die: Arthur, Bran, Rip Van Winkle, Seven Sleepers of Ephesus. See slumber unbroken.

EPIMETHEUS In Greek mythology son of Iapetus and Clymene, brother of Prometheus, husband of Pandora, father of Pyrrha. His name signifies after-thought, and he was one who spent his life repenting over mistakes he should have avoided. His brother Prometheus (forethought) warned him not to accept any gift from Zeus. He ignored the warning and accepted Pandora, the first woman, as his wife. He was the owner of a box of rare blessings reserved for mankind, which he had been warned not to open. Pandora raised the lid and all the blessings except hope escaped. In another version the box was filled with disease and ill-fortunes, which flew to mankind when the box was opened. Thus Epimetheus brought disease and sorrow to the human race in contrast to his brother Prometheus, who gave mankind the gift of fire.

EPIPHANY Ancient Greek festival celebrating the appearance of a deity; hence an appearance or revelation of a supernatural being. In the Christian Church, festival in commemoration of the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles in the persons of the Magi at Bethlehem, celebrated January 6, the twelfth day after Christmas. Formerly called Twelfthday or Twelfthtide. The mystery of incarnation. The Christian festival was borrowed from European pagan winter solstice rites, which were encouragements to the rebirth of the year. Destructive old-year spirits were exorcised by noisy bands, masked as Perchten and other fantastic spirits. Elaborate dances were performed. In England originally the date for the appearance of the Abbots Bromley antler dance. Coincidentally, also the same date for a number of animal dances of American Indians, such as the Deer Dance of the Pueblo Indians.

EPIRUS Last country known to the early Greeks toward the west, thus region of darkness, land where the light of the day was extinguished. Site of Hades. Compare Avernus.

EPISCOPACY Symbolized by amethyst, cope, crosier, mitre, purple.

E PLURIBUS UNUM Literally, one out of many. Motto of the United States of America, taken from the Latin poem attributed to Virgil. The meaning of the motto is one government made of many states.

EPONA Gaelic goddess of asses, horses, and mules. Only Gaulish deity to be included in the Roman pantheon. Probably originally a spring or river goddess conceived as a spirited steed. She was a giver of plenty, patroness of the fecundity of mares and the well being of foals. Represented as riding a horse or feeding foals. Also called the Three Eponae. Source of the word pony.

EPOPEUS In Greek mythology husband of Antiope (see). A lover of beauty.

EPUNAMUN War god in Argentine and Chile Pampas. His weapons were sun-darts.

EQUALITY Symbolized by a level, square. In an Italian icon, personified by a middle-aged woman with a pair of scales and a nest in which a swallow feeds her young.

Equality State. Wyoming, the first state to grant woman suffrage.

EQUINOX Either of the two times during the year at which the sun crosses the equator of the sky, making day and night of equal length. The vernal or spring equinox occurs about March 21; the autumnal equinox about September 22. The equinoxes are traditionally expected to be accompanied by violent storms and meteorological excesses. Together with the solstices they divide the year into four equal parts.

EQUITONE, MRS. A character in the poetry of T.S. Eliot; a woman who lived without deserving blame or praise; a neutral; a wealthy woman unable to live without her daily horoscope.

EQUITY Symbolized by the number four and by scales.

EQUULEUS Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as the Lesser or Little Horse. It is without bright stars. In Roman antiquity the equuleus was an instrument of torture for forcing confessions from accused persons.

Equuelus Pictoris. Constellation in the Southern Sky also called the Painter's Easel or Pictoris.

ER (EAR, IR) In Bavarian and Saxon tradition, the war-god Tyr.

ERA A period of time starting from a given date or point, or one with notable characteristics, as Christian era, reconstruction era. In geology, one of the five great divisions of time into which the geological history of the earth is divided, i.e. 1) Azoic, cosmic age, origin of earth as a separate planet; 2) Archaean (Archaezoic) and Algonkian (Proterozoic), age of scanty life; 3) Paleozoic, age of vast biologic and geographic changes with swamp forests, fishes, insects, fossiliferous rocks; 4) Mesozoic, age of chalk, dinosaurs, red sandstone, reptiles, toothed birds; 5) Cenozoic, ice age, development of mammals. The word era is identical with Hera.

Abraham era. Starting point October 1, 2016 B.C.

Chinese era. Starting point 2697 B.C.

Kali Yuka era. Hindu era of deluge; in Hindu chronology 3101 or 3102 B.C.

ERASMUS (ERASTUS, RAS, RAS-TUS) Masculine name meaning amiable, beloved, lovely.

ERATO One of the nine Greek Muses. Muse of erotic and lyric poetry. She wears a laurel wreath and strikes the cords of a lyre.

ERAVAN Siamese All-Seeing-Eye. Sun deity shown as a three-headed elephant.

ERC In second or heroic cycle of Irish legends, king of Tara, demon of darkness, foe of Cuchulainn.

EREBUS In Greek mythology son of Chaos. Personification of darkness, later ruler of the subterranean regions of the underworld. By his sister, Nyx (night), father of Aether (sky) and Hemera (day). His name was applied to the realm through which souls passed on the way to Hades, which lay, according to Homer, in dreary regions beyond the stream of Oceanus, in the far west, where the Cimmerians lived enveloped in eternal darkness and mists. Compare Hades, Tartarus.

ERECHTHEUS Greek legendary king of Athens. Son of Pandion and Zeuxippe, brother of Bootes. An agricultural hero. Erechtheus was secular leader of the Athenians; his brother Bootes was the priestly leader. In accordance with an oracle, when he was about to undertake an expedition against Eleusis, he sacrificed his youngest daughter to assure victory. This deed led his two other daughters to commit suicide. Although he succeeded in killing Eumolpus, priest at Eleusis, Poseidon avenged the deaths by killing Erechtheus. The sacrifice of his daughter compares with that of Iphigenia. Erechtheus is sometimes confused with his grandfather Erichthonius, also called Erechtheus.

EREMON (HERIMON) In Irish legendary history, with his father Miled, a conqueror of the gods. An agricultural hero. After the death of Miled, Eremon warred against his brother Eber for the kingship of Ireland. Eber was killed in the battle, and Eremon had a long and successful reign. All Irish genealogies go back to Miled.

ERESHKIGAL (ERISHKIGAL)

In Babylonian mythology wife of Nergal (or Ninazu), sister of Ishtar, mother of Ningishzida. She is the fearful goddess of the underworld and of death. Her messenger is Namtaru. In love with Tammuz, she forces him to spend half of each year with her underground. Although she receives her sister Ishtar in anger, she permits her to enter the underworld mansion and rescue Tammuz. She is beneficent inasmuch as she sometimes permits the wealth of the underworld to rise to the surface of the earth. Ereshkigal is portrayed with a short sharp horn on her back and one on her forehead. She has sheep's ears, human hands, and the body of a fish with a bent back. From her loins to her soles, she is a dog. She also is known as Allatu. Queen of the lower regions, she resembles Hecate and Persephone.

ERESICHTHON (ERISICHTHON, ERYICHTHON) In Greek mythology son of Triopas. Demeter, angered when he cut down her sacred groves, punished him with a constant and insatiable hunger. After selling all his possessions in an effort to satisfy his cravings, he at last devoured his own limbs. His daughter Metra, possessing the power of reproducing herself in various animal forms, contrived to keep him alive. Thus one who devours his children. A time myth suggesting the cycle of the year.

EREWTHON The name of an ideal commonwealth invented by Samuel Butler. Anagram on nowhere.

ERI (1) Armenian sun-god who appears on ancient Vannic inscriptions. (2) In Celtic mythology sister and wife of Elatha, Fomorian king, by whom she was the mother of Bres. Eri was counted of the Tuatha De Danann because her mother was one of their goddesses, indicating succession through the female line, and Bres became a king of the Tuatha De Danann.

ERIC (ERIK, HERRICK) (1) Masculine name from the Scandinavian; first element probably meaning fire or light; second element meaning great or ruler. Feminine form Erica. (2) Scandinavian navigator and discoverer. The son of a nobleman, he became involved in a feud and was compelled to flee his native land. He visited Iceland and then sailed westward and discovered Greenland, where he established a colony. He supposedly lived in the 10th or 11th century A. D., and became the hero of an Icelandic saga, Eric the Red. His son Leif Ericson is said to have discovered a land, variously identified as Labrador, Newfoundland, and New England, which he called Vinland, because of the grape vines he found growing upon it. (3) A name of Svipdag. With the advance of Christianity, as a rival of Christ, a devil. Afterwards called Old Eric.

ERICA Egyptian sacred tree, which grew around the body of Osiris. The axis or world tree, the coffin tree.

ERICHTHO In Roman legend Thessalian sorceress who sent Virgil shortly after his death to fetch a soul from the pit of treachery.

ERICHTHONIUS (1) In Greek mythology guardian of earth's fertility. In one account, born when Atthis (Athena as dawn) visited Hephaestus and, as such, either a child of virgin birth or of Atthis and Hephaestus. In other accounts the child of the spilled seed of Hephaestus, or the serpent-legged son of Hephaestus and Gaea (Fire and Earth) adopted by Athena. While he was still an infant Athena placed him in a chest which she gave to the care of the sisters Agraulos, Herse, and Pandrosos with the instructions that the chest was not to be opened. Agraulos and Herse disobeyed and found the coils of a snake folded around the infant. The frightened nurses threw themselves down the precipice of the Acropolis, and the snake-bound or snake-bodied infant lived on under the protection of Athena. In one account Agraulos by her father, the snake-bodied Cecrops, was the mother of Erichthonius. Pandrosos, who had remained true to her trust, was appointed a priestess of Athena, and afterward worshiped in a sanctuary that enjoined Athena's. Erichthonius became king of Attica. To hide his snake-like feet he invented the chariot. The mares of Erichthonius are said to be the mares of Boreas, the wind. In later legends Erichthonius is identified with Auriga, the constellation in the Northern Sky also called Charioteer. He also is known as Erechtheus and is sometimes confused with his grandson. The legend of the opened box, compares with that of Epimetheus, whose wife Pandora released the contents of his chest; the suicides of Agraulos and Herse compares with the suicides of the daughters of Erechtheus. (2) Son of Dardanus and Batea. The most wealthy of mortals, three thousand mares grazed in his fields. Father of Tros, eponymous ancestor of the Trojans.

ERIDANUS Greek legendary river into which Phaethon fell when Zeus struck him with a bolt of lightning. In another version formed from the tears the Heliades shed on the death of their brother Phaeton. Possibly a poetic name for the river Po. Also identified as the constellation in the Southern Sky known as the River.

ERIDU Sumerian paradise where the first man was created and where the souls of the dead passed on the way to the Great Deep. It was stationed in the center of the earth, hence the earth's navel. In it grew a dark pine which had a white crown extending into heaven (axis-pole); its shrine was the couch of the mother Zikum. Thus it symbolized fertility through the male and female principles. Prototype of Garden of Eden.

ERIGONE Greek harvest goddess. Her father Icarius was taught the cultivation of the vine by Dionysus. Wishing to give mankind a boon, Icarius gave a band of shepherds some wine, which made them drunk. Believing they had been poisoned, they killed Icarius, and Erigone in grief hung herself from a tree which towered above his grave. She was placed in the Heavens as the constellation Virgo.

ERIKAPAIOS In Greek mythology a bisexual life-giver. See Androgynous deities.

ERIN (1) Feminine name from the Irish, meaning peace. (2) A name of Eriu (Eire). Ancient native and still poetic name for Ireland.

Erin go bragh. Ireland forever; ancient Irish battle cry.

ERIN-BIRD Sumerian monstrous bird with a poisonous tooth. Overcome by Ninurta. A form of Zu. Resembles Vishapa.

ERINYES (ERINNYS) In Greek mythology the angry ones. Primarily vengeful ghosts of angry murdered souls; later avengers of wrong, said to be the daughters of Uranus and Gaea. Personified curses. Identified with the Eumenides and Furies. Sometimes portrayed in snake form. Originally a single gentle goddess of the air; when they became three correlative deities, their names were Allecto (endless hate), Megarea (jealousy), Tisiphone (revenge).

ERIPHOS Dionysus as a kid, a form into which he was transformed to save him from Hera, who, in the form of a moon goddess, once ate him when he had the shape of a human child. A legend which indicates a change from human to animal sacrifice in rites. Compare Christmas Play, Lenaea.

ERIPHYLE In the Greek legend Seven Against Thebes, wife of Amphiarus, sister of Adrastus, mother of Alcmæon. Amphiarus did not wish to join the expedition, headed by Adrastus, but Eriphyle, bribed by the necklace and veil which once belonged to Harmonia, betrayed her husband's hiding place. Before leaving for the expedition, Amphiarus extorted a solemn promise from Alcmaeon that, should he perish in battle, his death would be avenged. Years later Alcmaeon fulfilled his oath and murdered Eriphyle. This is a sun or time myth; Amphiarus, the old sun, dies because of the perfidy of his wife, the moon, who in time is killed by Alcmaeon, the young or morning sun.

Eriphyle's jewels and veil.

Possessions which bring death and unhappiness to whoever possesses them. The jewels typify dew or fertility, which must fade, the veil typifies rest or night (death). Also known as Harmonia's jewels and veil.

ERIS Greek goddess of discord. Daughter of Zeus and Nyx; sister and companion of Ares, mother of Algea (pains), Amphilogetai (disputes), Androktasiai (slaughters), Ate (woe), Dysnomie (lawlessness), Hysminai (battles), Lethe (oblivion), Limos (famine), Logos (fable), Machai (battles), Neikea (quarrels), Ponos (toil), Philotes (desire), Phonoai (murders). Being uninvited to the wedding of Thetis and Peleus, she threw an apple among those gathered bearing the inscription, "For the fairest." It was claimed by Aphrodite, Athena, and Hera. Paris awarded the apple to Aphrodite, goddess of beauty and love. The award brought about events which led to the Trojan war. Eris is portrayed as a woman with a florid complexion and dishevelled hair with snakes intertwined. In one hand she brandishes a poniard and a hissing adder, in the other a burning torch. The wolf sometimes accompanies her. The spear and whip are her emblems. Cognate Roman Discordia.

ERISICHTHON See Eresichthon.

ERIU (EIRE) In Celtic mythology foster-daughter of Codal, sister of Banba and Fotla. An earth-mother, she sat on a hill-ock which increased with her. Had she not complained to Codal of the sun's heat and the cold of the wind, the mound would have grown until Ireland was filled with the mountain. She was a Tuatha De Danann goddess and, with her sisters, met the Milesians when they invaded Ireland. Miled promised her that her name would be the chief name of Ireland forever. Eriu, in its genitive form Erin, has survived. The inauguration feast of early Irish kings was celebrated as a wedding feast because of the belief that the inauguration rite symbolized the marriage of the king to this ancient eponymous queen. Her name probably derived from that of the Greek triple fate-goddess Erinyes.

ERKIR An ancient Armenian earth goddess. Also called Armat or Perkunus.

ERLIK In Tatar mythology Ulgen saw a human floating on the cosmic ocean and gave it a soul and the name Erlik. In the beginning the first man was Ulgen's friend and brother; later he developed into a devil whose sins were pride and boastfulness. Ulgen drove him down into the depths, where he rules the kingdom of death.

ERLIK-KHAN (IRLEK-KHAN)

Central Asian ruler of the dead. He sits in an underground grotto and is surrounded by a court consisting of evil spirits who make excursions into the world of the living to seize the souls of those who have sinned. The virtuous, when they die, go to heaven where they live in the cosmic tree in the shape of birds.

ERLKING (ERLKOENIG) A German malevolent goblin who haunts the Black Forest and lures people, especially children, to destruction. Probably derived from the Danish ellerkonge, king of the elves. Erlkoenig literally is king of the alders.

ERMENGARDE (EMMA, ERMA, IRMA) Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning immense and protection.

ERMENRICH (ERMANARIC, ERMENERICH, HERMANRIC) In Dietrich legend king of the Ostrogoths. An agricultural hero. Husband of Svanhild, father of Randver, uncle of Dietrich. He treacherously deprived his nephew of his lands and wronged the wife of Sibeche, one of his counselors. In revenge Sibeche bore false witness against Randver, saying he had seduced Svanhild. The prince was hanged and Svanhild was trodden to death by many steeds. In the Volsung Saga, Ermenrich is called Jormunrek. In relation to his son resembles Theseus.

ERMENT In Egyptian antiquity the place where Mentu was worshiped. A name akin to the Saxon Irmin and to Hermon, which is an alternative name for Mount Zion.

ERMENTRUDE Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning immense and strength.

ERMINE Aristocracy, beauty, grace, luxury, peerage, pride, purity, royalty, wealth. The animal is believed to prefer death to defilement; if placed in a ring of mud, it supposedly will kill itself rather than contaminate its fur; hence emblematic of unspotted purity and for this reason selected as the robe of judges and princes. Inasmuch as it is used for facings, linings, and as robes of court officials in Europe, symbolic of domination and power. In heraldry typifies dignity, sovereignty. Word related to Irmin.

ERMINIA In Tasso's Jerusalem Delivered a Syrian maiden. She falls in love with Tancred, the Christian, and, when the Christian army besieges Jerusalem, she arrays herself in armor to accompany her lover.

ERNEST (ERN) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning earnestness. Feminine form Ernestine.

EROS (1) A small asteroid which comes closer to earth than any other planet. (2) In early Greek mythology born of Chaos and Divine Principle, a self-existent nature power harmonizing all things. In later myths a god of love, variously said to be the son of Cronus and Aphrodite, Hephaestus and Aphrodite, Hermes and Artemis, Uranus and Gaea, Zephyrus and Iris, but most commonly identified as the son of Ares and Aphrodite. His brother was Anteros, deity of unhappy love. In still later myths Eros multiplied into little gods of discord and mischief, renowned as mischievous, engaged in driving chariots, hunting, rowing, and shooting love arrows. In a legend he was a beautiful youth who warned his bride Psyche not to look upon him. Psyche's jealous sisters prevailed upon her to look at Eros, telling her that he had a monstrous form. When Psyche approached him with a lamp as he slept, a drop of the oil fell on him, he awakened, and his beautiful form flew away. Psyche went in search of her husband and suffered many hardships and perils, finally descending into the underworld where she was given a box containing all the charms of beauty. Although warned not to open it, she could not resist doing so, and a black vapor rose from the box, which threw her into a death-like sleep, out of which Eros, who had long hovered around her unseen, awoke her with the point of one of his golden arrows. He persuaded Zeus to admit her among the immortals. Thus Dawn becomes the bride of Sun; when she gazes upon him his unveiled splendor is too dazzling even for her eyes and he disappears from her sight, but he returns after she has descended into the nether regions (died for a day). The darts of Eros symbolize sunbeams. In art he is generally shown as a chubby winged boy bearing bow and quiver, sometimes a torch. He is depicted riding a dolphin, an eagle, a lion, or seated in a chariot drawn by wild boars or stags, emblematic of the power of love as the subduer of all nature, including wild animals. Other attributes are the dove, lyre, mussel shell, rose coronal, swan. The name is cognate with Ares, Horus, iris, rice. Eros sometimes is identified with Priapus; he parallels the Roman Cupid.

Erotes. Greek deities of love. Personifications of the life impulse, winged fructifiers. Multiples of Eros.

ERROL Masculine name from the Latin, meaning wanderer; also a form of Earl.

ERROR (1) In Spenser's Faerie Queene a fabulous monster living in Wandering Wood. She has a brood of a thousand young ones of various shapes. Her cubs creep into her mouth when alarmed as a young kangaroo creeps into its mother's pouch.

The Red Cross Knight is nearly killed by the stench which issues from the foul fiend, but he succeeds in cutting off her head, whereupon the brood lap up the blood and burst with satiety. (2) In an Italian icon personified by a man dressed as a pilgrim groping out his way blindfolded.

ERUNCHA Australian devils who devour a man or make him into a medicine man.

ERWAND In Armenian legend king born of a dragon father. He was confined in mist and rivers by dragons, who claimed and held captive those coming from their stock. A proverbially ugly and wicked king, who possessed an evil eye under which rocks crumbled to pieces.

ERWIN Masculine name from a family name; a variant of Irving.

ERYCINA Sicilian name of Venus.

ERYMANTHIAN BOAR A devastating boar which lurked in the Erymanthian mountains. Its capture was the fourth Heraclian labor. He chased it into deep snow, where he trapped it. The boar typifies winter frost overcome by Heracles the sun.

ERYSICHTHON Same as Eresichthon, which see.

ES Heaven creator-god of the Yenisei Ostiaks.

ES (AES, EX) Word root meaning essence or light. To Phoenicians signified goat. S is interchangeable with sh, z, zh; all vowels are interchangeable. Appears in Asclepius, Esau, Esmun, essential.

ESAGILA In Babylonian mythology temple constructed by the gods for the worship of Marduk after his victory over the chaos monster Tiamat. In some accounts said to stand on the sea; later (probably erroneously) said to be the first temple built on earth, and may have referred to the Tower of Babel.

ESAR Turkish name for god. Cognate with Aesir, Asar (Osiris), Assur, Azur, Sire.

ESARHADDON Son of Sennacherib. One of the most powerful kings of Assyria and renowned as a great builder. He rebuilt Babylon, which his father had destroyed.

ESAU (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew. Its meaning remains unknown, but it is usually explained as densely haired or wooded. (2) Son of Isaac, elder twin brother of Jacob. He was legally the heir, but coming home one night after hunting, he sold his birthright to Jacob for a mess of porridge. Jacob, pretending to be Esau, then received from the aged Isaac the blessing intended for his brother, and Esau became an older brother in the service of a younger one. Esau is usually regarded as a deity of darkness or of the moon. In the tradition of the cabala, Esau was under solar dominations, while Jacob was under lunar influence. After giving up his birthright Esau was called Edom, which signifies one who thinks only of the moment, surrendering his inalienable rights. The mountainous section, south of the Dead Sea, in which he settled, was named Edom after him. Esau is usually described as one rough and covered with hair, which probably accounts for the meaning given to the name. His leg-end bears resemblances to that of Cain and Abel and Ho-no-Susori and Hiko-hohodemi.

ESAUGETEH EMISSEE Creek Indian master of the breath of life. Creator wind god who dwelt in a cave in the center of Nunne Chaha and made the first men of clay and built walls on which he set them out to dry.

ESCALOP SHELL Symbolizes pilgrimage as it serves as a drinking cup on wanderings. Emblem of sea deities and love goddesses.

ESCAPING ONE'S FATE A folk-tale motif in which unfortunates escape a deplorable fate either by their own cleverness, sorcery, or trickery, or the cleverness, sorcery, or trickery of a benefactor. In African and American Indian tales an animal frequently is the benefactor who saves a human.

ESCARBUNCLE Heraldic symbol of supremacy.

ESCHATOLOGY In theology a doctrine of final or last things, such as death, the future state of existence, immortality, resurrection. From the Greek eschatos meaning furthest, utmost.

ESCHSCHOLTZIA BLOOM In the language of flowers: Do not refuse me.

ESDEN A later name for the baboon form of Thoth.

ESDES A jackal or wolf-headed Egyptian deity.

ESDRAS Masculine name. Greek form of Ezra, meaning rising of light.

ESEGE-MALAN-TENGERI Buri-end at heaven god.

ESHMUN (ASHMUN, ESHMOUN, ESMOUN, ESMOUNOS, ESMUN)

Syro-Phoenician sun deity of healing and vital force. Son of Sydyk. Eighth of the deities worshiped at Beirut, the other seven being his brothers the Cabiri, from whom he was separated by the deluge. Husband-brother-son of Astarte. In one myth he was pursued by the goddess Astronoe. As she was about to capture him, he cut off his genitals with an axe. In remorse Astronoe summoned Paeon (probably another aspect of Eshmun), who turned the mutilated god into a deity of generative heat. Thus the sun god, pursued by the gloaming, cut off his lower sections before dying; an aspect of the setting sun. Phallic rites formed an inseparable part of his worship. Some scholars hold Eshmun to be an early form of Asclepius, and a link connecting Phoenician and Greek genealogies. Like Asclepius, the serpent was his emblem. He was a god of Sidon identified with Adonis. See Emasculation.

ESHMUN-ASTARTE Phoenician father-mother deity. Probable source of the Hindu Yab-Yum deity forms. Compares Anat-Bethel, Hermaphrodite. See Androgynous deities.

ESKIMOS According to their own tradition, they were the first of all men, created from the union of a girl and a dog. The man, who was to become the ancestor of white men, the girl put in the boot sole and sent him to find his own country. Thus, when white men came, they came in boats that looked like the sole of a boot.

ESMERALDA (ESME) Feminine name from the Spanish, meaning emerald.

ESPINOGRES In the Grail legend son of Brangemore, queen of Cornwall. He murdered his mother under the altar of the chapel she had built. The chapel became Perilous Chapel where a mysterious Black Hand murdered many knights until Percival overcame the Black Hand and broke the evil spell. This is a fertility myth, in which the Black Hand represents evil or winter.

ESS In Irish mythology daughter of Eochaid and Etain. Mistaken by her father for Etain, she had a daughter by him called Messbuachalla who became the mother of the hero Conaire. See incest.

ESSENCE Existence in the abstract, a spiritual entity, deity, god.

ESSENE (1) Name by which the twelve precious stones set in the breastplate of the Jewish high priest were called. They were arranged in four rows to indicate the four seasons, and symbolized 'that Reason which holds together and regulates the universe.' (2) One of an ascetic community of Jews, formed in the second century B.C. The members lived a monastic life in the desert, had community of goods, sought higher degrees of holiness, practiced voluntary poverty, and were mostly celibates.

ESSONITE Semi-precious gem with the sentiment: Love invites you. Also called cinnamon stone.

ESTAS Athapascan Indian trickster-hero of cosmogonic events.

ESTATE Condition of life, position, rank. Formerly in England, one of three classes possessing political rights: lord's spiritual, lord's temporal, and the commons; now merely lords and commons.

In Popular use, a parcel of real property, usually of considerable size and elegance.

Fourth estate. The lowest class of society, the laboring class. Humorously, the public press.

ESTHER (ESSIE, HESTER, HESTHER, HETTY) (1) Feminine name from the Persian, meaning star. Derived from Ish-tar, and identified as L'Isabelluccia. Name radically identical with Zendic stara, a star. Syllable 'Es' corresponds to 'Is' (light). (2) Persian name for the planet Venus. (3) A Jewish heroine whose story is told in the Old Testament book bearing her name. She was an orphan by the name of Hadassah, brought up by her uncle (or cousin) Mordecai. When Ahasuerus (Xerxes) banished Vashti as his wife, Hadassah was chosen to replace her and her name was changed to the Persian Esther. Haman, a royal favorite, jealous of Mordecai, conceived a plot to destroy all the Jews in captivity throughout the kingdom. Esther, a woman of wisdom and tact pleaded for her people and averted the massacre. Haman was hanged on the high gallows he had constructed for Mordecai. The deliverance of the Jews by Esther is still celebrated in the yearly festival called Purim. An epithet of Esther is Hind of Dawn.

ESTOILLE In heraldry a six-pointed star with wavy arms symbolizing eminence.

ESTSANATLEHI The Navaho woman who changes. Revered goddess who, like the phoenix, when she becomes old, rejuvenates herself and becomes young again. She was created by Yei from an image of the turquoise, but moved to the west, the abode of rain, where she is the wife of the sun-carrier. She is the mother of Nayanezgani and sister of Yolka Estsan. Worshipped as a goddess of fruitfulness. The turquoise is her symbol as akin to earth. Her rejuvenation corresponds to the yearly cycle of renewed fertility.

ESUS (HESUS) Ancient Gaulish god of vegetation and war. Represented as a wood-cutter; his name means master. The human victims offered to him were hung on trees. By Romans sometimes equated with Mars, sometimes with Mercury.

ET (AT, OT) Word root appearing frequently in words relative to warmth, as Etna, heat, hot.

ETA Japanese outcasts. Also called chori, which see.

ETAIN Literally, shining one. In Gaelic mythology the wife of Midir, god of the underworld. She was abducted by Oengus, who kept her imprisoned in a bower of glass, which he carried everywhere with him. Fuamnach, a sorceress, jealous of Etain, transformed her into a fly, which was tossed about in the wind until it fell into a cup in the house of Etair. Etair's wife drank beer from the cup, and so Etain was reborn as the daughter of Etair and his wife, and eventually became the wife of Eochaid Airem, by whom she became the mother of a daughter by the name of Etain. Etain, the wife of Eochaid, arranged a clandestine meeting with the king's brother Ailill Anglonnach, but he overslept and, Midir, in the form of Ailill kept the appointment and carried Etain, rightfully his wife, off with him. In another legend Midir challenged Eochaid Airem to a game of chess; Eochaid lost and Midir demanded Etain as his prize. She is the summer maid and moon goddess who must spend part of her life underground with the king of darkness and winter. Oengus and Eochaid typify the sun and fertility, which bring Etain out of darkness into the light. Analogue of Persephone.

ETANA In Sumerian mythology a shepherd king who had reigned for 1,500 years. Thirteenth king of Kish after the flood. Being without heir, he set out to obtain from Anu, the sky god, the magic plant of birth. On the back of an eagle he reached the third or highest heaven when he became frightened and fell to his death. The myth alludes to the belief that kingship is hereditary, that legitimate kings descend from the gods or are appointed by the gods, that a mortal is not admitted into the immortal realm of gods. It implies their messianic character, and the belief that a king is the source of civilization. After the death of Alexander the Great, the ascent of Etana was attributed to the warrior. As one who flew into the skies Etana is the prototype of Bellerophon and Icarus.

ETASA In Hinduism swift steed of Indra.

ETEOCLES In Greek mythology a son of Oedipus by his mother Jocasta; thus a child of an incestuous union. Brother of Polynices and of Antigone. After the voluntary abdication of Oedipus, Eteocles and Polynices became joint rulers of Thebes. Eteocles, being ambitious, seized the reins of the government. In the war that followed, called the Seven Against Thebes, the brothers killed each other. Eteocles was a lord of darkness. Their story resembles that of Eber and Eremon.

ETERNAL, THE God. The name of a Gnostic Aeon. Symbolized by the Cedar of Lebanon, circle, evergreens, mountain, olive tree, sea, seaweed, serpent with tail in its mouth. In China personified by a young woman standing, robed in green, veiled, a mantle on her right side; symbolized by a stream of rice wine. Gnostics symbolized by black. In Japan typified by the precious jewel, the tama, a crystal ball.

Eternal City. Rome.

Eternal jewel. The soul.

Eternal light (or flame). Light to which a hero's life is tied. In mythology, the hero is usually a sun-king, as Meleager, whose life is doomed when the brand burns out, i.e. the sun sets. A superstition has evolved from the belief, and families of aviators keep a flame burning; as long as the flame burns no harm supposedly has come to the aviator in flight. Compare Brigit's fire, Excalibur.

Eternal role. Death.

Eternal youth. Symbolized by the fountain of Ponce de Leon; personified by a cherub, Cupid, Seraph.

ETESIAN Yearly north winds that prevail over the Aegean Sea and Mediterranean region during the dog-days; annual monsoons.

ETHAN Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning firmness, strength.

ETHAN ALLEN A hero. Alluding to Ethan Allen, a hero of early Vermont.

ETHEL Feminine name from Old English, meaning noble.

ETHELBALD Masculine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning noble prince.

ETHELBERT (BERT) Masculine name from Old English, meaning nobly bright.

ETHELDRETH Feminine name from Old English, meaning noble and strong.

ETHELDRID Feminine name from the Teutonic, meaning noble threatener.

ETHELRED Masculine name from Old English, meaning noble council.

ETHER (AETHER) (1) A title of Zeus. (2) The blue, the heavens, the sky, the upper regions of space. Word cognate with Aither, author, Uther (Pentadragon). Compare Agathadaemon. Symbolized by a ball, circle.

ETHICS Personified by a grave woman holding a measuring square and a bridled lion.

ETHIOPIA Ancients believed Ethiopia to be a land of the most distant men, who were descendants of the men of Punt or perhaps Punt itself. It was the land of the rising and setting sun, and the Table of the Sun was fabled to exist among them. A name derived from or associated with the Greek aithiops meaning to burn face. Because of the name's association with fire, its descendants are sometimes said to have Hephaestus, the fire and metal-working god, as an ancestor. Compare Sabine.

Ethiopian Table. Fertility. It ministered to the wants of the bad or the indifferent as well as to the good. Also called Table of the Sun. Compare Round Table, Sangreal.

ETHNE (ETHNIU) In Celtic mythology granddaughter of Net, daughter of Balor. Wife of Cian and by him mother of Lugh (Lug). As daughter of Balor, she is a deity of darkness or moon goddess. Cian, as son of Diancecht, is a deity of light. Their son Lugh is a sun god. In another legend, she is the sister of Clothru and Medb, and with Clothru, a wife of Conchobar after Medb left him for Ailill.

ETIMMU (ETIMME) Accadian ghost, spirit of the underworld. Diseases are attributed to these souls of the dead. Compares gigim, timi.

ETNA (AETNA) A volcano. In Greek mythology giants and Titans in conflict with the gods were punished by being hurled into its pit. The fumes of Briareus issue from its crater. It is the workshop of the Cyclops and Hephaestus, where the weapons of the gods are forged; in Roman mythology Vulcan has his anvil in its pit. Etna is a contracted form of attuna, Phoenician for furnace. Name cognate with Edna.

ETRAPHILL Moslem angel entrusted with the trumpet of Last Judgment.

ETROG (ETHROG) A citrus fruit; Jewish cult emblem symbolizing the heart. In Feast of Booths, carried in the left hand, the lulab (green palm branch) carried in the right; or tied to the lulab and carried as a token of fruition, triumph.

ETZEL In the Nibelungenlied the name given to Attila, king of the Huns. In the Volsung Saga he is called Atli. He is the second husband of Kriemhild and, by her, the father of Ortlieb. When Etzel's son is killed by the Burgundians (mist folk), the kin of Kriemhild (gloaming or autumn), Etzel (winter) wages war against them.

E-U In Karen (Burma) mythology the first woman.

EUBOUTEOUS A name of Pluto.

EUCALYPTUS Symbolic of love of traveling.

EUCHARIST Christian rite commemorating the dying of Christ for the salvation of mankind. The holy sacrament, the communion of the body and blood of Christ, hence bread and wine in the communion. The cutting of the loaf signifies the slaying of the lamb of God to culminate in resurrection, Christian interpretation of feast of ancient mystery cults where worshipers partook of the food of life from sacred vessels. Sometimes the god was the food eaten (see eating the god), or a substitute was served as symbolic of the god. The ceremony was a solemn thanksgiving as well as a prayer for fecundity, the rebirth of nature in spring. The Eucharist compares with manna in the desert. It is symbolized by bread and wine, chalice, grapes, Lord's Supper, vine and grapes.

EUCLASE Semi-precious gem symbolizing seaside reveries.

EUCLID Masculine name from the Greek, meaning true glory.

EUDORA (DORA) Feminine name from the Greek, meaning happy gift.

EUGENE (GENE) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning well-born, noble. Feminine form, Eugenia (Eugenie, Genie).

EUGENIDES, MR. A one-eyed

Smyrna merchant in the Waste Land by T.S. Eliot, whose cult is that of sexual perversion.

EUGPAMOLAK MANOBO Bago-bo (Philippine Island) chief spirit and creator deity who lives in the sky and watches the doings of men. The spirits who serve him punish people who do not make proper offerings.

EULALIE Feminine name from the Greek through the French, meaning speaking well, fair speech.

EULENSPIEGEL, TYLL In medieval German tales a peasant clown. He was baptized in hot water and mud, was a Jack of all trades, undertook any commission, and under the guise of thick-headedness delighted in outwitting the lord, priest, and shopkeepers. Personification of fool, knave, and peasant wit over bourgeois smugness. Eulenspiegel means owl-glass.

EULOGIA Originally the eucharist sacrament. Afterward a portion of the consecrated loaf sent to the sick or by one bishop to another as a token of holy brotherhood.

EUMAEUS The swineherd slave of Odysseus. When Odysseus returned home after an absence of twenty years disguised as a beggar, Eumaeus extended hospitality to him. Prototype of faithful slave and swineherd. Eumaeus was the keeper of the swine or flocks of the sky, i.e. the clouds.

EUMENIDES Originally, gentle ones who, through their garden, led souls into the realm of the dead. In later Greek myths, said to be avengers of violated law, spirits of retributive justice, three in number: Alectro (relentless one), Megaera (grim one), Tisiphone (avenger of murder). Their task was to punish crimes not within the reach of human justice. Their name, meaning good-tempered ones, was said to be a euphemism given to the Furies, as it would have been ominous to call them by their right name. According to one account they sprang from the blood of Uranus when wounded by Cronus and thus were the embodiment of all terrible imprecations which the defeated deity called down on the head of his rebellious son. They also are listed as daughters of Night. Usually said to be the daughters of Uranus and Gaea. They lived in the lower world, employed by Hades and Persephone, and shared the office and attributes of the Parcae (Fates), with whom they are sometimes confused. Most commonly portrayed with winged black bodies, blood dripping from their eyes, snakes twined in their hair. They carry either a dagger, knife, scourge, torch, serpent, or whip. Their libations were honey and wine; offerings were alder, cedar, juniper, and saffron branches. Black sheep and turtle doves were sacrificed to them.

EUMOLPUS In Greek mythology son of Poseidon by Chione, daughter of Boreas. When he was born, his mother threw him into the sea, but Poseidon rescued the child and placed him in the care of Benthesisyeme of Ethiopia, whose daughter Eumolpus afterward married. For breaking the law of hospitality Eumolpus and his son Ismarus were expelled from Ethiopia, thence from Thrace. He finally took up his abode in Eleusis. A sweet-singer, he was made the first priest of the Eleusian Mysteries, and the priesthood remained in his family for 1,200 years. As priest-king, he fought with the Eleusinians in their war against Athens and was slain by Erechtheus. In some accounts, he is said to be the son of Deiope, granddaughter of Celeus, who in some legends is accounted the first priestly bard of the Eleusinian Mysteries. Probably a wind deity. As an abandoned child, Eumolpus resembles Moses, Taliesin, etc.

EUNICE Feminine name from the Greek, meaning good, victory, well.

EUNOE In Dante's Purgatorio one side of a fountain or river which has the power of restoring the memory of good deeds; the other side is the Lethe, which obliterates memory.

EUNOMIA In Greek mythology one of the Horae (Seasons). Goddess presiding over spring and wise legislation.

EUNOMOS In Greek mythology son of the Calydonian king Oeneus. Personification of spring vegetation. He is accidentally killed by Heracles (the scorching sun). As a result of the slaying Heracles and his wife go into exile (descend into night or winter).

EUNUCH Phrygians, Syrians, etc., sacrificed their genitals to Cybele. Women cut off their breasts. A novice-priest, in his desire to assimilate himself with his beloved goddess was wrought up to such a high pitch of religious excitement, he dashed the severed portions of himself against her image. These broken instruments of fertility were then reverently wrapped and buried in the earth or in subterranean chambers sacred to Cybele, where they were deemed instrumental in hastening the return of spring growth. The castrated priests in time degenerated to become castrated guardians of harems, warders of women, and the title eunuch, derived from the Greek meaning keeper of the bed or the bedchamber attendant, was applied to them. Thus the eunuch became the steward of the wives of men of nobility and wealth, a being neither man nor woman, and emblematic of that which the ancients called evil, sterility. In some societies they are beings without legal or social status. See emasculation.

EUONYMOUS Evergreen emblematic of June in Korea.

EUPATORIUM BLOOM Delay.

EUPHEMUS In early Greek mythology son of the moon-goddess Europa; born by the Cephissus river. He became renowned as a swimmer and could swim as soon as he was born. He skimmed from wave to wave and leaped out of the water like a trout. Compare Cuchulainn. In later legend Poseidon was identified as his father. Euphemus was an Argonaut and, when the Argo came upon the Symplegades, he dispatched a dove to pass between the rocks. When the rocks closed the dove had passed through safely except for the loss of a few feathers. In this manner the Argonauts were able to judge the speed at which they had to row to pass safely through the rocks. The name Euphemus, meaning well-spoken is the source of the word euphemism. His swimming feats probably refer to sun on water.

EUPHRASIA Feminine name from the Greek, meaning heroine.

EUPHRATES In Babylonian mythology, with the Tigris, poured by a god from the great water pot. Fertilizing waters on which Babylon, one of the greatest metropolises of the ancient world, was situated. In Old Testament probably one of the four rivers in Paradise to which reference is made. In New Testament typifies St. Luke. See Aquarius.

EUPHROSYNE In Greek mythology one of the three Graces; presided over good cheer.

EUPHUES The chief character of John Lyly's Euphues. Noted for his alliteration and stilted high-flown manner of speech, which gave rise to the words euphuism and euphuist. Hence one who indulges in affected and elaborate speech.

EURAQUILO A stormy northeast wind of the Levant. Euroclydon is a poetical extension to any violent northeast wind.

EUREKA (1) Literally, I have found it. A cry of exultation over a discovery, alluding to the supposed utterance of Archimedes, the Syracusan philosopher, upon discovering how to find the amount of alloy in Hiero's crown. The word compares with hurrah and hurray, cries of joy, and with ooorake, cry with which the fiends supposedly hailed Lucifer. (2) Motto of the State of California, alluding to the discovery of gold in the state.

EURO In Australian mythology animal in whose body primordial fire was contained.

EUROPA In Greek mythology daughter of Agenor, king of Phoenicia, and Telephassa. Zeus, in the form of a white bull, abducted her and carried her off to Crete, where she became the mother by him of Aeacus, Minos, and Rhadamanthus. Asterion, king of Crete, married her, and adopted her sons. Europa personified the splendor of the morning, she was the dawn, carried across the firmament by the god of the heavens. In some interpretations Europa is a moon goddess and her name is said to mean she-of-the-broad-face (or broad-eye), i.e. full moon. She has become the female figure symbolic of Europe. Her name is related to the Vedic Uruasi (wide-spreading dawn).

EUROPE A continent accounted one of the four corners of the world. Personified by a matron clad in regal flowing robes and wearing a machinated crown.

EURUS (EUROS) In Greek mythology son of Eos and Astraeus. Personification of the east wind; in Athens, the southeast wind. His warm breath melts the snow into rain. Compare Euraquilo.

EURY Word element from the Greek signifying broad or wide.

EURYALE In Greek mythology sister of Medusa. One of the Gorgons, which see.

EURYALUS In Virgil's Aeneid the faithful friend of Nisus.

EURYBIA One of the Greek Nereides. Sea-nymph offspring of Nereus and Doris.

EURYCLEA In Greek legend old nurse of Odysseus. She recognizes him by a scar when he returns home after an absence of twenty years, although his wife Penelope does not. Euryclea is she who goes before the sun (Odysseus) at his rising, i.e. the dawn or dawn mist. The scar is that of mutilation which the sun receives at setting. See scar.

EURYDICE In Greek mythology: (1) a nymph, wife of Orpheus. After her death, her husband followed her to the underworld and was given permission to lead her thence on condition that he did not glance at her during the passage. He violated the condition, and she was returned to Hades. Eurydice typifies the dawn or dawn mist, which falls back into darkness as her husband is forced to travel the sky without her. (2) Wife of Creon; mother of Haemon. On word of her son's suicide, she killed herself. See Creon, Haemon.

EURYLOCHUS In Greek legend the only companion of Odysseus. Circe was unable to turn into a hog.

EURYNOME In Greek mythology an Oceanide. Mother of the Graces (Charites). She was the mistress of Ophion, the cosmic snake. A great mother goddess. Her name signifies wide-rule and she is a personification of the wide-ruling element of moisture (dew). Zeus made her his wife to emphasize the extent of his dominions. Some identify her as a moon-goddess, and Eurynome was a surname of Artemis in Arcadia, where she was represented as a mermaid.

EURYPHASSA (EURYPHAESSA)

Greek Titan; daughter of Uranus and Gaea, sister-wife of Hyperion, mother of Helios. Name signifying far-shining, she is an aspect of dawn.

EURYPYLUS In Greek legend assisted by Calchas the soothsayer, Eurypylus determined the right moment for cutting the first cable at Aulis when the Greeks set sail for Troy.

EURYSTHEUS Legendary king of Mycenae. Grandson of Perseus, son of Sthenelus, cousin of Heracles. At the instigation of Hera, Heracles was forced to serve him for twelve years, performing twelve labors. See Heracles. Eurystheus was a contemptible ruler served by his honorable and lofty cousin, thus Eurystheus, the task-master, typifies mankind served by the sun, which constantly labors for the benefit of those meaner than himself. An agricultural deity. After his death, Eurystheus's head was buried in a pass that commanded the approach to Athens to protect the city from invasion, a burial paralleling that of Adam, Arthur, and Bran.

EURYTION (1) Greek Giant who, with the two-headed dog Orthrus, guarded the oxen of Geryon. He was killed by Heracles. (2) The Centaur who, at the marriage feast of Pirithous and Hippodamia, became intoxicated and tried to violate the bride, thus causing the battle of the Centaurs and Lapithae.

EURYTUS Instructor to Heracles in the art of bow and arrow.

EUSEBIUS Masculine name from the Greek, meaning godly, pious.

EUSOPH Chaldean sky deity. Light of life. Symbolized by an equilateral triangle.

EUSTACE Masculine name from the Greek, meaning to cause to stand firm, and from the Latin, meaning fruitful or happy in harvest.

EUTERPE Greek muse of harmony and lyric poetry; patroness of joy and pleasure. She invented the double flute. Portrayed with a musical instrument, usually a flute. Her name signifies charmer. She probably typifies an aspect of breeze.

EUXINE (EUXINUS) Literally, hospitable sea. The Black Sea on which sailed the fabled Argonauts in search of the Golden Fleece. Ancients believed it flowed into Oceanus. Once known as Axenus.

EVADNE (1) In Greek mythology daughter of Poseidon and Pitane; wife of Argus. In another account Aegyptus is her father. By Apollo, mother of Iamos. Fearing the wrath of her father, she fled after the birth of her son. Two serpents (earth's wisdom) were sent by Apollo to guard the infant. After a long search, the grandfather found the child in a bed of violets. Iamos revealed a knowledge normally hidden from the minds of men, and his children, the Iamidae, became the famous seers or prophets of Olympia. (2) Wife of Capaneus, who was one of the Seven Against Thebes and killed in attacking the city. She threw herself on her husband's funeral pyre, and was consumed with him. Thus the gloaming dies on the burning fire of the setting sun.

EVAKI Amazonian night or sleep goddess. She shuts the lid of the pot in moving heaven which contains the sun, and hides it until heaven resumes its daytime position.

EVAN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning young warrior. Welsh form of John, identical with Ivan, Yvon. In Greek antiquity a title of Bacchus. Related to Bevan, Levan, heaven.

EVANDER In Roman mythology son of Mercury and Carmenta. A fertility lord, he was banished from Arcadia about sixty years before the Trojan war and founded a settlement of colonists in Italy on Palatine Hill on the Tiber, where he introduced Greek art and the worship of Greek divinities, such as: Demeter (Ceres), Heracles (Hercules), Nike (Victory), Pan (Faunus), Poseidon (Neptune). His settlement, Pallatium, later became incorporated with the city of Rome. He had a son named Pallas and two daughters, Rome (strength), and Dyne (power). In the Aeneid, as an old man, he welcomed Aeneas to Italy after his escape from Troy.

EVANGELINE Feminine invented name, derived from evangel, meaning good news.

EVANGELISTS The four Christian apostles, Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, to whom the Gospels are ascribed, hence any preacher, especially one who travels. The four are symbolized by four open books, four scrolls, four streams issuing from a rock. Individually, Matthew is symbolized by a man (or angel), inasmuch as his gospel expresses the human side of Christ; Mark by a lion, expressing courage and energy; Luke by a calf or ox, expressing sacrifice; John by an eagle, expressing lofty vision. The four creatures were borrowed from Assyrian art.

EVANS, SIR HUGH In Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor a pedantic Welsh parson and schoolmaster. Although of extraordinary simplicity, he has great native shrewdness.

EVANS, WILLIAM The giant porter of Charles I, said to be nearly eight feet. He carried Sir Jeffrey Hudson, the king's dwarf, in his pocket.

EVE (CHAVAH, CHAVVA, EVA, EVITA, HEVE) (1) Feminine name from the Hebrew, meaning life. (2) In Old Testament the first created woman, the common mother of all mankind. Agent through whom sin came into the world; a temptress, inasmuch as she persuaded Adam to eat the forbidden fruit. She was made of man for man and for this reason is regarded the subordinate and weaker of the two sexes. Her history is closely connected with that of Adam, which see. She is usually portrayed as a naked woman, her loins girdled by grape leaves; she holds an apple; a serpent is near her. Her name is cognate with av, ave, evoe. Prototype of Embla, Pandora.

EVELAKE Saracen ruler who was converted to Christianity by Joseph of Arimathea and brought by Joseph to Britain. He attempted the quest of the Grail, and failed, but was divinely promised that he should not die until a knight of his blood in the ninth degree should achieve it. When Percivale, his descendant, fulfilled the promise, Evelake was 300 years old.

EVELYN Masculine and feminine name from the Celtic, meaning pleasant; from the Hebrew, meaning life; from Old French, meaning hazel. Also from an Old French family name, Avelin. Other feminine forms are Evelina, Eveline. Evelyn is related to Hebrew Eve.

EVENING Typifies autumn, middle age. According to Aristotle, it typifies winter and old age. Mystics associate it with the musical tone d.

Evening deities. Guides into the realm of darkness or death.

Evening glory. Japanese symbol for loneliness, melancholy.

Called yufugawo.

Evening star. See under star.

Evening twilight. Approaching death. In an Italian icon personified by a winged infant of dusk carnation color flying toward the west. A bright star is above his head; in his left hand he holds a bat; with his right hand he is dropping arrows.

EVERARD Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning boar and hard.

EVEREST Sacred Buddhist mountain. See mountains.

EVERETT Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning changeless.

EVERGLADE STATE Florida.

EVERGREEN Constancy, eternity, faithfulness, permanence, poverty. Anciently marked the grave of illustrious dead, ultimately a general symbol of immortality. Sacred to the Teutons, the evergreen appeared with the mistletoe in festivals celebrating the winter solstice; a practice borrowed for the Christmas celebration. Compare cedar, fir, pine.

Evergreen needle. Japanese symbol of longevity and prosperity.

Evergreen sprig. Immortality. In medical symbolism of obstetric import; life.

Evergreen thorn. Solace in adversity.

EVERLASTING BLOOM In the language of flowers: Always remembered.

EVERYMAN English title of Elckerlijck, a Dutch morality play of the 15th century. Everyman the principle character in the play, symbolizes humanity; he depicts man's progress through life, and the characters he meets are personified vices and virtues.

When summoned by death, Everyman, who has been forsaken by his friends and has lost his faculties and his possessions, is sustained by the comfort of his good deeds. The mystics conceive Everyman as dual in character, having within himself the masculine attributes of intellect, knowledge, and science, and the feminine characteristics of love, religion, and will.

EVIL Symbolized by a basilisk, a beautiful but repellent woman, black color, darkness, devil, dragon, drought, famine, gargoyle, hemlock, hyena, Lucifer, panther, poison, Satan, serpent, siren, spider, storm, thorn, vampire, winter, wolf. Evil deities are those of darkness; death; night; scorching, drought-bringing sun; storm, underworld; winter.

Evil eye. The eye of one who is envious, jealous, or malicious, and believed to have the power to cast a spell, strike dead, turn to stone, or cause other injury to the beasts or persons on which it gazes. Frequently the third, fiery, scorching eye of a deity or supernatural creature. In Irish mythology the eye of Balor is an evil eye.

Evil genius. A devil, Lucifer, Satan, a tempter. One of the two spirits which supposedly accompany each person through life, the other being good.

Evil hour. An unfortunate impulse or influence, in allusion to astrology.

Evil kings. In India kings of the six heavens who resisted the spread of Buddhism and were subdued by Tenshodijin.

Evil May Day. May 1, 1517 in which rioting London apprentices attacked French residents. As a result of the riots fifteen were hanged.

Evil pockets. The eighth circle of Dante's Inferno, the Malebolge, divided into ten concentric rings forming deep bolgi or evil pits. In each a separate kind of fraud has its own punishment. Malebolge is used figuratively for any cesspool of filth or iniquity.

Evil principle. A compulsive power beyond our wills. Even the gods are unable to control or overcome this power; thus Pagan deities, including Zeus, submit to the unerring guidance of the Fates. In mythology frequently understood to be the female or passive principle. Darkness, death, winter.

King's evil. Scrofula. So called from the belief which existed from the reign of Edward the Confessor to that of Queen Anne that it could be cured by the royal touch.

Root of all evil. Money.

EVNISSYEN In Brythonic mythology a lover of strife; brother of Nissyen, a lover of peace. Son of Llyr, half-brother of Bran and Branwen. When Matholwych, king of Ireland and suitor of Branwen, arrived in Britain, Evnissyen mutilated his steeds. The indignant Matholwych left and returned only when Bran gave him gifts which included a caldron which restored life to the dead. After the marriage of Branwen to Matholwych, Evnissyen the mischief-maker, again created trouble by tossing Gwern, son of Matholwych and Branwen, into the fire. In the war that followed, Evnissyen, regretting his evil deeds, destroyed the caldron in which the warriors of Matholwych were being revived, and gave his own life in doing so. Evnissyen typifies the wind; Matholwych the sun. The steeds of Matholwych were clouds, dissipated by the wind.

EVOE (HEVAH) Cry shouted at Greek mysteries by worshipers. Compares with alleluia (hallelujah). Word akin to Eve.

EWE (1) A single possession highly prized, alluding to the story of the ewe lamb told in the Old Testament Book of Samuel. Compare lamb. In Greek antiquity sacred to Hera. In Japan a sacred animal called Sin You, which see. (2) A ferocious West African tribe with speech practically monosyllabic.

EWER Fertility, nourishment, refreshment, water.

Ewer and basin. Toilet. Christian symbol of innocence and purity.

EWIGZEITGEIST The enduring spirit; spirit that characterizes age after age, opposed to zeitgeist.

EXCALIBUR (ESCALIBOR, ESICALIBUR) Magic sword of King Arthur. The only knight who could tear the sword from the stone in which it had been firmly fixed, it became his. With the feat he proved his right to the throne of England. In another legend the sword was bestowed on him through Merlin, who led him to the lake, where the Lady of the Lake appeared and told him to take the sword which an arm 'clothed in white samite' held in hand. At Arthur's death, Sir Bedivere, instructed by Arthur, threw the sword into the water, where it was caught by an arm and hand 'clothed in white samite.' The hand waved it three times and then with the sword disappeared into the water. The life of Arthur was tied to the sword, i.e. the life of the sun is attached to its never-failing rays. Morgan Le Fay, Arthur's sister, desiring the sword for her lover

Sir Accolon, tried to take it from Arthur. She succeeded only in obtaining the scabbard, which, in anger, she hurled into the lake, but with injury to the sword, the death of Arthur at some future time was assured. The sword is also known as Caledwiche, Caliburn, Mirandoise. Or Arthur may have possessed more than one magic sword. Excalibur compares with Ascalon, Caladbolg, Gram, Kusanagi, Morglay, and other magic weapons, which are usually instruments of fertility as well as of destruction. It also compares with the brand to which the life of Meleager was tied. The exact meaning of Excalibur is unknown; it is believed to signify liberated from stone, and it accepted as an earlier form of excelsior.

EX CATHEDRA Literally, from the chair. Signifies to speak with authority. Thus the pope, speaking ex cathedra, is said to speak with an infallible voice, to speak as the successor and representative of Saint Peter. Applied ironically to dogmatic, self-sufficient assertions.

EXCELSIOR Literally, higher, loftier. Ever upward. Motto of New York State; also of the United States. Longfellow titled an allegorical poem Excelsior. The scene is set in the Alps, where a youth bearing the device Excelsior essays to climb higher and higher, but falls dead on the way.

EXCHANGE OF CHILDREN In time myths the aged king, usually a sun hero, is told by an oracle or prophet that his son or his daughter's son will slay him. In an attempt to avoid this fate, the king orders the infant killed. The desperate mother places her son in the home of a shepherd or serf, whose ill-born child is then sacrificed to satisfy the king, and in time the prophecy is fulfilled. Thus the young sun relentlessly replaces the old sun, the New Year replaces the Old Year. In folklore a huge-headed, ill-favored, or imbecilic infant, believed to be the offspring of mischievous fairies, underground gnomes, or of witches, is substituted by its malicious parents for a beautiful and normal infant which has been left unguarded, especially before baptism. Such an infant is called a changeling. See exposed child.

Exchange of place. In Irish mythology parallels descent into underworld.

EXCREMENTS SWALLOWED

In primitive legends power is obtained over a malignant creator god, culture hero, or obstructive brother by possession of or use of his voidings.

EXECUTION OF CRIMINALS

In antiquity a sacrifice to a deity; surrogate for a sacred king, which see.

EXHALATION In heraldry a rain-shower, watersprout, or the like, employed as a bearing.

EXILE In an Italian icon personified by a man dressed as a pilgrim. He carries a palmer's staff and a hawk. The palmer's staff denotes virtue, the hawk evil.

EXIS (EXVSVA) Found on a cartouche with two asps. Used in antiquity as an amulet probably against snake bite.

EXODUS Literally, road out. Title of the second book of the Old Testament; also called She-moth. It describes the departure of the Israelites from Egypt under the guidance of Moses, the divine law, and the establishment of Jehovah's dwelling place in the tabernacle. Hence, a mass departure, a transference of population on a large scale; victory over death.

EXORCISE Deliver from evil, expel an evil spirit by magic words or prayers.

EXPECTATION WEEK Week between the Ascension and Whit Sunday, when the apostles continued praying in expectation of the descent of the Holy Ghost.

EXPERIENCE In an Italian icon personified by a matron holding a geometrical square in one hand and in the other a small staff attached to which is a scroll inscribed with "Rerum Magistra." A flame pot and a touchstone are at her side.

EXPIATORY RITUAL In primitive Greece a human being bore the burden of expiating sin. Many expiated their sins by jumping from cliffs into the sea or by other forms of suicide. In mythology the act of suicide was sometimes attributed to madness brought on by the sin committed, as in the case of Agrauros and Herse. See Erichthonios.

