Handwritten musical notation on a page, consisting of approximately 12 horizontal staves. Each staff contains a series of rhythmic symbols, including vertical stems, beams, and dots, characteristic of early printed musical notation. The notation is arranged in a regular, repeating pattern across the staves, suggesting a specific rhythmic exercise or a short piece of music. The symbols are black ink on aged, slightly yellowed paper.

Handwritten musical notation on a page, consisting of ten staves. Each staff contains a sequence of notes and rests, written in a cursive style. The notation includes various note values (quarter, eighth, and sixteenth notes) and rests, connected by stems. The page is numbered '2' in the bottom left corner.

Handwritten musical notation on a page, consisting of approximately 15 staves. The notation is written in a cursive style and includes various symbols such as square notes, stems, and beams, characteristic of early manuscript notation. The text is oriented vertically on the page.

Handwritten musical notation in square neumes on a four-line staff. The notation consists of several lines of rhythmic patterns, including vertical stems, horizontal lines, and square notes with stems. Some notes have flags or beams connecting them, indicating specific rhythmic values. The notation is arranged in a series of horizontal lines across the page.

Laudate Dominum &c

Handwritten musical notation in square neumes on a four-line staff, continuing the piece. It features similar rhythmic patterns to the first section, with vertical stems, horizontal lines, and square notes. The notation is organized into several horizontal lines, maintaining the same visual style as the upper portion of the page.
