The first of these is the white root of the second year of the plant which is the best for use and is the most common and is the most useful for all the purposes of the medicine. The second is the root of the third year which is the best for the cure of the disease. The third is the root of the fourth year which is the best for the cure of the disease. The fourth is the root of the fifth year which is the best for the cure of the disease.

The first part of the text is written in a cursive script, likely a historical form of English or a related language. It appears to be a list or a series of entries, possibly describing botanical specimens or medicinal properties. The text is somewhat faded and difficult to read precisely, but it seems to contain several lines of descriptive text.

Handwritten text in a historical script, likely a botanical or medical treatise. The text is arranged in several lines across the top of the page, above the illustration. It appears to be a Latin or Greek manuscript, possibly describing the plant's properties or its use in medicine. The script is dense and difficult to decipher without specialized knowledge of the language.

This is a drawing of a plant with two clusters of blue flowers at the top. The leaves are green and have several holes, suggesting they have been eaten by insects. The roots are brown and fibrous. The text above the plant is in a medieval script, likely Latin or a related language, and appears to be a description or a list of properties of the plant.

This block of text is located to the left of the plant's base. It consists of several lines of medieval script, likely Latin, providing a description or list of properties for the plant.

Handwritten text in a medieval script, likely Latin or Gothic, located at the top of the page. The text is partially obscured by the plant illustration below.

The first part of the text is a dense block of handwritten script, likely a list or a series of entries. It begins with a large initial letter, possibly 'T' or 'T' with a flourish. The text is written in a cursive hand and covers approximately the top two-thirds of the page.

This section contains a shorter block of text, possibly a summary or a specific entry. It starts with a large initial letter, likely 'T'. The handwriting is consistent with the rest of the page.

This section contains another block of text, starting with a large initial letter, likely 'T'. The text appears to be a continuation of the list or entries from the first section.

The final section of text on the page, starting with a large initial letter, likely 'T'. It concludes the list or entries on this page.

The text on the left side of the page is a dense block of handwritten script, likely a technical description or a list of parts related to the diagram. It begins with 'The first...' and continues down the page, mentioning various components and their functions.

Handwritten label for the circular illustration.

A section of text located between the two circular illustrations, continuing the handwritten narrative or technical notes.

Handwritten label for the second circular illustration.

The final section of text at the bottom of the page, concluding the handwritten notes or description.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical record or account. The text is dense and difficult to decipher due to the handwriting.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, continuing the narrative or record from the previous section.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, showing further details of the account.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, with some lines appearing to be more distinct or possibly a separate entry.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, continuing the flow of the document.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, showing a transition or a new part of the text.

Three distinct botanical illustrations are shown on the left page. Each illustration features a central stem with alternating red and white horizontal stripes. The stems are topped with various green leaves and some have small, light-colored flowers or seed heads. The drawings are done in a simple, illustrative style with some watercolor-like coloring.

Three botanical illustrations are shown on the middle page. These plants have long, thin, yellowish-brown stems that curve and branch out. They are accompanied by green leaves of various shapes, some with serrated edges. The drawings are more detailed than those on the left page, showing the texture of the stems and the arrangement of the leaves.

Three botanical illustrations are shown on the right page. These plants have thick, bulbous, yellowish-brown stems. Some have small, round, light-colored flowers or seed heads. The drawings include green leaves and some show the plants in a more natural, growing posture. The style is consistent with the other pages, using simple lines and some color washes.