EXPOSED CHILD An exposed infant who is rescued has come to be regarded as one of the identifying marks of a hero or god, along with abnormal growth, caesarean birth, and supernatural conception. The excuse for exposing the infant varies; it may be because of deformity, for economic reasons, illegitimacy, incestuous parentage, political power, supernatural parentage, or to avoid the fulfilment of a prophecy. The child invariable is saved; frequently by an animal who guards or nourishes the child until a peasant or shepherd comes along, who recognizes the noble or royal qualities of the infant by a halo or the brilliance of the child's countenance. The peasant raises the child, who grows into a beautiful maiden or heroic youth, who returns to claim his (or her) rightful position in the world or to avenge or rescue someone, and invariably fulfils the prophecy. Thus the exposed child is a victim and the wielder of fate. Most often the exposed child is a sun hero, who in time myths is fated to replace the old sun king or old year. See Achilles, Aegisthus, Amphion and Zethus, Atalanta, Hiruko, Iamus, Moses, Neleus and Pelias, Oedipus, Paris, Perseus, Remus and Romulus, Telephus.

Exposed dead. A practice which existed among primitive pastoral peoples. Corpses devoured by beasts and birds of prey supposedly experienced great joy and by this means entered the happy fields of afterlife. Among the Jews to be deprived of burial was thought to be one of the greatest marks of dishonor or causes of unhappiness. It was denied to none, not even to enemies. Good men made it a part of their piety to inter the dead. The same tradition existed in ancient Greece, and Antigone faced death rather than let the body of her brother Polynices go unburied. Among certain Zoroastrian sects the dead were left exposed because decayed particles must not contaminate the next world.

EXULTATION Manifested by the crowing cock.

EX VOTO (EX VOTIVE) In Roman Catholic Church, a consecrated (votive) offering, as a picture or tablet.

EYE Divine omniscience, God, the orb or sun. Curiosity, fixity of purpose, foresight, insight, jealousy, knowledge, love, poise, stability, vigilance, vision, window, wisdom. Evil, sorcery, witchery. Life, thus "death put out his eyes." Its parts typify the male and female principles. Amulets of eyes are worn as charms against evil. According to Dante, where love begins, opposed to the mouth, where love ends. Dream significance: (beautiful) sincere love; (diseased) bad business; (lost) death of a relative. In Freemasonry the All-seeing or eye of God is posed upon the apex of a cone or pyramid. Gnostic symbol of the dew-drop. In heraldry signifies providence in government. According to mystics: (black) cunning; (brown) superiority, talent; (deeply set) envy, malice; (expressive) energy; (green) bravery, constancy, treachery; (grey) gentleness, thoughtfulness; (hollow) spying; (small and alert) perseverance; (shifty) hypocrisy; (yellow) murderousness. In the East and Near East the eyes of criminals are sealed; servants are trained to impart information to their masters in the presence of strangers by means of the eyes, thus the Biblical expression, "As the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their masters." Egyptians of antiquity conceived Polaris as an eye upon the pivot of the universe. An eye was a hieroglyph of Horus, Osiris, and Ra, the all-seeing. It was a sun charm worn to ensure health and protect from evil; it was placed with the dead to guard the soul passing through darkness. The Egyptian word for eye was ar, to which is related Har, which was one of the names of Odin. In India the eye typifies androgyny, the linga and yoni. In death it supposedly goes to the sun, whereas the breath goes to the wind. See urna. The eight expressions of the eyes in the Thandava and Lasya dances are: 1- Sama, natural look, represents beginning the dance; depicts devas, observing. 2- Alokita, a quick circular look. A moving wheel, requests. 3- Sachi, looking from center to the side. Aiming arrow, explaining inner motive. 4- Pralokita, looking both sides. Comparing, looking abroad. 5- Meelita, looking with half-opened eyes. Captivity, madness, meditating, prayer. 6- Ullokita, looking up. Before God, growth, recollecting. 7- Anuvrta, looking up and down quickly. Affection, anger. 8- Avalokita, looking down. Consultation, journey, thinking.

Bandaged eye. Blindness. Impartiality, from the bandage on the eyes of Justice.

Blue eyes. Innocence, heavenly purity, sky deities. In fairy tales the color of the eyes of the heroine princess or fairy queen. In Elizabethan times one was blue-eyed or blue-rimmed with debauchery. According to mystics: (China blue) jealousy, passion; (dark blue) profound thinker; (light) weakness; (ordinary) gentleness, kindness.

Coffin eyes. Two eyes or holes were cut in Egyptian coffins that they might guide the souls of mummies; one was the eye of Horus, the sun; one was that of Osiris or Isis, the moon.

Evil eye. See under evil.

Eyeball. In Hindu Thandava and Lasya dances the nine uses of the eyeball are: 1- Bhramana, circular movement. Depicts valor and wrath. 2- Valana, moving in a triangle; use undetermined. 3- Pathana, dropping down; sorrow. 4- Chalana, shaking quickly; fear, valor. 5- Sampravesa, drawing eyeballs back; contempt. 6- Nivartana, sidelong lingering glance; love. 7- Samudvrta, moving from left to right; valor, wrath. 8- Nishkrama, looking straight forcefully; surprise, wrath, wonder. 9- Prakrta, natural look; used in almost all places.

Eyebrows. If close to eyes, typifies gravity; if long, a sage; meeting in men, hard-heartedness; meeting in women, jealousy; raised from eyes, timid inquisitiveness; well divided, cold-heartedness. In Scandinavian mythology a wall of defense. See Ymir. In Hindu Thandava and Lasya dances the seven uses are: 1- Utkshepa, raising; typifies anger, doubt, pleasure, pranks, wonder; 2- Pathana, bringing down; disgust, envy, laughing, smelling. 3- Bhrukuti, raising the ends; wrath. 4- Chatura, slightly up; amorousness, calmness, grace. 5- Kunchita, bending; ambition, crying, fatigue, laughter, pride. 6- Rechita, raising one gracefully; use not determined. 7- Sahaja, natural position; used in natural depictions.

Eye for an eye. Retaliation, retribution in kind. Law introduced by Hammurabi.

Eye gouging. Self-sacrifice, drawing blood as an offering to a deity.

Eye in a triangle. Holy Christian Trinity. When surrounded by a circle radiating light typifies the infinite holiness of the Trinity.

Eyelid. Observation, vigilance. In Hindu Thandava and Lasya dances the nine uses are: 1- Unmesha, opening; depicts anger. 2- Minesha, closing; anger. 3- Prasrta, wide open; pleasure, valor, wonder. 4- Kunchita, shrinking; smelling. 5- Sama, natural; love. 6- Vivartita, raising; anger. 7- Sphurita, shaking, jealousy. 8- Pihita, closing tight; eye-disease, heat, rain, sleeping, strong wind. 9- Vilolita, twinkling; depicts being slapped.

Eye of a cock. Talisman against witchcraft.

Eye of London. Center of London since Roman times. From Cheapside, a name cognate with Cheop, the ever-existent eye.

Eye of a mole. Eye which cannot see; intellectual or spiritual blindness.

Eye of a needle. That which is small.

Eye of a newt. Talisman against disease and evil influences.

Eyes closed. Blindness, impartiality, sleep. Closed in death to shut out the light of this world that the dead person may see in the next. Finno-Ugrics close the eyes of the dead to prevent the deceased from doing harm with a glance or designating who is the next to die during the period the corpse lies in the house.

Eye servant. One who serves faithfully only when the eyes of his master are upon him.

Eyes painted. Abandoned woman.

Eye throbbing. Left, sorrow and tears; right, joy.

Eye wash. Flattery.

Falcon-eyed. Stitched with wire; a practice in training full-grown falcons.

Naked eye. Reality, truth.

One eye. The All-seeing; eye of the universe. Light, moon, sun. Horus, Odin, Siva, Zeus. Compare circle.

One-eyed. One who concentrates his efforts in one direction, usually ignoble. In Greek mythology the Cyclops, lawless giants.

Open eye. Great watcher, supreme deity. Foreseeingness, guardianship.

Saucer eyes. Innocence.

Third eye. Frequently in the forehead of a deity, sometimes on the chest. Wisdom. When an evil eye, one that scorches. The fire of Siva's central eye burnt off one of the five heads of Brahma. The Buddhist Dharmapalas have three eyes. Buddha sometimes portrayed with a third eye. See urna.

Throw dust in one's eyes.

Confuse, deceive.

Two eyes. Knowledge and love. Harmony, marriage, unity, as they are interiorly one though exteriorly two. When one is black and one is white they stand for night and day, a symbolism used in Egyptian antiquity. Two eyes on a platter typify Saint Lucy.

EYEBRIGHT In the language of flowers: Cheer up.

EYETEETH The canine teeth, suggesting one can bite as well as bark. To have out one's eye-teeth is to be alert, knowing.

EYLIMI In Norse mythology father of Hjordis, grandfather of Sigurd, who avenges his death. A time myth.

EYNY Feminine name from Old Norse, meaning island freshness.

EYRGJafa In Norse mythology daughter of Ran and Aegir. A Vana-mother of Heimdall. With Angeyja she ground mould on the World Mill. Personification of waves.

EZEKIEL (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning strength of God. (2) One of the four greater Hebrew prophets, a prophet of captivity. He foretold the destruction of Jerusalem and prepared the Jews for restoration. His book abounds with sublime visions of divine glory and awful denunciations against Israel for a rebellious spirit against God; it contains similar denunciations against Tyre and other hostile nations. His writings are mystical to the point of obscurity. He is said to have been the possessor of life-giving winds, and the beasts of his vision were the eagle, lion, man, ox, which symbolize the quarters of the earth and the four winds.

E-ZIDA Babylonian temple of Nebo. The True House.

EZRA (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning helper or rising light. (2) Hebrew priest and scribe at the head of a large party of Jewish exiles who returned from Babylon to Jerusalem. Regarded as a personification of divine essence, light.

EZZELIN (EZZELINO DA ROMANO) Holder of extensive dominions in 13th century north-eastern Italy. A notoriously cruel tyrant, he was called fiery brand and son of Satan. He appears in Dante's Inferno.

F

F Sixth rate; sixth in a group or order. Among gnostics symbolizes fire or life; Father (God), the sun. Also domestic felicity and the law of protection. Occult significance: dominates the heart; its period is for six years. Character traits: artistic, calmness, excitement producing ill effects upon the heart. Numerical value, six. Physical weak spots, ears and heart. Planetary or zodiacal correspondence, Taurus or Virgo. Symbolic correspondence, trial. Tarot correspondence, Lover. Among Hebrew cabalists, character traits: ambition, love of art and science, success in love, wise. In low form, covetousness, trying to obtain fortune by illicit means. Musical tone corresponding to earth or nature. In music fourth tone in scale of C major; sixth tone in scale of A minor. Final tone of Lydian mode in Greek scale. In Roman notation, forty. Parallels first letter of the Anglo-Saxon runic futhorc, Arabic fa, Egyptian hieroglyph asp (cerastes), Greek phi, Hebrew vau (hook, nail, or peg), Irish fearn (alder tree). Interchangeable with p, ph, and v (as apple = aval; April = Avril). See Alphabet Affiliations, Domincal letter.

Three F's. In the late 19th century, the demands of the Irish Land League, i.e. Fair rent, Fixed tenure, Free sale.

FA Word root signifying fire and life. Root of fair, fate, father, fay, fete, Fo, Fudo, Jove, Jahve, Siva, Typho.

FABIAN Delaying, stalling tactics, alluding to the policy of Quintus Fabius Maximus Verrucosus, who won a decisive victory over Hannibal by canny delays rather than violence.

FABLE A short tale related to teach a moral, frequently the characters are animals or inanimate objects. To invent a story, but present it as if it were true; thus a falsehood, idle talk, or an old wives' tale. Personified by a young woman surrounded by the crow, fox, lion, mouse, and stork, which appear in Aesop's Fables.

Fabliaux. Mirthful, obscene stories of the middle ages; the literature of the common people. Usually adultery and sexual intrigue was the theme, the clergy and women being the targets of satirical attacks. They were inherited from the literature of the Orient, especially India and Persia, and were transmitted orally from age to age. A number of present-day smoking room and vaudeville stories are descendants.

FABRICIUS Roman consul famous for his incorruptibility. Died about 270 B.C. The personification of honesty, he lived frugally on his farm, refused rich presents offered to him by the Samnite ambassadors, and, at his death, left no portion for his daughters.

FABULINUS Roman god who presided over the speech of young children. See Baby.

FACADE Emblem of architecture.

FACE (HUMAN) Deity image, director, guide, intelligence, presence, protector, and for this reason carved fore on a boat. Dream significance: (beautiful) pleasant visit; (cheerful) happiness, long life; (sad) idleness, worry; (ugly) premature death. According to the mystics, the face and head are anatomical denominations governed by Aries. Among American Indians rounded faces represent male deities, rectangular faces represent female deities. In Christian tradition, typifies trinity or three essential modes of the same being. Compounded of two eyes, exteriorly Divine duality, interiorly Divine unity (vision is one); a nose, exteriorly Divine duality, interiorly unity; a mouth, exteriorly Divine duality, interiorly unity. Face and presence express the same word in Hebrew and are often used for the person himself. Among ancient Hebrews, a symbol of presence and power. The light of God's face or countenance was a token of His favor.

In the Hindu Thandava and Lasya dances the coloration of the face is of four kinds: 1- Svabhavika, natural. Depicts natural condition. 2- Prasanna, gladdening. Depicts amorousness, merriment, wonder. 3- Rakta, reddening. Depicts grief, rage, valor. 4- Syama, withdrawing blood from the face. Depicts disgust, fear. The nine expressions used in the dances are: 1- Srngara (amorousness) or Rati (love) portrayed with side-long glance, slightly moving the eyebrows with a smile. 2- Veera (valor) or Utsaha (heroism); fully opened eyes, raised eyebrows and cheeks, the face red. 3- Karuna (compassion) or Shoka (grief); eyes drooping with effort, nose still, cheeks dragged down, neck bent slowly, face pale. 4- Hasya (contempt or indifference); one eyebrow raised, the eyeballs, drawn back, shrinking the nose and eyelids, face gladdened. 5- Adbhutha (wonder) or Ascharya (surprise); both eyebrows raised gracefully, looking gradually forward, eyelids stretched sideways, cheeks and neck slightly forward. 6- Bha-yanaka (fear) or Bhaya (fright); raising the eyebrows, one after another, then both; opening the eyes wide, shaking the eyeballs sideways, looking to the right and left, the nostrils widened, lips turned inwards, the face first pale, then red. 7- Beebatsa (disgust) or Apprakrita (insufferableness); drawing the eyeballs inward, the eyebrows downward, shrinking the nose, winking, bending lips down, neck downward, face natural color. 8- Roudra (wrath) or Krodha (anger); straight forward powerful look, eyes fully opened, eyebrows raised, nostrils dilated, lips trembling, jaws tightly set, face red. 9- Santa (serenity) or Samyamana (calmness) looking up through the eyebrows, lids half closed, head and neck in natural position.

Bearded face. Old age, wisdom.

Beardless face. Inexperience, youth.

Face downward. Conquered by shame, defeat.

Face in the moon. Deity of night, generally said to be the man in the moon. In the Bible the man placed in the moon as punishment for picking up a bundle of sticks on the Sabbath. In Egypt the face of Thoth. In Greek antiquity it was the terrifying apparition which scared away the impure from the moon, which was a deity abode. A fable probably devised to discourage suicide, which was unlawful. In Norse mythology the face of Mani.

Face, part lion, part goat. An aspect of Mon, Pan, Tum, and other fertility deities whose attributes are those of the sun (lion) and earth (goat).

Face upward. Divine contemplation.

Four faces. In Assyrian art the face of a man with that of a bull (or ox), eagle, and lion represents the deity as lord of the four cardinal points. An aspect of Asshur borrowed by Hebrews and Christians as the four sacred animals.

Long face. Dissatisfaction, sorrow.

Painted face. Charm against the evil eye and other malicious or subtle influences. Pawnee Indians painted the face to represent Tirawa. A blue line was drawn archlike from the cheeks over the brow with a straight line down the nose to symbolize the path by which life descends from above.

Red face. Anger.

Round face. Cheerfulness, contentment.

Serene face. Goodwill, justice.

FADING In an Italian icon personified by a woman in green, her garment embroidered with pearls and precious jewels. She wears a gold crown. In one hand she holds a torch with the motto, "Egrediens Ut Fulgur;" in the other a nosegay of roses, some of which fall to the ground faded and discolored.

FAERIE QUEENE, THE Gori-ana, heroine of the allegorical romance of chivalry by Edmund Spenser. She sometimes typifies Queen Elizabeth.

FAET FIADA In Irish mythology one of the three gifts of Manannan to the Tuatha De Dannan after their defeat at the hands of the Milesians. It provided the power to become invisible. The two other gifts were the pigs, whose hordes were inexhaustible, and the Feast of Goibniu (Feast of Age), at which an ale was served that kept those who drank it forever young.

FAFNIR (FAFNER) In Norse mythology son of Hreidmar, brother of Ottar and Regin. When his father became the possessor of the Andvare Treasures, he killed him as well as his brothers for them. To protect the wealth he transformed himself into a dragon which sprayed poisonous venom, i. e. became earth in winter cloak. Sigurd, the sun, roasted and ate his heart, and through tasting the blood gained the power to understand the language of birds, and rescued Brynhild, summer maid, guarded by Fafnir in her long sleep. Fafnir compares with Python, Tiamat, Vrtra.

Fafnir's death. Release of rain (his blood).

FAGAN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning small voice.

FAGOTS Anciently in India attached to the body of the dead to wipe out all tracks and to hinder a return to the living.

FAIGA Feminine name from the Anglo-Saxon, meaning beautiful.

FAILINIS In Irish legend hound-whelp of the king of Ioruidhe which catches every wild beast she sees. Demanded by Lugh as a blood-fine from the sons of Tuirenn for the murder of his father. As the hound-whelp of Lugh irresistible in battle and turned any water in which it bathed into wine. Brilliant lights of the sun.

FAINALL In Congreve's Way of the World a smooth deceptive hypocrite who attempts to seize his wife's property, fails, and incurs her hatred and contempt.

FAINEANT Literally, to do nothing. An idler, one who is lazy, useless, weakly inefficient; a term applied to the later Merovingian kings of France, who were called les Rois Fainéants. The term is applied to Richard Lionhearted in Scott's Ivanhoe in a scene in which Richard appears in disguise.

FAIR (1) Fete frequently held on a date corresponding with an ancient pagan fire festival. Word from Greek phare, meaning light-house; from Middle English feire and Old French feria, meaning holiday; yields fire or furry; hence a fire or furry festival. (2) A fair complexion and golden locks are attributes of beneficent hero gods, the bringers of light and sight, of knowledge and life. In fairytales the heroines, personifications of goodness, and the fairy godmothers invariably are blonde, blue-eyed and fair-skinned.

Day after the fair. Too late to do or see anything.

Fair maid of February. Snow drop.

Fair patricide. Beatrice Cenci. With her brothers, she plotted the death of her father, Francesco Cenci, a dissipated Roman, because of his unmitigated cruelty to his wife and children. She was executed in 1599.

FAIRY A supernatural being, usually of small and graceful human form with wings, but capable of assuming any shape. Fairies live in fantastic luxury and splendor in forests, lakes, and mounds, and delight in dancing and music. They marry and war among themselves; covet the children of men and steal them from their cradles, leaving children of their own brood in their places (see changelings); lay humans under spells, and otherwise interfere in the affairs of mankind. Most often they are benevolent, happy beings. The ash or quince fairy is called melia; the nut fairy, caryatid; the oak fairy, dryad, the willow fairy, heliconian, the fairy of the forest in general is called hamadryad. Other names by which they are known: afreet, ariel, banshee, bogey, brownie, bug, cauld lad, duende, duergar, elf, fata, fat, ferouer, genius, gnome, goblin, hobgoblin, jinn, kilpie, kobold, leprechaun, lutin, mab, mermaid, merman, monaciello, naiad, nicker, nixie, nymph, oberon, oread, peri, pigwigen, pixie, puck, robin good-fellow, shee, sidh, sprite, strom-karl, sylph, troll, undine. In China called hsien (immortals).

Fairy arrow (or dart). Ancient arrow-head of flint or stone. Also called elf arrow.

Fairy godmother (or queen). Romance figure which corresponds to the mythological all-mother of the gods, the Bona Dea, the Magna Mater or Mother of All Wis- dom. In the various Cinderella stories she is described as an aged woman, a beautiful queen with a star upon her brow, a cow with golden horns (Hathor image); as Labismina, a sea-serpent; a mermaid in a pearl grotto, a water nymph. Her relationship to Cinderella is always comparable to that of the famous mother-daughter relationships of mythology, such as that of Demeter-Persephone.

Fairy loaves (or stones). Fossil sea-urchins, supposedly made by fairies.

Fairy money. Found money. Supposedly placed by a good fairy where it is discovered, but it is apt to be transformed into leaves.

Fairy of the mine. A malevolent gnome or goblin which is said to live in mines. It busies itself with cutting ore, turning the windlass, but effecting nothing.

Fairy rings. A small circle of grass greener than the surrounding turf, caused by underground fungus, but said to be caused by fairies dancing.

Fairy sparks. The phosphoric light from decaying fish, wood, and other substances, one time was thought to be lights prepared for the fairies at their revels.

Fairy stone. Good luck talisman which brings good luck to owner unless touched by someone else, in which case the stone is bereft of its powers.

FAITH (1) A creed; any organized system of belief, political or religious. In Christian theology assent to the doctrines as revealed in the Scriptures, especially trust in God. Symbolized by an anchor, chalice, cross, clive, prayer, shield, upper step of Calvary Cross. (2) Feminine name, special use of abstract noun.

Faithful. In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress a companion of Christian as he walks to Celestial City. Both are seized at Vanity Fair, where Faithful is burnt to death and is taken to heaven in a chariot of fire.

Faithful Shepherdess, The. Corin, heroine of the pastoral drama by John Fletcher. She remains faithful to her lover although he is dead.

Faith, hope, and charity. Christian virtues; used emblematically.

Faith Triumphant. One of the Gnostic Aeons. Symbolized by a coronal of flowers, gold, thorns. Personified by a figure kneeling at an altar; a young woman offering doves in sacrifice.

Father of the faithful. Abraham.

Punic Faith. Bad faith, perfidy, violation of trust, in allusion to the character the Romans attributed to the Carthaginians, who were of Punic descent. Also called Carthaginian Faith.

FAKIR Moslem ascetic who has taken vows of poverty and lives either in a monastery or as a wandering friar. Fakirs perform menial offices connected with burials, cleaning of mosques, etc.; often wonder workers. They are divided into two classes: 1) the ba shar (with the law), who conform to the teachings of Islam; 2) the be shar (without the law, who follow the conduct laid down by any creed, nominally Mohammedan). A Hindu yogi frequently is called a fakir. The word is used erroneously for faker, i. e. pickpocket, street vender, swindler.

FAKNIK Spirit of rocks-by-the-sea which raise storms in Papuan mythology.

FALASHA Literally, emigrant.

A Jew of Abyssinia; an exile.

FALCON Fire, immortality, modesty, storms, sun, wind. Bird of omen; fierce hunter. Bird which always returns to the one who releases it. In heraldry one eager or in hot pursuit of an object much desired. American Indian bird or messenger of the Supreme Deity. In Christianity a trained falcon typifies the convert or holy man; a wild falcon typifies the evil man. European animal governing Sagittarius. In Iranian mythology enemy of the serpent; it kills with its wings. Compare bird and serpent, winged serpent. In Japan called taka, signifies generosity, victory.

Falcon's plumage. High, swift flight. In Norse mythology attribute of Freyja and Frigg.

Five falcons. Pariacaca, Peruvian creator of all things, and his four brothers, the winds.

FALDSTOOL A portable folding seat or stand for worshipers at prayer; also used by bishops. The king of England uses a faldstool at his coronation. The word comes through the Latin from the Old High German faldstool (folding chair).

FALL Dream significance: anaemia, confusion, weak heart.

Fall between two stools. Fail in an attempt to accomplish two things at the same time.

Fallen angels. Angels who lusted after the daughters of men, who refused God's request to pay homage to man, or who for some other reason displeased God, and were banished from heaven. Among those so identified are: Azazel, Belial, Devil, Lucifer, Samael, Satan, Semjaza.

Fall of Man. The transformation of mankind from an original state of holiness to a state of sin, whereby man became liable to physical and spiritual death, a consequence of eating the forbidden fruit. Also called The Fall. Symbolized by an apple; apple and serpent; Eve holding an apple; group of Adam, Eve, and Satan in the form of a serpent; the Tree of Knowledge.

FALSE (OR SUBSTITUTE) BRIDE

A folktale motif in which a beautiful bride-to-be is ousted by an ugly or treacherous imposter who foists herself on an unsuspecting husband. The betrayed girl usually is thrown into a lake or river, placed in a menial position, or otherwise mistreated. Eventually she is saved by some divinity. The substitution is eventually revealed and the treacherous imposter expelled or killed. The Cinderella story has elements of this motif. The false bride typifies darkness, frost or winter, who has usurped the place of the fertile summer-maid.

False lapis. Jealousy.

FALSTAFF, SIR JOHN A jovial character in several of Shakespeare's plays. In Henry IV, he is a soldier, wit, and boon companion of Madcap Harry, Prince of Wales. He is boastful, fat, mendacious, sensual, and fond of practical jokes. The boastful Falstaff is noted for his cowardice in danger.

FAL STONE Irish stone of destiny. It supposedly had the magic property of uttering a human cry when touched by the rightful king of Erin. It originally belonged to the Tuatha De Danann, and afterwards fell into the hands of the early kings of Ireland. Sometimes identified with the Stone of Scone. Also called Tara Stone.

FAME Personified by a winged woman or youth blowing a horn or trumpet, mounted on a sphere or on a winged horse, and wearing a wreath of laurel and carrying bays, laurel or palms. In an Italian icon a naked Mercury with a cloth thrown over his arm, his rod in his right hand. With his left hand he holds a winged horse, which is posed to fly away.

FAMILIAR The spirit attending a witch or wizard; they supposedly were continually within call and at the service of their masters. A term applied to a domestic or member of the household of a prelate or to a small animal which is at its master's beck and call. Officers of the Inquisition whose chief duty was the arresting and imprisonment of those accused were called familiars.

FAMINE In most religions attributed to the displeasure of a deity, frequently as punishment to chastise the rebellious with want. Symbolized by claws, fangs, limose, meager hag with bat's wings and streaming hair, a wolf. In Japan, symbolized by a comet.

FAN Coquetry, disperser of evil spirits, power, purification, sovereignty, summer. Emblem of royalty because it radiates the sunbeams of the rising or setting sun. Dream significance: fertility, gaiety. In China called shan, reviver of the souls of the dead. Emblem of Chun Li Ch'uan, one of the Eight Immortals. Ancient Egyptian insignia of the great and powerful. In Greek antiquity instrument with which Demeter winnowed her corn, thus fertility. The Israelites used a fan to throw the grain to the wind that the chaff might be blown away, thus symbolic of the separation between the righteous and the wicked. Among Kei Islanders women wave fans while their men are at war as a charm to direct the bullets of enemies away from their mark.

Fan attached to a long stem and carried in the hand. In Japan signifies madness peculiar to women.

Half opened fan. Life unfolding.

Long-handled fan. Emblem of Hsi Wang Mu, Chinese goddess and royal mother of the West.

FA-NA-P* O-SSU One of the eighteen Chinese lohan. He is portrayed with closed eyes, hands folded over his knees in deep meditation, sitting inside a cave. Also called Vanavasa.

FAND In Irish mythology consort of Manannan, sister of Labraid and Liban. She leaves her husband, and Labraid, in need of the help of Cuchulainn to defeat supernatural foes, promises Fand as a mistress to the sun hero in return for his aid. Cuchulainn sends his charioteer Loeg to Mag Mell, the land of everlasting life, to look over the situation and, when Loeg reports on the wonders of the land, Cuchulainn goes to Labraid's aid. When Cuchulainn returns to Ireland, the land of mortals, Fand follows him, but meeting his wife Emer, she consents to leave him and returns to her husband Manannan, the sea-god, who shakes his mantle so that Fand and Cuchulainn may never meet again. As Fand won Cuchulainn by enchantments, she typifies an enchantress. The incident of Fand following Cuchulainn to Ireland is an example of a goddess desiring the love of a mortal. See divine-mortal marriages.

FANFARON A bully, a coward who blows his own horn, a swaggering boastful fellow.

Fanfaronade. Boastful or bullying behavior, ostentatious display, a blustering, ranting, vain-glorious speech. Scott and Swift use the expression.

FANG (1) Death. (2) In the Chinese zodiac, the Room. Four stars, Beta, Delta, Pi, Nun, almost in a straight line, in the head of Scorpio in the eastern quadrant. Typifies spring season; represented by the hare; element, sun. An unlucky season. (3) The name of a bullying, insolent magistrate in Dickens' Oliver Twist.

FANG-MING In Chinese tradition brilliant cube which serves as an emblem in sacrifices. See six jade objects.

FAN LI A Chinese Immortal renowned for his cunning and aptitude for intrigue; a Chinese Machiavelli.

FANTINE A class of well-disposed fairies in Swiss folklore.

FARAGUVAOL Taino Indian tree-trunk with the power of wandering. A zemi (charm).

FARBAUTI Norse giant. Name signifies ship-beater or destroyer, i. e. sea wind. In a 13th century poem identified as the peasant husband of Laufey and father of Lopter.

FARIDUN Another name of Thraetaona, which see.

FARINATA (MANENTE DEGLI UBERTI) Famous heretic; a brave, haughty, valiant, and wise leader. Chief of the Florentine Ghibelline, he was driven from Florence by the Guelphs; when, ten years later, his faction defeated the Guelphs, he voted against the destruction of Florence and thus saved the city. Nearly twenty years after his death he was condemned a heretic; his bones were cast out of their tomb; his property was confiscated and sold. Dante, in the Inferno, represents him as lying in an open fiery tomb that will not be closed until judgment day.

FASCES In ancient Rome carried by lictor who attended the chief magistrates as a symbol of authority. From fasces comes Fascism.

FASCINUS Roman fertility god whose chief symbol was a phallus.

FASHENA-FUTO In Chinese Buddhism one of the eighteen lohans. Portrayed as lean and hairy. In Sanscrit called Vajraputra.

FASOLT In the first of the four operas composing Wagner's Ring Des Nibelungen, one of the two chief giants opposed to the gods.

FASTING Affliction, atonement, self-mortification, sorrow. One method of making direct contact with the supernatural is by means of the hallucinations and visions which prolonged fasting induces. As a funerary rite, expresses fear for a loved one entering the world of no return. The mourner divests himself of something in sorrow over the loss. See shoe-removal, self-mutilation. Dream significance: unfounded fears. In an Italian icon personified, by a pale meager man in an antique white robe. He is muzzled his eyes are lifted to heaven. In his right hand he holds a fish and a scroll on which is written, "Pauco Vescor." He carries a hare under his left arm and he treads on a crocodile. The Creek and Seminole Indians take a purgative before swallowing new corn. The intention is to prevent the sacred food from being polluted by contact with common food in the stomach. For the identical reason Catholics partake of the Eucharist fast. In Europe of the middle ages fasting was a means of warding off threatened evil or of seeking the favor or forgiveness of God. It was symbolic of sanctity. In Fiji practiced until a vow of vengeance is fulfilled. Among the Guaranis Indians of Brazil and Paraguay at the first signs of puberty, a girl was required to observe a most rigorous fast for two or three days, to drive out the demon which had wounded her. The annual fast of the Jews is one of atonement. See Black Fast.

FASTNACHT (FASENACHT) In Germanic countries a festival immediately preceding Lent. Literally Fast Eve or Lenten Eve. Term probably derived from fasen, faseln (to talk nonsense). Fastnacht plays substantiate the idea of nonsense. Although tempered by the Christian church the plays developed out of the burlesque songs and antics of masqueraders who followed the Teutonic ship-wagon processions. In Austria and Bavaria called Fasching. Analogous to the carnival of Mediterranean countries.

Fastnachtsbar. In Germanic countries the Fastnacht or Shrovetide Bear. A man or boy clothed in straw and bound with ropes or clothed in a bearskin and led from house to house on Fastnacht or Shrove Tuesday. He dances with the girls and women of the household and is given drink, food, and money, which is later spent for ale and merry-making. According to a Central European belief one must dance on Shrove Tuesday (Fastnacht) to insure fertility and growth of all crops.

FAT (1) Plenty, riches. In antiquity the fat portions of animals offered in sacrifice were considered as being the choicest part and especially sacred to the Lord. (2) In Chinese mythology the flasher. Son of Ch'ang, brother Tan (or Dan), the dawn.

Fatting house. House in which girls are segregated during puberty by Central African tribes, which identify feminine beauty with obesity. In these houses, girls are sometimes kept for years, fed sweet and fatty foods, and taught their future duties.

FATA Literally, fairy. Female spirit or supernatural being appearing in Italian medieval romances. She usually serves Demogorgon, an evil spirit or devil.

Fata Alcina. In Boiardo's Orlando Innamorato, sister of Fata Morgana. An enchantress, she carries Astolpho to her isle on the back of a whale, and when she tires of him she turns him into a myrtle tree.

Fata Morgana. (1) In medieval romances of Italian origin a fairy or supernatural being borrowed from Morgan le Fay of Brythonic legend. In Boiardo's Orlando Innamorato she appears as a personification of fortune living at the bottom of a lake. Morgana is akin to morgen, which means morning or sea-born. (2) A mirage, especially one seen at the Strait of Messina between Calabria and Sicily. So called because it is believed to be the work of the fairy Fata Morgana. (3) Figuratively a fantastic image, a paradise.

FATAL CHILD A motif worldwide in mythology and folk literature. He is the sun and his mother, the dawn, cannot survive his birth. The father or grandfather is warned by prophecy that the infant will cause his death and exposes the child to the elements on a mountain, sets him adrift at sea, instructs a servant to have the child slain, or otherwise attempts to have the child destroyed. The fatal child is miraculously saved, discovered by the radiant glow which surrounds him, and fed by a beast or bird or raised by a peasant or shepherd. He grows into a youth with heroic qualities and returns to fulfill the prophecy, frequently accidentally, and to be crowned king. Thus he is the morning sun that destroys the night or he is the New Year or Spring that destroys the Old Year or Winter. Usually a scar reveals his true identity and he is honored as the rightful king until the time comes for him to be replaced. Examples of fatal children are: Asclepius, Cyrus, Deirdre, Lugh, MacDuff, Moses, Oedipus, Perseus, Romulus, Sigurd, Theseus, Vikramaditya. Compare Cista, Abandoned Children.

Fatal gifts. Gifts sent by enemies as though they were sent by friends. Among such gifts were the legendary poisonous rings of the Borgias; the wedding robe Medea sent her rival Creusa; the poisoned shirt Nessus the Centaur gave to Delanira for Hercules; the shirt which Vulcan dyed in crimes and gave to Venus to punish her for her infidelities. The gifts typify some fierce aspect of nature, such as the scorching rays of the sun. Some do not kill immediately but bring their owners to a bad end, as the collar of Arsinoe and the necklace of Harmonia, which represent fertility which dies with the winter season. Others are fatal only if sold, as the emerald from the forehead of Buddha, a favorite theme in pulp stories.

Fatal treasures. See under treasure.

Fatal weakness. Fertility kings, especially sun heroes, are afflicted with a vulnerability; thus one season succumbs to another, light succumbs to darkness.

FATES In Greek and Roman mythology the three sisters who controlled the destiny of mortals. In Greek mythology called Moirai. Their power was stronger than that of any deity; even Zeus was unable to overpower them, and they arbitrarily controlled the birth, life, and death of every man. They were called cruel because they did not regard the wishes of anyone. Their names were Clotho, Lachesis, Atropos. Originally the three were worshiped as aspects of the new, full, and old moon, Atropos being the senior member of the triad. Fate is from the Latin fatum, meaning a thing spoken. In Rome they also were called Parcae. The Norse Norns (Urth, the past; Verthandi, the present; and Skuld, the future) correspond to them.

FATHER Divine spirit, first, founder, wisdom. In primitive life a term of respect to elders. In father cults the male god is the chief deity; the goddess is recognized but subordinate. In mother cults the worship is reversed. In Egypt father and mother cults merged. In Christianity Father is the first person of the Trinity. In Hebrew tradition God, Jehovah, is sometimes called Father. See Sefira. In Vedic tradition the kindly dead who reside in the sky are called fathers.

Church Fathers. The great bishops, teachers and writers of the early Christian church: 1-apostolic fathers, contemporaries of the apostles: Barnabas, Clement of Rome, Hermas, Ignatius, and Polycarp; 2- primitive fathers who lived in the first three centuries of the Christian era: Clement of Alexandria, Cyprian of Carthage, Dionysius of Alexandria, Gregory Thaumaturgus, Irenaeus, Justin, Origen, Tertullian, Theiophilus of Antioch.

Father Christmas. Santa Claus. Character in a Mumming Play.

Father Knickerbocker. Personification of New York.

Fatherly. Name of a gnostic Aeon.

Father of lies. Herodotus, whose historical accounts were largely imaginary; Satan.

Father-son. Phases of the one; regeneration. Also conflict. The Egyptian pharaoh was worshiped as an incarnation of the ruling deity; he was the ka of the god, and when he died, the ka or spirit passed to his successor. Thus the son became the father and, in the theological sense, husband of the mother. The Greek legend of Oedipus suggests a similar theory. Examples of conflict are: Cronus-Zeus, Dyaus-Indra, Horus the Elder-Horus the Younger, Jehovah-Lucifer, Saturn-Jupiter.

Father Time. Time personified; usually depicted as an old man with a scythe or reaping hook. Also known as Father Truth, as time brings hidden things to light.

Greek Church Fathers. Athanasius, Basil the Great, Chrysostom, Cyril of Alexandria, Cyril of Jerusalem, Ephraim of Edessa, Epiphanius, Eusebius, Gregory Nazianzenus, Gregory of Nyssa.

Latin Church Fathers. Ambrose, Anselm, Augustine, Bede, Bernard, Caesarius of Arles, Clement of Rome, Cyprian, Gregory the Great, Hilary of Poitiers, Ignatius, Irenaeus, Isidore of Seville, Jerome, Justin, Leo the Great, Optatus, Origen, Peter Chrysologus, Peter Damian, Prosper, Tertullian, Vincent of Lerins.

FATIMA (1) In the Arabian Nights a female hermit slain by a necromancer, who then donned the clothes of the holy enchantress to insinuate himself into Aladdin's household. (2) In the story of Bluebeard, a wife saved from death. Bluebeard's seventh and last wife. Her curiosity led to the discovery of his crimes, and she was saved from the fate of her predecessors, all of whom had been murdered, by the arrival of her brothers. Personification of the moon. See Bluebeard. (3) Daughter of Mohammed and one of the four perfect Moslem women, the other three being Asia, Khadijah, and Mary. Traditionally she is virginal, one of her titles being bright-blooming or one who never menstruated. She was the wife of Ali to whom she bore three sons. Her grave is unknown, hidden in mystery.

FATTING HOUSE Among the African Efik people, hut where a girl is kept for several weeks previous to her marriage and given plenty of food.

FAUNTLEROY A beautiful but effeminate boy, alluding to the hero of a once popular story by Frances Hodgson Burnett.

FAUNUS In Roman mythology, grandson of Saturn; son of Picus, brother-husband of Fauna; father of Acis and Latinus, suitor of Galatea; ancestor of the fauns. A rural and woodland deity; patron of herding, hunting, and husbandry. Worshiped in groves, where his oracles were heard by a visitant while asleep on a sacred fleece. He revealed nature's secrets to men only. He was the inventor of poetry. Sometimes he was mischievous and sent Incubo (nightmare). As a god of shepherds, he entertained Evander on his arrival in Latium. His priests were the Luperci; his main festival the Lupercalia. Two festivals called Faunalia were celebrated on February 13 and December 5. He was identified with Sylvanus and the Greek Pan. Sometimes conceived to be a plurality, the fauni or fauns, analogous to the Greek panes, satyrs, and sileni in their relations with Pan. In later times included in the list of Laurentum kings. Faunus means to favor. He was also called Inuus (fertilizer) and Lupercus (one who wards off wolves).

Faun. A descendant of Faunus. The fauns were Roman woodland divinities corresponding to Greek satyrs, except they were youthful. They had goat's feet, a human face with furry pointed ears, horns, and tails, all characteristics of Faunus greatly exaggerated. They wore coronals of fir twigs and carried shepherds' pipes.

Fauna. Daughter of Picus; sister-wife of Faunus. Nature goddess who provided the fertility of the land and fruitfulness. Like Damia, she was worshiped exclusively by women. Identified with Bona Dea and Cybele.

FAUST (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning fortunate. In feminine form Faustina. (2) The hero of various literary works based on legends which grew out of the life of Dr. Johann Faust (or Faustus), a 16th century German charlatan. He became the model for one, "who sought to sound the depths of this world's knowledge and enjoyment without the help of God." As a student of the black arts who made a compact with the devil, he first appeared in 1587 in a book by Johann Spies. In Marlow he sells his soul to the Devil in exchange for earthly glory and sensual pleasure. In Goethe's drama Mephistopheles boasts he can lower man to the level of the brute; God replies that man's better nature will eventually prevail and conquer all temptation. Faust, an elderly scholar, is chosen for the experiment. The action of the drama closes with the lesson that neither learning, lust, nor pleasure can satisfy the heart of man, whose happiness consists in leading a useful life. Faust thus typifies sinful humanity, easily tempted, but finally emerging with a desire to serve mankind. The action of the drama is a combination of individualism and socialism; Faust loses the wager with Mephistopheles and is finally no more than man. Compare Festus.

Faustianism. Conflict as the essence of existence with a longing for the infinite. Man as a force endlessly combatting obstacles; never satisfied.

FAUSTULUS Roman shepherd whose wife Acca Larentia found the deserted twins Romulus and Remus, and in whose house they were raised. Probably agricultural deities.

FAVONIUS Roman personification of the gentle west wind. He is a promoter of vegetation and parallels Zephyr.

FAWN Gentleness, grace, timidity. As a verb used to show affection by cringing before or licking the hand of another, as a fawn. To seek favor by subserviency, to curry, flatter, pander. Seneca Indian south wind spirit; called Ne-a-go. See Ga-oh.

FAY (FEE, FEY) (1) A supernatural being capable of bestowing good or bad luck, especially on the newly born. A deity of fate, an elf, a fairy. From the root fa or fi, meaning fire, life, and related to the Latin fata. (2) Feminine name; special use of the common noun.

FAYETTE Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning little raven.

FEA Gaelic war goddess. The hateful. See Morrighu.

FEAR Personified by Phobos. Typified by a man displaying terror and holding scales of Justice.

FEAST A banquet of more or less public nature; an elaborate and abundant repast, especially one commemorating some event or person. An anniversary, a day or season commemorating an event or person, a religious festival. Figuratively, anything affording enjoyment to the body or spirit. Compare festival. A Christain double-feast is a church festival in which a double antiphon is used; an immovable feast occurs on the same date each year; a movable feast is one which depends on Easter for its date. The chief immovable feasts are the quarter days: Annunciation or Lady Day, March 25, the Nativity of John the Baptist, June 24, Michaelmas Day, September 29, Christmas Day, December 25. Others are: Circumcision, January 1, Epiphany, January 6, All Saints', November 1, All Souls', November 2, and the Apostles' days. Movable feasts depending on Easter are: Ascension Day, Ash Wednesday, Good Friday, Holy Thursday, Palm Sunday, Pentecost or Whit Sunday, Sexagesima Sunday, Trinity Sun-

In Hebrew tradition God appointed several feast days or days of rest and worship to perpetuate the memory of great events. Sabbath commemorated the creation of the world; Passover, the departure out of Egypt; Pentecost, the law given at Sinai, etc. At the three great feasts of the year, Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles, all males of the nation were required to visit the temple, and to protect their borders from invasion during their absence, the shield of a special providence was always interposed. Yom Kippur, a Jewish holy day, is observed by fasting not by feasting. Ancient Jews observed a Sabbatical Year, in which every seventh year the lands were allowed to remain at rest without culture. This was to preserve the remembrance of creation of the world and to inculcate humanity on the Jews, who resigned to the poor, to servants, to strangers, and to brutes, the produce of their fields and vineyards. They also observed a year of Jubilee every fiftieth year. Its name, meaning flowing or sounding, was significant of the joyful trumpet-peals that announced its arrivals. During this period no one sowed or reaped; all were satisfied with what the earth and trees produced spontaneously.

The observance of sacred festivals was adapted not merely to reawaken memories of their early history as a nation, but to keep alive the influence of religion, the expectation of the Messiah, to deepen their joy in God, to dispel animosities and jealousies, and to form new associations between different families and tribes. The Hebrews were noted as a people who welcomed their guests with a feast and dismissed them with another. Joyful domestic events were observed by feasting, such as birthdays, harvesting, marriages, sheep-shearing. A feast was provided at funerals. Those who brought offerings and sacrifices to the temple feasted upon them with joy and praise to God. Special feasts were made for the poor. Anciently the feasts were marked by simplicity; when Roman customs were introduced the feasts became elaborate. A governor of the feast was appointed; guests were washed and perfumed; dancing, music, story-telling, and other entertainment were provided. In the Zohar feast is a parabolic expression for death.

Feast day. Loosely in Christian tradition any day not a fast day, specifically any festive day, especially Sundays, on each of which the resurrection of Christ is honored.

Feast of Alcinoüs. A lavish entertainment, in allusion to the extravagant banquet given by Alcinoüs, king of the Phaeacians, to Odysseus.

Feast of All Souls. Christian festival celebrated on November 2; corresponds to ancient pagan festival for the dead, Feast of Souls.

Feast of Anna Perenna. In Roman antiquity, March 15, celebrated as the day on which the fertility goddess Anna Perenna, an old woman disguised as the maiden Nerio, married the god Mars. Her disguise was that of spring raiment.

Feast of Asses. Medieval festival celebrated on Christmas Day. Similar to Feast of Fools, which see.

Feast of Booths. See Feast of Tabernacles.

Feast of Cups (Choes). Central phase of the Greek spring festival Anthesteria, in which the wife of the king archon was symbolically married to Dionysus. A fertility rite.

Feast of Dedication (Chanuca).

A Hebrew festival celebrated at the winter solstice. It commemorates the cleansing and rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem by the Maccabees after the pollution of the altar by the Syrians under Antiochus Epiphanes. Also called Dedication of Lights.

Feast of eggs. In Christian tradition day before Quinquagesima Sunday.

Feast of Fools. In Middle Ages a burlesque festival usually held on the Feast of Circumcision, January 1. It probably perpetuated the pagan Saturnalia and was characterized by scandalous burlesque services in the church. A reversal of normal procedures was enacted. The priests held sway as choirboys held sway on Innocents' Day. An archbishop and a bishop were ordained in mock ceremonies. Dressed in women's clothes and masked, they danced and sang obscene songs, played dice at the altar, recited bawdy verses in the street. A prominent feature was the mummery and the High Mass conducted by the lower clergy under a leader elected for the occasion with a burlesque title. Identified with the Feast of Asses held on Christmas Day, in which the procession imitated braying, especially in place of "Amen;" its chief purpose was to honor the ass on which Christ rode into Jerusalem. In the original pagan rites, the sacred king was killed as a sacrifice for fertility. The Feast of Fools has been abandoned since the Reformation.

Feast of Goibniu. The Feast of Age, ancient Irish festival, at which an ale was served that kept those who drank it forever young. See Faet fiada.

Feast of Huli. Eastern festival corresponding to All Fools Day in the West. A fertility rite.

Feast of Ingathering. See Feast of Tabernacles.

Feast of Lanterns. In China and Japan celebrated the 15th of the first month with the appearance of the first full moon of the year. Lanterns are strung outside buildings and fireworks are set off. It officially ends the New Year celebration and is concluded with the parade of dragons.

Feast of Lots (Purim). Jewish festival instituted by Esther and Mordecai in memory of the providential deliverance of the Jews in Persia from the malignant designs of Haman. The lot was cast in the presence of Haman for every day from the first month to the twelfth before an auspicious day was found for destroying the Jews, and the superstition of Haman was made the means of turning his devices against him.

Feast of New Moon (Rosh Chodesh). Minor Jewish festival celebrating the new moon each month.

Feast of Passover (Pesach). Jewish Festival celebrating the coming forth out of Egypt. According to tradition, the night before the departure of the Jews, the destroying angel slew the first born of the Egyptians but passed over the houses of the Israelites without entering them. Also Feast of Unleavened Bread.

Feast of Pentecost (Shabuoth). Originally a Jewish harvest festival; later celebrated the gift of the Law to Moses on Mount Sinai.

Feast of Pots. At the ancient Greek spring festival of Anthesteria the offering of cooked grain in pots to Hermes as god of the underworld.

Feast of Roses. 1) A French rural festival. 2) A Persian festival honoring roses in full bloom.

Feast of Souls. An Aryan celebration held in November to honor the dead. It characterized the commencement of the winter season and constituted a prayer for fertility. Corresponds to Christian Feast of All Souls.

Feast of Tabernacles (Succoth). Hebrew autumnal festival commemorating the dwelling in tents in the wilderness. The people dwelt in booths, and it was celebrated with thanksgiving at the close of the harvest. Probably originally a harvest festival celebrated with dancing and orgiastic rites in honor of Baal-Birith and Yahweh. May have been derived from a feast of Adonis. In later ceremonies four plants were carried: etrog to represent the human heart, myrtle the eye, palm the spine, willow the mouth. Wine was poured on the morning sacrifice in memory of the abundant supply of water God afforded during desert wanderings and perhaps with reference to purification from sin. Also called Feast of Booths and Feast of Ingathering.

Feast of Trumpets (Rosh Hashana). Hebrew New Year festival.

Feast of Yams. In Africa the king of the Onitsha once a year dances before his people outside the mud wall of his palace. In the dance he carries a great weight, generally a sack of earth on his back to prove that he is able to support the burden and cares of state. Were he unable to discharge this duty, he would immediately be deposed and perhaps stoned to death.

Skeleton at the feast. Anything that dampens or kills joy, alluding to the practice of ancient Egyptians who, as a reminder of death, displayed a skeleton at banquets.

FEATHER Godliness, kingship. Adornment, aspiration, authority, charity, divination, flight, honor, justice, knowledge, literature, magic, nobility, ostentation, rank, speed, wealth. Manifestation of life substance; purifier of sin (death). Minute, accurate weight. Ray of light. Dream significance: frivolity, worry. Feather is from the same root as father and water (water). Sanscrit for feather is patra, cognate with the Latin pater (father). American Indians used feathers in imitative magic. Typified the ghost or spirit. In Egypt symbolized death, integrity, righteousness, truth. Worn as a good luck talisman. A deity badge. Most Egyptian gods wore two, probably symbolic of the twin powers, goodness and knowledge. The attributes and moods of the deity are revealed by the colors.

Downy feather. Sleep, soft light clouds. Pawnee Indian symbol of breath of life.

Eagle feather. Solar emblem. American Indian badge of glory; war honor, the eagle being the highest of bird messengers. See Hako. Among Indians of southwestern United States attached to prayer sticks used to address celestial powers.

Feather dress. Usually typifies a cloud; sometimes a breeze.

Goose feather. Literature, writing.

Feather in cap. Achievement which justifies pride. From the practice of American Indians and others of inserting in the head-dress a feather for every enemy slain or for other exploits.

Feather one's nest. Acquire plenty of money, alluding to the habit of birds that line their nests for warmth.

Feathered serpent. Opposing forces. Heaven and earth; rain and drought. American Indian symbol of the creator, dominator, fertilizer. See bird-serpent.

Feathered serpent with horns. Opposing forces in conflict.

Feather tied to an ear of corn. Pawnee Indian symbol of the creator spirit Tirawa. Its movement in the slightest current of air typifies the breath of life.

Ostrich feather. Distinction, justice. Heraldic symbol of serenity, willing obedience. In Egypt emblem of Maat, goddess of Truth. In England device of the Prince of Wales.

Peacock feather. Buddhist ritual object; used for sprinkling. See mayurapiccha.

Pigeon feather. In ancient Britain symbolized immortality. A belief prevailed that those who slept on pigeon feathers would not die.

Red feather. When notched, an American Indian symbol indicating that an enemy had been killed and scalped. A feather with a round red mark signified an enemy simply had been killed.

Three feathers. Good thought, good word, good deed. Three rays of light. In England device of the Prince of Wales. Three white feathers are given to a probationer as a badge indicating completion of nursing training. Derived from the emblem of Three Feathers Tavern, where a committee of philanthropic men met to discuss establishing a London hospital.

Two feathers. Air and light, goodness and knowledge, spiritual and materialistic life.

Upright feather. Among American Indians signified coupe accomplished in battle and wearer unhurt; if worn backwards, wearer wounded in battle.

White feather. Billowy foam of a stormy sea. Cowardice, alluding to the fact that a white feather in a gamecock's tail is the mark of an impure strain. Among Muskogean Creek Indians breath of life. Among Pawnee an emblem of Tirawa typifying fleecy clouds in the upper heavens. See Three feathers above.

FEBRIS Roman god of malarial fever. Father of Dea Tertiana (third day chills) and of Dea Quartana (fourth day chills).

FEBRUARY In ancient zodiacs the sun entered Pisces, the last month of the year, on a date corresponding approximately to February 19 of modern calendars. Name derived from the Latin verb februs, to make libations. A period or state of coldness. Its birthstone is the amethyst, its color violet-red, its zodiac sign Pisces, the Fishes. In China its emblems are the peach blossom and the boar. In the Occident generally personified by a man warming himself before an indoor fire, and symbolized by the eagle and primrose.

Februation. Roman rite of ceremonial purification, observed on February 15 at the Lupercalia.

Februsus. Properly a surname of Lupercus. Lustrations were performed in his honor at the Lupercalia on February 15.

FECES In Japan signifies earth producer, food producer, life force. Among North American Indians the excrement of the trickster hero frequently advises him or warns him of impending danger. At False Face or Shuck dances of the Eastern Woodland Indians performers smeared the excrement of animals or humans over their hands and then stroked onlookers whom they wished to protect from disease. Also used for humorous purposes.

FECUNDITY Symbolized by the pomegranate.

FEDELM In Celtic mythology prophetess daughter of Conchobar. She prophesied that Medb would meet disaster in her war against Ulster because of Cuchulainn.

FEE Woodland spirit. A fay, which see.

FE'E Polynesian octopus which gave birth to rocks and islands. In Samoa god of war. When he looks landward, he brings defeat; when he looks seaward, he brings victory.

FEEET See foot.

Feet of a boar. Vishnu, under the name Kesava, is invoked in boar form. His feet are called the Vedas. Compare hair, head, mouth, teeth, tongue, tusks of a boar.

Feet of a human. Pathmakers, wanton desire. If bare, poverty; if winged, flight. Anatomical denomination governed by Pisces. According to the mystics: if big, solidity; flat, a despicable person; hairless, a weak person; hard, a closed intellect; long, fertility; if normally hairy, perfect balance; overly hairy, debauchery; small, aristocracy; soft, lightness; if with thick ankles, a peasant. In Christian tradition signifies Saint John the Baptist and the apostles. In Hebrew tradition symbolizes conclusion, possession, treading, tyranny; also disciples, followers, servants. Naked feet were a sign of mourning and respect. Moses put off his shoes to approach the burning bush. In Rome whitened feet were the mark of an imported slave.

FEI-CH'ANG-FANG Famous Chinese magician. See Kite-flying Festival.

FEINI First settlers of Ireland; descendants of Anu.

FELDSPAR Benevolence.

FELICIA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning happy.

FELICITAS Roman goddess of positive good fortune. Compare Fortuna.

FELICITY In an Italian icon personified by a woman with a garland of flowers on her head, seated on a throne, holding a Mercury rod and a cornucopia filled with flowers and fruit.

FELINE GODDESSES In Egypt feline goddesses represented variable powers of the sun as reflected in nature. The goddesses were: Ament, Bast, Maau, Sekhet, Tefnut. In Norse mythology Freyja was a feline goddess.

FELIX (1) Masculine name from the Latin, meaning fortunate, happy, prosperous. (2) A Roman governor of Judea; originally a slave, he was manumitted, and became notorious for his cruelty and tyranny.

FEMALE Identified in mythology as the passive principle of nature; bearer of the egg of life. The duplicating, horizontal, negative principles. Symbolized by anything that is cavernous, circular, concave, curving, hollow, oval, round, or sinuous. Various symbols are: aegis, ankh, ark, barley, base of right-angled triangle, blue of sea, bowl, cat, cave, coin, concha, corn, cow, crescent, crevice in rocks, Crux Ansata, cup, delta (Greek letter), delta (river mouth), dish, doorway, dove, earth, egg, firestone, fish, frame, furrow, hand open, hole, holding thumb, horseshoe, labyrinth, lotus, moon, mound, myrtle leaf, pearl, pigeon, point within a circle, pomegranate, pyramid, right angle bisected by a line, sea shell, sheath of sword, shield, sparrow, square stone, target of arrow, thet, trench, umbrageous retreats, vase, water wavy line or m, well. Typified by the in (Japanese) vulva (Latin), yin (Chinese), yoni (Sanskrit). Personified by a mermaid, a Red Cross Nurse of heroic size and by the virgin-mothers of the world, such as: Ammas, Anu, Aphrodite, Ariadne, Artemis, Astarte, Athyr, Audhumbla, Caillech Bheur, Danu, Demeter, Devaki, Diana of Ephesus, Gaea, Hera, Hertha, Hestia, Io, Ishtar, Isis, Juno, Ki (Nintu), Lakshmi, Libera, Ma, Mary, Mylitta, Ops, Persephone, Rhea-Cybele, Tanit. Among American Indian tribes and in northeast Asia the virgin-mother was represented as a bear goddess, in China as a tigress, in Egypt as a cow mother, in Greece as a sow, and in Rome as a wolf goddess.

Female doorkeepers. Four animal-headed goddesses in the Buddhist Chonyid Bardo.

Female energy. The wife of a deity.

Female figure. Typifies the humanities.

FENCE See wall for symbolism.

FENG Danish legendary equivalent of the mythological Halfdan. Brother of Horwendil who was the husband of Gerutha (Gertrude) and the father of Amleth (Hamlet). He slays Horwendil and marries Gerutha. Parallels Claudius in Shakespeare's version of Hamlet (see).

FENG-HUANG (FENG, FENGHWANG, FEN-HUANG) Chinese mythological bird which supposedly lives for 500 years and then builds its own funeral pyre of dried grasses and spices. After it is consumed by the fire it rises again, renewed in youth, thus typifies immortality, resurrection. Symbolic of the sun. Rich in plumage and graceful of form and movement, it is fabled to appear only in times of peace and prosperity, when a sage is to be glorified. Second of the four benevolent sacred animals. (See Ssu Ling). Feng=male; huang=female; it is therefore androgynous. Emblem of the empress. In art often represented in pheasant form. Identical with the phoenix (fum).

FENG I Chinese god of waters. Compare Shui Shen, Yu Po.

FENG PO (FENG SHIH) Chinese god of the wind. Identified with the constellation Sagittarius, as strong winds come from the northwest.

FENG PO-PO Chinese wind goddess. Mounted on a tiger she ranges over the clouds with her bag of winds.

FENG-SHUI Literally wind and water. In China a kind of geomancy, the practice of reading nature signs or features of landscape to foretell coming events and used in determining sites for graves, houses, etc.

FENIAN (FIANNA EIRINN) In Irish legendary history a member of a body of professional soldiers, half warriors, half hunters, of superhuman courage, size, and strength. Their oath required them to be skilled alike in war and learning. The most famous leader of the group was Finn MacCool; other heroes were Diarmait O Buidhne, Fergus the Eloquent, Goll, Ossian. Their most common antagonists were the Lochlannach, a people who lived under the sea. The main purpose of the organization, therefore, was to defend the coasts of Ireland. The Fenians were sun heroes who fought the demons of darkness and winter. They were housed, kept covered, in winter, when their foe was victorious; they were exposed to roam the countryside in summer, when the sun is victorious. Their exploits probably echo actual historical events of early inhabitants who fought invaders. An anti-British secret association of disaffected Irishmen, formed in 1857, took the name.

FENIUS FARSA In Irish legend a Scythian who became the first Irishman. Deprived of his throne, he settled in Egypt, where his son Niul married the reigning Pharaoh's daughter, named Scota. Niul and Scota had a son called Goidel, whose great grandson was named Eber Scot. Fenius and his family were turned out of Egypt for refusing to join the persecution of the children of Israel. They wandered about for over forty years and finally settled in Spain, the Celtic Elysium or Hades. The descendant of Fenius was Bregon, father of Bile and Ith. The genealogy probably was invented to explain names by which Gaels called themselves; Finn, Goidel, Scot.

FENJA AND MENJA In Norse mythology giant daughters of Greip. When Ivalde and his sons revolted against the gods, the sisters seized the World Mill, the millstone Grotte in the cold polar night, and turned it so violently it went out of order and a great earthquake followed. At the command of Mysing, sea-king, the sisters ground out salt and ended the Golden Age or Peace of Frode. Goddesses of creation and destruction. In some versions given a nine-fold aspect (waves of the sea), and as such the joint mothers of Heimdall. See Cardea, Frode, Vana-Mothers.

FENNEL December 5 birthday flower. Symbolizes strength. In the language of flowers: Worthy of praise. Attribute of Virgin Mary.

FENRIR (FENRER, FENRIS)

In Norse mythology monstrous wolf, son of Loki and the giantess Angurboda; brother of Hel. By Gulveig-Hoder father of Hati and Skoll. Fenrir was a demoniacal cloud wolf, whose eyes and nostrils vomited fire; he was a demon of darkness, storm, and night and, when he yawned, one jaw reached the sky and one reached the earth. He was the terror of the gods and at Ragnarok swallowed the sun and conquered Odin. He was killed by Vidar. Sometimes said to be an aspect of Loki. Also called Hrodvitnir.

FENSAL (FENSALIR) In Norse mythology magnificent mansion of Frigga, to which she invited all married couples who had led virtuous lives on earth to enjoy each other's company forever.

FER Old Irish generic term for man. Vir and fer are cognates.

FERDIA (FERDIAD) In Old Irish legend friend and sworn brother of Cuchulainn, beguiled by Medb to meet Cuchulainn in combat in the war for the Brown Bull. The friends met reluctantly, showing each other the greatest courtesy throughout the three days of their battle, when at last Cuchulainn killed Ferdia. Ferdia, a prince of darkness, is compared to Hector; Cuchulainn, a sun-hero, is compared to Achilles.

FERDINAND (FERNANDO) Masculine name from the Greek and Italian, meaning peace and bold, life risking. Feminine forms are Ferdinanda, Fernanda.

FER FEDAIL In Irish mythology son of Eogabal. Slain by the sea-god Manannan because his misdeed resulted in the drowning of Tuag. See Tuag.

FERGUS Masculine name from Middle Irish, meaning the choice.

FERGUS THE ELOQUENT In Irish legendary history son of Finn McCool. Bard noted for his sweet voice. Because he was a wise seer and interpreter of dreams, he was called True Lips. Wind deity.

FERGUS FIONNLIAT Irish fertility lord; owner of Tuiren while she was in bitch form. She became the mother of the hounds Bran and Sceolan, the marvelous dogs of Finn mac Cool.

FERGUS MAC ROY (ROICH, ROIGH) Irish legendary hero of the Cuchulainn cycle. Son of Roy, father of Buinne and Ilann. King of Ulster. When he asked Nessa to marry him, she consented provided he would resign his title of king for one year in favor of her son Conchobar. He consented, and at the end of the year, Conchobar had him permanently dethroned. Fergus fled to Connaught and led the forces of Queen Medb against Ulster. When he was forced into single combat with Ulster's great hero Cuchulainn, he made a pact with his young rival; Cuchulainn was to run from him and at a future date he would run away. Their battle represented the cycle of time in which light or summer (Cuchulainn) and darkness or winter (Fergus) alternately fled from each other. The Fergus-Conchobar incident may echo an historical event in which a surrogate usurped the throne instead of sacrificing himself in a fertility rite at the expiration of his term, intended to be a temporary investiture to preserve the life of the true king. See surrogate.

FERGUSON One without lodging, in allusion to the saying, "It's all very fine, Ferguson, but you don't lodge here," which was popular in the middle of the 19th century. Several accounts are given for its origin. In one, a young Scot named Ferguson got intoxicated at Epsom Downs and was unable to prevail upon any innkeeper to give him lodgings. In another, Ferguson was a companion of the notorious Marquis of Waterford. The two became intoxicated and in the course of the evening separated. The marquis went to the home of his uncle the Archbishop of Armagh. When his companion knocked at the door the marquis threw open the window and called out the statement which became popular.

FERIDUN A type of model king. He appears in Persian legend.

FERN March 24 birthday flower, symbolizing confidence, fascination, sincerity, solitary humility. Typifies colonizers. If gathered at proper moment, said to render possessor invisible. Those who gather it on Saint John's Eve supposedly get their hats struck off and are severely kicked about. Word yielding one fire; cognate with fir. Japanese emblem of a samurai, signifying honesty. Used in New Year decorations to symbolize hope of exuberant prosperity.

Bracken or eagle fern. Shelter. Fern leaves. In northern climates, victory over death; compares with palm leaves of southern lands. In Japan symbolizes prosperity.

Fern seed. In witchcraft eaten to make oneself invisible. Ferns have no seeds but were formerly thought to have seeds so small as to be invisible and were carried about by those who were able to become invisible.

Royal fern. Reverie.

FEROCITY Typified by bear, crocodile, hawk, lion, tiger.

FEROHER (FEROUER) Literally, guardian angel. (1) One of an order of tutelary Persian deities. They were next in rank below the izeds, were infinite in number, and protected man during his mortal life. On the Day of Ascension they purified a man's soul. In Zend called fra-vashi. (2) A winged circular symbol supposedly representing a sun god found on Mesopotamian monuments. The winged disk, both with and without a man's (god's) figure engraved on it, has been found on ancient Assyrian and Babylonian monuments as a symbol of the god Ashur.

FERONIA Sabine goddess of wild creatures.

FERRET Inquisitiveness, mischievousness, restlessness, williness. Typifies one who is bloodthirsty, courageous, cunning, fierce, preserving, serpentine, stealthy, who has nocturnal habits, who searches out secret things, who seeks his prey in their dens.

FERTILITY RITE (1) Rites frequently orgiastic, with men and women cohabiting in the fields as a form of homeopathic or imitative magic. In ceremonies which accompanied the harvest festival, a doll with phallic attributes, an effigy of Adonis, Attis, Bacchus, Dionysus, Tammuz, Yarilo, or another fertility god, or a phallus representing the god, was torn to pieces and cast into a river or the sea, from which it supposedly rose again in the spring to bring fertility to the land. The vegetation spirit or effigy was borne or attended by mourning, wailing women. In some celebrations, the sacred king was slain to impregnate the earth with his life-giving warmth. Spring rites, celebrating the resurrection of the fertility god, were festive and gay in contrast to the plaintive autumnal rites. See dying god, Sacred king. (2) In primitive societies to facilitate childbirth or to procure offspring for barren women, a wooden image of a child is held on the lap of a would-be mother and she pretends to suckle it. Sometimes the father of a large family is asked to pray on behalf of the woman.

Fertility god. Vegetation god. Usually represented as a handsome youth. Sometimes he is a gay spirit, who travels about the countryside drinking wine, singing and dancing, frolicking and merrymaking, as Bacchus and Dionysus. Sometimes he mutilates himself for the benefit of mankind, kills himself each autumn to impregnate the earth with his life-giving warmth, or is slain by his mother-wife. He comes back to life with the returning sun each spring and brings renewed growth with him. Adonis and Tammuz are fertility gods of this type. See Dying god, mutilation.

Fertility goddess. Earth goddess. Triple goddess of birth-growth-decay, possessed of a double character, that of virgin and mother. She frequently is the mother-wife of the fertility god, as in the Ishtar-Tammuz legend, and is the guardian of childbirth as well as the guardian of earth's fertility. Cybele, Demeter, Rhea are fertility goddesses. Compare Virgin goddess.

FESCAMP ABBEY Site of early (truth) over darkness (ignorance). Grail legends; also known as Perlesvaus. A rival of Glastonbury Abbey, scene of later Grail stories.

FESS Heraldic band borne in the center of the shield; a military belt or girdle of honor. A military grade of honor which signifies the bearer must always be in readiness to undergo the business of public weal.

FESTIVAL A season of commemoration, rejoicing, rest, or thanksgiving. Festivals frequently have idolatrous connections; sometimes homeopathic or imitative magic is practiced. The most ancient festivals were those held after gathering the harvest or vintage. For Christian and Hebrew festivals see feast. Pagan festivals are symbolized by coronals of roses or other flowers, flaming torches, garlanded flutes or pipes or winecups, garlands, skull of horned animal festooned with flowers. In modern times many festivals are secular, such as fairs at which cattle, other livestock, and manufactured goods are displayed, or articles are sold for purposes of charity. A festival may represent a season devoted periodically to some form of entertainment, as a music festival at which a certain composer is honored. See feast, fertility rite.

Festival of Flowers. Chinese festival held the 12th day of the 2nd moon, when plants on the mountain are 'changed into jade,' that is the leaves and grass come forth to greet the sun. Women and children on this day hang favors on branches and recite laudatory remarks. This worship supposedly assures a fruitful season.

Festival of Lights. Hindu celebration of the triumph of light

In China and Japan a Feast of Lanterns is celebrated in honor of the new moon. Channukah, and Christmas Eve are festivals of lights.

Festival of Tombs. In China observed 106 days after the winter solstice, when visits are made to the graves of ancestors and offerings presented before the tablets of the dead. As no fire is kindled for three days previous to the festival, it sometimes is called Cold Food Festival. After graves are put in order, festivities are enjoyed much like those of the Easter holidays of western nations.

Festival of Weeping Women. See El-Bugat.

FESTUS (1) The hero of a dramatic poem by Philip J. Bailey. Like Faust, Festus is conducted by a diabolical companion through the whole of human experience. However, his guide Lucifer is more the philosopher and theologian than tempter. (2) In Brown-ing's Paracelsus, a true friend.

FETCH CANDLE (FETCH LIGHT)

A death warning. In the folklore of Ireland and North England a supernatural light which moves through the air at night and presages the death of the one who sees it. It is believed to accompany a ghost funeral and to be visible only to those who are about to die or as a sign of the death of one loved by the beholder. It supposedly goes out at the moment the soul of the dying departs from the body.

FETH FIADA Literally, deer's cry. In Irish legend Manannan's spell, by which one became invisible. It aided Cuchulainn, Lugh, the sons of Midir, and other heroes. Probably the sea which hides the sun that has set.

FETISH An object believed to possess magical powers, hence any object of blind affection or of ignorant, unreasoning devotion. Among primitive peoples, any inanimate object worshiped either because it is conceived to be the residence of a god or spirit or for its inherent magical power, and which may be compelled or induced to help the possessor achieve his aims, protect him from disease or harm, safeguard him against his enemies. Bones, fire, images, plants, stones, teeth, trees, water, wood are believed to possess fetish qualities. In psychopathology an article, such as a foot or other part of the body, an item of clothing, or jewelry, having no intrinsic significance of sex, but arousing erotic feelings or on which erotic interest has been fixed.

Fetish gods. Among Indo-Europeans, mountain, river, and tree gods. Celts and Teutons favored tree gods, whereas Greeks and Romans favored river gods.

FETTER Imprisonment, martyrdom, slavery.

Fetterlock. Heraldic symbol of the conqueror, strength, victory.

FEVER Excitement, illness, passion, restlessness, selfishness. In an Italian icon personified by a pale young woman with black hair. Hot vapours issue from her mouth. In her hand, which she holds over her heart, is a scroll inscribed, "Membra Cuncta Fatiscent." In her other hand she holds a slave's chain. A melancholy lion rests at her feet.

FEVERROOT Delay.

FEZ Moslem badge. Identical with the cone as a mountain symbol.

FI Word root meaning fire and life, as in feu and vie from the French. F is interchangeable with V; all vowels are interchangeable.

FIACHADH Legendary king of Ireland who organized the Fenians, sun-heroes, who were exterminated by Cairbre the son of Cormac mac Art. See Fenian.

FIACHNA In Irish legend he is attacked by his nephew Goll, who vanquishes him in seven battles and abducts his wife. In need of reinforcements, he appears in a mist, asks Loegaire for aid, and disappears into a lake. Loegaire, with fifty warriors, follows and aids in releasing his wife from the castle on the field of Mag Mell. As a reward, Fiachna gives his daughter Sun Tear to Loegaire as a wife. This is a light myth. Fiachna and Loegaire, aspects of the sun, accompanied by rays of the sun, disappear (set) in a lake and release the dawn (or perhaps the moon) from the mansion of a prince of darkness. Sun Tear is probably the dew. Fiachna (light) and Goll (darkness) meet in daily conflict, as suggested by the seven battles. Fiachna and Goll resemble Arthur and Modred.

FIACHRA In Irish legend one of the tragic children of Ler; twin brother of Conn. Changed into a swan by his jealous stepmother. Typifies cloud or mist. See Aoife, Ler.

FIANNA See Fenian.

FICO A gesture of contempt made by thrusting the thumb between two fingers or into the mouth. Intended to signify a fig's worth. Also interpreted to be a coarse and obscene gesture.

FICOIDES In the language of flowers: Your looks freeze me.

FIDDLER'S GREEN A sailor's term for a land of perpetual dancing, drinking, merriment, music, and singing, where rum and tobacco are given freely; hence an imaginary place free from care.

FIDELIA Feminine name from the Latin, meaning faithful.

FIDELITY Typified by the color blue, by a dog, by a hand on which is imprinted faith or foy, or by two right hands joined. In an Italian icon personified by a woman in white with a key in one hand and a seal in the other. A white dog stands by her. In Japan symbolized by bamboo.

FIDES Roman goddess personifying fidelity. In art she wears a wreath of laurel and olive.

FIELD Fertility, freedom, lack of restraint; also death. Sphere of action or opportunity, alluding to the expression, field of research; sports, typified by a field on which games are played; war, typified by a battlefield. In Korea a field symbolizes opportunity and service.

Field flowers. Humility, modesty, unpretentiousness. Assigned to Virgin Mary, also symbolic of the Christian church.

Field of apple trees. In the Zohar symbolizes Divine presence.

Field of Asphodel. In Greek mythology place where spirits whose fate has not been decided wait. Compares with Isle of the Blessed. In Greek antiquity the asphodel was the flower of the dead, its pale blossoms supposedly covered the meadows of Hades.

Field of blood. A battlefield. In Christian tradition Potter's Field. See Aceldama.

Field of Reeds. Egyptian afterworld below the western horizon. Region of perpetual springtime over which Osiris ruled. The souls of the dead reached it in a magical boat. Farming the fields was the principal work of the shades.

Field of Truth. In Greek antiquity a name for the dwelling place of the judges of souls Aea-cus, Minos, Rhadamanthus. See Hades.

Potter's field. A burial ground for criminals, paupers, and persons unknown. Aceldama.

FIERABRAS, SIR (FERUMBRAS)
One of Charlemagne's paladins. He typifies sin overcome by the cross.

Fierabras's balsam. Balsam used to embalm Christ, a drop of which cured any sickness or wound. Alludes to the seed of fertility.

FIERCENESS In an Italian icon personified by a young woman with a threatening attitude. She has one hand on the head of a tiger, with the other she holds an oak club as if about to strike.

FIERY COLUMN Axis of the universe.

Fiery cross. See under cross.

FIFI (FIFINE) Feminine name from the French, a meaningless duplication of sound.

FIFTEEN The full moon, as the full moon appears on the fifteenth day of each lunation. According to occultists, a number of the devil. In ancient Babylon the 15th day of the month was one of sackcloth and ashes. Fifteen is a term applied to the first Scottish Jacobite rebellion when, in 1715, James Edward Stuart, the old pretender, half-heartedly and unsuccessfully attempted to gain the throne.

FIFTH AVENUE In the 19th century a name synonymous with luxury and wealth, alluding to the mansions which lined the street. In the 20th century regarded as a street of fashion because it is lined with expensive retail stores. Park Avenue has replaced Fifth Avenue as the street of luxury and wealth.

Fifth chasm, eighth circle. In Dante's Inferno realm of bar- rators and speculators, who are submerged in a river of boiling pitch. They are guarded by demons armed with long hooks who are called Malebranche or Evil-Talons.

Fifth circle. In Dante's In- ferno where the wrathful quarrel in mud and the sullen are sunk beneath it. Represented by the fall of a stream which has worn a passage to form the marsh of Styx below.

Fifth column. Any minority group which, working from with- in, aids the opponents of the ma- jority; from an alleged remark of the Spanish Nationalist General Mola when besieging Madrid in 1939. He supposedly said that he had four columns of soldiers advancing on the city and a fifth column of sympathizers within Madrid that would arise to attack the defenders from the rear. Hence enemy sympathizers, sab- oteurs, traitors. The fifth col- umn is the modern equivalent of the Trojan horse.

Fifth Kingdom. In the cabala the spiritual world.

Fifth month. In China month of the wicked fifth moon. Red paper cutouts of bottle gourds are pasted on doors the first of the month to avert evil influences and ward off epidemics.

Fifth wheel of a coach. Some- thing quite superfluous.

FIFTY According to mystics one whose name corresponds to the number is a person of af- fairs, dominates justice, eloquent speaker, tends to banquets and feasts. Physical weak spots: eyes and liver. According to the cabala the traits are: activ- ity, command, industriousness, man of law, in low form, dis- turbances, wickedness. In Chris- tian tradition fifty is the sign of remission of sins; number of the Holy Ghost, who descended on apostles fifty days after resur- rection. In Hebrew tradition the Law was given to Moses on Mount Sinai fifty days after Exodus from Egypt.

Fifty-eight. According to mystics: affectionate, brave, good natured, and healthy. Physi- cal weak spot: the eyes. Ac- cording to the cabala: brave, cures maladies, frank, has many love affairs. In low form: chol- eric, homicidal.

Fifty-five. According to mys- tics: fortunate in money matters, high-minded, noted for good deeds. Physical weak spots: head, liver, and right arm. According to the cabala: dominating, piousness; in low form: enemies of virtue.

Fifty-four. According to mys- tics: eloquent and long living. Physical weak spots: glands, legs. According to the cabala: good reputation among savants; in low form: ruin of governments.

Fifty-nine. According to mys- tics: a gambler, successful with boats and shipping. Physical weak spot: liver. According to the cabala: dominator of banks, libraries, printing, treas- uries; in low form: fraudulent failures, gambling, swindling.

Fifty-one. According to mys- tics: one easily filled with appre- hension and dread, yet smiles and talks cheerfully; is successful in spite of fears; loves music; has a talent for abstract science.

Physical weak spot: heart. According to the cabala: disinclined to marry, lover of abstract science, possessor of abundance accompanied by much worry.

Fifty-seven. According to mystics: affectionate, brave, successful in commerce. Physical weak spot: throat. According to the cabala: love for the military, prosperous; in low form: treacherous.

Fifty-six. According to mystics: agreeable, changes environment frequently, modest, philosophical, renowned. Physical weak spot: nerves. According to the cabala: modest, philosophical, renowned; in low form: has too much ambition.

Fifty-three. According to mystics: fond of meditation, a good military scout, quiet, serious. Physical weak spot: stomach and throat. According to the cabala: authoritative, a lover of repose, melancholy, overlooking; in low form: a spy. In Japan a number constructive in the scheme of things; frequently appears in constructions of a highway or important structure. Symbolizes putting together facets which comprise the truth.

Fifty-two. According to mystics: able, determined, loves mountains, supports adversity with courage and prudence, a traveler. Physical weakness: the spleen. According to the cabala: loves work, strong, and vigorous, a soldier or voyager; in low form: conceited.

FIG July 10 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: I keep my secret. Symbolizes abundance, breasts, kiss, longevity, lust, female principle. Also a trifle. In ceremonies of sacrifice, human beings, before being put to death, were hung about with figs and scourged with the rod of the fig tree. In middle ages used as an antidote against poison. Dream significance: sincere love. A gesture of contempt, made by thrusting the thumb between two fingers or into the mouth, is called the fig (or fico). It is intended to signify a trifle or a fig's worth; also interpreted as a coarse and obscene gesture. Fig resolves into ef-ig, yielding mighty life, and is the root of vegetation and vigor. Mohammedan sacred fruit, and fruit by which Mohammed swore. Fruit of heaven; possessor of intelligence.

Fig faun. A demon, monster, or satyr of the desert, which supposedly subsists on figs.

Fig leaf. Male principle. In Hebraic-Christian tradition fall from Divine grace, immodesty, nakedness, shame; alluding to the fig leaf which, in art, is shown as the first covering of Adam.

Fig marigold. Idleness.

Fig tree. Conjugal act, marriage, prolificacy, purgation, truth. Called the tree of many breasts inasmuch as its fruit, without any show of blossoms, is visible before its leaves. Combining attributes that are both masculine (its leaves) and feminine (its fruit), it is held as symbolic of life and love. The Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil is sometimes understood to be a fig tree. Called Bo in Sanscrit, it is a sacred tree of the Buddhists. In Greek antiquity sacred to Dionysus, who derived corpulency and strength from it. Among Hebrews associated with the vine as a symbol of peace and plenty. Called thane, a word also signifying coition, marriage. In Italy and parts of Africa worshipped as the spiritual husband of barren women.

Fig tree bearing fruit. Holy life rich with fruits of the spirit.

FIGARO Shrewd, unscrupulous, witty rascal and schemer. Figaro is the cunning barber of Beaumarchais's Barber of Seville; in the Marriage of Figaro he appears as a valet.

FIGHT Dream significance: business failure.

FIGOL Celtic druid who promised the Tuatha De Danann to rain fire on the Fomors in the battle of Mag-Tured.

FILBERT August 27 birthday flower symbolizing reconciliation.

FILE Polishing ideas and freeing them from superstitions. A symbolism which originated in Italy.

FILIAL PIETY In the Far East symbolized by the stork.

FIMAFENG Literally, nimble one. In Norse mythology a servant of Aegir, the sea-god. Typifies the cap of phosphorescent waves in the dark. He was slain by the jealous Loki.

FIMBULFAMBE In Norse legend a great or extraordinary fool; one so foolish or thick-headed he might serve as a sledge-hammer.

FIMBULTHUL A sophistic, talkative man. From Norse legend.

FIMBULTHULER Literally, the mighty roaring one. Norse river of heaven.

FIMBULTYR Literally, mighty helper. A title of Odin.

FIMBULWINTER (FIMBAL WINTER) In Norse mythology the terrible or mighty winter, three years long, which preceded Ragnarok.

FINDABAIR (FINBAR, FINDBAR)

In the second or heroic cycle of Irish legend, daughter of Ailill and Medb, king and queen of Connaught. Her marriage with Fraoch was thwarted by her father, who feared the enmity of rival kings. She was extraordinarily beautiful and her mother secretly promised her in marriage to every hero who undertook to fight Cuchulainn in single combat in the war for the Brown Bull. Those who met Cuchulainn perished. When Findabair discovered how she was being promised to a fresh suitor each day, she died of shame; in some accounts, she died of a broken heart when Fraoch was killed by Cuchulainn. Findabair probably personifies an aspect of the moon.

FINGAL Irish hero; a name of Finn mac Coul.

FINGER Deity, direction, ray of light. Compare Dactyli, Hand. In Egyptian tradition, anger of man. In Hebrew tradition, courage, God, power. According to mystics the symbolism of the fingers is: thumb, phallic or Heracles finger. Awkwardness, hence the expression, "His fingers are all thumbs." Turned up, yes; turned down, no. Index or forefinger assigned to Paeon, deliverer from evil. Command, pointing. Middle finger assigned to Epimetheus, who thinks too late. Ring finger, from an ancient notion that a nerve ran from it directly to the heart. Expresses coition. When projected, the others held back, expresses contempt, and is interpreted to be an obscene gesture comparable to the fico. Fourth finger assigned to Iasius. Healer or phisic finger; also betrothal; and on it modern engagement and wedding rings are placed. Pinkie or small finger assigned to Idas, priest of Rhea. Oracular finger.

The gestures which follow are universal, and appear in Babylonian steles as well as in more recent art works, unless otherwise indicated.

Finger at lips. Silence.

Finger at nose. Arrogance, challenge, insult. The thumb usually is used.

Finger in horn sign. Used to avert danger, especially in Italy, where it is used as a protection from the evil eye. Typifies the crescent of moon goddesses. In China indicates membership in the dreaded secret Hung Society. Also a sign of Kwan Yin.

Finger in mouth. In legend the hero (humanized deity) places his finger in his mouth after roasting the dragon (foe of mankind). In effect he is eating the slain dragon to acquire his victim's knowledge and strength. Compare cannibalism. The hero may thrust his finger, to which particles of the burnt dragon adhere, into his mouth to relieve his own pain and thereby accidentally receive his foes knowledge and strength. In this manner Fionn discovered he had acquired a tooth of knowledge. The infant Horus is shown with his finger in his mouth, having received wisdom from the breast of his mother.

Finger moistened. Wetting index finger and drawing across throat symbolizes assurance, truth, and is a plea to the deity to cut the throat if an untruth is or has been told. Among Mexican Indians a moistened finger touching the breast of a newborn child symbolizes purification, the washing away of the filthiness of birth; a moistened finger touching the infant's mouth symbolizes the life force, nourishment.

Finger pointing. Direction, will of God. Necromantic gesture in bewitching.

Fingers crossed. Anciently a mantric prayer. In modern times immunity to bad luck or chastisement, hence good luck.

Fingers in fist. With thumbs straight, both fists leaning on altar, chin on thumbs, symbolizes prayers.

Fingers interlocking, pointed upward. Prayer.

Fingers of right hand clasping forefinger of left. Unity of cosmic and individual souls in final spiritual enlightenment. Also coition. Vulgarized to carry the same symbolism as fico.

Fingers separated. Index finger separated from the other three, which are held close together, or fingers separated two and two, symbolizes shearing away evil.

Fingers (or palm) striking the front of forehead. Agitation, despair, grief, sympathy.

Fingers upward, both hands together. Prayer.

Rosy fingers. Dawn, Aurora, Eos.

Snapping fingers. Call, command, speed.

Third and fourth fingers on palm. With index and second finger upright signifies blessing. With thumb erect, Christian blessing in the name of the Trinity.

Two fingers extended. Assistance, benediction, help, sign of good faith and peace.

FINGERNAIL PARINGS In Finno-Ugric belief the evil one collects the parings clipped on Sunday and with them builds the boat for transporting the dead. In Japan good luck expellers. When Susano-wo was exiled to the underworld his fingernails were pulled off and the gods made of them things to expel good luck. Compare toenail.

FINLEY Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning sunbeam.

FINN Early Norse sun deity. Not to be confused with Finn mac Coul, the Irish hero.

FINNBEARA In Irish legend king of the fairies of Connaught. Bringer of good crops.

FINNEGAN, TIM Bricklayer, in an Irish-American music-hall ballad, who is killed in a fall but miraculously revives during his wake to drink the whiskey provided for the occasion. As a symbol of renewal and resurrection, James Joyce borrows him for Finnegans Wake. In Joyce's work, he also is regarded as the resurrected Finn mac Coul because of his name (Finnegan, i. e. Finn-again). He compares with Adam, Humpty-Dumpty, and Lucifer, all of whom had epic falls.

FINN MAC COUL (FINGAL, FIONN, FIONN MAC COOL, FIONN MAC CUMHAIL) Sun hero of the Fenian or third cycle of Irish legend. Through his mother, he was the grandson of Bracan, a Tuatha De Danann warrior deity. He was the posthumous son of Cumhal. At first he was called Deimne and reared in the wilds by the peasants Bodmhall and Liath. When he appeared at the matches taking place in the presence of King Conn, the king called him Finn, meaning fair or white. Concealing his name, he entered the service of the seer Finn Eger, who for seven years remained by the Boyne River watching the salmon of Lynn Feic, which fed on the hazelnuts of wisdom and which it had been foretold would provide Finn with all knowledge. Eger finally caught the fish, which he gave to mac Coul to cook with strict instructions that the boy was not to taste it. In the cooking, mac Coul burned his thumb which had touched the hot fish. He put his finger in his mouth and immediately became possessed of all knowledge, thereby depriving the seer Finn of the gift. Thereafter Finn mac Coul had only to chew his thumb to obtain wisdom; and he became leader of the Fianna, warring against the Fomors, destroying giants and demons of darkness. In one adventure, while visiting the castle of Seachran (wind), he escaped a hairy claw (rain) which reached down to seize him. Compare Brangemore. In another adventure he was swallowed by a dragon (winter) and hacked his way out, releasing others (fertility) who had been swallowed, echoing the Jonah legend. Sabia was one of his wives. While in deer form she gave birth to Oisín (fawn). Another son was Fergus the Eloquent. His fiancée was Grainne, who was seduced by his nephew Diarmaid typifying the struggle of the sun with the moon for supremacy in the sky. Two hundred years after his supposed death he reappeared as the Ulster king called Mongán. In Scottish legend he is said to be sleeping in a hollow tree waiting to start up again at the hour of his country's need. By early Christian missionaries he was pictured as an inhabitant of the underworld. Finn resembles Arthur, Cuchulainn, Sigurd.

FINNTAIN (FINTAN) In Celtic mythology one of the men who accompanied Cessair, supposed granddaughter of Noah, when she fled to Ireland to escape the flood. He is the only one of the flood refugees who survived, and he supposedly lived to be six hundred years of age and saw the arrival of Partholon, the giant. Sometimes said to be the husband of Cessair.

FINUWEIGH Indonesian creator god.

FINVARRA (FINVARA, FIONN-BHARR) King of Irish fairies. Succeeded Mac Moineanta. Mate of Onagh. He was a benevolent fairy who provided horses and wine.

FIONN (FION) A name of Finn mac Coul, which see.

FIONNUALA (FINOLA, FION-GUALA) In Irish legend daughter of Ler. Typifies a cloud or mist. With her three brothers she was transformed by her jealous stepmother Aoife into a swan and condemned to wander over the lakes and rivers of Ireland until Christianity was introduced into the land. See Ler.

FIR March 27 birthday flower. Symbolizes boldness, elevation, fidelity, immortality, loftiness, longevity, piety, prosperity, regal beauty, time. Fire or sun symbol, probably because its form resembles a flame. Dream significance: constancy; (in a forest) health, long life. Fir equates with fire. In Celtic druidic tree alphabet, tree of the first vowel, ailm (a); in the druidic calendar, sharing the day with the mistletoe, it is the tree of December 23, birthday of the divine fertility child. In Scotland mother and child are sained with a flaming fir candle, which is whirled three times around the birth-bed. The fir is the tree under which autumn offerings of brandy, bread, and a bull are made to the forest spirit by Finno-Ugric hunters. In ancient Greece used for purposes of divination. Tree of hope. The Trojan horse, a peace offering to Athena, was made of silver fir. In Hebraic-Christian tradition typifies those who excel in patience and virtue. Among ancient Hebrews sacred to the birth goddess and used by Solomon for the floor planks in the Temple. See cedar. The Phrygian fertility deity Attis was born under the fir and metamorphosed into a fir by Cybele, who loved him. In Roman antiquity the fir was consecrated to Neptune.

Fir cone. Symbolic of the fire of life. Foundation of all things, health restorer, nourisher. Cognate with the Anglo-Saxon firgen and Gothic fariguni, both meaning mountain.

FIRBOLGS Literally, men of the bag. Legendary Irish settlers. They left Greece, where they had been enslaved and made to carry earth from the valleys to barren hills in leather bags; later they made boats of the bags and escaped to Spain, which in post-Christian Ireland was a polite way of saying Hades. After the departure of the Nemedians they held Ireland until the coming of the Tuatha De Danann, light deities, who deemed them children of darkness. They appear to be identical with the Fomors, which see. They were in constant conflict with the Tuatha De Danann, and were defeated at the battle of Mag Tured. They may have been a primitive people who resisted newcomers or a new religion whose history merged with a light legend.

FIRE Divine love, first principle, light deity. Authority, enlightenment, fertility, fervor, hospitality, illumination, life, male principle, power, purification, retribution, sacrifice, spirit, warmth. Also death, destruction, divine anger, martyrdom, persecution, torture, winter. An eternal element, hence eternity. Bringer of consoling thoughts, driver away of evil terrors.

Dream significance: (burning) dangerous enemies; (conflagration) great joy; (out) sorrow; (to light one) important event; (with smoke) threat of a quarrel; (without smoke) enjoyment, health. In heraldry zeal. Its occult action is blaze and ascend; its quality is to penetrate. Life sustainer which lives in the death of air. To it are attributed emotion, the irresistible, mercurial, volatile, winning. In tarot divination an element of the club suit; the highest cosmo-philosophical element. Signifies dynamic energy and denotes the feeling or imaginative type of person. Lighted at gravesides that spirits might warm themselves. In primitive societies menstrating women are not permitted to look at a fire for fear of contaminating it; no one may blow on a flame for fear the breath may contaminate it. Widely believed to be one of the elements which created the world: the primordial ocean is churned by fire, creating a foam which thickens into earth; or the power of water vanishes and a part that is burned becomes hard; or steam rises from the water carrying dust with it, the dust settling on the water to form solid land. In some sections of the world a great conflagration rather than a flood destroyed life on earth. In northern countries the idea may have been inspired by Aurora Borealis, in southern countries by the Aurora Australis. The conflagration is sometimes called water by fire, and a raft or ship is the rescue vessel. Fire is symbolized by an arrow, azalea, bristles, dart, F, fir tree, lion's mane, hair, pillar, pyramid, Rod of Jesse, shaft, spear, swastika. Fire is from the same root as fear, fir, four. Compare Beltane, bonfire, conflagration, Maidere, Ragnarok, yule log.

In China the Infinite, represented by the color red, typifies summer. Element of Wei, eastern quadrant; Yi, southern quadrant; Tzu, western quadrant; Shih, northern quadrant. In the Eight Diagrams, Li. Produces earth (ashes), destroys metal. In China and Japan fire supposedly was formed when earth and sky, which were joined, separated. Christian symbol of charity, intense desire, martyrdom. Emblem of saints Barnabas, Chrysanthus, Florian, Yvo. In Egyptian and Hebrew tradition life animating all created things, divine and mortal. The fire symbolized the male principle, the light of the fire symbolized the female principle. In Scriptures connected with the presence of God, as in the burning bush. God sent fire from heaven to consume sacrifices to signify his acceptance of the offering, as in the case of Abel. The Jews were forbidden to kindle a fire on the Sabbath, a prohibition perhaps only of cooking on that day, but understood in the fullest extent, and even now, to avoid sin, gentile servants are employed. In Hindu ceremonies fire is used to control water dragons. In Iceland and elsewhere fire is consulted in the cure of disease. In Japan symbolic of the Ho-bird (phoenix). In Mexico believed to be an animating force and, on the birth of a child, kept burning for four days to nourish its life and protect from the evil eye. In Polynesia the living are protected by fire from attacks by the dead. In Woodlark Island legend a son stole it from the Old Woman and gave it to mankind. In anger, she divided what was left and threw the two pieces into the sky, thus creating the sun and moon. Compare Prometheus. In Zoroastrianism the purest of all elements, image of the supreme deity.

Circle of fire. Chastity, inviolability, magic spell. Attribute of Brynhild.

Fire anvil. Typifies the smith; in mythology, the celestial smith. The brain is likened to the anvil, thought to the hammer.

Fire baptism. Purification, protection against the evil eye.

Firebrand. Life emblem, light rays. The merciless arrows of Bel or Marduk. Emblem of Meleager.

Firecracker. Originally intended to frighten away evil spirits. In China set off in homage to the gods. In the United States formerly set off to celebrate Independence Day on July 4th.

Fire eaters. Persons always ready to quarrel. The allusion is to jugglers who 'swallow' fire.

Firefly. Glitter, summer. In China called chih. Supposedly, if eaten, enables one to write in the dark. If one consumes forty-seven, 10,000 years are promised. In Japan called notaru, symbolic of difficulty accomplished, gratitude. Ghosts of the Heike warriors.

Fire jumping. Purification rite. By Finno-Ugrics practiced during Easter memorial services, when evil spirits are apt to appear.

Fire making. Evoker or lurer of sunshine; a form of sympathetic magic.

Fire of heaven. Lightning.

Fire opal. In the language of gems: Adversity cannot touch you.

Fireplace lighted. Hospitality, winter. Dream significance: family pleasures; if unlighted, loneliness.

Firestone. Carnal passion. Male and female principle.

Fire and water. Antagonism, opposition.

Funeral fire. Many ancients believed the smoke of a fire carried the soul on its last flight to celestial realms.

Perpetual fire. Infinity, memorial. American Indians kept a fire perpetually alive; its extinction symbolized death. The Iroquois had a saying, "When the fire at Onondaga goes out we shall no longer be a people." In Mexico, Rome, etc., virgins who had vowed eternal chastity were guardians of the flame.

Promethean fire. Fire of heaven stolen by Prometheus and brought down to earth to save mankind from extinction. Lightning.

Saint Anthony's fire. Erysipelas. So called because the saint is said to have miraculously cured the disease.

FIRMNESS Typified by the backbone of Osiris or Tet (Tat), cube, keystone of the arch, mountain, pyramid, square.

FIRST BORN The most distinguished, the most excellent, the prime of things. One who enjoys particular privileges, alluding to the fact that in most societies the first born son enjoys special inheritance and other considerations. Early Semites offered to the Supreme Deity, later substitute offerings were made, a usual sacrifice consisting of two or three doves or a lamb.

First circle. In Dante's Inferno, Limbo, where the souls of the unbaptised and of virtuous heathens are found.

First day of tenth lunar month. Day on which Shinto gods assemble at four o'clock in the morning at Kitsuki Shrine to arrange marriages for the coming year.

First fruits. Presents made to the supreme deity or to the vegetation deity to express dependence, submission, thankfulness, and to ask for immortality.

Firstlings (animal) sacrificed.

A fertility, propitiation, or thanksgiving rite.

First man. Bringer of death, sinner. According to a universal theme, a fault committed by the first man accounts for evil reigning on earth and causes the creator deity to deny man immortality. Compare death.

FISH Abundance, baptism, generative power, knowledge, prolificacy, wisdom, woman. Brain food, sacrificial food, the sea. Also foolishness, greediness, selfishness, sexual indifference, stupidity. In wishing wells granter of babies and lovers. Typifies a person, hence a 'poor or queer fish.' Zodiacal sign Pisces. A fish brought from primeval waters the speck of mud of which Earth was shaped, thus typifies beginnings; it supported Earth on its back, thus a world support; it guided to safety those to be saved in the deluge or led humans back from the underworld, thus resurrection. Portrayed as guardian of the tree of life or knowledge. Compare dragon, salmon. An ancient conception divided the firmament, putting an ocean below the earth, clouds containing the waters of flood and rain above it. The sun passed through these clouds in his sun barge or as a fish. The eating of fish on certain days among the Pagans represented the deification of the yoni. A connection with womankind may have arisen from scent associations; it probably became a phallic symbol because of its extraordinary fecundity, and as such an emblem of love goddesses, who sometimes were given fish (mermaid) shape. As a food, widely used in conjugal feasts. The expressions, "a choice bit of fish," or "fish diet," refer to a choice woman or excessive indulgence on the part of a man. The expression,

"cold fish," for "sexual indifference," refers to the habits of certain fish that produce young without cohabitation. In Africa embodiment of a departed soul. In China and India a symbol of regeneration employed in funeral rites. Christian symbol of faith and purity inasmuch as it passes through salt water yet remains fresh. Emblematic of baptism, eucharist, Virgin Mary. Its use as a metaphor of Christ is traced to ichthys, Greek for fish, which formed a monogram of the phrase, 'Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior.' In the eucharist the fish has been replaced by bread and wine. Early Christians engraved a fish on medals, seals, and tombs, as a tacit confession of their faith. In art an attribute of Tobias because the gall of a fish restored the sight of his father Tobit. An attribute of saints Andrew, Anthony of Padua, Benno, Corentin, Peter, Ulrich, and Zeno. Egyptian talisman, shape worn for abundance, domestic felicity, prosperity. Set tossed the generative organ of the dismembered Osiris into the Nile and it was swallowed by a fish; when the fish typifies Osiris it signifies fecundity and rebirth; when it typifies Set it is an evil omen, designating crime, darkness, to hide. Hebrew Sabbath and sacramental food. Food which the Messiah will catch at the end of the world and divide among the faithful. See Leviathan. Symbolic of the faithful who swim in the waters of life, thus hope of immortality. In the Talmud the Messiah is designated by the name Dag (Fish), and his second coming is to be in the conjunction of Saturn and Jupiter in Pisces, which is the origin of three fishes interlaced in a triangle, a popular ornament in medieval architecture. The great fish which swallowed Jonah typifies the realm of darkness or of the dead. In Hindu mythology the first avatar of Vishnu was a fish, in which form he was instructor and savior of Manu. In North-eastern Europe and Northwestern Asia the bones of devoured fish are tossed into the sea that the fish might come back to life again for the next fishing season. See skeleton. In Rome fish was a food of Friday, the day of Venus.

Brace of fish. In China symbolizes joys of union. Talisman to avert the evil eye.

Fish bladder. Virginity, yoni.

Fish bones. Resurrection.

Dream significance: obstacles surmounted.

Fish day. Friday, or any other day on which, on religious grounds, meat is not eaten.

Fish-dragon. In Chinese art a carp changing into a dragon or ascending a waterfall is called yu lung and symbolizes passing examinations.

Fisher (fisherman). Deity who originates and preserves life. Buddha. The Christian apostles, Christ, Saint Peter. Epithet probably derived from Christ's statement, "I shall make ye fishers of men."

Fisher king. One devoted to the pastime of fishing (for life's sustenance). A king whose virility is tied to the fertility of the land. If he ages, becomes ill, is wounded, or turns sexually impotent, his sterility causes the land to waste; his restoration brings verdure back to the land. A fertility or vegetation god. In Grail romances custodian of Grail Castle, possessor of the bleeding lance, the Grail, and the silver plate. Maimed by a spear thrust through his thigh, he found solace in fishing. He can be healed only by a Grail-seeker; when he is healed the waste land which surrounds his castle will become fertile once again. Amfortas, Brons, Joseph of Arimathaea are identified as the fisher king. See Grail, Lame king, Frode.

Fish gods. Originators and preservers of life.

Fish hook. Agency or instrument whereby one investigates the unknown or unseen, hence experimentation, quest, research, to sink. Also deceit, perfidy.

Fish hook lost. Theme in Eastern and Pacific Island legends. A fish hook, spear, or other article is lost and is carried away by a deity in the guise of a fish. The search leads the hero into the underworld, from which he returns with the lost item, thus signifying death and rebirth.

Fishing. Groping, probing, searching. Dream significance: (for big fish) happiness, joy; (for small fish) limited success; (to see fishing) betrayal. In creation myths animals or humans fish in the primordial sea for soil with which to shape Earth.

Fish in net or creel. Souls caught by the apostles for salvation.

Fish and key in mouth. Saint Benno.

Fish robe. In Sumerian steles costume of a water god or his priest.

Fish tail. Divinity, fertility, lightning, sun, thunder. Cognate with sacred battleax or double ax.

Fish tale. An incredible statement, one grossly exaggerated or invented, as the proverbial stories told by amateur fishermen of their catches.

Fish wife. One who uses abusive language or billingsgate.

Fish with uplifted tail. In Chinese art the dragon Chih-wen.

Neither fish, flesh, fowl, nor good red herring. Without qualities for any class, not suitable for one thing or another. Not fish, food for monks; flesh or fowl, food for people generally; red herring, for poor people.

Three fish. Christian Trinity, baptism.

Two fish. The constellation Pisces. One of the eight glorious Buddhist emblems. Symbolizes domestic faith and fertility. In China called shuang yu and typifies abundance, felicity, harmony, marriage. Charm against evil. In Christian tradition represents the Christians. In the Catacombs a representation of Christ.

FIST RAISED Threat.

FITZ Masculine name from the Latin, meaning son.

FIVE Comprehension, fecundity, flame, harvesting, increase, justice, light, propagation, reaping. The cardinal points: north, south, east, west, and center (or zenith). Number of fingers, senses (hearing, sight, smell, taste, touch), toes, vowels (a, e, i, o, u). Being the union of a feminine number (two) and a masculine number (three), identified with marriage. Anciently regarded as sacred to the god of light, and the attributes of the deity were held to be five: being, diversity, motion, rest, sameness. Also sacred to the moon or mother goddess; her stations of the year numbered five: birth, initiation, consummation, repose, death. Ancient calendars had five seasons of 72 days each, with five extra days to round out the year. In Freemasonry the number of virtues or points of fellowship. In gambling on a board of nine figures, the house figure is five. During the middle ages a number which influenced witchcraft, hence an unlucky number. By mystics called the scribe, and as aspects of the soul associated with: Haia, living vitality; Nephesh, breath, concupiscence; Neshamah, reason; Ruach, seat of good and evil; Yedidah, unique vitality. A number of healing, inspiration, life, love, and power. The allusion is to the pool of Bethesda, a pool of five porches, and the seal of King Solomon, a five-pointed star. It corresponds to the wild rose (five-petaled), the color blue (according to some mystics, the color pink), the Hebrew letter he, and the zodiacal house Leo. Its rhythm is the dynamic law proceeding from abstract order and suggests adaptation or mediation (being midway between one, beginning, and nine, completion), the means by which man can change conditions. It represents versatility, the changing aspect of the One Law. Its planetary equivalent being Mercury, it denotes communication, speed, talking, travel, writing. In a name or cycle it seeks present happiness with little thought of consequences. It is the pentad or great mystic number containing all the power of nature. It brings change, new experiences, new friends, travel to those who come under its vibrations. Its character traits are: adventuresomeness, fickleness, inventiveness, freedom, nervousness, self-indulgence, speculation. According to the cabala the tendency is toward religion with fear of God and relentless strength. In Greek called pente (cognate with Pan); in Sanscrit called panch or punj (also cognate with Pan), and the Punjab, which yields Punj-orb, is so named because it is watered by five rivers. To Bella Coola Indians it was the number of stories of the universe: two above, two below, earth in the center. Five was the number of days assigned to Pueblo Indian festivals, one of preparation and four of ritual. Among most North American Indians the cardinal points are five: north, south, east, west, and the point of the observer. In Buddhism: the brothers of Kanchenjuna (see deified mountains under Mountains); the number of Celestial Buddhas; the number of commandments (1- Do not take life; 2- Do not steal; 3- Do not commit adultery; 4- Do not lie or bear false witness; 5- Do not drink intoxicants); the number of Buddha's disciples (Ananda, Kasyapa, Maudgalyayana, Sariputra, and Upali); of Great Astrologers (see Pancamaharaja); of Great Tibetan Kings (see Mahapancaraja); of Spell Goddesses (see Pancaraksa); and number of Tse-ring chhe-nga or Five Sisters of Mount Everest (see deified mountains, under Mountains). The objects sacrificed to the five senses: mirror for sight, nutmeg for smell, shell for hearing, sugar for taste, yellow silk for touch. Celtic priestesses tossed up and caught five stones on the back of a hand for the purpose of augury. In China the five clans were represented on the first flag of the Republic by different colored bars; to the colors a direction was assigned:

Clan	Color	Direction
Chinese	yellow	center
Manchurian	red	south
Mohammedan	white	west
Mongolian	green (or blue)	east
Tibetan	black	north

In China the elements numbered five: earth, fire, metal, water, wood; likewise the virtues: fidelity, insight or justice, humanness, propriety or obedience, uprightness. Every household had five Shen to preside over it: Ching Chu'an, boy spirit of the well; Chung lu, god of eaves; Hu, god of windows; Men, god of the door who kept out evil; Tsao Shen, lord of the kitchen stove, who presided over the whole house. The relations of mankind numbered five: that between emperor and subject, father and son, brother and brother, husband and wife, friend and friend. The number of the Islands of the Blessed, and the number of sons of To Yen-shan. The five sons became so prominent they are called the five dragons of the To family and serve as prototypes of those who, through filial devotion and virtuous ways, rise to high positions and honors.

The acts of the Christian Church are five: desire, faith, hope, humility, love. The number of letters of Jesus, the number of his wounds. The sacred pentagram or flaming star of the gnostics. The sacramental principles: benediction of the priest, blessed bread, holy water, kiss of peace, sign of the cross; also the lesser sacraments: confirmation, holy orders, matrimony, penance, visitation of the sick. In Hebrew tradition the number of letters of Jeoua or Jeova (Jehovah). David defeated Goliath with five smooth stones from a brook, probably the source of the five beans from which Jack's magic beanstalk grew in the fairytale. It denotes the cleavage of the sexes (ten denoting unification) and light.

Five bats. The five Chinese blessings: longevity, love of virtue, natural death, peace and serenity, riches.

Five circles. In Egyptian and Mayan antiquity daylight and splendor. In medieval trademarks windows of the house of wisdom (or light).

Five hearts. Emblem of Judah, father of five sons, ancestor of David.

Five knobs or bosses. On Celtic crosses symbolize light or wisdom.

Five M's. In Japan the Panchattva or five principles of Kula-charya: coition, fish, flesh, grain, wine.

Five Nations. (1) The confederated Cayugas, Mohawks, Oneidas, Onondagas, and Senecas; or Iroquois Confederacy. (2) The Cherokee, Chickasaw, Choctaw, Creeks, and Seminoles; or Five Civilized Tribes. (3) The five component parts of the British Empire. Used in this sense by Rudyard Kipling in his volume of poems entitled The Five Nations.

Five-pointed star. Heavenly wisdom. Talisman for love and power. Emblem of the Eastern Star organization, to which five distinguished women are appointed. Seal of Solomon.

Five Points. A locality in lower New York City, once notorious as a center of crime, poverty, and vice.

Five-rayed zigzag. Lightning.

Five rays. Light, wisdom.

Five stars. In United States, general of the highest rank, hence authority, impressiveness. The term five-star general is sometimes used satirically.

Five-storied structure. In Freemasonry the five senses.

Five viscera. In Chinese divination: heart, ruler of the body and seat of spiritual intelligence, corresponds to the element fire; kidneys, seat of ingenuity and power, corresponds to the element water; liver, soul residence, corresponds to the element wood; lungs, seat of righteousness, corresponds to metal; stomach, seat of learning, corresponds to earth.

Five wounds. Christian stigmata.

FJALAR (FIALAR, FJALLAR)

In Norse mythology: (1) creator of illusions. Brother of Galar. Both are dwarfs and together they kill the great teacher Kvasir, out of whose blood, mixed with honey, they brew the poetic mead, also called the dwarf's drink. Fjalar is a dwarf aspect of Suttung. (2) The red cock that crows to announce Ragnarok. He typifies fire, whence the expression, "The red cock is crowing over the roof," to indicate a house is on fire or the sun is setting.

FJOLSVID Norse giant who guarded Mengold while she was held prisoner underground until she was rescued by Svipdag. This is a fertility myth; with the release of Mengold comes spring growth. Resembles Fafnir.

FJORGYN (FJORGYNN) In Norse mythology name of Odin as thunder god. Also a title of Jord, wife of Odin as goddess of earth. Probably originally the name of a sky god and, when Odin replaced him, Fjorgyn (Fjord) was regarded as one of Odin's wives. The name is associated with Old High German Fergunna, a mountain covered with oaks, thus Heaven and Earth, as a divine pair, were venerated on a wooded mountain.

FJORNER In Volsung Saga, Odin as singer of runes to Sigurd of the battle Sigurd is to have with King Lyngre and of Sigurd's victory. Thus song of the sky to the sun.

FLABELLUM (FLABRUM) (1) Fan used in the Greek Church to drive away flies from the chalice during the sacrament. (2) Fan carried before the pope in the Roman Catholic Church. Symbolic of authority.

FLAG Loyalty, nationalism, patriotism, victory. Disperser of evil spirits. Dream significance: change, success. Resolves into ef-el-ag and yields living almighty. Used in Buddhist prayers and as a talisman to bring good luck. Planted outside houses to bring happiness, long life, and prosperity. They are of various types and are called cho-pen, gyal-tsham, lang-po top-gye, lung-ta.

Flag, black. Emblem of pirates. Signifies no quarter given.

Flag, half-mast. A token of respect to one's superior and a symbol of mourning.

Flag hauled down (or hauling down). Defeat, surrender.

Flag, red. Anarchy, auction, danger, defiance, revolution. International banner of the Socialist party.

Flag reversed. Distress.

Flag, white. Surrender, truce.

Flag, white ground with a pine tree. Carried by the first commissioned ships of the colonies at the beginning of the American Revolution.

Flag, yellow. Signal to announce the existence of contagious disease, as on board a ship.

Flag, yellow with rattlesnake on it. Flag of the United States Revolution.

National flag colors:

Nation	Colors
United Nations	blue and white
Afghanistan	black, red and green vertical stripes
Argentina	blue and white
Austria	red, white and red
Belgium	black, yellow and red
Bolivia	red, yellow and green
Brazil	green with yellow diamond and blue ball
Bulgaria	white, green and red Horizontal stripes
Burma	red, blue and white
Ceylon	red and gold
Chili	blue, white and red
China	red and gold
Colombia	yellow, blue and red
Costa Rica	blue, white, red, white and blue in horizontal stripes
Cuba	blue and white in five horizontal stripes with white star on red background
Czechoslovakia	white, red and blue
Denmark	red with white cross
Dominican Republic	red and blue squares formed by white cross
Ecuador	three horizontal stripes of yellow, blue and red, the yellow being twice the width of the other two.
Egypt	green and white
El Salvador	blue and white in three horizontal stripes
Estonia	blue, black and white
Ethiopia	green, yellow and red
Finland	blue cross on white
France	blue, white and red vertical stripes
Germany	(Imperial and Third Reich) black, red and white; (Republican) black, red and gold

National flag colors (cont):

Nation	Colors
Great Britain	red, white and blue
Greece	blue and white in nine horizontal stripes
Guatemala	blue, white and blue in vertical stripes
Haiti	blue and red
Honduras	blue, white and blue horizontal stripes
Hungary	red, white and green
Iceland	blue, red and white
India	red, white and green
Indonesia	red and white
Iran	green, white and red
Iraq	black, white, green and red
Irish Free State	orange, white and green
Israel	white and blue
Italy	green, white and red vertical stripes
Japan	white with red disk in center from which sixteen red rays radiate to edge
Korea	white, black, red and blue
Latvia	red, white, and red
Lebanon	red, white and green
Liberia	eleven red and white horizontal stripes with white star on blue background
Liechtenstein	red and blue
Lithuania	gold, green and red
Luxembourg	red, white and blue
Mexico	green, white and red vertical stripes
Monaco	red and white horizontal stripes
Morocco	red
Nepal	red, white and blue
Netherlands	red, white and blue horizontal stripes
Nicaragua	blue, white and blue horizontal stripes
Norway	red and blue cross bordered with white
Pakistan	white and green
Panama	blue, white and red
Paraguay	red, white and blue horizontal stripes
Peru	red, white and red vertical stripes
Persia	white edged with green and red
Poland	white and red
Portugal	green and white
Rumania	blue, yellow and red vertical stripes
San Marino	blue and white
Saudi Arabia	green and white
Serbia	red, blue and white
Siam	red with white elephant or red, white, blue, white and red stripes
Soviet Russia	red and gold (Imperial Russia was white with St. Andrew's cross)
Spain	red, yellow and red
Sweden	blue with yellow cross
Switzerland	red with white cross
Syria	green, white, black, red

National flag colors (cont):

Nation	Colors
Thailand	red, white, blue, white and red horizontal stripes
Turkey	red with white crescent and star
United States	stars on blue, red and white stripes
Uruguay	blue and white in nine horizontal stripes
Venezuela	yellow, blue and red horizontal stripes
Viet-Nam	yellow and red
Yemen	red and white
Yugoslavia	blue, white, red, and yellow

FLAGA Wicked fairy in Scandinavian legend.

FLAGELLATION Ceremonial scourging to drive out evil spirits, for penance, or to test the endurance of a celebrant in puberty or manhood rites, or for the sexual stimulation of either the person whipping or the person being whipped. To remain stoic during a beating is part of the lore of small boys over the world. During the 13th and 14th centuries an organization existed in Europe, especially in Spain, which was known variously as Brothers of the Cross, Brothers in White, Crossbearers, and Flagellants. It was composed of fanatics who sought to obtain the pardon of sin by walking in procession bared to the waist and scouring themselves or being scourged until blood came. In Mongolia, North China, and Tibet, the lamas, masked, engage in symbolic whippings while performing their devil dances to drive out evil.

FLAGEOLET OF COPPER Buddhist ritual object.

FLAIL Dominion, flogging, rule, sovereignty, threshing grain. In ancient Egypt king's emblem, symbol of power.

FLAME Charity, life force, purification, wisdom. That which is always active, never idle.

Soul, Supreme Spirit. Ancients believed the Supreme Deity was idealized as immaculate fire and symbolized as a pure and elemental flame burning in infinitude. Dream significance: (brilliant) success; (erect) triumph; (out) disillusionment; (red) anger.

In Buddhism form in which Adi-Buddha first revealed himself on Mount Sumeru. In China called huo, symbolic of the yang principle. A flame typified one who successfully passed through the ordeals of earth and had adequately purified his corporeal grossness, hence the soul. Christian way of ascent. Frequently in medieval designs of eight-spoked wheels, the spikes were like flames or thorns. Symbolic of Jesus, martyrdom, religious fervor. In Greek mythology the form assumed by Zeus to reach Danae. In Hebrew tradition form in which God revealed Himself to Moses. In Hinduism Brahm was variously represented as a circular cloud, a fire, or a rose of flame.

Flame issuing from a lotus. In Buddhism the union of fire and water. Form in which Adi-Buddha first revealed himself on Mount Sumeru.

Flame rising from crescent moon. Union of dual forces that create life; male and female principles.

Flaming Bush (Burning Bush). Oracular tree in which Jehovah appeared to Moses, thus presence of God, will and word of God.

Flaming pearl. A Buddhist symbol. See cintamani, lung-ta.

Flaming pillar. God of light; knowledge, light, wisdom.

Flaming sword. Rays of the sun. In Old Testament symbolizes protection.

Flaming tree trunk. God of Light, knowledge, light, wisdom.

FLAMINEO Pimp in The White Devil, play by John Webster.

FLAPPER A girl in her teens, especially if frivolous and worldly-wise. The expression was applied particularly to the typical young women of the Jazz Age in the United States, who bobbed their hair, painted their faces, smoked cigarettes, wore short tight skirts, danced the Black Bottom and Charleston, and generally defied the conventions upheld by their parents.

FLASQUES In heraldry a reward given to a king for learning and virtue.

FLAT LAND Land of reality in contrast to the mountain, mystical realm.

Flat pipe. Palladium of Chinoook Indians representing the Creator or Father of the tribe.

Flat surface. Neutrality, balancing the tendencies of the concave and convex.

FLATTERY Typified by a bee carrying honey in its mouth while its tail displays the sting. In an Italian icon personified by a woman in an affected wanton dress playing a flute. A sleeping buck is at her feet, a bee-hive at her side.

FLAVIUS Masculine name from the Latin, meaning blond or yellow. Feminine form, Flavia.

FLAX August 28 birthday flower symbolizing domestic industry, fate, gratitude, simplicity. In the language of flowers: I feel your kindness.

FLEA Drinker of blood. Mean-ness, parasite, pest, smallness. Foreteller of death; a belief prevails that fleas desert one about to die. Dream significance: unpleasantness, worries; (to kill one) triumph over worries. In Austria and Germany, to be bitten on the hand by a flea is a sign that one is to be kissed. According to Danish tradition sent to pester mankind as a punishment for laziness.

FLEECE In mythology sheep of the sky typify clouds illuminated by the sun.

FLESH Goods, possessions, riches. In China the flesh of P'an Ku became the soil. In Hebrew tradition the body in opposition to the spirit; the carnal and materialistic as opposed to the spiritual. In the Old Testament flesh is sometimes used to express the body as animated and sensitive.

Flesh and blood. Kin.

Thorn in the flesh. Constant annoyance.

Way of all flesh. Death.

FLESHPOTS OF EGYPT Good things of this world, especially if formerly enjoyed but no longer at one's disposal; in allusion to the sufferings of the Israelites in the wilderness.

FLEUR-DE-LIS (LUCE, LYS)

Literally, flower-of-the-lily; sometimes translated from the French as flower-of-light. Symbolic of enlightenment, fecundity, grace, incarnate godhead, light, primal cause, regal beauty, trinity, wisdom. Typifies masculine triad ringed by the female, and was a masculine emblem of fecundity in ancient Arabia, Armenia, Assyria, Byzantium, Egypt, Persia, etc. Sacred plant and tree of life, expressing divine triad or majesty of God, of the Assyrians and Persians, from whom the flower passed on to the West. The world axis in almost every country is surmounted by a fleur-de-lis pointing to the north; also found on needles of ancient mariner's compasses, where it indicates the North Pole. As an emblem of royalty, it replaced the lotus, and frequently is identified as the flower of the lotus which appears in Egyptian and Oriental art and which is the possible source of the heraldic device, best known as the badge of the City of Florence and of the royal family of France. In the arms of France denoted charity, justice, piety. It once appeared on a royal banner of England. Also known as iris. Compare Caduceus, trident. Briefly an emblem of the Chinese Tai-Ki, the origin of all things, with dual yang-yin co-principles. Emblem of Christ as light of the world, dispeller of darkness. Symbolizes purification through baptism, the Trinity, truth, the Way. Replaced the white lily in works of Flemish artists as a symbol of the Virgin. In art an attribute of saints Clotilda and Radegunde.

Fleur-de-lis with twin stars.

The Supreme Deity with the Celestial Twins (Light and Darkness). Emblem of the Boy Scouts.

FLEURETTE Feminine name from the French, meaning flower.

FLIBBERTIGIBBET In British legend, fiend of mopping and mowing.

FLICKERTAIL Emblem of North Dakota.

FLIDAIS In Irish mythology wife of Ailill, mother of Fand. Her cow (fertility, perhaps a rain cloud) supplied milk to three hundred men at one night's milking. She loved Fergus and gave him her cow. She had other cows which fed Ailill's army every seventh day.

FLIGHT Ascent, loftiness, migration, soaring, swiftness; also escape, fear. Dream significance: honor, triumph.

FLINT Dependability, fire, industry, war. Figuratively used to express that which is cruel, hard, obdurate; thus flint-hearted. In heraldry expresses readiness for zealous service. Among primitive peoples believed to contain the hidden power of fire or lightning. In one myth of the Ojibway (Algonquin) Indians Flint Stone was the twin brother of Michabo (light). The feud between them was bitter and they engaged in frightful combat. Michabo vanquished Flint Stone (gloomy storm clouds), broke him into pieces, scattered the pieces over the earth, and from them grew fruitful vines. According to the Aztecs, in the beginning flint stone fell from heaven and broke into sixteen hundred pieces, each of which became a god. Hunpic-tek, Tecpatl, and Toh were Mexican flint-stone gods. The flint presumably came down with the thunderclap, hence were thunderbolts (arrowheads).

Flint knife. Among Central American Indians symbolic of death in war, sacrifice, victim. The flint-stone knife was used to cut the victim in sacrifices.

Flint with hole in it. In Middle Ages hung around a horse's neck to keep it from being hagridden.

FLOCK Pasturage. In mythology clouds illuminated by the sun. See Golden Fleece. A term applied to persons belonging to a church or congregation under the care of a pastor or spiritual guide (shepherd); a company of persons blindly following a leader. In Hebraic-Christian tradition men of God.

FLOOD Cleansing, death and resurrection, judgement, purification, retribution, salvation through destruction, sign of a deity's displeasure, sin, trial by water. The flood incident, world-wide in mythology, typifies the waters encircling the earth over which the sun god, emasculated daily, makes his nightly trip in an ark (golden cup, lotus, waterlily, etc.) to achieve rebirth, or, as in the Hebraic-Christian tradition, an inundation is sent by God to wipe out evil. Some flood heroes are: Deucalion, Manu, Noah. In some creation myths the flood is the water pot from which a first man and first woman emerge. In Eastern European and Western Asiatic tales the earth frequently is supported by a bull, fish, frog, or turtle, and a movement by the great beast or fish causes the flood, which lasts seven days. In one tale, corresponding in most details, Over-god, in secret, chooses a man to build an ark on which is to be invited two of each kind of animal as well as the man's family. The devil instructs the man's wife how to make her husband drunk so that he will reveal his secret, which the wife, in turn, imparts to the devil. When the ark is completed, the devil, in disguise, enters with the wife, or he disturbs the man at his work until he utters the devil's name and thus provides the devil with the right to board the completed ark. Frequently the guise of the devil is that of a mouse who gnaws holes in the ark. In all variations Over-god is compelled to again purify man or to come to his rescue. The man typifies the sun, his wife the moon, the devil darkness.

FLORA Ancient Italian goddess of flowers and spring. A beneficent goddess, she gave aroma to wine, charm to youth, and sweetness to honey, as well as the fragrance to blossoms. A personification of the spring season, she was portrayed as a young woman garlanded with flowers. Her festival, the Florila, was celebrated late in April and early in May with games, mimes and much license. It later became the feast of Saint Philip.

Flora's bell. In the language of flowers: You make no pretension.

FLORENCE (1) Italian city famous in the Renaissance as an art center noted for its gold and silversmiths, painters and sculptors. Dante in the Inferno identifies it as a city that gave up martial valor for money making. Mars was the first patron of Florence. John the Baptist, whose image appeared on the florin, supplanted the god of war. (2) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning blooming, flourishing. Also Flo, Florrie, Flossie.

FLORIAN Masculine name from Old Teutonic, meaning flowering.

FLORIDA Its emblem is the orange blossom; its motto, In God we trust; its nicknames, Everglade State, Land of Flowers, Live Oak, Peninsular.

FLORIMEL Literally, honey-flower. In Spenser's Faerie Queene a character typifying woman's delicacy and sweetness.

FLORISMART A paladin of Charlemagne; bosom friend of Roland.

FLOSSHILDA In Wagner's Ring one of the three Rhine-daughters guarding the Nibelungen Hoard. She does not appear in early mythology.

FLOWER Beauty, birth, charm, cheerfulness, communication, creation, felicitations, festivity, fruition, gentility, goodness (as opposed to briar and thorn), happiness, homage, hope, marriage, message of love, mystery, purity, regeneration, spring season, star, sweetness, symmetry, tenderness, victory, virtue, worldly delight; also death, delicacy, evanescence, frailty. A form of Satan, hence temptation. Dream significance: joy, love; (faded) disappointed hope; (in garden) rural life; (given) friendship; (received) kindness; (red) recovery from illness; (white) death. Flower derives from fleur, which yields living lord of fire. See under individual flower names, also compare fruit. In Buddhist tradition, when Buddhas discourse, flowers fall from the sky. A flower is one of the seven offerings, and is symbolic of hospitality. In Christianity flowers typify the results of good works. Emblematic of charity; step in the search for the Sangraal or step on the Ways of Ascent. In Japan a bride is called flower-daughter by her husband's family; noble ladies at court are called flower-maidens; blue, white, or yellow flowers are classified as feminine; pink, purple, or red flowers are classified as masculine. Any flower is regarded a truth-seeker. Floral arrangements constitute a sacred rite as well as express a love of the beautiful. Certain arrangements are intended to suggest a glorification of the Creator and to confer on votaries various virtues. The chief are:

Arrangement	Confers
chobo furyu	constant gentleness of character
dokuraku katarazu	amusement in solitude
mui-tanen	forgetfulness of cares and serenity
sawaku ribetsu	restraint and self-abnegation
seikon gyojo	health of body and mind shimbutsu haizo	religious spirit
shujin aikyo	respect of mankind
somoku meichi	familiarity with the nature of plants and trees

Others are: ashirai or one-flower arrangement; moribana, meaning to pile-up flowers; the sunamono rikkwa, meaning the sandwork standing-up arrangement. Five lineal arrangements represent the five elements, five orders of Japanese versification, five virtues. The hanging-boat arrangement symbolizes a voyage, the direction of the oars or prow indicates whether the trip is homeward or outward bound. A natural arrangement, called na-geire (thrown in), is used in tea rooms. The New Year favorite is the sho-chiku-bai, triad of bamboo, pine, and plumb branch, combined to express enduring happiness. Separately the bamboo expresses wishes for longevity and strength, the pine for prosperity, the plumb for beauty. Wisteria and other branches also are used occasionally in New Year celebrations. The rikkwa or standing up flowers are placed as temple ornaments. The tips of the branches and the flowers point upward to indicate faith. The ten virtue arrangements are:

1- Affection; a bronze basin containing a pine branch entwined by wisteria. 2- Aspiration; a vessel of decayed wood containing a climbing creeper. 3- Austerity; eularia japonica and patrinia scabiosifolia in a small bronze bowl. 4- Brightness; lespedeza flowers in a bronze vase engraved with wild geese flying across a full moon. 5- Chastity; maple branch in a large vase engraved with rain. 6- Quaintness; a hooked vessel of gourd shape holding small chrysanthemums. 7- Security; water plant in a bronze vase engraved with a spider web. 8- Serenity; a suspended bronze boat bearing white chrysanthemums. 9- Simplicity; irises and rushes in a two-story bamboo vase. 10- Veneration; evergreen branch in a bronze vase engraved with a crane. Three lineal arrangements represent heaven at the highest level, man at the middle level, earth at the lowest level. Flowers overshadowed by another flower or leaf are classified as feminine. The seven felicitous flowers of Japan are: cherry, chrysanthemum, maple, narcissus, peony, rhodea, wisteria. Iris also ranks high, and sometimes is used for felicitous occasions. The sakaki (Cleyera japonica) is a sacred tree, and arrangements of it are used in Japan as Buddhist offerings. The alcove in a Japanese home where floral arrangements are displayed is called Toko-noma. At betrothals flowers felicitous to the particular season must be used. Although purple iris in season is suitable, some people object to it because purple is a mourning color. When a bride is adopted into a groom's family, being regarded as the guest of the occasion, the principal floral design should be of white (female), while the supporting design should be of red (male); when the groom is adopted into the bride's family, the floral color stresses are reversed. In both cases the stems of the flowers are connected with colored cords (mizuhiki) to signify union. The bamboo and pine are particularly auspicious. Willow and other drooping plants are prohibited because they signify sorrow.

Basket of flowers. Beauty, decoration, festivity, spring season. In China called hua lang, emblem of Lan Tsai Ho, one of the Eight Immortals.

Birthday flowers. See under birthday.

Cruciform flowers. Christian emblem of good luck, sign of the cross.

Festival of flowers. Universally a spring celebration. Rebirth. In China celebrated on the 12th day of the 2nd moon. Every woman supposedly is represented in the other world by a flower or tree. During the flower festival women address laudatory statements to the gods and prostrate themselves that a fruitful season may be assured. In Japan the flower festivals number five: 1- Go-sekku, celebrated the seventh day of the New Year. Also called Nan-kusa, i.e. fete of the seven grasses. Of Chinese origin it is connected with the idea of luck in the number seven. Seven different herbs are struck with seven different household tools and divine protection is invoked. 2- Fete of Dolls, celebrated third day, third month. A national celebration for girls, at which images of the emperor and empress and courtiers are displayed. The flowers for the occasion are cherry and peach blossoms and willow branches. 3- Fete for boys, celebrated fifth day, fifth month. Each male child is entitled to float in the wind a paper fish on a bamboo pole. The flowers for the occasion are an early chrysanthemum, the iris and the moso-chiku (a kind of bamboo). 4- Tanabata fete, seventh day, seventh month. A day of good omen. The bamboo is the favorite flower. Two bronze boats, called facing boats because their prows face each others, are suspended. They are filled with paper chrysanthemums of seven different colors. One real chrysanthemum should be among them. Blue, purple, red, white, and yellow cords, associated with the idea of worshipping stars, should be tied to the streamer of the design. 5- Chrysanthemum fete, ninth day, ninth month. Of Chinese origin, it is connected with the idea that this flower imparts long life to those who imbibe its blossoms in wine. Chrysanthemums of five different colors are employed: white for the principal, light red for the secondary, dark red for the tertiary, blue or purple for the subprincipal, yellow for the support Flower blanket. Death.

Flower blooming twice in the same year. In Japan, returning flower. Used at farewell gatherings to express hope for a safe return. Also used at feasts before a battle or campaign.

Flower de luce. December 4 birthday flower. In the language of flowers: I am burning with love.

Flower-of-an-hour. August 29 birthday flower. Symbolic of delicate beauty, frailty.

Flower of the month. Flowers and Japan.

Month	China	Japan
January	prunus	pine
February	peach blossom	plumb blossom
March	tree peony	peach blossom
April	cherry blossom	cherry blossom
May	magnolia	wisteria
June	pomegranate	iris
July	lotus	morning glory
August	pear blossom	lotus
September	mallow	seven grasses (herbs)
October	chrysanthemum	maple
November	gardenia	chrysanthemum
December	poppy	camellia

Flowers scattered. Joys, pleasures.

Flower vase. In China called hua p'ing; symbolizes maintenance of peace.

Flower wreath. Death, homage, victory.

Red flower. Love, passion.

White flower. Innocence, purity, virginity. Also typifies foam milk, love, sexual intercourse. Emblem of heroism, valor.

Sometimes signifies death: Attribute of Artemis, Diana, Freyja, Hera, Juno, Virgin Mary.

FLOYD Masculine name, variant of Lloyd.

FLUELLEN One who draws an incorrect parallelism with intent to flatter, alluding to the Welsh captain and pedant in Shakespeare's Henry V.

FLUID Anciently a symbol of immortality. In Assyria, Babylonia, Greece, etc., the divine fluid usually was conceived as wine. In Egypt a fluid of some sort was provided to the dead.

FLUORSPAR Lonely sorrow. Also called false emerald, false ruby, false topaz, according to the color of the mineral.

FLUTE Love, pastoral music, phallus, wind. Widely honored as a phallic symbol with magic influence over fertility, life renewal, and procreation. For this reason played at betrothals, courtships, and weddings as well as at circumcision, fertility, funeral, healing, initiation, and sacrificial rites. Sometimes buried with the dead as a talisman for new life. Carried or worn as an amulet.

Aztecs used the flute to summon the god Tezcatlipoca. In Babylonia, China, and Japan used in religious ceremonies; sometimes to summon deities, sometimes to mourn the loss of the fertility god. In Chinese art emblem of Han Hsiang-tzu, one of the Eight Immortals. In Greek art an emblem of Dionysus as player of ecstatic, mad music, and of Euterpe, muse of harmony. Also an attribute of Apollo, Marsyas.

Flute dance. Hopi Indian autumn festival dance; harvest rite.

Flutist (or pipe player). The wind. An aspect of Adonis, angels, Apollo, Attis, Hermes, Marsyas, Tezcatlipoca as fertilizers.

FLY (INSECT) Annoyance, courage, feebleness, filth, meanness, pestiness, plague, trouble. Dream significance: teasing. The constellation Musca Borealis. In Christian tradition, bearer of evil and pestilence; sin leading to redemption. In Hebrew antiquity declared unclean, and one, supposedly, never appeared in Solomon's temple. Plagues of flies had caused sections of the Levant to become depopulated, the inhabitants having been unable to stand their incessant attacks. Invading armies of Assyria and Egypt were symbolized as flies. Japanese insect of the fifth moon. In Norse mythology a form assumed by Loki to sting and suck the blood of those he wished to torment.

Fly god. Canaanites and Philistines worshiped Beelzebub, the fly-god, probably as a patron who might offer protection against the tiny tormentor. See Demons of black magic. In Greek antiquity an ox was sacrificed annually at the temple of Actium to Zeus, surnamed Apomyios, averter of flies. In Rome sacrifices were offered to flies in the temple of Hercules Victor, and Syrians also offered sacrifices to the pest with a plea to be saved from their torment.

Fly in amber. That which is immortal, imperishable, or surprisingly out of place.

Fly in the ointment. A Biblical phrase meaning a small thing or trifling cause that spoils greater or larger things; folly. An unpleasant or undesirable element in something choice or precious.

Fly on coach-wheel. A fancied creator or leader; one who fancies himself to be important. From Aesop's fable of the fly on the chariot wheel.

Fly whisk. Buddhist emblem of authority, might, protection, superiority; also subjugation. In Sanscrit called camara. In China called ch'en wei or ying-shua. An instrument of magic.

FLY (MOVEMENT) Height, swiftness.

Fly-by-night. A fraud; one who cheats his creditors by decamping without warning at night.

Fly high. Nurse extravagant ambitions.

Make feathers (or fur) fly. Attack another vigorously and with effect.

Rise to the fly. Be deceived, be taken in, as the trout rises and is taken in by the artificial fly of the fisherman.

FLYING DUTCHMAN A phantom or spectral ship, which supposedly is seen in bad weather trying to round the Cape of Good Hope. Portends bad luck. From a legend of a Dutch sea captain who, encountering head winds while trying to round the Cape, blasphemously swore that he would succeed if it took till Judgment Day. For this pact with the devil, he is condemned to sail his ghost ship until the Day of Judgment. His crew is composed of dead men who stand to their tasks but will not answer questions. Compare Carmilhan.

Flying Fish. Constellation in the Southern Sky also called Volans or Piscis Volans.

Flying Horse. A constellation in the Northern Sky; also called Pegasus. In mythology typifies clouds, winds, or steeds of the sun.

FLY-ORCHIS BLOOM June 16 birthday flower symbolizing error.

FO (FOH, O-FO) Chinese supreme god; a fire or sun god. Name applied to Sakyamuni (Buddha) when represented in attitude of meditation, seated on a lotus blossom, or about to enter Nirvana, as the name signifies sleeping one. Also applied to the dog-like figure in Chinese decoration.

FOAM In early primitive thought wind caused water set in motion to bubble and foam; from the foam sprang the first gods and goddesses or the multiplying lotus blooms from which the gods of the East sprang. Identified with body moisture, as milk, semen, saliva, tears.

Foam Woman. Tribal ancestress of the Raven clan of Haida Indians. She is said to have the power of driving back all supernatural beings with the lightnings of her eyes. She had many breasts and at each nourished a grandmother of a family. Parallels Diana of Ephesus.

FO-HI In Chinese legend Moyē was walking along a river bank one day when she became encircled by a rainbow. At the end of twelve years she gave birth to Fo-hi. During gestation she dreamed that she was pregnant with a white elephant. According to some the honors paid to the elephant in the East date from this legend. The white elephant is an attribute of Sakyamuni (Buddha), which is called Fo in China.

FOIL STRIPS In Japan offerings to ward off evil. Called gohei.

FOLAND (PHALAND, VALLAND)
Norse celestial smith. Compares with Hephaestus and Vulcan.

FOLIA A Portuguese fertility dance which became a couple dance in France, Italy, and Spain. The name means madness and in its original form it had a furious tempo. Sometimes maked boys, dressed as women, were carried or whirled and played castanets; a vestige of ancient fertility symbolism. The dance was accompanied by the flute.

FOLLY Personified in an Italian icon as a mature man in a long black garment, laughing, riding a hobby-horse, and holding a whirligig of pasteboard.

FOMALHAUT One of the four royal stars. Located in Piscis Austrinus (Southern Fish). The ancients divided the heavens into four parts or colures; each part was guarded by a star. Name means mouth of large fish.

FOMHAIR (FAMHAIR, FOMHAIR-EAN) Scottish fate deity. A rude mountain giant. The Fomhaireans were so powerful they tossed boulders at one another. Also deities of darkness, death, and the sea, and identical with the Irish Fomors.

FOMOR (FOMORIAN) Literally, giant or pirate. In Irish mythology one of a race of sea robbers who raided and pillaged Ireland from the sea. Probably originally gods representing powers of darkness and evil, who dwelt in the ocean while they kept all Ireland under tribute. Personifications of nature powers which challenge man: crop blight, disease, fog, storm, winter. Their exploits appear to be a combination of historical events and legends. On Samhain they oppressed the people of Nemed with a terrible tax, they battled the heroes over whom Conchobar ruled; finally at the battle of Mag Tured, they were defeated by the Tuatha De Danann, deities of light. In some accounts they are said to be descendants of Ham and, like Cessair, a descendant of Noah, who migrated to Ireland, where in a battle they all perished. The Fomors may have been pre-Celtic gods of fertility, which later degenerated into demons of darkness, death, and the deep sea. They were huge and deformed; some had one arm or one leg a piece, while others had the head of a bull, goat or horse. The most terrible was Balor. However, Elatha, one of their number, was renowned for his beauty. Also called Domnu's gods. Identical with the Fomhairs. See Firbolgs.

FONS BANDUSIAE Fountain or spring at Bandusia, near the birthplace of Horace, who celebrated it in one of his odes; thus a source of inspiration.

FONT Initiation, purification, rebirth, sacrament. Place of baptism. Christian baptismal fonts are eight-sided to signify new creation, the octave of life, regeneration. See Eight.

FOO (FO) Japanese name for the phoenix, which see. Other names are Ho, Hobo, Howo, O. Also a name for Buddha. Identical with Chinese Fo.

FOOD Mental or spiritual nourishment.

Food for powder. Common soldiers.

Food sharing. Friendship, kinship, pledge for good behavior. Among primitive races the idea existed that the breaking of bread, partaking of food, or the sharing of wine with a stranger created a covenant, established kinship, and guaranteed that no mischief would be devised by one against the other. Thus neither Iobates nor Proetus would kill Bellerophon. The same reasons governed the mythological law that drinking or eating in the underworld bound one to that realm, and Persephone, who ate a seed of the pomegranate offered to her by Pluto, was compelled to return each autumn. See Eating.

Food taboo. A mythological law governing immortality. The breaking of the taboo brings death, as in the case of Adam and Eve. In most religions animals or parts of animals sacred to a deity are taboo except at celebrations honoring the deity. The boar, sacred to early Semitic deities, was a taboo food. The present taboo among Jews probably dates back to this ancient law.

Food taboo in the underworld.

By partaking of food or drink in the land of the dead the partaker becomes kin to or one with the dwellers in that land and in unable to leave or return to the land of the living. This motif appears in the stories of Izanami and Persephone. Proscription against drinking or eating in the land of the dead on pain of being detained there forever is the peg on which is hung the poetical description of decay of vegetation in autumn and its rebirth in spring.

Red food. In Greek antiquity provided to dead heroes. Crayfish, lobsters, scarlet berries and fruits, etc., were taboo except at a feast in honor of the dead.

FOOL (1) One who is the butt or victim, a plaything or tool. One who does not follow the dictates or requirements of his society. One, according to some religious interpreters, without spiritual wisdom; one who is wicked. Hence a heretic or scoffer. Fool also is understood to mean innocence, and the word booby is identical with baby. Compare fou. The fool is identified with sun worship. The sun deity has spells in which he is mad or foolish, i.e. wantonly destroys with intense heat, or is foolish and suffers a wrong daily, i.e. death at the hands of night, an affliction necessary for rebirth. In fairytales and folklore the fool is the long-suffering one who is eventually victorious. This conception appears in Christianity. Paul says, "If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool that he may be wise, for wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." Jesus sometimes is depicted as a fool. The fools or jesters, persons fantastically dressed and equipped, once a part of a great household, where they were expected to make sport, used their positions and their wits to disseminate their doctrines, sometimes insidious from the point of view of their lords. Troubadours, playing the fool, fanned the fire against Rome. The court jester and the singing troubadour developed into the present day stage comic. In Japan a fool is represented by a horse and stag. (2) Card in tarot deck illustrated by a tramp or vagabond carrying his ridicules and vices in his sack and followed by a dog, which bites him; meaning atonement for irresponsibility. Some mystics identify the card with Christ, who must suffer for redemption. The Fool walks toward a precipice where a crocodile waits to devour him, i.e. one's ungoverned passions lead to destruction. As a Christ symbol the means of death which leads to rebirth. This compares with Daniel in the lion's den and Jonah in the whale's belly. The emblems of the Fool are a purse and staff; also attributes of Christ. Other names of the card are Mate (checkmate) and Unwise Man. The card typifies intellect subordinate to superconsciousness; spirit in search of adventure. The Fool brings good luck and news. In divination the card corresponds to number one and the Hebrew letter aleph. It denotes cosmic life-breath about to descend into the abyss of manifestation, primary aspect of universal consciousness, state of first emanation. It reveals: atonement, chance, eccentricity, folly, frenzy, irresponsibility, luck, uncertainty. Identified with the joker in a modern deck.

All Fool's Day. April Fool's Day. See under April first.

Court fool. Jester in the retinue of a noble. See Fool's cap.

Fool's cap. (1) A grotesque pointed cap decorated with bells and worn by court jesters, who were the butts of ridicule at court, thus one who suffered wrongs daily. It became a wide-spread symbol of believers in Christ, who were determined to suffer wrongs gladly, to be fools for Christ's sake, and foolscap was adopted as the name of a writing paper on which the device frequently appeared. (2) A conical paper cap placed on students in school as a punishment for poor lessons; a dunce's cap.

Fool's Festival. See Feast of Fools under Feast.

Fool-happy. Lucky without exercising judgement.

Fool hen. A game bird noted for stupidity in the presence of a hunter.

Fool's paradise. Fancied or unstable bliss, a state of deceptive bliss or happiness founded on vain hopes; the limbo of vanities. From limbus fatuorum (borderland of fools), which medieval schoolmasters identified as the intermediary between heaven and hell and the final abode of the foolish because they were blameless.

Fool plow. A rustic pageant in which merrymakers dragged a plow. A fertility rite.

Fool sage. A court jester.

Guild fools. Like jesters and troubadours, in medieval times they played an important part in spreading a knowledge of literature and in educating the populace; sometimes the knowledge they spread was regarded as heretical or treasonous. They formed one branch of the troubadour organization and traveled throughout Europe.

FOOT Danger, homage, humility, measure, memorial, subjugation, travel, treading, willingness to serve. Also bottom, lowest point, meanest. Danger alludes to the precipitous and treacherous roads over which ancient peoples traveled by foot and on which a sliding foot was fatal; homage alludes to the custom of kissing the foot of a monarch, which derived from the ancient practice of washing the feet of strangers who came off a journey, because they commonly walked with their legs bare and their feet protected only by sandals. In mythology typifies the rays of the sun or moon. Dream significance: (cut off) damages, pain; (diseased) affairs going well; (soiled) bothers, tribulations. A mythological incident treats of a hero who has married an immortal and has lived in an enchanted land for hundreds of years as if for a day. Becoming homesick he rides to his native land and, although warned not to let his foot touch the ground, he does so either accidentally or deliberately; his enchantment is broken, and he finds himself a shriveled old man whose kinfolk are all dead. The returning hero is the sun whose sacred foot must not touch the ground; when it does death follows (the sun sets). The sun is mortal inasmuch as he dies each day or each winter season. Universally the foot is a place of magic power. Achilles, Diarmuid, Harpocrates, Mopsus had sacred feet or heels. In the legend of Arianrhod, Gwydion obtains a name for their son as he holds or controls her foot. Buddha had the magic wheel imprint on his feet. Sacred footprints are worshiped in Arabia, Ceylon, and India. In the Cinderella story she is found by the Prince by means of her slipper. While still in his mother's womb Jacob supplanted his twin Esau by catching his heel and draining him of his royal virtue. The magic of Math rests in his foot. To trip one up is a way of overcoming another by means of the foot. In ancient art the left foot subdues or tramples the power of evil. In medieval times the foot of a criminal was cut off. See Bhṛigu, bull's foot, dance with a limp, feet, gestures, shoes. A foot is the American Indian hieroglyph meaning go. Ancient Greeks believed to start with the left foot brought ill luck. In Hebrew tradition a bare foot is a sign of mourning and respect. In Java the rice spirit is offended if one enters a rice store left foot first. A Moslem enters a house or mosque right foot first to show he enters in peace. Moslems and other peoples of the East remove their shoes as a mark of respect.

Bound hand and foot. Fettered by circumstances; strictly controlled.

Cloven foot. Devil, evil, sin.
Foot crushing a butterfly.

Death.

Footprint. Existence, measure, movement, pilgrimage. In mythology signifies the dancing, running, or walking of the heavens. The mark of the foot left in ashes, earth, sand, etc. is widely believed to be a body impression by which magic can be worked on a person. Australian aborigines believe that, by placing broken glass or sharp stones in the footprint of an enemy, he can be lamed. In Burma and India sores of the feet are attributed to magic worked on one's footprint by an enemy or witch. Insects which obliterate the tracks of hunters and warriors are revered by primitive peoples. In many religions a footprint is a holy impression indicating good fortune. It is also a memorial of the dead, i. e. "footprint on the sands of time." The dog of King Arthur, Heracles, Isis, Siva, Vishnu have supposedly left their footprints. The cavity on a mountain in Ceylon is said by the Buddhists to be a footprint of Buddha, by the Hindus to be a footprint of Siva, by the Moslems to be a footprint of Adam. Finno-Ugrics cover up with ashes the footmarks of a funeral procession to prevent the corpse from finding his way back.

Footprint in ashes. Used for purposes of divination or sor-tilege.

Footprint in stone. A divinity mark. In modern times, the footprint of a celebrity is placed in cement; after the person falls from fame the footprint is erased.

Foot race. Competition. In mythology suggests the gods chasing one another (the flight of time across the sky) or the gods as mighty hunters (of time). Gods and heroes are described as swift of foot.

Footstool of God. Earth.

One foot on land or in water.

Cosmic mind; deity manifestation.

Sacred foot. Foot of a moon, sun or other celestial deity, which must not touch the ground; when it does death follows, i. e. the moon or sun sets.

FOPPINGTON An empty headed coxcomb; from a character invented by Vanbrugh and used in comedies by Cibber and Sheridan.

FORBIDDEN CHAMBER A room of danger; found in folk legend, as in the Bluebeard story.

Forbidden city. (1) Lhasa in Tibet, so called because the lamas are hostile to visitors other than pilgrims. (2) A section of Peking where the imperial palace formerly was closed to the general public.

Forbidden fruit (or tree). Unlawful indulgence. A concept traced to the passages in Genesis on the Garden of Eden where Adam and Eve were prohibited from eating the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. The fruit is variously said to be an apple or a fig. In Moslem tradition the forbidden fruit was the banana or fig.

Forbidden land. Tibet, which excludes foreigners.

FORCE Typified by a lion. Force manifesting itself is represented by an explosion, light, radiating lines. Force vanquished by wisdom is shown by a lion with its head bowed and its neck pierced by a caduceus.

Force of eloquence. Typified in an Italian icon by a woman gravely dressed holding Mercury's caduceus. A lion is under her feet, thus physical strength succumbs to eloquence or reason.

Force of justice. Typified in an Italian icon by a woman in a royal dress. She wears a crown and with her hand on a sword is about to sit on the back of a lion.

Force of love. Typified in an Italian icon by a naked boy who resembles a winged Cupid. He holds a dolphin in one hand and a garland of flowers in the other to show the power of love on sea and land.

Force of virtue. Typified in an Italian icon by a handsome young Bellerophon on Pegasus. With his spear he kills Chimera, which symbolizes vice.

FOREHEAD Knowledge, piety, possession, wisdom. Anciently slaves were branded on the forehead. In the East devotees of different deities received the mark of the adored god on the forehead. In the Roman Catholic Church penitents receive a dab of ashes on the forehead on Ash Wednesday. According to the occultists, if broad, intelligence; if flattened, brutality, criminality; if high, intellectuality; if low, small intelligence; if narrow but prominent, energetic, enterprising; if retreating, egotism, weakness; if round, gentleness; if too large, laborious but solid memory; if too long, cruel, suspicious, vindictive; if too wide, a tendency to anger.

FORESE DONATI A glutton. Mentioned by Dante in the Inferno.

FOREST Brigandage, darkness, hiding, hunting. Abode of man in his state of innocence, and universally in mythology a realm of supernatural spirits. Hebrew symbol of kingdom.

Forest spirits. According to Finno-Ugrics the souls of sacred bears, other animals, and those who die in the forest. Sometimes they are friendly, sometimes they cause wanderers to lose their way, to die of exposure, or to dance with them and then tickle them to death. Their hats are made of pine needles, their mantles are blue, and their beards are of leaves, thus they are nature spirits, personifications of light (or darkness), cold, wind, etc. In Pacific Island myths the forest spirit separated the sky-god from the earth-goddess, originally one deity, or two in perpetual copulation.

Forest of suicides. In Dante's Inferno a region of poisonous and withered trees, among which the Harpies cry.

FORETHOUGHT Represented by an ant, squirrel, a scrip. Personified by Pronoia.

FORGALL In Irish mythology surnamed The Wily. Father of Emer. To separate the sun-hero Cuchulainn from his daughter Emer, Forgall requested the hero to visit Scathach, the Amazon, and learn her warrior craft, confident that Cuchulainn would meet his death at the hands of Scathach.

Cuchulainn accomplished his mission and, when he returned, he killed Forgall (darkness) and married Emer (dawn).

FORGE Brain; a hammering blacksmith symbolizes thought.

FORGET-ME-NOT Exchanged by friends on February 29. Also given to those starting out on a journey on that day. Symbolic of constancy, remembrance, true love. Believed to cure the bites of mad dogs and serpents; in Siberia used in the treatment of syphilis. Emblem of Alaska.

FORGOTTEN MAN A popular term meaning the typical man of small income, especially if unemployed. Its origin goes back to the 19th century, but during the depression of the 1930's, by using it in his presidential campaigns, Franklin D. Roosevelt revived the popularity of the phrase.

FORK Implement of torture; spitefulness.

Hay fork. Harvest.

Three-tined fork. A trident, which see.

Two-pronged fork. An attribute of Hades, thus symbolizes death.

FORLORN HOPE A small body of soldiers sacrificed for the main body of the army; from the Dutch verloren hoop (lost troop). Hence a project or task practically impossible of fulfillment or realization. In French rendered as enfants perdus (lost children) and in German as verlorene Posten (lost post or assignment).

FORNAX (1) Roman goddess of the oven, her name being a generic term for furnace. Patroness of bakers. Identical with Vesta. (2) Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as the Furnace.

Fornacalia. Annual festival of Fornax celebrated in February.

FORNICATION A fertility rite connected with ancient temples and practiced in fields as an act of sympathetic magic to excite the growth of abundant crops. In Old Testament used figuratively for idolatry.

FORNJOT (FORNJOTR) Early Finnish or Norse storm giant. Father of Hler (Aegir), god of the deep; of Kaare, the wind, and of Loge, the flame.

FORSETI (FORSETE) In Norse mythology, son of Balder (Light) by Nanna (Purity). Forseti was the wisest and most eloquent of the Aesir. He was god of justice, conciliator and peacemaker; all disputants who consulted his tribunal departed reconciled. He was lawgiver as well as patron of righteousness. None dared to break a vow made to him on penalty of instant death. His mansion was the radiant Glitner (glittering). Helgoland was once known as his land.

FORSYTHIA Spring flower with golden blossoms (golden bells) which Chinese kings placed on the heads of scholars who successfully passed civil examinations which entitled them to official rank.

FORTIFICATION Defense, might. Fort, from the Latin fortis (strong), equates with ford, frequently found in place names, as Bedford, Romford. Forts in Canada and the United States indicated Indian trading posts, which were usually fortified.

Fortification agate. Stability.

Fortitude. One of the four cardinal virtues. Symbolized by the perpendicular.

FORTUNA Early Italian goddess. Originally a nature goddess who shaped the harvest and the destinies of women in childbirth. Later she was the incorporated will of the gods, and as a goddess of chance and good fortune, she was assimilated with the Greek Tyche. Fortuna usually is represented as blind standing on a ball, globe, or wheel to indicate the mutability of her favors. She holds a cornucopia in one hand while she strews luck with the other. Sometimes she is shown with a revolving wheel. The wheel, which now is interpreted to be a symbol of chance, once may have symbolized the turning year, in which case Fortuna would resemble Nemesis. Fortuna was worshiped under various names. As Bona or Fortuna Virgo and Fortuna Muliebris, she was goddess of chastity and womanhood; as Fors Fortuna, she was goddess of chance; as Fortuna Navirilis, goddess of manhood; as Fortuna Primigenia, she was the first daughter of Jupiter; as Fortuna Redux, she was goddess of the fortune that leads back, commemorating the return of Augustus in 19 B. C. In Etruria, she was worshiped as Nortia or Nurtia. Her festival was celebrated in October. Compare Felicitas.

FORTUNATE ISLES Originally, imaginary islands in the western ocean (other world) where the souls of the virtuous lived in eternal bliss. The isles were ruled by Queen Truth, daughter of Time. Some attempt to identify the islands with Canary or Madeira Islands. Also called Islands of the Blessed, Happy Islands.

FORTUNATUS One who possesses a magic purse which brings about his ruin. Fortunatus is the hero of a medieval European folktale derived from Eastern sources. He is on the brink of starvation when Fortune asks him to choose between beauty, health, riches, strength, and wisdom, and he selects the gift of riches. Fortune gives him an inexhaustible purse and a wishing cap that transports him anywhere he desires to go, but his gifts are disastrous.

FORTUNE A fictitious power, often personified, that arbitrarily or capriciously distributes good or ill-luck. Colloquially, an heir or possessor of great wealth, as, she is a great fortune.

FORTUNIO The heroine of several fairytales. Disguised, she goes into military service in place of her father and, aided by a fairy, has marvelous adventures.

FORTY According to mystics a person whose name corresponds to the number forty is hot tempered, thrifty, and loves to travel. Physical weak spot: blood circulation. In the cabala characteristics are: considerateness, honorableness, love of letters, somberness; in low form: given to disputes, opposition, strife. Alchemists looked on forty days as the charmed period when the philosopher's stone and elixir of life were to appear. Ancient physicians ascribed strange changes to the period of forty days. A widow once was given a space of forty days in which to dwell unmolested in her deceased husband's house. A merchant coming from an infected port remained on shipboard for forty days to clear himself. The word quarantine is from the Latin quadraginta, forty. In Old English law forty days was the limit for the payment of the fine for manslaughter; a newly-made burgess forfeited forty pence unless he built a house within forty days; a knight enjoined forty days service from his tenant; the privilege of sanctuary was for forty days; a stranger at the expiration of forty days was compelled to be enrolled in some tithing. Bulgars excluded a mother from social cultus for forty days after the birth of a son; eighty days (twice forty), after the birth of a daughter. This period of purification also was practiced by Jews, Mayans, and other peoples. Rites frequently are performed on the fortieth day after burial, or the dead are mourned for forty days. Christ fasted for forty days in the desert, he preached for forty months, and he remained in the tomb for forty hours. The days between the resurrection and ascension of Jesus were forty, hence the interval between Easter and Ascension Sunday. Lent is a forty-day fast, and also is known as fare la quarantine. Jerusalem was destroyed by the Romans forty years after the ascension of Christ. Saint Swithin declares forty days of dry or rainy weather. In the Roman Catholic Church a service of special devotion in honor of the Blessed Sacrament lasts forty hours, during which the Host is exposed in the monstrance on the high altar, attended continuously by acolytes and priests in prayer. Greeks of antiquity regarded forty years as the acme or height of a man's life. In Hebrew tradition forty symbolizes probation; spiritual purification, especially after childbirth; and trial. Forty and multiples thereof are of frequent occurrence in Scripture, and forty formerly was treated as sacrosanct. The rain of the deluge fell for forty days; another forty days expired before Noah opened the window of the ark; Elijah was fed by ravens for forty days; Esau and Isaac married at the age of forty, the age at which ancient Semites believed a man attained full manhood; Ezekiel had to lay on his right side for forty days to repent the forty years of sins of Judah; Goliath challenged the Israelitish army for forty days; forty days were employed in embalming Jacob's body; Moses was forty days on the mount; Nineveh had forty days to repent; the Israelites wandered forty years (probably symbolizing a generation) in the wilderness. Forty is an Islamic death number; the number of days of mourning, and the number of years the evil dead suffer in hell. Forty days before a person's death, a leaf falls from a certain mystic tree in Azriel's lap. The sound of the trumpet at the period of resurrection will sound for forty years. Mohammed received his call as a prophet at the age of forty.

Forty-eight. According to the mystics one whose name corresponds to the number is affectionate, faithful, pleasure loving, a prophetic dreamer and psychic. Physical weak spot is the throat. According to cabala: affection, sincerity; in low form: inconstancy, love of luxury. In Buddhism the primal vows of Amita-Buddha for the salvation of all were forty-eight.

Forty-five. According to mystics one whose name corresponds to the number has a facility in learning, love of instructing, unity. Physical weak spots: digestive organs. According to cabala, the traits are as above; in low form: false projects, revolution. Forty-five is a term applied to the second Scottish Jacobite uprising, which took place in 1745.

Forty-four. According to mystics one whose name corresponds to the number is brave and successful, loves military life. Physical weak spots: blood stream and stomach. According to the cabala the traits are: bravery and one distinguished for military talent; in low form: domineering, imagining one's self distinguished, war loving.

Forty Immortals. The forty members of the French Academy, supposedly the most distinguished living men of letters. Sometimes applied to the members of the English Royal Academy.

Forty-nine. According to mystics one whose name corresponds to the number is diplomatic, enjoys feasts, generous, loves law and literature. Physical weak spot: the blood stream. According to cabala; traits are as above; in low form: egotistic, hypocritical. The term forty-niner is applied to those adventurers and pioneers who sought gold in California, after the discovery there in 1849. They are also called argonauts of '49, thus comparing them with the ancient Greek heroes who sought the Golden Fleece.

Forty-one. According to mystics one whose name corresponds to the number is energetic, religious, versatile. Physical weak spot: liver. According to the cabala; diplomatic, politically inclined; in low form: apostates, renegades.

Forty-seven. According to mystics, one whose name corresponds to the number is agreeable, in danger from water and multitudes of people, philosophical, successful in money matters. Physical weak spot: nerves. According to the cabala: agreeable, dominates justice, quick, vigilant. In low form: immoral, scandalous.

Forty-seven Ronin. In Japanese legend the samurai attached to lord Asano, who committed hari-kiri at government command for attacking Hira Kotosuki-no-suke. After avenging the death of Asano by placing the head of Hira Kotosuki on Asano's tomb, the Forty-seven, also by command, committed hara-kiri and were buried in front of Asano's tomb. Thus faithful followers, also outcasts who inspire fear. Ronin means leaderless men.

Forty-seventh problem of Euclid. In Freemasonry symbolizes love of the arts and sciences.

Forty-six. According to mystics, one whose name corresponds to the number is discrete, flexible, idealistic, psychic. Physical weak spot: lungs. According to cabala: discrete, power to see in dreams, subtle; in low form: discontent, displeasure, dissatisfaction, ennui.

Forty stripes save one. By Mosaic law Jews were forbidden to inflict more than forty stripes on an offender; for fear of breaking the law, scourgers stopped short of the number. If the whip contained three lashes, thirteen strokes equaled forty save one. The thirty-nine articles of the Anglican Church sometimes were called the forty stripes save one.

Forty Thieves. Thieves outwitted by a woodmonger. In the Arabian Nights' Entertainments a band of forty thieves live in a cave. Their treasure is discovered by Ali Baba and they are outwitted by Morgiana, a woodcutter's female slave. The story represents a light or time myth. See under Baba.

Forty-three. According to mystics one whose name corresponds to the number is restless and has a love for military life. Physical weakness: biliousness. According to the cabala: glory, love; in low form: discord, revolution.

Forty-two. According to mystics one whose name corresponds to the number is calm, religious. Physical weak spot: heart. According to cabala: energy, grandeur of soul, religiousness; in low form: traitors.

Forty winks. A brief nap.

Hungry forties. Period just before the middle of the 19th century when bread and food generally were expensive, owing largely to high import duties on corn in the United States.

Roaring forties. (1) The Atlantic Ocean between 40° and 50° north latitude, noted for its rough and stormy character. (2) That part of the south Atlantic, Indian, and Pacific oceans between 40° and 50° south latitude. (3) The theatrical district of New York City between Fortieth and Fiftieth streets, near Broadway.

Shady side of forty. More than forty years of age; on the side in which the shadows of the evening of life begin to lengthen.

FOSSETTE Feminine name from the French, meaning little dimple.

FOSSIL (1) Grave gift; sometimes called heart-urchin. Fossils are said to have been hidden in the ground by the Devil to mislead mankind inasmuch as they contradict the story of creation as told in Genesis. (2) A person of fixed or antiquated ideas, one who is behind the times or whose ideas are out of date, one incapable of change.

FOTLA (FODLA) In Irish mythology one of the Tuatha De Danann queens. With her two sisters, Banba and Eriu, she was encountered by the Milesians when they advanced into Ireland. Fotla is used poetically as a name for Ireland. Probably a fertility goddess.

FOU French for fool, which see. Fundamentally feu (fire); cognate with fey, Scotch for inspired.

FOUCHE, JOSEPH Past-master of political intrigue, noted for his systems of spies which were designed to benefit or save himself in any contingency. With Richelieu organizer of an espionage system. A member of the movement to suppress Robespierre in the French Revolution.

FOUNDATION SACRIFICE A motif world-wide in folklore. Where attempts to build a city or structure fail, for mysterious reasons the blood of a fatherless child (child without a mortal father) is sprinkled on the foundation.

FOUNTAIN Erudition, healing, life, miraculous refreshment, purification, renewal, spiritual awareness, truth. Symbolizes Christ, saints Ansano and Corentin. In Hebrew tradition typifies atonement, consolation. In The Song of Solomon the Bride is described as "a fountain of gardens, a fountain sealed," imagery also applied to Virgin Mary. In the United States, a fountain on ballots was the emblem of the Prohibition Party.

Fountain of Emmanuel's blood. Where the Christian sinner in a sudden plunge receives unconditional mercy. This is actually a perversion of the true meaning of redemption, which is supposed to come about as a gradual and progressive process, a slow expansion and growth of man's spiritual faculties.

Fountain of Ponce de Leon. Fountain of youth renewing.

FOUR Concretion, cross, cube, divine equity, equilibrium, logic, material universe, reality, reason, square, stability, swastika. The quarternary number. Number of the ages of the world (gold, silver, bronze, iron), of the cardinal points of the compass, the cardinal virtues (fortitude, justice, prudence, temperance), columns or corners of the world, destructions of the world (by famine, flood, pestilence, wild beasts), elements, limbs of a man, parts of a man (head, chest, viscera, limbs), seasons of the year, winds. Holy by nature as it constitutes His goodness, His power, His unity, His wisdom, i. e. the four perfections of God or Supreme Being. Gnostic designation for Supreme Being. Sacred number, potent tetragammaton; almost all peoples of antiquity possessed a name for the deity composed of four letters. The reason for the reverence of the number four is the perfect equality of the four sides of a square, hence divine justice. Number of the spirits of white magic: gnomes, salamanders, sylphs, undines. Number of the sacred living things: lion among beasts, eagle among birds, ox among cattle, and man among all. These four symbolize the quintessence of creation in Babylonian, Christian, Hebrew and other mythologies. The figure 4 symbolizes man and woman, phallus and vulva; the number four is symbolized by a cross or square and conversely symbolizes the cross and the square. It frequently is used to denote the supreme point. Word identical with fire, and Danish for four is fire (vier). By mystics called the mason and symbolizes the holy fourfoldness or tetraktys. It forms the square of substance, understanding, will, and wisdom; it represents the law of justice without mercy, sympathy, or tolerance. It corresponds to the color green with its sedative effect upon nerves, the Hebrew letter dalet, and the zodiacal house Cancer. Its planetary equivalent is Saturn, the taskmaster, teacher, time-keeper, the brake which slows down aspirations and returns one to reality. Its rhythm suggests classification, durability. It typifies the measuring intelligence. In a cycle, it denotes discontent, restrictions; in a name it denotes discipline and steadfastness. It is the number of hard work and connotes the building of a firm foundation; it endows the power to organize and to work in organization. Its character inclinations are accumulation, beneficence, coldness, intellectuality, material concentration, possessiveness, slowness. In Aztec tradition the four divine brothers Huitzilopochtli, Quetzalcoatl, Tezcatlipoca Black, and Tezcatlipoca Red were the ancestors of the human race. Among Meztitlan the primeval quadruplets were: Hueytecpatl, Ixcuin, Nancatiltzatzl, and Tentetemic. They personify the cardinal points. Among the Incas the four brothers are known collectively as Tahuantin Suyu Kapac, i. e. lords of all four quarters of the earth. They are Ayar Auca, lord of the south; Ayar Cachi, lord of the east; Ayar Manco, lord of the north; Ayar Uchu, lord of the west.

In Babylon mythology the steeds which pulled the chariot of Merodach when he went forth to slay Tiamat (chaos) numbered four. Probably typified the four winds. In Buddhism the number of Lokapala and the number of Noble Truths: 1) Life is suffering; 2) Desire or the will to live is the cause of repeated existences, in which sorrow is inevitable, hence desire is the cause of suffering; 3) Cessation of suffering (overcoming desire); 4) When desire is overcome, rebirth or suffering ceases. In Chinese tradition the four accomplishments are: music, symbolized by a lute (ch'in); painting, symbolized by brushes (hua); scholarship by a book (shu); sports by a chess board (weich'i). The four benevolent animals (Ssu Ling) which presided over the four directions (Ssu Fang) are: Blue Dragon (Ch'ing Lung), head of all scaly animals which presided over the east and the spring season; Phoenix (Feng-huang), also known as Vermilion Bird (Chu Ch'ieh), head of all birds, which presided over the south and summer season; Black Tortoise (Kuei Shen), head of all mollusks, which presided over the north and winter season; Unicorn (Ch'i lin) or White Tiger (Pai Hu), head of all quadrupeds, which presided over the west and autumn season. The four creatures typifying energy and power are: elephant, leopard, lion, tiger. The dragon kings of the four seas are: Ao Jun, Ao K'in, Ao Kuang, Ao Shun. The flowers of the four seasons are: prune blossom, winter; tree peony, spring; lotus, summer; chrysanthemum, autumn. The four quarters of the globe were created from the four limbs of P'an Ku. The four sleepers are: Feng-kan, Han Shan, Shih-te, Ts'ai Lwan (or Wen Siao). In Chinese Buddhism the four Noble Truths are symbolized by four divisions of the symbolic vase. Four rulers or supernatural beings guard the slopes (cardinal directions) of paradise. They also protect Buddhist sanctuaries and are: Mo-li Ch'ing, guardian of the east, land bearer, and causer of wind storms. Mo-li Hai, guardian of the west, the far gazer; destroyer of enemies. Mo-li Hung, guardian of the south. Lord of growth, producer of darkness, earthquakes, and thunder storms. Mo-li Shou, guardian of the north. The well-famed, a man eater (god of death).

In Christianity four symbolizes divine equilibrium and justice. The four cardinal virtues and their symbols are: fortitude, shield and sword; justice, plumb line and triangle; prudence, serpent; temperance, hearth. The fathers of the Greek Church: Saints Athonasius, Basil the Great, Gregory Nazianzen, John Chrysostom. The fathers of the Latin Church: Saints Ambrose, Augustine, Gregory, and Jerome. The horsemen of the Apocalypse. Number of lost things: death, heaven, hell, judgment. The four rivers of paradise, which carry the gospels to the four quarters of the earth; frequently portrayed as four rivers issuing from a mound on which a lamb stands. In Egyptian mythology four is a celestial number representing the four pillars (cardinal directions) which hold up the sky and symbolizing the sphinx. The four genii of the dead are: Amset, Hapi (Apis), Kebhsnauf, Taumutef; also the four sons of Horus. Eskimo names for the four spirits of the wind are: Auna, north; Kauna, south; Pauna, east; Sauna, west. In Greek mythology, the four animal guardians of the elements are: dragon of fire; eagle of air; elephant of earth, fish of water. Hades contained four rivers. The horses (winds) of Apollo were four. Number sacred to Hermes, lord of the winds. According to Pythagoras, four symbolizes the perfect square, the product of equals identified with reason, the first mathematical power generating virtue.

In Hebrew tradition universal-ity. It typifies the whirling cherub in the form of a winged man of a blue or golden yellow color to represent the sky, which had four heads, that of an eagle (conscience), lion (will), man (intellect), and ox (appetite), that control the four winds. The four major prophets of the Old Testament are: Daniel, Ezekiel, Isaiah, and Jeremiah. Sometimes Jonah is mentioned in place of Daniel. The beasts of Ezekiel's vision were four. See Ezekiel. The questions asked at the Passover or Seder Service are four. The rivers of Paradise (Eden) giving fertility and refreshment and symbolizing wisdom are four, i.e. Euphrates (or Hiddekel), the Gihon (or Araxes), the Pison (or Halys or Phasis), and the Tigris. The Tetragrammaton representing the ineffably holy name of the Supreme Being, given as JHVH, JHWH, YHWH. The four cabalistic kingdoms are: animal, human, mineral, vegetable. The four sculptures which God formed from the fire which comes forth from water are: the Throne of Honor, the Seraphim, the Ophanim or Celestial Wheel, and the Ministering Spirits. The four worlds of early cabalism are: Atziluth, world of emanations or Sefhira. Briah, world of creation. Yetzirah, world of formation. Assiah, world of manifestation. In later cabalism the four worlds are: Atziluth, primum mobile, archetypal world, macroprosopus or vast countenance; union of God and his Shekinah (Sacrifice), world without separateness. Briah, sphere of the zodiac, of the creative Father, Mother supernal. Yetzirah, the planetary chain, formative world, microprosopus or lesser countenance. Assiah, world of four elements, material world, bride of the microprosopus. The Hindu Vedas appear in four books. The four celestial Japanese animals are: Azure Dragon, Dark or Somber Warrior, Ver-million Bird, White Tiger. The four guardian kings are: Jikoku-ten, guardian of the east; Kōmoku-ten, guardian of the west; Tamon-ten, guardian of the north; Zochō-ten, guardian of the south. They are temple guardians as well as rulers of the directions, and they helped bring a miraculous Buddhist victory in Japan. In Roman tradition four is sacred to Jupiter as god of the sky and to Mercury as lord of the four winds.

Four animals. See under four celestial living things.

Four arms. In Hindu art typifies the four quarters of the sun, the four winds. Compares with the four-spiked wheel of Ixion.

Four astrological ages. The four ages, identified with the four quarters of the year are: 1- Golden Age, that of the Three Fates; the element fire, quality moisture, principle good. Spring season, typified by the chaotic state, primordial period or period of coming. Aries is the gate to this age in which man's life is typified by the egg. 2- Silver Age, that of the Three Harpies; element air, quality heat, principle good. Summer season, period of conflict and of the unicorn (knowledge). Cancer is the gate to this age of man's origination, breathing typified by the worm. 3- Bronze Age, that of the Three Furies; element earth, quality dryness, principle evil. Autumn season, period of slaying and of the chimaera (fear). Libra is the gate to this age in which man is vested in flesh, typified by chrysalis. 4- Iron Age, that of the Three Graces; element water, quality cold, principle good. Winter season, period of resurrection and of Bellerophon conquering the chimaera (autumn). Capricornus is the gate to this age of man's ascent into immortality, typified by the butterfly.

Four astrological quarters.

The four quarters of the celestial hemisphere and their governors are: 1- North reign, where light marries chaos; identified with the spring season. The rulers are: Christian, Jehovah; Egyptian, Horus the Elder; Greek, Cronus; Hindu, Brahma; Persian, Ormuzd; Roman, Saturn; and Salamanders, which live in fire. 2- East reign, where matter is given form; identified with the summer season. The rulers are: Christian, Holy Spirit; Egyptian, Osiris; Greek, Zeus; Hindu, Vishnu; Persian, Mithras; Roman, Jupiter; and Sylphs, which dwell in air. 3- South reign, which ancients believed to be unfertile, uninhabited and useless, and abounding in evil spirits; identified with the autumn season. The rulers are: Christian, Satan; Egyptian, Set; Greek, Hades; Hindu, Siva; Persian, Ahriman; Roman, Pluto; and Gnomes, which dwell on earth. 4- West reign of hemisphere, where man returns to happier and more peaceful state and where his hopes are revived; identified with the winter season. Governed by: Christian, Jesus; Egyptian, Horus the Younger; Greek and Roman, Apollo; Hindu, Krishna, an avatar of Vishnu; Persian, Oschen; and the Nymphs or Undines, which dwell in water.

Four castes. The four chief castes into which men were divided in Egyptian antiquity, and also applied to the castes in India, were symbolized by forms which became the pips of the tarot deck, as follows: (1) Cup (heart suit), denoting priesthood or sacerdotal rank. (2) Sword (spade suit), denoting king or warrior. (3) Coin or circle (diamond suit), denoting commerce, also the ring of eternity. (4) Staff or caduceus (club suit), denoting agriculture, soil tilling.

Four celestial living things. Almost universally in mythology four supernatural creatures guard the four quarters of the world and control the four winds. They frequently are lords of the four elements. A chart of various of the animals worshiped follows. Where known what they represent is given.

American Indian	Assyria	China and Japan	Egypt	Greece	New Testament	Old Testament
						Vision of Daniel	Vision of Ezekiel bear (north)	eagle	dark or somber warrior (also known as black tortoise; air and north)	hawk	eagle (air)	eagle	non-descript	eagle (air)
panther (west)	ox (or bull)	white tiger (earth & west)	jackal	elephant (earth)	calf	bear	ox (earth)
fawn (south)	lion	vermillion bird (fire & south)	ape	dragon (fire)	lion	lion with eagle's wings	lion (fire)
moose (east)	man	azure dragon (water & east)	man	fish (water)	man	leopard	man (water)

Four-cornered Castle. In Arthurian romances, one of the names for the castle housing the Grail. It compares with the Celtic underworld where the caldron of inspiration and plenty was housed. Other names for the castle are: Castle of Revelry, Castle of Riches, Glass Castle, Kingly Castle, Revolving Castle. See Caer Sidi, Carbonek.

Four directions. Four-fold womb of the world. In Freemasonry north is the realm of darkness, east is ruled by the sun, west by the moon, and south by the master of the lodge.

Four duplicated. One figure facing upward, the other downward, symbolizes highest point and lowest depth.

Four elements. Commonly understood to be: air, earth, fire, water. Sometimes the elements are given as five, in which case metal, mineral, or wood is given as the fifth element. Compare four kingdoms.

Four foil. Divinity.

Four geni of Amenti. See Amenti geni.

Four horsemen of the Apocalypse. Conquest, death, pestilence, and war; they rode white, pale, black, and red horses respectively.

Four horses harnessed. Discordant faculties of the mind brought into control and trained to the equipoise of perfection. Horses represent intellect, four represents equity. In mythology usually represent the steeds of the sun deity, thus the four winds.

Four hundred. Inner circle of New York society, once estimated to be of that number.

Four kingdoms. Animal, metal, mineral, plant.

Four-leaf clover. Good-luck. Either due to their rarity or to the arrangement of their leaves in the form of a Maltese cross.

Four-leaf design. Divinity, the four pillars or quarters of the universe, the four winds. Identical with the cross and swastika.

Four-letter deities. In countless languages the number of letters for the deity representing the law of justice without mercy, sympathy, or tolerance is four. A partial list follows:

Arabian	-	Allā
Assyrian	-	Adad (Adat)
Danish	-	Godh
Dutch	-	Gott
Egyptian	-	Amun
English	-	Lord
French	-	Dieu
German	-	Gott
Greek	-	Zeus (Theos)
Hebrew	-	JHVH
Italian	-	Gesu
Latin	-	Deus
Persian	-	Soru (Sire)
Turkish	-	Esar

Four masks in rosette form.

The four cardinal directions; east and west represented by male masks, north and south represented by female masks.

Four of clubs. An unlucky card. In old decks known as the devil's bedstead.

Four quarters of the globe. Africa, typified by an Ethiopian; Asia by an Aryan with jeweled robes; Europe by an Anglo-Saxon, usually armed; the Americas by an Indian or Anglo-Saxon woman, sometimes represented by the head or bust only.

Four royal stars. The ancients divided the heavens into four parts, and each was watched over by one of the royal stars, viz: Aldebaran, Antares, Formalhaut, Regulus.

Four scrolls. In the Catacombs symbolize the four gospels.

Four seasons. Symbolic of quadrature, and of the four periods of life in man: infancy, youth, maturity, old age. The four seasons are symbolized by a cross, four-spiked wheel, swastika. The four seasons holy days are:

Pagan	Christian
Spring Equinox (celebrating growth)	Easter
Midsummer Eve (a bonfire festival celebrating maturity)	Saint John's Eve
Autumn Equinox (a harvest rite at which the death of nature was mourned)	Saint Mi- chael's Day
Winter Solstice (a yule fire festival celebrating rebirth)	Christmas

Four steps of the dead. According to the Japanese the soul of the dead waded through the river of death; it passed between two iron mountains that demons kept pushing together; it climbed a mountain of knives; finally blasts of wind drove the knives through the air, lacerating a guilty soul. The journey of the soul among Mexican Indians was identical. The clashing mountains resemble Scylla and Charybdis.

Four worlds of cabalism. Atziluth, world of emanations or deity; Briah, world of creation; Yetzirah, world of formation; Assiah, world of action or manifestation.

FOUR O'CLOCK BLOOM Timidity.

FOURTEEN Represents the second cycle of seven years or puberty. Cabalistically called, "Rape of the Angels." According to occultists symbolizes temperance. According to Pythagoreans number of delusion, loss, and sacrifice.

FOURTH Fourth chasm, eighth circle. In Dante's Inferno where diviners and sorcerers, with their faces twisted so they look behind them, are sent.

Fourth circle. In Dante's Inferno circle which contains those who had abused worldly goods in various ways, such as misers and spendthrifts. They roll dead weights in opposite directions and, when they meet, scold one another.

Fourth day of first month. In China day of receiving the gods, particularly the god of happiness, kitchen or stove god, god of wealth.

Fourth estate. (1) The lowest class in society, the laboring class. (2) Any unofficial influence of power, especially, humorously, the public press. A statement attributed to Edmund Burke. The other three estates to which he referred are: the Commons, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal.

Fourth underground world. Zuni world where life began and from which mankind climbed to the surface of the earth.

FOWL Announcer of dawn, awakener. In China tenth symbolic animal which carries the sun through the twelve terrestrial branches. The yang principle. The flesh of the male is thought to be injurious and is not eaten. A cock's crowing regarded as luck, while that of the hen indicates ruin of the family. It supposedly has the power to change into human form and inflict good and evil upon mankind. A fowl on the roof of a house is considered an omen of ill-luck. In Japan lord of the torii.

Fowl of heaven. Bird of the air.

FOWLER Masculine name from Middle English, meaning catcher or keeper of birds.

FOX Artifice, circumspection, egotism, maliciousness, mischievousness, patience, pious fraudulence, quick-wittedness, revengefulness, slyness, solitari-ness, subtlety, thievery, voraciousness. A pathfinder corresponding to Egyptian jackal. In heraldry typifies sagacity, wit used in one's own defense. In witchcraft a demon or goblin which takes human form, especially that of a beautiful young woman for purposes of deceiving. Dream significance: (killing one) success. In China crafty companion of fairies. At the age of 100, it supposedly transforms into a wizard with the power of magic; at the age of 1,000, it may enter heaven and become the Celestial Fox. Incense is burned at shrines to appease the fox. It represents Hsin, three stars in the heart of Scorpio, in eastern quadrant, spring season. In Christianity it typifies the Devil. In Japan the fox is called Tamamo-no-maye, and a bewitching fox which is the messenger of the rice goddess Inari is called Kitsune.

Fox tongue. Talisman which provides a nervous man with courage.

Fox with goose. The constellation Vulpecula in the Northern Sky.

FOXGLOVE August 31 birthday flower symbolizing insincerity, a wish, youth.

FOXTAIL GRASS Sporting.

FRAANANGERFORCE (FRANANGRSFORS) In Norse mythology the cascade or force into which Loki leaped disguised as a salmon to escape the gods he had maligned with foul words.

FRA DIAVOLO Literally, from the Italian, brother devil. See under Diavolo.

FRA DOLCINO In Dante's Inferno an unorthodox fanatic who is starved out in his stronghold by the ecclesiastical authorities of Novara.

FRADUBIO In Spenser's Faerie Queene the doubter; lover of Fraelissa (frailty).

FRAGARACH In Irish mythology a terrible and wonderful sword which Lugh carried with him from the land of living. It was able to cut through any armor and was called Answerer.

FRAME Female principle, yoni.

FRANCE Represented by bees and imperial eagles of Napoleonic period, cock, fleur-de-lys, Phrygian (liberty) cap, Roman fasces.

FRANCESCA DA RIMINI An unfaithful wife. Wife of Giovanni the Lame, lord of Rimini, she fell in love with his handsome brother Paolo. Caught together, Giovanni slew both. Immortalized by Dante.

FRANCESCO D'ACCORSO Renowned jurist who lived in Bologna and in England in the 13th Century. Because of his sexual appetites, Dante placed him in the Inferno as one who had been violent against nature.

FRANCESCO DE'CAVALCANTI

He was killed for his misdeeds by the people of Gaville, a village on the Arno, and in Dante's Inferno given the form of a viper.

FRANCIS (FRANK, FRANKLIN)

Masculine name, signifying Frenchman. Perhaps through Middle English Franceis or Latin Franciscus. Old Teutonic, meaning free. In feminine form

Frances (Fan, Fannie, Francene, Francesca, Francine).

FRANCISCAN Originally a member of a mendicant Christian order devoted to missionary work and preaching. Since 1230 they are permitted to possess revenues. Also called Grey-friars from the original color of their habit, which is now black.

FRANCOISE A simple shrewd peasant woman with idiosyncrasies of behavior, reasoning, and speech. From the character created by Marcel Proust. She appears as a cook in Remembrance of Things Past.

FRANC-TIREUR Literally, free shooter. From the French guerillas or partisan soldiers who were first organized in 1792 and played an important part in the war of 1870-1871. The French speak of the franc-tireur of journalism, meaning a free-lance journalist.

FRANKENSTEIN One who causes his own destruction in allusion to the medical student, in Mary G. Shelley's romance of the same name, who is slain by the monster he created out of body fragments collected in graveyards and dissecting rooms. The monster is a parody on man bent on evil.

FRANKINCENSE Adoration, consecrated power, nobility, sacrifice. Christian symbol of spiritual goodness; assigned to Virgin Mary. In Greek antiquity poured into sacrificial fires. Hebrew symbol of prayer. Before the Holy of Holies, the smoke which rose prevented the priest from gazing with too much curiosity on the ark and mercy-seat; hence a veil of God.

FRANKLIN Masculine name from a family name, also from Middle English, meaning freeholder.

FRAOCH Irish hero whose mother was the divine Bebind. Because of his beauty he was loved by Findabair, daughter of Ailill and Medb. He refused to pay the bride price for her, but she was promised him if he would assist Medb in her battle against the men of Ulster led by Cuchulainn. He was slain by Cuchulainn. Probably a moon deity. In one legend, when he scorned the love of Medb, she sent him to slay the one-eyed giant which guarded the tree on which grew the berry which renewed youth, prolonged life, and was the source of supernatural hearing, knowledge, and vision. The tree grew above a pool or well. Although Fraoch had been warned not to go near water, which was dangerous to him, he undertook the assignment, killed the giant, but died of the wounds he received. His death at the tree points to the jealousy of the gods who would not share their divine food with a mortal even though he was of divine descent.

FRATERNITY Typified by clasped hands, a knot of ribbon, three rings linked.

FRAUD Personified by a man-headed serpent with a double tail. In an Italian icon personified by a woman with two faces, one young, one old. Her feet are like an eagle's talons; she has the tail of a scorpion. She holds a mask in her left hand and two hearts in her right hand.

Pious fraud. Typified by a fox.

FRAU FRIGG In German lore, with Wotan, a leading character in the Giant's Dance.

FRAU HOLLE German folklore female spirit who leads the souls of the dead in their aerial flight. She also is a patroness of fertility.

FRAVAK AND FRAVAKAIN In Iranian legend two children of primeval times. Their parents were Siyakhmak and Nashak. They were the parents of Tazh and Tazhak, who became the progenitors of the Arabs, and of Haoshyangha and Guzhak, from whom the Iranians descended.

FRAVASHI Zend guardian angel or spiritual protector. A pre-existing being constituting the heavenly image of man, especially of the believer. The supernatural self or spiritual counterpart of each individual living or dead or unborn; the archetype of man in the presence of Ahura-Mazda. Guide of the human soul; spiritual helper. One of a host of supporters of Ahura-Mazda against evil on earth. Sometimes identified with the stars. Originally a title applied to an ancestor. Identical with Roman genius. Compare feroher.

FRAXINELLA (FRAXINUS) The ash tree, which ancients believed possessed magical powers. It supposedly averted evil spirits, disease, and fascination.

FRAZER (FRASER) Masculine name from Old French, meaning curly-haired.

FREDA (FRIEDA) Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning peace.

FREDEGUND (FREDEGONDE) Sixth century Frankish queen.

Mistress of Chilperic I of Neustria, she caused his wife Galeswintha to be killed; she then became Chilperic's wife, and caused the assassination of Galeswintha's sons and of Chilperic himself. After the murder of her husband she ruled as regent for her son Clotaire.

FREDERICK (FRED, FREDERIC, FREDDY, FRITZ) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning peaceful ruler. Feminine equivalent is Frederica.

Frederick of Aragon. Avaricious and craven king of Sicily, placed by Dante in the Inferno.

Frederick the Great. Frederick II of Prussia. Noted as a military leader and patron of letters. He early rebelled for freedom, but later adhered to the idea of unconditional devotion to the state, even at the expense of personal happiness. He built the palace San Souci (without care), and lived there whenever possible. His isolation made him a legendary figure.

FREEBOOTER A buccaneer or pirate; one who roams about in search of plunder, especially during a state of war.

FREEDOM Typified by a bird, eagle, Liberty Bell, Phrygian cap.

FREEMASON (MASON) A member of an ancient secret fraternity or order. In legend it is traced back to Hiram of Tyre and the Temple of Solomon. In medieval times composed of stoneworkers and other artisans who, by the nature of their work, moved from place to place. Secret passwords, rituals, and signs were adopted to prove that a man was actually of the order of Free and Accepted Masons and thus entitled to the comradeship of brother masons as well as employment. Where cathedrals and churches were being built, lodges were created. In modern times Masonry is a secret order which has the avowed vocation of rebuilding the Temple or City of the Soul; hence a depository of noble knowledge. Its objective is mutual assistance and the promotion of brotherly love among its members, typifying one who has instinctive sympathy or community interests in common.

Freemasonry jewels. In the Grand Lodge of gold; in subordinate Symbolic Lodge of silver.

FREESTONE STATE Connecticut.

FREE WILL In an Italian icon, personified by a young man in a royal robe of various colors. He is crowned and holds a scepter topped with the Greek Υ .

FREISHUTZ Literally, free-shooter. In German legend a marksman in league with the Devil, from whom he obtained charmed bullets. The Devil gave him seven balls, six of which were to hit at whatever the marksman aimed; the seventh was to be directed as the Devil desired.

FREKE (FREKI) In Norse mythology one of the two wolves of Odin. Name meaning glutton or voracious one. The other wolf is Geri (ravener). At the feast of heroes, as Odin needs no meat, he gives his share to his wolves. With his wolves Odin hunts down his victims. Freke and Geri are aspects of storm and wind.

FREMONT Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning peace, protection.

FRENCH LEAVE Departure without ceremony, as by one who has stolen something. From the French custom of leaving a social gathering without bidding the host or hostess adieu.

FRENCH MARIGOLD May 29 birthday flower; symbolizes jealousy.

FRENCH WILLOW Bravery and humanity.

FREO Old English goddess of love. Identified with Roman Venus. Name related to free and to Freya.

FRET (FRETTY) In heraldry a lover's knot; also net of persuasion.

FREY (FREYR, FRICCO, YNGVIFREY) In Norse mythology son of Njord and Nerthus or Skadi; brother and husband of Freya; also husband of Beyla. Originally one of the Vanir, he was taken by the Aesir as hostage after a war between the two, and finally counted of the Aesir, sometimes as one of a trinity with Odin and Thor. He was dispenser of rain and sunshine; god of fruitfulness, peace, and prosperity. Patron of horsemen, horses, and marriage. A deity of married folk, all phallic emblems were sacred to him. In his youth he was overlord of Alfheim, land of the Alfar or elves, who provided him with many treasures, including Blodughofi (Bloodyhoof), the horse which could dash through fire and water; Draupnir, the ring of fertility; Gullinbursti, the wild boar which drew his chariot; the magic ship Skidbladnir; and the Sword-of-Victory, which never missed its mark. The servants of Frey were Byggvir and Skirnir. During the winter war between the gods and the frost giants, Frey was held prisoner by Beli. Eventually he was rescued by his father Njord, the sea god; an incident which typifies water releasing growth. Once he sat in Odin's chair and looked over the world. Seeing the lovely Gerd, he became lovesick. Skirnir undertook to win the frost giantess. She consented to marry Frey only after he had given her father Gymer the sword which never missed its mark as a bride-price. At Ragnarok, Frey fell under the blows of Surter because he lacked his sword. His union with Gerd is a fertility myth; Frey the fertility god was ill until the mating with Gerd, i.e. the awakening of plant life in spring; his sword, rays of the sun, went to her father, a sea and storm deity; thus he was without protective strength at Ragnarok and succumbed to cold and darkness. His having been a ruler of elves in his youth, suggests he had been exalted to a god. A sun deity, Frey rose from the sea to become one of the Aesir, a step natural in the daily course of the sun. He also was worshiped as a harvest and boar god. In some versions of his myth, Frey, like Adonis, is said to have been killed by a boar. In early rites he was prophet and revealer of the future, and human sacrifices were offered to him.

According to one legend Frey descended to earth as Fridleif I, king of Denmark. In another, as Ingunar-Frey (Ingvi-Frey), he was the eponymous hero of a group of tribes from which the Anglo-Saxons sprang. The Ynglings (Inglings), the earliest race of Swedish kings, regarded themselves as descendants of Frey. Frey meaning lord is the source of Friday. His signature was the prehistoric solar cross now called Patteé. Identical with Frode and Veraldén-Olmai.

FREYA (FREIA, FREYJA) In

Norse mythology daughter of Njord and Nerthus or Skadi; sister-wife of Frey, and like him a Vanir deity later counted among the Aesir. Also the wife of Od, a sun god, and a mistress of Ottar. As Od's wife, she was known as Odsmaer. As Menglod, she was the spouse of Svipdag, an aspect of Od. By Od she was the mother of two beautiful daughters, Gersemi and Hnoss. She was a mother goddess, giver of fruitfulness and love. Sometimes represented as goddess of sensual love corresponding to the Roman Venus, sometimes as pure love. Half of those who fell in battle belonged to her, the other half belonged to Odin. In heaven her dwelling was Sessrynnir in Folkvang (Folk-plain) where, the possessor-of-the-slain, she assigned seats to the dead. After their death women also went to her abode. When Od, the sunshine, wandered, she wept tears which changed into gold (corn seeds). She possessed a falcon-garb, and she hovered over earth in her feather-dress (clouds), she was beautiful in tears, thus she may have been a rainbow goddess. Except for Loki, she was the only member of the Aesir able to assume bird guise. She wore the necklace Brisinga-men (verdure), which Loki stole and which Heimdall recovered for her. The boar she rode was named Hildisvini. With her maids she sat beneath the fruitful boughs of Yggdrasil, from where she was lured by Aurboda and caught by Beli, who carried her off to Grep in Jotunheim; a fertility myth which resembles that of Persephone. She was a sorceress who introduced magic among the Aesir, in which role she was identified as Heid. Early Christians declared her a witch and banished her to the mountains, where her demon followers still dance on Valpurgisnacht. Her name means lady. Also known as Gefn, Horn, Ingun, Mardoll (Mardal, Moertholl), Syr. Among her titles are Vanabrudr (Vanir bride), Vanadis (Vanir lady), Vanagod (Vanir goddess). Her attributes were a cat-drawn chariot, flowers, green, music, spring season. Some hold Freyja and Frigga were the same goddess, and identify the husband who deserted her as Odin.

FREYDIS (1) In Norse legend a sister of Leif Ericson. She herself was an adventuress and sailed to America. A blood-thirsty woman, she killed several men and women simply because they annoyed her. (2) In Cabell's Figures of Earth, the dreaded goddess-queen of Audela who becomes a human woman for love of Manuel. By her magic, she gives life to his images.

FRIAR GERUND In Padre Isla's Gerundio an absurd popular orator.

Friar John. In Rabelais' Gargantua an outspoken happy-go-lucky friar.

Friar Rush. A character which originated in late medieval German folklore as Bruder Rausch. He is the Devil disguised as a friar, and corrupts friars and monks by all sorts of amusing and devious devices.

Friars Major. The Dominicans.

Friars Minor. The Franciscans.

Friar Tuck. Renegade friar; a fat and jovial vagabond priest; associate and confessor of Robin Hood.

FRICKA In Wagner's Nibelungen Ring goddess of marriage. Probably intended to represent Frigga.

FRID In Norse mythology a maid of Freya. Name meaning fair one.

FRIDAY Sixth day of the week. The source of the name attributed to Freo, Frey, Freya, Frigg, Fro. In Christian tradition day on which Christ was crucified and, for this reason, regarded an unlucky day. It is said to be the day on which the dead will rise for the last judgement. In Europe called hangman's day; criminals formerly were executed on Friday. In European weather lore, if rain falls on Friday, it will fall on Sunday. In Hebrew lore it supposedly was the day on which Adam was created, the day on which he was expelled from paradise, the day on which he repented and died. In Irish folk belief to die on Friday, get buried on Saturday, be prayed for on Sunday is lucky. Mohammedans observe Friday as a day for assembly or worship. In Pagan religions a day frequently dedicated to the love or mother goddess. In Roman antiquity, named dies Veneris to honor Venus and a day sacred to her, hence a lucky day.

Black Friday. Any Friday marked by a public calamity. In the United States, either of two Fridays, September 24, 1869 and September 19, 1873; so called because they were occasions of great financial panics. In Christian tradition Good Friday is called Black Friday from the color of the vestments worn by the clergy on that day.

Friday-faced. Dejected, melancholy.

Friday the 13th. Day of ill-fortune.

Good Friday. Friday before Easter, observed to commemorate the death of Jesus. In Greek church called Great Friday.

Man Friday. A faithful and useful servant. In Defoe's

Robinson Crusoe, Crusoe rescues a savage from a cannibal feast on a Friday. The savage becomes his servant. Man Friday has become a colloquialism for one's assistant; in politics, a henchman.

FRIDILA One of the Harlungen brothers who were the keepers of Freya's necklace.

FRIEND OF MAN Among African tribes, the hare; among American Indians, the coyote; in Christianity, Christ in welcoming attitude; in Russia, the bear.

FRIENDSHIP Represented by clasped hands, forget-me-not, garnet, topaz. In an Italian icon the male personification is a youth in a loose green robe with a garland of several flowers. He holds a crystal goblet containing claret, which he offers cheerfully. The female personification is a young woman in a simple white robe, her left shoulder naked exposing her left breast. In her right hand she holds a heart, with her left hand she grasps a withered elm encircled with a vine. She is barefooted. Her white robe signifies lack of artifice, her bare feet the hardships she will endure for friends; she embraces the withered elm to show she is a friend in adversity as well as prosperity. In Japan typified by a sparrow under a bamboo in winter.

FRIESLANDERS (FRISIANS)

A people noted for their tall stature.

FRIGG (FRIA, FRIGA, FRIGGA)

Norse queen of the gods, principal wife of Odin. Various-ly said to be the daughter of Fjorgyn and Jord or of Odin and Jord; the sister of Njord. Mother of Balder, Hermod, Hoder, and usually Tyr. Some poems state she and Odin were the parents of seven sons who founded the seven Saxon kingdoms in England. Although permitted to share the throne of Odin in Hlidskjalf, she spent most of her time in her own mansion, Fensalir, spinning golden threads (sun rays) or weaving (clouds). She knew the fates of men, but did not prophesy, and she was the goddess of conjugal and maternal love and marriages. Helper of mankind; genial promoter of fruitfulness, she was invoked by the childless. Probably originally an earth-goddess. Fensalir means sea-hall, and she once may have been of the Vanir clan. Although she was concerned with the well being of mortals, her eleven handmaids (aspects of nature) sometimes were evil doers. Frigg was represented as stately and tall, robed in white. A bunch of keys, symbol of her housewifery, hung from her girdle. Her name, which appears to mean beloved or wife, is the root of friction. Some scholars hold Frigg and Freya were the same goddess. Resembles Hera, Juno, and Rana-neidda.

Frigg's Distaff. The stars forming the belt of the constellation Orion. Also known as Frigg's Spindle.

FRIGHT In an Italian icon personified by a man in armor with a drawn sword who looks frightened. He holds a Medusa head.

FRINGE Light rays, light of God.

FRITILLARY Plant symbolizing persecution.

FRITHIOF (FRITHJOF) Literally, spoiler of peace. Hero of an Icelandic saga. Lover of Ingeborg, daughter of Bele, a petty Norwegian king. Because of this love, he is exiled, but, after the death of Ingeborg's husband, he marries her and her brothers pay tribute to him. Frithiof, in his legend, is invested with the attributes of a solar hero; he is a man born to be great, but for a time others are placed at a vantage over him. He possesses a magic ring (fertility). Like Heracles, he passes through a period of madness (scorching sun); like Perseus, he bears an invincible sword (rays), and like Siegfried and Sigurd, he is an exile for a time and wanders over earth and sea.

FRITZ Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning peace. Used as a nickname for a German soldier, and during World War I was applied to certain types of German battle-planes and shells.

FRIUCH In Irish legend swineherd of Bodb, fairy king of Munster. Because of false gossip, he became the mortal enemy of Rucht. He was able to change his shape at will, and to carry on his fight he appeared in the form of a raven, wolf, trout, demon, stag, water beast, and worm, which was swallowed by one of the cows of Fiachna. The cow gave birth to the Donn or Brown Bull of Cualnge (see). The Donn and Findbennach, a white bull and final form of Rucht, caused a great war in Ireland. The various forms of Friuch typify the various seasons.

FRIVOLITY Typified by a butterfly, especially a yellow one.

FRO In Oldest Teutonic mythology All-Father, lord of all created things. He is eternally good, and long-suffering. He imparts to humans strength and sweetness. Probably supplanted by Odin. Fro also is known as Friuja; probably an early aspect of Frey as, like Frey, Fro possesses the wonderful ship Skidbladnir, which can be folded up like a cloth when not in use.

FROBAK In Iranian legend fire on Mount Khvarism, one of the three fires that protect the land.

FRODE (FRODI, FROTHE, FROTHI) A legendary Danish king, during whose reign was enjoyed an era of unexampled prosperity which was called Frode's peace. He possessed a magic millstone called Grotti, and two giant maidens, Fenja and Menja ground out gold for him. When he became greedy and demanded they continue to grind out gold, they heeded the command of Myrsing, sea-king, and ground out salt. This killed Frode and brought famine to the land, a period called Frode's meal. Thus the change from spring to autumn. In later legend he is killed by his nephews and his race becomes extinct, i.e. verdure dies. His embalmed body is carried periodically throughout the kingdom to bring prosperity to the land. He appears to be the prototype of the Fisher King in Grail romances.

FROG Generative principle, glory, inquisitiveness (by reason of its goggle eyes), inspiration, renewed birth; also pestilence, vain opinions. Dream significance: indiscretion. Animal which supports the world on its back. In Altai Tatar mythology discoverer of the mountain containing birch and stones from which fire was first made; hence bringer of fire to man. Among American Indians and Australian aborigines the melancholy croaker that foretells rain. To Iroquois tribes symbolizes aridity. Burmese amulet of frog-shaped amber or gold worn by children to protect them from the evil eye. In Burmese and Indo Chinese legends, the shape of the evil spirit which swallows the moon, hence animal of eclipse. In China typifies the moon and is called heavenly chicken, as it is believed the spawn falls from heaven with the dew. In Christianity, heresy, those who snatch at life's fleeting pleasures. In Egypt typified the watery elements of primordial slime. Amen, Hekt, Keh, Nau were represented with the head of a frog. An emblem of Isis, and worn as a talisman to attract her favors of fruitfulness. In Hebrew antiquity typified the degraded and timid turning to knowledge and wisdom, the neophyte, the undecided state. Also the destroyer of wisdom by false reasoning. Hindu symbol of rain and a form of Bheki. A frog's croaking is compared to the chanting of sacred rites. In Japan called kawazu, symbolic of energy and perseverance. Among Mexican Indians a frog with a blood-stained mouth in every joint of her body is a form of the mother goddess who gives birth to mankind and devours the dead as well as sacrifices.

Frog ashes. Believed to be a depilatory.

Frog lily. Disgust.

FROST Death of nature, winter season, yule festivals. Typified by a dryad or elf in white garments sparkling with hoar, Jack Frost, a wood sprite.

FROSTRE In Norse mythology leader of the Frost Giants in the war against the Gods.

FROTH Identical with foam, which see. Indra slays his rival Vritra with froth.

Lord and Lady Froth. In Congreve's The Double Dealer, a couple of fashion.

Master Froth. In Shakespeare's Measure for Measure, a foolish gentleman, too shallow for a great crime, too shallow for virtue.

FRUIT Abundance, harvest, wisdom. In heraldry felicity, liberality, peace. In China called sien, and confers health, immortality. Christian symbol of heavenly bliss, good works. Attribute of Virgin Mary. The twelve fruits of the spirit are: chastity, faith, gentleness, goodness, joy, long suffering (or hope), love, meekness, modesty, patience, peace, temperance. In Tibetan Buddhism fruit is one of the eight objects used in Man-la ritual. See Myrobalan. In the United States symbolizes the Thanksgiving Festival.

Forbidden fruit. Unlawful indulgence, alluding to the fruit forbidden to Adam and Eve.

Fruitfulness. Apple tree in northern countries; orange tree in southern countries. Also the fig tree and grapevine. In an Italian icon personified by a young woman crowned with juniper leaves holding a goldfinch's nest with young ones close to her bosom. At her feet are young chicks and rabbits.

Fruit of foregetfulness. Lotus, poppy.

Fruit of the spirit. In Christian tradition represented by fig tree with figs on it, fruit and flowers, olive, strawberry vine.

Fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. Depicted variously as apple, fig, lemon, orange, pear, pomegranate, quince.

FU (1) Word root meaning fire or life and accounting for Faunus, fever, few, fire, fuse, Phoebus.

All vowels are interchangeable; f, ph, and v are interchangeable. (2) Chinese character for prosperity; when rounded suggests complete good luck.

FUAMNACH In Irish legend sorceress wife of Midir. Being jealous of Etain, another wife of Midir, by the use of spells she changed Etain into an insect and by a magic wind blew her about for seven years. Midir, learning of Fuamnach's treachery, struck her head off.

FUCHI Aino goddess of the sun or of fire. Her name reputedly the source of Fuji.

FUCHSIA November 23 birthday flower symbolizing confiding love, faithfulness, good taste.

Scarlet fuchsia. Good taste.

FUDA-HEGASHI Japanese vengeful charm-ghost who wants all ofuda (august scripts or holy-text charms) pulled off doors.

FUDO Japanese grotesque god of righteousness, conqueror and subduer of devils, bringer of good luck. An incarnation of Dainichi-nyorai. Japanese Buddhist fierce manifestation of Mahavairochana. In boyish manifestation called Konkara; in elderly manifestation called Seitaka. Also called Fudo-Acala. Fudo is from root fu which is cognate with fo or foe.

FUDO-KI Japanese sacred records of air and earth.

FUDO-MYOO Japanese god of wisdom and compassion. He fights anger, avarice, and folly; his sword cures madness; he is an implacable foe of the opponents of Buddha. Sometimes shown as encircled by fire. Compares with Chinese Fuhi.

FUGEN Japanese Buddhist sweeper of pine needles. The all-pervading wisdom, life-giver, deity of compassion, constancy, cordiality. Paired with Monju-Bosatsu (Manjusri) among the Bodhisattvas. Also called Jitoku. As Fugen En-myo, indestructible existence.

FUHI A Chinese supreme god. Fire or sun deity. A Chinese name for Buddha. Also known as Fo, which see.

FU HSI (FUH-HI, FU-HI) First of the three great legendary emperors of China, the other two being Huang-ti and Shen Nung. His birth was miraculous. He symbolizes the age of hunting. He was fully informed in all mysteries of heaven and earth and gave to man the knowledge of divination. He brought his people out of caves and taught them how to build, hunt, and cook. He established marriage laws and divided people into clans and gave each clan a name. While trying to combine the characters of bird's footprints into script, a dragonhorse, the unicorn, rose from the river, on the banks of which he was sitting, bearing on its back certain signs which the emperor formed into the eight diagrams (pa kua), which signs evolved into the written Chinese language. He is shown with the upper part of his body that of a human, the lower half that of a serpent, carrying the mystic tablet containing the mysteries of heaven and earth. His consort is represented as having a fish's tail. He compares with Cadmus and Palamedes.

FUJI (FUGI-SAN, FUJI-YAMA, FUKIYI) Japanese sacred mountain, the never-dying mountain. Supreme altar of the sun. Symbol of the destiny of Japan; also the guiding spirit of thought and conduct. A good luck talisman. A fountain of youth is hidden on the mountain. Its sacrosanctity probably partly due to the fact that its top is a truncated cone, the cone being a sun symbol. Its crater is eight-sided, typifying the eight cardinal directions.

Name derived from Fuchi, Aino goddess of the sun. An alternate name Horaisan may be equated with horizon. Because of the sudden apparitions of the mountain, it also is known as Yatha Bhee Tam. Sengen Sama is the goddess of the mountain. In legend the god of Mount Fuji was a miser and, unwilling to give a traveler food, turned Mi-oya-no-kami, the ancestor god, away from his door. Resenting this Mi-oya condemned Fuji to be covered with frost and snow, with scanty food, so that few would visit the mountain. Compares with Olympus. See Somin-Shorai, Tsukuba.

FUJIN Japanese genius of wind. His color is blue. He has a large bag from which he pours streams of wind, ranging from a breeze to a hurricane, according to the extent he opens it. Sometimes he is swept away by the winds he has let loose.

FUJIWARA Japanese family which for centuries achieved control of the emperor. Family from which the consort of the emperor was chosen. Dictators. Power based on marital alliance, as opposed to that of the Minamoto and Tokugawa families whose power was based on armed strength.

FUKU (FUKUROKUJU) One of the Shichi Fukujin, the seven Japanese Buddhist deities of happiness. Kami (god) of all trades, he stands for wisdom, wealth, happiness, and longevity. He is shown with a long narrow head, white whiskers, and is accompanied by a crane. His head signifies long-headedness or wisdom; the crane symbolizes longevity. His image is worn as a good luck charm.

FUKURO Japanese Buddhist itinerant monks, from the legend of the owl Fukuro who fell in love with Uso-dori, a bullfinch. When Uso-dori returned the love of Fukuro, Lord Uye-minu, the eagle, became jealous and killed Uso-dori. Fukuro, in despair, became an itinerant monk, and owls are found in forests near Buddhist temples. Signifying marriages should be arranged between equals, not between persons of different stations of life.

FUKUSUKE Japanese man of good fortune. Sitting male doll with a big head carrying a fan. It brings prosperity and happiness into a home.

FU-LIN Chinese legendary land of diamonds.

FULLA (VOL, VOLA, VOLLA)

In Norse mythology, Frigg's sister and attendant; hence a confidant and lady's maid. Keeper of Frigg's jewel casket and releaser of earth's wealth, which she also takes back. Her flowing golden hair represents the harvest's golden grain. In medieval literature called Abundia or Habonde.

FULLER'S POLE Symbol of Saint James the Less.

FULLERS TEASEL Importunity, misanthropy.

FULVIA Feminine name from a Roman family name and from the Latin fulvus meaning tawny.

FUM Chinese phoenix. One of the four animals presiding over the destinies of China. Emblematic of the sun, symbol of longevity. Described in one account as with the forepart of a goose, the hind-part of a stag, the neck of a snake, the tail of a fish, the back of a tortoise, the beak of a cock, the down of a duck, the face of a swallow, the forehead of a fowl, with the marks of a dragon. See feng-huang.

FUMITORY BLOOM September 1 birthday flower symbolizing spleen. In the language of flowers: Ill at ease.

FUNADAMA Japanese deity bringing good luck to fishermen.

FUNAFENG In Norse mythology first guardian of Aeger's door. He was slain by Loki when he tried to keep Loki from the banquet given as a harvest-end feast at the autumnal equinox by Aeger to the Asa gods.

FUNA-YUREI Japanese ship-ghosts, spirits of drowned persons.

FUNERAL DOLES In medieval times money distributed among the poor by means of which those who received the money absorbed the sins of the diseased and freed the body from torment. Compare scapegoat, sin-eaters.

FUNERAL FIRE Ancient peoples believed the smoke of the fire carried the soul on its last flight to celestial realms.

FUNG-HWANG Feng-huang, which see.

FUNGUS In China called ling chih. Symbolic of immortality and longevity. A good-luck talisman. Said to grow only when a virtuous monarch is about to reign. Food of genii. Also a symbol of longevity in Japan.

FUNK, PETER A fake bidder at an auction sale. When the price fails to go up sufficiently, Peter Funk boosts it artificially by bidding.

FU-PAO In Chinese mythology mother of Huang ti, the Yellow Emperor, who was conceived miraculously and whom she carried for 24 months before giving birth to him.

FUR Aristocracy, luxury, winter. In Chinese drama fur around the neck signifies a barbarian.

FURIES (FURIAE) Roman avenging spirits of retributive justice. Punishers of crimes by their unseen stings. They numbered three: Alecto, Megaera, Tisiphone. Personifications of natural disasters, storm and wind. In art represented with their heads wreathed with serpents. As they shared the office of the Parcae or Fates, sometimes confounded with them. Identical with the Greek Eumenides. Corresponding Buddhist spirits are called Tan-ma.

FURIOUS HUNT In European folklore a nocturnal chase composed of spectral hunters led by the Wild Huntsman, usually interpreted to be Woden. Also called Wild Hunt.

FURNACE (1) The constellation Fornax in the Southern Sky. (2) Heat, hospitality, winter. In Hebrew tradition affliction, oppression, alluding to the fearful punishment inflicted on Jews in captivity.

FURO Japanese portal through which old age does not enter.

FURO-NO-YASHIRO Japanese shrine dedicated to a sword believed to possess magic powers.

FURRINA (FURINA) Ancient Roman goddess, probably a spirit of darkness. Her nature is forgotten.

FURRY DAY In England the 8th of May, at which time ceremonies resembling ancient May-day feasts are celebrated with dances peculiar to the occasion. A term sometimes applied to Good Friday, when hot cross-buns are eaten. Furry dances are performed each year at the 'fair' or 'highday' (eyeday or holiday) of Saint George at Helston (Heol's Town) in Cornwall.

FURY In an Italian icon personified by a man appearing angry. He wears a short garment, his eyes are bound, he is poised to throw a bundle of arms. The short garment indicates he respects neither decency nor good manners.

FURZE Bloom symbolizing anger; also love for all seasons. In the Celtic druidic alphabet, tree of the second vowel, Omn (O), and in the druidic calendar, tree typifying the young sun at the spring equinox, at which time furze fires were lighted on hills. Charm against witches as it is enchanted by being frequented by the first bees of the year as the ivy is by the last. Also called gorse.

FU-SANG Chinese Island of the Blest, where women become pregnant by entering a river in spring. They have hairs instead of breasts with which to nurse their children; hence a tree-woman or tree of life.

FU SHEN (FU-SING) Chinese spirit or god of happiness and riches. A star god. Compare Kuo-tzu-i.

FU-SHOU-LU The Chinese deity of longevity, Shou-hsing, when he is associated with the spirits of happiness and prosperity.

FUSIL In heraldry signifies labor, travel.

FU-TAI-SHIIH Chinese Laughing Buddha, who built the first sutra warehouse in China. Guardian of the sacred scriptures. Identical with the Japanese Warai-botoke.

FUTSU-NUSHI Japanese god of fire and probably of lightning. Sharp-cutting Lord, genius of weapons. One of the two great generals of Amaterasu, the sun-goddess who aided Ninigi (Prosperity Man) in his conquest of Izumo. The other general was Take-mi-kazuchi, deity of thunder.

FUTURE Personified by a cherub lifting the veil of a beautiful woman whose eyes are downcast and whose head is bowed. She holds a spray of lilies.

FYLFOT A heraldic and religious symbol in the form of a Greek cross with arms continued at right angles all in the same direction. The swastika. An exceedingly ancient device used as a secret symbol by peoples of widely separated locality and origin. Probably an emblem of sun worship, typifying the sun as swift racer; the sunwheel in motion. Fylfot means either four-foot (because of its shape) or fill-foot (because of its use in architecture to fill the lower part of a painted window).

FYLGIA Literally, follower. Norwegian guardian spirit, a person's double, or one's own soul, which comes in dreams with advice, exhortation, and warnings. Frequently appears in animal form. Upon a person's death, the fylgia passes on to another member of the family. To see one's own fylgia, except in dreams, indicates imminent death. The steed of a fylgja is usually a wolf bridled with snakes. Plural form, fylgjur.

FYLGUKONA Literally, following woman. Norwegian guardian spirit of a family or an individual, usually in the form of a woman. Her office is much like that of the fylgia, which see. Also called hamingja.

G

G Seventh in a class or order. Derived from the Latin C. In Freemasonry signifies God. Among gnostics stands for Gesu (Jesus) and for gnosis (inspired or mystic knowledge); symbolic of the Self-Existent. Occult significance: controls gains (or losses); its period is for seven years. Character traits: conceals emotions, genial, lover of nature, patient, successful. As it turns in upon itself signifies an introspective nature, denotes meditation. Numerical value, seven. Physical weak spot, spleen. Planetary correspondences: planetary, earth; symbolic, action; Tarot, chariot; zodiacal, Gemini or Sagittarius.

Among Hebrew Cabalists, character traits: able to execute difficult tasks. In low form, deceitful. In music, fifth tone in the natural scale of C Major; seventh tone in the relative scale of A minor. In Roman notation 400; with a dash over it, 400,000. Parallels Arabic ghain, Egyptian hieroglyph throne (which also is the equivalent of English k), Greek gamma, Hebrew gimel (camel), Irish gort (ivy). See Alphabet Affiliations, Dominical Letter.

GABBARA In Rabelais giant who introduced the drinking of health toasts.

GABBATHA Literally, an elevated place. The pavement in front of Pilate's palace, where he pronounced sentence on Jesus. Jews were not permitted to enter the usual judgment-hall. The pavement appears to have been of checkered marble or it was a mosaic floor on which the seat of judgment was erected.

GABERDINE (GABARDINE)

A long loose robe of coarse material prescribed for Jews in the middle ages. The word seems to be related to the German wallfahrt, meaning pilgrimage.

GABHRA The battle in which Cairbre, high king of Ireland, broke the power of the Fianna, or standing army of Ireland. The Fianna were led by Oscar, Finn mac Coul's grandson. Only two great Fenian figures survived the battle, Caoilte and Ossian. Oscar and Cairbre killed each other. A seasonal or fertility myth.

GABRIEL (GABE) (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew meaning hero of God. Feminine form, Gabrielle. (2) In Christian, Hebrew, and Moslem belief, an archangel. Revered as the angel of death, the prince of fire and thunder, but mostly as one of the Deity's chief messengers. Christian angel of mercy; Jewish angel of judgment; Moslem Holy Spirit and revealer. In the New Testament he announces the future birth of John the Baptist to Zacharias; and he appears to Virgin Mary. He is expected to blow the trumpet on judgment day. In the Old Testament he is the angel of truth, punisher of those who deviate from righteousness. As divine instrument of punishment, he carries the sword of justice. He is made of fire and is entrusted with the office of the angel of death for the Holy Land. With Michael, Raphael, and Uriel, he is the protector of the Jews and is within the veil surrounding God's throne. He explains to Daniel certain visions, and in the Talmud he appears as the destroyer of the hosts of Sennacherib, as well as the man who showed Joseph the way. He is one of the angels who buried Moses. Traditionally, he is the only angel able to speak Chaldee and Syriac. According to the Moslems, he is the chief of four favored angels, the spirit of truth, and their national protector. He brought to Abraham the stone from which Kaaba was built, and on Al-Borak he took Mahomet to heaven, where he revealed the Koran to the prophet. In medieval Jewish angelology he is usually associated with the moon, sometimes with the planet Mars. By the gnostic sect of Ophites he is described as having a head of an eagle. He resembles Yesod in the cabala. Occultists describe him as an angel of the element water. In romances of the middle ages he is the second of the seven spirits that stand before the throne of God; Milton makes him the chief of the angelic guards watching over Paradise. As official herald and mystagogue of Hebrew lore, Gabriel is the counterpart of Hermes. His emblems are: fleur-de-lys, herald's wand, lily, olive branch, palm branch, scroll, trumpet.

Gabriel's bell. In England a church bell formerly rung early in the morning and at night admonishing hearers to make certain prayers.

Gabriel's hounds. English animals of the wild hunt. Doomed to wander until the Judgment Day, they sweep across the sky at night in search of souls. The phantom hounds (i.e. winds) sometimes are identified as plovers, swans, or wild geese, which are said to be the souls of unbaptized infants baying at night as an omen of death. Thus, an incessant talker, a nightjar, a noisy child. Also called Gabbleratchet, Gabbleracket, Gabriel ratches, Hounds of Hell.

GAD (1) Masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning good luck, prosperity; also interpreted to mean troop. (2) Eponymous ancestor of the Hebrew tribe of Gad, one of the twelve tribes of Israel. A pastoral people symbolized by a tent. In zodiacal lore the tribe is associated with Aries. (3) David's seer and a prophet. (4) An early Semitic deity of good fortune to whom a goat was sacrificed. Possibly identical with Jupiter. (5) In oaths used as a corruption of god.

GADA Buddhist mace; a tantric symbol; emblem of Gur-gyigom-po and of Sridevi.

GADARIA Shepherd caste of Bengal. The practice of karao, the marriage of a widow to the brother of her deceased husband, obtains among them. This practice prevailed among certain classes of ancient Jews, and Ruth became the wife of Boaz, a rich kinsman of her deceased husband.

GADFLY Tormentor. Figuratively, one who wanders about idly, a gadabout, a restless busybody, especially one who annoys others. In Greek mythology a gadfly stung Bellerophon when he attempted to fly to heaven on his winged horse Pegasus; and a gadfly was sent by Hera to torture Io after Zeus had transformed her into a cow. The constellation Musca Borealis in the Southern Sky also is called Gadfly.

GADIRI In Moslem tradition the powerful; God. Word used as a charm.

GADJISA Iroquois Indian Husk-Face makers or Bushy-Heads. Their dances follow those of the Gagosa (False-Faces). Their masks are of braided corn, indicating they represent agricultural deities. They are the heralds and messengers of the False-Faces in the rite of house-purging, and their dance is performed as a curing ceremonial. Compare Gagosa.

GAEA (GAIA, GE) Greek personification of earth. A nature power born of Chaos and Divine Principle. Her descendants were Oure (Mountains), Pontus (Salt, unproductive Sea): Uranus (Heavens). By Uranus, her son, she was the mother of the Cyclopes, Hecatoncheires, Titans, the Eumenides, Gigantes, and Meliae. In some accounts, the last three groups are considered the offspring of Uranus only and in still others, the Gigantes are considered the children of Gaea, by Tartarus. Gaea typifies the female principle in nature, although she is regarded an androgynous deity inasmuch as she bore offspring by her own inherent power. She was worshiped as the All-bedewing, the All-giving, the Nourisher-of-all, Rhea, a Titan, displaced her. The golden apples she gave Hera as a wedding gift were placed in the garden of Hesperides. Her emblem is a globe, and she is portrayed as the Great-Mother tending the young. Another of her names is Titania (Dust). She may have been of Phoenician origin and adopted by early Greeks. Identified with Demeter, Themis, the Roman Tellus Mater or Terra, and with the Sanscrit Prithivi.

GAE BOLG (GAE BULG, GAI BOLGA) Literally, bellow's harp. In Irish legend the invincible harpoon or notched spear of Cuchulainn. The notches caused great injury when the spear was extracted. It was made from the bones of a great sea-monster that died fighting another monster and given to Cuchulainn by Aoife, mother of his only son, Conlaoch, and with it, Cuchulainn killed his son. The sword typifies the sun's rays, and compares with Excalibur and other marvelous swords.

GAG Silence. Dream significance: betrayal, robbery.

GAGA In Babylonian mythology wise counselor of Anshar.

GA-GAAH Crow of Iroquoian legend. One of the most sagacious of all creatures. When he traveled from the land of the sun to earth, he carried in his ear a grain of corn which Hahgwediyu planted; thus was life sustained. Inasmuch as the crow gave man the gift of corn, the crow hovers over fields to eat young grubs that endanger tender shoots and, as giver and protector of grain, claims the first share.

GAGATES A gem known to ancients. It supposedly had the power to drive away demons and serpents and was worn as a charm against dropsy and epilepsy and as a dispeller of illusions. It passed into English as jet; sometimes erroneously confused with agate.

GAGOSA Iroquois False-Face dancing society. The dancers wear masks with distorted features which represent animal spirits, deities and other supernatural, and the winds, which supposedly have the power to cure. They march from house to house to exorcise disease and are assisted by the Gadjisa.

GAHE Apache Indian spirits which inhabit the interiors of mountains. They possess the power to drive away disease and often are heard drumming and dancing within the mountains. They are of different colors, each color representing a direction: black, east; blue, south; white, north; yellow, west. Gray is the color of the clown, the most beloved and most powerful of the gahe. The gahe probably are personifications of the winds. The conception of the clown compares with that of the Christian fool (see Fool).

GAHERIS (GAHARIET) A knight of the Round Table. Brother of Gawain and nephew of King Arthur. He slew his mother Morgause for adultery. A light deity.

GAHONGA Iroquois dwarfs of rivers and rocks. Name signifies stone-throwers and alludes to their great strength and fondness for throwing stones as if they were balls.

GAHU In Tibetan Buddhism an amulet box or plaque inscribed with a symbolic design (yantra), in the center of which is a symbol or letter which is the bija (seed) of a ritual invocation.

GAIA Feminine name from the Italian meaning joyous.

GAIAR Irish sea or underworld deity. Lover of Becuma, dawn.

GAIL Feminine name derived from Abigail.

GAJA Sanscrit for elephant, which see.

GAJOMARTAN Iranian first man living in paradise. Compares with Adam, Ar-soghotch, Manu, Noah.

GAKI Japanese hungry ghosts. Any food or drink placed before them is consumed in flames. Inferior souls tormented by perpetual hunger and thirst, revengeful spirits with the power to harm. Footless spirits which are pitied as well as feared as they need human sympathy and succour and are able to recompense or punish the food giver. Depicted with swollen bellies and wide mouths. In a limited sense, any human greedy for money. Identical with Sanscrit preta.

GALAHAD In Arthurian legends son of Lancelot and Elaine. The most faithful, noblest, and purest knight of the Round Table. At the institution of the Round Table, one seat, Siege Perilous, was left unoccupied for the knight who could succeed in the quest for the Grail. Those before Galahad who attempted to sit in the chair had been swallowed by the earth; when Sir Galahad sat in it, the chair was proclaimed his. After various adventures, among which he drew a sword from a floating stone, he arrived at Sarra, where he was shown the Grail by Joseph of Arimathea and then died. Unlike Gawain and Percival, who went before him and brought about only partial restoration to the Fisher King, whose health was required for the fertility of the land, Galahad completely restored the Fisher King. By passing the test of the Perilous Seat and drawing the sword from the stone, Galahad qualified as the man of ideal purity. Galahad was a sun-hero, and his purity was that of the sun which restores fertility. His name is identical to that of the Welsh Gwalchved, meaning falcon of summer. He was therefore an aspect of the solar hero Gawain or Gwalchmir, falcon of May.

GALAHAD In Dante's Inferno love intermediary who brought Lancelot and Guinevere together. Paolo and Francesca, reading about Lancelot and Guinevere, yielded to the suggestion. In debased form typifies a panderer in Italy and Spain. Jose Echegaray in his tragedy The Great Galeoto, a form of the name, uses it to signify spiteful gossip. Italian form of Galahad. Also known as Galeotto, Gallehault.

GALAI-KHAN Mongol god or ruler of fire.

GALAR (GALLAR) In Norse mythology brother of Fjalar. The brother-dwarfs treacherously slew Kvaser and out of his blood, mixed with honey, brewed the poetic mead.

GALATEA (1) In Greek mythology one of the fifty daughters of Nereus and Doris. A sea nymph, she was loved by the giant Polyphemus whom she scorned because of her love for Acis. The jealous Polyphemus killed Acis by dashing him upon a rock, the blood of Acis forming the stream which bears his name. Galatea threw herself into the sea, where she joined her sisters. (2) An ivory statue of a woman fashioned by Pygmalion, who fell in love with his own creation. At his request Aphrodite gave the statue life. Galatea caused so much mischief because of her want of worldly knowledge, she was returned to her original shape. (3) In Vergil's Third Eclogue, a coquet; a shepherdess who fled to the willows, yet desired to be seen.

GALAXY, THE The Milky Way. Pathway to the land of the hereafter. By American Indians believed to be the path of souls leading to villages in the sun. In Greek legend a star escaped when Phaethon lit the universe and set ablaze the space over which it passed in its circular course. In Roman legend the milk which dropped from Juno's breast when she suckled Hercules.

GALBA Roman emperor, placed on the throne after Nero's death by the Praetorian guard and, after a few months, killed by them for his refusal to fulfill their expectations.

GALEN A famous Greek physician and philosopher of the 2nd century A.D., who for centuries remained the supreme authority in medicine; hence any physician.

GALGAL A variety of stone monuments in Brittany. Much like the gilgal, which see.

GALI-EDZIN Buriat god or master of fire.

GALILEO GALILEI Italian astronomer and physicist who was forced on threat of death by the Inquisition to recant his findings in public. After doing so, he is said to have whispered, "Ep-pur si muove" (And yet it moves). Typifies the man of science who has faith in the final victory of truth and sees no reason why he should sacrifice himself.

GALL Bile; used symbolically for anything bitter.

Gall of pigeons. The non-existent, from the legend that the dove sent by Noah from the ark burst its gall and that none of the pigeon family has had a gall since.

Gall and wormwood. Extremely annoying, bitter, and disagreeable.

GALLAEUS A magus in Holland. He resembles Hercules.

GALLAGHER Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning eager helper.

GALLEY Bearer of the dead over the underworld sea. Resolves into ag-el-ey, which yields, might god eye. Its symbolism is identical with that of boat, ship, and sloop.

GALLIGANTUA Giant in Jack the Giant Killer. Jack blows the trumpet (wind) of the giant and steals his three treasures, a bag of riches (rain), a hen that lays the golden egg (sun), and a harp (maker of winds). The giant represents All-Father; Jack represents man, who avails himself of All-Father's treasures.

GALLOWGLASS (GALLOGGLASS)
The armed servant or foot-soldier of an ancient Gaelic chief.

GALLOWS Disgraceful death, execution, sacrifice. See hanging. Dream significance: success.

Gallows' chips. The chips of places of execution anciently were hung in stables as a talisman against ague.

GALLU (ALU, MULLA) Sumerian demon that attacked flocks. Originally a male demon; later seven devils who ate flesh and drank blood or a goring ox or ghost which violated homes and ravished the land. In Assyria Gallu took the form of a sexless bull which prowled the streets, caused nightmares, and tried to smother sleepers. A personification of storm and tempest. Word used as a term of abuse. In Babylonia identified with Lamia. Passed into Greek mythology as Gello and into Hebraic-Christian mythology as Gelou or Gilou, a name of Lilith. Compares with Mara.

GALLUS In Roman antiquity, eunuch priest of Cybele.

GALON Heraldic Burmese bird which bears the god Vishnu. Corresponds to the Garuda. Also called Khrut.

GALTA-ULAN-TENGERI Buriat fire-god; sender of drought, fire, and heat from heaven. Also god of lightning. Compare Prometheus, Ulu-Tojon.

GALVIN Masculine name from the Gaelic, meaning bird, sparrow.

GAMA (GOUB) Hottentot hostile spirit which warred against a beneficent being Haitisi-Aibeb and was killed with the stone he himself had used to kill human beings. Identical with Gaunab.

GAMAHUT In the occult sciences, sinister murderer.

GAMALIEL (1) A masculine name from the Hebrew, meaning God is avenger. (2) A prince of Manasseh in Exodus noted for his tolerance and wisdom. (3) In the cabala the obscene; its archfiend being Lilith.

GAMA-SENNIN In Japanese mythology the toad-master.

GAMBLING Racing, risks. Dream significance: bad if one wins, good if one loses.

GAMBRINUS (GAMBRIVIUS) A hero of European folklore, renowned as the legendary inventor of ale or beer.

GAMCHICOTH In the cabala disturber of all things; its archdemon is Astaroth. Also called Gog-Sheklah.

GAME Chance, contest, endurance, recreation. When used in the sense of a wild animal, figuratively an object, person, or thing pursued. Anciently games at which jumping, running, throwing, and other contests were performed had religious significance. In Roman antiquity gladiatorial contests and games were held for purposes of execution; the victims sometimes were deity offerings.

GAMMA Third letter of the Greek alphabet, equivalent of English G. In astronomy designates a bright star, usually the third brightest in a constellation. Among Christians, a cornerstone; hence Christ as cornerstone of the church. According to mystics, it denotes the two ways of a man's life, vice and virtue; free will.

GAMMADION Symbol consisting of four capital gammas; used as an ornament on Greek ecclesiastical vestments. Four gammas formed into the Greek cross or the swastika.

GAMP A low-class, drink-sodden, uncertified nurse; also a large, untidy cotton umbrella, in allusion to Mrs. Sairey Gamp, a disreputable nurse in Dickens' Martin Chuzzlewit, who carried a bulky umbrella.

GA'N White Mountain Apache supernatural beings. They live in caves, mountains, and underground worlds. Originally they lived on earth, but taking a dislike to sickness, they sought a world where eternity was the lot of all. They are venerated as patrons of crops and impersonated by masked dancers in various religious rites. Compare Gagosa.

GANADHARA Jain leader of disciples.

GANAS Hindu servants of the deities; any of the nine classes of inferior supernatural beings who attend upon Siva. They include: Abhasvaras, Adityas, Anilas, Maharajikas, Rudras, Sadhyas, Tushitas, Vasus, Viswedevas.

GANASKIDI Literally humpbacks. Navaho supernaturals who bear cloud-humps on their backs and ram's horns (lightning) on their heads. They sometimes appear as Rocky Mountain sheep.

GAN CEANACH Irish fairy who fills the ears of idle girls with pleasant fancies; a love-talker.

GANDAREWA (KUNDRAV) Iranian lord of the abyss. He dwells in the Vourukasha Sea, abode of the White Homa; his golden heels and his body reclining in the water and his head reaching into the skies, suggesting he is the personification of a cloud mass, his head lit by sun, his body lost in shadows or depths. Sometimes he is a beneficent being, who brings the Homa, but more often a jealous guardian who withholds the plant and acts as a spy for Azhi Dahaka. He retains the epithet golden-heeled as a reminder of his periods of beneficent brilliance. In his desire to destroy the world, he often appears open-mouthed. He is finally slain by Keresaspa in a battle which lasts nine days and nights. Parallels the Hindu Gandharva.

GANDAYAH Iroquois dwarfs (jogaoh) who care for the fruitfulness of the land and release captive fish from the traps of rapacious fishermen.

GANDER Anciently a form of the primitive earth or grain god. Gander resolves into ag-an-dur and yields great-enduring-one; the word may be equated with condor, the gigantic eagle of South America. Compare goose.

GANDERCLEUGH Folly-cliff. A mysterious realm in which a person makes a goose (or gander) of himself.

GANDHA One of the Eight Mothers of Buddhism, peaceful in aspect. Her color is green, she holds a perfume vase, has two or four arms, and is usually ardhaparyankasana (dancing). Tibetan name, Dri-chab-ma.

GANDHARI Hindu smallpox goddess.

GANDHARVA In Vedic mythology originally a solitary being, a sun steed and measurer of space; personification of the fire of the sun; also guardian of the rainbow and of Soma, living in the atmosphere or sky. Later he appears in the depth of the waters, where he is the beloved of the Apsarasas, in which role he becomes a genius of fertility, and is perhaps a cloud mass, the head lit by the sun, the body lost in the shadows or depths. A protector of the Soma, he battles Indra, who pierces him. He is associated with the wedding ceremony, and in the first days of marriage is the rival of the husband. In the Brahmana he is a celestial bard. He developed into a class of beings called the gandharvas, skilled in medicine and music and fond of women. The gandharvas are described as wind-haired (spirits of wind), male dancers, musicians, and singers in Indra's heaven, exorcised by mortal bridegrooms. In some accounts they are said to be beautiful, in others to have half-animal forms, resembling the Greek centaurs, and closely connected with the souls of the dead. In the Mahabharata, they are said to be hill people. The Buddhist gandharva is a heavenly attendant; a demon which feeds on incense, ruled by Dhrtarastra. Parallels Iranian Gandarewa.

Gandharva marriage. A marriage of mutual inclination after elopement without consent of relatives.

GANDREID In Norse folklore the wild hunt or spirits' ride. Anciently, those who died during the year were believed to appear during Epiphany, and feasts were held in their honor. The wilder the rush of spirits (the stronger the winds), the better the crops in the ensuing year. The fields flown over by these spirits bear especially well.

GANDVIK In Norse lore a name of the tortuous White Sea. Literally, Serpent Bay.

GANEGWA'S The eagle or strike-a-fan dance of Iroquois Indians. Its intent is primarily curative, as the eagle has the power to restore life to wilting things and to charm animals for hunting.

GANELON (GAN) In Charlemagne romances count of Mayence. A false knight, whose jealousy of Roland led him to become a traitor, and he betrayed Charlemagne at the battle of Roncesvalles. He was morose and taciturn, and his name has become a byword for a faithless friend.

GANEŌQ Iroquois drum dance; dance of Thanksgiving to the creator Haweniyo for crops, good health, and other benefits.

GANESA (GANAPATI, GANESHA)
In Hinduism son of Siva and Parvati. A god of good fortune and wisdom, he is invoked before each new undertaking. Rain-bringer, slayer of Vritra. Probably a later form of Indra. He sometimes is represented as an elephant but more often as a man with an elephant's head, which symbolizes wisdom. He is shown with his foot on a mouse, thus he embraces the whole gamut of creation, from the greatest to the least. He usually has four arms, holding a disc or wheel, a goad or club, a lotus, and a shell. Sometimes he has six arms. His body is rotund to signify his high importance and good standing. In a conflict with a Devarishi, he lost a tusk and is shown with one whole, one broken. His image is found at cross roads and on edifices. Resembles Maya. Ganesa is related to Greek genos (I am born).

GANGA (GANGA MAI) Hindu goddess of the sacred river Ganges. Personification of abundance, health, and prowess. Wife of King Shantanu; also of Varuna. Ardat Lili, mermaids, and the Nereids resemble her.

GANGES Holy Hindu river. According to legend its source lies at the feet of Brahma, which makes it imperative for adherents of Hinduism to bathe in it on certain days. Holy water used for sacrifice; those who wish to benefit from its full efficacy bathe along her northern shore during the full moon or at eclipses. On these occasions the ashes of the dead are cast into it for the journey to the otherworld. In medieval times the Ganges stood for the far east as it was believed to flow on the eastern confines of the inhabited world.

GANGLERI Same as Gylfe, which see.

GANGRAAD (GAGNRATH, GANGRATH) Name by which Odin is called when he visits the giant Vafthrudner to exchange knowledge. As slayer of the giant, Odin is known as Jalk.

GANIS (GIDNE, KANI, KINE)
Lapp forest spirit. Echo. A beautiful maiden with a long tail. She seeks out Lapp men for sexual intercourse.

GANNET In heraldry a footless duck or goose. One who subsists by the wings of merit and virtue.

GANTRY, ELMER A venal evangelist in the novel of the same name by Sinclair Lewis. Gantry represents a type of religious racketeer.

GANYKLOS Lithuanian god of flocks. Corresponds to Veles.

GANYMEDE In Greek mythology descendant of Dardanus, son of Tros, or of Laomedon, king of Troy, and Callirrhoe. Brother of Ilos. Zeus, struck by his wondrous beauty, gave his father six fine horses for him and sent his eagle to transport Ganymede to Olympus, where he was made one of the immortals and replaced Hebe as cup-bearer to the gods; thus Ganymede is the male counterpart of Hebe, the brilliant dawn which served refreshing ambrosia (dew). Ganymede is portrayed as a beautiful, healthy, joyous youth. He bears a ewer and a two-handled drinking cup (kantharos) and wears a Phrygian cap. Sometimes shown as an eagle. Humorously his name is applied to a young waiter. In astronomy the third and largest satellite of Jupiter. Compare Garuda.

Bird of Ganymede. Eagle.

GANZA Mythical wild goose which appears in legend.

GA-OH Seneca Indian great wind giant. He lives in the northern (some accounts say western) sky and controls the four seasons or winds. He is benevolent, concerned with the welfare of mankind. The abode of the winds is at the entrance to his dwelling.

GAOKERENA Literally, ox-horn. Iranian plant of life. The white Haoma. In terrestrial form a golden or yellow Haoma. Sacred plant which had within itself the seeds of all plants and trees. Tree whose fruit drives death away, prevents decrepitude, provides children to women, husbands to girls, immortality, and renovates the universe. It is the tree of the eagle on which Camrosh and Simurgh also rest; its roots are in the waters of Vourukasha and it grows on Hara Beregaiti. Parallels the Yggdrasil, Soma.

GARAMAS The first man of the Garamantes, a nomadic people of the Sahara desert. Resembles Adam.

GARBHADHATU In Buddhism represents the world of forms. Compare Vajradhatu.

GARBH OGH Celtic ancient ageless giantess; a queen bee, whose priests engaged in ecstatic self-castration, typifying the emasculation of the drone by the queen bee in the nuptial act. She traveled with her pack of hounds (death). Irish equivalent of Artemis.

GARDANT In heraldry a beast on a coat of arms looking with full face toward the spectator.

GARDEN Beauty, cultivation, fertility, spiritual salvation. The human body. A guarded or protected place. Dream significance: (of flowers) pleasant surprise; (bare) passing shortness of money. In Chinese tradition the blending of the male principle, rock, and the female principle, water. In the Old Testament typifies future home, life, happiness, paradise, redemption. A place for devotional purposes, for retirement and meditation, and for idolatrous worship; also for banqueting and mirth.

Enclosed garden. In Christian tradition enclosure occupied by Virgin Mary; Immaculate Conception. In Hebrew tradition a bride, Heaven, Paradise, purity.

Garden chervil. Sincerity.

Gardener. The human will.

Garden marigold. Uneasiness.

Garden of Adonis. Baskets or jars of earth in which rapidly growing plants were tended for eight days at the Adonia; being then allowed to wither, they were cast into the sea with images of Adonis. The custom, of Semitic origin, was symbolical of the annual death of nature which would revive each spring.

Garden of Eden. Garden in which God created man and food-giving trees to provide for man in his state of innocence. Location of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil and the Tree of Life. An earthly paradise or earthly counterpart of the heavenly paradise, where Adam and Eve were tempted and from which they were expelled. Four rivers flowed in Eden; their names are disputed; those usually given are: Gihon (or Araxes), Halys (or Phasis or Pison), Hiddekel (or Euphrates), and Tigris. No living person was permitted to visit the garden, which was guarded by a seraph armed with a flaming sword, although Rabbi Joshua ben Levi tricked the Angel of Death into letting him sit on the garden's wall. He then stole the Angel's sword and leaped into the garden. He was permitted to stay after he surrendered the sword. The name, when applied to Mesopotamia with its vast sandy deserts as the original site of Eden, seems ironical. Compares with Dilmun, Eridu.

Garden of Gethsemane. In New Testament symbolizes redemption. The garden or orchard at the foot of the Mount of Olives; scene of Christ's agony.

Garden of Gods. A place near Colorado Springs, Colorado of highly colored and fantastically shaped rocks, the result of wind sculpture.

Garden of heaven. Represented by an acanthus.

Garden of Hesperides. See Hesperides.

Garden of Irem. A garden designed by Sheddad, king of Ad, to surpass that of Eden, but rendered invisible on completion by the touch of the death angel's wand.

Garden of light. Represented by an astor.

Garden ranunculus. In the language of flowers: You are rich in attraction.

Garden sage. Mint symbolizing esteem.

GARDENIA Fragrance, refinement, showiness. In China called pai-ch'an, symbolic of November.

GARDROFA Literally, fence-breaker. Norse mare, dam of Gnaa's horse Hofvarpner, which ran through air and water. Spirit of the wind.

GARDSVOR Literally, house guardian. Scandinavian household spirit believed to be a manifestation of the soul of an ancestor.

GARETH Literally, big-handed. In Malory's Morte d'Arthur, the youngest son of Lot, king of Orkney and Morgawse, Arthur's half-sister. To deter him from joining Arthur, his mother says jestingly that she will consent to his doing so if he conceals his name and enters Arthur's court as a scullion for one year. He agrees to this, and appears at Arthur's court unable to walk, leaning on the shoulders of two men. Sir Kay, Arthur's steward, nicknames him Beaumains because of his unusually large hands. At the end of twelve months, he is knighted. Linet begs the aid of a knight to liberate her sister Liones held prisoner by Sir Ironside in Castle Perilous. He obtains the quest, and Linet ridicules him, calling him dishwasher and kitchen knave, but he overthrows five knights, frees Liones, and marries her. He sides with his brothers Gaheris and Gawain against Agrivain in betraying Lancelot and the queen to King Arthur. Gareth is one of a class of sun-heroes who typifies weakness emerging victorious, and with lower limbs not proportioned to the body. His large hand are his rays.

GARFIELD Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning war field.

GARGAMELLE In Rabelais' satire Gargantua and Pantagruel, daughter of the king of Parpailions (Butterflies), wife of Grangousier, mother of Gargantua, who is born from her ear. She is a woman with a tremendous appetite and, on the day of his birth, she eats sixteen quarters, two bushels, three pecks, and a pipkin of dirt. She typifies mother earth. Also she is said to be meant to satirize either Anne of Brittany or Catherine de Foix, queen of Navarre.

GARGANTUA A wind or storm giant whose name came from the Spanish garganta, meaning gullet. He may have been an old Celtic god or hero, who in mortal form was called Gurgiant Brabtruc. Boulders and hills are described as his teeth or as having been vomited or ejected by him; lakes and rivers were formed from his urine. According to Rabelais, his birth was pure nescence; he was born from his mother Gargamelle alone, emerging from her ear. His appetite was so enormous, 17,913 cows were needed to supply him, as a baby, with milk. His mare was as large as six elephants. He had many marvelous adventures; he swallowed five pilgrims with their staves in a salad, combed his hair with a rake 900 feet long and let seven bullets fall each time it went through his hair. To honor his victory over Picrochole at the rock Clermond, he found and endowed the Abbey of Theleme. By Badebec he was the father of Pantagruel. His birth is explained as an attempt of man to break the umbilical cord; the quest of the hero to free the possibilities in man. He typifies that which is enormous, inordinate, with an insatiable, voracious appetite. According to some he is intended to satirize Francis I, and his mare has been held to represent Mme d'Estampes or another of the extravagant and wilful court mistresses.

GARGOYLE The exact function remains in doubt. It is said to typify evil forced to serve god, to act as a talisman to terrify the devil. Occasionally one is shown devouring a man; probably a warning to those who remain outside the folds of the Christian Church or those who offend her laws that they will be devoured by evil. The word is cognate with gargale, 14th century French word for the name of a disease of swine; also cognate with gargle. Compare Humbaba masks.

GARHAPATYA One of the three Hindu sacred fires. Fire of Agni associated with man. The other two are Ahavaniya and Dakshinagni.

GARIDE Fabulous Mongolian bird; form of the hero Otshirvani. Vanquisher of the sea monster Losy, living on the cosmic mountain Sumbur, and of Abyrga. When flying furiously the Garide causes storms. Compare Garuda.

GARLAND Cheerfulness, festival, honor, marriage, plenty, reward; also death. Athenian brides were adorned with a garland of hawthorn. Bridal wreaths of myrtle were worn by Jewish virgins in antiquity, never by a divorced or widowed woman. Roman brides wore verbena; the modern bride wears orange blossoms. In middle ages, holly wreaths were sent as tokens of good wishes; wreaths of parsley and rue were sent to ward off evil spirits. Buddhist Bodhisattva ornament; worn to the navel. Dharmapala garlands frequently are made of heads or skulls. In China one of fragrant olive is the reward for literary merit. Flowers tied with linden bark were worn by Romans at feasts to prevent intoxication. A garland was placed on the head of a victim offered as a sacrifice, and garlands were suspended at the city gates in times of rejoicing. Festival garlands were regarded unsuitable for wearing in public; hence a great honor was conferred on Caesar when the Senate decreed he might wear a laurel crown to hide his baldness, which was considered a deformity.

Garlanded flutes, pipes, and winecups. Festival.

Garland of elm and vine. Union.

Garland surrounding fruit. In Christian tradition good works of the righteous.

GARLIC A potent talisman. Used to protect children from evil spirits; effective against vampire spells. Charm against plague and used to drive away the evil eye. Bullfighters of the Aymara Indians (Bolivia) carry a piece on their person in the ring. Roman soldiers ate garlic in the belief it gave courage in battle.

GARM (GAMR, GARME) Norse watchdog of the dead; guardian of Hel. A monster wolf-dog, bloody-breasted and ferocious. He howls just before the doom of the gods. At Ragnarok he breaks loose from his chains, attacks and kills Tyr, who simultaneously kills him.

GARMAN In Irish mythology son of Glas. A mortal who abducted the goddess Mesca.

GARMENT Affluence, knowledge, lack of innocence. That which the deity (Anu in Babylonian mythology and Yaw in Hebrew mythology) gave to man and woman after they had sinned in Paradise. Votive offerings, symbolizing man's readiness to sacrifice his all to the deity represented by a tree. This led to the practice of hanging feathers or garments (rags or other substitutes) on trees. Christian saints are clothed in white robes to symbolize righteousness. To preserve one's faith is to keep one's garments clean; to pollute one's self is to defile one's garments. The Hebrew great and wealthy wore white; hence a mark of opulence and prosperity. A bridegroom's gift to his bride was a garment. Presents of dresses are alluded to frequently in Scriptures. Moses forbade the exchange of apparel between the sexes as immodest and as honoring heathen gods before whose idols such rites were practiced. To put on clean garments after washing signified freedom from care, evil, and oppression; also honor and joy according to the degree of splendor. To divest oneself of filthy garments was to obtain God's pardon; restoration to a prosperous condition. In the Orient, where a garment typifies 'to give,' it is a mark of favor, honor, or reward. In Turkey the appointment to any important office was accompanied by a gift of suitable official robes.

Bright and dazzling garment. Perfection, purity.

Double garment. In Christian belief the radiance of the soul and the clarified body.

Filthy garment. Hebrew symbol of affliction, idolatrous marriage, remorse.

Garment of byssus. In Old Testament signifies highest and most perfect holiness and prosperity.

Garment of humiliation. Frequently the garb of a sky or sun deity, who at first appears in shabby (misty) raiment but later appears in dazzling splendor, as Cinderella in servant's garb, Odin in his cape, Odysseus in beggar's clothes.

Long garment. Continual affairs or business.

Plain garment. Enemy to luxury.

Rending garment. In mourning rites a form of rag offering for the dead. Symbol of attachment to the dead who are then expected to exercise influence to help the mourners. As a votive offering substitute for the sacrifice of the individual. See blood letting, hair, rag.

Sackcloth (or haircloth) garment. Ancient Semitic prophet's garment and affected by false prophets for the purpose of deceiving. Garb of mourners and men in affliction; also garb of repentant sinners.

Seamless garment. Divinity, purity unbroken or uninterrupted. In Christian tradition passion of Christ; one of the thirteen symbols of the Crucifixion.

Vari-colored garment. Diverse or wide knowledge.

Wet garment. In Japan punishment or unmerited blame.

GARNET January birth stone. Symbolizes constancy, faith, frankness, loyalty, strength. Its virtue: provides cheerfulness and sincerity. Believed to calm quarrelsome people; insure grace, power, and victory; to protect the wearer from disease and poison; and to assure comradeship if given by a friend. It indicates approach of danger to wearer by paling and protects its owner against theft by visiting misfortune on the thief until the stone is restored to its rightful owner. If a birthstone, favored as an engagement ring. Associated with the color red and flower carnation and carries some of their symbolism. Gem of the zodiacal sign Aquarius (according to some, Capricornus); its occult powers intensified if worn by one born under its sign, and those born under its sign will be graceful, gentle, have a lofty position and long life, and have a special aptitude for the fine arts. Dream significance: solution of a mystery. Its name is derived from the Latin granum (grain or seed) and so called because its color resembles that of the seed of the pomegranate. It is in third position in the Hebrew breastplate and represents the tribe of Judah. In Persia the garnet is a talisman against injurious forces of nature, such as hurricanes and lightning.

Bohemian garnet. Denotes energy in adversity.

Vermeille garnet. Amiability.

GAROTMAN (GARONMAN)

Literally, house of praise. Iranian paradise, where dwell the souls of faithful men.

GARRETT Masculine name. A variant of Gerard, from Old Teutonic, meaning firm spear.

GARRICK Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning spear king.

GARTER Insignia of the Order of the Garter, the highest order of knighthood in Great Britain, organized in the 14th century. According to tradition King Edward III picked up a garter dropped by the Countess of Salisbury, and put it around his own leg, saying, "Honi soit qui mal y pense" (shame to him who evil thinks), which has become the motto of the order.

GARUDA In Hinduism son of Ksayapa and Vinata, brother of Aruna; or, according to one version, born from the primal egg-shell. King of birds, messenger of the gods. He had the head and wings of an eagle, the body and legs of a man, with a golden torso, red wings, and white face. Emblematic of strength and swiftness and the vahana (vehicle) and standard of Vishnu; also said to be the charioteer of Surya. Because his mother had been captured and enslaved by his half-brothers the nagas (snakes), he became their implacable foe and a serpent (rain-withholder) killer. When flying furiously, caused storms, thus typified the wind. In one legend Garuda steals the Soma, which he delivers to Indra, but while doing so is shot at by Krsanu, who knocks off one of his feathers, denoting that lightning in the form of an eagle breaks through the storm clouds and delivers ambrosia (fertilizing water) to earth. In another version Indra hurls a thunderbolt at him and steals the Soma. This resembles the Greek myth in which nectar is brought by the eagle (Ganymede) to Zeus, and to the Norse tale in which Odin, in eagle form, carries off the mead of Hyuki and Bil. In later legends, Garuda appears as a class of supernatural beings, half-bird, half-man, called garudas. Also known as Garutmant (winged) and Suparna (fair-feathered). Resembles Garuda, Phoenix, Secretary-bird, Vermilion bird, and other birds associated with the Tree of Life. See Gayatri.

GARVEY Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning spear bearer.

GASCON A blusterer, a boaster; alluding to the reputation of the inhabitants of Gascony. See Gaston. In the Paradiso, Dante refers to Clement V, a Gascon, as an ambitious, avaricious, and venal pope.

GASHAN-KI Babylonian lady of the earth; a title of Damkina; also called Nin-ki.

GASPAR (CASPAR) Masculine name from the Persian, meaning white one. Name of one of the three Magi. See under saints.

GASTON Masculine name from the Teutonic through the French, meaning hospitable. Literally, a native of Gascony Province in France. See Gascon.

GATE (GATEWAY) Passageway, security. Anciently symbolized the portal by which the dead acquired rebirth into a new form of existence; means of communication between the living and the dead. A city was regarded as captured when its gates were won, hence dominion, power. Market places and places of justice were set up near the gate; public proclamations were read at the gate. People assembled at the gate to spend their leisure hours, thus the gate was coupled with drunkards, idlers, loungers. A city was in trouble when the gate was deserted. To glorify the gate of a house expressed pride and exposed one to robbery. Because a gate appears between two pillars it symbolizes the feminine and masculine principles in nature. Compare door. Christian barrier separating the righteous and the damned; entrance to heaven or hell; thus departure from life. Hebrew symbol of the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden. Emblematic of Ezekiel. In Korea represents the knowledge or learning through which one may pass out to fields of opportunity and service.

Closed gate. Affliction, desolation, fear, the forbidden, inhospitality, misery, protection, war. In Christianity unblemished virginity; emblematic of Virgin Mary (compare garden, enclosed). Also typifies the happy security of the world of light. Hebrew symbol for prayer's end.

Gate night. In the United States, Hallowe'en, when fences, gates, and other wooden structures are carried away by revelers for bonfires.

Gate of the sun. Ancient astronomers considered the gateway of the sun to be between Cancer and Capricorn, from which the Tropics are named.

Gate of tears. Bab-el Mandeb; strait between the Red Sea and the Arabian Gulf; scene of many shipwrecks.

Gate penny. Tax paid by English tenants for the right of way through an overlord's gate.

Gate tower. Tower besides or over a castle or city gate for purposes of defense.

Horn gate. In the Aeneid gate through which prophetic dreams pass.

Ivory gate. In the Aeneid gate through which deceptive dreams pass.

Open gate. Hospitality, invitation, peace. In Hebrew tradition, joy and welcome.

Stand in the gate. A Scriptures expression which signifies to occupy a vantage ground, appear in a conspicuous place, as for utterance of a prophecy.

Twelve gates. Gates to New Jerusalem.

GATH One of the five principalities of the Philistines. Home of Goliath; later ruled by David. Dryden in Absalom and Achitophel signified Brussels, where Charles II long resided in exile.

Tell it not in Gath. Don't let your enemies hear the news; publish not the news abroad.

GATHA A Miss Nancy; an effeminate man.

GATI The six Buddhist paths or conditions of existence: 1- Deva, region of the gods; 2- Nara, region of man; 3- Asura, region of demigods or titans; 4- Naraka, region of hell; 5- Tir-yak, region of beasts; 6- Preta, region of tortured spirits.

GAUGE A twenty-four inch gauge as one of the working tools of an entered apprentice in Freemasonry is emblematic of the hours of the day, divided into three equal parts: Eight hours for usual vocations; eight hours for service to God; eight hours for refreshment and sleep.

GAUNAB (GA-GORIB) Hottentot hostile spirit who warred against Tsui Goab and wounded him in the knee. Enemy of mankind.

GAUNTLET Power, protection. In medieval armor a leather glove covered with metal and studded with gadlings; in modern attire a fencing glove. In heraldry typifies a man armed for war. In Norse mythology an attribute of Thor. Compare glove.

Fling down the gauntlet. In medieval use accept a challenge, especially in defense of another. In modern use to challenge.

Pick up the gauntlet. To accept a challenge, to enter upon the defense of a person or situation.

Run the gauntlet. To be attacked on all sides; to be severely criticized, a series of unpleasant events. From the manner in which a common sailor or soldier formerly was punished. Members of the company or crew, drawn up in two rows facing each other, were provided with whips or ends of rope. The delinquent was forced to run between the men, each one dealing him a blow as he passed. The word comes from gantlope, Old English meaning the passage between two files of soldiers.

GA-UR Sumerian legendary king. Founded first post-diluvian dynasty of Kish. Probably a fertility deity. Called Euechoros by the Greeks.

GAURI Hindu epithet of Devi in her mild form as the brilliant or yellow one. Sometimes an epithet for Varunani, wife of Varuna.

GAUTAMA SIDDARTHA (GOTAMA SAKYAMUNI) See Buddha.

GAVA-GRIVA Hindu deity paralleling the Japanese Buto.

GAVEL Authority, discipline, order. In Freemasonry emblematic of divesting the conscience and heart of all vices. Compares with the sacred axe of pygmies.

GAVIDA In Irish legend, a celestial smith. Uncle of Lugh. Another name for Goibniu.

GAVIDJEEN GO Irish architect who repaired Balor's palace. For his work he received as payment a cow (cloud), which could fill twenty barrels at one milking.

GAVIN Masculine name from the Celtic, meaning battle-hawk.

GAVROCHE In Victor Hugo's Les Misérables a plucky urchin on the streets of Paris. He fights bravely on the Day of the Barricades and goes to his death cheerfully.

GAWAIN In Malory, with Modred, the son of Arthur by his sister Morgawse. In other poems son of King Lot and Morgawse; brother of Agrivain, Gaheris, and Gareth, half-brother of Modred. Many scholars say he is probably the original hero of the Grail quest. He is said to have replaced an unknown knight mysteriously slain. Gawain pursued his errand without knowing where he was going or why. If he had enquired, he would have learned that he sought the Holy Grail and his enquiry would have restored fruitfulness to the wasteland, whose desolation, in some unexplained manner, was connected with the death of the unknown knight. Gawain did make enquiry concerning the Lance, and partial fertility was restored to the land, i.e. verdure returned for a season. Thus he was one endowed with the restorative powers of a medicine man. Gawain was an oak knight (or sun hero) and in one romance, he and a holly king, the Green Knight (a winter deity) make a compact. The Green Knight arrived at Arthur's court and challenged the knights. He would let any knight behead him on one New Year, provided that he might give the beheader a like blow on the following New Year (the alternate New Years being midsummer and midwinter). Only Gawain took the challenge. After Gawain beheaded him, the Green Knight picked up his head and rode away. The following New Years day Gawain rode to the Green Knight's Castle and was warmly entertained. The lady of Green Chapel tried to seduce him, but Gawain remained loyal to his host, except for one kiss from the lady, which he delivered to his host. The magic protecting girdle he had accepted from her he kept concealed.

When the beheading time came, The Green Knight gave Gawain a wound from which he was able to recover, and this only because he had concealed the girdle. Gawain and the Green Knight thus personify solar and lunar lights or the alternate seasons of growth and death, which regularly behead each other.

In Welsh legend, Gawain is known as Gwalchmei (falcon of May) and as Gwalchwyn (white falcon) and therefore is identical with Galahad, who in Welsh accounts is called Gwalchaved (falcon of summer). Gwalchmei is the successor of Llew Llaw Gyffes of earlier legend. Gawain's story also appears to have been borrowed from that of Cuchulainn and like him he had a golden tongue and a valuable steed (Gringalet). His sword Excalibur (Caledvwlch), given to him by Arthur, came from a divine hand. He visited a world-of-no-return (Green Chapel) and returned. Like his brother Modred, Gawain may have been a lover of Guinevere, Arthur's wife. In some accounts he, rather than Lancelot, rescues Guinevere from Meleagant. In early legends Gawain is represented as the flower of chivalry, and called The Courteous; in later romances, he is degraded, probably to leave the literary field clear for Percival to find the Grail.

GAY Masculine name from Old High German, meaning beautiful, good. Also a feminine name.

GAYAL In India a sonless ghost; especially dangerous to the young sons of other people.

GAYA MARETAN Literally, human life. Iranian first man, born from the sweat of Ahura Mazda. When created, he had the form of a beautiful youth of fifteen years, in the East regarded the perfect age. During his life, he killed the demon Arezura. When he was thirty years of age, Jahi persuaded Angra Mainyu to torture Gaya with the demons disease and hunger. Gaya died and his body turned into brass and other metals and minerals. From his members sprang gold, which was his seed. Spenta Armaiti preserved the gold and after forty years the first human pair, Mashya and Mashyoi, spring from it. His bones will be the first of all to rise up at the resurrection. Created at the same time as Gaya was the primeval ox Geush Urvan, which likewise was destroyed. In later legends, Gaya is the first king of the Iranians and father of Siyamak, and his heavenly counterpart is Gayomart. Resembles Adam, Purusa, Saoshyant, Ymir.

GAYATRI Hindu eagle who stole the Soma and brought it from heaven. She was shot at by the archer guarding the Soma. A nail of her left foot being cut off became a porcupine; the goat was born from the fat which dropped from the wound. Compare Garuda.

GAYOMART Heavenly counterpart of Gaya Maretan. He sat on his throne "like a sun or a full moon over a lofty cypress."

GAY WHITE WAY Times Square district in New York City, gayly lighted with advertising signs and noted as an amusement and theatrical center; hence any gay amusement center.

GAZA (AZZAH) One of the four oldest cities of the world, the others being Hamath, Hebron, Sidon. Samson carried away its gates and later perished under the ruins of its vast temple. The ark of God was there in the days of Eli. Throughout history it had been besieged, captured, destroyed, and rebuilt. It withstood an attack by Alexander the Great for five months. In modern times it has been called Ghuz-zeh.

GAZELLE Delicacy, gentleness, grace, loved-one. Sacred to Astarte, Hermes, Mul-lil, Osiris, Mercury, and Thoth. In Egyptian antiquity the gazelle supposedly gave notice of the rising of the waters of the Nile by fleeing from its usual feeding grounds on the bank to the recesses of the desert. Horus holding a gazelle typifies his victory over Set. In Hebrew as well as in Arabic tradition symbolizes beauty, innocence, and timidity. On ancient Semitic steles, a war god frequently has the head of a gazelle. It resolves into ga (mighty) + ze (blazing) + el (god).

GE See Gaea.

GEB Father of Osiris. He is the god of earth portrayed in the form of a man with a goose on his head.

GEBER (JABIR) An Arabian alchemist of the 8th century. His treatises on the art of making gold were in the usual mystical jargon of the period, and as a result his name became the source of the word gibberish.

GEBURAH (GEBUR) Cabalistic fifth Sefira. He typified both good and evil, upon which the world is based. He sometimes was merciful, sometimes severe. He personified awe, din, fortitude, justice, power, severity, strength, and caused Jerusalem to be destroyed. Also known as Pachad.

GEDULAH Cabalistic fourth Sefira; name of Chesed signifying magnificent. See Sefira.

GEE-GEE A command to a horse, demanding it turn to the right or go faster. To evade. A colloquialism meaning horse. Cognate with CC or see-see.

GEESE, WILD Autumn. For additional symbolism see goose.

All one's geese are swans.
Exaggerating the virtues of one's own productions or possessions.

The old woman is plucking her geese. A snowstorm, because of the fact that large flakes resemble goose feathers.

GEFJON (GEFJUN) Literally, to give or riches. Danish goddess of fertility. In Norse mythology a virgin goddess to whom all who died unmarried became maid servants. She knew the destinies of men and was a prophetess. Portrayed as plowing.

GEHENNA Figuratively, pain and suffering, place of eternal torment; literally, the Valley of Hinnom (Ge-Hinnom), infamous in the Old Testament for idolatrous rites, including the burning of children in the fire to Moloch. The place of these sacrifices was called Tophet, a name which, according to some, was derived from the Hebrew toph, meaning drum, because drums supposedly had been used to drown out the cries of the victims. King Josiah defiled the place by making it a depository of filth, and later Jews, in imitation of Josiah, used it for burning refuse from the city including the carcasses of animals and the bodies of malefactors. From fires maintained there to consume the mass of impurities that might otherwise have occasioned a pestilence is said to have come the figurative use of the eternal fire in which the wicked are punished. Thus a place of abomination, in which devils and sinners are punished in eternal fire, which in the New Testament is translated as hell. The term Gehenna is frequently applied to a prison or torture chamber.

GEHNNOM Cabalistic abode of sinners; ruled by Dumah.

GEIDE, THE LOUD-VOICED Irish legendary king. During his reign each one deemed the other's voice as sweet as the sounds of lutes because of the greatness of the friendship and peace each had for the other.

GEIRROD (GEIRROTHR, GERUTHUS) In Norse legend: (1) Son of Hraudung, brother of Agnar. Under the name of Grimnir, Odin visits him, but is treated so inhospitably the god foretells to Agnar the death of Geirrod, who finally is killed by his own sword. (2) Father of Gjalp and Greip. A giant who locked Loki in a chest for three months and was pierced by Thor with a red-hot wedge. He represents the intense heat producing thunderstorms. Geirrod's land, a land of eternal darkness, is full of treasures. It is an underworld and the way to it is filled with peril.

GEIS In Irish legend a kind of mystic prohibition or taboo. Every man who entered the Fenian ranks had four geasa laid upon him: 1- Never to receive a portion with a wife, but to choose her for good manners and virtue; 2- Never to offer violence to any woman; 3- Never to refuse anyone for anything he might possess; 4- No single warrior should ever flee before nine (i. e. less than ten) champions.

GEISHA A Japanese trained singing and dancing girl; in the misconception of the West, a licensed prostitute.

GEEKKA-O Japanese god of marriage. He binds the feet of lovers with a red silk thread.

GELDER Same as Hyuki, which see. As Gelder his steed is the gelding.

GELERT Dog of Llewellyn in an Old English ballad. Llewellyn returns from hunting. When his hound Gelert runs to meet him covered with gore, the chieftain looks to see if anything has happened to his infant son. Finding the cradle overturned and sprinkled with blood, he thinks the hound has eaten the child and kills it. Afterwards he finds the child quite safe and a dead wolf under the bed.

GELGJA In Norse mythology the gallow-chain fixed to one end of Gleipner. With this cord the Fenrir wolf was bound. It was then drawn through a black rock named Gjoll.

GELLO In Greek mythology female demon identified with the Sumerian Gallu. She is an overfond mother who dies young and appears in the form of the vampire Empusa to those who die prematurely. She also snatches away children.

GELOU (GILOU) In Hebraic-Christian mythology a name of Lilith as a demoness. Identical with the Sumerian Gallu. In Christianity also a name of Abyzu.

GELU In Rumanian demonology a male child-stealing spirit. Sometimes portrayed with one leg of brass and one the leg of an ass. A name identified with that of Gallu. Compare Empusa.

GE-LUG-PA Yellow Cap Sect of Buddhists in Tibet; founded in the 15th century A.D. Originally the Ka-dam-pa, founded by Atisa; later reforms were instituted by Tsong-kha-pa, and the name of the sect was changed to Nying-ma-pa. Chief sect in Tibet. They worship Vajradhara as Adi-buddha.

GEM Adornment, knowledge, permanency, pricelessness, purity, rareness, spiritual truth, wealth. A perfect or uncommon object or quality. Frequently used in treaties of peace as a tribute. Instrument of divination. Charm against disease and evil. Blue and green stones are considered cold and worn as amulets to reduce fever and inflammation; red and yellow in color considered warm. Creation of the devil. Among ancient Egyptians the chief judge indicated final judgment by an image of gems, called truth, which was hung on a golden chain at the judge's collar. In Greek and Roman antiquity gems with the figure of Bellerophon were worn as talismans to provide courage. In Taoism the food of the genii or immortals who lived on the Three Isles of the Blest. The principal gems and the popular symbolism associated with them dating from early times are—agate: health, longevity, wealth; alexandrite: undying devotion; amethyst: deep and pure love; beryl: everlasting youth, happiness; bloodstone: courage, wisdom; carnelian: preventer of misfortunes; cat's eye: warns of danger; chalcedony: disperses melancholy; chrysolite: gladdens the heart; diamond: preserves peace; emerald: immortality; garnet: power and victory; hyacinth: giver of second sight; jacinth: modesty; jasper: courage, wisdom; moonstone: good luck; onyx: conjugal felicity; opal: ill omen, innocence; pearl: innocence, purity; ruby: charity, dignity, divine power; sapphire: constancy, truth, virtue; sardonyx: conjugal happiness; turquoise: prosperity, soul-cheerer. See birthstones, jewel, precious stones.

Gems of the breastplate.

The gems of Aaron's breastplate or breastplate of the Hebrew high priest vary according to different authorities. The gems and colors appropriate to each Hebrew tribe as listed in the Midrash Bemidbar, rabbinical commentary on numbers, are:

Tribe	Gem	Color
Reuben	odem	red
Simeon	pitdah	green
Levi	bareketh	black, red, white
Judah	jophek or nophak	sky blue
Issachar	sappir	black (as stibium)
Zebulun	yahalom	white
Dan	leshem	sapphire blue
Gad	shebo	gray
Naphtali	ahlamah	wine
Assher	tarshish	pearl
Joseph	shoham	very black
Benjamin	yashpneh	colors of all stones

Other lists of breastplate gems are:

Tribe	Septuagint Greek 270 B. C.	Josephus Greek 90 A. D.	Vulgate Latin 400 A. D.	Authorized Version 1611 A. D.	Revised Version 1884 A. D.
Reuben	sardion	sardonix	sardius	carnelian or sardius	ruby or sardi- us
Simeon Levi	topazion smaragdos	topazos smaragdos	topazius smaragdus	topaz carbuncle	topaz carbuncle or emerald
Judah	anthrax	anthrax	carbunculus	emerald	emerald or carbuncle
Issachar Zebulun	sappheiros iaspis	iaspis sappheiros	sapphirius jaspis	sapphire diamond	sapphire diamond or sardonyx
Dan	ligurion	liguros	ligurius	ligure	amber or jacinth
Gad Naphtali Assher	achatès amethytos chrysolithos	amethystos achatès chrysolithos	achatès amethystus chrysolithus	agate amethyst beryl	agate amethyst beryl or chal- cedony
Joseph Benjamin	béryllion onychion	onyx béryllos	onychinus béryllus	onyx jasper	beryl or onyx jasper

In occult works other arrangements are given; two follow:

Tribe	Breastplate Gem	Tribe	Breastplate Gem
Reuben	red sardonyx	Judah	red carnelian
Issachar	yellow chrysolite	Issachar	chrysolite
Zebulon	sea-green beryl	Zebulon	emerald
Judah	fire garnet	Reuben	garnet
Gad	blood-red carbuncle	Simeon	lapis lazuli
Levi	lapis lazuli	Gad	jasper
Assher	white carnelian	Ephraim	jacinth
Simeon	yellow cairngorm	Manasse	agate
Ephraim	banded red agate	Benjamin	amethyst
Manasseh	amethyst	Dan	cairngorm
Dan	yellow serpentine	Assher	onyx
Dinah*	clear green jasper	Naphtali	beryl
Naphtali	dark green malachite

* A thirteenth tribe headed by a woman.

The breastplate gems were arranged in four rows of three stones each, and presumably corresponded to the mansions of the zodiac. A list of stones of the breastplate of Aaron compared with those of the breastplate of the Second Temple, without identifying tribes, follows:

Aaron	Second Temple
red jasper	carnelian
light green serpentine	peridot
green feldspar	emerald
almandine garnet	ruby
lapis lazuli	lapis lazuli
onyx	onyx
brown agate	jacinth or sapphire banded agate	banded agate
amethyst	amethyst or quartz
yellow jasper	topaz
malachite	beryl
green jasper or jade	green jasper or jade

Gem of the days of the week.	Month	Stone
See under day.	January	garnet or jacinth
Gems of the foundation stones.	February	amethyst
The twelve foundation stones of the Holy City and the order in which they were laid supposedly determined the order of birthstones in Hebrew antiquity. Compare Birthstones.	March	jasper
	April	lapis lazuli or sapphire
	May	agate or chalcedony
	June	emerald
	July	sardonyx
	August	carnelian or sardius
	September	chrysolite
	October	aquamarine or beryl
	November	topaz
	December	chrysoprasus or ruby

Gems of the hours. According to occultists, the gems assigned to the hours are:

Daylight Hour	Gem	Night Hour	Gem
7	chrysolite	7	sardonyx
8	amethyst	8	chalcedony
9	kunzite	9	jade
10	sapphire	10	jasper
11	garnet	11	loadstone
12	diamond	12	onyx
1	jacinth	1	morion
2	emerald	2	hematite
3	beryl	3	malachite
4	topaz	4	lapis lazuli
5	ruby	5	turquoise
6	opal	6	tourmaline

Gems for names. Feminine names.

Name	Gem
Adelaide	andalusite
Agnes	agate
Alice	alexandrite
Anne	amber
Beatrice	basalt
Belle	bloodstone
Bertha	beryl
Caroline	chalcedony
Catherine	cat's eye
Charlotte	carbuncle
Clara	carnelian
Constance	crystal
Dorcas	diamond
Dorothy	diaspore
Edith	eye-agate
Eleanor	elaeolite
Elizabeth	emerald
Ellen	essonite
Emily	euclase
Emma	epidote
Florence	fluorite
Frances	fire opal
Gertrude	garnet
Gladys	golden beryl
Grace	grossularite
Hannah	heliotrope
Helen	hyacinth
Irene	iolite
Jane	jacinth
Jessie	jasper
Josephine	jadeite
Julia	jade

Name	Gem
Louise	lapis lazuli
Lucy	lepidolite
Margaret	moss agate
Marie	moldavite
Martha	malachite
Mary	moonstone
Olive	olivine
Pauline	pearl
Rose	ruby
Sarah	spodumene
Susan	sapphire
Therese	Turquoise

Masculine Names

Abraham	aragonite
Adolphus	albite
Adrian	andalusite
Albert	agate
Alexander	alexandrite
Alfred	Almandine
Ambrose	amber
Andrew	aventurine
Archibald	axinite
Arnold	aquamarine
Arthur	amethyst
Augustus	agalmatolite
Benjamin	bloodstone
Bernard	beryl
Charles	chalcedony
Christian	crystal
Claude	cyanite
Clement	chrysolite
Conrad	crocidolite
Constantine	chrysoberyl

Masculine names (contd.)

Name	Gem
Cornelius	cat's eye
Dennis	demantoid
Dorian	diamond
Edmund	emerald
Edward	epidote
Ernest	eucrase
Eugene	essonite
Ferdinand	feldspar
Francis	fire opal
Frederick	fluorite
George	garnet
Gilbert	gadolinite
Godfrey	gagates
Gregory	grossularite
Gustavus	galactides
Guy	gold quartz
Henry	heliolite
Herbert	hyacinth
Horace	harlequin opal
Hubert	heliotrope
Hugh	heliodor
Humphrey	hypersthene
James	jade
Jasper	jasper
Jerome	jadeite
John	jacinth
Joseph	jargoon
Julius	jet
Lambert	labradonite
Lawrence	lapis lazuli
Leo	lepidolite
Leonard	loadstone
Mark	malachite
Matthew	moonstone
Maurice	moss agate
Michael	microcline
Nathan	natrolite
Nicholas	nephrite
Oliver	onyx
Osborne	orthoclase
Osmond	opal
Oswald	obsidian
Patrick	pyrope
Paul	pearl
Peter	prophyry
Philip	prase
Ralph	rubellite
Raymond	rose quartz
Richard	rutile
Robert	rock crystal
Roger	rhodonite
Roland	ruby

Name	Gem
Stephen	sapphire
Theodore	tourmaline
Thomas	topaz
Valentine	vesuvianite
Vincent	verd-antique
Walter	wood opal
William	Willemite

GEMARA The second section of the Talmud, consisting of amplifications, discussions, and notations of the Mishna, the first part. The Mishna interprets the written law, the Gemara interprets the Mishna. The word is from the Aramaic meaning complement.

Gematria. A cabalistic system of interpreting the Hebrew Scriptures by interchanging words whose letters have the same numerical value when added.

GEMEL (GEMMEL, GEMMOW)

Literally, hinges. A double or triple ring worn in the middle ages. At betrothals the upper and lower rings were separated over an open Bible and given to the betrothed. When triple the third section was given to the witness. At the wedding the rings were again united. If the ring hurt the wearer or dropped to the ground it portended misfortune. Mexican gemel rings are puzzle rings in four parts.

GEMETER Greek Earth-mother. A variant of Demeter.

GEMINI The Celestial Twins, third sign of the zodiac. Constellation which the sun enters about May 21. Its color is orange; its element is air; it is hot, masculine, moist; its quality is fortunate; it is ruled by the planet Mercury. It's character is dual; those born under the sign are artistic, fickle, restless, versatile; it governs the arms and shoulders. Its tarot significance is the Empress. Originally it was represented by lovers, later by twins typifying the dualism of nature, growth and decay, light and darkness, morning and evening, summer and winter. The word is from the Latin meaning twin, and in folklore and mythology associated with the Ahans or Asvins, the Babes in the Woods, the Dioscuri, etc. "By gemini," is used as a mild oath, either derived from the Roman oath by Castor and Pollux or, as considered by some, a corruption of Jesu Domine. In a corrupted form the oath is, "by jimminy." Symbolized by a couple or pair, especially by two circles, eyes (a pair of spectacles), or wheels. The gnostic symbol is AA. Anciently represented by a man and a woman, then by two men with hands joined, now simplified into a capital H.

GEMMAGOG In Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel giant son of Oromedon. He invented the poulaine shoes (shoes with a spur at the heel and a turned-up toe fastened to the knee).

GEN In Roman antiquity signified a clan, horde, tribe, a patriarchal family. Corresponds to the Japanese uji.

GENDENWITHA Literally, it brings day. Iroquois morning star.

GENEOLOGY For a record of the descent of deities of various nations see under theogony.

GENERATION Represented by aegis, bull, egg and dart, goat, phallus; personified by Astarte, Brahma, Demeter, Khnum.

GENEROSITY In an Italian icon personified by an amiable, attractive virgin in a gown of gold gauze.

Her left hand touches a lion's head; in her right she holds a chain of pearls and precious stones.

GENESIS Greek name for the first book of the Old Testament in which the story of creation is told. The name signifies, book of the generation. In Hebrew called B'reshith (In the beginning).

GENET In heraldry used in the crest of the Plantagenets.

GENEVA Center of the Reformation under Calvin; seat of the League of Nations after World War I.

Geneva courage. Pot heroism, the valor which comes of having drunk too much gin or geneva, the word geneva punning on Calvinism and gin. Also called Dutch courage.

Geneva cross. The red cross. Emblem agreed upon at the Geneva convention between World Powers in 1864, by which was regulated international usage in warfare as regards the sick and wounded.

Geneva gown. Long, loose, black gown introduced as a vestment for preaching by the Calvinists. Adopted by other protestant denominations.

GENEVIEVE Feminine name from the Celtic through the French; meaning race; and from the French, meaning humble birth.

GENEVRA (GENEVA, GINEVRA)
Feminine name from Old French. A variant of Guinevere meaning juniper. Shakespeare and Spenser use the name for a heroine who requires a champion.

GENII See genius.

GENISTA Flower symbolizing neatness.

GENITAL ORGANS Those of sacred kings were offered to the fertility mother or eaten ritually in sympathetic magic rites to provide fertility. The Lapps, when sacrificing to Veralden-Olmai, display the genital organs of a sacrificed reindeer to keep the earth alive with reindeer, to keep the reindeer healthy, and to provide them with a powerful pairing lust. The usual time for the sacrifice is at the feast of Saint Matthew, which is the reindeer's best pairing time.

GENITI GLINNE In Irish legend damsels of the glen; demons of the air. In the war between Medb of Connaught and the men of Ulster, they brought confusion on Medb's army.

GENIUS (PLURAL GENII) (1) The Romans believed each individual was accompanied through life by a protecting spirit or genius, who comforted him in sorrow, prompted him to noble deeds, etc. In time a second genius, instigator of evil, entered the individual and, on the outcome of the conflict of the two, depended the fate and nature of the individual. Later, every family, home, and state had its genii. The genius domus was the protective spirit of the head of the house or the house itself; the genius familiae was the guardian of every homestead or household; the genius loci was the spirit of the community or locality; genius tutelae was that of the goddess Tutela. Sacrifices consisted of cakes, incense, and wine offered on birthdays. An ancient Italian god who was the personification of the procreative power in each man may have been named Genius. The Roman genius is identified with the Greek daemon. The word is now applied to one of remarkable aptitude or endowment for some special pursuit. The Arabian jinnee (plural jinn), a name probably derived from the Latin genius or French genie, is a spirit for either good or bad, lower than an angel, perhaps a fallen angel. The Buddhist Hevajra treads on animals or genii known as yaksas and yak-sini, which see. In China deified human spirits, which were bringers of happiness, which dwelt in hills, and which were represented by a combined character of a hill and a man, were identical to the genii. The Eight Immortals of Taoism and the Lohan of Chinese Buddhism resemble the genii. (2) One possessed of extraordinary creative or intellectual power is personified in an Italian icon by a naked child wearing a crown of poppies. In one hand he holds a bunch of grapes, in the other an ear of corn. He is the preserver of all things.

Genii of fire. According to occultists: Anael, king of astral light; Michael, king of the sun; Samael, king of volcanoes.

GENJI Literally, the bright. Handsome and debonair prince of Japanese literature; amorous lover.

GENTIAN November 27 birthday flower; symbolizes autumn, loveliness.

Closed gentian. In the language of flowers: May your dreams be sweet dreams.

Fringed gentian. In the language of flowers: I look to heaven. Symbolizes October.

GENTLE ANNIE In Scottish lore the bloodthirsty and fearsome demon of the southwest wind.

GENTLENESS Represented by a dove, gazelle, lamb, maiden. In an Italian icon personified by a child mounted on a dolphin. In Japan typified by bamboo in winter snow or sparrows under a maple tree.

GENUFLEXION Gestures typifying humility and reverence.

GENZAEMON Character in a Japanese No Play; a nobleman who falls from affluence to poverty.

GEOFFREY (GEO, JEF, JEFF-REY) Masculine name from the Germanic through Old French. First element uncertain; second element means peace.

GEOGRAPHY Represented by a globe, map, ship. In an Italian icon personified by an old woman in an earth-colored gown. She is bent over a terrestrial globe which she measures with a compass; she carries a geometrical square.

GEOMETRY In an Italian icon personified by a beautiful woman surveying.

Geometrical square. Finder of depth, distance, and height. Description and measurement, truth.

GEORGE (GEORGIE) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning farmer, husbandman, landowner, ploughman. The name resolves into ge = earth + orge = urge, thus the vital urge. In English rural pronunciation, Jaarge, in which the primitive radical 'ar' (plough) is preserved. The feminine equivalent is Georgia (Georgiana, Georgina).

GEORGIA Emblem: Cherokee

rose; motto: Wisdom, Justice, Moderation; nickname: Empire State of the South. A native is called Georgia buzzard, Georgia cracker.

GERANT Legendary Welsh warrior-chieftain who was an enemy of oppression and tyranny. He appears in Arthurian legend as a tributary prince of Devon and one of the knights of the Round Table.

GERALD (JERRY) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning rule and spear. The feminine correspondent is Geraldine.

GERANIUM Typifies gentility. Dark geranium. November 24 birthday flower, symbolizes melancholy.

Fish geranium. Symbolizes disappointed expectation, failure.

Ivy geranium. Typifies bridal favor. In the language of flowers: I engage you for the next dance.

Lemon geranium. Unexpected meeting.

Nutmeg geranium. November 25 birthday flower, symbolizing expected meeting.

Oak geranium. True friendship.

Penciled geranium. Ingenuity.

Rose geranium. March 4 birthday flower, symbolizing preference.

Scarlet geranium. December 1 birthday flower, symbolizing comfort, gaiety.

Silver-leafed geranium. November 26 birthday flower, symbolizing recall.

Wild geranium. Steadfast piety.

GERARD (JERRY) Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning spear and hard, strong in war.

GERAS Greek personification of old age.

GERD (GERDA, GERDHR, GERDR) In Norse mythology daughter of the frost giant Gymer and Aurboda. Her maidenly beauty illuminated sea and sky. She scorned Frey because he had murdered her brother Beli until Frey's servant Skirnir cast a magic runic spell over her. To remove the curse, she became Frey's bride in the wood called Barri. To please her Frey gave his Sword of Victory as a gift to her father. Gerd is a personification of the frozen earth; Frey is the sun or god of fertility to whom she succumbs; his sword the rays which melt her.

GERE (GARI, GERI) Norse wolf of heaven. One of the two with which Odin hunts down his victims, the other being Freke. At the feast of heroes, inasmuch as Odin needs no food, he gives his meat to his wolves. Gere and Freke are aspects of storm and wind. Gere is from the Icelandic meaning greedy one or ravenor.

GERIZIM AND EBAL Twin peaks in Palestine. They symbolize blessing and cursing, growth and barrenness. See Jachin and Boaz.

GERMAINE Feminine name from the Latin through the French, signifying German.

GERONTE A name common in French comedy as that of the father of a family.

GERONTION A T.S. Eliot character. He is an old passionless man who sees his situation with merciless clarity but can find no way out of the cunning passages and contrived corridors of modern culture. He is a shadowy symbol of sensitive intellect, inert and helpless.

GEROVIT (HEROVIT) Pomeranian war god; a local analogy of Svantovit.

GERSIMI (GERSEME) In Norse mythology one of Freyja's two daughters. The other is Hnoss. Gersimi is from Icelandic meaning precious one.

GERTRUDE (GERT, GERTIE, GERTY, TRUDA, TRUDY) Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning spear and strength; spear maiden. Truda alone is maiden.

GERYON (GERYONEOUS, GERYONES) In Greek mythology monster son of Chrysaor and Callirrhoe. King of Erythea. Demon of drought and darkness, he was a winged giant with three heads, six hands, and six feet. His purple oxen (storm clouds) were guarded by a dragon with seven heads called Eurythion and a two-headed dog named Orthrus. For his tenth labor Heracles killed Geryon, Eurythion, and Orthrus, and took the cattle to Eurystheus, who sacrificed them to Hera. Erythea was identical with Hesperia, the land to the west, the other world; Geryon herded his cattle with those of Hades. The legend exemplifies the release of cloud-cows (fertile rain) by the fire of heaven (Heracles). Dante, who has Geryon symbolizing fraud, places him to guard the eighth circle in the Inferno.

GESSLER Tyrannical governor of three forest cantons. Killed by William Tell.

GESTAS (GESMAS) In the Apocryphal the bad or impenitent thief who was crucified beside Jesus. See Dismas.

GESTURES As interpreted by occultists, anatomical signs and movements are—angular: trenchant mind; body forward: brazenness, carelessness; downward: modesty; few: coolness, wisdom; looking down from above: condescension, disdain; looking over shoulder: conceit; numerous: affectation, nervousness; rounded: conciliating mind; shrugging shoulders: indifference, self-sufficiency; stamping feet: impatience; studied: self-consciousness, self-mastery; swagger: assurance, playfulness, vanity; uncertain: timidity; upward: pride.

The gestures on steles and other works of art carried the same meaning in widely separated sections of the ancient world. All given below are universal except where otherwise indicated. For additional symbolism see asanas, dance, fig (fico), mudras, vahanas.

Adoration. Clenched hand over heart, tearing out heart. Flat hand over breasts. Two arms squared before the body, palms of hands forward, thrust slightly before the body, which sometimes is on knees.

Anxiety. Right hand at left shoulder.

Arm use. See under arm.

Arrogance. Right hand on left shoulder.

Ascent to heaven. Right hand stretched heavenward, left hand pointing to or touching earth.

Bad luck immunity. Finger crossing.

Beckoning. Arm bent, index finger bent toward body. One hand touching top of head. Swinging hand downward; modern custom is to move right hand upward and downward.

Blessing. Third and fourth finger touching palm, index and second finger upright. With thumb erect, Christian blessing in the name of the Trinity. Not to be confused with Vesica Piscis sign.

Capture. Hand on head or hands and arms straight up above head.

Ceremonial. In Japan: seated, knees bent, body resting back on heels, one hand on the knees, one touching the mat.

Charm against ill luck. Right hand on left shoulder; the source of the superstition of throwing a pinch of salt that has been spilled over the left shoulder. In ancient art the powers of evil were trampled with the left foot. Among ancient Greeks, starting a walk with the right foot was considered a charm against ill luck.

Circumcision. Arms squared as in distress sign or two hands raised above head; knees drawn up. Hands straight up above head, knees not drawn up. In Africa boys who have completed circumcision place right hand at left shoulder.

Completion. Hands downward at side with palms upwards.

Contempt. Thumbing nose. Tongue out.

Death. Hands crossed over abdomen (compare Earth sign). Hands crossed over chest. Hand at throat. Hands and arms straight up above head suggests threat of death. The orant sign also symbolizes death (see orant).

Decay. Hand over abdomen, typifying that which is destructible. Compare Earth sign.

Defiance. Thumbing nose. Tongue out.

Deity offering. Hand clenched over heart, signifying the tearing out of the heart.

Deity respect. Hand shading eyes; an acknowledgement of the brilliance of the sun.

Demon dispelling. Hand waving around head.

Despair. Breast beating.

Hands downward slightly away from body, palms up. Resting side of head on one hand while supporting the elbow of that arm by the other hand, the arm of which lies across the body.

Destruction. Hand over abdomen. Thumbing nose. Tongue out.

Distress. Arms squared, two hands above head. Hand across forehead. Hand or hands upright at face. Hands and arms bent in line with head. Hands and arms straight up above head; a gesture that has become popular in motion pictures treating gangster themes. Head cupped in hands.

Driving danger away. Crossing fingers. Horn sign, which see. Trampling on the powers of evil with the left foot.

Earth sign. Hand over abdomen, typifying the physical body or that which is destructable; decay. Hand pointing downward or touching earth, calling on earth to witness. Compare heaven and earth sign.

Evil wishes. Thumbing nose. Tongue out.

Execution. Side of hand, fingers straight, across throat.

Exultation. Hand raised above head and tips of fingers touching.

Eye signs. See under eye, eyeballs, eyebrows, eyelids.

Face signs. See under face.

Faith. Hand at breast.

Fidelity. Hand at breast.

Finger use. See under finger.

Fire. Horn sign, which see. Also see Hung Society signs.

Foot signs. See under foot.

Forgiveness. Arms folded across throat beneath chin.

Gateway. Hands well apart, each grasping a straight object, usually a candle; signifies the gateway of dawn, of birth and death or of rebirth.

Grief. Plucking or tearing out hair.

Grip. Anciently a greeting to keep men from stabbing one another when meeting, leading to the modern form of greeting. Affirming vow of true till death. In fertility rites in which mock burials are enacted, the grip used in lifting the mock victim from the coffin or grave signifies resurrection. Leading from darkness into light. In mysteries and in secret societies employed for purposes of identification. In Egyptian antiquity the hand of Osiris grasped by that of Anubis represented resurrection.

Hand uses. See under hand.

Handshake. See grip.

Head uses. See under head.

Heaven and earth. Right hand pointing toward heaven, left hand pointing toward or touching earth, sign of witness or asking heaven and earth to witness attainment or false charges. In Christian art signifies descent from heaven to earth or reascent to heaven or descent to the grave and then ascent to heaven, hence resurrection.

Helplessness. Hands and arms raised above head; the U sign.

Hope. One hand at breast, the other pointing upward with arm forming a right angle. One hand raised upward with arm squared. Right hand at left shoulder or two hands on top of head.

Horn sign. Index and little finger straight out, second and third fingers bent so as to touch tip of thumb; sign of fire element, of Diana as the crescent moon, protection against the evil eye, especially in Italy, where it is used to drive away danger. In China indicated membership in the dreaded secret brotherhood, the Hung Society; also a sign of Kwan Yin, goddess of mercy.

Horror. Head turned over shoulder, hand raised, palm outward.

Humility. Genuflexion. Hands crossed downward in the form of cross of the equinox or Saint Andrew's cross.

Hung Society. See under Hung Society.

Identification. Grips or handshakes, especially employed in mysteries and secret societies.

Immunity from bad luck. Finger crossing.

Impotence. Hands crossed downward.

Initiation. Hand at mouth to indicate the secrecy of the rites; also a secret grip or handshake. In primitive societies where, at puberty, boys are initiated as full members of a tribe in circumcision rites, the gestures of circumcision given above apply.

Insult. Left foot forward. Thumbing nose. Tongue out.

Leg signs. See under leg.

Light, dazzling. Hand shading eyes.

Love. Hand over heart.

Lover despairing. Clenched hand over heart, tearing heart out.

Martyrdom. Right hand on left shoulder.

Metal (Gold). Hand raised above head with fingertips touching, signifies exultation. One of the element signs of the Hung Society.

Mourning. Man plucking or tearing out the hairs of his beard, woman plucking or tearing out the hairs of her head.

Mystery. Hand at mouth.

Nose use. See under nose.

Obligation. Two hands before body, one above the other a few inches apart, the palms horizontal facing each other.

Obnoxious odor. Fingers pinching nostrils.

Offending a deity. In Java the rice spirit is offended if one enters a rice store left foot first.

Orant. In ancient Greek art

a female worshiper represented usually with uplifted arm and palm as if praying. A painted figure symbolizing the dead draped in female garments but unidentified as to sex. In Christianity a gesture of departed souls in prayer for mortals.

Peace. A Moslem enters a house or mosque right foot first to show that he enters in peace.

Pillars. Hands well apart, each grasping a straight object, usually a candle representing universe pillars, the gateway or pillars of dawn, of birth and death, or of rebirth.

Plea. Arms folded across the throat beneath the chin, thumb pointing to the throat, the plea being to the deity not to cut off the head because of sins; originally a plea of the dead. Wetting index finger and drawing across throat, the plea being to the deity to cut the throat if an untruth is being told.

Plucking (or tearing out) beard. Man in mourning.

Plucking (or tearing out) hair. Woman in mourning.

Praise. Arms raised forward at an angle to head level, palms downward, head sometimes bent. Two hands raised above head, arms squared.

Prayer. Arms raised forward at an angle to head level, palms downward, head sometimes bent. Bowed head. Fingers crossed. Fingers in fist, thumbs straight, projecting upward, fist leaning on altar, forehead touching thumbs. Hands folded, interlocking fingers pointing upward. Hand shading eyes. Palms together at chest, fingers upward. Right leg crossed over left, signifying prayer by a dead man and alluding to the position of Christ's legs on Calvary. Two hands above head, arms squared. The orant sign also symbolizes prayer (see orant).

Preservation. Hands on top of head. One hand at breast, the other hand pointing upward with arm forming a right angle. One hand raised upward with arm squared.

Protection from evil eye. The horn sign, which see above. Trampling powers of evil with the left foot.

Recognition. Hands on hips, thumbs forward. The Hung Society sign is one hand shading eyes with the other hand over the heart.

Regret. Hands downward slightly away from the body, palms up. Resting side of head on one hand while supporting that arm by the other hand, the arm of which lies across the body.

Rejection. Turning head over right shoulder, right hand raised, palm outward, as if to shut out a sight.

Reverence. Genuflexion. Hand over heart. Shading eyes with hand.

Roger. Circle made with thumb and forefinger to indicate everything is okay, everything is all right.

Sacrifice. Right hand on left shoulder.

Salaaming. Arms raised forward at an angle to head level, palms downward, head sometimes bent.

Salutation. Hand flat over heart.

Secrecy (silence). Index finger at mouth.

Shearing. Index finger separated from the other three, which are held close together, or fingers separated two and two, signifying the shearing of the enemy or of evil. In medieval practice typified the cutting off of the foot of a criminal, which was a common form of punishment.

Sorrow. Striking the front of forehead with fingers or palm.

Plucking or tearing out hair.

Surrender. Hands on head or hands held high over head.

Sympathy. Striking front of forehead with fingers or palm.

Tearing out heart. Deity offering. Lover despairing.

Throat cutting. Death. Plea to the deity to cut throat if an untruth is being told.

Tongue signs. See under tongue.

True till death. Grip or handshake.

Trustworthiness. Hand at breast. Wetting index finger and drawing across throat as a plea to the deity to cut the throat if an untruth is being told.

U sign. Hands in U at face; appeal for help.

Vesica Piscis. First two fingers crossed, third and fourth bent to meet the thumb away from palm. In Christian art emblem of Christ, the Virgin or an apostle. Not to be confused with blessing sign.

Volunteer. In the East the tongue is put out to indicate that one is placing oneself at the service of one honored.

Vow. Grip or handshake.

Water. Element sign of the Hung Society, hands on hips, thumbs forward; signifies recognition.

Witness. Right hand pointing to heaven, left pointing to or touching the earth.

Wood. Element sign of the Hung Society, hands crossed downward; signifies impotence.

GESU Jesu, Jesus. Represented by the letter G.

GETAE A people probably descended from the Mongols, who poured down on the Roman Empire and destroyed much of the civilization of Europe.

GETHSEMANE See Garden of Gethsemane.

GETTY Gods of Northern Buddhism.

GEUSH URVAN In Iranian mythology soul of the primeval ox. The fifth creation and sole-created animal being, it contained the germs of all the animal species, of fifty-five species of grain and twelve kinds of medicinal plants. Sometimes described as female, sometimes as a bull. After living for 3,000 years, it was slain by Angra Mainyu. In another legend the bull slain by Mithra, and from its seminal energy came a pair of oxen followed by 282 pairs of every species of animal. Its soul or fravashi went to heaven as the guardian of animals. It was created at the same time as Gaya Maretan, from whose seed humans sprang. Compare Sar-saok.

GEVAR (GEWAR) Norse moon god who guided the hero Sviddag on his quest for the irresistible sword. In an older moon-myth, the ward of the moon-ship which is attacked and burned by Ivalde.

GHADDAR An evil spirit of Arabic lore. Offspring of Iblis.

GHANTA A bell, Buddhist ritual object. A non-tantric symbol. With a vajra (thunderbolt) handle, emblem of Trailokayavijaya, Vajradhara, Vajrasattva, and Yidam.

GHARMA Hindu sacrificial vessel. Vishnu was leaning on his bow, the string of which was being gnawed by ants. When the string gave way, the two ends of the bow snapped and cut off Vishnu's head. The sound ghrm with which it fell to the ground became gharma, the sacrificial kettle. As Vishnu's strength dwindled, the mahavira, or pot of strength, was formed. Later Vishnu's head was restored.

Ghibellines and Guelphs

Rival political factions. The Ghibellines belonged to the imperial party of medieval Italy, supported the German emperors, and opposed the Guelphs, the papal and popular party. Ghibelline is the Italian form of Waiblingen, the name of an estate belonging to the imperial German family and used as a war cry. See Guelphs.

GHINO DI TACCO Famous robber who murdered the judge who sentenced his brother to death.

GHOLSONG On the Sipa Khorlo, Tibetan Buddhist Wheel of Life, the animal kingdom, both of those living out of water and under water. Those living out of water are regarded as free beings; those living under water are regarded as in bondage. While birds are preyed on by fierce creatures, and animals and fish are harassed by monsters, all are beings chased by men. Everything is confusion, representing the state of the minds of humans who have sinned through weakness and stupidity and are reborn in this realm. Life in the animal kingdom is the most tolerable of the sorrowful state because the margin for modification is limited.

GHOST The apparition of a dead person which foretells events; night dancer; night wanderer; spirit of the dead which haunts the living. Specter of a deceased person which roams about throughout the night, but which is powerless as soon as day breaks. The conscience or voice within, the shadow, the soul or spirit, the undying principle in man. The breath of life, thus to "give up the ghost," is to die, to release the spirit from the body. Symbol of the Hallowe'en festival. One who does the brain work for which another takes the credit, especially in art and literature, is called a ghost. Dream significance: (black) deceit, mourning, sorrow; (dressed) threat of illness; (several) distress; (speaking) advice worth listening to; (white) consolation, happiness, joy. Compare corpse, etimmu, gigim, lemure, mane, spirit, timi. In Babylonian mythology pregnant women or those who died without offspring were disconsolate wanderers. The living looked upon them as unpure and, doomed to wail in darkness, they were prone to work evil against mankind. The ghosts of those who had drowned, travelers and warriors who had perished away from home and had been left unburied, those who had died violently, and those of prisoners who had been executed also were malicious. In Burma and Indo-China, because ghosts are spiteful, funeral processions follow a zigzag course to the burial ground so that they may not easily find their way back. In Japan ghosts are footless ancestors which become spirits of forests and mountains. Spirits of the water are fish, tortoise, and serpent ghosts. Ghost ships are called shoryobune. See ashura, gaki.

Ghost candle. Candle kept lighted in a death chamber for the purpose of keeping ghosts away.

Ghost dance. Round dance of North American Indians. A rite of invocation, the purpose of which is, through trance and vision to bring the dancer into communion with the unseen world and departed kin. The frenzied dancers moved monotonously until one after another fell prostrate to the ground. During their seizures, in which they believed they were in communication with the souls of the dead, they had visions of deliverance from the whites.

Ghost food. Food set out to be eaten by the spirits of the dead.

Holy Ghost. See under Holy.

GHOUL Arabic spirit which haunts burial grounds and other sequestered spots. It robs graves and feeds upon dead bodies. Ghouls are the offspring of Iblis. Figuratively, one whose pleasures or pursuits are grim, such as blackmailing, grave-robbing, preying on others.

GIADRUVAVA In Taino Indian mythology companion and servant of Guagugiana. While on an errand for his master, he was taken away by the sun, the transformer, and turned into a singing bird, which, one night each year, called Guagugiana to come to his aid.

GIAIA In Taino Indian mythology father of Giaiael, who attempted to kill him; he instead killed his son. He saved Giaiael's bones in a calabash and they turned into fish. So much water ran out of the calabash it overflowed the country; thus the sea had its origin.

GIAIAEL See Giaia.

GIAN BEN GIAN Arabian ruler of the fabulous Golden Age. He was king of the jinn and founder of the Pyramids. Azazael overthrew him.

GIANT (OR GIANTESS) Conquest, enormity, force of evil, sagacity, superhuman strength, ugliness, violence. Personification of an event or thing of great size, and of the wilder elements or phenomena of nature such as earthquakes, frost, hurricanes, sleet, storms, volcanoes. Dream significance: over ambitious. Primitive peoples believed that men originally were giants who degenerated to the present size. In legend portrayed as fierce, haughty, helpful, insolent, joyous, morose, stupid, warlike, or wise. They are celestial smiths, creating the chariots, mansions, and weapons for the gods. They sometimes attempt to dethrone the gods.

Some well known legendary giants are: Adamastor, spirit of the stormy cape of Good Hope; Alifanfaron, in Cervantes' Don Quixote; Antaeus, wrestler in Greek mythology; Ascapart, Brythonic giant; Atlas, Greek Titan; Balan of the Arthurian cycle; Blunderbore, in the nursery-tale Jack the Giant Killer; Briareus in Homeric legend; Brobdingnag in Swift's Gulliver's Travels; Cacus, giant strangled by Hercules; Cormoran, Cornish giant in Jack the Giant Killer; Cyclops, one-eyed giant in Greek mythology; Enceladus, most powerful of the conspirators against Zeus; Ephialtes, giant deprived of his left eye by Apollo and of his right eye by Heracles; Ferracuta, giant slain by Orlando; Ferragus, Portuguese giant who took Bellisant under his care after the Emperor of Constantinople divorced her; Fierabras, one of Charlemagne's paladins; Finn mac Coul, Irish hero; Galligantus, slain by Jack the Giant Killer; Gargantua, giant of medieval legend; Geryoneo, giant with three bodies typifying Philip II of Spain (ruler of three kingdoms), in Spenser's Faerie Queene; the Gigantes; Gog and Magog, in British legend; Goliath, killed by David; Grangousier, a king of Utopia in Rabelais; Grantorto, a giant in Spenser's Faerie Queene who withholds the inheritance of Irena (Ireland); Guy of Warwick, Brythonic hero; Gyges, giant mentioned by Plato, the Hecatoncheires of Greek mythology; Malagigi, one of Charlemagne's paladins (in France called Maugis); Orgoglio, a giant typifying arrogant pride in Spenser's Faerie Queene; Orion, beautiful giant in Greek mythology; Pantagruel, Rabelaisian giant; Polyphemus, one of the Cyclops; Saint Christopher; the Seven Champions or patron saints of England, France, Ireland, Italy, Scotland, Spain, and Wales; Skrymir, Norse giant; the Greek Titans; Tityus, son of Zeus and Gaea; Typhoeus, the father of the Harpies; Typhon, Greek name for the Egyptian Set.

Evil giants. In folklore giants holding lords and ladies as prisoners are allegories of noble principles and qualities held captive by greed, selfishness, and vice.

Giant Dance. Norse sword dance in which the leading characters are Odin and Frigg.

Giant Despair. In Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress the giant occupying Doubting Castle. He seizes and imprisons Christian and Hopeful.

Giant Grim. Giant in Pilgrim's Progress who endeavors to halt pilgrims on way to Celestial City, but is killed by their guide, Great-heart.

Giant Hunter. Constellation in the Northern Sky also known as Great Hunter or Orion.

Giant killer (Giant queller). In folklore one who destroys giants, hence one who overcomes brute force by cunning and prowess.

Giant Pagan. In Pilgrim's Progress a dead giant passed by Christian in Valley of Shadow of Death.

Giant Pope. In Pilgrim's Progress an infirm old giant who has the desire but not the power to prey upon pilgrims.

Giant Slaygood. In Pilgrim's Progress a giant robber-chief. Personification of evil killed by Greatheart.

Giant with dragon-like tail. Typifies lust and passion.

Jack the Giant Killer. The original was Corineus the Trojan, companion of the Trojan Brutus, good-humored giant content to kill all the local giants and be king of Cornwall.

Waltzing giants. Sand-whirls with a dancing motion.

GIBBORIM Ancient Hebrew heroes; men of fame.

GIBEON In Old Testament mountain on which the sun stood still at the command of Joshua. Seat of Solomon's altar, where he made his sacrifice after which he had his famous dream in which God appeared to him.

GIBIL Babylonian fire god and god of lustration. Messenger of Enlil. Also called Girru.

GIBRALTAR Impregnability, indomitable strength. Guardian of the entrance to the Mediterranean. Symbolized by a triple-towered castle on a rock; a key pendant from a central gateway. Anciently called Calpe, one of the two pillars of Heracles.

GIDEON (1) Hebrew masculine name meaning great warrior, hewer. (2) A prudent judge of Israel who refused kingship. He was a valiant warrior and led a group of 300 men in combat against the Midianites and liberated his people. He later fell into error and sin and worshiped the golden ephod with idolatrous veneration. At his marriage he took the name Jerubbaal (let Baal strive). Father of Abimelech and Jotham.

GID-KUZO Finno-Ugric god. Cattleyard man or ruler. A kindly spirit which protects cattle from beasts of prey and sickness and sees that they increase.

GIFFORD Masculine name from the Germanic, meaning give and bold, and from the Gaelic, meaning surmounter.

GIGAKU Literally, music. Japanese Buddhist dance relating to mythical beings, indicating what happens to people when they die.

GIGANTES Greek monstrous race of giants. Earthborn, they sprang up from Gaea (earth) when the blood of the mutilated Uranus fell on her. They were serpent-legged and were personifications of fire. The legends which relate their activities are fire myths. Their fights and their death-dealing weapons symbolize eruptions of volcanoes. The most daring and valiant among them were Enceladus, Mimas, and Rhoetus.

Gigantomachia. War of the gigantes against Zeus and the Olympian gods, in which the gods were triumphant when the giants were thrown so that their feet were no longer on mother-earth. Compare Titanomachy.

GIGIM (GIDIM) Literally, he of darkness. Sumerian ghost. A spirit of the underworld which spreads disease. Compare etimmu, timi.

GIHON One of the four rivers of the Garden of Eden. In Christian tradition represents Saint Matthew. Believed to be identical with the Araxes.

GLJIGOUAI Literally, those who make the day. Algonquin supernatural beings; servants and messengers of Michabo. Personifications of the rays of the sun.

GILBERT Masculine name from the Germanic through the Norman, meaning pledge and bright, famous. Feminine form, Gilberta, (Gilberte, Gilbertine).

GILDA Feminine name from the Celtic, meaning servant of God.

GILDEROY Nickname of a notorious cattle-thief and highwayman named Macgregor, who was hanged on a gallows thirty feet high in Edinburgh in the 17th century.

Hang higher than Gilderoy's kite. Be punished more severely than the worst criminal. Gilderoy was hung on a gallows so high his body suggested a kite. The greater the crime, the higher the gallows, was at one time a legal axiom.

GILEAD Literally, mound of witness. In the Old Testament renowned as a land of milk and honey, a land of plenty. On this mountain, Jacob and Laban probably set up their monument. The section was a center for the growth and export of balsam or balm; thus the expression: Balm of Gilead, meaning a soothing agency or influence.

GILES Masculine name from the Latin name Aegidius, and from the Greek through the French, meaning aegis bearer, kid, shield.

GILGAL Stone sanctuary at which Israelites held national celebrations, such as circumcisions, sacrifices, etc. Name resolves into ag-il ag-al, i.e. mighty god, mighty god. Compare Galgal.

GILGAMESH (GILGAMES, GILGAMISH, GILGAMOS) Legendary king of Erech, capital of Shinar (Sumer). He ruled with such unrelenting severity (scorching aspect of the sun), the gods fashioned a savage man named Enkidu (wind) to punish him. In their fight Gilgamesh won and the two became friends. Enamored of his beauty and strength, Ishtar offered Gilgamesh her love, which he scorned. The goddess called upon her father Anu to avenge the insult, and Anu sent a celestial bull (rain withholder) to Erech. Gilgamesh and Enkidu severed the leg (emasculated) the bull and threw the phallus against the goddess. An incident probably derived from the rite of self-emasulation which had been practiced in the honor of Ishtar. See eunuch, emasculation. Ishtar thereupon killed Enkidu and snote Gilgamesh with the disease. To cure his leprosy and win back his friend, Gilgamesh sought his ancestor Utnapishtim who, with his wife, had survived the deluge and who possessed the secret of immortality. Utnapishtim showed Gilgamesh the plant of life at the bottom of the sea beneath the earth. Gilgamesh dove for it and, as he stopped to rest on the way back to the upper world, a sea serpent, sent by jealous gods, devoured it; thus the serpent gained immortality, Gilgamesh lost it, and man remained mortal. See death. The gods pitying Gilgamesh granted him the privilege of visiting Enkidu in the underworld. The Gilgamesh epic may be a combination of popular tradition and a sun myth. In an account attributed to a Greek text, the birth of Gilgamesh was prophesied when his grandfather Seuechorus, king of the Babylonians, was warned that his daughter would bear a son who would seize the throne. Seuechorus locked his daughter in a citadel, where she bore a son by an obscure man. The boy, thrown from the tower, was seized by an eagle and carried to a garden-er, who reared him. When he grew to manhood, Gilgamesh fulfilled the prophecy. This legend resembles those of Oedipus and Perseus. The tossing of the child may be an incident derived from a sacrificial rite. Gudanna, Humbaba, and Zu are the monsters conquered by Gilgamesh. In early rites, Gilgamesh may have been worshiped as an underworld deity, mentioned in omens with Ningishzida and associated with the serpent, and later connected with the sun-god in the netherworld as judge of the dead. In the month of Ab (July-August) he released heroes from their underworld prison house for nine days. This probably echoes a rite honoring the dead in mysteries connected with the visit of Gilgamesh to Enkidu in the underworld, where he frees the soul of his friend and opens the realm to heroes as a paradise, or the night (or seasonal) transit of the sun. With the dying down of the wind (Enkidu's death), the sun became sick (disease and drought-dealing scorching sun).

The Gilgamesh epic, as a time myth, has been related in twelve tablets corresponding to the transit of the sun through the twelve branches of the zodiac. The first tablet probably corresponded to March or April. 1- Gilgamesh is named tyrant of Erech. Enkidu is created to oppose him. 2- Enkidu is civilized by a shamkhat (joy maiden from Ishtar's temple), who yields herself to him for seven nights and six days. Gilgamesh and Enkidu meet in combat but become friends. 3- Enkidu deserts the harlot and with Gilgamesh sets out to slay the monster Humbaba. 4- Gilgamesh and Enkidu on the way to the forest of Cedars of Lebanon to find Humbaba. 5- The head of Humbaba is cut off (fertility is released). 6- Ish-tar becomes enamored of Gilgamesh. Gilgamesh rejects her love. Gilgamesh and Enkidu slay the bull sent to destroy Gilgamesh. 7- Gilgamesh is stricken with leprosy. Enkidu is slain by the gods. 8- Gilgamesh wails for his friend. 9- Gilgamesh visits Utnapishtim. 10- Utnapishtim reveals to Gilgamesh the plant of immortality is in the sea. 11- Gilgamesh is robbed of the plant. 12- Gilgamesh visits Enkidu, i.e. the sun sinks into the underworld. Gilgamesh is the prototype of Fraoch, Izanagi, Llew Llaw, Mithra, Orpheus, Samson.

GILLIAN Masculine name from the Latin Julian or Julius, meaning soft-haired; also signifies an attendant on a chieftain; later meaning a gillie or servant of Christ. Also a feminine name, a variant of Juliana.

GILLING In Norse mythology father of Suttung. When Gilling and his wife were slain by the dwarfs Fjalar and Galarr, Suttung demanded the poetic mead as payment for the murders. A fertility myth.

GILLYFLOWER February 14 birthday flower, symbolizing natural beauty, bonds of affection, unfading beauty. In the language of flowers: She is fair. One of the flowers thought to grow in Paradise.

GILVAETHWY In Welsh legend son of Don. For seducing Goe-win, a fertility goddess, Math turns him into a deer, a swine, and a wolf before permitting him to resume his own shape. The animals typify the different seasons.

GIMEL (GHIMEL) Third letter of the Hebrew alphabet meaning camel. Its form is believed to have been borrowed from a camel's hump, which was the oldest form of the letter. Its numerical value is three. It symbolizes the taking hand (hand half closed) or throat, hence that which encloses, a canal, that which is hollow. Its planetary correspondence is Earth (or Moon); its symbolic correspondence is action; its tarot deck correspondence is the Empress; its zodiacal correspondence is Venus. Its color is blue; its direction on the cube of space is below, signifying that which is under control, uncertain; its intelligence is subconscious, uniting, and it is associated with a life of commerce or travel. In white magic it is in correspondence with Gadol, which signifies grand or great. Its attribute is Binah or Intelligence. It is assigned to the angels of the third order, whom the Hebrews called Aralym, the mighty and strong. The Aralym are the Thrones of the cabalists and the third choir. By their ministry Elohim establishes and maintains the form of fluidic matter. See Alphabet Affiliations.

GIMEL SIN Babylonian king (2500 B. C.) who was deified during his lifetime; after his death a temple in Lagash (Lord Great Ash) was named after him.

GIMLE (GIMLI) Norse abode of the righteous dead. Once the hall of the Alfarr, abode of the dead after Ragnarok. Gimle and Naastrand refer to the state of things after Ragnarok; Valhal and Hel refer to the state of things between death and Ragnarok.

GIMOKODAN Philippine Island afterworld which lies beneath the earth. It is divided in two; one section is red for those killed in combat; the other section is like the upperworld except in reverse. Located at its entrance is the Black River, in which spirits bathe that they may forget the former life. A giant female covered with nipples suckles the spirits of infants. Spirits move about as they did on earth, but only during the hours of darkness.

GINA Australian old man of the moon. He has a bent back.

GINEVRA In an Italian legend bride who, in a game of hide and seek on her wedding night, hid herself in a trunk with a spring-lock. The lid fell down upon her, and she was not discovered until years later, when her body was a skeleton. Ginevra is an Italian form of Guinevere.

GINGER In Melanesia used to win the affection of women. In the Philippine Islands chewed to drive out evil spirits which cause disease.

Gingerbread. Anciently a burial or deity offering. A yule cake typifying the body of Christ. Because the cakes are so profusely decorated, the word has come to mean a gaudy and unnecessary ornament, something showy but worthless, vulgar.

GINGKO TREE Japanese legendary tree of milk, protectress of nursing mothers. Also called icho.

GINNUNGA-GAP Literally, yawning chasm. In Norse mythology the great chaos, the gulf or whirlpool where all things began. Realm of the All-Father. To its north was formed Nifelheim, to its south was formed Muspelheim. Ymir was born and slain in Ginnunga-gap by the gods who made the world out of his body. See Ymir.

GIN-SAI Korean fabulous bird capable of diffusing so venomous an influence even its shadow poisons food.

GINSENG Chinese, Japanese, and Korean herb said to possess the elixir of life. Also revered as an aphrodisiac and as a panacea for all the ills of mankind.

GIOLLA DEACAIR (GILLA DECAIR) Irish horse god, owner of a miserable looking horse. When he placed it among the Feinn's horses, it bit and tore them. Conan mounted it in order to ride it to death; instead it carried Conan to the Land of Promise, where he remained until rescued by Finn mac Coul. Diarmaid pursued it. The name is sometimes applied to the horse, which typifies clouds in conflict with the rays of the sun (Feinns) or with the moon (Diarmaid). Resembles a Greek Centaur.

GIOVANNA Feminine name corresponding to masculine Giovanni, Italian form of John.

GIOVAVA Taino Indian grotto from which the sun and moon emerged.

GIPTES Norse fates or norns, who execute the decrees of Urth. Also known as Dises, maids of Urth.

GIRAFFE (1) A name of the constellation Camelopardalis in the Northern Sky. (2) Coquetry, gentleness, inquisitiveness, playfulness. Love of eloquence, its height and wide range of vision signifying high and wide range of thought. Sweet smelling, from the acacia leaves which are its food.

GIRDLE Command over passions, fortitude, love compelling, marriage, pilgrimage, power, protection, righteousness, shackle, strength, truth, virginity. Costume of the gods. Attribute of love and mother goddesses. Anciently, those who wore long loose robes bound their garments with a girdle or sash when they wished to fight or run; hence to have loins girded was to be prepared for the call to service by one's lord or master. To have the girdle loose was to be unnerved, unprepared for action. Money and other things were carried in the girdle; carpenters carried their tools in it, clerks their ink-horns, etc. Garment of Brynhild, a Bodhisattva or Dharmapala, Laurin, Thor, Virgin Mary. Christian symbol of humility, obedience, poverty; preparedness for the services required by God. Compare cord. Among Finno-Ugrics a sacrifice girdle is bound with various objects and tied to a tree worshiped as the abode of a nature god, as a pledge of a sacrifice to be made at a future date. Compare garment, rag. Among Persians and North African tribes the girdle is removed from the bride as part of the wedding ceremony, and neither she nor the groom are permitted to wear one for seven days after the ceremony.

Girdle of Isis. Power, protection.

Girdle of straw. A fertility emblem. Said to provide magic aid to a woman about to give birth. See Straw figure burnings.

Girdle of Venus (Aphrodite). Amiability, female principle, grace.

Girdle tied in red carnelian.

Ancient Egyptian amulet typifying the blood of Isis, which had the power to wash away sins of the possessor.

Starred girdle. Heavens, zodiac.

GIRL'S DAY Japanese fecundity festival celebrated on March 3. Also called Girl's Doll Day, as dolls are displayed.

GIRRU (GIBIL) Babylonian god of fire. Invoked in incantations against sorcery.

GIRTABLILI Babylonian scorpion-man. Chaos demon in the train of Tiamat. Identified with the constellation Sagittarius in the Southern Sky.

GISELE (GISELA, GISELLE)

Feminine name from the Germanic, meaning hostage, pledge, servant.

GISH BAR (GISHZIDA) Babylonian sun god. With Tammuz stationed at the gates of heaven. They represent phases of the sun at its approach to the summer solstice.

GISL From the Icelandic meaning sunbeam. In Norse mythology, one of the ten horses of the gods.

GITA One of the Eight Mothers in Buddhism; peaceful in aspect. Her color is red and she holds a lyre. Usually arhaparyankasana (dancing). She has two or four arms. Her Tibetan name is Gluma or Lu-ma.

GITCHE (KITSHI) Algonquin Chief Manito; Great Spirit; Master of Life. Great mystery of all things. Source of good.

GIUDECCA In Dante's Inferno

fourth ring of the ninth circle. Named from Judas Iscariot. Here sinners are wholly imprisoned in ice. It is the center of the earth and half the monstrous form of Lucifer is above the ice, half below. He has three heads and in his teeth holds the mangled spirits of Brutus, Cassius, and Judas.

GIUKINGS Gudrun, Gunnar, Guttorn, and Hogne, the daughter and three sons of Giuki and Grimhild. Personifications of dark powers. Originally the Giukings were the Hniflungs or Nibelungs who possessed the Andvare hoard through the marriage of Gudrun to Sigurd. They correspond to the Burgundians of the Nibelungenlied, Kriemhild, Germot, Giselher, and Gunther. In the Nibelungenlied the Burgundians possess the Alberich hoard through the marriage of Kriemhild to Siegfried.

GIZHIGOOKE Algonquin Indian day-maker.

GIZO Spider hero of Hausa folklore. Noted for his bravado and cunning, his rapacious appetite, his sleeplessness, and for his ability to escape by his wits the consequences of his own tricks. He outwits the elephant, hippopotamus, hyena, jackal, lion, snake, and sometimes man. The praying mantis (koki) is his wife.

GJALLAR HORN (GIALLAR HORN)
Horn blown by Heimdall, guard of Bifrost, at Ragnarok to sound the note of the doom of the gods. The note was heard throughout the universe. Mimer drank the waters of his well of understanding and wisdom from Gjallar horn.

GJALP In Norse mythology Geirrod's daughter by Ran. Gjalp flooded Vimur River as Thor was crossing it on his way to visit Geirrod. She was one of the nine mothers of Heimdall and one of the nine giantesses that ground Ymir's body on the World-mill. Personifies waves of the sea.

GJOL (GJOLL) In Norse mythology one of the twelve poisonous ice-cold rivers flowing out of Niflheim. River of death flowing under the Yggdrasil. It passed nearest the gate of Hel's dwelling and was known as the river with the golden bridge.

Gjolbridge (Gjallar Bridge, Gjallar-bru). Bridge over the Gjøl separating the realms of the living and dead. Probably the rainbow. Guarded by Modgudur.

Gjol rock. One of the rocks to which Fenrir, the wolf, was bound after Gleipner. The cord with which he was bound was fixed to the gallow-chain Gelgja.

GLADIOLUS Ready-armed.

GLADSHEIM Norse Temple of Gold in the midst of Idavoll with thirteen seats, one for All-Father, twelve for the other gods.

GLADYS Feminine name, source uncertain, probably a variant of Claudia.

GLAISRIG Manx female fairy or goblin; half-human, half-beast.

GLAISTIG Manx she-goblin that has the form of a goat.

GLAM In Norse legend a shepherd who was slain by a spirit and became an animated corpse. Those he haunted went mad or were killed; he burned farms and destroyed cattle.

GLASHAN A Scottish spirit which rebelled against clothing.

GLASIR (GLASER) Norse shining grove outside Valhalla. Its leaves are red gold, thus gold is often called Glasir's leaves. Typifies the red-gold lights of the sky.

GLASS Abstraction, purity, reflection, revelation. That which is beautiful but short-lived. Christian symbol of the divine world, immaculate conception. If broken or with a serpent, escape from poisonous death; an emblem of Saint Benedict.

Drinking glass. Good fellowship. Dream significance: (broken) success; (empty) distress; (full) sentimental message.

Glass Castle. In Arthurian romances another name for Revolving Castle. See Caer Sidi, Glass mountain.

Glass mountain. In folklore of the north mountains of snow must be traversed or conquered by the sun-hero before the dawn princess (spring or summer fertility) can be won. In some tales a glass castle, as in Arthurian romances, takes the place of the glass mountain. The hero frequently is aided by ants, bears, ducks, eagles, foxes, swans, or wolves, which are grateful to him for a past kindness. All these animals denote clouds, light, or wind.

Look through blue glasses. See things by a misanthropic or prejudiced vision; take a gloomy view of a situation.

Look through rose-colored glasses. Be over optimistic; see things brighter or rosier than they actually are.

GLASTONBURY ABBEY First Christian church in England, located in Glastonbury, a town in Somerset, the traditional home of Joseph of Amirathea, who supposedly brought the gospels and Grail to England. There Joseph is said to have planted his staff, the Glastonbury Thorn, which took root and burst into leaf every Christmas. Glastonbury has remains of a prehistoric lake village, traditionally called Island of Avalon. Known as the rival of Fescamp Abbey.

GLAUCE (GLAUKE) Literally bright, gleaming. In Greek mythology daughter of Creon, king of Corinth. For her Jason deserted Medea. As a wedding gift, Medea sent her a robe of gold, and when Glauce tried it on the poisons which it contained burned her to death. This is a daylight myth; for Glauce, the gloaming, Jason the sun, forsook his dawn-bride Medea, who caused the death of Glauce. Also known as Creusa.

GLAUCUS (GLAUKUS) (1) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning bright or gleaming countenance. (2) King of Corinth. Son of Sisyphus, father of Bellerophon. He fed his horses human flesh to make them fierce in battle. When he was thrown from his chariot, his horses tore him to pieces and devoured him. Thus he symbolizes one who devised his own death. In another legend he loved his horses so much he was jealous of them and would not permit them to breed. The goddess of love infuriated them and they tore him to pieces. For this reason his name is applied to one who is overfond of something and ruined by it. As a sun-hero, Glaucus is devoured by the horses (lights) drawing his chariot. (3) A great-grandson of the above, grandson of Bellerophon. With his friend Sarpedon he led the Lycians in the Trojan War. Sarpedon died young, leaving his friend Glaucus to avenge his death. Glaucus, the hero of Lycia (land of the sun), typifies the sun at noon-day strength avenging the death of Sarpedon, the early creeping light of morning. During a battle Glaucus met the Greek Diomedes, son of Ares. The two heroes, because of the old guest-fellowship of their sires, refused to shed each other's blood. See eating. Plighting friendship, they exchanged armor, Diomedes receiving the gold equipment of Glaucus in exchange for his own, which was of brass. Thus a Diomedean or Glaucian swap is one in which the advantage is all on one side. (4) Son of Minos, king of Crete. The child fell into a jug of honey and smothered to death. Minos shut Polyidos up with the body and commanded him to bring the child back to life. A dragon approached the corpse. When Polyidos killed it with a stone, he noticed another dragon approach the dead monster and cover it with grass, whereupon it rose up and crawled away. Polyidos put some of the same grass on the body of the infant Glaucus and restored the child to life. Thus the death of Glaucus represents the death of fertility restored to life by Polyidos. (5) A fisherman of Boeotia, who ate a magic herb growing along the shore and became a sea-god endowed with the gift of prophecy. He instructed Apollo in the art of soothsaying. When he fell in love with Scylla, Circe became jealous and turned Scylla into a miserable rock perilous to mariners. As the prophecies of Glaucus usually foretold evil, fishermen dreaded the visits he made each year, and fasted and prayed to avert the misfortunes he prophesied. His form was that of a merman. (6) Helmsman of the Argo.

GLEIPNER In Norse mythology the third and last chain with which the Fenris wolf was bound, and the one which proved unbreakable until Ragnarok. The other two were Dromi and Leding. Gleipner was made of six things: a bear's sinews, a bird's spittle, the breath of a fish, the footsteps of a cat, roots of a rock, a woman's beard; all non-existent.

GLITNER In Norse mythology heavenly mansion of Forsete, the peacemaker. It has gold columns and a silver roof. The sky.

GLOBE Commerce, earth, enterprise, eternity, geography, travel, wordliness. Resolves into ag-el-obe, i.e. great orb of god. In Germany Santa Claus is known alternately as Knecht Clobes (Knight Globes). The symbolism is identical to that of a ball or circle, which see. Christian symbol of power. In the hands of Christ emblematic of His sovereignty; in the hands of a man, imperial dignity. In Egyptian antiquity symbolic of the sun disc, the supreme and everlasting god. Greek emblem of Urania, muse of astronomy. In Mexican tradition universal power.

Globe belted and surmounted by a patriarchal cross. Earth with equatorial and polar circumference as well as diameter measurements; the year's cycle and the path described by the earth around the sun.

Globe crowned or surmounted by a cross. In Christian tradition dominion, gradual enlightenment, millennium, salvation, sovereignty. Emblem of Saint Ladislas.

Two pillars topped by globes. In Freemasonry one represents a globe of earth, the other the sphere of heaven, typifying plenty and unity.

GLOBE FLOWER In Japan, called kerria; herald of summer.

GLORIA An ascription of praise.

Used as a feminine name.

GLORIANNA In Spenser's Faerie Queene, queen of faeryland. She represents Queen Elizabeth as sovereign.

GLORY In Christian tradition luminous glow expressing the most exalted state of divinity. In painting a pictorial representation of heaven. In an Italian icon personified by a woman, the upper part of her body almost naked. She holds a circle on which are the zodiac signs and a small victory image which holds a garland in one hand and a palm leaf in the other.

Glory of a prince. In an Italian icon personified by a beautiful woman wearing a gold jeweled crown. Her golden hair signifies magnanimous thoughts. She holds a pyramid, signifying glory and prosperity.

Old Glory. The flag of the United States.

Uncertain glory of an April day. Brightness which soon may be clouded over. Used by Shakespeare.

GLORY FLOWER Glorious beauty.

GLOVE Gage of battle, gage of love, greeting, mystery, power, strength. Dawn is 'rosy-fingered,' thus the five fingers of the glove symbolize dawn, the lights or rays of the sun. Dream significance: (clean) satisfaction; (with holes) humiliation; (losing) committing a blunder; (putting on) pleasure trip; (soiled) bother, insult; (taking off) upset. Glove resolves into ag-love, i.e. great lover. Attribute of a night-rider or witch.

Glove of iron. Deity emblem, godliness, power. Attribute of Thor.

Hand and (or in) glove. Close cooperation or intimacy.

Handle without gloves. Deal with severely, treat unmercifully; a boxing metaphor.

Iron hand in a velvet glove. Severity cloaked by courtesy.

Put on gloves. Assume a pug-nacious attitude.

Throw down the glove. Challenge; a metaphor derived from chivalry.

White glove. An unsullied person. Masonic symbol of clean hands and a pure heart.

GLUBDUBDRIB In Swift's Gulliver's Travels land of magicians and sorcerers, where Gulliver is shown some of the great men of antiquity.

GLUSKAP (GLOOSCAP, GLUS-GAHBE) Chief god of Abnaki (Algonquin) tribes. Name signifies deceiver-with-words. A benefactor and savior, the title was given to him because he conquers his enemies not by brute force or superior strength, but by craft and ruses, by transforming himself into unsuspected shapes, by strategy. He is the arch deceiver, but in a good sense. His normal shape is that of a rabbit. Probably another name for Manabozho. His brother is Malsum. When their mother died out of her body Gluskap formed animals, fish, the moon and sun; Malsum made mountains, serpents, and valleys. They exchanged secrets about what would kill each other and Malsum's efforts were always thwarted while Gluskap's turned Malsum into the Lox, chief of wolves. Compare Ymir.

GLUTTONY In an Italian icon personified by a woman with a long crane's neck and a big belly in a russet gown. A hog lays at her feet.

GNAA (GNA) In Norse mythology goddess attendant of Frigga. Messenger, whose horse Hofvarpner runs through both air and water. Probably an aspect of wind.

gNAN See under listing as though spelled Nan.

GNAT Contemptible, mean, pest.

Strain at (or out) a gnat and swallow a camel. To be punctilious about details, but careless about essentials. The metaphor is from the Old Testament and refers to the Jewish custom of filtering wine for fear of swallowing an insect forbidden as unclean.

GNIPAHELLER (GNIPAHELLIR)

Norse cliff-cave, where Garm, the watchdog of Hel, is set.

GNITAHEATH Heath on which Fafnir lay after assuming the shape of a dragon to guard the hoard and ring of Andvarenavaut.

GNOME One of a race of dwarf earth spirits or goblins of cabalistic and medieval mythologies, reputed to be guardians of mines and miners and of the treasures hidden in the earth. In later times associated with elves, fairies, and kobolds. They are usually depicted as deformed and hideous; hence a diminutive misshapen person. In white magic Gob, their king, commands them with a magic sword. Gnomes influence the melancholic temperament of man.

GNOSTIC One claiming to have esoteric insight, mystic knowledge, or wisdom. Humorously, the word is applied to one who is clever, knowing, a pretender, shrewd. The gnostics claimed superior knowledge of spiritual things and explained man and the universe as resulting from a series of emanations or effluxes from the supreme godhead. Two such emanations, the Demiurge, or immediate creator of the world, and the Logos, being identified with Jehovah and Jesus. Early Christians who cloaked their real tenets by conforming outwardly with the established worship of the community or state in which they resided holding their ideas secret. Their policy was "Learn to know all, but keep thyself a secret." The mystic number of the gnostics is thirty.

GOAD Authority, power. Buddhist symbol of divine power.

GOAT Agility, fertility, generative heat, lasciviousness, poverty, reproductiveness, sociability, stench, stupidity, vital urge, winter. The masculine principle and reproductive powers of the sun. As a goat is always in fever, a medical symbol of death and ill health. The goat typifies foolishness in the valley, but that which is far-seeing and sure-footed when on a mountain. Dream significance: (black) inconstancy in love; (white) coming misfortune. In heraldry emblematic of the warrior who wins a victory by diplomacy or policy rather than by physical valor. One of the animals ruling the heavens, carrying the sun through Capricorn, the tenth house of the zodiac, which the sun enters at the winter solstice. The constellation Capricornus in the Northern Sky is also called Horned Goat. Sacred to Agni, Anshar, Aphrodite, Ea, Hera, Hermes, Kali, Marduk, Mendes, Nin-Girsu, Pusan, Tammuz, Thor, Varuna. A face part goat, part lion represents Min or Pan. In fertility rituals intercourse between women and goats is indicated in some societies. In various European languages called gat, ged, geit, get, goot, gote, the radical of all being 'at,' Egyptian for goat, which also meant heat. In Sanscrit the word is aga, which yields might A, i. e. mighty sun.

In China called yang. Animal guarding direction south, southwest, west; the hours one to three P.M., and Wei (Scorpio), the eighth of the twelve terrestrial branches. In Christianity symbolizes those damned in the Last Judgment. In Renaissance imagery shown to distinguish sinners from the righteous. The familiar of witches, a form of the devil. In Egyptian and Hebrew antiquity typified sharp hearing. In Greek mythology a goat nursed the infant Asclepius. The aegis of Athena was made of the hide of Amalthea, the she-goat which had nursed Zeus. Dionysus assumed the form of a goat; Pan, the fauns, and satyrs had the ears, horns, and limbs of a goat. The goat may have been sacrificed to Bacchus and Dionysus because it destroyed vineyards. The goat was the Minoan god of the waning year as opposed to the ram, which was the god of the waxing year. Early Hebrews regarded the goat as clean for sacrifice and offered it to Yaw (Jehovah) as a sin offering for atonement. See scape-goat.

Four-horned goat. Emblematic of the prophet Daniel.

Goat blood. In Scotland sacrificial blood. The fiery cross used to call clans for war was dipped in goat's blood before being set aflame.

Goat disposition. Licentiousness; whoremaster.

Goat-drawn car. Chariot of Pan or of Thor.

Goat foot. The Devil.

Goat gall bladder. Among African tribes placed in the hair as a mark of honor; a form of flattery.

Goat poetry. Ancient Greek tragodia poetry which related the crimes and miseries of mankind.

Goat reins. Anciently black goat reins were sacrificed in funeral rites, given as a provision or viaticum to the dead man to contribute to his resurrection.

Goatskin. See aegis.

Goat's rue. Reason. Also called catgut.

Goat terminating in a fish.

Ancient Babylonian symbol representing the god Ea.

One-horned goat. In the Bible typifies Alexander the Great, suggesting the swiftness of his conquests and his great strength.

Ride a goat. Be initiated into a secret society. The riding of a goat by a candidate is supposed to be a feature of the initiatory exercises. Frequently employed humorously.

Scape goat. Bear the blame or burdens that should be placed on others. Among Jews of antiquity a goat was selected by lot. Over its head on the Day of Atonement the high priest confessed the sins of all the people, thus placing them on the goat, after which it was driven into the wilderness as propitiation to Azazel. A demon was expelled from a man by placing his head next to that of a goat, which breathed in the sin or demon.

Separate sheep from goats.

Separate good from evil; from the description of the last judgment in the New Testament.

Three goats. Arms of the Becchi family of Florence; mentioned in Dante's Inferno as notorious usurers.

GOBHAN SAER Name of Goibniu as celestial architect.

GOBLET Ceremonies, festivities, friendship, mirth, sacramental wine. Also the female principle in nature. The goblet carries the same symbolism as the cup, which see.

GOBLIN A malicious sprite fabled to live in groves and grottoes, frightful or grotesque in appearance. A goblin eats little children and is generally evil and mischievous. Typifies the Hallo-we'en festival. Resembles the earth-demon, gnome, and kobold. In Brittany the goblin is a spirit of ships. In Japan called kappa, a spirit which is blood-thirsty, imitative, and quarrelsome, although extremely polite.

GOD In Christian tradition, the first person of the Trinity composed of God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Dante referred to Him as All-containing. Book of the Universe, Essence, the Perfect Unit, the Primal Will, the Source, the True Mirror. He is called Alpha and Omega, Divine Reason, Host of Heaven, the Shield, Supreme Reason. He is said to be one for whose sake a believer must suffer. The reign of God the Father is during Advent (season of conception); whereas that of Christ the Son is from Christmas to Ascension (season of growth), and that of the Holy Spirit is from Pentecost to Advent (season of death or dying). Mystics explain the Trinity as God the Father, heaven and spirit of man; God the Son, earth and mind of man; God the Holy Ghost, hell and the body of man. God the Father is symbolized by a burning bush; hand emerging from clouds; hand within a triangle; handsome, bearded old man; Jehovah within a nimbed triangle; rock (as rock of ages); sun, radiant; triangle in a circle (triplicity in unity); triangle nimbus, sometimes cruciform; yellow color. Gnostic letter I (for Jehovah) and the letter

L (for El, God, power). In Freemasonry, called Great Architect of the Universe. The Supreme Being of the Jews; creator; omniscient, pervasive spirit of the universe; ruler of all creation. Called Elohim, a plural form, and Adonai, Lord, suggesting a development from polytheism to monotheistic belief. Jehovah (Jahweh) of the Old Testament is the God of the New Testament. The Hebraic-Christian deity is called: Ab, Adonai, Ancient, Ancient of Days, Ancient One, Binah, Chesed, Chokmah, the Countenance, Daath, Eheieh, El, El Chai, Eloah Va-Daath, Eloh (Eloah), Elohim, Elohim Tzabaoth, El Shaddai, Father, Geburah, Gedulah, Hod, I Am, Inscrutable Height, Jah, Jehovah, Jehovah Elohim, Jehovah Tzabaoth, Kether, King of Kings, Lord of Israel, Macroprosopus, Malkuth, Microprosopus, Netzach, Pachad, Primordial Point, Shaddai, Tipherath, Yah, Yahveh, Yehovah, Yesod. He is represented by two yods, a kametz and a sheva below: $\int \int$; the letter shin, initial of Shaddai: $\int \int \int$; three points in a radiated form: $\int \int \int$; a yod within an equilateral triangle; \triangle . In The Hebrew Cabala, He is the Artificer, Former, Maker; creator of good and evil, of the just and unjust. The ten names of God which have talismanic properties are: Adonai-Melech, ruling through the Blessed Souls, signifying Empire and Kingdom, giving knowledge and understanding. Adonal Sabaoth, God of Hosts, ruling through the Principalities, signifying triumph and victory. El, ruling through the order of Dominions, signifying clemency, goodness, grace, magnificence, and piety. Eheia, essence of Divinity, influencing the angelic order of Seraphim through whom the gift of being is bestowed. Eloha, ruling through the order of Virtues, signifying beauty and glory. Elohim, ruling through the order of Thrones, signifying providence and understanding. Elohim Gibor, ruling through the Seraphim, signifying judgment and power. Elohim Sabaoth, ruling through the Archangels, signifying agreement and piety. Jod, ruling through the order of Cherubim, signifying wisdom. Sadai, the Omnipotent, ruling through the Cherubim, and signifying the increase and decrease of all things. See Gods.

Act of God. Action of uncontrollable natural forces resulting in damage, delay, or injury. A legal term.

God's acre. Burial ground.

God's creation. According to gnostic theory the first emanation of God was the Nous, from which emanated the second creation, the Logos or Word, from which came the Phronesis or Intelligence, from which came Sophia, Wisdom, and from Sophia came Dynamis, Strength. Also called Abraxas creations and believed to have talismanic value.

God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb. God causes misfortunes to bear lightly on the feeble.

In God we trust. A phrase taken from the Star-Spangled Banner and used as a motto on United States gold and silver coins.

GODDARD Masculine name from Old Teutonic, meaning pious, possessing god-like firmness, virtuous.

GODEU (CAD GODEU, CATH GODEU, GODDEU) Brythonic otherworld. Site of the battle fought between Amaethon, god of agriculture, and Arawn, lord of the underworld. During the course of the battle trees and shrubs transformed into warriors and fungus into hounds and horses.

It was fought for a lapwing, a whelp, and a white roebuck, all fertility symbols. The god of agriculture won and forced the earth to release its wealth. The transformation of the trees represent seasonal changes. The conflict also is called Battle of Trees.

GODFREY Masculine name from the Germanic through Norman French, meaning at peace with god.

GODHANGA Chinese Buddhist sacred region in which Pin-to-lo-po-lo-to-she, one of the eighteen Lohan, was stationed.

GODIVA (1) Feminine name from Old English, meaning god and gift. (2) Wife of Leofric, 11th century Earl of Mercia and Lord of Coventry, England. Lady Godiva objected to certain taxes imposed by the Earl, who said he would remove them if she would ride naked through the streets of Coventry at midday. She did this and the Earl kept his promise. All the citizenry keep indoors at the time, but one tailor peeped through his window and was struck blind in consequence. He has since been called peeping Tom of Coventry.

GODS The absolute, the unknowable, the unmanifest. Eternal beings possessing more than Religion

Assyrian, Babylonian, Sumerian, etc.

Brythonic Buddhist
Celtic
Chinese Christian Confucian
Egyptian Greek

Hebrew

human power and worshiped by man. Creators of man and of the universe. Rulers of the air, earth, sky, and water, who control light and darkness, rain and sunshine, thunder and lightning. Givers of fertility or barrenness, good or bad fortune, plenty or famine, war or peace. They are described as in dendromorphic, theriomorphic, and human form, or as invisible powers without form. They sometimes help and sometimes thwart mortals. They invariably punish those who ignore their commands or neglect to worship them. Some scholars believe they once were localized in individual objects or phenomena and later consolidated in related areas, developed into high gods, and eventually into monotheistic deities; other scholars hold that monotheism existed in early stages of history. Among the first objects to be deified were the sky, sun, moon, and chief powers of nature. In Hinduism gods are distinguished from men by their exemption from perspiration, their freedom from dust, their standing without touching earth, their unfading garlands, and their unwinking eyes. In some religions dead ancestors become the gods. See four-letter deities under four, theogony, trinity.

The High or Supreme Deity of some of the better-known religions are:

Deity

Apsu and Tiamat. Later Adad or Anu.

Don.
Buddha (Gautama, Sakyamuni).
Danu.
P'an Ku.
God, the Father.
Shang Ti.
Amen-Ra; later Kneph.
Gaea followed by Uranus, Cronus and finally Zeus.
Jehovah.

Religion (cont.)Deity

Hindu	Brahma.
Moslem	Allah.
Norse	Odin (Wodan).
Roman	Coelus followed by Saturn, and finally by Juipiter.
Shinto	Ame-no-minaka-nushi. Later Izanagi and Izanami, and finally Amaterasu.
Taoist	Lao Tze, sage, deified as Shen Pao.
Zoroastrian	Ahura Mazda (Ormazd)

Goddess. A term applied to a woman of regal beauty.

Goddess-mother. Earth. According to the mystics, Chaos of irrationality, continual unrolling, essential femininity; insensitive subject around which the vicissitude of forms is produced (forms and vicissitude being contributed by the male principle). See Great-Mother.

Goddess of the sea. Aphrodite, Benten, Ishtar, Venus.

God food. Cake idols; first fruits; new corn; sacrificed animals, infants, maidens, and youths.

Godhead. Represented by the numbers one (supreme being) and three (triune).

God-king. Grand Lama of Tibet; Dalai Lama; Living Buddha; Chief pontiff and government ruler of Tibet.

God of Happiness. In China originally a star god, later the deified spirit of Yang Ch'eng.

God of Lapis-lazuli and Turquoise. Osiris.

God's footstool. Earth.

Godstone. In Irish tradition white pebble placed in a grave as a talisman.

Little tin god. Mean, officious, petty person in a position of authority or influence. Also known as department deity.

Momentary gods. Gods who come into existence for particular purposes at specified places and times and exist at no other place or time. Myiagros was such a god. From the German augenblickgotter.

Scourge of God. Attila, leader of the Huns (died A. D. 453). He was so called by contemporary Christian writers.

Sight for the gods. Anything worthy of admiration; also used satirically.

GODWIN Masculine name from Old English, meaning god and friend, friend of god.

GOETAE (GOETIA) Nomadic Jewish wonder makers of the 1st century. Word means howler.

GOETY The black art, necromancy. Invocation of evil spirits, raising of demons.

GOEWIN In Welsh legend Math's footholder, loved and outraged by Gilvaethwy. As she was no longer a virgin, she was discharged by Math. Probably an earth goddess, outraged by wind.

GOGA In a Massim myth an old woman who obtained her fire from her own body. A hunter stole one of her fire brands when she refused to give it to mankind.

GOG AND MAGOG Names usually spoken of together in the Bible. Generally interpreted to mean enemies of God. Gog was a Scythian prince or people symbolic of earthly power antagonizing god; Magog seems to denote a country with its people, who are reckoned among the descendants of Japheth. Gog may be the king of the country. In later books of the Bible, Magog appears to apply to northern nations of Europe, the peoples of which were enemies of God. In the New Testament Gog, which is from the Hebrew meaning high, mountain, and is probably a corruption of God, is an aid of Antichrist or Satan. The reference to Magog again appears to be a geographical term, signifying the land of the people who are to be overthrown in Armageddon. In the Koran Gog and Magog refer to legendary predatory tribes against whom Allah sent Dhu'l Karnein (Alexander the Great), who built an impenetrable rampart of iron and brass between two mountains to hold them imprisoned until resurrection day. In Britain Gog and Magog are the names of two wooden statues, fourteen feet high, in the London Guildhall, which supposedly are those of survivors of a race of giants extirpated by Brut. Gog and Magog were giants brought as prisoners to London, where they were chained at Brut's palace, then occupying the site of the Guildhall, and where they served as porters.

GOHEI In Japan strips of white paper, metal foil or cloth tied to a stick or bamboo pole, which originally were offerings to the gods, tokens of the dead. Survival of offerings of garments or clothed figures, which, in turn, were substitutes for mortals. Later used in purification rites as efficacious in warding off evil. Also called nusa.

GOHONE Iroquois winter spirit.

GOIBNIU Irish celestial smith. A Tuatha De Danann deity. With Credne, the divine bronze-worker, and Luchtaine, the divine carpenter, he made the lances and swords (light rays) with which the Tuatha De Danann defeated the Fomors. The weapons he made renewed their strength after they had been blunted or broken by use (a rebirth myth). The ale he brewed preserved the gods from death, disease, and old age; it also preserved his own swine, which though killed and eaten one day would be alive the next (also a rebirth myth). He was a builder of bridges and of the round towers of Ireland. As architect he was called Gobhan Saer. Analogue of the Welsh Govannon; also resembles the Greek Hephaestus and the Vedic Tvastr.

GOIDEL A mythical ancestor of the Irish.

GOIN Australian evil spirit with the legs of an alligator and the claws of an eagle-hawk.

GOKURAKU (GOKURAKU-JODO)

Japanese paradise of Amita, Buddha of Infinite Light and Life; realm of bliss, situated in the west; one of the three main paradises, the others being Tosotsa-Ten and Ryojusen. In Sanscrit called Sukhavati. Compare Jigoku.

GOLA Members of a native caste in India occupied with the preparation of rice and salt.

GOLAB In the cabala burning, incendiarism. Its arch-demon is Asmodeus.

GOLAGRAS In Arthurian legend an adversary of Gawain; thus an adversary of the sun. Analogue of Golerotheran.

GOLCONDA A once powerful kingdom in India, now a ruined city. It was famous in the 16th century for the cutting and polishing of diamonds; thus, figuratively, a bonanza, great wealth.

GOLD The dawn, solar energy and light, the sun. Constancy, corn seeds, dignity, elixir of life, excellence, glory, incorruptibility, love, majesty, perfection, power, preservation, purity, wealth, vitality, wisdom. Also corruptibility, degradation, jealousy, temptation, treason, worldly wealth. Dream significance: loss of money. In Freemasonry metal of the jewels in a Grand Lodge. In heraldry called or, and represented by a white surface powdered with dots, symbolic of elevation of mind and generosity. In alchemy, aurum potabile, a mixture of gold (Sol, the divine spirit) and silver (Luna, the human spirit) was believed to have healing qualities fit to be used in most diseases. Many primitive peoples considered gold the tree of life, believing that the veins of gold under the earth's surface represented branches of a tree which had its roots deep in the ground. See golden. American Indians revered as a potent talisman. The Aztecs believed it was an emanation or excretion of the gods; when sought, the missionary prospectors fasted rigorously and abstained from sexual intercourse to purify themselves. Along with human blood, pearls, precious stones, and silver, it was offered with seeds to Mexican gods who, in turn, were to give large crops and victories. It was worn to protect the warrior in battle. Chiefs were supposedly hatched from eggs of gold. The Inca twins of night and day, Apocatequil and Piguero, used a gold implement to release man from the soil and bring him up to earth's surface. In Chinese belief gold and jade are imbued with the energy from the yang principle or the divine realm of heaven. Dawn is proclaimed by a golden cock. Christian symbol of divine spirit, faith triumphant, glory, joy, love. The Magi offered the Christ Child gold because it signified celestial food. The color of Virgin Mary's hair. In Hebrew tradition one of the colors of Urim and Thummin, signifying divine mystic power. In India typifies immortal fire, life, and light, and is a form of the gods. In Norse mythology the tears of Freyja. In Persian mythology the son of Gaya Maretan, from whom the first human couple sprang.

Gold Betheli. Swiss title for Cinderella, suggesting Bethel (house of God).

Gold bricks. A fraudulent property or proposition offered to the gullible. The reference is to bricks plated with gold that once were passed off on novices as solid gold.

Gold chain. Dignity, honor, respect, success, wealth. Frequently in folklore a person is drawn up to heaven by means of a gold chain, thus typifying spirit, that which binds earth to heaven. As an attribute of Hermes (Mercury) a symbol of eloquence.

Gold cloth. Excellence, luxury, ostentation, splendor.

Gold crown. Authority, dignity, empire, imperialism, noble thoughts.

Gold digger. A woman who preys on men for money.

Gold dust. Believed to hold medicinal properties which restored youth and prolonged life.

Gold links. Mystic tie which binds earth to heaven. See gold chain.

Gold mine. Source of fortune or wealth.

Gold necklace. Durability, excellence. See gold chain and gold links.

Gold nuggets. Lucky charm for speculators.

Gold of Nibelungen. Fertility which decays, hence unlucky riches.

Gold platter. The sun.

Gold School. See color schools of Persian Sufis under colors.

Gold shower. Fertilizing sunbeams. A form assumed by Zeus to reach Danae. In an Italian version of the Cinderella story, a shower of gold dew fell upon her bridegroom.

Gold string or thread. See gold chain.

Toulouse gold. Gains illy gotten and which will never prosper. The allusion is to Caepio, the Roman consul, who stole from Toulouse gold and silver consecrated by the Cimbrian Druids to their gods. He died in battle.

GOLDCOMB See Gullinkambi.

GOLDEMAR, KING In German folklore the name of a kobold that can be touched but not seen.

GOLDEN That which is distinguished by a condition of great happiness and prosperity, as the golden age. That which is the source of discord, as the golden apples.

Golden age. The fabulous age when happiness and prosperity (fertility) were universal; age of pure innocence and joyousness, without evil thought, without sin. First age of man. Sometimes the term is applied to an actual period, when a nation was at the summit of its glory and power, or the period during which its greatest classical works had been written. In Greek antiquity the golden age is identified as the age when men lived like gods under the rule of Cronus. In Roman antiquity the golden age was during the reign of Saturn.

Golden apple. In Greek mythology Eris, goddess of strife tossed an apple among those who had gathered to celebrate the wedding of Thetis and Peleus. It bore the inscription, "For the fairest." Aphrodite, Athena, and Hera, all claimed it. Paris awarded the apple to Aphrodite, the goddess of beauty and love, and the award brought about events that led to the Trojan war. The golden apples of the Hesperides symbolize fertility, immortality; fruit of the tree of life.

Golden ball. Pearl of Great Price; sun. Golden ball on a flagpole is a phallic symbol indicating the male and female principles of nature in conjunction.

Golden bough. Rays of the setting sun. In classical tradition bough from the Cumaean Sibyl, without which mortals could not enter Charon's boat for the journey to the otherworld. Branch of the winter season. In the Aeneid, Aeneas plucks the golden bough, an oak covered with mistletoe, before his descent into Avernus. See Diana, Grove, King of the woods.

Golden box set with emeralds. If blessed by the prophet, said to render invincible those members of the royal Persian family who remain unmarried.

Golden calf. Spirit of the year. Worshiped by Israelites and Muscovites as the Great Light Father, gold representing the sun or light. Erroneously said to symbolize material wealth.

Golden cup. Female principle; Grail, virginity.

Golden egg. Egg laid on the waters of chaos or the great abyss by the primeval Goose, the Bird of Spirit. A world-wide symbol of the sun. In Hinduism egg deposited by Maya, mother of the world, on the primeval waters. From it, Brahma, ancestor of all beings, emerged.

Golden fleece. In Greek mythology Phryxus and Helle flee from their stepmother Ino in Boeotia on Chrysomallus, a ram with golden fleece. Helle falls into the sea and is drowned; Phryxus reaches Colchis safely, sacrifices the ram to Zeus and hangs its fleece on a sacred oak in the grove of the temple of Ares. An oracle prophesies that the life of Aetes, king of Colchis (darkness) depends on the safe keeping of the fleece, which is carefully guarded by a fiery dragon. Jason steals the fleece and fulfills the prophecy. Myths, such as this, of hidden or stolen treasures, usually typify awareness of the invaluable heat and light of the sun which is carried away from the realm of darkness to that of dawn. The fleece, which typifies sunlit clouds, further symbolizes bounty and wisdom. It is a magic vehicle much like the magic carpet, and it is hung on a sacred tree as a votive offering. See clothing, rag.

Golden Gate. Gate to heaven. A name applied to the entrance from the Pacific Ocean to the harbor of the city of San Francisco.

Golden goblet. Sacred vessel. Also good fellowship, mirth, riches.

Golden hair (or crown). Virtue, wisdom. Light of the morning and evening sky. As an attribute of sun deities, such as Apollo and Balder, typifies the rays of the sun; as an attribute of an earth mother, such as Demeter, typifies field of ripened corn or wheat. The color of the hair of the fairy queen or fairy-tale heroine is invariably golden to signify purity and wisdom.

Golden hand. In India symbolizes the labor and productive power of the sun.

Golden key. Key to knowledge.

Golden number. For a given year a number between one and nineteen inclusive to designate the year of the moon in its nineteen-year (Metonic) cycle; used in determining the date of Easter. So called because the date formerly was written in the calendar in gold.

Golden rose. A rose made of pure gold and presented annually by the pope to some distinguished personage, eminent church, or favorite friend.

Golden rule. Divine wisdom, noble conduct.

Golden shower. Rays of the sun.

Golden State. California.

Golden steed. In Chinese tradition a golden steed laden with pearls and other gems symbolizes speedy gain.

Golden tresses. See golden hair.

Golden wedding. The fiftieth anniversary of a wedding if both husband and wife are alive.

Golden west. Land of glorious sunsets; land where gold and other riches are found in the far western sections of the United States.

Golden Yardarm. The three stars in the belt of Orion. Also called Ell and Yard, Jacob's staff.

GOLDENROD November 30 birthday flower. Symbolic of encouragement, precaution. According to occultists it points to hidden springs of water and to treasures of gold and silver. Flower of zodiacal house Virgo. Emblem of the states of Alabama, Kentucky, Nebraska, and North Carolina.

GOLDFAX Literally, gold-mane.

In Norse mythology the giant Hrunger's horse of mighty paces.

GOLDFINCH Typifies passion of Christ.

GOLDFISH Constellation in the Southern Sky also called Dorado and Swordfish.

GOLDTOP See Gulltop.

GOLDYLOCKS (GOLDILOCKS)

(1) Heroine of the nursery tale The Three Bears. (2) November 29 birthday flower. Symbolizes languishing.

GOLEM Originally it meant embryo, now used to signify a state of incompleteness, as a needle without an eye or a woman who has not conceived. In a Jewish medieval legend an automaton servant attached to the household of a great rabbi, where it lighted fires on the Sabbath and performed other duties not permissible to Jews. It was a homunculus figure in the form of a man endowed with life by Reb Low of Prague. Usually the golem is motivated by a charm inscribed with one of the names of God. Golem is now applied to anyone who acts like an automaton or who appears to be heartless or soulless.

GOLEROTHERAN In the Grail legend an adversary of Percival; thus an adversary of the sun and analogue of Golagras.

GOLES A corruption of god used in oaths. To swear by Goles is actually to swear by Heracles.

GOLGOTHA Literally, place of a skull, and Hebrew name for Calvary. A place of sacrifice and suffering. The hill outside Jerusalem where, in antiquity, criminals were executed. Mound on which Jesus was crucified. In modern poetry Golgotha stands for a battle-field or place of great slaughter.

GOLIATH, BISHOP Legendary patron of the Latin poets of the middle ages. In gay and licentious verse, he was celebrated for his immorality and intemperance. From his name the poetry was called Goliardic and the poets Goliards.

GOLIATH Literally, shining. In the Bible Philistine giant killed by David with a stone from a sling; hence any powerful antagonist against whom a smaller or weaker one wins a victory. The name has become a synonym for brute force, a dangerous adversary, a heathen. Goliath is an analogue of the Babylonian Eabani.

GOLISHAN In an English version of the Mumming Play the character who fights Bol Bendo, who represents Saint George. When he is slain, he is revived by the doctor.

GOLLINKAMBI See Gullinkambi.

GOLL MAC MORNA Literally, one-eyed. Celtic ideal warrior, brave, noble, and strong, and skilled alike in the arts of conflict and learning. He aided Bres in the Fomorian war against the Tuatha De Danann, suggesting he typified the forces of darkness. He was a great rival of Finn, sun-hero, and when Cumhal, Finn's father, in a battle put out one of his eyes, he killed Cumhal. When he paid Finn a fine for Cumhal's death, he and Finn became friends. Also called Aodh.

GOMBO In Tibet chief of the demon band. A manifestation of Siva.

GOMER In Old Testament harlot whom the prophet Hosea appears to have married as directed by God in prophetic vision, that the Jews might be led to reflect on the guilt of their spiritual uncleanness.

GOMEZ In Iran bull's urine, believed to be a purifying agent; medicinal virtues were ascribed to it.

GOMORRAH (GOMORRHA) One of the four wicked cities of antiquity located in the fruitful vale of Siddim and destroyed by fire when it was miraculously blasted by God. The other three cities were Admah, Sodom, and Zeboim. Gomorrah has become symbolic for carnal passion or any exceedingly wicked city.

GONDEFER (GOONDESERT) In one version of the Grail Romance, treacherous brother of the king whose death he causes, plunging the land into misery. Percival slays Partinal, the actual murderer, the king is revived, and fertility is restored to the land. This is a time myth, in which fertility (the king) is slain by the cold (Gondefer and Partinal) and restored to life by the spring sun (Percival).

GONERIL In Shakespeare's King Lear, the king's eldest daughter. With her sister Regan, after professing great love for her father, she drives him to madness by her cruelty. Her name is proverbial for filial ingratitude.

GONG Call to dinner or to worship; warning. For further symbolism, see bell. A Buddhist altar ritual object, one of the eight Precious Objects. Struck by those desiring justice. Chinese temple bell which drives away evil spirits. On shipboard, in a departure during eclipses, frightens away the celestial dog about to devour the moon.

GOODNESS Symbolized by beneficent fairies and gods, usually blue-eyed and blonde, abundant crops and herds, flowers, and yellow color. In mythology the good supernatural beings are those who provide fertility, light, and warmth, as opposed to the evil spirits, who provide darkness, drought, famine, scorched earth, winter. According to Swedenborg celestial goodness on its lowest plane is typified by wood.

Good augury. In an Italian icon personified by a young man in green, a star over his head. He hugs a swan.

Good Book. The Bible.

Good family. An Americanism meaning family of high social position or wealth.

Good fortune. In an Italian icon personified by a winged woman about to sit down. With her right hand she leans upon a wheel; in her left hand she holds a cornucopia.

Good Friday. Friday before Easter, observed in memory of the crucifixion of Christ. Hot cross buns are eaten, and the day is sometimes called furry day. Black is the traditional color of the day. According to an old superstition anyone born on Good Friday has the power of seeing and commanding spirits.

Good Henry. Applied to a kind man.

Good nature. In an Italian icon personified by a nymph in a gold robe wearing a garland of rue. Her eyes are heavenward; she carries a pelican. At her side is a river and a blooming green tree.

Good Scarabaeus. Jesus. So called by Saint Ambrose.

Good Shepherd. Jesus. In the Hebrew religion God is called Shepherd. The term Shepherd is applied to the Supreme Deity in several religions.

Good Templars. A temperance fraternity named after the Templar crusaders.

Good wine needs no bush.

Fine quality needs no advertising. The allusion is to the old custom of hanging a green bush over the door of a house where wines were for sale.

Good works. Righteousness.

Typified by garlands of fruit; strawberry with fruit and flowers.

Supreme Good. The Supreme or Universal Being; obedience to and oneness with God.

GOONNEAR Evil snake in Australian mythology. Through his body men pass into the world of evil or unhappy spirits. His opponent is Biggarroo, through whose body the souls of men reach the happy spirit-land.

GOOPS A nickname for unmanly children.

GOOSE Imagination, love, soul, spiritual purity, wakefulness, warning, also conceit, folly, foolishness, silliness, a simpleton. Dream significance: insincere compliments. In heraldry typifies one of many resources. Universally associated with the sun. Chaos Bird which laid the Golden Egg of the Sun; creator of the universe; Great Cackler. This theme appears in debased form in folk literature, where the golden egg is an egg of wealth. As a blessed fowl, associated with the dove and peacock, and sacred to Apollo, Brahma, Dionysus, Eros, Hera, Hermes, Horus, Isis, Juno, Kwannon, Mars, Ops, Osiris, Saint Martin, Seb, Thoth. Because of its sibilant hiss, associated with the sound of rushing wind, and signifies breath, ghost, spirit. Goose resolves into ag-ooos or ag-uz (ac-is), which yields great light. In practically all languages, the name for goose also means sun. Old Scotch was clakis, which resolves into ak-el-akis, i. e. great god, great light. Brandt, from Brahma, is applied to a variety of goose; also barnacle. The expression, "silly goose," is of pious derivation, the word silly originally meant blessed, gentle, happy, innocent. In Britain associated with the grain god; shearing the last portion of grain was called, "cutting the gander's neck." In China symbolizes constancy, inspiration, love, truth, and expresses the wish for many years of life. It is a bird of heaven and of the yang principle. It typifies the married state and is a talisman for conjugal felicity. A Christian sacrificial food, eaten during Christmas festivities and on Saint Martin's Day. In gnostic tradition the Holy Ghost, symbolic of providence and vigilance. Harvests in many parts of Europe are celebrated with a goose supper. In medieval times geese were thought to be the familiars of witches, serving them as steeds. In Hinduism a symbol of freedom through spiritual purity. In Japan the wild goose, called gan, symbolizes autumn, caution, the masculine principle, and is a bird of prophecy. Rome was saved by the cackling of the Capitoline geese from invasion by the Gauls. It is sacrificed by Siberian tribes to the god of fate, who is called goose-spirit. See Geese, Pairekse

Black geese. In Siberian legend God and the first man (devil) moved about the primordial ocean in the shape of two black geese. Man, unable to hide his nature, endeavored to rise higher, until he finally sank into the depths and was forced to call on God for help. God rescued him and then demand that he dive into the sea and bring up a handful of earth with which God would create the world. Upon returning to the surface, man secretly withheld some of the mud from God and this formed the boggy places.

Cook a person's goose. Kill, ruin, or punish a person, or end his happiness or hope. Eric, king of Sweden, is said to have approached an enemy's town finding a goose hung over the wall in derision. He subsequently took the town and burned it, saying, "I am cooking the goose."

Flames issuing from a goose's mouth. In Christian art Holy Spirit; life and regeneration.

Goose egg. Sun, wealth. In United States term for zero, from the figure 0 inserted on the scoreboard when a baseball team at bat fails to score a run. In England, the term for zero is duck's egg.

Goose hangs high. The prospect is good; all signs are favorable. Perhaps a corruption of the "goose honks high," as it does in fair weather.

Goose hiss. Emission of soul or spirit.

Goose quill. Authorship, letters, literature, writing. An emblem of Saint Omobuono.

Goose steps. (1) Marking time with the feet. (2) A showy drill or parade step used in the German army.

Kill the goose that lays the golden egg. To destroy a source of continuous wealth in an attempt to gain a temporary good; to grasp at what is more than one's due and lose an excellent customer. In an Aesop fable, a farmer discovered that one of his geese was laying golden eggs. He killed the goose to get the whole stock at once, but found nothing.

Mother Carey's goose. Sailors' term for the great black petrel in the Pacific.

Old woman plucking her goose. The snow is falling. Also expressed with Mother Carey is plucking her goose.

Sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Treatment suitable for a man is suitable for a woman; usually used in relation to behavior or morals.

Say "boo," to a goose. Be not altogether lacking in courage.

Sound on the goose. To hold on to true principles. In United States politics to be loyal to one's party.

Steal a goose and give giblets in alms. Amass wealth by overreaching and salve one's conscience by giving small sums in charity.

Tailor's goose. A tailor's iron.

Wild goose. In Canada symbolizes October. In Japan autumn; masculine principle.

Wild goose chase. Foolish pursuit of the unattainable.

GOOSEBERRY September 28 birthday flower. Symbolic of anticipation, regret. Emblematic of the Pearl of Great Price.

Gooseberry season. In England a dull time in journalism. Period in which Parliament is not sitting and the newspapers fill their columns with stories of giant gooseberries, sea serpents, and the like.

Play gooseberry. Act as chaperone, conduct two lovers about. A chaperone who is expected to hear, see, and say nothing; thus one who turns to anything convenient, even to gooseberry picking.

GOP Norse neuter term for god, which under Christian influence became masculine.

GOPAKA Fifteenth Buddhist arhat. His attribute is a book of scriptures which he holds with two hands. In Tibet called Be-je or sBed-byed, meaning he who works secretly.

GOPHER STATE Minnesota.

GO'PU-RA A pyramidal tower over the gateway of a Dravidian temple. The intricate carving, tier upon tier, represents monastic cells, indicating renunciation.

GORDDU Brythonic sorceress who lived on the confines of hell. Her capture was one of the labors imposed on Kulwch by Yspaddaden. King Arthur killed Gorddu for Kulwch.

GORDIUS In Greek mythology husband of Cybele, father of Midas. Gordius, a peasant, upon being chosen king of Phrygia, dedicated his wagon to Zeus. He fastened the yoke to a beam with a rope of bark in such a manner no one could untie it.

Gordian knot. A difficult, almost insoluble problem. Gordius tied a knot in such a manner it was impossible to unloose it. The legend circulated that he who could solve the problem would rule all Asia. Alexander cut the knot with one stroke of his sword, and when he captured Asia, he was said to have fulfilled the prophesy. Thus to cut the Gordian knot is to get out of a difficult situation by one bold decisive step. The secret of the knot was probably a religious one. The knot was a means of recording messages as was the notching of sticks and the scratching of letters on clay. To untie the knot was actually to read the message, which contained the name of the deity worshiped. To say the deity's name often was tabu.

GORDON Masculine name from a Scotch family name and from a place name; also from the Gaelic, meaning hospitality, and from Old English meaning the cornered or gored hill.

GORE Slavic personification of misfortune or woe. He stands for destructive change.

GOREU In Brythonic legend son of Custennin. A cousin of Arthur, he rescues the king from the underworld bone-prison of Oeth and Anoth. Thus Goreu releases fertility from its underground prison in spring.

GORGONEION A grinning mask with glaring eyes, protruding tusks, pendant tongue, and snake-hair used in primitive Greek ritual. Its function was to make an ugly face at, place a curse on, those stealing, telling untruths, etc. The masks originally represented underground bogeys or snake-haired earth goddesses. Later a legend developed, a hero was added, and the Gorgon, or Medua, head came into being.

Gorgon. (1) That which is so ugly it paralyzes, petrifies with horror, particularly a repulsive woman. The allusion is to the three legendary Gorgon sisters. The offspring of Phorcys and Ceto, they inhabited the Western Ocean near the region of Night and the Hesperides. Two, Euryale and Stheno, were immortal; the third, Medusa, was mortal. They are described as bird-women, winged virgins, covered with scales, with claws of bronze, teeth like the tusks of a wild boar, and serpents for hair. They were servants of Hades, who used them to frighten shades condemned to a constant state of unrest. They once were beautiful, and Medusa, the object of Poseidon's love, became the mother of Chrysaor and the winged horse Pegasus. Athena, jealous of her rival Medusa, had the three turned into objects of horror. Perseus killed Medusa and gave her head to Athena, who placed it on her aegis. The two immortal sisters represent the absolute darkness of night; the mortal Medusa represents the starlit night doomed to die with the rising sun, i.e. the appearance of Perseus. The beauty of Medusa is that of a peaceful night; her ugly countenance is that of a stormy night marred by vapors that take on the forms of serpents. Some explain the Gorgons as a warlike race of women. (2) A drooling animal that supposedly lived in Libya on a diet of poisonous herbs. Its head drooped so that its mane, the only hair on its scaly body, covered its face. When attacked it had to raise its head and breathe. People in the vicinity were thereupon afflicted, losing voice and senses, and falling into deadly convulsions.

GORGOPA (GROGOPA) Greek fearful-faced goddess of death. An epithet of Athena as death goddess.

GORILLA Totem of several African tribes.

GORLOIS In Arthurian legend Duke of Cornwall. His wife was Igera, with whom Uther Pendragon was in love. On the night that Gorlois was slain, Uther Pendragon, through the enchantments of Merlin, in the likeness of Gorlois visited Igera and she became the mother of Arthur and Anne. A light myth.

GORSE November 28 birthday flower. Symbolic of anger and enduring affection. A wasteland plant.

CORSEDD A circle of twelve standing stones or a mound of earth used in sun worship. The circle surrounded an amber or central pillar which represented the King or Lord of Time. The twelve stones represented the nobles or supporters of the King or Sun. Stonehenge is called the Gorsedd of Salisbury.

GO-SEKKE In Japan the five chosen families. Families of the Fujiwara clan from which the emperor was permitted to choose his empress.

GOSET Japanese Five-Tact Dance, dance of the fairies of cherry-blossoms. Performed as one of the festivities after each imperial coronation.

GOSPEL Represented by a book, scroll. In the middle ages represented by a mill. The four gospels are represented by a quarterfoil.

GOSSIP Personified by a sharp-featured old woman with spectacles carrying a bag or basket. In dreams, gossiping signifies spite, uneasiness.

GOTH A savage, uncultured person. So the Romans regarded the Goths, an ancient tribe of Teutons, which swept down and devastated large portions of southern Europe in the 3rd and 5th centuries, establishing kingdoms in France, Italy, and Spain.

GOTHAM An old parish in Nottinghamshire, England, the inhabitants of which, to save themselves the expense of entertaining the king, played the fool in order to dissuade King John from visiting their town. Hence a Gothamist is one who plays the fool, a wiseacre, a person of seemingly limited intelligence, one who appears to have a blundering simplicity. The nursery rhyme Three Wise Men of Gotham is attached to the legend. Washington Irving satirically called New York City Gotham because of the alleged pretensions to wisdom of its people, and Gotham has remained a nickname of the city.

GO-TSUCHI The unburied mi-kado of Japan. Emperor whose corpse lay for forty days without burial because of the poverty of his estate.

GOTTERDAMMERUNG In an opera by Wagner, the twilight of the gods; the hour when the gods engage in their last great battle with enemies. All are killed on both sides and the world sinks into the sea. Compare Ragnarok.

GOURD November 22 birthday flower signifying unrequited love. Anciently a gourd into which pebbles had been inserted was rattled and thunderstorms, supposedly, were attracted by sympathetic magic. A rainmaker, it was revered as a distiller of dew and symbolized the creative powers of nature as well as resurrection. As a storage place for the elixir of life, it became a symbol of druggists, who keep medicines in gourd-shaped bottles. The people of Burma and eastern Indo-China supposedly sprang from a gourd or melloon or pumpkin. See Tahsek-khi and Ya-hsek-khi. The eating of the gourd also brought death into the world. In China called hu-lu; symbolic of blessings, fertility, longevity, and purity. Charm to avert evil influences. Emblem tied to the staff of Li Tieh-kuai; from it clouds of vapor rise to denote his power to free his spirit from his body at will. Christian symbol of pilgrimage (a water-holder). An attribute of the archangel Raphael, Christ, and Saint James.

In Hebrew tradition typifies resurrection from its association with Jonah. In Japan believed to be filled with the elixir of immortality, and symbolizes longevity, magic, mystery, and purity.

Gourd musical instruments.

In China attribute of the phoenix and indicative of leaders who gather people together.

Gourd vine. Longevity.

Gourd with water pot or vase.

Rain, source and preserver of life.

GOURGOURGAHGAH Australian bird created to laugh to announce the dawn. Compare cock.

GOVANNON In Brythonic mythology son of Don, brother of Gwydion. Uncle of Dylan, whom he is accused of slaying with a blow. God of smithcraft; analogue of the Irish Goibniu.

GOVETTER (GODVETTER) Norwegian forest or underground benevolent spirit. Identical with Gufittar and Uldda, underground dwarfs which bring cattle to earth.

GOWER In Brythonic mythology a part of the underworld.

GOZU-TENWO Japanese Buddhist ox-headed god. Plague protector. An aspect of Susa-nowo. Also called Buto, which see.

GRACE (GRACIA) (1) Feminine name from the Latin, meaning charm, favor. (2) Represented by dancing girls, a flower on a long stalk, a rose, a swan. Hogarth called the reversed curve the line of beauty or grace. The word equates with groes, Old English word for cross, and may be resolved into ag-eros, which yields mighty Eros or rose.

Grace goblet. A cup or vessel passed from one guest to another after the grace at the end of a meal for the drinking of health.

Grace of God. In an Italian icon personified by a pretty woman, naked, her golden hair plaited. Rays of splendor encircle her head. A wider circle of rays becomes a background for her whole body. She holds a cornucopia from which useful things pour.

Throne of grace. The abode of God, the Mercy Seat, to which prayers are addressed.

GRACES In Greek mythology daughters of Zeus and Eurynome. Later writers say they are daughters of Dionysus and Aphrodite. Early Athenians worshiped two: Auxo (increaser) and Hegemone (leader); Spartans worshiped two: Clea (sound) and Phaenna (brightness); in other parts of Greece, three were worshiped: Aglaia (splendor), Pasithea (shining), and Peitho (persuasion). Originally called Charites; when the term Graces became general, the three were worshiped widely as: Aglaia, Euphrosyne (good cheer), Thalia (bloom or luxuriant beauty). They were dawn and spring goddesses, and attended Aphrodite, Apollo, Dionysus, Eros, and the Muses, all beneficent deities who provided abundance. When writers debased their functions, they were said to personify conscious beauty, domestic arts, eternal youth, gentleness, grace, innocent joy, kindness, modesty, personal and household ornaments, purity of body and mind, tasteful dress. They had the most perfect beauty and had the power of conferring beauty, grace, and joy, and were advisers to the master-craftsman Hephaestus. In art they are represented partially draped, their hands entwined. They correspond to the Hindu Harits, which, like the Greek words Charites and Graces, contains the root ghar, i. e. to glisten. In Latin called Gratiae.

GRACIOSO The clown or interlocutor, a stock character in Spanish drama. He thrusts himself forward on any and all occasions, directing his gibes to the audience. The term also signifies favorite.

GRADGRIND, THOMAS In Hard Times by Dickens, a man who measures everything with rule and compass, allowing nothing for human weaknesses. Everything about his person is square, his forehead, his forefinger, etc.

GRADIVUS Surname of Mars as the god who strode with a warlike step to battle and was the father of Quirinus. The Romans believed that he marched before them to battle.

GRAEAE (GRAIAI) In Greek mythology three daughters of the sea deity Phorcys and Ceto. Grayhaired at birth, their names were Deino (terrifier), Enyo (shaker), Pephredo (horrifier). They had only one tooth and one eye, which they shared, handing them from one to the other. They were sentinels, guarding the land of the Gorgons. Perseus stole the eye and refused to return it until they guided him to the nymphs who gave him the winged sandals, with which he could fly swifter than a bird, and the helmet, which rendered him invisible, and which made the destruction of Medusa possible. Graeae signifies gray-ones or old-ones, and they personify the gray fog. Also called the Phorcides.

GRAHAM Masculine name from a family name and from Old English, probably meaning gray home.

GRAHAPATI (GRHAPATI) Hindu domestic fire god or god of the hearth. An aspect of Agni. Name meaning lord of the stars. Also called Vispati.

GRAHAS Hindu seizers, spirits which are both male and female and afflict mortals with disease; they are especially dangerous to children under the sixteenth year.

GRAIL (HOLY GRAIL, SANGRAAL, SANGREAL) The chalice or cup traditionally used by Jesus at the Last Supper. According to one account Joseph of Arimathea preserved the Grail, received into it some of the blood of Christ at the Crucifixion, and then took it to England, where it disappeared. In another account it was brought by angels from heaven and entrusted to a body of knights who guarded it on the top of a mountain. When approached by anyone not perfectly pure, it disappeared from sight. Its quest became the source of most of the adventures of the knights of the Round Table. The Grail is said to provide food magically with the taste which each one desires, although it provides only those who are without sin. It gives light and perfume, heals the wounded, and after the successful quest, removes barrenness from the land, coincident with curing the land's guardian, frequently called Fisher King, of impotency or raising him from the dead. It prevents those who see it from being deceived or made to sin by devils, it gives the seer spiritual light, and in its presence no one is oppressed by sickness or old age. In Arthurian romances it contains a mysterious and awful secret, the knowledge of which is reserved to a select few. No woman dare speak of the secret; if a holy man or priest speaks of the mar-vels of the Grail, he does so with fear, for the recitals have to be with scrupulous accuracy, as dire misfortune falls on the betrayer. In some versions the Grail is described as the dish out of which Christ and the disciples ate the Paschal lamb at the Last Supper. The search for the Grail (female principle) is connected with the search for the Lance (male generative powers). The Grail has evolved from the pagan conception of a miraculous caldron of fertility and inspiration connected with vegetation rites. A sinner cannot see the Grail; a Christianization of the pagan idea that the caldron of plenty would not cook a coward's food.

Grail Castle. Where the Grail is found. A castle which houses the Grail is situated in the vicinity of water. Drenching with or throwing into water is a familiar part of fertility ritual; it is a case of sympathetic magic, acting as a rain charm.

Grail initiation. Ceremony of enlightenment into the meaning of Grail (yoni) and Lance (lingam) in their sexual juxtaposition. Fertility or Life Initiation.

Grail Knight. Seeker of the Grail. Called the flower of manhood, i.e. perfection of manhood.

Grail quest. The visit of a wandering knight to a hidden temple or castle which involves perilous adventures which test his character and courage. He finds the Grail and the Lance, which restore fertility to the Fisher King, which in turn brings about the restoration of fertility to the wasteland. The legend typifies the life and death cycle, the seasonal changes from autumn to spring.

GRAIN Endogeny, fertility, harvest, humility, minuteness.

The human nature of Christ;
bread of the Eucharist.

Grain of mustard seed. A minute grain out of which something great may develop.

GRAINNE (GRANIA, GREINE)

In Irish mythology daughter of King Cormac mac Art, she was betrothed to Finn (sun-hero) in his old age. At the betrothal feast she cast a spell over all the company except Diarmaid (moon-hero), whom she induced to elope with her. In their flight Aengus gave her a mantle of invisibility (darkness of night), which Diarmaid refused to don. Finn pursued them and killed Diarmaid. Grainne personifies the gloaming.

dGRA-LHA (DA-LHA) One of the five Tibetan Buddhist Great Kings. King of the body; chief of the local Tibetan tribes. Worshiped to overcome enemies. In usual aspect he is white with golden mail and flies on a white horse. He holds a whip with three knots in his uplifted right hand. In his left hand he holds a tiger skin; he has a sword at his waist and a lion and a tiger on his shoulders. A mirror hangs from his neck. The blade of his sword is bordered with a blue flame, a ring of yak hair is below the blade. He is accompanied by a bear, birds, a black dog, and a monkey. As a mahapancaraja he is blue, rides a blue lion or a yellow horse, and his emblems are a vajra (thunderbolt) and a khakkhara (alarm staff). Also called sKuhi-rgyal-po or Kui-gyal-po.

GRAM Literally, grief. In the Volsung Saga a sword of strife. Odin plunged it into the oak Branstock to become the gift of the man who pulled it out. It resisted the strength of all until tugged at by Siegmund, son of Volsung. Siggeir, the husband of Signy, Siegmund's twin sister, warred with Volsung and his sons for the sword, and Volsung and nine of his sons were slain. In the battle between Siegmund and Lyngel, the sword split in two, portending the death of Siegmund. Later the celestial smith Regin welded it together and gave it to Sigurd, Siegmund's son. With the sword, Sigurd slew Fafnir, the dragon, and later Regin himself. Also known as Balmung. It represents the rays of the sun, which slay the powers of darkness and famine.

GRAMMAR Personified by an aged woman wearing a Roman mantle. She holds a round ivory box similar to a medicine chest, from which she draws a knife, pens, ruler, tablets. She also holds a file marked by eight divisions for the eight divisions of her discourse.

GRAND LAMA Buddhist God-King of Tibet; Living Buddha; Dalai Lama. Chief pontiff and government ruler of Tibet.

GRANE (GRANI) In Volsung Saga horse of Sigurd, given to him by Hjaalprek. It is of the race of Sleipner. In the Nibelungenlied horse of Siegfried, given to him by Mimer. Name signifies grey, and typifies a cloud or wind.

GRANGER Masculine name from Old French, signifying a farm steward.

GRANGOUSIER In Gargantua and Pantagruel, king of Utopia, who in his old age marries Gargamelle, the young daughter of the king of the Parpaillons, and becomes the father of Gargantua. Some say Rabelais was satirizing Louis XII; others think he meant John d'Albret, king of Navarre.

GRANITE Death, hardness, power, severity, strength, worship.

Granite boulder. Emblem of New Hampshire.

GRANT Masculine name from a Norman-French family name, meaning great, large.

GRANTORTO Literally, great wrong. In Spenser's Faerie Queene, a giant who withholds the inheritance of Irena (Ireland). He personifies rebellion. Sir Artegal slays him.

GRAPE Exultation, fruitfulness, good cheer, good fellowship, intoxication, lust, pleasure, youth. Emblem of the State of Oregon. Attribute of Bacchus, Caleb, Christ, Dionysus, Joshua, Mithra, and other gods of fertility and wine. Word cognate with agapemone, Greek for love feast; Greek for grape is rax, equal to rex (king). Compare raisin, vine, wine. In Christian tradition an antidote to the fatal apple, therefore signifies resurrection. Typifies the blood of Christ, the eucharist, good works. Hebrew law allowed one who passed a vineyard to eat those grapes he desired on the spot, but not to carry any away; hence hospitality. A vineyard stripped of grapes typifies desolation.

Grape cluster. Blood of Christ, wine of God's kingdom. Hebrew symbol of the tribe of Ephraim.

Grapevine. In China symbolizes continuity. According to the Hidatsa (Siouan) Indians the plant by which the founders of the tribe climbed up from the waters of Devil's Lake in North Dakota to the surface of the earth.

Grape with wheat ears. Wine and bread of the eucharist.

Wild grape. April 18 birthday flower, signifying charity, mirth, and rural felicity.

GRASS February 29 birthday flower. Symbolic of common people, submission, usefulness. By American Indians believed to be the hair of the Great Mother. In Buddhist rites called kusa and used for sprinkling nectar. In Japan symbolic of health and longevity. To enter the house of another during a rainstorm with a bundle of grass or wearing a grass hat or raincoat is tabu; thus during a rainstorm, ill-luck. In Japan grass is classified as feminine, whereas trees are classified as masculine. See seven grasses.

Between hay and grass. Too late for one purpose, too early for another.

Grass crown. In Italy an honor.

Snake in the grass. A secret enemy, a treacherous friend.

Vernal grass. April 30 birthday flower with the sentiment poor but happy.

GRASSHOPPER Lowliness, old age, timidity. Talisman against the evil eye. One who chirps ceaselessly or utters meaningless titterings. See Tithonus. Dream significance: loss. By Choctaw Indians called mother-dead. In one of their legends animals and men emerged from a cave. When the grasshoppers appeared, their mother lingered behind, and man killed her. Those grasshoppers that had emerged called upon Aba, Great-Spirit, to avenge them, and the men who had remained in the cave were transformed into ants. In Chinese tradition inasmuch as it sits on top of the chrysanthemum, it indicates an official of the highest rank. Christian symbol of conversion. To ancient Greeks it symbolized nobility, and to ancient Hebrews, wisdom. In a Navaho legend a grasshopper girl was the giver of voices to mankind.

GRATEFUL REMEMBRANCE

In an Italian icon personified by a young woman crowned with juniper berries. She holds a long nail and stands between an eagle and a lion.

GRATIAE See Graces.

GRATIANO In Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice a young man who talks a great deal but says nothing.

GRAVE Dwelling place of the dead, entrance to hell or paradise, ghost house, 'house of clay' in which the dead are dedicated to their gods, land of forgetfulness. Used figuratively, destruction, downfall, extinction, ruin.

Gravepost. In Ainu, Japan, a pointed top is used for males and a rounded top for females. The post is intended as a staff to help the dead in the march to join previously departed relatives.

GRAY (GREY) Barrenness, concealment, discretion, grief, hardness, humility, monasticism, penitence, renunciation, retrospection, sadness, tenderness, tribulation, unfeelingness, wisdom, wrongdoing. A union of black and white, gray partakes of the symbolism of both and suggests perfect balance of all pairs of opposites. It typifies clouds and storms. The personality traits of one who tends toward gray are: one who regulates life, one who has overthrown a heritage, a reformer. As a female color: against instincts, desires to attract elderly or sedate companions. As a male color: a man who is conservative, determined, one who is molded and desires a molded woman. In Christian tradition a Lenten color. Symbolizes ashes, humility, mourning. Christ in gray robes typifies resurrection; triumph of life over death, the joy of white over the despair of black, joy of knowledge of everlasting life over the dark inscrutable ways of apparent death. Grey friars wore grey robes to portray Christ risen and still alive. Finno-Ugrics sacrificed animals of gray color to the frost-god.

Gray-haired old woman. Anxiety, guilt, necessity, winter, worry.

GRDHRA-KUTA Japanese Buddhist paradise. Also called Ryojusen.

GREAT BEAR One of the most important constellations in the Northern Sky, it is associated with hunting myths. In legend a bride or maiden robber. When its tail points eastward, spring is the season; southward, summer; westward, autumn; northward, winter. Also known as Ursa Major, which see. The seven brightest stars of the Great Bear are known variously as Arthur's or Charles' Wain, Big Dipper, the Plow, or Wagoner. In some American Indian myths a bear with three hunters at his heels. When the bear is finally killed, the end of the world will come. In a legend of the Nahuas of Mexico the constellation is the god Tezcatlipoca deposed from his position as sun god and falling into the sea, in which aspect he is known as Ocelotl. In China known as Bushel; aerial throne of Shang Ti, god of the heavens. Symbol of longevity and wealth. In Hinduism the ghosts of the Seven Rishis. In Mongol mythology originally composed of six stars which stole a daughter of the Pleiades. For this reason the Pleiades constantly pursue the Great Bear, which has become the god of thieves. By the Ostiaks called Stag. In Siberia it represents seven wolves pursuing the seven horses of the Little Bear. When the wolves catch the horses, a great disturbance will occur and the end of the world will come. In some myths said to be a stag being pursued by the Pole Star, which is the hunter. When the stag is killed the end of the world will come. In still other myths regarded as seven old men or the skulls of seven smiths. The seven blacksmiths had been killed by a hero who made cups of their skulls from which he gave his wife to drink. She became intoxicated and threw the cups up into the sky. Thus the Great Bear is the protector of blacksmiths.

GREAT BEAST (OR FISH)

Typifies the otherworld (as the whale in the Jonah story), or is the cause of floods or rising tides.

GREAT BINDWEED Plant symbolizing dangerous insinuation.

GREAT BRITAIN Personified by Britannia or John Bull.

GREAT DOG Constellation in the Southern Sky also known as Canis Major. Sirius is the brightest fixed star in the constellation.

GREAT HUNTER A constellation in the Southern Sky. Also known as Giant Hunter and Orion.

GREAT MOTHER A trinity or triple goddess of birth, growth, and death. The Great Earth Goddess. Creatrix, First Cause. Womb of the universe. Self-created, self-sustaining. A virgin goddess with a fatherless son who becomes her lover. Mother of gods and mankind. In beneficent aspect she provides abundance; in baleful aspect she destroys life and withholds spring and summer. When the Great Mother goddess is in malignant mood her son becomes the beneficent being, sacrificing himself to assure the return of fertility. Among the Great Mothers are Aphrodite, Bau, Cybele, Damkina, Ishtar, Mylitta, Nina, Tashmit, Venus. Some titles for her in southern and western Europe are: Dervonnae (oak spirits); Mairae, Matrae, Matres, Matronae (all meaning mother); Niskai (water spirits); Proximae (kinswomen); Quadriviae (goddess of crossroads); Y Mamau (the mothers, and in Wales also a name for fairies).

GREAT NIGHT Night of the Arctic Circle or that period during which the sun is invisible within its boundaries, roughly a period of six months.

GREAT PYRAMID One of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world. According to Occultists, it is a gospel in stone, key to the universe. The four sides relate to the four cardinal points of the compass. The base is 36,524 inches or one hundred times the number of days in a solar tropical year and twenty-five times the years in the Egyptian Sothic Cycle. The sum of its base diagonals is 25,871 inches; the number of years in the precessional cycle of the equinoxes. It was built in the center of the man-inhabited portion of the globe. The tarot deck symbolism is said to be related to the symbolism of the Great Pyramid, but the statement has not been substantiated.

GREAT SPIRIT Deity of American Indians; the Supreme Being, the Thunder Bird. Among early Britons, the god Ilex.

GREAT STAR The Morning Star.

GREAT UNIT In China, Y in a circle, the great plan or uniter with talismanic properties. Also called Great Term.

GREAT WALL OF CHINA One of the seven wonders of the middle ages. Built as a protective indestructible wall; hence an indestructible wall which does not protect or save from invasion. Other such walls were the Magi-not Line and the Walls of Troy.

GREAT WEEK Christian Holy Week, week before Easter.

GREED Represented by fish, hog, tiger, wolf.

GREEK Devotion to reason, intellectual keenness, moderation, a sharp trader.

Beware of Greeks bearing gifts. Beware of a treacherous gift; in allusion to the wooden horse ostensibly presented by the Greeks to Troy as a gift or offering to the gods for a safe return to their own land, but in reality a ruse for the destruction of the city.

Greek church. That section of the Christian church dominant in Eastern Europe and Western Asia. The division of the Greek and Roman churches occurred in 1054, when Pope Leo IX excommunicated the Patriarch, the ecclesiastical head of Constantinople.

Greek kalends. Never. No kalends appear in the Greek calendar.

Greek meets Greek. Equal forces in competition.

Greek trust. From the Latin Graeca fides; the Romans meaning no faith or trust at all.

Play the Greek. Indulge in one's cups. The Greeks were said to be fond of comfort and luxurious living.

GREELEY Masculine name from the Teutonic, meaning from the pleasant sea.

GREEN Abundance, eternal life, fertility, faithfulness, freshness, gladness, guidance, health, hopefulness, hospitality, initiation, innocence, knowledge, liberty, life, joyousness, memory, peace, plenty, resurrection, richness, sanity, unity, virtue, water, wisdom, youth. Symbolism contrariwise: death, decomposition (as mildew), envy, ignorance, ill-luck, misfortune, terror, unripeness. As a secondary color, the combination of blue and yellow, green typifies obedience, and as the combination of the two colors, unity, blue representing cosmic love and yellow, wisdom. Inasmuch as it breaks through soil in the spring, it symbolizes the breaking of shackles, freedom from bondage. Green is a feminine hue. The personality traits of those whose preference is green are said to be: amiable, cold, constant, smooth; they avoid personal scandal although delight in the scandals of others, courageous but not reckless, have popular likes, are good neighbors, look upon money as a social position, and understand the problems of others.

In astrology anciently assigned to the planet Mercury. Modern astrologers assign it to Saturn, the slow planet, standing for endurance, and, as Saturn mythologically devours and renews his children, the days, months, and years, thus the earth loses and renews her green robe perpetually. In folklore the color of pixies, thus symbolizing mischievousness. The color of Robin Hood's clothing, typifying adventure, boldness, chivalry, freedom, and outlawry. Foresters as well as outlaws felt protected by the color in the woods, and a man in green was popular on old signs, probably representing the squire's gamekeeper or head man. In Freemasonry assigned to the Knight of the Red Cross, as "truth is a divine attribute and flourisheth like a bay-tree," and to the Perfect Master, as "being dead in sin, hope thou to revive in virtue." In heraldry called vert and represented on engravings by oblique lines from dexter to sinister base; symbolic of hope and springtime. Emblematic of medicine because its color is that of herbs. Ancient academic gowns of medicine were green. Chlorophyll tablets often are green because the color is soothing yet exhilarating. Its corresponding musical tone is F natural. In precious stones represented by the emerald, jade, jadite, jasper. In traffic-lore a go-ahead signal symbolizing safety. In Chinese tradition stands for virgin birth, disgrace, and the element wood. With blue, it influences the gall and liver. In Christianity signifies bountifulness, hope, victory of life over death. Also a death omen, and as such associated with Saint Michael; a symbol of the never-ending, it is associated with Saint George, who sometimes is called the everlasting green one because the fight between good and evil is never-ending; a symbol of purity, it is associated with Virgin Mary, who sometimes is shown in a green mantle standing on the crescent moon; symbolic of the soul, it is associated with the walls of New Jerusalem as seen by John in Revelation. It is a color of Christmas, Easter, and Epiphany. In Egypt Isis was known as Lady of the Emerald; Time was the Everlasting Green One. In Greek antiquity emblematic of knowledge (the laurel tree of Apollo supposedly conferred knowledge) and of wisdom (Athena often had an emerald on her breastplate). Hebrew symbol of the beginning of time, the firmament. According to the Hindus green confers knowledge and memory along with insight into the future. The chariot driven across the sky by Om, the sun, was drawn by a green (all-enduring) horse (knowledge) with seven heads; meaning that the knowledge or wisdom of Om are eternal and comprehend the whole universe. In Ireland the color of the shamrock worn as a good-luck talisman. The shee or leprechauns, a wee, joyous, soulless folk of the middle kingdom, wore green, and the idea of wearing green as a charm came from fear of being bewitched by them. In Japan symbolizes maidenliness, resolution, vitality, and youth. The green pine tree typifies unflinching purpose and the vigor of old age, whereas the willow is likened to a slender maiden. In Mexico a goddess of the Emerald was worshiped. In Roman antiquity a death color, and an attribute of Mercury as messenger of death. Also emblematic of Venus. In Scotland regarded as fateful, as the men of Caithness wore it when disastrously defeated by the English in the battle of Flodden Field.

Fiddler's Green. An imaginary place free from care.

Green bed. The green bed in the Song of Solomon is sometimes erroneously considered a poor bed, the only bed a shepherd lover could provide; the interpretation should be evergreen, i.e. eternal, everlasting.

Green bonnet. Bankruptcy. In some European countries, the bankrupt once was forced to wear a green bonnet.

Green bush. Anciently, a green bush was hung over the door of a house in which wine was sold.

Green cloth. Prize in annual games in 13th century Verona to winner of foot-race.

Green clouds. In Chinese art a plague of insects.

Green dragon. In China the East, spring season, water controller. Identical with azure dragon.

Green-eyed monster. Envy, jealousy.

Green fingers. Successful gardener.

Green goods. Counterfeit paper money.

Green hands. Inferior sailors; a nautical term meaning not ripe.

Green Knight. In Celtic legend immortal knight whose club is a holly bush (winter emblem). He and Sir Gawain, an oak-knight (summer-knight), make a compact to behead one another at alternate New Years, meaning midsummer and midwinter, but when it comes to the point, the holly-knight permits the oak-knight to return to his own land. A time myth, in which the Green Knight (darkness or winter) permits Sir Gawain (sun or spring) resurrection. See Saint John's Day.

Green man. See Green Knight, Khidr, Stranger in green raiment.

Green Mountain State. Vermont.

Green Pastures. Paradise.

Greenroom. The performer's waiting room, once provided in theaters.

Green School. School in which Moslem Sufis ponder on immortality and the need of ever serving the Maker.

Green stones. In ancient Egypt and in other nations of antiquity, amulets put in tombs to assure the dead a safe journey to the world of everlasting life and youth.

Green Tara. Buddhist goddess Syamatara, which see.

Green vegetables. Greens used at the Jewish Passover feast, the Seder, are lettuce, parsley, radish, watercress, all symbolic of the coming spring and suggesting the ever sustaining hope of human redemption and the perpetual renewal of life.

Pale green. In Christian tradition, baptism.

Wearing green stockings. In medieval England part of the costume of an elder, unmarried sister at the wedding of a younger sister.

Wearing of the Green. Showing Irish sympathies, alluding to a popular Irish song.

GREGORY (GREG) Masculine name from the Greek, meaning vigilant, watchful.

GREIP In Norse mythology daughter of Geirrod and Ran. Giantess wife of the dwarf Ivalde, and by him mother of Egil-Orvandel, Ide, and Thjasse Volund. By a second marriage, she was the mother of two daughters, Fenja and Menja. She was one of the nine Vanamothers of Heimdall. See Vanamothers. A personification of waves, she was one of the firemaids who sent off sparks from the World Mill.

GREIT In Welsh mythology one of the three notable prisoners of Britain, the other two being Ludd and Mabon. In another triad, the three notable prisoners are Gweir, Llyr, and Mabon. Light hero imprisoned in the underworld.

GREMLIN An airborne supernatural being or demon, especially troublesome to aircrews and military pilots. First discovered during World War I.

GRENDEL Norse great water giant which devastates the low coasts of the North Sea and devours men sleeping in Heorot Hall. No man can kill the monster, but Beowulf attacks it and tears out one of its arms. Grendel, ruler of the powers of the deep, is a personification of storm flood, overpowered by the sun-hero Beowulf. Their conflict resembles that of the mortal-eating monsters battled by Mithra, Perseus, and other sun-heroes.

GREP In Norse mythology the three evil sons of Beli, the storm giant. They plotted the downfall of the gods. When Beli captured Freyja (fertility goddess) and brought her to Jotunheim (otherworld), one Grep desired to marry her, but she would not have him. The capture of Freyja resembles Hades abduction of Persephone.

GRETA (GRETCHEN) Feminine name; diminutive of Margaret. The name is frequently used by writers to typify blond, blue-eyed innocence.

GRETNA GREEN A place in Scotland where runaway couples until 1856 were married simply by declaring before witnesses their willingness to marry. Neither bans, licence, nor priest was necessary. Frequently the declaration was made to a blacksmith.

GREYHOUND Conceit, grace, hunting, pride, speed. In heraldry courage, loyalty, vigilance. In China heavenly dog, frequently represented in art. The greyhound was known to Egyptians and Persians of antiquity, and was sent out on the chase alone to capture animals such as the antelope. Sarama, the Hindu dog of dawn, is depicted as a greyhound.

GREY OF MACHA In Irish legend magic steed out of Grey Lake. Captured by Cuchulainn. Typifies a cloud.

GRI-BDOG (DI-DO) In Tibetan Buddhism ten demon knife carriers. Storm deities.

GRID Norse giantess, hag to whom Odin was lover and by whom he became the father of Vidar. A magician, she owned the magic wand Gridarvold. When Thor set out to visit Geirrod, she warned him of the danger and provided him with a girdle of strength, iron gloves, and a staff.

GRIDIRON An implement of martyrdom. In Christian art an emblem of Saints Cyprian, Dionysus the Areopagite, Faith, Justina, Lawrence.

GRIEF Represented by the colors brown and gray and by a dandelion. Personified in an Italian icon by a naked man whose hands are manacled and whose feet are fettered. He is encompassed by a serpent which gnaws his left side; his appearance is melancholy.

GRIFFIN (GRIFFITH) Masculine name from the Roman name Rufus, meaning red, and from the Welsh, meaning having great faith.

GRIFFIN (GRIFFON, GRYFFON, GRYPHON) A fabulous creature with the body of a lion, the head and wings of an eagle, and ears in a forward position, which indicate alertness. A benign and powerful deity transporter. Symbol of courage, enlightenment, eternal vigilance, magnanimity, perseverance, strength, swiftness, valor, and wisdom; also carnal passions. In ancient zodiacs sometimes substituted for the scorpion and thus typified the evil principle. Form worn as a charm to drive away evil spirits and witches. In heraldry signifies a supporter, one exceedingly alert and with acute hearing. Resolves into ag-ur-if-in, which yields mighty-fire, living-one (sun), and is allied to gryffe (claw). In China represents Tou. In Christian art typifies the union of the divine (eagle) and human (lion) nature of Christ. Also an animal which preys on those who oppress and persecute Christians. In Greek mythology sacred to Apollo and Athena. The Greeks apparently derived the winged lion from ancient Assyrian steles, where it represented Nergal. It also appears in Persian sculpture.

Griffin with a ball under its claw. Enlightenment protecting the Pearl of Great Price or pearl of perfection or wisdom; supporter of the water-mother.

Two griffins. Enlightenment and wisdom.

GRIFIR (GRIPER) In the Vol-sung Saga brother of Hjordis and uncle of Sigurd. Seer who fore-tells Sigurd's fate.

GRI-GRI African talisman. The most efficacious is considered a bag containing a piece of dried navel-string of the wearer.

GRIM A giant in Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. He tries to stop pilgrims on their journey to Celestial City and is slain by Greateheart.

GRIMALKIN A cat, the spirit of a witch. In medieval demonology, a witch was permitted to assume the body of a cat nine times, hence the nine lives of a cat.

